CAUTION.

The Cornwall Manufacturing Company have pleasure in intimating the complete restoration of their works at Cornwall which are now in full operation, producing large quantities of White and Grey Blankets, and Heavy Medium Class Tweeds.
They regret, however, having again to call attention of the public to the continuance of the disreputable practice of importing English Blankets and selling them as Canadian. These Blankets are made largely of Shoddy and Cotton Waste, with a small percentage of pure Wool, and though slightly in appearance, closely imitating the Cornwall Blankets, and ticketed "Canadian Manufacture," have neither warm nor wear, but can be sold at a lower price than the Cornwall Blankets (which are made of Pure Wool) can produce for.

The public are cautioned against this attempted deception, and respectfully informed that the name of the CORNWALL MANUFACTURING COMPANY is printed on the ticket of every blanket made by them.

THE WESTERN FAIR.—The attendance at the Fair in London on Wednesday was very large, about 20,000 people being on the ground. The weather was beautiful and everything passed off pleasantly. To-day an immense crowd is expected to witness the arrival and reception of the Governor-General.

An inquest was held by Coroner C. Tait Scott, on the 7th inst., on the body of James McKay, an old resident of Turnberry. It appears from the evidence that deceased came to his death by falling off a truck wagon, which broke the spinal cord of his neck. A verdict of accidental death was returned.

The most remarkable engineering feat now in progress is to be the crossing of the Andes by the Lima Oroya Railroad. The mountain chain will be crossed at an altitude of 15,000 feet by a tunnel 3,000 feet in length. The grades are the steepest known on any ordinary railway. The workmen employed are Cholo Indians, the only operatives who can endure for a prolonged period the variegated atmosphere at this great elevation.

MARKHAM BABY SHOW.—This wonderful new feature in agricultural fairs, that was engrafted into the show proper much to the disgust of some of the directors, and with but a passive consent of any, was the most successful adjunct yet introduced. Fully $100 was added to the funds of the society by tickets sold at the gate. It proved a decided success. There were thirty-two entries made, and more offered, and the children shown were very fine.

CUNNINGHAM VS. ALLEN.—This was a case tried at last Division Court by John Thomas Cunningham, of Guelph, against the heirs of the late Michael Allen to recover $15, the amount of a promissory note received with out giving any consideration therefor. A criminal prosecution was laid against the plaintiff for the manner in which these notes were obtained. The prosecution was abandoned in consideration of Cunningham giving up the whole of the notes. All were delivered up except the $15 one sued upon. For the defence it was contended that the note was included in the settlement, and His Honor non-suited the plaintiff, which she failed in his scheme. Mr. J. P. McMillan acted for defendant.

BIGAMY.—A brakeman named Williams on the Great Western Railway, has been playing bigamy. He first arrived in this country about twenty years ago, but has subsequently paid a visit to the old country to see his wife and daughter, whom he had left behind. Shortly after he returned to Canada and married another woman in this country, with whom he has been living in matrimonial blessedness. The day before yesterday wife No. 1, accompanied by her daughter, a tall, fine looking young woman arrived, and at once proceeded to the husband's home in Hamilton; where they were perfectly established to find that another person claimed possession of and right to the husband. However, the mother and daughter remained there over night, sleeping together up stairs, while Williams remained down stairs with the second wife. In the morning he made himself scarce and cannot be found, owing to a dread of the first or second wife taking legal proceedings against him. He has succeeded since he came there in accumulating considerable property.

The Missouri Murder.

Coyle Acquitted.

The trial of Coyle was resumed on Wednesday morning; the interest in the case was unabated, and notwithstanding the court was crowded throughout the day; several females being present. Several witnesses were examined, after which Mr. Glass addressed the jury for the prisoner. He gave an able resume of the testimony on both sides. The learned counsel repudiated strongly the theory that there had been a criminal intimacy between the prisoner and Phoebe Campbell. The Crown had not made out that Coyle was the man who bought the pistol. They had in fact, proved exactly the opposite. The learned counsel then referred to the statement sworn to by Phoebe Campbell, recently published in the Morning Herald, and he wished to know why that statement had not been brought forward when the witness was examined. He alluded to the frequency of cases in which confessions had been made by perfectly innocent persons. He cited the case of Coleman at the Kingston assizes in 1848 or 1849, where the prisoner was arrested, tried and executed for murdering a woman, and the admission on which he was convicted had been made while the prisoner was intoxicated. Sometime after the execution of Coleman, his innocence was ascertained.

