IT WAS QUEER MISCHIEF.

CURIOUS FINDING OF THE CORONER'S JURY.

Who Said the Woman Came to Her Death at the Hands of Some "Mischievous" Person—Some Theories Regarding the Prisoner and the Crime.

FREDERICTON, Oct. 11th.—There has been a great deal of mismanagement in the conduct of the authorities in connection with the Keswick murder and it is difficult to decide just who should bear the blame.

The inquest was in the nature of a farce as it was a bundle of mistakes from beginning to end. The recorded evidence taken at it and now in possession of the police magistrate covers one page and a half of folio paper. It contains very little in connection with the details. A casual reader would not know from it who had been killed as the name is written "Mrs. Wheary" and these are perhaps six or more women in the village to whom this would be applicable; no mention is made of an axe, yet the verdict rendered was that the deceased came by her death from wounds made by an axe in the hands of some "mischievous" person. The evidence contains no mention of this person whom the jury designate as "mischievous." It must be that in an endeavour to get some word that would express in part their feelings that this "mischievous" word was proposed by some of the jury, as it was not mentioned by any of the witnesses. What does it mean anyway?

Then again the jury was composed of eight persons. It is reported, and Progress gives it for what it is worth that one jurymen suggested seven as the lawful number of jurors while another thought that in a multitude of counsellors there is wisdom and wanted a panel of twelve. To decide the matter recourse was had to the old countryman's style of completing a tight bargain, they split the difference and appointed eight.

To add to the horrors, Henry B. Rainford, county clerk, decided that a post mortem was necessary and so Dr. Coulthard was hurried away to perform the necessary work. It is the opinion of the doctor that no outrage had been attempted and it is the prevailing opinion that none was attempted. The doctor found that the murdered woman was within a few days of confinement.

The prisoner's conduct all through appears to be mechanical and as though he was following a well laid scheme. He refuses to correspond by signs or writing and while before the court screams and yells whenever any of the witnesses, the magistrate or the lawyers look at him.

When the bloody axe was exposed in court it made him frantic. He kept shouting and pointing at it; his actions at that time convincing the spectators that it was the instrument with which the murder was committed and that he was the murderer. It will be remembered by readers of the local papers that when Prof. Woodbridge conversed with him in the court, that the Professor was not on oath, but was only endeavoring to test the sanity of the prisoner. But the Professor will when sworn, as he will be, say that during that silent conversation the prisoner admitted to him that he had done the killing.

Several who were present at the Wheary house on the evening of the murder say that the prisoner and his father conversed by writing on a slate for nearly an hour. What was written on one in the house saw but it is supposed that in this conversation the prisoner confessed all about the deed, and that he was told how to act when put on trial for his life. This is common supposition.

Another fact which is exciting considerable comment and about which many questions are asked is that when Howard and the other neighbors reached the Wheary house after the murder they found the blood perfectly dry. It is thought from this that the deed must have been done more than two hours before the neighbors arrived, which would place it at an hour prior to the departure of the prisoner's father and family before half-past one. It may be possible that the woman was murdered before Joseph Wheary and family went away and they not cognizant of it. The dry blood on the door and on the clothing of deceased is a silent witness that the deed had been committed hours before the neighbors arrived.

There is another fact in favor of the prisoner and that is that all testify that the clothes he wore on the evening of the murder were the same as he had worn all day. There is not the smallest drop of blood on them though a careful search has been made. The door, the table, the walls and the axe or handle are spattered thickly with blood and yet the supposed wielder of the axe has not one tell-tale mark upon his clothing. This must be allowed to be strong evidence.

One thing that transpired at the court and which is believed to be a scheme on the part of the supposed murderer is that he denied all knowledge of Mrs. Carlisle or Mrs. Riley. He shook his head when asked, and totally denied ever having seen or heard of them before. Mrs. Riley, in fact of this, swore that the prisoner had taken his supper at her table on the day preceding the dastardly deed, and that she had known him for years.

The conduct of Hedley Wheary, the husband of the murdered woman, is being much criticized. It will be remembered that before taking any steps to call the neighbors or to assure himself that his wife was dead he went to the barn yard and told the prisoner who was then cutting wood to put up the horses. His position is critical as if the prisoner is not the guilty person as the stainless clothes strongly testify he must account for the fact that he was the only person present when the murdered woman was found by the villagers.

The affair is involved in mystery and the people of Keswick do not care to converse with anyone on the subject. They appear to have a theory as to how the deed was done and the cause that led to it but will not express themselves.

Then there is the fact that the prisoner does not conduct himself at all like he did when at home. Here he passed among the neighbors in and out of their houses, in the free and friendly way incident to country life, perfectly rational and believed to be so by all. No one thought him insane nor yet possessed of a violent temper. Since his arrest he has been more like a wild beast than a human being.

Another peculiar thing is that on the evening of the murder when the diseased was being prepared for burial the prisoner showed the most violent hatred of the husband and several times attempted to assault him and was only prevented by the interference of the men. Why this is so, is also a question which is being discussed.

Now that the matter is in the hands of police magistrate Marsh all are satisfied it will be conducted properly and that nothing will be allowed to stand in the way of getting at the full details.

People in St. John and other places do not look on the matter in the same way as do the people of this city. The reason is this. It will be remembered that about a year since negroes murdered a white man here, shot him down in the street, in cold blood, and the punishment inflicted was years in the penitentiary. Whether the penalty was commensurate with the crime, from a legal point of view we do not pretend to know but it was a punishment that did not suit the great mass of people throughout the city and country, it was looked on as a travesty and people are afraid that the same will be the case respecting the present tragedy.

No evidence has yet been adduced to show how Hedley was the axe shown in the court was on the Wheary premises that day nor for days previous. It was found in a barn belonging to Zopher Dunlop and because there were drops of blood on it it was declared to be the weapon used in the murder. It is also said that the axe was washed but there is very little proof for this. No proof has been given that when Joseph Wheary and his family left the premises that the murdered woman was then alive. Living in the same house they would surely be able to swear positively that she was living when they went away. No evidence has been presented to show whether the husband and wife lived happily together or the reverse—or whether the victim and her husband's family were on good terms or not.

Now that the motive of outrage has fizzled out, so to speak, there is no motive except revenge that would prompt the prisoner to perpetrate such a deed and it has been sworn that there was no quarrel between him and the murdered woman. The affair is clouded in mystery and bids fair to be as difficult to fathom as the famous Borden murder. FRED RICKTON.

Messrs Fowler and Peters Hebeled.

There was a school meeting at Hampton Thursday, the annual school meeting, and the act of trustees Harry Fowler and Thos. A. Peters in turning out teacher Sherwood and placing teacher Harrington in his stead came up for discussion. The other trustee Mr. Smith, who had opposed the dismissal of Sherwood, had served three years as trustee and was to retire but the people ratified his opposition to Peters and Fowler by re-electing him over a candidate of the other party by a vote of three to one. They went further than this and passed a unanimous resolution condemning what the trustees did in the Sherwood-Harrington exchange. Progress usually gets upon the just side of the argument and its readers will remember how it exposed the method of Messrs Peters and Fowler in that case. The people have had their say now and it was a very emphatic say.

ONE MASTER TOO MANY.

INSPECTOR MACKASKEY TRYING TO SERVE TWO BOSSES.

The Temperance People and Those Who Placed Him in His Present Position—the Liquor Dealers, He is not making a success of it.

HALIFAX, October 12.—The liquor war, or more strictly speaking, the assaults upon the business of dealers by chief of police O'Sullivan, continues with unabated vigor. Prosecutions are of almost daily occurrence. The man who should do that work, and who is paid $1,000 per annum for its performance, is John A. Mackaskey, inspector of licenses. But he rests content with drawing his salary and going through the routine which the policemen force upon him.

Progress, Halifax readers who are acquainted with Mr. Mackaskey, who are accustomed to his appearance, do not expect any more from him than they get. How could they? Imagine a man small of stature, and slender in proportion, and timid nervousness obvious in every movement of his countenance and body. He seems to tremble alike when a liquor dealer speaks to him, or when a temperance man looks at him. It is an open secret that the liquor interests put him where he is and keep him there, and it is well known that both they and the temperance men despise his methods—the disgust of the latter body being largely mingled with hatred. Mr. Mackaskey has so little back-bone that both parties tyrannize over him, and he fears his masters as well as his enemies. Yet the poor man musters up courage enough to do nothing in these troublous times, though his do-nothingism subjects him to the maledictions of the temperance people. Poor Mackaskey!

But there is a silver lining to his cloud. About five years ago when he was appointed inspector, Mackaskey was a poor man. He has built and lives in a mansion on Tower road, beautifully furnished. And he lives well from day to day. The house cost $6,000, and the furniture within it probably cost $2,000 more. Mr. Mackaskey's salary of $1,000 per year has gone a long way. If everybody could do as well many Halifax citizens who are now poor would be well to do men today. It is a pity that Halifax people have already obtained a pretty good idea. Perhaps in the near future Mr. Mackaskey's recipe may be given to Progress.

The police experience much trouble in proceedings which they force him to conduct. He must proceed when the information of suspected law-violations. But the issuing of the summons and other procedure is invariably put off to the last possible moment, and it is remarkable how many mistakes creep into them.

The inspector got into an awkward fix the other day in prosecuting Charles Young for selling without a license. Young was acquitted, but as a result of the trial Mr. Mackaskey has two other cases in which he should proceed, but in which he is awfully loath to move. In the examination of Young, in Mackaskey's presence, the defendant stated that he frequently went for a drink to the shops of Ryan and Verge, on Upper Water street. Young on oath told the inspector, though that official did not want the information, that he consumed those drinks on Ryan's and Verge's premises. It is unlawful to drink on the premises of the dealer who sells. So Mackaskey has testimony which should compel him to proceed against those two men. He does not want to proceed, however, and probably will choose the lesser of two evils, and try to forget about it, rather than take action and offend his masters.

It is a sorrowful thing for Mackaskey to endure—the sight of the police in an aggressive campaign against liquor license law violations when he remembers that he remembers that he draws $1,000 a year from the city to have nothing done. Poor and yet rich John A. Mackaskey!

AN ENOCH ARDEN SCRAPE.

A Nova Scotia Woman Has a Visit From Husband No. 1.

HALIFAX, October 12.—A romantic story rather different from the tale of Enoch Arden, comes from Pictou county and it is interesting in Halifax from the connection some of the principals have to one of the leading families in this city. The scene of the incident is in Thorburn, a mining town of Pictou. A couple of weeks ago that village was excited by the appearance there of a man who had been absent for a quarter of a century, and for 20 years was believed by his wife and neighbors to be dead. So firmly convinced was she of his departure to another world that for twice ten years she has been the wife of another. The woman is the daughter of Patrick Power, who once represented in parliament the county of Antigonish. Power acquired some wealth, a good share of which at his death went to his daughter Annie. The young girl was courted and married by a man named Habaldt, a native of Halifax County, who followed the sea for a livelihood. For two years they lived happily, but then Habaldt began to be dissolute in his habits and cruel to his wife. He squandered her money and reduced himself and her to poverty and finally disappeared from Thorburn, till now, for a quarter of a century, he has not been heard from. Mrs. Habaldt left Thorburn and came to Halifax to earn a living and support her child. Five years after Habaldt's desertion there was a tremendous storm on the New England coast and the vessel on which Habaldt was known to have sailed was lost, and all on board were believed to have found a watery grave. It was not much of a loss to the forsaken woman; indeed she might well congratulate herself, that was what she probably did. She made the acquaintance of T. Butler, a brother of Hon. James Butler, member of the legislative council of Nova Scotia, and one of the wealthiest merchants of Halifax. But Butler, unlike his brother was not rich. He made a living by the sweat of his brow. They married and after some years went back to Thorburn, where the couple now live.

Habaldt tells what in many particulars is probably only a sailor's yarn. To make a long story short he says that after he left his wife he took ship on various vessels, till finally he found himself on board a craft near Boston. A storm arose, and the ship was cast ashore, and except himself and another sailor, all on board were drowned. He managed to reach the shore by clinging to a broken spar. Then he went to California, bought a claim on which he made $20,000. With the exception of $5,000 he invested his money in a wild cat scheme in California in which he lost it all. Not long after the $5,000 went the same way. Then he took to the sea once more and shipped on a vessel bound for New Zealand. She was cast away on an island of the South Seas and again he was the only man saved. After four days in a boat he was picked up by a passing vessel and brought back to Europe. From there he crossed to the United States, and again found himself in the west—working in the silver mines. There he remained for some weeks. The closing up of the mines not long ago sent him east once more, and he came home to Nova Scotia. He seems to have forgotten all about his wife till now. He says that in Halifax he was told his wife was still in Thorburn, and he was thunderstruck to learn that she was again married. He could not believe it. With the exception of himself certain he started for Thorburn. He found it only too true—that his wife had taken another husband, and what was worse, she would not recognize him.

HOW STRONG ARE CONQUERED.

The Great Work of Gleason in St. Andrew's Rink.

Perhaps the greatest expression of confidence the people of this city have ever given to Rufus Somerby and his amusement attractions has been this week, when they turned out in masses to see the performances of Gleason, the horse tamer, who opened a week ago yesterday in St. Andrew's rink, under Mr. Somerby's management.

The audiences have varied from 1,500 to 2,000, and it is a safe assertion that no recent show of any kind has drawn such representative audiences, and sent them away so thoroughly pleased. The same people have attended again and again, and several gentlemen told Progress that they had not missed a single performance. Men and women, boys and girls, have gone and will go again. Society ladies and gentlemen, and everyone that everybody knows, to say nothing of the enthusiastic "unreserved," have shown their appreciation by their attendance.

Prof. Gleason has yet to meet a horse he cannot master, he has yet to meet a horse that he cannot prevail to do as he wishes him, to be useful, obedient and docile. The most vicious kicker, the most frightened shyer, the nervous, untamed, unbroken animals have been sent to him. They fought their fight in the centre of the ring and suffered defeat. His methods are simple yet effective, his advice on all the points of horsemanship is excellent, he does not injure his subjects, in fact he protects them against possible harm and in this manner he gains the respect and confidence of his audience as well as the horses.

One of the remarkable things about Gleason that cannot fail to strike an attentive looker-on is his wonderful patience. He never permits himself to show the slightest annoyance with the horse. When necessary he uses the whip and he always has command of his lungs, but nothing is done in a hurry. Thoroughbreds which have always been used to saddle and never would permit harness and wagon to go in connection with them worked for Gleason like a charm after two trials. Peter Climeh's Bowstring and Plane were driven about the city harness for the first time and another thoroughbred was made a willing subject in the same way.

Perhaps the toughest subject the professor has to handle was a grey horse that was never known to drive in single harness and leave any remnant of the wagon. There is a legend about her that in her younger days she was once hitched to a plow by the countryman who bred her and that when the evening of that day arrived the mare was all that remained of the debris. She is a most finished kicker, active as a tiger and obedient as a sin. It took Gleason one hour and twelve minutes to tie her out the first night and persuade her that he was the boss. The second night was not so bad. Each evening he gave her a lesson in single harness.

A column might be written about his methods, they are interesting enough to be readable to anyone, but space does not permit it. The show remains next week on Friday night and by that time every person who can manage it should attend.

SCORES TURNED AWAY.

CROWDS FLOCKED TO HEAR THE MINSTRELS' PINAFORE.

A Great Success From Beginning to End—Miss Olive Makes a Hit and the Company do Better Than Average Amateurs—Matinee Today.

Admirably staged and handsomely dressed, the ever green "Pinafore" was sung and played by the Amateur Minstrels, with their own orchestra, on three evenings of this week in a manner that would have done credit to a city of ten times the size of St. John. Mr. J. Esson's cleverness in the stage management and scenic taste displayed, proved that the minstrel shows were mere child's play to him and he fully deserved a special call before the curtain. St. John audiences however are too fond of leaving before the play is over to afford such a chance as this to any who might be disposed to give such encouragement. On the first night for instance some one in the gallery, with loud boots, got up about five minutes before the opera was finished and immediately some man reached for his coat in the balcony; then two small boys left the front seats on the floor, after that a general applause commenced. As the hour was only ten minutes past ten o'clock there was no reasonable excuse for this and it is a custom that should be stopped both in courtesy to the players and those of the audience who are not in such a desperate hurry.

When comic opera companies visit us, there is one particular "star" generally very much depreised by advance press notices who generally turns out to be lacking in all stellar attractions. The Amateurs never announced that they had a star of particularly bright proportions but when Josephine appeared and sang her opening ballad "Sorry her lot who loves too well" the audience quickly awoke to the fact that the performer was a star. Miss Olive was not only charmingly dressed and looked sweetly pretty but she sang her music with all the taste and expression of a finished artist. Her voice has improved immensely in richness and power and her method of singing is also greatly advanced—her articulation being excellent.

