CHAPTER XXXVI.
 "For God's sake! don't don't take it so coolly, Lord Gaunt!" he said.
 Gaunt was silent for a moment; then he asked, as if his thoughts had taken quite another direction:
 "Did you attend to that matter of Mr. Dean's—discharge his debts?"
 "Yes—yes!" said Mr. Belford, almost impatiently. "We carried out your instructions, my lord, Mr. Dean's liabilities are discharged; provided for, at any rate."
 "Thank you," said Gaunt. "And now, gentlemen, I am at your disposal. I am rather tired—I have not slept much of late."
 The partners conferred in whispers, then Mr. Belford said:
 "Is there any place you could spend the night in—undisturbed, Lord Gaunt? Will you come home with one of us?"
 Gaunt thought for a moment.
 "Thank you very much; but I don't think that would be wise of you. Wouldn't it be rather unprofessional, harboring a criminal? I don't know anything of the law regarding such matters, but I've an idea that you would run the risk of an unpleasantness. No, thanks, I'll go to Morlet's. They know me, and"—he smiled—"will give me shelter for to-night. Tomorrow I will give myself up, after breakfast, if I'm permitted to get through that meal in liberty."
 The partners assented to this.
 "We have got Sir James, Lord Gaunt," said Mr. Belford, "and I need scarcely say that he will do all he can. He is the very best man. By the way, Mr. Borkott appeared against us at the inquest. He was retained by Mr. Merston."
 Gaunt had heard of the famous Old Bailey barrister. He smiled grimly.
 "I understand," he said.
 "But do you?" demanded Mr. Belford, desperately. "Do you realize the awful position in which you stand, Lord Gaunt?"
 Gaunt got up from the chair and lit a fresh cigarette.
 "I think so," he said. "At any rate, I know that you will do your best for me, Mr. Belford; and I am grateful. I will go now. You said that Miss Deane was better?"
 "Yes—yes," replied Mr. Belford, impatiently. "We will go with you to the hotel."
 "No; do not," said Gaunt. "You are better known than I am, and might attract attention; and, candidly, I should like to spend to-night in a comfortable bed, even if I do not sleep. Good-night. Come to me in the morning. If I am arrested before you come, I will send for you."

 He shook hands with them and went, with his light, firm step, down the stairs.
 The two lawyers gaped at each other in blank dismay.
 "I always said that there was madness in the family!" exclaimed Mr. Belford. "He takes it as coolly as if— if it were a case of a month or forty shillings."
 "I don't believe he did it," remarked Mr. Lang.
 "Then who did?" retorted Mr. Belford; and Lang could not answer.
 Gaunt went down into the street. His coolness and soap-froid had been quite free from affectation. Now that Decima was better, it did not in the very least degree matter what became of him. The lamps had been lighted, and the streets of the largest and wealthiest city in the world were wrapped in their usual gloom. That gloom is one of the things which fill the intelligent foreigner, visiting our land for the first time, with amazement and dismay.
 It was rather a long walk from Belford & Lang's office to Morlet's, but Gaunt welcomed it. It gave him time to think. Mr. Dobson, notwithstanding the evidence against Gaunt, had been so assured of his innocence, that he had tried, with flattering eagerness, to dissuade Gaunt from returning to England and giving himself up, but Gaunt had refused to be dissuaded. The Gaunts, whatever their sins, and as a family they were peculiarly rich in this respect, had never lacked courage; and Gaunt had resolved to "face the music."
 He insisted upon Mr. Dobson making for Southampton, and Mr. Dobson had at last, driven to it by entreaties and arguments, consented.
 As to the result of his surrender, Gaunt was perfectly indifferent. He was weary of the game which he labeled "Life," and though he would have preferred to finish it at some other place than the scaffold, he did not care very much, so that it was finished. He had lost Decima forever, and for him, life with all its possibilities was over.
 Leaving Belford & Lang's office, he walked slowly and thoughtfully toward Morlet's Hotel.
 As he turned the corner by Berry Street, he almost ran against a man who was slouching along the pavement. The man was walking with a peculiar, dragging gait, and had his coat-collar turned up, and his hands thrust in his pockets. For an instant it struck Gaunt that there was something familiar to him in the manner of the man, and as he Gaunt, muttered "Pardon!" he looked after him. The man made no response, and Gaunt walked on. Presently he heard footsteps behind him.

 "A detective," he said to himself. "I shall not sleep in a comfortable bed to-night, after all," and he walked on. The footsteps behind him grew closer, and Gaunt, almost at the entrance to Morlet's, pulled up short and glanced round. The man who had been following him pulled up as shortly, and the two looked at each other in the light of the street-lamp.
 Gaunt recognized the "shadow," and was the first to speak.
 "Jackson!" he said.
 The man started, hung his head, then raised it, and looked at Gaunt with a dull, vacant intensity.
 "Why, it is you, Jackson!" said Gaunt. "How did you come here? I'm glad to see you."
 Mr. Jackson's lips moved as if he found it difficult to articulate.
 "—I thought it was you, and so— so I followed," he said. "I landed at Portsmouth this morning. I only reached London this afternoon."
 Now, there is no one for whom you feel a keener interest than the man whose life you have saved at the risk of your own; and Gaunt, notwithstanding his natural reserve, felt drawn toward this wait and stray; so he regarded Jackson with a frank smile of welcome.
 "I read of your safe landing at Mogador," he said.
 Jackson nodded, and looked from side to side in an abstracted fashion.
 "Yes; they took us to the Canaries, and the mail brought us back to England."
 "But you wanted to go to Africa," remarked Gaunt.
 Jackson gazed at the leaden London sky, and then at the nearest lamp.
 "Yes, I did; but it didn't matter."
 "Not matter?" said Gaunt.
 He looked at the man more attentively. Jackson seemed thinner, and more attenuated than he had been on board the "Pevensey Castle." His face was white, his eyelids red and swollen, and his bearing and manner those of a man who has been drinking heavily, or is very ill.
 "No," said Jackson, dully; "it didn't matter."
 "Where are you going?" asked Gaunt.
 It seemed to him, that, having saved the man's life, he was in a sense responsible for his future welfare.
 "I don't know," said Jackson, indifferently.
 "You'd better come with me," said Gaunt. "I am going to Morlet's Hotel. They'll be able to find a room for you. I dare say. You look—you look tired."
 "I am wet, and I am tired," said Jackson.
 They went up the highly respectable steps of Morlet's, and the highly respectable Wilkins met them at the door; it is scarcely necessary to say that the highly respectable Wilkins sustained a severe shock at the sight of Lord Gaunt.
 "My—my lord!" he gasped.
 "All right, Wilkins," he said, easily. "I want a room, a couple of rooms, one for my friend here—for to-night only. You're looking well; Wilkins. Can I have my old room?"
 If Lord Gaunt had been ten times the criminal the world believed him to be, Wilkins could not have resisted that smile or the tone which accompanied it. He led the way in a solemn and impressive silence.
 "You'll give us some dinner—anything, Wilkins," said Lord Gaunt as easily as before, and Wilkins, all in a flutter, could only bow, and respond with "Certainly, my lord."
 Gaunt waited until the man, Jackson, had been conducted to his room, then went to his own and washed.
 When he came down, Jackson was standing before the fire, and Gaunt saw, more plainly than he had seen in the street, the wasted and woe-begone countenance of the man he had saved from a watery grave.
 The dinner was served—an admirable dinner considering the shortness of the notice—but neither of the two men could do it justice. Gaunt was thinking of Decima, and the charge that hung over his head, and Jackson also appeared to be overweighted by trouble.
 "A good dinner wasted," said Gaunt, with an attempt at cheerfulness.
 "There is a reason for my want of appetite, but I don't know of any for yours, Mr. Jackson. Will you have some souffe?"
 "No, thanks," said Jackson. "I— I should like some brandy."
 Gaunt signed to Wilkins, and he brought the desired spirit. Jackson drank half a tumbler off.
 "What's the reason you can't enjoy your dinner?" he asked, regarding Gaunt with lack-luster eyes round which were rims as red as if they had been painted.
 Gaunt smiled grimly.
 "Well, I suppose, because it is the last I shall eat in liberty—freedom—for some time," he replied.
 "What do you mean?" demanded Jackson.
 "You know my name?" he asked.
 Jackson nodded.
 "And have you read the papers?"
 "No."
 "Ah," said Gaunt, reluctantly. "If you had, it would have saved me an explanation. I am Edward Bernard Gaunt, and I am charged with the murder of—of my wife at Prince's Mansions."

Skin Blemishes
How to get rid of them
 Skin specialists are tracing fewer and fewer troubles to the blood. They say more often, skin blemishes can be traced to the bacteria and parasites that are carried into the pores of the skin with dust, soot and grime. To clear your skin of blemishes caused by this insidious and persistent enemy, use regularly the following special treatment.
 Just before retiring, wash in your usual way with warm water and Woodbury's Facial Soap; then dry your face. Now dip the tips of your fingers in warm water and rub them on the cake of Woodbury's until they are covered with a heavy cream-like lather. Cover each blemish with a thick coat of this soap cream and leave it on for ten minutes. Rinse very carefully with clear, hot water; then with cold.
 In addition to this special treatment, use Woodbury's regularly in your daily toilet. This will make your skin firm and active. It will help the new skin to resist the frequent cause of blemishes. Before long your complexion will take on a new clearness and freshness.
 Get a cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap and begin tonight the treatment your skin needs. You will find Woodbury's on sale at any drug store or toilet goods counter in the United States or Canada. A 25 cent cake will last a month or six weeks.

Week End of Destruction in Ireland.

Cork City Partially Consumed by Fire--Republican Army Officer Issues Declaration of War-- Archbishop Regards Truce as Very Remote--Constantine Due in Athens Next Sunday.

BIG FIRE IN CORK.
DUBLIN, Dec. 12. The central portion of the city of Cork has been burned to the ground and other portions of the city are ablaze. The conflagration followed an ambush of the military at Pillons Cross, Saturday night, in which four persons were killed and many wounded. Three civilians were taken from their homes and shot dead after the ambush of the military. Then fires were started. There were bomb explosions and firing was also heard. The populace is panic stricken. The Municipal buildings, Carnegie Library and Corn Exchange, which cover a large area have been consumed by the flames, which are so hot at places that passing tram cars have been set on fire.

A BELFAST REPORT.
BELFAST, Dec. 12. A despatch received here from Cork says that the fire hose was just cut rendering useless the efforts of the firemen, and two acres soon became a furnace. The front walls of houses were blown out with bombs. The great block between Mayor Street and Fish Street was still burning Sunday afternoon, the fire eating its way backwards.

CONDITIONS IN MONAGHAN.
DUBLIN, Dec. 12. A proclamation declaring that "the public must at once realize that Ireland is in a state of war with the forces of the British Crown," has been issued over the signature of the officer commanding the troops of the Irish Republican Army in Monaghan. The proclamation which sets forth that armed gangs in County Monaghan have been attacking and murdering innocent citizens, says that while we extend the hand of friendship to all Irishmen, murder gangs and their guides and informers shall be summarily dealt with. The proclamation further explains the recent search for arms carried out in County Monaghan by stating they were ordered in anticipation of a similar order by the British Government.

