CHAPTER XXII.
The Savage Transformed.

One morning Percy started off for a walk, directly after breakfast, and walked on, lost in thought and indifferent to the road, until he found himself up on the hills behind Verling, and in front of a little wayside inn.

It was luncheon time, and, as a glass of ale and a crust of bread and cheese were to him as satisfactory as the most elaborate luncheon, he entered the inn, and asked for this primitive luncheon.

The people knew him, and were delighted, and hastened to wait upon the earl.

At his request, they set a white napkin on a little settee at the door, and there the Lord of Vering ate his luncheon, with the simplicity of a ploughboy.

While he was leaning back, smoking his pipe and thinking of Kyra, wondering how she was getting on, he heard the slow tread of a horse walking toward the inn.

His quick ear detected a limp, and, looking up, he saw Lillian Devigne, on a lame horse.

She came up with a little smile of greeting and relief.

"How glad I am to see you! And how curious that we should meet so far from the Park! You are looking at the horse," she added, as he helped her to dismount.

"Yes, he is lame!" she said. "He trod upon a stone coming up the hill, and I shall not get him home—shall I, do you think?"

"No," said Percy, looking at his watch. "I will send for a carriage for you."

"Thanks," she said; then she looked at the little table, and said:

"If you only knew how hungry I am! Have you been lunching?"

"Yes," he said, "on ale and bread, and cheese!"

"How delightful! I thought, as I came up the hill, that I would give anything for a glass of ale!"

"Twopence is the price," said Percy, with his quiet smile. "Will you really like to have some? Well, sit down, and I will get it."

She sat down, with a little sigh of enjoyment, and the good people, overjoyed at her condescension, brought out some bread and cheese.

She ate it with a graceful heartiness that was not altogether assumed, and Percy, leaning at a little distance, watched her, with keen observation.

"It is not every fine lady who could enjoy such rough fare," he said, quietly.

She looked up at him with raised eyebrows.

"I am not a fine lady," she said. "There is no title I detest more. Do you think I might have a glass more. Why do you stand so far off? I do not mind the pipe!"

She said it so naturally, so easily, that he came and sat down opposite her.

Some more ale was brought, and she drank half a glass, then looked round.

"It is like some wild place abroad rather than England. I feel as if I were in the backwoods. I can understand now why you like tramping about the country; it is to get such an appetite as I had. How I have enjoyed this bread and cheese, and how horrified mamma would be if she knew it! Ah! there is something wrong about our higher cultivation, Lord Vering. We are all savages at heart!"

Percy laughed, and glanced at his watch.

"It is time to send for a carriage for the savage now," he said.

She stopped him by a gesture.

"On no account," she said. "I have made up my mind to finish the day's adventure by walking home. It is not far from the Park."

"Too far for you," he said.

She looked up at him.

"There are two roads," she said, significantly and quite naturally. "I need not intrude on your thoughts."

"You will not intrude," he said, coloring slightly, "and if you mean to walk you must come with me, or be lost in the woods. The horse can be sent home to-morrow or the next day; it is a mere sham, he will get over it with a little rest."

Then he paid the modest bill and they set out, she pinning her hair round her, and she in his solicitation, still smoking.

They walked for some time, talking but little; presently they entered the woods, and she, looking round, said softly:

"I do not wonder you come here so often; they must remind you of the pathless forests out in the far West. Do you not often wish yourself back? If I were a man I would leave this hackneyed, threadbare England forever!"

He smiled.

"Home is dear to every man," he said; "and it is not always summer in North America. There is snow sometimes, great wide plains of snow, dreary and drear enough to make one long for England, tame as she is. I was lost once—but I bore you?"

"No, no!" she said, with quiet eagerness—"please go on; I do so desire to hear about your travels."

Then he went on as she had bidden him; telling her in the simple, modest way of a brave man of some of the perils of the traveler—but no mention of Kyra. As they neared home, he relapsed into silence.

Lillian Devigne looked up and saw the park of Ashley House through the trees and her heart beat impatiently. She had lamed her horse and tracked him down to this, and had gained nothing of the confidence she had meant to force—she determined on playing a bold card.

He lingered a moment. They were now standing on the terrace, waiting to go in.

"I am very grateful," he said. "She shall come. But I must see her first. If she is not too wild and untamed she shall come."

She murmured a simple "Thank you," and gazed at him; and no one saw the gleam of triumph that glanced from her eye as she left him.

Percy went out for his accustomed walk next day, and when he returned Lady Devigne and her daughter had gone.

He took his own departure a few days afterward, and returned to Verling.

Old Stephen took the management of the house in Percy's absence, and, indeed, almost during his presence, for so great a responsibility would have only been irksome to one so fond of his freedom as the new Lord Vering.

"I am so vexed about my horse," she said; "I am afraid that she is quite lame—at any rate she is so uncertain that I must get another. Fortunately, I know of one that will suit me—a gray of Lord Stanford's—"

Percy looked up. "I bought it yesterday," he said.

"You?" she said, with a smile, "what could you want with it? A lady's horse? Do forgive me! I did not mean to be merely inquisitive!"

He thought a moment, then he decided to tell her for whom it was bought and why. Why should he not? Was she not his friend? Who better than she could help him in the dilemma he was in? Who better able to advise him? She was his friend; all love passages were over between them—he would tell her.

"I wanted it for a ward of mine!" he said; and then he told her how he had found Kyra in the snow, and how he had sent her to school—all of which Lillian received as news pure and fresh, and with a sympathy and interest that were perfect.

"And you have not seen her!" she exclaimed. "Not seen her all the time! Poor child! How cruel of you!"

"No!" he said, almost vehemently. "It is for the best. I told you how she relied on me! Now that she has not seen me, she has learned to divide that reliance and affection for those around her, and she is happier. I know it, for I have letters from the mistress, and letters from herself. Yes, it was not cruel, but wise."

But she persisted. "It was cruel, and you must get at once! Poor, dear little thing! How would you like to be snatched from liberty as vast as hers and secured up in an English school—and such a school! Oh, I am so glad you told me! You must go and see her, indeed you must. And, may I see her, too? You do not know how interested I am in her! What a history she has, poor child! No wonder she clings to you!"

Percy frowned.

"She has forgotten me by this time," he said. "But as you think it wise, and—and only kind—I will go and see her."

"Yes, do," she replied, eagerly. Then she thought a moment.

"You know that we go from here to-morrow?"

"No."

"Yes, we are going to town. Lady Paveywell goes herself next week. We have taken a small house at Queen's Gate. I have been thinking, during these last few minutes, that I would ask you to let the dear girl come to us now and then. It is only a drive from Minerva House, and it will be a change for her."

Percy hesitated, and she looked up at him with an imploring, pleading gaze.

"Ah! Can you not trust me? Do you still think me the worldly creature that I once was? Do you still deem me unworthy of the charge of a young, unsophisticated girl? How you wrong me!"

He frowned hastily.

