LONDON, June 24.—The sudden announcement of the postponement of the coronation, just on the eve of the ceremony caused the utmost consternation everywhere. The news spread like wild fire. The tens of thousands of occupants of the streets suddely stood still under the sudden shock and gazed at one another in silent dread of what might come next. On Saturday and Sunday society was discussing the reports of the king's illness, and though the circumstantiality and sources from which they came precluded entire disbelief there was a disposition to doubt the stories, and when the positive denial was officially issued position to doubt the stories, and when the positive denial was officially issued they were dismissed as unfounded. Hemorrhoids, apoplexy and lumbago were the king's maladies discussed in the clubs and drawing room and these discussions reiterated how the king even recently stated his belief that he would not live to be crowned. Prices immediately weakened on the stock exchange.

His majesty under ordinary condi-tions was not looked upon as a good subject for operations, and though he passed successfully through the or-deal it is believed that four or five weeks must elapse before he will be able to undergo the labors of the cor-onation. ceremony. Therefore no date can yet be indicated for carrying out the coronation.

onation ceremony. Therefore no date can yet be indicated for carrying out the coronation.

Official announcements of the king's serious illness were made to the public bodies as speedily as possible. Word was sent to the house of commons and the acting lord chamberlain, Lord Churchill, personally delivered to the Mansion House, the official residence of the lord mayor, a message regarding his majesty's illness, and at this morning's rehearsal of the coronation ceremony in Westminster Abbey, the Bishop of London, the Rt. Rev. Arthur Ingram, at the request of Lord Esher, the deputy governor of Windsor Castle made a statement as follows:

"I have to make a very sad announcement. The king is suffering from an illness which makes an operation necessary today. The coronation therefore is postponed."

The bishop requested the congregation to join in the litany out of the coronation service and pray for the recovery of the king. During the course of the afternoon the earl-mar-shal, the Duke of Norfolk, issued the following notice: "The earl marshal has received the

"The earl marshal has received the king's commands to express his majesty's deep sorrow that owing to his serious illness the coronation ceremony must be postponed. The king also expressed to the lord arranged."

The king also expressed to the lord mayor his desire that his majesty's dinner to the poor of London be not postponed. Nothing has yet been decided regarding the movements of the foreign guests. The first intimation which Whitelaw Reid, the special ambassador of the United States to the coronation, had that anything was wrong was contained in a communication cancelling the state banquet which was to be held at Buckingham palace tonight, but no mention was then made tonight, but no mention was then made of the postponement of the great cere-mony of the week.

It is understood, however, that the special ambassadors and royal guests will return to their respective countries so soon as more definite news is received of the result of the operation.

Outside of Buckingham Palace enormous throngs of people congregated since early morning for the purpose of witnessing the arrival of the special ambassadors who were to be received by the king and queen today. Large numbers of foreign representatives actually arrived, but the shortness of their stay was noticed, inquiries were made, and soon the news of his majestly's serious state of health was circulated among the waiting thousands.

At the various palaces and at the Grosvenor, Buckingham, Carlton, Cecil and other hotels where the foreign representatives are staying, the news representatives are staying, the news created the greatest dismay. LONDON, June 24.—2.46 p. m.—The following bulleth has been posted at Buckingham Palace:

"The operation has been successfully performed. A large abscess has been evacuated. The king has borne the operation well and is in a satisfactory condition."

LONDON, June 24.—In the pouse of commons the government leader, A. J. Ealfour, announced that an operation had been performed on the king and that his majesty was progressing as well as possible. Mr. Balfour added that while the condition was undoubtedly grave, he did not intend to increase the public alarm by adjourning the house.

LONDON, June 24—Bulletin 3.40 p. m. —At 3.30 p. m., the king was progressing very satisfactorily.

ST. JOHN, N. B., JUNE 24, 1902.

THE KING'S ILLNESS.

has shocked the world. Just when the capital of the empire, in anticipation the news comes that King Edward has been compelled to undergo an operation which under the most favorable circumstances can only be regarded as a very serious one.

From great rejoicing the empire i plunged in an hour into profound grief and anxiety. The prayer of all his people will be that his majesty will speedily recover.

THE BOYS.

