Mr. McDougall's theme was "Democracy and Its Perils," and he handled it in a manner that showed deep study of the subject and a firm grasp of historical events and their effect upon the human race. He traced political government from the early history of the world up to the present time, and showed the marvelous good that Democracy had accomplished for the race in the securing of civil and religious liberty and raising the LARGE CARDS emphasizing three laws for the protection of childhood have been posted in town by the Council. These laws are as follows and will be enforced: iaws are as follows and will be enforced:
1.—No child under 16 years of age is permitted to be on the streets without a guardian after 9 p.m. 2. No child under 15 years unaccompanied by adults shall be permitted to attend any exhibition by Cinematograph, etc. This law is being evaded, but the persons so doing—such as pretending to take children in, are liable to a fine of not less than $50. 3. It is a crime to directly or indirectly sell, give or furnish to any person under the age of 16, cigarettes or cigarette papers or tobacco in any form. The first offence is $10, the second, $25. These laws are made by our legislators to safeguard our children and are meant not to curtail their pleasures but only to keep them

THE reopening and rededicating vices at the Presbyterian church Sunday were well attended, especially in the evening. Special music was rendered by the choir and the regular minister, Rev. J. C. Forster, was assisted by Rev. A. B. Winchester, of Knox Church, and they acquitted themselves very creditably. At the close of the public reception luncheon was served to the members of the Club and their guest, and an hour passed pleasantly in the usual way of A. B. Winchester, of Khox Church, Toronto, who preached morning and evening. The reverend gentleman is a forceful speaker, well skilled in the artistic use of speech, and drives home the truths of the gospel with dramatic force. His discourses were easerly and such gatherings.

It is expected that another reception will be held on Monday, April 20th, when the guest of the evening will be the Rev. Arthur Carlisle, of Windsor, a speaker of considerable note and ability. force. His discourses were eagerly and attentively listened to at both services. #### NOTE AND COMMENT.

The Masonic craft of Canada will take a prominent part in the celebration of the one hundred years of continuous peace between the British people and the people of the United States to be held this year. At a meeting of the board of general purposes of the Grand Lodge of Canada, it was decided to appropriate a sufficient amount of money for the entertainment of the grand masters from all the grand lodges in the United States, Canada, England, Ireland and Scotland.

of $750,000. There will be restaurants, a gymnasium, 350 bedrooms sleeping porches and shower baths, and a roof garden with tennis and basketball courts. The auditorium, seating 2500, where the Sunday ser vices will be held, is to be open the other six nights for lectures, concerts and other high-class entertainments. Throughout the week billiard rooms, ocial halls and even a nursery will be accessible to the public. This great combination of church, hotel and club is to be managed by the pastor, Dr. Selecman, who aptly describes such an enterprise as "first century Christianity with twentieth century action."

Interesting experiments with a new anaesthetic have been conducted at Cambridge laboratory. The substance, which is called urethene is a combination of urea and alcohol. It is administered hypodermically, and drowsiness soon becomes very deep, unconsciousness and insensibil-ity to pain is complete. There is perfect security when it is used in any operation. The advantage claimed for the new anaesthetic is that heart failure never occurs when it is properly used while a majority of the deaths from chloroform are due to heart failure.

Dominion Department of Agriculture Dairy Branch

The following is a sample of what is discovered by the simple weighing of milk and testing of samples. A four year old cow gave in one month 920 pounds of milk containing 35 pounds of fat. In the same herd a five year old gave only 330 pounds of milk and 19 pounds of fat. Thus the first cow gave more than the other two combined.

This further fact is interesting this particular cow was sold by a man absolutely ignorant of her value or dairy capacity. The present owner, though keeping individual records, knows her better and would not sell her for less than thirty dollars more than he paid for her.

Another fact is worth careful attention: the total of the herd for a day or a month will never reveal these good individuals. What the owner needs to know for certain is obtained only from a record of each cow he keeps. You can save labor and good feed by bestowing them on cows that you know are worth keeping: you will then be in a position to keep your best cows, and will not lose money by selling good cows cheap.

IN LOVING MEMORY of all who perished in the Atlantic, when the steamship Titanic sank to her ocean grave on April 14th, 1912.