With the necessary training in acting stage business under a competent teacher, this talented young lady, with her unaffected manner, would bid fair to take a leading position in light opera.

Miss Clara Quinton acted and sang the part of Buttercup excellently, but spoilt her very decided hit she would have made by dressing the part in a totally impossible manner, as bumboat women are not usually dressed like "happy villagers." Miss Lamb as Hebe was a splendid foil to Josephine and sustained her part in a very effective manner.

Of the male principals Mr. A. M. Smith took the palm as the boatswain. He acted and sang easily, getting a most decided encore for his effective rendering of "He is an Englishman." It is a pleasure to see this all-round effective musician come to the front at last after having kept himself in the background for such a long time, through his great modesty. Mr. Lindsay's Ralph Rackstraw was the best piece of work he has done in comic opera though the music in places was a little too much for him, he being obliged to resort to falsetto in parts which somewhat marred the general effect of his singing. Mr. Purdy was a presentable Captain, though apparently a nervous one, and Mr. Esson's novel one, his get up suggesting the idea of an old sailor, which was certainly the last idea that the authors had when they wrote this amusing satire.

In this connection the "Telegraph" fell into the same error and complimented him for this very thing which spoils the whole play and Sir Joseph's great song.

The Dick Deadeye of Mr. Olive was a most creditable performance though his singing of the duet with the Captain was not the success that might have been expected. The chorus was full and effective especially on the male side. The orchestra carefully selected as it was by Mr. W. C. Ewing, was one of the best that has ever played in the Opera House and was ably presided over by Mr. Collinson the musical director of the Minstrels.

Taking into consideration that all the performers were purely amateur and that in many of the principal parts it was a case of a first appearance, the stiffness in all the acting (with the exceptions of Josephine, Buttercup and the Boatswain) was excusable. That play goes will be glad to welcome the next efforts of the St. John Minstrels, whether in burnt cork or comic opera was clearly demonstrated by the good houses that attended these performances.

This afternoon the minstrels will give a performance of "Pinafore." It was not the intention to give a matinee but there has been such an unanimous request from the citizens for the performance that the club has consented. So that the ladies and children will have an opportunity of seeing this most popular opera.

INTERESTING LOCAL RACES.

Dutchman and Eagle Won Their Respective Classes.

The local races at Moosepath a few days ago excited an interest that was unusual, when it is considered how little effort was made to advertise them. More than three hundred people found their way out there in spite of the fact that there was no train, and enjoyed the pleasant afternoon thoroughly.

There were two classes, and a good number of horses in each of them. Split heats in both races made them more interesting than they would have been otherwise. The first race called had in it Dutchman, Bell Cigar, Big Dan, Jim Dandy and Valet. It was a good contest led off by the grey mare, Bell Cigar, who trotted more steadily than usual. But Dutchman was right on her wheel all the time, making sure that any mistake would bring him to the front, and when she made his first place was his. He did not act as well as usual only winning in the slow time of 3:18.

When the second heat was called he was in no better form, in fact acted worse than any of the horses, and Bell Cigar had no difficulty in getting in the next heat. Jim Dandy was third both times making a game race, taking the slabs of a long whip without a murmur. His owner Mr. Moore deserves credit for putting in the old horse and making the race more interesting. Dutchman took the next two heats and the race. Dolan Bros. Dan and Valet were not in it except the last heat when Dan took third place. The big horse is a great roader and can make any three minute horse go for all that is in him to beat him on the straight hard stretch but on the turns and a soft track he cannot do his best work.

The faster class was more interesting, not a little speculation being felt as to which horse would win. Eagle had that honor, contrary to the opinions of many before he started, but he showed what he could do and did credit to his owner, John Fitzpatrick, and his driver, Mr. Henderson. The other starters were Harry A., driven by W. McEvey, Molly K., by George Carvill, Allright, owned by King Bros., O'Dick and Frank E.

Harry A. was lucky in drawing the poll and Molly K. and Frank E. had second and third positions with King Allright, O'Dick, and Eagle in the order named. A partial collision on the first turn between the inside horses gave King Allright the lead and pole where he was followed by Eagle and O'Dick. Frank E. acted badly in fourth position and finished there. King Allright won the heat being pushed by Eagle to do the most that was in him. O'Dick had third place.

The next heat was more interesting, Eagle taking the lead after the first quarter and holding it to the finish. King Allright made a bad break at the start, and lost ground, but he swung into the home stretch in second position with Frank E. on his wheel, and the race to the wire was a pretty one. Frank E. won second position by a neck.

Eagle took the next two heats, with King Allright second and Frank E. third. Eagle had nothing to spare, though his time was 2:53 on a very unsatisfactory track and an ordinary sulky. Under favorable conditions he should go at least ten seconds faster. Harry A. did not do himself justice, becoming excited the first heat in the collision, and acting badly all through the race. Molly K. was not in any condition, and while she showed considerable speed at times she was unable to keep up the pace. For the work that he had, O'Dick did wonderful well. He has trotted in 2:42 though the owner knew nothing of that day of the race. Harry A. the day before the race speeded quarters and halves in 41 seconds, and 1:24 which would indicate that he could do better. Frank E.'s driver was criticized a good deal for trotting all over the track and the criticism was just enough. He might have done better with a competent driver.

But it was a pleasant afternoon's sport. No fast time was made but the heats were well contested and the race was in doubt up to the last heat.

Since then a match has been made between Mr. Riley's chestnut mare and Dutchman for a purse of $40. This will be a contest between the dam and her colt. Dutchman can trot close to three minutes and Mr. Riley claims the mare can do a little better. It will be a good race and there will be lots of fun.

On the same day, next Wednesday, there will probably be another race for a purse of $100 between Eagle, King Allright, Harry A. and Frank E. All the horses are in fair condition and there should be no trouble in getting them together. If they do meet it will be anybody's victory.

GOVERNOR JOHN BOYD.

A GRAPHIC SKETCH OF A BUSINESS MAN'S CAREER.

From The School Desk to the Governor's Chair - His Schoolmates Were Bishop Sweeney and Senator Brownwell - His Talk to the Student Teachers at Fredericton.

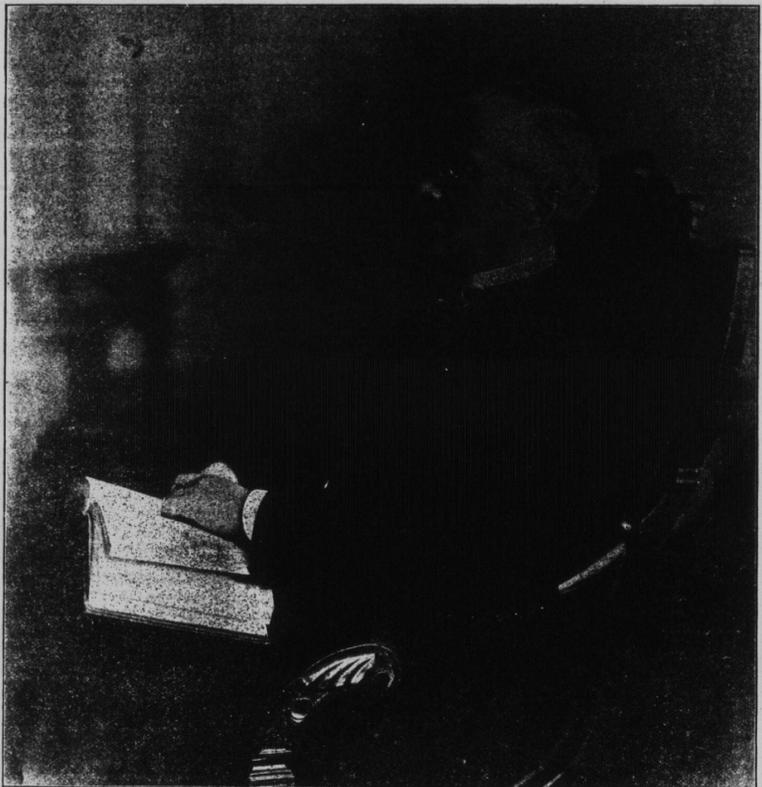

In the little one storey wooden building known as the grammar school, where many of our leading men were educated, in 1838 sat three boys together on the same seat, John Sweeney, aged 16, Stephen Stockwell, aged 14, and John Boyd, aged 11. The first quiet and keeping to himself, the second and third also. All were good students, but the second and third fond of dogs and horses, and of each other, and the love of one to another lasted while life did. The first is the Catholic Bishop of St. John, the second was editor of the Boston Journal and Senator of Massachusetts, the third was Senator of Canada, and is now Lieutenant Governor of New Brunswick. At school not one of them had an enemy, neither have they now in the larger school of life, the Bishop, Editor and Governor. Each left school in 1838 - the first for theological study in college, the second the printing office of the Journal in Boston, the third into mercantile life. It was pleasant when in after years they met, and worked out the problems of life. Hon. S. N. Stockwell died ten years ago, the Spring-platform lecturers, and pleasant readers in Canada. "The crop that never fails" - "Who giveth this woman" - "B-z-z-z-z-z" - "George Stephenson" - "Dr. Holland" - "Extra baggage," were among the forty-two lectures of two hours in length, all of them, and the people never tired of them. He contributed to the press here on educational, Commercial and political subjects from 1849, he was a constant writer to the Boston Journal from here and the Old World; since then, through Mr. Norbott to the New York Herald in defence of New Brunswick, and Canada. In 1858 the Chamber of Commerce published 6000 copies of his pamphlet advocating Railways in New Brunswick which caused attention to, and helped the construction of the line westward which was opened in 1862.

He was, along with Mr. C. H. Fairweather, Wm Parks, Chas. Fisher, a delegate to the Detroit convention in 1865, for the Reciprocity Treaty between Canada and the United States, and has made addresses since, in New York, Boston, Bangor, for larger trade between the two countries; his letters through Mr. Norbott to the New York Herald all tending to that end. His speech on the C. P. R. in the senate, at the close of the great debate there, and republished ten years after, showed the wise judgment of the speaker and was most argumentative and convincing, his predictions yearly, besides what is seen in Blackville, with gang saws, shingle mills, lathe mills, alongside which the railway take in their loads, with brick works capable of turning out 15 millions a year to furnish houses for the 2,000 inhabitants, there is a grist mill where the finest flour is ground for them, five graded school houses in which to educate their children, and five churches, one, a Wesleyan, which he himself built years ago at a cost of $60,000. The residences of himself and his sons are very fine; two of his married daughters keep house with their father, and a generous, happy home is under that stately roof; his five stores of all that is necessary for the town, is close by; the farmers of many miles around have a good market here for all they produce; the Canada Eastern Railway, which runs across the St. John river on a fine iron bridge from Fredericton through Maryville to the Miramichi, is owned by him alone, and crowds of passengers go on it from all the stations on the 116 miles which it runs over through a splendid country.

As we pass near Maryville, said Mr. Boyd the river is full of logs going to the mills, cut from his own timber lands, to be sawn and shipped to Europe, from St. John. We meet railway trains coming in with raw cotton from the Southern States, and trains of manufactured cotton going out from his mill passing to every point in the Dominion. We then ask to see the cotton mill erected by himself from the bricks close by. Here is a sight: the workers, unlike those in larger places, who are rough and hard to manage, are educated, happy, cheerful, respectable, turning out goods equal to in the Dominion, from 702 new looms in the mill, by six hundred workers.

JOHN BOYD, Lieutenant-Governor of New Brunswick.

field Republican expressing for him "admiration, as one of the most faithful workers in journalism, a deep thinker, an earnest believer, and wise statesman."

Mr. Boyd was from a boy a great reader, and in 1847 he gave a lecture on the "claims of science" for a home here, and on then through his busy life, he continued giving lectures, some of which we recall, "The Crop that never Fails," "From London to Paris," "Our Old Home in 1869," these he was called on to repeat all over New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, and some in Ottawa. These and his readings, notably Dickens' "Christmas Carol" and Trench's "Traits of the Irish Peasantry," were especially interesting and the Telegraph states "that the proceeds of the numerous entertainments in which he took part, have helped to pay many a church debt, or ministers' stipend, to build many a hall, and to aid in furthering many benevolent enterprises, indeed many thousands of dollars." In crossing the Atlantic too he always got up concerts for the Seamen's Orphan Asylum and Capt. Smith, R. A. R. gives him the credit of having induced him to get up these entertainments, and on his last trip home in the "Germanic," his evening put $215 into the funds, and on his return in the "Etruria," $360, adding the next morning $150 for the hospitals "Aurania and Etruria" which Capt. Haines built, asking him to help him in furnishing. From 1851 he got up these, and old travellers recall their genial chairman to this day. In this city now, old soldiers recall the days of 35 years ago, when for the Royal Artillery, 60th Rifles, and 15th Regiment, he took charge of the hall on the Barrack Square, giving lectures and readings to the men there, under Major Strangeway, Col. Hawley, and Col. Wilkinson, and to the ships of war, whose jolly tars enjoyed those evenings right merrily.

Whenever his name appeared: the Hall of the Institute was full, long before the time. He was one of the most popular concerning the construction and course of that great work having been fulfilled nearly to the letter. Talking with him lately on this work, he said he had written an article lately on "the story of the C. P. R.," which, when delivered from the lecture platform, will throw new light from the standpoint of one who has the acquaintance of some of the men and measures connected therewith.

During the discussion on confederation in 1866 he took a leading part, speaking twice daily throughout part of the province, an aid largely in obtaining the vote by which it was carried. Grip has had him in many forms, one of the best being in the cartoon of the "Fairy Statesman" and Grand Chorus of Canadian Peers, along with Sir John A. as leader, Sir D. McPeeerson, Sir Alex. Campbell and William Miller and the "Roll Call" in 1881 as he looked in 1878, when he received Sir John A. Macdonald's telegram to "Dear Boyd:" "No increase in tariff, only adjustment," a telegram which Ontario said won that election, and has been credited to Mr. Boyd ever since.

In 1852 Mr Boyd found in Weymouth, Nova Scotia, one of the most beautiful girls in that region: Miss Annie E. Jones, daughter of C. P. Jones Esq and granddaughter of Judge Jones, possessing all the charms of person, and all the make-up of a good woman, who is beloved by all who know her.

His educational work has been of great value, given especially at a time when a hot-headed leader might have caused rebellion, his wise judgment, and conciliatory methods tided over the difficulty, and for some 17 years protestants and catholics are one in good works thanks to the meeting of the committee of Senator Boyd and Bishop Sweeney. The Lieut. Governor when visiting the schools in Fredericton last week, by invitation of the school board, spoke to the Normal School of having taken an object lesson from a practical teacher, Alexander Gibson, whose remarkable history he gave in a few words as that of a North of Ireland man, who settled on the Nashwaak, some years before, and on that spot he has now a small town built, an Ottawa for lumber and a Lowell for cotton. With the saw mill, cutting 25 millions

When Prince Napoleon visited here he asked to be shown where the "poor people lived." He was shown one of the double brick houses, of which there are fifty, with lace curtains and carpets. He repeated his request to see where the "poor people lived," and when again told these were the homes of their poor, he refused to believe. He was "takin' notes and goin' to print them." But in these brick houses, or the many wooden Queen Anne cottages, taken hold of by those whose heart was in the work; and all this Mr. Boyd pressed upon the young teachers going out, to impress these lessons upon their scholars, for he always held up Mr. Gibson in press and on platform. May he extend his sketch of the King of the Nashwaak to a wider field that all may hear it. Poverty-stricken, high office may not keep him quiet on such subjects.

A gentle temper is as money in a golden vessel. From 7th to 2nd place in 3 years shows the interest taken in the PERNIN SHORTHAND. A simple system, quickly learned, legible as print, and brief enough for the most rapid reporting. Taught by mail. Snell's Business College, - - Truro, N. S.

CONDENSED ADVERTISEMENTS.

Announcements under this heading not exceeding five lines (about 34 words) cost 25 cents each insertion. Five cents extra for every additional line.

IN ORDER that our Combined Linen Marker and Card Printer may be used as generally in the Home as our Business Stamps are in the Office or Store, we intend having a Holiday Competition to introduce samples of our work in a number of Homes in every Town in the three Provinces.

We do not offer a Lottery Scheme; but submit a simple, honest plan, by which all who work for us receive full value for the work performed. We pay Max large wages for introducing and taking orders for our stamps. Just now we intend giving the Children a chance. Smart Boys and Girls can do the work as well or better.

Our Plan is: For a certain number of orders we present a Watch, not a cheap, trashy affair, but a reliable Time Keeper. To the Boy or Girl sending in most orders between Nov. 1st and Dec. 20, we will present a Solid Gold Watch.

In small Towns we allow only one Competitor, first come first served. Parents should allow their Children an opportunity to compete.

