IT'S ASTOUNDING how some folks'll let a habit run away with their profits. Take right now, for instance, when produce is cheap and every nickel counts, you keep on hauling in the most expensive way. You've got into the habit of doing it with horses, when a Ford One-Ton Truck would do it at half the cost, or less.
Maybe you feel that you can't afford to pay spot cash for a Ford Truck. You don't have to when you do business with us. You'll be in town on Saturday. Come in and let us talk it over.

More, almost, than any other country in the world, Russia has within her wide borders everything needed to support her people. She has man power by the millions, a great empire of fertile prairies, boundless forests, rich mines of coal, iron and other metals, great rivers for transportation, yet in spite of this wealth, far surpassing that of any other nation in Europe in man power, agricultural and mineral resources, the vicious theories of Socialism have reduced her to disgraced pauperism, when she is a whining beggar at the doors of every other country.

G. H. S. FIELD DAY

Interesting Afternoon of Sports Held at the Park

Another eventful day for the Glencoe high school passed into history on Wednesday of last week when the annual field sports were held at the agricultural grounds. Competing teams from Dutton, W. Lorne, Alvinston and Wardsville were on the grounds early before the hour set for starting, but in spite of the disagreeable weather during the morning Old King Sol smiled down in all his glory during the afternoon.

In the girls' events Glencoe had the lead over the other schools by about forty-five points. Jessie Currie was the star for locals, while Olive Black, A. Whites, F. McEachren, V. Henderson and E. Sutton made a wonderful showing for juniors. R. Dahl, J. McKee and K. Ca swell were three of Dutton's best.

In all, twenty-eight boys entered, but only eight managed to score. Saunders and Mann were stars for Dutton, McEachren was Alvinston's and McPherson was the local star.

PRESENTATION AT WALKERS

Mr. and Mrs. James Yager Honored By Their Friends and Neighbors

Walkers, Oct. 24—About seventy-five friends and neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. James Yager met at their home in Metcalfe township on Tuesday evening, Oct. 18, to bid them goodbye prior to their departure to their new home in Ekfrid.

The chair was occupied by Wm. Shertz, and after some musical numbers, Mrs. Charles Clark, on behalf of the neighbors and friends, read a nicely worded address and Mrs. John Beckett presented Mr. and Mrs. Yager with two beautiful leather chairs and a very useful leather gift.

Mr. Yager replied briefly, thanking his many friends and extending a hearty invitation to visit them in their new home.

After refreshments were served the evening was spent in dancing until a late hour, when the gathering broke up, all wishing Mr. and Mrs. Yager every happiness in their new home.

The entertainment given by the choir in the Presbyterian church on Friday evening was a rare musical treat. Mr. Gray, former organist of this church, who promoted the affair, deserves great praise for his efforts in providing so wholesome and splendid an entertainment for the community.

The choir of thirty voices was greatly appreciated in four anthems, selections, Miss King, Mr. Digson, Miss Winwright, Miss Owen and Mrs. Galbraith were the soloists of the evening and gave several numbers each in a manner that was altogether pleasing. Mrs. W. G. McCallum, soloist, also assisted in the choir selections. In a vocal quartette number, Mr. Lethbridge, Mr. Gray, Mr. McAlpine and Mr. Singleton did themselves credit. An organ solo by Mr. Gray was in keeping with his surpassing musical ability.

Appreciation of the concert by the audience found expression in a hearty vote of thanks moved by Mr. Lethbridge and seconded by Mr. Peole.

At the conclusion of the program lunch was served by several ladies of the congregation to those taking part or otherwise assisting in the evening's exercises. This feature was given in part as a farewell to Mr. Gray, the retiring organist, and as a reception for his successor, Miss King. Mr. Gray spoke for a few minutes to the gathering and expressed his appreciation of the kindness that had been shown him by the people of Glencoe and vicinity. Proceeds for the choir amounted to $52.

Another day three drunken men stopped at the Fleming schoolhouse on the Longwoods road and broke some glass in the windows, frightening the school teacher and children. They got away before the neighbors could be aroused. They were going east and were stopped at Melburne, but no charge being presented, were allowed to go.

HIRT-HENRY

A pretty wedding was solemnized at high noon on Wednesday, Oct. 12, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Silcox, 307 Baber street, Sandwich, when Neta Marie, daughter of Cyrus Henry of Appin, became the bride of Rudolph Hirt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Hirt of Detroit. The ceremony being performed by Rev. J. O. L. Spracklin. The bride entered the drawing-room on the arm of her father to the strains of Lohengrin's Bridal Chorus, played by Miss Peggy Hirt, sister of the groom, and took her place beneath an arch of autumn foliage. She looked charming in a gown of white crepe, trimmed with sequin and pearls, and wore a bridal veil with orange blossoms, and the groom's gift, a diamond necklace, and carried a shower bouquet of baby mums and lily of the valley. She was attended by her sister, Miss Inez Henry, who wore a gown of pale green organdie and carried a shower bouquet of Ophelia roses. The groom was attended by his brother, Arthur Hirt. After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served in the dining-room, where the color scheme was pink and white. Misses Myrtle Anderson, Hazel Collins and Margaret McLeish, girl friends of the bride, assisted. Mr. and Mrs. Hirt left on a motor trip to the White Mountains and the Southern States, the bride wearing a suit of brown deerskin with hat to match. On their return they will reside in Detroit.

DEATHS AT MIDDLEMISS

The death occurred at his home in Middlemiss on October 15 of an old and esteemed resident in the person of William Fallick, after a lingering illness, aged 79 years. He formerly resided in Detroit, coming to Middlemiss about twenty-five years ago, and was well known and a prominent worker in the Methodist church. He was twice married, his second wife surviving him. He was the last of his family.

James Marks, one of the oldest residents of the village, died on the same day after an illness of several weeks, aged 82 years. He is survived by his wife and three sons and two daughters, all of whom, except Mrs. George McIntyre of Middlemiss, live in the United States.

Grandma Twitchell's Legacy

By Daisy Wright Field

"Be we goin' to have chestnut dressing with the turkey this year, or oyster, or plain? And be we goin' to have the cranberries so, or jell 'em?"

Truth Perkins dropped the stocking she was toing to stare sharply at her young sister Thankful, who was polishing some thin silver teaspoons.

"Turkey" she sniffed, jerking out a needle, spitefully. "Now ain't that jest like you! As if I'd kill a turkey and invite in our relations to help us rejoice, right after such a fool trick as your losing Grandma Twitchell's legacy afore I'd laid an eye upon it. Turkey, indeed!"

"I don't see, Truth," ventured her sister, mildly, "as that has anything to do with our keeping Thanksgiving. What's our own foolish fault—and I ain't denyin' 'twas main foolish of me to lay out that five hundred dollars in a diamond ring, and then lose it—can't rightly be blamed onto Providence. And it seems to me we ought to go on bein' thankful jest the same fer each blessin' as we have."

"You can go on bein' jest as thankful as you please, for all me," retorted the elder sister, "but it'll be without any turkey, ner a crowd of hungry relations to help you. I never did believe much in this bein' thankful fer what you hev to work for, and now I'm done with it. No more such foolishness goes on in this house, while I am Truth Perkins."

"But, Truth," pleaded the youngest sister, quite flushing with the earnestness of her feelings. "Think how poor o'd Aunt Becky will miss it and Cousin Hiram, and how Grandma Twitchell always enjoyed herself. And maybe folks will think—"

"Think what?" snapped Truth, as Thankful hesitated.

"Maybe they'll think you jest did it to please Grandma, so she'd leave us something. Nobody knows, you know, about us—I mean me—losing our legacy."

"No," answered Truth, bitterly, "I hated people to know what a fool you had made of yourself. And they can think what they please. I wish you'd drop the subject, and go see if that old hen's tryin' to set again. I declare a hen's the aggravatinest critter alive."

"I'm not goin' to drop the subject till I've told you why I put the money Grandma Twitchell was kind enough to leave me, in that ring. It was all mine, the very first I ever had, and I didn't want to spend it foolishly," here Truth snorted, "and I thought I could keep it in the ring till I needed it bad fer something. Solomon Prese promised me my money back any time, and he's a man of his word. Besides, I'd never had a diamond ring in my life, and you had, and I—"

"Well, mine didn't bring me any luck, and neither did yours," answered Truth, her voice softening slightly.

"You know as well as I do that he died before I'd worn mine a month, and you lost yours. Diamonds ain't fer such as we."

"I didn't ever intend to wear it on my old brown hand, when I bought it, went on Thankful, but I couldn't resist the temptation that one time, and—"

"And you won't be tempted again. Well, there's no use crying over spilt milk, but I do say it would be silly to have a Thanksgiving dinner over it."

That ended the subject there and then, but it lingered on in Thankful's mind until the day before Thanksgiving.

That morning Truth announced that she would take that business trip to the city that she had long dreaded and delayed, and probably wouldn't be home until the day after Thanksgiving.

Truth went to the city once a year, usually in the latter part of October, but she had grown to put it off longer each year, as her old bones grew stiffer, and the discomforts of travel harder to bear. Thankful was too timid to go in her place, and had left all managing to Truth—of necessity—so long as it was woefully inefficient in business matters. This, according to Truth, was proven beyond dispute by her losing Grandma Twitchell's legacy up in a diamond ring, and then losing the ring.

"If she'd waited to talk it over with me," reflected Truth, who, for all her hardness, was not all selfish, and not really jealous of the legacy being left to her sister instead of herself, "I'd have advised her buying that north forty, and she'd have had a little income for the rest of her life from it. But Thankful never did have any business sense."

Truth went to the city as she had arranged, and Thankful was left to spend Thanksgiving by herself. I don't think it ever entered the elder sister's mind that the younger would go against her express wishes, and I'm sure it never entered Thankful's until she stood in the pen, feeding the dozen fat turkeys their morning meal on Thanksgiving Day. She was selecting a dainty morsel from the pen for Peter, the big turkey who was especially her own, as she had found the egg in a hedge by the road, carried it home and hatched it under a hen, and raised the little turkey by hand. He was a vain and handsome monster now, and his owner knew what a juicy meal he would make, properly cooked with a savory dressing, flanked by cranberry jell and pumpkin pie. But so might never have occurred to her so strongly at that particular moment, had he not strutted across the pen in his sleek vanity, as if to show off to the best advantage. Thus Pride goeth before a Fall.

"Truth has gone away and left me all alone to spend the day in my own way, and it's my turkey," ran her thoughts, as she watched the big gobbler lord it over his less plump and comely companions. Ordinarily, she would have fought for the life of her pet, but on this occasion she felt it a nobler deed to sacrifice him to the feast, and invite the poor relations afore-mentioned, than to sacrifice their feelings by having no feast at all. She knew it was the greatest joy of their long and lonely year, not to mention the small Peffer's, who made a meal invariably of the generous leavings from the Thanksgiving table of the Perkins sisters.

"Thank goodness I made the mince-meat last week, and got the cranberries, jest to make believe we's goin' to keep the day in the good old way. There's plenty of bread and pickles and jell and such, and one can of oysters left from Sunday's soup. I'll jest run over and get Lem Jones to chop off Peter's head, and carry 'round the bids to Cousin Hiram and Aunt Becky, and then I'll get to work. I don't care what Truth says, and generally she's a sight more level-headed than I be, the's allus something to be thankful for. It was all my own foolishness, that lost that five hundred dollars, and maybe it served me right fer wantin' to own a worldly bauble like that at my age. Than' yate, we ain't any worse off than we was before, and we've allus been pretty comfortable. If we had to go to the poorhouse now, or one of us had to give up the other—"

But bustling action was needed if Thankful's plans were to be carried out, and she ran hastily out of the gate, and walked briskly down the road till she came to the little yellow house where lived the Widow Jones and her half-grown son Lem. Lem readily consented to come over and

The Three L's

Three things I cry into the world of men—
The golden trine: Love, Labor, Loyalty.
These are the circle of the perfect life:
On these three swing all heavens eternally.
Bereft of them, you have not anything
Though you possess the world. But having them,
You have all things whatever else you lack.

Think on this trine. The gods have only these:
Love that makes glad the brother and the bride—
Labor that builds their safety in the world—
And Loyalty that holds the world in tune.

