Love in a Flour Mill,
OR,
The Romance of Two Loyal Hearts!

CHAPTER III.
"That is so," assented Mr. Lexham. "There is only one way of accounting for the abduction of the child," remarked Reece. "The man who stole her, who murdered Sir Mortimer, must have been something more than an ordinary burglar; I mean that he must have been a personal foe, an enemy of Sir Mortimer's, and a bitter and ruthless one."

"A very reasonable conclusion," said Mr. Lexham; "but, so far as we could discover, Sir Mortimer had no personal foes, no enemy who would go so far in his desire for revenge as to commit murder. With all his faults and vices, he was a most popular man. The whole of his past history was raked up, closely examined, and we failed to find a single human being whom we could suspect of having committed the crime."

Dexter Reece pondered in silence for a moment or two, then he said: "You are sure that the ruby was stolen?"

Mr. Lexham shrugged his shoulders. "Why, yes; as sure as one can be of a negative. The case which had held it and the other jewels was found in a small iron box which stood on a cabinet beside Mr. Mortimer's bed. He could have reached it with his hand. The key, on a bunch with others, was under his pillow. Search was made for it in every likely and unlikely place; but, as I have said, it was never found."

"Then somewhere, held by someone, is the great Desborough ruby," murmured Dexter Reece, almost to himself. "Great heaven, what a mystery!"

Mr. Lexham nodded, merely nodded, as if words were superfluous. "We'd better go to bed," he said; "they keep very early hours here, and you will have to be up betimes to-morrow."

They parted in the corridor. Reece closed his door in the quiet way which characterized all his movements. He did not begin to undress himself, but dropped into a chair, and, leaning forward with his hands supporting his sharply defined chin, gazed before him in profound reflection.

Don't Merely "Stop" a Cough
Stop the Thing that Causes It and the Cough will Stop Itself.
A cough is really one of our best friends. It warns us that there is inflammation or obstruction in a dangerous place. Therefore, when you get a bad cough don't proceed to dose yourself with a lot of drugs that merely "stop" the cough temporarily by deadening the throat nerves. Treat the cause—heat the inflamed membranes. Here is a home-made remedy that gets right at the cause and will make an obstinate cough vanish more quickly than you ever thought possible.
Put 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth) in a 16-ounce bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. This gives you 16 ounces of the most pleasant and effective remedy you ever used, at a cost of only 54 cents. No bother to prepare. Full directions with Pinex.
It heals the inflamed membranes so gently and promptly that you wonder how it does it. Also loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough and stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the persistent loose cough.
Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, rich in yuccin, and is famous the world over for its healing effect on the membranes.
To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2 1/2 ounces of Pinex," and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

tion. He was haunted, obsessed, by the story which he had heard; the glow of the great ruby seemed to dance like a mist before his eyes. The stupendous gem was—somewhere.

Of course he knew that he was not the first man by scores whose mind had been agitated by the loss of the jewel, the vague desire of finding it. He knew that some of the most astute minds must have been set on the task of its recovery. The cleverest detectives must have been employed; they had been baffled. Years had passed; the lack of any clue was more significant now than it had been at the hour of the murder, robbery. As well search for a particular pebble on a beach as hope to find the lost ruby. And yet—!

With a little gesture of contempt for the desire which was burning in him, he rose abruptly and took off his coat. As he did so, he walked towards the dressing-table and, naturally and involuntarily, glanced through the open window. The last rays of the coppery sunset, like the gleam and glow of a ruby, had vanished from the sky; the moon had risen behind the stately house, and a shaft, piercing the thin clouds, smote the lawn. As Reece's eyes rested on the streak of light, something swiftly crossed it; the form of a woman closely wrapped in a cloak, with its hood drawn over her head.

Reece at first regarded the swiftly passing figure with an amused interest. Of course it was one of the servant maids stealing out to meet her sweetheart; the hour was not late, not very much after ten, and there was nothing extraordinary in the girl keeping her rendezvous with her lover.

But suddenly, just as the girl was entering the wood, she turned her head and looked towards the house, with the evident desire to see if she were being followed; and something in the movement of the head, an indefinable grace, a certain individuality, struck Dexter Reece with a sense of familiarity; he knew that it was Evelyn Desborough. The complacent, half-contemptuous smile left his face; it flushed then grew pale; his eyes watched the wood into which she had emerged; his lips tightened. He caught up a Norfolk jacket and a cap, slipped them on, and moved swiftly towards the door. But there, with his hand on the handle, he hesitated.

For Dexter Reece was neither a villain nor a dishonourable man—at that time; and he shrank instinctively from playing the spy on his host's daughter. The man, like most of us, was a strange compound; his experience of life was a hard and somewhat bitter one. It is not necessary to go into its details; suffice it that, like a great many other men, he had had to fight his way in the world alone and unaided; and it may be safely said that no man can go through this battle without mental and physical scars.

Dexter Reece had been fighting for his very existence, had struggled from sheer poverty—he had spent his boyhood in a charitable institution, an orphanage—into his present position, an exceedingly precarious one, and one in which he gained a bare living. The man was ambitious, and always on the watch for some opportunity of improving his condition; he was possessed of extraordinary mental acuteness, was capable of a dogged persistence in gaining his own ends, and was absolutely unscrupulous in seizing on anything which would turn to his advantage. Not a villain yet, but simply a man with a capacity for villainy lying dormant within him.

To-night his mind was stirred and excited by the tragic story which the old lawyer had related; he seemed to have plunged into a region of mystery; the house seemed throbbing with it. A problem had been presented to his acute mind, and he was literally aching and fretting with the desire to solve it. And now, here was the daughter of the house stealing out, evidently to keep an appointment! It was just possible that her action was connected with the mystery, the murder, the abduction of Sir Mortimer's child, the theft of the great ruby. The temptation to follow her and gain some clue would have been strong to most men; Dexter

You're Bilious! Let "Cascarets" Liven Liver and Bowels

Don't stay headachy, constipated, sick, with bad breath and stomach sour.

Get a 10-cent box now. You men and women who can't get feeling right—who have headache, coated tongue, bad taste and foul breath, dizziness, can't sleep, are bilious, nervous and upset, bothered with a sick, gassy, disordered stomach, or have a bad cold. Are you keeping your bowels clean with Cascarets, or merely forcing a passageway every few days with salts, cathartic pills or castor oil? Cascarets work while you sleep; cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested, fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box from any drug store will keep your stomach sweet, liver and bowels regular, and head clear for months. Don't forget the children. They love Cascarets because they taste good—never gripe or sicken. Reece, after a moment's resitation, found it irresistible. He opened the door noiselessly, paused a moment to look up and down the corridor and listen, then stole down the stairs. He had his excuse ready if he were met by one of the household; he would say that he was going down for something he had left in the smoking-room. But, as Mr. Lexham had said, they kept early hours at Thorden, and he reached the hall unseen; his sharp eyes, which nothing, however trivial, escaped, had noticed a small door at the garden end of the hall leading to the terrace. It was locked and heavily bolted; but slowly and carefully he unfastened it, and, stepping out as carefully, closed it behind him.

He found himself at the end of the terrace, which was in the shadow; he dropped over the stone rail into some shrubs, and, completely protected from observation by them, he followed their course round the lawn and gained the park. Here he paused to listen, but there was no sound of an opening window or door; he had not been seen. He made his way through the trees in the direction of the spot in which Evelyn Desborough had disappeared from his view; and, though he went cautiously through the underwood, he did not slink; for he knew that he might be met or seen by Evelyn or the person she was going to meet, and that he would have to account for his presence by asserting that he could not sleep, and had come out for a stroll in the cool air.

Every now and then he stopped to listen, but he could hear nothing, no sound of footsteps or voices, and his conscience—perhaps his fear of discovery—made itself felt, and he was actually about to return to the house when the scent of a cigarette was

WOMEN FROM 45 to 55 TESTIFY

To the Merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound during Change of Life.

Westbrook, Me. — "I was passing through the Change of Life and had pains in my back and side and was so weak I could hardly do my housework. I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it has done me a lot of good. I will recommend your medicine to my friends and give you permission to publish my testimonial." — Mrs. LAWRENCE MARTIN, 12 King St., Westbrook, Maine.

Manston, Wis. — "At the Change of Life I suffered with pains in my back and joints until I could not stand. I also had night-sweats so that the sheets would be wet. I tried other medicine but got no relief. After taking one bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I began to improve and I continued its use for six months. The pains left me, the night-sweats and hot flashes grew less, and in one year I was a different woman. I know I have to thank you for my continued good health ever since." — Mrs. M. J. BROWNELL, Manston, Wis.

The success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, is unparalleled in such cases. If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidentially) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

wanted towards him. He was all keenness again in a moment; crouching low, he made a circular progress towards the spot from which the cigarette smoke came, and suddenly found himself face to face with an old rustic summer-house. Fortunately for him, he had arrived at the back of it, and so was not seen by a young man who was pacing up and down the front.

Dexter Reece lowered himself to the ground until he was in a lying position, and scanned the young man keenly. He was a splendid specimen of manhood—tall, broad-shouldered, and graceful. As he turned, Reece saw the young fellow's face plainly, and noticed it was a singularly handsome one; but it was the expression more than the masculine beauty of the features and outline which instantly impressed Dexter Reece—an expression at once reckless, devil-may-care, and good-humoured.

