WHICH WAY WILL CITY'S BUSINESS DISTRICT GROW? IS J. GRANT HENDERSON TO

The Question Is One That Has Many Sides to It When It Is Gone Into.

GROWTH OF DUNDAS AND RICHMOND STREETS

A Glance at the Situation as It Appears at the Present Time in London.

Which way will London's business district grow?

This question is one that is the subject of many conversations at the present time, when there is a certain atmosphere of expansion and optimism in the air.

Many citizens think that the natural line to be followed is along Dundas street to the east, until the main section of the business community joins hands, so to speak, with the rapidly advancing East London section. A solid business thoroughfare from Ridout street to the present Western Fair grounds is the picture that many people paint. But is it possible? Let the situation be examined

One unfailing sign of this seems to be that many of the houses in this block are at present used for business or for semibusiness purposes. It is an admirable location for physicians. There are half a dozen boarding houses, the coming of the boarding house often presages the march of industry. A Real Park. The street is again broken on the north side by the almost solid block held by the Sacred Heart Academy This property is a veritable park within the heart of the city, and may always be expected to have sufficient individual seclusion to remain where it is. The south side of this block is partly devoted to business at present, and may afford more desirable locations for blocks of stores. Certainly it is the highway of a large portion of the city's population. If there is anything in this general optimism that pervades the civic atmosphere, there will be many more thousands of citizens in London before many years, and more stores will be required to keep them clothed and fed. Residential Blocks. The next two blocks, from Maitland to Adelaide, are fine residential blocks for the most part at present. The ownthey will give way to places of business, or maintain their residences despite the clamor that may come for their property. (This is seeing things brightly, perhaps, but the writer saw a man who was wild with boom talk times of 50 years ago in London were to return.)

All along this section are studded grocery and other stores, which seem to be stakes of the future route to be taken. But there are several barriers The great influx of foreigners into the city was another feature brought out in haps even these will not be insurmount than to a solid array of business places. Miss Hannah Patterson Was Oldest Resident of Elgin.

[Special to The Advertiser.] St. Thomas, Jan. 28 .- Miss Hannah Patterson, the oldest resident of Elgin County, died today at Port Talbot, aged 99 years 11 months. The deceased lady was the daughter of the late Colonel Leslie Patterson, who came to Canada during Colonel Talbot's regime, and she was born on the farm where she died. She and her sister, Mrs. Duncan, who survives her were housekeepers for the late Colonel Talbot. Miss Patterson was a lifelong member of the Church England. Interment will take place in the Anglican graveyard at Port Talbot, where her mother and the late Colonel Patterson and Colonel

White Sale, Embroideries

Special Selling in Women's Whitewear Will Mark Last Days of January

THIS White Sale in particular has been best advertised by the people who have been buying in it. From day to day women tell us about the lovely things their friends got from the January Sale of White. Undermuslins so good or so dainty, that you simply cannot see anywhere but at Smallman & Ingram's. "EVERYTHING IN YOUR WHITE SALE IS SO FRESH," said a woman the other day, "that I do enjoy buying my supplies in it." And freshness is as much insisted on here as correct shapes and fine embroideries or any of the other points which have made this sale so famous.

One of the notably different features is its extra-sized undergarments. Not merely because of their soft, sheer materials and refined laces and embroideries are they famous, but because they are genuinely extra sized. Night gowns nearly as wide across the hips as at the foot; armholes large and easy. Corset Covers large in the waist and armholes. Whatever the spot that usually pinches in any garment, there we have insisted on the most generous measurements in extra-sized garments.

London, Jan. 28 .- The Roumanian question, which is again coming into prominence, according to the newspapers, justifies anxiety. One report has it that Bulgaria has renewed the invitation to Roumania to join the Balkan League, and consolidate with their armies if the war is resumed. Roumania is considering the matter. If she accepts it must have an important influence on Austrian policy. Another statement is to the effect that Bulgaria, in view of Roumania's emphatically reiterated demand for Silestria and in anticipation of an ultimatum, has decided to discontinue to occupy the territory without opposition, but at the same time not to yield

UNWORTHY OF CANADA.

What this or that politician like Mr. Cockshutt or pulpit warrior like Bishop Mills has said on the naval question would be of no importance but for the revelation that Canada is honeycombed by a spirit of selfabasement which denies her past and menaces her future.

