ism. In private life, Mr. Moss was beloved by all who knew him; a more honourable or manlier soul never lived. The people of Winnipeg, who knew him so well and admired him so much, sympathise deeply with his relatives in Ontario, and, above all, with the widow and the fatherless he has left behind him." The following resolution was passed by the Garry Lacrosse Club, at a largely attended meeting :- "That as Almighty God has in His infinite wisdom called away from our midst William Moss, an officer of the Garry Lacrosse Club, we, the members of that organization, in meeting assembled, wish to place on record the feelings of pain and sorrow which are caused by his demise. That we desire to further express our high appreciation of the many sterling qualities and personal worth of the deceased, which had won for him our esteem and respect and a warm spot in our hearts; and to offer our sincere condolence to his bereaved family in the loss they have sustained in his death. Although gone from among us, his memory shall ever remain green in our affections, and his name shall—associated with his many kindly actions on behalf of the club of which he was so honoured a memberalways be held first in our kindliest thoughts. Be it also resolved that a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to his bereaved family." Charles Moss was educated in the common schools, and likewise enjoyed the advantages of private tutors. He was engaged for a time in his father's business; but in 1864, commenced the study of the law, signing articles to his brother Thomas, then a member of the firm of Cameron & Moss. He was admitted to the Law Society in November, 1864, and his close application and capacity for the grasp of principles would warrant the observer in making for him a very brilliant prediction. How he turned his time and talents to account will be guessed when it is stated that during each of his four years' studentship he carried away a scholarship. In 1869, he was called to the bar. Upon his admission to practice, he became a member of the firm of Osler & Moss, of which the present Mr. Justice Osler was the senior member. The firm was subsequently joined by the late Chief Justice Harrison, and became Harrison, Osler & Moss. Upon the elevation of Messrs. Harrison and Thomas Moss to the bench, in October, 1875, the firm was joined by the late James Bethune, Q.C., and became Bethune, Osler & Moss, and so continued till the appointment of Mr. Osler to the bench, when the firm became Bethune, Moss, Fal-

ìis

he

as

ge

med

W

s a

es-

he ents.

ary

ert

74, ind

ent

y a Ba

on-

the

oss, en s

ere

846

ued

zes,

088

r in

nem

hief

t of

find

mes,

the

, of

y in

on

nere.

and

rial

arly tical with

ngly

one

nal-

conbridge & Hoyles. Upon the retirement of Mr. Bethune from the firm, Mr. Moss became head of the associations now known as Moss, Falconbridge & Barwick, and Moss, Hoyles & Aylesworth. Mr. Moss was appointed lecturer and examiner of the Law Society in 1872, a position which he retained till 1879, when he resigned. He was elected a bencher of the Law Society in November, 1880, and again at the general election in May, 1881. He was appointed Queen's counsel by the Dominion government, in July, 1881; representative of the Law Society in the senate of the University of Toronto. in May, 1884; president of the Northern & Pacific Junction Railway Company (then and now engaged in the construction of a line of railway from Gravenhurst to connect with the Canadian Pacific Railway at Callendar station), in June, 1884. He held this position during the absence in England of the former president, Dalton McCarthy, Q.C., M.P., and resigned on the return of the latter from England, in September, 1884. Mr. Moss has always been connected with the Reform party, and upon the elevation of the present Chief Justice Cameron to the bench, he was offered, but declined, the nomination for East ronto, in the Local Legislature. He is an adherent of the Church of England. Mr. Moss married, on the 26th September, 1871, Emily, second daughter of the late Mr. Justice Sullivan. There is issue of marriage now surviving, three sons and two daughters. During his professional practice he has been engaged (amongst other cases) in Attorney General v. Mercer (the contested will case tried before V.C. Blake, in 1876); McLaren v. Callwell (the streams case), and Langtry v. Dumoulin (the St. James' rectory case). There is considerable resemblance between the intellectual attainments of Charles Moss and his late lamented brother. The "capacity for taking trouble," that insight which becomes a quick solvent of difficulties, the clear, logical method of pursuing a sophistry to its last ditch, and the power to gather up fragments of argument and present them as a telling unit, are all conspicuous in the professional career of Charles Moss.

Hunter, Rev. William John, D.D., Pastor of Wesley church, Hamilton, and Superintendent of the Hamilton district, was born on the 26th February, 1835, at Phillipsburg, in the Province of Quebec. He is a son of John and Nancy Hunter, who were descended from the Scottish Covenanters, but born in the county Tyrone, in

They came to Canada the north of Ireland. in 1821, and settled in the Province of Quebec, but in 1843 removed to Ontario. John Hunter still survives, and is hale and hearty at the advanced age of eighty-two. His wife died four years ago, and the three surviving sons are all engaged in the work of the Christian ministry, namely: the subject of this sketch; the Rev. S. J. Hunter, pastor of the Centenary Methodist church, Hamilton, and the Rev. H. D. Hunter, M. A., pastor of the First Congregational church, Lon-William John Hunter received don, Ont. a good public school education, and afterwards attended Victoria University, Cobourg, pursuing a course in classics and metaphysics, and he obtained the degree of Doctor of Divinity from the Chicago University in June, 1878. Our subject has not confined his attention entirely to church work, but has been zealous in the promotion of temperance, which may be regarded as a sister employment. Whenever the opportunity has arisen to use his voice in forwarding this great cause, he has not remained He is at present a member of the Royal Templars of Temperance. With respect to his religious convictions, it need hardly be said that he has always been thoroughly satisfied with the doctrines of Methodism, and is a most able, broad-minded advocate of the same. He married on the 9th July, 1860, Mary Jane, second daughter of Isaac Robinson, of Toronto. Dr. Hunter entered the ministry of the Methodist church in June, 1856, and during the past twenty-one years he has been in charge of some of the most important churches in London, Hamilton, Toronto and Ottawa. The Dominion church at Ottawa was built under his direction, and is one of the finest ecclesiastical edifices in Canada. He was chairman of the Ottawa district for three years, and secretary of the Montreal conference. He is at present pastor of the Wesley church, Hamilton, and superintendent of the Hamilton District. It is only justice to say that Dr. Hunter is one of the ablest and most zealous and popular ministers in the Methodist communion of this province.

Elliott, John, London, Ontario, was born at Shaw Head, parish of Beautcastle, Cumberland, England, in 1820. He came to Canada with his parents in 1827, and settled in Trafalgar, Dundas Street, known as "the sixteen." He attended the common school until fifteen years of age, when he was sent to York (now Toronto), as an apprentice in the mercantile house of George Stegman, where he learned the dry goods and grocery business. During the rebellion of 1837-38, he joined the cavairy and was in active service under command of Colonel Chisholm and Captain Biggar. From 1840 to 1850, he was engaged in the dry goods and clothing business, spending part of the time with his father, and four years in Galt. In 1850 he went to London, Ontario, and entered into partnership with George Jackson in a foundry business. In 1851 the premises were destroyed by fire, which necessitated a dissolution of partnership. In 1852 Mr. Elliott purchased, in co upany with Captain Burgess, a foundry business, on the corner of Wellington and Bathurst streets, (known as the Phoenix Foundry) where he carried on the business He was in partnerfor nineteen years. ship with Captain Burgess for eight years. five of which the latter spent in Australia. Captain Burgess and himself cast lots to decide which should go to Australia. The lot fell to Captain Burgess, and they agreed to continue the partnership in both countries, which compact was carried out faithfully, Mr. Elliott having charge of the foundry, and Captain Burgess of the gold-fields, Three years after the return of Captain Burgess, they mutually dissolved; and thence, until 1879 the business was carried on by himself. In 1879 he took his eldest son into partnership, the firm being then known as John Elliott & Son. In 1871 Mr. Elliott built a very extensive foundry, and agricultural works, which was unfortunately burned down on the 29th of May of the present year (1885). The loss was upwards of $150,000. Mr. Elliott is a man of wide views and much observation. He is familiar with Canada, having travelled through the older provinces, and through Manitoba. He was brought up in the Presbyterian faith, and still remains in that denomination. He married, in 1853, Priscilla, third daughter of John Corson, of Westminster, near Members of this family were Lambeth. some of the earliest pioneers of Canada, and they held a prominent place in the social and industrial life of the community. The marriage referred to, has been blest with nine children, six of whom are living. Mr. Elliott is now re-building the foundry upon an extensive scale, besides which, he has extensive plough works. He is likewise the owner of a large business in Manitoba and the North-west, and has achieved marked success in business. He is a large employer, his working force in the foundry, when fully employed, being about 125 men, including officers and agents. In Manitoba

th ti

ac E th

W

ar

re

al

w٤

th

IJ

K

Ja

Gr

ch

F

pla

ma

a l

ing

the

tic

ing

8 0

88 fut

eig

pri

out

see

eve

any Du

"p har

resi

day

lns

pro

aflo

has

put kno

eye

Fle

one

Rai

coe

obt

per

to 1

ceiv

"ge

fess:

mot

and Ontario the number is about 200; and the expenses, when the works run on full time, are about $300 per day. After a very active life without cessation since 1835, Mr. Elliott intends ere long, to retire, and give the business into the hands of his four sons, who are at present engaged in the offices, and other departments of the business. The record of the subject of this sketch is one altogether of which any Canadian might be proud. Throughout his career there have always been manifest, industry, integrity, and the fairest of dealing.

the

valry

nd of

ggar.

n the

nding

four

hdon.

with rtner-

d, in

ındry

h and

icenix siness

rtner-

years,

ralia.

to de-

he lot

eed to

htries,

fully,

lndry,

fields.

ptain

and

arried

eldest

then

1 Mr.

, and nately

of the wards

wide

famil-

rough

itoba.

terian

ation.

augh-

near

nada.

e soc-

unity.

blest iving.

undry

ch, he like-

Mani-

nieved

large

ndry,

men.

nitoba

. In v tire,

> the fairest of dealing. Fleming, Sandford, C. E., C.M.G. LLD., Halifax, the most prominent and original of Canadian engineers, was born at Kirkcaldy, Fifeshire, Scotland, on the 7th January, 1827. He was a son of Andrew Greig Fleming, who possessed much mechanical skill, and Elizabeth Arnold. Young Fleming attended school in his native place, and he excelled always in mathematics. For this branch he is said when a lad to have had an inclination amounting almost to a passion. He left school at the age of fourteen, and was immediately articled as a student of surveying and engineering. He applied himself to his work with a diligence and a zeal that might be taken as an earnest of the achievements that the future reserved for him. At the age of eighteen, fairly versed in the theoretical principles of engineering and survey, he set out for Canada, where he was resolved to seek his fortune. He was obliged, however, to wait a long and weary period before any recognition was given to his ability. During this period he buoyed himself with "proud patience," and did whatever his hands found to do. He had taken up his residence in Toronto, and during the "dark days" associated himself with the Mechanics Institute, and in 1849 initiated and took a prominent part in originating and setting afloat the Canadian Institute, a body which has always, more or less unaided by the public, striven for the promotion of scientific knowledge and interests. However, some eyes that could see had observed young Fleming; and in 1852 he was appointed one of the engineering staff of the Northern Railway, then known as the Ontario, Simcoe and Huron Road. He had no sooner obtained the opportunity, than his dogged perseverance and engineering abilities began to reveal themselves; and old heads perceived in the young man an "original," a genius if ever there was one," in his profession. His capacity once known, his promotion was rapid, for this was the pioneering period of engineering in Canada, and those needed were men who could lead. Very soon, therefore, the young engineer found offers for his service, and a greater number than he could accept. In 1863 the inhabitants of Red River were desirous of having railroad communication with Canada, and to this end sought the intervention of the Imperial government. The man chosen to carry their case to England was Sandford Fleming. The Duke of Newcastle was then colonial secretary, and with him Mr. Fleming had several interviews; but, in spite of the strength of his arguments, the project was allowed to stand for the time. Upon his return from England. political events pointed to the need for an Intercolonial railway. It was decided that a survey should be made by a commission of three engineers, to be appointed by old Canada, the Maritime provinces, and the Imperial government respectively. Canada nominated Mr. Fleming, and Nova Scotia and New Brunswick accepted him as their representative. The Imperial government did the same, and Fleming was appointed sole engineer. Upon the completion of the political union, the provinces tied by legislative bonds demanded to be united with links of steel. The enterprise was put in the hands of Fleming, as his opinions upon all subjects bearing upon railroads, as well as his engineering skill, were held now in the highest regard. The result was a triumph of engineering. When, under the bond with British Columbia, Canada bound herself to construct within ten years an iron road from ocean to ocean, through the dismal and difficult region north of Lake Superior, across the plains, over the stupendous Rocky Mountains, every eye was turned upon Sandford Fleming as the man to undertake so gigantic a project. Consequently, in 1871, in the height of construction of the Intercolonial, and with the whole supervision of it pressing upon him, he was called on by the government to undertake an examination of the proposed route to the When exhaustive surveys over Pacific. half a continent had been made, and the construction of the C. P. R. was well advanced along six or eight hundred miles of some of the heaviest sections, political exigencies arose, and in 1880 he resigned. News of his resignation startled the country, and though he was not thereafter concerned in the construction of the work, no one has ever denied him supremacy in his profession; no one has sought to take away from him the reputation of the pioneer engineer of Canada, and the country's bene-On his retirement in 1880 he was elected Chancellor of Queen's University, and in 1883 he was unanimously re-elected. In 1882, he was presented with the freedom of the Kirkcaldy Burghs, and in 1884 received the honorary degree of LL.D. from St. Andrew's University. In 1881, he went as delegate from the Canadian Institute and American Meteorological Society to the International Geographical Congress at Venice, and in 1884 he was appointed delegate of Great Britain to represent the Dominion at the International Prime Meridian Conference at Washington, where he had the pleasure of finding the views, which he had been pressing on the public for years with regard to cosmic time and a prime meridian for all nations, accepted by the representatives of the civilized world. Mr. Fleming has been a contributor to the periodical and permanent literature of the country, and his writings have been characterized by the originality, the information and the breadth of view that might be expected from such a man. He has published reports of his engineering enterprises, and written on various matters, such as cosmic or universal time and a prime meridian for all nations, as well as upon subjects kindred to railroads. His latest literary production is his book "England and Canada," a work that will live in our literature. Mr. Fleming married, in 1855, Anne Jean Hall, a daughter of the late Sheriff Hall, of Peterboro', and has issue, six children. He has taken up his abode in Halifax and Ottawa. We hope and believe that the country is to profit still more by his great abilities.

Morden, Amzi Lewis, Barrister-atlaw, Solicitor of the Supreme Court of Judicature in Ontario, County Crown Attorney and Clerk of the Peace, Napanee, Ontario, was born on the 19th July, 1831, in the township of Cramahe, in the County of Northumberland. His father, Joseph Wilkinson Morden, was descended on both sides of U. E. loyalist stock, the ancestors being the Mordens of the Bay of Quinté and the Bowmans of the Niagara district. His mother, Charlotte Benedict, came from the well-known Puritan families Benedicts and Stewarts. Our subject received his education in the common schools in Tyendinaga, Normal School, Toronto, Belleville Seminary, Belleville, and private tuition at the hands of the Rev. Andrew Hudson Melrose. His studies, in addition to those required to qualify as a first class teacher, were English literature, natural science, mathematics, classics, and French. He enlisted in the volteer militia as private in 1863, in a company of light infantry, under Captain (now Colonel) Buell, and remained in this com. pany until after the Fenian invasion in 1866. He was gazetted as lieutenant, in 1867, of company No. 7, in the 48th battalion, and served in that capacity until 1873, when, owing to the pressure of professional business, he tendered his resignation. Taking an active interest in municipal affairs, and being a gentleman of attractive address, he was elected mayor of Napanee in 1872, 1873, and 1874. He was chairman of the Board of Education in 1869, 1877, 1880, 1882, 1884, and 1885; and chairman of the Board of Health in 1873, 1879, 1881, 1882, 1883, 1884, and 1885. He is a member of the senate of Victoria University; of the Board of Trustees of Albert College; of the Board of Missions of the Methodist church, and of the committee of consultation and finance. In secret societies of a benevolent or otherwise worthy nature, he has always taken a wide interest. He was admitted to Napanee lodge, No. 86, J. O. O. F., in September, 1872; was representative to the Grand Lodge in 1877, 1880, and 1881; was elected Grand Warden in 1882; deputy Grand Master in 1883, and Grand Master in 1884. He is now (1885), secretary of Mount Sinai lodge, No. 280, A. F. & A. M. With respect to his politics it may be said that he has always been a Liberal. He was secretary of the Reform Association of Lennox from 1872 to 1879, and president of the association from 1879 to April, 1882, when he resigned his position upon his appointment to the offices of county crown attorney and clerk of the peace. Mr. Morden was the child of Methodist parents, and from youth up has always held the religious views of that body. For many years he has been an active official layman in the Methodist church. He has never married. Mr. Morden, we may add, is essentially a selfmade man. He removed from Cramache to Tyendinaga in 1841, when ten years of age, worked upon a farm with his father and brothers until he was twenty, then taught school and served as book-keeper and clerk until he acquired the means to procure a fair education to equip him for the study of He began his legal studies with Dean & Diamond, of Belleville, and after one year had his articles transferred to Richards & Senkler, of Brockville, where he completed his term of service. was admitted as an attorney in May, 1866, and called to the bar in the following

No

the

whe

and

Mo

of t

W88

reac

mot

tion

nitio

tegr:

in h

of th

was

Cour

twel

to th at t

Willi

ston,

lands

unde

in th

the I

tracti

this :

Norse

fathe

engag

opera

This:

rence

three

His n

was a

of Lo

extrac

ther's

safety

grated

the A

still 1

ston r

tion i

entere

pursue

eral s

break

gradua

keen b

in the good, h

unusua

gave n

since,

and to course

for the

H

November. In September, 1866, he began the practice of his profession in Napanee, where he has ever since that time resided, and is now the senior member of the firm of Morden & Wilson, barristers, solicitors, etc., of that town. As a student, Mr. Morden was remarkable for his industry and for his readiness in mastering problems of law. His motto has ever been onward, and the positions which he holds are only a just recognition of those qualities of ability and integrity which have always been exemplified in his conduct.

oI-

n:-

οw

m-

66.

υf

nd

en,

91-

nσ

nd

he

ırd

34,

of

34,

of

us-

οf

of

ce.

er-

ı a

)a-

m-

nd

ed

nd

34.

aai

re-

he

re-

OX

he

en.

nt-

or-

en

nd

2119

125

10-

ſr.

lf-

to

nd

Ьt

rk

of

th

to

re

Ξe

in his conduct. Houston, William, M.A., Librarian of the Ontario Provincial Library, Toronto, was born on September 9th, 1844, in the County of Lanark, Ontario. At the age of twelve he migrated with his father's family to the newly-settled County of Bruce, which at that time was almost a solid forest. William Houston is a son of James Houston, who was a native of the Orkney Islands, and a member of a family which, under the name of Hourston, runs far back in the local records. Like most Orcadians, the Hourstons are undoubtedly of Norse extraction, and in the case of the subject of this sketch, the complexion peculiar to the Norse race is somewhat pronounced. father came to Canada as a sailor, and engaged early in life in the lumber business, operating chiefly in the valley of the Ottawa. This river and its great sister, the St. Lawrence, he traversed to Quebec for twentythree years in succession, prior to 1854. His mother, Janet Donaldson, nee Young, was a native of Glasgow, her father being of Lowland and her mother of Highland extraction. A near ancestor, by her mother's side, named Macdonald, for his own safety, after the battle of Culloden, migrated to Glasgow, and lived there under the Anglicised name, Donaldson, which still runs in the family. William Houston received his early educational instruction in the common schools, and in 1867 entered the University of Toronto. pursued there a varied course, taking several scholarships, but, on account of a break down in his health in his last year, graduated with few honours. This was a keen blow to his aspirations; for his career in the college, while his health remained good, had been marked by great industry and unusual brilliancy. During his course he gave most attention, as he has done ever since, to English language and literature, and to historical and political science. This course was peculiarly adapted as a training for the calling of journalism, upon which Mr. |

Houston entered, immediately on graduation (1872).The protracted general election of that year enabled him to pass at a bound from the position of city reporter upon the Toronto Globe to that of a political writer. A natural fondness for political study and action, and close attention to public affairs from boyhood, peculiarly fitted him for this position. He remained a few months then on the Globe, a period of a similar length on the staff of the St. John, N.B., Telegraph, and a longer period teaching high school. He was one of the editorial staff of the Toronto Liberal from its establishment in January, 1875, till it became defunct in June of the same year. He then re-joined the Globe, as news editor and political writer; left it in 1882 for a few months to go into business, re-joined it in 1883, and left it again in the same year to take the librarianship of parliament. It may be said that Mr. Houston found his previous training and experience useful in his present charge, though a mastery of the technicalities of library work is not an easy task. He has introduced the most modern and generally approved methods of classification and indexing, after visiting many of the leading libraries of the United States, and making a study of the English systems. Mr. Houston's heart being in literary work, the duties of librarian, though onerous, are a labour of love; and we cannot neglect to point out the advantage there is to persons engaged in research, in having at the head of a department of literary reference a gentleman of such wide information and good taste. Before entering the civil service, our subject took an active part in political contests, and among the measures which he has publicly advocated may be mentioned municipal reform on lines that have proved useful in some great American cities, and chiefly the introduction of the principle of representation of minorities, the abolition of local electoral districts, the separation of the legislative from the executive functions, and the investiture of the mayor with a veto on all the acts and appropriations of the municipal council. He has advocated a revision of the Federal constitution for the purpose of extending rather than curtailing the jurisdiction of the provincial legislatures, and making the judges of provincial courts the subjects of provincial appointment, holding that the chief danger to confederation is on the side of centralization rather than on that of diffusion of power. He married, in 1883, Jane Hood Ewing, youngest daughter of the late

James Ewing, of Galston, Avrshire, Scotland, forester on the estates there of the Duke of Portland. She is a pative of Scotland, but came to Canada in early life. There is probably no other person in Ontario that has taken a more hearty and active interest in the cause of higher education, and of the education of women than Mr. Houston. He was elected in May, 1882, by his fellow-graduates to the Senate of Toronto University, and in his official capacity has advocated extensive reforms in the courses of study and the federation of He has made special efforts to secure for political science its just prominence in the arts curriculum of the university and in the lecture-halls of the college, holding this, among other grounds, that it would form the best preparatory course for publicists and statesmen. Mr. Houston, who is extremely popular among what may be termed the younger party of the college, has been twice president of the Literary and Scientific Society of his alma mater, and is a frequent contributor to the pages of the 'Varsity, which is, perhaps, one of the ablest college papers upon the continent. fitting here to reter briefly to Mr. Houston's qualities as a writer. During his connection with journalism he was, by general consent, accorded one of the foremost positions in the country as a political controversialist. He has always been a Liberal, but there never has been a trace of party narrowness or rancour in his writings. His style is remarkable for its terse vigour, its clearness, aptness of phrase, and its rhythmical balance. As a writer for a daily newspaper, upon which questions of great importance are sometimes sprung for immediates decision, Mr. Houston was an eminently safe man; for he was deliberate and cool, and his judgment invariably sound. But, as we have said, Mr. Houston's fine abilities have not been confined to the field of party; and we may very safely predict work of a permanent nature from his pen, and expect to hear his voice raised in the furtherance of all good projects, and in the denunciation of mischievous ones. Mr. Houston is a member of the Presbyterian church.

Falle, Philip, Tilsonburg, Ontario, was born in the Island of Jersey, Europe, on the 15th May, 1815. He is a son of Edward Falle, and Rachel, daughter of the late Peter Degruchy, of the Island of Jersey, one of the landed gentry of the island, and one of its most prominent men. He pursued the life of a landed gentleman, and had a family of nine children, the subject of this sketch being the third youngest. Mr. Falle died in 1827. Philip Falle received a common school education, finishing lisstudies in the High school at Brigson, Devonshire, England, where he remained until the age of eighteen years. He then returned home, and studied modern languages under a private tutor. At the age of nineteen he entered the law office of his brother-inlaw, Charles Ahier, where he remained fer one year. He then came to America, with the belief that there he would better his position. Quebec was the point of his destination, but as the ship neared the land there came a storm with thick weather, and the vessel was thrown upon the coast of Newfoundland, near St. John's. Some time was lost in making repairs to the wrecked ship, and when Mr. Falle reached Quebec. the position which, before his sailing from England had been open to him, was now closed. He however, had some letters to gentlemen in Oxford county, and at once proceeded thither. During his sojourn and travels among the French people, his knowledge of the French language (which he understood well, having, while a boy, trans. lated into French the whole of the school history of England) stood him in good stead. After exceedingly great hardships he reached his destination, but found no hopeful pros. His heart was full of courage, however, and, together with a gentleman, who afterwards turned out to have been unworthy of confidence, he engaged in the cutting and clearing of timber lands. This project, of course, was not successful. Nothing daunted, but in the possession of a determined will and twenty-five cents in cash, he started over again. The rebellion of 1837-38, at this time/broke out, and he joined the loyalists, and served for eight months as a sergeant. After getting his discharge, which was a most creditable one, he again returned to the township of Dereham, where he was again requested to serve as captain in the militia, but he refused. He then bought a hundred acres of land, on which he settled, and here remained for five years, when he sold out and bought another hundred acres, which he cleared and settled upon. Upon this property he remained for twenty-five years, and the farm is now one of the finest in the township. In 1866 he retired from farming, renting his property, and removed to the town of Tilsonburg, where he purchashed the first built hotel in the town; and here he has remained ever since. It still stands, though stained with time, and beaten with the

aff

ma

Fa

lot

An

ter

tru

sec

yea

tow

was

cou

dire

Ma:

hole

roac

unc

serv

the

beer

and

lyin 1839

War

state

daug

son,

ty-fi

full c

of fif

and

bette

than

Barri

Whip

Ontai

fathe

Newr

to Ca

nada,

pursu

positi

subje

and a

calfe.

dówn,

Canad

first e

afterw

teenth

School

Hamil

until l

leaving office

barrist active

L

The second secon

weather, popular and respected as ever; and affording as much comfort to its guests as many a far more pretentious rival. Mr. Falle could, without strain, erect as gorgeous a habitation as his neighbours, but he is loth to leave the now historic-grown "North American," around which clings so many tender old memories. In 1855 he was elected trustee for the township of Dereham. school section No. 10, and re-elected the following year. He has spent a long period in the town council of Tilsonburg, and in 1884 was elected reeve and member of the He is a shareholder and county council. director of the Tilsonburg Agricultural Manufacturing Company, and was a stockholder in the first plank road (now gravel road) built in the county. In politics he is uncompromising in his adherence to Conservatism; and in religion is an adherent of the Church of England. His travels have been extensive, he having visited Europe and the United States, as well as the outlying provinces of Canada. He married in 1839. Orpha, daughter of the late Ebenezer Warden, of the town of Trenton, New York state, by whom he has had one child, a daughter, who is married to William Ferguson, of Nova Scotia. Although in his seventy-first year, our subject is still hearty and full of spirit; and well might pass for a man of fifty. His circle of friends is a large one. and there is no citizen in the community better beloved or more highly respected

Mr.

d a

218

ev-

ntil

ned

der

een

in-

for

rith

his

les-

and

and

οi

me

ked

ec.

om

OΨ

to

nce

nd

w.

he

ns.

ooi ad.

hed

rho

ın-

he

his

ĬO-

on

he ght

m

Нe

on

ve

ıond

Lavery, William James, Hamilton, Barrister-at-law, President of the Hamilton Whip company, etc., was born at Hamilton, Ontario, on the 12th of April, 1857. His father was Henry Lavery, who was born at Newry, County Armagh, Ireland, and came to Canada in 1848. On his arrival in Canada, he connected himself with mercantile pursuits, and at the present time holds the position of accountant in Hamilton. Our subject's mother was Elizabeth Metcalfe, and she was a daughter of Robinson Met-Mrs. Lavery was born at Portadown, County Armagh, Ireland, and came to Canada in 1850. Our subject received his first education from a private tutor, and afterwards, when he had reached his thirteenth/year, he entered the then Grammar School, now the Collegiate Institute, at Hamilton. In this institution he remained until he was sixteen years of age. After leaving school, young Lavery entered the office of John Barry, then a practising barrister in Hamilton, since retired from active practice, but still residing at Hamilton. Our subject entered the Law Society as a student in 1873, and at the age of sixteen, he was duly qualified as a solicitor. This was in the year 1878. He then commenced the practice of his profession at Hamilton, and here he has since continued in the dual rôle of lawyer and prominent business man. But Mr. Lavery, though ambitious to shine in his profession, was resolved to make his mark in commerce as well; therefore, in the year 1883 he formed the company now carrying on business at Hamilton, under the name of the Hamilton Whip Company, manufacturers of whips, etc., and he was elected and still continues to be its president. This company, it may be said, was formed for the purpose of extending and enlarging the business formerly carried on under the name of the Canada Whip Company. It is not at all claiming too much for this venture to say that, under the able management of its executive officers, it has become what its promoters desired, a really magnificent business. Its trade has now spread itself from one end to the other of the Dominion, and impartial authorities declare that it is every day spreading. subject is also a shareholder in the Opera House Company of Hamilton. Eminently a man of enterprise and daring, venturesome public spirit, he is also very conspicuous among benevolent and other societies. He is a Freemason, an Oddfellow, a member of the Royal Arcanum, and of the Independent Order of Foresters. His tastes have led him to travel somewhat, and he has visited nearly all the important cities of the United States. He is a Conservative, a firm subscriber to the merits of the national policy, and a member of the central committee of the Conservative Association of Hamilton. In religion he is a devoted adherent of the doctrines of Anglicanism. He married on January 8th, 1884, at Brantford, Annie Clarke, only daughter of Joseph Clarke, an old and very worthy resident of Hamilton.

Holtby, Thomas, Brampton, Ontario, son of the Rev. Mathias Holtby and Elizabeth Vickerman, was born on the 30th March, 1823, in Yorkshire, England. Mathias Holtby was a carriage manufacturer in England, but in 1830 embarked for Canada, settling in Little York, now Toronto. A short time after his arrival in Canada, he entered the ministry of the Methodist church, and zealously devoted himself for thirteen years in spreading the gospel. He then retired to a farm in the township of Walsingham, where he continued till his death in 1880. He left a family of six children, the subject of this sketch being the Mrs. Holtby died in 1833. attended school till his eighteenth year, after which he devoted himself to farming in the township of Chinguacousy, Peel, at which occupation he remained for thirty-five In 1880 he removed to the town of Brampton, where he has resided since. Being a man of wide and advanced views, he was pressed by friends to offer himself for county services, and accepted. He was deputy-reeve of his township during the years 1875 and 1876, when he retired; but in 1881, upon being again pressed he came before the public, and was elected to the Brampton council; and has been re-elected every year since. Mr. Holtby is president of the Peel Mutual Fire Insurance Company; is a director of the Federal Life Insurance Company, whose head office is at Hamilton, and the financial manager of the Haggert Manufacturing Company, Brampton. politics he is independent, refusing to be bound to the wheel of any political party. In religion he has his adherence to Methodism, being a local minister of that denomination, and having held all the offices in the church. He has been a member of the general conference since 1879, and is a member of the annual conference. He married on the 4th February, 1846, Susanna Louise, daughter of the late John Bagwell, one of the first magistrates in the County of York, and a gentleman prominently identified with its early history. There was a family of thirteen children, nine of whom are liv-Mr. Holtby has been prominent in the sphere of his choice, and he enjoys the respect and the good-will of his fellow men. To say this is to say much of any man.

Eccles, Friend Richard, London, Ontario, M.D., F.R.C.S., Edinburgh; M.R. C.S., England; F.O.S., London; Professor of Physiology in the Medical Department of the Western University, was born on January 25th, 1843, in the township of Warwick, county of Lambton, Ontario. Eccles family is a very ancient one, and the subject of this sketch traces his descent from John de Eccles, a person of rank, who lived in the reign of Alexander III. of Scotland, in the thirteenth century. The surname of Eccles was assumed by the proprietors of the lands and barony of Eccles, in Dumfriesshire, as early as the period when surnames became hereditary in Scotland. The arms of the family are Arg., two halberts crossing each other saltierwise, az. The crest is a broken halbert and the motto Le Defendende or Nec deficit animus. The pedigree of the family at length is to be found in Burke's Landed Gentry. The father of our subject was John Dickson Eccles, the ninth in a direct line from the first member of the family alluded to, and his mother was Mary Bissell. The family estate, it may be said, is Ecclesville, situate in the county of Tyrone, Ireland. In 1835 Mr. John Dickson Eccles left Tyrone, and came to Canada, settling in the County of Lambton, Canada West, now Ontario. Here he had to wage the usual strife with the difficulties of backwoods life, but he had abundant perseverance and succeeded. When the rebellion of 1837 broke out, he promptly took the field upon the loyal side. He was a man who engaged a large measure of public and social respect and confidence. He held many offices of trust and honour, was warden of the county in 1873, and one of the candidates before the convention for the representation of East Lambton, when that county was divided. He visited the home of his childhood in 1860, and again in 1872. He died in 1882. Friend Richard Eccles had considerable advantages in educational training, his father having obtained for him a private tutor, at whose hands he received instruction, in addition to that which he derived from the ordinary schools. In 1859 he was sent to the county Grammar school at Sarnia, where before the age of seventeen he obtained a first-class certificate under the regulations for the examination of teachers. He then engaged himself in teaching for a short while, and in this avocation he was remarkably successful and popular. Teaching, however, was not the end of his ambition, or congenial to his tastes, so after eighteen months private tuition he entered upon the usual medical course, which was required for a degree in medicine at the University of Toronto. He attended for two sessions at the old Toronto School of Medicine, the building then being situated in University Park, and two other sessions at New York, in connection with the Bellevue Hospital Medical College, where the opportunities for study of special surgical cases was largely increased by reason of the then existing civil war. In 1867 he finished his course, and obtained the degree of Doctor of Medicine, of the Bellevue Hospital Medical College, and Bachelor of Medicine, and the silver medal of the University, Toronto. He now settled in Arkona, County Lambton, and rapidly acquired a large and lucrative In 1871 Dr. Eccles married practice. Martha Lillian, only daughter of Amasa Wood, of Fingal, now of St. Thomas, Coun-

m

aı

hi

hi

w

W٤

Îet

cat

aft

ple

an

ser

In

Ro

Fel

Ed

wif

doc

pra

par

that olog

This

Wes

of it

tion

the o

sult

after

ed.

and

spen

Briti

turni

healt

last v

Obste

Since

terup

of his

large

as the

of Lor

JE 2.

ty of Elgin. His wife's father was one of the pioneers of the Talbot Street settlement, and was a gentleman of much commercial enterprise and business genius. He soon acquired in those early days the nucleus of a fortune, and to this he added from year to year, until he now stands financially one of the most prominent men of Western Ontario. In his business relations he is remarkable for integrity and candour, and he enjoys the highest possible place in the regard of his fellow townsmen. The poor have always been objects of his care, notably the poor and old Indians on the Muncey and Oneida reserves. Many a heart has been made glad by his bounty at Christmas time; and many a struggling church has found in him a helper. Dr. Eccles left the field of his early professional labours in 1876, and with his wife went to Europe, where he remained for over two years. Part of the time was spent on the continent, but the greater portion in the British Isles. A number of letters appeared in the East Lambton Advocate, wherein his impressions were recorded after his return. Combining profit with pleasure, he visited the various hospitals, and took advantage of the opportunities presented for professional and scientific work. In 1877 he was admitted a member of the Royal College of Surgeons of England, and Fellow of the Royal College of Surgeons, Edinburgh. In 1878 Dr. Eccles and his wife returned to Canada, and in 1879 the doctor settled in London, to resume the practice of his profession. He took an active part in establishing a school of medicine in that city, and has filled the chair of physiology in that school since its organization. This is the medical department of the Western University, now in the fourth year of its existence, and in a flourishing condition. The failing health of his wife induced the couple to go to Europe in 1882, to consult some of the leading physicians there, and after an absence of six months they returned. But the benefit was only temporary, and they crossed the Atlantic again in 1883, spent some time at the health resorts in the British Isles and at the German Spaas, returning at the end of the year with her health fully recovered. It was during this last visit that he was made a Fellow of the Obstetrical Society of London, England. Since then he has continuously and uninteruptedly devoted himself to the practice of his profession, and now has obtained a large share of the public confidence, as well as the confidence of his confreres in the city of London and surrounding towns. He has

rke's

oject

a di-

mily

Bis-

d, is

Ty-

kson

ada.

rada

rage

ack-

ver-

llion

field

who

cial

any

n of ndi-

pre-

that

ome

872.

cles

onal

him

ived

de-

859 hool

teen

the

ers.

or a

was

ach-

nbi-

igh-

pon

ired

sity

ons

the

sity

ork,

ital ties

rge-

ing

rse,

edi-Col-

the

ito.

on,

ive

ied

838

un-

taken an active part in religious work, and was president of the Young Men's Christian Association, of London, from 1880 to 1883. He has been connected with, and has been president of the Empire Loan Company, of Canada, since its organization. In politics Dr. Eccles has always been a Liberal, although never taking a very active part in public questions. He was a Congregationalist for many years, but lately has connected himself with the Methodist Church of Canada. In 1881, our subject was appointed one of the examiners for the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario, and still acts in that capacity. He was examiner in medicine for his alma mater, Toronto University, from 1881 to 1884 inclusive. Dr. Eccles is a man of refined tastes, and of kindly manners. He enjoys high repute in his profession for learning and skill, and has established for himself a very enviable practice.

Bell, William Carrick, Ingersoll, Ontario, was born at Cape Traverse, Prince Edward Island, on the 5th January, 1832. His father, John Bell, was born near Annan, Scotland, in 1781, and emigrated to Prince Edward Island, about the year 1825, in which province he lived until his death in 1876. His mother, who was born at Carlyle, England, in 1783, went to Prince Edward Island with her husband, and died there in 1847. Young Bell attended the Island educational institution, and his course embraced what is known as a sound English education. Before the locomotive's shriek (1851) was yet heard, W. C. Bell, travelled from Prince Edward Island, crossed the Straits of Northumberland, from Bedique to Shediac, thence proceeded by stage to the Bend of the Petitcodiac, and from that point to St. John, New Brunswick; from St. John he went by boat to Portland, Maine, and from the last named city, to Brantford, Ontario, via the Suspension Bridge. As this statement touches the matter of travel, we may add that Mr. Bell afterwards travelled through seventeen states in the Union, and has likewise visited Dakota, and the North-West territories. Since settling in Upper Canada, he has twice visited his home in the Island. Mr. Bell settled in Brantford, for two years; but in June, 1853, he went to Sault Ste. Marie, where he remained till October, when he set out for Ontanagon, Michigan, on Lake Superior. Here he remained till 1854, when he proceeded to Lafayette, Indiana, where he remained for two years, thence back again to Canada in 1856, settling in Ingersoll, Oxford county. Here he occupied himself in the business of builder and contractor, and success very soon began to attend the work of his hands. He still resides at Ingersoll, where he continues in a prosperous business, and holds a conspicuous place in municipal and town politics. He was elected councillor in 1879, and in 1883 was elected deputy reeve. He was re-elected, by acclamation, to the same position in 1885; and he has been a trustee of schools for the past ten or twelve years. In 1856 he became an Oddfellow, and has filled the office of noble grand for three terms in that order: likewise having held the treasurership and other He is likewise a Mason, and is a member of St. John's lodge, in which he has likewise been treasurer. In politics, Mr. Bell is an active supporter of the Reform party, and his religious views lead him to give a strong adherence to the Methodist Episcopal church. He married on April 23, 1857, Agnes Elliott, who died on June 11th, 1863. He again married, on November 12th, 1863, Margaret Elliott, who still survives.

Caron, Hon. Sir Adolphe, K. C. M.G., B.C.L., Q.C., P.C., M.P. for Quebec county, and Minister of Militia and Defence, was born in the City of Quebec Our subject is the eldest surin 1843. viving son of the late Hon. R. E. Caron. lieutenant-governor of the province of Que-The Caron family is ancient, and many members of it from time to time held distinguished places in the state. Sir Adolphe was educated at the Seminary of Quebec, at Laval University, and at the University of McGill. In 1865, he graduated from the last mentioned institution taking with him the degree of B.C.L. M. Caron had as preceptors in the offices wherein he studied his profession, very dis-tinguished lawyers. At first he studied with L. G. Baillairgé, Q.C., and subsequently with the Hon. (now Sir) John Rose, bart. In 1865 he was called to the bar of Lower Canada, and in May, 1879, was appointed a Queen's counsellor. He is the only remaining member of the widely known firm of Andrews, Caron & Andrews, Mr. Andrews, sr., having died a few years ago, and Mr. Andrews, jr., having been appointed to a justiceship. The firm is now re-organized and known as Caron, Pentland and Stuart. In 1867, he married Alice, only daughter of the late Hon. François Baby, M.L.C., and has issue Alice, and Adolphe DeBlois. ·Besides his attention to law, he has formed prominent connections in other directions. He has been a director of the Stadacona Bank, and was vice-president of the Literary and Historical Society of Quebec in But above all other interests, he 1867. found himself attracted to public life, and was first returned to parliament in March, 1873. He has sat in the House ever since, and has been twice elected by acclamation. He always showed himself to be an indusrious and practical member of the House of Commons; and those who observed him closely had no difficulty in predicting that sooner or later he must obtain a substantial recognition of his abilities. John A. Macdonald always keeps his eyes about him for talent, and Sir Adolphe was long under his scrutiny. A very great friend and warm admirer of Sir John A. Macdonald declares, however, that the premier does not want to have near him any ability, or brilliancy that could ever be likely to cast his own in the shade. Nevertheless. we are pretty certain that he is shrewd enough to seek to gather about him the best brains that he can lay hold of, and, as a rule, he has always succeeded in doing this. He perceived that Sir Adolphe would not alone make a good minister, but that he would likewise make a popular one. To some men, indeed to most men, come that one opportunity, at some period or another in their lives; to put it in poetic parlance:

in

re

ni

ca

th

co

co

to

an

fer

Sii

ab

tar

lan

Pat

bor

Enş

ber

and 183

Que

The

on a side

of 1

very

tive,

and

volu

wher

He t

only

ness

posui

the :

soon and r

which

sketcl

leavin

and si

surviv

this co

States

citizer

can na

ent fig

name

"There is a tide in the affairs of men.
Which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune."

That tide came last winter; that one opportunity arose for Sir Adolphe, Minister of We need not, so close to the event Militia. which furnished the opportunity, dwell at length upon it here. Like a thunderbolt upon our ears came the tidings that several policemen and civilians had fallen before a body of armed rebels in the North-West. It was the winter of the year, the theatre of revolt was far away; it could not be reached by railroad, but almost interminable stretches of wilderness lay before whomsoever should go there to re-assert the majesty of the law. A weak or incapable minister of militia would have been at his wit's end in the face of a problem, grave as this, thrust upon him for immediate settlement. But Sir Adolphe was not dismayed; he did not hesitate at all, but promptly and firmly grappled with the difficulty. Looking back upon it now, it naturally gives us ground for the heartiest approbation to think of the celerity with which troops were placed at different points in the territories, in the face of long and difficult marching, and at an inclement season. It is perhaps doubtful if there is to be found in the history of ordinary wars a record showing more | McDonough. promptness of design and action than this uprising put in the way of our Militia department to display. It is a fact that the decision and speed of our movements elicited the highest approbation from disinterested military spectators. His Excellency the Governor-General, who is a gentleman of very superior judgment, recognized the efficiency of the minister in this time of peril, and had no hesitation in communicating the fact to the Imperial government, and recommending that he should obtain recognition from the Crown. That recognition came, and there was no room to doubt that the Minister of Militia well deserved to become Sir Adolphe Caron. Of late it has come to be the custom in certain quarters to sneer at distinctions like the knighthood, and to declare that they have been conferred at random; but in the selection of Sir Adolphe for such an honour, no reasonable man can make this criticism.

in

he

and

ch,

nce.

on.

us

use

ved

ing

nh.

Sir

yes

w33

end

lac-

nier

ity,

l to

ewd

pest

nle,

He

one

uld

one

l in

ce:

op

of

ent

at olt

ral

eа

est.

tre

be

ble

80-sty ter

nd

But not nly ock nd the at

McDonough, Thomas, London, Ontario, was born in the City of Limerick, Ireland, on December 12th, 1824. His parents, Patrick H. and Margaret McDonough, were born in Ireland, and married there in the English church, of which they were members. Patrick McDonough was an only son and came to this country with his family in 1830, settling on a large tract of land near Quebec, where he remained for some years. Thence he removed to Ontario and settled on a farm in London township, where he resided but a short time when the rebellion of 1837 broke out. Immediately he took a very active part, being a staunch Conservative, and inspired with a spirit of loyalty and patriotism. At the first call to arms he volunteered, and led a company to the front, where he remained until peace was restored. He then returned to London, which was then only a small town, and embarked in business there; but, through hardship and exposure endured while at the front during the rebellion, he had lost his health, and soon found it necessary to give up business, and retired to a farm convenient to town, which farm now belongs to the subject of this sketch. Patrick McDonough died in 1844, leaving a widow and ten children, four sons and six daughters, seven of which family still survive. He had uncles who preceded him to this continent, but they settled in the United States, where they became distinguished citizens. One of them entered the American navy, and afterwards became a prominent figure in the affairs of the nation. His name lives in her history as Commodore Thomas McDonough received a business education, attending the Grammar school of London, Ontario. Though always having the interest of the militia service deeply in his heart, he has never identified himself with the organization. Large business responsibilities have prevented him from taking part in public life, though his interest in public questions and his fine abilities would fit him well for such a sphere. But to take a brief retrospective glance. After leaving school he remained on the family homestead until 1848, when feeling a strong desire to enter business, he launched out for himself in ambitious mercantile pursuits. He has since continued in this occupation, and with a success that witnesses from year to year a steady growth of business and profit. In 1855 Mr. McDonough took his brother-in-law into partnership, and a very extensive business was carried on; but the association dissolved in 1865, and our subject continued operations upon his own responsibility. McDonough's business consists of a wholesale and retail grocery trade. In 1853 he became a Freemason, and still adheres to the association. Through life he has been a Conservative, and is still true to his political faith. During many campaigns he has taken an active part, and fought sturdily for his candidate, and, upon the whole, with a large measure of success. With respect to his religious connections he was born and bred, and still remains, in the English church. He has never married. In social life, as well as in his business relations, Mr. McDonough is very popular.

Smith, Major Albert M., 7th Fusiliers, London, Ont., was born at Fergus, Ont., on the 6th January, 1853. The father of the subject of this memoir was William Simpson Smith, who was born near Moate, Ireland, where the family held an estate for many generations. William Simpson Smith was educated in Dublin, but was prepared for no business or profession. He emigrated to this country at an early age with the intention of farming; but shortly after his arrival he entered into commerce. He married a daughter of Major Brown, of Londonderry, Ireland. We may add that he was engaged in business in Haysville and Fergus, and finally (1855) went to London, where he carried on successful operations until his death in 1879. He was mayor of the City of London for the year 1868; and was a Freemason of high standing in the order. Albert M. Smith received a careful education, attending Hellmuth College and other schools. He always had a strong inclination for military life; and passed through the military school at Toronto in 1873. Immediately afterwards he obtained his commission as ensign in the 7th Battalion, keeping up active nection with the battalion ever since. went through the North-West campaign of 1885, and was for some time in command of a detachment at Telegraph Creek, on the North Saskatchewan. Before leaving school he proceeded to Europe, visiting before his return some of the most important places there. Major Smith is a member of the Church of England, and his family always have been members of that communion. As an officer he enjoys the repute of efficiency and of zeal; and he has well earned these attributes.

Burns, Rev. Alex., D.D., LL.D., President of the Wesleyan Ladies' College, Hamilton, was born in the Village of Castlewellan, County of Down, Ireland, on the 12th of August, 1834. His father was James Burns, a carpenter and joiner to trade, who left the old land and settled in Quebec in 1847. After remaining there for three years, his parents removed to Toronto, where they continued to reside during the remainder of their lives. At an early age Alexander began to attend school, and had acquired a good rudimentary education before his family emigrated. After his arrival in Quebec, he was employed for some time as an assistant in an apothecary's shop, but, not finding that pursuit to his liking, he soon abandoned it, and afterwards learned the trade of wood-turning. When seventeen years of age the famous Methodist revival preacher, the Rev. James Caughey, visited Toronto, and held a series of religious meetings in the old Richmond street Methodist Young Alexander Burns attended the meetings, and was drawn under the powerful spell of the preacher. He had been reared by his parents to the Presbyterian faith, and taught the Calvinistic doctrines in all their rigour, although it cannot be said that he held any distinct theological views at the time. He awoke to new purposes, was "converted," embraced the doctrines of the Weslevan body, and was enrolled as a member of the Methodist This was the turning point in his life, as his desires to understand the Scriptures, and to prepare himself for an earnest life, gave him an insatiable and permanent longing for an education. Impelled by that desire, he studied during his spare hours; and when he had saved enough to enable him to enter college, he left his business and entered Victoria College, Cobourg. He gradu. ated there, in 1861, B.A., as Prince of Wales' gold medalist. He remained in the college one year as classical teacher, and then entered the ministry. His first year was spent in Stratford, the second and third in Drayton. In 1865 he was offered the vice-presidency of the Mount Allison University, New Brunswick; also the chair of mathematics in the Iowa Wesleyan University. He accepted the latter, and accompanied the venerable Dr. Charles Elliott to Mount Pleasant, Iowa, where he remained three years as vice-president of that institution. In 1868 he accepted the presidency of the Simpson Centenary College, and held that position for ten years; was elected to the presidency of the Iowa Wesleyan Umversity in 1869, but declined to accept. While in the United States he did a great deal of lecturing, preaching, etc., before colleges, literary societies, and state associations; was one of the three delegates from the DesMoines conference to the general conference in Baltimore in the centennial year 1876. In 1878, just as he was thinking of returning east, he got a call from Hamilton to take the presidency of the Wesleyan Ladies' College, in place of the Rev. S. D. Rice, D.D., late senior superintendent of the Methodist Church of Canada, and accepted. At the same time he got a call to Chicago. He has been in Hamilton ever since. His special work is mental and moral science, evidences of Christianity, logic, and English literature. But the subject to which he has given most attention for the last twenty-five years is biblical criticism and biblical literature. He has in his library some of the rarest works to be found on the continent. In 1870 he received the degree of S.T.D. (Sanctæ Theologiæ Doctor) from the State University of Indiana, one of the richest universities in the country, and in 1878 his alma mater gave him the LL.D. He has been twice elected by the alumni of the university as one of their representatives in the senate, and is associate examiner in the university in the president's department. delivered the annual lecture before the Theological union twice, and preached the baccalaureate sermon once. He takes a great interest in Victoria College, and has studied her history and her wants perhaps as fully as any other of her sons. He has always been radical in his religious views and theology; that is, he profoundly believes that all true religion harmonizes with reason,

h

tl

he

ħi

la

bu

dr

th

WI

He

im

is :

щe

ďiv

WO)

us

inte

ten

He

not

plisl

stud

tain

large

regu

science, and common sense. He also believes that the scriptures, when properly interpreted in the light of their own claims, will forever maintain their place above all merely human productions. He claims that subscription to creeds is not merely useless, but positively injurious when it covers more than the essentials of Christianity. unity of the spirit is not uniformity of belief, nor a similarity of explanation. 1882 he was tried by the London conference for holding views contrary to the teaching of the Methodist Church on (1) the scriptures, (2) the atonement, and (3) the future. The supposed heresy was found in a letter of sympathy written by Rev. Dr. Burns to his old friend, Rev. Dr. Thomas, of Chicago, and published in the Chicago papers. defended his position, and showed that his views were not merely biblical, but also in full harmony with the leaders of thought and public teachers in Methodist universities. He was almost unanimously acquitted on all the charges, separately and conjoined. Touching the trial and its result, the Christian Guardian, edited by the Rev. Dr. Dewart, a born controversialist, said: "The acquittal of Dr. Burns was not a result of any special pleading or explaining away of his words on his part. He stated his views, and defended them in a manly and candid manner. There was no attempt to shirk the responsibility of his written or spoken words. We are glad the matter has ended as it has done. We never had any doubt that Dr. Burns was in everything essential soundly Methodistic, though he is an independent thinker, and expresses himself with more than ordinary freedom of language." Since then he has been very busy conducting the college, delivering addresses, lecturing (upon faith and free thought), preaching at anniversaries, and writing articles for magazines, papers, etc., He is a reformer in politics, opposed to an irresponsible house of lords, or senate, is a free trader, and believes that government should legislate for a more equitable division of the fruits of labour among the working classes—that nothing else can save us from communism. He takes a deep interest in missionary work, and has written several radical articles on the subject. He has endeavoured to make the college not merely a school for the so-called accomplishments, but a place where the solid studies of a university course could be obtained; and he is gratified to find that a large percentage of his students are in the nce of

nd en-

gradu-

in the .

r, and

st year

l third

ed the

ı Uni.

hair of

niver-

eccom-

iott to

nained

insti-

dency

d held

ted to

ı Um-

ccept.

great

before

8880-

egates

e gen-

nten-

e was a call

of the

f the

oerin-

nada,

got a

ilton

l and

nity,

sub-

ntion

blical

as in

to be

e re-

Theo-

ty of

es in

ıater

wice

ty as

iate,

rsity

has

the

the

es a

has

aps

al-

and

eves on,

ation. Both as a man and a theologian Dr. Burns is highly esteemed by his brother ministers, and his liberal and enlightened policy has won for him many warm friends, both within the pale of the church and outside of it. He was married on the 15th of June, 1863, to Sarah Andrews, of Devonshire, England. The union has been a most happy one. Mrs. Burns is preeminently adapted to aid in his present work; indeed she does more in college management now than he does himself. He has four children - two sons and two daughters.

Cowan, James, Hardware Merchant, London, Ont., was born at Dalry, County of Kirkendbright, Scotland, on the 14th January, 1832. He is a son of John Cowan and Margaret, whose maiden name was Carson. John Cowan was a merchant in Dalry, and died at the age of forty-eight; and the mother died when in her forty-first year. Eleven children were left, nine sons and two daughters, the subject of this sketch being the seventh son in succession. He had only reached his seventh year when his parents died; and before fifteen summers passed over him he left home to learn the business of an ironmonger. His education consisted in what he obtained at the schools of his native place before he set forth to learn his profession. He served five years as an apprentice and two years as foreman, with A. Dobie, ironmonger and jeweller, Castle Douglas, Scotland. ing there in May, 1853, he went to Durham, England, where he tarried for three months with Mr. Marshall, ironmonger and cooper. In August, 1853, he proceeded to Dewsbury, Yorkshire, remaining there for six months as clerk with John Smith, ironmonger and nail manufacturer. 1854, he started off for Liverpool, to manage In May, a hardware business for Mrs. Lightfoot, whose husband had died, her business being somewhat embarrassed. home in August of the same year, married He left for Elspeth Wells on September 1st, and sailed from Liverpool on the ship West Point, on September 22nd, arriving at New York on 22nd October, 1854. The ship had cholera on board, and twenty passengers and four seamen died of the terrible disease. Cowan obtained employment with Messrs. Windle & Co., on Maiden Lane, for about two months, and afterwards for a short time in a carpet store in Brooklyn. large percentage of his students are in the regular college course preparing for gradumerchant in Hamilton, Canada West. On the 8th August, 1855, he obtained a situation with Adam Hope & Co., London, and was employed with this firm up to September, 1864, leaving them of his own accord. He then began business in partnership with James Wright, (October 21, 1864), under the name of Cowan & Wright. This firm, however, dissolved partnership on September 30th, 1875, and since then, up to the present time, the name of the firm has been James Cowan & Co. His partners are his eldest son, David James Cowan, and his nephew, and A. K. Melbourne. Mr. Cowan commenced business on a very small capital, and has succeeded in all his undertakings. Adam Hope & Co., whose retail department he had managed for years, and in whose employ he was for over nine years, declined to sell him goods when he started in business; but in less than two years that firm left London for Hamilton. This circumstance is mentioned to show that Mr. Cowan owes his success in life to his own individual effort, combined with a thorough knowledge of the business, and not to assistance from others. His late partner, assistance from others. Mr. Wright, being a school-teacher, had no knowledge of the hardware business. Cowan has always taken a hearty interest in the affairs of his fellow-citizens, and there is at the present time (close of 1885) a strong desire that he should become mayor of the He is a member of the St. city for 1886. Andrew's and Caledonian societies, and an ex-president of the former; likewise a member of the Reform Association of London; and a master Mason in Kilwinning lodge. The date of his connection with the first, November, 1859; with the Reform Association, 1874; with the latter, January, 1885. Our subject was brought up in the Presbyterian faith, and adheres to that denomination. His first marriage has already been mentioned, but this lady died in June, He married again, the following year, Annie, daughter of Mr. Waddell, veterinary surgeon in the Royal Artillery, then stationed at Niagara. One son, his partner, borne by the first wife, is still living; and there are six sons and four daughters by the second, all of whom survive, except one of each sex, who died in infancy. John, his fourth son, took up arms as a volunteer in defence of his country in 1885. Mr. Cowan is a man of much personal and mental activity, and his temperament is decidedly sanguine and nervous. Nevertheless he is cautious, has a broad understanding, and weighs a matter with deliberation before reaching his conclusion.

Bain, Thomas Boult, Tilsonburg, Ontario, was born in the town of Lerwick, Shetland Islands, Scotland, on the 17th September, 1829. He is a son of Malconn and Helen Bain, the family name, of his mother being Jacobs. His grandfather was a pilot, and during the war 1776, was taken prisoner and confined under the hatches of the privateer schooner, Bon Homme Richards, then commanded by Paul Jones, during an engagement with the British frigate Seraphus. Some years later he died in Scotland. Malcolm Bain was a builder and contractor in the Shetland Islands. In 1843 he resolved to see what fortune might have in store for him in the new world, and taking ship across the ocean, he settled in Rochester, in the State of New York. In this city he continued his profession of contractor and builder for a time, and then moved to Buffalo, thence into Canada, taking up his abode in Tilsonburg. Some time afterward he retired from business life, and he died in 1877. leaving behind him three sons and three daughters; the subject of this memoir was the third eldest of the family. Mrs. Bain died also in 1877, and both she and her worthy husband were deeply lamented. They were extremely pious, and exemplary Christians, having been members of the Baptist denomination. Thomas Boult Bain received a careful educational training in primary studies in Scotland, and completed his course in Rochester, and at the City of Buffalo. Before leaving Scotland, he had commenced the study of Latin and Greek, and in Buffalo with six others formed a Hebrew class under the tutorship of the late Dr. Conger, of that city. He continued this study for three years, at the end of which period he was able to translate the language with great ease. He was always a devoted student, his choice studies being science and metaphysics. At the age of eighteen he left school and began to learn the business of builder and contactor with his father. In 1850 he entered the firm of Garrett, House & Co., to learn organ and piano building; and in time became foreman In 1857, he removed to of the works. Canada, where he resumed his old profession of building and contracting, in partnership with one Angus Brown. After a period of fifteen months the firm removed their operations to the town of Tilsonburg, and here established a sash and door factory, but the co-partnership dissolved in 1859, selling its interest in the business. After terminating business Mr. Bain concluded to seek a new home in Western Kansas, but he

p p tl

I

tr

fò

01 lo

th

ele

80 tíc

be

Re

a l

deı

bу

to

Ab

don

fam

tlen

resp

led

enjo

both

citiz

thou

law:

Onta

1838

tant

Moo1

berla

Dong

Scotl

farme

place

ettle

nausį

M

was not satisfied with the country, and returned to Tilsonburg at the close of the year. Upon his return he entered into partnership with W. B. Wilcox, in a general store business, under the firm style of Bain & Wilcox, and this arrangement was continued until 1862, when Mr. Buin bought out the interest of his partner, and he carried on the business alone successfully for twenty-three Having then accumulated a handsome competency, he retired from active life Upon the incorporation of the town of Tilsonburg, in 1871, he was elected the first reeve of the place, and represented the town in the county council for the years 1871, 1872, 1875 and 1876. In 1877 he was elected mayor of the town, and was reelected by acclamation for the years 1878, 1879, 1880 and 1881. In 1862 he was appointed one of Her Majesty's justices of the peace, and performed, we might say, all the magisterial duties for eighteen years. In 1864 he was elected one of the school trustees for the town, and held that office for several years. He belongs to the Masonic order, and is a member of King Hiram lodge, G.R.C., No. 78, and was W.M. in the said lodge for six years, and has been elected district deputy grand master of Wilson district twice (1878 and 1879). In politics Mr. Bain is a Reformer, and he has been president of the south riding of Oxford Reform Association. In religion he is a highly respected member of the Baptist denomination. He was married, in 1852, by the Rev. Dr. Boyd, of London, Ontario, to Laura L., eldest daughter of the late Abraham Vanorman, of the City of London. Mrs. Bain died in 1885, leaving a family of four children. Mr. Bain is a gentleman of a kindly disposition, and is greatly respected by all who know him. led a most active business life, and is now enjoying a well deserved rest. He is liberal, He has both in religion and politics, wishing every citizen to exercise the utmost freedom of thought, word and action compatible with law and order.

nburg,

rwick.

17th

alconn

of his

er was taken

hes of

Rich-

Jones,

British

e died

ouilder

s. In

might

d, and

led in

In this tractor

ved to

up his

ard he

n 1877,

three.

ir was

. Bain

nd her

ented.

nplary

of the

t Baia

ing in

pleted

ity of ie had

Freek,

med a

of the

tinued

end of

te the ways a

being ige of

learn

r with

rm. of

n and

reman

ed to

orofes-

rtner-

period

their

, and

ctory,

1859,

After

ded to

out he

Moore, James Douglas, St. Mary's, Ontario, was born on the 18th of August, 1838, in Dumfries, upon a farm not far distant from Galt, Ontario. His father, George Moore, was born in 1801, in Northum-berland, England, and his mother. Agnes Douglas, was born in 1812, in Roxborough, Scotland, she being the daughter of a farmer. The marriage of this couple took place a few years after George Moore had settled upon his farm. mauspicious circumstances, the subject of Under rather this sketch first saw the light. His parents, like other pioneers, was struggling with the difficulties of the bush; and when he grew old enough to be of any use, instead of being able to attend school, he was obliged to give his assistance to the numerous odds and ends of farm work. passed his twelfth year, however, he at-After he had tended school during the winter months, having resolved not to go out and try to win his fortune from the world without an education. So strong was his desire to excel, that he very soon outstripped larger boys at school. But his ambition was to be first in the everyday associations outside of school, as well as within its walls; and at ploughing matches, which were conducted with a high degree of skill, he carried off the silver cup amongst other important prizes. Before the introduction of reaping machines in his native section, he cut with his own cradle, in a space of twelve hours, no less than eight acres of heavy grain. Another instance of deftness of fingering may be given: after he had engaged in the egg busiess, he packed a barrel of seventy dozen eggs in the space of seven minutes. On the 24th May, 1866, he married Mary Black, the daughter of a worthy farmer in the section. Although Mr. Moore's father was the proprietor of a farm of 300 acres, highly and thoroughly cultivated, yet as he reflected that he had been so long a slave of toil, in wet and dry weather, through winter and summer, he decided that he would try some line of commerce for which he deemed he possessed the proper aptitude. On the 26th March, 1867, he moved to St. Mary's, where he began to purchase and pay cash for eggs and butter,—a method of paying considered an amazing phenomenon in those days. Not being satisfied with the ordinary methods of this trade, he was the first to pickle eggs to any considerable extent, and began to keep them over from a period of low prices till their value arose in the market. was likewise the first dealer west of Montreal to erect a refrigerator to hold eg.s over in their fresh state. His operation in eggs, as well as in cheese and butter, have been conspicuously successful. died on the 13th January, 1869, and a year later, December, 1869, he married Elizabeth Shand. He has one daughter living by each wife, and the eldest of these graduated at the Young Ladies' College, Brantford, in June, 1885. Mr. Moore was for several years a member of St. Mary's town council, and could have easily had every office within the gift of his townsmen, but his business imperatively demanded his attention, so that he was obliged to be content with holding the presidency of the South Perth Reform Association, and some other small but honourable positions. He is a Presbyterian, being descended from the old, strict Established church. This enterprising gentleman employs seventeen men and seven teams; and besides the produce business spoken of, he owns and operates an oatmeal mill, and exports meal, butter, cheese and apples to Glasgow, Liverpool and London, and eggs to New York. Mr. Moore's father died in 1875, but his mother is still alive. A man of remarkable individuality, energy, and business capacity is the subject of this sketch, as the mere reading of his career alone will show White, Hon. Thomas, Minister of the Interior, M.P. for Cardwell, and late Managing Editor of the Montreal Gazette, was born at Montreal, on the 7th of August, 1830. His father was Irish, a County Westmeath man, and his mother Scotch, having been born in Edinburgh. Mr. senior, carried on business as a leather merchant in Montreal for many years. sent Thomas, the subject this sketch, to the High School at Montreal, where he received the education which in later years he was destined to turn to such excellent account. Having left school, Mr. White engaged for some years in mercantile pursuits, but this was not according to his taste, and he soon made up his mind to abandon the calling, and accepted a position on the editorial staff of the Quebec Gazette-which position was offered him in consequence of an address which he delivered on temperance in the city of Quebec, and which attracted much attention. In 1853 he started, in company with his brother-in-law, Robert Romain, the Peterboro' Review, which he was connected with until 1860. Then he entered upon the study of law in the office of the Honourable Sidney Smith, Q.C., of Peterboro', continuing his studies during the full term of four years. He then, with his brother, Richard White, became the proprietor of the Spectator, Hamilton, where he resided from 1864 to 1870. Mr. White, from an early age, evinced a marked interest in public affairs; and when he was yet a very young man was chosen reeve of the town of Peterboro'. He likewise always took a great interest in educational affairs, and served upon the Grammar School boards in Peterboro' and Hamilton. In Montreal, where in later years his chief personal interests were centered, he took an important part in civic and gen-

He was for a number of eral business. years representative of the Montreal Board of Trade in the Dominion Board; for three years a member of the executive committee of the Dominion Board, and representative for five years of that body at the National Board of Trade of the United States. But important and ever conspicuous connection with civic matters, and with associations, did not satisfy the ambition of He had been for years a close Mr. White. and careful observer of political events, and a conscientious student of public questions. So he resolved to seek admission to parliament; and when he sought that admission he did not go as a raw recruit who has to study the questions upon which he has to legislate after he has entered the legisla-His mind was well stored with practical information, and his judgment ripened by a wide experience. In 1878, he was first returned to parliament for Cardwell, his But this success was not present seat. achieved without much perseverance and In 1867, he was an unsucstrong efforts. cessful candidate for South Wentworth in the Ontario Legislature; in 1874, for the County of Prescott, in the House of Commons, and in 1875 and 1876, respectively, for Montreal West, in the House of Com-It may be pointed out that the aggregate majority against him in the three first elections amounted to only sixteen Mr. White has retained his seat for votes. Cardwell since 1878. With respect to his opinions, the writer may quote an authoritative statement :- "He thinks that the tariff should be so framed as to promote foreign trade by Halifax in the winter and the St. Lawrence in the summer, as against trade by American sea ports; and as to for ter the development of the agricultural mining and manufacturing interests of the country. He favours an Imperial zollverein which would strengthen the bond of union between the mother country and the col onies, by fostering and protecting their trade relations." Mr. White has always been an able and very conscientious sup porter of the Conservative party's nations policy; and he is always prepared with a invincible array of arguments to defend the position which he takes upon this question He is one of the most industrious member of the House of Commons, devoting his tim and his attention to the duties of his po Sir Leonard Tilley and himse were the two authorities upon questions q finance and trade upon the government side of the House during these late year

i

S

iı

sl

tl

ex

po

se

in

th

kn

aff

pr

pai

un

noi

hor

waa

hin

are dia

pre

flee

bilit

iste

out,

is n

ledg

ous

expe

Leon

Wel.

tion

and ·

terri

head

for w

Mr. White is a fluent, graceful, polished and r ber of telling speaker. He always conveys the iml Board pression of being master of his subject; and rd : for he never becomes confused when he gets ive comupon his feet. He has always arisen after d repre-Sir Richard Cartwright, and some of the y at the lesser oppositionists have for some days be-United laboured Sir Leonard Tilley's budget speech. spicuous It is very noticeable that Mr. White's statewith asments upon financial questions have been oition of generally passed over by the snapping fry. ва close Upon the reconstruction of the Cabinet in ents, and the summer of 1885, Mr. White was invited nestions. to a seat in it by Sir John A. Macdonald. The o parlia-dmissios unfortunate outbreak in the North-West had left affairs in that portion of the country in o has to a pitiable plight; for shortly after the close he has to of the tumult, and while the territory yet e legisla lay distracted after the war, Sir David Macith pracpherson, who had been Minister of the Interior, was obliged, owing to ill health, to t ripened was first resign, and seek amelioration at the baths lwell, h:s in Germany. Meanwhile every eye was was not searching for a man with the ability and the ance and industry to take charge of the vacated headan unsucship; and when it was announced that the worth in member for Cardwell was the gentleman for , for the the post, the most complete satisfaction was of Comexpressed. Even organs most bitterly oppectively, posed to the government admitted that the of Comselection was a most admirable one; for the at the agindustry, the ability for organization, and the three the capacity of the minister elect, were v sixteen known to every one. Almost immediately s seat for after receiving the appointment, Mr. White ect to his proceeded to the North-West, and made authorpainstaking investigation into the host of that the unsettled affairs in that region; and it is mote for not necessary to seek to show how onerous, r and the how tedious, and how immense this task us against was, and the work which afterwards fell to as to for him at his place in the capital. Even now icultural are heard threats from the intractable Insts of the dian tribes; and raids and disturbances are predicted for the spring. We mention this ollverein of union fleeting matter to show the grave responsid the col bility resting upon the shoulders of the Minting their ister of the Interior. There is, let us point as alway out, much satisfaction in knowing that there ious sup is no public man of whom we have knownationa ledge, better fitted to cope with so momentwith a ous a charge than Mr. White. There was efend th expectation that he would succeed Sir question member Leonard Tilley as Minister of Finance. ng his tim Well, it is not unlikely that, when organizaof his po tion in his present department is perfected, d himse and peace restored in the torn and distracted estions (territory, Mr. White may be found at the vernme head of the finance department, a position ate year for which his abilities specially and emphatically fit him. Before closing the sketch, we think it is only fair to mention that the Hon. Mr. White, like many of the leading men who now hold public positions, received his early training as a speaker in the division rooms of the Sons of Temperance, and that, when a young man and a resident of Lower Canada, he occupied one of the highest positions in the Grand Division of the Sons of Temperance of the Province of Quebec, and was the first in Canada to write a pamphlet explaining the aims and objects of an order of temperance workers, that are as active to-day in extending the cause of temperance and prohibition as it was over thirty years ago, when it was first intro-duced into our country.

Lavell, Michael, M.D., Kingston, Ontario, was born on December 29th, 1825, in the City of Quebec. He comes of united Irish and French ancestry, and at an early age was left an orphan with his two elder brothers, both of whom are ministers of the Gospel. Michael Lavell, after careful preparation, commenced the study of medicine at Toronto. After his course had expired here, he proceeded to Philadelphia, U.S., where he completed his studies. Dr. Lavell enjoys the repute of being remarkably skiltul in his profession, and we may be permitted to point out some of his professional acquisitions. He was a surgeon in the militia force, (1856); was a member of the Ontario Medical Council from 1866 to 1885; president of the Medical Council, 1874; examiner in medicine for the Medical Council in 1873 and 1874; was professor of Obstetrics, etc., in Queen's University, and the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons, from 1860 to 1885; and is president of the Woman's Medical College, and honourary physician to Kingston General Hospital. He was likewise surgeon to the Kingston Penitentiary, from 1872 to 1885; and was appointed warden of Kingston Penitentiary in February, 1885. In politics he has always been staunch upon the Conservative side; and in religion he professes the doctrines of the Methodist church. Dr. Lavell married, in 1853, the eldest daughter of the late W. Reeve, of Toronto. He has had twelve children, two of whom are dead; the eldest son, the late C. H. Lavell, M.D., died in 1884, and the fourth son, Richard, died in 1879, while a student at college. One son, John R. Lavell, is practising law at Smith's Falls, another, W. A. Lavell, is practising medicine at Smith's Falls, the others are pursuing their studies at Kingston. Dr. Lavell commenced the practice of medicine, in Peterboro', Ontario, in 1853; and removed to Kingston in 1858, continuing in the practice of his profession there, until appointed warden of Kingston Penitentiary. joyed an extensive and lucrative practice. He never entered municipal or political life, being too much occupied with professional and collegiate duties. He always has been active in church work, holding official positions therein for forty years. He has been identified with all moral movements during his life. He has been an active member of the University of Victoria College board and senate for some twenty-five years. He is likewise a member of the General conference of the Methodist church, and has been since its organization. Not alone as a physician, but socially, is the subject of this sketch eminent and worthy.

Girdwood, Gilbert Prout, Montreal, M.R.C.S., England, licentiate of the Province of Upper Canada; of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Quebec; M.D. C.M., McGill; member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Quebec; member of the Natural History Society of Montreal, F.R.C.S. Canada, one of the original Fellows in the Mathematical and Physical section; member of the British and American Association for the advancement of science, and member of the Society of Public Analysts, England, was born at London, England, on the 22nd October, 1832. His father was Gilbert Finlay Girdwood, M.D., Edinburgh, who practised medicine in London, England, for 35 years. This gentleman was the author of numerous papers on professional subjects. The family has been, for 300 years, at Costorphine, near Edinburgh, and are well known. His mother was Susan Sophia, daughter of the Rev. Thomas Bazeley, rector of Lavenhan, Suffolk. England, and chaplain to the late Duke of Kent, father of Queen Victoria. Prout Girdwood obtained his early educational instruction at a private school in London, England, and when he had attained a proper age he entered the University College and St. George's School of Medicine. This latter is the last of the private medical schools of England, and was originally known as the John and William Hunter school. On November 8th, 1854, he entered the army and was gazetted assistant surgeon to H. M. Grenadier Guards, 1st battalion. He served here till December 17th, 1861, when he was ordered to Canada, the Trent affair at that time having disturbed the On the return of the battalion to England, in September, 1864, he resired from the service. He was appointed surgeon to the Military prison in Montreal, and surgeon to the Victoria Rifles, in the same In 1866 he went to the front with the last named regiment, and was appointed medical staff officer of the militia of Canada in the same year. He was attending physician of the Montreal dispensary in 1864. and has since been consulting physician to the same institution. He was attending surgeon of the Montreal General Hospital from the year 1875 to the present time; and was a health officer of the city in the year With respect to his Masonic record. it may be stated that he was initiated in 1862, in St. Paul's lodge, English register, 374; held office of I. G., 1864; past W.M. St. Paul's, 374, E. R., S. D., 1865; secr., 1866; past Z., St. Paul's chapter, J. W., 1867; S. W., 1868; Knights Templars and 32°, W. M., 1871-72. He has held other higher offices in higher degrees of the order, and has been a member of the Royal Society of Canada since its commencement. He has likewise been professor of chemistry in the medical faculty of McGill College from 1879 to the present; and is professor of practical chemistry in the same college. Dr. Girdwood has always been a Conservative. but he has no taste for political affairs, and has not concerned himself in the strife of our parties. In religion, he is an adherent of the Church of England. On the 9th of April. he married Fanny Merriman, daughter of the late Thomas Evans Blackwell, C. E., member of the Institute of Civil Engineers, England, and a grand niece of the late Dr. Buckland, dean of Westminster. It is not necessary, with such a record before the reader, to bestow any eulogy upon the talent and the industry of a man who could achieve so much as Dr. Girdwood has accomplished We simply leave the record as a stimulant to some ambitious young men before whose eyes this sketch may come.

Radcliffe, Richard, Goderich, Ontario, was born at Amherstburg, County of Essex, on the 9th April, 1838. He is the youngest son of Colonel, Hon. Thomas Radcliffe, and his wife Sarah Ann Armstrong. [For particulars respecting the ancestry of Mr. Radcliffe, vide sketch of Colonel, Hon. Thomas Radcliffe.] Our subject was educated at home by his mother till ten years of age, after which he attended the old Model school at Toronto, which stood on King street, where the present lieutenant-governor's residence now is. For a short period he also attended the Upper lodg R ,y 30. mast 1879 Was (Huro of H again cipal Canad grand Knigh Was a poses same y A. Scd is a si been : church in chui den for Erie, E Warren est dau commiss one dau Mille County ( was born Canada,

son o

ansick

ducation

ind wher

an the si

Robert D

iligence.

iter which

ession,

practio

e was ourt of osition h

nd with spensabl

hesebro'.

odard Ci

Ca lea in Sej mo

Jui

was

ing

Dur

initi

25

Canada College, then a very superior seat of learning. Mr. Radcliffe was appointed clerk in Her Majesty's customs at Fort Erie, in September, 1855; and in April, 1866, he removed to Goderich, where he remained till June 30th, 1885, when he retired, after thirty years' service, during which time he was frequently assigned the duty of relieving officer at various ports, viz. : Kingston, Dundas, Guelph, and other places. He was initiated into the Masonic order in Maitland lodge, No. 33, March, 1875; exalted to the Rival Arch degree in Huron chapter, No. 30, in May, 1877; was elected worshipful master of Maitland lodge, on 24th December, 1879; was W.M. for four years in succession; was elected district deputy grand master for Huron district, which comprises the counties of Huron, Porth and Bruce in 1882, and again in 1883. He was elected grand principal sojourner of the Grand Chapter of Canada of Royal Arch masons in 1884, and grand constable of the Grand Priory of Knights Templars of Canada in 1885, and was appointed on the board of general purposes of the Grand Lodge of Canada in the same year. He is also a 14° in the A. and A. Scottish rite. In politics Mr. Radcliffe is a sincere Conservative. He has always been a staunch member of the English church, and invariably took an active part in church matters, having been church warden for many years. He married at Fort Erie, Eliza, youngest daughter of Col. John Warren, by his wife Charlotte Stanton, eldest daughter of William Stanton, assistant commissary-general, by whom he has had one daughter. Miller, William, Galt, Judge of the

resired

ed sur-

al. and

e sune

ith the

minted

'anada

physi-

1864

cian to ending

ospital

e ; and

e year

record.

ted in

egister,

W.M.

secr., J. W.,

rs and other

order,

Society

. He stry in

e from

sor of

e. Dr.

rative.

s, and

of our

ent of

April,

ter of

C. E.,

neers,

te Dr.

is not

e the

talent

chieve

ished.

nulant

whose

, On-

nomas

Arm-

the

sub-

other nded

hich

esent

pper

County Court, County of Waterloo, Ontario, was born in the township of Niagara, Upper Canada, on the 20th October, 1810. He is son of William Duff Miller and Anne Vansickle. Mr. Miller received a careful ducational training in the town of Niagara, nd when his studies were completed, he bean the study of law in the office of the Hon. obert Dickson, applying himself with much iligence. He was called to the bar in 1835, for which he began the practice of his proession, in Dundas, where he remained, practice, for eighteen years. In 1853 was appointed judge of the county ourt of the County of Waterloo; and this osition he has since filled with satisfaction, pd with the dignity and impartiality so inspensable to the ideal judge. He married, 1837, at Canandaigua, N. Y., Cornelia hesebro', the eldest daughter of Nicholas odard Chesebro'.

Sibbald, Rev. E. W., Rector of Christ Church, Belleville, Ontario, was born at Wonallt, Cardiganshire, South Wales, on the 20th of June, 1858. The old family residence is beautifully situated on the banks of the river Ystwith, in one of the picturesque valleys of the country, and surrounded by high mountains. Our subject is the son of John Sibbald, of Edinburgh, Scotland, a descendant of an old and well-known family of that place. Some members of the family have occupied important positions in the military and literary world. The first president of Edinburgh University was Sir Robert Sibbald; Colonel Sibbald, of the Sikh campaign, and Major Sibbald, of the Coldstream guards, were of the same family. John Sibbald, when a young man, removed to Wales with his uncle, Robert Sibbald, who had purchased the tithes in Cardiganshire. Herehe became married to Charlotte Williams, of Pengelly, whose family is one of the oldest and most respected in old Cumry; and said to be descended from Caradoc, Prince of South Wales. Many traditions Many traditions of Caradoc still exist about Pengelly House. Here are shown the Falls of Caradoc, Pwll Caradoc, the cave of Caradoc, etc. John Sibbald, the mother of the subject of our sketch, is the sister of Rev. John Williams, for forty-two years vicar of Aberdovey; of Rev. Thomas Williams, rector of St. George, St. Asaph, the compiler of the Welsh hymnal, which is in general us, throughout the principality; of Rev. Edward Williams, of Douglas, Isle of Man; of Rev. Eleazer Williams, rector of Pullhely; and of Ebenezer Williams, the present proprietor of Pengelly. In the family are cherished the names of many of the old notable preachers of Wales; as for many generations it has been peculiarly The late Canon Jones of Trydegar, a clergyman of great worth, and one of the most able and eloquent of preachers, was a cousin of Mrs. Sibbald. Mr. Sibbald, with his family, came to Canada in 1861, where he has since remained. For some years the family have resided in Toronto. Here the Rev. Mr. Sibbald prosecuted his studies in University College, and graduated in theology in Wycliffe College. He was ordained deacon on the 25th of Sept., and presbyter on the 8th of April, 1883, by the Right Rev. Arthur Sweatman, D.D., bishop of Toronto. He was appointed to the parish of Rosemont, where his work was remarkably blessed, and will always be a lasting monument to his energetic life and untiring zeal. Several churches were erected in places where services had not previously been held. St. David, Everett, a beautiful and costly church, was erected, and a large number of families became members of it; and at the present time it has a most prosperous congregation. parish received the marked recognition of the mission board in gratefully declining the grant offered to assist them; and the bishop in his charge referred to their action and work in commendatory terms. Through the Rev. Mr. Sibbald's efforts services were opened in several places to the north of his parish, which now forms an independent mission and is prospering in charge of students from Wycliffe College. In the beginning of 1883, contrary to his personal preferences, but in obedience to an evident indication of God's will, Mr. Sibbald became assistant minister of Christ Church, Belleville. After the decease of the late Rev. Dr. Clarke, he succeeded him The rev. gentleman takes an active interest in all questions of public importance, and keeps himself abreast of the He was elected in 1883, a member of the American Association for the advancment of Science; and soon afterward he was elected a member of the British Scientific Association. In 1884 he was elected the Right Worthy Grand Chaplain of the society of the Sons of England, a society of recent origin, but one that has met with great success and favour in our country; and which is destined, at no distant day to largely influence our national life. character, we have no doubt, will be largely influenced and moulded by its able grand Our subject, however, is best known outside of his ministerial work as an indefatigable worker in the cause of temperance. In connection with his church there is a temperance society numbering about 700, and about 200 children in the Band of Hope. As he affirms, he is compelled to prosecute the temperance work, "because intemperance is the great obstacle to all religious influence, the great barrier between man and God, between earth and heaven." He has ably assisted in the Scott Act campaign in Halton, and many of the counties and cities of the Dominion, by delivering powerful and eloquent lectures in behalf of In recognition of his valuable services, he was elected vice-president of the Dominion Alliance. His sympathies in ecclesiastical affairs are decidedly in support of the Evangelical part of the church; and his teaching manifests strong conviction of the truth of their doctrines and the right of their position. He is an ardent supporter of Wycliffe College and its teaching; believing it to be most necessary to check the inroads made by certain tendencies of the times, viz., æstheticism, sentimentality, ritualism and sacredotalism. His strong advocacy of Evangelical truth, has gained him many warm sympathizers. He is still but a young man, and everything bespeaks for him a long, useful, and influential career.

Lloyd, Thomas Daniel, Barrie, Ont., was born at Clonegal, Wexford, Ireland, 18th October, 1803, and is, therefore, now in his eighty third year. His father, John Lloyd, was an excise officer, the son of Allen Lloyd, of St. Johns, whose name is still remember. ed as an active loyalist in the Irish rebellion He was one of those imprisoned of 1798. by the rebels in the famous windmill on Vinegar Hill, near Enniscorthy, but spared, because beloved by the people, while all his comrades were butchered with the merciless pike. His grandson, the subject of this sketch, received his education at Enniscor. thy and Dublin, pursuing a course of study at the Fine Arts School of the Royal Dublin Society, it being his wish to become an artist. But family misfortune extinguished this hope, and in the year 1832 he sailed for Canada with his brothers, and chopped out a home in the backwoods of the County of Hastings, where his mother resided until her death in 1860. She was the daughter of Thomas Hunt, of Roxborough, Waterford, and a cousin of the late Sir Hugh Pal-On the outbreak of the rebellion in 1837, Mr. Lloyd joined the County of Hastings battalion, a hastily formed band of loyalists, whose only uniform at that time consisted of red woollen night-caps. He was made a sergeant on the expedition to Kingston to meet the rebels, a journey accomplished in sleighs, in the depth of winter. In the year 1843 he went to Toronto, driving as far as Cobourg, and walking the rest of the distance. At this time the District of Simcoe was set apart, and on Judge Gowan's appointment, Mr. Lloyd proceeded to Barrie to fulfil the duties of deputy-clerk of the Crown, riding on horseback from Toronto, and thus, first coming in sight of Kempenfeldt bay and the two or three log houses comprising Barrie, nestling in the dense primeval forest. On the establishment of the division courts shortly afterwards, he was appointed clerk/at Barrie, which office he held until his retirement in 1880. He was adjutant, and afterwards major, in the sedentary militia, and was

M M po or ing lift an tioo Ch are pos and ing ture ite (

by a poss marr late of th only sons. tiring hims write so rethe esettle a marial pu seven

respec

bonou

sirable adian.

Gi
Napan 1837, ;
wall, H
and E;
born Ji
of Joh
from S
the Sco
a man
a man
a man
a man
to by ti
the place

the place the outs man of people's was fille finally gazetted lieutenant-colonel of the Simcoe battalion, on 8th September, 1856, retaining the command until the old system was superseded by the active volunteers. Mr. Lloyd has always been conservative in politics from sympathy and early education; but he has taken no active part in political or municipal affairs, and is perhaps deserving of record, as a man who has lived a long life without the slightest connection with any society, secret or of any other description. He has always been a member of the Church of England, but his religious views are perhaps best expressed in his own words: "in youth, theological; in middle age, metaphysical, or abstract; and in later life, positivist or real." Possessed of a reflective and philosophical rather than an active mind, he has ever loved a quiet life, delighting in books, music, painting and horticul-ture—grape-growing being one of his favourite employments. He was the first to prove by actual experiment that grape culture was possible as far north as Barrie. In 1846 he married Matilda, second daughter of the late Lieutenat-Colonel W. B. McVity, clerk of the peace for the County of Simcoe, who only survived six years, leaving him two sons. The subject of this sketch is of a retiring disposition, and would hesitate to call himself a representative Canadian, but the writer feels that he is well worthy of being so recorded, as one who was identified with the early struggles of Canada, and the first settlement of the County of Simcoe; and as a man who after holding a rather uncongenial public office for the long period of thirty seven years, has retained the good-will and respect of all by his steady industry, sterling honour and kind heart; qualities most desirable in every true representative Can-right

pport.

;; beck the

of the

y, rit-

g add him

but a

s for

Ont.,

, 18th

in his

loyd,

loyd, mber-

ellion

soned

ill on

ared,

ll his

ciless

this

iscor-

study

ublin

e an

shed

d for

out

ty of

until

ghter

ater-

Pal-

n in

Has-

d of time

Was

ngs-

com-

nter.

lriv-

rest

trict

dge

ded

lerk To-

of

the

ish-

eer.

Gibson, Stephen, Barrister-at-law, Napanee, Ontario, was born March 23rd, 1837, at St. Martins, Scilly Islands, Cornwall, England. His parents were Stephen and Elizabeth Gibson, and his father was born July 15th, 1801, being the youngest son of John Gibson, who went to the islands from Scotland. He was descended from the Scottish family of that name, and was a man of sterling character and marked ability. He was in his day, owing to the isolated position of the islands, looked up to by the inhabitants as the chief man of the place, and in their communications with the outside world he was the head business man of the island, and transacted all the people's affairs. After his death his position was filled by his son. The island in those early days, was, owing to its position, a considerable port for shipping, being situated at the mouth of the English and Irish channels, and vessels on the homeward trips generally called at the port of Scilly for orders. One of the principal occupations of the place was pilotry, and in this calling a number of the inhabitants engaged. There was also at the principal port several shipyards, where ship-building was carried on, and facilities existed for repairing ships that had sustained damage during the long homeward voyage; hence a large number of workmen were employed, and the wharves and shipyards presented a busy scene. But since steamships have taken the place of sailing vessels all this is changed. The subject of this sketch early acquired a taste for Having obtained a thorough reading. knowledge of the common English branches of study, he endeavoured to extend his knowledge by personal effort, after he had gone through the common school course. There being no advanced schools at the island he determined to educate himself. and procured the necessary works. He soon acquired a knowledge of the French language, which he put in practice as much as possible whenever the opportunity offered, with the French sailors who came into port, and was soon able to interpret for the pilots. From general reading he acquired a desire to see and know something of the great world outside. Owing to the limited means afforded by the occupations on the islands, he had a desire to try his fortune in America; and in the spring of 1858 left home, arriving in Canada on May 5th, 1858. He went as far as Cobourg, and made that place his home for a few years, while looking around to determine his future course. At this time the openings for young men were not very good, owing to the depression over the country; but he determined to persevere, and while using every spare moment in a study of classics and mathematics, he engaged in the forwarding business during the summer season. In this way he made a large commercial acquaintance, and visited all the principal towns and cities fronting the great lakes from Kingston to Chicago. During the winter months he prosecuted his studies, and as soon as he was qualified, entered Victoria University, attending there during the winter sessions. Here he was enabled by forced work to keep up the year's work in the winter session as well as take other general studies not in the regular course. In the year 1863, he formed an acquaintance with William Kerr, Q.C., then practising in Cobourg, and determined to study law. He passed the matriculating examination, and was entered on the books of the Law Society at Osgoode Hall, in May, 1863, and remained in Mr. Kerr's office at Cobourg until Aug., 1864. At this period W. H. R. Allison, a practising barrister at Picton, offered him a position in his office, and he removed thither, where he remained until admitted to practice in May, 1868, after passing the several examinations required by the Law Society, Having severely taxed his health by close application to study, he paid a visit to his native home, after an absence of eleven years. Although his time was very short, being limited to six weeks, the bracing sea voyage completely restored his naturally strong constitution, and he returned to work with renewed vigour. He was called to the bar in February, 1869, and remained in Picton, having entered into partnership with Mr. Allison, till the fall, when he removed to Napanee, and opened an office there. During his course of study he had to work hard to obtain the necessary funds to carry him through without any assistance, refusing to ask help from his friends at home, and determined to make his own way independently. Whatever position he has attained is owing entirely to steady, persevering application. During this period family difficulties at home required pecuniary assistance from him, and this severely taxed his energies. Coming to Napanee, in September, 1869, although a complete stranger, having no friends or acquaintance, yet he soon acquired a steady practice by close attention to business, and in the spring of 1872 he entered into partnership with Jas. S. Cartwright, the present registrar of Queen's Bench Division Supreme Court of Judicature; and this business connection continued until the fall of 1877, when Mr. Cartwright removed to Toronto. During vacation in 1864 he attended Kingston military school, and passed the regular examination as cadet, and obtained the usual certificate entitling him to a commission. In 1866, during the Fenian raid, he joined the 16th battalion volunteers, under Lieutenant-Colonel Ross, and was appointed lieutenant of No. 4 company, serving with the battalion while they were at the front. He continued his connection with the battalion for a few years, attending the annual drill for some time after leaving Picton, but pressure of business would not allow him to retain the position and he resigned, although very much devoted to military drill and life. While at

Cobourg he became a member of St. John's lodge, A.F. and A.M.; was elected secre. tary, and continued in that office while he remained at Cobourg; was admitted as a member of the Royal Arch Masons, at Napanee, having joined the chapter there. and filled all the offices up to first principal in that chapter. He also joined lodge 86, Napanee, of Oddfellows, and is a member of Napanee Lodge. Being a member of the Liberal Association for Lennox in 1883. he was elected president of the Lennox Reform Association, which position he still holds; and he has always taken an active part in politics, acting with the Reform side. In the summer of 1875 he spent four months in travelling in England, Scotland and Wales, and visited several of the scenes of earlier days. He was in London during the May season, and had the honour of occupying a seat on the platform when the late Earl Shaftesbury presided over the British and Foreign Bible Society meeting, and several of the most noted men of the Empire were present, viz.: the Archbishop of Canterbury, Bishop Melbourne, Revs. Morley Punshon, Spurgeon, and many other distinguished men were there. Mr. Gibson was baptised in the Established Church, and attended the service of that church during vouth at home. In 1864 he became a member of the Wesleyan Methodist church, at Cobourg, and has continued his connection with that church to the present. In September, 1870, he married Mary E. Augusta Clute, daughter of R. R. Clute, of Sterling, and sister of R. C. Clute, of Belleville, barrister-at-law. There are four children, boys, all too young to have any very interesting history, except for their own family. Smith, Alexander, Manager of the Merchants Bank of Canada, Napanee, Ontario, was born in the City of Aberdeen, Scotland, on the 12th January, 1825. His father was Alexander Smith, advocate, of Aberdeen, and his mother was Elizabeth Lamond, of Strathmore, Aberdeenshire. Alexander Smith received a careful educational training, at first passing under the

Smith, Alexander, Manager of the Merchants Bank of Canada, Napanee, Ontario, was born in the City of Aberdeen, Scotland, on the 12th January, 1825. His father was Alexander Smith, advocate, of Aberdeen, and his mother was Elizabeth Lamond, of Strathmore, Aberdeenshire. Alexander Smith received a careful educational training, at first passing under the hands of private tutors, and subsequently by entering the University of Aberdeen. On completing his education he was engaged for a time in banking, and then joined the army, and was ensign and lieutenant in the 72nd Highlanders from 1846 to 1850. His travels had been confined to Ireland and the West Indies, whether he went with his regiment. It was while in the West Indies that, being about to marry, he sold out, and set sail for Canada. Upon his arrival in Can ad and the for Str mai he the mai char appl our serv in Sc he h in the unfor prove many ber of he wa one o which then l as Bre ligious Smith to the Marga Crichto dies, a

Alla was bor County 1829. H of Green in 1820. of Gleng field Mc late lieut Allan wa He wen Edward, education years in Picton a his stay i livery bu In 1856 seedsmana few year the busine he attaine cured a ha prise and s varieties of fact that s under his town,]

1850.

ada he adopted farming, but had no success, and abandoned it in 1859, taking a post in the Commercial Bank of Canada, at Stratford, in that year. He was transferred from Stratford to Clinton, the year following, as manager of the branch there. In 1864 he was transferred to Napanee as head of the branch, likewise, and he has since remained in that town without desire of change. We may state, that before making application for his commission in the army, our subject was required by his father to serve a five years apprenticeship in a bank in Scotland; and at the end of this period he had risen to the position of accountant in the institution. This precaution, as events unforeseen afterwards shaped themselves. proved to have been a very wise one. For many years Mr. Smith was an active member of the Church of England, but in 1872 he was brought to see that "there is but one church, and this is Christ's body, in which there can be no divisions." then he has been with those who are known as Brethren, a very pious and exemplary religious body; and in which communion Mr. Smith has declared he shall continue gladly to the end. Mr. Smith was married to Margaret Crichton, daughter of Henry Crichton, merchant, Barbadoes, West Indies, at Christ Church Cathedral, Bridgetown, Barbadoes, on the 30th day of April,

n's

re-

he

sa,

at

re, pal

86,

er

of 33,

ox ill

٧e

le.

hd

Allan, John Henry, Picton, Ontario, was born in the township of Fredericksburgh. County of Lennox, Ontario, October 7th, 1829. His father, Peter Allan, was a native of Greenock, Scotland, who came to Canada in 1820, and married Margaret McDonald, of Glengarry, aunt to the Hon. John Sandfield McDonald, and Hon. D. A. McDonald. late lieutenant-governor of Ontario. J. H. Allan was the second son by this marriage. He went to Picton, County of Prince Edward, in 1837, where he received his education; and after a sojourn of three years in the town of Whitby, returned to Picton and settled permanently. During his stay in Whitby he was engaged in the livery business, mail and express carriage. In 1856 he commenced the business of a seedsman and general grain dealer, and after a few years devoted himself exclusively to the business of seedsman, in which capacity he attained a widespread notoriety and secured a handsome competence. His enterprise and success in the propagation of pure varieties of peas and beans is shown by the fact that several fine varieties are now sold under his name. For many years he has had from 100 to 150 farmers in Prince Edward and adjoining counties engaged in growing seeds, especially for himself, which he markets in Europe and the United States. He was for many years a prominent member, and earnest promoter, of agricultural societies, having been president of the county society; and he is frequently called to assist in other localities. In this connection he also has imported some of the finest stock of horses, and has done much to improve the class of roadsters in his county. The Picton driving park owes its existence largely to his efforts. In municipal matters he has always taken a leading part; was elected to the council in 1864, and retained a seat at the board, excepting for an interval of one or two years, until 1880 when he retired, after having occupied the position of mayor for seven consecutive years. He was a strong promoter of the Prince Edward County Railway (now Central Ontario), acting as director on the first board, and was also appointed as a government trustee of the Grand Junction Railway during its construction. He joined the volunteer infantry militia in 1860, and was promoted to the captaincy of No. 7 company, 10th battalion; and in 1863 he retired, in order to command a troop of cavalry of his own raising, but which, through some change of policy, was not accepted by the department of militia. In almost every local enterprise his name, his patronage, and his earnest assistance have been given, and his judgment is sought by many on various subjects and occasions. In general politics he is a Liberal of the liberals. He always takes an active part in elections, and is ever ready to express his convictions upon all political questions, publicly or privately. He is now president of the Reform Association for the county. He married in 1853, Jane Almeda, daughter of W. S. Fralick, of Ernestown, Lennox. He has no children.

Chadwick, Lieut.-Col. Chas. Eli, Police Magistrate, Ingersoll, Ont., was born in Preston, Lancashire, England, on the 13th August, 1818. He is a son of the Reverend Eli Chadwick, his mother being Margaret, daughter of the late James Weal, of Annan, Scotland, who resided in Dumfriesshire. Rev. Eli Chadwick married in England, and was a Congregational minister, stationed at the town of Preston. In 1820 he left England and landed in Quebec, but the climate was not congenial to his health, and after a short stay he returned to England. He remained at home till 1826, when he again crossed the ocean, taking up his abode near

Vittoria, Norfolk county, Ontario. commenced teaching in 1838 in what is known as the old district schools, and there remained till 1844, when he was taken ill and died, leaving behind him his wife and seven children. Mrs. Chadwick died in 1872. Charles Eli spent his early years upon his father's farm in the County of Norfolk, and enjoyed the advantage of a very careful primary and classical educational training. At the age of sixteen he left school, and continued farming until his 22nd year, when he went to the village of Drummondville, Welland county, and entered the employ of his uncle, Benjamin Chadwick, merchant. After remaining here for two years, in consequence of his father's failing health, he returned again to the farm (1840) where he remained until 1843, when he married. He then moved to the County of Oxford and settled on a farm of 500 acres, in the township of Dereham. Here he remained for ten years, and then removed to Ingersoll, where he received the appointment of postmaster. In 1854 he accepted the management of the Niagara District Bank, in Ingersoll, continuing his connection with this institution for a period of nineteen years. Then this bank became amalgamated with the Imperial, and Mr. Chadwick assumed the managership for two years of the conjoined institutions. 1877 he resigned and established a general agency, which he conducted till 1880, when he was appointed police magistrate for the town of Ingersoll. This position he still holds, revealing in his judicial capacity always sound and just judgment, and the sort of dignity that becomes the bench. 1837 he took an active part in the rebellion on the loyalist side. In 1850 he was appointed major in the 6th battalion, Oxford militia, and continued in such rank until the death of the late Lieutenant-Colonel Van Norman in 1860, when he succeeded him as lieutenant - colonel of the regiment. has ever since continued to hold this In 1846 he was elected a member of the old district council of the County of Oxford, retaining the same for three years. Upon the formation of the township councils he was appointed clerk and treasurer of the township of Dereham, and also superintendent of education, member of the school board, and member of the grammar school board of Ingersoll. He continued to fill these offices with marked ability until his removal in 1853 to the town of Ingersoll. On arriving here he took as active an interest in educational matters, as he had done before, and in 1877 he retired from the school board, after having served in such capacity for twenty years. He was elected mayor of Ingersoll by acclamation, and was re-elected for 1879. He has been a director of the Ingersoll and Port Burwell Grave, Road Company for the last twenty years; is secretary of the Dairymen's Association of Western Ontario; secretary of the Ingersoll Rural Cemetery Company, and one of the county auditors. Mr. Chadwick has been chairman of the Reform Association of the south riding of Oxford for a number of years. For forty years past he has been a zealous worker in his party's cause, has frequently been solicited to offer himself for legislative honors, which it has always been felt his fine abilities and his high character would adorn. He was a warm admirer and friend of the late Sir Francis Hincks. Mr. Chadwick has been an extensive traveller, having paid a visit to the World's fair at Vienna in 1873, and to Paris and other parts of France during the exposition of 1878. He attended the Centennial at Philadelphia in 1876, as well as many parts of old Mr. Chadwick is a Baptist. He married, in 1843, Jane, daughter of the late William McCartney, of Oxford county. By this union there were nine children, five of whom are living. Mrs. Chadwick died in 1882. In 1849 Mr. Chadwick was appointed one of Her Majesty's justices of the peace. and about the same time was created a commissioner for taking affidavits in the Queen's Since he became a resident of In-Bench. Since he became a resident of Ingersoll, Mr. Chadwick has written much for the local press on political, educational and general subjects, and his pen is still more or less engaged in the same pursuit. He has on many occasions delivered addresses before different organizations, and received flattering commendations for the able manner in which he has presented his views to the public. On several occasions he has been the speaker of the day at Ingersoll on the celebration of the natal day of the Dominion, and his orations were published in the local papers, and highly complimented for their high-toned patriotism as well as their literary composition. Mr. Chadwick, although an Englishman by birth, and still retaining an attachment towards the old land, is thoroughly Canadian in sentiment, confident in her great future, and loyal to her institutions, in the firm belief that we have an heritage out of which will eventually grow one of the greatest and most enlightened nations of the earth if Canadians are only loyal and true to themselves. It would be a grave omission to si si ti m C of 18 C to po vice 18 St.

me

tin

thi

ma

Cor

rea

four

of]

ting

and

insti

of at

was and

E. E

office

three

this :

tinge

comp

Thom

left so

Ellis,

he re

procee

i

neglect mentioning here a series of fine papers, entitled, "Reminicences of a Pioneer," contributed to the local press by Mr. Chadwick, and, as the title implies, dealing with the joint experience of the subject of this sketch and his father in the Canadian wilderness. These papers are written with much vividness and grace, and we think that the author should put them "in covers" that they might become

ed in

elec-

lirec-

raver

s; is

n of

loers

the

been

f the

ears.

alous ently

egis-

felt

acter

and

ller,

r at ther

n of

hila-

old

He

late By

e of d in ated

ace. om-

en's

In-

for

and

e or

has .

be-

ved

an-

has

soll

the

hed

pli-

8.8

bу

to-

ian

rm

Mr.

and

permanent. Ermatinger, Charles Oaks, M.P.P. for East Elgin, and head of the firm of Ermatinger & Robinson, Barristers, Solicitors, etc., St. Thomas, Ont. was born on the 5th February, 1851, at St. Thomas, where he now resides. His father, Edward Ermatinger, formerly M.P. for Middlesex, Upper Canada, was born on the Island of Elba, and was a son of Lawrence Ermatinger, born in Montreal, and assistant commissary-general in the British army. subject's mother was Achsah, daughter of the late Honourable Zaccheus Burnham, member of the Legislative Council of old Edward Ermatinger, the father of Charles Oaks, left England in the year 1818, in the employ of the Hudson Bay Company, and was stationed at York Factory, and on the Columbia and at other posts. After a stay of ten years in the service he went to Montreal, and thence, in 1830, to the then small place now known as St. Thomas. Here he established himself in mercantile life, and in this occupation continued for a period of forty years. During this time he had been successively appointed manager of the Bank of Upper Canada, the Commercial Bank, and the Bank of Montreal, and the latter position he retained for fourteen years. At this juncture the Bank of Elgin was established, and Mr. Ermatinger resigned his position in the Montreal and became president and casheir of the new institution. The bank subsisted for a period of about ten years. In 1835 Mr. Ermatinger was appointed postmaster of St. Thomas, and he resigned in 1871, when his son Frank E. Ermatinger was appointed to the vacant, office. He died in 1876, leaving a family of three children behind him, the subject of this sketch being the youngest. Mrs. Ermatinger died in 1881. Charles Oaks Ermatinger completed his educational studies in the St. Thomas and Galt Grammar schools. he had attained his seventeenth year he left school and went into the office of H. F. Ellis, now city clerk of St. Thomas, where he remained for a year studying law, then proceeding to Toronto, and entered the office of D. B. Read, Q.C. He continued his studies here until his call to the bar in 1873. He at once began the practice of his profession at St. Thomas, and success very speedily began to wait upon his great activity and happy legal address. For politics he had a marked penchant, and in time became councillor and alderman (four years) at St. Thomas; and in February, 1883, entered the Provincial Legislature as representative for East Elgin. In the legislature he is an active member, and he readily won the attention and respect of the House. He has taken a very zealous part in the affairs of his own locality, and especially in the settlement of financial and sectional questions which divided St. Thomas; and he was prominent in obtaining the incorporation of the city in 1881. In 1881 he became an Ancient Forester, and he is an honorary member of the Sons of England. In religion he is a staunch adherent of the Church of England. He has been churchwarden for two years, and has been a delegate to the Synod of Huron for Trinity He married church for several years past. on the 14th October, 1876, Charlotte, widow of the late Arthur Dickson of Niagara, and eldest daughter of Colonel Hugh Richardson, stipendary magistrate, North-West territories (the same gentleman who tried Riel). There are two children by this union. Mr. Ermatinger was appointed Q.C. in 1885. Itis understood that he has in course of preparation a work on the Canadian franchise and election laws, which, being timely, and treated by such a competent hand, will be certain to receive a wide welcome.

Strathy, Henry Hatton, Q.C., Barrie.—Amongst the representative Canadians. that the picturesque town of Barrie, in the County of Simcoe, can claim as her own, we name Henry Hatton Strathy, the subject of our present sketch, who was born in that town on the 8th of December, 1847. His father, the late John Strathy, who was a native of Scotland, practised for many vears as a barrister in the same town. mother, the youngest daughter of the late Henry Hatton Gowan, is a sister to our senator, the Honourable Judge Gowan. Mr. Strathy completed his classical education at the Barrie Grammar school, and after passing his preliminary examination at Osgoode Hall, as a student-at-law, entered his father's office, in Barrie, being then sixteen, and continued his studies till his father retired from practice and the family removed to Toronto, which was in the fall of 1864. He then entered the office of the Honourable

M. C. Cameron, with whom he studied up to the time of passing his final examinations, in February, 1869. During his studentship, and during the troubled times of 1866, he prepared himself in the Toronto Military school to take command of a company; and obtained the usual certificate of fitness. After Mr. Strathy was called to the bar, he returned to his native town, and entered on the practice of his profession there. only a few months over age, and not many weeks a full-fledged lawyer, he was deputed, in consequence of the sudden illness of the county court judge, to hold the division court in one of the most important towns in the county. A similar responsibility, very probably, has not fallen to any other practitioner in the Dominion, at an age so young. The local press commenting upon the "young judge," spoke highly of his alertness and legal acumen. As a politician he has taken a somewhat prominent posi-tion in his own county. He is president of the Young Men's Liberal-Conservative Association of West Simcoe, and of the Liberal-Conservative Association of the town of Barrie. At the conservative convention in 1882, he was nominated to contest the west riding of Simcoe, but was unable to accept the proffered honour. In church matters, he takes an active and never flagging inter-He is an Episcopalian with strong evangelical views. He was married early in the year 1878, to Marian Isabella, the youngest daughter of the late Rev. S. B. Ardagh, first rector of Barrie. Mr. Strathy has an excellent practice, and being well known in his county, he is held in high esteem, both as a lawyer and as a man. In October, 1885, the Dominion government appointed him one of Her Majesty's counsel learned in the law, an appointment which elicited commendatory remarks, not only from the conservative press, but from the reform newspapers as well. We close this sketch with the following extract taken from an editorial which appeared in the Examiner, a leading organ in the County of Simcoe of the Reform party.—" That Mr. Henry H. Strathy should be the one selected from this county bar caused no surprise, and, so far as we can learn, no panys of disappointment to the other barristers of this county. On the contrary, we are assured, and have every reason to believe, that the appointment is one which not only meets with the general endorsement of the public, but is in every way acceptable to the legal profession in Simcoe. We remember Mr. Strathy when he came to Barrie to engage in the practice of law—perhaps about fifteen years ago. He was very youthful looking to be a full-fledged lawyer then. and we think few would have surmised that in him lay so many of the elements of success as time and circumstances have developed and portrayed. His first partnership was in the firm of Ardagh, Ardagh & Strathy. Judge Ardagh's retirement reduced the firm to two partners, and thenceforward, for some time, the firm was known as Ardagh & Strathy. Mr. W. D. Ardagh, now Judge Ardagh, of Winnipeg, then retired, and the firm of Strathy & Ault was formed, and continued until the formation of the present firm, Lount, Strathy & Lount. Throughout all the time Mr. Strathy has practiced in Barrie he has been known as an honest. painstaking, and well read lawyer, and has been constantly winning a higher position as a counsel of the courts. He has also taken a considerable interest in politics, but never to such an extent as to interfere with his professional success."

Crawford John, Aylmer, Ontario, was born in the township of Trafalgar, Halton county, on the 18th January, 1834. His parents were Patrick and Elizabeth Crawford, the maiden name of his mother Patrick Crawford, the being Madden. grandfather of our subject, was born near Sligo, Ireland, his wife being a native of Ireland, and his children were all born there. When he and his family came to this country, they settled in the township of Trafalgar, near the village of Hornby, where he began farming, being one of the first settlers in that locality. He was successful in his adopted occupation, which he continued in till his death; and the homestead remained in the hands of the family until Patrick removed to Hamilton, in 1856. He had a family of ten children, the eldest being the late Honourable George Crawford. Patrick, the father of John Crawford, remained at the homestead till 1856, when he removed to the City of Hamilton, where he led a life retired from business until his death, which occurred in 1878. He had eight children, John being the eld-Mrs. Crawford is still living in Hamilton, and, although in her seventieth year, in vigorous health. John Crawford received a careful educational training, completing his studies at Victoria College, Cobourg. He at first felt an inclination to adopt medicine as a profession, but he changed his mind, and resolved to study the law instead; and in 1857 he entered the office of R. & E. Martin, of Hamilton, where he concluded his studies in

of at the Formula Ma

mi

try

bet

froi

Μo

sior

und

of t

he 1

gica

and

both

On being called to the bar, he proceeded to the village of Vienna, Elgin county, where he commenced practice. Here he remained for thirteen years, and then removed to Aylmer, where he has since continued to practice his profession. Aylmer he formed a partnership with A. E. Baines, and the firm, which is now one of wide repute and in excellent practice, is known as Crawford & Haines. Mr. Crawford was a volunteer during the excitement of the Trent difficulty, and remained in the corps for four years. He is a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen, and is an officer of the home circle. politics he is a pronounced Conservative, and in religious matters he gives his allegiance to the Church of England. He married, in 1857, Georgina, youngest daughter of the late Dr. Macartney, of Hamilton, one of the leading physicians in that city. Mr. Crawford has two children, one of these, John Lyndon, being now in attendance at the University of Toronto. Mr. Crawford is much devoted to manly sports and outdoor exercise. He has likewise a great taste for music. As a lawyer he is industrious, painstaking and energetic; and by common consent is held to be able and "well learned in the law."

hful

hen,

that

suc-

vel-

ship

tra-

iced

ard.

lagh

idge

the

and

ent

ont

in

est,

has

ion

also

but ith

rio,

al-

34.

eth

he ear

m

to

ip

Dawson, George Mercer, D.S., F.G.S., F.R.S.C., Associate Royal School of Mines, etc., Assistant Director Geological Survey of Canada, Ottawa, was born at Pictou, Nova Scotia, August 1, 1849, and is the eldest son of Sir William Dawson, principal of McGill University, Montreal. He was educated at McGill College and Royal School of Mines, London; admitted to the associateship of Royal School of Mines, 1872; held the Duke of Cornwall's scholarship, given by the Prince of Wales; and took the Edward Forbes medal in palæontology and the Murchison medal in geology. He was appointed geologist and naturalist to Her Majesty's North American boundary commission in 1873, and investigated the country in the vicinity of the boundary line between Canada and the United States from the Lake of the Woods to the Rocky Mountains. At the close of the commission's work, in 1875, he published a report under the title of "Geology and Resources of the Forty-ninth Parallel." In July, 1875, he received an appointment on the Geological Survey of Canada. From 1875 to 1879 he was occupied in the geological survey and exploration of British Columbia, and subsequently engaged in similar work both in the North-West territory and British Columbia. In 1882, he travelled extensively in Europe, inspecting mines, metallurgical works, museums, etc. He is a member of numerous scientific societies. His travels throughout the Province of British Columbia, and in the North-West territory have been extensive, details repecting which are to be found in the reports of the Geological Survey. Dr. Dawson is the author of numerous papers on geology, natural history, and ethnology, published in the Canadian Naturalist, Quarterly Journal of the Geological Society, Transactions of the Royal Society of Canada. etc. It is making a very high prediction for the subject of this sketch to say that he hids fair to follow in the footsteps of his illustrious father. Already he is one of the ablest geologists in Canada, and what he has achieved in the way of original research and of discovery are altogether unusual. His whole heart seems to be in scientific work, especially in geological pursuits; and, as we have said, if he continue "still achieving, still pursuing," science shall some day look upon him as a great benefactor, and his name will be illustrious before the world.

Clutton, Samuel Sparkes, Alymer, Ontario, was born in the township of West Flamboro', Wentworth county, on the 28th August, 1839. He is a son of Joseph Clutton and Sophia Sparkes. Joseph Clutton was for many years a farmer, but later in life adopted teaching as a profession. In 1832 he came to Canada, settling in West Flamborough. where, for a period, he engaged again in the work of teaching, he being a man of culture and wide learning. But above all, he was a man of strong religious fervour: and about two years after his arrival in Flamborough he entered the ministry of the Baptist church. He became the organizer and pastor of the church at Dundas, and remained in charge of the congregation there for a period of eighteen years. He was then removed to the township of Malahide, where he assumed charge of what is known as the Aylmer church. From 1852 to 1882, he ministered here; but for five years previous to his death, which occurred in his eighty-first year, he had not any particular charge. The family is an old one, and may be traced back to 1678, where we find prominent, William Clutton of Luddington, Cheshire, England. Mrs. Clutton died in 1855, at the ripe age of eighty-eight years. In 1876, the parents of the subject of this sketch celebrated their golden wedding. The celebration took place in the Baptist church, Aylmer, where a large number of relatives and friends congregated, and Mr. Clutton was presented with a handsome gold medal to commemorate the affair, besides numerous other gifts. Samuel Sparkes Clutton received a Grammar school education, concluding his studies at the Dundas Grammar school. He left school at fifteen, and accompanied his parents to Malahide, where his father purchased a saw and a woollen mill, in connection with his son, Joseph J. Clutton, now of Watertown, Dakota. He worked in these mills till he was twenty-one years old, and so high was his repute in the neighbourhood, that when he came of age, the people assembled and made the most marked congratulatory demonstrations. On attaining his majority, he entered into partnership with his brother Joseph, and the firm was known as J. J. Clutton & Company. The partnership lasted for eight years, after which our subject took the woollen portion of the business, which he conducted for four years, when the mills This was a severe blow, for were burned. there was very little insurance upon the property; but nothing daunted by the calamity, Mr. Clutton gathered his energies together and repaired to Aylmer, where he embarked his little capital in the establishment of a woollen manufactory. Here he has remained ever since, and by integrity, industry, perseverance and thorough business habits and ability, now finds himself in possession of a valuable establishment. He was one of the first High school trustees of Aylmer, and has continued a trustee ever since. He has been a director of the Aylmer Mechanics' Institute, and has been secretary, president and treasurer of that body. In 1883 he was elected reeve by acclamation, and was re-elected for 1884 and 1885. In the latter year he was also elected war-den of the county. He is a Freemason, and has held the office of S.W. and W.M., in Lodge No. 140. In 1872 he received a handsome past master's jewel from brothers of the order. He is now W.M. of the lodge. He united with the Royal Arch masons, chapter No. 5, of London, in 1871, and was first principal of Aylmer chapter, organized in 1877. He was also united with the Burleigh Preceptory, registered, No. 21, of St. Thomas, in September, 1884. He has been a member of the Oddfellows since 1879, and has held several offices in He is a member of the same society. Avlmer encampment, No. 81; is a chartered member of Lodge No. 6, A.O.U.W., and has been the first master workman, and still holds the office. In politics Mr. Clutton is a Liberal, and in religion a Baptist. He married, in 1862, Catharine H., eldest daughter of the late George Killmaster, of Walsingham, Norfolk county, farmer and school teacher. By this lady he has had five children, the eldest, George, being with his father in the mills. The second is in the Traders Bank, in the town of Alymer; and the stwo younger sons, John and William, are at present attending the High School, in Aylmer. Miss Annie, now in her eighteenth year, is at Woodstock college, and excels in painting in oils and water colours.

Mountenstle, Clara H., in literature "Carls Sima," was born in Clinton, Ontario, her present place of residence. Her father and mother were English by birth. and were among the early settlers of the County of Huron. They came to this country with a small capital, with which they purchased land, and erected a hewn-log house, which, though small, was more pretentious than any in the immediate neighborhood, being two stories high, with wide projecting eaves, and having French windows, a glass door, and a hall. portraits and choice scraps of English landscape decorated the walls, while dainty bits of furniture and hangings made the interior unlike any other dwelling. These family portraits were viewed with delight by the Indians who frequently came in small squads to trade baskets for bacon and flour. Writing of this sweet and artistic cottage, Miss Mountcastle says, "There I sat on my father's knee, I on one knee, and my sister Lizzie on the other, while he played rare old Scotch melodies on the flute; and there ten little feet tripped to the strains of the violin. These evening amusements were varied by games of whist, bagatelle, backgammon. cribbage, and leap-frog. This last game my mother objected to, but was over-ruled by my father, who considered it a healthy ex-There my mother read aloud from ercise. Walter Scott's novels, and there's sat before the wood fire and amused myself by watch: ing the flames creep in and out among the logs. My father, who played both violin and flute, and was at heart a poet and artist. taught me to love all the sights and sounds of nature. With him I listened to the voice of the song bird; with him I watched the changing glory of the setting sun; with him I revelled in the grandeur and beauty of the wildest storms. My mother, as she sat at her sewing, would repeat old ballads for hours at a time to amuse her little ones;

g in ju ar le vi di

th

sh

wa

die

wh

elo

ory

tru tle

tru

cess

with it re

舺

and it was thus, from earliest infancy, I was taught to rhyme." The nearest school, a mile and a half distant; was, what was then called a "district school"; and her father shrank from the thought of sending his little girls there, so her sisters and herself were taught at home by her mother. She afterwards attended the district school for a year and three quarters; then, after studying for some time at home, went to a ladies' school in Toronto for one term. She disliked science, and wanted to study French, German, Italian, music, and drawing; but these accomplishments were not for her. After leaving this school she resided for over two years at that quaint little dwelling, called Colborne Lodge, then, as now. the residence of John G. Howard, of High Park. where she occupied nearly all her time in reading aloud to Mr. Howard while he drew plans of buildings, etc. She then returned to her home, and for a short time all went smoothly with her. Her mother was a good amateur artist; her father had studied a little in boyhood, had travelled much, and seen much, and was an excellent judge of a picture. With their assistance Clara commenced her first studies in art. without much success, as she did not like her mother's old fashioned style: and was unaccustomed to the English scenery portrayed in her pictures. To a young English artist of the name of Chatterton she owed her first lesson in sketching from nature; but at that time she was not sufficiently advanced to profit much by it. After a time she writes: "I left the home of my childhood, with all its wealth of flowers, and its wealth of love, to fight the battle of life single-handed. After a little I found myself in a ladies' school, in St. Catharines, as junior teacher of English, with a liberal salary, and the use of the piano." Here she learned music. In June, 1868, she again visited Colborne Lodge, where she studied so diligently in art that when she exhibited at the Provincial exhibition, at Toronto, 1870, she carried off five prizes for paintings in water colours. In the year 1877 her father died, and her affectionate nature was overwhelmed by the blow. Here is the just and eloquent tribute that she pays to his memory. "As husband, father, and friend, no truer man than Sidney Harman Mountcastle ever lived. He was the very soul of truth, purity, and honour." We have already mentioned Miss Mountcastle's success at the exhibition, and may now say with respect to the qualities of her art, that it reveals the seeing eye, and the true poetic

d atill

ton is

eldest

ter, of

r and

id five

th his

n the

: and

lliam,

ol, in

eenth

excels

itera-

, On-

Her

oirth.

f the

coun-

they

n-log

preeigh-

wide

mily

and-

bits

erior

mily

the uads

Vrit-

Miss

ath-

ster

old

ten

din.

bv

on.

mt

bv

er.

om

ore

ch:

the

llin

st.

ice

He

interpretation. Delicacy of touch, and soft yet firm decision of outline, are evident in all her pictures, while her work is always true to the great model, Nature. Art, especially the work of such of our artists as have not the assistance of the titled patrons of academies in this country, has but a poor chance for its life, and under brighter and juster stars we may be well assured that the work of Miss Mountcastle would not be ignored. But it is not alone in the painting of pictures that this gifted lady calls for our admiration: it is as a poet that she must receive the greatest consideration. In this occupation of her heart of hearts she has been obliged to navigate her way through unknown seas; being deprived of that light which comes from the experience of others. Therefore, if we find some discrepencies in her earlier work, we must lay the blame to her stars, not to her. But Miss Mountcastle is a genuine poet, for her song is true to nature and the human heart. The sorrows of others as well as the woes of her own; a love for all nature, for the blade of grass in the meadow, the blossom on the bough, the joyous song bird, are in all her work, kindling it into a living flame. We take the following poem from a division of her late work, entitled "Leaves from a

He came, he clasped my hand in his; I looked upon his face once more; While surged the life-tide to my heart, As beat the waves upon the shore.

I looked into his eyes once more; Those eyes, so deeply, darkly blue; My soul met his; and, in that glance, Knew in a moment he was true.

He spoke to me; I heard him not; Or only as we hear in sleep. He held me spell-bound by his glance, So pure, so passionless, so deep.

I know not how the moments passed; So few; so fleeting; and so dear. I know not if I thought at all; I only knew that he was near.

Methinks I felt a kindred thrill That moved his pulse; I know but this:
My soul was fettered by the spell That merged my being into his.

We wandered while the silent eve Crept darkling o'er the western sky, I know not where my footsteps led; I only knew that he was nigh.

My lips framed words, I know not what; I seemed as speaking in a trance; I had no will but his; and I Obeyed his deep mesmeric glance.

I heard my voice as though afar; As though my soul, apart from me, Gave utterance to its hidden thought; Its hidden pulse of misery.

He answered and I cannot tell
Of what he spoke to me; and yet, His lips breathed heated words of pain;
In tones I never can forget.

So strong the bond of sympathy; So thin the veil our souls divide; Again I felt the unseen power That drew me closer to his side.

That impulse knew no thought of ill; For pu er love was never given; Pure as the heart can offer up In homage to a saint in heaven.

But ah, the mute caress, that looked From eyes of blue; had startled pride; That raised the haughty head, As I the longing in my soul defied.

Oh love, the boom my heart has craved Since childhood left me sad and lone, I stretch my arms to thee; and yet I dare not win thee for mine own.

My spirits love, who speaks to me; And guides my steps through ways unseen; He only, and my God, could know How near the tempter might have been.

The moments passed, and sank my soul In sadness, deep, and drear, and fell. Oh pain, thou hast no balm; twas but A hand-clasp spoke our last farewell.

It is not necessary to proceed to an analysis of these exquisite verses, so true to the heart's feeling. We understand that this gifted authoress has done much verse since the publication of "The Mission of Love," and such of it as we have seen displays a high degree of excellence, and proves that the author is now approaching the mastery of her art. We learn, too, that she is engaged on some prose work; and have seen an ablywrought novelette (which is not yet printed) from her hand, entitled, "The Mystery of Hallowe'en," We expect yet to see the work of this writer get that recognition which is so richly its due. Miss Mountcastle lives with her mother and two unmarried sisters.

Brown, Hon. George.—The late Hon. George Brown was born at Edinburgh, Scotland, on the 29th of November, 1818. He was the eldest son of Peter Brown, by Miss Mackenzie, only daughter of George Mackenzie, of "The Cottage," Stornoway, in the Island of Lewes. Young George, who was an ambitious, energetic, and out-spoken lad, attended the High School of his native city;

but he was not satisfied with that institution, and, at his own request, was placed in the Southern Academy of Edinburgh, After he had left this institution, he assisted his father in business, and showed much proficiency in his calling. Through the misconduct of an agent, however, Peter Brown became involved in difficulties, and after a futile attempt to extricate himself he emigrated, in 1838, to America, George accompanying him. In New York Mr. Brown, senior, became a contributor te The Albion, and in 1842, having much literary equipment, and a strong inclination for letters, he established The British Chronicle. Mr. Brown, senior, was editor, and his son George was the publisher and general manager. In 1843 George made a visit to Canada, with the view of extending the circulation of his father's paper. Reaching Upper Canada. he was not slow to grasp the situation of political affairs, and to see that there was a capital opening for brain, courage, and energy. As a result of all these observations. and of inducements held out by Reformers. the Globe was established as a weekly newspaper, and made its appearance on the 5th of March, 1844. The paper had two qualities which compelled attention and assured success from the beginning-force and earnestness. The blows were given with the force of sledge-hammers, and what the articles lacked in tact or finese they supplied in truth and honest utterance, and in manly vigour. Of course the Tories were disgusted with Mr. Brown, and some Reformers at the first gave him only a tardy The memory of another forcible, impulsive Scotchman, had not passed from their minds, and they thought they saw a second Mackenzie in George Brown; but of different metal and abler calibre was this powerful young Scot, now managing the Globe. He first entered Parliament for the County of Haldimand, in 1852, defeating William Lyon Mackenzie, who had returned from exile two years before. As soon as he took his place in the House he made his great force as a speaker at once felt; and thereafter, till the close of his able career, he did not cease to be formidable. He favoured all the great reforms of the time; the abolition of the Clergy Reserves, State Churchism, and Seigniorial Tenure. He likewise advocated Representation by Population with persistent energy, and was once called upon to form a government by Sir Edmund W. Head. He consented, and the Brown-Dorion administra-

An known 188 emp at fi after and upris

on th

secon

two d

ca. sig

succes giving talent Mr. I and po path o princip allow h power mere " In ever country the conf

All the

trenched

with a rehad the in their topposition of the party by popular A. Macdo and this greater at the second control of the party became as general control of the party became as ge have declar was Ambiti

been so he r
party modu
ederation
very person
reat end m
heels of th

pened all helieved to be not a stair the priva tion came into existence; but it lasted only three days, when the Conservatives, without the trouble of an election, by the expedient known as the double-shuffle, resumed their offices. He entered the Coalition government, formed for the purpose of carrying confederation, but after a time resigned. He was called to the Senate on the 16th of December, 1873. During his absence in Edinburgh, in 1862, he married Annie, daughter of Thomas Nelson, the well known publisher. On the 25th of March, 1880, he was shot in the leg by a discharged employé, named Bennet. No one supposed at first that the wound was dangerous; but, after a few days, alarming symptoms set in, and the career of this most brilliant and upright statesman was brought to a close on the 9th of May following, in the sixty-second year of his age. He left a wife and two daughters; both of the latter, by their success in the higher institutions of learning giving proof that they inherit much of the talent of their illustrious father. During Mr. Brown's day he was the most active and powerful figure in our politics; but his path of duty was too straight, and his principles were too just and too inflexible to allow him to achieve those "triumphs of power" which fall rather to the share of mere "politicians," and men of expediency. in every great reform movement in this country, since the days of Mackenzie till the confederation, he was the leading spirit. All the "privileges" which had been entrenched in our new country, he fought with a relentless and able hand; and he had the proud satisfaction of seeing each in their turn give way before his presistent opposition. For years he bore the banner of the party who demanded representation by population, but the interest of Sir John A. Macdonald lay in the French household, and this great principle was denied, till it became settled under the scheme of a general confederation of the provinces. Some hostile and poorly informed writers have declared that Mr. Brown's leading star was Ambition and not Duty; but had this been so he never would have consented to the party modus vivendi through which conederation was accomplished. He sunk very personal pretension and claim that this reat end might be attained; but once the heels of the new order began to turn, he pened all his thunder upon men whom he elieved to be corrupt and incapable. There not a stain of any sort, upon the political the private name of the Honourable eorge Brown. It was fitting that the rgh.

titu

aced

sted

huch

the

eter

and

self

broe

Mr.

r to uch

in-

The

was

the 843

the

hia

da,

of

memory of a man so illustrious in his country's history should not be lightly held by the people. Therefore a subscription was opened up by admirers of the deceased statesman, for the erection in some public place of a mouument and statue to his memory. The work was awarded to C. B. Burch, A. R. A., London, England, and on the 25th of November, 1884, the statue was unveiled in Queen's Park, Toronto, where it now stands. A large concourse of persons, of both political parties, was present at the unveiling ceremony, and an address, reviewing the life work of the departed statesman, was delivered by the Hon. Oliver Mowat.

Flock, Christopher William, St. Thomas, Ontario, licentiate of the Medical Board, Toronto, and M.D. of the University of Victoria College, M.C.P.S.O., was born in Toronto, then Little York, on the 12th March, 1831. His father, William Flock, was born in the City of Kingston, and removed to Toronto with its first settlers. At Toronto he conducted a general business (on Yonge street) for many years before and after the rebellion. His father was a German, but his mother was of Irish descent. The maiden name of our subject's mother was McAvitt, and she (Mary) Irish by birth, but of Scotch ancestors. Mr. Flock died at London in 1875, and Mrs. Flock died there in 1879. C. W. Flock was educated in Toronto, at James Hodgson's Commercial and Classical academy, in the old market lane, now Colborne street, and received there a classical and mathematical education. In 1845 he began to study medicine in the Toronto School of Medicine, then called "Rolph's" school; the late Hon. Dr. Rolph and Joseph Workman, M.D., of Toronto, were associated together in this enterprise. He passed the Medical Board in 1850, and commenced practice, having been the greater part of two years a private pupil of Dr. J. Workman's, late superintendent of the Asylum. He was for many years coroner for the County of Halton, and made post mortem examinations on the bodies of the Donelly family, who were murdered in Biddulph township, a few years ago, and was Queen's witness (medical) in the two trials of the notorious Jim Carroll for murder, held at the assizes in London, Ontario. Dr. Flock has two brothers in London, and one sister: Mrs. Dr. Morden; J. H. Flock, barrister; and J. R. Flock, M.D., coroner for London city. Our subject is a member of the Knights of Pythias, of the Ancient Order of Foresters, and of the Canadian Order of Foresters; and some years ago was an active member of the Loyal Orange order, of the Sons of Temperance, and of the Independent Order of Good Templars, holding some of the principal offices in these associations. At the present time he is physician and surgeon to all the friendly and benevolent societies in the city of St. Thomas. Dr. Flock engaged in politics during the first few years of his practice, but he became disgusted after a time, and abandoned them for ever. He always votes, belongs to no party, being perfectly inde-pendent. He sat for two years on the council board in the town of Oakville, and his career here was a zealous and useful one. He was brought up a Wesleyan Methodist, but many years ago joined the Episcopal He married on November 17th, church. 1852, Helen Eliza Nelles, grand-daughter of Colonel Robert Nelles, J.P., Grimsby, one of the oldest families in Canada. She is also a niece of Judge O'Reilly, Queen's counsel, and master in chancery, Hamilton, Ontario. Her family is of German and Irish birth, with Scotch ancestry (Campbell) on one side. The O'Reilly family is also one of the oldest in the country. The issue of the marriage is eleven children, of whom six survive-two sons and four daughters. Dr. Flock has never engaged in any pursuit or enterprise unconnected with his profession, but has led a truly He is not professional and domestic life. ambitious for political or other public distinctions, and has therefore stood aloof from party turmoil, with the exception noticed in his career. He has lived in Canada during his life, and here are his interests and his affections. He at one time engaged in the drug business in connection with his profession, but in 1866 the demands of his practice upon his time were so great that he was obliged to surrender the work of dispensing. He is a gentleman of very agreeable and courteous manners; he enjoys the repute of great professional skill, and his practice is a wide and profitable one. social life he is a favourite, and his domestic life is an enviable one.

Merner, Samuel, New Hamburg, Waterloo county, Ontario, was born on the 29th January, 1823, in Reichenbach canton, Berne, Switzerland. He is a son of Jacob Merner and Susan Schluchter. Samuel Merner received his education in Reichenbach, and when in his fifteenth year emigrated with his parents to Canada, taking up his abode in Preston, County of Waterloo. Here he was apprenticed to learn the blacksmith trade, and worked in various places afterwards as a journeyman black-smith. He commenced business for himself in New Hamburg, and here he has remained ever since, now being one of the most prominent and respected residents of that place. New Hamburg was then a solitude in the centre of the bush, and Mr. Merner was obliged to draw his iron and coal by team from Dundas upon a heavy road. He continued in the blacksmith trade for twelve years, and then established a foundry, which he conducted till 1873 with marked suc-He then handed the establishment cess. over to his eldest son, Simpson, and this gentleman still carries on the business with a large and ever increasing measure of suc-Mr. Merner likewise established a foundry in Waterloo, and this he presented to his second son, Absalom; and this establishment like the other brings in handsome Mr. Merner is connected with both profits. these firms, and is likewise associated with Simpson in the manufacture of furniture, at Berlin. The operations here are likewise successful, and the constituency very large. Mr. Merner was a captain of militia for many years, in the County of Waterloo. In 1862, he was appointed a justice of the peace; and in 1866, he was elected councilfor. He was reeve from 1873 to 1878, when he resigned, and was elected warden of the County of Waterloo. For a number of years he was chairman of the school board at New Hamburg, and took a great interest in educational progress. In 1878, he ran for the House of Commons, for the south riding of Waterloo, and was elected, beating his opponent, the Honourable James Young, of Galt, by a majority of forty-four votes. He was an independent, but favoured the policy of protection. Our subject has built the largest blocks in the village, and extended his operations through the country as well In this respect, as well as by reason of his extensive business connections, he is the most prominent commercial man in his county. He became a Freemason on the 13th of August, 1864, and is in good standing in the order. He has been an extensive traveller, and has visited his native country, and the principal places in France, Germany and England; he also visited the Worlds Exposition, at Vienna, in 1873. Mr. Merner was brought up to the Presbyterian faith but he believes there is less virtue in the name of the church to which a man belongs than there is in how a man himself lives hi life, and acts his part towards his fellow He married, in 1845, Mary Mary Grasser, of the township of Wilmot, Count sace bore are with and Y name the converse vicinity place he pos

of '

vigou land. him t period ledge Creigh most in stance knowle Mrs. Y by the advanta conduct whose (has bee young la New Yor school, s Hamilton ton acad student f graduated first Engl her school progress school libral a literary herself and on foot an benevolence to Picton, she was for ladies' acad 1850 to Art There was council to jurisdiction.

she was the council.

was made the petition.

Youmans, "
of my sister had risen fro the fullness of

of Waterloo. Her parents came from Alsace, then a province of France; and she bore to him fourteen children, ten of whom are living. Mr. Merner, it can be said, without hesitation, is a credit to his race and to his country.

ıed

eе.

as

hn-

ich

his

ith

uc-

ted

ab-

ne

th ith

> re, ise

> > ln

en

he

ars

and to his country. Youmans, Mrs., or, to use her maiden name, Letitia Creighton, Picton, Ont., is the daughter of the late John Creighton, a well-known and intelligent farmer, who pursued his vocation for many years in the vicinity of Cobourg, where her birth took place in 1827. A son of the Emerald Isle, he possessed in a large degree the intellectual vigour, shrewdness, and wit of his native land. An insatiate love of reading caused him to furnish his home with books and periodicals of a character to impart knowledge of the most important kind. Mr. Creighton's presents to his children were almost invariably books; and to this circumstance his daughter attributes her thirst for knowledge. "At the age of sixteen," says Mrs. Youmans, "my heart was gladdened by the information that I was to enjoy the advantages of the Cobourg Ladies Academy, conducted by Rev. D. C. Vannorman, whose Canadian reputation as an educator has been enhanced by the success of the young ladies' institute under his control in New York." After a year's attendance at school, she removed with her preceptor to Hamilton, where he established the Burlington academy, of which she continued a student for three years, at which time she graduated, and remained for two years as first English teacher. While at the academy she was not more distinguished amongst her schoolmates for hard work and rapid progress than for zeal in enlarging the school library, in projecting and austaining a literary periodical for the improvement of herself and fellow students, and in setting on foot and maintaining schemes of active benevolence. From Hamilton she passed to Picton, Prince Edward county, where she was for a short time preceptress of a ladies' academy. Here she was married in 1850 to Arthur Youmans, who died in 1882. There was an attempt to induce the town council to abolish shop license within its jurisdiction. A largely signed petition of ratepayers was presented by the ladies to the council. Quite unexpectedly the demand was made that someone should advocate the petition. "In this extremity," says Mrs. Youmans, "my eye met the imploring look of my sisters, and before realizing that I had risen from my seat, I was pouring out the fullness of a burdened heart to the men who had the power to protect our homes and save our loved ones. It was the pent-up agony of years gushing forth from a burdend heart. The destroyer had not entered my own home, but his work was all around me, and, had I held my peace at such a time, it seemed that the stones would have cried out against me!" Those who listened to that appeal were prepared for the position she has since attained as a platform speaker. The only resort now was the Dunkin act, and Mrs. Youmans and her friends, instead of yielding to discouragement at their want of success, resolved to carry the county. Petitions were circulated, meetings held, and addresses delivered in every municipality, and a monster petition was gotten up and presented to the county council in favour of temperance reform. Mrs. Youmans was re-elected as one of the delegates to represent Prince Edward county in the Montreal conference, and her remarks in that convention were listened to with deep interest. She was induced to address a mass meeting in the Victoria Skating Rink, where she met with a no less cordial and enthusiastic reception. Shortly after she was invited to Cobourg, her native town, to deliver an ad-The occasion was the union of the British and British-American order of Templars. Her reception in Cobourg was a warm one. At the next meeting of the Grand lodge of the order she was appointed superintendent of the juvenile work of the association; she was also chosen a member of the editorial staff of the Temperance Union, the organ of the association. At the request of the Toronto Reformation Society, she went to Toronto soon after the Montreal convention for the purpose of organizing a Women's Christian Temperance Union, and arousing public sentiment. She held a series of public meetings in different parts of the city, visited the prisons and hospitals, and set on foot the presentation of petitions to the Ontario Legislature for the curtailment of the liquor traffic. Since that time she has been employed in forming Women's unions in various parts of the province. Mrs. Youmans held for five years the position of president of the Ontario Provincial W.C. T.U. In October, 1883, she declined further nomination to that office, that others might share its responsibilities as well as In November of the same year the Dominion union was formed, and she was appointed president. In January, 1885, the first regular meeting of this union was held at Ottawa; the organization was completed, and she was unanimously elected president. At the World's Temperance Congress in Philadelphia during the centennial year, Mrs. Youmans, in connection with Sir Leonard Tilley, Hon. G. W. Ross, G. M. Rose and others, represented Canada. Since then she has had many invitations to visit the neighbouring republic and assist in their temperance work. In response to their requests she has travelled from Maine to Kansas. In the latter state her services were solicited to assist in the passage of constitutional amendment and the election of Governor St. John, the prohibitory candidate. She spent five weeks in Ohio visiting towns and cities, from Toledo to Cincinnati. In Pennsylvania, from Pittsburg to Philadelphia. New York has shared largely in her labours. The Women's Temperance unions of Vermont, New Hampshire and Massachusetts, solicited her help, and it was gladly given. Maryland sent the Macedonian cry to our Canadian sister, and the doors of some of the most aristocratic churches of Baltimore and Washington cities were thrown open to her night after night. In February, 1880, Mrs. Youmans, accompanied by a deputation of ladies, representing the State union of Maryland, addressed the Senate and a select committee of the Legislature at Annapolis, the capital, asking for local option. The ladies were treated The Senate with the greatest respect. chamber was crowded to its utmost to hear a foreigner plead for protection for American homes. When the Scott Act became the rallying cry in Canada, Mrs. Youmans took it up with earnestness and enthusiasm. Fredrickton, N.B. first took it up, and she pleaded there night after night. After visiting many places in that province, she went to Charlottetown, P.E.I. in the same interest. In nearly every county in Ontario that has voted on the Scott act, Mrs. Youmans has taken part in the campaign. In November, 1882, her husband was removed This was to her a bereavement by death. beyond the power of language to express. At first it seemed that her public work must cease when deprived of his counsel and companionship, for although Mr. Youmans was not a public speaker, he took the deepest interest in her work, and to him she attributes much of her success in the work. His kindly criticism and tender care lightened many a toilsome duty. In January, 1883, the Quebec branch of the Dominion Alliance invited Mrs. Youmans to that province to inaugurate the work of the Women's Christian Temperance Union.

Her work began in the City of Montreal, where a union was formed that has since done noble work. She went through the province, and was instrumental in forming eighteen unions, to which many more have since been added, and a provincial union formed. In May, 1882, Mrs. Youmans went as fraternal delegate, in company with Mrs. Faucet, to England, to visit the British Women's Temperance Association. of which Mrs. Lucas, sister of the Hor. John Bright, is president. They received a hearty welcome at Liverpool, and in London a reception was given in Exeter hall. No pains were spared to make this a most enjoyable affair. While in England, Mrs. Youmans had numerous requests to address audiences, but her time was limited. Liverpool, London, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, and Blackpool shared her labours. Then on to bonnie Scotland to see the sights and talk a little to the people there. She addressed several meetings in Glasgow and Edinburgh. Ireland, the birthplace of her father, was to Mrs. Youmans of special interest. Bessbrooke, the little prohibitory town on the main line from Belfast to Dublin, could not be passed. John Grubb Richardson, proprietor of the manor, had invited her to his princely home and arranged a meeting in the Bessbrook has allowed no liquor to be sold for thirty years, has 4,000 inhabitants, no jail, no lockup, no constable, and only one policeman. Mrs. Youmans, in addition to Temperance, devotes a good deal of her time to Sunday-school work.

Wilkie, Rev. Daniel, LL.D.—The late Dr. Wilkie, of Quebec, was a gentleman who will be long remembered with gratitude by the citizens of the ancient capital as one of those who assisted in moulding the minds of many of the men who are now playing an important part in trade and commerce in Canada. He was born at Tollcross, Scotland, in the year 1777. In early youth his prospects in life did not appear over bright, for he was the youngest of a family of twelve children, and was early left an orphan. His elder brothers, however, were faithful to him, and out of their scanty means helped to educate him. In 1787 he was sent to the parish school; in 1794 he entered the University, and in 1796 the Divinity Hall. He was an apt student, and in 1793 he gained the University medal for a theological essay, and shortly after this he sailed for In 1804 he was licensed to preach Canada. by the Presbytery of Montreal, but Dr. Wilkie was destined to make his mark as a teacher rather than as a preacher; and for

1851, grette mon comonur old pu structo his gui volent

Y

n

th

an

ha

in

tin

De

was

wei

yea

be s orde

hear Dall

who

In 18

found

head

years

throu

servic

of his

sioner Court of burg, Pi the town county, the secon came to gan, Ire Edward Way, an July, 180 from D weducated nearly fifty years afterwards he taught | school in the City of Quebec. His pupils are to be found in every walk of life, and the best evidence of Dr. Wilkie's skill and energy are to be found in the men he sent out equipped for their work in the world. The Rev. Dr. Cook, who delivered a fine funeral oration on the occasion of his friend's death, says, his zeal in the work of teaching, and of the pious and devotional temper of his life, there could be no doubt; although sometimes he was prone to indulge in speculations, and, perhaps, reached conclusions in which some might be little inclined to agree. Yet, Dr. Cook remarked, he could express no higher wish for himself and his auditors than that they might have as profound a love and reverence for their Lord as Dr. Wilkie had. After being about twenty-five years in Quebec, Dr. Wilkie engaged for some time in editorial work, and in the month of December, 1827, the Star appeared, and was conducted, so far as the leading articles were concerned, by him during the three years of its existence. This journal, it may be said, was started by Andrew Stewart, in order to mediate between the party which heaped indiscriminate abuse upon Lord Dalhousie's administration, and the other who lavished unmeasured eulogy upon it. In 1843, when the Quebec High school was founded, Dr. Wilkie was appointed its head-master, but before the end of the first years of its existence, he was compelled, through failing health, to retire from active service; and he spent the remaining years of his life in retirement. He died in May, 1851, at the age of seventy-four, greatly regretted; and any one visiting Mount Hermon cemetery, Quebec, can see a handsome monument over his grave, erected by his old pupils, recording his ability as an instructor of youth, his genuine uprightness, his guileless simplicity, and a devout, benevolent and public-spirited man.

real, since

the

ming

have

nion

กลาร

with

the

tion.

