obtained an interview with Greely, who admits that Henry had a military execution on June 6. Henry was detected steeling a limited supply of food apportioned out to the survivors as early as March. Greely said it became necessary in order to keep ap discipline to inform Henry that he would be shot if the practice continued, and that a similar fate would be meted out to any other member of the party detected in a like crime. If Henry had been permitted to continue stealing, the balance of the party would surely be starved to death and Henry alone survived. In spite of these warnings, Henry was again detected stealing provisions. Among the food taken were two pounds of bacon, the eating of which made him sick. A search was instituted, when it was found that Henry

As to the alleged cannibalism, Greely says if there was anything of the kind it mast have been individual acts, and not general. Nothing of the kind came under Greely's personal observation. Greely forwarded to the secretary of war a detailed report of the Henry execution over a week ago. James Mooney, Buffalo, ex-president of the league, was recommended as temporary chairman and elected without opposition. Mooney congratulated the convention upon the large and intelligent number of people present, and said it was another evidence that the Irish people of this great republic will never cease their efforts until their native land occupies a position as one of the nations of the earth.

Sexton, the Redmonds and Mrs. Parnell attended the evening session. They were enthusiastically received. Sexton said neither time, distance, circumstances nor ealamity would be able to break the solidarity of the Irish race. 'It was this obstinate adherence of men and women of the rights of their race that is making us in Ireland feel that it is no longer with hope, but with absolute confidence, that we regard the future."

EDITOR WORLD: In yesterday's sporting columns of your paper I was surprised to read a notice relating to the financial aspect of the Wanderers' bicycle club, stating that they have found themselves in difficulties, and that they would in all difficulties, and that they would in all probability "pull through." The cause is explained by the writer as being due to non-p-yment of yearly fees.

The whole notice is a very cowardly attack on a club whose name is so well known throughout Canada. The club is in a flourishing condition financially, and has a surplus on hand which will compare favorably with any athletic club in the city. I am sure there have been no complaints from any one who has had any transactions with the club in a monetary way.

The writer is evidently one who is no man enough to sign his name, and takes a very mean way of letting the people know that for some reason he is antagonistic to a club which for a long time headed the list of the Canadian wheel association.

Denver.

The bishop of Rochester is about 50 years of age. He is of medium height, of rather slim build and appeared before his audience last night dressed in conventional broadcloth, cut in real English style. He wore patent leather shoes, and on each of the small fingers of his hands were immense gold rings. The front half of the head is bald, while the back is closely covered with iron grey hair, from which radiates two small lines of beard of the same color. His lordship is a younger son of the late Rev. Edward Thorold, and was born in Hougham June 13, 1823. He was educated at Queen's college, Oxford, and was ordained deacon in 1849, and priest in 1850, by the bishop of Manchester. He was appointed by the crown, 1857, to the rectory of St. Giles-inthe-Fields, a poor parish in the east of Denver.

of Manchester. He was appointed by the crown, 1857, to the rectory of St. Giles-in-the-Fields, a poor parish in the east of London. Here he became a total abstainer from all intoxicating drinks, and has remained so ever since. In 1867 he resigned St. Giles' in consequence of illness brought on by overwork, and in the same year became incumbent of Caryon chapel. Two years afterwards he was appointed by the queen to the vicarage of St. Pancras, London. In 1877 he was appointed by the pishopric of Rochester, and became the pishopric of Rochester, and became the sishopric of Rochester, and became the sis selsden park, Croyda, and the annual income is £3000. He is also provincial chaplain to the archbishop of Canterbury. The bishop has under him about 550 clergymen, and associated with these are a large number of lay helpers, his lordship making much use of them. Dr. Thorold is the author of a work on The Presence of Christ, which has gone through ten editions.

His lordship then came forward and was received with applause. He spoke in an easy conversational style for nearly an hour. After depicting the miseries attributable to strong drink among individuals, in families, in the state and nation, and even in the church of God, its lordship told something about the methods that were now being used in England to suppress the evil. "In the old country," he said, "the Church of England Temperance society was not formed hurriedly. The different convocations sat for months maturing a report. Canterbury presented a report first, which was followed by one from York. The society was then formed on the double basis of total abstinance and moderation. He was glad to have those associated with him who did not think they needed total abstination, but who were fond of great use to the temperance cause. They were use to the temperance cause. In his own diocese of Rochester, which was for the laiter in come was £700 annually. Temperance missionaries were employed at a saleary of £80 or £100 per annum. These missionaries visited the police courts in and made personal appeals to drunkards, which was found to work very well. He did not, however, insist that the system would do for Canada. These individual appeals often did more good than any amount of platform talk and temperance the tracts. They had also many auxiliary methods of helping the work, such as offee-taverns, etc.

