Christmas Stockings.

Will you add to the Christmas cheer of the wounded and ill men in Canadian hospitals overseas? You can do so by sending a Christmas stocking to them. If you call at the local Red Cross rooms on Chipman Hill, socks will be given to you, which you are asked to fill and return. These will be sent to Lady Drummond, who will distribute them among the hospitals. Small games, cards, bright ties, chocolate in various forms, tobacco, cigarettes, paper, pencils, gum, puzzles, any small thing that will interest and amuse an invalid should be included among your gifts. It is asked that the things be not expensive, as the men enjoy the simple gifts, and the demands for necessities are now very heavy.

You're prepared and I'm resigned. Die now."

SERIOUS WARNING TO GERMANY IN COURSE TAKEN BY ROUMANIA

Dr. Naumann Calls it Judgment of Defeat, Tells Germans They Must Prepare Anew

London, Sept. 20—Friedrich Naumann, author of "Central Europe," who wrote recently an article on the weakening of German popular opinion about the war, published another interesting article in a recent issue of his weekly paper, Die Hilfe, and it is reproduced in part in The Times. The article is entitled "The Second Beginning," and makes a candid statement concerning the entrance of Rumania into the war.

Dr. Naumann begins by saying that Germany is now brought face to face with what she expected at the beginning of the war—"the real danger." He proceeds to analyze the gravity of the situation and the grave seriousness of the public situation is hemming us about on all sides. This is the moment at which our moral forces must be aroused a second time, and this time with all emphasis.

Dr. Naumann then develops his argument about the intervention of Rumania, saying: "After two years of vacillation, the Rumanian Government has subscribed to the Central European cause. It is not that a division of Austro-Hungarian territories can now begin. It is only upon this assumption that the Rumanian invasion of"

HINDENBURG SEEKS TO INSPIRE CONFIDENCE

"Justified in Hoping" For Victory But Wants More Money to Carry on War

German Grand Headquarters of the East, Sept. 20—Field Marshal von Hindenburg, after his return from west front received German correspondents and had a long talk.

"Hats off for every grander fighting on our western front," said the field marshal, who is full of admiration for the indomitable courage and tenacity of the troops opposing the French and English. "At the same time he has been deeply impressed with the great difficulty of the work yet to be accomplished there."

"But where there's a will there's a way," he declared with quiet confidence, "and we shall find that way, and once found we shall draw the consequences unhesitatingly. For that way the difficulties are great indeed, but we are well justified in hoping we are winning."

Seemingly he is consoling himself with the thought that his troops, generally, if not to a great extent, are shared by the enemy, and somewhat in the manner of a wily business man he continued:

"If it rains on our side so that the teams can't be moved and the horses refuse to budge, it generally rains in the enemy's side, too. Who says things ought to go like that? (The field marshal described a straight line upward in the air with his finger.) "Generally things go like this," (and he described a zigzag line in the air.) "There's one thing, however, we must have once more, namely, money. One must have money to carry on war, but I have the strongest hope that once again our war loan will be a great success and certainly disprove our enemies' expectation, because we stand well in the north, south, east and west."

The War Situation

(By the Military Expert of the New York Times.) Following closely on the heels of the French successes of the last few days comes the British attack on the entire line engaged in the battle of the Somme. This is the line from Thiepval to Comblies, where the British line ties up with that of the French. The first blow appears to have been struck against Thiepval. Here the same old obstacle which has held up the British advance on the Ancre for weeks was encountered, and the British swung to the east and north after gaining another small part of the Thiepval defenses. In this change of direction considerable progress was made. Courcellette was taken, and with this village over a mile of the Bapaume road. Martignich then followed, as the Germans were completely outflanked by the advance on their left and the entire line north of the Somme thrown open. Once Martignich was out of the way the last point of support for the line to the east was gone, and the German line had to fall back all the way to Comblies. Fiers, which Comblies was also taken, and with Fiers, the turning point of the German line. Fiers held the same position with respect to the German line which Ginchy had filled before it was taken. It was the point on which the German pivoted, and when taken weakened the line north and east. The British advanced with gaining only on the north, where their action was of little assistance to the French in their part of the offensive. The British struck also to the east in an effort to line up with the new French positions. In this they met with considerable measure of success, although they did not accomplish all that was needed in this direction.

was thought impossible, and it was considered that in order to drive the Germans out of France it would be a question of going forward foot by foot. This theory is beginning to be questioned. The Germans have, of course, a perfect maze of trenches, dugouts, and pits about their first line positions, and even in most cases about their second line positions also. But there must of necessity come the point where the defensive nature of these defenses gives way to a much more simple form, and finally to none at all. When this point is reached, and apparently it has been reached on both the British and the French fronts, the gains, with the same artillery preparation, become greater and greater. This is but natural, and we do not have to seek any mysterious strategical conception of events on other fronts for an explanation. Apparently the Germans have gone their limit of defense, and their limit is not enough. There is and always will be a constant battle between the offense and defense as to which can be made the stronger. In the construction of the forts at Liege and Namur it was thought that the scene had been reached in defensive works. They were considered absolutely indestructible. The heavy German guns, the offense which Germany had carefully built up, proved the fallacy of this. Again the battle was in the air. Gradually as the battle progressed, the defense has gradually been advancing until now it is a question which is in the ascendency. Modern defense is powerful, more powerful than was dreamed of two years ago. Modern offense is struggling to keep pace. It has not stood still, but the advance of defense has been more rapid. Where time is permitted, it is apparent that the defense is now ahead. But where time is not available for the very elaborate construction necessary, the offense can still smash its way through. So it is with the British and French fronts. The Germans, driven out of their strong positions, are now not able to stem the steady forward movement of the Allies. It is apparently irresistible. A question in fact arises as a result of recent gains which opens a most fertile field for speculation. Can the German front be really broken? When the last of the German field works has been passed and they are forced to depend on trenches constructed on the moment can the Allies break through on a wide front and open a dike through which they can pour their infantry and cavalry, particularly the latter, in an effort to turn the flanks of the two wings and roll them up? Recent events indicate that this can eventually be done.

