Will Magistrate Denison Keep His Promise?

Time and again during the investigation of the London election conspiracy charges, counsel for the defense raised the point of a Toronto court's jurisdiction in the investigating of a London case, and also the investigating of elections which took place in West Elgin, Brockville, South Ontario, North Hastings, West Huron and elsewhere.

And time and again Magistrate Denison has retorted that he was there to get at the truth, and was not going to be hampered by legal quibbles or technicalities.

This has been his invariable reply to the Liberal lawyers who have found legal precedent and procedure thrown to the

The Liberals were forced to accept the magistrate's declaration, and they took him at his word, when he said one day that if necessary he would probe all the elections held in Canada even as far back as 1800, or the flood, he said, in order to wipe out electoral corruption.

He declared that he cared not whom the investigation helped or hurt-he was there to get at the truth.

Yesterday he astounded the Liberal counsel by himself raising a point of law over which he has ridden rough-shod for five weeks-that of jurisdiction.

When asked to go into electoral corruption on the Conservative side, his worship declared that the matter of jurisdiction is a se. ious one. In the examination of Hamilton Ramsay, a couple of weeks since, Mr. Wilkie, one of the counsel for the defense, raised an objection, and stated that the law had supplied certain rules of procedure, and he submitted that the court should be guided by

"Those rules were made for people who haven't any ability to think for themselves," replied his worship, "and they had better stick to them."

Magistrate Denison now says that he must be governed by the rules of law

W. B. Corsets Steadily Increasing in Popularity

The present enormous demand for W. B. Corsets has been won solely on the merits of the goods. To the best of our knowledge there are no better Corsets for the money than the W. B. Corsets. Indeed, they have become so popular-and the popularity is steadily increasing-with a large section of our particular clientele that we experience considerable difficulty in maintaining a full assortment of these high-grade Corsets.

The W. B. Makers have large plants both in America and Europe.

Expert designers are continually flitting to and fro among the great fashion centers of the world studying the new style in-

And the knowledge they gain is embodied in the new models of W. B. Corsets which appear directly Dame Fashion approves of a new style in gowns.

To have W. B. Models always up to the present fashion moment is the watchword of the W. B. makers—and they succeeded admirably well. If you want a beautifully designed, stylish, excellently made Corset to show off the stylish lines of the new gown ask one of our expert corsetieres to fit you with a

W. B. Model. Just a suggestion or two:

LONDON, SATURDAY, NOV. 3. WILL THE INVESTIGATION BE WIDE-OPEN?

The Attorney-General will be asked to turn the searchlight upon Conservative campaign methods in London, West Elgin, Brockville and South

The present proceedings in Toronto are irregular, but having placed the machinery of his department at th disposal of a coterie of politicians in this city, he cannot consistently refuse to give others the same privilege.

The process of the courts has been abused to serve the purpose of one right, but if Liberals choose to take advantage of the maladministration of justice, the responsibility belongs entirely to the Attorney-General.

Liberals confess that wrongs have been committed in the name of the Liberal party, and they are determined as a party that corrupt practices shall be stamped out. When the Conservative party is in an equally chastened mood, there will be more hope of purifying the political atmosphere.

The Liberals have a right to expect party in fighting evils which are common to both parties, and which they must assail unitedly if there is to be a higher standard of public morality. But Liberals, in the present situation, find themselves confronted by a mass of hypocrisy and pharisaism. In this city Mr. Hyman has been the honest he first ran for Parliament in 1887. He was kept out of Parliament for over a disgrace? ten years by fraud and corruption. Yet Liberals are told that they are the only wrongdoers, and that their opponents are as white as the driven snow. sult added to injury.

Magistrate Denison has declared that the rules of law were made for men who could not think for themselves. Act ing on this assumption, he has let the present prosecution have its own way, and evidences of Conservative wrongdoing have been studiously concealed. Will the magistrate allow the same latitude to the Liberal party? Will, he waive technicalities, and throw the investigation wide open if the Attorney-General gives him a free hand? The Attorney-General and Magistrate Denison are on trial.

DR. WELDON'S REVELATION. The confession of Dr. Weldon, the Conservative candidate, who was so badly beaten by Hon, W. S. Fielding, in the Queen's-Shelburne Dominion byelection, is causing more than local in-the riding as one of the leaders of the den. A second crop of plums has been Conservative party in the Maritime crop of strawberries, which attained the Provinces, and Mr. Borden himself size of a walnut, ripened in the open personally vouched for his high standing. He now declares that at the last Dominion general election he was waited upon by a number of the leading Conservatives of the city of Halifax, including the late John F. Stairs, and pressed to accept nomination for a Nova Scotia constituency. His reply was, he says, that he would not accept unless they consented to run a of 5,000,000 copies would be known to clean election. To this proposition the everybody, yet the name of Mr. Nat leading Conservatives declined to Gould is probably not at all familiar agree, and though feeling confident he to the mass of the ordinary novel readcould win, he refused the nomination.

Dr. Weldon has not yet mentioned the name of any of his tempters, except one who is dead, and cannot be brought to book, but taking it for face to face with the fact that the Conservative leaders were more anxious to have a free hand in corrupting the electorate than in securing the candidature of a man whom they now

LADIES IN WAITING HAVE NO EASY TASK

ATTENDING UPON ROYALTY HAS ITS DRAWBACKS.

There are two qualifications without which no woman need hope to become a lady in waiting, writes one who herself attended upon royalty. The first is the power to make herself agreeable at all times, both to her employer and to the royal household. The second qualification, the possession of strong legs, may appear an easy matter at first sight, but, according to this confession in the Ladies' Realm, when carried into practice it is very trying. The woman who has been accustomed to seat herself whenever she feels tired of standing is apt to become nervous and strained when she knows that she may not, except under the plea of illness, seat herself for at least a couple of hours to come. When royalty braces her muscles subjects must not dream of relaxing theirs.