His lordship then went on to compliment Canada on her advanced temperance legislation and said if they could get taverns closed on Sunday in England that is all they would ask for twenty years. He went on to advise his hearers not to proceed too hastily, and to work on the double basis—there was a great deal to be gained from the moderate drinkers, who would finally become total abstainers. Toleration above all things should be learned. His lordship concluded an interesting address by complimenting Bishop Sweatman on the latter's efforts in the temperance cause.

Mr. Graham followed and devoted himself principally to his labors in the United the crime. Consideration—A New Mode of Clean-ing the Streets Suggested.

The waterworks committee yesterday re amed business at the old stand after a month's vacation. The members on hand were Ald. Millichamp, McConnell, Walker, Sheppard, Adamson and Harvie.

They listened to the engineer's report, and agreed that open closets should be allowed under the departmental regulations;

ders should be asked for old brass now in stock.

They were informed that since July 28 new mains have been put down on Spadina avenue, Robert, Huron, Arthur, Herrick and Conway streets; that since the year opened it has cost $9400 to put in 1175 water services.

They were surprised and pained to learn that they have run through the year's appropriation except a balance of $4747, which will be needed for salaries and routine expenses. Money to cover debts maturing in the near future will have to be raised.

They appointed a sub-committee to act They appointed a sub-committee to act with the chairman in exploring the pumping house to see if a saving in running ex ing house to see if a saving in running expenses can be made.

They ordered the engineer to report on the feasibility of a stand pipe at the reser voir to strengthen the water pressure. The plan is Ald. Millichamp's. If adopted an iron pipe, into which water would be pumped direct, could be utilized to give the additional head in case of emergency.

Markets and Health Men. Ald. Carlyle, Harvie, Millichamp, Verell and Shaw were the members who gathered round the banners of the markets and health committee. They listened with attention to Ald. McConnell's remarks on street cleaning and fell in with his suggestion to try flushing parts of King, Yonge and Toronto streets instead of cleaning them with a two worthern Ontario and the Cattle Trade. English advices by mail show that the rsistent efforts of Mr. Morton Frewen, nanager of the Powder River cattle company, on behalf of an American store trade, have not met with the success anticipated. The deputation that waited upon Lord Carlingford last week have just been officially advised that the privy council will not take any steps towards the admission of store stock from Wyoming during the present year. Before any action can be taken the privy council must communicate with the Canadian government, and tions, are doing wonderfully well. Lady also institute enquiries as to the condition Gordon Catheart advanced £50 to each of Wyoming in respect to the cattle disease; it will therefore be next year before vance of £50 more made by the Canada they are in a position to come to any de- Northwest company, which draws 6 per London correspondent, writing under date wisely arranged it so that the crofters of July 31, an alternative proposal to bring should not be huddled together in a colony Mr. Frewen's 6000 stockers into Canadian territory and let them graze there for three months, has been submitted for the consideration of the Canadian government. The reply of the privy council would indicate that until full answers to the various enquiries are before them, no counter pro posal or compromise will be listened to.

Mr. G. F. Frankland, the leader in the cattle trade here, sails from Montreal on Monday, taking with him a lot of cattle and an interview with him is thus reported by the Globe:

by the Globe:

One of the chief objects of Mr. Frankland's visit to England is to represent to the British government the danger and uselessness of admitting into England western cattle on the same terms as Canadian. With the views of Mr. Morton Frewen, as expressed in the British journals and given to the Globe the other day, Mr. Frankland says he has no agreement. That Wyoming is as able to preserve freedom from disease as Canada is, he greatly doubts, and besides thinks that the British farmer would gain nothing by the admission of Wyoming animals. The average weight of 1200 pounds, which Mr. Frewen mentions would be sold in Wyoming of $45 each on an average, would, he thinks, be found to weigh really less. But even at that weight Wyoming resents no advantage in furnishing store cattle to Britain, for abundance of good cattle are purchasable in Ontario at $\frac{1}{2}$ to $\frac{3}{2}$ cents a pound, or as low as it would cost to bring Wyoming cattle to the frontiers of Ontario, Under those circumstances Ontario could not a second to the western cattle for fattening for Apparently it is not the plan of shipping lean cattle to England that Mr. Frankland considers a "wild-cat" scheme, but simply the proposal to bring them all the way from Wyoming. We understand him, as reported by the Globe, to mean that such cattle can be better and more profitably raised in Ontario and shipped thence than from the far-western states. Supposing this to be proved feasible, then the fact has a most important bearing on the interests of northern Ontario.

