contains an article under this head, and in proof of the favourable working of destiny in the fortunes of individuals, instances the extraordinary elevation of the present King of the Be'gians.

" The distinguished individual was the mere scion of a German stock, possessing of himself an income unequal in its amount to that which even a clerk of some few years standing in the Treasury department would receive, and far inferior to the profits of business of many a tourth or fifth rate tradesman of London. His good fortune or destiny guided him to England, where, in spite of the many opposing influences that were arrayed in fearful aspect against al probability of the occurrences that subsequently took place, he was introduced to the court and to the heiress presumptive of England. Be it remembered, that at that time it was contemplated to bring about a marriage between the hereditary Prince of Orange and the Princess Charlotte of Wales.

her wits and contrivances to work, and as a first step, opened a communication with the great Jew millionaire, Rothschild and laid before him the exact state of events, as in her view and contemplation they appeared to promise a favourable result. The great capitalist, with his the princess hai already evinced for the fortunate prince, who ultimately became the avowed object of her affections; and spite of all opposition by the regent, her father, the only person whom she would hear of or ascent to as her affianced husband. All remonstrance was useless; and it was, therefore, advisable to cede to the princess's wishes. Thus, the impulse which destiny gave to the progress of the Prince of Cobourg was the opposing and counteracting agency to the fortunes of the Prince of Orange; in other words, the success of the one was the death blow to the hopes of the other.

The heir to the throne of Holland was discarded; and the poor German prince, whose most sanguine expectations could never have led him beyond the hand and fortune of an English lady, was, on a sudden, raised to almost the highest dignity of the kingdom, receiving therewith an income of nearly treble the amount of the sovereignly of the state of which he was a native, and from which he had set out the mere soldier of tortune.

But the impetus which destiny had first given to his fortunes, had borne him only half way in his marked career.-Subsequent events with which every Inglish-mar. is too well acquainted, deprived the prince of his betrothed, and he became a to be throne of the French; and following this, the separation of Belgium from Holland, and the election of this same Prince of Cobourg to the throne of the newly created kingdom; and lastly, the second union of this most fortunate individual with the daughter of the King of the French, the accessiou of fortune consequent thereon, and the great security given to his throne by his connexion by marriage with the two greatest powers of that it was produced by the common course of things? The individual so marked out as the favoured of fortune is, by ne means, distinguished by talent or enterprise above other men."

The manner in which this was delivered surprised many who had not before heard her Majesties agreeable, and silver-toned voice ; it excite great admiration. If any part of the speech could be singled out as telling more forcibly than another, we should select the last paragraph. It was uttered as if in solemn prayer !

The Queen had upon her brow, for the first time, the royal crown ; before the coronation she either wore a chaplet or a small circlet of dimonds.

Her Majesty was decorated with the riband and order of the garter; she wore a magnificent diamond necklace, and a stomacher of the same costly material. Under her robe she had on a white satin dress trimmed with gold tissue. After the delivery of the speech the Lord Chancellor again knelt, and received her Majesty's commands relative to the period of the prorogation, which his lordship thus announced :---

The Dykes of Holland .- These remarkable works are proofs of what the ingenuity of man, when called into action by urgent necessity, can effect ; they afford great, if not certain, protection against the force of the ocean, which would overwhelm the entire flat country where it not for the resistance of artificial bulwarks. We are not entering upon a description of those works : our object being simply to point out the means which have been resorted to, to add strength and tenacity to the embankments. There is a plant, a native of England, common on some wild places, which, in consequence of the wiry toughness of its roots, has acquired the name of "Restharrow;" the Hollanders sow the seeds on the top of the dykes; the roots penctrate, intertwine, and spread in all directions; bind the earth into a compact mass, and enable it to hold together, and resist the impetus of the ocean.

As the Emperor Charles the 5th was passing a village in Doragon, on Easter day, he was met by a peasant who had been chosen the paschal or Easter King of his neighbourhood, according to the custom of his country, and who said to him very gravely, "Sir, it is I that am King." "Much good may it do you, my friend," Lord Brougham continues to sit chose for himself, after his secession from the woolsack. His choice of the particular seat he fixed on then was quite intelligible at the time. Being at that period on the most friendly terms with ministers it was natural that he should have taken up his position in the house immediately on the right hand of Lord Melbourne. That he should have continued there has excited some surprise, now that he has avowedly broken off all connection with ministers. It was expected that, dissatisfied as he now Is, with both parties in the house, he would he would have taken his seat beside the Duke of Richmond and one or two other Peers who profess to be neutral on the cross ever, has not done so. Costa Cabral expects to be returned for the Azores Islands. As for Silva Carvalho, Gomez de Castro, Fonseca Magalhaes, and the other leading charterists, there it not the least doubt of their election. Viscount das Antas and the Duke de Terceira are at the head of the poll as senators for Lisbon. This shows how (equally poised is the strength of the two parties. From the provinces there is little of any interest to communcate. The commandant of the military district of Beja acquaints the government with the capture of the guerilla leader Manoel Ignacio, who was afterwards shot in attempting to make his escape from the escort conducting him to prison.