"No, no!" he said. "You wrong me by such a suspicion. I was thinking of Kyra, the child. She is wild and uncultivated still. The trouble—"

"It will be a pleasure and a delight," said the soft, sweet voice, adding more plaintively, "you forget that I am pleading for myself! I am alone, I have no friend! Oh, let her come to me."

He lingered a moment. They were now standing on the terrace, waiting to go in.

"I am very grateful," he said. "She shall come. But I must see her first. If she is not too wild and untamed she shall come."

She murmured a simple "Thank you," and gazed at him; and no one saw the gleam of triumph that glanced from her eye as she left him.

Percy went out for his accustomed walk next day, and when he returned Lady Devigne and her daughter had gone.

He took his own departure a few days afterward, and returned to Verling.

Old Stephen took the management of the house in Percy's absence, and, indeed, almost during his presence, for so great a responsibility would have only been irksome to one so fond of his freedom as the new Lord Vering.

Things had been left very much as they were in the old lord's time. Percy hated the new furniture and glistening carpets, and was attached, after a fashion, to the half-smoked appointments of the Wold.

"Let it all be cleaned and ventilated, and put new things in place of those that are worn out, but otherwise I do not desire any change," he had said to Stephen, and no material change had been made. Indeed, so quiet was the place, and so little altered, that some of the servants and tradespeople asserted that old Stephen was not quite awake to the fact that he had changed masters, and that he compared young Lord Percy with old Lord Jack.

Be that as it may, he did his duty faithfully, and seemed to live only for that, moving about the place with his head bent, and his arms folded about him, quite clear and awake to all matters pertaining to the Wold and the estate, but lost to the outer world. So Percy found him when he returned from Ashley Park. Old Stephen received him with his accustomed smile of humble affection, and insisted upon ushering him into the hall, after the old-fashioned and farcical manner, going before the young lord, with his hand upon his heart and his head bent.

Percy stayed at Verling for a week, gave orders that his house in Grosvenor Square should be got ready, and then, leaving all in the hands of Stephen Gringe, suddenly went up to town.

All this was very unlike the old Percy Chester, and any one accustomed to reading character would have said that such signs spoke of a mind at unrest and a heart unsatisfied.

The house in Grosvenor Square was an enormous place, furnished in the most elaborate and sumptuous style, and had been left during the latter part of Lord Jack's reign to a good tenant.

When Percy came into the property, he had retained the house for himself, deeming it rather infra dig and mercenary to let it, although it was far too large for any but a numerous family.

As it was, it served as a kind of barracks for a horde of servants, so numerous that some of them had actually not yet seen their young lord.

On the day of his arrival, Percy went over it with feelings of dismay, chose a small suite of apartments for himself, another for Charlie, who would soon be home from Oxford, and then walked off to one of his clubs, "The Travelers," where he was always welcome.

He spent a week in town, calling on one or two people, and receiving a shoal of cards morning, noon, and night—invasions to balls, concerts, garden parties, and all kinds of hospitalities, but going to none.

The Home Dressmaker should keep a Catalogue Scrap Book of our Pattern Cuts. These will be found very useful to refer to from time to time.

A SIMPLE PRACTICAL MODEL.

1704—Girls' Dress with Sleeve in either of Two Lengths. To be closed in Front or Slipped over the Head. This attractive little model is a one-piece style. It is easy to develop and may be worn without the shield. The fronts may be closed from neck to hem, or the dress may be cut without a front closing in "slip on" style. The collar is jaunty and becoming. The long sleeves are nice where warmth is desired. For coolness and comfort the short sleeves are very appropriate.

The Pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 4, 6, 8 and 10 years. It requires 3 1/2 yards of 36 inch material for an 8-year size.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps.

A Dainty Frock for Mother's Girl.

1702—This style may be made with a separate gümpe or underskirt, and with sleeve in single or double puff. The neck may be high or round and low. As here shown figured crepe was used with batiste for the gümpe. Challie, tub silk, crepe de chine, lawn, dimity, voile, batiste, nun's veiling and organza are also nice for this model. The Pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 6, 8, 10 and 12 years. It requires 1 1/2 yards of 27-inch material for the gümpe, and 3/4 yards for the dress, for an 8 year size.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps.

HERE'S A SECRET

If you want to cure that skin disease of yours, you can only do so by using an ointment so refined as to be capable of penetrating to the root of the disease. Zam-Buk is capable of doing this, whereas ordinary ointments remain on the surface skin.

Besides its wonderful power of penetration, Zam-Buk is such a strong germicide that germs cannot live where Zam-Buk is applied. Thus, all germs, both on the surface and in the underlying tissues, are destroyed. Then the herbal essences, of which Zam-Buk is composed, promote the growth of new tissue, and a complete and permanent cure is the result.

Prove it for yourself. All druggists, 50c. box, or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

CASEMENT'S TRIAL.

LONDON, June 26. Casement made a formal plea of "not guilty," the jury were selected and the Attorney General began his address, at the beginning of the trial to-day.

WILSON AND THE EMPEROR.

PARIS, June 26. A Madrid despatch to the Temps quotes the impartial as reporting that President Wilson will receive a message from the German Emperor in the same manner as King Alfonso. This statement is included in an interview which the representative of the Imperialist had with German naval attaché Von Krohn, who declared that the carrying of letters to the King of Spain by submarine could not affect Spanish neutrality which Germany respects. Spanish newspapers, the despatch adds, demand that the Government take measures to prevent a repetition of the submarine incident.

INCREASED ACTIVITY ON BRITISH FRONT.

LONDON, June 26. Latest British and German communications showing increased activity on the British front, are attracting attention here and receiving unusual prominence in the London morning papers which also publish conspicuously the fact that King George received General Sir William Robertson, Chief of the Imperial General Staff, at Buckingham Palace last night.

BRITISH PRISONERS ON SHORT RATIONS.

LONDON, June 26. Lord Robert Cecil, Parliamentary Under Secretary of Foreign Affairs, told the Commons to-day that the British Government had received information to the effect that British civilian prisoners interned at Ruhleben were now being supplied with less than half the requisite amount of food. Dr. Hylar, attached to the American Embassy at Berlin, learned that the German Government had reduced the rations of interned civilians, Lord Robert said. The American Ambassador at Berlin gave the information to the British Government and the reduction of rations being made, Lord Robert said that this was done, notwithstanding the fact that the Germans had been storing up money amounting to between 60,000 and 200,000 marks, which should be spent for food. The British Government had protested against this action through the American Embassy, pointing out that if Germany could not feed her prisoners she should release them. Britain also recalled her offer to release or exchange civilians over 50 or even 45 years, if unfit for military service, and proposed that all British civilians at Ruhleben should be released in exchange for a similar number of German civilians in England. Lord Robert declared, if the Germans did not accept this offer within a week, the British Government would be compelled to consider what course to adopt in regard to the rations of German civilians held prisoners in England.

SENTENCED TO DEATH FOR REFUSING DUTY.