Hor.

ived

Lon-

hall.

most

Mrs.

ress

ver-

and

n to talk

ssed

rgh.

s to

kegg.

the

not

pro-

his

the

uor

hab-

and

ad-

deal

nan

ude

one

nds

in

his

lve

Anderson, William, J.P., Commissioner in the Queen's Bench and High Court of Justice, Mountainview, Ameliasburg, Prince Edward, Ontario, was born at the township of Ameliasburg, Prince Edward county, on the 7th April, 1822. He was the second son of William Anderson, who came to Canada from the County of Monaghan, Ireland, in 1796, and settled in Prince Edward county. His mother was Mary Way, and the couple were married in July, 1809. She had come with her parents from Duchess county, State of New York, in the year 1800. William Anderson was educated partly by private tution, but he also attended the public schools. He married on the 7th December, 1847, Elizabeth, daughter of William T. Giles, a prominent agriculturist of the County of Prince Edward who died in 1859. Mr. Prince Edward, who died in 1859. Anderson married again in 1861, Mary Ann, daughter of Alexander Potts, of the County of Cavan, Ireland. Mr. Anderson is a prominent agriculturist and land-holder in the township of Ameliasburg and elsewhere. He is a conveyancer, likewise, a calling which he has pursued for thirty-five years. He is a justice of the peace, and a commissioner in the Queen's Bench and High Court of Justice. With respect to Mr. Anderson's militia service, it may be said that he received his commission as captain in 1855. He was also captain in the volunteer force, and commanded a company of volunteers at Kingston in 1866, during the Fenian troubles. He was for seven years reeve of the township of Ameliasburg, and the last year (1884) of his service was unanimously elected warden of the County of Prince Edward. He joined the Orange association in 1840, served as master of his lodge for several years, and in 1850 he was elected county master of the County lodge of Prince Edward, which office he continued to hold for ten years consecu-In 1860, at the Grand lodge meeting at the City of Ottawa, he was elected grand treasurer of the Supreme Grand lodge of British America; and to this office he has been unanimously re elected each succeeding year to the present time (1885). Our subject was elected in the County of Prince Edward to a seat in the old parliament of Canada in June, 1861, and occupied his seat in the house in the City of Quebec, as a supporter of the Macdonald-Cartier government, until its resignation, in 1863, upon the defeat of the militia bill. After this time he followed the fortunes of Sir John A. Macdonald in opposition to the J. Sandfield Macdonald-Sicotte government, up to the close of that parliament. After confederation Mr. Anderson was elected to a seat in the Ontario Assembly, and supported the government of J. Sandfield Macdonald in that house. He always gave his support to wise measures intended for the promotion of the public welfare; and in no case was he known to offer factious opposition to proposed good legislation. It can truly be said that he did his duty honourably and well in the public sphere, and that is a great compliment to be able to pay a politician as affairs now go between our striving parties. Mr. Anderson is a Methodist, and has been a member of that church for over forty-four years. For twenty-two years he was a lay preacher, and this office, now at the age of sixty-three, he still continues to fill. During his connection with religious work he has been the witness of the unfolding and the growth of charitable views in the doctrines of religion, inside and outside of Methodism. He also remembers vividly the early history of our public schools taught in miserable log-houses by men, very many of whom, were possessed of merely the rudiments of an education, and some of whom had objectionable habits, This was and morals the reverse of good. he case up to the time when the Rev. Dr. E. Ryerson became chief superintendent of Education, but after this period the teachers were of a better class, and the schools grew in superiority, till they became a credit to the neighbourhoods and ornaments to the country. The teachers likewise took high rank among our professional men.

Carmichael, William Robert, Belleville, Ontario, was born at Toronto, on the 24th January, 1852. His father, Robert Carmichael, born in the County of Fermanagh, Ireland, in 1805, emigrated to Canada in 1840, settling in Toronto, where he still resides, having by industry and ability acquired a handsome competency for his retirement. The mother of Mr. Carmichael was Abigail Mather, of the County Down, Ireland; and she came to Canada in 1837, where she is still living. This worthy couple were married in 1848; and the fruit of the union was three children, two sons and a daughter, the subject of this sketch being the youngest of the family. William Robert received his education in the Model school of Upper Canada up to the age of fourteen years, after which he spent three years at Upper Canada College. Choosing the drug business as more congenial than a profession, he became apprenticed to the same in 1870, obtaining his diploma and second prize at the Ontario College of Pharmacy in August, In 1874 he proceeded to Belleville as an assistant, returned a year after to his former employer in Toronto, and in 1876 went, by urgent solicitation to Belleville, and settled there, opening up a business He is now the proprietor of a in 1880. prosperous and most promising trade. He was elected by acclamation in 1882, to represent Murney ward on the Board of Education, and this position he still retains to the marked satisfaction of all concerned. Between the ages of fourteen and twentyfour he was a member of the British Order of Good Templars, and looks back on the many evenings spent in Jesse Ketchum lodge as the most enjoyable of his life; and the friendship there formed can never be effaced from his memory. He is a member of Belleville lodge, No. 123, G.R.C., being initiated in 1881, and likewise in 1883, a member of Mizpah lodge, I.O.O.F. October 6th, 1878, he married Etta Angelina Row (born 1858), youngest daughter of John and Angelina Row, of the township of The family Sidney, County of Hastings. is extensively related, being descendants of the veteran U.E. loyalist, Captain Meyers. By this union are three children, two sons and a daughter. From early years Mr. Carmichael indulged himself for pastime in the study of the poets; and on the platform he is always in demand to add to the evening's entertainment by his recitations. When, in 1881, the Belleville Amateur Historic Association produced the tragedy of Othello, he was chosen for the role of the Moor, and Mrs. Carmichael that of Desdemona. The event met with such success that they regard it as a compliment so distinctive as not soon to be forgotten. Mr. Carmichael is a man of pleasing presence. of attractive manners, and scholarly attainments. He has histrionic talent in a marked degree, and is the author of verse, some of which might reflect no discredit upon a conspicuous pen. His religious views are those of the English Evangelical Church; and he has been for a long period an earnest church worker, and an advocate of temperance. He may, without exaggeration, be classed as a representative of the best type of our young Canadians.

Smith, George M., Aylmer, Ontario, was born in the town of Doncaster, England, on the 22nd of March, 1840. He is a son of John Smith, who was employed on the police force in England, and Martha, whose maiden name was Mowbray. Mrs. Smith died when George was yet a child, and his father emigrated in 1849, settling at Lynn, Massachusetts. After his arrival he engaged himself as a carpenter and builder. In 1861 he joined the Northern army, remaining in active service in the commissariat department and in the sharpshooters till the close of the war. Some of the stories, which he still relates, recounting exploits and escapes, were most thrilling to listen to. When the war was over he removed to Providence, Rhode Island, where he remained until 1880, in which year he removed to Canada. He is still living and though in his 70th year, presents the mens sano in corpore sano. He

Louise, of the t and by dren. probity ness, an mercial. Pow tant-Gen the Dom County May, 182 father's s His pater pire loval vince of revolution

or to wi ne jec

188 est la b

The

larg

ing.

ther

Mr.

the (

he w electi name

tics.

ment, ning i of Car

A. O.

Forest

Range

to Mr

that he

marrie

had a family of three children, and the subject of this sketch was the oldest. George had the privilege of having a good education, concluding his studies at Cambridge, Massachusetts. At the age of sixteen he left school and began to learn the trade of carpenter and builder, in the town of Foxboro', Massachusetts, in the employ of Charles Leonard. After he was master of his trade he removed to the City of St. Paul, Minnesota, where he remained, engaged at his trade, till 1860. In 1861 he resolved to try his luck in Canada, and crossing the line proceeded to Aylmer, in the Province of Ontario, and settled there. Here he at once engaged in the occupation of contractor and builder, entering into co-partnership with his uncle, Samuel Smith. This partnership continued until 1870, when the subject of this sketch retired, and entered on the employ of his uncle as foreman. In 1882, however, he bought his uncle's interest in the business, and since that time has laboured at the head of the establishment. The operations of this firm are now very large, and are stated to be continually growing. In connection with the establishment, there is an extensive sash and door factory. Mr. Smith was at one time a lieutenant in the Canadian militia, but retired. In 1879 he was elected to the town council, and reelected for 1880 and 1881. In the lastnamed year he retired from municipal, politics. Mr. Smith is chief of the fire department, is a shareholder in the Aylmer Canning Factory, and also in the Traders Bank of Canada. He is a member of Lodge No. 6 A. O. U. W.; of the Independent Order of Foresters, Court No. 29, being a Past Chief Ranger. In politics, he gives his allegiance to Mr. Blake's party; and his religion is that held by the Baptist denomination. He married on May 24th, 1865, Charlotte Louise, daughter of the late Hiram Powers, of the township of Malahide, Elgin county, and by that lady has a family of three children. Mr. Smith is a man of the highest probity of character, is attentive to his business, and obliging and courteous in his commercial, as well as in his social relations.

Powell, Colonel Walker, Adju-

the

hum

and

r be

nber

being

33, 2

()n nge-

er of ip of

mily

ts of

vers.

sons

Mr.

ie in orm

the

ons.

His-

y of

the

esde-

cess

dis-

Mr.

nce, ain-

ked

e of

con-

ose

l he

He

s a

ung

rio,

Powell, Colonel Walker, Adjutant-General of Militia at headquarters, for the Dominion of Canada, was born in the County of Norfolk, Canada, on the 20th May, 1828. He is of Welsh descent on his father's side, and English on his mother's. His paternal grandfather was a United Empire loyalist, and was born in the then province of New York, in 1763. During the revolution he adhered to the cause of Great Britain, and in 1783 was landed in New Brunswick, where he married Ruth Wood, on Long Island, River St. John. After a residence of thirteen years in New Brunswick, he took up his permanent residence in the County of Norfolk, Upper Canada, where he died in 1849. The subject of this sketch is the eldest son of Israel Wood and Melinda (Boss) Powell. His father was the seventh son of Abraham Powell, born in the same county in 1801. This gentleman has been described as a representative public man; liberal in sentiment, energetic in action, loyal to the empire, and devoted to Canada. In his day he served as justice of the peace, member of council, warden, and as lieutenant-colonel of militia. From 1840 to 1847 he represented his county in the Legislative Assembly of Canada; and he died in Port Dover in 1852. Walker Powell was educated at Victoria College, Cobourg, and when his studies were completed he engaged himself for a period in commercial pursuits. When a very young man he gave evidence of the same activity, enterprise and large public spirit which had characterized his He procured the construction of vessels which he employed upon the lakes, and took a stirring and leading part in the development of numerous industrial projects. He was likewise the friend of education; was a trustee of the County Grammar school, member and chairman of the Board of United Grammar and Public schools, a justice of the peace, and for seven years a member of the county council of Norfolk. In 1856 he was warden of that county, and its representative in the Legislative Assembly from the year 1857 to 1861. In 1847 began his connection with the Canadian militia; and it was in that year he received a commission in the First Norfolk Until the 19th of August, 1862, he continued in this corps as company officer and adjutant; but at that period, in consequence of the civil war in the United States, and the decision to increase the active force in Canada, he was solicited to become deputyadjutant-general for Upper Canada. This was a trying and important period, and the responsibilities devolving upon the militia officer were of the gravest kind. But he was equal to the occasion, and his genius for organization soon manifested itself to the satisfaction of the public and the government. On October 1st, 1868, he was promoted deputy-adjutant-general of the Dominion; in 1873 acting adjutant-general; and on April 21, 1875, adjutant-general, which appointment he now holds. Throughout his long connection with our militia, Colonel Powell's zeal and enthusiasm in endeavouring to promote the efficiency of the force have been unremitting. He advocated energetically and aided in securing the establishment of the Royal Military College at Kingston, by means of which young Canadians can secure a complete military education: also the formation of schools of military instruction for the different arms of the service at which officers, non commissioned officers and men of the active militia may, by attending short courses, obtain a practical knowledge of their duties and become the instructors of others when they return to their corps. These institutions have assisted materially in developing a military organization suited to the circumstances of the population. As we have lately had an opportunity of seeing, our militia force has some raison d'etre. Among a good many Canadians there had not been sufficient consciousness of the seriousness of the aim of the militia force; and we have called attention to these facts that we may point to the reverse attitude by Colonel Powell. He has been heart and soul in his work, and has ever sought to instil into his brother officers and into subordinates as well, the same spirit that animates him-His pen has not been idle either, and his many clearly written brochure's on the subject of militia, have brought strong expressions of commendation. Colonel Powell married in 1853, Catherine Emma, daughter of Lieutenant-Colonel Joseph Cul-She died in 1855, leaving one child, Linnie Emma, now the wife of McLeod Stewart, barrister, of Ottawa. He married again in 1857, Mary Ursule, daughter of Adam Bowlby, Esquire, of Norfolk. She is the mother of five children, four of whom survive, namely, Charles Berkely, born 1858; Fred. Hamilton, born 1862; Edith Elizabeth, born 1867; and Laura Christina, born 1869.

Phillips, Rev. Alfred Moore, B.D., Methodist Pastor at Galt, Ontario, was born in the township of Hillier, County of Prince Edward, near the village of Wellington, on January 24, 1846. When Alfred Moore was only three years old, the family moved into the township of Murray, near Stockdale, in the County of Northumberland. His father was John Smith Phillips, who upon his mother's side was descended from a U. E. loyalist family named Smith, which at the time of the revolution came from Dutchess county, New York, where they left large estates. They were among the pioneers of Prince Edward county, settling in the wilderness near Picton. father of the Smiths was one of the survey. ing party that opened up the road from Kingston to Toronto. Upon his father's side, John S. Phillips was of English descent. His father having served under Wellington in Spain, was sent with his regiment to Canada during the war of 1812-15. but the regiment being disbanded at the close of the war, he remained in the country, settling in Prince Edward county. Moore's mother came with her family from Norfolk, England; her father, Samuel Bacon, settling in North Hastings, where he died, one of the wealthiest farmers in the district. Up to sixteen years of age, Mr. Phillips was educated in the public (county) school, section No. 22, Murray. which not only was the first school in the county, but for many years equalled the grammar schools of the day. When a little over sixteen, he began teaching school in the third concession of the township of Murray, near Wooler. He remained there for two and a half years; then in the ninth concession for one year, in the fourth concession for one year, and at Smithfield. near Brighton, for three years. He was converted in connection with a revival meeting in the Wesleyan Methodist church, Trenton, Rev. Amos E. Russ, pastor, during the winter of 1866, mainly through the instrumentality of Father Brundage, with whom he was boarding. He immediately connected himself with the church at his family home, joining the class with his father and mother. Soon after conversion, he began to feel that he was called to preach the gospel. He was made an exhorter upon the Brighton circuit by the Rev. A.A. Smith, in 1868. He held his first service in the Victoria chapel on that circuit. As a means of evading the Christian ministry and compromising duty with God, he gave up school-teaching December, 1869, and accepted an offer to work in the interests of temperance, under the agency of the British Templars. In this work he spent six unhappy months, feeling all the time that he was fleeing from God and duty. At a prayer-meeting on the London North circuit, conducted by Rev. Wm. J. Hewitt, he decided to enter the ministry if the way opened, and after spending a sleepless night in an hotel at Hespeler, resolved to leave the lecture field, and go home to prepare for the ministry of the Wesleyan Methodists by going to college. There being a scarcity of young men for the conference then in

sua

pla

ma

Goo

Μo

enc

187 littl

ing

the

lum.

conf

went

then lege,

recei

don c ordaii

circui

Chath

In 188

remair

went t

success

Rev.

mather

Victori

the con

ated in

he grea

son soci

istry;

of which

since its taken ar

and cha

against s

Dodds,

others.

He also,

became ;

held offic

the prima

grand, hav

Royal Bla

coming co

mere polit

interest of believing

advanced t

British loy

joined its

was instrun

the Sons of joined; but the division

Templars, n

Canadian an bodies.

session in Toronto, 1870, he was persuaded to go at once into the work, and placed himself in the hands of the chairman of the Sarnia district, Rev. George Goodson, who called him to labour on the Mooretown circuit, under the superintendence of Rev. George Clark. In August, 1870. he preached his first sermon in the little church at Sombra village. The following year he was on the Sarnia circuit, under the superintendence of Rev. J. W. McCallum, having been received on trial by the conference at Belleville, 1871. He next went to Oil Springs, as minister in charge, then followed five years at Victoria College, Cobourg, from 1873 to 1878. He was received into full connection with the London conference, at Brantford, in 1875, and ordained at St. Thomas in 1878. His first circuit after graduation and ordination was Chatham, where he remained three years. In 1881 he was stationed at St. Thomas, remaining there three years, and in 1884 went to Galt, where he ministers with great success and satisfaction. While teaching, Rev. Mr. Phillips pursued English and mathematical studies, and then went to Victoria College, Cobourg, where he took the complete theological course, and graduated in divinity in 1878. While at college he greatly assisted in instituting the Jackson society in 1874, for students for the ministry; and the Theological Union, in 1877. of which he has been secretary-treasurer since its organization. Rev. Mr. Phillips has taken an active part in temperance work. and championed the cause of temperance against such liquor advocates as E. King Dodds, Ira C. Lee, Judge Armour and others, to the advantage of prohibition. He also, when about eighteen years of age, became an enthusiastic Orangemen. He held office in all the grades of lodges from the primary up to the most worshipful grand, having attended sessions of all these bodies. He was also connected with the Royal Black Knights of Ireland, but becoming convinced that the order was a mere political machine, conducted in the interest of the Tory party, he withdrew, believing that the institution in no way advanced the interests of Protestantism or British loyalty, to promote which he had joined its ranks. In February, 1864, he was instrumental in organizing a division of the Sons of Temperance at Wooler, which he joined; but afterwards succeeded in turning the division over to the British order of Good Templars, mainly because the latter was a Canadian and not an American institution.

He was initiated into the British Templars by Nassau C. Gowan, July 8th, 1864; was a delegate to the Supreme lodge of the order in Montreal, January, 1865, and at the emergency meeting of the Grand lodge of Ontario, at Toronto, in May, 1865; and has attended every session of these bodies, with a single exception in each, ever since. 1868, Mr. Phillips was elected Grand Worthy Chief Templar for Ontario, and in 1873 grand worthy secretary, holding the latter office five years. In 1872 he was elected, at Montreal, most worthy chief templar of the whole order, and during his official year was instrumental in introducing the order into Australia. In 1874, at Fredericton, N.B., he was elected most worthy secretary, holding the office for four years. He worked zealously for the promotion of union among the temperance orders, and succeeded in drawing together the British and British American Templars in Canada, the United Templars of Britain, and the Australian Templars, into one society, known as the "United Temperance Association," the Canadian National lodge of which was formed in London, Ont., August 2, 1876. In 1882, he opened up negotiations with the Supreme Council of the Royal Templars of Temperance, for an amalgamation of the Canadian branch of the U. T. A. with the latter order, which was finally consummated on February 12th, 1884. Mr. Phillips was present at the formation of the Grand Council of R.T. of T. for Ontario, as delegate from St. Thomas council, No. 35, and was made the first past grand councillor, on April 26th, 1882. At the first annual session of the Grand Council, February, 1883, he was elected representative to the Supreme Council at Buffalo, N.Y., of which body he was elected chaplain. He was among the first advocates of independent jurisdiction for the Royal Templars of Canada, and principally conducted the negotiations that led to the self-government of the order in Canada, with a separate beneficiary fund. At the formation of the Dominion Council at Hamilton, February 14th, 1884, he was elected past dominion councillor, and a member of the board of directors, and still holds these positions. He is likewise a member of the Grand and Supreme councils. As a private member, Mr. Phillips has been connected with the Independent Order of Good Templars, Templars of Honour and Temperance, Council of Friends, Independent Order of Oddfellows, and the Order of United Friends of Temperance. His religious views from youth have been Methodist, with no leaning to Calvinism, believing not only in the possible salvation of all men from eternal punishment, but from sin in this life, and restoration to the image and likeness of God. Rev. Mr. Phillips, while in St. Thomas, accepted a challenge from Charles Watts, the secularist, to a two-nights' debate on Secularism vs. Christianity, in which the secularist, by popular verdict, was worsted. He married, on June 21st, 1882, Margaret Jane, daughter of William Coyne, of St. Thomas. She died in Galt on the 2nd of December, 1884, leaving one child, Alfred Coyne, aged one and a half years.

Evans, George M., M.A., Toronto, was born at Three Rivers, Quebec, on the 1st February, 1828. His parents were the Rev. Francis Evans and Maria Sophia Lewis, daughter of the late Rev. T. F. Lewis, vicar of Curry-Mallet, Somersetshire, England. This couple were married in France, but shortly after they were wed, they set sail for Canada, arriving in Quebec, where Mr. Evans received ordination from the Right Rev. Bishop Stewart, of Quebec. In 1828 the Rev. Mr. Evans went to the Talbot district (now Norfolk county) of Upper Canada, as incumbent of St. John's church, Woodhouse. When rectories were provided for, he became rector of Woodhouse; and continued such till his death, which occurred in 1858. He was a worthy man, and a zealous priest, and died beloved by every member of his flock. We may say t at the Rev. Mr. Evans was the second son of Francis Evans, of Robinstown, County of Westmeath, Ireland. a family of six sons and six daughters, the subject of our sketch being the eldest. Mr. Evans' mother died in 1881. His father died while on a visit at the residence of his brother, in Ireland, Nicholas Evans, of Loughpark, Castle Pollard, Westmeath. George M. Evans received a very thorough education. At first he attended Upper Canada College, subsequently finishing his education and taking degrees at King's College. and Toronto University. He graduated B.A., in 1850. His degree obtained, he left Canada and visited England, Ireland and France. In 1852 he returned to Canada, and was appointed head master of the Grammar school at Simcoe, County of Norfolk, Ontario. This position he held till 1857. In this year he received the appointment of third classical master for Upper Canada College. In 1860 the mastership was abolished, and Mr. Evans decided to study law, articling himself to the Hon. Adam Crooks, Q.C. In this office he completed his studies, and in 1864 he was called to the bar for Upper Canada. , From that time he has practised his profession in the City of Toronto, and has established for himself a solid repute in the profession In 1872 he was elected to the Public School Board for St. Patrick's ward, Toronto. In 1879 he was elected alderman for the same ward; and was re-elected for the years 1880. 1881, 1882, and 1883. In the last-named year he retired, though we may say against the wishes of the electors of his ward. While in the council he accepted for a period the chairmanship of the water works committee. Mr. Evans is a member of the Collegiate Institute Board, and he is one of the vice-presidents of the Irish Protestant Benevolent Society, in which latter body he has been an officer since its institution. He is a member of the Church of England, and has taken a leading part in church work. He is church warden at St. Philip's, Toronto, superintendent of the Sunday-school, and one of the lay delegates to the Diocesan He has travelled much, as we He has visited the have already seen. United States and Europe several times. He is most courteous and kindly in his man-

Smith, Larratt William, D.C.L., of Summerhill, Yonge street, Toronto, Barrister-at-law of Osgoode Hall, was born at Plymouth, in the County of Devon, England, on the 29th November, 1820. He is the eldest son of Larratt Smith, who originally entered the Royal artillery, but subsequently left it for the Field Train department. in which he received his first commission in 1805, and during the late war with the United States, was in charge of the entire department in Canada, as chief commissary and paymaster to the Royal artillery, having been stationed at Quebec. In 1816 he returned to England fro n Canada, and shortly afterward was placed upon half-pay. In 1819 he was married at Bordeaux, France, and in 1833 returned with his family of four children to Upper Canada, where he settled in Oro, in the County of Simcoe. He afterwards removed to Richmond Hill, and in 1834 finally left for England, where he died at his residence, Cumberland Place, Southampton, on the 30th January, 1860. When Larratt William Smith arrived in Toronto in 1833 he entered Upper Canada College, and here remained for a period of five years. He won the prize poem for 1837, the subject for that year very appropriately being—"The accession of Queen Victoria." In Michaelmas term, 1838, he entered the Law Society

Dra was foll 184 he i to D.C bein juni Šmit that in pa Hone H. M LL.B partn Dr. S his pr attent prises ture, 8ays : we are acquire financi office forward position financia qualitie clerk of Canada chancell has been Associat is vice-p Gas Cor Canada Bank of Canada I of the L Company the Anch was a dire ciety; of pany; of been a lo of Scotlan sity of Tor ada Law S Superior S vice-presid

ance Comp

London Fi

of the Nor

pany; and

British Nor

served as 1

ticl

as a student of the senior class, and was articled for five years to the late Chief Justice Draper. In Michaelmas term, 1843, he was admitted an attorney; and in the following term was called to the bar. In 1843, at the opening of King's College. he matriculated in arts, and, passing on to law, took his degrees of B.C.L. and D.C.L., the latter in 1852. Shortly after being called to the bar he purchased a junior partnership in the legal firm of Smith, Crooks & Smith, of Toronto. Since that period he has practised his profession in partnership at different times with the Honourable Chief Justice Wilson, James H. Morris, Q.C., and Samuel George Wood, LL.B. At the present time he is senior partner in the firm of Smith, Smith & Rae. Dr. Smith has not allowed the practice of his profession to absorb the whole of his attention, but in several important enterprises of a public as well as a private nature, has taken a prominent part. He has, says an authority lying at our hand-and we are able to vouch for the statementacquired an enviable reputation as a good financier, an able manager, an excellent office lawyer, and a shrewd, straightforward business man; and his various positions in the management of different financial institutions indicate that these qualities are appreciated. He has been clerk of the Court of Appeals for Upper Canada; pro-vice and, subsequently, vicechancellor of the University of Toronto; has been president of the Building & Loan Association since its incorporation in 1870: is vice-president of the Toronto Consumers' Gas Company; was vice-president of the Canada Bolt Company; a director of the Bank of Upper Canada; and a director of the Canada Landed Credit Company; is a director of the London & Canadian Loan & Agency Company; of the Hand-in-Hand; and of the Anchor Marine Insurance Company; was a director of the Merchants Building Society; of the Grand Trunk Telegraph Company; of the Ontario Peat Company; has been a local director of the Life Association of Scotland; is a life senator of the University of Toronto; a bencher of the Upper Canada Law Society; is president of the Lake Superior Silver Mining & Land Company; vice-president of the Sovereign Fire Insurance Company; director of the Glasgow & London Fire Insurance Company; director of the North American Life Insurance Company; and has been solicitor of the Bank of British North America since 1845. Mr. Smith served as lieutenant during the rebellion of 1837, and afterwards became senior major of the 6th battalion of Toronto Sedentary militia, having passed through the Military School at Toronto, 1864. He was chairman, in 1876, of the Royal commission to investigate certain charges in connection with the Northern Railway; is a Senator of Toronto University, and also a life member of many permanent institutions in Toronto. Smith is a Reformer, but has never cared for political life. He is a member of the Church of England, and a churchwarden of Christ Church, Yonge street. He married, in December, 1845, Eliza Caroline, daughter of Staff-Surgeon Thom, of Perth, and halfsister of the late Mrs. Chief Justice Spragge. She died in 1851, leaving two children, the eldest of whom died from the effects of exposure during the Fenian raid of 1866, the youngest having pre-deceased him whilst attending the Barrie Grammar school. Mr. Smith married a second time in 1858, Mary Elizabeth, eldest daughter of James Frederick Smith, for many years a prominent merchant of Toronto. By this union there have been eleven children, ten of whom are now living.

Thorburn, John, M. A., LL. D., Ottawa, was born at Quothquan, a village near Biggar, Lanarkshire, Scotland, on the 10th October, 1830. His father was John Thorburn, a man in many ways remarkable, whose salient points of character have been admirably touched off by one who knew him well (see "Songs and Ballads of the Upper Ward of Lanarkshire," by A. Nimmo.) His mother's name was Mary Wilson. He was the second youngest of a family consisting of six sons and two daughters. He first attended school at Quothquan, but subsequently, when preparing for a college, he spent some years at the parish school of West Liberton, then under the charge of Wm. Black, who had acquired a deservedly high reputation as a successful teacher, many of his pupils having distinguished themselves at one or other of the Scottish universities. He matriculated at Edinburgh university, and afterwards took a full course in arts. During the first years of his college life, he devoted considerable attention to classics, and was awarded one of the highest prizes for proficiency in his work. On leaving college, he taught school for a short time in his native village. In 1853 he was appointed first assistant in Musselburgh Grammar school, where he remained for upwards of two years. In 1855 he received the appointment of classical master in the Western Institution, Edinburgh, but the following year his health gave way, and he was laid aside from duty by illness. Acting on the advice of his medical adviser, in 1856, he set sail for Canada, intending to spend a few months there recuperating, and then to return to Scotland again and resume his work. After a short experience of Canadian life he gave up the idea of returning to the old land, deciding to make this country his future home. After spending about eighteen months in Montreal, in 1858, he was induced, through Principal Dawson of Mc-Gill university, to take charge of a school at Yarmouth, N.S. He removed, in 1860, to St. Francis college, Richmond, Quebec, of which institution he was appointed principal and professor of classics. In the summer of 1862, he went to Ottawa, having been appointed head master of the Grammar school (now the Collegiate Institute), and for nearly twenty years he held that position with marked ability and success. Many of his pupils are now occupying important positions in every walk of life. Two of them carried off the Gilchrist scholarship, open to the whole Dominion, during two years in succession, and a considerable number of them are filling professors' chairs in several of the leading Canadian universities. At Christmas, 1881, finding the pressure of work was beginning to tell seriously upon his health, he withdrew from the Collegiate Institute. On this occasion, a public testimonial was presented to him, accompanied by an address, of which the following is an extract:—"During your unusually long tenure of the office of head master, great changes have necessarily taken place in the educational system of Ontario, and, in the inception and execution of these beneficial changes, you have played a very important part. At the conclusion of your labours within these walls, it must give you great satisfaction to remember, as it gives us unalloyed pleasure to declare, that the school, whether known as the Grammar school, or as the Collegiate Institute, has constantly maintained its position in the very van among the best schools of the province.' When the royal military college at Kingston was organized, Dr. Thorburn was asked, on behalf of the militia department, to draft a scheme for the entrance examinations to that institution, and this was adopted by the government, and has, with but slight modifications, been used ever since. When the Headquarters Board of Examiners was appointed, he was made its chairman, a position which he still holds. On retiring from the Collegiate Institute, he shortly afterwards received the appointment of librarian to the Geological and Natural History survey of Canada, and, in the same year, the government recognizing his valuable public services as a practical educationist, appointed him a member of the board of civil service examiners. During his residence in Ottawa, he has always taken a warm and active interest in the social, benevolent and literary movements of the day, and among other positions which he has occupied may be mentioned the presidency of the St. Andrew's society, and of the Ottawa literary and scientific society. This last he held from 1873 to 1877. In 1860 he received from McGill university the degree of M.A., and from Queen's university, Kingston, that of LL.D., in 1880. In 1859 he was married to Maria J. I., youngest daughter of the late Dr. Henry Greggs Farish, of Yarmouth, N.S.

Dixon, Rev. Alexander, Archdeacon of Guelph, and Rector, was born at Long-When a very young lad ford, Ireland. he came with his father, the late Alexander Dixon, and family from Dublin to Toronto, then Little York. At that time the passing of the Emancipation Act for Ireland caused much despondency among Protestants, leading to a large emigration of that class to Canada and the States, and among the number was the family in question. On their way out to Quebec their ship was wrecked in the St. Lawrence, but the passengers were rescued by a French schooner. In coming to America it was Mr. Dixon's intention to take up a tract of land close to Kenyon College, in Ohio. He found, however, that he had been deceived in the inducements held out to him, and on the representations of the Hon. J. H. Dunn, then receiver-general, he determined to establish himself in Toronto. He soon, by his enterprise, made his mark in the young city. Samuel Thompson, who knew him intimately, thus speaks of him in his "Reminiscences of a Canadian Pioneer":—"Though living a busy life, he had laid in a solid foundation of standard literature, and even of theological lore, which qualified him to take a high position in intellectual society. He also possessed great readiness of speech, a genial countenance and manner, and fund of drollery and wit which made him a special favourite in the city council, as well as at public dinners and on festive occasions. In the city council no man was more useful in all good works, and none exercised greater influence over its deliberations. Few men did more m Ja se: th act cal his cor rar The inof J plar land head to a the capta a pla lion serve volun gradu the ti Christ Canon well-k with prizem and be for the prize latter McCau Leaf." highest voted. course 1 ven, pro to the di curate months.

Catharin

aminer c

was appo

Dalhousi

rector of

there, he

the Rev.

and was f

dent of th

Guardian,

also writing

ronto daily

oi lia for the beautifying of the city in its street . Trinity Church east architecture. . . was also built through his exertions, seconded by Mr. Enoch Turner and Mr. William Gooderham. He was also an active member of the building committee of St. James' Cathedral, which church he represented as a delegate at the first synod." As in Dublin, where, with the father of the late Hon. Harcourt Bull, he was an active agent in organizing loyal associations, called "Brunswick lodges," so through his life in Canada he was an enthusiastic conservative. His rare and extensive library is now in possession of the archdeacon. The family came originally from Douglas, in Lanarkshire, Scotland, in the reign of James I., when he established the Ulster plantations, and they received a grant of land in the County Tyrone. In 1688 the head of the family raised a troop of cavalry to aid King William, and lost an arm at the Boyne. For his services he received a captain's commission, signed by the king at a place called Duleek. During the rebellion of 1798 the father of Alexander Dixon served in the Black Horse, a distinguished volunteer cavalry regiment. Mr. Dixon, jr., graduated at King's College, Toronto, at the time when Adam Crooks, Judge Boyd, Christopher Robinson, Judge Kingsmill, Canon Stennett, Dr. McMichael and others well-known in public life, were connected with that university. He was university prizeman in his third year in general history and belles lettres. He also took the prize for the "English oration," and wrote the prize poem two years in succession. The latter one, "Calpe," was deemed by Dr. McCaul worthy of insertion in the "Maple Leaf," an annual to which much of the highest literary talent of the time was devoted. After passing through the Divinity course under the able guidance of Dr. Beaven, professor of Divinity, he was ordained to the diaconate in Hamilton, and appointed curate to the Rev. Dr. Atkinson, in St. Catharines, where he remained a few months. While there he served as examiner of the public schools. In 1850 he was appointed rector of Louth and Port Dalhousie, where he lived until appointed rector of Guelph, in 1875. While rector there, he was, for a time, joint editor with the Rev. J. G. D. McKenzie of The Church, and was for several years special correspondent of the great church organ The London Guardian, and likewise of a New York paper, also writing book reviews, etc., for a Toronto daily. For many years he filled the

me

lıı-

η-

rd

e-

y,

position of chairman of the Grammar school board at St. Catharines, when the examination of teachers for several counties chiefly devolved on him. He, in addition, gained a reputation as a horticulturist and vinegrower, having a very fine garden. During the civil war in the States he gave all his sympathies to the South, and was on intimate terms of friendship with many of the leading confederates—a friendship which continues to the present day. He held that the secession of the South was merely the dissolution of an irksome partnership, wholly justified by the U.S. Constitution. For his services to the "lost cause" he was publicly thanked by ex-president Davis, at a levee held by him when at Niagara. In 1866 he was appointed canon of St. James' Cathedral, by the late Bishop Strachan. On his appointment to the rectory of Guelph, he was commissioned as examining chaplain to the new diocese of Niagara, which office he has filled ever since, retaining it on the death of the late bishop by request of hissuccessor. In 1883 he was appointed archdeacon of Guelph, with jurisdiction over the northern half of the diocese. He was married to Laura E. Goldsmith, of Toronto, after his appointment to Louth, and has a son and three daughters. The former has a good position in the Hudson Bay Company's service. The archdeacon's brother, William Dixon, was for several years chief emigration agent for the Dominion, and died in 1873. The Hon. J. H. Pope declared of him that "he was the most correct and conscientious administrator he ever met." His brother-in-law, Frank Rowsell, C.B., C.M.G., British Commissioner for Egyptian State Domains, and described in the Graphic as "one of the most capable and brilliant officials in the public service of England," died in October, 1885. After the death of William Dixon this gentleman took charge of the Dominion Emigration office in London until the appointment of Mr. Jenkins. Another brother, Major F. E. Dixon, is well known in connection with the Queen's Own. As captain, his company (No. 2) was badly cut up at Ridgeway. "The Internal Economy of a Regiment," written by him, has a high reputation as a text-book for students in military matters.

Fletcher, Rev. Donald Hugh, Pastor of the McNab Street Presbyterian Church, Hamilton, was born in Islay, Scotland, in 1833. He is the third son of Hugh Fletcher, of Keppols, whose Hugeunot ancestors emigrated from France to Great Britain about the time of the revocation of the edict of Nantes. His mother's name was Marion McInnis, daughter of the ruling elder of the parish. His early education was received at the Parish school of Kilmeny. He afterwards pursued his studies at a private academy and at the High school in Glasgow. While yet a mere youth he taught for some time with ardor and success in the Parliamentary school at Mulindry in his native island; and came to this country in his eighteenth year. After teaching for some time in the County of York, he prosecuted his studies at the Toronto University, and took his theoligical course at Knox College, graduating in April, 1860. He was licensed to preach the gospel by the Hamilton Presbytery, in the following September. Immeediately after he received calls from several vacant pastoral charges, and accepted a unanimous call from the congregation of Knox church, Scarboro', which became va-cant by the removal of its former pastor (Rev. Dr. Laing, now of Dundas,) to Cobourg; and was ordained and inducted into that charge by the Presbytery of Toronto, on the 8th of November, 1860. To his ministerial and pastoral duties, in Scarboro', were added those of local superintendent of education. He took a lively interest in school matters, and in his annual public addresses in the different school sections, he strongly and persistently urged on the people the importance of providing firstclass school accomodation for their children. His labours in this direction were productive of much good; and before leaving Scarboro' he had the satisfaction of seeing in almost every section in the municipality a firstclass school-house. In February, 1872, he received a unanimous call from the Mc-Nab Street Presbyterian church, Hamilton, which became vacant by the appointment of the Rev. Dr. David Inglis, by the General Assembly to the chair of Systematic Theology in Knox College. He accepted the call in the following April. The Toronto presbytery in granting his translation put on record a resolution expressive of the presbytery's high estimate of his character, ability, and services. Mr. Fletcher was inducted into his present charge by the Hamilton presbytery, on the first day of May, 1872, and was kindly received by this large and influential congregation, to which belonged the Hon. Isaac Buchanan, Hon. Senator Turner, Hon. Archibald McKellar, Dr. Macdonald, Dr. McQuesten, and many other leading citizens of Hamilton. During his present pastorate he has laboured with fidelity and success in discharging his numerous duties, and is highly esteemed, not only by his own, but also by neighbouring congregations, some of whom have publicly expressed their high estimate of his worth and services by presenting valuable testimonials to him. He has been for several years senior chaplain to the St. Andrew's Benevolent Society, of Hamilton, and repeatedly received the thanks of the society for his services rendered to it. He is a member of the board of management of Knox College, and acted for several years as an examiner in the same In 1881, his congregation institution. granted him a prolonged vacation, during which he travelled extensively in Western and Southern Europe, Egypt, Palestine, Syria, Asia Minor, Turkey and Greece. On his return home he delivered to his congregation a series of interesting lectures on his travels. His friends cherish the hope that he may give his observations and reflections during his eastern travels to the public some day in a permanent form. After his return from the East, he was married, in May, 1882, to Phyllis Eleanor, youngest daughter of the late Peter Murray, of Athol Bank. In 1884, the Synod of Hamilton and London conferred on him the highest honour in its gift by electing him to the moderator's chair, the duties of which he discharged to the entire satisfaction of his brethren. On retiring from the chair, he preached an able and eloquent discourse on the "Supreme excellency of the knowledge of Jesus Christ," which has been published. He received the unanimous thanks of the synod for the efficient manner in which he discharged his duties as moderator.

tl

of

fre

CO

pu

CO

nο

Bri

and

nur

pigs

adia

dale

Rosy

by I

bull,

eleve

bull,

$3,00

Mr.

when

for $3

rane

by the

Weth

paid f

that ti

At the

Cochra

pure B

being {

sire of

ject out

by brin

head of twenty several

gate, $6

time, th

his mag

Cochrane, Hon. Matthew Henry, Senator, Hillhurst, Compton, was born at Compton, Province of Quebec, on the 11th of November, 1824. He is a son of James Cochrane, who came from the north of Ireland, and who was for many years a merchant-farmer and cattle-breeder in the Province of Quebec. Our subject lived upon his father's farm till he was eighteen years old, and then he went to Boston. Here, for a time, he engaged himself in the shoe business; but he returned to Canada in 1854, and resumed the same business. Here he associated himself with Samuel G. Smith, and the firm was known as Smith & Cochrane. In 1868 Mr. Smith died, and Charles Cassils, a native of Dumbartonshire, Scotland, became a partner in the business with Mr. Cochrane; and the firm thereafter was known as Cochrane, Cassils & Co. It now gives employment to upwards of 300 men and women, and does business to the extent of half a million dollars a year. In 1864 Mr. Cochrane had made up his mind to embark in cattle raising, upon an extensive scale, so he purchased the large farm adjoining his own at Compton. This magnificent place is known as "Hillhurst," and contains 1,600 acres, largely rolling land, and almost in one block, with brooks and springs furnishing abundance of good water. A deep gravelly loam is the prevailing soil, admirably adapted to the growth of spring wheat, turnips, grass, oats, barley, etc., the first three being the leading crops; corn is also raised. At the period when Mr. Cochrane began this splendid enterprise at Compton, very little had been accomplished at stock-raising in the province. He was, therefore, a pioneer, and was obliged to create the system to be adopted. He set out determined to have the best specimens of short-horns that money could purchase from leading cattle-breeders in the old country. In 1867 he made his first great purchase, when he imported the famous cow "Rosedale." This superb animal had no peer in the principal prize rings of Great Britain. He likewise, imported a choice corps of Southdown, Cotswold, Leicester and Lincoln sheep. He also imported a number of Suffolk horses, and Berkshire pigs. We take the following from the "Canadian Biographical Dictionary": "Rosedale was a daughter of Booth's Valsco and Rosy, by Master Belleville, and was bred by Lady Pigot. Our subject had no Booth bull, and he had Rosedale crossed with the eleventh Duke of Thorndale, a Duchess bull, which had just been purchased for $3,000. Her first calf, after coming into Mr. Cochrane's hands, a heifer, was sold, when a year old, to an Illinois stock-breeder . The next year Mr. Cochfor $3,500. . rane paid 1,000 guineas for Duchess 97th, by the 3rd Duke of Wharfdale, of the noted Wetherly herd. . . The price which he paid for her, is said to be the highest at that time ever paid for a female short-horn. At the same time, among other cattle, Mr. Cochrane also bought for 250 guineas, a pure Booth animal of striking beauty, she being by Baron Booth, a prize winner, and sire of prize-winners." In 1870 our subject out-did every cattle-breeder in America, by bringing into Canada, no less than forty head of short-horns, which together with twenty more, a flock of Cotswold sheep, and several Berkshire pigs, cost in the aggregate, $60,000. Thereafter, from time to time, this enterprising gentleman added to his magnificent stock, by additions which

by

 \mathbf{sed}

ices

im.

ain

, of

the

er-

of

for

me

ion

ing

m

he.

Ŋ'n

re-

still would make many stare with wonder. Cattle-raising is less to him a purely mercantile business, than a calling which he In keeping with his past spirit of enterprise, Hon. Mr. Cochrane, two or three years ago, when the public taste in pure bred cattle had somewhat abated on shorthorns, imported from England and Scotland various large herds of Hereford and Polled Angus cattle, and has, by his careful selection and judicious breeding, done much to improve the stock of the country through those strains, as he did in shorthorns. On the 17th of October, 1872, Mr. Cochrane was called to the Senate, by Sir John A. Macdonald's administration. He has through life been a consistent Conservative, and has always been an honour to the Senate. He has been connected with various public enterprises, among others he is a member of the council of agriculture, of Quebec; a director of the Eastern Townships' Bank; the Paton Manufacturing Company, etc., etc. He is also president of the Cochrane Ranch Company; the British American Ranch Company; the Bigelow-Heel Company, and various other companies in the Eastern Townships and Montreal.

Gault, Matthew Hamilton, J. P. M.P. for Montreal West, and son of the late Leslie Gault, merchant and ship-owner, of Strabane, County of Tyrone, Ireland, was born at Strabane in July, 1822. His mother was Mary Hamilton, of Trenta House, County Donegal, Ireland. Young Gault received a careful educational training at his native place, under the tutorship of the Rev. Dr. When he reached his twenty-first year he came to Canada, settling in Montreal, where he engaged himself in insurance What he has, through his combusiness. manding business abilities, his honourable conduct, and untiring industry, since achieved, is truly remarkable. He was for some years resident manager of the British American Assurance Company for Quebec province; chief agent of the Royal Insurance Company of England; and agent of the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New He is president of the Montreal York. Loan and Mortgage Co.; vice president of the Sun Life Insurance Co.; vice-president of the Montreal Mining Co.; director of the Richelieu and Ontario Navigation Co., and Windsor Hotel Co.; director of the Hochelaga and Montreal Cotton Company; vice president of the Stormont Company at Cornwall, and has the honour and credit of being the founder of the Irish Protestant

Benevolent Society, the parent society of the Dominion. He took a very active part in volunteer affairs for a number of years, but retired in 1866, retaining his rank as captain. He had for many years given a good deal of serious thought to political questions, and at last the desire to have his voice in the direction of public affairs had grown so strong within him, that he offered himself as a candidate for the House of Commons to the people of Montreal West, in 1878, and was the choice of that constituency. He was re-elected at the last general election, and is one of the ablest and most practical members of the House of Commons. Upon questions of finance and commerce, his opinion is entertained with the highest possible respect by gentlemen on both sides of the House. is a true-blue Conservative, and an ardent Mr. Gault friend of the national policy. has always taken a deep interest in all projects for the advancement of his city. He was elected at the times named by large majorities, and his constituency is the most important one in Canada. He is not in fayour of either Imperial federation, independence, or annexation, believing that we possess all the elements of growth, prosperity and permanency, enjoying as we do the finest constitution upon the globe. Mr. Gault is one of those who hopes, with the completion of the Canadian Pacific Railway, that the Dominion shall not require to become a borrower in the future; and that every effort be put forth to fill up our magnificent North-West with an industrious Mr. Gault is a memfarming community. ber of the Church of England, and is very prominent in that body. It was owing greatly to his energy that the large debt of about $40,000 was collected for paying off the debt of Christ Church Cathedral, and he had the satisfaction of seeing the cathedral consecrated during his wardenship. He has been an extensive traveller, having visited the chief cities in Europe and upon the American continent. He married, in 1854, Elizabeth J., only daughter of the late George Browne, Montreal. Mr. Gault's residences are Braehead, Montreal; Rockclyffe, Cacouna; and St. James' Club, Montreal.

Campbell, John, M.D., C.M., McGill University, L.R.C.P., Edinburgh, and Coroner for Huron, Seaforth, Ontario, was born in the township of North Sherbrooke, County of Lanark, on the 10th February, 1839. His father, Duncan Campbell, was a native of Inverary, Argyleshire,

Scotland, and his mother, Mary Munro, was born in Glasgow, but of Argyleshire stock. Duncan Campbell and his wife came to Canada in the spring of 1821, and settled in North Sherbrooke, where four sons and as many daughters were born to them, only two of all being now alive, -the subject of this sketch, and a brother, who is now practising medicine in Missouri, U.S. His mother was a pious woman, and a consistent member of the Presbyterian church. She loved her children, and sought to procure, and did procure, for them all the educational advantages that the time and the place John Campbell attended the afforded. common school in his native place, but was obliged to work upon the farm at the same time that he pursued his studies. He left the farm when twelve years old and entered a dry goods store, kept by James Logie, at St. Mary's, and afterwards was engaged in similar establishments elsewhere, and he was popular as a salesman on account of his courtesy and obliging manners. About the time of the close of the Russian war young Campbell became weary of the life of a clerk, and taking a second-class certificate, began to teach school. In June, 1862, he obtained a second class grade A certificate at the Normal school, Toronto, and proceeded to Usborne, where he took charge of an important school. He afterwards taught in Blenheim, receiving a salary of £100. Into the work of temperance reform the young teacher threw himself with heart and soul. and he soon revealed that he was possessed of unusual ability for platform discussion. For a long time Mr. Campbell had a strong desire to enter the ministry of the Presbyterian church, but was diverted from his purpose by the harsh, unsympathetic attitude of a Highland minister whom he met one evening at the house of one of his school trustees. This worthy divine spoke of prophets, and of great saints in the Scriptures, and completely disheartened the young man. A short time after this occurrence he began to read medicine in the office of Dr. Philip, of Plattsville, now of Brantford. After teaching two years at Blenheim, during which period he devoted all his spare hours to reading medicine, he entered McGill Medical college in 1866, and graduated therefrom in the spring of 1869. He had to leave college towards the end of the second term, owing to a break-down of his health, never over-rugged, brought on by So ill was he with weakness of over-study. the lungs and general prostration, that the professors did not believe that he would

of fo ha

18

cil

vac for

for

bel

par

Boa

Med

on s

scie

mem ber (

and

Fore

Unite

hospi

took sity tl

sician

purpo

Edinb

tour tl

result

have gi

already

than re

style is every li of the

ouch is

ul and

ne editi

he auth

he publi

ormer, b

He is a

dominio

he very

e marri

aughter

ille, Wa

ever return. Plenty of outing, relaxation of study, and a use of milk and cod-liver oil, however, soon brought him to good health again. He was, upon graduation, elected valedictorian by the outgoing class, and was complimented all around for the excellence of the address delivered. At the request of many friends, this address has been republished in our subject's little volume "The Land of Burns." When he had obtained his diploma he went to Seaforth, where he began practice, and has continued there ever since. The very impersonation of energy, possessing great solidity of character and strength of will, difficulties soon gave way, and before long he found himself master of a handsome and profitable practice. He was a member of the common school board in 1879, and a member of the common council in 1881. He resigned the first and vacated the last by going to the old country for the benefit of his health. In all efforts for the improvement of the town Dr. Campbell has taken a leading and an intelligent part. He is a member of the High School Board of Seaforth; a vice president of the M-chanics' Institute, and has been invited on several occasions to deliver lectures on scientific subjects before the institute; a member of the Masonic fraternity, a member of the Independent Order of Oddfellows, and a member of the Canadian Order of Foresters. He has travelled through the United States and Europe, visiting the great hospitals in both countries; and in 1882 took from the Edinburgh Medical University the degree of the Royal College of Physicians. It was while in Europe for the purpose of obtaining the diplom; of the Edinburgh University that he made a loving tour through the land of Burns; and the result of his travels through Scotland we have given to us in the delightful volume already referred to. We cannot do more than refer to this charming production. The style is simple, natural and vivid; evidently every line is a labour of love; for the heart of the writer is in every sentence. buch is light, and the construction graceal and unstrained. We understand that ne edition has been already sold, and that he author contemplates giving another to he public. Dr. Campbell is a staunch Reomer, but he is not a narrow partizin. le is a member of both the Ontario and ominion Medical Associations, and takes e very highest place in his profession. e married on the 14th May, 1872, Jane, aughter of John Laird, a farmer of Haysille, Waterloo county. BB

, was

stock.

Can-

ed in

nd as

y two

tising

other

nem-

oved

and

ional

place

the

was

ame

left

ered

e, at

d in

he

f his

the

ung

erk,

gan

ned

the

l to

im-

in

nto

ung

ul,

sed

on,

ng

bv−

his

ti-

ıet

nis

ke

he

ed

iis

Ьe

at

be

ıe

f

f

Dufferin, Earl of.—The Right Hon. Earl of Dufferin, K.P., K.C.B., K.C.M.G., was born at Florence, in Italy, on the 24th of June, 1826. His father was Price, the fourth Baron of Dufferin and Clandeboye, and his mother the author of "The Irish Emigrant's Lament," beginning "I'm sitting on the stile, Mary," and several other delightful Irish ballads, and a jeu d'esprit, consist ing of pen and ink sketches, illustrative of the supposed adventures of an old maid on her travels in Egypt. executed by herself, were exceedingly good, The illustrations, and the humour of the letter-press was very gentle and delicate. of the Sheridans flows in Lord Differin's veins, and the Honourable Mrs. Caroline Norton was his aunt. the lady who sat at the head of that distinguished circle of sweet singers forty years ago, and whose poetry the quaint Maginn once said was "as fluent, as clear, as lucid, and as warm as the liquid distilling from Our subject was educated at Eton and Christ Church, but left the university without taking a degree. teenth year he succeeded to the title owing to the death of his father. "Irish Emigration and the Tenure of Land in Ireland" was a work by the young peer which commanded wide attention. created an English baron with the title of In 1850 he was Clandeboye. In 1855 Lord John Russell went to Vienna as a British plenipotentiary, and Lord Dufferin accompanied him as This invitation the young nobleman readily accepted. On his return he prepared himself for an extensive yachting tour in northern seas, starting on his voyage in 1856. He kept a circum tantial chronicle of this expedition, giving the greater number of his observations in a series of papers entitled "Letters from High These letters were graphic, forcible and brilliant, and the author proved that he had the seeing eye. In 1860 Lord Dufferin was appointed by Lord Palmerston as a commissioner to Syria on behalf of England. His path here was beset with difficulties, but so well, in the opinion of the government, did he acquit himself, that on his return he was created a knight commander of the bath. He moved the address in the House of Lords on the occasion of the death of the Prince Consort, and his speech on that occasion was remarkable for its happy eloquence. In 1862 his lords hip married Harriet Georgina, eldest daughter of the late Archibald Rowan Hamilton, of Killyleagh Castle, in Down. In 1863 he was appointed under-secretary of state for India, and this position he held till 1866, when he was offered the governorship of Bombay. His mother's health not being good enough to permit her accompanying him, he refused this offer, and accepted instead the under-secretaryship of the War department. In 1868 he became chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, which position he retained till his appointment to the governor-generalship of Canada, on the 22nd of May, 1872. He came to Canada with a name somewhat prominent in literature, for all well-read persons were acquainted with his "Letters from High Latitudes," and he enjoyed a considerable reputation as an orator. "It was remembered by some," says Mr. Stewart, "that he had delivered in the House of Lords one eloquent speech,—a speech full of scholarly grace and beautyon the occasion of his moving the address to Her Majesty in answer to the Speech from the Throne. All England rang with praises of this masterly utterance, and the touching allusions to the loss which the nation had sustained in the death of the Prince Consort, awakened many a responsive throb in the hearts of the people. Scotsmen, too, recollected that Lord Dufferin had delivered a stirring address at the Centenary celebration of Sir Walter Scott's birthday, in Belfast, and his eloquent words in praise of the 'Ariosto of the North,' won for him a fresh host of admirers. beyond what was known of the new-governor-general in a literary way, he was looked upon by the mass of Canadians as an untried man, and information about him was eagerly sought after. Information, however, was scant, for though Lord Dufferin had filled, with a large measure of success, many important trusts in his native land, and had served his sovereign in foreign countries, his labours were of so unostentatious a character that they gained for him little publicity." He was no sooner settled at Rideau Hall than he set out to make himself familiar with the affairs of the country; and in a short while he was able to enter with full knowledge and sympathy into all our affairs. In education, and all other matters of public concern, he took a deep interest; and he visited every portion of the country with his estimable Countess, who was hardly less popular than himself. He had the gift of eloquence of his countrymen, and was the ablest orator in Canada. Shortly after his return to England he was sent to St. Petersburg on a mission of much diplomatic importance. Here his suavity and tact stood him in excellent stead. He was subsequently appointed ambassador to Constantinople, acting through all the Egyptian complications with adroitness and auccess. He is now viceroy of India, and he has ruled there through a trying crisis of the empire's history, revealing in all his acts that suavity and tact which have made his administration everywhere a phenominal success.

McDougall, Colin, Q.C., St. Thomas. ex-M.P. for East Elgin, was born in the township of Aldborough, Elgin county, On. tario, on the 3rd March, 1834. His parents were Lachlan McDougall and Sarah (Ruth. ven) McDougall. Mrs. McDougall was a daughter of Hugh Ruthven, who came to America in 1819, and settled in the township Lachlan McDougall first of Aldborough. came to the United States with his parents, Neil and Margaret McDougall, about the year 1793, when still an infant. Neil Mc-Dougall became a merchant in New York. and continued in business until the time of the epidemic of cholera, early in the present His last resting-place is in the century. old Dutch burying-ground, which was situated on the corner of Broadway and Wall streets, New York. After his death, his son, Lachlan McDougall removed to the resiidence of an uncle, Neil McKinnon, a wine merchant of New York, where he remained until he was about sixteen years of age, and under whom he obtained an excellent edu-He then left his uncle and resolved cation. to begin life for himself, and accordingly removed to the centre of the State of New York, in the vicinity of the Mohawk valley, where he remained for a time, engaging in various kinds of business, principally, however, school-teaching and the lumber trade. In 1816, he settled in the neighbourhood of Chippawa, Canada, but he shortly afterwards moved to the township of Aldborough, Elgin county, in the section known as the Scotch settlement; and taking up land, turned his attention to farming. Here the subject of this sketch was born. Mr. McDougall remained on the farm until his death, in 1872. Mrs. McDougall died in 1875. Colin McDougall received first a common school education, under the late Donald Currie, a gentleman of much learning and a very kindly heart, and Mr. McLachlin, now registrar of Elgin county. He remained under diffierent tutors till the age of twenty three, when he entered mercantile life, and in this he continued until he had reached Repairing then to his twenty-sixth year. Michigan, he entered the University of Am stud barr this o to th the la that then gins, goode uated he at entere late M ued for solved ioined these to busines dissolve ertson. nes, un & Robe townshi county. township the follo elected, a the same held no p chosen to gin in the zealous, a chamber, tional pol in 1878. his entire there isthat he azain. A Cochrane Oddfellow and has be church at S ried, in 18 late Alexan sister of D vania, U.S.

Arb

whe:

eldest dying

Hagger

was born at year 1822.

Barbara (Lo
gert, senior,
rears, a merc,
ness in Pai
ame to Cann lton, Ontario
iter his arri

Arbor, where he took a course of two years, when he returned to Canada and began the study of law in the office of C. D. Paul, barrister, at St. Thomas. He remained in this office for three years, and then removed to the City of Toronto, entering the office of the late Judge Mackenzie, and studied under that eminent lawyer for two years. He then entered the office of Thomas Hodgins, Q.C., now master-in-ordinary at Osgoode Hall, Toronto, and from here graduated in 1869. On being called to the bar, he at once went to St. Thomas, where he entered into a legal partnership with the late Mr. Helliwell, which association continned for two years. Mr. McDougall now resolved to practice alone; but in 1874 he joined with J. H. Coyne in partnership, these two gentlemen doing a very satisfactory business together for six years, when they dissolved. In 1884, he joined J. S. Robertson, and this partnership still continues, under the firm name of McDougall & Robertson. In 1855, he was appointed township auditor of Aldborough, Elgin county. In 1857 he was elected reeve of the township, and again in 1858, but resigned the following year. In 1860, he was again elected, and re-elected in 1861, resigning in the same year. From this time forward he held no public office until 1874, when he was chosen to represent the Riding of East Elgin in the House of Commons. He was a zealous, active and efficient member in that chamber, but being an opponent of the national policy, he was defeated with his party in 1878. Since that time he has devoted his entire attention to his profession, though there is some expectation and much hope that he may at some day take the field again. Mr. McDougall is president of the Cochrane Manufacturing Company; is an Oddfellow of Lodge No. 76, St. Thomas; and has been an elder of the Presbyterian church at St. Thomas since 1877. He married, in 1866, Catherine, daughter of the late Alexander Rose, of St. Thomas, and sister of Dr. Rose, of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, U.S. He has had three children, the eldest dying when an infant.

an-

ian

ess.

has

the

ects

his

nal

nts

th-

hip

ts, the Icck, of ent the Haggert, John, Brampton, Ontario, was born at Eldersley, near Paisley, in the year 1822. His parents were Robert and Barbara (Loughead) Haggert. Mr. Haggert, senior, carried on, for a number of years, a mercantile and manufacturing busness in Paisley, Scotland. The family ame to Canada in 1842, settling in Hamlton, Ontario, where Mr. Haggert, shortly fier his arrival, died, he having caught a severe cold on board ship on his way out. Mrs. Haggert died in 1873, leaving behind a family of ten, the subject of this sketch being the third eldest. John Haggert received a sound English education in Scot-At the age of eighteen he left his native land for America, in company with his brother, Robert, who some time afterwards died at Kingston. Arriving in New York, he apprenticed himself to Dunham & Co., of that city, with the object of learning the engineering business. He remained in New York until 1842, when he came to Canada, settling in Hamilton, where he practised his profession for about three years. He then removed to Beamsville, and engaged in the manufacture of agricultural implements. In 1849, he removed to Brampton, and there carried on the same business. He was soon afterwards joined by his two brothers, James and William Haggert, the partnership bearing the name of Haggert Bros., until 1866, when it was dissolved. Mr. Haggert continued the business alone until 1870, when he admitted as partner, R. Cochrane, of Fingal, Elgin, the firm still retaining the old designation of Haggert Bros. This partnership lasted for about ten years; when, in 1880, it was converted into a joint stock company, under the name of the Haggert Bros. Manufacturing Co., of which the subject of this sketch was elected president, and he retains that position to the present time. The establishment does one of the most extensive trades in Canada, its business extending throughout the entire Dominion. They employ on an average from 100 to 150 hands, manufacturing all kinds of agricultural implements, consisting of thrashing machines, portable engines, and stoves in great variety. Mr. Haggert has been a member of the school board of Brampton for many years; and was a member of the village council for a considerable period. Upon the incorporation of the place as a town he was elected the first mayor (1874), and was re-elected for 1875, 1876, and 1877, when he retired owing to the demands of business upon his attention. Mr. Haggert is president of the Haggert Manufacturing Company, and was president of the Mechanics' Institute for a number of years. has been president of the Reform Association of the County of Peel for years; and notwithstanding the fact that he is a sound Liberal, he is a firm advocate of a national policy. During 1873, in company with Mrs. Haggert, he paid a visit to Great Britain and the Continent, visiting all the

He married, cities and places of interest. on the 8th of July, 1851, Catharine, daughter of John and Margaret Cochrane, of Bar Head, Scotland, who came to Canada in 1842, settling in the County of Grey, near Durham. This worthy couple are still living in the old homestead at an advanced age, Mr. Cochrane being ninety and Mrs. Cochrane about eighty-eight. They are still active, and both may yet see several years. Mr. Haggert has a family of four, three boys and one girl. Robert Haggert, the eldest son, is manager of the works; the other two are still at school. If industry, business insight, and the strictest honour, be important factors in success, then it is no wonder Mr. Haggert has been successful in arriving at the position he now holds.

Webb, William, Streetsville, Ontario, was born in the town of Somersham, Huntingdonshire, England, in 1833. His father, William Webb, was a well-known tenant farmer of that place, and his mother was Elizabeth, daughter of William Balinger, a gentleman of prominent family in Cambridgeshire. There was a family of seven children by this marriage, and the subject of this sketch was the third eldest. Mrs. Webb died in 1882, but Mr. Webb still survives, being now in his eighty-second year. William Webb received a limited English education at the schools of his native place; and when he attained his sixteenth year entered the employ of Robert Fletcher (Quaker), of Dewsbury, Yorkshire, a dealer in groceries. He remained in the employ of this man for a period of five years, when he entered the firm of Daniel Lee, merchant grocer. His ambition, however, was not satisfied with these pursuits, and as there came every now and again across the water stories of the vast and attractive opportunity open to ambition in the Canadian colonies, Mr. Webb resolved to try his fortune in that distant land. In 1857 he set sail, and in due time landed in Toronto, where he remained for only a short period. He then proceeded to Brampton, and entered the employ of W. P. Lacey, of that place; and there remained till 1859, when he joined T. G. Jackson, of Stanley's Mills, now of Manitoba. He maintained his connection with him till 1862, and in the following year he went to Streetsville, there taking charge of the general store belonging to Gooderham & Worts. He remained in the employ of this firm for a period of sixteen years, when he bought out the establishment, and took in G. H. Falconer, bookkeeper of the firm, as partner; and this valuable business was known in 1883 as that of Webb and Falconer. In the last-named year the partnership was dissolved, and the business has since been carried on by the subject of this sketch. Mr. Webb has found some time to devote to the affairs of education and of the municipality. During the years 1881, 1882, 1884, and 1885, he has been a councillor of the village; and has been for the past three years chairman of the High School board, having served altogether for nine years in that body. Mr. Webb is a shareholder in the York Farmers' Colonization Company of the North-West; and of the Navy Island Fruit-growing Association, and is a member of the syndicate which purchased the Gooderham & Worts milling property at Streetsville. Mr. Webb is secretary and treasurer of lodge No. 356, River Park, of Freemasons, and is also a member of St. John's lodge, Toronto. In politics our subject has always been a Conservative, and has never found reason for changing the faith that is within him. He was brought up in the Congregational church, but afterwards became a Methodist, which faith he still professes. He is a trustee of the Streetsville church; is a member of the quarterly board, and has been superintendent of the Sabbath-school for fourteen years. He has been likewise secretary and treasurer of the church for an equal period, and holds that office now. He married, on the 4th of October, 1865, Mary Jane, daughter of the late James Anderson, of Orangeville, Ontario. Mr. Anderson died in 1879. The business of Mr. Webb is a prosperous one, for which condition it is not a little indebted to the integrity, the ability, and the industry of its proprietor.

Radcliffe, Hon. Thomas, Colonel, was born at Castle Coote, in the County of Roscommon, Ireland, on the 17th April, He was the eldest son of the kev. Thomas Radcliffe, rector of St. Paul's, Dublin, and Clonmethon, County Dublin; also prebend of St. Patrick's Cathedral and sub-dean; and of his wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Mitchell, of Castle Strange, in the County Roscommon. The family is of the splendid lineage of the Radeliffes of Waldstein Waters, (the Anglo-Saxon name for Derwent Waters, now called Walla The family is traced back to 1014 The first of the family in the stock table is Francis Radelyffe, first earl of the elder lineage of Derwentwater, who was born in 1624. He married Catherine of Meldone The Canadian family of Radcliffes, we may ske lin, lieu thro gage actio amai Toul was į Was 1 He w reduc gaged skirm woun emigr hoped his 11 townsl trict; a justi of the ship. of 1837 no mor in that cannot letters : estimate lant offic To Colo: Fron

883

ces

son

Saz

£20

SIR,—I Lieutenar of your de high sense lant men 1 schooner A their guns. of war. T credit upor proves that quired onl readiness to protect thei less invade militia in ot honour to b

To Col. RA

Sir,—I am Lieutenant-G f your desp say, before dismissing the question of ancestry, is directly descended from William. son of the second earl. The family is of Saxon origin, and the estates are worth The subject of this £200,000 per annum. sketch was educated at Trinity College, Dublin, joined the army in 1811, and served as lieutenant in the 27th Regiment of Foot throughout the Peninsular war. He was engaged, under Wellington, in several general actions, among which may be mentioned Salamanca, Vittoria, the Pyrenees, Nivelle, and Toulouse. He also served in America, and was present at the battle of Plattsburg; and was with the army of occupation in France. He was placed upon the half-pay list on the reduction of the army in 1816. He was engaged in twelve pitched battles, beside many skirmishes, and received three severe wounds. In 1832, he sold his half-pay and emigrated to Upper Canada, where he hoped to be the better able to provide for his numerous family. He settled in the township of Adelaide, in the London district; was appointed, by Sir John Colborne. a justice of the peace, and to the command of the regiment of militia raised in the township. Upon the breaking out of the revolt of 1837, he was called upon, and there was no more intrepid, valuable, and loyal officer in that period than Colonel Radcliffe. We cannot do better than publish here certain letters from headquarters, for they show the estimate put upon the services of this gallant officer :-

nowr

r. In

was

heen

etch.

evote

hınni-1884.

f the

three

oard,

ars in

ler in

pany

Navy

is a

hased

perty

and

k, of f St.

our

and

the

ught

fter-

h he

eets-

terly

the

has

the

that

ı of

the

On-

The

one,

oted

dus-

nel,

7 0

bril,

11'8,

and ghTo COLONEL RADCLIFFE, Commanding Western Frontier, Amherstburg:

GOVERNMENT HOUSE, 25th Jan., 1838.

SIR.-I am commanded by His Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor to acknowledge the receipt of your despatch of the — inst., and to express his high sense of your conduct, and that of the gallant men under your command, in capturing the chooner Anne, in the service of the pirates, their guns, and a large quantity of the munitions of war. This gallant exploit reflects the highest credit upon those employed on the occasion, and proves that the militia of the western district required only an opportunity to show the same readiness to defend the Queen's government, and protect their homes from the depredations of lawss invaders, which has been exhibited by the militia in other parts of the province. I have the bonour to be, sir, your obedient servant,

JAS. M. STRACHAN, Military Secretary.

To Col. RADCLIFFE, Amherstburg.

GOVERNMENT HOUSE, TOBONTO, February 3rd, 1838.

SIR,-I am commanded by His Excellency the leutenant-Governor to acknowledge the receipt your despatch of the 8th January, and to say that he is much obliged to you for the information it contains. Your arrangements with respect to the company of picked men and the cavalry which you have sent to observe Point au Pelee Island, are entirely satisfactory to His Excellency; and I am further desired to say, that in allowing the steamboat to winter at Amherstburg, and the passing up of American troops, you have acted exactly as he could have wished. His Excellency desires me, again, to thank you for the zealous exertions which you have made for the public service, during the period of your command. I have the honour to be, sir, your obedient servant, J. M. STRACHAN, Lt.-Col.

Military Secretary.

To Colonel Radcliffe, Commanding at Amherstburg.

The following is a copy of a report made by Colonel Radcliffe, in his capacity as offi-cer commanding the Western Rangers:—

To HIS EXCELLENCY MAJOR-GENERAL SIR GEORGE ARTHUR, K.C. B., etc., etc., Lieutenant-Governor of Upper Canada.

May it please Your Excellency :

On the 9th day of January last, the militia and volunteer troops under my command at Malden, in the western district, captured the following prize, which was part of an expedition that attacked Amherstburg, under the command of the prisoners Sutherland and the men now in confinement at Toronto:—A schooner called The Anne, of Detroit; 398 cartridge boxes; 220 bayonet belts; 168 cartridge box belts; 247 bayonet scabbards: 299 bayonets; 300 muskets; 106 knap-sacks; 10 kegs gunpowder; 2 bags of shot, weighing fifty pounds; 1 nine-pounder and 2 six-pounders (iron guns); 12 bullet moulds; half a keg of bullets; aud 60 pounds of lead; a return of which I duly made to Sir Francis Bond Head (your Excellency's predecessor) at the time. also captured on board the schooner a rebel from the London district named Anderson, for whom a reward of £100 was affered by Sir Francis immediately after the rebellion broke out. Anderson was severely wounded at the taking of the schooner, and he died on the following day. I beg leave to submit to Your Excellency that we are entitled to the reward offered for Anderson, and to the prize money at which the schooner and articles above mentioned may be valued; and I respectfully request that Your Excellency will be pleased to order a valuation of the whole to be made, and the proceeds to be divided among the captors. sel, etc., are in the hands of the authorities at this port. I have the honour to be Your Excellency's faithful servant,
THOMAS RADCLIFFF,
Col. Western Rangers,

Late Col. commanding W. D. frontier. Amherstburg, 17th April, 1838.

After the suppression of the rebellion of 1837-8, Colonel Radcliffe was appointed a member of the Legislative Council, and this position he retained until his death at Amherst Island in 1841. He left a widow and seven children. One of this family is Richard Radcliffe, of Goderich, a sketch of whose career appears in this volume; and another was the late Stephen Radcliffe, who for a number of years ably filled the position of City Clerk of Toronto. It may justly be said that in the whole of Canada there was not another officer whose promptitude and military skill had done more towards breaking the back of the rebellion than Colonel Radcliffe.

Barber, Major John Roaf, was born in the village of Georgetown, on the 5th July, 1841. His parents were James Barber and Hannah Patrick, who were married in the township of Flamboro', County Wentworth. Mrs. Barber died in 1854, and James Barber married again, Jessie Hope, of Jedburgh, Scotland, daughter of Captain Hope, an officer of the British army. This lady died in 1883. By the first marriage there were four children, (the subject of this sketch being the second eldest); and by the second, two. Mr. Barber died in May, 1880, and was one of the most prominent, deserving, and highly respected inhabitants of western Ontario. Of him Mr. Davin wrote in "The Irishman in Canada":--" He has always been of a retiring disposition, taking little or no part in political conventions or meetings of a like character, and consequently is less known to the public than the other members of the family. There is no name, however, which stands so high for commercial integrity or social and moral worth, in the County of Halton, as that of James Barber." John Roaf Barber received a careful early educational training, continuing his studies at the Streetsville Grammar school, at the Georgetown Collegiate Institute, and concluding his course under the late Charles Dade, M.A. It had been the intention of Mr. Barber to enter the University of Toronto, but the destruction by fire of the Woollen Mills at Streetsville, in which his father was interested, changed the course of his life from professional to mercantile pursuits. He entered the office of his father, intending only to remain there until the mills were rebuilt, but he never returned to college. He shewed great aptitude for business, and was soon able to take charge of the financial affairs of the concern, and this he did until the Shortly after this death of his father. event, he came into possession of the Paper Mills and other property at Georgetown; and under his management these mills have been remodelled and enlarged to double their former capacity, and have now an output of four tons of paper a day. In addition to the Georgetown property, Mr. Barber owns considerable in Toronto.

Mr. Barber was gazetted, in 1863, ensign of the Georgetown Light Infantry, now No. 3, 20th Lorne Rifles; and in 1866 was appointed captain. During the Fenian raid he was stationed at the Suspension Bridge, which was considered a very important post. In 1876 he was gazetted major. Mr. Barber has also tried his hand at local politics, and it is scarcely necessary to say that here, as in the other spheres, he has been successful. In 1865 he was elected reeve of the village of Georgetown, and retained the position for ten years. In 1875 he retired, and accepted a seat in the council, from which board he has only been absent In 1882 he was again one or two years. reeve of Georgetown, and this year (1885) is warden for the County of Halton. Mr. Barber has been president of the Mechanics' Institute since 1880; is the largest stockholder in the Toronto Paper Mills of Cornwall, Ontario, and has been president of the same since its commencement in 1880, he having been the chief organizer of this enterprise. He is also president of the Barber & Ellis Company, wholesale stationers and envelope manufacturers, Toronto, and one of the largest manufacturers of this class of goods in the Dominion. He is a director of the Empress Sewing Machine Company, of Toronto; of the Empress Sewing Machine Company, of Chicago; and a director of the Star Hosiery Manufacturing Company, of Georgetown He is a Freemason, and belongs to Credit lodge, No. 219, and is past master in that body. Mr. Barber has always voted with the Reform party, though at the same time a thorough protectionist. His religious views are those of the Congregational denomination. Mr. Barber married, in January, 1868, Mary, daughter of Francis Barclay, registrar of Halton, and by this lady has five children living, the sons being Francis James, Charles Herbert, and Rene Though comparatively a young Raoul. man, Mr. Barber is now amongst the oldest members of the magistracy in the County of Halton.

₩ te

af

in lat

ear

bu

byt dre

ing a ci

teer

Tord

on f

eldes

clerk

Cana

Smal

Crow

cound

Gover

Small

Toron

and he

Bath,

our su

the Ho

Upper

taxing

in 1858

age of

when h

Mowat.

been al

more se

eiis bew

toward one sup

preferen

just and

Looking

the friend

is large,

him the n

Liberal-C

acceded to

McIntyre, John, Q.C., was born in Kingston, Ontario, on the 21st of March He was educated in the Kingston preparatory school, under the Rev. Robert Campbell, M.A., now of Montreal; matrice lated in Queen's University, Kingston, in October, 1858; and graduated in April 1861, taking his B.A. degree. He was subsequently advanced to the degree of MA in the same university. Mr. McIntro commenced the study of law in 1861, in the office of Sir John A. Macdonald at Kingston, where he remained for about two years, ard completed his course in the office of Sir Alexander Campbell. He was called to the bar in 1865, and was created Q.C. in 1881.

Mr. McIntyre was president of St. Andrew's Society, Kingston, in 1874; and for several years was elected to the office of president of the Alma Mater Society, Queen's University, to which position he was chosen after some severe contests. He was an alderman of Kingston for about ten years, and was elected mayor of that city in 1878, defeating C. F. Gildersleeve, after a very exciting fight, an unusually large vote having been polled. He married, in 1876, Mrs. Macpherson, widow of the late James Macpherson of Kingston. earlier life, Mr. McIntyre was a Methodist, but he is now in connection with the Presbyterian church, and a member of St. Andrew's, Kingston. As a lawyer, his standing is the highest, and as a citizen and a civic politician, he is held in exalted esteem by the people of his native city.

ensign

y, now

 $866~\mathrm{was}$

Fenian

pension impor-

major.

at local

to say

he has

d reeve

etained

he re-

ouncil,

absent

again

(1885)

hanics'

stock.

Corn-

of the 30, he

f this

of the e sta-

s, To-

turers

n. He

g Ma-

Em-

Chi-

osiery

town.

Predit

that

with

time

gious

l de-anu.

Bar-

lady:

eing

Rene

ung

dest

nty

Mr.

Small, John, Toronto, M.P. for East Toronto, was born in the township of York, on the 8th of October, 1831. eldest son of the late Charles Coxwell Small, He is the clerk of the Crown and Pleas for Upper Canada, and grandson of the late Major Small, who came to Canada as clerk of the Crown and Pleas, and clerk of the Executive council, from Circnester, England, with Governor Simcoe, in 1797. Charles Coxwell Small was born in the town of York, now Toronto, on the 31st of December, 1801, and he married Frances Elizabeth Innes, of Bath, England, who became the mother of our subject. John Small was educated at the Home District Grammar school, and at Upper Canada college. taxing officer of the Court of Queen's Bench He was appointed in 1855, and held this position till the passage of the Ontario Judicature Act in 1881, when he was relieved of his duties by Mr. Mowat. The cause of the removal, it has been alleged by some people, was nothing more serious than the fact that Mr. Small was suspected of having strong leanings toward the conservative party, though no one supposed, or would suppose, that this preference in any way interfered with the just and thorough discharge of his duty. Looking upon the removal as persecution, the friends of Mr. Small, and their number is large, rallied around him, and offered him the nomination for East Toronto in the Liberal-Conservative interest. acceded to the wishes of his friends, resigned his clerkship at Osgoode Hall (June, 1882) entered the field, and defeated his opponent, Thomas Thompson, a prominent merchant, by 497 votes. Upon the whole, his removal from office was a favour in disguise, else Mr. Small might have been content to remain all his life in his official position, and his constituency would have missed the service of a man of high social character, and much influence and industry in the House of Commons. Mr. Small is a member of the Episcopal church, and is a prominent member of one of the city congregations. He married, on the 15th of May, 1856, Susan Margaret, eldest daughter of James Boulton, barrister, Toronto. Before entering the larger public sphere, Mr. Small represented St. Lawerence ward as alderman in the city council for the years 1877, 1878 Personally and publicly, the character of Mr. Small is the highest, and he is extremely popular among his support-We wish him much prosperity in his parliamentary career.

McGuin, John Bell, Napanee, Clerk of the County Court, Deputy-clerk of the Crown and Pleas, and Registrar of the Surrogate Court for the Counties of Lennox and Addington, was born in the township of Ernestown, in the County of Lennox, on the 1st March, 1825. son of John McGuin, who held an ensign's commission in the 1st regiment Addington militia, under Colonel William Johnson, his appointment bearing date October 3rd, 1816, and who, on 1st July, 1822, was promoted to a captaincy in the same regiment, under Colonel Matthew Clark. Captain McGuin was a son of Henry McGuin, a U. E. loyalist, and his mother Elizabeth Bell, who emigrated to Canada after the close of the war, belonged to similar stock. The worthy subject of this sketch attended the common schools, and afterwards the Normal school, leaving the latter institution in October. In December of the same year, he joined the teaching staff of the Newburgh Academy, having charge, in the model department, of English and mathematics, and continued to teach in this institution for a period of eleven years and nine months. He held a first-class grade A certificate from the County Educational Board, as the Normal school did not at this time issue certificates. From 1862 to 1865 Mr. McGuin was chairman of the Board of Public Instruction for the united Counties of Frontenac, Lennox and Addington; was appointed clerk of the First Division Court in Bath, in August, 1860, and clerk of the County Court, and deputy-clerk of the Crown and Pleas etc., in September, 1864. These offices he still holds, with credit to himself, and to the entire satisfaction of the community. There is likewise to be added to our subject's connection with schools the trusteeship for two years on the Napanee board. He was president and teacher in the Mechanics' Institute for two years, giving during that time instruction in writing, correspondence, in book-keeping, and in other branches proper to a mercantile or business career. He is a Freemason of excellent standing, having been a member of Maple Leaf lodge, No. 119, since 1864. From political strife, whether municipal, provincial or federal, he has always held aloof. He was bred in the Presbyterian faith, but in 1852 joined the Church of England, and is now a low churchman in that communion. He married in 1852, Margaret Hope, but she died in 1861, leaving a son and a daughter. He married again on May 1st, 1867, Marion, daughter of the Rev. Canon Bleasdell, rector of Trenton, and there is issue one son. Mr. McGuin obtained, on the 28th June, 1858, a civil service certificate under the Act of 20th Victoria, chapter 24. In social life Mr. McGuin is highly esteemed, and modesty is not one of the least virtues that adorn his character.

Moss, Thomas, late Chief Justice of Ontario, was born at Cobourg, on the 20th of August, 1836. He was a son of the late John Moss, who at the time of his son's birth, carried on the business of a brewer at Cobourg, and who subsequently removed to Toronto and resided there till his death. The boy destined to become so distinguished received his early educational training in the town of Cobourg; but he apparently owed the largest intellectual debt to his paternal grandfather, a gentleman of much culture. It was the delight of his old age to instruct his grandson, (whose mental alertness when a mere child caused the admiring surprise of friends), in English and Latin grammar, history, arithmetic, and the ordinary branches of education. In due time the subject of our sketch entered Upper Canada College, and here distinguished himself by untiring industry, by unusual swiftness of comprehension, and by the soundness of his understanding; and when he left this institution, it was as a distinguished prizeman. "Upper Canada College," says a late lamented writer, "had a reputation for severity in those days, and more than one of the masters had a reputation for not spoiling the child by sparing the rod. At any rate the future judge acquired in the halls of the college, a sound basis of learning, and what is better, systematic habits of studious industry. When he left the institution, bearing off with him the Govenor-General's prize, he was the most popular, as well as the best mentally equipped pupil, who ever left the highest form." In 1854, he entered the University of Toronto, receiving the first scholarship in the depart. ments of classics and mathematics. His career here was one splendid triumph, and when graduating he took no less than three gold medals, for classics, mathematics and modern languages, respectively. Those who were classmates of this gifted under graduate yet dwell with emotion on the generous and manly qualities of their departed friend. Upon concluding his course the young graduate entered the office of Crooks & The same conscientious study, Cameron. the same tireless industry, the same great intellectual grasp, that had characterized him in his collegiate and university career, were manifested again. A dissolution of the firm of Crooks & Cameron took place some time afterwards, but Mr. Moss remained with Hector Cameron, becoming a partner with that gentleman upon his admission to the bar, in 1861. He afterwards entered into partnership with the Honourable James Patton, and Mr. (now Judge) Osler; and subsequently with the late Chief Justice Harrison, the firm being known as Harrison, Osler & Moss. In 1871, he was appointed Equity lecturer for the Law Society; in 1872, he was created, by Sir John Macdonald, a Q.C.; and in the same year declined the offer of a vice-chancellorship. While his greatest triumphs were won at the equity bar, yet he was a well-known and successful counsel in the courts of common law. After repeated solicitations he, in 1873, determined to enter on a public career, and in that year he was elected to the House of Commons for West Toronto, and was re-elected in 1874. Some time after he had achieved this victory, he was appointed a judge of the Court of Appeal, and bade adieu to parliamentary life forever. He became president of the court on the death of Chief Justice Draper, and chief justice of Ontario on the demise of Chief Justice Har-The whole promise of his life, as student and as practitioner, burst into fruition when he attained, though only in his forty-first year. the most exalted position attainable by a member of the legal profession. The wonderful activity of his mind, and the vastness of the work which he pi ju la he hi

an

ed

the Mr

frie

ver

live

leag

to p

day

prof

men

deat

days

the c

is per

a few

moth

guish

prime

openi

whom

tion.

Each

ishable

in the

which

judicia

me hav

tion to

where .

ed judg

and mu

ity, ease

with de

tion, wit

livered;

quaintan

ergy wit

requiring

the rising

accomplished began to tell upon his constitution, and in November, 1880, he was advised to seek the soothing climate of the south of France. But climate could not eradicate the fatal seeds sown in his health: and, far away from most of his friends and from the country so proud of his talents, he died at Nice, on the 4th January, 1881. "Few British judges," says the writer already alluded to, "can boast within the narrow limits of six years, a range of judicial experience so varied in character, or of a discharge of public duty, more thoroughly painstaking and conscientious. The chief instice at once struck the key-note of the case before him; yet he did not improvise law for the occasion. Having got at the heart of the mystery, he at once fortified himself by authorities which he examined and appraised in the most delicately adjusted intellectual balance." At the opening of the January sittings of the Court of Appeal. Mr. Justice Burton, one of his most intimate friends, in adjourning the court, out of reverence for the memory of the dead, delivered the following address: "My colleagues agree with me that it is not fitting to proceed with the ordinary duties of the day without some allusion to the loss the profession, the public, and especially the members of this court, have sustained by the death of the eminent judge who but a few days since filled the position of president of the court and Chief Justice of Ontario. It is perhaps a singular coincidence that within a few weeks death has robbed this and the mother country of two of the most distinguished judges, both of them men in the prime of life, to whom there appeared to be opening a brilliant future, and as to each of whom I may say, I think without exaggeration, a national loss has been sustained. Each of them, however, has left an imperishable monument of his learning and ability in the reports of their published judgments, which may well be referred to as models of judicial style. Many of those who now hear me have listened with pleasure and admiration to the oral judgments delivered from where I am now sitting by the distinguished judge whose death we are now deploring, and must have been struck with the simplicity, ease, and grace of manner, combined with depth of thought and elegance of diction, with which those utterances were delivered; but few beyond his intimate acquaintances were aware of the untiring energy with which he investigated those cases requiring more careful preparation, or that the rising sun has occasionally found him

n the

learn-

bits of

insti-

enorlar, as

oupil.

1854,

o, re-

part-

His

and

three

and

who

mate

and

end.

ung s & idy,

reat

zed

eer,

of

ace

reing

ad-

rds

ge) ief

still engaged in examining and verifying the authorities upon which he proposed to base his decisions. His loss is too recent, and my appreciation of it too keen, to permit me to make more than a passing reference to his personal and social qualities. 'To know him was to love him.' My heart is too full for me to venture to say more. We may, one and all of us, whether on the bench, at the bar, or the youngest student entering for the first time the portals of the profession. safely adopt him as our model, combining as he did in his own person the kind and courteous gentleman, the brilliant and able advocate, the upright and impartial judge. I wish that I had the command of language to do justice to his many virtues and his great intellectual gifts; but I yield to none of his numerous friends in admiration of his character and in tender and affectionate regard for his memory." Amidst the ceaseless labour of Mr. Moss's professional and judicial career, he was never insensible to the claims of the cause of higher education; and for the last seven years of his life, as vice-chancellor of his alma mater, the University of Toronto, he rendered eminent services in this direction-services recognised and kept in remembrance by the establishment, since his demise, by the friends and alumni of that institution, of a scholarship which bears his name. In July, 1863, Mr. Moss married Amy, eldest daughter of the late Honourable Robert Baldwin Sullivan.

Stanton, George, M.D., C.M., M.C., P.S.O., Simcoe, Ontario, was born in the town of Simcoe, April 6th, 1847. His parents were Francis Gore and Mary Robertson, the maiden name of his mother being Geddes. She was a daughter of Andrew Geddes, who came to Canada from Scotland in 1810, and settled in Elora, Wellington county, of which he was appointed registrar. This position he retained until his death, in 1863. Mrs. Stanton died in 1883. Our subject's grandfather, William Henry Stanton, came to Canada, as midshipman in one of King George's ships, about 1790. He was stationed at Amherstburg, and at the time of his death was deputy assistant commissary general. The father of George Stanton commenced the study of law in 1831. After admission to the bar, he removed to Hamilton, where he commenced the practice of his profession. He remained in that city till 1846, when he removed to Simcoe, where he continued to practice. He soon entered into partnership with David Tisdale, and this association continued till 1864, when

Mr. Stanton received the appointment of deputy judge for the County of Norfolk. Six years later he retired. He had a family of five children, the only surviving one being the subject of this memoir. Three died in infancy, and another, Francis Anna, married G. W. Kent, by whom she had a son and daughter. She is also dead. George Stanton was instructed by private tuition, and afterwards entered the Grammar school of Simcoe, where he remained till he reached his seventeenth year. then repaired to Montreal, and entered the medical department of McGill University, In 1868 he graduated with his M.D.C.M. degree, taking honours. He then returned to Simcoe, where he began the practice of his profession; and in this town he has practiced since. Dr. Stanton was one of the members of the old Fenwick rifles, commanded by Captain, now Colonel, Tisdale, and afterwards a lieutenant in No. 6 Company, 39th battalion. In 1877 he was appointed coroner for the County of Norfolk. He is a Freemason, and an adherent of the Church of England. Whenever he interests himself in politics, his exertions are upon the side of the Reform party. He married, on the 19th August, 1874, Sarah Jane, daughter of the late George Culver, of the township of Woodhouse, yeoman, and one of the oldest residents of the county. Geo. Culver was the first white child born in the town of Simcoe. The fruit of our subject's union is two children, one having died in We may add that, after graduing, he practised for a time with Dr. Clarke, now sheriff, at Prince Arthur's Landing. He also went to New Brunswick, where he acted for eighteen months upon the engineering staff of the Intercolonial Railway. Dr. Stanton is energetic in action, and said to be very learned and skilful in his profession.

Paint, Henry Nicholas, J.P., M.P. for Richmond, Port Hawkesbury, N.S., was born on the 10th of April, 1830, at Belle Vue, Strait of Canso, Cape Breton. family from which Mr. Paint has sprung is of Norman origin, having settled in the Island of Guernsey about the year 1212, and were prominent in the time of Edward III., in His father was Nicholas Paint, J.P. for the whole island of Cape Breton, and his mother was Mary LeMessurier, also of the Island of Guernsey. The father of Henry Nicholas Paint came to the colonies in 1816, settling at Arichat, Nova Scotia, representing the house of Janvrin & Co., of London and Jersey. Our subject received private tuition in his early years, was then sent to the Grammar school at Guernsey, returning home and completing his studies at Wolfville Academy, Nova Scotia. His studies were of the usual order belonging to the college course, but he devoted himself especially to English, French, and Latin. From 1853 to 1869 he was a lieutenant-captain of militia, but was obliged, owing to the pressure of his other affairs, to sever his connection. He is a gentleman of a wide public spirit, and remarkable for his enterprise. He has been prominently connected with two marine railways for repairing ships, at the Strait of Canso and North Sydney, still in operation, and has been secretary and treasurer in both for twenty-six years; is engaged in a commission and insurance agency, and from early years has given much serious and careful attention to political questions. He married, on the 17th March, 1856, at Halifax, Christina St. Clair. youngest daughter of the late Donald Mc-Vean, of Oban, and afterwards of Islay, Scotland. There has been issue two daughters and one son, deceased. Both daughters are married and residing in England. Mr. Paint, we may add, has been engaged in large ship-building enterprises, and has owned and sailed ships in many portions of the globe. He has been largely interested in coal mines, and opened up the celebrated Victoria mines at Sydney, C.B. He is likewise connected with several railroads. He was first returned to parliament at the last general election; and he gives a steady support to Sir John A. Macdonald. We can say with justice that Mr. Paint bids fair to be one of the most useful members in the House of Commons.

pl sh ne M tv th

ue

es M 3

ap Cope Min, Ca loo

th

an

cil.

of 187 ho

lad

sul

his

rou

rea

and

age

McFadden, William Henry, B.A., LL.B., Brampton, was born in the town of Picton, Prince Edward county, Ontario. in 1851. He is a son of the Reverend William McFadden, by Susan, daughter of the late Edward Wilson, Armagh, Ireland, who came to the British colonies in 1817, and settled in the City of Kingston. The Rev. William McFadden, was born in the County of Armagh, Ireland, and came to this country with his father about 1815, settling in the County of Leeds, where he engaged in farming. Our subject's grandfather had a family of thirteen children, and one of them, William, already alluded to, entered the ministry of the Wesleyan church in 1832, wherein he laboured until 1872, when he was superannuated. He died in the town of Brampton, on the 7th of December, 1885; and Mrs. McFadden died in 1872. William Henry McFadden was an only son of this union. He received a very thorough early educational training, entering Victoria College, Coourg, at the age of sixteen. At nineteen he graduated B.A., and at twenty-one received his LL.B. Having a strong inclination for the study of the law, he was enrolled in the Law Society at Toronto, and afterwards entered the office of the late John Coyne, M.P.P., Brampton, where he remained for two and a half years, when he proceeded to Toronto, and entered the office of Mowat, McLennan & Downey, of that city. Here he remained about sixteen months, when, in Michaelmas term, 1874, he was called to the bar, and admitted as After his call to the bar he went to Goderich, and entered into partnership with M. C. Cameron, M.P., of that place, and the new firm bore the style of Cameron & McFadden, which partnership lasted for three years. After the dissolution took place, Mr. McFadden entered into partnership with S. Malcomson, of Goderich, the new firm being known as Malcomson & McFadden, and which association lasted for two years. Our subject then removed to the town of Brampton, where he has continued ever since in a practice which is firmly established and every day increasing. Mr. McFadden was appointed lieutenant of No. 3 company, Peel battalion, but resigned his commission in 1884. In July, 1882, he was appointed county crown attorney for the County of Peel, and likewise clerk of the peace. He is secretary of the Haggart Bros. Manufacturing Company; is a shareholder in, and the solicitor of, the Central Bank of Canada; is a member of the Freemasons, lodge No. 229, and is also a member of the Oddfellows, Golden Star lodge, No. 101. Of this lodge he is past noble grand master; and is regent of the Royal Arcanum Council. No. 875. His religious views are those of Methodism. Mr. McFadden married, in 1875, Jennie, eldest daughter of K. Chisholm, M.P.P., Brampton, and has by this lady three children. Professionally, the subject of this sketch stands very high in his own town, as well as in the country surrounding. He has the repute of being well read in law, he has unbounded industry, and his tact and good judgment in the management of his cases are conspicuous. cially, likewise, he is a favourite.

rning

Wolf-

udies

o the

lf es-

Latin. I-cap-

ng to er his

nter-

ected

ships,

lney,

etary

ears :

rance

given

poli-

17th

lair,

Mc-

slay,

ugh-

nters

Mr.

d in

has

ions

rest-

cele-

He

ads.

the

ady We

bids

bers

.A.,

own

rio.

end

r of

ınd, 817,

The

the

to 815,

nd-

en.

ded

Bergin, Darby, M.D., Cornwall, was born in Toronto, on the 7th September, 1826. He is the son of the late William Bergin, C.E., who was a native of Roscrea, Ireland, and who, in 1820, left his home for Canada, and settled in Toronto, where for some time he carried on a mercantile business. Dr. Bergin's mother was Mary. daughter of the late John Flanagan, of Charlottenburg, County of Glengarry, Ontario. William Bergin died in 1850, leaving surviving him his wife, a daughter, the subject of this sketch, and another son, John, who is practising law in Cornwall. Mrs. Bergin died in 1881. After attaining the necessary knowledge to permit of his entering Upper Canada College, young Bergin became a student in that institution, where he had for his classmates young men who afterwards rose to positions of distinction in various walks of life. Deciding to adopt the medical profession, Mr. Bergin matriculated at McGill college, Montreal, and immediately entered upon his studies, which were prosecuted with unremitting zeal and marked success. In April, 1846, he passed his examination before the Lower Canada medical board, and obtained license to practice when little more than nineteen years old. The following spring, in 1847, he completed the curriculum of McGill college, but not having attained his majority, he was consequently unable to graduate until he became of age. He received his degree of M.D.C.M., in September, 1847, a special convocation being held for that purpose. The young doctor settled in Cornwall, where he soon secured an extensive practice, and attained to a distinguished position. In 1848, in conjunction with the late Dr. Roderick McDonald, he had charge of the emigrant typhus fever hospital at Cornwall, and a few years later, when small-pox broke out in the Indian village of St. Regis, he was sent by Lord Bury, superintendent-general of Indian Affairs, to look after them. For this service he received the thanks of the department. Dr. Bergin's career as a medical practitioner has been eminently successful, and his standing among his professional brethren high, as the following facts will prove:-He was first president of the Eastern District Medical Association, and is president of the St. Lawrence and Eastern District Medcal Association. He has been examiner in midwifery and general surgical anatomy, for the Ontario College of Physicians and Sur-Upon his election as the representative of the St. Lawrence and Eastern Medical Association, he was elected vicepresident of the Council of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, and the following year president, to which position he was reelected this year (1885). Dr. Bergin was for many years physician to the Cornwall When the recent rebellion in the North-West broke out, it became necessary to organize a medical department connected with the militia service. That work was en-trusted to Dr. Bergin, who received the rank of surgeon-general. The success of his labours was remarkable, considering the short time at his disposal to select his staff and to arrange all the minute details. Dr. Boyd, of London, England, who was sent to Canada with medical stores, by H.R.H. the Princess Louise, declared that the arrangements, as made by Dr. Bergin, were complete and in every respect satisfactory, and that he had never known of a more thoroughly equipped medical field service than that sent out under the direction of Surgeon-General Bergin. For many years Dr. Bergin has been actively identified with the volunteer force. At the time of the Trent difficulty, when war between Britain and the United States seemed imminent, Dr. Bergin took command of a company raised for active service. His connection with the force since that time has been continuous. He served in the 3rd Provisional battalion at Laprairie, from December, 1863, to May, 1864, as captain, and during the Fenian raid of 1866 as major, having been promoted to that rank. In 1869 he organized the 59th Stormont and Glengarry battalion, of which he became lieutenant-colonel. In the town where he resides Dr. Bergin takes an active interest in every movement tending to promote its advancement. most of the local manufacturing and other enterprises his name is prominently identified, and through his influence the town has been put in possession of commodious public buildings. He has occupied several positions of honour, conferred upon him by his fellow-townsmen. He has been a member of the Cornwall Town Council; trustee of the Grammar school; president of the local Rifle Association, etc. Bergin was first returned to the House of Commons for Cornwall in 1872, by acclamation. At the general election of 1874, Dr. Bergin was defeated by A. F. Macdonald, by a majority of twenty-three votes. Mr. Macdonald having been unseated, a new election took place in September, with the same result, Mr. Macdonald's majority being forty. At the general election of 1878, Dr. Bergin defeated D. B. McLennan. Having been unseated, a new election took place, in January, 1880, when Dr. Bergin again defeated Mr. McLennan, by an increased majority. He was re-elected at the general election of 1882, for the new constituency of Cornwall and Stormont, defeating the late James Bethune, Q.C. Dr. Bergin has proved a most useful member of parliament. As a speaker he is fluent; he makes his points with marked perspicuity, and he is the possessor of a good voice. He has taken great interest in the question of factory legislation, and on two occasions introduced bills on the subject. He is the principal promoter of the Ontario and Pacific railway. In politics Dr. Bergin is a supporter of the Conservative administration. In religion he is a Roman Catholic. He is a bachelor. His numerous socialqualities have secured for him a host of friends.

Henderson, Rev. W. C., M.A., St., Mary's, Ontario, a minister of the Methodist church, was born in the County of Huntington, in the Province of Quebec, on the 11th of February, 1834. His parents were Archibald and Adeline, the maiden name of his mother being Steams. When a lad, our subject attended for some time the seminary at Cazenovia, New York state. taking a general course of study. At the age of seventeen, through the ministry of the Rev. James Brock, he was led to a saving knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus, and a few months after was led by the Spirit of God into the work of preaching to others. While yet in his teens, he had the happiness of seeing many led through his labours to seek salvation. In 1854 he went to Victoria University, Cobourg, where he remained for three years. In 1857 he left the college and was received upon probation, as a minister by the Conference of the Wesleyan Methodist Church. and appointed junior minister on the Port Hope circuit. In 1858 he was appointed to Belleville, and in 1859 returned to college at Cobourg, and completed the course of study, graduating in 1860, and receiving the degree of B.A. In 1868 he obtained the degree of M.A. from the same University. He was ordained in 1860, in the City of Kingston, the late Rev. Dr. Stinson, being president of the conference. By this conference, likewise, he was appointed to London city, with the Rev. G. R. Sanderson, as superintendent. At that time the whole of the city constituted one circuit with two ministers. In 1861, on the 1st of July, Mr. Henderson married Emma Overend, of the City of Kingston, and returned to London for the year. Since that time he has had the following appointments:-Kingston, Hemmingford, Odell-

Corr supe town of p appo by tl of th elect statio been time. being confe Canad treal, ton. Gener ville, was al confer also in two u First, and N the M secondi dist .d Method church church. The Lo church prior to mencing conferer and so, don con Canada. Methodi Clinton, of the sa was elect president Methodis twice in has alway in it ha views ar trines of

tow

nia,

the

Carpn F.R.A.S. Cambridg servatory, the Meteo of Canada 1846, at S being the town, Cornwall, Stratford, Goderich, Sarnia, Strathroy, and St. Mary's. During the three years that he was stationed in Cornwall, he held the position of local superintendent of the public schools of the town, and as such was one of the examiners of public school teachers. When he was appointed to Sarnia, in 1877, he was elected by the conference to the office of chairman of the district, which position he held, being elected annually, for the six years he was stationed in that district. He has also been chairman of the district since that time. He was honoured by his brethren in being elected as a member of the General conference of the Methodist church of Canada, of 1878, held in the City of Montreal, and of that of 1882, held in Hamilton. He was also a member of the Special General conference of 1883, held in Belleville, to consider the basis of union. He was also a member of the United General conference of the Methodist church, held also in the City of Belleville. He has seen two unions in the Methodism of Canada. First, the union between the Wesleyan and New Connexion branches, forming the Methodist church of Canada; and secondly the union between the Metho-dist church of Canada, the Primitive Methodist church, the Bible Christian church and the Methodist Episcopal church, forming the Methodist church. The London conference of the Methodist church of Canada, held its last session, prior to union, in the City of Guelph, commencing on the 4th of June, 1884. At this conference our subject was elected president, and so, was the last president of the London conference of the Methodist church of Canada. The Guelph conference of the Methodist church held its first session in Clinton, commencing on the 18th of June, of the same year, and at this conference he was elected president, and so was the first president of the Guelph conference of the Methodist church, being elected president twice in the same year. Mr. Henderson has always been devoted to his work, and in it has been successful. His religious views are in entire harmony with the doctrines of the Methodist church.

Carpmael, Charles, M.A., F.R.S.C., F.R.A.S., late Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge, Director of the Magnetic Observatory, Toronto, and Superintendent of the Meteorological Service of the Dominion of Canada, was born on September 19th, 1846, at Streatham Hill, Surrey, England, being the eighth son and tenth child of a family of eleven, nine boys and two girls, all of whom are living. His parents were William Carpmael and Sarah, whose maiden name was Pitt; William Carpmael being well known as a patent agent, author of Carpmael's Patent Cases, &c. Our subject was educated at Clapham Grammar school, under Charles Pritchard, M. A., now Savilian professor of Astronomy at Oxford, and Alfred Wrigley, M.A., formerly professor of Mathematics at Adiscombe. The studies to which his attention was more particularly turned were mathematics and natural and experimental sciences. In the spring of 1865 he obtained a minor scholarship at St. John's College, Cambridge, and went into residence in that institution in October of that year. His studies during the next three years and a quarter were almost entirely mathematical. In June, 1868, he obtained a foundation scholarship; and in January, 1869, he entered for the mathematical tripos, and was classed sixth in the list of wranglers. The next year Mr. Carpmael devoted himself to the study of chemistry and physics. In the following year, 1870, and during the first six months of 1871, he studied law, having some time previously entered at the Middle Temple. In November, 1870, he was elected Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. It is worthy of note that two other Fellows of this college, who were also sixth wranglers, have resided in Toronto, viz., Mr. J. B. Cherriman, late professor of Mathematics in the University of Toronto, and the Rev. C. W. E. Body, the present provost of Trinity College. In December, 1870, he was a member of the British Eclipse Expedition to Spain. The station from which the party to which he belonged made their observations was Esteponia, on the Mediterranean coast, about thirty-five miles from Gibraltar, and Mr. Carpmael took a spectroscopic observation of the corona. Owing to unfavorable weather, the observation was not very satisfactory. Our subject has felt much interest in volunteer movements, and has been a member of two corps, though he has seen no active service. He was appointed deputy superintendent of the Meteorological Service of Canada, in October, 1872; and director of the Magnetic Observatory and superintendent of the Meteorological Service, in February, 1880, which offices he still holds. Mr. Carpmael has travelled at various times in France, Holland, North Germany, Switzerland, the north of Italy, and in Spain. He first visited the United States and Canada in the autumn of 1871, and remained until May, 1872. During this tour he visited Toronto, which visit ultimately led to his settling in Canada, as upon his return to England he was offered the position of deputy superintendent of the then newly established Meteorological Ser-His religious views are those of the Church of England. He married in June, 1876, Julia, youngest daughter of Walter McKenzie, of Castle Frank, Toronto, clerk of the County court. This lady died at Aiken, S. C., in February, 1882, leaving two children, one boy and one girl. In 1882, when His Excellency the Marquis of Lorne, established the Royal Society of Canada, he appointed Mr. Carpmael one of the presidents of section III of that society. He was elected by the section vice-president for the following year; again vice-president for the year 1885, and president for the year. 1886. The Meteorological department, at the head of which Mr. Carpmael has been placed, is one of the most important branches of the public service, and government, it is generally admitted, was wise in its choice of a The only other comment we feel called upon to offer, in this connection, is to say that this service has become one of such important utility that it is every day revealed to us that it does not extend far enough. We trust that government will find itself soon in a position to be able to deal more liberally with an organization of such very great importance.

Miall, Edward, Deputy-Minister, Commissioner of Inland Revenue and Commissioner of Standards, Ottawa, was born at Leicester, England, in 1838. He is a son of the late Edward Miall, M.P. for Bradford in the English House of Commons. He received his education in England, and in 1859 came to Canada, taking up his abode in Oshawa. In 1860 he married Miss A. Arkland, of Oshawa, by whom he has had five children. In 1870 Mr. Miall entered the civil service of Canada, and two years later was appointed assistant commissioner of Inland Revenue. It will not be overstepping the bounds to say that Mr. Miall was a very different stamp of man from some of those who enter the service, and revolve upward as the wheels in their appointed seasons turn. He was a gentleman of wide experience and close observation, and his department and the government soon came to recognize in him these very desirable qualities. His abilities were utilized on behalf of the government during the session of the historical Fishery commission which met at Halifax, in 1877; and the manner in which he performed the duties assigned him there was in the highest degree satisfactory. During 1880-81 the well-known Canadian Pacific Railway commission sat and conducted investigations, and in consideration of his experience and judgment Mr. Miall was chosen as a member of that body. In 1883 he received the fullest recognition government could make of his attainments, by receiving the appointment, which he now holds, of deputy-minister and commissioner of Inland Revenue and of Standards. The duties pertaining to this office are onerous, numerous and perplexing, but Mr. Miall's administration has been extremely satisfactory, and there is an end of the numerous and loud complaints, which, whether justly or unjustly, were made respecting the department before he assumed its management.

th

ne

fro

the his

un

the

the

the

the

boa

por

con

and

carg

porl

do

whi

capt

requ

follo

the :

then

awo

they

boat

for t

left

assen

them

miles

ashor

askin

The 1

short

again.

time

ance,

voyag

loaded

ing, 1

across

Range

off a

the cap

a smal

captain

remark

He he days, l

Montre

that th

tried by

He acc

Lawren

tried, a

was sin

anythin

Gaskin, Captain John, ex-Mayor of the City of Kingston, was born in Kingston, on the third day of April, 1840. His parents, Robert Gaskin and Margaret Burton, were born in the County Tyrone, in the north of Ireland, and came to Canada in the year 1835. One of their family came to this country with them. The family consisted of eight-four boys and four girls-of whom six are now living, and five married and having large families. His father was a soldier in the rebellion of '37-38, and turned out with other loyal citizens to defend their homes and firesides. The subject of this sketch received his education chiefly at the preparatory school, conducted by the Reverend Mr. Borthwick, but when young went to work with ex-Mayor John Flanigan, and remained with him some years. While with him he received his first lessons in business. On leaving Mr. Flanigan's employ he went on board the steamer Scotland, then commanded by Captain F. Patterson, who gave him his first education in steamboat matters. After that he held positions of responsibility on the steamers Huron, George Moffatt, Brantford, and Ranger, all owned by the late firm of Henderson and Holscomb, forwarders On the last-named boat he held the position of captain for two years. A period of five years elapsed between the time when he commenced sailing and the time when he became captain of the Ranger, and he was captain of the Ranger at twenty-four years of age. The second year that he commanded the Ranger was the year of the Fenian raid. He was bound down the St. Lawrence with his steamer, but, while passing Prescott, the authorities at that place fired across his bows and wanted him to stop, as it was considered unsafe to run down the river. Hearing, however, that there was trouble at Cornwall, or at Malone, near Cornwall, and that the volunteers from Kingston were there, and being one of their number, he was anxious to be among his comrades, and so continued his course until he reached Cornwall, and stopped there. On reaching Cornwall he found that the volunteers had just arrived, and that there was great excitement. The orders of the commanding officer were to allow no boats of any description to pass without reporting. This was done, and the com-manding officer asked him what his cargo consisted of, and he replied: "Pork, peas, and whisky." The officer replied that the cargo was just what was required, as the pork would feed the men, the peas would do if they were short of shot, and the whisky would put life in the boys. captain offered his boat in case she was required to take soldiers to any place. The following morning the volunteers found that the provisions were not as good as some of them got at home, and he had No. 1, his own company down to the steamer, where they were entertained with the best the boat could afford. The boat was kept there for two days, and then released. Before he left there was a large number of boats assembled, and a gun-boat was sent with them as far as Montreal. After getting ten miles down Coteau Lake the gun-boat ran ashore on an island, and fired a signal-gun asking the steamers to come to her assistance. The Ranger went and pulled her off. Verv shortly afterwards the gun-boat got ashore again, and another gun was fired. This time the Ranger did not go to her assistance, as they wanted to proceed on their voyage, and it was a dangerous place for a loaded boat to approach. As she was passing, however, the gun-boat fired a shot across her bows and made her stop. The Ranger then came to and got the gun-boat off a second time. While working at her the captain of the Ranger went aboard with a small boat, and in conversation with the captain of the gun-boat, Captain Gaskin remark ed that the pilot must be a Fenian. He heard no more of this remark for two days, but while re-loading the Ranger in Montreal a soldier approached him and said that the pilot of the gun-boat was being tried by court-martial for being a Fenian. He accompanied the soldier to the St. Lawrence hall, where the man was being tried, and explained that what he had said was simply a oke—that he did not know anything about the man. That same fall

ory.

lian

con-

tion

iall

Ιn

nv-

by

ow ner

Γhe

us.

lll'a

ac-

bus

tly

nt.

of

ir

the Ranger was lost on Lake Erie on a tripfrom Toledo to Montreal in a very severe gale near Port Stanley, but all hands were saved, though with much difficulty. Next year he went on board the steamer Georgian, belonging to the same line, but three years afterwards became connected with Montreal Transportation Company, of Montreal, and commanded the steamer Bruno. He remained in that capacity for two years, being part owner. At the end of the two years she was sold, and he then became outside manager of the company in Kings-This is the largest transportation firm in Canada, having some fifty-five vessels, consisting of tugs, barges, sailing vessels, and elevators, and for some years they have done all their building and repairing in Kingston, and have built there some of the largest vessels ever built in Canada. Captain Gaskin was an alderman of the city for several years, and was mayor in 1882, and polled the largest vote ever polled in Kingston, defeating his opponent, Wm. McRossie, by 512. He has been connected with the Orange order since he was eighteen years of age, and passed through the different grades and became county master for South Frontenac. He has always been considered a leading spirit in the order since he joined it, although almost a boy at the time. He is fearless and outspoken in defending the order, and, as the Orangemen of Kingston own considerable property, and have one of the finest halls in the Dominion, but cannot hold estate in their own name on account of not having Orange incorporation, he holds all their papers. He has also been president of the Irish Protestant Benevolent Society, and also the first president of the Protestant Protective Society. He has always been a Conservative, as his father before him, and he is now vicepresident of the Liberal Conservative Association of Kingston. He has also always been connected with the English church. He married, on the 14th April, 1867, Mary McAlister, of Kingston, and has two boys and two girls. His wife died in 1875; he has not married since. There is no man in Kingston who has been abused more by the opposition press, but he always succeeds in keeping "his end up."

Whiting, John Lanyon, Alderman, Kingston, Ontario, was born at Amherstburg, in the County of Essex, in the aforementioned province, on the 23rd February, 1851. He is a son of the Reverend Richard Whiting, a distinguished minister of the Methodist church, by his wife, Mary Philp.

both parents being of English birth. John L. Whiting received his early educational training at the Provincial High Schools, where his father was stationed, but he subsequently attended Victoria University, from which institution he graduated in 1873, B.A., being first in his year, and the winner of the Prince of Wales gold medal. Having completed his college career, he entered upon the study of law in the office of T. Deacon, Q.C., at Pembroke; and from here passed to the office of Britton & Price, Kingston, where he completed his studies. He was called to the bar in Michaelmas term, 1877, and entered the firm of Britton & Whiting in 1878, continuing in such co-partnership since. Having taken much interest in municipal matters, and being a man of marked ability, and still further promise, he was induced to offer himself for a seat in the city council; and for the years 1883, 1884 and 1885, has sat for St. Lawrence ward. He is extremely popular, and is looked upon as one of the ablest members in the civic board. In religion, he adheres to the faith of his father; and in politics he is a Liberal, being vice-president of the Reform Association of vice-president of the Reform Association of the City of Kingston.

Pense, Edward J. Barker, Editor and Proprietor of the British Whig newspaper, Kingston, Ontario, was born at Kingston, on the 3rd June, 1848. He is a son of Michael Lorenzo Pense, who was at one time proprietor of the Kingston Argus, and for a long period connected with the British Whia, and grandson of a well-known U.E. loyalist, Captain Michael Grass, whose sacrifices for the crown in New York during the revolutionary war were rewarded at that period by grants of land upon the site of the present City of Kingston. His mother, Harriet Grace, was a daughter of Dr. Barker, who was for thirty-eight years publisher of the Whia, and long the Nestor of the Canadian press. The subject of this sketch was, from the age of fourteen, (1862) attached to the Whig staff, to the proprietorship of which he succeeded in 1872, increasing the value and circulation of that paper nearly seven-fold in twelve years. After sitting for five years as alderman for Frontenac ward, he was elected mayor in 1881, being the youngest person who has filled that chair in Kingston. He sat for six years at the Public School Board, and was chairman during the years 1878 and for a number of years; and of other athletic associations at different periods. Mr. l'ense was master of Minden Masonic lodge in 1878 and 1879; was warden and lay delegate to the Synod for St. James' (Anglican) church for many years, and was prominent in the creation of several important parochial improvements. He is a trustee of Kingston Collegiate Institute; a life governor of Kingston General Hospital; was president of the Canadian Press Association in 1881-1882, the year of the memorable trip of the press men to Manitoba, and when Pense station was named in token of the visit. He married, in 1876, Cornelia, daughter of Ray G. Vaughan, of Kingston, The improvement in the Whig, already alluded to, under Mr. Pense's management, has been, we may repeat, very conspicuous. The paper is conducted with ability, with marked breadth of view, and with dignity. The building from which it is issued is very handsome and commodious, and reflects great credit upon its tasty and enterprising Mr. Pense is a staunch Reproprietor. former, and it goes without saying that his journal advocates the same cause. As a writer, the subject of this sketch is clear. terse and vigorous.

1879. He was president of the Young Men's Liberal Club of Kingston, from 1877 to 1884; of St. George's Society in 1878 and 1882; of the Kingston Lacrosse Club

Shannon, Lewis William, B.A. Publisher of the Kingston Daily News, and Chronicle and News, was born in Kingston on the 3rd of February, 1859. He is the second son of James Shannon, postmaster of Kingston, who came to Canada from Maghera, County Londonderry, Ireland, in the latter part of the year 1857. He received his early education in the public schools of his native city, passing from thence to the Grammar school, where he continued his studies under Samuel Woods, M. A., the well-known classical scholar and editor. In 1873, at the age of fourteen, he matriculated in Queen's University, taking second place in a class of twenty one, of which he was the youngest member, and carrying off the Campbell scholarship of $40 and a free course of lectures. In 1877 he graduated as bachelor of arts, and in the same year entered the Royal college of physicians and surgeons as a student. But rapid growth during his arts course had weakened his constitution, and feeling unable to continue the hard study required in a medical course, he left at Christmas and became assistant teacher in the Hawkesbury High school, where he remained during the year 1878. At Christmas, 1878. he secured the appointment of mathematical master in the Almonte High cours ration his fa publi and A been He co howev he wor chemi annual of Que same ye of his p charge busines busines lation o having i and the attractiv and Mo Shannon private, man of battalion continued teers, and in No. 6 Princess mained in was appoi he qualifie instruction his commi the 27th to the cap owing to th signed in joined Mir A.M., and offices there 1885, and is is also a me nte of Free thirteenth d the Liberal never taken except throu He is a mem and is still u of the most tario; and a

power, grace :

he does not h

scho

BUCC

bein

ing

the

school, which position he filled with much success until Christmas, 1879. His health being now fully restored, he gave up teaching and re-entered the Royal College, with the intention of continuing his medical murse. But his studies were of short duration, for in February, 1880, he succeeded his father in the firm of Shannon & Meek. publishers of the Daily News and Chronicle and News, the elder Mr. Shannon having been appointed postmaster of Kingston. He continued to attend the medical college, however, until the end of the session, when he won the gold medal for honour work in chemistry, which is open for competition annually to the students of all the faculties of Oneen's university. In October of the same year (1880), he bought out the interest of his partner, William Meek, and took full charge of the News printing and publishing business. From that time to the present the business has made rapid progress, the circulation of the two papers, daily and weekly, having increased nearly a hundred per cent., and the papers themselves become the most attractive and enterprising between Toronto While in Almonte, Mr. and Montreal Shannon joined the local volunteers as a private, and wore a red coat as right hand man of the company (No. 6 company, 42nd battalion). On his return to Kingston he continued his connection with the volunteers, and entered the ranks as full private in No. 6 company of the 14th battalion, or, Princess of Wales' Own Rifles. He remained in the ranks two years, and in 1882 was appointed lieutenant, for which position he qualified himself by taking a course of instruction in B. battery, R.C.A., receiving his commission on the 1st of August. On the 27th of June, 1884, he was promoted to the captaincy of No 5 company, which, owing to the press of business duties, he resigned in December, 1885. In 1880 he joined Minden lodge, No. 253, A.F. and A.M., and has since occupied several minor offices therein. He was junior warden in 1885, and is now (1886) senior warden. He is also a member of the A. and A. Scottish rite of Freemasonry, and has received the thirteenth degree. In politics he supports the Liberal-Conservative party, but has never taken any part in political movements except through the medium of the News. He is a member of the Church of England, and is still unmarried. Mr. Shannon is one of the most enterprising journalists in Ontario; and as a writer he possesses much power, grace and skill. Occasions arise when he does not hesitate to strike with an iron

atic

nse

la.

m

ent

r۸.

of

hand, but, as a rule, the tone and temper of his work are characterized by moderateness, by dignity and by a sense of responsibility.

Robinson, Hon. John Beverley, Lieutenant - Governor of the Province of Ontario, was born at the paternal homestead, Beverley House, Toronto, on the 21st of February, 1820. He is the namesake and second son of the late Sir John Beverley Robinson, baronet, chief justice of Upper Canada. Mr. Bobinson was instructed in the primary branches by private tuition, and afterwards completed his course of studies at Upper Canada College. He was one of the earliest students that attended this institution, and had as a preceptor the distinguished scholar and master, the Ray, J. H. Harris. A love of manly sports. and a splendid physique, characterized the popular and level-headed Upper Canada student; and, as another writer has remarked, these qualities have accompanied him through life. Mr. Robinson, at the age of seventeen, was one of the aides-de-camp to Sir Francis Bond Head, and in this way was brought actively in contact with the civil troubles of 1837. He accompanied his excellency from Government House to Montgomery's hotel, Yonge street, on the 7th of the month, where the battle took place and the hotel and Gibson's dwelling house were burned; and he was thus an eye witness of the spectacle which Sir Francis Bond Head has described with so much fervour and picturesqueness in "The Emigrant." It was considered expedient to send despatches to the British representative at Washington, but the office of bearer in a time of such turmoil was not one that timid natures coveted. The frontier was in a state of considerable tumult, owing to the presence there of bands of patriot sympathizers, who would treat an agent or envoy of government with scant consideration. This danger was known to the available attaches of the governor; but the young aide-de-camp, Mr. Robinson, no sooner learnt that his chief needed a volunteer, than he offered himself. The danger was pointed out to him, but we can imagine his refusal to discuss such a contingency. He was then charged with the despatches, and in the face of the wintry season, set out for Washington. This was not the day of steam engines, and cosy palace cars, but every mile of the distance had to be passed by the trundling stage coach. From Lewiston to Washington occupied a period of eight days, with only short intermission for rest. How the volume of life has increased in the great arteries of trade since that day, will be pretty plainly seen when we state that on the morning of the young aide-de-camp's arrival in the city of New York, there was not another passenger but himself in the coach, though it was the regular means of travel. He remained for several weeks at the American capital, and on his return to Upper Canada joined, at Sandwich, Col. Hill's regiment, in which he was a lieutenant, and in which he served for about a year. Shortly after the turbulent spirit of this period had been calmed, Mr. Robinson turned to the study of the more peaceful pursuit of law, entering the office of Christopher Alexander Hagerman, a gentleman eminent in his profession and in politics, and who subsequently gave lustre to the bench. After spending two years with Mr. Hagerman, Mr. Robinson had his articles transferred to James M. Strachan, of Strachan & Cameron, which firm was, in those days, a very prominent one. Till the expiration of his term, he remained in their office, and at the Easter term of 1844 was called to the bar of Upper Canada. Not long after being admitted to the bar, Mr. Robinson began practice at Toronto, and continued in the same, forming several professional partnerships in the meantime, till his appointment to the lieutenant-governorship of Ontario, on the 30th of June, 1880, succeeding the Hon. Donald A. Macdonald. But the biographer would be very unworthily performing his task if he failed to call attention to the great energy and success of Mr. Robinson in several important enterprises lying beyond his professional sphere. Indifference or opposition on the part of the people toward an undertaking in which he had faith, only kindled his enthusiasm, and drew forth his great activities. As a case in point, we may mention his connection with the project of building what was called the first "city railroad." This was the Northern railroad, a scheme to which some of the citizens offered the most violent opposition, and which the greal bulk of the people regarded as an impossible undertak-There are many citizens of Toronto who will remember the ringing appeals made to the public by Mr. Robinson, and the many meetings that he called to discuss the great enterprise. In 1851 he had been elected for St. Patrick's ward, which at that time included the present wards of St. Patrick and St. John, holding his seat for six consecutive years. It was in his character as civic representative that he took the part which we have described in the Northern railway project; and, but for the respect and confidence with which he had inspired the citizens, the achievement might have come in a far more tardy fashion. It was his hand that framed the several resolutions providing for large money grants to the Northern and the Guelph and Toronto roads, and it was his persistent energy that carried them through the Council, who afterwards nominated him as their representative on the Board of Directors. His exertions on behalf of the company were held in such high regard that, in 1862, he was chosen president, which office he held to the entire satisfaction of all concerned, for a period of thirteen years, with another well known director, when he was displaced. for the good and logical reason that he differed from the management in politics. But it was not alone in this respect that Mr. Robinson displayed his energy and his interest in the welfare of the province. For the year 1861, numerous articles may be seen in the newspapers bearing tribute to the yeoman service which the sturdy young barrister had done in the commu-There was really no worthy enterprise which needed a leader that did not find in him a champion, with his sleeves rolled up, in the fore front; and it was a characteristic of his to strike out more boldly when timid ones hesitated. It is during times of experiment and tentative action, that a man with clear understanding and self-reliance stands out superior; and it is only the amplest justice to say that such was the figure of Mr. Robinson during the periods which we try to describe. About the year 1861, Mr. Robinson proceeded to England with the object of putting a large tract of land in Ontario upon the market Many persons considered the for sale. enterprise a hopeless one, but their astonishment, and that of the public generally, may be surmised, when they learned that he had sold a million acres—now forming part of the County of Haliburton, and subject to the conditions of settlement as published by the Crown Lands Department. A circumstance in connection with this, and worthy of note is, that he was successful in obtaining as the first president of the company, a former lieutenantgovernor of Upper Canada, Sir Francis Bond Head, and as vice-president, the present Earl of Salisbury, Premier of England, at that time, Lord Robert Cecil. It was considered hardly possible that such an enormous sale had been made, and the Hon. Mr. Crawford, as we find by the Legislative

to an to the Cr

zea

801 fin

the

the

stg. tha

Car

whi

now

mos

cour

of T

was

city |

the t

the

large

to th

land,

of a b

ledged

timon

House

dent

was '

next g

for th

Canadi

conjoir

It is we

the sec

Mr. La

Admini

occasion

the "de

his fathe

Was a co

steady s

administ

was insti

of severa

esplanade

theru rail

ments of 1862, he

in the Ca

holding t

following.

parliamen

energies in

Council debates, enquired of the Hon. Mr. Vankoughnet in his place in the Senate. whether it were true that this sale had taken place, to which Mr. Vankoughnet answered, "That the sale of the townships to an English company, as mentioned in the annual report of the commissioner of Crown Lands, would be successfully carried out thanks chiefly to the extraordinary zeal and energy shown by Mr. J. B. Robinson, the junior member for Toronto." We find afterwards, by the budget speech of the finance minister, that the sale added to the treasury revenue the sum of £60,000 stg. It was Mr. Robinson's enterprise, too, that originated and established the Western Canada Building and Loan Association. which, commencing from small things has now a capital of millions, and is one of the most successful financial institutions in the country. There was a time in the history of Toronto, when the hotel accommodation was not commensurate with the needs of the city; and while the people grumbled that the thing was so, Mr. Robinson went among the citizens, and personally collected the large sum of $13,600, which was paid over to the Messrs. Rossin for the purchase of land, and the construction and furnishing of a hotel upon it. Messrs. Rossin acknowledged their gratitude by a handsome testimonial which now adorns Government House. Mr. Robinson was for a time president of the city council, and in 1857 was elected mayor of the city. At the next general election he was a candidate for the Toronto representation in the old Canadian parliament, and was returned conjointly with the Hon. George Brown. It is worthy of note that Mr. Robinson was the seconder of the resolution, moved by Mr. Langevin, which defeated the "Short Administration" led by George Brown, and occasioning what was afterwards known as the "double shuffle." Mr. Robinson, like his father, and all the members of his family, was a conservative, and he gave a strong and steady support to the Cartier-Macdonald administration. While in parliament he was instrumental in procuring the passage of several acts in reference to the Toronto esplanade, the re-establishment of the Northerurailroad, and many other local improvements of importance. On the 27th March, 1862, he became president of the Council in the Cartier - Macdonald administration, holding that office till the month of May following. In 1872 he was returned to parliament for Algoma, having used his energies in the development of the mining ne re-

d in-

night

I t

reso-

ts to

ranta

that

who pre-

His

were

2. he

held

ned.

ther

ced.

dif-

tics.

that and

nce.

may ute

rdv

ter-

not

ves

s a

ld-

ing

on,

nd it and other interests of that county, and representing this district till the dissolution On the 17th of September, 1878, he was returned for West Toronto by the very large majority of 637 votes over Thomas Hodgins, the Reform candidate, this being the seventh election he had run in the interests of his party in the city of Toronto. He continued to represent West Toronto until his appointment to the lieutenant-governorship. Hon. Mr. Robinson was for a number of years solicitor to the corporation of the City of Toronto : has held several offices in connection with financial and public institutions, and has been president of St. George's Society of Toronto. On the 30th June, 1874, he married Mary Jane Hagerman, daughter of his former principal in his legal studies. Mr. Robinson has never made any display of sleight-of-hand in politics. He has not sought to be prominent or popular, or much in men's mouths, by the small tricks with which some smaller men make themselves in their day illustrious. But the Hon John Beverley Robinson's career has been a strong and manly one; and this term manly applies as much to his public career as it does to his private life. He has a sound and enlightened understanding, has a cool head, and, while a staunch partvist, has never been party blind. In tumult, or in times of political hurry, he has always been an eminently safe man, for he has the quality of being able to keep cool, and so remain master of the situation. In social life, whether as lieutenant-governor or as a citizen. Mr. Robinson, is a favourite, and chiefly because of all those fine and capable qualities, which we cannot do better than describe once again as "manly." His Honour is yet in the prime of his physical and intellectual strength, and we do not doubt that there are many years of distinguished service yet in store for him; and as a proof that the people are of our opinion, we may state that petitions from many municipalities in all parts of the province, and representing every shade of political opinion. have been ferwarded to the government at Ottawa, praying that his appointment as lieutenant-governor may be continued for another term. To fill satisfactorily the position now held by His Honour, as the head of provincial society, is a task of considerable difficulty; but the duty has been made easy by the assistance of Mrs. Robinson, who carried into Government House all the skill and graces which had marked her as a hostess in the sphere of private social Tabaret, Very Rev. Joseph H., D.D., of the Society of Oblates of Mary Immaculate, and President of the College of Ottawa, was born in the Department of L'Isère, in France, on the 10th April, 1828. Feeling himself called to an ecclesiastical and missionary life, he offered himself to the Society of Oblates, and was received into the Novitiate of Our Lady of L'Osier, a pilgrimage in his native department. His vocation to the state of his choice having been well tested in that house of probation, he was transferred to the scholastic house of the same society at Marseilles. There completing his education, and distinguishing himself in philosophy and theology, he was enrolled a member of the society, and ordained priest. It was about that time that the society turned its attention to foreign missions. The piety, learning and energy of Father Tabaret won him a place among the first missionary Oblates. His destina-tion was Canada. There he was received by the Right Rev. Joseph E. Guiges, bishop of Ottawa. The zeal and talents of the young father found scope in parochial and missionary duties in several parts of the diocese of Ottawa, duties which in those days and those places were attended with hardships and dangers little suspected in our days of comparative comfort and security. Religion was yet in its infancy in Ottawa; a parish had been formed; a school had next to be It was in the year 1853 that undertaken. Father Tabaret entered with spirit into the work of education, established that school, and conducted it with such skill and perseverance that he saw it gradually rise into the present University of Ottawa. He has been at the head of the establishment during the last thirty-two years, with the exception of the years 1866 and 1867, during which he was provincial of the province of the Oblates in North America, and made official visits in the various Oblate missions in Canada and the United States. In February, 1854, His Excellency the Governor-General nominated him a member of the Senate of the Toronto University. In June, 1862, he was made vicar-general of the diocese of Ottawa. The year 1866 forms an era in the history of the College of Ottawa. Having been incorporated by Act of Parliament in 1849, it now received its university charter, conferred by the unanimous voice of the legislature. In virtue of this charter, the University College possesses a right to elect a member of the Council of Public Instruction for Ontario, and a right to confer university degrees. In 1874 the reverend president introduced a programme of studies on a more comprehensive scale than that previously followed, so as to come up to the requirements of education in its highest branches, and to give the College of Ottawa a high place among the universities of the Dominion. In 1879, Pope Leo XIII, in recognition of his services in religion and education, conferred on him the honour of Doctor of Divinity. By his indefatigable care, the laboratory and physical cabinet. which he originated, he has lately greatly enlarged; nor has he left any branch of abstract science without facilities of exemplification. It only remains to add that this college, under the management of a distinguished scholar and clergyman, has won a name far beyond the limits of Canada, and is mainly supported by young gentlemen from various parts of the neighbouring republic.

Fenwick, Kenneth N., M.D., M.A., M.R.C.S., England, F.O.S., Edinburgh, Kingston, Ontario, was born on the 21st April, 1852, at Kingston. His father was the Rev. Kenneth Fenwick, who was for a period of thirty years pastor of the first Congregational church at Kingston, and is now professor of apologetics in the Congregational college affiliated to McGill University, Montreal. His mother was Ann. daughter of the late George Hardy, formerly of Aberdeenshire, Scotland. His father's family came from Dundee, Scotland, about the year 1845, settling at Montreal, and then Kingston. Dr. Fenwick was educated at Queen's University, Kingston, taking the degree of B.A. in 1871, and of M.A. in He then studied medicine at the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons affiliated with Queen's University, taking the M.D. degree in 1874. He was elected house surgeon of Kingston General hospital in 1873, by competitive examination. He went to England in 1874, and attended St. Thomas' Hospital. London, serving as surgical dresser under Simon & Mason, and in 1875 took the M.R.C.S., England. Dr. Fenwick spent two years in London, and some time in Paris, France, attending hospital practice under Péin, German See, Hardy and others. He returned to Canada in the fall of 1875, and became partner with the late Dr. Horatio Yates, who at that time had a very large and influential practice at Kingston. This partnership continued for three years, at which period Dr. Fenwick began practice on his own account. In 1876

he became demonstrator of Anatomy in the

R.C.P. & S., Kingston, holding this office sor 188 Dis chai of t 1885 greg in hi of the in 18 Stirli there son a 19th . the la ton, ar ton G dent o has att Clai was bo land, or

ond son

(Mason

for

of

Sai

his fami mouth d ville on Montrea in Durha more tir England arriving i gaged for and wagg Rev. Fat that was p militia ma in his da through th he always] member of Clarke was 1847, to M: Joseph Tod ville, by the Belleville. sons and five staunch Con taken an act since 1840. pal council of Samson ward member of capacity.

peace in 1862

member of the

Mr. Clarke is for one year; he afterwards held the chair of professor of Medical Jurisprudence and Sanitary Science for four years; was professor of Physiology for four years; and in 1885 was elected professor of Midwifery and Diseases of Women and Children, which chair he now holds. He was elected fellow of the Obstetrical Society, Edinburgh, in 1885. Our subject was brought up a Congregationalist, but he saw reason for change in his religious views, and is now a member of the Church of England. in 1878, Tina Laura, daughter of Robert Stirling, late of Peebles, Scotland; and there are by this marriage two children, a son and a daughter. His wife died on the 19th June, 1885. Dr. Fenwick has one of the largest practices in the City of Kingston, and is one of the surgeons to the Kingston General hospital. He is an eager student of medical science, and marked success has attended him in practice.

Clarke, Francis, Belleville, Ontario, was born in the County of Norfolk, England, on August 10, 1817, and is the second son of James Clarke, yeoman, and Mary (Mason) Clarke. He came to Canada with his family in 1836, sailing from Great Yarmouth on May 22, and arriving in Belleville on the 16th July. The journey from Montreal at that time was necessarily made in Durham boats, and the passage occupied more time than the entire journey from England would at the present day. After arriving in Belleville, our subject was engaged for a number of years in the carriage and waggon business, making (for the late Rev. Father Brennan) the first phaeton that was put on wheels in Belleville. In militia matters he has taken much interest in his day, and served as a volunteer through the rebellion of 1837-8. In religion he always has been a staunch and respected member of the Church of England. Mr. Clarke was married, on the 27th January, 1847, to Mary, eldest daughter of the late Joseph Todd, in St. Thomas Church, Belleville, by the late Rev. John Grier, rector of His family consists of three sons and five daughters. staunch Conservative in politics, and has Our subject is a taken an active interest in election matters since 1840. He was elected to the municipal council of Belleville, as representative of Samson ward, for ten years, and acted as a member of different committees in that He was made a justice of the peace in 1862, and is at the present time a member of the board of health of the city.

most prominent citizens, and he has witnessed its progress and growth from a village of 1,500 people to its present position as one of the most beautiful and promising of the young cities of the Dominion. He can feel, too, with just pride, that he has by his industry, by his ability, and through his integrity, been one of the arbiters of his adopted city's fortunes. In social life, as well as in public and business capacity, the subject of this sketch is held in the highest possible esteem.

Knees, Charles, Milton, the subject of this sketch, was born in Flensburg, Denmark, on the 6th of August. His father was Henry Paulsen Knees, and his mother Anna Knees. Our subject was educated in Flensburg, Denmark, and received a common school education. He then entered into an apprenticeship, and served his time in learning the trade of a tanner in Flensburg. At the age of nifteen, after serving his time, Mr. Knees started out to see the world and improve himself in the trade he had learned. Leaving Flensburg, his native place, he visited Germany, Austria, Switzerland, France, Holland, Belgium, Norway and Sweden. During his travels, which lasted for years, he visited all the principal cities and towns in these countries. Finding everything he wanted with regard to his trade, he returned to Copenhagen (Denmark), and married on the 18th of October, 1866, Anna Christina Petersen, of Odense, Denmark, and commenced business for himself in Copenhagen. In 1869, Mr. Knees left Denmark and landed in New York, and here he remained until 1879, and carried on the tanning business for himself on Ferry street. engaged, he visited thirteen different states of the union, and remained for a time in each of the principal cities examining its trade. But upon hearing of the advantages to be gained in Canada, under the national policy, he removed in 1879 from New York and settled in Acton, where he remained for three years. Thence in 1882 he removed to his present home, Milton, buying out the large tannery, owned at that time by Taylor & Son. The business, in which Mr. Knees is engaged, is the only one in Canada making a specialty of cordovan leather made out of South American horse hides, and which is used solely in the manufacture of fine boots and shoes. At the present time he employs from 30 to 40 men. But Mr. Clarke is one of Belleville's oldest and 44 Colborne Street, Toronto, and thus have as the business has increased, he has been a more central market. Mr. Knees received at the World's Fair, in Vienna, in 1873; at the Philadelphia Exposition in 1876; at Montreal in 1881; and at Toronto in 1881-1882, and 1883, the highest and only awards given for cordovan leather. Mr. Knees, in 1885, was elected to the position of councilman for Milton by acclamation, no opposition being even hinted at. In politics he is a Conservative, and in religion he is a Lutheran. In social life, Mr. Knees is most highly esteemed for his genial manners and his kindly heart; while his integrity of character has won for him the respect of all those in the community who have the pleasure of knowing him personally or through his business relations.

Light, Alexander Luders, Engineer of the Quebec, Montreal, Ottawa and Occidental Railway, Quebec, was born at Durham, England, on 17th April, 1822. He is a son of Colonel Alexander Whalley Light, who was descended of an old and distinguished Somersetshire family. Colonel Light for many years commanded Her Majesty's 25th Regiment, the King's Own Borderers, and in the early part of the century served with marked distinction under Sir Ralph Abercrombie, Sir Eyre Coote, the Duke of York, and the Duke of Wellington. He twice, we learn, led "forlorn hopes," was each time severely wounded, and received a handsome pension for his gallant services. He married Jane, the eldest daughter of John Smart, of Trewhitt Hall, Northumberland, and sister of the late Admiral Sir Robert Smart, at one time commander-inchief of the Channel squadron and subsequently the Mediterranean fleet. In 1834, the distinguished subject of this sketch came to Canada with his family, and shortly after his arrival he became a pupil at the Royal Grammar school, Kingston,-where he was a schoolmate of Sir John A. Macdonald. from which institution so many of our ablest sons have come. He showed a very decided talent for mathematics and mechanics while at school; and when his course was ended he became articled to a civil engineer of much ability. In 1842, he became assistant engineer on the Board of Works of Canada, under the late Honourable H. H. Killaly and Samuel Keefer, C.E., with whom he served until 1846. His abilities as an engineer had become known, and his services now were coming into marked requisition. In 1846 he joined the staff of the Great Western Railway, the construction of which was just begun. Five years later his superiority received recognition by being appointed chief engineer of the St. Andrew's and Quebec (now known as the New Brunswick and Canada) Railway; and for ten years after this time filled such important positions as chief engineer of government railways in the Provinces of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. He built the European and North American Railway, between St. John and Shediac, N. B., acknowledged to be one of the best constructed roads on this continent, and which has been incorporated with the Intercolonial, During the affair of the Trent, Mr. Light was chosen by the Horse Guards and War Office as engineer to accompany the Imperial troops; and in the event of war he was designated for other service in North America. This fact speaks louder than words of the estimate put in these high quarters upon the professional ability of Mr. Light. Our subject, returning to England in 1863, was elected a member of the Institute of Civil Engineers; and was appointed a short time afterwards by Mr. James Brunlees, to the Santos and Sao Paulo Railway, in Brazil, a road which ascends 3,000 feet in five miles. This work presented engineering difficulties of a wide nature, but his skill was supreme here as elsewhere before, and since, when put to the trial. On his return again to England he became associated with Mr. Brunlees, Meadows Rendel, and Berkeley Bruce, eminent English engineers, and operated with them in some very important and difficult undertakings. In 1869, Mr. Light accepted charge of the construction of a district of one hundred and fifty miles of the Intercolonial Railway, under Sandford Fleming, and his jurisdiction included the Miramichi bridges, which magnificent structures were built under his direct supervision. In 1874, he was appointed Government engineer of railways for the Province of Quebec, which position he still holds, and as such had entire control of the construction of the Q., M., O. and O. Railway between Quebec and Montreal. Amongst other works, he is the consulting engineer to the Quebec and Lake St. John Railway,—a peculiar road, differing essentially from lines running parallel to the St. Lawrence. It pierces the Lawrentides, necessarily, with very heavy grades and sharp curves, worked by unusually heavy engines. In 1884, Mr. Light was chosen by the Dominion government as engineer in charge of the surveys of one of the divisions of the proposed Short Line Railway, from Montreal to St. John and Halifax. His bold, able and vigorous advocacy of tl

and

coul

mile

Hous

gage

don.

const

St. 1

prepa

bridge

a len

feet, a proach

above

it will achieve

profess

carry o

made fo

professi

prises in ligation

of his ph

we doub

still awa

C.P., S.

as, was b

on the 14

Jeremiah

mother B

son was b

came to C

real. He

iod, remov

he engaged

he remove took a farn

the United

a family of this sketcl

of the sor

are promin Rochester,

at first atte

afterwards

where he en

at the close eighteenth taught school

and then (18

cine, at Toro

years, after entering the returning to (

Thomas.

an old

Wilse

sion.

of the line via Quebec, the Etchemin valley, and Chesuncook, by which he claimed he could get grades not exceeding forty feet per mile, gave rise to a warm discussion in the House of Commons. Mr. Light is now engaged with James Brunlees, C. E., of London, England, in forming a company for the construction of a Cantilever bridge over the St. Lawrence at Quebec, for which he has prepared the plans and specifications. This bridge will have a clear span of 1,550 feet, a length of steel superstructure of 2,800 feet, a total length of bridge and arched approaches of 3,460 feet, and a clear height above tide of 150 feet. When accomplished it will be one of the grandest engineering achievements of the world, and Mr. Light's professional skill amply qualifies him to carry out the same to a successful conclu-This distinguished gentleman has made for himself an enduring name in his profession, and several great public enterprises in this country are under no little obligation to his skill. He is yet in the zenith of his physical and professional powers; and we doubt not that brilliant achievements still await him.

as

Wilson, John Henry, M.D., M.R. C.P., S.O., M.P. for East Elgin, St. Thomas, was born near Ottawa, Carleton county, on the 14th February, 1834. His father was Jeremiah Wilson, and the maiden name of his mother Bailey, this lady being descended of an old Virginia family. Jeremiah Wilson was born in the State of Vermont, but came to Canada in 1810, settling near Montreal. Here he remained only a short period, removing to a point near Ottawa, where he engaged in the lumber trade. In 1837, he removed hence to Middlesex, where he took a farm. Mr. Wilson was descended of the United Empire loyalists; and he left a family of seven children, the subject of this sketch being the second youngest of the sons. J. E. and J. C. Wilson are prominent medical practitioners in Rochester, Michigan. John Henry Wilson at first attended the common schools, and afterwards the Grammar school at St. Thomas. He next repaired to Toronto, where he entered the Normal school, taking at the close of the term, though only in his eighteenth year, a grade A diploma. He taught school with much success for five years, and then (1857) entered the School of Medicine, at Toronto. He studied here for two years, after which he went to New York, entering the medical university of that city, returning to Canada again about six months afterwards. Dr. Wilson still continued for a period to attend lectures at the Toronto School of Medicine, and in 1858 he was appointed demonstrator of Anatomy in the Medical department of Victoria College. In the spring of 1859, he graduated M.D., and was immediately appointed professor of Anatomy in the above college, holding the position for two years, when ill health compelled him to yield up the professorial work. He then removed to St. Thomas, where he began practice, his health improving with the change in avocation. Dr. Wilson had been in the habit of watching closely current political history, and it was not unknown that he possessed fine abilities, as well as ambition, and his friends in due time came to him and declared he must offer himself for election to parliament. He consented, and was elected to the provincial legislature for East Elgin in 1871. He was reelected in 1875, but was not again a candidate until 1882, when he was elected by a good majority to the House of Commons for his old constituency. It is only simple justice to Dr. Wilson to say, that he is one of the most useful members in the House of Commons. During his career in the lesser parliament, he was connected with the passage of several important bills, among which may be mentioned, important railway measures, and various private bills. In the House of Commons, he displayed his chief energy in opposing Sir John Macdonald's Franchise Bill, raised his voice in telling vigorous protest, but the ministry and its friends had made up their minds, and argument from the other side of the House came as futile as the blowing of the wandering winds. Dr. Wilson is a shareholder in several public enterprises, and is a director in the Star Loan Company, of St. Thomas. He is an Episcopalian. In 1869, he married Amelia A., eldest daughter of the late G. R. Williams, of Toledo, Ohio, a gentleman of high standing in his day.

