THE SHIPBUILDING TRADE. London, Sept. 28.—Commenting upon an instructive letter which appears in its columns on the revival of American shipping, the Times this morning says that sooner or later the American ship-building trade will find itself independent of foreign aid, and warns British shipbuilders and owners that the American navigation laws, which really act as a protection to the British, rather than native industry, will inevitably be repealed before long.

The Scott Act

To the Editor of The Advertiser:

In your evening edition of yesterday you notice a conversation between two or your citizens as to the cause of the failure of the Scott act. Permit me to place before your readers a remark or two on that subject. The act was defective in the executive necessary to operate it, and also in that it did not prohibit the importation of liquor. In this province, just at the time when the act was being carried in the different counties, the Mc-Carthy act was passed, by which the Dominion Government assumed control of the liquor traffic; and as most of the inspectors and commissioners appointed under it were unfavorable to the Scott act very little effort was made to enforce its provisions. In this county there was none, at least, by the executive. At the end of the first two years, during which the legality of the McCarthy act was being test-ed in the courts, the Ontario Government again assumed control of the licensing system, and apparently made an honest effort to operate the Scott act; but the liquor men had been emboldened by the laxity of the two previous years, and it was found almost impossible to make the act at all effective. If the Scott act had been introduced under more favorable auspices there is little doubt that the results would have been much more satisfactory, as we have every reason to believe, in this county, at least, that the liquor men were in many cases inclined to abide by the decision of the people and respect the law. Judging from the outcry at present being made against the Scott act, though evidently when facts are con-sidered without justification, there is little doubt that should the vote on the 29th be adverse to prohibition the failure of the Scott act will be a chief factor in its defeat. Sincerely yours, Egmondville, Sept. 22, 1898.

Principal Grant Criticised.

To the Editor of The Advertiser:

If I were a grammarian you would have heard from me long ago, when I see such men as Goldwin Smith and Principal Grant writing against the plebiscite. I would not wonder so much at Goldwin Smith, for he sees so many of the English clergymen going against it, but I am sorry to see that any Presbyterian clergyman would write against it, more especially Principal Grant, a teacher of young men: that he would let them see that he was in favor of saloons, for he says the plebiscite falls through we will go back to the former state of things. Prohibition can remove open temptation, and that is seven-eighths of the victory. He implies it is useless as long as there are so many illicit ways of getting it. We will leave that to the government. He speaks of the grave dangers they (the citizens) may fall into through listening to the heart rather than to the heal. I am afraid his head is getting awry when he would quote such an expression. God looks at the heart rather than the head—Proverbs xvi., 9: "A man's heart deviseth his ways; but the Lord deviseth his steps."

AMUSEMENTS

"HUMANITY."

It is said that every piece of scenery used in the big production of "Humanwhich will be seen at the Grand on Friday, is carried by the company. The explosion scene in the bombardment of the fort is about as realistic as one can wish for.

SOL SMITH RUSSELL AND "UNCLE DICK."

An early attraction at the Grand will be the eminent comedian and his notable company of artists. Mr. Russell this season will appear in a new and original comedy in four acts, written especially for him by Martha Morton, who also wrote "A Bachelor's Romance." It is said Mr. Russell has made an elaborate production of "Uncle Dick," and one that eclipses anything he has heretofore attempted. The supporting company is a very superior one, and includes a number of prominent names in the large list of

'A BACHELOR'S HONEYMOON." This bright, clever comedy will be presented here by an excellent company (the M. V. McLeod Comedy Company) on Thursday evening, Oct. 6. "A Bachelor's Honeymoon" was written by Jack Stapleton. It is a farcecomedy, presented by legitimate actors, who are scarce usually in farce. Every one of the individual players is distinctly known in the "good things" of the stage, and as the comedy is equal to the demand the management has seen fit to place the proper people to interpret its bright lines and original situations. The Boston Post, in Bachelor's Honeymoon' is as worthy of praise as 'Too Much Johnson,' or 'Christopher, Jun.,' and should be seen tonight by the kind of audience which anticipates the S. R. O. sign. There is not an element of comedy wanting in play. The clever plot. characters, bright lines, quick action, surprising complications, and, above all, a thoroughly competent company. Everything that the advance notices claimed for this play was fully justified last night. 'A Bachelor's Honeymoon' is a rollicking, lively, farcical comedy, the complications of which are so many that it is impossible to enumerate the many screaming features in connection with it." This company, that has played it for one year now, has just entered upon its second season. Heading the list is Mr. George F. Nash, who will be remembered for his splendid work as leading man with the Jefferson-Forence Drew aggregation, and later with Miss Olga Nethersole, and in his memorable characterization of Mr. Paul (Small Bottles) in "Chimmie Fadden" during its long run in New York, at the Manhattan Theater. The youngest son of Mr. Joseph Jefferson, Mr. William Winter Jefferson, will play Howston, his original role. Vella McLeod will play Juno Joyce. Mrs. McLeod is the wife of Mr. Phil McLeod, of this city. The balance of the company are all artists, and the presentation here will greatly please the theater-goer.

KELCEY-SHANNON COMPANY. The Grand Opera House will have an attraction of exceptional interest and merit tomorrow night, when the Kelcey-Shannon Company will present for the first time in this city a new play by an American dramatist which has met with the most emphatic approval of the critics and public in other cities where it has been presented, and bears all the marks of a genuine success for both playwright and actors. Of Mr. Herbert Kelcey and Miss Shannon, who head the company, words of introduction to our audiences are scarcely necessary. They have always been identified with the very best American companies, and associated with all that is dignified and refining in native dramatic work. They have surrounded themselves with a company of excellent actors, who have been favorably compared with the very best permanent stock companies in the precision, harmony and ability of their work. Mr. Fitch's new play deals with incidents in New York society life. It shows its foibles and its sorrows, and brings in striking dramatic contrast humors and almost tragic incidents. The story is a very interesting one, and is splendidly sustained. It is in three acts, the first of which occurs at a children's fancy costume party in the home of a wealthy member of the 'smart set," and the second at a wedding in the chapel of a fashionable New York church; the third in the morning room of the heroine's home the day after the wedding. The production is entirely new.

"REAL WIDOW BROWN." "The Real Widow Brown" was presented at the Grand yesterday afternoon and evening before large audiences, who laughed heartily over the funny predicaments of Deacon Goodman. The play is of a popular type of comedy, and the company presenting it is above the average. A number of catchy songs and dances are woven

FANNY DAVENPORT. Fanny Davenport, whose death at Melbourne Hall, Duxbury, Mass., was announced on Tuesday, had been pro-minent on the stage for many years, ranking in point of continuous service at the head of all the actresses of the United States. Edward Loomis Davenport, an actor almost great and altogether fascinating, and Fanny Eliza-beth Vining, an English actress, were her parents. But the histrionic strain did not begin with them. Mary Anne Davenport, a noted English actress of the last century, was an ancestor, and there were several stage favorites among the intervening generations. Miss Davenport was born in London, England, April 10, 1850. Her father was at one time manager of the Athenaeum in Boston, and Fanny was a mere child when she began her professional career there in "Metamora." At 14 she played in the "Black Crook," and prior to that she had won favorable notice at Niblo's in New York, where she appeared as the King of Spain in "Faint Heart Ne'er Won Fair Lady." A long period of stock and soubrette work followed, the dull grind that is necessary in any profession before crude material can be made available. It was this arduous training that fitted Miss Davenport for her first real trial, which was made in 1869, when Mr. Daly was impressed with her ability. As Lady Teazle, Rosalind, Nancy Sykes, and, above all, as Mabel Renfrew, in "Pique," Miss Davenport achieved success. There was no trouble about star-ring after that.

Miss Davenport was a dashing actress, who appreciated the full value of dress and personal embellishment. For ten years she toured the country, and in 1883 she commenced the "Sardou period" with "Fedora," and continued presenting the plays of that author until the end. Miss Davenport spent a fortune upon each of the plays, gave immense sums to the dramatist, and added to her own bank account enormously. No other American star has taken such risks or gained such rewards. She was a very rich woman and she worked for every cent she got. Miss Davenport was twice married, the first time to Edward F. Price, in 1879. She was divorced in 1888, and married her leading man, Melbourne McDowell, in 1889, and with him she had lived happily ever since. She was billed to appear here, at the Grand Opera House, some months ago, but was taken ill and never filled the engagement.

JNO. M'DONALD DEAD

Well-Known Business Man Passed Away.

The death of John McDonald, formerly of the firm of Pethick & Mc-Donald, occurred at his residence, 242 Talbot street, at an early hour this morning, at the age of 65 years. Deceased was born in East River, Picton, N. S., in March, 1834. In 1856 he decided to come to Ontario, and here he became connected with the firm of Mc-Intosh Bros. After some years he entered into business for himself, but gave it up to enter the employ of Robert Wallace as cutter, with whom he spent nine years, and at the end of that time entered into partnership with Thomas Pethick in the gents' clothing and furnishing business. In December, 1872, he was married to Miss Christine Skelly, of St. Marys. On Jan. 1, 1897, he was taken down with locomotor ataxia, and his ill-health continuing, he was forced to withdraw from business. From that time he gradually failed, until the end came peacefully. He was a member of the Forest City Lodge, No. 38, I. O. O. F., and also of the Masons. He leaves a widow and six children to mourn a loving husband and father. The death of a bright young daughter last May makes this bereavement doubly sad to the family. He was a man of mild and gentle disposition, and of the strictest integrity of character, whom none knew but to respect, and the kindest of fathers and the most devoted of husbands.

RUNAWAY RIG

Bad Smash Near the Corner of William and Dundas Streets.

Mr. J. A. Bolesby, of Kinore, had a narrow escape from serious injury yesterday while driving along William street, near Dundas. After leaving Wortman & Ward's foundry, his horses, two spirited animals, set off on a lively jump as they turned the corner of York street. Their speed increased as they went along, and having got be-yond control they upset the wagon, throwing Mr. Bolesby out on the pavement and scattering a load of merchandise over the road. There were a large number of fruit jars, and the roadway was strewn with glass. Mr. Bolesby received a few cuts on the head and face, and many severe bruises. The horses turned into a lane after getting clear of the rig, and came to a

STORM-TOSSED

Terrible Experience of a Pacific Liner.