The eyes were a dark grey, bold, courageous eyes to audacity, yet they were neither hard nor stern; the lips, clean-shaven, spoke of courage and audacity as plainly as did the eyes; but an easy, good-tempered smile seemed to lurk about their corners, and they were pleasantly curved at this moment, as their owner hummed an air from one of the latest of the musical comedies. He wore a long, very loose overcoat and a soft-brimmed hat, which, though the brim was turned down all round, was carelessly set on the back of his head and revealed the handsome face.

At the first moment of his scrutiny Dexter Reece knew who the young man was, for he noted the likeness in the devil-may-care face to the Desborough family portraits. It must be Sir Reginald's only son Ronald, of whom Mr. Lexham had spoken.

Reece's sharp ears caught the sound of a rustling in the brake, and a moment or two afterwards Evelyn Desborough glided forward, and, with a faint cry of joy and apprehension at the sight of the tall figure, threw herself into her brother's arms.

CHAPTER IV.

"Ronnie!" she gasped, pressing him to her lovingly. "Oh, Ronnie, why have you come?"

Ronald Desborough took her head in his hands, put the hair from her forehead, kissed her, and laughed reassuringly.

"It's all right, Evie!" he said, in a frank, careless voice, the kind of voice which has a smile in it, as the French say. "Don't be frightened. Why, you're trembling like a mouse. But, of course, you are frightened, having to steal out of the house like a thief in the night; it's deuced rough on you, and I ought to be ashamed of myself for asking you to come."

"No, no!" she breathed. "Of course, I would come. I should have been here some minutes before this, but I thought I heard a sound in the wood, and I lingered amongst the trees to listen. Are you sure you haven't been seen, Ronnie? Are you quite sure?"

He laughed the easy, confident laugh of the man to whom fear is a stranger, whose nerves are of steel.

"Quite sure. Who is there to see me? I dodged the keeper; he's at the other end of the wood. Don't tremble, Kiddie, or I shall be sorry that I asked you to come. But I couldn't go away without seeing you once more—"

"Oh, Ronnie!" she broke in anxiously. "There's some fresh trouble, I know there is! Tell me, Ronnie dear; tell me quickly. Is it anything very serious this time?"

He shrugged his shoulders, smiled down at her, and drew her cloak, which had come apart, across the bosom of her evening dress.

"Well, it is rather curious, I'm afraid, Evie. There! don't start, and don't cry out; we may be heard."

Household Notes.

Tippet shoulder capes of velvet are among the old-fashioned features we may expect to see. Soft crushed hats of velvet may be finished by a hand of fur fitting close against the hair. Serge and gabardine have been adopted by Paris for the walking and general morning wear suit. Shoulder "tippets" or little capes, set in at the top of the sleeves and cut to ripple, are quite bewitching.

The Am. Novel of 1915.

MICHAEL O'HALLORHAN by Gene Stratton Porter.

This is the story of Mickey the newsboy and his ward-pencher, whom he found with a crippled back and cried for until she was cured. It tells of Mickey's part in the romance of Douglas Bruce and Leslie Weston; and of the kindness of Peter Harding and his wife to peacher, and finally of Mickey's own love story with the wife he found years before. The book possesses, like all of the author's works, a deep feeling for nature, the charm of the woods, the flowers and all growing things. Paper 65c.; cloth 90c. Not a dull page in all the 500 pages.

BRITISH HOSPITAL SHIP SUNK.
 LONDON, Nov. 17.
 The British hospital ship Anglia was sunk by a mine in the English Channel to-day. Three hundred men were saved out of a total of 385. The official statement says: "It is said that thirteen officers and 372 men were on board the Anglia and that 296 had been saved. The Anglia was a merchantman, which was taken over by the British Admiralty after the opening of the war. She was refitted as a hospital ship and was commissioned in August of last year. There are four British steamships named Anglia. The one converted into the hospital ship probably is the former London and North Western railway steamer. She was 1,582 tons gross, 323 feet long and built in 1900 at Dumbarton. The other three steamers are small vessels. At the time she was commissioned the staff was in charge of Commander Oscar V. de Salge, retired."
2,000 SERBIANS CAPTURED.
 BERLIN, Nov. 17.
 The attempts of the Serbians to check the Austro-German drive have again failed, the War Office announced to-day. More than 2,000 Serbians were captured yesterday.
THE SERBIAN ARMY.
 LONDON, Nov. 17.
 The fate of the Serbian army may be only a matter of hours. Monastir is reported to be in such a perilous position that the consular officials have departed from the city.
ITALY AND THE BALKANS.
 ROME, Nov. 17.
 (Delayed in transmission.)—Italy, according to a statement obtained from a reliable source, will not join the Entente Allies at Salonika. Supposed indications concerning an Italian expedition in Albania, it is said, are purposely being allowed to circulate in order to divert attention from Italy's real object. Preparations are in progress to send troops to Salonika. It is said now that the Italian General Staff is only waiting for an opportunity to detach the necessary forces. These troops, it is understood, will become available now that the campaign has obtained control of the plateau dominating Gorizia, and, as a result, have advanced through the Carso region. The changed conditions are due to the winter campaign.
DEMONSTRATION OF SYMPATHY.
 PARIS, Nov. 17.
 The arrival of Denis Cochin, the French Cabinet Minister, last evening at Athens, on a special mission, gave rise to an enthusiastic demonstration of sympathy for France, that lasted from 11 o'clock at night to an early hour this morning. According to a Havas Agency despatch from Athens a representative of Premier Skoufas, disbeliever of the Mayor of Athens were at the station with the French Minister with members of the Legation to greet M. Cochin. The despatch adds that while the immense throng waited outside, and lined the streets all along the route to the hotel, throughout his progress to his stopping place the French Cabinet Minister was the object of a great ovation. After the demonstration incident and the minister's passage, a column of citizens had been spontaneously formed. They marched to the hotel and greeted M. Cochin with wildest cheering when he showed himself on the balcony. The correspondent states that the crowd afterwards marched to the French Legation, singing the Marseillaise, while nearly all night the streets were animated by enthusiastic crowds acclaiming France.

BALKAN SITUATION CRITICAL.
 PARIS, Nov. 17.
 Our expedition to the Balkans is reaching a critical stage, telegraphs the correspondent at Salonika to the Journal, under date of Sunday. He adds: Notwithstanding appeals by competent personalities, our reinforcements are not anything like the number required. Our enemies have decided to nip in the bud, at any cost, our offensive in the east, and are prepared to adopt any means to obtain the necessary assistance. We hope that this formula is well understood. Serbian resistance is weakening daily. The defenders of the Buna Pass will soon be surrounded, and the road from Britevo to Monastir will then be thrown wide open to the Bulgarians. Hosts of Austro-Germans are hurrying southward, and sending detachments ahead by forced marches on all available roads. Do not expect to find a second Belgium. Greece will not hesitate to permit passage by the enemy through her territory, as she now perceives that we must fight ourselves alone and unaided against the triple attack of Germans, Bulgarians and Turks, and the enemy's plan being carried out, may be realized rapidly. The German fleet of submarines in the Mediterranean has just been tripled. I advance nothing which I am not absolutely sure. We must be prepared for any news, even the most unexpected; even that which seems crazier. We must have reinforcements in large numbers at once, or re-embark while there is yet time.

Amusements.
EXPLOITS OF ELAINE CHARM EVERYONE.
 The Exploits of Elaine was the great attraction at the Nickel Theatre yesterday and the building was crowded both afternoon and evening with old and young patrons all anxious to see this remarkable story; as was expected it was even more sensational than the opening chapter and it was very closely followed. The plot is most sensational and each succeeding action is more thrilling than the other. Nothing so attractive has ever been presented in St. John's, and the large audiences present yesterday were charmed. "The Exploits of Elaine" are the talk of the town to-day. All who saw it are asking their friends if they were there. It will be repeated to-day and is sure to draw crowded houses.

"IRELAND IS IRELAND TO ME." AT THE CRESCENT.
 Mr. Dan Delmar sings "Ireland is Ireland to Me," at the Crescent Picture Palace to-day. Mr. Delmar made a big hit with his song yesterday. Go to-day and hear him. The picture programme is a fine one comprising a two reel comedy drama: "The Girl and the Explorer." A French-Canadian feature: "The Danes at Alock Fontaine's." A domestic melo-drama: "The Human Investment," and a great comedy: "Cornelius and the Wild Man." Don't miss seeing this great show. On to-morrow the Crescent presents a two reel Oriental mystic feature: "The Strange Case of Princess Khan" and a Broncho Billy drama.

Wedding Bells.
CONNORS—GLASGOW.
 On Tuesday, November 16th, at the Presbytery of St. Joseph's, Signal Hill Road, the Rev. Dr. Kitchen united in Holy Matrimony, Katherine Connors, daughter of Mr. Matthew Connors, of Pouch Cove, to Mr. H. Burton Glasgow, Chief Steward of the S.S. Adventure, and son of the late Frederick J. Glasgow, of St. John, N.B. The bride was neatly gowned in cream serge trimmed with marie silk with hat-to match, and carried a bouquet of Brides' Roses and Lilies of the Valley. The bridesmaid was the sister of the groom who was nicely gowned in white silk with hat to match. The cousin of the bride supported the groom. After the ceremony supper was served at the groom's residence, Power Avenue, where the dining-room was tastefully decorated with roses and ferns. The bride and groom were the recipients of many beautiful and costly gifts which are too numerous to mention. After the supper the bride and groom drove to their residence, 1018 Military Road, where they will reside.
"Swank."
 "Swank," a slang term, which has been permanently installed in our vocabulary, is a wonderful expressive word.
 In any form it stands for that which is odious, so one need not be surprised to hear that the word is of German origin.
 Yet in different parts of England the phrase has different interpretations from the commonly accepted idea of "putting on side." This latter and most popular conception was common in the West of England long before Londoners took it into themselves.
 Inferior beer is known as "swank" in many parts of the country, and in the North of Ireland a miserable, under-fed-looking individual is known as a "swanker."
 Excess was anyone who drinks to excess has the unflattering epithet of "swank" thrown at him, while in Yorkshire one who eats not wisely, but too well, is known as a "swanker."
 Yorkshire uses it, too, in a flattering sense to describe a lusty lad or a strapping girl, or anything fashioned on big lines, such as a house, or a tree.