—Edwin Markham.

execute the condemned turkey, and afterward carry round the verbal invitations to Cousin Hiram and Aunt Becky. By nine o'clock the preparations for dinner were well under way, and the guests had arrived, coming early, as they usually did, in order to enjoy the long day to the utmost. Aunt Becky had laid her things in the little guest chamber upstairs and Hiram had hung his old brown coat and battered derby in the little hall-closet, and now they sat on each side of a little table in the warm parlor, deep in a game of chess, with which they always willed away the time until dinner was ready. Thankful excused herself, and with a huge gringham apron nearly extinguishing her tiny figure, was dressing the turkey.

Suddenly the firm tread of feet was heard on the little stoop outside and Truth stood within the room, a light powdering of snow upon her black bonnet and shawl. Thankful turned quite pale, as she looked up mutely for a reason for this unexpected and startling appearance.

"We'd never spent Thanksgiving apart before, and when I come to think of it, I couldn't see no good reason why we should this time, so I—"

Thankful Perkins, be you cleaning a turkey?"

"It's Peter," defended Thankful, weakly.

"Was you expectin' to eat him all by yourself? Well, I never!"

Thankful straightened up, with a look as near defiance as her sister had ever seen on her face, and answered: "No, I had no intention of spendin' this Thanksgiving alone. I have invited the usual guests, and they are in the parlor now!"

She turned back to her turkey, and Truth jerked off her bonnet and shawl, and snatched out something about "old fools bein' the biggest fools of all." But she was interrupted by a scream from her sister.

"Oh, Truth, hush! The hand of Providence was in this, I know it was. Here's the diamond ring!"

Truth only stood still and gaped, and stared at the sparkling thing in her sister's hand.

"Peter had swallowed it! My Land chokin' between tears and hysterical laughter, 'It must a' made the rascal choke goin' down. I remember now, goin' out to the pen to feed 'em with it, and that's the last place I noticed it on my hand. It was a mite loose, and slipped off when I was scatterin' feed, and he grabbed it. He was allus a greedy soul, and I guess he only got his just deserts. To think o' killin' a turkey worth five hundred dollars fer dinner! Bet the ain't anybody, not even the Governor-General, got anything more expensive fer dinner to-day than that!"

But Truth was not even smiling at her sister's gay raillery. She looked very solemn, very thoughtful.

"Thankful, if you'd been a hard-hearted old wretch like me and hadn't insisted on having a dinner, and invitin' in somebody to eat it with you."

"I tell you, sister Truth, the ways of Providence are past findin' out. Tomorrow we'll go to town together, and get the money back fer that ring, and buy the north forty. I've allus had a kinder hankerin' after it, and it'll bring in something every year."

Menu for Your Holiday Dinner

Cream of Tomato Soup
Saltine Crackers
Roast Pork with Chicken
Mashed Potatoes
Spiced Peaches
Hominy Creamed Onions
Cole-slaw
Pumpkin Pie with Quince Jelly
Fruit Nuts Coffee

The soup should be served very hot in cups, each cup set on a plate, with two or three saltine crackers, and brought in from the kitchen after the family is seated at table.

Pork and chicken, roasted together, make a delectable dish and an excellent substitute for turkey. Select either loin or spare-ribs and roast the pork side by side in the pan with a stuffed chicken, basting frequently. Another way is to cut up a fowl, stew or steam it until tender, then lay the pieces in the pan with the roasting pork and allow the chicken to brown nicely. In serving, lay a slice of pork and a piece of chicken on each plate.

Hominy requires such long cooking that it should be cooked the day before and reheated, or cooked overnight in the fireless cooker. In fact, reheated hominy always tastes better than that which is freshly cooked.

Cole-slaw is a refreshing and wholesome addition to a dinner. A firm, crisp head of cabbage should be used for the slaw. A half-hour before serving dinner, cut the head through the centre, removing the core and slice the cabbage as finely as possible. Mix the cabbage with the cream salad dressing, made thus: One-half of a tablespoonful of sugar, a few grains of cayenne pepper, two tablespoonfuls of flour, yolk of one egg, one and one-half tablespoonfuls of melted butter, three-fourths of a cupful of vinegar. Mix the dry ingredients, add the egg yolk, slightly beaten, then the butter, milk and vinegar, very slowly. Cook the mixture in a double boiler until it thickens, and when cool pour it over the cabbage. It is a singular fact that while boiled cabbage is one of the most indigestible of foods, raw cabbage is one of the most digestible.

Any kind of spruce or pickled fruit or sweet pickles will combine well with this menu, and rolls or baking-powder biscuits would make a pleasant addition.

All housewives have their favorite recipe for pumpkin pie, but some think the flavor of the pie is improved if eaten with quince jelly. The pie is served as usual and the jelly passed with it.

Nuts can be placed in small bowls at each end of the table, accompanied by raisins, if desired; or individual paper nut cups holding salted peanuts can be placed beside the butter plate at each place.

The fruit, prettily arranged in a low bowl or basket, can be set on a mat of ferns or wheat heads in the centre of the table, either ferns or wheat radiating out from the centre to form a border. Placed thus the fruit serves for decoration and a reminder of the harvest for which thanks are given on this, the national holiday.

A Community Thanksgiving

If there are families in the community who do not have family dinners on Thanksgiving Day, perhaps a community Thanksgiving Day can be planned.

After the bountiful dinner which always is of so much interest on this holiday, the following program may be given:

Thanksgiving hymn.
Short address on Thanksgiving by minister or teacher.

Solo.
Short talks by old settlers—The History and Early Days of This Community.

Pantomime—Thanksgiving.
Thanksgiving hymn.

Three or four pioneers of the community are asked to give short talks concerning the early days of the community. These personal remembrances will prove most interesting to all. The boys and girls as well as the men and women will more fully appreciate the growth and the development of the community and the pioneers themselves will enjoy recalling incidents of their younger days.

A Thanksgiving pantomime can be made very entertaining. The object is to have each letter of the word "Thanksgiving" stand for a word denoting something for which the community is thankful. The meaning of the word is acted out on the stage but no words are spoken. The success of the pantomime depends entirely on clever acting.

Prepare twelve letters comprising the word "Thanksgiving" by cutting them out of cardboard or having them drawn or painted in black or red on heavy squares of stiff white paper.

In beginning the pantomime, the chairman of the day, who introduces each of the 12 pantomimes, holds up the card bearing the letter T. He then explains that the first pantomime represents a word whose first letter is T and that were it not for this particular blessing, our Thanksgiving Day dinners would be incomplete.

The curtain is then raised and boys represent turkeys by strutting about and gobbling and end by chasing a little boy and girl off the stage. The curtain is lowered quickly and the chairman before introducing the second pantomime lets the company guess informally the word just represented. In introducing the second pantomime he holds up the cardboard bearing the letter H and explains that all farm communities look forward to the event described by the next word to be acted as it marks the fulfillment of the farmer's dreams. The curtain is raised showing a simple harvest scene, and then lowered.

In like manner all twelve pantomimes are introduced and acted out. It adds to the interest if the company guesses out each word as it is acted.

Local color can be added by making the letters express various local incidents, but the following is a suggestive outline.

T—Turkey—Two or three boys act like turkeys, gobbling and strutting about, and finally chase a little boy and girl who are watching them, off the stage.

H—Harvest—A harvest scene—Shocks of corn, pumpkins and branches of autumn leaves. Shade the lights to imitate moonlight.

A—Autos—Two small boys guide their wagons across the stage with much tooting of horns and manoeuvring.

N—Newspapers—A small boy walks across the stage crying, "Extra, Extra! All about the—" (insert some local joke).

K—Kinfolk—Mother joyfully reads letter aloud telling her all her kinfolk will be with her on Thanksgiving.

S—Shows—A very short one-act movie. A burlesque of the timeworn theme in which the heroine is kidnapped by the villain and rescued by the hero can be acted out to the great amusement of the audience.

G—Good Cheer—Several men and women, boys and girls come on the stage, greet each other heartily and show every evidence of happiness.

I—Income—A farmer and his wife count their cheques and make records in an enormous book labeled "Income."

V—Visit—A family group visits grandmother who is dressed up in style of long ago: it is an old-time Thanksgiving visit.

I—Infant—This can be a pretty scene, young mother with her little babe, asleep. The company may guess Infant or Innocence. The one who explains can say that but for the Innocents—the Infants—where would Thanksgiving gatherings be?

N—Nation—A beautiful girl is dressed as Miss Canada, and "O Canada" played during this tableau.

G—Giving—A very poor family is sitting down to a plain meal when comes Lady Bountiful with a well-filled basket.

Each pantomime should take only one to two minutes. If the costumes and stage setting are carefully planned before the beginning of the pantomimes, tiresome waits between acts will be avoided. Soft music played between and during the pantomimes adds much to the general effect.

The stage is banked in autumn leaves, piles of corn, corn shocks and sheaves of grain. These decorations will call to mind the original purpose of Thanksgiving, which is so essential

Thanksgiving Day

Thanksgiving Day will soon be here. How glad I am it is so near!

The hay is all in barn or stack,
The grain is all in bin or sack,
The corn is husked, the fodder in shock,
While near the barn the pure-bred stock
Look on with calm contented eyes,
Their looks expressing mild surprise.
The turkey gobbler, straight and true,
And fat and heavy and juicy too
Walks round the yard with solemn tread
And thinks not of the days ahead.
The pumpkin pies are ready to bake
And lots of cookies, tarts and cake.
All these and many more there'll be
Upon the table set for me.

At last Thanksgiving Day is here;
We rise and greet it with good cheer.

Then off to church, then home to eat.
That Thanksgiving dinner can't be beat.
And when at last we go to bed
And all our prayers have been said,
And as we lie and think, we say,
"Thank You" again for this glad day!

Thanksgiving, 1921.

The world with all its goodliest gains,
Home, with its calmest rest;
Life's heaviest and life's lightest hours,
Without Him are unblest.

He shares our griefs; let us our joys
With Him devoutly share;
And every festive day we keep,
Be our Redeemer there!

"The fruitful season now is o'er,
The Autumn has resigned her store,
Ungrateful man to feed,
How rich the bounty heaven bestows!
To us unbounded goodness flows
In every time of need."

What you allow to live in your heart, harbor in your mind, dwell upon in your thoughts, are seeds which will develop in your life and produce things like themselves. Hate seed in the heart can not produce a love flower in the life. A sinister thought will produce a sinister harvest. The revenge seed will produce a bloody harvest.—O. S. Marden.

There is no freedom on earth or in any star for those who deny freedom to others.—Elbert Hubbard.

You will be surprised to find how well it will pay you to take time to put yourself in tune. No matter when you get out of tune, stop working, refuse to do another thing until you are yourself, until you are back on the throne of your mental kingdom.

National Treasures.

The experience of the ages that are past, the hopes of the ages that are yet to come, unite their voices in an appeal to us; they implore us to think more of the character of our people than of its numbers; to look upon our vast natural resources as a means to be converted, by the refining alchemy of education, into mental and spiritual treasures; to give to the world the example of a nation whose wisdom increases with its prosperity, and whose virtues are equal to its power.

A NOVEL AND DELICIOUS CANDY

A friend of mine ate some cream peppermints at my house one day, and when I called on her a few days later she immediately proceeded to get out paper and pencil to "get my recipe" for the candy. I told her: "Four tablespoons of mashed potato and one pound of confectioner's sugar blended into a smooth paste." I went on to explain that the amount would vary some because of the difference in the moisture content of the mashed potato.

"That's all," I laughed. It seemed hard for her to believe it. Of course that is only the foundation, or fondant, for the easiest made and most delicious home-made candy I have ever tried to make. I used to make the cooked fondant, but I never shall again.

When you have made the one pound of sugar and four tablespoonfuls of mashed potato into the desired foundation candy, the next and most interesting step is to divide it into as many parts as you want varieties of candy and to flavor and color them. We like peppermint extremely well, and you could hardly tell it from the expensive cream peppermints on the market. A little of the fondant colored pink with red vegetable coloring adds attractiveness of appearance, and rose is a good flavoring for this.

