"ECHOES of the Past;

The Recompense of Love!"

CHAPTER XX.

"Father has just sent to say that he has been detained by important business—politics, of course! We eat and drink and sleep politics—he suggests that we should go by train later. But it isn't at all the thing we planned, is it? Who wants to go in a stuffy train? I want to drive behind the new gees."

Her disappointment was evidently so keen that Clive said almost unthinkingly:

"Why shouldn't I drive you down and Lord Chesterleigh join us by train?"

"Why, how clever of you!" she cried her face lighting up. "That will be splendid! We shan't lose our drive, after all. I'll write a note to father." She stopped and the color rose to her face, for she had suddenly remembered that it was scarcely the conventional thing for her to be driving about the country alone with Clive. And yet how delightful it would be! After all, they could take the groom, which they had not intended doing. And even if it were a sin against society's unwritten code, would it not be worth while to commit it?"

"Yes; I'll write to father!"

"The nearest station is called Ferry," remarked Clive, who had been looking at the Bradshaw and had not noticed her hesitation and her blush.

She scribbled a note and placed it on the table which her father used for writing, and they went out to the carriage. It was, as she had said, a splendid phaeton and the cobs were all that could be desired. She was in good spirits when Clive and she started; they rose still higher as they left London behind and drive through the lanes, softly glowing in their spring green.

Clive was glad to get away from London and the eternal round of work, and he felt happier, at any rate more at peace, than he had been since the fatal day Mina had cast him off; indeed, it would have been rather difficult to be unhappy in such perfect weather and with so beautiful and bright a companion.

They halted half-way, to rest the horses and get some tea for themselves, and, in defiance of conventionality, they drank it at the rustic table outside the little inn. When they started again, she asked Clive to let her drive.

"Do you think you can manage them?" he said. "They are young, and fresh still."

"Oh, yes," she replied. "Besides, I can't come to any harm while you are sitting beside me."

He told the groom to take up a ring in the curb and he sat and watched her closely as she drove, and with a certain admiration, for she managed the high-fettled horses very well. After a while Clive turned to the groom to ask if they had got the horses too tightly curbed; the man touched his hat and bent forward as if he did not hear the question, and Lady Edith said in an undertone:

"You must speak a little louder. William is rather deaf at times, and this is one of his bad days. He is much older than he looks," she remarked, after Clive had repeated the question and had received a satisfactory reply; "but nearly all our servants are old; we scarcely ever discharge them for anything short of murder, and I think that some of them are really attached to us."

"Your old ayah, Sara, for instance," said Clive; "she seems very devoted."

Lady Edith nodded and laughed. "Oh, she is quite silly," she said. "I mean in that devotion of hers. She would let any of us jump on her. She belongs to a very hot and passionate race, and is unswerving in her love and hate. Sometimes she reminds me of one of the cats, the big wild-cats, in her own jungles; softly purring one moment, all claws and fury the next. By the way, you are a great favorite of hers; I hope you feel flattered." She laughed as she glanced at him.

"I do," said Clive; "but I am rather surprised. I thought she regarded me rather unfavorably."

"Oh, that was sometime ago, perhaps, when she first knew you; they always regard strangers with a certain amount of suspicion; it is their nature, too, as Doctor Watts says."

"Well, I'm glad I'm in her good books now, at any rate," said Clive. "What a pretty bit of country we are going through."

"Isn't it lovely!" she responded. "I don't know when I have seen anything so beautiful, or when I have enjoyed anything so much as this drive. What nonsense it is to say that there is no happiness in this world."

She turned her face to him again; it was radiant; her eyes, blue as the sky, shone with the happiness of which she had spoken, her delicately cut lips were half parted with a smile of unalloyed pleasure.

Clive checked a sigh. "I am glad," he said.

They reached Palmer's Green, and their arrival created no little stir at the tiny, out-of-the-way inn. It was a charming little place, half-covered by ivy and alight with spring flowers. The "parlor" was scrupulously clean and, for a wonder, had an odor of lavender instead of damp.

Clive found that chops were above the capacity of the establishment, but he ordered ham and eggs and a high tea. The landlady, quite one of the old type, took Lady Edith upstairs, but bustled back to Clive to assure him that she would make them as comfortable as she possibly could.

"Perhaps you and your good lady would like to go and see the church while the meal's being prepared, sir?" she said. "It's considered to be a very fine old building, and there's some rare ancient monuments and carving."

Clive looked up sharply at the "your good lady," and was about to correct the woman, but he checked himself; it was scarcely worth while to take any notice of the mistake. He proposed the church to Lady Edith when she came down, and she assented promptly, and they strolled to it. It really was a fine old church; they got the key from the sexton's cottage and examined the monuments, the carved oak and the brasses. There was a suggestion of intimacy in the way they sauntered about alone together of which Clive was vaguely conscious and which Lady Edith keenly felt; certainly her happiness was not yet waning.

"I wonder whether Lord Chesterleigh will be here in time for tea," he said.

"I don't know," replied Lady Edith, easily. "He may not come until it is just time to start for home. It will be bright moonlight to-night and he will enjoy the drive. I know I shall."

