LIVERPOOL, Jan. 3.—The Liverpool Dock Board has resolved to expend $182,500 in improvements, which will enable Atlantic steamers to debark their passengers upon a landing staging instead of bringing them ashore by means of tenders.

Chairman Glynn, of the board of works committee, said that the improvements in question were merely the first steps in a great plan formed in expectation of remarkable developments in the Atlantic trade. The board, he said, contemplated preparing accommodations for steamers 1,000 feet long, which would be able to make the voyage from America in three and a half days.

OTTAWA, Jan. 3.—There was great excitement in this city this afternoon over the report from Halifax that Premier Bowell was seriously ill. South London Wants More Street Railway Service.

Mass Meeting in the Grand Avenue School.

Mr. Little's Decided Stand on Many Questions-Other Candidates Heard.

The electors of the eastern section of South London held a meeting in the Grand Avenue school house last night to protest against the last bid made by the street railway company for the electric franchise. The company proposed to run a stub line to Clark's bridge, but the residents over the river want it extended to Maryboro Piace. They considered their demands as only fair, and the meeting was the result. It was very orderly throughout. The aldermanic and mayoralty candidates were there, and were given the best of attention. Ex-Ald. James Luney presided. Mr. George Pritchard opened the meeting by presenting the following resolution: "That in view of the unsatisfactory outline of the electric street railway service in the eastern division of South London, this meeting strongly urge our representatives in the City Council not to agree to any service which does not extend over Clark's bridge on High street to Maryboro Place with a provision for subsequent extension as a belt to the Wortley

Mr. Pritchard briefly spoke of the need for a line over the bridge. The place was thickly populated and should not be restricted to a stub line.

No opposition whatever was offered to the resolution, and on Mr. Joseph Dudley seconding, it was carried unanimously. THE ALDERMEN HEARD FROM.

Ald. Geo. Shaw told the electors how he had waited on Mr. Everett and asked him to run the line to Maryboro Place, and how he had moved for the same in the obviously pleased the house. The plot is council. He would continue to fight for it slight, but the dialogue is clever and full if elected. He then spoke of the doings of the board of works. He was almost convinced that the east end of the ward had not get fair play, and promised, if relected, to pay more attention to it. He favored an electric road and cheap fares.

Mr. J. W. McCallum, a new aspirant for honors, was strongly in favor of cheap fares. He promised to promote the ward's best interests if elected.

Mr. J. W. Justin also spoke for the railway.

Ald. Edward P rnell was given a good reception. He thanked the electors for of the board of works. He was almost reception. He thanked the electors for past favors and asked a renewal on Monday next. Ald. Parnell referred to the fact that two of No. 6 ward's representatives had been chosen chairmen of civic committees, which showed the good sense of the electors in choosing their aldermen. What was wanted was men who would serve the whole ward fairly, and not one quarter, as had been stated by some of the speakers. Mr. Parnell then went exhaustively into the street railway question, and showing that he had always looked after the hest interests of his constituents. "And if I am re-elected," he said, "I will not leave one Rink tonight.

FRIDAY EVENING, JANUARY 4, 1895. stone unturned to secure for South London a good electric service which will be a boon." Continuing, he denounced the boon." Continuing, he denounced the strong ward feeling which had been shown by some aldermen, and which had been such a great hindrance to many necessary works. He favored cheap fares rather than a percentage, because the former would directly benefit the masses, while a percentage would benefit very few-and then to a small extent-quoting statistics to support his views. The speaker then dealt with the economical workings of No. 3 committee. The allowance was $41,000

- just $1,368 less than in 1893. A better electric light service had been secured. The former price per lamp per year was $94. When the contract expired a big fight ensued with the electric company, but the price was reduced to $79 25. The number of lights was then increased 57, and the cost to the corporation was only advanced about $1,000 over 1893.

Aid. Parnell briefly touched upon other matters and was loudly applauded. Mr. Edmund Weld went into street railway matters on the same lines as he did at Trebilcock's Hall. Mr. R. H. Hessell, of the Trades and Labor Council, asked the candidates if they were (1) in favor of a 60-hour clause in a street railway agreement; (2) publication of the assessment roll; and (3) the Bowell's condition is critical. He did not letting of contracts to city firms on condition that a standard rate of wages be > Affirmative replies were received from every candidate.

R. K. COWAN AND J. C. JUDD, The only two candidates for Board of Water Commissioners who have attended the ward meetings-Mr. R. K. Cowan and Ald. J. C. Judd-were next heard. Mr. Judd gave an account of his stewardship during his life in the council. He defended the actions of his colleagues-Ald, Parnell and Shaw-and asked for a renewal of the electors' confidence.

Water Commissioner Cowan was given a rousing reception. He spoke briefly and said he had made no mistakes during his term of office which he was willing to admit, (Laughter.). He was ready to answer any questions. "What will be done," asked Mr. Geo. Pritchard, a member of the R. E. O. P. A., about the fine for non-completion of the pumps ?" "As far as I am concerned," replied Mr.

Cowan, "there will be no fine imposed. Mr. Yates has gone broke on the contract. All the moneys due him are already mortgaged." "Well," continued Mr. Pritchard, "if the contract had not been limited, could the price of the work have been reduced ?" "No, I do not think so," said Mr.

Cowan. "I was informed that the work could not have been finished sooner." Mr. Pritchard was satisfied with Mr. Cowan's explanation. THE MAYORALTY.

Mr. Jones spoke first, and was given a good reception. He defended the extension of the waterworks system's machinery by comparing the services and revenue of 1881 with 1894. He advocated securing a good electric street railway service throug! out he city, because if it was not secured with the franchise it might not come for ten years.

MR. J. W. LITTLE. Mr. Little was given a very enthusiastic reception. He said all the questions likely to come before the new council had been thoroughly discussed. In regard to the street railway matter he was exceedingly anxious that a settlement should be made as soon as possible, and that every section of the city should receive a good service. The radial system of electric lines was fast coming into use, and he could not see wanted a good bargain, and would exercise the greatest care to prevent any company getting an undue advantage of the city. Mr. Little then dealt with the statement of the Free Press that if elected he would not have time to serve the city. This he emphatically denied. It would be gross dishonesty on his part to seek the office if he could not do it justice. He pledged himself to do full justice to the office if the ratepayers should decide to why London should not have one. He intrust him with it. (Cheers.) With regard to the Trades and Labor questions Mr. Little repeated his previous statements. He favored the 60-hour clause and went further by stating that five and a half days a week was plenty for a laboring map. The payment of a standard rate of wages by contractors doing city work also met his approval. Cheap labor did not pay. When the men were well paid the employers got better work. In answer to questions put by several electors, Mr. Little expressed himseif agreeable to the publication of the assessment rolls. It would do no harm and would do away with favoritism. The meeting broke up at 11:30.

Creditable Amateur Theatrical Entertainment at the Earracks-A Pleasant "At Home."

Last evening Lieut. Col. Smith and the officers of the Royal Canadian Regiment entertained a large number of their friends to an amateur dramatic performance at the Barracks. Although the night was stormy the attendance was large. The different roles were taken with no mean talent and ability, and the amateur tone of the acting was hardly noticeable. Col. Smith's character impersonations were surprisingly good. Sir Charles Young's comedy, "Childhood's Dreams," and a laughing comedicata, "Bubbles," by Charles S. Fawcett, were put on the boards with the following casts:

SALTED SUICIDES.

A CURIOUS JUDICIAL PROCEEDING IN OLD-TIME FRANCE-

People Who Killed Themselves Were Tried by Jury and Their Corpses Sentenced to Ignominious Treatment by Order of the

The embalming of haman bodies is at present done by the undertakers, and there are few physicians, probably, who, if called upon to perform the operation, would be able to do so without consulting their books and reading upon the subject. In olden times the case was different, and in France especially, before the revolution, says a writer in the Revue Scientifique, medical men were frequently called upon to embalm cadavers, although the operation was applied almost wholly to one class of subjects, i. e., to suicides. But why were the cadavers of suicide embalmed, and what was the process used?

