Make Cookies With Crisco.

Notice how quickly and easily pure vegetable Crisco creams with your sugar.

And it is more economical for you use one fifth less CRISCO than you would expensive butter.

When ordering ask your grocer if he knows of any shortening besides CRISCO which stays sweet and wholesome indefinitely without ice box help.

CRISCO is the purest and most wholesome cooking fat you can use. All grocers have it or can get it quickly.

An Indispensable Favorite OR
Wealth and Beauty at Stake!

CHAPTER VII.

"And the best chance you have had yet, or are likely to have—a penniless girl who has been out for four years!" Mrs. Murray winds up, angrily and warningly. "You are no fool, Joyce, though you choose to behave like one; and you know that Maria will never ask us here again if you manage to offend her prudery or her prejudices. She is crosser and more fidgety than ever of late, and full of complaints against everybody and everything. She even talks of engaging some paragon of a kind confidential attendant, who will have some sympathy with her sufferings!" She said so to my face!" Mrs. Murray adds indignantly, adjusting her cap of dark crimson roses and black velvet on her fair grayish shining hair. "And I victimizing myself evening after evening in that hot stuffy room of hers, reading to her and listening to the details of her ailments, and tasting her medicines to please her! There were many thanks!"

"Poor victimized mamma!" Joyce says, carelessly. "The Viscountess Maria is a nuisance; and her spouse is my pet detestation among men; and the earl is an old noodle; and you and I are a pair of genteel paupers, hanging on to their skirts for the sake of our board and lodgings—aren't we?"

"We can't help it, Joyce," Mrs. Murray replies, mournfully, looking pleadingly at her daughter. "I have nothing but my wretched little settlement of three hundred a year to live on or to leave to you; and unless you marry some one who can put you in your proper position, my poor child, you have nothing better to look forward to than to end as a faded, neglected spinster living in a boarding house!"

"Dear mother, don't pile up the wrong so needlessly high," Joyce

Strong Bones—Good Colour
These are the signs of a rightly fed baby. So long as baby is fed naturally, all is well, but where this is not possible, cow's milk with the addition of Virol is the best substitute.

Virol contains bone marrow, malt extract, eggs and lemon syrup, with the salts of lime and iron. It not only enriches the milk, but supplies those vital principles essential to growth and development, and is a wonderful aid in weaning.

More than 3,000 Infant Clinics and Maternity Centres are regularly using Virol.

says, curtly. "I won't be a faded, neglected spinster living in a boarding house. Cheer up, mamma! If I can't find any one more to my liking than Lord Dunavon, with money of course—with a sharp, short sigh—"I promise you I'll marry Lord Dunavon before next season!"

CHAPTER VIII.

Yolande's very worst fears are realized. Aunt Sarjent has come to dinner, not in her peony satin and imitation mechin, but in a more atrocious dress, if possible—a befooned, be-frilled, trailing, rustling gown of salmon pink which has long since lost its freshness, lavishly trimmed with yellow lace in the last stage of limpness and rumple, and her whole set of huge amethysts decorating her wrists and neck, and even stuck among the palpably false plaits which are coiled up in a disc at the back of her head.

"I wish to gracious that my cousin, Mrs. Sarjent, wouldn't wear such light silks and such a lot of jewelry!" Miss Dormer says confidentially to trusty and sympathetic mademoiselle. "It doesn't look at all well—and Lord Glynne coming to dinner to!"

"Madam is not at all good style," agrees mademoiselle, in tones of sadness and regret. "I fear the viscount may think her some vulgar, unlady-like person."

"I don't know what he'll think!" poor Miss Dormer says, seriously ruffled, and never heeding mademoiselle Bella's light, hard eyes, which are twinkling with malicious amusement. "And I do wish she'd take to caps, too," she adds, pulling her own grandmotherly structure of lace and ribbon well over her ears. "Wilnot Sarjent is quite old enough to wear caps at fifty-five, I'm sure; and she'd look all the better for them."

"How peculiar and interesting it is," mademoiselle observes, with modest curiosity, "that a mother and son should have the same Christian names!"

"Yes—odd enough," agrees Miss Dormer, carelessly. "We are so used to it that we do not notice it. The firm was always Wilnot Sarjent & Son, you see, mademoiselle, and Wilnot was sole heiress when her brother died, and she is head partner and her son in junior partner—just as it always was."

"Oh, I see," the governess says, with clasped hands of innocent satisfaction. "How interesting! And how grand a thing it must be to inherit great wealth like that, generation after generation!"

"Oh, the firm is not very wealthy! But they do a fair business," Miss Dormer admits, with simple honesty. "And they are shareholders in this great company as well as Mr. Dormer and Lord Glynne—are they not, madam?" inquires mademoiselle, with the innocent air of one seeking information and instruction. "The Pacific Salvage Company—is not that the name?"

"Yes, I think," Miss Dormer answers, dubiously young Wilnot Sarjent has put money into it, but not his mother. She has no faith in anything but 'real estate and hard cash,' she says. A regular woman of business Mrs. Sarjent is," Miss Dormer adds, with a little chuckle of pride at her own middle-headedness—"I never was! My brother was trying to explain all about this Pacific Salvage—no—Salvage Company—to me; but, bless you!" exclaims the old lady, with her face wreathed in smiles, "I couldn't understand half he said! You did, I suppose, every word? You've a fine mind, 'mamselle!'" the simple soul concludes, in fervent admiration.

"Ah, madam, I must keep my eyes and my ears open and be quick to learn, if I want to earn my bread and butter, as you say in English," responds Miss Glover, Camberwell-born and bred, with touching pathos and a Frenchified little shrug.

Mrs. Sarjent's amethysts are the proverbial last straw, and Yolande's feeble hope of seeing the good lady attired for once in quiet and suitable apparel vanishes the instant she enters the drawing-room. Mrs. Sarjent herself, as she sits on the center lounge in an attitude of display, seems radiant with self-complacency. She is pleased to see her relatives again, she has a lot of gossip and news, and she is delighted at the idea of dining with a viscount.

Yolande kissed her, and greets her in a subdued manner, and says she hopes she is well.

"Well? Of course I'm well!" Mrs. Sarjent retorts, jolly, in a deep contralto voice. "No one but idlers are always ill! When people are ill, they should go to bed and stay there, and send for the doctor, and get it over, and then for ever afterward hold their tongues about it." She spreads out her box-plated bouces with much satisfaction and displays a pair of dress-shoes with big gilt buckles and huge ankles covered with pink insertion lace stockings. "You don't look up to much, child," she remarks, leaning back so that her amethysts almost disappeared in the fleshy folds of her fat neck. Your foreign trip hasn't done you a ha'porth of good; or you are pinning after your captain and his whiskers."

"Oh, Aunt Sarjent, hush!" cries Yolande, turning crimson.

"There's nobody here," says Mrs. Sarjent, coolly, noting the girl's blushes and tremor; "and, if there was, we're not talking treason. Every one will have to know it some day, Yolande, you know."

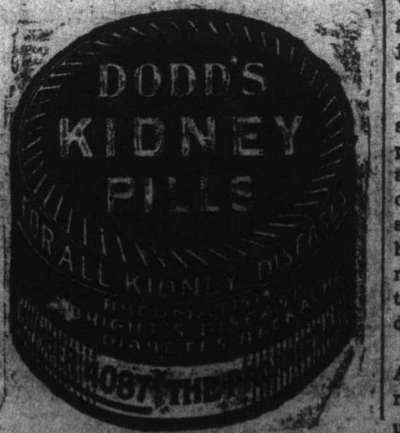

"There is very little to know, Aunt Sarjent," returns Yolande, coldly.

"Oh, ay—of course!"—and Mrs. Sarjent nods her head knowingly. "I heard all about it, and how you fell in love with one another the first day you met, and all the rest of it! Law bless you, child, you needn't flush up to your ears like that!" Mrs. Sarjent exclaims, pointing at Yolande's little ears, all red and burning uncomfortably. "I was almost crazy about the redcoats when I was your age myself. Mad in love I was with a young lieutenant in the Marines. But your trustees will look sharp after him, Yolande," she adds, in a businesslike manner, folding her arms—"mind that! An honorable, isn't he? A nephew or a son of an earl—a wild fashionable military man—he'd make ducks and drake's of your thirty thousand pounds in a couple of years, my dear, if it wasn't tied down tight on yourself and your children."

"Oh, Aunt Sarjent, please don't talk in that manner!" Yolande pleads, trembling, and tears of shame and vexation welling into her eyes. "You are altogether mistaken if you are talking of Captain Glynne! He is not an honorable, to begin with, and he is almost a stranger to me in the next place."