Some women can stand; there are others who cannot. Among the former is Queen Alexandra. At the giving away of war medals two years ago she was observed and timed by an onlooker Without showing the faintest signs of fatigue she stood, with practically no change of position, for two hours and twenty-five minutes. Though Her Majesty now sits during a portion of the time a court is being held the ladies in waiting remain standing, and this function lasts at least two hours. The writer once asked a lady of the bedchamber who was never robust how she had managed the standing during the late queen's drawing rooms. Queen Victoria in her latter years always used a small chair, which supported her, yet was practically invisible to those who passed before her. The lady ing with chenille spot. Worth of the bedchamber's reply was: "Old and roomy slippers. I always kept an old pair, two sizes too large, which did duty year after year, and were useless for anything else."

While on duty the lady in waiting has to be always with her mistress, unless the latter desires to be alone, which is very rare. Royalties are apt to feel dull when left to the monotony ious to get in touch with the public. of their own thoughts and get accustomed to constant companionship.

She must not leave the precincts of the palace, as at any moment she may be summoned. Yet that summons may not come for many hours-nay, many days, if the court happens to be sojourning in the country.

There is no possibility of mapping out her day and settling to her own occupations, and no matter what the news may be from home, no matter how alarming or saddening, she must never appear ruffled or unhappy in the royal presence. It is treason to disturb the equanimity of queen or princess. There are a variety of duties which fall to the lot of the lady in waiting. There are many letters to be answered, sometimes of a begging character, or sometimes accepting or rejecting appeals to open hospital wards, lay foundation stones, to open bazars and charity fetes. Sometimes the royal lady desires to offer a visit to one of her subjects, or to accept their invitation to honor them with her presence. In such cases the intended hostess, stating any little desires for her comfort and happiness which her royal highness is known to ossess, the names of certain friends whom she desires to meet, which are

Queen Victoria often disliked fires in her bedroom and in warm weather had blocks of ice placed in her apartments. All such little personal fancies must be stated by the lady in waiting to the hostess, that life may, for the time being, be made as agreeable as possible to so honored a guest. Sometimes the lady in waiting has to do some shopping of too deficate a nature to be intrusted to one of lesser standing; sometimes there are private charities to be inquired into. Then there is frequently the dressing of the stall which her highness has signified her intention to sell at, and the remaining on after the royal patroness has left, to see that all the goods are disposed of and the profits safely must also finish any articles of needlework which her mistress has begun and tired of. She must be able to play, if not sing, and be competent to touch up any peinting or drawing, possibly half execute both, abandoned by her em-

Many royal ladies are inveterate and unwearying sightseers. Some are con firmed burners of the midnight oil. They keep their attendants with them till the early hours of the morning, either playing cards, listening to music, or plying the needle, but no fatigue must be exhibited. Dress forms an important part in the life of the lady in waiting. She must be provided against all emergencies Mourning she must always have ready to don at any moment. She requires couple of court trains, which can be worn over different dresses. Some ladies in waiting, like their private sisters, borrow a court train from friend. The writer once possessed court train that passed through eight different hands in two years; it attended nearly every drawing-room during that period.

The pay is small, but with a strict regard to economy it covers personal expenses. It is a servile position, morally considered, Still, after the glamor and gloss of court life has worn off the groan of slavery is succeeded by a hugging of the chains.

There is a morbid taste in the whole matter—a glamor which enthrans at first, satiates later, but which in time

The Greatest Religious Romance Since Ben-Hur

THE plot of Elizabeth Miller's new story is dazzling in its variety, compelling in the sweep of its forward movement, wide and swift as a majestic river. The chariot race in Ben-Hur alone may stand beside the magnificent scene in which the heroine distracts the raging mob of Alexandrians and saves from death her lover and the Nazar-

Miss Miller writes of nature and the antient works of man with a sheer authority of utterance whose power imposes itself upon the reader to a wonderful degree. Steeped in religious emotion, dramatic from first word to last, with humor and color, movement and passion, charm of style and the brevity of genius, Saul of Tarsus answers the tests of the great in fiction.

SAUL OF TARSUS

A Faithful Story of the Early Disciples of Christ

The same splendid imagination which reconstructed the Age of the Pharaohs and revived the glory of Egypt in THE YOKE here plays with lambent flame about the great Roman world in the days succeeding the Crucifixion. The scenes are laid amid the pulsing, throbbing, varicolored life of Jerusalem, Alexandria, Rome and Damascus.

The Apostle Paul, the Martyr Steplen, Herod, Agrippa and the Emperors Tiberius and Caligula are among the mighty figures that move through the pages. Wonderful descriptions, heartstirring incidents, deep emotion, high thought and a love story of the noblest type mark this the most remarkable religious romance since Ben-Hur.

"THE BEST DETECTIVE STORY

IN A MONTH OF SUN-DAYS," SAYS EDNA WALLACE HOPPER.

"I have read any number of books that I thought were good, but 'Blindfolded' is the first one that was 'too good.' I sat down with a copy to read a few chapters before lunching with some friends. Before I had read a dozen pages I had forgotten friends, luncheon and everything else, and I did not put the book down until I had read it through.

"I squared myself, though, with my friends, by sending each of them a copy of 'Blindfolded,' and now they are unkind enough to say that they are glad that I forgot about the luncheon. They all say, and I agree with them, that 'Blindfolded' is the best detective story that has come out in a month of Sundays."—EDNA WALLACE HOPPER.

> George F. Hall, the well-known comedian, who appears here at the Grand for two nights, commencing Monday next, tells the following rather good one on himself. He was playing some little one night stand out West and was invited to a lawn party one afternoon. As he approached the house in question he espied three little girls, the oldest not over nine, selling lemonade from a big washtub outside the fence which separated the lawn from the street.