MUSICAL COMEDY AND SCENE FROM ROMEO AND JULIET.
 At Rossie's there is an extra bill to-night. Carroll and Ellor in a musical comedy sketch entitled "The Mistress and the Maid." Mr. Carroll the world's greatest female impersonator will wear one of his most magnificent costumes, real point lace. The singing and dancing of Miss Ellor was loudly applauded. To-night Miss Ellor will give a scene from Romeo and Juliet, also a correct imitation of Miss Julia Marlow. Don't fail to see the best picture ever presented in St. John's, entitled "The Tear that Buried," in two parts with Lillian Gish in the leading role. It's a masterpiece; another great feature "Beppo." Don't miss this wonderful show.

Ladies' Costumes Fall--1915--Styles.

Was there ever a more fickle lady than Dame Fashion? She is always making changes, and this season has surely surpassed herself.

There is a more decided change in this Fall's styles than has been known for many seasons. While materials are similar, Serges, Gabardines, Tweeds, Cord, etc., the designs are absolutely unlike any of their predecessors. Coats are of many styles, chiefly a la militaire, with high collars, snug-fitting sleeves, and the entire coat in some instances is beautifully braided. Skirts are much fuller, both pleated and gored, and are worn very short.

As descriptions are quite impossible, we can only say that we carry the largest and smartest line of Ladies' Costumes in the city.

Poor Half Blind Folks.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

"Did you enjoy the services?" we asked a neighbor who had been to a church where both the music and the preaching are supposed to be unusually fine. "My dear," she said, impressively, "I can't see why people talk so much about that singing. Why there was one of the women who flatted over and over again. I could hear her above all the rest. It spoiled the whole service."

And that was all she had to say of a service which I have heard many discriminating people speak of as unusually inspiring and beautiful.

A Flatted Note Was All She Brought Home.

That was all she brought home! We showed a vase which we acquired at rather a bargain to a friend. It is a cool green thing of exquisite shape. Both the color and lines are like poetry, or perhaps I should say music, since architecture is frozen music.

"There's a little scratch on it, isn't there?" she said.

All she saw was that scratch!

She Hade A Man.

Among my most honored friends is a girl who married a man who was strongly inclined to dissipation. She has had not only that to contend with, but her own physical frailness and a serious illness on his part which left her the sole support of the family for over a year. Out of the slenderest resources she created a little home, out of her frail strength she earned a living for the two of them, and out of a dissipated and discouraged wreck by sheer force of courage and love and faith she has made a man—and a man who is an asset to the community.

We were speaking of this woman the other day and the Authorman's wife said, "Well, I hope she's got some more furniture. I never saw such a bare place as her house, and I hope she'll spend more time on her housekeeping. I never saw such a dirty front hall. I think she tried to do too much."

A Dirty Front Hall Hid Everything Else From Her.

Just think, all she could see in that house which this woman's sweet presence and hospitality make bright to most people was the scantiness of furniture! And all the wonderful things that this woman has done are hidden from her by a dirty front hall!

"How could she?" said Molly, after the Authorman's wife had gone. Her voice trembled, her eyes were half full of tears. You see she also loves and honours the girl who made a man.

"I just hate her!"

The Lady-who-always-knows-some-how laid a gentle hand on Molly's clenched one. "Don't hate her," she said. "Pity her. No one needs pity more than those people who can only see the mean and ugly things in life."

What Are You Doing for that Eczema?

"Nothing; I've about given up trying to cure it."

"That is not wise. Do as I did and you will probably be cured in a short time. I used Zylex and Zylex Soap with it and my Eczema began to improve at once. A couple of boxes cured. You can get Zylex at your druggists."

German Victrix.

The puzzle of the German mind ever grows. Recent disclosures leave us hopelessly struggling with the question whether the far famed Teutonic sense of humor has hatched out an "unseasonable epidemic or whether the "Tritschke bacillus has developed a fit of national delirium. The outgivings of eight leading newspapers of the Empire, cabled from Berlin to the New York Sun, read to American eyes like samples of madcap irony devised by enemies of the Fatherland to bring ridicule and discredit upon its hopes. Yet it would seem these things are thought out seriously, printed seriously and intended to be taken seriously not only by Germans but by the world at large. Strangest of all, surprise will be expressed by Germans at the fact that neutral opinion is almost universally unsympathetic if not hostile to Germany.

Auto-intoxicated by the idea of the Serbian drive and the parade to Constantinople, the German press has taken up with jubilation the topic not of peace but of "definite victory." It is already rearranging the world. This is to be effected with true Prussian modesty and moderation. The Reinisch-Westfalsche Zeitung obligingly outlines the new distribution of the earth:

Austria to annex the greater part of Serbia; Belgium to become definitely German, with the exception of a small corner, which Holland will be allowed to occupy.

France to be deprived of her fortified places.

Russia to lose Finland, the Baltic provinces, Bessarabia, Poland, the Crimea and portions of the Caucasus.

England must abandon her Mediterranean possessions as well as Egypt and practically all of her colonies.

India to become a semi-independent State under German protection.

The penalty to be inflicted on poor old Uncle Sam is not specified. Perhaps the surrender of Alaska, the Philippines, Guam, our Samoan possessions, Porto Rico and the control of the Panama Canal may suffice and we shall not be asked to relinquish Florida, Long Island and Maine. We hope for the best.

The strange thing is that this felicitation should be made just at the present time when, really, nothing seems to be going very well with Germany. Take the newspapers from Sunday to to-day. We find that the Balkan enterprise advances at a rate of less than two miles a day, while France and England are throwing tens of thousands of men into this theatre of war and Russia will join in next week. We find that Russia is holding back in one region and beating her back in another. We find Germany dashing wildly against the Franco-British lines in the west to recoup her recent defeats with no results save terrible losses of men. We find Italy at last making substantial advances. We find British submarines stopping Germany's supplies from Sweden and sinking her cruisers in the Baltic. We find Germany cutting off meat supplies for her population two days a week. We are told that her soldiers are no longer well fed. We are told she can no longer find men to continue her activity on all the war fronts.

There is something strange certainly in the psychology which selects this conjuncture for a defiance of the universe so brutal as to stimulate the enemy to even greater efforts than ever before, lest by any chance the dire threats so ferociously uttered should come within the possibility of realization.—American paper.

PREMIER'S SPEECH FORESHADOWED.
LONDON, To-day.
The British Minister in France fore-shadowed the Premier's speech. Developments in the Balkan Peninsula perhaps hastened meeting.

ALLIED WAR COUNCIL.
PARIS, To-day.
The Allied War Council as the outcome of the present situation which, from the Entente Allies view point, is disquieting, may weigh heavily with Greek Government in deciding on Greece's final attitude. A quartette of British statesmen forms the war council recently appointed by Asquith, with Sir Edward Grey taking the place of Andrew Bonar Law, Secretary for Colonies, on H. McKenna, Chancellor of the Exchequer, fifth member of the war council, will be the leader in the Commissions during Asquith's absence.

MUST OBTAIN PERMISSION.
LONDON, To-day.
An Order-in-Council will shortly be issued declaring that during the continuance of war all Britishers of military age desiring to leave the United Kingdom, even on a trip, must obtain special permission, this permission will not be given without good cause.

TWO STEAMERS SUNK.
LONDON, To-day.
The steamer Lusitania of London has been sunk, crew landed. The Lusitania was 1834 tons, built in 1903. The British steamer Trenchless, sunk; the Trenchless was a vessel of 1535 tons, built in 1906.

FRENCH REPORT.
PARIS, To-day.
(Official).—The French War Office tonight: Around Loos, Aligo, Algrea and Sochez, cannonading has been very violent from both sides. Against a wood south of Faye, Sochez and Perrone we concentrated an effective fire; in Champagne region at Navrin Farm near Tathure artillery action is still sustained. In Argonne we exploded two series of mines which destroyed the German trenches to a considerable extent. Army of East, November 14, Bulgarians abandoned their attacks against our left bank of Gerna, west of Krivokak, they withdrew to Archangel Heights, north of village Cievea, leaving behind many bodies, after three days fighting the Bulgarians have lost four thousand men, our losses are slight. To the north of Rabrovo, we bombarded the enemy railway which was proceeding in the direction of the Bulgarian town of Strumitsa.

BRITISH STEAMER ESCAPES.
COPENHAGEN, To-day.
The British steamer Thelma's departure from Trelleborg, Sweden, where she had been lying since the beginning of the war, was marked by an exciting naval adventure in which the vessel escaped capture by a German destroyer through the assistance rendered by the Swedish torpedo boat Pollux. On Tuesday, when south of Landskrona, sixteen miles northeast of Copenhagen, the Thelma was pursued by the German destroyer U-122 into Swedish territory waters; while the Germans were in the act of boarding, the Pollux forced them to return to their boat and running between the vessels informed the Gerhans that every means would be employed to prevent the Thelma from being taken. After an interval of silence during which both warships cleared for action, the German destroyer steamed away.

