A Millionaire's; or, Countess Westerleigh

CHAPTER XXIX.

"There is no other conclusion I can arrive at," he said. "It is the conclusion which all the men we have employed in the search invariably draw. I know the kind of fate you picture for her."

Vane shuddered and set his lips tightly.

"You have a vision of her tramping about London in a half-starving condition—"

"Or lying murdered in some vile den," put in Vane, hoarsely.

"And your vision is altogether an absurd one—the nightmare of your disappointment and suspense," said Senley Tyers. "My dear Vane—my poor old man—haven't I pointed out to you that if the girl had fallen on hard times—if she had become the poverty-stricken, helpless tramp you picture her—we should have found her, we must have found her long since?"

"You think so?" asked Vane, doubtfully, as he had asked a hundred times.

"I am certain of it. We know she came up by the night mail from Lulb—the one we just lost. The station-master described her to me exactly."

He spoke the lie with fluent suavity, and Vane nodded.

"She came to London. Where else should she go? We searched every town, every village at which the train stopped. If she had got out at any of the stations, we must have found her. She came to London, and was swallowed up in the crowd at the terminus. Now you, of course, jump to the conclusion that she was either waylaid by some designing villain, or then and there commenced to wander about in a helpless condition. Forgive me, but you must see that your theory is absurd, and that mine is the only tenable one. See here. Here, drink this wine, or will you have some brandy?"

"Brandy."

He got it, and Vane drank off a wine-glassful, which seemed to have no effect whatever on his chilled frame.

"My theory is this: She had money in her pocket. She went to a hotel or to some apartments. Perhaps she knew of some Cornish friend in London. You shake your head, but you can't tell. Remember how strong-willed, how self-reliant she was."

Vane's head sunk lower. He could see the beautiful face with its lovely eyes, its straight brows, in the glowing embers, and the mental vision made his heart ache with infinite longing, infinite despair.

"She was not an ordinary girl, mind you. Firm, resolute, unbending. The will that made her fly from you because she did not love you well enough to marry you would easily uphold her and protect her. She went to a hotel or found a friend—some Cornish girl in a shop here in London, or in service, perhaps—and was at once able to hide herself from us, which, mark you, she would not have been able to do if she had become penniless and friendless. You must admit the strength of my theory. Haven't we visited every slum? Haven't we searched every hospital, every refuge, and in vain?"

Vane held his face in his hands as the smooth voice recalled to him the hideous sights he had seen during the six weeks' search.

"Depend upon it that at this very moment Nora Trevanion is safe and sound, and—forgive me if I say—happy. Yes, Vane, if ever a man tortured himself to no purpose, you have done it, and I am sorry to see are still doing so. I have heard, and read, and seen something of this madness which, out of politeness, we call 'love,' but I have never heard, seen, nor read of such an utterly idiotic case as yours. You loved her; you wanted to marry her—"

Vane rose and buttoned his coat as if he could not endure any more.

"You mean well, Sen," he said—"you mean well, and you're right enough, I dare say; but—he paused, and his eyes grew vacant—"but I can not forget her, as you want me to do. I can not forget the night she clung to me—"

"Carried away for the moment by the torrent of your passion," put in the smooth voice. "I grant you all that; but no sooner did she get out of your arms and into her own room than she saw her 'mistake,' and nobly—Lord, how I honor her for it!—nobly resolved to put herself out of your reach. Sit down, old man. Come and dine somewhere with me. I want cheering up to-night."

Vane raised his head.

"You? What is the matter?" he said.

Senley Tyers shrugged his shoulders.

"Oh, compared with your trouble, it doesn't amount to much; but it's big enough for me, confound it! I was right when I gave you a hint the other day about that beastly Bendoza Mine."

"Bendoza Mine?" said Vane, with cold indifference. "What about it?"

I don't remember your saying anything about it lately."

"My dear fellow, you must have been wool-gathering, and paid no attention," said Senley Tyers in a tone of alarm. "The other night, you remember—when was it? I told you the thing looked ugly, and that you ought to sell out. You have, haven't you?"

Vane shook his head.

"No."

Senley Tyers sprang from his chair with admirably simulated dismay and horror.

"Good heavens! My dear fellow, the cursed thing has gone to smash. I've lost every penny, and you—"

Vane nodded with the same listless indifference.

"I suppose so," he said, absently. "I don't remember your saying anything about selling out—oh, I don't say you didn't. Of course, you did. It doesn't matter."

"Not matter?"

Vane put on his hat and laughed a laugh that ought to have filled the hearer with remorse.

"Nothing matters now," he said. "If you were to tell me that the world was coming to smash to-night I shouldn't care. Yes, I should," he added to himself, as he went with slow, dragging step to the door; "for I should meet her in some other world to-morrow, and know then whether she ever loved me."

He turned at the door and looked back, with the absent, vacant expression in his eyes.

"I am going on the tramp again this evening. Good night."

CHAPTER XXX.

That night when Vane sallied forth to search the slums of London once more, as he had searched Telorne and Scotland—and where not else?—Nora was seated in the big, cozy drawing-room of the Lesters' home in Elm Square.