"Suicide," says Beccaria, "is an offense which it seems can be submitted to no punishment properly so called, since such punishment could be inflicted only upon an insensible or lifeless body, the inanimate remains of the culprit upon the spectators than that which tique, the French line to Havre. they would experience in seeing a statue flogged."

And yet, according to the custom of France, if anyone killed himself intentionally, he was hanged by the feet and then dragged like a murderer and his wished to purchase them. In some the feet from a gibbet erected in the obliterated and suppressed forever.

But before any such proceeding took place, the cadaver was accorded a fair trial before a judge, whose duty it was into the circumstances attending the curred, the life and habits of the deceased, etc. This having been submitsummoned by trumpet to come forward and provide him with a defender. In her. case they failed to make their appearance, the judge appointed a counsel for him, whose duty it was to defend his client to the best of his ability by crossquestioning the witnesses for the prosecution and offering all the excuses possible in extenuation of the offense. If the accused was found guilty, he was punished in the manner above described; but if he was adjudged innocent, that is to say, if the act of suicide was consecrated ground.

In either case, however, it was necessary to preserve the cadaver for the entire length of the trial, which sometimes lasted for several months, so that in case the accused was found guilty he might not escape punishment. Hence the necessity of embalming, or "salting," as it was called. It appears from the old records that the operation and materials used were as follows: The viscera of the cranial, thoracie and abdominal cavities were removed and the spaces stuffed with tow that had been soaked in a solution composed of one ounce of camphor, two ounces of Socotrine aloes and one gallon of alcohol. Deep incisions were then made in different parts of the body and the latter was packed in salt in a wooden box, which, having been covered and nailed, was formally delivered to the jailer for safe keeping. This method of preserving cadavers seems to have been successful evcept in a few instances in which the case against the accused, having been put upon the docket, was not reached for several years, and not disposed of until the offensive state of the remains called attention to the necessity of legal action in regard to these This method of preserving cadavers a few instances in which the case against in regard to them.

Speech of an African Prince, Prince Ademuyiwa, of Jebu Remo, in West Africa, was lately entertained at lunch by the lord mayor of London at the Mansion house, then taken in a state coach to the Guildhall, where he sat through a session of the common council, and made speech to it in English, which the council directed should be entered on its record. Here is the speech: "The Right Honorable Lord Mayor, My Lord and Honorable Members of the Corporation; I feel I shall not be doing justice to myself and people if I were to leave this court without returning you my hearty and sincere thanks for the honor paid me in allowing me here and to seat next the lord mayor. I have been made, while seating here, to believe the more that knowledge is power; that free liberty of speech is the great boon of the English nation; that the secret of your greatness is the Bible, and that I was not mistaken when I advised my cousin, the king of Jebu Remo, an independent native state, West Africa, to accept a British resident, and place the country under her majesty's protection. and that he will be left to his independence to manage the internal affairs of his kingdom. I again return you my sincere thanks, and wish you God's blessing. Good-by."

"Savoir-faire," of the French Frenchy, is without a synonym in the English language. It properly belongs to a race that intuitively follows the old adage, "What's worth doing is worth doing well." They are adepts in the art of diplomacy. Under trying circumstances they are cool and collected. "I had taken a train in this city for a

W. H. LIDDICOATT, Principal. POWER OF AN ENGINE.

How a Giant Is Reduced to a Mere

Unless the Machinery Is in Good Working Order the Power Is Useless-Without Fuel You Cannot Get Any Power, and You Should Use the Right Rind of Fuel.

Everybody admires a locomotive that is in good order. There is power and majesty about it that thrills even the engineer who holds the throttle and manipulates the gigantic force with the movement of a small lever. But did you ever stop to think of what a little thing will send this great giant to the workshop for repairs? A misplaced pin, a broken valve, even the smallest accident will render the whole mechanism use-

The human body is like an engine. It only takes a little thing to throw the whole body out of tune, and harmony is reduced to discord. If the framework is broken the person is laid up for repairs. If the fuel that feeds the fire is of the wrong kind there can be no high steam pressure. The body languishes, is crippled and health is

Health depends in a large measure upon food. Certain kinds of food do certain kinds of work. Inasmuch as there are only three main classes of organic food, each kind is required to do many kinds of work, and this illustrates why Scott's Emulsion has such a wide range of usefulness. Scott's Emulsion contains the very essence of one of the three classes of food, and the very probability than the contains the payer people than one that is assimilated by fewer people than

Cod-liver Oil is a fuel-food to supply the body's heat, a food for brain effort and nervous exhaustion, and a wonderful food for the enrichment of the blood and repairing tissue waste. This explains why it forms such an essential part of the body's nourishment. It counteracts great mental and nervous strain, and feeds the blood with the properties that make healthy flesh and overcome disease germs like those of scrofula and consumption.

Scrofula is called consumption of the blood. Scientists find a direct relation between the two diseases. In one case the germs are feeding on the blood and in the other the lungs.

Scott's Emulsion is the most effective and most scientific form of Cod-liver Oil. It is palatable and makes the oil easy of assimilation. Scott's Emulsion aids digestion, stimulates the appetite and overcomes emaciation, loss of flesh and wasting diseases. It combines with the first grade Norway oil the Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda, these Hypophosphites being a great help to the nervous system and framework of the As a constructive food for children Scott's Emulsion has no equal, and it is also effective in curing coughs, colds and all affections of the Throat and Lungs.

N. Y. PRACTICAL AID SOCIETY. 327 West Thirty-ixth Street, New York, Oct. 16, 1894.

Messrs. Scott & Browne: Gentlemen,-I desire to express my sineere thanks to you for what Scott's Emulsion has done for many that have applied to this Society for aid. One year ago a woman who had been sick for nineteen months with Rheumatism, and was almost helpless, came to us for aid. I gave her a bottle of Scott's Emulsion. She began to improve. She took in all five bettles, and today is a perfectly well woman; weighs 198 pounds, and has been cooking since last May (for she is a cook). I have a young lady in one of the large drygoods stores today that could not work without Scott's Emulsion. She was given up with consumption. These are only two of many cases. You can refer to me at any time. I am using it all the time, and would not be without it. Babies grow fat, fair and beautiful with its use, and mothers grow strong and healthy while nursing if they will use it. More than this s true of your invaluable remedy. I wish the whole world knew this as well as I do.

Very respectfully yours,
Mrs. L. A. Goodwin, Superintendent.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Jan. 3.—Manager Eugene Weursthoff, of the Schitz Brewing Company, says if the Government taxes beer $1 a barrel more the brewing companies will immediately raise the wholesale price of beer $1 a barrel. This will compel the dealers to raise the price on beer sold in pails or growlers. The increased wholesale price would not affect the price of beer by e glass.

LONDON SCIENTISTS.

Members present, thirteen; objects of interest observed by members. Prof. Bowman exhibited a red protococ cus that he had found upon ice. In mass it resembled the plant which occurs upon snow in the Arctic regions, and gives rise to the term "red snow." In small portions it was seen to be made up of urn-shaped vessels filled with blood red corpuscles.

Mr. W. E. Saunders reported green algorand diatoms growing in city water allowed to stand for about two months. Prof. Dearness mentioned that protococcus of various kinds may often be found in the drinking troughs of bird cages. The following genera of diatoms were mentioned as being common near the city: Meridica, navicula, pinnularia and gonphonema. The subject for the evening was then taken up by Prof. Bowman, viz., "The Mounting of Green Algae in Fluids." He "Thick mounting media, such as mucilage, are found to contract and distort the delicate cells, spoiling them as objects of beauty or study. Canada balsam does the same with objects containing much water, and can probably not be used for alge unless they were very gradually dehydrated by successive changes from very dilute to absolute alchohol. Thin, watery media are therefore probably the best. In order to use thin fluids as mounting media it is necessary to make a ring or cell of some kind of varnish or cement upon the clean glass slips.