They wandered about the lanes for half an hour, sometimes silent, sometimes talking in the leisurely, rambling way born of the occasion and their surroundings; then they got hungry and made their way back to the inn to find a nondescript but enticing meal awaiting them. Lady Edith en-

HEADACHES

Thousands of men and women suffer from headaches every day, other thousands have headaches every week or every month, and still others have headaches occasionally, but not at regular intervals. The best doctor is often unable to find the cause of many of these headaches, and in most other cases, knowing the cause, he does not know what will remove it, so as to give the usual pain relievers, which give temporary relief, but the headache returns as usual, and treatment is again necessary. If you suffer from headaches, no matter what their nature, take Anti-Insomnia Tablets, and the results will be satisfactory in the highest degree. You can obtain them at all druggists in any quantity, 10c worth, 50c worth or more. Ask for A-K Tablets.

SICK-HEADACHES

Sick-headache, the most miserable of all sicknesses, loses its terrors when A-K Tablets are taken. When you feel an attack coming on, take two tablets, and in many cases, the attack will be wanted off. During an attack take one A-K Tablet every two hours. The rest and comfort which follow, can be obtained in no other way.

Genuine A-K Tablets bear the K monogram. At all druggists.

joyed it immensely and declared that she would often have just such a meal at Grosvenor Square.

"But I am afraid it would be different there," she said, with a little sigh.

She presided over the tea at one end of the table, and Clive sat behind the ham and eggs at the other, and they certainly looked so very much like a recently married couple that there was some excuse for the landlady, who waited, beaming on them benevolently, after the manner of her kind all the world over when they are regarding a bride and bridegroom.

"I really cannot eat any more," Lady Edith declared, with a laugh, as she refused a further supply from the huge dish. "I have enjoyed it so much."

"They certainly have done very well," admitted Clive. "I'll go and look after the horses."

"That means that you want to smoke," said Lady Edith, smiling up at him. "Pray do so here, when you come back, if you want to. I like it."

Clive found the horses all right and talked them over with the aged John.

"You don't know how far it is from the station, I suppose?" he asked.

"Lord Chesterleigh is coming down by train."

John touched his hat and replied in the negative, and Clive, as he sauntered off, said:

"You can loosen those curbs going back."

"At once, sir?" asked John.

"Eh? Oh, yes, if you like," said Clive absently.

Meanwhile, Lady Edith had wandered into the old-fashioned garden.

"What beautiful flowers you have," she said to the landlady. "I did not know that there were so many blooming so early in the year."

"It's my son's hobby, ma'am," said the landlady beamingly. "I hope you'll please to pick any that takes your fancy and make a bowkay for your good gentleman."

Lady Edith's face flamed and, like Clive, she was about to correct the woman, but she, too, checked herself, thinking, as he had thought, that it did not matter. But the simple words rang in her ears and made her heart beat quickly, and she stooped over some fragrant stocks to hide her blushing face. Clive found her picking the flowers. "I've full permission," she said. "Aren't they lovely?"

Smell!" She held the bunch to his face with a novel air of abandonment, of simple gaiety, which would have charmed any man. "You shall have one for your coat. What shall it be, a pink?"

She selected one and he fumbled with it at his buttonhole, but men are notoriously clumsy in such matters, and she, with a little gesture of impatience and womanly scorn at his efforts, put it in its place, found a pin and fixed it. She was necessarily very close to him, and as he looked down at her—he had not to look far, for she was tall—he could not fail to notice the loveliness of the upturned face in its frame of golden hair, blown a little loose by the soft breeze. She glanced up to scan her work and met his gaze; her eyes fell suddenly, a faint blush rose to her face, and she turned her head away.

Clive was only human and, like most men who are worth anything at all, admired beauty of any kind. If there had been no Mina, he would have been stirred to the depths by the proximity of this extremely beautiful woman; even as it was he was not insensible to her charms. He moved uneasily.

"Shall we walk toward the station on the chance of meeting Lord Chesterleigh?" he said.

Lady Edith stifled a sigh, but, of course, assented promptly. Having received minute instructions as to the way, they started, and, of course, lost it. However, they reached the station at last, inquiring when the next London train came in, were informed by an aged porter that it was due in about an hour's time. Clive tipped him and, describing Lord Chesterleigh to the porter to direct a gentleman answering that description to the inn.

They went back slowly; the moon had risen from a low bank of clouds and the pretty "gentle" country seemed lapped in peace; it was a night for lovers, and the music of a thrush singing softly in an elm was echoed by Lady Edith's heart. If only these wonderful, happy hours could last! If she could hold the assurance that they two should spend many such hours together alone! She glanced at him now and again, but though Clive was too well-mannered to be absent or preoccupied, she had a painful sense that his feelings were not in harmony with hers; if they were, how could he refrain from speaking the words of love for which her soul thirsted?

The night grew slightly chilly; the landlady, with kindly forethought, had lit a fire, and though the room was not cold, the blaze, reflected in the old paneling, made the room cheerful. Lady Edith drew a low chair up to the fire and leaned forward with her hands clasped round her knees, making another graceful picture; it was as if rank and fashion were playing at country simplicity; she appeared in a new character tonight, thought Clive, as he leaned against the mantelshelf above her and smoked a cigarette. Her voice, when she spoke—there were long intervals of silence broken only by the sputtering and the cracking of the fire of great logs—was soft and low and almost dreamy.

To Make Heavy Guns.