On Sunday afternoon during the rain group of boys with several men spent a considerable time on the sheltered ide of an old building in this city. The men had liquor, and from time to time Irank from a bottle, and when it was empty they in some way secured a fresh supply. One of them had finally to be assisted by his companions to a place where he could sleep off the effects of too liberal potations. The point to be particularly noted in onnection with this affair is not its novelty; but it raises the question, What shall be done with loitering boys Manifestly the influence exercised over this group of boys last Sunday was not for their good. The example was ot edifying, and the thoughts express ed by the men would hardly be of an on Sunday that one is painfully impressed by the fact that a great many boys in this city could be more profitably employed. It would probably surprise the citizens if they could learn exactly how many boys of school age are neither at school nor at work. There are some localities in the city where idle boys are entirely too much in evidence It is surely time that steps were taken applicable at least to this city. These poys do not realize what they are losing, and unhappily the parents of some are either utterly indifferent or not strong-minded enough to insist that the children attend school. A stringent and faithfully executed truant law would really be a blessing in such cases, and besides the good done to the children the city would be freed from a reproach.

SOUTH SHORE SERVICE.

The steamer Harlaw is still on the Newfoundland route and the government has not yet asked for tenders for a service between St. John and the Nova Scotia south shore ports. St John merchants feel very strongly on this subject, because they are unable to give their south shore customers as prompt delivery of goods as formerly, and delay in business matters is always vexatious. It will be remembered that the Telegraph devoted large space to this subject not long since, and then suddenly dropped the question. The the Telegraph's article to arouse feeling in that city to the prejudice of the interests of St. John. And Halifax members of the Telegraph's political party pulled the wires at Ottawa to prevent the transfer of the Harlaw to this route. Halifax influence in the cabinet beng stronger than that of St. John, the former won; and Mr. Parmelee refused to consent to the transfer of the Harlaw. But if the gov-trnment cannot consent. drop came when Halifax papers utilized trnment cannot consent to this transfer they might at least ask for tenders for a St. John service. Then the feeling that St. John had been deliberately slighted, which has been growing for nore than a year, might be somewhat graph to whisper this fact in the ear not to prove fatal to that journal, and would be a welcome contribution to efforts made by others for the benefit of the city's trade.

A BOER'S VIEW.

Writing to a lady in England, wh nephew, General Viljoen of the Boe rmy, after his capture and exile to St. Helena, said:—'I observe your remark that you are not a pro-Boer. I do not quite understand what a pro-Boer is. Anyhow, I expect no Britisher to turn against his own people, as little as I hope you expect an Afrikander to turn against his people." Evidentiy General Viljoer in his exile did not get an opportunity to read the speeches of some of the leaders of the liberal-party in England. If he did read them, they would evidently arouse only the feeling of contempt for the speakers, in the breast of the sturdy Afrikander—who expects Britishers and all other people to stand up for their own. elena, said:-"I obs

THE BOURKE FIRE.

The water and sewerage board continued their inquiry at the City Hall yesterday afternoon into the complaint of the board of fire underwriters that there was delay in potaining a sufficient supply of water at the Bourke fire on Water street on the 16th ult. After hearing a number of witnesses the aldermen found that there was ample water on that occasion, which was shown by the fact that when eleven streams were being played on the burning building there was plenty of water in the Emerson & Fisher building even on the fifth floor from water street. The members form all the evidence adduced were convinced that there was an ample supply by gravitation at the start of the fire and that streams were thrown over the roof of the building when the engines were got to work. These facts will be reported to the council that the safety board be asked to keep No. 2 engine in the north end hook and ladder station as a spare engine, and that they consider the obtaining of a new boiler for the same. The safety board will be asked to arrange for a new heater in No. 2 engine house so that the water in the boiler of the engines stationed there will always be hot. And the safety board will be asked to consider the advisability of engaging a few permanent men to go to fires with the drivers of the hose reeis. The employment of an extra man in connection with each of the fire stations on this side of the harbor would cost in the neighborhood of $2,500.

Peter Brodie, a Barnardo Boy, Died From Excessive Drinking.

From Excessive Drinking.

Peter Brodie, a Barnardo boy, aged 19, in the employ of James Peel, a South Verulam, Ontario, farmer, died last week from the effects of an overdose of whiskey. He and his employer drove some cattle to Lindsay, and after dinner Mr. Peel gave him 75 cents. When they started for home Brodie, already under the influence of liquer, produced a flask of whiskey, and, against the advice of Mr. Peel, drank it all, and finally from the effects fell asleep with his head hanging over the dashboard. When the house was reached they were alarmed to find Brodie black in the face and his breathing labored. Restoratives were applied, but without effect, as his heart stopped beating in a few minutes. Coroner Poole was summoned, but decided an inquest unnecessary, as the young man died from apoplexy, brought on by an overdose of raw whiskey.