LONDON, June 26. Twenty-four soldiers who are serving unwillingly at the front, having stated that they entertained conscientious objections to military service, were sentenced to death recently for refusing to perform certain military duties, but the sentences were

If you want to cure that skin disease of yours, you can only do so by using an ointment so refined as to be capable of penetrating to the root of the disease. Zam-Buk is capable of doing this, whereas ordinary ointments remain on the surface skin.

Besides its wonderful power of penetration, Zam-Buk is such a strong germicide that germs cannot live where Zam-Buk is applied. Thus, all germs, both on the surface and in the underlying tissues, are destroyed. Then the herbal essences, of which Zam-Buk is composed, promote the growth of new tissue, and a complete and permanent cure is the result.

Prove it for yourself. All druggists, 50c. box, or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

MEXICO.

It is not in Europe alone that the sky is overcast; the war clouds have gathered ominously over Mexico, and there is little hope that the approaching storm will pass over. The last thing to be desired at this moment is such a war, but unfortunately almost all the elements of a peculiar situation make for it. German gold, Mexican anarchy, Carranza's ambition and Presidential politics make a formidable combination.

Observers are agreed as to Carranza's aims, which are worthy of Machiavelli. Internal conditions in Mexico are more impossible than ever, and the financial outlook in particular is desperate. Surrounded on all sides by a ruthless mob who are content to allow him a temporary sovereignty merely because he commands the largest army, Carranza knows well that his Government cannot long continue, whether recognized by America or not. The old scoundrel's design appears to be to provoke a war with the States and, having united Mexico

WELCOME THE COMING, SPEED THE PARTING.

We extend a cordial and hearty welcome to Mr. H. A. Winter, B.A., who, by succeeding Dr. Lloyd, as editor of the Evening Telegram, St. John's, takes his seat as a member of the Fourth Estate. A young man, of scholarly attainments, we feel confident that he will add lustre to the history of Newfoundland journalism, and wish him the fullest measure of success in the new and honorable profession he has chosen.

Dr. Lloyd, the retiring editor, has renounced journalism to take up the practice of law, and, we learn, will act as solicitor for the F.P.U., a position made vacant by the retirement of Mr. A. B. Morine from public life in Newfoundland. We wish the learned doctor a successful career in his newly-adopted line of labor.

McMurdo's Store News

TUESDAY, June 27th, 1916.
Those who feel the need of a light tonic—and many people feel such need in the early part of the summer—will find our Iron and Quinine Tonic the very thing they need in this way. This elegant mixture improves and stimulates the appetite, strengthens the nerves, and helps the system generally. Price 50c. a bottle.
Cantharidine Hair Tonic is useful to keep the hair from falling off the head as it keeps the scalp clean and in sound and healthy condition. It is also an excellent dressing for the hair. To those whose scalps are clogged with dandruff a shampoo with McMurdo's Shampoo Powder is valuable. Cantharidine 25 and 50c. a bottle. Shampoo Powders 5c. each.

News From the Arachne.

It is expected that the stranded grain steamer Arachne near St. Pierre will be refloated to-day. The s.s. Portia, wrecking tug Amphitrite, French steamers Pro Patria and Bridgewater are all engaged in the endeavour to tow the Arachne off the shore as well as the s.s. Sable I, which was despatched to the scene of the wreck yesterday while on her way to this port from Charlottetown. The work of jettisoning and saving cargo is being continued in a hurry and up to this morning over one thousand tons of grain were removed from the ship, lighting her forward, where she is firm aground. A message was received this morning from Capt. Joe Keane of the Portia stating he expected to see the ship refloated to-day. A fortunate matter so far is that the wrecked vessel has had favourable weather conditions, considering the fact that she is so badly exposed. The wind has been constantly in an easterly direction, but if it shifts to westerly Capt. Keane thinks the ship will be dashed to pieces in a short while. Capt. Keane says the Arachne is a fine ship and a splendid freight carrier.

Rev. A. C. Skinner, D. D.

(From the "Daily News.")
The many friends of Rev. A. C. Skinner, formerly of this city, but now of Lowell, Mass., U.S.A., will be pleased to learn of his welfare and success. Dr. Skinner has filled some very important appointments in connection with his work, and is held in high esteem by his congregation. Of late he delivered two very able and timely sermons upon the subject of "Amusements," and of "Mother," and the papers have given lengthy reports of them. In both these discourses the Rev. Doctor displayed a great grasp of his subjects, and dealt with the question of Amusements in a very fearless manner. He admitted them to their proper place, in as far as they pertained to health and recreation; but closely drew the line when they passed these limits, and became a craze. In his discourse on Mother, his language was very choice, and was just what might be expected from a man of Dr. Skinner's ideals. Not many words in the English language convey a greater depth of sanctity and meaning than that of mother, and Dr. Skinner's discourse has done full justice to it. As many of our readers know, the Rev. gentleman here referred to is the youngest brother of our respected townsman, the well-known proprietor of Skinner's Marble Works. The Telegram wishes Dr. Skinner continued success in the work of his high calling.

ITALIANS SINK TRANSPORTS.

ROME, To-day.
Austrian transports have been sunk in the harbour of Durazzo by the Italians. The transports were loaded with troops, arms and ammunition.

SHACKLETON HAS TO LEAVE HIS MEN.

LONDON, To-day.
Lieut. Sir Ernest Shackleton has been unable to rescue his men, numbering 22, comprising the main body of his Antarctic Expedition, who were left on Elephant Island. This information was received in a despatch from Shackleton from Port Stanley, Falkland Islands. The explorer evidently returned on the steamer which had been placed at his disposal by the Uruguayan Government for the purpose of effecting the rescue of his men. According to his despatch, ice conditions had so increased in severity that he was unable to get nearer than 20 miles of the Island. He thinks there is still a hope for the men as there is an excellent chance that they will be able to survive on short rations, supplemented by penguins, until another rescue party provided with an ice breaker can push through to them. The steamer Institutopeca provided by the Uruguayan Government left Montevideo, June 8, with Lieut. Shackleton aboard to succor the men on Elephant Island.

HUGHES PURCHASES SHIPS.

LONDON, To-day.
William Morris Hughes, Premier of Australia, who has been in London for some time past, has solved the difficulty of the dearth of ships for moving the Australian harvest by going into the market and purchasing 15 large steamers which will be renamed and operated by the Australian Government as Commonwealth Government Lines.

GREEK STEAMER TORPEDED.

LONDON, To-day.
The Greek steamer Nitsa from Norfolk, June 5, for Savona, Italy, drowned in the Mediterranean, the crew were saved. A Lloyd's despatch from Alicante, Spain, says the Nitsa was torpedoed and sunk off Cape Palos.

RUSSIANS NOW AFTER LEMBERG.