As to the murder he had three theories. The fact that Priestly stopped at Davis' house the night of the murder was most suspicious circumstance; public feeling was so strong against them that on the morning of the funeral they were arrested and lodged in goal. He stated that there was strong ground for suspecting John McWain of complicity in the crime. This was the second theory. He described the late Phoebe Campbell as a most remarkable woman. She was possessed of iron nerves and a vast amount of secretiveness. Such a woman was found close to the body of the murdered man; and was it to be wondered at that she went to the scaffold with nervous so strangely fine? She had heard him state that money was the cause of the act, and there was every probability such was the case. He then alluded strongly to the note held by George Campbell against his father, and which the latter had persuaded him to give to him. This was the third theory. The learned counsel concluded a powerful speech of two hours and twenty minutes' duration by appealing strongly to the feelings of the jury, urging them to act strictly in accordance with the obligation they had taken, and do what their consciences told them was just.

Mr. McKenzie then addressed the jury on behalf of the Crown. He stated that his Loanshire then charged the jury, going over the various points in the testimony with the greatest care.

After about an hour's absence from Court, the jury returned and, amid a breathless silence, the clerk asked the momentous question of the jury, "do you find the prisoner guilty?" The foreman replied NOT GUILTY.

His Lordship, after asking the Sheriff if there was any other charge against the prisoner, and receiving a negative reply, said: "Coyle, the jury have taken a most merciful view of your case. I have one word to say to you. You are a young man; BEWARE!"

The prisoner was then discharged.

NEWS ITEMS

The following notice is posted conspicuously in a newspaper office out west:—"Shut the door, and as soon as you have done talking business, serve your month in the same way."

The Meaford Monitor says that folks south think we can't raise peaches up here, but we can do that surprisingly well, as is proved by the fact that Mr. James Stewart grew some in his garden in this village this year, many of which measured full 8 1/2 inches in circumference. They were, without exception, the finest we have ever seen.

RARE DISCOVERY.—Dr. A. M. Ross, of Toronto has a well-preserved tooth of the extinct American elephant, or mammoth, which was found, together with a large number of other bones of the same animal, in a mound of light clay loam on the property of Mr. B. Howden, Millbrook. The tooth is in a very excellent state of preservation; it has a grinding surface of seven and a half inches in length by three and a half inches in breadth, and measures nineteen inches in circumference. This great mammoth "differed from the elephant now living by its much greater size, and also by its being covered with a coat of thick coarse hair and wool.

The horse Caractacus has been sold by his English owner, Mr. Sewing, to the Russian government, for $2,700, and the London Sportsman remarks: "The victory of Caractacus in the Derby will not be readily forgotten, and it is something for Mr. Sewing to boast of, that with a horse trained on a common near London, stabled at the back of a public house, and ridden by a common stable lad, he should have won the great prize that Lord Derby and Lord Grosvenor had, for nearly half a century, vainly endeavored to secure, after spending fortunes in the attempt."

TYPHOID FEVER.—"The time is coming," says a distinguished physician, "when it will be as disgraceful to have the typhoid fever as it is to have the itch." Everybody ought to know that this fearful sickness is directly caused by taking into the body excremental matters. These almost always declare their presence to the olfactory nerve, and the instant they are detected, measures should be taken for their suppression.—fresh earth is a complete disinfectant, and in the country is cheapest. Next to this is copperas water. Let it be sprinkled about drains and sewers, left standing in shallow earthen dishes in sick rooms, and all unpleasant odors will be quenched. Care must be taken in using it not to touch any garment that will stain. Lime and plaster of Paris are excellent absorbents, carbolic acid and chloride of lime will sweeten the foulest gutter. With one or all of these resources at command there is no excuse for vile odors. Coffee is a deodorizer but not a disinfectant. A handful parched and ground, when thrown on a hot shovel, will quickly remove distant smells, but will not neutralize their poison. Great care should be used, especially during hot weather, as to the water one drinks. A few years since a picnic party found some very cool, clear and fine tasting water in an old well near their lunch ground. Most of them drank freely of the water. Every one of them was prostrated with typhoid fever, and only two or three recovered. On investigation the skeleton of a lamb was found in the bottom of the well. All surface water should be carefully obtained from a safe source, and made that no sewerage is contained in the cooling draught. Sleeping rooms should be daily aired, bed and body linen changed frequently, and the sun permitted to search and cleanse those apartments in daily use. No pigs, or other holes or open drains should be permitted around our dwellings, for deadly are the subtle emanations that rise from them.