The Columbia Nearly Blown Ashore on the Japanese Coast.

Tacoma, Wash., Sept. 28. - Fresh from an encounter with a terrific typhoon off the coast of China, the Northern Pacific steamer Columbia steamed into port last night. The vessel was tossed like a shingle 12 hours, driven many miles back on her course and carried so near the coast of Japan that the seas shipped by the vessel left deposits of sand on the decks. The anchor had been cast, but the chain snapped, and the anchor and the cable were lost and the ship was forced near the shore. The storm occurred Aug. 29, off Foo Chow, China. The escape of the Columbia is considered miraculous and everyone aboard believed the ship would never live through the storm. The Chinese sailors practically mutinied after the vessel was near shore and would not be driven to work.

The Europeans aboard, comprising only the officers, were compelled to do the work, with no assistance but that of a few sailors who happened to be passengers on the ship. The freight brought by the Columbia amounts to 1.300 tons of tea, silk and general products. The bulk of the cargo is tea.

THE REMAINS OF COLUMBUS

To Be Removed From Cuba to Spain.

Unaccomplished Plans to Honor the Noted Discoverer May Be Completed at Home.

Havana, Sept. 28 .- The remains of Christopher Columbus, which were removed from their niche in the cathedral on Monday preparatory to their shipment to Spain, had laid in their late resting place since Jan. 19, 1796, when they were brought from Santo Domingo, that island having been ceded to France by Spain. Since the date mentioned the re-mains have laid in an open niche in the wall of the presbytery of the cathedral, a yard and a half above the ground, between a sillar supporting the main arch and the choir. In 1892 there was placed in front of the niche a slab of doubtful artistic taste, representing a relief in bust of the great admiral and bearing this inscription in Spanish:

"May the remains and image of the great Columbus lie a thousand centuries preserved in this urn and in the remembrance of our nations."

After the four hundredth anniversary of the discovery of the new world by Columbus the Spanish Cortes included in the Cuban budget large sums for the purpose of erecting a monument symbolizing the travels of the discoverer to be placed in the most conspicuous place in Havana and the construction of a mausoleum to hold his ashes. This mausoleum, the work of the Spanish sculptor Melida, was brought to Havana and placed upon a base erected in the center wall of the cathedral close to the main door. The monument, the work on which was intrusted to the sculptor, Sisillo, has not come and probably never will come to Havana. It was to have been paid for by an appropriation included in the budget of the island, but circumstances have overturned the plans made on the occasion of the celebration of the four hundredth anniversary of the discovery of America, and it is probable that both the monument and the mausoleum will be placed in a fitting place in Spain, where they will be looked upon as one of the treasures of the Spanish nation.

attacked in some of the papers of the American metropolis, but his friends everywhere recognize that the attacks were not the product of good judgment. The New York Journal says: "Actually it was the best succession of starts seen at any metropolitan racecourse in the last ten years. Mr. Fitzgerald, in speaking of his afternoon's work, said: "The reason Annual R. C. Golf Tournament I was able to get the horses off well was because I was allowed for the first time hereabout to use the barrier as I pleased. Such work as was done with the barrier this afternoon was seen all the time when I was using it in the south at New Orleans. People are always talking about horses not being able to break flat-footed, but anyone could see this afternoon that jockeys can get away when they know that they are going to be sent off.' The starter's method differed somewhat in various races. The best results were obtained when he walked the horses up toward the barrier from some way back, and, raising the barrier before they reached it, let them off to what was really a flying start. With big fields this is not so feasible, and in some cases yesterday he got good results by lining the horses up to the barrier and sending them off to what was virtually a 'no recall' start."

No Compromise.

To the Editor of The Advertiser: I would have refrained from taking up more space in your valuable paper, but there are passages in F. B. Kickham's letter which call for some com-ment. He says that if it were only the low and ignorant that drank there might be a reasonable possibility of doing away with it. I agree with him, because it is not the low and ignor-ant, as he terms them, that are responsible for the drink curse, but the refined and cultured and devout members of our churches, who have their favorite brands in their cellars-high society, as the world calls them, where parties are exchanged, and where the wine flows freely till the guests are intoxicated, and the carriage is called to convey them home where they can sleep off their night's debauch, and then go out and pose to the public as temperance men. This is no idle talk, but the solemn truth. The magistrate can sit over his favorite wine, and drink enough to make five men drunk, and then sit on the bench in the morning and fine or imprison the poor drunkard who has been overcome by perhaps one-fifth of the amount drunk by the other one, and who is looked upon as a pest to society, while the other is admired and applauded by the world. The confidential servants in high society could tell you a tale, if they would. And pray, who is responsible for the ignorance of the working class for so many years back? Has not the opportunity of education been kept back by the rich until the people rose up and demanded a change. And, pray, who are the hogs referred to? Is it those who drink openly, or is it those who are able to drink behind the scenes, and are so shielded from society, and so accustomed to it that the effect is not apparent, while many working men are without means to get it, and are R. Edu-cation and refinement increases our responsibility. Second round — F. Pattison by the one-sided fanatics for the honorable and laudable way that his wealth has been accumulated? In conclusion, I would say that the men who have tried both sides should be competent judges. Having seen the traffic in its true light, as God sees it, they come boldly out to wage war with this enemy of God and man, and thus use vote and influence for prohibition, a vote that they can present at the bar of God. I would ask, where is the Moses or Elijah that will stand in the gap at this crisis; or like Hezekiah, that spread the letter be-fore the Lord, the result being that sent blasphemous Sennacherib back to his own land, with a hook in T. GOLDSMITH. his nose?

His Life Was Saved.

Mr. J. E. Lilly, a prominent citizen of Hannibal, Mo., lately had a wonderful deliverance from a frightful death. In telling of it he says: "I was taken with Typhoid Fever, which ran into Pneumonia. My lungs became hardened. I was so weak I couldn't even sit up in bed. Nothing helped me. I expected to soon die of consumption, when I heard of Dr. King's New Discovery. One bottle gave great relief. continued to use it, and now am well and strong. I can't say too much in its praise." LIFE SAVED.—Mr. James Bryson Cameron writes: "I was confined to my bed with inflammation of the lungs and was given up by physicians. A neighbor advised me to try Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, stating that his wife had used it for a throat trouble with the best results. Acting on this advice, I procured the medicine, and less than half a bottle cured me; I certainly believe it saved my life. It was with reluctance that I consented to a trial, as I was reduced to such a state that I doubted the power of any remedy to do me good.

Managing Director John Cameron and Editor, London, Wednesday, Sept. 28, 1898.

Britain Must Control the Trans. vaal.

A correspondent sends some interesting particulars as to the condition of affairs at Delagoa Bay, which probably accounts for the recent report that the control of that South African possession to Great Britain upon terms likely to prove highly advantageous to British commerce and to our fellow-English speakers in South Africa. For some time after the railway from the coast crossed the Transvaal frontier, the seaport of this territory enjoyed marvelous prosperity. Even within a comparatively short time, it seemed necessary to speedily construct railways from every part of the east coast of Africa to the Rand gold fields. Lorenzo Marquez,on Delagoa Bay, was specially favored by President Kruger, its greatest and nearest rival, Durban, being as far as possible boycotted by the Boer chief, because it was under the control of the British. This threw the bulk of the trade into what was termed "the Transvaal's favorite port." Consequently, Delagoa Bay was rushed with merchandise until everybody was at his wits' end how to handle it. The limited customs houses were overcrowded, acres of ground outside the sheds were covered with perishable goods, thrown pell-mell in a manner which baffled description. The Portugese railway was entirely unable to cope with the rush of timber, machinery and other goods which for some years were poured into the harbor at the rate of from 1,500 to 1,800 tons per day, all en route for the Transvaal. On Her Majesty's jubilee, a little more than twelve months ago, there were 307 steamers and sailing vessels in the harbor of Lorenzo Marquez discharging Now all this is changed. On July 1 of present year there was one steamer in port only, and she was in quarantine, and on the 21st of the same month only one sailing vessel was discharging cargo. She was there by accident, as she was detained in the Baltic by ice.

In 1894 an expert commercial man, who visited Delagoa Bay, prophesied that two-thirds of the whole of the Transvaal trade would pass through that port. The computer, however, failed to take into account the nature of the management of the Portuguese officials, who controlled the harbor and the railway. The British ports of Durban, East London, and Port Elizabeth. being under the management of the British resident capitalists, and the railways running to them being provided with every reasonable facility for speedy handling of freight, and for its safe transit to all parts of Southeast Africa, have pushed away ahead of their competitor at Delagoa Bay, more advantageously situated though it is. Mismanagement and incompetence have characterized the rule of the Portuguese in every official relationship at Delagoa Bay. No responsibility ex-4sted. Every progressive movement at the port was thwarted. Favorite indidivuals were allowed to coin money at the expense of their fellows, and the high-salaried officials who were sent out from Lisbon were characterized neither by husiness ability nor by integrity.

All this time Great Britain and other nations have been cognizant of the unsatisfactory condition of affairs, but no one seemed disposed to interfere, so long as Portugal, or her military representatives, seemed bound to destroy the opportunity that existed to make of her chief port a great commercial entrepot. Now there are bugles blowing, and military tinsel in plenty on Delagoa Bay; but these seem strangely out of place where there is an empty, defenseless harbor, and depleted exchequer. Concession mongering and over-taxation have ruined all local enterprise. Indeed, the prospect for Delagoa Bay is a most dismal one, unless there is a sweeping out of the admin-1strators now in possession, and a complete cleansing is undertaken.

To our mind, there are few successful managers in the colonial world outside the English-speaking race. If Britain were in possession of Delagoa. Bay, it would be one of the great comercial ports of South Africa. There would be equity of treatment for all who might seek the shelter of its haror. For this reason, we are not surorised to learn that there is rejoicing commercial circles over the report hat Great Britain is about to obtain omplete control over the port. When the bargain is fully established, even he opposition of the non-progressive oer president cannot prevent Delagoa Bay realizing all the benefits that ught to flow to it from its magnificent osition. Such a result would be powrful in aiding the amalgamation of e whole of South Africa into a Doninion owning the sway of British ule. and sharing with the great emire of which we form a part the great enefits that flow from that associaion of interests.

