HALIFAX, N. S., FRIDAY EVENING, JANUARY 9, 1914. YESTERDAYS.

Your yesterdays are dend—
To-day, an yea, to-day
Is new, and large and limitless
In its far-seaching sway.
I know it is impossible
To wholly eler forget,
To never dream of yesterdays—
Impossible, and yet—
it is the wise soul turns his face
Toward overy new-bon day
And shuts the past away from him
It is the only way.
Your yesterdays are dead

It is the only way.

Your yesterdays are dead.

To-day is yours to me ud—
Hall to its star, you tollers all,
And watch its light unfold.
And when your lovedones pass aw.
Your sorrow should he deep.
But you should realise this truth,
The Shephord knows his sheep;
The spirits of the blest live on,
Moving along thiough space;
We should not weep too biliterly;
Think of the jays they face.

Think of the joys they face.
Your yesterdays are dead.
The joys and sorrows brought
Of yesteryear now look away,
Experience they taught.
In the great current of to-day
Your work you have to do;
Bo don't sit down with old regressit, down with something new,
Responsibility is good.
And hope a frusty friend;
Just get acquainted with them
For stimutus they lend.

Kingston Engineer.
The far-famed Vale of Kashmir, in The far-famed Vale of Kashmir, in northern India, is to be brought into touch with the outer world by means of the longest aerial cableway in the world — 75 miles across the Himalayas, constructed by Lieut.—Col. A. J. de Lotbiniere, a Canadian military engineer, formerly of Kingston, and son of the late Sir Henry Joly de Lotbiniere. Engineers have long tried to solve the problem of adequate transportation across this mountain barrier. It is crossed at present by a road 200 miles long, a wonderful plece of engineering, completed in 1887. Fifty-four men were killed by falling boulders during its construction, and owing to the presence of these huge loose rocks in the soft soil, the building of a railroad—even a light electric road—has been pronounced impracticable. There is nothing for it but to swing a cable high in air over the treacherous mountain-chain.

ountain-chain.
At the suggestion of Lt.-Col. de Lotbiniers, whose services had been lent to the Kashmir Government as State Engineer, it was decided to cause investigation of the feasibility

State Engineer, it was decided to cause investigation of the feasibility of an aerial cableway, and, if possible te enter on this project. This survey has been completed and has demonstrated to the satisfaction of the firm and of the Kashmir Government that the scheme is practicable and will not be unduly expensive. It is anticipated that the cost will amount to about $1,500,000. The cable way will be constructed in big spans of about $10 years each, with fixed cables upplied by the constructed in big spans of about $00 years each, with fixed cables upplied by the cable way will be constructed in high the will have to be 100 feet high. There will be separate sections every five miles and separate cables, of course, for outgoing and incoming freight, which will be about nine feet apart and with a diameter of 11-2 inches each. From these cables steel cars will be suspended and conveyed, about 30 to every mile, and holding 335 to 450 pounds each of freight. These cars will be carried over great gorges and precipitous hills, and in some instances there will be a sheer drop underneath them of 1,200 feet. The transfer of cars from section to section will be automatically accomplished by revolving drams which will effect release of the cars and their renewed gripping to the hauling ropes of the next rection. On account of the difficulty of expansion and contraction from heat and cold, ing ropes of the next rection. On account of the difficulty of expansion and contraction from heat and cold, the cables will be equipped with a complicated system of springs anchored with tremendous weigh's to make them of the same length all the year round. The cableway will follow the gorge of the Juelum river most of the way, which it will frequently cross and recross, accordingly as the spans can be most conveniently constructed, and the towers be located where there can be safety against slipping and dangers from falling boulders. The great advantage of the aerial cableway will be that all dangerous parts of the road can be dodged and the cars moved from hill to hill and over gorges instead of at the side of them, the towers being based at places where there can be no danger of slips.

It's simply because every girl knows that the manager of her department would think he could get along without her if he were to see her sitting down-loafing, you know! So she would be discharged. All it amounts to its that after being on her feet for nine hours the girl usually walks home in order to save car fare. Yes, she walks, whether sick or well. Anyhow, you are generally so tired, it don't make much difference which you are?

"What has all this to do with the question of theft in the store? That was the excuse for your coming here. And instead of telling me something you rant about gas stoves and car

It is monotone, as if he had not spoken.