Coroner's Inquest.

On Wednesday evening, Dr. Herod, Coroner, summoned a Jury at half-past seven o'clock, in the Police Court, to hold an inquest on the body of a male child which had been found in the afternoon, by some boys playing, in the vicinity of some lumber piled up in the rear of Knox Church. There was a large attendance of the public—principally consisting of young men and boys. The following jury were sworn:—Messrs. George Howard, (foreman) J D Hutton, Samuel Hodgskin, Wm. Gausby, Chas. Pettiford, Samuel Moffatt, Ernest Hornbostle, Peter Dugan, J H Jacobus, Jos. McGarr, John Kirkham, Wesley Marston, John Crowe, Wm Lawrence, and R. C. Spurin.

The jury having viewed the body, at the instigation of the Coroner, who briefly stated the circumstances of the discovery and the necessity of a post mortem examination being held, called the following witnesses:

William McLroy, aged 10 years, (who, however, from not satisfying the coroner of his correct apprehension of the nature of an oath, was not sworn) said that he, Arthur Marston and William Howard were playing together about four o'clock on Wednesday afternoon, when William Howard, who was hiding, amongst the lumber, came running to tell him that there were some clothes lying there covered over with blood; they unwrapped the clothes and found a dead body; the clothes consisted of a sheet and pillow case; as then told Mr. Marston of it.

Arthur Marston, aged nine years, was also called and corroborated the evidence of previous witness.

The Coroner having intimated that he had no further witnesses to produce at present, adjourned the inquest for further information, due intimation to be given when it would be resumed. Dr. Keating will meanwhile undertake the inquest.

The body was apparently beginning to decompose rapidly, if one might judge from the somewhat offensive odour that was continually being wafted into the Police Court from the adjoining room where the body lay, but all objections were completely annihilated by the emphatic professional declaration that "it was a good healthy smell."

No clue has as yet been ascertained as to who is the perpetrator of the at least, grossly unmaudlin crime. Meanwhile the detectives are at work investigating the case, and it is to be hoped that their efforts will be successful.

After the adjournment of the inquest, Mr. Little, resident somewhere in the vicinity of Holliday's Brewery, stated that on Tuesday night, about 10 o'clock he met a woman very shrewdly clad, and carrying a bundle, and the circumstances of the case at the time and much more strongly now, excited his suspicions, but whether this slight clue will be of any practical value remains to be seen. The only direct trace of the crime is to be found in the name "W. A. Jones" on the sheet in which the body was wrapped. Meanwhile, we wait any further developments.

Since writing the above we learn that Chief Constable Kelly has discovered the owner of the linen, and many other particulars in connection with the matter, which it would be injudicious prematurely to disclose.

South Grenville Nomination.

The nomination for the Local House took place at Prescott on Wednesday. After Dr. Scott, the returning officer, made an explanation of the last election being declared void, Christopher E. Fraser was nominated by Mr. Wm. Patrick, Mayor, seconded by James Miller, of Spenceville; and Mr. James Cairns, of Mr. Ellis, seconded by A. Carmichael, of Spenceville. These being the only persons nominated they respectively came forward and asked the assistance of the electors of the riding in a short speech of half an hour each. Both felt confident.

On Tuesday the postal treaty between the United States and the German Empire came into operation. Seventy-one cents gold, has been fixed as the value of the German thaler.

Opening of the Intercolonial Railway in Nova Scotia.

AMHERST, N. S., Oct. 8. An excursion left Halifax yesterday morning for Amherst, the first of the kind to go over the Intercolonial Railway.

