The Morning Post's Shanghai correspondent also says that General Mistchenko has sent 4,000 cavalry of the imperial guard from Kuang-Cheng-Tsu to cut off the Japanese, at Pitsewo. "I used to think that Algonac had some pretty girls—and I still think so," he added, somewhat hastily, "but I have mow found out that there are others. I never saw so many pretty and handsome girls in my life as I saw here. No wonder Chatham is talked about in reference to her pretty girls."

been the good fortune of Chatham's music lovers to hear this year. Those who were present—and there was a fair attendance—enjoyed the concert to the utmost and it is no wonder that this band is so popular in Toronto. They play exceedingly well and every number last evening was enithus, astically encored and Band-Master Slatter was repeatedly called upon to acknowledge the spirited applause of his audience.

Besides the regular program of band music a number of interesting features were given which besides creating a variety in the entertainment were immensely popular with the audience. They were,—A sword dance in Highland costume and a Highland dance "Shaun Trews" by James Sinclair, a solo on the great military bugpipes by Major Beaton, a male chorus by the band, and a Scottish reel in costume by four bundsmenen, Miln, Clark, Sinclair and Clink. The male chorus was especially well received. They sang "Scots Wha Hae" and were obliged to respond to an encore "The boys of the old Brigade," The dancing of James Sinclair was excellent and about the best ever seen in the Maple City.

S. B. Flater, Super atendent of the C. H. & D. Radway, of Lima, Ohio, is one of the Chatham Old Boys, who is visiting his old friends in the Maple City. Mr. Flater is one of Chatham's old boys who has made wonderful progress in the outside world, but he has a very warm spot in his heart for the old town.

"I can remember Chatham when there were just a few brick buildings on King Street and I remember Old Pork Row as well as if I saw it now. I left Chatham in '75 and I nove I expected to see such an improvement in the place as I find on any return. It pleases me to see the old town looking so business like and inprovement in the place as I find on any return. It pleases me to see that your city council iz going into the matter of street paying. In Lima, where I live there were no pavements eight years ago and now nearly every street is payed. I am glad to be back and I hope that Chatham will enjoy many more pleasant re-unions.

BARONET FARMER

May lith '04.

Dear Sir,—In accordance with one of his last wishes, I have to inform you of the death of my foster brother Sir William Frederick Cameron. Baromet, of Glaschoille, Inverness-shire, who while in Canada assumed my name. He was taken ill on board ship with pneumonis and died at Liverpool on May 9th.

Mr. W. B. Macdonald.

W. CAMERON MacLAINE.

Mr. W. B. Macdonald.

The above letter received a day or two ago by W. B. Macdonald, a well known Howard farmer, and shown to The Dominion, explains the identity and clears up the mystery currounding "Cameron Maclaine."

A year ago a ruther prepossessing young Scotchman about twenty-five years of age and of good address took service with Henry Mitton, Ridge Road. A few weeks later he went to W. R. McDonald's and remained in his service until April 28th last, when he left saying he was going home to Scotland. He hinted that he possessed a title and said he was about to come into a large estate in Inverness, left by his father, and that he would be married on May 25th.

The letter to Mr. Macdonald telling of the young man's death bears out in part at least the latter's statements.

Mr. Macdonald, who spoke in the highest terms of Maclaine, or rather Cameron, was much affected at the sad news which reached him, and many will share in his regret.

Cameron who stayed a short time with Rev. Mr. Ball, was inclined to be somewhat erratic, not liking one occupation very long. He had served three years in the Black Watch, buying his discharge. He was in receipt of an annucty from his father's estate. The father ded while he was an infant and he was raised by the paffents of Mr. Maclaine, the writer of the letter to Mr. Macdonald. The estate in question is said to be eight by fourteen miles in dimensions, in Inin question is said to be eight by fourteen miles in dimensions, in Incruses. Cameron, previous to his departure from here, had promised to bring out his bride and spend a month on two among the friends he had made in Howard.—Ridgetown Dominion.

His face hat, hair and clothes were beautiful hat, hall and clothes were beautifully decorated with confett, which loks well on a dark background, you know. He sang Old Kaintucky Home, Down Mobile, and Youse Ma Baby, after which us fellows took up a collection for him. I guess I gets ma gin now, said Points, as he left us. Besides his gotes, Points gave an exhibit of Highland fling dancing before some of the Highlanders. It was hard to tell whether he was doing a cake walk or a Scotch reel. The bagpipes kind of worried him you know."

WHAT THEY SAY

Many new expressions are wafting about King street just now, such as "have a look," "step up and ring a bunch of greenbacks," "this way to the snake charmer's den," "she eats 'em alive," "hot weiners here," "have you any domestie troubles?" "hit the baby and get a good cigar," "step up closer," "come in and have a drink." George Perrin, that witty wag, was gazing at the gyratious of the Ferris wheel to-day. "Do you know," said he, "that wheel going round there reminds me that one good turn deserves another." They tried to catch him but he was gone too quickly.

WAS BUNCOED

Gus Joseph was buncoed yesterday out of his silver watch. He takes it philosophically, however, and remarked, "it serves a big old fool like me just right." Two strangers landed on Gus right easy. They used the old knife that wouldn't open trick. Gus and his friend Blackburn were talking when two strangers accosted them and offered to show a man who had had his knee shattered in a gasolene explosion. The locals were interested. They went to look for the man but couldn't find him. One of the strangers asked the other for the loan of his knife. When he received it he couldn't open it. He offered to bet that he could and, not having any money, borrowed Gus Joseph's watch to put up against the knife owner's money. Of course he lost and the two walked off with the watch. The police suspicion that the strangers were from Thamesville. landed on Gus right easy. They used

OLD AGE.

Old age as it comes in the orderly process of Nature is a beautiful and majestic thing. The very shadow of eclipse which threatens it, makes it the more prized. It stands for experience, knowledge, wisdom and counsel. That is old age as it should be. But old age as it often is means nothing but a second childhood of mind and body. What makes the difference? Very largely the care of the stomach. In youth and the full strength of manhood it doesn't seem to matter how we treat the stomach. We abuse it, overwork it, in jure it, We don't suffer from it much. But when age comes the stomach is worn out. It can't prepare and distribute the needed nourishment to the body, and the body, unnourished, falls into senile decay. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a wonderful medicine for old people whose stomachs are "weak" and whose digestions are "poor." Its invigorating effects are felt by mind as well as body. It takes the sting from old age, and makes old neople strong.

People who go to the Eau in the spring to shoot curlew do not take a boat and goout into the middle of the Eau to find these birds, as they can only be found along the shore, and as considerable shooting is being indulged in on the open water, it is surmised that duck, not curlew, are the birds sought after. #### DOGS AS LETTER CARRIERS

Dogs as letter carriers

During the summer menths the postmen of cretain districts in Belgium make their rounds on beyeles, but when with recomes, as the government will not furnish a horse and cart, these inventive deliverers of mail have trained their large dogs into the service. Now the postmen of these localities can be seen any winter day seated in their little carriages made especially for the purpose, passing swiftly along the country roads.

All the postmen in these districts have each one or two dogs, and a light dog carriage specially built for their service. In addition to drawing the carts the dogs act most usefully as guides for voung postmen. When a new postman is appointed, so reliable are the dogs, that no one is sent to indicate his route for him. He simply seats himself in the cart of the postman whose duty he has taken up, and allows the dog which draws it to go its accustomed route.

With hundreds of deliveries to make, the postman, however careful he is, is liable to make a mistake, but it is found the dogs never forget to call at a house they have been taught to inimelinde in their rounds. All the postman has to do is to recollect at what house he is no longer to make deliveries, and to leave them unserved.

The streets of Yokohama and, for that matter, of all Japanese cities and towns, fairly swarm with children. It seems in many streets that there are more children than adults, which may be partially accounted for by the are more children than adults, which may be partially accounted for by the fact that many of the adults are indoors, while the children usually are not. They are of all ages, and when old enough romp around the streets and engage in their games with the greatest vim. A book could be written on this feature of street life in Japanese cities, and the subject would not then be exhausted. Almost every woman is carrying a child on her back, as the universal way of carrying them is in a sort of a bag, made by tying the ends of a piece of cotton cloth around the shoulders and depositing the baby in the receptacle thus formed. Some of these babies seem entirely too large to be thus carried and they are not, as a rule, agreeable objects to look upon, for when they are awake their heads are lying on one side, with a most stupid expression. In most cases they are asleep and it would seem, from the way their heads hang over the bag, that their necks would be dislocated. ord nary man-of-war "in commission"—that is to furnish the necessary supplies, and pay the officers and men—costs about $1,000 a day.