Out upon the broad Atlantic 'Neath a starry April sky
In the stillness, through the darkness
O'er the waters came the cry: Come at once, our ship is sinking, Settling by the forward deck And we fear before the morning

She will be a total wreck." Men remained to do their duty Men remained to render cheer To the helpless, frightened creatures Round whom death was hovering near For they said we must be British British to the heart's deep core Save the women, save the children Though we never see the shore.

Noble women, too, were standing By their husbands on that deck Women whose unflinching courage Calls forth every heart's respect.
May their memories be cherished
All adown the coming years
For in them we see the Love-God Conquerless by deathly fears.

As the giant ship was sinking Sinking to her ocean grave Hundreds leaped into the water Hoping thus their lives to save But the cruel, cold Atlantic
Hungered for its Human prey
And ere morn their pallid faces
Lay upturn'ed to the spray.

Ah, dear reader, here's a lesson We, like ships, are smoothly sailing
Thinking danger far away
But if on some hidden Ice-berg
Our frail bark should strike some Have we on the gospel life-belt Are we ready for the fray?

-By LILLIE FORBES GUNTHER.

Spare the children from suffering from worms by using Miller's Worm Powders, the most effective vermifuge that can be got with which to combat these iusidious foes of the young and helpless. There is nothing that excels this preparation as a worm destroyer, and when its qualities become known in a household no other will be used. The medicine acts by itself, requiring no purgative to assist it, and so thoroughly that nothing more is desired.

Read a Dictionary Twice

(The Christian Science Monitor) To illustrate the abilities of General Caleb Cushing, one of New England's famous men, a writer in The New York famous men, a writer in The New York Sun vouches for the following remarkable feat. It was in the fifties that the publishers of Websters Dictionary requested General Cushing to write a friendly notice of the work. General Cushing replied that he had read it and that if they expected complimentary notice of a work that contained five thousand errors they would be disappointed. The publishers replied that if he would prove his statement to the satisfaction of the editor, Professor Porter, of Harvard, they would believe him. Thereupon he read the dictionary through a second time and mailed a list of five thousand errors to Protessor Porter. This extraordinary achievement, declares the writer, justifies the statement made in 1876 by Wendell Phillips that he considered General Cushing to be the most learned man of the day. Sun vouches for the following remarkable

Cruelty To Animals

(Toronto Star)

A great work lies before the hum-ane societies in Toronto and else-The people need education on the subject of humanity to an imals. The instinct to destroy wild life is very widespread. The other day a squirrel was seen on a street where a sewer is being constructed. A laborer who saw it at once became widly excited. He was not satisfied to watch the graceful movements of the harmless little creature. destructive instinct was aroused. He pursued the animal as furiously as if it had been an inveterate enemy of the human race, and only the badness of his aim saved its life.

Now this man was probably no monster, but an ordinary good-natured human being. If anybody had asked him why he wanted to kill the squirrel he would have been puzzled to answer. A live squirrel is a thing of beauty. A dead squirrel of that size is of no use to anybody. The instinct must have come down from some savage ancestor roaming the woods in search of prey, and afraid that he would starve to death unless he devoured whatever came in his way

But it is the business of education to remove those savage instincts. It is proposed to teach religion in the schools. There is not the least difficulty in teaching at least such elements of universal religion as kind-ness to animals. Such teaching is never forgotten. The savage instinct is easily eradicated. Many a boy who has been in the habit of destroying animal life has experienced a sudden revulsion of feeling at the mere sight of the lifeless body; has asked him-

A Story Showing How a Story Came to Be Written

By EMMA BLAKE ******

"What's this, Cartwright?" asked Mr. Chandler, managing partner of the firm of Chandler Bros., publishers. "This manuscript comes from Hay thorn Hayes. I didn't understand when he went away that he had an unpublished novel finished.

"Nor I, sir. Nevertheless this manuscript has been sent us by express, and a letter has come by mail with regard to it."

Mr. Cartwright handed his employer a type written letter, which read as

Messrs. Chandler Bros.:

Dear Sirs-On the eve of my departure I find a manuscript, which I send you by express. It was written some time ago and laid aside until I should have made a market for it by other work more likely to be accepted by a wider though perhaps lower grade of readers. I have no time to enter further into particulars. Perhaps you will use it during my absence. Very truly yours,

Mr. Chandler read the letter and

Mr. Chandler read the letter and looked puzzled. "Do you think there is anything wrong about it?" asked Cartwright. "I don't know that there is. If on either the manuscript or the letter there was a scrap of Hayes' writing I would like it better. However, you may have the story read and if there is a marked difference between its style and that of his other works let The reader reported that there was considerable difference between the style of "The Aeronaut" and that of Mr. Hayes' other works. There was a crudity in it that indicated he had written it before he had had much Chandler Bros. were in a quandary.

