LETTERS

letters had come to her from an unscrupulous woman her husband had been fascinated by in his extreme youth at college, and she resented with all her intense passionate nature anything which could come between them and their exclusive love for one another. She had spent one long night alone lashing her bitter envy to madness, and the next morning she had gone to him with marvellous calmness and told him of her irrevocable determination to leave him forever. He was proud. He had met her with disdainful indifference; had considered self justification unnecessary, and they had parted.

They both had lived quietly. They both went nowhere, for their friends were common ones, and they avoided all possible annoying meetings. He spent his time on the board of trade, at his club or in his home, which he could not bring himself to give up, and she had so restricted her life that he scarcely caught a glimpse of her. Only at the theater or at some concert did her pure, proud face suddenly start out from the crowd, and then emotion would so powerfully sweep over him that he would have to leave the building.

Only one bond still existed between them. Alice's father was old and an invalid. His time was spent at watering places, mostly on the other side, and it had seemed a simple and dutiful kind of falsehood to weave around him a veil of ignorance as to the real state of affairs and leave him with the happy feeling of Alice's joy and completed filling their letters with sweet pleasures and ambitions, unconsciously embodying in them their fondest wishes and most heartfelt desires.

George Witherspoon was dressing himself carefully. Three cravats were thrown aside before he had tied one to his taste. He never looked so well as in a Turquoise. Alice had always said he could hear her voice now, her low, thrilling voice, saying as she came toward him across the hall, "My big, stunning sweetheart!" and just before she put her arms closely around his neck, "Dear, dear, how I love you!"

He shivered with desire for her.
Would he never recover? Would he never forget? He thought he could almost feel her face pressed softly against his—his nostrils were filled with the sweet, a little smell of the sandalwood her loaves were put away in.

Hush—a knock at the door! The man's heart swelled with feeling. He forgot everything, the intervening year, the awful bitterness, the loneliness, and of a tall and radiant woman always at his side. He entered the house and went slowly upstairs. How clearly it all streamed out, enveloped his mind, his senses! He had first seen her at a table d'hôte in Paris. He had followed her over half of Europe and had finally met her at Baden-Baden. She had a dotting old father, but ultimately the two had gained his reluctant surrender of his only adored daughter, and they had married.

For just a year they had enjoyed supreme, overflowing happiness. Then Alice became jealous. A batch of old

He walked up and down the room rapidly several times. It was their anniversary. He had remembered and kept it so rigidly. It was barely possible it had come over her as strongly —the happiness they were missing from their lives, the incompleteness of their rapid present—and perhaps she had come to him. He was almost running down the stairs in his eagerness. He held back the portieres, and there she stood before the fire—straight, tense, her slimmest accentuated by her velvet coat, the whiteness and delicacy of her face starting out exquisitely from the lazes at her throat and from under the big black hair. As he approached her he noticed the nervous tapping of her foot in the fur of the rug, the tense pressure of her clasped hands. Was it a dream—Alice in her home again, a year's misery canceled in a moment? He held out both hands and noticed her eyes in the mirror they were facing as he said:

"And have you come to me again, Alice?"

She started visibly and then slowly turned.

"Yes," she answered quietly. "I've come to you. And you mustn't fail me," she added cheerfully.

"Won't you sit down?" Witherspoon asked. She was trembling.

"Thank you," she said, and she sat on a low stool, and the man noticed with a sinking of the heart how she drew her little cloak about her, the thumbs of the clasped hands turned up and back. How he remembered!

"I must come to the root of the matter at once," the girl began, and gradually her voice grew fiercer and she looked him full in the face with her wide, sad eyes. He noticed with almost a feeling of exultation, that her face was now the face of a woman who had lived and suffered.

"You haven't heard from my father for some time, have you?" she began.

"No," Witherspoon answered. "It must be some weeks now."

"I received a telegram this afternoon," the woman went on quietly.

"He arrived in New York this morning and will be in Cincinnati tomorrow. He is bound for California, and he will, on his way, stop in town with—his son and daughter."

Her voice had broken. Witherspoon rose to his feet and walked to the window. The silence was painful.

"And what will you do?" he said, at last, turning to her.