The other day The World reported an interview with Mr. Frank Turner, C.E., of Bracondale, York township, just returned from a visit to Muskoka. Mr. Turner is enthusiastic in his description of Muskoka as a splendid grazing country, where, from the very superior quality of the grass, cattle would grow and thrive amazingly, while the beef produced would be of the best quality. The northern districts are but indifferent for grain, but they are fine pastures, in which the sweetest of grasses grow. Now, if the scheme of exporting store cattle to England, there to be fattened and finished off, is to be proved successful at all, the Muskoka district ought to be just the locality where it should be fairly tried, and on the large scale. The objections against Wyoming cattle do not obtain here; here the thing could be freely tried without any further reference to the British authorities. Ontario cattle are cheaper than Wyoming cattle delivered here, says Mr. Frankland; but the Muskoka district is probably the cheapt the Muskoka district is probably the cheap. obtain here; here the thing could be freethe Muskoka district is probably the cheapest ground for raising cattle in all Ontario. Why, it is not very long since Professor Charlottetown, etc. Surely when we can get to New York and back for $10 we should get a return ticket to Boston—only proposed the plan of sending cattle by the housand from the older settled districts of the province into the Muskoka pastures for the summer, bringing them back to the home farms before winter sets in. The low price of wheat, too, is a reason why farmers and stock-raisers should be on the for the wholesale waste of macadam taken look-out for the very best methods of pro- off Colborne street and dumped into ducing good cattle cheaply for the English Beard's wharf. What Natural Gas Might Do. Wouldn't it be strange, says the Pittsburg Leader, if Pittsburg should in the near future become a free trade city? Yet that is not only within the possibilities, but is a strong probability. Natural gas is what may bring about this revolution. Natural may bring about this revolution. Natural gas is now being struck on every side hereabouts, and is daily being put into greater use. The effect it has had on the

than a fourth or a third as much as for the same work done. Some of our big ron mills can save $50,000 a year over what they did when they used coal. There an only be one result from this. Pittsburg will be able to manufacture cheaper the in any other city of the country; for this eason it will become the greatest manufac ble to undersell everybody throughout the world. In that case it would be to our nterest to have free trade; and we would be certain to clamor for it. be strange though?

The Globe has the following by tele graph from Winnipeg: Telegraphic reports rom various points in the provinces and erritories give very favorable accounts of the wheat crop. Barley is an average crop; oats is much below the average. Gretna, Morris, Gladstone, Neepawa and Portage a Prairie report that the wheat harvest ommenced yesterday and to day; many others will commence this week, and nearly all before the end of next. The barley parvest is going on generally; cutting is two or three weeks earlier than last year. The weather is splendid and a bountiful harvest is practically secured.

Montreal Gazette: About 20,000 immi grants have entered the Northwest thus far this year, and although this number falls short of that last year, the class of people entering the country is now much superior. The crofters, who are settled on government land north and south of the track between Fleming and Wapella stacent, on the money. Mr. Scarth very but mixed up with Canadian and English settlers from whom they can learn many a wrinkle. The English settlers, with the exception of those from London, are on the whole first-class farmers, and with a good crop and fair prices this fall they will be able to bring a very large area of land under cultivation next year.

The silver question is about coming to crisis in the United States, and very shortly it will be re-opened in Europe. A Paris despatch says that the Monetary conference will meet there on October 25. The Latin Monetary union will be continued provided silver coin is not increased and each state undertakes to redeem its silver at the expiration of the period to which the union is extended. The terms of this despatch would indicate either that the "gold bags" are in control of the situation, or that the news agency wishes to give friends, is about starting for the Northwest, via Owen Sound and Port Arthur; and will go as far as the end of the track. It will be of some interest to see, by-andether Mr. Mackenzie will bring back any better account of the land than was told by Sheriff Sweetland to the Globe and the Ottawa Free Press.

The Montreal Post is right enough when it says that mormon missionaries make no converts in Ireland. But then it goes on to add that "England, Wales, and Scotland offer fertile fields for their saint ships." We believe this to be a libel on the land of the heather. We never heard of a Scotch mormon yet, did you?

It looks as if the Prince of Wales were preparing himself for the role of the "citizen king." He makes Lloyd's newspaper -that very popular sheet-his organ, and in so doing claims liberal and even radical affinities. He is for free trade, but he repudiates the Manchester school, with its policy of peace at any price and dismemberment. If the recent report as to the inspiration of the article in Lloyd's of last week be true, he appears to be edging towards the ideal, already indicated in our columns, of radicalism at home and conservatism in foreign and colonial policy.