Justice Young and Hon Joseph Howe, the latter bound to Ottawa, were among the party, and most of the others were Halifax journalists invited by the railway commissioners. Mr. J. McMillan and a number of others joined the party. The road in the vicinity of Truro is complete and apparently well built. Further on it is only partially ballasted. At Folly River the train had to wait for the rail to be laid over the bridge which is 900 feet long, the largest of the kind in the Nova Scotia part of the road. The train passed over the bridge and proceeded to Folly Mountain, and there had to leave cars and walk two miles over the road where the rails had not been laid to Folly Lake where another train awaited us. It is expected that the "missing link" will be supplied so that we can proceed through without change of cars. There is still a large amount of work to be done before the road can be opened for traffic from Halifax to St. John; probably it will not be opened before the first of November.

THE WESTERN FAIR.

Dissatisfaction with the Management.

On Wednesday the Londoners had a good attendance, some 12,000 tickets having been sold. We regret to find that considerable trouble is being experienced by the management in certain classes. For instance, in Sheep, as there was no class for Lincolns set apart on the prize list, some difficulty occurred on their being brought out against the Leicester. The Leicester men complained loudly of this, and refused to enter the lists against the Lincolns; so it was arranged that a special class with special prizes should be given to the Lincolns.

Then, again, in reference to Sewing Machines, the Managers adopted the plan, at the suggestion of several of the manufacturers, of giving no prizes for the machines; but only for the work done on them. This it is contended is simply a test of the skill of the workmen, and the consequence is that the Appleton, Raymond, C. S. Williams, Wanzar, Gardner, and Guelph Companies have all signed a protest against the absurdity of the regulations adopted as a test. The dispute remains unsettled as yet.

In the live stock classes generally, while the entries are more numerous than previously, yet it is asserted a great many exhibitors fail to put in an appearance of their animals in the ring when called before the judges. We observe, among the exhibitors, the name of J. M. Jones, in connection with the Intercolonial Railway.

The Escurial.

The Escurial, lately burned, is described as a famous monastery of New Castile, in the province of Madrid, and situated 30 miles north-west of the town of that name. This solitary pile of granite has been so called in consequence of the work done at the time of its erection surpassed every building of the kind in size and magnificence. It owes its origin (at least so it is said) to an inspired vow made by Philip II. during the battle of St. Quentin. On that occasion, he implored the aid of St. Lorenzo, on whose day the battle was fought; and vowed that should victory be granted to him, he would dedicate a monastery to the saint. The Escurial is built in form of a gridiron, in allusion to the instrument of St. Lorenzo's martyrdom, and forms a huge rectangular parallelogram, 740 feet from north to south, and 580 feet from east to west, and divided into long courts, which indicate the interstices of the bars. Towers at each end of this parallelogram represent the feet of the gridiron, which is supposed to be lying upside down; and from the centre of one of the sides a range of buildings, extending to the royal residence, and representing the handle. The Escurial was begun in 1569, finished in 1584, and was intended to serve as a palace, mausoleum, and monastery. It has a splendid chapel of three naves, 320 feet long, and 930 in height to the top of the apse. The Pantheon, or royal tomb, is a magnificently decorated octagon chamber, 36 feet in diameter by 38 feet high, in the eight sides of which there are numerous black marble sarcophagi. Kings only and the mothers of kings are buried here. The Escurial is an immense building; it is stated it has 14,000 doors and 11,000 windows, and its cost was 6,000,000 ducats. Its library, previous to the sack of the Escurial by the French in 1808, contained 90,000 printed and 4,800 MS. volumes, mainly treasures of Arabic literature, of which a catalogue, by the name of the Bibliotheca Arabico-Hispanica (2 vols., Madrid, 1760-1770). They were, however, at that time removed to Madrid; and on being sent back to the Escurial it was discovered that the library consisted only of 20,000 volumes—a third of the whole being lost. The French also plundered the place of its valuable collection of coins, medals, and pictures. A traveller who visited the Escurial some years ago wrote that "it was a mere shadow of the past," and is only saved from going to ruin by great efforts of money, which are occasionally made to keep it in repair.

The following are the permanent Board of Directors of the Mail: Messrs. John Carling, T N Gibbs, Angus Morrison, J G Worris and J C Paterson.

Mr. McKellar Vindicated.

The Mail and all the smaller Ministerial papers have been employing their spare time and space for the last few weeks, in trying to fasten serious charges of fraud and dishonesty on the Hon. Mr. McKellar in connection with the Elgin Association.