I also use green vegetable coloring, molding a bit of pale green fondant around a malaga grape. I like a candied cherry inside a bit of white fondant delicately flavored with almond, and our family's favorite of them all is maple-flavored fondant with a raisin inside, and a walnut or other nut pressed on top and bottom of the raisin-stuffed sweet.

A good filling for potato candy, and one right in line with its general home-made nature, is candied apples.

Rather tough, juiceless apples are best for this. Into a cup of boiling white corn syrup put eightths of a cup of sugar and a variety of flavors as described above. Let the apples simmer in the syrup until they are transparent. Color the syrup with red fruit coloring if you like, or not, as "suits the cook." A little lemon or orange juice, or the flavoring extract of either, is good to add while cooking the syrup, but is not necessary. It's a matter of taste. When the apples are transparent, drain them on a screen or sieve, dry them quite thoroughly, then use pieces of the candied apple for candy fillings.

Carrots, first boiled, are good candied so, and used in the same way. These apple-and-carrot confections are delicious used plain, and add a decorative appearance to the rest of the candies. They also make very acceptable fillings, and are almost as good as the expensive candied cherries.

I like peanut-butter centres in some of my candies. I particularly like dates stuffed with the white fondant, then rolled in granulated sugar. You can think of dozens of combinations according to your taste.

The shaping of the candies by hand is easily done. Flat, thick little rounds like cream peppermints or wintergreens are made by pressing the edges of a bit of fondant with the thumb and finger of one hand while lightly pinching the top and bottom of the piece with the thumb and finger of the other hand. Little round marbles are easily made, and look pretty in bright pink, cinnamon-flavored (with the extract), or in pale green, which might be flavored with lime or pistachio. I used cream of tartar in some green "marbles" with good effect for Christmas.

Pressing the chocolate or coconut kinds into a flat mass and cutting into squares makes variety. A round candy hollowed on top, then dipped into chocolate, makes a very pretty shape. Let the chocolate drip off well, and dip the confection bottom side down, letting it drip from one side. A little paraffin, a teaspoonful to the half-cake of bitter chocolate, will make the covering firmer, and it also looks nicer.

Potato candy does not sound as good as it tastes or looks. It is just of the smoothest, whitest, most finely grained consistency that can be produced with any candy paste. I shall never make creamy foundations any other way. Try it, too, for icings for cakes. It's delicious, and "then some."

When in doubt as to whether a certain thing is good for you, make this the test: "Will it tend to make a stronger man of me, so that I will be in better condition to fight life's battles, or will it weaken me and tend to demoralize my purpose?" No matter how unpleasant or disagreeable the thing may be, everything considered, if it will make you a stronger man or woman, do it.

Being Thankful Is Very Fine, but Making Some One Else Thankful Is Better.

It makes no difference where you start; it's the finish that counts.

Every day that is born into the world comes like a burst of music, and rings itself all the day through; and thou shalt make of it a dance, a dirge or a life march, as thou wilt.—Carlyle.

CURIOUS ISLANDS ALL OVER THE WORLD

JAP ISLES THAT CHANGE POSITION CONSTANTLY.

Mysterious Cluster Among the Aleutians Off the Western Extermy of Alaska.

At Yamagata, Japan, there is a small lake called the Lake of the Floating Islands which is said to contain as many as sixty islands that change their position constantly. The islands, which move first one way and then the other, start from masses of vegetable debris that are carried to the surface by bubbles of gas: reeds soon grow on these masses in such quantity that they sometimes become topheavy and overturn. In that case the reeds grow on the newly exposed side, until the islands have become so firm over. Prof. Kusakabe of the Tohoku Imperial University and several associates have investigated the mysterious movements of these floating islands. By placing wooden floats in the lake to show the situation and direction of the various currents these gentlemen found that the combined action of currents of air and water is what makes the islands move.

About ten years ago a new island was reported in that curious Bogosof Group among the Aleutians off the western extremity of Alaska. This one suddenly rose through seventy fathoms of water and far above, and its rise was accompanied by an earthquake that shook Unalaska and Dutch Harbor.

Disappeared in Three Months.
One of the most remarkable events in the history of this mysterious cluster occurred in 1907. On July 4 of that year officers of the U.S. revenue cutter McCulloch made a survey of a mountain, then smoking and fuming as though from its exertion in rising volcanically from the sea among the Aleutian Islands. It was reported in the survey that the peak was 2,000 feet through its base and 425 feet high. One of the surveying party, it is said, wanted the mountain to be named "Independence Mountain," in honor of the day the survey was made, but it was christened "McCulloch Peak." A little more than three months later the McCulloch again visited the place and found that the peak of the same name had totally disappeared.

The region in which this extraordinary event occurred has long engaged the attention of scientists and is in fact one of the strangest localities on earth. There seems to be proceeding there a sort of continuous performance of the character of a geographical vandeville show, in which Nature assumes the role of quick change artist. These startling changes are said to be due to the action of the Bogosof volcano, in the Aleutian Islands. This volcano was discovered about 1790 by a Russian admiral of that name, and it then constituted a single island, now called Castle Island.

It is now conjectured that these islands were probably thrown up by a deep sea volcano, which may thus be regarded, both literally and figuratively, as at the bottom of all weird natural phenomena in this region. Surveys made by revenue cutters show that the islands must have come from great depths, the thousand fathom curve being less than four miles to the northwest.

Island Peak Exploded.
During the winter of 1905-1906 there appeared a new peak about halfway between the old islands. When this peak developed it formed connection with Fire Island, and left a passage between it and Castle Rock in which the least depth of water was five fathoms. This peak was surveyed by officers of the revenue cutter Perry in June, 1906, and was named Perry Peak. The mysterious island surveyed on July 4, 1907, by the McCulloch's officers was then, as has been said, giving forth sulphurous fumes, showing its recent volcanic origin. This peak had absorbed in its uplift about half of Perry Peak and had filled in the space of Castle Rock, thus making practically one island of the group. It is thought that this peak exploded on September 1, 1907, at 5 o'clock p.m. a dense, black cloud passed over Unalaska Island, covering the land with ash.

Some years ago the revenue cutter Rush visited this island and found great changes, Perry Peak having disappeared. A high ridge of land extended from Fire Island to Castle Rock, having an elevation of three hundred feet at its highest point; the entrance to the harbor near Castle Rock had filled in; high land was formed to the west-northwest, near Fire Island. The navigator of the Rush made a survey of the harbor as it then existed and found it to be one mile across, with from four to twenty-five fathoms of water. The shore to the south was steaming. Although the reports of these surveys read prospectively enough, one can easily picture the danger of surveying a locality likely to break out in a destructive eruption at any time.

No matter how good the book, it can't do all the work. To reap from it sowing you must do more than merely read it.

Surnames and Their Origin

HOUSTON

Variation—Huston.
Racial Origin—Scottish.
Source—A locality.

The family names of Houston and Huston may in some few instances be a corruption or variation of the form Hughson, but not in many. It is easy often to account for the introduction and elimination of many letters from given and family names in the course of their development. The letter "h," for instance, is readily eliminated. But it's not easily introduced, and the change from Hughson, or Huson, to Houston is not a natural one.

Huston, or Housten (the spellings are interchangeable) have developed as family names from the place name of Houston. It is a parish in Renfrewshire, Scotland.

Tradition has it that the name originated from one Hugh Padruin, who, in the reign of Malcolm IV, of Scotland, about the year 1159 A.D., received grants of land at this place, in the barony of Hilpeter, from Baldwin of Biggar, who was then Sheriff of Lanark.

STRACHAN

Racial Origin—Scottish.
Source—A locality.

This family name is derived from a parish name in Kincardineshire, Scotland, and of course was borne in the first place either by those who held big lands in that place or who, upon travelling to other parts, became known by it in preference to their previous homes.

But though the family name has been formed in the English rather than in the Gaelic manner, the place name itself is Gaelic.

Its meaning is that of "little valley" or "valley-head," and it is a common of the words "strath" or "stra" (which also gives the name Strathclyde) and "ceann" or "chan," which you'll also find in the surnames of that famous Scottish historical figure "Malcolm Ceann-Mor" (literally "Malcolm Big-Head").

But in the combination the "ch" sound dominates and eliminates the "th," giving the pronunciation "strachan" rather than "strath-chan," though more anciently the place was called "Strathachan."

RANKIN

Variations—Macrankin, Rankine.
Racial Origin—Scottish.
Source—A given name.

The family names of Rankin, Rankine and Macrankin are developments of a name-borne by one of the Clan Maclean of Duart.

This sept was called in the Gaelic, "Clann Mhic Ruing," from the given name of a chieftain prominent in its history. It was, however, according to tradition, known as the "Clann Duille" in more ancient times, and the Macrankins claim to be the descendants of an Irish chieftain named "Cuidhlig."

The forms Rankin and Rankine, of course, are only Anglicized forms of "Mhic Ruing," or "MacRuing," the "kin" in this case being the English equivalent of clan or family, and not a diminutive ending.

This sept of the Clan Maclean seems to have been noted principally for the number and importance of the bagpipe players that it produced, and it must be understood that under the Scottish clan system the piper was a real personage, a sort of custodian of the clan traditions and a constant attendant upon the head of the clan as well as a musician.

of a bicycle splash mud on the clothing of the rider.

The earth in those far-distant days used to spin much faster than it now does, and as it revolved it tended to fling off great masses of matter from its surface. These would collect together in the form of a gigantic "blob" at one point of its surface, and eventually the "blob" was flung into space, where, owing to its own rapid rotation, it soon became the globe which we call the moon.

Headed in the Right Direction.

There is one success sign that is never lacking in the man who is made of the stuff that wins. He is always headed in the right direction, always moving forward. He may not be always going at a rapid pace but he is always facing toward his goal. No matter in what way you consider this man, his appearance, his dress, his manner, if doing things, his initiative, his letters, everything about him bears the stamp of progress, shows that he is a man with a definite aim who is headed towards a definite goal.

The Boy Was Right.

One of the great public schools, says the London Morning Post, had so tempting a target was hard for the boys to resist. Once on coming into the classroom the master found his class gazing with such profound gravity either at their desks or at the ceiling that he looked round for symptoms of trouble. Sure enough, on the blackboard was written the quotation: "Hail to thee, blithe spirit—Bird thou never wert."

"Who wrote that?" the master demanded sharply.

There was dead silence for a moment, and then a small, thin, studious-looking boy in spectacles rose and replied: "Please, sir, I think it was Shelley."

Waiting for a Living.

Few people know that waiting outside the wall of the Old City of Jerusalem, beneath the site where once stood the Temple of Solomon, is systematically done by proxy.

Pious Jews abroad, who cannot hope to visit Jerusalem in person, send funds to local Jews, who go to the Wall and give expression to the absent one's grief. This money, known as "Halaka Money," is one of the mainstays of the Jewish colony in Jerusalem. There are Schools of Wallers, and if sorrow at the Wall of Walling expresses itself in tears, these are collected and sold abroad as precious relics.

When the Zion Commission was established in Palestine, the "Halaka Money" from Jews abroad was diverted largely into its coffers, and the financial support of the wallers fell away seriously. But it has been restored since, either by subsidies from the Zion funds, or by a renewal of direct subscriptions.

Success of Forestry in France.

One hundred years ago the Landes, some two million acres in extent, was a barren waste, grazed by a poor and unhealthy type of sheep, and described by a local writer as swampy, fever-ridden, and desolate. The area, by intelligent co-operation between state, communal, and individual owners has been turned from the poorest district in France into two of the richest departments of that rich country. In that happy district practically no local rates are paid, fire-wood can be had almost for the asking. Individual peasants own up to 100 to 300 hectares (250 to 750 acres) of what was once barren soil, and now is forest land worth £100 per acre, and bringing in a steady revenue from turpentine and from pit props for the British market. The wages in the district are high, and the shelter and humus given by the trees allow the once sandy waste to be used for vine culture and cereal crops.

THE FALL WEATHER HARD ON LITTLE ONES

Canadian fall weather is extremely hard on little ones. One day it is warm and bright and the next wet and cold. These sudden changes bring on colds, cramps and colic, and unless baby's little stomach is kept right the result may be serious. There is nothing to equal Baby's Own Tablets in keeping the little ones well. They sweeten the stomach, regulate the bowels, break up colds and make baby thrive. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Belgians Dig Fifty Feet for Shell.

