CHAPTER XXX.
IN THE TOILS.

"Come, come, we had enough hard names last night! If I am a fiend, as you call it, don't you be a fool. Why, my good sir, you have got everything you wanted, and like a spoiled child, you are still dissatisfied, and want to quarrel with the person who has been your best friend. What give up charming, Doris Marlowe! Tut, tut, you couldn't do it; now, could you?"

Percy Levant turned his head aside, and something like a groan escaped his compressed lips.

"No, you couldn't. And therefore I say that the sooner the marriage takes place, and you have got for your bride the beautiful young creature with whom you are so madly in love, the better. 'A bird in the hand,' and 'There is many a slip,' etc. You know the two old, but exquisitely true, proverbs, I digress. Get the marriage over, my dear Percy!"

"You speak of a marriage, and we were engaged only last night!" he said, after a pause. "Do you think she would consent? How little you know her. Perhaps you think—with a bitter smile—"that she is as madly in love with me as I am with her!"

Spenser Churchill shook his head. "No, my dear fellow, I don't think anything of the kind. I think I can understand why Miss Doris has promised to marry you. But if she doesn't love you now, she will do so. Oh, yes, believe me with most women love comes after marriage!"

A light shone in the dark eyes for a moment, then faded out again, and left the handsome face grave and moody.

"I think she will consent—in fact, I am sure she will." He leaned forward on his elbow, and whispered the ensuing words insidiously. "She must be made to!"

"Made to?"

"Yes, tut, tut, don't look so black. Moral force, not physical, my dear Percy, is what I mean. Listen to me. I think you will admit that, up to now, my judgment has been pretty correct, and that I didn't start you on a wild-goose chase that morning in Soho, when I offered to give you a beautiful wife and make your fortune. Eh, my dear Percy? Well, I'll finish what I began, and here is my little plan. Do you know Pesca?"

Percy Levant nodded.

"A charming little place, my dear Percy. So quiet and secluded, and so much healthier than Florence. Now, if I were a medical man I should say that Miss Doris wanted a change, and that no place, within even easy distance, could be more suitable than Pesca. Though I am not a doctor, I think I shall venture to suggest to Lady Despard that she and Doris go there for a few weeks."

Percy Levant listened intently, his brilliant eyes covered by their long, dark lashes, so that Spenser Churchill could not see the expression that gleamed in them.

"Well, they go to Pesca, and you, of course, with them. You are there, say, a fortnight or three weeks, when I write to offer you an engagement at a large salary, in Australia."

Percy Levant did not move a muscle.

"It is a most tempting offer; but, alas! poor as you are, you cannot bring yourself to leave your lady-love for years, perhaps forever, as the song says. And what so natural and reasonable as the suggestion that you should marry her and take her with you? At first she will hesitate—oh, yes, certainly she will hesitate—but I think—"

with a smile—"I think I do not over-estimate your powers of persuasion when I say that I am convinced you will overcome her reluctance to so hasty a marriage. There is a charming little English church in Pesca—most charming!—the very church for a quiet wedding. A quiet wedding, mark me, my dear Percy! You see! Come, admit that I am as thoughtful unctuously."

"To Australia!" said Percy Levant in a low voice.

Spenser Churchill made a mocking gesture.

"Nonsense, my dear fellow! Why should you go to Australia? On the day after the wedding you and I will have a little explanation. I shall have the happiness of telling you whom you have married, and the extent of your good fortune; of putting you in the way of paying me that little bonus we agreed upon—and then you may go where you please—London—Paris—Jericho!"

"I see," said Percy Levant, slowly. "It is a clever plan. And you will tell me nothing until after the marriage? You will not trust me—"

The gentle philanthropist's smile spoke volumes by way of answer. It really meant, "Do you take me for a fool?"

"Yes, it is a clever plan," repeated Percy Levant. "But, clever as it is, I think you will spoil it, Spenser Churchill."

"I spoil it!" he echoed, with reproachful indignation.

"Yes, I think so. Do you think Lady Despard will not suspect that there is something wrong when you dog our footsteps and follow us about—"

Mr. Spenser Churchill laughed.

"But I do not intend to inflict my presence upon you, my dear Percy. I shall ask dear Lady Despard's permission to remain here at the villa—in charge, as it were—during her absence. You see? So that there will be nothing to be suspicious about."

A curious expression, almost one of satisfaction, shone for a moment in Percy Levant's dark eyes.

"I understand," he said, quietly. "Though, not with us you will be near at hand? And I am to come here the day after the wedding?"

"Yes," said Spenser Churchill, nodding complacently. "You will come to me and obtain the key to the enigmas, and I flatter myself, my dear Percy, that you will, I fear, alas! for the first time, overwhelm me with gratitude. Ah! lucky, lucky boy! If I had the good fortune in early life to possess such a friend as I have proved myself to you, where should I be now, I wonder?" and he sighed unctuously.

"In goal, I should say," retorted Percy, grimly. Then he added, quickly, "But I like your plan, and I shall do my best to carry it out. As you say, it is too late to draw back now—"

"Much too late," laughed the philanthropist, "even if you wished to, which you do not my dear boy."

"No, I do not," he assented, and he took a cigar from his case and lit it, his white, shapely hands trembling slightly. "I am willing to follow your instruction; and all I ask is that which you have consented to: that you keep away from Pesca."

Spenser Churchill nodded acquiescantly.

"Certainly, I agree with you that the less I am in evidence the better."

As he spoke, a footman came across the lawn with a telegram.

It was from Lord Cecil, and had been forwarded from Meurigny's. Mr. Spenser Churchill took it and opened it.

It ran:

"The marquis's condition is unaltered."

"Cecil Neville."

He tore it into minute fragments.

"A request that I will speak at the annual meeting of the Washerwomen's Burial Fund next week. You see what sacrifices I am making in your behalf, my dear Percy," he said, shaking his head. "I think I am rather thirsty; it is this peculiar air, I suppose. A small brandy-and-eggs, now—will you join me, my dear Percy? No!" and with a gentle sigh he ambled towards the house.

Percy Levant dropped down on the grass and smoked furiously for some minutes, then he fung the cigar from him as if he were too agitated to smoke.

"Yes, I'll do it—I'll do it!" he muttered. "Oh, my beautiful angel, for your sake!"

CHAPTER XXXI.
A POSTPONEMENT.

Some men take a great deal of killing. The Marquis of Stoye ought, according to medical rules and poetical justice, to have died out of hand; but he clung to life tenaciously, and not only refused to die, but got better!

In ten days from Spenser Churchill's departure, his lordship rallied, and, to the surprise of everyone, including the doctors, regained sufficient strength to enable him to leave his bed.

But a great change had taken place—one of those extraordinary changes which flee medical science and set all its knowledge at naught. The marquis had not lost his reason, but his memory.

He was perfectly sane, understood every word that was said to him, and could converse with all his wonted acuteness and sardonic cynicism, but he had forgotten everything excepting those things which had occurred in years long back. It was exactly as if his later years of his life, with all their experience, had been wiped clean from the table of his mind, and, as he sat in his easy-chair looking out of the window, he was under the impression that his wife had just left him, and that time had not back the things on life's film twenty years.

hold upon twenty years of life, and yet be able to understand—well, was said to him and converse rationally, was little short of phenomenal.