"There's only one thing to do," and the girl's voice was determined. "My father has very little longer to live.
He's not had much but disappointment in his life, and, cost what it may, I cannot bring more sorrow to him.
You know how the ghostly thing would shock his old time conventionality." She hesitated and seemed to look to the man for his help in thought or deed, but his fear of her scorn kept him silent. At last, taking a deep breath, she went on:

"To-morrow morning I must send her the few things I took away. The portraits, my piano, my work—they're easily put in place and will be as easily moved away again. I'm sorry to see inconvenience you, but you must see it is unavoidable." She stopped again and looked into the fire. "My room," she asked, "is it much changed?"

The man was kneeling beside her now, his arms about her. "Sweet heart, sweetheart," he almost moaned, "stay with me, I beg of you to stay with me! My life's been a misery since you're not been—everything is flat and without flavor. We've taken a year out of the radiance that is given to man but sparingly. Don't let's throw away another moment of it. I love you—oh, God, how I love you!"

His head was buried in her lap, and slowly she took off her long gloves and stroked the hair she remembered so well.

"Are you perfectly sure you want me?" she asked softly.

And so it happened that on the second anniversary of their wedding Mr and Mrs George Witherspoon were seen by a party of gay young folks taking dinner at the St. Nicholas.
"Gad!" as one of the men said later.
"They were like two children off on a lark, and aren't they quite the best looking couple in Cincinnati?"

Relying on Chances.

(George Eliot's "Silas Marner.")

Favorable chances, I fancy, is the god of all men who follow their own devices instead of obeying a law they believe in. Let even the polished of these days get into a position he is ashamed to avow, and his mind will be bent on all the possible issues that may deliver him from the calculable results of that position. Let him live outside his income or skirt the resolute, honest work that brings wages, and he will presently find himself dreaming of a possible benefactor, a possible simplification, a possible state of mind of some possible person not yet forthcoming.

Let him neglect the responsibilities of his office, and he will invariably anchor himself on the chance that the thing left undone may turn out to be of the supposed importance. Let him betray his friends' confidence, and he will adore that same cunning complexity called chance which gives him the hope that his friend will never know.

Let him forsake a decent craft that he may pursue the gentilities of a profession to which nature never called him, and his religion will infallibly be the worship of blessed chance, which he will believe in as the mighty creator of success. The civil principal deprecates in that religion is the orderly sequence by which the seed brings forth a crop after its kind.

Uses of Hot Water.

A strip of flannel or soft napkin, folded lengthwise and dipped in hot water and wrung out, and then applied around the neck of a child that has the croup, will surely bring relief in a few minutes.

A towel folded several times and dipped in hot water, quickly wrung and applied over the site of a toothache or neuralgia will generally afford prompt relief.

The treatment has been found to work like magic for colic.

Nothing so promptly cuts short a congestion of the lungs, sore throat or rheumatism as hot water, when applied thoroughly and early in the case.

Hot water takes freely half an hour before bedtime is an excellent cathartic in the case of constipation; while it has a soothing effect on the stomach and the bowels. This treatment continued a few months, with the addition of a cup of hot water slowly sipped half an hour before each meal, with proper attention to diet, will cure most cases of dyspepsia.

Ordinary headaches almost always yield to the simultaneous application of hot water to the feet and back of the neck.

Worriement a Stranger to Edison.

Two things are unknown to Thomas A. Edison—discouragement and worry.
His associates claim that his freedom from these afflictions comes from the fact that he possesses absolutely no nerves. Recently one of his associates had to report to him the failure, in immediate succession, of three experiments involving enormous expenditure of money and labor. But the inventor

Royal makes the food pure, wholesome and delicious.

simply smiled at the recital. The associate, worn out with the nervous strain of his long watch and disheartened by his disappointment, said impatiently: "Why don't you worry a little about it, Mr. Edison?"

"Why should I?" was the inventor's reply. "You're worrying enough for two."—April Ladies' Home Journal.

The Greatest Attribute.

At a gathering of men and women not long ago each one in turn was called upon to cite the tribute he or she considered of greatest worth in the formation of character, each attribute to be followed by the name of some one who had embodied it. For instance, a man gave sterling integrity and as his example Abraham Lincoln; a woman, with Mme. De Maintenon as illustration; another woman, loyalty, adding the name of George Washington. At last it came the turn of a very plain spoken woman, who in loud, clear tones cried, "Honesty, and I know of no example, either living or dead."

Chestnut Culture.