ENCOURAGING TOURIST TRAVEL

While in the city he has interviewed the various railway officials looking to some arrangement by which attractive excursions can be made from Ontario and Quebec points.

Mr. Fisher states that the average native of New England is very much more familiar with the maritime province centres than is the western Canadian. This, he thinks, should be remedied as soon as possible and he can suggest no better method than inducing people from the maritime provinces to visit Montreal, Toronto, Quebec and other centres and at the same time have the western Canadian journey toward the Canadian sea coast.

settlement is a compromise. It was effected through the offices of the arbitration committee of the board of trade. The wage scale offered by the company is accepted until July 1st. It is graded according to term of service from 17 cents for the first year to 21 cents per hour for men ten years in the company's employ. The second year the men get 18 cents, the third, fourth and fifth 19 cents, and from five to ten years 20 cents. Between now and July 1st the employes are to hold a meeting under the auspices of the board of trade and vote by ballot for either a continuation of the new scale or the scale demanded by the men, 18 cents for first year and 20 cents afterwards. If the men vote for this scale the company will adopt it. The company does not object to the men or ganizing under any constitution they desire, but refuses to recognize any union or receive a grievance committee from it. Any employe shall have the right of appeal in person to the general manager and bring with him witnesses, etc. The company agrees to clean the cars, and a Sunday increase will be given to make the day equal to a full working day. The full service will be on in the morning. The police on duty at the barns were relieved and the militia placed in charge to prevent trouble with the mob.

The men had a parade tonight in honor of the settlement.

The Present Religious Tendency in the United States.

Ritualistic Movement Causes Striking Changes in the Episcopal Church.

(New York Sun.)

A ceremony significant of the great changes in religious sentiment which have taken place in this country during the last generation was the laying, on Thursday, of the concertone of a new convent to be erected at Peekskill for the Sisterhood of St. Mary of the Episcopal church. Bishop Seymour of Episcopal church. Bishop Seymour of Illinois officiated at the ceremony, and among those present were "Mothers Superior" and many other sisters of the order. The cost of the new structure is to be $75,000, and it will be one of five convents of the sisterhood, which is the oldest of the American Episcopal orders.

Here is a list of the Episcopal religious orders in this country, nearly all of which have been founded or established here within the last twenty-five years, and most of them during the last the years:

Association for the promotion of the Unity of Christendom: "to unite members, both clerical and lay, of the Roman, Greek and Anglican communions in a bond of intercersory prayer for the reunion of Christendom."

It will be seen how near to the Roman Catholic church the doctrines and practices of these societies are. The only very considerable separation is made by the Papal supremacy, and even upon that some of the most extreme Ritualists are disposed to look not unfavorably. They are very polite to the Pope, but they have a serious grievance against him because he refuses to recognize the validity of the orders of the ministry of the Episcopal church.

The confessional, as it is well known, is now a regular feature of the advanced Ritualistic churches. The doctrine of the Real Presence is taught by them and the seven sacraments of Rome are accepted. When the wife of a Ritualistic chryones. An Episopal monk, preaching in the same church last Good Fridsy, admonished the congregation of the necessity of receiving adsolution and the visiticum, when about to die.

In other churches a tendency to Ritualistic practices is also observable, and it is the more remarkable because in their whole past history they have been distinguished by resolute and even bitter opositic parable churches, and they are likely to be the entering wedge for splitting away from doctrines originally expressive of the very genius of Protestantism. It is notable, too, that the successful negotiations of Judge Taft with the rope concerning the question of the property of the Philippine friars have caused no ripple of disturbance.

red up all American Protestantism to angry protest.

All these are very significant facts. Meantime the Rev. Dr. McJunkin, a Presbyterian of Pennsylvania, looks for the speedy coming of a "great awakening" like that of 1857; but other observers of present religious tendencies, Herbert Spencer, and Goldwin Smith, for example, look with misgivings on an apparent tendency, both here and in Europe, toward mediaeval ecclesiasticism and Ritualism. The late Christian Science convention was satisfied that the world is coming all its way; and the cognate "New Thought" people are not less confident that they are the heirs of the ages, so far as religion goes. ed up all Ar

He declared it had prevented a general rebellion by stopping the dissemination of lies. Now he asked for the suppression of all racial feelings and all leagues and bonds. the south-east corner of the old burial ground late last night. Most everybody else was asleep, but the people who made up this assembly had been at rest so long that an all night sesion now and then has no effect on when they had reached the end of the assage, had been laid beneath hadow of the trees in the Old Burial ground. They were clothed in the usual evening dress of skeleton, and as the crowd assembled there was an occasional yawn, from some whose deep sleep had been interrupted by the summons to attend the gathering, tumn wind through the withered trees.