Funcken, Very Rev. Louis, D.D., Priest of the congregation of the Resurrection of our Lord, rector of St. Jerome's college at Berlin, and parish priest of the same town, was born on October 5th, 1833, in Geldreland, Prussia. After he had passed through primary schools in his native place, he was sent to Holland, where he entered upon a course of study at the Royal gymnasium at Roermond. He subsequently entered the Episcopal seminary at the same city, where after passing through the usual course he was ordained priest in 1862. In the same year he went to Rome, and while in the eternal city j ined the congregation of the Resurrection; and graduated in 1864 at the Roman university. He now resolved to proceed to Canada, and in the same year put his resolution into effect. A number of his fellow-countrymen, which included many of his co-religionists, had settled in the County of Waterloo, and here the young priest resolved to make the theatre of his future labours. The founding of an ecclesiastical institution of learning had taken hold of his mind, and the fruit of this idea is St. Jerome's college. Although this excellent seat of learning comes under ecclesiastical discipline its primary aim is to educate young men, of every race, in the spirit of Christianity, and to prepare them for higher professional studies at seminaries and universities. We are glad to say that it is each year growing in popularity and in usefulness.

Disney, Right Rev. Richard Randolph, Chatham, one of the nine bishops of the African Methodist Episcopal Church, was born in North-east Cecil, County Maryland, U.S., in the year 1835. His parents, Henry and Rebecca Disney, were free, though in earlier years both had known what it was to recognize masterhood in a shadow. Bishop Disney's diocese is very extensive, embracing North America, the West Indies, and a portion of South Amer-His father died when our subject was only in his eighth year. The lad and his mother then removed to Fort Deposit, and when he was old enough he repaired to Baltimore, and there learned the trade of barber with Solomon McCabe. At the age of thirteen he felt the "call of grace," and resolved to devote his life, when the opportunity occurred, to the cause of his Maker. He attached himself to the African Methodist Episcopal Church in Maryland, and began to have a strong yearning to preach the gospel to his brethren. He felt diffident at first about undertaking a mission so high, and of such importance to himself and his fellowmen, but he was satisfied that he had received the "call" to be "a fisher of men." But Maryland had no open ecclesiastical collegedoors for the African, and, proceeding northward, he entered the Osgoode Seminary at Springfield—one of the few institutions of learning that would admit a coloured youth to their classes. His career here was brilliant and exemplary, and he graduated with honours in 1857, and at once began his ministerial work in the African Methodist Episcopal Church. After a little while he crossed the boundary, and proceeded to Chatham, Canada West, now the Province of Ontario. His proffered services were at once accepted by Bishop Nazrey, who had episcopal charge here, and who sent him at once to Peel, where he remained for two years. The conference of 1859 sent him to Buxton; that of 1861 to Windsor; that of 1864 to Hamilton; that of 1866 to St. Catharines; that of 1869 to Toronto; that of 1873 to Chatham, where, upon the death of Bishop Nazrey, his talents, zeal, and success were rewarded by his elevation to the vacant bishopric. A bishop of the British Methodist Episcopal Church in 1875, with a membership of less than two thousand, by a re-union of that church in 1884 with the African Methodist Episcopal Church, our distinguished subject became one of its bishops, with a membership of a full half-million of souls. Our subject's career certainly has been a most active, brilliant, and distinguished one. He is a man of high character and very fine abilities; and he is held in marked esteem by all the white people with whom he comes in con-His splendid achievements will entitle him to be ranked among "representative Canadians." p the de de of was bed W.

Ha

Wi

aub

hon

bus

to a

he f

to C

tile

disas

sion

he bi

forev

of had

tinue 1866 : late C

descer

cation

tario a

fourted

in any

the con

militia.

very m

cillor, a

ly for o

he had

then go

adoption

ed the id

Van Allen, Daniel Ross, President and manager of the Chatham Manufacturing Company, in Chatham, Ontario, was born on the 27th December, 1823, in the township of Burford, County of Oxford. He is, as his name implies, of Dutch descent, on his father's side, and is of U. E. loyalist stock on both his father and mother's side. His father, the late William Van Allen, was born 2nd August, 1798; married to Rebecca S. Bowen on the 30th August. 1820; and died on the 30th September, 1876. He was the son of Captain Henry Van Allen, of Port Dover, who was born on the 10th June, 1766; married to Winfred Raplege on the 25th December, 1785; and died the 31st October, 1820. Winfred Raplege was born on 24th September, 1768; was married as above stated; and died on 1st September, 1854. Rebecca S., the mother of our subject, was born on 25th July, 1805; was married as already shown, and died June 9th, 1885. She was the daughter of Col. Wm. D. Bowen, of Burford, who married Miss Daniels, sister of the late Lawrence Daniels, of Burford. At the place and time of the birth of our subject, his father was largely engaged in the milling, distilling and mercantile business, but removed to the homestead of his late father in Port Dover, when our subject was about five years old. In the winter of 1883-4, Captain Henry Van Allen, uncle of our subject, who was then in business in Chatham, and who, by the way, at Chatham in 1831, built and ran the first steamboat carrying the British flag on the upper lakes, being on a visit to his brother in Port Dover, and taking a fancy to our subject, prevailed upon his parents to let him go home with him to Chatham, to learn the mercantile business. Daniel Ross remained with him till 1838 when he commenced "paddling his own canoe." From this period till 1845 he was engaged as a clerk in various country stores. In 1845 he was managing a small store for a Chatham firm at the point where Dresden is now situated. Thinking this locality very eligible for the site of a town, he purchased that part of lot four, in the fourth concession of the then township of Dawn, County of Kent, owned by Jared Lindsley, and upon it founded what is now the flourishing town of Dresden. In 1846 he married Susan, daughter of the late John Williams, of Howard, who was born 12th August, 1824, and who died on October 5th, 1865, leaving four children living. These are Dr. J. R. Van Allen, of Kansas city; Mildred, now deceased, who became Mrs. William Ball, of Chatham; E. W. H. Van Allen, now of Winnipeg; and Hattie, married to Robert H. Agur, now of Winnipeg. To get Dresden established, our subject built there an hotel, a grain warehouse and a merchant's shop, and carried on business in the place till 1849, when, owing to a heavy loss sustained in the stave trade, he failed, and shortly afterwards returned to Chatham, engaging there in the mercantile business. He was again overtaken by disaster in the unparalleled crisis and revulsion in trade that occurred in 1857-8, and he bid good-bye to the mercantile business forever, and embarked in the manufacture of hardwood lumber, in which he has continued ever since with marked success. 1866 he married Mary A., daughter of the late C. C. Waller, of New York city, a lineal descendant of the poet Waller. All his education was such as the public schools in Ontario afforded, between his eighth and his fourteenth years. He is not a military man in any sense of the word, though he holds the commission of captain in the Sedentary militia. He served the people of Chatham very many years as a school trustee, as councillor, as deputy reeve and reeve; and finally for one year as mayor of the town, when he had the honor of receiving Lord Dufferin, then governor-general. In 1882, after the adoption of the national policy, he conceived the idea of getting up a joint stock com-

rovince

vere at

ho had him at or two

him to that of

to St.

: that

death

l, and

ion to

of the

1875,

thou-

n 1884

scopal

ecame

p of a

t's ca-

man ities ;

ll the

conlen-

esen-

ident

ring

lborn

own-

le is,

, on

alist

side.

was

ecca

and

was

Port

ine.

the

81st

orn

33

pany for the purpose of making farm waggons, &c., by machinery, something after the model of the great waggon concerns in the United States, in which enterprise he was successful; and to day, the Chatham Manufacturing Company, of which he is president and manager, after passing through a severe struggle for existence, can say "it has come to stay." During his life he has been connected with three different secret societies, but has ceased his connection with all of them. He has been a life-long consistent Conservative, and is now the president of the L. C. A., of West Kent. He has never been much of a traveller. He was brought up in the Church of England, and adheres to it. During his thirty years residence in Chatham, since his last return to it in 1852, he has been a large employer of labor, and from enquiries on the spot we are led to believe there are but few men in the town of Chatham who have contributed more largely to the growth and material prosperity of that place than D. R. Van Allen has done; and judging from his present appearance, and the fact that he says he has not taken a shadow of any kind of drug medicines in forty years, we think, and may be permitted to express the wish, that there are still many years of his useful life in store for himself and the place he inhabits.

Kirby, William, F.R.S.C.—This wellknown Canadian author, like many other literary men, had a long preliminary training on the public press. He was for twenty years the editor and publisher of the Niagara Mail, the leading, and for a long time the only newspaper, except the Niagara Chronicle, which was published in the Niagara district, which comprised the three counties of Lincoln, Welland and Haldimand. Mr. Kirby. on ceasing to write for the press, continued his literary work, and wrote several valuable books, which stand high among the best specimens of Canadian literature, in recognition of which he was selected by the Marquis of Lorne as one of the original twenty members of the English literature section of the Royal Society. Mr. Kirby is most known, perhaps, as the author of the splendid Canadian historical romance of the Chien D'Or "-a book which has obtained a wide circulation, both in English and French. It has been complimented by several American piracies, which have extended the reputation of the author, but of course profited him nothing. But it is in the region of poetry that many find their greatest pleasure in Mr. Kirby's works.

nadian Idylls" are unique in our literature. They form a series, not yet completed, of poems of a high order, illustrative of Canadian scenes, Canadian history, life and sen-These idylls, so far, are nine in timent. number, each of them a separate poem, which has been published separately, yet with a slight thread of connection running through them all. The idylls, as published comprise "The Sparrows," "Dead lished, comprise "The Sparrows," "Dead Sea Roses," "The Hungry Year," "Stony Creek." "The Queen's Birthday," "Spina Christi," "The Bells of Kirby Wiske," "The Lord's Supper in the Wilderness," and "The Harvest Moon." Mr. Kirby is also the author of several dramatic works, "Beaumanoir," "Joseph in Egypt,"
"The Queen's Own," and others, with much writing on historical and archæological subjects. He also wrote and published "The U. E., a Story of Upper Canada," an epic in twelve cantos, and a great many minor poems. It may be said that for a man of much and varied business, and not an author by profession, although an unwearied student, Mr. Kirby has tried to do his full share towards the cultivation of literature in Canada, and has succeeded. Mr. Kirby is the representative of an old Yorkshire family of Kirby of Kirby Wiske, a branch of whom were Virginia loyalists, who returned to England during the American revolution. Maternally he descends from the old family of Watsons of Kingston-upon-Hull, his birthplace. The Watsons were, in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, of considerable local importance in Hull. One of them, the Rev. Thomas Watson, D.D., was master of St. John's College, Oxford, in the reign of Henry VIII; and in the reign of Queen Mary was the last Catholic Bishop of Lincoln. He was a great scholar and writer, and of much repute among the literary men of the period. was a patron and friend of the famous Roger Ascham, who most affectionately refers to him in his quaint book of "The School-master." Bishop Watson, to his honour be it said, resolutely opposed the religious persecutions that filled England with horror in the reign of Queen Mary, and never permitted a single trial for heresy to take place in This good and learned his vast diocese. man died in the Tower of London, a state prisoner, under Queen Elizabeth, for refusing to the end of his life to acknowledge her title to the crown. Another of the same name and family was Thomas Watson, of London, who in 1582 published his "Hecatompathia, or Passionate Century of Love," in a hundred sonnets of great poetic merit. and many other poems in Latin, English and Italian, highly prized by readers of Elizabethan literature. One of the progenitors of Mr. Kirby was still another Thomas Watson, of the same family, a sturdy opponent of Andrew Marvel, the Puritan poet, and member for Hull in the Long Parliament, and during the Cromwell usurpation. The large estates of the family were confiscated by the parliamentary commission sent down to punish the governor, Sir John Hotham, Thomas Watson, and others, for adhering to King Charles. Sir John Hotham lost his head, and Thomas Watson all his property, in consequence of their loyalty to the Crown. Some of the ancient public charities of Hull owe their foundation to endowments from the Watson family. Mr. Kirby came to America quite young, and received part of his education in Cincinnati, under the famous Scotchman, Alexander Kinmont. whose Classical and Philosophical academy. between the years 1827 and 1838, was of great reputation throughout the west, and frequented by a number of the most studious and ambitious youths of the city and state, and even now, nearly half a century after the death of Kinmont, his famous academy is proudly and often referred to in the Educational history of Cincinnati, for the excellence of its teaching and the number of eminent men who received their education there. There were no colleges in those days in the western states, but a thorough grounding in Latin, under his able teacher, enabled Mr. Kirby to prosecute his classical studies, and to acquire a great knowledge of the modern languages, the spirit of which has permeated his writings both of prose and poetry, although his language and style are of the purest and most idiomatic English imaginable. The "Chien D'Or" is so thoroughly imbued with the spirit of the French society of the period, that the descendants of the seigneurs can scarcely believe that the author's name is not a nom de plume, and that he is not one of their race and lineage. Mr. Kirby, after a brief residence in Montreal, came to Upper Canada in 1839 and settled in Niagara, where he has ever since resided. He married the only daughter of John Whitmore, of Niagara, and granddaughter of Captain Daniel Servos, of the Northern Confederate Indians, and of Butler's rangers, a U. E. loyalist and gallant officer throughout the war of the American revolution. Mr. Kirby has been in the commission of the peace for the County of Lincoln for many years, and is at present co of ba

18

ba

ter

bat

ber

Rif

pan pan Feb

For

lieu

ville

0ur

been

Dr.

vern

Cam

berla

Scoti

had i

Carol

re-joi

by Dr

award.

(1885) the collector of Her Majesty's Customs for the port of Niagara. He has two sons, Eugene Guildford, living at Calgary, Alberta, and John Colborne living to Toronto. Mr. Kirby is an adherent of the Church of England, a sincere believer in the divinity of Christ, and in the sanctity of his Word. His writings are imbued with reverence for religion, as the true end of all learning, and without which mere literary genius and power of language are more hurtful than helpful to the cause of truth and morality. These principles have been present in intention in all Mr. Kirby's writings, which, without being either dog-matic or latitudinarian, are very far removed from that laxity of principle and want of deep conviction which are so prevalent in literature in these later days of dismal negations and philosophic pessimism.

merit.

sh and

Eliza-

enitors

s Wat-

ament

t, and

ment,

scated

down

tham.

hering

n lost

prop-

to the

char-

ndów-Kirby

eived

under mont.

lemy,

ras of

, and studi-

and

hturv

mous

to in

r the

ber of

ation

days

und-

, en-

sical

edge

hich

rose

style

glish hor-

ench

ants

the

and

age.

ont-

re-

· of

nd-

the

But-

ant

can

r of

The

Ponton, Edward George, Barrister, Solicitor, etc., Belleville, Ontario, was born at Belleville, on the 2nd March, 1856. He is a son of Lieutenant-Colonel Archd. Ponton, of the same place, from whom, as well as from his paternal grandfather, he inherits strong military tastes. His father was born at Inverness, Scotland (as were all his family), on the 24th September, 1806. While connected with the force he was an enthusiastic officer and a splendid "drill"; and his commissions are as follows :- Ensign in Whitby Independent company (Captain Alexander Macdonald's) of Militia, 23 October, 1838; ensign fourth battalion of Incorporated Militia, 1st May, 1840, in which he served until it was disbanded in 1843, after the rebellion; lieutenant in 1842; captain and adjutant 1st battalion of Belleville Militia, 27th September, 1855; adjutant 1st Volunteer Militia Rifle company of Belleville, now No. 1 company of the 49th battalion, the oldest company on the roll of the active militia, 4th February, 1859; major in the Militia Force of Canada, 27th December, 1861; lieutenant-colonel 15th battalion of Belleville (which he raised), 16th January, 1863. Our subject's ancestors, we may say, have been pioneers of this part of the country. Dr. Mungo Ponton, his grandfather, left Inverness, Scotland, in 1831, to settle near Campbellford, in the County of Northumberland, whither his father, who had left Scotland when a boy of thirteen, but who had in the meantime been living in North Carolina and the West Indies, proceeded to re-join the family. The land settled upon by Dr. Ponton was a free grant of 800 acres, awarded him for military services, which he rendered as far back as the Irish rebellion of 1798. He held the rank of captain under Colonel Cameron, of Lochiel. Dr. Ponton died near Belleville in the year 1849, at the age of ninety-two, his widow following in the year 1865, at the age of eighty-one. The three surviving sons are Arch. Ponton (our subject's father), William Hamilton Ponton, registrar, and James Wemyss Ponton, deputy-registrar, of the County of Hastings, all of whom have lived in Belleville since it was a little village. Mr. Ponton's father is a staunch Conservative, and he himself professes the same political faith, but his uncles are reformers. father and the uncles resemble their father in being splendid specimens of Highlanders -all over six feet high, with every appearance of attaining the age of their parents. Edward Ponton reveals his ancestry in his physique, being not inferior at all in height, while military and athletic exercises have made his uniforms fit well. Our subject was educated at the old Grammar School and Albert college, Belleville, and graduated with honours in modern languages at Toronto University in 1874, at the early age of eighteen. He passed the final examinations in law in 1877 at Osgoode Hall, Toronto. He enlisted in the University company Queen's Own Rifles in 1873, and served therein as private until the 5th May, 1877, when he was gazetted en-He accompanied his regiment to Montreal on the 24th May, 1878, and on the 24th May, 1879, when it took part in the grand reviews there. He was promoted lieutenant on the 5th November, 1878. Having returned to his home in Belleville to practice law, he was made captain in the 49th Hastings Rifles, on the 28th November, 1879. He was appointed adjutant on the 12th January, 1883, and honoured with the appointment of brigade major at brigade camp, Kingston, in September, 1885, under Lieutenant-Colonel Villiers, D.A.G. At the outbreak of the rebellion of 1885 he was appointed adjutant of the Midland battalion, a provisional regiment 400, strong, under the late Lieutenant-Colonel Williams, He shared in the miseries of the marches on the ice of Lake Superior, and went from Swift Current to Fish Creek on This was the historic steamer Northcote. the first trip made by any steamer down that 200 mile part of the South Saskatchewan. Adjutant Ponton was present with a detachment of the regiment during the four days' fighting at Batoche, including the charge, and afterwards went with the regiment to Prince Albert, Battleford, Pitt Landing, Fort Pitt, Frog Lake, returning home via Grand Rapids, lakes Winnipeg, home via Grand Rapids, Superior and Huron, to Port Hope, where the regiment disbanded. Our subject is a splendid drill, and a more than usually good representative of the Canadian militia officer, and he has the gift of being able to handle his men successfully, and at the same time to be popular with all ranks. He is a member of the I.O.O.F., and is prominent and enthusiastic in that order, being a member of Belleville lodge, No. 81, and Moira encampment, No. 59. He has been through all the chairs of the subordinate lodge, and was the first chief patriarch of the encampment referred to, and was its delegate at the Grand Encampment, Hamilton, 1885. He has never taken an active part in politics, but was born, and hopes always to remain, a Conservative. He married, on 10th March, 1881, Elizabeth, daughter of E. P. Hannaford, chief engineer of the Grand Trunk railway, Montreal.

Street, William Purvis Rochfort, Barrister-at-law, London, Ontario, was born on the 13th November, 1841, at the above place. He is a son of William Warren Street, who came from Devonshire, England, in 1832, and Frances Mary, daughter of Major Leonard, of H.M. 104th regiment, and formerly sheriff of the Niagara district. W. P. R. Street was educated at the Grammar School, London. He afterwards went to Toronto and took the degree of LL.B., at the University of Toronto, and the gold medal in law at the same university. was examiner in the faculty of Law there for four years. He entered the Law Society of Upper Canada as a student in Hilary term 1859; studied law in the office of the late H. C. R. Becher, Q.C., was called to the bar in Easter term, 1864, and has practised in London ever since. He was created Queen's Council in 1883. In politics Mr. Street is a strong Conservative, though, so far, he has not sought political honours. He was appointed Chairman of the North-West half-breed commission in March, 1885, and in that capacity visited nearly every settlement in the North-West during the spring and summer of 1885, traversing the entire length of the North Saskatchewan from Edmonton to Grand Rapids, proceeding most of the distance in an open boat. In religion he has always been a member of the Church of England. Mr. Street married on the 9th July, 1867, Eleanor, daughter of Thomas Sheppard Smyth, of Hazelwood, London, Ontario.

Holmes, Tecumseh Kingsley, M.D., Chatham, is the son of Abraham and Jane Louisa (nee Gibson) Holmes, and was born near Florence, in the County of Lambton. on the 17th January, 1839. His father, who is still living, was born ten miles east of Chatham, on the river Thames, in 1797. and lived there the greater part of his life. He has witnessed the progress of settlement in western Ontario through all its phases, and distinctly remembers seeing the Indian chief Tecumseh on the morning of the battle in which he was killed. The great-grandfather of the subject of this notice came from Ireland to this country when the father of Abraham Holmes was a child. and settled at Montreal. On reaching manhood, the grandfather of Dr. Holmes removed to Sandwich, where he was principal of an academy for many years. The Gibson's were United Empire loyalists, and the maternal grandfather of our subject, being attached as guide to Burgoyne's army, was surrendered with others as a prisoner of war, having been for some time confined in During this time he became acquainted with his future wife, who was a daughter of General Gates, and who was instrumental in his escape from confine-The romantic episode of this acment. quaintance, escape and perilous journey northward along lake Champlain to Canada, had its sequel in their subsequent marriage and settlement in Canada. Dr. Holmes received his education in the public schools of his native county, and pursued the profession of teacher near Chatham for five years. He then began the study of medicine under the late Dr. Wallen, attended lectures at the medical department of the University of Michigan, and subsequently went to Long Island College Hospital, where he graduated in 1865. In 1866 he received the degree of M.D. from the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York, and in 1857 passed the examination of the University of Victoria, and received the Canadian degree of M.D. from that college. He then settled in Chatham, where he has lived ever since. For many years he was surgeon of the 24th battalion, and for several years was a member of the Public School board of Chatham, always taking an active interest in educational matters, and occasionally lecturing before teachers' conventions. Western and St. Clair Medical Association was formed he became one of its most active members, and was a delegate from it to the International Medical Congress at Philadelphia in 1876, on which occasion he prepared and conv high was p congr since origin aging Outar Canad which fic pap Canad Holme puerpi the De in 188 cause a which North compet means class to Reform Englan perance chief of the Cot 1873, h of Thor manufa two son ley, age two year

Mur Chathan born De homeste as "Th from the of Haldi: tion at h at Caled where h mathema eighteen going up duced hir applicant one other ceeded in The school become v nnanimou situation, most acce and goodbours thus associate

der the

and read a paper on the management of convulsions in children depending on a high temperature of the body, which paper was published in the transactions of that congress, and the plan of treatment has since been quoted in text-books as an original and most successful mode of managing these cases. He is a member of the Ontario Medical Association, and of the Canadian Medical Association, to both of which he has contributed numerous scienti-At the annual meeting of the fic papers. Canadian Medical Association in 1885, Dr. Holmes was chosen president. A paper on puerpural mania, read by invitation before the Detroit Medical and Library Association in 1885, containing original views as to the cause and treatment of this form of insanity, which Dr. Munson, superintendent of the Northern Asylum of Michigan, and others, competent to judge, believe will be the means of restoring many lunatics of this class to health. In politics Dr. Holmes is a Reformer. He belongs to the Church of England, is an ardent advocate of the temperance cause, and was the first worthy chief of the first lodge of Good Templars in the County of Kent. On January 23rd, 1873, he married Mary Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas H. Taylor, one of the leading manufacturers of Chatham. They have two sons, Garnet, aged eleven, and Kingsley, aged eight, and one daughter, Edith, two years old. Since 1880 he has been associated with Dr. G. T. McKeough, under the firm name of Holmes & McKeough.

ne

rn

bn,

ho

of

07,

fe.

le-

its

ng

ng

10-

en

Murphy, Henry Joseph, M.D., Chatham, County of Kent, Ontario, was born December 31st, 1842, at the family homestead—a beautiful country seat known as "The Shelters"—about twelve miles from the City of Hamilton, in the County of Haldimand. Having received his education at home, he was sent to the high school at Caledonia, and afterwards to Hamilton, where he received a finished classical and mathematical education. At the age of eighteen some of his class-mates who were going up for examination for teachers induced him to join them, and out of eighty applicants the subject of this sketch and one other-Mr. Younghusband-alone succeeded in obtaining a first-class certificate. The school at his birth-place was about to become vacant, and the trustees at once unanimously tendered young Murphy the situation, which he accepted, and taught most acceptably for one year. The esteem and good-will of his class-mates and neighbours thus manifested is, perhaps, one of the happiest circumstances of his youth. and was duly appreciated. He entered upon the study of medicine in the medical department of the University of Buffalo. where he graduated M.D. in the spring of of 1865; and at the close of the previous session the American war offering an attractive field for the student of medicine and surgery, he at once applied for and secured the appointment, first as medical cadet in the army, and was assigned to hospital duty at Washington, D.C., and, subsequently, having obtained his degree, took the rank of assistant-surgeon. He served in several of the largest army hospitals in Washington city until the close of the rebellion. Returning to Canada, with the vast experience the young surgeon derives from active service, he began practice at Staffa, County of Perth, where he continued with marked success until the autumn of 1866, when he entered Queen's University, Kingston, and graduated there in 1867, obtaining the additional degree of L.R.C.P.S.K. Acting on the advice of a friend—Judge Doyle, of Goderich—Dr. Murphy settled permanently to the practice of his profession at Chatham, where he soon established a very large and well-merited general practice, and has distinguished himself especially as a surgeon, having performed successfully many of the most difficult operations. He is frequently called thirty, forty, and fifty miles for consultation. Besides being one of the oldest coroners for the County of Kent, and a member of several medical associations, he has been three times selected as a delegate to attend the meetings of the American Medical Association, and was chosen one of the delegates from the Western and St. Clair Medical Association to attend the international medical congress held at the city of Philadelphia in 1876, where was assembled representative physicians and delegates from nearly every country in Europe and America. The subject of this sketch was the first to broach the subject of organizing a branch of the Irish National League in Chatham-which was the second of the kind in Canada—and was unanimously elected president. A meeting of the Irish citizens of Chatham and vicinity, including those of Irish descent, was called, at which nearly two hundred dollars was raised for the parliamentary fund, and which went to assist Mr. Parnell in carrying out his scheme of paying a sessional allowance to the members of the Irish parliamentary party. His father, Jas. W. Murphy, was one of the old pioneers of this country who emigrated here from the City of Cork, Ireland, in the year 1829, where several of his immediate relatives - whose guiding principle was well expressed in the family motto: Virtus vera nobilitas have risen to eminence in the army and the learned professions. Along with Colonel Martin, who was also sheriff of the County of Haldimand and a distinguished Corkonian, he took an active part in quelling the rebellion of 1837, and did a soldier's duty on the Niagara frontier till quiet was restored. Notwithstanding his loyalty and love for his adopted country, he was one of the first to welcome the return of Lyon Mackenzie from exile, who now came to be regarded as a redeemer of our liberty, having rid us of the evils of family compactism and given us more constitutional freedom. The fearless old County of Haldimand elected him five times to the legislature, from which he was five times expelled, and thereby was taunted by a certain clique as "the rebel county." author of "The Life and Times of the Right Hon. Sir John A. Macdonald " says: "We persecuted him in every conceivable way. Finally we drove him into the rebellion and set a price of £1,000 upon his head. Now we are about erecting a column to his memory." The father of our subject was married in 1831, at Cobourg, by the Rev. Mr. Batham, to Mary Johnson, a native of the City of York, England, who brought with her a considerable patrimony, and proved a long and most happy union. She is still hale and comely at the age of seventy-three years, a model of christian virtue and devotion, endowed with a high moral nature and exceptionally so with regard to the divine faculties—faith and love. Being of a retiring disposition, and not caring for political life, Mr. Murphy's chief employment for many years was that of agriculture and stock-raising, but for twenty-three years previous to his death he lived upon his income. He was also one of the early promoters and stockholders of the Hamilton and Port Dover Railway. Leaving a wife and eight children (four of each sex) to survive him, he died at the residence of his youngest son, who is also the subject of this sketch, in Chatham, aged seventy-five years-the silver cord of domestic affections which unites parents with their children and brothers with their sisters being never strained or broken.

Burdett, Samuel Barton, LL.D., Belleville, Ontario, was born on the shores of the Bay of Quinté, in the township of Tyendinaga, Hastings County, September

He comes of pure loyalist par-30th, 1843. entage, his parents, Matthew Steel Burdett and Sarah Dingman, being children of the loyalist pioneers of the County of Prince Edward. Like many other public men of to-day, Dr. Burdett entered public life through the teacher's profession, having begun to teach at the early age of seventeen years. He was entered at Albert College, where he completed his classical and preliminary law studies, and was articled in Michaelmas Term, 1862. He began the practice of law at Belleville, in 1867, and for eighteen years has enjoyed almost uninterrupted professional success, being now one of the first in his profession in the city. He has had a good share of civic preferment: was in the council for three years, holding the chairmanship of important committees. the last being that of finance in 1874. He was one of the promoters and directors of the Belleville and North Hastings Railway Company. In educational affairs he has always taken a deep interest, and Albert College owes much of her prosperity to his untiring support. He took the full course in the Faculty of Law at that college, passing the final examination for LL.B. in 1872, and completing the exercises and thesis for LLD. in 1879. He afterwards became dean of the Faculty of Law, and examiner and Lecturer in Commercial Law. He has long been a member of the board of management, giving the institution his professional services gratuitously in many of her difficulties. He was appointed to the Senate of Albert University in 1870, and one of the regents of Victoria University in 1883. He has represented Albert College in the Senate of the University of Toronto since 1874, being thus a member of the senates of three different Universities. Among the students and graduates of Albert Collegehis genial disposition and excellent business talents have made him a favourite. He held the presidencies of several of the literary, scientific and alumni societies, and is chairman of the executive committee of the board of management of Albert College. The students of Albert College desired his services as captain of a volunteer company formed in 1877, and this Dr. Burdett was compelled by professional engagements to decline, though holding a military school Our subject was bred in the certificate. Methodist Episcopal church and after the formation of the United Methodist gave in his adherence to the union, and the church still finds in him a generous supporter. He was married on April 13th, 1870, to Tryphe phi

Ìоу

see

gen ents

bor.

con

gres dett

Su

M.A

born

fathe

was his r

born

age

enga

son

part

late S

of wh

famil

in nav

trades

young

Lake

boat b

known

portan

by gov

fulfille

tion. I

er port

Montre

in the 12, 185

till 18

Sutherl

training

mar sch

toria Co

His cou

the law

Hamilto

He prad

end of

strongly

therefore church as

dination

Morley

was stat

Dundas.

oque, Ga

and Lond

phena, daughter of D. D. Wright and Sophia, nee Howard, who were of pure U. E. loyalist descent. Of this marriage there is issue a daughter, Mabel, who, as may be seen by this sketch, can boast of being a genuine Canadian, her parents, grand parents and great grand parents having been born in Canada, and having been closely connected with the early history and progress of the country. In politics Dr. Burillia a tradfort Libral.

par-

Bur-

en of

rince

en of life

g be-

iteen

lege,

pre-

d in

the

and

min-

now

city.

ent:

ding

tees,

He

s of wav

has

bert

his

urso

289-

in

and

rds

and

a₩.

i of

ro-

her

ate.

the 83.

tes

dett is a steadfast Liberal. Sutherland, Rev. Donald George, M.A., B.D., LL.B., London, Ontario, was born at Toronto, on April 12th, 1839. His father was Captain James Sutherland, who was born in Hoy, Orkney Islands; and his mother Margaret Robinson Sutherland, born in Lincolnshire, England. At an early age the father of our subject went to sea, engaging himself in the service of the Hudson Bay Company, and at one time spent nart of his time in the same ship with the late Sir John Franklin. He was a member of what may justly be termed a sea-faring family, some of whom obtained high honours in naval combats with the French. After serving in the Baltic and South American trades, Captain Sutherland, while yet a young man, came to Canada, and here, upon Lake Ontario, at once engaged in the steamboat business, in which as captain and steamboat owner he became widely and favourably known. During the rebellion of 1837-8, important commissions were put in his hands by government, and the manner in which he fulfilled his trust brought high commendation. In the latter years of his life, the greater portion of the traffic from Hamilton to Montreal fell into his hands. He was killed in the Desjardins canal accident on March 12, 1857, and Mrs. Sutherland survived him till 1878. Our subject, Donald George Sutherland, received his early educational training at the Hamilton Public and Grammar schools. He afterwards entered Victoria College, graduating therefrom in 1859. His course completed, he began the study of the law in the office of Judge O'Reilly, at Hamilton, and passed as a solicitor in 1862. He practiced for about a year; but at the end of that period he felt himself drawn strongly towards the ministerial calling. He therefore entered the Wesleyan Methodist church as probationer, and received his ordination in 1868, at the hands of the Rev. Morley Punshon, D.D. Thereafter he was stationed at Milton, at Oakville, at Dundas, at Brampton, Kingston, Ganan-oque, Galt, Simcoe, Clinton, St. Thomas, and London. In 1867, he received his M.A.

degree, and in 1873 his LL.B., from the University of Toronto. He received his B.D. from Victoria University in 1878. In 1862, Mr. Sutlerland was appointed ensign in the 8th battalion, Wentworth. respect to offices held by him, it may be said that he was financial secretary of districts in 1874-5, 1881-2; was secretary of the London Conference in 1883-4; chairman of the St. Thomas district in 1883; and a member of the general conferences in 1878-82-3. He has travelled considerably. In 1869, he made a trip to Rome; and in 1880 visited Egypt, Palestine, Damascus, Constantinople and Athens. An account of these travels was published in the Methodist Magazine, in 1881. The descriptions are vivid, graceful, and extremely interesting. Rev. Mr. Sutherland married, in 1872, Helena, eldest daughter of the Hon. J. C. Aikins, then senator, and now lieutenant-governor of The fruit of this union is four Manitoba. children.

Riopel, Louis Joseph, LL.B., M.P. for Bonaventure, Quebec, was born at St. Jacques, L'Achigan, County of Montcalm, P.Q., on the 11th of November, 1843. His family was one of the first to settle in La Nouvelle France. Louis Joseph received a careful training in the petit schools, and afterwards entered at L'Assomption College, where his career was marked with much success. Concluding his studies here, he read law in the office of Honourable Louis Archambault, N.P., at L'Assomption. In October, 1865, he was admitted as notary; and in 1868 he settled at New Carlisle, County of Bonaventure, where he practised as notary with much ability and success till 1880, when he was called to the bar of his native province, having graduated LL. B. at Laval University, in July of the same year. He has all the qualities of a successful advocate, and if he were to devote all his time to his profession, his achievements would unquestionably be many and important. But he is a man of great activity, and has concerned himself with a number of enterprises, public as well as private. He was superintendent of Colonization works for the County of Bonaventure, from 1869 to 1873; and from the last named year to 1881, was Crown lands and timber agent. He now decided upon entering public life, and his personal qualities and excellent business and professional attainments made him popular. He was elected, in 1881, to the Quebec legislature, for Bonaventure, but in the following year resigned his seat to become a candidate for the House of Commons. He was elected by acclamation, and is now one of the prominent members in that parliament. Mr. Riopel has devoted a great deal of his time and energy towards promoting the scheme of the Baie des Chaleurs Railway, which is now under construction, and he is the managing director of that important undertaking. also a director of the North-West Central Railway Company. He married on the 24th of November, 1875, Marie Louise Justine, a daughter of the late L. A. Robitaille, N.P., of Varennes. Mr. Riopel is an adherent of the Catholic faith.

McMaster, Hon. William, Toronto, Senator, was born in 1811 in the County of Tyrone, Ireland, emigrating to Canada in his twenty-second year. He is a son of the late William McMaster, a linen merchant, and a man of the highest character,who did business for many years in the native county of the subject of this memoir. William's early education was a very careful one, he having attended a private school, the best in the neighborhood, presided over by Mr. Halcro, one of the most eminent teachers in the north of Ireland. He had, we learn, intended to settle in the States, but was induced, by the British consul at New York, to come to Canada, where, as we have seen, he reached at the age of twenty-two. He entered the wholesale and retail establishment of Robert Cathcart, whose store was on the south side of King street facing Toronto street. There could be no higher proof of his business ability than that after a year he became a partner. Ultimately he saw his way to do better still, and set up for himself as a wholesale merchant on Yonge street, just below King street. At that time the principal distributing centre, even for Upper Canada, was Montreal. But Mr. McMaster saw that this was not destined to be perpetual; that a change had already set in, and that by energy and business talent, Toronto could be made a formidable rival to Montreal. He can hardly be described as a pioneer in the attempt to divert the trade from its old and well-worn channel, but hardly any one has done more than he has to make the attempt successful. He extended his business until all Western Ontario was his market. built large premises and took his nephews into partnership with him. Extended business again compelled him to build. When enterprise, sound judgment, and business ability are tempered with prudence and caution, the admixture becomes a powerful been strongly exemplified in the career of William McMaster. He has known how to make money, and he has known how to do good. To give a list of Senator McMaster's business connections, and of the numerous positions that he holds in prominent societies in the community can present no idea of how great the man's achievements have been. We give them, however: He was for many years head of the firm of W. McMaster & Nephews, wholesale dry goods merchants, Toronto : is a member of the Senate of the University of Toronto; president of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, and of the Freehold Permanent Building and Savings Society; vice-president of the Confederate Life Association; a director of the Toronto General Trusts Company, and of the Wellington. Grev & Bruce Railway. He held for several years the office of chairman of the Canadian Board of the Great Western Railway Company; is chairman of the board of trustees of the Baptist College, which was erected and furnished by him at an expense of over $100,000. He represented the Midland di. vision in the Legislative Council of Canada from 1862 until the union. He was called to the Senate by Royal proclamation, May, 1867. In all benevolent, religious, moral or worthy movements he has been one of the foremost spirits in the community. The Baptist Church, on the corner of Gerrard and Jarvis streets, Toronto, and one of the handsomest structures in the city, never would have been erected but for this prince of philanthropists. The joint contribution of himself and his wife to this edifice was over $60,000. He has been a liberal supporter of the Canadian Literary Institute, Woodstock, his contribution to the building fund alone being $12,000. He is treasurer, and has been in that office for many years, of the Upper Canada Bible Society, to which, with his wonted liberality he has been a consistent subscriber. Senator McMaster has been twice married, first in 1851, to Mary Henderson, of New York city, who died in 1868, and in 1871 to his present wife, Susan Molten, widow of the late James Fraser, of Newburgh, New York state. He was mainly instrumental in founding the Superannuated Ministers' Society of the Baptist Church of Ontario, and the success to the institution is, in a large measure, due to his liberality and excellent management. He has always given careful and conscientious attention to political questions, and though he has been a steadfast Liberal lever to success, and these qualities have through his life, he has never exhibited nar-

pa hi

on

tha

fid

Se

act

rec

dee

me

inst

the

ized

info

digi

not

a ci

goes

Bap

Onta

on t

of A

of G

of Ca

1812

Grov

ents :

about

Peter

to the

abode

he pu

still

Grove

kenzie

loyalis

was tl

sketch

He at

but aft

Fergus

resolve

tered tl

he rem

in the s

sity.

Fergus

the late

of Mun

isted t

Groves.

1874, w

John W

Universi

existed

ing. H

into part

associatio

Ĝ

rowness of view, and cannot be called a partizan. He is a man whose allegiance to his party could be counted upon to exist only as long as the principles advocated by that party maintained his respect and con-In the committee work of the Senate Mr. McMaster is one of the most active members, and his advice is always received with the highest deference. Indeed we may add that it is the presence of men like Senator McMaster that saves that institution from the iconoclastic hammer of His course there is characterized by great breadth of view, by wide information, by judicial calmness, and by dignity. His career has been, on the whole, not alone highly honourable to himself, but a credit to the land of his adoption. It goes without saying that the Senator is a

r of

how

how

ator of

s in

can

an's

em.

l of

ws,

; is sity

lian

old

ty;

880~

eral

eral ian

mees ted

ver

di.

ted

or he

he ird

he

er

er did id Baptist. He has no children. Groves, Abraham, M. D., Fergus, Ontario, was born in the town of Peterboro', on the 8th September, 1847. He was a son of Abraham Groves, by Margaret, daughter of Gideon Gibson, one of the early pioneers of Canada, who served through the war of 1812-15, and fought at Lundy's Lane. Mr. Groves came to this country with his parents from the County of Wicklow, Ireland, about 1826, and settled in the vicinity of Peterboro'. In 1856 Mr. Groves removed to the County of Wellington, taking up his abode in the township of Garafraxa, where he pursued the occupation of farmer. He still lives on the old homestead. Mrs. Groves is also surviving. During the Mackenzie rebellion Mr. Groves took part on the loyalists' side. The fruit of the marriage was thirteen children, the subject of this sketch being the second eldest of the family. He at first attended the common schools, but afterwards entered the High school at Fergus. Some time after leaving school he resolved to study medicine, and in 1868 entered the Toronto School of Medicine, where he remained until 1871, graduating M.D. in the same year, from the Toronto University. After graduation he at once went to Fergus and entered into partnership with the late Dr. Munro, under the firm name of Munro & Groves, which partnership existed two years. After dissolution Dr. Groves practised for himself alone until 1874, when he took into partnership Dr. John Wishart, now lecturer at the Western University, at London, which partnership existed one year, Dr. Wishart then retiring. However, again in 1879, he took into partnership Dr. Thomas Chisholm, the association continuing for a year. In 1882

he again took another partner, Dr. J. F. McMahon, now of Toronto, but this combination too dissolved in 1883; and since that time Dr. Groves has continued alone in business, now having one of the largest practices in Fergus. In 1869 he graduated from the old Toronto Military school; in 1882 he was elected to the village council of Fergus, and was re-elected for the years of 1883 and 1884. He was elected reeve for 1885, but owing to his position of surgeon of the county poor house, he could not retain his seat. Dr. Groves is largely interested in real estate in the village, owning some of the finest buildings there, among which structures may be mentioned the Imperial Bank building, constructed of brown stone. He was also the builder, and is proprietor of the "Groves Roller Mills," which, when completed, will have a capacity of seventy barrels per day. He is a member of the Freemason Mercer lodge, No. 347; is surgeon and member of the Oddfellows' lodge No. 73, and has held all of the offices in that order. He is also a member of the Royal Templars, and physician to lodge No. 124. In 1878 Dr. Groves was appointed physician and surgeon to the Grand Trunk Railway at Fergus, which position he still holds. In 1882 he was appointed physician and surgeon to the Wellington county House of Industry, and this office he still likewise retains. politics he has held aloof from parties, though sincerely interested in the welfare of the country. He is a member of the Church of England, and has been church warden for twelve years of St. James church. Fergus. He married in 1874, Jennie, daughter of the late William Gibbon, of Elora, and by this lady has a family of two children. Dr. Groves enjoys the repute of being a very skilful surgeon, and he was the first to perform in Canada the operation technically known to the profession as supra pubic His whole interests are bound lithotomy. up in his profession, and to this may be attributed the large measure of success which he has achieved.

Miller, John Stewart, Centreville, Ontario, was born on September 17th, 1844, in the township of Camden, County of Addington, Ontario, being the only son of Thomas Miller and Christian Madden. Our subject received a common school education in his native township, and graduated from the Ontario Commercial College at Belleville, in 1871. He was attached to No. 1 company, 48th battalion; lieutenant in 1879; and on the disbandment of the 48th battalion, attached to the 47th battalion. In 1875 he was appointed clerk of Camden township, and still holds that position. He was admitted a member of the Orange association in 1864; served as county master of Lennox and Addington in 1878 and 1879; joined the Masonic fraternity in 1869; acted as master of Victoria lodge, No. 299, in 1870-71; assisted in organizing Lorne lodge, A.F. and A.M., Tamworth, acting as first master, and still holds that position. Mr. Miller was brought up under the instructions of the Methodist denomination, his mother having joined that church in She is still living, and continues a member of the Methodist body. subject married, in 1871, Carrie, second daughter of James Hawley, of Centreville; but she died February 24th, 1874. He married the second time, in 1877, Annie, eldest daughter of Robert Robertson, of Kingston. Mr. Miller occupied himself with farming on the homestead, lot 30, 7th concession of Camden; but in 1883 he purchased a half interest in the mercantile business of A. N. Lapum, and at the time of writing is engaged in the above pursuits. He was appointed secretary of the Liberal-Conservative Association of Addington in 1880, and still holds that office. He is a consistent Conservative, but he has nothing in his character of the narrow party bigot. In all his relations he is popular and highly

Blackburn, Josiah, Managing Editor of the London Free Press, was born at London, England, in 1823. He received his education at the City of London School, and came to Canada in 1850. Having a taste for literary work and political writing, naturally he soon drifted into newspaper work. In 1851 we find him associated with the Paris Star, but an opening occurring during the following year he purchased the interest of the London Free Press, assuming charge at the close of 1852. aided soon afterwards in the establishment of the Ingersoll Chronicle, and for some time conducted both papers. In 1855 the daily Free Press was issued. At that time he was in accord with the Reform party of the day, and was a candidate at the general election in 1858, but was defeated by the late Marcus In 1859 a difference arose with his Talbot. political friends, growing out of the attitude of the Globe with respect to an attack made in its columns on the motives of the judges in the decisions which they gave in the episode known as the "double shuffle." course was hotly denounced, and an attempt was made to dragoon him, after the manner of those times. Shortly afterwards he adduced reasons why the reformers should look to the late Hon. John Sandfield Mac-In 1862 that highly donald as their leader. honoured man was called to office at Quebec, and Mr. Blackburn was asked by his government to conduct the Mercury in the interest of the ministry, to which our subject agreed, availing himself of the excellent services of George Sheppard. After the fall of the Sandfield Macdonald administration in 1864, a coalition of parties took place, on the basis of the confederation of the whole of the B. N. A. provinces; the Hon. George Brown finding himself in the same cabinet with his ancient opponents, Sir John Macdonald and Sir George E. Cartier. Supporting that movement and those who brought it about. Mr. Blackburn remained attached to the men and the cause which they represented, and thus declined, with others, to follow the Hon. Mr. Brown into opposition when he retired from the ranks of the Coalition gov-The provincial administration of ernment. John Sandfield Macdonald having been formed, it found in the Free Press a warm supporter. In 1872 Mr. Blackburn was requested to aid in the establishment of the Toronto Mail, remaining in the discharge of that duty for about fifteen months. In 1881 he was appointed as one of the chief officers in connection with the taking of the census. In 1884 he was named on a commission to proceed to Washington to investigate the methods of public printing adopted there. reporting on the same. Mr. Blackburn has been recognised in many ways as a useful member of the Canadian press, and he has been an extremely active journalist. Upon political questions Mr. Blackburn's judgment is admitted to be very sound, and he never, by haste or immature consideration as a journalist, prejudices the interests of his party.

Worthington, Addison, Licentiate of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Lower Canada, and Provincial Licentiate, and Coroner for the County of Huron, was born in the township of Longueuil, County of Prescott, Upper Canada, on June 3, 1818. His father, Stephen Hall Worthington, was a native of Wallingford, Connecticut; and his mother, Elizabeth (Ford) Worthington, was born in Plainfield, Massachusetts, both being of good New England descent. His father's ancestor, Nicholas Worthington, emigrated to Connecticut in 1650 from Lancashire, England. As the name of Worthington is pretty widely diffused in Canada and the United States, those who bear it

Н w hig gei age the one par esca Cou prot but, Was that tion year to G where wife i ceived tion, ville study to app ingenid and wa age of master to that scope fo mills, w tific in New Yo the win parental attack of him the finally t father's of medici when he gain the work at teach sch

sping his

completed

Was a grad

then an

his college

once comm

the village

quois. He

tice, which

county.

may be interested in learning that it is derived from the township of Worthington, which is situated in the "hundred" of Leyland and parish of Standish, in Lancashire, about twenty miles north-east of Liverpool. Here, according to Burke, the family of Worthington "have been established in high repute from the time of the Planta-Stephen Hall Worthington, at the age of twenty-five, enlisted in the American army during the war of 1812. the action of Fort Erie, and was taken pris-He was in oner during a sortie. He was sent with a party of prisoners destined for Halifax, but escaped on the way, and remained in the County of Prescott. Here he not only found protection and friends among the settlers, but, having a good Connecticut education, was induced by them to open a school in that county. He continued in this occupation the greater part of the time until the year 1824, when he removed with his family to Geauga county, in the State of Ohio, where some property had descended to his wife from her father. Young Addison received here a good common school education, and attended for a time the Painesville academy. His father wished him to study medicine, but he was then too young to appreciate the advice. He had, like many ingenious lads, a turn for mechanical work, and was at his own desire apprenticed at the age of fifteen to a joiner. When he had mastered this trade, he turned his attention to that of a millwright, which offered better scope for his talents. He erected several mills, with what were then the latest scientific improvements, in Ohio, in northern New York, and finally in Canada. During the winter he followed occasionally the parental occupation of school-keeping. attack of illness, resulting from malaria, gave him the opportunity for study, and led him finally to the resolution of following his father's advice, and adopting the profession of medicine. He began his studies in 1842, when he was twenty-four years of age. gain the necessary means, he continued to work at his calling in the summer and to teach school in the winter, all the time pursuing his medical course. This he finally completed under Dr. Alexander Wylie, who was a graduate of Glasgow University, and then an eminent physician in Dundas ounty. In May, 1851, he received both his college and provincial licenses, and at once commenced practice in what was then the village of Matilda, now the town of Iroquois. Here he soon attained a good prac-ie ad-

hould

Mac-

ighly

ebec,

vern-

erest

reed,

vices

ll of

n in

ı the

f the

cown

with

nald

that

out,

men

and

the

ı he

20V-

n of

een

arm

re-

the

e of 881

s in

In

ro-

the

re.

has

ful

128

on lg-

he

on

of

ńs

38

creased. During the summer of 1853, an epidemic of scarlet fever prevailed among children in that vicinity, and was very fatal. Dr. Worthington, not satisfied with the results of the ordinary treatment, carefully searched medical books to find, if possible, some more successful method. struck with the good effects recorded of the treatment of malignant scarlatina by Dr. Hiram Corson, of Consohocken, Penn., who had great success with the application of ice and cold water, and decided to adopt it when occasion should arise. In the autumn of 1855, a very extensive epidemic of the fever in a malignant form broke out in his section, and lasted several months. On this occasion Dr. Worthington treated about three hundred cases on this system, with He has since continued this method with equally good effects, and it is becoming more and more general. made it the subject of a paper which he read at the meeting of the Canada Medical Association, held at Halifax, in September, 1881. His paper was well received, and was published in the Canada Lancet of the following Thirty years ago the best country practice gave but moderate returns, and in the hope of increasing his income, Dr. Worthington was induced to enter a mercantile partnership. This enterprise had the usual result of such undertakings, when attempted by professional men whose duties prevent them from giving their personal attention to the business. It proved a failure, and Dr. Worthington lost all his savings. Not daunted by this reverse, he determined to begin anew in what was them deemed the most promising section of the Canadian He removed in 1862 to the County of Huron, and commenced practice at first in the new township of Howick, whence in 1872 he removed to the more central town of Clinton, where his children could have the benefit of the superior schools for which that town is noted. He has since resided in Clinton, and has acquired a large practice in that town and the neighbouring Here he became a member of the Huron County Medical Association, of which he has been secretary and president. He was elected a member of the Canada Medical Association at the meeting held at Ottawa in 1880; and in June, 1881, he took part in the organization of the Ontario Medical Association at Toronto. meetings of this association he contributed papers on the subjects of diphtheria and epitice, which in a few years was largely in- at the meeting held at Hamilton, in 1884, he received the highest compliment his medical brethren of the province could pay him, in being elected president of this now large and flourishing association, for the following year. The meeting held at London in June, 1885, under his presidency, was in point of numbers and interest a most successful one, and was attended by several medical professors of distinction from the colleges of the United States and Canada. Dr. Worthington contributed to the Canada Medical Association, at the Montreal meeting, held in September, 1884, a paper on polyuria, which was published in the Canada Medical and Surgical Journal in the following October: and at the Chatham meeting, in September, 1885, a paper on intermittent cerebro-spinal meningitis, which is not yet published. later years his attention has been specially directed to the subject of gynæcology, (diseases of women) in connection with his general practice. He is often called in consultation, particularly in difficult surgical cases, where his steadiness of hand and readiness of resource, derived from his early mechanical experience, have proved of much advan-Dr. Worthington has been called to many positions of public trust. He held the office of coroner for the united counties of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry for about ten years; was for several years local superintendent of schools in the township of Matilda, and held the same office for three years in the township of Howick; was for a term English master in the Dundas county Grammar school; and was for about eight years a trustee of the Clinton High school. He was a member of the Clinton town council for the year 1880; and license commissioner during the life of the Crooks Act, with the exception of that year. He was one of the committee for the township of Howick, appointed to secure the construction of the Toronto, Grey and Bruce Railway; and as secretary of the county committee, took an active part in securing the means for the completion of the London, Huron and Bruce Railway. He has taken a warm interest in the temperance movement from the beginning, and has held various offices in connection with it. He has been a member of the Masonic order since 1857. and has been first master of three different lodges, whose numbers are 143, 162, 225. He is now a member of Huron and Seaforth Royal Arch chapters, Nos. 30 and 66; also a member of the St. Elmo Preceptory. Dr. Worthington has been three times marriedfirst, on October 24, 1843, to Harriet Elizabeth, eldest daughter of Peter Carman, of Iroquois, County of Dundas, Ontario. Her death occurred on April 12th, 1868; and he again married, on June 9th, 1869, Sarah. eldest daughter of John Carroll, of East Zorra, County of Oxford, Ontario. Her death took place on December 23, 1872. He married, on May 25th, 1874, his present wife, Louisa, second daughter of Constant Louis Van Egmond, of Egmondville, County of Huron, Ontario, and grand-daughter of Colonel Anthony Van Egmond. Colonel Van Egmond, as many persons will be interested in learning, had served with distinction under Wellington, and was a lineal descendant of the celebrated and unfortunate patriot, Count Van Egmond, famous in the Thirty Years' war, and in the pages of Goethe and Schiller. Dr. Worthington has had children by his first and third marriages.

T

sh

ta

a :

na

Isl

₩e

wa

is 1

fan

Pet

of.

A

of t

Lac

edu

teen

ente

this

A te

turn

for a

Chur

his a

and e

Univ

term.

at the

financ

famil

promi

pend:

pletio

in vie

county

Cumming, Hugh Francis, Chatham, Ontario, a typical Scotchman in persever. ance and other recognized virtues of the land of the heather, was born on Sept. 26th, 1826, in Rothiemurchus, Invernessshire, and received his early educational instruction at the parish school. Like many of his countrymen, he decided on making Canada his home, and accordingly emigrated in 1844, arriving in the fall of the year. He engaged in general business in Deleware and Sarnia, and took up his residence in Kent in the winter of 1856, this being the period when the Great Western Railway was inthe process of construction, and when the large sums so spent gave an impetus to business. He engaged in general commerce in Chatham, and being an excellent buyer, and a discerning judge of goods, he gave general satisfaction, while the uprightness of his tansactions established his mercantile character on an enduring Having finally sold out in 1874, basis. during the following year he was appointed by the Governor-in-Council, official assignee for the County of Kent, under the Insolvent Act of 1875, and continued to discharge the duties appertaining thereto with much acceptance until the Act was repealed. Since then he has devoted his energies chiefly to the work of moral reform. In politics he was always a consistent Reformer, and unsuccessfully, though energetically, contested the seat in the Local House against the present member for Kent, Mr. Clancey, and retired from the field with honour and with the respect of his opponents. He was largely instrumental in having the separation by-laws passed in Chatham, and procuring the submission of the Scott Act to the people of Kent. He had a hard struggle in this contest, being president of the County of Kent Temperance Association, the headquarters of which was in Chatham. In the battle which ensued, Mr. Cumming used his utmost power, sparing neither time nor money, and he had the satisfaction of seeing the Act passed by a majority only second to that of Middlesex. Mr. Cumming is hale and hearty, is of medium height, of genial manners and active movements. He is averse to personal notoriety, and his character is safe without the need of eulogy. He has travelled extensively over the continent of North America, and being of an observing nature, he has retained a vast amount of useful information, which he is always willing to impart for the benefit of his friends. He married Eliza, daughter of Mr. King, one of the leading residents of Kingussie, Scotland. In religion he is a strict and consistent Presbyterian.

Her

nd he arah,

East

Her 1872.

esent

hstant

ounty

ter of

olonel

inter-

stinc-

al de-

unate

n the

oethe

s had

tham,

ever-

the

Sept.

mess-

al in-

many

aking

rated

. He

e and

Kent

eriod

as in

n the petus

com-

xcel- «

oods.

up-

ished

uring

1874, nted

gnee

vent

e the

ac.

Since

iefly

cs he

un-

ested

pre-

d re-

with

rge-

tion

cur-

rug:

es.

Sinclair, Lachlin Curray, M.D., Tilsonburg, Ontario, was born in the township of Caledon, then in York county, Ontario, on the 14th of February, 1839. He is a son of John and Jane Sinclair, the maiden name of his mother being Currie. She was a daughter of the late Lachlin Currie, of Islay, Argyleshire, Scotland. The parents were wedded in Scotland, and shortly afterwards departed for Canada, settling in what is now the County of Peel, Ontario. family, except the subject of this sketch, remained here till 1865, and then removed to Petrolia, where they resided until the death of John Sinclair, which occurred in 1872. A family of seven remained, the subject of this sketch being the second youngest. Lachlin C. Sinclair received a common school education and when he attained his seventeenth year, in 1856, went to Toronto, and entered the Normal school there. From this institution he took a first-class grade A teacher's certificate in 1857, and he returned to Caledon, where he taught school for a year. The year following he taught at Churchville, Toronto township; and when his agreement expired, returned to Toronto and entered the arts department of Toronto University, where he remained for one term. He then began the study of medicine at the Toronto School of Medicine, but financial reverses having fallen upon the family, he was compelled, like many other prominent members of his profession, to depend upon his own exertions for the completion of his education. With this object in view, he removed to Tilsonburg, Oxford county, where he taught school again for a period; going back once more to Toronto, and resuming his study of medicine. 1864, he graduated M.D., and returned to Tilsonburg, where he at once entered upon the practice of his profession, joining in partnership with Dr. S. Joy. This association lasted only a year, and Dr. Sinclair carried on his practice alone. He was the very embodiment of energy, and after a few months he found himself established in a fair practice; which has since continued steadily to grow, till now it is both extensive and profitable. At the time of the Fenian raid, Dr. Sinclair patriotically assisted in raising a company for active service, and was first lieutenant of the same. After a connection of three years with the service, he resigned. In 1868, he was elected school trustee, and sat upon the board and was secretary-treasurer for six years. Upon the incorporation of the town, in 1872, he was elected a councillor, and held that office for two years. In 1875 he was elected mayor by acclamation, and re-elected in 1876. For the four succeeding years he took no active part in municipal affairs, but in 1881, his friends prevailed with him, and he was elected councillor. In 1882, he was re-elected; and in 1883, he was again sent to the mayor's chair, and reinstated there in 1884 and 1885. He is a director of the Tilsonburg Agricultural Manufacturing Company; is a member of King Hiram lodge of Freemasons, No. 78, Tilsonburg, and held the office of master of that lodge for several years. He is president of the North Norfolk Conservative Association, and has likewise been president of the South Oxford Association; also honorary president of the Tilsonburg Young Men's Conservative Club. In 1882, he contested the Riding of North Norfolk in the interest of his party, for the House of Commons, but was defeated, but no doubt will be again the standard-bearer of his party. Dr. Sinclair is a Methodist, and is a trustee and steward of the Tilsonburg Methodist church. In early life he was a Presbyterian, but for conscientious reasons, afterwards, in 1875, changed his views. He married in 1867, Roxilana, daughter of Joseph Van Norman, one of the pioneers of Long Point, Norfolk county, who was one of the first iron founders, in that place. She died in 1875, leaving two sons. He married, two years afterwards, Lillie, daughter of E. D. Tilson, of Tilsonburg, by whom he has two daughters. Dr. Sinclair is a man of broad public spirit, a successful practitioner, and a man held in very high esteem by the community, and has done much to promote the prosperity of his town by his example in building very extensively, and in every way showing his confidence in its future possibilities.

Maclaren, John James, Q.C., Toronto, was born near Lachute, Quebec, July 1st, 1842. His father, John Maclaren, a farmer, who came from Callander, Scotland, died when J. J. Maclaren was four years old. His mother, Janet Mackintosh, who came from Perthshire, Scotland, is still living. She removed to Huntingdon, Quebec, on the death of her husband. Mr. Maclaren was educated at Huntingdon academy, and Victoria college, Cobourg, the calendar of which shows that he took the B.A. degree in 1862, and the Prince of Wales gold medal. He took his M.A. in 1866, and became LL.B. in 1868. Leaving college he studied law at McGill, Montreal, taking his In 1868 he was called to B.C.L. in 1868. the bar of Lower Canada, and in 1878 was appointed Q.C. He has been a member of the board of governors and an examiner in law at Victoria University for a number of years past. For many years he was the representative fellow-in-law in the corporation of McGill University. He practiced his profession in partnership with N. W. Trenholme for a number of years; and was for a considerable period senior partner in the firm of Maclaren, Leet & Smith, of Montreal. He has steadily and by increasing industry, and professional brilliancy, risen till he now occupies one of the foremost places in the bar of Canada. Among some of the principal cases in which he has been engaged were the long Oka Indian trials, which he brought to a successful issue; the winding up of the Mechanics' Bank; the defence of the Canada Temperance Act, and the Commercial Travellers' Association's cases in the Supreme Court, the former of which he finally won in the Privy Council in England, although pitted against him was the late Mr. Benjamin, then the leading counsel at the English bar; the Exhibit Tax case, which he won in the Supreme Court, and which has been affirmed by the Privy Council. Mr. Maclaren, we are also reminded by an authoritative statement before us, has been retained in nearly every English contested election case in the Province of Quebec, and has successfully defended the Witness newspaper in several He has been president of the libel suits. Reform Club, and his name has been associated with very many educational, temperance and other philanthropic societies and business ability succeeded in establishin Montreal, and throughout the Domining an extensive trade on a solid basis, Maclaren is noted for his un-Mr. selfish public spirit, and for his active and unwearying sympathy with every beneficial movement. It is a good thing for a community when such men-take a leading place in their profession. Our subject is a Methodist, and has been an active worker in the church for many years, and as a teacher and superintendent of Sabbath schools; and has filled all the positions in the church for which laymen are eligible. He has taken an active part in all sorts of religious, educational, temperance and benevolent work; in the Y.M.C.A. of Mont. real and Toronto; in the Dominion Alliance as counsel for the central council, and the provincial bodies in Montreal and Toronto: and as a member of the board of Victoria University, McGill University, and the Montreal Wesleyan college. In 1884 he was called to the bar of Ontario, and removed to Toronto, where he is now in practice, succeeding Mr. Justice Rose as head of the present firm of Maclaren, Macdonald, Merritt & Shepley. Mr. Maclaren married. first, Margaret G., daughter of the late James L. Matheson, of Montreal. died in 1875; and he married again, Mary, youngest daughter of J. L. Mathewson.

as be seen and seen all He

ing

pre

han

tor

Ker

Jus

in 1

Jan

beth

Alex

a la

to t

beca

leavi

His

in m

Cana

Com

famil

land.

unde

appoi

mand

active

period

comm

time d

fifty-s service

men c

Legisl. in 180

Ritchie, George, Belleville, Ontario, was born on the 24th August, 1831, at Woolwich, England, and died at Belleville, Ontario, on the 16th May, 1877. His father, Robert Ritchie, late of the Ordnance department, came to this country in 1837. He had previously served in the Royal artillery in the Peninsular war, and was present at the memorable retreat of Corunna, and was near that brave and gallant general, Sir John Moore, when he fell. On his return home he was made commandant of Tilbury Fort, and subsequently was appointed librarian to the military library at Woolwich, but on account of failing health he was recommended to go abroad, and received an appointment in Canada as barrack master and Ordnance store-keeper at Ottawa, then Bytown. On the transfer by the Imperial authorities of the Ordnance lands to the Colonial government, and the withdrawal of troops and stores, he retired from the service in 1857 and came to Belleville, where the subject of this memoir had preceded him, and died there on the 22nd April, 1872, at the age of eighty-six, honoured and respected by all who knew him. George Ritchie, our subject, had engaged in commercial enterprise, and by his energy which, since his death has, under the management of his brother, Thomas, continued to assume still greater proportions, and is probably now the largest of the kind between Montreal and Toronto. Inheriting the sterling qualities of his parents, he became an influence which was felt much beyond the sphere of his immediate surroundings. He was one of the prime movers in the lan to relieve the country of the silver nuisance which embarrassed trade at the time of, and subsequent to the American war, which plan was afterwards taken up, and fully carried out by the late Sir Francis Hincks. Being somewhat of a retiring disposition, he never could be prevailed upon to be put in nomination for parliamentary or municipal representation; but he always took a lively interest in all matters pertaining to the public weal. His opinion was eagerly sought, and he ungrudgingly gave his time and wise counsel for the common good. He was singularly upright and honourable in all his dealings, and generous to a fault. He never was married, and his only surviving relatives in Canada are Thomas Ritchie, president of the Belleville Board of Trade, and his sister Agnes.

is un-

lactive

bene-

for a

lading

t is a

orker

lasa

bbath

ons in gible.

rts of

ben-

lont-

iance

l the

ctoria

the e was

ed to

sucpres-

Mer-

ried.

late She

lary,

ario,

, at ille,

her.

de-

837.

oyal

was

Cor-

lant

On

nd-

W88

ary

ling

ad,

as

per

fer

nce

the

red

lle-

ad

'n-

m.

Woods, Robert Stuart, Q.C., Chatham, Ontario, Revising Officer of the electoral district of Kent, Junior Judge of Kent, and Local Judge of the High Court of Justice, was born at Sandwich, Essex, Ont. in 1819. He is the fourth son of the late James Woods, barrister-at-law, and Elizabeth, seventh daughter of the late Hon. Alexander Grant. Mr. Woods' father was a lawyer from the Montreal bar, and came to the western district in 1800, where he became a prominent and successful man, leaving behind him a large landed estate. His grandfather was a Scotchman, engaged in mercantile pursuits in St. Johns, Lower Canada. Mr. Woods' maternal grandfather, Commodore Grant, was of the ancient family of Glenmoriston, Inverness, Scotland, and came to Canada as a midshipman under Lord Amherst, and in 1759, was appointed by General Amherst to the command of a sloop of war, and took an active part in the stirring events of that period. He became first commander or commodore of our western lakes. At the time of his death he had been upwards of fifty-seven years an officer in the King's service. He was one of the seven gentlemen called by Governor Simcoe to the first Legislative Council of Upper Canada; and in 1806, was president or lieutenant-governor of that province. It is a somewhat remarkable circumstance, that both these Scotch Presbyterian grandfathers should have married, at opposite ends of Canada, French-Canadian Roman Catholic wives. Mr. Woods was educated at the district Grammar school for the western district, Sandwich, under the Rev. David Robertson and the Rev. William Johnson, up to the age of seventeen, and subsequently under the Rev. Alexander Gale at Hamilton. The old curriculum of that day was the "three R's." with a book or two of Euclid, Cæsar, Virgil and Cicero, and later on French. eighteen, Mr. Woods took an active part in the rebellion of 1837, going to the relief of Toronto, under Col. MacNab, in the steamer Gore, as one of the celebrated fifty-six men of Gore, on the first day of the rebellion, by which means the city was saved from Mackenzie's forces. He followed Sir Allan MacNab throughout the campaign, and was engaged in the cutting out of the Caroline, of which, and the important consequences attendant upon this international embroglio, Mr. Woods has written an interesting brochure. He studied his profession under Judge O'Reilly, of Hamilton, and was called to the bar in 1842, became Q.C. in 1872, and continued the practice of his profession up to the time of his appointment of junior judge, in 1885. He was solicitor of the county council of the western district from the year 1846 to 1849, and is the oldest municipal officer in the County of Kent, except George Young, J. P., of Harwich. Mr. Woods remembers acting as judge of the division court through the western district, when the circuit was 150 miles in length, and required three weeks for the work. In 1850 he came to reside in Kent, and has been an active advocate of railways, plank and gravel roads, canals and other public enterprises, and to this end has freely contributed his means and energies. To him is awarded the credit of having forced the Hamilton people into the construction of the Great Western Railway by his vigorous efforts in the country and before parliament to displace that charter by the Niagara and Detroit Rivers Railway, which, on the opening of the Michigan Central to Chicago, in 1849, became an indispensable link between the railways of New York and the West. In this Mr. Woods had the support of the management of the Michigan Central. He has never had any connection with a brotherhood or any secret society, and has always preferred his personal independence to any advantage to be gained by connection with any fraternity. He is a member of the Church of England, with a strong sympathy for all denominations of Christians, arising, no doubt, from his Norman and Scottish descent, and Presbyterian tra-He is a member of the Church of England synod, and is a warm advocate of temperance and all legislation in aid of it; and he has been president of the Kent branch of the Dominion Alliance, and other associations in connection with the cause. He has always been an active member of the Liberal-Conservative party, and lays claim to the merit of never knowing change, or even the shadow of change, in his political sympathies and relations, while enjoying the most cordial relations with the leading men of opposite views, both in his county and the province at large. In 1854 he contested Kent against Larwill, McKellar, and Waddell, when Mr. Larwill was returned, and Mr. Woods defeated on the secularization of the Clergy Reserves, on which question he was in advance of his In 1849 he married Emma Elizabeth, the eldest daughter of the Hon. John E. Schwarz, adjutant-general of the State of Michigan. Tye, George Archer, M.D., Chatham, Ontario, was born on 12th July, 1835, at Swindon, Wiltshire, England. He is He is a son of William Archer Tye, and Sarah Hawkins, who came to Canada in 1845. George Archer attended the common schools of Canada in his earlier years, and subsequently the Provincial Model school from which he holds a first-class grade A certificate, dated 1858. With respect to his medical education, he pursued one term in the college of Physicians and Surgeons, at New York, and one term in Long Island College Hospital, where he graduated in 1866. He likewise attended one term in Rolph School of Medicine, Toronto, and secured the degree of M.D. from the University of Victoria in 1867. Dr. Tye has been assistant surgeon of the 24th Kent battalion for eleven years, having received his commission in 1874. He was one of the councillors of the village of Thamesville for three years from its incorporation; was chairman of the Board of School Trustees for four years, and examiner in Histology and Physiology for the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario, for six years, from 1881 to 1885. He was likewise appointed by the senate of the University of Toronto as examiner in physiology and pathology for 1886. Dr. Tye was one of the first vice-presidents of the Ontario Medical Association in Toronto, and was elected president of the Ontario Medical Association in London, in June, 1885. He is past master of Tecumseh lodge, A. F. & A. M., Thamesville, which he joined in 1869. He is also a member of United Workmen, American Legion of Honour. Our subject has always been identified with the Reform party in electoral division of Bothwell, and was secretary of the Bothwell Reform Association for many years. He took an active interest in the return of the Hon. A. McKellar, the Hon David Mills, and the late D. Mc-He was a member of the Episcopal Church from childhood until he reached his twentieth year, when he thought well to unite with the regular Baptists, to which body he now adheres. He married on 1st December, 1858, Hannah, second daughter of William Decow, of Howard. This lady died in May, 1877, leaving three daughters and two sons, and he married again in July, 1878, Louisa McIntyre, of Chatham. Professionally Dr. Tye's standing is very high, and his career has been marked by industry p to se of se w

M

on ob be

Cla

ske

vill

and

apt

life

of :

He

dru

and

of 1

fied

(as s

Clar

unti

tere

ant :

of th

was a

A.F

Koya

ested

memb

treasi

Club of the

Bay o

modo

thorou

and b dispos

ardent wavs 1

format

and er void in

will lor

one

and rich achievement.

Woods, James P., Q.C., Stratford, Ontario, was born on the 2nd April, 1840, in Devonshire, England. He is a son of James Woods, of Devonshire, descended from a Hampshire family of that name, by his wife Ann Vanstone, of a well-known Devonshire family. James P. Woods emigrated with his parents to Canada in 1842, settling in Stratford, then a small hamlet, where he received his education, at first attending the junior grades, and afterwards passing through the Stratford and Goderich Grammar schools. Having completed his educational studies, he felt an inclination for the law, and when he had attained his sixteenth year, entered upon the study of the legal profession in the office of D. H. Lizars, now County judge at Stratford In 1863 he was called to the bar, and at once began to practice his profession having the satisfaction of seeing a handsom practice grow as the result of his ability an industry. Though a diligent lawyer, Mr Woods has given his attention to enterprise of a more or less public nature. To his en terprise of public spirit Stratford main owes its gas and water works. He has hell the position of president of the Gas Com pany ever since its formation, about fiftee years ago, and was president of the Wat Supply Company since its organization but retired last year; he is still on t directorate. Railway extension had in hi anactive and influential promoter. He has taken a deep interest in educational matters and is one of the trustees of the Stratford Collegiate Institute. He has abiding faith in the ability of the Conservative party, and believes that the policy of Sir John A. Macdonald's government has been, and must prove to be, advantageous to the public interests generally. His connection with secret societies has been confined to the Masonic order, of which he has been a member since 1864, having been worthy master of Tecumseh lodge in 1868. His religious views, in which he is steadfast, are those of the Church of England. Mr. Woods married, in 1870, Maria C., daughter of Thomas Hodge, formerly of St. Thomas, Ontario.

socia-

ident

Lon-

er of

mess also

rican

ways

y in

sec-

ation

erest

ellar, Mc-Epis-

ched

ell to

hich

ı 1st

hter

lady

iters

uly,

Pro-

iigh,

stry

ord,

840,

ιof

ided

, by

own

mi-

342,

ılet,

at-

ırds

rich

his

for

six•

of.

rd

ınd

n

Clarke, James, Chemist and Druggist, Belleville, Ontario, was born in Belleville, on February 17, 1850, and died there on October 24, 1884, in the 25th year of his age, being the eldest son of Francis and Mary The late lamented subject of this sketch received his education at the Belleville Grammar school, under the late Alexander Burdon, and was always regarded as apt and brilliant in his classes. life he was a faithful member of the Church Through of England, and an upright Christian man. He served his apprenticeship as chemist and druggist under the late C. G. Levisconte, and on the formation of the Ontario College of Pharmacy obtained a diploma of qualified chemist and druggist, which business (as senior partner of the late firm of James Clarke & Co.) he conducted successfully until his death. He took considerable interest in military matters, and was lieutenant in the Sedentary militia, and a member of the 49th battalion Hastings Rifles. was a member of Belleville lodge, No. 123, Hě A.E. and A.M., and Moira chapter, No. 7, koyal Arch Masons. He was always interested in out-door sports, being an active member of the Belleville Curling Club, and treasurer of the Bay of Quinté Sportsman's Club from its formation. He was also one of the first and most active members of the Bay of Quinté Yacht Club, and was its commodore for the year 1883. Mr. Clarke was one of Belleville's most successful and thorough business men, and was well known and beloved for his liberality and genial disposition. He was, as we have said, an pardent lover of manly sports, and was always ready to take a leading part in the formation of societies for their promotion and encouragement. His loss created a void in the community, where his memory will long remain fresh.

Hagarty, Hon. John Hawkins, Chief Justice of Ontario, was born on the 17th of September, 1816, in Dublin, and was a son of Mathew Hagarty, Examiner of Her Majesty's Court of Prerogative for Ireland. The lad was carefully trained in the private school of the Rev. Mr. Huddart; and when his course here was ended-being then in his sixteenth year—he entered Trinity College, Dublin, where he completed his education. He emigrated to the colonies in 1834, taking up his abode at Toronto. Here, in 1835, he entered upon the study of law in the office of the late George Duggan, being called to the bar in 1840. He at once began practice in Toronto, entering into partnership in 1846 with the late John Crawford. From his very first appearance at the bar it was manifest that the young advocate was endowed with far above the ordinary talent, and his repute for ability soon made him master of a lucrative and important practice. Ten years after he had been called to the bar he was invested with the silken gown of counsellor by the Baldwin administration; and he still continued, as he had already been, to be one of the most brilliant members of the Canadian bar. vacancy occurred on the bench, and at once In 1856 a the eyes of the executive were turned towards the distinguished Queen's Counsel at Toronto; and he was offered the appointment, which he accepted. He was not less eminent among his brother judges than he had been in the midst of his associates at the bar, and when, in 1868, a vacancy occurred in the chief justiceship of Common Pleas, he was appointed to that exalted office. It suffices here to say that the Chief Justice Hagarty has always shown a wide knowledge of the law, a thorough grasp of principles, and a fearlessness in discharging his duty. His judgments show careful thought and elaborate research, and in all that the judge has penned or uttered there is a literary warmth and flavour, not usual in the parlance of courts. But the distinguished subject of this sketch calls for other treatment than as a judge when stock comes to be taken of his career. In letters his place is a high one, and if his name is not familiar to a large number of the lovers of belles lettres it is because he has fallen under the curse which so long rested upon native literature. In 1847 Dr. McCaul established a. Canadian annual known as the Maple Leaf; and to this periodical the subject of this sketch contributed verse, much of which would have been creditable to any pen. We make no apology for presenting the following poem, which appeared in the annual named on the 15th December, 1840 :-

THE FUNERAL OF NAPOLEON I.

Cold and brilliant streams the sunlight on the wintry banks of Seine, Gloriously the imperial city rears her pride of tower and fane-

Solemnly with deep voice pealeth, Notre Dame, thine ancient chime, Minute-guns the death-bell answer in the same deep measured time.

On the unwonted stillness gather sounds of an advancing host.

As the rising tempest chafeth on St. Helen's faroff coast;

Nearer rolls a mighty pageant—clearer swells the funeral strain,

From the barrier arch of Neuilly pours the giant burial train.

Dark with eagles is the sunlight-darkly on the golden air

Flap the folds of faded standards, eloquently mourning there

O'er the pomp of glittering thousands, like a battle-phantom flits Tatter'd flag of Jena, Friedland, Arcols, and Austerlitz.

Eagle-crown'd and garland-circled, slowly moves the stately car,

'Mid a sea of plumes and horsemen-all the burial pomp of war-

Riderless, a war-worn charger follows his dead master's bier

Long since battle-trumpet roused him—he but lived to follow here.

From his grave 'mid ocean's dirges, moaning surge and sparkling foam, Lo, the Imperial Dead returneth! lo, the Hero-dust comes home He hath left the Atlantic island, lonely vale and willow tree, 'Neath the Invalides to slumber, 'mid the Gallic chivalry.

Glorious tomb o'er glorious sleepers! gallant fellowship to share

Paladin and Peer and Marshal - France, thy noblest dust is there !

Names that light thy battle annals-names that shook the heart of earth! Stars in crimson War's horizon—synonymes for

Room within that shrine of heroes! place, pale martial worth!

spectres of the past! Homage yield, ye battle phantoms! Lo, your mightiest comes at last! Was his course the Woe out-thunder'd from prophetic trumpet's lips?

Was his type the ghostly horseman shadow'd in the Apocalypse?

Grav-haired soldiers gather round him, relics of an age of war,

Followers of the Victor Eagle, when his flight was wild and far

Men who panted in the death-strife on Lodrigo's bloody ridge, Hearts that sicken'd at the death-shrick from the Russian's shatter'd bridge;

Men who heard the immortal war-cry of the wild Egyptian fight-

"Forty centuries o'erlook us from yon Pyramid's gray height!" They who heard the moans of Jaffa, and the breach of Acre knew They who rushed their foaming war-steeds on the squares of Waterloo-

They who loved him-they who fear'd him-they who in his dark hour fled-

Round the mighty burial gather, spell-bound by the awful Dead! Churchmen-Princes-Statesmen-Warriors-all a kingdom's chief array, And the Fox stands-crowned Mourner-by the Eagle's hero-clay!

But the last high rite is paid him, and the last deep knell is rung-

And the cannon's iron voices have their thunderrequiem sung-

And, 'mid banners idly drooping, silent gloom and mouldering state, Shall the Trampler of the world upon the Judgment-trumpet wait.

Yet his ancient foes had given him nobler monumental pile, Where the everlasting dirges moan'd around the burial Isle-Pyramid upheaved by Ocean in his loneliest wilds afar, For the War-King thunder-stricken from his fiery battle-car!

A poem like this needs no approving words, for its merit is seen in every trumpet line. As Mr. Davin says, in the "Irishman in Canada":- "The dramatic fire and enthusiasm of battle will surprise those whose knowledge of the chief justice does not go deeper than his demeanour in court or in a drawing-room. A good poet was sacrificed to the lawyer and the judge." With general literature he is thoroughly familiar, and there is a warmth and a thrill of literary fervour in his conversation, when he is cast with congenial spirits. He has the gift, too, of his mother land, of "mother wit," and when upon his feet, or sitting at his desk, he is master of a pervading but unobtrusive humour.

Mercer, John, Chatham, Sheriff of the County of Kent, is a descendant of an old English family whose progenitors came over from Normandy with William the Conqueror, and settled near Battle, in the County of Sussex, members of the family still holding the patent from William the Conqueror.

th $\pi_{\mathbf{8}}$ pr In to bur tho task teer ly t six Lak the and whol ing t to w Sand the shop. age, v years out of turned Travel stoppe whilst walked only th lines. by stag can syn rebels o Lewisto placed i he effect a canoe ton, the he cross mencem very op sleighing tedious. learned Anne" 1 arrived having k permissio aol. Th

Ë

t his inca een grea nd the w hen he east, ins lylaughe estern D

Our subject was born in the City of London, England, May 16, 1816. His father was Robert Mercer, then a timber merchant in that city, and his mother was Sarah Hathaway Treacher. He was educated at a private school at Blackheath, in Kent, where Benjamin Disraeli was once a pupil. In 1833 Robert Mercer and family came to this country, and settled near Amherstburg, then considered very far west. In those days emigration was much more of a task than it is now. The family were thirteen weeks on the Atlantic ocean, and nearly two days coming up the Hudson river; six days on the Erie canal, and two days on Lake Erie. Twenty-seven years afterwards the mother of our subject visited England. and was only as many days in making the whole trip as she was weeks in 1833 in crossing the ocean. In 1835 the family moved to what is now Windsor, then a suburb of Sandwich, containing but one store kept by the Dougalls, a tavern and a blacksmith's shop. Our subject, now nineteen years of age, visited the United States, spending two years in Philadelphia, until the breaking out of the rebellion in 1837, when he returned home to defend his adopted country. Travelling from Albany to Lewiston, he stopped at the Eagle Hotel, Rochester, and whilst partaking of a late supper Dr. Rolph walked in and sat opposite him, having only that day effected his escape across the lines. From Rochester, Mr. Mercer travelled by stage in company with a party of American sympathizers, on their way to join the rebels on Navy Island, who upon arrival at Lewiston caused him to be arrested and placed in the custody of a rebel guard; but he effected his escape during the night, found a cance and paddled himself across to Queenston, the rebels firing a few volleys at him as he crossed the Niagara river. The commencement of the winter of 1837 was a very open one, there being very little sleighing, making stage travelling very tedious. Upon his arrival at London he learned that Dr. Theller, of "schooner Anne" notoriety, had only the day before arrived under escort from Windsor, and having known him in Detroit he obtained permission to pay him a visit in London sol. The doctor expressed much surprise t his incarceration, admitting that he had een greatly deceived, as he expected to nd the whole country in revolt; but that hen he displayed a star he wore on his east, instead of joining his standard they ly laughed at him. Mr. Mercer reached the estern District in time to be present at the

rigo's

wild

'yra-

the

h the

they

l by

last

dy

ou-

the

battles of Fighting Island and Pelee Island. In 1838 he visited England, and on the 15th June, 1839, at All Saints' Chapel, Norwood, married Bathia Sarah Morrison, a playmate of his early years (whose irreparable loss and death occurred on the 17th March, 1879, at Chatham, Ontario). Our subject returned to Canada with his wife in 1840, and soon afterwards was appointed the first post-master at Windsor, being also deputy-collector of Customs. At the same time he was deputysheriff of the Western District, which comprised the counties of Essex. Kent, and Lambton; and in 1853, after the separation of the three counties, he was appointed, under Sir Francis Hincks' administration. sheriff of the County of Kent, a position he has now held for over thirty-two years. There are four children by his marriage, two daughters and two sons. Bathia Sarah (the eldest), is widow of the late F. G. Elliott, pastor of the Episcopal church, Sandwich. Ellen Morrison is wife of A. G. McWhinney, of the Post-Office department, London; Robert is governor of the county gaol, Chatham, and Harry is general Canadlan and Michigan emigrant agent of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Company. Sheriff Mercer resides at Chatham, spending the summer months at his place, Raleigh Beach, on Lake Erie, thirteen miles from Chatham, driving in and out every day to his office. Sheriff Mercer has never belonged to any society, either secret or otherwise. He is an ardent supporter of field sports, a member of Big Point and St. Anne's Shooting clubs, and vice-president of the Ontario Jockey Club.

Moore, John T., Toronto, the subject of this sketch, was born in the township of Markham, York county, Ontario, on the 3rd of July, 1844. He is the second son of William K. and Isabella Moore, both of whom were natives of the County of Tyrone, Ireland, whence, in early childhood, they had removed with their respective parents to Canada. The ancestral home of the Moores, in Tyrone, adjoined that of Sir William McArthur, ex-lord mayor of London, the dividing line being a brook that was a delight to boyish hearts. On a recent visit to London, England, Mr. Moore received, among many other marks of distinction, the princely hospitality of this playmate of his father. On the maternal side he bears kinship to the family of McClintock, that gave to the United States that distinguished divine and scholar, the late Rev. Dr. McClintock, of New York, and his almost equally gifted brother, of Philadelphia. While Mr. Moore was yet an infant his parents removed from the farm, and his boyhood was passed in the town of Berlin, Ontario, where his father was the leading merchant during a long series of years, winning universal estimation for his unswerving rectitude. Mr. Moore received his education at the Central and Grammar schools at Berlin, where he distinguished himself by great aptitude for learning, and without much exertion was always at the head of his classes. In selecting his life-work he entered upon the study of law, wherein ambition led the way rather than conviction, which latter indicated to the earnest and thoughtful lad the pulpit as his fitting sphere. However, a little later, consideration for others made income a matter of moment, and the boy who, by studious habits and exemplary conduct, had attracted notice at school, was offered the most responsible situation in his own county, showing the confidence he had won. Thus it came that when emerging from his teens, Mr. Moore became deputy-registrar of the County of Waterloo. For six years he discharged the duties of this important position with courtesy, assiduity, and efficiency. When leaving this office in 1870 to engage in other pursuits, he was made the recipient of a banquet and valuable presentation by the members of the bar of the county and his fellow-citizens generally, as evidences of the high esteem in which they held him whom they had known for twenty years as man and boy. Since that period various manufacturing and commercial pursuits have engaged his attention, and by ability and fidelity he has achieved prominence. As secretary of the Ontario Advisory Board of the Centennial Exhibition he performed difficult public duties in a manner that elicited from the government a high encomium upon his energy, efficiency and economy. During the contest in 1877 for the adoption of the Dunkin Act in the County of York and the City of Toronto, he did yeoman service; and he led and sustained a powerful total abstinence movement in north Torontothen Yorkville-for some years thereafter. In him the temperance cause has an able and ardent advocate. As a platform speaker he is possessed of great fire and fluency. His vivid descriptive powers win for him wide popularity as a lecturer; and that he wields a gifted and graphic pen is well at-tested by his recent serial—"Wonderland and Beyond." In politics Mr. Moore is what may be styled an independent Liberal. He has taken a hand in municipal affairs by solicitation and not by inclina-He was elected by acclamation to the council of Yorkville, and was afterwards by acclamation elevated to the position of reeve. He became alderman for St. Paul's ward, when Yorkville was annexed to Toronto, and in 1884 he was re-elected to the Toronto city council over two other candi-At the end of his term, he retired, from the city council on account of press of business. While in the council he did great service for municipal reform, improvement of the water supply, and the temperance cause; and was the temperance party's standard-bearer in that body during the fight for the separation of the groggeries from the grocer shops. Mr. Moore is a leading member of the Methodist church, and as Sabbath-school superintendent, class-leader. and local preacher, he renders efficient service. Indeed, as a pulpit supply he is much sought after for anniversary and other occasions, indicating that he occupies a foremost position as a preacher. He was a delegate to the closing General Conferences of the Canada Methodist body, and also to the first General Conference of the Methodist church, after union. His incisive speech in favour of union showed his strong powers as a debater; and it was regarded as one of the ablest contributions during that memorable church parliament. In 1871, Mr. Moore was married in Galt, to Annie, the fourth daughter of the late Alexander Addison, and the fruit of this marriage is three children, a daughter and two sons. In commercial and financial circles he is known and esteemed as an expert accountant, having conducted large and important transactions with the skill of a thorough mathematician. He is a firm believer that Canada has a great destiny in In Great Britain he delivered a number of speeches upon Canada and her resources, which attracted unusual attention, so much so that, when in Exeter hall, many hundreds were turned away unable to gain admission. His lectures in this country upon Canadian subjects have been fine delineations of the beauties and attractions of his native land. When supplemented, as they sometimes are, by brilliantly illuminated illustrations, they become intensely enjoyable as both eye and ear participate in the pleasure. At this time he is the managing director of the Saskatchewan Homestead Company, and is doing grand service in the development of the North-West.

ty tie

of W

W

str

cre

est

tati

One

lad

mer

ami

row.

his

year

stud

allov

his b

teach

Colle

week

hours

colleg

taugh

gage :

in cor churc

tingui

tions,

the an

ister

which ous fiel winter

the lar

towns

ministe

lectures

versities same ti

most su

Toronto

eight ye

was only in colleg

Poole, Rev. William H., LL.D., Detroit, late of Toronto, Ontario, was born on April 3, 1820, in the County of Kilkenny, Ireland. In 1831 his father and family emigrated to Canada, and settled in the village of Carleton Place, Lanark. In that village his father, William Poole, taught school for thirteen years, until 1844, when he was removed by death, loved and esteemed by all who knew him. Our subject is descended of a very ancient and prominent English family. The Pooles sprung originally from the County of Derby, England; and for many generations members of the family have been prominent as authors, (teste the "Annotations" of Poole), as divines, and as military officers. When sixteen years of age, William Henry was offered a situation as school teacher, and strongly urged to accept it. After passing a creditable examination before the county board of examiners, and receiving the highest class certificate, he yielded to the solicitation of friends and accepted the situation. One of the board of examiners said that the lad was too young to receive the appointment, but the chairman of the board of examiners replied, "He will be older to-morrow." That school-house was four miles from his father's residence, and yet, for three years, he returned every evening to his studies. Never, even for one night, did he allow storm or bad roads to keep him from his books. After several years of study and teaching, he worked his way to Victoria College, where, after the first term of eleven weeks, he paid his way by teaching two hours a day. On his father's death he left college and took the latter's place, and taught until 1846, when he was called to engage in the work of the Christian ministry, in connection with the Weslevan Methodist That love of learning which distinguished his ancestors for several generations, especially the Rev. Matthew Poole, the annotator, found in our Canadian minister a healthy body and a vigorous mind, which led him to pursue his studies in various fields of knowledge. Early and late, winter and summer, he availed himself of the large public libraries in the cities and towns where he laboured as a Methodist minister. He also frequently attended the lectures of the learned professors of the universities in those cities, carrying on at the same time a pastorate, always among the most successful. A residence in the City of Toronto for three terms, during a period of eight years, afforded him facilities which he was only too glad to embrace. His studies in college were the usual course of classics, nicipal

iclina-

to the

rds by

on of

Paul's

o To-

to the

candi-

etired,

ess of great

ement

rance

arty's

the

geries

lead-

nd as

ader.

cient

he is

ther

es a

ras a nces

also

the

sive

his

was

ions

rlia-

ried

r of

ruit

ater

cial

an rge kill

rm

3

en-

in

nd

mathematics, philosophy and divinity. In later years, philology and ethnology, with the history of races and nations, engrossed his attention. On the 17th of June, 1850, he was united in marriage to Mary Ann, second daughter of Simon Delong, of Ameliasburg, County of Prince Edward. Her mother's name was Catharine Dempsey. The Dempsey family were descendants of a United Empire loyalist of that name. They were originally of the Irish Palatinate stock. In the year 1879, after thirty-three years of close reading and faithful service as a minister, our subject received the title of LL.D. Of the thirty-three years of ministerial labour, twenty-seven were spent in the large towns and cities of Ontario. In the fall of 1879, Mr. Poole received an invitation to the Simpson Methodist Episcopal church in Detroit, Michigan, and soon after became a member of the Detroit conference. Few men have been more successful in the pastoral work than he. He has written a great deal in the religious press of Canada and in the United States. The subjects of our educational institutions, of temperance and of prohibition, of the different phases of religious life and work, have often interest-Several sermons of his have been published, and he has sent out a number of tractates, pamphlets and lectures. He has published a volume on "The Fruits of the Spirit," which was highly commended by the press; and others are in the hands of the publishers. Dr. Poole had an interesting family of eight children, five daughters and three sons. The daughters have all departed this life. The three sons are making a name for themselves. The eldest, Egerton Ryerson, is a highly esteemed commercial traveller in Ontario. The second son, William Henry, is a successful physician and surgeon in Detroit. The third, Charles Albert, is on the road to honour and wealth as a druggist in the same city. Few men have a warmer heart, or a lighter step, than our Canadian friend, Dr. Poole.

MacMahon, Hugh, Q.C., Toronto. This well-known member of the Ontario bar, though of Irish descent, was born in Guelph, Ontario, on the 6th of March, 1836. The progenitors of the family were originally from Monaghan, in Ireland, and in the troublous times of the last of the reigning Stuarts, a number of MacMahons held important positions in their native county. Colonel Art Oge MacMahon, besides holding a military command, was King James II.'s lord-lieutenant for the County Monaghan; while Hugh MacMahon, great-grand uncle of the subject of this present sketch, was lieutenant-colonel of Gordon O'Neil's Charlemont regiment of foot. This crack corps, upon its reorganization, after the Treaty of Limerick (1691), took service in France with the famous "Irish Brigade." Reverses of fortune having impoverished the family, Mr. MacMahon's father came to Canada in 1819, from Cootehill, County Cavan, Ireland, and settled in the Niagara district. He brought with him an excellent library of classical and mathematical works; and, as he possessed high attainments as a classical scholar, he opened school at Grimsby, where many of the youth of the western section of Upper Canada were prepared for the professions. Mr. MacMahon, senior, was one of the earliest appointed provincial land surveyors, and made the preliminary surveys of many of the townships in the lately formed province. His wife, who still survives him, and is now in her 89th year, was Anne MacGovern, a relative of the late Bishop MacGovern, of the County of Cavan. 1853, Hugh MacMahon, our present subject. then in his seventeenth year, entered the Board of Works department of Canada, of which the Hon. H. H. Killaly was at the time commissioner, and was placed on the statf of Colonel W. B. Gallaway, C.E., as second assistant engineer. In this capacity Mr. McMahon took part in making surveys and in preparing estimates for the projected Ottawa ship-canal between Ottawa and Ayl-He was also engaged in the surveys and plans for the Chats canal and was one of the resident engineers during the time these works were under construction. 1857, when the monetary crisis of that year compelled the government to relinquish the latter undertaking, and when civil engineering was much depressed by the stoppage of public works, Mr. MacMahon left the service of the department, though strongly urged to remain at Ottawa by the chief of the staff. The next year, having become a matriculant of the Law Society, we find him in the law office of Thomas Robertson, Q.C., then practising in Dundas. Pursuing the legal profession, he was called to the bar in 1864, when he entered into partnership with his brother, Thomas B. MacMahon, late judge of the County of Norfolk, then practising in Brantford. Five years afterwards, on the elevation of the late John Wilson to a judgeship of the court of Queen's Bench, Hugh MacMahon removed to London, Ontario, where, in a few years, he built up the largest and most lucrative legal business in the west. His universally acknowledged acquirements as a commercial lawyer, sound judgment, and scrupulous honour, brought him the confidence of the mercantile community throughout the country, and he became the solicitor and trusted adviser of many large firms. In 1876, he was created Queen's counsel by the Ontario government, and in 1885, the Dominion ministry paid him a like high honour. Mr. MacMahon's talents as an advocate won for him a successful career at the bar, and he has been retained as counsel in some of the most important civil and criminal cases before the courts. In 1877 he was retained by the Dominion Government as leading counsel in the arbitration between the Federal Government and the Province of Ontario, in the protracted dispute over the western and northern boundaries of the province; and in the following year he argued the case before Sir Edward Thornton. British minister at Wash. ington, and the Hon. Sir Francis Hincks, arbitrators for the Dominion, and Chief Justice R. A. Harrison, who represented Their award, as our readers are aware, settled the western boundary of the province. In 1884, Mr. MacMahon was associated with Christopher Robinson, Q.C., and went to England as one of the counsel for the Dominion, when the Boundary question was submitted to the judicial committee of Her Majesty's Privy Council. The decision of this body, it is a matter of history, virtually confirmed the award of the previous arbitrators. We now come to a notable incident in Mr. MacMahon's professional career—his retention as counsel for the prisoners in the celebrated Biddulph tragedy case. This cause celebre, it will be remembered, arose out of the revolting murder of five members of the Donnelly family, residing in the township of Biddulph, when no less than fifteen persons were arrested for alleged complicity in the affair, though but five of them were subsequently prosecuted. Mr. MacMahon was retained as counsel on-behalf of the prisoners, who, in 1880, were indicted by the grand jury for murder. Subsequently the Crown, deeming the evidence against James Carroll stronger than against the other prisoners, he was first brought to trial. The first jury disagreeing on their verdict, application was made for a change of venue, owing to the intense excitement over the tragedy at London; but this was refused. Carroll was again placed on his trial before a special commission, composed of two judges, and the proceedings extended over a week. The

exc

W88

ple

jour

the

cros

by M

ing (

oner

Mac.

defer

in th

ment

press

thus

Maho

p.m.,

the ju

the i

court-

over t

not ch

of elo

try to

It was

argum

The G

court

counse

fore the

brough

house v

eagerly

to the

densely

admitte

was one

not the steps lea

chair w

more tha

aisles wa

journal i

the spee

took the

adjournn

dress the

The most

the court sel for the sentences

hushed th

the fall of

and eloqu

the attent

but the va

room. Th

called a flo

quent and excitement was still intense; the court-room was thronged daily by great crowds of people; while representatives of the leading journals came from the chief cities to report the proceedings. The chief incidents of the early days of the trial was the skilful cross-examination of the Crown witnesses by Mr. MacMahon, which resulted in breaking down much of the case against the prisoner. The interest culminated in Mr. MacMahon's singularly able speech for the defence, which created intense excitement in the court-room, and was favourably commented on by the legal profession and the press of the country. The Toronto Mail thus referred to the speech :-- "Mr. Mac-Mahon rose to address the jury at 1.40 p.m., and as he took his stand in front of the jury-box, the silence of death fell upon the immense concourse assembled in the court-room. The address, which lasted for over two hours, was a fine effort. It was not characterized by any remarkable flights of eloquence, nor did the learned counsel try to play upon the feelings of the jurors. It was, however, a clear, concise and able argument, which left a deep impression." The Globe, portraying the scene in the court house prior to the address of the counsel for the defence, said: "Long before the half-hour's intermission had been brought to a close the corridors of the court house were packed with an excited throng, eagerly pressing forward to gain admission to the court-room, which was already so densely crowded that not another could be admitted. The scene inside the court-room was one long to be remembered. It was not the seats alone that were crowded. The steps leading to the bench, and every vacant chair within the bar was occupied, while more than half of the standing room in the The same aisles was occupied by ladies. journal in the course of a lengthy report of the speech, observes: "When the judges took their places on the bench, after the adjournment, Mr. MacMahon rose to address the jury on behalf of the prisoners. The most absolute quiet reigned throughout the court-room, and after the learned counsel for the defence had uttered his first few sentences the crowded court-room was so hushed that one might almost have heard the fall of a pin. For two hours the learned and eloquent gentleman enchained not only the attention of their lordships and the jury, but the vast throng in the crowded courtroom. The address was not what would be called a flowery one, but it was earnest, eloquent and exhaustive. Not a point that

ıd

ht

n-

e-

of

ed

sed

nt

could be made to tell in favour of the prisoner was overlooked, while the most favourable and plausible construction was put upon those points that bore hardest against him. During a part of the address the prisoner sat up in the dock and listened attentively, while his sister seemed to devour every word that fell from the speaker's lips.

The learned counsel for the defence closed his very able and eloquent address with a solemn and pathetic appeal to the jury on behalf of the prisoner. The efforts of the defence had been a series of masterpieces, throughout the long trial but it was felt that with the eloquent and exhaustive resumé of the evidence by Mr. MacMahon, these efforts had come to a close, and that nothing remained as an offset to what the Crown had to present." The prisoner was acquitted, and the scene in the court-room and in the vicinity of the courthouse was indescribable. Speaking of the memorable trial, another Toronto journal subsequently remarked: that Mr. Mac-Mahon's address to the jury "is still remembered as one of the most brilliant efforts of oratory ever heard within the walls of London court-house." While a resident of London, Mr. MacMahon was mainly instrumental, in connection with Colonel James Shanly, in founding the Irish Benevolent Society in that city, of which both gentleman, at various times, was president. This successful national society has been conducted irrespective of creed, and has been of the greatest possible good, in allaying religious prejudices and in softening religious rancour among the Irish residents of the Forest City. At the general elections of 1872, Mr. MacMahon unsuccessfully contested the City of London, for a seat in the House of Commons, against the Hon. John Carling; and again in 1878, he was a candidate for the County of Kent, against Rufus Stephenson, the then sitting member, but was defeated. MacMahon removed to Toronto at the close of the year 1883, where he has since successfully practised his profession. His wide legal experience, forceful and pleasing manner in addressing juries, and great natural and acquired abilities make him one of the leading nisi prius lawyers on the western circuit. Outside of his profession, Mr. Mac-Mahon is a man of very considerable culture, and much fondness for art, his judgment as a connoisseur of paintings being frequently appealed to. His collection of paintings has been much admired, and indicates a high educated taste. In 1864 Mr. MacMahon married Isabel Janet, eldest daughter of the late Simon Mackenzie, of Belleville, by whom he has two sons.

Drennan S. T., (the late) of Kingston, Ontario, was born in the Moravian settlement, County of Tyrone, Ireland, on November 20, 1819, making him 63 years of age when he died. When a boy he left Ireland and went to Scotland with his father, where he was educated. There he remained till 1841, when he emigrated to Kingston. He was an active young man and found no difficulty in obtaining employment. first situation was a clerkship in the dry goods store of R. Waddell & Co., Princess street. After remaining in this business for a few years, he decided to follow a nautical life and secured the position of purser on the passenger steamer Comet, afterwards the Mauflower, which was finally blown up. This life did not suit him as well as he anticipated, so he once more entered the dry goods business, as a partner in the firm of Kennedy & Drennan. Shortly afterwards a dissolution took place, and the business was carried on by the deceased, in the store now occupied by Mr. Dunbar, tailor, corner of Wellington and Princess streets. long before he married Annie, eldest daughter of the late Dr. Boyd of the Royal navy, His next change in business was the manufacture of furniture in the penitentiary; but in consequence of the destruction of his shop by fire some time afterwards he carried on his business outside of the Penitentiary. In 1873 he was elected alderman to represent St. Lawrence ward, and continued to hold this position till 1877, when he ran for mayor and was elected. In 1878 he again entered the council and remained in it till the end of 1879, when he retired from public life. He was one of the directors of the House of Industry when that institution sadly needed assistance, and he was instrumental in putting it in a good condition. When his term of office in this connection expired, the directors presented him with his portrait in When the fire engine-house was built on Ontario street he laid the corner stone. and was presented with a silver trowel; in fact, on several occasions he was made the object of presentations at the hands of the public, his last being on his retirement from the presidency of the Liberal-Conservative Association, when he received a beautiful illuminated address. He turned the first sod on the Kingston and Pembroke Railway. During his younger days he took a great interest in the fire department, and was an active member of the hook and ladder company, and when he severed his connection he received a tangible mark of the esteem in which he was held by his colleagues. When royalty visited Kingston, he was invariably chosen "master of ceremonies." for which position he was admirably adapted by reason of his good humour and genial and courteous manner. Mr. Drennan left five children, four daughters and one son. One daughter is married to G. M. Boyd, of New York, and another to W. Moore. Those who have lived in Kings-Kingston. ton know the untiring energy of the deceased gentleman, his wide public spirit, his talent for the administration of public business, his geniality, and his largeness of heart. He was a sincere friend, and a frank, honourable opponent. He was vigorous in the prosecution of all good works about the city, whose welfare was ever uppermost in his mind. His loss was regretted, not only by personal friends and relatives, but by the people at large, and was considered one of the saddest incidents in that epidemic of sudden death visited Kingston. He was elected lieutenant of the Hook and Ladder company in 1846, and on the death of Captain Boyle was chosen cap-When he became purser of the tain. Comet, we may add, he resigned the captaincy of the Hook and Ladder company. He was a very active member of the Oddfellows, and passed through all the chairs. He was likewise a member of the Ancient St. John lodge, A. F. and A. M., being M. C. in 1872.

Wilson, Squire Frank, Proprietor of Truth, and head of the Auxiliary Printing Company, Toronto, was born at Markham, on the 7th November, 1852. His father was George Wilson, now proprietor of the Port Hope Daily and Weekly Guide, and his mother Sarah Howell, both of whom were English. Both, likewise, came from Yorkshire, and a few years after their arrival in Canada were married, settling for a year at Toronto. At the expiry of the year they removed to Markham, where, as we have seen, the subject of this sketch was Squire Frank Wilson received his born. early educational training at Markham. and he concluded his education in Toronto. Having finished his studies, he dropped into journalism, and for a while, published a weekly paper at Hamilton, and also established there the Auxiliary Publishing Company. From Hamilton he removed to Toronto, where, after a brief period, we find him at the head of the Auxiliary Printing by t for nish smal Whe men eight halftabli sach throu best o the were: the p tendir the es eighty operat and th magaz bined, No ent to whi toward may be ing a y Toronto this ent now has scattere The qu pianos, watces, etc., tha readers o The pap and mos country. the best ter is ve Wilson n of the mayor of A. Kerr. this lady. marriage

boys. Th

hardly nec

markable .

him the

not a parti

from an un

ilia

esta

city

enc

an a

House, and proprietor of Truth. The Auxiliary Printing Company, it may be said, was established at Hamilton originally, but that city was not found to be a thoroughly satisfactory distributing centre, and the preference was given to Toronto. Need of such an association had for a long time been felt by the publishers of provincial newspapers, for the function of the company was to furnish printed outsides to publishers having a small staff of compositors and limited means. When Mr. Wilson first assumed the management of this company, he supplied only eight or ten publishers; now the number of half-printed newspapers that leaves his establishment is one hundred and sixty. But such a measure of success was achieved only through persistent industry, and the very best of business ability. At the outset of the undertaking, only half a dozen hands were employed, and Mr. Wilson assisted at the practical operations during the day, attending to the correspondence at night. But the establishment has since had as many as eighty hands employed; and the business operations of the company and of Truth and the Ladies Journal, a monthly fashion magazine, which he also publishes, combined, last year, reached over $150,000. No enterprise has been spared, and the extent to which Mr. Wilson has put his energies towards speading the circulation of Truth may be guessed when it is learned that during a year his advertising account with one Toronto newspaper was over $5,000. But this enterprise has borne its fruit, and Truth now has a splendid circulation, being found scattered everywhere over the Dominion. The quantity of costly prizes, including pianos, organs, sewing machines, gold watces, silver tea services, silver spoons, etc., that Mr. Wilson has given away to readers of his journal, is simply surprising. The paper is certainly the best-stocked and most readable family weekly in the country. In addition to contributions from the best pens, its stock of selected matter is very large, and it is choice. Wilson married, in 1878, Minnie, daughter of the late George Kerr, at one time mayor of Hamilton. Alderman Murray A. Kerr, of the same city, is a brother of this lady. There has been issue of the marriage three children, one girl and two boys. The girl is dead. Mr. Wilson, it is hardly necessary to repeat, is a man of remarkable energy, and his achievements do him the highest credit. In politics he is not a partisan, but views public questions from an unbiassed standpoint. As he is, so

com-

ction

teem rnes.

s in-

ies."

nted

enial

Teft

son.

ovd.

ore,

ngs-

de-

irit.

oub-

ness

id a

gor-

orks

ever

TP.

and

and

ents

ited

the

on

cap-

the

ap-

ny. dd-

rs.

ent

of

her

has Truth been, an earnest and fearless exponent of right-doing in public life, and an uncompromising opponent of all that is wrong. In dealing with moral and other questions affecting society, Mr. Wilson keeps his paper in "the foremost fyles of time." Himself and his family are members of the Mothedian behaling in the mothed of the Mothedian behaling o

bers of the Methodist church. Johnson, William Henry, M.D., Fergus, Ontario, M.C.P.S.O., M.R.C.S., of England, and L.R.C.P., of Edinburgh, was born in the township of Eramosa, Wellington county, on the 18th September, 1850. He is a son of John Johnson, by Margaret, daughter of Archibald Smith, one of the earliest and most prominent settlers in the township of Eramosa. John Johnson was a native of Lancashire, England, and came to this country with his parents in 1820, settling in the above-named town-Mr. Johnson took up land, and engaged himself at farming; and is still living, and in the enjoyment of health and faculties. He has a family of nine children, the subject of this sketch being the youngest; and he was a brother of Edward Johnson, reeve for some time of the township of Erin; also of Dr. James Johnson, of Millbank, Perth. William Henry received the rudiments of an education in a common school, finishing his studies at the Galt grammar school, and leaving that institution at the age of eighteen. He then resolved to study medicine, and to this end, in 1869, entered the Victoria college, now affiliated with the Toronto School of Medicine, graduating from that institution in 1873 with honours; taking the gold medal for the final year, and the scholarship for the second year. After graduating in 1873, he went to Great Britain, entering the St. Thomas Hospital, at London; and from this institution received a certificate of honour in medicine, surgery and obstetrics, taking the diploma likewise of M.R.C.S., Eng. He remained in London for a year, and then went to Edinburgh, Scotland, where he remained for some time, also taking from that college the diploma L.R.C.P. In the fall of 1874 he returned to Canada, and in February of the following year began practice for himself in the town of Fergus, where he has continued ever since, with such success that his practice is now one of the very best and most profitable in that town. Dr. Johnson is assistant surgeon of the 30th battalion of Wellington Riffes, having joined the same during the late Riel rebellion. In 1885 he was elected councillor of the village of Fergus, and in that capacity served with marked ability and satisfaction to the people, and was elected by acclamation for 1886. He has been a member of the A.O.U.W., and financier of lodge No. 63, Fergus, for four years, and a master workman for two years. He has been president, vice-president and secretary of the Mechanics' Institute at different periods; is president of several debating societies and dramatic clubs, and is a member of the Reform Association of centre Wellington, besides being convener of committees for Fergus. He professes the Presbyterian faith, and is a highly respected member of that communion. He has travelled much, visiting the chief places in Great Britain, Ireland and France. Dr. Johnson has been an active playing member of the Fergus Lacrosse and Football clubs, and president of both; is also captain of the village Baseball club, and of all manly sports he is a patron, and in this way, as well as because of his heartiness and pleasing address, he is a general favourite. He enjoys the repute of being very skilful and learned in his profession. Wiggins, E. Stone, B. A., LL.D., Finance Department, Ottawa, was born in Queens County, New Brunswick, Canada, December 4th, 1839. His family is United Empire loyalist. Daniel Slocum Wiggins, his father, was for many years one of the leading merchants of the province. His mother, Elizabeth Titus, whose maiden name was Stone, also belonged to a United Empire loyalist family of great respectability, well known both in Canada and in the United States. Professor Wiggins, the subject of this sketch, is a direct descendant of Captain Thomas Wiggins of Devon, England, who in the year 1630 was sent out by Lords Saye and Brook as governor of one of the Massachusetts colonies. William Cullen Bryant in his "Popular History of the United States." credits this family with being the first to resist the encroachments and arrogance of successive colonial governors and entering the wedge which ultimately led to American independence. During the revolution of 1776, the sons of Stephen Wiggins of Newbury, N. Y., a descendant of Thomas Wiggins just mentioned, adhered to the royal cause, and on the conclusion of peace in 1783 left the country as United Empire lovalists and settled in New Brunswick. E. Stone Wiggins, the subject of this sketch, was in 1858 a pupil at the Oakwood Grammar school, then in charge of W. A. Whitney, B. A., beginning lite as a teacher in the Ontario public schools. In 1866 he was appointed local superintendent of schools for the County of Prince Edward. In 1867. '69 he was a student at the Philadelphia University of Medicine and Surgery, where he graduated taking the degree of M.D. He took the degree of B.A. in 1870, at Al-It was at the bert University, Ontario. convocation of the university this year that the future of his career was shaped, as it was here he formed the acquaintance of Hon. John Sandfield Macdonald, which ripened into a strong personal friendship that continued till the latter's death. He was then head master of the High school at Ingersoll. In the following year he was surprised, on visiting the premier at his office in Toronto, when asked by that astute politician if he would accept the principalship of the new institution for the education of the blind at Brantford—a position he afterwards ably filled for four years. Disagreeing with the Mowat government, which meanwhile had risen to power, he resigned in 1874, and established a boys' college in St. John, N. B. In the general election of 1878 he was chosen a candidate by the Conservative convention of Queen's, his native county, and was defeated, but was immediately afterwards appointed to a permanent position in the Finance department, Ottawa, by Sir John Macdonald, who now rose to power. Professor Wiggins has published several works, scientific and religious. In 1864, when only twenty-four years of age, he published his "Architecture of the Heavens," in which he demonstrated that comets travel through the agency of the positive and negative forces of electricity, for which he received the honorary degree of LLD., and it is satisfactory to add that after twenty years have passed this electric theory has been adopted by Professor Huggins, the noted English astronomer, and other distinguished scientists. In this work he expresses his belief in the existence of invisible or dark planets, which he argues emit no light, by not having an atmosphere similar to that on the earth, and other visible planets. He was the first to assert that all space between the sun and the remotest planet is dark, and that to use his words in his "Architecture of the Heavens." "worlds might travel in orbits not more distant than the nearest planet and yet never be open to the view of the astronomer. If our earth itself had no atmosphere it would enjoy no light The golden orb of day would never cheer the flowery robe of nature with his beams and the lunar orb and twinkling stars could sa pr vis

qu Sta by ecli

Cas

in (

fron

sate

nom

orbi

song

thro

spicu Hera

to bed

secon

earth. allege

the ea

covere

His a first, t

which

second.

third.

unexpe

of May

which

full (as

ters. T

colder i

the eart

lower tl

and the

colder th

compactr

he parti

never welcome our gaze as they would also schools forever be locked up in the dungeons of In 1867eternal night." (p 44). This he illustrates ladelphia as follows: "Suppose a light to be placed y, where in the middle of a large room and near it a of M.D. terrestrial globe. A fly lighting on the 0, at Alglobe, so it can see the light, will of course s at the see that the walls and ceiling of the room ear that are illuminated, and if it light on the oppoed, as it site side of the globe, will it not see that the room is still illuminated though it cantance of l, which not now see the lamp? So if space were iendship illuminated by the solar rays it would be th. He as bright at midnight as at mid-day. It is school at plain therefore that all space is dark and was surthat a cold substance from the sun strikes nis office our atmosphere which by friction creates ute polilight and heat and that all bodies above our palship atmosphere not provided with atmospheres lucation are invisible. There are conditions necesition he sary for even some of those bodies which are s. Disprovided with atmospheres to be rendered rnment, visible. Sometimes the moon though in her , he requarter and above the horizon is invisible. a boys Stars when near her at her full are obscured general by her glare, while during a total solar ndidate eclipse many of them are visible at mid-day. Cassini discovered Saturn's second satellite in October, 1671, revolving 2,200,000 miles from that luminary in 79 days. In this satellite he soon witnessed a strange phenomenon. Through nearly one half of its orbit it regularly disappears even when sought with the same telescope in which through the rest of its revolution it is a conspicuous object." (Letter in Yarmouth Herald, June, 1885). Enckes' comet is soon to become a visible planet, either primary or secondary, probably a large moon to the earth. To this class of dark worlds, he now alleges, his "dark moon" belongs, that is the earth's second satellite, which he discovered from his study of storms in 1880. His arguments to prove its existence are first, the advance of our moon's perigee, for which Sir Isaac Newton could not account; secondly, her secular acceleration; and third, the occurrence of unnatural or mexpected total solar eclipses like those of May 1780, July 1829, and May 1884, which occurred when the moon was at her full (as in July 1829) or in one of her quarters. The nearer a planet is to the sun the colder it is and the nearer the moon is to the earth, that is during her perigee, the lower the temperature both on the lunar and the terrestrial surface, for as iron is tolder than wood on account of the greater compactness of its particles so the nearer the particles of the solar system, i. e. the

)ueen's,

ed, but

ed to a

depart-

ld, who

ins has

and re-

ty-four

chitec-

demon-

gh the forces

ed, the

satis-

8 have

dopted nglish

scien-

belief

anets.

t har-

on the

e was.

tween

dark,

Archi-

might

a the-

o the

itself

ight.

cheer

eams

ould

planets, are to each other, the lower the temperature and the greater the density of the atmosphere. Hence, knowing that the great planets Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus and Neptune would be near their perihelion in 1883 and 1884, he predicted, (see his letter in the January number of the New York Insurance Times) that the winters and summers of these years would be remarkable for their coldness and humidity, and that the earth's atmosphere would exhibit a fiery redness, a prediction that has been fulfilled. He has also paid much attention to geology which he has ably dealt with in his "Days of the Creation." In 1876 a marine monster, swimming with its head twelve feet above the water, was seen near Boston by the officers and passengers of the steamer New York. This Dr. Wiggins at once recognized as the far famed geologic animal the plesiosaurus dolichodeirus of the Oolitic era, heretofore said by geologists to have been millions of years extinct. He at once published the discovery in the St. John (N. B.) Globe, Strange to add, Professor R. A. Proctor, the astronomer, published a letter in 1884, (copied in the report of the United States Commissioner of Fisheries for that year), to the effect that he had discovered the plesiosaurus in an animal seen off Panama, though Professor Wiggins had made the discovery nine years before. In 1866-67 he became involved in a violent contest with the Universalists, and in the latter year published his "Universalism Unfounded," a very learned and caustic work of 330 pages. This was loudly applauded by the orthodox press. This he dedicated to his wife. He is an acknow-ledged authority on English, his "English Grammar for Dominion High Schools," which deals mainly with the difficult sentences in the language, being a standard work. Professor Wiggins, however, owes his great name mainly to his predictions of storms, which for years have been faithfully puolished by newspapers in all countries and climes. He believes that all storms, excepting those usually called "thunder storms"—cyclones and great tempests—are all caused by planetary attraction, which he alleges shifts the earth's centre of gravity and gives a variable weight to bodies on the earth's surface. Earthquakes he conceives to be from the same cause, and during the three months after one of his heaviest storms he always predicts earthquakes. He points to the great earthquake in Java as having occurred immediately after his great sprm of March 1883, and to the disastrous (ashmere earthquake, and the earthquakes ... Spain, which succeeded his storm of March, 1885. He certainly predicted the earthquake that occurred in England in April, 1884, and pointed out that in exactly a month from that date, viz., on May 19, it would re-appear in Asia, where it was accompanied by a terrible cyclone in Burmah, and two hundred villages were destroyed on the Arabian coast. His theory of tidal waves is also extremely interesting and appears strongly probable; and a number of the predictions which he has made respecting storms and tidal waves have been literally fulfilled. The moon he believes to be a habitable world, being possessed, as already said, of a dense atmosphere. he sees in the fact that vastly more than half of her sphere is illuminated, for when she has passed her conjunction or "new moon," even to 50°, a ring of light "the old moon in the lap of the new," can be distinctly seen surrounding her orb. In 1862 Professor Wiggins married his cousin, Susie Anna Wiggins, daughter of Vincent W. Wiggins, captain of No. 2 company, second battalion of the Queen's County, (N. B.) militia. They have no children. Mrs. Wiggins is one of the best read women in America, and as a polemical writer has few equals. Her letters on marriage with a deceased wife's sister, published in brochure form and addressed toand are an attack upon—the Lord Bishop of Ontario, who opposed the passage of the bill through the Senate, display great ability and research, and are by some thought to rank with the "Letters of Junius." It is to her zeal and untiring industry we owe the passage of this measure (now known as the "Gunhilda Bill" from her nom de plume) through the Canadian Senate. A. T. Dunbar, the sculptor, has made a bust of this lady, which has been placed in the parliamentary library at Ottawa.

Tasse, Joseph, M.P. for the City of Ottawa, F.R.S.C., was born at Montreal, on the 23rd October, 1848, and was educated at Bourget's College, Rigaud, County of Vaudrevil. When his educational course was concluded, he connected himself with literature. The press is the natural outlet of literary feeling in a community not yet possessing magazines and other vehicles of pure literary work, and thither went the subject of this sketch. When he was only nineteen he assumed the editorship of a tri-weekly newspaper at Ottawa, called Le Canada. Two years later (1869), he joined the staff, as associate editor, of La Minerve, at Montreal, the leading French Conservative organ of the Province of Quebec, acting, in that capacity till 1872. He was during this period likewise a director of Le Revue Canadiénne, a monthly review of good literary character, to which he contributed many essays on literature, history and political economy. Thereafter we find him for a time assistant French translator of the House of Commons. In 1873 he visited England, Belgium, France, Switzerland, and Italy, publishing a detailed account of his tour. The narrative was extremely vivid, and showed its author to be a man of the closest and most accurate kind of observation. For the years 1872 and 1873 Mr. Tassé was president of the French Canadian Institute, at Ottawa; for the years 1875 and 1876 he was president of the St. Jean Baptiste Society, of the same city; he is one of the founders and directors of the Ottawa French Canadian Building Society; and was president of the Quebec Press Association for 1883. Among his other literary labours M. Tassé has been a frequent lecturer before national and literary societies in Canada and the United States, being extremely popular in this branch of literary enterprise. But it is as the author of permament work that M. Tassé calls for our greatest admiration. Some of the best known of his works are Philemon Wright, on Colonisation et Commerce de Bois (1871), the work being an essay on the settlement established opposite the Chaudiere Falls by that prince of pioneers Philemon Wright, and the subsequent development of this region of bush; Le Chemin de fer Canadien Pucifique (1872), this being the first comprehensive history of the Canadian Pacific Railway written in the French language; Le Valle de l'Outaouais (1872), a pamphlet showing the agricultural, mineral and timber resources of the Ottawa Valley, and likewise the history of its railways and canals. The subject matter of this pamphlet was reproduced in 1875 in Paris, in Le Tour du Monde. But his greatest work is Les Canadiens de l'ouest (1878), which work is, as its title shows, a history of those French Canadians in the western portion of Canada, who have made themselves conspicuous in every department of life;—in commerce, in the learned professions and in politics. The characteristics of M. Tassé's literary style are a virile strength, and a fervour which vibrates through page after page of his work. But he never indulges in extravagances of either fee

he

H

ger

at 1

Cor

ing

bor

of I

1830

was

of I

Cou

thre

born

mon

in 1

Wood

drew

years

Wood

and 1

school

money

He w

Albert

Port I

year.

eral s

County

was el

in 1860

of 1876

treasur

was cha

for son

represen

tors in

Mr. Wo

vincial

1871; w

trar of t

ment on

office of that date

1877, he

urer; and

1883. H

ricultural

tiring fro

offered th

hold Loan accepted likewise a pointed e

battalion,

17th Jun

Maria Par

posa, by w

held within the bounds of artistic restraint. He was first returned to parliament at the general election of 1878, and was re-elected at the last general election. He is a staunch Conservative, and one of the most promis-

 L_{α} hch

110.

He "

of

of

tri-

ry nd

tor

he

pe ex-

or

 $\mathbf{n}\mathbf{d}$

ing members of the House of Commons.

Wood, Samuel Casey, Toronto, was born in the village of Bath, in the County of Lennox, Ontario, on the 27th December. His father, Thomas Smith Wood, was born near Saratoga Springs, in the State of New York, in 1791, and died in Madoc, County of Hastings, in 1884, aged ninetythree years. His mother, Mrs. Wood, was born twelve miles east of Burlington, Vermont, in 1796, and died in Picton, Ontario, in 1883, aged eighty-seven years. Wood, senr., served in the war of 1812, and drew a pension for his services for some years prior to his death. Samuel Casey Wood was educated in the common schools; and when his studies were ended, taught school for three years, with a view to earn money with which to study a profession. He was likewise clerk in a store at Prince Albert for a period of two years, and at Port Hoover, in a similar capacity, for one year. He carried on the business of general storekeeper in Mariposa township, County of Victoria, for several years, and was elected clerk of the township council in 1860. From that date until the summer of 1876, he was county clerk and county treasurer of the County of Victoria. He was chairman of the High School board for some time in Lindsay; and was the representative of the public school inspectors in the Council of Public Instruction. Mr. Wood was elected member of the Provincial parliament on the 25th February, 1871; was appointed secretary and registrar of the province in the Mowat government on the 23rd July, 1875; and held the office of commissioner of Agriculture from that date until 1883. On the 19th March, 1877, he was appointed provincial treasurer; and retired from public life in March, 1883. He was chairman of the Ontario Agricultural Commission of 1881: and on retiring from the government in 1883, was offered the position of manager of the Freehold Loan and Savings Company, which he accepted and still holds. Mr. Wood has likewise a military record, having been appointed ensign and adjutant of the third battalion, Victoria militia, in 1859. On the 17th June, 1854, he married Charlotte Maria Parkinson, of the township of Mariposa, by whom he had a family of ten child-es (1, % (1, %) feeling or style, his work being invariably, rea, eight of whom are living. His wife and children are nembers of the Church of England. In politics Mr. Wood is, and has all his life been, a Reformer; and his retirement from public and ministerial life, both of which he adorned, was felt to be a grave loss to his party. In political as well as in private life, Mr. Wood's character is the very highest; and anyone who has ever had business relations with him as a member of the administration, or in any other capacity, likes to dwell on the courtesy of his manners, and the kindness of his heart. He occupied, as we have said, a very high place in the esteem of his party; and it is doubtful if he had a solitary political opponent who cherished for him any ill-will. As a gentleman remarked to the writer, "It would be impossible to know S. C. Wood and not be his friend. He has a large, manly heart."

O'Hara, Major Walter.—The late Major Walter O'Hara, second son of Robert O'Hara of Raheen, in the County of Galway, Ireland, and Fanny, daughter of Walter Taylor, of Castle Taylor, in that county, was born in Dublin, 1787, and died in Toronto in 1874. At the age of fourteen, he entered Trinity College, Dublin, as a fellow commoner, where he graduated with honors in 1806. Having intentions of being called to the bar, he studied at the Middle Temple, but abandoned his resolution on the breaking out of the war in the Spanish peninsula. He thereupon was gazetted ensign, in H.M. 91st regiment of Highlanders, and on his promotion to a lieutenancy in H. M. 47th Regiment, he immediately proceeded to join that regiment, then on active service in Spain, where he arrived in time to take part in the murderous conflict between Soult and Beresford, at Albuera. His subsequent career in Spain included all the great actions which make Wellington's Peninsular campaigns the most glorious in our history. At the assault and capture of Badajos he commanded a regiment, and was severely wounded, and he was again seriously wounded at the battle of the Nive, where he was taken prisoner by the French. At the close of the war he held a staff position as brigade major, and subsequently emigrated to Canada. He was a knight of the tower and sword of Portugal, and in addition to other decorations received the British medal with eight clasps, for the actions of Albuera, Salamanca, Vittoria, Badajos, Cuidad Rodrigo, Pyrenees, Nive and Nivelle. The career of Colonel O'Hara during the Peninsula war was one of stirring and even romantic incident. One of these it may be interesting to record. quartered with his regiment at Canterbury, before he was ordered to Spain, he was placed in command of an escort, in charge of French prisoners of war, from Canterbury to a town in the interior of England; his orders being to deliver them to the proper authorities of that town, for safe-keeping. Among these prisoners were officers of high rank in the French army; and so gratified were they at the manner in which they were treated on the route by the young ensign, that on parting, they presented him with a manifesto, which is still in the possession of the family, addressed to their brother officers, requesting that if the fortune of war ever placed Ensign O'Hara in their hands, he might be treated by them with the same consideration which he had extended to them. Three years afterwards the subject of this memoir, being then a captain in the 47th, and major of the 6th Portuguese Cagadores, was at the battle of the Pyrenees, where he had a horse killed under him, and was so desperately wounded in addition, that he could not escape, and fell into the hands of the French. He fortunately had the manifesto with him, which he immediately sent to General Foy, whose prisoner he was. That general immediately sent his own surgeon to attend him, provided for him comfortable quarters; and these gallant and magnanimous enemies of England vied with one another in their kindness and attention to their prisoner. The incident was reported to Marshal Soult, and he ordered that Major O'Hara should be the guest of the French officers until his wound admitted of his removal, and that he was then to be sent back to his own people. He was subsequently sent back, when a French major of engineers was released in exchange. Colonel O'Hara and Mr. Spragge, father of the late Chancellor Spragge, were the first settlers in that part of the township of York now known as the town of Parkdale, and there he erected a residence, and farmed what was for many years an oasis in a grand forest. Few men deserve more of Canada than Colonel Walter O'Hara. He was one of the phalanx of those advanced thinkers to whom we owe our present constitutional government. fortitude in resisting oppression and arbitrary power, his high sense of honor, and the fearless steadiness in which he adhered to right resolutions, in many trials and through many bitter persecutions, made his name a household word in Upper Canada.

To quote the words of the author of "Toronto of Old," "the contemporaries of Colonel O'Hara will always think of him as a chivalrous, high spirited, warm hearted gentleman; and in our annals hereafter he will be named among the friends of Canadian progress, at a period when enlightened ideas in regard to government and social life, derived from a wide intercourse with men in large and eminent committees, were, amongst us, considerably misunderstood.

Strong, Hon. Samuel Henry, Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, Ottawa, was born in Dorsetshire, England, in the year 1825. He was a son of the Rev. Sam. uel T. Strong, who was at one time rector of Bytown, now the City of Ottawa. S. H. Strong came to Canada in his boyhood, and for a short time after his arrival took up his residence in Kingston. When the Rev. Mr. Strong removed to the rectorship of Bytown, his family accompanied him, and our sub-The lad had the benject among the rest. efit of careful training at the hands of various private tutors, and when seventeen years old, entered upon the study of the law in the office of Augustus Keefer, at that time one of the leading lawyers in that portion In the office of Henry of the province. Eccles, at Toronto, he completed his studies; and in 1848, at Hilary term, was called to Full of ambition, and having a the bar. natural inclination for legal work. Mr. Strong commenced his practice; and he at once attracted the attention of the bar. He prepared his cases with the utmost diligence and exactness, and when he arose to plead, every contention which he laid down was found fortified with precedent, and with skilful argument. But from the first he seems to have been most strongly drawn toward the equity branch of his profession, and no lengthy period had elapsed before Samuel Henry Strong, by common consent, was given a place among the Roafs and the Mowats. It has been pointed out, and with accuracy, that in the capacity for grasping the vital and substantial points of a case, he has had, and probably has now, no peer, either at the bar or on the bench of Canada. He formed a partnership after a time with William Marshall Matheson, afterwards master and deputy-registrar in Chancery at Ottawa, under the firm name of Strong & Thomas Wardlaw Taylor was Matheson. afterwards admitted to partnership. In 1856, Mr. Strong was appointed a member of the commission for the Consolidation of the Statutes of Canada and of Upper Canada, and laboured at that onerous and most tale ailk he ' of d Two com and to th and cour dutio advo learn abilit tainn ber, appoi there did n had b reliab by no legal e ory for There bench. his jud his bro guishe and of erally. exact contras of plead exceller Mr. Str has a w

He

tio

eled

per

cam

Mel was bor 1840. and Ha was nied bart. I lady was from Si Kenny, business City of I Sir Tho ford Hou Sir Thom sketch w ticed his

and had

important task till its completion in 1859. He had now attained the very highest position in his profession; and in 1860 was elected a bencher of the Law Society of Upper Canada. Three years later, government came forward among others to recognize his talent, investing him with the counsellor's silken gown. On the 27th December, 1869, he was appointed to the bench of the Court of Chancery, as one of the vice-chancellors. Two years later, he became a member of the commission to inquire into the constitution and jurisdiction of the courts, with a view to the effecting of important legal reforms. and a possible union of the law and equity courts. Throughout the performance of the duties mentioned, like in his course as an advocate, Mr. Strong revealed an amount of learning, a soundness of judgment, and an ability altogether beyond the ordinary attainments. And when, on the 8th of October, 1875, it became known that he had been appointed to the supreme bench of Canada, there was no one, competent to judge, who did not feel that a most admirable selection had been made. An authority, eminently reliable, declares, that though the judge is by no means a recluse or a book-worm, his legal erudition is very great, and his memory for judicial decisions almost miraculous. There is no keener intellect on the Canadian bench, and the greatest deference is paid to his judgments, not alone by the bar, but by He is specially distinhis brother judges. guished for his knowledge of law as a source and of the principles of jurisprudence generally. His faculty for legal expression and exact phraseology is conspicuous, and by contrast with the loose and popular modes of pleading, younger practitioners can find excellent models in the style and methods of Mr. Justice Strong Mr. Strong's address. has a wife and two children.

'To-

n of

m as

rted

r he

ana-

ened

ocial

with

ere.

hdge

wa,

the

am-

ctor

H.

 \mathbf{a} nd

his

Mr.

wn.

ub.

en.

ari-

ars

in

me

ion

ry

ſr.

McKenny, Thornbury, Thomas, was born in the City of Dublin, Ireland, 1840. He was a son of James McKenny and Harriet Donovan. Mrs. McKenny was niece of the late Sir William Colles, bart. It is interesting to note that this lady was, on the mother's side, descended from Sir Humphrey Davy. James Mc-Kenny, our subject's father, adopted the business of chemical manufacturer, in the City of Dublin, and was nephew of the late Sir Thomas McKenny, bart., of Beresford House, County Dublin, Ireland, After Sir Thomas it is that the subject of our sketch was named. Mr. McKenny practiced his business for some time in Dublin, and had one of the largest establishments of its kind in Ireland. This firm was well known throughout the whole of Europe, and was called the Dublin Chemical Manufactory. Mr. McKenny died in 1855, leaving nine children, the subject of our sketch being the second-eldest son, and brother of the late John McKenny, government as-sayist and professor of Chemistry of Val-paraiso, Chili, South America. Thomas McKenny, the subject of our sketch, received a thorough education. He first studied under private tutors at home; and at the age of twelve entered the private school of Dr. Ryder, of Carrickmacross, County Cavan, Ireland. Thence he passed in turn to several other institutions, finally concluding his studies at King William's College, Castletown, Isle of Man. It was decided that McKenny should enter the ministry, and in accordance with such views he was placed under the care and tuition of the Right Rev. Dean Allcock, of Waterford, Ireland, who was his uncle. He, however, changed his mind, and began the study of medicine in the St. Peter's Street school of Medicine, Dublin, at the age of eighteen. Owing to too close application to study, he was obliged to leave it for two years; but, at the end of this period his health was quite restored. In 1860 he sailed to Canada, and settled with his uncle, Colonel Watson, at Mountain Lake, township of St. Vincent, County of Grey. Here he began farming, and continued so employed for two years; after which he took a position as book-keeper with the late William Mickle, of Meaford, County of Grey. Two years later he apprenticed himself to the late Robt. Foster, druggist, in Meaford, with whom he remained for three years. Then he removed to the village of Thornbury, township of Collingwood, and established a business for himself as druggist. At this business he has continued ever since, having the post and telegraph offices in connection with the same. Mr. McKenny's tastes in early life were for going to sea; but, owing to his mother's dislike to that profession, he changed his mind. In 1875 he was elected to the municipal council for the township of Collingwood, and was re-elected for the years 1876, 1877 and 1878. In 1879 he ran for the reeveship, but was defeated. 1884 he again contested the election for reeve, against J. Rorke and N. McColman, and defeated both opponents. again re-elected in 1885. In the same year he was elected chairman of finance in the county council for the County of Grey. He was a member of the Orange society for some years, and occupied the position of district master for Collingwood. He belongs to the Masonic order, lodge No. 137; to the Ancient Order of United Workmen, and has held the office of recording secretary for some time in the latter body. For the last sixteen years he has been permanently connected with the temperance movements in Canada, and has been president of the Blue Ribon order, in the town of Thornbury, for some time. He has travelled considerably, having visited most of Canada and the United States. Our subject was brought up in the Church of England, but he is now a member of the Methodist church, and for the last fifteen years has been a local preacher. In politics, Mr. McKenny is a Conservative, and belongs to the Conservative Association of the County of Grey. He has been brought before the convention on three different occasions, and takes a most active interest He was married in 1869 in the party. to Hannah Hurlburt, daughter of Heman Hurlburt, a well-known U. E. loyalist. She died in 1870. In 1872 he was again married to Jane Edith Hurlburt, halfsister of his first wife. He has a family of four children. At the time of enlarging the Thornbury harbour he was one of the deputation sent to wait upon the minister of Public Works, at Ottawa, for the purpose of obtaining a grant for such enlarging and improving. The delegation succeeded in obtaining the grant, and a promise of a completion of the work in the following year, 1886. Mr. McKenny is a gentleman who always retains a friend, once made. He is courteous and kindly, and is exceedingly popular.

McDonell, Augustine, Provincial Land Surveyor and Civil Engineer, Chatham, Ontario, was born in the township of Dundee, County of Huntingdon, P.Q., on the 22nd day of June, 1828. He is a son of Austin McDonell, who emigrated to Canada in 1816 from Inverness-shire, Scotland, a strong adherent of the Stewart dynasty. His mother was Isabella Mc-Rae, who emigrated to Canada with her parents from Ross-shire, Scotland. Augustine was educated in the common schools of Lower Canada, in the High school of Williamstown, County of Glengarry, and in the Normal school of Toronto. His studies were confined to English branches and mathematics. He left Lower Canada in 1850 and went to Toronto, where he attended the Normal school till October, 1853. He then proceeded to the County of Kent, and taught in the public schools of that place up to July, 1860. He then became articled to a provincial land surveyor in Chatham, and was admitted as a licensed surveyor in 1863, following his profession. together with that of civil engineering, in the town of Chatham with great success up to this date. Mr. McDonell married in Chatham, in August, 1861, Margaret A. Flynn, who was born in Brockville, on the 15th February, 1838, and came to Chatham with her parents, who are still living, when a child. The fruit of the union consists of five children. Alexander Patrick McDon-ell, the oldest, a graduate of St. Michael's college, Toronto, is now in his fourth year studying law in the office of Douglas, Douglas & Walker, Chatham, and passed brilliant examinations up to this time. The second child, Mary Ellen McDonell, is a graduate of the Ursuline academy, Chatham, and is now attending the New England Conserva-tory of Music, Boston, Mass. The third, Isabella Angela McDonell, is now attending the Sacred Heart convent at London, Ontario; the fourth, Flora McDonell, is at the Ursuline academy, Chatham; and the fifth, John Frances McDonell, aged eleven years, is in attendance at the Catholic school of Chatham. Mr. McDonell has been very successful in all his undertakings, and has attained to a conspicuous place in his profession. He was one of the promoters of the Erie & Huron Railway, and was one of the engineers of its construction. He has also been prominently connected with the drainage of wet lands in the peninsula, and introduced a number of important changes in the Drainage Act of Ontario. These changes were essential for the successful practical working of the drainage system. Mr. McDonell is a gentleman of a large public spirit, and his character stands high for integrity. He is a Roman cathelic, and a Liberal-Conservative in politics. He is a Roman catho-Rykert, John Charles, Q.C., M.P. for Lincoln and Niagara, St. Catharines, Ontario, was born on the 10th March, 1832, in St. Catharines. He is a son of George Rykert, one of the pioneers of the Niagara district, who died in 1857. George Rykert was a man of much ability, was a surveyor by profession, was manager of the Commercial Bank at St. Catharines for a lengthy period, and represented the County of Lincoln in the parliament of Upper Canada, from 1822 till the union of Upper and Lower Canada in 1844. His mother was Ann Maria Nittleberger, and was born in Montreal. She was of German extraction, pas Tor tha the in t beg late his: chie Hila bar, nent tinue once envi show was 1 jurie กรรรก It wa of su Ryke farm mile f 1864 1 the lat town during county Colleg mar sc many cultura 1865, tion of lar vote council entered 1860, 1 his seat was a but in for his parliame father 1 tive. Th only a y fied in h the read tivating and when the ear o

Rykert is

was a me

body, tha

far

tio sch and belonged to a well-known Canadian family. J.C. Rykert received his educational instruction in the High and Grammar schools of his native place, and when he had passed the regular courses here proceeded to Toronto, entering Upper Canada College in that city, and concluding his education at the University of Toronto. When his term, in the latter institution, came to a close, he began the study of law in the office of the late Judge Burns, at Toronto, but completed his studies under Adam Wilson, afterwards chief justice, in the same city. At the Hilary term of 1854, he was called to the bar, and has, notwithstanding the prominent part he has taken in public life, continued to practice his profession. once, upon commencing practice, he took an enviable place in his profession; for he showed a wide knowledge of the law, and he was possessed of a very fluent tongue. With juries his quick, clear, appealing and impassioned utterances were always effective. It was not hard to predict what the career of such a man would be in public life. Mr. Rykert for many years resided upon his farm in the township of Grantham, half a mile from St. Catharines; and from 1857 to 1864 he was reeve of the township. the latter date till 1876 he was reeve of the town of St. Catharines, and for five years during this period was warden of the county. He has since been chairman of the Collegiate Institute, of the High and Grammar schools, and board of trustees; was for many years president of the County Agricultural Society; was elected president, in 1865, of the Agricultural and Arts Association of the Province of Ontario by a popular vote; has been since a member of the council and its vice-president. Mr. Rykert entered the old Canadian parliament in 1860, for the County of Lincoln, holding his seat till 1863. From 1867 to 1878 he was a member of the Ontario legislature, but in the last-named year he was elected for his old constituency to the Dominion parliament. In politics he was, as his parliament. In politics he was, as his tather had been, an unswerving Conservative. The province which he revealed when only a young man at the bar, was well verified in his political career. He was one of the readiest, most eloquent, and most captivating speakers in the House of Commons; and when he arose he always got, and held, the ear of the house. How difficult a task this is to accomplish we need not say. Mr. Rykert is a leading Freemason, and his father was a member of such high standing in that body, that his funeral was attended by no

that

came

or in

nsed

sion,

, in

s up

in

.A.

the

ham

hen

s of

on-

el's

rear

ug-

lant

pnd

ate

is

rd,

ing

on,

at

the

llic

as

gs, in fewer than 3,000 representatives of the order from Canada and the United States. Mr. Rykert is a strict Episcopalian. He married on the 19th October, 1854, Annie Maria, daughter of Colonel Sheldon Hawley, of Trenton, Ontario. There are issue nine children, eight of whom are living. Mr. Rykert still continues to represent Lincoln, although the last contest was a pretty close one, and he still continues one of the ablest and most influential members of the House of Commons.