They had published two novels for Haythorn Hayes under his initials. "H. H.," with very good success. They had advised him to print his full name on the title page, and he had ignored their advice to his sorrow, for with success came a desire to be known as a successful author. But since "H. H." was vell known to the public and Haythorn Hayes was not, a novel by the latter would not reap the benefit of the advertising of one by the former. He was therefore obliged to continue to publish under his initials.

"There's no hope of reaching Hayes," said the head of the publishing firm. "He has gone up the Amazon river to find the legendary amazon women, who he believes have or have bad a a story about them. If we don't publish this "Aeronaut" we'll doubtless of-fend him, and when he returns some rival firm will get his Amazon novel. Put the book in press and advertise largely that it is forthcoming. We must make sure of the story be is after, and the best way to do so is to put him under obligations to us by booming this 'Aeronaut' story." "The Aeronaut" was offered to the publishers late in the autumn and was rushed through for the spring trade. A paragraph in a literary journal had anounced Mr. Hayes' departure with a view to getting material for a unique novel, and his publishers occasionally jogged the memory of the public by an item as to the singular possibilities of such a theme.

However, when "The Aeronaut" appeared it very soon became manifest that it must stand on its own merits. Reing unlike Mr. Hayes' other works.

it did not appeal especially to his admirers. For some time it looked as though it would be a failure. Those dealers who had bought copies with the privilege of returning those that were unsold began to send them in by the hundreds.

"Never mind," said Mr. Chandler, "we'll make it all up on the Amazon

But one day there came a call for more copies of "The Aeronaut" by a prominent dealer, which was followed by new orders from other booksellers. There was evidently a call for the work on the part of the public. It was not long before the fact was recognized that the sale of the book had taken a start. The start became a demand and the demand became a clamor from the dealers to supply the public. The sale of "The Aeronaut" far surpassed that of any of Mr. Hayes' other works and increased his reputation tenfold.

Chandler Bros. thought it a good opportunity to make advertising capital of the fact that no one knew who "H. H." was. They therefore had an item inserted in a newspaper stating that he was a prominent playwright named Henry Harbeson. Mr. Harbeson denied the change. Another item named another man, and it was not long before half a dozen prominent persons were trying to put off an honor that did not belong to them. Chandler Bros. chuckled and refused positively to give the name of the real author.

Meanwhile Haythorn Hayes was hunting for the amazons in the interior of South America. Nothing came from him for a year, at the end of which time he reappeared at the mouth of the river from the Amazonas province of Brazil and reported that he had found traces of the amazon women. But he would give no particulars. Chandler Bros. made as much of the news as possible and eagerly looked for his return to his home.

One morning he appeared, bronzed by the equatorial sun, in the office of

"Well, Hayes," said Mr. Chandler when the greetings were over, "we've been making hay while the sun wasn't shining. Ha, ha! While you have been lost in Brazil we have been reaping a big profit for you out of your 'Aeronaut.'

"That's a very good joke," replied the author, "but I don't know what you mean by "The beronaut."

"Why, she you sent us at the time you were leaving. We have a theck for some $12,000 for you for royalties."

"I sent you no manuscript as I was leaving, and I have never heard of a novel called "The Aeronaut"

The two Chandler brothers and the junior partner, who were standing about smiling benignly upon the fa-nous author, suddenly lowered the corners of their mouths and looked at each other.

"Nonsense, old fellow," said Chandler senior. "Your modesty has always stood in your way. You've written the biggest thing of the year. I hope you're not going to deny it."

Nevertheless Mr. Hayes maintained his denial and finally got the story of how the manuscript came to the irm, its doubts about the identity of the author and other information. He called for a copy of the book, took 't home with him and did not pause after beginning till he had finished it. The next day he returned to the publishing house, was closeted with the head of the firm and said:
"Mr. Chandler, it does not reflect much credit on your house that you did not realize on reading this work that I had not the ability to write it. I haven't either the imagination or the ingenuity. Moreover, you should have known that it was not written by a man and that it was written by a woman. Some one endeavored to get it through by using my initials and sucthing I am capable of attaining. But what surprises me is that whoever the impostor may be she has not attempted to reap the pecuniary reward arising through her imposture."