JENNESS-MILLER'S SISTER.

The Famous Lecturer to Women Sets Them An Example.

"A beautiful woman is a beautiful gown" is the way they describe her.

"The Rev. Dr. Morgan Dix finds fault with women," says the New York Sun, for thinking more about their personal charms than about their souls, but Miss Mabel Jenness feels it her duty to instruct them as to the best use of those charms in the attainment of a 'correct and elegant carriage,' and by the proper artistic care of the body." In her view the soul expresses itself through the body, and action goes on between the two, with the result that physical grace has a moral value.

As Mrs. Jenness-Miller is known the world over for her ideas on dress reform, so her sister, Miss Mabel Jenness, whose likeness is given above, is celebrated for her crusade for physical culture among the gentler sex.

Her system of physical training is attracting a great deal of attention. "She is herself a society girl, and yet finds time," says the Sun, "to practice her system, and in the midst of her multitudinous duties is never tired, never sick, doesn't know where her nerves are, and is a stranger to headaches." The reason is apparent in a letter written July 19, 1893, from Washington, D. C.:

"I was induced," writes Miss Jenness, "to try Paine's celery compound at a time when I was suffering from over work and the effect of an accident. I began immediately to realize tonic and blood-nourishing effects. I take pleasure in saying that, although opposed to medicine in general, I really consider this an excellent preparation."

"I have not been able to take one day's rest since I returned from my long, hard western trip. I am sure there is not for

Paine's celery compound, which has a tonic effect, I should not be able to keep up and

"I recommended Paine's celery compound to a friend who dined with us yesterday, and on leaving here she went and bought a bottle. I shall do all I can for it, for I believe in it."

So the society woman, whose health and grace are famous the country over, and who is in a position to command the best medical advice, finds in Paine's celery compound the same relief from the effects of overwork and illness that the poorer, harder working woman finds.

And this great remedy that makes people well is equally within the reach of all. It is for sale in every respectable drug store in the country, and it is in greater demand to-day than any remedy in the world.

It is the one true specific for diseases arising from a debilitated nervous system, the scientific research of this country has produced. Prof. Edward E. Phelps, M. D., L. L. D. of Dartmouth college, first prescribed what is now known the world over as Paine's celery compound, a positive cure for dyspepsia, biliousness, liver complaint, neuralgia, rheumatism and kidney troubles. For the latter Paine's celery compound has succeeded again and again where everything else has failed.

Washington correspondents have recently given it a great deal of attention since the cures in that city.

The medical journals of the country have given more space in the last few years to the many remarkable cases where the use of Paine's celery compound has made people well than to any other one subject. Try it and find vigor, health and new life.

The Effect of a Kind Word.

A Detroit journal states that a man called at its office recently, and inquired for the "criminal reporter." It had no criminals serving as reporters, but the man was introduced to the reporter who attended to the business of the courts, and he proved to be the visitor said he had called to thank the reporter for being the means of his reformation. He said: "I want to talk with you. When I was convicted over in the Recorder's Court in the old City Hall, you wrote about me in the paper the other day. My name doesn't look like a criminal, but his identification was complete. It is the first offense, and he will regret it for five years at least," I read that the next morning as I was being taken to Jackson, and those words, "My name doesn't look like a criminal," made a deep impression on me, probably for the reason that I had not heard a kind word for a long time before. I cut those words out and pasted them up in my cell. I have come here today to thank you for writing them. They helped me to become an honest man. Regret it! You never wrote a truer word in your life. How I did suffer in prison! When my time was out I went to Chicago, and from there to St. Louis. I got work in a wholesale grocery store, and I worked hard. Five years ago my master sent me up into Nevada to look after a cattle ranch that he and his brother owned there. That suited me, and I became a herder, and now I am superintendent of the ranch, and get $300 a month. Good-by! You did me a good turn, and I'll never forget it."

Why People Have Freckles.

It is a well-known fact that red-haired individuals are more liable to become freckled than others, and science explains the phenomenon thus: "It is caused by a superabundance of iron in the blood. This it is that imparts the vigour, the elasticity, the great vitality, the overflowing, thoroughly healthy animal life which runs riot through the veins of the ruddy haired, and renders them more morose in all their emotions than their more languid fellow-creatures. The excess of iron is also the cause of freckles on the peculiarly clear, white skin, which invariably accompanies red hair. The skin being abnormally sensitive, the action of the sun's rays not only brings out the little brown spots in abundance, but also burns like a mustard plaster, producing a queer, creepy sensation, as if the skin were being wrinkled up."

Continues Her Confidences.

Single man (to himself)—I am sure that darling little angel loves me. She takes me into her confidence, and tells me all her troubles.

Same man (some years later)—Consarn it all! From morning till night, and night till morning, when I'm at home, I hear nothing but tales about the servants, the butcher, the tailor, the baker, the candlestick-makers and all the rest of 'em.—New York Weekly.

HAIL! YARMOUTH.

To day PROGRESS trespasses upon the space of its usual departments to find room for the numerous illustrations and interesting letter press descriptive of the advancement and prosperity of the town of Yarmouth.

Glancing over the six pages devoted to this purpose one cannot help thinking what a creditable thing it is that any community of the size of Yarmouth is able to point to so many industries, and to say that all of them were started with the capital and the faith of its own people.

When a representative of PROGRESS, bent on a vacation that would relieve mind and body, selected Yarmouth as one of the places where he would spend a few of his September days, he had no notion that he was where work would come to him, but a suggestion of Hon. L. E. BAKER'S that PROGRESS should illustrate the proposed new Grand Hotel was forwarded to him with some instructions that did not look forward to the publication of more than two portraits and the new hotel. The idea of illustrating Yarmouth in any degree seemed a popular one and in a few days fifty portraits and illustrations were in the hands of PROGRESS engravers. The views of Yarmouth are such as any city with many more people in it should be proud of and the portraits of the citizens need no second glance to impress the fact of their intelligence, enterprise and stability upon the reader.

Yarmouth, as pictured by the photographer and engraver and described in the letter press, is presented in an attractive form which does not however do it more than even justice—if indeed, that much can be said, for to those to whom each nook and corner is dear for very acquaintance sake there will be many scenes that they can readily call to mind that would have added much to the completeness and interest of such a paper.

PROGRESS is however glad to be able to do what it has, glad to show its thousands of readers what an enterprising town Yarmouth is and to cite it as an example that other communities would do well to imitate. Its chances are excellent for becoming as large and influential as any city in Maritime Canada. If the will and energy of its people meet with their proper reward such a prediction should be fulfilled in the life time of many of those who figure in these pages to day.

THE PEOPLE WILL RULE.

It is hardly necessary to recall to the readers of PROGRESS the high handed proceedings of two of the school trustees of Hampton station which deprived an old and valued teacher of a position, against the expressed wishes of the rate payers, and placed in his stead a favorite and intimate acquaintance of trustees PETERS and FOWLER. The circumstances were explained fully in PROGRESS at that time and the prediction hazarded that when the time came for the people to express themselves upon the conduct of the two trustees they would do so in unmistakable terms.

It is no surprise therefore to learn that a resolution condemning the high handed proceeding was passed at the school meeting held this week and that school trustee SMITH who opposed the act of his colleagues, PETERS and FOWLER was re-elected by a vote of three to one. It may not be too much to assume that when another year comes around and with it the turn of one of those gentlemen to retire he will not receive a similar endorsement.

The fact of being elected by the people as a school trustee does not give any man the right to act arbitrarily and against the expressed wishes of the majority of the people. This may not have been impressed upon Messrs FOWLER and PETERS before but they can hardly misunderstand the sentiment of the community now.

It is a satisfaction to PROGRESS to know that the stand it took in the matter at the time, which provoked much discussion and criticism has been so fully and completely endorsed.

The board of assessors and their system and lack of system appear to be getting it "in the neck"—to use a popular vulgarism. There is nothing so objectionable in one form or another in civic affairs at present as our present assessment system and the sooner steps are taken to inquire into the matter thoroughly the better.

If the attendance at the amusement resorts is any indication of the prosperity of the people, who will say that St. John is suffering from hard times? PROGRESS cannot recall such generous patronage as that extended to the Pinafore and GLEASON performances this week. But—they are good shows.

To Mayor DUGAN of Butte City, Montana—Welcome! It is the usual thing for a St. John man to make his mark anywhere but unusual for his native city to welcome him after so short an absence as the chief magistrate of a flourishing city.

POEMS WRITTEN FOR "PROGRESS"

Commons Ye Lords, Hail Gladstone! Thee the people greet As their own champion tried and true— Unbrided with titles of conceit, The public good thou wilt pursue.

Undaunted by the scowls of men, Whose arrogance must soon give way To servile fear, press on again— Press on again, and win the day.

Their doom is sealed, the Lords must go! Their haughtiness shall brought avail, But hasten on their overthrow, And no one shall their fate bewail.

And you, ye Commons, rejoice! A higher height you shall attain— The nation's will, the public voice, Are somewhat stronger than disdain. B. F. M.

A Change of Hope.

She was stily dressed, proud and tall, And withal A neat, well-turned ankle had Anna; Her sweet lips wore a smile, And her cheeks a blush Of nature's own paint

Till she, her blush, smile, and pride, and all Got a fall, As she stepped on a peel of banana, Which upset her whole style In a horrid crash. Fit to vex a saint.

LARSEN'S BOSTON LETTER.

Phases of the Fight for Governor—Remarks On the Candidates. BOSTON, Oct. 10.—The Republican candidate for Governor of Massachusetts was born in England.

During the next four weeks this fact will probably become known to every man, woman and child in the state, and should Hon. Frederick T. Greenidge be elected, it will mean a great deal.

The only office which a foreign born citizen cannot be elected to is the presidency, but in all others, America's adopted sons have had their share. This does not mean that a certain prejudice against everything English does not exist, for, on the contrary one finds it dropping out occasionally, especially in the farming districts, where the sons and daughters of the revolution are now strongest.

Mr. Greenhalge, however is a man of the people in every sense of the word, and when it is remembered that he arrived in America when he was 8 years of age and is now 51, he has not so much to answer for after all.

Then, since the campaign opened he has been out among the farmers making their sides ache with laughter, and they have already come to know him as a good-fellow who can make them feel at ease even in the presence of a candidate for the highest office in the state. And as long as they know him they will never have to change their opinion of Greenhalge in this respect. He is a man of many good qualities, and the same every day in the week. He is perfectly at home in a Sunday school, and if the clergyman were unable to be present, he would not—or has not might be better—hesitated to step into the pulpit and preach a sermon; while at the same time he is popular among the boys, and at a banquet he is what Artemus Word would term "the life and soul of the social board."

Mr. Greenhalge is a popular man in his own home, where he is best known and where familiarity is suffered to breed contempt, and his friends throughout the state evidently held him in the same regard. His popularity with the newspaper workers is remarkable, and one of the most amusing phrase of his fight for the nomination was, that while the editors of all the democratic papers were bitterly opposed to him, the news columns had nothing but good words and favorable tidings of the Greenhalge boom.

For several years William E. Russell has been the white haired boy of Massachusetts. A Democrat, he has been elected governor of a Republican State, with every other man elected on the State ticket a Republican, and he has been elected in a national election year, when with the exception of the Governorship the State gave a Republican majority.

William E. Russell is out of the race

this year. John E. Russell, a former congressman, was the Shepherd of the Democratic candidate. He was a successful secretary of the State board of agriculture, and it is claimed taught the farmers how to have considerable money, in making butter and other agricultural products. That is where he is expected to be the voters, Mr. Russell has a very small voice, and although he writes in autograph albums "no matter what the circumstance, keep your temper," good democrats who know say that John E. has the worst temper they ever ran across. It is so bad that when a number of people left the hall at a big meeting he was addressing he turned to the Democratic Committee and gave them fits. The meeting broke up in confusion.

Nevertheless, he has the reputation of being a ready resurper, sharp and chinking in debate, and able to hold his own with the best. Greenhalge is a keener. At a social gathering he is the soul of wit, can turn out bright sayings by the hour and make the fun continuous; but on the platform his sarcasm grates on the ear; it is cruel and scathing, and one can get tired of his high and his American citizenship and dared his opponents to say anything about him. He raved with excitement, his eyes flashed fire, the mob howled, and the press of Massachusetts has been howling ever since.

The campaign promises to be decidedly interesting, and no one will be surprised to see the republicans have this gait pretty much their own way.

It will be a campaign of "Look on this picture, then on that." "This" picture was taken last year, and "that" picture a few weeks ago. You know as well as the politicians do the smoke chimneys, the silk factories and all the bluff and buncombe which time alone will wear out.

They're started in on it already, and the democrats no matter how good their cause know they have a large contract on hand when they begin to try to convince the Grover Cleveland is not responsible for their being out of work. The number of people who know that under an administration they had work and that under another they had none, who know this without being able to understand the why or the wherefore of it all,—this class is as large here as anywhere else, and play the deuce.

Interest in the yacht races was intense this week, and a happier lot of people than that which packed Washington street in front of the bulletin boards, was surely never seen when it is considered that hundreds of them were there when they would rather have been earning their bread and butter.

The fluke of last Thursday awakened the interest to a remarkable extent, for it was feared that the cup was in danger. Valkyrie stock went up, and yachting was the proper thing to discuss until Saturday; then the American boat was man overboard and joy reigned supreme on Washington street Monday afternoon.

The Sun Insurance Office.

When the Sun Insurance Office has attained an age of 183 years, as is the case with the Sun Fire of London, more than any other interest naturally attaches to its annual statements of condition and operations. Our readers will therefore be interested to examine the report of the company for 1892, which in this issue we lay before them.

That very little trading profit, as the phrase goes, was realized by any of the companies on the fire underwriting of 1892, is well known, and the Sun shared in the common experience to a great extent, its loss ratio being a little less than 66 per cent. a ratio to which that office is not accustomed. That this was held to be a general average of the British fire offices, however, presents some gratifying features to the managers. Glancing at the revenue account for 1892, we find that the net premium income was $5,146,630, and about $360,400 in excess of the previous year. Interest income was $355,400, the total income being $5,502,030. Of this amount, losses for $3,393,235 and expenses all told, for $1,650,530, leaving a balance of income over expenditure of $458,265.

After adding to the 40 per cent. reserve fund for unexpired risks, a balance of $314,275 was carried over, making a total of $772,540. The loss ratio was 63.7, or about 20 per cent. less than the general average of the company.

As most of our readers are aware, the Sun entered the Dominion for business in June of last year, under the management of Mr. H. M. Blackburn of Toronto. In the first seven months of the year were left for organization and prosecution of the business over a widely extended field. And yet, greatly to the credit of Manager Blackburn the risks written before the close of the year amounted to almost four and a half millions of dollars, and the losses incurred thereon were about 26 per cent. of the premiums received. That the Sun will speedily stand in the front rank in Canada, as it does elsewhere, it is easy to predict.—(Insurance & Finance Chronicle.)

Mr. Ira Cornwall, St. John, N. B. is the General Agent for the Maritime provinces for this Company and the losses incurred, is prepared to establish a number of agencies where the Company is not already represented.

SCOTTISH CHILDREN'S FUN.

How the Little Folk of Scotland Have a Merry Time.

GLASGOW, Scotland, Oct. 3.—The little lads and lasses of Scotland are a rugged and merry lot. In no land in which I have wandered are children more self-sustaining in olden or improvised pastimes and games. I have often thought, too, that where their denials are greatest, where poverty pinches hardest, there could always be found the cheeriest little souls and the heartiest expression of childish hilarity among the "rosy-cheeked," blitheome Scottish bairns. Geography, condition and weather can furnish no exception.

It is the same with highland as with lowland children; with the ragged, hungry little folk of the western isles as with the romping rollickers of Glasgow; with the wee peerie lairds and ladies and fishermen's children of the Shetlands and Orkneys as with the hard-hearted, hard-fisted bairns of "Auld Reekie" wynds and closes; and as peculiarly the same with the little nabobs of iron or stone-grit parks of the cities as with children of the border towns and those of the misty glens and corries of the North. Childhood in Scotland may know asperities of environment and rigor of discipline unusual in some other lands; but the compensation is here in the fact that Scottish children never "mope." Once released from duty or relieve from discipline they leap to their games free as their own wild winds and mist; and the savagery of Scottish storm that howls up the foaming firths, or walls among the lochs and glens has for them no more terror than sunshine, when there is liberty for sport and play.

The children's folk-lore of Scotland is peculiarly rich in counting-out rhymes which are here called "hitting out" and "chapping-out." As with the counting-out rhymes of the children of all countries, the one "chapped out" is to bear the disagreeable or distinguished part in whatever game may be proposed.

