A Complete Manure.

What is a complete manure? It must be a substance abounding in all the elements which minister to the growth and perfection of plants. But the atmosphere furnishes some of these elements without cost; for instance, water and carbonic acid; whilst the earth itself is hardly ever deficient in silica for the formation of the stalks of plants or the small amount of iron necessary to their healthy growth. The elements which manure should supply are lime, phosphoric acid, potash, nitrogen, soda magnesia and sulphuric acid.

All other elements may be obtained from the air and soil. When bones are dissolved in sulphuric acid, a superphosphate of lime is formed which contains of the important and expensive elements of fertility, but not all. This is a point that farmers should understand.

Superphosphate of lime is not a complete manure. It lacks nitrogen, potash, soda and magnesia. When therefore the vendor of a superphosphate tells you, my friend, that this is the very thing for your land, you must receive his disinterested statement with some grains of allowance. A genuine superphosphate is a good manure, but it may not be the sole manure required by you to produce the crop intended. The superiority of peruvian guano over the superphosphates is attributable to the large amount of ammonia (furnishing nitrogen) it contains.

Having this valuable element in abundance, it approximates nearer the condition of a complete manure than a mere superphosphate. It has become customary to add ammoniacal matters to the latter, to remedy this deficiency, and recently we have seen advertisements of superphosphates and other manures to which potash has been added. This is a step in the right direction, and such a manure honestly made containing superphosphate of lime, sulphate of lime, potash and ammonia would approximate very nearly to a complete manure. It would embrace all the elements deemed essential to such a compound by the celebrated George Vile, and would pass for such in this country. Nevertheless it would lack one important element of plant food, viz: magnesia, and if the crop to be manured were cotton, it would lack another element, soda.

NEW YORK AND LONDON DAILIES.—A single copy of a New York journal gives more news than will be found in a week's file of the London Times. At the time of the English expedition to Abyssinia the London papers were indebted to the courtesy of the "Herald" correspondent for the latest and fullest intelligence from the field; and during the Franco German war the most interesting and accurate accounts of the grand achievements of the German arms published in the English papers were given in the dispatches to the "Herald" but for which the English public would have been compelled to wait the arrival of letters by post for more than the meagre telegraphic announcement of victories which have scarcely begun to learn the use of the telegraph for transmitting news. They affect a contempt for the American system and plume themselves on the more solid and scholarly character of their newspapers; but while this view may have been once correct, an impartial comparison of American and English journals of the present day would show that in addition to an amount of news which would supply London newspapers for a week, the leading articles, literary reviews, and correspondence in every issue of one of our first-class papers are as thoughtful and as carefully considered as the articles which appear in the columns of the London "Times".—From "News and Editors" by S. S. CONANT, in Harper's Magazine for March.

A Springfield (Mass.) paper says: The windy head of Jesus himself, and all his sudoriferous bags of atmosphere, swept over segment of earth from long ere dawn of yesterday through a bitter twenty four hours of extreme wintriness and physical and spiritual shiverings.

THE GOOD OLD MINER.

In the small town of Saffield there were formerly more mines than there are at present, so that many houses stand over shafts deeper than the highest tower.

Such a shaft was in the cellar of a house in which dwelt a widow with her little daughter, seven years of age. The opening of the shaft was covered with planks, and no one thought of any danger. One summer's day the mother sent the child into the cellar to bring a jug of cider. As she was rather frightened to be in the dark cellar, she sprang in quickly, and the plank covering the shaft on which she stood suddenly broke, and, with a loud cry, she fell down into the abyss.

The mother, who was just then in the kitchen, thought she heard her daughter scream; she hastened with a light into the cellar, and when she did not see her child, and found the opening over the shaft, her trembling knees could scarcely support her, and she almost fell into the hole herself. She hurried up the steps, and cried out for help; some of her neighbors, who were all out in the fields harvesting, at last heard her. They ran to her, and found her wringing her hands over the dark shaft, but knew no way to help her. Suddenly they heard the child cry out of the dark mine, "Oh! help me! help me! but quickly—very quickly."