SERBIAN SITUATION CRITICAL.
LONDON, To-day.
Both in military and diplomatic circles the situation of the Allies in the Balkans is considered disquieting. If not critical, which doubtless led to the visit of British Prime Minister Asquith, David Lloyd George and A. J. Balfour to Paris for a conference with the French Cabinet and General Joffre, French Commander-in-Chief. The main Serbian army under General Putnik, which is operating north, is now encompassed on every side but one, being cut off from the south by Bulgarian advance beyond Tetovo. It must now depend upon rough roads for supplies from the sea. In the south the Serbian position is almost as bad. The success of the Bulgarians flanking attack on Baberna Pass and their advance from Yelco have prevented the hoped for junction between the Serbian and French forces, this leaves Serbia only two lines of retreat, one into Albania where they may be harassed by unfriendly tribes and the other across the Greek border where they are in danger of being disarmed and interned. It is to prevent the latter—eventuality that the Entente Powers are putting forth every effort. Unquestionably this matter has been discussed in Paris by British and French Ministers. The British Government has taken further action by the issue of an order that no Greek vessel except those loaded on Greek by proceed to their destinations, while Denis Cochin, member of the French Cabinet, who was given an enthusiastic reception at Athens by the Municipal authorities and people, is expected to express, very firmly the French view of what is considered the unsatisfactory reply of Greece to the Entente Powers' request for safe conduct of both Serbian and Allied forces, should they be compelled to retire into Greece. Like Italy and France, England now demands that Greece shall either join the Allies or translate her benevolent neutrality toward the Entente into clear declaration that she will not attempt to disarm neither Serbians nor Allies should they be forced back over her frontier, and that she will afford further facilities for landing and transportation of Allied troops. There are no changes on the French, Italian or Russian fronts, but the presence of Russian warships in German positions suggests that General Inzsky has not concluded the offensive which he undertook east of Riga. Loss of the British hospital ship Anglia in the English Channel, and of another which went to her assistance is believed to be due to mines which broke from their moorings in the recent storms. Of four hundred persons aboard the Anglia, three hundred were saved by a patrol boat. A London official communication concerning the disaster was made public at the War Office: Reports hospital ship Anglia struck a mine in the Channel to-day and sank. Total number aboard 13 officers and 372 men and other ranks, of whom about 300 were saved by a patrol boat. Another ship proceeding to the rescue was also sunk by another mine. Another official communication says that King George was shocked to hear that the Anglia, which was so recently convoyed across the Channel had been sunk. His Majesty is grieved at the loss incurred, but trusts survivors have not unduly suffered from terror and exposure.

THE ANGLIA.
DOVER, To-day.
The hospital ship Anglia, with about three hundred wounded men aboard in addition to the crew, nurses and attendants, bound from France to Dover, struck a mine in mid-Channel to-day and sank in a very short time. Nearly one hundred men, most of them seriously wounded, and therefore in their coats, lost their lives. The collier Lusitania, which was nearby at the time of the accident, immediately went to the assistance of the Anglia, and her boats had been just lowered when she also struck a mine and foundered; all the crew were saved. A patrol vessel succeeded in rescuing three hundred of the Anglia's passengers and crew, including some nurses. A number of bodies were recovered.

VISCOUNT HALDANE SPEAKS.
LONDON, To-day.
Viscount Haldane, former War Secretary, speaking at Hampstead tonight declared the Germans would have reached Paris perhaps Calais, had not the Government taken prompt action upon warnings which he himself and others had given as to the German intentions. The British Government, he said, did everything possible to get aggressive ideas out of other nations on the continent, but that did not prevent the Government from taking precautions. Britain was not taken unawares but was able to mobilize the army and navy the moment of the outbreak of the war. Haldane expressed the belief that there was not a single Government among the Powers that has not been wholly surprised and taken aback by the magnitude and duration of the struggle which had since developed and that nobody has been so much surprised as the German general staff which had expected a walk over in about three months.

GERMAN TORPEDO BOATS FOR THE NORTH SEA.
LONDON, To-day.
A despatch to Exchange Telegraph Company from Copenhagen, dated Wednesday, gives the report that a flotilla of 25 German torpedo boats and big cruisers passed Helsingborg, south-west coast of Sweden at six o'clock in the morning proceeding at high speed northward 3 a.m. Holding-borg is at northern entrance of the sound which separates Sweden and Denmark. Vessels passing Helsingborg proceeding north would enter Cattagat which leads by way of Skagerrat into the North Sea.

REDMOND TO VISIT TRENCHES.
LONDON, To-day.
John Redmond, Leader of the Irish Nationalist Party, has arrived at Boulogne on the western front. It was announced several days ago that as soon as arrangements could be made, Redmond intended to pay a visit to the men in the trenches.

FOREIGN LOANS TO BE FREE OF TAX.
LONDON, To-day.
In the Commons to-day, on motion of Right Hon. Edwin Samuel Montague, member for Cambridgeshire, a new clause was added to the finance bill empowering the treasury to free from income tax all foreign holders of future loans issued, whether made here or abroad. Montague explained, when the Anglo-French credit loan was issued in New York such provision was found necessary to attract investors. The imposition of the income tax in the past had proven a bar to obtaining foreign subscriptions to loans, Montague added, and by granting all foreign holders similar exemption the Government had been assured that foreign subscriptions to future loans would be greatly increased.

NO FURTHER GOODS FOR GREECE.
PARIS, To-day.
A Havas despatch from Marseilles says: The Government has ordered the port authorities to accept no further shipments of merchandise destined for Greece.

EMBARGO ON GREEK SHIPS.
LONDON, To-day.
With regard to the reported embargo on Greek ships in British ports, the Greek Legation here says British consented that all Greek ships loaded or loading may proceed to their destination, but that no fresh loadings will be permitted.

ANOTHER U. S. NOTE.
WASHINGTON, To-day.
A memorandum which will form the basis of a note to Britain regarding contraband is now in course of preparation, at the State Department. It was learned to-day it had not been definitely decided yet what attitude the United States would take in regard to the action of Britain in placing on contraband list cotton and other products never before treated as contraband; it was said to be probable that this decision would be reached within the next few days and that soon thereafter the first draft would be made. Several drafts may be required before communication is ready for transmission.

WEDNESDAY, Nov. 17, 1915.

With the Volunteers.

Yesterday the volunteers of G Company held a sham battle near Waterford Bridge. The attacking party was under command of Lieut. O'Grady, and the defense under Sergeant Williams. The advance guard was led by Instructor Hussey. The defence party left town at 10 o'clock, and took up a position on the Topsail Road, while the others followed at 10.40 a.m. and began the attack from the Bridge. At 1 p.m. a truce was declared, camps were pitched and the men had their dinner, after which the battle was resumed. The day was much enjoyed by the recruits and their discipline throughout was excellent and highly satisfactory to the officers in charge.

Hurricanes and Blizzards on Labrador

A wireless message was received in the city yesterday evening from the Labrador coast via Cape Ray, telling of the severe winter weather conditions existing in that region. At Holton a strong north wind was blowing, accompanied by a blinding snow storm. At St. John's there was a gale from the north and a heavy snow storm, high wind and intense frost prevailed at Grady, Donno and American Tickle. Venison Island reported a gale from the N.W. with snow squalls and severe frost. A strong gale from the north east raged at Battle Harbour. Besides keen frost prevailed with snow squalls.

Woman Charged With Buying From Burglars.

An unusual case was on in the Magistrate's Court this morning. A woman, who appears to have three different names, and who conducts a second hand clothing store in the city, was summoned by the police, she was charged with having in her possession stolen goods, which, it is alleged, she bought from two men named Neal and Dawe, who were yesterday convicted and sentenced to 12 months' imprisonment each for burglarizing two Water Street business places and stealing therefrom. The principal witnesses for the Crown in today's case were the prisoners Neal and Dawe who were removed from the Penitentiary for the purpose. On summing up the evidence Judge Hutchings convicted the accused and imposed a fine of $10 or 30 days.

W. M. A.

The fourteenth annual convention of the Women's Missionary Society in the St. John's district was held in Gower Street Church yesterday. The afternoon service was of a two-fold nature, the first part being Devotional and Memorial under the leadership of Mrs. (Rev.) Royle, and the latter, Consecration, presided over by Mrs. (Rev.) Paine. The key-note was prayer and Mrs. Royle emphasized the thought that prayer backed up by work brings lasting results.

Miss Bessie Taylor gave an excellent talk on Faith, basing her remarks on the 3rd Chap. Acts.—"Peter had neither silver nor gold to give the cripple, but such as he had he gave." Close companionship with Jesus gave Peter such faith as he displayed, and in our day such companionship is necessary to fit us for the work required of us.

The memorial hymn was "Peace, Perfect Peace."

The District Organizer Mrs. E. G. Hunter, here extended a hearty welcome to the delegates of whom there were a goodly number present. The soloist was Mrs. Cockerham. An excellent paper on "Loyalty" was read by Mrs. Hemmison. She showed that while it was right and proper to be loyal to our King and Empire, yet we must not overlook the loyalty we owe to a mightier king and greater kingdom. The paper was brimful of good advice and suggestions, and well worthy the occasion.

Mrs. K. Barnes followed with an inspiring talk on Consecration and Christian Stewardship. Consecration was a necessary equipment for the success of any great achievement. A new and untrodden path lies before the women of our church, and it is necessary to receive from God fresh power and strength, wisdom, and zeal to satisfactorily perform the new duties that must be demanded of us.

Mrs. Paine spoke of the formation of the branch, and asked all the members to devote that care and love, interest, time and money to the work that will ensure its success. At 8 p.m. the meeting was under the direction of the young people of the circles, and was conducted by Miss Marguerite Parsons. The following interesting programme was fully enjoyed by the large number present.