At midnight the meeting was calle to order by one of the older member rapping sharply on a dilapidated tombstone with his bony heel. By unan stone with his bony heel. By unanimous choice the gentleman whose gravestone had been decorated by nature with a peculiar mark, was appointed to the chair. This he took amid a rustling of dry bones, and a hush of expectancy swept over the audience and partially cleaned one of the walks.

with an empt the honored skeleton gathered himself together and addressed the assembly:
Ladles and gentlemen, ancestors of the descendants of the Loyalists, founders of the city of St John, and various other titles given to you at meetings of your descendants and by the newspapers:—

"You are called together to discuss a grave question.
"This is no time for mirth," said the speaker, pointedly referring to a frivolus young skeleton of the early '60's, who had interrupted the speech with a dry chuckle. Continuing he said:
"It has come to our notice that the present generation, seeking after a place for amusement, contemplates, by the advice of one of the aldermen, locating a band stand in this place, formerly our property and supposed to be sacred to our memory. Apparently it was thought that we were too dead to raise any objection. But we are still sufficiently alive to be eligible for election to the common council. That, however, is neither here nor there. The selection of this spot for the erection of a stand from which to discouse music, shows that the alderman has exhausted all his dominion and is now drawing on the boneyard. This is a lamentable state of affairs and it remains for us to make some move in the matter. I would like to have an remains for us to make some move in the matter. I would like to have an expression of opinion from the meet-ing."

The chairman sat down, and after a short pause a gentleman arose who had lost a portion of his anatomy during the building of one of the walks. He cleared his throat and remarked:

"We never objected when children played on our tombstones and tourists broke off portions for mementoes. We never even made a remark about using the place as a pound for all the stray and unlicensed dogs, but this latest move is too much—too much. I had hopes that some of our descendants would remonstrate, but I fear they are too busy organizing Loyalist societies. I enter my unqualified objection to the whole affair."

The speaker had scarcely finished when another got up and remarked:

When the erection of a monument was contemplated near my place of abode, considerable portions of my anatomy and those of my neighbors got mixed. I have never been quite myself since, and the slightest shock now would, I fear, altogether lose for me my individuality. I oppose the present proceedings."
"Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentle-viduality. I oppose the present proceedings."

"Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen," said another, "to gather together the broken pleces and bring this matter to a head I desire to offer the following resolution:"

"We, the residents of the Old Burial Ground, in council assembled, do here by resolve that,

Whereas:—It has been said of us times without number by our proud descendants that we are the Founders of the City of the Loyalists; that we endured Hardship and Privation and set an Undying Example to our children, in our Fidelity to Principle and Devotion to the Old Flag; that we lived Laborious Lives and suffered Untold Sacrifices rather than Waver in our Loyalty:

"I second the motion," said the venerable shade.
And it was unanimously adopted.
The resolution was inscribed on the tombstone of a Loyalist who died in 1798 and the meeting dissolved.

Sometime last spring the residents of this street got up and forwarded to the county council a petition asking that the water system be extended along Harding street in order that a supply might be placed within easy reach. From the view of the matter taken by the council they had some reason to expect that the requested extension should be made, but as yet nothing has been done, and the people are again agitating.

News of the King's Illness Shocked the Citizens.

Remarks By Mr. Justice McLeod Festivities Declared Off Regimental Orders.

Owing to the number of alarming rumors that have been aftoat of late in regard to the health of King Edward the news of his serious illness, which reached here this morning was received at first with more or less incredulity. The substantiation of these statements was received as a great shock by the people of the city. To be struck down by serious illness almost on the day of his coronation was too tragic for belief. Bulletins were issued by the papers and the Star published an extra at noon containing full particulars up to that hour. Inquiries poured into the office for later intelligence, showing the great interest taken by all in the sad news. Around the streets little groups gathered to discuss the information and the effect it would have on the proposed celebration.

gathered to discuss the information and the effect it would have on the proposed celebration.

His honor Judge McLeod was handed a bulletin from the Star conveying the intelligence of his majesty's illness, as he was about to address the grand jury in the circuit court this morning. His honor read the bulletin to those in the court room, and on concluding he said:

"This is very serious news indeed and I deeply regret that I have to announce such tidings. It is especially shocking just at present when all over the world there have been such expressions of Joy over the approaching coronation of his majesty. This will cast a deep shadow over all rejoicing, but let us hope for the best."