McGreevy, Thomas, M.P. for Quebec West, was born in the City of Quebec, where he has since resided, on the 27th July, 1827, and is of Irish descent. He was educated at the school of his native city, and early in life showed an inclination for commercial and public enterprises. He became very conspicuous from his connection with important companies and undertakings of a large character, and in 1867 was called to the Legislative Council for the Province of Quebec. Here he sat till the general elections of 1874, when he resigned in consequence of the measure which passed the house abolishing dual representation. He was returned to the House of Commons for Quebec West, by acclamation in 1867; hewas again returned in 1872, and in 1874; and as proof of his popularity we may state that in 1878 he was again elected by acclamation. He still represents Quebec West in the House of Commons. Throughout his creditable political career Mr. McGreevy has been a consistent and trusted Liberal-Conservative, and he has the repute of being one of the most practical and "level headed" members in the House of Commons, where his opinion is received on both sides always with respect. He has been engaged in some of the most important enterprises in his native province. He had the building of the North Shore Railway from Quebec to Montreal; and the manner in which the road was built is the best evidence of the thoroughness with which anything falling to his charge is accomplished. "As a city father," says an authoritative work at our hand, "he was none the less popular than in every enterprise with which he was connected, and in the city council-where he sat from 1858 to 1864—his recommendations were unanimously regarded as sage and sound." He is still extensively engaged as a contractor; is a director of the St. Lawrence Steam Navigation Company; of the Union Bank of Lower Canada; is a commissioner of the Quebec Turnpike Trust; a member of the Quebec Harbour Commission; vice-president of the Locomotive Works of Kingston, and has been a director of the North Shore Railway Company. Mr. Mr. McGreevy, while a sound and respected member of his party, is not narrow and intolerent, and hence enjoys the respect and good will of those from whom he differs upon public questions.

Middleton, Major-General Sir Frederick D., K.C.M.G., C.B., General officer commanding the Militia of Canada, was born at Belfast, Ireland. He is the third son of the late Major-General Charles Middleton, a Highlander, and a brave officer, who saw much service in India. This gentleman was one of six brothers, five of whom entered the army, and one the Royal navy-one of the former being killed in the Peninsular war, and the sailor, in the engagement in Trafalgar Bay. Frederick D. Middleton was educated at the Royal military college, Sandhurst, England, from which he obtained his commission, without purchase, on the 30th December, 1842. served as ensign in the 58th regiment in New South Wales, Norfolk Island, and New Zealand, and was present at most of the fighting in the operations in the latter country against the Maoris in 1845-46. He was mentioned twice in despatches; and promoted to a lieutenancy in the 96th regiment, August, 1848, serving in that regiment in India until October, 1854, during which time he passed the required examination in surveying, and was promoted captain, July, 1852. He served as a volunteer in the suppression of the Santhal rebellion in 1855, in command of a troop of the Nawaub of Moorshedabad's cavalry, and received the thanks of the Indian government. He exchanged into the 29th regiment, June, 1855, and served with it in Burmah; served during the Indian mutiny, 1857-58, in General Frank's column on the march to the siege of Lucknow, and was present as A.D.C. at all the engagements and affairs which took place on that march; also as A.D.C. to General Sir E. Lugard, K.C.B., at the siege and capture of Lucknow, in the pursuit of Roor Singh, and the subsequent engagements; was five times mentioned in despatches, and recommended for the Victoria Cross for two acts of bravery, but being on the personal staff was not considered eligible by Lord Clyde; received the brevet of major; served as brigade-major to the field force in Oude, employed in attacking the forts of the rebel chiefs; served with the 29th regiment in England from 1859 to 1861; A.D.C. to General Franklyn in Gibraltar; brigademajor and temporary police magistrate in that fortress, and as A.D.C. to General Sir Henry Bates, at Malta, until November, 1862. He passed through Hythe School of Musketry and the Staff College, obtaining a first-class certificate at the former. Re-join. ing the 29th regiment in Canada, in August, 1868, he held various important appointments in the service until the removal of the Imperial troops from Canada. In July, 1870, he became superintending officer of garrison instruction to the forces, and inaugurated that system. He was commandant of the Royal Military College from September, 1874, until his appointment to the command of the Militia of Canada, July, 1884. He was promoted lieutenant-colonel, March, 1869, and colonel, July, 1875. Sir Frederick has the New Zealand medal, the Indian mutiny medal and clasp, and the cross of commander of the bath. In 1885. after the close of the rebellion in the North-West territories, he was appointed a knight commander of the order of St. Michael and St. George. He married, in Montreal, February 17, 1870, Miss Doucet, of that city. The Imperial government, though exerting its best judgment, has not been always fortunate in the selection of governors and military commanders to send to Canada, but in the choice of Major-General Middleton, it certainly exhibited much wisdom, and from its happy selection it has fallen to Canada to be richly the The late deplorable outbreak in gainer. our North-West territories is not distant enough yet to require description from our hands; it only remains to us to say that the affair terminated in a way highly creditable to our militia and patriotism. But the man who most justly received the widest recognition was the commander of the expeditionary force—the subject of this sketch. In a degree, larger perhaps than most people were aware, the successful termination of that revolt was due to the skill, the good judgment, and the temper and the firmness of General Middleton; and the grant of $20,000 with which parliament recognized his services, and the knighthood which it pleased Her Majesty to bestow upon him, were never within our knowledge of history more justly earned and more appropriately bestowed.

h to he age by wh

eď

Er

dir

ma

me

Bar

186

but

whe

Stoc

WAS

retir

after

of w

man

he w

wher

Chur

mem

ried a

Franc

daugl

Hawl

daugh

nor of the ra

alry t

Hon.

his rar

battali

Mr. St

loan so

has bee

portant

has alv

have m

stars ha

through epoch i

been no

of the F

our grea

Strathy, Henry Seton, Cashier of the Traders Bank, Toronto, was born on the 29th January, 1832, in Edinburgh, Scotland. He is the youngest son, in a family of twelve, of the late Alexander Strathy, of Beechwood, near London, Ontario. At Beechwood the subject of this sketch received his education. Mr. Strathy began his business career in the wholesale house of Hope, Birrell & Co., of London, Ontario, where he remained for three years. In 1850 he entered the Gore Bank, at London, and there remained for three years; after which he was removed to Hamilton, and appointed teller of the head office in that city. In 1862 he was appointed inspector, his judgment having been held in high regard by the management. He then became manager of the London branch, but retired in 1864. He was not content with the progress that came by the regulation turning of the bank wheels; and this was why he turned his energies into another sphere. He was appointed secretary and treasurer of the Huron and Erie Society, of London; and was elected a director of that society on retiring from its management in 1867, to take the management of the London branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, then just organized. In 1869 he was appointed cashier of that bank. but retired on the 31st December, 1872, when he removed to Montreal, to join the Stock Exchange in that city. In 1874 he was appointed cashier of the Federal Bank, In 1874 he retiring from that position in 1884. Shortly afterwards he organized the Traders Bank, of which institution he is now the general manager. A son of Presbyterian parents, he was brought up as a Presbyterian, but when sixteen years of age he joined the Church of England, and has remained a member of that communion since. He married at Hamilton, on the 29th January, 1857, Frances Emilia, eldest and only surviving daughter of the late Hon. John Wetenhall, of Hawkelow, County of Wentworth, and grand daughter of the late General Hale, gover-nor of Londonderry. He was adjutant with the rank of coronet in the Wentworth cavalry troop, when commanded by the late Hon. Harcourt Bull; but retired, retaining his rank. He subsequently joined the 13th battalion Hamilton Infantry, as a private. Mr. Strathy has been a director of various loan societies and insurance companies; and has been a prominent figure in various important public enterprises. In politics he has always been a Reformer. have missed great achievement because the stars have fought against them, and not through any fault of their own. In one epoch in the life of Mr. Strathy, this has been notably the case. He was at the head of the Federal Bank during the period when our great North-West wilderness sprang inrigade-

ate in

ral Sir

mber,

tool of

ning a

-join-

a, in

ortant

ne re-

nada

nding

orces.

com-

from nt to

July,

onel,

Sir

the

the 1885,

orth-

ight

and

Feb-

city.

ting

vays

hors

can-

eral

uch

it

the

in

nt

ur

to commercial importance. Towards the new region with its illimitable stretches of grain land, its fertility of soil and mildness of climate, every enterprising eye was turned. Men came from all parts to buy the lands, and some of the most capable and level-headed men in Canada, indeed in the world, went to our North-West, and staked their fortunes there. It was by no means the wild and the visionary ones who went; but there was a general march of capital, enterprise and experience thither. adian Pacific Railroad was in operation, hundreds of thousands of persons had crossed the ocean to settle upon the treeless lands, and Winnipeg was like an enormous hive. Mr. Strathy knew all this, and with other men of experience, made important stakes in the new region; then the rush came to a stand still; next followed panic, and the morrow's sun beheld the country strewn with the wreck of a "boom." All men there suffered, and many a wise head was covered with disaster. Mr. Strathy's branch institution suffered with the rest; but it shared only in the general fate. As part of the commerce of the North-West, it was shaken, and it was not in the power of any man alive to be able to avert such a result. The reverses of the branch reacted on the Federal generally, and for a time its condition was a strained one. But had the "boom" not exploded, instead of chronicling a reverse, it would have fallen to us to record a splendid achievement. Mr. Strathy may have been over enthusiastic, but he erred with all the enterprising men of the country; and to the course which he adopted there, he was strongly urged by men of eminent judgment, and of high commercial and financial standing. Mr. Strathy is emphatically a man of energy, and in banking circles his figure is a towering one. He has had his lesson; but we are not going too far when we predict that he will speedily retrieve the past, and be soon again foremost among bankers who are successful, as he is now one of the very first among those who are able.

Swift, James, Kingston, Ontario, was born at Toronto, on the 20th February, 1844, being a son of Michael Swift and Catherine Haughey His father was foreman in charge of the military stores of the war department until the same was closed at Toronto. He received his early educational training at the public schools, and concluded his studies at Regiopolis college, Kingston, Ontario. In mercantile and general business life he has been active and enterprising, and his ventures have been crowned by a handsome measure of success. He is president of the Kingston and Rideau Navigation Company, and a director in the Kingston and Pembroke Railway Company. He is largely interested in steamboats and iron ore mines, and in the shipping trade generally. He is likewise a wharfinger, is prominently connected with insurance, and is the most extensive importer of coal in Kingston. It is hardly necessary to add that the business abilities of Mr. Swift are regarded to be of a very high order, and that his repute for integrity in all his dealings is the very highest. He is a Roman catholic, and a staunch Conservative in politics.

Dickson, Rev. James A. R., B.D., Galt, Ontario, was born in Tranent, Scotland, on October 22, 1839. His father was David Dickson, a pious man, who was careful of the godly upbringing of his children, and being a zealous Free Churchman, instructed them in the standards of the church. Mr. Dickson came to Canada in the summer of 1857 to an uncle in Brantford, who was engaged in business there, where he resided for some time. His uncle attending the ministry of the Rev. John Wood, of the Congregational church, he went with him, and under the faithful preaching of Mr. Wood experienced the great change which altered the entire current of his life. He was active in Christian work sociation, but an irrepressible longing for wider usefulness led him to prepare for the Christian ministry. He took private lessons in Latin and Greek, attended the Brantford Grammar school for several sessions, and in 1860 entered the Congregational college of B. N. A. in Toronto, which was then under the principalship of in the Sabbath school and Y. M. C. As-

Adam Lillie, D.D. While pursuing theological studies here, he attended classes in Logic, Hebrew, Latin and Greek in University college; mathematics, metaphysics and other subjects being taken up by special masters appointed by the board of the Congregational college. In 1864 the college being removed to Montreal, he attended the McGill college, studying zoology, botany and geology under Sir William Dawson, LL.D.; Hebrew under Dr. De Sola, and logic, English literature and moral philosophy under Canon Leach. He graduated in 1865, and was called to the Congregational church in London, Ontario, where he remained for six years. While here he edited for three years The Gospel Message, a monthly, published in Montreal. He pubblished "Working for Jesus," which is now, and has been for the past thirteen years, issued by the American Tract Society of New York, and the Religious Tract Society of London. Also a 32-page tract, "Saved or Not?" and "Counsels for Young Converts. In June, 1867, he married Isabella E., eldest daughter of Walter Fairbairn of London, Ontario. In 1871 he was called to the Northern church, Toronto. He at first declined. but after three months he was called again and accepted. Here he remained about eight years, till he changed his ecclesiastical relations, returning to the church of his fathers. While in Toronto he was honoured with the highest position in the gift of the Congregational churches, being elected Chairman of the Congregational Union of Ontario and Quebec in 1877. Here he began to write for the Sunday School Times, Sunday School World, and Canada Presbyterian, to which he has been a frequent contributor. He published "Immediately," "The Rest of Faith," "Christian Culture," "A Good Minister of Jesus Christ," tracts which have had an extensive circulation. He was chosen secretary of the Upper Canada Tract Society in 1874, which he held until 1879. On resigning his charge in Toronto, he visited for five months the branch societies of the Upper Canada Tract Society. He filled Dr. Cochrane's pulpit in Brantford for three months, while the doctor was in Britain in 1879. While here he was called to Galt, and settled there on October 13th, 1879. settlment in Galt he has published "Expository Bible Readings," "Working for the Children," and a tract entitled "A Word in Season." On the regulations being issued for the conferring of the degree of Bachelor of Divinity, Mr. Dickson went to Montreal Presbyterian College, and passing the examination proper to the degree, took it in March, 1883. Mr. Dickson's work has been very successful. When he went to London the church there numbered 50 members; when he left there 160 in good standing were on the roll. In Toronto he began with 75 members and left 230; in Galt the church numbered 217 members when he entered on his work; and now, in 1885, it numbers over 500. The congregation built for him in 1881 one of the handsomest ecclesiastical structures in Canada.

an ch 18 Ca de and bei ron

the

the

mil

tha

he

Ho

for

to t

year

Carl

Bee

mill

same

subj

Muir

unde

& Th

"0x

sold l

foren

of We

lage d

ed a

Tham

meal a large

comfo

busine

still re

years o

yet bo

their g

childre

all abo

a comm

studies

at the

the sho

the mil

continu when h

Thomso

foundry.

of the o business

the town

the foun

istrar of

commend

implemen

It is mentioned in "Picturesque Canada."

Thomson, Robert, of the firm of McDonald & Thomson, millers, Woodstock, Ontario, was born in Roxboroughshire, Scotland, in 1833. He is a son of Andrew and Agnes (Bass) Thomson, his maternal grandfather being supervisor of Customs at Huntley, Aberdeenshire. Our subject's father was a millwright in his native (Kelso) town, and was a man of much thrift and force of character. After his marriage, in February 1832, he began to think of emigrating to Canada, but it was not until 1842 that he decided upon leaving his native country, and with a family of four children, Robert being then in his ninth year, he went on board ship, arriving, in due time, at To-He set led at the Humber, in ronto. the County of York, where he engaged in the millwright business, erecting several mills through Ontario, and among others that one now standing at the Humber, which he built for the Honourable Sir William Howland. He likewise built a woollen mill for William Gamble. In 1846 he removed to the village of Ingersoll, and in the same year built a large structure, now known as Carl's flour mills. In 1847 he removed to Beechville, and began business for himself as millwright and engineer, continuing in the same until 1856, when he, together with the subject of this sketch, and the late James Muirhead, of London, established a foundry under the firm name of Thomson, Muirhead & Thomson, and afterwards known as the "Oxford Foundry." In 1859 Mr. Thomson sold his interest to Robert Whiteland, then foreman of machinists in the shop, and now of Woodstock. He then removed to the village of Innerkip, Oxford, where he purchased a farm and mill privilege on the river Thames, and erected a large flour, oatmeal and saw mills, where he conducted a large business. In 1870, having amassed a comfortable fortune, he retired from active business and removed to Mitchell, where he still resides. He is now above seventy-eight years of age, and Mrs. Thomson seventy-two, yet both are active, and in 1882 celebrated their golden wedding, surrounded by their children and grand children, numbering in all about forty. Robert Thomson received a common school education, concluding his studies at the Woodstock Grammar school at the age of seventeen. He then entered the shops of his father in Beechville to learn the millwright and engineer business, and continued as journeyman there until 1856, when he became a member of the firm of Thomson, Muirhead & Co., in the Oxford foundry. In 1860 he rented the interests of the other partners, and carried on the business himself. In 1863 he removed to the town of Mitchell, where he purchased the foundry of the late William Smith, registrar of the County of Perth, where he commenced the manufacture of agricultural implements in connection with his mill work.

f New

ety of

ed or

erts."

eldest

ndon.

orth-

lined,

again

eight

rela-

hers.

h the

rega-

an of

and

e for

hool

h he

oub-

Iin-

had

вес-

in i

gn-

îve

er ch-

hs, 9.

ed iis

of,

In 1868 he took into partnership A. R. Williams, now of Toronto, when the firm became Thomson & Williams, and was one of the best known manufacturing houses in Ontario. In 1874 the firm arranged to divide their business, removing the engine and boiler department to the town of Stratford, under the name of the Thomson & Williams Manufacturing Company, Limited. They erected large shops, but owing to slack business and oppression in trade did not occupy the premises until 1875, when the town offered a bonus if they would bring all their works to Stratford. Accordingly, in the fall of the same year, they removed their shops thither, and commenced business with the subject of this sketch as president. They carried on a most extensive business, turning out some of the largest engines in Canada, among which might be mentioned that for Park & Sons, woollen mills, St. John, N. B., and also for the new Cotton Company in the same city; for the Merchants' Cotton Company, Montreal; besides numerous other immense engines in all parts of Canada, they have sent mills and machinery from Halifax to Vancouver Island. In the fall of 1883 the company dissolved, and the property was sold to George T. Smith, of the Purifier Company, Michigan. Immediately after the sale, our subject purchased, together with his brother-in-law, Thomas McDonald, merchant, of Mitchell, the large flouring and milling establishment in Woodstock, known as the "Great Western Mills," which is one of the largest establishments of this kind in the Dominion. At the head of this business Mr. Thomson still continues, the firm being known as McDonald & Thomson. It is a remarkable circumstance that in 1856 Mr. Thomson drew the plans, and built, and put in the machinery of the very establishment which he was in after years to own. Since that time large additions have been erected and immense quantities of new machinery put in, among which are the new process of roller flouring mills, and now this gigantic establishment turns out 175 barrels of flour daily. In the oatmeal department the subject of our sketch has invented, and almost completed, a system of oatmeal manufacture which will revolutionize the trade. The machines are now running in the mills, and patents for the same are being issued. Among Mr. Thom sons different inventions are a new combined oat cleaner and grader, a new machine for feeding the "groats" on rollers so that they go endwise through the rolls. A great many other useful mechanical arrangements are due to his originality and skill. The capacity of the oatmeal department is about 150 barrels per day. In the split pea division there is a vast improvement, it being refitted and furnished with new and complete machinery, so that it shall have a capacity of 125 barrels per day. This great establishment is one well worth visiting, and shows the dash and enterprise of the firm. The mills go night and day, and the firm export flour, etc., to the United States, Great Britain, and the Canadian markets. Mr. Thomson was for three years a councilman in Mitchell. He is a Liberal in politics, and is a Freemason. His religion is Presbyterianism. On the 10th of September, 1859, he married Isabella, youngest daughter of the late John McDonald, of Stewartfield, Aberdeen, Scotland, and has six sons and two daughters living. John Thomson, the eldest son, is financial manager of the firm, and the others, Andrew and Robert, are connected with the mill in their father's employ.

Rose, Daniel, Toronto, was born at Wick, Caithness-shire, Scotland, on the 11th His father was Donald March. 1835. Rose, and his mother Christian Maclean. The family is one of the oldest in the old Royal Bourgh of Wick, his paternal grandfather being one of the volunteers who sprang to arms to defend the country when it was threatened with invasion by Napoleon. His maternal grandfather, George Maclean, fought at Bunker Hill, during the American revolutionary war, and afterwards in the campaign between Britain and the leagued armies of France, Spain and Holland. Daniel was educated at the Pulteneytown academy (Wick), the largest and best educational institution in the county, where he remained until the family left Scotland for America, in 1851. They arrived in Montreal, on the last day of May, and on the first of June our subject commenced his apprenticeship to the printing business, in the establishment of J. C. Becket. Montreal was at that period only a city of 57,000 inhabitants, and Mr. Rose remembers the arrival of the first 1000-ton ship, of the first steamship, and the commence-ment of the Victoria bridge, with the prophesies that the bridge would cause the ice to dam the river in the spring, and would be the means of sweeping away Griffintown. After serving about three years with Mr. Becket, he left that establishment, served a short time in the Montreal Herald officeuntil it became a daily paper-and then finished his apprenticeship with his brothers

Henry and George Maclean, who carried on a job printing business in Montreal. He afterwards entered the establishment of John Lovell, and in the fall of 1855 went to Old Cambridge, near Boston, where he spent some time in the University office. While working in this establishment he set the first edition of the second volume of Prescott's "History of Philip II. of Spain"; (and at a later period in the City of Toronto, along with another employé, the first Canadian geography.) This was a stirring time in geography.) the United States; for it was then that the different parties, whigs, free-soilers, know-nothings and abolitionists, were blending into what is now the great Republican party of the United States. Political feeling fran high, General Fremont was running for president, and on the occasion of the celebrated meeting in Faneuil hall, Boston, to protest against the striking of Senator Sumner by Brooks in Washington. Mr. Rose was one of a deputation that represented Old Cambridge at the assemblage. In October, 1856, he left Cambridge for London, Canada West, remained there for five months, and then came to Toronto, arriving on the first of March, 1857. In 1858 he ioined the Highland company of what was then known as the 2nd battalion of volunteer militia, and now known as the Queen's Own Rifles. He was out with his company on the night of the celebrated riot of the carters in Toronto, defending the premises of the Shedden company. The company's arms were loaded ready for any emergency, but fortunately the rioters were suppressed without any lives being lost. In 1859 he left Toronto for Montreal, and joined the Highland company attached to the Prince of Wales regiment; and was one of the guard of honour on the occasion of the visit of the Prince of Wales to Montreal, in 1860. He left the Prince of Wales regiment with the company when it was attached to the Royals; but afterwards rejoined that regiment, and when it was called out for service to repel the first Fenian invasion, he accompanied the regiment and was appointed its sergeant-major at the front. Shortly after the return of the troops, he tendered his resignation, after having served about eight years in the volunteers. In 1861 he entered into partnership with his eldest brother, Henry, and carried on the printing business for two years, when his partner retired from the firm, and he continued to carry on the same alone until 1877, when he removed to Toronto, on the death of Mr. Hunter, to enter into partnership

wit

firm

alw

the

ciet

whe

fast

diffe

pron

Tem

ery,

princ

of O

electe

that 1

Wher

Grand

ment

cord t

of offic

bers an other

ed the

at the

ville, a

against session

action

Grand

ed the (

ington s

the fore

minion.

Society

turn to I

being co

the occas

tertained

and prese

a token o

society at

Caledonia

apprentice

tute, after twice held

portant in

founders o

rian Societ

one of the

Antiquaria

years the o

ety, and wa

was present

ety on leavi appreciation

tion itself as

ity on the

ber of the N

real, and ser

with his brother, George Maclean, of the firm of Hunter, Rose & Co. Mr. Rose has always taken an active and energetic part in the different moral and philanthropic so-He took the temperance pledge cieties. when a child, and has since remained steadfast to his vow. He has been a member of different temperance orders, but was most prominently connected with the I.O. of Good Templars. He joined that body in Februery, 1862; was by his zeal and activity the principal means of forming the Grand Lodge of Quebec, and had the honor of being elected its first grand secretary, and filled that post for two years and three months. When he resigned he was presented by the Grand Lodge with an address in acknowledgment of his services. It is a matter of record that the Grand Lodge, during his term of office, attained the largest number of members and amount of finances exhibited at any other time in its existence. He represented the Grand Lodge in the R.W.G. Lodge at the sessions held at Bloomington, Louisville, and Portland, and took an active part against the secession that occurred at the session at Louisville. On his return his action was unanimously sustained by the Grand Lodge. Mr. Rose has since represented the Grand Lodge of Ontario at the Washington session, and he is regarded as one of the foremost temperance men in the Dominion. In 1855 he joined the Caledonian Society at its first meeting, and after his retum to Montreal became an active member, being continuously on the executive. He twice filled the office of president, and on the occasion of his leaving the city, was entertained by the society at a public banquet, and presented with a handsome testimonial as a token of their regard. He represented the society at the formation of the International Caledonian Society in New York. When an apprentice he joined the Mechanics' Institute, afterwards became a life member, and twice held the office of secretary of that important institution. He was also one of the founders of the Numismatic and Antiquanan Society of Montreal, was printer and one of the editors of the Numismatic and Antiquarian Journal; filled for several years the office of vice-president of the society, and was elected president in 1876. He was presented with an address by the society on leaving for Toronto, expressive of its appreciation of his services in the institution itself as well as by his activity and ability on the journal. He was also a member of the Natural History Society of Montreal, and served on its library committee. In

ed on

ht of

nt to

pent

hile

tirst

ott's

at a ong

dian

e in

that

ers.

ere

Re-

lit-

ont

ca-

uil

ng

'n.

e-

He

1865, Mr. Rose was initiated into Masonry, in Elgin lodge, S. R., Montreal, where he filled several offices. On the formation of the Grand Lodge of Quebec, a number of the brothers of that lodge, sympathising with the new Grand Lodge, instituted St. Andrew's lodge under their register. Mr. Rose was elected first senior warden, and subsequently Master. On his leaving the city he was elected the first honourary member of the lodge, and presented with an address. He was initiated into Capitular Masonry in St. Charles chapter, in 1875, and filled the office of third principal when he left the city. Or his arrival in Toronto he affiliated with St. Andrew's lodge, No. 16, G.R.C., where he now takes an active interest. He is one of the charter members of Osiris Rose Croix Chapter of Royal and Oriental Free Masonry; has filled the office of deputy grand master in the Sovereign Sanctuary for several terms, and on the death of M. Ill. Bro. Longley, who held the office of grand master ad vitam was elected to fill that important office. He is also a member of the Scottish rite, being a 33 ° grand inspector general, as well as several other of the Haut Grade Masonic rite. He married in 1861, Jane, daughter of George Mowat, of Toronto, a native of Wick, Scotland; and has issue two sons and one daughter living. In religion he is a Unitarian, and attends the Jarvis street Unitarian church. In politics he is a Reformer, and a prohibitionist. In private and social life Mr. Rose is extremely genial. One of his recreations in the domestic hour is with bric-a-brac and old coins, a comprehensive collection of which may be seen at his residence, 252 Victoria street. He is admitted to have excellent business capacity, for he has known how to turn to profit all the lessons which he has learned in his wide experience. Although, as we have said, he is a Reformer, he is not one of those men who wear a bandage over their eyes, reserving to himself the right to differ from the leaders of his party when their views or their acts do not commend themselves to his judgment on public questions. Mr. Rose holds very enlightened and progressive opinions. of his sons, Daniel Albert, is taking a course of medicine at Trinity Medical School.

Archibald, Hon. Adams G., Halifax, is a descendant of one of the oldest families in Nova Scotia. He is the son of Samuel Archibald and grandson of James Archibald, who was judge of the court of Common Pleas, Nova Scotia. The subject of this sketch was educated at the Pictou academy.

Leaving school he was articled in a law office, and in 1838 was called to the bar of Prince Edward Island. A year later he became a barrister of Nova Scotia. He married in 1843, Elizabeth A., the only daughter of the late Rev. John Burnyeat. In 1851 Mr. Archibald began his political career, being in that year elected for Colchester county; but it was not till 1854 that he took any conspicuous part, when he seconded and advocated a motion which had arisen out of the question of reciprocity. This was an occasion that brought forth the angry protests of all maritime province public men who had the spirit of independence and fair play. Reciprocity treaty, in which the seaboard provinces were deeply interested, had been settled by Downing street, without careful consideration of what was the interest of the province or of its inhabitants. It would have been but little short of a miracle if the dull-witted but exceedingly self-opinionated officials about the Colonial office could have understood what the colonies merited; the people of the maritime provinces knew this, but they contended that proper consideration should have been given to their interests; that the sense of the province should have been obtained, instead of hastily binding them to a treaty dictated by Americans who thoroughly understood where lay their own interests. In drawing up the treaty of Washington, Sir John Macdonald, as a citizen of the Dominion which had vital interests involved, was, by a very great compliment, created one of the Canadian commissioners; but it was soon found that so far as his colonial potentiality went he was a mere puppet. He was given plainly to understand that he was there representing the Empire, not Canada, and that he must consider that the only claim which the Dominion made upon him was to act as the interpreter of her interests. But Canadian interests, when pitted against "considerations" which the United States had imposed upon the Empire, were of small concern indeed. Edward Blake is seeking now to obtain for Canada the right to negotiate her own commercial treaties; but the conservatives, with Sir John Macdonald at their head, oppose his exertions. However, to return to Mr. Archibald. With Mr. Howe he joined in affirming that the province should have been consulted in the making of a treaty which so seriously concerned its interests. From 1854 to 1857 Nova Scotia discussed the project of union with the other British North American provinces, and in the year last named Mr. Archibald, who was now in opposition, and J. W. Johnston, attorney-general, were sent to England to confer with Mr. Labouchere. secretary of state for the colonies. In 1860 a change of ministry took place, and Mr. Archibald became attorney-general, which office he retained till 1863. In 1864 he attended the Quebec conference on the subject of the Intercolonial Railway; and in 1864 he seconded Dr. Tupper's motion for the appointment of five delegates to confer with the other provincial delegates on the subject of a maritime union. What grew out of this conference is known. The Canadian delegation made a descent upon the maritime province delegates who were hold. ing their conference in Prince Edward Is. land; the larger scheme of a general confederation was proposed and was discussed later at the Quebec conference, finally result. ing in the creation of the Dominion of Ca. Mr. Archibald attended all these nada. conferences; and in England took a prominent place in the pamphlet discussion carried on between the confederates and the antis, under the brilliant, powerful, but not over-consistent Howe. For the confederation scheme Mr. Archibald always fought with great zeal. In 1867 he was called to the privy council as secretary of state for the provinces, an office which has since been abolished. Three years later he was appointed lieutenant-governor of Manitoba and the North-West territories. The act of his public life which has been most censured, was his having recourse to the aid of the murderer Riel, and his baleful lieutenant, Lepine, when the Fenian ruffian O'Donoghue threatened an invasion of the province; but as he himself says, he did this to save the province from being over-Perhaps his course was the wisest. The lieutenant-governor's defence was, that by his action the Dominion had been given a province to defend instead of to conquer. Notwithstanding the state paper of Lord Dufferin, and all that has been written by the lieutenant-governor's apologists, some yet censure Mr. Archibald for joining hands with these two men. In May, 1873, he resigned, and the following month became Judge of Equity in Nova Scotia. position he filled only for a few weeks, receiving an appointment to the lieutenantgovernorship made vacant by the death of Governor Howe. In 1872 he had been created a companion of the Order of St. Michael and St. George. Mr. Archibald had good judgment, a broad mind, and a sturdy perseverance.

ga sci He fro wa ess

ing the

of 0n

ed

firs

Leg

He

Нe

non

May

Glei

the

Ont

COULT

Mac

1868

and

impd

Fost

C. V

bribe

law f

Mont

ant

condi

cases

Hem

field,

Macd

died

vative

A. M

this 1

of the

of On

shows

of his

sentin:

ground

upon

dislode

manne

about 1

their in

of Com

high as

perhaps active

gentlem

with m

Macmaster, Donald, Q.C., M.P. for Glengarry, Ontario, was born in Glengarry, on the 3rd September, 1846. He was educated at Williamstown Grammar school, and at McGill University, Montreal. Hegraduated, and took the degree of B.C.L. from McGill college, in March, 1871; and was senior honourman, gold medalist, prize essayist and valedictorian of the year. Having secured his degree he entered upon the study of law and was called to the bar of Quebec in July, 1871, and to the bar of Ontario in January, 1882. He was appointed Queen's counsel in January, 1882; was first elected to represent Glengarry in the Legislature of Ontario on June 5th, 1879. He represented the county for three years. He then resigned his seat, to accept the nomination for the House of Commons, in May, 1882. He was elected to represent Glengarry on the 20th June, 1882, defeating the Hon. D. A. Macdonald, ex-governor of Ontario, who had formerly represented the county, by a majority of 224 votes. Mr. Macmaster has resided in Montreal since 1868, but practices at the bars of Ontario and Quebec. He has been retained in important criminal cases, and with W. A. Foster, of Toronto, successfully defended C. W. Bunting in the celebrated Ontario bribery case. He is senior partner in the law firm of Macmaster, Hutchinson & Dion, Montreal, and is much engaged in important law cases in Quebec courts, and has conducted some important constitutional cases before the Privy Council in England. He married in September, 1880, Janet Sandfield, second daughter of Ronald Sandfield Macdonald, of Lancaster, Glengarry, who died in September, 1883. He is Conservative in politics, and supports Sir John A. Macdonald. As will be inferred from this record, Mr. Macmaster ranks as one of the very foremost advocates at the bar of Cntario or of Quebec. As a lawyer he shows remarkable skill in the marshalling of his facts, and his general mode of presenting his case. When he has taken his ground, and he is seldom found standing upon a baseless fabric, it is impossible to dislodge him. He is very earnest in his manner, and there is a weight and dignity about his utterances that do not fail to make their impression. As a member of the House of Commons, Mr. Macmaster's rank is as high as it is at the bar; and there is not perhaps to be found in parliament a more active or more useful representative, or a gentleman whose declaration is received with more attention and respect.

n, and

e sent

chere,

1860

Mr.

which

he at-

hd in n for confer

n the

grew

e Ca-

n the

hold-

rd Is-

con-

nased

esult-

E Ca∙

these

romi-

car-

l the

t not

dera-

ught

ed to

for

been

an-

toba

act

cen-

aid

lien-

ffian

the

did

versest.

that

ven

uer.

ord

by

ome

 \mathbf{n} ds

he

me

'his

ks,

een

ald

Temple, Thomas, M.P. for York, New Brunswick, and ex-Sheriff of the same county, was born at Bampton, Oxfordshire, England, on the 4th November, 1818. He is a son of Charles Temple, of the same place, who came to this country in 1832, settling in the County of York, New Brunswick. Young Temple had barely passed his thirteenth year when he reached New Brunswick, and as this was not a time when a classical education could be easily attained, he was obliged, as most people were in those days, to be content with what he had learnt at home, and at the lesser schools. His father adopted the usual occupation of the time, farming, and the son helped him in all the duties incidental to such an employment. At the age of twenty he obtained a gift horse from his father, and joined a company of York Light Dragoons, under Major Wilmot, afterwards judge of the Supreme Court, and lieutenant-governor of New Brunswick, this corps having been raised "to protect the interests of the province during the troubles which existed between the Colonies and the United States in regard to the boundary line between the Province of New Brunswick and the bordering State of Maine." His connection with the Light Dragoons lasted for three months, at the end of which period the episode known as the Aroostook war was closed by the treaty of Ashburton. It was after this that Mr. Temple was to make his way to the very front amongst those princes of commerce to whom the trade of the provinces is largely indebted for its success. Having good foresight, he at once perceived that the lumbering business offered an excellent field for enterprise, and embarking in this business, he soon had achieved so much success that he was enabled to purchase the splendid Poquiock mills, owned by Morrison, Shives & McPherson. He conducted these for two years, after which he sold them to an American company, and removed to the City of Fredericton, where he has resided since. He now engaged in the lumber business on an extensive scale, being associated with Mr. John Pickard, late M.P. for York, and other gentlemen. The firm purchased a large saw-mill to cut lumber for the English market, but it was burnt, and this branch of the business came to an end. There is no other man to whom the central portion of New Brunswick is as much indebted as Mr. Temple. In 1869, in conjunction with Mr. Burbee, he began the construction of what is known as the Fredericton Branch Railway, a road which gave the capital and the country surrounding it connection with the great American system of railways, and with the Intercolonial. In 1871 it was completed and ready for traffic, and Mr. Temple has remained its president since. Mr. Temple is proprietor of the largest farm in New Brunswick, situated in Gloucester county, it having an area of five hundred and thirty acres, nearly four hundred of which are cleared. There is a mill upon the property preparing timber for foreign market. For about twenty years Mr. Temple held the position of sheriff of York, but in the meantime he kept up his extensive business connections. The Peoples Bank of Fredericton, of which he is a director, owes its existence in a great measure to Mr. Temple. Upon the death of John Pickard, in 1884, he contested York in the interests of the Conservative party, being opposed by Mr. George F. Gregory, a partner of Mr. Blair, leader of the government of New Brunswick, and was successful, defeating his opponent by 178 votes. The county had for many years before been considered strongly reform, having elected Mr. Pickard over the best men whom the conservatives found willing to take the field, and the result in the last election speaks strongly for the personal popularity of the subject of this sketch, especially, too, when we consider that Mr. Gregory is probably one of the ablest men in New Brunswick. Mr. Temple has made a most valuable representative, for almost entirely through his exertions has the splendid achievement of bridging the St. John between Fredericton and St. Mary's been accomplished. Mr. Temple married, in October, 1840, Susanna, only daughter of Solomon Howe, of Maine, and has by this lady five children. In social life Mr. Temple and his family are exceedingly popular, and their handsome residence overlooks the waters of the St. John

Emsley, Rev. William H., Napanee, was born on 9th March, 1850, in the town of Barnsley, in the west riding of the County of York, England. His father, Joseph Emsley, proprietor of the Flockton Main colliery, and linen manufacturer, was likewise a native of Yorkshire, and son of William Emsley of Cudworth, long noted in the county as a front rank educationist. Joseph Emsley married Elizabeth Wiles, who was born in the West Indies, and who with her brothers had been sent to England to obtain the advantage of higher education. Mr. Emsley was educated in the Grammar school of his native town and in London. His studies were principally guided with a view to the practice of law, for which profession he was designed. This purpose, however. was overruled, and accordingly, in the winter of 1870, in company with two compaions, the Reverends James Strothard and Caleb Parker, Mr. Emsley crossed the Atlantic and joined the Eastern British American conference of the Methodist church, being sent to Truro as assistant to Rev. John Read, who was then in delicate After a short residence, however. his health became unsettled and he returned to England, obtaining an appointment in the civil service, which he relinquished in order to enter the East London Training Institute for Christian workers, and to assist in the secretary's office of the Children's Home. with which institution he was associated. He did mission work in the east end of London until the summer of 1874, when he returned to Canada, and was at once engaged to supply a vacancy caused by death on the Maynooth mission of the Toronto conference of the Methodist Church of Canada. this conference he remained identified until the consummation of the union of the various Methodist churches in 1884, when the arrangement brought him into the Bay of Quinté cenference limits. Ordained in the year 1878, in Toronto, Mr. Emsley has had the somewhat unusual record of having never left the platform of the conference, but as assistant secretary or journal secretary has regularly served his church. He has also represented his district on the stationing committee four times in the past seven years. His appointments have been respectively: Trenton, Newcastle, Markham, Newcastle (a second time), Magnetawan, Minden, Bobcaygeon, Lindsay, and Napa-On the 29th of August, 1878, Mr. Emslie married Susie, youngest daughter of the late Henry Major, of Pickering. Mr. Major was one of the leading men of his county, and was a successful agriculturist. It may be interesting as indicative of the rapid development of our country to know that Mr. Major once owned what is now valuable property in Toronto, then Little York, and that he traded it for a share in a flat boat on Lake Ontario, and was well satisfied with his bargain. His sons, the Major brothers, of Whitevale, are worthily following in their father's steps. Mr. Emsley is a young man not yet in the prime of life. He is however occupying the leading pulpits in his conference, and with reasonable anticipation of many years of service before him.

the in C

tia,

was

ister

into

class

subje

his fa

schoo

Char

as wa

up tl

was i mean

afterv

where

energ

in h

years

M.D., herst.

"worl

creatir

tive pr

bitious

take tl

high p in this for suc

a hear

read w

course

topic the body in

for emb

prompt

less rigi

ness ma

generou

servativ

always e

could no thing re

and he d

or traditi

dition of

In 1855 a

Scotia, a ber of pr

himself f

ful. And no less 1

the Refe

was a mo

contest he

fore.

-as the

Tupper, Hon. Sir Charles. one of the ablest and most successful public men in Canada, was born at Amherst, Nova Scotia, on the 2nd of July, 1821. His father was the Rev. Charles Tupper, a Baptist minister of some ability, who raised himself into local prominence from among the lower classes of the people. Young Tupper, the subject of this sketch, was a clever lad, and his father was resolved that he should go to There is a story told that after Charles Tupper had obtained such education as was within his range, that he then took up the calling of shoemaker; and that he was indebted to the bounty of a friend for means by which to attend a Medical college afterwards. He was sent to Edinburgh. where he studied medicine with the same energy and success that characterized him in his political career afterwards. Three years after his return with the degree of M.D., he married Frances Morse, of Amherst. From 1843 to 1855, Dr. Tupper "worked like a horse" at his profession, creating for himself an extensive and lucrative practice. A man of Dr. Tupper's ambitious turn was likely, sooner or later, to take that road which leads so many men to high public distinction. Probably few men in this country were ever so well equipped for such a career. He had a good presence, a hearty, genial, manly address; he had read widely, observed keenly, and could discourse volubly and captivatingly upon any topic that arose. His extensive professional practice made him known to nearly everybody in Cumberland; and he had the tact -as the time was near that he had chosen for embarkation on public life-to be less prompt in sending in his accounts, and to be less rigid in enforcing payment than heretofore. Indeed, the robust and correct business man soon attained the name of being Mr. Tupper was always a Conservative, and for the Conservative party he always expressed his preferences. But he could not be called a tory. There was nothing retrogressive or narrow about him, and he did not care three straws for custom or tradition, if it stood in the way of any condition of affairs that he considered desirable. In 1855 a general election took place in Nova Scotia, and in response to a call from a number of prominent Conservatives, he offered himself for Cumberland, and was successful. And successful, too, over an opponent no less redoubtable than the great lion of the Reform party, "Joe Howe." Howe was a most generous opponent. In that contest he did not suppose that he would be

714 W

sion

ver,

om-

the tish

dist

t to

bate

ver

rn-

ent 1 in In-

in

me

onre-

til

defeated, but he recognized the strength of his young opponent. From hustings to hustings he went, at each one saving that he had no fear for the result, but bearing testimony to the power of his opponent, and predicting that the time was near when he would be heard from, and render a creditable account of himself. In the house the young member for Cumberland at once attracted notice by his exceeding volubility, and the sledge-hammer force of his speaking. Compared with Howe he was "rough." and rather verbose, but he was astute, ready, sarcastic, and often overwhelming. He was probably then, and unquestionably had been afterwards to the date of his retirement from public life in Canada, by all odds the most powerful and successful "stump" orator in the country. For downright thunderous strength of style, no one could come near him. In 1856 he became provincial secretary, in the Hon. James W. Johnston's administration: in 1858 he went to England on a mission connected with the Intercolonial Railway; and in 1864 he became premier, on the retirement of Mr. Johnston to the Bench. In 1869, he moved the resolutions providing for a conference in Prince Edward Island, to consider the project of a maritime union. That project was merged into the larger one, which aimed at a confederation of the whole of the British North America provinces. In the confederation movement Dr. Tupper took a leading place, attending the Quebec conference, and afterwards going to England when the question was discussed before the members of the Imperial government. In 1867 he was created a C.B.; and in the same year was invited to take a seat in the Privy council. This he refused, remaining a private member till 1870, when he consented to become president of the council. In 1872 he became minister of Inland Revenue; and in 1873 minister of Customs, which office he was soon obliged to surrender by reason of the defeat of the ministry. During the campaign of 1878 he was like a lion in the fight, and his great battle-cry infused courage into the hearts of thousands of men who wavered between the two parties. That year the Liberals were defeated, and Dr. Tupper became minister of Public Works till that department was divided, when he took the portfolio of Railways and Canals. In 1879 he was created a knight of the order of St. Michael and St. George. His connection with the Canadian Pacific Railway is in everybody's mind. To him more than to any other man in Canada is due the success of that enterprise. In 1883 he was appointed high commissioner of Canada to the court of St. James, retaining his position as minister of Railways and Canals. This anomalous, double-barrelled position was felt to be untenable, and Sir John Macdonald passed an act relieving the honourable gentleman from penalties under the Independence of Parliament Act: but after the close of the session of 1884. Sir Charles resigned his seat in the cabinet, and retained the Some say that we high commissionership. have not seen the last of him yet, and that when Sir John pays the tribute of all humanity, that Sir Charles will lise up among the Conservative party, and demand the mantle. Probably he will; and many think that Sir Hector Langevin will say : - " Nay; the mantle has been overlong with Englishmen—it now belongs to me.

McColl, Rev. A., Chatham, Ontario, was born in Argyleshire, Scotland, in 1818. His parents were John and Catherine McColl, who emigrated in 1818, and finally, after a short residence in the State of New York, settled in the township of Esquesing, where they lived on a farm, during the remainder of their days. Our subject was sent to a school there to learn those subjects which were taught in such places in those days. He was set by his teacher to study Latin, of which he then acquired a considerable knowledge, and also, though in a less degree, of Greek. He was employed then for a few years on the farm, but he subsequently attended the Grammar school in Toronto, where the governor's prize was awarded him for his classical attainments. He went then to a similar school at Hamilton, which was then, and for sometime after, conducted by Dr. John Rae, well known for his varied attainments, and specially for his knowledge of political economy. His time, while under Dr. Rae's instructions, was devoted to the classics, to mathematics, and to the French language; here also, he began to study Hebrew, but without a master. He acted for a short while as assistant to Dr. Rae in his school. He then went to reside at Queenston, in the family of the Hon. John Hamilton, in the capacity of tutor He continued to reside in to his children. the family after they removed to Kingston. When Queen's College was opened, he entered as a student, where he enjoyed the lectures of Principal Liddell and Professors Campbell and Williamson. It is unnecessary to dwell on these men, who were distinguished each in his own way. Our subject has met but once since a man who read

Greek with so keen an appreciation and rapturous enjoyment as Professor Campbell. Professor Williamson is the only one that survives, and his students did not know which to admire the more, his knowledge of the subjects which he taught, or his simpli-When the Presbyterian city of character. church was rent in twain, he removed to Toronto, to what has grown up to be Knox College, and where he continued till he had completed his studies. He was subsequently licensed to preach. His first charge was in Chatham, where he was ordained to the pastorate of a congregation in 1848, and where he has been since that time. He was appointed to the inspectorate of the public schools. Chatham, about twenty-five years ago, and he still discharges its duties. Our subject's religious views have never changed. He was brought up and educated as a Presbyterian, and his opinions are what is commonly known as the orthodox faith. He married, in 1849, Alice, the second daughter of John Ross, Toronto. Mr. Ross was born in Canada, and served his country in the He has published lectures on vear 1812. Macaulay, Holland House, Montalambert. and other subjects. He has never taken part in public discussions, except when his office requires it.

Heggie, David, M.D., Brampton, On. tario, was born in Edinburgh, Scotland, in the year 1837. His father, David Heggie, was a native of Collessie, Fifeshire, Scotland, where he owned considerable property, and was known as the "Laird." His mother, Isabella, is a daughter of Mr. Walker, of the late firm of Walker & Steele, well known building contractors in Edinburgh. The doctor received his education in the Parish school of Collessie, and was for four years a pupil teacher in that school, reducing by one year the usual period of five, obtaining examination by special permission of Her Majesty's committee of council on education. Successful in obtaining a first class Queen's scholarship, he returned to Edinburgh, and after a two years' course in the General Assembly's Training College, succeeded in obtaining a superior "C.M." He then attended for a year in Arts at Edinburgh University, at the end of which time he came to Canada, settling in the neighbourhood of Brampton. After teaching for three years he took a medical course in the Toronto School of Medicine and Queen's College, Kingston, graduating from the latter university in 1865. He has been practising in Brampton ever since. Dr. Heggie is surgeon to the County gaol, and is coroner drie, mar Was came as mi had f before amoui now Leeds him to ning d year. of Sho of one the ma in 1572 those b ministe diligen

ada, wl

F.G.S.

geologi

inspect

many

ca an

lo

ag his ish

vit

ths

for

fon

Hе

dau

Bra

and

scho

in e

has

He

teac

Regi

King

Sept

Willi

B

for Peel. He is likewise a member of the High School Board, and chairman of the Public School Board. The doctor is a man of considerable commercial enterprise, and among others is a shareholder in the profitable Haggert Bros. manufacturing company. He has not shown much of an inclination for secret societies; but he allied himself with the Ancient Order of United Workmen. He has never aspired to political honours; though the future may have some such career in store for him, He was at one time an ardent Reformer, but he has latterly lost his zest for political work. Ten years ago he paid a visit to his native land, and his love for the "old sod" is still undiminished. Dr. Heggie has Presbyterian proclivities, but is so liberal in his religious views that he has attended the Methodist church for years, and is credited with being more fond of biological than theological sindies. He married in 1865 Mary Carter, granddaughter of John Elliott, the founder of Brampton. He has a family of four boys and one girl, who are all faithfully kept at school, the doctor being a devoted believer in educational excellence. His eldest son has nearly completed his medical studies. He has a son who took a second class teacher's certificate at the age of fourteen.

n and

npbell.

e that

know

dge of

simpli-

terian

ed to

Knox

ie had

uently was in

o the

and

e was

public

years Our

nged.

Pres-

com-

He

ghter

born

the

s on

bert, aken

h his

On-

, in gie.

cot-

rty,

her,

the

wn

l'he ish

3 a

by

ng

ler

Bell, Rev. George, B. A., LL D., Registrar and Librarian Queen's University, Kingston, was born at Perth, Ontario, on September 8th, 1819. His father was Rev. William Bell, M.A., who was born in Airdrie, Scotland, in 1780, and taught a grammar school in Rothsay, about 1812-15. He was ordained in Edinburgh in 1817, and came to Canada in the summer of that year, as minister for the Scotch immigrants who had formed the Perth settlement the year before. For many years he did a large amount of home mission work over what is now the County of Lanark, and part of Leeds, &c. Increasing infirmity compelled him to cease his ministrations in the beginning of 1857, and he died in August of that year. His wife was Mary Black, a native of Shotts, Scotland, and a lineal descendant of one of the Huguenots who escaped from the massacre of St. Bartholomew in France, in 1572. She died in 1861. Of their sons, those best known were: Andrew, the eldest, minister of the Presbyterian church, and a diligent investigator of the geology of Canada, whose son, Robert Bell, M.D., LL D., F.G.S., is at present assistant director of the geological survey of Canada; Robert, for many years in parliament, and afterwards inspector of canal revenue; and the subject of this sketch, who is the youngest of the family. George Boll was educated at Perth, by private tuition, at the Hamilton Grammar school under Dr. Rae, and at Queen's College for two sessions, in arts and theology. Our subject married Mary Whiteford, of Montreal, in November, 1846. She died in 1851. He married again in 1880, Helen Chadwick, of Simcoe, Ontario. The fruits of each marriage are a son and daughter living; the eldest son is a captain in the Royal Engineers serving in India; and the eldest daughter is the wife of R. S. Dubbs, (who is a son of Major-General Dobbs, of Dublin), conservator of forests for the government of H. H. the Nizim of Hyderabad; the youngest son is a barrister in Toronto; and the youngest daughter is the wife of Charles N. Bell, of Winnipeg, a diligent explorer in the archæology, geography, &c., of the North-West. The subject of this sketch was the first student whose name was entered on the roll of Queen's College at its opening, March 7th, 1842. He was ordained a minister of the Presbytarian church, in Cumberland, o 1 May 30th, 1844; removed to Simcoe in 1848; to Clifton, (Niagara Falls), 1857; and to Walkerton, 1874. Owing to his studies in geology, archæ logy, &c., and particularly in the relations between science and revelation, his alma mater conferred on him the degree of LL.D., in 1872. He was connected with the administration of the school laws from 1851 to 1881, as local superintendant or inspector. He was for many years a trustee of Queen's University; and he was employed on several occasions to give courses of lectures on science and theology. In September, 1882, he was appointed registrar and librarian of that university, which position he now fills. He is, of course, a Presbyterian.

Sharpe, James William, Manager of the Bank of London, Dresden, Ontario, was born at Burlington, then Wellington Square, Halton county, Ontario, on the 15th of August, 1847. His father was James Sharpe of Scotland, and his mother Eliza Middleton, who was Irish. James William Sharpe received private tuition under the Rev. Dr. Greene, then rector of Wellington Square. He studied law at first with Alexander Shaw, M. P., and afterwards in the office of Galt & Henderson at Toronto. He was admitted as an attorney at Michaelmas term, 1869, and was called to the bar at Easter term, 1870. Having now obtained his professional entré, Mr. Sharpe settled in Dresden and began to practice law in 1872. He afterwards acted as managing partner in a private banking company from 1881 till 1885, and is now manager of the Bank of London. He attended the Toronto Military school, and obtained a certificate in November, 1867. He was a member of the Dresden council for the years 1878 and 1879, and mayor for 1884 and 1885. Mr. Sharpe was initiated in Freemasonry at Sydneham lodge, Dresden, in March, 1873: he became secretary in 1873; junior warden in 1874; and worthy master in 1875-76, and in 1876-77. He is also a member of MacNab chapter, Royal Arch, being 3rd principal in 1883, and 2nd principal in 1884 and 1885, and 1st principal in 1886. Our subject has always been an Episcopalian, and served as warden of the church for eight years. He married in April, 1873, Frances Ranaldson, second daughter of Charles R. Dickson, of Toronto. It is generally admitted that Mr. Sharpe is an acute and level-headed man of business, having enough of caution to keep him within safe bounds, and enough of enterprise to take him out of the ruts in which some men remain all their lives.

Chauveau, Pierre Joseph Olivier, was born at Quebec, on the 30th May, 1820. The father of our subject was Pierre Charles Chauveau, and his mother, Marie Louise Roy. The ancester, who came from France, (diocese of Bordeaux), Pierre Chauveau, settled at Charlesbourg. Young Chauveau was educated at the Seminary of Quebec; and he was a schoolmate of Archbishop Taschereau, Hon. David A. Ross, and Hon. Letellier de Saint Just. He studied law first under his uncles, MM. Hamel and Roy, next under Okill Stuart, and was admitted to the bar in 1841. He practised mitted to the bar in 1841. He practised first as junior partner with Mr. Roy-Mr. Hamel had been called to the bench in the mean time-and after Mr. Roy's appointment to the bench, he practised as senior partner with P. B. Casgrain, now member of parliament. He was returned for the County of Quebec in 1844, against the Hon. John Neilson by a very large majority. He sat on the opposition benches under M.M. LaFontaine and Baldwin, and shortly after their coming to power was considered as an independent supporter of their government, voting occasionally with Mr. Papineau, who had then returned from Europe and obtained a seat in parliament. In 1849 he called attention to the emigration of French Canadians to the United States, and obtained the appointment of a committee, the report of which was prepared by him and by Charles Taché, and f contained many suggestions which have been since carried out. In 1851 when the Hincks-Morin administration was formed he accepted office as solicitor-general, and in 1853, on the retirement of Mr. Caron, he accepted the situation of provincial secretary, which Mr. Morin had resigned to accept another portfolio. The Hincks-Morin gov. ernment having been defeated, Mr. Chauveau remained for some time in the MacNab. Morin government, but when in January. 1855, Mr. Morin accepted a judgeship, he was left out of the new combination, called the MacNab-Taché government, and declined several offices which were offered to him. until in July of the same year he accepted that of superintendent of Public Instruction for Lower Canada, which was vacated by the appointment of Dr. Meilleur to the office of postmaster of the City of Montreal. He framed new educational laws which were carried in parliament by M. Cartier, and established normal schools, founded two journals of education, an English and a French one, contributing largely himself to At the time of the Trent both of them. difficulty, M. Chauveau, then superintendent of Public Instruction, formed a company of the Chasseurs Canadiens, of which he was captain, and which was composed chiefly of the officers of the department of Public Instruction, and of the pupils of the Jacques Cartier Normal school. During the first Fenian invasion three battalions of home guards were formed in Montreal, corresponding to the three electoral divisions. Hon. James Ferrier, Hon. Henry Starnes and Hon. P. J. O. Chauveau were appointed lieutenant-colonels of the three battalions. The Normal School Company of the Chasseurs became the nucleus of the Eastern division battalion. When the Fenian troubles were over, the battalions were thanked for their services, and the lieutenant-colonels were allowed to retain their rank in the mili-In November, 1866, M. Chauveau was sent on a mission to visit the educational institutions of Europe. He started with Messrs. Cartier and Macdonald, who were going to London to obtain the passing of the British North America Act. He visited Ireland, Scotland, England, France, Belgium, Germany and Italy. He returned to Canada in June, 1867, and a few weeks after his return, M. Cauchon, having failed to form the first administration of the Province of Quebec, M. Chauveau was sent for and succeeded. He was returned by acclamation for his old County of Quebec, both for the Local and he Federal parliaments. He remained as pi

public

ernm

1873, dent o

tion o

M. O

kenzie

presid

Chauv

signed

Count

and w appoin

commi

the sai

he was

Montr the de

Laval

ties of

Montre

of Ron

every

year.

rier, I

of the

of laws

doctor

colleges

Society

He has

ly pres

sactions

by him.

ary pre

Historic

of Queb

cais, of

Baptiste

Baptiste

torique,

Society ber of t in Franc

the Ath

He is co

IX; knis

Officier of

He was

prose an

became,

the our

and wrot

to 1851.

been mo

Naives,"

M. de Pu

of review

Revue de

as provincial secretary and as minister of public instruction, at the head of the government of the province until January, 1873, when he accepted the office of president of the Senate, vacated by the resignation of M. Cauchon. He was succeeded by M. Ouimet. In January, 1874, the Mackenzie government appointed Mr. Christie president of the Senate, revoking M. Chauveau's commission. M. Chauveau resigned his seat in the Senate to contest the County of Charlevoix with M. Tremblay, and was defeated. In April, 1876, he was appointed a member of the Quebec harbour commission, and was elected president of the said commission. In September, 1877, he was appointed sheriff of the district of Montreal, the office having been vacated by the death of M. Leblanc. In 1878 the Laval University, having established faculties of theology, of law. and of medicine, in Montreal, appointed M. Chauveau professor of Roman law, on which he delivers a lecture every day during the three terms of the year. On the demise of the late M. Cherrier, M. Chauveau has been elected dean M. Chauveau is a doctor of the faculty. of laws and a doctor of letters of Laval, and doctor of laws of McGill and of Bishops' colleges. He is a member of the Royal Society in the section of French literature. He has been vice-president and subsequently president of the society, and the transactions include several speeches and essays by him. He has been president and honorary president of the Quebec Literary and Historical Society, of the Institut Canadien of Quebec; of the Institut Canadian Fran-cais, of Montreal; of the Societé St. Jean Baptiste, of Quebec; of the Societé St. Jean Baptiste, of Montreal; of the Societé Historique, of Montreal; and of the Numismatic Society of Montreal. He is a titular member of the Academie des Muses Santones, in France; and a corresponding member of the Athénée Louisianais, of New Orleans. He is commander of the Order of Pius the IX; knight of the Order of St. Gregory, and Officier de l'Instruction Publique of France. He was a contributor to the Canadien, in prose and in verse, at a very early age, and became, in 1840, regular correspondent of the 'ourrier des Etats Unis, of New York, and wrote monthly letters to that paper up to 1851. His pieces of poetry which have been more frequently reprinted are "Joies Naives," "Donnaconna," and "Epitre a M. de Puibusque." He contributed articles of review to the Opinion Publique, and to the Revue de Montreal, and wrote a Revue Euro-

he

he

in

he

e-

рt

u-

b-

d

péenne for each of those publications. speeches at the laying of the corner stone of the monument of the battle of Ste. Foye, on the inauguration of the monument to M. Garneau, at the translation of the remains of Mgr. de Laval, and other orations, and some of his parliamentary speeches, would form several volumes. He has published the following volumes :- "Charles Guerin. roman de Mœurs Canadiennes, 1852.' "L'Instruction Publique au Canada, 1876." "Souvenirs et Legendes, 1877," (partly in prose and partly in verse.) "Francois Xavier Garneau, sa vie et ses œuvres, 1883." "Voyage de S. A. le Prince de Galles en Amerique, 1861." The same in English. M. Chauveau wrote also for the English Journal of Education, a history of the Universities of Laval, Toronto and McGill. He married, on the 22nd Sept., 1840. Marie Louise Flore Masse, daughter of the late Pierre Masse, and of Marie Anne Boucher, who died on the 24th May, 1875. He has had by her eight children, six daughters and two sons. The elder son, Pierre Chauveau, was for some time an officer of the department of Public Instruction, and assistant editor of the Journal de l'Instruction He has resided sometime at Carleton, Baie des Chaleurs, and is now a resident of Montreal. The younger son, the Hon. Alexandre Chauveau, has been member of parliament for the County of Rimouski, was admitted to the bar in 1869, is a graduate of McGill College, and has held at the same early age as did his father, the positions of solicitor-general and of secretary of the Province. He is now judge of the Sessions at Quebec. Of the six girls, one died in infancy; another, Marie Caroline Olympe, died of consumption in 1855, at the age of eleven; another, Henriette, married, in October, 1870, Lieutenant Wm. Scott Glendonwin, of Parton, Scotland, of the 69th Regiment, now major, and left for Bermudas, where she died of typhoid fever on the 17th December, The elder sister. Flore, died on the 14th March following. And on the 30th of December, 1875 a few months after her mother, Eliza, who was a nun of the Congregation of Notre Dame, under the name of Sister Ste. Florine, died at Montreal. The youngest daughter, Honorine, is married to Dr. Vallee, of Quebec, a well-known scientist and professor at Laval University. M. Chauveau has caused two monuments to be erected in the chapel of the Ursulines, where his wife and three of his daughters are buried. One by Marshall Wood represents the three daughters as Faith, Hope and Charity, in alto relievo, and the other opposite, by Van Looper, has a basso relievo of the Mater Dolorosa of Carlo Dolce, with the appropriate inscription "Quis est homo qui non fleret?" Our subject is of course a Roman catholic.

Glasgow, Major John, Hamilton, whom we have selected as the subject of this sketch, was born at Leitholm, Berwickshire, Scotland, on Feb. 15th, 1821. He is a son of James Glasgow, a worthy man, who in the old country employed himself as a contractor. The family came to Canada in 1832, the year of the terrible cholers, and settled in Hamilton. It will be interesting to state that the first night the family spent in Canada they were obliged to sleep upon the wharf, so great was the dread "of plague" by the inhabitants. Mr. Glasgow did not take kindly to Hamilton, and in a few months removed to East Flamboro, where he took a bush farm. This farm he worked successfully for many years, and died upon it in 1876, at the age of 98 years and two months. Mrs. Glasgow, our subject's mother, died in the year of the Mackenzie rebellion. John Glasgow was the youngest of the family, and he received a common school education. He remained upon the farm, after leaving school, till 1840, when he repaired to Hamilton. He was always full of the military spirit, and served in the 1st batt. of Incorporated Militia. This regiment was composed almost entirely of legulars. Leaving this regiment, he returned again to the farm, where he remained till 1876. In that year he removed, once again, to Hamilton, in which city he has since resided. In 1837 he was called out in the militia, and served at Toronto and Navy I land. After leaving Hamilton in 1842 he was appointed lieutenant and adjutant of the East Flamboro' militia. Three years later he was appointed captain, remaining adjutant. In 1865 he went to Toronto and entered the Military School, then under the direction of Captain Carter. He received a diploma, and in 1866, the year of the Fenian raid, organised a company of volunteers in East Flamboro'. This company he had the pleasure of commanding. In the same year he was gazetted, and in 1868 was joined to the present 13th batt. of Hamilton. He likewise assisted in organising the present 77th batt. of Wentworth Volunteers, and has been called the "Father of the Battalion." He was at this time promoted to the rank of m jor and pay-master of the 77th, and remained in the regiment until 1883, when he retired, retaining rank. In 1861 our subject was elected to the township council of East Flamboro', and remained for seven years councilman. In 1879 he was elected alderman for No. 5 ward, Hamilton; and was chairman of the Board of Works for four years. He is, at time of writing (1885) alderman of No. 5 ward. Major Glasgow is a Freemason; he is likewise chairman of the charitable board of the St. Andrew's Benevolent Society. He has travelled through the greater portion of the United States, and in 1875 visited England. Ireland and Scotland. After an absence of forty-three years he visited his native village, and only found four persons there whom he knew at the time of leaving. In 1842 he married Robina Mackenzie, whose father came from Sutherlandshire, Scotland. This worthy sire is a member of the oldest Clan Mackenzie in Scotland. Germane to this it may be mentioned that Mr. Glasgow's ancestors were one of the oldest and most prominent border families in Scotland, tracing their deeds back 300 years. The family crest is a crown held in the hand, with the motto Quo fas et gloria-where Honour and Right. Our worthy Major is somewhat of a poet, as witness this quatrain on his family motto:

> Quo fas et gloria,—this I boast Of glory where no right is lost. Twin links in one they surely are, When honour bears no scathful scar. And noble manhood points the way, Which leads to Virtue's loyal sway.

Major Glasgow is a Conservative, and a Presbyterian.

Nicholson, Henry Albert, Manager of the Bank of Commerce, London, Ontario, was born at Galt, in the above province, in January, 1851, being a son of Ralph Charles Nicholson and Elizabeth Mr. Nicholson was educated for Roy. a commercial life at the Galt Collegiate Institute, at Upper Canada College, and in England. He entered the Bank of British North America at Toronto in 1868, and served in this institution for five years, at Toronto, Brantford, Halifax, St. John, St. Stephen, New York and Ottawa. He joined the staff of the Canadian Bank of Commerce at Toronto in 1873; in 1874 was appointed chief clerk at their New York agency; in 1881 took the position of assistant inspector; and in 1884 became manager of the London branch. Mr. Nicholson married on the 16th October, 1879, Eunice C. Troop of Halifax. He is, and always has been, a member of the Church of EngLagge emigr He w good Scotti beque educa heathbodily grew i admiri of eye. haunts fowl a the dee these o drifted army o to mins make t deavou hills, yo tive ho England essentia land hil the tarts in the h those fa Sir Har still hon tions hav Gooderid for his sp him with cherished Cattanac him to t hounds. v real Hun towards a until the in Engla Erricht s maple wo brother, was then provincial beginning Mills, call Cattanach, felt rather the countr at that tim turn to En tised, howe

the progres

country. I There were

Ca

Cattanach, Donald, was born at Laggan, Badenoch, Scotland, in 1799, and emigrated to Glengarry, Canada, in 1826. He was educated at the parish school, that good inheritance of education to which the Scottish youth are born, one of the many bequests of Knox to his country. He was educated also on the rugged mountains and heath-clad moors of his native land into bodily strength and physical endurance. He grew up, we are informed by a graphic and admiring writer, handsome and strong, keen of eye, skilful of hand; he knew well the haunts of the red deer, where the muir fowl and ptarmigan loved to stay, and all the deep secrets of successful angling. these days, as now, many a Highland lad drifted away from his native hills into the army of fighters, or the ranks of thinkers, to mingle in the stir and struggle of life, to make their mark on every field of manly endeavour. With the adventurous spirit of the hills, young Donald Cattanach left his native home for honourable employment in England. He was noticeable there as being essentially a clansman, proud of the Highland hills, and keen to uphold the honour of the tartan. He frequently tried his prowess in the hunting field and on the moors against those famous sportsmen, Osbaldeston and Sir Harry Goodericke, whose names are still household words although two generations have passed since then; and Sir Harry Goodericke shewed so much appreciation for his sporting qualities that he presented him with a "Joe Manton," which is now a cherished heirloom in the family. Cattanach brought some sporting dogs with him to this country. Two of these, foxhounds, were presented by him to the Montreal Hunt Club, and contributed largely towards a success which it has maintained until the present day. During his residence in England his father's family left Loch Erricht side for Canada and settled in the maple woods of Glengarry. His eldest brother, the late Colonel Cattanach, who was then employed by the government as provincial land surveyor, encouraged him in beginning business as a merchant at Priest's Mills, called afterwards Alexandria. Mr. Cattanach, in common with many others, felt rather hopeless about the condition of the country, which was pretty primitive at that time, and had almost decided to return to England. He soon became acclimatised, however, and also keenly interested in the progress and improvement of the new country. Its needs were apparent enough. There were long stretches of primeval forest.

eď

traversed by deer paths, dotted with lakes. intersected by rivers, waiting to be broken into clearings and developed into farms, and requiring passable roads above all things instead of paths. Rivers required to be spanned by bridges and utilized for saw and grist mills. There is something in the fresh life of a new country so hopeful and progressive, so full of stir and struggle, trial and endeavour, that all new comers are soon drawn into the stream of efforts. It was so with Donald Cattanach: he was not the less Highland and clannish that he became an earnest hearted, patriotic Canadian, seeking the welfare of the land he lived in and the benefit of the people among whom he dwelt, as well as his own. One of Mr. Cattanach's first efforts for the benefit of the new land was in this matter of roads, and he was appointed a commissioner. Some of the young men who earned their first wages at that work under him are now in their old age independently wealthy. In 1830 he was appointed magis-Law and lawyers were delightfully scarce in the newly settled parts of Canada at this time. A Celtic opinion that it was mean to appeal to the law to settle a dispute with a neighbour was very perceptible in Glengarry many years later. Strength of arm had often the advantage of strength of intellect, the knock down argument being counted very convincing. Magisterial duties in these early times were exceeding various. They solemnized matrimony, in consequence of the dearth of ministers; they settled cases arising out of the bewitchment of cows and of people-the belief in witchcraft emigrated with the early settlers, and it lingered long in some parts,—they had perplexing cases to settle arising out of quarrels about line fences, individual rights being pertinaciously defended; they had various other causes to try arising from original sin or backwoods pugnaciousness, In 1832 he married Catharine McDonell, widow of Mr. Duncan McMillan. In the same year he removed to lands he had purchased in Kenvon, on the Lochiel border. He called his place Laggan, in loving remembrance of his far-away early home in Inverness-shire. Here he lived his life, a noticeable figure in the history of Glengarry for the next fifty years. At Laggan he followed storekeeping; he lumbered; he farmed; he kept the post office; he dispensed justice; he encouraged farmers and mechanics to settle around him, giving employment to very many in his various enterprises, and among them many French-Canadian families who looked up to him as a patriarch. His wife, dying young, left him with two children, Alexander J. Cattanach, now barrister-atlaw, of Toronto; and Catharine, who married the Rev. Hugh Campbell, of Cornwall; and a stepson, John Cattanach Mc-Millan, now of Toronto. In 1839 he married Flora, daughter of John McKenzie, of Our subject took a deep interest in Sabbath-schools, and organized such in several localities. He was a zealous and able advocate of the temperance cause, and by precept and example in that line he was the means of doing much good. He filled the office of elder in the Presbyterian church for a long period of time, and often sat as a commissioner in the highest court of the church. He was for a length of time employed as a lay preacher and catechist, which office he filled with ability and accep-His hospitality was unbounded, his house being always open to the wayfaring man and the stranger-to which high and low, rich and poor, often resorted, and were hospitably received and entertained. He was of a kind and genial disposition, a true and faithful friend, and a highly esteemed and devoted Christian. He was also an ardent lover of music, and had few superiors in the rendering of the pibrochs of his native land, which he studied under famous masters. He was a Liberal in politics, and assisted materially in breaking up the family compact in Glengarry, which after that never had a representative from Glengarry. He was an excellent public speaker, and could speak with equal fluency in English and Gaelic, and almost the same facility in He died at Winnipeg, on the 29th May, 1883, in the eighty-fourth year of his age. His father lived to the age of ninety-six.

Deroche, Hammel Madden, Napanee, was born at the village of Newburgh, in the County of Lennox and Addington, in the Province of Ontario, on the 27th of August, 1840. He is the son of Pascal Deroche, a French Canadian, who was born in Lower Canada, but settled at Newburgh, about the year 1835. His mother, Elizabeth Jane Madden, is of Irish extraction, but was descended from a family of United Empire loyalists, who left the United States at the close of the revolution and settled in the township of Ernestown. He was educated at the Newburg Grammar school, and at the arts department of the Toronto University, where he graduated with first-class honours in 1868, having also taken the first prize as speaker for that year. Our subject taught as second master in the Newburgh

High school for four years, and as head master of the Napanee High school for two years. He began the study of law in the office of D. H. Preston, of Napanee, in 1870. and afterwards studied in the office of the late James Bethune, Q.C., in Toronto. He was called to the bar at Easter term in 1874 and since then has been in practice in Napanee. He belonged to the Queen's Own Rifles in Toronto during the time he was a student at University college, Toronto, and took part in the short campaign against the Fenians in 1866, and was present at the battle of Ridgeway, on the 2nd of June of that year. Mr. Deroche was elected to the Legislature of Ontario in 1871 for the riding of Addington, having defeated E. J. Hooper, the sitting member, by a small majority. He moved the reply to the Speech from the Throne in 1871. He was a member at the time of the defeat of the Hon, John Macdonald's administration. He was re-elected in 1875, and again in 1879, but was defeated at the general election in 1883. Mr. Deroche is a Liberal in politics, and a supporter of Mr. Blake and Mr. Mowat. He was a member of the Council of Public Instruction of Ontario from 1873 until the office was abolished: was inspector of schools for the town of Napanee from 1870 to 1872, and has been a member of the county board for the examination of teachers from 1871 until the present time. Mr. Deroche is a Freemason. and belongs to the Church of England. His wife was Sarah Ann Christian Pile, a native of the island of Barbadoes, and a daughter of Thomas G. Pile, many years a planter in that island, but now the collector of customs at the village of Deseronto, in the County of Hastings. Mr. Pile's family was one of the oldest in the island of Barbadoes. Mr. Deroche was married on the 5th of December, 1872, and has four children.

Ferguson, William, Kingston, Sheriff of Frontenac, Ontario, was born in the City of Armagh, Ireland, 1804. He is a son of James and Jane Ferguson, residents of that city; and his father was engaged in the iron, timber, and coal trade, and was possessed of strong Protestant proclivities. Our subject was educated at the Grammar school of his native city, and came to Canada with his father in 1826, the family settling in Kingston, where Mr. Ferguson, senior, purchased a farm in the adjoining township of Pit's' urg. William remained upon the farm until his father's death, which occurred in 1832, when he left the homestead and commenced business in Barr tion contr supp garri tract build 1846 the w 38 CO of Fr havin lor for count twent to acc positio Sheriff old Ca health mental and b come. 1837-8 3rd ir saw a assigne dence which mill. that co position been pr He was Provinc sented one par porter retains is a mei A.M., at of which He is lik England iff Fergu son in th duced t first pers erected of the P being a

ciation fo

and had

ing the fi

the new

that purp

Walker,

farmer of

union he

Barriefield as a general merchant. In addition to his regular business, he became a contractor under the Imperial government, supplying forage and fuel for the Kingston garrison for some years. He also contracted to draw the cut stone required to build Fort Henry in 1834 36. In the year 1846 Mr. Ferguson gave up his store and the work of contracting, on his appointment as county treasurer for the united counties of Frontenac, Lennox, and Addington, he having served previously as district councillor for the township of Pittsburg, Frontenac county. This position he occupied for twenty-two years, and surrendered it only to accept the office of sheriff in 1867, which position he has filled to the present time. Sheriff Ferguson is a fine specimen of an old Canadian gentleman. He is in vigorous health, and performs his duties with all his mental and physical faculties unimpaired, and bids fair to do so for many years to come. At the time of the rebellion of 1837-8 Mr. Ferguson was lieutenant of the 3rd infantry corps of Frontenac, which saw active service — our subject being assigned the duty of guarding the residence of the president of the court martial which tried the rebels taken at the Wind-He has continued a member of that corps to this date, now occupying the position of lieutenant-colonel, and having been promoted step by step to that rank. He was returned to the legislature of the Province of Canada in 1863, and represented the County of Frontenac during one parliament. He was a staunch supporter of Sir John A. Macdonald, and still retains his former political proclivities. He is a member of St John's lodge, A.F. & A.M., and Cataraqui chapter of Kingston, of which he is one of the oldest members. He is likewise a member of the Church of England, with low church proclivities. Sheriff Ferguson, we may say, was the first person in the County of Frontenac who introduced thorough-bred Durhams; and the first person in the Dominion to cause to be erected permanent structures for the use of the Provincial Agricultural Exhibition, being a member of the Agricultural Association for many years, and twice president; and had the honour to act as such in opening the first Provincial Agricultural show at the new buildings erected in Toronto for that purpose. Mr. Ferguson, in 1833, married Mary Jane, a daughter of William Walker, of the township of Storrington, a farmer of that locality, deceased. By this union he has had twelve children, of whom

we

he

Ψ.

he

He

4.

in

vn

nd

he

οŧ

he

J. Il

ıe

ten are living-seven boys and three girls. James Ferguson, the eldest son, has been mail officer on the Allan steamship line, in the employment of the Canadian government, for the past twenty-five years. Edward G. Ferguson, M.D., the third son, is president of the Medical council of Georgia. U.S., and has been re-elected to fill this pesition for three successive years. When the call for doctors to check the progress of the yellow fever came, he was the first to respond, and after three months of unwearying labour, had the satisfaction of seeing its deadly footsteps arrested. He is a graduate of Queen's University. T. Brooks Ferguson, B.A., fourth son, also a graduate of Queen's University, is Dominion Lands agent at Qu'Appelle. North-West territory. C. Marks Ferguson, fifth son, is agent of the St. Paul and Milwaukee Railroad at Windsor, Ontario. Horace A. Ferguson spent the earlier portion of his life in the Post Office department, Ottawa, and is now in Los Angeles, California, U.S., for the benefit of his health. Fred. W. Ferguson is in the employment of the Merchants Bank of Canada, Winnipeg, Manitoba, and has done great and important service for many years in settling up the outside affairs of the bank. A. J. Ferguson, the youngest son, is assistant manager of the Merchants Bank in London.

Courtney, John Mortimer, Ottawa, was born at Penzance, Cornwall, England, on the 22nd July, 1838, and received his education by private tuition. He was for some years in India and Australia, where he was in the service of the Agra Bank; and entered the public service of Canada as chief clerk on the 2nd of June, 1869. He was appointed deputy-minister of Finance on the 1st of August, 1878, and is also deputy-Receiver-General and secretary of the Treasury Board. Mr. Courtney married on the 5th of October, 1870, Mary Elizabeth Sophia, second daughter of the late Fennings Taylor, clerk assistant of the Senate of Canada. Our subject is a younger brother of Leonard Courtney, M.P. for the Bodmin-Liskeard division, County of Cornwall, England, who during the Gladstone administration held the offices of under-secretary of state of the home department, under-secretary of state for the colonies, and financial secretary to the treasury. He is likewise a director of the Civil Service Building and Savings Society. He has the widely-established repute of being a very capable deputy-minister, and he enjoys a large share of popularity outside. of, and within, the service.

Fennell John, Berlin, Ontario, was born at Cobourg, Northumberland county, Ontario, on the 8th of August, 1837. He is a son of Simon and Martha, the maiden name of his mother being McCamus. Simon Fennell was born in the County of Kildare, Ireland, in 1798, and came to America when he was twenty-one years old. He travelled through the United States and the Maritime provinces, and afterwards, turning his steps westward, settled at the lugubriously named place, Hardscrabble, now Cobourg, in 1821, and the house that he erected was among the first built in that village. He married in 1824, his wife's parents having, with a large family, arrived some time before from County Cavan, Ireland. Port Hope at this period was known by the somewhat vague and general title of Smith's Creek. After some years residence in Cobourg, he settled on a farm situate on the front road between Cobourg and Port Hope. Our subject was born in that stormy year that saw William Lyon Mackenzie unfold his banner of rebellion; and Mr. Fennell, who was a devoted adherent of the authority of the Crown, was found active in the cavalry forces in stamping out the insurrection. The family consisted of three boys and three When young John had completed his primary studies at the public schools, he was sent, as his brother, the Rev. Joseph Fennell, an Episcopal clergyman now at St. Catharines, also was, to Victoria College, Cobourg. In 1863 our subject, who had become thoroughly conversant with the hardware business, established himself in that enterprise at Berlin. Before he launched into the undertaking he had made up his mind that success in business is only achieved by pursuing sound business principles, by industry and by unvarying attention. These resolutions Mr. Fennell carried out fully, and the fruit now is an important, reputable, and profitable business. a member of the town council and a sturdy advocate of municipal improvement; and for the last sixteen years he has been connected with the school board as member and as chairman. Since 1878 he has at intervals been very active in the political sphere, exerting himself in favour of the cause of Liberal-Conservatism. He has been president of the Liberal-Conservative Association of the North Riding of Waterloo for a number of years. As we have said, he has always taken an active interest in the welfare of the town, and has done a great deal in promoting its material interests. He is a prominent member of St. John's (Episcopal) Church, and has been for a number of years churchwarden and lay delegate to the Synod of Huron diocese; and it may be stated that Mr. Fennell staunchly holds the views of the Evangelical party of the Church He married in 1864, Alicia of England. Jackson, of Stratford, Ont., whose family were amongst the earliest and most respect. ed settlers in that now young city, and there is a family of four girls and one boy. latter is attending University College, To-In the summer of 1880 Mr. Fennell and his wife travelled through Great Britain, Ireland, Germany, and France, visiting the principal places of interest in these countries. He has been a Freemason since His mother still lives, and resides with her daughter, Mrs. George O. Stanton. of Montreal. She is in her eighty-first year.

Had Had Had

in

an Re

at

be

28 rit

tio

of

Jo

we:

Da

No

had

sini

hal

the

sele

unc

sen

of I

frus

on :

thei

ed,

tion

forv

cour

Sup

beer

er tl

and

used

as th

and

milit

same

takei

at or

of th

leans

ron,

(sprin

boats

numl

certa

sent

eight

them.

Dawson, S. J., M.P. for Algoma, Ontario, was born in Scotland, and came to Canada when a boy. He is connected on both his father's and mother's sides with old historic families, his maternal grandfather having been for a long period heir presumptive to the estates and honours of the ancient house of Glengarry. He is unmarried, and by profession a civil engineer. He was appointed by the government, in 1851, to plan and superintend the construction of extensive works then contemplated on the St. Maurice, to open up the vast pine regions of that river and its tributaries to commercial enterprise, which works he carried out successfully. In 1857 he was appointed to explore the country from Lake Superior westward to the Saskatchewan, and report upon its adaptability for settlement and the practicability of opening up communication therewith. The reports of his explorations while on this service drew general attention to the North-West territories, at that time but little known, and did much to dispel the then prevalent idea that they were in great part sterile, and to a large extent within the regions of perpetual frost, as had been asserted by different writers who, in the interests of the fur traders, wished to exclude settlement. He resigned this office after completing his reports, and returned to Three Rivers, the people of that city having in the meantime shown their appreciation of his former services in opening up their great river, by sending his brother, who was until then personally unknown to them, to represent them in par-In 1867, he again visited Lake liament. Superior, at the request of the government, to indicate the proper starting place of a then contemplated road to the interior, and pitched his tent at a point then covered with forest and without any inhabitants, but at the present time well known as Port Arthur. In 1868 he was directed by the government to commence the opening of the route to Red River, now called the "Dawson route." The summer of that year was chiefly occupied with explorations and surveys, but in 1869 the work was vigorously prosecuted. In the fall of the year last mentioned (1869), intelligence was received of an outbreak among the half-Indian population of the Red River settlement, and Mr. Dawson was at once sent for by the government and asked to furnish information, both as to the best way of dealing with such of the people as had taken up arms, and reaching the territory with an armed force. At his suggestion, Lieutant-Colonel de Salaberry, a son of the hero of Chateauguay, and Judge Johnson, of the Superior Court of Quebec, were sent out. The former was on his (Mr. Dawson's) staff when he first explored the North-West territories; and Judge Johnson had been, at the same time, governor of Assiniboia. Both were very popular with the half-breeds, and their success in conciliating the malcontents showed the wisdom of the selection. At the same time, Mr. Dawson, under instructions from the government, sent trusty agents among the powerful bands of Indians on the line of route, in order to frustrate any attempts that might be made on the part of the insurgents, to tamper with them or shake their loyalty. He was directed, also, to provide the means of transportation for a military force, intended to be sent forward on the opening of navigation. The country to be passed through, between Lake Superior and Fort Frances, had never before been traversed with vessels larger or stronger than the birchen canoes of the Indians and fur traders, and the class of boats to be used was a matter requiring consideration, as they had to be built of sufficient capacity and strength to carry twelve men each, with military equipment and stores, and at the same time made so light as to be easily Mr. Dawson taken over a carrying place. at once called into requisition the services of the boat-builders from the island of Orleans, near Quebec, to Sarnia, on Lake Huron, and by the opening of navigation, (spring of 1870) had one hundred and fifty boats of a superior class, together with a number of flat scows for carrying stores in certain shallow places, in readiness to be sent forward; and these, together with eight hundred skilled voyageurs to man them, were soon transported to Lake Supe-

oer of

to the

y be

s the

aurch

Alicia

amily !

pect.

there

The

To-

nnell

Bri-

visit-

hese

since

sides

nton,

vear

On.

e to

on

n old

ther

ımp-

e añ-

ried,

was

, to n of

on

oine

s to

car-

apake

van,

tle-

of

rew

rri-

and

dea

ual

rit-

rs, ied

eir

en-

ro-

rior. Some delay was experienced in getting over the road leading from Thunder Bay to Shebandowan, the first of the inland lakes, but the work remaining to be done on that section was so vigorously pushed forward by the veyageurs and soldiers that, by the end of June, Lieutenant-General Sir James Lindsay, then commander-in-chief of the forces in Canada, after personally investigating the arrangements and inspecting the work, gave the orders to march, and the Imperial troops and Canadian volunteers, under Colonel (now Lord) Wolseley, the commandant of the field force, were carried through, without so much as a single accident occurring. On this expedition, Mr. Dawson, in a civilian capacity, represented the different departments of the government having to deal with the service, and so well had every precaution been taken, and so efficiently had he been aided by his staff, among whom the late Hon. James McKay, of Manitoba, deserves particular mention, that on reaching Fort Garry, (now Winnipeg) there was not a single foe to encounter. The insurgents had returned to their allegiance, and Riel's disbanded soldiers, instead of showing fight, were at work by hundreds on the Lake of the Woods section of the Dawson route. The march through, or rather voyage of, the military force, after Shebandowan lake had been reached, was like a summer picnic on an extensive scale. The boats, being well manned, were easily taken over the portages, and the skill of the voyageurs had proved equal to the whirl-pools of the Winnipeg. The success of this memorable boat voyage, through 500 miles of wilderness, led Lord Wolseley, in after years, to try the same system of transportation on the Nile, and it is pleasing to know that Canadian voyageurs, many of them trained on the Dawson route, did no discredit to their country in the old land of the pyramids. On returning to Ottawa at the close of the season, Mr. Dawson was the recipient of warm acknowledgments, both from the Imperial and Dominion authorities, and of something substantial besides. For some years afterwards, Mr. Dawson continued in charge of the route, improving it greatly, and using the boats of the military expedition for sending through emigrants from the older sections of the country, many of whom are now among the leading people of Manitoba and the North-West territories. In this service he employed many of the native Indians and half-breeds, more especially as voyageurs, and was very popular with them. In 1871-2, he acted as honorary Indian commissioner with Mr. Weymiss W. Simpson, chief Indian commissioner, in his negotiations with the different bands of Indians at Rainy River and the Lake of the Woods; and in 1873 was appointed joint commissioner with the Lieutenant Governor of Manitoba and the Indian commissioner of the North-West, in concluding a treaty with the Sanlteux tribe of the Ojibbeway Indians. In 1874, he was solicited by some of the leading people of Algoma to become a candidate for the representation of that district in the Legislative Assembly of Ontario, and was elected the following summer, having first resigned the charge of the Dawson route. In 1878, he resigned his seat in the Legislative Assembly, and was elected for the Commons, defeating his very popular opponent, Colonel Arthur Rankin, by a majority of over four hundred. At the general election of 1882, he was re-elected by a largely increased majority over the Hon. William McDougall, C.B., who on that occasion took the field against him. Mr. Dawson, ever since he entered parliament, has been the active promoter or supporter of every measure in any way connected with the development of his extensive district; and when in the Assembly of Ontario was mainly instrumental in inaugurating a system of colonization roads, which has since been followed up with the most satisfactory results in drawing in population, and developing the agricultural, mineral, and other resources of Algoma. Since he entered the Commons, new lighthouses, improved harbours, increased postal facilities, railway and telegraph lines, constructed or projected, substantial encouragement to lines of steamers, and, though last, not least, the hydrographic survey of the great lakes, now going on from year to year, bear evidence to the care with which the interests of the vast territory he represents have been watched over. But, while attending to the interests of his own district, Mr. Dawson has been far from neglecting the general legislation of the coun-In parliament he is constantly at his try. post, whether in the committee rooms or in the chamber of the Commons. He was chairman of the select committee appointed in the session of 1880, to inquire into all matters connected with the disputed territory, and the report of that committee, with its appendices, will be found to contain a vast amount of information, which will always be of interest to the student of the early history of the country. The project of a transcontinental railway in British territory has had from the first his warmest support, and he has now the satisfaction of seeing the Canadian Pacific in operation from one end to the other of the district he represents—from Sudbury Junction on the east, to the Lake of the Woods on the west -a distance but little short of nine hundred miles. Algoma is now thrown open by this great work, and the development of the cop. per and iron mines of Lake Huron, the silver bearing mountains of Thunder Bay, and the gold producing region of the Lake of the Woods, is but a question of time. Algoma branch of the Canadian Pacific Railway is entirely within the District of Algoma, and when carried to Sault St. Marie, as it eventually must, will be the means of developing and settling a very important section of the country. The Indian population of Algoma is considerable, and much of Mr. Dawson's time has been devoted to the amelioration of the condition of these people, more especially in the matters of education and bringing about such measures as have had the effect of excluding intoxicants, to a large extent, from among Through his exertions, in conjuncthem. tion with those of the zealous missionaries of the various denominations, many new Indian schools have been established, and he has urged that the large amount due the Indians of Algoma for arrears under the Robinson treaty, (over $300,000) should, when adjusted, be applied, at least in part, to the maintenance of Indian industrial schools throughout the district. Mr. Dawson has seen his district, which contained only some eight or ten thousand inhabitants when he first entered parliament, grow to a population estimated at not less than fifty thousand at the present time. Port Arthur, which we have referred to as a locality covered with forest when he pitched his tent there in 1867, has now a population, according to the last municipal census, of about six thousand, and so on with other parts of Algoma.

a 4 fi o h ti u ai p se se m fr an ta er th o die

th

sel

jul

an

the

ln

app

and

sitı

the

ten

par

ed

tion

in t

life

Jan

eral

thei

As

Mas

the

two

was

elde

pron

born

and

marr

R.A.

Queb

ters

the 1

Onta

lege,

H.

C

Corbett, Patrick.—The following is taken from the columns of the Kingston Chronicle newspaper, of the 28th of January, 1832, the notice bearing the heading "The late Town Major, Patrick Corbett": "Our obituary of this day records the sudden and unexpected demise, on Tuesday last, of the above named gentleman, after an almost uninterrupted residence in this town of about twenty-three years, and in the sixty second year of his age. An Irishman by birth, the only son of Patrick Corbett, Esquire of Limerick Castle, in the County of Limerick, and full of the national ambition of his countrymen for a military life, he entered the service in the twentieth year of his age, and served successively in the 20th, 25th, 42nd and 91st regiments of the line. The first action of which we possess any record of his being engaged in, was the taking of Minorca, in the year 1796, when he was distinguished by hoisting the British colors upon the citadel, having wrapped them around his body to accomplish his gallant purpose. His conduct upon this and subsequent events attracted the notice of the several commanders, who appreciated his services by the rewards, first of the quartermastership of the 91st regiment, in 1804, from which he was promoted to a lieutenancy in the 25th regiment, in 1807, and obtained an exchange to the 10th Royal veteran battalion, in 1809; he also served in the 4th and 5th garrison battalion, previous to his joining the 15th veterans, which he did in this country, in August, 1809. On the opening of the war in 1812, he was selected to fill the situation of assistant adjutant-general of the militia, and he drilled and organized the militia of the country to the entire satisfaction of the government. In 1814 his services were rewarded by the appointment of town major of Kingston, and assistant adjutant-general. The latter situation being dispensed with, he retained the former, with the add tion of superintendant of the quartermaster general's department, in 1829, both of which he retained until his demise, meriting the approbation of every successive commanding officer in the garrison. To the last moment of his life he received from Sir H. Vivian, Sir James Kempt, and other distinguished general officers the strongest testimonials of their continued interest in his prosperity. As a soldier, husband, father, friend and Mason, he was equally fortunate in securing the esteem and affection of all after fortytwo years of active military service. was a member of the Church of England."

5

armest

ion of ration

ict he

on the

e west

ndred

y this

e cope sil-

v, and

ke of

The

Pacific ict of

t St.

e the

y im-

ndian

, and n de-

lition

mat-

such

iding

nong

unc-

aries

w In-

d he

e In-

Rob-

rhen

the

ools

has

ome

he ula-

iou-

aur,

cov-

ent

ac-

of

her

is

ton

ry, he was a memoer of the Church of England.

Corbett, George Frederick, the eldest son of Major Patrick Corbett, was a prominent merchant in Kingston. He was born in Limerick Castle, Ireland, in 1799, and died in Kingston about 1840. He married a daughter of Lieut.-Gen. Glasgow, R.A., at one time acting lieut.-governor at Quebec. By this lady he had three daughters and two sons, Frederick and George H. The former resides in Australia, and the latter is a leading physician in Orillia, Ontario. He is a graduate of Queen's College, Kingston, a Freemason, and a member of the Church of England. He has been twice married. His first wife was a Miss Sinclair, of Kingston, by whom he had four daughters. His second wife is a daughter of the Rev. John Dawson, of North Wales. By this wife he has three daughters. Of his daughters one is widow of the late D'Arcy Boulton, barrister, of Toronto. Thomas A., the second son, was high sheriff of the united counties of Frontenac, Lennox and Addington, before the division of the counties, and afterwards of Frontenac. He held the office for twenty-five years, resigning in 1867, to accept the position of military store-keeper at Kingston. He was lieutenant-colonel of the first Frontenac regiment, (the Bloody First.) He was a Freemason, and died in 1878, being buried with military honours. He left four sons and one daughter. Of his sons, the two eldest, Augustus and William, entered the British army as surgeons, at the breaking out of the Crimean war, in 1851. After the close of the war they both went with their regiments to India, and served through the mutiny. The eldest died in England in 1882, after a service of thirty years; William is still in India as a chief of medical staff. The third son, Henry, was also a doctor, and practised for many years in Ottawa. On the breaking out of the late Canadian rebellion, of 1885, he volunteered his services to the government, and was sent to the North-West, but was taken ill at Qu'Appelle, and was removed to Winnipeg, where he died on the 1st of July, 1885. The youngest son, Thomas A., was a civil service employé, and died in 1880.

Corbett, Richard, born in Dublin, 1808, was the third son of Town Major Patrick Corbett, who came to Kingston when our subject was only two years old. The lad was educated at the Royal Grammar school, under George Baxter. In his youth he visited his twin brother, William H., who was a planter in Demarara, West Indies, and remained there for a number of years. He returned to Canada in 1834, and was appointed head master of the Grammar school, Napanee. He filled this position for some years. In May, 1852, he received the appointment of governor of the gaol at Kingston, which office he filled until his death, which occurred 20th December, 1865. He married in June, 1844, Harriet, youngest daughter of Benjamin Lake, a wealthy farmer of the township of Portland, and by this lady had one son and three daughters-the former succeeding to his father's position. The eldest daughter died in infancy, and the second married H. E. Marshall, of Baltimore, and the youngest Professor Graves, of Evanston, Illinois. He was a member of the Church of England, and belonged to the Masonic craft, being initiated into its mysteries while residing in the West Indies. Mr. Corbett was lieutenant of the 1st Frontenac regiment, his commission dating 1836, and took an active interest in military matters. He was a large spirited gentleman, courteous, kindly and honourable in all his dealings, and left no feeling but one of universal regret when he passed William Henry Corbett, twin brother of Richard, went to the West Indies in his youth, became a prominent planter and merchant, and died in Georgetown, Demarara, on the 1st March, 1866. Ellen Isabella, only daughter of Patrick Corbett, married Lieut. Buchon, Royal navy. She died in Isle of White, England, in March, 1853.

Corbett, Charles Henry, the only son of Richard Corbett, was born in Napanee, Ontario, on the 11th of September, 1846. He was educated at the Grammar school, Kingston, and attended the Medical College at Kingston for three years, but was unable to finish his course owing to his father's death. graduated from the Military school in the same city, in 1865. At the age of nineteen he succeeded his father as governor of the gaol, and has conducted the institution under his charge with marked ability. He takes great interest in temperance work, succeeding the late Rev. F. W. Kirkpatrick as president of the Church of England Temperance Society. He is a member of the Church of England. Is a past master of Ancient St. John's Masonic lodge, No. 3, and a past officer of the Grand lodge of Canada. He has been president of the Kingston Cricket Club, and of the Curling Club, and has always been a patron of manly sports. In January, 1866, he married Hannah Mary, second daughter of the late F. W. Smith, collector of Customs at Napanee, and brother of the late Sir Henry Smith; and has by this marriage ten children, six sons and four Two of the sons died in indaughters. fancy. Mr. Corbett, we may add, is also a contributor to various publications of the day, and possesses literary attainments far higher than those of the common order. His eldest son, C. Fred. Corbett, served as a private in the Winnipeg Field Battery during the late rebellion in the North-West, and was in the engagements at Fish Creek, Batoche, etc.

William, Chatham. McKeough, Ontario, born on the 1st May, 1824, at Thurles, County Tipperary, Ireland, is a descendant of the Macindrossers, or Mackeoghs, who were clansmen of Macdougals of Lorne, and assisted the latter in their wars against the Bruces-three of whom, in their attempt to slay King Robert Bruce. succeeded in securing the famous brooch of Lorne, which was a personal ornament of Bruce, and which Sir Walter Scott, in his "Lord of the Isles," describes. But they lost their lives for their audacity. His grandfather, James McKeogh, of Rahealty, County of Tipperary, was an uncle of the late Hon. Mr. Justice Keogh, and his grandmother was a sister of the Rev. Francis Mahony, the celebrated "Father Prout," author of the "Bells of Shardon," etc. His father, Thomas McKeogh, came to this country while William was a child and settled in Paris, Ontario. Some few years afterwards. losing his entire fortune, William was obliged to leave home at an early age. He became apprenticed to Edward Jackson of Hamilton, where he learned his trade, and with whom he remained until he attained his majority. He settled in Chatham in 1847, and, in company with his brother. John McKeough, carried on a large and extensive business. He was mayor of the town in 1870; was one of the chief promoters and first president of the Erie and Huron Railroad; has been a member of the school board for the past twenty-tive years. and chairman thereof for the past eight years; and to his zeal and energy in school matters are due to a great extent the present very efficient condition of the common schools of Chatham. Mr. McKeough is a Reformer in politics, and was the unanimous nominee of the Reform party in Kent to represent them in the Federal parliament on several occasions, but declined the honour. He is a member and a trustee of the Methodist church. Our subject has always taken an active interest in all matters for the promotion of the welfare of the town and In 1854 he married Elizabeth, county. second daughter of the late John Stone, of Oxford, by which union there are three sons and one daughter. The sons are George T. McKeough, M.D., M.R.C.S., Eng., who was gold medalist at Trinity Medical School in 1877, and for some time resident physician to the Royal Free Hospital, London, England; J. Frank Mc-Keough, proprietor of the Chatham Iron Works; and W. E. McKeough, barrister-atlaw of Osgoode Hall, Toronto. They have

th

tar at tar

and

ext

bш

jus

bef

mil

bro

bou wife

Ont

the

of I

man

arm

ter i

real,

medi

the e

gery

burg

ated

mile

time

lage

Lenn

Fron

town

to th

John

vears

lucrat

forty

roads

wretcl

ly tho

prospe

freque

night,

travell

would horse .

travel

wilder

order

some l

for som

than th

There

Napane

forest

farms a

where,

back to

Dr. Ra

all settled in Chatham, the town in which ! they were born.

ham.

. at

is a

Mac-

ugals

ltheir

m, in

ruce.

ch of

ht of

h his

they

His

alty,

and-

Ma-

thor

her.

ntry

d in rds.

was

He

n of

and

ned

n in

her.

ex-

the

pro-

and

the

ars.

ght Iool

ore-

non sа

bus

on

ur.

en

ro-nd

Ruttan, Allen, M.D., Napanee, Ontario, was born on the 26th January, 1826, at Adolphustown, County of Lennox, Ontario. He is a son of Peter William Ruttan and Fanny Roblin. His father carried on extensive farming operations at Sophiasburg, County of Prince Edward; was a justice of the peace; and for many years before his decease a lieutenant-colonel of militia in that county. He was the eldest brother of the late Sheriff Ruttan, of Co-He had but one sister, Elizabeth, bourg. wife of the Rev. Dr. Townley, of Paris, Allen Ruttan was educated at the Picton Grammar school, in the County of Prince Edward, Mr. Cockrell, an Eton man, and a retired officer in the English army, being head master of the school. ter matriculating at McGill College, Montreal, our subject entered upon the study of medicine at that institution, and obtained the degree of doctor of medicine and surgery in 1852. He began practice in Newburgh, a village in Addington county, situated on the Napanee river, and about six miles from Napanee. Newburgh at that time was considered a more promising village than Napanee; but at the separation of Lennox and Addington from the County of Frontenac, Napanee was made the county town of the new county. He then removed to the premises which he now occupies on John street. During the past thirty-three years Dr. Ruttan has had an extensive and lucrative practice over a district thirty or Thirty years ago the forty miles square. roads in this country were in a horribly wretched condition, and the people, especially those of the back townships, were less prosperous than they are at present. Very frequently he found it necessary to ride all night, placing a saddle in the gig, and after travelling as far as he could go on wheels, would take to horseback, and when the horse could no longer find a road, he would travel on foot, following a trail through the wilderness with a birch-bark torchlight, in order to relieve from suffering the wife of some lonely settler, or to amputate a limb for some woodman, with no other assistance than the hand of some kindly neighbour. There was no Grand Trunk then, and no Napanee and Quebec Railway, as now. The forest has disappeared, and flourishing farms and farm houses are to be seen everywhere, while the roads are better in these back townships than they are at the front. Dr. Ruttan has always been passionately fond of his profession, and took great delight in the study of anatomy, physiology, surgery and chemistry. Indeed, he has regretted all his life that he did not remain in Montreal; as it would have afforded him a better opportunity for the prosecution of these studies and the practice of surgery, which he has almost made a specialty. He was appointed examiner in anatomy and surgery at the University of Toronto in 1860; and was elected unanimously by the medical practitioners in the Newcastle and Trent electoral division to the council of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Ontario, 1885. He has always taken an active part in municipal matters, school boards, and boards of health; is medical health officer at Napanee, and held the appointment of gaol surgeon since 1876. Himself, his wife and family are regular communicants of the Church of England, and Liberal-Conservative in politics. Dr. Ruttan was married, at St. George's church, Montreal, in 1854, by the Rev. Dr. Bethune, brother of the late bishop, the register being the cathedral register where Dr. Bethune officiated. His wife is Caroline, daughter of the late William Smith. Montreal, whose father and grandfather were interested in, or in some way connected with, the Hudson Bay Company. There are three sons and two daughters by the marriage. The eldest, Robert Fulford, was educated at University College, and graduated in arts at the University of Toronto in 1881, and obtained the gold medal in natural sciences at his final examination. He entered upon the study of medicine at McGill College the same year, obtained the Sutherland gold medal and the Morrice scholarship in 1883, and his degree of M.D. & C. in 1884. He was appointed assistant lecturer upon principle and practical chemistry in that college in 1885. During the past interim be has been engaged in original work in Professor Hofmann's laboratory, Berlin, Germany. The second son, Allen Montgomery, was educated at the Napanee High school, and entered upon the study of medicine at Mc-Gill College in 1876, where he obtained his degree of M.D. & C., 1880. He is practising his profession in New York city. The third son was also educated at Napanee High school; entered upon the study of law with Reeve & Morden, Napanee, and McCarthy & Co., Toronto; and passed his examination at Osgoode Hall for attorney and barrister in 1883. He is now practising his profession with John Leys, barrister, Toronto.

Breck, Ira Allen, Kingston, Ontario, was born in Burlington, Vermont, U. S., on the 1st September, 1825. His father, Henry Breck, was born at Boston, Mass., U.S., and his ancestors were of the old Welsh family Breck. Henry Breck served in the United States army under General Harrison, at the battle of Tippecanoe when the U.S. forces defeated the celebrated Tecumseh army of Indians, in 1811, and was afterwards with General Hull when the American army under that general was captured by the British forces at Detroit. Mr. Breck with a comrade escaped, and made his way afoot through the wilderness from Windsor, Canada, to Burlington, Vermont, which finished his career as a soldier. He removed then to Jefferson county, N. Y., and finally settled at Cape Vincent, where he commenced business as grocer, and continued in the same until his death in 1837. Our subject's mother, Miranda, was a sister of the Hon. Jacob Collamer, chief justice of Vermont, and afterwards member of the United States Congress, and then senator from Vermont, representing that State in the United States Senate until his death some ten years ago. He was at one time postmaster-general of the United States, while General Taylor was Ira Allen Breck received only president. such education as the common and select schools of the village could afford; but received a good commercial education, first with his father, and afterwards with O. P. Starky, a prominent merchant at Cape Vincent. Upon the marriage of his sister Marion, to D. D. Calvin, Mr. Breck came to Canada in 1845, as clerk in the office of Calvin & Cook, doing business at Garden Island, Canada, as lumbermen, ship-builders and forwarders. After serving about six years as book-keeper in the office, and upon Mr. Cook retiring from the Kingston business, Mr. Breck became partner with Mr. Calvin, the firm's name being then Calvin & Breck, and so continuing until 1880. when Mr. Breck retired. Mr. Calvin's son, Hiram, in the meantime having attained mature business capacity, took the place in the firm previously occupied by Mr. Breck. Mr. Breck never took any leading part in politics, but has always been active in the interest of the Conservative party, his attention being given almost wholly to the business of the firm, which from comparatively small beginnings, increased to a large extent, and became widely known as producers of timber and staves, and also as forwarders of the same goods for other producers from lakes Superior, Huron, Erie and Ontario to Garden Island per vessels, thence to Quebec per raft. Calvin & Breck were proprietors of the Government tug line from its commencement in about 1849 until its close in 1876, with the exception of the years 1853 and 1854, furnishing steamers for towage of barges and schooners on a government tariff between Kingston and Montreal. Calvin & Breck were also extensively engaged, during the existence of the firm, in the building of lake vessels, steamers and barges. The head of the business being at Garden Island, an incorporated village owned by the firm and inhabited by their employees, no place for the selling of intoxicating liquor was ever allowed in the village; in fact it always was, and is yet, a strictly temperance village with no licenses and no drinking shops. If their employees ever get any intoxicating drink, they were under the necessity of going away from their village to purchase it, and of bringing it in without the knowledge of the Mr. Breck is a member of the Congregational church, which he joined twentyfive years ago. His first wife was Edna C. Potter, a niece of D. D. Calvin; she died young, after giving birth to two children. The daughter is now the wife of William Lesslie, manager of Collins Bay Rafting and The son, L. W. Forwarding Company. Breck, is in business at Kingston. Our subject's second wife was Jessie, sister of the Rev. K. M. Fenwick. By this lady he has one son, born on the 2nd September,

PA C P C P C

h

laı

tw

th

col

an

of

hac

Ly:

ver

dou

hav

The

men

own

sent

mar

he li

taug

fathe

less f

The s

land,

retur

ing T

Harv

over

ara l

Hami

but 1

Some

where

but h

and m connec

terwar

John (

ordnan

foundla

tion wi

ardent of D'Is

naturall

bec.

Hill.

Millar, Alexander, Barrister-at-law, Berlin, Ontario, was born at Berlin, County of Waterloo, on the 4th of November, 1835. He is a son of Frederick Gourlay Millar, and Isabella Henderson, his wife, the former having been born in New York state, of Scottish parents and the latter in Scotland. Alexander Millar was educated at the Berlin and Galt Grammar schools. He was admitted to the Law Society in 1856; became an attorney and solicitor in 1861, and was called to the bar in 1863. He has been in the practice of the law at Berlin continuously ever since 1861. He was appointed ensign in the Berlin company of volunteer infantry on its formation in 1865, and afterwards was in command of that company. In municipal politics he has taken much interest and was elected mayor of Berlin in 1884 and 1885, by acclamation in both cases. He became a member of Grand River lodge, No. 151, A. F. & A. M., 1880, and a member of Grand River chapter, No. 70, in 1883. He was senior warden of the G. R. lodge in 1884. Mr. Millar was a candidate for the local legislature in 1875, for North Waterloo, in the Conservative interest, but was defeated by Moses Springer, late M.P.P., now sheriff of the County of Waterloo. In religion he is a member of the Church of England. He married, in 1865, Margaret Eliza, daughter of the late H. N. Warren, of Chippawa, by whom he has two sons and a daughter. Mr. Millar enjoys a wide share of popularity, and it is not going too far to predict that we shall some day find him doing credit to his talents in one of our houses of parliament.

uebec

ietors

com-

1853 ige of

tariff

vin &

uring

ng of

head

d, an

and

e for

ever

was,

with their

rink,

way

d of

the

Con-

nty-

died

ren.

iam

and

W.

Dur

of

he

er,

35.

ar,

ıer

Harvey, Arthur, Toronto, was born in the town of Halesworth, Suffolk, England, in the year 1834, one of a family of His father's family came from the parish of Melton and Hoo, in the same His mother was Harriet Rogers, county. and her family are from the neighbourhood of Portsmouth, Hampshire, to which they had originally moved from the New Forest, Lymington way. Our subject's father was very muscular; he could bend a horse shoe double in his grip, but none of his children have any noticeable strength save one, who is the strongest man in South Australia. The family came of good old English yeomen, the men who are able to carve their own fortunes in the world. Our subject was sent for two years to London to learn grammar and music; afterwards to France, where he lived with a Roman Catholic priest, who taught him Latin. It was the belief of his father that no education was complete unless finished abroad at foreign institutions. The subject of this sketch was sent to Holland, where he remained for three years, returning across the North Sea, and entering Trinity College, Dublin. In 1856 Mr. Harvey emigrated to America, crossed over into Canadian territory by the Niagara bridge, and halted at the City of Hamilton. He expected to see wigwams. but lo! there were commodious houses! Some time afterwards he went to Brantford. where he was local editor of a newspaper; but he did not care for this position and moved to Hamilton, where he became connected with the Spectator. Shortly afterwards he married Jane, daughter of John Grist, clerk of works to the Imperial ordnance authorities, then stationed at Quebec. His wife was born at St. John's, Newfoundland, in the officer's quarters at Signal Hill. In the days of Mr. Harvey's connection with the press, he was an active and ardent politician. He had been an admirer of D'Israeli's politics in his boyhood, and naturally fell into the Liberal-Conservative groove here. His pen and his reporter's pencil were always at the service of the public men of the party, and in no mercenary spirit either. He loved the excitement, and the sense of influence; and he became the trusted confidant of many statesmen on the Conservative side. Those were anxious days in political circles. One might almost despair of seeing this a united and peacefu country. We had Upper and Lower Canada at dagger's point; we were shut off from the sea for many months each year; we had only just emerged from a state in which many of our people were looking to Washington, and when Washington was, at least unofficially, looking for us. When the Reciprocity Treaty with the United States was nearing its end, and all Canadians were anxious to know what the effect of this radical change would be, Erastus Wiman, a friend of our subject's, now of continental reputation, was owner of the Trade Review, of Montreal, and offered a prize for the best essay on the treaty. With his usual thoroughness, he secured the aid of Sir Francis Hincks, Hon. Mr. Holton, and a third equally eminent man, as judges, and the prize therefore assumed a value greater than its money reward. The first prize fell to Mr. Harvey, Mr. James Young, of Galt, being second. The essay was reprinted by the press, and issued in pamphlet form, attracting wide attention. Shortly afterwards, the government appointed commissioners to visit the West Indies and Brazil, to ascertain what outlets they might offer for our products, and the finance ministers of the various British American provinces met at Washington, commissioned to negotiate for a new treaty, if one could be had. Of this commission—Messrs. Galt (Quebec), Howland (Ontario), Smith (New Brunswick), and Henry (Nova Scotia), Mr. Harvey was called to be secretary; and observing, when attending the sessions of the committee on ways and means, how great weight was put on the fisheries branch of the subject, he handed his studies and manuscript on this subject to his friend, W. F. Whitcher, telling him that in this line lay fortune and fame. Mr. Whitcher, with a little aid from Sir Alexander Galt and Sir John A. Macdonald, succeeded in doing enough to compel the foundation of a fisheries branch, when confederation was brought about, and, under Hon. Peter Mitchell, made it an important branch of the public service, and paved the way for the due recognition of the value of our fisheries by the treaty of Washington, the Halifax award of $5,000,- 000, and the treaty of commerce soon to be made between the United States and Can-The other branches of economical and political study suggested by this commission were dealt with by Mr. Harvey himself, and he was actively employed by several ministers in preparing the framework of confeder-Mr. Harvey's energy was as boundless as his capacity for expedient, and for the origination of projects was fertile. Amongst his many other valuable services to the government and to the country was, "The Year Book of Canada," a work of his capable pen. For two years he devoted himself with patriotic zeal to a continuation of this enterprise, and then surrendered it to more mercenary and less capable hands. Mr. Harvey's book is a standard statistical work to this day. Mr. Harvey, while in the service of the government, suggested and carried into effect the insurance legislation of the Dominion, and in 1870 took the management of the Provincial Insurance Company at Toronto. The affairs of this institution were not in a promising condition. Heavy maturing liabilities had to be met, and this Mr. Harvey accomplished with his usual success. But the stars were fighting against his company. Droughts prevailed in his territory, and city after city was scourged by fire in the Maritime provinces. The company was obliged to suspend; and Mr. Harvey was long Mr. Harengaged winding up its affairs. vey was secretary of the St. George's Society in Quebec, and was called the "model secretary," too. He has not since then joined the St. George's Society, nor given them a In Ottawa he was active in subscription. matters ecclesiastical, and delighted in being able to say that he was largely instrumental in building St. Alban's church there, which indeed he financed and sometimes carried on paper, principally his own. He has not been able to revive interest in church matters since. He was the widest-known statist in Canada; but he now rarely thinks of the subject, and never makes a talk of figures. He was one of the swiftest shorthand writers, but he never makes a phonetic He has been engaged of late curve now. years in real estate transactions, principally in Parkdale, which owes much of its development to him, he having laid out three miles of new streets there. He has not altogether laid aside his pen, and is a frequent contributor to magazines and the daily

Bowell, Hon. Mackenzie, Lieutenant Colonel, J.P., M.P. for North Hastings, and Minister of Customs, was born at Rickinghall, Suffolk, England, on the 27th December, 1823. When young Bowell was nine years old his parents sailed for Can. ada. Mr. Bowell, in early youth, exhibited much courage and enterprise, and one is not surprised to see what he has achieved in looking back at his career. He always had a quick eye for business, and was seldom astray in judging what sort of enterprise was profitable, and what had better be avoid. He had always a military enthusiasm. and assisted in 1857, in raising and organizing a rifle company of sixty-five men, in what was known at that time as class B, in which no assistance was given by the gov. ernment, except in furnishing the rifles He served on the frontier in the winter of 1864-5, during the American rebellion, and again during the Fenian troubles of 1866. He entered a printing office as an apprentice in 1834, and during his whole life up to the time when heavy political responsi-bilities fell upon his shoulders, he was connected with the newspaper press of Canada. He was editor and proprietor of the Belle. ville Daily and Weekly Intelligencer newspaper for a number of years, and at one time president of the Ontario Press Associa-In education he has taken consider. able interest, as is evidenced by the fact that he held for eleven years the chairmanship of the Board of School Trustees, of Belleville. He has always been a prominent Orangeman: and was for eight years grand master of the Provincial Orange Grand Lodge of Ontario east, which position he resigned when in 1870 he was elected most worshipful grand master and sovereign of the Orange Association of British America. This office he continued to hold until he resigned in June. 1878. He was likewise president of the Triannual Council of Orangeism of the world. having been elected to that position at the council held in Derry, Ireland, in 1876. From Mr. Bowell's connection with important public enterprises is but gathered his important connection with industrial and commercial movements. He was for many years president of the West Hastings Agricultural Society, and vice-president of the Agricultural and Arts Association of Ontario; president of the Hastings Mutual Fire Insurance Company, the Farren Manufacturing Company, and the Dominion Safe-Gas Company, and president of the Belleville and North Hastings Railway; and was captain of No. 1 company of the 15th battalion while on service during the Fenian troubles, and subsequently major in the 49th battalion of Volunteer rifles. In 1863, Mr.

fe tl th cf

m N

ur W

18

the

Μa

opj

pai

but He

ing

sul

pul for

Rie

Scot Mar

part

tion

Inde

Spea The

tion, the r

mem

of th

speec

alway

the r

Bowell contested the north riding of the County of Hastings for parliamentary honours, as the nominee of the Conservative convention, but refusing to join in the cries against the incorporation of Roman Catholic institutions and what was then termed French domination, which were made test questions at the time, he was defeated. In 1867, Mr. Bowell again presented himself to the electors of North Hastings, stated his views with that calm reasonableness which has always characterized his utterances, and he was elected. He entered parliament therefore at Confederation, but took no very prominent part in the debates of the House for the first two or three years. His first success in parliament was in his criticism of a measure introduced by the late Sir George E. Cartier, then minister of Militia, for the purpose of reorganizing the militia force of Canada. Upon this occasion his practical experience and knowledge of the requirements of the volunteer force had its effect upon the House, he having succeeded in defeating the government upon the details of the bill three times during one sitting of the House. Being an independent thinker, he was not always in accord with the leaders of his party, having voted against them upon many important measures, notably, the Nova Scotia better terms resolutions, and upon the motion for the ratification of the Washington treaty. He was re-elected in 1872, and consequently in parliament, when the Macdonald government fell, and Mr. Mackenzie succeeded to power. It was in opposition that Mr. Bowell took a leading part, not only in the business of the House, but upon the most important committees. He inaugurated and conducted the proceedings in the House of Commons which resulted in his moving the motion for the expulsion of Louis David Riel, member elect for Provencher, Manitoba, for the part he, Riel, had taken in ordering the shooting of Scott, a prisoner of his during the revolt in Manitoba in 1879. He also took an active part in bringing before the House the question of the violation of the provisions of the Independence of Parliament Act, by its Speaker, and by a number of its members. The motion which he made upon this question, though defeated, led subsequently to the resignation of Mr. Speaker Anglin, one member of the cabinet, and four members of the House. He did not make many speeches, but whenever he arose the House always listened, for Mr. Bowell had gained the reputation of being a man who had,

n the

Bowell

Can-

ibited

ne is

ieved

lways

eldom

rprise

void-

iasm,

ganiz-

n, in

B, in

gov-

rifles.

ter of

, and 1866.

pren-

e up

onsi-

con-

nada.

Belle-

ews-

ocia-

ider-

that

ip of

ville.

man;

the

ario

n in

and 880-

e he

ine,

Tri-

rld,

the

B76.

or-

and

ny

first, something to say, and second, a reasonable and a satisfactory way of saying it. He has been successful at every election since. On the 19th of October, 1878, upon the resumption of power of the Conservative party, Mr. Bowell was called to the Privy Council, and sworn in minister of Customs. Sir John Macdonald had learned to appreciate the level-headedness, and practical qualities, and the sound judgment of the member for North Hastings. It is pleasing to one to sit in the galleries and watch Mr. Bowell answer questions or reply to objections. Under no circumstances, nor by any pressure or irritation, can he be moved to haste or ill-temper; but he sits there, disregarding feeling, and doing what he considers to be his duty as a minister of the crown. Mr. Bowell married in 1847, Harriet Louisa Moore, eldest daughter of Jacob G. Moore, Belleville, by whom he has nine children, five of whom are living.

Jeffery, Joseph, London, Ontario, was born on the 28th September, 1829, at Ipswich, Suffolk, England. He was a son of Joseph Jeffery, by his wife Mary Ann, Joseph whose maiden name was Godbold. Jeffery, junior, received a careful educational training at private schools in his native Ipswich, and when he had attained his sixteenth year (1845), emigrated to Canada, taking up his abode a few years afterwards in London. Here he engaged in business pursuits, and his undertakings were rewarded with a very fair measure of success. In 1865 he opened an exchange office, dealing principally in American money, bonds, etc., but retired after a successful business of a few years. In the fall of 1870, Mr. Jeffery was offered by F. Wolferstan Thomas, general manager of the Molsons Bank, the position of manager of the branch to be opened in London. This offer he accepted, and still holds the position. On October 13, 1870. holds the position. On October 13, 1870, Mr. Jeffery, with Edward Harris and some other gentlemen, established the Ontario Loan and Debenture Company, and Mr. Jeffery was made president. In 1874, Edward Harris and Mr. Jeffery established the London Life Insurance Company, and Mr. Jeffery was also made president of this company. Mr. Jeffery married, on the 28th December, 1853, Augusta Ann, daughter of James Haley. In religion Mr. Jeffery is an adherent of the Baptist church. In business and financial circles his judgment is considered to be very superior, and in times of rush and excitement he is a very safe man, possessing the quality of being able to re-

Coyne, James Henry, Barrister-atlaw, St. Thomas, was born at St. Thomas, Ont., October 3rd, 1849. He is a grandson of Henry Coyne, who, emigrating from Belfast, Ireland, in 1810, settled for a few years on the banks of the Hudson river, and then, attracted by the glowing reports of the Talbot settlement in Upper Canada, removed thither in 1817, and took up a grant of land in the township of Dunwich, where he resided until his death in 1852. He brought up a large family, and his numerous descendants are now to be found in many places in the western peninsula of Ontario, and in His fourth son, William, was Manitoba. born in Duchess county, New York, in 1816, and was but a few months old when the family removed to Dunwich. He married, in 1846, Christina, daughter of Daniel Patterson, a native of Argyleshire, who had come to the Talbot settlement about the year 1819, taken up land in Aldborough, but after a few years succumbed to fever. Daniel Patterson's descendants are numerous in Aldborough and the adjoining townships of Orford and Dunwich, and include many of the prosperous farmers of the old Talbot district. Wm Coyne resides at St. Thomas, where he has been a prominent merchant for nearly fifty years. his early recollections is one of a visit to the site of the City of London (then known as the Forks of the Thames) at the time when there was not a single house erected, and it was necessary to follow a blaze in order to find one's way through the woods, where is now a city of 30,000 inhabitants. H. Coyne is the second son of William and Christina Coyne, and was educated at the common school in his native town, until he was eleven years old, when he passed into the Grammar school, then under the charge of Mr. (now Rev.) Nelson Burns, M.A. At fourteen years of age, he matriculated in the University of Toronto, carrying off the first general proficiency scholarship, and first class honours in classics, mathematics, French, etc. Owing to his extreme youth, he did not enter University College until 1867. He devoted himself chiefly to classics and modern languages, and after gaining numerous scholarships and prizes at the university and college during his under-graduate course, graduated in 1870, carrying off the Prince of Wales' prize for general proficiency, the gold medal in moderns, a silver medal in classics, the French essay prize, and first-class honours in history and ethnology. In 1884 he was elected by his fellow-graduates a member of the Senate of the university. After graduating, the subject of this sketch entered the law office of Colin Macdougall, Q.C., at St. Thomas; interrupted his law studies for a year to take charge of the Cornwall High school, where he was headmaster during the year 1871; returned then to Mr. Macdougall's office for a year; and then removed to To. ronto, where he served for two years in the office of Bethune & Hoyles. He was admitted to the bar in Michaelmas term. 1874, passing first without an oral, both as barrister and as attorney; and at once entered into partnership with his former principal, Mr. Macdougall, at St. Thomas. The law firm of Macdougall & Coyne existed until 1880, when it was dissolved. Shortly afterwards, Mr. Coyne entered into his present partnership with J. Mann, under the firm name of Coyne & Mann. During the Fenian excitement of 1866, Mr. Coyne joined the St. Thomas Rifles, and served during three campaigns in that year: first at London, during March, when some thousands of regulars and volunteers were brigaded there; then at Port Stanley and Sarnia in June; and finally in camp at Thorold in August, where he acted as quartermaster-sergeant to the Provisional battalion of volunteers, who were then brigaded with regulars and other volunteers under Wolseley. The following year, he joined the famous University company of the Queen's Own Rifles, of which he remained a member until his graduation. Mr. Coyne is a member of the St. Andrew's Society of St. Thomas, and after holding the positions successively of second and first vice president, became president of it during the year 1883 and 1884. He has always taken a great interest in the politics of his country, and has filled various offices in the Reform party, to which he belongs. In the year 1882, he was president of the East Elgin Reform Association. He was a member of the great Reform convention, at Toronto, in 1883, and was selected to speak to one of the resolutions passed by the convention. He also attended the Young Liberal convention of 1885, as a delegate. Mr. Coyne is a member of the St. Thomas Free Public Library Board. He was also a member of its predecessor, the Mechanics' Institute board. In 1876, owing to a serious illness, he was obliged to give up work for a year and a half. Eleven months of this vacation were devoted to a visit to E urope. Visiting in succession, England, Scotland, Ireland, Belgium, the Rhine, Switzerland, France and Italy, he not only recovered his health, but was able to acq fords the st month at Mei Italy. Matild Bowes. four ch Chi County born i of Pee grand Empire rence w can colo the bre settled: Alexand regimen part in wego an note. 1 Sir Ale and expl far north was a pro tor in th mother D. MacD in 1849. from the of the E were left. youngest. education he entere ville, whe Proceedin the emplo salesman, 1852, whe himself in general m duce, etc. Brampton, Peleg Ho the head d first in pa Elliott, a Matthew E tired in 188 the sole cor wise retain the C.P.R.

quarry at

During the branch of th

Mr.

ville.

to acquire those advantages which travel affords to those who have rightly profited by the studies of earlier years. Nearly six months of the winter and spring were spent at Mentone, and in the cities of northern Italy. Mr. Coyne married, Nov. 21, 1877, Matilda, third daughter of the late J. G. Bowes, of Toronto. Their family consists of four children.

four children. Chisholm, Kenneth, M.P.P. for the County of Peel, Ontario, Brampton, was born in the township of Toronto, County of Peel, on the 17th March, 1830. His grand parents on both sides were United Empire loyalists, and crossed the St. Lawrence with the MacDonalds from the American colonies in 1776, a few days previous to the breaking out of the revolution, and settled in the County of Glengarry, Canada. Alexander Chisholm served in the Glengarry regiment during the war of 1812, and took part in the battles at Chrysler's Farm, Oswego and Ogdensburg, and others of less note. His grand uncle was the celebrated Sir Alexander Mackenzie, the discoverer and explorer of the Mackenzie river in the far north. His father, Alexander Chisholm, was a prominent farmer and lumber operator in the County of Peel. Our subject's mother was Mary MacDonell, daughter of D. MacDonell, of Glengarry, and she died in 1849. This lady received a grant of land from the government in the neighbourhood of the Eldorado mills. A family of six were left, of which Kenneth was the second youngest. The lad obtained a very fair education, but at a somewhat early age he entered, as clerk, in a store at Churchville, where he remained for two years. Proceeding to Brampton, he entered into the employ of the late Peleg Howland as salesman, remaining with this firm until 1852, when he commenced a business for himself in the town of Milton, dealing in general merchandise, including grain, produce, etc. After a time he returned to Brampton, and purchased the business of Peleg Howland; and has continued at the head of the establishment ever since, first in partnership with the late John Elliott, and afterwards with his son, Matthew Elliott. The latter gentleman retired in 1885, and the business is now under the sole control of Mr. Chisholm. He likewise retains the Eldorado mills on the the C.P.R., and the pink-brown stone quarry at the Forks of the Credit river. During the partnership the firm had a branch of the Brampton business at Orange-

Mr. Chisholm was postmaster at

Brampton for nearly twenty years, but resigned on entering parliamentary life. was councilman for Brampton, and was reeve for twelve years almost in succession, and was elected eleven out of the twelve by acclamation. For three years, in succession he was warden of the county. In 1873, he became a candidate for the County of Peel in the Provincial parliament, and was elected; and has been elected since four times in succession. Chisholm is a shareholder and director, and vice-president of the Haggart Manufacturing Company, and is a director of the Central Bank of Canada. In politics he is an adherent of Mr. Blake in general policy, and a follower of Mr. Mowat in Ontario. His religious convictions are those of Methodism. He has been twice married: first to Margaret, daughter of the late John Elliott, at one time his partner in business. This lady died in 1863, leaving one daughter. He married again in 1865, Mary Ann, daughter of the late Joseph McMaster, of Beamsville, by whom he has four children—three sons and one daughter. K. Alexander and Douglas H. are employed in their father's establishment. Mr. Chisholm was one of the promoters of the Credit Valley Railway, now part of the C.P.R. system, and was appointed by the Ontario House one of the trustees for the payment of the debt of the Credit Valley road when it amalgamated with the C.P.R. He was also appointed one of the directors of the Ontario and Sault Ste. Marie Railway. It is only necessary to read the record of Mr. Chisholm's career to conclude that he is a man of far more than ordinary enterprise and ability, for the people have tried him in almost every public capacity, and found him capable and faithful to his trust.

He is a useful member of the legislature.

Mulock, William, M.A. M.P for North York, Toronto, Ont., and Vice-Chancellor of the University of Toronto, was born at Bond Head, in the township of West Gwillimbury, County of Simcoe, on the 19th of January, 1843. He is the second son of the late Thomas H. Mulock, M.D., T.C.D., who was a native of Dublin, Ireland. Thomas H. Mulock married Mary, daughter of John Cawthra, formerly of Yorkshire, England, who settled in Newmarket, and was elected a reform member in the Legislative Assembly of Upper Canada, for the County of Simcoe in 1829. He was first sent to school at the Newmarket Grammar school, and having completed his studies there, he entered the University of Toronto. In modern languages he was gold medalist; and in 1863 he took his Arts degree. Out of college a profession had to be chosen, and the law held out the strongest lure to him. As a law student, Mr. Mulock displayed the same industry and clearheadedness that he did in college. In 1868 he was called to the bar, after having passed a very creditable examination, being at the head of the class. His legal talents were regarded of such high order that he was for four years an examiner in, and one of the lecturers upon, Equity, for the Law Society at Toronto. In 1873 he was elected a member of the Senate of the University of Toronto, continuing senator from 1873 to 1878. He was, in 1881, 1882, and 1884 elected vice-chancellor of the University. He has been connected prominently with several public enterprises, and it may be mentioned that he is president of the Farmers' Loan and Savings Company, and the Victoria Rolling Stock Company. He is likewise a director of the Toronto General Trusts Company. Up till these late years he had shown very little desire to be connected with political life; but he had always taken a deep interest in public events. A number of influential friends pressed him to allow himself to be put in nomination in the Reform interest for an Ontario constituency, and after some deliberation, he consented. North York was chosen, a riding that had been represented by a conservative. The contest was very sharp, but Mr. Mulock created an excellent impression wherever he appeared. He did not go about foaming at the mouth, in the abominable way that is the fashion, upon the majority of meetings in Canada at general elections; but he made his statements in the manner of a dignified gentleman who has facts to substantiate all he affirms, and convictions to justify it. He was successful, and his presence in the House of Commons has been an important gain. He is a clear, logical, and convincing reasoner, and while he de-lights those of his own political views, he always compels the attention, and wins the admiration of his opponents.

Young, James, Clerk of Stationery, to the Dominion Government, Ottawa, was born at Lochee, now part of Dundee, Scotland, on the 12th February, 1829. He is a son of John Young, flaxdresser, who was foreman or manager of one of the large factories of that town. He was a man remarkable for his endeavours to ameliorate the condition of the women and children employed in factories, and was one of the few who led the agitation in favour of the first Factories Act, which put a limit to the hours of labour and gave operatives, for the first time, a legal right to certain hours of leisure. His mother was Margaret Smith, who was descended from the Stuarts of Logierait, in Perthshire, and a near relation of the founder of Stuart's Hospital, in Edinburgh. James was educated at Dundee, receiving an ordinary Scotch education, including a study of Latin and French. At the age of thirteen he was entered as apprentice to the bookbinding trade in Dundee, and served his time there and in Edinburgh. 1851 he commenced work-a-day life in Dun. dee as a bookbinder, which business was successfully carried on under the firm name of Young & Brechin until 1857, when, being in precarious health, he relinquished his interest to Mr. Brechin and sailed for America, chiefly in search of health; but, arriving at Toronto, on the 21st October, 1857, he was offered employment as a finished in the office of the Queen's Printer, and remained for a time in several capacities in Toronto, Quebec, and Ottawa, until the destruction of Mr. Desbarat's establishment by fire in January, 1869. The excellence of the higher grades of work turned out, and the improvements made in the general working of the establishment, for some years had attracted much attention in influential quarters, and the government, having determined on the establishment of the Stationery office under the act of 1868, appointed Mr. Young to the position he now He organized the holds, in March, 1869. business, first under the Minister of Finance and Accountant of Contingencies, and from 1871 under the Secretary of State. The office has been a success from its inception, and has, as the public accounts will show, been the means of saving great sums of money to the public of Canada. His appointment was not alone popular, but it was an extremely important one; and Mr. Young has the satisfaction of reflecting that choice was made of him, not through the pulling of political wires, but by reason of his thorough fitness for the position. We regret to say that too close application to duty has been telling severely of late (1885) against Mr. Young's health; and he was obliged towards the close of the year to seek amelioration in the bracing air of the mountainous districts of Colorado. He has been much impressed by the rapid growth and the civilization of the cities in Colorado, and writing to his friend, George Maclean Rose, from the use of the color of the col

or

de

he

tio

I t

fro

resi

can

find

som

doc

half

that

joy Si

peg,

in N

the :

migr

lands

farm

ever.

fortu

at th

rapid

wagg

Oxfor

which

subje

Oxfor

1864,

of Br

the 11

again,

daugh

more,

Co. Si

bering

he wer

Denver, he says :- " The doctor tkinks I am getting along very well, as everyone coming from below must needs get accustomed to the altitude, 5,203 feet above sea level, and the rarefied air. Notwithstanding this height, Denver lies in a basin, or slight depression of the surrounding prairie. The Rocky mountains are around two sides of us, the west and south-west; and we can see a range of one hundred and fifty miles. they say, on a clear day. A most magnifi-This is a marvelcent scene it is. They say that the lous city for its age. most ancient native is only fourteen years old, and the population is claimed to be seventy thousand at least. The foundation of the city's wealth is the surrounding mines. The great smelting works are here, and the ores coming in, and the metals going out, form its trade, and the results are seen in all directions. Thousands of splendid residences, grand public buildings, fine shops of every sort, spacious churches, are to be seen here; and there are doctors past enumeration, to attend to invalids from everywhere. I think I have met several dozens of invalids from Ontario already, (a great many are residents.) About half of the population came here, it is said, for health's sake, and finding they could live, remained, got into some business, and are now doing well. My doctor, an Ontarian, told me that about half the people are living on one lung, and that not very good; yet they live, and enjoy life, too.

e few

hours

first

first

isure.

was.

it, in

f the urgh.

iving

ing a

thir-

o the

rved

In

Dùn-

ame

eing

s in-

ner-

riv-

857,

she

and

ties

ntil

tab-

ex-

 \mathbf{ned}

en-

bme

flu-

ing

ta-

apow

he

ofofofofofpas r. at ie of e

Sutherland, Hugh McKay, Winnipeg, M.P. for Selkirk, Manitoba, was born in New London, Prince Edward Island, on the 22nd February, 1843. His family had migrated to the island in 1816 from Sutherlandshire, Scotland, his father engaging in farming at New London. In 1849, however, Mr. Sutherland resolved to try his fortune in Upper Canada, a province which at that time was in high repute and making rapid strides in settlement. By boat and waggon he made his way to the County of Oxford, and there took up school teaching, which he followed for many years. subject of this sketch resided likewise in Oxford, and married, on the 10th February, 1864, Mary, daughter of Alexander Dickie, of Brant, Ontario; but this lady died on the 11th of October, 1875. He married again, on the 10th December, 1878, May, daughter of the Hon. R. T. Banks, of Baltimore, U.S. In 1868 he removed to Orillia, Co. Simcoe, and carried on extensive lumbering operations until 1873, in which year he went to the North-West, and became superintendent of Dominion Government Public Works until 1873. In this year the great Canadian North-West was holding out strong inducement to capital and enterprise, and our subject resolved to remain in the country, taking up his abode in Winnipeg. Here he engaged in a number of enterprises, having accumulated considerable capital in the east, but he chiefly concerned himself in lumber operations, into which he entered upon an extensive scale. Mr. Sutherland has all the wise caution of his countrymen, but he has also a spirit of the most active enterprise; and added to these two excellent qualities, he has splendid business ability. It is not to be wondered at that a generous measure of success waited upon his undertakings. He next began to give considerable attention to politics, and the people in the prairie province saw in him all the requisites of an excellent representative. What he has achieved in commerce will be understood when we state that he is president of the Winnipeg & Hudson's Bay Railway Company, and is one of its chief promoters, and has already spent much time and capital in developing it. He was one of the original promoters, and became vice-president of the Manitoba South Western Railway, the first local railway in Manitoba; he was the first to bring the extensive coal fields of the North-West into prominence, by developing the Souris coal mine in 1879, and floating coal down in barges 900 miles by water to Winnipeg; he is president of the British and North-West Colonization Company; president of the Prince Albert Colonization Company; and he is president of the Rainy Lake Lumber Company. He was an unsuccessful candidate for East Simcoe in the Legislative Assembly of Ontario in 1875, but was returned to the Dominion parliament for Selkirk at the last general election. He is an extremely useful member of the House, and his judg-ment is held in high respect. He is a member of the English church.

Birrell, George S., London.—The subject of this sketch was born in the City of London, Ontario, in 1842, and is the eldest son of the late John Birrell, founder of the well-known wholesale dry goods house of John Birrell & Co., in that city. On the death of his father, in 1875, George became the head of the firm, and has by his excellent management and business thrift, maintained and enlarged its connections, until it is now one of the largest and most successfully conducted and pushing houses in the dry goods trade in Western Ontario. Although almost a devotee to business, Mr. Birrell gives a good deal of time to municipal affairs. Some years ago, when urged by many of his fellow-citizens to join them in an attempt to put to rights many grievances which afflicted the body politic in the city council, he readily gave his consent, and was elected as alderman for Ward No. 1, and has been elected by the same ward several times since. In the city council he has served as chairman on various important committees; and this year (1885) he is water commissioner, having declined the proffered honour of the mayoralty. Mr. Birrell was married, in 1868, to Alice Perry, of Utica, in the State of New York, and has two children, a daughter and He is a Mason, and has attained the 33 degrees; he is president of the Masonic Temple Company in London, and is likewise president of the North American St. George Union. In every respect, taking thrift, ability, push and integrity into account, he may be regarded as an honoured citizen and a representative Canadian.

Casgrain, Charles Eugene, C.M., M.D., Windsor, Ont., was born at Quebec, on the 3rd August, 1825. He is a son of the Honourable Charles E. Casgrain and of Eliza Ann Baby. The former was a member of the Legislative Assembly before the union, and a member of the special council created after the rebellion. He was made a lieut-colonel, unattached, in 1839 for his loyalty during the rebellion, and assistance given by him to the troops during their passage from Fredericton to Quebec. Dr. Casgrain is a brother of the Abbé H. R. Casgrain, a French-Canadian writer of great repute, and of P. B. Casgrain, M.P., for By his mother he is descended from a family whose members were among the first to emigrate to Detroit in the begining of the eighteenth century. The Hon. James Baby, maternal grandfather, who was speaker of the Legislative Council of Canada, is still well remembered in Toronto. Charles Eugene Casgrain received a complete classical education at the College of St. Anne's, Quebec, and his medical education at McGill College, Montreal, where he graduated in 1851 as master of surgery and doctor of medicine. He was a student of the late Doctor Wolfred Nelson of Montreal. He began practising his profession in Detroit, Mich., in 1851, but removed to Sandwich in 1856, at the earnest request of prominent citizens of that place. He was then appointed coroner for the County of

Essex and jail surgeon; and both appointments are still held by him. When the Essex battalion was formed in 1860, he was gazetted captain of the Sandwich company; and he was afterwards surgeon to the troops stationed in Windsor and Sandwich during the Fenian raids in 1861 to 1864. Dr. Casgrain was elected a municipal councillor. by acclamation, for the town of Windsor in 1874, and served two terms. He has been a member of the Board of School Trustees for the last eighteen years. He became first president of the St. John the Baptist Society of Essex at its inception in 1864, and is still an active member of the same. He was re-elected general president of all the French-Canadian societies of Essex in 1883, and as such presided at the great French. Canadian convention held in Windsor on the 24th June of the same year. He is a strong Liberal-Conservative and supporter of Sir John A. Macdonald; and is chairman of the Liberal-Conservative Association of North Essex. He is a devoted Roman Catholic; and in 1884, in consideration of services rendered to the church, was created by His Holiness, Pope Leo XIII., a knight of the order of the Holy Sepulchre. He married in 1851, Charlotte Mary, daughter of Thomas Chase and Catherine Adelaide Caroline Bailly de Messein, of Detroit, Michigan, formerly of Quebec. His eldest. son, Thomas Chase Casgrain, is professor of criminal law at Laval University, Quebec, and was one of the council for the Crown in the Queen vs. Louis Riel and other rebel leaders at Regina, in July and August, 1885. Dr. Casgrain practices medicine in Windsor, Ontario, with another of his sons, Henry Raymond Casgrain, M.D., who was surgeon major in charge of Field Hospital No. 2, at Moose-Jaw, during the late rebellion. He has always enjoyed to the fullest extent the confidence of his fellow-citizens of all denominations. He was on several occasions urged to offer himself for parliamentary honours, but declined, owing to his extensive professional engagements.

H vost of to tina

ne

a s tu

pr tha

Md

and

wh

in 1

A.,

Mo

Pau

trea

he v tinu

resig

In

past

Chui

his

sight

labor

edito.

five y

grega

mem

Colleg

Congr

the U

Wallin

23rd o

he en

minist

ligious

Herts,

before

due de

entered

ful Ci

which

tional

four fe

early ev

est he

of the

the mea

the facul

in a ter

Nottingh

By

Jackson, Rev. Samuel N., M.D., Congregational minister, Kingston, Ontario, was born in 1838, in the township of Brome, Lower Canada, where his grandfather, the Rev. John Jackson, M.A., settled in 1815. His father, H. N. Jackson, J.P., was a farmer, and proposed bringing up his three sons in the same pursuit, but as they reached the estate of manhood, they chose professions, and the oldest, Joseph A., is now a leading medical practitioner in Manchester, N.H., while the youngest, J.