"And when you are really sick and have to stop work what are you going to do then? Do you know, Mr. Gilder, that the first time a straight girl steals it's often because she had to have a doctor—or some luxury like that? And some of them do worse than steal. Yes, they do—girls that started straight and wanted to stay that way. But, of course, some of them get so tired of the whole grind that—that?—
"I'm not their guardian. I can't watch over them after they leave the store. They are paid the current rate of wages—as much as any other store pays." As he spoke the anger provoked by this unexpected sessuit on him out of the mouth of a convict samed high in virtuous repudiation. "Why," he went on vehemently, "no man living does more for his employees than I do. Who gave the girs their fine reet rooms upatairs? I did!"

"I pay them the same as the other stores do," he repeated suffenty. "But you won't pay them enough to live on!"

"But you won't pay them enough to live on?"

"And so you claim that you were forced to steal. That's the plea you make for yourself and your friends."

"I wasn't forced to steal." came the answer, spoken in the monotone that had marked her utterance throughout most of the interview. "I wasn't forced to steal, and I didn't steal. But, all the same, that's the plea, as you call it, that I'm making for the other giris. There are hundreds of them who steal because they don't get enough to eat. I said I would tell you how to stop the stealing. Well, I have done it. Give the girls a fair chance to be honest. You asked me for the names, Mr. Glider. There's only one name on which to put the blame for the whole business, and that name is Edward Glider! ness, and that name is Edward Gilder! Now, won't you do something about

At that naked question the owner of the store jumped up from his chair and stood glowering at the girl who risked a request so full of vituperation against himself.

"How dare you speak to me like this?" he thundered.

"Why, I dared." Mary Turner explained, "because you have done all the harm you can to me. And now I'm trying to give you the chance to do better by the others. You ask me why I dare. I have a right to dare. I have heen drashed all my life. I have heen drashed all my life. I have heen drashed all my life. been straight all my life. Gilder could not trust himself just then to an audible command. He was seriously disturbed by the gently spoken truths that had issued from the girl's lips. He was not prepared with any answer, though he botly resented every word of her accusation. Cassidy faced about, and in his movement there was a tug at the wrist of the girl that set her moving toward the door. Her realization of what this meant was shown in her final speech.

Life will be shortened.

There was, for example, Aggle Lynch, a fellow convict, with whom she had a slight degree of acquantance, nothing more. This young woman, a criminal by training, offered allurements of illegitimate employment in the outer world when they should be free. Mary endured the companionship with this prisoner because a sixth sense proclaimed the fact that here was one unmoral rather than immoral, and the difference is mighty. For that reason Aggle Lynch was not actively offensive, as were most of the others. She was a dainty little blond, with a baby face, in which were set two light blue eyes of a sort to widen often in demure wonder over most things in a surprising and naughty world. She had been convicted of blackmail, and she made no pretense even of innocence. Instead, she was inclined to boast over her ability to bamboozle men at her will. She was a natural actress of the ingenue role, and in that pose she could unfailingly beguile the heart of the wissest of worldly men. The census of the year 1910 of the United States showed that of all population ten years old and over, 10.7, per cent were classed as illiterate. Of course this includes the millions of negroes, of whom 44.5 per cent are illiterates. The Australian illiteracy comes to nine per cent.

In Canada the native born shows a larger per centage of illiteracy than the immigrants from Britain, but a smaller per cent than those coming from Continental Europe.

FOUND NATURAL GAS With enough pressure to blow at Toronto,

While boring for a well 1,100 feet below the surface.

TORONTO, Jan. 9.—Natural gas with a pressure sufficient to blow out the twelve a floors of the New Dominion Bank Building at the correct of King and Yonge streets, and shatter the massive structure in videspread ruin, was discovered yes treets, and shatter the massive structure in videspread ruin, was discovered yes treets, and shatter the massive structure in videspread ruin, was discovered yes treets, and shatter the massive structure in videspread ruin, was discovered yes treets, and shatter the massive structure in videspread ruin, was discovered yes to the ground. The sky-scraper is nearing completion, but it is not yet tenanted.

The architect, Mr. John Pearson, desired for several reasons, to secure an independent of several reasons, to secure an independent of the work with his appearatus. A 6-1 inch boring was sent through the surface of alluvial clay, and several hundred feet further into the sub-stratum of Trenton clay. The Trenton clay has a thickness of from 800 to 1,200 feet, and the potsdam it was expected the desired spring would be tapped. Samples of the Trenton clay were taken every 9 feet, and the year of the gas had begun to leak into the borings. This was at a depth boring were carried any tower the main body with a pressure of 700 pounds would be reached. Boring operations were at once stopped. A match was applied to the gas issuing from the tube and a flame shot up 15 feet high.