> As he approached the three children commenced to clamor: "Buy a glass of lemonade, only five cents." "Only five cents a glass, please buy a glass, only fi' cents." As Mr. Hall was on the "water wagon" high and dry-the monade game appealed to him, so he fished out a nickel, drank the lemonade and went in to the lawn fete, the children's thanks ringing in his ears.

Returning from the lawn party an hour later he was again accosted by the children with "Lemonade, only one cent a glass. Please buy another. Reduced prices; only one cent a glass.' More to please the children than anything else, he fished out three pennies and drank three glasses, one after the

Just as he was going he turned to the oldest child and said: "I don't understand the reduction in price, my child. How is it you charged me five cents a glass a little while ago when I went in, and now on my return it is only one cent a glass?"

"Well, sir," said the child, "we don't think the lemonade is quite as good as it was. You see just after you went away a dog fell in it."

Those of our readers who keep in touch with dramatic affairs in the "Middle West" will remember the Livingstone Stock Company, that has dehighted the citizens of Detroit for two seasons past. EWBRO'S HERPICIDE

Is the original remedy that "kills the dandruff germ"

Edna D. Allen

ITHOUT dandruff the hair must grow luxuriantly, except in chronic baldness, which is incurable. Dandruff is a contagious disease caused by a germ or microbe. To cure dandruff, this germ-a tiny vegetable growth-must be destroyed and kept out of the scalp by Newbro's Herpicide.

A WOMAN TO BE PRETTY

A woman to be pretty must have pretty hair. Beautiful locks have a subtle charm, for the poet says, "fair tresses man's imperial race ensuare." The unpoetic and intensely real dandruff microbe makes the hair dull, brittle and lusterless with later dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair. Newbro's Herpicide destroys this enemy of beauty and enables the hair to resume its natural luster and abundance. Almost marvelous results sometimes follow the continued use of Herpicide. Overcomes excessive oilness and makes the hair light and fluffy. It contains no greace or dye. Stops itching of the scalp almost instantly.

Discriminating ladies who have used Newbro's Herpicide, speak of it in the highest terms, for its almost magical effect upon the scalp, and also for its excellence as a regular hair dressing. It is delightfully fragrant and refreshing.

> "I have found Newbro's Herpicide excellent for the hair. The first application stops itching of the scalp and it leaves the hair soft and silky."

The vendetta is believed to be a revival of the celebrated feud between the Apache chiefs Manda and Lucca, who fought for the love of Mile. Casque d'Or several years ago.

On Sunday night a number of the Apaches walked into a little cafe on the Boulevard de Clichy, and shot dead an Apache known as "Le Demicheur," who was sitting at one of the tables. The murderer, known as "Luluces," escaped, but last night he was shot through the head by a friend of "Le Demicheur" as he was leaving a cafe in the Rue Couscon, a tiny thoroughfare frequented by the worst type of Apache.

GIRLS IN GERMANY.

The German girl leaves school at about 15 years of age, by which time she has learned to sew, mend and supposedly to speak English and French. She has not learned higher mathematics, but she has learned the small things which fit a girl for a housewife, or companion, and that, in Germany, is woman's only sphere.

However much American girls may enjoy their colleges, German girls have something which takes their place and of which we can have no conception until we reside in Germany a few months.

Did you ever hear of a pension? It is one of the most enjoyable things which exists. Certain influential ladies, mostly widows or maiden aunts, make known that they were willing to take a limited number of young ladies into their family.

We went to Hanover, two of us girls, with a horror and dread of a boardingschool, as we had heard a pension described. We found ourselves in a family of eight girls, all from the very best billiard and pool tables, including one class of Germans, and all placed under Frau von H.'s care for a year or Aged Resident of Belleville Fatally Pounded Wife While Intoxicated.

Belleville, Nov. 2.-The jury in the Kleingbeil murder trial brought in a verdict about 3 o'clock this afternoon, finding the prisoner guilty of manslaughter. Judge Britton reserved sentence. The verdict is looked on as a just one

The court room was crowded this morning at 9 o'clock, when Mr. Justice Britton ddressed the jury. The prisoner came nto the court smiling, and wore on shis breast the medal won by him in the Prussian war.

His lordship began his address by explaining the law regarding homicide. He reviewed at length the evidence given by the various witnesses, and dwelt for some time upon the prisoner's repeated statements that he did it, and did it with his firsts. His lordship spoke for nearly an hour, and said the ground of insanity could not be considered, as no evidence was adduced to give them cause to believe the prisoner was insane. His charge was strongly against the prisoner.

The jury retired at 10 o'clock. Ferdinand Kleingbeil, a German, 71 years of age, and over half a century a resident of this country, was charged with the willful murder of his aged wife, between March 2 and 5 last.

The woman was found in a terrible state, from all appearances being literally pounded to death while the prisoner was n a drunken frenzy. Several witnesses testified to having deed with his fists, and that he was willing to hang for it. Kleingbeil was a soldier in the Prussian war against Austria, and received the iron eagle as a reward.

Secret Code Thrown Overboard by Sailor Who Wished To Be Discharged.

London, Nov. 3.-The London Express says: According to reliable information received by the Express, the code signal book of the cruiser Vindictive, now at Sheerness, has been lost. The book contains the private signals of the Channel fleet, and its loss is not only a matter of profound importance to the navy, but to the Empire.

The sailor who had charge of the book under the supervision of an officer has been arrested, and so much importance is attached to the affair that the leave of both officers and crew has been entirely stopped since Saturday last. Divers are now at work searching for the missing book. It is understood that the man under arrest declares that he is tired of the service. and that he threw the book overboard when the midshipman was not looking, in order that he might be dismissed from the navy.