Comblies is, for all practical purposes, cut off completely from the country to the south. The French wedge at Bouchemmes is so far to the east that it is only by a detour of nearly ten miles that Peronne can be reached. It would not be necessary for the British to advance to any such depth as the French have to sniff out the Comblies salient. In fact the ground to be gained before this can be done is now but small. The Bouchemmes Woods really constitute the key to the Comblies position, and of these woods the British succeeded yesterday in taking the greater part. Directly in their front and not more than a mile distant is the village of Morval, and when this is in British hands the full of Comblies is assured. Already the town is almost enveloped, the pocket is almost complete. Another push and the work here is done. At stated yesterday, Comblies has lost its value in its relation to the rest of the front. It is of value only as a strong point of support strongly held. Once it passes from German control there is no other large town between the Allies and the Cambrai-Arras railroad. The French in the meantime are doing their part to complete the encircling of the city. Since their advance which carried them to the Peronne-Bapaume highway, they have been attempting to extend their lines northward, working toward Fiers Farm. They have indeed taken the farm and yesterday advanced their lines considerably over a quarter of a mile beyond it. This has two effects. In the first place, it draws the strings closer about Comblies, and in the second place it lengthens the French front. By this I have reference to the salient which their bulge has created. Such a salient is always more or less dangerous. Whenever the neck of a salient is so narrow that the guns of the enemy on one side can reach the other element of danger is present. If the French can extend their line north, as they are trying to do, their line will be strengthened out and all inequalities between them and the British will have been done away with. The British advance is a conspicuous example of the comparative ease with which gains are made now as compared with a short time ago. The fact that the British were going to deliver another attack must have been apparent to the German commander. The French gain of a few days before created a situation where it was absolutely necessary for the British to move out or the French could not take the full advantage of their own work. Therefore, knowing that the attack was to come, there was every opportunity to prepare for the resistance. But whatever preparations the Germans did make, if any, were not sufficient. It is not often that we have read of the western front that this side or that has gained a couple of miles. In fact, up to the 1st of September such a thing

HOLLAND A HUGE BARRACKS

British Write Think 90 Per Cent of Dutch are Pro-Allies. London, Sept. 20.—A Daily Mail correspondent, recently in Holland, writes: "You cannot be on Dutch soil very long without realizing how completely war has altered the appearance of things in little Holland. At Flushing, for example, six Dutch submarines are lying in an uncommon sight at that busy port. As you cross the country by train to Amsterdam, soldiers greet the eye everywhere. I do not know exactly how many men Holland has mobilized. Some say, although the figure never has been officially stated, that there are 800,000 men in the Netherlands. The Netherlands has been converted into one huge barracks, and is evidently prepared to do her duty to herself if the laudable fortunes of war should embolden her too. Dutch people are sincerely pro-Allies. The remaining 10 per cent, however, represents an influential body. In my opinion it consists roughly of church leaders, aristocrats, and military men. Important personages in both Protestant and Roman Catholic churches are undesignated pro-Germans. They have been hypnotized by the Kaiser's incessant pretended religiousness. Their positions enable them to influence a good deal of popular sentiment."

IT IS SO VERY SAD.

Phy the sorrows of the government party in Carleton county. Yearning to save that fine constituency from the hands of the spoiler they find themselves confronted with an "immense boodle fund" and unlimited "boozing" brought in by the opposition.

Not that they fear the result. They are convinced that their disinterested endeavor to gather in enough money from the lumber operators, liquor dealers, railroad and bridge contractors, purchasers of ready-made farms, and other affluent persons, to pay off the provincial debt, must commend itself to an intelligent and high-minded electorate; but the mere thought that anybody would put a wad or a bottle down on an obstacle to the accomplishment of their high and noble purpose is painful in the extreme.

It is as if a sympathetic farmer had planted a broad field of potatoes to send to the starving Belgians, and the rust came and destroyed the tubers. We can but marvel at the contumacy of the opposition. Money and booze instead of missionary zeal and the sweet savor of a self-sacrificing devotion to the public welfare and the cause of good roads. It is not surprising that the Standard and Gleaner are unable to repress their indignation. They have labored so long and so earnestly to stamp out the booze traffic, and to separate unrighteous statements from illegitimate gains that this incursion of Mr. Fleming's county of Carleton into their sympathy goes out to them, and to Mr. Fleming and the Hon. Benjamin Franklin Smith, in this sad hour. But they are not as those without hope. A missionary fund of generous proportions collected by Bro. Berry for just such an emergency as this?

THE EASTERN SITUATION

The difficulties which confront the Central Powers as a result of the entry of Romania into the war, and the explanation of the conference between Enver Pasha, the Bulgarian king and the Kaiser are clearly stated in the editorial of the London Daily Telegraph, who says:—

"The conference between the responsible heads of the Teutonic coalition for a solution of the grave Balkan problem, in which King Ferdinand is also interested. The situation of the German League is critical, but not yet desperate. A German offensive by the interior lines is no longer possible. Worse still, the defensive power of the Central Empires is declining, owing to lack of reserves and growing inferiority in numbers compared to the Allies.

"That Austria has no reserves is abundantly proved in Transylvania. The army is able to take the offensive only at one point, viz. Dobruja, but this will certainly be checked by the combined Russian and Roumanian forces. The concentration of a strong Russian force in Bessarabia was announced months ago, and if Premier Briand preferred to anticipate a declaration of war before the Russian expedition was fully ready it was because greater advantages were assured by a surprise movement in Transylvania, and compared with it the German advance in Dobruja is small. There is nothing to show it will not end in disaster if the great Russian forces are brought into action.

"The Germans perceive this danger and the Bulgarians realize it still better. Bulgaria would have preferred to continue her inactivity of the last nine months. Her sham offensive in Macedonia was only to prevent Roumanian intervention. When this diversion failed Bulgaria was threatened on a new front and naturally demanded further help from her German allies. Her army, estimated at half a million at the beginning of the war, had lost 100,000 men, and now is only 400,000 strong. The combined forces of General Sarraill at Saloniki, of the Roumanians along the Danube, and of the Russians in Dobruja will before long have a crushing superiority.

"The 80,000 Germans, which is the number of these auxiliaries of the Kaiser supposed to be in Dobruja, hardly suffice. The Turks have material in Thrace for an army of about 200,000 men, and the object of King Ferdinand is to obtain 150,000 Turkish troops to oppose them to the Russian and Roumanian troops in Dobruja and on the Danube, leaving the rest of the Bulgarian army free to defend the Macedonian front. The Turks have hitherto refused to dispose of this army of Thrace, alleging it may be needed at any time for the defense of Constantinople.

