of the Murderer.

Threat Made by Murderer Against Judge Street is Remembered.

The escape of W. A. Moir, the London murderer from the Hamilton Asylum for the Criminally Insane, is the chief topic of conversation around the city today and many men who knew the soldier for years are of the opinion that Moir is as same as the majority of people who know enough to keep out of trouble.

A young Englishman employed as a street railway conductor, told The Advertiser that he had known Moir for years and that he never knew that he suffered from epilepsy until his trial for the murder of Col.-Sergt. Lloyd in Moir a Sane Man.

"I have had the boxing gloves on with Moir many a time and such strenuous work would surely show on a man if he were subject to the disease. He had a violent temper and iquor was his chief trouble. The authorities believe that Moir knows he has the police at a disadvantage in a fight, as he has been declared insane and could shoot to kill without making his predicament any worse, as he cannot be hanged, and the maximum penalty has been imposed for the murder of Lloyd. If he succeeds in making his escape by Killing someone else he is no worse off, and it is thought that this would not worry him very greatly after his experience at Wolseley Barracks.

A Restless Eye.

Moir has a very restless eye, according to the county authorities and at times certainly looks the part of a criminal

His eyes are very much the same as Texas Burdell's, who is now serving a fifteen year sentence at Kingston, it . said. This also recalls a threat made by Texas when being taken to Kingston for his fifteen-year term by two Hoyle London men, Deputy Sheriff Waterworth and County Constable Arthur

Judge Street, who sentenced "Texas",

Texas has now served five years of his term. He was a "bundle of nerves" on the trip to Kingston, but as soon as he came within sight of the penitentiary he collapsed and was handled as easily as a child. He was handcuffed the entire journey, and tried to work the "bracelets" off on the train while his guards sat to one side pretending they did not notice his actions. When he saw he was being watched he exclaimed, "It's no use. They won't come." He has still ten years to serve before he again secures his freedom,

I tell about the secret in my book, which I send FREE to every person (or relative of riend) who takes alcohel in any form to excess. My one purpose in life is to cure the drunkard. I rejoice in every cure, each victim has my sympathy. What I promise is absolutely guaranteed. My remedy is for either steady or periodical drinkers. Think of it—a complete and permanent home cure between Friday night and Monday might—or any other 72 hours!

Men or Women, Any Age, Quickly Cured.

AUGUST VALUES IN Linens, Cottons and Sheetings

August is always a big month in this department. It marks the return of many from their holidays and summer homes, and begins the preparation at home for the fall and our popular Western Fair, when many require extra bedding, towels, table linens, etc., and naturally enough most housekeepers in this locality look to us to supply their needs, knowing the genuineness of our values and the safe and satisfactory business methods of this etablishment.

We have prepared and prepared well for those who know values best, and invite you to look over the many special lines that await you.

Unbleached Table Linens, serviceable and satisfactory; 25¢, 35¢, 40¢, 50¢ yard up.

Bleached Table Linens, every line guaranteed absolutely pure linen, 50¢, 65¢, 75¢, 85¢, $1.00 and $1.25 yard. Table Napkins, pure linen only, in qualities and designs to suit almost any particular taste; as low as 95¢ per dozen, as high as $23.00, and dozens of prices between.

TOWELS-We couldn't enumerate the prices or do justice to the values here, but our reputation in the Towel business is sufficient guarantee to us that you will see these at least before Serviceable Hemmed Huck Towels at 10¢ each, $1.10 dozen, and lots of good quality All Linen Towels at 15¢, 20¢ and so on. Come and see. We will be pleased to show them.

Cottons

Cases of Cottons and Sheetings that the values prove they have been bought right. More than right, you will say when you compare them with some of the present day values.

WHITE SOFT FINISHED MADAPOLLAM, 36 inches wide, is one of our notable lines. We're just asking 11¢ per yard. or selling pieces (50 yards), at 10¢ yard.

40-INCH UNBLEACHED COTTON—Isn't it wide? And think how we have narrowed down the price on this lot; 81/2¢ yard, or 12 yards for $1.00.

SHEETINGS—Bleached and unbleached single, threequarter and double-bed widths, an extra special Unbleached Sheeting, two yards wide, very clean weave. While it lasts, per yard 22¢.

Bleached Sheetings, two yards wide, 25¢ and upward. Our 35¢ quality is a trade winner in the same width. Other widths in proportion. Come today or tomorrow and make your

THE FUTURE OF WHEAT CULTI-VATION.