Reading—Miss Cummins.

Recitations—Misses Nicholle and Pollard.

Gentlemen,—In July 1915, I was thrown from a road machine, injuring my hip and back badly and was obliged to use a crutch for 14 months. In September, 1906, Mr. Wm. LEFT FOR NEWPORT NEWS.—The Furness Liner Lexington left here this morning for Newport News, via Halifax.

From Private Martin.

Ophthalmic Hospital, Oct. 14/1015.

Dear Father,—Just a few lines to let you know that I am back to Egypt. I was taken sick about two weeks ago with dysentery from drinking bad water. I was sent on board of the hospital ship and from there back to Egypt, but I am nearly all right again now. I am leaving the hospital to-morrow going to the Convalescent Home where I will soon get my strength back again, please God. Its good to be out of the trenches again for a while, even if I was only there for three weeks. I tell you it is horrible out there, dead men everywhere, their heads and feet sticking out of the side of the trench. Then there's the bullets whistling around one's head, and shrapnel bursting over one's head. It makes you wish you were home again, but we have got to stick it if we want to win this war. There were four of our boys killed and about twenty wounded before I left. I don't know how many since I left. Winford Dawe from the Gallies, came a board the ship the day I did with a bullet in his leg, but he is much better now. Do you remember the Sunday last summer that Gordon Dawe, that's the young fellow who was with me at home with the Frontiersmen's uniform on. Well, he was killed by a sniper. The bullet went in his forehead and blew his brains out. We buried him the next day down on the beach. Well, father, I don't know how long this is going to last. I wish it was over to-day so I could get home to see you all again and get a good feed what I never had since I left home. But never mind, please God, I will soon be home and I don't think I will leave it again in a hurry. I think I have said all for this time. I will write again before I leave for the trenches. Remember me to all the friends. Tell mother to keep a brave heart, give her and Clarence my best love. That's all. Good bye and God bless you all. From your loving son,
BERKLEY.

LONDON, To-day. The sinking of the Anglia has caused great anxiety in the public mind as it had been supposed that the English Channel was entirely free of danger from mines. DEAD LEAVES.

The fallen leaves were lying thick upon the withered grass. "My lawn's no longer span and spick, alack!" I cried, "alas! The look of things imparts an ache, and kills my sunny smile; I'll get a muzzel-loading rake, and heap them in a pile." A learned professor came along, just at that fateful time. "To rake the fallen leaves is wrong," he said; "in fact, a crime. The sod demands the nutriment that rotting leaves bestow, so let them with the soil be bent, and they will make things grow." I thanked that learned and able guy, and gave him a cheroot; then took the rake and laid it by, and played upon my lute. The leaves grew deeper on the lawn, blown there by every breeze, and when I took a walk thereon, they reached up to my knees. Then ambled to my garden gate the sawbones, he said, "You skate—you ought to be in jail. For public health have you no care, most reckless of all knaves? These rotting leaves pollute the air, and send men to their graves." And thus it's been my journey through a journey rough and long; whatever I attempt to do, is sure to be all wrong.

Clever German Spy

DISGUISED AS PLOUGHMAN GAVE BRITISH RANGE TO ENEMY.

He was Caught and Promptly Disposed of—So With French Society Lady and A Traitor Mayor.

The shells came over like rain. It was no half-hearted cannonade. The "strafe" lasting for fully an hour and as the shells flew over our heads in the trenches we wondered whether the Boches had really got the range of our artillery.

For six months the same couple of British batteries had lain, snugly undiscovered by any German aeroplane, and for the whole of that time they had daily given the Germans the few shells that were their portion. Now this peace seemed likely to be disturbed. In fact, after using some men and horses, the battery commanders decided to move their guns, and in the dead of night the guns were moved five hundred yards further to the right.

Now it happened that a young gunner had noticed a ploughman busy with his plough in the same field as the guns were planted, and on the morning after the guns had been repositioned the same ploughman appeared in front of the spot where the guns had been newly placed, and when the ploughman had finished a few furrows he suddenly gave over work and returned with his horse to a small farm.

That evening the Germans again opened fire on our guns and with the exact range of the new positions. The young gunner made a report to his battery commander. When the ploughman appeared next day he was promptly arrested by French gendarmes, and after a few questions was put against a wall, and before a firing party, which quickly got through its work. The ploughman was a clever German spy, who had evaded the authorities by declaring he was a Belgian refugee.

Madame was a well-known French society lady. She had a beautiful chateau on the Belgian border and when the Germans appeared, she was the last in the district to leave for Paris. Her house was taken over by the authorities and was used for the billeting of officers on a British divisional staff. Hearing this, madame came back, but the usual quiet that prevailed before her arrival soon became turned into a perfect hell. Small farms that had been for the billeting of weary troops just out of the trenches, became the targets for the enemy's artillery. The troops moved further away, but still the rain of shells followed.

Madame was never suspected, because she was so good and kind to the young officers, until one day an additional officer arrived on the scene and demanded quarters. Madame protested and said she had no room. The billeting officer, however, said he would inspect the place and found a small room securely locked at the top of the house. This madame said was a box room, and she had lost the key. The officer, however, put his shoulder to the door and burst it open, and quickly found the secret wires and telephone that led to the German lines. Madame went the way of all the French captured spies.

The Mayor of was a great sport. He was a hail fellow well met to all British officers, who happened to be billeted on him, but unknown to him he was suspected and until the arrival of the first battalion of Kitchener's army in France, had never given himself away. The battalion happened to be billeted in the town and the colonel was billeted with the Mayor.

That night at dinner the mayor said he knew the battalion was the first of Kitchener's army to appear in the field and casually asked how many more were coming over. The regimental interpreters who had been put wise by the authorities gave some information. After dinner the mayor strolled out and was followed to the outskirts of the town where he was seen to climb a tree and signal with a pocket lamp. A well directed shot brought him down.

Warning to Germany.

London, Nov. 12.—The Morning Post's Petrograd correspondent says: I have had the honor of discussing the present situation at some length with M. Sazonoff, the Foreign Minister. He said: "We are grappling with a power which threatens to overturn the whole fabric of civilization as developed by the world of Christendom. The future of European culture as opposed to German Kultur depends upon the overthrow of this Power and means taken to prevent its ever breaking out again. We must have the policy of this century based firmly upon an alliance between Russia, England and France."

"Other nations will probably come into our alliance, but we three must form the nucleus. We must say to Germany, 'These are your frontiers and your limits. Work within them as you please, but out into the world you go no more. We have had enough of the disintegrating influences you bring to bear in every quarter of the world. We desire to live at peace as Christian nations, but your unscrupulous rule, based on the principle of armed force, has threatened to enslave the world. That principle is abhorrent to us all. You must be content to stay quietly at home and conduct your commerce and domestic affairs as may please you best, but you shall no more encroach upon the sacred rights of your neighbors.'

"That is what Russia, England and France in alliance must say to Germany, and to the voices of these three will doubtless adhere many Christian nations of the world. It is my firm conviction that if the policy of the twentieth century does not rest upon a solid alliance between Russia, England and France, then this great war into which we have been deliberately forced by Germany will have been waged in vain, and all the blood and treasure expended upon it and still to be spent will have been utterly wasted."

Mme. Yvette Guilbert is a great tea-drinker; she drinks tea with and after every meal, and without sugar or milk. Often before going on the stage, and nearly always after she comes off, she has a cup of her favorite beverage.

Beyond Criticism.

In his tribute to the work of the British navy, at least, Mr. Asquith is on unassailable ground. It has locked up the German fleet, swept German commerce from the seas, coped with the submarine menace and transported in all but absolute safety hundreds of thousands of troops. What more could it have been expected to do? The taunt that it has not destroyed the German warships at Kiel is meaningless. Such a fruitless sacrifice of men and ships might be magnificent, but it would not be war. The Germans are as helpless so far as their navy is concerned, as if every vessel were at the bottom of the North Sea. Whatever errors may be ascribed to the land forces of the Allies, the sea forces are beyond criticism. Germany can never dictate terms of peace while they maintain their supremacy.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Daring Cossack Exploits

Petrograd, Oct. 27.—Early in the war the exploit of a Cossack named Kruchkoff, who, single-handed, destroyed a German patrol of twelve Uhlanes, became famous in poem and picture throughout Russia. Now a similar feat is officially reported. Alexis Kirianoff, a trooper of the 6th Don Cossack Regiment, was taking part as a "Flanker" in an attack on a German transport column. As he rode cautiously forward he saw six Germans in a trench ready to fling the Russian main body with their fire.

He instantly charged the trench. Four of the Germans got up and ran, but two remained and fired on Kirianoff. Unhurt, Kirianoff reached the trench and spitted them with his lance. Then he chased the four fugitives and caught and separately killed them. Later when the attack on the transport developed, Kirianoff noticed a squad of five German riflemen busy firing.

Again he charged and again rye untouched by the enemy's bullets. Three of the five he killed with the lance. The two others fled terrified into a little wood. Kirianoff dismounted and followed, finishing them with the sword.

For these acts of cool courage and extraordinary vigour, which are attested by the captain of the squadron, the commanding officer of the regiment has given him a sergeant's stripes and he will, of course, receive a high decoration.

"Will Dance Over Grave of England."