ARCHBISHOP MANNIX'S OPINION.
LONDON, Dec. 12. Archbishop Mannix, of Australia, interviewed by the Sunday Times regarding the possibilities of a truce between the Sinn Fein organization and the British government declared he deeply regretted the truce events had taken "as the truce now is more remote than ever." He feared the government idea in the truce was one sided and meant abject surrender and described the proclamation of martial law as sheer madness.

ASKING HELP FROM DUBLIN.
BELFAST, Dec. 12. The Lord Mayor of Cork has telegraphed the Lord Mayor of Dublin stating that their firemen in Cork were unable to cope with the outbreak and begging for help. It is possible that the Dublin Fire Brigade will be sent by special train.

ADVOCATES CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY.
LONDON, Dec. 12. Speaking at Prescot, Lancashire, yesterday, Arthur Henderson, the Labor leader, asserted that martial law in Ireland would erect an almost insurmountable barrier between the moderates in the Sinn Fein organization and England. He advocated the setting up of a Constituent Assembly in Ireland.

TINO RETURNS TO ATHENS NEXT SUNDAY.
ATHENS, Dec. 12. Former King Constantine will arrive in Athens on December nineteenth, according to a message received by Dowager Queen Olga from him yesterday. The message said Constantine would arrive in Venice on Wednesday next on the way to the capital. A Greek destroyer will be sent to Rumania to take Prince George aboard. He will meet his father on the high seas and they will enter Athens together.

Coughing Must Cease In Canada

There is absolutely no use wasting any more time on the question of coughs, colds, etc. Action is required to stamp these ailments out of Canadian life forever. Humanity must not suffer any longer. Success is certain if Buckley's Bronchitis Mixture, the greatest cough medicine known to mankind, is used. Thousands of sufferers have been helped, and recommend this remedy. It accomplishes almost the impossible. There is absolutely no excuse for anyone suffering from colds, bronchitis, influenza, etc., when there is within easy reach this scientific mixture, which has proved beyond a doubt its ability to relieve speedily and permanently.

If you are a victim of any of the above ailments don't hesitate a moment longer. Get a bottle at all druggists. Refuse all substitutes. For sale at all Drug Stores or by mail from W. K. BUCKLEY LIMITED, 145 MUTUAL ST., TORONTO.

TURN DOWN THIRD INTERNATIONAL.
BERNE, Dec. 12. The Congress of the Swiss Socialist party in session here rejected adherence to the Third Moscow International yesterday. The left wing of the Congress thereupon left the hall, declaring they would no longer take part in the work of the Socialist party.

WILL DISPOSE OF BILL TO-DAY.
WASHINGTON, Dec. 12. Final disposition in the House of the Johnson Bill providing for practically complete stoppage of immigration for one year, was postponed Saturday until Monday. The House leaders reached an agreement to bring the bill to a vote on that date having found it impossible to complete the debate yesterday.

ONE OR OTHER TO WITHDRAW.
GENEVA, Dec. 12. A dispute between Chile and Bolivia in the League of Nations Assembly to-day has raised the possibility of the withdrawal of one country or the other from the League. The dispute arose over the submission to the Assembly of the Taos-Ariza case, which involves these northern provinces of Chile taken by Chile from Peru in the war between these nations nearly forty years ago, in which Bolivia was also involved, and Peruvian and Bolivian claims concerning them.

WILL CONFER WITH HARDING.
MAINE, Florida, Dec. 12. W. J. Bryan said yesterday he had accepted an invitation to confer with President-elect Harding in the proposed association of nations.

BREAK IN ITALIAN ARMY.
TRIESTE, Dec. 12. The first break in the regular Italian army occurred when four armored cars started from Udine, three of which succeeded in reaching the hold of Gabriele D'Annunzio in Fiume.

KILLED AND INJURED BY LANDSLIDE.
SANTIAGO, Cuba, Dec. 12. (Delayed.)—A despatch received here reports the loss of several lives and injuries to a number of persons as the result of a great landslide, which has occurred around the inactive volcano of Villarica, in the province of Valdivia. The slides followed violent earth tremors felt in the southern provinces on Thursday and Friday.

MORE CADETS AMBUSHED.
DUBLIN, Dec. 12. Twelve auxiliary cadets were wounded last night in an ambush at Cork, within half a mile of the barracks, by bombs thrown at a lorry, according to an official announcement.

Shooting Affray in Sydney.
Newfoundlander Participants. It was currently reported around town on Saturday that a shooting affray, in which the principals were Newfoundlander, had occurred in Sydney. Several conflicting reports were spread, but from the very meagre particulars which have been received, it seems that one Joseph Hartery, formerly resident in St. John's, was shot and badly injured by a woman named Stella Rich, a former inhabitant of the "Dardanelles," where she obtained an unenviable notoriety. This woman has—during the past year—made several unsuccessful attempts to reach Sydney, but was always sent back by the authorities as an undesirable. Within the past month, however, she managed, in some way, to elude the vigilance of the officials, and joined her friend, a woman named Duke, also of St. John's and once presumably a denizen of the "Dardanelles," who is in service with an Italian in the mining town.

The victim in the case, Joseph Hartery, left here some years ago and is a married man. He was up to a short time ago along with his brother, John Hartery, a fireman on the S.S. Hochberg, and it seems that whilst the ship was in Sydney last week, the two brothers met the girls from St. John's and escorted them to their home. The proprietor of the house, as far as can be ascertained, gave them a good reception, and having a drop of the strong stuff for particular friends, they soon began to feel merry, and the next act in the drama was that they began to take charge of the homestead, with the result that a general disturbance took place, and in the melee, Joseph Hartery was shot by Rich, though not fatally. Upon the authorities becoming aware of the affray, the injured man was taken to the Hospital, whilst the unfortunate girl was removed to the police station. So far as can be learned, Hartery is doing well at the Hospital. What action will be taken as regards the girl is as yet unknown.

Pontifical Mass at St. Patrick's Church.

Yesterday at St. Patrick's Church His Lordship Bishop Renouf of St. George's officiated at Pontifical Mass, and following the ceremony, the lady of the Parish presented him with an address and purse of gold. The Christian Brothers' communities of Mt. St. Francis, St. Bonaventures and Mount Cashel also made a presentation of an address and gift. This was followed by addresses from Christian Doctrine Society of St. Patrick's, the Holy Name Society of St. Patrick's and the Knights of Columbus. Bishop Renouf replied to the different addresses from the Altar in full Pontifical robes wearing the beautiful Mitre presented by the people of Trepasser, and carrying the Crozier, which is the gift of the people of St. Bride's, in which both parishes His Lordship served. The Bishop thanked the people for their kindness of the day, and the great support and co-operation given him during his pastorate at St. Patrick's which he was leaving with many regrets. He asked for the same support for the new Pastor. At the Mass His Lordship was assisted by Rev. Fr. Joy, P.P., Port au Port as Deacon, and Rev. A. Nolan, P.P., St. Jacques as sub-Deacon. His Lordship was attended at the Throne by Rev. W. O'Flaherty, P.P., Trepasser and Rev. Fr. Callan, P.P., Wood's Island. Very Rev. Dean O'Rourke attended as High Priest and Rev. Dr. Greene as Master of Ceremonies. Rev. Fr. Wilson, assistant Master of Ceremonies, Right Rev. Monsignor Sears, V.G., P.P., Searston, occupied a seat in the Sanctuary and the following other clergy. Very Rev. J. McGrath, P.P., Bell Island, Very Rev. T. Goff, P.P., Portlough Cove; Rev. R. A. St. John, Rev. P.P. Sheehan, Rev. A. Fortune, Rev. Dr. Carter, Rev. E. Flynn. The C.C.C. Band rendered the Gloria, Hallelujah Chorus and Pope's March during the service, and a guard of honor was present from the Cadets.

The smallest cottage, the largest mansion has within its walls Christmas music, or Christmas would lack one of its greatest sources of amusement and happiness.

Why not let "Columbia" supply your Xmas music? Why not let your gift to your friends be some worth-while offering of a nice selection of good records? Wesley Bible Class.

Addressed by Colonel Martin, S.A. The first of a series of addresses through the winter months were delivered yesterday afternoon by Colonel Martin, S.A., to a very large gathering of the class about 140, which was augmented by a Bible Class in addition of forty young women, and many other visitors. After being introduced with suitable words by the Chairman, B. Taylor, Esq., Col. Martin said he was quite used to being in a Methodist atmosphere, that his home life had always been Wesleyan, that his father, though 85 years, was still the superintendent of a Methodist Sunday school, and that his own conversion when a boy, had taken place in a small Wesleyan chapel (as they still call them) in North Devon, England. Later one of the ministers asked him to take up the work of local preaching and this subsequently led him into the larger field of going out as a worker for God in other lands. He believed that God has a place for every one to fill in helping to extend the Saviour's Kingdom, and that laymen should do a great deal more. The speaker referred to the wonderful work for God done by such men as Billy Bray and others in the old days. Of their marvellous faith in God answering prayer, instances of which were cited showing how Billy's "Father" supplied a pair of boots and sent him a pulpit. Colonel Martin referred to the great good being done by Brethrenhoods in connection with the great Mission Halls of the Wesleyan Churches in London, Manchester and other large centres of population in Britain and of the gift and otherwise qualified men such as Revs. J. Rattenbury and S. F. Collier in charge of them. These institutional churches were of great value in times of unemployment. The speaker then referred to foreign missionary efforts amongst the masses of India, China, and other lands, and spoke of his own experiences with the Socialists of Germany. Christianity had been almost swept clean out of Germany by infidelity; they had forgotten and despised God, and God now had left them to reap a harvest of their own sowing. The closing was a fervent appeal for consecration to Christian service either at home or abroad. The fields are white unto harvest and the laborers are far too few. A quartette following by Misses Nicholl and Taylor, Messrs. Chaplin and Waterfield was beautifully sung: "Though your sins be as scarlet they shall be as white as snow." Mr. Pratt presided at the organ. The officers Messrs. Hudson, Faulkner and others are to be congratulated. Behold how good a thing it is to dwell together in unity. —A.W.M.

"Cheer Up" Everybody!

"XMAS IS COMING."
The leading article concerning advertising which recently appeared in the Telegram attracted my serious attention (and I hope the attention of all here) because I owe my initial success to publicity afforded by a similar newspaper in South Wales—"The South Wales Echo." But I will deal with successful advertising schemes in another article, to appear in Thursday's edition.
The purpose of this article however is my humble endeavour to induce everybody to turn out their pockets and make up their minds to spend all they can possibly afford during the few days intervening to Xmas Day. Make up your minds, all of you, to make this period of the year a record period for trade and the storekeepers. They are enduring great anxiety these days and have reduced the prices of their goods to an extent which I, personally, have never before known anywhere. In fact the sales are genuine bargain sales. (As I have had an extraordinary career in manufacture, sale and export, I write boldly as an authority.)
The storekeeper buys of the factory and pays wages—there then is the road to prosperity:—BUY—SPEND ALL YOU CAN NOW and help your country in a period of doubt (to put it mildly) thereby helping yourselves. Buy home made goods if you can possibly suit taste and purse; if you fancy an imported article, however, buy that. BUY SOMETHING—it all helps, and remember this: the more you buy the lower the price becomes by degrees. That is common logic and the moral of a sensible storekeeper or merchant always.
To hoard money now, because of a few scare mongers' moanings, is a weapon against yourselves. Put your shoulder to the wheel, spend, and do your bit to keep the wheel in motion. Dash in and buy while the prices are down. If you were a trader you would do that. Well, be a trader, until Xmas at least, and butt in with your cash. Study the advertisements in this paper, for the firm that advertises must stand by its advertised goods and prices or fall utterly—forgetting the faith of the public if any "dodges" are practiced. Don't ignore the smaller stores (we all have to start) But BUY! BUY! BUY!!!
I do not advocate any store in particular, and, as I am as yet practically a stranger among you, it must be admitted I urge all to rally round and buy now merely because I should like to feel my visit here had borne fruit of some kind. Having organised some very successful "shopping weeks" in Great Britain I should, had the storekeepers here met me in conference, have been pleased to do the same for St. John's in style (at my price, of course). Who among them will pave the way for me? I know the press would gladly assist. At the moment it is suggested I take Newfoundland furniture samples by the "Sachem," to pioneer export to Great Britain.
However, "buck up," everybody! turn out the dollars from that secret hiding place. Ladies! cajole or bully your husband: Girls! "wheedle" round your "boy": Kiddies! open your bank boxes: Men! make this Xmas a happy one by doing your bit. "Blue" some Dollars—Now, all together! Never mind the weather!—BUY SOMETHING—and give your country a bold spirit for 1921.
T. HENRY SMITH.

