The loudly proclaimed attempt to make Chicago an ocean port has resulted in failure. The insurance rates on steamships from Chicago to transatlantic ports were so high as to make the shipment of grain from that inland city more expensive than from New York, Boston and other ports on the North Atlantic seaboard.

It is announced that the failure of a commercial enterprise of the attempt to make Chicago an ocean port, the press of that city is laying more on the disadvantages of the St. Lawrence route than the facts justify. The insurance rates on the vessels that ran from Chicago to Europe and return, as is pointed out, were high; they are high on all vessels.

ADDRESS By Rabbi Rabinovitch, Before Fabian League

What Can Be Done to Improve the Condition of the Laboring People of St. John?

Ladies and gentlemen, in undertaking to deliver the opening address on the question, 'What can be done to improve the condition of the laboring people of St. John, I feel most keenly my own incompetence to do justice to the subject under discussion. In order to prescribe an effective remedy the physician must understand thoroughly the symptoms of the malady. I thought therefore that no one is capable to speak more intelligently and feelingly on the wrongs or sufferings of the laboring people than the laboring people themselves, and I think so yet if it was not for the difficulty of inducing laboring men to speak in public on questions touching their immediate interests, I would find laboring people ready enough to speak and explain their hard lot in the immediate circle of their own families or associates, but when it comes to making their voices heard in public, the $5,000 a year man a vivid picture of the struggles of the dollar a day man, to tell the true general of the laborer's dollar before it is made and the dissection and subdivisions that make the dollar has to undergo before it can be made to make both ends meet, here the laborer is too modest to open his mouth, 'Why, me, make a speech, why, bless your soul, I ain't no speaker; never made a speech in my life.' Let me tell you, therefore, my friends, that this society was not organized for the sake of displaying or cultivating oratorical powers, or for the sake of making capital or political stock out of it in election time, but for the sake of removing unnecessary burdens from the shoulders of the poor and the residents of this town to tell those who find themselves helpless in the struggle of life a way to help themselves to give the voters of this town a clear sense of their power, to show them that as the voters have made the legislators, who in their turn, make the laws, the voters must be the real masters of the land. You see that this society was organized for the laboring men, and we are anxious that it shall be participated in by the laboring men. In attempting to diagnose the case of the laboring men in this town I can only figure like a physician diagnosing the case of some internal malady. The symptoms of the disease can best be described by the patient himself, but the physician knows best what to prescribe for it after the disease has once been identified. It is just the same case with me. I have given quite a few years to the general study of capital and labor, but when it came to the question of how to improve the condition of laborers in St. John I had to take my information secondhand.

FROM THE LABORERS THEMSELVES.

who are best fitted to speak upon the subject. In case therefore you find any of my statements inaccurate I beg you to correct me on the spot, whether such corrections be favorable to my arguments or not. After all I love the truth better than my arguments. Now before I give my ideas on how to improve the condition of the St. John working men I have endeavored to investigate whether this condition is such as to need any improvement. The result of my researches I will give you in detail briefly. The three most important measures which immediately affect the life and comfort of the laboring classes are wages, the length of the working day and the cost of living. Let us begin with the first. According to what I could gather from laboring people and officers of trade unions the rate of wages in this town for unskilled labor amounts to an average of one dollar a day and a quarter per week. It is true that there are some trades, such as the instance of a carpenter and brick-laying work, in which wages are higher, but then such work can only be carried on through one season of the year, so that in the end it all comes to the standard of one dollar a day. Now, across the border, where labor is organized, the standard of wages is two dollars per day. Again I am told that the standard working day in and around this town where labor is not organized, range from nine to twelve hours. Here also our cousins across the line take things a little easier, for the standard working day ranges from eight to ten hours, and the ten hour day is fast disappearing there altogether, but then some one will tell me that the cost of living is less here than in the United States. I must therefore tell you that in my own experience I found it quite the contrary, and I am always wondering how this mistaken idea about the comparative cheapness of things in this part of the country came over to be invented and believed in. Let us compare the prices of some of the necessities of life to verify my statement. For instance, the price of flour is always higher in St. John than in the United States; coal is generally ten per cent. higher; kerosene oil is over 200 per cent. higher than in the United States; taxes for the poor man is more than 5 times, or 500 per cent. higher than in the United States; and yet people will prate about the cheapness of things in this part of the country. The standard working day in and around this town, which is usually cited in this town as an example of low prices, even rent is higher here than in cities of equal size both in the Dominion and in the United States. The general mistake in regard to rent arises out of the usual habit of comparing rent in St. John to what it is in Boston or New York, which is a false method of investigation if you wish to arrive at the truth compare this town to cities of equal size across the line, or even on this side of the line, and you will find that rent here is at least 10 per cent. higher than there. I will even go a step farther and to what it is in Toronto or Buffalo cities, five times the size of St. John.