There are hosts of games in which the little folk of both sexes unite, in and out of doors, and which are particularly enjoyed in holiday time when their elders are occupied in more serious festivities. One of these is "Lubin Loo," and it is always productive of screaming merriment, owing to errors by players in obeying the leaders' commands. The children form in a ring, joining hands when they all sing:

Here we play Lubin Loo, Here we play Lubin Loo, Here we play Lubin Loo, 'Tis a Saturday night!

The entire game consists in correctly following the sung injunctions, as— Now all your right hands in; Now all your right hands out; Shake them a little, a little, And then whirl round about.

The quickness and dexterity of the little ones are often remarkable. The right foot is put through the tactics; then the left foot, the right and left ears; the nose, the chin, the eyes, and finally the head.

"Oranges and Lemons" is a good deal of a hurly-burly pastime. An elder boy and girl stand and grasp hands. One secretly takes the name "Oranges," the other that of "Lemons." They then proceed to the tactics; and in "whispering" which side each of their playmates has chosen, when the leaders again grasp hands and call for their respective adherents. These grasp their leaders and each other about the waist, and a test of strength, accompanied by tremendous encouraging cheering, is the result.

A jolly little game is "Hunting the Slipper." After a "hunter" is chosen, the boys and girls sit or rather squat in a round ring with crooked knees, so that skirts and tails will cover them. The "hunter" from the outside brings a slipper to any child in the ring.

"When will ye ha' it din (done)?" Any day may be mentioned by the recipient at which the "hunter" expresses satisfaction, and with a cheery "A'right!" turns away. The fun begins when the hunter returns and demands the slipper, but is met with "Oh, I passed it on!" until it is really discovered which is never until the hunter has met with many engaging adventures, when the one in whose possession the slipper is found, in turn becomes the long discomfited "hunter."

The "Mulberry Bush" affords infinite variety of change in its action and application. Boys and girls may "go round by it," but it is usually a pastime for girls. Joining hands they sing:

Here we go round by the mulberry bush, Mulberry bush, mulberry bush, Here we go round by the mulberry bush On a cold and frosty morning— brushing the hair, brushing the teeth, walking to school, sitting at school, and countless other duties, pleasures and shirkings of childhood being imitated in action as "Mulberry Bush" is sung.

There are myriads of girls' games nearly all of which, curiously enough, as in other English speaking countries, seem to derive their greatest interest and fascination to little Scottish lassies from their nearness to the mock heroics in the courting, love and marriage affairs of their elders. The commonest of these are "Rise Sally Walker," in which Sally "rises" and "follows her guidman," is wedded, has lovely children, "first a girl and then a boy," in which all of her wedded joys and sorrows are delineated, with marching and singing. "In and Out the Window" in which, in and out of rings, with the interminable singing and marching, a lassie evidently finally departs, and her lover is shriekingly enjoined to "follow her up to London." "My Name is Queen Mary."

My age is sixteen, My father's a farmer On yonder green, He's plenty of money To treat me as he pleases, Can take me as he likes, But there is a bonnie lassie who gives her "Ha, ha, ha," and takes "her awa." "Breakfast Time," where "Breakfast time" coming on, as well as dinner, supper, bed, church, school, play, and all other possible times, in which it is exact and proper time "to catch a bonnie lassie." "Beds," in which "mither" is sought to buy "milk-scales" for her daughter. The mother agast inquires where the money is to come from. The father's feather bed shall be sold. The successive queries and answers then put the father in the girl's bed, the girl's in the boy's bed, the boys in the pig-sty, the pig in the wash-tub, with the final dramatic shift of having the family washing "done by the river-side," and that most popular and universal of all Scottish girls' pastimes, "The Gala Ship," or "Merrima Tansa."

This Merrima Tansa (perhaps "Merry Matanza") is played by all the girls' parties joining hands in a circle, upon which the march round and round singing:

Three times round goes the galleon ship, And three times round goes the galleon ship, Three times round goes the galleon ship, And sinks to the bottom of the sea! They repeat this thrice, curtseying low. The first to curtsey is placed in the centre of the circle, when the others sing:

Choose your maidens one by one, One by one, one by one; Choose your maidens one by one— And down goes all courtesy! Merrima Tansa!

She chooses her maidens. They take her to a distance, when she is secretly told the name of her lover. The remainder of the girls imitate sweeping and sing several stanzas to the effect that they will "sweep the house till the bird comes home," when the bride is now placed within the circle, and from a score of an hundred stanzas, with marching and various imitations of what the lucky bride accomplishes or undergoes are sung. Each one closes with "down goes Merrima Tansa" and the head ducking; and this wonderful music-drama of childhood is not concluded until the christening of the bride's first-born with.

Next Sunday morn to church we must go, A babe on her knee, the best of us— And down goes Merrima Tansa!

Drawn With the Thumb Nail.

In picture collections to be seen both in China and Japan, are specimens of some most remarkable pictures of all kinds drawn with the thumb nail. The nails of the thumb on the left hand of these peculiar artists are taken great care of, and are allowed to grow to an enormous length, sometimes to ten or twelve inches. They are then pared down to a pen-shaped point, being scraped thin in order to make it flexible. Dipping this oddly-constructed pen in beautiful vermilion or sky-blue ink, the only kinds used in "sacred" thumb-nail drawings, the artist gracefully outlines his work. Occasionally the bold touches from the studio of a master in this department of "art" are life-size, and are sketched by a few sweeps of the artist's arm. Like other Oriental pictures and sketches, these sacred thumb-nail pictures are mounted and rolled up like scrolls.

A Yarmouth Man's Valued Belles. Mr. Moody is quite an antiquarian and has some valuable collections at his house. Among other things are a fine oil painting of the Queen's father, the Duke of Kent, and a gorget, a protection for the neck, worn by him. He has letters and cards of invitation to dinner, signed by the Duke, and addressed to Col. Moody, the great grandfather of Mr. Moody. He has, besides, correspondence between his ancestor and Governors Sir James Kept and Sir James Wentworth, and also a piece of the red coat worn by the Colonel over a hundred years ago and which to all appearances is just as good as when it came out of the loom, preserving fully the beautiful and rich colour.

Progress Clubbing List. A number of the best magazines and papers in the country have at various times asked PROGRESS to make a combination clubbing figure with them, at which it would be possible for both papers to induce new subscribers. PROGRESS started its clubbing list with the Cosmopolitan a few days ago, and from this date will add to the list until it includes the very best literature in the country.

The publisher of PROGRESS will send it one year to any subscriber in combination with any of the publications in the following list at the price set opposite them, under the column "Club Price":

Regular Club Price: Cosmopolitan and PROGRESS, $3.50; Donahue's Magazine, $4.00; Ladies' Home Journal, $3.00; Remit by Post Office or Express Order to Edward S. Carter, St. John, N. B. Always state with what number you wish the magazine to begin.

On the 4th inst. at the residence of the bride's father, Miss Maggie Byers was united in marriage to Mr. Robert Pennington, of the firm of Porter & Pennington, of Yarmouth, N. S. The ceremony, held in a serene and happy couple played a very choice programme of music.

For the atrocious crime of being members of the Milton brass band some of our young citizens are meeting with rather severe punishment at the hands of some one who is evidently a very energetic supporter of the town band. Whether the members of the band are to be punished for the crime, or whether they should not assume the province of determining but it certainly shows very bad taste for the gentlemen of either band to show such spirit of antagonism or to contumaciously such facts of jealousy as have lately been indicated. J. P. T. Wain.

GRAND FALLS.

Oct. 11.—Mrs. Walter Armstrong and two children of Ottawa, are visiting here. Mr. Armstrong the guests of her friends the Misses Harts. NOTES FOR HOUSEWIVES.

I would like to call the attention of house-keepers this week to a few articles that I think are of special value.

POTATOES. Snowflake is undoubtedly the most popular variety.

CANADIAN ONIONS are now arriving in large quantities.

GODFISH, on the quality of which so much depends, is considered this year by everybody to be much better than usual.

NEW BUCKWHEAT (yellow variety) is now in stock, and the luxury of pancakes for breakfast is possible.

FLOUR. That $3.50 flour that we spoke about last week came to hand as advertised, and looks well.

TILLEY CHEESE which is esteemed by wholesale, retailing customers as one of the very best varieties of New Brunswick cheese.

PETTIJOHN'S BREAKFAST FOOD, which is a favorite morning dish with so many people, is on our shelves again.

CRYSTAL RICE, a new variety of rice, looks as though it would become very popular.

CHOCOLATE CREAMS are not exactly a household necessity, but surely they come in the nature of a desert after the above standard articles.

HARDRESS CLARKE, Cash Grocery, 73 and 77 Sydney Street. (near Princess).

THE HORICON.

One of the Leaders of this Season. We have also the Jewel Star, The Dane, The Mayflower, The Fire King, The Vendome, the New Silver Moon, and a number of others.

We invite inspection. Sheraton & Whittaker, 38 KING ST. Telephone 358.

WHAT TO WEAR is a very important question. We are certain we can enlighten you on this point. A. GILMOUR, Tailor, 72 Germain Street.

Pork Sausage, Lard in Cakes. Sugar Cured Hams. - - - Order Early Telephone 133. - - - JOHN HOPKINS. 186 Union Street.

HALIFAX NOTES.

FOOTBALL is just now the great interest and in spite of the unpropitious day there was quite a gathering of spectators at the Polo Ground on Saturday afternoon to see the first game of the season; this was between the army and navy, and was played to decide whether a United Service team should be entered to play for the trophy, or one from each branch of the service. Nothing was decided on Saturday, and a second game was played on Monday, with the result that a joint team composed of both army and navy is entered for the trophy series. As things are now arranged the United Service will play the Wanderers to-day, and Dalhousie on Wednesday next, and the greatest possible interest will be taken in the game. On the following Saturday the same teams will play, as the ships are to leave here on the last day of October. The United Service games must be finished before that date. The two first weeks of November will see the Wanderers and Dalhousie pitted against one another, by which time there will doubtless be excitement enough and to spare on the merits of the respective fleets.

The harvest festival held at the Garrison chapel on Sunday evening last was one of the prettiest ever seen here. The arrangement of fruit was especially noteworthy and effective, and the effect of the decorations particularly good. I hear that among the ladies of the parish taking an interest in the festival the Hon. Mrs. Montgomery Moore and the Hon. Misses Colborne were prominent.

Thursday evening is appointed for the harvest festival for St. Paul's church and among the ladies and gentlemen assisting the choir are Mrs. Hagarty, Mrs. Taylor, Mr. Dodwell and Mr. George Burgoyne. The music of this service will be especially good.

The weather on Tuesday was not very fine for the grand attack on the town by the navy, and its defence by the regulars and the militia. But in spite of the showery weather the manoeuvres were witnessed by a good many people, who turned out to see the ships come in under a supposed heavy fire from the forts in the harbour. The show was over at an early hour in the afternoon, though some of the soldiers posted at a distance did not get home until after dark, very weary and with very muddy, but covered with martial glory, as the navy were understood to have been repulsed with great loss. For the lookers on there was really not much to see, except the smoke from the big guns at the forts and the ships firing. The prettiest part of the affair was perhaps the entrance of two torpedo boats into the harbor after dark, with the search light playing upon them. The squally day kept many people at home who would otherwise have gone out on the water to see the ships come up, so that the whole scene was not as animated as past days of the same sort.

The post of Spanish Consul in Halifax has been given to Mr. W. G. Jones, of A. G. Jones & Co. Mr. J. M. Leech de Diaz, who has had the appointment for the past few years, leaves on Saturday for Spain. Mrs. and the Misses Knapp have shortly for England.

Sir Charles Tupper, during his short visit to Halifax, is the guest of Hon. D. McN. Parker, M. D. Mrs. Llewellyn Jones and Miss Jones were among the passengers of the "Carthagenian" from Newfoundland.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Harvey have arrived from Newfoundland. Mr. Leach left this week for a short visit to New York. Mr. John Harvey, Dr. Treanman, and Mr. and the Misses Farrell, returned this week from the Chicago Fair.

Rev. L. and Mrs. Jordan have arrived from England. Among well known people, who have gone this week, to visit the Chicago Exhibition, are Mrs. Henry Peters, Mrs. Walter Peters, Mrs. H. G. Bauld and Mrs. H. L. Chipman. Also Mr. Doane, City Engineer.

Mrs. Edward Farrell has issued invitations for a small dance, on Thursday, of this week, all the guests being young people, and no married couples being invited. This is really the only way in which to keep a dance within a certain limit, when people are possessed of a large waiting list.

Several dinners have been given this week, one of the largest by Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Kenny at Thorsdale. Next week there will be a large dinner at Bellevue House, where General and Mrs. Manly Montgomery Moore thoroughly understand the art of dinner-giving.

By the way I am told that the Lady Aberdeen society on which there has been so much comment, decided at its last meeting that much good could be done by sending good reading matter to out of the way places in the home provinces. This branch of work deserves as much encouragement as the sending of literature to the far West, and will be appreciated in the proper quarters.

The Grand Opera Company opened on an enormous house on Monday evening, and should we would during their three week season of the attendance an earnest of things to come. Miss Edith Mason's singing is much improved since her last appearance in Halifax. For the production of a pack of local possible attraction had not been together, not the least of which was the appearance of a pack of local fox hounds (or shall we say wildcat hounds?) on the stage.

NEW GLASGOW.

[Progress is for sale in New Glasgow by A. O. Fritchard and H. H. Henderson.] Oct. 11.—Mrs. Harrington Strong goes to Halifax this week. For the past month she has been the guest of her mother, Mrs. Murray. Mr. Craig left on Monday for Toronto, where he will remain for some months.

Rev. J. McCreath, of Truro, and Rev. Mr. McPherson, of Cape Breton, were last week the guests of Rev. J. Shaw. Mr. James Winfield, of Halifax, is in town to take charge of the central telephone office, assisted by Miss Hattie Underwood and Miss Minnie McLeod.

Mr. William Wright, of Montreal, is here on a business trip, in a few days he goes to Cumberland Falls, P. E. I., for a very interesting event. Miss Anne McNeil, of Antigonish, will next week be the guest of her sister, Mrs. J. Fred McDonald.

Mr. Rod McColl spent the early part of the week in town. Mr. George Murray is home from Chicago. Mr. Bailey, assisted by her daughter, Miss Maud, will entertain a number of married lady friends on Friday evening.

Mr. Arch McColl is now travelling for the New Glasgow Street Co. Rev. D. M. Gordon, of Halifax, spent Sunday in town, and delivered a particularly eloquent sermon in New St. Andrew's church. Miss Tina Green, daughter of Capt. Green, has sufficiently recovered from her accident to be out again. The X. L. N. T. club have issued invitations for a quadrille party, on Friday evening next, which promises to be quite a brilliant affair, particulars next week.

Rev. Mr. Turnbull of St. Andrew's spent Sunday last in town, and preached in Florida on Wednesday. Mrs. McNeill of Charlottetown and her daughter, Mrs. McNeill of Halifax, are this week the guests of Miss S. Sutherland. Miss Green left yesterday to spend the winter with friends in Boston.

Mr. Carmichael of Montreal, representing Lyman Son & Co., is in town. Last evening a grand concert was given in Westville by the following well known artists: Miss Jean McDonald, soprano; Macon B. McKay, tenor; Mr. Will Dickson (Pictou) reader; Miss Fulton, pianist, assisted by St. Andrew's Quartette in plantation melodies. Financially and otherwise it was quite a success.

Capt. and Mrs. James Ellis arrived home from New York on the Thursday last week, and are the guests of Capt. and Mrs. Wm. Lawrence, "Abolition Hall." Mrs. George Whidden is paying a visit to her daughter, Mrs. E. S. Lay, Amherst, N. S. Mrs. B. B. Eaton is visiting friends in Truro and Amherst.

Mr. E. A. Donaglas is to leave shortly to engage in Meason work to the Northwest. Rev. I. C. Jack is visiting Synod in Truro, Mr. Jack presided in St. Paul's church on Sunday in St. David's presbyterian church. Miss B. P. McArthur returned on Saturday from a very pleasant visit among school friends in Truro. Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Reid are busy engaged decorating and otherwise fitting up the rink, for the evening of

A CREDIT TO THE CITY.

The finest piano room in this city is today A. PETERSEN, 68 KING ST., who has just fitted up a large room up-stairs at great cost, for the use of ladies and gentlemen who take an interest in music. Any one desirous of entertaining their friends at a "Musical" can have the use of the room and Steinway Grand Piano free of charge, by arranging dates with Mr. Petersen, who is the agent for Steinway, Chickering and Nordheimer pianos.

RHEUMATISM.

An attack of Rheumatism is usually preceded by Pain in the Joints and Muscles, with more or less "Malaise," and with this warning the actual attack may be ushered in with most severe pain which may attack any joint, but most usually the knee, ankle, elbow or wrist. The afflicted part is extremely painful, tender, swollen and hot, and there may be fever, with profuse sweating. The pain is intensified by the least movement, and has a tendency to migrate from one joint to another.