They sent for Lord Cecil, who came hurriedly, and was received by the old old man with a cold, haughty courtesy, as if they had not met for years.

"I am glad to see you, Cecil," he said. "You have altered a great deal since I saw you last; you have grown, grown very much. I suppose you think of entering the army? Well, I will consider the matter. I imagine you would do as much mischief as a civilian as you will do as a soldier. Tell your father, my brother, that, though I bear him no good-will, I will do my duty by you. Ask the steward to give you a five-pound note, and—you may go now, please," and Lord Cecil, dismissed like a school-boy, left the room, too embarrassed and confounded to utter a word.

"What is to be done?" he said to the doctors. "Will he remain like this? It is terrible—terrible!"

Bir Andrew shook his head.

"It is very extraordinary—very; but I must remind you, Lord Cecil, that it might be worse. His lordship is in possession of all his faculties, and, excepting this remarkable loss of memory, is as sane as you and I. I have had a long, and, I must add, most interesting, conversation with him this morning, and he talked with all his old brilliancy—"

"And bitterness," said the other famous doctor, under his breath.

"As to how long this singular lapse of memory will affect him, I really cannot say. It is an altogether unusual case. It is very bad, my lord, I admit,—for Lord Cecil was much moved by the old man's condition—"

"But, as I say, it might be worse. His lordship's physical strength is improving daily, we may say hourly."

Lord Cecil sighed.

"It is dreadful to hear him talk so strangely," he said. "Can nothing be done, no experiment be tried? Perhaps if I brought Lady Grace—"

"Bring her ladyship, by all means," said the doctor. "There is no knowing what a familiar face may do. Yes, bring her, Lord Cecil."

Cecil jumped into a hansom, and returned with Lady Grace, whom he took up to the marquis's chair.

"Here is Grace, sir," he said.

"Grace? Grace? What Grace?" demanded the old man, with a hard, keen glance at the beautiful face he used to know so well. "I have not the honour and pleasure of the young lady's acquaintance. Do me the favour to introduce me, if you please."

"Surely you know me, dear marquis!" said Lady Grace, bending over him.

The old man took her hand, and turned it over in his, with a vacant smile. "Let me see; Peyton calls this girl of his Grace, doesn't he? Aye, you Peyton's daughter?"

"You know I am, my lord!" she said. "You remember my father, your oldest friend?"

"Jack Peyton? Oh, yes!" he said, with his old, caustic smile. "My oldest and best friend. He proved himself so by running off with the girl I was going to marry. And then I married Lucy"—his lips tightened, and seemed to grow stiff and hard—"and she ran away, too. I daresay she had reason. The child was a girl. It ought to have been a boy, and I hated it because it was not one. Yes, it ought to have been a boy, and cut out Cecil. And now Cecil will be the heir. I beg your pardon, Cecil," he broke off with his sardonic smile, "I forgot; you were present. Yes, it was a girl. Someone told me that it was dead, and Lucy, too. No, I don't wear mourning; why should I?" with a hard, haughty stare.

"Let the man who went with her wear mourning. I daresay he regrets her—the fool! He was an old flame of hers. Spenser Churchill can tell you all about him, for he helped me to get Lucy away from him. Heaven knows what I saw in her to take so much trouble! I don't! Where is Churchill, by the way?" he broke off to enquire.

"He is on the Continent, sir," said Lord Cecil.

"Oh, what a Pecksniff that fellow is! The biggest hypocrite on the face of the earth, but useful—oh, yes, useful! And so you are Grace Peyton, are you?" turning his glittering eyes upon Lady Grace, who shrank back, half-frightened. "I should think that you'd make a good match with Cecil."

"Have you forgotten that we are engaged—Cecil and I—marquis?" she murmured, bending over him.

Insurrection at General Botha's
Tribute From J
ing in Russia.

GENERAL BOTHA'S FUNERAL. PRETORIA, SOUTH AFRICA, Aug. 31. (Reuter's South Africa Agency.)—The funeral of South Africa's great soldier-statesman, the late General Botha, was the occasion of the most momentous demonstration by all classes in the history of South Africa, and included tributes of affection and admiration from all parts of the sub-continent. Special trains brought to Pretoria representative public men, including the administrators from all the Provinces of the Union. The Capitol was draped in black and purple, and all day long the city was a place of mourning. The church, where the body had laid in state, was crowded to the doors at the funeral service by a large congregation and Representatives Stanley and Imperial Secretary Smith headed the ministers. A number of Premier Botha's political opponents were also among the congregation. Viscount Buxton, the Governor General, was unable to reach Pretoria in time for the funeral, but his two daughters were present. At the conclusion of the ceremony the body was removed to the cemetery along miles of crowded streets, which were lined by troops. General Smuts delivered an impressive oration at the graveside. He said we are all united by a deep feeling of national loss. Only recently Botha saw the whole of Europe torn by wild passions and he returned to South Africa more than ever convinced that salvation and healing would only be found in a new spirit of humanity and in forgiving and forgetting old differences and wrongs. From his grave to-day Botha speaks more eloquently than ever to his people. His soul lives as a noble power and lofty inspiration to our young Commonwealth. From this grave the ideal "one land, one people" will grow ever stronger and grander. With one exception the great figures of the transvaal and free state have all gone. Botha, Kruger, Fischer, Delarua, Steyn, and Schalkburger, and now is the youngest and in many respects the greatest—Louis Botha; Dew alone remains, and he is prevented from attending to-day by illness. Special trains brought to Pretoria representative public men, including the administrators from all the Provinces of the Union. Only recently Botha saw the whole of Europe torn by wild passions and he returned to South Africa more than ever convinced that salvation and healing would only be found in a new spirit of humanity and in forgiving and forgetting old differences and wrongs. From his grave to-day Botha speaks more eloquently than ever to his people. His soul lives as a noble power and lofty inspiration to our young Commonwealth. From this grave the ideal "one land, one people" will grow ever stronger and greater. With one exception the great figures of the transvaal and free state have all gone, Joubert, Kruger, Fischer, Delaroy, Steyn, and Schalkburger, and now it is the youngest and in many respects the greatest—Louis Botha; Dewet alone remains, and he is prevented from attending to-day by illness. Under an intimate and unbroken friendship and co-operation of twenty-one years, I have the right to call Botha the largest, most beautiful, sweetest soul of all my land and days, great in life and happy in death. Our prayers and love will be with Mrs. Botha all her days. In conclusion General Smuts mentioned the following example of Botha's magnanimous character: In the Hall of Mirrors at Versailles the German representatives were called upon to sign the Peace Treaty. With inevitable humiliation Botha surveyed the scene and wrote on his agenda paper the following words: "God's judgments will be applied with justice to all peoples under the new sun and we shall persevere in prayer that they may be applied in charity and peace and a Christian spirit." To-day I think back to May 31st, 1902, the date of the signing of the Treaty of Vereeniging. During the service in the Dutch Reformed Church, women and even stalwart burghers wept. General Smuts led Mrs. Botha in the procession to the grave.

