Dr. George Bedell, charged with stab bing the lad Corkery was brought from Gaol to the Police Office this morning, but she had tried to act a part. Being told by the coroner to stand up in the identificar tion, she threw her crape veil a little to one side in order that the prisoner might see her face, and then making the sign of the cross she said in a firm musical voice, with her index finger raised, "In the name of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, that is the man that, murdered my hushand."

with both the solution of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, that is the man that, murdered my husband." That seemed to be sufficient and she short-ly after left the witness stand. Mrs. King, the wife of the prisoner, had accompanied her to court, and when Mrs. O'Neill re-turned to her seat her woman's nature triumphed, and throwing herself upon Mrs. king's bosom she wept bitterly. King bore the trying ordeal with consider able nerve, and, though he was excited, a powerful will kept it from being manifest, and even during Mrs. O'Neill's solemn dénunciation he maintained an undaunted chance to see him on the boards of the Lycoum again this evening in one of his favorite roles. The Flora Myres troupe have been very successful, and will no doubt draw good houses in this city.