Munitions of war in the broadest sense of that term are being manufactured now in all parts of Canada by men who were entirely ignorant of the necessary processes a year ago. Encouraged by their success, Canadian manufacturers will now attack probably the most difficult problem of all—the manufacture of heavy artillery. This requires not only a high degree of engineering skill but also the installation of heavy machinery and the securing of special labor. Our huge industrial plant, which many thought to be too extensive for our needs when the era of construction began to wane, is being adapted with surprising speed and success to the task of assisting to defend the British Empire from its enemies.—Industrial Canada.

Volunteers' Parade

The volunteers of G Company under command of Capt. Montgomerie paraded yesterday afternoon at Government House grounds and were inspected by Lieut.-Col. Sir W. E. Davidson. His Excellency congratulated the men upon their fine military appearance and on the patriotic spirit shown by them in rallying to the defence of the Empire. He then referred to Trafalgar Day and the glorious inheritance which was ours through Nelson's victory. He wished the men every success when they reach the firing line, and a safe return. Rt. Hon. Sir E. P. Morris was also present and addressed the soldiers, advising them to act in every way as true soldiers and maintain the splendid record established by their comrades, some of whom have already given their lives in upholding the cause of right. After leaving the Company the volunteers paraded through the city to headquarters where they were dismissed.

Confidence.

I know a man who hunts for snakes, and kills them for their grease. He says 'twill cure rheumatic aches, and make your anguish cease. The doctors say that serpent oil no sort of virtue owns; it will not cure the pains that coil around your joints and bones. But this old gun who kills the snakes has never had a doubt; he says all other cures are fakes, when reptile oil's about. He is so everlasting sure that what he says is true, that even skeptics buy his "cure," to see what it will do. And so it keeps him toiling hard, the keen demand to meet, and he has bought with bull-snake lard a home in Easy street. If you believe in what you sell, have faith in what you say in that same avenue you'll dwell, upon a future day. If one is not supremely sure that what he has for sale makes all competitors look poor, his eloquence will fail. A man can sell me setting hens, or swarms of bumble bees, or double action fountain pens, or cures for housemaids' knees, if he's convinced that what he sells beats everything around; that sort of salesman's wearing bells, wherever he is found.

Training Officers Voices

Owing to the terrific din of exploding shells, bombs, and rifle fire, at the Front, officers have to train their voices, so that they may shout sufficiently loudly to make their orders heard. For this purpose an ingenious plan is adopted in most Officers' Training Corps. The officers are lined up in two rows opposite one another, with a space of fifty yards between each row. Each officer has then to drill the man opposite him, and as about fifty men are shouting altogether at the tops of their voices, the noise is tremendous, and only those who use their voices to the best advantage can hope to make the man opposite them understand their command.

South African Elections

General Botha was the first Prime Minister of the Union of South Africa, and he has gone to the country on his record. The Union of South Africa was formed under the South Africa Act which passed the home parliament on Sept. 20th, 1909.

General Botha has had a hard struggle since the war commenced. He has had to face and put down a rebellion, and he also undertook the campaign which brought German S. W. Africa under the control of the Union. He also favoured aiding the Empire by sending troops to fight in Europe or elsewhere.

The Cot Fund.

The Trafalgar Day special list is now closed, and immediately the funds are in the hands of the Treasurer, Mr. Cliff, the amount realized, which is already a substantial one, will be sent to London. The work in connection with the "Cot Fund" of the Woman's Patriotic Association is much of the same character.

Our Native Flag.

Ugh! Acid Stomach, Sourness, Heartburn, Gas, or Indigestion

The moment "Pape's Diapepsin" reaches the stomach all distress goes.

Do some foods you eat hit back—taste good, but work badly; ferment into stubborn lumps and cause a sick, sour, gassy stomach? Now, Mr. or Mrs. Dyspeptic, jot this down: Pape's Diapepsin digests everything, leaving nothing to sour and upset you.

How an Englishman Dies for the Flag.

The calm heroism with which Englishmen face death at the front is described by Corpl. W. Buckland, of the Meerut Division, Indian Expeditionary Force, in a letter to a friend in the South Notts Hussars.

"I'm handing in my checks, old man," said the wounded man, as they regained the British lines, "and all the doctors in the world can't save me."

"After I had made an old overcoat, and lit a cigarette for him," says Corpl. Buckland's letter in the Nottingham Guardian, "he started to talk over the times we had together in different parts of the world. He did not last long, though."

"Just as the gray dawn was breaking he asked me to lay his rifle by him, and, after I had done so, he pulled me down by his side, and I just managed to hear him say, 'Bill, I'm on the road now. I can hear someone sounding the great challenge, 'Halt, who comes there?' With a tremendous effort he staggered up and, in a terrible voice, shouted, 'An Englishman, who did his duty.' Shall I ever forget that scene!

"That is how an English soldier meets his death. Similar scenes take place day after day all along the line, but it is only with this particular incident that I am concerned. I say to Nottingham men who are loath to join: Have you not a single friend who has fallen in this Armageddon? A brother, cousin, or a very dear friend whose blood calls on you to avenge him? Isn't your conscience shattered with visions of the hundreds of small wooden crosses that lie scattered all over France? Are you not afraid that the spirit of your dead brothers will rise up and call you 'Coward'?"