These secret signal books of the fleet contain information of the very highest value to any great power with which Great Britain might find herself at war. It is well known that they have a very great commercial value. and that the secret service agents of foreign Governments, who are always be found in the neghborhood of aval stations, will pay enormous sums to obtain possession of one. In evidence given before a royal commission a few years ago, it was stated that France spent £100,000 a year on her secret service, and it is well known that Germany spends twice this sum annually, and Russia an almost equally Halifax, N. S., Nov. 3.-Hon. W. S Fielding's return to Halifax, fresh from his triumph in Queen's and Shelburne, was signalized by a rousing reception from the Liberals of this city who, in spite of a nasty rainstorm, assembled to do him honor. If anything were lacking to show the great hold that Mr. Fielding has upon the affections of the people of Halifax it was supplied. There could be no more spontaneous, genuinely hearty welcome tendered to a public man than that given don in the last week of May, under the Mr. Fielding by the Liberal party, old and young, and many of the leading citizens of Halifax.

he took his seat. He thanked them for their great reception to him, the assurance of their loyalty to the Liberal party and their great leader, Sir Wilfrid Laurier. It was worth while to go through such a campaign to secure such genuine acclaim. He was inclined to take the view that the Conservatives were trying to work out good ends for the Liberal party. The result of all their operations has been to add to the strength of the Liberals and to compass the destruction of the Conservative party in this province. He had been told that it would have been better to have been elected by acclamation than trouble and bother with a contest which could have been avert ed. The interests of the country might have been better served, but the satstaction was to show that the Government was stronger than ever before. "I want' to give them credit," said

There are thousands of females all over our land, broken down in health and dragging out a miserable existence, overburdened with disease peculiar to their sex, apparently growing old while yet young.

From early morn till late at night they have been on the go year after year, attending to the household duties. Is it any wonder then that sooner or later there comes a general collapse? TURNED ON THE JOKER.

A laughable but rather embarrassing case of mistaken identity occurred the other day in a large draper's shop. A gentleman who is a little too fond of joking entered the shop for the purpose of meeting his wife at a certain counter. Sure enough, there stood a lady dressed to his eye, at least—just like the woman he was after.

Another reason, and considered by most people the most important point which attends the firm's success (as well as many another firm's prosperity, although very seldom in the plano business), is the fact that Messrs, J. THRILLING ESCAPE FROM FIRE FIEND

FREE TRIP TOTORONTO

We have arranged to refund railroad fare to out-of-town customers for the month of November only and under conditions that will appeal at once as being unusually liberal. We realize that Toronto is the shopping centre of Canada, especially for Furs, and we propose adding to its prestige by bringing large numbers of out-of-town people to see for themselves the styles we show and the assortments we carry. The idea is to encourage personal shopping, and with that in mind we offer free transportation to Toronto on the following basis:

- During November we will refund one round-trip railroad, steamboat or trolley fare from any place within a radius of FIFTY MILES OF TORONTO to each individual spending not less than TWENTY-FIVE DOLLARS at the Dincen store.
- Round-trip fare will likewise be refunded to any person who comes from a point within ONE HUNDRED MILES and over 50 miles of Toronto whose total purchases at the Dincen store amount to at least FIFTY
- Persons living at a greater distance will be credited on the same basis. For instance, anyone coming 150 miles will be allowed a rebate for 100 miles on a $50 purchase—the balance to be paid by themselves.

This is a straight-forward concession to out-oftown customers, giving them the same shopping privileges as city people. It is worth something to us to have Dineen Furs in larger evidence all over Canada, and the novelty of coming to Toronto at our expense is the beginning of a new dispensation in retail business. We mark all prices in plain figures, with no chance for misunderstanding. Our name and reputation have been associated with highgrade Furs for nearly fifty years, and under no circumstances will we lower our standard of quality, or allow misrepresentation in any form.

Captain Collins has arrested Wm. Ireland in Sarnia, who is charged with the crime. Taylor and Ireland were drinking together in the saloon on the night of the robbery. According to Taylor's story, Ireland went out the back door and asked Taylor to follow. Just after reaching the open air, Taylor was struck a vicious blow on the head, which rendered him unconscious. When he regained his senses he was minus his money and his companion. Ireland will be charged with highway robbery.

On Sunday last Rev. G. C. Patterson preached his farewell sermons. Mr. Patterson has been pastor of Knox Church for the past fourteen and a half years, and much regret is felt by all throughout the community at his departure from the village. Large audiences were present at both services, the evening service at the Congregational Church having been withdrawn. On Thursday evening a social gathering was held in the church to bid farewell to Mr. and Mrs. Patterson.

Next Sunday Rev. W. T. Gunn preaches his farewell sermons in the Congregational Church.

Rev. W. T. Gunn was in Foodstock on Monday, and acted as chairman at the tea meeting given in the Congregational Church there, to welcome the new pastor, Rev. Charles Pedley. Mr. Emerson Abernethy rendered solos, which were very much appreciated.

SCARCITY OF WATER.

If the teetotaler has a bad time in busi-

If the teetotaler has a bad time in business, he does not have a good time when he is playing. The happy English countryside is no place for the teetotaler, if he is thirsty. Everybody who does not wish to drink beer, clder or standygaff knows the difficulty of getting anything to quench his thirst when on a bicycling or walking tour in England. Milk and soda may be at once ruled out, for milk is more difficult of acquisition in the place where it comes from than any other country product, except, perhaps, fruit. Lemons from a hundred score miles away may occasionally be found; and there are mineral waters, which certainly include stone bottle ginger beer; but whose thirst has ever been quenced by this compound of sweetness and effervescence? Water, that is to say, water of the very best quality, is what the thirsty traveler really wants; and water is what he cannot get.—London Chronicle.

CHAPTER I.

