RUSSIA MAY ASK JAPAN FOR AN ARMISTICE

Czar Likley to Call National Assembly to Discuss Peace or War

French Government Anxious to Bring Struggle to a Close—Russian Captain Strands Cruiser and Then Blows Her Up—St. Petersburg Stupefied by Naval Disaster—Togo's Casualties Total Up 800—Japs' Victory May Be More Sweeping When Chase is Over.

St. Petersburg, June 2, 3 a. m.—St. Petersburg is full of rumors of the most contradictory character regarding the prospects of peace, but in the best informed quarters the Associated Press was told that no definite decision had been reached. Nevertheless, it is persistently reported that an imperial manifesto may be expected within a brief time.

This manifesto, it is credibly reported, will proclaim the immediate convocation of a national assembly to which the question of peace or war will be submitted, thereby shifting the burden of a decision from the shoulders of the emperor to the whole nation, robbing agitators of the opportunity to make revolutionary capital out of the decision which ever way it may be taken.

The emperor's advisers realize that whatever haste may be made in calling together the representatives of the people, it will be impossible for them to meet in time to forestall another battle in Manchuria, but through a request for an armistice is a possibility the present disposition is to leave the matter entirely in the hands of the assembly as another defeat on land, unless decisive, could not change the situation or make it much worse, while a victory for Lieut.-General Linerich would alter the complexion of affairs entirely.

The admiralty has not yet recovered from the stupefaction caused by the naval disaster, but from reports received from the commanders of the Almaz, Izumrud and the torpedo boat destroyers, the naval authorities are gradually piecing out a connected story of the battle up to the last stage before the surrender of the fleet under Nebogatoff.

There is little comfort for the Russians in their own reports.

Russian Captain Blew Up His Cruiser.

St. Petersburg, June 1—Official reports bearing on the naval battle are beginning to be received by the emperor and Grand Duke Alexis, the high admiral, the most important of these reports revealing the fate of the cruiser Izumrud, being a torpedo boat, the latter being charged with the task of attacking the Japanese fleet.

The baron says that before dark on May 27 the Orel, Alexander III, and Borodino had been sunk, and that the Kintz Souvaroff, the Kametcharka and the Ural had been seriously damaged and lost to sight. The command then devolved on Rear-Admiral Nebogatoff.

In the evening the Nikolai I., the Orel, the General Admiral Apraxine and the Admiral Senavin, the Admiral Oushakoff, the Sissoi Veliky, the Navarin, the Admiral Nakhimoff and the Izumrud sailed northeastward, the latter being charged to transmit orders to the battleships. Two other cruisers were cut off from the fleet and were again seen.

The battleships, steaming at fourteen knots, were repeatedly attacked by the Japanese torpedo boats, especially at the extremities of the line.

As dawn it was ascertained that the battleship division consisted of the Nikolai I., the Orel, the General Admiral Apraxine and the Admiral Senavin.

At sunrise May 28, smoke from the Japanese ships reappeared on the horizon. Upon the admiral gave orders for increased speed. The General Admiral and the General Admiral Apraxine dropped behind.

Towards 10 o'clock the Japanese fleet appeared first to port and then to starboard, while the cruiser division maneuvered behind the Russians to starboard.

Baron Ferzen's account continues:—"I was cut off from the squadron, and finding it impossible to rejoin it, resolved to make for Vladivostok. I put on full speed and the enemy's cruisers came on in pursuit. Owing to the insufficiency of my coal supply, and the certainty of meeting the enemy's cruisers, I subsequently altered my course for Vladivostok Bay, where I arrived on the night of May 29.

At 1:30 o'clock next morning in pitch darkness the Izumrud ran full on a reef at the entrance to the bay. Having only ten tons of coal and seeing that it would be impossible to again float my vessel, I ordered the crew ashore and blew up the Izumrud to prevent her falling into the hands of the enemy.

"Ten of my sailors were wounded in the battle, but the officers and the rest of the crew are safe."

Baron Ferzen's report dispenses of the statement sent from St. Petersburg yesterday that the Izumrud had arrived at Vladivostok.

The Izumrud was built at the Nevsky yards, St. Petersburg, and was launched in 1903. She was of 3,196 tons displacement, 17,000 indicated horse-power, and 414 feet beam, and 16 feet draught, with a speed of 23 knots an hour. Her armament consisted of six 4.7 inch quick firing guns and 1.8 inch quick firing guns, two 1.4 machine guns and she was equipped with five torpedo tubes. Her complement was 340 men.

"Virtues" of Mikado Won the Victory.

Tokio, June 1, 2:15 p. m.—Admiral Togo, responding to the imperial rescript commending the admiral and his sailors, expresses his appreciation and further says: "that we gained a success beyond our expectation is due to the brilliant virtue of your majesty and to the protection of the spirits of your imperial ancestors and not to the action of any human being.

"We shall be faithful and answer to the Imperial will."

Togo's Casualties 800.

Tokio, June 1, 7 p. m.—The navy department made the following announcement today:—"Later reports from the different divisions of the fleet engaged in the naval battle of May 27 show as follows:—"The Russian battleship Orel was heavily damaged in the early part of the fight on Saturday, going down at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. The first Russian vessel sunk was the battleship Sissoi Veliky. The armored cruisers Admiral Nakhimoff and Vladimir Monomach, after being in the general engagement during the day time, were still further damaged by torpedoes during attacks by night and were eventually completely disabled. They drifted into the vicinity of Tsu Islands, where they were discovered on Sunday morning, May 28, by the auxiliary cruisers Shilano, Kawato, Tamao and Sado, which were about to capture them, but they all sank.

The crews of our auxiliary cruisers rescued 915 of the crews of the sunken Russian ships.

The battleship Navarin was torpedoed four times after sundown on Saturday, May 27, and sunk. The survivors of the Navarin's crew confirm the story of her destruction.

"The cruisers Nitaka and Otawa discovered the Russian cruiser Svetlana at 9 o'clock on Sunday morning in the vicinity of Chappyan Bay and immediately attacked and sunk her. The commander of the Nitaka reported the fact.

"Later reports show that during the night of May 27 our torpedo boats numbered 34, 35 and 65 were sunk by the enemy. Comrades rescued the majority of their crews. Besides the above there was no damage worth reporting. No warship or destroyer suffered any loss of fighting or navigating power.

"We anticipated a heavy loss of life, but find that our casualties were comparatively slight. They do not exceed 800 killed and wounded. The casualty reports will be rendered as speedily as possible.

"Nearly the whole strength of both combatants met in battle and the area of the fighting was very wide.

"The first day proved foggy and even without the smoke and fumes resulting from the battle, it was impossible to see five miles. Consequently during the day it was impossible to locate or observe all the ships under my command. Moreover, the fighting having lasted two days and the ships of my command being scattered for the purpose of chasing and attacking the enemy, some having received orders after the battle, it was impossible to collect and present any detailed report covering the whole battle at this time."

THE UNFORTUNATE CZAR--AN APPARENTLY UNFOUNDED RUMOR OF HIS SUICIDE STARTLED EUROPE THIS MORNING

St. Petersburg, June 2, 3:25 a. m.—There are various rumors afloat in the city that the Emperor is dead, having either committed suicide or been assassinated. These rumors are untrue.