A huge fire was burning in the old-fashioned fire-place, a big, shaded lamp stood on the table, the fragrant aroma of the after-dinner coffee floated through the room. The whole apartment was eloquent of comfort, and Nora, as she sat on a low chair beside Milly's couch, holding the girl's small hand in hers, glanced around her now and again, as if to assure herself that she was not the victim of an unsubstantial dream.

Long before they had reached Elm Square from Scotland she had learned to return the love which the crippled girl had so impetuously offered her. Milly Lester's heart was of pure gold, and if Nora had been a long-lost sister, miraculously returned to her, she could not have lavished her love and tenderness more freely upon the homeless, helpless girl.

She asked no questions, nor did Mr. Lester, and though Nora often longed to confide in them and tell them her strange history, she did not dare to do so. "How long would Mr. Lester have allowed Milly's hand to rest in hers if she should know the story of 'Ernest Mortimer' was the question that always rose in her mind whenever she felt tempted to tell them all. Milly's love had become too precious for her to run any risk of losing it.

This evening, as on many others, the two girls sat talking together while Mr. Lester stayed behind in the dining-room to drink his couple of glasses of port, a legal allowance which he never fell short of or exceeded.

Milly sat back on the couch and Nora sat beside her, and as they talked Milly would now and again put her arm round Nora's neck or smooth the still short curls of black hair.

"You never told me, why you cut off your hair, dear," she said. "Was it because of a fever?"

Nora shook her head and a faint color came into her face, which had grown less pale and thin day by day, and was now, though sometimes sad, no longer worn and anxious.

"No, Milly," she replied; and something in the tone warned Milly that she was nearing the forbidden ground of her friend's history.

"Never mind," she said, quickly, and making a caress of the touch of her hand; "it will soon be long again."

Had Itching Piles For 27 Years

Often Laid Up for Days at a Time—A Wonderful Tribute to Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Few people were ever more enthusiastic in praising Dr. Chase's Ointment than the writer of this letter. When you read the description of his case you will not wonder why.

Mr. John Johnson, Coleman, Alta., writes: "Three years ago I was cured of blind, itching piles of 27 years' standing by using Dr. Chase's Ointment. I used to think that death would be the only relief I would ever get from the terrible misery of piles. Often I was laid up for three days at a time, and at other times worked when I should have been in bed."

"Dr. Chase's Ointment is worth sixty dollars a box instead of fifty cents. I am a different man since using it. I am farming all the time, and never miss a day. Words fail to express my gratitude for the cure this ointment made for me. I cannot tell half as much about it as it deserves. Anyone doubting this can write direct to me."

Dr. Chase's Ointment, 60 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanston, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

I can see it growing day by day—and what beautiful hair it is!"

Nora smothered a sigh. Some one else also had called it beautiful, and regretted its shortness.

"It is not nearly so beautiful as your own, which is like floss silk," she said.

Milly laughed.

"You have picked that up from papa; he is always talking about my floss silk. Do you really think it pretty? But there—you are sure to say yes. Everyone thinks it his or her duty to say nice things to me, whether they mean them or not."

"I mean all I say," said Nora, in her quiet but downright fashion.

"I know you do, dear, and that's why I love you," responded Milly, her large eyes resting tenderly upon Nora's face. "Papa says that you are the most truthful person he ever met, and you know he never makes a mistake."

Nora sighed.

"Mr. Lester has been very kind—too kind to me," she said.

Milly laughed the suggestion to scorn.

VIROL

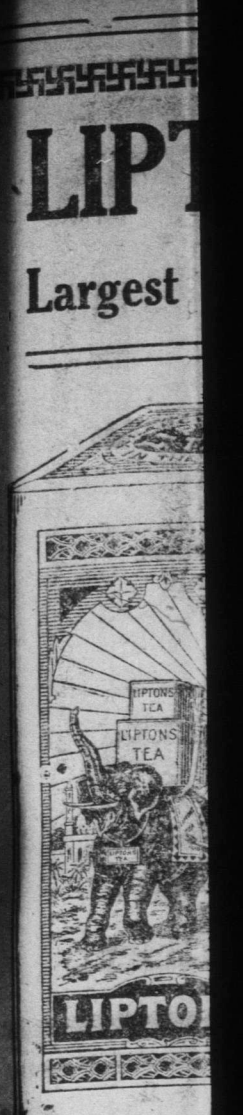

did not expect her to live

Mr. ROBERT BORLEY, 125, Easley Road, Clapham Junction, S.W., writes: "I had a beautiful baby of my daughter. When born, this child was very small and was wasting away; she was constantly crying, and we did not expect her to live long. Having heard of your food, we decided to give it a trial, and saw a great improvement in one week, so we continued to use it, and now you could not wish to see a finer child anywhere. She is very strong, and at present busy cutting her teeth, but we have no trouble with her and she does not even cry in fact, we have not had one bad night since using VIROL, and I would not be without it for the world; everybody remarks what a fine child she is, and my wife tells me that it is only by feeding her on VIROL that she is so well. I should like you to see her, which at any time you are welcome to do; she stands as firm on her legs as any child double her age, which is twelve months on the 15th of November, and I am sure there is not a child that has finer limbs for her age, and I can assure you that I would sooner be without my tobacco than she should be VIROL."