In the last year of the war a formidable shell dropped from a height of 6,000 feet on the village of Havay, between Mons and Maubeuge, says a Brussels despatch. It did not explode, but it made a hole in the earth about 50 feet deep, where it had remained. This shell weighs two tons, and the charge of explosive is estimated to weigh from 100 to 150 lbs. The German shells, who regarded the shell as much importance, tried to extract it, but were unable to do so.

The Belgian authorities succeeded in pulling out the shell after making a large excavation about it. The work demanded great precaution as a shell of a similar kind to the one buried at Havay fell not far from the French frontier and made a crater more than 100 feet in diameter.

International Court of Justice.

The League of Nations has constituted the international court of justice provided for in the Treaty of Versailles. As a matter of record we give the names of the judges: Viscount Finlay, Great Britain; Dr. Yorgu-Oda, Japan; Dr. Andrew Weiss, France; Commendatore D. Anzilotti, Italy; Dr. Ruy Barbosa, Brazil; Dr. B. T. C. Loder, Holland; Antonio S. de Bustamante, Cuba; Judge Didrik Niholm, Denmark; Dr. Max Huber, Switzerland; Dr. Raphael Y. Creva, Spain; Dr. John Bassett Moore, United States. Four deputy judges were also elected: Dr. Negulesco of Roumania, Dr. Jovanovic of Jugoslavia, Mr. Wang of China and Judge Beichmann of Norway.

Monarchist Menace in Germany.

After 1871 the French exiled all members of the reigning family and thereby removed an element of danger, a course that did much toward consolidating the young republic. That the former kaiser of Germany is still awarding crosses of merit, though three years out of power, that Prince Oscar parades daily while the band plays the royal hymn and that there are monarchist demonstrations all over the country have finally aroused some of the German newspapers to urge the Reichstag "to make an exceptional law applying to an exceptional case." One proposal is to exile all German princes, especially those of the Hohenzollern and Wittelsbach families.

WHAT TO DO FOR STOMACH TROUBLE

Good Advice From One Who Had Suffered Much.

Nine tenths of all forms of indigestion or so-called stomach trouble are not due to the condition of the stomach at all, but are caused by other influences. The great contributing cause of indigestion is thin blood. Good blood and plenty of it is required by the stomach to take care of the food. If the blood is thin the stomach functions sluggish, food lies undigested, gas forms and causes pains in various parts of the body. Instead of getting nourishment from the blood the system gets poison.

Relief from this condition can be obtained by the tonic treatment which Mr. D. Shaw, M. Stewart, P.E.I., tried and now warmly recommends to others. Mr. Shaw says: "I suffered from indigestion for over four years, and have tried many of the well-known remedies for such troubles, but never obtained more than temporary relief. The trouble was aggravated by constipation setting in owing to the stomach failing to do its work, and laxatives only gave relief to the bowels and left the stomach in worse condition. The result was my blood was growing more and more anaemic, I did not sleep well at night and was growing dependent. I was in this wretched condition when a friend advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I got three boxes and by the time they were finished there was some change for the better. This greatly encouraged me and I continued taking the pills for some three months, by which time my stomach was all right again, my blood good, nerves strong and life was again worth living. My advice to all who suffer from stomach trouble is to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills can be obtained through any medicine dealer, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Pauper Invented Blanket.

Poverty is responsible for the invention of the blanket. Years ago a man in England lost all his wealth and became very poor. One cold winter night in 1340 he used a piece of rough unfinished cloth for a bed covering to keep himself warm, and from this makeshift bed covering he invented the blanket. The name of this man was Thomas Blanket, and the new kind of bedding has been known under the name of blanket ever since.

Got Her Answer.

Hearing a faint rustle in the dark hallway below, the elder sister, supposing the young man had gone, leaned over the balustrade and called out: "Well, Bessie, have you landed him?" There was a deep, sepulchral silence for some moments. It was broken by the hesitating, constrained voice of the young man: "She has!"

Be Very Careful.

The Sunday school treat was in full swing, and after the games the youngsters all sat down to a good feed. Little Johnnie, unaccustomed to such rich fare, had eaten unsparingly. And now, at the end, he was feeling rather uncomfortable.

"Can I lift you down?" asked the kind old lady.

"Yes, ma'am, you can lift me down," replied Johnnie; "but—and he looked pleadingly up into her eyes—"please don't bend me."

How He Won Her.

Now Hortense was very proud of her small feet. This fact was quite well known to young Wilkins, one of her numerous suitors, and he determined to make good use of it.

After months of ardent toil he approached her with his small savings. "Hortense," he cried, "I lay the whole of my fortune at your feet."

"Fortune?" gasped Hortense. "I wasn't aware that you had any."

"It certainly isn't much," gallantly responded Wilkins, "but it would look immense beside those tiny feet of yours!"

TORONTO WOMAN GAINS 35 POUNDS

ONLY WEIGHED NINETY POUNDS, SHE SAYS.

Now Feels Fine and Strong and Gratitude to Tanlac is Unbounded.

"Tanlac has built me up from a mere frame weighing only ninety pounds to a strong woman weighing one hundred and twenty-five pounds and my gratitude is unbounded," said Mrs. Lydia Pickup, 12 Ramsay Lane, Toronto, Ont.

"My stomach troubled me so much during the past three years that my life was a perfect horror. My appetite was gone entirely, gas would form and nearly set me wild with pain in the pit of my stomach. The gas nearly smothered me and my heart acted so queerly that it alarmed me. I could get scarcely any sleep and was tired and dull and all worn out. I often turned so dizzy I could hardly stand up, and at times my head hurt like it would burst open. I lost weight until my clothes were entirely too large and I was so weak I could hardly move."

"One day I saw a statement about Tanlac and I determined to try it. I have now taken ten bottles in all and my appetite has come back, I eat just what I want and as much as I want at every meal without pain or any uncomfortable feeling afterwards. TO WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

This Woman's Letter Tells You How To Pass The Crisis Safely.

Lascelles, P.Q.—"During the Change of Life I felt so weak and run down I could hardly do my work. The perspiration would pour over my face so that I couldn't see what I was doing. We live on a farm, so there is lots to do, but many who felt as I did would have been in bed. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it did me a world of good. I tried other remedies but I put Vegetable Compound ahead of them all, and I tell every one I know how much good it has done me."—Mrs. DUNCAN BROWN, Lascelles, Prov. Quebec.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backaches, dread of impending evil, timidly, nervousness in the expression of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and dizziness should be heeded by middle-aged women, and let Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound carry them safely through this crisis as it did Mrs. Brown.

You are invited to write for free advice. No other medicine has been so successful in relieving women's suffering as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Women may receive free and helpful advice by writing the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

Are Fall Fairs Decaying?

A noticeable feature about some of the district fairs this year was the lack of interest taken in them by both exhibitors and visitors. On the other hand School Fairs are increasing in popularity and attendance each year, the entries more numerous and the competition greater. What is the explanation? Are the older fairs deteriorating into professional displays where a few exhibitors take the bulk of the prizes with little or no competition; or have people lost the desire for friendly rivalry in the productions of farm and home? Certainly something must be done by directors to revive interest in the old-established exhibitions or they will soon die a natural death. To show that the trouble is not confined to one section, but is general, we take an extract from the Aylmer Express, which says: "The Aylmer Fair is a thing of the past for another year and in some respects at least the exhibition was nothing to boast about. The weather man did his part and smiled upon us, and the attendance fully met all expectations. In the majority of the departments however, the exhibits were conspicuous by their absence. We are told that at Tillsonburg and at other places the same conditions prevailed. What is the cause of so great a change in this respect? A few years ago it was found practically impossible to provide sufficient space for exhibits, and the cry was for more room. One tells us that the prize money offered is not large enough, even though a prize be won, to pay for the trouble of bringing in the exhibits. That may be so, but we have never understood that the primary object of holding a fall fair was for the purpose of fattening exhibitors' pocketbooks. The argument of another former exhibitor is that it is all to much bother. He prefers to crank up his auto and bring in the family to be entertained as spectators. If that feeling is general among agriculturists, and we fear it is becoming so, it will not be many years before district fairs will go out of existence."

Business conditions are generally conceded to be much brighter than they were two months ago, says an exchange. Wholesale stocks are low and factories must get busy to supply the demand. The recent rise in prices has stimulated trade, most people having put off purchasing thinking prices would take a further drop. The period of depression we have been coming through has been largely a matter of mind and it will help adjust conditions more rapidly if buyers will forget pre-war prices. Those in a position to know say that pre-war prices will never again be reached. Living is on a higher scale than it was in 1914. Local merchants report a decided upturn in buying.

Commenting on a clipping from this paper of last week the London Advertiser wrongly conveys the impression that we would discourage the farmer from making a donation of his products to assist the famine sufferers in Russia. We only pointed out that there appears to be a tendency on the part of relief associations to take it for granted that what the farmer raises costs him nothing and that a donation of a few bushels of wheat means little to him. Had the relief associations at the same time asked the man who had made himself rich out of the war for a

The Home Paper

Every Four Corners has its Home Town Week now-a-days, but all the boys and girls who have wandered from the Township Center cannot get back to enjoy the loved surroundings. But all can subscribe to the old home town paper and thus keep well in touch with the little spot they once called home.

What joy to run over the school promotions and find that the tots of a few years ago are moving high-places and higher in scholastic circles and eventually blossom forth as the "sweet girl graduates," or the clean strong boys discarding knicker-

Just watch that hardened old city coder open up his home paper—it is the first thing he picks up out of his bunch of mail—and what can he find there to interest him? Angus McCugan's horse died yesterday; Peter McGregor will run for the county clerkship; Horace Jell hopes to win the secretaryship of the Hilltown agricultural society; Lydia Munger has opened a millinery store in one side of the printing office; Mrs. Brown lost her hand satchel in the butchery; Dr. Dorland is attending Clara Brown who is down with a severe cold; Mrs. Plotter broke her ankle and is in the county hospital.

Yet though he smiles at the old-time styles and expressions he enjoys it all over and over again for it takes his mind back home where his wonderful boyhood days—happy days—were spent.

Business conditions are generally conceded to be much brighter than they were two months ago, says an exchange. Wholesale stocks are low and factories must get busy to supply the demand. The recent rise in prices has stimulated trade, most people having put off purchasing thinking prices would take a further drop. We only pointed out that there appears to be a tendency on the part of relief associations to take it for granted that what the farmer raises costs him nothing and that a donation of a few bushels of wheat means little to him. Had the relief associations at the same time asked the man who had made himself rich out of the war for a hundred or two hundred dollars, the merchant for a few yards of cloth from his shelves or the grocer or butcher for a few pounds of sugar or bacon from his shop, there would have been no ground for criticism. The farmer, of course, will respond, as they usually do, but why single them out as the only class of people from whom donations are expected? While it is not altogether a parallel case, we might remind our city friend that a few years ago an appeal was made through the rural pulpits for donations of hand picked apples for the idle poor of London. At that time the farmers were in urgent need of help to carry on their fall work, but every inducement they offered was turned down by the city's unemployed. For once the farmer did not "rise to the appeal," and there were no hand picked apples forthcoming.

The Boot and Shoe Recorder throws out this timely hint:—Every man who pays his debts promptly helps business for himself as well as for everybody else. This is a consideration well worth keeping in mind in these days when money as well as labor has demanded higher wages—that is to say, when interest rates have risen.

Miss Agnes McPhail, the U. F. O. candidate in South-East Grey, says she will not be held up for contributions to anything except what she feels she should support as a private citizen. Sports, societies or churches will not find her a mark. Also she says she will not kiss babies, or smile upon men, only as a private citizen. We admire Miss McPhail's candor and we trust she can make good, but it's mighty hard to resist the appeals made these days. We have to stand for them in business whether we feel like it or not. Now that Miss McPhail is in business—for politics is a real business—we will watch her career, and if she makes good will give her three hearty cheers.—Kincairdine Review.

DRAIN THE HILLSIDES

Erosions Mean Considerable Loss to Many Farms.