The Watchman. That monster, London, was just lying down to rest. The clocks of the Strand churches and the Strand hotels, keeping nocturnal vigil, showed a quarter to one under the autumn moon. Through the closed windows of closed public-houses could be barmen, who, with sleep in their eyes and dusters in their hands, were endeavoring to wipe away the last stain from their counters. The Strand was mhabited chiefly by policemen engaged in the examination of shop doors, and omnibuses that had the air of hurry- to make up his mind to accost the ing home for fear of being late; a Carter Paterson van, obviously out for the night, rumbled along at leisure. In the courtyards of the two great hotels a few cabs, with their glaring yellow orbs, waited, waited for august patrons, while haughty commissioners ignored contemptuous cabmen. On the pavements between Aldwych and Charing Cross, there were perhaps, not more than twenty pedestrians, instead of the twenty thousand that jostled one another at noon. The monster seemed to expel a fatigued sigh, as one saying: "I'll try to get a little sleep, but I'm not at all sure that I shall."

Among the score of pedestrians was Philip Masters, a young, large-boned moment in front of a jeweler's which a wanderer by his gait and eyes. was illuminated to tantalize burglars, he crossed from the south to the north ! side of Wellington street, and then turned up the splendid curve of Ald-The vast and ornate architec- the fire a-goin, and a bob's yours, ture of that region rose above him in its pearly whiteness that the breath of monster had not time to soil; and Philip wondered, as people in Philip's in the watchman's own dialect. "And condition are apt to wonder, where the money had come from to rear with the rapidity of a dream these blanched places devoted solely to luxury and pleasure.

For Philip was at his final sixpence; he carried all that he posessed on earth in a little black bag; and no one was more surprised than Philip to find himself in the midst of a city that spends twelve thousand pounds a day on cab fares, with no home and no prospect of adding to the sixpence. Philip once had gutte the habit of flinging half-crowns to cab drivers in a grand, careless manner. He had lost his mother at birth and his father in the shape of a tea can and a red some months earlier, and his effective parents had been a couple of trustees furnished him with 6,000 pounds, and was the property of an honest and in- House?" he asked the watchman tim-

But they had not taught him how to take advice, nor how to acquire a real liking for publishing, nor how to lose money on the Stock Exchange. So that within six years, besides having shown his heels to publishing and acted contrary to their advice in almost every particular, Philip had contrived to part with nearly the whole of his six thousand pounds. He was a man of many remarkable qualities; he was even a philosopher of singular enlightenment, but he happened to have been born with a hole in his pocket which nothing could

At 27 he had made away with every thing except his peace of mind and his faith in human nature.

He had essayed various vocations, from insurance to the secretaryship of a club, and had not found the right one. He might have succeeded in the colonies, but circumstances had not sent him hither. Not everyone goes to the colonies who might succeed there. Piccadilly is full of colonists who ought to be in Canada. He had stayed longest in his last situation as half-assistant manager, half-professor in a flu-jitsu school, for he had the frame and the proclivities of an athlete. Among the pupils of the jiu-jitsu school (Jermyn street) had been a fluke. In an encounter Philip had locked the duke's arm, and it was the the corner of Strange street and duke's part to yield at peril of a broken

But the aspect of the policeman awed him, and he retired into his little house and pretended to be

It might have been the sedative influence of half a pork pie, half a loaf, and a pint of tea, or it might have been Philip's fatigue, but he did not keep up for more than 30 seconds the pretense of bein asleep; he really slept. He had slept while on duty, and deserved to be taken out and shot-especially as he had an intuition that in the immediate neighborhood things had been happening

He straightened his hat, adjusted the sack, and crept out of his residence to reconnoiter. His residence was at Kingsway, and a trench had been dug along the south side of Strange street and nearly a third of the way across count of his ancient lineage, had not Kingsway. The trench was guarded by a rope-iron fence, and dully illuminated by lamps, in the established manner. It was part of Philip's domain. Often kidney trouble is not due to any organic defect in the kidneys. If the bowels are constipated—if the skin does not throw off the tissue waste of the body-then these impurities are carried to the kidneys. In a vain endeavor to rid the system of impurities the kidneys are overworked—the blood vessels are dilated—the nerves inflamed. That causes a host of kidney troubles.

Lord Grantley is now a man of 50, has figured on several occasions in the divorce court as co-respondent, which indicates that he is disposed toward romance, and STAGE IRISHMAN IS ANYTHING with Italian peasant blood in his veins, will probably one of these days answer "the call of the blood," and, following the example of his father, will withdraw to Capri to spend the eventide of his stormy life among his mother's people as a Capriote contadino and fisherman.

These facts are not contained in the "reminiscences" of Sir Evelyn Wood, but they are of timely interest, nevertheless, in connection therewith. Sir Evelyn likewise neglects to mention in his book the true reason of his failure to receive any command in the Boer war, in spite of his soldierly offers to serve under Lord Kitchener and Sir Redvers Buller, both of whom were his inferior in rank and seniority. The fact is that he is appallingly deaf, an infirmity regarding which he is extremely sensitive. True, his hearing was affected through gunfire. But still at the same time deafness such as that from which he suffers cannot but be regarded as disqualifying a general from an important command in the field. With all that, he is a most polished courtler, and when the Empress Eugenie insisted upon going out to Africa after the death of the Prince Imperial in order to visit the spot where his body had been found, Sir Evelyn Wood was designated by the Queen to act as her escort.

Sir Evelyn started his career as a midshipman, and won the medal of the Legion of Honor at the age of 17 in the Crimean war, at the close of which he entered the army as a cavalry officer, winning the Victoria cross in the Indian mutiny. He is as clever in handling infantry as cavalry, and after becoming a general took

BUT "TYPICAL."

Cork is far more Irish than Dublin, Here I feel I am beginning to get a foretaste of the real thing. A foretaste rather than anything more actual because Cork is too busy and prosperous to be wholly typical of Ireland. Incidentally I am beginning to doubt whether that phrase "typical of Ireland" may not conceal a pitfall. A visitor in a strange country is apt to be almost morbidly on the look-out for what is "typical"—in other words, for what will fit in with his preconceived notions. Everyone has felt this temptation. You land with an assortment something "Begorra" or "Acushla," or something of that sort, I should instinctively murmur, "How typical!" Yet, I doubt if you will find such." pause before saying that this or that is a bit of the veritable Ireland. HE PREFERS THE FALL.