Some of the patterns have already been made use of by the firm from whom the machinery was bought, but many of them are perfectly new and fresh to the public. The out-put is pretty considerable, 68,000 yards having been turned out in two days. A new departure has been made by printing heavy sheeting, for purposes of furniture and similar purposes. As this kind of calico is made at the Coaticook mills, and can be made elsewhere, it is hoped that its use for printing purposes may have the effect of taking off some of the surplus production and utilizing it. Another novelty is having reversible prints, with different patterns on each side, which are useful for dresse; faced or glazed calicos of uniform color, suitable for linings and trimmings, are also being made. THRICE MARRIED.

I remember Professor Vernon, said the friend who told me this story, when I was a boy at school. He used to help me with my Latin, and was very good to me. had a library that was chiefly composed of books that were his gifts, and I thought he liked me. He was even then a hale old man, with white hair curling on his temples and a profile like a cameo portrait of some old king, and his home was a fine old building, with tall chimneys and a great

The professor was a bachelor. People said he was jilted in his youth. It hardly seemed to me that any of the elderly spinsters lingering alone in old houses once capied by large families could have had the heart to do it. The professor must have been a handsome young man. He had means and family. Surely these ladies, pretty and sweet, probably, in the long ago, as they were now elegant and pious, would have accepted the professor's hand, had he requested them to do him that honor in those days when men naturally go a-courting.

The jilt must have dwelt elsewhere, where were more men, or the story origisuch sounds. There were screams and cries of terror.

I had thought this true for a long time, when once, going to the old professor's house in the evening when I was a little past one-and-twenty, I found that the servant had left the door ajar, and, entering without knocking, became the witness of a scene that survivided me, the professor talked to the crowd.

der. The hames flickered about the paper for a moment in blue and yellow gleams, then changing into a crimson tinge, lapped up the fluttering sky-hued ribbon.

"You're surprised," he said. "I am going to surprise you more. I am going to be married to morrow."

"You!" I ejaculated. He langhed. "I," he repeated; "I am in love," he said; "and with a girl of 17. She is very fond of me, too. Come and take tea with us on Sunday. I found her miles away. Her father was my friend. On his sudden death I went to see her, and this is the end of the visit. Congratulate me."

Of course I did that; and, of course, I went to tea on Sunday, and there I met

After that we saw each other very often, After that we saw each other very often, and if the thought that had I met her when she was free we should have been more than friends crept into my mind, I am glad to say I banished it with all the power of exorcism I had. I only went to the house when I was invited. I only spoke to her as a man should speak to his friend's Fate was at work, however. One day

After that he spoke of his sorrow in leaving her in my presence, and she clung to his arm and hid her face on his

"But I cannot," he answered. "The sea is treacherous—the winter severe. You would be in danger."

"Promise me that you will send for me whenever I am needed."
She looked up into my face.
"Yes," she answered. "Thank you."
It was a wild winter, such as had been unknown for years. The wrecks along the coast were many. The Sibyl was not heard of in any of the ports. Anxiety grew into terror, terror into certainty.
We waited week after week for news. It came at last. A sailor—one of the crew of the Sibyl—came to light.
I went to see film.

He had seen my dear old friend enter a He had seen my dear old friend enter a boat, and had seen that boat dashed to pieces on a black rock in mid-ocean, in the midst of an awful tempest.

"If there ever was a fine old man, he was one," said the sailor; "brave to the last, and the last words I heard him say were: "I want to get home to that little wife of mine, if it is God's will."

I took the sailor to the old house where

I took the sailor to the old house where Mrs. Vernon watched and waited, and he told her the story. She heard it and wept bitterly. After that she was ill for a long while. and she gave me her hand.

"I am not afraid that so true a friend will not be as true a lover," she said. "I do not think my dear old husband would be angry if he could see us from heaven."

So we were married. We went away upon a little journey afterwards, and it was in about a week's time that we stopped for a little at a certain large country.

In its rambling passages I lost my way

In its rambling passages I lost my way one night in going to my room, and stood bewildered at the head of a long entry, shading the candle with my hand, when a figure appeared at a doorway just before me, which I had not seen open, because the room behind it was in darkness.

Had it been on unknown figure, it would have occasioned no surprise; but as it was, my blood curdled in my veins with horror, for it was no living man, but a spirit from the other world—the old professor, and no other. His face was pallid as that of one lying in his coffin. He did not look at me, but retreated into the darkness.