FIGHTING IN RUSSIA.
 LONDON, Sept. 1. (Reuter's Ottawa Agency.) — The War Office has issued the following communique, "Fighting on the Archangel Volela Railway continued all day on the 30th of August for the possession of the village of Empsta which changed hands several times. No British troops were engaged in the fighting. Our airmen bombed Tselset-ska heavily. Russian troops attacked and captured Kadish, fifteen miles east of Empsta on the 29th, making prisoners of ninety of the enemy and capturing one gun. The Polish communique is as follows: "We captured the fortress of Bobrujak which was strongly defended. We used tanks in support of the infantry, and captured 500 prisoners. Bobruksk is one hundred miles southeast of Minsk, the great strategic importance of which is that it constitutes the western defence of Moscow and is the key of Ruthenia."

A SERIOUS INSURRECTION.

BERLIN, Sept. 1. A despatch from Mannheim asserts that Frenchmen in the garb of civilians promoted an insurrection at Ludwigshafen. They demanded entrance to main post office at midnight for the purpose of telegraphing abroad news of the proclamation of a Republic, but were forced to retire. Later, equipped with arms and hand grenades, according to the despatch, they renewed the attack. Shots were exchanged in the course of which the Chief Postal Official was killed and two others were seriously wounded. All public buildings have been closed and street cars have suspended operations. A general strike was ordered on Friday.

THE PRESIDENT APPEALS TO LABOR.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 1. In a message to be read at Labor Day meetings throughout the country to-day and in which he announced he soon would call a conference of representatives of labor and industry to discuss issues of vital importance to each President Wilson appealed to every citizen to promote production and to refrain from doing anything that would tend to increase the cost of living.

Emancipating Photoplay Authors.

Until recently motion-picture managers "had no more respect for the authors than slave-dealers had for the parents of their merchandise." But now, Mr. Rupert Hughes tells us, not only is plagiarism disappearing from the motion-picture world, but the author, in addition to being paid for what once was stolen from him, is beginning to have a voice in the picture-making of his stories. The day is passing, he affirms, when the dominant desire of both the scenario-editor and the director seemed to be to demonstrate their contempt for the work of the author. Writing in the Philadelphia Record Motion-Play Magazine, Mr. Hughes traces the steps by which this change has come about. First, "when it grew precarious to steal ideas, the managers began to buy them." But even at this stage it was seldom possible for an author to recognize, except by the title, his own story when it appeared on the screen. Then directors and scenario-editors, finding the public growing tired of the endless repetition of a few "strong situations," began to realize that they might have something to learn about the public taste from the successful authors. Finally an author, Mr. Rex Beach, learned the technique of the motion-picture business, became a partner in a big "movie" organization, and now urges his brother authors to complete their own emancipation. To quote Mr. Hughes further: "All new arts have to be shaken down gradually and all governments begin as despotisms and develop into constitutional monarchies, and finally into democracies. "The moving-picture world is now ready for this last step."

To Rex Beach is due not only the credit for asserting the right of the author to be heard, but of proving the value of his cooperation. Having demonstrated his own ability as a collaborator throughout the production, he has urged the authors to adopt the principle of good golf: "Follow through."

"It was not easy to persuade many of us. The returns from literary work were so alluring and there was labor enough in that field."

Quebec's Example.

(London "Advertiser.") Ontario is loth to believe that it can learn anything from Quebec, yet the latter province has a boys' school (it is not even called a reformatory) which has a long and proud record of having turned out men who were a credit to their province. Set high in the Laurentians, surrounded by lakes and streams and deep forests, this school is built along lines designed to have an appeal to boyish imagination. A boy goes with reluctant feet to serve his "sentence" and finds himself in the land of his juvenile dreams, a place where every boyish wish may be gratified, and every fine game indulged. Each boy is out on his honor. He may roam the forests, use the canoes provided, go fishing or exploring. It is said that no boy ever attempted to get away from this place, and that many cannot be driven away. And when the boy leaves the school he is often the superior, mentally, morally and physically of many young lads who have had every opportunity to develop themselves without restraint. He is assisted to a position, and the Province of Quebec is proud, and justly so, of the long list of fine men who have graduated from this school of correction in the mountains.

Newfoundland Man With Grievance.

A Gosse, a returned soldier, now employed in the Halifax Shipyards, called at The Evening Mail office to-day with a complaint against the Pension Board. He was before the board which pronounced him medically fit and accordingly his pension of $17.50 per month was ordered to close. He says he is not medically fit and that the pension should continue. Mr. Gosse served with the 5th C. M. R. and was wounded by a bullet in the neck. Another hardship is that he lost a day's pay at the shipyards and got only one third of it for his time. He is a Newfoundland man who enlisted in the Canadian army. — Halifax Evening Mail.

Tobacco.

The liquor press of the United States which is still, like a highly paid criminal lawyer, striving against despairing conditions to get a reprieve for its criminal client, now languishing in the condemned cell against the day of its execution, has no more powerful plea, for the captivation of the simple than its prolonged wall that the fanatics are going to follow up their victory over drink with a similar campaign against tobacco. Supposing they were; tobacco would stand or fall by its own merits or demerits. If it could be shown that tobacco was the source of most of the vice, poverty and crime in the land, it would be obviously the duty of the well-wishers of the nation to have it tried for its life before the bar of public opinion, and duly executed. That has not been shown. It is true that there are people who have realized its unmanly effects on youth, and who are in high wrath at the cigarette being practically forced on the lads who go to the front. Many who would have nothing to say against giving it in a time of tension to those whose nerves have been taught to need it, are indignant that those whose nerves would be much steadier without it should be initiated into the use of it by the generosity of sympathetic philanthropy on the part of those who should represent the most advanced ideals. They are especially angry at the newspaper press which has leagued itself with the tobacco manufacturers in a concerted world wide drive. The aim is to capture for another enslavement the ground from which opium has receded in China and that from which liquor is receding in America. It has made use of the war and the temperance movement to conquer the community, men, women and children, for tobacco, with the result that the trade in its most insidious form, the cigarette, has multiplied many times since the war began. It is natural that these conditions should produce bitter protest. —Montreal Witness.

HARD FOR BOTH GUEST AND HOST.

There are few people for whom I have as great a sympathy as for the mother who goes visiting with her small children. But among those few are the people who have a mother with small children visiting them.

For it seems to me this is one of those social relations which, while they are inevitable, are a strain on both parties without either party being really to blame.

Children Really As Foreign As Fiji Islanders. Children are a race by themselves with almost as different needs, desires, pleasures and points of view from those of grown-ups as if they came from the Fiji Islands instead of springing up in the midst of us.

My neighbor, a middle-aged woman, has had her niece and two children visiting her. Both are my friends, and as a result I have had both sides of the case poured out to me.

Says the Aunt: They Are So Hard on the Furniture. "They go rushing around the house taking hold of everything and prying into everything."

"They get into one piece of mischief after another. They are always taking hold of the furniture with greasy hands."

Says the Niece: "At home they have their toys and their own room. Here they have only a toy or two and no special room of their own. And they are so active and eager that they simply go round the house, looking at everything."

"A Fair Cop."