Berne, Nov. 11. (Despatch to the London Morning Post.)—An important personage who has just returned from Berlin assures me that the burden of all conversation at Wilhelmstrasse is that peace must be signed in London. A German statesman, whose name I am not free to divulge, told my informant that before long Greece and Roumania will be fighting side by side with Germany and before six months are over England's allies will have had enough of the war and will have been detached by Germany from their allegiance. So long as England subsidizes her allies they will be loyal to her, but a time will come—so the Germans reckon—when she cannot longer subsidize them.

"It will not be long," added this German statesman, "before we will dance over the grave of England. Even now it is her colonies which are keeping her up and they cannot go on doing this for ever. Before six months are over England will suffer a debacle."

Rambling Notes for 1915.

CHAPTER II.

We sometimes travel far afield to see the novel or the rare, and to find something worthy our attention; while all the time the same things may be found at our very doors. So was it with the contents of this chapter; our thoughts were afar off, but at our feet we found quite an interesting relic of our country's colonization. It was at Topwell, near Seal Cove, in the district of Harbour Main, and some twenty-three miles from the city. It was one of June's most beautiful days—a day in which all Nature spoke to the soul and revealed to the children of men its own majesty, and its Divine origin. The waters of the bay reflected the splendour of the sun; the greenery of the forest relieved the glare of the mid-day; the gentle zephyrs played amid foliage, and to it the music of the birds seemed to add a requiem, melodious and deep. Who would not be good, or at least who would not desire to be good? That, we are not as good as our desires. It seems to me that all men desire to be better than they are; but we live too far from Nature to attain our best. Doctor Geizel was very emphatic on this point. Her entire series of lectures could be expressed in one sentence, viz.—"Back to Nature and Nature's God."

And so it seemed that though we were so near the city, we were in the very heart of Nature itself, and for the time being had thrown off the burden of daily business life. My companion was my daughter, who had come to spend the day with one of her sisters nurses of the General Hospital, and who was on leave for a couple of weeks, and at whose home we were being entertained. During the conversation it came out that the nurses grandfathers had lived to the age of one hundred and two years, and that he arrived in Newfoundland from Ireland on the same day that peace was proclaimed after the battle of Waterloo.

In further discussing the career of such an old gentleman, we learned that his tool chest which he had brought out with him from Ireland was still to be found, and that it was out in a corner of the stable. We of course expressed a desire to see it, and very soon stood near the relic. Only a box we saw? Yes, and a piece of common tool chest, the tool chest of the carpenter lad who left his home in the morning of life, and sought a living in the New World. The chest was of hard wood, but not of oak, probably teak; its size was that of the ordinary trunk, and its internal construction at once revealed the taste and characteristics of the owner. There was a place for each tool and in some of the fixtures were still left a few of the finer tools which comprise what in the industrial world is known as a "tradesman's kit": a small moulding plane, a punch or two and an old gimlet and a piece of old chisel made up the lot; dust-covered the chest lay and like its late owner it is out of date and forgotten. But the old tool chest suggested a lot of lessons to us, and we being of the industrial class, we perhaps saw more meaning in it than would occur to the mind of more professional people. Ah, yes! the old tool chest was full of meaning and full of history. It was the stock-in-trade of the young mechanic, and it represented the hopes and enterprise of an industrial emigrant. When he left his home he left all that was dear to him, and came to our shores a skilled workman, and during his long life he instructed others of Conception Bay in the art of boat building, and house carpentering. His industry and art were a valuable asset to the country; and if he brought not wealth with him, he did that which was of equal importance, he brought industry and skill by which wealth is produced.

He was a tradesman, but to be that he had to pay the penalty of a seven years apprenticeship. Some of us know what that means; but better a relic of barbarity, tyranny, and industrial slavery. For long years it was in vogue in Newfoundland and some of our readers who paid the price will carry with them down into the grave the feeling that they prefer not to express. Seven years of one's beautiful youth, seven years of one's best, indentured to learn the trade that any common intelligence ought to learn in five at most, and so with our owner of the tool-chest, he first served his seven years, and then he was allowed to take his place among the men. I do not know who it was that insisted on the seven years term of apprenticeship, but sometimes I think that the custom must have emanated from Jacob who served seven years for his wife, Rachel, and then before he got her he had to promise to put in seven years more. Fourteen years servitude was a long time for a wife, but there are some men who serve much longer than even fourteen years—they happen to serve after they are married.

With the drudgery of his seven years of apprenticeship past the young mechanic heard the call of the West, and with tens of thousands of others he decided to try his luck in trade and his tools were his capital and represented his entire estate. On finding a ship he packed his chest, and after the usual storm and delay of old-time ship-sailing, he stepped ashore in that part of Conception Bay known as Port de Grave. There he found himself a wife—the best heritage of all true men—and there he built himself a home, and spent the earlier part of his life. At middle age he decided to change his quarters and so made his home at the place where the tool chest now lies. His memory is still cherished by his family, and a white marble slab tells his age to those who pass in and out of the churchyard. The centenarian was one of our country-builders. His industry helped in the progress which is fast dawning upon us; and though his old tool chest, which he brought so far, now lies dust-covered in the corner of the stable, the spirit of industry which denominated its owner still lies in the people.

Secret Skin Diseases.

A famous physician states that scores of patients come to him suffering from skin diseases of most terrible form, which would have never passed the early stages had some suitable ointment been applied. Zam-Buk, which is a most powerful disinfectant and germicide, applied to skin diseases at their first outbreak, would save hours of pain and prevent disfigurement and scarring. Every city contains hundreds of people who have some secret skin disease—some eruption, some blemish, some open sore, ulcer, or varicose patch. There is naturally a disinclination to reveal such blemishes, and often they are neglected entirely, or some inferior and cheap ointment containing mineral coloring matter is applied, which but aggravates the sore places, and makes matters worse. From day to day, week to week, this continues, the sufferer in the meantime enduring great pain. Now all this can be avoided by timely use of Zam-Buk. Why otherwise has Zam-Buk come to be the world's most widely used balm? For that secret sore, those ulcers, that eczema patch, that open wound—there is nothing in the whole world of medicine better adapted than the herbal essences and juices that go to make up Zam-Buk. Not only is Zam-Buk a great healer, but it is a certain germ-killer, and prevents infection, suppuration and inflammation. If you have some skin disease, which has hitherto defied everything you have tried, don't dally longer—apply Zam-Buk. Zam-Buk is so popular that it is widely imitated, so be sure to see the name Zam-Buk (protected by law) on the box before buying. If you are in doubt, buy from the Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, who will send a box post free upon receipt of fifty cents.

For the Cot Fund.

The subscription dance promoted by Misses Blanche Burridge and Nina Barnes in aid of the Cot Fund, took place at the C. L. B. Hall last night and was largely attended. An enjoyable programme of dances was arranged, and excellent music was supplied by the Myron-O'Grady orchestra. The proceeds of the affair which were quite substantial were further augmented by the sale of programmes and patriotic badges. To Misses Burridge and Barnes much congratulation is due for the enjoyable entertainment furnished by the sale of programmes and patriotic badges. Their efforts in such a worthy cause.

Bonaventure Leaves; Firemen Get Increase.

The s.s. Bonaventure, sailing today for the Mediterranean, calling at Alicante and Naples, took twenty thousand quintals of codfish. Negotiations for the purchase of the ship are not yet completed, but it is not unlikely that the deal will be closed and the transfer made when the ship has landed her fish cargo. Through the efforts of Delegate Woods, the firemen of the Bonaventure are getting $40, an increase of $5, for the run to the Mediterranean, but arrangements have also been made that in the event of the ship changing ownership when she reaches Naples, the firemen's pay thereon will be $60, viz., from the time the ship leaves Naples for Archangel, Russia, and until they arrive back in St. John's again. The removal of the Bonaventure from Newfoundland waters means the reduction of our steel sailing fleet.

Muddlers.

(From the New York World.) It was never known to fail! The very morning when Americans might have been getting their danger up over British trade wrongs is selected by "twenty-one" German authorities on international law" to put out a justification of the murdering of American citizens on the Lusitania because, as one of their number put it, the Lusitania might have rammed the submarine and "probably had concealed cannon on board, and perhaps even Canadian auxiliary troops." This reminds us: Has Germany yet atoned or apologized for that murder?

ONE YEAR AGO.—One year ago today the S. S. Carthaginian left here with a contingent of 149 Naval Reservists.

Hr. Grace Notes.

The very high west wind yesterday was felt very much here. The harbor was churned into foam, and every schooner owner was kept busy securing floating and other property.

A small schooner, owned by a man named Muford, of Cupids, left St. John's the previous evening laden with provisions, etc., and ran in here in the early morning out of the storm. The crew was pretty well exhausted after the drubbing they received during the night, and were quietly resting. But look, the Mary F. Harris, owned by Messrs. M. and R. O'Brien, and anchored further in the harbor began to drift, having parted one chain, and down on Magdalen's side she went with considerable force breaking off the little schooner's foremast and bowsprit. In giving the small schooner chain to clear her from the other her anchor lost its hold, and she was seen to drift out the harbor, which in her helpless condition would probably mean a watery grave for her crew. But fortunately she was far enough to the north side to catch on the Point of Beach where she threw herself down apparently in a very comfortable position. The cargo, which was not in any way damaged, is being removed to-day, and it is thought probable that owing to the soft bottom the schooner will be floated and repaired.

A number of electric light poles were blown down near Carbonear last night, consequently we were without the lights last night, and the damage is not completely repaired yet, the factories that run by electric power are shut down for to-day. We are sure the company are pushing the work of repairs, and will have everything O.K. in a very short time.

Hr. Grace, Nov. 17, 1915.

Neutral Rights.