"The only condition on which the Turk would consent in compensation by Bulgaria, which Bulgaria is unwilling to give, and hence the visits of Enver Pasha and Ferdinand to discuss the question with the Kaiser and Chancellor Bethman Hollweg at German headquarters. A solution of the problem is further complicated by the urgent solicitation of the Magyars for assistance also in Transylvania.

Yesterday's cables announced that the German headquarters had been transferred to the east, and that a new plan of campaign would probably be formed. It is clear from the admissions of some German writers that the growing seriousness of the situation is impressing itself upon those in authority, and that they feel keenly the necessity of attempting if possible a great counter stroke. That stroke cannot be delayed, and yet it is not easy to see how men and guns enough can be spared to make it at all formidable in character.

THE ASSESSMENT REPORT

The report of the Assessment Commission is an intelligent effort to improve the taxation system of St. John without making too radical a departure from former methods, and yet to make the burden more equitable, and to readjust the burden so that it would fall more fairly upon all, with fewer loop-holes for the tax-dodger. The commission sought to devise a plan by which land values would be fairly taxed under a proper valuation, and the earnings of all classes from all sources brought under the system. They sought to readjust the personal property and income taxes in such a way as to produce more satisfactory results; and to deal with the vexed leasehold problem in a more satisfactory manner than had been done heretofore. The commission regards as essential an able and fearless board of assessors.

To what extent the commission has succeeded in its important task we shall be better able to judge when the various interests affected have looked into the effect upon them and expressed their views. This should be done without delay, in order that the proposed bill, with any amendments which may seem to be advisable, may be ready to present to the legislature at its next session.

It will be conceded by every citizen that the commission has rendered a very valuable service. It has sought diligently for information and has earnestly endeavored to produce a plan that would more fairly distribute the burden of taxation. It will be at once agreed that a unit system of land valuation with proper maps, should be adopted, and that a change in the method of taxing personal property and income should be made, and more revenue derived from what is termed intangible property. There will be no general objection to the proposed change regarding the poll-tax, or the increased exemption on earned incomes. The proposal relative to taxation of railway property appears also to be highly commendable.

In a general way it will be at once admitted that the commission has presented a report which cannot fail, whether it is adopted in its entirety or not, to bring about a great change for the better in our assessment system.

WHERE, OH WHERE?

Where is Sir Sam Hughes? The question is being asked with deep concern by an anxious people. The standard Ottawa correspondent telegraphed last night:—

"A report is freely rumored in Ottawa today that General Sir Sam Hughes is on the ocean on his way back to Canada. There is no confirmation, but it is generally believed that he had made arrangements to sail today or tomorrow. What gives strength to the report of his departure is that there has been no news in the cables regarding the minister of militia, for a few days."

Just so. There have been daily reports about the movements of the Kaiser and Gen. Brusiloff and Von Hindenburg—but nothing about Sir Sam Hughes. He has neither reviewed a brigade, nor dined with the king, nor posed for a photographer—for several days. Where is he? Has he gone to Russia to tell Brusiloff how to smash Von Hindenburg? Is he en route to Greece to settle the affairs of that distracted country? Has he decided to go to Saloniki and start the big drive? Has he secretly departed for France to assume the supreme command—or is he toddling back to Canada to start another Camp Borden? A breathless Canada awaits the answer to these questions.

Duty on dollars—principle or pelf. That is the issue in Carleton county tomorrow.

Will Carleton county accept the bribe? Or will it reject it as Westmorland county did?

Mr. Arnill comes back and gives the lie to those who dispute the assertions made in his affidavit. Will the government order an enquiry? Of course not.

If it is true that the Austrians are about to evacuate Trieste, the Italians have gained a great victory as a result of their patient fighting under tremendous difficulties.

The news from Roumania last night was less satisfactory, but it could not be expected that continued success would be recorded. It is certain that if the enemy drives on the Roumanian front the Allies will not be long in making such a drive on some other front as will render the enemy effort of little ultimate value.

Those New "Bran Foods"

—a new one is born every week—a recognition of the need of food laxatives instead of drug laxatives. The problem of presenting bran to the human stomach in combination with a nutritious, easily digested food was solved twenty years ago by the invention of Shredded Wheat Biscuit, the food which supplies all the body-building material in the whole wheat grain in a digestible form, combined with bran, which is Nature's laxative. A body-building, strength-giving food. Serve with milk or cream or sliced peaches and cream or other fruits.

VALUE OF TOTAL ABSTINENCE.

Admiral Sir George King Hall, who is a splendid type of Christian man, and is as solicitous for the moral welfare of the Navy as the late Lord Roberts was for that of the Army, says:—"From personal life-long experience, and close observation with those with whom I have come into contact, I have state with the utmost confidence that total abstinence is conducive to health, and recovery from shock and injury. Abstinence makes for efficiency in both navy and army in all ranks and grades. As regards shooting ( rifle or heavy gun) moderately drinkers shoot uncommonly well, but they would do still better if total abstinence were their habit. In the navy, quite seventy-five per cent of the trouble—i. e., crimes against naval discipline—owe their origin to alcohol." Sir George has been a lifelong total abstainer.

Testimony of Toronto Officer—150th May Not Winter Here—Captain May Tells How He Was Wounded

"I want to say right here that the 150th Battalion is as good as any at the front and not a battalion has anything on them. They were all New Brunswickers and they try to get kept as a unit by themselves." So, Captain W. W. Scarfield told a Toronto newspaperman when he returned to his native city a few days ago after being at the front for a considerable period. He is a man who has seen several campaigns in Africa and India and he is qualified to judge a soldier. He was attached to the 26th for some time, and was wounded and is now home on two months' leave.

150 May Get Over

There is a report now in military circles that Lieutenant-Colonel Hughes Barre and his 150th Battalion will not spend the winter in St. John but will proceed overseas very shortly. The report appears to come from an authoritative source and is to the effect that some other Canadian battalion will be substituted for the 150th. It is a certainty that the 150th French-Canadian will winter in the city of St. John and an effort will be made to bring the unit up to full strength before it sails overseas in the spring.