A look in the side of the shaft, on which in former times a ladder had been fixed, had caught the girl's apron as she fell, and by this the unfortunate child was hanging. When they heard above that the child was still alive, and yet knew of no way to help her, their anguish was all the greater, and the poor mother was almost in despair. Meanwhile more people came up, but none knew what to do. At last came an old miner, who began carefully to enlarge the opening; he then had a windlass brought, and a bucket fastened to the end of the rope; but, quick as they were, much time had already elapsed. Many of the bystanders prayed aloud; and in the terrible moments of consciousness which the poor child, almost stunned, had from time to time, they heard come up from below words from funeral hymns and prayers in time of danger, whilst the mother, overcome by grief, stood by silent and motionless.

The old miner said but little, but he fervently prayed to God; and, when everything was ready for the descent, he commended himself to his Saviour, and got into the bucket, with a miner's lamp. Slowly and cautiously was he let down. During his descent he prayed thus:—"Gracious Father in heaven, thou hast for many a year, up to my old age, mercifully preserved me from many dangers which have threatened me in my lawful calling in mines. Wilt thou now also protect me with thine almighty power and love, and strengthen my old hands that I may be able to rescue this unhappy child from the dark mine, and to place her in the arms of her sorrowing mother. Yes, I am sure that thou wilt grant me this joy in my old days. Father, thy will be done."

Like a star sent by God, the child saw the light approach nearer and nearer; she raised up her hands, and then the pitcher, which she had convulsively clasped, first fell from her, and dashed down from rock to rock in the chasm. Those standing above turned pale, and there was a death-like silence.

But the old miner was soon near the child that she could see him; he spoke words of comfort to her, told her to be calm, and that with God's help, he hoped to save her. But the shaft became much narrower, and the old man feared he should not be able to come up to the child without touching her and moving her in such a way that she might fall right down and be dashed to pieces among the rocks. The danger was very great, so he gave a sign that they should not let him down any lower; he reached the child a rope with a ring in it—she seized this, and raised herself a little higher. Already with one hand could she touch the bucket, and at the very moment when she could grasp it with the other the hook by which she had been so wonderfully suspended broke off from the wall and fell down below. But the Lord gave the old man strength to hold the child by the rope; he lifted her up to him in the bucket, and cried out, "Thank God, all you above! I have the child quite safe."

Had the hook broken off from the wall a moment sooner, the child would have fallen down below without a hope of deliverance. Let who can imagine the feelings of the mother. She often said afterwards, "The cry of the old miner first sent a shudder through my heart; for it did not seem possible to me that my child could be saved; I fell down upon the earth, and could only weep. But when the light came up higher and I saw my child, and perceived that it was alive, my joy was beyond expression. I have never forgotten that blessed moment. That day of terror first strengthened and confirmed me in the faith of God's fatherly love."

And now the child came up to the opening. The good old man, his face beaming with joy, held her up to her mother; she seized her daughter, and would scarcely let her out of her arms again. If she loved her child before, she now became doubly precious. The pale countenance which she brought up out of the shaft, and which was caused by the terrible fright, she never lost all her life; but it was to her a constant reminder of how the Lord in that day had preserved life.

"Imagination, few much indulged in," say Josh Billings, "soon is tortured into reality; this is one way good hoes thieves are made; a man learns over a fence all day and imagines the hoes belongs to him, and sure enough, the first dark night, the hoes does."

A pupil in one of the public schools was asked the other day why one was carried for every ten. The answer was, because ten wanted it. That's the way of the world. The more it gets the more it wants.

WINGED MAN.

Fagin, the Bird Man of Auvergne—a Singular Story.