Tilling, Open Ditching and Terracing Recommended—How to Plan and Do the Work—Why an Orchard Will Pay.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

The erosion of hillsides and the flooding of the land below by the eroded material has long been a worry and an economical loss to many farmers in hilly and mountainous sections. This can frequently be prevented, and the method employed depends on the conditions existing, such as the nature of the soil; light or heavy, the steepness of the slope, and the type of agriculture practiced; pasture or tilled crops.

The Value of "Sheep-Drains."

Wet hillsides used as sheep pastures may be much improved by what are sometimes called "sheep-drains." These are merely shallow open ditches about 30 inches wide on top, 9 inches wide on the bottom, and 15 inches deep for removing the surface soil and throwing it on the lower side to form a sort of embankment to the drain. The grade of the ditch should not be so steep as to give the water sufficient force to destroy the drain by either washing away the banks or digging the drain itself deeper, and thus making it dangerous for the sheep and lambs. Sub-drains are some times necessary. Terracing and Draining.

A system of terracing is quite universally used to prevent destructive washouts on hillsides. The terraces are made perfectly level, and of any width, and then carefully seeded to grass. At the time of rain the water spreads out evenly over the surface of these and then flows gently over the slope below without sufficient force to wash away any portion of the hill and thus prevents "gullying."

For the drainage of tilled hillsides a system of under-drainage is sometimes used successfully. The amount of erosion of the land largely depends on its condition. If the surface soil is kept firm the erosion will be lessened. Soft spots on the hillside, though, frequently occur as a result of seepage water from above which has penetrated the surface and then flows gently over the slope below without sufficient force to wash away any portion of the hill and thus prevents "gullying."

If tile drains are so laid to intercept this seepage water, considerable erosion can be prevented. If the hillside is comparatively steep, drains laid at an angle to the incline will be more satisfactory. They will naturally intercept all of the water flowing through the soil above them. Also the grade will be less and the drains are not so liable to be affected by the water moving slowly through them. If the slope is not very steep the drains may be laid down the incline with satisfactory results. British tile drains the land on both sides and no double draining results.

In this under-drainage the general benefits are again obtained. The water level is lowered, thus giving more root capacity to plants and the prevention of surface washing by allowing the water to penetrate through the soil to the drains, thus carrying much plant food to the roots of the plants.—R. C. Moffatt, O. A. College, Guelph.

Why an Orchard Will Pay.

The planting of commercial apple orchards in the Province of Ontario is highly desirable for several reasons:

1. Ontario is not producing enough good apples for home supply, but imports annually from Nova Scotia, British Columbia, Oregon and California.

2. Production in Ontario is likely to fall off still more because no commercial planting is being done. Very few commercial apple orchards have been set out in this Province since 1911.

3. Of the thousands of young trees set in the boom years of 1905 to 1911 a large proportion have already passed out of existence. Probably not more than 20 per cent. of the trees planted during those years will figure in the commercial production of the future, and certainly not more than 40 per cent. of them are alive and receiving reasonable attention to-day.

4. The home orchard will never again be an important factor in commercial apple production in this Province, because it is not large enough to be worth while. In seasons when scab control is difficult, or when prices are down because of a heavy crop, the return from the small orchard is not large enough to justify the expense and risk involved. When conditions are unfavorable the small orchard passes quickly into a state of neglect; this is why apple growing in Ontario is at such low ebb at present.

5. Fruit is an essential part of diet. While it is true that in case of necessity people can live without it, it is also true that health suffers and nutritional complaints become much more general. In the absence of the dietary of fresh fruits and vegetables. The apple is the most important and most useful fruit of the temperate zone, and, from the standpoint of public health, its culture should not be neglected.—J. W. Crow, O. A. College, Guelph.

LIGHT-SIX NOW $1725

The Car that is converting thousands to the SIX

The popularity of the six-cylinder automobile is universal. Everyone admits that there is great pleasure in driving a Six, and the six cylinder motor is now recognized as the most satisfactory unit of power.

The Studebaker LIGHT-SIX motor embodies the most advanced engineering developments—

—it is powerful. Its 40-horsepower motor supplies much more than the usual power per pound of car weight. From the first moment you sit behind the wheel you get that velvety feeling of a strong, continuous flow of overlapping power impulses.

—it picks up quickly and smoothly, affording a quick getaway in traffic; it throttles down to a snail's pace in high gear.

—it is free from vibration, up to 55 miles per hour, than any car of its size and weight yet produced in Europe or America.

The LIGHT-SIX is the most evenly balanced car you can buy. Its light weight (only 2500 pounds) is so equally distributed that if the chassis were halved or quartered each section would weigh practically the same. This means tire economy, and steady road-holding at high speeds.

See this car—drive it—test it. You will be won by it. You will understand why it is the Studebaker ideal of what a light, six-cylinder car should be.

HON. T. A. CRERAR
ANOTHER BANK ROBBERY

To the Editor:

Sir,—I read with some interest the reports of the Wyoming bank robbery and note that the citizens (unlike the Melbourne residents) stood idly by while the bandits made a clean getaway. But why should they do otherwise? Our hero, Campbell, answered his country's call and met the nation's foe, coming home to be murdered in cold blood. And the people caught and tied securely the murderers and handed them over to the supposedly strong arm of the law, and these men are now at large and we are of an investigation. I wonder if the Government takes us for fools?

If there was anything wrong at the London jail there is just one man whose head should come off first and that is the inspector, the man who conducted the investigation. Every move he made, every question he asked, was trying to cover his own track. Mr. Carter published a signed statement that there had been one inspection in six years. Is that what we are paying W. W. Dunlop a large salary for? We elected a farmer Government and expected that they would scrape the barnacles off the ship, but instead, the barnacles have got control of the ship and are surely and swiftly heading it for the rocks.

Another good example is McLean, the deputy minister of highways. I, along with hundreds of others, turned down a good, clean, young man because he was a lawyer and favored one highway, and what did we get? Surely the sound thinking people of West Middlesex will take a lesson and seriously consider before marking their ballot on Dec. 6. If we elect a similar bunch at Ottawa that will slash the money around as our former Government has in Ontario, I ask what will happen? I consider it is up to the four Government supporters from Middlesex to go to Toronto and demand of Roney and Nixon that this whole outfit around the jail, inspector, deputy-sheriff and all, be removed, and that they be replaced with good, clean men of character. Yours for a Briton's fair play and justice.

Round the stam of the travelling auctioneer the villagers stood in a crowd. But business was slow.

"What offers for this ancient fiddle he inquired pathetically. "Look at it over. Notice the blarney finger marks of remorseless time. To the merry notes of this fine old instrument the broadened dances of fair France may have danced the night."

By this time the crowd was becoming interested.

"Ah," continued the auctioneer, "it bears an abrasion—perhaps the touch of fire. Who knows? It may have been the very fiddle on which Nero played while Rome burned. Now, what offers?"

"Fifty cents!"

"It is yours, sir!" replied the auctioneer quickly.

Film Favorites in Denmark.

A Danish periodical recently asked its readers to vote for their favorites among the film artists of the day. The result has now been announced, and, as might have been expected, "the world's sweetheart," Mary Pickford, the Canadian actress, is top of the poll with 139,199 votes, more than 20,000 ahead of her nearest competitor, Marguerite Clark, who polled 138,822. First among the men comes smiling Douglas Fairbanks with 132,128 votes, closely followed by W. S. Hart, the "strong, sil at name," with 129,553. Then come Harold Lockwood and Wallace Reid with 129,190 and 119,466 respectively. The two remaining places in the first eight are filled by Pearl White, the Pathé serial star, 114,295 votes; and Aneta Stewart with 102,876. It will be noted that the Danes like the stars who are popular right here in Canada.

Children Cry for Fletcher's

CASTORIA

Fletcher's Castoria is strictly a remedy for Infants and Children. Foods are specially prepared for babies. A baby's medicine is even more essential for Baby. Remedies primarily prepared for grown-ups are not interchangeable. It was the need of a remedy for the common ailments of Infants and Children that brought Castoria before the public after years of research, and no claim has been made for it that its use for over 30 years has not proven.

What is CASTORIA?

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. For more than thirty years it has been in constant use for the relief of Constipation, Flatulency, Wind Colic and Diarrhoea; allaying Feverishness arising therefrom, and by regulating the Stomach and Bowels, aids the assimilation of Food; giving healthy and natural sleep. The Woman Seller

The Story of a Crack Salesman Who Invades a New Territory—And Clinches His Prospect.
BY RICHARD CONNELL

PART III.

I changed the subject. I told him about my little boy, Ned.
"He's as husky a four-year-old as you ever saw," I told my neighbor. "Aren't kids a pest?" inquired Mr. Mulqueen.
"I never expect to," said Mr. Mulqueen.
"Then you'll miss just about the finest experience in life," I said.
"Well," said Mr. Mulqueen, "you ought to know."
"I do know. I know it's great to watch that kid of mine developing. Why do you suppose I talk myself hoarse selling cars?"
"For dough," suggested Mr. Mulqueen.
"Partly. But mostly because I want to give that kid of mine an education. Because I want to build up a business and give him a flying start in life. Why, Tim, my work has been twice as much fun since I've had that kid to work for."
"I know when to begin to call a man by his first name," I said.
"He's a inspiration, that kid," I went on. "It's the real thing, I tell you."
"Well, you ought to know," said Tim Mulqueen. "Can he say 'da da yet?'"
"Why, man alive, he can say anything in the dictionary," I said proudly. "And he can read 'cat,' 'dog,' and 'pig.'"
"I don't know much about kids," admitted Mr. Mulqueen. "I thought for the first five years they did nothing but bawl."
"Ned never bawls," I said. I did not admit that this was an exaggeration.
"You don't tell me?" said Mr. Mulqueen. I answered questions about Ned for an hour.
"You boys mustn't tire yourselves talking," said Miss Quest, when she came in with our gargoyle.
When she had administered the gargoyle and gone, I called over the partition.
"Have you noticed what a pleasant voice our nurse has?"
"No, has she?" said Mr. Mulqueen. I judged from his tone that I had derailed his train of thought. I suspected him of thinking about Ned and kids.
During our milk-toast breakfast next morning Mr. Mulqueen did not say "I was happy till I met you on the main stairs of Quebec." There was a strange, unwonted silence in his cubicle. Then he broke out with:
"I wish some of the boys would come out to see me. I've been here a long time now, and no one has come near me."
"It's a long way out here," I reminded him.
"Your wife comes every day," he rejoined.
"Yes," I said, "but there's a lot of difference between a wife and a friend."
He said nothing more the rest of the morning, and I read my magazines. About noon I heard him say: "There's a lot in that."
"In what?" I asked.
"What you said this morning," he said.
"About a wife sticking by you better than her friends," he said. "I've been thinking about it."
The partition hid my smile from Timothy D. Mulqueen.
Miss Quest brought in our lunch. It included some glorious golden French toast.
"My hat, this is wonderful!" I said to her. "Who made it?"
She blushed and said:
"Why, I did."
"Isn't this the real thing in French toast?" I shouted to Mr. Mulqueen. "Miss Quest made it."
"It's hot stuff," agreed Mr. Mulqueen from a crowded mouth. "I haven't tasted anything so good for twenty years."
Miss Quest's blush deepened. She went out.
"There's a fine woman," I said.
"Where?" asked Mr. Mulqueen.
"I mean Miss Quest," I said.
"Some cook!" said Mr. Mulqueen feebly. I judged he was enjoying the French toast.
"She'd make somebody a splendid wife," I remarked.
"She isn't much on looks," said my neighbor, seemingly more interested in his breakfast.
"Why, you're blind!" I said indignantly. "Tim, that woman has a noble face. That's the only word for it. And her smile is beautiful. Have you noticed what fine teeth she has?"
"Why, yes, I have," said Mr. Mulqueen.
"And she's graceful, too," I said. "As graceful as any woman I ever saw."
"I'll have to watch," said Mr. Mul-queen, humbly, I thought. "I don't know much about such things."