The armament of a man-of-war is very costly—much more so than most people imagine. A 15-inch Krupp gun weighs 80 tons, and costs $125,000; the carriage weighs 40 tons and costs $40,000. Every time one of these monsters is fired, it costs $2,000.

It is true that all guns are not monsters, but all gun-firing is very costly. The fortifications committee of congress has made an appropriation to test 8, 10 and 12-inch guns, from which some idea may be gained of how money is fired away during a naval or army contest.

Two hundred and fifty rounds for one 10-nch gun costs, for powder, $17,000; projecties, $11,000-a total of $28,000. The same number of rounds from a 12-inch gun costs $39,500. Each shot weighs half a ton, which costs $300 if made of steel, and $75 if made of cast from. The 8-inch guns fixe a shot weighing 300 pounds, and every discharge costs about $100.

But even supposing the Krupp gun mentioned above to be fired six times an hour during a six hours' engagement that would represent $72000 fired away. And that is only one gun. So you see war is expensive, even as a pastime.

The Letter-Box

Chatham, June 4th, 1904. To the Editor of The Planet,-

Chatham, June 4th, 1904.
To the Editor of The Plamet,—
It appears to the writer that school holidayss or part holidays are fast becoming the rule rather than the exceptions, until in the mot distant future there will be more holidays than teaching days in the year. Thursday of this week the children ware allowed to leave school shortly after two o'clock on the occasion of the trades' procession. Yesterday the schools went one better because the children after taking part in the Kilties parade at 11 a.m., were dismissed for the day. Just imagine, over 1500 children turned loose to roam about the city and at this of all times when our main street is filled with a very questionable aggregation of the genus homo. There was no necessity for a half holiday yesterday than for a fifth wheel to a coach, and the parties responsible for it, no doubt the trustees, are not worthy the confidence of those who place them where they are.

I believe the Central and McKeough school pupils had to return to their respective schools for dismissal, which was the proper course, but the Separate school children were dismissed on Tecumsel Park and allowed to wander at will around the streets, and I am informed some of them did not reach home until evening and none of them had an opportunity of bringing home their books. I understand the teachers of the later school neither requested nor expected a holiday. If parents knew before hand, a part holiday was to be given, they could warn their children about coming home, but when no notice was given their did warn their children about coming home, but when no notice was given their streets and if they do not come to grief it is because they exercise more discreation than some of the trustees. As the official program showed this to be children's day there was not the shadow of an excuse for taking any other. shadow of an excuse for taking any

M. Wilson K. C., Chats Entertainingly About the Northern

M. Wilson, K. C., has returned from Manitoulin. He was very much impressed with the island and has nothing but praise for that north land. "It is a beautiful country," said Mr. Wilson. "We had rain but it hasn't the same bad effect upon the roads that it has here. The state of cultivation of and the improvements on the farms is very far in advance of what I expected to see. There is a great deal of magnificent farm ing land on the island and apparent ly everybody as prosperous and pro-gressive. The island has township organizations all over it, but the Government stands in the position of the County Council. Needless to say there is no difficulty in securing the concurrence of township councils as well as the grand jury and the court officials to work harmoniously in an endeavor to get everything possible from the Government for the improvement of the court house, jails, endeavor to get everything possible from the Govarnment for the improvement of the court house, jails, leading highways, bridges, etc., which ordinarily would fail under the juristic diction of the County Council. Brought up under such conditions, one can easily understand why as between the island and the Government the people are led to say that Manitoulin is our politics. The judicial district of Manitoulin is one politics. The judicial district of Manitoulin is neithed part of the mainland onposite to and north of the island and the territory is much larger than and the towns quite as numerous as in a county in Western Ontario. The judge of the county court has hundreds o fimiles to travel in taking the various Division Courts, but the roads are fairly good and the water highway is both convenient and enjoyable. The populace is not behind the ordinary country district in Ontario. I am told that the Indians are dying out, but there are still a large number to the island and they both at home and out in the lumber woods seem to be much more inclined to work than they are here.

NO INCREASE OF PAY.

Montreal, June 3.—D. Campbell, of the Railway Telegraphers, left for Ot-tawa early this morning. He would say nothing about his second inter-view with Mr. Hays, and the Grand Trunk is equally reticent. It is the impression at the railway offices that the veneral manager gave a final the general manager gave a final refusal to the demands of the tele-graphers, alleging the present de-pressed state of earnings as making any increase impossible. The matter is considered to be now in the hands of the Labor Demonstrated of the Labor Department.

WHO SAID CARPETS

Our improved knowledge in Carpets appears this season in the perfection of the stock. We knew much about Carpets last year-we know more now. From finest to cheapest this stock bears the impress of a growing trade and one that is eminently successful.

Why can't a Dry Goods store do better for you in Carpets than an exclusive store? Easiest way to answer that question will be to say it can and more people are finding that out every day. We sell different merchandise and merchandise differently. We make no unusual activity of ways and means to get people to come and buy, and we don't look for help in the direction of low prices alone. We started out to sell more carpets than the other stores and the quick trade is with us because of our value giving.

GLITTERING PRODUCTION

Ringling Brothers Present Jeru salem and the Crusades.

Jerusalem and the Crusades is the subject of a magnificent spectacle produced by Ringling Brothers with produced by Ringling Brothers with their world famous shows this season. There are 1,200 people in the cast, a ballet of 300, and a singing chorus of 200. The music is original, and is ren-dered by a superb grand pipe organ, the only portable one ever made, and a selected band of fifty soloists. The scenic embellishment is gorgeous in the extreme, painted by the greatest American artists, and the 2,000 cos-tumes worn by the vast company are American artists, and the 2,000 costumes worn by the vast company are of Parisian make and design. The fabrics are of the coatliest texture and richest coloring, and the fashions of exquisite picture effects, and classical. The days of chivalry, "when knighthood was in flower," are repreduced with faithful portraiture of splendid men and women, and their exhiliarating pastimes and enjoyments. The great stege is larger than a hundred theatre stages combined, and the massive settings and historical properties require a special train for transportation. Never in the history of the circus has a spectacle been produced of the magnitude and regal splender of this Ringling Brothers' performance. All the pastimes of the middle ages are exemplified in thrilling action by dueling experts of skill and strength. Jousting tilts, sword combats, spearing contests, achieves a relative analysis of contests, achieves a contests, achieves a contests, achieves a contest of the spearing contests, achieves a contest of the spearing contests, achieves a contest of the spearing contests, achieves a contest of the second combats, spearing contests, achieves a contest of the second combats, spearing contests, achieves a contest of the second combats, achieves the second combats of Mrs. John Game has arrived home from a two years' trip through Montana and British Columbia.

Charles Gonyou, Earl Davis and Ronald G. McVean, of Dressien, were resistors at the street carnival restart. The radiant costumes and blazing jewels of royalty, its courtly dignitaries and smiling favorites; the imperial purple and sparkling gems of ecclesiastical rank; the glitter and clatter of armored solciery; the charm of dancing girls with garlands, singing maidens and devout matrons; the shield and helmet emblazonry of mounted knights; the prismatic col-oring of the swirling scenes, animated by ever going and differing throngs; the majestic music of a soul-stirring grand organ, blen use a sour-strring grand organ, blen use harmoniously with fifty solo instruments; all these brilliant features and many more of fascinating importance, emitrall the senses of the spectator, and make this production the most munificent and attractive ever offered the American public. The grand pageant in bonor of the departure of the Crusaders on their holy mission is a processional display in which are presented more interesting historical types, more beautiful custumes, more elaborate scenic decorations, more novel and enscenic decorations, more novel and enjoying features, and more men, women and children, and horses, than ever seen in a huge spectacle at any other time in the history of the world. The voluptuous amusement of the Egyptian court is depicted in a grand Oriental ballet. This reveiling scene is beyond the power of words to describe in its actual splendirs and to describe in its actual splendirs and delights. The enormous stage is taxed to its utmost by the bewitching dancers, and the tremendous assemblage of variously dressed and enchanted Egyptians. For cost of prochanted Egyptians, For cost of production, originality, enormous number of people employed, and overwhelming success, this gorgeous spectacle rises apperior to anything of similar effort ever spread before the human eye. In the grand street parade abow day morning tableau floats, bearing national types and characteristic scenes from all over the world, will be a novel and attractive feature. All the people with the great shows will participate in this free display of the wonders with the circus, and the costuming is the richest ever attempted. Forty elephants, 650 horses, 108 cages, lairs and dens, 12 honds, 20 camels, 40 jolly clowns, troops of gaily accourted soldiery, lady ricers in Easter-like finery, childen's chariots, fairyland pictures, aristecratic whips, and a multiture suddenly, at the sight of his smitten enemy rolling on the ground at his soot, the primitive man, the half brute of the stone age, leaped to life in Wilbur's breast. He felt his muscles thrilling with a strength they had not known before. His nerves, stretched tense as harp strings, were vibrating to a new tune. His blood spun through his veins till his ears roared with the ruch of it. Never had he conceived of such savage exultation as that which mastered him at that instant. The knowledge that he could kill filled him with a sense of power that was verita bly royal. He felt physically larger it was the joy of battle, the horrid ex hilaration of killing, the animal of the and dominating every instinct and tra fight still was going forward.