The irreconcilably Tory Chatham lanet says: "The Advertiser seems be afraid that Laurier will be ut in a hole." The Advertiser an put two and two together as well the Planet, a newspapers whose very utterance has shown that its ne thought in this plebiscite agitation not to decrease the consumption of toxicating liquors, but to make polical capital against the Government the day. The less the Planet has to eling, the better.

After the War.

The close of the war has been already followed in the United States by the inevitable rush for pensions. The war department has prudently taken steps to prevent a recurrence of the gigantic frauds and jobbery which imposed on the gratitude of the nation after the civil war. The Secretary of War has ordered that a record of the physical condition of every volunteer at the date of his discharge be filed with the war department. Each record must be certified Portugal is not averse to selling out to by three persons—the volunteer himself, the commanding officer and the army surgeon. Other safeguards have been devised by the department to check fraudulent claims. The Republic already pays in pensions every year a sum greater than either Germany or France spends on its standing army. The late war, although the carnage is not to be compared to that of the rebellion, will add considerably to the burden, as the ravages of disease and neglect, more than actual warfare, have left a host of widows. orphans and dependents to be provided for. In his pension affairs Uncle Sam has adopted a scale of munificence which he cannot now depart

> The growth of the pension ast of the Civil War is a fearful and wonderful thing. Over twenty years ago it was thought that the maximum had been reached, but every succeeding year it has increased and multiplied, and the end is not yet. There are now 1.040 --356 pensioners on the roll. Last year 52,000 new claims were admitted, and 639,000 are pending! The cost is over $145,000,000 per annum. A multitude of these pensioners are on the list through false pretenses. Public men hesitate to attack this great evil through fear of stirring up a political enmity which is powerful enough to sweep any man from office. It is too late to separate the sheep from the goats already inside the pension fold, but the war department is determined to draw the line rigidly in future. The situation is serious enough already. The United States aims at becoming a military and naval power. Enormous expenditures are necessary to this ambition and the nation cannot afford to be preyed upon as it has been

"Our future lies on the water," said Emperor William. "And ours lies under the water," echoes poor Spain, as she thinks of her submarine navy.

Mr. Chamberlain says he cannot come to Canada. He is staying with his wife's relations, and he refuses to leave them. Joseph has always been original.

The old passenger rates have not yet been restored owing to some hitch between the C. P. R. and G. T. R. This is one case where the people will forgive the railways for moving slowly.

If a novelist had imagined plots such as were unfolded in the Dreyfus case, or even in the Bridgeburg murder mystery, he would probably have dismissed them as being too extravagant, even for fiction.

Mr. Whitney says that Mr. Calder was unseated as the result of a Liberal conspiracy. Very true. There was a Liberal conspiracy to expose the rank methods by which Mr. Calder got his seat. The conspiracy was successful,

The London Times was deprived of the services of both its war correspondents at the battle of Omdurman, one being killed and the other wounded. The London Telegraph thereupon placed all its war dispatches at the disposal of the Times - a shining example of the amenities of English journalism.

Sir William Crooks' wheat famine policy is being attacked everywhere. Even our American contemporaries see that he did not take Canada sufficiently into account. Says the Buffalo Express: "It is well known that there are vast stretches of land in British North America which are yet to be brought under cultivation. In other continents, the same is true."

The tornado in Lincoln was more destructive but no more violent than that which swept across this county last year. The two were identical in appearance and effect, but last year's storm only traveled a short distance and there were no towns or villages in its path. As a result a cyclone insurance company was formed in Westminster township by the farmers. Fortunately the cyclone's visits are too rare to render this form of insurance a widespread necessity in Canada.

Mr. Dingley's protectionist principles can bend a little under certain pressure. Maine lumbermen in New Brunswick find it convenient to saw their timber in that province before it is exported to their own state. Through Mr. Dingley's influence this timber is permitted to enter Maine free of duty. Entering another State it would be taxed. Mr. Dingley is a Congressman for Maine. His devotion to his constituents is so genuine that he can even suffer free trade in epots for their

According to La Patrie, "there is probably not a state or province in the whole of North America so far behind as the Province of Quebec in the matter of public libraries. It is sad that this has to be said, but it is one of the truths that it is not always wise to hide." "Montreal, with its 300,000 inhabitants, is behind the most modest cities of Massachusetts and of Maine. y about the plebiscite and party and we are compelled to feel ashamed on this account." If the Emperor of China is dead, the Dowager Empress will not escape suspicion. A previous Emperor who attempted to throw off the influence of this intriguing old woman died suddenly and mysteriously, and a few weeks later his wife followed him to the grave. There were no coroner's inquests. The Dowager has been the power behind the throne ever since.

The irrepressible Teddy Roosevelt has secured the Republican nomination in New York State by a sweeping majority. Beyond a doubt he will be elected. The Democrats will accuse Roosevelt of having succumbed to Senator Platt, the Republican boss in New York State, but if Platt tries to use Roosevelt for shady purposes, he will find Teddy still a rough rider, unless people have mistaken the young man's

It is reported the Americans will propose the purchase of the Canadian | Many More Persons Injured Than at sealing rights in the Bering Sea. The industry is a precarious one at the best, and if present conditions continue, the seals will be exterminated in a few years. anyway. The business has been a constant menace to friendly relations between the two countries. It is not worth quarreling over.

Mr. D. R. Wilkie, general manager of the Imperial Bank, has returned from a tour of observation through Manitoba and the Northwest. Mr. Wilkie is a regular visitor to the West, and knows whereof he speaks. He says the crops are the best in years, and that the outlook is rosy. The cash system, he says, has been generally adopted over all the country west of Ontario. Mr. Wilkie thinks there is an element of danger in excessive competition of banks, which enables farmers to secure money so readily that they are induced to avail themselves of lines of credit which they cannot repay. Canada, he thinks, will become the highway of the Orient, and 75 per cent of the passenger travel between China, Japan and other countries will pass over Canadian roads.

WHAT OTHERS SAY.

An English Solecism. [Buffalo Express.]

It is one of the oddities of English life that as soon as a man makes his name famous he is rewarded by being allowed to change it. Witness Baron Curzon of Kedleston, lately known as Mr. George N. Curzon.

Hardy's Sate Position. [Toronto Star.]

Why, Mr. Hardy had no need of that constable session at all! The highest legal opinion in the province was with him all the time. Well, why did he call it? Perhaps Mr. Whitney—and this is a secret-perhaps it was to give his small but effective majority a trial heat. Meanwhile, the constable vote question is decided, and Mr. Hardy can watch Ontario's interests at the Quebec conference with an undivided mind.

That Wheat Famine Idea.

[Chicago Interior.]

An English economist predicts a wheat famine: Three successive great crops throughout the world left a surplus, and prices lower than ever before or that can be again, were touched. The wheat lands have been occupied. The low prices brought an enormous extension to the eating of wheat-bread. The surplus was eaten up. The demand is now 150 millions greater than the supply, or probable supply, and it is in-creasing, while production cannot in-crease to meet it. A short crop would now be immediately followed by partial famine. What is England to do? While wheat can never again be bought at the low prices of three years ago, the English economist is not in pos-session of all the facts. All the wheat needed will be forthcoming during the first quarter of the new century at prices which will remunerate the producer. English economists do not know how wasteful American farming ishow much first-class wheat-producing land is lying about every farm in patches and odd bits. Pay the farmer for reclaiming it, and he will do so Nod does he seem to know how much unused wheat land lies under original prairie grass in British North America. If wheat, as he shows, is already 150 millions per annum short of the mand, the only reason is that the farmer would not raise it at the prices offered. Europe can have all the wheatbread it wants for many years to come at $1 per bushel, net, to the farmer.

IN THE TRACK OF THE STORM

First Reported-Some of the Details.

St. Catharines, Sept. 28.-In addition to those already reported as having been injured at Merritton, as a result of the cyclone which swept over this district on Monday, a number of other persons were hurt. When the roof of the Lincoln Mill gave way in the rush of employes to reach a place of safety, Miss Julia Elliott, of the printing room, fell from the top of the stairs to the next floor and was badly injured.

Charles Murray and Edward Doyle were loading a large freight car with pulp, when the cars were picked up and deposited in the raceway, one of them being almost completely submerged. The two men were thrown suits of blue with black braid have into the raceway, and only by the efforts of Mr. Doyle was Mr. Murray saved from drowning. Doyle was severely cut on the head and face. Miss Maggie Nixon, another employe. received a severe scalp wound. A cow in the field back of the mill was killed in the storm, and all over the field were strewn chicken and other poultry, dead and dying.

The home of Walter Ekins on the St. David's road was struck and completely demolished. One child was cut completely in two, and another is suffering from a broken leg. Archie Crawford's house in Stamford was also destroyed.

Much sympathy is expressed at the loss sustained by Mr. John Bickley in the death of Mrs. Bickley, she leaving a family of seven small children.

O. J. Phelps' fine apple orchard is completely rooted out, and his barn also is badly wrecked. Mr. Hogan's house was picked up and carried bodily a distance in the field behind, and not a vestige of it is

Mr. Sexsmith's house, opposite the Presbyterian Church, also suffered, the north end being taken out.

Fears are entertained for the welfare of Mrs. P. O'Neil, who had just returned from attending the funeral of her niece at Dunnville, and arrived home just in time to see her daughter

The only house standing undamaged n the midst of the wreck is that of Mrs. Donaghue. The fronts of the stores of A. Disher and R. Thompson were completely demolished, and part of the stock of both stores was destroyed O. J. Phelps had in his barn an old sleigh, which had been handed down from generation to generation for over 100 years. This was removed from the barn and deposited in the yard some distance away unharmed, and the contents of the hay mow were deposited in An old galvanized iron its place. smokestack on the back of the house is still standing, though not a chimney is left on the place. A young son of David Ramsay was standing on the acetylene gas works siding, when the funnel scooped him up. His was a wonderful experience. He threw up his arms and was unable to get them down again. His body was rigid and he was carried in the whirlpool, as he calls it, clear over the Lincoln Paper Mills, and deposited in the field beyond, suffering nothing but a bruised shoulder.