without damaging my argument in the cities just referred to. I know by personal experience that $10 to $12 will rent an 8-room little cottage, all by itself, in a good neighborhood, with a spacious yard, all modern improvements and not far from the business centre of the city. Of course it will be different in Buffalo this summer. Here in St. John a residence having all the virtues above described would not let under $200 or $300 per annum, and yet whenever it comes to a discussion of the economic conditions of this town people will immediately flout the low rent phantom in the face of all arguments to the contrary. The only cheap commodity which the St. John laborer may really boast over his fellow laborer across the line is the cool, bracing air which we enjoy during here during the summer months, while our cousins across the line are making roast beef of themselves, and let me tell you, my friends, that the laboring people of St. John ought to bless their stars that no invention has yet been made by which the St. John air could be gathered into his bellows and sold fresh to our cousins across the line at so much per bushel. I were such an invention to be made, I assure you that the St. John laborer would soon have to content themselves with only breathing the same air as it is, the air is small comfort to the beasts of burden who by mistake are dubbed men; for in order to enjoy the air we breathe, we must have breathing time. Now the man who racks his body from 10 to 12 hours of the day for a pittance and, when the dollar is already made, he racks his brain how to get out the dollar so as to make it buy shoes for Johnnie and wood for the fire place and provisions for the kitchen. Go tell such a man the charms of nature, the bloom of flowers, the sweet breeze of cool foliage, the music of falling water, and the virtues of a cool air and a fanning breeze.

Thus far I have spoken of the condition of working men in this town as far as I could learn it. If I painted a little too dark I am ready to bear the blame for it, and it is your duty to correct me when I leave this platform. Now the suggestions that I make for the improvement of these conditions are too, too many to be compressed in the limited time allotted me for this discussion. I will therefore select a few of the most important of them. The first most important suggestion that could be made for improving the condition of labor in St. John is that the municipal government should be organized on a basis of public ownership, in union, an organization of labor under the present system of society is a commodity which is bought and sold. The question is now how to raise the price of that commodity, and the answer is, in my opinion, to organize a union of labor in this town. In the United States and Canada gave a sudden leap of about 50 per cent above the normal price. Now what was the cause of this sudden change? Was it a destruction of the crops by locust or drought, or did the thin ears of corn swallow up the full ones as the times of old Pharaoh? Nothing of the kind. It was simply the doing of a combination of capital. One or two daring money kings have succeeded in bringing the greater bulk of the wheat supplies of the United States under their control. This accomplished, they tried to make hay while the sun shines. Now, if such a trick can be played with wheat, why not with labor? I will

from our own town. First, I will make a comparison between it and unorganized labor. There is an union of bricklayers in this town, it was organized about eight or nine years ago, and comprises at present about fifty members. Before the organization of these laborers the highest wages of bricklayers in this town were two dollars for a day's work of from 10 to 12 hours; on the next day after the organization of that trade wages rose to $3 for a working day of nine hours, and this rate prevails to the present day. The contractors made some show of resistance, but inside of two days they came to terms. Now consider the benefits of this union to both the laborers and their employers. The laborers had their wages increased 50 per cent and the working day reduced 10 per cent. God knows it is little enough, as it is considering that the craft can only be plied during a few summer months. However, it is quite an improvement over the standard of wages which were the rule in that trade before its organization. Besides this, there is strong connection between this local organization and the International Bricklayers Union, which stands guard over the interests of the local trade with all the power under its control. Thus any trouble that may arise between the St. John bricklayers and their employers is, by the rule of that organization, laid before the international union, and when this latter body is to be just, and a strike is ordered, every member of the St. John organization of bricklayers is entitled to receive from the international union from five to seven dollars a week; five in the case of a single, and seven in the case of a married man, until such a time as the contractors will come to terms, and all these benefits and privileges are enjoyed by the local bricklayers for an assessment of 12 cents per head paid quarterly to the International. Even the employers have no cause to complain against the workings of the union, considering that through its influence they are assured of getting a higher class of work than they could secure before, for, according to the rules of that organization, none but competent workmen are allowed to become members of the organization. Now let us take the case of store clerks, which will furnish us a fair example of the condition of unorganized labor in this town. From what I could gather after a most painstaking inquiry among the wages of store clerks may be divided into the following three classes: sixty per cent of the total number of clerks are paid from $1.50 to $5 a week, twenty-five per cent from $5 to $8 a week, and only the other fifteen per cent can boast of a living wage. The hours of labor range anywhere from six in the morning to twelve in the night, but the funniest thing of all is the system that is practiced by some of our wealthiest retail dealers in regard to the promotion of their clerks. The wages paid to a newly received clerk range generally from one to two dollars per week, with the understanding that it shall be raised one dollar every year, meanwhile our young hopeful is expected to appear in the shop well fed, well dressed and well ironed. How this can be done on a salary of $1.50 God and his poor father alone know. This system is allowed to work smoothly for two or three years, i. e., as long as the wages of said clerk remain below or at $5 per week, but, as soon as that figure is passed and our hopeful clerk begins to expect a raise of a dollar and a desire of independence or of extending a helping hand to his family, a cloud as big as the hand of man appears on his horizon. His employer is gradually spreading his net within an ace of trapping him and to throw out hints about business being slow and about the necessity of reducing expenses and about his shorting wages, and on one fine morning our hopeful clerk is given his passports and a new dollar and a half clerk is taken in his stead. Poor young clerk, five degrees he has to pass before he can master the great secret of how to sell $4 inch suit to a $8 inch man, or how to turn good cotton into bad wool, and when it comes to the fifth degree and he begins to feel like the alchemist who contemplates his work in the furnace, he cuts their man to the measure of wages. Our retail dealers have adopted the same system with their clerks, instead of paying the wages to the man they cut their man to the measure of wages. Poor young clerk, five degrees he has to pass before he can master the great secret of how to sell $4 inch suit to a $8 inch man, or how to turn good cotton into bad wool, and when it comes to the fifth degree and he begins to feel like the alchemist who contemplates his work in the furnace, he cuts their man to the measure of wages. Now just think of what union and organization would do for the clerks. It would increase their wages, reduce the daily hours of labor, remove the chances of their being thrown away like a worn out shoe, after slavery for years at a time, it would give them a take an example from our brother capitalists. Last year, as a result of the coal miners' strike in the United States, the wholesale price of coal rose a few cents on the ton, immediately the retail coal dealers of St. John put up the price of coal from $5 to $7 and $7.50 a ton. Now I am not aware of any other industry in this town that the dealers in this town to rob the public. I believe it is merely instinct, the instinct of the hawk to pounce upon the dove, but just notice the harmony which existed between the coal dealers of the coal scuffle in upholding their outrageous price throughout the living winter, and I hear that the result of the coal strike is a very satisfactory that we will have a repetition of it next winter. Now, could not the same method be employed by the clerks in a working cause to get care for themselves, living wage and breathing time from a twelve hour day.