Prof. M. A. Carleton, of the department of agriculture at Washington, is a decided optimist as to the future of who has arrived at Montreal in his wheat growing on the American con- famous yacht Sunbeam. The story tinent. Instead of the United States being forced to discontinue exporting wheat before many years pass, as some have contended, Mr. Carleton predicts that by 1950 the total wheat yield of the republic will reach 1,600,-000,000 bushels—sufficient to feed its entire population, which he estimates will by that time have reached 160,-

In an address before an assemblage of millers at Minneapolis recently And humanity shares the debt. Prof. Carleton explained how he reach ed his conclusions. Mrs. Heathfield was regarded as a very clever embezzler, and a shrewd, cunning woman. Some months ago she suddenly disappeared from at the Grand Trunk station. Her capture was due to the fact that her train pulled out just a few minutes before tory ward for safe keeping. One night about a month ago she escaped about midnight, and has not been seen since. An investigation revealed the fact that she had a key for the door of her room. She was supposed to have climbed out over the transom into the corridor, but this seems impossible for a woman to accomplish. That someone opened the door for her there is reawas fixed at midnight. It was quite evident that she had outside assistance.

These are not the only sensational escapes that have been reported from his building. Before Dr. English took charge a dangerous murderer named White, and another homicide, got out of "murderers' row" in the same mysterious fashion. They got away about noon one autumn day, and covered themselves with leaves until night. Then they found they were so weak from long confinement they could not walk out of the grounds.

No Night Watch.

The fact that no night watch kept on these wards is another point that will be looked into in the investigation. It was a well-known fact that Moir had twice come within an ace of getting away during the night, notwithstanding the precautions that were taken to hold him. Yet Moir and the other murderers on the ward were left to themselves from 10 o'clock at night until 5:30 in the morning. For months past the asylum authorities have been under the impression that Moir has been in constant communication with bellar Box out of the friends in London, and for this reason the negligence in not keeping a watch on him during the hours of the night seems all the more glaring.

The Summer Frock.

Of sheer, cool-looking little frocks for afternoon and evening, there is no end. A majority of these frocks are short, even when intended primarily for evening wear. At its best the dainty short frock of sheer stuff is altogether charming, and the simplest of these little frocks in linen, batiste, etamine, ninon, etc., are the most attractive. Many of the daintiest have trimming at all on the soft, full skirts, save a group of shirred cording or tucking holding the fullness in at the botom. Weights are usually atached to these cordings to draw the upper skirt down snugly; for fullness billowing put above and hooped in beween is a distressing sight. The bodice of one of these shirred or corded skirts often a simple, full, little affair, with cord about neck and shoulders, and on the sleeves, and with merely some flat neck finish, and cuff of heavy lace, such as Venise or Irish.

The Successful Canner.

Success in the canning or preserving of fruits, says Good Housekeeping, depends upon three things: First, upon the careful selection and picking over of the fruit. Insect or worm infected fruit is not safe; overripe fruit or that which shows signs of decay should not be eaten or canned. The fruit should be of uniform ripeness and free from blemish.

Second, upon complete sterilization not only of fruit, but all jars, cans, and utensils to be used in the process. Any material or utensil will be more surely sterilized if placed at first in cold water and then brought to a boil, than if placed immediately in boiling water. Nearly all the failure in the keeping of fruits comes either from careless handling or an insufficient amount of heat being used at the out-

Third, the cans must be perfect, the rubbers new, and they must be filled to their utmost capacity before sealing. The canning process, however applied, has two simple objects in view; one to dispose of the bacteria already present in the food—and this is done by the use of sufficient heat to destroy them and their spores: next, to prevent access of all other This must be accomplished by sterilization of all jars and utensils and the forming of a vacuum in

William Tillinghast Eldridge.

Valter stood between us, looking from one to the other in doubt. He felt that Kurlmurt was the one to question, and did not understand my interference.
"I took good pains that no one followed me here," he said. "I went clean about by the old town from the Wurtsmurton, and came onto the grounds along the shore by the lake. No one followed me, I am sure. I nodded with satisfaction. It was orth something to know we had a fellow of brains to deal with.

"And now," I asked, studying the plans again, "what's the best way into the castle?" the castle?"
"There is, sir, in the wall, a small gate.

And the gate, is it locked?" The fellow's answers and suggestions were so pat that I looked at hin

"You've a good head on those shoulders of yours, Valter. Thank you, sir. "We'll have to find a better use for your wits than tending the prime minis ter's castle." and then started to say something, but stopped while a bit of a smile played 'Well?" I asked. "Nothing, sir."