Ask anybody you meet if he has read the Lansing note to Great Britain and he will respond that he has looked at the headlines and read a few sentences. This is in striking contrast with the interest in the notes to Germany. Every line of the Washington notes over the Lusitania was carefully scanned. The country was then in a fighting mood and any call from the White House would have been promptly responded to by the whole nation.

Now the feeling is that the note of protest to Great Britain is just one of those state papers that had to be written to preserve precedents and make clear that while we might be powerless in the premises we would not legally or mentally admit as a principle the rights of Great Britain to interfere with the commerce of neutral countries. Of course, as this matter has been many months under consideration in this country, it may be many months under consideration by Great Britain and we should not expect answer to our last note before next year.

Schooner Lost; Crew Saved.

A shipwrecked crew belonging to the schr. Sam and Max, which vessel was lost during the recent storm, was brought to Carbonear by the s.s. Ethie yesterday. The schr. Sam and Max was owned at Smith's Sound, T.B., and was commanded by Capt. Strong. The little vessel left here on Monday night last for the home port with a cargo of general supplies, and was caught out in the storm and had her sails carried away. On Tuesday morning, at 10 o'clock, when off Grate's Cove, Capt. Strong signalled to the s.s. Ethie, which was passing at the time, for assistance. The little vessel had become disabled by the storm and the Ethie stood by her all day Tuesday and Tuesday night. When the storm abated a little yesterday morning the schooner was towed to anchorage at Baccalieu Tickle and the crew taken on board the Ethie. During the run from Grate's Cove to the control of the schooner leaked considerably, and shortly after arriving at the Tickle she sank, thus becoming a total wreck.

The time for the United States to become the champion of neutrals was when Germany invaded Luxembourg and Belgium in violation of all law and morality. It is Great Britain in control of the seas that is to-day the champion of neutral rights and of national integrity and international morality.

The German idea is that the state is immoral; has a national duty to grab and to hold and may do with impunity, what individuals might not do. The Prussian idea is that the state stands not only for physical force and success and that no international moral law has been established.

Great Britain and her Allies are establishing an international moral law; they are seeking the peace of the world and there can be no peace without national morality and international integrity.

People who are looking for peace and the return to antebellum conditions are acting without full consideration of the demands of the world's progress. Could a giant hand be laid upon all the belligerent forces of Europe with a command "peace," the war fires would again blaze forth the instant the hand was lifted. It is not fundamentally arms or armies that are now in conflict; it is principles of nationality and of human rights. To-day the United States is not the world's champion either of integrity or of neutral rights. We lost that opportunity when we raised no voice in protest over the forceful invasion of Belgium.—Boston News Bureau.

Convicted of Smuggling.

Deputy Minister of Customs LeMésurier had a message to-day stating that John M. Fudge, of the schooner Harry Nickerson, was brought before the Magistrate at Bonne Bay and pleaded guilty to the charge of smuggling rubbers. He was fined $100 and costs and the rubbers confiscated.

Wedding Bells.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Patrick's Church on Nov. 15th by Rev. Fr. Pippy, when Mr. Alex. Jackman, of the Nfld. Labrador Export Co., Ltd., led to the altar Miss Annie Powell. The bride was attired in a costume of sage blue and black picture hat. The bride was attended by Miss Gerlie Jackman, sister of the groom, and Mr. John Byrne acted as best man.

Puts Another Face on It

Many a man jauntily takes his cup or two of tea or coffee at a meal and declares that it doesn't hurt him. But wait until the poisonous drug, caffeine, in tea and coffee begins to show its cumulative effects, and puts a different face on the proposition. It's a fact anyone can verify, that caffeine hardens the arteries, brings on premature old age, and sallows and wrinkles the skin. Some of the signs are headache, irritability, biliousness, heart flutter, sleeplessness, dizziness, "rag," and so on. The way out is to quit both tea and coffee, and for a pleasant, healthful beverage use

PRINCESSES AND WAR WORK.

The attention which is being called here to the fact that Princess Adelheid of Lippe, who is related to the reigning Duke of Lippe-Detmold, is now occupied daily as a teacher in a German provincial elementary school, would seem to indicate a lack of acquaintance with the fact that the women members of our own Royal House have done, and are doing, a very great deal of work in connection with the war. The example set by the Queen at the very outset, when her Majesty established her Work for Women Fund, has been admirably followed, and those acquainted with her Majesty's labours in connection with that fund are aware that it has received an amount of personal care and attention that the outside public have not realized. Her Majesty's appeal on behalf of her Needlework Guild, so as to ensure a supply by the women of the Empire of winter comforts and hospital requisites for our forces in the field is a further example of her organizing and administrative zeal, and the success of Princess Mary's Christmas fund last year is so well known as scarcely to need recalling. In other directions our Princesses have been active, and foremost among them Princess Arthur of Connaught, who has gone through a regular course of training in a London hospital in order fully to qualify herself for waiting on the wounded. The Lippe Princess, therefore, in her desire to do effective service in time of war, had admirable exemplars here, and if all that has been done in this regard by our various Princesses could be recorded people generally would be as rejoiced as they would be surprised.

THE MINISTERIAL CHANGES IN RUSSIA.

The new Ministerial changes in Russia are regarded in well-informed Russian quarters here as a new sign of the unhealthy state of domestic affairs in that country at present. Prince Stcherbatoff's resignation is no doubt due to the false step he recently took in suggesting the re-introduction of a preventive censorship for papers such as had existed in Russia before the Constitution. In this he had acted on a vague suggestion of M. Goromykin, the Premier, who had complained of the violent language which distinguishes to-day even the most moderate section of the Russian press. When Prince Stcherbatoff's plan became generally known there was such an outburst of indignation on the part of all sections of the public, and even of papers of the type of the "Novoye Vremya," that M. Goromykin himself thought it prudent to disavow both the plan and its author. In these circumstances, being repudiated on every hand, Prince Stcherbatoff naturally offered his resignation, which has now been accepted. The recent Moscow National Congresses of the municipalities and county councils, with their joint pronouncement in favor of what practically amounts to a responsible Government, indicates the growth in Russian political consciousness. It is worth mentioning as a sign of the times that this Moscow pronouncement has been placarded all over Russia—the first instance in Russian history of such a procedure.

FERDINAND OF BULGARIA.

Londoners recall with mixed feelings the appearance of the Czar Ferdinand of Bulgaria the last time he visited this country. He was one of the eight foreign Sovereigns who rode in the funeral procession of King Edward, one of the most remarkable corteges in modern history. King Ferdinand in Bulgarian uniform rode on a magnificent charger, abreast of three other kings. The amplitude of his proportions made him an ungainly figure on horseback, although he sat erect in his saddle. Nor was there anything to attract in his bearded face. What a contrast he was to another kingly figure in that group, and the contrast is moral as well as physical. That other was Albert, the King of the Belgians. We did not know that handsome, tall, clean figure then. We never guessed the nobility of purpose latent in the character of the young Monarch. His watchword has been Honor. That of Ferdinand has been ambition, not of the high-souled, but of the intriguing, aggrandising kind. Both Monarchs spring from the house of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha. It is interesting now to recall that they met at the funeral of King Edward.

THE AFRICAN CAMPAIGNS.

A correspondent in touch with African affairs sends me some comments on two interesting pieces of news about the little African wars in the papers of October 13. The announcements of the capture of Wumbias, in the South of the German Cameroons, is important as showing that dry weather, in which alone operations are possible, has set in. There is usually a short dry season in those regions lasting until Christmas, and it is expected that the Allied forces now systematically subduing the Cameroons will be able to complete the conquest within the next two months. The other point is the curious report that the Germans in East Africa have succeeded in rearming native troops with modern smokeless rifles. The question naturally arises how they have got the rifles into the country, seeing that they are surrounded by enemy territory and blockaded at sea. That they have been supplied from the Portuguese colonies or the Belgian Congo is out of the question. It is probable, my informant thinks, that the rifles have been smuggled into the country by some daring neutral ship that has taken the risk of running the blockade of some point in the enormous coastline.

STRIKING THE TENTS.

Most of the Territorial battalions in training in the South of England are preparing to quit canvas for winter quarters in billets or huts. This, of course, involves a much heavier charge on the State, particularly in the case of private billets, but the hardships of wintering in tents are reflected to such an extent in the sick state that it is impossible last year's experiments will be repeated. To keep down the cost of billeting it is proposed in certain divisions to establish common mess-rooms, where the men will attend for meals, thus obviating the difficulty of dividing up the rations and distributing them round the private-billet to be cooked. Needless to say the proposal is not one that will evoke any enthusiasm among the men, who not unnaturally are averse to having what they describe as a route march attached to each meal. But these hardships which will have to be borne along with others if last year's lavish rate of expenditure on training troops is to be curtailed in the interests of national economy. In many other respects the troops in training will be much better off than they were at the beginning of the war. The equipment at home is now elaborated almost if not quite up to the standard obtaining at the front. One of the greatest boons to the men is the provision of field kitchens. Many divisions are now fully equipped with these, and the advantage of having properly cooked meals—on the march and during field operations—is one that the men thoroughly appreciate. Indeed the arrival of field kitchens has made possible under the old system of cooking over open fires. In connection with the evacuation of canvas I may remark that as far as possible the brigades in each division are mutually exchanging their training centres with a view no doubt to counteracting the inevitable staleness that overcomes a unit after five or six months training.

MOTORS FOR SOLDIERS.