A Warning From Placentia.

Fellow Countrymen.—You voters of Placentia and St. Mary's once again I appeal to you in all sincerity to consider well what you are about to do on Oct. 30th. Your country, remember, is at stake and it is all in your own hands and on the 30th of Oct. you will either save her from disaster or send her to destruction forever. You fishermen are the upkeep and the mainstay of our country, you are the country's chief producers, you are by far the greatest number, you are the light who every four years send the balance of power to the House of Assembly to look out for the country and your interests and how have your wants been treated?

How Have Your Interests Been Looked After?

You have been ignored, you had to play second fiddle to men not nearly your equals, because the men you elected to represent you were looking out for their own pockets and those of their friends. Have you not still a faint recollection of the "Pullet," also "Oily Frank" and Slippery Dick? Do you not remember these men just four years ago telling you in heart-broken sighs they loved you, how they would look out for you? Don't you remember their false promises, and are you going to vote again for food they are after your votes again now, but the "Pullet" had sense enough not to come back, but in his stead they are taking Bill, the boy of "Godless School" fame. What a pity Prayerful Joey left us; he might be able to supply him with a few more religious emblems to exhibit in his speeches. Oh, you men of Placentia and St. Mary's. You know what reverence you pay to these emblems, and now imagine a man like Walsh standing on a political platform and using such religious emblems to solicit your votes. God help us, where are we and whither tending, must we sit idle and see these emblems held up to ridicule and Made a Laughing Stock of by a Man of This Type.

This thing must be stopped. Politics is one thing, but this is another, and this is the first time it has happened in the history of politics in this District and let it be the last. It is no wonder the good people of Argenta turned them down and would not tolerate that kind of thing. What trust could you place in a man who would for the sake of prominence would hold up his religion to ridicule. Devereaux acted wisely at first by not taking him. He knew he was not the man the District wanted as a representative, but he used the threat of showing up Morris in his right colors and was placed over Devereaux's head and now it is pitiful to see them eating crow and Devereaux trying to look pleasant while introducing him in around the District. What a nice Cartoon it would make for Patsy's Paper Slippery Dick Taking Treacherous Bill to His Bosom and Oily Frank giving them his blessing. Now, Mr. F. J. Morris, it is right up to you, if you expect our support to come out and deny having anything to do with that Bay de Verde Miss; if you were not a party to that say so. How can you expect us to trust you with the affairs of our country, when you are charged with being a party to try and dupe an English syndicate out of millions of dollars, a charge you have never denied? Defend yourself now or put up with the consequences. The hoodling and graft of the last four years must stop, it cannot be any longer tolerated. Your country cannot stand it. Oh, my friends, be careful of slippery Dick, how can you be fooled by this man when you know all he is after in his fine $1,500 a year keep going his Agricultural farm and besides other little pickings and a few

Fat Jobs for His Near Relations.

He is now on the war path again with his worn out cry of I am flesh of your flesh and bone of your bone, but isn't mind flesh and honey Dick, for as I said before, he is merely after his own personal gain. Imagine, you businessmen and farmers, here is a man (Devereaux) who spent his lifetime behind a Dry Goods counter, sent to you to-day by the Government to show you how to cut potatoes, water cabbages and shear sheep, and mind you, drawing an expert's salary of $7,300 for four years, and the chances are does not know a caked potato from a club footed turnip or a short horn bull from a nutley cow. Imagine you old voters of this great and loyal old Liberal District, imagine Sir Edward Morris sending you men of this type to represent you, but Never Them You Cannot be Fooled.

They have already been turned out of Argenta and Haystack, and the good old Liberal sentiment is daily growing stronger. It is no wonder, then, that poor Frank Morris had to get Frank Murphy (the ratter) to walk from the junction a distance of twenty miles, to nominate him, a very poor showing indeed for the Tories, out of such a large population that he had to call on the Tories, the Tories hesitated to nominate them, and even this heeler ratted, but he has ratted so often now, and always jumped the wrong way that the Liberals are delighted and say it is a good sign to see Murphy the "Junker" go. Sullivan, Carty back from St. John's the little heeler, Placentia Bay will give them a sweeping majority, and the good old Liberal spirit is now a certainty, for even the rascal Tories now admit that

A Splendid Human Document.

BY RUTH CARROLL.

Do you dread to grow old?

Do you think of all the years after sixty-five or seventy as a sort of stupid epilogue to the active drama of life?

If you do, a letter friend of mine has an illuminating message for you.

Please read it.

"I have read with interest," she writes, "your article in last night's paper entitled 'Why grow old?' and wish that I could have a heart to heart talk with you, and could meet your friend of 72. I have a fellow feeling in my bosom for all such as she would keep a cheerful outlook upon life. I am nearly 74 years young, and feel as ready now to attack any problem of life as I did 25 years ago. It seems to me that my brain is more alert every day. I enjoy perfect health and an omnivorous reader, very catholic in my taste, and read and try to digest everything from psychology to beans.