LIVELY SCENE IN NEW YORK COURT

Man on Trial for Murder Shouts Defiance at Prosecuting Attorney and Declines to Answer Questions.

New York, June 1—While testifying in his own behalf in his trial for the murder of George Elberhardt, Duncan "Scotty" Young today became so enraged by questions asked by the prosecuting attorney that court attendants were ordered to restrain him. The prisoner stood in the witness box, gesticulating wildly and shouting at the top of his voice.

He charged assistant District Attorney Ely with subordination of perjury, and said he would have had the official indicted had he been allowed to go before the grand jury. He called one of the witnesses for the prosecution a "liar and cur," and refused positively to answer some of the questions which were asked him. In declining to answer questions, Young took the ground that he was protected by constitutional rights.

When assistant District Attorney Ely appealed to Justice Davy to compel the witness to answer, the court replied that he was powerless. "I don't see how I can punish the witness for contempt of court," said the justice, "since he already is in jail and has been for six years."

Young's direct testimony was substantially the same as that given by him at his two previous trials. He denied positively that he killed Elberhardt, and swore that on the night of the murder he did not leave his own home.

Thursday Mr. Pond made a written statement before A. I. Truman and this will be presented to the government. Its contents will not be given out until then.

F. LaForest, of Edmundston, who is acting for Mr. Pond, was asked last night for a statement as to the day's developments in the St. John end of the case and he replied that he could tell nothing beyond that Mr. Pond had his statement prepared and that he was to meet Attorney-General Pugsley here at 10 o'clock this morning.

Hon. Mr. Pugsley coming down from Fredericton last night.

Some new facts relative to the trouble came out yesterday and to tell them it is necessary to go over some ground covered in yesterday's Telegraph. It was there stated that when the Van Buren boom was winged by Mr. Pond's foreman, Mr. Pond was not with that drive. President Hammond, of the Van Buren Company, it is now declared, branded Mr. Pond as a coward for leaving the winging of the boom to his men and not being there himself and also threatened to himself shoot Mr. Pond if the boom were interfered with again.

The further statement is made that when Mr. Pond and his boats reached the first boom Saturday last they were seen by the crew of the Van Buren Company who were at the second boom, a short distance away; that Mr. Pond waited some time for the Van Buren men to come and open the boom and give him passage but that no one came and then he dynamited the boom as reported. Then, it is added, the passage to the second boom was made, Alfred Visletto, the Van Buren foreman, following along shore armed and threatening to shoot and at the second boom the incidents occurred as reported.

Because of the threats made personally against him and because of what he knows of the men on the side of his opponents and the fact that anything might happen in excitement caused by the troubles, Mr. Pond has remained in the city for some time.

Further Facts in Connection With the St. John River Log Trouble

BELIEVES LIFE UNSAFE

Attorney General Pugsley Gives Interview on the Situation Which Has Arisen--Government Has Not Yet Taken Action--Course Depends on Points Which Dr. Pugsley Sets Out.

Levi W. Pond, the river driver who is a central figure in the St. John river troubles, has asked the protection of the New Brunswick authorities in carrying on his driving operations and until some action is taken in the matter he does not propose to resume the work.

He declares his life is in danger should he attempt to continue; that he has already been threatened and that his work is prevented and a serious condition created.

CONFESSES TO SWINDLING

EQUITABLE OUT OF $55,000

Lobley, Says Clerk in Assurance Co.'s Office, Hatched the Scheme and He Only Got $10,000 of the Proceeds.

New York, June 1—Samuel Lobley, who has been on trial in the Supreme Court in Brooklyn, charged with fraudulently obtaining money on a life insurance policy which is alleged to have been stolen from the vaults of the Equitable Life Assurance Company in this city, withdrew his plea of not guilty and entered a plea of guilty. This action was taken by advice of counsel, it was announced, and in informing the court of the decision, the district attorney said that it might later be shown that there were extenuating circumstances in the case.

Lobley told the court that the total sum received on the stolen property was approximately $55,000. Of this amount he said his share was only $10,000. He said that Emil Nuemer, the equitable clerk now under a rat, came to him with the proposition that money be raised on the policy.

Lobley said that he had been in the city for some time and that he had been in the city for some time and that he had been in the city for some time.

URUGUAY IGNORES BRITISH PROTEST

Captain and Crew of Nova Scotia Were Convicted Without Evidence.

Ottawa, June 1—(Special)—The state department is still pressing the British authorities to come to the relief of the imprisoned captain and officers of the Canadian schooner Agnes G. Donahoe by the Uruguay government, but so far nothing definite has been done.

The British consul at Uruguay says that a case was worked up against the prisoners, who were accused of poaching for seals, without there being any law upon the subject.

Lord Lansdowne, it is understood, admits that there was no law which the prisoners violated. What the Uruguay government sentenced the officers and crew for was taking of property belonging to a company which the government had leased. It was held that they were guilty because there was blood on the deck of the schooner, which looked to be fresh blood, but the charge was denied on the part of the captain and crew.

CAPT. BARCLAY, FORMERLY OF ALLAN LINE, DEAD

Montreal, June 1—(Special)—Captain John Barclay, for many years superintendent of the Allan line, died here today.

He was the first captain to ascend the St. Lawrence with a direct cargo from China. He joined the Allan service in 1894, and remained with them until two years ago, when ill health caused his retirement.

MOST SUCCESSFUL YEAR YET AT U. N. B.

Largest Graduating Class in the History of the Institution

Young Women Win Important Prizes—Presentation of Medals and Conferring of Degrees--The Alumni Oration by Prof. W. C. Murray--Valedictory Address--Other News of the Closing Exercises.

Fredericton, N. B., June 1—(Special)—The university exercises exercises this afternoon were in many respects the most successful held in recent years. The weather conditions were all that could be desired. The attendance of visitors was large, and the addresses were of high order. The proceedings took place in the college library, which was thronged to its utmost capacity, the fair sex, as usual, predominating.

Lieutenant-Governor Snowball, in his Windsor uniform, occupied the chair, while Chancellor Harrison was master of ceremonies. Among others on the platform were Judge McLeod, Dr. Murray McLaren, Dr. H. S. Bridge, St. John; Dr. J. R. Ingh, Dr. Bailey, Judge Barry, Rev. Canon Roberts, Inspector Bridges, Dr. Atherton, Fredericton; Dr. Brydson Jack, Vancouver; Rev. W. J. Armitage, Dr. W. C. Murray, Halifax; Mrs. J. S. Armstrong, Rothesay; archdeacon Woodatone.

Theodore Rand McNally, of this city, winner of the Douglas gold medal, read a portion of his essay, after which he was presented with the medal by the lieutenant-governor.

Presentation of Prizes.

Dr. Murray McLaren, on behalf of the alumni society, announced that the society's gold medal for the best Latin essay had been won by Miss Edna D. Bell, of Moncton, whose translation had been commended by the examiners. Miss Bell wasn't present, and the medal was not presented.

The Montgomery Campbell prize for classics was presented to Miss M. M. Winslow by Archdeacon Neales, in a graceful speech. He warmly congratulated the winner on her success in classics, and expressed pleasure at the fact that she came from the town of Woodstock.