Colleagues Make Good Showing.

U. N. B. student fighters took the lead recently in the field artillery examinations at Halifax. The leader was Lieutenant Harry Bennett, of Fredericton, who is a graduate of U. N. B., and the other five, in the order of merit, were: Lieutenant Harold Paterson, of Salisbury; Lieutenant Murray Baird, of Fredericton; Lieutenant Atwood Bridges, of St. John; Lieutenant Charles Jones, and Lieutenant Fred Goodspeed, of St. John. The showing is an excellent one and speaks volumes for the University of New Brunswick and the class of men who have attended that institution.

How Captain May was Wounded.

Captain F. P. May, who has a splendid record at the front with the 26th (N. B.) Battalion, is always reticent to tell of his experiences at the front and how it was he was wounded. Yesterday he was carrying out his duties as deputy chief recruiting officer and The Telegraph noticed that ever and anon he fondled an old black "Jimmy" pipe as if it were a comrade dear to his heart. It was also noticed that this pipe was covered with hieroglyphics, name and date. Scouting that the pipe had a history, Captain May was asked why it was this thing inanimate seemed of such rare worth. "Well, that pipe was with me when I was wounded," he replied. "When the shell burst over the dugout I had that pipe in my hand and when I got back to the field dressing station and they lifted the stretcher up to the table I still had the old pipe clutched in my hand. I value that old Jimmy pipe, it's a chum all right."

Although not in a talkative mood Captain May was pressed to relate the details of his injuries, which have never yet been given to the public. Finally he acquiesced and said: "That morning the 22nd French-Canadian were holding the front line and I was in charge of a working party in the rear. At the time I was adjusting the laces of my boots when a big shell came over. The nose of it, or what was left of the nose of it, came through the top of the dugout and had I been sitting up straight it would have gone through my back."

"You often hear people talk about force of habit. Well here's an instance," he continued. "I was conscious all the time, but barely so. I remembered as they hauled me out of the dugout into the trench, I threw out my arm and looked at my watch. It was 12:47 o'clock. They were nearly three hours getting me two thousand yards through a communication trench to the field dressing station."

Captain May spoke of his experiences as he would a day's work. In parting he said, "Now don't get the mistaken idea that a soldier at the front is continually up against hardships, for the most of them enjoy every minute of the

Government Party In Carleton is Desperate

Woodstock, N. B., Sept. 19.—These are anxious days for the government. The people are turning against graft and the men who are condoning it. Every day there are many additional supporters for the cause of better government and the opposition candidates, McCain and Upham.

Ministers Murray and Baxter are both here trying to stem the tide of public opinion. They cannot do it. The campaign, disclosing conditions in the government of the province as they are, exposing the graft and opportunism that have discredited the government, has had a tremendous effect.

But the opposition realize that opposed to public sentiment there will be a huge campaign fund. The resources of the Fleming-Todd "campaign" fund have been made upon it. Every government contractor has felt the pressure of the need of the government. Today the cry is: "Save Smith." The party has abandoned Sutton. There will be much hard feeling in the government ranks after the battle is over because of these cut-throat methods.

A big effort is being made to persuade the independent electors not to forsake both government candidates, but to vote for Smith if they cannot vote for both of them. The Standard and other government newspapers have made themselves ridiculous by their misrepresentations. Today they had H. M. Blair with A. B. Copp at Coldstream, while as a matter of fact the former was laid up with a severe sore throat. Then, again, Mr. Carvell, according to the Standard, was in Ottawa collecting a campaign fund, when he was just out from a severe attack of tonsillitis which prevented him from remaining in the campaign.

There is much evidence of money and the best evidence in Hartland as to whose liquor was being seized was the frantic shouts of the man upon whose premises it was found (and who, by the way, was paid $20 rental for storage room) to the government supporter and produce man to come and get his rum. The government heeters are not stopping at anything.

THE ARNHILL STATEMENT

(Fredericton Mail.)

We have just read through what the Standard and the Gleaner say in answer to the statements made in the solemn declaration of Robert J. Arnhill concerning the payment of $2,000 to James H. Crockett. That declaration contained very serious matter. It would call for immediate action by the government, if we had a government in this province which dare act. After reading the defence, one naturally asks: What is the use of all this denial of things which Mr. Arnhill never said, while they neglect to deal with the serious things which he did say?

The substance of Mr. Arnhill's statement may be put in a very few words, namely, that a large sum of money was owing to his firm; that they had tried for months to get it from the railway company and from the government, and had not succeeded; that finally they stated that they would contribute $2,000 if they got their money; that shortly after they did get their money, they paid James H. Crockett, the dispenser of government patronage, the sum of $2,000, as promised.

The answer which has been put up may also be put in a few words, namely: that Crockett got the money, but it was given to him as the price of his strong friendship for the manager of the Hibbard Co.

That is a defence which will satisfy those who are looking for an excuse, but will be satisfied with, but will satisfy no one else.

The management of the exhibit is in the hands of the commercial intelligence branch of the Board of Trade and its purpose is to ascertain whether the products can be made by Canadian manufacturers and sold as cheaply, in order that after the war the proposed commercial warfare against Germany and Austria may be prosecuted to advantage.

The exhibit will be seen first in Montreal. Later it will be sent to Toronto. Expert commercial agents will accompany the exhibit and get information as to what lines of manufacture in Canada now will duplicate the German and Austrian goods with cost and selling prices, and shipping facilities. Where the goods to be exhibited are not now manufactured in Canada an effort will be made to get information as to establishing similar industries.

The British Board of Trade and several collections of goods manufactured in the Central Power countries and will keep them circulating in the various British colonies and dependencies for the purpose of forming a world-wide combination against Germany and Austria in manufactures and commerce. These products will be exhibited in Canada and Australia.

Dispute Over Division of Spoils Led to Uncovering of Scheme—Some of the Hauls Made

Chicago, Sept. 20.—Confession has been made by two members of the syndicate of alleged blackmailers, eight of whom are under arrest here, that their operations netted them $1,000,000 in the last year, officials of the United States department of justice announced today.

One of these, he said, is Mrs. Clifford of Philadelphia. Another is Mrs. J. Bolton Wippeny, also of Philadelphia, whose son is said to have been threatened with blackmail.