At one of the farmers' institutes in New Jersey Mr Woodward made an address on "Chestnut Culture; Its Possibilities." He said there were very few farm products that would yield so large a return for the capital and labor employed as the chestnut.
In planting chestnuts care must be taken to put them on congenial soil, or failure is apt to result. The chestnut does better upon an open soil, with a deep, porous, well drained subsoil.

Many of the fruits and vegetables now eaten in England were almost unknown to our forefathers. Not until Henry VIII's time were either raspberries or strawberries or cherries grown in England, and we do not read of the turnip, cauliflower and quince being cultivated before the sixteenth century or the carrot before the seventeenth century.

A NEW MAN.

Paine's Celery Compound Gave Him a Fresh Existence.

He Had Endured Years of Misery and Agony.

HAD GIVEN UP ALL HOPE AND EXPECTED TO DIE.

It is the Medicine for You, Poor Sufferer.

You Cannot Be Disappointed if You Use Paine's Celery Compound.

WELLS & RICHARDSON CO., DEAR SIRS:—I can conscientiously recommend Paine's Celery Compound to all who may be suffering from dyspepsia and liver trouble. For years, while living in Black Brook, I suffered from a complication of troubles, and was so bad with dyspepsia that I could not touch a morsel of food. I found it difficult to sleep, and what little I did get was often broken with horrid dreams. Intense suffering from liver complaint added to my load of agony; I also had dizziness, pains in the back, and was pale, haggard and despondent.

I kept doctoring and dosing without deriving the slightest benefit, and finally gave up all hope of getting well. One day my daughter, who had read of a wonderful cure by Paine's Celery Compound, begged me to try one bottle of the medicine. I told her it was no use to throw away money, but she pleaded so hard that to please her I bought a bottle, and before it was used up I felt better. Encouraged as much I continued with the medicine and improved every day.

I am now cured, thanks to Paine's Celery Compound. You cannot wonder that I consider Paine's Celery Compound the greatest medical discovery in the world. I urge all who are suffering to try this grand medicine and test its virtues.

Yours very truly,
CHARLES COMEAU,
Negus, N. B.

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., JUNE 3, 1898.

Acadia's Anniversary.

The sixtieth anniversary of Acadia College has come and gone. Another year has passed in the history of the University and once again have the visitor-thronged streets of our town testified to the wide circle of friends who hold the institution in loving regard.

The exercises in connection with the closing, which have been carried on during this week, were exceptionally interesting and well attended. The first of these took place on Sunday morning in the Baptist church when Dr. Butler, of Colby University, addressed the members of the graduating class of the college in a baccalaureate sermon.

The discourse was profound yet simple and was followed with the closest attention by the large audience present. The speaker spoke from the text found in the 1st verse of the 131st Psalm, on the subject, "Some Assured Certainties of the Christian Faith."

Man, he held, was surrounded by mystery, and while scientific investigation and research were not to be discouraged there was a danger lest in groping too earnestly after hidden things we should let slip the certainties of life. Remembering that the experiences of consciousness were just as real as those of the senses, we had reason to regard as certainties the existence of the Deity, duty, the saving power of Christ and immortality. While urging the young men and women to whom his remarks were specially addressed to press forward in the paths of knowledge, he urged them to be true to these certainties.

Sunday evening the College Y. M. C. A. was addressed in Assembly Hall by Rev. J. D. Freeman on the subject, "Manners and Motives of a Noble Life." He dwelt upon the nobility of service to God and the necessity for a strong faith, a high hope for man and a burning love for God and man.

COLLEGE SPORTS. On Monday afternoon the sports were held on the campus, in the presence of a large number of spectators, who showed their appreciation by generous applause. The following was the result of the various contests:

- 100 yards dash—Won by Steele; Buchanan, 2nd. Time, 10 sec. Putting shot—Won by Dixon; Esterbrook, 2nd; 29 ft. 10 in. High jump—Won by Hall; Steele, 2nd; 5 ft. 1 1/2 inches. 220 yards dash—Won by Steele; Bill, 2nd. Time, 25 sec. Pole vault—Won by Steele; Bill, 2d; 9 ft. 6 inches. 440 yard run—Buchanan, 1st, 58 sec; Siles, 2nd. Running broad jump—Steele, 1st, 18 ft. 11 inches; Siles, 2nd. 100 yards hurdles—Steele, 19 1/2 ft; Hall, 2nd. Throwing base ball—Buchanan, 95 ft. 5 1/2 inches; Cohen, 2nd.