Dr. Inch was called upon to present the governor-general's medal to Miss Alberta Roach, of St. John, and discharged the pleasant duty very acceptably. He said he had the honor of being the first one to propose to the senate that young ladies be admitted to the graduating course at the university, and he also had the honor of being first to confer the degree of B. A. on a young lady in the Dominion of Canada.

He had watched with great interest the progress of feminine education throughout the world during the last twenty-five years, and was very glad to see young women win in competition with the opposite sex. He was glad of the privilege of presenting the medal to a daughter of one of his former pupils, whose friendship he had enjoyed for many years.

David R. Smith, of St. Martins, was announced as the winner of the Brydson Jack memorial scholarship for physics. The presentation was made by Dr. W. Brydson Jack, of Vancouver, a son of the late Prof. Brydson Jack, at present visiting the city.

Special prizes for engineering, donated by Prof. E. Brydson Jack, were awarded to Clarence M. Steeves, A. E. Eastman and F. G. McLeod.

The Ketchikan silver medal for engineering was presented to A. R. Crookshank by Dr. Atherton.

Chancellor Harrison then presented certificates for honor and class distinctions won during the term, as published in this morning's Telegraph.

The degrees were conferred by Chancellor Harrison. Prof. Brittain and Mrs. J. S. Armstrong, who received honorary degrees, were given a great ovation by the students.

Prof. W. C. Murray.

The alumni oration was delivered by Prof. W. C. Murray (U. N. B. '88) of Dalhousie University.

The subject of Professor Murray's address was the service which a university may render the state.

"In whatever sense we take the term university, whether with the Germans we regard it as the home of research, or with the Scots as an institution for the diffusion of learning, or with the French as a school of letters, it is a body which is called upon to render the state service."

MAY BE THREE-CORNERED FIGHT IN NORTH OXFORD

Independent Liberal Likely to Run--Conservative Slogan "Provincial Rights."

Woodstock, Ont., June 1—It is rumored here a third candidate will enter the field in North Oxford, running as an independent Liberal, opposed to the educational clause, and the name of D. R. Ross, of Embro, is mentioned. Mr. Ross ran some years ago against the late Andrew Patullo as a prohibition candidate.

Hon. George E. Foster was chief speaker in a meeting held in the city hall last night in the interests of J. G. Wallace, Conservative candidate for North Oxford; the meeting was the first of the rallies to be held here in Conservative interests.

D. W. Karn, of Woodstock, presided, and in his opening address said there was only one issue before the electorate, that of provincial rights. Mr. Foster said Sir Wilfrid Laurier declared himself to be standing on the bed rock of the constitution which he asked the present rights of the minority in the west to be preserved, but there was nothing in the British North America act giving the dominion power to pass school laws for the provinces.

Chatham, May 30.—Dr. G. J. Sprout has purchased the store formerly occupied by George Watt from S. Habberley. The price was $2,000.

New uniforms have also been issued. The 73rd has now eight companies, the headquarters of which are in Chatham, Campbellton, Boiestown, Upper Blackville, Black River, Black River Bridge, Buctouche and Richibucto. The company officers are busy recruiting for Camp Sussex on June 27.

The ladies of the Roman Catholic congregation are preparing for a grand bazaar to be held in July. The proceeds are for the new cathedral building fund.

It is expected that the horse races on July 3 will be the fastest and most exciting ever witnessed here. Five hundred and fifty dollars will be divided into the following prizes: Three-minute trot and pace, purse $150; 2:40, trot only, purse $200; and 2:30 trot and pace, purse $200. Entries close June 20.

The funeral of Mrs. James Telf, of Loggieville, took place on Friday. The deceased was a daughter of Phineas Harrison and leaves many other relatives, besides her husband. Service was conducted by Rev. Louis O'Leary and the burial was in the Roman Catholic cemetery, Loggieville.

Ernest Hutchinson's new gasoline speed launch has arrived and was launched Friday. She is 37 feet long, six feet beam, with torpedo stern about two feet longer on the water line than on deck. She has a powerful motor and is expected to run over twelve miles an hour.

J. L. Palmer, who has represented the Canada Life Insurance Company here for some months, has accepted the position of head bookkeeper with the Sussex Mercantile Company and left on Friday for Sussex to enter upon his new duties.

Persons who have spent hours at Chatham Junction waiting for delayed trains will be glad to know that in future trains on the Chatham branch will not leave on schedule time when trains on the main line are more than an hour and a half late.

H. D. Gunter, of Boiestown, is in town. A quantity of new machinery for the barrel factory has arrived and will probably be all placed this week.

The promoters of the proposed boot and shoe factory have decided to accept the town loan of $20,000, the conditions being that the same amount be subscribed, paid up, and actually expended on building and plant before any of the town money be received. Stock subscriptions are being solicited.

The logs on the Dugarvon river were got out safely yesterday, but it is feared that the Northwest drive, which contains about 10,000,000 feet, will have to be abandoned if there is not rain soon.

DALHOUSIE.

Dalhousie, N. B., May 30.—If it is true that the progress of a town is shown in the character of its mercantile establishments, no town in Canada of equal population can boast of handsomer stores, or more up-to-date stocks, and bricker trade than the town of Campbellton. For one who has visited Campbellton a quarter of a century ago and sees it now, will be convinced what energy and a progressive spirit will do. Some very fine residences are also being erected, on pretty grounds. The new post office that is being erected on Main street will be a monument that will beautify the business portion of the town, and the addition of wharfing accommodation will make Campbellton's harbor a very convenient one for shipping as well as easy for passenger traffic.

A good second to Campbellton in progress during recent years is the little town of Dalhousie, which notwithstanding that it has not the advantage of being traversed by a through line of railway is forging ahead.

With the Dalhousie Lumber Co.'s two large mills, the Chapin Mill, and the large factory under erection by the Restigouche Woodworking Company, the town can boast of four manufacturers of which it can well be proud, especially under a modern system of regular cash payment to the workmen.

Dalhousie, since the last two or three years has made a great change in its stores. They are not large, but they are neat and tasty, and suit the wants of the place.

New stores that have improved in appearance are occupied by James Wallace, Wm. C. Arsenault & Co., Daniel McDonald, Messrs. Scheffer Bros., J. E. Martin, Ben. Windsor, Miss Stuart, Miss Harquail, The Dalhousie Mercantile Co., Ltd. The latter occupies the stand held during many years by George Haddow, ex-M. P. This business is now practically controlled by Geo. E. Meccier, and Hon. C. H. LaBillico. The present owners are improving their place and intend giving the town an up-to-date store in every way. Considerable improvements have been made in Murphy's Hotel and the Baker and the Quebec hotels are planning for new additions.

A large quantity of ornamental trees have been planted by several citizens, and the town commissioners have commenced adding to the appearance of the wide streets by planting shade trees thereon.

Sixty beautiful trees have been planted on Brunswick and Adelaide streets, and it is the intention of the town commissioners to spend a small sum every year towards beautifying the streets.

The topic of conversation here in town matters is the resignation of Dr. A. G. Ferguson as one of the town commissioners. The doctor was chairman of the board and will be missed, as he took a very active interest in advancing the best interests of the town. It is said that he did not agree with some of his friends re water works system proposed, hence his resignation. A public meeting to elect a new commissioner will be held shortly, and the water question will be then fully discussed.