But if Mr. McKellar has preferred to keep a wise silence in reference to these attacks, another gentleman has come forward to vindicate his public and private character, and to the satisfaction of every man, who believes a plain, straightforward and truthful statement.

What, our readers will ask, was Mr. McKellar's share in the transaction? Simply this, that when in London he assisted Mr. King in his arrangements, but he never controlled, used or expended a single cent of the $8000 raised; moreover, Mr. King states in his letter that this money due the English gentlemen who loaned their provision to the working of the mills, the agents employed to manage them proved faithless, the scheme failed, and in addition Mr. King last $15000 of his own money.

The Foster Brother; —OR— The Orphan of the Wreck.

CHAPTER XX.
All, however, seemed secure. No sound of footsteps reached his ear—no dark form could be descried moving in the distance. He therefore boldly quitted the shelter of the trees which lined the brow of the slope, and took his way in the direction of the park.

It was not without some bitter sensations that he went skulking along like a guilty thing—moving in that cautious, stealthy way which they only practice who are intent on some unworthy or criminal enterprise. His open, manly nature revolted from the necessity which compelled him to adopt the motions of a culprit, and he felt more than ever incensed against the man whose pride and passion placed him in such a position. But these stern feelings were soon swallowed up by thoughts of Lilius, whose dear form he expected soon to behold.

It wanted nearly an hour to the time appointed when he drew near to the arboreal. Of course, Lilius was not there, and utter silence reigned around.

He entered and set down on the rustic seat. Oh, how vividly did he then recall the scene with Lilius before the Captain came and broke so violently on their dream of bliss. He dwelt on every word, every look, every passionate sob, every affection-breathing sigh, till the sad and happy reflections made the solitude insupportable, and he went forth to meet Lilius on her way.

He had reached the end of the clump of trees, where he had a view of a large open space of the park in the direction of the mansion-house, and as he stood there hesitating whether it might be prudent for him to advance, he was startled to see two forms emerge from under the trees on the other side of the open space, and come slowly forward in his direction.

His first thought was that it was Captain Gibson and Nathan Garrett, and the necessity of flight flashed upon him. But as he continued to gaze, the appearance of the forms slowly dissipated this first idea. They were too slender and too close together to be the Captain and the factor. He waited therefore, and steadily gazed as they came near, and soon he discerned that one of them was a female, that the arm of her companion was passed round her waist, and that as they moved slowly forward they were engaged in earnest and absorbing conversation.

"One of the servants and her lover," thought George, "and coming towards the arboreal too. How unfortunate. This will prevent our meeting there. What is to be done?"

Uncertain how to act, George was on the point of withdrawing into a clump of trees, when the idea struck him that the form of the female had a resemblance to Lilius herself. He gazed again—first under the conviction that this must be a mistake, for how would she be there with a companion, that companion a young man, and with his arm round her? No—no, it could not be Lilius, and yet—good heaven—the nearer they came the greater the resemblance grew. It was no mistake, it was Lilius, and she clung to her companion's arm with a gesture of fondest affection.

Horror of horrors, they pause—he bends towards her; she lifts her face to his, and they kiss each other.

With a hollow groan, George staggered back against the wire fence, and incapable of motion, he stood there waiting their coming.

The Zulus of South Africa are evidently a wide-awake people. They are not entirely ignorant of "corners," "a la Wall street." The Zulus are strongly matrimonial in their tendencies, and get as many wives as they have means to purchase; and unlike many in civilized countries, they buy not with gold, or houses, or estates, but with cows. Twenty thirty, fifty or a hundred cows are given for a wife, according as the girl is young, beautiful, or otherwise. One bold Zulu operator with large capital once bought up all the young and desirable girls in the market of the whole region and compelled all who wanted to buy to pay him most exorbitant prices for wives. Of course there was much distress, and this disastrous state of things attracted the attention of their government, and the recurrence of it was prevented by a law which fixes the legal price of a wife to be only ten cows. No man can collect more than this by law. He may receive fifty if he will, but he can force no man to pay more than ten.

After the first of November no French citizen will be permitted to enter Germany without a passport.

By the accidental flooding of a coal mine near Wrexham, Wales, five hundred miners have been thrown out of employment.