It is perhaps a testimonial to the high standard of morality in journalism that only once during a professional career of nearly twenty years have I been arrested as a pickpocket. It happened in this wise:—

In Manchester, it is the custom every Whit Sunday for the Catholics to indulge in a monster Sunday-school procession. In point of size there is nothing like it in the country, as readers in the North may know. But that fact was unknown to me, a reporter just arrived from the South of England and attached to the Daily—in Manchester.

On this particular Whit Sunday I had been out of the city on a crime story and it was necessary that I should hasten back to the office and hand in my copy by three o'clock in order to be free to attend another engagement at five. Just before three, I arrived at the corner of Market St., where I had to cross to get to my office, which was situated in a thoroughfare on the other side only a few minutes away. But there, to my amazement, I found the street blocked by a vast horde of spectators. A gay procession with bands and banners was wending its way slowly along.

I was in a hurry, and I looked for an avenue of escape, but in vain. I found on enquiry that in order to get round the route of the procession I should have to make a detour of nearly two miles. I asked a bystander how long it would take for the procession to pass. "At least two hours," he replied.

It was such a simple situation, but I was powerless. It seemed incredible that modern journalism, with all its wonderful resources, offered no means of overcoming such a dilemma. My hopes rose when a worried-looking policeman came and stood near me. I told him the situation and asked him if he couldn't break through the ranks and get me across. "Impossible," he said. "I can't do it. I'm just off duty and I want to get across myself, but I shall have to wait I could only break through if I had a charge. Now, if you was a pickpocket, say—"

The words were no sooner uttered than I had a bright idea. "Well," I said, "I'll be a pickpocket." He was a smart constable. He grasped the idea at once—also my collar with a grip of iron. "Come along," he said, loudly, so that all around saw his capture. I've gotcher; try to pick pockets, would you?

It caused a great stir in the crowd. Heavy white linen is most favored for sport blouses.

I was glad when my captor hustled me through the ranks of spectators and the procession and got me to the other side of the road in record time. The next morning two stories from my pen appeared in the paper—the crime story, and the account of how I was forced to become a criminal for strictly business reasons.

Fads and Fashions.

The favorite hat seems to be black. The new picture hats are enormous. Lace appears on the new millinery. More fullness is allowed in skirts. A great many black dresses are worn. Sports hats are made in turban style. If a wrap is used, it is frequently a cape. Brown is the favored color for Fall suits. Goats' hair is one of the new hat trimmings. A novel apron forms a workbag when worn. White and colored neckwear are both favored. Tailored dresses are the height of simplicity.

USELESS NOISE.

The prices still are soaring, but noise won't bring them down; not all our frenzied roaring will cheapen things in town. So let us get together, renouncing tactics vain, and ask our neighbors whether we can't do something sane. The pieces have been speeded until our hearts are sore; and sanity is needed more now than e'er before. We must be sane and thoughtful if we would lay, it's clear, our vengeful hands and swatful upon the profiteer. No vain and rapid ranting, no anarchistic wheeze, will bring the robbers panting upon their stalled knees. We must be calm and sober, an earnest, quiet troop, or long before October we'll all be in the soup. While we remain excited the profiteers will say, "These delegates be-nighted are easy marks to flay. While they are raising thunder, and standing things on end, we have a chance to plunder that quiet wouldn't lend." The pirates profiteering will hear their passing knell, when we are done careering and raising merry Halifax. So let us go together, and cease our riots vain, and ask our neighbors whether we can't do something sane.

Why Not A Harbor Police?

Time passes swiftly and still the many necessary and practical improvements have not been made. St. John's continues to be fifty years behind the times.

In Canada and the States little cities have sprung up and are still springing up, leaving St. John's far behind in every way imaginable.

Newfoundland's only city—the New World's most unprogressive and most antiquated! Should we not be ashamed? To what cause may be attributed our failure to forge ahead into a city of which its citizens may be proud and justly so?

Perhaps it is useless to ask for a Harbor Police before the many other pressing and, perhaps, more necessary, improvements are effected.

However, because the Telegram is just now pointing out some of the improvements that may be made, the matter of a Harbor Police is taken up. Two men, equipped with a distinctive uniform, a fast motor boat and an intimate knowledge of the harbor and waterfront, would prevent much, if not all, of the irregularity now witnessed there.

There are certain excellent harbor regulations. They are extensively broken. That is not surprising. Remove the probability of exposure and the criminal will flourish. Furnish the means whereby crime may be detected and the criminal apprehended, and crime will be lessened.

Now, what argument can be advanced against the idea of having a Harbor Police?

Hr. Grace Hospital.

(H. F. SHORTIS)

A very enthusiastic public meeting took place in Harbor Grace last week to discuss the Hospital question, and to accept the handsome offer, made by the family of the late Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Munn to present their well known family residence and grounds to the citizens of the town and district of Harbor Grace, to be converted into a Hospital.

No more suitable gift could be given by this family to perpetuate the memory of this highly respected father and mother, who for over half a century resided in Harbor Grace, and who in no small measure were the heart and soul of the success and progress of that town during its most prosperous years.

The death of Mr. Munn, the week after the Bank Crash in 1894, now 25 years ago, came like a thunder bolt, and the town has never recovered from his loss since then. For years and years the planters and fishermen frequenting that town were heard to say how different things would have been if Mr. Munn was only here to help and give us his advice.

Mrs. Munn continued her residence at Harbor Grace, and kept her large family of six boys and five girls continually beside her for many years, but recently she moved to Montreal (where her five daughters are now residing), and passed peacefully away in January last beloved and regretted by all.

It is little wonder that the family wish to perpetuate the knowledge of past events to future residents of their native town by calling their princely gift—

THE MUNN MEMORIAL HOSPITAL, and may it be the centre of continued good and blessing to future generations that will reverse the happy couple.

I shall now say a few words with regard to the suitability of this locality for the work intended. It is a splendid residence with large and airy rooms, fitted up with electric lights and hot water heating of the most modern improvements. There is a good supply of water and splendid drainage. There are about two acres of ground well laid out with flower beds and kitchen garden, shaded by the handsomest trees in the town. The rear of the house goes within a short distance (about 40 yards) of the railway station, with a very easy approach, so that any patients being brought by the railway can reach the Hospital with the least amount of trouble.

The citizens are delighted and have banded themselves together, both ladies' and gentlemen's committees, to get right after the preparatory work of arranging the necessary plans for the immediate occupation of the Hospital.

It is known that the famous physician, Sir Thomas G. Roddick, of Montreal, is taking a very active interest in this work, and many citizens are already expressing the desire that the Roddick Ward should perpetuate the memory of my old schoolmaster, the late J. L. Roddick and his family, who, for many years lived in the old town, and spread his masterly influence in uplifting the manhood of the whole of Conception Bay.

I hear that the politicians and leading residents of the town are to have the Piccott Bed, Parsons Bed, Young Bed, Cron Bed, Simmons Bed, Archibald Bed, etc., to perpetuate the good they are doing in the district.

The Government has come down handsomely with the promise of an annual grant of $15,000 to cover the cost of a resident doctor and nurses and the upkeep of this splendid Home for the sick and suffering of my native town and adjacent places. There could not possibly be a more suitable locality for the erection of a Hospital.

Reprehensible Conduct.