"We'll welcome the humor just now."

"Well, sir, I was only thinking I'd have to find something else after I open the gate."
We all joined him in his mirth, and it was a relief to feel we could laugh again.

"Well," I said, looking at Karl, "how is ten tonight for you?"
"It will be dark then," Karl answered.
"We'll expect the gate open at ten,
then," I said, turning to Valter, "and a good supply of wine to those fellows of Heinrich's when you serve them you can find the gate by the great pipe."

"And what may that be?" I inquired.
"The moat drains off through a pipe into the lake. There's quite a bit water running now, for the moat is full, as the springs on the mountain are running quite strong." "The falling water from the pipe then

"Don't fail us," Karl added.

The fellow was half way to the door, but he stopped at Karl's words and faced us.

"I'm in Duke Zergald's service, your Grace, but—he, sir—my father—it was he who had him shot, sir, and her Highness was kind to my mother then, very kind Kurlmurt nodded his head at the remembrance.

The others of us dropped our eyes quickly from the fellow's face.

"Ten o'clock, sir," he said in a new tone, and was gone.

CHAPTER XXVII. When the door closed on Valter we were silent for an instant, each busy with his thoughts.

I had no doubt now that the fellow would serve us, for the look on his face as he spoke of his father's death and of the princess's kindness to his mother told the feeling in his heart.
"Well?" Karl demanded, turning me.

The others drew their chairs closer and with the rough outline of the castle before us, we laid our plans for her rescue,
"You and I," I said, speaking to Karl,
"we'll get a boat, cross to the castle, and once inside it should be easy."

I hesitated and looked at Kurlmurt. "As you decide," he said.
"I let harm come to her," the poor fellow pleaded; "let me help in her res cue."

"Very well," I agreed. "The three of us will go, while you, sir," I sald, turning to Kurlmurt, "might go to Zergald and acquaint him with the princess's disappearance. It may serve to put him off his guard." "A peaceful part for me," Kurlmurt ob-

"It will help if Zergald but feels do not suspect him of having had hand in the matter. If we can slip princess out before any one is the wiser Then you can have the satisfaction of calling upon Zergald again and advise him of your niece's recovery—say, after being lost in the woods over night." Kurlmurt nodded and chuckled grimly at the humor of the thing, should we

"We can get a boat at the inn," Karl said.
"But we must be on the watch that Preserved fruits are those in which equal weights of prepared fruit and sugar are used; canned fruits are those in which little or no sugar is employed, and the cooking is merely sufficient to sterilize. In the former to hold their tongues," Kurimurt said,

"By morning her Highness will be over night. Next morning drain syrup from rind, bring to boiling point, and here, and then the danger will be over. We can say she was detained or stopped pour again over rind. Repeat process daily for a week, when rind should be somewhere."

"Her Highness can make some cuse," Karl said. "And now you'd best put your anger in your pocket," I advised, turning to Kurlmurt, "and call upon Zergald, while we take to horse and again ride to the spot where she was captured. From there we'll go across country, as if we were searching for her. Thus, if Zerquart of vinegar allow three pounds of gald is keeping an eye on our move-ments we'll make him feel we have no idea her Highness is in his castle."

We secured fresh mounts and went about the task of helping throw sand in Zergald's eyes. Late in the afternoon we rode back to the castle, where, leaving Karl and Barnsmurk, I went on to the inn.

The blood raced through my veins at thing to be done, and yet no more had the idea come than the danger in it was apparent. Suppose we did? No doubt we would remote and secret dungeon.

Truly there seemed but one thing to do. She had been carried off by a quick and sudden attack; a like method alone agony I went through that day I have no heart to set down here. One scheme, one thought, one mad dream came rushing in upon me, only to be followed by another equally wild. A man waiting his execution could hardly have found the minutes so long and yet so The one solace in the whole day was the remembrance of the word brought by Valter from the princess herself, that no harm had been done her. And vet even with that assurance fear gripped my heart as I pictured a thousand and one insults inflicted upon her by that villain Heinrich. And then the deep cunning of the man came to my mind as a guarantee of her safety.

If Zergald's plans should fail even at eleventh hour, he would prefer to stand well with her Highness. Therefore, beyond a doubt, he would do her all favor possible, make her captivity as easy as he could, and all the time explain most plausibly that he was carrying out Zerplausibly that he was carrying out Zer-gald's order because he must, but doing it himself to assure her greater safety.