Detectives who made the raid said the wardrobes of the eight arrested were rife with party gowns, seal skin cloaks and jewels for the women, and that each of the men apparently had a dozen pairs of shoes, as many pairs of gloves and other clothing-like property.

A Scottish minister, taking his walk early in the morning, found one of his parishioners reeling in a ditch.

As already indicated in dispatches, these affairs created no little uneasiness here, chiefly because of the fear that evidence of "Zabernianism" would intrude with the spirit of the general acceptance of conscription as a means to win the war.

Roughness of Officers—Lord Derby Holds Conference With Chief Constables to Devise Efficacious Methods

London, Sept. 19.—Lord Derby held a conference with the chief constables of the principal provincial towns with the object of testing opinion as to the most efficacious methods of preventing evasions from military service.

A communique issued from the War office, in reply to public protests against "round-ups," whereby hundreds of innocent people were subjected to inconvenience and annoyance, was generally condemned as a lame excuse, and it was thought that as the official method of using the military dragnet would be dropped.

colored men had moved north in the last six months. Letters and telegrams were read from busy manufacturers and mine owners, and others, giving assurance that negroes would be encouraged to make their homes in the North and would receive a "square deal."

At the morning session of the conference, the subject of the migration of negroes to the North was discussed, and it was decided to appoint a committee of nine representatives of negroes to visit Mr. Hughes and ascertain his attitude toward the negro race.

Allies Have Put 'Art' in Artillery

Superior to Huns Now in Every Phase of War, Says Dr. J. L. Hughes

To Use Cavalry Soon; Advances in Future Will Be Made With Less Loss of Life

(Toronto Star)

Dr. James L. Hughes doesn't often use that kind of street slang, but today he assured The Star Weekly that the allies had put the "art" in artillery.

Dr. Hughes—who is also an honorary colonel by reason of the fact that he is the founder of the Public School Cadet movement in Toronto—has just returned from a trip to the battle front with his younger brother, Sir Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia and Artillery, by motor car in Belgium to the spot where his son, Chester, is buried. The young man was killed last winter by a Hun shell.

The former chief inspector of schools is "full of confidence. Nothing is so certain as victory."

"There has been no doubt now that the allies have the mastery of the Germans in every element of warfare—in the air, on land, and on the sea," he said. "We spent two days in Belgium and we did not see one German aeroplane or one German tank. We saw only Canadian aeroplanes and captive balloons were all the time making observations."

A Good Day's Work, said Dr. Hughes, was done by the British and French airmen in one day destroyed nineteen German aeroplanes, both light and heavy, and our artillery men have now thoroughly learned the art of gunnery.

"In future," said Dr. Hughes, with emphasis, "advances will be made by the allies with less loss of life. The chief use now made of the infantry is to take possession of the Hun trenches and hold them after the foe has been driven out."

"The most thrilling war episode in my experience was the attack on one of our aeroplanes by German anti-aircraft guns. It was at Ypres. A Canadian pilot was salting a mile over our heads, and I saw more than thirty bombs explode around it without in any way affecting its flight. Not one of them was within 100 yards of the aeroplane. It did not move in a zig-zag course or swerve down and climb up again, but sailed steadily around in a circle, taking its observations calmly."

Had to Move Quickly, said Dr. Hughes, and his party had to move hastily to save their lives. "We were in front of the ruins of the Ypres Cathedral," he said, "One of our aeroplanes, circling high, evidently had signalled to our artillery, and the latter had signalled to the Hun guns. It was a quarter of a mile in our rear. We had gone to the trench, and the Hun Canadian batteries were behind us and we could not find them, so skilfully had they covered their guns."

Speaking of the ruins of Ypres, Dr. Hughes said that he had seen one of the only bits of the cathedral left standing in a part of the wall about fifty feet in length. In the centre of this is a statue of Christ—standing there absolutely untouched. "It is wonderful," he said.

Paints Tents Color of Grass. "A new and notable feature at the front is that in France and Belgium every tent is painted the color of the ground or of grass or trees which stand around. This makes it very difficult for enemy aeroplanes to locate our tents and camps."

The last day we were in France Sir Sam inspected the Canadian cavalry at a point some eighty miles west of Belgium. They were so happy as the men of the Canadian army. They had spent nine months in the trenches and they were very happy because they could not go back. Some of their officers told me that they would soon ask for a transfer to the infantry if they had to remain inactive. Sir Sam told them that they were to be sent to the front to work in the trenches, and his pride that they were so anxious to return. He assured them that from what he had seen he believed they would soon be chasing the Germans as cavalry, when the Huns were driven out of their underground fortresses.

Everybody Working. "One thing that impressed me over there was that everybody was working. With the men of military age away they are reaping better crops in France and Belgium and Britain than we ever reaped in Canada. If we had the men of military age in Canada we could produce more than has ever been produced in Canada. The women, of course, would have to help at the lighter work, as they do in Belgium and France and Britain. In one week 15,000 British women volunteered to work on farms."

Praise For Sir Max. Sir Max Aitken, the Canadian Eye Witness at the front, impressed Dr. Hughes as one of the brightest of the younger men in the House of Commons. "He is a man of vision, force, and unshakable balance for his years. He is only thirty-six and has been six years in the House. The Canadian papers have said that he was born in New Brunswick, but the fact is that he was born in the village of Maple, a few miles out of Toronto and his father, Presbyterian preacher, moved to New Brunswick when Sir Max was a boy. There they became neighbors and friends of the Law family, Hon. Bonar Law being the son of another New Brunswick minister."

Lord Rothermere, a brother of Dr. Hughes' father, Dr. Hughes described him as a "charming gentleman," a leading publisher, and a man who has beautiful skin underneath. He said that he was getting a lot of cinema views at the front.

Dr. Hughes also met Capt. Panlauer, whose letter to his cousin, Henri Bourassa, aroused such favorable comment throughout Canada, and pronounced the young French-Canadian lawyer an able and interesting officer.

Toronto Man Making Roads. Capt. W. G. MacKendrick, well known in Toronto, is now at General Bragg's headquarters as chief of the road making staff for the Canadian divisions. He gave Dr. Hughes a walking stick made from wood taken from the door of the famous Cloth Hall at Ypres.