Mr. J. B. Spooner has called at this office to tell how a garden, owned by him, was invaded by someone or ones a few nights ago and the growing potatoes hauled out of the ground. As the latter were not big enough for cooking, and more than half a barrelful were drawn, it looks as if the scoundrels did it out of pure wantonness and spirit of destruction.

An Appreciation.

Editor Evening Telegram Sir,—I wish to offer a tribute to the efficiency of the Telegram advertising clock-work. Eight weeks ago I had a dog stolen from me. I put a $1.00 "ad" in your paper to this effect: warning the thief to let the dog go. On Saturday the "dog came back." I thank the clear type and arrangement, and wide-spread circulation of your newspaper for this.

Mt. Allison University.

SACKVILLE, N.B., Aug. 30.

Prof. Edgar Allen, Ph. B., M.A. of Edgewood, R.I., has been appointed professor of Biology at Mount Allison University, and will come to Sackville next month to begin his duties here. Prof. Allen is a graduate and post-graduate of Brown University, having taken the degree of Ph. B. in 1915 and the degree of M.A. in 1916. He subsequently took a post graduate course of two years completing the requirements for Ph. D., except the thesis in June 1917 when he enlisted in the United States army. He served as Lieutenant in the Sanitary Corps from July, 1918 until February, 1919 in the Central Medical Laboratory in France. Prof. Herbert E. Walter, associate professor of Biology in Brown University, has the following to say concerning Mr. Allen and his work: "I have known Mr. Allen as undergraduate and graduate for several years. He did considerable work in my classes in anatomy and zoology with conspicuous credit to himself. He is a fine, upstanding, clean-minded gentleman, who is bound to inspire confidence and hold the regard of students. He has patriotically done his part during the war and is a thoroughly likable and reliable fellow." For three years he was laboratory assistant with Prof. Gorham and Dr. Mead at Brown University, where he proved himself to be thoroughly competent.

Another addition to the Mount Allison staff has been made by the appointment of James King, M.A., Ph. D., as professor of Religious Education. Dr. King is splendidly equipped for the position and should prove a valuable member of the Mount Allison University Faculty. He received the degree of S.T.B. from Boston University in 1915, winning a scholarship for Harvard University for special work in psychology and education. He did not accept this scholarship, however, but took a fellowship at Clark University in Religious Psychology and Education. He entered Clark University in the fall of 1915 and took the degree of M.A. in 1916 and Ph. D. in 1918. In the fall of 1918, Dr. King was elected as Honorary Fellow and spent a year in research work studying religious education and psychology and their relation to post war needs. In his college course his major work was philosophy; in the seminary, it was religious education and philosophy; in his post-graduate work it was religious psychology and philosophy.

In addition to lecturing at Mount Allison, Dr. King will devote some of his time to Young People's and Sabbath School work in Maritime Provinces.

Vessel Founders.

CREW BROUGHT TO PORT.

The crew of the auxiliary vessel Delacoe arrived in port yesterday by the Lunenburg banker Carrie Hirtle, which picked them up after they had abandoned their ship on Saturday about 80 miles E. by S. of Cape Spear. She was bound from this port to Norway, and on her first attempt to get away for there was obliged to put back here in a leaky condition, and after undergoing repairs set out again last week only to meet with disaster. The vessel was in a sinking condition when the banker hove in sight and rescued the crew. Capt. Grey was in command of the ill-fated ship.

Regatta Meeting.

The 1919 Regatta Committee held their final meeting last night, those present being President Hiccock, Vice-President Hon. W. J. Higgins, Secretary J. L. Noonan, Treasurer J. L. Slattery, C. J. Ellis, P. F. Moore, J. P. Crotty, N. J. Vinicombe, C. Ryan, L. G. Chafe, T. J. Foran, P. J. Hanley, J. Day, E. J. Brophy, F. Nangle, J. Spears, A. G. Williams, L. C. Murphy. After the minutes of the previous meeting were confirmed, the Treasurer submitted accounts which showed that the collections were in the vicinity of $2,300, and expenditure about the same. A bill for the funeral expenses of the deceased C. Peters, amounting to $132.00, was ordered to be paid. A vote of $25.00 to boatman Squires, who has given 28 years' valuable services, was passed. The Treasurer announced that the Peters' fund amounted by approximately $1,450.00. The Executive were appointed as trustees of the fund. The medals to several of the crews were presented, and the others when finished will be given to the winners. Another project was entered against the juvenile crew which rowed the Cadet, Regatta Day. One, it was alleged, was 24 years old, and two others were credited with being to the icebergs "four springs." The coxswain of the crew will be notified of the protest, and if a satisfactory reply is not forthcoming within a week, the medals for first place will not be awarded them. The meeting adjourned at 10 o'clock.

A Correction.

In our report of the McKean-Prunty fire in yesterday's paper, we find we were misinformed on several points. Mrs. McKean informs us that she was not burning paper as stated, but was cooking, using birch wood for fuel, as usual, and it is supposed that sparks from the chimney ignited the shingles on the roof. The statement that Mr. and Mrs. McKean were about to leave the country and that their furniture was for sale, is also incorrect. We regret the annoyance caused by the items and would say that we published same believing it to be authentic.

Major Gran Flies North Sea.

Special Evening Telegram. CHRISTIANIA, To-Day. "Have successfully flown across North Sea from London to here."

GRAN." This is from Major Trygve Gran, the navigator of the giant Handley-Page biplane that was at St. John's, Major Gran, who is a Norwegian, was the first aviator ever to cross the North Sea by air, accomplishing it two years ago. He is well known in the world of adventure as an explorer and latterly an aviator of indomitable courage, having been in a Polar expedition and other great expeditions in southern seas. He it was who crawled out along the wing of the Handley-Page aeroplane and to the engine when it was in sight from here to New York. He will probably rejoin the Handley-Page expedition in time to resume the flight from Parrboro, Canada, where the machine is being rebuilt.

SECOND GAME TO-NIGHT.

Chagrined at losing the first game of the series, Manager Hartnett is watching around the home team somewhat. Orr is out of the game through spike wounds and replacing him is Brett. Kiely will play his old position in right field, while Canning is put on in place of Phalen. It was hoped that Canning would play third but he does not relish the position. Walter Callahan and Hiltz will man the battery to-night in a desperate endeavour to pull the home team out of the hole. It is likely that Manager Morse will use Stoum and McHenry. Following will be the line-up:

TO-MORROW'S GAME.

The third and final game of the series at St. John's will be played to-morrow afternoon at St. George's Field, commencing at 3 o'clock.

TEAMS LEAVE EARLY THURSDAY MORNING.

In order to save the players of both teams any wear and tear through night travelling, the Reid Nfld. Company have arranged to send out an "special" on Thursday morning instead of having the party on the regular express. Fans intending to go out with the teams can avail of this special, and tickets can be had at the railway station at one and one-third fare as per the Reid Nfld. Co's advertisement. The train will leave the station at 8 a.m.

GRAND FALLS WINS FIRST GAME.