Wilbur could hear the sounds of it though from where he stood all sigh was shut off by the smoke of the burning house. As he turned about, knifth hand, debating what next he should, a figure burst down whom his shoot of the burning was dead of the should be should be were blazing under her thick frown like fire under a bush. Her arms were bared to the elbow, her heavy rope of hair flying and coiling from her in all directions, while with a voice hoarse from shouting she sang or, rather chanted, in her long forgotten Norse tongue, fragments of old sagas, words and sentences meaningless even to herand sentences meaningless even to her-self. The fury of battle had exalted her to a sort of frenzy. She was beside herself with excitement. Once more she had langed back to the vitury; she was Brunehild again, a shield maiden, a Valkyrie, a berserker and the daughter of berserkers, and, like them. fought in a veritable frenzy, see ing nothing, hearing nothing, every sense exalted, every force doubled, in-sensible to pain, deaf to all reason.

Her dirk uplifted, she rushed upor Wilbur, never once pausing in her chant. Wilbur shouted a warning to her as she came on, puzzled beyond words, startled back to a consciousness of himself again by this insensate at

"Moran! Moran!" he called, "What is it? You're wrong! It's I! It's Wilbur, your mate! Can't you see?"

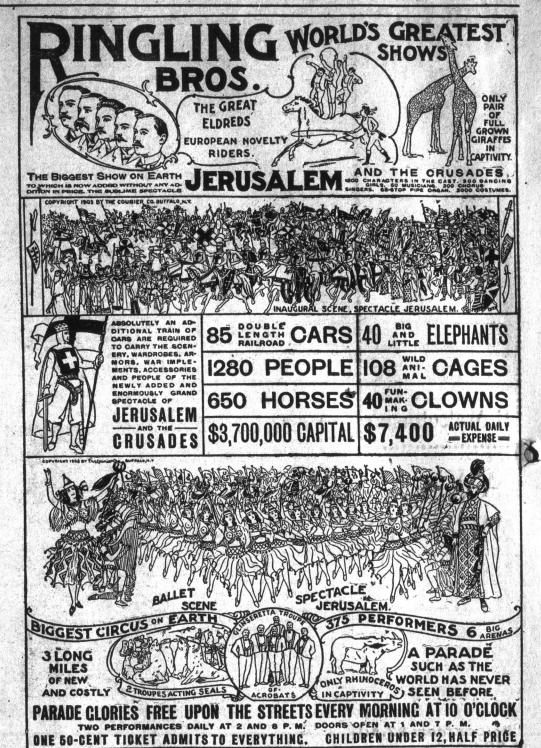

Moran could not see. Blind to friend or foe, as she was deaf to reason, she struck at him with all the strength of her arm. But there was no skill in her fighting now. Wilbur dropped his own knife and gripped her right wrist. She closed with him upon the instant, clutching at his throat with her one free hand, and as he felt her strength, doubled and tripled in the fury of her madness, Wilbur knew that, hewever easily he had overcome his enemy of a moment before, he was now fighting for his very life.

At first William merely struggled to keep her from him—to prevent her using her dirk. He tried not to hurt her. But what with the spirits he had drunk before the attack, what with the xcitement of the attack itself and the dden unleashing of the brute in him an instant before, the whole affair grew dim and hazy in his mind. He ceased o see things in their proportion. His new found strength gloried in matchous its equal. He fought with Moran ann or with anything human, for the matter of that. He fought with her as igninst some impersonal force that it was incumbent upon him to conquer-that it was imperative he should con-quer if he wished to live. When she struck, he struck blow for blow, force for force, his strength against hers, glorying in that strange contest, though he never once forgot that this last enemy was the girl he loved. It was not Moran whom he fought. It was her force, her determination, her will, her splendid independence, that he set him-

Already she and dropped or flung away the dirk, and their battle had become an issue of sheer physical strength between them. It was a question now as to who should master the other. Twice she had fought Wilbur to his knees, the heel of her hand upon his face, his head thrust back between his shouldows, and twice he had wrenched away, sixing to his feet again, panting, bleeding even, but with his teeth set and all his assolution at the sticking point. Ones he saw his chance and planted his knackless squarely between her eyes where her frown was knotted hard, hoping to stun her and end the fight once and for all. But the blow did not seem to affect her in the least. By this time he saw that her bersærker rage had worked itself clear as fermenting wine slears itself and that as knew now with whom she was fighting and he seemed now to understand the incomprehensible and to sympathise with her joy in measuring her strength against his, and yet he knew that the combat was deadly serious and that more thas life was at stake. Moran descending the stood off, breathing hard and rolling up her sleeye. Then, as she started forward again, Wilbur met her half way, caught her round the neck and under the arm, gripping her left wrist with his right hand behind her. Then, exerting every ounce of strength heyet retained, he thrust her down and from him until at length, using his hip as a pivot, he swung her off her feet, threw her fairly on her back and held her so, one knee upon her chest, his hands closed viselik. on her wrists.

Then suddenly Moran gave up, relaxing in his grasp all in a second, and, to his great surrise, suddenly smiled. Already she had dropped or flung "Hoh, mate!" she exclaimed. "That was a tough one, but I'm beaten— pou're stronger than I thought for."

Wilbur released her and rose to his hand. I'm as weak as a kitten." As Wilbur helped her to her feet she put her hand to her forehead, where his knuckles had left their mark, and frowned at him, but not ill naturedly. "Next time you do that," she said,
"use a rock or a belaying pin, or something that won't hurt-not your fist, mate." She looked at him admiringly. "What a two fisted brawny dray horse is! Dodd's Kidney Phila The One Remother of the edy That Never Falls To Cure It, Canad No Matter How or Where It Is Phila.

Of all the diseases the human body

Of all the diseases the human body has to combat in its struggle for health, the one that is steadily growing in strength and torror is Kidney Obsease. Quietly, stealthily as a serpent, it creeps on its victim till the fatter is enveloped in its 'folda, and the greatest physician the world has ever known stand helpless before it. As the last fold goes around the istruggling victim and the doctor shakes his head and whispers "Bright's Disease" hope fades to nothing, and the sorrowing friends feel that death has marked their loved one for its own.

The alarming increase fhis terrible disease is making is evidenced by the columns of almost every newspaper. For not among the lowly of the earth alone does it look for its victims. Statesmen, judges, eminent lawyers, and bonored divines are numbered among those who in recent months have gone down to their graves with the fell marks of (this dread disease upon their bodies. In fact, so prevalent has the disease become that a celebrated New York specialist stated recently that not one person in a hundred was free from some taint of Kidney Disease.

WORKS IN SECRET.

It is the secreey of Kidney Disease WORKS IN SECRET.

It is the secrecy of Kidney Disease that makes it the more dreaded. You can right an enemy in the open with some chance of success, but if he is lying in wait to take you at he is lying in wait to take you at an unwary moment your chances of successfully fighting him are terribly diminished. So it is with Kidney Disease. Its first warnings are so faint as to be hardly noticeable, a slight pain in the back that is charged up to over exertion, a slight discoloration of the urine or a burning sensation while urinating that hardly attracts attention. That is all. But that means that Kidney Disease is at work gradually eating its way into your system. The pain in the back grows more severs, the urinary trouble more complicated, swellings under the eyes and of the limbs denote the coming of Dropsy, sharp shooting pains in the joints and muscles tell that Rheumatism has you in its grasp, or perhaps a has you in its grasp, or perhaps a day or two's illness leads to the calling of the doctor, and suddenly the te ble truth is forced upon you.