Sir Max Hultzen is soon to publish a second volume on the part the Canadians have played on the French and Belgian battlefront.

"Going over on the Adriatic," said Dr. Hughes, "the women were inclined to be afraid, but I remarked that Britain and its navy were still awake and it was safer to travel on a ship laden above the decks with shells than on a mere passenger boat, because the shell-carrier dived miles off the Irish coast—a destroyer loomed up and soon we had six torpedoes boats and cruisers escorting us. The passengers on the Adriatic sang 'Rule Britannia' just a little louder than they ever did before when the captain of that British destroyer came on deck. They realized then that Britain did rule the waves."

Dr. Hughes says that the British people are immensely pleased over the gift by the French of the burial grounds where the British heroes are buried.

THE BAPTIST MINISTERS. (Maritime Baptist). Rev. Henry Carter has closed his work as a chaplaincy to the 10th Battalion. Many will hear with regret that Rev. Carter's work was not yet completed. He is now en route to England to visit his son, who is in hospital. He was severely wounded at Ypres early in June, but is slowly recovering.

Rev. P. F. Dresser preached his last sermon at Mansel, Me., on the first Sunday in September. Perhaps he might be inducted into the work in these provinces.

The appointment of Rev. J. C. Wilson as a chaplaincy to the 10th Battalion is announced. Mr. Wilson resigned the work at Doaktown, N. B., and returned to the Canadian Baptist ministry. The lieutenant's course and received a commission. This recent recognition of his worth will bring much satisfaction to his many friends.

A little strength is worth a lot of drugs in curing kidney trouble.

Vital strength, generated in the nerve-centres—the power-stations of the body—is the living force that keeps the kidneys healthy and active.

Exit Bowser; Exit McBride, Curtain Falls on B.C. Tragedy

Nemesis at Last Arrives For Flagrant Exploitation of a Province's Resources--No Parallel in Modern British Administration--Insight Into Situation

(Toronto Star) Exit Premier Bowser, and in London a very anxious Sir Richard, who will never be himself again, and whose party of fifteen thousand dollars a year as Agent-General of a bankrupt province whose population is one-third less than that of Toronto, will surely be pruned in keeping with the Mail and Empire's insatiable appeal to "save and serve" Brewster's millions will not run to such costly representation six thousand miles from home. They will not stand for a yearly expenditure on provincial "government" of over fourteen dollars per head of grey men, women and children in the country, including Indians, Chinese and Hindus.

British Columbia is an economic tragedy, the victim of political effort without parallel in any other modern British administrative entity, not even including Manitoba, where the opportunity for the exploitation of natural resources was not so great, though the willingness to handle them was incomparable. Months ago it was credibly reported that the population of the province had declined one-fourth since 1912. Long before the war travelers reported that 40,000 people had left Vancouver. The city had many reputable families on its list. Lumber mills which were floated on the London money market with extravagant capitalization were shut down. Railways that were being constructed under government guarantee could not be financed without more guarantees. Some projects in which the public credit was heavily involved were abandoned at least to the production of economic lunacy and political depravity.

McBride wanted guarantees further, but his hitherto obedient minions in the legislature balked. He announced an immediate general election--this was eight months ago. Instead of an election, Sir Richard McBride was fired to London at fifteen thousand dollars a year, the mild, octogenarian Mr. Turner, who had also been premier in his boyhood, being incontinently bundled out of his job, with promise of consolatory pension.

Bowser and Corporations Bowser knew the guarantee game was up, but he became premier in the hope of saving the party from ruin. As his firm was solicitor for many of the big corporations who had dealings with the government, he had a double interest in saving his face. The campaign which has broken him had something to do with this phase of his career. He brazenly protested that it was a perfectly proper condition. The failure of the Dominion Trust and the Bank of Vancouver put the community on edge long ago. The collapse of the real estate balloon, on which 2,000 firms were flourishing when McBride and Bowser went to the country on a new railway policy in 1909, kept the bubble going by another appeal on another guaranteeing stunt in 1912, showed the people the hollowness of their whole commercial structure and made them begin to realize that all through the province the government had been playing as issue a game as the wildest gambler, on the chance that another sucker would come along.

British Columbia four years ago was spending $20,000,000 a year on buying food from outside its borders. More than two-thirds of its population was in cities and towns and villages. Manufacturing, outside lumber mills was nothing to speak of. Mining did not support as many people as was supposed. Farm lands, which were very costly to clear, were at ridiculously high prices. The producing population was almost negligible, compared with the load it was supposed to carry. The public lands had mainly been sold to speculators, which made agricultural settlement a face where it was not a get-rich scheme. Revenue was made to look enormous by these sales--it was like a man selling his furniture and calling it yearly income. There could only be one end to that colossal folly, even if it were not sustained by a "machine" which aimed at landing every

GRAFT CHARGES ARE MADE IN BANGOR

Suits For a Total of $25,300 to be Brought by City Against Those Named in the Report of Investigating Committee; To be Tried in January

(Bangor Commercial) Suits for sums aggregating $25,300 will be brought against 16 persons who were mentioned in the graft reports last spring by the investigating committee, at the October term of court, and are due to be tried at the January term. They are brought to recover money alleged to be due the city from those implicated by the graft investigations. The suits are based on the charges put forth in the report of the investigating committee which were made some time ago and published in the Commercial. It does not appear that a suit has been brought against J. T. Carrow, who named in the report, but suit has been brought against Street Commissioner Pressey and his foreman, Henry A. Kelley, against whom also indictments have been brought by the grand jury. Besides the suits against the city department, is used on three counts aggregating $4,300. One of these is for $3,000 to recover for alleged padding the necessary steps to protect the city against 18 others who are named in the list below given in the report of the city solicitor to the mayor.

Henry A. Kelley, former foreman of the city department, is sued on three counts aggregating $4,300. One of these is for $3,000 to recover for alleged padding the necessary steps to protect the city against 18 others who are named in the list below given in the report of the city solicitor to the mayor. On April 1, there was paid to the city treasurer one hundred thirty-seven dollars and sixty cents by Henry A. Kelley, which was the amount which he had received from the city in payment of a certain bill of hay which he had agreed to sell to the city, and which the city never received.