These rings should not be used till thoroughly dry. If the objects are thick, the cell may have to be built up in successive stages. To make the top of the cell level for the cover-glass, a fine file may be lightly passed over it horizontally, and just before using put another thin ring of cement to hold the cover-glass. Another method suggested is to press the ring level with another slip when the cement has become firm, but not hard. "To get a good uniform shellac solution for cells, a dilute solution may be filtered to remove the floeculent, insoluble matter, and then the alcohol may be allowed to evaporate until the proper consistence is reached. The first desire in mounting for the microscope is to preserve the object; the second is to make a neat and elegant elide. This second point is obtained only by experience and great care. "Various media may be used. Among those recommended are: (1) A solution of nitrate and chloride of copper in water with free glacial acetic acid; (2) a solution of chloral hydrate, five grains in an ounce of water; (3) carbolic acid water, a few drops of the acid in a vial of water; (4) and probably the best of the lot, a saturated solution of camphor gum in distilled water. Any of these will work well, but the blue color of the first may interfere with the identification, of blue green alge, and the carbolic acid water may allow the bject to lose the color of the chlorophyll. Another medium sometimes used is a solution of chloroform obtained by shaking together water and a little chloroform. "The object to be mounted is placed in watchglass and the water drained off. Then some mounting medium, say camphor water, is poured upon it and allowed to permeate it thoroughly. A portion is then removed to a cell on a slip and spread out and arranged satisfactorily under a lens or low power objective. The cell is then filled to convexity with camphe water and the cover glass placed in position by lowering it horizontally, pressing out the excess of medium. The cover glass is held firmly in place and the slide warmed over a lamp till the upper surface is noticeably warm. By this means the shellac cell is softened and the cover glass embedded in it. : A ring of shellac is then placed about the edge of the cover, to add to its security. "After a time the shellac is likely to check, and so allow the medium to escape, destroying the mount. To prevent this an outside ring of some kind of elastic varnish is placed over the shellac, and a ring of zinc white will further improve its appearance."

The members present then mounted Desmids, Draparnaldia, Vancheria, Hvdrodictyon, Spirogyra or other algæ in fruit, in accordance with the above directions.

Nothing impure or injurious contamin ates the popular antidote to pain, throaand lung remedy and general corrective, Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. It may be used without the slightest apprehension of any other than salutary consequences. Coughs. rheumatism, earache, bruise; cuts and sores succumb to its action.

THE CITY CAMPAIGN. Every attempt to win votes for Mr. Wm.

Jones as a mayoralty candidate by misrepresenting the candidate of the people, Mr. J. W. Little; has so far failed. From the first, the clumsy effort made by the Free Press to have the best man offering for mayor defeated, because he did not adopt its platform in reference to general politics, was doomed to failure. And when to this was added the gross and unfounded charges of deceit and dishonesty against the citizens of every class who requisitioned Mr. Little to enter the field, the wave of popular denunciation was so strong that it has been felt in every part of the city, and many electors who were not known to be friendly to Mr. Little came forward and voluntarily offered him their assistance and their votes. They know, as do the people generally, that Mr. Little has served the city faithfully in his capacity as an enterprising citizen as well as a popular representative on several boards, and that the man has yet to be produced who dare go on a platform and say that the people's candidate did not in every instance stand up for the interests of the whole people. Mr. Little can truthfully say that, when he is elected for Mayor, tractors or their agents to favor, no man yearly. It is also very significant that the flow. BAD MONEY SWINDLES. We confess that we have very little sympathy with W. H. Orser, the Simcoe county farmer, who was buncoed out of $200 by a sharper in Toronto. Orser entered into correspondence with a man who represented to him that he would sell him $1,000 worth of counterfeit money, which, of course, could not be distinguished from the genuine article, for the small sum of $200. A haul of $800 was not to be made every day, and so Orser arranged to meet the shapen in Toronto, and the sample of "green goods" shown him was so satisfactory that he at once handed over the $200. The swindler went to his room in the hotel waiting. He is waiting still! And the moment they become possessed of it, even if they did not offer to pass one bill, they are liable to arrest and to sentence to the penitentiary. Is it worth the risk, to say nothing of the absolute dishonesty of the whole business? BRITAIN AND COMBINES.

Cabling to the New York Times, Harold Frederick says that "the year 1894 has seen disappear the last vestiges of fear raised a few years ago that the American system of trusts was to be transplanted here. An attempt to make a sugar combine never got beyond an indefinite flirtation with the Tory leaders, and the salt trust, though it promised great things at the start, has fizzled utterly. Yesterday saw the last of the so-called Bread Union. are impudent scheme by which the whole bread supply of the metropolis was to have been cornered and monopolized. The public subscribed about $1,000,000 for shares, and now has found that about half has disappeared, and not even the creditors will get a penny, much less the shareholders. There is something in the English atmosphere fortuitously hostile to the trust bacillus." British trade freedom is fatal to truets and combines.

According to the Public Accounts of the Dominion for the year ending 30th June last, just issued at Ottawa, the debt keeps increasing, the expenditures keep increasing, while the income has decreased. The gross debt now amounts to the enormous sum of $308,348,023. During last year the gross debt was increased by $8,300,000. The net debt is over $246,000,000. The interest on the debt now amounts to the very large sum of $10,393,000, compared with $7,240,000 in 1878. But for the phenomenal fall of the rate of interest in Great Britain, the world's money market, the expenditure for interest would be very largely increased. The expenditures last year amounted to $37,585,025, against $36,814,052, while the receipts decreased nearly $2,000,000. During the year the Finance Department made $83,466 profits out of the coinage of $164,529 worth of silver and copper.

OIL FIELDS IN EUROPE. In view of the fact that the oil fields of Russia are the chief competitors of the petroleum producers of this continent, the recent description of the oil field of the Caucasus in the Cosmopolitan will interest many of our western readers. The foothills of the Caucasus, particularly those on the northerly side, show abundant evidence of the presence of oil all the way from the Sea of Azof to the Caspian. The 'oil belt seems even to continue eastward of the Caspian; but, substantially, all of the yield comes from the Peninsula of Apsheron, on the western side of the Caspian, not far from the town of Baku. The entire area which has produced oil for shipment is estimated at less than 1,800 acres, and yet the shipments of oil from Baku in the last fourteen years are equivalent to over 140,-000,000 American barrels. The Apsheron Peninsula is low, but uneven, and is occupied by tertiary and post-tertiary rocks. The oil occurs in the most porous tertiary strata and naturally efflux takes place along lines of rupture in the folded beds, which do not seem to be considerably altered. As in this country, a part of the oil is obtained from flowing wells, and in 1893 these yielded one-third of the product. The Baku oil is very different, chemically, from that of Pennsylvania. Oil produced in this continent consists mainly of hydrocarbons, analogous to paraffin, and known as the "paraffin series." The Caspian oil contains less hydrogen and is composed almost exclusively of the "olefine series" which, however, is also represented to a small extent in the American oil. The origin of petroleum is still a mystery. it seems really incredible that animal or vegetable oil should so accumulate as to furnish the output of Baku. A hundred thousand right whales would be required to supply as much oil as Baku exports the river, broad, deep and powerful in its restrial disturbance, that of the way upward. At times we can scarcely Caucasus. It was to account for these oil fields that Mendeleeff put for | but all hands take hold of the poles, we ward his hypothesis. THE NEW WHEEL.