At the Class, yesterday afternoon, the Chairman referred to the work of the Harbor and Wharf Mission, which this year, for the first time, has been carried on under the auspices of the "Missions to Seamen." Continuing from the first Sunday in May up to the second Sunday in December, inclusive, the work has been vigorously carried on week after week and greatly appreciated by the hundreds of seamen visiting the port. Thousands of tracts were freely distributed, and the Class may well feel proud of those who represent them in this work with such self-sacrificing labor.
The annual meeting will be held on the first Sunday in the new year. The lectures in connection with the development of the Christian Church—to be given at the request of the men—will commence on January 9. As next Sunday is "Orphanage Sunday" the collection as in other years, will be given toward the maintenance of our fatherless little ones. On this occasion the Bishop will visit the Class, and speak to the men.
The Club Girls of St. Joseph's Parish are holding a Xmas Fancy Sale, Children's Tea and Card Party in St. Joseph's Hall on Thursday, Dec. 16th, 1920.

HOW TO BE HAPPY THOUGH HUMAN.

RUTH CAMERON

"Why don't I feel happier this morning?" I asked myself recently. It was a lovely day, I was looking forward to a pleasure trip in the afternoon. I had a new hat to wear, everyone in the immediate family was reasonably well. I had just paid all the bills for the month without entirely depleting the family finances—

—all truly good reasons for feeling happy. And yet there was in my mind a sense of depression and apprehension.

For a minute I couldn't diagnose it, and then I discovered what it was that was casting this shadow on my heart. I was feeling anxious because I had not been notified of the receipt of an important letter which I had sent out. I should have heard the day before. If anything had happened to that letter it would mean a great deal of inconvenience and work for me. It was probable that the recipient had been careless about his acknowledgement, or the mail slow in bringing it, but when the morning mail failed to bring the expected letter I had let my mind dwell on all the trouble I would have if anything had happened. And the result had been that vague sense of depression on a day when I ought to have been happy.

Well, I Was.

I should have been ashamed of myself, shouldn't I?

"Well, I was. And I immediately set to work to drive out that silly fear that was ruining my day."

"I have never lost an important letter in the mail yet," I said to myself, "and while it might have happened this time, I suppose there are at least 99 chances to one that there is some other explanation. Besides, I don't need to face this until it comes. If it happens, I'll face it some way, and I'll be adequate to it; but it isn't going to happen. Ninety-nine out of 100 of these things that I let myself fear, don't happen. I will not harbor this fear in my mind."

Don't Laugh Until You've Tried It!

Then—please don't laugh until you've tried it because it honestly and truly helps—I drew a long breath threw out my chest, and pictured myself with a broom just driving that fear out of my mind. "Get right out of here," I said to that fear. "Scat!"

And, whether you believe it or not, the fear scatted.

No matter how unusually prosperous and blessed by fortune anyone is, he cannot be happy if he lets the fear-habit master him.

The weather specialists tell us that there is no such thing as a perfectly cloudless day. Sometime during the day there will always be a tiny cloud somewhere in the sky.

There is Never a Cloudless Day But—

It is the same with our lives. There is never a sky which does not have a tiny cloud in it. There is some one thing you want you can't get. Or if you have everything you long for, there is always the fear of loss. But while there are no cloudless days, there are innumerable beautiful sunny days with no clouds in the sky that need bother us if we are not foolish enough to let them.

I am sure the habit of fear spoils more happiness than actual events do. If we could get rid of the fears and suffer only the unhappiness which actual events force upon us, just think how different our lives would be!

It is a big and inspiring thought, isn't it?

Campaign in New York

To Compel Retailers to Reduce the Price of Food.

New York, December 1.—A campaign to compel retailers to reduce food prices is about to be instituted by the State Department of Markets, Mrs. Louis Rod Weizmiller, Deputy Commissioner, announced today.

Mrs. Weizmiller declared that retail merchants have not cut their prices commensurate with the drop in wholesale prices.

In Chicago a cut in milk prices for December is announced by the Milk Producers' Association. The consumers will benefit by one cent per quart, the new price being 14 cents.

Addressing the convention of the Automobile Accessories Branch of the National Hardware Association in St. Louis yesterday, the President of that body, A. H. Decatur, of Boston, predicted an early drop in the price of automobile accessories.

The American Thread Company of Willimantic, Conn., announces that beginning Monday, December 6th, its mills, employing 2,700 operatives, will be operating only one day a week. Scarcity of orders is given as the reason.

At Pittsburgh yesterday prices of steel wire products were cut for the first time in several years, the reduction being about fifty cents per hundred pounds.

The 500 employees of the Nash Clothing Manufacturing Company of Cincinnati, which is operated on the "golden rule" basis, have voted to voluntarily surrender their jobs for a month, either January or February, in order to give work to the unemployed of other clothing factories.

This Week's Wisdom.

Nonsense is the sense that differs from your own.

Man tries to live up to his ideals, woman to her photographer's.

You can no more mistake love than the measles. It's overwhelming.

Never judge a man's feet by the slippers his wife makes for him.

It's impossible for any woman to look as young as she thinks she looks. Gossips have no use for people who refuse to furnish material for them.

TIPS.

I always tip the waiter who blithely brings to me my slice of alligator, a n d cup of sparkling tea. I don't believe in tipping, in principle it's wrong; I've done a lot of yipping this moral line along. A n d doubtless soon or later abolished it will be; but now I tip the waiter who brings my mush to me. I see my neighbors waiting a long time for their meals, the manager berating, and making frantic spels. Their words are fierce and gripping, they thunder and they screech; they don't believe in tipping, and practice what they preach. But I, who tip the waiter, am pushing through my face an egg and boiled potato, with tact and princely grace. My grub is cooked to please me, my partridges and my owl, and there is none to freeze me, with most forbidding scowl. And no one spills the gravy, the salad or the prunes, upon my whiskers wavy, or on my trowsers. I am an ardent hater of tipping as a graft, but I shall tip the waiter until I'm dead or deaf; for I like prompt attention when I demand a stew, a hash all spiced with gentian, a goulash or ragout.

ARTISTS AND ART.

We got to talking art one day, discussing in a general way how some can match with brush and paint the glory of a tree. And some in stone can catch the things of which the dreamy post sings.

While others seem to have no way to tell the joys they see.

Old Blake had sat in silence there and let each one of us declare our notions of what's known as art, until he'd heard us through. And then said hot: "It seems to me that any man who can't be happy in his own life, he's a failure."

He need not write the books men read to be an artist.

He need not work with paint and brush to show his love of art; who does a little good deed and helps someone in his need, and plays the part of an artist.

Though some of us cannot express our inmost thoughts in loveliness, we prove we love the beautiful by how we act and live; the poet sings of a tree no greater poet is than he.

Who finds 't in his heart some care unto a tree to give.

Though he who works in marble stone the name of artist here may own.

No less an artist is the man who guards his children well; 'Tis art to love the fine and true, by what we are and what we do; How much we love life's nobler things to all the world we tell."

Germany Forging Ahead

The first ship since the war arriving at Halifax with goods from Germany had on board a cargo of kainite, a crude form of potash salts used in making fertilizers. In one form or another the substance known as potash is the base of many fertilizers, because it is one of the essential elements of plant life. In pioneer days, when there was an abundance of wood, potash was obtained by evaporating the lye obtained from wood ashes, the evaporation being carried on by boiling the lye in huge iron pots, and so the substance obtained was called the ash of the pot or potash. It was then chiefly used in soap-making. It is one of the salts of potassium.

In Germany, and particularly at a place called Strassfurt, there are extensive natural deposits of potash or salts of potassium, one of which is kainite, used in making fertilizers and which annual bill for fertilizers amounts to a considerable sum. Last year the value of these imports was $1,449,248, all but the manufactured fertilizers being admitted duty free. Of course, the importations from Germany closed during the war, and last year the imports of the crude German potash salts had a value of only $8,852, and none of these imports came direct from Germany.—Family Herald and Weekly Star.

The Death of Dr. Johnson.

On Monday, December 13, 1784, Dr. Samuel Johnson died at Gough Square Fleet Street, from dropsy, at the age of 75, after an illness of some weeks. Although all that the professional science of the day could effect was tried, the chances of recovery from the first seemed remote. But the fear of death, to which he always had been prone, left him towards the end, and he died in peace. On his last day, a Miss Morris, daughter of an intimate friend, asked that she might be allowed to see him and receive his blessing. Thereupon Johnson turned in bed and said, "God bless you, my dear." They were his last words. The difficulty of breathing increased until seven in the evening, when Francis Barber, his black servant, and Mrs. Desmouline, his blind lady pensioner, named Williams, who were watching by his bed, noticed that the stereotyped noise made by him had ceased and when they bent over him, they found that he was dead. A week later he was laid to rest in Westminster Abbey, the pall-bearers being Edmund Burke, Sir Joseph Banks, Mr. Wyndham, Mr. Bennet Langton, and Mr. Colman, the last rites being performed by Dr. Taylor, an old school fellow. Subsequently, a cenotaph was erected to his memory in St. Paul's Cathedral, and a medallion with a tablet was placed also in Lichfield Cathedral. But his best monument is to be found in the "life", by his faithful disciple, Boswell, who has preserved for later generations a lasting picture of the Doctor in his habits as he lived, with all his mannerisms, his prejudices, his vigorous talk, and his sterling worth. Dr. Johnson first lived in the "Finner Temple", then went to Johnson's Court, leading into Gough Square, and later to No. 8, Bolt Court, where he died.

Fish Regulations and Burgeo and LaPoile.

In discussing subjects of vital importance to the people of this dominion, the treatment of the matters at issue should not be of the quality usually bestowed upon them by the learned editor of our Adelaide Street contemporary, whose bent is rather to find much humor in existing conditions than discuss them seriously. But then our learned friend of the Star is a born humorist and sees cause for levity in anything and everything, and his snappy wit seldom fails to appear all through his editorial comment on men and things, not by any means harmful, but with just sufficient caustic in it to give a soupçon of flavor to his daily dissertations. Of course the Star has to support and back up Mr. Coaker and Mr. Coaker's policy, and there's the reason. It is of no consequence how much injury has been inflicted on certain sections of the dominion by the operation of the Fish Regulations, it is the openly declared policy of the Star to praise them up and decry all attempts made to prove the incalculable harm they have wrought in the districts solely dependent upon the fisheries for the support of their population.