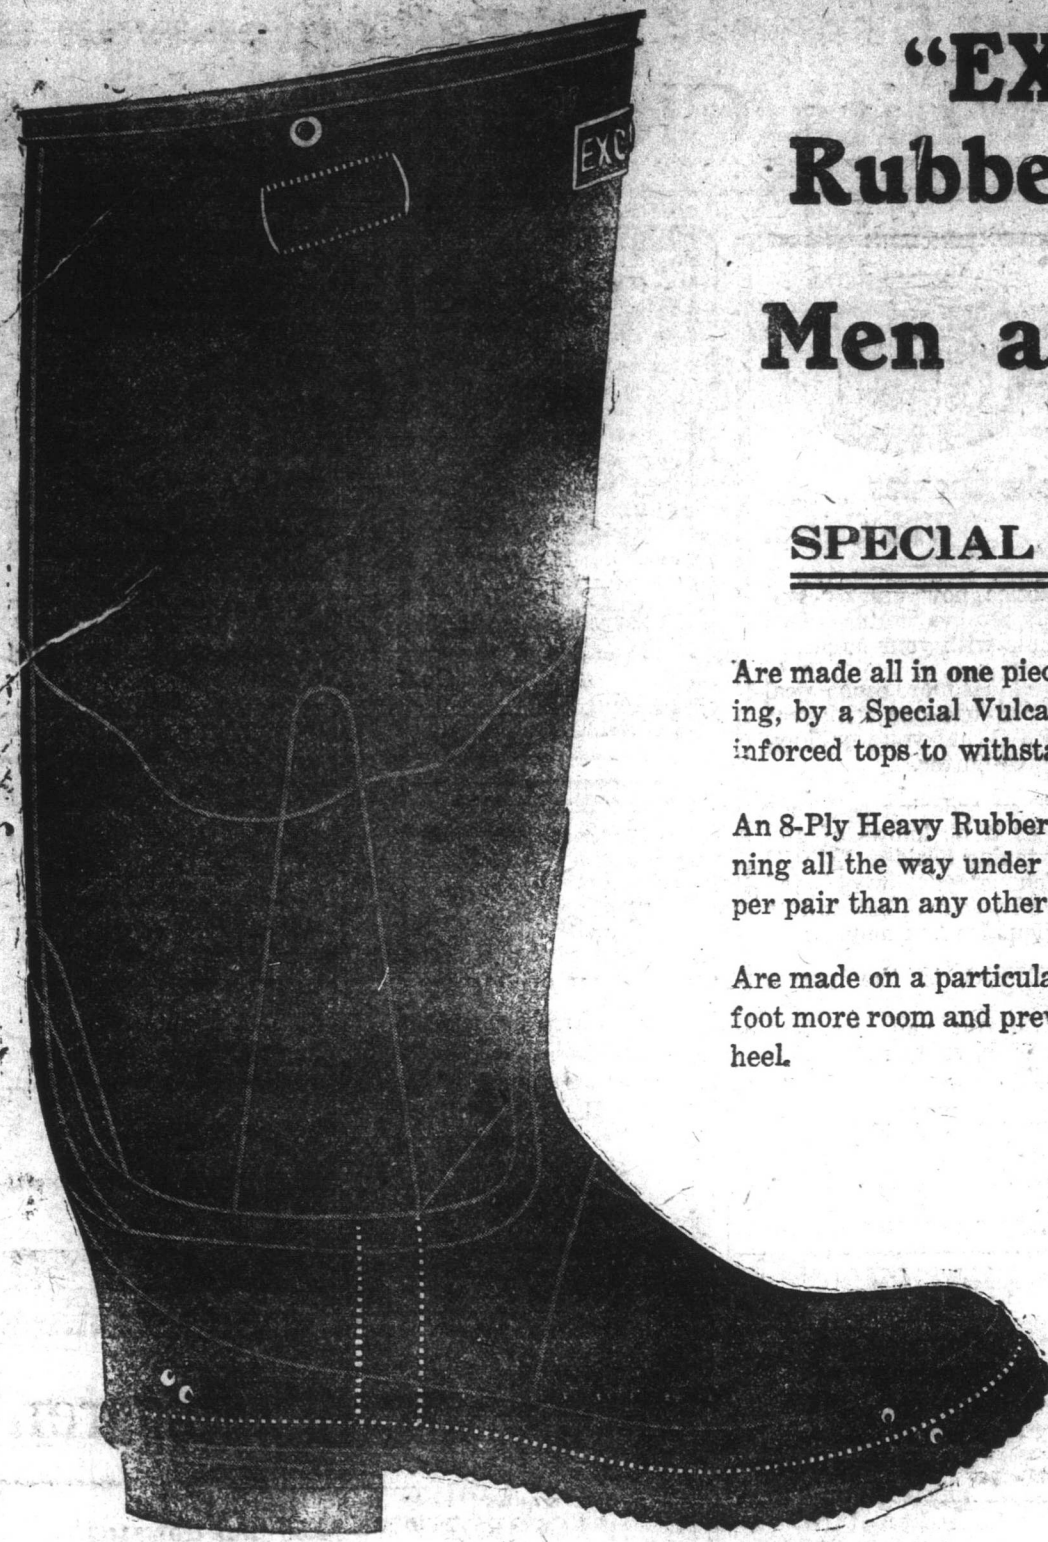

"And, in the next place, he has fallen head over heels in love with you and your fortune, and he'll marry you; as sure as a gun, as soon as he gets the chance!" Mrs. Sarjent interrupts, putting the girl down with triumphant complacency. "I know the world a trifle better than you, my dear; and you'll have your young swell after you in less than no time! He won't be such a fool as to lose the chance of a nice, virtuous young wife with a handsome fortune—never fear! That's what his uncle, Lord Glynne, is coming here for this evening, you may be sure," Mrs. Sarjent adds, with a knowing nod—"looking you-over-to-see-if-you'll-do sort of style, you know. You'll be very grand by and by, Lollie," she continued, starting and laughing; "you won't look at your city relations, my dear! Your poor mother never thought, when she used to be fretting about not being able to buy new boots for you to go to school in, that you'd be a titled lady one day!"

Fathers Were Happy a Century Ago.

Especially to be envied is the father of the 1820's, because he could plant himself on the heath rug with his legs apart and his hands under his coat tails, and thunder moral remarks at his children without any fear of being interrupted, says Robert M. Gay, in the Atlantic Monthly.

There is nothing that gives one such a sense of well-being as to thunder moral remarks at somebody; but the opportunities for doing so are becoming fewer and fewer. Now and then in an advertisement in a magazine we see a well-bred and well-preserved man of middle age sitting behind an office desk and pointing a finger at a group of cringing operatives as an illustration of what a course in well-power can do for one, and we see at a glance that he is being moral with all his might and is, consequently, a happy man.

But in real life we rarely see anyone do that—certainly never a father. When it is necessary for the modern father to be moral he tries to be jovial rather than Jovian and insinuate rather than incendiary.

He begins his homily with some such preamble as, "Not to seem to preach," or "Not to pose as an orator," or "With no desire to appear complacent," and as if, as not, the son or daughter who is listening breaks in encouragingly, "That's right. Don't come too heavy, father, that's a good fellow," or "That's a dear old thing."

Who could be moral after that? And is it really quite fair? The modern father has few enough pleasures in any event and it seems as if he might have been permitted to keep this little one of thundering at his family now and then. No one ever paid much attention to him, anyway, even in 1820; but he got an innocent pleasure out of it as well as an abiding sense of security out of feeling his feet planted firmly on the eternal rock of fundamental right and wrong.

He said proudly, "I am an old fashioned man," and all the other fathers cried, "Hear! hear!" To-day he prefaces his remarks to the family with the phrase, "I may be old fashioned, but—" and the younger generation giggles.

"Peacock Alley" a Sparkling Photoplay.

MAE MURRAY, MAKING OWN PRODUCTIONS, TURNS FROM ROSE-STREWEN PATH.

Mae Murray, who cut adrift from her erstwhile managers and started out on a career of motion picture making on her own hook, shows the results of her first effort in "Peacock Alley," a Metro release, directed by Robert Z. Leonard, now at the Nickel Theatre.

For more than four months Miss Murray labored at her studios in New York, and it was the busiest four months of her life. So many stars in their heyday arrive at any old hour at the studio, with everything all set for them to go on and disport themselves before the camera. Like royalty, their paths are strewn with conveniences and they can do no wrong.

This was what Miss Murray had been accustomed to during the past. But she changed all that when she stepped into work of running her own studio.

There were temperaments to be reckoned with, there were stage hands, scene painters and carpenters who had to be told what to do, and sometimes toM when to do, it in emphatic terms.