It was supposed the timid gas reservoir already tapped was affording a pressure of 100 to 150 pounds. Prefering the million dollar sky scraper in its entirety to the most bountiful supply of natural gas obtainable, Mr. Pearson ordered the boring sealed up. Work was at once begun pouring in concrete, and last night after a column of 300 feet had been poured into the tube, although gas was still jleaking, through, it was in greatly diminished volume.

As a result of encountering heavy northerly gales on the voyage up from the South, the Pickford and Black liner Boston, overdue at Hallfax from Jamales, put into Shelburne Wednesday night to secure sufficient bucker coal to carry her on to Hallfax, arrived this merring, and then officers, reported heaving experienced very high seas and winds all the way from Jamalea. from Jamaica.

Makes it Easy to Clean

Those Hard-To-Get-At Places. It is no longer necessary to get down on your hands and knees to clean, dust and polish hardwood floors or to get on chairs to dust the tops of tall furniture, the tops of doors, etc., or to crawl under the bed or to pull it aside to dust under it, or to sit on the stairs and dust the bannisters one by one, all this is quickly done by the new and improved.

O-Cedar Mop

The dust does not fly in the air and settle somewhere else, the O-CEDAR collects it all and holds it until you have finished, and then it can be shaken. Made with a quick detachable steel centre, which can be removed and replaced in an instant, without effort. Then a few drops of "O-CEDAR" Polish on the polishing brush, a few quick rubs, and your floor is like it had been varnished. Every careful housekeeper should have one.

As stated last evening, the Board of Control again recommended the passing of the civic estimates, without any change in the figures. The City Council met last night to once more consider the Board's report, and this time the estimates were passed, but not before a lengthy discussion and also after a conference had been had between the Board and a committee of the Council, when the Council met and the report was read.

Controllers Scanlan, U'Connor and Harris explained their views in favor of the estimates as sent up. Controller Hoben opposed the report, and Aldermanle members of the City Council did likewise. Some wanted cash them discussed individually, but this was not satisfactory to others.

Deputy Mayor Powell them made a mo-dually, but this was not satisfactory to others.

Deputy Mayor Powell then made a motion that an Aldermanic committee of the Council meet the Board and have an informal conference. This motion carried, and the Council adjourned until the conference was concluded.

Shortly after 11 o'clock the Council met again and the council the reported in favor of taking up the items individually. A decision was finally arrived at whereby the police estimates in so far as extra policemen are concerned, were entirely elliminated. The decreases made by the Council

SIDENTS OF ROYAL PALACES

Refusal of Lady Scott to Take a Royal Residence Recalls Previous Episodes Connected With the Guests of Britain—Hampton Court Contains Twenty Families of Distinction and Indigence.

It is announced that Lady Scott, widow of the hero of the South Pole, has declined the offer of a royal residence, as a mark of the disapproval anies specific provision has been made to the contrary.

No doubt ever since the Norman Conquest the Kings of England have been providing certain of their friends with free lodging for the re-friends with free longing to mainder of their days in recognition of some service rendered. Up to the time of responsible government it was the fashion of royalty to present according with a few thousand

Just a word about the high cost of living.

All the politicians and the newspapers are talking about the high cost of living. Housekeepers are not only talking about it, but are feeling it. Now, as far as meats go, we can be of service to you. There has grown a very decided demand for certain cuts—result, prices have to go up, for the demand exceeds the supply. This means that many another cut, for all purposes just about as good, is not in such demand; those who buy these cuts are getting splendid value. Drop in and see us next time you are down town and let us talk over the meat question. We can help you.

has a right to nominate as free ten-ants, Some twenty families occupy the premises. Their accommodation ranges from five to twelve rooms, and if the King were to rent the apart-ments, he would receive some $20,000 or $30,000 a year, and the money would go into his private purse. Inci-dentally it might be remarked that the nation pays $75,000 a year for the maintenance of Hampton Court. the nation pays $75,000 a year for the maintenance of Hampton Court. The present tenants are, for the most part, widows and daughters of army and navy officers or men who held minor offices in the royal household. Before being eligible as tenants it is necessary that the applicant make an affidavit to the effect that his or her income is not more than $1,000 a year. In the other royal residences an affidavit to the effect that his or her income is not more than $1,000 a year. In the other royal residences no such rule applies, and at the present time many apartments are occupied by persons well able to pay for their accommodation.

A case in point is that of the Countess Fedora Gleichen, a cousin of the King, who was granted apartments by King Edward, or rather her fatherwas given the privilege of living rent free by Queen Victoria, and King Edward confirmed the daughter in the premises at St. James' Priace.