PETROGRAD, To-day.
With the elimination of General Pfanzer's army in Bukovina the attention of General Brussloff's forces in this section is now directed upon Kolomea, the key of the defence of Lemberg on the south. The occupation of Kimpulung and Kutly has opened the way to Kolomea. Already the result of this last recorded victory of the Russians is becoming evident in the forward movement of General Letchitsky on the road from Sniatyn to Kolomea to a point ten miles from the latter town. It is evident from the report of the prisoners and booty taken that the Austrians defended Kimpulung with considerable forces. They were attacked by the Russian troops which had covered 30 miles from Gurahumora in two days and were rushed into the fight with scarcely an hour's rest. According to the Russian military authorities their assault added the last touch needed to complete the demoralization of General Pfanzer's forces which now are entirely cut off from communication with General Count Von Bothmer's army group on the Stripa River to the north. General Von Bothmer's position is regarded as precarious. As a result of this operation his right flank has been completely uncovered. Military critics believe he will, without doubt, be forced to fall back along his whole line before Tarnopol. The Teutonic forces appear to have been able to stop to some extent the breaching of their front in the Kovel region, where a large element of German troops, having stiffened the Austrian lines, and it is evident that preparations are being made for a desperate stand at Brody on the southern wing of that position. Nevertheless, the Russians have been able to push a wedge in the direction of Vladimir Volynski to a point which threatens that town and endangers Brody the gateway to Lemberg from the east. According to the military expert of the Bourse Gazette, the Germans have taken full charge of this region and have filled up the ranks of Arch Duke Ferdinand's broken army, which alone has lost 70,000 men since the beginning of the Russian advance.

ITALY NOW ADVANCING.

ROME, To-day.
Reports from the front state that the Italians are advancing all along the Trentino sector, reconquering the positions which the Austrians had occupied, capturing men, arms, ammunition, provisions and all kinds of supplies which the Austrians were obliged to abandon in their precipitate retreat. All Italy is rejoicing over the withdrawal of the Austrians six weeks after their offensive movement on the Trentino front began.

BRITISH SUCCESSES.

LONDON, To-day.
A British official statement issued at midnight reads: We carried out a number of successful enterprises last night at different points. The hostile lines were penetrated at ten different places. Our parties inflicted considerable casualties on the enemy and took several prisoners. Our casualties were very slight. The Munster Fusiliers and Anzacs were particularly successful in connection with these raids. There was a good deal of artillery work on both sides yesterday evening and during the night. Our artillery fired with great effect, the hostile trenches being considerably damaged in many places. Four large explosions were caused by our artillery which was again active at numerous points. Considerable damage was caused by our offensive operations at Longeval, Gommecourt, Clvenchy on Gohelle and north of the Loos salient opposite Wytschaete, east of Wietie; One hostile kite balloon in addition to those already reported was destroyed by our aircraft yesterday, making a total of six out of fifteen balloons attacked; six were seen to fall in flames.

INTERVENTION BY SOUTH AMERICAN REPUBLIC UNAVAILING.

WASHINGTON, To-day.
Efforts toward Latin American mediation in the Mexican crisis favored by Carranza officials collapsed today without having reached the stage of formal proposals to U. S. It was made plain by Secretary of State Lansing to Calderon, Minister of Bolivia, who called with the intention of asking whether the States would entertain the offer of the services of its northern neighbors to aid in avoiding war that the Washington Government sees nothing in the situation that would warrant arbitration proceedings. Lansing talked with the Minister for half an hour and is understood to have told him the blame for the grave outlook rested squarely on General Carranza. The attitude of the States was so fully outlined, Calderon did not mention directly the original purpose of his visit. When the Minister left the State Department he said the time seemed inopportune and that for the present the diplomatic representatives of the six South and Central American countries, who had approached the Mexican Embassy on the subject of mediation, had received assurance that the Carranza Government was favorable to the principle, would not tender their good offices to the States. He indicated the attempt to arrange mediation might be renewed if Carranza's reply to Lansing's last note furnished any basis on which a proposal could be founded: The States are now waiting for Carranza's final word in reply to the note sent yesterday demanding the release of the prisoners taken at Carrizal. A formal diplomatic announcement of the intentions of the note reached Mexico City last night. Washington officials look for an answer in a day or two. Meanwhile congress and the war department have put new urgency into their preparations for war.

LONDON BUDGET.

LONDON, To-day.
Turning to the offensive in the Trentino and across the border in Italy where they were driven recently by the Austrians, the Italians have forced the Austrians to a general retreat along the entire front. A large number of positions have been recaptured by King Victor Emmanuel's troops. They are still on the heels of the Austrians, who are declared to be rapidly falling back before the Italian advance.

Vienna admits the withdrawal of the Austrian forces between Brenta and Etach Rivers, a manoeuvre which they declared was made to safeguard full freedom of action. The Russians in Bukovina have made further progress against the Austrian-Hungarians in the region of Kimpulung, but in operations north of Kutly the Austrians have repulsed the Russian attacks, inflicting heavy casualties on the invaders, according to Vienna. In Galicia the Russians left the region of Bozacz have at last broken the deadlock and thrown their Cossacks across the Dneiestef. Heavy fighting continues in Volhynia, especially around Sokut to the north of Lutsk. Here Vienna says the Germans stormed the Russian positions over a front about 3,000 metres and held the captured positions against all counterattacks. Along the Styra from Kolki to Sokut the Germans are still vigorously bombarding the Russian positions, while around Lneuwka on the Zrökhod River they have launched repeated infantry attacks in mass formations, which Petrograd asserts were all repulsed. In the region north of the Pripeet marshes to as far as Jacob-

AUSTRIAN TRANSPORTS SUNK.

ROME, To-day.
An official communication regarding the sinking says Italian warships entered the Durazzo roadstead on the night of the 25th and sank two steamers, one 5,000 tons the other 3,000 tons laden with arms and munitions. The warships returned without loss to their base notwithstanding the heavy fire of the enemy.

BULL MOOSE PARTY NO MORE.

SUBMARINES AGAIN BUSY.

MARSEILLES, To-day.
The French steamer Fournal and the British steamer Cardif have been sunk by submarines in the Mediterranean.

ANOTHER VICTIM.

LONDON, To-day.
The Italian barque San Francisco, from Buenos Ayres for Genoa, was sunk by a submarine on Saturday off Barcelona. Crew saved.

RUSSIAN LINE BROKEN AT ONE POINT.

LONDON, To-day.
According to the latest Vienna official communication the Austro-Germans have effected a breach in the Russian front in the Lutsk salient near the Svidenckvi bridge head, an important position on the direct road to Kovel. This statement is in contradiction to the Petrograd report, but probably was issued later. Otherwise than in the Lutsk region neither side has made any headway in this theatre. The Times correspondent at Russian headquarters on this front explains the facility with which the Germans can reinforce their line, and says this makes the maintaining of the Russian positions here very difficult.

CABINET CRISIS FEARED.

LONDON, To-day.
Signs indicate that an acute character is brewing on the Irish question, says the Chronicle. If Earl Selborne's resignation as President of the Board of Agriculture stood alone it would not cause alarm, but it is feared that it will be followed by the retirement also of Lansdowne, Walter Long, President of the Local Government Board; and Lord Cecil, Minister War Trade.

FRENCH GAINS AT VERDUN.

PARIS, To-day.
The French have captured another section of trenches at Thlaumont in the Verdun sector, according to to-day's official statement. The struggle for possession of the village of Fleury is still progressing. Three Allied aeroplanes dropped 65 shells on German ships near the Belgian coast.