There was recovered from J. T. Carrow a small house built at the city's expense from the city's material at the city stables, and which had been moved to his premises. Also certain bags of cement belonging to the city which had been stored there on his premises, and also two cans of gasoline.

I have carefully gone over the reports of the different investigating committees which have been rendered to the city, and have brought such suits as I deemed could be maintained by evidence against former city officials, employees and citizens that the different reports show are indebted to the city in one way or another.

These suits have been delivered to the proper county official for service and will be entered at the coming October term of the supreme judicial court, which is the first term of the court at which they could be entered since the committee reported. For your further advice there follows a list of the defendants and the ad damnum amounts of the writs.

ROSS K. MARTIN SHOT BY BOY COMPANION Ross K. Martin, a fifteen year old lad, residing at No. 11 Wilnot street, son of John Martin, who is at present overseas, was shot early last evening by a fifteen year old companion, Joseph Shannon, at the corner of Bentley and Chesley streets. The wound, fortunately, was not a serious one though the boy will be under the doctor's care for some little time. The bullet struck young Martin in a glancing direction, on the abdomen, being passed through the fleshy part of the right hand just above the thumb, inflicting a clean wound and was, subsequently, found in the boy's pant leg. The injured lad was attended by Dr. F. Hogan. The Shannon boy was taken in charge by Detectives Barrett and Briggs, later in the evening and is charged with shooting and wounding while Nathan Higgins, aged twenty-nine years, was also arrested by the detectives charged with selling the revolver to the boy. From the accounts given of the affair the shooting was purely accidental.

UNIQUE HAS FINELY VARIED PROGRAMME

Business Romance, Thrilling Railway Story and Clever Comedy in the Bill

To relieve the monotony of long features the Unique broke away from the idea of presenting the usual five-act drama and yesterday offered a programme of rare excellence in three subjects which were all good. The Eszany Company in "The Grouch" was the headline attraction. A young man, fresh from college, who teaches the middle aged man how to run his office, appears very often in magazines, and on the screen, but in this particular play he not only transforms a decaying business into a dividend paying one but cures the boss of a life long grouch.

there is an excellent Vim comedy entitled "Spring Cleaning," which contains all the elements of good fast playing burlesque, and the story being depicted by some of the foremost members of the Vim Comedy Company, together with really funny climaxes and situations, makes the picture a most enjoyable one.

"THE COURTESAN" AT THE LYRIC THEATRE

Eugenie Forde in Strong Vampire Characterization—Pianologue and Song Sketch Also

A vampire and yet not a vampire, a cold hearted woman of the world and yet a fond, loving mother who is ready to sacrifice her all so her son may climb the ladder of success; such is the unique character portrayed by Eugenie Forde in the American master-picture "The Courtesan" as presented by a very capable cast at the Lyric.

doubtful if the director could have secured a better actress than Miss Forde for this trying part. The theme is unusual and embraces a good many phases of human nature. It deals with intrigue in the political world and the wonderful devotion which is so characteristic of a mother's love. To those who do not know, who could never know, and who could not understand, Miss Forde's character is that of a cruel hearted, dominating creature, whose one desire is to have men fall into the net of sin which she is so willing to throw about them, but in the woman's own heart she realizes that the sacrifice she is making daily is a great one but is looked upon with scorn by her neighbors and would-be friends, yet she knows that her desire to have her son become the district attorney and to have him placed on a level with his associates is worth that sacrifice.

This, in a nutshell, really is the sum and substance of the play, but it contains many gripping scenes such as the election, the discovery of some of the so-called vampire, the raid on her home and the revelation which comes as the finale of the drama. It is an interesting story and is well worth seeing. An excellent attraction in vanderhille was supplied by Ade and Marion who pleased immensely in pianologues and songs.

Claims Postal Surplus

Ottawa, Sept. 19.—The post office department announces a surplus of $2,240,271 for the last fiscal year. Revenue for the year was $18,208,409 and expenditure $16,009,138. Revenue for the year increased by $6,811,769 as compared with 1914-15, while the cost of the postal service increased by only $45,242. The increase in postage rates, together with an effort at retrenchment, or at any rate the stopping of the big annual increases of the last few years, accounts for the change from the previous year's deficit to a surplus for the past year.

THIRTY SIX YEARS IN UNIFORM

Court Sergeant Aaron Hastings Observes Anniversary Today

Court Sergeant Aaron Hastings is today thirty-six years a member of the local police force. Sergeant Hastings joined the force in 1880 and did duty as a patrolman for about three years. His qualities as a competent and trustworthy custodian of the law were readily recognized and he was advanced in rank and given charge of the North End division.

Sergeant Hastings is today the only member of the force who can look back over thirty-six years of service as a policeman. He has served under three chiefs, the late Chief John Marshall, ex-chief Clark and the present Chief Simpson. He has one of the finest and cleanest records of any member of the police force and during his long career has never been before his superior officer for neglect of duty or upon a complaint, a record to be proud of. Today Sergeant Hastings is acting in the capacity of court sergeant. He is still active and his many friends will join in wishing him many more years yet of activity and success.

POLICE COURT

In the police court this morning Frank Kennedy, colored, was fined $20 or two months in jail for assaulting his wife. The court told Kennedy if he wanted to strike anyone to strike a man as big as himself. Kennedy pleaded that his wife did not look with favor upon his going away to work, and took this way to prevent him.

A returned soldier, who got back from France only a few days ago, was before the court on drunkenness charge. He said he was subject to fits and suffering from shell shock. Through the kindness of a lady friend, he was permitted to go and asked "to cut out the stuff". Another individual was given nine months in jail for drunkenness, while still another was fined $8 or two months in jail.

Governor Whitman Wins Progressive Nomination in N. Y. State Primaries

New York, Sept. 20.—Republican leaders today attached great significance to the success of Governor Whitman in winning the Progressive nomination for governor in yesterday's New York state primary election over Samuel Seabury, who was unopposed for the Democratic nomination for that office. The 4,995 districts thus far counted give Whitman 9,480 to Seabury's 6,989. The governor ran ahead, according to these returns, both in and out of New York city.

Governor Whitman was opposed for re-nomination in the Republican primaries by State Senator William M. Bennett. Returns from 4,981 districts out of 4,719 give Whitman 188,648, Bennett 82,472.