"The leaves are falling now from the trees in the range of backyards in view from my shady window," said Professor Von Joggleby, "and that brings to my mind, as it always oes, the question of which season I like best. As a matter of fact, I like them all. And here I am reminded of the words of the poet, as to the season he would prefer to die in:

I wouldn't die in springtime, In summer or in fall, I wouldn't die in winter, I wouldn't die at all.

"You see, when he came to really give the subject consideration he found that he didn't want to die in any of them, the obvious inference being that he liked all the seasons and I am like the poet in this respect, as well as like him in not wantwanting to die in any season, but I have a choice among the seasons to live in, as indeed, perhaps he did, and for myself I like fall the best.

"I like spring, the awakening of nature. the renewal of its youth, the coming of the buds on myriads of plants, and of the buds and the leaves on the trees, and after the rigors of winter I like the soft and balmy air of springtime but I like the soft, hazy, yellow richness of the early days of autumn, of nature's full ripeness, better, and fall I like best of all, when the leaves are going, as they are going now; when, after the languid summer the air is bracing and the winds blow and life is a strong, full joy. "I may at some other time have expressed another preference as to my choice of seasons, but if I have done so, piease consider that now, revoking all former wills and testaments, I announce fall as my final selection."—New York Sun.

CURIOUS CHINESE MEDICINE.

There are few places more interesting in Chinatown than the Oriental laboratories and drug stores. Quaint and mysterious are some of the prescribed remedies, although many of them are composed of herbs, and are excellent for some maladies. This fact is pretty generally recogized, for the average Chinese doctor who can speak English counts among his patients Americans as well as Orientals. It is a well-known fact that the late Leland Stanford pinned his faith to Chinese herb treatment, and was a regular and unashamed physician of Dr. Wong Woo, a prominent Chinese physician of San Francisco. In one of the large drug stores of New York there are over 3,000 different barks, roots and berries, all imported from China. Some few of the herbs grow in this country, but they have not the strength of the Chinese plants. For instance, ginseng grown in Pennsylvania, from which state large quantities are exported, brings only 50 cents a pound, while Chinese ginseng sells for $3$ and $4$ a pound. A certain bark, which, upon being broken into pieces, discloses a silvery-colored silken fiber, is much used as a tonic; it is the bark of a tree called Toy-chung. Orange skin, betel nut, licorice, sweet-tasting red berries, bamboo shavings, and all sorts of roots and herbs are used by Chinese doctors.—Leslie's Weekly.

Should something absolutely new be desired, turn your attention to the glass and china upon which silver has been deposited. This, by the way, is by no means the same thing as the silver mountings which have been in vogue for several years, but is made by first covering the ware with certain chemicals, which enable it to stand the onslaught, and then projecting the molten silver into it by means of a battery. Silver dishes always make acceptable gifts, and the fashions this year run either to the staid and solid with hittle decoration, or to what the lewelers term "pierced work"—a name that really carries its own explanation with it. Flat silver fruit or salad bowis, flaring about the edges and with those same flares pierced into fantastic designs, are among the new things shown.

and the new cellar boasts of greater depth than its predecessor of years back, and has also the "pierced" edge to prove that it is of the 1906 variety.

Individual castors, tiny affairs that are merely miniatures of the atrocities that adorned the centre of the table in grandmother's day, are also shown. The little castor is of silver, of course, and holds three bottles, for black, white and red pepper, or paprika.

And now may all womankind call down blessings upon the head of the man—if man it was—who invented silver holders for catsup and sauce bottles, cheese jars and boxes and other Tiny little silver butter plates, with a fine threadwork about the edges, will never come amiss with any bride, and the oval silver breadtrays, a little flatter than in seasons past, still hold their own hold their own.

such paraphernalia, whose disposition has long tried the soul of the beauty-loving housewife. loving housewife.

No longer must you remove your sardines from the box at the risk of dismembering them, or else present to the view of your family and friends a gilt-lettered assurance that these sardines are put up in the finest oil and by the most approved methods! A sardine box of rock crystal glass and possessed of a silver top is now on sale, and this perplexing article of food is turned into a thing of beauty.

Simplicity is the keynote of the new silver, yet there are pretty things in the so-called Baltimore repousse work, and no bride but who would be pleased at receiving a chest full of small silver, decorated with orange blossoms or bride roses.

Silver-handled carving sets are liked for wedding presents, and, by the way, the sizes and kinds of carving sets that are now being shown are practically unlimited. Of course, there is the regulation set for joints and roasts, and then the smaller size, for steaks, and the tiny sets for squabs.

Fowl shears are on the market—instruments that look as if their place was in a surgeon's case, rather than upon a civilized table. These shears are supposed to cut right through the bone, and so the old-time necessity for hunting for the joints is done away with. This, perhaps, would not be a recommendation to the happy bridegroom who has only to think of his best-beloved (so says the old superstition) in order to find the joint.

Pearl-handled knives are very much in vogue, but the pearl-handled forks seem to find little favor, and this season we have borrowed from our English cousins the idea of ivory handled knives and forks, elaborately carved, for the fish course.

If you don't want to give the bride in whom you are specially interested anything for her house there are innumerable charming things of a more personal nature. Silver picture frames, once considered particularly adapted as Christmas presents, now take prominent place in the list of gifts for brides.

The simpler the frame the better its style this year, and the smooth, flat frames, delicately etched or engraved and in panel or oval shapes, are most often chosen.

Silver toilet articles vary but little from year to year. Shoehorns are monstrosities in size in some of the new sets, looking far more like sugar scoops than anything else; but the other pieces remain about the same. The French gray tinting is still liked, but the very newest thing is the silver in its natural color "hand engraved."