Paris has a Revue des Merveilles Scientifiques, and all its articles are as startling as a report of a contribution from the pen of Mr. Harms Condamine, it certainly has good claims to the title. This gentleman has discovered actual evidence of a new departure among the human race by which man is eventually to take to himself wings and fly through the air. The application of faith in the Darwinian theory of the selection of species to the phenomenon that Mr. Harms Condamine describes is all that is necessary to forecast an ostrich like creature as the coming man, half striding, half flying through the world. The addition of wings to man is, of course, not a new departure, but a new departure.

It was in the mountains of Auvergne that the embodiment of the first evidence of the new departure was discovered. His name was Andre Fagin. He was an athlete, a famous swimmer and a great walker. He appeared to walk as much with his arms as with his legs. The motion of the arms increased as he ran until, as he did so, he seemed to be actually propelling himself through the air like a swimmer who goes through the water and over land. He insisted that this increased his speed. When Andre did M. Harms Condamine, assisted by M. Bravais, a physician of the conservative school, dissected his body. Abnormal developments were found, which taken separately, might be regarded as deformities, but, together, pointed directly to a new type—the bird type. The arm was certainly the beginning of the frame work of a wing, according to these gentlemen. The formation of the breast, the lengthening of the shouder blade, the enclosure of the thorax and various other developments indicated the same ultimate condition of a human being with wings.

At his death Fagin left a child, about a year old, that showed the same developments in a more pronounced degree, with two additional features of the bird type. One of these is a very distinctly marked, though rudimentary third eyelid; the other is a loose and floppy mass of skin that folds back of the arm when this member is at rest. These additions indicate rapid advances in the process of developing the new species that is promised. This process would naturally be gradual, and take its slow course through marriage and offspring. It is claimed that the strength of the muscle required for flying is not near so great as has been estimated in the past, and that elasticity is quite as important an adjunct. The developments that have been noted are of particularly elastic quality. M. Harms Condamine proposes to undertake the education of this child, probably for the purpose of bringing it up as it should fly.

A newspaper of Iowa city gives rather a discouraging account of what the farmers in those "diggings" are doing, or rather not doing. Here are the prices current: A pair of winter boots cost two loads of potatoes; a night's lodging a load of oats; the wife wears five acres of wheat; the children each ten acres of corn; the price of an overcoat is a good four-year old steer; of a Sunday suit, twenty fat hogs.

An agricultural paper says that a berry bed many a foot deep from birds, by running a wire at the top, the wire is placed in a line, the wire will keep the birds away. Where there is no chain, the wire can be run through the cat, and heated to a temperature that will fill the cat with a longing to keep moving.

Had the hook broken off from the wall a moment sooner, the child would have fallen down below without a hope of deliverance. Let who can imagine the feelings of the mother. She often said afterwards, "The cry of the old miner first sent a shudder through my heart; for it did not seem possible to me that my child could be saved; I fell down upon the earth, and could only weep. But when the light came up higher and I saw my child, and perceived that it was alive, my joy was beyond expression. I have never forgotten that blessed moment. Great Frauds on the Bank of England.

The discovery has just been made of frauds on a gigantic scale on the Bank of England, committed by one Warren alias Horton, an American, through a series of skillful forgeries of the names of the Rothschilds and other great financial men. A reward of one thousand pounds has been offered for his apprehension, and the police are searching for him with hopes of success.

The discovery of immense frauds on the Bank of England caused the greatest excitement in financial circles. It is impossible to state the amount of the forgeries or ramifications of the operations of the swindler, as everything is involved in a mystery, and the police authorities must effect the strictest secrecy in the investigation. The Bank of England has issued a notice cautioning the public against negotiating certain specified fifty-two and ten forty United States bonds aggregating in amount to $220,000. It is thought that the forgeries were perpetrated by a Ring of American swindlers, and not by one person only, as at first supposed. The person arrested this morning on suspicion of being a party to the frauds proved to be only an innocent clerk. The discovery of the forgeries was altogether accidental and brought about by the Messrs. Rothschilds noticing in some bills of exchange a difference in the color of the ink from that ordinarily used by them. They were so neatly executed they would otherwise have escaped detection. The reward for the arrest of the forgers has been increased to £2,500.