I found Nellie sitting by an open win dow. The long day had been sultry, and a storm was rising. Already low-muttered thunder was heard afar, and little flashes of blue light leaped up and down upon the horison, as though demons showed their faces and vanished.

"I feel sad to-night, Percy," she said.
"It may be the state of the atmosphere, but I am very sad. I fancy there is trouble in store for us. I dread the future. What does it mean?"

What does it mean?"

"I am no prophet," I answered sadly.

The storm arose. Such a I took her hand. We sat together in the darkness. The storm arose. Such a storm I had never seen before. It was too sultry to seek our pillows, and as I sat there something seemed to say to me:

"Your happiness is over."

Time seemed to have gone backward.

Time seemed to have gone backward.

Nellie was the professor's wife, not mine.

I would not have touched her lips for a kingdom, yet I loved her none the less.

The lightning struck near by fifty times at least. I saw a great oak riven to the centre. I saw a fire flame up down in the village.

Then one great flash filled the room with light, and the whole house trembled as with an earthquake. Nellie started to her feet. I started to Mellie started to her feet. I started to mine, but she did not fly into my arms, as would have seemed natural. We only held out our hands to each other.

"Gone," he cried. "And may their memory go with them!"

Then turning, he saw me.

"Come here," he said; and when I stood beside him, rested his arm upon my shoulder. The flames flickered about the paper for a moment in blue and yellow gleams, then changing into a crimson tinge, lapped up the fluttering sky-hued ribbon.

Our two other mates died. The old gentleman and me, we lived. He seemed pretty well broke down, and I was taking him home. He was finder of her than ever I saw a man. But his eyes had been very bad, and his hand shook terrible. He couldn't write. I guess he'd have got all right when he met her, though he was the bravest old fellow I ever saw. I loved him. I stepped forward and told them that I knew the dear old man.

"I loved him, too," I said, and my tears fell over his dead face. "I loved him! I loved him truly," I added. "Forgive me, dear spirit, for my unmeant crine."

I sent my little Nellie home, telling her that I would explain everything when we met. She obeyed me with strange willingness.

After the funeral I wrote and told he all. Her answer was:
"Stay away until I send for you." So it was a year before I saw her again, and went with her to church in the great city, where we were married for the second time. We never went back to S—; the place is sold to strangers.

Catarrh—A New Treatment.

Perhaps the most extraordinary success that has been achieved in modern science has been attained by the Dixon treatment for catarrh. Out of 2000 patients treated during the past six months, fully ninety per cent have been cured of this stubborn malady. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that not five per cent of the patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefitted, while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all. Starting with the claim now generally believed by the most scientific men that the disease is due to their extermination; this accomplished, the catarrh is practically cured, and the permanency is unquestioned, as cures effected by him four years ago are cures still. No one else has ever attempted to cure catarrh in this manner, and no other treatment has ever cured catarrh. The application of the remedy is simple and can be done at home, and the present season of the year is the most favorable tor a speedy and permanent cure, the majority of cases being cured at one treatment. Sufferers should correspond with Messrs. A. H. "Wrong?"
"Yes, sir, this is not my house. I only

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

Sarsaparilla and other blood-purifying roots, combined with Iodide of Potassium and Iron, and is the safest, most reliable, and most economical blood purifier that can be used. It invariably expels all blood oisons from the system, enriches and renews the blood, and restores its vitalizing power. It is the best know remedy for Scrofula and all Scrofulos Complaints, Erysipelas, Eczema, Ringworm, Blotches, Sores, Boils, Tumors, and Eruptions of the Skin, as also for all disorders caused by a thin and impoverished, or corrupted ondition of the blood, such as Rheumati Neuralgia, Rheumatic Gout, General Debility, and Scrofulous Catarrh.

Mr. Doolan, M.P., was an Irishman in whom more than ordinary culture was united to a certain native finesse. At the beginning of his career, it was feared that his exuberant verbosity would detract from his success as a public speaker; but his effervescence of thought and language subsided with advancing years. At the age of 43 his utterances were as sparkling and pungent as ever, but their substance was clearer and their effect more potent by their total riddance from rhetorical froth and foam. Some of his most striking phrases had already found their place in Canadian political history, along with such immortal sentences as "Those hands are clean," "The brawling brood of bribers," "Speak now," I shall give it my most earnest consideration," etc. For the last entire and the substance was clean, with the arrival of her spouse, she herself, as she confessed, being no "scholard."