"Notice what a thick, handsome hair she has," I said. "It's as fine a head of hair as I ever saw."
"You don't tell me?" said Mr. Mulqueen.
"Miss Quest came in with our post-lunch gargoyle. When she had gone out, Mr. Mulqueen remarked:
"They are nice."
"Her hair and her smile," he said. He could not see my smile.
"And it's pretty the way she moves around," he admitted.
"What a wife that woman would make!" I said in the manner of the soliloquies of old-fashioned melodrama.
"What makes you think so?" he asked. Was I wrong or did I detect the signs of awakening interest in his tons which every salesman learns to recognize and strain an ear for.
"Well, what qualities does the ordinary man look for in a wife?" I asked.
"Good nature, I suppose," said Mr. Mulqueen.
"Miss Quest is one of the best-natured persons I ever met," I said. "She looks after peevish, helpless patients all day and never loses her smile. What else?"
"Loyalty," said Mr. Mulqueen after an interval of cogitation.
"Miss Quest is faithful to her job. She hasn't missed a day in nine years, they tell me. And it's a hard job, too. Anything more?"
"A wife ought to be a good housekeeper," I supposed, said Mr. Mulqueen, after considering the matter a moment or two. "You know what I mean—neat, economical, and a good cook."
"You're full of evidence this minute that Miss Quest is a corking cook," I said, "and the way she takes care of us and our rooms shows that she could keep a house snug and comfortable. As for being economical, I've heard that the little salary she gets here she's saved money. What else?"
"I wonder why she never married," mused my neighbor.
"She never found the right man, I suppose," I said carelessly. "Of course she's had lots of chances. I understand that there's a florist in Green-wich right now who is crazy about her."
Heaven forgive me the fiction.
When Miss Quest brought my fever neighbor his baked potato that evening, I heard them talking together in low voices for some minutes.
"And none of the boys have come to see me," I heard him say.
"What a shame!" said Miss Quest, and there was real sympathy in her quiet voice. "Perhaps they don't know where you are, Mr. Mulqueen."
"Oh, they know well enough," he said, "but they don't care. Nobody cares."
"You mustn't say that, Mr. Mulqueen," she said. They talked some more. I didn't mind if she was late with my supper that night.
I made a quick recovery from my scarlet fever; I lost my skin rapidly and efficiently, and raised an entire new crop. My thoughts turned to golf and Dekkar Eighties.
"I talked to Mr. Mulqueen about Miss Quest; he seemed to enjoy the subject. Sometimes, around gargoyle-time, I made snoring noises; I heard low-voiced conversation in the next cubicle. The day before I was to be discharged my wife came to the hospital with my clothes. When she pushed open my cubicle door, a low, regular, whistling-rippling noise from the adjoining room told us that Mr. Mulqueen was asleep.
"Helen," I said softly, "please knock that large red book off the table."
"Why, Phil, what in the world for?" she was alarmed.
"Sssh! tell you later. Only do it," I whispered.
Helen knocked the book off the table. It hit the floor with a gratifying smack. The snoring in Mr. Mulqueen's cubicle stopped abruptly.
"My dear," I said to Helen, raising my voice. "I want you to ask Cousin George to dinner at our house next Monday."
"Cousin George?" asked my wife blankly. "I have no cousin George."
"Yes, Cousin George Winship of Perry Sound. Not Cousin George Stanton of Owen Sound," I said, making faces and motions at her. "I want him to meet Miss Quest."
"Oh, Cousin George Winship of Perry Sound," said my wife. "Certainly. I haven't seen old George in ages."
"I'm very anxious to have him meet her. She's a splendid girl. But I think she would make a splendid match for him, don't you?"
"Splendid," agreed Helen. "Couldn't be better. I'd like to see him marry her. She's a splendid girl. But aren't you afraid, Phil dear, that we'll disturb the man next door?"

A splendid serial will commence next week, entitled "The Green Ray," from the pen of William Le Queux, the famous English writer of Mystery Stories. It is a tale of the British Secret Service during the Great War and holds the reader's enthralled attention from start to finish. Look out for the opening chapters of this exciting yarn in next issue.

"No fear," I said, "he's fast asleep. I'm glad you agree with me that Miss Quest would be a good match for Cousin George. The rich old rascal needs somebody to help him spend all the money he's making from his bee farm."
"Oh, is George a bee farmer now?" asked my wife. "Has he given up his poodle kennel?"
"His poodle kennel? Oh, by no means. He still has over a hundred poodles. He keeps two poodle clippers constantly busy."
"But, Phil, do you think Miss Quest will like him?" asked Helen with some difficulty.
"She's sure to," I said. "He's just the man for her. She won't be able to withstand that black moustache of his. She has as good as told me that she is only waiting for the right man to come along."
"Good old George," said Helen, "he'll get a peach of a wife in Miss Quest. He won't be slow in asking her, either."
"No," I agreed, "I shouldn't be surprised if it were a case of love at first sight, and a marriage in a month. Poodle fanciers are so warm-blooded and temperamental, you know."
"Good," said Helen. "I love to play matchmaker. I'll write to cousin George this very night."
"And I'll ask Miss Quest after supper," I said.
We heard a stirring in the next cubicle.
"Oh, I hope we haven't disturbed you, Mr. Mulqueen!" I called out.
"Not at all, not at all," he said gruffly, and his voice, I noticed, had lost its friendly joviality. He muttered something to himself. I thought it sounded like "poodle fancier."
Helen left, and I fell asleep, and snored with such obvious enjoyment that when Miss Quest came in with the mid-afternoon gargoyle she did not wake me to administer it, but went into Mr. Mulqueen's cubicle and talked.
After supper, my last in the hospital, I said to Miss Quest:
"I hope you can come to see us some time. I know how dull it must get out here. When can you come? Monday for dinner?"
"I'm not going to be here much longer," she said with her smile and a blush.
"No?" I said. "What hospital are you going to?"
"I'm not going to a hospital," said Miss Quest. "I'm going to be married."
I met her in South Beach a year later, while I was demonstrating a Dekkar Eight to there. She was wearing a green tricot suit and was pushing the largest perambulator I have ever seen.
(The End.)

Voices From the Sky.
Passengers by air liners of the future will, when weary of travelling, be able to listen to some musical star in London while they themselves are far out above the Atlantic.
This has been made possible by the wonderful progress made of late in the development of wireless telephony in relation to flying. Machines of the future will be as capable of being fitted with electrophones as are London clubs to-day.
Often a business manager sitting in his London office gets in touch with the principal of his firm when the latter is speeding in an air express to Paris. These voices from the clouds are as clear and distinct as if a telephone call had been put in to business premises in the same street.
Pilots will be able to switch on to a music-hall, or a court-room, and travellers will be able to listen to their favorite artistes.

Boxing Gloves of Lead.
Boxing is one of the world's oldest sports. The noble art of self-defence was practised more than thirty centuries ago.
It was indeed a strong man's game. One hero, called Enclodius, used to slay oxen by giving them one blow between the eyes with his fist.
Boxing gloves were in use even in those early days; but there was a difference. The glove of today is a padded affair designed to soften the effect of a blow. In former times it was meant to increase the force of the punch! It consisted of a strip of leather, reinforced with lumps of brass and lead, which was wound round the pugilist's fist.
Men were willing to fight, not for a purse of thousands of dollars, but for a simple laurel wreath! The boxing matches of those days were no joke, for in most cases the vanquished boxer was killed by the knock-out blow.

Tomato Wastes.
Tomato pulp, for catsup, pastes and soups, is obtained in the requisite pure state by putting the tomatoes into what is called a "cyclone machine," the material being forced through small holes in a metal screen to get rid of the skins and seeds.
More than 225,000 tons of tomatoes are pulped annually in Canada and the United States, the skins and seeds being thrown away. It is a lamentable waste, inasmuch as the seeds yield an excellent salad oil, which is also first-rate for paints and varnishes, being a quick drier. The residue from the oil press, mixed with the skins, makes a highly nutritious stock feed.

Woman's Interests

The Treatment of Colds in Children.
One of the most important of hygienic "don'ts" is "Don't neglect a cold." Most of us think a cold is a very disagreeable thing, and we let it go at that, without realizing that it is potentially one of the most serious of diseases.
In the first place, when it begins no one can tell what it may prove to be, or how it will end. It may be a simple cold that will last four or five days; it may be a left-over case of influenza—there is a good deal of that still; it may be the beginning of measles, or the first symptom of pneumonia; or it may extend into the accessory sinuses, the ears or the bronchi, and cause no end of pain and trouble. It may even trench itself as a chronic catarrh and persist to the end of life. Therefore, the part of wisdom is to treat a cold—especially in a child—with great respect until you are sure of its identity and its intentions. Then treat it energetically; that is, treat the patient as you would treat anyone suffering from a serious disease.
The first thing to do—even before the disease has declared itself—is to put the child to bed in a sunny, warm and well-ventilated room and make him stay there. Do that even if there is only slight rawness of the throat, or feverishness, or nausea, or bone-ache and a general feeling of being out of sorts. Give a gentle laxative such as cascara or milk of magnesia or citrate of magnesia. If the cold proves to be a simple one, keep the patient in bed and every two hours give him a glass of water in which half a teaspoonful of bicarbonate of soda has been dissolved, and into which the juice of half a lemon has been squeezed. This is for adolescents; half as much is enough for young children. In the case of an ordinary mild cold no other remedy is necessary, and three or four days will usually be long enough in bed. Then the soda and the lemon juice may be reduced to a dose morning and evening, and in two or three days more the patient can get back to school.

In the case of a severe cold or of influenza stronger remedies must be given, but only under the doctor's orders. Any cold severe enough to require real medicine is severe enough to require the doctor.
Vegetable Values.
Eat vegetables—eat them daily; the doctor's bill will be saved thereby. Vegetable eaters rarely need medicine.
Liver out of order, and feeling in a torpid state? Well, an extraordinary feast of tomatoes will relieve the depression, and do the work better than a doctor's prescription. The remedy will be found more palatable, too.
Ever suffered from insomnia? Nerves all tangled, needing readjustment? Lay in a stock of lettuce; eat these up, and the thought of opiates will cease to allure you.
What about the celery trend? There is bottled up in these tender stems sufficient tonic to soothe the most shattered nervous system.
If onions were not so odorous, they might easily take the place of celery. The everlasting prejudice against this nerve tonic can be mitigated by consuming them last thing at night. Eat raw onions if you can. A nibble at a blade of parsley will remove the odor and sweeten the breath.
The bluest of blue pills are valueless compared with spinach. Its actual medicinal value can only be appreciated by those who make it a regular part of their diet.
If you don't eat parsnips, you ought to, either roasted, boiled, or fried. They are so extensively cultivated as they ought to be, and considering their adaptability to various soils, the surprise is that more do not specialize in their culture. Only recently scientists have informed us that the root possesses almost all the virtues claimed for sarsaparilla.
Have you any desire to increase your weight? Without doubt the finest root grown in any garden is best. In addition to its delicate flavor, it imparts to the body a healthy fatness which no other vegetable does. It is of considerable value as a winter dish, helping to maintain the natural heat of the body.
Too few recognize the actual "old value" of this most delicious root.
It is said that beans—the ordinary long-pod variety—allay thirst like no other vegetable.
Apart, however, from their claim as a thirst-quencher, beans are a vegetable of the utmost value as a food, and within recent years have attained considerable popularity.
Sufferers from general debility should feed on pumpkins. The ingredients of this vegetable are the basis of a patent medicine guaranteed to cure more ailments than flesh is heir to.
The world is increasing in inhabitants, however, who do not believe all they hear. The vegetable has excellent properties, and will help to keep one in the pink.
Ever tried watercress as a pick-me-up? The "pick" in these tender little leaves makes them delightfully palatable when used in sandwiches. In addition, they impart to the whole system the necessary vim when one feels a bit out of sorts. It is such an accommodating growth, too. When the hand is frost-bitten, you may pick the shoots which have germinated in a box placed by the fire-side.

If good digestion is to wait on appetite at all times, it will be necessary to assist digestion.
The best natural aid to this is the constant use of parsley. Don't, therefore, allow the parsley patch merely to die down in the winter-time. Secure every spray that grows; have it all dried. Apart from its aid to good digestion, it is an excellent flavoring for most dishes.
Have the value of the cabbage tabulated on the docket of the brain. You don't need to consume patent medicines guaranteed to cleanse the blood of its many impurities if these vegetables form a regular part of the diet.
A much more frequent use of cabbage will make for purity, and by a more natural process.
Eat vegetables, then, if you would be well. Eat them daily, and save the doctor's bill.