It was this countess who was requested by the agents of King George to pay rent, but she declined upon the score of poverty. It is notorious that the countess, who is a sculptor, of note, and is also in receipt of a pension, is earning some $20,000 or $25,000 a year, and can well afford to pay good rent. Nevertheless, the countess has refused to move or pay rent, and has left it to the King to decide upon any further steps.

The gift residences around Windsor are also said to be a source of considerable annoyance to King George who finds them occupied by persons who have no particular claim upon him or upon the nation. The ten-

There are nine of these residences at Windsor, and of the tenants six had no special arrangement with King Edward, who installed them, as to their vacation upon demand. It is held that unless there was a legal agreement to this effect the tenants can continue to occupy during their lifetime, and most of them will no doubt insist upon their legal right in the matter. SOME BULL FIGHTER.

Senor Robles Demonstrated His Design as a Matador.

Senor Enrique Robles, the eminent Spanish specialist on bull-fighting, has at last vindicated his modest descriptions of his own valor, and has proven beyond question that the bulls, not only of York County, but of Peel as well, are mere empty belowers, and that when faced with site of real manhood, with a shawl and a sneer, they are afraid.

For some time the bull-fighting senot has been sighing for a suitable adversary. He has told Toronto people who went to see him and his magnificent shaven wrists many magnificent shaven wrists many libities about himself which those people heped to see proven. He has told how he handles the bull, but had not now he handles the bull, but had not had an opportunity to give a real demonstration. Recently he went down to the Union Stock Yards at West Toronts and invited the cattle men to lead out their most feroclous specimens, but when the few bulls were led out they made no pretence of mens, but when the rew bulls were led out they made no pretence of wanting to fight the senor. The other day, however, Senor Ro-hles refused longer to be patient. If the bulls would not offer themselves, as it were by their bellowings, then he would go out and look for them himself. He obtained a motor car and took with him seven of his staff.

"Have you," he said, with distended chest—a fine whest—"have you of bulls any? Bulls of ferocit-ee? Eh? Show me! I would fight!"

The hands led out Teddy, who has a bad eye and a reputation as a maneater. Teddy llooked at the senor, who confronted fine in the barn-yard as one might regard any stranger who called one away from a meal and then paused to state his business. The handsome bull binked and blew great draughts of air from his nostrils, as handsome bull binked and blew great draughts of air typen his nostrils, as with lowered head he toyed with a few blades of, grass. Fight! Who sald fight? He wasn't looking for it, and — But the senor looking for it, and — But the senor advanced, called an insulting name, and flashed the red shawl in the bull's face. Something about that red cloth stirred varue impulses in the bull, faint hints of destruction. The man came back again and again, and with each return more ancient rags swelled up in the bull's throat. His eyes began to gleam. His breath came in ed up in the built's throat. His eyes began to gleam. His breath came in shorter, more pigorous puffs, he pawed the ground, he switched his tail, he cast philosophy and dignity to the winds—and charged!

But there was nothing to meet his charge. The man and the shawl vanished—only to reappear at one side, with more upspronal abuse and more wavings either red. The built charged again and warm, he changed his tacwavings either red. The bull charged again and again. He changed his tactics, made short rushes instead of long. Tried side-swiping. Tried turning quickly. But the man in front of him only laughed and jeered, and did the most irreverent things in the face of the old fellow.

"One last rush, and the buil gave it sheet."

"The last rush, and the buil gave it sheet."

"The last rush, and the buil gave it sheet."

"Have you fun out. If it does you withy good. I don't mind you waving the paltry piece of red in my face. What's the game? What are you sore at ,senor? As for me, I'm too stout for parlor games. Besides I'm likely to make a fool of myself—I can see that right here, and one certainly has a reputation to keep up—among the herds." herds."

They brought out a younger bull, but the senor flouted him and twisted his tail.

many interesting narrations in con-nection with the Hudson Bay trading Each district had its trading post the site of which depended upon the physical characteristics of the terri-tory, and in the selection of these sites the advice of the aboriginal sites the advice of the aboriginal guides was invariably taken. It was only natural that the posts should have been built in those parts offering the easiest access to the surrounding country and it is a curious thing wherever those old warrier chiefs selected a site it has become or is destined to be the great centre of that narticular district. of that particular district.

The trails which in those days nat urally led over the easiest grades to the territory surrounding these posts are to-day in many instances the highways and byways which are open-ing up the large agricultural and in-dustrial centres of the west. The an-nals of the times show that land in close proximity to the Hudson Bay posts at one time or another changed hands for a mere song. Sturgeon Is Valuable.