There were rainy days to be charged off on the profit and loss account, and the other slings and arrows which drive the average producer gray and distracted. But Miss Murray came through it still blonde and smiling.

She was assisted in her effort by her husband and director, Robert Z. Leonard. Her company includes Monte Blue, Edmund Lowe, W. J. Ferguson, Howard Lang, William Frederic, M. Durant, and Jeffry Lewis. The photoplay is by Oliver T. Marsh, the art settings by Charles Cadwallader and the sub-titles by Frederic and Fanny Hatton.

Its Benefits.

(DENNIS BRADLEY in Newspaperdom)

Where would the politician be without it? Advertisement is life to him, only that he is subtle enough to call it "propaganda."

The entrancing gown of a woman is merely the advertisement of her allurements and the cosmetic on her lash is the publicity she gives to the beauty of her eyes.

The popular preacher seeks his mention in the press and calls it an "uplifting force." The chorus lady views her portrait in the magazines and loves to see her "puff."

But we men of business justly call it by its proper name and we know that it is a fragrant word that called by any other name would smell as sweet.

The more one probes the subject the more one is convinced that all human life, even that of the anchorite, is in reality an advertisement, and that every calling and every profession—even the oldest of all—depends upon publicity.

Shorn of the disguising frills which it's declared for gratuitous wrong by political and social seekers, advertising is going to stand proudly and nakedly as the new Cupid with golden darts transfixing the heart of commerce.

Since we have unreservedly accepted this new god, it would not be amiss to consider how far have we advanced in the service of our worship. In this analysis I can write only of my impressions as far as Great Britain is concerned; but having regard to the infinite possibilities, it would be an exaggeration for me to say that we have arrived at any real degree of culture in the worship of this our god.

In many ways advertising has advanced little beyond the barbaric stage.

Not only is much advertising copy entirely uninspired, but the literary style is by no means as praiseworthy as the commercial intent.

That is because few men of letters have been induced to write advertisements. The subtlety of the psychology of advertisement writing is neither appreciated nor understood.

It should be as virile as Adam and as seductive as Eve.

The world depends upon its commerce, and advertising is the life-force of commerce.

LIGHTWEIGHT CHAMPIONSHIP TO-NIGHT.

Leonard, lightweight champion, will battle to-night with the dangerous rival, Lew Tandler, in a scheduled fifteen round bout. This is Tandler's second chance at the championship, having given Leonard the toughest fight of his career last summer in Jersey City.

ENTRIES CLOSE TO-DAY.

Competitors in the Junior Football race and road race at Mount St. Michael's are reminded that entries close this evening with C. J. Ellis.

OLD TIMERS' GAME.

The announcement that the League is actually arranging an Old Timers' game for the benefit of the Marine Club Fund, is creating a great deal of interest. Secretary Harris informs us that in addition to those already mentioned Messrs. Carmichael and Haller, would be in line, Messrs. J. P. Crotty as referee.

TO-NIGHTS GAME.

The C.I.B. will face the Cadets to-night at 7:30 in the regular League schedule game. There will be no change in the line-ups of either team since their last appearance. Mr. C. C. will referee.

JUST SO.

Optimization is advancing. Here's one offering $100,000 for a World game one-third as much as was guaranteed for a boxing bout.

CITY DEFEATS "CONSTANCE."

A fair gathering of fans turned out to witness the contest between H.M.S. "Constance" and the City crew and a picked City team on Saturday evening, which was won by the home product by a score of 10-0. Jimmy Young and Jimmie Galt doing the necessary. The contest gave a wonderful exhibition of skill and endurance. The City's crew, had his number dislocated, and the services of the John Galt were rendered. The crew of the "Constance" refereed by Galt.

YOU SAID IT.

WANTS DESIRES MEET HARRY WILLS BEFORE DEMPSEY.

Earl Angel Firpo, who added aged Willard to his victims is looking for more publicistic worlds to conquer. A series of conferences, however, will bring any nearer his prospective match with Jack Dempsey. Firpo, admittedly still lacking in the finer points of ring science, might get one or two more testings before he gets a shot at the champion.

As a matter of fact, Firpo, in the course of a long talk with Tex Rickard at Madison Garden, expressed a desire to fight Harry Wills. New Orleans negro who has stood out as a challenger for more than a year.

Rickard also conferred at some length with Jack Kearns, Dempsey's manager, but said that he had no definite word in sight right now. Rickard has Firpo under an iron-clad contract for a time-match with Dempsey, but under its terms, a bout with the champion may be arranged at any time before March, 1924, or later.

The agreement is extended. The Willard-Firpo fight totalled $5,712, official check returned him at Jersey City is estimated that the entire crowd numbered about 100,000, claiming that about 800 "rate-chasers" policemen, and other officials attended. Total receipts amounted to $428,000. Willard's share of the net receipts, 30 per cent., amounted to $128,400, while Firpo's share, 22 per cent., was $94,160.

WRESTLING GAME TO-MORROW NIGHT - CALCUTTA VS. CITY.

It can be arranged, the game scheduled for to-morrow night, between the Saints and Fiddians will be called off and a game between a team from the Calcutta and a City team will be announced in the daily papers to-morrow, if the same materializes.

SPORTS PROGRAMME FOR MOUNT CASHEL GARDEN PARTY.

The programme of sports for Mount St. Michael's Silver Jubilee Garden Party, a particularly attractive one, as will be seen hereafter. In the three day race, which takes place in the grounds, our very best distance runners are participating, and a great contest is looked for, whilst in the relay race there are already twelve teams. The order of events will be: 10 p.m.—Football Fives, 1st round; 8 p.m.—Football Fives, 2nd round; 7 p.m.—C.C.C.; (2) Fiddians vs. Saints; (3) C.C.C.; E. I. vs. Guards; (4) C.C.B. vs. Star.

Lord Morris and the British Empire Exhibition.

THE FACTS REGARDING THE ACCUSATION TAKEN AGAINST HIM AND OTHER DIRECTORS FOR "CONSPIRACY."

Last month paragraphs were published in the local newspapers in reference to an action for "conspiracy" stated to have been taken against Lord Morris and other members of the British Empire Exhibition by a Mr. Bradbury. As some sensational rumours have been current as to this matter, information has been sought from England regarding it and the following statement is given as representing the exact facts in the matter. While the action is described as "conspiracy," and the suggestion is made that Lord Morris and the other two gentlemen "conspired" to bring about the removal of Mr. Bradbury from the Board of Directors of the Exhibition, it would appear that his removal was the result of action, not by Lord Morris and the other two gentlemen, but by the British Government through the President of the Board of Trade at that time (three years ago) who is now Prime Minister of Great Britain, Mr. Stanley Baldwin. The case is being defended on behalf of Lord Morris and his associates by the Solicitors of the British Empire Exhibition, and it is not regarded seriously by anybody concerned, and it is very unlikely to come up for trial. The statement is given below:

Wedding Announcement

The following has been taken from the Montreal Star:

The marriage of Miss Lillian Jones, R.N., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Jones, Overdale avenue, formerly of Trinity East, Newfoundland, to the Rev. George Harrington, was solemnized quietly this morning, at 8 o'clock, in the Church of St. James the Apostle. The service was conducted by the Rev. F. Gwynne Lightbourne, and Mr. Martin, the organist, played the wedding marches. The bride, who was given away by Mr. Colin Tavernor, wore a blue georgette dress and a grey hat, and carried a bouquet of tea roses and lilies of the valley. She was attended by her sister, Miss Amy Jones, as bridesmaid, wearing sand-colored georgette with lace-trimmed skirt, and hat to match, and carrying a bouquet of sweet peas and ferns. Rev. E. A. Finlay acted as best man. Out of town guests for the wedding were Miss D. Lewis, of Louisburg, N.S.; Mrs. William Grter, of Danville, Que.; Miss L. Daly, from Ontario; Mrs. M. Walsh, New York; and Miss Emma Jones, of Granby, Que. After the wedding breakfast, Mr. Harrington and his bride left for Lake Meagantic, the bride travelling in a sand-colored dress with brown chinchilla cape and black hat. They will later go to Harrington Harbor, Labrador, to which Mr. Harrington has been transferred from his former parish at Lorne, Que. Mrs. Harrington, who is a graduate of the Jeffrey Hale Hospital, Quebec, has followed her profession in Montreal for several years.

News has been received in the city of the marriage on Tuesday, July 17th, of the Rev. H. L. Pike, the Warden of Field Hall, and Mrs. Colley, widow of the late Rev. Canon F. Colley. The wedding was solemnized in St. George's Church, St. Catharines, Ont. It is understood that a tour will be made through Upper Canada by the newly-married couple, and that after a visit has been paid to Niagara Falls, they will return to Montreal by way of the Thousand Islands, in time to catch the Macon for St. John's. The Telegram extends congratulations.