At city hall this morning workmen, under the superintendence of the directors, began to decorate the building. Work was immediately stopped at the reception of the news concerning his majesty's condition. Mayor White immediately wired the secretary of state at Ottawa for further orders in regard to the public holiday which had been proclaimed for Thursday. At the same time word was sent around to the different heads of the proposed celebration for Coronation Day. Henry Hillyard of the Riverview Memorial Park Company, held a conference with his worship in regard to the public holiday which his worship in regard to the postponement of the services in connection with the laying of the corner stone of the monument at the park. While not in a position to speak for all, it was practically decided to postpone the affair indefinitely.

Interesting Experiences James Pitfield in the Sixties.

He Is Now An Inmate of the Home For Incurables.

There is at present in the Home for whose career has been more varied than that of most people. He is James Pitfield, a native of New Brunswick, and has in his people. He is James Pitfield, a native of New Brunswick, and has in his time served under the famous American general, Ben Butler.

Mr. Pitfield was born near Petitcodiac in July, 1839, and when a boy went to Salisbury, where his father had charge of the post and telegraph offices. While with his father at this place Mr. Pitfield learned telegraphic operating, and in 1856 took charge of an office on the line. He served in Moncton, St. John and Fredericton, and in the early '60's, with the intention of bettering himself, went to the United States. This was shortly after the outbreak of the Civil war.

New Orleans was taken by the Union army in May, 1862, and Mr. Pitfield some months afterwards, having in the meantime entered the service of the United States military telegraph, was sent to New Orleans to take charge of the work at headquarters under General Butler. Here he remained from December, 1862, until May, 1863, working under Butler and General Banks who relieved him.

Of his work in New Orleans during the war Mr. Pitfield tells many interesting stories. He is an ardent admirer of Butler, whose conduct has been exposed to much criticism, and says that from his own knowledge the work done by that general could not be done better by any other.

It was in New Orleans that General Butler issued the military order No. 28, which has since become so famous and which caused so much unfavorable comment at the time. Mr. Pitfield says that even while he was there.

Butler issued the military order No. 28, which has since become so famous and which caused so much unfavorable comment at the time, Mr. Pitfield says that even while he was there, during the closing weeks of Butler's command, the conduct of the southern ladies was such that the order seemed perfectly justifiable. These ladies refused to walk under the union flag. Wherever one was displayed they took the centre of the street rather than walk under it. They never lost an opportunity of insulting the union officers either openly or by playing or cers either openly or by playing singing so that all might hear, singing so that all might hear, the southern patriotic song, The Bonny Blue Flag.

It was this conduct which compelled Butler to issue the order that all who persisted in insulting the flag and the union officers, should be treated as women of the street. This order was still in force when Mr. Pitfield went to New Orleans, but the southern women had become somewhat less bold in their conduct, although their regard for the union was anything but friend-

Mr. Pitfield says that Butler was Mr. Pitfield says that Butler was so heartily disliked by the residents of New Orleans that his life was never safe, and he scarcely dared to move from his offlice to his house without being attended by a large guard.

His course of action, too, raised such opposition that as the result of pressure brought to bear on the government by representatives of other powers. Butter was removed and General Banks succeeded him.

The latter's efforts towards conciliating the southerners were more successful, and his course of action less disagreeable, but the unpleasant work had all been done by Butler, and this left the way clear for his successor. Mr. Pitfield remained on duty under Banks until May, 1863, when he left the service and went west to California. After that time he was engaged in running the telegraph line from New Westminster northward, which plan was knocked on the head by the opening of the cable across the Atlantic. Upon his return to New Brunswick Mr. Pitfield again entered the tic. Upon his return to New Bruns wick Mr. Pitfield again entered th telegraphic service here and remaine in it until 1878, when he was compelled to retire on account of ill-health.

does not hold down his job as it should be held; and each is after the other's political scalp.

There was a trial of strength when the county, and in that, owing to Mr. Quinton's vigorous held, bying, he was defear d.

But there was another trial of strength or Saturday, when the election of school trustees took place. In this Mr. Lewell's candidate, Wm. Stymest, defeated Mr. Quinton's candidate, John C. Hatheway, by eleven to seven vates. It is said that Mr. Quinton threatened to dismiss his hired man and gave his tenant warning to quit if they voted for Stymest, but that after the election he made due apology and announced his retirement from such small matters as the election of a school trustee. The next move in the great struggle is anxiously awaited.