"Wait," replied Mr. Chandler. "That will come in time."

After a prolonged interview Mr. Hayes departed, having obtained a promise that if the impostor were discovered he should be notified before any action in the premises was taken. A month later the author received a telephone message that if he would call at the office of Chandler Bros. he would hear something of the imposture that had been practiced on him and on the firm. On arrival Mr.

Chandler said to him: "A lady named Helen Herbert some time ago published through us a little book of poems, on which we lost some money. Since then we have heard nothing from her till this morning, when we received this note."

He handed the note to Mr. Hayes, who read:

who read;
Messrs, Chandler Bros.:

Dear Sirs—On my departure for Africa about a year ago, where I have been with a view to investigating whether the pygmes there are the same as mentioned by the historian Herodotus, I sent you the manuscript of a novel called "The Aeronaut," hoping that you might use it during my absence. On a railway train I purchased a copy of the book published with your imprint. Why did you put my initials on the title page instead of giving my full name? I hear the story has been very generally read, and if you have anything in the way of royalties to my credit I should be obliged if you would send me a check. Cordially yours,

HELEN HERBERT.

Mr. Hayes looked up at Mr. Chandler

Mr. Hayes looked up at Mr. Chandler and met that gentleman's eyes fixed on him with a singular expression.
"This beats any theme I ever worked up," remarked the author.
"It's the old story of truth being stranger than fiction."

"And we stupids could only interpret the mystery as an imposture."
"No imposture at all, nothing but a commonplace occurrence. "If you are about to send the lady a check I beg you to make me your mes-

"Certainly."

Mr. Chandler tapped a bell and called for a check for the balance of Miss Herbert's account. It amounted to more than $14,000. Mr. Hayes took it and later called at the address the authoress had given. When she appeared Mr. Hayes found her to be about twenty-six years old, comely and with an intellectual head.
"I have a check for you for royalties on your 'Aeronaut,'" he said, handing it to her, "from Chandler Bros. They published it at your request, signed 'H. H.,' thinking I had written it. Had your name instead of my initials been attached to it, it would not have been published and might not have got the start required to make it "That being the case," said the lady,

"this money belongs to you. I will make it payable to your order." "It does not belong to me, for I could not have written the story. It s beyond my capabilities."

"But if the story was accepted on acount of my initials being mistaken for yours and got its start from the same cause I have been banking on your capital.' "And I doubtless have received much redit from your novel. It seems to me that we are both fortunate through an error. The immediate benefit, the cash for royalties, is yours: mine will come He handed her the check, and the first part of the partnership was closed. This was the beginning of an acquaintance that produced that remarkable collaboration "The Amazon," a novel requiring the delicate touch of woman, while the local color was supplied by one who had visited the wild country in which the scene of the story was laid. It was followed by "The Pygmies," which met with equal success.

GEORGE CHAMBERS. WATFORD PLANING MILLS

The Farmer and the Birds.

A farmer in Saskatchewan, turning furrows a mile long, said regret fully that the days were uneventful. Except when he spoke to his horses there was no sound to break the stillness about him. The plow never struck against a stone. No bird raised its voice in his hearing.

It is different here in Ontario. The farmer enters upon his spring work to the music of the band of songsters that throng his trees. As he goes about the farm-yard chores the call of robin redbreast to his lady love thrills him with its enthusiasm. The feathered tribe take up the carol in the near-by woodlands.

But there is danger of the extermination of the bird life of the country. The man behind the shotgun is one of the dangers. Absence of real game has the effect upon him of "trying a shot" at the little birds. The boy in quest of birds' eggs is another menace. There are many such. Where there should be encouragement there is discouragement. Farmers here and there have rec ognized that the birds are necessary to the protection of their fruit and grain from crawling insects, aside from the joy that the songsters bring to country life. It is good to see, therefore, that at least one farmers' organization has actively taken up cudgels in defense of the birds.

It is our painful duty to record the death of Mrs. Elizabeth Scott, of the 12th line, Brooke, who died on the 27th of March, after a few hours illness.

Mrs. Scott was born on the 17th of Octobor, 1838, in Dunfries, Scotland. Her maiden name was Anderson. Her parents moved to the Isle of Skye when she was a mere child. In the year 1847 the whole family came to Canada and located in Westminster, Middlesex County, where she grew up to young womanhood.