A few days ago the Telegram referred to Bay-de-Verde district and some of the conditions facing the people there. Such details as that article contained were furnished by men from the larger settlements who have been hardest hit financially by the Fish Regulations, which with one voice they roundly condemn. Extra information in corroboration of all that the Telegram has said, since the measures under discussion became law, is being received as day succeeds day, and the stand taken by this journal has been heartily applauded. That of itself is ample evidence that the country is by no means unanimous in favoring regulations which have brought deprivation and destitution to many centres in so short a period. Incontestable proofs of such a state of affairs as has never been experienced by people in numerous settlements, are accumulating on every side. Communications, animadverting on the havoc in business and the ultimate destruction of fair competition, come not alone from the fishermen, but from clergymen, business men and others who play a prominent part in the life and work of a large portion of the population.

We are not given to the habit of boasting or of blowing our own trumpet loudly, but when we receive letters of the tenor and import of that from which to-day we quote portions, there is a little feeling of pride in evidence, coupled with the knowledge that all that has been written has not been wholly in vain.

"Your editorials on the Fishery Regulations are particularly to the point, and the whole story of their disastrous results on this coast has yet to be told. The Telegram has public opinion here with it, and your sentiments are those of the whole coast. We appreciate that party politics do not form the basis of any of your arguments, that they are neither tinted with political color nor tainted with political motives. All of us here agree that the stand you are taking is for popular interest and benefit.

Our once prosperous little town, upon which we prided ourselves as being the Gloucester of Newfoundland, has now sunk so low in the fishing industry that no one bothers any more to ply their calling, and our splendid fleet of fishing craft are rotting at their moorings.

The whole West Coast appears to be unknown to our Acting Premier, and he does not want to be made aware of any other sections of the dominion beyond those districts in which he is directly interested, but one day he will abruptly make the discovery that the South West Coast districts are still on the map of Newfoundland.

The fishery here this fall has been the worst known for many years. In fact very few men are fishing so discouraged and disgusted are they. With fish at two cents per pound from the knife and the extra high prices of food-stuffs and fishery supplies, it is not to be wondered at that men won't fish. Many of our people are already applying to the Government for relief, and when winter sets in earnest, I really don't know what will happen. There are no stocks of provisions on the coast from Channel to Burgeo. In many places, LaPoile, Grand Bruit and West Point those who are fortunate enough to have a barrel of flour in possession, are sharing with others who have none, and yet the 'Advocate' in a recent issue says: 'The sensational stories telegraphed abroad, or related as personal experiences of certain localities with alleged general destitution are without foundation.' My statement to the contrary will confirm the alleged utterances as FACTS."

The picture painted by our correspondent, is not a pretty one, for he uses the brush sparingly and does not hesitate to limn the Fish Regulations of Mr. Coaker as being responsible for the alarming situation now existing in that section of the district of Burgeo and LaPoile from which he writes.

Premier Squires on Mr. Coaker's Bank Proposals.

Interviewed by the Sydney Record, the Prime Minister of Newfoundland made the following statement with regard to the F.P.U. resolution that a State Bank should be established.

"Is there anything in the rumor that a Newfoundland bank is to be established?" queried the reporter. "I do not think there is," replied the Premier. "At any rate not so far as being established and financed by the Government of the colony. Two Newfoundland banks were in operation some years ago but their career came to an unsuccessful finish as a number of small banks have in Canada working with unlimited capital over small areas of country. Their end in Canada has been either failure or absorption by larger concerns.

"The question of further banking institutions in Newfoundland has not been a live question, in fact till within the past few months has scarcely been even referred to."

"Has this been on account of restriction of credits by the banks at present operating?"

The Premier did not deny that this might very well be the case. However, from a business point of view restriction as applied to business of a speculative character was not entirely an evil. Its results were often not pleasant and could even cause hardships in the initial stages, but viewed in a broad general way the results would tend to a stabilizing of currency, a lowering in the cost of living and ultimately better general conditions. A bank established as a Newfoundland concern would be under the same plan and similar from a financing and managing point of view to Canadian banking institutions.

Police Court.

A drunk was released on payment of five dollars.
A youth charged with being drunk and disorderly was fined five dollars or 10 days.

The next case to be called was that of a man, his wife and their son, charged with assaulting three Constables and tearing their uniforms whilst they were in discharge of their duty. The woman was ill and could not appear. The Inspector General, conducting the prosecution, called Constable Day who stated that in company with three other Constables he went to the house of the accused at 12.30 a.m. Thursday for the purpose of arresting their fourteen old son for larceny. The police were refused admittance and were told in rather forcible language that they should make themselves scarce. Ultimately, an entrance to the house had to be forced. Upon asking for the boy whom they had come to arrest, the representatives of the law were met with a volume of abuse from the parents, which made even them blench, used as they are to hearing such language. The parents, when asked to dress the boy, refused, and when Constable Myers attempted to do it himself, both withdrew. The mother threatened witness with crockeryware and when he tried to withdraw, the elder son who had just arrived on the scene, attempted to test the resistance of the police helmets with a chair, which fortunately for Day, hit the door instead. Constable Case had his tunic badly torn in the tussle, and Myers lost his hair-skin. Constable Myers was the next witness to be called. He stated that twice previously he had called to arrest the boy and had been told to depart to a warmer clime. He went to the house for the third time with three other Constables and this time forced an entrance. He stated that the unwelcome visitors had to look out for their heads owing to the crockeryware which was flying through the air. Constable Case called, stated that the elder son had told the police that if they didn't get out there would be something doing. He then attempted to hit Day with a chair. His Honour commented very strongly on the audacity of these people, for daring to resist the carrying out of justice. He fined the father $10 or 30 days and the son $10 or 10 days. The case against the mother was withdrawn.

For driving a carriage without lights a man had to pay costs.
An Assyrian was charged with a breach of the Prohibition Act. He pleaded not guilty. The Government analyst, sworn, stated that the liquor which the defendant is accused of selling, had the moonshine taste and smell. A commercial traveller, sworn, admitted that he was drunk on the night of Dec. 5th but he did not know what had made him so, nor did he know where he got the intoxicant. Later, he remembered getting a bottle of liquor but from whom he didn't know. Inspector General Hutchings, prosecuting, asked witness what he had done with the liquor. Mr. Gibbs, K.C. for the defence, objected to the question. A hot argument then took place between Counsel and the Magistrate, the latter ruling the question as being in order. Upon this question being again put, witness replied that he did not know what he did with the liquor but that the policeman had a bottle, and after scrutinising it carefully, he declared that he did not recognize it. The Inspector General then announced that he could go no further on the present evidence and that he would prosecute again later. The case was thereupon dismissed.

Address
TO HIS LORDSHIP, RT. REV. W. T. RENOUF, D.D., BISHOP OF ST. GEORGE'S.
From the Communities of the Christian Brothers.
May It Please Your Lordship:
In common with Catholic sentiment throughout the country, we, the Irish Christian Brothers, desire to tender you to-day our warmest felicitations upon your elevation to the exalted dignity of the Episcopate and to express the gratification we feel at such a well-merited recognition of a ministry well and faithfully performed.

To most of us the record of your labors in the ranks of the clergy is as well known as it is duly appraised by us. We avail ourselves, in consequence, of this opportunity to give utterance to the feelings we have ever entertained towards you who have labored so sedulously and so successfully in the Master's Vineyard. Whosoever seeks evidence of the fruits of your apostolic work, needs but to consider the bounteous harvest of good that has resulted from your priestly devotion to duty in St. Bride's, Trepassy, and St. Patrick's.

We recall with pleasure your efficacious zeal for the glory and adornment of the House of God. Generations to come, remembering with gratitude and affection the worthy Pastor through whose efforts these holy edifices were erected and beautified, will thank God fervently for such fruitful endeavours and recall with conviction the words of Sacred Scripture: "I have loved the beauty of Thy House and the place where Thy glory dwelleth."

Your interest in the education of the tender members of your flock has likewise been to us a source of admiration. A firm believer in the incalculable value of education as a prime factor in producing a God-fearing race, you have displayed an interest in the school room, second only to your love for the sacred edifice wherein Our Divine Lord reserves Himself for our consolation and support.

While lamenting with your late parishioners the loss which St. Patrick's sustains by your departure to your Diocese, we are consoled by the thought that your own mission will be substantially the gainer by taking to itself one who will spare no effort to perpetuate the noble and laborious work so recently sanctified and fostered by the apostolic ministrations of the late deeply lamented Bishop Power.

To conclude, my Lord, we beg you to accept this present as a small token of our appreciation and esteem and we venture to express the hope that Almighty God in His goodness may spare you many years to guide and direct the holiest and noblest interests of the flock which He has committed to your charge.

Signed on behalf of the Communities of the Christian Brothers of St. John's.

The next case to be called was that of a man, his wife and their son, charged with assaulting three Constables and tearing their uniforms whilst they were in discharge of their duty. The woman was ill and could not appear. The Inspector General, conducting the prosecution, called Constable Day who stated that in company with three other Constables he went to the house of the accused at 12.30 a.m. Thursday for the purpose of arresting their fourteen old son for larceny. The police were refused admittance and were told in rather forcible language that they should make themselves scarce. Ultimately, an entrance to the house had to be forced. Upon asking for the boy whom they had come to arrest, the representatives of the law were met with a volume of abuse from the parents, which made even them blench, used as they are to hearing such language. The parents, when asked to dress the boy, refused, and when Constable Myers attempted to do it himself, both withdrew. The mother threatened witness with crockeryware and when he tried to withdraw, the elder son who had just arrived on the scene, attempted to test the resistance of the police helmets with a chair, which fortunately for Day, hit the door instead. Constable Case had his tunic badly torn in the tussle, and Myers lost his hair-skin. Constable Myers was the next witness to be called. He stated that twice previously he had called to arrest the boy and had been told to depart to a warmer clime. He went to the house for the third time with three other Constables and this time forced an entrance. He stated that the unwelcome visitors had to look out for their heads owing to the crockeryware which was flying through the air. Constable Case called, stated that the elder son had told the police that if they didn't get out there would be something doing. He then attempted to hit Day with a chair. His Honour commented very strongly on the audacity of these people, for daring to resist the carrying out of justice. He fined the father $10 or 30 days and the son $10 or 10 days. The case against the mother was withdrawn.

For driving a carriage without lights a man had to pay costs.
An Assyrian was charged with a breach of the Prohibition Act. He pleaded not guilty. The Government analyst, sworn, stated that the liquor which the defendant is accused of selling, had the moonshine taste and smell. A commercial traveller, sworn, admitted that he was drunk on the night of Dec. 5th but he did not know what had made him so, nor did he know where he got the intoxicant. Later, he remembered getting a bottle of liquor but from whom he didn't know. Inspector General Hutchings, prosecuting, asked witness what he had done with the liquor. Mr. Gibbs, K.C. for the defence, objected to the question. A hot argument then took place between Counsel and the Magistrate, the latter ruling the question as being in order. Upon this question being again put, witness replied that he did not know what he did with the liquor but that the policeman had a bottle, and after scrutinising it carefully, he declared that he did not recognize it. The Inspector General then announced that he could go no further on the present evidence and that he would prosecute again later. The case was thereupon dismissed.