The question to what extent the pneumatic tires, so familiar on bicycles, will be adopted on the wheels of other vehicles, is gill and rush shouting to the camp. one of considerable interest. According to a London scientific journal, Engineering, for cabs and broughams in English cities the rubber tire, with an iron hoop outside, is steadily growing in favor, and thousands of them are seen. Since, even on the smooth wood and asphalt pavements of London, the rider knows at once whether his hansom has elastic or rigid tires, the contast must be still more marked on facile pen and by the reproductions of the macadamized roads or streets paved with granite or cobble stones. It appears that Dublin is taking the lead in the general use of pneumatic tires, recognizing not only their diminution of fatigue for riders, but the reduction in the wear and tear on the wheels, springs and bodies of the vehicles. Besides, there is the decrease in resistance, and the saving in this respect, as Engineering is informed. "is 40 per cent in traction on smooth surfaces," and as high as 70 per cent on the of this has been stolen bodily and the rest rougher. As an offset there is the danger of puncturing the tire by sharp objects in the road, and this danger grows greater with increased load. It is therefore found advisable to interpose some sort of a tread outside of the pneumatic tire proper. The authority just quoted further says that "a pneumatic tire surrounded by a cushion or partly pliable tread has the further advantage that it will not completely overlap and envelop small objects." added that in designing pneumatic tires it must be remembered that the conditions "are far more trying in a carriage than in a bicycle. The latter has a lower center of gravity, and is always taken round a curve with care, and at an inclination to the verticle, while it is never turned that occur in clearing ruts, turning corners, and the like." The American trotting track has added a good deal of valuable information as to the use of pneumatic tires on one class of vehicles, yet the future will probably see a much greater development of them for pleasure carriages and others designed for light loads or for special classes of thoroughfares. The first step, that of solid rubber tires, which is taken on some private carriages, and partly, as has been seen, on public conveyances in London, naturally leads to pneumatic tires, and we believe that an English device sometimes protects the latter with wire shields.

BE FAIR TO THE CHURCH.

(Detroit Journal.) Whenever a minister of the Gospel goes wrong, the scoffer rejoices. To him a church scandal is a juicy, sweet morsel. He is not surprised that impostors are found in every other calling in life. When a bank cashier goes wrong he doesn't say the bank is rotten, or that all banks are frauds, but when a preacher goes astray he feels wonderfully fortified in his attack upon the church. His mantle of charity is spread out its full length and breadth over the errors of his own kind and folded up tight when he finds a fallen pillar of the church. His logic would cut down every fruit tree that drops a wormy or rotten bearing. He talks about bigots as though unconscious of the fact that he outbigots

A DAY'S CATCH.

Prof. Bowman's Article on Trouting in the Nepigon.

A Charming Contribution to "Recre ation"-An Ideal Resort for Anglers.

The frontispiece of the January number of that admirable Canadian magazine, Recreation, is entitled "A Day's Catch." The illustration is very fine, and represents a string of magnificent trout (some of them four pounds in weight)—the result of a day's fishing on the Nepigon River by Prof. John Bowman, of this city. It is accompanied by a well-written article descriptive of that region and of the pastime at which he was so successful. Mr. Bowman's party included four peasons, A limited supply of provisions, one tent, a Petercanoe, a gun and some light camp equipage completed their outfit. They fortunately secured a small steam yacht and advanced to Camp Alexander, fiften miles above Lake Helen. The professor is enthusiastic over the majestic scenery of Lake Superior's northern shore. He speaks of the trip up the Nepigon thus: "How glorious and inspiring the prospect! Lake Helen, clear as a mirror, stretched out before us; on either shore the great headlands of rock tower into the blue heavens; the white clouds sailing over us are reflected with marvelous clearness in the shining flood. We pass out of Lake Helen and enter posits follow a line of profound tersee that she is gaining against the current, stear for shallow water near the shore. Muscle and steam combined prove effective, and we move up to the landing at Camp the great forest crowned heights." Mr. Bowman relates his first experience

there with the line: "It fell to the lot of the writer to catch fish there for breakfast, The rod, light and pliable, was quickly jointed, an 80 yard quadruple reel, with a the existence of iron in great quantities silk line attached and nine-foot single gut leader, a Jock Scot and a Professor fly. difficulties than that of organic origin; and Just below the camps, some 30 feet, a narrow pathway led to the brink of the river from which the vapor was still rising. The water ran swift, deep and glossy, boiling in curling eddies. Some 60 feet from the shore a narrow rock broke the surface. Casting above it the fly falls lightly on the water, as the current bears it near the rock, there is a gleam as of a jewel; a swift rush, and, leaping clear above the water, a noble trout in over eagerness missed the fly. Once more the brilliant lure strikes the water, falling a few feet short of the rock. Shooting up from under the rock the eager fish takes the fly, a quick strike, the line fairly smokes and the reel spins with electric speed. What a strain is on the rod! But below the rock. Down, down its dark depths he goes. The rod bends like a whip and the wary side glistening in the sun. But where is the landing net? Left at the tent. In vain I call for assistance. The voice is drowned in the roar of water. Stepping up the path a few feet I draw the captive into a shallow pool, and as he opens his mouth to gasp, I insert a finger under the Hurrah! A noble three-pounder! Once more the fly is cast into the stream, another fish is hooked, and after a vigorous struggle he too is landed. These are quickly prepared for breakfast, and handed over to the cook, who places them in the pan with a few slices of bacon. Soon we are feasting on the delicate, pink flesh."

The writer devotes some space to the wild beauties of the river and its banks, which are graphically pictured both by his camera. Of Lake Nepigon he says: "It is 70 miles in length by 50 in width. Its coast line, indented with many coves and bays, measures nearly 600 miles. Nearly 1,000 islands dot its surface, and many streams enter the great reservoir. This is the ideal region for the angler and explorer, and the trip can be easily made with Indian guides, who are familiar with every rapid and portage." The above is merely a glance at Prof. Bowman's charming contribution, which will be found most entertaining. The magazine may be purchased at Mr. John

A MEXICAN FETE.

CELEBRATING THE FEAST OF SAN LO-RENZO IN NEW MEXICO.

A Weird Performance in Which Grotesque Dancers Pay Tribute to the Saint - Ludicrous Features of the Cere-

Shortly after sundown the fete of San Lorenzo was inaugurated. It was an opening performance, as weird as a witches' dance, with a fiend from the Inferno fiddling out the accompaniment, says a Bernalillo dispatch to the New York Advertiser. Fagot fires were lighted in every square of the narrow, dusty streets, and soon the town was all ablaze with the yellow glare that cast fantastic shadows upon the walls of the little cubes of mud, the abode houses of a sun-kissed clime. A shot was fired, and there emerged from one of the low buildings a string of as peculiarly-garbed men as one might see in a year's travel through foreign countries. They came tripping out in single file, about twenty in number, sway-ing their lissome bodies in rhythm with two-string fiddle and a guitar that was sadly out of tune, the while executing a dance that was never seen upon any stage. The costume was really a won-derful affair, the headdress being markedly striking in design and finish. In shape something like the French chapeau, it served the double purpose of a mask and headgear, extending to the mouth and enveloping the greater part of the head. It was gayly tinseled and tasseled and fairly shone with beads and all the ornamentation which the Mexican fancy can suggest. The lower part of the face was concealed by a silk handkerchief of brilliant color, leaving a small aperture for breathing purposes. Down the back floated vari-colored streamers, and capes of rich material drooped gracefully from the shoulders. In one hand they carried scroll work that looked like the substantial side of a paper rack, and with the other they rattled their prettily decorated castanets in tune with the monotonous movements of the dance. Some of the dancers were distinguished in an original and startling way, which, to the American onlooker, lent ridicule to the whole inane proceeding. Over their velvet trousers were drawn ab breviated balloon pantalettes of the style so affected by the comic paper cartoonists in their sketches of the aunties of colored

Around the flaming fagot fires they formed and amid a silence as profound as a graveyard at night they circled these tributes to the saint, never changing the step, but varying the movements of the body at command of the leader. Some times they would bow and scrape to the flames, and then fall to the earth and squirm and wriggle like so many horrid snakes. It was a weird scene. The glow from the fires dreadfully accentuated the painted faces of the Indians, who stood stoically silent, with no manifestation of approval or displeasure. They formed a lurid background to a decidedly dramatic ceremony. The senors themselves, mantled in their scrapes, were an interesting part of the stage group, and the gaunt and sal low faces of the senoras seemed to reflect the spirit of superstition that swayed the scene. The dancers never appeared to grow tired. It was "Oh, on with the dance" all the time, until a diversion was created by the sudden appearance of an evil spirit in the makeup of a bull. This fellow wore horns, and the greater part of his body was incased in the hide of the animal that shows so much antipathy to