Gone With the Pin Money.
The father of Louisa M. Alcott, after his daughter's books had begun to bring in cash returns, held the "authoress" up as a shining example to a young great-uncle. "If there will study hard as Louisa did," said Bronson Alcott, "they may write stories and sell them and have their own pin money." The little girl on his knee belonged to this generation and did not quite understand. Then I shall not write stories, Uncle Bronson," she replied, "for I have all the pins I need!" In Louisa's day, pins were costly and women were sheltered.
My lady's pin money and her country sister's egg-and-butter money are interesting tales of a day that has gone. In country and town alike, women have come into their own. On the farm, when Father's purse is insufficient or his wad tight, Mother puts in an incubator or a steam canner or buys a hive or a nursery; Little Sister borrows money at the bank "on her own" for a watered calf, and they go to it. In town, Mother "gets a job" and Little Sister does stunts, useful, ingenious or picturesque, as the case may be, to earn enough to go to college or buy herself a bond. It is a good thing the pin money era has gone. If the modern sense of independence in women means anything, it surely means that in coming generations there will be fewer children of the mollycoddle variety, helpless "suckers"—to use a botanical term—that sap the parent stem but produce neither blossom nor fruit. Stalwart mothers mean stalwart sons and daughters. Perhaps voting and economically independent women will insure to the nation an increasing percentage of seriously interested men voters and thoroughly capable men of business.

Bride Behind the Veil.
A quaint marriage custom is in vogue in the Andaman Isles—the peninsular settlement to which "lifters" from British India are sent.
There are eighteen thousand prisoners in the settlement, and every Saturday morning all women who wish to be married are heavily veiled and paraded round a square. Men prisoners, qualified by good conduct for the privilege of marrying, stand outside this magic circle, judging as best they can the merits of the candidates.
When a man makes a selection he is at liberty to have the object of his choice picked out and the veil removed. No alternative to accepting the woman then remains to him.
Women, on the other hand, have the option of two refusals, but the third occasion is final one way or the other.

Dyed Her Sweater and Silk Stockings.
Each package of "Diamond Dyes" contains directions so simple that any woman can dye or tint faded, shabby skirts, dresses, waists, coats, sweaters, stockings, hangings, draperies, everything like new. Buy "Diamond Dyes"—no other kind—then perfect home dyeing is guaranteed, even if you have never dyed before. Tell your druggist whether the material you wish to dye is wool or silk, or whether it is linen, cotton, or mixed goods. Diamond Dyes never streak, spot, fade, or run.

Eggs Boiled in Oil.
A new method of sterilizing eggs, as a preliminary to cold storage, consists in immersing them for five seconds in an oil solution at 250 degrees Fahrenheit. This brief exposure to a heat considerably above the boiling point of water is sufficient to kill not only whatever bacteria the egg may contain, but also the vital principle in those of them that are fertile.
Electrical machinery does the work. It is claimed that the eggs are in no way injured by the treatment and, when returned put into cold storage, they retain their freshness much longer.

NEW LAMP BURNS 94% AIR
Beats Electric or Gas
A new oil lamp that gives an amazingly brilliant, soft, white light, even better than gas or electricity, has been tested by the U. S. Government and 35 leading universities and found to be superior to 10 ordinary oil lamps. It burns without odor, smoke or noise, no pumping up, is simple, clean, safe. Burns 94% air and 6% common kerosene (coal-oil).
The inventor, F. T. Johnson, 225 Craig St. W., Montreal, is offering to send a lamp on 10 days' FREE trial, or even to give one FREE to the first user in each locality who will help him introduce it. Write him to-day for full particulars. Also ask him to explain how you can get the agency, and without experience or money make $250 to $500 per month.

Smiles From the Japanese.

Of all people the Japanese are the most eager to learn. Industrious and earnest in everything, they are especially so in learning to speak English. But they have difficulty in pronouncing their 'l's and 'r's, and some of the mistakes they make are amusing. While you are walking along the street in Tokyo, writes a correspondent, it is not unusual for a man to approach you and, with his peculiar accent, say:
"Goodo morning sah; aur you quite werru today? Pressu retome me comma and visitation you some times. I wouldo like to become your friendo."
That is quite a language in itself; but the Japanese do not make all the mistakes. Their own language has its subtleties, and when Canadians who attempt to speak it confuse their vowels or misplace their accent the smiles are all on the other side. For example, a missionary who was performing a wedding ceremony said, "Mrs. Matusushima, you are to tottsugu Mr. Hashimoto," but the verb to marry is totsugu. Tottsugu means to be caught by an evil spirit! The on-lookers must indeed have smiled at that; and it is to be hoped that the butcher whose shop an American lady once visited was not inclined to be too matter-of-fact when she asked him for "two pounds of neko." The word for meat is n'ku. Neko is the word for cat!

There is a story of an English professor who wanted to learn how to say good morning in Japanese. So early one day he stood in the hall of the Japanese dormitory and waited. In a few moments two students approached from opposite ends. Of course, thought the professor, they would say good morning to each other; but since the hall happened to be unusually dirty at that hour, their morning salutation was "Oh, isn't this hall dirty?" The professor, highly pleased, passed on to the dining room and, entering with a satisfied smile, bowed and startled everyone by saying, "Oh, isn't this hall dirty?"
But one day, while traveling down a lonely street, a Jirikisha man was more than startled when the foreigner he was carrying exclaimed, "Korose-korose-korose-korose!" which means "Kill me, kill me!" That was hardly what the traveler wanted; he asked merely to be allowed to descend. The word for that is oroshite-kure.

Health Is a Magnet.
What a sorry picture is a weak, puny, half-developed youth starting in the race for success! Few, indeed, are his chances compared with those of the robust youth who radiates vitality from every pore. How unfortunate it is to be thus handicapped on the threshold of active life! A healthy man is a magnetic man; an unhealthy man is often repellent. Thus health is a success-factor which cannot be over-estimated.
A half-developed youth with his puny muscle, must put forth a strong effort of will and mental energy to overcome his deficiency, that he may do the things which a hardy, robust youth does easily; and it is the thing easily done, not the thing achieved by excessive effort, that attracts the most attention and gives the greatest pleasure.
An appearance of strength gives an impression of ability to achieve things and is of great help in securing a position. There is a strong, involuntary prejudice against weakness of any kind.

Glue Made From Blood.
A new kind of glue, very valuable to cabinetmakers and for various other purposes, is made of dried blood albumin. It is a dark crystalline substance, and, with the addition of simple chemicals, furnishes the most waterproof glue known. It is used for airplane parts and "plywood"—the latter term relating to articles which are made by gluing pieces of wood together.
Plywood is a great economy, rendering practicable the utilization of small stuff which used commonly to be thrown away, and thereby saving large size material.
A new and ingenious method of applying the glue for this purpose has been developed by the U. S. Forest Service. Through a trough of glue solution are drawn broad strips of tissue paper, which, being thus saturated, are then dried. A layer of this tissue paper is placed between two pieces of wood, and heat is applied with pressure, the result being a joining that is actually stronger than the wood itself. The glue-paper is always ready for use, and it will keep fresh for a long time.

Wireless in the Arctic.
Equipped with powerful wireless transmitting instruments, capable of a range of 3,000 miles in middle latitudes, the Quest, Sir Ernest Shackleton's adventure ship, will be able to keep in touch with England every day, for the nearer she sails to the Poles the more effective will become the ether waves which carry wireless messages.
Had the pioneers of Arctic exploration been able to utilize the miracle of wireless communication, the tragic stories of the last century would probably never have been written. Franklin would, in that event, have been able to communicate his helpless condition and his exact location to those who for so long vainly braved the terrors of the Arctic in search of his lost expedition, the fate of which was only discovered after ten years.

BANK OF TORONTO IN WYOMING ROBBED OF $14,000 BY BAND OF FOUR

Escaped in High-powered Car Driven by Fifth Thug—Hold-up Occurred at 2.50 in the Afternoon—Probably the Same Men Who Recently Robbed the Bank of Hamilton in Toronto.

A despatch from London, Ont., says:—Walking into the Bank of Toronto at Wyoming, a village 45 miles west of London, on the G. T. R., on Thursday afternoon four auto bandits held up Manager H. E. Lambert and his staff and made their escape with $14,000 in cash in a high-powered car, the motor of which a fifth thug had kept running while the robbery was taking place. The hold-up occurred at 2.50. Ronald Brown, one of the clerks, slipped out the back door and gave the alarm, firing five shots at the robbers as they jumped into their car and drove away. The bandits, who were all armed, fired at everybody they saw, compelling many people who sought to give chase to seek cover behind telephone poles or in doorways.

W. Garlick, a traveller for the Ingersoll Packing Company, was passing the bank at the time, and two of the staff, E. S. Taylor, teller, and Thos. Scharf, hastily procuring revolvers from a hardware store, jumped into the traveller's car and started in pursuit. The bandits, however, had a new McLaughlin, and though hampered by greasy roads, managed to distance their pursuers, until finally, at Fernhill, north of Parkhill, Taylor and Scharf were compelled to give up the chase.

It is thought that the robbers were the same men who robbed the Bank of Hamilton in Toronto on Tuesday last, and also that they are the thieves who stole a new McLaughlin car from Wright's garage in Thornedale, 10 miles from London, on the same night. When the London police received word of the hold-up Chief Birrell at once despatched a powerful car loaded with detectives and police to join in the hunt for the criminals. As the bandits had headed toward London when they left Wyoming, the local officers went out the Sarnia gravel road in the hope of meeting them. They say that at one time they must have been within a couple of miles of their quarry, but the latter were on a road paralleling the Sarnia gravel road and easily avoided their pursuers.

St. Mary's, Stratford and Guelph police were at once warned to be on the lookout for the gunmen, as it was thought they were heading back toward Toronto.

Recent bank hold-ups in Ontario were:

- Bank of Hamilton branch at Locke and Herkimer streets, Hamilton, in June; robber got $4,500.
- Bank of Hamilton branch at Sandford avenue and King streets, Hamilton, Oct. 13; robber got nothing.
- Union Bank of Canada, Locke and Main streets, Hamilton, Oct. 14; robber got $2,000.
- Bank of Hamilton branch at College street and Ossington avenue, Toronto, Tuesday, Oct. 18; robbers got $2,990.
- Bank of Toronto branch at Wyoming, Ont., Oct. 20; robbers got $14,000.

THREE WAR LEADERS WELCOMED BY U.S.

Beatty, Diaz and Bacques Guests of Honor at American Legion Convention.

Washington, Oct. 23.—General Diaz, of Italy; Admiral Earl David Beatty, of Britain; and Lieut.-General Baron Bacques, of Belgium, allied leaders whose deeds in the war have written their names large in history, came to Washington to-day to be received by President Harding before continuing their journey to Kansas City, where they will be guests of honor at the American Legion convention.

The visitors were given a formal welcome by the United States Government and Legion officials, as well as a tumultuous reception by crowds at the Union Station and along Pennsylvania Avenue, decked with flags for the occasion. They will be received at the White House to-morrow. Each occupying, with his suite, a separate car on a special train, the three allied war lords arrived at 2.30 from New York. General Diaz, first to leave the train, was greeted by Robert Woods Bliss, third Assistant Secretary of State, representing the President; Admiral Coontz, Chief of Naval Operations; Brigadier-General Andre Brewster and Legion representatives. Past Century Mark and Still Working Vancouver, B.C., Oct. 23.—More than a century old and still working. This is the record of Charles Quick, who celebrated his 101st birthday Saturday.

Easily the oldest man in Vancouver, if not in all Canada, he is said to be the oldest working man at that age in the entire country. From his little shop here, he sends out horse racing saddles to all parts of the civilized world.

KING CHARLES MAKING SECOND ATTEMPT TO REGAIN LOST THRONE

Alighting from an Airplane He Placed Himself at the Head of Loyal Forces Comprised of Three Divisions Under Command of General Hagedues—Now Nearing the Hungarian Capital.

London, Oct. 23.—Undaunted by his former fiasco, apparently unafraid of threats of the big or little Entente, or both, ex-King Charles is nearing Budapest at the head of a small army. Charles has staked everything on his new hopes of regaining his lost throne.