E. ght's Disease has you in its grasp.

F. ght's Disease has you in its grasp.

I WAY OF ESCAPE.

With this silent, relentlesss enemy slowly but surely eating its way into prominence and making that prominence by a yearly increase in the length of its death list, the demand of the day, of the hour, is "Show us the way of escape." Nature never put mankind in a critical condition without providing a way of escape—providing mankind were wise enough to take the way provided. In this case the way of escape is a ample wegetable remedy. It has been before the people of Canada for thirteen years, and, like all the great relievers of nature, has been first received and first appreciated by the lowly in life, those known as the common people of Canada.

Is it the common people of Canada who die of Bright's Disease? No, it is the bright and shining marks, those who are stationed above the heads of the massess. Ask the reason of this? Go to the people who are practically exempt from Kidney Disease in its worst form, and ask them. With almost a single voice they will reply: "We cure our Kidney Pills, and they never get a chance to develop into that terrible disease that carries so many prominent men into the grave."

ON WITH HIS WORK.

WAY OF ESCAPE.

ON WITH HIS WORK. ON WITH HIS WORK.

And so it is; the men wno does manual fabor must heal his slightest aches or they hinder him in his work. When he has backache he cures it with Dodd's Kidney Fills, and goes on with his work; when he feels a twinge of Rheumatism he drives it out of his body with Dodd's Kidney Fills—and goes on with his work. Necessity has taught him that he must cure his Kidneys to get rid of his pains, for he must work to live. He has not been educated to that standpoint where a perseription to cure must be written by a specialist at a cost of dollars to every letter. He may not even know that there never was a disease that took in all classes of the community but what nature provided a cure within the means of all classes of the community. What he does know its more to the point than all this. He kno a that Dodd's Kidney Fills will cue all aches which experience has taught him come from the Kidneys. He takes Dodd's Kidney Fills, and goes on with his work.

Of course, there were exceptions to every run.

of course, there ware exceptions to every rule. Even among common people there ware those who neglect in mags of Kidney Discass. It to the rule—hypothesis of Kidney is to the far rone for bodd's K and the second of Kidney is to the far rone for bodd's K and the second of Kidney and the second of

BRIGHT-S DISEASE CURED

Bright's Disease has invariably yielded to a treatment of Dodd's Didney P.Hs, no matter how firm a hold it had seenred on its victim. Possibly the most talked of case of recent date is that of Alice MandParker, of Shubenacade, Hants Co., N. S. The full story of this case will be found in the current number of Dodd's Magazine, Herewith a short statement from the young lady a mether is appended;

DIABETES CURED.

DIABETES CURED.

Diabetes is another of the most fearful and fatal forms of Kidney Disease that has been cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills, and by no other medicine. Among those cured of this terrible ailment is Mr. Charles Gilchrist, for fifteen years Chief of Police of Port Hope and afterwards for twenty-two years Fishery Overseer under the Dominion Government. He makes the following statement:

I was a sufferer for ten years with Diabetes and Kidney Disorder. At times my urine was of a dark bricky color, and I would suffer something awful while passing. I tried doctors and medicines, but could get no help till I tried Dodd's Kidney Pills. They have made me a new man. The citizens of Port Hope all know me, and can youch for the above.

I was a total wreck before I start-to use Dodd's K.dney Pills. In the mornings before I got out of bed I could hardly put my feet to the floor they were so much swollen with dropsy. My arms used to swell at times so that I could not put on my coat. I had to be tapped to be relieved from my terrible paims. On the advice of a friend I started to use Dedd's Kidney Pills. RHEUMATISM CURED.
Rheumatism and Emitred Aidney Diseases, such as Lumbago, Sciatica, and Gout, are caused by uric acid in the blood. If the Kidneys are put in working order they strain all the uric acid out of the blood, and the Rheumatism goes with it. Take the case of W. G. Cragg, of Dresden, Ont. Here is his attement:

For eight years I was troubled with inflammatory Rheumatism. I could scarcely get around to do my duties in my store. I had some of the best doctors I could get, but nothing I tried would ever give me relielf. I started using Dodd's Kidney Pills and had only taken six boxes when I was completely cured.

HOW A MODERN OCEAN LINER OFFICERED AND MANNED.

he Captain Vested With Absolute Pow Over Passengers and Crew-Responsi bilities of the Chief Engineer-A Float ing City-Administration of Vessel 1 Divided Into Three Departments-Large Staff.

One of the most remarkable things about the modern ocean liner is the fact that while at sea she gives employment to between 300 and 500 proynent to between 300 and 500 people. It might seem incredible that any vessel, even one capeble of carrying from 1,500 to 2,000 passengers, could keep so many men occupied, but it is true that. a full count of the officers and crew on any one of the modern Atlantic steamships will give at least the former figure, while on the biggest and most famous ships, such as the Oceanic, Cedric and St. Louis, it falls not far short of the latter. To begin with the organization of the ship's company from the top, there is first of all the captain. He is the absolute master of the ship and of all on board, with direct responsibility for her safety to her sponsibility for her safety to her owners and to the traveling public at large. He has control of the ship's navigation and of her internal affairs as well, and he is privileged find an example of such absolute and despotic power as the ship captain may wield if occasion requires.

Under the captain the administration of the big vessel is divided among three departments. The first of these is the deck department, which has charge of the navigation of the vessel; the second is the engineer's department, devoted to opgineer's department, devoted to op-erating the boilers and engines, the power producing branch of the steamship; the third is the passen-ger department, presided over by the ger department, presided over by the purser and the chief steward and having for its chief function to look after the comfort of the travelers for whom the great ship and her elaborate staff primarily exist.

In the deck department are various officers, usually the chief officer or first officer, second and junior second, third and junior or third officers. The chief officer is the captain's assistant. He relieves the lattain's assistant.

He relieves the lat-ter on the bridge, takes his place in the dally inspection of the ship and has charge particularly over the cleanliness of the ship, seeing to it that every part is in spick and span order. The second officers take turns standing watch and superintending the decks, while the junior officers, as the thirds are called, are employed in the steering of the vessel, one of them being constantly engaged in this work, with the assistance of the quartermas-

Then a number of petty officers is to be noted in the deck department, such as the quartermasters, who perform the actual work of steering the ship; the chief boatswain and his assistants, who look after the rig-ging and deck equipment; and the carpenter, who is responsible for the good order of the spars, boats, wa-ter tanks and decks and who in-spects these and also the masts spects these and also the masts, yards and pumps twice each day. Besides these officers, there are the ordinary seamen, who perform all sorts of duties, from working the deck machinery to scribbing the deck machinery to scrubbing the decks and rails to keep them in

At the head of the engine department is the chief engineer, who has as assistant officers what are known as first, second and third engineers. Next to the captain's post the chief engineer's is the most responsible position in the operation of the liner, and the engineer has under him a great number of workers—the trimmers, who bring the coal from the bunkers to the fire rooms; the stokers, who feed it into the always hungry furnaces, and the greasers, who keep the engine parts clean and well oiled. There are also a number of men who look after the pumps, the blowers and the electrical plant, which is under the chief engineer's supervision.

In the passenger department there are two very important officers, one of these being the purser, the man with whom the passengers come into contact most frequently and who is largely responsible for the popularity or unpopularity of the ship.

The other principal officer in this department is the chief steward, who exercises authority over a small army of stateroom stewards, saloon stewards, stovardesses, cooks, sculliens, storakeepers and bootblacks and who selects the food and makes and who selects the Little as we may like it, we have nevertheless, judging from analogy of language, and similarity of physical characteristics, to acknowledge, that the Slavs are our brethren. Where they came from no one seems to know. Where they are going to is even more problematic. #### RARELY USED WORDS

Has the longest word in the English language been discovered? Disproportionableness, 21 letters, is sufficiently ample. According to some authorities it is the longest legitimate word in the dictionaries; but its mate word in the dictionaries; but its supremacy seems to be menaced by certain words discovered by the London Chronicle. Thus, one Byfield, a divine who published a treatise on Colossians in 1615, says: "The immensity of Christ's divine nature hath incircumscriptibleness (22 letters) in respect of place." This is not the longest English word that has found its way into print. In the recent biography of Dr. Benson is an entry from the archbishop's diary to the effect that "the Free Kirk of the north of Scotland are strong antidisestablishmentarians"—26 letters. Another word mentioned by the Chronicle which is not likely to be heard often in ordinary conversation is "honorificabilitudinity." The lexicon contains many monstrosities, but name shows the contempt in which they were held by the German tribes. THE POLES NOT DEAD.