There is some talk of Contractor McManus transferring his contract for the building of the Dalhousie Ballast wharf to Roland Moffat, son of George Moffat, ex-M. P. The amount of contract is $42,000 and the size of new wharf is 30x50.

At meetings held this week to select delegates to attend the convention of Acadicians to be held at Caraquet (N.B.) on the 13th, 16th and 17th August next, the following were elected from Restigouche county: Campbellton—J. T. Vaujour, J. A. Steneau, John L. LeBlanc, Francis LeBlanc, Belmont—Rev. J. Wheaton, D. A. Arsenault, Ed. Bernard, Joseph Dappéau, Thomas Savoy, Jr.

Dalhousie—Dr. C. H. LaBillico, Dr. N. Doucet, A. J. LeBlanc, Augustin Thibaud, J. E. Gaudet.

The convention will deal especially with educational and agricultural questions. Two of our carpenters are getting tired of town life notwithstanding that they own comfortable homes and are busy men. They have both purchased good farms at Lily Lake and claim that if they work as hard on their farms as they work for others at their trade, with a good market, as they will have at Campbellton, they will ultimately greatly benefit by the change.

News has reached here from Mr. Pottinger that repairs will be made at once to the I. C. R. wharf. It is now dangerous, and railway men fear that a heavy engine may go through it.

Our local members intend having the road superintendents of the lower and centre parishes in Restigouche county meet them at Henderson's Hotel, Charlottetown, in a few days to complete all arrangements about road and bridge repairs.

On Monday at Campbellton, Superintendent M. G. Mann, Charles B. Gray, and James S. Cooling, discussed the new road act with Messrs. LaBillico and McLatchey and received full instructions for the repair of roads and bridges in Addington and Eldon.

Mr. Aiken, of Halifax (N.S.), has accepted a position here with the firm of A. & R. Loggie.

Miss Ida Campbell left here last week for Montreal, where she will join her niece, Emma Campbell, and return to Enland.

Miss Ida DeBoo spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Lambkie.

Miss Marion Jesson has returned to her home in Newport (P.Q.) to spend a few weeks.

I took it a few months ago when I felt my strength giving way, and soon made itself manifest in giving me new strength and health." Blanche Grey.

NELSON AND TOGO.

Nelson was forty-five when he flew his last signal at Trafalgar. Togo was past three score—and has had the advantage of studying Nelson's tactics. Nelson had engaged the enemy in one way and another more than one hundred times before his last battle. Togo's experience in actual war has been much more limited, but perhaps at that account the perfection of his work is all the more wonderful. At Nelson's back there was a nation forever building more wooden ships. Behind Togo there was the same willingness to build, but not the same ability. With the five or six first class battleships Japan had in commission a year ago last February Togo must win and hold command of the sea if Japan were to even have a chance for final victory. Nelson was able to choose smashing work, broadside to broadside. Togo sometimes, as on August 10, was forced to fight at long range, lest he lose or have crippled one or more of the precious ships which all depended.

There is another side. Nelson fought and defeated stouter men than Togo has mastered. The British were ever the masters of the French and the Spanish at most styles of sea-fighting, but at Trafalgar, though twenty of the enemy struck their flags and the British had the better of the engagement from the first broadside, Nelson lost 1,857 men, and on several of the great Spanish vessels 400 men were killed or disabled before the Donas were hammered into submission. The grim quality of the fighting is shown by the fact that Nelson twice ceased firing upon the Redoubtable before he got his death, believing she must have had enough and would be ready to surrender. She had no flags flying, and he thought she lacked the means to signal surrender. And Nelson was a judge of what Wellington was when he called "hard pounding." We know the Japanese losses were less than the British, though of course it is true that the latter had more men engaged and were without protection. The Russian casualties must have been very heavy, but they would doubtless be found to be less numerous than those suffered by the French and Spanish off Cadix.

Togo's enemy came to his hand like a homing bird. Somewhere near Vladivostok, off the port or in one of the narrow channels leading to it, the Russians must be found—and 30-knot screws could give Togo ample warning. Marconi was his spy. Nelson's quarry, on the contrary, had a free foot and neither wireless telegraph nor swift scouts to betray them. Nelson chased Villeneuve from the Channel across the Atlantic to the Indies and back again—a stern chase and a long one. And now we come upon common ground—the high confidence and desperate courage of the British and Japanese seamen. When Nelson's men began to close upon Villeneuve's fleet "the sun shone on the sails of the enemy, and their well formed line, with their numerous three-deckers, made an appearance which any other assailants would have thought formidable; but the British sailors only admired the beauty and splendor of the spectacle, and in full confidence of winning what they saw remarked to each other that it was a fine sight to see such ships make at Spithead!" They had fought under Nelson, and their record justified their confidence. So with the men who fought under Togo. One can well believe that when they saw the enemy's imposing fleet they thought those vessels would make a fine sight at Nagasaki or Sasebo. The world has yet to learn whether Togo's great guns did the work, like Nelson's, or whether the torpedo boats will claim a great share of the credit. In any case Togo's work for Japan, at Port Arthur and in the Straits of Corea, justify the comparison with Nelson, for the present value of his achievements to his country and their bearing upon its future are inestimable.

PLAYING WITH FIRE

In our news columns this morning appears an account of recent occurrences on the upper St. John River, where much ill-feeling, many threats and some actual violence have followed the clash of opposing interests in the matter of the obstructions in the river at Van Buren. Even now, it appears, a somewhat dangerous situation exists, and it is quite possible that passion or excitement may lead to very serious consequences. Strong men, "line fence" quarrel, menaces, weapons—here are elements of tragedy. We think the necessity for calmness and caution cannot now be too strongly urged upon the disputants, and the county and provincial authorities, no doubt, will be prompt to take precautions to prevent excited men, both from Maine and New Brunswick, from any further violent acts.

New Brunswick's rights will—must be protected to the utmost; but the legal method, undertaken by the Attorney-General, and now being pushed with what speed is possible in such matters, is the only way in which the province can properly proceed. No greater mistake could be made than for the lumbermen who feel that they have been subjected to annoyance and injury to take the law into their own hands.

If, as is asserted in some quarters with every appearance of truth, armed men in the pay of a foreign corporation, have appeared in our territory and have made threats and persisted in obstructing our lumbermen in the use of the river, prompt representations should be made to the authorities of Maine, and at Washington, in order that the wrongdoers shall be recalled or restrained before they provoke violence. At the same time investigation of the conduct of our own citizens may be necessary, in order that our case may not be prejudiced by similar offences, and that it shall be shown that we know how to practice restraint and wait upon the courts we have established.

Such facts as are before the people of this province convince them that our neighbors have been the chief offenders in the matter of obstructing the river, and that their case is one which will not stand in law. That the Canadian side of the river should be obstructed by them to the annoyance and injury of New Brunswick is intolerable; but the matter is not one that the lumbermen can settle for themselves with fists or weapons, and the sooner this fact is made plain to all the better all will be served in the end.