William F. McCombs, formerly chairman of the Democratic National committee, won the Democratic nomination for United States senator by a majority of about two to one over his opponent, Thomas F. Conway of Plattsburg, formerly lieutenant-governor.

THEY SPEEDED UP

A meat dealer in the local market this morning waged $20 that Louis Corey, contractor who is putting down the pavement on South Market street, could not mix and lay four batches of concrete in an hour with his crew of men. The wager was accepted and the men were set to work. The city market men like a bet and keen interest was evident, especially when it was seen what a spurt the contractor's men put on when the word was passed around that their "boss" had put up $20 upon the speed of their work. The contractor won the wager with some minutes to spare.

The Man In The Street

The interest of the citizens in the report of the assessment commission seems to be in direct ratio to the amount of taxes they pay.

It will have the hearty support of every citizen who sees a prospect of a lower tax bill under the proposed scheme.

When we speak enthusiastically of the fine weather we are getting, why does some pessimist always chime in with a remark that there was a heavy frost last night and that winter is getting nearer?

If cold shivers were the only qualification, Hon. B. Frank Smith would make a fine model for another "September Morn."

After the action of the common council yesterday the North End folk will await Thanksgiving Day with the assurance that they have something for which to give thanks. They have been waiting for the new pavements for a long time.

Why get so excited over an odd shark or two in the fish weirs? We have some of the two legged variety around town that could beat these specimens at their own game.

King Constantine seems to have developed into as keen a watchful-waiter as the president of the neighboring republic.

How His Could Tell

A patient went to a local physician the other day complaining of various ailments. The doctor listened patiently and then asked the visitor to open his mouth. A glance revealed a "coated" tongue and doctor readily recognized the trouble.

"Nothing very serious," he remarked. "Your stomach is a bit out of order. I know I opened my mouth pretty good, but I've darned you could see down to my stomach."

True Humor

Webster defines humor as "that quality of the imagination which gives to ideas an incongruous or mystical turn and tends to excite laughter or mirth by ludicrous images or representations; a playful fancy, facetiousness."

It takes a clever humorist to comply with all these qualifications in a single sentence, but his editor of the morning government organ has achieved this result. With his permission—which we know, from the staid and glib tone which marks all his writings, will be readily given—we reproduce the following in full.

The government party will do as it has always done—run a clean election.

Her Egg Tester

She was a keen buyer and when she bought eggs she was determined to get her money's worth. Entering a local grocery store she bargained with the clerk until she made a bargain with the price. The latter started to place the dozen in a package, but that was not her way.

"Wait a minute. How can I tell those are good?" she said. "I guess I'll just pick them out for myself."

She proceeded to pick them out and, evidently she was sure that every small egg was a bad one, for she took only the largest. Then picking one up she shook it vigorously, to judge the size of the air space, one test of an egg's age. This did not quite satisfy her so she held it up to the ear of her husband who was with her and again shook it.

"Do you hear anything?" she asked. Hubby looked as if he would like to say something else but all he murmured was: "No, I don't."

The process was repeated twice!

Speaking of September weddings, they're telling one about a city groom who made the interesting promise to his bride: "With all my earthly goods I thee endow, and I plight to thee my 'trough'."

DO ANYTHING TO WIN THE WAR, SAYS GERMAN

Leader of National Liberals Wants Most Ruthless Methods Used Especially Against "Arch-enemy, England"

Berlin, Sept. 20.—Major Ernest Bassermann, leader of the National Liberal party, in a keynote speech delivered Monday before his constituents in the Saarbrücken district, declared that the submarine campaign had been "conducted and not abandoned. He advocated the widest possible use of both submarines and Zepplins and the most ruthless methods of warfare.

The National Liberal leader asserted that his views were shared by Admiral Von Tirpitz, Admiral Von Koester, Prince Von Baulow and Count Zepellin. He maintained that in a struggle wherein the existence of Germany is at stake, the most ruthless use of all possible weapons is called for.

This sentiment was heartily applauded by his audience. Submarines and Zepellins, continued Major Bassermann, were the most effective weapons against "our arch-enemy, England."

The destruction by German submarines from Sept. 8 to Sept. 11 of twenty-six merchant vessels of hostile belligerents, with tonnage aggregating 26,222 in the English Channel and on the Atlantic is announced in an Overseas News Agency statement.

In addition, according to the announcement, seven neutral vessels with a total tonnage of 10,669 were sunk "according to prize law because they carried contraband to England or France."

The statement lists the names of several of the British and Italian steamers sunk, these including the British steamers Gorrage of 5,098 tons, and Radice, of 2,841 tons.

"During August," said an official admiralty statement issued today, "129 hostile merchant ships, totaling 1,070 tons gross were destroyed by submarines of the Central Powers or by mines, and thirty-five neutral merchant ships totaling 88,868 tons, carrying contraband of war to enemies."

SEPTEMBER BRIDES

Ryan, assistant controller of the C. P. R., and John W. Hogan, of Blackville, N. B., but now of Greenville, Me. The bride, who was given away by her father, was neatly attired in a suit of African brown velvet with hat to match and carried a bouquet of white roses. She was unattended. After the ceremony the wedding party drove to the home of the bride's parents in Princess street, where a dainty wedding breakfast was served. Mr. and Mrs. Hogan and party left for Fredericton by special car this morning and later an extended honeymoon trip will be spent in the maritime provinces. The bride was made the recipient of many beautiful presents, expressive of esteem and popularity. Mr. and Mrs. Hogan will make their home at Brownville Junction, where the groom is located. Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Guest of Brownville.

Davis, looked beautiful in a traveling suit of blue with hat to match and carrying a bridal bouquet of roses and a spray of blue hydrangeas. A fire broke out on board a schooner M. E. Hanks, at South Wharf, about ten o'clock this morning, but was extinguished before damage resulted. A slight explosion from a gasoline engine ignited some waste and spread to the deck of the schooner. An alarm was sent in, but before the fire department arrived the blaze was under control. There were eleven barrels of gasoline on the deck of the schooner.

A little before seven o'clock this morning a fire broke out in some lime casks on a scow in Market slip, owned by H. Usher Miller. The barrels which were on fire were quickly separated from the others on the scow and only a few were destroyed.