Address
TO HIS LORDSHIP, RT. REV. W. T. RENOUF, D.D., BISHOP OF ST. GEORGE'S.
From the Communities of the Christian Brothers.
May It Please Your Lordship:
In common with Catholic sentiment throughout the country, we, the Irish Christian Brothers, desire to tender you to-day our warmest felicitations upon your elevation to the exalted dignity of the Episcopate and to express the gratification we feel at such a well-merited recognition of a ministry well and faithfully performed.

To most of us the record of your labors in the ranks of the clergy is as well known as it is duly appraised by us. We avail ourselves, in consequence, of this opportunity to give utterance to the feelings we have ever entertained towards you who have labored so sedulously and so successfully in the Master's Vineyard. Whosoever seeks evidence of the fruits of your apostolic work, needs but to consider the bounteous harvest of good that has resulted from your priestly devotion to duty in St. Bride's, Trepassy, and St. Patrick's.

We recall with pleasure your efficacious zeal for the glory and adornment of the House of God. Generations to come, remembering with gratitude and affection the worthy Pastor through whose efforts these holy edifices were erected and beautified, will thank God fervently for such fruitful endeavours and recall with conviction the words of Sacred Scripture: "I have loved the beauty of Thy House and the place where Thy glory dwelleth."

Your interest in the education of the tender members of your flock has likewise been to us a source of admiration. A firm believer in the incalculable value of education as a prime factor in producing a God-fearing race, you have displayed an interest in the school room, second only to your love for the sacred edifice wherein Our Divine Lord reserves Himself for our consolation and support.

While lamenting with your late parishioners the loss which St. Patrick's sustains by your departure to your Diocese, we are consoled by the thought that your own mission will be substantially the gainer by taking to itself one who will spare no effort to perpetuate the noble and laborious work so recently sanctified and fostered by the apostolic ministrations of the late deeply lamented Bishop Power.

To conclude, my Lord, we beg you to accept this present as a small token of our appreciation and esteem and we venture to express the hope that Almighty God in His goodness may spare you many years to guide and direct the holiest and noblest interests of the flock which He has committed to your charge.

Signed on behalf of the Communities of the Christian Brothers of St. John's.

Twinkle, Twinkle Little Star.

We regret exceedingly the statement made by us on Friday. We thought that we had made ourselves very plain, but we should have considered that we were writing for Star consumers, and consequently ought to have used only words of one syllable. If the editor of the Star will only take the trouble to re-read our short article of Friday, which with the aid of a pocket Webster, he would be able to accomplish, he will realize that the reason we were watching his writings with so much interest was for fear that he had lost his sense of humour. Now this, as everyone knows, would be a calamity, but after the Star's editorials of Thursday and Saturday, we are well satisfied that our twinkling contemporary is still its old self, for which we are truly thankful. The Star is becoming a regular scream now, and actually leads us to follow its "truly noble and edifying example." How modest our friend the Star is! We hope that many means will pass before we have descended so low as to have it thought that we are following the Star's example. It reminds us of the old fable of the "Fox without a tail." We are greatly pleased at the Star's opinion, but fear it is misplaced. It is not the past which counts, but the present, and now that the people of Bay de Verde have had over a year of Squires-Cooker administration, there is very little chance of a candidate of that party ever being elected there again. The Harbour Main elections will prove without a doubt, the unpopularity of the present government. And not only does this apply to Harbour Main and Bay de Verde, but to every government constituency except the North and even there, the "Warrior" as he used to be. The Star speaks truly when it says that it is going to put its readers' faith in it to a tremendous test. The last thing in the world that the Star is likely to get blamed for, is telling the truth, and in spite of its "widespread reputation for editorial 'vehemency,'" the majority of the readers of the Star, take its statements with considerable more than a grain of salt. So the Star will not believe that our little veiled in an ironic vein. Of course not! Surely the Star does not think we would be guilty of sarcastic utterances with reference to our Premier, who has just arrived home from a decidedly successful trip, at least from his point of view. Oh Star, how could you?

Stormy Weather Along Line.

What was probably the worst storm for the season was experienced yesterday afternoon and last night, both along the line and in the city. A heavy northeast gale with blinding snow raged along the Western section of the railway, and made it very difficult to get traffic running. To ensure the incoming express getting over the Gulf Topsails section, two engines had to be attached, whilst all trains moving used plows. The temperature, however, was not very low, freezing point being just registered by the thermometer. The incoming express has been delayed by the storm and will not arrive until 3 p.m., and the outgoing express was considerably behind schedule at 2 o'clock this a.m.

Public Memorial Meeting.

AT BAY ROBERTS. A public meeting was held in Bay Roberts on Monday night for the purpose of deciding upon the erection of a memorial to the boys who gave their lives in the defence of the Empire. The meeting was good, but no definite action was taken as to the nature of a memorial. Bay Roberts has set this town an example in taking action in the erection of a public memorial. It is for those who are not immediately connected with the saddest part of the war to make a start to do something in the way of a memorial. The memorial should in all cases give a record not only of those who are resting in a foreign soil but of all who took up arms in defence of Home and Empire.—Hr. Grace Standard, Dec. 10.

North Sydney Herald.

Nights President of Reid N.F. Co., Ltd. The North Sydney Herald of Dec. 9th has the following item, the latter sentence of which will be news to most Newfoundlanders. "The usual delay of the Newfoundland cross-country express, caused the 72 passengers to spend the day in North Sydney, the Kyle reaching port two hours after the departure of the west bound express. The steamer was fully backed with bunting on account of the presence on board of Sir H.D. Reid, president of the Reid-Newfoundland Company, and Lady Reid."

"JUST SEND THEM TO SEE ME," SAYS BOURQUE.

"If Anybody Wants To Know What I Think of Tanlac I'll Tell Them Pretty Quick."

"If anybody wants to know what I think about this Tanlac just send them to see me and I'll tell them pretty quick why I think it's such a good medicine," said Edward B. Bourque, 347 Lutz St., Moncton, a well known bricklayer and life long resident of the city.

"I had indigestion for years but last spring it got lots worse. I got to a point where everything seemed like poison to me and I suffered agony after almost every meal. I got nervous and out of sorts generally but worried especially over a pain in my side. I actually thought I had appendicitis. I had no energy and tired out so quick I couldn't do a full day's work.

"The fact is I was about all in when I began to take Tanlac and while I thought it would help me some I was never more surprised in my life than I was at the way it completely knocked out my troubles. It gave me such an appetite I can hardly wait for mealtime, eat anything I want and don't worry about indigestion because my stomach was never in a better shape in my life.

"I feel good now all the way to my finger tips and I can lay as many bricks now in half a day as I could all day long two months ago. That awful pain in my side has gone. Just to put it all in a nutshell I am a healthy man and it's only right Tanlac should get the credit.

"It's the best in the world."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, in Paradise by Mrs. Martin F. Byrne, in Upper Gullies by Heber Andrews, in Portland by H. C. Haines, in St. Joseph, Salmonier, by Mrs. J. Gushue, in Millertown by Exploits Valley Royal Stores, Ltd., in Flat Island by William Samson, in Jamestown by Christopher Haines, and in Lewisporte by Uriah Freahe.—adv.

Love and the Poison Cup

Some Famous Crimes Recalled.

(By GARTHLAND LANE, in Glasgow Weekly Herald.)

In view of the public interest evinced in the Greenwood trial we may recall two famous poison dramas in which a love intrigue, followed by the alleged administration of arsenic, were the dominating features. These were the cases of Madeleine Smith and Mrs. Maybrick. The verdicts in these trials gave rise to much public criticism in their respective periods.

The case of Mrs. Florence Maybrick, which provided the chief criminal sensation of 1889, is, in its circumstances, perhaps the most analogous to the Kidwelly drama.

The Maybrick Case.

Mr. James Maybrick was a wealthy cotton broker in Liverpool, who resided at Battlecrease House, Alburgh. In the course of a business visit to the United States he fell in love with and married the beautiful daughter of an American banker. This lady, who was destined to play the principal part in one of the greatest criminal episodes in our records, was, it should be pointed out, 24 years younger than her husband, and Maybrick himself, it is also important to know, did not enjoy good health. He seems to have been a dyspeptic hypochondriac, and was addicted to dosing himself with drugs, which included strychnine and arsenic.

The pair seemed to get on all right at first. Soon, however, a shadow came over their married life. The wife, it is stated, latterly had reason to complain of her husband's conduct in regard to other women, while she herself had, unfortunately, conceived an illicit passion for a man of the name of Brierley. Maybrick got to know of this liaison, and, further, obtained proof of his wife and Brierley having stayed together at a London hotel. A result of this discovery there was a violent scene between them, and it is recorded that Maybrick struck his wife, giving her a nasty black eye. Friends, however, used their good influences to smooth the matters over. Mrs. Maybrick promised to give up Brierley, and husband and wife appeared to resume friendly relations.

The Fly-Papers.

Mr. Maybrick, however, developed attack of sickness of a mysterious nature. These, of course, were at first put down to his weak stomach and drug-taking habit. Two doctors attended him, but his condition did not improve and in a few days he died.

It was only when Maybrick was nearing his end that suspicion fell upon his wife. A servant then gave information to the effect that she had seen her mistress sleeping fly-papers in a basin of water in her bedroom. It was afterwards established that Florence Maybrick had actually purchased several dozens of fly-papers from a local chemist, and it was ascertained that these papers contained a large proportion of arsenic. When challenged on the matter Mrs. Maybrick stated that she had extracted the arsenic to use as a cosmetic.

From that moment she was forbidden to enter the sick room. It was, however, alleged that she had entered the room in the temporary absence of the nurse and tampered with some medicines and meat juice.

The post-mortem on Maybrick revealed the presence of arsenic in certain organs—although the total amount found was only about two grains. Mrs. Maybrick suddenly collapsed after the death of her husband, and was seriously ill, when informed by the police that she was under arrest, charged with the murder of her husband.

She was latterly brought to trial at Liverpool Assizes, and, to the astonishment of the public, was convicted of murder and sentenced to death. Mr. Justice Stephens, the presiding judge, was strongly criticized for the stress which, in directing the jury, he laid upon Mrs. Maybrick's intrigue with Brierley as a motive for the crime, and his Lordship was, on leaving the Court, made the object of a very hostile demonstration. The sentence was later commuted to one of penal servitude for life.

Public sympathy went out to Florence Maybrick after her conviction, and many and influential efforts were made to obtain her release. This was not, however, effected till 1904, when she had served fifteen years of her sentence.

Glasgow Cases.

In the case of Madeleine Smith arsenic was undoubtedly found in the body of L'Angelier, but evidence as to how it had been administered was weak. The sordid intrigue between Madeleine, the daughter of a wealthy citizen, and the poor foreign clerk no doubt weighed heavily in her favour with the jury, as the general opinion seemed to be that the girl had been the victim of scheming adventurers. Therefore, although the purchase of arsenic by her was clearly proved (but which she, like Mrs. Maybrick, alleged was for cosmetic purposes), the good men and true, by a majority, came to the decision that the evidence as to how L'Angelier had been poisoned was not strong enough to warrant a conviction. Accordingly they found her not guilty of one part of the indictment, while "not proven," was the verdict on the other counts.