WHAT TO DO—Go to bed at once, between good woolen blankets, and wear a flannel bedgown, dine on light, nutritious diet, abstain from Meat and Stimulants, wrap the painful joints in flannel wet with "SCIATICINE" LINIMENT, and cover with cotton wool, and take "SCIATICINE" MIXTURE internally and you will get immediate relief. Then avoid exposure to cold and damp and wear flannel next the skin always. Continue taking Sciaticine for two weeks after the pain has gone, to prevent recurrence of the attack—and if you feel "used up," take HANINGTON'S QUININE WINE AND IRON to tone up the system and Improve the Blood as Rheumatism is apt to recur when the system is weak. These medicines can be had of any reliable druggist in Canada.

It has been our custom at stated seasons to give our patrons some souvenir of any special occasion. The one to be used next week exceeds in value any that we have had heretofore. So much so is this the case we must put some restrictions on their circulation. In the past it has been impossible to discriminate between patrons and usual customers; and we have felt they went to many less derogating of our consideration than others who did not get one. To remedy this evil we have decided to give one only to purchasers of goods amounting to one dollar. Every person who gets one under the circumstances will be quite sure they are welcome to it. My wife has for many years been a sufferer from severe Nervous Headache for which she found little help. She has tried many things that promised well, but performed little. Last fall a friend gave her a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla. It seems surprising what simply one bottle could and did do for her. The attacks of headache decreased in number and were less violent in their intensity, while her general health has been improved. Her appetite has also been better. Mr. Branscomb's home is in Chipman, Queens Co., N. B.

It was there that a representative of the Groder company called upon him, Sept. 1st, of his present year. His greeting was most cordial. He gladly acknowledged his thanks, giving expression to the following statement:

"It is five years since I first became afflicted with a form of indigestion. Last winter it became more severe, developing into chronic diarrhoea. I cannot tell you how much I suffered or six long weeks. It seemed as though relief could not be found. You will remember how I told you of my condition and asked your advice about taking a bottle of GRODER'S SYRUP. You told me that the medicine was a laxative and might not meet my needs. I delayed buying for a few hours until I began to hope that it would help me. Even my clothes seemed a burden because of bloating of stomach. It was with difficulty that I kept about sufficiently to attend to my business.

But I am a well man now from the use of your remedy. In three days after I bought GRODER'S SYRUP the terrible pain and distress across my stomach were removed. My bowels rapidly assumed a natural, healthy condition. Now I eat and drink as well as I ever could. I have gained constantly in flesh since March last. I am perfectly cured.

It seems a duty for me to state my case fully, that others who suffer as I did may know where to find a cure. Truly yours, E. A. BRANSCOMB.

THE TOWN OF YARMOUTH.

SOME DESCRIPTION OF IT FROM MANY STANDPOINTS, ILLUSTRATED WITH VIEWS OF ITS STREETS, THE TOWN, SOME BUSINESS HOUSES, AND PORTRAITS OF SOME CITIZENS.

Rising into fame among the summer saunterers of the Republic is the portal town of the Maritime Provinces, and no place is better suited to be the gate of the East for none will convey a more pleasing first impression to tourists.

In the olden days, nine hundred years ago, the Norsemen first visited this country and coasting along the white beaches and undulating reaches of the south shore, their many miles there are. Certainly there are a great many; every family seat, every home, whether of very superior pretensions or of only modest demeanour, is belted in by its girth of green. The moist climate of Yarmouth particularly well adapts it for the growth of hedges. They spring up to a height of about three feet in a couple of years, and they retain their verdant color the whole year round. Some of these hedges are very fine, and occasionally one is seen that an ordinary tree would not feel too uppish to mate with.

On the activity back of town is a very pretty cemetery, of which Yarmouth is very proud, and well she might be, for it is always beautiful. A very suggestive sight to the writer when he visited it was to see a little child all alone decking a grave with flowers. If that is how Yarmouth children highhouse. Farther in toward the mainland the arm seems to lose some of its strength, for it is here nothing more than a bar which has to be protected from the corroding sea by a breakwater. Here there is quite a fishing and canning village, known as Fish Point. A horse-shoe beach here affords splendid bathing facilities and is a good location for any one who would wish to erect a hotel. Three temperatures of water could be obtained at the spot. The water might be hemmed into the cove where it would be warmed by the sun into genial heat on the shallow flats. The cold surf bath could be indulged in, and one of intermediate temperature as well. Thus a physician's prescription for baths of assorted temperatures could be filled here by nature without the aid of man, and to much better purpose than when the misty water of city baths are used.

following year Yarmouth made its first contributions to these departments of the newspaper. There were no newspapers in those days to chronicle them, but we take the opportunity to do so now. Anna Perry was the first birth, Lucy Crosby was the first deceased and John Crosby, jr., and Patty Howard were the principals in the first marriage.

Yarmouth county is very much broken up in its configuration. Great bays bite way into the land and the coast is strewn promiscuously with islands where wild fowl congregate. In its formation one general system is followed. It consists of a parcel of parallel river valleys running directly north and south, rising in numerous lakes in the heart of the county and flowing between stretches of flats at their mouth. Between these river valleys rise ranges of hills. This formation town! Going north the tourist skirts a chain of lakes which form the valley of the Yarmouth system. These are connected with one another and with the harbour with one narrow passage. Around that which unites the harbour with the first of the chains are clustered the handsome residences of Milton. These lakes were exceedingly unfortunate in their christening, having been dubbed with the very unromantic appellations of First, Second and Third lakes. A person must not, however, judge them by their names for he would obtain a decidedly wrong impression of their possessions. No finer stretch of water could be imagined, nothing better could be desired in the way of boating and canoeing. It is a pity that Yarmouth does not possess a boat club and that the facilities for boating in the way of boat houses are not greater. The natural endowments are superb and the other re-

Wonder Strand, they arrived at the bay where Yarmouth now stands, and passing the island at the mouth of the harbor, they sailed up and entered a charming wood-circled, island-dotted chain of lakes linked by narrow passages. They were delighted with the place and there, story tells, they made their homes.

Six centuries later, those intrepid French explorers, the fathers of Acadia, the brave DeMonts and the gallant Champlain, in their turn explored the coast and again the site of Yarmouth town was visited and the unique conditions there were admired. Much they wondered at the level stretches of sedgy shore, verdant with sturdy life, much they admired the beauty of the lakes.

Later, but more thorough in their visitations, the English came a century and a half afterwards, and being delighted with the fisheries they remained and made their home there.

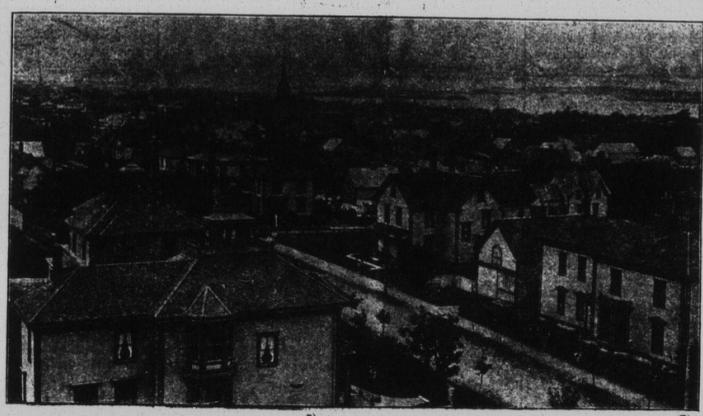

Last of these movements is one going on now when American tourists are beginning to flock to Yarmouth to enjoy the coolness and the balmy breezes of its summer months, to drive among its picturesque surrounding beaches, to fish and shoot among the islands and lakes that abound in the vicinity, to boat and bathe in the waters that lave its sloping shores and to lounge in its pleasant hotels and saunter along its tree-shaded and hedge-lined streets.

All the travellers and explorers of the past were pleased with the natural endowments of this place where in the stirring days of the present a little city has arisen. Now, the travellers of to-day are just as much pleased with these natural endowments, considered from a tourist's point of view, in fact from any point of view, and the thousands who landed there this year

Yarmouth has had a tendency to move upward, speaking, of course, from a geographical point of view, though the same remark might be made from a commercial, intellectual or moral point of view. Taking other instances in the provinces, St. John moved up the harbor, Moncton and Fredericton moved up river. So, in Yarmouth the business which was down at the lower end is now transacted in the central position. This is accounted for by the fact that the harbor makes in there and wharfage facilities are the best. These inducements were sufficient to draw the ship-builders, fish dealers and manufacturers there.

Yarmouth has the inevitable Water street and Main street of the seacoast town. On the former are located all the factories and the warehouses and wharves of those who are interested in shipping. On Main street, are located some handsome blocks and the street has a neat and prosperous appearance. This street is about two miles long and is traversed by a splendid electric car service. Back of this the residential portion of the town extends for about a mile, at first a perfectly level stretch, at length rising gently into a slight elevation. Here to these retreats from the cares and turmoil of the day, the people of Yarmouth retire after office doors have been locked and spend cool and pleasant evenings amid grove-embowered houses and delightful lawns and gardens where the art of landscape gardening has been brought to the highest degree of perfection. For everyone in this most charming of towns has a pretty residence and grounds. Of course the place possesses a large wealthy class who would naturally have are brought up, no wonder is it that they respect their dead. Then further up is a waste place, where brush and wild plants grow, but which will be turned into a park when occasion and the volume of travel demand. Some of the council are working hard for it, and with energetic men in its advocacy, it must be at least a possibility. Over the hill and a few miles away lies the truly Arcadian vale of Arcadia, with a stream winding in sinuous placidity past sloping meadows and grazing kine and wind-fanned marshes and miniature islands and then hilling into slumber a quiet village, murmurs tranquilly like the fabled swan, singing to its death in the all-devouring ocean. At the mouth of Yarmouth harbor Bunker's Island stretches across and protects it from boisterous winds. Beloved of mar-

This neck is within easy distance of Bunker's Island, which, by the way, is not really an island but a peninsula connected with the Yarmouth side by a sandy isthmus. Outside the island and inclosed between Cape Fouchin, which is French for forked, and Chebogue Point, a corruption of the Miemie Itobogue (spring water), lies Yarmouth sound, an admirable place for yachting, as the wind is steady and brisk almost always. Chebogue Point is the extremity of the backbone of Yarmouth, the hill in its rear separating the valleys of Yarmouth and Arcadia and then leaping far south into the sea in the shape of Chebogue Point. Here the first settlers stopped about one hundred and thirty years ago, when they came from the neighboring colonies, and the name Town Point commemorates the fact. Sunday Point is another historic suggestion, for it was on Sunday that they landed, and the date was June 9th, 1761. On that day these adventurous families laid the foundation of a town which now has about 7000 inhabitants. The heads of these families were Sealed Landers, Ebenezer Ellis and Moses Perry. They had the usual trials and tribulations of first settlers and did not have to wait long to participate in those three great events to which all humanity rushes and which sum up our whole existence—births, deaths and marriages. The requirements should be added. Second lake is small, and is best adapted for a canoe to hold two on a moonlight night. The others are longer, about two miles each, and present a good sweep for rowing and paddling. They are nicely bordered by a tree-lined shore and slopes that rise into hills and protect them from the winds. Set in a luxuriant valley and studded with islands they present a very pleasing prospect and one of the most delightful of Yarmouth drives is to skirt the lakes. A thing observable when taking such a drive is the fact that the road along First lake is bordered on the shore side by a walk where there is only room enough for two. Tourists who are young in years should remember this fact, for it is a very romantic walk and just overlooks the lake.

On the opposite side of the harbor from Yarmouth lie the pleasant meadows of Overton, where just as the writer walked about on his pleasant tour of inspection the afternoon was breathing sweet fragrance. Here was found, some years ago, a valuable historic relic, which has produced considerable controversy among historians. It is the Norse stone, which, unlike the many supposed Norse remains discovered in New England, is believed to be genuine, and is pronounced such by high authorities on Norse questions. It is an established fact that the Vikings under Lief the Lucky visited America, and founded the town of Brathahlid, in the county of Vineland, the Good. So in regard to the location of these places that controversy has arisen, and it has been a moot point as to whether Vineland was in New England or in Nova Scotia. Both places answer equally well as regards distance, general nature of coast, climate etc., and Yarmouth answers admirably to the description of Brathahlid with its location on a tidal harbor, protected by an island, and connected with a lake by a passage. The likeness of description, and the finding of the stone, when associated, makes quite an array of evidence in favor of the supposition that will carry away with them to the summer-hot factory towns of New England stories of the fond days they spent in the fairy land of Nova Scotia, and next summer will return in redoubled numbers to summer there.

But this is not all, for Yarmouth is to supplement its unsurpassed natural endowments with the best and most commodious of those artificial comforts, which are almost as indispensable to the easy spending American, and next season will witness a complete hotel equipment, good boating and bathing-accommodations and all other requisites.

tastily appointed homes with appropriate surroundings. But beyond these, among those more moderately circumstanced there is the same prevailing desire to have a home upon which they can look with pleasure. Yarmouth is essentially a home town, the comforts of home are the boon of life there and naturally home integrity prevail. Considered from a moral point of view Yarmouth is unrivalled and its excellence in this respect may be ascribed entirely to its delightful homes. The lovely English hawthorne hedge is much in vogue in Yarmouth, and it would be an interesting speculation as to how liers is Bunker's Island, for it affords a safe retreat from the weather in two ways. When seamen are under the weather, actually, they retreat to the safe anchorage which it provides; when they are under the weather, metaphorically, they retreat to the haven of refuge which it again provides—a marine hospital. Extending out from the west side of the harbor, opposite to that on which Yarmouth stands, reaches a long arm half bent in a greedy attitude and with two fingers sticking out at the end. This is Yarmouth cape, West Cape, or Cape Fouchin as it is variously termed. At the end is a high wooded bluff and at the very extremity stands a where the Acadian in his graceful-hued costume, and his unique character appeared. The presence of the Indian, the Norseman and the Acadian, gives color to the days of the past that the chronicles of the English do not give. The French Acadians had settlements at Chebogue and also at Lake Vaughan, on the Tuskent chain, but with the rest of their race they were dispossessed of their lands and the story of the occurrence is wrapped amid a wonderful mystery of legend and story that, misere dictum, is being dissipated by the sun of the present and lost to mankind. So much for the surroundings east of the Yarmouth was the site of Brathahlid. The inscription on the stone was translated—Haki's son addressed the men—and the records of these expeditions tell that one Haki was a member of them. The point is, however, unsettled, but whether or not Yarmouth was the Vineland of today, for the grapes of its hothouses are great luxuries. West of Overton is the valley of Iseogoggin, corrupted by the English in their indelicacy, of taste into Cheogoggin, a delightful region. How inadequate the description of a beautiful town and a prosperous country! But may it serve its purpose.

T. B. FLINT, M. P.

Mr. T. B. Flint, M. P., for Yarmouth Co., is a descendant of one of the first New Englanders to settle at Yarmouth. It is said that his ancestor was the first white man to sail up Yarmouth harbour. He was the eldest son of the late John F. Flint and was born in April, 1817. He was educated at Yarmouth and Sackville and graduated B. A., in 1837. In 1871 he graduated L. L. B., from Harvard and studied also with the late Hon. J. W. Ritchie, Judge in Equity. In 1872 he was admitted to the bar.

J. W. WALSH.

...The portrait of J. W. Walsh, B. A., Principal of the Yarmouth Business College and School of Shorthand and Typewriting, appears on this page. The writer spent a very pleasant hour with the principal while he briefly outlined the modus operandi of his institution. The school is divided into three departments—Business, Shorthand and Typewriting, each under the charge of an experienced teacher, who, as far as possible, must hold the teachers' diploma of the school, the principal himself an expert in all the departments, dividing his labors among the several classes from the beginning to the closing of the course. A definite change is made in the curriculum, provided the standing of the student in the English branches is satisfactory, otherwise the charges are monthly; and indeed these charges are so moderate that financially speaking almost any person can receive a business training in this school. From the entrance of the pupil to the close his studies are intensely practical, and not a few, especially in the business department, holding positions of trust now in Yarmouth and the United States, have had an occasion to enter the "Actual Business" course, so practical is the method of instruction here. Each of the departments is well equipped with apparatus, and all the aids necessary to thoroughly fortify the student for business life; and it has yet to be learned that any graduate of this institution has ever failed of success. The principal of this school, from his association with societies in the United States, has unequalled facilities for assisting his graduates to positions of trust and responsibility. Among the students attending this school were some of the sons and daughters of the best educated citizens of Yarmouth. It must be gratifying to the teachers of such an institution to know that the work done here is appreciated by that class of the community. Still the classes are not so large as such an institution deserves, but the Principal has, he says, no tears for the success of his school in a progressive community like Yarmouth. "Let me tell you," said he, "we have no growers, no fossils, no moss-backs in this Yarmouth of ours. Every mother's son of us is brimming over with enterprise and pluck; and even those of us who never had a mother are full of the thing. In a community like this everything succeeds—blood must tell." The young people of Yarmouth who may desire a business training have at their very doors an institution second to none in the provinces. The graduates of the Yarmouth Business College are no incompetents. Young men and young women who want a business training should communicate with the Principal of the Yarmouth Business College.

young man, Mr. Vickery has the satisfaction of noting the excellent results that are sure to reward the personal adaptation for business, good judgement in purchasing, close attention to the demands of the trade, careful enquiry as to the advanced needs of the public and a continuous outlook for whatever is new, novel, or desirable in a business that particularly requires these elements of personal qualifications are the special features by which Mr. Vickery has succeeded in building up an excellent and increasing trade.