The result of the sports gave Steele the most points and a gold medal, while Buchanan won second place and a silver medal. These medals were presented by President Trotter at the public convocation on Wednesday evening.

Monday evening the Hon. H. R. Emerson, premier of New Brunswick, spoke before the Senate of the College on "Some Phases of Political Life." His remarks were addressed exclusively to the young gentlemen students, and consisted of a warning to those aspiring to a public career. In an interesting manner he showed that the unpopularity of a public servant is not a reflection on his ability, but a reflection on the people as a whole were responsible for the condition of affairs, as the river could not rise higher than its source. The career of Gladstone, whose death the world saw now mourning, should be an inspiration and ideal to those who desire to govern.

At the request of the chairman, Doctor Sawyer, the attorney-general made a few appropriate remarks. He considered that the evils of politics which the lecturer described must be peculiar to New Brunswick as he (Mr Longley) had never met the like in Nova Scotia. Meanness and selfishness was found in all spheres of life, in the church as well as in politics. The young man who entered public life in order to make himself illustrious would fail. Only by aiming to serve his country could he succeed.

CLASS DAY. The open class meeting of the College graduating class, on Tuesday morning, was perhaps the most popular feature of the week's programme. Mr A. F. Newcomb, the class president, delivered the opening address, and in a style perhaps too ambitious to be fully appreciated by the common-place hearer but perfectly intelligible to all, assured the audience of a hearty welcome. The roll was called by Miss Estes, the secretary pro tem, and furnished some of the members an excellent opportunity to display their wit and to make a neat "hit" in stating the whereabouts of their erstwhile class-mates. The musical part of the programme was decidedly good, being supplied by a violin in the hands of Mr A. S. Burns, and by vocal selections from Mr Burpee Wallace.

Mr P. W. Gordon read the class history, and an extremely bright and interesting paper it was. A humorous review of the class's four year's existence was given with so many sallies of wit that the audience was kept in continual merriment.

The class prophecy is ever a most interesting feature of the class day programme, but when the class was fortunate in the possession of a prophetic endowment with so much originality and so rich a fund of humour as is Miss W. H. Caldwell, it is not surprising that her paper should have been particularly well received.

The valedictory, delivered by Mr J. C. Hemmison, is deserving of particular praise. A Wonderful Discovery.

About the middle of April there appeared in The Halifax Evening Mail a description of the wonderful discovery and invention of Liquid Air, and spoke of the wonderful things it was doing in New York, and of it being a wonderful medicine, and went on to say that it was even more wonderful than OZONE. This article goes to prove the value of OZONE, and also that OZONE has been retained in solution.

OZONE

OZONE is a wonderful remedy for throwing off disease and building up the system. Try it and see if it is not so. For sale at 50c and $1.00 per bottle at RAND'S DRUGSTORE.

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., JUNE 3, 1898.

Acadia's Anniversary.

The sixtieth anniversary of Acadia College has come and gone. Another year has passed in the history of the University and once again have the visitor-thronged streets of our town testified to the wide circle of friends who hold the institution in loving regard.

The exercises in connection with the closing, which have been carried on during this week, were exceptionally interesting and well attended. The first of these took place on Sunday morning in the Baptist church when Dr. Butler, of Colby University, addressed the members of the graduating class of the college in a baccalaureate sermon.

The discourse was profound yet simple and was followed with the closest attention by the large audience present. The speaker spoke from the text found in the 1st verse of the 131st Psalm, on the subject, "Some Assured Certainties of the Christian Faith."

Man, he held, was surrounded by mystery, and while scientific investigation and research were not to be discouraged there was a danger lest in groping too earnestly after hidden things we should let slip the certainties of life. Remembering that the experiences of consciousness were just as real as those of the senses, we had reason to regard as certainties the existence of the Deity, duty, the saving power of Christ and immortality. While urging the young men and women to whom his remarks were specially addressed to press forward in the paths of knowledge, he urged them to be true to these certainties.

Sunday evening the College Y. M. C. A. was addressed in Assembly Hall by Rev. J. D. Freeman on the subject, "Manners and Motives of a Noble Life." He dwelt upon the nobility of service to God and the necessity for a strong faith, a high hope for man and a burning love for God and man.