Rational Disinfection. A practical unanimity of opinion may be said to prevail at present among physicians and chemists that the following methods of disinfection have proved the most effective and trustworthy: All fabrics which will not be injured in the process are to be boiled in water for at least four hours, and fabrics which will not stand this treatment require to be subjected to the action of dry heat for a much longer time. Furniture, etc., may be treated with a four-tenths per cent. solution of carbolic acid. All articles which have been in actual use by a patient are to be burned, the walls of the room must be thoroughly rubbed down with bread, which is afterward to be burned, and the sputa and excrements of the patient treated at once with chloride of lime. German authorities advocate the employment of steam and heat, maintaining that these are cheap and efficient agents, being also highly penetrable and at the same time are dangerous to but few household articles. Of the three chemical agents destructive of disease germs viz.: carbolic acid, corro sive sublimate and chloride of lime, the last is the least expensive and dangerous

The Christmas Hobby Horse. Among the diversions of the season in the olden time was the hobby horse. It is said to have originated in Cornwall where, according to tradition, the Nrench once effected a landing at a small cove on the coast, but seeing at a distance a num-ber of women dressed in their red Cornish cloaks they mistook them for soldiers, and fleeing to their ships put to sea. The boys and young men thereupon disported themselves by prancing around in imitation of a horse, with poles between their legs. In Kent the festivities of Christmas commenced, with a carious procession called hodening of young people, who had with them the stuffed head of a dead horse, which they fixed on a pole covered with a horse cloth. One of them got under this cloth and walked about, pulling a string attached to the lower jaw of the skeleton thus making a loud snapping noise, which was accompanied by the others, who were grotesquely attired, with hand bells in their hands. They went from house to house and were given beer, cake or

The Judge Couldn't See It. In a suit for separation, counsel for the plaintiff pleaded, among other reasons, incompatibility of temperament. He depicted the character of the husband as brutal, violent and passionate. The husband's advocate rose in his turn and described the wife as "spiteful, short-tempered and sulky." "Pardon me," interrupted the judge, addressing both limbs of the law; "I cannot see, gentlemen, where the incompatibility of temperament comes

udge MacDougall Reports to the Mayor of Toronto.

wo Ex-Aldermen Straightway Arrested -More to Follow.

Judge MacDougall tonight presented to layor Kennedy his report on the evidence sken before him in the investigation into unicipal contracts generally, but par-lcularly into the contract in which the treet railway company secured the fran-thise under which it is at present operating. Shortly after the issue of the report exlld. J. E. Verrall and ex-Ald. John

Maloney were arrested on the strength of Judge MacDougall's condemnation of them. They were allowed bail. The case against them will come up in the morning at the police court. There is a warrant out also against ex-Ald. Bailey, which has not yet been executed. Ex-Ald. Wm. Hall, ex-Ald. Hewitt and

J. J. Coleman, the medium of most of the corrupt offers, are fugitives from justice. Regarding Mr. H. A. Everett, vice-president of the street railway company, who is at present out of the country, the judge finds that on two occasions that gentleman had been wilfully and knowingly guilty of corrupt acts, in the first instance by advancing $10,600 on behalf of the late G. W. Kiely, and himself to ex-Ald. Hewitt, when the latter was in the council, the money being advanced on a practically worthless security, and the real object of the transaction being to secure Hewitt's vote and influence in the council. The second occasion was advancing $7,000 to J. J. Coleman, knowing the same to be expended for corrupt purposes.

He found the charge of corruption proven against ex-Ald. Hewitt and ex-Ald. J. E. Verrrll; also against ex-Ald. Bailey and ex-Ald. Wm. Hall.

The charge of corruption is also found to be proven against ex-Ald. J. Malony. W. A. Bell, the suspended official of the city clerk's department, was found guilty of being the me ing a bribe to ex-Ald. William Bell when the latter was in the council. Ald. Bell himself was repremanded by the judge for not informing the prosecuting counsel that he had been approached and for having taken money which he had subsequently returned. The charges of corruption against ex-Ald. Gowanlock and ex-Ald. Small were found by the judge to be not proven. It is expected that other arrests will take place in a day or

Mr. Little, as Mayor, Will Do His Whole Duty.

> Very Enthusiastic Meeting in No. 4 Ward.

The C. P. R. and the Part Mr. Little Took in Bringing the Road Through the City.

About 100 electors of No. 4 ward sat around one room of the St. George's school house last night, and from the top of seats and in the dim light of a single coal oil lamp listened to the aspirants for municipal honors. Owing to the fact that the candidates for the mayoralty had to attend two meetings, they were given a hearing as soon as they appeared. Mr. Aikman occupied the chair. Messrs. Cowan and Judd, the aspirants for positions on the water commissioners' board, attended the South London meeting; they had a break-down on their way up to St. George's, and therefore could not attend.

THE SCHOOL TRUSTEES. Mr. John Boyd appeared in a somewhat new role in asking the electors for their suffrages as school trustee. "It is one of the subjects I don't know a great deal about," said Mr. Boyd, "although as an outsider I have watched the trustees. Their business has been on the whole properly and well conducted." Mr. Boyd continued to compliment the school board and spoke of the necessity of additional school accommodation in the north end of No. 4 ward. He urged that his previous municipal ex-perience made him the proper man for election, although personally he could not say anything against his opponents. "Of course the school board is new to me," admitted Mr. Boyd, "but I am not slow in getting into the inside ring, and if there is anything going I will endeavor to get it for No. 4 ward. Mr. E. N. Hunt, a resident of the city, as he said, for the past 25 years, spoke in the same complementary terms of the present school board as Mr. Boyd had done. However, there were a few points in which he thought there might be improvement even on the board. For instance the fifth, or commercial form, might be added to the public schools. This would save the expenditure of $12 or $14 in new books for the high school, and would place the education of the children on such a level as to enable them to pass directly into the third collegiate form and save much needful time. On the other hand the pupils would be prepared without undue loss of time and needless repetition in lessons to enter business life. Concluding, he spoke of the crowded condition of St. George's primary forms and of the urgent necessity of increasing the accommodation. He promised good, faithful, honest and economical service if elected.

(Applause.) Mr. S. S. Casey asked what Mr. Hunt thought of the proposed new $20,000 school on the old Central school premises.

Mr. Hunt said that if the money was at the service of the board he would vote to expend it on the school in question if it were thought necessary. However, he thought the southern end of the city was better provided for than the north end as it was at present. Mr. Boyd said that he would oppose the building of a new school at Colborne street. About $25 would repair the present struc-