RAID CASUALTIES.

BERLIN, To-day.
A report of the aeroplane raid on Karlsruhe on June 22 shows 110 persons, including 5 women and 75 children killed; 147 persons injured, including 20 women and 79 children.

ACTIVITY AT SALONIKI.

SALONIKI, To-day.
There is renewed activity on the French front. An engagement occurred between Patrols at Liumuitza on the right bank of the Vardar and there has been cannonading in the neighborhood of Ardan Lake in the region of Kalmovo. The bombardment of Jeroj has been resumed.

Chairman Gosling and his brother Commissioners Withers, Ayre, Bradshaw, McNamara and Morris visited the Southside last night and addressed a meeting of the municipal voters in St. Mary's Hall. Despite the fact that a large number of the sturdy voters of the Southside were busy, looking after their fishing interests, a big crowd assembled to greet the Commissioners. Volleys of musketry announced their arrival and throughout the meeting a continuous fusillade was kept up, while time and again the speakers were interrupted by the hearty applause. Mr. Jas. L. Noonan was called to fill the chair which he did in an able manner. He extolled the work of the Commission since the time it came in being two years ago, and pointed out that the gentlemen on the platform before them were men who had given of their valuable time and services in the interest of our beloved city, for which they never accepted one cent of remuneration. He regretted the absence of Mr. McGrath, who was attending an executive meeting of the L.S.P.U.

Mr. Gosling was then introduced and was greeted with loud applause, and for upwards of an hour he reviewed the work of the Commission since its inauguration two years ago. He showed where 3-5 of our water supply was being wasted or approximately three million gallons of water out of five million per day was of no value to the city, and should a big fire break out there would be little hope for the town. Happily such a state of affairs does not now exist, and with the addition of George's Pond, which has been converted into a natural reservoir, sufficient pressure can be secured at any part of the city when needed. He pointed out that by this splendid water service he hoped to reduce the rates of insurance by 25 p.c. or a total of $50,000 savings to the people who insure. The absentee landlord and estate holders on long term leases came in for a large amount of just criticism. About 5,000 feet of 12 inch pipe had been ordered for the Southside and would be laid this year, providing the Commission was returned to power. The Southside road which is in an almost impassable condition will also be attended to in the near future. "We have no other interest," said Mr. Gosling, "than your interest, and what we have done was done with the best intentions for the uplifting of the city we all love. All we ask is an opportunity to finish our work." Mr. Gosling on taking his seat was loudly applauded.

Mr. Bradshaw followed, and dealt mainly with sanitary conditions as they existed two years ago and now. From his experiences as a civil engineer for 15 years, he was in a position to understand thoroughly the state of affairs in which we lived. He pointed out the old system of carting night soil to the country farms and the present system of depositing it in the ocean by means of the pit and sewerage connections at the sanitary stables. As a proof that this idea was the best in the interests of the public health, Dr. Brehm, Rendell and Mitchell reported favorably on the system. It was curious that some of his opponents should wait until the present moment to condemn this system. He also spoke on ventilation and overcrowding of schools.

Mr. Ayre spoke highly of the work of Mr. Gosling and his brother Commissioners, and dealing with the question of arrears, stated that certain persons who were working hardest against the Commission were persons whom the Board made pay the taxes they owed the city. Mr. Ayre said: "Give us a clean city, then everyone will be happy."

Mr. McNamara, who was a member of the office and purchasing committee, showed how they saved the city thousands of dollars by getting things duty free, whereby in one item alone they saved the city $500. Speaking of the electric light, he proposed to connect the city with the water power of Mobile, 24 miles from St. John's. By supplying the city at half the cost of the present rate they would have a revenue of $75,000 a year profit for other civic improvements. Mr. Grace is now getting its light for 15c, a light per month and there is no reason why St. John's should not have the same privilege.

Mr. Morris, in dealing with the water supply, stated to the large audience, what happened at an interview with the Inspector General of the Fire Department at a meeting of the Board. The Inspector General stated that as far as our water supply was concerned "we were living in a Fool's Paradise." Mr. Morris, in brief, reviewed the work of the Council for the past two years and concluded by asking one and all to mark their ballots straight for the Commission.

A GOOD CITIZEN.

Classifying the people of one's acquaintance is always a favorite diversion. "People who like olives and people who don't," is one quoted by Gellert Burgess. "People who like Charles Lamb and Barrie and people who don't," is my favorite. A friend of mine advanced an interesting one the other day: "There are just two classes of people in the world," she said; "people who are courteous enough to answer invitations to subscription affairs, and people who are not."

A Hall Mark of Breeding. It is a hall mark of breeding, isn't it, to attend to these bothersome little matters? There are some things that etiquette absolutely requires that we do. No one but an utter boor would think of ignoring a personal and private invitation. Above and beyond these rigid obligations are the amenities that those who have the truest courtesy in their hearts observe.

The finest lady (in its best sense) that I know is absolutely punctilious about these things. She has many interests and her mail is full of appeals and invitations of one sort or another. And she never fails to attend to one of them. She courteously refuses the invitation to the subscription dance, she conscientiously records her vote for the college trustee, she indicates her hope of being present at the concert.

And She Answers Them The Day They Arrive. And most wonderful of all, she does each thing promptly, the day the letter arrives. "They take no more time than than later," she explains. I asked her once why she was so attentive to these matters, for many of the invitations are from people for whom she cares nothing, and she said simply, "Isn't that part of being a good citizen?"

And I agreed that it was. "Good breeding," someone has said, "is a combination of much sense, some good-nature and a little self-denial for the sake of others, with a view to obtaining the same indulgence from them."

Now what are laws but agreements founded on the same ideal of "self-denial for the sake of others with a view to obtaining the same indulgence from them?"

So good breeding and good citizenship are twins. Are you a good citizen?

With My Letter Friends. Question—Is it necessary to wait for an invitation before you go to visit friends in a distant city? Answer—Would you like to have those friends visit you without an invitation? Unless a very great degree of intimacy exists, I cannot imagine doing such a thing, and even then I should rather be made absolutely sure of my welcome by a definite invitation. Of course where a general invitation exists, it is allowable to write and ask if a specific date is convenient.

The June Bug.