COLLEGE SPORTS. On Monday afternoon the sports were held on the campus, in the presence of a large number of spectators, who showed their appreciation by generous applause. The following was the result of the various contests:

- 100 yards dash—Won by Steele; Buchanan, 2nd. Time, 10 sec. Putting shot—Won by Dixon; Esterbrook, 2nd; 29 ft. 10 in. High jump—Won by Hall; Steele, 2nd; 5 ft. 1 1/2 inches. 220 yards dash—Won by Steele; Bill, 2nd. Time, 25 sec. Pole vault—Won by Steele; Bill, 2d; 9 ft. 6 inches. 440 yard run—Buchanan, 1st, 58 sec; Siles, 2nd. Running broad jump—Steele, 1st, 18 ft. 11 inches; Siles, 2nd. 100 yards hurdles—Steele, 19 1/2 ft; Hall, 2nd. Throwing base ball—Buchanan, 95 ft. 5 1/2 inches; Cohen, 2nd.

The result of the sports gave Steele the most points and a gold medal, while Buchanan won second place and a silver medal. These medals were presented by President Trotter at the public convocation on Wednesday evening.

Monday evening the Hon. H. R. Emerson, premier of New Brunswick, spoke before the Senate of the College on "Some Phases of Political Life." His remarks were addressed exclusively to the young gentlemen students, and consisted of a warning to those aspiring to a public career. In an interesting manner he showed that the unpopularity of a public servant is not a reflection on his ability, but a reflection on the people as a whole were responsible for the condition of affairs, as the river could not rise higher than its source. The career of Gladstone, whose death the world saw now mourning, should be an inspiration and ideal to those who desire to govern.

At the request of the chairman, Doctor Sawyer, the attorney-general made a few appropriate remarks. He considered that the evils of politics which the lecturer described must be peculiar to New Brunswick as he (Mr Longley) had never met the like in Nova Scotia. Meanness and selfishness was found in all spheres of life, in the church as well as in politics. The young man who entered public life in order to make himself illustrious would fail. Only by aiming to serve his country could he succeed.

CLASS DAY. The open class meeting of the College graduating class, on Tuesday morning, was perhaps the most popular feature of the week's programme. Mr A. F. Newcomb, the class president, delivered the opening address, and in a style perhaps too ambitious to be fully appreciated by the common-place hearer but perfectly intelligible to all, assured the audience of a hearty welcome. The roll was called by Miss Estes, the secretary pro tem, and furnished some of the members an excellent opportunity to display their wit and to make a neat "hit" in stating the whereabouts of their erstwhile class-mates. The musical part of the programme was decidedly good, being supplied by a violin in the hands of Mr A. S. Burns, and by vocal selections from Mr Burpee Wallace.

Mr P. W. Gordon read the class history, and an extremely bright and interesting paper it was. A humorous review of the class's four year's existence was given with so many sallies of wit that the audience was kept in continual merriment.

The class prophecy is ever a most interesting feature of the class day programme, but when the class was fortunate in the possession of a prophetic endowment with so much originality and so rich a fund of humour as is Miss W. H. Caldwell, it is not surprising that her paper should have been particularly well received.

The valedictory, delivered by Mr J. C. Hemmison, is deserving of particular praise. Mr Hemmison did not fall into the stereotyped form of valedictory commonly made use of, but performed his task with rare good taste and a considerable amount of literary ability. HORTON ACADEMY. MR GLADSTONE'S LAST LITERARY WORK.

The last finished literary work of William E. Gladstone was his eloquent and tender tribute to the memory of Arthur Henry Hallam, the friend of his school-days, and thereafter until his untimely death. The article was the last of five which Mr Gladstone had at different times written expressly for the Youth's Companion, and appeared recently. The final revision of the article, in the venerable statesman's own handwriting, was completed in November, 1897. Such a tribute from a man of eighty-eight, whose statesmanship has made a profound and enduring impression upon the civil history of the world, to a youth of twenty-one who had been sixty-four years in his grave, is probably unequalled in literature. The entire manuscript of this article is perhaps the most precious of the many rare autographs possessed by the publishers of the Youth's Companion.

PROSTRATED, EXHAUSTED. NO SLEEP—NO REST.

Do not appreciate the words of John G. Shea, who says: "God bless the man who first invented sleep! But appreciation is not waiting for those who have suffered from it. Mrs. White of Yarmouth says: "It seems so long since I took the first dose of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I had been so prostrated, exhausted, and had no rest or sleep for so long a time. I feel now perfectly well, and I am very healthy and contented. I am very glad to hear of the great benefit derived from this medicine. I feel that I am a new man."