McMurdo's Store News

FRIDAY, Oct. 22, 1915. In the autumn rats often give a good deal of trouble, and do great damage. One method of getting rid of rats and mice is by the use of Rat Corn. If used in reasonable quantity, Rat Corn will do all that is claimed for it.

Big Catch of Walrus.

Esquimo Crew of Steamer Bag 1,353 Off Siberian Coast. Seattle, Wash., Oct. 16.—After a successful walrus hunting expedition in the Arctic, headed by Capt. O. A. Annevik, noted navigator of the Far North, the steamer Corwin has reached Seattle.

The Corwin made two hunting cruises in the Arctic, going as far as latitude 82.40 north. On the first cruise her crew bagged 837 walrus, which were discharged into the freighter Latouche at Nome and sent to Seattle.

"There were unusual ice conditions in the far north this year and the bergs and floes were further south than I have ever seen them in my cruises of the Arctic," said Capt. Annevik. "There was a big blizzard on the Fourth of July in the Arctic and more than ten inches of snow was on the Corwin's deck before the storm was over."

Offered Bribe to the Serbians.

Prince Alexander Refuses to Sell His Country to Austria.—Greek Munitions for the Turks. Chicago, Oct. 16.—A cable to the Tribune from Paris, says:

The information reached here to-day that Austria a month ago offered tempting terms of peace to Serbia. And only the intervention of Prince Alexander, who said that Serbia was ready to die by the sword rather than be a traitor, prevented an acceptance of the offer.

For this purpose the Belgrade sector of the country was to be ceded to Austria, for the period of the war, Austria guaranteeing to return it at the end of the hostilities. The Serbian council was seriously considering the offer which, in their view, required no greater sacrifices on the part of Serbia than the allies' proposals to pacify Bulgaria, and would let Serbia out of more fighting.

After All, Why Not?

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

Some friends of mine had a near, very near, automobile accident recently. They were coming down a steep hill when almost the worst thing that can happen to a machine happened to them—the steering gear broke. At the foot of the hill was a bridge over a pond; they careened frantically across the bridge and plunged part way under the one rail fence. They came to a stop with two wheels under the fence, hanging over a ten-foot drop and fifteen feet of water.

You can imagine the celerity with which they climed out on the farther side of the machine, and the fervidness with which they rejoiced over their narrow escape. Of course they made for the telephone. You can imagine, too, that the next thing they did was to find their way to the nearest telephone and telephone to the nearest garage for assistance. But I don't believe you can imagine the rest. The garage was twenty miles away, and in the hour of waiting, instead of reviewing his escape from the angles and talking it over with all the inhabitants of the farmhouse where he telephoned, what do you suppose the male motorist did? He drew his folding fishing-rod out of his pocket, remarked, "This looks like good fishing to me," and proceeded to catch a pickerel while he waited.

low Many People Would Have Done It! Everyone who hears the story laughs heartily and says, "Isn't that just like Hastings?" You see, it seems to all of us a most unusual thing to do. We know we wouldn't have done it, and we know ninety-nine people out of a hundred would never have thought of sitting down to fishing ten minutes after such a hair-breadth escape. And yet, when you look at it thoughtfully, isn't it the most natural instead of the unnatural thing? The danger was past, they had escaped, the damage to the machine was irrevocable, all that could be done about having it repaired had been done, the motorist found himself near a fish pond, he loved fishing, he had to wait an hour, why not fish? How Much Better If We All Refused To Fuss. Wouldn't it be better if more of us would take life in that simple way and not fuss so? I remember hearing the motorist fisherman say some time ago that "while we live let's live" was his favorite motto. I think he carries it out even better than he realizes. He lives each moment to the full, puts it behind him and lives the next, instead of waiting half his life rehearsing and fussing over the other half.

Letters of Thanks From Soldiers.

Port Blandford, October 20th, 1915.
Editor Evening Telegram:
Dear Sir,—Will you kindly insert the enclosed letters in your paper, which were received by my sister and I from wounded soldiers in St. Thomas' Hospital, London. Please return letters again to IRENE E. STONE.

FROM SAPPER HERON.
No. 9 Edward Ward, St. Thomas' Hospital, London, S.E., Aug. 12th, 1915.
Dear Miss Stone,—The address I have used is sufficient, but it was attached to a pair of socks I have been given to wear this week. There were a few other pairs of the same kind with them, and I thought you may be interested to know that these are being used by wounded soldiers in this hospital. They were distributed just at an appropriate time. Some of us had needed a change for a day or two. With thanks,
I am, yours faithfully,
H. S. HERON, (Sapper, R.E.)