By GEORGE FITCH. Author of "At Good Old Sivash." The June Bug deserves an essay all by himself because of his temperament. He is optimistic, impetuous, incorrigible, thoughtless, erratic, noisy and bothersome. If he could be trained to give a college yell he would pass in the dark for a college freshman, home from vacation. Scientifically, the June Bug is a large brown insect with a solid ivory head and six legs equipped with hooks on the shins, which enable him to hang on like an office holder when he drops into the back hair of the lady next door who is prominent in society, and is calling for the first time. This is a favorite deed of the June Bug's. He is not as handsome nor nearly as talented as some other bugs, but he moves in the best society and gets into some homes where many a Senator would feel bashful. The June Bug travels like an aeroplane, producing a loud humming noise and banking and planing with great skill. He also lands like an aviator, by running into something and coming down with a crash. He was born with a purpose and spends his life trying to achieve it. This purpose is to destroy a house by butting it from within. Night after night the June Bug pursues this purpose with the utmost earnestness, ramming mirrors, assaulting ceilings, putting dents in lamp chimneys and battering book cases, lying quietly on the floor after each attack until his head has stopped whirling, and he can pry himself off his back. A June Bug may come bumping down fifty times in fifty minutes, but this will not prevent him from rising the fifty-first time and dashing at the brick mantelpiece with a headache and a grim determination. Scientists have figured that June Bugs have expended in attacking brick walls enough energy to lift the Great Pyramid six inches. This impresses us with the foolishness of the June Bug until we reflect that man has expended enough energy carrying torches in political campaigns to turn the same pyramid over and stand it on its apex. We may learn a lesson from the cheerfulness and perseverance of the June Bug. He has never yet knocked a house down, but he goes into the job each time with increasing vigor. If June Bugs could vote they would all be Third Party Prohibitionists.

Back From the North.

The S. S. Prospero, Capt. A. Kean, returned from the northward last evening. Dense fog was met during the trip. She brought a full freight and the following saloon passengers: C. Kelly, A. Andrews, R. Joseph, Rev. Tarahan, Rev. Seeley, R. Parsons, A. Saphire, W. Alcock, Dr. Howlett, T. Waldron, B. Peet, M. Mitchell, F. D. Scott, Master Scott, Dr. Carnell, J. Murphy, N. Guy, E. Maybill, W. Tibbs, J. Lockyer, A. North of Pogo the fishery is poor and the outlook for both trappers and handliners is bad. Comparatively speaking the catch ashore in White Bay to date is phenomenally small. However, south of the northern port mentioned the very contrary is the case and the prospects are very encouraging. Some trappers around Twillingate have big catches ashore already.

Football.

The B. I. S. defeated the St. Bon's last evening by 2 goals to 1. The game was very uninteresting to the onlookers as the field was enveloped in thick fog and only very seldom could a player be seen from the grand stand playing the ball. Both sides scored once before the interval. During the second period the B. I. S. notched up the winning goal. Mr. Foster (Saints), refereed and the teams were:— B. I. S.—H. Phelan, goal; T. Dugan, Walsh, backs; Brien, Woods, Hart, halves; Phelan, O'Reilly, McGrath, Morgan, Smith, forwards. HEAD WAITER: The bathroom is ready, sir, always. There's plenty of 'ot water, you'll find clean 'ot towels in the 'ot cupboard in the bathroom and the Gas Fire lighted in your room.

GUEST: Right 'ot—and dinner at 8 sharp, please!

HEAD WAITER:—What'll you 'ave, sir—a nice sole, leg of mutton and sweets?

GUEST: Well, if that isn't troubling the cook too much—I'm rather late, I'm afraid.

HEAD WAITER: No trouble at all, sir. You see, sir, our kind of comfort means comfort for us as well as our people. We don't 'ave no coals to carry, no fires to make up, no bathrooms to attend to—This 'ere gas, if I may say so, saves money and time, and—

GUEST: You may say so at dinner time, please, I'm off to have that bath . . . (ascends stairs slowly) . . . Decent old boy, though he does talk a lot; and a real nice place. Thank heaven, I've struck a decent billet at last! (The bathroom door bangs sharply.)

Von Tirpitz--And After

(By Hector C. Bywater, The Navy.)

There seems no reason to doubt that Grand Admiral Alfred Von Tirpitz, for nineteen years Secretary of State for the German Navy, has ended his long career in disgrace, been thrown over by his imperial master, and consigned to political oblivion with the empty copulation of another title. With an incorrigible sense of fair play, certain writers on this side have ventured to express something like sympathy with the fallen German statesman, on the ground that his nineteen years of brilliant and loyal service have been scurvily regarded by Kaiser and country. But Britons should be the last people on earth to sympathize with Tirpitz. He was one of the prime instigators of the war plot. The bitterest and most implacable of anglophobes, he made it his life work to ruin and destroy Great Britain and the British Empire. Any weapon, fair or foul, seemed good to him. He knew, none better, that his naval policy was bound to bring about an Anglo-German war in the long run, nor was he at any great pains to conceal the fact. Like every true German, he had the lowest possible opinion of British intelligence and British institutions. We have been told that he had a great admiration for the British Navy, but there is no evidence to bear it out. It is true he was always careful to express to foreign visitors his veneration for Nelson, but through the medium of his journalistic satellites he never wearied of sneering at and belittling the British naval service of the present day.

Press Campaign Against England.

During the sixteen years that preceded the war a press campaign of the utmost violence had been waged against Britain. It was organized by Tirpitz himself and largely financed from the funds of his department. A few months after his appointment in 1897 he got together a band of reptile scribes and bade them depict Great Britain as the arch-enemy of Germany. Anglophobia had always been latent among the German people. It was his purpose to fan it into an all-devouring flame. So swift was his success that in less than three years he had wrought public opinion to such a pitch that it welcomed the big naval program of 1900, avowedly aimed at Great Britain and introduced during the blackest week of the South African War. From that day the purpose of the German navy was clear to the whole world. Until the actual moment to strike had arrived, Tirpitz thought it prudent to scatter dust in British eyes, though it is only fair to admit that he himself troubled little to do so, and left the task of chloroforming the British nation to his ministerial colleagues. As the victims were only too ready to be victimized, Tirpitz went on with his work in the confidence that Great Britain would keep quiet until he was ready to attend to her. In one respect only, but that the all-important one, did he have bad luck. The war came before his plans were fully matured. There is reason to believe that he fought against the rupture in August, 1914, as strenuously as any pacifist, or as strenuously as he would have fought for it a few years later. But he was over-ruled by the military party, and had to go to war with a fleet which had not nearly reached the minimum standard of strength he had aimed at.

Tirpitz's Plan Felled.

The naval campaign had been an almost unbroken series of disappointments for Tirpitz. As originally planned it was to begin at his selected moment, and with a treacherous attack which might well have robbed the British fleet of a considerable portion of its strength at a single blow. It was to be Port Arthur over again, but on an immeasurably greater scale. Then a cloud of armed merchantmen was to harry British shipping at every point of the globe, and in such numbers as to make effective pursuit impossible. These vessels were all earmarked for the work, but only a few had their guns and ammunition on board. The war equipment of the others reposed at Hamburg and Bremen, ready to be put on board when the hour for action drew nigh. A vast organization had been created abroad for the purpose of ensuring regular supplies and coal for the raiders. Everything had been provided for, and Tirpitz had no reason to doubt that within a month or two of the declaration of war Britain's mercantile marine would have been swept off the seas. What his other plans were we do not know, but they certainly did not include a sojourn of twenty months by the high sea fleet in the Kiel Canal. Having made his arrangements down to the last detail and requiring only a few more years to bring everything to a state of perfect readiness, Tirpitz may be forgiven if he used hard language when the storm broke just at the wrong time. He had little or no warning of what was coming, and the can well imagine the feelings with which he regarded Tirpitz, who, not content with drowning American citizens, continued to heap scurrilous abuse on their government through his reptile press.