Henry, is a medical professor in the University of Vermont. The second son, the subject of this sketch, when eighteen years of age, went to Nebraska, then a new territory in the far west, where he spent some time at the publishing profession—being for a time joint editor and proprietor of a newspaper there. Possessing from his youth a strong inclination for the ministry, he returned home, and, after further preliminary preparation, entered college to qualify for that calling. He pursued his studies in McGill University in the faculties of arts and medicine, and in the Congregational College, affiliated with that university, where he completed his course in divinity in 1866. In the same year he married Mary A., eldest daughter of William Parkyn, of While a student he supplied St. Paul's Union Church, Cote St. Paul, Montreal, and, after finishing his college career, he was ordained as its first pastor. He continued in this charge until 1871, when he resigned to accept a call to the pastorate of the Zion Congregational Church, Toronto. In 1877 he received an invitation to the pastoral charge of the First Congregational Church in Kingston, whereupon he resigned his Toronto pastorate, and took the oversight of the church with which he has since laboured. At one time Dr. Jackson was editor of the Canadian Independent, and for five years he compiled and edited the Congregational Year Book. He is a lecturer and member of the faculty of the Congregational College, and the secretary of the Canada Congregational Missionary Society.

oint-

1 the

was

any;

the

wich

Dr.

llor.

r in

been

tees

first

So-

and He

the 383, ich-

on

is a

ter

air-

ion

an

of

ted

ht

He

ter

de

it.

est

of

el

n

Bygrave, Hilary, Rev., Pastor of the Unitarian Church, Toronto, was born at Wallington, Hertfordshire, England, on the 23rd of January, 1848. Vory early in life he entertained thoughts of entering the ministry, and was strengthened in his religious views by Rev. John Medway, of Herts, where Mr. Bygrave's family removed before he was fifteen years of age. After due deliberation the subject of this sketch entered Nottingham College, in the beautiful City of Nottingham, an institution which trains young men for the Congregational ministry. Here, in company with four fellow students, Mr. Bygrave gave early evidence of how thoroughly in earnest he was by organizing a mission in one of the vilest parts of the city, which was the means of reclaiming many from vice, and through which its promoters acquired the faculty of speaking the mother tongue in a terse and a fluent way. On leaving Nottingham he proceeded to London, and completed his studies at Hackney College, one of the oldest, if not the oldest, seats of learning amongst the Nonconformists. was ordained by the Kentish Congregational Association of Ministers at Belvedere, Kent, a beautiful suburb of London, in May, 1871. Here the young minister's future seemed hopeful and promising in the extreme, surrounded as he was by a congregation of wealthy and cultivated people. But he had left college in broken health, and in less than two years his strength failed completely, and he felt it his duty to resign his In a letter to Mr. Bygrave, from the secretary of the church, dated October, 27th, 1872, the following passage occurs, referring to the meeting called to consider the resignation of the pastor: -"I may say that great emotion was felt by all present, in many the deep feeling of the heart prevented the expression of the lips, showed itself even in strong men by the bursting sob and the overflowing eye. Think of the noble work you are leaving, and come back to us again when you have rested a while, with a heart more than ever given to the work of your Lord." Mr. Bygrave was ordered by his physicians to cease studying and take a long rest or a sea voyage, and as he had often wished to visit America, he determined to go there. His good people at Belvedere gave him a well-filled purse, which made his proposed trip possible, but upon the distinct understanding that this in no way bound him to return to them unless he was so minded. landed at Boston, after a long and stormy passage of nineteen days, in December, 1872, and soon fell in love with his new surroundings. It was not long before returning health made it possible for him to undertake occasional preaching, and in April, 1873, he was unanimously called to the pastorate of the Congregational Church at Boxford, Mass., which, however, he declined. This circumstance did not, however, diminish his popularity in Boxford, and never a summer has passed since then that he has not spent many happy days there among his numerous friends and admirers. In May, 1873, he was called to the Congregational Church, East Milton, a pleasant suburb of Boston, where he remained for two years. It was here that he began fighting doubts about the Trinity, the Bible and Everlasting Punishment. Finding himself wandering farther away from the orthodox standards, he relinquished his work and fellowship in the Orthodox church, and sought and found a more congenial home among the Unitarians. In June, 1875, he was called to the Unitarian Church, at Hudson, Mass., where he laboured with great success for four years. The impression that Mr. Bygrave made in Hudson may be indeed of by the following from the judged of by the following from Pioneer of that place :- "The Rev. Hilary Bygrave's departure from our midst will be a great loss to this community, especially to those of an age most susceptible to moulding influences, because of his interest in religious and secular education, his refined and literary taste, and the purity and inspiration of the letter and spirit of his Mr. Bygrave was twice called to Dover, N.H., after leaving Hudson, but declined on both occasions. About this time the Unitarian Church in Toronto was seeking a pastor, and at the earnest solicitation of his friend, G. W. Fox, assistant secretary of the American Unitarian Association, who felt that an Englishman might best serve the cause here. Mr. Bygrave accepted the charge, and preached his first sermon on the first Sunday in December, 1880. Since his arrival in Toronto, Mr. Bygrave has done much to build up his church, and has endeared himself to every member of his congregation. Naturally he has had a hard road to travel, being opposed so strongly by orthodoxy. The other churches look with disfavour upon Unitarianism, and they are as loath to grant a hearing to its ministers, as Rome was to give ear to Martin Luther. But Rome was obliged to listen to him, and the world also heard, and the work that Monk did is felt to-day. Mr. Bygrave's preaching is characterized by great fervour, exceedingly correct English, and word painting which oftentimes rises to grandeur. clearly and lucidly plucking out the heart of a mystery and striking right home when he wants to, he is by long odds without a peer in the city. He is a speaker to whom it is a pleasure to listen, and it seems sad and strange that owing to prejudice, or bigotry, or ignorance, his learning, gifts and eloquence should be confined within his own church Mr. Bygrave is well versed in general literature, has a fine classic taste, and is a frequent contributor of poems and prose articles to leading journals in New York, Boston and London, England. Mr. Bygrave is thoroughly familiar with the results of modern science, as taught by Huxley, Darwin, Tyndall and Hæckel, and is in full sympathy with the evolutionary philosophy of Herbert Spencer. The following are some of the leading principles of Unitarianism, or the Liberal Faith, as set forth by Mr. Bygrave, in a printed lecture of which a thousand copies have been distributed within a short time:—"Freedom of thought is the first thing the Unitarian Church stands for. We see no virtue in blind belief. We claim for ourselves, and accord to others, full liberty of thought, inquiry and speech. Unitarians are proud to call themselves the Protestants of the Pro-We believe in the Unity of God. We find no warrant for the Trinity, either in reason or in Scripture. In the exercise of this intellectual freedom we came to hold a rational view of the Bible. Studying the Scriptures without a bias, with free, untrammelled minds, we see that the Bible is not all of one piece, not all of equal value, not all pitched in the same high key. Much of the Bible is clay, but the pure gold of truth, the vital and vitalizing word of God is there, only we must search for it as for all else that is precious, beautiful and good. The Bible is like a great river of God that has come down to us, coloured somewhat by all the clays, loaded with some sediment of all the soils and sands through which it has passed. So, too, we assert the Fatherhood of God. Our church stands for God's love, universal, free and unconditioned. know not of, and believe not in God's hate, God's wrath, God's vengeance. The Uniterian Church stands for the real humanity of Jesus. We do not believe that he was God, or a third of God, but human like ourselves, moved and inspired by God's spirit dwelling in him, as we are when we follow the lead of God. From this is but a step to the next idea the Uniterian Church stands for, namely, faith in man, faith in man's essential nobleness and capacity for We do not believe that man is a good. helpless worm, or that the human soul is totally depraved. We discard the theologic and accept the scientific theory of the origin and history of man. Lastly, the Unitarian Church stands for the hope of eternal life and blessedness for all human souls. We look for no special and private salvation. We hope for the universal blessedness of every creature throughout all the world. We believe the love of God is strong enough, and patient enough to bring all souls home at last; that there will be no failures in the long-run, that all souls will some day come to be and do what God desires. In short, our fundamental principles may be stated thus: - (1) The Fatherhood of God. (2) The brotherhood of men. (3) The widest liberty of thought in matters of doctrine and belief. Its aims—To live a thai this star esse mer The has divi cept the But in the

Rev

on t den

quot

beti

He is pray would of rein new hat hear alleg etern lief is child drop good Hell consi

scien

death

every

stree ship the 14 ner as who States ship, till the Abner to the settled when part o site w for a father lumber the su better life; to do good to others; and to reach after all that is better and higher than ourselves." There is no doubt of it, this is a grand platform for any church to stand upon, and it embodies the very essence of the greatest of all command-ments, to love God and one's neighbour. The doctrine of Everlasting Punishment has been repudiated by so many prominent divines of all churches that a refusal to accept it no longer attracts attention. And the other changes may be even at the door. But at present the Unitarian Church stands in the advance guard of Christian thought. Rev. Mr. Bygrave, in his masterly address on the "Hell of the Past," some time ago, denounced the idea of eternal torment, and quoted Tennyson's lines :- re of

dis-

dom

arian

ie in

and

t, in-

id to

Pro-

God.

ther

rcise

hold

the

an-

le is

lue.

luch

d of

God

for ood.

that

t by

t of

has

ood

bve.

We

ate,

ni-

nity

like

od's

we

but

 \mathbf{r} ch

for

s a

is

gin ian

We

hn.

ld.

ng all

rill

"That not one soul shall be destroyed, Nor cast as rubbish to the void, When God has made the pile complete."

He further said that if he were making a prayer he would pray for unbelief, and would say, "Oh Lord, let my divine faculty of reason, that lifts me above all creatures in nearness to Thyself, help me to disbelieve whatever is untrue to Thee. Incline my heart to deny all hate and vengeance as alleged of Thee. From the doctrine of the eternal damnation of sinners, from the belief that since I began to speak to these children of Thine a million of souls have dropped into the outer darkness forever, good Lord deliver me." And as to "The Hell of the Future," he considered it would consist in the main of a remorseful conscience, although he believed that after death there would be a purifying process for every soul, the stripes for some being few and for others many.

Owen, Joseph Gardner, J. P., Streetsville, Ontario, was born in the township of Charlotteville, Norfolk county, on the 14th May, 1848. His parents were Abner and Melvina, daughter of Nichlos Holt, who came to Canada from the United States in 1825, settling in Toronto township, County of Peel, where they remained Mr. Owen was the son of till their death. Abner Owen, who was the son of Captain Abner Owen, an old U.E. loyalist, who came to the country after the war of 1812, and settled near the town of Simcoe, Norfolk, when Governor Simcoe passed through that part of the country. He obtained a mill site where now the town of Simcoe stands Mr. Owen's for a small consideration. father followed the life of a farmer and lumber merchant, and had a family of seven. the subject of this sketch being the third youngest. He resided until his death in the township of Charlotteville, Norfolk, and Mrs. Owen is still living in the old homestead. Joseph Gardner Owen was educated at the common schools, and at the age of sixteen entered the employ of Messrs. Gooderham & Worts, of Meadowvale, as clerk, where he remained for five years, when he proceeded to Streetsville, where he entered the employ of Messrs, Barber Bros. as manager. In this establishment he remained till 1879, when he concluded to begin business for himself. Accordingly in the same year he built a store and commenced his general mercantile operations in partnership with J. H. Paterson, continuing until 1881, when the association dissolved. In 1882 Mr. Owen again entered into partnership with Mr. William Andrews, with whom he remained until 1883, when Mr. Owen retired from mercantile life. He now entered-the business of general broker and real estate agent, which business he still con-We may say that in his latest occutinues. pation he has been more than successful. Besides the general office business, he is an auctioneer for the counties of Peel, York and Halton. In 1882 he was elected reeve of Streetsville, was re-elected in 1883, retiring in the present year (1885). In 1881 he was appointed a justice of the peace, and in 1883 was given the commissionership of the Queen's Bench. He has been chairman of the Streetsville Mechanics' Institute, and has been a member of the board for a number of years; and in 1883 was elected a director of the Credit Valley Railway. He is also a shareholder of the Central Bank of Canada; has been a director of the Agricultural Association of the County of Peel for some years; is a member of the Freemasons' order, and a chartered member of lodge River Park, No. 358, Streetsville, having been first junior warden of the same. He is likewise a chartered member of Streetsville lodge, No. 122, Oddfellows; and belongs to the A.O.U.W. He has been active in political work, and is a member of the Liberal Association of the County of Peel, and a member of the executive committee. His religious convictions are those of Methodism. He married on the 6th of August, 1884, Mary Amelia, youngest daughter of the late George Kingsmill, first Chief of Police, of Toronto, and one of the best known citizens of that place. He was captain in the Queen's Rangers during the rebellion of 1837, and died in 1853. She is also a sister of the late George R. Kingsmill, who at one time was connected with the Toronto Telegraph, the Toronto Mail, and the Ottawa Sun, and was afterwards emigration commissioner to England. Mr. Owen is a man of much broad public spirit, and he enjoys a generous measure of popularity in business life, as well as in social circles.

Dixon, B. Homer, K.N.L., eldest son of Thomas Dixon, K.N.L., K.L., was born in Amsterdam, March 10, 1819. He was created Knight of the Order of the Netherland's Lion. by King William the Third; and in 1862, he was appointed Consul-General of the Netherlands in Canada. He is of Scotch descent, the family name being Dickson; but his grandfather, Thomas Dickson, altered the spelling to Dixon, before he removed to the Netherlands, in 1788. There he invested in real estate, which, when the French revolution broke out, became unsaleable, and he was afraid to return home, apprehending that it would be confiscated as the property of an emi-When the French invaded the country, he was imprisoned, and only released upon the intercession of influential friends, who gave bonds that he would not leave the country. He died in Amsterdam in 1824, aged 85 years. His only son, Thomas Dixon, Knight of the Order of the Netherland's Lion, and of the Order of the Lily, in France, was born in 1781. During the first French revolution and empire he was once condemned to the guillotine, and thrice imprisoned. In 1816, he visited the United States, where he remained two years; and in 1818, married in Boston, Mass., Mary B., daughter of Benjamin Perrott Homer, of No. 37 Beacon street, and returned to Holland, where he had three sons, one of whom died a bachelor. a few years they returned to Boston, where he died in 1849, leaving two sons, the younger of whom, Fitz Eugene, married Catherine C., daughter of the Hon. George M. Dallas, vice-president of the U.S.A., and removed to Philadelphia; and one daughter, Harriette E. M., who married the late William H. Boulton, M.P., of the Grange, Toronto; and, secondly, Professor Goldwin Smith, D.C.L., of Oxford and Toronto. The subject of this memoir removed to Toronto, in 1858, and married Kate McGill, daughter of the Hon. Chief Justice Sir James B. Macaulay, C.B., who died without issue; and, secondly, in 1866, Frances Caroline, daughter of William B. Heward, son of Lieut-Colonel Stephen Heward, who commanded the Queen's Rangers during the war of 1812.

McIntyre, Alexander Fraser, Barrister, Ottawa, was born at Williamstown. in the County of Glengarry, on the 25th December, 1847. Our subject is a son of Daniel Eugene McIntyre, M.D., sheriff of the united Counties of Stormont. Dundas and Glengarry, and grandson of Captain James McIntyre, of the English merchant and marine. His mother Anne, was a daughter of Colonel the Hon. Alexander Fraser, who came to Canada as an officer in the Glengarry Fencibles, and who, upon the disband. ment of the regiment, settled in the County of Glengarry, which he represented in the legislature of Upper Canada from 1830 to 1839. He was then called to the Legislative Council of the province, and upon the union of the provinces in 1841, he became a member of the Legislative Council of United He died in 1853. Canada. Fraser McIntvre was educated at the Cornwall Grammar school, and at the University of McGill College, Montreal. Having completed his educational course, he began the study of law at Cornwall with the late James Bethune, Q.C., and afterwards removed to Toronto, where he became a student with James McLennan, Q.C., and the Hon. Edward Blake, Q.C. He was admitted to the bar in 1872, and began the practice of his profession at Cornwall, and his business growing rapidly, he formed a partnership with the present Judge Carman, of Cornwall, who became his junior partner. In the fall of 1875, looking for a wider professional field, he joined the law firm of Walker, McIntyre and Ferguson, at Ottawa. From 1875 until 1878 he was entrusted by the Ministers of Justice of the Mackenzie administration, Blake & Laflamme with the conduct of many important suits entered against the government in the Exchequer court; notably the cases brought by the Intercolonial contractors against the crown. In 1881 he became a partner in the law firm of Cockburn & McIntyre-the senior member being the Hon. James Cockburn, Q.C., the partnership continuing until the death of that gentleman in 1883, when our subject formed the present law firm of McIntyre & Lewis. Mr. McIntyre has been engaged probably more than any other lawyer in prosecuting the claims of government contractors, railway and others before the Exchequer and Supreme courts, and before arbitrators. He is solicitor of the Bank of Montreal, at Ottawa; of the Civil Service Building Society and other prominent institutions. Mr. McIntyre joined a volunteer company at Cornwall whilst a

H n o A ai fe el zi se O

Tε

Al

cei

in

the

cor

cor

in

der

tion

of

Mr

tole

VOC:

He

Ran

Gler

sens

polit

intel

may

To k

him,

frien

one (

men

one v

him,

friend

whose

lines, revers

he wi

is alw:

demni

matter

high a mere boy, in 1862; was elected ensign and lieutenant, served on the front for six months in 1866, and in the fall of that year was gazetted captain. He retired from the force in 1869. At the general election for the legislature of Ontario in 1875, Mr. McIntyre contested the borough of Cornwall with J.G. Snetsinger, who had represented the constituency in the preceding parliament. Mr. McIntyre represented the more advanced wing of the Liberal party of the riding (the Blakeites), whilst Mr. Snetsinger was the nominee of the personal and political friends of the late Hon. John Sandfield Macdonald. Although Mr. Snetsinger was a powerful antagonist, Mr. McIntyre succeeded in defeating him by a majority of five, but at an election ensuing upon petition, Mr. Snetzinger secured his seat by a majority of seven. Our subject contested the City of Ottawa for the Federal parliament, in conjunction with Dr. St. Jean, in the Liberal interest in 1882. Mr. McIntosh and Mr. Tassé being the Conservative candidates. Although unsuccessful, Mr. McIntyre received the largest liberal vote ever polled in that city. He was elected president of the Liberal Association of Ottawa for several consecutive terms; and at the Provincial convention of young liberals held at Toronto in September, 1885, he was elected president of the Ontario Young Liberal Association. He has been twice elected president of the St. Andrew's Society of Ottawa. Mr. McIntyre is a Presbyterian, but he is tolerant of all creeds, and as ardent an advocate of religious as of political liberty. He married in 1877, Helen, daughter of Ranald Sandfield Macdonald, of Lancaster, Glengarry. He is a Liberal in the fullest sense of the term, in English as in Canadian politics. Not now taking into account the intellectual qualities of Mr. McIntyre, we may speak a moment of his personal merits. To know the man is to admire and respect him, and to be at once, and for all, his friend. He has a large heart, and has not one of the little meannesses that belong to men of small character. In the words of one who has been thrown in contact with him, "he is generous, whole-souled, a warm friend who never forgets a favour; one whose character is formed on too large lines, to see with other feeling than pain, reverse come even to an enemy, and such he will have. Further, he is a man who is always averse to judging others or condemning their faults and failings, and as a matter of judgment, he has, perhaps, too high an idea of human nature. Again, he r, Bar-

stown,

e 25th

son of

eriff of

as and

James

nt and

ughter

, who

Glen-

band.

ounty

in the

830 to

lative

union

mem-

nited

ander

Corn-

ersity

com-

n the

ames

ed to

with

Ed-

b the

f his

ness

rship

orn-

In

pro-

a of awa.

by

nzie

vith

en-

 $\mathbf{E}^{\mathbf{x}}$.

ght the

the

83, aw is a liberal-minded man, a liberal in its best and broadest sense, politically, socially, or any way you take him. Both in his profession and in politics he is entirely free from that jealousy of excellence in others which we so often see in public or professional life, and is capable of thoroughly appreciating merit of any sort, even in a hostile quarter. There is no doubt that, personally, he is by far the most popular man in That city, of course, is a great Ottawa. conservative stronghold, one of the standard But if it be reserved to constituences. any one to pluck the plum out of the fire, that man will surely be Mr. McIntyre. He has a very wide acquaintance, not only through Ontario, but throughout the whole of Canada. Without seeking to disparage the political opponents of our subject, we may say that Mr. McIntyre's rejection at the polls was a great pity; and should the capital continue to remain true to its very worthy conservative representative, Mr. McIntosh, we consider it to be a duty of patriotism and of party to provide a constituency for Mr. McIntyre. In every way his character is the very highest, having upon it not a single blot, and we say only what every man who knows him believes, that he would confer the same adornment upon the enlarged public sphere as he has brought already to his professional and social life.

McRae, William Ross, Kingston, Ontario, was born in Strathpeffer, Rossshire, Scotland, on the 14th August, 1829. His father was Thomas McRae, and his mother was Jessie Ross. The McRaes are an old Highland family, having lived in the same dwelling for 270 years. The subject of this sketch was educated at the schools of Dingwall and Tain, his studies embracing the ordinary English branches. He emigrated to Canada in 1851, and settled in Kingston. In May, 1852, he married Margaret Isabella, daughter of Dr. Riddle, Edinburgh, Scotland. In the same year he entered the grocery business at Kingston, and has resided in that city ever since. From the very first, success seemed to wait upon his undertakings, and year by year his business grew till it has now assumed very large dimensions. But Mr. McRae has not confined his energies entirely to his mercantile concerns, but has taken a foremost place in the promotion of important public enterprises. He was at the head in establishing the Cotton mills in the City of Kingston, the Street Railway and the Car Works. He always has been a prominent Reformer, but he has never sought office of any kind. Mr. McRae has lent every assistance in his power to his party, and is the personal friend of many of the Reform leaders, and especially of the Hon. E. Blake and Hon. Alexander Mackenzie. He is a gentleman whose opinions regarding politics is held in high This year he was elected presrespect. ident of the Reform Association. Mr. Mc-Rae has visited his native place several times since settling in Canada, and while in England purchased equipment for the Kingston Cotton mill. He is a member of the Presbyterian faith, and a man whose character stands the very highest for integrity. Residence in Canada has not dampened his enthusiasm for his native land, for he is, above all other things, a Scotchman. He has a family of five boys and two girls living.

Barker, Captain Peter McGill. Barrister, Orangeville, was born at Markham. Ontario, in September, 1843. He is a son of Archd. Barker and Elizabeth Müller: Archd. Barker was a native of Dumfriesshire, Scotland, and came to this country in 1829, settling in Markham, where he married. The Müller family was German, and came from Maryland to Canada. Archibald Barker was an uncompromising party man; was engaged during the rebellion in defending Toronto, being intimately known to the older residents of that city. He was a member of the York Pioneers, and contested East York in 1854. He was a staunch Presbyterian, and a member of the Board of Trustees of Queen's College. Peter McGill Barker was educated at the Markham common and high schools; subsequently entering Toronto University, from which he gradnated in 1866. He then entered upon the study of law with Mr. Roaf, at Toronto, and was admitted in 1869, commencing the practice of his profession shortly afterwards at Orangeville, where he has since continued. In 1879 he received his commission as captain in the 36th battalion, and he has always taken a hearty interest in military matters. In education, too, he has interested himself with his characteristic energy, and has served as chairman of the High School Board at Orangeville for two years. He is clerk of the town; solicitor for the County of Dufferin, the township of East Garafraxa, and for several valuable estates in the aforementioned county. He is a pastmaster Mason, and is prominently connected with the order of United Workmen. His religious views are those of Presbyterianism. He married in 1875, Miss Stewart, daughter of R. Stewart, of Oro. Captain Barker is described as a very capable and superior military officer, and he has that commanding dash which counts for so much in military circles. He is very active in his profession, and enjoys the reputation of fine abilities, and a wide knowledge of the law.

Le Moine, James MacPherson. sixth son of Benjamin Le Moine and Julia Ann MacPherson, was born in the City of Quebec. His father, a genial and polished gentleman of the old French school, was a partner in the exporting house of Stuart & LeMoine; Mr. Stuart residing in Belfast, Ireland, and his Canadian partner, Benjamin Le Moine, in Quebec. Reverses in trade caused the firm to suspend about 1826, and Benjamin Le Moine, previously living in affluence, was unable to retrieve his losses. He continued, however, to retain his old homestead, and thankfully accepted the helping hand of his wealthy father-in-law, MacPherson, seigneur of Crane Daniel Island. Mr MacPherson adopted two of the eleven children then born-Louis Duniere and James; the latter of whom, the subject of this notice, assumed his name and was known as James Mac-Pherson Le Moine. Daniel MacPherson, born near Inverness, Scotland. had settled at an early age in Philadelphia, which he left with several other United Empire loyalists about 1783 to reside in Sorel, later known as Fort William Henry, a noted U.E.L. settlement. After marrying there a Miss M. Kelly, he removed to Douglastown, Gaspé, also a U.E.L. settlement. where his thrift, intelligence, and success in the deep sea fisheries, brought him soon to the front and independence in fortune. In 1803 he purchased from the heirs de Beaujeu the rich and picturesque seigniory of He aux Grues and He aux Oies, etc., where he spent twenty-six years of his life. This early home of the historian, with its Scotch teachings of industry and self-reliance, together with the healthy example of the venerable Mr. MacPherson, who closed his career at St. Thomas, at the age of eightyseven years, seems to have ever remained uppermost in the mind and remembrance of the subject of this sketch, and to have tinctured his views in after life. The paternal ancestor of Mr. Le Moine hails from old France; the Le Moine or Le Moyne family -for the name is spelled among the descendants both ways—is one of the oldest and most distinguished in the colony from its dawn. Jean LeMoyne, the progenitor, d of M of ho

pr

exc

por

his

the

too

Brit

in u

his l

Jam

prote

Thor

sent

his co

he lei

under

from

-the

Archb

taughi

Lange

at the

elemen

branch

left col

four ye J. N. I

barriste

subject'

practisii

practice

1854, he

Kerr &

Stewart, was a son of Louis Le Moyne, and was born s a very at Pitres, near Rouen, in Normandy, in and he 1634. Jean Le Moyne, a near relative of Charles Le Moyne, or Le Moine, of St. ints for y active Remi, close to Rouen, was a man of imutation portance in his day; he figures in old e of the titles as the seigneur of three fiefs or seigneuries-La Noraie, Ste. Marie, and erson, Gatineau. He held land near Three Rivers, d Julia and owned an island—"l'Ile des Pins". City of the island of pines, which furnished him olished the addition to his name. He was called Was a Le Moine des Pine to distinguish him probıart & ably from his illustrious and warlike relast, Iretive, Charles Le Moine de Longueuil, who beijamin came Baron de Longueuil, and who on two trade occasions acted as governor of Canada. The 6, and Abbé Verreau, in his work "L'Invasion in afdu Canada," in 1775, exhibits a descendant osses. of Jean Le Moyne, styled Jean Baptiste Le is old Moine des Pine, as a sturdy volunteer of d the Montreal, repelling manfully the invader ı-law, of the soil in November, 1775. \mathtt{Crane} however, taken prisoner by Montgomery's continentals, at Longueuil, carried wo of Louis across the border, and underwent a protracted captivity, Congress refusing to hom, his exchange him, "as he was of too much im-Масportance," it was alleged, "in his own counrson, try." His health was ruined by his captivity; ttled his wealth dissipated by the upheavings of h he the invasion. The warlike old gentilhomme, oyaltoo proud to sue for indemnity from the later British government for the losses incurred oted in upholding the standard of Britain, closed here his long career, near Quebec in 1807. Young glas-James Le Moine remained under the protective roof of his grandfather at St. ent. cess Thomas until August, 1838, when he was oon sent to the Petit Seminaire de Quebec for ne. his collegiate course. This seat of learning ` de he left in 1845, after studying Belles Lettres ory under an accomplished French ecclesiastique from the college of Saint Stanislas, at Paris

-the Abbe Bouchy; whilst the present

Archbishop Taschereau, then a professor, taught him moral philosophy, and Bishops Langevin and Racine, also then professors at the seminary, taught Mr. Le Moine the elements of French literature and the higher branches of mathematics. Young Le Moine left college in 1845; was indentured for four years as a law student to the Hon. Judge

J. N. Bossé, at that time one of the leading subject's name was added to the roll of practising barristers; and he continued to practice at the bar for four years, when, in eral years. Mr. Kerr, an English barrister of marked ability, who stands in the front rank of his profession in Montreal, and was recently elected batonnier (president) of the Montreal bar. Mr. Le Moine has also occupied for years the highest position for the Province of Quebec, in the Inland Revenue. In 1856 he married Harriet Mary Atkinson, a niece of the late Henry Atkinson, of Spencer Wood, and later of Spencer Grange (the smaller half of Spencer Wood), sold to Mr. LeMoine in 1860. Mr. Le Moine has no sons; but two daughters were born to him—the youngest, Sophia A. LeMoine, is the wife of F. B. F. Rhodes, a son of Lt. Colonel W. Rhodes, of Benmore, Sillery. It is with Spencer Grange, a charming old country-seat, under whose hospitable roof nearly every literary lion of Canada has sat, that the career of this writer is identified. When the late Dean Stanley visited Quebec, the guest of the governorgeneral, the Earl of Dufferin, at the citadel, his excellency intrusted the dean to the historian of Quebec for guidance and information during his ramble. H.R.H. the Princess Louise and her husband, the Marquis of Lorne, were pleased also to enlist the services of Mr. Le Moine for a similar duty. One of the first additions on assuming possession of Spencer Grange was the erection of an aviary for live birds and a museum for specimens immortalized by the taxidermist's art. Here also are gathered together a valuable collection of books, curios, etc., relating to Canadian history, MSS, plans, inscriptions, views of ancient buildings, antiquarian relics, etc. The library, without being very extensive, contains many rare and standard works, and innumerable presentation copies from Canadian authors. One of the attractions in September is the show of grapes in the extensive vineries. Our author has made the culture of the vine a specialty. This has been the means for him of preparing each year, amidst flowers, birds, books, etc., in September, for his literary and other friends, what they style the annual grape festival, in a delightful symposium under the shadow of the luscious fruit, at which many of the choice spirits of the old capital and neighbourhood congregate, and in which the writer of these lines, in 1865, recollects to have met George Augustus Sala: the historians Garneau and Ferland; Professor H. LaRue, of Laval University; the late lieutenant-governor of Manitoba-the Hon. Jos. Cauchon, then a leading journalist; J. C. Tasché, and others. Mr. Le Moine was five times re-elected by barristers at the Quebec bar.

tc.,

ife.

its

eli-

οf

ed

ed

acclamation president of the Literary and Historical Society of Quebec: selected by His Excellency the Marquis of Lorne to preside over the first section of the Royal Society of Canada, and unanimously elected by He is the section as its first president. the bearer of numerous diplomas from American Historical societies, and delegue regional of the Ethnographical Society of France, membre libre de la societe d'Americanisme, France. Mr. LeMoine has, for several years past been a lieutenant-colonel in the sedentary militia, having met with rapid promotion on account of the earnest interest he took in preparing, like his forefathers, to repel the invader, when the Trent affair threatened to summon Canada's sons to arms. Iu 1881 he was permitted to enjoy a much needed rest from long official routine, and devoted a few months to travel abroad, visiting the cities and rural districts of old England, Ireland, Scotland, France, and Belgium. He brought back to his beloved Canada an ample store of knowledge, anecdote and reminiscences of every kind, which for some years, afforded him material for most delightful and instructive lectures before the Literary and Historical Society, over which he then presided. True to his double origin, it seemed hard to decide at times which was with him the more powerful charmer, "Old Embro," or La Belle France. Two subjects appear to have engrossed his leisure hours-for his has ever been a busy professional or official life,namely: Canadian history and popular orni-He has had the good fortune to handle Canadian history and its burning questions of creed, race, etc., with so much impartiality that rarely have his views been challenged. His style is clear-cut, direct, and easy, but sometimes it is brusque. unfrequently impassioned, now and then it is marked with traces of his double origin; this frequently adds to the piquancy of the narrative. One wonders how and when he can have found time to treat of so many subjects; one also occasionally regrets the absence of that indispensable auxiliary to the scholar-a good proof-reader. Hospitable, genial, and courteous, he is repected for his talents, and beloved for his large heart. We subjoin a list of his writings :-ENGLISH.

The Sword of Brigadier General R. Montgomery (A Memoir) (1 vol. in 64mo)... 1879 Jottings from Canadian History (Stewart's Quarterly) Trifles from my portfolio (New Dominion Quebec: Past and Present..... The Tourist's Note Book (second edition) .. 1876 Chronicles of the St. Lawrence (1 vol. in 8vo) 1878 FRENCH. L'Ornithologie du Canada (2 vol. in 8vo).... 1860 Etude sur les Navigateurs Arctiques, Franklin, McClure, Kane, McClintock, 1862 Etude sur Sir Walter Scott. 1862 Les Pêcheries du Canada (1 vol. in 8vo). 1863 Mémoire de Montcalm Vengée (1 vol. 32mo) 1865 L'Album Canadien (1 vol. in 8vo)...... 1870 L'Album du Touriste (1 vol. in 8vo)...... 1872 Notes Historiques sur les Fortifications et l'Institut Canadien de Quebec (Annu-le Cardinal, l'Oiseau Bleu, etc. (Opinion Publique, Montreal) Grand Tableau Synoptique des Oiseaux du Canada pour l'usage des Colléges, Sociétés d'Histoire Naturelle, etc. 1877 Notes sur l'Archéologie, l'Historie, du Canada, etc., dans la Revue Canadienne de Montreal, et les Soirées Canadiennes de Québec, dans la presse française de Québec (le Journal de Québec, l'Evénement, etc.) . Monographies and Esquisses (500pp) 1885 Ross. Hon. Alex. M., Lieutenant-Colonel, M.P.P., for West Huron, and Treasurer in the Government of Ontario, Goderich, was born at Dundee, Scotland, on the

th

&

re

of

he

and

po8

ver

this

Tre

diar

and

appo

whe

1870 vaca

Cana

its n

positi

the t

war

State

organ

ich, a

For se

the Fe

on fro

last m compan

to a ba

appoint

he still

gunboa

on the

elected

islature

a largely election for his o

admitted

treasure

Oliver M

rion. C

of Engla

Goderich

bounty, 1

and wort

where the

nes, daug

postmaster

he has had

living. T

C. Meyer,

vate life Li

He

2nd of April, 1829. He is a son of Colin and Elizabeth (McLogan) Ross, both of whom were relatives of Dundee. Colin Ross came to Canada, settling in Goderich, in 1833; and his wife and family followed the ensuing year. Here Mr. Ross, senior, who had been in a Linen Company's Bank, in Scotland, began mercantile pursuits, and continued in the same for several years. He died in 1850, and his wife followed in 1878. Alexander was sent to the common schools at Goderich. His parents held the view that this was above all things a "working country," and that therefore every young man should have a skilled equipment for labour. In deference to the theory, they set their son, Alexander, when in his fourteenth year, to learn the trade of carpenter. At this occupation he remained till his twentieth year, when he entered the Bank of Upper Canada as clerk, in which institution he remained until 1856. He then received the appointment of paymaster on the Buffalo & Lake Huron Railway, under construction, remaining in this office till the completion of the road two years later. In June, 1858, he was appointed treasurer of the county; and while in this position gave evidence of possessing accurate financial knowledge and very capable business qualities. He held this position for twenty-five years, resigning in 1883, on his appointment as Provincial Treasurer. An agency of the Royal Canadian Bank was opened at Goderich in 1866: and to its management Colonel Ross was appointed, holding that position until 1869, when the bank wound up its affairs. In 1870 the Bank of Commerce took up the vacancy created by the closing of the Royal Canadian, and requested Col. Ross to take its management, which he did. filling that position with marked ability till 1883. At the time of the Trent affiair, 1861-2, when war looked imminent between the United States and Great Britain, Colonel Ross organized an artillery company at Goderich, and was appointed captain of the same. For several months, during 1866, the year of the Fenian Raid, he was with his company on frontier service. In the autumn of the last mentioned year, the various volunteer companies in the county were organized in-to a battalion, of which Captain Ross was This rank appointed lieutenaut-colonel. he still holds. In 1869 he commanded the gunboat Prince Alfred on frontier service on the Detroit River. In 1875 he was first elected for West Huron, to the Ontario legislature. In June, 1879, he was elected by a largely increased majority. In the general election of 1883, he was once again returned for his old seat; and on November 1st, was admitted to the government, as Provincial treasurer, in the administration of the Hon. Oliver Mowat, being re-elected by acclamarion. Colonel Ross belongs to the Church of England, and St. George's church, at Goderich, is a frequent recipient of his bounty, but to all benevolent organizations and worthy movements he lends his aid, where the opportunity exists for him to do so. He married in November, 1852, Agnes, daughter of Thomas Kydd, formerly postmaster at Goderich; and by this lady he has had seven children, all of whom are living. The eldest, Helen, married H. W. C. Meyer, barrister, of Wingham. In private life Lieutenant-Colonel Ross is an ideal

1879

. 1871

. 1873

. 1876

o) 1878

1876

1882

1860

1862

1862

1863

1865

1870 1872

1874

1874

1875

1876

1877

gentleman. He is warm and sincere in his friendships, courteous in his manners, and kindly in all his relations. This is much to be able to say of the private character of a man; and we can speak in the same appreciative strain respecting his public career. His appointment to the Executive met with hearty approval; and the tongue of opposition had little censure to bestow. Hon. Mr. Ross is a strong man, because he is prudent, far-seeing, practical and well informed; and in times of confusion or hurry, he may be relied upon to be cool, and ready to deliver wise, calm counsels. Above all things, the Hon. Mr. Ross is a man of the highest personal honour.

Taillon, Hon. Louis Olivier, Barrister-at-law, M.P.P. and Attorney-General in the Ross administration, Quebec, was born at Terrebonne, on the 26th September, 1840, and is a son of Aimé Taillon and Marie Josephite Daunais. Taillon family were early settlers at Terre-bonne. Louis Olivier was educated at Masson College, studied law in Montreal with the firm of Fabre, Lesage and Jetté, and with Desire Girouard, M.P. In 1865 he was called to the bar of Montreal, and established himself in practice at that city in the following year. He still resides there, and has been in partnership with S. Rivard and with the Hon. F. X. A. Trudel, but he is now associated with S. Pagnuelo. He was nominated Q.C. by the Federal government on the 23rd January, 1882; was elected deputy of the electoral district of Montreal East to the Legislative Assembly of Quebec on the 7th of July, 1875, at the general election, and re-elected at the general elections of 1878 and 1881. He was chosen speaker of the Legislative Assembly the 8th of March, 1882, at the opening of Parliament. He occupied this position up to the 23rd of January, 1884, when he was made attorneygeneral in the Ross administration, after which he was elected by acclamation. He married, on the 14th of July, 1875, Marie Louise Georgina Archambault, widow of Candide Bruneau, and second daughter of the Hon. P. U. Archambault, of L'Assomption. Madame Taillon died 24th of January, 1876. M. Taillon was one of the promoters of the great French-Canadian national demonstration, which took place at Montreal in June, 1874, the occasion being the festival of St. Jean Baptiste, when more than fifty thousand people were present, comprising persons from all parts of the United States, as well as the British North American provinces. M. Taillon and his co-workers received widespread provincial applause for the success with which they organized the fête. It goes without saying that this distinguished gentleman is a Conservative and a Roman catholic. As a politician he is brilliant, far-seeing and able, and as attorney-general has distinguished himself by peculiar fitness for the office.

Kingsmill, Thomas Frazer, Bellevue Park, London, Canada, was born at Templemore, County Tipperary, Ireland, on April 6, 1840. He is the eldest son of Thomas Kingsmill, merchant, of that town, by Mary, third daughter of Robert Frazer, gentleman, of Donaclogan, Donaghmore, of Queen's county. The ancestors of Mr. Frazer left Scotland with the Stuarts, whose cause they warmly espoused. Our subject's father dying when he was a mere child, he was early removed from school and apprenticed to the dry goods business with his aunt, Mrs. William Roe, Mountheath. Here he obtained a general and thorough knowledge of commercial life, for which he displayed a peculiar aptitude. He married, in 1858, Anne, youngest daughter of Andrew Ardagh, one of the Waterford Ardaghs, a family largely represented in Canada. Shortly after this he accepted a position in a shipping house of Savanah, Georgia, but not considering the climate a healthy one for his family, he decided on removing to Canada, and came to Toronto in July, 1858, getting employment in the establishment of W. A. Murray & Co, with whom he remained for several years, leaving to take charge of the woollen department for John Macdonald & Co. Here he remained only a short time, being induced to re-enter the employment of W. A. Murray & Co. as manager of the London branch. He remained with the firm until the withdrawal of their business. Shortly afterwards he opened an establishment in his own name, on a small scale, but gradually added branch after branch, as his success warranted, until it has reached its present proportions, having become one of the largest carpet warehouses in the Dominion in connection with the general dry goods and manufacturing business. To supply the demands of his trade, Mr. Kingsmill visits the British and continental markets twice yearly. At the time of the Trent affair he joined the home guards, which was afterwards amalgamated with the Queen's Own, belonging to No. 2 Merchants, or Captain Murray's company, continuing until his removal to London. In 1872 he was elected to the office of alderman of the City of London, but finding that devotion to municipal affairs led to neglect of business, he determined after a year's trial to confine himself entirely to private life. The same reason has kept him from joining secret societies of any kind and from taking any prominent part in politics, though he has always been a consistent Conservative and a member of the Liberal Conservative association. While a member of the city council he strongly advocated the building of iron bridges with stone abutments, instead of the wooden structures then universally in use. It was resolved to try the new style of bridge at Blackfriars, and the result has been that the improvements have been adopted on all the approaches to the city except one. The water-works scheme, boulevards, and other improvements. were also agitated that year, and received his hearty support at the council, as they have since done in his private capacity. He is a member of the Church of England by edu. cation and conviction.

Sewery, Henry, Barrie, Ontario, was born in 1835, at Stamford, County of Welland. He came to Barrie about 1855, and after a short time engaged in the manufacture of wooden pumps. He had not any friends or acquaintances, and what was worse, any capital; but he had great courage, untiring industry, and above all an ambition to succeed. He remained for two years engaged in the manufacture of pumps, after which he turned his attention to the manufacture of stoves, etc., in a wooden building on the same site as his present large and commodions brick structure now stands. About thirteen years ago his stove works were destroyed by fire with all the plant, patterns, etc., he thereby sustaining a large loss. Nothing daunted, however, he started and built up the present building of brick, with a frontage of 300 feet, three stories high, and has with great energy and many trials, succeded in establishing a business second to none in the County of Simcoe. His business is the manufacture of mill machinery, lath machines, etc.; and the reputation of his business house is second to When in full running order, his establishment employs over one hundred hands. He has represented the town of Barrie, as mayor, for the last five years, and has acted as chief magistrate with marked ability and good common sense. In religion he has been a consistant member of the Canada Methodist Church, and in politics he is a Liberal. In his business

Sev may won in the sens calle Mass ciety dioce

dioce

couti

sity o

de is tai wa a l

bo

cor

tion, bec, cemb merch Foy. his e eleme there Ав а unusu and ga for his his ter inary o the or studv tellectu the ele manifes was a v always lege sub attracte agricult titude, : of his st

for the n

seminary

in Septe

in this

Petit Ser

class du three ve

conducted

physics

dealings and in private life, his character is above reproach. He, last year, sustained a blow in the loss of his wife, who was a very worthy woman. She died, after a lingering illness, leaving a familly of three boys, all of whom are industrious and of correct habits. We may add that Mr. Sewery received his qualifications for the mayor's chair by an experience in municipal work. Over twenty years ago he held a seat in the county council; and has represented Barrie as councillor and as deputy reeve and reeve. His career in civic and municipal politics has been one marked by sound business qualities; and his character is above the slightest taint of reproach. In the best sense of the word, may this gentleman be called a representative Canadian.

f the

otion

busi-

al to

The

ining

king

h he

ative

ative

city.

ding

in-

ver-

the

the

ave

the

me.

vere

his

ave

is a

du-

was Vel-

and

ac-

ny

ur-

m-

Hamel, Very Rev. Thos. Etienne. Master of Arts, Member of the Royal Society of Canada; Vicar-General of the Archdiocese of Quebec and Toronto, and of the dioceses of Rimouski, Sherbrooke and Chicoutimi, Titulary Professor of the University of Laval, Rector of the latter institution, and Superior of the Seminary of Quebec, was born at Quebec, on the 28th December, 1830. His father was Victor Hamel, merchant, and his mother was Thérèse De Foy. Our distinguished subject received his early educational instruction at the elementary schools in Quebec, attending there from his sixth to his tenth year. As a lad, he is said to have evinced an unusual capacity for acquiring tasks set, and gave his friends grounds to hope much for his future. In 1840, being then in his tenth year, he entered the Petit Seminary of Quebec, where his course, besides the ordinary branches, consisted of the study of literature and science. The intellectual qualities revealed by the lad in the elementary school were now strongly manifested, and his career at the seminary was a very successful one. His mind had always been of a serious bent, and at college subjects of seriousness or utility chiefly attracted his enthusiasm. For the study of agriculture scientifically, he had much aptitude, and great inclination. At the close of his studies, feeling that he had a vocation for the ministry, he entered the Theological seminary at Quebec, beginning his course in September. While pursuing his studies in this seminary, he was employed in Le Petit Seminaire, having charge of a literary class during one year, and over classes in physics and mathematics he presided for three years. His theological studies were conducted with close application and with zeal, and the work of the student here still further ratified the fair promise of his early youth. On the 8th of January, 1854, he was ordained priest; and in the month of August of the same year, he took a passage for Europe, where he had decided upon a still further course of scientific study. institution chosen for the young priest was the Ecole des Carmes at Paris, and here Father Hamel remained for a period of four In the scientific course of Sorboune he obtained the grade of Licencié of mathematical science. Upon his return from Europe, in 1858, he was given charge of the chair of physics in the University of Laval; and he likewise took charge of the classes in astronomy, mineralogy and geology in Le Petit Seminaire of Quebec. In 1859 he was nominated tibulary professor of the Arts faculty in Laval, and he likewise became secretary of that university. In 1871, on the occasion of Mgr. Taschereau's elevation to the archbishopric of Quebec, M. Hamel was designated his successor, with the position of superior of the seminary of Quebec, and ex officio rector of the University of Laval. The office of superior of the Quebec seminary he retained for nine years; and he was again re-elected to his old position in 1883. We may say also that this distinguished divine had been appointed vicargeneral of the Arch-diocese of Quebec in 1871. He was elected a member of the American Association for the Advancement of Science in 1870; a member of the Royal Society of Canada, section III., and is (1886) vice-president of that society. He went He went to Europe in 1852 to accompany the very Rev. Mon. L. J. Casault, on the occasion of his visit to London and to Rome soliciting aid towards the establishment of the University of Laval. The voyage lasted five months. From 1854 to 1858 our dis-The voyage lasted tinguished and pious subject resided in Paris, where he pursued scientific studies. In 1872, and again in 1881, he proceeded to Rome to defend the interests of the University of Laval. The very Rev. Mon. Hamel was born and bred in the Catholic faith, of which he is a distinguished ornament.

Jones, Charles Jerome, B.A., Chief Clerk in the office of the Governor-General, Ottawa, was born at Port Hope in 1848. He received his early educational instruction at private schools, and then entered the Badgely school, before that institution was removed to Port Hope, and became Trinity College school. In due time he matriculated at the University of Trinity College, graduating therefrom in October, 1868. Having attained his degree, his father was desirous that he should study law, but for the legal profession he had a strong distaste, and went instead to Texas, where he engaged in cattle ranching for five years. While riding across the plains his horse fell, and a pistol which he carried in his belt was discharged, the bullet entering his ankle. This accident has caused a slight lameness in his step. On the 1st July, 1875, he entered the Governor-General's office, and on July 1st, 1883, succeeded the late Colonel Stewart as chief clerk in the office of the Governor-General. His father, the late Ralph Jones, died of paralysis at Ottawa, in March, 1884... deceased was the eldest son of Mr. Alpheus Jones, of Prescott, and belonged to a family who have borne a prominent part in the development of this province. He was a nephew of Mr. Justice Jones, who occupied a foremost place in the first judiciary of Upper Canada, and whose son, Mr. Ford Jones, of Gananoque, was for many years a member of parliament.

Martyn, John Piper, Banker and Broker, St. Thomas, Ontario, was born in the town of Beaud, Cornwall, England, on the 17th June, 1831. He is a son of John Martyn, who devoted himself to farming in Cornwall, and emigrated with his family in 1849, to Canada, settling in the township of Yarmouth, Elgin county, Ontario. mother was Mary, daughter of Edward Piper, of Devonshire. Shortly after the arrival of John Martyn, he was taken ill and died, leaving his wife and two sons. John Piper was the youngest, and his brother James is now a prominent architect in London, England. After her husband's death, Mrs. Martyn resided with her son, the subject of this sketch, who had settled on a farm in the same township, and with him she remained till her death, which occurred in 1870, she then having reached the well-rounded age of 87 years. But to glance retrospectively at the career of our subject. He received a careful and comprehensive educational training in schools at Exeter, England, and obtaining a diploma, engaged in the work of teaching in the national schools of his native town. In 1849 he resigned his appointment, and sailed for Canada, entering the Normal school at Toronto. He was now in his twenty-first year, and took away from the Normal school a first-class professional certificate. Immediately he began to teach school in the township of Yarmouth, and continued so employed till 1866, when he gave up the profession and went upon the farm, giving his entire attention to the cultivation of the same. However, in 1868, he went to the town of Strathroy, where he opened a bankers and broker's office, and conducted the same business until 1870, when he removed to St. Thomas, in which city he began a similar business. He has now built up a large and profitable business. dealing in all kinds of negotiable paper. lands, etc., also having, in connection with these operations, insurance and other projects. In 1869, Mr. Martyn was appointed a justice of the peace, and was a school trustee during several terms for the township of Yarmouth. In 1877 he was elected to the town council of St. Thomas, and held the position during the years of 1878-79 and 1880; and upon the town being incorporated in 1881 as a city, he was one of the first addermen elected. He was re-elected for the years 1882, 1883, 1884 and 1885, and this year (1885) is chairman of the finance committee. We might say that Mr. Martyn was one of the first promoters of the measure of the town's incorporation, and has always taken a warm interest in its welfare. He was the first officer appointed for the St. Thomas and Avlmer Gravel Road Company; he also organized and was the first manager of the South-Western Farmers and Mechanics' Loan Company, of St. Thomas, and this position he held for two years, when he retired. He is likewise a shareholder and director of the Star Loan Company, of St. Thomas; and is one of the largest stockholders in, and also a director of, the St. Thomas Street Railway Company. He is connected with various other important enterprises, and was one of the chief organizers of the Bronze Monument Company, and likewise of the Elgin Silver Mining Company, at Lake Superior, which promises, in time, to be one of the most valuable mineral properties in the Dominion. Mr. Martyn is manager and secretary of the Ontario Mutual Provident Society, incorporated in 1884; and he is a member of the order of Oddfellows. He has been president of the East Elgin Conservative Association for ten years, and is one of the most prominent party men in St. Thomas. He is a member of the Church of England, and a warden of St. John's church. He murried in 1852, Hannah Mann, daughter of the late Noah Mann, of the township of Yarmouth, Elgin, one of the most prominent farmers of his time, who died in 1881. Mr. Martyn has eight children, Richard and Edmund holding responsible positions in the United Besides Mr. Martyn's extensive States.

bi la in

ne

po wi

ha

ab tio

po

Q. of

eld

Car

die

Am

Sto

lan

and

his

Tor

able

had

cam

navy

brac

at K S. C

Hon

Adar

parti

and l

in Ki

partn

he co

the la

been

Hend

Societ

tive,

politio

entire

his pro

appoin

tario (

Churc

active

that c

College

the de

membe

He is a

Domin

by the

in the

he was

regimen

near Pi

business associations in Ontario, he has large interests in the North-West, holding thousands of acres of land in that territory. Although exactingly just in his business transactions, Mr. Martyn is known to possess a most kindly heart, and to be ready with generous aid for worthy purposes. He has a beautiful farm of 400 acres, situate about ten miles from St. Thomas, and attention to this property takes a considerable portion of his time.

on of

ent to ned a

ucted

ie re-

y he

now

ness.

aper,

with

pro-

nted

chool

own-

ected

held

and

ated

first

r the

vear

tee.

e of

the

en a

first

and

or-

the

ics'

this

re-

and St.

ld-

pas

ted

to

Henderson, James Alexander, Q.C., D.C.L., Master of the Supreme Court of Judicature, at the City of Kingston, and eldest and only surviving son of the late Captain James Henderson, Royal navy, who died on service at Rio Janiero, South America, was born in February, 1821, at Stoke, near Plymouth, Devonshire, England. He was educated at a private school, and came to Canada in 1835. He completed his education at Upper Canada College, Toronto. He comes of a family which was able to assert that for several generations it had continuously sent forth men who became distinguished officers in the Royal James Alexander Henderson embraced a learned profession, and studied law at Kingston, with the late Honourable John S. Cartwright, and at Toronto, with the late Honourable Robert Baldwin, Chief Justice Adam Wilson, being then Mr. Baldwin's partner. He was called to the bar in 1843, and has successfully practised his profession in Kingston since that date. Entering into partnership with the late Sir Henry Smith, he convinued in the same until the death of the latter in 1868. He has, we may state, been master in Chancery since 1851. Mr. Henderson was elected a bencher of the Law Society in 1858. He is a staunch Conservative, but he has never entered on active political life, for he has chosen to give his entire time and attention to the practice of his profession. In December, 1862, he was appointed chancellor of the discese of Ontario (being a prominent member of the Church of England), and has ever been an active and zealous member of the synod of that diocese. The University of Trinity College, Toronto, in 1863 conferred on him the degree of doctor of civil law, and he is a member of the council of that university. He is a Queen's counsel appointed by the Dominion government, and subsequently by the Ontario government. As an ensign in the third regiment of Frontenac militia, he was present with a detachment of that regiment at the battle of the Windmill, near Prescott, in 1838, and is now the lieutenant-colonel of the reserve militia, the City of Kingston regiment. In 1879 he was elected most worshipful grand master of the Grand Lodge of Ancient, Free and Accepted Masons of Canada, and by an almost unanimous vote, was re-elected in 1880. In July 1882 His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, conferred on him the distinguished order of knight grand cross of the temple, and he now holds the position of deputy grand master of the Sovereign Grand Priory, Knights Templars of Canada. He has been instrumental in the formation and successful carrying out of several companies of public and general benefit, and for many years past has been and still is, president of the Frontenac Loan and Investment Society; of the City of Kingston Gaslight Company, and is the chairman of the Cataraqui Cemetery Company. In 1845 he married Mary Ann, eldest daughter of the late William Wilson, of Newcourt, near Kingston, by whom he has living seven daughters and one son. Five of the daughters are married: the eldest, Emily Anne, is the wife of Richard T. Walkem, Q.C., of Kingston; Helen Maud, the wife of S. W. Farrell, of Winnipeg; Annie Howton is the wife of the Rev. E. P. Crawford, M.A., rector of Trinity Church, Brockville; Harriett Edith is the wife of Albert E. Richards, barrister, Winnipeg; and Mary Louise is the wife of Captain Drury, A battery, regiment of Canadian artillery, Kingston. The residence of Mr. Henderson is the Chestnuts, Kingston.

Mowat, Rev. John B, M.A., D.D., Professor of Hebrew, Chaldee and Old Testament Exegesis, Queen's University, Kingston, was born in the latter city in the year 1825. He is a son of the late John Mowat, Canisbay, Caithness-shire, Scotland, who, when a young man, joined the army and served through the Peninsular war. In 1816 he came to Canada and settled in Kingston. He married shortly afterwards, Helen Levack, also of Caithness, this lady having crossed the ocean to link her fortunes with the soldier of the Peninsula. The fruit of this happy union was five children, three boys and two girls, one of the brothers being the Hon. Oliver Mowat, premier and attorney-general of the Province of Ontario. For further details see sketch of the Hon. Oliver Mowat, elsewhere in these pages.] John B. Mowat graduated in arts in 1845, and took two sessions in theology at Queen's University, Kingston. After taking two sessions of his theological course at Queen's he proceeded to Edinburgh, Scotland, where he attended two sessions in arts and theology at the University of that city, and received the degree of D.D. from the University of Glasgow, in 1833. He became assistant to the Rev. Dr. Machar, in St. Andrew's Church, Kingston, in 1848; was called to the pastorate of St. Andrew's Church at Niagara, in 1850; and was appointed in 1857 professor of Hebrew, Chaldee and Cld Testament Exegesis at Queen's University, Kingston. In 1855 he married the eldest daughter of the late Rev. Dr. McGill, minister of St. Paul's Church, Montreal, but this lady died in 1856. He married again in 1860, the second daughter of the Hon. John McDonald, of Gananoque.

Morris, Hon. Alexander, D.C.L., Q.C., P.C., Toronto, was born at Perth, Upper Canada (Ontario), on the 17th March, 1826. He is the eldest son of the late Hon. William Morris, whose figure stands conspicuous among those who agitated the country on the clergy reserves and school land ques-He is a nephew of the late Hon. James Morris, who was postmaster-general in the Baldwin-Lafontaine administration, and receiver-general in the Sandfield Macdonald-Sicotte ministry. Alexander, when a boy, attended the Perth Grammar school; and when his course here was ended his father sent him to Scotland, where he en-tered Madras College of St. Andrews. Thence he was transferred to the University of Glasgow, where he spent a year, when he returned to Canada. He began commercial pursuits, entering the establishment of Thorne & Heward, commission merchants, of Montreal. He had not much taste for commercial life, however, and three years after was articled as a student-at-law in the office of Mr. (now Sir) John Macdonald, at Kingston. He studied here with marked diligence, indeed, so close was his application that his health gave way, and he was obliged to relinquish work for a few months. Proceeding to Montreal, he entered the University of McGill College, and from that institution took successively the degrees of B.A., M.A., B.C.L., and D.C.L. He was the first graduate in the arts course of that institution, and was subsequently elected by the graduates one of the first fellows in arts, and thence was promoted to be one of the governors of the university. He entered the law office of Attorney General Badgely, and was called to the bar of Upper Canada in Hilary Term, 1851. The late Hon. John Ross, then attorney-general, offered to admit Mr. Morris to partnership, but family reasons made it necessary that he should go to Montreal. Presenting his diploma as an Upper Canadian barrister, he was upon examination admitted to the bar of Lower In November of the same year he married Margaret, daughter of the late Wil. liam Cline, of Cornwall, and niece of the late Hon. Philip Van Koughnet, of the same place. He at once entered upon the practice of his profession at Montreal, where his resolute industry, the soundness and the extent of his legal attainments, and above all, his natural brilliancy, soon gave nim a conspicuous place in his profession. A short time afterwards he entered into partnership with the present Mr. Justice Torrance, who had been a foremost authority on commercial law. In politics Mr. Morris was a Conservative, and when he entered the public field it was to champion the cause and affirm the principles maintained by his father. In 1861 he was elected to the Legislative Assembly for South Lanark, which constituency his father had represented for twenty years. When he appeared upon the political scene, the question of representation by population agitated the country, George Brown and others being loud in their advocacy of the same, the Conservatives holding back, declaring the time was not yet ripe for the adoption of such a plan. Alexander Morris opposed the scheme, affirming that its adoption would not solve the difficulties sought to be removed; but most enthusiastically did he enter into the scheme for confederation, claiming that this was the only expedient in which all disturbing questions might be merged and extinguished. He was one of the chief promoters of the coalition between Attorney-General Macdonald and George Brown; and in 1869 was chosen, by virtue of his special acquirement, and his wide political equipment, to the portfolio of Inland Revenue. But his health soon be gan to fail him, and in July, 1872, he was appointed chief justice of the Court of Queen's Bench for Manitoba. The new judge had to make a complete judicial organization of the judiciary, establishing the English practice; for hitherto the highest tribunal of justice had been a quarterly court, established under the Hudson Bay Company's charter; and this court had a somewhat primitive way of doing business. But on the 2nd of December of the same year that he went upon the bench he was appointed lieutenant-governor of Manitoba and the North-West Territories. When Keewatin became a district, he was appointed lieutenant-governor ex officio. He likewise became chief superintendent of Indian affairs in the Manitoba superintendency, ar in de

ju

an

he

of

pro W

tor

res

def

tati

mo

Tor

5th

sam

Mo

and

stiti

ris 1

ber.

men

the

1881 drev

Univ

man

versi

vice-

Insu

onto

Impe

by th

Comm

her 1

award

gover

Paris

consec

comm

tannia

and fu lished

cantile

which

the Br

one co

and Pa

he also

West a federat

ada and

Interco

Treatier North-V and one of the special commissioners for making treaties three, four, five and six ; and the revision of treaties one and two, in the making of which he acted as president and chief speaker. His tact, good judgment, and winning ways produced most important results in dealing with the tribes; and as lieutenant-governor of Manitoba he did a vast deal towards the promotion of settlement in the province and the improvement of its legislative condition. When his five years term in the gubernatorial chair was ended, he returned to his residence at Perth, Ontario. In 1878 he was defeated by nine votes for the representation of Selkirk, Manitoba; but about two months afterwards he was elected for East Toronto to the Ontario legislature. On the 5th of June following he was elected for the same constituency, defeating Hon. Oliver Mowat by a majority of fifty-seven votes; and he has continued to represent that constituency since. The Hon. Alexander Morris was called to the Manitoba bar in October, 1872; appointed a Q.C. by the government of Ontario, March 13th, 1876; and by the Dominion government, August 13th, 1881. He has been president of the St. Andrews' Society, Montreal; a governor of the University of McGill College; and is chairman of the Board of Trustees of the University of Queen's College, Kingston. He is vice-president of the North America Life Insurance Company; a director of the Toronto General Trusts Company, and of the Imperial Bank. He was recently appointed by the Government of Ontario one of the commissioners for codifying the Statutes of Ontario. He is author of "Canada and her Resources," an essay, to which was awarded, in 1885, by Sir E. W. Head, then governor-general. on a reference from the Paris Exhibition Committee of Canada, in consequence of a division of opinion in the committee, the second prize; "Nova Britannia," a lecture on the extent, resources and future of British North America, published in 1858, at the request of the Mercantile Library Association of Montreal, in which he advocated the incorporation of the British North American provinces under one confederation; "The Hudson's Bay and Pacific Territories," a lecture, in which he also urged the incorporation of the North-West and British Columbia under one confederation with the older provinces of Canada and Acadia, and the construction of the Intercolonial and Pacific railways; "The Treaties of Canada with the Indians of the North-West," 1880; and "Nova Britan-

upon

wer

ar he

Wil-

the

ame

rac-

nere

the

oove

m a

hort

ship

who

ner-

on-

blic

 $_{\rm rm}$

In

ive

tit-

ntv

cal

by

rge 70-

ng

or

ler

at

es ıs-nnia," a collection of lectures and speeches connected with confederation, 1884. Hon. Alexander Morris is a lucid, forcible, and very convincing writer; and his speeches have the same qualities as his literary work. He is still vigorous, and the country may expect to hear much from him yet before he quits the political scenes.

Phelan, Daniel, M.A., M.D., Kingston, was born in North Gower, County of Carleton, on September 8th, 1854. His parents were John Phelan and Margaret McCarthy. His mother was a Canadian of Irish descent, and his father was born in Kilkenny, Ireland, and was an industrious and honest farmer who achieved much wealth, and died in 1883, leaving as a monument of his industry one of the most magnificent county residences in Canada, Dunmore hall. The Phelans come of good old Irish stock of the Heremonian division of the Milesians, and are descended from Conn. of the Hundred Battles, the 110th monarch of Ireland. They were formerly princes of Desies, a territory comprising the greater part of Waterford and part of Tipperary. Their estates were at an early period transferred to the Le Poers and other English invaders. The name Phelan is derived from the Irish feile, hospitality, and aon, excellent. The subject of this sketch having all the advantages which one could desire, was educated by a private tutor at home, then at the county school near his father's residence, and subsequently at La Salle Institute, Toronto, under Bro. Arnold; then he entered the University of Ottawa, where he carried off the best prizes each year. He was considered the most thorough Latin and Greek scholar of his class, and received the degree of M.A. from that institution. He also distinguished himself as an athlete, having in his possession a number of silver cups and other trophies won by him. He studied medicine at Queen's College, where he obtained the degree of M.D. in 1877, coming out at the head of the list of graduates of that year. He subsequently spent some time in Bellevue Hospital, and the Manhattan Eye and Ear Infirmary, New York. He then opened an office in Kingston, Ont., where he was at once rewarded by an excellent business, and he to-day enjoys one of the largest practices in the city. Desiring further to perfect himself for the discharge of his professional duties, he resolved in 1882 to visit Europe and "walk" some of the famous hospitals there. He accordingly spent some time in the hospitals of London, Paris, Brussels and Dublin, during which time he diligently applied himself to the study of the cases which there came under his observation. On his return to Kingston he resumed the practice of his profession, and is to-day one of its most trusted members. He is an examiner for several insurance companies; was supervising medical examiner for Canada for the Catholic Mutual Benefit Association; was president of the St. Vincent de Paul Society, and for several years has been president of the St. Patrick Society. He has been physician to the House of Providence at Kingston for many years, a position in which he has exhibited that care and skill which are characteristic of him. He has for some years filled the chair of lecturer on physiology and histology in the Women's Medical College, Kingston, and is a member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Quebec. In religion Dr. Phelan is a Roman catholic; in politics a pronounced Reformer. He is a young man who is destined to occupy a distinguished position in the history of his country, as in addition to his professional distinction, he is of splendid physique, a graceful speaker, and a favourite in social circles.

Collins, Joseph Edmund, Toronto, was born at Placentia, the capital during the French occupation, and in the early portion of the English regime, of Newfoundland, on the 22nd day of October, 1855. He is, upon his father's side, of English descent, and the eldest son of William Joseph Collins, who was at one time a leading planter in Placentia, by his wife Eleanor, daughter of John O'Reilly, surveyor and planter of Placentia. The family settled in the island at an early date in its colonization. The first member of the family here was Edward Collins, an officer of the staff (British army), and he married Ruth, only daughter of Governor Goodall. This governor, it may be mentioned, succeeded to the governorship of the island shortly after the expiration of the term of Admiral Byron, grandfather of the poet. Seeing the excellent prospect to conduct a profitable mercantile and fishery business, the governor advised his son-in-law to retire from the army and enter commerce. He did so, and obtained grants of all the grazing and meadow lands along the Brulé and surrounding the town; which granting very naturally and justly led to loud complaints some years afterwards among others who sought to obtain a few acres here or there, but found that it had been all disposed of to "the privileged family." Years later, when William IV. visited the "ancient colony" he made a long stay in picturesque old Placentia, becoming the guest of "Planter Collins," as he was now called. On leaving the island his Royal Highness took with him to England Edmund Collins. an uncle of the father of the subject of this sketch, for whom he formed a strong attach. ment, and appointed him apartments during his educational course in the palace, where he remained for a considerable period. Ed. mund acquired a technical education, and entered the navy, where he was rapidly promoted, till he became first lieutenant in the Then he returned home for a time, navy. and as further marks of the royal favour, a captaincy, and a promise of appointment to the next governorship of the colony, reached hlm, but he fell ill of hasty consumption and died. Joseph Edmund Collins was educated by private tuition at Placentia, and subsequently at St. John's. He was for two years a member of the mounted police force in St. John's, and in 1874 came to Canada. Shortly afterward he arrived in Fredericton. and entered as a student-of-law in the office of Allen & Wilson. A little later, he established the Fredericton Star newspaper, of which he was the editor for a time. Subsequently he established the Chatham, N.B., In the summer of 1881 he removed to Toronto and accepted a position on the staff of the Globe newspaper, in which employment he remained for a year. He then wrote the "Life and Times of Sir John Macdonald; "Canada under the Aministration of Lord Lorne;" "A Sketch of the Life of Lord Lansdowne," and other works, which were published by the Rose Publishing Co., Toronto. He likewise became a contributor to the leading Canadian literary periodicals; to the Century, Wide Awake, St. Nicholas, Frank Leslie's publications, Outing, Forest and Stream, and several other American and English periodicals. He married, in 1880, Gertrude Anna, sixth daughter of the late Dr. Jasper Nugent Murphy, of Fredericton, N.B. There have been issue by this marriage a son and a daughter, both of whom are dead. Elmund Collins, as he is now known, is devoted exclusively to literary work.

t thd C of b

st

of hi

sh

m

as

oθ

pra

ap

of

Μı

Or

Ju

pre

ciet

soci

his

Chu

St.

on

Fran Rob

the

C.

Duff

three

brotl

M.P.

Judg

and o

as th

eleva

the l

King

nesey

1843.

M.A.

mar so

son o

regim

lina 1

Willia

Dublir

family till 18

boroug

but in

and pa

Ir

McCarthy, Maitland, County Judge, Orangeville, was born at Oakley Park, near Dublin, Ireland, on the 5th May, 1838. He is a son of D'Alton and Charleszina Hope (Manners) McCarthy. The family is very old in Irish annals. His mother was born in Edinburgh, Scotland; his grandfather was a member of the Irish bar; and his father, who came to Canada in 1847, had been a solicitor at Dublin. The family settled on a farm six miles from Barrie, but two years later removed to town. Here the father of Maitland McCarthy resumed his practice, continuing in the same till his death, which occurred in 1873. Mrs. Mc-Carthy is still living. There was a family of eleven children, the subject of this sketch being the fifth eldest. Maitland attended the Barrie Grammar school, concluding his studies in that institution at the early age of seventeen. He then entered the office of his father, who was at that time in partner-ship with D'Arcy Boulton, and here he remained until 1861, when he was admitted as an attorney. He immediately opened an office in Orangeville, where he continued to practice until 1881, in which year he was appointed County court judge of the County of Dufferin, which position he still holds. Mr. McCarthy held the position of reeve of Orangeville for four years, and that of the first mayor of the town for the year 1874. Judge McCarthy is a director, and has been president, of the Orangeville Building Society. His only connection with secret societies was that with Freemasonry. Like his family, he is a staunch member of the Church of England, and has been warden of St. Mark's for several years. He married, on the 26th of November, 1866, Jennie Frances, youngest daughter of the late Robert Cornwall Stewart, of Bond Head, in the County of Simcoe, and sister of Falkner C. Stewart, ex-warden of the County of Dufferin. There is issue by the marriage three children. Judge McCarthy is a brother of D'Alton McCarthy, Q.C., and M.P. for North Simcoe. In private life Judge McCarthy is kindly and courteous, and one who knows him well describes him as the "true type of Irish gentleman." His elevation to the judgeship gave a lustre to the local bench.

pic-

uest

led. 1ess

ins,

this ch-

ing

ere Ed-

ind

ro-

the ne,

. а

to led

nd ed

sewo

ŀсе

ce

Irwin, Chamberlin Arthur, M.D., Kingston, was born on the Island of Guernesey, English Channel, on the 23rd April, 1843. He is a son of William James Irwin, M.A., Cantab, late head-master of the Grammar school at Kingston, Canada, and grandson of William Arthur Irwin of the 95th regiment. Our subject's mother was Selina Maria, eldest daughter of Chamberlen William Walker, LL.D., of Trinity College, Dublin. The Irwins were a very old Irish family, which lived for many generations, till 1838, on their estate known as Roxborough, in the County of Roscommon, but in the year named, the estate was sold and passed into other hands. Capt. Wm.

A. Irwin had three sons, Wm. Jas., A.M., Cantab, Queen's College; Arthur Leighton, a wrangler and fellow of Cain's College, Cambridge, died principal of the Diocesan College, Madras, East Indies; and Henry Offley, who took honours in mathematical tripos, Pembroke College, Cambridge, late rector of Hagley, Tasmania. Capt. Wm. Arthur Irwin, married Elizabeth Smythe, whose grandfather resided on his estate Topcroft, County Norfolk, on the borders of Suffolk, England. Our subject was educated at the Kingston Grammar school and at Queen's University, taking his medical course in the latter institution. He is professor of medical jurisprudence and sanitary science in the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons, Kingston: was vice-president of the Ontario Medical Association for 1883; and alderman for the City of Kingston for the years 1885 and 1886. Dr. Irwin is a Freemason, having joined that order in 1874. In politics he is a Liberal, and in religion a member of the Church of England. We may add that he graduated from Queen's University, Kingston, in 1863, and settled down in Wolfe Island, as a practitioner in medicine. There he remained until 1880, when he removed to the City of Kingston, where he has resided practising his profession. Dr. Irwin is popular professionally no less than a Laurent, Very Rev. Joseph M., Vicar-General of the Arch-diocese of Toronto, was born in l'Angou, Main et Loire, France. His parents belong to some of the old famalies of La Vendée Militaire, and took prominent parts in the war of La Vendée. He came to Toronto with Bishop de Charbannel, in 1858; and since that time V. G. Laurent has resided in Toronto, taking the greatest interest in the improvements of the city, especially in music. Having spent many years in the best conservatoires of music in Europe, he acquired the knowledge which has made him one of the most successful leaders of church choirs in Canada. Father Laurent spent fourteen years in St. Patrick's parish, Toronto, and, by his great energy, built up a very fine church, a beautiful presbytery and commodious schools. His parishioners were very much attached to him, and saw with sorrow his removal to St. Michael's Cathedral. The Vicar-General has also laboured constantly for the last twenty-five years in the cause of education and the relief of the poor. He is a gentleman of high intellectual gifts, and is a very effectual preacher.

Bristol, Amos Samuel, M.D., was born on September 17th, 1825, on the old homestead on the front of Ernesttown, a short distance west of Bath. He is a son of Coleman and Catharine (Way) Bristol. His father was the second son of the late John Bristol, who was taken a prisoner at the surrender of General Burgoyne in the American revolutionary war, under whom he was serving as a volunteer. His mother was the second daughter of the late Samuel Way, a U. E. loyalist. His father, some time after his release, came to Canada, being among the very earliest settlers, and located on the front of Ernesttown, where he continued to reside as long as he lived. Here was born our subject's father, who is in his ninety-first year. There was a family of thirteen children born there, of whom Amos Samuel was the second eldest. Our subject's grandfather had received a good education in Troy, New York, where he was born, and where his father, who was a Baptist clergyman, lived. His grandfather's mother was a very ardent loyalist—the daughter of a British officer—and she had encouraged her son in every way to join the forces as a volunteer. There were several sons by a former marriage, all of whom took part with the colonists. The consequence, in a pecuniary way, was very serious to our subject's grandfather-for after the war was over all the property, which was very large, on the banks of the Hudson was lost and taken by the other members of the family. The grandfather remained in the country for a long time, hoping to get some of the property, but did not succeed. He was obliged to leave the country and come to He always maintained that he could establish his claim to his share of the property, but his children were not so sanguine, and did not like to risk money hardly earned in endeavouring to establish a claim of such long standing. The grandfather died in 1849 in his ninetieth year. He was a man of varied and extensive reading, and one of the best conversationalists that one might chance to meet. He seemed to know the scriptures by heart, and he took special pains to explain them to our subject when a boy. The grandmother also died in her ninetieth year. She was a very beautiful woman, and our subject was her constant companion as a child and as a boy. The family came from England and settled on Rhode Island about 240 years ago, being among the very earliest settlers in that place. The town of Bristol in that state was founded by one of the family.

One of the cadets of the family received a large grant of land on the Hudson, at Troy, for services rendered in some of the troubles of those days, and settled there. Some of the family still reside there. Amos Samuel Bristol was educated chiefly at the Grammar school at Bath, attending during the winter and working on the farm with his father during the summer till his twenty-first year. In 1847 he entered McGill College, and remained there till 1850, when he graduated. taking highest class-standing. He joined the active militia force in 1857 as surgeon of the Napanee troop, became surgeon of the 4th regiment of Cavalry, and retired in 1884 with the rank of surgeon-major; and was on active duty during the Fenian raid in Kingston for about three weeks. His father served during the war of 1812 and 1813, for which he is at present in the receipt of a pension. He also served as captain during the troubles of 1837-8, and was out with his men during the memorable Windmill affair. Our subject has served as municipal councillor and as school trustee for about twenty years, and has been a member of the synod of the Church of England since its establishment, with the exception of one year. He has taken an active part in local improvements, such as the erection of school-houses, churches, and other public buildings. He has been a member of the Masonic order since 1857, and is a Royal Arch Mason and past master. He took a very active part in the discussion in connection with confederation, and did what he could to persuade all with whom he came in contact of its great advantages. He was an advocate likewise of securing the great North-West, and of building the Canadian Pacific Railway. His travels have been confined to this continent. In 1850 he visited the States; again in 1864 he went to Washington and spent several weeks in the military hospitals there, at the same time he visited places of importance or interest in the neighbourhood and down the Potomac. Through the kindness of General Auger, the commandant, he was enabled to go to all places of interest. In religion Dr. Bristol has been all his life a member of the Church of England. He married, on June 21, 1853, Sarah Minerva daughter of the late Colonel Daniel Everett, of the township of Kingston, and granddaughter of the late Major John Everett, United Empire loyalist, of the same place. Major Everett had served through the greater part of the revolutionary war, being a major in the Royalist forces. His wife

die

rir

Ki

ch

Ge

Ed

on

niı

Da

Ch

ma

Μa

Jai

firs

To:

Ro

Ire

is

Ne

of t

wif

fift

tee

Aft

at .

Bat

Dr.

Dr.

Dr. Ha

teri

he :

Ha

spr

nat

He

try

inte

he

was

was

go Dui

read

in t

side

in :

belo

dire

ltan

tabl

have

Cha

fath

pon

war

New

bibl

at tl

ther

died in 1863, leaving five children-Catharine Marion, wife of H. J. Saunders, M.D., Kingston; George Everett, wholesale merchant, Hamilton; Sarah Caroline, wife of Geo. Douglas Hawley, M.P.P. for Lennox; Edmund James, B.A., law student, Toronto, and Clarinda Stewart, who died about nine months after her mother. Daniel Everett was uncle of the present Chief Justice Wallbridge. Our subject married again in December, 1869, Amelia Maria, eldest daughter of the late Thomas Jaffray Robertson, M.A., "(Stouan Clan) first head master of the Normal school, Toronto, and brother of the late Charles Robertson, of the Educational department, Ireland. Thomas Jaffray Robertson's wife is a daughter of the late Richard John Nelson, high sheriff of Dublin, and cousin of the late Admiral Nelson. By his present wife he has three children—Emily Frances, fifteen; Thomas Stanley Robertson, thirteen; and Ethel Isabel Nelson, twelve. After completing his professional education at McGill College, Dr. Bristol returned to Bath, and entered into partnership with Dr. Stewart. In the fall of the same year Dr. Stewart removed to Kingston, and Dr. Bristol shortly after visited Toronto, Halton, and some other places in the western part of the province. In the winter he commenced practice in the County of Hastings, where he remained until the spring of 1857, when he removed to his native county, and settled at Napanee. He soon built up a large town and country practice, which he has held with one interruption ever since. In the fall of 1863 he was taken with the typhoid fever, and was prostrated for nearly a year, and it was nearly two years before he was able to go through his usual amount of work. During all his life he has been a constant reader and close student. All his relations in this country on his father's and mother's side are United Empire loyalists. He has in his possession a set of money scales belonging to his maternal grandfather, with direction for using them written in his own hand, and dated 7th of August, 1770, in a table attached to the case, purporting to have been regulated at a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce. His paternal grandfather had in his desk a large mass of correspondence, dating back to the American war of independence, deeds of property in New York state, and family records in bibles, and other matters of public interest at the time. As a boy our subject often saw them, but afterwards they fell into the hands of his eldest sister, who removed to the North-West several years ago, taking them all with her.

Harrison, Glover, Toronto, was born in Carrick-on-Shannon, County of Leitrim, Ireland, on the 28th of March, 1825. He is the second son of Richard Harrison and Elizabeth Hamilton. His father's family went to Ireland in the reign of Charles the II., and remained there. His mother's family migrated thither also from Scotland in the same reign. One of the family, William Glover, was, an engineer from Edinburgh, and he built a bridge over the Shannon, between Carrick-on-Shannon and the County Roscommon. Many of his family connections followed him to help in the work. The family names who came with him were as follows:—Hamiltons, Lairds, Crawfords, Lloyds and Shears; and their descendants reside in Leitrim and Roscommon to this day. Glover Harrison was the second son of a family of eleven children, five brothers and one sister living. He was educated in the common school at Carrickon-Shannon, County of Leitrim. At seventeen years he was sent to Sligo, to learn business in the china, glass and crockery trade, and here he remained until June 1847, which was the famine year in Ireland. July of the same year, he sailed from Dublin bay for Quebec, coming in company with an aunt and her family of ten children. They were six weeks and three days making the voyage, and experienced many hardships on the passage to Quebec, having 180 people on board a small ship. When the vessel arrived in Quebec, she was obliged to remain in quarantine for ten days. They were then taken to Montreal, and on arrival there had a narrow escape from being sent to the "sheds" which were full of immigrants stricken with fever on the passage from Ireland. Mr. Harrison and his relatives took passage from Lachine on a steamer to Kingston, and thence to Toronto, where they arrived late in August. Mr. Harrison sought a situation in a store in King street, and obtained one immediately, but in two days he was prostrated with fever, which continued for eight weeks. When he recovered, he could obtain nothing to do. In January, 1848, he obtained through a friend a situation in the grocery establishment of Samuel Philips, on the corner of King and Church streets, where he remained for nearly two years, when the business was wound up. In October, 1849, he obtained another situation in the store of the late R. H. Brett, hardware and groceries, and remained until October, 1855. On his resigning this situation, he took a position with William Thomson, afterwards Thomson & Burns, hardware and crockery, where he remained until 1864, when Thomson & Burns established him in business in his present stand, the old house of R. H. Brett, where he had been employed from 1849 to When he began his own business (1864), the American war was at his height, and he owes much of his prosperity to the families of rich southern people who settled in Toronto and St. Catherines, and other places about that period. More honourable people than these were, he affirms he never met. "They had," he says, "refined taste, and bought only the best and finest goods." From that time to the present, his business has increased and prospered until now it is the choicest and the largest in Toronto, or in the Dominion. When Mr. Harrison came to Toronto in 1847, the population was only a little over twenty thousand; now, 1886, it is 110 thousand. Times have changed much, and the inhabitants too since then; old faces are becoming scarce, and old streets and places change or disappear. Mr. Harrison has made a trip to England every year for the past twenty-two years on business, visiting England, France, Germany, Ireland and For twenty-four years he was Scotland. connected with the Methodist New Connection church, on their joining the Wesleyan body, he joined the church of the Rev. J. D. McDonnell, Presbyterian. He has never married—for over twenty years he lived with his aunt and cousins until he laid most of them in the Necropolis, the last in 1866. His father died in Toronto, in December, 1861, aged 83 years, he having been a resident for thirteen years. His oldest brother, Arthur Harrison, has been sub-sheriff of the County Leitrim for over twenty-five years.

Wylie, Lt.-Colonel David, Brockville, was born in the town of Johnstone, in Renfrewshire, Scotland, on the 23rd day of March, 1811. His father was William, and his mother's name Mary Orr. His father carried on a boot and shoe trade in Renfrewshire, but left his native country for Montreal, Canada, in 1819. He died in Montreal, in the year following, before his family had the opportunity of following him to his new home. The subject of this sketch received his education in the parish school of Johnstone, supplemented by attending a night school in Paisley, to which town his mother and family removed previous to his father's departure for Canada. His father was a great reader, and this fact gave a cast to the son's mind, for while a mere child he would sit up by his father's side and read whatever books were furnish. ed, while he otherwise stocked his mind with the songs and ballads of his own At the age of fourteen, David country. Wylie was apprenticed for seven years to Stephen Young, of Paisley, to learn the printing business. He commenced his apprenticeship in January, 1826. In about three years and six months after, Mr. Young gave up business, when Mr. Wylie's indenture was transferred to the University Print. ing Office, Glasgow, where he took lessons in Latin and French, and also in stenography. On completion of his apprenticeship, he visited Edinburgh. A short time after he was engaged on the Greenock Ad. vertiser, where he remained between three and four years. It was while in Greenock that he wrote his first locals, and also two or three short stories for the columns of the Advertiser. John Galt, the author, was at the time residing as an invalid in Greenock. and Mr. Wylie was greatly pleased to hear the merits of his stories discussed, and the authorship ascribed to Mr. Galt. Mr. Wylie afterwards removed to a situation on the Glasgow Guardian. At the end of eighteen months he took a situation on the Liverpool Mail, where he acted as local reporter and proof-reader. He remained on the Mail for about eight years, when he went to Manchester, and was engaged on the Anti-Corn Law Circular, published under the supervision of Cobden, Bright, and other eminent gentlemen. The publication of the paper having been removed to London, Mr. Wylie returned to Scotland, and took charge of the Fife Herald office, in the town of Cupar. The Herald was edited by the late Mr. Russell, of the Edinburgh Scotsman. While here, he published the tale of "The Life of a Convict," from notes furnished by the mate of the vessel in which the convict sailed to the United States. He also published several poems in the Herald. While here, he received an offer from John C. Becket, of Montreal, to come to Canada, and take charge of Mr. Becket's office. This offer he accepted, and arrived in Canada, in 1845, when the subject of responsible government was being warmly discussed. From early conviction, Mr. Wylie took the side of responsible government, and wrote several letters on the subject to the Fife Herald. He remained with Mr. Becket till 1849, when he accepted a situation as parliamentary reporter for the Montreal Herald. While here, he also wrote various pieces for pul

Īan

rep

vill

bit

the

Up

cup

wri

of (

ber

vot

pre

the

gui

the

 \mathbf{A}_{-1}

alw

libe

reco

kno

and

spy

gov

pris

dep

peop

to g

the

war

tran

thro

exac

'' ra

who

was

ion i

knov

out

ther

Wyl

In .

joine

and o

in I

elect

mast

also

stree

time.

Broc

out a

Leed

Dr. (

thoro

Was 1

dence

to th

which

publication in the daily papers and the Garland, a monthly magazine. He continued reporting till the parliament buildings were burned, when he arranged to come to Brockville, and take charge of the Recorder. One bit of work Mr. Wylie feels proud of. After the buildings were burned, a "call of the Upper House" was made. The report occupied eighteen columns of the Herald, all written by Mr. Wylie, with the exception of one speech furnished by a French member. At the close of the session, the House voted Mr. Wylie $50, as a mark of their appreciation of his services. Mr. Wylie edited the Recorder for many years with distinguished ability, making that journal one of the ablest local newspapers in the Province. A staunch Reformer, his influence was always cast in favour of increasing the liberties of the people. Mr. Wylie's earliest recollections are connected with what is now known as the "Radical times" in Scotland. and the political persecutions of 1820. The spy system, introduced by the tyrannical government, sent many innocent parties to prison. Richmond, the principal of the spy department, had his emissaries among the people. These wretches deceitfully led men to give expression to their feelings against the government; the names were then forwarded to the officials, and imprisonment or transportation followed. Soldiers marched through the streets, while house to house examinations were made in search for "radical pikes," and woe to the man in whose house an old rusty sword or bayonet was found. No one dared express an opinion in opposition to the government, and all known to do so were imprisoned or hunted out of the country. Freedom of speech there was none. Amid such scenes Mr. Wylie's early political principles were laid. In 1838, while in Liverpool, Mr. Wylie joined the Manchester Unity of Oddfellows, and continued his connection with the order in Montreal, having been, while there, elected to the honourable position of grand master of the order in Canada. He was also elected an elder of the St. Gabriel street Presbyterian church about the same time. Some years after his removal to Brockville, the Reform party brought him out as a parliamentary candidate for South Leeds, in opposition to the sitting member, Dr. Church; but the constituency being thoroughly conservative, the sitting member was returned. During his first year's residence in Brockville, in 1849, he was elected to the office of a public school trustee, of. which board he still continues a member !

(1885). No member of the board has given more time and attention to educational matters; and the town of Brockville, as well as the surrounding country, owe Mr. Wylie a large debt of gratitude for his services. As he is popularly termed the "father of the Canadian press," from his long connection with newspaper work, so he may also be termed the oldest school trustee in the Province. In 1847, Mr. Wylie joined Captain Lyman's rifle company, in Montreal, and served on every grade from private up to lieutenant-colonel. In 1875 he was appointed paymaster of Military district No. 4, by the McKenzie government, which position he held till the return to power of Sir John Macdonald, when he was allowed to retire from the service, retaining his rank as lieutenant-colonel. On retiring from the office of paymaster, he was appointed town treasurer for Brockville, which office he held until he again took hold of the Recorder, which he continued to conduct till October, 1873, when he sold out his interest to Mr. J. J. Bell, and has since passed his days in comparative quietness, attending to his duties as chairman of the Board of Education. Just after the confederation of the provinces was completed, Mr. Wylie published a small volume of poems, under the title of "Waifs from the Thousand Islands." These were well received by the press. In 1870, he visited his native country, and was engaged by the Provincial government to bring the subject "Canada as a Field of Immigration" before the people of Scotland. In this he was very successful. He wrote a series of letters, besides other special correspondence, on the subject in the Glasgow Herald, a paper enjoying at that time a circulation of 36,000 daily. Mr. Wylie gave four months of his time gratuitously, as he was only remunerated for his actual outlay -his labour being given gratis. In 1875, he desired to withdraw from the responsibility and care attendant on editing and publishing a paper. He however, had started the Evening Recorder, and sunk some money in the undertaking, and was loath to give up a position he had so long honourably and satisfactorily filled. For a time, however, he retired, but was compelled at last to install himself in the editorial chair, till, as has been stated, he finally gave up the reins of the old Re-corder to Mr. Bell. Colonel Wylie's life has been one of great activity. The political party, of which he has been an honourable and consistent member, owe much of its success in Leeds to his earnest and untiring efforts in the interests of the party. Hundreds of younger men have been appointed to comfortable positions, who have not done one hundredth part of the labour performed by Colonel Wylie, although no man is more respected among the townspeople of both political parties than the colonel. He deserved something of his party; but, to their disgrace, no recompense was made. colonel's family was for centuries occupants of a farm and mills near Kilmarnock, in Scotland. He had two brothers, who chose a sea-faring life. One died in India, captain of an East India ship; the other for several years commanded an ocean steamer. He sailed the ill-fated City of Glasgow till the voyage before she was lost. Each of the three sons gave ample proof of the training received, while boys, under the care of a good mother. The colonel was twice married. By his present wife he has a son aud a daughter. His wife is a daughter of the late James Borden, one of the early fathers of Methodism in the County of Grenville. Gilchrist, John, Reeve of the town of Orangeville, Ontario, was born in the County of Peel, on the 2nd of November, He is a son of Captain Duncan Gilchrist, by his wife, Annie, daughter of Dugald McDougall, of the island of Islay, Argyleshire, who came to Canada about the year 1832, settling in the township of Chinguacousy as a farmer, where he remained until his death. Duncan Gilchrist was a native of Islay, Argyleshire, Scotland, and when about sixteen left Scotland and emigrated to Jamaica, where he remained for seventeen years, being overseer there of a large sugar plantation. However, in 1834, he concluded to come to Canada, and in the same year arrived in the above named township, where he commenced business in the village of Edmonton as a general merchant. ing the rebellion of 1837-38 he took an active part on the loyalist side, receiving the commissions of lieutenant and captain in the 7th regiment of the North York militia, retiring with his rank. He remained in Edmonton for some years, but leaving there removed to the village of Norval, and afterwards to Brampton. Lastly he migrated to Orangeville, in which place he died in 1868. His wife died in Norval, in 1849. There were four in the family, the subject of this sketch being the eldest. JohnGilchrist received a common school education, but at the age of fourteen he be. gan a career of mercantile business. 1850 he entered the employ of the late George Wright, one of the pioneer merchants of Brampton, with which gentleman he remained for six years, when Mr. Wright Mr. Gilchrist retired from the business. continued with Mr. Wright's successors. Hughes & Thistle, until 1861, when they opened a branch store in Orangeville, Mr. Gilchrist becoming manager and a partner of the business there. This partnership existed until 1868, when our subject associated himself with W. R. Kent, and this firm, which is known as Gilchrist & Kent. still continues dealing largely in grain and produce, besides having a large general We may say here mercantile business. that Mr. Gilchrist was the first to establish a grain market in Orangeville. In 1866 he was elected a member of the village council of Orangeville, and was re-elected in 1880, 1881, 1882, and in 1883 was elected reeve of the town, and re-elected for the years 1884, 1885, and 1886. He is likewise a trustee of the High school board of Orangeville, having taken a very deep interest in educational matters. To the To the Liberal-Conservative party Mr. Gilchrist long ago gave a zealous and intelligent allegiance, and he is now vice-president of the Orangeville Conservative Association. In religion he gives his adherence to the Presbyterian communion, and has been a member of the St. Andrew's church board of management for many years. He has not taken much interest in secret societies, but he has been a member of the Orange order. In manners he is courteous and gentlemanly, and though rigid in his business relations, is a very great favourite, by reason of his genial qualities, in private life. He is unmarried.

Kerr, James Kirkpatrick, O.C., Toronto, was born near Guelph, in the township of Puslinch, on the 1st August, 1841. His father, Robert Warren Kerr, a civil engineer by profession, came to Canada from Ireland in 1832, and settled at Dundas, then one of the most enterprising towns in Western Canada, where he was appointed engineer of the Desjardins Canal Company. While residing here he married Jane Hamilton, daughter of James Kirkpatrick, who for more than a quarter of a century was treasurer of the County of Wentworth. Shortly after the completion of the Desjardins canal, Mr. Kerr removed to Puslinch, where his eldest son, James Kirkpatrick Kerr was born. The family removed to Hamilton in 1848, and in the course of a few years Mr. Kerr was appointed city chamberlain of Hamilton, a position which he held until his death in 1873. The subject of this sketch, James Kirkpatrick Kerr, receiv of Dr. at H select was c imme profes firm (partne the H tinued assum Macd was a by the the g bench again many inal, a known argued the P is a L attemn stood proffer He ha Freema order Ionic elected which subsequ of the elected Lodge Januar Wilson.ship, w been tw until S many o masonry Princip: ada, and Past Pro Priory o

Sovereig

Suprem

Suprem

he rece

Prince of

Templar

Grand C

regarded

craft, w

Lodge, a

fluence i

the frate

received his early education under the care of Dr. Tassie, the well-known educationalist. at Hamilton, and later at Galt. Having selected the law as his profession, Mr. Kerr was called to the bar in August, 1862, and immediately commenced the practice of his profession in Toronto, as a member of the firm of Blake, Kerr & Wells, two of his partners being the Hon. Edward Blake and the Hon. S. H. Blake, with whom he continued in partnership until 1885, when he assumed the head of the firm of Kerr, Macdonald, Davidson & Paterson. Mr. Kerr was appointed a Queen's counsel in 1876, by the lieutenant-governor, and in 1881 by the governor-general. He was elected a bencher of the Law Society in 1879, and again in 1881. He has been retained in many important cases both civil and criminal, amongst others, the great license case known as the Queen vs. Hodge, which was argued by him for the respondent before the Privy Council in England. Mr. Kerr is a Liberal in politics, but he has never attempted public life, although it is understood that he has been more than once proffered the the nomination of his party. He has been an active and enthusiastic Freemason since his admission into the order in 1863, when he was initiated in Ionic lodge, Toronto. In 1865 he was elected to the office of W.M. of this lodge, which he held for two years, and he was subsequently three times elected D.D.G.M. of the Toronto district. In 1874 he was elected Deputy Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Canada, and in the following January, on the death of William Mercer Wilson, he succeeded to the Grand Mastership, which he continued to hold (having been twice re-elected by the Grand Lodge) until September, 1877. He has occupied many other important positions in Freemasonry, and held the rank of Past Grand Principal J. in the Grand Chapter of Canada, and in the Grand Chapter of Scotland; Past Provincial Prior of the Sovereign Great Priory of Knights Templars of Canada, and Sovereign Grand Inspector General of the Supreme Council 33° of Canada, and of the Supreme Council 33° of England. In 1883 he received at the hands of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, Grand Master of Knights Templars, the distinguished order of the Grand Cross of the Temple. Mr. Kerr was regarded as a firm but wise ruler of the craft, whilst he presided over the Grand Lodge, and his advice is sought and his influence is recognized in all the councils of the fraternity. Mr. Kerr is a member of the Church of England. He has been for many years a member of the Diocesan and Provincial Synod, and for eleven years churchwarden of St. James' Cathedral. He has been twice married, first in 1864, to the youngest daughter of the Hon. William Hume Blake; and secondly, in 1833, to the daughter of the late Rev. George Stanley-Pinhorne, of Cumberland, England.

Wilson, Hon. Adam, Chief of the Queen's Bench Division of the High Court of Justice, and President of the High Court of Justice, Toronto, was born in Edinburgh, Scotland, on the 22nd September, 1814. He was educated in his native country, and emigrated to Canada in 1830. when he had not quite attained his sixteenth year, settling in the township of Trafalgar, in the County of Halton. Here he was engaged in the mills and store of his maternal uncle, the late George Chalmers. who represented the constituency in the Legislative Assembly. For upwards of three years he was so engaged, and during this time he gave evidence of considerable capacity for mercantile work. But the occupation was not to his liking, and he resolved upon the study of the law, and in January, 1834 was articled to the late distinguished advocate Hon. Robert Baldwin Sullivan, who was at the time in partnership with the great Reform leader, the Hon. Robert Baldwin. In Trinity term of 1839 he was called to the bar of Upper Canada, and on the following year entered into partnership with Mr. Baldwin, which connection was maintained till the latter gentleman retired from professional life in 1849. On the 28th November of the following year, Mr. Wilson was appointed a Queen's counsel by the Baldwin-Lafontaine government; and the present Justices Hagarty and Gwynne, the late Judge O'Connor and Chancellor VanKoughnet were at the same time invested with the silken gown. Mr. Wilson was, during the same year elected a bencher of the Law Society of Upper Canada. He now began to turn his attention to political matters, and at first concerned himself with municipal affairs. In 1855 he was elected alderman for Toronto, and in 1859 he became mayor; being the first chief magistrate that was elected in that city by popular vote; and he was reelected in 1860. In 1856 he had been appointed a commissioner for the consolidation of the public general statutes of Canada and Upper Canada respectively. In politics Mr. Wilson was inclined to the Reform party, and when the question of representation by population became the question of the day he joined that party, and those on his part who appreciated his splendid ability importuned him to offer for legislative place; but he steadily refused till the death of Mr. Hartman, the member for the north riding of the County of York, in the Canadian Assembly, in 1859. He then offered for the vacant seat, and was elected at the head of the poll. In parliament, as out of it, he took a position of uncompromising hostility to the Cartier-Macdonald administration, chiefly upon the question of legislative representation beforementioned. At the next general election he was returned for the same constituency; but in 1861 he was an unsuccessful candidate for West Toronto. In 1862 the Conservatives were overthrown, and the Sanfield Macdonald-Sicotte administration Mr. Wilson was invited to take formed. the solicitor-generalship, which office he accepted in the new government; and he held this portfolio, with a seat in the Executive, till 1863. On the 11th of May in the same year he was elevated to a puisne judgeship, in the Court of Queen's Bench for Upper Three months later he was trans-Canada. ferred to the Court of Common Pleas, where he remained until easter term, 1868, when he was again appointed to the Queen's Bench, as successor to the Hon. John Hawkins Hagarty, who had been appointed chief justice of the Common Pleas. In 1871 Judge Wilson was appointed a member of the Law Reform commission; and in 1878 his wide judical attainments received a more fitting measure of recognition by his appointment to the position of chief justice of the Court of Common Pleas. At the bar his figure was a conspicuous one; and as a judge he has been distinguished by his learning, by his great care, and by a thorough mastery of principles. Judge Wilson is author of a work entitled, "A Sketch of the Office of Constable," which was published at Toronto in 1961. He married a daughter of the late in 1861. Thomas Dalton, who was editor and proprietor of the Patriot for many years. Judge Wilson's ability for work is yet unimpaired, and he continues, as he long has done, to give lustre to the bench.

Price, Cornelius Valleau, LL.B., Judge, etc., Kingston, was born in the township of Camden, County of Addington, in 1837. He is a son of Thomas Price and Catherine Valleau, of U. E. loyalist descent. He worked with his father on the farm more or less till he had attained his twentieth year, receiving his literary education at the Newburgh Grammar school and

Queen's University, having graduated from the latter institution as B.C.L. in the spring of 1863. He commenced the study of law in the office of the late Thomas Kirkpatrick. and afterwards with Byron M. Britton, and was called to the bar in June, 1865. He afterwards entered the firm of Britton & Price, remaining in the same till 1878. when he was appointed County judge. In February of the next year he received the appointment of Surrogate Maritime judge. As a lawyer he was remarkable for the extent of his legal learning, and for his skill and judgment in the presentation of his case. As a judge he is conspicuous for the care with which he hears, sifts and deliberates, and his judgments have won the admiration of the legal profession. In his demeanour he is patient and cour. teous, and for this reason is a favourite with the bar. He was a member of the city council from 1870 until his appointment to the bench; also a trustee of the Kingston Collegiate Institute, and one of the promoters of the Kingston and Pembroke Railway, of which he was its solicitor. He remains a director of the Ontario Building and Savings Society, a governor of the General Hospital, and a judge Police Commission. In politics he was an active Liberal, and in religion he is a Methodist. He married, in 1868, Elizabeth, only surviving child of the late John Waudby and Elizabeth Pouchette, and by this lady has two daughters. Mr. Waudley, the father of Mrs. Price, was a man of great natural ability, and of wide acquirements. For a time, owing to his health, he was obliged to leave the pastoral care of his church; and he devoted himself to literature and journalism, and he took the supervision of the publication of the Monthly Review, which had for contributors Dr. Ryerson, R. B. Sullivan, W. H. Draper, and others of our most distinguished public

BÌ

h

cl

eċ

es

ge

to

la

Li

C٤

Se

th

Kı

He

gie

loy

wh

an

tar

cou

Wi

181

8i01

fatl

the

this

185

ing

han

buil

Afte

ford

of h

after

stree

his d

man

—in

year:

hono

ber c

ciety

felt t

took

John

was a

politi

serva:

party

to giv

bigote

to him

claime

eight

daugh

Kranz, Hugo, Berlin, Ontario, M.P. for North Waterloo, and J.P. for the same county, was born on the 13th June, 1834, at Lehrbach, Grand Duchy of Hesse Darmstadt. He is a descendant of a Hessian family, and is the only son of the late Charles Kranz, of Berlin, Ontario. Hugo came with his father to America in 1851, and after staying four years in the United States, Mr. Kranz, senior, settled in Berlin, Ontario, where he engaged in mercantile pursuits. The subject of this sketch received a sound education in the Polytechnic school at Darmstadt, for the educational course among the better classes in the German states is very thorough. Mr. Kranz, the subject of this memoir, concerned himself with politics shortly after his arrival in Canada. ambition first led him to seek municipal honours, and he has held the offices of townclerk, reeve and mayor for many years. In education he has taken a praiseworthy interest, and has been trustee and treasurer of the Berlin High school since 1871. At the general election of 1878 he was first returned to parliament, and he was re-elected at the last general election. In politics he is a Liberal-Conservative. He married in 1865, Catherine Seip, daughter of the late George Seip, brewer, of Berlin, Ontario, and by this lady has four children. Altogether Mr. Kranz may be described as a superior man. He has much ambition, and splendid energies; and in him North Waterloo has a law

from

ring

rick.

and

He

n &

878,

In

ived

time

e for

for

tion

uous

and

won

sion.

our-

irite

the

nent

ston

pro-

Railre-

and

eraļ ion.

d in

i, in

the

ette, Mr.

as a

vide his

oral

self

ook

the

tors

per,

I.P.

ame 334,

rm-

am-

rles

vith

fter

Мr.

rio,

its.

and.

png

loyal and capable representative. Crawford, Patrick .- Mr Crawford. who, at the time of his death, in 1878, was an ex-alderman of the city of Hamilton, Ontario, was born at Manor Hamilton, in the county of Sligo, Ireland, in the year 1809. With his parents he emigrated to Canada in 1819, settling on a farm in the 7th concession of Trafalgar, Halton county. Both the father and son were eminently successful in their agricultural pursuits, and the subject of this sketch continued to live on the farm till 1856, when he removed to Hamilton, remaining about four years, when he purchased a handsome property in East Hamilton, and built a pretty stone cottage upon it. After remaining there some time, Mr. Crawford returned to the city, and built a block of buildings on Wellington street. afterwards erected another block on Elgin street, where he remained up to the time of his death. Mr. Crawford was elected alderman for old St. Lawrence ward-now No. 6 -in 1861, and remained in office fifteen years, retiring at that period with many honours. He was a much respected member of the Irish Protestant Benevolent Society, and many of his fellow-countrymen felt the benefit of his generosity. He also took an active interest in the affairs of the John street Methodist church, of which he was a trustee at the time of his death. politics, he was a consistent Liberal-Conservative, and actively worked for that party, believing it to be the best calculated to give good government; but he was not a bigoted politician, and gave to those opposed to him the same right to speak and act as he claimed for himself. He left a widow and eight of a family—four sons and four daughters—to mourn his death. One of his sons is a respected lawyer in Alymer; another is in the Revenue office, Dundas: the third is a G. T. R. conductor; and the fourth had been assisting his father in looking after his business in Hamilton. Deceased was a citizen of a stamp which any community could ill afford to spare, and his sudden death was regretted by a wide circle. He died suddenly of heart decease at his own house. At a special meeting of the city council the mayor, in opening the proceedings, said :- "Gentlemen, I have called you together in consequence of the lamented death of an old and esteemed member of this council, Mr. Crawford. I think I express my own feeling, as well as that of this board, when I say that we all regret to hear of his sudden demise. He was a member of this council for many years—a man who enjoyed the respect and esteem of the citizens of Hamilton, and of every man who sat with him at this board. The object of my calling this meeting together is that we may make arrangments for the funeral, and to show our respect for deceased and condolence with his family. I am prepared to receive any resolutions." Alderman Mathews moved, seconded by Alderman Fitzpatrick :- "That this council, having learned with deep regret of the decease of our esteemed fellow-citizen, ex-Alderman Patrick Crawford, desire to express their sympathy for the bereaved family in the great loss they have sustained, and as a mark of respect to the memory of the deceased, it is resolved that the council do attend the funeral on Sunday afternoon at three o'clock; and that the city clerk be directed to forward a copy of this resolution to the widow and family of deceased." The quarterly board of Wesley church passed the following resolution of condolence, which was transmitted to the widow of the deceased :- "Dear Madam,-At a meeting of the quarterly board of Wesley church, held on the 6th September, 1878, it was moved by Bro. George Sterling, seconded by Bro. George Fletcher, and unanimously resolved, 'That our recording steward, be requested to prepare a letter of condolence. and present it to the widow of our late highly esteemed friend and co-laborer on this board, the late Patrick Crawford, Esq., and to have the same published in the city papers.' Permit us, dear madam, to express to you the great loss this branch of Christ's Church has sustained by the deeply lamented death of your late husband, and to tender to you our united sympathy and condolence under the great bereavement which has befallen yourself and your highly respected family by the sudden departure of your much-loved husband, and our dear friend, from the shores of time to his Father's house—to that inheritance incorruptible, undefiled, and that fadeth not away. And we unite in prayer to the Great Father of all that He may keep you and each member of your family as in the hollow of His hand, defend and sustain every one of you under every trial and difficulty of life, and as you are frequently to think of the many virtues and the noble Christian example of him who has so recently passed away, that you may each one be led to follow him as he followed the Lord, and that when you may be called from the shores of time to the Paradise of God, you may each and all be united to him who has just gone a little before to where no tears of sorrow are ever shed, but where all is ecstatic joy and unutterable bliss through the eternal ages of paradisical glory, there to enjoy a blessed reunion for evermore, in the possession of happiness without alloy, and of that sweet peace which shall ever flow onward as a river." Mr. Crawford was an old resident of Canada, a brother of the late Hon. George Crawford, Senator, and an uncle of the late John Crawford. lieutenant-governor Ontario. Mr. Crawford was a gentleman who enjoyed the widest share of public re-His benevolence was spect and esteem. always spontaneous and handsome; and the place that he had established in the hearts of the people was shown by the manner in which citizens thronged to pay the last sad tribute of respect.

Hamilton, Clark, Collector of Her Majesty's Customs, at Kingston, was born at Queenston, Ontario, on the 17th March, He is the second son of the late Senator John Hamilton, who was born at Queenston, Ontario, in 1802, by Frances Macpherson his wife. (See the late Senator Hamilton, elsewhere in these pages). Clark Hamilton was educated at the Preparatory school in connection with Queen's College, Kingston. For many years after leaving college, he was connected with the merchant marine; and he took considerable interest in military matters. In 1867 he was awarded a certificate at the Kingston military school. In 1882 he was appointed collector of Customs, at Kingston, and still holds that position. In 1854 he became a Freemason, entering St. Paul's lodge, No. 514, of Montreal. Mr. Hamilton married on the 22nd October, 1857, Sara D. Nixon, of New York. In religion he gives his adherence to the Presbyterian church.

Mackenzie, Hon. Alexander, Toronto, M. P. for East York, and ex-Premier of Canada, was born near Dunkeld, Perthshire, Scotland, on the 28th January, 1822, and is a son of the late Alexander Mackenzie, of Logierait, Perthshire, by Mary, second daughter of Donald Fleming, of the same parish, and grandson of Malcolm Mackenzie of Strathtummel. Our subject's father was an architect and contractor. and his son Alexander was designed for the same calling, beginning, as the custom is in Scotland, with a practical grounding in ma-The lad had attended school at his native place, acquiring all the branches of a thorough English education; but he did not rest content with what he had learnt in the schools, and continued the pursuit of know-ledge at the old cathedral City of Dunkeld and at Porth. His father died in 1836, leaving behind him seven sons, all of whom afterwards settled in Canada, our subject being the third of the number. One other member of the family showed great promise, Hope F. Mackenzie, but he was not spared long to the career which he had begun so brilliantly. In 1842 Alexander emigrated to Canada, settling at Kingston, but after a short period he set up business for himself as a builder and contractor at Sarnia, in Western Ontario. Here, while the storm of party passion was at its highest, the future premier of Canada calmly conducted his private avocations, though it is said that he was all the while gravely and with the most painstaking care, studying public questions. He had been a Whig in Scotland, and he brought his liberalism with him across the sea. It is not to be wondered at that the autocratic and reactionary doings of Lord Metcalfe met with his heartiest disap-In 1852 appeared the Lambton proval. Shield, with Mr. Mackenzie as its editor; and for two years, with singular clearness, force and directness, he contended through the columns of that paper, for that expansion of popular liberty, which, not a little, through his exertions in practical political life afterwards, was achieved. He was first elected to parliament in 1861, for Lambton; and he had no sooner taken his place in the House than he attracted attention. His style of parliamentary debate was unusual, and it was very acceptable. There was no bluster, no unsupported assertion, no freaks of blind passion, but every conclusion was reasoned from plainly established grounds, in the most lucid, fair and incisive language. Perhaps there was no other member in the House then-or since-whose utterances re-

ve:

sea

tal

wa

car

fus

Co Br

tio

was

of (

pla

par

em

Joh

Lor

The

whe

peri

the

Can

mis

ken: ∮ly n

> not with > duty

deta

and

gave

time

pend

inco

over

prom

îf tl

polic

pect, The

doub

real :

the r sal tr

presi

Comp

ance

ing a

the 2

1874,

of the

Ontar

the 21

1872, ber h

sures,

amend

of pro

useful

vealed so much patient and accurate research; and the quality, this "capacity for taking trouble," as Carlisle has phrased it, was characteristic of his whole subsequent career. He favoured confederation, but had little sympathy with the coalition, and refused the office of the presidency of the Council upon the retirement of George Brown from the extemporized administra-From the union of 1867 till 1873, he was leader of the Reform party in the House of Commons, and in the last named year was placed at the head of the entire Liberal party of the Dominion. On the 5th November, 1873, upon the resignation of Sir John Macdonald, he was called upon by Lord Dufferin to form an administration. The administration came upon the scene when the stars had taken an evil turn. A period of general depression had fallen upon the commerce of the civilized world, and Canada had to bear her burthen of the misfortune. As an administrator, Mr. Mackenzie was conscientious, and looking calm-* ly now at all the acts of his career, there is not one deed of his that can be stamped with reproach. So faithfully did he do his duty, so anxious was he to be master of the details of his double department-railways and canals and public works—that his health gave way under the strain. Meanwhile times were going from bad to worse; expenditure, unavoidably, was greater than income, and labour, like labour the world over, was in a bad way. Then came the promise of prosperity from Sir John's party, if the people would vote for a national policy, and captivated by the glittering prospect, the constituencies left Mr. Mackenzie. The Conservatives came to power, and nearly doubled the taxes; and now have deficits, real and promised, that must equal those of the regime of Mr. Mackenzie, when universal trade was paralyzed. Mr. Mackenzie is president of the Sovereign Fire Insurance Company, of the North American Life Insurance Company, and is a director of the Building and Loan Association. He was major of the 27th Lambton battalion up to October, 1874, when he resigned. He was a member of the Executive council and treasurer of Ontario in Mr. Blake's administration from the 21st of December, 1871, until October, 1872, when he retired. As a private member he is author of several important measures, viz.: the act amending the assessment act of U. C., 1863; that consolidating and amending the acts relating to the assessment of property, U. C., 1866; and the highly useful measure for providing means of egress

d,

er

g, l

b-

ıe

in

3-

ìs

ot

ıe

ld

a-

d

to

lf

in

m

d

3-

d

38 ιt

ρf

)-

n

from public buildings, 1866. As chairman of committee on municipal and assessment laws, 1866, he wrote and framed the greater part of the general act on municipal corporations, etc. All the measures of his government, including the enactment of a stringent election law, with the trial of election petitions by judges, and vote by ballot, and the abolition of the real estate qualification of members; the better administration of penitentiaries; the enactment of the marine telegraph law, which virtually abolished the monopoly of the cable company; the establishment of a Dominion military college, and the improvement of the militia system; the enlargement of the canals; the permanent organization of the civil service; the establishment of a supreme court for the Dominion; the reduction of postage to and from the U.S.; the free delivery of postal matter in cities and towns; the opening of direct mail communication with the West Indies; the construction of a trans-continental telegraph line; the better administration of government railways; an improved copyright law; the adoption of a final route for the Pacific railway; the opening of negotiations, conducted on our behalf by our own delegate in person, between Canada and the United States, for the establishment of an equitable reciprocity treaty between the two countries; a new insolvent law; the establishment of a territorial government for the great North-West; and the temperance act (Scott Act). These have all been more or less moulded and directed by Mr. Mackenzie. In addition, two very important questions, which for some time agitated the public mind and threatened the gravest complications—the Manitoba amnesty and the New Brunswick school questions-were satisfactorily adjusted during his administration. He has always held those political principles—which by some in England may be considered peculiar-of the universal brotherhood of man, no matter in what rank of life he may have taken his origin. Has believed, and now believes, in the extinction of all class legislation, and of all legislation that tends to promote any body of men, or class of men, for the mere fact of their belonging to a body or class, to a higher position politically than any other class in the country. In our great colonies, while no fault is found with the political organization of the mother country, or of any other country, we take our stand simply and completely on the ground that every man is equal in the eye of the law, and has the same opportunity, by exercising the talents with which God has blessed him, of rising in the world, in the confidence of his fellowcitizens—one man quite as much as another. Believes thoroughly in party government, and that it is utterly impossible to conduct the government of a new country without While an earnest advocate and upholder of the present connection with the mother country, he will always endeavour to maintain Canadian rights, and to bring Canada into prominence in the eyes of the world. Mr. Mackenzie's health has been weak for a considerable time, but hopes are entertained that absence from strain and overworry will restore him again. Mr. Macken-zie has been twice married. His first wife was Helen, daughter of William Neil, of Irvine, Scotland, died on the 2nd January, 1852, leaving a daughter, who is now the wife of the Rev. John Thompson, Presbyterian minister, at Sarnia. On the 17th June, 1853, he again married the estimable lady who now presides over his household, Jane Sym, eldest daughter of the late Robert Sym, of Perthshire, Scotland. The Hon. Mr. Mackenzie, we may say in closing, was twice offered the honour of knighthood by Her Majesty, but on both occasions declined its acceptance.

Woods, Joseph, ex-M.P. for Kent, Ontario, was born in 1808, at Sandwich, then the district town of the western district. He is the second son of the late He was James Woods, barrister-at-law. educated at the Grammar school, and received a solid education in English and French, and his name appears among the list of magistrates as early as 1833. At an early day he began the business of milling, and erected a large steam saw mill at the river Aux Puces, Essex, in 1834-5, which became submerged and useless by the great rise of the lakes in the years 1837-8, causing Mr. Woods, in common with all the inhabitants along the frontier, great loss. Removing such material as could be saved from the inundated territory, he built another mill at Chatham, Kent, which was lost by fire. On the breaking out of the rebellion in 1837, he took a prominent part on the Detroit frontier, raised a troop of cavalry, which was afterwards known as Grant's troop, and did service till after the end of the troubles on the western frontier by the battle of Windsor, and the summary execution of the invaders by Col. Prince's order. Mr. Woods participated in this final scene, and was also at the capture of the schooner Ann, at Malden. In March, 1841, the elections under the new constitutional act that united Upper and Lower Canada took place; and the election for the County of Kent assumed unexpected prominence. The Hon. S. B. Harrison, as provincial secretary in Lord Sydenham's new cabinet, having been defeated in his contest for the City of Hamilton, by Sir Allan MacNab, found himself forced to seek a seat elsewhere, and Kent was supposed to present the desired refuge. On coming into the county, Mr. Harrison found several candidates in the field, and the nomination about to take place within a day or two. When the hour of nomination arrived, it was found that Mr. Woods was to be the only competitor, and that the contest must go on despite all the allurements of government solicitation. The constituency included both counties of Kent and Lambton, 120 miles in length. The election began at noon, Monday, and ended at midnight on Saturday, with but the one polling place, Chatham. The result was in Mr. Woods' favour with a majority of fortythree; and he took his seat in the first parliament at Kingston. It was at this election, for the first time in the history of the country, that the officeholders throughout the western district were required to attend at Chatham and vote for Mr. Harrison, without regard to their personal or political preferences, and great was the consternation among these old tories in consequence. Mr. Woods had two later contests for the county, the one with Mr. Harrison, and the other with the Hon. John Henry Boulton, ex-chief justice of Newfoundland, and continued to represent Kent till 1848, when he resigned in favour of the Hon. John Hillyard Cameron, then solicitor-general. During the last years of Mr. Woods' appearance in parliament, parties in the House were very evenly divided, and his vote often gave the majority of one during the Draper and Sherwood administration. He was at one time offered a collectorship, with a salary of £750 a year, but declined it, and never became a government pensioner or employé. Mr. Woods was at one time lieutenant-colonel of the 14th battalion, Kent militia, and has all his life been an uncompromising tory of the old school. He has never married.

Jameson, Robert Hamilton, Whitby, son of Captain James Jameson, of Scotland, and Mary Carron, his wife, was been on the 19th September, 1844, at Aloa, Scotland. He was educated at Aloa parish school, and later at the academy at Aloa. He came to Canada in 1863, taking up his residence at Parkhill, whence he re-tair the the ly to S in t out to \ grod sust the Whi time sent boar mari Jam and Jam and ness. $_{ m the}$ on a has He l letic presi of th lishm

mo

in

stre

to

vol

Paint Acade Lake He ia Shant Upper an arc and r very sionat surrou wards artisti he occ painte only w was n

that h

He wa

of Art

Royal

In te

impu

says,

coat.

tative

O'

moved to Toronto, and entered the employ in that city of John Catto, merchant, King After some time he removed to Whitby, and he joined the Whitby volunteers, then under command of Captain (now Judge) Dartnell, and was with the force engaged at Ridgeway, during the Fenian raid of 1866. He subsequently went to New York, and after a time to Savannah, Georgia, where he was engaged in the dry goods business. Thence he set out for Scotland, returning in a short period to Whitby, where he has since been in a grocery, crockery and liquor business. He sustained heavy losses by the failure of the clock company, formerly in operation in Whitby. Mr. Jameson was elected several times to the town council, and now represents the town upon the public school board. He is a staunch Presbyterian. He married Mary Cecilia, daughter of the late James Blair, of the township of Whitby, and by this lady has six children. Mr. Jameson is an active and industrious man, and noted for his close application to business. Mr. Jameson has lately engaged in the cultivation of small and other fruits on a fine fourteen-acre lot he owns, and has met with a fair measure of success. He has always taken an interest in athletic and manly sports, and has been president of the St. Andrew's Society, and of the Curling club. He has a branch establishment at 518 Queen street west, Toronto. In temperament he is plucky and somewhat impulsive, and as one who knows him well says, "a large heart beats under his waist-coat." He is a worthy and typical representative of Scotland.

O'Brien, L. R., Toronto, Landscape Painter, President of the Royal Canadian Academy of Arts, was born at Shanty Bay, Lake Simcoe, on the 15th August, 1832. He is a son of Col. O'Brien of "The Woods," Shanty Bay. L. R. O'Brien was educated at Upper Canada College, and in 1847 entered an architect's office. He subsequently studied and practised as a civil engineer. From very early years Mr. O'Brien had a passionate love for art; and the picturesque surroundings of his boyhood went far towards quickening his inborn inclination for artistic work. With sketches of landscape he occupied much of his time, and though he painted a number of pictures, he worked only with the pretensions of an amateur. It was not till within the past twelve years that he adopted painting as a profession. He was vice-president of the Ontario Society of Artists from 1874 to 1880, when the Royal Canadian Academy of Artists was founded. He was appointed first president of the academy by His Excellency the Marquis of Lorne, and since then has held the same office by election. In 1880 Mr. O'Brien was asked to take charge of the illustration of "Picturesque Canada," and acted as art editor of that publication. How successfully he accomplished this task was predicted from the first by those who understood the. soundness of his judgment and the accuracy of his taste in making choice from among the number of subjects presenting themselves for such a work. The principal pictures of this distinguished artist are two pictures of Quebec, painted for Her Majesty Queen Victoria; a picture of Quebec painted for the Marquis of Lorne, as a marriage present to Prince Leopold; and pictures of Cape Trinity and other points on the Saguenay and the lower St. Lawrence and Gulf. But the list of Mr. O'Brien's pictures is very large, and there is not one that we have seen which does not, in our judgment, bear the double stamp of genius and of artistic culture. Mr. O'Brien's work is always natural; and it would be impossible to find in one of his pictures work that might be called a straining or an exaggeration. He does not aim at ruggedness, and this is why the careless critic in looking at some picture of his might say, "I should like if it were bolder." We regard this quality, however, not as proof that Mr. O'Brien's work lacks strength, but as decided evidence that it possesses restraint. As a rule his work is exquisitely natural, and we use the term "natural," not in the To one man sordid sense.

"The primrose by the river's brim, A yellow primrose is to him—Just that and nothing more."

But the true artist sees the primrose with the loving eye, and the poetic, the interpretive instinct; and it is only the man who has these qualities that can be said to be a true artist. In our judgment, Mr.O'Brien's pictures possess these qualities: the true, the fine, and the sympathetic. There is no riot of color, as we find in Jacobi's work. but "the blush upon the cheek of the rose is the same as the fairy set there." Even the flaming gorgeousness of our woods in autumn may be overdone with glaring paint. Mr. O'Brien never overdoes them. look yet for many a beautiful picture from his gifted pencil. Naturally enough, the services of an artist so endowed would be in much demand among the publishers of art magazines. To our American publications, and to the English Illustrated Magazine. Mr. O'Brien has contributed a number of sketches, taking for his themes old as well as new world subjects. But there is nothing which has inspired his pen in Great Britain that we more admire than the scene "Under the Cliffs of Devon after a storm," when the coast-guards' boat is to be dimly seen through the soft after-glamor of the tempest, which still bathes both cliff and sea. The foreground, with its patches of bright gorse, is very vivid. It is altogether an exquisite poem in color and outline. Mr. O'Brien married in 1860, Margaret, eldest daughter of the late Capt. St. Andrew St.

John, of Orillia.

Killey, J. H., Hamilton, Ontario, was born in Castletown, Isle of Man, on the 24th April, 1824. He studied in the Grammar school in that town, and received a general commercial education. But he now asserts that he spent too much time in acquiring Latin, which has not benefited him in any degree. He has had from his earliest years a great love for machinery, always delighting in visiting the mines near his home. The large pumping engines were to his young mind almost an inspiration. He used to watch them for hours; and before he had left school he acquired a knowledge of the theory of their action. His parents purchased for him "Lardner on the Steam Engine," and this he mastered before he was twelve years old. At fourteen, he constructed a crude model engine and boiler, and so excited was he when it was nearing completion, that he could not sleep for thinking of it. His parents about this time determined on sending him to Liverpool to one of the large foundries there, and prepared him for the foundry business, by sending him for a couple of years to cabinet-making. There was great difficulty in getting the position of apprentice at Liverpool, as many parents wished to have their children learn engineering. He, however, obtained a position in the Brunswick Foundry, where he remained five years, when he entered the Vulcan Iron Works, owned by John A. Gladstone, a cousin of the ex-Premier of England. He afterwards became foreman in the Canning Foundry; and then mechanical manager and partner in the Windsor Machine Works, near Liverpool. The American war, however, interfered with the business to such an extent that he left England with his brother, and came to Canada in 1864. He obtained employment with F. G. Becket & Co., Hamilton, who then did a large business. For some time after leaving this firm, our subject was foreman of the machine shop of the St. Lawrence Foundry, Toronto. He repaired, while in this firm's employ the steamer Rothsay Castle, a blockade runner, which had been brought up from Halifax by Captain Leach, after she had ran one season. He was appointed engineer of this boat, which position he held for three seasons, until the Fenian raids were threat. ened. He was then appointed engineer of the gun boat Prince Albert, which was employed in guarding the river and lake coasts. She took troops and munitions of war from Collingwood to Sault Ste. Marie. during the first Red River rebellion. Our subject served three years in this boat, and left her to build an oscillating marine engine and boiler, which he had designed for the composite steamer, Adelaide Horton. The engine was built in Hamilton, and the hull of the boat in Goderich. After the engine was completed, Mr. Killey commenced business at Hamilton in a small way, but it gradually increased until it became a very important one. The establishment has constructed a large number of engines and boilers and other works. The London, On. tario, pumping engine, which up to now, has been the most economical in Canada, was built at Mr. Killey's works. They have also built steam road rollers, stone breakers. sewer pipe machinery, and a large number of dynamo-electric machines. Mr. Killey was brought up as a Methodist, and went to the Methodist Sunday school as a pupil and teacher up to leaving for Liverpool. His home was always open to Methodist and other preachers, his mother being an en-thusiastic Methodist. In his younger days he had no decided religious convictions. When he left for Liverpool, in the year 1840, his mother put a Bible and Testament into his box, and asked him never to go to theatres or taverns, or keep bad company. He did not act upon her advice, but became a companion of sceptics, whom he met in the foundry; went to socialists' meetings at the hall of science, the socialists' meeting place, and bought all the "infidel" works he could afford to purchase, French, Germanand English. He was in immediate contact with the Owens, Barkers, Loyd Jones, George Jacob Holyoake, and others. He became a fluent controversialist and debater, and looked with contempt upon Methodist and other ministers. This state of mind continued till long after he came to Canada. About nine years ago he saw that he was drifting through companionship into habits of intemperance, and connected himself with a temperance organization, and has kept his pledge ever since. Soon after this he thought he might as well

p cl fo ta so M

Be be Ha

wa Ki

mo

of

U.

at

tio sch

lon

ma

spend his Sunday in some church. He attended a series of sermons on prophecy, by the Rev. Dr. James. These sermons he be-lieved entirely upset Volney's Ruins of Em-pires' course of statements as to biblical cities, and the proof of Volney's errors he regarded as so palpable that his reason compelled him to agree with the preacher. From this time he went on in his investigation, and the result was a complete reversal of all his previous modes of thought on religious subjects. Mr. Killey is a Freemason, and a Royal Templar; also a member of the Royal Arcanium; and a member of the Hamilton Gospel Temperance Reform Mission. He has all along been a supporter of the Conservative party on general principles, but would vote against them on any important question that his reason would tell him they were in error in adopting. He is connected with the firm of the Osborne-Killey Manufacturing Company, Hamilton, which firm builds steam engines, steam road-rollers, stone breakers, steam boilers, steam fire engines, compound condensing and other pumping engines, and sewer-pipe ma-They are also brass and iron chinery. founders, and have a large scale factory attached to their works, where they make scales to weigh from ten pounds to ten tons. Mr. Killey commenced business in Hamilton in 1870, as J. H. Killey & Co.; in January, 1884, the business merged into the Osborne-Killey Co., having been removed from Canning street to larger premises, near the G. T. R. and N. & N. W. R., on Barton street. The business is prosperous, extensive and progressive. To the fine abilities, and the high character of the subject of this sketch, the success of the establishment is largely due.

m's

ck-

ran

of

ree

at-

of

ras

ke

οf

ie.

ur

nd

∂n-

for

n.

he

n-

ed

ry

 $^{\mathrm{nd}}$

Meacham, James H., Postmaster of Belleville, was born on the 6th of November, 1807, in Thurlow township, County of Hastings, near Belleville. He is a son of Seth Meacham, doctor of medicine, who was physician to the Hastings Militia at Kingston, during the war of 1812-15. His mother was Elizabeth Meacham, daughter of Colonel Titus Simmons, one of the early U. E. loyalists. Our subject was educated at Belleville, at first receiving private tuition, and subsequently attending advanced schools. In November, 1847, he was appointed postmaster of Belleville, and this position he still retains. He has been a lifelong member of the Methodist church. He married on the 9th of October, 1832, C. C. Bogart, whose parents were also of U.

E. loyalist stock.

Sharp, John, Bath, Ontario, J.P. for the County of Lennox and Addington, was born the 14th day of January, 1825. a son of Lucas Sharp, who was born in 1796, and served in the war of 1812-15. gentleman drew a pension for seven years previous to his death, which occurred in His father (our subject's grandfather) was a U. E. loyalist, who came from a place near Kinderhook, in New York state, but eventually settled on the north end of lot seven, second concession, town-ship of Ernesttown. Lucas Sharp was born on this lot, and John Sharp, his son, was also born there. The latter had one younger brother, Andrew, who is now living in the township of Murray, a farmer. There was one sister, and she married John A. Shibley, J.P., merchants at Yorker, Camden. mother of our ubject was Sarah Denick, whose father was a U. E. loyalist. John Sharp, the subject of this sketch, was born and brought up on a farm, and he has pursued farming with considerable success. His father gave to him the south half of lot seven, third concession, part of the old farm, and he purchased the north half of lot eight, second concession, on which he now lives. He was awarded the bronze medal in 1884 for the riding, as will be seen by the agricultural report for 1884. He was educated at Bath, and spent the winter of 1842-43 at the Kinderhook academy, where he studied the English branches. He holds a commission as ensign from Sir Edmund Head, dated April 30th, 1858; held the office of assessor for the township of Ernesttown for the years 1855-56; was trustee of school section No. 10 for twenty-one years, and secretary-treasurer for the same time up till 1877, when he retired. He was likewise connected with the Township and County Agricultural societies for forty years, and was president of each. In January, 1874, he was elected councillor for the township, and held a seat at the council board until the end of 1884, with the exception of one year, 1880. For five years he had a seat at the county council, and was reeve in 1884, and then retired. He was appointed a justice of the peace for the united Counties of Frontenac, Lennox and Addington in 1857, and retained the office until the separation of the counties. - He was, being at this date a J.P. for the same, then re-appointed for the County of Lennox and Addington. From early years he had a preference for the Wesleyan Methodist church, and was a member of that body for twenty-five years. Now, however, he is a member of the United Methodist church. He married, on the 4th of October, 1854, at Kinderhook, in the State of New York, Margaret Vanslyck, of that place. There are by this marriage five children, three boys and two girls. The eldest son is mar-ried, and has a farm by the Kingston and Napanee road, three miles from his father's homestead. The second son is married. and lives upon and works the farm with his father; and the third son is at home. One daughter is married to T. F. Holgate, B.A., professor of mathematics in Albert College, Belleville. Mr. Sharp enjoys the repute of being a man of high principles of honour, and of much kindliness of heart. He enjoys, too, in a large measure, the respect and goodwill of those among whom his worthy and honoured career has been passed.

Henry, James, M.B., M.D., M.C.P. S.O., Orangeville, Ontario, was born at the village of Sand Hill, Peel county, on the 13th September, 1843. He is a son of Thomas Henry, M.D., University of Edinburgh, M.R.C.P.S., Ireland. He was educated at Trinity College, Dublin, and afterwards entered the British navy as assistant surgeon. He sailed around the coast of Africa for a time, but owing to sickness was obliged to retire. In 1835 he came to Canada and landed in Toronto. Brought up in the old country a Tory, yet during the stirring times of 1837-38, he deeply sympathized with the Mackenzie party, and cast in his lot with the so-called rebels, believing that the rebellion was perfectly just, the people having been goaded into revolt through bad government. Before coming to Canada, he settled for a short time in the City of New York, and practised his profession; but his brother, Samuel Henry, who was then a resident of Canada, and in bad health, wished him to leave the United States, and come over here, which he did, and settled in the township of Albion, Peel county, where he remained for forty-five years practising his profession. He was a gentleman whom many of the old citizens of Toronto, still remember In 1875 he removed to the City of Toronto, where he died in 1878. He was well known as one of the old Baldwin Reformers, and always took an active part in the political contests of the day. He served as reeve of the township of Chinguacousy for several years, and died respected and beloved. His wife was Margaret, daughter of James Brett, senr., of Ireland, who crossed the ocean and settled in the township of Mono, Simcoe county. Mr. Thomas Henry had a family of five. the subject of this sketch being the eldest son. James Henry was educated first under Dr. Howe, then principal of the Grammar school, at Toronto, completing his studies at the University of Toronto. At the age of seventeen he began the study of medicine, and entered the Toronto School of Medicine, graduating from the Toronto University in 1863, as M.B., and in 1864 as M.D. Almost immediately thereafter he went to Orangeville, then a small village, and commenced practice; and here he has remained ever since, having now the pleasure of finding himself master of a handsome practice. During the time of the Trent affair, he was gazetted ensign in the 100th regiment, old Canadian militia. Dr. Henry has been connected with the council of Orangeville for many years, and in 1881 was elected mayor of the town and re-elected for 1882, 1883, and is mayor at present. He always has taken an active part in the welfare of the town, and was particularly active during the building of the Toronto, Grey & Bruce Railway, and the Credit Valley Railway. He is a member of several benevolent societies, among which may be named the Oddfellows, Foresters and the United Workmen. In politics he is a Liberal-Conservative, and is a member of the Church of England. He married in 1866, Esther, second eldest daughter of the late James Graham, an old resident of Orangeville, and has a family of eight,—six boys and two girls. In his profession Dr. Henry has been what men term lucky, and he has the repute of much skill. He is exceedingly genial, has no ambition for public life, being contented with his profession and the enjoyments of domestic and social life.

di th

be in th

C.

ad Pr

18

tra

scl

en

gre W

the Hi

car

Ju

die

ter

Or

and

wa

do

to

On

in t

ing

Chi

cal

Car

Mr

ters

con

Cha

was 185

trea

upo

new

liter

Platt, John Milton, M.D., M.P. for Prince Edward, Picton, Ontario, was born in the township of Athol, County of Prince His grand-Edward, Ontario, in 1840. parents came from Dutchess county, in the State of New York, in 1790, and settled in Hallowell, County of Prince Edward, when that district was yet a wilderness of unbroken forest. John Milton Platt received his earliest educational training at his native place; but he afterwards attended the Fort Edward institute, New York state, the Normal school, Toronto, and Victoria college, Cobourg, graduating M.D. from the last named institution in 1869. Dr. Platt has always been a sincere friend of education; and was a public school inspector for a period of ten years. In military matters, too, he has always taken a deep interest. He grad-

nated from the Military school at Toronto in 1866, and is surgeon to the 16th Battal-Early in his career he had a taste for literary work, and, naturally enough, drifted into journalism. He was the first editor and publisher of the Picton New Nation, which paper was afterwards merged into the Times. Dr. Platt was first elected to parliament at the last general election, and he has proven himself a most active and useful member. He is a Liberal in politics, and a free trader in principle; but he did not at the last election strongly oppose the national policy, being disposed to allow the country to test its power for good or evil during a period of depression. He regarded the policy in this country as one of experiment, holding that its operations would soon be plain to all men, and that it should be judged by its fruits. Dr. Platt married, in 1872, at Hallowell, Amelia, daughter of the late Arthur Branscombe, whose parents came from New Brunswick.

bl

le

1 d

> Chamberlin, Lieut.-Col. Brown, C.M.G., D.C.L., Queen's Printer for Canada, Ottawa, was born at Frelighsburg, Province of Quebec, on the 26th March, 1827. He received his early educational training at his native place, and at St. Paul's school, Montreal, where he subsequently entered McGill University, taking his degree of B.C.L. in 1850, and D.C.L. in 1867. Was for several years an elective fellow of the University, and a member of the High School Board; also M.A. Honoris causa of Bishops' College, Lennoxville, In June, 1870, he married Agnes Dunbar Moodie, relict of Charles Fitzgibbon, and daughter of J. W. Dunbar Moodie, of Melsetter, Orkney, who served in the 21st Fusiliers, and was wounded at Bergen op Zoom; afterwards married Susannah Strickland, of Revdon Hall, Suffolk, England, and emigrated to Canada. He became sheriff of Hastings, Ont., and Mrs. Moodie made herself known in the literary world as the author of "Roughing it in the Bush" and other works. Mrs. Chamberlin has made a name for her botanical drawings and illustrations of works upon Canadian botany, published by her aunt, Mrs. Traill, another of the Strickland sisters, so well known to literature. Having completed his educational course, Mr. Chamberlin began the study of law; and was called to the bar of Lower Canada, in 1850. He practised his profession at Montreal, but conjointly took literary work upon his hands. In this country, the newspaper press is the chief outlet for the literary spirit, and Mr. Chamberlin associated himself with the Montreal Gazette. His literary attainments are very wide, and there is no room to doubt that, if he had consecrated his time to letters, he would have given us work of permanent and high value. His life has been an active and a very useful one. He was honorary secretary to the Board of Arts and Manufactures of Lower Canada, from 1857 to 1862; was president of that body, from 1862 to 1865; and was a commissioner, on behalf of Canada, to the London Universal Exhibition, in 1862. In 1867 he was elected to the House of Commons for Missisquoi, and represented that constituency till 1870, when he received the appointment of Queen's Printer. In militia matters, Colonel Chamberlin has always taken an active interest. He has been a colonel of the 60th battalion, Missisquoi volunteers; and in May of 1870, took part in repelling a body of Fenian invaders at Eccles Hill. For his promptness and bravery on this occasion, he was created by the Queen a Companion of the Order of St. Michael and St. George. He has been for some years a member of the Council of the Art Association, Ottawa, and was vice-president in 1884. Is now president of the St. Georges' Society there.