THE DUKE'S DIARY.

Monday—(On board the Ophir)—At least a little rest. I would it were a month. Ah, this is comfort, for my very soul is bent with bowing, and the curling smoke from my fonder funnels seems to write addresses to me. Here I am on board my ship with 27 naval officers, 125 bluejackets to salute me, 27 handsmen to enchant my soul, 7 engineers, officers, 88 fiddlers and stokers in that roaring hell below, a purser, 50 stewards, 3 cooks, 3 bakers, 3 butchers, for I must eat, I laundry-man and wife, for I must have a clean shirt once in a while; two harbor for I must be shampooed. The number on board is about 525. (The above figures are correct). I know it ain't as many as some ducks have in a pond, but I'll shakepeare, 'It will suffice.' 'Time is kind a bad now with that war tax still on the horizon.

Tuesday—Today was not as happy as I had hoped. I stubbed my toe in getting up. I smoked a Duke's (barber, 1) poked his finger in my left eye while giving me a shampoo. He is the son of a lord, or I would have discharged him at once. His family are poor but honest. I thought I was to get any more addresses to town, but I got none from the stokers asking for money and shorter hours. Some folks are never contented. The wireless telegraph man up in the bow brought me an address, a husband from a pneumatic cannon on the Po-Ho Islands, which we passed this morning. I told him to measure it and throw it into the sea, and cutting an answer out of my heady Beckoning measuring six inches longer, to send it at once.

Friday—My chief statistician has figured out that since I left Gibraltar, one March last, one hundred and twenty million cheers have been given, such as 'Hurray for the Duke,' that I have passed out 73,906 handshakes, said 'This gives me much pleasure, ladies and gentlemen.' 4,326 times, and repeated 'The loyal sentiments which animate your breasts' 5,412 times; 7,654 bottles of champagne have been cracked at $5 per crack; ten tons of powder have been exploded, 15,000,574 hours have been spent by various persons, 325,876 made by doctors attending patients at banquets and minor gorges; fifteen thousand expectations of knighthood to be received, kindled in 5,342 breast; 1,875,543,645 lbs. sold, 4,332 addresses received; 12,813 yards of paper and 885 gallons of ink consumed, and 5,422 hours' time in preparing them.

Talk about labor and the Boer war! Saturday—The mayor of Uptonuffville presented me with a trained monkey, and I ordered it to be fed with a coconut and two bananas from the royal table and placed in my room. But the only thing it could do have it sent away tomorrow. I wonder if Darwin was right. I have seen many men just like Jacko. Sunday—I rose early, as I was the attraction at Canon Worldlike's church, the monkey ate my collar button and delayed me a bit, but I was off to a good start, and beat all the deacons there. They were disappointed, as they expected to get in on the ground floor with a shake and 'God bless ye, Duke.'

I am afraid it's too true that the church today, instead of reaching down for the masses, is being used as a stepping stone for the classes to get into society. Coming home from church I noticed a tremendous sign: 'His Royal Highness slept for the first time in Yanklet's folding bed and was surprised.' Now I can't deny that.