G. Falls . . . 110 102 001-6 runs
St. John's . . . 900 100 010-2 runs
With even the aisles of the bleachers thronged, and three deep around the horsehoe, St. John's fans turned out en masse last night to witness the tussle for the first leg of the inter-town series for the H. D. Reid Cup. The game was started promptly at the time announced with Umpire Chesman, St. J. behind the plate, and Umpire Shepleigh, G.F., on the bases. Right from the start it could be seen that the Grand Falls team was in excellent form and was determined to secure first blood

Grand Falls scored in the first and second, was blanked in the third, showed one across on an error in the fourth, missed the fifth, but put the game on ice in the sixth when they batted in two runs. Hall held them hitless in the seventh and eighth, but they tallied again in the ninth; totalling 6 runs. The home-team could not find Pitcher's offering for three innings, but Darby loosened up just a wee bit in fourth and the next thing he knew the sacks were soused with St. John's boys. It was here that the visitors showed the only sign of aeronautics for the evening, when, failing to take advantage of a force, they let in a run. However, Cohen, their backstop, took charge of the situation and worked a double force, thus retiring the home-team.
This was St. John's only chance, and it was not until the eighth that they got the other score. When Shape-leigh called Quick safe at third in the second inning and had his chesman over-ruled by Chesman, it raised merry humors, and for a while Chesman's life was in danger, but "right was right" and he escaped unscathed.

The City team feel down terribly on its batting, and the infield was very ragged at times. Orr was so severely spiked in the third inning that Dr. McPherson this morning refused to let him play to-night. He has a gash of about four inches just above his ankle and one part of it is well into the bone. Nobody knew of it until the game was over, and he showed his gameness by sticking to his post until the curtain rang down.
Manager Hartnett is therefore switching Brett to third, while Canning will try the outfield. It was not the latter's intention to get in the series at all, but he could not refuse when the S. O. S. was sent out.

Harvey Thomas made an excellent coach, and Darby admits that at one time he felt quite uncomfortable by Harvey's antics. He is losing his sweetness on the desert air over at third as no city runners' got that far,
but he would be most effective coaching first where he could wake up the rooters for the home-team.

It is we think most unfair to offer any criticism of either the management or the players in the first clash, as doubtless they were more or less on edge, but if the City players pull any of the stuff to-night that they did last night they are sure going to be "shot" full of dope in to-morrow's column.

Dear Sir:-Oh! Woe to the brains that picked the city team which represented St. John's last night. The batteries are O.K. but the infield should have been:-Murphy 1b, Callahan 2b, Orr ss, Dr. Power 3b, Kieley, Duggan and Hiltz outfield. It is generally the rule to put on sluggers in the outfield but is quite evident that the men in the infield last night were no Ty Cobbs. I am an old player myself, and have been watching your league this summer with a great deal of interest and know the players'

PRINCE LAYS CORNER STONE.

OTTAWA, ONT., Sept. 1.
Parliament opened in special session at three o'clock this afternoon.
The speech from the Throne, as delivered by the Governor General, was brief. It opened with the warm reception which the Prince of Wales is receiving at all points. He has visited and emphasized that the ties between the Homeland and the Dominions were never closer nor firmer than to-day. The programme of the session, so far as outlined in the speech, is confined to ratification of the Peace Treaty; the adoption of measures rendered necessary by the return of peace, and by the terms of the Peace Treaty; and the making of such financial provision as may be required. "In connection with the Peace Treaty for the other purposes."

Under a smiling blue sky and to the strains of "O Canada," His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales this morning laid the corner stone of the Peace Tower of the Parliament Building, following the laying of the corner stone, the Prince inspected the Ottawa War Veterans, massed for review on Parliament Hill, and hoisted the new victory loan flag. An immense crowd gathered on Parliament Hill to witness the laying of the corner stone and the square surrounded by the beautiful and historic Government buildings was a sea of varie-gated colors. The Prince in reply to the address presented to him by Sir Robert Borden, said in part—"I regard it as a great privilege and honor to have been invited to lay this corner stone to-day. This fine city, and in particular its parliamentary buildings, have close associations with my family. Ottawa was chosen sixty one years ago by my great-grand-mother, Queen Victoria, as the capital of United Canada. The foundation stone of the original parliamentary buildings was laid in 1860 by my grandfather, King Edward. The foundation stone of the splendid new parliamentary buildings which have risen here now to take the place of those so unhappily destroyed by fire,
three years ago, was laid by my uncle as the Duke of Connaught, and I to-day am privileged to lay the corner of the "Tower of Victory" which will crown and complete the work. Your architects and builders, Sir Robert, have served you well, and I congratulate both the city of Ottawa and the Dominion Parliament on the whole edifice in which the parliamentary work of the country will soon be carried on. I shall look forward, watching the progress and completion of this tower when I come again to Canada."

INDIA WANTS REFORM.
LONDON, Sept. 1.
(Reuter Ottawa Agency.)—There is a growing interest in the question of the future system of Government of India as a result of the daily publication of the views expressed before the Joint Select Committee of the Lords and Commons. The elaborate scheme propounded by secretary of State Sir Edwin Montague and Lord

been embodied in a bill to which the

the Joint Committee before mentioned, which has to obtain the views of the

the idea of inserting the Committee's recommendations in the bill. Numdeputations, representing varied interests, religious and political, officials and commercial men, both European and Indian, came especially from India to give evidence. Their opinions differed considerably, but they generally agreed that some measure of reform was necessary. The Indians have been endeavoring to impress the Committee with the necessity of liberalizing the central Government more than the bill proposes. Objection was raised to retention of full control over fiscal policy by the Government in London. Indian opinion, backed by eminent white educationists, does not see eye to eye with the Government.

Indians desire is that secondary and higher education should come within the province of the latter, instead of being controlled by the provincial Legislatures. A large body of Indian opinion favors the selection of provincial Governors from prominent men in England and as it is understood that Indians regard the prospects of liberalization of the bill more favorably than when the Committee began its labors.

Where Baby's Talc Goes---

No Wonder Baby Couldn't Find His

COLGATE'S TALC POWDER

It is so soothing, so cooling, so comfort-giving, everybody "borrows" baby's Talc. Father, mother, sister, brother—all are guilty—and no wonder!

There is no finer Talc made than Colgate's. It soothes and comforts the skin; protects it from the sun and wind. It refreshes after exercise removing hot weather stickiness and making summer dressing comfortable.

Remember, whatever price you pay you cannot get a better Talc than Colgate's.

The Vital Importance of the 10.54 p.c. BORIC ACID in COLGATE'S Talc Powder

Boric Acid—the mild, efficient antiseptic—is most important in talc for the baby. Without a sufficient quantity, any talcum powder lacks a great essential. Analysis shows Colgate's Talc to contain 10.54 p.c. BORIC ACID. Of five other Talcum Powders analysed, none contained over 4 p.c. Boric Acid.

Therefore, insist on Colgate's. Use it; and use it often! On Display Today.

No Expression in the Eyes.

Quite as Much in Those of Glass as in the Natural Ones, is Recent Assertion.

A writer in the London Chronicle asserts that the human eye never changes its expression, and no doubt he is correct in that assertion. We may take it for granted, if he is just a writer, that he never discovered this for himself, but is merely recording a fact that has been demonstrated by scientific observers. The eye apparently, expresses a variety of emotions and writers as a class are continually recording these changing expressions with all the adjectival wealth they can command. The heroes, heroines and villains of fiction are always registering emotions with their eyes, and when you read the convincing descriptions you simply have to believe them. What is more, any day at the movies you can see the heroes, heroines and villains actually performing these stunts with their eyes. You don't have to take the words of authors for it; the movie actors furnish the Q. E. D.