The local government has taken the firm and dignified course in this matter, and confidence in its intention and ability to see justice done should prevent violence and disorder. We shall insist upon our rights; but the time has not come to fight for them, and the authorities on both sides of the line should co-operate in guarding against further dangerous friction between men already too greatly excited by an unfortunate controversy. That done, the New Brunswick side of the river, at least, must be freed from obstructions as soon as the courts give warrant for such action.

FREDERICTON'S HEALTH

The Fredericton Herald is authority for the belief that the capital city is about to undertake the too long postponed work of putting in a proper system of sewerage. The city council now has authority to proceed with the work when it is favored by a two-thirds vote, and fortunately it is thought the present board is inclined to take the progressive stand. It has been said that, although the level site of the city presents certain difficulties, the work could be done for something like $80,000—a comparatively small expenditure when the great importance of the matter is considered.

RUSSIA AND PEACE

Probably the rumor that the Czar is a suicide or the victim of an assassin is founded, as St. Petersburg says it is. It would need but some such tragedy to reduce the great empire to complete chaos. In the capital there is renewed talk of peace, or of an armistice until a decision between peace and a prolongation of the war can be reached by distracted counselors. But these proposals do not make allowance for the fact that Japan is not now likely to grant an armistice which would give her hard-pressed enemy a breathing spell. There is vague talk in St. Petersburg about what Linévitch may do and what a victory by him might do to relieve the situation. This but shows the panic and despair in Russia, for Linévitch, with less than Kurapatkin's army facing a force greater than Kurapatkin faced, can do nothing which will in any material way alter the trend of affairs or lessen the humiliation of his country.

THE AMATEUR CRACKSMAN

A thoughtful writer in the St. John Star objects to the "Raffles" stories by that gifted writer, Mr. E. W. Storming, which are appearing in The Telegraph, the Toronto Mail and Empire, the Halifax Herald, and many other journals which are not content to give their readers the humdrum bill of fare presented daily by newspapers like the local evening reprint. The Toronto Star, usually an intelligent newspaper, attacked Mr. Raffles because his appearance in the Mail and Empire was making inroads upon the Star's circulation. The St. John Star repeats the Toronto Star's error. Its objection, one suspects, is not to Raffles, but to the fact that The Telegraph spends money and gets out a creditable, enterprising newspaper in a small field, wherein the Star must live also.

As to Raffles, the Star pays a poor compliment to the intelligence of the newspaper-reading public by assuming that this public cannot distinguish between a sprightly story of old adventure and what is actually vicious and degrading literature. The fact that the Star writer sees in Raffles an incentive to crime is a confession few newspaper men would care to make. It indicates an unripe intelligence and suggests that perhaps there is someone, in the office of the reprint, who should not read Raffles lest he forsake the gilded case of newspaperdom for the jimmy and the dark lantern. But the peril, we may be sure, is not general. Telegraph readers will be entertained by these stories; but to believe that they could be injuriously affected by them is to insult their intelligence.

Critics of the Raffles series as a newspaper feature assume that the public which buys newspapers is on a level with the dime-novel reading boys and the "spooks" who crowd the theatre galleries when a slaughter-house play is on. A little thought will convince such critics that their position is presumptuous and unsound. Readers of the Star would not be flattered if they were told the stanzas stories endangered, their morals. The Star's real objection to The Amateur Cracksmen undoubtedly is that it helps to sell The Telegraph.

And, by the way, all who may be curious about the question raised by a disturbed rival, should settle it for themselves by reading the remaining twelve stories of the series. The third, "The Premier's Pas" will appear in tomorrow's Telegraph, and one will be printed on each of the eleven succeeding Saturdays. On these days the Telegraph will be, as usual, on Saturday, a sixteen-page paper, containing a variety of features which a discerning public can all afford to miss. Buy early and avoid the Saturday rush.

NOTE AND COMMENT

The report of the Czar's suicide suggests that he may have heard about Senator Domville's message to his friend the Mikado.

President Roosevelt and Secretary of the Navy Morton say the Japanese victory shows that the United States should have a larger navy. To have had a smaller navy a year or so ago might have saved Russia much trouble and expense.

Not very long ago St. John was protesting against G. T. P. scheme because it seemed needlessly to threaten the I. C. R. Just at present the gentlemen controlling the I. C. R. do not seem to know that St. John is on the map. Does the Minister of Railways seek to punish this city and gain some friends in the territory about Moncton? If he will examine the proposed summer arrangement carefully he must see that it is most unjust that intercourse with his neighbors should be considered because of the travel it originates.

THE OCEAN ARMAGEDDON

Some one compared the war between Russia and Japan to a fight between an elephant and a whale. The figure was a happy one, but it has turned out that if the elephant was to win he has, as might be expected, been woefully worsted on that point, unnatural element. The overthrow of the Baltic fleet is evidently complete, tragic, irretrievable. Two hundred years ago Peter the Great, the most wonderful personality the Muscovite race has produced, recognized that if his country was to be a great power it must have access to the rest of the world, and a preliminary step that intercourse with its neighbors was the creation of a fleet. Starting from nothing he built up a sea-power which helped the army materially in crushing Sweden and wresting from her all her trans-Baltic possessions. It might well cause the rugged old nation-builder to turn in his grave to find that in eighteen months the work of 200 years has been obliterated, for finally Russia has returned to the state of marine helplessness in which he found her.

BRITAIN TO TAKE BIG GUNS FROM HALIFAX

Halifax, May 28.—It is stated that orders have been received from England ordering the dismantling of the guns of larger calibre at Port Clarence. These guns will be shipped to Bermuda and England. Owing to the present good understanding between Great Britain and the United States it will not be necessary to have the harbor defence of a war footing, and as the Canadian government has taken over the gunnery of the fortifications the demands upon the Canadian service will be made as light as possible. The guns which are to be removed cost £2,000 each. The number of large guns in some of the other harbor forts will also be reduced.

GREENWAY CONDEMNS MANITOBA VOTER'S LIST

Says Roblin has introduced American Registration System Which Works Great Injustice. Ottawa, May 30.—(Special)—The house devoted the day to a discussion of the Manitoba voters' lists. The subject was brought up by Hon. Thomas Greenway who, in an excellent speech, drew a terrible picture of the iniquitous way in which the Roblin government had been handling the lists. The registration system, an American institution, was adopted by the Roblin government. He (Greenway) was always opposed to registration but it was accepted as long as the courts had appointed the officers to carry it out. The result of all this was that in some places persons would have to travel 200 and 300 miles to get on the lists. At other points they were 40 miles distant.

PALE, FEEBLE GIRLS

A Great Responsibility Rests on Mothers of Growing Girls. A great and serious responsibility rests upon every mother whose daughter is passing the threshold of girlhood into womanhood. She is at a crisis, and if she is to be a healthy, happy woman, she must develop rightly now. She must not be pale, sunken-eyed, sallow, languid and bloodless at this time. She must have additional strength and rich, pure blood, which will help her to strong, healthy womanhood. There is only one absolutely certain way to get new rich, healthy blood, and that is through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Every pill helps to make rich, life-giving blood, that brings strength to every organ in the body and the girl's health to pale, sallow cheeks.

Twenty buildings were burned, and the loss is estimated at $200,000. The fire originated in Hampton & Kuntz's general store.