Sunday, Oct. 3rd, 1915.
Dear Miss Stone,—I hope you will excuse me taking the liberty of writing these few lines, but I think it is only right for me to thank you for sending me such a beautiful pair of warm socks. I was in St. Thomas' Hospital when they were given me, but I am now with the third line of my Regiment being almost better now. Perhaps you would like me to give you an account of my doings while out in France, so here goes: It was on March 30th, at midnight, when (along with my two cousins who are also in our battery) we set sail for Southampton and landed at Havre (France) by as near as I can remember 5.30 a.m. here we had breakfast and had to water and feed our horses; we stayed for two days at Havre waiting to be sent into the firing line. Havre is a kind of receiving or clearing station. All troops who land there are sent to different parts of the country; we were not sent into action straight away but were kept on firing practice for a fortnight at a small place 18 miles south-east of Paris. Then we went for a march and entrained on the outskirts of the French capital; I was rather disappointed here as I was wanting very much to see Paris. The greatest difficulty I had up to this time was in speaking French, but I had just about mastered the art of asking for a few things. The first thing we did was to put our horses in the boxes and the guns and limbers had to be slung on trucks, that done we looked about for our "carriages" but to our dismay found that we had to go in horse boxes, some straw was put in the bottom and there were thirty of us in each, or just enough room for us to stand up in, and in this way we were travelling 30 hours. When we alighted we were greeted by French and British Tommies who were in a rest camp at the Headquarters Base, and by April 23rd or just short of a month from leaving England, we fired the first shot at the Germans. I am a driver in the R. F. A. and it was in the night from 11th to 12th that I received my wound. We had been at it for 3 days with our 18 pounders, and I was in a team bringing up more ammunition to our firing battery waggon; we had got there and were returning with the horses to a place of safety when my horse, which was a leader, was killed by a piece of shrapnel, the course it fell causing me to break my left arm. I was sorry to lose the faithful beast; it had been a boon companion to me many times, many times I had shared a stolen apple (please don't think me wicked stealing apples, as when a man is hungry it's only natural that if he sees something to eat he's going to get it) I used to stand on my horse's back and would keep quite still knowing I was doing and that she would get a fair share for her part of the business. I don't think I shall get another animal like her. I was sent in the base and from there to London where I got my socks.

Prohibition at Bay Roberts

AND PORT DE GRAVE. Special to Evening Telegram. BAY ROBERTS, To-day. Mrs. Howell and helpers have held successful and enthusiastic meetings at Bay Roberts and Port de Grave. Crowded halls, splendid addresses, intense interest. Prohibition sentiment steadily gaining ground. Large vote assured. CITIZEN.

Trafalgar Concert.

The concert held at the College Hall last night in aid of the Trafalgar Fund, was largely attended. Addresses were given by His Excellency the Governor, His Lordship the Bishop of Newfoundland, and a telegram from His Grace the Archbishop, who was unavoidably detained, was read by the Chairman, Mr. W. G. Gosling. Following the addresses an enjoyable concert programme was taken up and the National Anthem played by the bands and sung by the audience brought the entertainment to a close.

The Cochrane Street Church.

Contractor Cook, of the Downing Cook Co., Ltd., of Montreal, arrived in the city yesterday to inspect the construction work of the Cochrane Street Methodist Central Church. The steel frame for the dome is now placed in position and is a massive piece of work. The roofers are hard at work roofing in the building with asbestos shingles, the dome is to be covered with copper. The construction work is progressing favourably and splendid work is being done under the careful supervision of Mr. Gibbs who has now over ninety men employed. The heating apparatus is being installed. The electric wires, for further protection, are being brought to the entrance on Bennerman Street underground. This building is in the hands of competent and up to date contractors and when finished will be an ornament to the East End of the city. War times are said to be hard times for church building, owing to so many claims being made on the generosity of our people, but we must congratulate the members of the Building Committee on their push and energy in providing a Church home for the members of their congregation.

A Very Ancient City.

Saloniki is a very ancient city, as its numerous and extensive antiquities attest—Roman triumphal arches and Byzantine remains. Thessalonica, it was called by the Romans and later Greeks, but on the site there once stood an older Greek city, that of Therna, so called because of the hot springs in the neighbourhood. Thessalonica was founded in the year 315 B.C., by Cassander who gave it the name of his wife; a sister of Alexander the Great, and its modern name is based on its ancient one. It was a military and commercial station on the main road between Rome and the East. It was in Thessalonica that Cicero spent the melancholy days of his exile and poured out those egotistical lamentations that became "wearisome to gods and men"; and here was erected a triumphal arch, much of which still stands, to commemorate the victory at Philippi—not far distant—where Antony and young Octavius triumphed over the Senatorial army, led by Brutus and Cassius, two of the murderers of Julius Caesar.—The Wesleyan.

The Hygiene of Gas Lighting.

Incandescent gas is the ideal form of illumination for a living room. The soft yet brilliant light given off floods the room, and is restful both to the eyes and to the senses, preventing homeless or sewing from being a source of eyestrain. It has, moreover, been scientifically determined that the strong uprush of heated products of combustion from gas burners draws up the emanations from the skin and lungs of the occupants of the room, chars and sterilizes any accompanying germs, and, reaching the ceiling, diffuses through the plaster so rapidly as to draw fresh air from the windows and other openings.

OFFICIAL.
LONDON, Oct. 21.
The Governor, Newfoundland:
General French reports that enemy losses in attacking near Helluch were very severe. East of Rheims the enemy failed completely in their further attacks on the French lines on a nine kilometre front. An attack north of Souchez also failed.
Russia—Fighting continues between Mitau and Riga. Russians are successful elsewhere, especially on the Stry.

Italy—Successes are reported in Trentino and elsewhere.

BONAR LAW.
KING ALBERT REPLIES TO THE POPE.
ROME, Oct. 21.
The Pope has just received from King Albert of Belgium, a reply to an autograph letter from the Pope, urging the King to initiate steps looking to the conclusion of peace. The King replied in the negative. The King thanked Pope Benedict for his promise to use his influence with Germany to bring about the evacuation of Belgium's territory in the event of peace. King Albert declared he would never lay down his sword while his country was "in slavery". The Pope is greatly disappointed at the outcome of his efforts.