The case of Dr. Pritchard, the last man to be hanged in public in Scotland, may also be included in the same category. Although a definite motive for the poisoning of his wife and mother-in-law was not clearly established, it was amply evident that his conduct in regard to other women had caused considerable friction in his home life. The case of this man, while lacking the elements of romance and mystery which distinguished that of Madeleine Smith, was made more heinous by the fact that his two confiding victims, in their dire necessity, relied for help upon the very hand which was mercifully raised against their lives. The scene of the Pritchard tragedy, as the judge who condemned him said, "was all confined within the four walls of a dwelling-house in Sauchiehall Street, yet only in the darkest times of mediæval intrigue, when poisoning was reduced to a fine art and practised as a lucrative profession, can we find a parallel to the monstrous nature of its plot and the cynical hypocrisy of its guilty author."

Salvage Notes.

It is humorous to note in the public despatch, the resolution of the F.P.I. Convention in favor of Protection (save the mark) Interdenominational Education for Newfoundland. When we consider that "Mr. Coaker, in his extempore speech of two hours surpassed himself" we can understand what the sentiments of his blind followers was. Coaker, himself, favoring Inter-Denominational Education, of course all his satellites followed suit, and presto! the resolution was carried as Coaker opined. Verily! it's easily done. And then, behold the Advocate public despatches sends broadcast the feelings of the F.P.I. Convention, as dictated by its President.

We presume that the note of discord so noticeable in the F.P.U. ranks did nothing serious to the mental condition of Mr. Coaker—his being one of those cases where self is indifferent to harmony or its absence. We cannot, however, disbelieve that the Hon. Mr. Coaker received a rather big upset to his ideas on the National Bank idea, when one of the audience shouted out that he wished he had back the few hundreds of dollars he had invested in the Union Trading Co. Altogether, judging by reports of those present the 1920 Convention, the "most important of the twelve held," was by no means an harmonious gathering, and the Hon. Coaker's position in the Government alone enabled him to sway the delegates with his oratorical claptrap.

The schooners by this time are all home from St. John's, and all will have finished their cruising this week.

Messrs. Charlie Brown and Kador Stead arrived home on Friday.

Mrs. Charlie Brown, who was down to Flat Islands visiting her father, Mr. Job Lane, returned home on Sunday evening.

Last Sunday night we experienced a very cold snap of weather, the harbor on Sunday morning being frozen over. Fortunately for those who have not their wood home, the recent rain has freed the harbors, and given the belated workers another chance.

We have not received any newspapers since Saturday week—this day week—and of course we feel cut off considerably from news—political and otherwise. The weather has been unfavorable for the mail couriers, the harbors freezing, etc., still we cannot see why, on such occasions, extra men cannot be engaged to bring all the mail along, and so prevent this great inconvenience. We presume, of course, that the same man who can cause a steamer in the public service to lie up, while her captain is attending an F.P.U. Convention—so reported—can also forget to send the mails, even though the Advocate be present to a few outposts. —COM.

DISPOSITION DIFFERENCES.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12. Negotiations between five Allied and Associated Powers represented in Conference will be continued.

MILITARY AMBUSHED.

FERMOY, Ireland, Dec. 12. A soldier was killed and two others were wounded, one of them seriously, when a military party was ambushed near here Friday by armed civilians. The casualties among the attacking party are not known.

ILLEGAL BOMB PLANT RAIDED.

DUBLIN, Dec. 12. Dublin Castle's account of a raid on a plant on Saturday describes the factory as extensively and completely equipped with furnaces and machinery of a modern character. No workers were there at the time, but the moulds were still warm, as though bombs had been freshly cast. Two hundred bombs in various stages of manufacture were found.

DUBLIN SENDS ASSISTANCE.

BELFAST, Dec. 12. Scores of fires had burned themselves out in Cork by four o'clock this afternoon and the firemen were in possession of the ruins. This evening a special train left Dublin for Cork, carrying Captain Myers, Chief of the Dublin Brigade and a motor fire engine with crew.

CORK FIRE LOSSES.

DUBLIN, Dec. 12. Several large sections of Cork were devastated by fire on Saturday night and to-day. The conflagration followed the shooting from ambush of a military party Saturday. On the North bank of the River Lee, Carnegie Library, City Hall, Corn Exchange and other buildings were burned, while in the territory between the Northern and Southern branches of the River, much havoc was wrought by flames in the business section. Late this evening it was reported that the fire was under control, but it was said that the damage done by flames was estimated at between two and three million pounds sterling.

RAILROAD HOLOCAUST.

ARMENTIERES, France, (Dec. 12. Twelve persons were killed and thirty injured, in a head on collision between a freight and a passenger train. The collision occurred outside the station here.

WIRELESS PHONE DEMONSTRATION.

GENEVA, Dec. 12. Wireless telephone messages from England were plainly heard in Geneva to-day, when William Marconi gave a demonstration. CREW SAFE AT FLORES, AZORES.

Messrs. Fred H. Ellis & Co., received a cable on Saturday night from Captain John Doody of their schooner Emma Belliveau intimating that he had abandoned his vessel on November 24th and that he and his crew were safe at Flores, Azores. The Emma Belliveau was a three masted schooner of 263 tons gross and 223 tons net measurement, and was built in 1916 at Belliveau's Cove, N.S., by Benjamin Belliveau for his West Indian lumber trade. She was an exceptionally strongly built vessel as the owners built her for their own use. In August 1918 she was bought by the Emma Belliveau Shipping Company, Limited, Fred H. Ellis & Co., Managers, and was used mostly in the foreign trade. During June of this year she loaded a cargo of Pitch Pine at Jacksonville for Corunna, Spain. On July 9th she arrived here where a party new crew were shipped and Captain Doody, who was formerly mate, became master in place of Captain Edgar Burke, who was promoted to the Cape Pine. Captain Doody left here on July 17th and arrived at Corunna in 15 days where, owing to a strike great delay was met with. She left Corunna for Setubal to load salt for here and on October 12th left that port, and was abandoned as stated above in mid-ocean. The crew whom the message reports as being all safe are John Doody, Carbonear, Master; Robert Slater, St. Andrew's, N. B., mate; William Jerrett, St. John's, boson; W. Harvey, St. John's, (a veteran) cook; Harvey Green, Trinity, seaman; A. S. Green, Wales, seaman, and R. Buckler, St. John's, seaman. Captain Doody has been on the Belliveau ever since his repatriation from Germany, whence he was taken after being captured from Chesble & Co's schooner Jean, and is well known here as he has sailed from this port for years.

That Botwood Case.

A representative of the Telegram called on Mr. Brian Dunfield this morning with reference to the sensational story circulated in connection with the aeroplane at Botwood. Mr. Dunfield "was not prepared to discuss the matter at all," and referred our representative to Mr. Coaker, who is at Port Union. We, however, learn from other sources that the sum of $28,000 was subscribed by the local sealing ship owners, as their share in the Government enterprise. This was payable by draft on a London Bank, with a branch in New York. An official of the Aeroplane Co. it is said, cashed the draft at the New York Branch, sending $1,000 here to pay the wages of the men at Botwood who are erecting the hangars. A member of the Executive was asked if the alleged swindle would cancel the agreement to have the airships hunt for seals this spring, said he could not say, as the matter had not yet been taken up officially.

Gower St. Church.

The Rev. D. B. Hemmeon, Former Pastor, Preaches Profound Sermon.

(I.C.M.)

"The Last Opportunity of Friendship" Such was the subject announced by the preacher yesterday as he quoted his text from the Gospel of St. John, at the 9th verse of the 14th chapter: "Have I been so long a time with you, and yet hast thou not known me, Philip?"

This topic at once arrested the attention of the entire congregation, and it was soon evident that the discourse about to be delivered was profoundly touching for it dealt with a phase of human nature that is dear to all—that of friendship and acquaintance. The Apostle had been following their Divine Master for over two years, and they had witnessed His mighty works and heard His wondrous words. They knew more about Him than any other men or class of men could have known, and yet in a certain sense they failed to recognize His real personality. Hence it was, that when the Master spoke of those deeper things which pertained to His Divinity, and to His real mission on earth, His apostles seemed not to understand, nor could they comprehend what He really meant. They had not yet seen that His Kingdom was not of this world, and in this sense they knew Him not, even after so long a time. They had so far missed the greater and only saw the lesser, but there was a wider vision before them, and a closer friendship for them, and into these they were to be admitted in due time.

The incident of the text contains many good lessons for modern times, because some of us seem to be missing the greater by being absorbed in the lesser. We may not be aware of this, but it is none the less true. We are too fully engaged to be friendly, too obsessed at the office to pay due attention to the children at home, too much rushed to know our fellows. In the church as well as in personal dealing, this feature of life has been the same, and men miss the opportunities which duty come to them. They are so interested in the philosopher that they miss the man; so wonder-stricken at the magician that they miss the cure; so taken with the seen that they look not into the unseen—and after all the unseen is the real, while the things we see are but passing.

The link of fellowship between the Apostles and their Master was very close, hence He called them friends. Are we friends with each other? With our neighbors, eye with our families—with the children in our families? It may seem tragic to say so, but here are parents who do not know their children as they should. They somehow miss the friendship and companionship of their children, and dismiss the enquiry of a young heart by a curt word, or an abrupt sentence and perhaps forever lose the love of a pure and tender life. We do well to see more of the opportunities of friendship, and to know more of our fellows in this respect. "Have I been so long time with you and yet hast thou not known me, Philip," still applies and still has its lesson.

The sermon was thirty-three minutes in delivery, and was full of profound ideas, and was a strong reminder that the pulpit has not lost its power. The congregation was large, and the service helpful and edifying.

Appeal for the Poor and Needy.

The Salvation Army has always represented that great multitude of gold, hungry, sick and suffering men, women and children, for whom Christ-mas, without your help and ours will be an unhappy season of the year. You will know without our saying it that the distress in the city of St. John's to-day is abnormally large, and we are anxious to meet these conditions as far as ever possible. We are therefore again appealing as in past years for the help of all kind hearted people and I feel assured that we shall not appeal in vain. All donations will be acknowledged through the Press.

Wedding Days in Holland.

In orderly Holland where everything happens by rule the different classes of society choose different days of the week on which to be married. For some unknown reason Monday is society's day and marriage fees for that day amount to a sum approximate to twenty-five dollars. On Saturday's the charge is two dollars, or nothing at all if the couple do not wish a separate ceremony and are willing to join a group of twenty couples. At these group marriages the clerk reads the service once, all the couples making the responses in chorus.

Alexandra, the Queen Mother.

Several princesses were chatting together in the summer palace of the Crown Prince of Denmark when the talk turned to what they would like best to be their lot in the future. One princess wished to be clever and renowned; another, perhaps remembering her parents' poverty, wished for great wealth and power; a third wished to travel and see the world. But one said, "I should like above all things to be loved."

The speaker was Princess Alexandra, the eldest daughter of the Crown Prince of Denmark, who, as Queen of Great Britain, was to gain to a remarkable degree the love and affection of her subjects.

Queen Alexandra—or Alexandra, Caroline Maria Charlotte Louisa Julia, to give her full name—was born just seventy-six years ago to-day—on the 1st of December, 1844—the eldest daughter and second child of Prince Christian of Glücksburg (later King of Denmark) and Princess Louise of Hesse.