The reported frauds on the Bank of England amount to $2,000,000 and that of this amount $350,000 were drawn upon Jay Cook, McCulloch & Co., $200,000 upon Rothschilds, and a large amount, the exact figures unknown, upon the Barings. Some of these houses are said to be making strenuous efforts to suppress the details of the transaction. It is stated, on what appears to be good authority that one of the members of the house of Rothschild went to Newgate, and had an interview with Magos, the alleged accomplice of the swindlers, and that startling revelations concerning their operations were made, the nature of which is kept secret for the present.

A CHINESE MERCHANT STEAMER.—The China Overland Trade Report, under date, Hongkong, December 26, mentions the starting of the first merchant steamer under the Chinese flag, and says it has attracted some attention, as a new feature in connection with the carrying traffic to those parts. The report adds that there may appear to be a danger that the steamer will compete seriously with foreign vessels. The fact, however, which may be felt in this direction will probably be found exaggerated, for the simple reason that the inauguration of a steamer trade under the Chinese flag will in all likelihood give such an impetus to trade as will more than counter-balance what is lost by the opposition.

SAINT ANDREWS, MARCH 12, 1873.
IMMIGRATION REPORT.—We have received the Report on Immigration to New Brunswick in 1872, by the Hon. B. R. Stevenson, Sur. Genl. It is a very interesting Public Document, clearly and well drawn up; there are some inaccuracies in the printing which however can easily be understood. The Press generally will accord to the Surveyor General that meed of praise to which he is so justly entitled, for the satisfactory and prudent manner in which he has conducted the onerous duties which devolved upon him, and the success which has attended his efforts to promote a healthy immigration to this Province.

Charlotte County has good reason to rejoice in having so energetic and able a representative in the Government. The late hour at which we received the Report prevents a lengthy notice; we will, however, give some extracts from it in our next issue. One matter is quite evident, that for the money expended, the Sur. Genl. can claim as good results as any of the Provinces, perhaps rather more, as they have expended large amounts on Agencies, besides this Province is getting quick and satisfactory returns for the money it has expended in carrying out its admirable emigration policy. We have said very little with reference to Mr. Stevenson since he became a representative of the County, but we feel it a pleasure as well as a duty to state, that he is an industrious and hard working member, preferring to work for the interest of his constituents, rather than take up the time of the Legislature with long speeches, although he can speak lengthily and ably when necessary.

THE DOMINION PARLIAMENT was opened on the 6th inst., with great pomp and ceremony. The galleries were crowded, all the elite of the Dominion were present. All the New Brunswick members were present.

The Governor General expresses his satisfaction at his assumption of office, when the prospects of the country appear so full of promise. Refers to the Charter given to the Canadian Pacific Railway Company.—Notices the successful efforts made to encourage Immigration.—States that the completion of the first census of the Dominion approaches completion—recommends that provision be made for the consolidation and amendment of the laws now in force in the several Provinces relating to the representation in Parliament, &c.

BETTER TERMS.—Reports have reached here, that New Brunswick's claims for Better Terms will be accepted. The members from this Province in Parliament were working energetically to accomplish the object. The New Brunswick Government's Memorandum setting forth the claims of this Province upon the Government and Parliament of Canada for a re-adjustment of the financial arrangements, is an able and argumentative paper.

THE AUDITOR GENERAL'S REPORT for 1872 has been received, and is made up in that clear and comprehensive style, which James Beek, Esq., is noted for. There are several matters in the Report which we will refer to in another issue.