THE MAYORALTY. Mr. J. W. Little was the first of the mayoralty candidates to speak. He first resided in Ward No. 4, and he believed that the ward had progressed as much in recent years as any ward in the city. This was largely due to the presence of the C. P. R. in that section, and he mentioned the fact that he was one of the half-dozen men instrumental in bringing the C. P. R. into the city. (Applause.) They had purchased the old charter of the Western Ontario Pacific Railway, had advanced the money themselves, and afterwards handed the charter over to the Canadian Pacific authorities at the same figure they gave Referring to the electric street railway question, Mr. Little said that he did not want to go into the council with his hands tied by the expression of too strong an opinion on the details of the question. But he could promise them that he would do what he believed to be in the very best interests of the city and make the very best arrangements possible. (Applause.) Mr. Little explained the little misunderstanding which had arisen be-tween himself and Mr. Jones as to who should take precedence on the platform, and said that it made no difference to him whether he spoke first or last. Although he (Mr. Little) was present at the nominations long before Mr. Jones was, Mr. Jones had spoken first on that occasion from choice. Then at the meeting in No. 5 ward the two candidates arranged together that Mr. Little should speak first. When the time came to speak Mr. Jones was called on by the chairman, and, apparently forgetful of his arrangement, Mr. Jones went ahead and spoke. Mr. Little was surprised, and thought that as the hour was late Mr. Jones was improving the occasion to speak before the crowd filed out. And Mr. Jones seemingly thought that Mr. Little was putting up a job on him to get last say. He (Mr. Little) was perfectly willing to admit that he had misunderstood Mr. Jones' actions on that occasion, and he thought Mr. Jones should deal as frankly with him. (Applause.) "I would consider it a gross piece of dishonesty on my part," continued Mr. Little, in reference to an article which had appeared in the Free Press to the effect that he had not the necessary time to devote to the office, "were I to come before you and ask you for your votes to place me in an office if I didn't intend to devote whatever time might be necessary to carry out the duties of that office faithfully and honestly. (Applause.) If I am elected I am prepared to make whatever sacrifice of time or energy may be necessary to perform the duties pertaining to that position to the best of my ability. I will serve you honestly and faithfully, regardless of persons or party. (Applause.) I will do what I think to be right in every instance, and I think at the end of the term you will be able to say that I have at least done my best and tried to do what I thought was my duty," (Applause.) Mr. Wm. Jones, on rising, spoke of the amicable understanding existing between himself and Mr. Little. They were getting on finely. Then Mr. Jones again defended his record on the water commission, and urged that the pumps were necessary owing to the gradual increase of consumers and the inadequacy of the existing pumps He said it was incorrectly understood that sary. He laid stress on the fact that lack of water at the time of the car shops fire had caused the loss of that institution to London, and it was to prevent a repetition of such a catastrophe that the pumps had been purchased. Also, the work had been done as far as possible in the city. Like Mr. Little, Mr. Jones did not wish to tie his bends on the street railway question. his hands on the street railway question. However, he thought the electric road an absolute necessity and that a cheap fare basis was preferable.

Mr. Joseph Marks asked permission to put a couple of questions to the candidates. He was allowed to do so, and contrasted ward 4 very favorably against ward 6, where the chairman refused to put his questions to the candidates. He reviewed the Trades and Labor Council's position with reference to a 60-hour clause in the electric franchise and asked whether or not the candidates were agreeable to see that the standard wages were paid by all city contractors.

OTHER CANDIDATES. Mr. Geo. W. Armstrong answered both of Mr. Marks' questions favorably to that gentleman. As regards the electric street railway question Mr. Armstrong said that now London was even slower than St. Thomas. Like the other speakers he admitted the great need of the road and favored cheap fares. He also thought that percentage should be paid by the company when the city had increased in population so as to allow the company a fair interest on their investment. Mr. Armstrong spoke strongly against the present addition of 5 per cent which is collected with all taxes not paid by the end of October. He thought this was very hard. Mr. McDonald, a ratepayer, cited his wn case. His taxes were due on Aug. 30, and his wages were due from the city or Aug. 31. He had to pay the 5 per cent. Mr. Walker-You must have been taken very short, or you could have paid it out of the previous month's wages.

Mr. Armstrong—Gentlemen, we canno go into any man's private affairs. In con clusion, Mr. Armstrong favored an extension to the present hospital rather than a new building.

Mr. Neil Cooper was very well received. Now that the waterworks pumps were here he thought the best thing to do was to accept them and pay for them by an issue of debentures, which would make it easier for the taxpayers. He favored cheap fares and wanted more extensions in No. 4 ward than in the present proposals. He thought a hospital extension was all that was necessary just now. Mr. Cooper was not at all satisfied with the doings of the London Trust, and promised that he would get satisfaction if elected. He ridiculed the idea of paying the members of the trust. If it was done the aldermen would want pay

A Voice-They pay themselves. (Laugh-

Mr. Cooper said he would like to see an itemized account of the $4,000 printing, advertising, bill-posting and auctioneer's bill rendered by the trust. He knew something about advertising and did not think the account could be correct. Concluding, Mr. Cooper said that he did not think the north end got a fair show of sidewalks. He would see that they did. Ald. James Fitzgerald said that he had that it would have been better if the rate had even been a little higher last year, as from the way things were looking the rate would be higher next year. They would not have the Miller Syndicate forfeit of $25,000 to help them out next year. A large amount of taxes were uncontrolable. Eight mills went to pay interest on the sinking fund on the consolidated city debt, and 31 mills were neces sary for the school rate. This left about 6 mills to come and go on. He favored a cheap fare electric franchise and the 60 hours a week clause. Standard wages on contracts would be an advantage and would enable all contractors to tender on a fair basis. Mr. Fitzgerald also thought an additional wing on the present hospital would be sufficient and a new building was not necessary. Mr. W. H. Morgan, candidate for school trustee, said that he had been a resident of the ward for 30 years, and was in the field at the earnest solicitation of a large number of the ratepayers. He thought the idea of free text books a good one. It would cost the city $4,500 to buy the same books that cost the individual scholars $6,000. This would be a saving of $1,500 to begin with. Mr. Morgan was also strongly in favor of the building of a primary school farther north to relieve the overcrowded condition of the lower forms in St. George's. He thought also that a commercial form should be established in connection with the public school course.

Mr. John Walker, brickmaker, championed Ald. Garratt in his absence. Mr. Garratt was, he said, a good friend to the north end of the ward. A Voice-What about the waterworks pumps? Mr. Walker-Well, I believe Mr. Garratt did the new pumphouse.

A Voice—Well, didn't he violate the city bylaw and his oath of office? Mr. Walker-Oh, I don't know. You see the work was done $1,800 less than any other tender that was in. Vote for him, boys, in his absence. Mr. Boyd also spoke for Mr. Garratt, after which the meeting broke up.

What Is Remarkable in the Magazines for This Month.

Plenty to Pick and Choose From.

An article in the January Atlantic which will be likely to attract the attention of thoughtful readers is Mr. John H. Denion's "The Survival of the American Type." The whole paper is suggestive and will probably excite comment of various kinds. Fiction is well represented in the number, which contains not only the first installment of "A Singular Life," a serial by Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, but the opening portion of "A Village Stradivarius," a characteristic two-part story by Kate Douglas Wiggin, and an amusing and yet somewhat pathetic country story by Alice Brown, "Joint Owners in Spain." Mr. Lafcadio Hearn contributes a Japanese chatch of teders of possilier interest." sketch of today of peculiar interest, "A Wish Fulfilled." There are two musical papers, "The Symphony Illustrated by Beethoven's Fifth in C Minor," by Philip H. Goepp, and "The Meaning of an Eisteddfod," by Edith Brower, an enthusiastic study of the Welsh as singers both at home and here. The Contributors' Club is, as usual, varied and entertaining. Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston.

The Methodist Magazine entered on its 41st volume this month. Old friends will hardly recognize it in its January number, it is so improved. Its pages are enlarged, its contents more varied and its illustrations better than ever. Prof. Goldwin Smith leads off with a most interesting article on Oxford, which he knows so well. The editor, in our own country, deals with the striking scenery of Grand Manan and its vicinity. W. T. Stead writes of Right Hon, H. H. Fowler, the Methodist Liberal statesman; Dr. Daniel Clark has an interesting paper on "Mind Stress"; Rev. Dr. Rose writes on "Moravian Missions," and there is a striking Canadian story, entitled "The Wreckers' Light," by a Daughter of the Itineracy. "The Star of the East" is another good story, and the opening chap-ters of "The House on the Beach" promises great things.

Dr. Cyrus Edson writes "Concerning Nagging Women" in the January number of the North American Review.

The Athletic Life Publishing Company, 11 Jordan street, Toronto, have issued the first number of the Athletic Life, to be published monthly in the interests of Canadian sports and pastimes. The first number is profusely illustrated with photo-gravures, and is printed in the most artistic magazine style, but the publishers say this is only an earnest of what is to come. It should take the place in Canada that Outing does in the United States, and if so it will have thousands of readers. One dollar a year.