Henderson, William Henry, M.D. C.M., Queen's University; M.C.P. & S., Ontario; and M.R.C.S., England, Kingston, was born on October 7th, 1856, at Kingston, Ontario. He is a son of Peter Robertson Henderson, managing director of the Montreal Transportation Co., who was born in Aberdeen, and is a cousin of the Hon. Joseph Robertson, treasurer for the Province of Quebec; and also a cousin of Prof. Robertson Smith, the eminent oriental scholar, and one of the editors of the "Enclyclopædia Britannica." His mother was Henrietta Sweetland, a native of Devonshire, and a sister of Sheriff Sweetland, of Ottawa. H. Henderson was educated at the Kingston Collegiate institute. At the age of nineteen years he began the study of medicine at the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons, Kingston, was appointed house surgeon to the Kingston General Hospital in 1878, and graduated in April, 1879, at the head of the graduating class. During 1879 and 1880 he visited Great Britain and the continent, in pursuit of medical studies. He took a special course of practical pathology at St. Thomas' Hospital, under Prof. Greenfield, in the summer of 1879, and worked at histology and physiology at Vienna, during the winter of 1880. He obtained the diploma of the Royal College of

Surgeons, England, in Nov., 1879. Dr. Henderson joined the 14th battalion, or Princess of Wales' Own Rifles in 1881, as assistant surgeon, and was appointed surgeon in September, 1884. He organized an ambulance corps, and volunteered for service in the North-West rebellion in the spring of 1885, but as the regiment was required at Fort Henry for garrison duty, the adjutantgeneral ordered him to remain with his corps. He is professor of physiology in the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons, He is professor of physiology in the Kingston; is curator of the museum and pathologist to the Kingston General Hospital; and he is likewise public vaccinator for Frontenac ward, in the city of Kingston, and surgeon to the Kingston and Pembroke Railroad. He was elected supreme physician for the Independent Order of Forresters in August, 1885, and is a member of the Supreme Executive Council. He has belonged to the order since 1882, and takes great interest in its affairs. Dr. Henderson is a member of the board of directors for the Independent Oddfellows' Relief Association, and physician to Cataraqui lodge. He has been an Oddfellow since 1881. He is medical examiner for Limestone lodge. Ancient Order of United Workmen, and has been a member of the order since 1880. He is a life member of the Ophthalmological Society of Great Britain and Ireland (1881); a member of the British Medical Association; and vice-president of the Ontario Medical Association. He has visited the principal cities in the United States and Canada, from Chicago to New York. In 1879 he sailed from New York, on 30th of April; saw the Giant's Causeway, and landed at (Grenock) Glasgow on May 10th. From this city he went to London, from London to Dublin, and thence to the lakes of Killarney, etc. In December, 1879, he visited Edinburgh, Dundee, Aberdeen, Balmoral castle, and various places in the north of Scotland. He then returned to London, and in February, 1880, travelled through considerable portions of France, Germany, and Austria, visiting Cologne, Munich, Frankfort, and Berlin, and studied medicine for three months at Vienna. Returning, he remained a month at Paris, and some time at Strasburg. In religion, Dr. Henderson is a Congregationalist, and has always been a member of that body. He was married December 30th, 1885, to Ella, the only daughter of Major John Everitt, of Collins' Bay. The following notice of the wedding is from the columns of the Toronto Globe: "A most interesting event which, on account of the popularity of the contracting parties, has attracted considerable attention, took place this afternoon at the 'Woodlands,' the residence of the bride's father, near Collins' Bay. The bridegroom is one of Kingston's most popular young physicians, who has attained a high professional standing. The ceremony, at which only the nearest relatives were present, was berformed by the Rev. Mr. Green, curate of St. George's Cathedral. Miss Lizzie White, daughter of Col. White, of Ottawa, Miss F. Daly, of Napanee, and Miss Graham, of Hull, were bridesmaids, and Dr. J. H. Betts, of Kingston, and Messrs. James and Norman Henderson, brothers of the bridegroom, were the groomsmen. The popularity of the bride was fully demonstrated by the many handsome presents she was the recipient of from her numerous friends. Dr. Henderson is extremely brilliant and successful in his profession, and is said to be master of an extensive and profitable practice. His manners are very genial, and the measure of popularity that he enjoys is

an A:

ra af Co kr pa wl Ca

w G es ad la lit th

th

co ist

an

be

a '

wl Uj ad its ha

M ha

it ea

sa ho til

m

jo ta:

ar tra

th

an

de

wa sel th

tu

th his

elo

ers

gif cal

wr ad

Do

McDougall, Hon. William, C.B., was born in the town of York, now the city of Toronto, on the 25th January, 1823. He is a son of the late Daniel McDougall, who, three years after his son's birth, removed to a farm on Yonge street, a few miles north of the city. His paternal grandfather was John McDougall, a native of the High-lands of Scotland, and a U. E. loyalist, who served in the British commissariat service during the revolutionary war. When hostilities ended, John McDougall removed to Nova Scotia, where he married the daughter of a British officer, who had settled at Shelburne, and attempted a commercial career in that place. But he shortly afterwards removed to Upper Cannda, settling in Little His son Daniel married Hannah Mathews, of St. Andrews, Lower Canada, and this couple were the parents of William McDougall. He received his preliminary education, we learn, at various public and private schools, and afterwards spent some time at Victoria College, Cobourg. Much of his early life was passed upon his father's farm on Yonge street, where he doubtless laid the foundation of the robust physique which he has possessed ever since attaining manhood. When he reached his eighteenth year he entered the office of Price & Ewart, barristers. of Toronto, where he began the study of law. But before he had concluded his studies, his contributions to the newspaper press had attracted much at-În Michaelmas term, 1847, he tention.

was admitted as an attorney and solicitor; he entered into partnership with Ambrose Gorham, and practised his profession for a time. But his inclinations were rather for literature than for law, and soon afterwards he connected himself with the Canada Farmer, which subsequently was known as the Canadian Agriculturist. This paper he continued to publish till 1858, when he sold the copyright to the Upper Canada Board of Agriculture, by whom it was subsequently sold to the late Hon. George Brown. In 1850 Mr. McDougall established the North American, a paper of advanced reform views, and which had a large following, owing to the split in the liberal party, of which the Globe had been the organ. The boldness, the ability and the strong individuality displayed in the columns of the new-comer into the journalistic field turned all eyes upon its editor; and Mr. McDougall was at once declared to be a "coming" man. That word coming is a very accurate and comprehensive phrase, when the public mouth uses it in this way. Upon the formation of the Hincks-Morin administration, the North American became its mouthpiece; and it enjoyed all the hatred of the Globe's soul. But after 1854, Mr. McDougall and George Brown "shook hands," for they had both come to see that it was foolish after all to be hostile, when each was striving, in the main, towards the same ends. The process of reconciliation. however, was slow, and it was not complete till 1857, when the North American became merged in the Globe; and Mr. McDougall joined the staff of the latter journal, maintaining the connection for two years. His articles were trenchant, thoughtful and untrammelled; but it was too much to hope that amity could continue between himself and a man like Mr. Brown, who was always determined to have things exactly his own way. In 1858 Mr. McDougall offered himself for the north riding of Oxford against the late Judge Morrison, and he was returned at the head of the poll. He sat for that constituency until 1863. He soon took his place in the House as one of its most eloquent, powerful and impassioned speakers; and he presented that combination of gifts, found so rarely, namely, great oratorical power and conspicuous ability as a writer. In the Sanfield Macdonald-Sicotte administration, formed in 1862, Mr. Mc-Dougall took the office of Commissioner of Crown Lands, and he retired with his colleagues, when they were defeated, in 1864. He long advocated "representation by

ble

he

e's

m

nσ

es-

ch

728

of te,

F.

of H. nd

le-

u-

ed as ls.

nd

to

le

۵d

is

ty

Ĭe

tó

th

as

h-

to er l-

er

le

h

18

e

population," but came in time, with other thoughtful public men, to see that the scheme was impracticable; but he was an ardent advocate of the scheme of confederation, into which he claimed all the irritating questions might be merged. In the coalition of 1864 Mr. McDougall was one of the two reformers who accompanied Mr. Brown into the Cabinet. He became Provincial Secretary, which office he held till the dissolution of the old regime under the new constitutional order of 1867. He was then sworn minister of Public Works in the confederation cabinet; and during the same year was created a Companion of the Bath, civil, having taken a foremost part at the conferences which formulated the confederation scheme. From his first entry into public life Mr. McDougall always had taken a deep interest in the North-West territories; and he probably knew more about affairs in that region than any other public man in the country. In 1868 he accompanied Sir George Cartier to England to confer with the Imperial authorities on matters of public interest, including the defences of the Dominion and the acquisition of the North-West territory. It was only fiting that recognition should be given to a man who had bestowed so much of his thought and his time to the study of the entire problem presented in the North-West: and on the 28th September, Mr. McDougall was appointed lieutenant-governor of the North-West territories and Rupert's Land, at a salary of $7,000 per annum. During the next month the lieut-governor elect set out for his seat of government, and on the 30th of the month reached Pembina. In the meantime Col. Dennis, with a large staff had been sent out to make surveys in the country, and the Metis population felt in-dignant that he should have come into territory not yet in possession of his government, and begin laying down new lines and abolishing old ones without so much as saying "by your leave." Then, demogogues had gone through the country declaring that the half-breed people had been transferred from the jurisdiction of the Hudson Bay Company to the government of Canada like a flock of sheep without having been consulted. There was really no grievance in the matter; though it would have showed greater tact had the people been advised and formally apprised of the transfer by properly accredited agents. Louis Riel was now abroad in the territories, and with his usual lack of capacity for seeing beyond the immediate time and the present circumstances, allowed himself to be carried by his ambition almost beyond the domain of reason. A national council was formed, with a man named Bruce at its head, though the potential head was Riel, and by this body the lieutenant-governor was forbade to enter the territories. Mr. McDougall disregarded the order, however, crossed the line, and quartered himself and his staff at a post of the Hudson Bay Company. But a party of half-breeds came there, displayed much excitement, and made divers threats if he did not return. Deeming prudence to be the better part of valour, and being, at any rate, powerless to fight his way to Fort Garry, the governor retraced his steps to the southern side of the line. Then the Metis under Riel, became more insolent. They secured Fort Garry; proclaimed themselves masters of the territory; and emblasoned their dominion by the trial and execution of Thomas Scott. Without a patient and a thorough hearing of the case, and to cover its own criminal indecision, ignorance and tardiness, the government seemed to throw the blame of the miscarriage of its scheme upon Mr. McDougall, and appointed another gentleman to the administration of government in Manitoba. But in the mean time, Mr. McDougall had returned to Ontario; though he did so only after he had discovered that the Government had refused to accept the transfer of the territory at the time stipulated. They had simply sent Mr. McDougall, with a personal staff, to a country seething with revolt; and then left him singlehanded to deal with the insurgents. never remember having read anything more criminal and indefensible. McDougall was afterwards appointed by the Hon. Sandfield Macdonald government trustee of the Canada Southern Railway municipal bonds. After his return from England in 1873, whither he had proceeded on important government business, he became a member of the law firm of Mc-In May, Dougall & Gordon, Toronto. 1875, he became the representative of South Simcoe, in the legislature of Ontario, and sat in the house till 1878, when he stood for Halton in the House of Commons. He was elected, and sat for Halton till the last general elections. Mr. McDougall has been twice married. His first wife was Amelia Caroline, daughter of Joseph Easton, of Millbank, County of York. She died in 1869; and Mr. McDougall married again in 1872, Mary Adelaide, daughter of Dr. John Beatty, formerly a professor in the University of Victoria College, Cobourg. Mr. McDougall is one of the foremost constitutional lawyers in Canada, and one of our very ablest public men. We have no doubt that the country is destined yet to hear much from a man so distinguished.

Spiers, William, Berlin, Ontario, was born on his father's farm of Knowhead, Galston, Ayrshire, Scotland, on the 15th of August, 1825. His father, John Spiers, was born near Kilmarnock, and the birthplace of his mother, Elizabeth Brown, was Kilmaurs, Scotland. There were not superior educational advantages within the reach of William Spiers, but he attended the school in the village of Darvel, near his native place, where he received a plain, sound educa. tion. He lived with his parents on the old homestead farm till 1853. A few years previously he had sought to induce the owner of the farm to build new houses and a new road to it, but this man would not consent. Mr. Spiers cropped the best of the farm for a few years, and then gave up the lease, which had seven or eight years to run. He invested the proceeds of the farm for the benefit of his parents, and sailed for Canada in the fall of 1856. Here he had to begin anew, penniless, and without a trade. His half-brother, William Osborne, now of Hamilton, and his brother, David Spiers, of Galt, who were then in company, carrying on a large business in the latter town, opened a branch store in Berlin, in the spring of 1857, and William Spiers' first employment was being sent from Galt, on the 8th of May, with a load of carpenters. He next had a number of plasterers and painters to look after till the 23rd July, on which day the store was opened. The firm sent up one of their most experienced young men to manage the business, and he remained for two years or better. From the beginning Mr. Spiers kept the cash book and the keys of the building. At that time the other clerk made things so unpleasant for Mr. Spiers that he determined that either one or the other must leave, and at the same time handed in his resignation. The affair ended with the domineering young man being removed to Galt. The only assistant he had now left was an apprentice boy, Joseph F. Eby, now of the tirm of Eby, Blain & Co, who remained with him four and a half years. The Galt firm seemed to have doubts about his ability to manage the business, and made several proposals of partnership, all of which he refused. He offered, however, to risk his salary against any loss that he would make the first year, which was accepted. But instead of making any loss, stock-taking showed that he had made enough to cover losses during the first two years, and had also a nice little sum to the good. After this period things went on smoothly enough from year to year till 1864, when Mr. Spiers bought out the business. With the slender bought out the business. capital, he having only the savings from a small salary, he was obliged to watch very closely for the first two or three years. Ten years later, in 1874, he was induced to purchase the buildings, which he now occupies. The last ten years has been a continuation of the same business with little change, and William Spiers has always been able to pay a hundred cents in the dollar, and has never had a note protested. In politics Mr. Spiers takes considerable interest, but he is of too independent a turn of mind to give his allegiance to any party. In religion he is a member of the Reformed Presbyterian church, or Covenanters, as that body is called. Up to the time of his leaving Scotland, he was a member of this communion, and the people preserve the memory of the old times by holding services still at Drumclog, where Mr. Spiers used to attend. The subject of this sketch has not

Mr.

titu-

our

oubt

hear

was

Gal-

h of

was

blace

Kil-

erior

h of

hool

lace,

uca-

old

pre-

vner

new

ent.

arm

ase,

He

the

a in

ew,

alf-

on,

who

rge

 $_{
m nch}$

ind

ing

ber

till

7as

ost

si-

ig. so

erist iis

iilt. ne th m to o-

Dupuis, Thomas R., M.D., F.R.C. P.S.K., M.R.C.S., Eng., Kingston, Ontario, was born in the township of Ernesttown, on March 25, 1833. He moved with his parents to Portland, Frontenac county, in 1834, where he was brought up. His father was Joseph Dupuis, who was born in the County of Maskinonge, Province of Quebec, being a descendant from an old Dupuis family, which was amongst the first settlers of Lower Canada. M. Dupuis, senr., enlisted in the Canadian militia when a young man, and was at the battle of Chrysler's Farm; came thence to Kingston, where he was discharged, and received his scrip for land. Dr. Dupuis' mother was Eleanor, a daughter of James Baker, who was born at Tarrytown, New York state, in 1767, and left there with his father, Samuel, on the breaking out of the revolution. After suffering much hardship, the family reached Nova Scotia, being known as U. E. loyalists. The son entered the British army and served seventeen years, sometime in Jamaica, but chiefly in the maritime provinces and in Newfoundland. He married, and his only child, Eleanor, was born in Halifax, February 25th, 1800. He afterwards moved to Kingston, where Eleanor Baker married Joseph Dupuis. Joseph Dupuis and wife lived for some time in Kingston, then settled in Ernesttown, where two sons were born to them, and afterwards bought a farm in the township of Portland, Frontenac county, where two other sons were born. Joseph Dupuis' family consisted of four sons, the eldest of which is a farmer, the second is our subject, the third is professor of mathematics in the University of Queen's College, and the fourth is dead. Thomas R. was brought up to farming, educated at the common school, before and during the commencement of Dr. Ryerson's common school He studied classics and mathematics at an academy in Kingston, and obtained a first-class certificate, taught school several years, and privately studied the various branches of a liberal education during that time. He entered the medical school of Queen's College in 1856, and graduated M.D. in the spring of 1860. He practised first for a short time at Harrowsmith; then at Odessa; and in the spring of 1872 moved to Kingston. In 1864 he spent a summer in the Armory Square hospital, Washington, D.C., as assistant surgeon, United States army. In 1870 he took a summer session in the Harvard Medical school, attending the Massachusetts and City hospitals in Boston, and studying diseases of the eye under Drs. Williams and Derby, of the eye infirmaries. In 1871 he received the diploma of Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons of Kingston. In 1881 he crossed the ocean, and took the diploma of the Royal College of Surgeons of England. Dr. Dupuis was inspector of schools for Portland, Barrie, Clarendon, Hinchinbrooke and Kennebec, for the years 1859 and 1860; was trustee of the public school at Odessa from 1862 to 1869; was alderman of the City of Kingston from 1874 to 1880, and again in 1882. He has been surgeon of Kingston hospital since 1874. He joined the Orange order in 1858, but for certain reasons has never taken an active part in that body; he became a master Mason in 1873. He has always been a Liberal-Conservative in politics; and is a member of the Sons of Temperance. In 1878 he was solicitated to offer himself as a candidate for M.P. for the County of Frontenac, on an independent ticket, but declined the honour, on the grounds of being a personal friend and staunch supporter of the Hon. G. A. Kirkpatrick, and of having no ambition in that direction. Dr. Dupuis has travelled considerably in the United States and the eastern parts of Canada. He has twice visited Great Britain and Ireland, France, Germany, Switzerland, Belgium, and Holland, and once went through Italy, visiting Genoa, Pisa, Rome, Naples, Mount Vesuvius and vicinity, Venice, Florence, Milan, Lake Maggiore, etc. He has written lengthy descriptions of his travels. In religious matters he is inclined to be rational. He was brought up between the Methodist and English churches, but chiefly in the former. He could not find scope for reason in the dogmas of theology, and hence gradually dropped one after another, until he came to look upon religion as the highest system of morality, having claims upon us from its intrinsic adaptability to our needs, rather than from any divine authority which it possesses. He married, on the 23rd day of January, 1861, Elizabeth E., second daughter of Denis Lake, of the township of Portland, a very wealthy and influential farmer. He has had five children; the first and second died when young; the last three are still living, the oldest two being at college. Dr. Dupuis is still a young man in his feeling and activities, doing a large practice, attending to college and hospital duties, and taking an active part in municipal and other public matters. The cause that led him into the profession of medi-cine was that which leads many another young man into it, namely, the facility with which its studies may be pursued, and the fact that medical men are scattered all over the country, and act as incentives to others to enter the profession. We may add that Dr. Dupuis was appointed professor of botany in the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons of Kingston, in 1868; that he vacated the chair of botany and accepted that of anatomy in 1873, and still holds this by choice. He was appointed lecturer on clinical surgery in 1880, the duties of which he still performs. He was elected to the council of Queen's University in 1877; elected again in 1882, and still retains the office. The Dr. is a good general scholar, able to read several languages, and well informed on almost every topic, a popular and effective speaker, a fluent and graceful writer, a poet of considerable talent, and perhaps the ablest class lecturer in the Medical school at Kingston.

Murphy, John Bernard, M. D., C.M., Belleville, Ont, was born in the township of Asphodel, County of Peterborough, on the 31st of March, 1850. His father was Timothy Murphy, and his mother Catherine McCarthy. His father came to Asphodel, from the County of Cork, Ireland, with his parents, in 1829, being then only five years of age, and remained there until his death, which took place on the 7th of August, 1884, he was one of the most successful farmers in the township. His mother settled in the township with her parents about the same time, and is still alive. John Bernard Murphy was educated at the Norwood Grammar school, afterwards at St. Michael's college, Toronto, and finally at Queen's college, Kingston, where he graduated in medicine in due Having filled the honorary position of house surgeon to the General hospital for a year, he removed to Belleville, in 1876, and began the practice of his pro-In 1881 he received the appointment of physician to the Ontario Institution for the Deaf and Dumb, which office he still holds. Dr. Murphy is a Liberal in politics, and is 1st vice-president of the Hastings Reform Association. He is a Roman catholic, both of his parents having professed the same religious belief. He married at Toronto, on July 22nd, 1885, Anna, third daughter of the late L. G. Bolster, and sister of Lancelot Bolster, assistant manager of the Bank of Commerce at Toonto.

Ross, John Jeremiah, General Manager of the Erie and Huron Railway, Chatham, Ontario, was born at Toronto, on the 2nd April, 1843. His father was John Ross and his mother Elizabeth Fraser. J.J. Ross was educated at the Model and Public schools of his native city, but when he had attained his fourteenth year he began to learn electric telegraphy. He obtained a position in the superintendent's office of the Northern Railway as telegraph operator; subsequently became station agent at Angus; was clerk and operator at Collingwood, in 1864-65; station agent at Barrie from 1865 to 1867; agent of the through freight and shipping department, and had charge of the Northern Railway elevator at Toronto, from 1867 to 1871. He now resigned his position, and accepted the Toronto agency of the Nipissing Railway, then just opened. In March, 1874, Mr. Ross accepted the office of secretary and superintendent of the Whitby and Port Perry Railway at Whitby, where he remained until the road was sold to the Grand Trunk Company, and amalgamated with the Midland Railway system, about 1882. He then removed to Belleville, as assistant superintendent of the Grand Junction division of the Midland Railway, which position he held until August, 1883. In September of the same year he left for California and British Columbia, spending two jc

in

M

ca

si

dι

an

m

in

de

su.

pe

w

the

200

Th

eng

Du

ma

che

der

mo

Du:

was

pen

Iri

out

months on the Pacific coast. In February, 1884, he accepted the office which he now holds, that of superintendent of the Erie

until

7th of

most

th her

s still educa-

after-

ronto,

gston,

ı due

posi--hos

eville,

pro-

ooint-

ution

e still

litics,

s Re-

holic,

same

o, on

er of

celot

ık of

Man-

hat-

 $_{
m the}$

Ross

Ross

ıblic

had

n to

ed a

e of

per-

gent

 $^{\rm at}$

t at

the

ent,

y el-

He

the

ay,

Иr.

and

ort

re-

 \mathbf{nd}

the

He

ant

iv-

ichIn

al-

wο

His

and Huron Railway. Manning, Alexander, ex-Mayor of the City of Toronto, was born in Ireland, and came to Canada when a young man. Having some friends in Toronto, he remained in that city for a short time, and then went to the Western States. After spending a short time in the west, and having made some money, he returned to Toronto, where he took up his permanent abode. Ambition, industry, and a capable head soon brought him to the front, and ere long Mr. Manning became a successful con-His large property stakes in Toronto induced him to give some attention to municipal affairs, and in 1856-7 he entered the city council as alderman for St. Lawrence ward, and he was returned eight years in succession to the aldermanic board. 1873 he was elected mayor; and in 1885 he was chosen to fill the same high position. In 1886 he again offered himself for election, but to the great regret of his many friends, he was defeated by W. H. Howland after a very exciting contest. To show the high respect in which Mr. Manning was held by the members of the city council, the following resolution was unanimously passed by them when he retired from the chair in January, 1886:—"That this council cannot adjourn without placing on record and conveying to His Worship the Mayor, Alexander Manning, their high sense of the ability, care and impartiality with which he has presided over the deliberations of the council during a year of marked effort and progress, and of the earnest zeal he has conspicuously manifested to watch over the city's interests in every matter, whether of large or minute detail, sparing neither time nor effort to ensure a faithful administration of civic expenditure. They beg further to assure His Worship that he takes with him on leaving the chair the respectful, heartfelt and lasting good wishes of every member of the council. That a copy of this resolution be suitably engrossed and presented to His Worship. During one of Mr. Manning's terms of the mayoralty, he entertained the Duke of Manchester; and he placed his handsome residence on Wellington street, with its commodious grounds, at the disposal of Lord Dufferin, when he, as governor-general, was visiting Toronto. "Knowing how expensive politics are," says Mr. Davin, in the Irishman in Canada,' "he has hitherto kept out of those engulfing waters. He has a reputation it would take a Rembrandt to Beneath the shrewdness and determination without which wealth cannot be made, there is a tender heart and, in the midst of shading, which would seem to indicate hardness of character, shine out one or two large acts of spirited and apparently even reckless generosity. A deviser of schemes, he has learned how to use men; and always on the alert to put a little train of one kind or another in motion, he is suspicious lest he himself should be taken in and too cheaply used. When addressing the electors at one of the hotels, during a contest for the mayoralty, he properly boasted that he had been a working-man. There could not be a better instance than is furnished by Alexander Manning of what Canada can do for persons with brains and Mr. Manning has been a useful citizen, and may yet play a more prominent part in politics when, satisfied with the wealth he has acquired, he throws contracting aside." Mr. Manning is an extensive dealer in real estate, and has erected some splendid buildings in the City of Toronto. Among these may be mentioned the Arcade, which, at the time of writing, is in course of erection on King street. The Grand Opera House is also the property of Mr. Manning.

Christie, Hon. J. W., Brockville, was born at Fort Albany, East Hudson Bay, on the 19th January, 1824. His father entered the Hudson Bay Company's service in 1809, and rose rapidly, being chief factor in 1821. He was subsequently given charge of York Factory, Moose and Fort Garry; and he was for many years governor of the Assini-boine district, now Manitoba. He retired in 1849, and died in his native country, Scotland, aged eighty-nine, leaving a name honoured to this day throughout the North-West. J. W. Christie, we learn from an account lying before us, was sent to Aberdeen, Scotland, to be educated, and returned to this continent with Sir George Simpson, in 1841, almost immediately entering the service at Lake Superior. In 1843 he went to the northern department, and was one year at Rocky Mountain house, trading with Blackfeet Indians. He was next stationed at York Factory, where he stayed four years, being thence promoted to Fort Churchill H. B., where he remained four years, and was transferred to the Swan River district, Fort Pelly; after six years he was promoted to the charge of the Saskatchewan district, which he retained fourteen years, when in 1872, upon the re-organization of the Hudson Bay Company's business, he was made inspecting chief factor and supervisor of the country from Fort Garry to the Arctic regions, comprising Swan river, the Saskatchewan, English river, Athabaska, and the McKenzie river districts. On returning from his tour of inspection, Mr. Christie resigned and settled at Brockville, in 1873, after thirty-one years' active service. During the Riel insurrection, Mr. Christie was in charge of the Saskatchewan district, and his tact, management and great popularity with the half-breeds and natives undoubtedly saved the Hudson Bay Company from immense loss. It would have been easy for the disaffected to have cut off the northern posts, which at the outbreak of the disturbances were almost entirely without supplies, but Mr. Christie managed to avoid a blockade, and early got out a supply of provisions to Norway House depot for the summer's transport business. In the spring of 1874, the Dominion government being about to make a treaty with the Plain District Crees, Mr Christie was appointed one of the commissioners for that purpose, and when a council was appointed to aid the lieutenant-governor of Manitoba and the North-West, he was requested to form one of that body. Throughout the administrations of Governors Simpson, Dallas and McTavish, he was a commissioned officer and member of council, and in various ways rendered conspicuous services. His name is mentioned in very flattering terms in Captain Palliser's report of the expedition of 1858-9, and the same may be said of all parliamentary papers referring to the North-A brief account of some of Mr. Christie's journeyings may prove interesting to those only accustomed to Palace cars. In 1861, having with difficulty obtained leave of absence for six months, for the purpose of visiting Scotland, Mr. Christie set out from York Factory, on the 19th September, in the Hudson Bay Company's sailing vessel Prince of Wales, 550 tons, captain D. J. Herd. The bay was crossed in three days, and the straits cleared in a week. It took only ten days to run from Resolution to the Lizard, and but for a thick fog in the English Channel, which detained the vessel several days, the passage from York Factory to the East India docks, London, would have been made in twenty days. This achievement will be interesting to the advocates of the scheme for shipping the grain of the west to Europe via Hudson's Bay. The route is undoubtedly short, but the early close of navigation is a formidable obstacle. However, to resume, on the 4th January, 1862, Mr. Christie embarked on a Cunard steamer for New York, thence took train for Lacrosse, thence by four-horse coach to St. Paul. from whence the journey to Georgetown, Red river, occupied eight Here dog-trains were ready to make the run to Pembina, five days, where a horse cariole was brought into requisition for the seventy miles to Fort Garry. He was thus enabled to report on the 20th February, the very day on which his leave expired. After a week's rest, he started for Fort Edmonton, 1,000 miles distant, and accomplished the trip in twenty-eight days, with dog sleds. Staying here a month, he left for Carleton, 600 miles down the Saskatchewan river by boat, and returned to Fort Garry, 500 miles, on horseback. Remaining a few days, he started with Messrs. Dallas, McTavish and Graham, for Norway house, north of Lake Winnipeg, to hold the North-West Fur Council, after which having been appointed to take charge of an expedition of two north canoes to convey Governor Dallas on a tour of inspection, he set out, 28th June, via Cumberland house, Isle Lacrosse, to Portage Laloche, 1,600 miles, and accomplished the journey in sixteen days. Portage Laloche is nine miles long. One of the canoes was carried across, and the other sent back to Mont-Continuing their journey, Messrs. Dallas and Christie went down Clear Water and Athabaska rivers to Fort Chipewyan, thence up Peace river to Dunvegan, seventeen days' paddling against the stream. Returning to Heart river, a clerk, men and twenty pack-horses assisted them across the portage to Lesser Slave Lake, three days journey, where the party exchanged the canoe for a boat manned by eight men and were rowed via Lesser Slave Lake river and Athabasca river to Post Assiniboine, where thirty pack-horses were ready to transport the expedition across the eighty miles to Fort Edmonton. After a week at the fort, they set out with a light boat and eight men for Carleton House, six days' journey. Here Governor Dallas started for Fort Garry across the Plains, Here Governor Dallas and Mr Christie returned to Edmonton to winter, having been travelling in all sorts of ways from September, 1861, to October, 1862, during which period he must have covered over fourteen thousand miles. Another time, he made a tour of inspection from Fort Garry to Fort Simpson, about 2,000 miles, which was accomplished with the aid of horses, boats and canoes, in forty-

i v

a t

I

n

N

8

is

th

in

re

ac

fit

ye

se

In

th

an

the

the

ent

We

non

Bay

ter

Bro

Bre

the

one

lies

Arc

ton.

afte

cil c subs

whi

ernr

Dod

Dod

of N

line

of S

tions

proc

1

The return journey was made in winter, leaving Fort Simpson, December 5, with a cariole, two dog trains, a clerk, in-terpreter and two men. It occupied fiftyfour days. Not a mishap occurred either way. Mr. Christie was appointed by the government in 1874, commissioner to negotiate a treaty with the Plain Indians. His co-commissioners were the Hon. D. Laird and Hon. Alex. Morris, and the treaty was satisfactorily concluded at Fort Qu'Appelle in that year. In 1875, Mr. Christie again visited the North West territory alone in his capacity as commissioner, to secure the adhesion of the chiefs who were absent when the treaty was made. This he accomplished. In 1876 he was again appointed Indian commissioner, having as confreres Hon. A. Morris and Hon. Mr. McKay, to conclude a treaty with the Plain Crees of the Saskatchewan, and which treaty being effected is known to history as treaty number six. A few years subsequently, he was offered the appointment of Indian Commissioner, in the North-West Territory, but wishing retirement after an active life, he declined acceptance. Mr. Christie was peculiarly fitted for this position, as about twenty years of his life while in the Hudson Bay service was spent in dealing with the Plain Indians, during which time he became thoroughly conversant with their language, and also understood the peculiar traits of the Indian character. Nothwithstanding the arduous life he has lived, he is full of enthusiasm as to the future of the North-West, so much so, that three of his sons now are occupying positions in the Hudson Bay service. In religion he is a Presbyterian. Mr. Christie's beautiful villa, at Brockville, is known as Edgar place.

the 4th

ed on a

e took

r-horse

ourney

eight

make here a

isition

. He 20th

s leave

ted for

t, and

days.

th, he

e Sas-ied to

Iessrs.

orway

ld the n hav-

an ex-

onvey

ction.

erland

loche,

urney

nine

arried

Mont-

essrs

Water

wyan,

even-

ream.

n and

across

three

anged

eight

Lake

ssini-

ready

ighty

week

boat

, six

)allas

ains,

on to rts of

ober.

have

Λn-

ction

bout

with.

orty-

Re-

Dodd, Murray, Q.C., M.P., for Cape Breton, Sydney, was born at Sydney, on the 23rd May, 1843. He is a member of one of the oldest and most prominent families in Canada. His grandfather, the Hon. Archibald Charles Dodd, came to Cape Breton, from England, in 1784, and was shortly afterwards appointed president of the Council of the Island of Cape Breton. He was subsequently appointed chief justice, and while acting as such administered the government of the island for a period. Murray Dodd is a son of the Hon. Edmund Murray Dodd, who was judge of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia for twenty-six years, by Caroline Maria, daughter of the late John Ritchie of Sydney. He received his early educational instruction at Sydney, and afterwards proceeded to Sackville, New Brunswick, where he completed his studies. On leaving Sackville, he entered upon the study of law at Sydney, in the office of D. N. Mac-Queen, Q.C., and on the 2nd May, 1865, was called to the bar of Nova Scotia, when he at once began to practice his profession at Sydney. His ability was not of the ordinary kind, and it was acknowledged that he was well versed in the law; so that it is not surprising to learn that he was soon in the front rank of his profession. On the 1st of October, 1867, he was appointed registrar of the Court of Probate for the County of Cape Breton, holding this office till 1872, when he was appointed judge of probate for the same county. In October, 1879, he resigned the judgeship of probate to contest the County of Cape Breton for the House of Commons; but he was defeated. In the following year he was invested with the Counsellors silken gown; and at the last general election he achieved the object of his ambition, by being elected for his native county, Cape Breton. Mr. Dodd has much energy, and he is a man who, without ostentation, established himself in a prominent place in the House of Commons; and his constituents have in him a useful, devoted and influential representative. He married at Sydney Mines, on the 18th December, 1879, Laura Isabel, second daughter of Blowers Archibald, of that place.

Gwynne, Hon. John Wellington, Justice of the Supreme Court of Canada, Ottawa, was born at Cable Knock, in the County of Dublin, Ireland, on the 30th of March, 1814. He is a son of the late Rev. William Gwynne, D.D. and of Eliza his wife, who was a daughter of the Rev. N. Nelson, Dunshaughlin, County of Meath, Ireland. He entered Trinity College, Dublin, July, 1828. In 1832, when young Gwynne was in his eighteenth year, he arrived in Canada, at once commenced the study of the law in the office of Thomas Kirkpatrick, barrister of Kingston, and in 1837, in Trinity term, he was called to the bar of Upper Canada. At the general elec-tion of 1847, he offered himself as a candidate for Huron in the Legislative Assembly of Canada; but he was unsuccessful. In July, 1852, he married Julia, the youngest daughter of the late Dr. Durie, K.H. of Craigluscar. In November, 1868, he was appointed a Judge of the Court of Common Pleas for Ontario. In 1879 he was appointed a judge of the Supreme Court of Canada. Himself and his family are members of the Episcopal Church.

Colby, Charles Carroll, M.P., for Stanstead, Province of Quebec, was born at Derby, in the State of Vermont, on the 10th of December, 1827. His paternal ancestors removed from Chester, England, to Massachusetts in 1632. On the maternal side, he is a descendant of the Stoddards, one of the old and leading families of Connecticut. His father, the late Moses French Colby, M.A., M.D., received his scientific and medical education at Dartmouth, Yale and Harvard colleges, in the United States; removed to Stanstead with his family, in 1842, represented Stanstead in the Provincial Legislature at Quebec, at and prior to the outbreak of the rebellion of 1837, was surgeon of militia and volunteers during the rebellion, and died at Stanstead May 4th, 1863, aged sixty-seven years. He was an able, inquiring and forceful man, and was distinguished for his enterprise and public spirit as well as by his rare attainments, and success in the practice of medicine and surgery. The subject of this sketch graduated at Dartmouth College, New Hampshire, in 1847, at the age of nineteen. He commenced the study of law in the office of the late H. Bailey Terrill, M.P.P, at Stanstead, prosecuted his study in the offices of A. & G. Robertson, at Montreal, and Hon. J. S. Sanborn, at Sherbrooke, and in 1855 entered upon the practice of law at Stanstead, which he continued with success until elected to the House of Commons in 1867. Mr. Colby has been a leading promoter of, and a liberal contributor to, all public enterprises in his neighbourhood. He is a trustee of Stanstead College, was a director of the Stanstead, Shefford, and Chambly Railway Company, the Waterloo and Magog Railway Company, and the Massowippi Valley Railway Company, during the construction of those railroads; is at present a director of the Cumberland Coal and Railway Company, the Magog Textile and Print Company, and of the International Railway Company, and is president of the International Railway Company of Maine, which latter are links in the projected Short Line from Montreal to the maritime ports, an enterprise which he has for many years actively promoted. Mr. Colby defeated the government candidate in 1867, and entered parliament as an independent Corservative. He was returned by acclamation in 1872, and again in 1874, and was elected by large majorities in 1878 and 1882. He has been a steady supporter of the Conservative government in its policy of progress, protection and development, and during the administration of Mr. Mackenzie was in opposition. In parliament he has taken a leading part in the discussion of many important, economic and practical questions, but has rarely interested himself in the speculative and theoretical. As a parliamentary debater he is clear, fluent, logical and effective, and on notable occasions he has contributed to the information of the House. By close adherance to the subject matter in hand, and by his earnest and persuasive method of speech he always commands the attention and respect of his hearers. As early as the session of 1868, in his speech upon the hop duty, he declared his belief that a defensive policy against the high tariff of the neighbouring country was the true policy for Canada, and in 1879, when speaking upon the same subject, he urged the adoption of "a national policy based to some extent on the idea of reciprocity of tariffs." In 1870 and 1871 he urged similar views, and again in 1876, 1877 and 1878. His speech in the session of 1878 was circulated throughout every constituency in the Dominion as a campaign document, and had a powerful influence upon the result. In 1871 and 1872 he introduced bills for the repeal of the Insolvency Act, and carried them by votes in the House of Commons, against the government and leading members of the opposition. On the first occasion the bill was thrown out by the speaker, at the third reading, on a point of order, and on the latter it was rejected by the Senate. In 1879 he was chairman of the select committee on Bankruptcy and Insolvency, and in 1880 he introduced and carried through the bill which finally repealed the law. While the late Sir Francis Hincks was finance minister, Mr. Colby's speeches prevailed with him to withdraw the government proposition relating to export duties upon bark, and to greatly modify the features of his general banking bill relating to the capitalization of banks. His speeches upon insurance, the acquisition of the Hudson Bay company's territory and Rupert's Land, the annexation of British Columbia, and the Panama canal, were powerful, and effective. To him the country is largely indebted for the reduction of the petroleum duties and for the safe inspection of illuminating oil. In the session of 1885 his speeches upon the Scott act amendment, and upon the subsidy to the Short Line Railway from Montreal to the maritime ports very evidently effected the votes. Mr. Colby's record in parliament is that of a practical and clear-minded working and speaking member, and his uniform courtesy is appreciated by his political

P pfi it to got ski si N la ed sch si wi af ye he

an

fax

sio

Qu

ser

Mi

tice

pol

to :

and

fou

loča

uni

adv

sup

sim

diti

sche

with

effec

was

ausp

mod

mak

peop

a de

ence

men

was

and

opponents. He is not a too frequent speaker, and is always listened to with marked attention. In December, 1858, he married Harriet Child of Weybridge, Vermont, a lady of high culture, by whom he has two daughters and two sons.

sition.

g part

econrarely

e and

ter he

and on

to the

adher-

ind by speech nd re-

ession

duty,

policy

ouring

a, and

e sub-

tional

lea of

871 he

, 1877

f 1878

stitu-

docu-

upon duced

Act, use of

lead-

h the

y the int of

ed by

of the

Insol-

rried

d the

s was

pre-

ment

upon

tures

b the

upon

dson

Land,

d the

ctive.

d for

and

oil. n the

bsidy

al to

ected

arlia-

nded

uni-

itical

has two daughters and two sons. Miller, Hon. William, Q.C., Speaker of the Senate of Canada, Halifax, was born at Antigonish, Nova Scotia, on the 12th February, 1835. He is descended on the paternal side from a family that emigrated from Belfast, Ireland, in 1720, and settled in Maine. A branch of the family removed to Colchester, Nova Scotia, in 1760, and the great-grandfather of William Miller was one of the original grantees of the township of Truro. The father of the subject of our sketch was Charles Miller, Antigonish; and his mother was Eliza, daughter of Richard Smith, who with his family emigrated to Nova Scotia from the County Wicklow, Ireland, in 1811. William Miller received his education at the St. Andrew's Grammar school and the Antigonish academy; and when his educational course was ended, after teaching a common school for a few years, he began the study of law. In 1860 he was called to the bar of Nova Scotia, and began practising his profession in Halifax, where he has since won bright professional laurels. In 1872 he was appointed Queen's Counsel, and upon few men in Canada has the silken gown been more deservedly bestowed. Early in life Senator Miller was known as a close student of political questions, and in 1863 commenced his political career by obtaining the election to the Nova Scotia Assembly for Richmond, and occupying that seat till confederation, four years later. While a member of the local legislature he was a zealous advocate of union, delivering many powerful speeches in advocacy of that measure. But while a zealous supporter of the scheme of union, pure and simple, he was opposed to the financial conditions and some other details of the Quebec scheme; and it was on his suggestion, and with his assistance, that the compromise was effected whereby the delegation to England was appointed in 1866, to secure, under the auspices of the Imperial authorities, such modifications of the general scheme as would make it more fair and acceptable to the people of Nova Scotia. He was nominated a delegate to the London Colonial conference of 1866-67, but declined the appointment. Upon the consummation of union he was called to the Senate by Royal proclamation. In the Senate he has been an active and vigorous member; and if the bulk of the gentlemen comprising that body were to exhibit the vigour and the mastery of public questions that Senator Miller displays, it would meet with less hostile criticism than is now too frequently bestowed upon it. He has, for several-sessions, been chairman of the Private Bills committee, and has been chairman of the Contingent committee (internal economy). He has twice refused a seat on the bench; once when offered by Premier Mackenzie, and again by Sir John A. Macdonald. That he would have adorned the bench is beyond question, though we have cause for satisfaction that his statesman-like abilities have been preserved to the wider sphere. On the 17th October, 1883, he was appointed Speaker of the Senate, which position he fills with ability, with dignity, and with perfect satisfaction. In politics he is a Liberal-Conservative, but as a senator he has not developed any party views.

Bucke, Richard Maurice, M. D., London, Ontario, was born at Methwold, County of Norfolk, England, on the 18th March, 1837. Dr. Bucke is a great-greatgreat grandson of the celebrated prime minister, Sir Robert Walpole, first earl of Orford, and grand nephew of Charles Bucke, author of works on the "Beauties of Nature" and "Ruins of Ancient Cities." These works have by no means "drifted down stream into oblivion's sea," but are still issued from the presses of Harper & Bros., of New York. Dr. Bucke is a son of the Rev. Horatio Walpole Bucke, a minister of the Church of England, who moved with his family to Upper Canada when Maurice was one year old. The Rev. Mr. Bucke died in 1855. He married Clarissa Andrews, of Milden-hall, Suffolk, England, who afterwards became the mother of the subject of this sketch. The family settled three miles east of London, and Richard Maurice Bucke was brought up, strangely enough, upon a farm not a hundred rods from the asylum which he now superintends. The lad was educated in the London Grammar school; but in 1853 he set out upon a tour of travel, proceeding to California by the overland route and returning via Panama, in 1858. He attended Mc-Gill University for four years, studying medicine and surgery; and he graduated in 1862 as first prize student. He then spent two years in additional professional study at London, England and at Paris. He returned to Canada in 1864, and made a second trip to California, but this time, in the interests of the Gould & Curry Silver Mining Company. Dr. Bucke returned to

Canada the following year, settling in Sarnia, where he practised his profession for ten years. In 1876 he was appointed medical superintendent of the Asylum for the Insane at Hamilton, Ont.; and in February of the following year, upon the demise of Dr. Landor, received promotion by appointment as medical superintendent of a similar institution at London. Under Dr. Bucke's management there is the most thorough satisfaction, and he seems to possess peculiar and unusual fitness for his responsible position. Additions from time to time have been made to the buildings; he is continually improving the grounds-indeed he makes it the study of his life to increase the comforts of the unfortunate creatures committed to his care. The London Insane Asylum is the largest in the province; and gentlemen who are familiar with similar institutions in the United States, declare that they have never seen a better managed establishment than that under the charge of Dr. Bucke. Dr. Bucke is author of a work on "Man's Moral Nature," which he published in 1879. He gave much thought and time to his subject, and was rewarded by finding a hearty reception accorded to the book upon its appearance. Various newspapers bore tribute to its merit; and the Hamilton Times declared, and very justly, "It is such treatises as this which awaken and quicken thought, and open up almost boundless fields for speculation." The Christian Register, of Boston, describes it as "the work of a man who writes with intelligence and a charming spirit of candour;" and adds, that the style "is clear and strong, and the moral tone pure." In 1882 he published a second work, "Walt Whitman," which has been highly praised by such competent critics as Professor Edward Dowden, of Dublin University, and Walter Sloane Kennedy, of Boston. This work has been re-published in England, and has had a large sale. Besides these books, Dr. Bucke has published many articles in Psychological and other journals. Dr. Bucke married, in 1865, Jessie Maria Gurd, of Moore, Ontario, by whom he has had eight children, seven of whom survive.

Hodgins, John George, M.A., LL.D., F.R.G.S., Deputy Minister of Education for Ontario, Toronto, was born at Dublin, Ireland, on August 12th, 1821. He came with some relatives to Canada when in the Province of Ontario. He attended Upper Canada Academy and Victoria College, Cobourg, and received his degree from the

Victoria University. He likewise graduated in the faculty of law in Toronto University, from which institution he received, in 1860, the degree of LL.B., and in 1870, that of LL.D. Dr. Hodgins was called to the bar of Ontario in the last mentioned year. But it is not as a lawver that Dr. Hodgins calls for our admiration, though we may well be sure that had a man so eminently gifted devoted his time and his enthusiasm to the legal profession, he would have won laurels there, as he has done in the walk which he has chosen. It is as an educationist that the biographer's attention is directed to the subject of this sketch. In 1844 began the connection of Dr. Hodgins with educational work, and since that time his career has been marked by the most patient industry, by unflagging zeal, and above all, by a genius for organization, and for keeping the educational system commensurate with the needs of the public. In 1846 he became secretary of the Board of Education for Upper Canada, which body was afterwards designated the Council of Public Instruction. To the responsible position of deputy head of Education he was appointed in 1855. Never has public man, in this country, of whom we have any knowledge, sought with greater conscienciousness, to fit himself for the trust reposed in him, than did the newly appointed deputy of Education. He spent, at his own expense, in 1845, after receiving his first appointment, a year in Dublin, familiarizing himself with the details of management in the office of the National Board of Education in Ireland, and in mastering the methods in the Normal and Model schools. But, as we might well surmise, Dr. Hodgins was not one who would rest satisfied with methods that he had seen adopted by others, excellent though the regimen was. The condition of things in this country differed widely from the state of affairs in Ireland; and what the new officer set himself with heart and soul to do, was to apply so much of the Irish national system as was adapted here, and from his own brain to round and perfect the system. How well he has done that is now a matter of history. acknowledgment for his labour in founding "a new department" of the government, he received, by Order in Council, in 1856, a special "good service" allowance of £50 a year, in addition to his regular salary. The late lamented Dr. Ryerson, himself a giant among public men, as among educationists, knowing Dr. Hodgins intimately, thus wrote to the Hon. Edward Blake: "He is the r

ada

the a

of a

have

ated

you o

Publi

the o

depar

my or Dr. H it wil

that '

an ez

He is

ograp

raphy

the o

vinces

adian

"Sch

Law,

Queer

noted

Educa

Exhib

of Dr.

learni

sidera

incisiv

lose si

whose

charm

fertile

the pe

ical, c

ways :

just sp

gentle

work '

son, w

several

late gr

ably w

Journo

"Ryer

thetic a

Ryerso

respect

ted to

gins, w

import

he has

and the

heads o

nors-ge

timony

It is ea

educati

the most thoroughly trained man in all Canada for the Education department; and is the ablest and most thorough administrator of a public department of any man whom I I think he has not been apprecihave met. ated according to his merits; but should you create and fill the office of Minister of Public Instruction, you may safely confide the ordinary administration of the Education department to Dr. Hodgins, with the title of my office." Dr. Hodgins had laboured under Dr. Ryerson for thirty-three years; whence it will be seen how important the tribute is that we have reproduced. Dr. Hodgins is an extensive writer on educational topics. He is the author of "Lovell's General Geography," "First Steps in General Geography," "School History of Canada, and of the other British North American Provinces." He published likewise the "Canadian School Speaker and Reciter," the "School Manual," "Lectures on School Law," "Sketches and Anecdotes of the Queen," and "The School House." A very noted work of his too, was a "Report of the Educational Features of the Centennial Exhibition at Philadelphia." The writings of Dr. Hodgins are characterised by wide learning, accurate care, and profound consideration. His style is searching, clear and incisive, and you are never permitted to lose sight of the individuality of the man whose pages you are perusing. And what a charm this is in a writer. But the same fertile and restless pen has been busy in the periodical press on educational, historical, commercial and social topics, and always is the same power seen as we have just specified. Dr. Hodgins was one of the gentlemen under whose supervision the work "The Story of My life," by Dr. Ryer-son, was published, and he is author of several papers on the life and labours of the late great educationist. There is one admirably written memoir in the Canada School Journal, and there is a pamphlet entitled "Ryerson Memorial," from the same sympathetic and capable pen. (See memoir of Dr. Rverson elsewhere in these pages.) With respect to the value of the works contributed to educational literature by Dr. Hodgins, we may say that they are scarcely less important than the life-long service which he has devoted to practical education itself; and the highest authorities in the country, heads of the proper department and governors-general, have been frequent with testimony of commendation and of admiration. It is easy for us in these days, when the educational system is in a state of perfect | Marks, Port Hope.

ty, 60,

of

oar

lls be

ed

he.

els

he

h-

n-

lal

as

у,

2

organization, and the wheels are turning of their own accord without jar or jolt, to underestimate what a task it was to create, from the incoherent fragments of the educational order that prevailed when Dr. Hodgins came upon the scene, the smoothly moving and harmonious system of to-day. Side by side with his great chief has Dr. Hodgins ever striven in the cause of education; and we have attributed so much to him, because upon his shoulders devolved for so long a period the actual and immediate administration of the department. In social life, Dr. Hodgins is genial; and he is a gentleman of great culture. In benevolent or Christian work he is at the front whenever the occasion arises. He has been secretary of the Bible Society since 1860, and of the Anglican Synod of the diocese of Toronto since 1870, except for one year; and he was president of the Irish Protestant Benevolent Society in 1875. Dr. Hodgins married in 1840, at Dublin, Ireland, Frances Rachel, eldest daughter of James Doyle, of Cloyne, County of Cork, by which union he has four sons living. The eldest is in the department of Justice, at Ottawa; the third is a barrister at Toronto; the fourth is a mechanical engineer; and the fifth is an under graduate of Toronto University. The second son is dead. Dr. Hodgins took part in the formation of the Queen's Own Rifles, and was appointed lieutenant in that corps 14th March, 1862, and captain in No. 9 company, East Toronto, on the 8th March, 1869. He holds a second class certificate from the Military school, Toronto, dated the 8th September, 1866. In 1879 Dr. Hodgins received a decoration in gold, "Order af the Palm Leaf," from the French Minister of Public Instruction; in 1885 he was elected a "corresponding fellow of the Academy of Sciences," New Orleans; and in the same year he received from Lord Lansdowne a confederation medal, in appreciation of "Services as Public Officer and a Man of Letters."

Baker, Rev. J. Stamers, Port Hope. This able divine was born at Bandon, Ireland, in the year 1827, and he received his education at the school of Duke of Devonshire, Bandon. In 1861 he was ordained deacon, and in 1863 he received the order of priesthood. He was appointed by the Lord Bishop of Huron to Wyoming and the parts adjacent; and by Bishop Strachan as curate of St. James, Toronto. He afterwards became, in succession, incumbent of Cambellford, of Cookstown, and then rector of St.

Stuart, John, Hamilton, was born in Fifekeith, Banfishire, Scotland, on June 24th, 1830, and is a son of James and Margaret Stuart. His father was a builder, and in later years was employed in planning and superintending works and buildings through the county, but chiefly for the Earl of Fife, by whom he was held in great esteem. died in 1839. John Stuart was educated in the parish school of Keith, receiving there a sound elementary training from a teacher renowned in the north of Scotland for success in teaching and training youth. his early school period, he had several years training as clerk in a lawyer's office in Keith; and in 1848 he emigrated to Canada. Mr. Stuart resided in Toronto from 1848 to 1864, and from the latter year to the present he has dwelt in Hamilton. During several of the later years of his residence in Toronto, he was a member of the School Board and office-bearer in Knox Church. taking up his residence in Hamilton he has been largely connected with most of the railway and other public enterprises of the place. He was a director of the Wellington, Grey & Bruce Railway during its construction; and of the Hamilton & Lake Erie Railway until its amalgamation with the Hamilton & North-Western Railway. has been president of the Hamilton & North-Western Railway from the incorporation of the company; and since its fusion with the Northern Railway in 1879, has been a member of the executive committee of the combined companies, and a director and member of the executive of the Northern & Pacific Junction Railway. He also is a director of the Canada Life Assurance Company; and was vice-president, and is now president, of the Bank of Hamilton. politics Mr. Stuart is a Liberal, but he took no active part in politics until 1874, when he was invited to contest South Norfolk. was elected in the reform interest, and sat in the first session of that parliament, but was unseated by the election court, and defeated in the succeeding contest by the conservative candidate, Wm. Wallace. that time he has been fully occupied with railway, banking and other business enterprises, and has taken no part in politics. He has continuously lived in Canada except in 1872 and 1873, which years were largely passed in travel with his family in Europe. Mr. Stuart was born and brought up a Presbyterian, and is still so in feeling and sympathy, but, attaching less importance now to forms of worship or church government, he has, for family and other reasons, for some time worshipped in the Church of the Ascension (Episcopal church). He married in 1856, Jane, only daughter of John Jacques, of Toronto, and has had two sons and two daughters. One daughter died at seven years of age, and his second son, a bright and promising youth of seventeen, was carried away by typhoid feyer, contracted at Upper Canada College. The eldest son is now a partner in the firm of John Stuart. Son. & Co.. of Hamilton

John Stuart, Son, & Co., of Hamilton. McKeough, John, Chatham, brother of William McKeough, a sketch of whose life appears on page 512 of this volume, was born at Thurles, County of Tipperary, Ireland. He is a descendant of the Macindrossers or Mackeoghs, who, in the ancient history of Scotland, were clansmen of the Macdougals of Lorne. The legend of the attempt of three of these to slay King Robert Bruce, is well-known to Scottish historians: and how they succeeded in securing the famous "brooch of Lorne," which was a personal ornament of King Robert Bruce. In the "Lord of the Isles," Sir Walter Scott recites the romantic and thrilling incident. The three daring clansmen, it will be remembered, lost their lives for their audacity. The grandfather of John McKeough. James, belonged to Rahealty, in the County of Tipperary, and was uncle of the late. Hon. Mr. Justice Keough. The grandmother of our subject was a sister of the Rev. Francis Mahony, the well-known "Father Prout," author of that marvellously musical poem, "The Bells of Shandon," beginning with this stanza:

"With deep affection and recollection I often think of those Shandon bells, Whose sound so wild would in days of childhood

Fling round my cradle their magic spells." Thomas, the father of John McKeough. came to Canada while his children were yet young, and settled in Paris, Ontario. Sometime afterwards misfortunes of business came, and John McKeough and his brother William, found it necessary to take any employment that offered. Our subject had a brave heart, and strong hands, and the difficulties in his way soon began to disappear. Some years afterwards, he established in Chatham, in connection with his brother William, a hardware and plumbing business, of which he is the senior partner. He stood bondsman for the treasurer of the town for over twenty years, which prevented him from taking any municipal office; but had he chosen to enter public life, there would have been little difficulty in his way in do-

Ma por He Uni sur ser tica er c sinc teri tive 1854 is a ists. tics. D ton. ber, late

see I

on

Tyro

1819 boy,

land

ing

tha

obt

and

Mr

main King dry s cess i after of pu after quen on th had s once dry g afterv furnit rence city. He wa spirit, the ci of the

on the

Was or

dustry

he was

monies

ters an

ject of 1882, 1

of Kin

ed at t

ing so; for besides the personal popularity that he enjoys through his sterling and unobtrusive personal qualities, his judgment and abilities are held in very high regard. Mr. McKeogh is an active member of the Masonic order, and has held various important offices in this body for years. He has travelled through part of the United States and all of Canada for pleasure; though with his keen powers of observation he must have derived much practical benefit from such travel. In younger days he was a Wesleyan Methodist, but since marriage he has joined the Presbyterian church, of which body he is an active member. He married, in August, 1854. Mary Jane Dolsen, of Chatham, who is a descendant of the United Empire loyalists. John McKeough is a Liberal in politics

rch

He

of

wo

ter nd

en-

er,

'he

of

ler

se as

re-

bs-

rt

Drennan, William Melville, Kingston, Ontario, was born on the 15th Novem. ber, 1853, at Kingston. He is a son of the late S. T. Drennan, (for sketch of whose life see page 480 of this volume) who was born on the Moravian settlement, County of Tyrone, Ireland, on the 20th of November, 1819. S. T. Drennan left Ireland when a boy, and proceeded with his father to Scotland, where he was educated. Here he remained till 1841, when he emigrated to Kingston. He took, here, a clerkship in the dry goods store of R. Waddell & Co., Princess street; but he tired of this sort of life after a few years, and secured the position of purser upon the passenger steamer Comet, afterwards the Mauflower, which was subsequently blown up. The "ways of men upon the deep " were not so fascinating as he had supposed that they would be, and he once more went ashore, and established a dry goods business with Mr. Kennedy. He afterwards engaged in the manufacture of furniture; became alderman for St. Lawrence ward, and afterwards mayor of the city. In 1879 he retired from public life. He was a man of wide and generous public spirit, and always showed a deep interest in the city's welfare. He laid the corner-stone of the fire-engine house, turned the first sod on the Kingston and Pembroke Railway, and was one of the directors of the House of Industry. Whenever royalty visited Kingston, he was invariably chosen as master of cere-He had five children, four daughters and one son, the latter being the subject of this sketch. S. T. Drennan died in 1882, beloved and respected by the people of Kingston. W. M. Drennan was educated at the Kingston College Institute, receiving instruction in all the English branches, also in Latin, French, Greek, &c. He became a lieutenant of the P. W. O. Rifles, in 1863, but withdrew and accepted the cap-taincy of K. F. B. He went through a short course in B. battery, R. S. G. Mr. Drennan has been a public school trustee for four years; and also has been a city alderman for Cataraqui ward. He was the first to introduce the electric light into He became worshipful master, in 1884, of Minden Lodge, No. 253, A. F. and A. M. He is a member of the Oddfellows, Foresters, P. B. A., and P. Boys; and is also a member of the Liberal-Conservative Association. His religious convictions are those of Presbyterianism. Mr. Drennan married on the 17th January, 1878, May E. We may state that our subject left home at the age of fifteen to learn the hardware business, with C. C. Snowden & Co., After remaining there for three years, he went to New York, and entered the office of the Russell & Erwin Manufacturing Co., as salesman. He then went as traveller for Canada and New York State, for the Sweitzer Manufacturing Co., New York. After a time he left New York, and held a position as traveller for H. R. Ives & Co., of Montreal, till he was married. He then began the hardware business for himself, and continued in the same until the death of his father. After this event he sold out the hardware business and continued in the furniture trade, adding a manufacturing department and steam power. He also entered into the undertaking and embalming business on a large scale; and has, at present, the best equipped undertaker's establishment in Canada.

Powell, Grant, Ottawa, Under-Secretary of State for Canada, was born in Toronto, in September, 1819. He attended school in that city, completing his education at Upper Canada College. - He married in June, 1846, Elizabeth Mary, youngest daughter of S. P. Hurd, formerly surveyorgeneral of Upper Canada. In 1837 he joined the militia, and served as a lieutenant in the incorporated militia during the troubles in Upper Canada of 1837-38. He is now a major on the retired list. In May, 1839, Major Powell entered the office of the civil secretary of Upper Canada, and since that time has remained in the civil service. was appointed, on the 25th January, 1883, to the position of Under-Secretary of State, the office having then become vacant by the appointment of Edouard J. Langevin to the clerkship of the Senate.

Hamilton, Hon. John, Senator, deceased, was the youngest son of the late Hon. Robert Hamilton, at one time a resident of Carlton Island, was born at Queenston, Ontario, in the year 1802. After spending a short time at school there, he was sent to Edinburgh, where he entered the Academy and received a classical training of that order which has made that school famous. the age of sixteen he came back to Canada to follow business pursuits, and two years afterwards he entered as a clerk the house of DeRiver, Blackwood & Co., wholesale merchants, Montreal. After serving a thorough apprenticeship there, he returned to his home in Queenston, where he entered upon the business of building and running steamboats on his own account. He owned, though he did not build, the Frontenac, the first steamer that plied the waters of Lake An advertisement of this craft. Ontario. adorned by a rude wood-cut, appears in the Chronicle of 1819. We are there informed that James Mackenzie is the master; that the steamer leaves three times a week for York and Queenston; that the fare is £3 from Kingston to York, and £1 from York to Queenston; that each passenger is allowed sixty pounds of baggage; that gentlemen's servants are not allowed to eat or drink in the cabin; and that an extra charge of five shillings is made for dogs. Mr. Hamilton's energy and enterprise were remarkable. He built the Queenston, the Great Britain, the Lord Sydenham (which was the first large boat that ever ran the rapids), the Passport, Canada, Kingston and Sovereign; he chartered the Gildersleeve. Brockville, Cobourg, Champion, Commodore Barry, Ottawa, New York, Northerner, and many others. For a long time he even made a determined fight against the Grand Trunk Railway, which became a competitor for the carrying trade of Upper Canada. He continued in the business until 1862, when he retired. In January, 1831, he was called to the Legislative Council, and for over half a century he took part continuously and usefully in the upper branch of each successive legislature which has been formed under our constitutional system, earning for himself the title of the Nestor of the Senate. A public career so remarkable could not fail to meet with fitting acknowledgment, and on January 29th, 1881, the fiftieth anniversary of his elevation to the council, he was presented by his colleagues with an address, which is some reflex of their esteem and admiration. Having borne tribute to his services in parliament, the address goes on to say: "But it has not been in parliament alone that you have served the country. The annals of Canada for the last fifty years will recount the important enterprises of commerce in which you have been engaged. To you, in early days, Upper Canada owed her predominance on Lake Ontario. The organization of the first line of steamers which plied on that lake, and which in good and ill fortune you maintained for five-and. twenty years, the establishment of steam communication between Kingston and Montreal, the courage and perseverance which first directed large steamers to descend the rapids of the St. Lawrence, and the maintenance of lines of stage-coaches for autumn and winter communication between the provinces which are now Ontario and Quebec. all bear testimony to your vigorous and far-reaching enterprise. We rejoice to have an opportunity of recording our appreciation of the value of these and other public services which have marked your career. Your wellspent life, it may be, is drawing to a close, but you are surrounded with 'honour, love, obedience, troops of friends, and as 'the father of the senate,' your colleagues congratulate you on the occurrence of this interesting anniversary, and heartily wish you a cheerful and happy old age." The speaker of the Senate, Hon. D. L. Macpherson, Sir Alexander Campbell, who read the address, and the other senators came forward and congratulated their colleague individually. The late senator was for seventeen years president of the Commercial Bank; he was at one time president of the St. Andrew's Society, and he was chairman of the Board of Trustees of Queen's College from its incorporation in 1841 until his death. He was very proud of the last-mentioned position. He married in early life Frances Pasia, daughter of David Macpherson, of Inverness, Scotland, by whom he had a large family-John, who is now county attorney at Sault Ste. Marie; Clark, collector of Customs at Kingston, and a brief memoir of whom will be found elsewhere in these pages; Mrs. Paton, of New York; Herchmer George, now dead; David, who practises medicine in Batavia, N.Y.; Mrs. Mackenzie, wife of Dr. Mackenzie, of Hillcroft; Joseph, now dead; Mrs. Foote, of Denver, Colorado; and Samuel, dead. Nature conferred upon Senator Hamilton an external appearance which seemed designed for one of her noblemen. His figure was large and well knit; his countenance was marked by singular dignity and benevolence. Intelligence and refinement shone there, and were characteristic Thos more acter and posit offen his q lic s found hono 1882.

E٤ was h Coun 1821. Lout senr. surve to Ca fifth of the settle where wards in th study and I study the la we ma step-si course versity 1852. into pa H. Bro 1860. fields, 1863 a was ap ties of appoin appoin the Cor up to 1 pealed. trustee which remova He also 1877. sonry in Prescot treasure mother 1870.

Arch ch

also af

74, Ma

istic also of his manners and conversation. Those who knew him intimately discovered more worth as their knowledge of the character of the deceased gentleman increased; and withal he was of that unassuming disposition that none would have been more offended than he at any allusion either to his qualities of heart or head, or to his public services. Seldom is it that a man is found in the community so full of years and honours. He died on the 10th of October, 1882.

Easton, John, M.D., C.M., Brockville, was born in the township of Yonge, in the County of Leeds, Ontario, on the 9th April, His father was born in the town of Louth, Lincolnshire, England. Mr. Easton, senr., was a watchmaker and jeweller, and a surveyor, before he left England. He came to Canada in 1817, and married Marilla, fifth daughter of Major Thomas Smythe, of the 67th Regiment, regulars, in 1819, and settled upon lands in the township of Yonge, where our subject was born two years afterwards. John Easton received his education in the common schools of the country, studying only the common English branches In 1848 he commenced the and Latin. study of medicine, under the direction of the late Senator Brouse. He had married, we may add, in 1846, Lucy Ann Bailey, a step-sister of Dr. Brouse. His college courses were taken at McGill College University, where he graduated in the spring of 1852. He returned to Prescott, and entered into partnership with his old tutor, Dr. W. H. Brouse, for a term of eight years, or up to 1860. In 1862 he went to the Cariboo gold fields, in British Columbia, but returned in 1863 and resumed his practice. Dr. Easton was appointed coroner for the united counties of Leeds and Grenville, in 1874, which He was also appointment he still holds. appointed to the office of official assignee for the County of Grenville in 1875, and acted up to 1881, when the Insolvent Act was repealed. He was elected Grammar school trustee for the town of Prescott in 1855, which post he filled continuously until his removal from Prescott in the fall of 1879. He also sat as town councillor from 1864 to 1877. Dr. Easton was initiated into Masonry in 1859, in Central lodge, No. 110, at Prescott, and filled the offices of secretary, treasurer, junior and senior wardens in his mother lodge, and was elected master in 1870. In 1871, he entered Grenville Royal Arch chapter, No. 22, of Prescott; and also affiliated with St. James' lodge, No. 74, Maitland, and with Maitland lodge, Royal Arch, No. 68, in order to fill up his Masonic course in that village from entered apprentice to the fuller extent of the higher grades which were being instituted there. Dr. Easton is very prominent in Masonry, holding high rank in the several Masonic rites. He is a P.M. in Craft Masonry; First Principal Z in Capitutar; Master in Cryptic; Provincial Grand Master in the: Royal and Oriental Rite 33°-96°-90°; is a member of the Knights Templars, Ark Mariner, Swedenborgian, A. & A. Scottish rite, the Sat B'hai, and several side degrees, as well as an Hon. IX° in the Rosicrucian Society. Dr. Easton's political leanings are to the Reform side. He takes pride in supporting such men as Alexander Mackenzie, Oliver Mowat, or any other statesmen of like character. His religious views are those of every man who refuses to be led by other men's consciences and superstitions. He believes that his own conscience is as likely to guide him aright as that of other men. He is not, therefore, a member of any Having lost his first wife in 1863, by whom he had seven children, five of whom are living, he married again, in 1865, Helen Maud Price, eldest daughter of Robert S. Henderson, then of Prescott, who has borne him two other children, the eldest of whom is now living, and is eighteen years of age. His family consists of four sons and two daughters. Dr. Easton is still in the active practice of his profession. For the last six years he has lived in the town of Brockville.

Charlton, Benjamin E., Hamilton, the subject of the following brief sketch, was born in the County of Brant, Ontario, on April 12th, 1835, and from being a Canadian country lad, reared in the log cabin of a settler, has by his own ability and perseverance, risen to the highest position of honor and trust in the community. He came to Hamilton in 1854, as a teacher of the Central school, and shortly afterwards engaged in a manufacturing enterprise, in which he has been successful. Early turning his attention to matters of local and general interest, he became president of St. George's Society, director of the Mechanics' Institute, councillor, alderman, railway director, president of the Board of Trade, and three times mayor of the city, having first attained the latter position in 1867, when only thirty-two years of age. Although Mr. Charlton has now voluntarily retired from public life, we feel safe in saying that no citizen of Hamilton enjoys a greater share of popularity and respect than he.

Doherty, William, (of the firm of W. Doherty & Co., Organ Manufacturers), Clinton, Ontario, was born near Bradford in the County of Simcoe, in the year 1841. His father, John T. Doherty, was of Irish descent, and his mother, Hannah Kirk-patrick, belonged to the Covenanters of Whilst the subject of this sketch was still very young, his parents settled at St. Vincent, in the County of Grey, and it was here that he became acquainted with the hardships of a pioneer life. He still has a vivid recollection of those bush-farming days, when the early settlers drew their hay through the stumps on tree tops, and made hay forks out of small forked trees. At that time the wild deer, bear, fox and other Canadian game and animals abounded in the forest; and whilst hunting or trapping these, young William Doherty acquired a knowledge of our Canadian woods which has been of very great use to him in his after avocations. The educational advantages of those times were poor indeed, but of such as there were he eagerly availed himself, so as to be prepared for the responsibilities and battles of the future. One of his teachers was the (now) Rev. W. Dwyer, a prominent Methodist minister, and who largely aided in laying the foundations of Mr. Doherty's successful career. about twelve years of age he went to reside at Meaford with his brother-in-law. Robert Burchill, a man of superior ability and literary attainments, who was the first to instil into the mind of young Doherty the ideas of business and the possibilities of the future. About this time the Australian gold fever was at its height, and his father, like many others, imperilled the family possessions in order to try his luck in the distant El Dorado. The result was that a few years after the homestead was lost to the family, and William with his eldest brother (since deceased) found employment at Claude, in the County of Peel, to which place his mother had removed. Two things transpired here which materially affected the after life of young Doherty. He was compelled to act as the family financier and adviser, which taught him a manly reliance on his own resources, and the instructions in music of Professor Standing, which he here received, aroused in him that musical taste which was to form so prominent a factor in his future career. Farming in summer, and attending school in winter, availing himself of every opportunity of selfimprovement, and the development of his undoubted musical talents, he was making great progress. He was speedily known as a musician of some note by the whole neighbourhood, and frequently acted for Professor Standing in taking charge of his classes. Early in life Mr. Doherty showed a strong leaning towards things religious. At eight years of age he was active in Sunday school work, and expressed the conviction that he was called by Providence to the work of a To carry the tidings of the missionary. gospel to foreign lands became a burning desire and the coveted object of the future. In the temperance reform he also early took a place, joining when twelve years of age the Cadets of Temperance at Meaford. and helping materially to keep that institution up. When about sixteen years of age William made the acquaintance of the (now) Rev. James A. Campbell at Claude, and in the fall of 1862 both were converted to God and joined the Methodist church at a place Both felt they called Campbell's Cross. were called to missionary work, and a compact was made between them to prepare at once by entering college for that vocation. They were reinforced shortly afterwards by Luther Embree (now head master of Whitby High school), and the date at which they were to commence their scholastic training was to be the 1st January, 1865. A little prior to this William went to Petrolia, during the great oil excitement of those days. for the purpose of earning money to carry him through his studies. With some companions he became so zealous in revival work that when January came he found it impossible to leave, and so the project of going to school, so far as he was concerned. fell through. He made, however, a proposition to his companion, Campbell, which shows his disinterested liberality, and which satisfied in part his desire for missionary The proposal and arrangement was work. that Campbell should go to college, and that he (Doherty) should continue at his work for the purpose of supplying his companion with the means of completing his studies. This compact remained for years-Mr. Campbell became an honoured minister of the Methodist church, and the two were the very closest friends during life. Mr. Campbell was given many important charges, and in after life was rendered valuable assistance by the companion who had sacrificed his own ambition for what he believed was the call of duty. In most of the churches where Mr. Campbell presided will be found organs supplied at slight cost by Mr. Doherty. In 1868 Mr. Doherty removed from Petrolia to Bay City, Michigan, an hi H th sa we be tr

br

sti

m

In ty &

M

th

int

ad

M

poi

prd

su

be

is l

tha

wid

lea

lau

His

110

ma

last

mad

of d

He

ligh

mer

mar

tuti

tive

fact

pres

town

buil

mos

dem

Witl

ship

Doh

the

came 1882

one

a m

partr

enlar

Engl

were

and from thence to Clinton, where he has since resided. The following year he commenced business as a cabinet-maker, and by his energy soon worked up a good business. His brother-in-law, J. N. Dopew, was at this time carrying on an agency for the sale of melodians, and the two businesses were united. The next year Mr. Doherty became the sole owner by purchase, and he transferred the management of his music branch to his brother, T. C. Doherty, who still remains with him, and is now an alderman of the flourishing town of Clinton. In 1873 D. R. Menzies joined Mr. Doherty in partnership in the firm of Doherty & Menzies, which continued until 1886, Mr. Menzies then retiring. About this time the cabinet organ was beginning to come into popular use. In largely handling Canadian and American manufactured organs, Mr. Doherty soon discovered the weak points in each, and resolved that he would produce an organ that would be altogether superior, and in which these defects would be mimimized. How well he has succeeded is best demonstrated by the fact that in less than ten years the Doherty organ is worldwide in reputation, and recommended by the leading musicians. Mr. Doherty at once launched into the manufacture of organs. His indomitable perseverance and zeal knew 110 obstacles, and he was determined to make for his instruments a name that should last. He had a desire to excel, and had made himself master of the different parts of organ-building by practical experience. He wanted something that would be a delight, and believing that the perfect instrument might be modelled after the perfect man, "he fashioned his after his own constitution, being sweet voiced, strong and active." The history of the growth of his manufacturing establishment from that day to the present would be largely the history of the town. From a small beginning three large buildings have sprung, taxed to their utmost capacity to supply the ever increasing demands of a home and foreign trade. With the largely facilitated banking and shipping facilities afforded by Clinton, the Doherty organ secured a large portion of the Canadian trade, and Mr. Doherty became able to launch out still further. In 1882, John Gibbings, a representative of one of Huron's oldest settled families, and a man of means and skill, entered into partnership with him. The firm at once enlarged their trade; a traveller was sent to England and the continent, and agencies were successfully established in London,

fes-

ies.

ng

ght

ool

he

f a

the

ing

re.

rly

of

rd.

ge

w)

in

od

ce

eу

at

Glasgow, and St. John's, N. F. Shortly after the Australian and New Zealand markets were secured, and the position, beauty, and general excellence of the Doherty organ placed beyond cavil. Mr. Doherty, by his business conduct, had established a reputation for honesty, uprightness and fair dealing, and could truthfully be said to have gained an entrance into the markets of the world. As in other places so in Clinton, Mr. Doherty has taken a most prominent part in church and town matters. He became a member of the Methodist church, to which he has been a warm and generous friend. His wonderful musical talents make him a great acquisition and he has freely given them to the church of his choice. In the fall of 1878 he became leader of the choir in church and Sunday school, and has found time to attend to both even amidst the work and responsibility of his great establish-His life-long friend, Rev. James Campbell, between whom and himself there was a friendship like David's and Jonathan's of old, died in Port Hope in 1883. The compact made between the two friends remained, until dissolved by death. Mr. Doherty is still in the prime of life, with a future of great usefulness before him, and there are not wanting those who predict for him even greater successes than the past has given him. In 1870 Mr. Doherty married Miss Depew, of Seaforth, and has now a family of three boys and three girls. His home in Clinton is a fine residence, surrounded by grounds that are, without exception, the finest for many miles around. In politics he has been a life-long Conservative, and is an honoured and active member of the party.

Macfarlane, Hon. Alexander, Q.C., Senator, Wallace, Nova Scotia, was born at the place named, in June, 1817. He was educated at the place of his birth, mainly by private tutors, and when his studies were concluded began the study of the law, and was called to the bar of Nova Scotia in 1844. His activity and his strong abilities soon gave him a conspicuous place in the legal profession, and a handsome practice was gradually established. At the same time that he practised his profession he turned his thoughts to political questions, of which he made a careful and profound study. In 1856 he offered himself as a candidate for the County of Cumberland and was elected, and represented that constituency in the Nova Scotia legislature till the date of the union. In 1865 he became a member of the executive council of the province, and holds rank and precedence as such by patent from the Queen. In 1867 he was appointed Queen's counsel, and he is a surrogate of vice-admiralty. He took an active part in the movement for union, when the maritime provinces projected a union of their own; and he was one of the delegates from Nova Scotia to the London conference to complete terms of union in 1866-67. On the 10th of October, 1870, he was called to the Senate, and has since sat in that House. He married, in 1844, Annie, daughter of Amos Seaman, of Minudie, Nova Scotia. Mr. Macfarlane is of Scottish descent, and in politics is a Conservative. He is a gentleman of marked courtesy of manners, and in his utterances in the Senate there is a pervading dignity and moderation; while his speeches have always been marked by much breadth of view.

Wright, Lieut.-Col. Alonzo, Hull, M.P. for Ottawa county, Quebec, was born at Hull on the 26th February, 1825. He is a son of the late Lieutenant-Colonel Tiberius Wright, and a grandson of the late Philemon Wright, formerly of Woburn, Massachusetts, who came to Canada in 1797, and after a long and tiresome march arrived opposite the falls of the Chaudiere, and founded there the village of Hull. Philemon Wright became an extensive operator in lumber, and was the first representative of the county in the legislature of Lower Through his great enterprise a town sprang up almost as if by magic near the spray of the falls; and as the fame of the operations of Philemon Wright went abroad, other men of enterprise came thither with their capital, and sent armies of men with axes out into the pine forests of the Ottawa. Later on Bytown (the present city of Ottawa) made its appearance upon the opposite side of the river, and continued to acquire commercial importance, till it received the crowning honour of selection as the capital of Canada. Alonzo Wright, the grandson of the distinguished pioneer, received his early tuition at home, but was afterwards sent to the Potsdam academy at New York, where he completed his course. Upon returning home he connected himself with the business of his father, and very soon revealed that he was possessed of the splendid business capabilities and the talents of his ancestors. He is the proprietor of a superb farm, and has always taken a deep interest in agriculture. He was president of the County of Ottawa Agricultural Society, and a director of the Agricultural Society of the City of Ottawa. He is likewise lieutenant-colonel of the Ottawa county reserve militia. In political questions he has always taken a keen interest; but the part that he has played in public life has never been that of a narrow partyist, although he is one of the staunchest Conservatives in the Dominion. It might be urged by those who do not understand the character of the man. that with his handsome competency he is above need, and therefore can afford to be always generous towards his opponents, and to be independent of his friends. But if Alonzo Wright had only salt and porridge he would be a generous, judicial and popular publicist; for his character is laid according to splendid and manly lines. He is not a man who ever cares about making show as a politician, but for all his unot trusiveness he is regarded as one of the ablest members of the House of Commons. He seldom makes speeches, but when he does speak, it is to charm the house with the warmth of his eloquence, and the extent of his learning, and the grace and culture of his style. It is not long since he delivered a speech respecting the Canadian Pacific Railway, in which he described a trip made by him over that railroad. This was perhaps one of the most graceful and eloquent utterances of his life; and in wealth of literary allusion, in grace and in comprehensiveness was one of the most able speeches ever delivered in the House of Commons. Mr. Wright married Mary, eldest daughter of the late Nicholas Sparks, of Ottawa city. From his handsome residence at Ironside. the "king of the Gatineau" dispenses bountiful hospitality to his hosts of friends. There is not, in this country, in social life, a more popular man than Alonzo Wright, or one more generous or more beloved by those who have made his personal acquaintance.

call paloyn Botth of a in Kir

at

is

fa

in ta

Th

Ca

clı

na

wa

an

ge

Ųυ

sch

pro

Co

bra

sut

qua

Britton, Byron Moffatt, Q.C., Kingston, was born at Gananoque, on the 3rd of September, 1833. He is the oldest son of D. F. Britton, the present postmaster of the village named, who is a most honourable man, and who was one of the pioneers in the early settlement of that now thriving Both parents of B. M. Britton were born in the United States, his father in New Hampshire, and his mother in New York. As a boy, the subject of this sketch was clerk in his father's store. After determining upon the study of law, he attended Victoria University at Cobourg, and graduated there in arts in 1856. He entered the law office of P. & M. Vankoughnet, Toronto, and from there removed to Belleville, where he finished his studies, and

Almost immediately

was called to the bar in Trinity term, 1859. eserve He soon afterwards commenced the practice lways of his profession at Kingston, where he hat he has since resided. n that he obtained a large practice, which he has bne of retained, working early and late with great energy and zeal. Had he confined his Doe who energies to law, he would have amassed man. a comfortable fortune, and would probably he is to be have retired from practice, but unfortunately for himself, he has engaged in so s, and many outside speculations, some of which, it But if is said, have not proved successful, so that porhe is still obliged to work like a beginner. l and In 1864, he contested the Cataraqui Divi-B laid sion for the Senate, against the Honourable He Alexander Campbell, and was defeated. He ring ino was never a candidate for the House of Commons, although always an active Liberal. In f the 1875, he was appointed a bencher of the Law nons. Society, to which position he has twice since n he been elected. He was created a Queen's h the counsel by the Ontario government in 1876, nt of and by the Dominion government in 1881. of his He was for many years chairman of the red a Railpublic school board at Kingston; was an le by alderman, and in 1876, was elected mayor haps of that city, which position he held for that year. In 1863, he married the oldest and t uterary now the only surviving daughter of the late Hon. L. H. Holton, and they have a family eness of eight children living, six daughters and · detwo sons. Mr. Britton has always identified Mr. himself with every enterprise for the good er of of his adopted city, and his career has been city. a most active one, he having taken a part side. in almost every important case tried at oun-Kingston since he entered the profession. ends. In 1882, he was appointed county crownife, a attorney for the County of Frontenac. t, or is a director of the Kingston Cotton Manuhose facturing Company; of the Ontario Buildnce. ing and Savings Company; and of the Onling-

d of

n .of the

able

s in ving

tton

ther New

etch

eter-

hded

rad-

ered

net,

elle-

and

tario Mutual Life Assurance Company. Conger, Stephen Marshall, Picton. The exodus of British sympathisers to Canada, which followed immediately after the close of the American revolution, included a branch of the Conger family. The name is an old one, and the curious in that way will find that a St. Conger flourished at an early date near Bristol, England. Congersburg derives its name from him, and the Queen Elizabeth hospital, or Bristol city school, is sustained out of a portion of the property granted by the west Saxons to St. Conger. One of the originals of the Canada branch, David Conger, grandfather of the subject of this notice, was born at Piscatauqua, N.Y., 1769, and with other members of the family located in Prince Edward county, near Picton, on the shore of the Bay of Quint.6 They were U. E. loyalists. deed of David Conger bears date 1797, and a portion of this property still remains in the possession of the family. Both the Canadian and American Congers have contributed a fair share of representative men. Roger B. Conger represented the County of Prince Edward in Parliament, and Wilson S. Conger, sheriff of Peterborough, afterwards represented that county in parliament; while the American name has figured in the Senate of the United States, as well as in the judicial bench and the army. David Conger had seven children, of whom John Owens Conger was the second, and was born in the township of Hallowell, June 2nd, 1796. 1822, he married Maria, daughter of the Rev. James Wilson. He was a licensed surveyor in Upper Canada, a captain in the 4th battalion, Prince Edward militia, and was on duty at Kingston during the war of 1812-13. Stephen Marshall Conger, eldest son of the above, was born near Picton, 1835, and in 1862 married Mary Jane, only child of David McDonald, by whom he has four children. Mr. Conger's life has been an active one. Before attaining his majority, he took charge of the Picton Gazette, which, in connection with his brother, John William, has continued to be managed by them. Besides the onorous duty of editing and managing a weekly paper since 1856, Mr. Conger has served the county and town in many capacities. He has been repeatedly member of the town council, chairman of high school board, etc., besides being a member of the Masonic craft for many years, in which he has filled some of the most eminent positions. In religion he holds to the faith of his progenitors, who were mostly Methodists; and in politics has always been a Liberal-Conservative. He is the recognized head of the Conger family in Canada, and wears the honor with cuiet dignity, as it suits him best.

Ryerson, Rev. Egerton, D.D.. LL. D., late Chief Superintendent of Education for Ontario, was born in the township of Charlotteville, near Lake Erie, London, afterwards the Talbot district, and now the County of Norfolk, on the 24th of March, We learn from his friend and official associate, Dr. J. George Hodgins, that his father, Colonel Joseph Ryerson, a United Empire loyalist in the British service at the time of the American revolution, was born in New Jersey. He first joined as a cadet, and was one of the five hundred and fifty loyal volunteers who went to Charleston, South Carolina. For his good conduct in bearing despatches one hundred and ninetysix miles into the interior, he was promoted to a lieutenancy in the Prince of Wales' volunteers by Sir Guy Carleton (Lord Dorchester). Subsequently he was engaged in six battles, and was once wounded. At the peace of 1783 he was exiled, and went to New Brunswick, thence to Canada—he and his family enduring very great hardship in penetrating into the interior of the then unbroken wilderness of Canada. He settled in Charlotteville, and lived there about seventy years. In the war of 1812 he and his three sons again joined the British standard, and acquitted themselves bravely. During his life he held various appointments under the crown. He died in 1854, at the venerable age of ninety-four years, after having enjoyed his half-pay as a British officer, for the unprecedented period of seventy years. Dr. Ryerson was the fourth son of Colonel Ryerson, and was named after two British officers who were intimate friends of his father. His youth was passed in his native country; and at its Grammar school he received the rudiments of his early education. With Mr. Law, the master of the Gore district Grammar school at Hamilton, he studied his classics. As grammar schools were the only public schools at that time in existence in the country, they were in the rural counties very elementary in their character, and did not profess to teach more than the mere rudiments of an English education. The young and ardent student, as Doctor Ryerson then was, not content with the superficial knowledge of grammar which he obtained at school, prevailed upon his father to allow him to go home for six months to attend a grammar class which had been established in the county town on that specific subject. Doctor Ryerson's experience as a teacher did not extend beyond the grammar school of his native county. At the age of sixteen he was appointed usher, or assistant teacher, to his eldest brother, George. Having thus the management of boys and girls who were his companions, and many of them several years his senior, his firmness, tact, and decision were frequently put to the test, but he acquitted himself well, and the experience thus gained was afterwards turned to higher account. On his twenty-second birthday Dr. Ryerson was ordained deacon in the M. E. Church, by Bishop Hedding. His diary during the first year of his ministerial life shows how devotedly he applied himself to the culture of his mind, although his valise often contained the chief part of his library, and the back of his horse frequently afforded him the only place of study. His first literary effort was put forth in 1826-being the review of Ven. Archdeacon Strachan's sermon on the death of Bishop Mountain, and it at once established his reputation as an able controversialist. In 1828 he again wrote a series of letters criticising Dr. Strachan's famous chart of the various religious bodies. Both series were re-pub. lished in pamphlet form. In 1829, the Christian Guardian was established, and he was appointed its joint editor. In 1833 he went to England, and again in 1835. In the latter year he went to obtain a Royal charter and subscriptions for Upper Canada Academy, now Victoria College, Cobourg. He also induced the home government to recommend the Upper Canada legislature to grant $16,000 to the academy, which it did against the wishes of Sir F. B. Head, the governor. In 1840 an act of incorporation was obtained from the then recently united Canadian legislature, erecting Upper Canada Academy into a university, under the name and style of the "University of Victoria College at Cobourg." Dr. Ryerson (who then received the title of D.D., from the Wesleyan University, Middleton), was unanimously chosen its first president. In 1844, he was appointed Superintendent of Education for Upper Canada, by His Excellency the Governor-General, with an understanding that he would re-lay the entire foundation of the system, and establish it on a wider and more enduring basis. Notwithstanding the zeal and ability with which Doctor Ryerson had collected and arranged his facts, analyzed the various systems of education in Europe (chiefly in Germany) and America, and fortified himself with the opinions of all the most eminent educationists in those countries, yet his projected system for this province was fiercely assailed, and was vehemently denounced as embodying in it the very essence of "Prussian despotism." Still with indomitable courage he persevered in his plans, and at length succeeded in 1846 in inducing the legislature to pass a school act, which he had drafted. In 1849 the provincial administration favourable to Doctor Ryerson's views went out of office, and one unfavourable to him came in. The Hon. Malcolm Cameron, a hostile member of the cabinet, having concocted a singularly crude and cumbrous school bill, aimed to oust Dr. Ryerson from office, it was without examin-

t

0 5 0

to

p

CE

la

μı

ĊC

th

T

w

de

bι

qυ

to

fre

aid

cat

of

the

Ca

18

pro

wa

and

in .

aft

Do

tur

the

sta

litt

yea

gui

was

star

yet

the

part

and

In 1

mad

lishi

posi

ation or discussion passed into law. Doctor Ryerson at once called the attention of the government (at the head of which was the late lamented Lord Elgin) to the impracticable and unchristian character of the bill, as it had formally excluded the Bible from the schools. The late Honourable Robert Baldwin, C.B., attorney-general, the Nestor of Canadian politicians, and a truly Christian man, was so convinced of the justness of Dr. Ryerson's views and remonstrance, that he took the unusual course of advising His Excellency to suspend the operation of the new act until Doctor Ryerson could prepare a draft of bill on the basis of the repealed law, embodying in it, additional to the old bill, the result of his own experience of the working af the system up to that time. The result was that a law passed in 1850 admirably adapted to the excellent municipal system of Canada, so popular in its character and comprehensive in its provisions and details, that it is still in a consolidated form, the statute under which the public schools of Ontario are maintained. There was one question, the agitation of which had for many years caused a good deal of disturbance to the school system, but which was set at rest in 1863. This question was the right of Roman Catholics to establish schools of their own, separate from the public schools, but nevertheless aided from the parliamentary grant for education, according to the average attendance of pupils at the schools. The principle of these schools was fully conceded in the first Canadian School bill which was passed in 1841, the year of the legislative union of the provinces of Upper and Lower Canada. It was subsequently modified in 1843, 1847, and 1850, and, after much bitter agitation, in 1853, 1855, and finally in 1863. In 1853, after a good deal of delay and discussion, Doctor Ryerson prevailed upon the legislature to revise the grammar school law of the province, which had remained in the statute book accomplishing comparatively little good since 1807-1839. For twelve years longer these schools continued to languish. In 1865 the grammar school law was still further improved, and a higher standard of education adopted; but as yet the principle of local taxation for the support of these schools had been partially concurred in by the legislature, and embodied in the amended In 1850, Dr. Ryerson, while in England, made preliminary arrangements for estab-lishing the library, map, and apparatus depository in connection with his department, s valise

library,

fforded

is first

-being

achan's

untain,

tion as

e again

ng Dr.

ous re-

re-pub-

Chris-

he was

e went

In the

l char-

Canada

bourg.

t to re-

ure to it did

d, the

pration

united

lanada

name

ictoria

(who

was

m the

t. In

ent of

Excel-

ınder-

entire

lish it

Not-

with

nd ar-

3" SVS-

l Ger-

imself

inent

s pro-

ercely

ed as

Prus-

itable

nd at

g the

l ad-

rson's

vour-

lcolm

binet.

and

Dr.

amin-

and in 1855 he established meteorological stations in connection with the county grammar schools. In 1865, the law on the subject having been amended, twelve stations were selected and put into efficient working order. In 1857, he made his third educational tour in Europe, where he procured at-Antwerp, Brussels, Florence, Rome, Paris, and London, an admirable collection of copies of paintings by the old masters, statues, busts, etc., besides various articles for an educational museum in connection with the department. In 1858-60, Dr. Ryerson took a leading part in the discussion in the newspapers, and before a committee of the legislature, in favour of grants to the various outlying universities in Ontario. He maintained that "they did the state good service," and that their claims should be substantially recognized as colleges of a central university. He deprecated the multiplication of universities in the province, which would be the result of a rejection of his scheme. In consideration of his able services in this contest, the University of Victoria College conferred upon him the degree of LL.D. in 1861. In 1860, he induced the government to submit to the legislature the draft of a bill which he had prepared, after consultation at the various county school conventions, for the further development of the system of public instruction. This law very greatly improved the details of the system, and rendered its whole working more effective. In 1867, he made his fourth educational tour in England and the United States. On his return, in 1868, he submitted to the government a very valuable "special report on the systems and state of popular education in the several countries of Europe and the United States of America, with practical suggestions for the improvement of public instruction in Upper Canada." He also made a separate "report on institutions for the deaf and dumb and blind in various countries." In 1868-70, he submitted to the government drafts of bills for the further improvement of public and high schools. In 1871, the bill was carried through the legislature by the Hon. M. C. Cameron, and has been the means of largely benefiting both classes of schools. For many years Dr. Ryerson had felt that our new political condition necessitated a change in the management of the Education department. He, therefore, in 1869 and 1872, urged upon the government the desirability of relieving him of his arduous duties, and of appointing a minister of education in his place. Early in 1876 his recommendations were acted upon, and he retired on full salary from the responsible post which for thirty-two years he had so worthily and honourably filled. The distinguished educationist died at Toronto, on the 19th February, 1882. Shortly after his death, Dr. Hodgins, assisted by other gentlemen, prepared for the press a work which had been partly written by the great educationist, entitled, "The Story of My Life." This book was one of the most important contributions to the literature of the past forty years, and it threw light upon a number of issues which had been but imperfectly understood. Dr. Ryerson was not a man with whom everybody agreed during the plenitude of his power. Men of great individuality are certain to have fierce opponents; and such opponents had Egerton Ryerson. He was most of all assailed for writing in defence of Lord Metcalfe, on the occasion so well-known to history; but if we accept the doctor's own view of this contest, and there is, perhaps, no good reason why we should reject it, his action leaves little room for censure. On the whole, one of the finest, and most sturdy figures in the modern history of Canada, was that of the subject of this sketch. French, Frederick John, M.P.P. for South Grenville, Prescott, was born at Burritt's Rapids, County Grenville, on the 18th, January, 1847. He is a son of John Strachan French, merchant, of that place, and Marianne Chesley. J. S. French was son of Benjamin French, a son of Jeremiah French, who represented the Eastern District in the first parliament held in Upper Canada, 14th October, 1792. The founder of the French family in America originally settled in New Hampshire and founded the town of Manchester, in that State, upon land granted to him by the English government, naming the same after his birthplace in England. Jeremiah was one of the U. E. loyalists, and came to Canada, and settled in Cornwall, where he obtained land grants from the government in the townships of Cornwall and Montague. The lands in Mon-tague were exchanged by him for other lands in Cornwall. The homestead is still held by the family, being occupied by an elder brother of the present subject, George A. French. Being one of the earliest settlers and a devoted loyalist, when the Duke of Kent visited Canada, in the latter part of the last century, he was the guest of, and made a stay of some time with, Jeremiah French. Marianne Chesley, mother of our subject, was the daughter of John Chesley, of Cornwall, gentleman. This name is a corruption of the French name Castellier. and the family originally came from France, but for convenience adopted the Anglicised spelling. Solomon Y. Chesley, brother of John, was for many years superintendent of Indian affairs under the government of the old province of Canada. Our subject was educated at the Grammar school, Ottawa, under Prof. Thorburn, was enrolled as solicitor in 1868 and called to the bar His legal studies were pursued in the offices of the now Judge Lyon, of Ottawa, D. S. Read, Q.C., and the present Chancellor Boyd. He formed a partnership, shortly after being admitted, with the late McNeil Clarke, M.P.P. for South Grenville, at Merrickville, Mr. French taking charge of the office. Mr. Clarke dying in 1872, Mr. French moved to Prescott, where he has continued to practise ever since. He soon began to take an active part in public questions, the political mantle of his late partner naturally devolving upon him as well as the business one. Mr. French's first contest for political honours was in the general election for the Ontario legislature, in 1879, for the constituency of South Grenville. Hon. C. F. Fraser, now South Grenville. Hon. C. F. Fraser, now commissioner of Public Works, was the sitting member, and had been returned in the election previous by a majority of 143; but this majority Mr. French reversed by 137. In the following election, 1883, Mr. French carried again the constituency against John Adams, by a majority of fiftysix, and he of course at this writing still represents this constituency. Mr. French's special attention has been directed towards increasing the powers of the local courts, and as a result largely of his action in this regard we have seen the principle adopted notably in the Judicature Act of 1881; the extension of the division court jurisdiction of 1880; and the promise by the government to bring down a bill to increase the jurisdiction of the county courts. Mr. French, by his advocacy of this decentralization has incurred the displeasure of some members of his own profession, but the principle advocated is undoubtedly in the public interest. Mr. French is a staunch Conservative, as might naturally be expected from his descent. He married, on April 28th, 1875, Alma Lucia, daughter of John Gordon, a retired farmer of Stratford, and by whom he has three children, all boys. He is a member of Central lodge, No. 110, A. F. & A. M., Prescott. He is president of the Conservative Association, for the n H ti ii ii o

KK

or W A A be far

m

me

ba

of

he

in

Ηd

ex

Du

tio

rea

ced

cee

₩i

had

of (

Cul

bra

Cul

tow:

Sim

prov

Can

see

sinc

his

for

200

of S

hint

wate

like

made

on th

years

sever

were

only:

county, and has held that position for seven or eight years. During its continuance he was also president of the Prescott Printing and Publishing Co., whose interest became merged in the Prescott Messenger. Mr. French, in 1872, took an extended tour through Great Britain and the Continent. In 1882 he visited the North²West in the interest of a land company in which he was interested. He is a member of the Church of England, and holds moderate views.

a is a tellier,

rance.

licised

her of

endent

ent of

ubject pl, Ot-

rolled

he bar

ursued

on, of

resent

rtner-

th the

Gren-

taking

ring in

where

since.

art in

of his n him

ench's

ras in legis-

cy of

s the

ned in ity of

versed

1883,

uency fifty-

still ench's

wards ourts,

n this

opted

; the

iction

vern-

e the Mr.

entra-

re of

i, but

lly be

d, on

ter of

ford,

boys. 110,

ident

the

Campbell, Duncan, Simcoe, Ontario, one of the pioneers of that town, as well as one of its most successful men of business. was born at Greenock, Scotland, on the 2nd April, 1802. He is a son of Archibald and Ann Campbell, both of whom were members of the Argyle branch of the Campbell Duncan Campbell's great-grandfather was Colonel Dugald Cambell, of Belmore, who was killed while leading his men at the battle of Culloden; and the ball that killed him struck the pipe out of his piper's mouth. The piper laid his of his piper's mouth. head on his colonel's face, and when found in the morning, his hair had turned white. He never afterwards played the bagpines, except for one of the family. In=1815, Duncan, who had received his early edutional training at Greenock, came to Montreal, Canada, whither his parents had pre-ceded him. For two years he was clerk of a store in Montreal, and in 1818 he proceeded to Simcoe, then known as Birdtown, to take charge of a store kept there by William Bird. Subsequently Mr. Campbell had the name changed to Simcoe, in honour of Governor Simcoe who had given Aaron Culver 200 acres of land, which land is embraced in the present site of the town. Mr. Culver, we learn, settled at first in the township of Townsend. When Governor Simcoe passed through that portion of the province, he camped near the site of Colonel Campbell's farm, and Mr. Culver came to see him, bringing a bag of water melons. since he had nothing better, as a present to his excellency. The governor, in return for the kindness, presented the donor with 200 acres of land now covered by the town of Simcoe, Mr. Culver having previously hinted that he thought there was a good water power in this vicinity which he would like some day to improve. He afterwards made good his intimation by building a mill on the creek, Lynn river. He died many years ago. When Mr. Campbell, in his seventeenth year, settled at Simcoe, there were only three houses in the place. The only families, we are further informed, were those of Aaron Culver, William Bird, and McFarland Wilson, Mr. Culver's house being on the eastern side of Patterson's creek, now called Lynn river. Mr. Campbell continued in the mercantile employment, as already noted, for several years. For a long time the nearest post office was at Vittoria, then the county seat; but through the exertions of Mr. Campbell, a post office was at length established at Simcoe, and he became the postmaster. On giving up mercantile life Mr. Campbell was appointed agent of the Gore Bank, continuing thus to act till he was appointed government land agent, an office which he held for several years. During that period he sold the principal part of the lands in the County of Norfolk not previously disposed of. Mr. Campbell, early in life, joined the provincial militia; was appointed lieutenant, and step by step arose till he became lieutenant-colonel. Over forty years ago Col. Campbell was appointed a magistrate and still holds that office, though he rarely now acts. Latterly he has done little more than look after his extensive and valuable Years ago he had achieved affluproperty. ence, and his habits of life and his temperament fit him for the full enjoyment of the fruits of his industry in these his later years. He is a member of the Church of Scotland, and very accurately described as "a Christian gentleman of the pure Scottish type." The name of his residence and park is "Lynwood;" and the identical oak tree under which Governor Simcoe encamped is in the park and still living. Colonel Campbell married in 1844, Clara Ann, daughter of Captain James Marshall Perkins, of the Royal navy. There have been, by this union, five children, three of whom are living. The eldest daughter married Henry Beecher, of London, Ont; the second married Jeffrey Hale, now manager of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, at Ottawa. The son, J. Lorne Campbell, has been for some years in the Bank of Commerce, and best of all, Colonel Campbell is still an active and robust man.

Niven, James S., M. B., T. C. D., L. R. C. S. T., London, Ontario, was born on the 13th December, 1847, at Chrome Hill, Lisburn, Ireland. He is a son of Richard Niven and Eliza Boomer. After having received a careful preliminary training at Belfast college, James S. Niven subsequently matriculated at Trinity College, Dublin, from which institution he graduated in due course in medicine. He has been assistant surgeon of the 7th Fusiliers since 1872; and was in active service during the Riel rebellion of 1885. He was a member of the staff of the general hospital at London from 1877 to 1884. During the last named year he was alderman of the city of London. Since 1870 Dr. Niven has been actively connected with Freemasonry. In politics he has always been true to the cause of Liberal-Conservatism. In religion he is a staunch member of the Church of England; and he has been twice married. Dr. Niven has taken a very active interest in all matters connected with the advancement and breeding of dogs. He has imported Gordon setters, spaniels and Irish terriers, and has carried off many prizes with these dogs, both in Canada and at the principle shows in the United States. He has also acted as judge at many shows, and is considered an authority on all canine questions.

Benson, Thomas, Port Hope, was born on the 11th January, 1804, at Fintona, County of Tyrone, Ireland. His parents were James Benson and Ann' Robinson, who were married at Fintona, on the 19th March, 1803, and came to America in 1816, settling first at Lansingburgh, N.Y., and moving in 1819 to Kingston, Upper Canada, where James Benson died on the 24th December, 1828. His widow died at St. Catharines, U. C., on 30th August, 1854. James Benson had ten children; of whom only two now survive, viz., William Benson, collector of Customs, at Windsor, Ont., and Ann Dickson, widow of John R. Dickson, M.D., late superintendent of the Lunatic Asylum, at Rockwood, Kingston. Two sons died lately, viz., the Hon. James Rea Benson, a senator of the Dominion of Canada, who died at Ottawa, on 18th March, 1885, and Joseph W. Benson, M.D., who died at Chicago, U.S., in December, 1884. The subject of this sketch was educated at Kingston. and early gave promise of a brilliant future, had he been allowed to follow the bent of his own inclinations, and the advice of prominent friends of his parents, who saw in him the elements of success in a professional He strongly inclined to the profession of the law, but a prejudice against it in the minds of his parents prevented its pursuit, and he was sent into mercantile life. Remaining in Kingston until 1832, he moved to Port Hope, and continued there in business until 1837, when, on the breaking out of the rebellion, he went as captain of a company of volunteers to Chippawa and Navy Island, and was on duty till the rebellion of that year was quelled. On the breaking out of the disturbance again in 1839, he | returned to military duty. He held a commission as captain and paymaster in the 3rd battalion of Incorporated militia, stationed at Niagara, from the enrolment of that corps until its disbandment in 1845. This battalion was commanded at first by Colonel Thorne, and afterwards by Colonel Kings. mill. Captain Benson was an universal favourite in the regiment, and possessed the fullest confidence of its commanding officers. both of whom addressed to him most complimentary letters, expressing their high appreciation and admiration of him as an officer and a gentleman. On the disbanding of the 3rd battalion, Mr. Benson went to Peterborough, where he was engaged in the milling business until 1853. He was the first mayor of Peterborough after its incorporation as a town, and was subsequently for some years a member of the council, always taking an active and energetic part in all public affairs. He was especially useful in advancing all matters connected with the educational interests of the county, and was for some time superintendent of Education in the counties of Peterborough and Victoria. He also, during this period of his life, contributed largely to the newspaper press, and aided by his powerful pen all the public, educational and philanthropic enterprises of the neighbourhood. In 1853 he moved to Port Hope to assume the duties of secretary and treasurer of the Peterborough and Port Hope Railway Company, now the Midland Railway of Canada, which position he occupied till his death. His services were invaluable in promoting and carrying out this enterprise, and he was travelling on the business of this company when he met with his untimely end. He was killed on the 12th March, 1857, with fifty-seven others, by the breaking of the bridge over the Desjardins canal, on the line of the Great Western Railway, near the City of Hamilton, and was buried at Port Hope amid a solemnity and profoundness of grief and symyathy never exceeded in that part of the country. Mr. Benson was a sincere and devoted member of the Church of England; but felt and exhibited at all times the warmest sympathy with all other Christian churches. He was ever active and forward in all religious work, and was deeply interested in the Upper Canada Bible Society, whose cause always found in him a prompt supporter and a zealous and powerful advocate. He was also a warm upholder of the temperance movement. Being a ready, fluent, and eloquent speaker, with a well-stored mind, he always occupied a

ottis hjætt softBCNLb

501

Po

St.

Sh

tiv

ent

du

Col

Bal

Was

ear

bar

for .

firm

Mor

He

stud

nam

the

self

lativ

sat i

caree

ing s at th

great lating

1865,

foremost place on every platform from a comwhich the claims of religion, philanthropy, he 3rd or public enterprise were put forth. tioned politics he was a Liberal-Conservative, but f that he was thoroughly non-partisan. Though This admirably fitted to fill a high place and olonel take a prominent part in political affairs, Kingsand with the opportunity at his command versal of representing more than one constituency ed the in the parliament of the province, he prefficers, ferred the quiet retirement of private life, comand never took any very active part in the high politics of his day. He married, on the 10th December, 1827, Alicia Maria Lowe, only daughter of Richard Lowe, of Adolphusas an nding ent to town, U. C., by whom he had a family of twelve children. The eldest daughter, Mary, in the s the is the wife of Thomas R. Merritt, of Rodincorman Hall, St. Catharines; the eldest son, ently James Binley Benson, died in 1876, at il, al-Hamilton, Bermuda, whither he had gone art in aseful to recruit his health. Three daughters and three sons still survive, viz., Annie M., who is h the unmarried; Helen, wife of Calvin E. Brown, d was of Minneapolis, Min., U.S.; Emma, wife of T. R. Fuller, Toronto; Thomas Moore ation Vic-Benson, of Port Hope, junior judge of the County Court of the United Counties of f hiś paper Northumberland and Durham; Richard ll the L. Benson, LL.B., barrister-at-law, Peter-borough; and Lieut.-Col. Frederick A. Bennter-3 he son of the 46th battalion, volunteer militia, uties Port Hope. Mr. Benson's widow died at eter-St. Catharines, on the 11th August, 1877. oany, She was a woman of much personal attrachich tiveness, of deep and fervent piety, and of His entire devotedness to her family cares and and duties. was nanv

Ryan, Hon. Thomas, Lieutenant-Colonel, Senator, Montreal, was born at Balinakill, County of Kildare, Ireland. He was educated at Clongowe's College, and early in life came to Canada, where he embarked in commercial operations. He was for many years a partner in the well-known firms of Ryan, Bros. & Co., of Quebec and Montreal, and retired therefrom in 1863. He had for some years past been a close student of political affairs, and in the lastnamed year, with a mind well-stocked with the fruits of his observations, offered himself for the Victoria Division in the Legislative Council, and was elected therefor. He sat in that body till confederation, and his career there was characterised by exceeding soundness of judgment, by a wide and at the same time a minute knowledge of great public questions, especially those relating to trade and commerce. Previous to 1865, it was considered desirable, in the

He

with

the

line City

Lope

grief

part

cere

Eng-

mes

ris-

foreply So-

m a

verlder

a ha interests of Canadian commerce, to extend our foreign trade relations; and with this end in view, the government chose certain commissioners to proceed to the West Indies, Mexico and Brazil, with a view to opening trade relations between these countries and Canada. One of the members of that commission was the Hon. Thomas Ryan. Mr. Ryan was also chairman of the meeting of the united deputies from the British North American provinces, held in Detroit, on the memorable occasion when the eloquence of Joseph Howe electrified and astonished the people of that city. In May, 1867, he was called to the Senate by Royal proclamation, and has since sat in that body, which he adorns by the dignity and the judicial character of all his actions there. Senator Ryan is one of the Catholic Commissioners of education for the Province of Quebec, and he has always taken a prominent part in the cause of wholesome national instruction. He married in 1871, Duding Wilhelmina, second daughter of Charles N. F. De Montenach, grand-daughter of the late Baroness DeLongueil, and relict of the late Oliver Perrault De Linere, of Montreal. Senator Ryan has always been a steadfast Liberal-Conservative.

Morden, Wellington Jeffers, Hamilton, was born in the County of Wentworth, Ontario, on the 28th of September, 1837. His father was John D. Morden, and his mother's maiden name was McLaughlin. The grandfather of our subject was a U. E. loyalist, who came to Canada from Pensylvania. This useful and distinguished ancestor fought in the war of 1812, and tock part in the battle of Queenston Heights. In this engagement he had a brother killed. His son, the father of our subject, was born in the township of West Flamboro'. He took part in the rebellion of 1837, at the head of which was William Lyon Mackenzie, and was a captain of militia. He adopted the life of a farmer, as nearly everybody did in those days. He was a member of the first council of the township of East Flamboro', and this office he held with much public satisfaction for a number of years. Mr. and Mrs. Morden are still living, and they reside in the City of Hamilton. They some time since retired from farm life, but enjoy good health. Our subject received a common school education, and after leaving school, which he did when in his fifteenth year, he entered on the farm with his father. Here he remained for ten years, after which, in 1862, he removed to Hamilton. Here he entered the flour and feed business, on John street, where he remained for three years. afterwards engaged in the produce and commission business, in which undertaking he continued for seven years; he then removed to No. 7, Market square, where he has remained ever since. His principal trade is in grain and flour; and he is one of the most prominent dealers in Hamilton. In 1881 he was elected alderman for No.4 ward, City of Hamilton; and was re-elected for the years 1882, '83, '84 and '85. been chairman for the jail and court house for three years past; he is a stockholder in the Bank of Hamilton, and has been and is, prominently connected with several impor-Taking rest from tant public enterprises. oppressive business, he has recruited and benefited himself by travel through the United States, and all of our own dominion. He is a member of the Methodist church, and is trustee of Zion tabernacle, Hamilton, and likewise a member of the official board. In politics he is a Conservative, and is vicechairman of the Conservative Association of ward No. 4. He was married to Miss Eliza Jane Patten, daughter of Andrew Patten, of East Flamboro', County of Wentworth, one of the largest lumber and flour merchants in that neighbourhood. By this marriage he has one child.

Hickey, Daniel C., M.D.C.M., Kingston, Ontario, was born at Kingston, on January 23, 1830. He was the son of Edward Hickey, a native of Cork, Ireland, and Ellen his wife, who came from Kilkenny. Hickey was educated at the Royal Grammar school of his native city, under George Baxter, and graduated in the classical and commercial courses of the College of St. Hyacinth, Canada East, in 1845. On his return from college he entered upon a mercantile career, and in the year 1852 commenced business as a dry goods merchant in the City of Kingston, which he successfully conducted until 1861. During this period he crossed the Atlantic thirty-two times, visiting on business and pleasure Great Britain and the When in business, our subject Continent. displayed his patriotism by the active interest he exhibited in military matters. He was a member of Colonel Shaw's Rifle volunteer brigade, ranking as sergeant-major of that corps, and was also a lieutenant in the 1st battalion, Frontenac militia. Having accumulated some wealth, he gave up active business in 1861, and retaining his fondness for study, entered the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons, Queen's After pursuing the medical University.

course, for the purpose of extending his professional experience, he entered the service of the United States government, as surgeon of cavalry. During the war for the preservation of the union, he was identified in that capacity with the eighteenth, twentyfourth, and twenty-fifth army corps, and was present at the engagements at Suffolk, Va.; Gatesville and Winton Ferry, N. Carolina; Blackwater River, near Petersburg, Va.; Johnson's Farm, White Oak Swamp, and Deep Bottom, in front of Richmond, Va. He was at the capture and occupation of Richmond, and also at the cutting-out and destruction of the rebel ram Albermarle, on the 27th of October, 1864, on Albermarle Sound, North Carolina, under Lieutenant Cushing, U.S.N. Four months after the close of the war, the doctor was honourably discharged at Jefferson barracks. Sackett's Harbour, N.Y., August 15, 1865. On his discharge, Dr. Hickey settled in Newark, New Jersey, where he practised his profession until 1881. During his residence in Newark, our subject was elected alderman for the fourth ward of that city. He also became a member of the Newark Medical Society, of the Pharmaceutical Society of New Jersey, and of the Essex County Medical Society. He is also a life member of the Young Men's Catholic Association of Newark, which is the parent society of all the Y.M.C. societies on the continent. Dr. Hickey was one of the pioneer organizers of the Grand Army of the Republic, and for many years occupied the position of surgeon of Lincoln Post, No. 11, G.A.R., department of New Jersey. He has lived to see this organization, which is composed of veterans of the war of 1861-65, assume gigantic proportions, with ramifications extending into every state of the union. During his residence in Newark, he was connected with many enterprises outside his profession, notably the Diamond Band Saw Company, for sawing stone with diamonds; the Snow Silver Smelting Company, and several other public enterprises. Dr. Hickey, while here, identified himself with the Democratic party, and was an active worker in local, state, and general politics; and still retains, with all the fervour of the native born, his allegiance to the United States. Dr. Hickey finally returned to his native town in 1881, and retired from the active pursuit of his profession to look after his large landed interests there. Since his return to Kingston he has erected one of the handsomest residences in the city, facing the park, and known as "Park Villa"; and he was one

er 18 off ch sta D

Fr

hu

cai

bo

tre

an

ed

tio ho

Fre

lou

fifti

Hid ren

mai

ter

and

V.d

his e

is a

chui

letic

Sir

also

awo

St.

Dr.

usefi

adve

few (R

vencl

Prov

He

Mont

to th

years

and v

in 18

gentle

chara

ment.

his su

has be

the n

the Q

Queen

crimin

cution

sional

which

Chaple

He wa

of the prime movers and heaviest shareholders in the Kingston Hosiery Company. In 1869, he was appointed deputy quarantine officer for the port of New York, and had charge of the quarantine steamer Illinois, stationed in the lower bay of that port. During his occupation of that office, the French man-of-war D'Estres, with three hundred and ninety-seven officers and men. came under his care with yellow fever on For his successful professional board. treatment and polite attention to the officers and men of this frigate, he was recommended to the Imperial government for decora-The papers and records in the case, however, were unfortunately burned in the French navy department, during the troub-lous times of the Commune. During the lous times of the Commune. fifties, while in business in Kingston, Dr. Hickey represented for four years St. Lawrence ward in the municipal council. He married, May 1, 1854, Anastasia B., daughter of John Forestell, Waterford, Ireland, and niece of the Very Rev. Patrick Dollard, V.G., and who accompanied him through his entire American campaign. Our subject is a devout Roman catholic, that being the church of his fathers. He delights in athletic pursuits, and is an ardent disciple of Sir Isak Walton. As a yachtsman he is also somewhat noted, having built and owned some of the fastest craft sailing the Still in the prime of life. St. Lawrence. Dr. Hickey bids fair to have many years of usefulness and repose, after an active life of adventure such as has fallen to the lot of few Canadians.

pro-

vice

geon

eser-

d in

nty-

and

folk.

Car-

urg,

mp,

ond,

-ont

ber-

, on

 $_{
m hder}$

nths

was

cks,

865.

ew-

his

ence

der-

He

led-

letv

nty

lber

of

all

Dr.

s of

for

eon

et-

tic

ing

ith

Royal, Joseph, LL.D., M.P. for Provencher, Manitoba, was born at Repentigny, Province of Quebec, on the 7th May, 1837. He was educated at the Jesuit's college, Montreal. He studied law, and was called to the bar of Lower Canada in 1864. Some years afterwards he removed to Manitoba, and was called to the bar of that province in 1871. The career of this distinguished gentleman has been so successful, and characterized by so much briliant achievement, that we cannot do better than record his successes in order. As an advocate, he has been retained in many important cases, the most notable of which were those of the Queen vs. Ambroise Lepine, and the Queen vs. Naud, tried at the Manitoba criminal assizes, October, 1874, for the execution of Thomas Scott, under the provisional government of Louis Riel, and in which he was associated with Hon. J. A. Chapleau, Q.C., as a counsel for the defence. He was for some years one of the assistant

French translators for the Canadian As-He has been a prominent writer on the French-Canadian newspaper and periodical press for a lengthened period; edited the Montreal Minerve from 1857 until 1859, when he established L'Ordre, which he conducted until 1860; was one of the founders of La Revue Canadienne, 1864, to which he contributed many valuable and interesting papers. In 1867 he founded, with others, Le Nouveau Monde (Montreal), of which he became chief editor. In 1871, shortly after his removal to Manitoba, he established Le Metis, of which he still remains editor and proprietor. He is author of " Vie Politique de Sir Louis H. Lafontaine" (1864), and many other important contributions to French Canadian literature. He was one of the secretaries to the Montreal Centennial committee, and took an active part in organizing the Papal Zouaves who were sent to the assistance of the holy father, 1868. He was elected first vice-chancellor of the University of Manitoba, 1877, and reelected in 1878. He was appointed commissioner for the consolidation of the statutes of the province, in May, 1877, together with Chief Justice Wood. M. Royal was elected speaker for the first Legislative Assembly of Manitoba, 1871, an office he vacated in March, 1872, on being appointed a member of the executive council and provincial secretary of the province; and resigned with the government, 8th July, 1874. He was re-appointed to the cabinet, with the offices of provincial secretary and minister of public works, 3rd December, 1874; resigned office of public works, and accepted that of attorneygeneral, May, 1876, which he held until the resignation of the government, when he was offered and accepted the portfolio of minister of public works in the new administration, 1878. Early in 1878 a difference of opinion having arisen between the premier and M. Royal, the latter resigned. He was appointed a member of the executive council for the North-West territories, Was the first superintendent of education (appointed 1871) for Manitoba, and as such exerted himself in having the law explained and carried out in every locality; resigned March, 1872, on his appointment to office. He obtained the command of a cavalry troop, composed of natives, at the time of the Fenian raid, October, 1871, and was detailed on an important scouting expedition in the southwest of the province. He discharged the administrative duties of attorney-general from 3rd December, 1874, until 1878, and personally supervised the important legislation of 1875-76, introduced by the Davis-Royal government, which included the County Municipalities Act; the Administration of Justice Act; the Electoral Law; the Act respecting trial of Controverted Élections, and the Act for the abolition of the Legislative Council. He is also the author of the School Law, 1873; of the system of registration of deeds, and of the mode of establishing and collecting vital statistics. He has been a delegate to Ottawa on several occasions on the subject of "better terms," and the enlargement of the boundaries of Manitoba. In October, 1875, he was successful, with Mr. Davis, in securing the readjustment of the financial arrangements of Manitoba with the Dominion. He was first returned to the Legislative Assembly, Manitoba, for St. Francois Xavier West by acclamation, December, 1870, on the erection of Manitoba into a province of the Dominion; re-elected by acclamation in 1875, and again in 1878. He was elected for his present seat on the appointment of M. Dubuc, the sitting member, as puisne judge of the Court of Queen's Bench, Manitoba, December, 1879. He was re-elected by acclamation at the last general election. He is an advocate of extension, so as to make Manitoba a maritime province, with a port on Lake Superior and on the Hudson Bay. He is, above all, a firm believer in the great destiny of the far west, and will labour zealously towards its accomplish-As a lawyer, M. Royal is learned and skilful, and may be ranked as one of the very foremost members of the Canadian bar. As a politician there is, perhaps, not one more active and able to be found in the House of Commons, and we predict for him a place yet in the Dominion cabinet, for which position his abilities entitle him.

Bell-Smith, Frederic Marlett, of London, Ontario, who is so widely known in Canada as an artist and elocutionist, was born in London, England, on September 26th, 1846. His father, John Bell-Smith, was also an artist of note, and moved with his family to Canada in 1866. mother was a daughter of John Marlett Boddy, an officer in the admiralty. family, of whom F. M. Bell-Smith is the eldest, consisted of eight sons and four daughters, of whom five sons and three daughters still live. F. M. Bell-Smith was educated in England, receiving special instruction in drawing at South Kensington, at that time the headquarters and principle school of art in connection with the science and art department in England. On his arrival in this country he settled in Montreal. where he lived till 1871, when he moved to Hamilton, changing to Toronto in 1875, back to Hamilton in 1879, again to Toronto in 1881, and finally retracing his steps to London in 1882, where he now resides. While in Montreal he was a member of No. 5 company, Victoria rifles, with whom he was on active service in 1870. He is one of the original members of the Royal Canadian Academy, Ontario Society of Artists, and the old Society of Canadian Artists, which latter society was organized in Montreal in 1867, Mr. Bell-Smith, senior, being the first president; and it was the first society composed exclusively of artists ever formed in As a contributor to the Canadian Illustrated News, and as one of the largest exhibitors at the annual exhibition of the Royal Canadian Academy and Ontario Society of Artists, as well as a most popular elocutionist and cartoonist, he has established a wide-spread reputation as one of the most prominent artists in the country. As an educationalist he can claim considerable notice, for to his energetic efforts and patient labours must in some degree be attributed the very decided reform in the art studies of our schools and colleges. His work at Alma College, St. Thomas, where he has directed the art department for the past four and a half years, has borne good fruit in the thorough training of some young ladies, several of whom now hold responsible positions as teachers in similar institu-When the Educational department decided to grant certificates, authorizing the holders to teach drawing in the schools and colleges of the land, Mr. Bell-Smith set the example to the other teachers of drawing in the province, by submitting himself to the examination prescribed by the department; and passing successfully in all branches, had the honour to be the first to receive the higher grade certificate. He is a Methodist; and in years past has been an active member and officer. He is also identified with the A.F. & A.M. and the A.O.U.W. orders, in which he also holds office. In 1871 he married Annie Myra, daughter of S. W. Dyde, and niece of Colonel Dyde, A.D.C., K.C. M.G. There is issue two sons.

h it CA 18 th noth

sa kr

su

ca

co

no

ur

ho

lat

cu

wa

wa

hor

be

hin

he

of l

The

thi

gro

mu

labd

ada

arri

took

chos

nine

ente

pati

reso

part-

into

knov

Chri

firm.

estab

ing c

the d

cern

has a day a

Wher

Mr.

firm, Mave

tunes

dorsir

were

the po

the s

Christie, William, Manufacturer of Biscuits, etc.. Toronto, one of the most prominent men in the business circles of Canada, is the subject of this sketch. When a man, through persistent industry and upright methods, has won for himself a place higher than that occupied by the general run, the public become anxious to learn of his beginnings, and to know the history of his career. But only briefly is it allowed to us to deal with William Christie. He was born, we learn, in Huntly, Aberdeenshire, Scotland, on January 5th, 1829; and is a son of John Christie, of the same place. Mr. Christie, senior, was not blessed with wealth, but he enjoyed the respect of his fellows, and he had the same sterling qualities which it is wellknown are the inheritance of his son. Our subject did not receive an elaborate education, but he obtained considerable schooling. Like the sons of so many in the old country as well as in Canada, who have not means to bring up their families in luxury, young Christie was obliged to take any honest employment that offered. It is related that he was not above at one time occupying himself as a herd-laddie. But this was only a make-shift, and the young man was determined, through endeavour in an honest calling, to see if the world would not be made to yield him the living that it owed him. So casting about him as to what trade he would learn, it occurred to him that that of baker would not be the least profitable. Then, while acquiring this trade he used to think of the new country, Canada, rapidly growing; and was convinced that in a community devoid of a sufficiency of skilled labour there was a field for himself. To Canada, therefore, he came, in 1848; and on his arrival he promptly rolled up his sleeves and took employment in the calling that he had chosen for himself. He was now only in his nineteenth year, but he was hearty, full of enterprise, hope and ambition. He worked patiently in Toronto for a period, and then resolved to begin business upon his own part-responsibility. So in 1851 he entered into partnership with Mr. Brown, a wellknown business man; but the name of Mr. Christie did not appear in the title of the The business with which the new establishment concerned itself was the baking of biscuits and a general trade. From the day that the shutters of the new concern were opened up to this time, success has awaited upon the proprietors, and every day sees a further spread of the business. When Mr. Brown retired from the house, Mr. Christie took in Mr. Maver, and the firm, was known for a period as Christie & Mayer. In 1854 reverses came to the fortunes of Mr. Christie. He had been endorsing the paper of a friend, but evil days were in store; fire came and swept away the possessions of his friend, and after that the sheriff's figure was a familiar one for

treal,

ed to

1875,

ronto bs to

ides.

f No.

m he

ne of

dian

and

hich

al in

first

com-

d in dian

gest

the

Boci-

elo-

tab-

the

As able

pa-

ribart

His

ere the

ood

ung

on-

t11-

ent

the

nd the

in

he

ıt ;

es, he

it;

er

he

r-

е, С.

many years. Old friends had lost faith, but he found one man, Alex. Brown, who had confidence in his honesty and ability, notwithstanding that some wise and far-seeing ones shook their heads. Mr. Christie finds much satisfaction in looking back now upon this period of trial, for the successes that he has since achieved may well give him cause for self-congratulation. His business house is situate in the City of Toronto, and it would well repay the visitor to spend an hour in passing from one of the fine, bustling, airy, cleanly kept departments of the establishment to another. For the greater part our subject has been a devoted business man, attending to the general management, as well as the details of the wide-spread house, but he has been enabled, nevertheless, to give some of his attention to worthy and unselfish objects. He has been intimately and conspicuously connected with the Toronto Industrial Exhibition Association, and is also an active member of the council of the Board of Trade of the City of Toronto. To enlarge his knowledge and experience he has travelled through the greater part of the United States, and he has visited all the chief places in Canada. Most of those who come to us from Scotland, ask upon landing where the kirk is, and this did our subject too, upon his arrival. But in these later years he has refused rigidly to be bound by any ecclesiastical doctrine, and in religion, as in human and state polity, is satisfied with nothing that is narrow-seeking the broad and the liberal. It is hardly necessary in the light of these facts to tell our readers that in politics Mr. Christie is a Reformer; but his policy would be one of wise restraint, with the ultimate well-being of our country as his aim. Mr. Christie married on the 21st March, 1855, Miss J. McMullin, of York county, Ontario, and the fruits of this union has been four children, three daughters and a son. Mr. Christie is a gentleman of very few words, save when circumstances demand it, then you find yourself listening to a man who has thought deeply and observed closely. He has a tall, fine presence, and his hair is sprinkled with gray. No pen can touch a history of the business growth of Canada, and leave from the pages the name of William Christie.

Atkinson, Charles Richard, Chatham, Ont., was born in London, England, on May 4th, 1828. In his sixteenth year his father emigrated with his family to Cauda, and settled in Oxford, then a wilderness, and thus gained some experience of bush farming, but not being inclined to a backwoods life, he studied with a view to become a civil engineer, but relinquished that aim, and adopted the profession of law, under the tutelage of Hon. Walter Macrea, in Chatham, commencing his studies in 1852. He was called to the bar in 1859, since which time he has been practising constantly in the above-named town, and has been engaged in a large number of important suits. His business had so largely increased that, in 1880, he took in Mr. D. M. Christie as a partner. He was appoint-Though a consistent ed a Q.C. in 1885. Liberal-Conservative, his time has been too much occupied to leave much scope for engaging in the political arena. He stood for parliament in 1872, but was defeated by David Mills. He has seen Chatham emerge from a small place of 2,500 inhabitants, in 1852, to one of the dimensions, and with the appliances, of a city. Vanasse, Fabien Vertefeuille, M.P. for Yamaska, Montreal, was born at River David, in the parish of St. David, in the County of Yamaska, Province of Quebec, on the 6th of November, 1848. His father was François-Xavier Vanasse-Vertefeuille, and his mother Angelique Dupuis. His father was the pioneer of the parish of St. David, where he established himself in 1825. M. Vanasse-Vertefeuille is of French descent, his paternal and maternal ancestors having come from France in 1650, and taken up land in the vicinity of the bourgade of Three Rivers, now the flourishing City of Three, Rivers. M. Vanasse attended at first the parish school of St. David, and in his thirteenth year was sent to Nicolet college, where he completed his education in literature and science. At the completion of his studies he was admitted to the study of law, after a severe examination before the Montreal bar, on the 11th of January, 1871. He had the advantage of having made his cours de droit under the direction of M. (now Hon. Justice) Jetté, one of the most learned advocates at the Montreal bar. M. Vanasse was admitted, with distinction, to the Montreal bar on the 12th of January, 1875. On the 1st of May, 1875, he entered into a legal partnership as junior partner with Trudel & Taillon, of Montreal, and practised with that important firm for a period of four years. In 1879 he retired from the firm to enter the political sphere: and at the appointment of Honourable Justice Gill, in 1879, the Conservatives of the county of Yamaska offered him the nomination for the constituency, and he was elected on the 7th of July, 1879, by a majority of over 200 over his opponent, M. Felix Gouin, a trader of Pierreville, in the same county. At the general election, 1882, M. Vanasse was re-elected over his opponent, M. V. Gladu, of St. Francois-du-Sac, by more than 100 majority, in spite of the efforts and violence of his opponents. During the summer of 1884 M. Vanasse organized, in Montreal, La Compagnie d'imprimiere et de publication du Canada, with a capital of one hundred thousand dollars. He was elected and is still the president of that company. Soon after its organization the company acquired the property of the newspaper Le Monde for the price of $28,000, and M. Vanasse was chosen as the chief editor of that valuable and influential conservative journal. M. Vanasse married, on the 17th of January, 1877, Claire Elmire, daughter of Alexander Deseve, advocate, of Montreal, and of Marguerite Lenoir-Rolland. Madame Vanasse is the sister of the distinguished French-Canadian violiniste now residing in the city of Boston. Three children were born to this union-Marie Claire, the eldest, on the 19th December, 1878, and who died the same day; Marie-Joseph-Francois-Xavier Fabien, who was born on the 10th of May, 1881; and Marie-Madeleine-Marguerite-Angelique-Alexandrina-Claire, who was born on the 31st of December, 1883. M. Vanasse is a national Conservative, and he favours the national policy, the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway on Canadian soil from the Pacific to the Atlantic.

ar Co to te co m

fo

pr

gr It

pa Ai tle Gi

ca Tł

sh

Gi pa of

in th

tar pa be his

Gi

Ki

ass

an

his

br

th

po

act

en

he

in

nei

for

cia

and

En

Eli

of

thi

tho

his

the

yea wit

the

bor

His

lish

Gildersleeve, Charles F., ex. Mayor, Kingston, was born in Kingston, on the 17th of October, 1833, his parents being Henry and Sarah (Finkle) Gildersleeve. His father had come from Portland, Connecticut, in 1816, settling in Kingston; and was a shipbuilder, an owner of steamboats, and a very active and successful man of business. The maternal grandfather of Charles F. Gildersleeve was a United Empire loyalist. C. F. Gildersleeve was educated at Upper Canada College, Toronto, and studied law, first at Kingston, and afterwards at Toronto. In 1859 he was called to the bar, and he practised his profession for five years at Kingston. In 1864 he entered the steamboat business on Lake Ontario, and was the owner of the Norseman, which ran between Rochester and Port Hope, and of the Hastings, which plyed between Kingston and Belleville. He has been president of the Kingston and Pembroke Railway Company, and was for a period vice-president of the Canadian Navigation Company. He always took a great interest in promoting civic interests, and his zeal and achievements were recognized by his repeated election to the council board, and to the chair of chief magistrate in 1879. The Kingston and Pembroke Railway, already alluded to, in the formation of which Mr. Gildersleeve took a prominent part, has added in a large degree to the commercial progress of Kingston. It is the shortest route between the principal lumbering rivers of Ontario and the American market, and throws open for settlement a large agricultural area. Gildersleeve comes of a family of sturdy, capable and successful men of business. This family was especially conspicuous as shipbuilders, the sixth generation of the Gildersleeves having engaged in that occu-pation at Portland, Conn. When the father of ex-Mayor Gildersleeve went to Kingston in 1816 he assisted in building the Frontenac, the first steamboat launched on Lake Ontario. Soon afterwards he built for a company the steamboat Charlotte, he himself being the principal owner and manager, till his death in 1851. The eldest son, Overton Gildersleeve, was for many years mayor of Kingston. Upon the death of his father he assumed the management of the business and continued at the head of the same till his death, which occurred in 1864. His brother, Charles, the subject of this memoir, then became manager, and has held that position since, his undertakings being characterised by a wise mixture of prudence and enterprise. The steamboat interest, at the head of which is Charles Gildersleeve, is in all probability the dest on the continent. Mr. Gildersleeve is a staunch Reformer, and has held office in the local association of his party. He is a master Mason, and a staunch member of the Church of England. He married, in June, 1863, Mary Elizabeth, daughter of Charles L. Herchmer, of Belleville, Ontario. There is issue by this marriage two children.

ority

Felix

same , M.

hent,

by

the

Dur-

gan-

npri-

with

lars.

dent

niza-

erty

price

n as

oflu-

asse

877, De-

Mar-

asse

nch-

the

born

, on died

10th

Iar-

who 883.

and

ruc-

on

At-

yor,

the

eing

eve.

and

ats,

a of

of Em-

du-

ter-

1 to

for

red

and

ran

l of

ton

the

ny,

Hadley, Sylvester, Chatham, Ont. though an unostentatious gentleman, yet his name has been a household word in the town of Chatham for nearly forty years, and he has been honoured twice with the highest municipal office within the gift of his fellow citizens. He was born in the township of Pickering, in 1825. His father, Charles Hadley, was of English extraction, and his mother, Margaret Ann Young, claimed ancestry from the "land o' cakes." His father was a vessel owner on Lake Ontario, and built the Charles and Ann, and the Duke of York, at the mouth of the river Rouge. He was also at one time a captain of militia, and was at Chippewa when the Caroline was cut out and left to drift over the Falls of Niagara. Sylvester Hadley was for some time in general business, and built the bridge across the Rouge, east of Toronto, in 1847; afterwards assisted in building the Yonge St. Road through to the Holland Landing, finished in 1848, and was engaged on other public improvements. He went to Chatham from Toronto in 1848, and has been engaged there chiefly as a lumber merchant up to the present time. also been a builder and contractor, and rebuilt the river bridge over the Thames, which was burnt down in 1854. He ran a steamboat between Chatham and Montreal for three years, and is largely interested in the United Lumbermen, the Dolly Mordon, and the New Dominion. His extensive purchases of lumber are made on the shores of Lake Huron and the Georgian Bay, and sold chiefly in the county Kent, though partly in Essex and elsewhere. His planing mill and ample wharfage give every facility for carrying on his extensive business. In religion, Mr. Hadley is a staunch Methodist, and in politics, an equally staunch Reformer, being stoutly opposed to the national policy, and to all other monopolies. When he came to Chatham, in 1848, there were only two brick churches, two brick stores built, two in progress, and two brick dwelling-houses. Prices were fabulously low. The best pork ranged at $2.50 per cwt., eggs 5c. per dozen, butter 5c. per lb., cordwood 75c.—all for "store pay," There were no side-walks, and the street where his house now stands, and opposite the present Central school, were ponds or swamps, to cross which a plank was needful. Mr. Hadley was first elected to the town council of Chatham thirty-two years ago, and since then he has repeatedly filled the same position, and was also deputy reeve before the separation of the town from the county, a measure which he opposed, and still con-He is on principle antagonistic to demns. bonuses; and resisted the grant by the county council of $255,000 to the Erie and In 1884 and 1885, he Huron Railway. wielded the mayor's gavel, and as chief magistrate had the honour of receiving the governor-general in Chatham. His municipal policy included strict economy and the husbanding of the resources of the town. Among the improvements effected during his tenure of the mayoralty, was the construction of a very handsome and strong iron bridge across the Thames, to replace an old unsafe wooden structure, which was a disgrace to Chatham. He married Miss Fraser, who died, leaving five boys and five girls. In 1879, he married Miss Stephenson. He is hale and vigorous in mind and body, with a long career of usefulness before him. His good repute among all classes may be inferred from the cordial tribute paid to him at the closing session of the last council by those most strongly opposed to him in municipal general politics.

Brown, Richard, Toronto, was born at Newcastle-on-Tyne, England, on May 13th, 1834. His parents were Thomas and Ann Brown. His father and his grandfather were engaged in the bookselling, stationery, bookbinding, and printing business, in Newcastle. Richard Brown was educated principally in Newcastle, at the Royal Grammar school, established Queen Elizabeth's reign. At an early age Richard, in company with his parents and brothers and sisters, crossed the Atlantic, landing in New York in the spring of 1846. The family proceeded to Toronto, via the Erie canal and boat from Lewiston, as railways in those days were few and far between. This mode of travelling, though very slow, was delightful to the children, who were very sorry when they landed in Toronto, and the pleasant trip was over. Mr. Brown has been a member of the Methodist church for about thirty years, and as his grandfather joined this body in the time of Wesley, the family records show that the Browns are descended from the original stock of Methodists. Our subject has held various positions in the church, such as superintendent of the Sunday-school, trustee, leader, and steward; and is now connected with the Sherbourne street church. He married, in March 27th, 1861, Elizabeth, daughter of Dr. Slade Robinson, who came to this country in 1831, from England, after living for a time in Jamaica. He lived for a period at Niagara Falls. Mrs. Brown's mother was a Miss Gillespie, of London, England, who came to this country on a visit with her brother, Alexander, of the old-established firm of Gillespie, Moffatt & Co., Montreal. Mr. Brown's father, the late Thomas Brown, commenced business on King street, Toronto, in 1846, as a bookseller, stationer, and bookbinder. Richard Brown, when a mere lad (1848), was put at the same trade, with Thomas Maclear, who carried on business on Yonge street, and on the death of Mr. Scobie, in 1854. Mr. Maclear having bought out the business, Mr. Brown continued with him, and was altogether about eight years in the establishment. In the spring of 1856, he began business, in partnership with his brothers, Thomas and John, under the name of Brown Brothers, as stationers, account book manufacturers, bookbinders, &c., and by their combined business efforts soon got to a foremost position in the trade, and which they have ever since maintained. Their business is one of the largest and most complete in the Dominion, and it is known far and wide that whatever they undertake can be depended upon. Over twenty years ago when, owing to the war, American goods advanced to such high prices, they, to fill a much-needed requirement, commenced the publication of office and pocket diaries, which they have continued ever since, increasing in number every year, until now they amount to over 160 varieties. Subsequently the manufacture of wallets, satchels, and other leather goods was added to their other departments. Thomas, the eldest of the three brothers, died when comparatively a young man, in the year 1867. John, better known as Major Brown, died on July 7th, 1882. He was connected with the Queen's Own from its inception, rising from private in the ranks to major. Richard is now the only one of the three brothers left.

pa co th

80 W 6

th

wl

tri

me

te

cal

th

lat

ste ati the

eve

wa

wa.

cou

mis

pos

bef

woi

wor

and pos plo

onl

whi

be 1

ture

erec

pan fact

first

beer for

brot

Pen dale

John

com

oque

sand built

in t

from

their

mach

burg

mill.

share was

Thre

mills

Pape

Thon

Comp

Thomson, James, Newburgh, Onta-rio, was born in Edinburgh, Scotland, in the year 1831. His parents, both Scotch, were James and Rachel Thomson. James received a common school education. His parents not being in affluent circumstances, he was obliged to work for himself. very young, he herded cattle in the summer and went to school during the winter months. This he continued to do until he was about thirteen years of age. He then bound himself to Alex. Cowan & Sons, paper manufacturers, at a very low salary, to learn the business, He remained there until he was twenty-one, when, with a few shillings in his pocket, he bade his fond parents good-bye, and took passage for America, landing in New York after a long and rough voyage. He did not know what to do or where to go, and wished that he had remained at home. He was advised to try Trenton, New Jersey, where Providence opened up the way for him, and with a salary of seven dollars a week, he became contented and happy, and there remained for four years. It was while here that he sent home his first earnings, and brought his parents to this country. He took the worthy couple with him wherever he went, until they were no more. After a time Mr. Thomson severed his connections at Trenton, and went to Springville, Pa. It was while here that he married Elizabeth McCoy, with whom he has since found so much of life's true happiness. Up to this time he had merely been seeking the position of machinetender, but he now aspired higher, and became manager of the mills, and continued in this responsible position until he accumulated some means. He then went another step higher and leased a mill, in which operations he was achieving much success, when the American war broke out. He then lost everything that he possessed, and then it was that he first knew what real misfortune Having a family to provide for, he could not sit idly down and brood over the mischance, but he set out at once to find a position such as that which he had occupied before evil days came upon him. Some men would not have had the heart to "begin the world again"; but he was not of that class, and it was not long before he occupied the position of foreman for one of his old employers. He remained here for a short time only, and then embarked for Canada, in which country it was decreed that he should be long remembered among paper manufac-He went to the Windsor Mills, and erected there for the Canada Paper Company a pulp and paper mill, for the manufacture of pulp and paper from wood, the first experiment of the kind that had ever been made in Canada. He remained here for five years; then, in company with his brother, John Thomson, built the mill at Penobsquis, N.B., now called the Springdale mills, and owned by Mr. Nelson, of St. John. From this point Mr. Thomson, accompanied by his brother, went to Gananoque, a beautiful town opposite the Thousand Islands, on the St. Lawrence, and there built a large mill. He was engaged putting in the machinery when the walls cracked from the peak to the water's edge, owing to their being built on a slanting rock. The machinery was then re-shipped to Newburgh, where it was erected for the fourth On this occasion Mr. Thomson had a share in the enterprise beside, and the firm was known as Rookledge, Thomson & Co. Three years later (1873) were erected the mills at Kingsey Falls, for the Dominion Paper Company. In 1874 the Messrs. Thomson built for the Napanee Paper Company their splendid mills. In 1879

1854,

busi-

and

the

i, he

ı his

name

count

, and

ı got

and

ned.

and

it is

un-

enty

neri-

ices,

ent.

and

ıued

very

over

ıfac-

lea-

de-

hree

ung

own

882.

Own

e in

only

nta-

the

ere

re-

His

es.

nen

ım-

ter

atil

He

ns,

ry,

ere

his

for

ng

nat

he

to

ce

al-

n-

or

nt

they erected, entirely for their own use, the seventh and last mill, at a cost of over $60,000. These fine buildings are situated at Thomsonville. on the N., T. & G. Railway and Napanee river, eight miles north of Napanee. In 1884, John Thomson retired from the business through ill-health, although, comparatively speaking, a young man. His share was purchased by the subject of this sketch, and the firm now is known as that of James Thomson, who carries on a very large and successful business, and where orders for No. 3 print and book papers are filled with carefulness, neatness and promptness. Anyone requiring such will find it to their advantage to address James Thomson, Newburgh, the pioneer wood paper maker of Canada. Mr. Thomson is a Presbyterian, being of that religious persuasion that believes in looking up. He has held the office of elder for a number of years, and is very prominent in the church. He has not aspired to any public office, but has occupied a place in the council of the corporation of Newburgh, where he resides with his family. He has been offered higher positions, but would not accept the same, not wishing to be identified with such public affairs as would too much engross his attention. In the highest sense of the wordin so far as integrity and excellent business abilities are concerned-Mr. Thomson may well be designated a representative Canadian.

McKellar, Peter Duncan, Registrar of the County of Kent, Chatham, Ont., was born on the 2nd of November, 1839, in the township of Raleigh. He is a son of the Hon. Archibald McKellar, and Lucy, daughter of Colour Sergent McNab, of the 71st Regiment. Peter D. McKellar was educated at Upper Canada college; studied law in Toronto for three years; and took the LL. B. course in Toronto, except the final examination for which he did not read up, as he had been appointed registrar in the mean-Mr. McKellar was a full private in the Victoria Rifles, formed in Toronto under Captain Ord, at the time of the Trent excitement; and he held a commission as lieutenant in the Sedentary As we have seen, he is registrar of militia. the County of Kent, to which office he was appointed in July, 1862, by the Hon. John Sandfield Macdonald. He has interested himself in the furtherance of objects of wide public importance from time to time, and in this connection may be mentioned his exertions towards the promotion of the Erie and Huron railroad scheme.

McKellar has been a member of the order of Knights of Pythias since 1873; and he is now grand chancellor of Ontario. In religion he is, and always has been, a Presbyterian. He married on the 19th October, 1876, Louisa A., daughter of David Stegmann.

Gzowski. Col. Casimir Stanislaus. Aide-de-camp to Her Majesty Queen Victoria, was born on the 5th March, 1813, at St. Petersburg, the Russian capital, where his parents then were making a temporary sojourn. He is descended from an ancient Polish family which was ennobled in the sixteenth century, and which for more than two hundred years thereafter continued to exercise an influence upon national af-He is a son of Stanislaus, Count (Hrabia) Gzowski, who was an officer of the Ìmperial guard. C. S. Gzowski's childhood was spent in preparation for a military career. In his ninth year he entered the Military Engineering college at Kremenetz, in the province of Volhynia, and here remained until 1830, when he graduated as an engineer. He then received a commission, and passed into the army. The insurrection in Poland, of 1830, in which noble and serf, civilian and soldier, arose to overthrow the tyrannical rule of Constantine, has been blazoned through history. Throughout the whole of the fruitless attempt at freedom Casimir Stanislaus Gzowski played a conspicuous part. From the first he staked his lot with his co-patriots, and was present at the expulsion of Constantine from Warsaw, in November, 1830, and fought in most of the numerous conflicts of the time. He was several times wounded, and as often narrowly escaped capture. After the battle of Boremel, General Dwernecki's division, to which he was attached, retreated into Austrian territory, where the troops surrendered. The rank and file were permitted to depart, but the officers, to the number of about six hundred, were imprisoned at the several fortifications, where they languished for several months, after which they were exiled to the United States. When with his fellow exiles he landed in New York in 1833, he had no knowledge of the English language, and at Sandy Hook he heard the English tongue for the first time spoken by a harbour pilot. He was, we are informed on good authority, an excellent linguist, and had not merely a grammatical but a practical knowledge of the French, German and Italian languages. Better than all these, he was endowed with an iron constitution, which even the rigours of an Austrian prison had not been able to injure, and a strength of will which would not admit the possibility of failure. Some idea of his resolution may be formed from the fact, that when he found his want of knowledge of the English language prevented him from pursuing his engineering profession with advantage, he determined to study law, as a means of acquiring a mastery of the English tongue. After subsisting for some months in New York by giving lessons in French and German, he betook himself to Pittsfield, Massachusetts, where he entered the office of the late Parker L. Hall, an eminent lawyer of that town. The achievement of Mr. Gzowski in mastering the English language here was regarded as almost phenomenal. While pursuing his legal studies he supported himself by teaching modern languages, by drawing, and by fencing in two local academies. He studied Blackstone & Kent, the "lamp" from which he derived light to the meaning of the books, being a dictionary. We further are assured that his indomitable industry, his natural ability, his handsome manly presence, and his fine social qualities, all combined with his misfortunes to make him a marked man in Pittsfield society. After three years' study, in 1837, he passed his legal examination successfully, and was only prevented from admission to the bar in consequence of his not being a naturalized citizen of the United States. He then passed over to Pennsylvania, whither he had been attracted by the fame of the coal discoveries there; and having taken the oath of allegiance, was admitted to practice as an advocate in the Supreme court. Law, however, he soon discovered was not the occupation for which he felt he had most inclination: so in a little while we find him engaged as engineer in connection with canals and great public works. In 1841 he came over to Toronto, and was for the first time brought into contact with some of the leading public men in Canada. The project of deepening and widening the Welland Canal was now attracting much attention in Canada, and Sir Charles Bagot, who formed a very high opinion of the abilities and the character of Mr. Gzowski, sanctioned very cordially his appointment to an office in the depart ment of Public Works. Mr. Gzowski there upon bade adieu to his American friends and took up his abode in Canada. For the next six years he was engaged in this de partment, and his report of the works in connection with harbours, bridges and high ways occupies a considerable portion of

vi Vi Ca of

ln

of

of

hiı

Ra

M

aft

n

H. Le

vot

str

Co.

tio

Sar

wh

tor

gol

pri

wh:

ing

the

sup and

cess era

mil

caus

ceed

Can

offer

adm

reas

prop

deer

presi He a

mini

men

sent

vince

the a

don.

recog

ment

tion,

nel

volur

lieute

he

the

Maje

large folio volume. Every important provincial improvement came under his supervision, " and nearly every county in Upper Canada bears upon its surface the impress of his great industry and engineering skill." In 1848 he published a report on the mines of the Upper Canada Mining Company on Lake Huron, but the railway era had set in, and upon railway construction was the mind of Mr. Gzowski lent. He first connected himself with the St. Lawrence & Atlantic Railway Company; and of this enterprise Mr. Gzowski was made chief engineer. He afterwards formed a partnership with Mr. (now Sir) A. T. Galt, the late Hon. Luther H. Holton, and the Hon. (now Sir) David Lewis Macpherson, and for sereral years devoted himself exclusively to railway construction. In 1853 the firm of Gzowski & Co. obtained the contract for the construction of the line from Toronto westwardeto Sarnia. At the completion of this work, which terminated with the most satisfactory pecuniary results, the firm was dissolved, and the partnership thereafter comprised only Messrs. Gzowski & Macpherson, who still continued in large railway-building operations. In 1857 the firm established the Toronto rolling mills for the purpose of supplying railway companies with iron rails and other material. These mills were successfully operated for twelve years. era of steel made the continuance of the mills unnecessary. During the excitement caused by the Trent affair Mr. Gzowski proceeded to England, and laid before the War office a proposal respecting the defenses of Canada. The liberality of his own personal offer, and the brilliancy of the scheme were admitted by the government, but diplomatic reasons made it impossible to carry out the proposal. Thereafter Mr. Gzowski took a deep interest in our militia, and became president of the Toronto Rifle Association. He afterwards became president of the Dominion Rifle Association, and was instrumental in sending the first team of representative Canadian riflemen from this province to England in 1870, to take part in the annual military operations at Wimble-In November, 1872, government recognized Mr. Gzowski's zeal and achievements in connection with the Rifle Association, and appointed him lieutenant-colonel of the central division of Toronto volunteers. In May, 1872, he became a lieutenant-colonel on the staff; and in 1879 he was appointed aide-de-camp to Her Majesty Queen Victoria. The greatest of

le to

ould

Some

from

nt of

pre-

ering

ed to

stery

sting

ving

took

here

er L.