"I take a 5 or 6 mile walk every morning when the weather permits, rising at 4 o'clock in the summer to do so. I have been married 3 times, and cannot yet say that marriage is a failure. Have raised 6 children, 3 grandchildren and am now reawakening my youth while helping to care for a and trees. Unfortunately I am very deaf, which deprives me of a great deal of pleasure, the greatest being my inability to listen to good lectures. But I do not complain. I've had my 'ding.' Have heard nearly every singer of note up to 10 years ago, and have enjoyed listening to the best actors. I've graduated in photography, have my diploma, and am now writing moving picture plays, so as to be independent.

"In looking this over it may sound rather egotistical. That was not my object in writing. I wanted you to know that there are other so-called 'old ladies' who are young at 70. As Celia Thaxter sings, 'I stand in the sunshine sweet, and cherish every day!' I love and am loved, what more can I ask? Yours for a long and a useful happy one."

HONESTY

In Public Men.

Let Not Designing Men Be Commended, Rather Let Them Be Condemned.

The influence which a good citizen exerts among his fellows is incalculable. A citizen who has acquired influence in a public way and in public office should ever be guarded in his actions, in his speech, and in his writings, lest the latter should beguile others in error or false doctrine. In stirring times this is to be the more desired: since many men learn to lean on others' opinions and declarations. To none is it of more importance than to that portion of the people who are entering upon the duties of full citizenship. To them it is of the first importance that prominent public men should be above suspicion in all affairs of Government, in speech, and their own conduct.

For the inexperienced in matters relating to government may be easily deceived by specious reasoning. Specious reasoning is to be deprecated at all times, but when it is indulged in by, and in the behalf of, designing politicians, men in public life, for the purpose of beguiling the unwary voter it should be severely condemned.

A young man will often vote as he feels, until he learns by experience to distinguish the sheep from the goats, the true statesman from the false braggadocio, the honest man from the charlatan. To draw such distinctions may sometimes be difficult—and will be whilst chicanery obtains—but there are occasions when the charlatan is so conspicuous that he does not require to be labelled.

True instinct is all that most men need on such occasions. In stirring times opportunities are afforded of finding out the sort of stuff that is in our public men. And it is well that stirring times occur, if for no other reason than to weed out the mountebank, and the barnacle in public life.

We will not dispute that boastful remark that "a mountebank will undertake anything"; nor can it be predicated that a charlatan in public life will go far without having his tricks exposed.

If a man of 21 or over who has not yet cast a vote, either through indifference or because of youth, were to turn a discerning mind upon the men who occupy the high positions in our country to-day, what would be his estimate of their worth? What probabilities repose in them for good? What probabilities of harm? It were fruitless in such an enquiry to enumerate all that they have done, and all that they have not done. He would test them in such a way as to discover their bent, their ideals, their principles, having particular regard to their conduct as public men. He would take them on their own ground and enquire how, and in what manner they have carried out their own policy. For example, he would take the Branch Railways as the most important item of the Government's policy. He would read the speech made by Premier Morris in the House of Assembly thereon. In it he would find these words:—

"I have made an estimate and have had esti-

"mates made of the likely extent of these branches. Some differ from me and think my mileage 'too high. I do not think so. But to be perfectly safe I will put the estimate at 250 miles. This at $15,000 a mile will cost in round figures $4,000,000, creating an interest charge of $140,000 a year. In other words, when all the lines are built the interest on the cost will be $140,000 a year." Again in the same speech Premier Morris said:—

"We claim fairly and reasonably that we 'have saved on this Contract with Reids One million dollars to the Colony, as here we have a contract for four million dollars, which would have cost five millions on the lines of the 1893 Contract."

That Voter would then look up the accounts. There he would discover that the Premier, who spoke those words, had borrowed four million dollars to pay Reids. He would also discover that the same Premier borrowed two million dollars more—to pay Reids. Then he would discover that the Branch Railways were not half finished, that the Reids are demanding still more money, and that the Premier's words as to cost were no better than fairy tales. Then he would discover that Premier Morris made grievous miscalculations as to the mileage, and frightful miscalculations as to the cost. And then he would discover that Premier Morris's own party received astounding amounts in arbitration fees, in sops, and in other ways. And, at last, he would discover a most unwholesome fact, that Premier Morris is a very great and most particular friend of the Reids who got the contract.

That Voter would sit down, and could you blame him if he said: "Sir Edward Morris may have obliged us with 'Railways, but he has obliged the Reids more. He is too great a friend of the Reids for our country's good. If he can make a mistake of about six million dollars on one contract is there any limit to the mistakes he could make 'if we elect him again."

That Voter talks common sense; but he decides that Premier Morris is perhaps only a bungler in figures, and is not big enough for his position.

And that Voter, making due allowance for the exigencies of political emergencies, decides to probe the question as to whether Premier Morris is an honest man. Does he speak the truth? And he takes up another important matter—which all knowing men have considered and digested—that matter relating to his Minister of Justice. "Let me see," says the Voter, "how Premier Morris acquitted himself there."

