Monoton and the Jubilee.

A Moncton despatch of Monday says :-We are, of course, at all times happy to appear in Court on behalf of our clients, but we will do so with pleasure, whenever taking part and unless fresh interest is aroused, it is doubtful if the celebration will be carried out on the original plan. The effort to raise $500 by popular subscriptions has not met with much success so far. The hotel men who are always depended upon to subscribe liberally towards such demonstrations, are, it is said, unwilling to contribute in the present condition of affairs, and there does not seem to be anybody to take their place. It is not likely, however, without some public observance."

CLOSETS IN CORNERS. SOME CLEVER WAYS OF UTILIZING

WASTE SPACE. Is a Joy to the Eye and a Great Con-

-Seeming Disadvantages Tha One Be Turned to Advantage. Today, with our limited spaces, our amped apartments and our narrow uses, we are going back to the sevenanth century and borrowing its ideas the use of every bit of waste space in hich to find room to stow away our surpersond.

The window seat is an example of this ingenuity. The cushion in one scat lifts up and gives a place for laying clothes at full length. The curtains at the back cover fittle sliding doors, behind which are kept surplus papers, letters, stores of wrapping paper and string and all that mass of small occets that should be conveniently at hand and yet sidily out of sight. At either end of the seat in the upper panels of the window embrasure are two small bookcases to hold all a woman's beloved volumes, those which she makes her daily friends and companions. The whole arrangement is a stramph of cleverness over limit in area and one that will recommend itself to all those women—alas, too many!—who are confined to one room for the disposition of their belongings. Little apartments whose partons offered such conveniences would be in much demand if the architects of such would only remember to plan for the happiness of the women who were to live in them.

Another skillful device is the row of little emphoards hung on the wall. To those desced with ample place for a library as cell as a Grawing room such a scheme may set be important, but consider the possibilities of a little sitting room 15 or 16 feet mark, and many a small flat or even considers no more. Where is one to find the for one's books and bric-a-brac, one's merpose and vases? Room must be apply for chairs and sofas and tables, and many to make for one's books and bric-a-brac, one's make it are therefore out of the pustion. A row of pretty cupboards factorial against the wall at a convenient legist leaves all the floor space free and the gives convenient receptacles for all have belongings that must be near at hand and which add to the beauty of one's life those them, at the lower line of the frieze, broad molding will give a 'footing to a sew good plates, a delft tile, a bit of plaster.

and which add to the beauty of one's life hove them, at the lower line of the frieze, a bread molding will give a footing to a two good pistes, a delft tile, a bit of plaster. Inguisty and taste will rise superior to use difficulty and turn an affliction into a slight. What woman has not been called your as some time in her life to struggle with the question of the superfutous door? Builders some te find some occult joy in nuting that superfuens door in the most mapscalingly objectionable spot. Their ule seems to be, "When in doubt make a lost." The usual futile method of dealing with this difficulty is merely to hang a surtain over it, which is a very inadequate toution of the problem. A curtain should tally hang where it is needed—either at a findow, to chade the light, or at a doorway that is much open, to keep drafts out. A woman who has both taste and ingenuty has once for all solved the odious problem. She has turned the superfluous door more bookease. Most bookeases, it may be sumarked, are much too deep. Very we books are more than six inches in midth, and very few bookeases are less than a foot in depth—an obvious waste of in inches of space. This clever woman ook down the superfluous door. She then had it alled with shelves of just the necessary depth for her books and a back put to hear shelves. In front of them she hung her curtails—now quite legitimate, as a protector of the books—and there she had her books andely housed with no loss of foor space and the superfluous door trumphant? younguered. Her whole house is a

It consists of drawers which, instead of pulling out, simply let down their fronts upon hinges. Closed up again and locked they are closer and more impervious to dust and damp than any drawer, and for purposes of emptying and filling are as handy as shelves. Women who have homes in the country and are linely enough to have an attic may cover all one side of the wall with these locked chelves and have that comfort and peace that arise from the same that all one's belonging are safely and snugly bestowed. If the be a careful and energetic person, also may take the time to line all these shelves with linen of the cheap brown sort, than which there is no greater safeguard against the insidious and destructive moth.

Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Stone have been residents of the township of Ernestown, about ten miles east of Napanee, for a period of about time time they had lived in Glenwood Springs, Colorado, and it was during their residence there that Mrs.

Stone was attacked with an illness that to did the following story: "During the early part of our residence in Colorado, my illness first came on. At the outset every two or three weeks I would be attacked with a pain in my stomach. Later on it greatly increased in severity, and at times was so bad that

To Make Colors Fast. To preserve the colors of ginghams, rinted lawns, etc., and before washing alprinted lawns, etc., and before washing almost any colored fabrics, it is recommended to sook them for some time in water to every gallon of which is added a spoonful of or gall. A strong, clear tea of common hay will preserve the color of French linens. Vinegar in the rinsing water for pink and green fabrics will brighten these colors, and soda answers the same purpose for both purple and blue. The colors of the above fabrics may be preserved by using a strong milk warm lather of white soap, putting the dress into it instead of rubbling it on the material and stirring into a first and second tub of rinsing water a large tablesponful of or gall. To prepare or gall for washing colored articles empty it into abottle, put in it a handful of salt and keep it closely corked. A teacupful to five galt closely corked. A teacupful to five gal

Traditions are being daily shattered in these times of investigation and scientific progress. Until recently it had always been accepted as a fact that bables could them an occasional brisk rubbing, but argues that, since its feet have never been covered, they are no more sensitive than the hands, and it is true that the little one has never had a cold. During the hot weather, too, it was dressed in comparative comfort, which, translated, means as little clothing as possible. %

"One of the leading specialists in child diseases in America, a most distinguished man, by the way, never allows his children to wear shoes and stockings, except when out of doors in midwinter, until they are 5 or 6 years old."—Detroit Nows.

Flannels.

Flannels require care in their washing to prevent shrinking and keep them soft. Make a strong suds of some pure white soap and water as hot as the hand can bear it, put in the flannels and let them lie 20 minutes. A flannel should not be rubbed, but drawn through the hands until it seems perfectly clean. Prepare another tub of water, not using quite as much soap, and when the flannels are taken from the first water, drop them into the second water, press through that and put them into a warm water, slightly blued. Carefully wring the flannels out of the last water, shale them well and dry as quickly as possible, taking care not to hang them where they will freeze when drying. When sufficiently dry, iron the flannels and hang them unfolded until well aired. Flannels should not be rolled up when dry and laid one side to be ironed later.—New York Sun. Flannels.

A Sweeping Cap.

Belt Ends.

It is important that the ends of waistbands should be neatly finished off. The webbing, sometimes called bolting, is placed inside bodices, being firmly sewed in at the back, and then hooks in front. Unless the ends are neat they do not form a good basis for the hooks and eyes sewed upon them, and they become unsewed, and are consequently very untidy.

It is quite possible to buttonhole the edges of the webbing with coarse floss, thus keeping the surface flat and avoiding the thickness of a hem.

Best Way to Cleam Clothing.

The English Society of Arts offered a prize of $100\text{dor the best process of cleansing silk, woolens and cotton fabrics—one that would not change their color or injure them in any way. The winning recipe was as follows: Grate $ good sized potatoes into a pint of clear, clean, soft water. Strain through a coarse sieve into a gallon of water and let the liquid settle. Pour the starchy fluid from the sediment, and it is ready for use. Rub the articles gently in the liquid, rinse thoroughly in clear water, dry and press.