The Poles, though an oft-conquered race are not to be passed over lightly. Their women, possessing all the vivacity and energy of the French, without any of the more matronly qualities can do anything but make a home. It is well known that Napoleon dallied all one winter at Warsaw, in the total of a Polish or incess the in the tolls of a Polish princess, the serious affection he ever had outside his love for Josephine. Only the other day a member of the Reichstag drew the attention of the house to the condition of the German towns near the borders of the old Polish "march" which were becoming Polan-ized much more rapidly and thorough-ly than the Polish towns are becom-ing Germanized. This is chiefly the work of the Polish women, who are the disturbing and revolutionary leav-en in Polish politics. The expulsion of Paderewski from Russia a short time ago, for correcting the Czar's time ago, for correcting the Czar's compliment as to his nationality is but an echo of the bitterness of the struggle on that side of the border. Poland will stand watching; it may take a few generations, but eventually she is bound to make a bold dash for freedom and self-government.

In Russia we encounter the real In Russia we encounter the real gist of the population, and in its ultimate downfall or triumph lies the destiny of the Slavic race. To understand clearly the problems that confront the Russian people, it is necessary to have some slight insight into the conditions under which that vast empire has been built up, and what the nature of the centritugal force which holds it together. In the Russian polity three forces, and perhaps only three, need to be considered—the bureaucracy, the church and the commune. Of either of these three volumes could be written; we can but but point out their place in the great volumes could be written; we can but but point out their place in the great fabric. The bureaucracy, composed of the noble aristocracy and centering in the Tsar, control, through the agency of their police, all the details of the government and supervise everything. They are the government. Virulent as was the influence of the Roman Catholic Church on the Western medieval world, the influence of the Greek on the Slavic races has been infinitely worse. The whole national life is fast in its clutches and the hundreds of Schimatic bodies in Russia are only one of the results of its darkly rule. The munistic system, which, among such easily satisfied people, works out with surprisingly good results. In this way 80 millions of the Tsar's people live, willing to be thus governed and knowing but obey.

Russia's aim is, of course, to do-minate the world, but of all the many difficulties which Russia has to overcome, probably the greatest has practically no water outlet ex-cept by two land-locked seas. To realize her aims she must have free access to the open sea, for she, following the lead of all modern powers realizes that with battleship and torpedo are the future destinies of the nations to be decided. The most bloody and persistent wars Europe has ever known were those of the ferman marches when Tenton met German marches, when Tenton met Slav in a desperate effort to drive back the invader. The Slavs were ultimately checked and the lesson fluence felt even down to the present time. Next they tried Turkey. Could they have forced their way down through Turkey to an outlet on the Mediterranean they would have been in a position to start upon a policy of world-wide aggression. But the Turks, aided by nature, proved too much for them. Only the east remained, and how well they have improved their opportunities is amply demonstrated in their recent occupation of Manchuria.

Russia has been successively forced back by the white and brown races; will she likewise be defeated by the yellow men, in the persons of the plucky little Japs? The event is doubtful and the struggle likely to be long. For when first the Russian "mujibs," in order to escape slavery crossed the Ural mountains and descended into the fertile plains of Asia, they saw that the land was fair to look upon, and since then the movement eastward has been a national one, carried along by one of those subtle undercurrents of sentiment, which are at work among all peoples. Should Russia succeed in establishing herself in the East, the present civilization of the world might seem to be threatened. But can Russia become a world-power without an improvement in her finances? and can she attain that improvement without raising up a "bourgeoise" class of merchants and Continued On Page 10. Accidents of Play at Poker-Fours for a Nervous Player-A Lucky Mistake.

"There are more pots won on fluke hands than any poker player realizes," said Billy Amerson, who had just re-turned from a ousiness trip through the poker belt of Missouri. "Accidents of play are common enough, but the reason you don't hear about them of-tenar is because the players who bene-fit by them are ashamed to have the facts known "As a rule it's the nervous player or the novice who makes a fluke hand possible. A seasoned player follows up the main chance too closely to let anything happened that isn't strictly according to rules and regulations and the laws of chance.

"I saw a game in Joplin less than a month ago that brought out as fine a specimen of a fluke hand as you'd see in a lifetime, and the best of it was that the man who got it told all about it. He was a rank novice and the other four players were having the other four players were having it all their own way.

"One big pot had been won on three queens and with the next deal the novice had the age. He opened the pot on a pair of kings.

"The other three cards were a queen, a jack and a five spot. In discarding he in some way separated the kings, and threw away one king, the lack and the five.

sings, and threw away one king, the jack and the five.

"Before looking at his draw he bet a double chip, the limit being $20. He was raised twice before it got back to him and when he looked at his hand he found he had four queens. Of course, he raised, and the next man raised him.

The other player dropped on three aces and when it got back to the no-vice he hiked it again. Well, they kept raising until there was over $300 on the table and finally the second player called.

"The show-down exposed four sevens against the four queens and then explanations followed. Of course, what happened was that the deal had failed to preak the cluster of three queens from the former deal, and they had been dealt to the novice in apple-pie order just like a sweet dream.

"He would have drawn the queens anyway, but the hand should really have been a queen full on kings, in which event the player with the four sevens would have made good. Now, that's the kind of a fluke that drives hard working poker player to a hard working power plays orink."

"That recalls a fluke hand I saw dealt a few years ago," chimed in one of the group, "and what is more, the hand practically decided the location of the country seat in one of our west-

"Times were pretty lively just at that stage, for feeling was running high and a bitter fight had been wag-ed for some months. Two days be-fore the matter was up for final set-tlement the active leaders of both sides got together in a back room of the only hotel in the town and sort of patched up their differences over the flowing bowl. Later on a game of draw was suggested and five of the big men from the two towns sat

'Abe, the chairman of the Ridge section, had a barrel of money that he intended to use to the best advantage for his town. It was a case where money cut a big figure, and he had the goods. Tom, the River section leader, was also well fixed for the campaign.

"Well, the game went along with-out incident until well toward the end of the second hour. Abe sat to the left of the dealer and called for two cards. Tom was third man and

"Abe, who had opened, bet off $50, the second man dropped and Tom promptly raised it the limit, which was $100. The next man merely saw it, but Abe got back another raise and Tom slapped it for another hun-

"Losing that pot just cleaned out Abe, who had put all the campaign fund on the jacks. The result was that when it came to smoothing out the wrinkles the next day the Ridge section was not in substantial evidence, and the River people got the court house.'

"Talking of fluke hands," said an-other of the party, "makes me think of a hand I saw filled in the smoking room of a Cunader last summer. It was a sixhanded game, and as a small table was being used, the play was conducted in rather close quarters. "I was watching the game from be-

THE JAPANESE SOLDIER

The Japanese soldier has earned his right to be counted among the best in the world. He knows not fear. He faces certain death with perfect coolness and does the best he knows how for the glory of the arms of his country. His work at Kin Chou was superb. It was magnificent, and it was which she is now carrying out, for the occupation of Port Arthur and the capture or destruction of the Russian fleet there, that she may be free to meet and defeat the Russian Baltic fleet on its arrival.

The fortifications of Kin Chou were as powerful and perfect as the best modern skill and unlimited expenditure could make them. They were considered by the Russians to be absolutely impregnable. Nanshan Hill, the key to the situation, was particularly strong. Many guns and many men occupied the top, protected by The sides of massive earthworks. the hill were dotted with rifle-pits, and at the bottom of the hill perplexing wire entanglements made charge apparently impossible

Nine times the Japanese charged up that terrible hill, and seven times some of them returned. Those engaged in the first attack perished to man; but there was no holding back. The second forlorn hope was ready. The ninth attack was successful, and the Russians fled precipitately, leaving many guns in the hands of their victorious enemies.

Men who do that sort of fighting, and do it willingly-even cheerfullyare entitled to be numbered among the first-class soldiers of the world, and the country for which such men fight cannot be in much danger of being absorbed by any other nation .-Hamilton Spectator.

THE YELLOW PERIL ?