These conditions imposed by the Board of Trade were accepted by this joint committee of which Mr. Bradbury was a member. Mr. Bradbury was in fact present at the meeting at which Mr. Wintour's name was submitted for appointment as General Manager, and on several occasions he personally pressed Mr. Wintour to accept appointment. Mr. Wintour having been recommended by the Board of Trade.

Before long, however, it was discovered that Mr. Bradbury was acting independently of his colleagues on this committee and apparently endeavouring to create or resurrect a separate organization to run the Exhibition on lines acceptable to himself. He attempted without the knowledge of the committee, to register articles of association, which the Board of Trade, learning on reference to the committee that his action was unauthorized, declined to approve. Mr. Bradbury also arranged, again acting without the authority or the knowledge of the committee, for the issue of an appeal for guarantees, using for that purpose copies of letters from his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, and from the Board of Trade, the publication of which had not been authorized either by the senders or the recipients. In view of this clear evidence of improper conduct and the unlikelihood of Mr. Bradbury collaborating harmoniously with his colleagues, the then President of the Board of Trade, Mr. Stanley Baldwin, the present Prime Minister, refused to approve the inclusion of Mr. Bradbury's name in the list of members of the new Executive Council submitted in accordance with No. 3 of the Government's conditions stated above.

From that date, now nearly three years ago, Mr. Bradbury's efforts to damage the Exhibition have been unceasing. He has circulated very exaggerated statements of the services rendered by himself in the inception of the exhibition and the scurrilous charges against those in charge of the present organization including some of his former colleagues.

The plain fact of the matter is that Mr. Bradbury importuned the Government for many months to give their support to the Exhibition and to nominate a representative on the Joint Committee. The Government at length agreed to do so, but attached definite conditions, the effect of which was to impose upon the Committee a degree of control over the organization of the Exhibition which Mr. Bradbury apparently found inconvenient. To this is clearly traceable Mr. Bradbury's having recourse to the independent action which resulted in his name being struck out of the list of the new Executive Council by the President of the Board of Trade.

After the installation ceremony was concluded the Noble Grand, Bro. G. P. Powell on behalf of the Members of the Lodge presented the District Deputy with a handsome Walking Cane, as a slight appreciation of his services to the Lodge. The District Deputy in a few well chosen words thanked the members for the handsome gift, and assured them of his whole-hearted support at all times.

Since the institution of Conception Lodge some 8 months ago, the Lodge has been actively engaged, and is to-day in a financially sound condition, and has also a substantial increase in membership. Before leaving for the city, a banquet was held at the Victoria Hotel where quite an enjoyable hour was spent.

More Recklessness.

Editor Evening Telegram
Dear Sir,—What came near being a very nasty accident was barely averted while I was returning from Topsail to the Goulets about 8 o'clock last evening. While passing Doyle's turn, I saw a motor car coming East. I pulled to the left to allow it to pass, and quite suddenly another car came up from behind, and at a speed that greatly exceeded the speed limit. The driver of this car forced his way between the other car and myself. This means there were two motor cars and a horse and buggy on a road just completed for two cars, which resulted in my horse being forced to take to the drain. If an accident had happened No. — would have been wholly responsible. Now, Mr. Editor, how long is this going to continue? When are some of those motor drivers going to use a little courtesy towards their fellowmen? Contrast this fellows action with that of a certain Doctor I know, who stopped his car on Patrick Street to allow a horse and her chicken to pass. What kind of a man is it that takes hold of a following when he feels the steering wheel of a motor car in his hands? What is it that makes him slash through the street regardless of consequences? Is it that he loses presence of mind when he gets in a tight corner? If so I think it is a recent issue of the Evening Telegram, which was that before a license was granted to drive a car, a man should be asked to do something more than cut the figure eight, and that he should undergo a medical examination to find out what kind of nerve he had. Thanking you, Mr. Editor.

THE SHORE FISHERY IS UP TO DATE VERY POOR.

Surely the last two years have shown us the folly of destroying our woods and getting practically no returns. Numbers of cords have been taken by the fishermen and burnt, and while we do not wish to appear as upholding the breaking of the eight commandment, yet it seems as if the breaking in this case was a good instead of an evil, for it preserved other wood from destruction and often saved wood that would otherwise have rotted on the bank. (The time elapsing between cuts and delivery making it unfit for purposes intended.)

Judging dispassionately by results we are confident that we would be better off had the pit-prop account been expended in some more immediately useful, and less ultimately destructive manner.

Fortunately, the season is, as yet young, and we can look forward with hope, trusting that the turning point is at hand, and that the day of better times for Newfoundland is near.

The failure of the fishery to support is being demonstrated day by day and the importance of starting new industries should cause our Legislators to make careful haste when they in their inscrutable wisdom view the industrial vista.

TRINITY BAY.

"A Mental Ramble."

To an ordinary observer, interested in his country's welfare it must appear evident that there is something deplorably pessimistic in our country's condition to-day. One hesitates to be unduly gloomy and yet it is difficult indeed to view with cheerful composure, the continued flight of our people to other shores, particularly—and we say it without undue prejudice—to the provinces of the United States of America. In connection with this exodus, we think it right that a word of caution be in season, as from returned Newfoundlanders, we learn that conditions now are not as rosy, nor labor so largely demanded as in 1922. Indeed it is highly questionable if an artisan making his $6.00 or $7.00 a day in the United States, with its corresponding high expenditure, is better off at the end of the year than the average Newfoundland farmer, with his freehold house and lands, etc.

The shore fishery is up to date very poor, and the trapping season is rapidly drawing to a close on many sections of the coast. In case of its failure, what is to be done by our people? The Humber and other plants cannot supply the necessary labour. Must we again have recourse to pit-props?

Surely the last two years have shown us the folly of destroying our woods and getting practically no returns. Numbers of cords have been taken by the fishermen and burnt, and while we do not wish to appear as upholding the breaking of the eight commandment, yet it seems as if the breaking in this case was a good instead of an evil, for it preserved other wood from destruction and often saved wood that would otherwise have rotted on the bank. The Prohibition Set-Back in Canada.

SOME CAUSES, EFFECTS, AND PROSPECTS.

(By a Special Correspondent)

"There have been set-backs, and there may be again," said Ben H. Spence, secretary of the Dominion Alliance for the Suppression of the Liquor Traffic, otherwise known as the Canadian "Pussyfoot," in an interview I had with him in Toronto three years ago. I spent some hours with him on three successive days, and in that time became fairly conversant with his views and with the aims of Prohibitionists in the Dominion. He made no pretence of concealing the ultimate purpose of the agitation: it was to destroy the traffic down to the last vestige, and to make and keep Canada absolutely "dry" for evermore.

The method of the Prohibitionists had been for many years what he called the "nibbling" process; a city here, a district there, then a Province; and, finally, the whole Dominion. As a matter of fact, that process was never completed, for Quebec did not adopt full Prohibition, and after a brief experiment British Columbia denounced the policy and set up a system of Government control, permits to consumers, and sale in sealed packages. Quebec also has Govt. control. Now, the change over in Manitoba has brought about a most interesting strategic position. Canada, hitherto with a "wet" province on either flank, will have another in the centre, and the maintenance of the prohibitory law in other provinces will be rendered more difficult than ever—it would seem, indeed, as if Prohibition were now in turn undergoing the "nibbling" process.

Mr. Spence, in his conversations with me, again and again emphasized the difficulties of enforcing the law when Canada was "dry" only in spots. The "dry" regions did not affect the "wet," but the "wet" seriously affected the "dry"; therefore, a complete national prohibitory system was necessary before the best results could be obtained.

Another point which Mr. Spence stressed—and it was contrary to common belief in this country—was that Canada had been converted to Prohibition, not by moral, but by economic considerations. He argued that while the moral principle involved gave an impulse to the movement, it was the proved economic benefits that gave Prohibition the votes. The old tradition was broken down by the acid test of experience that Prohibition pays. He may have been right in his opinion that economics weighed the scales, but they appear now to have operated to the undoing of his own policy. Manitoba is suffering from lack of revenue. Her Budget last year showed a deficit of more than a million dollars, and her citizens have been disgruntled by the imposition of new taxes, while they saw with envious eyes millions flowing into the Treasuries of Quebec and British Columbia from the sale of liquor.