In the collapse of the school two children of Milo Phelps were quite badly cut and injured about the face and head, and required medical assistance. At the time of the storm Mr. and Mrs. John McCausland, who live on the town line, were driving home. They were caught by the storm and carried some distance from the road to the government land near by. They were both seriously injured. On all sides this morning every available man is employed in clearing up the wreckage. The street railway company had a large force of men employed all night in taking out broken poles and picking up the wires, and this morning the street car service is going again. The scene of the wreck was visited by hundreds from outside points.

Mrs. James Bradley, of Merritton, is seriously ill today from the effects of injuries received from the collapse of her home. She was buried under a mass of debris, but managed to extricate herself and run to a place of safety. MANY PERSONS INJURED AT TONAWANDA. Tonawanda, Sept. 28 .- The tornado which wrought such terrible damage across the borders in St. Catharines and Merritton, struck this city with terrible violence at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. The amount of damage will exceed $100,000. Many people are homeless, and some are now under the care of physicians, as the result of injuries sustained during the brief visit of the wind. The injured are: John Monette, arm and legs broken, may die; Mrs. Augusta Hermann, hurt internally and is very low; Mrs. Charles Peters, Mrs. Henry Peters and the Peters baby, badly bruised by flying timbers; Emma Eberle, badly cut by falling glass; Mrs. Emma Lyons, seriously injured by falling glass; George Post, bruised and cut; Mrs. Fred Kruse, struck on head by timber, seriously injured; Carrie Post and Charles Arnse, cut and bruised; Jacob Lyons, arm wrenched. Many others were hurt by flying timbers and falling glass.

Ingersoll Man Narrowly Escapes Being Crushed to Death-Charing Cross Farmer Badly Injured-Dresden's Tax Rate-Bicycle Thief Gets Six

Quail must not be shot till Oct. 15. Galt expects to have an opera house in the near future.

Steps are being taken to organize a Y. M. C. A. in Hespeler. Dresden's tax rate has been fixed at 23 mills on the dollar. The Windham agricultural show this year promises to be a good one. Brantford township has refused to help Brantford city in the scheme for flood prevention. Good weather has favored the Ingersoll fall show this year, and its success is assured.

McNaughton, Walker & Co., Chatham, shipped a carload of eggs to Liverpool on Monday. W. J. Moffatt has purchased the Brotherton estate, on the second line of Warwick, for $1,850. A number of Waterloo county farmers complain that their barns have been entered by grain thieves.

Mr. James Smith, of North Easthope, who sold his farm to Mr. George Zinn, got $5,000 for it, not $4,500, as stated last week. The Perth Teachers' Association will hold its autumn sessions this year in St. Marys on Friday and Saturday, Oct. 14 and 15. The Waterloo board of health has leased a brick building near the hospital for temporary quarters for the treatment of diphtheria cases. At Sarnia on Monday Judge Mc-Kenzie sentenced John Milne to six months in the Central Prison for stealing a bicycle from Col. Ellis. The Woodstock Collegiate Institute has organized a cadet corps. Natty been secured at a cost of less than $8 each. Last Saturday William Work, who resides one and a quarter miles north of Brussels, had the misfortune to fall out of an apple tree and break two of his ribs.

James Horseley, sailor, an old resident of Amherstburg, unmarried, while standing on the dock, took a fit and fell in the Detroit River, and was drowned before assistance could reach him.

Fred Pollard, the young Englishman who was recently fined $100, or three years, at Brantford, walked out of the jail Saturday afternoon a free man. His parents in Burnley, England, had come to his rescue and forwarded the $100 necessary to get the young man out of jail.

Fire broke out in the Ingersoll evaporating factory. The firemen worked hard until it was thought everything was quite safe, when the place was abandoned by them. About 11:30 o'clock, however, the smoldering embers again broke forth, and the firemen were again called to the scene. Damage about $150; fully insured.

The Windsor license commissioners have not yet considered the question of closing the saloons on Thursday for the prohibition plebiscite. They say that if they get any official instructions they will follow them, but otherwise they will take no action. Licens Inspector Pacaud is of the opinion that the saloons cannot be compelled to close.

Chatham Planet: David Walker, one of the wealthiest and best known farmers of Charing Cross, was run over by a roller last week. Mr. Walker, who is 85 years of age, was rolling a field, when the tongue slipped out, and he was thrown underneath the roller, which passed over the whole of him except his head. His sons, who saw the accident, hastened over and carried their father to the house. Although severely crushed, Mr. Walker stoutly refuses to have a doctor. He has never been sick a day, and doesn't believe in doctors.

Mr. George McCrae, thresher, who lives a short distance out of Ingersoll, was attempting to cross the bridge which spans the Thames on the road leading from the waterworks pumphouse, with a traction engine, when a section of the flooring gave way and engine and driver went through to the river bed. Mr. McCrae was thrown off the engine, or he would have been crushed to death. A large water tank on trucks, trailing behind the engine. also took the plunge. As it was, Mr. McCrae was pinned down by the foot under a portion of the engine, and was unable to release himself. His foot is badly smashed and his back strained.

WEELY REVIEW.

A good supply of general produce has characterized the markets here almost every day this week. Looking over our list of prices and comparing it with a week ago, we note only a few changes in values, chief among which are a trifle lower prices for wheat and oats, a wider range for barley, higher prices for eggs, lower potatoes, tomatoes, cabbage, turnips and hay.

The supply of fruit was the only uneatisfactory feature of the receipts. Dealers report shipments of grapes and peaches not half the amount that came here last season. The demand is reported very much smaller also, and much fruit that usually is consumed here is being re-shipped to other points. There is considerable demand for Niagara grapes and top prices are commanded by them, most sales being made at 2c to 21/2c. Concords and other blacks sell at 11/2c usually.

26,000; sheep, 7,000. TORONTO, Sept. 27 .- Thirty loads of cattle were boarded at the western stock yards this morning, and with the stock left over from this week there was a fair run; business was slow during the early part of the day, and prices for all lines showed no material change; in the export line there was a fair inquiry; cables were firmer, and buyers and sellers were not far apart; prices ruled from $4 to $450 per cwt; export bulls are quoted at from $3 to $4 per cwt; for butchers' cattle the market was steady; several holders were asking 4½c per lb, but buyers were not willing to give more than 416c for the best cattle; the range in prices was from $4 to $4 25 per cwt; medium cattle are quoted at from $3 50 to $3 75 per cwt; the market for stockers was quiet: dealers are quoting from $3.25 to $3.50 per cwt in the market. For small meats the offerings were fair. Sheep are quoted at from 21/2c to 31/2c per lb; lambs at from $2 75 to $3 50 per head, and calves at from $3 to $6 per head. Several head of milch cows were offered, and prices ranged from $25 to $45 per head. The run of hogs continues heavy, and the prospects are for an easier market; the best hogs are quoted at from $4 60 to $4 75 per cwt; thick fat and light hogs at $4 25 per cwt; thick fat and light, $3 25 per cwt.

EAST BUFFALO, Sept. 27.-Cattle-There were no fresh receipts of sale, and only a limited inquiry. There were not enough calves to make a market. Sheep and lambs-Offerings, 19 loads; the market was about the same as yesterday as to price on the good kind, but only a part of the offerings were sold; Canada lambs sold at $5 50 to $5 65, which was stronger than yesterday; on the whole the market was dull and unsatisfactory; lambs, choice to extra, $5 40 to $5 60; good to choice, $5 to $5 40; sheep, choice to extra, $4 50 to $4 75; choice to extra mixed, $4 25 to $4 50. Hogs-Offerings, 26 loads; the market was satisfactory on the desirable kinds, which were medium and heavy: Yorkers in very light demand and no demand for grassers. The close was very slow and prices weak; heavy hogs sold generally at $4 15 to $4 20; medium, $4 15 to $4 20; Yorkers, $4 15; pigs, $3 70; but one load at $3 80; skippy pigs, $2 75; roughs, $3 40 to $3 65; stags,

VERY STRONG SENTIMENT

In Favor of an Anglo-American Alliance-Rev. Dr. Clifford, of London, at Tremont Temple, Boston.

The event of the Rev. Dr. Clifford's stay here was his address in Tremont Temple yesterday morning on "The Anglo-American Alliance." He spoke with the impassioned eloquence of one inspired by the greatness and urgency of his subject. Dr. Clifford spoke without a text. He began by saying that there could be no better moment than the present, when the 20th century was about to dawn, for giving effect to the grow-ing desire of the two peoples for a closer co-operation in the service of mankind.

I can confidently speak, said Dr. Clifford, with regard to England, where the union is not so much passively wished as it is passionately and eagerly coveted. The churches feel it and feed it; the ministers expound and urge it; the upper classes have come into line with the middle and lower classes; so that there beats one great pulse of eagerness for the consolidation of these great peoples.

The Liberals, sympathetic toward the proposal for a closer union of England and America, find themselves in fellowship with the Tories, and the Tories are not a whit behind in this desire. From end to end of the country it is the one dominant emotion. And, although I cannot speak much for New England, for the District of Columbia, for Pennsylvania and New York, being simply a visitor here, yet the newspapers I have read and the conversations I have been permitted to engage in have shown me that here, as well as there, exists the same pas sionate enthusiasm in behalf of this cause. Not a dissident voice have I heard either there or here. Nor is this feeling any Jonah's gourd.

sprung up in a night. Some of us have felt it even in our boyhood, and as the years have rolled on we have found it increasing from day to day. Trained o hate tyranny as the foe of God and man, we have contemplated from youth upward the great embodiment of our principles in this rapidly extending republic, not simply with admiration, but with the deepest and truest admiration.

The England of Cromwell, of Hampden, of Pym, of Franklin and of Washington has always had in it a succession of men who have felt that in America was the true ground into which had been cast the seed of their own ancient principles, and that this seed had been so watered by the devotion, the heroism, the faith, and the fervor of America's sons that it has yielded the greatest and happiest harvest to mankind.

As our churches sent over to you a message of peace at the time of the Venezuela question, so messages came from your churches, and among the first to come were the messages of your own Dr. Lorimer and of Dr. Lyman Abbott, of New York. (Applause.) And there stands today the settlement of that Venezuela trouble as a witness to the possibility of securing a more solid and enduring union than has ever yet existed between the two countries.