Enquiries are coming from London dealers for caviar from the Canadizar sturgeon. This is an expensive delicacy, made from the roe or egg of the large fish when caught before spawning. The raw material for the caviar is worth $1 a pound and 40 or 50 pounds may be secured from one sturgeon. This, together with the value of the flesh from the sturgeon, gives that fish great value and makes conservation advisable. It is caught chiefly in the St. John river, Lake of the Woods, and Lake Winnipes, and the caviar is shipped to Germany and Russia, as well as England. Sturgeon Is Valuable.

Muskrats Too Plentiful. Muskrats Too Plentiful.

Muskrats are so very common at the summer resorts of Stag Island, a few miles below Sarnia, that the owners of the island have writte. to the Government to see if they cannot get authority to have some of them cleaned out. The island is traversed by several shallow canals, and these are filled with muskrat houses. The animals are in thousands, and are eating up everything in the neighborhood of the canal banks.

Although the ghost is no longer th representation, as it was fifty or sixty years ago, it is still an important character, said the manager of a London (Eng.) theatre the other day. In very small theatres where stage mechanics are conspicuous by their absence, ghosts are eften as solid and unrealistic as they were in the days of John Kemble and Mrs. Jordan, and it is not unusual for the ghoet of Hamlet's father to be attired in a suit S. The spooks that haunt the London stages to-day are fairly "realistic."

The spooks that haunt the London stages to-day are fairly "realistic," and when Sir Herbert Tree produced "Macbeth" at His Majesty's Theatre the other year be gave his audience ghosts which were really vaporous and unearthly, gliding, transparent, mysterious. Macbeth wilted in terror at the appearance of Banquo's spook, and everyone declared that the entrance and general "get-up" of this member of the spirit world was the most ingenious and impressive ever seen at a theatre.

I think it was Charles Kean who first resorted to illusion to make a stage ghost a little transparent. When he produced "Macbeth" at the old Princess's Theatre, he manufactured a contrivance which allowed Banquo's ghost to appear through a transparent column. The S. S. "Scotia" the shade, and he wore a closely-fiting suit of grey material, sewn to gether in the form of armor, and in this he floated across the stage like a shadow behind a sheet of gause, much to the delight of the spectators. When the old playhouse in Drury Lane opened, in 1794, with a performance of "Macbeth," Banquo's ghost was omitted. Although Mr. Kemble's acting was fine enough to make the audience almost believe that they really did see the ghost, the people were not satisfied until the system they had been used to was re-adopted, and Banquo's shade allowed to trot bodily across the boards. In those days theatre-goers would have a spectre, not withstanding that the spectre was a "super," in a white sheet with a streak of red paint on his brow, who thrust himself through a trap-door or rose from behind a card-board tomb when a blow was struck upon a til. can and a spoonful of blue fire ignited in the wings.

Reflecting mirrors and the chematograph are coming in general use at the theatres, and with them it has been found possible to manufacture ghosts capable o' striking terror into the hearts of all followers of the occult. It is interesting to know that at the Autrion Theatre, in Paris, when Gerald Hauptmann's "Hannele" was acted, in which the men are spirits seen by a dying child, all the phantoms were he reflections of actors cast from mirrors behind the stage on to the bed. In much the same way, the ghosts in "Richard III." have been hought into being-Quite an assembly of appartitions are supposed to rise up and address themselves alternately to Richard and to Richmond. mirers than his real name, and some of these were picturesque. William Perry, a famous fighter of early Victorian days, was "the Tipton Stasher." William Thompson, who won the championship in 1835, was known as Bendigo. The Australian mining town was named after him, and although some of the inhabitants man, ed to have it rechristened Sandhurst, the new name never caught on. Other nicknames borne by heroes of the ring were "the Gasman," the Sailor Boy," "the Chelsea Snob," "the Gold Smunglen". "the Great Gun of Windsor," and "the Pride of Westminster."—London Dally Chronicle. SNOW & CO., A Great Financier.

A man who occupied a little back room in a poor quarter of the east end of London was evicted for non-payment of rent. He had nothing but a valise and a few clothes, and while they were throwing him and his belongings out of the house a bully manuscript fell out of his pocket. No-body noticed it at the time, but after he had gathered his clothes and taken his departure one of the bystanders saw the big roll of paper, picked it up and on opening it was surprised and amused to find it contained an elaborate scheme, worked out to the minutest degree, for refunding the national debt of the British Empire.