This may have influenced many voters, but one may be safe in ascribing the change in Manitoba to the natural and inevitable reaction which follows upon a state of exaltation. Manitoba first adopted Prohibition in the excitement of the war. That was in 1916. That form of Prohibition was only partial. Importation of liquor was permitted, and therefore no one needed to do without. Four years later the Prohibitionists gave another turn to the screw, and succeeded in prohibiting importation. It was observed, however, that their majority had undergone serious diminution; already the forces of moderation were beginning to operate. The plain truth seems to be that Canadians are beginning to realize that absolute Prohibition cannot be made to work. The embarrassment into which the logic of Prohibition has plunged the United States Government must also have had a powerful effect upon Canadian opinion.

These signs of change are not confined to Manitoba. The Moderationalists are making their influence felt also in Alberta and Saskatchewan. The Government of Alberta has consented to a referendum this year, and though the Saskatchewan Government has refused to allow a vote on the question, it may alter its mind when it sees the result in Manitoba. The influence may spread even farther. As New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta, and British Columbia were three years ago classed as one group in their prohibitory system it may be that the change will gradually permeate them all. British Columbia was the first to break away. Now comes Manitoba. Alberta and Saskatchewan are "withering"; that leaves only three of the seven stalwarts to account for. It is not likely that the Moderation League will be content with anything but a clean sweep.

Of only one thing may one be perfectly certain. Canada will not go back to old-time saloons. It was the notorious evils of that system which hastened Prohibition in Canada and the United States, and no one, not even the most convinced anti-Prohibitionists, would tolerate their re-appearance. The system to be instituted in Macedonia is similar to that which is now in use in Quebec and British Columbia, safe under Government control. The system may differ in many characters, for it will be noted that the Liquor Control Commission will have "complete control" of the detailed operation of the system. In this way the varying needs of town and country will be studied, and we may see interesting experiments which will be of much value to the Scottish people in solving their own licensing problems.

DANGERS.

Away from the summer.
Away from the heat.
Away from the noise.
And the din of the street.
Away from the autos.
Which dash up and down
Away from the dangers
Which lurk in the town.

Out to the country.
Where life is secure,
(If only the water
And milk shall be pure)
Where nothing can happen—
Unless it should be
One of the children
Shall fall from a tree.

Away from the autos,
To watch them all day
At the edge of the lake
Where they venture to play.
Where there is no danger
Whatever they do—
Unless they stand up
In the neighbour's canoe.

Now, children and danger
Are partners I'll swear:
Wherever you take them,
Some hazard is there.
Away from the dangers
Which lurk in the town,
We fly to the fear
That our youngsters may drown.

Motoring in France.

The number of recent motoring accidents in France and Belgium has been much commented upon, writes a Paris correspondent. A group of children, standing on the pavement with their parents, were knocked down. One child was killed on the spot. The drunken chauffeur can only be sentenced to a maximum penalty of two years' imprisonment and a small fine for homicide by imprudence. In this land of one child families it is not considered that the punishment fits the crime. In France all drivers of cars must have a permit. In Belgium owner-drivers do not require a licence. They are responsible to guests invited to drive in their vehicles however and this will tend to make them go through their tests like ordinary chauffeurs.

Safeguarding the Pedestrian.

In this country there is some intention of making the examination more severe, and requiring proof of familiarity with cars as well as capacity for driving. Automobile experts are not alarmed at the number of accidents, which they say is due to a fine Easter. Cars stored for the winter are taken out for the first time. Their owners are out of practice, and trouble results. At Walsingham the number of accidents is normal, by autumn all amateurs have become expert drivers, with a consequent fall in fatalities, they say.

Turkey.

(Current History Magazine.)

Aside from the negotiations of the second Lausanne Conference, which are dealt with elsewhere in this number, the most important event of the month with reference to Turkey was the passing of control of the Anatolian Railway into British hands. The twenty-five year right for possession of this famous Berlin-to-Bagdad project was born by a British syndicate on May 15th, when it brought up the shares of the Banque des Chemins de Fer Orient (Eastern Railway Bank) of Zurich, which is the holding bank for the Anatolian Railway. The British group, comprising five leading banking institutions of London, is backed by the Anglo-Persian Oil Co., which has large holdings in Mosul. The deal was negotiated at Lausanne. British papers explained that the London syndicate had not acquired all the shares of the railway company, but only those of the Swiss bank, which, however, were sufficient to carry a controlling interest. Most of the remaining shares, it was understood, were held in Turkey, and it was intended to offer to Turkish group also a participation in the business. It was pointed out that the deal was a plain business one and involved no kind of Anglo-German agreement, such as had been suggested in some of the French newspapers.

The Anatolian Railway, like the others in Asiatic Turkey, has sustained considerable damage from the fact of it having been in the war zone. A chicken "ped" is a rough crate usually made of willow or osier in which ready-dressed fowls are sent up from the country to market. Small

THE HOME OF GOOD SHOES.

Country folk still use lots of words not understood by the townsmen. For instance, when going into the garden to take a "trag" basket in which to collect the weeds or to carry the bedding plants. A "trag" is a shallow, somewhat boat-shaped basket made of split wood. The origin of the word appears to be "trogs," Anglo-Saxon for "boat." To uproot the weeds we still use the old-fashioned "spud," with its chisel-like blade and long light wooden handle. Speaking of handles, the two adjustable handles which are affixed to the haft of the scythe are called "dowls," and the handle of an axe is its "helve."

The Sussex term for the haft of the scythe is "sneathe" or "snead," and all through the South of England the heavy hammer used for driving wedges, when splitting logs for firewood, is called the "sledge."
Up on the South Downs the hurdles known as hurdles, but always as "wattles," and the wooden frames in which hay is placed for the lambing ewes are "cribs."
A chicken "ped" is a rough crate usually made of willow or osier in which ready-dressed fowls are sent up from the country to market. Small faggots, made of the light brushwood left over after the large faggots have been made, and tied, have the curious old name of "pimps." These are fastened with one withie only, and are used by the maids for lighting the fires. The word is found in Defoe's "Tour of Great Britain," and is mentioned in the Century Dictionary. In Sussex these light faggots are also known as "pimps."

In the Far West the old term "hind" is still used to describe a farm labourer, but its special meaning is the headman in charge of a farm where the owner is absent.

Walked Into Lair and Met Lioness But Still Lives.
A good example of the trials which engineers engaged in the construction of railways in new countries are called upon to face is afforded by the following incident which occurred in Kenya Colony. An engineer, who had been surveying for the new Uasingishu line between Soy and Hoeybridge, was returning to the camp when he immediately walked into a lair occupied by a lioness and her cubs.

The engineer, seeing that the lioness was about to spring and not having time to load his rifle, covered his face with his left arm. Almost immediately the lioness sprang at him, mauling him seriously and rendering him unconscious. When the engineer recovered consciousness he found that the lioness and cubs had disappeared and the two natives who were accompanying him had fled. With difficulty, however, he managed to walk to the camp. He is now in hospital, and it is possible that the injured arm will have to be amputated.

HENRY BLAIR

ADVERTISE IN THE EVENING TELEGRAM.

St. John's Motor Association.

The time when a motor car in St. John's was looked upon as a luxury has past, and each day it is becoming more and more a necessity. The advantages of living in the country, of escaping from the surroundings which are associated with one's everyday work, the benefit of the country and the sea to families more or less confined to the home during the long winter months, the opportunity it gives the amateur gardener to develop his hobby are but a few of the many causes that have brought about this change.

The steady increase in the number of motor cars has been beneficial in many ways. It has given the general public the advantages of quicker transportation, it has provided a new occupation for the mechanic and for the taxi driver, it has furnished employment on a greater scale than ever before to those who are engaged in repairing the roads. The improved roads have considerably reduced the wear and tear on cabs and other horse-drawn vehicles, and places hitherto isolated have been brought within reasonable distance of the city, and have become summer resorts.

There are nearly six hundred cars in the city, in addition to those in various places around Conception and Trinity Bays. To such an extent has the motor car become an important factor in the life of St. John's that an Association has been formed for the sole purpose of looking after its interests.

It is not, however, very creditable to the owners and drivers of cars that the total membership numbers about one hundred, and eighty only, not one-third of the total number. It is difficult when one considers how flourishing are the many clubs and associations that exist for the purpose of promoting some worthy purpose. It is in the interest of every owner to be a member, for it enables him to share in its good work, to voice his grievance if he has one, and he has something strong behind him in the event of his meeting trouble.