ANIMAL MAGNETISM .- (Extract of a letter from Sir W. Scott to Lady L Stuart.) -"Your ladyship cannot think me such an owl as to pay more respect to animal magnetism, or scullclogy, I forget its learned name, or any other ology of the present day. The sailors have an uncouth proverb; that every man must eat a peck of dirt in the course of his life, and hereby reconcile themselves to swallow unpalatable messes. Even so say I; every age must swallow a certain deal of superstitious nonsense; only observing the variety which pature seems to study through all her works, each generation takes its nonsense, as heralds say, with a difference. I was early behind the scenes, having been in childhood a patient of no less a man than the celebrated Dr. Graham, the great quack of that olden day. I have been, as Sir Hugh Evans says, a fine sprag boy, a shrewd idea that his magnetism was all humbug; but Dr. Graham, though he used a different method, was as much admired in his day as any of the French fops. I did once think of turning on the moden mummers, but I did not want to be engaged in so senseless a controversy, which would nevertheless, have occupied some time and trouble. The inference was pretty plain-that the same reasons which exghosts proper to our ancestors, must be destructive of the supernatural nonsense of our own days "-Lockhart's Lile of Scott, vol. 7.

fill every Spainish heart with pride and patriotism, has been violated; his ashes scattered to the winds, and the oncefondly cherished relics, his sword, spurs, and stirrups, pilfered and sold. The crown which Ferdinand wore on the day of his triumphant entry into that same city, and which, together with his sword, he bequeathed to the church, in lasting remembrance of the termination of a war which had continued for eight centuries, no longer exists ; all has been appropriated by government.

BODILY PAIN .- In spite of all the fools and philosophers, that ever thought or wrote, bodily pain is the greatest evil attendant on humanity; perhaps it is the only real one .- Against all the evils which spring from the mind of man, the mind itself-omnipotent in its own sphere -furnishes, or at least possesses, the autidote in the evils, so called, which are engendered by the passions and affections. Those who choose to look for them may recognise the elements of all that is beautiful in the human character; evils, without which the moral world could no more preserve its healthfulness and perfection, than the physical world could without winds, thunder clouds, and earthquakes. But corporeal pain in its beginning, its continuation, and its end, is the source of unmixed mischief; it shuts up the spirit in the winged dark, narrow, and pestiferous dungeon of the flesh; it concentrates all the energies andemotions of the mind and heart, upon one the indivisible point of self; where, not having space to breathe or to look abroad, they stagnate, and corrupt, and perish. In the violent extremes of danger, the affections frequently step forth in all their beauty: the friend looks to his friend, and is tranquil: the mother hangs over her child, and forgets there is any other being in the world; the lover clings to the form or the image of his mistress, and is happy: but in the torture of acute bodily pain, or the death like languor of disease, every thing external is shut out; the charities of life wither; its very delicacies, which are an instinct in the female character, are forgotten; the strengths of our nature become weaknesses, and its weaknesses, rise up into strengths, and self-mean miserable, bodily self-opens and spreads, and covers every thing. If there is one general law of our nature in which the wisdom is not apparent, it is that which makes disease the constant companion of best beauty of the human character, precisely at the moment when we more than ever seem to need it leaving nothing but its worst deformity.

Insanity.-It is perfectly inconsistent fields and verduous trees, or deep without an inch of room besides fawning, and playing the Spaniard to turn in, on any hand, without at court. If I am not mistaken, a yard, a stable, or out house of the Premier would, to use an Irish any description, perhaps hoisted expression, give a trifle to see aloft up three or four pair of dirty stairs, is all the room the wealthy tradesman often can bless himself house. with: and there, day after day, month after month, year after year, he is found, like a rat in a hole in a wall, or a toad in the heart of a stone or an oak tree. Spring and summer and autumn go round, sunshine and flowers spread over the world, the sweetest breezes blow, the sweetest waters murmur along the vales; but they are all lost upon him; he is a prisoner of Manmon, and so he lives and dies. The farmer would not take the wealth of the world on such terms : his concerns, however small spread themselves out in pleasant amplitude, both to his eye and heart; his house stands in its own pleasant solitude; his office and out houses stand round extensively, without any stubborn and limited contraction; his acres stretch over hill and vaie; there his flocks and herds are feeding, there his labourers are toiling; he is king and sole commander there; he lives amongst the purest air and most delicious quiet. Often when I see those healthy, hardy, full grown sons of the soil going out of town, I envy them the freshness and the repose of the sports which they are going to. Ample old fashioned kitchens, with their chimney corners of true projecting beamed and seated construction still remaining, blazing fires in winter shining on suspended hams and flitches. Guns supported on hook above, dogs basking on the hearth a death bed; thus depriving us of the below. Cool shady parlours in summer, with open windows, and odours from garden and shrubbery blowing in. Gardens wet with the purent dews, and humming at Medical Ignorance of the Disease of noontide with bees ; and the green

It is as directed by their colonels (of course, hardly possible to conceive that such a in favour of the government, or, at least, of the Septembrist party), and with a display of force and of unison of purpose, evidently intendei to intimidate their opponents. At Oporto hostillities have been carried a step or two further, the Septembrists having actually set parties of men armed with bludgeons and knives at the door of the parish churches, where the elections were going favourably for the charterists, shouting "Vivas to the pure constitution of 1820," and threatening their opponents with violence, which in some instances has been used towards them.

It may appear odd that the police and military should not have interfered to protect the voters : but alas, the police and military were the head and tail of the whole row, which, from that circumstance, besides others, was and is though to have been fomented by Viscount das Antas, now have been fomented by Viscount das Antas, now the military governor of the city and district, who wields a real downright practical power, to wl.ich the nominal authority of Queen, senate, and commoners must bow down iu submission when-ever he pleases and it is reported has at heart that would not quail at the prospect of protracted and constant captivity—of a living death? It may be doubted if society is benefitted by such rigour on the part of courses, the ranks of crime and desperate hardiness are soon filled up with fresh recruits. Solitary confinement, not of a mouth or two-for such a term is quite insufficient to produce any amendmentseems to be the most efficacious mode of cheeking crime; for desperate and depraved indeed must be that wretch who, left to the motion of his own solitary thoughts, isolated from all communion with his kind, with nothing to embolden, nothing to countenance his wickedness, being exists.