THE UNIVERSITY

The term of the University closed today with the usual exercises, an account of which will be found in our news columns. The term which has ended has been one of prosperity to the University. The people of Fredericton and of the province generally are pleased to note the increase in the popularity and efficiency of the University which has taken place in recent years. It is a matter of regret that more money is not available for this important institution of learning. For these days money is required to equip and maintain a University properly. Our University is exposed to vigorous competition, not only from such institutions as Acadia, Mount Allison and Dalhousie, but also from McGill, all of which colleges have been largely endowed by private benefices and which continue to receive large gifts. If the income of our University were doubled it would not be any too much for its needs. Indeed an annual income of $25,000 would very well be expended in its maintenance. We trust that the day is not very far distant when the University will receive a considerable addition to its revenue so that it may reach a higher level of efficiency than it has now attained.

A Lobsterman's Complaint.

Captain Clayton, of the little Nova Scotia packet "Lloyd," which arrived in port Wednesday with 3,500 lobsters, says that the bay catch this season is considerably below last year's, and he attributes this to the 10½-inch regulation. He thinks it unfair that the lobster fishermen of Charlotte county should be made the exception to the new regulation. "Why," said he, "they pick up all the nine-inch lobsters we throw over the side." "Generally speaking," the captain continued, "the regulation is not objectionable as I do not think it right to take the small lobsters off the bottom, but let them enforce it all round."

SITTING UP

Mr. Emmerson's suggestion that St. John people should rise earlier in the morning to please a smaller number of people somewhat appears to have won the merit of originality. It will at all events make the people sit up and think.

A COSTUME PIECE

Second Story in the Absorbing Raffles Series BY E. W. HORNUNG

London was just then talking of one whose name is already a name and nothing more. Reuben Rosenthal had made his millions on the diamond fields of South Africa, and had come home to enjoy them according to his lights; how he went to work will scarcely be forgotten by any reader of the half-penny evening papers, which revealed in endless anecdotes his original ingenuity and present prodigality, varied with interesting particulars of the extraordinary establishment which the millionaire set up in St. John's Wood. Here he kept a retinue of Kafirs, who were literally his slaves; and hence he wore, with enormous diamonds in his shirt and on his finger, in the company of a prize-fighter of heinous repute, who was not, however, by any means the worst element in the Rosenthal menage. So said common gossip; but the fact was sufficiently established by the interference of the police on at least one occasion, followed by certain magisterial proceedings which were reported with justifiable gusto and huge headlines in the newspapers of the day. And this was all one knew of Reuben Rosenthal up to the time when the Old Bohemian Club, having fallen on evil days, found it worth its while to organize a great dinner in honor of so wealthy an exponent of the Club's principles. I was not at the banquet myself, but a member took Raffles, who told me all about it that very night. "Most extraordinary show I ever went to in my life," said he. "As for the man himself—well, I was prepared for something grotesque, but the fellow fairly took my breath away. To begin with, he's the most astounding brute to look at, well over 6 feet, with a chest like a barrel, and a great hook nose, and the reddest hair and whiskers you ever saw. Dank like a fire-engine, but only got drunk enough to make a speech that I wouldn't have missed for ten pounds. I'm only sorry you weren't there, too, Bunny, old chap. I began to be sorry myself, for Raffles was anything but an excitable person, and never had I seen him so excited before. Had he been following Rosenthal's example. His coming to my rooms at midnight merely to tell me about his dinner was in itself enough to excite a suspicion which was certainly at variance with my knowledge of A. J. Raffles. "What did he say?" I inquired mechanically, divining some subtler explanation of this visit and wondering what on earth it could be. "Say?" cried Raffles. "What did he say? He boasted of his rise, he bragged of his riches, and he vaingloriously boasted of taking me up with 25,000 in his shirt-front and other 25,000 on his little finger. He didn't cease. If he did, he wouldn't have the pluck to wear them. But he had—he'd tell us why. And before you could say Jack Robinson he had whipped out a whacking great revolver!" "Not at the table?" "At the table! In the middle of his speech! But it was nothing to what he wanted to do. He actually wanted us to let him write his name in bullets on the opposite wall to show us why he wasn't afraid to go about in all his diamonds! That brute Purvis, the prize-fighter, who he paid bully, had to bully his master before he could be persuaded out of it. There was quite a panic for the moment; one fellow was saying his prayers under the table, and the waiters bolted to a man. "What a grotesque scene!" "Grotesque enough, but I rather wish they had let him go the whole hog and blaze away. He was as keen as knives to show us how he took care of his purple diamonds, and, do you know, Bunny, I was as keen as knives to see."

My tone may have been half-hearted. I did my best to make it otherwise. But it was hardly a month since our Bond Street exploit, and we certainly could have afforded to behave ourselves for some time to come. We have been getting along so nicely, by his advice, I had scribbled a thing or two; inspired by Raffles, I had even done an article on our own jewel robbery; and for the moment I was quite satisfied with this sort of adventure. I thought we ought to know when we were well off, and could see no point in our running fresh risks before we were obliged. On the other hand, I was anxious not to show the least disposition to break the pledge that I had given a month ago. But it was not on my manifest disinclination that Raffles fastened. "Necessity, my dear Bunny? Does the writer only write when the wolf is at the door? Does the painter paint for bread alone? Must you and I be driven to crime five secretiveness of the inveterate criminal. He would make mysteries of matters of common concern; for example, how he knew how or where he disposed of the Bond Street jewels, on the proceeds of which we were both still leading the outward lives of hundreds of other young fellows about town. He was consistently mysterious about that and other details, of which it seemed to me that I had already earned the right to know everything. I could not but remember how he had led me into my first felony by means of a trick, while yet uncertain whether he could trust me or not. That I could no longer afford to resent, but I did resent his want of confidence in me now. I said nothing about it, but it rankled every day, and never more than in the week that succeeded the Rosenthal dinner. When I met Raffles at the club he would tell me nothing; when I went to his rooms he was out, or pretended to be. One day he told me he was getting on well, but slowly; it was a more ticklish game than he had thought; but when I began to ask questions he would say no more. Then and there, in my annoyance, I made my own decision. Since he would tell me nothing of the result of his vigils, I determined to keep one on my own account, and that very evening found my way to the millionaire's front gate. The house he was occupying is, I believe, quite the largest in the St. John's Wood district. It stands in the angle formed by two broad thoroughfares, neither of which, as it happens, is a busy route, and I doubt if many quiet spots exist within the four-mile radius. Quiet also was the great square house, in its garden of grass plots and shrubs; the lights were low, and the night was dark and cold, and the garden was only a few feet high. In one there was a side door opening into a glass passage; in the other two, barred, grained and varnished gates, one at either end of the little semi-circular drive, and both wide open. So still was the place that I had a great feeling of being alone. I had a great feeling of the premises; in fact, I was on the point of doing so when I heard a quick, shuffling step on the pavement behind me. I turned round and faced the dark shadow and the dirty clatched fist of a disheveled tramp. "You fool!" said he. "You utter idiot!" "Raffles!" I said. "You utter idiot!" "That's it," he whispered awfully, "tell all the neighborhood—give me away at the top of your voice!" With that he turned his back upon me and shuffled down the road, shrugging his shoulders and muttering to himself, as though I had refused him time. A few moments I stood astounded, indignant, at a loss; then I followed him. His feet trailed, his knees gave, and he was a man, his head kept nodding; it was the gait of a man eighty years of age. Presently he waited for me midway between two lamp-posts. As I came up he was lighting a pipe, and he looked at me with an evil-looking match, and the flames showed me the suspicion of a smile. "You must forgive my heat, Bunny, but it really was very foolish of you. Here you are, trying to get me—barging at the door one night—hiding in the shrubs the next—doing every mortal thing but stand and stare at the house as you went and did. It's a costume piece, and in your road, your ordinary clothes. I tell you they're on the lookout for us night and day. It's the toughest nut I ever tackled!" "Well," said I, "if you had told me so before, I wouldn't have come. You told me nothing."