On the 10th of April, 1857, she was united in marriage to James Scott, also a matter of Dumfries, Scotland, and who died at the early age of 34 years, leaving his young widow with six small children which she reared to manhood and womanhood.

The funeral services were conducted at the foundation was the house by the Rev. Mr. Easson, of Napier, and at the cemetery by Rev. Mr. Smith, of Dorchester.

"A CRITICISM ON WATFORD MORAL REFORM"

By REV. R. STEVENSON

By Rev. R. Stevenson

To the Editor of Guide-Advocate:

DEAR SIE: —I would like you to grant me the favor of a small space in the Guide-Advocate, as I wish to bring before the people of Watford a certain matter of importance which I think ought to be known.

I have the informed that certain ladies of the town held a meeting lately for the purpose of discussing the "PROS" and "CONS" of local "MORAL REFORM," and at that meeting a strong feeling their duty in the way of counteracting certain with supposed to exist in connection with the new armory, and the influence of same among the young men and boys who frequent that place, I also understand that it is the aim and purpose of these ladies to bring about a certain reformation in the "RUNNING" of the armory, which the ministers, by reason of their "NEGLIGENCE," have failed to do. Sir, as one of the five outlary ministers I feel it is my duty to make a few pointed remarks in connection with this much discussed subject. I will commence by saying that I do not feel in the least condemned for the neutral stand I have taken in connection with the much discussed subject. I will commence by saying that I do not feel in the least condemned for the neutral stand I have taken in connection with the armory. At the opening ceremony some time ago, certain of the ministers were present, but I was absent, not on account of any ill-feeling which I had toward the mence by saying that I do not feel in the least condemned for the neutral stand I have taken in connection with the armory. At the opening ceremony some time ago, certain of the ministers were present, but I was absent, not on account of any ill-feeling which I had toward the occasion, but from certain conscientious convictions which I felt bound to recognize. As an exvolunteer of the British Army I have served my time in armories, and I know exactly what they stand for, and I feel satisfied that any interest I might manifest would not bear very much weight either one way or another. I have listened to a good deal of criticism lately about the impropriety of dancing and card-playing being allowed in the armory. All the town knows that I, as a christian minister, do not approve of these things but I am broad-minded enough to recognize the fact that these amusements are thought to the control of the control of time a bont the rawages perpetrated by the White Slave fiends we recoil with a feeling of horror and indignation and say "HOW TERRIBLE I WIY IS THIS ALLOWED "And yet right in our midst the NUCLEUS of this terrible evil is being fed and nourished, and comparatively few are concerned about the matter. The day may come when many of the fathers and mothers of Watford will awaken to a mortifying sense of their negligence in home discipline and training, but that day may be too late to effect a remedy. Parents ought to INSIST on minors being indoors after a respectable hour; it is impossible for the constable to be in every corner at the one time? But some one raises the question, "WAY DON'T THE CHURCHES, LOOK INTO THE MATTER?" Well, I cannot speak for all the churches, I can only speak for the one over which I ampastor. If any of my people go to ruin through the influence of any of the above mentioned evils, I can conscientiously say that they have been warned regularly and, the responsibility rests with themselves. He and especially the world is not destined to be reformed in that way, or by that means, One of our poets has written, "THE WAND." and it is very true, but she is ruling it in the wrong direction. Between the agitation caused by "WOMEN SUFFRAGISTS" and the "PASHION CRAZE," the world is in a sad condition; and I would strongly advise the lady "REFORMERS" of Watford to study well their position as women before they proceed further with their reform measures, for in the long run they will gain nothing but the contempt of levelheaded people who are willing to make the best of the situation which they cannot alter. I consider that the high honor and modesty of women are at stake when they attempt to do what is strictly the work of counciliors and legislators, if there are evils attached to the armory, it is no time now to raise a fuss; the proper time was before the armory was built. Furthermore, if our "REFORM" friends would examine the response to the council of the subject of the subject of the subject of

Woman Suffrage

The Toronto Evening Telegram reporting the debate in the Legislative on the above question, has the following:—"Bringing out his finest Emerald accent, R.J. McCormick, East Lambton, said that "ladies had a perfect right to vote if they owned property, whether they took the notion to get married or not. So far as their intelligence was concerned, if it wasn't for the ladies the churches wouldn't be in such good shape." Begorra:
And T. R. Atkinson, North Norfolk, said the "gallants" on the Government side were "flirting" with the question."
