On the Eve of the Wedding. O love, before we part to-night, Before the ring has touched my hand, Of pure, true, endless love the token-Before the Church with holy rite. Her blessing on our love has given,

Look straight into my eyes with yours, And answer me in sight of Heaven. Is there within your heart of hearts One lingering shadow of regret-One thought that you have chosen ill? Oh! speak-'tis not too late even yet, Is there in all this world of ours, One you have ever known or seen, Whom, if you had earlier seen or known,

You would have crowned your chosen queen? and a little meat or something of that depths of the sea: it was just as if that a bruin. Is there? I pray you, tell me now, And I will hold you bound no more, I will not flinch to hear the truth, It could not be so sad, so sore To know it now, as it would be If by and by a shadow fell Upon the sunshine of our home; So, if you ever loved me-tell.

I'd hold you pure from blame, dear love; And I would leave you free as air, To woo and win that happier one. All this for your dear sake I'd bear, I will not say how I would pray That God might have you in his care; That would be easy-when I think Ot you, my heart is all one prayer. AND PUNGS But could I join her name with yours,

And call down blessings from above On her who had robbed me of my all-My life-my light-my only love? Yes! even that I'd try to do: Although my lonely heart should break, I'd try to say "God bless her!" too, Through blinding tears, for your sweet sake.

I'm looking up into your eyes; But though my own with tears are dim, I read that in their true, clear depths Which tells me, "You may trust in him." I will-I will!-It needs no words, Though yours are flowing warm and fast, Forgive my doubts-they are the last -Chambers' Journal.

Hanlan on the Thames.

London, Sept. 29 .- Hanlan made his appearance on the Thames at eleven o'clock this foreucon. He has had a good night's rest and looked fresh and hearty. An enormous crowd had gathered to see him. George Hawthorn had his boat in good fix, and when the champion walked out of the Bull's Head and took his seat in her, he was loudly cheered. He had a long row, putting in excellent work and showing up quite afresh at the finish. On his way up the river he met Trickett, and the latter courteonsly welcomed the Canadian. This meeting of the two men was the signal for another round of cheering from the crowd on the bank. In the afternoon Hanlan turned out again and had another long pull, rowing in splendid form. Trickett and Lay-cock were also out twice during the day, but public attention was quite monopolized by Hanlan.

To Anglers and persons who are fond of sub-aqueous investigations the water-telescope, much used in some parts of Europe, is a very useful instrument. It is designed to obviate the difficulty which ripples on the surface of the water make for the eye which would pierce its depths. There are three forms of water-glass, namely, an ordinary bucket or barrel with the bottom knocked out; secondly, a piece of tin of a funnel shape, about three feet long and nine inches diameter at the broad (or bottom) end, and large enough at the top to accommo date the observer's eyes—into the broad end should be inserted a plate of strong glass and some lead to weigh it down; thirdly, the simplest way is to get a tin or zinc tube like a map SUBDUES Inflammation and Swellings. This should be about three and a half feet long and three inches in diameter. The bottom of this also should have glass and be weighed. When the water is clear this instrument will enable the observer to see from three to twenty fathoms on calm, bright days. Of course when the water is thick the glass is useless. Norwegian fishermen are constantly in the habit of using the instrument, and often discover by its aid shoals of fish which would otherwise escape them. In searching for wrecks bodies of drowned persons, or lost objects of any kind, the water telescope is invaluable. By it naturalists are en abled to observe the habits of fish and the growth of sub-aqueous vegetation. To water parties who pic-nic on rivers or lakes, it would offer a new enjoyment in revealing the sub-aqueous scenery. Every reader used to the water will imagine uses to which water telescopes can be put, and as

Song of Labor.

"I love the ploughman's whistle, The reaper's cheerful song. The drovers' oft-repeated shout, Spurring his stock along; The bustle of the market-man,

As he hies him to the town. The hallo from the tree-top. As the ripening fruit comes down; The busy sound of the threshers, As they clean the ripened grain; The husker's joke and catch of glee

Neath the moonlight on the plain, The kind voice of the drayman. The shepherd's gentle call-These sounds of pleasant industry, I love-I love them all."

A tender young potato-bug Sat swinging on a vine, And sighed unto a mailen bug; "I pray you will be mine."

Then softly stake the maiden bug;
"I love you fond and true;
But oh! my cruel-hearted par
Won't let me marry you."

With scorn upon his buggy brow, With glances cold and keen. That haughty lover answered her; "I think your par is-green."

Potatoes for Animals.

A writer upon this subject has said that "potatoes in the raw state ought never to be given to any animal, with the exception of sheep or geese." It is said "a goose will thrive better, and the flesh will be more gratefully flavored upon raw potatoes, sliced, than more or less mainly fed upon any other article; while sheep will more speedily thrive the shape of roots better than the sheep; and that they should thrive upon them better than the turnip, for the reason that, according to tables, the potato contains a larger proportion of fat and flesh-producing elements than the turnip.