The silver clocks are a delight; but, alas! they are beyond the reach of any save the rich. They come in a variety of shapes—grandfather clocks less than a foot high, dainty little sedan chairs, and one tiny vision presents a face that suggests nothing so much as an aqua-suggests nothing so much as an aquamarine.

Jewelry the bride is supposed to receive from those who are her nearest and dearest; and here again there is a wide choice. Bracelets grow in popularity day by day. There is the plain round band of gold, of which we never tire; the flat bands of chain or open work, with settings of precious stones, in a dozen different patterns, and in the antique, Roman or rose finish. One special bracelet looked like nothing so much as a huge finger ring. It was a round band, with the old, dull finish that has a suggestion of green in its tinting, and had an immense amethyst imbedded on one side.

Neckloses are as much worn as ever,

an immense amethyst imbedded on one side.

Necklaces are as much worn as ever, but those in the festoon styles and those with pendants are the most popular. Flat collar effects, pearl bands and strings of pearls hold sway; and if we may believe the evidence of our eyes, the long fine chain, which has been popular for so long, is dead.

Rings are elaborate as to setting prooches either look like those that our grandmother wore, with blg stone centres, surrounded with smaller stones of flat gold bands, or else are floral designs in enamel and precious stones. Chatelaines in the most fantastic designs are shown, and—but the list is endless. Truly, the bride of the fall of 1906 is a much favored mortal!

AM not a "housemother." Within the last miserable hour I have doubted if I shall ever be a housewife, or, for that matter, any sort of a wife.

May I tell you my story? I am so wretched I must taik it out to somebody—or, go crazy—or die! You see, I have no mother of my own. I haven't had since I was 10, years old. I have had a stepmother ever since I was 11, but she doesn't dount. I don't think stepmothers often do count for anything that could make the first wife's children better or happier. I know mine didn't—ever! When I was 16, she put me into an office. I say she did, because my father does just what she wants him to do. She had been a stenographer, before she was been a stenographer, before she was made up her mind I should be one, as soon as she found out I loved to study and to read. She drilled, me herself, all the time I could spare from my lessons when I was out of school; and you may be sure she worked me hard. By the time I was graduated she had got a fine position for me in the office where she used to work. I could not have got it at my age, had she not gone security for my proficiency and steadiness. I will say for her that she prepared me thoroughly for the place. I have held it now six years, and given satisfaction to my embloyers. I went in on a salary of 55 per lovek, and I am getting $16 now. When I would stay.

Now for my trouble. My friend and I have had our first quarrel, and it looks to me like a serious one. We were talking of our plans this evening, and he took it for yranted we would take a flat and go to housekeepink. He has said so much that showed how he felt on this matter lately that I thought it only fair to speak out my mind. So I told him it would be nothing and taking care of a house: never having had a chance to learn. At any rate, I knew my present business, and had some natural aptitude for it.

Yet a half-truth is the chief cornerstone of the piceus piea at the evidently comes fro mit freely that it is not possible for every woman to love housework or housekeeping. Nor is it equally easy to all children to learn to read. With one child study of books is a joy. With her deskmate, it is drudgery. Does the dull child's parent instruct the teacher to give over the work of instruction? I have lived many years, and learned something new in every day of each year. I tell you now, as if you were, indeed, my daughter, that a knowledge of practical cookery is as necessary a part of an American girl's education as the alphabet, the primer, the copy book, an ithmetic and geography.

Recurring to my personal experience, let me say that I began housekeeping in a well-appointed home, with what was considered a staff of competent servants. At the end of the first crucial year I overheard an inquisielve visitor order we husbard how many servants we servants. At the end of the first crucial year I overheard an inquisieive visitor ask my husband how many servants we kept.

His answer was prompt: "Five, and one slave! The slave is my wife!"

My staff had, one and all, discovered that I was an ignoramus in my assumed profession, and taken advantage of the discovery. The captain did not know how to sail the ship.

The labor of fitting myself to teach and to control subordinates was less arduous because, as presently appeared, I had a genuine liking for culinary science and native aptitude for the practice of the art. If these had been wanting—as you say they are in you—the duty and the necessity would have remained the same. This is not professional jargon, but plain truth.

You may be right in affirming that there "is a lot of this sort of feeling among working—rls." Then let them be content to a nain working girls! There is no necess, y laid upon them by law or gospel to become wives. If the boarding house is your ideal of home, stay there! If you do not love the man you have promised to marry well enough to conquer, for his sake, your repugnance to household toil, tell him that you decline to become his partner, accept the $20 "per" and let him find a homemaker elsewhere.

Am I hard upon you? Do I seem unfeeling and non-sympathetic? I beg you to believe that I could give you no better proof of motherly interest in you and affectionate desire for your real good than by this plandealing with your "hurt." What other women have done is possible to a bright, brave woman like yourself. Let me conclude my too-long lecture with a sentence from the letter of a literary woman, who married at 35, and at 40 was the model housekeeper of her neighborhood. "I am not naturally fond of household duties. If I have, as you are good enough to say, "reduced dusting to a fine art, mixing and baking to an exact science, it is not for love of art or science. I love my husband and my year I overheard an inquisieive visitor ask my husband how many servants we home. To see him happy, and to enjoy the effect of clean, orderly rooms and well-served meals, I am willing to perform tasks for which I have no real liking. The game is worth the candleworth more, in fact, than any waxlights."

To Make Tea Properly A knot of us-all practical housekeepe have been discussing tea-making "over have been discussing tea-making "over the teacups."

The oldest member of the party laid it down as a truth that is not to be disputed that black tea is to be boiled, and green, or any "blend" that contains green tea, should be simply steeped in boiling water for ten minutes.

Another woman told of a new "wrinkle" in tea brewing she picked up last summer in camp. This is to put the tea over the fire in cold water, letting it come to a boil, then to take it off and pour it out.