Dr. Clifford then gave some of the historic reasons for the proposed alliance. He first emphasized the identity of race stock. That we held our poets as a common possession was next emphasized, the speaker saying that the same great teachers of humanity ministered to the pupils in the public schools of both countries. The purpose and result of this teaching was the elevation of the different nationalities of the earth as they came under our Union Jack and the American Stars and Stripes. If literature could accomplish so much, religion had done, and was doing, still more, with the Bible, so democratic, so completely in sympathy with the principles of individual development, making so much of the person, yet also making so much of the same race. The hymns common to both peoples also have brought them together, and we are bound together by great preachers and divines. Then there were the achievements of each people, and these had always been regarded as the common property own; we put together Clara Barton and Florence Nightingale, Frances Willard and Lady Henry Somerset. Some of the results of the proposed union were finally summarized by Dr. Clifford. The alliance, said he-an end of militarism, the termination of war, the establishment of a tribunal for the calm and peaceful settlement of all international disputes. The alliance-an inspirer ot the progress of the world. At the close of Dr. Clifford's address Mr. Frank Waterman moved the following resolution: "Resolved, that the magnificent statements of Dr. John Clifford, of London, that 'England and America are joined by stock, tongue, literature, religion, achievements, liberty and conscience, in an alliance that cannot and shall not be broken, but shall strengthen and increase as the years pass by,' is the unanimous opinion of this audience of nearly 3,000 people, in Tremont Temple, Sept. 30, 1898."

The result was put from the platform and was carried by acclamation.

SENTENCED.

Iwo Prisoners Sent to Spend a Term in the Central Prison-One Allowed to Go.

John Prodgers and John Harris (colored) were sentenced by Judge Edward Elliott this morning for a crime committed on July 5. On that date the accused, while under the influence of liquor, went to the home of James Godwin, on Trafalgar street, broke into his house, robbed, and beat him in a terrible manner. Before leaving they bound him up in a sheet, from which he extricated himself with difficulty, and gave the alarm. Mr. Godwin was then taken to the hospital. brought before the county judge the prisoners pleaded not guilty elected trial by jury. They changed their plea, however, and last week reelected trial by the judge, and confessed the crime.

Judge Elliott, addressing Prodgers, pointed out that although he had been before the court on previous occasions. he had never been convicted of a serious crime. He was sentenced to six months in the Central. Harris seemed undisturbed by the seriousness of his crime. The court had referred to the fact that as the prisoner had already served two terms—one of four and the other of twelve months-for robbery and other crimes, no leniency could be expected. The judge believed Harris to have been the ringleader in the affair, and sentenced him to twelve months in the Central Prison. Wesley Scott pleaded guilty to stealing a bag of peas from John Johnston, of West Nissouri, on Sept. 12. A number of witnesses were called to prove the previous good character of the accused, and he was allowed to go on suspended sentence.

Successful Church Anniversary Celebration of Zion Appointment.

The friends at Zion appointment, Siloam circuit, held their anniversary services on Sabbath, Sept. 25, when sermons were preached morning and evening by Rev. Dr. Willoughby, of Exeter, and in the afternoon by Rev. Mr. Hobbs, of London, both gentlemen giving excellent expositions of their different subjects, that were highly appreciated by the large congregations. The sum of $400 was asked for by the pastor, and the full amount was laid on the plates during the day, clearing the church from all indebtedness, for which the friends of Zion appointment have a right to thank God and take courage, and may well expect God's blessing. "Prove me now, saith the Lord of Hosts, if I will not open the windows of heaven and pour you out a blessing that there shall not we room enough to receive it" (Malachi iii., 10). We trust that we may see this promise fulfilled at the abovementioned appointment.

Frederick Wilson Thomas, a Muncey Indian, 28 years of age, has been committed for trial by Squire Henry Lockwood, of Delaware, on a charge horse stealing. The offense is said to have been committed on July 4 last. Josiah Nicholas, also of the reserve was the loser of the animal.

Young Griffe Orazy-Tod Sloan's Mount Wins the Welter Handicap at Newmarket.

> TURF. SLOAN'S SUCCESS.

London, Sept. 28.—Tod Sloan, the American tockey, at the second day of the first October meeting at Newmarket today, won the Newmarket October welter handicap of 500 sovereigns, with the Lorillard-Beresford stables' 8-year-old bay colt Elfin. Mr. W. E. Oakley's Peace and Plenty was second. and the Duke of Westminster's Calvely third. The betting was 9 to 4 against Elfin.

London, Sept. 28.-The triennial produce stakes, at Newmarket, was won by Sir J. Miller's 3-year-old colt Galashiels, with Tod Sloan up. Five horses ran. The triennial produce stakes is of 16 sovereigns each, with 300 sovereigns added, and 50 sovereigns for the nominator of the winner. Distance 1 mile and 2 furlongs.

TRIGGER.

YOUNG GRIFFO CRAZY. Chicago, Sept. 28.-Albert Griffiths, better known as Young Griffo, the pugilist, is strapped in a straight-jacket at the Harrison street police station, where he is being held pending an examination into his mental condition. Griffiths ran amuck last evening in State street, and from Congress street to Hubbard court he left a trail marked by bruised faces. Three policemen arrested the pugilist were sent sprawling to the ground by a series of blows, and reinforcements were necessary before the prisoner was finally taken to a patrol box. Before Griffiths was tied in the patrol wagon he had taken off every article of clothing which he wore. Griffiths was drinking in a saloon when he suddenly leaped in the air, turned loose a series of yells, and rushed into the street, where he hit everybody he could reach.

A BOMBSHELL

Thrown Into Railway Business Circles in Buffalo.

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 28 .- The Erie Railroad today threw another bomb into the local passenger business in the shape of rate-cutting. Tomorrow the company introduces a rate of $6 for one way to New York. It was found that the cut rate of $10 round trip to New York, was well enough in its way, but with many of the traveling public it did not answer.

The rate of $6 is a reduction from $8, the present rate of the differential lines, in order to meet this demand. The Erie sprung another rate-cutting sensation today, affecting Rochester, which eclipses the others. Beginning Saturday, the round trip rate from Rochester to New York and return will be $4 over the Erie line. The present rate from Rochester to New York and

Before the business of the session commenced, two sessions of prayer were held, asking God's blessing on the prohibition vote to be taken on the 29th, that God would crown the efforts of the temperance people with abundant success. Mrs. Thornley gave a talk on the distribution of literature, after which a very successful report of fair work was given by the fair work superintendent, Mrs. Darch. The meeting closed by a prayer meeting.

ENDEAVOR SOCIAL.

A very successful Christian Endeavor social was held in the First Congregational Church last evening. The school rooms had been prettily decorated for the occasion. There was no formal programme, but the Y. M. C. A. orchestra dispensed sweet music during the evening. The time was pleasantly spent in games and social intercourse. The Junior Endeavorers were entertained to a supper from 6 to 8 o'clock by the ladies of the church. The attendance was fairly large, and the evening heartily enjoyed by all. DEATH OF MRS. MUNROE.

The death occurred last night of Mrs. Eleanor Munroe, wife of Mr. James Munroe, at the family residence, 559 Adelaide street. Deceased was 40 years of age, and a prominent worker in the Methodist Church. Her death was due to inflammation of the bowels, from which she had been ailing for some time. Mr. Munroe will have the sympathy of a large circle of friends in his sad bereavement. Mrs. Munroe had made many warm friends, and she will be greatly missed. Mr. Albert E. Munroe, of Toronto Dental College, is a son of deceased.

FALL ASSIZES

David Stewart and George Donaghy Plead Guilty to Criminal Charges.

Emerson's Indictment for Murder Being Considered by the Grand Jury $300 Damages for Butler.

The cases for hearing are gradually growing fewer. The last jury case is under way, and only four non-jury cases remain to be heard. When these are finished, the criminal business will be proceeded with.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON.

After lunch the assize court proceeded with the case of Butler vs. the Street Railway. Many witnesses were examined both for and against the company. Mr. George C. Gibbons, Q. C., represented the plaintiff, Walter H. Butler, and asked ex-Mayor Taylor what he knew about the post at the corner of Dundas and Adelaide streets. Mr. Taylor said he considered it "a veritable man-trap," and it should have been remedled long ago. Mr. Hellmuth, for the company, objected to such strong statements from witness, which could not in any case be admitted as evidence. Counsel on both sides addressed the jury, after which the judge reviewed the evidence and submitted a series of questions for the jury to consider and answer. They ware as follows.

1. Was the plaintiff's injury caused by defendant's negligence?
2. Or was the plaintiff's negligence the cause of it?

3. In either case, state fully what the negligence was. 4. If caused by the defendant's negligence, yet ought not the plaintiff, by the exercise of ordinary care, to have avoided the danger? 5. The assessment of damages. After over two hours' deliberation the jury gave the following answers to the questions: 1. Yes. 2. No answer. 3. In not laying their tracks according to plans, and knowing, too, that it was a dangerous place, and in not removing the danger. 4. We think the plaintiff used ordinary care to avoid the danger.

5. We, the jury, agree to give the plaintiff $300 damages.
Mr. Harper (of Gibbons, Q.C., & Co.) moved for judgment on the jury's finding. Mr. Hellmuth opposed, on the ground that the finding of the jury was open to much argument. On the judge's recommendation the matter stands for argument.

CRIMINALS PLEAD.

The feature of the afternoon's procedure was the unexpected termination of the prosecution against two of the four prisoners charged with criminal offenses. George Donaghy, of West London, was indicted on the ground of assaulting and wounding P. C. Thomas McDonald on Sunday, Sept. 4, while the latter was arresting him for disorderly conduct. A true bill had also been found against David Stewart, of Front street, on the charge of attempted criminal assault upon Miss Maude Thompson, while near Clark's bridge, as she was on her way home from church.

Donaghy, when the indictment was read to him, hung his head and pleaded guilty.