Prof. Goldwin Smith has the courage of his convictions and his writings bear the stamp of sincerity, yet he signally fails to carry conviction to the great mass of his readers. He appears to have the faculty of getting on, we will not say the unpopular side of a question, but on the unsound side. In the latest great world-problem being solved in the far east the sage of the Grange thinks he sees a danger, even a menace to western nations. "A great yellow power," writes Prof. Smith, "military and naval, will have sprung into existence in the farther east, and will confront the Pacific and coasts of the United States and Canada. What is more momentous still, there are strong indications of the growing prevalence of Japanese influence over China. This means the awakening to action of four hundred million of Yellow people, unwar-like at present, but in the judgment of the best authorities, very capable of being trained to war, especially since the bodily force of the soldier has been suplanted by the long-range rifle and cannon. It will be strange if thereafter western powers are long allowed to retain their lordship in the east. Australia, too, has always been casting fearful glances toward the seat of the vast Yellow swarms. Hence the rigor of her exclusion laws. She will now have increased reason for disquietude.

Such a view we could understand urged on behalf of the Slav in the courts of Europe and America and signally failed to convince those who are not interested financially or otherwise in promiting the Russian interests. British diplomats have canvassed the situation and have not hesitated to make alliance with Japan, while the people of all continents speaking the Anglo-Saxon tongue unreservedly sympathize with the orientals in the present stuggle. Then, too, Japan has in the most positive and formal terms disclaimed any such ulterior motive as Prof. Smith suggests, in a letter just received by Henry Clews, banker, New York, Marquis Ito, minister imperial of Japan, the highest official of that nation, writes, under date of Tokio. The supremacy of Russia in Corea would mean not only a constant menace to the very existence of our island empire, but would also mean the vholesale destruction of our commercial and industrial interests, already legitimately vested there in the pastnot to mention the loss of natural outlet for our expanding people. The constant policy of Russia in this part of the globe has steadily inclined toward monopolization of natural resources of the country she conquers and annexes. Her Manchurian policy is the irrefut able evidence of the above statement. So that in fighting for our own interests, we are at the same time fighting for the principle of "fair competition all round" in these new markets of the world. I am indeed very sorry that the negotiations carried on, on our side, with sincere "bona fide," were not crowned with success so earnestly desired. If the Russian government were a little more inspired by the spirit of moderation and of toleration for the legitimate interests of others, things would not have come to this pass.

'As lit was, there remained for us no other way but to try to enforce by arms what we could not do by reason. And we had to do so ere it would have become too late, for Russia was steadily and rapidly augmenting her fighting forces available in this part of her empire, so that before long the sheer mass of her fighting power would have made it a folly for us to attempt to resist the unscrupulous march onward. It has been nothing but a coolly thought-out step in the cause of state necessity. And I am much gratified to see that you, as well as the general public opinion of your country, have understood our motives in the true

All the other nations have worked out their present freedom, which is in the final analysis the true test of greatness, by means of three revolutions, a political, a religious and a social. It seems improbable that Russia should escape all three of these in should escape all three of these in shaking herself free from the clutches of medieval darkness, and primitive institutions. The dreams of the Pan-Slavists, that Russia is entirely different from the countries of the panels of ferent from anything that has gone before, and will show the world an aristocracy whose ideals and ideas will pervade the whole universe, need scarce cause us any alarm, even if Russia should win. The stress of in-ternal affairs will keep them well occupied for a few centuries to come, or all known precedent will count for but little.

The oven of an Imperial Oxford Range and the old-fashioned spit before an open fireplace do better roasting than any other cooking apparatus invented.

In the olden days the spit had to be kept turning to get all sides of a roast cooked. It is much the same with the ordinary cook-stove. The heat of the oven is greatest on the fire side—roasts, bread, pies, cakes, etc., have to be turned and twisted to get them cooked at all. The result is uneven, unsatisfactory cooking—good food ruined. The diffusive flue construction of the draws fresh air into the flue chamber, super-heats it and diffuses it evenly over the oven, thus heating it quickly, thoroughly and uniformly—back, front and sides are at the same equal temperature. The result is juicy, tender roasts, light, dainty pastry, evenly raised bread—successful cooking.

When you buy an Imperial Oxford Range you get the result of over sixty years' thought and experience in scientific construction of cooking apparatus.

Who Are As Nothing in the Eyes of Men May Be Firs in the Sight of God-A Memorial Day Sermon to the Unknown Heroes of the Civil War of the ntered according to act of Parliament of Can-ada, in the year 1905 by William Baily, of To-rento, at the Dep't of Agriculture. Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cl., May 29.—In this sermon for Memcial Day the preacher pleads for justice and recognition for those who, though wearing no uniforms and baring no weapons, yet served their country in its crisis a faithfully and particulally as ever yet served their country in its crisis as faithfully and patriotically as ever did soldier at the front of the battle line. The ext is Matthew xix, 30, "Many that are first shall be last; and the last shall be first."

From time immemorial nations have honored heir military chieftains. All Cathage knelt in reverence before the and Hannibal. All Italy praises Garibaldi and Victor Emmanuel. In England the Duke of Wellington and Lord Napier sleep within St. Paul's exthedral under the most magnificent dome of all London. Westminster Abbey is the last resting place of scores of generals and admirals who dome of all London. Westminster Abbey is the last resting place of scores of generals and admirals who have made England's name famous upon the land and upon the sea.

Not only do the modern nations honor the dead military chieftains, but also e living soldiers who have shed their blood upon hard fought battle-fields. They honor not their generals only, but the humble privates who once carried the muskets in the ranks, or the petty non-commissioned officers, or the lieutenants, or captains of small company commands. When these soldiers die they are laid in the grave with military mands. When these soldiers die they are laid in the grave with military honors. When, as wornout veterans they are unable to look after themselves, then the best of "soldier homes" are provided for their housement. England has placed the royal palace in the Isle of Wight, where Queen Victoria passed most of her life, at the service of her convalescate sailors. France has her beautiful retreat of the Invalides for her aged soldiers, in the midst of which is the huge sarcophagus of her greataged soldiers, in the must of which is the huge sarcophagus of her greatest warrior, whose dying request was this: "It is my wish that my ashes may repose on the banks of the Seine, in the midst of the French people whom I loved so well." The finest sites near our own national capital and Milwaukee and Danville and Santa Monica are filled with the and Santa another are first weterans of our own army, who were just as brave as any that wore the Confederate gray or the Federal blue, who laid down their lives upon the blood soaked soil of Vicksburg, Chancellorsville, Lookout Mountain or Atlanta.

On this Memorial Day I praise the On this Memorial Day I praise the unpraised southerner as well as the unpraised northerner. I believe the Civil War, bloody as it was, awful and terrific as it was, mortal as it was, with 1,000,000 dead, was worth all the sacrifice it cost. Why? Because once and for all it settled the proton of the care in the control of the control o Because once and for all it settled the vital and far reaching question that the United States Government forever was to be bounded on the east by the Atlantic, on the west by the Pacific, on the north by the Great Lakes and on the south by the Gulf. Though the United States proper comprises an area of 3,025,600 square miles, yet in that vast area, great as it is, there will never be room for more than one Government great as it is, there will never be room for more than one Government any more than two queens can live within the same beehive. This question of one Government had to be settled once for all by the sword. If it had not been settled by a bloody conflict between the north and the south it certainly would have had to be settled later by a bloody conflict between the east and west. flict between the east and west. Thus I honor to-day the unpraised hero who in 1861 lived below the Mason and Dixon line as well as the unpraised hero of Michigan and Pennsylvania and New York and

First, on this Memorial Day, let us honor the statesmen in the Cabinet and the Legislators in the Capitol who conducted the National Government during those four years of trial. In the northern Capitol at Washington and in the Confederate Capitol at Richmond there were men as brave as those in the armies. Their duties were onerous, their responsibilities serious, their patriotsponsibilities serious, their patriotism intense.

It is so easy to speak sneeringly of our Washington Legislators. It is so easy to call the United States Senate the "millionaires' assembly" or the "club of the old fogies." It is so easy to say the House of Representatives is a collection of nonentities, who are ruled for the most part by one or two men who crack the party whip over the backs of their fellows. But, my friends, I believe that by such speeches injustice is often done to able men. We have a right to assume that men who have been chosen by their fellow citizens to represent them in Congress are worthy men, and when we disparage them we disparage the citizens who elected them. The first great battles are not fought out with sword and cannon but with tongue and pen in Legislative Assembly. The outcome of the terrific conflict of 1861 to 1865 would never have been the maintenance of the Union if Congress had not loyally supported President Lincoln during that eventful period. Aye, there were giants in those days. But during that eventful period. Aye, there were giants in those days. But the giants upon Capitol Hill, whose the giants upon Capitol Hill, whose moral courage and unswerving loyal-ty were tried and proved, deserve our honor as much as do the giants fighting at the front.