The more I thought on it, the more certain I was that such would be his course. In fact, I had every reason to pelieve that already the princess felt inmade her feel he had done, yet the while apparently trying to conceal th a clever rogue, and I gave him full credit for his cunning. And while I did so and had a consolation in the thought that it meant her greater safety, I rebelled that she should be thrown in contact with such a man. Woe unto Heinrich of Vankle if he should show fight. Karl, Barnsmurk, and myself he stood in danger of faring ill, I heard the half hour strike, and suddenly with the deep tone of the cathedral clock that floated solemnly and clear to my ear came the thought that in three days I must be gone.

"In three days I must be gone," I said aloud, and then, because those days were likely to be busy ones, I turned to my luggage and began to pack my bags.

I dressed myself in my riding breeches boots, a light outing shirt and a short coat, as the best I had with me for active work, or a fight, and as I finally closed my largest bag I found the clock pointing to a few minutes before nine.
It was, therefore, nearly time for Karl and Barnsmurk to arrive, and I decided to go down to the lake and wait for them at the boat landing.

I picked up my cap, dropped my revolver into my pocket with the extra cartridges, and slipping my sword under my arm, went out on the balcony, A light breeze was blowing across the water, and the lap of the waves on the pebbled beach came like soft music to my ears. Out across, on the farther side of the lake, lights burned in Zer-gald's castle. They had been there the gald's castle. They had been there night before, but now they shone beacon.

Under one of those lights she, dearer to me than all else, dearer than life itself, sat. Was she counting on Karl or on Kurlmurt or on John Converse to lead the rescue? Was she longing for the voice of one of us, and for which voice did she long the most?

Bad thoughts for a map who has to he voice of the of us, and voice did she long the most?

Bad thoughts for a man who has to lead an expedition such as we had planned. Bad thoughts, and I closed my have the true feeling, because thus could not keep back the thought it must be closed not only work of that night, but for all time. Another bad thought! So I shrugged my other bad thought! So I shrugged my shoulders and started down the path to the lake.
Suddenly on my right hand I heard a faint noise, and instinctively sprang behind a bush on the left as a huge club came crashing through the air where had stood.

So, thought I, as I crouched low, my ears alert, the fight is to be begun on this side of the lake. I had my revolver out, though I did not wish to use it. For a moment no sound came to me, and then, thinking perhaps I could draw their cover, I uttered as heartfelt a groan as I could muster.

"You landed him," a voice said instantly, so near that I almost started.

"Be careful," a second cautioned.

I groaned again.

FREE SHAVES TO BE GIVEN GROOMS

A Massachusetts Town Offers Many Other Marriage Inducements.

Wareham, Mass., Aug. 16. - The merchants of this ambitious Cape Cod town, desiring to increase its fame and population, present and prospective, offer extraordinary inducements to sweethearts to marry here. The merchants could offer no more, save to marry the ladies themselves, and the Massachusetts law against bigamy

Of course certain conditions are attached to these generous propositions: the chief is that the married couple must reside here. Wareham is altruistic, but it does not propose to help to add to the population of Boston or any other Massachusetts town. It is stipulated, too, that the prospective bride and bridegroom must prove their good character; that he must be between 21 and 59 years of age, and she between 19 and 49. It will be seen that Dr. Osler and his theories have a certain weight here. These are some of the marriage inducements offered by Wareham: A free wedding, including marriage icense and clergyman's services. Bass soloist to sing "I'm Glad I'm Married" at the ceremony. Church deacons to pass the hat for collection for the wedded pair's bene-

Brass band to play the wedding march and other appropriate music. Bridal dinner.

Bridal presents, mostly useful artiles for furnishing a home, particularly the nursery. Motor launch for the honeymoon

Steady employment for the brideroom. Employment for the bride every autumn at screening cranberries if she desires it.

Four physicians to give free services at intervals. Lawyer to give free legal advice on any subject except divorce. Free shaves for the bridegroom, his clothes pressed without charge-not by his wife, but by a tailor. Many Befooled by Speculation He Tells Conference.

THE JACKSON MATTER

Superintendent Great Gathering at Victoria.