The former emperor reached the soil of his own country at 2 o'clock Saturday morning. All reports reaching here are conflicting but sufficient clear to show the many romantic features of this latest coup.

From the blue depths of the skies he came. Alighting from the airplane which bore him on the first leg of his novel adventure, he found loyal troops, commanded by Colonel Pronay and who was awaiting him at Dedenburg. Accompanied by his armed guard he headed for Budapest.

Dr. Graetz, a former newspaperman, is the brains and director-general of Charles' new coup.

Graetz was foreign minister when Charles made his first sensational entry into Hungary last spring and then resigned his office as a protest against the Budapest Government.

Graetz went to Steinamanger, where he remained with Charles all the time he was there when his former coup failed.

20,000 GIVEN WORK ON LONDON TUBES

London, Oct. 23.—A $40,000,000 scheme for the extension of London's underground railway now is before the Cabinet, under the Government scheme to guarantee the interest on the capital with the object of assisting unemployment. It is estimated that if the application is approved 20,000 men will be employed for two years.

British Cabinet Considering Vast Plan for Extending "Undergrounds"

One of the chief of which is the rebuilding of the old city and South London line—the first tube railway to be built. Much new tunnelling will be necessary, some under the Thames River, where the rate of progress necessarily will be slow. Other sections include the extension of the Hampstead line to Edgware, which now is being served by fleets of motor buses, and the connecting up of Central London line with Richmond and the south side of the river and other extensions and electrifications. Parliamentary powers already have been obtained and full plans prepared.

U.S. MAY DEFER TARIFF REVISION

Emergency Rates on Agricultural Products to be Extended.

A despatch from Washington says:—Some of the strongest leaders of the Harding administration are working quietly but persistently and effectively, it is stated, to prevent revision of the tariff for another fifteen months. It is their plan to throw tariff revision over until the congressional elections of November, 1922, have been decided.

West Indians Destitute on Isthmus of Panama

Kingston, J.A., Oct. 23.—Thousands of West Indians are destitute on the Isthmus of Panama, unable to secure employment, according to reports reaching here from the Isthmus, and a popular movement has been inaugurated in Jamaica for a subscription to help the sufferers, the establishment of soup kitchens being one of the means devised. The Government here, meanwhile, is taking steps to repatriate the destitute Jamaicans among the needy on the Isthmus.

Some 8,000 spectators watched the international plowing match at Woodstock, Ont.

MAROONED ON TINY ISLAND FOR 3 WEEKS

Family of Five Suffered from Exposure and Lack of Food.

Fault Ste. Marie, Mich., Oct. 22.—Marooned for three weeks on a tiny island in Whitefish Bay, suffering from lack of food and exposure to recent storms, was the experience of Harry Murray, his wife and three children, ranging from 4 to 16, it was learned Saturday night by United States coast guard patrol.

The family was taken off the island with difficulty by a patrol boat here and given food and shelter. On Sept. 27, Murray, a cranberry-picker, and his family, were lashed at Iroquois Island by a man named Mills, who was buying cranberries. They had a small tent and enough food for a week, during which they expected to pick berries in the marshes. Mills was to call for them. Shortly after Mills left them his boat was seized by creditors, and when the time came to go after the Murrays he had no boat nor money to secure one. It is claimed he said nothing to officials here about the plight in which he had left the family.

According to the story told by Murray when he was brought here Saturday, the family had little to live on except fish, wild duck and cranberries for nearly two weeks. Ammunition was giving out and it was necessary to keep the camp fire going at all times because of the lack of matches. Had the fire gone out the suffering from cold would have been serious, as the temperature has been below freezing. There are no buildings on the island except the rude shack they constructed.

A fisherman rowed out to the island Thursday afternoon after noticing the fire, and learned their plight. Because of the size of his craft he was unable to take them off and notified the coast guards. The Murrays are without money or a home and have been given shelter in the coastguard warehouse for the time being.

U.S. CITIZENS OFFER TO RUN RAILWAYS

Employment Departments of Eastern Lines Flooded With Applications.

A despatch from New York says:—Employment departments of Eastern railroads are so flooded with applications for jobs as strike-breakers that little difficulty in manning and running little trains is expected by railroad heads in this district if the threatened strike materializes, it was announced to-day.

"More than one-third of the number of men needed to keep our trains running applied for jobs here on Tuesday alone," said William G. Boster, President of the Jersey Central.

The same conditions obtain on railroads in New York State, according to officials of these roads.

The student body of Dartmouth College, through the official undergraduate paper, The Dartmouth, this morning offered its services in the railroads of the country in event of the threatened strike becoming a reality.

MOVIE "HERO" SANK 25 ALLIED VESSELS

Captain Count Felix von Luckner Well Fitted for Role of Pirate.

A despatch from Berlin says:—Captain Count Felix von Luckner, who commanded the German sea raider, the Seeadler, is about to appear in the movies. He will play the role of a pirate in a film called "Mabel and Sutor," produced by the Vera Film Company of Hamburg.

Certainly, Count von Luckner is well fitted to the role. For seven months the Seeadler roamed the Atlantic and Pacific oceans and sank no less than 25 Entente vessels, according to von Luckner's claim. Finally, the Seeadler was wrecked in the South Pacific. Von Luckner was captured, interned in New Zealand, escaped, was recaptured and at last exchanged.

SUSPEND BUSINESS FOR TWO MINUTES

Observance of Armistice Anniversary Requested by the Canadian Government.

A despatch from Ottawa says:—His Excellency the Governor-General has received a despatch from the Secretary of State for the Colonies proposing that on Friday, Nov. 11, the anniversary of the signing of the armistice, there should be a complete suspension of business, so far as possible, beginning at 11 a.m. and continuing for two minutes.

The Canadian Government has adopted this suggestion, and, accordingly, the Secretary of State for External Affairs has issued a request that the rite be observed throughout the Dominion.

PERPETUAL SUMMER TIME IN FUTURE?

Earth's Temperate Zones Becoming More Tropical in Climate.

A despatch from Paris says:—The earth is rushing toward a period of perpetual Summer, according to a French astronomer, who offers this explanation of the present abnormal warm and dry weather. Oscillation of the inclination of the earth's axis is the cause of the upheaval of the seasons, he says, and this oscillation is between a 35-degree maximum and a 9-degree minimum every 31,756 years.

The last maximum was reached during the ice age, he contends, and the next minimum will come in the year 2296. Therefore, according to this astronomer, the earth's temperate zones will henceforth become progressively more tropical in the matter of climate.

Bear and Cubs Pay Visit to Napanee

A despatch from Napanee, Ont., says:—Napanee residents were startled and the female portion of the population badly frightened on Friday by the invasion of an old she bear and two cubs. The self-invited visitors made, however, no hostile demonstration, but wandered about the residential district, sitting on verandahs, which were promptly vacated in their favor, and comporting themselves after the manner of interested tourists. Finally one of the cubs wandered away from its mother and was captured, the other two disappearing.

Can Now Isolate Smallpox Germs

A despatch from Santiago, Chile, says:—Dr. Arturo Atria, chief bacteriologist of the Chilean Institute of Hygiene, announces that he has succeeded in discovering a method of isolating the bacteria of smallpox.

Dr. Atria claims his discovery will permit the combating of smallpox by direct injection instead of through preventive vaccination.

Ludwig III, former King of Bavaria, dies in Hungarian exile.

WINTER CARE OF COLTS

The First Winter a Critical Time for Weanlings.

Two or More Colts Do Better Together—Nourishing Feeding Also an Important Factor—No Gain in Too Early Pasturing.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

The first winter is a critical time in the life of a colt. The care and attention he receives during this period determines, to a great extent, his future usefulness. If he be poorly fed, neglected, and allowed to become thin and weak, it is probable he will never be as good or valuable an animal as he would have been under more favorable circumstances. Comfortable quarters important.

He, in the first place, should be provided with warm, comfortable and well-ventilated quarters, and, while he should be taught to lead, and stand tied, it is much better if he have a roomy stall to stand in. Two or more colts will probably do better together than one alone. At the same time, it is often necessary to winter one without company. He will do better by himself than with a colt a year or more older. The next question is: "What, and how much should he be fed?"

The Matter of Feeding.

In our opinion there is little danger of overfeeding at this age. While there are exceptions, it is usually safe to give a weanling all he will eat, provided he gets regular exercise; but it must be understood that he should not be given more than he will eat. It is a mistake to keep food before him all the time. He should, with apparent relish, eat all that is given him, in at most an hour and a half, and then he will be ready for the next meal when the time arrives. It is not easy to say just how much food a colt of a given age and size should consume, but the attendant, if a careful and observant man, will soon be able to determine the quantity to be given at each meal, and be able to give sufficient, without waste. Hay and oats should be the food upon which to depend for growth, both muscle and bone. If other grain than oats be given, the quantity to be given will have to be about "three being little danger of overfeeding."

Give Best Quality of Food.

All food should be of first-class quality. Well saved timothy makes a good substitute. Hay should be fed in the necessary quantities three times daily, and we prefer whole to cut hay for such young animals. The manner in which the oats should be fed will make a great difference in the results. In our opinion, and experience, rolled oats gives better results than whole. We find that colts relish rolled oats that have been scalded and allowed to become cool, and that they thrive well on such. The practice of mixing a ration of rolled oats and a little wheat chaff or cut hay in a pail, pouring some boiling water on it, covering it and allowing it to stand for a few hours before feeding, gives excellent results. The morning's meal can be prepared in the evening, and the evening's meal in the same vessel in the morning, the noonday meal being in addition dry, rolled or whole oats. In either dry, rolled or whole oats, the normal size and shape as possible by the use of a shoemaking's knife and rasp. The stall should be cleaned out, at least once weekly.—J. H. Reed, V.S., O. A. College, Guelph.

Let Him Get Reasonable Exercise.

He should be turned into a yard or paddock for a few hours every day that is not too rough or stormy, and the more gentle handling and reasons in leading, etc., he gets the better. His feet require attention. The wear is usually not sufficient to keep them in proper shape, the toes grow long and the heels deep and narrow, and the wall turns inward below the quarters. If this be not corrected or prevented, permanent harm may result. The feet should be carefully examined at least once monthly and dressed to as near the normal size and shape as possible by the use of a shoemaking's knife and rasp. The stall should be cleaned out, at least once weekly.—J. H. Reed, V.S., O. A. College, Guelph.

No Gain in Too Early Pasturing.

Pasturers should not be in a hurry to turn their cattle out to pasture. The cattle will travel over the entire pasture area, and by cutting up the sod with their hoofs while the ground is yet soft, and grazing off the first blades of grass they will greatly reduce the amount of feed which the pasture will yield if they are kept off a few weeks longer so that the grass may have opportunity to make a real start. Under average conditions it will by this means pay best to keep the cattle off the pasture until the sod has become firm and the grass has attained sufficient start to support them fully from the time they are turned out. Cattle should be turned on new grass the first time about the middle of the day, after they have already had a good fill of dry feed. They should be driven back to the feed at each night for three or four nights, and given opportunity to eat some dry food each morning before going to the pasture.

All classes of stock will give better returns where a variety of food is supplied. A mixture of grain is generally better than feeding only one kind.

"Millions Now Living Will Never Die"

(JUDGE RUTHERFORD)

The Scriptures abound in time prophecies indicating when such events as have distressed mankind during the past few years, and the opportunity for profiting in all its phases, will forever end.

The divine law is inexorable and every inspired revelation of the divine purpose respecting the affairs of the old world, over which Jehovah for a special purpose tolerated Satan to rule, has been fulfilled exactly on time, and the time for the binding of Satan is at hand.

Every Bible scholar is aware, whether it is now or one hundred years hence, that mankind will sometime arrive at the end of Satan's reign, when everlasting life on this earth can be his blessed portion, instead of death and the tomb as has been the case under Satan's six thousand years of evil domination and delusion.

The purpose of this free lecture is to furnish every inquirer positive Biblical proof and secular evidence, based on prophecies fulfilled during the past five years, that millions now living will never die, and that we will within the next few years enter this long hoped for period, when families will be reunited and live happily on earth ever after.

If you are interested in the future blessing of yourself and your loved ones and of the whole human family you owe it to yourself to hear this lecture by