David Stewart is a married man with a large family, and his demeanor showed that he felt his shameful position keenly. When the indictment was read, "that of assaulting Maude Thompson, with intent to do grievous bodily harm." Stewart remained silent for a moment, and then in a feeble voice confessed his guilt. Mr. Louis F. Hevd. Q.C., who is conducting the crown cases, asked that the prisoner be remanded for sentence, and Stewart was led back to the cell with tearful eyes. These two prisoners will likely be sentenced on Friday afternoon or Saturday morning.

MOORE VS. STREET RAILWAY. William Moore, of West Nissouri, vs. the London Street Railway Company was taken up. This is an action brought to recover $1,000 for damages for injuries received by plaintiff as the result of alleged negligence on the part of defendants. On Sept. 18, 1897, he, in company with his daughter, came London with a load or oats. While driving over the street oar track, which at that time was being laid for the Pottersburg extension, his wagon swerved and threw himself and daughter out, when he sustained serious injury. He consulted a doctor at once. and appeared to be all right. He went to a friend's house in South London on the afternoon of the accident, and while there experienced severe pains. A clergyman told him his ribs were broken, and a second examination by the doctor revealed two broken ribs. He claims to be permanently injured, and alleged that the accident was due to the unfinished condition in which the street railway company left the

The case was in progress when the court rose at 6:30.

WEDNESDAY MORNING. Moore vs. Street Railway Company, the last jury case on the list, absorbed the attention of the court all morning, and after counsel had addressed the jury, the court adjourned for lunch.

EMERSON'S TRIAL.

The grand jury are considering the indictment against W. D. Emerson for murder, but their finding is not expected until tomorrow. Mr. John Duncan and Robert S. Tuttle, of Brantford (father of Jas. Tuttle, the murdered man), are here, but were unable to learn just when the trial would begin

Mr. Haselgrove's Rejoinder. To the Editor of The Advertiser: In last evening's Advertiser, I find that Mr. F. W. Daly has seen fit to reply to my letter of Sept. 24, in which I criticised his remarks on Hon. Jas. Howe's oration on temperance. Now, Mr. Daly seems to think that my letter was written in a vein of ironv. which is not so, as I respect every man's right to his own opinion on all subjects. Then he says that Mr. Howe, Dr. Grant and Mr. Goldwin Smith, and other men who write to the newspapers of our country, and take opposite views from his and the prohibition party, as to the best and wisest way in which to govern the liquor traffic, are all in the interest of the liquor traffic, and not on behalf of the drunkard. Now, in answer to that statement, let me say that these are all men who have the cause of temperance as much at heart

as any who class themselves as prohibitionists, and who can see the great impetus that the wisest prohibition measure would give to the drinking of ardent liquors with the restraint of the license law taken away. That is the reason these men write as they do, and advise the people to vote "No." Surely Mr. Daly is broad-minded enough to acknowledge this.

Then, in reference to my remark on the circular, "Prohibition in Kansas," Mr. Daly says I am unfair. Now, let my reader procure one of those oir-culars, and if he does not find the remark I made printed therein then I am kuite willing to admit being unfair, but not otherwise. Now, Mr. Daly draws on his own imagination very largely when he pictures his barroom scene, and such a reference to Christ is certainly out of place. Now, in reference to the miracle of Cana, let me inform Mr. Daly that I do not have to be informed by him that eminent scholars agree that there were two kinds of wine in use in our Saviour's time, as there is now, but I also know that if some doctor should recommend me to buy a bottle of wine to help my run-down system that I would be very careful not to let the dealer push off on me the unfermented wine. But I claim that the Scripture is not as silent on the matter as Mr. Daly would have us believe, for when our Saviour did anything he certainly did it right. Now, if you will read the whole of the miracle of Cana you will find that one of the guests asked why the best wine was kept until the last.

Now, fellow-electors, in conclusion. I have always been of the opinion that this cause of temperance should never have been mixed up with religion, and am still of the same opinion. I myself am a strong advocate of temperance, and would register myself for any law that could be shown to advance the cause; but I will not allow any body of people to take away my freedom, my liberty of thought or action, in any matter pertaining to my personalitynot if my vote and influence can pre-vent it. I am also fair-minded enough to recognize my duty to my fellowcitizen and to even forego a portion of my liberty if by so doing I can help a weak brother in the cause of temperance; but under the present restrictions placed upon the traffic we have the satisfaction of seeing the cause of temperance advancing with rapid strides, and under such circumstances It would be foolish for us to discard the present system for one of which we know nothing about. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your valuable space, I remain, respectfully yours,

F. HASELGROVE. London, Sept. 28, 1898.

Paris, Sept. 28 .- M. Brisson Mterally wrung consent from the cabinet for the revision after a remarkable display of eloquence and personal influence and the stormlest scenes. His strongest opponent was M. Sarrien, the minister of justice, who expressed a desire to resign, and warned the other ministers that they were assuming a terrible responsibility. MM. Viger and Marujouis, respectively, minister of agriculture and minister of commerce, supported M. Sarrien. M. Brisson fell into a violent passion, and declared tearfully that the ministers ought to credit him with understanding all the difficulties and the best way of meeting them. Should they now abandon him by refusing a revision. It would be to face dishonor. As a final argument, he pointed out that it would be an extremely grave matter to force a cabinet crisis the chamber was not in session. The dissenting ministers then reluctantly

EXTINCT FAMILIES

Tendency of British Aristocracy To Die Out,

Or End in Heiresses-Very Few Can Be Traced Back to the Conquest.

One of the fashions of modern times, which at first sight it seems difficult to account for, is that particular weakness which causes an endless number of people to change their surnames. But a little thought will give the clew to the rapidly increasing army who go through the world labeled in a form differing from the original advertisement of their known male ancestors. It is a strange, but, nevertheless, a true fact (and it is a fact which might be worth investigation by those who are at the present time engaged in the study of the reasons and causes of the determination of sex), that the undoubted tendency of aristocratic families is to become extinct or to end in heiresses. The usual supposition is that most families go up and down in a kind of switchback see-saw, and that the disappearance of a family simply means that it has sunk in the social scale beyond ready recognition. It cannot be denied that such cases have occurred, but they are not the rule; they are rare exceptions. The usual, the almost universal, event is that a family rises, intermarries with patrician blood, and in a few generations ends in an heiress or becomes extinct.

There is no legitimate male descendant of any king of England who sat on the throne before the reign of George I. Of the 25 barons who set their hands to Magna Charta, not a single male descendant remains. There is not a single English barony by writ now held by a male of the family in which it was originally created. There are only about 300 noble or gentle families now holding the same land in male succession which their male ancestors held even so recently as the reign of King Henry VII. There are many causes which have operated to this end, but the chief cause is this lamentable tendency of well-born families to terminate in the persons of females. When a family has been associated with certain lands for several centuries, and where the name and lands have been inseparably joined and interwoven for so long, where the same blood (even though in or through a female) still remains, it is but natural enough that there should be a desire to still keep the estate and the surname together. And in these cases, as there has been no sale of the lands to an alien race, from time immemorial from this cause there have been these changes of surname, There is scarcely an English pedigree without

It is doubtful if there are 50 authentic male pedigrees today in England which can be taken back to the Conquest. Thus the necessity of changing one's name argued a connection with, and descent from, an ancient family, ergo, it was an aristocratic thing to change one's name, or take & double one. After that, of course, came the deluge of names. At a much later date came the class who, with no inherited obligation to do so, were glad enough to perpetuate, by a change of surname, or by the adoption of a double surname, the fact of their descent in the female line from an ancient house. At a still later date, probably within the last 50 years, has arisen yet another class, a typical product of the days we live in, who, for mere purposes of distinction-one might say from the necessity of distinction-have been glad to seize any plausible excuse to either make a complete change, or more often to hyphen on some other name, in the hope that the combination will be more or less distinctive.—Genealogical Magazine.

During this period he had traveled 'ar and much. He had drank coffee in Arab tents, and on their neet steeds had traversed the arid plains of Sahara, an Englishman, alone with the wandering descendants of Ishmael; he had smoked the chibook in Persian caravanseral; he had lazily dreamed the hours away on the verdant banks of the Nile; he had climber Elbury, and had stood on the shores of the White Sea, and under the gloomy pines of Scandinavia. Restlessly, he had wandered from place to place, until, finally, crossing the great European plain, he had arrived at Constantinople.

Here, meditating on the shores of the Bosphorus, watching the sails of a British merchantman homeward bound, his thoughts, too, had drifted in that direction, and a craving seized him for England; his soul grew weary of this

"Why should I not go? Why have I tarried so long?" he exclaimed, as one suddenly awakening. "Fifteen months! What may not have happened in that time? Surely I have paid due honor to the dead.'

He arose, bent his eyes in mute farewell upon the waters of the Euxine, and before dawn was traveling west-

He planned to stop a brief while at Rome, Vienna, Paris, through craving for London. But he desired to break his coming back to life, as it were, to his friends. It was indeed like a re-surrection; to them fr fifteen months he had been as one buried. At either of these cities he surely should meet some people he knew who would send the intelligence to England.

At Rome, however, he found the season nearly over. Most of the visitors had departed, and he encountered no one he knew; so he bade his valet (repare for their departure on the mor-

Restless now from another cause, feeling time most weary, the evening pre-viously Gerard, mounting his horse, rode to the Colosseum—that mighty ruin, that monument of the past full of memories, that in memoriam of man's grandeur of idea, of his vices, and his igotry, was ever a favorite haunt Gerard, and that night he had a considerable party having arrai ed to visit it, it was to be illum-

A strange feeling was on him that evening, rendering the human voice inharmonious and jarring to the nerves; therefore he drew slightly back into the shade, and leaning against a large fragment of ruin with folded arms, waited the starting into life as it were of the vast amphitheater.

A hushed silence fell on all, making the scene and the hour yet more impressive. Then the light sprang up, stupendous arena was as though day had dawned. A low, soft cry of admiration very near him caused the earl to turn, stepping a pace forward. A lady was seated on a fallen column at the other side of the ruin. His sudden movement caused her to raise her head. The light fell on her features and his. She rose quickly, then, involuntarily, two hands went forth to meet, two voices ejaculated, simultaneously: "Lord Lethrington!"