He is very popular in Yarmouth having hosts of friends and customers in all parts of town and country. His motto is, "That anything wanted in our line is sure to be found here," is well understood throughout his establishment and by the purchasing public.

Mr. Vickery's store is located in the most central portion of the city, right opposite the Post Office and it is a convenient and agreeable place to pass the time when waiting for the mails or for an expected car. More than that, Progress can be obtained here always save when the demand exceeds the supply.

S. A. CROWELL.

S. A. Crowell & Co., hardware merchants and shoe dealers, are in their line, the leading firm in Yarmouth. They have three stores, a large handsome store on the corner of Main and Albert streets; a shoe store on the same corner, and another store on Main street just below. They employ about a dozen clerks and do a large business in their three departments.

In their hardware trade they keep a very extensive stock of goods of all descriptions. Their shelf hardware is chiefly American, their heavy hardware is English. Some of their lines are mill supplies, ship chandlery, builders' hardware, shell hardware, mechanics' tools, table and pocket cutlery, lubricating oils, pure linseed oils, glass, putty, wood stains, English enamel, silver mirror plates, cut glass door panels, etc. Their specialty is painters' supplies, and they also do a large business in firearms and ammunition. A year ago they branched out into a new line by putting up a store for plated ware in which they have a fine stock of goods.

Mr. Crowell pays cash for his goods and sells at low prices. He takes a great interest in the prosperity and progress of Yarmouth and is interested in many of the town's leading enterprises and institutions, such as the Yarmouth Steam Ship Co., the new hotel and the Y. M. C. A. He has been approached to accept a nomination for civic and political honors but has always declined. He is a native of Barrington, Shelburne Co. His business is both wholesale and retail and his market is the western counties.

S. C. HOOD.

Mr. Samuel C. Hood has been in the jewelry business just twenty years in Yarmouth. He is located at 301 Main street, in Studio block, in the centre of the city. The store is very finely appointed with handsome glass front cabinets and large show cases. He has a full line of watches, clocks, silverware, jewelry and optical goods and does a large business in his various lines.

It is particularly of this other and more important line of occupation that mention would be made. Mr. Hood is a graduate optician, whose skill as a practitioner is generally conceded. He has taken special courses in optical work and is thoroughly acquainted with the principles and details of the science. He fits perfectly and any one who is afflicted with the discomfort of poor eyes or badly fitting glasses should visit him. His fame has gone abroad and his patients come from all over Nova Scotia and even from the neighbouring provinces as far as Montreal. He has highly complimentary testimonials from Messrs. T. B. In another column is a good photo of one of Yarmouth's oldest and best-known men. Mr. Brown has for many years past been a leading spirit in the affairs of Yarmouth. He is now president of the Milton Library Association, and the success of that institution is in a great manner due to his energy and perseverance. For thirty years he acted as secretary to it, and it was only on the completion of the third decade that he was allowed to retire, and then to fill the position of president, which he has since held. Mr. Brown is also a director of the Bank of Yarmouth, which position he has held for many years.

CHAS. E. BROWN.

...Mr. E. K. Skinney, though yet a young man, has built up one of the largest businesses in Yarmouth. About 20 years ago, being then about 22 years of age, he commenced his business career. The firm was at first Spinney, Kinney & Co.; then it became Spinney, Aikens & Co., and in 1886 Mr. Spinney bought out Mr. Aikens and since then has conducted the business under his own name only. He is located in Townsend's block, a little above the centre of Main street. He is a direct importer of iron, hardware, paints, oils, naval stores, tea, rice, soda, and makes a specialty of vessel outfits and fishing supplies. His store and office room is large and he has large warehouses on the water front. Mr. Spinney devotes himself to a large variety of undertakings being interested in fishing, shipping, lumbering and manufacturing. He also represents a number of insurance companies, the Union Fire Insurance Co., the Imperial Fire Insurance Co., and Queen Fire Insurance Co., of England; Eastern Fire Insurance Co., of Canada; National Fire Insurance Co., of Ireland; Mutual Life Assurance Co., of New York, and others. Mr. Spinney has always taken an interest in everything which he thought might help and benefit Yarmouth and he is truly one of the town's best benefactors.

Mr. Robbins has retired from active life, and lives a life of ease with his daughter, Mrs. Parr, in his own handsome residence, said by some to be the handsomest in Yarmouth. He still retains the kindly manner, and genial welcome which always attracted people to him. He is now well past the allotted three score and ten years, and loves to tell how Yarmouth has gone forward, and what difficulties and trials her citizens had to endure in her early days. He filled the position of president of the Bank of Yarmouth for many years, and later was a Director of the Exchange Bank, but failing health forced his retirement from a public and business life. He still attends to his own shipping business however, and may be found in his office for a couple of hours in the day. Mr. Robbins is considered a wealthy man, and his money is invested at home and in home enterprises. Among the number, might be mentioned Parker, Eakins & Co. and the Yarmouth Duck and Yarn Co. Ltd. as well as many others.

WM. LAW, M. P. F.

A man who has long been connected with Yarmouth's active business life is Wm. Law, M. P. F., who represents the town's contribution to the local legislature. He is a native of Erin and came to Yarmouth from Belfast in 1847. He resided in the United States for a time and then returned to the town and has lived there ever since. He is senior partner of the long established firm of Wm. Law & Co., auction, commission and wholesale grocery merchants, which was established in 1860. None of the men who were controlling mercantile business of any sort are now thus engaged except Mr. Law. All those houses have passed into other hands. Mr. Law has been agent for the Boston Marine Insurance Company for fourteen years. In 1888 they put up their handsome building on the corner of Main and Cliff streets. It is a three story brick building, 60 feet square and contains, besides the offices of the company and of Wm. Law & Co., a very fine hall as well as a number of lawyers' offices.

Mr. Law has identified himself closely with the shipping business and is now the largest ship owner in Yarmouth. His list includes one iron ship, two steel and seven large wooden ones. He is also the proprietor of the street railway, and it was entirely through his exertions that this was constructed. At length he got capital interested and the investment has proved a marked success. He is, among other public enterprises with which he is connected, a director of the Yarmouth cemetery.

Mr. Law was elected to represent Yarmouth county in the Nova Scotia legislature in 1886, and was re-elected in 1890. The trust reposed in him he has not betrayed, and the interests of his constituency have been well looked after. His residence is at Milton and is one of the handsomest in town, while his grounds are very finely laid out and have the best gardening attention.

L. G. SWAIN.

Justly celebrated among the tourists who visit this province and carry away with them mementos of its pleasant villages and lovely landscapes is the photographic studio of Mr. L. G. Swain. It is located on the corner of Main and Cliff streets, and is furnished with an excellent outfit adapted to do the best photographic work. Mr. Swain has been a resident in Yarmouth for forty years and the greater part of that time has been devoted to the camera, so that he is an artist of thorough experience in his profession, and is prepared to give the best satisfaction to his customers. He is ably assisted by Alfonso Doe, who, under Mr. Swain's instruction, has become a skilled artist in landscape work. He displays excellent taste in choice of most picturesque spots and he places his camera only upon those points from which the landscape appears to the best advantage. Though Mr. Swain does excellent grouping and individual work, his forte is as a landscape photographer and he intends in future to devote himself to this even more than he has already. To this end he has in immediate contemplation a new studio which he will place in charge of another man and let Mr. Doe, with the aid of an assistant, devote himself to landscapes. His photos are on sale at his studio and at the bookstores, and orders are attended to with promptness.

THE HOUSES AND STORES.

HANDSOME RESIDENCES AND MANUFACTURING BUILDINGS.

Three Sample residences Given in One View Also That of L. B. Wyman—The Burrill-Johnson Iron Co.'s Works and a Sample Yarmouth Fish Warehouse.

G. F. Allen & Co. are the proprietors of the Yarmouth Steam Cooperage and Box Factory situated on Water street. Mr. Allen has always resided in Yarmouth, where he has conducted this business for a quarter of a century or more. The factory was destroyed by fire on July 1st, 1892, at the same time that the Kinney-Haley Manufac-manager and these with A. W. Eakins, form the board of directors.

They manufacture woodwork of all kinds, including furniture, doors, sashes, blinds, hand rails, posts, balusters, mouldings, brackets and fittings of every description in woodwork. They are also dealers in every description of house building. Their specialty is church and office work of which they do a great deal. This summer they supplied the fittings and decorations for five churches. They have a plant of entirely new machinery, the latest and best that can be had.

Their buildings, of which a portrait is shown, are large and spacious and well lighted. They are entirely new, for on July 1st, 1892, they had the misfortune to deal of work this summer. They intend to give special attention to fittings for summer cottages. Alvin Haley, brother of the manager, is superintendent of the factory, and it is in great part due to his careful superintendence and genial manner that the company have built up such a large and, we trust, profitable business.

PARKER, EAKINS & CO.

The house of Parker, Eakins & Co., commission merchants, wholesale grocers and export dealers in fish, was established in 1874. The members of the firm are Edward F. Parker, Arthur W. Eakins, Chas. S. P. Robbins, and Abel C. Robbins. They own and occupy the extensive premises known as Young's wharf at the foot years ago he started on his own account. He opened on a very limited scale in a very small room, but since then there has been steady growth until now he occupies a large amount of floor space and gives employment to several clerks.

One of the very handsomest residences in this town of hundreds of handsome residences, is that of Mr. Wyman, just constructed this year. It is located in a commanding position on the corner of Park and Cliff streets, and from it is had a magnificent view of the harbor and bay. It is built in the Queen Anne style and is a large three-story building. The exterior

EDUCATION AND RELIGION.

Yarmouth Institutions—Educational, Religious—Benevolent.

Yarmouth is unlike most of the towns in the maritime provinces in that its own capital is invested in all its enterprises of a public nature. It had sufficient wealth itself to found and establish firmly all the institutions and undertakings which are now doing so much to benefit the city. No American or English capital had to be imported and in fact none even scarcely from outside towns in the provinces we find, for instance, Yarmouth capitalists controlling more or less largely turing Co. were burned out. They put up a new four story building as shown in the cut. This was ready for occupation early in January.

The basement is for storage, on the first floor is the cooper shop, on the second floor the box stuff is sawed and tied in shooks, on the third floor the boxes are nailed up and on the fourth floor is warehouse room. The building has a frontage of 53 feet, and goes back 104 feet. It is well equipped with first class machinery, which is operated by a 25 horse power engine.

About twenty men are employed in man-be burned out. This put them back in their work considerably, but at the opening of this year they were at work again in new quarters. The main building is two stories, wooden, with a tower. It has a frontage of 75 feet and runs back 70 feet. There is an ell 40x60, a brick engine house 30x30, and a two story dry kiln 40x25.

The building is heated by hot air according to a new system. A coil of new water pipes is contained in a drain into which the cool air from outside passes. The air as it is heated by the pipes is forced of Jenkin's street, formerly owned and occupied by Young, Kinney & Corning, exporters of fish, etc. to whose business they succeeded. They have also a large fish curing establishment at Stanwood's Bar on the other side of the harbor. The business done by this firm is, in the aggregate of the several lines, one of the largest in Nova Scotia, amounting in some years to a half a million dollars. The kinds of fish handled are those usually cured and shipped to the United States and West Indian markets—codfish, haddock, ling, hake, pollock, mackerel and herrings.

ufacturing barrels of all kinds for pickled fish, kegs and cooperage for dried fish and cooperage and boxes of all kinds both made up and in shooks. The fishermen along the coast from Digby to Shelburne are supplied by Mr. Allen. It is an unusual and interesting fact that in this country, which has lost so many young men by the exodus Mr. Allen has four sons working with him.

The firm has a saw mill at Brazil Lake, thirteen miles from town, in the western counties. Here he gets all his lumber for the factory sawed to order. The mill gives employment directly to fifteen men, and indirectly to a large number engaged in procuring logs. He manufactures here a great deal of work this summer. They intend to give special attention to fittings for summer cottages. Alvin Haley, brother of the manager, is superintendent of the factory, and it is in great part due to his careful superintendence and genial manner that the company have built up such a large and, we trust, profitable business.

Something is done also in preparing boneless fish for the domestic market. A brand of boneless codfish which they put up in very attractive packages under the name of "Nova Scotia Turkey" has gained a large demand in Toronto as well as elsewhere in the upper provinces. It may be said that in addition to the lines of trade indicated, Messrs. Parker, Eakins & Co. fill orders for lumber and scantling for foreign markets. They have admirable facilities for that business, the track of the Yarmouth & Annapolis railway running from their own mill on the Meteghan River to alongside ship on their wharf at Yarmouth.

displays excellent taste in the way of tints, and in its rich carvings. The interior trimmings are chiefly in oak, and one of the suite of drawing-rooms in cypress. The artistic work is very fine and the building is a monument of architectural skill.

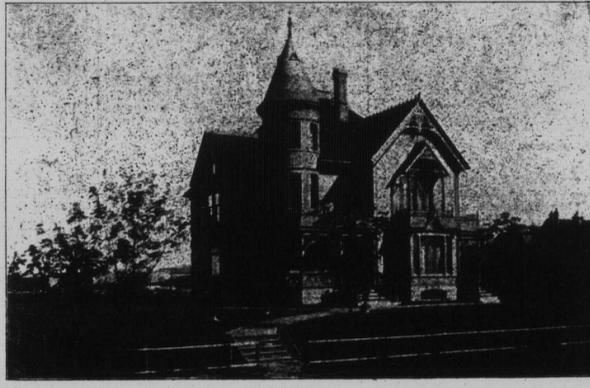

The residence has all the modern improvements in the way of gas and electric lighting, hot and cold water, &c. It is heated by a system of indirect heat, by which cold air coming into the basement in pipes passes through a box where it is heated by hot water pipes which traverse the box. It then passes through the house which is thus supplied constantly with fresh ocean going steamers. They were the builders of the S. S. St. Pierre which runs from Halifax to St. Pierre, as well as of very many boats that are running in different parts of the province, and can supply hull and machinery ready for sea, with a guarantee that all will be in perfect working order. They also make a specialty of steam winches, mill machinery and boilers of all kinds, stone breakers and a very great variety of all kinds of machinery, it is safe to say they make a greater variety than any other concern in Canada. They are always ready to give prices for anything in their line.

and generally entirely the lines of travel, the factories, the electric car service and the lighting of the city.

Let us conclude these general articles by giving some account of the towns possessions, educational, religious and benevolent and of those things then which contribute to public convenience and amusement.

The grounds around have been laid out in a velvet lawn, and a hedge has been planted which will spring up to a good size in a couple of years.

THE BURRELL-JOHNSON IRON CO.

The Burrell-Johnson Iron Company was established in 1855 and incorporated in 1878. The officers of the company are Hugh D. Cann, President, Charles H. Bryant, Vice-President and Secretary. The other directors are William D. Lovitt and A. C. Robbins, of Yarmouth, and John White, of Halifax, N. S. They have

Their stoves rank high and are well known as the best in the market. The castings are of the finest quality, and the stoves are sure to work to the satisfaction of those who use them. Their leading range, the "Model Grand," has a reputation second to none in America. Hundreds have been sold and in no case have they failed to do their work to the satisfaction of those who use them. This Range is made in many different styles, and every one is warranted. They are also sole manufacturers for Canada of the celebrated "New Silver Moon" base burners, so well known throughout the Maritime Provinces. In the machinery line they make a great variety, such as steam engines of all kinds from one and one half power upwards. They are sole makers of the Celebrated Fitchburg High Speed Automatic Engines from 20 to 650 Horse Power. These engines are of the ing stoves as the "Island Crown," "Happy Homes," Yarmouth Cooks," "New Dominions," "Boston Cooks," "Leaders," "Niagaras," "Waterloos," "Farmers," "Caboozes," &c., &c. They also manufacture the best open Franklin stove to be obtained, called the "Orient," as well as a very great variety of hall, office, store and parlor stoves, and hot water heaters and other kinds of heating apparatus. The Company has a large business, and are ever wide awake to the interests of their customers. Each section of the town has a school, Milton, the centre and the lower end, accommodating together about 1400 scholars. Another building is to be erected. sted wooden building at the upper end of town. It has been open three years and is pretty well endowed. The Marine hospital is on Bunker's Island and the Poor House is on the road to Arcadia, but it is pleasing to say that Yarmouth has very few poor.