Even the Nationalists, who object to naval expenditure in any form, adjure Canadians to strengthen the land defences and profess to put their confidence in Canadian manhood. They are illogical, since a Canadian navy is the corollary of a Canadian land force, but they spare us the final insult of attempting to thrust the duty of our defence on another country on the plea of our own incompetence.

Three years ago when the leaders of both parties in Canada and their followers in the House of Commons declared to a man for a Canadian havy, no one would have prophesied that three years later Canadians in high position would venture to tell their fellow-countrymen that they were fit only to pay others to defend them on the high seas; that they were incapable either of building ships or of manning and managing

GENIUS OF DE QUINCEY, THE OPIUM EATER

[By Special Arrangement With the Winnipeg Telegram.]

Certain persons are associated my memory with certain authors. For example, I never turn the pages of Shakespeare's "Midsummer's Night's Dream" without calling up the vision of an impecunious but learned grocery clerk, a young Scot, who used to read the bard of Avon in a villainous twenty-five cent edition, and persuaded me to go and do likewise some twenty-five years ago. And, well do remember the eventful evening when emerged from an Anglican rectory with Carlyle's "Heroes and Hero Worship" under my arm; it was only a six-penny paper-backed affair, but through it I passed into a region of enchantment, of fire-new phrases and quickening ideas. Strangest of all, however, is the figure that rises before my mind's eye when I pick up a volume of De Quincey's writings-a review of which is my motive in writing this article. De Quincey always calls up A woman is the latest victim of the Two and one make three. Three feet the emaciated form of a friend long Postmaster-General's party axe. He re- make a yard, and I want to go out and since gone to his extreme rest. Poor M-, how I see thee again, standing nature states to The Advertiser that at the gate in the moonlight, thy face ploodless because of anaemia, but thy features alight with joy as we recited the varied cadences and swelling harmonies of "Suspiria de Profundis," or suppose; but cheer up. You're not of "The English Mail Coach!"

Absurd as are such associations as he grocery clerk with Shakespeare and the Anglican rector with Carlyle, there is something beautifully appropriate in this connection of choly and of death with De Quincey for his was a sorrowful life; melancholy marked him for her own. "He was a pretty little creature," says Carlyle in his celebrated Vignette. full of wire-drawn ingenuities; bankrupt enthusiasms, bankrupt pride with the finest sliver-toned low voice and most elaborate gently-winding courtesies and ingenuities in conversation. You would have taken by candle-light, for the beautifullest little child; blue-eyed, blonde-haired, sparkling face-had there not been something too which said, 'Eccovi, this child has been in hell.'' This is Carlyle's way of saying that Quincey was an opium-eater. He and Coleridge tasted the bitterness of de moralization and delirium, which often threatened the loss of reason because of their consumption of the drug. But De Quincey did not allow opium to paralyze his faculties; by a supreme ance from 380 grains a day to moderate proportions, and although he continued the habit down to the end walks and to interpose his burly rame between the poet and druggist's doorways when the temptation to pro-The brazen action of the minister of cure opium became too strong. This work of selection has now been performed by Sidney Low in the Masters of Literature series published by G. Bell and Mr. Low has prefaced the Sons. selections with a very able review of De Quincey's life and a criticism of his style. This is really a book in itself, and is of absorbing interest. Speaking of De Quincey's greatness as a journalist Mr. Low says: "He had the journalistic temper, the spirit which informs the avocation for those to whom it is something more than To the journalist the world may seem ugly, evil, purposeless, unorganized; but he cannot afford find it dull.

When the curtain is up and for him it is never down-he must not yawn over the puppets on the stage, or allow himself to rememper that what moves before him is but a passing pageant, transitory brief, unreal. # LONDON LOSES TO PARIS IN HARD-FOUGHT GAME

Long, Narrow Rink in Underwear Town Seemed to Interfere With Indians' Combination—Game Was Rough, and a Couple of Local Players Were Badly Used Up.

Paris, Jan. 28.—Paris handed London a trifle the worst of tonight's O. H. A. fixture, the locals winning by a score of 8 to 3. One of the largest crowds that ever witnessed a hockey game in this town packed the rink and filled every available space except the ice surface. The London club arrived about 8 o'clock on a special train, accompanied by about four hundred rooters, but the Forst City crowd was given little opportunity to root after the first ten minutes of the game. The half-time score was 5 to 2.