THE BISHOP OF LONDON.
LONDON, Oct. 21.
The execution of Miss Cavell was characterized as a crime that dwarfs even that of the Lusitania, by the Bishop of London, preaching in St. Martin's Church to-day. "Always up to now," said the Bishop, "chivalry has enlightened the horrors of war, but it is not so with our enemy of to-day, whose latest crime is murder in cold blood of a poor defenceless English girl." The Bishop remarked that Admiral Nelson would not have resorted to diplomatic inquiries in such a case—he would have made his inquiries with the thunder of the guns of the fleet. Continuing, the Bishop said: "The spirit of Nelson is dead in the young man of the present day if he does not want to know the reason why this crime was committed."

BULGARIANS REPULSED.
PARIS, Oct. 21.
The Athens correspondent of the Havas Agency sends the following despatch under date of Wednesday: A great battle is going on on the heights of Vassona and Kotchava. The Bulgarian object seems to be to march on Monastir so as to cut communication with Salonika. In the Negotin region two Bulgarian attacks have been repulsed.

CAPT. CURRY KILLED.
MONTREAL, Oct. 21.
Word was received by cable that Captain Leon H. Curry, of the 42nd Highlanders, Montreal, has been killed in action. He was the third son

"CAN YOU AFFORD TO TAKE CHANCES?"

A little cold may not seem a dangerous thing—you may feel inclined to let it go on hoping that to-morrow it will be better—but can you afford to take chances? Just as the little insignificant acorn grows if left alone, to the mighty giant oak, that cough if not stopped may grow to a very serious illness. When a cough starts there's no telling where it will end. You know no doubt, of cases right among people you have known where serious complications and fatal illnesses have had their start from a neglected cough or cold.

A cold is more than inconvenient—it is dangerous—so the big thing is to find a reliable remedy—one that will give you quick, satisfactory relief. There are many treatments that are recommended for a cough or cold but "STAFFORD'S PHORATONE COUGH AND COLD CURE" is recommended to be the safest, surest and most satisfactory way to cure a cold, grippe, etc.

Price 25 cts.; Postage 5 cts. extra. Prepared only by DR. F. STAFFORD & SON, St. John's, Nfld. Manufacturers of 3 Specialties: Stafford's Liniment, Stafford's Prescription "A," Stafford's Phorotone Cough & Cold Cure.

of Senator Nathaniel Curry, of Amherst, N.S. His battalion has only been in France a couple of weeks.

A WAR OF EXTERMINATION.
TIFLIS, Oct. 21.
An estimate made by the Armenian newspaper Mshak, is that of 1,200,000 Armenian inhabitants in Turkey before the war, there remain not more than 20,000. This residue, the Mshak says, may disappear before the end of the war on account of the Turkish policy of extermination.

ASQUITH RECOVERED.
LONDON, Oct. 21.
Premier Asquith has recovered from his recent illness sufficiently to go to the country. He expects to attend the session of the Commons on Tuesday of next week.

REPORTED OFFER TO GREECE.
LONDON, Oct. 21.
Although official confirmation is still lacking of the report that Britain offered Cyprus to Greece in return for her co-operation with Serbia. It is asserted confidently by diplomats in London that this offer was made.

RUSSIANS CHARGED WITH ATROCITIES.
WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.
The Turkish Embassy to-day issued an official report from the General Ottoman Headquarters, charging that many atrocities have been committed against Moslems on the frontier in the Caucasus, by the Russian troops, assisted by the Greek and Armenian populace.

AID FOR SERBIA.
NEW YORK, Oct. 21.
The News Agency despatch from London says that at least four hundred thousand British and French troops have been sent to the Balkans to help the Serbians, and invade Turkey and Bulgaria, was learned of reliable authority here to-day. This decision, it is said, has been reached at a conference this week between French war ministers and British cabinet military committees.

SOUTH AFRICAN ELECTIONS.
NEW YORK, Oct. 21.
The News Agency despatch from Johannesburg says the Unionists will control the next parliament in Union of South Africa, according to late returns from Wednesday's general election. Up to midnight returns showed the election of the following: Unionists 31, Botha party men 11, Laborites 3, Dutch Nationalists 1, Independents 4.

THE LONDON BUDGET.
LONDON, Oct. 21.
The German armies which formerly for fifteen months were continuously fighting on one front or the other, at three widely separated points, against Riga and Dvinsk, in Serbia, and in the Champagne district of France. In the two former places they continue to make progress, but against the French their attacks yesterday, which were delivered east of Rheims, met with complete repulse, as did those of the previous days. While it was expected that the German onslaught in the north would be the most formidable, as a matter of fact the Bulgarian attack against the Serbians through the valleys from the east, are proving the most dangerous. It is now definitely settled that the Bulgarians have cut the Salonika-Nish railway to the north of Vranja, thus driving a wedge between the main Serbian army and the Anglo-French forces which landed at Salonika. There is another railway branching off at Uskup, which runs up the western side of Serbia, but a considerable way around, and, besides, another Bulgarian army, which is now approaching Kumanovo, is threatening the Junction at Uskup.