There is one matter which is misunderstood in connection with the Motor Association and which has prevented many from joining it. The idea is prevalent that the luncheons which take place, weekly for the Executive and Roads Commission, fortnightly for the Executive and general committees, and monthly for the members, are paid for by the Association. That is not the case. Each individual pays, and nothing whatever comes out of the funds. Every cent is expended on the purpose for which the Association was formed, in the interest of each and every car owner, and the demands are far in excess of the funds collected. If the matter were given a moment's thought, it would be realized by all that the amount saved every summer in the cost of wear and tear is far in excess of the membership fee, and the Association which is responsible for the reduction in their running expenses, would be more generally supported.

New Clayton Picture.

"THE PRICE OF POSSESSION" FINE VEHICLE FOR STAR.

For the first time since 1917, Ethel Clayton produced a picture in New York, her latest vehicle being an adaptation of the novel, "The Price of Possession," by the English author, Winifred Boggs. The picture, which will be shown at the Star Theatre to-day is the first Miss Clayton has done since her return from Europe. The continuity was written by Eve of the novel, which is responsible for the success of the picture. The scenes are laid in Australia and the London suburbs. The story, replete with dramatic situations, revolves around two nephews, one of whom steals a birthright and flees to Australia. The other nephew follows and kills him. His wife accepts the birthright, but, after intense inward struggles and numerous dramatic incidents she gives it up.

Miss Clayton's leading man is Rockcliffe Fellowes well known on the stage and screen. Others in the cast include Reginald Denny, who has just completed an important role in the George Fitzmaurice production, "Money Mad," Maude Turner Gordon and Fuller Mellish.

Unusual Weather Conditions.

HAIL STONES DURING SATURDAY'S THUNDER STORM.

Most unusual weather conditions were experienced in the city and suburbs Saturday afternoon. About 4 p.m. a lightning and thunder storm came on and rain fell in torrents. Following one heavy peal of thunder, hail nearly as large as marbles fell in the western section of the city. Very little damage was done from lightning excepting that on the higher levels a number of electric light fuses were burned out. At the dock premises the air compressor was put out of commission through the lightning hitting the air pipe leading into the shop and burning up the wires with which it was stayed.

S. A. Services.

YESTERDAY AT NO. 1 CITADEL.

The services at the S. A. Citadel, New Gower Street yesterday were conducted by Col. Cloud, the new Territorial Commander, assisted by Mrs. Cloud and the headquarters staff. The Colonel and his wife have a splendid record of successful evangelistic work and that this will be abundantly maintained during their stay in Newfoundland is a forgone conclusion.

At the 11 o'clock meeting the Colonel and his wife sang feelingly and Mrs. Cloud spoke briefly of her experience in seeking after the blessing of Holiness. The Colonel read several verses from the 1st Chapter of Nehemiah and drew some very helpful lessons from the Prophet's experience for the guidance and blessing of the people present. That faithfulness to God will be abundantly rewarded was shown by the experiences of such Bible characters as Joseph, Daniel, the three Hebrew children, and others. The Colonel spoke in an earnest and forceful manner which gripped the audience as he described the great power for good which a truly sanctified man or woman can become in this world and the blessings they may enjoy. Three persons knelt at the penitent form seeking the blessing so graphically described by the Colonel.

At 3 p.m. a meeting of praise and testimony was held in which a number of persons testified to the happiness enjoyed in the service of God. Colonel and Mrs. Cloud spoke and sang in their usual happy and interesting manner which was greatly enjoyed by the congregation.

At 7 p.m. the Colonel spoke to a crowded audience on three Bible Characters, viz: Ashan, Judas and Simon Peter. He described the temptation which assailed these men, their fall and its disastrous consequences. The redeeming feature in Peter's case, namely his repentance, was dealt with very graphically and the congregation was left in no doubt as to the desirability of seeking God's pardon for their sins and being restored to His favour. Many hearts were touched by the Colonel's words and ten persons sought salvation at the Mercy Seat.

Married at Boston.

The wedding of Miss Florence Dwyer, eldest daughter of Sergeant Dwyer and Mrs. A. Dwyer of the town, to Mr. B. B. Stratford of St. John's was solemnized in Boston recently. Miss Dwyer has been residing in Boston for about seven years, and visited her parents last summer. The wedding was a quiet one and the happy couple left by the Majestic and are at present visiting France. They expect to return to Boston by the same steamer and will from there return to St. John's where they will reside next month. Both of the contracting parties are well-known and popular here, and their many friends will wish them a long term of marital happiness, in which wish the Standard joins.—Hr. Mishap to Train.

The 2.30 train which left here yesterday for Torq Cove, met with a slight mishap which caused about two hours' delay. When about one mile east of Ruby's Station, one of the boiler tubes in the engine burst and another engine had to be sent out from St. John's to move the disabled train.

Motor Explosion.

THREE MEN BADLY BURNED—NOW IN HOSPITAL.

On Thursday evening last a terrific explosion occurred on board a motor boat while anchored for the night at Golden Bay, Cape St. Mary's, and as a result three young men named O'Neill, of Job Street, this city; Chessman of Rushroon; and Dready, of Fox Harbor, now lie at the Southcott Hospital suffering from burns received. It appears that the boat, which was about 4 tons, was owned and operated by three men of the city named Ryan, O'Neill and Coady. They consented to do, and after the anchor had been dropped the accident occurred. As far as can be gleaned, O'Neill, Chessman and Dready were fishing in the bay, first noticed the motor boat making for the land, and upon rowing alongside they boarded her and were asked to pilot them safely to anchorage for the night. This they consented to do, and after the anchor had been dropped the accident occurred. As far as can be gleaned, O'Neill, Chessman and Dready were seated in the engine room having a smoke and chat, when one of the party carelessly threw a lighted match into a tin of gasoline, with the result that an explosion followed, which completely enveloped the little craft in flames. The three men, O'Neill, Chessman and Dready received a severe burning about the face and body, and it was with great difficulty that they succeeded in getting out of their perilous position to the upper deck. Coady and Ryan, who escaped unhurt, assisted their companions to one of the dories which lay alongside, when they succeeded in reaching the shore a few hours later. O'Neill, who received the full force of the explosion, lapsed into unconsciousness after he had been conveyed to the shore. He was badly burned about the head and face and very little hope was held out for his recovery until the following morning, when he showed signs of improving. After their wounds had been properly dressed they were conveyed by motor boat to Placentia, accompanied by their companions, Coady and Ryan, and boarded the train for St. John's, arriving in town Saturday afternoon. The ambulance, which was in waiting at the Railway Station, took the injured men to the Southcott Hospital, where they are now doing as well as can be expected. The force of the explosion split the motor boat in two and it sank almost immediately.

Susu Arrives.

The Coastal steamer Susu arrived from the Fogo service at 10 a.m. yesterday. The ship reports very little fish going in Fogo District, and the outlook is not very encouraging. The ship brought a part freight and 13 passengers. The ship sails again at 2 p.m. to-morrow.

Wit and Humour.

A married man may fancy the radical bathing suits in a way, but did you ever notice he always picks out the old fashioned kind for the wife?
Many a man with two spare tires has no spare cash.
A St. John's man called up his wife last Friday and said he was going to bring home some fish for dinner. "Not any of those poor fish in the office, I hope," she answered.
And as a general thing most persons quit work on time.
As a general thing it is hard to keep powder on a nose that crackles when it laughs.
A boy that doesn't want to eat things that will make him sick, must be sick.
The man who can be patient while he teaches his wife to run a car, says Art Byles, is a saint.

Beautiful Hedges.

No horticultural product has gone through such a complete evolution as the large sweet pea.

In the headlong scramble for novelties many valuable varieties of the sweet pea family have become neglected, if not forgotten.

This statement is amply proved by the attitude of the gardener of to-day towards the perennial sweet pea.

This somewhat crude progenitor may not have a look in at a beauty show alongside an "Advance," a "Conquest," or a "Gloriosa." It may not emit such a delicate and sedative perfume as the modern varieties, the flowers may not be so well frilled or beautifully placed, yet it has attractions all its own.

And it is a regrettable feature in modern gardening that the everlasting sweet pea has become practically extinct.

You ought to plant a perennial sweet pea hedge; it gives you a dense green foliage during the summer months.

Early in spring it begins to grow, and it grows faster and further than any sweet pea hedge.

Throughout the summer it is covered with a mass of blossoms, and the more flowers you pick the more you grow.

The flowers grow four to eight on a stem, and are produced right up to the time of frost.

The plants remain green after more delicate varieties have lost their beauty.

Your hedge of perennial sweet peas will start growing when the annuals are being coddled in a greenhouse or cold frame. There is no bother with seed-boxes or thumb-pots, no tedious transplanting. You plant the hedge and it does the growing.

From this variety of pea you may get as much pleasure as from any of the newest sort. They produce more blooms, and bigger blooms, too, and bear them on much longer stems.