The

ering

d as

his

achl by died

hich

oks.

ured

ural

and

with

man

ars'

ina-

ated

e of

the

to

at-

ries

lle-

V0-

er,

ion

n;

eat

to

ght

blic 🛊

ng

ow

nd

gh

ter lly rt

re ds he

le

ir

head of which was the subject of this sketch, may be mentioned: the International bridge, spanning the Niagara river, which magnifi-cent work was performed by Messrs. Gzowski and Macpherson at a cost of $1,500,000. Sir Charles Hartley, in a work published in England, in 1875, bears testimony to the fact that "the chief credit in overcoming the extraordinary difficulties which beset the building of the piers of this bridge is due to Colonel Gzowski, upon whom all the practical operations devolved. Still higher testimony came from Thomas Elliot Harrison, president of the institute of civil engineers of Great Britain, who referred to the bridge as one of the most gigantic engineering works on the continent. In politics, Colonel Gzowski has always acred with the Conservative party; but he is broad in his views, and esteemed by men in both political parties. He has frequently been importuned to enter public life, but he has refused; and one cannot but regret the refusal, when we consider what a splendid figure he would be in the political spherethat he would achieve brilliant successes there, as he has done in the walk chosen for himself, there is no room at all to doubt. Colonel Gzowski still continues in partnership with Sir David Macpherson, but he enjoys more now than in former years the ease of domestic life. Colonel Gzowski is princely in his hospitality, and has entertained at his beautiful residence on Bathurst street most of the governors general of his time. He has acquired a handsome fortune, and in social circles has a position of great eminence. Altogether his character is a very splendid one, and it is above reproach of any kind. In manners, Colonel Gzowski is courteous and genial, and he has a very distinguished presence.

Karn, Dennis W., of the firm of D. W. Karn & Co., Organ and Piano Manufacturers, Woodstock, Ontario, was born on the 6th February, 1843, in North Oxford, Ontario. His parents were Peter and Priscilla Karn, his mother being a daughter of Albert Thornton, of the same county, and one of the first settlers in that portion of the province. Peter Karn was likewise born in Oxford, and during his life was a farmer in that county. He died in 1883, and there remained after him a family of four. Dennis W. attended the common schools till he reached his seventeenth year, and then entered the Woodstock college. spending about a year here, he returned to the farm, where he remained for another the many important public works, at the | two years with his father. Having married in 1865, he began farming on his own account, and settled in the County of Oxford. After trying his fortune on the farm for a few years, he sold the property and removed to Woodstock, where he entered into partnership with J. M. Miller. In 1870 this partnership was dissolved, and Mr. Karn bought out the full interest of his late partner, and continued the business himself until 1879, when he admitted a silent partner, and the name of the firm was changed to D. W. Karn & Co. Although Mr. Karn has been offered a position in the town council time after time, he has always refused, affirming that his business engaged all his attention. However, in 1885, at the earnest wishes of his friends, he consented to be nominated for municipal honours, and was elected for St. John's ward, Woodstock; and as a further proof of the confidence reposed in him, he was elected reeve for 1886. He was chairman of the water works committee, and did good service in procuring a water supply for the town; and has proven himself to be a municipal legislator of far above the ordinary ability. He is a member of the A.O.U.W., and in politics scorns to give a blind allegiance to any man or any party. Mr. Karn is a Baptist, and is treasurer, and also one of the deacons, of the Woodstock church, which has for its pastor the Rev. Thomas Trotter, B.A. practical Christian man himself, he has always given a generous support to Christian work, especially to the work of his own de-In 1881 he was elected treanomination. surer of the Woodstock college, under the Rev. Mr. Wolverton, M.A., and has held that position since, and is likewise a member of the executive board of the college. He married, in 1865, Elizabeth Hannah, eldest daughter of the late Ralph Featherston, of West Zorra, Oxford, and one of the most prominent agriculturists in that section of the province. By this marriage there have been three children.

Janes, Simeon Heman, M.A., Toronto, was born on February 5th, 1843, in the township of West Oxford, on the farm where his father, Heman Janes, a pioneer of the county, settled in the year 1800. His grandfather was one of the old U. E. loyalists. The family is of Huguenot origin, and its earliest representative in America landed at Plymouth Rock shortly after the arrival of the Mayflower in 1620, and settled in the State of Massachusetts. Mr. Janes' mother, of Irish parentage, was born in New York. He received his early education at the Ingersoll Grammar school, and entered Victoria University in 1861, from which institution he graduated B.A. in 1866, as the valedictorian of his class. He was admitted to the degree of M.A. in the same university in 1872. On February 13th, 1867, he married Maria Ann, eldest daughter of the late C. Quinlan, of Port Hope, who was for many years mayor of that town. Though it was intended that Mr. Janes should enter the legal profession, he had a strong predilection for commercial pursuits, and finally decided in their favour. During the year of his marriage he commenced business in the retail dry goods line on King street, Toronto, and continued in the same until 1871. From that year till 1879 he was engaged in the He then turned his wholesale dry goods. whole attention to real estate. He brought to bear on this line of business a wide experience of men, thorough business habits, and an indomitable energy, and rapidly came to the front as one of the foremost real estate men of Toronto. Mr. Janes is vice-president of the Whitby Ladies' College. His religious views are those of Methodism, and he is a Freemason. In politics he is progressive, and is a staunch member of the Liberal party. He is one of the most far-seeing, shrewd. and successful men of business in the community, and his operations are identified with the progress of the city which he has chosen as the field of his enterprise. In the midst of a very active business life, Mr. Janes has found time for the cultivation of his literary tastes. He is well posted on the current literature of the day, particularly in the scientific department, and has been an extensive contributor to the msgazines and other periodicals.

Parke, E. Jones, Q. C.. London, is the eldest son of the late Thomas Parke, Builder and Architect, a native of the county of Wicklow in Ireland, who settled in Toronto, then York, in 1820, and repre-sented the County of Middlesex in the two last parliaments of the Province of Upper Canada, and afterwards in the first parliament of the Province of Canada. He was surveyor-general in the Lafontaine-Baldwin administration, and was in politics an advanced Liberal advocating through the press and in parliament the introduction of responsible government, municipal institutions, public schools, free grants of land to actual settlers, and the secularization of the clergy reserves. He earnestly supported Lord Sydnenham's efforts for the union of Upper and Lower Canada, and was largely instrumental in obtaining the assent of the Upper Canada legislature to the measure.

He 186 at wa ma of mas Sir Car the tice was afte stoc Scat in I The Mr. has of W fessi parti dent. 12th ter o and ther's July, of Fe of Ge and e and g Moor who v 1834, Middl financ moter Londo and ha its inc the cor having tion to occasio County erable from th He is p don ; a Queen's dent of of Mide Parke, In polit

Barriste May, 18 land, an hood. He died at St. Catharines, 29th January, | 1864. His son, E. Jones Parke, was born at York on the 1st of November, 1823; and was educated at the London District Grammar School, under Francis H. Wright, M.A. of Trinity College Dublin, who was head-master. He studied law in the office of Sir John A. Macdonald and Sir Alexander Campbell, in Kingston, and for a year in the office of the Hon. (afterwards Mr. Justice) John Wilson, in London. Mr. Parke was called to the bar in 1847, and shortly afterwards commenced practice in Woodstock, in partnership with the late Thomas Scatcherd, Q.C., M.P., having also an office in London, where Mr. Scatcherd resided. The partnership was dissolved in 1852, and Mr. Parke returned to London. Mr. Parke has since that time lived in the township of Westminster, and has practised his profession in London. For a time he was in partnership with his late brother and student, Edward Deane Parke, who died on the 12th of July, 1868. Thomas Parke, barrister of Kingston, distinguished for high legal and literary attainments, died at his brother's house in Westminster, on the 31st of July, 1885. Mr. Parke married, on the 4th of February, 1869, Mary Helen, daughter of George Southwick. M.D., of St. Thomas, and ex-M.P., for the East Riding of Elgin, and great grand-daughter of the late Elias Moore, M.P., of the township of Yarmouth, who was the colleague of Thomas Parke in 1834, in the representation of the County of Middlesex. He is solicitor for several large financial institutions; was one of the promoters of, and obtained the charter for the London and Port Stanley Railway in 1854; and has been solicitor for the company since its incorporation. He is also solicitor for the corporation of the County of Middlesex, having succeeded Judge Elliot on his elevation to the bench. Mr. Parke was on two occasions appointed deputy judge of the County of Middlesex, and acted for considerable periods of time during the absence from the country of the late Judge Small. He is police magistrate for the City of London; and he received the appointment of Queen's counsel in 1885. He is vice-president of the Law Association of the County of Middlesex, and a partner in the firm of Parke, Mills & Purdom, barristers, London. In politics he is a Liberal.

he rian

gree On

aria

lan.

ears

ded

for

in

ar-

tail

and om

the

his

ght

ex-

its,

me

es-

es-

re-

g, in

> Seager, Charles, Goderich, Ontario, Barrister-at-law, was born on the 17th of May, 1844, at Wellington, Shropshire, England, and removed to Canada in his childhood. He is a son of Dr. Charles Seager, of Port Dover, Ontario, who was a son of the Rev. Charles Blick Seager, at one time a chaplain in Her Majesty's regular army, and a nephew of Sir Charles Blick, bart., of Worcester, England. His mother was Mary, daughter of Francis Rushton, of Coalbrookdale, Shropshire, England. Charles Seager was educated at Port Dover Grammar school, and afterwards studied law, and was called to the bar of Ontario, Hilary Term, 1867. He is a graduate of the Toronto Military school, and of the Volunteer Board of Examiners, London: and was a volunteer in the Queen's Own Rifles, Toronto, from 1863 to February, 1866. He was afterwards captain of the Sarnia Battery, V.A., and served with his command on the St. Clair frontier on two occasions during the Fenian troubles of 1866 and 1870. He resigned on his removal to Goderich, and was permitted to retire, retaining his rank of captain, in 1870. Captain Seager married, on the 19th August, 1869, Margaret, daughter of the Rev. James Padfield, M.A., of Burford, Ontario. He has confined himself almost exclusively to his profession, but has served in the Goderich town council. In politics he is a Liberal, and is now vice-president of the West Huron Reform Association. He has taken an active and prominent part in the various parliamentary elections, in South and West Huron since 1870; and some day he may be heard from in high parliamentary quarters. He is a member of the Church of England. Mr. Seager has an excellent professional reputation, and socially he is extremely popular.

Hamilton, Hon. John, Senator, Montreal, was born near the City of Quebec, in the year 1827. The Hamilton family is ancient and distinguished, the subject of this memoir being descended from Hugh Hamilton, a son of Sir James Hamilton, of Evandale, in the kingdom of Scotland, who settled in Ireland in 1616. (Fuller particulars of the family may be found in Burk's Landed Gentry.) John is the third son of the late Colonel George Hamilton, of Hawkesbury, Canada, who died in 1839, by Lucy Craigie, his wife. John Hamilton was educated in Montreal; and he married Rebecca L, daughter of the Rev. John Lewis, B.A., of Cork, Ireland. This lady died, and Mr. Hamilton married again Ellen Marion, daughter of William Wood, of Seal Lodge, Surrey, England. She died in January, 1872; and he married again on the 3rd of June, in the following year, Jennie, relict of the late John Major, and daughter of the late Charles Cambie, formerly of Castle-town, Tipperary, Ireland. Commercial pursuits were according to the tastes of Mr. Hamilton, and his abilities in this direction were soon made plain. He became a member of the long-established and extensive lumber firm of Hamilton Bros., and proprietor of the Hawkesbury mills, Ontario. In banking affairs he has taken a foremost part. He is a director of the Bank of Montreal, and has been president of the Merchants Bank of Canada. He began his political career by launching into municipal politics, and was first elected to the reeveship of Hawkesbury, which position he held for four years. He was then chosen held for four years. warden for the united counties of Prescott and Russell; and this office he filled with his usual ability and popularity, for three years. In 1860, he was elected to the Legislature of United Canada, for Inkerman, and retained that seat till the Union. Then, in recognition of his high character and fitness, he was called by Royal proclamation to the Senate, in which body he has since sat, displaying there the same solid abilities and wisdom that had marked his prosperous career. Senator Hamilton is a Conservative.

McMahon, John Arthur, Kingston, was born at the town of Dundas, in the County of Wentworth, Ontario, on the 4th of April, 1853. He is a son of Philip Mc-Mahon, who was a resident of Dundas for thirty-seven years, and for fourteen a member of the town council, and for six a reeve of the town. He died in Dundas, in February, 1876. J. A. McMahon is a nephew of Dr. McMahon, M.P.P., for North Wentworth, and of the late Judge McMahon, of Simcoe, and Hugh McMahon, Q.C., of He is a grandson of Hugh Mc-Toronto. Mahon, civil engineer, of County Cavan, Ireland, who came to Canada in 1829, and settled in Dundas. The widow of Hugh McMahon, senior, and grandmother of J. A. McMahon, is still living in Dundas. mother of our subject was Margaret, daughter of Thomas Kavanagh, of Castlecomber, Ireland, who emigrated to Canada in 1845, and died at Quebec. J. A. McMahon was educated at a private school; then in the separate school at Dundas, and afterwards at the St. Catharines Collegiate Institute. He entered the Law Society of Ontario in May, 1874, and remained for two and a half years in the law office of Bethune, Osler & Moss, at Toronto. He then spent one year in the office of the Hon. J. G. Currie, St. Catharines, and two years subsequently with Britton & Price, of King-

On being admitted to practice, he opened an office in Kingston, where he has been now in practice for six years. His industry, ability and popularity have already won for him a very excellent business. Mr. McMahon is a Reformer in politics; and he was secretary of the Kingston Reform Association for three years. He was a member of the convention which nominated He was a Alexander Gunn, M.P., in opposition to Sir John A. Macdonald. He has been a school trustee for four years, and president of the St. Vincent de Paul Society for two years. He has been pressed repeatedly to stand for aldermanic honours in the city, but has always declined. He is a Roman catholic in religion, as his parents have been. He married on the 7th of January, 1879, Mary, second daughter of Thomas Wilson, mayor of the town of Dundas, and proprietor of the Dundas Foundry.

n c wd ti d te o pM fo ch th O

m

J.

is

is

of

Al

on

Ja

en

he

bei

tice

In

tim

edu

 $_{
m the}$

thr

ent

to d

and

boy

ter :

he

whi

in t

Can

char cam

Sch

of cl

legia

at B

Coll

seve

work

end

hom

whic

mon

retur

work

 $_{
m him}$

year in th

cold

Mills, James, M.A., Guelph, President of the Guelph Agricultural College, was born on the 24th of November, 1840, near Bond Head, in the County of Simcoe, Ontario. He is a son of John Mills and Ann Stinson, both of whom were born on the shore of Loch Erne, near Enniskillen, in the County of Fermanagh, Ireland. His mother was a quiet, retiring woman, noted especially for her unobtrusive piety, and anxious to live at peace with all her neighbours, and to make the best of everything. She was of a strongly religious turn of mind. about nine years of age, John Mills settled with his father on a bush farm in South Simcoe, and assisted in the work of clearing and tilling that farm till he became a man. In the rebellion of 1837, he took up arms in defence of his country, and marched in a company of militia to meet the rebels at Montgomery's, on Yonge Street, in the County of York. After his marriage with Ann Stinson, who had been brought up on a neighbouring farm, he bought a hundred acres of bush land in Cartwright, near Lake Skugog, about twenty miles north of Bowmanville. His eldest son, James, assisted him in clearing this farm, and worked on it till the year before the Russian war, at which time they sold out and went back to South Simcoe. They then rented a farm of 200 acres, and by hard work and rigid economy, made enough money to purchase an excellent farm of 100 acres in the township of Tecumseth, a few miles south of Bond Head. There they lived till 1877, when Mr. Mills died, and the property was sold. John Mills was an excellent farmer, and gave all his sons a thorough training in the details of that calling. He was specially noted for soundness of judgment, mechanical skill, and the unusual thoroughness with which he did everything that he undertook. He possessed good average abilities, with untiring industry; was independent, outspoken, and of unswerving in-In youth he had been a member tegrity. of the Church of England, and a tory in politics. When he grew up, he became a Methodist in religion; and a moderate reformer in politics. He had a family of nine children, six boys and three girls, three of the sons received a university education. One of the boys, Rev. William Mills, is a minister in the Methodist church; another J. S. Mills, is a druggist in Brantford; John is a dentist in Brantford; G. G. Mills, B.A., is a lawyer in Winnipeg, being a member of the firm of Aikins, Culver and Hamilton,; Alexander, the youngest, a lawyer in Tor-Being the eldest of a large family, James Mills, had to work hard on the farm, engaging in all the details of farm work, till he was twenty years of age. His father being a first-class farmer, the son's apprenticeship was comprehensive and thorough. In fact, the demands of farm work on his time and energies were such that his early education was very much neglected. At the age of twenty he lost his right arm by a threshing machine, and was obliged then to enter a public school with very small boys. to commence the study of English grammar and other elementary branches, which most boys undertake at twelve or thirteen. ter one year's hard work in the public school, he went to the Bradford Grammar school. which was then one of the foremost schools in the country. The head master was John Campbell, M.A., who afterwards took charge of the Newburg academy; then became head master of the Napanee High School, and subsequently took the position of classical master in the Peterborough Collegiate Institute. After spending two years at Bradford, James Mills entered Victoria College, Cobourg. His college course was severe and very discouraging. From over work and lack of exercise, he fell ill at the end of the first year, and had to be taken home. After getting home he had a relapse, which confined him to bed for about three months. In 1865, after losing a year, he returned to college, and had only begun work, when he took a fever which confined him to bed for five weeks. In the third year of his course, he took the measles; and in the fourth, was prostrated with a severe cold which settled on his lungs, and came |

e, he

e has

His

e al-

ness.

tics;

form

aus au

ated

þ Sir

hool

the

arg

d for

has

holic

He

ary,

yor

the

lent

orn

ond

rio.

on,

e of

nty

was ally

to

and

of

ien

led

ath

ing

an.

in

at

he

lth

up

s, id

near bringing him to the grave. In spite of all this he struggled through, and by dint of hard work, in the face of great discouragements, won the Prince of Wales gold medal in 1868, for the highest standing in general proficiency, in a graduating class of nineteen, including the Rev. Dr. James Roy, of Cobourg. He stood higher in classics than in any other subject. While classics were his specialty, he has prepared students for matriculation, junior and senior in Toronto University, not only in classics, but in English, French and German, all of which languages he reads with ease. After graduation, he was offered the principalship of the Stanstead academy in the Eastern townships, and conducted the school to the satisfaction of all for a year; but he did not like the school system of the Province of Quebec. So, he came west again and accepted the position of classical master, under Dr. Roy, in the Cobourg Collegiate Institute. In this latter position he remained for three years; and gave the utmost satisfaction to inspectors, trustees, parents and students. His work in Cobourg, resulted in securing for him the unsolicited offer of the headmastership of Brantford High School at a salary of $250 a year more than they had ever paid before. The school was ranked fourth class by the inspectors, when he took charge; and in three years he succeeded in raising it to the rank of a Collegiate institute. Mr. Mills remained for six and ahalf years teaching classics, and discharging the duties of head master. During that time the school matriculated about seventy students in Toronto University, and twentyfive or thirty in Victoria, Queen's, and McGill's; and these took a number of scholarships in classics, mathematics and moderns. In Toronto, his school got a first classical scholarship at senior matriculation; a second classical scholarship at junior matriculation; a first mathematical at junior matriculation, etc.; also a first classical scholarship at McGill, two first classical at Queen's, and three first classical at Victoria. His scholars obtained a long list of first-class honours, and the school ranked next to Hamilton and St. Catharines Collegiate institutes, in the number passed at inter-mediate and teachers' examinations. There were 280 in the school when Mr. Mills left. Of these, 150 were boarders from places outside of the city. Shortly after he went to Brantford, he was appointed on the board of examiners, to examine candidates for second and third class teachers' certificates, and he remained a member of the board till he left the city. In 1879 he was offered the presidency of the Ontario Agricultural College, at Guelph, and after some deliberation, decided to accept the position. Since that time, he has had charge of this college, and has spoken in behalf of agricultural education before the provincial teachers' association, at county conventions, farmers' institutes, and elsewhere, urging especially the introduction of the first principles of agriculture into the rural public schools; the establishment of an Agricultural High School in each of the thirteen agricultural districts, to teach (1) agriculture and live stock; (2) the sciences relating to agriculture, and (3) the branches of an English education; and lastly, he has urged that a course of lectures be delivered annually to the teachers in training at the Normal schools, on agriculture, live stock, forestry, and the beautifying of country homes. His pen has been actively engaged in promoting the same cause. He was a member of the Council of the Agricultural and Arts Association for some time; and two years ago, at the request of the Council, prepared a course of reading and study in agriculture for farmers' sons, on the results of which certificates of agriculture are granted annually by the council. Hitherto, he has prepared the papers, and has assisted, as a member of the educational committee, in examining the answers and recommending candidates for certificates. Mr. Mills is president of the college and professor of English literature and political economy. But he is not responsible for the management of the college farm. In religion he has always been a Methodist, and in politics. a moderate Reformer. He was a member of the last general conference of the Methodist church, held in Hamilton; and of the union conference at Belleville, two years ago. He has never taken any prominent part in politics. Professor Mills married in July, 1869, Jessie, daughter of David Ross, of Cobourg, and has a family of six children. We may add, that notwithstanding some opposition, he has had the honour of organizing and carrying out the Farmers' Institutes, which have proved so popular in this The government was exceed-Province. ingly fortunate in getting at the head of an institution so important as this college, a man of the energy, the learning, and the practical experience of Professor Mills. He has been continuously making eloquent pleas by tongue and pen, on behalf of scientific farming; and his appeals have met with a fairly hearty response. He is right when he declares that the system in some of our schools draws away young men from agricultural pursuits, for the simple reason that certain studies which might be regard. ed as the foundations of agriculture and its contingent knowledge are studiously ignored in the schools. It is true that this brings the learner to look upon farming as unscientific drudgery, and as an occupation beneath the notice of learning, and of the schools. have only to say, in conclusion, that the views enunciated with such terseness, aptness and force by President Mills, on this point will have to prevail, otherwise our educational system will become chiefly remarkable for alluring our sons away from the tillage of the soil.

Easton, George, Brockville, Collector of Customs for the port of Brockville, Ontario, is the eldest son of Roderick Easton and Candace Baldwin, his wife, and was born at the then village of Brockville, on the 19th December, 1812. After serving as a clerk in commercial business for several years, he first engaged in general mercantile pursuits on his own account, at Brockville, on the 1st of April, 1835, under the firm name of Matthie Easton & Co., and so continued until 1884, when he joined with Crawford & Denaut in building that part of the St. Lawrence canal situate at Farran's Point, where he remained until 1846. He then removed to Montreal and re-entered mercantile business, and remained there until 1850. when he returned to Brockville. ployed himself similarly here until he was appointed Collector of Customs, in March. 1868, which office he now holds. Mr. Easton married, on the 5th October, 1840, Isabella Jane, eldest daughter of the late Hon. George Crawford. There is issue of this marriage three daughters and one son, all of whom are married, resident at St. Paul, Minn.; Winnipeg, Man.; Montreal, Que.; and Port Colborne, Ont. In religion Mr. Easton is a member of the Church of England. By commission he was appointed ensign in the 1st regiment of Leeds militia, Colonel Adiel Sherwood, under date of 17th January, 1836, taking rank from the 3rd April, 1835. He was appointed lieutenant in the Rifle company attached to the 1st Regiment, Leeds militia, the late Hon. George Sherwood, captain, under date of June 1st, 1838. This company did local duty for a short period during the troubles of 1837-38. Mr. Easton was appointed captain in the 1st regiment, Leeds militia, taking rank from the 19th December, 1845.

at M $_{
m the}$ recte dear ferst Tho Tide coun these Eliza mem field schol as th Wale in G Wolfe ancie whose subje Edwa shire, holy traini the fa assure he had his am Before him, h Canad in Oct nation

where

fied ha

tical a

proving to engi

ployme

winter

at that himself

ers. Bu

hope,

those w

withsta

severed

oured h

at that t

the cou

which w

cessful.

Stevens

Bank, w

branch

Mr. Tho

which w

Mor

Ban

Thomas, Francis Wolferstan, Montreal, General Manager of Molsons Bank, was born on the 9th January, 1834, at Moorwenstow, Cornwall, and is a son of the late Rev. Francis Wolferstan Thomas, rector of Parkham, North Devon, and rural dean. The father of the Rev. Francis Wolferston Thomas, was the Rev. Thomas Thomas, a fellow of Oxford and vicar of Tidenham, in Gloucestershire, in which county he was a leading magistrate. Both these clergymen (the elder of whom married Elizabeth Wolferstan, of Hartland, Devon, members of whose family still reside at Statfield Hall, Staffordshire), were in their day scholars and authors of repute. The family, as the name implies, is one of the oldest in Wales, and formerly possessed large estates in Glamorganshire. The Rev. Francis Wolferstan Thomas married a lady of the ancient and important family of Shearme, whose seat is Woodlands, Cornwall. The subject of this sketch was educated at King Edward VI. school, Sherborne, Dorsetshire, and as his parents desired him to take holy orders, he had a thorough classical But although his succession to training. the family living of Parkham would have assured him a good position in the church, he had no inclination for pastoral duties, his ambition being rather to enter the army. Before a commission could be procured for him, however, he had resolved to come to Canada, and engage in farming. Accordingly, in October, 1851, he left England, his destination being Rice Lake, in Upper Canada, where a person who professed to be qualified had undertaken to instruct him in prac-The promised lessons tical agriculture. proving worthless, he turned his attention to engineering, and secured temporary employment on the Grand Trunk Railway. As winter set in, the young adventurer (he was at that time only eighteen years old), found himself idle and adrift in a world of strangers. But youth is proverbially the season of hope, and Mr. Thomas was never one of those who give way to despondency. Not-withstanding more than one failure, he persevered in his quest, and fortune at last favoured him. The Bank of Upper Canada was at that time at the head of such institutions in the country, and with it he began a career which was destined to be exceptionally successful. After a year's service, Mr. James Stevenson, the present cashier of the Quebec Bank, who was then managing the Toronto branch of the Bank of Montreal, offered Mr. Thomas a position, the acceptance of which was justified by a series of promo-

me

om

son

rd-

its

red

the

ific

the

We

the

pt-

his

bur

re-

om

tor

nd

at th

rk

he

its

he

of

ed rd

tions culminating, in 1865, in his appointment to the managership of the London branch. How thoroughly he satisfied those who entrusted him with such high responsibilities, the financial and business circles of Western Ontario need not be told. Nor were his abilities and character held in less esteem by the officials of other establishments. In 1870, after he had been manager at London for five years, Mr. (now Sir) D. L. Macpherson, moved by the cordial recom-mendations of E. H. King, ex-president of the Bank of Montreal, placed the office of cashier of Molsons Bank at Mr. Thomas's disposal. Though naturally reluctant to sever his connection with an institution in which he had so long held a foremost position, and to which he was bound by ties, both of business and friendship, Mr. Thomas finally decided to accept Mr. Macpherson's offer. Since July, 1870, when he assumed the supervision of its affairs, the status of the Molsons Bank has steadily and materially improved. The capital has been augmented from one to two millions; and it has been found necessary to establish fifteen branches in Ontario, and another branch at Sorel, in the province of Quebec. A reserve of $675,000 has been provided, and the business of the bank has increased Nor is it only in his relations sevenfold. to the banking business that Mr. Thomas has found scope for his abilities. He was formerly a director of the Huron and Erie Savings and Loan Company of London, and is now a director of the Canada Life Assurance Company. He was D. D. G. M. of the London Masonic district. He is vicepresident of the MackayInstitution for Protestant Deaf-mutes; a member of the managing committee of of the Montreal General Hospital; a director of the Art Association of Montreal, and of the Mount Royal Cemetery Company. When the British Association for the Advancement of Science visited Montreal in 1884, he was appointed chairman of the finance committee. Mr. Thomas's entire career has been marked by rare business capacity, combined with strict integrity and enlightened patriotism. Though his engagement have not permitted him to enter what is called public life, he has in the faithful discharge of his duties as a citizen, found ample opportunity for serving his country and benefiting the community in which his lot was cast. He knows how to be philanthrophic without ostentation. A true son of the Church of England, his hand is never closed when she needs his help, I though at the same time he does not refuse his aid to any meritorious object, because its promoters differ from him in creed. Mr. Thomas married the third daughter of the Hon. George Jarvis Goodhue, one of the senators appointed by the Imperial government, and a member of a notable Massachusetts family, of that Salem, which Hawthorne has immortalized. Mrs. Goodhue was a daughter of Major Matthews, R.A., some time aide-de-camp to the Duke of Richmond, that governor-general, whose tragic fate has cast a shadow over the pages of Canadian history. After his retirement from the army, Major Matthews settled at Lobo, in Middlesex, Ontario, which county he represented in parliament. Another of his daughters was married to the late Honourable James Sullivan, attorney-general, and afterwards justice of the Court of Queen's Bench of Upper Canada.

Meredith, William Ralph, LL.B., Q.C., M.PP., for the City of London, Ontario, and leader of the opposition in the Ontario Assembly, was born, in the township of Westminster, County of Middlesex, on the 31st March, 1840. His father was John Cooke Meredith, who was born at Dublin, Ireland, a graduate of Trinity College, and clerk of the Division Court for the County of Middlesex. John C. Meredith married Sarah Pegler, who became mother of the subject of this memoir. William Ralph Meredith was educated at the London Grammar school, and at the University of Toronto. He graduated from the law department of the latter institution, and was called to the bar in Trinity term, 1861. He immediately opened a law office in London, and in a short time had established a remunerative practice. His natural gifts were considerably above the average, he had agreeable and attractive manners, and soon became known as a popular lawyer. His knowledge of common law is extensive and sound, and his assistance in consultation is always sought with great confidence. Among those qualified to judge, Mr. Meredith is regarded as now the leading Chancery lawyer in western Ontario. He is solicitor for the City of London. He was elected a bencher of the Law Society of Ontario in 1871, and created a Q.C. in 1876. In 1872 he was elected for London to the Ontario Legislature, and has been returned at every general election since. In politics he is an unflinching Liberal-Conservative, by which, in his case, we mean that as far as comes within his sphere, he supports the policy of Sir John A. Macdonald and his followers, giving his approbation to such acts of legislation as the national policy, and the awarding of the Canadian Pacific Railway contract to Mr. George Stephen's syndicate. In the local house he leads the opposition against the Hon. Oliver Mowat. He is a gentleman whose private and public character is above any reproach; and his abilities in the political sphere are not less marked than among his prof. ssional He has long and energetically advocated compulsory voting, holding that the vote is a privilege accorded to a person in the state, for the very reason that he shall exercise that privilege. He belongs to the communion of the Church of England; and is a member of the senate of the University of Toronto, which conferred upon him his LL.B. Mr. Meredith married on June 26th, 1862, Mary, daughter of Marcus Holmes, of London, Ontario. By this union there has been four children, one of whom died in infancy. W. V. Meredith, the popular and widely respected inspector of the Bank of Montreal, is a brother of W. R. Meredith.

Sı

in ba th

se

of

Sł

 \mathbf{at}

tw

Oc

he

acc Co

cee

ma

da

Re

en

ris

Du

is d

Nic

cen

Μo

olu

Cal

Jar

life

stat

mo

she

rece

sch

ple

sess

mai

nin

serv

the

firm

Can

mon

with

part

ed

& C

one

plyi

Dur

seve

ning

the

dar

occa

retai

Bell, Archibald, Chatham, Judge of the County Court of the County of Kent, was born at Toronto, on the 16th of November, 1840. He was the third son of Archibald and Agnes Bell, natives of Paisley, Scotland, who emigrated to Canada in 1832, and first settled at New Glasgow, near Montreal. In 1838 they moved to Toronto, and Mr. Bell carried on business there as a builder and contractor until 1845. He then moved with his young family to the township of Lobo, in the County of Middlesex, purchasing and settling upon one hundred acres of land. That section was then an almost unbroken forest, and there the subject of this sketch became familiar with almost every phase of the early settler's life. was present, a lad of five or six, when the settlers met and erected in the midst of the forest a crude log-building for a school In this building he received the most of his school education. His first teacher, Mr. Donald McCrae, carried on together during school hours the occupations of school-teaching and basket-making. He continued attending this country school during the winters, and such parts of the rest of the year as he could be spared from the farm, until 1857, when he obtained a firstclass certificate for teaching school. He taught a country school for the next three years, and then, after an eight months course at the London Grammar school, entered the Law Society as a student at law, and was articled to the late Justice John r, and Rail-Wilson. On Mr. Wiison's elevation to the Superior Court bench in 1863, Mr. Bell rehen's sumed teaching for three years, reading law leads He was called to the in his spare hours. liver bar in Michaelmas term, 1866, and was at ivate the head of the class of that term. He then ach: served an additional year in the law offices e are of Donald Guthrie, of Guelph, and James ional Shanly, of London, He was admitted as an cally attorney and solicitor in May, 1868, and for that two years practised law in Strathroy. In rson October, 1870, he moved to Chatham where it he he now lives. After eight years of sucongs cessful practice there, he was offered and accepted the appointment of judge of the County Court of the County of Kent, succeeding the late Judge Wells. Mr. Bell Engthe rred married, on May 25, 1874, Elizabeth, eldest rried daughter of Malcolm Cameron, of Lobo. of: By Politically, Judge Bell has always been a one Reformer; and in religion he is an adherllith,

ctor

r of

e of

ent,

em-

chi-

ley, 832,

lear

nto,

as a

hen

wn-

ex,

red

al-

ect ost

Hе

the

the

ool

rst

tons He ent of the Presbyterian church. Farlinger, Capt. Alexander, Morrisburgh, was born on June 1st, 1824, in Dundee, County Huntingdon, Quebec, and is of U. E. loyalist stock. His grandfather, Nicholas Farlinger, though of German descent, left his home in the valley of the Mohawk, New York, at the time of the revolutionary war and settled at Cornwall. Captain Alexander Farlinger's father was James, the son of Nicholas, who in early life settled in Dundee. Here, as above stated, our subject first saw the light. His mother's maiden name was Gardner, and she was of Scottish birth. Mr. Farlinger received his early education at the district school of his native place, and this he supplemented by private study until he possessed a good English education. He remained on the farm until he was nearly nineteen years of age, when he entered the service of Masson & Farlinger, of Montreal, the latter gentleman being his uncle. This firm was amongst the earliest forwarders in Canada, and with the exception of three months spent teaching school, he continued with it about two years and a half, when the partnership was dissolved, and he then entered the joint service of Macpherson, Crane & Co. and Hooker & Holton, as a captain of one of the Royal mail line of steamers, then plying between Kingston and Montreal. During his command he accomplished, on several occasions, the difficult feat of running the Long Sault rapids at all hours of the night; passing over the Coteau, Cedar and Cascade rapids at night, and on one occasion, the Lachine rapids, and always retaining on board the same pilot. These feats have never since been accomplished. and when attained by Capt. Farlinger, were done with perfect safety, and never in the course of his career as a commander had he an accident to vessel or cargo. After a successful career of seven years in the above service, Captain Farlinger purchased the Frazer dock and property at Prescott. where he commenced business as forwarder, wharfinger and general merchant. In the year 1954 he removed to Morrisburgh. where he has since continued to reside. His earlier career in Morrisburg was similiar to that pursued in Prescott, where he accumulated considerable wealth. His wife, whom he married on June 1st, 1854, on his 30th birthday, was the daughter of the late Capt. William Kyle of Morrisburg. She owned a large amount of real estate, and the captain thenceforth devoted himself to its management, together with that of his own property; and from that time has continued to deal extensively in town, village and farming lands. This interest reached such large proportions that he gave up all other business in 1865, with the exception of purchasing produce, which he continues to do to this day. In 1880 Capt. Farlinger found himself the owner of about 19,000 acres of improved farming lands in the different counties of eastern Ontario. Long ago he he established a system of farm tenantry, granting leases for a term of years, and he has now over one hundred tenants, and so satisfactory has this system been to all parties concerned, that many of his tenants have occupied the farms for twenty-five years, and others, through Mrs. Farlinger, for nearly forty years. The homestead farm of 280 acres, in the village of Morrisburg, he had surveyed and laid out in town lots, with streets of 70 feet wide. There is a water power of 300 horse-power in front of his property at the foot of the Rapid du Plat. Mr. Farlinger's idea was to invest the means at his command in property of this nature, instead of bank and other stocks, for he feels that these he can control, while the other securities mentioned are at the mercy of directors, managers, etc. The wisdom of this policy has been successfully demonstrated. The only difficulty incidental to the development of his plans, and to their perfect success, was about the years 1876, 1877 and 1878. The commercial panic of 1874, in its after effects, depreciated the value for some time of farm property, and taxes accumulating, compelled him to dispose of about 3,000 acres, leaving him and his wife, however, owners of

16,000 acres of farm property, besides village and town real estate. Farlinger block of Morrisburgh is a monument to the enterprise and wealth of Capt. Farlinger, occupying a commanding site near the business centre: his offices and stores taking up one-half of the building, the Morrisburgh branch of the Molson Bank occupying the remainder. This branch bank Captain Farlinger had established here. Our subject has already taken an active interest in railway enterprises. In 1865 he projected the scheme now known as the Ottawa, Waddington and New York Railway and Bridge Company, which obtained its charter at the first meeting of the provisional directorate, held in Ottawa, 1882. He has always held that it would be possible to breakfast in Ottawa and dine in New York. In a letter to the Montreal Witness, bearing date March 30th, 1881, he projected the scheme of a road from Montreal to Smith's Falls, which proposal has been adopted almost in its entirety by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company. In military matters Captain Farlinger has always taken an active interest. As a boy he was a participant in the rebellion of 1837; and at the time of the Trent affair he was commissioned by the government to raise a company of rifles for service, and in three days he had a full complement of men enrolled. Captain Farlinger takes a special pride in the breeding of superior stock; his reputation in that respect extending beyond the province. He competed for many years, successfully, in New York state, and at the Dominion Fair held at Ottawa in 1879. He received the highest premium for a pair of crossed matched roadsters, the prize in this case being the Dominion gold medal, which the captain holds in special regard by reason of its being presented to him by the Princess Louise. In the year 1854 he was appointed a justice of the peace. His extensive private business has prevented him from taking an active part in public affairs, although he occupied the reeve's chair of the township of Williamsburg in 1877. In politics he is a pronounced Conservative, and wields naturally much local influence, being as he himself describes it, a thick and thin supporter of Sir John A. Macdonald. He, however, has never tried to influence his tenants, simply as tenants. He has been frequently urged to stand for parliament, but has steadily refused to do so. For this determination he has been sometimes censured by his party. On its inception, Captain Farlinger became president of the Dundas County Agricultural Society, which office he held for some years. After it became firmly established, he however retired from the presidency, though still retaining an active interest in its affairs. He has repeatedly urged upon the people of the village the benefit to be derived by a liberal policy towards manufacturing interests, and has often himself promised free water power, but the residents do not seem to have supported his action as liberally as they should have done. During a visit of Sir John A. Macdonald to the residence of the captain. in 1877, the latter suggested to the "Chief" the advisability of his adopting the policy of protection. The matter was thoroughly discussed between them, Captain Farlinger holding that since the prosperity of the country lay in our agricultural and manufacturing interests, it was desirable to protect and encourage these industries; and as a result, at the Conservative pic-nic, held at Winchester Springs, to which the two drove together, Sir John A. Macdonald, for the first time, declared himself on the subject of what is now known to history as the national policy. In religion our subject is a Presbyterian, and favoured the policy of church union. Captain Farlinger has a family of four boys and five girls.

a li god st ic or vo ca off pa scl

an

 $\mathbf{B}_{\mathbf{d}}$

the

an

agı

try

An

gri

wh

gin

and

mai

its

 \mathbf{Wr}

the

rou

and

ern

Red

ty f

con

Wri

cial

ed t

Esse

cont (188

in th

tics,

party

to th

been

fancy

Sam

Milit

Mr.

devel and b

addeo

quali

ity w

his pe

he

Wright, Thomas Henry, Sandwich, Ontario, Treasurer of Essex county, was born at Colchester, in the same county, on the 19th July, 1816. His father, Henry Wright, was, we learn, a native of Pennsylvania, born in 1786, and was the third son in a family of eight children He came with his father's family by land route to Detroit in 1796, and crossed thence into Canada. There being no roads or settlements for most of the distance at that time. the goods and persons of the family were carried on the backs of pack horses. The family is of ancient origin. The paternal grandfather of Henry Wright was a native of Kent county, England; and his paternal grandmother, though a native of Pennsylvania, was of German descent, from a family named Klingersmith. Thomas H. Wright was educated in Colchester, Ontario, and at the High School in Sandwich. His course of instruction included the English branches, mathematics, and those studies which were calculated to best qualify him for the work of land surveyor and civil engineer. One of his first duties on leaving school was to accompany Colonel Johnson in a preliminary survey of the route for the Southern Railroad, from Fort Erie to Sandwich, which survey took place in 1836. He had been accustomed to work on the farm in summer, and to attend school in winter; and this life, as in other like cases, had not only begotten habits of industry, but had served to develop the bent of his taste, which was strongly towards mathematical and mechanical pursuits. After his first trial with Colonel Johnson, Mr. Wright was employed in surveys under Captain Wilkinson, of Sandwich, aud continued in the work until the rebellion broke out in 1837. Mr. Wright volunteered as third officer in a troop of cavalry, under Captain Wilkinson as first officer, in the work of putting down the rebellion and repelling the invaders. participated in the struggle in which the schooner Ann was taken, at Amherstburg, and in the driving of the rebels from Bois Blanc Island. He returned to the farm in Colchester in the fall of 1842, and in 1846 he combined the pursuits of agriculture with the management of a country store. He then removed his goods to Amherstburg, where he erected a steam grist mill, which he operated until 1853, when he sold out. But his services as engineer and surveyor were still in requisition, and up to the year 1859, they were commanded by the Great Western Railway and its branches, or the Southern Railway. Mr. Wright then set out on an expedition upon the steamer Plough Boy, to open a new route on the north shore of lakes Huron and Superior, in connection with the Northern Railway, carrying the first mails sent to Red River, now Manitoba. With a capacity for civil service, and commanding the confidence of all classes of citizens, Mr. Wright has seldom been found out of official position. In 1839 and 1841, he discharged the duties of the commissariat. In 1862 he was appointed county treasurer for Essex county, and he has held the office continually from that time to the present, (1886). Mr. Wright has held a membership in the Masonic order since 1845. In politics, he belongs to the Liberal-Conservative party. In religion, he is warmly attached to the Protestant Episcopal church, having been a member of that communion from infancy. He married, in 1863, Euphemia Sampson, daughter of Thomas Bell, of the Military Engineer department, Toronto. Mr. Wright is tall in figure, and has a well developed, muscular frame. He is of a mild and benignant cast of countenance, which, added to a pleasing address and fine social qualities, greatly contributes to his popularity with all classes. No one ever questions his personal integrity, or his fidelity in the ice he firmly

active

tedly

e the

policy

has

wer.

sup-

ould

n A.

tain.

nief "

olicy

ighly

nger

the

anu-

pro-

d as

held

two

ald.

the

y as ject

licy

as a

ich.

was

on

nrv

syl-son

me

to

nto

tle-

ne,

ere

'he

hal

hal yl-

m-

at

se es, re rk of c- yl-h

the

discharge of the duties with which he is entrusted. He represents a class of citizens, all too few in number, and who are therefore the more deserving of honourable mention and enduring record—the class distinguished by honour unsullied, and a true

Toms, Isaac Francis, Senior Judge of the County Court of the County of Huron, Goderich, Ont., was born in February, 1840, at Charlotteville, Norfolk county. His father was Albert Toms, and the family came from Devonshire, England. His maternal grandfather, Robert Henderson, a native of Aberdeenshire, Scotland, and a U. E. Loyalist, settled on the shores of Lake Erie, towards the end of the last cen-His mother was Mary, daughter of Aquila M. and Margaret Walsh. His maternal grandfather, Thomas Walsh, was an officer in the British army, and settled in the province of Maryland. He was a U. E. Loyalist, and removed to Upper Canada in 1798, settling at Chippawa. He afterwards removed to Charlotteville, and was the first registrar of the London district. Judge Toms' grandmother, Margaret Walsh, was a daughter of Duncan McCall, a U. E. loyalist, one of the M.P.P's., for Norfolk county, and he died at York during a session of parliament. His father, Donald McCall, was an Argyleshire Highlander, who was at the taking of Quebec in 1759, and also accompanied Major Rogers on that officer's trip from Quebec to Detroit. Our subject was educated at public and private schools; studied law at Simcoe and Toronto, and removed to Goderich in 1860, where he commenced practising law in the following year. In June, 1866, he was appointed deputy judge of the County Court of the United Counties of Huron and Bruce, but resigned in August, 1867. In December, 1872, he was appointed junior judge of the County Court of Huron. In February, 1879, he was appointed surrogate judge of the Maritime Court of Ontario; in March, 1881, he became local judge of the High Court of Justice for the County of Huron; in December, 1882, senior judge of the County Court of the County of Huron; and in October, 1885, he was appointed revising officer under the Electoral Franchise Act, for South Huron. Judge Toms was one of the first shareholders in the company which discovered salt and put down and worked the first salt well at Goderich. He is a member and P. M. of Maitland lodge, No. 33 Goderich, A. F. & A. M.; a member and P. Z. of Huron Chapter No. 30, Goderich; a member of Tecumseh Chapter, No. 24, Stratford, and honorary member of Havelock Chapter, No. 63, Kincardine, Royal Arch Masons; and a member and Past Preceptor of St. Elmo Preceptory Knights Templars, Goderich. He was district depnty Grand Master for the Huron District from 1870 to 1872, and grand superintendent of the same district from 1872 to 1876, and from 1878 to 1882. He is likewise a member of Toronto Lodge of Perfection, Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite; is a member and P.G. and P.C.P. of Huron lodge, No. 62, and Huron encampment, No. 28, Independent Order of Oddfellows. Previous to 1872 he was an active member of the Liberal-Conservative party, and was president of the Liberal-Conservative Association of South Huron, and subsequently of Centre Huron. Judge Toms married in August, 1873, Georgina Charlotte, only surviving child of John George Rosenstein, M.D. Dr. Rosenstein was a Prussian, a distinguished linguist, and one of the first to introduce homoeopathy into America. He practised in St. Louis, in 1840, and removed to Montreal, where he married Charlotte Johanna, only child of John G. and Sibella Medinger Albeck, early German settlers of that city. He afterwards practised in London, England, where he edited several standard works upon homoeopathy. He returned to Montreal, and died there in 1859. Judge Toms has had two children. Sybil Margaret, born July, 1875, and George Albert Isaac, born April, 1878, who died in infancy. We may add, that when practising, Mr. Toms directed his attention principally to Chancery, and had a large practice at the Chancery bar.

Herring, John, Napanee, was born on February 17th, 1818, at Denmark, Lewis county, State of New York, and is a son of William Herring, of the County of Devon, England, who emigrated to the United States in 1810. V. illiam Herring married Cynthia Buck, of Massachusetts, in 1814, after which he settled in Denmark, N. Y., where he engaged in brewing. This occupation he followed until 1828, when he purchased a farm near Gouveneur, N.Y., which he cultivated until his death in 1867. The subject of this sketch received a good common school education in the vicinity of the family homestead, and at the age of eighteen apprenticed himself to the building business, at which he worked during the summer, teaching school during the winter in the vicinity of his father's home. In 1841, hearing of a demand for builders in Canada, he came over to Kingston, and erected a residence for the late Captain Gildersleeve, after which he removed to Napanee and engaged in the foundry business, which was then in its infancy. He manufactured the first stoves ever cast in these counties. In October, 1842, he returned to Gouveneur for a visit to his parents and relatives, and married at Brownville, Pamelia Fowler, a young lady whose acquaintance he made while teaching school in Watertown. He returned to Napanee within a few days, where he has since continuously resided. His children were eleven in number, five of whom only arrived at maturity, viz. :-Adelaide, born in 1843, married in 1860 to Mark T. Rogers, one of the leading merchants of Napanee; George Hiram, who married Adeline Elizabeth Aylesworth in 1869, and who died in January, 1885, leaving a widow and five children. Helen P., Orlin L., and James E. are the remaining children; the latter of whom was married in September, 1882, to Nellie A., daughter of Dr. Cook, of Napanee. Mr. Herring was elected to the town council in 1860, and served in various capacities there for about twenty-five years, the last seven or eight of which he held the office of reeve of the town, not being able to give the time to the duties of mayor, an office for which he was several times solicited to offer himself. Mr. Herring added various enterprises to his foundry business, among others those of brickmaking, lumbering, and potash manufacturing. But in 1857 be turned his attention more directly to the manufacture of reapers and mowers, and made the first ever handled in his county, on what was known as the Buckeye pattern, several of which are still in use, and which are doing as good work as any, after a quarter of a century's use, although not quite as light as those of more recent pattern. In 1864 he built the West Ward Academy, after which he sold out the brickmaking business, his rapidly increasing reaper trade demanding his undivided attention. In 1872, a joint stock company was formed for the manufacture of paper at a water power on the Napanee river, about four miles from the town. Mr. Herring was one of the principal promoters and stockholders, owning about half the stock, his credit enabling the company to pull through the hard times experienced during the first five or six years of their existence. In 1876, a company was formed for lighting the town with gas from petroleum, but owing to lack of capital, the company went into liquida-

cł

se

a

be

m

ca

Cal

the

on

ou

ere

the

 $\mathbf{D}_{\mathbf{0}}$

ma

dea

con

his

obli

mai

out

in u

 $_{
m the}$

sion

mad

in (

oper

ness

but

ledge ceed

knov work

Herr

 \mathbf{the}

with

ary,

starte

ent c

is loc

town,

publid

first

merit.

worki

revers

and su

of oth

ployer

the to

whose

and he

ation o

liberal

worship

1878.

his.

933

tion, Mr. Herring finally becoming the pur-He himself now runs the works so *satisfactorily, that it is admitted both by visitors and experts that the Napanee gas is second to none in the province. In 1880, a project was started for establishing the manufacture of window glass, Mr. Herring being one of the first called to look into the A company was projected with a capital of $200,000; but from various causes, those first interested dropped out of the matter, and Mr. Herring decided to go on alone. In 1881, after looking over various factories in Pittsburg and Syracuse, he erected the present Napanee glass works, the only establishment of the kind in the Not being a practical glass Dominion. maker, he experienced from the first a great deal of trouble from the operative, who are controlled by the glass-makers' union; and his capital being locked up in plant, he was obliged, in 1883, to close the works, after manufacturing for two seasons, and turning out a quality of glass such as had never been in use in Canada, and which would control the market of the Dominion to the exclusion of the imported article. Mr. Herring made an attempt to get up a stock company in Canada, in 1884, for the purpose of reopening the works, but owing to the tightness of the money market to some extent, but principally to the lack of practical knowledge of the business, he was unable to succeed; and in 1885, the people of the town, knowing the importance of again getting the works in operation, combined with Mr. Herring and sent a man to England to lay the matter before some capitalists there, with the prospect at present writing, (January, 1886), that the works will again be started with at least three times their pres-In conclusion, Mr. Herring ent capacity. is looked upon as one of the fathers of the town, having been connected with every public enterprise there, and being one of the first to subscribe to anything which had merit, and would give employment to the working classes. Although he has met with reverses, having been burned out in 1864, and sustained various losses by the failure of others, he is still one of the largest employers of labour and heaviest ratepayers in the town; and we do not know of a man whose loss would be more deeply felt than his. In politics Mr. Herring is a Reformer, and he was president of the Reform Association of Lennox for two years previous to In religion he entertains the most liberal views, conceding to all the right to worship as they deem proper, while he him-

ed a

eve.

en-

wag

the

In

eur

and

, a ade

He

ys, ed.

ive

B60

er-

ho

lin

1V-

self is willing to be classed with the agnostics, believing more in the religion of the "milk of human kindness," and the perfect application of the golden rule, than any theory at present preached or promulgated in reference to a hereafter. As a proof of his consistency, he has always been a strong promoter of temperance, and was one of the most active workers among the Good Templars, which may be said to have taken its rise in Canada in the town of Napanee, he being firmly convinced that the excessive use of alcohol is the cause of nine-tenths of the misery suffered by the human family.

Walsh, William Legh, Birrister-atlaw, Orangeville, was born on January 28th, 1857, at Simcoe, in the County of Norfolk. He is a son of Aquila and Jane (Adams) Walsh. His father represented the County of Norfolk in the Legislative Assembly from 1861 to 1867, and represented North Norfolk in the House of Commons from 1867 to 1872He was chairman of the board of commissioners for the construction of the Intercolonial Railway, and at the time of his death, in March, 1885, was commissioner in charge of the Dominion lands in the North-west. Our subject is a grandson of Francis L. Walsh, who was registrar of the County of Norfolk for over seventy years. Mr. Walsh is descended of an old U. E. loyalist family, who came originally to Canada in 1812, and settled in the township of Charlotteville, Norfolk county, having migrated thither from Pennsylvania. liam L. was one of a family of six children, and was educated at Simcoe High school, and matriculated as undergraduate of Toronto University in 1872. He did not finish his course, but commenced to study law in the office of Tisdale, Livingstone & Robb, Simcoe, in 1873. He removed to Hamilton in 1876, and studied with Martin & Parkes, until 1877, when he removed to Toronto and concluded his course in the office of Dalton McCarthy, Q.C. He was admitted as a solicitor in 1879, and called to the bar in 1880. He practised law in Simcoe as a member of the firm of Ansley, Slaight & Walsh, from 1879 to 1881, when he formed a partnership in Orangeville with Dalton McCarthy, Q. C., which lasted until 1884, and has ever since practised there. He is solicitor for the town of Orangeville, for the townships of Mono and Melancthon, and for the Bank of Hamilton. He at one time held a commission as lieutenant in the 39th Batt., but is now not connected with He has always been an adthe militia. herent of the Church of England, and is now serving his third year as churchwarden of St. Mark's church, Orangeville. Mr. Walsh has travelled extensively through Canada and the United States. He married, on November 14th, 1883, Bessie, youngest daughter of Thomas McVittie, of Barrie, by whom he has one daughter. In politics Mr. Walsh is devoted to the party led by Sir John A. Macdonald, and he is a member of the Orangeville Conservative Asociation. He is somewhat retiring in his manners, but in legal circles he has the repute of being very astute and capable. Elwood, Rev. Edward Lindsey, M.A., Rector of St. George's Church, Goderich, Ontario, and Archdeacon of Huron, was born at Cork, Ireland, on the 13th December, 1810. He is a son of Edward Elwood, a captain in the 7th Royal Fusiliers, by Esther Lindsey. The Elwood family belongs to the gentry of Roscommon, Ireland. Edward Lindsey Elwood at first attended a private school in Dublin, taught by the Rev. T. P. Huddart, Chief-Justice Hagarty being a pupil at the same school. Young Elwood afterward entered Trinity College, Dublin, from which institution he graduated A.B. in 1831. He received his master's degree seven years later. On October 6th, 1833, he was ordained deacon by the Rev. Dr. Knox, of Killaloe, and priest on Ascension Day, 1836, by the Bishop of Limerick. He became curate of the parish of Screen, in the diocese of Tuam; he was next removed to Tanderagee, diocese of Armagh, and again to Drumbanagher, in the same diocese. In 1848 he emigrated to Canada, and was locum tenens for a few months at York Mills; after which he became rector of St. George's Church, Goderich. In September of 1875, his zeal, learning and piety received a substantial mark of recognition by his appointment as archdeacon of Huron, and chaplain to the Lord Bishop. As a preacher the archdeacon is powerful, and his utterances are always marked by warmth of zeal, by careful thought, and a pervading culture. He is a singularly pleasant reader; and he has the love and reverence of those committed to his pastoral care. He was a trustee of the Goderich High school for several years, and has always taken a hearty interest in educational work, as he has in all things relating to the moral and intellectual progress of the community. He married in September, 1836, Ellen, daughter of the Rev. John Yeats, of Drumcliffe, Ireland. There have been born to this union eleven children, seven of whom survive. Mrs.

Elwood died on August 7th, 1870, deeply lamented by a wide circle of friends. Of the seven children all are married save two, Mary, and William Butler. Esther, the eldest daughter, is the wife of the Rev. Isaac Middleton, B.A., of Oshawa; Ellen S. M. is the wife of Horace Conquest, of Clifton, Ontaria; Rebecca is the wife of Philip Holt, barrister, of the firm of Cameron, Holt & Cameron, Goderich: George Vesey is in the Inland Revenue office at Stratford; and Henry Taylor is in business at Chicago. The archdeacon is a man of an extremely cheerful temperament; "he has a cordiality and whole-heartedness which puts a stranger upon good terms with him at once, and is, in short, a sunny-souled Christian.".

Bradshaw, Seth Wesley, Belleville. Ontario, was born on Christmas day, 1833. on lot thirty-four, third concession, in the township of Ancaster, County of Wentworth. He is a son of Walter Bradshaw, whose father was of Scotch descent, and the paternal grandmother of our subject was Miss Vanderlip, whose father served under Col. Butler during the American revolutionary war. Mr. Vanderlip was a U. E. loyalist, and secured land immediately opposite the farm of Mr. Bradshaw, senior, and here he died. Seth Wesley Bradshaw's mother was Huldah, daughter of Abraham and Sarah Vansickle, who removed into Canada from the State of New Jersey immediately after the American revolution. The former was of German extraction; the latter was English, and all lived to a ripe old age. Walter Bradshaw was a liberal in politics; and a member or adherent of the Episcopal Methodist church. S. W. Bradshaw was educated at the common school of Ancaster, until the 4th March, 1850, when he proceeded to Jerseyville, to learn the blacksmith trade with A. Hendershott. Here he served for four years, and then commenced business on his own account, almost opposite his father's farm, on April 24th, 1854. He married in January, 1855, Ann, daughter of David and Jane Howell, of Jerseyville. Mr. Bradshaw continued in the waggon and carriage making business, with blacksmithing combined, until May, 1866, when he sold out to his brother, who had learned his trade with our subject. This brother is still carrying on the business in the same place. Mr. Bradshaw then purchased a farm near Onondago, in the county of Brant, which he worked for two years, and then rented the property. He now removed to the town of Brantford, and began to retail sewing ma-way Wil pan cap: to E mac Brit as t from shaw to C cont tione ture with son, gentl wher is a 1 Oddf affair

a vol

Went

tinct.

chin

Le M.C. in the Ontar is a s Ordel $_{ m the}$ New ant of nent states than u Adam anoth himse ability during builde South Lewis. from t and se he ren ton L but re since t is also a fami being thorous mon sc wards the Col ing a st

tered tl

chines until something better came into his way. In 1870 he began to travel for the Wilson & Bowman Sewing Machine Company as general agent, and continued in this cap: city until 1872, when the firm sent him to England to endeavour to introduce their machines there, He spent that year in the British Isles, and went over to France, but as that country had so recently emerged from the great German conflict, Mr. Bradshaw could do but little there. He returned to Canada in the autumn of the same year, continued in the employ of the last mentioned and other sewing machine manufacturers until May, 1877, when he engaged with his present employer, William Patterson, M.P. for South Brant, to manage that gentleman's branch house in Belleville, where he is still employed. Mr. Bradshaw is a member of the Masonic as well as of the Oddfellows' societies, and during the Trent affair was one of the hundred who formed a volunteer cavalry company, known as the Wentworth cavalry, but which is now ex-

Lewis, Frederick Wilson, M. D., M.C.P.S.O., Orangeville, Ontario, was born in the village of Addison, County of Leeds, Ontario, on the 30th of March, 1855. He is a son of Wellington Lewis, by his wife, Ordelia, daughter of Ebenezer Wilson, of the town of Ogdensburg, in the State of New York. Mrs. Wilson was a descendant of the Adams family, who were prominent in American history for their great statesmanship, their oratory, and their more than usual diplomatic skill. John Quincy Adams is a member of this family, and another was the gentleman who comported himself with so much firmness, dignity, and ability as American minister at England during the civil war, and when English shipbuilders were furnishing cruisers to the Southern flag. Mr. Lewis was a son of Ira Lewis, a U. E. loyalist, who came to Canada from the State of Connecticut about 1812, and settled in the village of Leyman, where he remained until his death. Mr. Wellington Lewis adopted the life of a merchant, but retired from business some years, and since then has led a quiet life. Mrs. Lewis is also living, and the fruit of the union is a family of four, the subject of this sketch Frederick received a being the eldest. thorough education, attending first the common schools of his native place, and afterwards the Farmersville High school, and the Collegiate Institute of Kingston. Having a strong inclination for medicine, he entered the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons of Kingston, in 1874, where he remained for four years, until he graduated in 1878. In 1879 he removed to the village of Waldemar, Wellington county, where he practised for three years. In 1882 he removed to Orangeville, where he has remained ever since, practising his profession with continuously increasing success. He has taken much interest in the local militia, and is lieutenant in the 36th Battalion, In 1883, he was appointed gaol surgeon for the County of Dufferin. Dr. Lewis is a member of the Freemason order. Harris lodge, No. 216, of Orangeville, and has held office in the same. He is likewise a member of the Ancient Order. of United Workmen, and of the Select Knights, and is surgeon of the same. He married, in 1883, Maggie, daughter of John Aiken, of Orangeville, formerly of Mitchell, and has issue one son. In politics, Dr. Lewis pins his faith to the doctrines of the party led by Sir John A. Macdonald; and he is a member of the Dufferin County Conservative Association. He is much devoted to out-door exercises, and to manly sports in every form. For dogs and horses he has a special penchant. We may add that he takes an unusual interest in public questions, and many surmise that his ambition points to one of the parliaments. In the field, unquestionably, he would be an able and a popular candidate.

Fairbank, John H., Petrolia, M.P. for East Lambton, only child of Asa Fairbank and his wife Mary Oliver, was born in Champlain, Clinton county, State of New York, on the 31st of July, 1831. Our subject is descended from prominent families of early settlers in the State of Upon his father's side Massachusetts. English, and Irish on that of his mother. His grandfather, Major John Fairbank, was a soldier in the American revolutionary war, and served under General Washington in the Philadelphia campaign. He was likewise with him during the sufferings of the winter encampment at Valley Forge. Young Fairbank received his education in the common schools and the academy at Champlain. In 1853 he came to Canada West, and engaged in railway and other surveys. He married in 1855, Edna, second daughter of Hermanus Crysler, of Niagara Falls, Ontario. In 1861 his business as a surveyor took him to the oil fields of Enniskillen, where he has since remained, having built the third frame house in Petrolia, Ontario, in 1865, where he became connected with important business enterprises, chief of which may be mentioned his oil operations. He is likewise connected with an extensive hardware business, and private banking. He is president of the Crown Savings and Loan Co., also president of the Petrolia Oil Exchange, and chief of the Fire department. A man showing ability and energy in his own business is liable to be called upon to assume legislative responsibilities. When in 1882 the Hon. Mr. Mackenzie retired from Lambton, and the county was divided into two ridings, Mr. Fairbank was strongly urged to stand for the East, a riding which Conservatives felt confident of carrying. He accepted, and was returned by a handsome majority. He took his seat in the Dominion parliament with a well-earned reputation for integrity and ability. He is a staunch Liberal, and we have little doubt that there is a period of much usefulness before him in the legislative field.

Wagner, Very Rev. James Theodore, Dean of Windsor, Ontario, was born at Hérange, in Lorraine, on the 13th November, 1837. He pursued his primary studies under the tuition of his own father, Dominic Wagner, who was during a period of forty years one of the most prominent school teachers and music professors in Lorraine, France. He took his classical course, partly in the college Féné trange, and the far-famed little seminary of Pont-á-Mousson. He pursued his course of philosophy in the Grand Seminary of Nancy, where he was found in 1856, by the Right Rev. Armand de Charbounel, then bishop of Toronto, and volunteered to come with that prelate to Canada. He set out for America in the same year, and began his theological studies in the Sulpician seminary of Saint Mary's, Baltimore, U.S., which course he afterwards completed at Assumption College, Sandwich, Ontario, then under the management of the Jesuit Fathers. On the 3rd June, 1860, he was ordained priest, by the Right Rev. Adolphe Pinsonault, then bishop of Sandwich, and was appointed pastor of the mission of Simcoe and Windham that same year, but this charge he resigned in consequence of broken health, after four years of hard labour. After a year's rest at the episcopal residence in Sandwich, he was appointed pastor. of the newly erected parish of Windsor, on the 1st of June, 1865. He accompanied Bishop Walsh to Rome, in 1876, in the capacity of secretary to his lordship. On the 7th May, 1877, Father Wagner was created dean of Windsor, by the bishop, in recognition of his services, his zeal, and his fine abilities. Dean Wagner celebrated his silver jubilee, and also the twentieth anniversary of his appointment to the pastoral charge of St. Alphonsus, of Wind-A lengthy sor, on the 3rd June, 1885. account of this jubilee was published in the Catholic Record; and the career of the distinguished priest is written with such pathos and grace that we cannot forbear Says the writer :making a quotation. "On June the 3rd, 1860, after years of preparatory study, both in his native land, Lorraine, France, as well as in the land of his adoption, a young, dark-eyed, swarthy man, full of hope and vigour, knelt in the old cathedral church at Sandwich, Ontario, and received ordination to the holy priesthood from the hands of Bishop Pinsonault, the first bishop of the diocese of London. The young priest, Father Wagner, was at once assigned to a mission near Simcoe, which he ministered to for four years, after which he returned to Sandwich. The following year he was named to the newly organized parish of Windsor, and has been the pastor of St. Alphonsus church ever since, and has seen the congregation grow from a small charge of less than five hundred souls, to a prosperous and wealthy parish of about two thousand, with a handsome and substantial church edifice, a beautiful convent and fine select school. Twentyfive years have come and gone since that memorable June morning, 1860. It is again the month of June, but it is June the 3rd, 1885, and Very Rev Dean Wagner celebrates his silver jubilee. The gathering was large, for priests and religeuse had come from far and near to do honour and attest their love to one so pious, and so distinguished. One of the tributes to his worth. and to his career, was a poem written and read by Miss Katrina Ralph, of Ogdensburgh, N.Y. In replying to the lady superioress of the convent, the sisters of that institution, and the young ladies, the Very Rev. dean said among other touching and apt things: 'It is to me, my dear children, a source of infinite gratification to have noticed throughout this whole entertainment what a high regard you entertain for the sublime dignity of the priesthood Preserve always that spirit of faith; carry it with you into the world. Look upon your priest as the first man in your parish, for in dignity there is no greater than he. He is above governor and president, king and emperor. St. Francis said that if he met a riest and an angel, he would salute the

JndthTain

aį

re

si

lia

bι

se

fa

m

un ou

Sa

18

he

Αf

Μe

bri

lad

pat

and

and

wh

san

on

boa afte

He

mul

cha

tim

agai

stea

priest first, and afterwards the angel, because the priest, he said, was the more dignified. What would you do here, my dear young ladies, without the ministry of the priest? There would be no Holy mass, no sacraments, no Holy communion, no confession, no preaching of the word of God. The result of such a deficiency would be the downfall of this institution; in less than three months, sisters and pupils alike would be restroyd to the four winds."

, and

rated

tieth

pas-

Vind-

gthy

d in

the

such

bear

r :--

pre-

and.

d of

rthy

the

rio,

lest-

ult,

lon.

k at

coe,

ars,

Γhe

wly

een

ver

ow

ınthy

nd-

au-

ty-

nat

ain

rd,

le-

as

est

be scattered to the four winds." Ryan, William, Chatham, Ontario, was born on the 9th October, 1818, in the Niagara district, Canada. He is a son of James Ryan, who was born on the 12th August, 1763, in Orange county, New York state, which state at the time named was a colony of the British crown. In 1787, after the struggle for independence was ended, James Ryan, who was a U. E. loyalist, removed to Canada, settling in the Niagara He had learned a trade, and in district. the rapidly-growing Canadian district of his choice his skill was in much demand. Thereafter he purchased a farm of 100 acres, upon which he lived till 1822, during which he was conjointly occupied as an agriculturist and as crier of the district court in the town of Niagara. He then removed to London township, where he resided till 1835, when he took up his abode at Mount Pleasant. He died in 1856. William Ryan was educated at London, Ont., but at the age of fourteen he was obliged to set out and earn his own bread. Like his father he was imbued with loyalist sentiments, and fought on the side of the crown under Colonel Price, in the Upper Canada outbreak of 1837-38. He stood guard at Sandwich on the 4th December, 1838. In 1833, with only five dollars in his pocket, he left his father's house, for Port Stanley. After a time he joined his elder brother at Medina, N. Y., for whom he worked for a brief space. He likewise wrought as farm lad for some months, but this sort of occupation did not commend itself to his taste; and in 1834 he retraced his steps to Canada, and went to his brother-in-law, J. Winer, wholesale druggist, of Hamilton. In the same year he went to Chatham, then worked on Talbot's road for $6 per month and his board; returned again to Chatham, and after a brief stay bent his steps to Detroit. He had now, through great frugality, accumulated some money, and purchasing merchandise he did some profitable selling for a time. In Detroit, some time afterwards, we again find him as engineer on the first steam-ferry, the Argo, that plied across the Detroit river; and in such employment he remained for two years. In 1836 he went on the steamer Cynthia, which ran between Chatham and Detroit, Thomas McRea, master; and was afterwards engineer on the steamer Thames. In 1837, he was engineer on the steamer Detroit. On her trip from Detroit to Buffalo this boat had to pass through forty miles of ice, although it was late in the warm season as the 10th of June. When this boat subsequently changed ber route, and began to ply between Chicago and Milwaukee, Willam Ryan was also her engineer. In the autumn of that year he returned to Canada, and shouldered his musket, as we have already seen. After the close of the rebellion he opened a general store at Walkerville; a little later we find him back again at steamboat engineering, between Chatham and Detroit. this calling did he occupy himself off and on for the next nine or ten years (1848), when he was obliged, owing to a breakdown of his health, to give up the busi-He again invested his savings in merchandise, and continued in trade till 1853. Fortune had been kind to him in his business, and he found himself at the last named year master of a considerable capital. This he began to use in the purchase of property and in the erection of buildings, which speculation yielded him a handsome return for his expenditure. His business continued from year to year to grow more profitable, and at last he entered into private banking; and he stands to-day conspicuous among the foremost of Chatham's respected and successful business men. His struggle had been a long and a bitter one, and his career is marked by many ups and downs; but through it all we see shining out his energy, his courage, and his capacity. He has nothing for which to thank his "stars," for his fortune is the carving of his own hands. Mr. Ryan married, on the 20th August, 1844, Lucy Montrieul, a lady highly connected in the city of There have been, by this union, Detroit. ten children, the second son assisting his father. The fifth son is studying medicine with Dr. Holmes, of Chatham. Mr. Ryan is a consistent member of the Weslevan Methodist church.

Crawford, Rev. Edward Patrick, M.A., (University College, Toronto), fourth son of the Hon. George Crawford, by his second wife, Caroline Sherwood, was born in Brockville, Ontario, on the 27th of July, 1846. His father, an Irishman, had many years previously settled in Canada, bringing with him from Ireland his first wife, a Miss Brown, of Killishandra, and two sons, who were afterwards well-known and influential men; the eldest, Lieutenant-Colonel James Crawford, being the representative for Brockville in the first parliament of the Dominion of Canada; the second son, Hon. John Crawford, having sat in several parliaments, on one occasion as the representative of Toronto, defeating Hon. George Brown, and finally being appointed lieutenantgovernor of Ontario, which position he held at the time of his death. Besides these two sons, Mr. Crawford had three daughters by his first wife: Anne, who became the wife of Samuel Keefer, C.E.; Margaret, first wife of the late Hon. John Ross; and Isabella wife of George Easton, collector of Customs at Brockville. The first Mrs. Crawford died whilst the family were living back of Toronto, where Mr. Crawford first settled. Mr. Crawford afterwards obtained large contracts on the St. Lawrence and Rideau canals, and visiting Brockville, became intimate with the family of Adiel Sherwood, an old U. E. loyalist, alterwards sheriff of Leeds and Grenville, whose fourth daughter, Caroline, became his second wife. Eventually, George Crawford settled in Brockville, where he spent the last twentyfive years of his life, and his name is associated with the history of Brockville as its representative for many years in the Legislature of Upper Canada, as legislative councillor, and finally as Senator of the Dominion. Mr. Crawford had several children by his second wife, six only, however, attained maturity. Edward Patrick was the first child born to Mr. Crawford after he finally settled in his Brockville home, and he is now the oldest surviving son. During the first twelve years of his life, the Rev. E. P. Crawford was educated at home until nine years of age, by a governess in his father's house, and from nine to twelve, at the Brockville Grammar school, under the direction of the late J. G. Dunlop. When twelve years of age, Mr. Crawford entered Upper Canada College, Toronto, through which he passed in three years; and at sixteen he entered University College, Toronto, graduating in 1866, at the age of twenty. Mr. Crawford was in the midst of his final examinations when the Fenian raid occurred at Fort Erie, and when the news of the fighting at Ridgeway reached him, volunteered to join the University company of the Queen's Own, and was sent to the front on the day of the After graduating from the University, he entered the office of Crawford &

Crombie, but being the possessor of a fine voice, well cultivated, and being much sought after on account of his musical talents and other social qualities, he did not pay much attention to the duties of the office, or to his legal studies; and after a year of idleness his father consented, on the advice of John Crawford, to let him seek a commission in the British army. Crawford now returned home to Brockville, to prepare for his military examination, and to await the issue of his commission, application having been made through Lord Monck, then governor-general of Canada. It was whilst thus waiting for a commission in the army, that Mr. Crawford's ideas changed, and his thoughts took a more serious turn. He now became a communicant of the Church of England, in which he had been brought up, and took an interest in Sunday-school work in St. Peter's church. Brockville. At length the longing to become a minister of Christ became intense. Some friends, noticing the change in his life and conduct, spoke to him on the matter, and he confessed to them what had become the darling wish of his heart. His father was speedily informed, and was greatly pleased with the change. Shortly after this, Mr. Crawford received notice from the Horse Guards that, in consequence of the reductions then being made in the British army, and the large number of officers who would have a first claim for appointments to the different regiments, there was no probability of his obtaining a commission for several years. Having now other views in life, this caused no disappointment to After studying for a year with the Rev. F. R. Tane, then rector of St. Peter's, Mr. Crawford was ordained deacon in Kingston, in October, 1869, by the Right Reverend J. T. Lewis, Bishop of Ontario, and was licensed as second assistant at St. George's Cathedral, Kingston. During the term of his diaconate, Mr. Crawford resided and studied with the Rev. Henry Wilson, then curate at the cathedral. It was during this year spent in Kingston that Mr. Crawford became acquainted with the family of James A. Henderson, Q.C., and in the spring of 1870, his engagement to Annie Henderson, the fourth daughter, was announced. Receiving priest's lorders at Prescott, in November, 1870, he was appointed to his first charge, the mission of Hillier and Wellington, in the County of Prince Edward. He at once entered upon his work there, living with one of his parishioners until he could put the parsonage in order for his bride.

His

plac

St.

visit

turn

sum

on th

resig

appo

had

and

them

regre

incui

years alone

L'Or

also a

twen

After

the F

him d

ond a

Philli

bury

servic

Mrs.

Mr. C

land,

from :

in Lo

ed by

ford a

chapla

tinent

Biscay

Here

riving

and ed

a shor

Pisa,

Milan

Whilst

the firs

ment ·

in his

ing he

finding people

he acc

to Bro

the pr

There

tion, n

service

Hall, a

organiz

appoin

cy.

at

His marriage to Miss Henderson took place on the 4th of January, 1871, in St. George's Cathedral; and after a short visit to Montreal and Brockville, he returned with his wife to Hillier. His career at Hillier, however, was short, as in the summer of 1871 the parish of Hawkesbury, on the Ottawa river, becoming vacant by the resignation of Rev. Mr. Daniel, the Bishop appointed him to that charge. Although he had only been nine months in Hillier, he and his young wife had greatly endeared themselves to the people, and great were the regrets at their departure. Mr. Crawford's incumbency of Hawkesbury lasted for four At first he worked in the parish years. alone, holding services in Hawkesbury and L'Orignal every Sunday; and once a month also at Alfred and Plantagenet, sixteen and twenty-three miles distant, respectively. After one year he secured the assistance of the Rev. Arthur Jarvis, who remained with him during the remainder of his incumbency. During one summer he had also a second assistant living with him, the Rev. A. Phillips, afterwards his successor in Hawkesbury; and during that summer they held services in nine stations. In the fall of 1874, Mrs. Crawford's health became so poor that Mr. Crawford resolved to take her to England, and see what benefit she might derive from foreign travel. After a few weeks stay in London, where Mrs. Crawford was treated by a distinguished physician, Mr. Crawford accepted a position as locum tenens at a chaplaincy of the Church Colonial and Continental Society at Arcachon, on the Bay of Biscay, in the south-west corner of France. Here they remained for three months, deriving much benefit in health from the mild and equable climate. Afterwards they made a short tour through Italy, visiting Genoa, Pisa, Rome, Naples, Florence, Venice, and Milan, returning by Paris to London. Whilst at Florence, Mr. Crawford received the first intimation of his probable appointment to the new parish about to be formed in his old home, West Brockville. Hastening homeward, he visited Brockville, and finding that it was the general wish of the people that he should undertake the work, he accepted the appointment, and removed to Brockville in July, 1875. Then began the principal work of his ministerial lite. There was as yet no church, no congregation, no stipend, in fact, nothing. The first service was held on July 4th, in the Town Hall, and shortly after a Sunday-school was organized; and very soon also a committee appointed and subscriptions solicited for the

ìne

ich

al-

not

of-

ear

id-

lek

Ir.

le,

nd

li-

rd

la.

 $_{
m n}$

as

re

bi-

he

h,

building of a church. The church was erected during the summer of 1876, and on Trinity Sunday, 1377, was opened, under the name of Trinity church, by the Bishop of Ontario. From its inception, this new parish has been full of enthusiastic workers; and under the direction of Mr. Crawford and his energetic wife, it has become one of the most successful and influential parishes in the diocese of Ontario. The esteem and affection of the people towards their pastor and his wife are unbounded, and are manifested frequently in kindnesses shown to them. In the fall of 1883, Mr. Crawford was asked to become the rector of a new and important parish in Winnipeg, Manitoba, but not wishing to leave his Brockville friends under the heavy debt which then encumbered the church, he laid the whole matter before his congregation, when they unanimously asked him to remain with Mr. and Mrs. Crawford have never had any children, so that they have both been able to devote their energies to church work. Mr. Crawford was appointed chaplain to the Bishop of Ontario in May, 1885, in the room of the Rev. Dr. Wilson, who had resigned; and in the fall of the same year he was appointed by the Right Rev. Edward Sullivan, Bishop of Algoma, his commissary in the Diocese of Ontario, in the place of the late Rev. F. W. Kirkpat-Mr. Crawford has been chairman of the High school board of trustees for eight He is a past master Workor nine years. man of the A.O.U.W., and is representative for Brockville in the Grand lodge. He is also the first regent of the Brockville Council of the Royal Arcanum.

McDonald, William, Tilsonburg, Ontario, was born in Banffshire, Scotland, on the 27th of February, 1827. He is a son of John McDonald, and Jane Nicol. John McDonald was a farmer, and had fifteen children, William being the eighth of the He died in 1865. William. received a careful English education. He left school when in his thirteenth year, and apprenticed himself to the trade of a tailor in Dufftown, Banffshire. When the apprenticeship expired he began to work at his trade, continuing so to do till 1850, when he took ship for Canada. He settled in Hamilton, and remained there until 1852, when he removed to Vienna, in the County of Elgin, and began business for himself as a merchant tailor. The following year he decided to change, and proceeded to Tilsonburg, where he resumed his business, continuing in the same till 1881, when having acquired a sufficient competence he retired from this business and began farming, in connection with a fruit evaporating establish-In this business he is at the present time engaged; and he has succeeded in establishing a large market for his output in both the upper and lower provinces. 1860 he was elected school trustee for the township of Durham, Oxford county, and held this position until 1873. In 1861, he was elected to the township council of Durham, and continued in office until 1867, when he retired. He was afterwards elected mayor, and during his term of office a good many public improvements were begun and finished. Mr. McDonald is a Freemason, and is treasurer of King Hiram lodge, No. 78, Tilsonburg. He is a pronounced Reformer, and president of the Reform Association of the South Riding of Oxford. In religion, he professes the Roman catholic faith. He married, on the 25 and January, 1855, Janet, daughter of William Payne, of Kirkcudbrightshire, Scotland, and has three children; one of these, John, is a merchant tailor, and the other, William, is a physician and druggist. The third, Charles, is also a physician, and these reside in Mc-Donald's Block, Tilsonburg. Our subject is a man who enjoys a large share of public respect and confidence.

Carson, Robert J., a young and successful merchant, of the City of Kingston, was born in that city on the 16th of January, 1849. His parents came to this country from the County of Monoghan, Ireland, about the year 1840, and located at Kingston. His father, Robert Carson, began in the grocery business in that year, and continued in the same up to the time of his death, July 10th, 1870, leaving a large His son, Robert J., succeeded him in the business, which he increased. It is now a large wholesale establishment, carrying on large importations, and doing an extensive general business throughout the Province. Mr. Carson, when only twentyfour years of age, was asked by the electors of the Rideau ward, the largest ward in the city, to allow his name to be placed in nomination as a candidate for alderman. consented, and was elected at the head of At the council board he took considerable interest in municipal affairs, and was a member of the most important committees, and chairman of the court of revision. He was elected each year continuously for Rideau ward till 1880, when he was asked to offer himself for mayor, and having consented, he was elected by the largest majority ever given to any mayor in the city. Mr. Carson was the youngest mayor that ever sat in the chief magistrate's chair in Kingston, and he performed the duties of his office with credit to himself and satisfaction to the citizens at large. At the end of the year, it was Mr. Carson's intention to retire from the council, but he was not permitted to do so, as he was nominated and elected a member for St. Lawrence ward without his consent. In politics, he is a Reformer; and in religion an Anglican, and a member of St. George's Cathedral, of Kingston, of which church he is likewise one of the wardens. He was baptised in the Anglican Church, and has been a constant attendant of it. His habits are strictly temperate, and his character in all respects is very high. He has no military record, other than he was successful in taking both second and first-class certificates at the Royal Military school at Kingston; and he holds now a commission in a local regiment, known as the "Bloody First." Mr. Carson is connected with several important enterprises, and is a stockholder in a number of factories. He married at Newburgh, on the 5th of October, 1881, Emma Lavenia, the only daughter of W. H. Casey, a descendant of one of the U. E. loyalists, by whom he has two children, one son and a daughter.

Dupuis, Nathan Fellowes, M.A., F.B.S.E., F.R.S.C., Professor of Mathe-matics in Queen's College and University, at Kingston, was born at Portland, Ontario, in 1836, his father being Joseph Dupuis, who came to this country when a lad. His mother, Eleanor Baker, the daughter of a U. E. loyalist, was born in Halifax. Professor Dupuis received as thorough an education as the schools of his young days were capable of bestowing. From fourteen to eighteen years of his age he worked at the mechanical business of clock and watchmaking, but gave up this employment, owing to the evil effects that it was working upon his health; and at nineteen he began teaching and study. In due time he matriculated at Queen's College, Kingston, graduating therefrom with honours in mathematics and natural science. He was appointed to the chair of Chemistry in 1867, and transferred to the chair of mathematics in 1880, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the retirement of the former incumbent. He married, in 1860, Amelia Ann McGinnis, born at Watertown, N.Y., and who is descended from an Irish family which settled in New York State three generations ago.

M M.A. name is the Murr came fromMurri and fo mittin genera busine to thi and po Hamil Toront long c death. liam B Rev. I old St. Adelaid obtaine corner and at present sequent College, proficier Toronto the stud gold med obtained then stu was calle entered for the continue Murrich, s the he ince reti t Urquh ought th itizens. rustee for tion he twice elec contests), solicitor still holds. besides ac chairman tee. In 1

board rec

nuch cred nade in co

o the publ ctive inter

McMurrich, William Barelay, M.A., Toronto, was born at the city just named, on the 1st of November, 1842. He is the eldest son of the late Hon. John Mc-Murrich and Janet Dickson. came from Renfrewshire, and his mother from Lanarkshire, in Scotland. The Mc-Murrichs are a branch of the clan Chattan, and formerly the bards of the clans, transmitting the traditions from generation to generation. John McMurrich engaged in business for a time in Glasgow, and came to this country in 1835. His mercantile and political career is well known. He established three mercantile houses—one at Hamilton, one at Kingston, and one at Toronte—but he was mainly known by his long connection with the Toronto house, of which he remained a partner until his death, on the 13th February, 1883.. William Barclay McMurrich is named after the Rev. Dr. Barclay, who was pastor of the old St. Andrew's church, then situated on Adelaide street. His early education was obtained at the Grammar school, at the corner of Jarvis and Richmond streets, and at Knox Academy, situated on the present site of the Queen's Hotel. Subsequently he studied in the Upper Canada College, where he showed many marks of proficiency, and afterwards matriculated at Toronto University. He applied himself to the study of the natural sciences, and was gold medallist in 1863; and four years later obtained his M.A. degree. Mr. McMurrich then studied law in John Leys' office, and was called to the bar in 1866; after which he entered into a partnership with Mr. Leys for the practice of law, which partnership continued until 1873, when the firm of Mc-Murrich, Howard & Drayton, of which he is the head, was formed. The latter have since retired, the firm now being McMurrich t Urquhart. In 1868 Mr. McMurrich first ought the public confidence of his fellowitizens, and was elected as public school rustee for St. Andrew's ward, which position he held for nearly eight years, (being twice elected by acclamation and twice after contests), and on resigning was appointed solicitor to the board, which office he still holds. While a public school trustee, besides acting on other committees, he was chairman of the sites and building committee. In 1872, as chairman of the school board reception committee, he obtained nuch credit for the successful arrangements nade in connection with Lord Dufferin's visit o the public schools. As a trustee he took an ctive interest in providing education for the

r in

gest

te's

the and the ion

not

and

ard

s a

ind

 \mathbf{of}

rise

in

tly

cts

rd,

th

he

he

ρt,

large number of children then wandering at large in our streets, and preparing for lives of sin and crime. He visited New York and Massachusetts, and investigated the working of the industrial schools in those states; and, on returning, prepared a minute report, which was adopted by the board. As a result of his labours, the old House of Refuge and six acres of land were secured for the purpose of making an experiment in Toronto. Complications, however, afterwards arising, prevented his scheme being carried While on the board he was also instrumental in procuring a standing committee on printing and supplies, and in having steps taken for the formation of a free public library, which has since become an accomplished fact. In 1879 Mr. McMurrich was a candidate for aldermanic honours in St. Patrick's ward, and received the largest majority ever given to a councillor in this city. He at once took a leading part in civic affairs, and was appointed chairman of the court of revision. During that year the Marquis of Lorne and Princess Louise visited the city, and Mr. McMurrich very successfully discharged the duties of chairman of the reception committee. The following year he was returned by acclamation, and received the highest offices in the gift of the council, namely, that of representative of the city on the Northern Railway board of directors, and of chairman of the executive committee. While in the council he devoted considerable attention to the "local improvement" system, which has been advocated for years by the city press, and in furtherance of the project visited a number of Amercian cities where the system is in vogue. He made several reports to the council on the subject, and that body ultimately adopted a scheme which is giving every satisfaction. The next year, 1881, he was a candidate for the position of chief magistrate of the city, and defeated Mr. Close by a majority of 1,160 votes. His record during the first year of his administration proved him to be one of the best mayors Toronto has had. As mayor he drew up a manual of the City of Toronto, entirely his own work, which was a consolidation of the Beaty and Mowat by-laws, and a number of The financial affairs of the amendments. city by this arrangement were placed upon such a basis that the city cannot be defrauded except by collusion of the corporation officials from the mayor downward. The committee of the council to whom the matter was referred thanked the mayor for the labour which he had taken upon himself in preparing the draft of the consolidated bylaw, and placing it before them in printed form. Mr. McMurrich has also been the means of inaugurating the system of deposits by contractors doing work for the city, the non-fulfilment of their contracts entailing a forfeiture of the amounts deposited. As a reward the citizens returned him by acclamation to fill the civic chair for a sec-Mr. McMurrich has also filled ond term. other positions of trust in the gift of his fellow-citizens. In St. Andrew's Society, after serving as secretary, he was raised to the presidency, a position which he occupied for two years. He is also a member of several other societies and orders of a benevolent character. It is only just likewise to say that the success of the Semi-Centennial celebration of the City of Toronto was largely if not almost entirely due to the enthusiasm and active interest of Mr. Mc-Murrich. After the arrival of Lord Lorne in Canada, there was a gathering of the Canadian Scottish societies to do honour to the son of the head of the clan Campbell, and to the Princess Louise; and Mr. McMurrich was elected grand secretary of the union. He had the honour on this occasion of presenting the governor-general with a sprig of myrtle, the emblem of the clan Campbell. Mr. McMurrich is a member of the Presbyterian church, and is an elder of Knox church. He was one of those who assisted in the formation of the West Church Sabbath-school, and was connected with it for over twenty years, having been superintendent for many years, succeeding his father upon his resignation of the position. He is now superintendent of the Knox church Sabbath-school. For many years he has been commissioner to the Presbyterian General Assembly, and filled positions on important committees. He married, in 1866, Miss Dewar, a daughter of the late Mr. Plummer Dewar, of "Chedoke," Hamilton. In politics he is an independent Liberal. At the last general election, Mr. McMurrich contested West Toronto in his party's interest against James Beaty, Q.C., but was defeated, the vote standing 2.714 against 2.283. As a speaker, Mr. McMurrich is fluent, clear and forcible; and there is a grace about his way of stating a point that is not prevalent enough among our public speakers. It is a very safe piece of prophecy to put Mr.. William Barclay McMurrich down as a coming man. He joined the Queen's Own at the time of the Trent affair, and was a member of the company then known as the Victoria Rifles, under Captain Orde. He remained a member of that company for three years. He also passed through the Military school in Toronto, and attended the camp of cadets at Laprairie in 1864. He is now a captain of the Toronto Garrison Battery of Artillery, having been gazetted to the command in June, 1884. He was called out for active service on the 5th of April, 1885, and was stationed at the new fort, Toronto, being commandant for the time being of the force quartered there. He was relieved from duty on the 22nd June.

Perry, John Ham, Whitby, County Registrar of Ontario, was born on the 26th of April, 1827, Ernesttown, Lennox county, Ontario, and is a son of Peter Perry and Mary Ham. The Perry and the Ham fam. ilies left their properties on the Hudson river, N.Y., at the time of the American war (1776), and settled at Ernesttown, fifteen miles west of Kingston, and then an unbroken wilderness. Consequently his grand. parents on both sides are U. E. loyalists, and he has in his possession a $7 contin-ental currency bill brought over from the States by his grandfather, Robert Perry, Peter Perry, his father, represented Lennox and Addington with Marshall S. Bidwell, from 1828 to 1836. In 1836, he moved with his family to Whitby. He was provincial representative for the 3rd Riding of York, from 1849 to the time of his death, on the 24th of August, 1851. Peter Perry was first cousin to Commodore O. S. Perry, of Lake Erie fame. the war of 1812, Commodore Perry visited Robert Perry at his house in Ernesttown. The following estimate of the character of Peter Perry lies before us. In private, as well as in public, he lived an eminently useful life, being kind to the poor and a friend to everybody. His generosity was sometimes imposed upon, but he pre-ferred to "err on virtue's side," rather than ferred to "err on virtue's side, stop to enquire into the actual merits and demerits of every applicant's claim for aid. He held connection with no church, but was a liberal supporter of the gospel and of benevolent institutions. Iu short, his life was spent for the benefit of his neighbours, his constituents and his country, and he knew not what it was to tire in such noble work. John H. Perry received his education at the public schools and by private tuition. He was a lieutenant, in olden times, when the annual drill consisted of calling the roll, and treating the company, on the 20th of June in each year. In 1861 and 1862, the period of the Trent affair, he raised and drille three appoi Octob provi himse moter with first c attend month Whith tion. the or grand past g Grand been c den; of sixt with n lated o agains to do 1 ant am which widely minion to date observ: made a France devote land. June, 1 Her fat carried lena. in Whi of age, He wer tile and of his f

sive est Har on the Bidduly of John natives pioneer liam Ha the Chr. and con lege of t was und Father 8 Right R Mr. Har ber of tl he joine drilled a company at his own expense for three months, and then resigned. He was appointed registrar of Ontario county in October, 1853, and there are now but four provincial registrars longer in office than himself. Mr. Perry was the original promoter of the Whitby Railway, connecting with the Georgian Bay. He obtained the first charter in the spring of 1853, personally attending the house at Quebec for two Out of this scheme grew the Whitby and Lindsay Railway now in operation. He is an Oddfellow, having joined the order in November, 1871. He is a past grand master, past grand patriarch, and past grand representative to the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In municipal politics he has been councillor, reeve, mayor and county warden; and was in municipal office for a period of sixteen consecutive years, and was then with many other government officials legislated out (1867) by the disqualifying clauses against registrars, etc. Mr. Perry had much to do with putting into shape many important amendments to the municipal law, all of which are now in force. He has travelled widely on this continent, both in the Dominion and through the States, from 1845 to date; and he has made a wide range of observation by his travels. In 1857, he made a trip to England, Scotland, Ireland, France and Belgium. In religion he is devotedly attached to the Church of Eng-Mr. Perry married on the 1st of June, 1852, Jane Margaret Hall, of Quebec. Her father was cabin-boy on the ship that carried Napoleon from England to St. Helena. Our subject moved to, and settled in Whitby, in 1836, being then nine years of age, and there he has since remained. He went early with his father into mercantile and produce business; and at the death of his father, in 1851, wound up the exten-

hat

 \mathbf{ed}

nd

in

hto

en 84.

the

the

for

re.

 $_{\rm nd}$

th

ty, nd

m. on

en

n-

d-

he

ne ne 1.

Harty, William, Kingston, was born on the 8th March, 1847, in the township of Biddulph, County of Middlesex. He is a son of John Harty and Elizabeth Heenan, both natives of the County of Tipperary, and pioneers in the township of Biddulph. William Harty received his primary education at the Christian Brothers' school at Kingston, and completed his studies at Regiopolis College of the same city, when that institution was under the presidency of the late Rev. Father Stafford of Lindsay, Ontario, and the Right Rev. Dr. O'Brien, Bishop of Kingston. Mr. Harty has always been an active member of the Board of Trade of Kingston since he joined it in 1870. He was president of the board during the years 1873 and 1874, and a delegate to the Dominion Board of Trade during the same years. He attended the summer session of the latter board when held in August, 1874, in St. John, N. B., to consider the basis of the Reciprocity treaty negotiated by the Hon. George Brown with the United States Commission appointed for that purpose. He was a partner in the wholesale grocery firm of James Harty & Co. for a time; and upon the death of the senior member, in November, 1868, he succeeded to the complete control of the business, and carried on the same alone until January, 1878, when he retired, selling out to his brother-in-law, C. Bermingham. Mr. Harty was a director of the Kingston and Pembroke Railway, and a member of the executive committee of the board from the date of its re-organization in January, 1875, until 1879, when he retired. In politics, too, Mr. Harty has taken an active part. He has been a member of the Reform Asociation since 1872; was president of that body during the years 1879, 1880 and 1881, and upon his retirement was elected an honorary president, which position he still holds. In January, 1879, he was elected an alderman to represent Sydenham ward in the city council; was re-elected in 1880 by acclamation, but retired in 1881. He was presented with a requisition in 1885 from the ratepayers of the same ward asking that he would represent them again; and acceding to the request, he was elected at the head of the poll, and for 1886 he has been re-elected by acclamation. In religion Mr. Harty is a Roman catholic, having been born in that faith. He married, on the 4th October, 1870, Catherine Mary, daughter of James Bermingham, of Ottawa. His family by this union comprises two sons and one daughter, whose ages respectively are eleven, seven and four years. Mr. Harty took an active interest in organizing the company who are at present owners of the Canadian Locomotive and Engine Works; and since the date of the purchase, April 2nd, 1881, he has been managing director of that popular and important business. Representative Canadians are not those who make politics a trade, and by discreditable means scale their way into political power; but they are the substantial men, the fruits of whose enterprise and splendid business gifts remain for the profit of the community. Very fully we think, then, does the gentleman who forms the subject of this sketch answer to our definition of Representative Canadian.

Gardiner, Samuel Fleming, Chatham, Ontario, was born on December 25th. A.D., 1839, in the township of Mosa, County of Middlesex, within a mile of Gardiner's mills, on the river Thames. His father. James Gardiner, was one of the pioneer settlers in that part of the country, which was familiarly known as the Fleming settlement, and was born of Irish parentage, in Putnam county, New York state. His mother was Rebecca Fleming, and was born in the township of Aldboro', on the banks of the river Thames, her parents being Irish, with some German blood in their S. F. Gardiner's boyhood was spent mostly in attending school, and to that pernicious practice of sending young children to badly ventilated school-rooms, he attributes a want of proper muscular development, resulting in a delicate state of health that took many years to overcome. When about fifteen years of age he began to alternate from school life to working upon his father's farm and about the mills, adapting himself to these varied employments, and becoming an adept in them all. In 1858, after such preparation as the common school afforded, he was sent to Victoria College, Cobourg; but owing to circumstances over which he had no control in 1859, he was obliged to forego the intended college course, and give attention to the business about his father's mills, and taking charge of the post-office in the village of Cashmere. In the fall of 1860, he left his home, with a view of studying civil engineering in Chatham; but not being able to make suitable arrangements he proceeded to Detroit, Michigan, with the determination of obtaining a commercial training, and in order to accomplish this it became necessary for him to work in a large shoe store during the day, and study in the evenings in Bryant, Stratton and Goldsmith's Commercial Col-After a short time, disliking the lege. shoe business, he accepted a situation as shipping clerk in a large wholesale tobacco establishment. But this did not suit his tastes, and he soon procured a more congenial position as an assistant book-keeper, in a flour and grain commission house. He was soon promoted to the position of head bookkeeper, where he remained for three years, during which time his commercial college studies were pursued, until the course was well nigh completed. Having been offered a much more lucrative and responsible position as book-keeper in the extensive shipping and lumber business conducted by Fowler, Merick & Esselslyn, he accepted this and remained for four years with that firm, until his health began to In the winter of 1867, he started for a trip south for his health, visiting Chicago, St. Louis, Memphis, Vicksburg, New Orleans, Mobile, Atlanta, Augusta, Wilmington, Richmond, Baltimore, Washington, Philadelphia and Buffalo. Returning home, he led a quiet life until October, 1867, when he and his brother, W. E. Gardiner, embarked in the banking and exchange business in Chatham. In June, 1868, Mr. Gardiner married Mary Jane, daughter of Thos. Holmes, of Chatham. In 1869, he dissolved partnership with his brother, and carried on the banking and exchange business alone, until 1881, when he was appointed manager of the Chatham Loan Savings Co., which position he now From his earliest recollections, he has been identified with the temperance cause. In the fall of 1868, he was the subject of deep religious impressions, which resulted in conversion, and in his joining the Methodist church. He was soon appointed class-leader, trustee and superintendent of the Sunday school; but the latter position he found imposed too great a strain upon his health, and he declined the appointment after three years term; but he still continues his connection as a teacher in the Sabbath school. In politics, he has been a life-long Reformer, though not partisan enough to take a very active part further than to exercise the franchise on all occasions. During his life in Chatham, he has been actively connected with several church building enterprises.

Brown, Adam, Hamilton, was born at Edinburgh, Scotland, on the 3rd April, He is a son of William Brown, of Milntown, Langholm, Dumfriesshire, his mother being Elizabeth Johnston, of Berwickshire. The family emigrated in 1833, and settled in Montreal. Mr. Brown in his earliest years attended the celebrated school in Edinburgh taught by Mr. Adams, the author of "Adams' Grammar." Montreal he attended the school conducted by the Rev. Edward Black, D.D., the well-known minister of St. Paul's He left school at the age of Church. fourteen, and entered the establishment of A. Laurie & Co., dry-goods merchants, of After a few years service there Montreal. he entered the employment of Robert Campbell, but soon afterwards was successful in obtaining a position as junior clerk in the firm of Gillespie, Moffatt & Co., of Montreal. He was advanced from one position to another in the house, during the seven years that h Innes Brown firm in left M Hamil D. Mc offered cery ho he was in the he bed Brown. P. McL busines being r Co. M Mercan real, an was vic his new that ass founder a debati member been in come m now occ tawa. took an 1848 he presiden is now ! street, l large hal connecti Brown speaker. gained b doubt du which n young m sign in late Hon arrival i the Han retired w been co With rea it may and presi president and the ident, m national was con works; a Prince of turned

likewise

that he was in their employ. Donald Mc-Innes (now Senator McInnes), offered Mr. Brown a position of responsibility in his firm in Hamilton, which he accepted, and left Montreal in the winter of 1850 for Hamilton. After spending some time with D. McInnes & Co., the late W. P. McLaren offered him a position in his wholesale grocery house, which he accepted. Soon after he was admitted as a partner, and continued in the firm until Mr. McLaren retired, when he became the principal of the firm of Brown, Gillespie & Co., who succeeded W. P. McLaren & Co.; and has continued the business under different partnerships since, being now the head of Brown, Balfour & Co. Mr. Brown was connected with the Mercantile Library Association of Montreal, and at the time of his leaving that city was vice-president; and carried with him to his new home a letter of commendation from that association. He was one of the original founders in Montreal of the Athenæum Club, a debating society which counted among its members many young men who have since been in parliament, and some who have become ministers of the crown, and others now occupying very high positions at Ottawa. While yet a young man, Mr. Brown took an active part in the debates; and in 1848 he delivered the inaugural address as president. The society had rooms in what is now Nordheimer's Hall, Great St. James street, Montreal, and on public nights the large hall used to be crowded. It was in connection with this society that Mr. Brown first tested his powers as a public To the strength and readiness gained by taking part in its debates, are no doubt due the fluent and polished qualities which mark his public speeches. young man, he received a commission as ensign in the militia regiment of which the late Hon. George Moffatt was colonel. On his arrival in Hamilton, he was exchanged to the Hamilton battalion, and subsequently retired with the rank of major. He has never been connected with the active militia. With respect to Mr. Brown's public offices, it may be said that he has been secretary and president of the Board of Trade; was president of the Dominion Board of Trade; and the year previous to his election as president, moved the resolution approving the national policy, which was carried. He was commissioner and chairman of water works; and presented the address to the Prince of Wales when His Royal Highness turned the water on to the city. He has likewise been president of the Wellington,

g

Grey and Bruce Railway. Mr. Brown was president of the Northern and Pacific Junction Railway, connecting Ontario with the Canadian Pacific Railway, until the same was leased to the Northern and Northwestern Railway. He is now a director of the Northern and Pacific Junction road, and was on the first train which ran over the road, on the 28th of January, 1886, connecting Ontario with the Pacific Ocean. He likewise is a director of the Great North-Western Telegraph Company; is a trustee for the bondholders of the Wellington, Grey and Bruce Railway; was vice-president of the St. Andrew's Society; and chief of the Caledonian Society; and has lent a helping hand to many a Scotchman arriving in distress. He was appointed vice-consul for the kingdom of Hawaii in 1884. In politics Mr. Brown is a staunch Conservative. for Hamilton for the Local Legislature. He was elected president of the Conservative Association, and still continues his connection with that organization. He was originally a Presbyterian, but for the last thirty years has been a member of the Church of He has been a delegate to the diocesan and provincial synods ever since both were organized. Mr. Brown was married, in 1852, to Maria Z. Evatt, second daughter of the late Captain Evatt. His second marriage was in 1862, to Mary Kough, eldest daughter of the late Thomas Harley Kough, of Shrewsbury, England. There are four sons living by the first marriage, and three sons and two daughters by the second marriage. Mr. Brown is a ready, careful, comprehensive, and exceedingly effective speaker. His speech in advocacy of the national policy before the Dominion Board of Trade was an exceedingly able deliverance, and attracted considerable attention, and was published in pamphlet form. His oratorical ability was further shown in his inaugural address when he became president of the Dominion Board of Trade. In 1878 he addressed the great Conservative Convention at Shaftesbury Hall, Toronto, and his speech was regarded as one of the most exhaustive and telling utterances on that important occasion. It will be remembered that at the commencement of the American civil war, the American government prohibited the export of live hogs, which embargo would have the effect of killing the packing trade at Hamilton. Mr. Brown was dispatched to Washington to confer with the authorities there, with a view to rescinding the order; and with such force and tact did he present the case, that the decree was cancelled. In 1865, Mr. Brown visited England, and was the first merchant who introduced Canadian cheese, as Canadian, into the British market. It had been sent there before, but under State of New York names. The trade has since grown to gigantic proportions. In 1882 he. in company with a number of gentlemen from the United Kingdom, visited the North-West, and his notes of travel were published. His enthusiasm for the development of that country, and his opinion of its great future, are well known through his public utterances. Ever since his arrival in Hamilton, Mr. Brown's manifold activities have been felt in all the public enterprises in which the city was concerned. With the devotion of enthusiasm, he has come to the front whenever and wherever the city's interests were to be served. When the project of constructing the Wellington, Grey and Bruce Railway was revived in 1866, Mr. Brown was, as we have seen, elected president of the company. For four years his time was almost exclusively devoted to the promotion of the project. These were probably the four years of the hardest work of Mr. Brown's life, and the result of his labours was the most valuable service to the city and the country served by these railways. This is not the place to give even a sketch of the novel contest between Toronto and Hamilton, which ended in the construction of the Wellington, Grey and Bruce Railway. It will serve the purpose in hand to say that for its construction it was necessary to obtain bonuses from the municipalities along the line of route from Guelph to Southampton, and that every bylaw for that purpose was fiercely opposed by Toronto, which desired bonuses from the same municipalities for her own line. Mr. Brown gathered around him a band of men in Hamilton, and throughout the districts affected, whom he inspired with his own enthusiasm, and who felt unbounded confidence in his leadership. Mr. Thomas White, now the honourable the minister of the Interior, united with Mr. Brown in the fierce battle of the gauges, and roused the people by his magnetic elequence and convincing addresses. Every side line was penetrated by canvassers, and in every school-house meetings were held at which the subject was discussed. The result of the long contest was that all the bonuses necessary for the construction of the road were voted, and more than the most sanguine hopes of its promoters at first were finally realized. A large and fertile territory was opened up to railway communication, and the commercial po sition of the City of Hamilton was saved from disaster. It is not awarding too much credit to Mr. Brown, to say that it is mainly to the confidence with which he inspired the people of the counties interested, and the ability with which he conducted the campaign, that this result is due. Though the fight with the Toronto men was keen, and in its details sometimes bitter, it left no rankling feeling of animosity behind. Each side recognized that its opponents were engaged in a perfectly legitimate contest from their own point of view. With all the cares of a large business to engross his attention, Mr. Brown has always found time to interest himself in whatever was for the good, not only of Hamilton, but of the Dominion. He took an active interest in organizing the Hamilton Coffee Tavern Company, of which he is president. Mr. Brown is a gentleman of the most genial manners, full of good humour, and free from all affectation. His companionship is much prized by all who are admitted to its privileges. Macdonell, George, Cornwall, was born in 1824, in Inverness-shire, Scotland, and is a son of Angus Macdonell and Ann Stewart, both natives of the above county. There were twelve sons born to this worthy couple, and George was the youngest. The family came to Canada in 1827, George then being about three years of age, and settled in the township of Kenyon, in the County of Glengarry, where Angus Macdonell took up lands. Here he erected a homestead, which he occupied until his death, which took place in 1847. George Macdonell attended the township school, and afterwards that at the village of Alexandria, in Glengarry. About the date of his leaving school (1843), the Beauharnois Canal was being constructed, and he received the appointment of timekeeper, and afterwards that of foreman on these works. After the completion of this canal Mr. Macdonell managed a store at Athol for A. F. Macdonald, where he continued for three years, acquiring in that period a considerable knowledge of mercantile life. He subsequently purchased the business, and carried it on for himself, and in addition went into the manufacture of pearl ash, saw-milling, lumber dealing and farming. These various branches he successfully operated until 1866, when he sold out, and then moved to the Glen farm, in Williamstown. Here he resided until 1868, when he removed to Cornwall. Here he commenced business as a general merchant, and he soon built up a large and he was field M himsel vative and 18 Kenyo vivid He ha militar lieuten ceeded late J. wall m is also of Corr Mr. Ma on Apr onel J Glenga one da wife, h is still with hi the you busines was ap held th on reli In Dec master respons Roman of that views preside Cornwa by his lifetime the latt fidant. is still Canadi of usefi

prospe

condu

deep

AVET

of the

he hel

he w counti

garry,

retired

tinued

to the

Shar South G "The A Ireland a memb prosperous establishment, which he still conducts. Mr. Macdonell always took a deep interest in municipal matters wher-He was elected reeve ever he resided. of the township of Roxborough, which office he held for twelve successive years; and he was appointed warden of the united counties of Dundas, Stormont and Glengarry, by acclamation, in 1860. When he retired from that position, he still continued a member of the county council, up to the close of 1869. In his earlier career, he was a supporter of the Hon. John Sandfield Macdonald, but he subsequently allied himself more particularly with the Conservative party. In the troubles of 1837 and 1838, Mr. Macdonell served in the Kenyon battalion of militia, and has a vivid recollection of those stirring times He has always continued his interest in military matters, having been successively lieutenant, captain and major; and he succeeded in the lieutenant-colonelcy to the late J. Sandfield Macdonald, of the Cornwall militia, which rank he now holds. is also associated with the Rifle Association of Cornwall, of which he is now president. Mr. Macdonell has been married twice; first on April 8th, 1861, to Ellen, daughter of Colonel James Macdonald, of Williamstown, Glengarry, by whom he had two sons and one daughter. After the death of his first wife, he married Mrs. C. M. Mulhern, who is still living. The eldest son is engaged with his father in mercantile pursuits, and the younger is attending school. While in business at Athol in 1862, Mr. Macdonell was appointed postmaster of that place, and held the office until 1866, when he resigned on relinquishing his other business there. In December, 1870, he was appointed postmaster at Cornwall, and still holds that responsible position. Mr. Macdonell is a Roman catholic, and as usual with members of that communion, has not changed his views much on religious subjects. He is president of the St. Andrew's Society of Cornwall, and is held in the highest esteem by his fellow citizens. He was, during the lifetime of the late J. Sandfield Macdonald, the latter's intimate friend and trusted confidant. Endowed with a good physique, he is still a splendid specimen of the Scotch Canadian, and bids fair to have many years of usefulness still before him.

Shanly, Walter, Montreal, M.P. for South Grenville, was born at the family seat, "The Abbey," Stradbally, Queen's county, Ireland, and is son of the late James Shanly, a member of the Irish bar, who emigrated to Canada about the time of the rebellion, and settled in the County of Middlesex, Ontario. The Shanly family is a very old and prominent one in the annals of Leitrim, and it is distinctively Celtic. Walter Shanly was educated by private tuition, and when his studies were sufficiently advanced, he began to prepare himself for the profession of civil engineering. From 1843 to 1858 he was resident engineer under the Board of Works on the Beauharnois and Welland canals; was engineer of the Ottawa and Prescott Railway from 1851 to 1854; was engineer of the Western Division of the Grand Trunk Railway, from Toronto to Sarnia, from 1851 to 1857; engineer of the Ottawa and French River surveys from 1856 to 1858, and general manager of the Grand Trunk Railway from 1858 to 1862. He has been, and is still, connected with divers large enterprises in presidential and directorial capacities. The greatest achievement of his professional career was the construction of the Hoosac Mountain Tunnel, Massachusetts, in which important enterprise he was assisted by his brother, the late Francis Shanly, a gentleman who shared the abilities of the family. Mr. Shanly's Mr. Shanly's first connection with public life was in 1863, when he entered the old parliament of Canada for South Grenville constituency, which he continued to represent until 1872. In 1885 he was again elected, and by acclamation, to the House of Commons for South Grenville. Mr. Shanly has always supported the Conservative party, but has not allowed himself to be contaminated by the party bigotry of the time, though true as steel to his own principles.

Smith, Charles Merrill, M.D., M.C., M.C.P.S., Orangeville, was born in South Dumfries, County of Brant, Ontario, on the 18th of January, 1818. He is a son of the Rev. William Smith, a Baptist minister and also a medical practitioner, who died at Brookholm, in the County of Grey, in the year 1884. Charles Merrill Smith received his early educational training in St. George public school, and afterwards entered Toronto University. Here he distinguished himself by industry and much brilliancy. He entered the Toronto School of Medicine in 1866, and graduated therefrom in 1870, and was awarded silver medal for general proficiency. Having completed his studies, he began practice at Owen Sound, where he continued till his removal to Orangeville in 1879. At the latter place he has since remained; and the kindliness of his manners, and his repute as a thoroughly competent physician, have so far acted in his behalf, that he is now prosperously established. The promise that he displayed as a student, it is not flattery to say, has been well borne out in the practical tests of his life. Dr. Smith is a P.G. in the Canadian order of Oddfellows, and is past master in the A.O. U. W., No. 156, Orangeville. In religion he adheres to the Baptist faith. In 1873 he married Sarah E., daughter of Joel Edmunds, of the township of Holland, in the County of Grey.

Skinner, James Atchison, Hamilton, ex-M.P., Lieutenant-Colonel commanding 13th Battalion of V. M., is a native of the Royal burgh of Tain, Rossshire, Scotland, was born there on the 26th October, 1826. He is a son of Hugh Ross Skinner and Mary Fraser McPherson, both of whom came to Canada in 1861. His father died at Hamilton in 1865, and his mother, now in her 86th year, resides in Winnipeg, with her youngest daughter, the wife of the Rev. Dr. John M. King, principal of the Presbyterian college, Manitoba. Hugh Ross Skinner was a saddler, to which trade he served a seven years' apprenticeship, on the expiry of which he went to London, where he resided for several years. On his return to the Highlands, being born freeman of the burgh, he began business on his own account, and shortly afterwards established a branch in Sutherlandshire, at that time there being no one of his trade in that county. He continued in business until his removal to Canada. He had the honour of being appointed saddler and harness maker to her Majesty the Queen, and for many years supplied what was required for the home farm at Windsor. James A. Skinner was educated at the Tain Royal academy and afterwards at the Grammar school, where the usual English branches as well as the rudiments of Latin and Greek were taught. He came to Canada in 1843 having been nearly three months on board He stayed with his uncle, Col. Alex. McPherson of Whitby, until the fall of that year, when he obtained employment in the wholesale dry goods firm of Kennedy, Parker & Co. of Hamilton, with whom he remained until 1850, when in connection with his younger brother, the late Andrew Fraser Skinner, he commenced business as importers and wholesale dealers in earthenware, &c. This business he still carries on under the management of one of his sons who was taken into partnership after the death of his uncle. The business done for many years was confined to the western peninsula; but it grew with the country until now the customers, of James A. Skinner & Co. are to be found all over the Dominion from one ocean to the other; and the house has the honour of being the pioneer of its particular branch of trade in Manitoba, the North-West territories, and British Columbia. On the first organization of the volunteer force in 1855, Mr. Skinner joined No. 2 company, Hamilton, as a private, and remained in connection with the same until the formation of a Highland company, in 1856, to which he was appointed ensign. This company was subsequently disbanded. On the occurrence of the Trent affair he raised a new company of 65 men, to which he was gazetted captain, his brother being next in command. This company was clothed in full Highland dress at Capt. Skinner's own expense. Being on class B, and consequently receiving no pay, he, on the visit of the Prince of Wales to Hamilton, turned out more men for duty during the three days, than the other two companies combined, although under pay. He remained in command of the Highland company until the formation of the 13th battalion in 1862, to which he was appointed senior major, the late Hon. Isaac Buchanan being lieutenant-colonel. In 1863 he commanded the battalion at Brantford, where General Napier reviewed a force of 1,000 regulars, 2,300 volunteers and about 200 Indians. In 1866 Major Skinner was present with the battalion at the engagement with the Fenians at Limeridge, Col. Booker being in command, he having been gazetted vice Col. Buchanan, retired. Shortly after meeting the enemy, the Queen's Own being in front, Major Skinner was ordered to advance with the right wing of the 13th and relieve skirmishers, which he did; and when the bugle sounded the retire he was engaged with the enemy, having taken possession of the barricades which they had put up, and in the orchard in front, the Fenians having retired to the bush beyond. On reaching the place where the main body had formed square, it was found to have entirely disappeared. Major Skinner found several wounded men on the road, and had them placed on doors and carried to the village of Ridgeway, where he learned that the main body of the troops had taken the road for Port Colborne. He remained for about an hour in the village caring for the wounded, and then with about sixty men took the road for the port, at which he arrived about 6 o'clock. On the following day he received orders to

tak

ma

wh

we

me

gaz

the

at t

bri

the

ma

and

can

cess

his

brig

ent aug

alw

edu

rifle

Tore

ciat

offic

atte

first

whe

corp

at tl

tion

rifle

ite f

don

while

after

had

tario

mon

blede

peare

atter

Seeir

vate

have

senti:

pense

repre

Dom

was c

1882.

High!

West

Socie

of sec

presid

ĥe ha

tario .

counc

In 18

zation

take command of the 13th battalion, and remain in Port Colborne to guard the canal, which very arduous duty lasted for three weeks. Shortly after the return of the regiment to Hamilton, Major Skinner was gazetted lieutenant-colonel. In the fall of the same year he commanded the battalion at the Thorold camp, Col. Woolsey being brigadier. In 1870 he went into camp with the battalion at Grimbsy. In 1872 he commanded the 2nd brigade in camp at Niagara, and in 1874 he again commanded the brigade camp at Niagara. On the visit of the Princess Louise to Toronto he was present with his battalion, and commanded one of the brigades at the review. He was also present with the Highland company at the inauguration of Brock's monument. Having always taken the greatest interest in the education of the volunteers in the use of the rifle, he attended the first meeting held in Toronto to organize the Ontario Rifle Association, and for many years acted in an official capacity at its matches. He likewise attended with a team of twelve men at the first Dominion rifle match held at Laprairie, where he was placed in command of the corps on duty during the meeting. In 1870, at the request of the Ontario Rifle Association, he undertook to organize a team of riflemen, and also to find the money requisite for the passage of the men to Wimbledon and return, and for their subsistence while there. This he succeeded in doing after about six months hard work, having had to travel the length and breadth of Ontario three times in search of the men and money. He took twenty-one men to Wimbledon, and being the first team that appeared there from any colony, it drew great attention to Canada, and did much good. Seeing what could be accomplished by private enterprise, the Dominion government have since then annually sent a team representing all the provinces, and paid its expenses. In 1874 Col. Skinner was elected to represent the riding of South Oxford in the Dominion parliament, and again in 1878; but was defeated at the last general elections in In 1845 he assisted to organize the Highland Society of Hamilton and Canada West, holding charter from the Highland Society of London. He has filled the offices of secretary and president, and also that of president of the Highland Society of Embro; he has also been vice-president of the Ontario Rifle Association, and member of the council of the Dominion Rifle Association. In 1852 he acted as secretary of an organization, got up with a view to securing a half

he nd

he

in

nd

za-

ĺr.

as

th

nd

 $_{
m ed}$

ly

nt

to

er

as

n-

hd

he

es e-

ed

in

e t

holiday on Saturdays for men employed in wholesale warehouses, which eventually succeeded in its object. Col. Skinner was born a Presbyterian, and still worships with that denomination; and whatever change his religious views may have undergone no one but himself knows. He married on the 24th July, 1849, Agnes Johnston, a native of Dumfriesshire, Scotland, and second daughter of Robert Johnston, of Annandale. There was a family of six sons and two daughters; five sons still live, two of whom graduated at the Royal Military college and are now in the Imperial service, Frederick St. Duthus being lieutenant in the 2nd battalion Royal Sussex regiment; and Thomas Carlyle, lieutenant in the Royal en-The other three are in business in this country. Being fond of country life, in 1862 Col. Skinner purchased the former residence of John G. Vansittart, a beautiful spot on the south bank of the Thames, three miles west of Woodstock, which he named Dunelg, and here he has resided ever since.

Marling, Alexander, LL. B., Secretary of the Provincial Education department for Ontario, Toronto, was born at Ebley, Gloucestershire, England, on the 11th April, He is the youngest son of the late John F. Marling, who, like his father and four brothers, was a cloth manufacturer, and for many years conducted the mills at Ebley, which were continued after his emigration by the firm of his younger brother, the late Sir Samuel Marling, bart., M. P. (Liberal) for West Gloucestershire. Mr. Marling was an able man of business and took an active part in the religious, ph lanthropic and political movements in his neighborhood. He came to Canada in 1842, with his wife (the daughter of Malcolm McFarlane, of Inverness, and afterwards of Stroud), and their family, consisting of a daughter, deceased in 1848, and five sons. Of these the eldest is the provincial manager of the Canada Life Assurance Company, for Quebec; the second, the pastor of a Presbyterian congregation in New York; the third is a resident of Chicago; and the fourth was for several years a High school master, after a brilliant university career, and afterwards held the position of High school inspector till his death, in 1882. Their father died in Toronto, on the 4th November, 1869; their mother still survives. Alexander Marling, with his brother Arthur, was educated at Upper Canada College, and was then placed for five years in a mercantile house in Toronto. In 1854 he entered the Education department, under Dr. Ryerson, and in 1858-succeeded Thomas Hodgins as chief clerk. He was entered, after examination, as a student and member of the Law Society, but his official duties did not allow his advance to the bar. He, however, proceeded to the degree of LL.B. in the University of Toronto. Mr. Marling joined the volunteer force at the time of the Trent affair, and was for some years a member of the Victoria rifles, and of the Queen's Own regiment from the formation of the battalion. He also passed through the military school under H. M. 47th regiment, and received the second class or captain's certificate. On the appointment of the Hon. Adam Crooks as first minister of Education, Mr. Marling was commissioned as secretary of the department, in the work of which he had gained a long and practical experience. He is editor of the Canada Educational Year Book-a neat and skilful compilation of information respecting the educational system and personnel in each province of the Dominion, and we understand that he intends to continue the periodical publication of this excellent volume. He is a member of the Anglican church and synod, and an advocate of efficient religious instruction so far as it can be practically introduced, whether in private, public or Sunday schools. In 1859 he married Julia, daughter of the late H. Hewlett, and has three surviving children. He was left a widower in 1878.

Cassils, William, Montreal, was born at Denny, Stirlingshire, Scotland, on the 25th of June, 1832, being the eldest son of John Cassils and Margaret Murray. The family removed in 1835 to Renton, a village in the vale of Leven, Dumbartonshire, where his boyhood was spent, and where in the parochial school he was educated in such branches as were then taught in that institution. Having relatives in Canada who urged that he should proceed thither, he sailed from Glasgow in the barque Euclid on April 5th, 1851, arriving at Quebec in the first week of On reaching Montreal a couple of days later, and hearing that a young man was wanted to learn operating in the office of the Montreal Telegraph Company, he applied for the situation and was accepted. The company was then in its infancy; it owned a single line extending along the highway from Toronto to Quebec, and had fourteen offices in all, between these two points. In November, 1853, Mr. Cassils took charge of the Quebec office, and three years later, the company having acquired the lines of the British American Telegraph Co., was appointed eastern divisional superintendent. On the 11th June, 1856, he married Agnes Simpson, daughter of the late William Hossack of Quebec. Resigning the position of telegraph superintendent in November, 1866, Mr. Cassils removed to Montreal, becoming a member of a commercial firm, from which he retired ten years later. While a resident of Quebec Mr. Cassels commanded the esteem of a wide circle of acquaintances, and in addition to active participation in church and charitable work, was chosen secretary-treasurer of the board of Protestant School Commissioners of that city, which position he held during several years. Shortly after retiring from the wholesale trade in Montreal, he became president of the Canada Central Railway Co., which position he retained for three or four years, until 1881, when the line became part of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company's system. His careful and methodical habits of business becoming known, his services were in request by other public companies. He subsequently became Receiver of the St. Lawrence and Ottawa Railway Company, and now occupies the presidency of the following: the Dominion Transport Company, limited; (the cartage agents of the Canadian Pacific railway company) the Canadian District Telegraph Company, limited; and of the Electro-Mechanical Clock Company, limited. He is also, we believe, vice-president of the British American Ranche company, limited: and director of the Montreal Herald printing and publishing company, limited. By no means least in importance of the positions held by Mr. Cassils in connection with public companies is his directorship in the Montreal Telegraph Company, which has 1680 offices and 30,000 miles of wire scattered over Ontario, Quebec and New Brunswick, as well as over large parts of Vermont and New York and touching Michigan. His fifteen years of experience in the early days of telegraphy, form an interesting chapter in his life. Thirty-three years ago, before the time of submarine cables, the wires were stretched across the St. Lawrence, near Montreal; in summer, masts 210 feet high being set on either shore, while in winter they were strung on poles stuck in the ice. There were but fourteen offices in the five hundred miles between Quebec and Toronto, and telegram from the latter city to Montreal cost 3s. 9d. currency. The modes of transmission, such as the Bain and the House systems, as well as the more successful Morse system, had not then passed the

e w gH e c d m

n

ir

O)

m in

a

re

m te th

as

a

lo

at

fr

st

la

ot

eig

80

of

th

at

pr

ou

po

in

th

qu

th

tar

Fe

Gr

the

ger Br:

bu

sta

183

He

Th

and

Yo

ma

sch

in

of t

Mr

cle.

experimental stage, while the instruments were clumsy, and measured by the progress of to-day, ineffective and slow. Having been a practical telegrapher, however, "in the day of small things," electrically considered, and having watched the development of the science to its present marvelous stage, the experience and technical knowledge of the man we are describing proves of decided service in his capacity of director to-day. "To be a well-favoured man is the gift of fortune," says the clown in the play, words which are hardly less absurd than the rest of the sentence, readin' and writin' comes by natur." A man's pleasant looks are far more a matter of disposition, surroundings and descent, than of chance. In temperament as well as in appearance Mr. Cassils is perceptibly a debtor to his parents, who were both good looking; the father being fine-featured and athletic, the mother (who still survives) fresh and douce. Both were of the spirited, sterling, God-fearing people of whom Scotland has furnished so many to this and Their sons and daughters, other lands. eight in number, are all in Canada; the five sons are among the respected business men of Montreal, and several of them besides the eldest, whom we are describing, have attained positions of responsibility and prominence in that great city. To be called "a popular man" is sometimes an ambiguous compliment. In Mr. Cassils' case, the popularity enjoyed is founded rather upon integrity, geniality and quiet discernment than upon more showy but less admirable qualities.

ent.

nes

iam

tion

ber,

be-

nn.

ter. sels

e of

ive

rk, ard

hat

eral

the

me

vay

or

me

mical

er-

m-

ver

yay

icy ort

of

he

m-bck

ve,

sh-

ies ph 00

ıe-

er

ed

Greet, Thomas Young, Manager of the Federal Bank of Canada, Kingston, Ontario, was born at Guelph, on the 10th of February, 1846. His father, Richard Greet, belonged to an old Kentish family, the male representatives of which have for generations back figured numerously in the British navy. He came to Canada in 1835, but went back to England after a short stay. He returned to Canada, however, in 1839, and settled on a farm near Guelph. He married Mary, daughter of the late Thomas Sandilands, of Guelph, merchant, and agent of the Gore Bank. Young Greet was the third child born of this marriage. He was educated at the common schools and at the district Grammar school in Guelph, and in 1860 entered the service of the old Gore Bank under his grandfather, Mr. Sandilands. In 1867 he, with his uncle, George W. Sandilands, at present manager of the Central Bank, Guelph, left the service of the Gore Bank and joined the Canadian Bank of Commerce, the Guelph branch of which was opened by them on the 2nd January, 1868. In 1870 Mr. Greet was called to the head office of the bank in Toronto, and in July of the same year he was sent to open a branch of the bank in Orangeville, a village at that time just coming into prominent notice on account of the building of the Toronto, Grey and Bruce Railway. He remained there as manager of the Bank of Commerce until December, 1874, when he resigned the position, and returned to his native town to open a branch of the Federal Bank of Canada. He successfully managed this branch until 1880, when he was moved to the Kingston branch. where he is still. He was made a Mason in 1868, in Speed lodge, Guelph, and afterwards affiliated with Harris lodge, Orangeville, of which he was elected W.M. in 1873. At the time of writing he is first vice-president of the Kingston St. George's Society. Mr. Greet is a member of the Church of England. In 1877 he married Helena Emily, daughter of Josias Bray, of Hamilton, who was at that time residing in Walkerton, Ontario.

O'Brien, Michael Edward, Prescott, was born in the town of Perth, County of Lanark, on 10th July, 1849. He is a son of William O'Brien and Susan Devlin, the former being born in the County of Wexford, Ireland. He came with his father and family to Canada in 1821, and settled in the County of Lanark. He was a shoemaker by trade, and for many years carried on an extensive boot and shoe business in the town of Perth. He is still living. Susan Devlin was the daughter of Michael Devlin, a farmer in the township of Drummond, County of Lanark. She died in March, 1855. M. E. O'Brien was educated at the separate school, in Perth, and completed his studies in Regiopolis college, Kingston. In November 17th, 1869, he entered the legal profession, and studied with Morris and Raddenhurst, in Perth, and afterwards in the office of John Bain, in Toronto. He was admitted to practice in Michaelmas term, 1874. He went to Prescott in June, 1875, and succeeded Fraser & Moorey, and has since remained in Prescott. In politics, Mr. O'Brien is a Liberal, and he has been president of the South Grenville Reform Association for the past five years. Mr. O'Brien married, on the 18th April, 1877, Annie Eliza, second daughter of Michael Flanagan, the present city clerk of Kingston, Ont. There are three boys by this union.

Mills, Hon. David, LL.B., Palmyra, M.P. for Bothwell, and ex-Minister of the Interior for Canada, and son of Nathaniel Mills, was born in the township of Oxford, in the County of Kent, Ontario, on the 18th March, 1831. His father was a native of New York state, having been born near New York city 1791; and his mother was Mary Guggerty, of Coote Hill, County Cavan, Ireland, she being the second wife of Nathaniel Mills. The first wife was Rebecca, daughter of Captain Harrison, of Upper Maccan, Cumberland county, Nova Scotia. In 1833 the family removed to Nova Scotia, where Mr. Mills' father remained until 1817, when along with many others of his acquaintance he emigrated to the western part of Upper Canada, and became a resident of Talbot street, in the township of Orford, in 1819, where he continued to reside until his death in 1860. Mr. Mills attended the public school near by, after which he had as a private tutor a well-known author and scholar. the Rev. Dr. Frey. He subsequently became a student at the Michigan University, and received from that institution the degree of LL.B. In 1856 Mr. Mills was appointed superintendent of schools for the county of Kent, which office he held for nine years. In 1867 he received the unanimous nomination of the Reform electors of Bothwell as their candidate for election to the House of Commons, and was returned to parliament in September of that year. He has represented Bothwell continuously since that period. In 1872 he was requested by the government of Ontario to enquire into and report upon the boundaries of Ontario. This task he was asked to undertake as it was known that he had given much attention to the colonial history of North America. This work Mr. Mills undertook, and he made a report to the government in December of the same year. The report then made contains a large quantity of valuable information relating to colonial history and Imperial policy in reference to the government of the British dominions in North America. Mr. Mills informed the government that his investigations had not exhausted the subject, and further enquiry should be had in London and Paris. Further enquiry was had, and after arbitration was agreed upon, Mr. Mowat again invited Mr. Mills to make further enquiry, and to prepare a second re-This was done in 1875 and the early port. part of 1876, and a second report made containing the results of a more extended enquiry, and references to the various documents and state papers upon which the conclusions in the report were founded. 1875 Mr. Mills was elected by the public school inspectors of the province as their representative on the Board of Public Instruction. Not long after, the school law was amended, and the board abolished. Upon the appointment of the Hon. D. Laird to the governorship of the North West territories, Mr. Mills was offered by Mr. Mackenzie a seat in his government, and the department of the Interior, which he accepted. Mr. Mills held the office until October, 1878 -a period of two years-when he resigned with the ministry. After the fall of the Mackenzie administration, Mr. Mills concluded to engage in the practice of law, for which he had read many years before. He entered as a student-at-law in the books of the Law Society, and after taking the examinations as time permitted, was called to the bar. He has during the past two years been engaged in practice. He has also, since 1882. been the chief editorial writer upon the London daily Advertiser. In politics Mr. Mills is an advanced Liberal. He favoured the union of the provinces, but was wholly opposed to the means by which it was brought about. He denied that an ordinary parliament is morally competent to make changes in the constitution altering the relations of the people to parliament without the sanction of the country being first obtained. It is, he holds, only by such an appeal that the people can be secure in their liberties against the intrigues of unscrupulous and ambitions men. Mr. Mills has always favoured such an amendment of the constitution as would secure to each province the appointment of its own judiciary. He did not favour the admission of British Columbia into the Canadian confederacy at the time it was admitted; for he thought it was not for the interest of either that such a union should exist, while there was such an immense extent of country still between un-He believed that the reinhabited. sources of the country could be better employed in developing the North-West than in building a transcontinental road which would always be without transcontinental traffic, and for a great part of the distance without local traffic for many years to come. He regarded such a railway as going but a short way in opening up the North-West to settlement, and as entailing burdens altogether outweighing any advantage which it could confer. Mr. Mills holds that the advantage which a railway system can confer, depends upon the benefits it bestows upon the gene

whe

the

and

The comp

own

traffi

those

cerne

polic

by th

now

Mills

ated

he co

syster

repre

respon

politi

istry

He fa

tion se

ators

tribut

bill of

menta ment ;

motive

these

litical

Mexica

power

official

tends,

duty, a

and mu

taken

abuses. econom

He adi

sary, in

but he

sound s

so that

pay a la

ernment

he clair policy;

a nation

He favo

principle

commerc

ought to

commerc

He is op

legislatio now don

practice

The shortest lines must the producer. generally be the cheapest and the best, where there is no monopoly. The lower the freights the higher the value of land, and the greater the stimulus to agriculture. The North-West should have been open to competition so long as government did not own the road. It is not the direction that traffic takes about which the settlers and those who represent them need be concerned, and in his opinion a wiser railway policy would have secured to the country by this time 150,000 more people than are now to be found in our territories. Mr. Mills has always been opposed to a nominated senate. A nominated legislative body, he contends, ought to have no place in our system of government. Such a chamber represents nobody, is without any sense of responsibility, and must become a refuge of political partizans too devoted to the ministry to retain the confidence of the people. He favours an amendment of the constitution so as to provide for the election of senators. He holds that the bill for the redistribution of seats in 1882, and the franchise bill of 1885, are at variance with the fundamental principles of representative government; that the principles involved, and the motives which impelled the promoters of these measures are on a level with the political aims of those South American and Mexican chiefs, who make the retention of power the principal end and aim of all their These measures, he conofficial actions. tends, originated in the violation of public duty, and in the betrayal of public trusts and must be repealed, and proper guarantees taken against the recurrence of similar abuses. Mr. Mills, likewise, holds to the economic doctrines of Gladstone and Bright. He admits that customs duties are necessary, in order to the production of revenue; but he holds that respect must be had to a sound system of finance in their imposition, so that the people may not be compelled to pay a large amount of tax which the government does not receive. He is in favor, he claims, of a real, not a sham national policy; a national policy which will develop a national spirit, and national aspirations. He favours a national policy based upon principles of commercial extension, not of commercial exclusion. He thinks Canada ought to make, regulate and control her commercial relations with foreign states. He is opposed to handing over the work of legislation to the ministry as, he affirms, is now done at Ottawa. He is opposed to the practice of abdicating the duty of effective supervision over the national expenditures. He does not regard a large public debt as a national blessing. He thinks that care and economy in the expenditure of public money, and a desire to do what is honest and fair on the part of representatives; that habits of self-reliance, personal independence, and a sense of justice, stronger than allegiance to party on the part of the people, of immeasurably greater consequence in promoting the honor and prosperity of Canada, than the antiquated nostrums of some of our politicians, who, he points out, propose to increase the wealth of the people and to invite immigration, by high taxes, an enormous public debt, a reckless public expenditure, and costly public works, built in uninhabited and uninhabitable regions. As minister of the Interior Mr. Mills was most capable; and there is no man in public life in Canada to-day who has a wider and more accurate knowledge of affairs in the territories than he. He is one of the ablest parliamentary debaters in the country, and we have no public man who can excel him in the mastery and presentation of a large question. About him there is nothing superficial, or anything designed for the purpose of "flash" or show; but he deals with important questions only after the most careful consideration, and nearly always in a calm and judicial spirit. There are occasions, however, upon which he allows himself to grow exasperated, and then his remarks are very severe. When parliament at a late session was discussing the question of general suffrage, Mr. Mills enquired of the prime minister whether he intended extending the vote to Miserable Man, Little Pine and the rest implicated in the late North-West murders; and when Sir John jauntily replied "Yes, and Strike-him-onthe-back will also be included," Mr. Mills with singular felicity exclaimed, "Yes; so that they will be able to go from a scalping party to the polls." But although the Hon. David Mills is one of the formidable oppositionists, he has not, we believe. an enemy upon the floor of the house. He is a man whom an administration to which he is opposed will have need to regard as "dangerous;" and whenever he rises in his place in parliament he gets the prompt at-tention of the house. Whether his opponents differ from him or not, they nearly always receive his declarations with respect. In short there is nothing trivial about the character of Mr. Mills; but a pervading seriousness, and a manifest sense of responsibility, neither of which qualities the mere political trickster can successfully assume. Mr. Mills is the author of a pamphlet on the "Present and Future Prospects of Canada" (1860), and "The Blunders of the Dominion Government in connection with the North-West Territory" (1871). He married in December, 1860, Miss M. J. Brown of Chatham, by whom there is issue, three sons and four daughters; one of the daughters being dead. McCarthy, Dalton, Toronto, Q.C., M.P. for North Simcoe, Ontario, was born at Oakley Park, near Dublin, Ireland, on the 10th October, 1836. His father was a solicitor of Dublin, and his grandfather was Bucknell Henry McCarthy, also a member of the Irish bar. Our subject comes of an ancient Irish family. He was educated at Rev. Mr. Harnman's school at Blackrock; at Rev. Mr. Flynn's school, Dublin; and at the Barrie Grammar school. When very young he emigrated to Canada, whitherto so many had about this time turned their faces. Having completed his education, he entered upon the study of law, a profession for which he seemed fitted by hereditary instinct, as well as by a peculiar qualification. We are told that he was a painstaking student, and that his diligence and soundheadedness might be taken as auguries of a successful future in his chosen profession. He was called to the bar of Upper Canada at Hilary term, in 1859. At once he began to distinguish himself, and soon took a creditable position among his brother members of the bar. He obtained the repute of being a diligent advocate, with whom the affairs of the client were above all other considerations, and as a consequence he soon found himself in possession of a handsome practice. But valuable as the qualities of diligence and faithfulness were, he obtained the repute of legal brilliancy, and it was impossible to observe his manner of conducting a case without predicting a large success for him. He knew the art of interesting juries, and then of getting them to his way of thinking. This was as much due to a knowledge of human nature, which is the quality above all others in a pleader, as to his almost rare eloquence. In December, 1872, he was appointed a Queen's counsellor, and he is likewise a bencher of the Law Society of Ontario. In the years 1872-74, he made his first attempt to get into parliament, and contested the seat for North Simcoe; but he was unsuccessful. On December 14th, 1876, however, his ambition was realized, and he was elected for | ing of Simcoe.