As a girl her life was a very quiet one and many stories are told of the economy practised by the household because of the Prince's slender income. On coming in from a walk the girls would immediately change their pretty dresses to more serviceable and less spoilable household overalls.

The story is told that once when visiting Queen Victoria shortly after Princess Alexandra's engagement to Prince Edward, the Queen remarked upon the fact that Princess Alexandra was always wearing a jacket and asked of the reason: "Well," said Princess Alexandra, "I like them; and then, you see, a jacket is so economical. You can wear different skirts with it, and I have very few gowns, having to make them all myself. My sisters and I have no ladies' maid, and have been brought up to make all our own clothes. I make my own bonnet."

Love is not usually an important factor in the marriage of royalties. Too often such marriages are simply alliances arranged for state reasons. Fortunately Britain has reached such a point of power and prestige that these marriages are no longer necessary and our princes and princesses may marry to a very large extent as the heart dictates.

It is said that at least two alliances had been mooted for Edward when he met Princess Alexandra, and the match receiving the royal assent, became engaged to her.

A story is told that one day one of Prince Edward's intimate friends drew from his pocket a photograph of his betrothed, but drew by mistake a photograph of Princess Alexandra. The young prince was much taken with the girl's charm as shown in the photograph and later saw the likeness again when calling upon the Duchess of Cambridge.

In the autumn of 1861 the Prince went to Germany and in the cathedral of Speyer he met Princess Alexandra with a party of friends. Edward immediately constituted himself her guide through the cathedral.

Several meetings followed, not entirely by accident if we may judge by an entry in the Prince Consort's diary. "We hear nothing but excellent accounts of the Princess Alexandra. 'The young people seem to have taken a warm liking for each other.'"

Alexandra's desire to be loved seems to have been fulfilled not only personally but also in her relation with her father's subjects, for when the betrothal was announced the Danish people subscribed one hundred thousand kroner as a dowry for their Princess. In her happiness Alexandra gave three thousand talers to be divided as dowries among six poor Danish brides.

The marriage took place on the 10th March, 1863, and was the first to be celebrated at Windsor since Henry I. was married there in 1122.

Such was the woman who was welcomed as few royal brides ever have been welcomed, when she came to be Princess of Wales and then Queen of Great Britain. She had an intense sympathy with all forms of suffering. She visited Earlwood Asylum once to find that the patients had been removed to another part of the building that they might not intrude upon her, but she quickly altered that. She was well-known as a patron of hospitals and for that work Queen Alexandra's Rose Day was instituted in London. On that day roses are sold in the streets of the city in millions, and the proceeds given to hospitals.

During his lifetime King Edward was always goodhumouredly remon-strated for she gave most of her income to charities and was often imposed upon by beggars with skilful tales.

Many stories are told of the Queen-Mother's gifts to the poor. Of the seamstress saving her scanty earnings for a new sewing machine who found one left at her home as a "Christmas gift from Alexandra." The old woman whose son had died and who was unable to continue her trade as carrier, built up by years of patient endeavor receiving a cart and donkey as a present from her Queen.

Queen Alexandra had a wonderful ability to seize upon the public imagination. For example during the Olympic games in London the marathon was won by an Italian, Dorando, who staggered into the arena in a state of exhaustion, only to be disqualified by the judges on some technical point. The matter roused considerable interest in England and although the judges could not award Dorando the prize he was considered by all to have won the race. Upon Alexandra endeared herself to all by personally giving the Italian a cup as a sort of consolation prize.

Her Majesty's humanity forbids her wearing osprey feathers and she had given full permission that her name be used wherever it may help in the protection of these birds. In a letter she said she would "do all in her power to discourage the cruelty practised on those beautiful birds."

After all as some philosopher has written, to be loved one must love and be lovable. Queen Alexandra has fully carried out this precept.

Her arrival in England as Princess to marry Prince Edward inspired Tennyson to write his famous Ode of welcome which concludes:

"Come to us, love us, make us your own.
For Saxon or Dane or Norman we,
Teuton or Celt or whatever we be,
We are each all Dane in our welcome
of thee,
Alexandra!"

The affection she inspired then in British people she has retained down to the present day. "Whatever they be" in politics or anything else, all unite to-day in warmest, heartiest wishes for her continued health and happiness.

Teachers Expect a Christmas Box

FROM SQUIRES' ESTIMATED SURPLUS OF $3,000,000.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir.—In a recent editorial of the N.T.A. Journal, I read there is a great deal of dissatisfaction amongst teachers over the cut of 4% on the Teachers' Augmentation Grant in July last. Well, sir, such is really the case, and indeed there would be more than dissatisfaction expressed, there would be open hostility to and formal protest against such a mean act on the part of the Minister of Education were it not for the fact that the Superintendents held out a promise that the cut of four per cent. July Augmentation would be covered in the Christmas Augmentation cheque, and hence teachers are expecting the Superintendents to fulfill their promise to the teachers in the Christmas cheque. Another interesting item to teachers I clip from the N.T.A. Journal that the teachers requested, in Convention assembled, an increase of 25% on the General Educational Grant, which request was refused at the time on the ground it would strain the financial condition of the country. Recently I have read an interview of the foreign press with Premier Squires, in which he figured the surplus revenue at the end of June last to be $3,000,000. In view of the Premier's presentation of the finances of the Dominion, the Teachers' request was only a sea-bite in the arctic. However, all things come to him who waits, and it may be that the Premier was only keeping back the 25% then to give it to us as a

St. Bon's Hockey Meeting.

The St. Bon's Hockey fans held a largely attended meeting yesterday after last Mass at the College. The meeting was for the purpose of putting a team in next year's Hockey League. The unanimous spirit of those present at once brought matters to a head and Rev. Bro. Sullivan was elected to the chair. The proposition of obtaining funds was easily disposed of, and the advisability of securing new uniforms was fully discussed. The election of officers had the following results:—

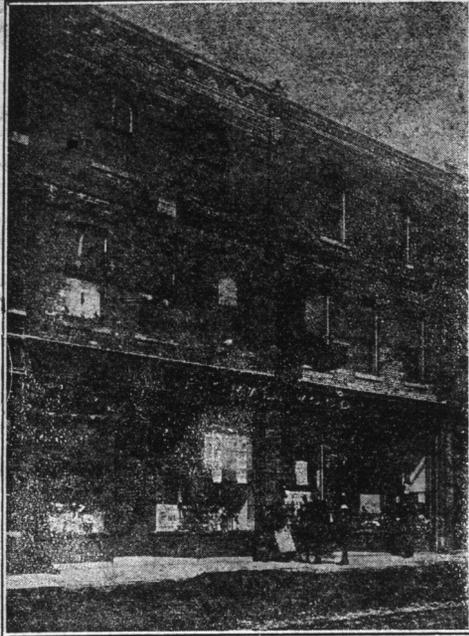

Captain—J. G. Higgins.
Vice-Captain—Dr. M. S. Power.
Secretary—J. G. Muir.
Manager—Will Hoan.

League Delegate—W. Callahan.
The material for this year's St. Bon's team is more numerous than any other and many new players will make their appearance in the line-up. After a hearty vote of thanks to the Chairman which was carried by acclamation, the meeting was adjourned with best wishes for the team's success.

Produce and Provisions.

(From Saturday's Trade Review.)
Codfish—During the week the total export of dried codfish from St. John's was 37,869 quintals. The S.S. "Lady of Gaspe" took 310 quintals to Halifax and Boston from Messrs. Hickman, Murray and A. S. Rendell. The schooner "Esther Hankinson" 5,714 quintals from Messrs. Job Bros. for Bahia, the schooner "Joyce M. Smith" 1,975 qtls. to Barbados from Monroe Export Co., Murray, Baird, Ryan, Baine Johnston and the Newfoundland Produce Co. The S.S. "Rosallind" took 7,974 qtls. from various shippers to New York for transshipment to West Indies and other points, and the schooner "Nancy Lee" 5,500 quintals from the Monroe Export Co. to Gibraltar for orders. "Jane Wakely," from Mr. J. Sellers, 6,216 for Malaga; "Over The Top" from Bishop Sons & Co., Ltd., 5,000 for Gibraltar; "Little Princess," A. Kean & Sons and J. Sellers, 5,900 for Malaga.

Outports—From the outports the following cargoes were despatched, 3,087 quintals from G. M. Barr by the schooner "Frank H. Adams" from Catalina for Gibraltar; 2,946 quintals by the schooner "Ellen & May," from Tibbo & Sons, Grand Bank for Oporto; 2,200 quintals from Patten & Forsey, Grand Bank, by the schooner "Thorndyke" for Martinique; 750 qtls. by the S.S. "Scotsburn" for Halifax, from Boone Bay, for Farquhar & Co.; 3,620 quintals by schooner "Dazzle," for Oporto from T. D. Kemp & Co., Placentia; 2,779 quintals by schr. "Carrie & Nellie," for Oporto, from Patten & Forsey, Grand Bank and 4,646 quintals by schooner "General Allenby" for same market, from S. Harris, Grand Bank. Total for Outports this week 20,028 quintals. This added to the 37,869 quintals shipped from St. John's gives a total for the week of 57,898 quintals.

Herring—There was very little herring fishing in Humber Arm and Middle Arm, but the storm that came on interfered and destroyed a lot of gear. The herring are a good size, and are the kind that find a ready market. The schooner "Donald T. Silver" is there taking a salt bulk cargo. There is a good demand for frozen herring, but the weather generally has been too mild to prepare them this way. M. J. F. Murphy, who returned from New York last "Rosallind" advises those who are putting up herring for that market to pack none but large. Prices are down as compared with other years and the demand is poor. Scotch Pack fetch only $14.00.

Cod Oil—What applies to Cod Liver Oil is true of Cod Oil, viz.—There is nothing doing. The quantity exported this week to New York, 12,512 gallons, is the result of contracts secured early in the fall. There is no demand, local buyers are taking oil from their dealers only. Until the business situation improves both in Great Britain and the United States, especially, in regard to labor troubles, there is small hope of improved prices.

Cod Liver Oil—The market both here and abroad is in a condition of extreme dullness, unequalled since 1914. It is difficult to quote prices as there are no transactions, except in the cases where suppliers are taking in oil from their dealers. It is believed that conditions will improve in the New Year, especially in the United States. At the present time there is no demand worth while. The export this week—all to New York was 4,650 gallons to fill orders made early in the season.

Pork—The Pork market is quiet but firm. Local trade has been inactive this week, as the output demand has been already supplied. The city trade is confined to Spare Ribs, of the various cuts, as Jowls, Family Mess and other popular pork products are not obtainable in sufficient volume at present. The outstanding feature of the Pork trade this fall was the abnormally large output of Mess Pork, the low prices of which caused it to supplant Fat Back and other grades, which were formerly so much in demand. Prices this week are, Original Mess $38.00; Fat Back, $45.00; Ham, (Choice) $52.00 wholesale.

Beef—Boneless Beef is now scarce in the local market. Owing to the depression in trade this fall the Beef importers "went slowly," with the result that stocks of all grades were short. The market is strong at the recent advances according to latest reports from the United States. The recent advance of two points on American Exchange premium means an advance of 60 to 80 cents per barrel on Beef and Pork, and future imports will be influenced accordingly. The quotations to-day are, Boneless, $34; Family, $36; Special Family, $38.50 and Plate $24.00.