The individual flowers are extremely large and showy, and even if lacking in fragrance they are most useful for decorative purposes.

Seeds of these perennial peas can be secured from any nurseryman. Germination with them is somewhat slow, but soaking for 24 hours in water slips the germinating clutch into top gear.

Huge and profuse of growth is not to be expected the first year. The plant naturally seeks to establish itself as a healthy going concern, and this can only be done from the foundation. But in the first year they grow roots so large and fleshy that separation for transplanting becomes almost impossible. Hence the necessity of planting where it is intended they should grow.

After passing through the first year's period of infancy, the plants grow vigorously and with each succeeding summer become larger and more robust.

As with all sweet peas, the more they are picked the better they bloom, and it is essential that they be thinned out from time to time.

They want no particular care during winter months, but a little protection might be given from intense frost. A dressing of coarse manure will tide them over the harvest of winter.

If you are after something with lasting merit for an odd corner of the plot, introduce the perpetual sweet pea and add to the credit account of gardening pleasures.

Relative Naval Strength.

June 21, 1922.

According to a White Paper issued by the British Government on May 17th, the British Navy, though still possessing the most aircraft carriers and light cruisers, is completely outnumbered by the United States in submarines, destroyers and cruisers. At present the United States is also the dominant battleship power, but eight ships are to be scrapped under the Washington Treaty and five more are shown as being dismantled.

The present battleship strength is: United States 31, Britain 18, Italy 12, Japan 11, France 9, Germany 8 and Russia 4. Japan is to scrap five under the treaty, leaving her effective strength at six. The Italian Minister of Marine has power to dispose of three ships.

Britain and Japan are the only powers having battle cruisers, their being four in the British Navy, and seven in the Japanese Navy, including three which are to be scrapped. Four battle cruisers under construction for the United States are to be scrapped and two for the Japanese Navy are to be converted into aircraft carriers.

No cruiser is at present in course of construction. America possesses the greatest strength, ten in all, then France ranks next with six. There are three cruisers in the Italian Navy and two in the British. Britain is supreme in the matter of light cruisers, for including six belonging to the Dominions, there are forty-eight in the British Navy and four more are being built.

Only three countries at present include aircraft carriers in their navies, the British possessing four and the United States and Japan one each, two of these vessels being built each, while France is constructing one.

Great superiority in torpedo boat destroyers is held by the United States, the British being outnumbered by nearly two to one. The figures are: Britain 184, United States 313. Only two navies include torpedo boats. Italy possesses seventy and is building four more. Germany has fifteen. The United States is shown to possess the greatest number of submarines of any of the powers, while a considerable addition is still being made.

Marconi and Marrec.

IN RACE TO MARKET LATEST RADIO DEVELOPMENT.

Clear As Bell—Apparatus Tested Under Trying Circumstances Proved Success.

LONDON, July 14.—(United News.)—Two titans of the wireless world, one of the world's greatest expert in that field, the other an obscure inventor fighting against heavy odds, are bidding for supremacy in the newest triumph of wireless. One is Senator Guglielmo Marconi, inventor of wireless, the other M. Yves Marrec, a Frenchman.

Both announce they have discovered certain means of eliminating "atmospheric" and all other outside disturbances from wireless telegraphy and claim their discoveries will greatly lessen the amount of power required for transmission and reduce its cost from 30 to 50 per cent. Each indicates his invention will revolutionize present wireless methods.

Senator Marconi and M. Marrec are about to place their achievements before the world. It is only a question now as to whether the Italian or the Frenchman will first establish his new device and which will prove the more successful.

Marconi, after recent experiments in his yacht off the coast of Africa, announced he had devised a new apparatus, which, beyond doubt would require much less power for transmission, cheapen the cost, produce infinitely clearer transmission over long distances and eliminate all foreign disturbances.

"By the use of the new wave," Marconi said, upon his return to London, "we obtained clearer communication from small stations than from bigger stations in the ordinary way. We were in a region where atmospheric disturbances is bad, and if the messages had not been sent through the new experimental plant they would not have been received on my yacht at all."

We received successfully up to 2,200 miles, between England and Cape Verde, off Equatorial Africa.

Transmit On Low Power.

Even in its present state, according to Marconi, his invention should make it possible to transmit over 1,000 miles with a power as low as two kilowatts, or four horsepower—and with a strengthening of signals.

The invention of the Frenchman M. Marrec already has been seen in operation in London. In a noisy office, with electric trains and motor traffic creating a constant disturbance and without even an outside aerial, a message was received from Long Island, New York and transmitted directly to an automatic tape machine.

By employing a supplementary apparatus consisting of a series of low frequency valves Marrec eliminated obtruding sounds one by one with the result that the message is received as clearly as though there were only one operating station in the world. Besides eliminating "parasites" the Frenchman's apparatus suppresses every interfering message being sent from other stations.

A British company has arranged to market Marrec's invention. Marrec's will be promoted by his own company. Marrec says that he has purposely tested his device under the most trying conditions. "If I could install my instrument outside London," he said, "with just an ordinary broadcasting receiving aerial, I am certain that I should receive perfectly clear signals from clear across the American continent."

Imperial Preference.

GENERAL SMUTS' ADVOCACY.

General Smuts' advocacy of Imperial Preference in the Union House of Assembly has called attention to the important work that lies before the Imperial Economic Conference when it meets in October. The Mother Country has been slow to respond to the call of the Dominion for reciprocity in fiscal matters, but when four years ago Mr. Chamberlain accorded a preference in the Finance Bill of the year to the products of the British Dominions and British Possessions in respect of all existing dutiable articles, the principle was safely and soundly established. It remains to build on these foundations, and though it may not be possible, owing to the pledge given by Mr. Bonar Law before the last General Election, to introduce a thorough-going scheme of fiscal reform during the early years of the present Parliament, the Imperial Economic Conference will meet under more favorable circumstances than have ever before existed for the ultimate realization of this policy. While Imperial Preference is well adapted to promote and extend the trade of this country, it is important to keep in mind that it is not a British but an Imperial policy. In the past it has been desired even more ardently by the Dominions than by the Mother Country, and while it may be hoped that British opinion is now as keenly alive to the advantage of Imperial Preference as is opinion in the Dominions, there has been no slackening of interest on the part of the Greater Britain beyond the seas in this commercial bond of Empire.

General Smuts' speech is evidence of the keenness with which the Dominions anticipate the opening of the question at the Conference in October. The ideal is a partnership in trade between the Dominions and Great Britain, which shall be mutually helpful, and which shall render the Empire as nearly self-supporting as is possible. The Dominions are as anxious as we are to find markets, and in many directions the competitive element does not enter, since while we are mainly a manufacturing nation, they are still to a large extent producers of raw materials and natural produce.

A few weeks ago the Colonial Secretary, referring to the subject of Imperial Preference in the House of Lords, said that the principle laid down in the Budget of 1919 could be extended. With reference in particular to the coming Conference, he added that "we hope to be able to work out, in conjunction with the representatives of the Dominions, methods by which our inter-Imperial trade can still further be helped and encouraged." It is a practical essay in Imperial reconstruction, which, it must be hoped, will go forward until it is crowned by complete success.

The Birth of a New Age.

Mr. H. G. Wells in a new novel in which he imagines a New Utopia, calls these times on the verge of confusion. This is a good name for them, the great point being that for what people recognize our age as what he says it is. It is an age of confusion, of disturbance, when most people know better and cannot yet make their knowledge work out. The combat between old ideas and new ones drags along from day to day. We see it everywhere, in the Ruhr, in the government of this city of New York, in the strike of the bricklayers, in the discussion of the 12-hour days in steel mills, in the daily record of misbehavior in the newspapers, in the fight about rum, and the contentions of the clergy. There is a new age struggling to be born and we are all more or less travailing over it. Taxes are high; the price of living is high, and wages are high, which is just a part of the process. All these labor pains are irksome, but after a while we may get a better world and possibly our children will think it worth the effort. The trouble now is not so much that men are unduly stupid or unduly selfish, but that they are tied up to ideas that have become obsolete and from which it is a devil of a job to break away.—Life.

Labor at the Cross Roads

June 21, 1922.

In "Labor at the Cross Roads," Mr. Macnamara, lately Minister of Labor in Great Britain, says, "I am profoundly convinced that the Socialist policy is bound to prove ashes in the mouth for the very people in whose behalf it is put forward." He continues, "What the workman wants is a square deal between Capital and Labor. He wants better conditions for the poorer members of the community. He is vehemently assured that Socialism alone can satisfy his aspirations. Wherever he believes this he votes for it of course. But in fact he is voting for one thing and intending another. Those who have committed him and his organization to Karl Marx do not know what they are after. They want to upset the existing system and replace it by something entirely and fundamentally different. It is not at all necessary to do that to meet the aspirations of the average workman. And what is more if you succeed in doing it, so far from meeting his aspirations, you will leave him with his last and worse than his first." Mr. Macnamara supports his position by a wealth of fact and argument and by an honest examination of Socialistic experiments which have ended in failure and disillusionment, in dust and ashes.