Two minutes later Paris made it four,

Two minutes later Paris made it four, P. Gill turning the trick this time. With a minute of the first half left to play, A. Peebles scored on a lucky shot from the wing, the puck striking the goal post and dropping an inch inside the net. Half time ended with the score 5 to 2 in Paris'

crowd knew no bounds. The game was resumed after five minutes, with W. Gill off to even up. Only a few minutes had been played when one of Walden's shots hit Fraser on an unprotected spot, and the Paris goalkeeper took the count

When the game was resumed about ten minutes later, Borland came back on the ice looking dazed. He had a lump the

W. Gill then made it seven for Paris on a shot from the wing, and the life seemed to have oozed from the London team.

However, the forward line, with Jimmy Grannary's able assistance, rallied for a while and made things interesting at the Paris end of the rink. Finally Grannary carried the puck to the goal and passed back to Walden, who notched London's only counter in the second half.

With seven minutes left to play, W. Gill went off for tripping, and Gillies followed him to the boards a moment later. While Laurie was off, W. Peebles scored the last goal of the game.

minutes of the game. The half-time score was 5 to 2.

A Hard-Fought Game.

It was probably the hardest-fought game that London and Parls ever played and that the green-sweatered aggregation handed London the worst beating that a team from that city was ever handed on Parls ice, makes the outlook bright for the district honors coming to this town. The game was rough from start to finish, and Referee Whitehead, a Toronto official, appeared utterly incapable of handling the play at times. He allowed almost everything but actual killing, and even the local fans were disgusted with his work. Both teams indulged in tripping, body-checking and dirty tactics, and it was hard to say which team offended the most. London suffered more penalties than the home team, but there were many more penalties which should have been inflicted on both sides. In the second half Borland and Walden were laid out as a result of being body-checked, the former lighting on his head and being carried from the ice in an unconscious condition. Walden's Work a Feature.

Grannary's brilliant rushes the whole length of the rink resulted in two of London's goals, the big coverpoint taking the puck through the whole Paris team for the first goal of the game. For Paris the whole seven players played the games of their lives. At times they outskated London, and outworked the visitors in team play, and they back-checked like demons. Forest and St. Thomas Battle in the Finals at London Club Rink-Ingersoll and Sarnia Lose.

Upon the conclusion of play last night the rinks from the Forest and St. Thomas curling clubs were left to battle for the possession of the district cup, and the final game was played this morning, commencing at 10 o'clock. This is the second successive year that Forest has been in the finals, and last year the two rinks from that place were successful in winning the cup. The representatives of the London and Thistle clubs were put out of the running in the first round by Ingersoll and St. Thomas, respectively, and on account of the defeat of the locals, there was not as much interest taken in the games as would have been the case if the local clubs had made more progress toward the finals. As it was, the game between Forest and Ingersoll was watched by a fairly large gallery until the last stone was put down a fey minutes before midnight. The ice was in better condition than at any previous time this season, and there were some fine demonstrations of the Scotch game, particularly during the evening

Vancouver, B. C., Jan 29 .- Coming away with a rush in the final period of one of the fastest games played in the league series of the season, Vancouver defeated New Westminster by a score of 8 to 2 and practically eliminated the Patterson Cup holders from the championship race. Vancouver showed a remarkable change in form, playing good combination throughout. The Royals showed the effect of the gruelling game of last Saturday, and Johnson, Gardner and Tobin appeared to be the only ones able to stand the pace. Vancouver had a shade the better of it all the time, but able to stand the pace. Vancouver had a shade the better of it all the time, but their rush in the final period swept the champions off their feet. There was an inclination to rough it throughout the game, and the officials were too lenient. Taylor and Johnson were always in the limitest with spectacular rushes, and

He didn't dare to look at her while she was doing these things, but kept his head bowed and his eyes on his plate. When she handed him his cup he managed to say:

"You're mighty good, Julie."

She did not answer, but he could feel her eyes upon him. Once during the meal he heard the quick intake of her breath.