He reads the articles in the newspapers. He sees it written in plain words: how the Hon. D. Morison had a timber property for sale; how that Minister wrote to R. W. Strong that anyone who purchased that timber property could keep it intact, and in the meantime could steal the timber from adjoining Crown land; how that Minister told the Governor that he thought the law allowed him to steal timber against the law (for that is really what Morison thought—perhaps because he was Minister of Justice); how Morison deliberately made a false assertion when he said that; how Premier Morris knew it was a false assertion made deliberately; how Premier Morris wrote to the Governor and told him it was all right; and how both have been charged with wilfully deceiving the Governor, and yet they say nothing in defence.

That Voter stops. He thinks. Surely a Premier was not guilty of such deception! Surely he did not help his Minister of Justice to deceive the Governor! Surely if a man does that he is capable of anything! And that Voter reflects, and his mind goes back to the remark: "A mountebank will undertake anything."

And that Voter reflects further: "Surely," he says, "if a Premier is a friend of the Reids; if he is capable of being a partner with a man like Morison (whom all can condemn) in deceiving a Governor; surely he is not asking me to vote for him! Surely he has some sense of decency!"

And that Voter, not boasting of "political sagacity," but with only the acumen of an ordinary man—which is so often pregnant with the essence of common sense—having rational ideas of what is bluff and what is fact; what is honesty and what is rascality—will wonder how that Premier and that Minister of Justice can address an audience of men of common sense, and expect their votes! Thus and in such a way does a Voter discover the sort of stuff that is in a public man.

If men in public life, occupying the highest positions of trust, whose integrity is the only guarantee against wrong-doing, can be guilty of such wilful deception, what possibilities, aye, what probabilities of harm repose in them? Do they ask for votes? Yes. And can you vote for them?

That is the question before the men of Newfoundland to-day. That is the question that concerns all men, and the vital interests of the country. It concerns the old and the young. But more particularly does it concern the young voter who will, perhaps, cast his first vote on the thirtieth of October. His career is before him; he will now for the first time perhaps exercise the full rights of citizenship; his ideals are of manly fibre—the sort that expects of men high in public life more than is expected of men in private life—and his ideals will assuredly demand integrity in our public men. If the people do not get that they get nothing. Worse still, the continuance in office of men having base ideals of honour and common honesty is subversive of law, of stability, of common decency.

If what is done may not be undone, let not designing, unscrupulous men be commended, rather let them be condemned, lest a worse thing befall this country at their hands.

Special to Evening Telegram. PLACENTIA, Saturday Evg. Glorious news from all over the District; a complete walk over for the Liberals. The Tories are crestfallen and you cannot get a bet here on the return of the Tories.

Special to Evening Telegram. TREPASSEY, To-day. Well done, "Fair Play" of Placentia. No fool here. Trepassey strikes quietly but surely. You don't know all. What about the petition against brother Joseph's grab of the Customs? What about his arbitration land grab? How long was it staked before the arbitrators came? How much did he get? Will he ever see his agent? What about the petition signed by three-fourths of Trepassey against railway to lower coast? Think of it, Sir. What about Richard, his brothers, cousins, uncles and aunts a grab the people will have to pay fifty thousand dollars. Half the amount would put a bridge across the Harbor. End for ever the Devreaux family grab. BOND CAN'T LOSE!

Special to Evening Telegram. FOGO, To-day. Dear Sir--Lewis and Carter held a most enthusiastic meeting here last night, and was listened to by about two hundred loyal supporters from here and adjacent settlements. Cheers and applause greeted the speakers as they threw the searchlight on Morris's Policy of Ruin. There was not one dissenting voice throughout the meeting and it is quite evident that Woodford's day is done on the south shore, as every settlement is falling in line in respecting the gross neglect of this fellow during the last four and a half years, while the Tories are boasting about their great revelation, which, of course, the Liberal Party created. This important section has been entirely ignored except in order to keep the main line in a passable condition. McNamara a wharf at Kelligrews. The meeting closed about 10.30 amid ringing cheers. Capt. John and Mr. Carter enjoyed a personal chat afterwards with a number of the good old supporters of the Standard of Liberalism. Some of the speakers were reminded by that past master of deceit Woodford, but if he thinks the throwing out of $25 cheques on last Sunday night to induce liberal to join with his heels on nomination day, will swell the vote on the 30th, then he will be a wiser and much sadder individual on the 31st. Surely, the electors of the head of the Bay know that this was done to deceive and bluff them into the belief that the South Shore was strong for the Tories. I ask any right minded, sensible man in this District was this the behaviour you saw from a Minister of Public Works, to deny the poor people of this shore a few dollars to make a road to their garden throughout his term of office, and now that the day of reckoning is at hand, to use the people's own money at the last moment for the base, unmanly and undemocratic purpose of influencing their support. Is this the character of the man you would again entrust with your public funds? The answer from every independent voter present from Chapel's Cove. Meeting chiefly composed of heeled from Harbor Main and Holyrood that are following the candidates through the district in order to swell their meetings and keep their courage up. Chapel's Cove will poll majority vote for Lewis and Carter.