A METRO SUPER-SPECIAL IN 9 SPLENDID ACTS—9

Songs of a British Airman.

A POET WHO SMILES THROUGH SUFFERING.

"In a small bungalow at Liphook, in Hampshire, a broken airman lies upon a bed from which he will not rise again. His spine is fractured and he cannot shake hands with a visitor. For nearly seven years he has been helpless. He now lies under a window through which he can see the Downs and the sunshine, and his old caravans of clouds. Jimmy Howcroft is his name."

So writes "John o' London" in his introduction to "The Songs of a Broken Airman" (Hodder and Stoughton).

Dictated Poems.

Howcroft was flying as an observer in France in September, 1915, when his machine crashed. Since then he has been paralyzed, and though he is in constant pain his thoughts are clear, his heart buoyant. His tender and undaunted mother, who lost her only other boy in the war, is with him, and so is the nurse who looked after him in hospital. She gave up her regular career to tend him, and as he is unable to write, it is to her he dictates his poems.

One of his verses is dedicated to "My nurse and other friends":—

It's a little bit of heaven,
Ah! this is what I find;
And I want to share my heaven
With the best of all my kind.

The birds are sweetly singing,
There is laughter in the trees,
And the sunbeams keep on dancing
To the music in the breeze.

Ah! the air is full of freedom,
All the world is full of cheer;
I am writing this to thank you
For you helped to place me here.

The poet sees only the happiness of life. His verses breathe of the beauty of Nature, the love of little children, and fortitude and hope are never absent from them.

In "Life," suggested by a game of chess, he writes:—

The stage of life is set, the play
Slowly evolves from day to day,
Some parts are small, and some are great,
Decreed by unrelenting fate.
No matter what our lot may be,
This each of us may plainly see:
The game's most poor, most humble pawn
May wait with hope until the dawn.
Five Years in Bed.

One of his best poems is "The Fisher Wife":—

Sleep, my baby; over the foam
Soft winds are blowing your father home,
Away his sail in the distance gleams,
The moonlight sea like a pathway seems
From the bow of his ship to the harbour mouth;
Oh, I bless the wind when it blows from the south!

Sleep, by baby, father will be
Borne to his babe o'er the breast of the sea,
Kindly the south winds, kindly the tide,
That carries the fisherman home to his bride,
Safe to his rest through the harbour age struggling to be born and we are all more or less travailing over it. Taxes are high; the price of living is high, and wages are high, which is just a part of the process. All these labor pains are irksome, but after a while we may get a better world and possibly our children will think it worth the effort. The trouble now is not so much that men are unduly stupid or unduly selfish, but that they are tied up to ideas that have become obsolete and from which it is a devil of a job to break away.—Life.

SIDETALKS.

HAVE YOU READ YOURS!

I did some interesting reading the other day. I dug out half a dozen insurance policies of different kinds and read them through.

I found some in them quite as interesting as any in my daily paper.

Would you answer them?

And then there's your automobile insurance. Did you know that in many policies the company refuses to pay liability insurances if your automobile is being driven by a child under 16.

At all Dealers. GERALD S. DOYLE, DISTRIBUTOR.

should ensue, could you collect the insurance?

In regard to your life insurance, do you know whether it would be payable in case you went to war?

Can You Go Up In An Airship?

Whether it would be invalidated if you went up in an airplane?

What are the provisions in case of suicide?

And then there's your automobile insurance. Did you know that in many policies the company refuses to pay liability insurances if your automobile is being driven by a child under 16.

or under the legal age in your state? Also if your machine is towing a trailer or other vehicle?

Is this true of your policy? Did you know that certain theft and fire policies protect also against the loss of a machine if it is being transported on a ship or on a train and the ship sinks or the train collides?

Did you know that certain theft policies would not protect you if your own chauffeur stole the car? That they would not protect in case the loss of a car occurred at the time of a riot?

A Bitter Lesson.

It statistics could be gathered as to how many people who have insurance policies have ever made any effort to find out what is in them, I think they would be startling.

Of course most of us come through all right. Either the policy never had to be paid or we never run up against the clauses that would make trouble for us. But what a bitter experience it must be when one learns too late something one should have found out when the policy was taken out.

Weather's Vagaries.

We know so little about the deeper laws and causes at work in meteorology that we cannot say why there should at this midsummer be snow in the Italian lake district, almost down to the water edge, abnormal cold in Switzerland, and absence of heat in the almost invariably sweltering Red Sea. Whatever cause is at work must plainly be a cause with world-wide effects.—London Daily Mail.

White Lady Liontamer.

NOW SIX'S BODYGUARD.

PARIS, July 13.—(United Press)—Battling Siki, the dark-skinned ring warrior of Europe, has a new bodyguard to do his safe fighting for him. She is a lion tamer, white and pretty, who slapped a diner in a Montmartre dive recently, and then punched the proprietor for interfering in a private fight. Siki, usually in the midst of free-for-all fights, didn't raise a hand.

The Senegalese conqueror of Georges Carpentier, accompanied his woman companion to the police station.

Siki has been challenged by the Italian heavyweight, Spalla, for a fight at the time of the European Grand Prix Automobile race, to be held in September.

THE FAULTFINDERS.

As I do my daily walking, to reduce my ample size, I hear people knocking, finding fault with other people's houses.

As I do my daily walking, to reduce my ample size, I hear people knocking, finding fault with other people's houses. Jasper finds a house is building, and intends to paint it green, with a stripe of ornate gilding round about each window screen. And the knockers stand and view it, watch each timber put in place, and they cry, "Oh, cheer! Beshrew it! Such a house is a disgrace! For the doors are out of kilter and the chimney is too low, and the winter rains will filter through those shingles, don't you know; and he's gone and put the cellar where the attic ought to be, and it sure would jar a feller, such a crazy house to see." Jasper hears the idle jeering of his neighbors, at the fence, and his heart is doubting, fearing, he has fantods most intense. And his pleasure is departed, all the pride he lately knew; when his building job was started, with a cozy home in view. And his jaded soul grows sicker as he toils on day by day, for the knocking of the kicker drives the worker's joy away. There should be a law imposing fifty years in yonder pen on the rent whose dreary prosing chills the hearts of fellow men.

This Little Boy

WILL REMEMBER HIS TRIP TO BIG CITY.

There is a little boy in Birmingham who will never forget his trip to London Town, in spite of the fact that he is only a year and nine months old. His name is E. Thompson. When he was crossing Westminster Bridge he met with a very curious accident, the result of his curiosity.

Toddling along the pavement behind his mother, he stopped to look at the water through the low trefoil-shaped parapet, and in order to get a better view, succeeded in pushing his head through one of the openings.

For the moment he was probably one of the happiest boys in creation until he found that he could not be withdrawn. Then he cried and screamed. A crowd collected. The mother fainted. The police and an ambulance arrived, and after a lot of manipulation the boy was pulled back again to the pavement.

At St. Thomas's Hospital he was treated for a bruised head, and returned later to Birmingham a sadder and wiser child.—Exchange.

Famous Shrine

as Target for Navy.

A naval secret 60 years old is revealed by Lord Teignmouth in the current number of "Chambers's Journal."

H.M.S. Gibraltar, the last wooden line-of-battle ship, was undergoing gunnery practice which, says Lord Teignmouth, "nearly resulted in a tragedy which would have shocked the world."

The ship was off Cape Colonna, on the headland of which is the ancient temple of Athena. A well-defined rock at the base of the cliff was indicated to the gun-captains as the target, and all hands stood at the "ready," awaiting the bugle call to "let drive."

Apparently the temple proved irresistible to some of the more eager gunmen.

No Tales, No Trouble. "Alas," soliloquised Lord Teignmouth, "that I should be the tale-bearer, and have to confess the evil deed. After fire had been opened, and several broadsides 'eased off,' a sudden friendly rift in the smoke disclosed a 32-pounder shot, bounding about the base of Athena's time-honored shrine.

"In spite of the most determined efforts to discover the would-be destroyers of this hallowed shrine, not a man out of the hundreds who must have been cognizant of the guilty parties, was mean enough to give his pals away; and to this day their names have never been whispered.

"Mercifully," adds Lord Teignmouth, "no damage was done," but "the lesson was taken to heart, and never again was the vicinity of a temple taken for target practice."