"Lady Westbrook!" Neither said more at the moment, but in such cases eyes are more eloquent than words; and Gerard's eager, unquestioning gaze was answered by a tremulous lip, tremulous with a joyous smile that could not wholly be controlled, a blushing cheek, and drooped silk-

Had I twenty I should perpetrate the rudeness of neglecting them all, rather than not accept your invitation."
"Thanks, my lord," responded Lucille, smiling, "I am glad to perceive the anchorite has not torgotten how to "Truth frequently appears flattery to those who are too generous to be egotistical," he remarked, adding fervently, "How must I thank heaven for this fortunate meeting. Tomorrow I should have quitted Rome for England, in search of that upon which, in my ig norance, I turned my back, "And that, my lord?"

He bowed his head low to whisper his reply, for they were now close to the rest of the party:
"Yourself, Lady Westbrook."

His eyes strove greedily to read her face—to learn there that upon which now all his hopes depended. Was she offended? He could not tell, for quickly averting her head, and quitting his side, she hastened to announce his presence to Lord Santyre.

Gerard did not leave Rome the next morning, as the reader may The welcome of the marquis and Lord Cecil had been one of the warmest description, especially gratifying to the earl at such a period. Society had fin-ally decided that he had really loved his cousin; only Lucille guessed the truth, with that subtle, indescribable power, which renders one nature capable of reading another's, as though it were its own.

Lord Santyre, therefore, as he noted the young man's grave-grown countenance, its older, sadder expression, felt keen, compassionating sympathy, and from a Samaritan idea, to force the earl out of his self-imposed solitude, invited him first to dinner, then to join his stars of the south; conversing at times with Lucille, as he leaned towards the carriage which contained her; or gazing at her as she reclined against the cushions, lost in a dreamy reverie while others talked.

Was it actually true? or had he fallen to sleep in the Colosseum, and was dreaming it all? Could it be that he sat once more at Lord Santyre's table, opposite Lucille, as in those days gone by? No, not quite the same; there was a difference—a sweet, intoxicating difference. Lady Westbrook's eyes, on occasions, fell before his now; not in anger, for a smile fluttered about her lipe, while the hues of the rose bloom-

my lord, nothing could give me greater pleasure. Any society is preferable to one's own-then how infinitely more so must be that which you offer?" His eyes instinctively sought Lucille, but he was not gratified by a return glance. Her eyes were bent on her white, slender fingers, as they wandered softly over the keys of the piano, and she did not raise them. "I must give you warning, though," proceeded the marquis, "let you may be in haste to reach London, that we intend to do so in the most desultory fashion; stopping at Como, Mentone, Marseilles and Paris. There, you have the programme of our route. "So delightful a one, my lord, that, if anything could enhance the pleasure of traveling with your party, that would do it," smiled Gerard. "I am in no hurry, now, to reach London-not in the least."

Again his eyes strayed to the grace-ful figure at the piano. The fair head was still drooped; but it was slightly averted. It encouraged him, and when he crossed to take his leave, retaining her hand a space longer, perhaps, than etiquette allowed, he said:

Lady Westbrook, may I ask if you second Lord Santyre's invitation? Will my presence in any way incommode

There was just a moment's pause; then she looked at him with a shy, bright expression in her eyes, and answered, moving the while from him: "I was unaware, my lord, that you were not only a flatterer, but also would be flattered—a would-be giver and a recipient. Fie, my lord, fie!"

The soft, playful rebuke filled the earl's soul with joy. He walked back to the once marble palace, where now he had his rooms-on air

Tea Parties. A tea party is always an interesting event in a well-regulated household, whether the home be that of people rich and grand or classed among the lowly. It is also a very enjoyable mode of entertaining one's friends if properly arranged. Those who attend meet for social intercourse, and to gather around the festive board. The first thing to be considered and sought for, therefore, is congeniality among the chosen guests. There is a genuine hospitality and cordiality in these parties not found in some more pretentious forms of enterand hear the echo of their laughter.

In no humor for society, especially taining. The good old-fashioned aftera species of awe and desire for quiet aside. On such ocasions, in happy days meditation, moved away among the gone by, table decorations were not profuse and costly as at present. A clean spread and napkins, with perhaps a few home-grown flowers, and such china and cutlery as the family could afford, were all that was expected. The food, too, was homemade, generous and substantial. The ladies assembled at a reasonably early hour, well knowing that all things were in readiness. Doubtless they wore their "best bibs and tuckers," and the nicest silk and lace their wardrobes contained. They brought light work, too, that their hands might not be idle, dainty knitting or fine sewing; for in all well-ordered homes "visiting-work" was a specialty.

The house of the hostess must be spotless and in perfect order; she must likewise array in her Sunday best. Was not this a very special and important occasion, when friends and neighbors were made happy, and her debt to society paid?

The men came at "early candlelight," and usually spent the evening, to accompany the ladies home. These occasions were way-marks in the path of the year, and long treasured in memory. Recipes were kindly exchanged, as were patterns of knitting, and the like.

Pleasant conversation flowed merrily and ceaselessly, making an enjoyable occasion for entertainers and guests. These tea parties were genuine promoters of that honest sociability so essential in elevating village and

Many people in the present days refrain from inviting friends because they are not able to indulge in certain silly fads and notions called for by the demands of fashion. This is mistaken pride, and a great drawback to social intercourse. A return to the old-time tea parties, which began early and closed early, is something to be greatly desired in our social life. And where is the woman of strong good sense in country or town to lead the way and set the worthy fashion?

The Warning of a Limp.

There are two extremes, into one or the other of which many mothers fall -that of over-solicitude for their children, a fussiness and a tendency to coddle them and to run with them to the doctor with every ache or pain; and that of careless inattention to a child's complaint of feeling poorly or to injuries received in rough play.

In the first case the child is in danger of developing into an irritable, selfish valetudinarian, while the mother, by her worry, destroys her happiness of what ought to be the sweetest part of a woman's life, and is in danger of also driving herself into a condition of nervous invalidism.

On the other hand, a mother who habitually dismisses without a second thought every complaint by her child of discomfort or pain, or who thinks it will make her boy more manly if she schools herself not to betray sympathy for him in his physical troubles, runs the serious risk of ignoring some incipent ill which, if taken in time, may be arrested, but if neglected may develop into a lifelong affliction.

Of these two extremes the former is attended with by far the more serious danger to the child, but the latter is not without its perils. There is one symptom, especially, that should never be passed over lightly in a child, and that is a limp-especially one that is intermittent. It may be nothing more serious than a slight sprain or a "stone-bruise," or perhaps mere footsoreness from unwonted tramps over rough roads. It may be due to a little muscular soreness or rheumatism, or to a passing stiffness in a joint resulting from overexercise; but-and this is where its seriousness lies-it may be the earliest symptom of hip disease.

This painful and crippling disease often, indeed usually, begins with an apparently insignificant limp, which comes and goes for perhaps several months before any other symptom of the malady shows itself. It is often attributed by the parents, and sometimes by the physician, to one or other of the above-mentioned causes or to a simple habit, and as it is usually unaccompanied by pain it is neglected until finally other severe symptoms show, perhaps too late for cure, what the real trouble is.

A limp that comes and goes repeatedly, especially when the child cannot explain why he walks lame, is a danger-signal that even the strongest advocate of the "toughening" system ought to heed .- Youth's Companion.

Use of Potatoes.

Old potatoes should never be pared before cooking. The most nutritious portion of the potato lies immediately under the skin, and this is generally all pared away. A small slice should first be cut from each end; this lets the water out, and the potatoes are then put into cold water and are allowed to heat slowly. They should boil as slowly as possible until done. There are a variety of ways of warming over cold potatoes, and nearly all good and Never throw away a economical. cold potato, but cut it in thin slices and lay it in a bowl with a few slices of orions, a little pepper, salt and vine-gar, a tablespoonful of oil, and you have a relishing salad for lunch. The best way to cook sweet potatoes is to chip off a piece of each end and roast in the oven. They should never be boiled; they are very nice stewed. If any are left over they make a nice breakfast dish if sliced lengthwise and fried on the griddle.

or to introduce a lunch or supper: Stew a teacupful of tomatoes, season with a slice of green sweet pepper, slice of olive and onion and bit of chopped parsley; cook to the consistency preferred, add two or three mushrooms and salt and butter to taste. Lay the toast on an individual platter, put the poached egg on the toast, pour the tomato sauce over them and serve at

If high sea-soning is liked, a whole pepper may be added, with one or two seeds, the sauce cooked down, strained, and then warmed up with condiments to taste.

PRINCIPAL GRANT DEFENDED.