Please let us know which of these methods commends itself to you as right and best.

S. F. W. (Columbus, Ohio).

Have you heard the story of the S. F. W. (Columbus, Onio).

Have you heard the story of the Irishman to whom was referred the question: "Which is correct—'eyther' or 'eether?"

"Faith." said Pat, "and sure it's nayther!"

No tea should ever be boiled—no matter what its complexion. Nor should it steep for ten minutes. "Nayther" should it be put into cold water and brought to the boil. Each and every one of these methods extracts the tannic acid which is the one and only hurtful element in tea—green, black or mixed.

To make tea properly, scald the pot and put in the requisite quantity of the herb. Cover with a little boiling water; fit a "cozy" or other cap upon the pot; let it stand three minutes; fill up the pot with boiling water; slip on the cozy and leave it for two minutes more; then, pour out at once.

A Tale of Woe

Our Council table is such a valuable help that I must thank you and your helpers. I find two useful items of information in a number now before me.

But, will you ask "A Western Woman" to be a little more explicit upon one or two points? How much formaldehyde does she use, and how often? Can she sleep in the bed the same night after using it? And doesn't it hurt her eyes while she is applying it? Does she spray it on the bed-clothes, or apply it with a brush to the bed and springs—or both? If I can but rid my house of the horrid pests I will bless her and the Exchange as long as I live.

I have almost despaired, and wondered why it is such a disgrace to have bedbugs in one's house when it is so fearfully hard to exterminate them. By comparison flies, ants, moths, etc., are easy work.

Tell "B. B. W." If she will whip her cream until it will stand alone, sweeten abundantly, and add—gradually—a few tablespoonfuls of vinegar, she will have a delicious dressing for cabbage salad.

E. B. B. (Monmouth, III.).

The idea that the woman in whose house bedbugs are found is a "poor housekeeper" is too firmly implanted in the public mind to be uprooted by "B. S. B.'s" protest against the palpable in justice of the prejudice. Yet we all A Tale of Woe know that the ways of the beaster are dark and his tricks mean beyond compare. He lurks in the walls of old houses and waits until every bed is clean, and every room in the apartment is swept and garnished by the family that has just moved in—people who, as they will tell you; never saw "a bug" in their impeccable lives. In the silent midnight watches the enemy issues from his fortress and descends in strength upon the sleepers, made savage by long fasting. Henceforward there is a ceaseless battle. Nothing short of a conflagration of the whole block will rout the bandits utterly, for they migrate from house to house with cheerful impartiality, being burdened by no belongings except their appetites.

The tales of the trials of the neathanded dweller in city flats are harrowing to hear when the Cimex lectularius (a sounding name, cut down to an offensive monosyllable for everyday—and every night use) is discussed.

"The female deposits her eggs in summer in the crevices of furniture and of the walls of rooms"—an entomological treatise remarks coolly. That way madness lies. While the dainty housewife takes a much-needed vacation, the invaders are preparing for a new campaign. Hence the cloud of sorrowful epistles that darken my spirit at the season when householders have returned with fresh heart to renovated homes.

We look for the "creatures" in old and middle-aged buildings, as I have said. Yet the flercest battle I have ever waged with them was in a country cottage of which we were the first tenants. A veteran housekeeper told me then that the Cimex lectularius affects new wood as a harbor for her eggs and young, which, by the way, fare forth as soon as they are hatched, seeking their prey. are dark and his tricks mean beyond compare. Economy of Beauty in Furnishing

IN THE days when millionaires were not quite so plentiful as now, a certain man who had accumulated a large fortune by the work of his hands sent his son to be educated. The boy did not share his father's views concerning the desirability of this education, neither had he ability, and his tutor, having labored long and diligently, came to the parent with the plea that further effort was useless, since his pupil lacked capacity. ed capacity.
"Buy him one, then!" thundered the

"Buy him one, then!" thundered the irate father, "Buy him one! Don't you understand that I have money enough to buy my children anything they need?" Alas! he had not. Money will buy a great many things in this world, but ability is not one of them, and neither is taste. The most expensive homes are not

The most expensive homes are not always the most artistic. Elaborate furnishings do not necessarily produce the best effects. A can of paint and a piece of cretonne, used by a skilful hand, that is directed by an eye with a true sense of the beautiful, will bring about results far exceeding any accomplished by an unlimited purse in the grasp of a tyro.

Many a room that might have been limited purse in the grasp of a tyro.

Many a room that might have been charming is ruined by an overplus of decoration and furniture. Pictures are so crowded upon the walls that the individuality of each is lost, and you are merely conscious of a mingling of frames and a glare of color. Bric-a-brac is crammed upon mantelpiece and cabinets till they resemble nothing so much as the shownesses in shops. Chairs and tables press against each other until crossing the room is a perilous feat; and the owner of this conglomeration gazes upon it with an air of resignation and wonders why her rooms have not the air of those of the woman across the street, who does not spend one-tenth as much in the course of a year upon her house.

A few chairs, selected with an eye to

A few chairs, selected with an eve to comfort and arranged so that their very attitude is an unspoken invitation to come and rest a while, are in far better taste than innumerable spindle-leg and over-carved affairs, which are always avoided by the wary guest. Pictures selected to give pleasure to the people who look at them, and not because of the magnificence of their frames, and hung with regard to their possibilities, add far more to the beauty of a room than the attempt at an imitation of an art gallery, which some persons seem to affect.

Harmony in color is not expensive. Fitting your carpet and your furniture costs no more than buying a rug that sets your teeth on edge every time you see it in juxtaposition with the cover of your pet armchair; and a pile of superfluous ornaments and cabinets makes a hole in your pocketbook, spoils the temper of her who must do so much unnecessary dusting and ruins the effect of your room. It may not be possible for every woman to "live up to her blue china," but as far as lies within her she should make her surroundings harmonize with it.