My poor mistaken brother," said the faith courier to the man who was meeting at the side of the road, "you have within your reach the simplest and most effective of remedies. That remedy is the power of mind. You are agony in the result of a mental disease. You believe you are in pain; therefore you suffer. You were expecting this disease of derangement, and nothing but the influence of mind over matter has led to believe that it has arrived."

"I was expecting it, was I?" replied the sufferer. "Great Guns! I have just been run down by a blankety blank bicycle."

Scraps for Odd Moments.

Man proposes, woman seldom refuses. A person who never changes his mind is one who has a fixed idea that he can't afford to run any risk with it.

Dollie—He promised to send back my lock of hair, but he hasn't done it yet. Mollie—That's the way with these hair restorers—all promise and no performance.

Miss Hilson—It seems to run very well for day and a half, and then it will not go at all. Watchmaker—Yes; it should be wound occasionally.

"Why, Nellie dear," said the little girl's teacher, "I haven't seen you for several days." "None," replied Nellie; "I've been on an exertion with mamma."

Minards Liniment is the Best. "How's your brother, Tommy?" "He is bed, ma, he's hurt himself." "How did he do that?" "We were playing at what you call farthest out of a railway carriage window and he won."

"Victim of hard luck, of course?" asked the sarcastic citizen. "In every shape and form," answered Daniel Dawson. "Why, my friend, I never got out of jail but what the weather turned cold or began to rain."

"Isn't it curious," said Hawkins, "when a frog has its mouth open it can't breathe?" "What a pity our Congressman isn't built on the same principle," observed Watson.

"Ah!" joyfully cried the young man who had got employment at painting the Union Station, "the prophecies of my family are now being fulfilled. They often said that I would adorn some great station before I died."

Minards Liniment for Rheumatism. Dick—Yes, you see, I'm in no end of a fix. I would never have proposed if I'd had the least idea that she would accept me, but she did.

Jack—Well, propose again, as if you had forgotten. That ought to make her angry enough to refuse you.

Mrs. Goodson—I am told that some of the persons who are trumping are thoughtful and religious men. Are you a trumper?" "Seldum Field (at a venture)—Yes; I used to be an Episcopalian, but since de error of me ways 'n' changed over."

Minards Liniment Cures La Grippe. "Yes, dear, I met your father and told him that I wanted to talk with him as one man with another."

"Well, that was the kind of talk I got. With all the temper to have I am sure he would never have used such language in talking to a woman."

Mrs. De Paul (who cannot stand the odor of turpentine)—I would have sent for you to have done this cleaning last week, but we have been having the outside of our house painted, and it made us all sick.

Mrs. McCasid (sympathizingly)—Sure, I don't wonder. Them colors is enough to make anyone sick."

First Sea Serpent—Say, it looks as if we were going to have a pretty dull time along the coast this summer.

Second ditto ditto—You may have a dull time, but I expect to scare more people than ever.

"How are you going to work it?" "I'm going to tie a yellow Spanish flag to the tip of my tail."

How they say grass in Georgia.—A party of gentlemen having sat down to dinner, one of them, Colonel Waddell was asked to say grace, and bowing his head, said: "Lord, make us honest and rich." An auditor, who was present, promptly responded: "Amen. Give the colonel the former and thy humble servant the latter, as thou see'st we need, and do it quickly."

Minards Liniment the Best Hair Restorer. A good many pastors have felt as Mr. Beecher did when he was about to take a ride behind a hired horse at a livery stable. He regarded the horse admiringly, and remarked: "That is a fine looking animal. It is as good as he looks!"

The owner replied: "Mr. Beecher, that horse will work in any place you put him, and do all that any horse can do."

The preacher eyed the horse still more admiringly, and then humbly remarked: "I wish to goodness that he was a member of our church."

A native of Ireland landing at Greenock, wanted to take the train to Glasgow. Never having been in a railway station before he did not know how to get his ticket. Finding a lady, however, going in, Pat thought he would follow her, and he would soon know how to get aboard. The lady, going to the ticket-box and putting down her money, said, "Mary-lin, single."

Her ticket was duly handed to her, and she walked off. Pat, thinking it all right, planked down his money, and shouted: "Patrick Murphy; married."

MINARDS' LINIMENT is the only Liniment asked for at my store and the only one we keep for sale. All the people use it. HARLAN FULLON, Pleasant Bay, C. B.