On this Memorial Day the brother who stayed at home and worked the farm should be praised as well as the young man who went to the front and was mentioned for a heroic deed in the commander's despatch. The young man who sank his personality in the more common but equally needful duties of home life might have been even braver and more unselfish than the soldier boy who marched down the main street of his native town or city. Let me illustrate what I mean by praising the boy who stayed at home to work the farm. Some time ago I was attending a soldiers' re-union. It was a most impressive spectacle, that assembly of aged men. Yes, the ranks of the old solmen. Yes, the ranks of the old soldiers are thinning very rapidly. We shall not have them with us long. But, though these veterans were very old when they began to tell their campfire stories, as their narrative proceeded they seemed to become boys again. Among the stories told was one I shall never forget. "Did you have any brothers in the army?" I asked an aged soldier. "Yes, one," was the answer. "There were three boys of us. We all wanted to go, but father and mother were getting old, and some one had to stay at home and look after the old folks and our younger sisters. So one night we had father and mother were getting old, and some one had to stay at home and look after the old folks and our younger sisters. So one night we had a family convocation. After the family talk we three sons and mother and father decided that two of us boys could go to the war, but that one should stay at home and work the farm? Who were to go? Who was to stay at home? We all wanted to go and fight and so we decided to draw lots. Mother held the book and put in the three slips of paper with one marked 'Stay at home.' "Did your brother regret that he had to stay?" "Oh, yes. But some one had to stay?" "Oh, yes. But some one had to stay, and so he simply swallowed his disappointment. Yes, we two boys could never have gone to the front but for Harry's faithfulness to the old folks." Was he not just as patriotic as the two who went forth to battle?

In this Memorial address we would accord praise to all who did the country service—the contractors who furnished the blankets and the shoes and the tents and the food and the guns, the patriotic bankers, the railroad men, like Thomas Alexander Scott, who did such valuable service in rushing the troops to their ultimate destinations. We would praise the newspaper editors, who moulded public opinion so that the right men were elected to Congress, and the newspaper reporters, who risked life and limb to carry back the news from the front, of, what husbands and fathers and brothers had suffered uncer the tornadoes of shot and shell in the last battle. We would praise the man as Lamas K. Mc.

ed uncer the tornadoes of shot and shell in the last battle. We would praise such men as James K. Mo-Clure of The Philadelphia Press, with whom Lincoln was in closest con-stact, and Joseph Medill of The Chi-cago Tribune and James Gordon Bennett of The New York Herald. The men never were able to wear a Grand Army button. They could tell no campfire stories at the Grand Army reunions, but they had their part in the great struggla campfire stories at the Grand Army reunions, but they had their part in the great struggle.

It is a very grave question whether Abraham Lincoln could not better have parted with almost any one of his major-generals than he could have lost that genius of railroad organizing, Thomas Alexander Scott. It is a very grave question whether U. S. Grant would not have been deposed from his command and sent back home in disgrace had it not been for Charles A. Dana, who, as the personal representative of Lincoln, went to the front and exposed and denounced the false scandals which were being circulated about the "silent warrior" of the west. It is a very grave question whether Salmon P. Chase could have ever successfully financiered the United States bonds which paid the running expenses of the war Government, costing at that time millions upon millions of dollars each month, unless he had been backed up by Jay Cooke, the Philadelphia capitalist, who was to Lincoln what Robert, Morris was to George Washington in the Revolution. So to-day I impartially praise the patriotic soldier, the Revolution. So to-day I impar-tially praise the patriotic soldier, the patriotic railroad man, the pa-triotic editor, the patriotic financier, the patriotic contractor.

We have read all about the noble services of Dwight L. Moody to the soldier boys at the front. We know that many a dying soldier boy was able to answer "Here!" to the roll the soldier boy was able to answer "Here!" to the roll the soldier boy was able to answer "Here!" to the roll to the roll the soldier boy was able to answer "Here!" to the roll to able to answer "Here!" to the roll call of heaven because some faithful chaplain on earth had prepared him for that "Fall in!" on the other side of the grave. We know that many and many a dying message sent to the mother or the wife at home was penned by the faithful chaplains who looked after the boys of their regiments as a father might of their regiments as a father might care for the children about his own fireside. But what about that grayhaired old minister of the village church? Did he not serve any patri-otic purpose? Did he not lift high the standard of the patriotic soldier when he delivered the eulogy over the casket enwrapped in its country's the casket enwrapped in its country's flag?

We cannot to-day too much praise the work of the gospel minister during the agonies of America's four years of carnage. One day a man applied to General Jackson for a position in his army. "What is your business?" asked Jackson. "I am a minister of the gospel," was the reply. Then Jackson, the Christian soldier, said: "My friend, I can give you no position as high as that which God has given to you. Go back to your own church. In the name of Jesus Christ, give comfort to the widows whose husbands have been shot; to the children whose fathers, on account of this bloody war, will never come back; to the young maidens who can never again see their sweethearts. Go back and preach the gospel of sacrifice to the young men who must be enlisted from your town. Go back! In God's name, go back!"

But I have still another long liet your town. Go back! In God's name, go back!"

But I have still another long list of unpraised heroisms. I would not praise the boy in blue or the boy in gray for what he did in 1861 and 1865 more than I would praise him for what he did after peace had been proclaimed. It was a spectacle that astonished the world, a spectacle unprecedented in history, that of the soldiers of those two huge armies laying down their muskets and tak-ing up the plowshare. To their hon-or be it said that they were ready to turn their backs upon strife and, side by side, work together in the vocations of peace. The vast armics of America going forth to battle is not nearly as impressive, from a historic standpoint, to the student of sociology, as those armies almost in-stantly melting away and then and there their ex-members fraternizing with one another and striving to the with one another and string to the uttermost to build up the country with as much earnestness as they had shown in fighting each other to the death.

Without any doubt, Robert E. Lee was one of the finest characters America ever produced. Would you like to know what was to me the greatest act of that grand life? I find it not in his actions before the war. I find it not in his wonderful equipoise and gentleness and marvelous powers during the war. But after Appomat-tox the chief nobility of that life glowed before his fellow countrymen as a single star might outshine all the other stars in the heavenly firma-ment. After the war was over a crich financial company of New York ment. After the war was over a rich financial company of New York City, in order to catch the southern trade through Robert E. Lee's popularity, offered Lee $25,000 per year at a salary to become its manager. What said General Lee? "No, I cannot come. 'I must stay among my own people to help teach them to become true Christian citizens, to help teach them how to have faith in their God and patriotic love for their whole land." Robert E. Lee turned his back at that time upon the most princely salary then offered in the city of New York. In order to teach his people to love a reunited country and to have faith in God he accepted a humble position as the president of one of Virginia's bankrupt schools. Rather than live for mercenary gain he quietly and yet president of one of Virginia's bankrupt schools. Rather than live for mercenary gain he quietly and yet their country Nihon, or Nippon, and even that shattered walls of Washington College in Lexington. He lived there until the close of his life. Some people may tell you that the greatest service the American soldier did for his country was when he suffered upon the field of battle. I tell you that the greatest service the Confederate army and the Federal army ever did for their native land was when they dissolved and when their Christian soldiers became the earnest, consecrated advocates of Christian peace. So to-day I praise no less highly than the soldier who went out in 1861 to fight his country's battles the soldier in 1866 returning to civil life and striving in home and factory and store to health the wound of the nation and reunite its people in the bonds of Christian love.

Some time ago I stood on the top looked off upon the battlefields of America and dreamed my dreams. I saw hundreds of thousands of human bones bleaching in the sunlight, gnawed of the vulture and the wolf. I heard the muffled drums beating the tattoo at sunset. As the artillery wagons rumbled away to the rear, and star twinkled to star, I heard sentinel by the glare of the campfire call to sentinel: "All's well. All's well along the Potomae!"

There go the booming of the campon and the sharp commands of the

There go the booming of the cannon and the sharp commands of the officers. "Steady, boys; steady; steady!" There is the ping of the bullet, and the dying soldier clutches at his heart as he moans, "My babies, 6 God, my poor babies!" and then drops dead. There comes the blood curdling Confederate cry, "Hi! Hi! Hi!" There is the long line of set faces behind the gilttering bayonets. The heavens redden and glow. The flames leap and hiss and dance and make merry over the burning homes. The falling beams go crash, crash, crash! The rivers are deep with flowing blood; the grave trenches are filled with a million dead.

As I turn and look upon the great white dame of the Capital the old.