With the rapid sweep westward of the Bulgarians, the people of the Allied countries are watching with the keenest interest the negotiations which are proceeding between these Governments and the King and Government of Greece. These negotiations are being carried out by the British Foreign Office in behalf of the Allies. Having failed to convince Greece that it was her duty to abide by the Serbo-Greek treaty and help Serbia when she was attacked, the Allies have made a fresh offer to that country, including the cession by Britain of the island of Cyprus. This offer and an outline of possible financial help is now being considered by the Zaimis cabinet. Should negotiations fail, it is expected that Greece will be asked to demobilize, or clearly define her attitude.

Conversations are also proceeding with Roumania, which it is understood are in the hands of the French Foreign Office. Meanwhile all the belligerents realize that the best way to influence neutral states is to win a big victory. Austria, Germany and Bulgaria are trying for this in Serbia, Germany in Courland and France and Italy in the Tyrol and Trentino, and Russia near Slonim, which roughly is the centre of the Eastern front. In Volhynia and Galicia, except for German attacks in France, all these are meeting with more or less success.

Field Marshal Von Hindenburg, in his attack on Riga, has reached Olni, which is half way between Riga and Mitau, and only a dozen miles southwest of the Baltic port. The German offensive extends along a front of about seventy miles. The German flanking movement on the right reached the Dvina River, thirty miles southeast of Riga, from which point the Dvinsk-Riga railway is being bombarded. According to Petrograd the Russians are attempting to advance, but continue to thrust at the Austro-Germans, thus doing a lot of damage.

The Italian advances in Tyrol and Trentino are being carried out in conformity with a plan to relieve the pressure on Serbia. New successes are reported and it is stated that a forward movement is about to begin. With the exception of a few German steamers which have escaped the submarines in the Baltic, the German flag, it is declared here now, has virtually been driven from the seas, even the fishing fleet in the North Sea having been wiped out. British cruisers recently having captured large numbers of them in retaliation for the sinking of British trawlers by German submarines.

Look at a Child's Tongue When Cross, Feverish and Sick

Take no chances! Move poisons from liver and bowels at once.

Mothers can rest easy after giving "California Syrup of Figs," because in a few hours all the clogged-up waste, sour bile and fermenting food gently moves out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, and they become tightly packed, liver gets sluggish and stomach disordered. When cross, feverish, restless, see if tongue is coated, then give this delicious "fruit laxative." Children love it, and it can not cause injury. No difference what ails your little one— if full of cold, or a sore throat, diarrhoea, stomach-ache, bad breath, remember, a gentle "inside" cleansing should always be the first treatment given. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are printed on each bottle. Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." We make no smaller size. Hand back with contempt any other fig syrup.

In Memoriam

One of the most pleasing local incidents of the present dreadful war, is the admirable manner in which the young men of French descent came forward to fight for the flag, out of all proportion to their numbers in the population. All honor to them!

One of them, Frederick Colombe, of St. George's was wounded at the Dardanelles and died on his way to Alexandria. He had not yet completed his nineteenth year.—A. J. O'R.

AEROPLANES INADEQUATE DEFENCE AGAINST ZEPPELINS.

LONDON, To-day.—The fact that aeroplanes alone cannot be relied upon as an adequate defence against Zeppelins, that expert naval gunners have been attached to anti-air craft batteries and search-light stations in London, were interesting statements made by Balfour, First Lord of the Admiralty, in the course of answering a running fire of questions in the Commons yesterday relative to the preparations taken to check air raids. Bad weather, he repeated, had hampered British aeroplanes during the recent Zeppelin attack.

BARBARIAN REPRISALS.

AMSTERDAM, To-day.—The German authorities in Belgium have announced a despatch, on the occasion of any Anglo-French aeroplane raids on Belgian cities under German occupation, that the inhabitants of the city will be held responsible if the bomb fall on the barracks of soldiers, according to the announcement to be billeted in civilian homes and a fine corresponding to the damage will be imposed upon the city.

ZEPPELIN WARNINGS SERVE NO GOOD PURPOSE.

LONDON, To-day.—Sir John A. Simon, Home Secretary, replying to a question in the Commons last evening, whether it would be possible to warn Londoners of Zeppelin raids, asserted that nine times out of ten the German airships were driven off, before they reached the coast. If the public was warned every time a Zeppelin were sighted on their way to England, said the Home Secretary, nine times out of ten they would be disappointed, because the Government could not say which port would be visited, as the Zeppelin itself has not the remotest idea where they are, and after all if the public was told, it would prevent the dropping of bombs and would only have the effect, judging from previous experience, of bringing people out into the streets.

POMERANIAN ASHORE.

HAYRE, To-day.—The Allan Line steamer Pomeranian, from Montreal for London, went ashore yesterday in a fog near Ocotville, 5 miles northwest of Hayre. The vessel is lying on the shingle and appears not to be straining. It is hoped she will be got off shortly.

EARL DERBY'S APPEAL FOR CRITICS.