CHAPTER XXII. 'Gene slept through the remainder of that day, through the night and far into the next morning. When he finally awoke in the dainty white-curtained room, it took him some time to piece together his scattered thoughts. He had to go way back to the morning when in the dawn he had felt the warm arms of Bella about his neck and had looked down into the gray eyes which burned from the shadowy face. From this point his brain leaped to the scene of yesterday afternoon, and he shrank back beneath the coverlet. His cheeks burned with shame and he felt here like an intruder in some holy shrine. He closed his eyes and tried to sleep again in an effort to escape holy shrine. He closed his eyes and tried to sleep again in an effort to escape the present. This was impossible, and so he lay there weak and sick at heart and tried to plan some way of escape. If he could get out of the house unseen he might make his way back to Boston and still retrieve himself with Bella. She would forgive him and he could explain his absence on the ground of homesickness and a trip back to his mother. He plucked up courage at this, and getting out of bed began to dress. He was honestly contrite for the whole adventure. Had it been possible he would have undone it all and returned to his job on the ferry and settied down for the winter. It was Flint who was to blame—Flint who the ferry and settled down for the winter. It was Flint who was to blame—Flint who had offered him a drink in the first place. He persuaded himself that from the beginning all he had intended to do was to visit his folks and Julie and then return. He finished dressing, but drew back startled at the sight of his face in the mirror. His eyes were bloodshot and heavy. He sickened at his own appearance. He brushed his hair until it shone like gold, whisked his clothes until they were speckless, and still he looked like a tramp. From below he caught the aftee. He brushed his clothes until they were speckless, and still he looked like a tramp. From below he caught the aroma of hot coffee. If he only had a cup of that it might straighten him out, but his forehead became moist with perspiration at the thought of seeing Julie again. He had no defence left. He must take the mauling of those eyes, listen in silence to whatever she might say, and still realize the deeper horror of what he had done. He couldn't endure it. He must get out—get away.

He swung open the door and tiptoed down the stairs, feeling like a thief. The house was grewsomely quiet. It was as though someone were lying dead in one of the rooms. He paused at sound of his own creaking, and felt an impulse to shout and make a wild bolt for the door. Half way he sat down and rubbed his hand over his dry forehead in an agony of self-reproach. When he had partly recovered himself he went on again. He reached the foot of the stairs and was stealing past the sitting-room door when he heard a voice. He saw Julie rise from a chair and come to meet him. She might have been the dead thing he had feared as far as her appearance went. Her darkrimmed eyes stared dully out of a face as colorless as anything in shrouds. She was dressed in pure white, which made the effect even worse.

A large work apron that comes well over the waist is indispensable to the busy housewife. This one of striped percale, is not only a protection to the dress, but it is neat and attractive as well. The bib is in jumper effect and broadens out over the shoulders in a most becoming way. The skirt is cut circular, fitted in at the waist by darts. Gingham, percale and lawn are all used for the making. The pattern is cut in three sizes. ing. The pattern is cut in three sizes—small, medium and large. A New Face Without Surgical Skin Peeling

"I do not approve of the surgical operation of face peeling," says Julia Orff.
"It's too radical, too often dangerous, There's a better way of removing offensive complexions and one that is entirely safe and rational. Ordinary mercolized wax causes the devitalized scarf skin to come off, but gradually and gently. Unlike the surgical process, the skin is not forcibly taken off in big pleces all at once, but almost invisible flaky particles are absorbed by the wax, and from ten days to two weeks are required to complete the transformation. There's ho pain, no discomfort.

"Nature renews complexions the same way, shedding tiny cutaneous scales day by day, But deficient circulation, or other abnormal condition, may interfere with the shedding—a 'bad complexion' results. Lucan Lady Had a Close Call From Being Burned.

[Special to The Advertiser.] Lucan, Jan. 28. - Mrs. Garbett, of Alice street, had a very narrow escape from being burned to death early yesterday. Had Mr. McLeod, who lives muth. next door, not seen the fire as it was getting a very good start, Mrs. Garbett would in all probability have perished in the flames. By the aid of the neighbors and the fire department the flames were soon extinguished.

FORECAST OF THE BILI

The Act Will Not at First Include the Employers of Labor.

Toronto, Jan. 29.-What could be onsidered as a workmen's compensation round table talk took place at the Parliament Buildings last night, when Sir William Meredith held his last session before submittnig his report to the Provincial Government. "I won't recommend that every em ployer shall be brought under the act at its birth," declared the commissioner when hinting at what he will probably recommend. "Farmers, employees in stores and domestic servants will have to be left out, of course; but I want help towards making this selection. "Perhaps it would be advisable to appoint a board," he continued, "and give it power to make rates and classify the industries which are to be included and which left out.

No Future Legislation. "The board should certainly be able to make changes, because it would not be proper to have to submit such changes to legislation every time these were found necessary. Another thing. We must make

MANY CASES OF WHOOPING COUGH

School Attendance Is Somewhat Affected in This City.