Special to Evening Telegram. NEW HARBOR, Saturday. Lloyd, Stone and Target visited Dildo this morning and received a tremendous reception from the great crowd of men who assembled in a body with their guns and fired off hundreds of shots to show their appreciation of the Liberal Union Party and Sir Robert Bond. Dildo will give a solid vote for Lloyd, Stone and Target.

Special to Evening Telegram. WHITBOURNE, To-day. Lloyd, Stone and Target had a splendid reception at Norman's Cove on Saturday. At night a fine meeting was held in the Orange Hall which was attended by the people of Long Cove and Chapel arm. The voting there places will be heavy for the Bond candidates. They want a change and Sir Robert Bond as Premier.

Special to Evening Telegram. CHAPEL'S COVE, To-day. The Tories held a meeting here Saturday night which was a complete failure; there were only eight independent voters present from Chapel's Cove. Meeting chiefly composed of heeled from Harbor Main and Holyrood that are following the candidates through the district in order to swell their meetings and keep their courage up. Chapel's Cove will poll majority vote for Lewis and Carter.

Special to Evening Telegram. TOSPAIL, To-day. Lewis and Carter held a great meeting here on Saturday night, over two hundred people were present. GOOD ADVICE.

It is necessary to always have a bottle of good Brandy at hand. What Brandy will you buy? The Medicinal Brandy "Sanator" is not a properly so-called medicine, but it has been selected from amongst the best known growths for their effective principles, and it is distilled so as to develop its tonic and digestive qualities. It is really the FAMILY BRANDY, which name the public has, for a long time, bestowed on it. The celebrated French physician, DR. PHARZELLE, Inspector-in-chief of the Great Medical Services, says: "The medicinal Brandy 'Sanator' is eminently an easy-digestive drink, remarkable for its tonifying and reinvigorating properties."

Cupids in Line.

Special to The Evening Telegram. CUPIDS, via Briggs, To-day. The meeting held here on Friday night by the Liberal Union candidate, George Grimes, proved to be the most successful ever held here during election time. The candidate referred to Warren's remark of what appears in the News and Herald of the Government's record. Grimes showed that the issue was not between Bond and Morris but Reid and the Country. The patriotic stand taken by Sir Robert Bond was seen with and Coaker's great work on behalf of the toilers education, old age pensions and other reforms occupied the rest of the speech. The meeting closed with God Save the King and ringing cheers for Coaker, Bond and Grimes. Cupids showed in no uncertain way that it will down Grabbitus on Oct. 29th and stand for clean and honest Government.

Latest From Placentia.

Special to The Evening Telegram. EVERYBODY is asking what is up with the Tory clique. A more sickly, disgusted lot it would be hard to find. Four years ago they were out on the streets shouting and howling their selfish hoarse and no one with Liberal sympathies dared walk the streets without risk of being hooted and insulted. Will we remember Jackman's treatment by these hooligans—it will ever remain a disgrace to Toryism in Placentia and second only to Spar Crosbie's blackguardism in Western Bay. To-day the same clique would polish Jackman's shoes if given the privilege. They make no secret of their detestation of only Dick Devereaux and have only pity for Frank Morris. Dick, like the canker on the potato, will be buried, politically, on Thursday next. The Tories here are terrified at the news of Bond being on his way to St. John's to attend the funeral of the big chief, Edward the coddler. Well done, Sir Robert, if you can spare the time come here also and address the largest gathering of Liberals ever assembled here. You will get a rousing welcome. Morris's day is done here and all realize that "BOND CAN'T LOSE!"

Placentia is Wise To Frank's False Promises.

Special to The Evening Telegram. TREPASSEY, To-day. S. S. Euphrates or as the stokers say the sinker ship on Trepassey. S. S. Euphrates arrived at Trepassey to-day bringing the Morris candidates. They steamed to the government wharf and where met by about fifteen voters. They showed defeat in their faces and where not anxious to tell of the defeating cheers they met at St. Mary's for Sullivan, Cary and Summers. Two flags were hoisted to the breeze at half-mast and Dick's brother Joe had the Customs flag at its height to honour the worn-out candidates. A meeting will be held in the Temperance Hall to-night when Summers will give Devereaux the knock out blow. Walsh admits defeat and says he is sorry he ever left the good old Liberal ranks. Devereaux is visiting his brothers and cousins and they assure him his day is done, because they got their pockets filled and now have no more use for him or the People's Party. Frank's mousetraps are turned black with freight. He is told in all parts of the District that Bill Walsh will poll a larger vote than he will, as the people are wise to Frank's false promises and they have now realized that Sullivan, Summers and Cary are the peoples choice and "Bond Can't Lose."

Fox Harbor With The Winners In The Fight.