ANOTHER SNOW STORM, nothing unusual this winter, occurred on Monday last, somewhat similar to the great storm which took place on the 10th March last year, which effectually blocked up the post roads and railways. The drifts on Monday night in many places were high; the sun however is strong, and the snow is melting, rendering travel rather heavy, and causing delay to the trains.

Notwithstanding the storm, the train arrived on time, Monday evening; indeed the employees on this end of the railway are deservingly much credit for their successful efforts to keep the line open, without the aid of a snow plough, and we trust that in future they will have one of those necessary implements at their service, when required. The season is so far advanced, that it is not probable one will be required until next winter.

LONDON STOCK EXCHANGE, Feb. 20.
We are happy to notice that Colonial Securities are quoted at a high figure. The following commanding the highest rates:
New Brunswick 6 pr. ct. 109 1/2
Canada 6 pr. ct. 1877 84 108 1/2
This speaks well for the credit of the Province.

THE NEW DOMINION MONTHLY.—The March number is well filled with interesting, instructive articles. The Old Times Canadian School, is an amusing sketch of the system that was common a long over what is now the Dominion, forty years ago.

THE R.V. Mr. Verrier's many friends will be pleased to learn that he has so far recovered from his recent illness, that he was able to officiate on Sunday last.

We are compelled to hold over a visit to the School for another issue. It is gratifying to state that there is a marked progress since our former visit, and that the school has carried out harmoniously, and to the satisfaction of the people.

Our thanks are due to Mr. E. Stinson at present in England, for the latest British papers.

ST. GEORGE RAILWAY.—We will be happy to insert the proceedings when we receive them.

From our Fredericton Correspondent.

FREDERICTON, March 10, 1873.
DEAR STANDARD.—The past week has not furnished me with a great deal of very interesting matter for your weekly paper. The daily papers publishing at once the various proceedings of the Legislature, renders the duty I have undertaken in your interest, more difficult. A leading feature of the Session so far, is that at this date, more work than is usual has been done. The Provincial Secretary the other day, announced that the Government were ready with their estimates, but did not wish to bring them in too early, as it is usually observed, that after Supply has been granted, there is much haste in passing bills, and his very sensible advice to the House, that it would be well to get on with the private legislation as fast as possible, is evidently being acted on.

The Government have introduced and passed a Bill relating to the appointment of Notaries Public, and have on file their Common Law Procedure Act, and a Bill to provide for the Clerks of both Branches of the Legislature. This latter Bill contains provision for a retiring allowance to that very much respected and aged gentleman, the present Clerk of the House of Assembly, whose health this Session, is by no means so good as heretofore.

Some discussion on the School Question took place on the passage of the Bill to legalize the assessment of the Town of Portland; the motion to postpone consideration of it for three months was negatived by a large vote, the yeas and nays were not called for. During the discussion, the Provincial Secretary announced, that the Government intended introducing a general measure whereby no assessment would be irregular on account of any defect in matter of form. The Attorney General announced the other day that it was the intention of the Government to introduce a Bill to amend the School Law in some matters of detail,—not in any way affecting the principles of the Law. It has not as yet transpired what these amendments are. From conversation I have had with the different members of the Legislature, I learn with much satisfaction, that throughout the Province, the School Law is being more generally accepted, and that the effect of the judgment of the Supreme Court, has removed many difficulties in the way, heretofore, of the efficient working of the Law.

The Report on Public Accounts has been laid on the table. This is got up in the usual satisfactory and explicit manner of the Auditor General. Doubtless you have received a copy. The other Reports of Departments have not as yet been laid on the table, but from the reply of the Surveyor General the other day to an inquiry by Mr. Gough, I presume his Report on Immigration, as well as his Report on the Crown Land Department, will soon be presented.

The general expression of members is that the Session will be a short one, the same bills now on file will call for considerable discussion. You will have observed that the now almost "annual offering" of a Bill to abolish the Legislative Council is presented. There is no probability of this being passed; its introduction, however, gives, what some of the members from not very patriotic motives desire, an opportunity for attack, not so much of that Branch of our Constitution, as of the material of which it is at present composed.