So what is the use of contradicting facts that are universally recognized? Most of us meet and talk with several dozen persons every day, and we pass hundreds of others in the streets. If you observe the eyes of any of those persons you cannot fail to note that they reveal one or another mental or emotional state. The eyes are cold, indifferent, questioning, melancholy, petulant, mischievous, mildly amused or what not, as the case may be. They also reflect boldness, timidity, self-assurance, diffidence, coquetry, and a variety of dominant temperamental attributes.

However, we are told that the eyes never behave in any such fashion, and we are forced to believe it. The eyes themselves are incapable of emotional change. Novelists are always having eyes "flash with rage" and all that sort of thing, and most of us are convinced that we have frequently seen eyes flash. But no rage or emotion of any sort can change the glistering of the eye. The flashing or glistering of the eye depends wholly upon reflected light. That light is reflected from two places, the pupil and the white, and neither of these brightnesses is governed by the mental or emotional state. The effect of the changing expressions of the eye is really given by the various flexing of the muscles in the flesh surrounding the eye and by the eyelids. The flashing effect is undoubtedly produced by a wider opening of the lids, which exposes more of the white for light reflection. In a "twinkling" eye it is not the eye but the lids and the surrounding muscles that really twinkle. As a matter of fact, a first-class glass eye would appear to be just as expressive emotionally as a natural one.—F. H. Young, in Providence Journal.

Blood and Thunder.

Are "Penny Dreadfuls" Mischievous? "I believe my son's unlawful escapades are a spontaneous psychological phenomenon caused by reading cheap spurious literature such as "Deadwood Dick," "Sexton Blake," and penny dreadfuls." Thus pleaded a father in the Courts recently for his errant child, and how many fathers are there who would not endorse his statement? The harm effected by the penny "blood" is supposed to be on a par with that caused by the "movies," which feature kindred subjects.

Only Paper Covers are "Trashy."

On inquiring of a fond parent the type of literature he would ban as mischievous, it will be found that in the majority of cases only paper covers are "trashy;" books in boards pass without comment, which is indeed a sorry compliment to many of our present-day authors. The aim of the writer of the school story, the detective yarn, and the exciting adventure is identical, whether he is published in a six shilling edition de luxe, or in a paper cover; he attempts to evolve a plot which will grip from the first sentence of the first page to the last sentence on the final page, to stimulate the imagination by exciting episodes vividly depicted in telling language so that the reader is lost to his surroundings, and acts alternately the part of a villain or hero, his mind responding to the hopes and fears they undergo. To say that "Sexton Blake" produced a greater effect on the youthful reader than "Sherlock Holmes" is to say that the creator of Sexton Blake is a better artist than Conan Doyle.

The Luck and Ill-Luck of Valuable Books.

In the early days of the last century, there was a canon of Durham Cathedral who had a charming wife, domesticated, an excellent mother, and an ornament to local society. One rainy day she was heard to remark to her nurse, "The children seem so restless and ill at ease at being indoors. Send them down to the library this afternoon. They do so enjoy cutting out the pictures from the books."

Priciless "Rubbish."

There are many still like this good lady. The custodian of a public library told me that not long since a parson's wife called upon him one day with an old brown-paper parcel which she wanted to sell to him. When he unwrapped it he found priceless examples of Caxton and Kynkyn de Worde, unique specimens collected by her husband, who had lately died. She knew he was a lover of books and an authority on them, but she herself "cared for none of these things," and regarded them as so much rubbish, to be cleared away as soon as might be.

In a Corner Cupboard.

Cotthey's made a famous discovery in the 'eighties, when a member of the firm went to Scotland to make a selection for sale from Lord Hopetoun's library in Scotland. The work had been done, and the expert was in the hall preparing to depart, when a small corner cupboard attracted his attention. He investigated it, and found there a copy of the Mazarin Bible which, incomplete though it was, eventually fetched between £2,000 and £3,000. In another country-house library only three years ago a Caxton was discovered hidden away. The title-page had gone, and no one suspected what it was.

Hidden For 300 Years.

One of the most interesting fragments rescued from neglect to find a home in the British Museum is part of the uncompleted first edition of Tyndale's New Testament. It was in the Press of Peter Quentel at Cologne in 1525, and 3,000 copies of the first ten sheets had been printed, when the editors were obliged to flee to Worms to escape persecution and begin their work afresh. This was the very first attempt ever made to utilize the printing press as a means Filming the Earth's Secrets.

How the Kinema is Assisting the Explorer.

Sir Francis Younghusband, who has just been elected President of the Royal Geographical Society, is a strong believer in the value of the aeroplane as a means of reconnaissance in exploration. In a recent interview he stated that the Royal Geographical Society was already considering the possibilities of aircraft assistance in exploring Mount Everest, where there is still scope for much work to be done. So far the face has not been explored, though this has been attempted; but reliable photographs taken from aircraft would be extremely valuable.

How much more valuable would be a cinematograph record of unknown tracts of land, depicting in motion the movements of the natives and the habits of animals to be found in these little-known regions?

No modern expedition of discovery is considered complete without its "official cinematographer." The films obtained provide definite proof of an explorer's achievements. Everyone is familiar with the stirring adventures of Captain Scott in the Antarctic, and of the many remarkable phenomena encountered by him during his perilous sojourn in the frozen South.

Records of a Wilderness.

Now, the story of the cinematograph in connection with exploration is truly a remarkable one, containing sufficient details to fill a volume of engrossing interest. But little is known, for instance, of the adventures of Mr. H. Hayden, who spent several months in the Northern Territory of South Australia, taking cinema films at the instigation of the late Sir George Reid, High Commissioner for Australia, and the Minister for the Interior of Melbourne. This Northern Territory remains to this day a geographical enigma. Practically nothing has been learned of vast stretches of this region since Burke and Willis crossed it on their disastrous voyage of forty years ago. A few vast ranches are scattered over a great silent land of tropical forest, wide grass stretches, and bird-covered lagoons. To the rest of Australia this Northern Territory is a hinterland of romance. From time to time stockmen on the overland route enter Queensland from it. The few stories that have been extracted from these silent and saturnine men have fired the imaginations of the residents in

Among Wild Tribes.

I have received a very interesting account from an American correspondent of the wonderful results that have been achieved among a number of wild Philippine tribes by the use of motion pictures. Proceeding on the theory that a clean environment is needed to make a clean people, efforts have been directed to teach the wild tribes the benefits of sanitary villages. It has been difficult to communicate the desired lessons by word of mouth alone. It is also difficult to put the principles of sanitary science into the language of wild people, and here the moving picture has proved a great value. The natives of the non-Christian tribes have lived in appalling squalor, but when shown pictures of better conditions contrasted with the old, have manifested a most encouraging disposition to profit by the lesson.

A Triumph For the Kinematograph.