Von Tirpitz -- and After

Fall of the Mischief-Maker.

The suppression of the "Tageszeitung" was a direct snub to Tirpitz. But a worse one was to follow. Just previous to the sinking of the Arabic the German Chancellor had personally instructed Count Bernstorff, the Ambassador at Washington, to assure President Wilson that U-boats would henceforth be given definite orders not to molest passenger steamers. This can hardly have been done with the consent of Tirpitz, who has always been the supreme authority in naval affairs, and was not prepared to abate one jot of submarine "fightfulness." But the Chancellor ignored him, for once Tirpitz had to suffer it. He was compelled to apologize for the Arabic outrage, and to give a promise of good behaviour in future. Nevertheless it was clear that he continued to urge U-boat commanders to sink and spare not, for the murderous war which, thanks to the vigilance of the British navy, had been interrupted, in home waters, went merrily on in the Mediterranean. The situation thus created was plainly intolerable to the more responsible heads of the German government. Evidently matters came to a climax, and the Kaiser had to choose between Tirpitz and practically the rest of the Cabinet en bloc. The result was that after a reign of unprecedented length and power, the wildest mischief-maker in Europe has been driven out of office, to brood in solitude over the ruins of his life's work. The plaudits of his "cultured" countrymen may delight his ears if they are not deafened by the execrations of the whole civilized world. No sneaking sympathy for the man that is down should blind us to the fact that it was Tirpitz who ordered the Lusitania to be sunk, and thus sent in cold blood hundreds of innocent men, women, and little children to an awful death. In Germany his memory may endure as that of a great statesman and administrator. Elsewhere it will live as that of the man who perpetrated the gashest crime in the annals of the sea.

Tirpitz the German government is careful to add that no change in naval policy is contemplated. But this assurance need not be taken too seriously. Had "fightfulness" as usual been the order of the day there would have been no reason for the dismissal of the principal exponent of that policy. His fall can only mean that the German government are not determined to subordinate naval to national policy. Evidently they are not prepared to go to war with the United States on the submarine piracy issue, and it is therefore not only possible, but even probable that some modification of the U-boat campaign is in view. The future will show whether the departure of Tirpitz signifies the abandonment of the more ruthless methods which have disgraced German naval operations in the past. It must be remembered, however, that those methods were enthusiastically upheld by the German nation, which hailed every fresh violation of the laws of humanity with frantic glee. Hence it would be premature to count on a sudden change in this respect. Public opinion counts for little in Germany, especially in war-time, but even so it would take a stronger man than Herr von Bethmann-Hollweg to risk the fury of the people by depriving them of their favorite weapon against this country. Hence it is safest to assume that submarine piracy will be persisted in, but that more care is likely to be exercised in the treatment of neutral ships and subjects.

What Will His Successor Do?

Admiral von Capelle, the new naval Secretary, has worked for so many years under his predecessor that he is not likely to possess many original ideas, but may be expected to follow pretty closely in the footsteps of his old chief. From all accounts, however, he lacks the masterful resolution which enabled Tirpitz to surmount all opposition. If, as is suggested, the army people in Germany are pressing for more vigorous action by the fleet, Capelle may not be strong enough to resist the demand. Now that Tirpitz has gone the military element is probably supreme, and as it has every reason to be dissatisfied with the role hitherto played by the fleet, it may seize the opportunity to demand from the navy services more useful than that institution has yet performed. It is just possible therefore, that the change of control at the Marine Amt. may hasten the naval offensive which has long been foreshadowed by the feverish activity of the German dockyards.

"MEASLES."

Hundreds of children are suffering from "measles" at the present time, and one has to be very careful in trying to avoid the complications that often follow them.

A heavy "cough" is very prevalent during the present epidemic, and "Pneumonia" is the great danger. Avoid this by keeping a bottle of "Stafford's Phosphate Cough Cure" on hand.

A Strike-out—or a Two base Hit? (Grantland Rice.)

The postponed game between the Wanderers and Red Lions promises to be some exciting. Both have had the advantage of a week's additional practice, and should be in good condition to-morrow.

The Wanderers have the advantage, of course, in their championship lineup of last year being intact, but Hiltz is undaunted, and the pent-up defects of four years are ranking in his "manly buzzum."

It is reported that the Red Lions have a left handed pitcher which for the present they are keeping under cover. This is what is known as a "Southpaw" and is the dread of all right handed batters, but after all, being right or left handed means nothing in Baseball; the real test occurs above the collar.

Admirers of the Lions are expecting great things of Mike Power, their new backstop, and his discovery has resulted in "Lil' Arthur" playing his old and favourite position of holding down first. Our old friend "Timmy" will also conduct the operations of his pets from this position.

The Wanderers will present a new sunfielder in the person of Mister Cecil J. Hunt. He has been making a good showing in the outer gardens and grabbing the hard ones with unflinching regularity.

"Punky" Brown's old friends will be glad to see him in uniform again to-morrow after an enforced absence from the diamond through illness since the playing season of 1914.

Forty-one traps and 94 dories and skiffs are fishing. Prospects are very good and there is plenty of caplin. The lobster catch is poor to date. The ice has disappeared entirely and the oldest inhabitants never saw better weather. The prospects for a good fishery were never brighter."

June 24th. From J. Gosse, (Spaulding's Bay to Upper Sablon Cove)—The catch to date is only 30 qtrs. Eleven traps and 21 dories and skiffs are fishing. Prospects are not bright, and very little is being done by boat and liners.

June 24th. From M. J. White (Aquaforte to Caplin Bay)—Prospects are very good with plenty caplin on bait and very good fishing was done on trawls this week. The traps are not doing much as the cod holds off deep water. The catch is 1,758 qtrs. with 1,220 for last week. Four whale boats, 45 traps and 75 dories and skiffs are fishing.

GRAND PICTURES AT THE NICKEL.

Immense audiences attended the Nickel Theatre again last evening and were delighted with the excellent programme. "The Strange Case of Mary Page" was continued and was watched with the closest interest by all. "The Bubbles in the Glass" proved a delightful story. The comedy duo Bert Stanley's singing were pleasing features of the show. This evening the programme will be repeated for those who were unable to attend yesterday should be sure and go to-morrow "The Romance of Elaine" will be continued.

Our Baseball Column.

PLAGIARISED AND OTHERWISE.

THE BALL GAME.

Here end the sorrows of the race. All want and wretchedness and crime. Where care must seek another place, And sin abide another time.

Here where the heart's wiped clean and dry. Where in dull breasts the flame is lit. As young and old wait the reply—A Strikeout—or a Two base Hit? (Grantland Rice.)

The postponed game between the Wanderers and Red Lions promises to be some exciting. Both have had the advantage of a week's additional practice, and should be in good condition to-morrow.