The Bill which Mr. Lindsay committed relating to the House of Assembly, whereby the representation would be reduced to thirty-five, was very sensibly discussed; there is no probability of its passing.

A Bill providing for a lien for labor was debated in committee on Friday last. This gave your representative DONALD, an opportunity of submitting his views on this subject, but he did not do it in his usual manner, owing to his temporary illness from a severe cold. Though he is evidently not very much of the scholar, he generally makes his ideas of matters tolerably intelligible, still some of them may not find general acceptance. He is generally considered sincere. So far in the Session he has done more talking than your other representatives. Mr. HIBBARD does not this year appear to be so active. Perhaps he is not in accord with the Opposition; doubtless Gough has not got over the severe rebuke he received from HIBBARD last winter, and then you know WILLIS is not "shying round," to fan up the spark of Opposition which has always been observable in Hibbard; or perhaps Hibbard is getting tired of what has heretofore always with him, proved a fruitless work. He, however, is not without considerable influence in the House, and perhaps, his position at present would be best defined as independent.

Of your young representative BROWN, I am unable to say anything, for as yet he has not spoken in the House, and I have little acquaintance with him. He appears to be a jolly good fellow, with a pleasant smile generally on his countenance. It is probable we will hear from him soon; he is generally put down as friendly to the Government.

Surveyor General STEVENSON seems to be much occupied with the duties of his Department, and like the other members, Heads of Departments, is not as much in the House as ordinary members. He, however, looks quite well. His discharge of the duties devolving on him in connection with Immigration, was complimented by Mr. Tibbitts the other day, in some remarks called forth by an inquiry of Mr. Lindsay.

I will bear in mind the remarks in your last issue on my letter of the 3rd.

Yours, &c., KAPPA.

The Army of Canada.

[From the Broad Arrow.]

The editor of the monthly "Army List" has at last deigned to recognize the existence of the Canadian Militia. The February issue devotes no less than forty pages to a list of the officers of the several corps of which the force consists. Indeed the greater part of the space set apart for the Colonial Militia and Volunteers is absorbed by Canada, and the gross negligence or blundering, or both, which for many months has led to the omission of all mention of so important a force as the Dominion Army undoubtedly is, seems the more inexcusable when its importance in comparison with similar bodies is made apparent. It has always been understood in this country that Canada's boasted Militia was well organized and of considerable numerical strength, but the British public can have scarcely been prepared to find that the colony possessed an Army which on paper at least has such a very imposing appearance. Nor is there any reason to suppose that the Canadian Militia has not a tangible existence. The colony itself is perfectly content to be left to its own self-defence, and this self confidence is perhaps the most satisfactory assurance it is possible to have of the efficiency of its Militia, for it is a characteristic trait in the British character to underrate rather than overrate the value of existing institutions.

As the current "Army List," however, for the first time supplies us with the details of the Canadian Militia, it is rather more with a view to setting forth the materials of which the force is composed than of dealing with the question of its efficiency and utility, that we in this place comment on its existence. Commencing with a Commander-in-Chief, "Her Majesty the Queen personally, or by the Governor General as her representative," duly furnished with a brace of aides-de-camp, there follows a very complete staff, headed by an Adjutant-General and an Inspector of Artillery and Stores, and comprising Deputy-Adjutant Generals, District Paymasters, and Brigade Majors. The Army itself seems to have been arranged with a view to being assimilated as nearly as possible to the imperial force.