As I turn and look upon the great white dome of the Capitol the national flag flaps and waves. Its stars glitter like the eyes of the maidens who, after awhile as old women, read and reread the torn and women, read and reread the torn and the yellow letters which their heroes just before the fatal battle wrote about the bridal homes which were destined never to be built. And as I look upon the old flag again the white stripes look like the white bandages which were put about the shattered arms. The long, deep streaks of red prove that its folds had once been dipned into pools of had once been dipped into pools of human blood. Then the great white dome of the Legislative Hall, glistening in the sunlight, looks as though it were built out of the broken tombstones of Arlington Heights and Gettysburg and the Wilderness.

Then, as I look up and down the great Pennsylvania avenue, I seem great Pennsylvania avenue, I seem to see the united armies of the boys in blue and of the boys in gray marching, marching, marching. I see the lines melt away. Following with my eye one soldier, I see him take his discharge, and he starts for home. I cannot tell whether this discharged soldier is now heading for the Michigan hills or for the Georgia plantations. In his civilian dress he plantations. In his civilian dress he has no distinctive insignia telling me whether he fought under Grant or under Lee Then I see this soldier under Lee Then I see this soldier coming up to the farm gate and being welcomed home by his dear ones. PRETTY FABLE

The charming logend which tells the origin of music in Japan is quite interesting to aid even a fragmentary appreciation of these far-off Orient metodes. The San Godeds Amater Asu, resenting the volence of an ill-disposed brother, retired into a cave, leaving the world in darkness and anarchy. Eight million delites came to persuade her to reconsider her cruel decision unavailingly, till one good, more subtle than the rest, took six long bows and bound them together, twanging their strings to attract the attention of the obdurate goddess at the same time inducing the lovely Ame No Adsume to sing to the rhythmical movement of palm branches and dance to the strange sounds when prestol out comes the outraged fair one. To insure the benefit of perpetual sunshine in future, the iron smith Amateumora made a magic mirror which he hung at the entrance of the cave to reflect the brightness of Amater Asu's face.

This 's the incartation which the lovely Ame No Adsume chanted while waving the branches:

Gods, watch the entrance,
Here is Her Majesty, the Goddess!
Shall not joy fill our hearts
When my charms shall have proved

GOOD AT MARCHING ++++++++++++++++++++

If there is one thing in which the Russian army excels it is marching. Lord Roberts' famous march to Candahar has been equaled over and over again by the exar's troops in their Central Asian campaings. When Gen. Kuropatkin marched a force of Turkestan troops to jon Skobeleff in an attack on the Turcomans, he and his men were swallowed up in an unknown trackless desert for 27 days, and marched in at the end of the time in perfect malitiary order without a single man sick or fallen out. It was a wonderful feat, but it was not regarded in Russian military circles as heing anything extraordinary.

Although the Russian solder is undoubtedly brutal, he is revertheless a good fellow, who gets along admirably with the people among whom he is campaigning or is quartered. If he does not kill his enemy, he makes a friend of him by his rough camaraderie and overflowing good nature. When he is quartered in a house, he promptly makes himself one of the dishes, and giving the housewife the easiest of easy times. This excellent spirit has been mainly responsible for the easy assimilation of Russia's conquests in Manchuria.—World's Work.

It's the little man who generally indulges in the big talk.

OUTWITTED RUSSIA

Much has been said about Japan's patience in the face of Russia's continuous questionable diplomacy. But Japan, in spite of her diplomacy, struck her initial blow at Russia the very instant she was fully prepared for war, and not a moment before. She did not begin shuffling her diplomatic eards with Russia until she needed to put her on an equal naval footing he sastern waters, completed or ready to leave the ways. She did not make a move until she possessed a full complement of artillery, guns, and annualition sufficient to equip such a large army as she supposed Russia would throw into the far Siberian terroity. She kept her small arms and annualition factories working for many months on double shift before the diplomatic war cloud was as large as a speck in the sky.

It should be borne in mand that Japan struck her first blow a month before Russia thought it was possible to make an effective mangurers. She struck Port Arthut the very first moment that the scheme was feesble, and at a time when some of the Russian battleships had to hatter their way out of the harbor of Vladivostok through ice two feet thick.

She hit Russia a savage blow at a time when her railread traffic was nearly paralyzed, and would be for weeks longer, and she struck the blow when she was well prepared to throw troops into Korea rapidly, and needed safe sea room to accomplish it. So far Japan has made no false move in the game, and none which has not indicated marvelously clear reasoning and sound judgment. — Cheago Inter Ocean.

WRITE WISHES

In Japan and Korea—which are the great kite countries—the boys fly their kites only for about 15 days out of the entire year.

They have great fun fighting with their kites. They use silk strings, which they dip in fish glue, to which some sharp material, such as powdered glass or porcelain has been added. Any kite, no matter if it belongs to the prince himself, may be out down. The moment two kite strings are crossed the players must let out their lines. If one of the holders is slow and allows his line to draw taut it is sure to be cut through. The moment the kite is cut down it is seized by small boys, who are on the watch for just such things to 'happen.

You know our custom of wishing over the right shoulder when the new moon appears. Well, the Korean boys have a custom, on the fourteenth day of the flying season, of writing this wish on the bamboo frame of their kites: "May all this year's misfortunes fly away with my kite." Many of the Korean mothers write this wish for their little children, together with the children, and birthdays.

HER WISDOM

"When we think of mice it is usually of the trouble they cause us: we are not apt to credit them with much intelligence, but I recently had an experience which shows that the little creatures possess a good bit of wisdom, after all.

"I had been annoyed for some time by a family of mice which lived in the walls of the bedroom. They nibbled my clothes, disturbed my sleep, and when they grew so bold as to goo into the canary's cage and eat up its seed my patience gave out and I determined to fix them.

"I bought a trap and set it by the hole in the wall. For five nights I caught a mouse, then several days passed without catching one, although they were still there, for they kept up their noise, although not coming into my room any more.

"I found that the trap was all had been closed from inside. I pulled the filling out. It was not easy work, for it had been evidently put there to stay, and was made of bits of plaster and rubbish. I kept the hole open with the trap close to it, but next day it was filled again.

"I repeated this clearing out process five times, and five times the filling was replaced. It was evidently the work of the mother mouse to prevent her little ones from passing through what had proved a fatal gate to so many. And I left the hole closed, for the mice did not come into my room again."—New York

At the end of the lane there was a sober-looking servant in livery, waiting for fhem. He was accompanied by a superannuated pointer, and by the redoubtable Billie, a little old year of a pony, with a shaggy mane and a long rusty tail, who stood quietly by the road-side, little dreaming of the husting times that awaited him. I was pleased to see the fondness with which the little fellows leaped about the steady old footman and hugged the pointer, who wriggled his whole body for Joy. But Billie was the great object of interest. All wanted to mount at once, and it was with some difficulty that John arranged that they should ride by turns, and the eldest should ride first. Off they set at last; one on the pony, with the dog bounding and barking before him, and the others holding John's hands; both falking at once, and overpowering him with questions about home, and with school ancedotes. We stopped a few moments afterward to water the horses, and on resuming our route, a turn of the road brought us in sight of a neat country-seat. I could just distinguish the forms of a lady and two young girls in the portice, and I saw the little comrades, with Billie, Carlo, and old John, tropping along the carriage road. I leaned out of the coach window, in hopes of witnessing the happy meeting, but a grove of trees shul it from my sight.

A GENTLEMAN

I was once spending a night in a beautiful home in a large city. At about nine o'clock my host, a gentleman about, fifty-five years of age, got up, went into the hall, and put on his overcoat. Returning to the parlor door, he said, "Excuse me, please, for just a few minjutes. I am going to say good-night to my mother."

His mother lived a little distance away, and for thirty years her son has never failed to go and bid her good-night, if he was in the city.

An indulgent mother was traveling one day with her 3-year-old son, his nurse and a copy of a magazine which absorbed the mother's attention. The son with his nurse occupied the seat behind her. The nurse attempted once in a while to curb the boy's restless and rebellious spirit by a gentle denial of his latest whim. Each time the mother, noticing only that some argument was in progress, and not looking up from her book, said, "Let him have it," The New Times gives the result of the mother's laxness of discipline. The nurse yielded, of course, to authority, and let the child do as he would, Finally a strong and busylooking wasp flew against the window-pane. The youthful hunter at once reached out to grasp it, and wailed dejectedly when he was once more restrained by the watchful nurse. Again the fond mother, without raising her eyes, exclaimed:

"Oh, do let him have it!"
The howl which followed almost drowned the nurse's quiet reply: "He's got it."