The Wanderers have the advantage, of course, in their championship line-up of last year being intact, but Hiltz is undaunted, and the pent-up defeats of four years are rankling in his "manly buzzum."

It is reported that the Red Lions have a left handed pitcher which for the present they are keeping under cover. This is what is known as a "Southpaw" and is the dread of all right handed batters, but after all, being right or left handed means nothing in Baseball; the real test occurs above the collar.

Admirers of the Lions are expecting great things of Mike Power, their new backstop, and his discovery has resulted in "Lil' Arthur" playing his old and favourite position of holding down first. Our old friend "Timmy" will also conduct the operations of his pits from this position.

The Wanderers will present a new sunfielder in the person of Mister Cecil J. Hunt. He has been making a good showing in the outer gardens and grabs the hard ones with unflinching regularity.

"Punky" Brown's old friends will be glad to see him in uniform again to-morrow after an enforced absence from the diamond through illness since the playing season of 1914.

While reading in foreign exchanges of Umpires being busted on the bean with catchers' masks and other crude implements of war, we cannot help wondering what would happen if some player tried to bust Umpire

Montgomerie. Probably the player's intent would be private.

After asking both managers what the prospective chances were in to-morrow's game, both their replies were on similar lines and might be poetically (?) summed up as follows:

Our outfield is great, And our infield is fine, And we're getting better All the time. Look them over and you will see We speak the truth, and you'll agree, That some have speed, And some have class, And our pitchers haven't arms of glass.

* (Poetic license number 1798426.)

Some think that to-morrow's game will be a pitching duel between King and Cooney. The former has probably more speed and a greater assortment of stuff, but on the other hand Cooney is very cunning and is known as "The Old Reliable," and with his record behind him of level headedness and coolness in pinches, he never causes the team any worry. An admirer of his says "He's still got the same old shoulders; a chest like a belching saw; arms huge as an iron-moulder's; and a WALLOP that is a whale."

As eager statisticians grope amidst the records and the dope, each one will loudly brag and show you figures by the ream that prove conclusively his team is sure to win the flag.

We have received a request to publish "Casey at the Bat," the famous baseball poem. Could some reader kindly furnish us with a copy?

Just as this article was finished, our curfew boy brought us a postcard signed "F. V. C." on which was the following:—

An umpire died and went below To where his says "Hottest blaze glow. 'O, what rare bliss," he called, in mirth, "Compared to what I caught on earth!"

What prompted this being sent to us, was no doubt our article on the Umpires which appeared in Saturday's column.

Provided to-morrow is fine and warm, grand stand seats are likely to be at a premium as the meet between these two teams has always attracted an unusual number of Fans.

To the Ratepayers of St. John's.

At the request of a large number of my friends, both East and West, I have decided to place myself in Nomination at the forthcoming Municipal Election. Owing to the limited time between now and Polling Day, and the possibility of not being able to call on every elector personally, I would kindly ask them to accept this card as a personal canvass. I promise, if elected, to use all my energies to see that the civic taxes are spent judiciously. H. J. BROWNRIFF. Jun 16.16

The Sagona From Labrador.

Good Sign of Fish Along the Coast—Earliest Spring for Twenty Years. The s.s. Sagona, Capt. Parsons, arrived in port at 9.15 this morning from the Labrador after an absence of 14 days. The ship left here at 6 p.m. on the 13th inst. and called at intermediate ports in Conception Bay, Trinity Bay, Bonavista Bay and Twillingate, where she took on passengers and freight. On leaving Twillingate she proceeded direct for Battle Harbor and visited all the important fishing stations as far north as Emily Hr., where she dropped anchor June 20th. The captain reports dense fog close on the shore all along the coast, which prevented the Sagona from making much progress. The fishery is the best that has been seen for many years at this season of the year, as is evidenced by the large catches secured in a few days. Two traps at Francis Hr. accounted for 100 qts. during the time the ship was going north and returning from Emily Hr., and had not a heavy sea tangled the twine the quantity would have been doubled. At Griffin's Hr. 1 trap 40 qts.; Battle Hr., 30, and several other good catches. The settlers say this spring was the earliest for twenty years and that winter did not set in till almost up to the middle of December. There is not a speck of snow to be seen on the coast, while in other years it has often been from two to five feet deep in places at this date. Unfortunately the fur business was the worst for a long time. The winter being so mild, furbearing animals could obtain food inland instead of approaching the coast and bays where they frequently resort in the winter months to feast on fish and seals. The Sagona passed the s.s. Meige at 10 p.m. Saturday night at Battle Hr., while the latter was making port. The trip south was made in good time. Mr. Hull, an Englishman, but for many years a settler on Seal Island, married and with four children, made the trip to St. John's to offer his services to the Regiment. He has a brother serving in the British Army.

Does Not Believe Mr. Gosling.

Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir,—Will you kindly publish the enclosed affidavit in the interests of truth and justice. When I read Mr. Gosling's denial of Mr. Kelly's statements in yesterday's papers, I determined to make an investigation on my own account.

Having spent the best years of my life in inculcating principles of truth and honesty into the minds of the children of this country, I cannot sit idly by and see the citizens of this town deceived by the publication of a wholesale falsehood. MICHAEL J. JAMES.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN: This is to certify that between the hours of midnight and one this morning I followed one of the sanitary cars along its route. During the time I remained with the car—forty minutes—I counted sixty-six pails of night soil which was thrown into the earthenware hoppers in the section visited. The men doing the work informed me they were acting under orders and residents in the vicinity of the hoppers told me that this had been the custom for months past. MICHAEL J. JAMES. Sworn to at St. John's this 27th day of June, A.D., 1916.

Before me, D. J. KENT, Commissioner S.C.

[Mr. Gosling will no doubt be able to answer and explain Mr. James' statement. We will merely remark that it does not seem to us to answer Mr. Gosling's own previous statement at all. While apparently mindful of the imposing nature of an affidavit, our correspondent is not quite so clear as to what is evidence and what not. The Court is reluctantly compelled to reject the latter part of the affidavit entirely.—Ed.]

Prospects Never Brighter Before In the Straits.

The latest fishery reports received by the Board of Trade are:—

Between Blanc Sablon and Forteau, including Isle au Bois and Greenley Island, was received yesterday by the Board of Trade—"The total catch is 1,200 qts. Forty-one traps and 94 dories and skiffs are fishing. Prospects are very good and there is plenty of caplin. The lobster catch is poor to date. The ice has disappeared entirely and the oldest inhabitants never saw better weather. The prospects for a good fishery were never brighter."

June 24th. From J. Gosse, (Spaniard's Bay to Upper Island Cove)—"The catch to date is only 20 qts. Eleven traps and 21 dories and skiffs are fishing. Prospects are not bright and very little is being done by hook and liners."

June 24th. From M. J. White, (Aquatorte to Caplin Bay)—Prospects are very good with plenty caplin for bait and very good fishing was done on trawls this week. The traps are not doing much as the cod holds off in deep water. The catch is 1,758 qts. with 1,220 for last week. Four whale boats, 46 traps, and 75 dories and skiffs are fishing."