Special to The Evening Telegram. Dear Sir.—A message appeared in the Daily News of the 20th inst., from Fox Harbor, signed by seven Liberals and seven Tories, stating that Fox Harbor is sold for the Tories, which is altogether false and misleading, as we, the undersigned voters of Fox Harbor will give 92 straight tickets for the good old Liberal Party. Yours very truly, Richard Davis, Pat Davis, Thos. Duke, J. M. Duke, J. M. Duke, Sr., Pat Duke, Andrew Foley, Michael Healey, Thos. McCugh, Sr., Maurice McCugh, Sr., Maurice McCugh, Jr., Henry McCugh, Thos. Too late then to talk of prudence; too late then to say: "If I had only, etc., etc." That "If" means too much to many forgetful people. Nervous Prostration of Three Years' Standing Cured a Year Ago by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. Anyone who knows the discouragement and despair which accompanies the helplessness of nervous prostration will appreciate the gratitude felt by the writer of this letter. Mrs. H. C. Jones, Scotch Lake, C. B., writes: "I suffered from nervous prostration for nearly three years. I had frequent headaches, had no appetite and was troubled with my heart. After consulting two doctors, without obtaining satisfactory results, I began the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and was completely cured by this treatment. It is nearly a year since I was cured, and I want others to know of this splendid medicine. I now attend to my household with pleasure and comfort, and am glad to have the opportunity of recommending Dr. Chase's Nerve Food." Minimise The Loss.

Practically farmers may easily minimise the loss, due to a backward and cold season, by the judicious use of Sulphate of Ammonia as a fertilizer. Sulphate of Ammonia contains over 26 per cent of nitrogen as against 15 per cent in Nitrate of Soda, and is therefore more than 25 per cent better than nitrate of soda as a means of quickening and increasing the growth of crops. The use of Sulphate of Ammonia has increased enormously of late years and it is recognized to be the most valuable fertilizer obtainable. By its judicious use the production of root crops per acre may be doubled, and the growth of late crops stimulated. We invite the attention of farmers to our special pamphlet on the best methods of using Sulphate, copies of which will be forwarded free to any address on application. The price of Sulphate is moderate, and our terms are accommodating. ST. JOHN'S GAS LIGHT COMPANY. Board of Trade Building, St. John's, July 24.

In Harbor Grace District it is said:

That it is "all up" with the Grabs. Their little game is done and the electors will deal with them on Thursday next.

That Piccott seeing the small number of Harbor Grace men on the committee here asked: "Is this all your strength? Where is all our old committee. We will have to work hard. There's no doubt about it, as the party said."

That a death-bed repentance and a lavish supply of public money with some booze thrown in is not enough to capture the intelligent voters in the district of Harbour Grace.

That the language used by Arch Piccott at the K. E. B. Armoury on Monday afternoon has turned many people from the Tory side. He will be had on the 30th for the bad language used in the presence of children on that day. Grabs are born not made by connection with such men.

What say you, Mr. Parsons? That the Island Cove meeting of the Tories was the quietest meeting ever held there, not even a cheer for the Picnic Party. Of course they had a picnic for four and a half years, they could hardly expect to have one without canvassing.

That by running to the Court House with their tickets on Monday last and breaking their promise with the Liberal candidates, to waive nomination speeches for this year, and then to run off when the Liberal candidates arrived, the unhappy Tory trio showed the electors that they were afraid, and they lost votes on that account. Just like Tories, and tricky-like Spar Crosbie, Forgetful Donald, and all the rest of the Picnic crowd.

That the public meeting of the Liberal candidates in the Academy Hall was a revelation to those who are still half in doubt that the Tories will win again. Of course all right thinking people can now see that it is a case of a man with a sword and a case of a man with a stick.

That the picnic to be held in Harbour Grace district will decide right. Make money on this picnic if you can find a Tory so far gone as to let "Take it off him. Three Liberals for Harbour Grace, sup.

That Liberal stock is still going up, the tide is flowing faster and will reach a torrent against unclean Government on the 30th.

That "BOND CAN'T LOSE!" is admitted by Liberals and Tories alike. That the fishermen will take their place and vote down grabs and grabs. That Bond and Coaker must lead. PEDESTRIAN. Harbour Grace, Oct. 25, 1913.

Memorial Service

Of the Late Rev. Dr. Rogers --- An Immense Congregation and Worthy Tribute to a Good and Beloved Pastor.

"Servant of God well done, Thy earthly warfare's past, The battle's fought, the race is run, And then art crowned at last." —Charles Wesley.

It has been said that the world honours a good man, and pays tribute to his character and life-work. This statement was fully demonstrated last night at Gower Street Methodist Church by the vast congregation which assembled for the Memorial Service of the late Rev. Dr. Jabez Ayre Rogers.

At seven o'clock the sacred edifice was filled to its utmost capacity by people from different denominations, all of whom had come to pay their last tribute of respect to the life-work and memory of a good man. The scene was a deeply impressive one, and all the surroundings were in keeping with the occasion—while the heavy drapery of the church was a reminder that death had visited the congregation.

The service was conducted by the Revs. Drs. Fenwick and Cowperthwaite, in a very feeling manner; and was opened by the choir singing, in low and suppressed tones, that well known hymn, "Asleep in Jesus." This proved a most becoming prelude to the entire service, and by the time the devotional exercises were over and the Scripture lessons read, the congregation was well prepared to listen to the sermon.