LONDON, To-day.—The enlistment of recruits under the plan of the Earl of Derby, cannot begin until early next week, it is officially announced, as royal warrants necessary before men could be passed into the reserve and classified in their proper groups. Meanwhile Earl Derby with the concurrence of Asquith and Kitchener has sent a letter to every man eligible for military service who is not engaged in munition work in which he says Asquith has pledged the country to support our Allies to the fullest extent in our power. It was a pledge given on behalf of the nation and endorsed by all parties. Every man of military age and fitness must equally bear his share in redeeming it. "May I as director general of recruiting beg you to consider your own position and ask yourself whether in a country fighting as ours is, you are doing all you can for its safety, whether the reason you have hitherto held valid as one for not enlisting, holds good under the present crisis. Kitchener wants every man he can get. Will you not be one of those to respond to your country's call? Earl Derby has also addressed an appeal to employers to facilitate the enlistment of their employees. The appeal concludes: While making a most earnest appeal to select men under the voluntary system, I cannot help pointing out to employers what must be the alternative if I fail. If they will only realize their position and act under the voluntary system as they would have to act in a compulsory one, the success of this present recruiting campaign is certain. I beg employers to assure any of their men who undertake the duties of a soldier that their places will be kept open for them to return to when the war ends.

CANNOT AFFORD LONG WAR.

TORONTO, To-day.—Asked by the Monetary Times in a special interview granted at Ottawa, yesterday, whether he thought the war would continue for several years yet, D. A. Thomas, Lloyd George's representative in Canada, said he did not think so. Nothing like it, he added. The government and particularly the German government, cannot afford it. The Balkan situation presents a setback, but it is not insurmountable. Thomas is optimistic as to the outcome of the struggle and is confident the silver bullet will win.

REPULSED TURKS AT SUVLA BAY.

ATHENS, To-day.—The newspaper Embrose says it learns from Mytilene Island that the Allies yesterday repulsed a Turkish attack in the region of Suvla Bay and Krihria and that Turkish losses were severe. Two torpedo boats were on the Straits and bombarded Balacopi. It is reported from Salonika that the Bulgarians have been repulsed between Tigrispanke and Stratin, as well as in the region of Volosso. The Embrose also says that the French troops have advanced beyond Domir Kapa and crossed the Vardar River, and are threatening the Bulgarian army south of Ispit.

Volunteers Were Entertained.

The volunteers of Wesley Bible Class were entertained by their fellow members and their lady friends last night. An enjoyable programme of solos and recitations and an exhibition of club swings were given and were thoroughly enjoyed. A feature of the entertainment was an address on Trafalgar by Mr. W. Ash, who during his remarks exhibited one of the medals made for the heroes of Trafalgar 110 years ago. To date Wesley Bible Class has given 26 volunteers in defence of the empire and some of these are already in the firing line. Following the address refreshments were served by the ladies and the singing of the National Anthem brought the enjoyable evening to a close.

STEPHANO LEFT.—The Stephano is leaving New York to-day for Halifax and this port.

The Dardanelles.

A large and appreciative audience gathered in the Grenfell Hall, last evening to hear Mr. W. H. Jones, Manager of the Institute, deliver his illustrated lecture on "The Dardanelles." In choice and forceful language the lecturer described the people, customs, lands, etc., of the Near East, which have played so important a part in the early history of civilization, and which to-day have an added interest because of the great struggle fought there by our own boys, to preserve the honor and stability of our Empire, and to safeguard our altars and our homes. During the evening the audience was delighted by solos of a patriotic nature rendered by Messrs. Chaplin, Trappell and Courtenay. Perhaps never had the singers appeared to better advantage and certainly never were their efforts better appreciated. At the close a hearty vote of thanks was presented to the lecturer and the other performers by the Chairman, Mr. J. W. Taylor.

Prohibition Campaign.

The Prohibition Convancing Committee were at work again last night and the canvassers met with a hearty reception everywhere they went. Additional canvassers came forward and they will assist in the work this evening. The Finance Committee held a meeting at headquarters and the reports submitted showed that a generous response is being given to the appeal for funds. A big meeting for young voters will be held in the T. A. Armory on Monday night next.

Fads and Fashions.

Satin-faced fabrics are very much liked. Front-laced corsets are increasing in popularity. Crepe poplin is fashionable for tailored suits. Beads are a dominant item among dress trimmings. Even little velvet bags are now trimmed with furs. Purple is being used with natural pounce in millinery. Cut steel is much in vogue for millinery purposes. Double-breasted sweaters are made of striped silk. There is a new kind of mocha glove which washes. Concord blue is one of the new shades of the season. Jackets with shirred waistlines are among the prettiest. Patent leather buttoned shoes have gray kidskin tops. Corded broadcloth is a fabric considerably used for skirts. Floral patterned velvet is used for some novelty handbags. Norfolk jackets of dark brown suede are a French novelty. All kinds of puffings and ruffles are used for evening dresses. A lovely novelty silk is in pink and white with silver designs. Upstanding wings are a frequent decoration on chic little hats. The use of lace or crepe de chine undergarments is increasing. For waists, two colors that match the skirt are an admirable choice. Silver is preferred to gold for the decoration of evening gowns. Chiffon plush is a beautiful fabric for rich suits and evening wraps. Forest green velour is a beautiful material for a fur-trimmed wrap. The coat like a riding coat is frequently seen among tailored suits. Dark crepe blouses are seen with white collars and edges for relief. For afternoon dresses, favorite shades are tan, garnet, rose, gray and blue. Plaid bone buttons are used for the trimming of a navy serge tailor-made.