Flour—The importations of flour during the week amounted to 5,432 barrels and 484 sacks by the S. S. "Mapledean" from Montreal and S.S. "Sable I" from Sydney. The wheat market advanced 20 cents a bushel in Canada since our last issue, which will mean $1.00 per barrel on future importations should the market hold this level. Meantime the local quotations on flour recently imported are the lowest for three years viz: $14.50 for leading brands and $14.25 per barrel wholesale for other grades.

Sugar—There is nothing new to report about sugar as the price is fixed by the Food Control Board till February 15th, 1921. The said price is 22 1/2

NOTICE.

TO FISHERMEN, LUMBERMEN and THE GENERAL PUBLIC:

I wish to announce that we have in our shop the only Vulcanizing Machine in Newfoundland, made for the sole purpose of vulcanizing soles and heels on rubbers and gaiters or any other part of same needing repairs. We do not do it in the old-fashioned way—by cementing the rubber on. We bake the new rubber into the old and put the design on the sole the same as when it left the factory. We guarantee our work and if not satisfactory, return and we will do it over. We also sharpen Hatchets, Axes and Butchers' Knives, also Skates sharpened and attached to boots. Give us a trial and be convinced. Outport work given strictest attention. Come in and see the machine working.

A Famous Scottish Sculptor.

Sir Joseph Noel Paton, the famous sculptor, historical artist, archaeologist, and poet, was born at Dunfermline, Scotland, on December 13, 1821, and although his art education was of the most desultory kind, the circumstances of his childhood and early youth tended in no ordinary way to the development of his artistic perceptions. His father, a Fellow of the Scottish Society of Antiquaries, and well known in connection with the damask manufactures of Dunfermline, and as a collector of Scottish antiquities—surrounded his children, from their earliest years, with old books, old prints, old pictures, casts from the antique, and whatever objects could stimulate the imagination and expand the mind. The locality in which the family resided, "Wooers' Abbey," a small but secluded, and singularly picturesque spot, one of the bends of the glen where stand the venerable ruins of the Abbey and Royal Palace of Dunfermline, with its burn, rocks, and thickets—was calculated to encourage romantic habits of thought, and to foster a passion for the minutest beauties of inanimate nature, which it is evident, to a considerable extent, stamped all his productions. Through his mother, also, a lady of great nobility and unselfishness of character, Sir Noel could claim close kinship with the chiefs of one of the most ancient and chivalrous clans of the North; whose deeds of daring in the Jacobite ranks supplied the earliest subjects for his childish pencil. In 1845 he gained the premium in the Westminster Hall competition for his fresco, "The Spirit of Religion"; and later became Limner for Scotland to Queen Victoria, who, in the following year conferred on him a knighthood. He won great success by his well-known pictures, "The Pursuit of Pleasure" and "Mors Janua Vitae"; but it was not only as an artist that he won his reputation, for his two published books, "Poems by a Painter" and "Spindrift," were both most favourably noticed by the press in England and Scotland. He died in 1901.

Monsieur:
For 15 days in the month of January I was suffering with pain of rheumatism in the foot. I tried all kinds of remedies but nothing did me any good. One person told me about MINARD'S LINIMENT; as soon as I tried it the Saturday night, the next morning I was feeling very good; I tell you this remedy is very good. It could give you a good certificate any time that you would like to have one. If any time I come to hear about any person sick of rheumatism, I could tell them about this remedy.
Yours truly,

Revives Lace Making.

The lace making industry of Northern France is gradually reviving. Before the war the French lace workers were centered in Valenciennes and Bailleur areas, both of which remained under almost constant shell fire during the entire war. First the German shells wrecked the humble cottages and the busy mills, then destruction was completed when the Allied cannon harassed the retreating German troops. Now after four years of economy the world is anxious to see the pretty things which characterized feminine dress before the tragic days of 1914. The lace workers of Ireland cannot satisfy the demand, and even if they could the Irish does not appeal to all tastes.

Unvisited by Whites.

A rival to Sheshuan the city unvisited by white men, in Niri Padam, the mountain stronghold of the warlike Mishmis, whose country lies northward of India, beyond the frontier of Assam. This, too, has never been visited by white men, though recently aviators have flown over it, and its somewhat tawdry secrets have in this way been in part laid bare. Rima, another mystery city in this same region, has been entered only once by a European, when the intrepid Needham penetrated there at the risk of his life disguised as a native fakir. He failed, however, in an attempt to reach Tawang, another holy city, situated about five days' march from Rima, and it remains unvisited by white men to this day.

Aftermath of Lunenburg-Gloucester Race.

Lunenburg Tells Why Delawana Lost.

(Gloucester Daily Times.)

With a deaf ear turned to Capt. Tommy Himmelman's repeated challenges for another meeting of the Esperanto and Delawana, Lunenburg has now come forward with a series of alibis for the loss of the international race the last week in October. "These are not excuses or alibis," Lunenburg says. "They are merely facts that never have been discussed in the public prints." These "facts" are that the Esperanto "carried no superfluous weight aboard. She left her hoisting engines on the dock at Gloucester; she was totally cleaned out, even to heavier stores. In point of fact, she carried nothing but her iron ballast."

The Halifax Herald recently printed the following Lunenburg dispatch, containing the reply of S. Russell Smith of the Gorton-Pew Fisheries Company, declining Capt. Himmelman's challenge for another race:

"There will be no second race this year between Delawana and Esperanto off Halifax or in any waters. Reply to the challenge of Captain Tom Himmelman of the Canadian vessel came to-day from Russell Smith, of the Gorton-Pew Company, Gloucester, in which the managing director of the American declines to take up the defi. Mr. Smith's letter follows:

Gorton-Pew Fisheries Company,
Gloucester, Mass.,
Nov. 1, 1920.

Captain Thomas Himmelman,
Lunenburg, N.S.
Dear Tommy—I wish to acknowledge your telegram of Nov. 16, as follows:

"I do not feel satisfied that Esperanto is the faster vessel and hereby challenge her for another race at any time over same course, or any course that we may agree on, off Halifax harbor, that would be satisfactory to sailing committee, for any reasonable purse that we and the committee may agree upon."

"Needless to say that I was very much surprised to get a challenge to again race the Delawana so soon after our recent meeting in the international series for fishing vessels. You will recall that at our last meeting I told you that we, aboard the Esperanto, sincerely hoped that we would be the lucky people to race at Halifax next fall, and we also hoped that our competitor would be Captain Thomas Himmelman in sailing the Delawana. "We realize that you can sail with the best in Canada, and feel that the sailing committee, when they selected the Delawana for this year's international contest, picked the fastest boat of the Canadian fleet, and the logical man to sail her."

"Allow me at this time to wish for your much success for the coming year, and with hopes of renewing our acquaintances at Halifax in 1921, I am,

Sincerely yours,
"R. Russell Smith,
"Managing Director Schr. Esperanto."

"Before this phase of International schooner racing passes into history, there are one or two facts that should be made known. Captain Himmelman issued this challenge, he declared today because he feels that his vessel was generally at a disadvantage, repeating his contention that she is faster than Esperanto. He lost, and to a large extent takes blame for not getting more out of the Delawana in the second race of the series, when she, lightly ballasted in light winds, had an excellent chance in off-the-wind work. The regrettable mistake in overstanding the Shul-in Island bell buoy certainly lost much for the Nova Scotia vessel."

"But with all this, there are facts that the average race follower does not know, facts that have not been publicly commented on. These are Capt. Himmelman's contentions. Esperanto was prepared to race as a racer. Delawana went into the series as she would go to the banks. Esperanto carried no superfluous weight aboard. She left her hoisting engine on the dock at Gloucester, she was totally cleaned out, even to heavier stores. In point of fact, she carried nothing but her iron ballast."

"The fitting of Delawana looked to preparing and painting the hull, replacing cordage, and setting up standing rigging, scraping spars and slushing them down—in fact, the ordinary preparations in fitting a vessel for sea. She even carried her rock ballast, but the history of the ballast matter needs no recounting. She carried her heavy hoisting engine in her bows, her runs were full of coal, she carried tons of cargo in this, and that and the other thing, iron, stores of all kinds; her pens were still in her—not a thing below deck was disturbed."

"These are not excuses or alibis, Lunenburg says. They are merely facts that have never been discussed in the public prints. "Of course, everyone realizes now what should have been done. It was harbor racing, not banks fishing. There is not a man in Lunenburg who has not learned lessons in the schooner race game. They will know the game next time. They have found that racing American fishermen outside, racing them over a hard and fast course at Halifax, are two very different kinds of racing."

"What Happened to the Esperanto? It seems almost absurd to even notice such a statement, and to invite discussion by printing anything about it. To the whole thing, it can best be said: What if it? Didn't the Lunenburg have the same chance? Did not Capt. Himmelman have the benefit of the experience of an elimination race? Had not the Delawana been in port for some weeks, and put in trim for the elimination race, while the Esperanto hadn't finished taking out her cargo after a five months salt banking trip? As a matter of fact the Esperanto was selected, gotten ready by a thorough cleaning and fixing up, and was in Halifax harbor in a little more than a week after the challenge had been accepted in accordance with the rules laid down by the Halifax committee."

It is also a fact that the Esperanto was fitted out, sailed both races and returned home just exactly as she left here on the 25th of October. Let's see what happened to Delawana. She came up from Lunenburg the day after the American vessel reached Halifax. Her hold was bulging with Lunenburg pasture rocks and according to the Gloucester delegation, she never could have won any kind of race in the condition that she sailed on October 30. She was so badly beaten that it was really and truly a runaway."

Then what happened? The Delawana's crew worked like Trojans all day Sunday shifting ballast, heaving overboard the Lunenburg pasture rocks and lightening her up until she was like a cockle-shell. Even in this condition with the lightest of winds favoring her, she couldn't win, and was beaten out decisively at the finish by over seven minutes, by more than a mile, although after she had given the Esperanto a hard and exciting race. Speaking about facts that have never been discussed in the public prints:

There was an incident connected with the second race that has never been published. The Lunenburg was allowed to change her staysail during the race, allowed to take down the old one, and set a new one which worked considerably to her advantage, a direct violation of sailing rules. Yet nothing was ever said about it. It is contended by Capt. Himmelman that Esperanto was fitted as a racer. It is probably true. Delawana went into the series as she would go to the banks, they say. However, it is hard to believe that any skipper would ever think of going to the banks with a vessel in such a condition as the Delawana was, either in the Saturday or Monday race.

Best Craft Won. It seems like nautical nonsense to presume that the Delawana, lightly ballasted in light winds, had an excellent chance in off-the-wind work. Her light ballast did work to advantage on reaching and running, but off-the-wind was Delawana's weak point, and if her light ballast had been of any assistance, it seems very unlikely that Esperanto would have beaten her seven minutes and a six mile beat up Halifax harbor in that second race.

It is true it was harbor racing and not banks fishing, but it was the Halifax committee that laid down the rules, selected the course, and acceptance was made without hardly a suggestion being made from the American side. The victors believe that Lunenburg has learned something about the schooner racing game; that next fall they will be prepared to give a real race, but if Gloucester is beaten fair, there will be no alibi, and we will be as eager for 1922 as we believe most of Nova Scotia is for 1921 race.