The preacher was the Rev. Dr. Cowperthwaite, and the text chosen was from the Book of Isaiah, chap. 22 and verse 1: "And a man shall be as an hiding place from the wind." The speaker began his discourse by comparing the opinions which modern men, and sages, and philosophers, and showed that while they agreed in principle, the prophet had behind his assertion the important and fundamental truth of inspiration, and therefore gave the best interpretation of life and its possibilities.

In coming more directly to the subject of the evening the preacher paid a high tribute to the work and zeal and heart-felt devotion of the Rev. Dr. Rogers, the late loved and respected pastor of Gower Street Church. For forty years they had been fellow labourers together, and had during all that long period of time enjoyed the benefits of unswerving friendship. Many who had laboured with them in the Provinces of Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick, and Nova Scotia, and in Newfoundland had passed to their reward, to a higher life, the life of immortality, but he and Dr. Rogers were among the few who had been spared to such long service. But now the call had come to the latter, and in the midst of a difficult and busy pastorate his work ceased. He had served his day and generation well, and faithfully fulfilled the duties of his high calling. He was truly a master workman; and while doing his best himself his vision was wide enough to recognize the good of others as well. By his death the Methodist Conference has sustained a great loss, and Gower Street congregation had been deprived of a faithful pastor.

Dr. Cowperthwaite spoke for thirty minutes, and his language was clear, and while it was apparent that he felt deeply for his deceased Brother minister and friend, he nevertheless overcame his feelings and finished his discourse in language choice and quotations appropriate.

Following the sermon, and as a further tribute to the memory of the deceased pastor, Mrs. King rendered, "I know that my Redeemer liveth," Mrs. King's contribution to the service.

QUIDI VIDI. Oct. 23, 1913. Geo. M. Barr, City.

Dear Sir,—I am more than pleased with the engine I had from you in the spring. It is only a 4 H.P. and it can compete with other 6 H.P. engines in Quidi Vidi.

I would strongly advise anybody interested in a Motor Engine not to go past a Fairbanks Morse. Yours truly, (Sgd.) LAURENCE MAY.

QUIDI VIDI. Oct. 23rd, 1913. Geo. M. Barr, City.

Dear Sir,—Just a word to say that the H. P. Fairbanks Morse engine that I bought from you in the spring has given me great satisfaction. I had no trouble whatever in operating it, and would advise anybody thinking about buying an engine to first have a look at the Fairbanks Morse. Yours truly, (Sgd.) JOS. HENNEBURY.

vice was very touching, and was closely listened to by the large congregation. At the close the Dead March in Saul was played by Mr. King, who presided at the organ during the entire service.

This ended the Memorial Service of a good man, but not the usefulness of his life: for such a man as Dr. Rogers was, and such a life as he lived, and such a pastorate as he provided himself to be, is not limited to the present, but will continue to bring forth fruit long after the sower of the good seed has passed to his reward.

Dr. Rogers was an esteemed man in a distinct sense, and his career in St. John's, his native city, was that of the refined gentleman and sincere Christian. We knew him well in the church, but we also knew him in the world, and found him ever the same, his personality commanded respect, and his modesty imparted confidence to those whom he interviewed.

His citizenship was an asset to any community, and his presence in the homes of his flock was a benediction indeed. He knew his people and in turn they loved him; for in their service he spared not himself. Thus it was that when the end came and the shadows began to fall, and the darkness of the evening deepened into the night of death, and it was said of him "he is dead," we felt that we had lost a friend and that the world was the poorer because of his departure.

His life was peace; his death the same. I.C.M.

AT COCHRANE ST. CHURCH.

At Cochrane Street Church, last evening, the Rev. C. A. Whitemarsh, M.A., B.D. referred in chaste and beautiful language to the terrible blow that had befallen Methodism, especially in this city, by the death of the Rev. Dr. Rogers during the past week.

The preacher had formed several opinions of the late Doctor and as he gave them out for the benefit of his congregation, one could see that the preacher felt most keenly how the passing of this Father in Israel had impressed him. These opinions formed were briefly these: The Doctor was an extremely sensitive soul to all the sin and sorrow that was going on in our midst, the exceedingly brotherly and Christian gentleman, and lastly and above all he was a princely preacher of the Gospel of Our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

The full choir rendered the anthem, "Vital Spark of Heavenly Flame," and "Now the Labourers' Task is O'er."

After Benediction was pronounced by the Rev. James Wilson, President of Conference, Organist Mews played the Dead March in Saul, while the congregation remained standing with bowed heads. The service was a most impressive one, thus the Cochrane Street congregation showed their appreciation all through this service of their love and esteem for the late Doctor, whom they had often listened to during the past three years.

AT GEORGE ST. CHURCH.

After the sermon at George Street Church, last evening, the Rev. J. W. Bartlett very feelingly referred to the loss the Methodist Church in Canada and Newfoundland had sustained by the death of the Rev. Dr. Rogers. Not only was his death keenly felt by the members of his own denomination, but other denominations shared in the sorrow which was manifest throughout the Colony. The Dead March in Saul was rendered by Organist Mews at the close of the service the congregation standing with bowed heads meanwhile.