The cemetery upon which Yarmouth looks with just pride, was laid out twenty-five or thirty years ago and is a model of landscape gardening art, its pleasant drives and walks, bordered by well kept grass plots and by rows of verdant shrubbery that has been trained into all sorts of fantastic shapes, are much frequented on Sundays.

The visitor is struck with the fact that Yarmouth displays much veneration for the dear departed. Among the prominent men of the past, who lie buried there might be mentioned the Hon. Herbert Huntington, who was a leading figure in the stirring political periods of the long ago.

Yarmouth is a great temperance town. The Sons of Temperance are very strong there and its meetings include the best and most influential citizens and their families. Yarmouth county claims the first temperance society in the maritime provinces. In 1829 one was founded in Beaver river with quite a large membership and it flourished for a long period.

Yarmouth has plenty of facilities for public amusement. There is a fine Music Hall in the Boston marine building, the best in the province outside of Halifax. The town has a dramatic club, two fine bands, the Yarmouth and the Milton, and a ladies' orchestra. Band concerts are given every Friday night. There are two libraries, each well supplied with books and periodicals. The Mill on library and museum was founded Jan. 1st, 1822, the first one in the maritime provinces. Three years ago it was donated to the town by Mrs. Robt. Caie and Miss Clara Killam. The town is also the recipient of another gratuity from Miss Killam, the fountain at Milton, erected on May 1st of this year at a cost of $1500. Hon. L. E. Baker also founded a library in 1872.

The Victoria Park Association have the finest track in the province, built in 1891. It is back of the town and has grand stands for 1500 people. As yet the town has no athletic grounds, but the centre of the track will be fitted up for this purpose. G. Murray Dane is president of the association, and Dr. W. D. Gray is secretary. Just now there is no agricultural fair building. The previous one was burned but another and finer one will be erected next summer by the Yarmouth Agricultural society.

parlours and other rooms are furnished in the most modern style in light and attractive tints and trimmings rendering it a palace of ease for his customers. The rooms are large and airy and from the front look out upon Main street and from the rear over the harbour.

The furniture of his suite of parlours and the decorations are of the most elegant and the whole adornment shows excellent taste. The rooms are prepared especially for him and are admirably adapted for his purpose. The proprietor is assisted in his work by his brother Mr. E. R. Parker who gives great satisfaction. He devotes particular attention to sittings and his groupings display good discernment in regard to using the best means to produce the best effect. A waiting visitor need not pass an idle time either in his parlours for they are supplied with comfortable easy chairs and lounges and views may be seen there of the many places of delight in the tourists' province. These views are much sought after and are eagerly purchased by visiting Americans and strangers and taken have a large two-story factory, 70x35 feet, in which they employ constantly many hands. They have also a very large drug business, and few in Nova Scotia can compete with them as regards the extent of their trade. They do a splendid retail business in the town as well as a large jobbing business in the western counties. Their store is elegantly fitted up with special fittings of American oak, with a fine piano polish finish, and is altogether a model of neatness worthy of the high class of business done by this progressive and thoroughly modern firm.

MOSES & ROSS.

The finest tailoring establishment in Nova Scotia, west of Halifax, is that of T. B. Dane & Son. This house was established in 1846, and it has by the superior character of its work built up a large and high class business.

The firm occupies Victoria block, which is conveniently situated in the central part of Main street. Here, they carry on a large and steadily increasing business in sale of ready made clothing, men's furnishings, hats and caps, &c., and in custom tailoring, both in gentlemen's and ladies' wear. Their ladies' department is a late outgrowth of the business added this spring and is attracting many customers.

The firm has abundance of room for conducting its large business. Their block is a large three-story building, extending back a long distance and of good width. On the first floor are the store and cutting department, on the second floor the tailoring rooms, and on the third floor the mantle and cloak making rooms.

The volume of the business of this enterprising firm may be learned from the fact that they employ 35 hands in their tailoring establishment. In this they enter to a large field and do the best work for several counts. They have the best taste and ness life of the community. He is now a director of the Bank of Yarmouth and of the Yarmouth Steam Ship Company and is interested in other such laudable enterprises.

A. G. HOOD, Postmaster.

A veteran in the service of the people has charge of Yarmouth's post office, Mr. A. G. Hood. He has had charge of this department of the public service there for thirty years, and he has grown with its growth and seen its many changes and improvements. When he first took charge of the office he occupied a small room in a building just opposite the previous building, now he is located in a handsome brick block, built in 1886, one of the first offices in the province, large and spacious, with handsome interior decoration and substantial exterior appearance.

Once one man was sufficient to do the work of the office, now four men are required and he receives four times as much for his assistants' salaries as he received for his own at the beginning of his incumbency. At that time the sale of stamps brought in only $1,500, now $9,000 are the results for a year. Postage rates were then high, 17 cents per 1/2 oz. to France, 15 cents to California, and 12 1/2 cents to England. Now the rates are 3 cents per oz., to California and 5 cents to England. Then an ordinary sized portmanteau would hold all the mail, now nearly a ton is handled daily. Then it took three days for the mail to come from Halifax and Mr. Hood himself brought the first mail that ever came in one day. That was when the rail-road was opened. Previously the mail had been brought by stage, one arriving daily, on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays it came by way of Seiburne, and on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays by way of Annapolis.

Mr. Hood is characterized chiefly by the strict attention which he gives to the duties of his office, with which he will allow nothing else to interfere. During the thirty years of his incumbency he has not been absent from the office for three months. He has never missed opening the office at sharp eight o'clock but once and then he was prevented by bad weather. Mr. Hood's assiduity and courtesy has made him a man much respected in the community.

Yarmouth people are very proud of their post-office and well they might be, for outside of the capital city it is the finest in the province. On the first floor are the offices of the postal department and on the other floors those of the custom house, savings bank, inland revenue, and the examiner of masters and mates.

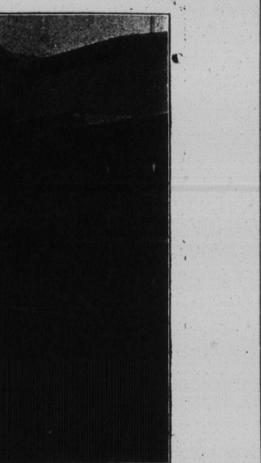

A matter of interest might be mentioned here to the public. Mr. Hood was the first to introduce lock boxes into the Maritime provinces, only a few being put in at first, while now they number in my hundreds; this little incident will show that Mr. Hood is ever careful of the citizens' interests.

YARMOUTH WOOLLEN MILL CO.

One of the leading of Yarmouth's manufacturing industries is its woolen mill. This is controlled by the Yarmouth Woolen Mill Co., a limited corporation of $80,000 paid up capital. The company consists of five stock holders. L. E. Baker, President, A. C. Robb, Vice President, and W. D. Lovitt, Hugh Cann and Jacob Binyard, Directors. G. M. Evans is the efficient secretary of the company, which was founded and incorporated in 1881.

The company manufacture fine woolen tweeds, homespuns, flannels, yarns &c. They also are making a specialty of good imitations of Scotch and English tweeds. The Lake George water, which supplies the town, is so suitable for dyeing that they are able to give very superior effects in dye colors; while their location beside the salt water makes their color fast and equal to those of the old country woolen produce. Their building is a large one of four and a half stories, and they give employment to from 50 to 70 hands—men, boys and girls. Their market is the whole of Canada. But such are their shipping facilities and their climatic advantages that they could, in the opinion of Mr. Evans, compete with the producers of the United States, and sell there largely. The market of Canada is too limited, he believes. New machinery is being put in as occasion requires, and has been growing from the inception of the firm. This has been due largely to the energy and perseverance of Messrs. Moses & Ross, whereby they keep constantly informed in regard to the latest in business. During the last year their business increased over 50 per cent. One of the specialties is in using goods of which they keep an elegant range in the richest weaves and dyes. They also control a line of dress goods called "biarriz" of which they sell many thousand yards during the season; for finished durability and beauty these goods are unsurpassed. The firm pays special attention to mail orders and aim to fill them with entire satisfaction.

J. W. MOODY.

One of the most highly respected and affable of Yarmouth's citizens is Mr. J. W. Moody, who resides in a prettily situated residence at the lower end of the town where is had a fine view of the harbour, the islands, the cape and the bay. Mr. Moody holds many positions in connection with various lines of business. About thirty years ago he was appointed Lloyd's agent for the coast, from Cape Sable along the whole of the Bay of Fundy, and Minas Basin to Cumberland. Now he is a sub-agent at various places throughout his charge. He has also quite extensive insurance connections. He represents the home with them as souvenirs of their happy days in the Land of Evangeline. The pictures are mounted and finished most attractively. Mail orders for views are filled by Mr. Parker with dispatch and he is always ready to take landscapes at any time on order, if he has not them in stock. Mr. Parker is a Yarmouth boy and the present proprietor, and quality of his business speaks well for the material of which Yarmouth men are made.

The accompanying portrait represents the members of the enterprising firm of C. C. Richards & Co., which includes Messrs.

membership, has rooms over the Bank of Nova Scotia. The Yarmouth and Annapolis railway is soon to amalgamate with the Windsor and Annapolis when the two will be known as the Dominion Atlantic. This summer the line relaid 46 miles of steel rails and bought two Baldwin compound engines, three first class cars, five box cars and fifty flat cars. During the eight months of the year just completed they carried 48000 passengers over the line. Under the skillful management of Mr. Brignell, general superintendent, and Mr. Fraser, the general passenger agent, the line has become very popular. Yarmouth has excellent telegraphic facilities being on the line of the western Union.

C. C. RICHARDS.

C. C. Richards and A. Cann. The firm are known chiefly as the proprietors of the now celebrated and well established household remedy of "Minard's Liniment." Up to the time of their purchase of the right of manufacture and sale of Minard's Liniment it had only a local sale in the provinces of Nova Scotia and in a few places in New Brunswick. By the push, energy and good management of C. C. Richards & Co. it has now reached a larger sale than any other single patent medicine in the Dominion of Canada, and is now well known throughout its whole length. They keep three double teams on the road constantly, advertising, making sales, etc., and at headquarters in Yarmouth they just lately three new ones, including a wool duster and steam automatic press were introduced. In the latter line this is the only one east of Montreal. The capacity of the mill is 165,000 yards, and the wool is obtained from the provinces, Australia, South America and Cape Colony. The wool of Australia is the best.

The mill is now running on orders for the wholesale trade exclusively and there are sufficient ahead to keep them going for some time. Under the careful and zealous management of Mr. Egan and under the experienced superintendence of Mr. Morgan, a man of first class skill, the industry will continue to contribute to the purposes of the town.

T. B. DANE & SON.

The firm of Moses & Ross is one of the best established houses in Yarmouth. It is composed of Messrs. S. D. Moses and W. D. Ross. They have been in business eleven years, and in April last moved into the handsome Yarmouth block on the corner of Main and Broad streets. They are importers of dry goods and keep in stock every variety of grade of articles. Among their lines are general druggists, carpets, house furnishings, ladies' fittings, mantles, shawls, wraps, waterproof garments, underclothing, white wear, hosiery, dress goods, mourning garments, &c.

Yarmouth block is one of the best built buildings in the city. On the first floor are shelved their general dry goods and in the rear and in the basement is ware room. Upstairs are their carpet room, mantle room, &c. The stores are fitted and furnished in the most modern manner and the walls are sheathed throughout, making them perfectly clean and clear of dust. They employ a large staff of clerks, who are very attentive to customers, and painstaking in displaying their stock.

The firm is a progressive one and their business is increasing rapidly. They take advantage of every chance to give their customers the best goods at the cheapest prices. They watch the market closely and always buy to the best advantage, importing directly from manufacturers in Great Britain, Canada or the United States, or from warehouse men, according as inducements are best. They supply this end of the province and their field is growing

This illustrated issue, incomplete as it is will do much to introduce Yarmouth to thousands who know nothing of it. It was encouraged and assisted promptly by Mr. Baker.

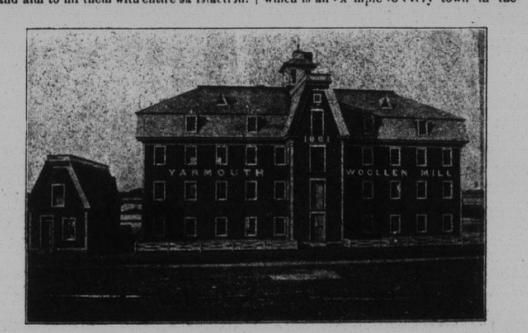

The detail story of his life has been told so often that Progress does not propose to go over it again. The most interesting portion of his life for the purpose of this issue is his business record which is best told by the fact that he is connected with the following successful Corporations all of which represent a vast amount of capital and give employment to so many people. He is President of the Bank of Yarmouth, Yarmouth Marine Railway, Grand Hotel Co., Yarmouth Woolen Mill Co., Mountain Cemetery Co., Yarmouth Steam Ship Co. and the Agricultural Society. Perhaps the enterprise by which he is best known is the Yarmouth

The press has spoken about the magnificent steamers of the Yarmouth-Boston line again and again and it has been one large advertisement for the port town of Nova Scotia. Then it brought so many summer visitors that the necessity for hotel accommodations became apparent and to-day in another column Progress presents the first view of the new hotel photographed and engraved in the article's plans. Mr. Baker was at the head and front of this new enterprise which is an example to every town in the

Last summer Mr. Baker donated to the city three acres of land, worth some $5,000. This is being converted into a garden. The proposed park will be delightfully situated, being at the summit of the hill back of the town and giving an excellent view of the harbor and sound. YARMOUTH HOTELS, PRESENT AND FUTURE.

The First Engraving of the New "Grand" and the Queen and Lorne—Some Successful Industries and Business Houses—How Capital is Invested.

An old established hostelry site is that of the Queen Hotel, where for fifty years travellers have been welcomed. It has seen the time when it took days instead of hours to come from Halifax, the time when journeying was slow and uncomfortable. It has always been a welcome sight to tired men of the road, from the time when they lumbered in a dusty stage up to now when elegant parlor cars bring them into town and tasty coaches whirl them up to the hotel door.

Mine host Nichols has had charge for ten years and in that time has become well more on outings this summer. In this connection it might be mentioned that Mr. Hurlbert is a horseman and his valuable speeder, Stonewell, is one of the fleet ones of the town. He is a shareholder in the driving park and he receives the patronage of the horsemen. In conclusion, people who travel should see the Lorne hotel, the proprietor and last but not least, his clerk, the veteran hotel manager, Wear.

J. D. DENNIS AND CO.

The enterprising firm of J. D. Dennis & Co. is numbered among the largest dry goods houses in Nova Scotia. This firm started business in 1867 as Viets & Dennis; on Dec. 27th, 1890, they were burned out, and Mr. Dennis bought out his partner. On April 15th, 1891, he began the erection of a new building, the work upon which he personally superintended, and then took a trip to the other side to buy a stock of goods, and opened on Oct. 3rd of the same year with a full

Among his other lines are fine porteries from Pennsylvania, curtains and curtain poles, broccellos, waterproof garments in Rigby and other leading materials, and a full assortment of general dry goods. It might be mentioned further that the building is lit by gas and electricity and that there is a fine basement with concrete floor used as a heavy warehouse. Mr. Dennis employs a large number of clerks attentive to the needs of customers.

The company manufactures cotton sail duck, agricultural and other wide ducks, ounce ducks and sail and wrapping twines. About 200 hands are employed in the factory, which is located on Water street, near the railway station. Nine-tenths of the stock is owned in Yarmouth, and the pay roll amounts to $1,200 per week, so that it may be seen that the town reaps a great advantage from the presence of the industry.

They are also shipped alive to all points in the United States, in cold storage cars. The business is developing rapidly and is one of the chief specialties which assure Yarmouth of its continual progress and increase. This year the catch was 37,000 cases of lobsters aggregating $300,000 and Yarmouth may be very properly considered the most important lobster port in the world.

BUSINESS IN YARMOUTH.

ADAPTING ITSELF TO THE CONDITIONS OF THE COUNTRY.

From Shipbuilding the Capitalists have Turned Their Attention to Manufacturing and other Pursuits—The Importance of The Fishery Business to the Town.