enough to get over, while a fair margin of shrubs in either garden afforded us additional protection. Thus entrenched, we had stood an hour, watching a pair of lighted bow-windows whose vague shadows fitted continually across the blinds, and listening to the drawing of corks, the clink of glasses and a gradual crescendo of coarse voices within. Our luck seemed to have deserted us; the cover of the purple diamonds was dining at home and dining at undue length. I thought it was a dismal party. Raffles differed; in the end we prevailed. Wheels grated in the drive, a carriage and pair stood at the steps; there was a stampede from the dining-room, and the loud voices died away to burst forth presently from the porch. Let me make our position perfectly clear. We were over the wall, at the side of the house, but a few feet from the dining-room windows. On our right, one angle just permitted us to see the jutting steps and the waiting carriage. We saw Rosenthal come out—saw the glimmer of his diamonds before anything. Then came the puglist; then a lady with a head of hair like a bath sponge; then another, and the party was complete. Raffles ducked and pulled me down in great excitement. "The ladies are going with them," he whispered. "This is great!" "That's better still!" "The gardenia!" the millionaire had bawled. "And that's best of all," said Raffles, standing upright as hoofs and wheels crunched through the gates and rattled off at a fine speed. "I'm not sure," I whispered, trembling with excitement. "They'll be clearing away. Yes, here come their shadows. The drawing-room windows open on the lawn. Bunny, it's the psychological moment. Where's that mask?" I produced it with a hand whose trembling I tried in vain to still, and could have sworn that Rosenthal would have been glad to see what he could not fail to notice. His own hands were firm and cool as he adjusted my mask for me and then his eyes. "By Jove, old boy," he whispered cheerily, "you look about the greatest ruffian I ever saw! These masks alone will do a nigger, if we meet one. But you're glad to see me, aren't you? You'll pass for Whitechapel if the worst comes to the worst and you don't forget to talk the lingo. Better talk like a mule if you're not sure of it, and leave the dialogue to me. But, please, our stars, there will be no need. Now, are you ready?" "Quite." "Root your gag!" "Yes." "Shooter!" "Yes." "Follow me!" In an instant we were over the wall, in another on the lawn behind the house. There was no moon. The very stars in their courses had veiled themselves for our benefit. I crept at my leader's heels to some French windows opening upon a shallow verandah. He pushed. They yielded. "Look again," he whispered, "nothing but black! Now for a light." And the light came! A good score of electric burners glowed red for the fraction of a second, then rained merciless white beams into our blinded eyes. When we found our sight four revolvers were pointed at us, and between two of them stood the colossal frame of Reuben Rosenthal, who with a wheezy laughter from head to foot. "Good evening, boys," he bellowed. "What do you see? Last Shift foot or finger you on the left, though, and you're a dead boy. I mean you, you greaser!" he roared out at Raffles. "You know, I've been waiting for you. I've been watching you all this week! Plucky smart you thought, didn't you? One day next night, next time shamin' tight, and next one of them old pals from Kimberley, what never come when I'm in. But you left the same tracks every night, you bugger, an' the same tracks every night, all round the blessed premises." "All right, gaw'nor," drawled Raffles; "don't excite. It's a fair cop. On't sweat to know how you bring it off. On't you go for to shoot, 'cos we 'int avenged, s'help me God!" "Ah, you're a knowin' one," said Rosenthal, fingering his triggers. "But you've struck a knowin'!" "By Jove, I know all about that! Set a thief to catch a thief—no, yuss." My eyes had torn themselves from the round black muzzles, from the accused diamond on his nose, from the snare of his pasty pig-face of the over-fed puglist, and the flaming cheeks and hook nose of Rosenthal himself. I was looking beyond them at the doorways filled with white faces, and black faces, white eyes, black eyes, woolly parts. But a sudden silence recalled my attention to the millionaire. And only his nose retained its color. "What do you mean?" he whispered with a hoarse oath. "Spit it out, or, by Christ, I'll drill you!" "Worth price that brikwater?" drawled Raffles coolly. "Eh?" Rosenthal's revolvers were describing widening orbits. "Worth price that brikwater—old I. D. B." "Where in hell did you get hold of that?" asked Rosenthal, with a rattle in his thick neck, meant for mirth. "You may well ask," says Raffles, "it's all over the place where I come from." "Who can you trust?" "I can't trust no one," says Raffles, "but I can trust my own eyes. I can't trust no one else." The gentleman on his left had turned livid with emotion. Guilty conscience never declared itself in plainer terms. For a moment his small eyes bulged like carrots in the sun of his face; the next he had pocketed his pistols on a professional instinct, and was upon us with his fists. "Out of the light—out of the light!" yelled Rosenthal in a frenzy. He was too late. No sooner had the puglist obstructed his fire than Raffles was through the window at a bound; while I, for standing still and saying nothing, was scientifically felled to the ground by that little expedition which I had made for my own lawful account. It was between 8 and 9, and there it was, the garden adjoining that of Reuben Rosenthal; the house itself was shut up, thanks to the outrageous libertine next door, who, by driving away the neighbors, had gone far towards delivering himself into our hands. Practically secure from surprise on that side, we could watch our house under cover of a wall just high

A RED FLASH CAME FROM HIS REVOLVER AND SOME SPLINTERS LODGED IN MY HAIR.

I shot him in self-defense. I'll be a warning to others. Will you stand aside, or do you want it yourself? "You're drunk," said Purvis, still between us. "I saw you take a neat tumble since you come in, and it's made you drunk as a fool. Pull yourself together, old man. You ain't agoing to do what you'll be sorry for." "Then I won't shoot at him, I'll only shoot round 'n' round the beggar. You're quite right, old fellow. Wouldn't hurt him. Great mistake. Round 'n' round. There—like that!" He freckled paw shot up over Purvis's shoulder, man's lightning came from his ring, a red flash from his revolver, and shrieks from the women as the reverberations died away. Some splinters lodged in my hair. Next instant the prize-fighter distanced him; and I was safe from the devil, but finally doomed to the deep-sea. A policeman was in our midst. He had entered through the drawing-room window; he was an officer of few words and credited promptitude. In a twinkling he had the handcuffs on my wrists, while the puglist explained the situation, and his patron reviled the force and its representative with impotent malignity. A fine watch they kept; a lot of good they did; coming in when all was over and the whole household might have been murdered in their sleep. The officer only deigned to notice him as he marched me off. "We know all about you, sir," said he, contemptuously, as those back-garden walls, as you please, sir, at Marblebone. "Oh, I'm coming quietly," I said. "Oh, I'm coming quietly," I said. In silence we traversed perhaps a hundred yards. It must have been midnight. We did not meet a soul. At last I whispered. "How on earth did you manage it?" "Purely by luck," said Raffles. "I had the luck to get clear away through knowing every brick of those back-garden walls, and the double luck to have those dogs with the rest over at Chelsea. The helmet is one of a collection I made up at Oxford; he goes over this wall, and we've made a real officer. I got them once for a fancy ball—extensively—and thereby hangs a yarn. I always thought of course I speculated on our gentleman's hatred of the police—another huge slice of luck. If you'd got away, well and good; if not, I felt he was the man to play with his moon as long as possible. Yes, Bunny, it's been more of a costume piece than I intended, and we've come out of it with a good deal less credit. But, by Jove, we're jolly lucky to have come out of it at all!"