An epidemic of whooping throughout the city continues to attract attention, a large number of children having the disease. The school attendance is suffering somewhat as a result. each school losing some pupils. There are not so many out as was the case two months ago, but medical men say that there are more cases in the city, the younger children being targely afflicted. Dr. Hutchinson, M. H O., states that in his opinion the outbreak is nearly

"There are sporadic cases all over the city," he declared. "Although the health act provides that all cases shall be re-ported to me, very few medical men have done so. One reason for this is that physicians are rarely called in for these cases, the mothers prescribing for them. I think that the worst is over." Several of the principals of the school report that the attendance is better than it was earlier in the winter, showing that the disease is dying out.

HOLD CONVENTION

Speakers Will Be Brought From Toronto-Local Club of From 500 to 1,000.

An account of the men's club movement, which is aimed to have very farreaching social and moral effects, was given by Rev. Thomas Mitchell, of the New St. James' Church, at the meeting of the W. C. T. U. on Tuesday. Mr. Mitchell stated that a monster meeting will be held here shortly, to be addressed by speakers from Toronto, and it is expected that before long there will be a club here numbering between 500 and 1,000 men, which will work along the lines of social and moral improvement.

A force of men such as it is aimed to secure, would, it pointed out, be a most powerful organization for good, and can direct and plan an immense amount of work.

The Mothers' Clubs of the city, who have in hand the circulating of a petition for securing a curfew, have decided not to present the document until about March 1, instead of Feb. 1, as was planned. It has been decided that instead of circulating one general petition much better results will be obtained if a number are sent out. The matter came up for discussion when a petition was presented at the W. C. T. U. meeting yesterday, and the members there generally agreed that it would be better to send out many petitions. All are strongly in favor of the curfew project. The W. C. T. U. expects to be in its new quarters on Park avenue next month, and the Tidings, the association paper, will be gotten out from there as soon as the present remodel-trend of office buildings and retail bus!ness is not likely to go south of the Grand Trunk. It seems fairly certain that it will go north as far as it is able. Richmond street will never become a Ridout street, nor Wellington street a Richmond street, in the opinion of businessmen. Richmond street will go north as far as it can, but there are churches and other institutions to break the links on one side. The west side is now almost a continuous row of stores as far north as Oxford. The remarkable growth of the north end is bound to cause a steady march of improvement in the business aspect of Richmond street

Wellington street looms as a possible 'main street' in the minds of some people. But can it realize the hopes that are entertained for it. McClary's have the south end of it cornered on one side. The other side may flourish, and then the federal square will be encountered. On the block between Dundas and Queen's avenue there are an insurance building, apartment houses, the Y. M. C. Wellington and Richmond Streets. So that Wellington street does not threaten the crown of Richmond street, not seriously, at least. Richmond street is the home of so many important institutions that it is practically impreg-nable. For instance, practically all the banks in the city are located on this thoroughfare; it is the street of business offices. It will take many years to dislodge the connections provided, such as the market and the railways, by the city's end of the Proof line. Concentration on the present business district, with a gradual filling up of such blocks as King street, Ridout street, York street and the smaller cross streets provide, would seem to be the most natural trend of building, with Dundas street steadily advancing where the property is available, and Richmond street showing rapid improvement by the replacement of many of the present buildings north of Dundas.

And Says He Has No Use for a Canadian Navy.

[Canadian Press.] Kingston, Ont., Jan. 28.—Bishop Mills, his annual charge this afternoon to the Government.

"I congratulate Premier Borden," his lordship said, "on his naval program. His position is statesmanlike and worthy of this great Dominion, and I feel that no thoughtful citizen of this country should allow any political bias to stand in the way of his support of it."

The bishop came out strongly against a Canadian-built and Canadian-maintaining and navy.

a Canadian-built and Canadian-maintained navy.

Referring to the "extraordinary political turnover" that occurred on Sept. 21, 1911, his lordship said: "The Conservatives so far have justified the country's action. Mr. Borden was always recognized as a man of honor, and he has shown himself a man of ability as well, and is a devout churchman. The rector of St. Paul's, Halifax, told me there was no one for whom he had a higher respect or a more effectionate regard because of the consistency of his life."

The tribute to Premier Borden concluded with these words; "A man whom the country can trust."

The advisability of organizing a Highland regiment in London was fully discussed at an enthusiastic meeting of St. Andrew's Society held on Tuesday evening in the Board of Trade rooms. All the members had good things to say about such an organization, and promised to give it their heartiest support if a regiment were organized. Full information was cking however, and the advisability of forming a troop was left over un il a subsequent meeting, when a comnittee consisting of Messrs. E. Reid, J. W. Jones, E. V.