::: Among the younger men who are slowly Capt. E. P. Denison died on Thursday years. This committee was responsible for working their way into current literature, in Toronto of congestion of the brain. ck, and Mr. Fitzgerald said and especially the short story, is Walter There is talk of establishing a daily Retail Trade in Montreal Fair-Seme Blackburn Harte, whose name is already somewhat familiar to a scattered public of bookish people as the author of certain literary and social essays after the fashion of the earlier English essayists. But today the short story is the thing, and Harte is beginning to put forth some short stories of New York street life, mostly touching upon social questions, that show a compact skill and the faculty of telling a story in a few words. "A Drama in Tatters," from his pen in the January Arena, is an interesting pit of work, and it is startlingly bold in its theme without offending the most refined

> Among the short articles published in the North American Review for January are: "The Ideal Free Public Library Building," by E. C. Hovey; "Working Class Tenements in London," by Edward Porritt; "The Love of Scandal," by Oliver S. Jones; "Are We All Descendants of the Conqueror?" by George Clarke, and "Italian Women of the Fifteenth Century," by Cerea.

Rev. W. H. Savage contributes to the January Arena a paper on "The Religion of Longfellow's Poetry," which will be read with great interest by all lovers of the poet, all of whose work is impregnated with the highest spiritual aspiration, wrapped in simplicity.

The little ones who read St. Nicholas will find that the year begins promisingly for them. The January number of the favorite magazine is full of holiday flavor, and there are sketches and stories to suit

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live bet-ter than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs. Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weak-ening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

every taste. C. F. Holder tells all about "Rogue Elephants," and describes the exciting scenes that attended the killing of some of the most famous of them. A frontier story, with a spice of danger and adventure, is "Tim Sheridan and His Christmas Goose," by Leonard M. Prince, U. S. A. The hero is a brave young boy who succeeds not only in winning a rare Christmas dinner, but in saving the life of an officer with whom he was hunting. "The Cherry-colored Purse" is a true story by Susan Fenimore Cooper, showing how a little girl managed to buy eleven Christmas presents with her eleven pennies. "A Piping Pie," by Rudolph F. Bunner, and "Who Seeks, Finds," by Judith Ray, are two fantastic stories. A new serial, intended especially for girls, is begun. It is called "Three Freehman," Buth Fran and called "Three Freshmen: Ruth, Fran and Nathalie," and is written by Jessie M. Anderson. Century Company, New York,

Probably no other paper has more largely influenced public opinion in America through the views that have been expressed and the reforms that have been advocated in its editorial columns than has Harper's Weekly during the 38 years of its existence; and its recent political articles and signed and unsigned editorials have been conspicuous for ability and for constructive as well as destructive criticism.

STATE OF TRADE IN CANADA

Outlined in Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review.

Time in Toronto-Cheap Money.

Toronto, Jan. 3.-R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says: The broken holiday week has been a quiet one for the Montreal wholesale trade. Heavy metals, wool, leather, oils and paints have been particularly dull, largely owing to the shutting down of a good many manufacturing interests. ing interests, and no notable revival of activity is looked for in some of the above lines for several weeks. Drygoode and groceries travelers are getting on their different grounds, and a few days will probably show some results from their labors. City retail trade has been fair, and some dealers report a better New Years than Christmas trade. The recent heavy fall of snow will likely help country trade materially and facilitate lumber operations. Some houses report an improvement in payments, but this is not general. This is a dull time with Toronto merchants. Stocktaking is quite general and preparations are being made for the coming season's trade. The staffs of a number of wholesale houses have been reduced and expenditures are also being curtailed in other ways. From this it does not appear as if any activity was expected in the near future.

The year 1894 was, generally speaking, an unprofitable one for people in business. Prices as a rule were unusually low, and the purchasing power of money enhanced. Owing to the lower prices of produce and merchandise the volume of currency in circulation has been reduced, and banks have become more conservative.

The profits of banks are likely to show a falling off. The task of keeping money profitably employed is taxing the ingenuity of bankers and capitalists. The deposits in chartered banks show a further increase in spite of a general reduction in the rate of interest paid by these institu-

It is the cheapness of money that accounts for the high price of gilt-edged securities. These can be readily realized, and hence their desirability. The economies now being practiced by the general public will eventually result in good, and with returning confidence the money now lying idle will find its way into business

AROSE FROM A SEIZURE. Interesting Case at the Division Court-A Judgment Assigned and Also Garnisheed.

A case of considerable interest was heard at the First Division Court this morning, at which Judge Wm. Elliot presided. At the sitting of the County Court on Dec. 5, T. D. Fawcett, dentist, obtained a verdict against Bailiff Burns for $200, and H. Wreay, a manufacturer of dental instruments, for $138. The cause of the action was the unlawful seizure of Fawcett's stock. Immediately after the verdict, Fawcett executed an assignment of the judgment to pay his solicitor's costs and all preference claims against the plaintiff. The balance, if any, was to be divided proportionately among the remaining creditors. David Smith, the local money-lender and insurance agent, served two garnishee summonses on the defendant Wreay, the first when the verdict was announced, and the second when the judgment was entered by the court. His claim was $106. Smith had the summonses issued previous to the case being heard, and when the jury returned he stood behind the defendant Wreay with the papers in his hand Jones Bros., builders, also served a garnishee for $56, and the question before the court was whether the assignment should have priority over the garnishees, Mr. Smith was called. He admitted having secured the garnishees before he came to the court, and was in the court when the jury returned the verdict. Smith was severely cross-examined by Mr. Hellmuth, who appeared in support of the assignment. His answers did not suit the lawyer, who said: "Come, come, now, do own interests, Mr. E. J. MacRobert was called. He had timed Mr. Smith when the latter was erving the summonses. The first was given at 3:56 p.m., four minutes before the

"Where is he staying?"

'In Grosvenor Place. He and his daughter are in a furnished house there. She is very delicate."

"And—you say—I beg your pardon, general," added Arthur in agitation, detaining him as he was going away—"You say that he is an honorable gentleman."

"Who? Adair? As much as you or I. my

"Who? Adair? As much as you or I, my young friend. You must be dreaming.

In his mind's tumult any delay seemed dreadful, and Arthur Bohun turned at once to the house in Grosvenor Place. He asked if he could see Mr. Adair.

The servant hesitat "There is no Mr.

Adair here, sir," he s. d.

Arthur looked up at the number. "Are you sure?" he asked of the man, "I was informed by General Strachan that Mr.

Adair had taken this house, and was living here."

"The general must have said Sir William, Bir. Sir William Adair lives here."
"Oh-Sir William," spoke Arthur, "I—I was not aware that Mr. Adair had been

"Knighted; sir! My master has not been knighted," cried the man, as if indignant at the charge. "Sir William has succeeded to the baronetcy through the death of his uncle, Sir Archibald."

What with one thing and another, Arthur's senses seemed deserting him. Sir Archibald Adair had been well known to him by reputation; a proud old Scotch baronet, of a grand old lineage. And so this was Ellen's family! And he had been deeming her not fitting to mate with him,

"Can I see Sir William? Is he at home?" "He is at home, sir. I think you can see

In his dinir -room sat Sir William Adair when Arthur as shown in—some coffee on a stand by his side, a newspaper in his hand. He was a slight man of rather more than middle height, with an attractive countenance. The features were good, their expression noble and pleasing. It was impossible to associate such a face and bearing with anything like dishonor.

"I believe my name is not altogether strange to me, sin" said. Author of the strange to you, sir," said Arthur as the servant close the door. "I hope you will pardon my intrusion—and especially that it should be at this late hour."

Sir William had risen to receive him. He Sir William had risen to receive him. He could but mark the agitation with which the words were spoken. A moment's hesitation, and then he took Arthur's hand and clapsed it within his own.

"If I wished to be distant with you I could not," he said warmly. "For, to me, you appear as your father come to life again. He and I were fast friends,"

"And did you wish to be distant with me!" asked Arthur.

asked Arthur.
"I have felt cold towards you this many a year. More than that."