Victoria, B. C., Aug. 15.-The Methdist General Conference was formally opened today with General Superintendent Carman's address. Some of the points made by Dr. Carman were as follows:

But One Anxiety. "I have but one anxiety concerning our Methodism. It is that we be saved from worldliness and spiritual sloth demand is that "Fruit-a-tives" is and indifference, and all their cononly medicine in the world made sequences in every form, shape, measof fruit, and is the only remedy that ure and degree. Herein, possibly, is our greatest present danger: we are becoming wealthy, and may easily lose the vigor and tension of spiritual life and the voice and tone of aggressive evangelism. We have time for vain jangling and oppositions of science, falsely so called. It is very easy to slacken up our push and pace; be satisfied with our attainments and sink into the lap of formalism and naturalism and of worldly comfort and At such times and under such conditions novelties are preached for the well-proven doctrines of converting grace and sanctifying power. The eye of the church is dimmed and her arm is paralyzed. There is no strength in her movements, or victory in her march. Even good men are dazzled with the glitter of theories and befooled with empty speculation. The grey solidity and stern simplicity of the truth have no charms for their intoxicated understanding. The tendency, current and force in the spiritual life of our humanity, left to itself, is ever downward and not upward, as some do vainly and erroneously teach. They build up conjecture, assumption and human art and device to our utter undoing. This is heathenism; this and this alone in the Christhe paganism of the nations.

Byron Does Some Wrong Work Manager of the Tigers Says and Row Starts With Manager Dunn.

fans Threaten To Do Rough Work, and Police Are Called To Protect Diamond King.

Baltimore, Md., Aug. 15 .- Today's Baltimore and Rochester game ended in a row and resulted in Umpire Byron forfeiting the game to Rochester, while the Baltimore players were at the bat in their half of the eighth inning. Byron called Walsh out on strikes while the latter was standing on the plate, and McConnell was forced to pitch wide so as not to hit the batter. In the eighth he called strikes on Slagle while the little centre fielder was out of the box rubbing his hands in the dust. Dunn protested and Byron pulled his watch, and after waiting two minutes forfeited the game. But for the police protection he would have been roughly handled by the spectators. The game itself was a hard-hitting affair, the Bronchos scoring five runs in the fourth inning on five singles and a base fourth inning on five singles and a base on bails. Russell was knocked off the slab in the fourth. The score:

CHAMPS RALLY IN NINTH

But Johnson Prevents a Tied Score-Tigers Bunch Hits in Only One Round.

Washington, Aug. 15 .- The chances for the Nationals heading the second division when the American League season ends is much better tonight than that of the Tigers leading the league, and it is all due to Walter Johnson. He was in the box for McAleer's men this afternoon and his great work in the pinches enabled the Nationals to pull out a viccnabled the Nationals to pull out a victory from three Tiger recruit twirlers. The defeat was enough to take the heart out of the Tigers and kill all the hopes they ever had of repeating the pennant winnings. They were counting on a great record on the eastern invasion started today to put them up near the Athletics. They were also counting on starting the trip by crushing the Na-Athletics. EUROPE'S COLD SUMMER

The Wine Harvest of France Will Be Greatly Reduced.

London, Aug. 15.-Europe generally has suffered from a cold, wet summer. The wine harvest in France will consequently, so far as can now be estimated, fall short by about 20,000 hectoliters. M. Goulet, president of the Syndical Chamber of Wholesale Wine and Spirit Merchants of Paris, says:

"Bordeaux vineyards are affected to the extent of 50 per cent; lower Burgundy will yield nothing. In the Yonne there will be no gathering in at all, and the daughters of small proprietors. are being reduced to domestic service in order to live. "Chablis will yield perhaps 6,000 gal-

WESTERN FAIR WILL BE BIG SHOW "VERIBEST" OAL and

Indications Are That the Exhibition Will Be Greatest Held in London.

BRILLIANT PROGRAMME

Special Attractions Will Be of Higher Class and More Varied Than Ever Before.

The Western Fair for 1910 promises to be greater and grander than ever. In the number of exhibitors, in the extent and value of the prize list, and in the aggregation of special attractions, the old reliable exhibition, which will open Sept 9 and continue to the 17th, will be far in advance of anything ever attempted in London.

One thousand dollars in cash, together with a large number of cups and medals, have been added to the prize list for this year. The result of this is already shown in the numper of entries so far received, which more than double the number at a orresponding date last year.

There is a particularly strong demand for space in the machinery and ransportation exhibits. Many new manufacturers will exhibit this year in London for the first time. Every Why not learn a good system? Why not do it NOW? We give individual instruction and place every graduate in a available inch of space has been al ready allotted in the machinery hall, pesides which fourteen machinery exhibits have at this early date been located outside the building.

Space in Demand. The cement exhibit building is entirely filled up, and space for new entries will have to be found on the grounds adjacent to the hall. Space in the main building, familiarly known as the "Crystal Palace," is also very much in requisition, and the Western Fair Association are being sorely taxed in their endeavor to treat fairly all would-be exhibitors in monkeys will complete a full list of this department.