The following is the cheery story of how an elderly London motorist does his bit. He has impressed, like the rest of us, by the sight of so many beautiful motors in the streets whose owners seemed to be doing nothing in particular for the war. His plan, worked out entirely on his own initiative, is on these lines. As he drives about the streets he marks down some fine motor with plenty of room in it and follows it unobtrusively home. After the owner has gone in, the patriotic motorist rings the bell and requests an interview, explaining that he is arranging motor trips for wounded soldiers and will be lend his car. He has never met a refusal, and now has about a hundred motorists on his list. He makes all the arrangements with the hospitals, and working quite alone, has been successful in getting thousands of soldiers free drivers in the country. Another plan of this resourceful person is to drive into the country, and selecting likely looking mansions, he asks for permission to bring out parties of wounded men for afternoon tea in the gardens.

NO TREATING IN THE CLUBS.

The no-treating order has quickly lost any charm it had as being something new to talk about in the bars. On October 12th there was a thinness in some of the most popular bars, and experts agree that there has been already a sharp decline in the amount of drink sold. The general opinion was that drinking as a social observance has had a hard blow. The barmaids were especially dejected. "There'll be hundreds of us sacked before long," said one. There is some indignation among members of what are known as the best clubs at the order being enforced in clubs. Their view is that treating is not the rule in the clubs that matter, but it is common knowledge that in the much more numerous clubs that don't matter so much the order will make a real difference. Some of the big London clubs have already suffered severely in their finances from the war economies of members—in many clubs, for instance, the dining room in the evening is now almost deserted, and wine is rarely ordered. Very little entertaining is being done. The difficulty many clubs are finding in making ends meet will certainly be increased by the new prohibition. The only people who glean some comfort are the professional comedians, who are all busy revising their "gags." There will be no music-hall without its new sallies of extra dry humour. The specimens collected by one evening paper are not encouraging. Perhaps the best is the statement of Mr. George Mozart—that some hitherto poor members of the profession have already ordered motor-cars.

THE NURSERY ARSENAL.

It is a relief to turn from the Budget to the enterprise of British toy manufacturers. Some of their Christmas novelties have already been referred to in these columns, but the ingeniously designed toy which provides for a miniature air raid upon German cities has now made its appearance. It is one of the series of war games, and is called "Bombho." Colored illustrations of German towns are attached to a central pivot, through which circle two of the Allies' aeroplanes. Bombs are carried by the aeroplanes, the arrangement of springs making them go off with a realistic sound when a particular spring is touched by a player. Other new war game toys include "aeroplane shooting" and "hunting the Huns." An anti-aircraft gun, which is to be sold at a very moderate price, is also a very well-devised toy. It has a periscope and elevating screws, and like the famous 75mm, which has proved so useful to our French Allies, all the parts are interchangeable. The "Big Lizzie" brass cannon, the "Tiny Tots" metal field gun, and a double-barrelled pop-gun from Japan are other toys for the nursery arsenal.

AUTUMN FASHIONS.

No one expected any very drastic changes in the fashions this season, so that no one is disappointed at the comparative dullness of the shops now that the "latest things" are on view. On the contrary, most women are rejoiced to find that for once they will be able to "make things do" that in other years had to be cast on one side. The new note is simply an intensification of modes that have been in some time. Short skirts, for instance, and the high boots are still in fashion. These latter may or may not have a Russian touch in a band of fur as a finish. But to be as Russian as possible is the correct thing, and fluted skirts to coats with a broad hem of fur is the smartest wear. As regards colors, Londoners are showing a preference for browns, purples, and neutral tones. Velvet is the fabric of the moment, partly no doubt on account of the difficulty of procuring woolen materials, and there are a number of very beautiful shades being shown, including a very rich-looking tomato or red brick. Hats, too, are mostly of velvet for afternoon wear. The newest shapes are the big-crowned Directoire—a rather trying style for all but a special type of face—and the three-cornered or highwayman, which is more generally becoming. Evening dress tends to an ever greater simplicity, and the low full dress is almost entirely out of favor. A simple V-shaped opening at the neck such as has been the fashion for day-wear within the last year or so and long transparent sleeves of nylon or net is all that fashion requires for dinner wear even at a fairly large gathering of friends. Any more elaborate toilet is considered out of place and bad form.

SHOT DEAD—ELEVEN THOUSAND FEET IN THE AIR.

It is now learnt that Lieut. S. C. Caws, of Seaview, Isle of Wight, a member of the Royal Flying Corps, officially reported missing, has been killed.

Lieut. S. Wilson, who is a prisoner in Germany, has written to his parents stating that he and Lieut. Caws were attacked by German machines and had a great fight, lasting fifteen minutes. They fought until they fired all their ammunition.

Lieut. Caws was shot dead when they were 11,000 feet in the air, a bullet passing through his neck down to the heart, through the instrument board, and hitting Wilson's leg.

"Sing Me to Sleep"

Copied From a Letter From the Dardanelles—A Soldier's Version.
Sing me to sleep when bullets fall.
Lest we forget the war and all,
Hot is my dugout and sore my feet,
With nothing but biscuits and "bully" to eat.

Chorus:
Far from the "starlights" I long to be,
Shop lights and music halls I'd rather see;
Think of me crouching where the worms creep,
Waiting for "sergeant" to sing me to sleep.
Sing me to sleep when bombs explode,
A biscuit tin for my head's abode;
Around me sand bags and helmets you'll find,
With corpses in front and corpses behind.

Far from the trenches I long to be,
Where Turkish snipers can't pot at me;
Think of me underground where the stars peep,
With the boom of guns to sing me to sleep.

Sing me to sleep in the same hard bed
With plenty of rat holes around my head,
Stretched out upon my waterproof
Dodging the shrapnel from the roof.
Sing me to sleep where camp fires blaze,
A heavy supper my stomach weighs?
Dreaming of home and old times up west—
When whack comes someone's boots on my chest.

Appendicitis.

By GEORGE FITCH.

Appendicitis is something that usually happens just before some doctor buys a new automobile. Fifty years ago nobody heard of appendicitis. Also no one heard of the automobile. Now a man cannot be said to be up-to-date unless he has had appendicitis, while the doctor and the automobile are boon companions. Appendicitis is a peculiar pain in the region of the vest-pocket, which is later transferred to the region of the check-book pocket. It is said by some people to be a disease. Others claim it to be a fad, while the doctor regards it as an opportunity. It comes from an insurrection of the vermiform appendix, a small annex to the intestine. There are two ways of curing it. It can be reduced by outside manipulation, or it can be cut out. In the latter case, the appendix is not reduced, but the surgeon's bill can, by con and economy, be reduced in instalments to a normal size.

A great many people have had explorations made in their interiors by surgeons in search of appendicitis, and most of them have survived. It is not dangerous to have the appendix taken out, providing the surgeon removes all of his tools from the premises, and does not present his statement until the patient is quite strong. When the patient has recovered, he is given his appendix imprisoned in a bottle of alcohol, and travels home in first and second sections like a home-seeker's train. People who have no appendix are arrogant about it—as arrogant as people who have no past. Between people who have been divorced from their appendixes, and people who have been in Europe, life is hardly worth living for the common skates who can't afford to have alterations and improvements made on them every year or two.

The appendix was formerly a member in good standing of the human body, but it was discovered that it was not only useless, but stirred up trouble by diverting objects from their proper path through the human system and then getting swelled up over it. When this was found out, the doom of the appendix was sealed. Thus it is evident that the appendix is no politician. A politician can be perfectly useless, all swelled up and can divert anything from an assistant's salary to a grand piano from the body politic, and yet the people very rarely cut him out.

YOUR BOYS AND GIRLS
A fault, often laid to the mother, is the habit of unnecessary fault finding or nagging. One reason many mothers have so little influence with their children, is the habit of insisting on non-essentials. They make a fuss about trifles and lay down the law on points which are of no great consequence—like the kind of stockings or gloves the girl must wear—and then, when there is need of protesting against some really wrong course, they have used up all their force on unimportant details and their words carry no weight with their children. You cannot begin too early, however, to teach your children to obey. If there is occasional rebellion it should be checked immediately, although I think if a child is taught obedience from earliest infancy, the idea of revolt will never present itself as possible.

Gas and Hospitality.

The sound of motor wheels heralding the arrival of unexpected guests has no terrors for the housewife whose menage is run on up-to-date lines. While the visitors are removing the traces of travel, with the hot water which a gas water-heater keeps always "on tap," a match to the gas fire makes the drawing room a place of warmth and pleasantness for their reception; and the children love to "help mother" by toasting the crumpets before the clear and smokeless glow.

The gas cooker (or the modern gas trivet by the drawing room gas fire) boils a kettle of water in no time, and within a quarter of an hour after their arrival the guests are enjoying a cosy chat over the cup that cheers. Should they be persuaded to stay, the invaluable cooker makes it possible, even at such short notice, for the experienced housewife, after a raid upon her emergency store cupboard, to set before them a dainty dinner of which no hostess need be ashamed. Gas means ever-ready hospitality.

We Know Just How You Feel!

You need an engine for your boat and you are worried almost to death trying to decide which is the best one to buy. One fellow tells you to buy his machine because it is cheaper than others.

Another firm advises you that they have been in the engine business longer than anyone else and therefore their machines are the best.

Then along comes another chap with an engine which he claims is entirely new and better than anything else on the market.

NOW LISTEN.

DON'T buy an engine or any other piece of machinery because it is cheap; probably it has been made cheap.

DON'T experiment with new designs, let the other fellow do that.

DON'T depend too much on what any manufacturer says about his own product. Ask someone who has used it.

We would like to give you names of parties using FERRO Engines.

Write for catalogue with prices and terms, also ask for list of prominent men throughout Newfoundland who are using FERRO Engines. Ask them what they think about the FERRO.