Rev. Mr. Patterson, of Embro, Vindicates His Friend. Embro, Sept. 27.—At a plebiscite meeting in Embro, at which attacks were made on Principal Grant, an invitation was given to any opposing speaker. Rev. Mr. Patterson rose in answer to such challenge. In begin-ning he congratulated the previous speakers on their clear, strong presentation of the case, the large measure of Christian charity that characterized their addresses and their powerful appeals. He said he had no brief to defend Principal Grant; but so long as God preserved to him reason and strength he hoped he would always be ready to stand up for truth and jus-tice, for the man who is misrepresented; and Principal Grant was not only misrepresented but grossly maligned by many of the temperance people. It is needless to say, he remarked, that Principal Grant has been a lifelong advocate of temperance principles, man who has set his face as a flint against everything that was wrong and that would injure a brother, who has labored with untiring earnestness for the uplifting of men. As Principal of Queen's University he comes in close touch with and exerts a powerful influence over, a great many men. He made free to say that there is no similar institution on this continent or anywhere, so far as he knew, in connection with which there is a stronger or a healthier temperance sentiment. Our temperance people made a tremendous mistake when they repudiated Principal Grant just cause in every particular he has not been able to see eye to eye with them. Surely he has a right to his convictions and has the privilege of expressing them without having things read his speech that he never cherished in his heart. Isn't it just possible that Principal Grant is right? We know and we all believe that there can be progress; but in this only as the Kingdom advances, the Kingdom which in its progress will crush all evil, everything that is opposed to the highest interests of man. The laws of our land should be a reflection, an accurate reflection, of the Christian conscience. Now if there is not a temperance sentiment or a Christian sentiment sufficiently strong to secure this legal enactment and to support it when it is secured, we all believe that untold evils would result from the attempt to enforce the law just as Principal Grant has predicted, and just as many of us know from past experience in connection with the attempt to enforce the Scott Act. It is urged that the one thing before us is whether we favor the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors, and it is con-tended that if a majority of people vote yea the Government will do all the rest. There is no government on the face of the earth that could enforce such a law unless they were sustained by public sentiment, and it is well for us to recognize that if the legal enactment is to be secured and the government to be able to enforce it, we must do vastly better than was done in the Ontario plebiscite. You know, that at that time only two of Ridgetown, Oct. 5-7. every five votes were polled, and wh a large majority of the votes polled were in favor of prohibition yet there was a considerable percentage opposed Unless throughout this Dominion there will be a better showing, in my judgment it will be impossible for the ernment to effectively enforce the law. 'Why," exclaimed the speaker, "do I make this statement? Just because would have enthusiasm aroused and better results secured. It is a word of warning; this is not a lacking of sympathy, but simply intended to lead to more vigorous effort. What we want is not only quantity but quality in the vote; and if that is not secured it may in the not very distant future be recognized by this Dominion that there was a prophet in our midst and the people turned a deaf ear to him, and that they must endure the bitter consequence of their folly. Principal Grant recognizes as keenly as any living man the evils, the enormous evils in connection with the traffic. These grieve him to the heart, and he has labored continuously to minimize these evils and to secure ultimate freedom from the traffic. He recognizes that Canada occupies today an enviable position among the nations, being far in advance of any other nation in temperance sentiment. He recognizes that this has come slowly, and yet as the years have passed with increasing rapidity, because of the advancement of the kingdom of truth, increase of knowledge, educative influences; and he believes that instead of trying an experiment which in his judgment would result disastrously, it is far better to adhere to well-tried methods and thus more speedily and more effectively terminate the evil. Because he takes that view of the case must he or ought he necessarily to be classed those who are in favor of the traffic? We are told that his letters are found in all of the barrooms and that he is claimed by the traffic. I am not sure that this necessarily reflects upon Principal Grant. Our blessed Lord was claimed by people who were removed from him by an infinite distance; and there were people who were supposedly good religious people, leaders of men, who were only too willing that he should be handed over to them. Both were wrong. He only was right. It possibly would be a good thing for more of us who have named His name if we had to endure just a little persecution for the sake of our convictions.

CLOSING THE CAMPAIGN

Vigorous Addresses in Favor of Prohibition

By Rev. Messrs. J. W. Graham and C. A. Eaton, of Toronto. at Last Night's Mass Meeting.

Vigorous, determined addresses were delivered at the prohibition mass meeting in the city hall last evening. An attentive audien e comfortably filled the hall, and appluded heartily and frequently. The speakers were Toronto clergymen, Rev. J. W. Graham and Rev. C. A. Eaton.

The first introduced by Chairman

Ald. Winnett was Rev. Mr. Graham, a talented young man, and a former London citizen. Fresh from his work in connection with a Methodist mission in the slums of the Queen City, he spoke of the horrors of drunkenness with intense earnestness. Earnestness, indeed, was the characteristic feature of Mr. Graham's address. He dealt not much in figures nor in argument. His words glowed with a fierce indignation against the liquor traffic. He differed from the temperance speakers who have been long be fore the public chiefly in that he laid most stress on the phases of the question that to them have become almost trite. They have dwelt so long and so often on the horrors of drunkenness in its ultimate results that they fancy the public must have growing weary of hearing the subject discussed from that standpoint. But Mr. Graham, filled with the fervid zeal of the young preacher, and having so lately, through his work, come in contact with the sin and suffering Rev. I. M. Moyer, of the Evangelical Church. The bride was gowned in a pretty costume of blue brilliantine. of a large city, felt that if he could only make others see as he had seen there would be no need for argument. He depicted degraded, brutalized men Miss Edith Durst, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. She carried a bou-quet of pink roses. Mr. John Cumand heartless women, joyless, hopeless youth and debauched girlhood; naked, starving children, and homes wrecked by poverty and vice. All these he laid at the door of the liquor traffic, and then declared, with intense conviction: mony the company partook of a dainty luncheon. In addition to the local guests there were present Miss Emma Aldred, of Glencoe, and Mr. Robert Diprose, father of the groom, Toronto. Many handsome and useful presents "We, the people of Canada, simply want to realize what the liquor traffic is, and that moment we will arise and drive the scourge from our land." were received by the bride. Mr. and He had nothing but contempt for Mrs. Diprose will leave on the 7:30 train this evening for Toronto and the man who could be indifferent to the most important question confronting every Canadian citizen to-Niagara Falls. They will return here on Friday and leave in the evening of day. He characterized Goldwin Smith's claim that drink was not a that day for London, where they will cause of poverty and crime as preposterous; and, taking up the Mosaic commandments one by one, he sought to prove that the liquor traffic was a common cause of the violation of every one of them. The royal commission, he declared, was a farce. He was unalterably opposed to compensation of the liquor dealers. The British House of Commons had declared against it; supreme court of the United States had declared against it. There had been no thought of compensation for the liquor dealer whose licenses were taken away ten years ago, and he insisted there should be none now. Mr. Graham closed with an impasoned appeal to the people to do their duty next Thursday.

REV. C. A. EATON. Rev. C. A. Eaton, pastor of the Bloor Street Baptist Church, Toronto, followed with an eloquent address. The plebiscite, he said, was the momentous opportunity Canada had been afforded since confederation. Admitting that defeat for the prohibitionists was possible in the present campaign, the battle would go on until finished. Right would triumph in the end, he said, and he compared the struggle in the United States against slavery with the fight in Canada to suppress the liquor traffic. The speaker urged that every vote be polled on Thursday—every vote, whether it be for or against—so that the judgment of the people would be properly recorded. The question should not be considered hysterically, but coolly and conscientiously. Prombition was not contrary to Christianity. Paul's advice to Timothy to "take a little wine for his stomach's sake" was to use it as a medicine, and the speaker was quite content to put it as such. It was argued that prohibition was an enemy to good government. A bicycle ordinance which prevented a man from riding on the sidewalk for which he had helped to pay was the same restriction of personal liberty. Mr. Eaton quoted statistics to show that the Scott act was not a failure, and from the British Medical Association's report as to the average longevity. With the normal death rate at 1,000. the figures given showed: Ministers, 500; farmers, 600 and men in the liquor business 2.000. The former was the lowest and the latter the highest on

The speaker read from some antiprohibition literature the statement that to put prohibition into effect in London would throw 700 men out of employment. The capital invested in a brewery in which, say 12 men were employed, would be diverted to productive channels, in all probability employing 100 men. "Working men," he said, "who ever else can afford to drink, you can not.' "Prohibition and perjury," the opposition said. There would no doubt be a disregard of the law, said the speaker, for the liquor organization was the most law-defying in the world. He quoted a resolution passed at the recent annual meeting of Ontario hotelmen in this city not to take part in public meetings during the campaign because public discussion would assist the prohibitionists. After areference to Bishop Sullivan's famous letter, Mr. Eaton dealt humorously with what he considered the quite inadequate remedies suggested by the bishop. A quotation from the Kansas City Journal, pointing out that Can-ada's decision might be a turning point in the course of social legislation through the States was read.

The objection on the ground of personal liberty was a grave one, said Mr. Eaton; but if it was right to arrest a man if he got drunk, was it wrong to say he should not get half drunk? In answer to the argument that prohibition would not work, Mr. Eaton held up Maine, Iowa and Kansas, with their increased prosperity and crime diminished by half in consequence of prohibition. About the revenue argument, the speaker said the people should be willing to pay the $7,000,000 to the government, and keep the $33,000,000 instead of handing it over to the liquor dealers. He closed by urging them not to think too much of the revenue, but to put man-

The Request of Mosa Acceded To-Presbyterial Certificates Granted-The Call to Rev. W. J. Clark.

An adjourned meeting was held in the lecture room of the First Church, London, at 10:30 Tuesday, Rev. T. Wilson, of King street, London, moderator, presiding. The request of Mosa congregation for the appointment of an interim moderator, in absence of the minister, was granted, Rev. Mr. Ross, of Glencos, being appointed. The clerk was asked to correspond with the minister. A Presbyterial certificate was granted to Rev. H. Brown, on his request. A Presbyterial certificate was also granted to Rev. Mr. Dewar, late of Ailsa Craig, who wished to unite with Denver Presbytery.

The call to Rev. W. J. Clark, from Erskine Church, Toronto, came up. A. communication was read from the clerk of the Presbytery of Toronto, stating that under the circumstances of the case, the representatives from Toronto would not appear. Messrs. Greenlees and Henderson spoke on behalf of the First Church, declaring that the congregation was unanimous in wishing to retain Mr. Clark's services.

It was moved that the presbytery having heard the parties in the case express satisfaction with Mr. Clark's decision. Carried.

A communication from Rev. Mr. Anderson, of Aylmer and Springfield, was read, resigning his pastorate. The resignation was laid on the table, and the clerk instructed to correspond with Rev. Mr. Anderson, and if there was reason for the matter being soon dealt with, that he cite the parties concerned and call a special meeting to deal with the matter. Leave was asked by Rev. Mr. Lawrence to moderate in a call to Ailsa Craig and Carlisle. The request was laid on the table, and the moderator of presbytery was associated with Mr. Lawrence to consult as to rearrangement of services. If successful in the conference the moderator be authorized to proceed in moderation in a call. Rev. Mr. Henderson reported for the home mission committee, in regard to North Ekfrid, that Mr. F. A. Robinson, student, who has been supplying for the summer, be continued as supply to the end of the year, and that Mr. Munro, late of Kintore, be appointed for the second half of the term.

The recommendation of the committee was adopted.

A request of Maitland Presbytery to utilize the circular issued by the Presbytery of London, re temporanties, was granted.

Rev. Mr. Johnston moved, in con-nection with the committee to prepare for Rev. Dr. Proudfoot's jubilee, that the next regular meeting of presbytery be held in the First Church, and that a public meeting be held in the evening, and arrangements therefor be left in the hands of the committee. The committee on the examination of students recommended that Mr. Robinson be retained under the care of this presbytery. Rev. Mr. Henderson read the report of the committee on systematic bene-