Richibucto News.

Richibucto, May 29.—Empire Day was observed in the different departments of the grammar school. Lessons were taught and essays read relative to the growth and expansion of the British Empire. On Tuesday last a very pleasant dance was given in the temperance hall by the ladies of the town. The hall was tastefully decorated with flags and Chinese lanterns. A programme of twenty-six dances was successfully carried out. A large number of ladies and gentlemen were present from Rexton. Towards midnight refreshments were served. Much of the success and enjoyment of the evening was due to the untiring efforts of Miss Fannie Irvine and Miss Stevenson. The tennis enthusiasts are busily practising every evening for the coming tournament which takes place every summer between Rexton and Richibucto. It is

SUSSEX DAIRY SCHOOL STUDENTS GIVE INSTRUCTORS CLEAN BILL

Say They Saw No Sign of Intoxication--Supt. Eveleigh, Who Made the Charges, Said He Did Not Intend His Letter to Have Publicity, But Does Not Now Regret It--Premier's Investigation at Sussex Further Adjourned.

Sussex, May 30--(Special)--The Sussex dairy investigation before Premier Tweedie was not concluded today, but adjournment was made until next Friday morning at 10 o'clock, after considerable evidence had been taken.

The testimony was largely technical and similar to what had been submitted previously, and the majority of the witnesses were young men who had been connected with the factory and school as students or employes.

Geo. Fowler, M. P., and W. B. Jonah appeared for Mr. Eveleigh. Nelson Eveleigh, the creamery superintendent, was recalled and swore that when he wrote his letter to Frank Smith, M. P., in which charges were preferred, he did not suppose it would be given publicity.

Richard McCready, who worked in cheese factories in Gagetown, Salisbury and Uxbridge, was the first witness examined by Hon. S. White. In 1904 he attended the school in Sussex and could not recall seeing any of the school instructors under the influence of liquor.

When working in Gagetown Harvey Mitchell was several times in the factory and was at all times willing to give advice or assistance.

To Mr. Jonah--"There were no complaints from the patrons of the Gagetown factory."

The witness further said he never had any reason to suspect intoxication in the school.

Nelson Tait, a butter maker in Elgin, swore he had been employed in the Sussex factory for about 18 months. He also took a course in the dairy school in 1903, and did not see any of the instructors under the influence of liquor.

During the 18 months you were there, asked Mr. White, "how often would Mr. Eveleigh be in the factory?"

I. C. R. SERVICE TO BE WRETCHED

Obnoxious Time Table Discussed in Parliament, Drs. Daniel and Stockton Protesting Against It

The question of the I. C. R. summer schedule will be considered this morning at a meeting of the St. John Board of Trade Council, and it is hoped that the facts then presented will result in a strong protest against the obnoxious summer schedule.

The obnoxious summer schedule is the subject of increasing criticism. It is pointed out that an express train leaving St. John about seven or eight in the morning, and arriving about the same time in the evening, would give a good mail service and meet the demands of all classes of travel.

The proposed time table will gravely inconvenience almost everyone.

The following from the Telegraph's Ottawa correspondent shows that Dr. Daniel and Dr. Stockton, in response to telegrams from constituents, brought the matter up in the House yesterday.

Mr. Emerson said that it was impossible to arrange a time table to suit the convenience of all parties without entailing unnecessary expense.

There was a meeting of the Halifax Maritime express committee on Monday night, when the committee met to discuss the proposed change in the time table.

MADAWASKA LICENSES

Perfectly Valid, Says Solicitor General Jones--He Disputes F. LaForest's Opinion.

Speaking to a representative of the Telegraph Wednesday after the recent statement by Fred LaForest, of Edmundston, that the liquor licenses recently issued in Madawaska county were not worth the paper they were written on, Solicitor General Jones made the following statement as to the perfect legality of these documents.

"It was represented to the government that some difficulties might arise with reference to the issuing of licenses in Madawaska in view of the fact that the law was changed at the last session of the legislature, by which no wholesale licenses could be issued outside of an incorporated city or town, and because the town of Edmundston had been incorporated after the time of filing applications for licenses had expired.

The liquor license act provides that applications be filed on or before March 25 in order that licenses may issue between May 1 and 15. The applications were made in the part of Madawaska which is now comprised within the limits of Edmundston to the commissioners for the county. At that time there was no town.

The chief commissioner of public works and myself were appointed a sub-committee of counsel to attend the meetings of the commissioners both of the town and county on May 15, the last day for issuing licenses except for special cases.

"I advised the commissioners that the town at that time, owing to the fact that the applications were made to the county commissioners on March 25, there might be some question as to whether the courts would consider them legal.

"I thought the commissioners for the town might very well act upon such applications but in order that no question should be raised as to the validity of the new applications made that day by all the parties and then to act after having received the inspector's report upon the same.

"While the law makes it obligatory upon commissioners not to act upon applications unless filed on or before March 25, yet if they act upon applications received later and issue licenses thereon the licenses shall not be void on that account. I am of opinion that the licenses issued in Edmundston May 15 on applications received on the same day are perfectly valid, and that under the peculiar circumstances the commissioners were justified in their actions."

The chief commissioner, who is very familiar with conditions in Madawaska, went into matters very fully with the town and county commissioners in order to advise them as to the validity of the licenses issued in Edmundston May 15 on applications received on the same day.

The result of these meetings was that only 23 licenses were issued there last year. There were 48 licenses in St. Ann's and St. Jacques parishes there were none at all issued.

GRANVILLE WOMAN MISSING; SUICIDE IS SUSPECTED

Annapolis, N. S., May 31--Word was received here today from Granville of the disappearance of Mrs. Charles Bent.

She had returned as usual on Monday night and her son, William Bent, who had been in town in the evening, found her in bed on her return home. In the morning, when he awoke, he found her still in bed, but on returning from the barn shortly after, found his mother missing.

A search party was at once instituted and started in different directions, but no trace was found until night, when marks were discovered on the river bank near her home and it is believed that her body is in the river.

Mrs. Bent has been a sufferer from melancholia, induced by ill-health, for several years. About two years ago it is supposed she attempted suicide in a brook not far from her home, at the left of the house in the night and on returning her clothing was found to be drenched with water.

Mrs. Bent is a widow, and is survived by her son, with whom she resided. Today the river has been dragged with grappling irons, but as yet the body has not been recovered.