"But why Sir William?" "Ah-way. I cannot tell you. For one thing, I have pictured you as resembling another, more than my lost friend."

"You mean my mother."
Sir William looked at Arthur Bohun before replying. "Yes, I do. Will you take a seat; and some coffee?"
Arthur sat down, but it may be questioned whether he as much as heard that coffee was mentioned. Sir William rang the bell and ordered it to be brought in. Arthur leaned forward; his blue eyes solemnly earnest, his hand a little outstretched. Sir William almost started.

"How strangely alike!" he exclaimed. "The look, the gesture, the voice, all are your father's over again. I could fancy that you were Thomas Bohun-as I last saw him

"You knew him well—and my mother? You knew all about them?"

"Quite well. I knew you too when you was a little child."
"Then tell me one thing," said Arthur, his emotion increasing. "Was she my mother?"
The question surprised Sir William Adair. "She was certainly your mother, and your father's wife. Why do you ask it."
"Because—she has so acted—that I—have many a time wished she was not. I have almost hoped it. I wish I could hope it "Ah," cried Sir William. It was all he "Did you care much for my father, Sir William? "More than I ever cared for any other man. I have never cared for one since as I cared for him. We were young fellows then he and I; not much older than you are now: but ours was true friendship."

"Then I conjure you, by that friendship, to disclose to me the whole history of the past; the circumstances attending my father's death, and its cause. Speak of things as though my mother existed not. I wish to Heaven she never had been my mother!"

"I think you must know something of the circumstances," spoke Sir William. "Or why should you say this?"

"It is because I knew part that I must know the whole. My mother has—has lied to me," he concluded, bringing out the word with a painful effort. "She had thrust a false story upon me, and—I cannot rest until I know the truth."

"Arthur Bohun, although you conjure me

"Arthur Bohun, although you conjure me by your late father, and for his sake I would do a great deal; I fear that I ought not to do this." "General Strachan bade me come to you. I begged him to tell me all, but he said no. Does he know all!" broke off Arthur.

"Every tittle. I think he and I and your mother are nearly the only three left who do know it. There were only some halfdozen of us altogether."
"And do you think that I, Major Bohun's with as much as others know? Tel: me all, Sir William; for my lost father's sake."

"The only difficulty is—that you must hear ill of your mother."

"I cannot hear worse of her than I already know," impetuously returned Arthur. "Perhaps it was less bad than I am im-

But Sir William held back. Arthur seemed on the brink of a fever in his impatience. And, whether it was that, or to clear the memory of Major Bohun, or that he deemed it a righteous thing to satisfy Major Bohun's son, or that he yielded to overpersuasion, Sir William Adair at lest spoke out.

last spoke out. They sat very close together, only the small coffee table between them. Whether the room was in light or darkness neither remembered. It was a miserable tale they vere absorbed in; one that need not be elaborated here.

William Adair, when a young man, puarreled with his family, or they with him, and an estrangement took place. His lather and mother were dead, but his uncle, Sir Archibald, and other relatives. Sir Archibald, and other relatives, were left. He, the young man, went to the Madras Presidency, appointed to some post there in the civil service. His family made a boast of discarding him; he, in return, was so incensed against them, that had it been practicable, he would have abandoned the very name of Adair. Never a word did he breathe to any one of who or what his family was; his Scotch accent betrayed his country, but people knew no more. That he was a gentleman was apparent, and that was sufficient.

A strong friendship ensued between him and Major Bohun. During one hot season it hap ned that both went up in search of it hap: ied that both went up in search of health to the Blue Mountaics, as Indians call the beautiful region of the Neilgherry Hills. Mrs. Bohun accompanied them; Mr. Adair was not married. There they made the acquaintance of the Reverend George Cumberland, who was stationed at Ootacamund with his wife. Ootacamund was at that time filled, and a good deal of gaiety was going on; Mrs. Bohun was noted for it. There was some gambling nightly; and no votary joined in it more persistently than she. Major Bohun removed with her to a little place at a short distance, and a few others went also; the chaplain, George Cumberland, was one of them. Cumberland, was one of them.

There came a frightful day for Major Bohun. Certain claims suddenly swooped down upon him; debts; promissory notes, bearing his signature in conjunction with William Adair's. Neither understood what it meant, for they had given nothing of the sort. A momentary though arose to Major Bohun—that his wife was implicated in it; bottonly so far as that she might have joined in this high play; nothing worse. He had become aware that she had a passion for gambling, and the discovery had alarmed him; in fact, it was to wean her from undesirable associates and pursuits that he had came away on this holiday; health, the extensible play was not the true one. But ostensible plea, was not the true one. But this was not known even to his best friend. William Adair. "Let me deal with this," said the major to Mr. Adair. But Mr. Adair said the major to Mr. Adair. But Mr. Adair not choosing to allow a man to forge his name with impunity, did not heed the injunction, but addressed himself to the investigation. He traced the affair home to one Rabbetson, a bad man in every way; no better than a blackleg; who had wormed into society to prey upon it, and upon men and women's feelings. This man Mr. Adair confronted with Major Bohun; and then—the fellow, brought to bay, braved it out by the fellow, brought to bay, braved it out by disclosing that his helpmate was Mrs. Bohun.

GENTLEMEN,—My medical adviser and others told me I could not possibly live, when I commenced the use of Northrop Lyman's VEGETABLE DISCOVERY for Dyspepsia. My case was one of the worst of its kind. For three years I could not eat meat and my weight decreased from 219 to 119 pounds. All the food I took for thirteen months previous to taking the VEGETABLE DISCOVERY consisted of milk. I am now entirely cured and have regained my usual weight, can eat anything with a keen relish and feel like a new man. I have sold over 30 dozen VEGETABLE DISCOVERY since it cured me, as I am well-known, and people in this section know how low I was, and thought I could not possibly be cured. They are eager to try this grand medicine. It certainly saved my life, as I never expected to recover when I first commenced using it. I am not exaggerating anything, but feel glad to be able to contribute this testimonial and trust it may be the means of convincing others of its merit as a certain cure for Dyspepsia. (Signed.) Why Attack Ald. O'fleara?

The Free Press makes a covert attack on Ald. O'Meara for reasons best known to itself. It says that its legal friends hold that because he signed a paper declining nomination, and then, at the earnest request of many electors, withdrew it, there is grave doubts as to whether Ald. O'Meara can really be regarded as a candidate. Our contemporary's suggestion to its readers that Aid. O'Meara is doubtfully in the field for alderman in No. 2 ward is utterly unwarranted. The Act provides that any person who has been nominated and does not wish to go to the polls shall resign on the day following nomination day. This year, the day following nomination was New Year's day, and if the strict letter of the law had been carried out the withdrawals should have been all in the hands of the clerk on Tuesday evening last. Now, as a matter of fact, the city clerk did not insist on the candidates and himself working en New Year's Day, and he received withdrawal papers on Wednesday. He received Ald. O'Meara's withdrawal with the others, and he willingly handed it back to the veteran municipal servant when the alderman requested him to do so, as has before been done at the City Hall without querulous objection. If to do so is irregular because the handing beat tack place of Wednesder. the handing back took place on Wednesday, as goes the Free Press argument, then all the proceedings on Wednesday are irregular, and the whole of the nominees withdrawing on Wednesday, except Ald. O'Meara, should have their names on the ballot. But will anyone outside our contemporary's office suggest such an absurd interpretation of the law? Ald. O'Meara is not, so far as we know, a particular admirer of the ADVERTISER, but his friends may rest assured that the attempt to makebelieve that he is disqualified, and thus to injure his candidature, will not succeed. Tisdale's Toronto Iron Stable Fittings, healthful, durable, attractive and cheaper than other fittings. Send for our new catalogue. The Tizdale Iron Stable Fittings Co (Ltd.) No. 6 Adelaide St. E., Toronto.