Although no doubt the organization of this army by the Canadians is due to the instinct of self-preservation aroused by occurrences which have taken place on the border, yet it is impossible not to feel that this country owes much to Canada, for, even at this late period, taking on herself what some conscientious statesmen might take it into their heads was the business of this country. It is here that Mr. Cartwright's colonial policy has long since scattered to the winds the principle that England should pay for the protection of her dependencies, and the "Army List" sufficiently shows that even the poorest and most defenceless of our colonies are alive to the fact; but should a hostile force invade one of our dependencies it would be questionable how far the counsels of imperial economy would be allowed to prevail, and Canada is undoubtedly the ground on which the question would be most likely to be put to the test. It behooves us, therefore, to appreciate the public spirit which has, partially at all events, relieved this country of a grave responsibility. In this improbable case of invasion, we should no doubt send a considerable force across the Atlantic with all speed; but it is something to feel that in the meantime the Canadians would be in a position to hold their own till succor came, if, indeed—thanks to their admirably organized Militia—they could not dispense with assistance altogether.

Already Canada has quietly and firmly pushed back into its native whisky shops the great and loud-sounding Fenian nation in arms. Our colonies, once our sons, but in future our brothers, have acted nobly and wisely. Under a more just and liberal policy than that under which the old American colonists thought they ought to groan, Canada and our colonies of to-day have been promoted to self-respect and self-dependence. It must be the future policy of England to throw the whole power of the Empire forward to the support of Canada, whenever, under any pretext, her territory is threatened. Meantime, what a satire it is on the narrow-minded modern military nomenclature to speak of Canadian, or in fact any other British Militia, simply as auxiliaries.

THE NORTHFLEET AND THE MURILLO.—In the Admiralty Court yesterday, a motion was made on behalf of the owners of the cargo of the Northfleet to administer interrogatories to Mr. M. Andrew with regard to the ownership of the Murillo with a view to avoid expense before filing the petition. The motion was opposed, but Sir R. Phillimore made the order desired, reserving an application for leave to appeal.

Dover, Feb. 19.
The divers succeeded in lifting out the mainmast of the Northfleet to-day, and expect to commence on the cargo in the main hatch to-morrow.

PARLIAMENTARY REPORT ON DRUNKENNESS.—A select committee was some time since appointed by the British Parliament to inquire into the subject of drunkenness in the Kingdom, especially in its legal and sanitary bearings, and an elaborate report has been made. The committee argue that there is a difference between the proxym of intoxication and insanity proper, so distinct as to forbid the plea, in bar of punishment, that an offence was committed while drunk—but, at the same time, placing inebriates in insane asylums is improper, and should not be allowed. The committee also declare it as their judgment that, when acts of violence or other offences are superadded to the drunkenness, the ordinary punishment awarded by law to those offences should be carried out, and commitment to a reformatory may form part of a sentence, or it may be left to the discretion of a magistrate to send the offender at once to an inebriate reformatory.

"Put a barrel on your own back, you brute!" shouted an old gentleman with a flowing white beard and a cherry face, as a heartless truckman was lashing a pair of overworked horses that were staggering through the sloughs in William street. "Are you one of Berge's spies?" was the surly rejoinder. "No, Sir, but I'm a Bergher, and if you'll come down like a man I'll thrash you." The cartman took up the gauntlet and the old gentleman was as good as his word; and to the honor of the police be it said that they did not interfere, but allowed the driver to get his deservings.—N. Y. Tribune.

—The sudden death of Mr. W. L. Hathorn of Pittsfield has caused a great disappointment to the people of Vermont, as the firm to which he was junior member (Goring Hathorn & Son) were intending that he be hired, to put in a large amount of machinery on the St. Croix, for manufacturing shooks etc.

—John C. Lemore, a Frenchman living in Fort Kent, is one hundred years old, or there abouts, and goes to church every Sabbath. He walks frequently to visit his children, some of whom live 16 miles off. The North Star does not inform us whether he uses tobacco or liquor.

—In West Levent there is such a depth of snow over a portion of the country road, that a tunnel was cut through the drift, and for two days teams have been driven out, a snow arch about four rods in length.

The Army itself seems to have been arranged with a view to being assimilated as nearly as possible to the imperial force.