Like every other town in the Maritime provinces Yarmouth has had to re-adjust its circumstances in harmony with the changing conditions in the commercial world. The successful towns have been those that have been able to do this and it speaks much for the enterprise and public spirit of the citizens that they have not allowed the years, the chief shipping port in Nova Scotia outside of Halifax, and St. John and Charlottetown are the only other cities in the Maritime provinces beside the Nova Scotia capital that surpass it in trade. It is a town of large means and big capital.

Yarmouth's chief industry is the fishery, its fish product constituting the bulk of its export. It is the shipping port for the fishery of the counties of Digby, Yarmouth and Shelburne. Large shipments of cod, mackerel, lobsters and other fish are made to the West Indies and there are quite a number of large firms in Yarmouth handling these fish, possessing large wharf privileges and warehouse room on the water front. The fish product of Yarmouth county for the last fiscal year was upwards of half a million dollars.

The business in cod and mackerel is falling off, but the loss in these lines is more than compensated for by the development of other fishery exports. Within recent years the lobster fishery of the three western counties has arisen and developed rapidly. During the last five years the volume of the catch was more than doubled. There are numerous canneries along the coast, but are very fertile. There are two tracts of very productive dyked marsh, at Chebogue and Arcadia, of about five hundred acres.

The uplands are admirably adapted for grazing, but not so well for the growing of roots and grain. The climate is moist, so that the pasture lands are always fresh and green and good grazing continues almost into winter. The county is going into the raising of stock considerably and fine cattle are produced. It is found also that good butter can be made there and the farmers are taking up dairying considerably. Apples are also being raised in the county to a greater extent than heretofore.

Yarmouth's manufactures have been growing and developing to replace the loss in ship-building. The departure of population when the ship-yards were closed has thus been halted and looms and lathes are taking the place once occupied by the ship and axe. Some hundred men are employed in the factories and mills of Yarmouth and surroundings. There are in town two duck mills, one woolen mill, one wood working factory, one cooperage factory, two foundries, and one boot and shoe factory, all conducted on a large scale, besides other small manufactories. At Arcadia, three miles out of town, there is a grist mill and a wood-working factory, at Hebron, three miles out, a shoe factory; and at Ohio, six miles out, a wood-working factory.

Yarmouth also does considerable trade of a general nature. It has large wholesale and retail dry goods, grocery, provision and hardware houses selling to the western counties. Several firms do large business also in outfitting ships and supplying fishermen.

The progress of a place may be measured pretty accurately by the amount of building being done. During the last few years

The uplands are admirably adapted for grazing, but not so well for the growing of roots and grain. The climate is moist, so that the pasture lands are always fresh and green and good grazing continues almost into winter. The county is going into the raising of stock considerably and fine cattle are produced. It is found also that good butter can be made there and the farmers are taking up dairying considerably. Apples are also being raised in the county to a greater extent than heretofore.

Yarmouth's manufactures have been growing and developing to replace the loss in ship-building. The departure of population when the ship-yards were closed has thus been halted and looms and lathes are taking the place once occupied by the ship and axe. Some hundred men are employed in the factories and mills of Yarmouth and surroundings. There are in town two duck mills, one woolen mill, one wood working factory, one cooperage factory, two foundries, and one boot and shoe factory, all conducted on a large scale, besides other small manufactories. At Arcadia, three miles out of town, there is a grist mill and a wood-working factory, at Hebron, three miles out, a shoe factory; and at Ohio, six miles out, a wood-working factory.

Yarmouth also does considerable trade of a general nature. It has large wholesale and retail dry goods, grocery, provision and hardware houses selling to the western counties. Several firms do large business also in outfitting ships and supplying fishermen.

The progress of a place may be measured pretty accurately by the amount of building being done. During the last few years they are also shipped alive to all points in the United States, in cold storage cars.

The business is developing rapidly and is one of the chief specialties which assure Yarmouth of its continual progress and increase. This year the catch was 37,000 cases of lobsters aggregating $300,000 and Yarmouth may be very properly considered the most important lobster port in the world.

In the matter of shipping, Yarmouth ranges well up in its registration of tonnage among maritime towns. Its ships go to the West Indies and South America with fish and lumber, and to the United States with fish and farm produce. It has excellent

THE SISTER OF DEATH.

"It must be a wonderful country," said Mrs. Brandreth, as her nephew, Stephen Hamerton, finished one of his stories of America.

"I suppose you will be going back there before long?" said pretty Isabel Brandreth, quite innocently, of course.

"I don't intend to return there by myself, that is certain," answered Stephen, as a full and free declaration of love flashed from his eyes.

"It would be the very thing for Tom," said Mrs. Brandreth, who might be suspected of wishing to get rid of the nephew who was not a good lot at the expense of the other, who was one of the best fellows in the world.

"Tom can choose his own chums and his own place of exile," said Tom Brandreth, "when it comes to that."

"I am glad you have so many friends to choose from," said Mrs. Brandreth.

"I could not help wishing that Tom would borrow from them as well, and thus spare her purse a bit."

"Well, I have had a rough time of it out in California, and if I have made my pile, I have had to work hard and to defy danger," said Stephen.

"Tom would be equal to defying danger," said Isabel, laughingly recounting the final condition of Stephen's past experiences.

"Yes; but sometimes he would find that caution in avoiding danger would be more advantageous than the courage of defying it," said Stephen.

"I remember that my hotel closes early, aunt," he replied, "and I am quite tired enough to sleep through the night without any assistance from the Indians."

"How long would that drug make you sleep?" asked Tom.

"It depends upon the time it is allowed to remain in the water which you drink," explained Stephen.

contraband profession, and ordered them to get on board the yacht that night and to leave everything ready for sailing by four in the morning.

"Marchmont will be in a deuce of a rage," he muttered, "but it can't be helped. I have no other way of getting Isabel, and without her I am simply stumped."

III. The narrative of his cousin about the Indians and the use that they made of the "Sister of Death" had very much impressed upon Tom Brandreth's memory.

It is said that opportunity makes crime; it would be at least as near the truth to assert that crime finds opportunity.

It was while he was drifting into some scheme that Marchmont put his yacht at his disposal. With this great opportunity came greater plans and more reckless decision.

Stephen was always hovering about the cottage, and Tom, with a guilty suspicion, told himself that his cousin was watching him.

However, he heard one day that the next evening Stephen would be called away to London. Good!—that must be the time to carry out his plans.

"Well, he comes very opportunely," remarked Isabel; "he can drive Stephen to the station."

"No, thank you, Tom," he said. "I know you are a late man, and the mail-train starts at eleven o'clock."

The villain shuddered at the sight of his own work; but the next moment he shook off his apprehension, rushed to the sideboard, poured out and drank half a tumbler of neat whiskey, and then prepared to remove the insensible Isabel to the dog-cart which should bear her to the harbour, where a rowing-boat was in readiness to transport her to the yacht.

"What is the matter, Lucy?" asked Stephen, whom the girl had just run to meet.

"Miss Isabel has gone, and missis and Mr. Thomas," answered the girl.

"It is only a rascality found out in time," said Hamerton. "Tom had stolen one of the Indian bulbs, and last night dragged the water you drank, intending to carry you off."

"Where are they gone, do you think?" he asked.

their presence on the yacht. The next moment he turned his horse's head and left the town, never to return.

When Mrs. Brandreth recovered from her lethargy the night's events were unknown to her, and it was not till after Isabel was Stephen's wife that he explained the mystery of the "Sister of Death."

Some Thrills I have Had. Describing a Few Things That Tended to Elevate the Spirit.

You may get a very genuine little test of nerve by climbing Helvellyn from Patterdale, by Striding Edge, in a gale and thick mist and rain combined.

The Eiffel Tower seems almost played out. Yet here, too, it exacts a little courage to play the acrobat about the topmost iron. By-and-by there will be an Eiffel Tower near London.

A few months ago I went up in a balloon. That, too, was a strong experience. The bottom of the basket that held us was about half-an-inch thick.

The Morgue at Paris is not a nice spectacle. But neither is it so awful as it might be. Circumstances much mitigate its horrors.

I remember my first bull fight exceedingly well. A friend who was with me half-tainted with the second horse was gored, and was afterwards plugged with cotton wool, and spurred and beaten on to be gored again.

Thrills of an unpleasant kind are the lot of men who dabble in the Stock Exchange. Their hair must be firmly rooted to withstand the effects of a panic which roars of hundreds of pounds in an hour or two.

Two other kinds of thrills may be mentioned. They are concerned with important epochs in most men's lives.

Unless you have prepared yourself for it by a long course of expectation, there is vigour in your thoughts as you awake the morning after your marriage and realize that henceforth you have to think and live for two (or more) instead of for yourself alone.

The second of these two thrills is concerned with the last act in existence.

WOMAN and HER WORK.

I do not know of any literature, which contradicts it so frequently as the fashion reports do. One thoroughly reliable journal assures its readers that there will be no radical changes in the prevailing modes this autumn, we may expect some modifications but that is all. Another equally well posted upon the fads of fashion announces that there are plenty of changes in store for the immediate future; and indeed the only point upon which they seem to be at all agreed, is the probable richness of material which will characterize the fashions for the coming winter.

It is predicted that Louis XIII styles, which of course are eminently suited to display the beauty of the new brocades, and velvets, will be extensively adopted by those who are able to indulge their fancy without counting the cost too much. But for those of more moderate means there is a very wide choice, which will permit them to dress within their means and at the same time be in the height of the fashion.

One very radical change, about which there can be no question now, is the return of skirts which are slightly draped. They may not be general, but they will undoubtedly vary the monotony of the perfectly plain skirt. Some of the first Paris dress-makers are showing them. One model recently described consisted of a round skirt of navy blue toulard, spotted with yellow. The foot trimming consisted of two bands of yellow satin ribbon covered with black lace. The skirt was raised a very little on each hip, and showed a petticoat to match which just cleared the ground. A band of the ribbon and lace concealed the belt to which the skirt was sewed, and it was worn over the bodice, while braces to match the belt were attached to it and passed over the shoulders.

Another Paris skirt had two plaits at the centre of the front, forming panier folds at the sides and the back was in two bouffants; an under skirt was slightly shown by the draping. All the leading London and Paris dressmakers have discarded stiffening for skirts, except of course the usual five or six inch facing of canvas and the garment is allowed to hang naturally; when any support is needed, it is supplied by the underskirt.

Skirts of extravagant width, are quite out of style, and those of moderate dimensions neither too scant, nor too full, are made by the leading modistes. For walking they clear the ground very decidedly, and for indoor wear just touch the floor, all round, for more formal occasions they are made slightly longer.

If one were asked to designate the fashionable color for the coming autumn and winter, the only answer possible would be black, so popular will that good old standard be; numerous other colors will be worn, it goes without saying but still, for the best dress, the evening dress and the reception gown, it will not be all black but will be relieved with Jacquenot, with crimson, canary blue and most of all with white for evening wear, and the number of soft billow flounces which appear in black materials is perfectly bewildering. Black net, black lisse, black crepon and even black velvet is seen made up into flounces and for evening wear many of them are bordered with white lace.

In bodices, the blouse has become so popular, that it is frequently seen in evening dress, made of course of a perfectly fitted lining which is usually of silk or satin, and the over draping of chiffon, silk, gauze or crepon. The sleeves of such bodices are little else than a collection of flounces or puffs. Many of the newest sleeves show three carefully arranged puffs—a small one just below the shoulder, then a very large full one reaching to just above the elbow, and another, the same size of the shoulder puff, directly on the bend of the elbow. A very plain, tight cut from the elbow down, finishes the sleeve. Another new sleeve has no less than five flounces all of the same width between the elbow; each flounce is edged with narrow gimp, and from the elbow to the wrist is a series of graduated puffs four in number, separated by bands of gimp insertion.

One of the oddest fancies of the season is the full Elizabethan ruffled plaited silk muslin edged with white lace, which reaches quite up to the ears of the wearer, entirely conceals her neck, and is just as quaint and charming, as it is uncomfortable.

As for materials it is hardly necessary to say that serge will be very much worn, because it is always very much worn, but this year it will divide the favor with the now so called rough goods, which are really delightfully soft and pliable. These come in in all shades, and all varieties; Scotch leather, mixed chevrons, and the boucle goods which show queer little silky tufts and curls scattered over their surface. Most of these come in odd, bright colors very much mixed, and in the piece they are far from pretty, though when they are fashioned into tailor made suits they are stylish, and very elegant. The shot chevrons are the heaviest, but to me they have a strangely common look, which wears away incalculably the moment you glance at the price card, then you know they are very far from being common.

There are many varieties of basketweave or hopsacking as it is called, and another popular fabric is whipcord, a sort of diagonal weave which is yet not a serge. In short the choice is almost endless, and the prices vary to suit all purses.

Nesselrode Pudding.

One pint of chestnuts, one pint of sugar, one pint of boiling water, one pound of French candied fruit (mixed), one pint of almonds, one pint of cream, one pineapple or one pint of canned yolk of six eggs. Shell the chestnuts, take off the brown skin, put them in a saucepan, cover with boiling water and boil twenty minutes, then press them through a colander. Shell blanch and pound the almonds. Cut the fruit into small pieces. Put the water and sugar on to boil let it boil fifteen minutes. Beat the yolks of the eggs until very light; add them to the boiling syrup; stir over the fire until it boils, then take it off and beat with a wire spoon until cold. Now add the fruit, cream, almonds, chestnuts and a tablespoonful of vanilla, and if you use wine four tablespoonfuls of sherry. Mix well together, turn into the freezer and freeze. After it is frozen drain off the water, add more salt and ice, cover the freezer with a piece of carpet and stand away for four or five hours to ripen. This will serve fifteen persons.

Peach Short Cake.
Use canned peaches and prepared flour for this dish. Chop quarter of a pound of butter into a quart of prepared flour; quickly stir into it enough sweet milk to make a soft dough; put this into two round cakes upon buttered tin pie plates and bake them in a hot oven. Meantime open a can of peaches, reserve the finest for the two top layers and cut the rest in small quarters. When the short cakes in the oven are done and cool enough to handle, tear them open with the aid of a fork, butter the inside, divide the cut peaches upon the two bottom layers and arrange the fine ones on the others, thickly dust all with sifted powdered sugar, lay the tops upon both unpeaches and serve the short cakes with more sifted sugar and sweet cream. The juice of the canned peaches, well sweetened with powdered sugar, can be used instead of cream.

Eggs In Brown Butter.
Break six eggs, one at a time, into a saucer, and slip them off into a hot frying-pan containing butter and lard mixed in equal proportions. Cook about three minutes, remove to a hot platter and pour over them the following sauce: Heat together one teaspoonful of tarragon vinegar, one tablespoonful of chili sauce, one teaspoonful of lemon juice and one saltspoonful of salt. Brown two heaping tablespoonfuls of butter and strain into the hot liquid. If the above seasonings are not at hand, brown the butter, add one tablespoonful of cider vinegar and strain over the eggs.

Apple Jelly.
Take juicy apples, remove the stems and tops and wash carefully cut in quarters and enough cold water on them to just cover; boil soft, and let them drain through a jelly bag. To each pint of juice allow a pound of white sugar, boil twenty minutes, and do not mind if it does not jelly very firmly at first, it will be all right in a short time, and perfectly firm when you want to turn it out.

Fried Tomatoes with Cream Gravy.
Wash and wipe large ripe tomatoes, and cut them in slices half an inch in thickness; season with pepper and salt and fry them in sweet dripping, or half butter and half lard. When they are all done, dish them, and dust a little flour in the pan, pour in a teacup of rich cream or tinned milk, give a boil-up, pour over the tomatoes and serve. This is a nice breakfast-dish.

Chili Sauce.
Take twenty-four ripe tomatoes, one large onion, one-half cup of sugar, one quart of vinegar, ten green or ripe peppers, two tablespoonfuls of salt, and one tablespoonful each of allspice, ginger and cloves. Chop the tomatoes, peppers and onion fine and simmer two hours.

THINGS OF VALUE.
Pleasure owes all its zest to anticipation. The promise of a shilling fiddle will keep a schoolboy in happiness for a year; the fun connected with the possession will expire in an hour. Now, what is true of schoolboys is equally true of men. All they differ in is the price of their fiddles.

London's Feminine Stock Broker.
Amy F. Bell has been for several years' a stock broker in London. She has an office hard by the Stock Exchange, and does a large business, especially among women clients. Her peculiar aptness for the profession was shown when she was a little child. An old gentleman, a visitor at Miss Bell's home, happened one day to be diligently reading the money article in the Times. He was in no mood to be interrupted, so he said to the child when she hung around him: "Run away, little girl! I am busy with my lessons, and you must go to yours." "Yes," said little Miss Amy, "but what's your lessons is my play!" For it is the highest recreation of the infant phenomenon to study the stock quotations.