Naturally, the pictures were not devoted entirely to demonstrating the value of sanitation. Scenes from native and foreign life were shown, the novelty of the kinema apparatus itself enlisting the interest of the Aborigines. The result is that now agriculture is being very widely developed; unspeakably filthy towns have been made clean and sanitary, and the morals of the people vastly improved. They are learning to abandon human and animal sacrifices, and numerous schools have been established and are now in successful operation. The old sharply-drawn tribal lines are rapidly disappearing. Bontoc, Igorota, Ifugaos, and Kalingas now visit each other's territory. This is indeed a triumph for the kinematograph, the possibilities of which, as an educational medium, are limitless. What the future will bring forth as a result of the co-operation of the kinematograph with the aeroplane is at present beyond our imagination.

Apologies That Required

It is natural for a compulsory penitent to tone down his confession and, possible, to turn it into an offence. The story goes that in bygone days a certain member of Parliament—the story is usually told of Sheridan—was ordered to kneel on the floor of the House and apologize to the speaker. It was noticed that on rising he had his knees ostentatiously, and audibly declared that he "had never sat in so dirty a House!"

"Withdraw!"

Another member once let his tongue run away with him, and blurted out: "The honourable member opposite has not the manners of a pig!" The inevitable "Withdraw!" came from the "honourable member's" friends. He did so. "I withdraw and apologize, and beg to say that the honourable member has manners of a pig." That was certainly an apology that required another. The same can be said of the local offering of a youngster named Redde, who was either ingenious or

Apologies That Required Apologizing For.

It is natural for a compulsory penitent to tone down his confession and, if possible, to turn it into an offence. The story goes that in bygone days a certain member of Parliament—the story is usually told of Sheridan—was ordered to kneel on the floor of the House and apologize to the speaker. It was noticed that on rising he used his knees ostentatiously, and audibly declared that he "had never knelt in so dirty a House!"

"Withdraw!"

Another member once let his tongue run away with him, and blurted out: "The honourable member opposite has not the manners of a pig!" The inevitable "Withdraw! Withdraw!" came from the "honourable member's" friends. He did so. "I withdraw and apologize, and beg to say that the honourable member has the manners of a pig." That was certainly an apology that required another. The same can be said of the local offering of a youngster named Freddie, who was either ingenious or disconcertingly ingenious. "Why, Freddie," exclaimed his mother, "aren't you ashamed to call auntie stupid? Go to her at once and tell her you are very sorry." "Auntie," said the little fellow a few moments later, "I'm awfully sorry you are so stupid."

The stupidity was on the other side in the following instance. An officer whose battalion was quartered in Ireland obtained leave to go snipe-shooting. Gaily he departed, found all the sport he had expected, and with a happy blend of gratitude and foresight sent to the battalion a handsome present of birds. The mess was very pleased, and wired back at once to thank him. In due course a letter arrived from the absent sportsman explaining that while he was delighted to hear the birds had arrived safely and were appreciated, he hoped they would not wire again unless for a matter of urgency, since owing to inaccessibility of his shooting quarters, he had had to pay three shillings and sixpence postage on their telegram of thanks. Distressed to learn of the annoyance caused by their action, the mess decided to apologize, and forthwith wired back: "Sorry!"

That case showed want of wit, but the next and last will indicate no lack. A Frenchman was summoned before the judge for insulting a policeman by calling him a monkey. He had to pay a fine and apologize. Before leaving the court he asked the judge: "If I may not call a policeman a monkey, may I be permitted to call a monkey a policeman?" Certainly," said his worship, "I see no objection to that." "Thank you, sire," said he; then, turning to the policeman and making a ceremonious bow, said, "Good morning, policeman!"

Writers and Handwriting.

It is interesting to note in the handwriting of authors how its appearance frequently expresses in some subtle manner the satisfaction or dissatisfaction they feel with the work on which they are engaged.

Carlyle.

Carlyle wrote a patient, crabbed, biting hand, sufficiently expressive of the character of the "dour" philosopher. A friend thus aptly describes it:

"Eccentric and spiteful little flourishes dart about his manuscript in various odd ways, sometimes evidently intended as a cross to a 't,' but constantly recolling in an absurd fashion, as if attempting a calligraphical somersault, and destroying the entire word from which they sprang. Some letters slope one way and some another, some are halt, maimed, and crippled, and all are blind." Carlyle used to enjoy a story told him by his London publishers. A Scotch compositor had just been added to the printing-house staff, on the strength of a recommendation from the Edinburgh Review. His first copy was some of Carlyle's manuscript. "What!" he fairly shouted, "have you got that man here? I fled from Scotland to get away from him!"

Balzac.

Balzac's handwriting was infinitely worse than Carlyle's. Very few printers could read it, and those who could only did so on the express stipulation that they should not work at it for more than an hour at a time. What was worse still, his proof-sheets came back still more illegible than the original copy. A French writer describes them as "sending out from each printed word a dash of ink like a rocket, finally breaking into a fiery ring of phrases, epithets, and nouns. There were interlined, crossed, written upside-down, mixed, interlaced, and knotted, the whole forming a word puzzle which made even the stoutest compositors quail."

Thackeray.

Thackeray's handwriting, on the other hand, was a marvel of neatness. He is said to have stated that if all other means of earning his own living failed, he would be able to write the Lord's Prayer on his thumbnail. His usual writing was so small that only eyes of microscopic power could with ease decipher it. Charles Dickens wrote a much less beautiful hand, but equally minute. He had a habit, too, of writing with blue ink on blue paper, a propensity which caused many a compositor to hurt himself at his head.

To Raise All Our Boys to be Soldiers.

"Who's Prussian now?" is a typical, if not a frequent rejoinder to Secretary Baker's plea for universal military training. But friends of the Administration point out that the project demands comparatively little, merely requiring eligible youths in their nineteenth year to join the colors for a period of three months. The scheme is embodied in a bill prepared by the General Staff, and the same bill calls for a regular army of twenty-one divisions—peace strength, 510,000; war strength, 1,250,000; annual expenses, $900,000,000. Not unnaturally, this has roused the pacifists and radicals to a furious pitch of resentment. "Militarism!" they cry, and jeer the "new-world order" that promised disarmament and yet would "soothe the nation" and "prepare for a new Armageddon." Thus another item in the creed of "holy idealism" is cast into the garbage-can, where the "fourteen points" now having their final resting place," declares the New York Call, continuing:

"Illusions go up in smoke every day, and this is the latest one. There isn't even the excuse of the menace of a German military power. Germany has been strip of her weapons to such an extent that some Allied diplomats have expressed the fear that the force left her is hardly sufficient for internal police service. Yet it was this disarming of the ruling classes of Germany which was to lead to a general scaling down of her military and naval powers of the Allied nations. Not one of them has adopted the policy of scaling down. They have all proceeded to increase this power, the United States among the rest."

Decried by pacifists on the one hand, universal military training is as loudly decried by National Guardsmen on the other. Recently the National Guard Association of the United States dispatched a telegram to Secretary Baker denouncing the Chamberlain-Kahn Bill—another project to enlarge the Army and provide for universal training. Said the message:

"The Chamberlain-Kahn Bill destroys and places a stigma upon the citizen soldiery which bore the brunt of fighting as shock troops and creates a centralized military oligarchy with dangerous potentialities for political abuse and the destruction of the freedom which is vital to the existence of the country."