Cardwell. In the meantime the people of North Simcoe had begun to regret that they neglected to elect for their riding the man who made such a respectable figure in the House of Commons, and as the general election of 1878 drew near they intimated to him that if he would put himself once again at their disposal the result would be more satis-He did so. This was the "campaign" during which Sir John and those who had suggested the national policy to him cried out in scorn that Sir Richard Cartwright and his political confreres were selfconfessed flies upon the wheel. It was the time during which the factory doors were closed and machinery lay still and rusting in every manufacturing town in Canada. Sir John A. Macdonald, taking the ideas and suggestions of his prompters, went abroad pointing to the thousands of workingmen who went through the country asking for bread: to the hundreds upon hundreds who were every week fleeing away from Canada to find employment in the workshops of the United States. Dalton Mc-Carthy raised his voice among the rest, and declared that if his party were returned to power they would frame a policy that would give our own skill and muscle employment, that would develop our latent wealth, and produce ample revenue without bearing harshly by taxation upon the people. There is no need of repeating that the country took the Conservatives at their word, and put them in power. Mr. McCarthy, as usual, was a valuable, industrious and a leading member in the House. His opinions upon important questions were always received with marked respect and consideration, and he always had the gift of putting them in a tolerant and reasonable way. Some have been led so to admire Mr. McCarthy's brilliancy that they predict for him the successorship to Sir John A. Macdonald. That such a day may come for him the writer does not think impossible or undesirable either; but meanwhile everything in its proper time. Mr. McCarthy married, in October, 1867, Emma Catherine, daughter of Edmund G. Lally, of Barrie, Ontario. She died; and he maried again in July, 1873, Agnes Elizabeth, relict of Richard B. Bernard. Mr. McCarthy was president of the Agricultural Society of the North Riding of Simcoe, and he is now president of the West Riding Agricultural Society. He has also been the president, since the formation in 1873, of the Liberal-Conservative Association of the North Rid-

John hot pwH mLH or

tu Ca th th

ces 18 Le Es Ho

the

for 18

18

the

hor

was

Ass

gen

a L

ene

ed l

litic

mes

of t

we i

and

herd

Red

Rose

high

in th

thor

three

It co

has

river

Whit

Upor

and t beari

Whit

iarms

White, Solomon, Windsor, M.P.P. for North Essex, Ontario, was born in the county which he now represents in the Provincial Assembly, and is the eldest son of Joseph White, of the township of Anderdon, by Angelique, daughter of the late Captain Pierre Fortier, formerly of Quebec. Solomon White was educated in the schools of his native county; studied law, and was called to the bar of Ontario in Michaelmas term, 1865, and then entered upon the practice of his profession in partnership with the Hon. John O'Connor, now the Hon. Mr. Justice O'Connor. In 1867 he married Mary L. Drew, of Detroit, U. S. In November, 1868, he purchased the Claire House vineyards at Cooksville, and carried on the business of vine-growing and winemaking, under the corporate name of the Canada Vine Growers' Association, until the latter part of 1876, when he sold out to the present proprietors. He was an unsuccessful candidate for Peel, in December, 1873, but in 1878 he was elected to the Legislative Assembly of Ontario, for North Essex. He declined the nomination for the House of Commons for Peel in 1874, and got the nomination of the same constituency for the Legislative Assembly in January, 1875; but this he also declined. In May, 1878 he was nominated again for Peel, for the local House, but once more declined the honour. At the general election of 1879 he was elected for North Essex to the Ontario Assembly, and was re-elected at the last general election. In politics Mr. White is a Liberal-Conservative, and the same great energy and industry that have characterised his business career likewise mark his political course, and place him among the most influential, useful and able members of the legislature. He takes great interest, we may add, in short-horn cattle, importing and breeding extensively. He has in his herd the Wild-Eyes, Kirklevingtons, Craggs, Red Rose, Constance, Lady Sales, Princess, Rose of Sharon (Abe Renick's), and other high-bred families. He has also engaged in the breeding of trotting horses and other thoroughbred stock. His farm is about three miles from Windsor, down the river. It comprises about six hundred acres, and has a charming location on the Detroit Upon this beautiful property Mr. White resides during the summer months. Upon the farm stand several superb barns, and there is an extensive vineyard now in bearing. The land not hitherto used by Mr. White, he has laid off into several small iarms, on which he has located vignerons

ple of

thev

man

n the

elec-

o him

ain at

satis-

' came who

b him

Cart-

self-

as the

were

ing in

s and

broad

gmen

g for

dreds

from

work-

Mc-

t, and

irned

that

e em-

latent

with-

n the

eating

atives

ower.

able,

n the

ques-

ed re-

s had

and

so to

they

b Sir

may

k im-

nean-

Mr.

mma

ally,

mar-

beth.

urthy

ty of

now

tural

lent,

eral-

Rid

Sir

from France, who cultivate the same. what he has ultimately in view is the enlargement of his vine-growing and winemaking operations, which business has latterly proved so successful and so profitable. Mr. White has been elected president of the Agricultural Society of the riding for 1886; and he is likewise president of the Windsor Land Improvement Company. In all movements having for their object the furtherance of the interests of the town or the county he is always one of the most active spirits. In 1883 he travelled as far west as the Rocky Mountains, through our Canadian territories, and visited the most important ranches and places of interest in that region. Mr. White resided at Cooksville, in the County of Peel, for ten years, or during the period of his ownership of the vineyards there; but he has since lived in Essex county. Very early in life Mr. White entered mercantile life, but this calling he soon abandoned to study law; and since his return from Cooksville, in 1878, he has closely devoted himself to his practice, and has been engaged in all the noted civil and criminal trials held since in the county. Indeed he has defended all the principal cases, among which were the two murder trials of Greenwood and Harding. also be rembered that he was assigned by Judge Burton to defend Luke Phipps, who was tried on the charge of murdering his wife. Altogether his professional career has been very brilliant and successful. He is a Roman catholic, but liberal-minded enough to admit that all religious denominations accomplish good.

Matthews, Wilbur C., Toronto, was born in the township of Vaughan, Ontario, in July, 1846. He remained at home on the farm until nineteen, and was obliged to be content with such educational advantages as the district school of that day afforded. After leaving home he attended for a term at the commercial college of Toronto; and on the completion of his studies obtained a position in the Registrar's department at Ottawa, where he remained for two years; but finding, however, no chance for promotion here, he left the service, and took a position as copying clerk in the Toronto office of Dun, Wiman & Co. After a short apprenticeship, he was sent by the firm to their branch at Albany, N. Y., and after two years steady, hard work as clerk and traveller there, the firm offered him the position of manager of the Memphis, Tennesse, office. This offer he accepted, and after five years labour, he left it in a flourishing condition. Mr. Matthews was married in Memphis in October, 1883; and in the following April was appointed manager of the Toronto office, with Hamilton as a branch. On leaving Memphis he was presented with an address signed by the entire wholesale trade, bankers and city officials, accompanied by a handsome gold watch. taking charge in Toronto in May, 1884, two additional branches have been opened, one in Winnipeg, and one in London, and the entire business has been more than doubled. Mr. Matthews takes an active part in all He was mainly instruathletic sports. mental in getting up the Toronto Athletic Grounds Co., of which he has been president since it started, and he is a member of the Granite Curling Rink, and an officer of the Toronto Lacrosse Club. Mr. Matthews is considered an active and pushing member of society, and is well liked by his fellow-citizens for his genial manners and obliging ways. Doherty, William Burton, LL.B., B.C.L., St. Thomas, Ont., was born in London, Ont., on the 29th of October, 1854. He is a son of William and Margaret Doherty, the maiden name of his mother being Burton. Mr. Doherty was in the employ of the Grand Trunk Railway for a time, as track superintendent. He had a family of two children, William Burton being the eldest. Mr. and Mrs. Doherty still reside in St. Thomas. The parents came from the County Monaghan, Ireland, about the year 1845, and settled in Kingston, afterwards removing to London. In 1865 they went to St. Thomas. William Burton Doherty, the subject of this sketch, was educated at the St. Thomas Grammar school, and in 1872 commenced the study of law. He is said to have been a very diligent student; and in 1876 he was called to the bar and began to practice his profession at St. Thomas. He brought into the field two essentials to success, a sound knowledge of the theory of the law, and plenty of energy. He very speedily obtained a repute for professional ability and for carefulness; and his practice exhibited a steady growth. He was for several years in partnership with John Farley, but he is now alone, and his office is in the building known as Oddfellows' Block. In 1880 he received from the University of Toronto the degree of LL.B., and that of B.C.L. from the University of Trinity College in 1884. In politics, Mr. Doherty is a strict and energetic Conservative, having a very strong admiration for Sir John A. Macdonald. In educational affairs he takes a hearty interest, and was for several years a member of the educational board in St. Thomas. He is a prominent member of the Masonic order, having held the offices of master of St. Mark's lodge, No. 44, for two years, and Master of Nineveh council of select masters. He is also grand officer of the Grand Council of Canada, and a Knight Templar. In religion he is an adherent of the Church of England. Doherty married, in 1877, Louisa, eldest daughter of the late David Parish, and at one time mayor of St. Thomas. The issue

bı

H

gr

to

of

R

in

In

Ca

me

fev

res

in

rie

far

cap

res

in 1

bet.

of (

sylv

Afte

serv

Mcl

and

ada,

mot

she

whit

died

issue

daug

He r

wall

Rev.

both

Wher

Mont

He at

self a

in 18

maste

then t

tion 1

tired,

years.

contin

Cornw

Act b

the firs

bruck,

ed to

warder

mont,

ing pre townsh

for the

quence

of this marriage is two children.

Metcalfe, James Henry, Kingston, was born at the City of Kingston, on the 8th January, 1848, and is a son of John Met-calfe, of Bainbridge, Yorkshire, England, by Gladys Bridget Mathews, of Dorsetshire, England. J. H. Metcalfe was educated at the Kingston public schools and the Collegiate institute. He held the position of head master in two of the public schools at Kingston for several years, and conducted the night-school classes for the public school board of the same city for twelve years. He sat in the city council of Kingston for a number of years as alderman for Frontenac ward. He is a member of the I.O.O.F., and has taken considerable interest in the affairs of that society. He was elected to represent Kingston in the Ontario legislature at the general election in June, 1879, and again in February, 1883. In politics he is, and has always been, a true-blue Conservative. Mr. Metcalfe visited England during the summer of 1879, and during the past four years he has travelled extensively through our North-West territories. In religion he has always been an adherent of the Church of England. He married at Kingston, on the 5th August, 1869, Margaret Jane, second daughter of Fraser Clute, late of South Fredericksburgh. On the occasion of severing his connection with the teaching profession, the teachers of the public schools of Kingston conveyed an expression of their esteem and good will by presenting Mr. Metcalfe with a silver tea service and an illuminated address. Mr. Metcalfe has lived in Kingston all his life except the summer seasons of the last few years, which he spent in the North-West He conducted business as an auctioneer in Kingston for two years, 1880 and 1881, and in the North-West territories during the summer seasons for the four years following. Mr. Metcalfe is a man of almost boundless energy and enterprise, as the simple record which we have given plainly shows.

Colquhoun, William, Cornwall, was born on December 23rd, 1814, at Charlotteburgh, within four miles of Cornwall, Ont. He is a son of Robert Colquboun, and a grandson of Walter Colquhoun, proprie-tor of Calico Print Works, on the banks of Kelvin river, Gilmour Hill, Glasgow. Robert, his father came to New York city in 1801, where he entered mercantile life. In 1803 he left New York, and came to Canada, settling in Cornwall, where he commenced business as a general merchant. A few years afterward he moved to the Indian reservation on the front of Charlotteburg, in the County of Glengarry, where he carried on a mercantile business and extensive farming operations. He also acted in the capacity of Indian agent. He continued to reside here until his death, which occurred in 1828. Robert Colouboun married Elizabeth, a daughter of John McNairn, a native of Galloway, Scotland, who moved to Pennsylvania, on the banks of the Susquehana. After the revolutionary war, in which he served as sergeant in the British forces. Mr. McNairn was obliged to leave his property, and like many other loyalists came to Canada, settling near Cornwall. Here the mother of our subject first saw the light, and she is said to have been the first female white child born in the settlement. She died in 1873, in her eighty-ninth year. issue of this marriage was four sons and two daughters. William being the third son. He received his early education at the Cornwall Grammar school, conducted by the Rev. Mr. Leith, under whom he received both an English and classical education. When he was thirteen, he left home for Montreal, and entered mercantile pursuits. He afterwards commenced business for himself at Dickinson's Landing, Ontario; and in 1841 he was appointed the first postmaster of that place -the post offices being then under Imperial control-and this position he retained until 1863, when he retired, having served a period of twenty-two years. His general mercantile business he continued until 1876, when he removed to Cornwall. When the Ontario Municipal Act became law, Mr. Colquhoun became the first treasurer of the township of Osnabruck, which position he held until elected to the council in 1852. He was elected warden of the united counties of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry, in 1855, having previously served as reeve for his own In 1863 he was a candidate for the parliament of Canada, but in consequence of the too brief space of time for ars a

St.

the

es of

for

incil ficer hd a

ad-

Mr.

 $dest \\ d at$

ssue

ton, 8th

Iet-

and.

aire,

at

blle-

s at

cted

nool He

r a

nac

and

airs

ent

the

ı in

has

Mr.

ım-

ars our

has of

5th

gherhis

the

ton

nd

hа

88. his

canvass, he was unsuccessful. In 1867 Mr. Colquhoun was returned for the County of Stormont, for the first legislature of Ontario, as a supporter of the Sandfield Macdonald administration. In 1871 he was elected again for this constituency over the late James Bethune, Q.C. His majority how-ever, was narrow, and in consequence was contested, this being the first protest under the controverted election act. A compromise was finally agreed upon, each party paying his own costs, and a new election was ordered. This took place in 1872, when Mr. Bethune was returned by a majority of thirty-four. Mr. Colquboun tried conclusions with Mr. Bethune again in 1875, as no other person could be found to do so; but he was again unsuccessful. In 1878 Mr. Colquhoun was elected president of the Conservative Association of the Electoral Division of Cornwall, which position he held for some time. After coming to Cornwall, Mr. Colquhoun took an interest in municipal politics, and in 1879 was elected to the council. He filled the mayor's chair in 1881, 1882 and 1883, each year being returned by acclamation. Mr. Colquhoun has erected some of the finest buildings in Cornwall, both commercial and otherwise; and he is unquestionably one of its most enterprising spirits in the community. has visited Great Britain and the continent, and, of course, the greater portion of our own country and the United States. He married in 1852, Hester, daughter of Martin Bailey, of Massachusetts, U.S., whose mother came of U. E. loyalist stock. There is a family of nine children, four of whom are living, one son and three daughters. Mr Colquhoun was appointed J.P. over a quarter of a century ago. In his case the office was anything but a sinecure, the American border being so near, and furnishing important and at the same time difficult cases for adjudication.

Gilmour, Allan, Sr., City of Ottawa, was born on the 23rd of August, 1816, in the parish of Shotts, Lanarkshire, Scotland. His father was a farmer, and the family consisted of five children, Allan being an only son. Of the sisters one is dead, and the others still live near the place where they were born. The father died at the ripe age of ninety-three, and the mother in her sixty-fifth year. Allan received a common country school education, taking one year at Glasgow, with which to conclude his course. Allan Gilmour had an uncle named Allan Gilmour, after whom our subject was named, and it is meet that we should have something to say about his career. This uncle was brought up to the trade of a house carpenter, but the occupation did not fit itself to his taste or his ambition, and he formed a partnership with two young men of his neighbourhood, John and Arthur Pollok, by name. These possessed some capital, and together they commenced business as lumber merchants, in Glasgow, under the firm name of "Pollok, Gilmour & Co." They soon added to their lumber operations the shipping business connected with that trade, establishing branches of their house in Quebec, Montreal, Miramichi and other points. They built many ships at Quebec, and gradually added to their fleet till they became one of the largest sailing-ship owners in the The Miramichi business was commenced about 1820, under the conjoint management of James Gilmour, (an uncle also of our subject, and a brother to Mr. Gilmour of the Glasgow house), and Alexander Rankin, the firm being known as Gilmour, Rankin & Co. Both of these gentlemen have been long since dead. The Quebec business was commenced in 1828, and was known as that of "Allan Gilmour & Co., under the management of Allan Gilmour, nephew of Mr. Gilmour of the Glasgow firm, and cousin of the subject of this In 1830 the manager was joined sketch. by his two brothers, John and David, as assistants; and these two gentlemen afterwards, in 1840, became partners in the business when their elder brother, Allan, left to take the place of his and our subject's uncle, in the Glasgow firm. This uncle retired in order to become a landed proprietor in Renfrewshire. He died not long afterwards, leaving his estate of "Eaglesham" to a nephew of the same name, he having elected, like the subject of this sketch, to live a bachelor's life. The Montreal firm, we may say, was established at the same time as that of Quebec, under the management of William Ritchie, a nephew of Mr. Gilmour of the Glasgow firm. This house was known as "William Ritchie & Co., and it carried on for many years a wholesale dry goods and grocery business, besides supplying parties engaged in the manufacture of square timber on the Ottawa river and its tributaries. To this firm was Allan Gilmour, the subject of this memoir, sent out with his cousin James, in 1832, the first The two year of the dread cholera period. young men entered the house as clerks, and remained in such capacity with it till 1840, when Mr. Ritchie retired from the business, and they assumed the management, the firm changing its name to that of "Gilmour & Co." An agency was then established at Bytown (the present city of Ottawa), that place being the centre of lumber operations in the Ottawa region, the object being to procure timber and sawn lumber from that region for the Quebec market. The particular duty of Allan Gilmour was to personally superintend the operations; and to this end he paid occasional visits from Montreal to Bytown, and to the forests where the business was being carried on. In 1853 he took up a permanent residence in Bytown, the Montreal business having subsequently been reduced to the position of an agency, upon the retirement of James Gilmour, and so continued for a number of years, when it was closed. Besides the square-timber business carried on by the firm at Ottawa, there were the large saw mill establishments of the Gatineau water-mills, and the Trenton steam mills; and both of these are still operated by the sons of the late John Gilmour of the Quebec firm. The firm of "Gilmour & Co.," under the management of Allan Gilmour, also established and worked for a number of years saw mills on the North Nation and Blanche rivers, tributaries of the Ottawa, retiring altogether from the business at the close of 1873. For a long period it may be stated that the lumber trade of Canada was so troublesome, fluctuating and unprofitable, and made such constant demands upon the attention of the subject of our memoir, that for a long period of years he was not permitted to be absent upon personal recreation save for the briefest time. But the tide turned at last, and with more prosperous times he had more leisure to devote to his tastes. And finding much enjoyment in shooting, fishing, and steam-yachting, he has indulged himself in these recreations for a number of years. He has visited the prairies of the western States and our Canadian lakes and marshes for the sport that they afford. Mr. Gilmour has also been, for many years, a member of the widely-known Long Point Shooting Company, but for the past two or three years he has had his shooting in the companionship of this most enjoyable association, done for him by willing proxies. Although hale and active, he is not so devoted now as in other years to quick tramping and the rough-and-tumble that fall to the lot of the professional sportsman. He has spent no fewer than twentyone seasons salmon-fishing on the river Godbout, north shore of the St. Lawrence, near Point des Monts, head of the

f

0

l

E

b

a

n

tr

th

of

tb

th

C

Ja

 \mathbf{B}

to

Je

sp

ta

po

We

wa

ho

th

"

wh

ing

M

the

bu

bro

ati

for

Mr

eve

and

for

Gulf, missing only one year in the consecutive series. But Mr. Gilmour has not confined his travels to Canada and the United States. He has been all over Scotland, through parts of England, and in 1874-75 visited France, Switzerland, Belgium, Italy, and parts of Germany and Austria. He has also travelled in Egypt as far up as the island of Philoe at the head of the first cataract, over which he ran in a row boat of about 16 x 5 feet. None of his own party would join him in the dangerous experiment, so, accompanied by five Nubians, he dared the rapids and had a splendid run over them. He describes them as somewhat resembling the St. Lawrence rapids at Lachine and Long Sault. The old tombs, temples and pyramids, most of which he visited, he found the most interesting of all the remains of an ancient civilization that he had ever looked upon; and "Wilkinson's Ancient Egypt" he says will be found to contain the best accounts and illustrations of these wonderful and most interesting structures. Nothing, he declares, but a personal examination will convey an adequate idea of these monuments of the thought and the civilization of that wonderful land. After spending about six weeks in Egypt, he started away with six of his companions of the Nile trip for Palestine, visiting the greater part of that hallowed land on horseback. The route of travel commenced at Beirout and lay along the Mediterranean shore to what remains of the cities of Sidon, Tyre, Acre, with Mount Carmel: from this point he proceeded to Jaffa, thence to Solomon's Pools, Hebron, Bethlehem, along the Dead Sea, the Jordan, to Jericho and the Fountains of Elisha. In Jerusalem and its neighbourhood the party spent a week and thence returned to Jaffa, taking ship at that port for Naples, the point from which they had started. The weather was propitious, and the passage was marked by no mishap. Mr. Gilmour holds the rank of major in the militia, though one frequently hears him named "Colonel Gilmour." He obtained his rank while drill and organization were proceeding to repel the threatened Fenian invasion. Mr. Gilmour was born and brought up in the Presbyterian faith, Church of Scotland, but for a long time he has been very much broad church, thinking well of all denominations and creeds who exercise an influence for good over the lives of their membership. Mr. Gilmour has always been a lover of everything beautiful and grand in nature, and to this fact we trace his admiration for art. For years he has purchased pic-

r &

at

that

ons

to

that

icu-

ally

end

l to

usi-

look

the

een

pon

d so

n it

usi-

here

s of

ton

still

Gil-Gil-

t of ked

the

ibu-

her

For

ım-

me,

uch

of

ong

be

for

lat

he

tes.

ng,

oed

ber

of

kes

rd.

ars, int

wo

ble

es.

80

hat

ty-

tures that attracted his taste, and he now has in his residence, overlooking the Ottawa river, at the Capital, one of the best private collections of pictorial art in Canada. Many of the pictures are the products of first-class artists; and all classes of subjects are represented, from the bare, majestic walls of Scandinavian fjords, with chill, clear water rippling at their feet, to the soft, sensuous blue of Italian skies. Our own scenery, that alternates so swiftly from gorgeousness to gloom, is not neglected either; and there is hardly a picture in the collection that will not delight whomsoever has the true instinct and the gift to appreciate. In his handsome residence, so beautified with art, Mr. Gilmour spends his most enjoyable hours, devoting himself to reading, and the recreations of a cultured retire-Those who have the pleasure of enjoying the personal friendship of the subject of this sketch could not say enough to you of the generosity of his heart, and of his fine and manly character.

Hardy, Hon. Arthur Sturgis, Q.C. M.P.P. for South Brant, and Provincial Secretary and Registrar of the Government of Ontario, was born at Mount Pleasant, County of Brant, on the 14th of December, He is a son of Russell and Juletta (Sturgis) Hardy, both of whom were descended from U. E. loyalist stock. Russ ll Hardy was born in Canada, and was at one period of his life a merchant in Brantford; his wife was also a native Canadian. Arthur Sturgis attended the academy kept by the Rev. W. W. Nelles for some years at Mount Pleasant; then the Grammar school of Brant county, and the academy at Rockwood, near Guelph. Having completed his educational course he read law for a time at Brantford, and completed his legal studies in Toronto, in the office of Mr. (afterwards Chief Justice) Harrison and Thomas Hodgins, LL.B., Q.C. At Easter term, 1865, he was called to the bar, and without delay began practice at Brantford, where he has since continued his legal labours, save for the interruptions imposed by his connection with the Executive of the province at Toronto. From the very outset it was safe to predict a brilliant and a vigorous professional career for Arthur Sturgis Hardy, for he had conspicuous natural brilliancy; he was daring, and he had fire and unusual mental alertness. He soon became head of the bar in his county, and had established for himself an enduring provincial reputa-In 1867 he became city solicitor for Brantford; in 1875 he was elected a bencher of the Law Society of Ontario, and in the following year was invested with the Queen counseller's gown. Mr. Hardy is a member of the legal firm of Hardy, Wilkes & Jones, and the common law and chancery business done by this firm is very large. Hardy's speehces have been always extremely popular, for his fervid eloquence, and his strong, clear and logical methods of reasoning give him a marked influence over In criminal cases his success has always been conspicuous, and this is to be as much attributed to his natural gift of swaying the sentiment, as to his lucid and vigorous presentation of the case. In 1873 he was first elected to parliament for South Brant, upon the resignation of the Hon. Edmund Burke Wood, afterwards chief justice of Manitoba. At the general election of 1875 he was elected by acclamation for the same constituency; and in March, 1877, he entered the Ontario administration as provincial secretary and registrar. Upon appealing to his constituents he was again elected by acclamation; and he has been reelected for the same constituency at every election since. A man so marked at the bar might be expected to take a leading place in political life; and this the Hon. Arthur Sturgis Hardy has done. He is one of the strongest members in the Mowat administration, and has no superior in the House as a ready and effective speaker. He has the gift of being able to "think on his ' and is therefore at no disadvantage even against most carefully elaborated at-His characteristics as a debater are his facility for detecting weak points in his opponent, his ready repartee, and the personal enthusiasm and earnestness with which he infuses his statements. There is, too, a spice of the daring in his methods; a quality which can only be aired with safety by a man like Mr. Hardy, who is sure of his ground, and who remains master of the situation, even though his case be a shaky one. If there is a difficult county to contest, and the fate of government is not sure in that quarter, thither is it always considered expedient that Mr. Hardy must go. And the more fierce the contest, the harder the blows struck, the more does it seem to be according to the humour of the man. Nor can we call to mind any case where he has not come triumphant out of the encounter. heads of a very important branch of the government, Hon. Mr. Hardy finds his time fully occupied. In addition to the work proper of the Provincial Secretary's department, there has, during his term of office, | 1777 he joined the army under Burgoyne, been added to the duties of that department those of the Immigration branch, the License branch, the audit of criminal justice accounts, the Division Court inspectorship, those relating to that of births, marriages and deaths, and those arising under the Joint Stock Companies Act in connection with the issue of charters to companies. Upon the retirement of Hon. Mr. Wood from the Treasury, there was also added to the department of the Provincial Secretary the department of Prisons, Charities and Public Institutions. The department of the Provincial Secretary is, therefore, now one of the heaviest of the governmental departments. As a legislator, Hon. Mr. Hardy has since his entrance into the House taken his full share. He has introduced and carried through large measures amending and consolidating the Jurors' Act; several important measures connected with the Liquor License laws; important amendments enlarging the jurisdiction of the Division courts; measures relating to Joint Stock companies; and usually, as chairman of the Municipal committee, has had charge of the act embracing all of the amendments of the session to the municipal acts. It is not necessary to add that Mr. Hardy is a Reformer. In religion he gives his adherence to the Church of England. He married on the 19th January, 1870, Mary, daughter of the late Hon. Justice Morrison, and has issue four children.

l

t

y

0

1:

o

18

J

P

te

la

to

pr

ti

Ca

by

sh

to

te

of

die

se

Dr

on

rec

ma

of

Mo

un

he

at

in

to.

and

ada

thi

ble

par

too

whi as t

he :

of

Jessup, Hamilton Dibble, Prescott, Ontario, Physician and Surgeon, was born on the 2nd May, 1806, in the township of Augusta, County of Grenville, Province of Upper Canada. He is the grandson of Major Edward Jessup, who commanded a colonial corps which was known as the loyal American regiment, and who was born in the parish of Stanford, in the County of Fairfield, Province of Connecticut, in 1735. He was the son of Joseph Jessup, who died in Montreal, in 1779, and grandson of Edward Jessup, and great grandson of Edward Jessup, who emigrated from England, about 1640, and settled in the colony of New York. At the breaking out of the revolutionary war, Major Jessup and his family resided at the City of Albany, New York, where he was extensively engaged in business, and in the possession of a tract of 500,000 acres of land, a full description of which is found in the documentary history of New York, under the title of "Jessup's Patent," A staunch loyalist, Major Jessup sacrificed his fortune by taking up arms for the king. In who was then marching upon Ticonderaga, and continued in the service until the close of the war, when the major proceeded to Canada with his corps, which then became known as "Jessup's Rangers." They were first stationed at Isle aux Noix, and subsequently at St. Denis, St. Charles, Rivière du Chine, Vercheres and Sorel. When peace was declared in 1783, large tracts of land were granted by the Crown to the officers and men, who accompanied by their families in the spring of 1784, proceeded up the river St. Lawrence, thus commencing the settlements of Leeds and Grenville, Addington and the Bay of Quinté. After locating his men, Major Jessup proceeded to England, where he remained for several years. When he returned he settled in the township of Augusta, County of Grenville, on lots numbers one, two and three in the 1st concession. In 1810, he laid out the town of Prescott, where he died in February, 1816, at the age of eighty-one years. Lieutenant Edward Jessup, only son of Major Jessup, was born in the City of Albany, Province of New York. He became a lieutenant in the Royal rangers, went to England with his father, and returned with him to Canada. In 1798 he was elected to represent the eastern division in the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, and in January 1800 was appointed by Lieutenant-Governor Hunter to the clerkship of the peace, for the district of Johnstown. In 1809 he was appointed by Lieutenant-Governor Gore, as lieutenant-colonel of the 1st regiment of Leeds militia. He died at Prescott, in 1815, leaving a wife and seven children, five sons and two daughters. Dr. H. D. Jessup the fourth son is now the only one of the seven children living. He received his education at the district Grammar school in Augusta, under the direction of the late Rev. John Bethune, dean of Montreal, and brother of Alexander Bethune, second bishop of Toronto. In 1825 he was articled to William Caldwell, M.D., at Montreal, as a student of medicine; in October, 1829, he received his license to practice medicine in Upper Canada, and in February, 1830, for Lower Can-ada. He practised his profession for about thirty years, at Prescott. During the troubles of 1837-38, he was captain of a company of militia, under Colonel Young, and took part in the engagement at Prescott, which occurred in November, 1838, known as the Battle of the Wind Mill. In 1844 he was elected to parliament for the County of Grenville. He was for several years

nent

Li-

tice

hip,

ages

the

ion

ies.

ood

to

ary

and

of

юw

htal

Mr.

tro-

res

ct;

nd-

the

int

han

rge

t is

sа

er-

ied

ter

nas

tt,

rn

of

or ial

ir-5. ed drd mayor af the town of Prescott, and was two or three times made warden of the united counties of Leeds and Grenville. In July 1856 he was appointed captain of the 1st Volunteer rifles of Prescott, and in November of the same year he was appointed lieutenant-colonel of the militia force of Canada. In April, 1867, he was appointed lieutenantcolonel of the 56th battalion of infantry, and in 1883, after twenty-six years of service in the active force of Canada, owing to his advanced age he withdrew from the force. In 1867, Dr. Jessup was appointed to the collectorship of customs, at Prescott, which office he filled for eighteen years. At his own request he was placed on the retired list in 1885. Dr. Jessup married Sophia Matilda, daughter of Michel Trudeau of Montreal. By this union he has two sons and three daughters living. Edward Jessup, his son, is collector of customs at Prescott, Ontario. One who has known this worthy gentleman, and whose opinion can be trusted, says that he is one of Nature's noblemen, and could not be anything but a gentleman if he tried. Not wisely, but too well, is the phrase that might be sometimes applied to his career; for the man was at the bottom of his heart unselfish, and only cared about the advancement of the interests entrusted to his charge, Too great devo-tion to the affairs of his town and county stood in the way of that wide opulence which lay in his path had he chosen to devote his great talents and his industry solely to the advancement of his own private fortunes. In politics he always has been a Conservative.

Innes, Rev. George Mignon, M.A., Canon and Rector of St. Paul's Cathedral, London, Ontario, was born at Weymouth, England, on the 21st January, 1826. He is a son of John Bontet Innes and Mary Evans, his father being a clergyman of the Episcopal church. The Inneses are descended from an ancient Scottish military family, John Bontet Innes being a cousin of the late Duke of Roxborough. The Mignons, of which family the Rev. G. M. Innes' paternal grandmother was a member, were Huguenots, Count Mignon de Chasseau escaping from France in 1688, concealed in a soap barrel. George Mignon Innes was educated at Mill-hill Grammar school; passed his examination for the army at Sandhurst Military college; and received a commission in the army in 1849. His service extended over a period of twelve years in the Royal Canadian Rifles, and he retired as captain in 1861. He then studied theology, was ordained deacon at London, in 1862, by the Bishop of Huron; was ordained priest in the following year, and received the appointment of incumbent of Christ's church, London. In 1863 he went to Quebec as assistant minister of the cathedral in that city; but in 1868 he returned to London as assistant minister of St. Paul's cathedral. In 1871 he became canon and rector of the cathedral, and has since continued to adorn that position by his piety, his learning and his zeal. His whole enthusiasm is in his parish, and the kindness of his heart is shown by his tender attentions to the sick. He is strictly of the Evangelical school, and his preaching and reading are made both pleasant and impressive by his full and musical voice. He has, as one writer justly remarks, an exceedingly "pointed way of putting things." His congregation, it need hardly be said, includes some of the leading families in London; and he has a strong influence for good in every way in his parish. Bishop's College, Lennoxville, Quebec, Canon Innes received his degree of master of arts. Canon Innes has been twice married, first, in October, 1854, to Elizabeth Anne, only daughter of Col. John Clarke, of the 76th regiment. She died in 1865, leaving one son and three daughters. He married again on the 6th May, 1867, Ann, daughter of Daniel McCallum, of Quebec. Canon Innes has a very extensive library, and few men put their books to better use than he.

Townshend, Charles James, Amherst, ex-M.P. for Cumberland, N.S., was born at Amherst, Nova Scotia, on 22nd March, 1844. He is a son of the Rev. Canon Townshend, rector of Amherst, and Elizabeth, his wife, daughter of the late Honourable Alexander Stewart, C.B., formerly master of the Rolls of the Province of Nova Scotia, and judge of the Vice-Admiralty Canon Townshend is the son of the late Honourable William Townshend of Wrexham, Ergland. The family are descendants of the Townshends of Norfolk, England. Charles James Townshend was educated at the Collegiate school, Windsor, Nova Scotia, and subsequently at the University of King's College, Windsor, where he graduated with high honours in 1862. His chief studies were classics, mathematics, and French and German. He took the degree of B.A. in 1863, and B.C.L. in 1872. In the old Nova Scotia militia he was gazetted captain 1st Cumberland regiment in 1863, and the next year was appointed adjutant to the same regiment. He continued an active officer until the change made after Confederation reorganizing the whole system, when he retired from further connection with the service. Mr. Townshend was admitted to the bar of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia in April, 1866, and he has continued in active practice up to the present time. He studied law in the office of the Honourable Senator Dickey at Amherst. Nova Scotia. Shortly after Mr. Townshend had been admitted to the bar, Senator Dickey retired from practice, and he succeeded to a large and lucrative business. He has been a leading counsel in the province for many years past, and has been engaged in all important cases in Cumberland. and in some of the adjoining counties. In 1881 he was appointed by the Dominion government a Q.C. In 1874 he was nominated by the Liberal-Conservative convention as local candidate for the County of Cumberland. He contested the seat, and was defeated by a small majority, owing to an unfortunate split in the Conservative ranks, which resulted in three Conservative candidates taking the field. In 1878 he again contested the county for the local seat in conjunction with Sir Charles Tupper, who ran at the same time for the House of Commons, and with him was returned by a majority of nearly 600. The result of the general elections was to defeat the existing administration in Nova Scotia. On · the formation of a Conservative government, under Hon. S. H. Holmes, Mr. Townshend was made a member without portfolio. He remained in the government for four years, when, on Mr. Holmes' resignation, he was again made a member of the new government, under the Hon. Mr. Thompson, minister of justice. At the general election in 1882, he was again elected for the County of Cumberland, but the government was defeated; and he resigned office along with his colleagues in July, 1882. Mr. Townshend was one of the leading speakers in opposition to the policy of the new government, formed by Mr. Pipes. On the resignation of Sir Charles Tupper of his seat in the House of Commons in May, 1884, our subject was almost unanimously nominated by the Liberal-Conservatives as their candidate for the Dominion. Subsequently, on June 26th, 1884, having resigned his seat in the local House, he was elected to the House of Commons by acclamation. On January 29th, 1885, he seconded the Address in answer to the Speech from the Throne, and was complimented by both Sir John A. Macdonald and

M

th

age

an

cla

aft

sol

Ma

one

ma

con

vin

Сов

lier

for

Mr.

hen

son

with

Mag

Nov

gran

In 1

Brit

Eur

he w

lumi

is ar

and

the

mari

daug

Prob

whor

on th

resid

when

latur

ator,

tice o

ton, a

Medic

Count

1838.

Danie

O'Con

which

respec

father

tơ Can

few ye

bly, he

ing fu

ledge i

secure

advant

slow of

thorou

Region

Su

Mr. Blake. During the session he spoke on | the Franchise bill, taking strong ground against extending the franchise to women, and moved the amendment striking that clause out of the bill, which was carried after a long debate. He is director of, and solicitor for, the Amherst Boot and Shoe Manufacturing Company, of which he was one of the chief founders. This business, it may be added, is one of the most successful commercial enterprises in the Maritime provinces. He is solicitor for the Cumberland Coal and Railway Company, the largest colliery in Nova Scotia; and is also solicitor for the Bank of Nova Scotia at Amherst. Mr. Townshend admitted J. Medley Townshend, his brother, and Arthur R. Dickey, son of Senator Dickey, into partnership with him in 1878. He is a member of the Masonic order, and of the Grand lodge of Nova Scotia, and has been district deputygrand master, and master of Acacia lodge. In 1875 and 1876 he travelled through Great Britain; and visited the principal cities of Europe and of the United States. In 1885 he went across the continent to British Columbia. In church matters Mr. Townshend is an adherent of the Church of England; and he has been appointed delegate both to the diocesan and provincial synods. He married in April, 1867, Laura, fourth daughter of John D. Kinnear, judge of Probate for the County of Cumberland, by whom he has three children. His wife died on the 17th March, 1884. He has always resided at Amherst, Nova Scotia, except when absent attending sessions of the legislature, or travelling.

fter

sys-

ec-

was.

urt

has

ent

 $_{
m the}$

st, nd

tor

uc-

ss. ro-

en-

nd,

In

on

in-

on

in-

۲s,

in in

ho

t, id

Гe

n of

Sullivan, Hon. Michael, M.D., Senator, Professor of the Principles and Practice of Surgery in the Royal College, Kingston, and Professor of Anatomy in the Female Medical College, was born at Killarney, County Kerry, Ireland, on 13th February, 1838. He is the second son of the late Daniel O'Sullivan, of Killarney, and Joana O'Connor, of the same county. The family, which is an old Irish one, occupied a very respectable position; but Michael Sullivan's father, not succeeding in business, he came to Canada with his family in 1842. After a few years' residence in Montreal and Chambly, he settled in Kingston, in 1845. Realising fully the truth of the adage, "Knowledge is power," he made many sacrifices to secure for his family the best educational advantages, and of these Michael was not slow of availing himself. After receiving a thorough English education, he went to Regiopolis College, where his aptitude and !

studious habits were conspicuous. He was always at the head of his class, and paid particular attention to classics, reading the same very extensively. The college closing before he finished his course, he completed his studies under private teachers. In 1854, he entered the Medical College attached to Queen's University, being one of its first pupils. While there he acquired a decided taste for anatomy, and was appointed prosector and demonstrator of that branch at the end of his first year. In his third year he was made house surgeon to the Kingston Hospital, and passed a brilliant exmination before he attained his twentyfirst year. Principal Cook, who conferred the degrees on that occasion, made him the object of special compliment. He began the practice of medicine in Kingston in 1858, and soon acquired a large and lucrative business. His thorough knowledge of practical anatomy led him to cultivate surgery, in which department he enjoys a wide and solid reputation. After practising four years (1862) he was requested to lecture on anatomy in his alma mater, and accepted the position. He changed the method of instruction, and impressed his pupils with so ardent a zeal for the subject as to largely enhance the reputation of the school and increase its numbers. Two years afterwards Dr. Dickson retired from the chair of surgery, and Dr. Sullivan was, at the unanimous request of the faculty, appointed to fill the vacant chair, a position he holds at the present The best proof of his success as a teacher is afforded by the cheerful testimony borne by all the students of the college scattered through the country, who are ever ready to express their obligations to his practical and thorough methods, and the conscientious fidelity with which he has laboured to place them in the front ranks of the profession. At the urgent request of the founders of the Female Medical College, Dr. Sullivan accepted the chair of anatomy, and continues to discharge its duties. In 1866, he was appointed a member of the Medical Council of Ontario, and was sent as examiner in anatomy to the first board of examiners in 1870. Determined to make the examinations thoroughly practical, he, at great trouble and annoyance, procured dissections, principally made by himself, and on these the students were examined. Unaccustomed to this test, a loud outcry was made against him in the public journals, but the importance of a knowledge of this fundamental branch of medicine was so obvious that the entire profession of the province came to his rescue and sustained him, and his innovation is now the mode prescribed by the council. His position in the profession is indicated by his unrequested election to the presidency of the Dominion Medical Association in 1883. 1884, he delivered the annual address before that body at the Montreal meeting, in the presence of many distinguished members of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, who were much pleased, and expressed their gratification at the high position occupied by the profession in Canada. In that address he, among many subjects, considered and contrasted the mortality of the different provinces, showing such extraordinary and inexplicable differences as to require, in his opinion, a commission to investigate them. Had this been appointed, Montreal might have been spared the epidemic of small-pox, which a year after so cruelly scourged that city. Dr. Sullivan has been surgeon of the Hotel Dieu from 1858. In his first year's service the admission increased from 90 to 300, and the extensive reputation the hospital possesses is due to his efforts. A warm-hearted Irishman, he has always taken an active interest in the welfare of his countrymen. For many years the leading Irish catholic of the city and vicinity, his influence has always been in favour of a liberal, tolerant course. President of the St. Patrick Society for some years, he left after paying its debts, because the society would not carry out the schemes for selfimprovement and benevolence which he brought forward. Enjoying the confidence and friendship of the Catholic clergy and laity, and selected to represent the latter on important public occasions, he has not forfeited the esteem of all other denominations. Requested by a large number of friends to take part in public affairs, in 1863 he entered the city council for Sydenham ward, where he lived, and for ten consecutive years was elected by acclamation. Wishing to retire in 1873, he was put forward for the office of mayor, but was defeated by one vote. The following year, the election being oy popular vote, he was elected by a very large majority, and was re-elected again in 1875. While mayor he divided his salary among the charitable institutions of the city, and finished a municipal service of twelve years without making an enemy, and leaving a reputation for energy, earnestness and zeal which anyone might envy. He inherited strong Conservative tendencies, and no one has worked more honestly and faithfully for the advancement of conservative principles than In doing this he has earned the respect and esteem of his opponents. the general election of 1882, he contested the city in the conservative interest, but owing to party defection he failed to win the seat. His political services were recognised, however, by the government appointing him to the Senate on January 29, 1884, to succeed the late Hon. John Hamilton. When the announcement was made that Dr. Sullivan was called to the Senate, it was received by the public in general with a feeling of gratification, as no man in Kingston stands higher in public estimation than he does. He has proved a great acquisition to the Senate, not only on account of his great ability as a debater, but of his knowledge of the affairs of the country. He is an able speaker, and it is safe to predict that in the near future he will be included among the foremost Canadian orators who are to be found in the different legislative bodies. When the doctor was called to the Senate, the press teemed with congratulatory remarks, and among the many we give an extract from the Toronto Mail of that date, which reads as follows: "The appointment of Dr. Sullivan, of Kingston, to the Senate will be well received not only by the Roman catholic body of which he is a member, but by all who have watched his very creditable career. He is a man of excellent abilities and high personal character, still young in years, and with a sound knowledge of the past and present. He will be a great acquisition to the Upper House." The honourable gentleman's professional reputation was such that he was requested by the government, on the outbreak of the rebellion, to accept the position of purveyorgeneral. He promptly responded to his country's call, and at once proceeded to Winnipeg, and thence to Swift Current, where he established a hospital; subsequently he went to Moosejaw, where the hospital was transferred to. His duty in the office which he assumed included not only the task of providing all necessary medical and surgical requirements, and making whatever arrangements were needful for the due care of the wounded, but also the receiving and distributing and forwarding of the contributions of various articles of luxury and comfort sent up by the ladies, and other associations. During the whole of the trouble he remained at his post, attending to the sufferings of the wounded men. A high tribute was recently lance geon in atte man h hospit during dence and co found to any appear they w they co Sulliva of mili mons; Montre praise f

their p

Court o

Galt

paid

ronto, v 12th A Galt, a literatur Todd." "The A works of literary cient on annals. daughter citizen o this unio sketch, a of the for late high of St. Jan registrar in 1866. as genial and belove England a year emig ronto. H the Canad office for a this time mercial lif became a Chief Just of Upper (entered in his profess young barr the commo quarter of members of spicuous an paid to the admirable hospital and ambulance arrangements by Dr. Boyd, the surgeon sent out by Princess Louise to assist in attending to the wounded. That gentleman had considerable experience in military hospitals, having been in the one at Plevna during the Russo-Turkish war. His evidence is therefore entitled to great weight, and conveys high praise when he says: "I found a field hospital that would do credit to any nation as a model. The patients appear to have everything conceivable that they want, and are cared for better than they could be in their own homes." Sullivan received the thanks of the minister of militia publicly in the House of Commons; and from the Ladies' Aid Society of Montreal and others he received the highest praise for the admirable manner in which their presents were distributed. Galt, Hon. Thomas, Judge of the Court of Common Pleas for Ontario, Toronto, was born at London, England, on the 12th August, 1815. He is a son of John Galt, a name well known in permanent literature, he being the author of "Laurie Todd," "The Entail," "Sir Andrew Wylie," "The Annals of the Parish," and other works of wide popularity and conspicuous literary merit. The Galt family is an ancient one, and is prominent in Scottish annals. John Galt married Elizabeth, daughter of Alexander Tilloch, a prominent citizen of Ayrshire. There were born to this union John Thomas, the subject of this sketch, and Alexander Tilloch (now Sir), one of the foremost of our political figures, and late high commissioner of Canada at the Court of St. James. The elder brother, John, was registrar for the County of Huron, and died in 1866. He was a man of sterling as well as genial qualities, and was widely known and beloved. Thomas Galt was educated in England and Scotland, and in his eighteenth year emigrated to Canada, settling in Toronto. Here he entered into the employ of the Canada Company, remaining in their office for a period of six years. He had by this time come to feel a distaste for commercial life, and an inclination for law. He became a student in the office of the late Chief Justice Draper; was called to the bar of Upper Canada in Easter term, 1845, and entered immediately upon the practice of his profession. From the very outset the young barrister gave evidence of more than the common share of ability; and for a quarter of a century his position among the members of the legal fraternity was a conspicuous and a commanding one. But his chief strength lay in his wide knowledge of criminal law, and the vigour and clearness which characterized his method of presenting cases. Very naturally his services were in wide demand, and he conducted with unvarying ability some of the most noted cases in the criminal calendar. He was likewise entrusted with the solicitorship of various railways, insurance companies, and other important corporations. In 1858 Mr. Galt was created a Queen's counsel; and in Easter term, 1869, his professional attainments received a fuller recognition by his elevation to the bench as a judge of the Court of Common Pleas. A man so distinguished at the bar could not fail to give lustre to the bench; and Mr. Justice Galt has proven one of the most capable and esteemed judges known to our Canadian courts. The judge is a member of the Church of England, and is a constant attendant at the services in St. James Cathedral. He married, in October, 1847, Frances Louisa, daughter of James' Marshall Per-kins. By this union there are nine surviving children, five sons and four daughters.

Moore, Vincent Howard, M.D., Brockville, is one of the best and most favorably known medical practitioners in Brockville, or in Eastern Ontario. He was born in the township of Elizabethtown, County of Leeds, on the 4th of February, 1848, and is decended from a family remarkable for longevity. The genealogy can be traced a long way back; his grandfather on the maternal side being Matthew Berry, who was born in 1756, in the County of Down, Ireland. He emigrated to America in 1818, and died at the age of seventyfive years. His grandmother, on the same side, was also born in the County Down, in 1766, and died in 1866, having reached the advanced age of one hundred years and four months. On the paternal side of the genealogical tree we find that Dr. Moore's grandfather, Frederick Moore, was born in the County of Wexford, Ireland, in 1770. He came to Canada in 1808, and died in 1848, being seventy-eight years of age. The grandmother on this side was Jane McKelvie, who also reached an advanced age. The immediate paternal ancestor of the doctor was Richard Moore, who was a native of Wexford, Ireland, where he was born in 1800, and came to this country with his father when eight years of age. He settled at what is now known as New Dublin, in the County of Leeds. In 1820 he married Ann Berry, a native of County Down, Ireland, who came to Canada with her parents in 1816, at which time she was only | thirteen years of age, having been born in The family of this couple consisted of six sons and two daughters, the subject of this sketch being the youngest member of the family. Richard Moore died at his residence in Elizabethtown, where he had resided for sixty-four years, October 30th, 1884, aged eighty-four years. His widow survives him, and is still in the enjoyment of excellent health, notwithstanding her four score years and two. Dr. Moore had not the early advantages of a liberal education which the majority of those entering upon professions at the present day enjoy. He obtained his elementary grounding in the public country school, and afterwards attended the Grammar schools in Kempt-ville and Brockville. When sixteen years of age he entered the general store of his brother, but not having any particular liking for mercantile life, he retired from that position after one year's service. His desire was to study medicine, and in 1867 he entered as a student in the office of the late Dr. Weir, of Merrickville. In October of that year he was enrolled as a student at the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons, Kingston, Ont., and graduated with honours in 1870. In April, 1870, he passed the examination of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario. In May of that year he settled in Brockville, and entered upon the practice of his profession, where he has remained ever since, and now enjoys one of the largest practices in Eastern Ontario. In June, 1879, he was appointed to the position of gaol surgeon for the united Counties of Leeds and Grenville, a position which he still holds. Dr. Moore has also an important military record. In 1869 he entered the Military school at Kingston, and took out a second-class certificate on the 17th of August of that year. In 1872 he was appointed by the Dominion government to the position of medical examiner of applicants for militia pensions. In 1874 he was appointed surgeon to the 41st battallion, and still holds the position. He has always taken a deep interest in all matters pertaining to education. In 1876 he was appointed a member of the Brockville High School Board, and was reappointed in 1879. politics he is a staunch Conservative, and, although refraining from becoming a candidate himself, he has always taken a lively interest in the contests that have taken place, and in everything of a political character that has transpired. He is a member of the leading medical associations, and of the Masonic order, having taken all the degrees in the blue, royal arch, and also of the order of the temple. He was grand superintendent of the central district for two years, and is also a past grand senior warden of the Sovereign Sanctuary of Royal and Oriental Fremasonry, He also belongs to the Canadian order of Foresters, and to the Royal Arcanum. In 1884 he had the honour of being elected by the council of Queen's University as their representation on the Medical Council, taking the place of the late Dr. McCammon. who had In April, 1885, Dr. Moore was resigned. re-elected to the same position, and holds it The doctor has also dabbled in journalism in his time. He was one of the founders of the Brockville Daily Times, one of the most widely circulated and influential journals in the province. He was for a time vice-president and manager of the company and afterwards president. Moore comes of good old Presbyterian stock, and is an attendant at St. John's church, Brockville. In 1874 he married Margaret Orillia, daughter of Wm. Burnham of Port Hope. There are two children by this

roso ao tl

ai fo D m

re

of

ye tr

w M

tw th

po th of

w8

of

wa

th

an

re

fes

sid

lin

Ge

in

and

fire

Mı

lis

ver

was

one

to

bus

Ad

Cal

ada

of

Gei

union, a boy and a girl.

Digby, James W., M.D., Brantford, son of Dr. Alfred Digby, the first physician in that town, was born at Brantford. in 1842. Dr. Alfred Digby was born in the County of Meath, Ireland, and while a young man emigrated to America, taking up his abode for a time in Montreal. Here he married Catherine Busby, a native of that city, and by this lady had a family of four boys and two girls: three of the former and two of the latter still surviving. When Dr. Digby left for America he was a member of the Royal College of Surgeons of Ireland; and he was regarded as a man of unquestioned ability. After residing for a short time in Montreal, he proceeded to Hamilton, where he practised his profession for a time with very marked success. He then moved to Brantford, where he resumed his professional career, which he followed He was a man of till his death in 1866. marked ability; of wide public spirit; and he was conspicuous in political, as well as professional circles. His son, James W. Digby, received his primary education in the public schools, and he subsequently entered the Galt Collegiate institute, under He matriculated at Toronto Dr. Tassie. University and subsequently entered Mc-Gill College, Montreal, from which he gradu-Upon graduating he repaired ated in 1862. to New York city, in the hospitals of which he practised for a time. He received the appointment of acting assistant surgeon during the American rebellion, and was stationed at the hospital of Point Lookout, Maryland. After the battle of Stone River he took part in the campaign, as hospital surgeon, through the western States; but after the battle of Chickamanga he was stationed in the field hospital, in Chattanooga, having charge of several wards. He received the appointment, some months later, of regimental surgeon of the 16th U. S. infantry, and took part, with that regiment, in the campaign through the south. In June, 1866, he returned to Canada, and since that time has practised in the town of Brantford. His wide learning and his marked professional skill have won for him a handsome practice there. Dr. Digby has given considerable attention to municipal politics. He has been deputyreeve, town councillor, mayor for the period of three years; and he has been for nine years a member of the College board of trustees.

e de-

 \mathbf{rand}

for

enior

loyal

longs

and

had

uncil

esen-

r the

had

was ds it jour-

the

imes,

nflu-

s for

the Dr.

tock,

irch.

paret

Port

this

ford,

phyrant-

born

vhile

king

Here

e of

ly of

rmer

hen

iem-

Ire-

un-

or a

to sion

He

um-

wed

n of

and

] as

W.

in

htly

nto

Ic-

du-

red

ich

Adam. Graeme Mercer, Toronto, was born in 1839, at Loanhead, a village in Miclothian, Scotland, about half way between De Quincey's house at Lasswade, on the Esk, and the woodland domain of the poet Drummond, of Hawthornden, close by the far-famed castle and chapel of the Earls of Roslyn. His father, who died in 1841, was factor on the estates of Graeme Mercer of Mavisbank and Gorthy, after whom he was named. The family is connected with the Adams of Blair-Adam, in Perthshire, and on the paternal side has given many representatives to literature and other professional callings; while on the maternal side, numberless Wisharts (his mother is a lineal descendant of the Scottish martyr, George Wishart), have served their country in many of Britain's great battles on sea and land. After receiving his education, first at Portobello, and then at Edinburgh, Mr. Adam entered an old-established publishing house in the Scottish capital while very young, and at the age of nineteen was entrusted with the management of one of its important departments. Owing to the death of the head of the house, the business was wound up, and young Mercer Adam was offered, through the Nelsons, a post in a large colonial book-house in Calcutta, and from the Blackwoods he had at the same time a proposal to go to Canada, to take charge of the book business of Mr. (now Rev. Dr.) J. Cuningham Geikie; the latter of which he accepted, and came to Canada in September, 1858. Two years afterwards he succeeded to this business, as a member of the firm of Rollo & Adam, who, it may be said, were the publishers of the first of the more ambitious native periodicals published in Canada, the British American Magazine. In this periodical Mr. Adam made his first published contributions to literature. In 1866 Mr. Rollo retired from the business of Rollo & Adam, and the firm of Adam, Stevenson & Co. was formed. This book-house was well known in its day for its many publishing enterprises, and for the aid it gave the intellectual life of Canada, in furthering native literature and in introducing a higher class of book importations than had hitherto found sale in the country. Unfortunately, the house for a number of years met with many and severe losses, and its business was wound up in 1876, Mr. Adam withdrawing for a time to New York to found a publishing house there, which has since developed into the extensive firm of the John W. Lovell Publishing Company. Mr. Adam, however, returned to Toronto in 1878, and since then has almost exclusively devoted himself to a literary life. In 1879 he established, and for five years edited, the Canada Educational Monthly; and in 1880 assumed the editorship of the Canadian Monthly, which, in connection with Professor Goldwin Smith, he was instrumental in founding in the year 1872. Mr. Adam has also had connection with many other periodical publications issued in Ontario, either as a writer or in business relations therewith. His services to literature have been wide and important, for he has been journalist, educationist, critic, reviewer and In 1885 he wrote "The essay-writer. North-West, its History and its Troubles," published by the Rose Publishing Company: he edited an edition of Lord Macaulay's Essay on Warren Hastings; founded the Canada Bookseller, a trade organ, in 1870, and has written, in conjunction with W. J. Robertson, B.A., of St. Catharines, a "School History of England and Canada." Mr. Adam has served Canada in the militia force for twelve years. He was a captain in the Queen's Own Rifles, and commanded a Company of that crack corps at the fight at Ridgeway, between our volunteers and the Fenian marauders. He is a graduate and first-class certificate holder of the Military school, Toronto; received a second class certificate in 1865 from Colonel Peacock of Her Majesty's 16th regiment; and in 1866 a first-class certificate from Colonel Lowry of the 47th regiment. Mr. Adam has for the last twenty years been brought into contact with every literary man in the country, and many representatives of other professions in Canada, and we have not probably another man who has a larger or more intimate acquaintance with books, book-men and the book-trade, as vouched for by the publishing and bookselling fraternity, as well as by educational schools of all professions-law, medicine, education, theology, Mr. Adam married in 1863, Jane, second daughter of the late John Gibson, of Lovell & Gibson, parliamentary printers, and editor for many years of the Literary This lady died in 1884, profoundly regretted, leaving eight children to survive her. In religion Mr. Adam is a member of the Church of England; in politics he is an independent and a Canadian nationalist. Besides the literary work noted, Mr. Adam has edited and prepared for the press innumerable manuscripts; and he has been looked upon by literary people as a sort of general reference library. The most pretentious of Mr. Adam's published work so far is "The North-West, its History and its Troubles;" and this is a book that will be certain to survive in the literature of the country. The style of the work is like everything that proceeds from the pen of Mr. Adam,—it is clean cut, easy, swift and direct. There is a fascinating grace about all of Mr. Adam's work; and one finds himself pausing constantly to admire the grace with which a sentence has been rounded, or to linger over its exquisitely balanced rhythm. Nature he loves with all his heart, and many of the descriptive passages in the work in question are delightful. There is present, likewise, the judicial quality, and the sense of historical responsibility; while the strong individuality of the writer is ever manifest. What we say of the work referred to, is true of Mr. Adam's writings generally. But to him, as some of our recently published historical and biographical works bear testimony, Canadian literature lies under a debt which it can never repay. Literature the man loves, and it is not an exaggeration to say that his life has been consecrated to it. How bitter have been the fortunes of letters in Canada, is a fact only too well known, but Mr. Adam has always been fighting the literary fight, and when others have dropped out of the battle, he has kept up his courage. He is at present engaged exclusively in letters, and has now attained his meridian powers, and we await much from his gifted pen.

Hewett, Col. Edward Osborne, C.M.G., Royal Engineers, Commandant Royal of the Military College of Canada, at Kingston, was born on the 25th of September, 1835. His father was Colonel John Hewett, deputy lieutenant of the County of Glamorgan, England. His seat was at Tyr Mab. Ellis, County Glamorgan. His mother was Frances, daughter of Thomas Thornewell, deputy lieutenant of the County of Stafford, Eogland. Seat, Dove Cliffe, County Stafford. Colonel Hewett's father obtained his commission in 1803, and saw prolonged and very distinguished active service in every quarter of the globe. He served in Canada throughout the war of 1812, and led the "forlorn hope" in the attack and capture of Oswego in 1814. Two of Colonel Hewett's great-uncles were killed at the taking of Quebec, under General Wolfe in 1759. The family of Hewett is descended directly from Geoffry de Hewat (1223), of Manor Hewat, County Kent (tempo Henry III., alienated tempo Henry VIII.) through Walter de Hewat (1327), knight banneret (tempo Henry III.) and Sir John Hewett (1621), baronet (tempo James I.) A portion of the crest of the family is the badge of Henry III., and was granted by that monarch for distinguished military service in the French wars of that period. In the early part of the sixteenth century many of the wealthy merchants of the City of London owned private houses built at that time upon the only bridge crossing the Thames. In one of these, a rich woollen manufacturer named Hewet (lord mayor of London 1550, and knighted in 1552) resided. In 1536 this merchant's nurse was standing at an upper window holding her master's daughter and only child, when the latter suddenly sprang from the nurse's arms and fell into the rushing river below. A young apprentice of Hewett's named Edward Osborne leaped into the river and rescued the child, to whom, sixteen years afterwards, he was married. In 1592 Edward Osborne. who had succeeded to his father-in-law's business, was elected lord mayor of London, and in 1601 was knighted by Queen Elizabeth. The son of this marriage was the grandfather of Sir Thomas Osborne, elevated to the peerage in 1673 as Viscount Latimer, and subsequently for service rendered to the Prince of Orange (1691) Duke of Leeds. Mrs. Hewett's father, Major Biscoe, Royal engineers, served in Canada during the rebellion, 1837-8. Her grandfather, Major Van Baerle, of her Majesty's 97th regiment, wa killed in the same year

whil

gene

a Di

Lori

lema

Bas.

from Belg

state

in ur

the

Pierr

reign

famil

was o

Roya

land,

Royal

1854 ant-co

create

Micha

he is a

Colone

in the

great

the cel Dover.

and in

tor at

wich;

the Oro

struction

Engine

depot s

officiate

and for

of Roya

the tim

United

difficult

was sele

pany of

vice, to carrying

of the So while er

Riviere

ary, 1862

was com

troops at

at that t

the winte du Loup

thence by summer

with his

appointed Ontario, 1 while carrying despatches for the governorgeneral of Canada. In the tenth century a Duc de Bar (the earlier Ducs de Bar in Lorraine were related to the Emperor Charlemagne) left France and came to the Pays Bas, and founded the chateau de Baerle from whence the villages of Bacrle Duc Belgium and Baerle Nassau, Holland. The state archives of Holland show the descent in unbroken line of Major Van Baerle from the Nassau branch of the family, through Pierre Von Baerle (1400). The present reigning house of Holland is related to this family. Colonel Edward Osborne Hewett was educated at Cheltenham College and Royal Military Academy, Woolwich, England, and obtained his commission in the Royal engineers as lieutenant, 14th August, 1854; captain, 1860; major, 1872; lieutenant-colonel, 1879; colonel, 1881; and was created a Companion of the order of St. Michael and St. George, 1883. In religion he is a member of the Church of England. Colonel Hewett has been largely employed in the designing and construction of the great land and sea fortifications, including the celebrated iron forts of Portsmouth and Dover. He has served in the West Indies, and in South America. He was an instructor at the Royal Military Academy, Woolwich; was nominated for employment in the Ordnance survey of Great Britain; and has been engaged in superintending the instruction of officers at the School of Military Engineering, Chatham, and in organizing the depot system at headquarters. He has also officiated as adjutant, and as aid-de-camp, and for eight years commanded companies of Royal engineers. In December, 1861, at the time of the anticipated war with the United States in connection with the Trent difficulty, he resigned his appointment, and was selected for command of the field company of Royal engineers, first for active service, to proceed to Canada. The troop-ship carrying the Royal engineers and a battalion of the Scots guards, being caught in the ice while endeavouring to land the troops at Riviere du Loup, in the early part of January, 1862, escaped with great difficulty, and was compelled to return and disembark the troops at St. John, N. B. No railway being at that time in existence, the troops made the winter march from St. John to Riviere du Loup in the latter part of January, and thence by rail to London, Ontario. In the summer of 1863 he made the return march with his company. Colonel Hewett was appointed Commanding Royal Engineer of Ontario, west of Toronto, with headquarters | a distinguished teacher, J. J. Dunlop, a grad-at London, in which district over 3,000 regular troops were then stationed. In addition to ordinary duties, he was engaged in selecting strategical positions, and in reporting on the defences and resources of Canada. He subsequently proceeded to Halifax, Nova Scotia, and was in charge of the designing and construction of the extensive fortifications of that military and naval station. He was present for some months with both the Federal and the Confederate armies during the civil war, and on one occasion had his horse shot under him. In 1875 Colonel Hewett was appointed Commandant of the proposed Military College of Canada, at which date neither staff, buildings or defined system existed. He has had the sole organization and working of this institution from its inception to the present date, 1886. In 1885 he was nominated to the command of the Militia and Military Police forces of New Zealand, which appointment, however, his duties in Canada prevented his accepting. The same reason prevented the acceptance by Colonel Hewett of a very high and responsible civil government appointment. The Colonel was married, on the 4th February, 1864, to Catherine Mary, daughter of Major Vincent Biscoe, Royal engineers. Seat, Hookwood, County Surrey, England.

Jardine, Rev. Robert, M.A., B.D., D.Sc., Pastor of the St. John's Presbyterian church, Brockville, was born in the township of Augusta, County of Grenville, Ontario, on the 19th of June, 1840. He is a son of John Jardine and Jane McCreath, who were both natives of Girvan, in Ayrshire, Scotland. His father's family had lived in Ayrshire for three generations, having moved there from Annandale, in Dumfriesshire, the original seat of the Jardine family, where they had lived probably from the time of the Norman conquest. In the family of John Jardine there were one daughter and three sons, the youngest of whom died in youth. The daughter married Rev. Alexander Hunter, a Presbyterian clergy-man (since dead). The eldest son is Alexander Jardine, chief partner in the "Pure Gold" Manufacturing Company, Toronto. The first education received by Robert Jardine was on a farm owned by his father, who, in addition to his work as a builder and contractor, cultivated a farm. In the common school, near Algonquin, the son obtained the first rudiments of knowledge, but his chief preparatory education was obtained in the Grammar school of Brockville, under uate of Trinity College, Dublin. Having come under deep religious convictions about the age of sixteen, the lad became a member of St. John's Presbyterian church, Brockville, and resolved to prepare for the ministry. He matriculated in Queen's University, Kingston, in October, 1860, and attended classes in arts in the college, taking the degree of B.A. in April, 1863. He commenced the study of theology in the autumn of the same year, and continued till the spring of 1866, when he took the degrees of M.A. and B.D. During the two preceding summers, he had laboured as a missionary in Laprairie and Owen Sound. Upon the 18th of June, 1866, he was licensed to preach the gospel by the Presbytery of Perth, and in the autumn of the same year he went to Scotland to prosecute his studies in the University of Edinburgh, giving attention chiefly to philosophy, in which he was greatly interested when at Queen's. he took the degree of Doctor of Science (D.Sc.), in the department of mental philosophy, in the spring of 1867; and he returned to Canada during the summer. In the autumn of 1867, Dr. Jardine was appointed professor of rhetoric and mental and moral philosophy in the University of New Brunswick, which position he held for two In the summer of 1869 he went to Scotland for his holidays, and, during a walking tour in the Highlands, fell in with the Rev. Dr. Norman Macleod, of Glasgow, who had lately returned from India. By him he was induced to go as a missionary to India, and was appointed principal of the General Assembly's institution in Bombay, with instructions to add a college department if possible. In December, 1869, he proceeded to Scotland, en route for India, and, having received final instructions from the Foreign Mission Committee of the Church of Scotland, he was ordained as a minister by the Presbytery of Glasgow, on the 5th January, 1870, and soon thereafter started for India, via Marseilles, Alexandria, and the Red sea, reaching Bombay on the 12th February, 1870. He commenced work at once in the missionary institution there, but found that the prospects of organizing a college faculty were not promising. Having remained in Bombay one year, he was ordered to Calcutta, to assume the principalship of the General Assembly's College there, vacated by the death of Rev. Dr. Ogilvie, who had held it for twenty-five years. There he remained The institution (school and for six years. college) grew rapidly, numbering eventually more than one thousand pupils. It was affiliated with the University of Calcutta, and annually passed a considerable number of matriculants, as well as graduates (B.A. and M.A.); and its history is one of very considerable interest, having been originally founded by Dr. Duff, who, at the disruption in 1843, vacated it and founded another. It was missionary in character. Christian instruction being given in all the classes, and it, along with other similar institutions, has exercised a wide and powerful influence in revolutionizing Hindu thought and life. In addition to his duties connected with the college, he gave attention to other missionary work, and aided the Bengali Christians connected with the mission in organizing themselves into a congregation, and building a church. He was associated frequently with the other missionaries of Calcutta in friendly conference, and was present at the general missionary conference at Allahabad in the winter of 1872-3, where he read a paper upon the Brahma Samaj. In the summer of 1876 he wrote a series of letters to English-speaking Hindus upon important religious subjects, which were published. An edition of five thousand copies was issued, and nearly all sold during the course of pub-The letters, bound together in a volume of two hundred and twenty-four pages, entitled, "What to Believe," were very favourably received. His work of a more general educational and literary character, while in Calcutta, was of considerable importance. He was a frequent contributor to the Calcutta Review and other local papers; was appointed every year as an examiner for degrees in the University of Calcutta; and had the honour of an appointment by the governor-general as a Fellow of the University, thus having a permanent seat in the University Council. On the 16th February, 1877, he left Calcutta for Scotland, on furlough, where he spent some months, preaching and lecturing occasionally. He was employed lecturing at the four Scottish Universities during the winter of 1877-8, upon "Comparative Theology," from a missionary stand-point. After some time spent in Scotland, where he preached for a few months in Dalbeattie, and took charge of the Park Church, Glasgow, in the absence of the Rev. Dr. Donald Macleod, its pastor, for three months, he returned with his family to Canada. He had been offered special inducements by the Foreign Mission Committee to return to Calcutta, but, on account of the health of himself and his wife in India, decided not to go.

n On U at the in W ar in Lis

bu

nii

pa ed:

Th

tez

it 1

 th_1

sut

the

wo

the

crit

pen

Jar

elde

gow

 $\mathbf{\check{T}he}$

ter

of t

near

nort

1835

(Bra

thrif educ

very

fiftee

Corlu

that

the i

He was called to St. Andrew's Church, Chatham, New Brunswick, and settled there in February, 1879, where he remained for two years and four months in charge of that large congregation. He was called, early in 1881, to St. John's Church, Brockville, where he settled on the 1st of May of that year. The year following, the church was enlarged to double its former capacity. He has been a member of the Foreign Mission Committee of the Presbyterian church in Canada ever since his return, and has been for two years convener of the Sabbath school committee; and also a member of the board of trustees of Queen's Rev. Dr. Jardine is a man of marked enthusiasm and force of character. Upon his congregations he has execised an altogether unusual influence; and some of the sermons that he has preached have been among the most thoughtful and striking ever delivered from a Canadian pulpit. While the soundest of churchmen, his views are remarkable for their liberality, for their independence, and for their enlightenment. Likewise, too, Rev. Dr. Jardine has published works of a high and permanent value, but the most remarkable of his books is, "The Elements of the Psychology of Cognition," brought out by Macmillan & Company, and which has gone through several editions since its first appearance in 1874. This work may be regarded as an elementary text-book, and though the subject on which it treats is seemingly not one to arouse enthusiasm, yet the doctor has made a dry subject readable, and a profound one within the range of general comprehension. The work has been very favourably received by the press, having called forth elaborate criticisms from many of our most capable pens. On October 27th, 1873, Rev. Dr. Jardine married, in Calcutta, Agnes Hunter, eldest daughter of John Hunter, of Glasgow, a retired manufacturer, since deceased. There have been three sons and one daughter by this union.

was

butta.

mber

B.A.

very

nally ption

r. It n in-

, and

, has

e in

ln

the

sion-

tians

izing

ding

ntly

a in

abad

aper mer Eng-

reli-

An

ied, pub-

n a

fonr

vere

f a

nar-

ble

tor

ers;

for

 $\mathbf{n}\mathbf{d}$

the

ni-

in

Kirkland, Thomas, M.A., Principal of the Normal School, Toronto, was born near Tanderagee, County of Armagh, in the north of Ireland, on the 12th of August, 1835. He is a son of Thomas and Anne (Bradshaw) Kirkland, his father being a thrifty farmer. Thomas received his early education at the parish school, which was very inferior in those times. At the age of fifteen years he was appointed teacher of the Corlust National School, and after holding that position for one year was selected by the inspector for training in the Normal School, Dublin. After going through the usual course of training at that institution, he spent some time at the Albert National Agricultural Training Institution, Glasnevin, near Dublin, studying the theory and practice of agriculture. Having completed the course at Dublin he entered Queen's College, Belfast, as a student of civil engineering. While pursuing his studies there he contracted an illness, and was advised to seek a dryer climate. While in the Normal School, Dublin, he attracted the notice of Archbishop Whately, then chairman of the Commissioners of National Education in Ireland, and from him received a letter of introduction to the Rev. Dr. Ryerson. He came to Canada by the way of New York in the summer of 1854, crossed from Rochester to Cobourg, and in order to see the country took the stage to Toronto. He arrived at Oshawa on a Saturday night, and determined to remain there until Monday morning; but while there he heard two of the trustees of the Central School lamenting the illness of the assistant master. He offered his services and was engaged to teach at a salary of $320 till the end The next year he was apof the year. pointed principal at a salary of $500. He left Oshawa for Whitby at the beginning of 1857, and left Whitby the following year to become mathematical master in the Barrie Grammar school. While Mr. Kirkland was in Barrie the pupils greatly distinguished themselves in mathematics; the last year carrying off both the mathematical scholarships. Mr. Kirkland matriculated in the University of Toronto, in 1859, obtaining a scholarship in mathematics, and honors in all subjects. He pursued his studies in University College for three years. In 1863 he was appointed principal of the Whitby High school, which position he held till 1871. During his principalship a large number of the students distinguished themselves at the Toronto University. Many of these are now filling important educational positions. Amongst these are Professor Panton, M.A., Agricultural College, Guelph; principal Goggins, Normal school, Winnipeg; principal Dickson, M.A., Upper Canada College; principal Carscadden, M.A., Galt Collegiate Institute; John E. Bryant, M.A., editor of Educational Weekly, and a large number of others who are now occupying prominent places in other professions. In 1871 Mr. Kirkland was selected by Dr. Ryerson to fill the position of science master in the Toronto Normal School, which position he held till the close of 1884, when,

on the resignation of Dr. Davies, he was appointed principal. Mr. Kirkland was one of the first elective members of the senate of the University of Toronto, and he has been for many years a member of the senate of Knox College. He is a director of the Upper Canada Bible Society; and for ten years occupied the chair of general chemmistry and physics in the Trinity Medical School, Toronto, and during the same period was lecturer on Botany in this institution. He married in 1863, Jane Todd, eldest daughter of the Rev. Dr. Thornton, of Oshawa. Mr. Kirkland has published a work on statics, which has been authorized by the Education department of Ontario, and the Education department of Manitoba. He is joint author of Kirkland and Scott's arithmetic and Hamblin Smith's arithmetic, authorized by all the provinces in the Dominion, also of McLellan and Kirkland's examination papers in arithmetic, and of several articles in educational periodicals.

Charteris, Charles George, Chatham, Ontario, was born on the 25th July, 1828, in Dumfriesshire, Scotland, and is the youngest son of Charles Charteris, of Cullivait House, in the same county, by his wife, Diana, daughter of John Reed, of Craggs, Northumberland, England. The Charteris family is a very ancient one in the annals of Dumfriesshire,—the Charteris, of Amisfield, who are believed to have been originally French, having settled in Scotland in the reign of Malcolm IV. (1153), more than seven centuries ago. A large tract of land in Dumfriesshire was granted to the family for important services to the king, and a portion of this land is still in the possession of some of the descendants. The following may prove interesting in connection with the ancient history of the family. On the night of April 4th, 1608, James VI. slept at Amisfield, on his way to England, and the bed on which the king slept on this occasion is still preserved in the Museum of Antiquities in Edinburgh; as also a door on which a hero of the Charteris family is represented in the act of tearing the jaws of a lion asunder, the same being the representation of an incident verified in the history of the family. Mr. Charteris's father was a captain in the 28th Light Dragoons, and on the disbandment of that regiment, he became adjutant of the Dumfriesshire Yeomanry Cavalry. Charles George received his education in part at the High school of his native county, and at a private academy in Brampton, England. In his eighteenth year he set out to seek his fortune in the new world, and on reaching Chatham, was for a time employed in the establishment of Witherspoon & Charteris, general merchants and agents for the Gore Bank, his cousin, Alexander Charteris being one of the partners. Five or six years later Mr. Charteris engaged in the lumber business with William Baxter, and continued in the same until 1857, when he received the appointment of treasurer of Kent coun. This office he still holds, and there is not in the province, if the testimony of the inhabitants of the county is to be accepted, a more popular and capable official. Mr. Charteris has had a conspicuous career in municipal politics. He sat for two terms in the town council; was the second mayor of Chatham (1857), and acted for a period as chairman of the Board of School Trustees, In numerous ways he has rendered good service to the community, and has always had the progress of his adopted place and the people at heart. Mr. Charteris is a staunch Reformer of much local influence, and his religious tenets are those of Presbyterianism. He was at one time agent for the Bank of Upper Canada at Chatham, and was retain. ed in the disposal and management of its real estate in Kent county. He married on the 25th December, 1849, Elizabeth, daughter of William Baxter, and by this lady has had a family of eight children. Five of these survive, three sons and two daughters.

Bowman, Israel David, Berlin, Ontario, was born in 1830, in the township of Waterloo, now the County of Waterloo. He is a son of Henry Baer Bowman, a native of Pennsylvania, U.S., who came to Upper Canada in 1825, and Judith Bauman a native of Ontario, I. D. Bowman was educated at Rockwood Academy, and took there a commercial course. He was reeve of the town of Berlin in 1858, and was appointed county clerk for the County of Waterloo in 1861, and county treasurer in 1880, and has held these offices continuously since the dates of his appointment. Mr. Bowman is a member of the Church of England. He married in 1864, Angelina L, daughter of John U. Tyson, of Pennsyl-By this marriage there were three The eldest son is studying civil children. engineering and surveying, and received a diploma in civil engineering from the Toronto University in 1885. He is a member of K company of the Queen's Own, and accompanied that corps to Battleford and other points during the late rebellion in the North-West.

the (Mill 1844 How Puri Willi Toro progr $\mathbf{U}_{\mathbf{p}\mathbf{p}\epsilon}$ went he re age. was schol: profic schoo ity wa rogan kindli all. tered took a of wh steady himse and sp have e promi munit City I elected who e countr well as Insura all of v der his of the l For tw ronto I been a Manufa ronto . Howlar penden porter A. Mac by the In com Murric young First p upon a

has sinc

by pron

political

thropic

an idle

a great

H

Howland, William H., Mayor of the City of Toronto, was born at Lambton Mills, in the County of York, in the year 1844. His parents [Vide sketch of Sir W. P. Howland, page 301 of this volume], were of Puritan stock, and settled in Canada in 1830. William received his earlier education in the Toronto Academy, where he made rapid progress; and in 1855 was transferred to Upper Canada College, and subsequently went to the Model Grammar school, where he remained until he was sixteen years of age. As a learner he was indefatigable, and was always known as a solid, all-round scholar, sure to stand well in the general proficiency record. His popularity with his school-fellows was great, as his natural ability was unaccompanied by any shade of arrogance or assumed superiority, while his kindliness and manliness were admired by all. In 1860, when Sir W. P. Howland entered public life, his sixteen-year-old son took a place in the large business institution of which that gentleman was head. The steady and persevering lad at once found himself at home in his new sphere of life, and speedily developed business talents that have ever since kept him a successful and prominent member of the mercantile community. In 1872, he organized the Queen City Insurance Company, of which he was elected president, being the youngest man who ever assumed such a position in this country. This position he still retains, as well as a similar one in the Hand-in-Hand Insurance Company and Canadian Lloyd's, all of which have prospered remarkably under his guidance. He is also vice-president of the Millers and Manufacturers' Company. For two years he was president of the Toronto Board of Underwriters, and has also been an executive officer of the Dominion Manufacturers' Association and of the Toronto Board of Trade. Politically, Mr. Howland has always been remarkably independent in his views. He is a warm sup-porter of the national policy of Sir John A. Macdonald, and with equal zeal stands by the Hon. Mr. Mowat's government. In company with W. A. Foster, W. B. Mc-Murrich and other independent thinking young politicians, he formed the Canada First party, on a platform then looked upon as somewhat chimerical, but which has since been adopted in its main features by prominent leaders of both the present political parties. In relation to philanthropic work Mr. Howland has not been an idle spectator, and has already devoted a great deal of his time and means to helping to make the world better. His attention was first turned to the temperance question when the Dunkin Act was submitted to the electors of Toronto in the year 1877. He then carefully examined the whole question, came to the conclusion that the arguments against the liquor traffic were sound and wise, accepted the situation, became both a total abstainer and a prohibitionist, and at once threw his energies into the organized temperance and prohibition work in which he has since played so prominent a part. The following year he was appointed by the Ontario government a member of the Trust Board of the Toronto hospital, of which he acted as chairman until 1879. He succeeded in raising the management of that institution to a point of efficiency that it had never before attained. A large amount of property was secured, and $100,000 invested in permanent improvements, some of the most important of which were the Eye and Ear Infirmary, the Fever Hospital and the Lying-in Hospital. But one of Toronto's prominent monuments of Mr. Howland's enterprise and benevolence will be the Industrial School. Fifty acres of ground have been secured for this at Mimico; $17,000 of money has already been raised; building operations have been commenced and will be completed during the present year. There will be accommodation for 200 boys, who will be drawn from that class with whom ordinary school-teachers usually find it very difficult to deal. Pending the completion of the building, a temporary truant school has been established, with an average attendance of seventy pupils. This sorely needed effort in the interests of a much neglected class has, however, no exclusive place in the sympathies of this noble worker. He is chairman of the executive committee of the Prisoner's Aid Association, and superintendent of a very interesting Sunday-school in the Mercer reformatory; and he also takes a very deep interest in the Toronto mission union, founded by ardent Christian workers, to provide religious instruction and privileges for a large class of the community that had before stayed entirely outside all church organizations. Socially, Mr. Howland is a great favourite. Kind-hearted, approachable and unassuming, he at once wins a confidence that remains unshaken. In 1873, Mr. Howland married Laura Chipman. sister of the wife of Sir Leonard Tilley, lieutenant-governor of New Brunswick, and a family of three girls is the fruit of this

d

Casgrain, Abbe Henry Raymond, a distinguished French Canadian writer, was born at Riviere Ouelle, in the Province of Quebec, on the 16th of December, 1831. He is doctor of literature at Laval University; member of the Royal Society of Canada; corresponding member of the Geographical Society of Paris, France; corresponding member of the Royal Academy of Pisa, Italy; corresponding member of the Historical Society of Boston, and member of the American Historical Association. He is the son of the Honourable Charles Eusebe Casgrain, barrister, late delegate of the Legislative Assembly of Lower Canada, member of the special counsel of the same province, and assistant commissioner of public works. His mother was Eliza Ann Baby. His paternal family are originally from Ervault, in the ancient province of Poitou, in France. The first of this name who came to Canada about 1750 was Jean Baptiste Casgrain, an officer of the French army. His son, Pierre Casgrain, was lord of Riviere Ouelle and the island, and was the grandfather of the subject of this sketch. On his mother's side L'Abbe Casgrain is descended from one of the oldest families of Nouvelle France. The first ancestor who came to this country, Jacques Babie, was an officer in the regiment of Larignau-Saliers, who disembarked at Quebec in 1665; he was the son of Jean Babie, lord of Rainville and Isabeau Robin; his father and mother were from Monttou, not far from Mermandes, France. His descendants are always numbered among the most remarkable families of Canada. The great-grandfather of Madame Casgrain, Jacques Duperon Baby, settled in Detroit at the beginning of the last century, and served as an officer in the Canadian militia during the war of the conquest. (See Parkman's "Conspiracy of Pontiac," and "Montcalm and Wolfe.") At his death he was judge in the City of Detroit. One of his sons, the Honourable Jacques Duperon Baby, speaker of the Legislative Council of Upper Canada, was the father of Madame Casgrain. The Abbe Casgrain, after having pursued a course of classical studies at Ste. Ann's College, Province of Quebec, for a short time, studied medicine, afterwards adopted an ecclesiastical career, took his theological course at the Quebec seminary, and was ordained a priest on the 5th of October, 1856. He was successively professor at Ste. Ann's College until 1859, vicar of Beaufort, and afterwards at Quebec Cathedral from 1860 to 1873. The Abbe travelled in Europe in 1858, and again in 1867, in quest of historical materials; and returned there in 1873. passed the winters of 1880 and 1881 in Louisiana, was at Florida in 1882, and arrived at the island of Cuba in 1885. These extended travels were of inestimable value in Abbe Casgrain's literary labours. was obliged to retire from the active ministry in 1874, owing to a serious affection of the eyes. His permanent residence is at Quebec. His first literary effort, "Legends Canadien," was published at Quebec in 1861, by J. F. Brousseau, printer. This pretty volume is printed in elegant European style, and contains three legends, of which two have been published in the Courrier du Canada, and reproduced in Europe, as has already been made known at the Abbe's lectures. The third is filled with the last reminiscence of "Soires Canadiennes: Le Tableau de la Rivière Ouelle," the "Pron-niers," and "La Jougleuse," are interesting accounts of the adventures of the first settlers in the earliest days of the colony. They are written in a glowing and fine style, and form a complete and charming group of poetry, of which the value is fully appreciated by those who know the beautiful parishes south of the St. Lawrence river below Quebec. Brought up amidst these grand sites, of a Christian family and distinguished society, the Abbe Casgrain has retained a touching remembrance of these beautiful rural scenes, and of past events which amused him in infancy. A voyage to Europe made later on, as he relates in a sort of prologue to his last legend, revealed to him the literary value of his remembrances, and induced him to write them. Owing to these happy circumstances, literature has been enriched by the publishing of this agreeable volume, "Journal of Public Instruction." His next work, "L'Historie de la Marie de l'Incarnation," appeared in 1864, and was published by Desbarats. There was also a second edition in 1865; the third, in 1873, by C. Darveau; and a fourth, in 1882, by L. Brousseau. This remarkable book was translated into German by the Abbe Geiger, of Munich, Bavaria, and published at Ratisbon in 1873. Of the many merited eulogiums passed by the highest authorities on this great literary performance, our space will only permit quoting the following:-"This is certainly the handsomest work we have yet seen from the Canadian press, and well deserves its dress. The Teresa of New France, whose biography her son portrayed in the 17th century, and Charleveil in the 18th, had her claims upon the 19th; and

C٤

lit

cla

co

an

th

we

be

ou

tai

wł

lif

jec "]

cei

in

tal

cre

art

gai

wh

Bil

me

the

pre

Va.

gre

Fra

Ab

agr

 \bar{Die}

Car

wri

the

mac

tory

incl

firs

syst

full

grai

ume

espe

very

mag

liter

M. I

field

183

Ster

fron

who

Mas

Spri

desc

ous,

L. C

Wis

Canada, in one of her most gifted sons, a litterateur of exquisite taste, of rich and classic language, pays the tribute of his country to the heroine whose exalted piety and devotion can rouse even the sons of the Puritans to admiration. Mr. Casgrain weaves into his narrative all the grace and beauty of style called for in our day, without neglecting the accuracy of historical detail or the pious element, the omission of which, as a pervading atmosphere in such a life, would be a misconception of the subject."—American Historical Magazine (N.Y).
"For this work l'Abbe Casgrain has received a medal from His Holiness the Pope in recognition of its literary merits. talented author has done much towards creating a correct taste in literature and the arts amongst his countrymen, and is regarded as one of the most finished writers which the French Canadians possess."-Bibliotheca Canadensis. Of the Abbe's numerous biographies, reviews, criticisms, etc., the thoughtful reader will be amply repaid by purchasing his "Œuvres Completes," at present being published by Beauchemin & Valois, St. Paul Street, Montreal. The greater number of reviews and journals of France have shown their appreciation of the Abbe Casgrain's books. The Parisian critics agree in saying that his "Historie d'Hotel Dieu de Quebec," as well as "Me Paroisse Canadienne au xvii. eme Siecle;" which were written after his talents had matured, are the best of his works. The former has made known a number of facts in the history of Canada before ignored; the second includes and has searched deeply into the first trials of colonization under the feudal system during the old regime. To give a full and adequate sketch of the Abbe Casgrain's life and works would require volumes, instead of pages. His countrymen, especially French Canadians, ought to be very proud that a star of such brilliancy and magnitude has in our time illumined the literary firmament.

se

ıe

Iе

οf

at ls

1,

іў е, vo

as

st

ıg ty.

e, of i-

> aul he one

> > nle "

> > > Stephenson, Rufus, Chatham, ex-M.P. for Kent, Ontario, was born at Springfield, Massachusetts, on the 14th January, 1835. He is a son of Eli and Chloe (Chapin) Stephenson. His mother was descended from Deacon Samuel Chapin, a Puritan, who came to Roxbury, now part of Boston, Massachusetts, prior to 1640, and settled at Springfield, in the same state, in 1642. The descendants of Deacon Chapin are numerous, and include Judge Henry Chapin; A. L. Chapin, D.D., president of Beloit college, Wisconsin; the Hon. Moses Chapin, Hon.

Wm. H. Seward; Henry Ward Beecher; Dr. J. G. Holland, late editor of the Century; R. D. Hitchcock, and other eminent men. In September, 1862, a meeting of Deacon Samuel Chapin's descendants was held at Springfield, Massachusetts; and between two and three thousand of the same were present. The grandfather of Rufus Stephenson came from Lancashire, England, and belonged to that branch of the family from which sprung George and Robert Stephenson, so famous as railway engineers. grandmother was of the Murphys of Londonderry, north of Ireland. When Rufus was an infant the family removed to St. Catharines, and where he afterwards attended the Grantham academy. His maternal uncle, the late Col. Eleazer William Stephenson, was prominent as one of the promoters of the scheme for the construction of what is now known as the Welland canal, and he was one of the directors associated with the late William Hamilton Merritt, of the Welland Canal Company. Colonel Stephenson was connected prominently with many other enterprises which tended largely to develop the interests of the Niagara district. We may add that it was Colonel Stephenson who established the first Royal mail stage-coach line through Upper Canada from Niagara to Detroit; and in later years he was intimately connected with the following well-known and enterprising Canadians: Messrs. Taylor, Chatham; Segar, London; Babcock, Brantford; Davis, Hamilton; Haynes, St. Catharines; Bernard, Toronto; and Weller of Cobourg. Colonel Stephenson was killed by the running away of a pair of horses that he was driving. Rufus, his nephew, was in the carriage with him at the time, and narrowly escaped with his life. Stephenson learnt the trade of printer in the offices of the St. Catharines Journal; the Long Point Advocate, Simcoe; and the British American, Woodstock. He went to-Chatham in 1850 as foreman and associate editor of the office of the Kent Advertiser, but after a little while he took charge of the Chatham Planet, of which journal he became proprietor in 1854. He conducted this paper until 1878, when he disposed of it to his two oldest sons, Sydney and Edwin Frederick Stephenson. While under the management of Rufus Stephenson the Planet was one of the very ablest journals in the province, always revealing much thought, originality and conspicuous vigour. Under the management of the sons, the paper continues to hold a high place among Canadian journals. Mr. Stephenson has been chairman of the common school board of Chatham; chief engineer of the fire department; a member of the county board of public instruction; member of the town council for twelve years; a member of the county council for one term; and mayor for three terms in succession, being elected twice by acclamation. He became captain of No. 2 company, 24th battalion of Volunteer infantry in 1866, and has since retired with the rank of major. In 1867 he was elected to the first Dominion parliament for the County of Kent, and was re-elected in 1872, 1874 and 1878. In parliament he was an earnest, active worker, and he was a man of much influence. Some of the legislative measures initiated by him were that respecting naturalized foreigners in British colonial possessions, and the coasting relations with the United States and the navigation of inland waters. He was the author likewise of various other measures of public importance. In politics he was, and is, a staunch Liberal-Conservative. He is a Freemason, and has been secretary of lodge 46. Wellington. He married in 1854, Georgina Emma, eldest daughter of Thomas Andrew, barrister, formerly of London, England, and grand-daughter of Joseph Sparks, of the County of Kent, England, at one time a director of the East India Company. There are by this union nine children. five sons and four daughters. The eldest son, Sydney, married Georgina Minty, of Woodstock, Ont.; and Chloe Eleanor, married B. H. G. Vicars, of Toronto.

Leitch, James, Barrister, Cornwall, Ontario, was born on the 2nd June, 1850, at the South Branch, in the township of Cornwall, in the County of Stormont, Ontario, and is a son of William Leitch, who was born at Ardrossan, Ayrshire, Scotland. William Leitch came to Canada when sixteen years of age (1832), and served in the Stormont militia, under Col. Vankoughnet. during the rebellion of 1837-8. He followed the occupation of contractor on public works for a number of years, and finally settled down to farming in the township of Cornwall. He took an active part in municipal affairs, and sat for a number of years in the council of the township of Cornwall. His wife, James Leitch's mother, daughter of David Bryden, of Williamstown, was of Scotch extraction. James Leitch was educated at the common school of the neighbourhood in which he was born, and at the Williamstown and Cornwall Grammar schools; and under the private tutorship of J. Lawton Bradbury, late principal of the Cornwall Grammar school. He acquired most of his education in the winter months, being engaged in the work of his father's farm in the spring and summer. He was admitted a member of the Law Society of Ontario in Hilary term, 1871, and commenced the study of law, in Cornwall, with the late James Bethune. In 1872 he went to Toronto, and pursued his studies in the office of Crooks, Kingsmill & Cattanach, of which firm the late Hon. Adam Crooks, then treasurer of Ontario, was the head. He was called to the bar of Ontario in Easter term of 1876. Mr. Leitch commenced the practice of his profession in June, 1876, in the town of Cornwall, and after practising alone till February, 1877, entered into partnership with R. B. Carman, now junior judge of the united counties of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry. Upon Mr. Carman's appointment to the bench, Mr. Leitch entered into partnership with R. A. Pringle, under the. firm name of Leitch & Pringle. Shortly after he commenced practice, Mr. Leitch was retained for the defence, in the Smith murder trial, and being largely instrumental in securing the acquittal of the prisoner, he established a reputation which at once brought him a large practice. He has been retained in some of the most important civil trials in the united counties of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Mr. Leitch was elected reeve of the town of Cornwall for the year 1884, and was a candidate for the wardenship of the united counties for that year, but was defeated by F. D. Mc-Naughton, by a majority of one vote. He was elected mayor of Cornwall, for the years 1885 and 1886, by acclamation. taking office, the finances of the town being in an embarrassed condition, he at once formulated a scheme for the consolidation of the debt of the town, which, upon being submitted to the freeholders, was defeated by a small majority, but which was finally carried, upon a second vote being taken, by a large majority. He succeeded then in putting the finances upon a sound founda-He likewise instituted and carried to tion. a successful termination important drainage works in the town. He has been a High School trustee for several years, and takes much interest in educational affairs. He took an active part in promoting the passing of a by-law raising $25,000 to build a new public school in the town of Cornwall. He married Elizabeth, third daughter of E. Strickland, merchant, Buckingham, on the 18th October, 1876. Mr. Leitch is a Pres-

tith oswinig ti of

la

le

byterian, and is a Conservative in politics. He has taken an active part in promoting the temperance cause, as well as all other worthy public movements. He is a man of marked energy and conspicuous natural talent. There is, unquestionably, a future for him in a wider political field than he has so far occupied.

mmar

cation

n the

g and

per of

term,

w, in

ed his

lings-

e late

d to 1876.

f his

vn of

e till

rship

of the

and

ointinto

the.

ortly

eitch

mith

ental

r, he

once

been

tant Stor-

eitch

wall

for

s for

Mc-

He ears

pon eing

bnce

tion

eing

ated

ally , by 1 in 1da-

l to

age igh

kes He

188-

d a

all.

E.

he

On-

In

so far occupied. Williams, Walter Scott, Napanee, was born in the County of Prince Edward, Ontario, on 24th May, 1833. His father, Isaac Williams, who was a son of Samuel Williams, was born in Poughkeepsie, N.Y. His mother was Charlotte, daughter of Moses Herrington, late of Wellington, in the County of Prince Edward, Province of Ontario, who was born at Albany, N.Y. Walter was educated at Fairfield Academy, N.Y., and Victoria College, Cobourg. He studied law with the Hon. Lewis Wallbridge, who is now chief justice of Manitoba, and also with D. B. Read, Q.C., Toronto. He resided in Belleville, up to 1863, when he removed to Napanee. Mr. Williams has always taken a prominent part in all public undertakings which would help to advance the welfare of Napanee. saw the advantage to the town of a railway to the north, that would open up the back country, rich in iron and other minerals, and bring to it its products, and thence originated the Napanee, Tamworth and Quebec Railway. It was mainly through his efforts that the different municipalities voted bonuses to build the road. He has been its secretary since its incorporation in 1879. In 1874, he was elected mayor of Napanee, and he filled that important post so ably that his fellow townsmen re-elected him in the years 1875 and 1876. As a member of the Independent Order of Good Templars, perhaps, more than anything else, Mr. Williams has earned a world wide reputation. He entered that order in 1867, and itwas not long before the Grand Lodge elected him grand worthy chief templar, the highest office in its gift; and also one of its representatives to the Right Worthy Grand lodge, which held its meeting in London, England, in 1873. At that meeting he was elected right worthy grand secretary of the Supreme Grand Lodge, which office he held consecutively until May 26, 1880. At the session of the Right Worthy Grand Lodge, held in Louisville, Kentucky, in 1876, occurred a large secession from that body under the leadership of the grand worthy chief templar of England, on the plea that coloured people were refused admittance to the order. was in this emergency that the subject of our sketch by his zeal, financial help, and business tact and energy helped to stem the tide of secession and save the order, that his name became a household word in the homes of its members, throughout the United States, Canada, Great Britain, Africa, Australia, New Zealand, India, and wherever this world wide order had planted its lodges. Napanee through him thus became known as the headquarters of the order, and representatives from all parts of the world have visited it, and received his hospitality. He is a member of the Masonic lodge in Napanee, and of the Royal and Oriental Rites of Freemasonry, as well as of the Foresters, and other societies. He has travelled considerably, having visited Great Britain, and the continent, most of the states of the Union, and the different provinces of the Dominion. In politics he is an independent Reformer, and not bound to party. In religion he is a Methodist. He is United States consular agent at Napanee, having been commissioned by President Arthur on 21st October, 1882, and he is agent for the Western Canada Loan and Savings Company of Toronto. Mr. Williams married Elmora Lydia, daughter of J. S. Huffman, of Sidney, County of Hastings, Ontario, on the 19th day of January, 1857, and has a family of four daughters.

Cleary, James Vincent, D.D., Bishop of Kingston, Ontario, was born on the 18th day of September, 1828, in Dungarvon, a seaport town in the county of Waterford, Ireland, which was for several centuries a parliamentary borough, but lost this priviege last year by the new Distribution of Seats act. He is a son of Thomas Cleary and Margaret O'Brien, both natives of Dun-James Vincent Cleary received garvan. his elementary education in a select private school of his native town. The English course embraced Grecian, Roman and English history, which were extensively and accurately taught; also mathematics and literary composition. The Latin and Greek classics, prose and verse, were studied more diligently in that and similar private schools in Ireland in those days than in many colleges of high repute at the present time. At fifteen years of age, having completed the English and classical curriculum of studies in the Dungarvan school, he was sent by his parents to Rome for his ecclesiastical education. It was a long journey from Ireland to Rome, undertaken by so young a boy, when the mode of conveyance, everywhere outside England, was the old stage-coach, called in France the diligence.

The journey that now may be made in four short days and nights was not accomplished by this hardy young Levite without twenty days of weary travelling and much discomfort on land and sea. Pope Gregory XVI. then wore the tiara, and Dr. Cullen, subsequently Cardinal Archbishop of Dublin, was rector of the Irish college in Rome, to which the subject of this notice was admitted as an aspirant to the priesthood. Here he devoted himself with ardour to the study of languages and afterwards to phil-Sir Robert Peel, the prime minisosophy. ter of England, carried a bill through parliament in the year 1845, increasing the endowment of Maynooth college, near Dublin, to £26,000 a year. This being an exclusively ecclesiastical seminary, in which every catholic bishop in Ireland had the right of placing a certain number of pupils, the Bishop of Waterford, to whom James Vincent Cleary was subject, recalled the latter from Rome, and placed him in the Royal College of Maynooth. Here he passed five years in the pursuit of ecclesiastical sciences: philosophy, history, dogmatic and moral theology, Scriptural exegesis and canon law, constituted the curriculum. He won the highest prizes of the college in each department of study. His course in Maynooth having been completed in five years, he received the order of deaconship, which bound him irrevocably to the ecclesiastical state, and he returned home to Dungarvan in June, 1851, being still too young to be admitted to the priesthood. In the following September, the day after he had completed his twenty-third year, which is the prescribed age, he was ordained priest, in his native town, at the hands of the Bishop of Waterford, and immediately proceeded to Spain, where he entered the famous University of Salamanca, for the further storing of his mind with sacred science. In 1854 he was summoned home by his bishop to occupy the chair of dogmatic theology and scriptural exegesis in St. John's college, Waterford. Soon his health gave way under the strain of excessive labour, and for some years he was compelled to relax his studies, and confine himself to the narrowest limits of professional work. In 1863 he had, however, sufficiently regained physical strength to enable him to go through an exceptionally severe ordeal. The Irish Catholic hierarchy had been half a score of years endeavouring to obtain from the British government a charter for the university founded by them at the bidding of Pope Pius IX, for the higher education of the Catholic youth in Ireland, in opposition to the Queen's college, which had been not long established by royal charter, on the principle of non-religious education. had been objected that the Pope's university was an unchartered institution, without graduates or the faculty to create them. To meet this argument, the bishops resolved to exercise the papal charter of conferring theological degrees, and making a public demonstration in connection with it. The rector was authorized to search out some ecclesiastic capable of taking the critical position of candidate for doctor of divinity, and such candidate was obliged to undergo a public examination in the entire curriculum of Catholic theology before friend and foe for three successive days in the hall of the Catholic univer-The professor of dogmatic theology in St. John's college, Waterford, was selected. A series of propositions, embracing all the great truths of Christian revelation were printed and forwarded to all the colleges and the eminent divines of the country, with an invitation to every one to come and oppose the candidate's theses. For three days the trial of strength continued, the candidate not knowing who his objectors each day should be, or what theses they came prepared to controvert until he found himself face to face with them before the great assembly of the learned. The profoundest interest was excited by this intellectual contest, such as had not been witnessed in Ireland since the Reformation. On the third day all the bishops of Ireland were present, and amid enthusiastic plaudits the Rev. James Vincent Cleary was solemnly decorated with the cap and ring and other insignia of the doctorate in divinity, by authority of Pope Pius IX, and the senate of the Catholic University of Ireland. Degrees have been conferred on some others by the same university since 1863; but not with anything like the same severity of test or solemnity of circumstances, academical or political. In 1873 Dr. Cleary was appointed to the office of president of the Waterford college, and he did much to elevate the standard of studies in that centre of ecclesiastical learning. Concurrently with his college duties, which were onerous, he filled the post of doctrinal expositor in the Cathedral of Waterford, and acquired distinction as a preacher. Bishops of neighbouring dioceses not unfrequently invited him to occupy their pulpits; and on the occasion of the consecration of the Most Rev. Dr. Power, the present bishop of Water-

for

to

qu

ene

and

par

wa

the

the

hie

un

In

of '

tar

fai

pre

wa

his

wa

kno

hin

pol

ber

was

con

wh

obl

fra

cou

ref

att

tho

or a

fra

we]

He

suc

few

and

she

the

an i

dist

van

the

the

sea

pol

par

Ma

bor

def

prie

nat

of 1

ord

Hol

stor

or c

con

ford, he was elected the preacher of the day, to expound the duties and rights and requirements of the episcopal office in presence of an immense assemblage of bishops and clergy and laity, gathered from all parts of the province. In 1875 Dr. Cleary was chosen by his bishop as consulting theologian to accompany his lordship to the National synod of the Irish Catholic hierarchy, held in the College of Maynooth, under the presidency of Cardinal Cullen. In the synod he was appointed by the body of bishops to the important post of secretary to the committee that had to deal with faith, its dogma and dangers, and means of preservation and extension. In 1876 he was promoted to the living of Dungarvan, his native parish, and was accorded a most warm public welcome by the people who had known him from infancy and were proud of him. Dr. Cleary had never interfered in politics until his appointment to the incumbency of Dungarvan. Here, however, it was deemed part of his duties to direct and control his parishioners in the discharge of what he propounded as a high conscientious obligation—the honest exercise of the suffrage, on which the supreme interests of his country and religion depended. reference he published some letters which attracted considerable attention, especially those anent the grave criminality of giving or accepting bribes in exchange for the suf-His teachings on this subject are well remembered in all parts of Ireland. He went with the Irish national party, and succeeded in gathering his whole flock, with few exceptions, to act in concert with him and with one another. The result was shewn in the first parliamentary contest by the unseating of Henry Matthews, Q.C., an English catholic barrister of high legal distinction, who was member for Dungar-van when Dr. Cleary took possession of the parish, and was confident of reaching the English bench, could he but hold his seat for a few years and do service for his political party. Two years subsequently, parliament having been dissolved, Mr. Matthews again endeavored to capture the borough of Dungarvan, and again he was defeated by the united action of the parish priest and his parishioners in favour of a national candidate. This was in the spring of 1880. In September of the same year an order was received by Dr. Cleary from the Holy See appointing him Bishop of Kingston, in Ontario, Canada. He had no voice or option in the matter. He had not been

to

he

Ιt

ty

ut

m.

e-

n-

a

it. ut ti-

of

ed

he

e-ve

r-

e. d,

an

to

of

hе

is

es

he

Roman authorities on the score of feeble health, and the danger of facing a Canadian climate, and his absolute unacquaintance with the condition of church affairs in King-The sole reply received by him was an unconditional mandate to renounce his benefice in Ireland and go to the see of Kingston. He went straightway to Rome, and was there consecrated bishop on the 21st of November, 1880, in the chapel of the Propaganda, by his eminence Cardinal Simeoni, prefect of all the missions of the Catholic world. The assistant bishops in the consecration were His Grace Archbishop Croke, of Cashel, and His Lordship Dr. Butler, bishop of Limerick. Six other Irish bishops and a large number of prelates from various countries took part in the ceremony. On the arrival of the Right Rev. Dr. Cleary in his Episcopal city of Kingston, he was the recipient of an ovation surpassing in grandeur and enthusiasm every popular demonstration of former times in that city. The Protestants joined with the Catholics in welcoming the new bishop. Although it was an unheard of innovation to bring a parish priest from Ireland for the government of a Canadian diocese-by the way the oldest diocese in the Dominion after Quebec-and persons were not wanting to canvass the action of the Holy See in disregarding the supposed claims of native ecclesiastics, it is not a little remarkable that never did so numerous an assembly of bishops and priests appear at the installation of any prelate as on this occasion. The archbishop and all the bishops of the ecclesiastical province of Toronto, the bishops of Montreal and Ottawa, and the leading dignitaries of their several districts united in the cathedral of Kingston on that day to witness the priests of the diocese paying homage and offering their canonical obedience to the stranger, whom not one of them had ever before laid his eyes upon, but who had come to them by the mandate of the Sovereign Pontiff, whom they acknowledged to be Christ's Vicar and the Ruler of the Universal Church. Most certainly it constituted a visible proof, if such were wanted, of the living reality of the faith of Catholics in the divinely-appointed order of the church. The Right Rev. Dr. Cleary holds aloof from Canadian politics. He deals with Conservatives and Liberals, as a friend of both, and it is impossible to conjecture from his course of action which side he would take were he to engage in public affairs. In social gatherconsulted. Twice he remonstrated with the ings, and in questions of a purely benevolent character, he takes his place at times among the men of action in Kingston, and has delivered some public addresses that have commanded reverent attention, and the applause of good men of all sections. He does not, however, conceal his sentiments on the great Irish question that agitates England and Englishmen, the whole world over, with so much ferment. At a meeting held in the city hall of Kingston last autumn (1885), he stated Ireland's claim to self-government in a clear, candid and argumentative speech that excited the wrath of all anti-home rulers, and provoked the ire of the Orangemen of Kingston to such a degree that they held a countermeeting to protest against it. The chief occupation of Right Rev. Dr. Cleary is, however, with the spiritual interests of his dio-He is ever in motion through his missionary districts, conferring with his clergy and with committees of the laity, on the needs of their churches and congregations and schools, rectifying abuses and ordering things anew for the advancement of religion and morality. He has established several new missions since his advent to the diocese, and has multiplied the clergy for the service of out-lying districts. He has founded convents and schools, and erected many new churches, some of which are models of architectural beauty. Priests are now resident among the people where a priest never resided before, and handsome and commodious presbyteries have been built for them by grateful parishioners. He is engaged at present in completing his noble cathedral exteriorly and adorning it interiorly. All the windows of his cathedral have been filled by him with stained glass of exquisite beauty of colour and design, exhibiting about one hundred tableaux of mysteries and miracles and parables in a regular series, which might well be designated an illustrated Bible. Dr. Cleary speaks and writes many languages. He is conversant with Latin, Greek and Hebrew, the chief Biblical languages; and, besides English, he is familiar with three other modern languages,—the Italian, Spanish, and French.

MacArthur, Donald Alexander, Alexandria, Ont., was born on the 28th of October, 1836, in Charlotteburg, County of Glengarry, Ontario. His father, Alexander MacArthur, was a son of Charles MacArthur, a native of Lochaber, Inverness-shire, Scotland, who came to Canada in 1786, and settled in Glengarry. Donald MacArthur, his great-grandfather, served under Cameron, of Lochiel, and took part at the battle of Culloden, when Prince Charles Stuart's forces were defeated by the Duke of Cumberland; and his grandfather, Charles MacArthur, served at a later date in suppressing the Irish rebellion. On coming to Canada, his grandfather took up land, which he cleared, and on which he erected a homestead, and on this is the residence of the subject of this sketch. Charles MacArthur died when his son, Alexander, was very young, and the latter was brought up by his brother John, who was an extensive lumber merchant at Kingston. After attaining manhood Alexander settled on the homestead, marrying Mary, a daughter of John Macdonald, one of the United Empire loyalists. The issue of this marriage was nine sons and two daughters, of which family Donald Alexander is the third eldest. Like other loyalists, Alexander MacArthur, at the time of the rebellion of 1837-8, took up arms in defence of the government. He was gifted with a splendid constitution, and at this writing is still hale and in good health, though well advanced in life. Donald Alexander MacArthur received his early education in Cornwall, and took his classical course at the Alexandria Grammar school. At the age of nineteen he left school, and thereafter for a time-till he was twenty-two-pursued the avocation of teacher in his native county. He then entered mercantile pursuits under the late A. S. Macdonald, of Alexandria, with whom he remained seven and a half years. He then formed a partnership with George Harrison, of Alexandria, the firm being known as Harrison & McArthur. This business was successfully carried on for five or six years, when Mr. McArthur disposed of his interest therein. In 1874 he commenced business for himself, and two years afterwards erected the handsome premises which he now occupies. In 1881 Mr. McArthur was one of the sub-committee of five, appointed by the board of directors for the building of the Canada Atlantic Railway, his confreres being John Rankin of Montreal; E. McGillivray, and C. H. Mackintosh of Ottawa; Saxon Casselman of Casselman, and Mr. Helmer of Russell. This committee made a contract with with D. C. Lindsay of Vermont, and it was ratified by the board, and has since been carried to its completion. In the fall of 1882 Mr. McArthur was nominated by the Conservative party for the representation of Glengarry in the local house, his opponent being James Rayside, the present member,

wl th Ja Al M

by 26

co

co

ga

sta

the

of

cat

In

tar

tov On

gai

wa

lan

Lir

and

of

in 1

Ha

of

Gra

con

who

for

a 1

don

of

Mr.

dep

as

Det

with

regi

yea:

regi

fron

mas

his

dep

appo

tor

tario

obta

wire

zeal

discl

with

nect

Mase

mem

Eure

who only succeeded in defeating him by the small majority of seventy votes. In January, 1885, he was elected reeve of Alexandria, defeating the then reeve, D. A. Macdonald. In 1886 he was elected reeve by acclamation, and subsequently, on the 26th of January, at the first meeting of the council, was chosen warden of the united counties of Stormont, Dundas, and Glengarry. Mr. McArthur has always been a staunch Conservative, and is president of the Conservative Association of the County of Glengarry. In religion he is a Roman catholic, although that was not the faith of his ancestors.

tle

t's

m-

les

ıp-

to

ch

ıe-

he

ur ry

bу

ve

ht-

he

of

re

as

ch

rd

er

of

le

Ьď

οf

Hamilton, William L., Brockville, Inspector of Inland Revenue, Eastern Ontario, was born on March 26th, 1842, in the township of Tyendinaga, County of Hastings, Ontario. He is a son of Patrick and Margaret (Latchford) Hamilton. His father was born in the County of Antrim, Ireland, and his mother in the County of Limerick. They were married in Canada, and were among the pioneers of the County of Hastings, having settled on a farm there in 1830, where our subject was born. W. L. Hamilton was educated at the public school of his native place, and at the County Grammar school, Belleville. Mr. Hamilton commenced life as a public school teacher, when fifteen years of age, and taught school for seven years, during which time he held a first-class certificate. When he abandoned the profession he was head master of one of the public schools in Belleville. Mr. Hamilton was employed in the freight department of the Grand Trunk Railway as bookkeeper, at Belleville, Toronto and Detroit; and he was engaged as assistant with a surveying party in the Madoc gold regions in 1867-8. He was for a number of years connected with the 49th Hastings rifle regiment, and at the time of his removal from Belleville was captain and quartermaster of the regiment. He commenced his official career in the Inland Revenue department at Belleville, in 1868. He was appointed deputy collector in 1873; collector in 1879, and inspector for Eastern Ontario in 1882. Nor has this promotion been obtained through the pulling of political wires, but in recognition of the industry, zeal and thorough fitness of the man in the discharge of his duties. The only society with which Mr. Hamilton has been connected is that of ancient, free and accepted Masons, of which he has been an active member since 1865. He is a past master of C.P.R., at Port Arthur, from the Macken-Eureka lodge, No. 283, Belleville, and a zie administration, in which capacity he ser-past district deputy grand master of the Prince Edward district. He is a member of different branches of high grade Masonry, and holds the important office of grand minister of state of the Supreme Grand Council, A. & A. Scottish Rite, 33°, B. N. A., an Hon. VI° of the Rosicrucian society, and past grand representative general of the Sovereign Sanctuary of Royal and Oriental Freemasonry, 33°, 96°. 90°. He is a member of the Church of England by birth and education, and adheres to that faith; and he has always been a staunch supporter of the Evangelical party. During the existence of the Church Association he was recording secretary of the Belleville branch. Hamilton looks upon the action of the Ritualistic party, as fraught with danger to the church; and hence he is a zealous supporter of Wycliffe college. He married on November 3rd, 1869, Eliza Jane, second daughter of the late Thomas Beatty, of Peterboro', Ontario. There have been by this union three children, only one of whom, a daughter, is living. The lesson to be learned from the career of Mr. Hamilton is that there is much to be achieved by him who is industrious, and who never permits his hand to falter at the wheel.

Bethune, Angus, Cornwall, Ontario, was born on the 8th November, 1816, at Charlotteburg, Co. Glengarry. His grandfather, Angus Bethune, was a sergeant in the royalist army during the revolutionary war, under Sir John Johnson, and was a native of Scotland. After the war he settled in Charlotteburg, the birth-place of our subject, whose father was Duncan Bethune. The latter gentleman married Jane, daughter of William Rose, of North Carolina, a gentleman of Scotch extraction. Duncan had somewhat of the military spirit of his sire, and served when very young in the war of 1812, in the corps known as the In the troubles of Glengarry Fencibles. 1837-8 he also saw service under Colonel Fraser, with the 1st Glengarry militia. Angus, the subject of the present memoir, received his education at the district school, at Williamstown, and for some time afterwards remained on the farm with his parents. He settled permanently in Cornwall in 1848, obtaining an appointment as deputy-sheriff, which office he held until 1862, when he resigned to enter the business of milling, which engaged his attention for a decade or more. In 1875 he accepted the position of surveyor and paymaster on the C.P.R., at Port Arthur, from the Macken-

In 1880 he was appointed ved until 1879. police magistrate of the town of Cornwall, which office he still holds. In 1837-8 he served in the volunteer force, and was appointed in 1855 ensign in the 1st Stormont Mr. Bethune has for many years served in the council, and during the sixties was reeve of the town of Cornwall for several years. In 1871 and 1874 he was elected to fill the mayor's chair; and was Warden of the united counties of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry in 1870. In politics Mr. Bethune is a Liberal of pronounced views, and although a strong supporter of Hon. Alex. Mackenzie, is no less in sympathy with the Hon. Edward Blake. In religion he is a staunch Presbyterian. Mr. Bethune married in 1839, Ann, daughter of John Mackenzie, of Charlotteburg, who held a commission in the war of 1812, and also in the rebellion of 1837-8, and was a son of Duncan Mackenzie, an officer who served in the royalist armies of 1776. The issue of this marriage was eleven boys and two girls, six of the former still living, and one of the latter. The best known of Mr. Bethune's sons was the late James Bethune, Q.C., the accomplished scholar, able lawyer, single-minded politician, and Christian gentleman recently deceased. McDonald, Herbert Stone, Wood-lawn, Brockville, Judge of the County Court of the United Counties of Leeds and Grenville, was born on the 23rd February, 1842, at Gananoque, County of Leeds. son of the Honourable John McDonald, who resided at Gananoque, and died there in September, 1860, having come to Canada in 1817. John McDonald was called to the Legislative Council of the former province of Upper Canada before the union, and again, upon the occasion of the union of the provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, to the Legislative Council of Canada. He was of Scottish ancestry, his father, John Mc-Donald, and his mother, who was a Cameron, having come to America from Perthshire, Scotland, in the year 1787. The mother of our subject was Henrietta Maria Mallory, who is still living. Her maternal grandmother, Abigail Dayton, formerly Abigail Coggswell, became the wife of Col. Joel Stone, a U. E. loyalist, who is considered to have been the founder of Gananoque. Miss Mallory was an inmate of Col. Stone's house when John McDonald married her. Herbert Stone McDonald was educated at the Gananoque Grammar College Preparatory school, Queen's school, and at Queen's College, Kingston.

He graduated at Queen's University as B.A. in 1859, and as M.A. in 1861. In 1859 he commenced the study of law with A. N. Richards of Brockville (since then for some time lieutenant-governor of British Columbia), and concluded his course as an articled clerk with Richards & Jackson, of Toronto. He was called to the bar in Easter term, 1863, and in the same year commenced the practice of his profession at Brockville, as a partner of F. W. H. Chambers, then M.P.P. for Brockville. The partnership The partnership was dissolved in 1866, and H. S. McDonald continued to practise in Brockville until appointed to the bench. He was appointed in 1863 as lieutenant of the Gananoque rifle company; and in 1866 he was on active service at the epoch of the Fenian troubles. In the same year he was appointed paymaster of the 41st battalion Brockville rifles, and accompanied that regiment when it was ordered to Cornwall during the Fenian raid of 1870. Some years afterwards he retired with the honorary rank of major. In 1863 Mr. McDonald was elected a member of the first municipal council of the village of Gananoque. He was for some years a member of the joint Grammar and Common school board of trustees of Brock-In 1867 he was appointed deputyville. judge of the County Court of the United Counties of Leeds and Grenville, which appointment was revoked in 1869. In 1870 and 1871 he was a member of the town council of Brockville; and at the general election of 1871 was elected in the conservative interest, as member for the South Riding of Leeds, in the Legislative Assembly of Ontario. His political life ceased upon his appointment in the autumn of 1873, by the government of Sir John A. Macdonald, to the office of junior judge of the County Court of the united Counties of Leeds and Grenville. The then judge (his Honour R. F. Steele), having died in January, 1875, Mr. McDonald discharged all the duties of the judgeship until December, 1878, when he was elevated by the government of Sir John A. Macdonald to the office of judge of the County Court of the united Counties of Leeds and Grenville. In October, 1885, he was appointed under the Electoral Franchise Act of the Dominion, the revising officer for the electoral districts of Brockville, South Grenville, North Leeds and Grenville, and South Leeds. In 1867, Mr. McDonald became a member of the Loyal Orange Association, and in 1869 was elected junior deputy grand master of Ontario East; in 1870, he became senior deputy grand master, a

of M

Bowe

North

grand

ceede

re-ele

12th

corne

at Ot sente

in the

corpo

but v

gover

with

McD

one o

confe

of th

Orang

ism, a Dubli

killen

active

tion

1873,

At or

son lo

boro',

of ma

active

differ

rance

nected

Temp

Dona

hibiti

vocati

in the

ville,

ties of

North

of St.

The

elder

his y

churc

of age

of En

that c

memb

been,

synod

gate

a men

Brock

tor),

tion to

He ma

ter, and in the same year, after the election of Mr. (now the Honourable) Mackenzie Bowell, to the grand mastership of British North America, and his resignation of the grand mastership of Ontario East, he succeeded to the latter office, to which he was re-elected in 1871, 1872, and 1873. On the 12th July, 1872, Mr. McDonald laid the corner stone of an Orange hall, or building at Ottawa, upon which occasion he was presented with a trowel. In 1873 he had charge, in the Ontario legislature, of the Orange incorporation bills, which passed the house, but were reserved by the then lieutenantgovernor. In the same year, in company with D'Arcy Boulton (now deceased), Mr. McDonald proceeded to Great Britain as one of the delegates to the Triennial Orange conference, which met in Glasgow, in July of that year. He addressed meetings of Orangemen, or in connection with Orangeism, at Londonderry, Coleraine, Ballymena, Dublin, Portadown, Lurgan, Armagh, Ennis. killen, Birmingham and Liverpool. He ceased active connection with the Orange Association after his appointment to the bench in 1873, and subsequently obtained a certificate. At one time he was a member of Simpson lodge of A. F. and A. Masons, of Newboro', Ontario, and proceeded to the degree of master mason; but he withdrew from active membership some years ago. Also at different times he was a member of temperance associations, and at present is connected with the Trinity Church of England Temperance Society of Brockville. Mr. Mc-Donald has been an active supporter of prohibition and the Scott Act, and besides advocating and aiding the passage of that act in the united counties of Leeds and Grenville, has spoken in behalf of it in the counties of Dundas, Carleton, Lanark, Hastings, Northumberland and Durham, and the cities of St. Thomas, Kingston, and St. Catharines. The Honourable John McDonald was an elder in the Presbyterian church, and in his youth Judge McDonald attended that church; but when about seventeen years of age he commenced attending the Church of England, and in 1863 was confirmed in that church. He is an earnest and zealous member of the Evangelical school. He has been, since 1867, a member of the diocesan synod, and for some years has been a delegate to the provincial synod. He is now a member of the congregation of St. Paul's, Brockville (Rev. Dyson Hague, M.A., rector), and a lay delegate from that congregation to the synod of the diocese of Ontario. He married, on the 15th June, 1864, Emma | always has been, a member of the Methodist

Matilda, daughter of David Jones, of Brockville, registrar of the County of Leeds. Mr. Jones was the son of a U. E. loyalist, and was himself a barrister-at-law, and at one time a representative of the County of Leeds in the Upper Canada House of Assembly, and also at one time a Judge of the District Court of the Eastern District. He resigned the office of county registrar in 1864, and died at Brockville in 1870. His brother was Sir Daniel Jones, who was knighted during the reign of King William IV. He was, we believe, the first native born Canadian who received the honour of knighthood. Of the children of Judge and Mrs. McDonald two are living, viz., Katharine Henrietta and John Herbert. Guy Morville died an infant of one month old, and Muriel Adelaide died in September, 1885, aged within a few days of one year and nine months.

Hobbs, William Richards, London, Ontario, was born in the parish of Aberavon, County of Glamorganshire, Wales, England, in the year 1846; and is a son of Thomas and Mary Hobbs, of the same place. W. R. Hobbs was educated at Prospect academy, Shebbear, Devonshire, England, and came to Canada in the spring of 1869. Mr. Hobbs is senior member of the firm of Hobbs, Osborn & Hobbs, and their house transacts by far the largest wholesale general hardware business in Canada, west of Toronto and Hamilton, and imports more plate and sheet glass than any other firm in the Dominion. This firm's purchases of glass for the coming spring delivery will weigh from 1,000 to 1,200 tons. Good fortune has attended the undertakings of the firm, and it is now master of a sound and profitable business, and one that is every day achieving a new growth. Mr. Hobbs has not allowed his business, extensive though it be, to completely absorb his attention; he has taken a constant and a zealous interest in the promotion of the moral welfare of the community. perance has found in him a steadfast and a strong ally; and he has been a total abstainer from his birth. He is president of the London Young Men's Christian Association; treasurer of the London Scott Act Committee; and was a delegate to the the World's Convention of the Young Men's Christian Association, held at Berlin, Ger. many, in 1884. He is an Oddfellow, and a member of the Masonic craft. His travels have been extensive, he having visited Europe, combining during his visits, business and recreation. Mr. Hobbs is, and church, and to that communion belonged his parents and his grand-parents. He married in 1869, Anne Osborn, a native of England. Mr. Hobbs is a trustee of Queen's Avenue Methodist church.

May, Samuel Passmore, M.D., C.L.H., Toronto, was born in Truro, Cornwall, England, in 1828. He was educated at a private school, and his studies included the science of natural history, which embraced the art of taxidermy. Mr. May came to this country in 1853; and, on landing at Quebec, was engaged by the Literary and Historical Society of that city to re-arrange their large and valuable museum of mineralogy, geology, and zoology, and to prepare a scientific catalogue of the same. He completed the work in seven weeks, and received a written testimonial and bonus, making a remuneration He purposed of ten pounds per week. collecting natural history specimens, and preparing a sketch of the fauna of Canada and the United States, but was induced by the Rev. Dr. Ryerson to take a position as clerk until the Normal School museum was founded, and was appointed Clerk of Libraries during the same year; subsequently paintings, philosophical instruments, etc., were received for the museum. Mr. May had charge of the educational exhibit at Kingston, in 1856, which occupied one-quarter of the entire building. Referring to the exhibition, the Journal of Education, of September, 1856, said: "The artistic beauty of the arms of the Educational department attracted the attention of the committee on fine arts, who awarded to Mr. S. P. May, of the Educational department, a prize and diploma, in consideration of the skill manifested by him in the execution of the design." A diploma was also given at the same time for his collection of natural history. From that time his name has been known in connection with all the educational exhibitions. The educational museum was arranged by Mr. May; the philosophical department was largely increased; popular lectures were given in various parts of the province; and teachers visiting the museum were shown the use of the instruments. The following year (1857) Mr. May was appointed to establish meteorological observatories at the senior county Grammar schools, and to give instructions in the use of the instruments to the Grammar school masters. In 1858 he contributed "Birds and Mammals of Canada" in a Hand-Book of Toronto, which thoughtful and accurate work is still used as an authority on species found in Canada. In the same year Mr. May became connected with the medical department of Victoria College, was curator of the museum, lecturer on pharmacy, microscopy, &c.; and graduated as M.D. in 1863. From the inception to the close of the Educational depository Dr. May had charge of the same. In 1867 he established classes in chemistry at the Mechanics' Institute; and, in acknowledgment of his interest, he was presented with a massive silver inkstand and an address, in which the students said: "We desire to thank you for the great interest you have manifested throughout the session for our advancement in the science of chemistry, and can assure you that the kind and gentlemanly manner in which you have conducted your class to the close of the term has been duly appreciated; and we sincerely regret that our connection as teacher and pupils has come to a close." In 1869 Dr. May gave the first series of lectures on Chemistry undertaken by the Pharmaceutical Society at the Mechanics' Institute, and at the close of the course representatives of the class under his charge came forward and read an address to the distinguished gentleman, saying, among other things: "It becomes our pleasant duty, before taking leave of you at the close of the second session, on behalf of the members of the Pharmaceutical Society and Mechanics' Institute chemistry class, to express thus publicly our high appreciation of your services in imparting to us a knowledge of that most useful branch of the science." handsome clock, set in bronze and encased in a glass shade, accompanied the address. The examiner in connection with this society, Professor Croft, stated in his report that the papers of Dr. May's students, although they only attended evening classes, were quite equal to those of regular attendants at the university. Dr. May gave the first public exhibition of the electric light in Toronto in 1865, on that occasion lighting up Church street and the Music hall. ple from all parts of the city flocked to see the illumination, and the crowds stood dumbfounded as Dr. May illumined the great room with his "harnessed lightning." The newspaper reports of his exhibitions are very full and eulogistic; and they describe the groups of persons gathered about the doctor, receiving shocks, or standing openmouthed with wonder, at his clever exhibitions. Hamilton, hearing of the outburst of light in the Queen city, must needs have Dr. May take his batteries thither; and

wh

 $_{
m in}$

οf

Dr

Civ

sur

888 tali

Ow

occ

tio

exp

and

stra

upo

fro

pre

wh

tion

gall

field

Mr.

 $^{\mathrm{at}}$

biti

Ho

he

hib

con

atio

logu

rece

nati

cent

ed o

hibi

bur

grap

new

pres

S. F

Tore

reso

subj

good

read

the

alwa

ener the

sent

tary

whet

geog

sics.

and

gath

tive

On I

the

when he appeared the citizens thronged out | in congregations to see the latest wonders of science. At the time of the Trent affair. Dr. May was active in the formation of the Civil Service company, and was appointed surgeon; subsequently he was gazetted as assistant surgeon of the Queen's Own bat-He was present with the Queen's Own at Ridgeway, and his bravery on that occasion was the subject of much approbation, especially his courage, activity, and selfexposure in caring for the wounded during and after the battle. At the close of a demonstration held in the drill-shed in Toronto, upon the return of the troops from the front, Lieut.-Colonel Durie, deputy A.A.G., presented Dr. May to General Napier, who thanked him for his services and devotion to the wounded, as well as for the gallantry exhibited by him upon the battle-In 1876 he was appointed by Hon. field. Mr. Crooks to take charge of the exhibit at the Philadelphia International Exhibition, and subsequently, on the arrival of Hon. Mr. Scott, then secretary of state, he assisted generally in the general exhibit of the Dominion. It was he who constructed designs for the arch, decorations, etc., and he also wrote the catalogue of educational appliances. Dr. May received a diploma for his specimens of natural history on that occasion. He took part in all the educational meetings at the centennial, and was subsequently appointed on the committee of the permanent exhibition, and one of the lecturers for the bureau of education. The following paragraph appeared in a leading Philadelphia newspaper at the time: "The exhibit is at present under the superintendence of Dr. S. P. May, of the Education department of Toronto. The doctor is a gentleman of large resources, full of suggestions, and his pet subject is education of the young. With his good-nature and easy manners, he is always ready to impart to all who are interested in the subject his ample knowledge, which always proves a mine of wealth to the list-ener. He is equally capable of expounding the Ontario school system, which he represents, or to give a vivid running commentary on the articles exhibited or represented, whether it be kindergarten, natural history, geography, or the various branches of physics. He not only explains, but interests and instructs, and the throng that daily gathers around him during his short, descriptive lectures, is a proof of his popularity." On Dr. May's return, he wrote a report for the commissioner of agriculture, of 239

ria

er

on

gth

vе

ly id

pages. In 1877 he gave a public address on the exhibition at the annual meeting of the Ontario Agricultural Society, which was reproduced in a pamphlet, five thousand of which were printed for general circulation. Dr. May was appointed secretary for the Dominion at the Exposition Universal of 1878; and was awarded the gold medal as collaborateur of the food exhibit which won the grand prize. This collection was made by Dr, May, and chiefly prepared by himself, consisting of food products, including fish, game, etc., which were fitted up to represent a market. He was also awarded a diploma for a new method of arranging natural history specimens in museums. He received the decoration of the Legion of Honour for his eminent services to the nation; also the decoration of palm leaves, or officer of Academy, Paris. He received a medal from the French government in 1881; one thousand dollars worth of silver from the Ontario exhibitors; and an address, gold watch, and jewellery, for Mrs. May, from visitors. He was appointed superintendent of the Mechanics' institutes and Art schools in 1880, and wrote a special report afterwards. In 1883 he wrote a catalogue for the museum of the Guelph Agricultural college; and in 1884 prepared a descriptive catalogue for the Educational museum. Dr. May has lectured at Mechanics' institutes on popular scientific subjects, and he has always been listened to with the profoundest attention. He has the happy gift of popularising and making full of interest everything that he touches. The institutes have increased 100 per cent., and evening classes have been established in fifty or sixty places where he has lec-What art education has achieved under Dr. May will be understood from the fact that when he was put in charge of this department of our educational service there were only two public Art schools, while there are now five, with over seventy branch schools. He has been appointed by the Ontario government as their representative at the Colonial Exhibition. Educational Court, under his direction, will embrace the largest collection of educational appliances and pupils' work ever exhibited by any one country. Education, art, and science, in Ontario, owe a deep debt to the wide gifts, the enthusiasm, and the wonderful industry of this accomplished man. It is only once or so in a generation that there arises a man like him, endowed for the pursuit and mastery of so many subjects; and Pope has said,-

"One science only will one genius fit, So vast is art, so narrow human wit;" but Dr. May is perfectly at home as a practitioner of medicine, as a lecturer upon science or mechanics, in the grouping and analyzing in the department of natural history, or in the artistic arrangement of a museum or exhibition hall. He has a genius for organization, and his achievements in his various pursuits are really marvellous. Dr. May has had a family of twenty children, eleven of whom are alive;

six of these are married.

Waterhouse, John, Manufacturer, Tilsonburg, Ontario, was born in Yorkshire, England, on the 24th November, 1829. His father, George Waterhouse, was a manufacturer of woollens, in the village of Pudsey, Yorkshire, and his mother was Sarah Woodhouse, of the same village. In 1848 George Waterhouse emigrated to America, settling with his family in Newburg, Orange county, N. Y., where he engaged in the business of woollen manufacture, in the employ of Joseph Harrison. After the lapse of a year he removed to North Horsick, in the same state, where he was employed by R. Burnham & Co., of New York. In 1852 he removed to Canada, and settled in the County of Elgin, near Port Stanley, where he again began the manufacture of woollen goods. He remained here until his death in 1866, and left a family of ten children, the subject of this sketch being the third youngest. John Waterhouse labored under the disadvantages peculiar to all the early settlers in respect to educational advantages. He was obliged, when a boy, to work during the day, and it was only at spare hours that he succeeded in mastering the rudiment of an education. He followed his father to Canada from New York state, but after a brief stay crossed the boundary again, settling in Sheffield, Ohio, for a time, and passed thence to New York state again, where he remained till 1857. His health now began to fail him, and he proceeded to the State of Illinois, where he engaged in farming until 1861, when he again returned to Canada, which he has made his abode ever since. In 1866 he established a woollen factory near Port Stanley; but the field was not a very promising one, and he removed to Tilsonburg, where he established another factory. Here he still remains, and through his industry, integrity and fine business qualities, his operations were crowned with The output of his manufactory consists chiefly of yarns, flannels, tweeds and blankets; and the establishment gives employment directly and indirectly to a large number of persons. In 1872, Mr. Waterhouse was elected town councillor of Tilsonburg, and was re-elected in 1877 and every year since. He is a shareholder in the Tilsonburg Agricultural Works; is an Oddfellow, and has held most of the offices in the gift of his lodge (No. 50). He is likewise a member of the A.O.U.W., has been a representative of that body for five years, and is now past master of the lodge (No. 17, Tilsonburg). Mr. Waterhouse is a member of the local Liberal-Conservative Association, and is an active and preminent member of his party. He is a member of the Methodist church; and he married on the 24th January, 1855, Elizabeth, daughter of Samuel and Nancy Hurst, of Springfield, Ohio. There is no family.

Hurteau, Hilaire, M.P. for L'Assomption, St. Lin, Province of Quebec, was born at Contrecœur, in the aforenamed province, on the 4th May, 1837. His educational studies were pursued at his native place, and subsequently at the College of L'Assomption. Before the completion of his education he began the study of law in the office of Isidore Hurteau, notary, at Longueuil, and in due time was called to the profession of notary. He has since steadily practised this profession, save for the interruptions caused by his entry into public life. Early in his career M. Hurteau had an inclination for political work; and he was mayor of Lin for three years, and warden of the county for a like period. He has likewise held the office of secretarytreasurer of schools; and vice-president of the Laurentian Railway Company. At the general election of 1875 he was first returned to parliament, but was unseated on petition in the same year. On the 16th January, 1885, he was re-elected by acclamation, and the petitioners had not much with which to console themselves. He was re-elected at the general election of 1878, and at the last general election. M. Hurteau is a staunch Liberal-Conservative, and an extremely useful and loyal man to his constituency. He has been appointed General Superintendent of Colonization for the Province of Quebec, 15th December, 1882, and after having travelled and studied the province as he did for three years, very few men now are so thoroughly acquainted with the wants of, and the manner to develop this great patriotic part of the Conservative party programme—colonization. He is a Roman catholic. He married, on the 30th May, 1859, Delphine Beaudoin.

to a 2, Mr. llor of 77 and der in is an offices s likebeen years, Йо. 17, ember ssociamemof the on the hter of igfield, L'Asec, was named is edunative ege of tion of law in ry, at l to the teadily the ino puburteau rs, and period.

retarylent of At the rst reted on le 16th acclamuch He was 1878, Hurve, and to his d Genfor the , 1882, ed the ery few ed with

levelop

rvative

Не ів а

ne 30th

Sweatman, Right Rev. Arthur, M.A., Bishop of Toronto, was born at London, England, in November, 1834. He is a son of Dr. John Sweatman, of the Middlesex Hospital. London, and received his early educational instruction at the hands of private tutors. At a very early age he began his christian work, having been a teacher in Christ Church Sunday-school, Marylebone, from 1849 to 1855. In the last named year he entered Christ's College, Cambridge; in 1856 obtained a scholarship; and in 1859 was graduated B.A., taking honours in mathematics. From December, 1856, to February, 1859, Mr. Sweatman was superintendent of the well known Jesus lane Sunday-school, which has always been conducted by University men. He was ordained deacon in St. Paul's Cathedral, in 1859, and in the following year was ordained priest at Chapel Royal, Whitehall, by the late Right Rev. Dr. Tait, then bishop of London, and afterwards archbishop of Canterbury. For some years thereafter he held the position of master of Islington College, at the same time officiating successively as curate of Holy Trinity, Islington, and of St. Stephen's, Canonbury. His career from the first was characterised by activity and zeal, and while at Islington he founded the Islington Youths' Institute. In 1862 he proceeded to the degree of M.A. In 1865 the bishop of Huron was in England, and hearing from many quarters of the zeal and the learning of Mr. Sweatman, induced that young clergyman to accept the head-mastership of the Hellmuth Boys' College in Canada. For seven years he filled this position, revealing unusual powers for organization and administration; and at the same time making manifest his splendid scholarly attainments and ability as a clergyman. In 1872 he resigned this position to accept the rectorship of Grace Church, Brantford, where with his characteristic powers, he ministered for two years. The authorities of Upper Canada College had learnt of the gifts of the Rev. Arthur Sweatman, and offered him the mathematical mastership in the college. He accepted the offer, but after a short time was once more persuaded to assume the charge of Hellmuth College, from which institution he had never wholly taken his heart, and which owed so much of its success to his genius for administration and the power he possesses of awakening enthusiasm. Ho was appointed canon of the Cathedral at London, in 1875, and upon the election of the Ven. Archdeacon Farquier, to the bishopric of Algoma, Mr.

Sweatman was created archdeacon of Brant-He was subsequently appointed assistant minister and acting rector of Woodstock, in the place of the Rev. W. Bettridge, who became incapacitated for active service. In 1872 he became examining chaplain to the bishop of Huron, and in 1863 was appointed clerical secretary to the diocese of Huron, and secretary of the House of Bishops. As archdeacon he was esteemed and beloved everywhere, and his administration of ecclesiastical affairs during the absence of the bishop of Huron, was enlightened and highly satisfactory. In 1879 he was chosen by the almost unanimous vote of the synod, to the vacant bishopric of Toronto, which high and responsible office he still fills and adorns by his learning, his virtues and his zeal. The capacity for administration already observed in his lordship as a teacher and a priest, finds a fuller scope for its exercise in the episcopal seat, and there is revealed more fully. More brightly there shine his intellectual gifts, and all men are drawn to him by his endearing manners, his piety, and his unassuming gentleness. all," says a memoir before us, "he is a good man and full of the Holy Ghost; devout and spiritual; attached by conscientious convictions to evangelical truth, and the great principles of our reformed and protestant church, while he works heartily and cordially with all loyal churchmen of every school."

Lash, Zebulun Aiton, of the firm of Blake, Lash, Cassels & Holman, barristers, etc., Toronto, was born in September, 1846. Having completed his educational course, he entered upon the study of law, and in May, 1868, was called to the bar of the Province of Ontario. He at once commenced the practice of his profession at Toronto. In November, 1872, he was appointed lecturer and examiner in commercial and criminal law to the Law Society of Ontario. This position he filled till 1876, when he was appointed to the office of deputy Minister of Justice of Canada. Although this was an office whose honours any member of the Canadian bar might court, Mr. Lash was ambitious to achieve in the open field, and he resigned in May, 1882, and at once entered the firm already mentioned, and resumed practice. In 1879 Mr. Lash was appointed a Queen's counsel. In July of the following year he appeared before the judicial committee of the Imperial Privy Council, as counsel for the government of Canada in the Mercer escheat case. Without question his return to practice has been a conspicuous gain for the bar of Ontario.

Rose, Hon. Sir John, Bart., G. C. M.G., London, England, was born at Turriff, Aberdeenshire, Scotland, on the 2nd August, 1820. He is a son of the late Mr. Rose, of Turriff, by his marriage with Elizabeth, daughter of Captain James Fyfe. John received his education at various schools in Aberdeenshire, concluding his course at King's College, Aberdeen. While he was still a youth he accompanied his parents to Canada, settling with them in the County of Huntingdon, Province of Quebec. time, pending an opening more suited to his tastes, John Rose engaged in school teaching in the Eastern townships. He soon abandoned this make-shift pursuit and proceeded to Montreal, where he began the study of In 1842 he was called to the bar of Lower Canada, and at once entered upon the practice of his profession. He at once attracted attention at the bar by his fine presence, which was commanding and tall; but better than all, his language was fluent and resonant, and his arguments searching, lucid and direct. He was soon master of the largest commercial practice in Montreal, and his place at the Lower Canada bar was among the very foremost. He conducted several important cases for the government of the day; and in this way, acquired his first thorough insight into political questions. In 1848 the silken gown of counsellor was conferred upon him, in recognition of his splendid legal talents; and during the Baldwin-Lafontaine administration he was strongly pressed to enter public life. But Mr. Rose was a man of cool head and sound judgment, and he resolved that no allurement should draw him into political quicksands till his fortunes, in the commercial sphere, Therehad been laid on firm foundations. after up to 1857 he held many of the foremost positions in banking and other circles In the year last mentioned in Montreal. he began his parliamentary career, and on the 26th November, accepted office in the Macdonald-Cartier administration as solicitor-general for Lower Canada. Thereafter, till the close of his political career, the record of this distinguished and gifted man is a series of successes unparalleled, save in one other instance, among our Canadian After the collapse of the Short statesmen. Administration, Mr. Rose accepted, nominally, the office of receiver-general, but almost immediately passod back again to the solicitor-generalship. On the 10th of January following, he assumed charge of the department of public works, holding the port-folio till June, 1861, when the combined strain of his official duties and private business caused his health to give way, and he was obliged to resign office, continuing, however, to represent Montreal in par! liament. In 1864 Mr. Rose was appointed by the Imperial government a commissioner on behalf of the Empire, under the treaty with the United States for the settlement of the claims which had arisen out of the Oregon treaty. At the first general election after Confederation, Mr. Rose was elected for Huntingdon, and shortly afterwardsupon the retirement of the Hon. (now Sir) A. T. Galt—entered the cabinet as minister of finance. To him fell the greater portion of the task of constituting the new and difficult financial programme for the confederated provinces; but his splendid genius acted as a swift solvent of the difficulty. In July, 1868, Mr, Rose went to England and successfully floated half of the Intercolonial Railway loan. In 1869 he resolved to take up his abode in England, and resigning his seat in parliament, he brought his splendid parliamentary career (of twelve years) to a close. He entered the well-known banking firm of Morton, Bliss & Co., at London, which thereafter was known as Morton, Rose & Co., the subject of this memoir still maintaining his connection with the same. In 1870 he was nominated a Knight Commander of the Order of St. Michael and St. George; and in August, 1872, he was created a baronet. On the 29th October, 1878, in recognition of his services as executive commissioner of Canada at the Paris Exhibition, he was nominated a G.C.M.G. He married, 1843, Charlotte, daughter of the late Robert Temple, of Rutland, in the State of Vermont, There has been issue by marriage, three sons and two daughters. There has been issue by this

Woodworth, Douglas Benjamin, LL.B., Q.C., Kentville, M. P. for Kings county, Nova Scotia, was born at Canning, in the Province of Nova Scotia, on June 1st, The paternal ancestors of Mr. Woodworth emigrated from England to Connecticut during the early period of settlement in the colonies; but on the outbreak of the revolution they moved to Nova Scotia, and settled there. The maternal ancestors of Mr. Woodworth came from Ireland, and likewise settled in Nova Scotia. His father was B. B. Woodworth, a prominent inhabitant, and a J.P., of Canning, Nova Scotia. D. B. Woodworth obtained a careful education, receiving, at first, tuition under the Rev. W. Sommerville, afterwards attend-ing Sackville Academy, the Normal School at Truro, and Harvard University, near Bost wort of tl On wort office after calle Ав а of m quair statu who 1871 caree Legis polit serva he id sat i 1878, cand the e but_l gener Hous the C Mr. V of Sir was i Nova was (sessio mitte and Since the 1 Cana reput in th of de be ge treme wife althou

son B
Mar
born Scotla
Marga
Canac
and se
of Qu
death
educa
don c millin

to Cor

 \mathbf{Domi}

the ()

In February, 1865, Mr. Woodworth married Lizzie, youngest daughter of the late Hon. Ezra Churchill, senator. On completing his education, Mr. Woodworth commenced the study of law in the office of Hon. Jonathan McCully, who afterwards was made a judge, and was called to the bar of Nova Scotia in 1865. As an advocate Mr. Woodworth is a man of much power, and he has a wide acquaintance with the law. In 1884 his legal status was acknowledged by the executive, who appointed him Queen's counsel. In 1871 Mr. Woodworth began his political career, being in that year elected to the Legislative Assembly of Nova Scotia. In politics he always has been a Liberal-Conservative, and in the Legislative Assembly he identifies himself with that party. He sat in the local legislature till September, 1878, when he resigned, and became a candidate for the House of Commons. In the election that followed he was defeated. but he was not disheartened. At the last general election he was returned to the House of Commons for the first time, for the County of Kings. In Dominion politics Mr. Woodworth supports the administration of Sir John A. Macdonald. Mr. Woodworth was the de facto leader of his party in the Nova Scotia Legislature, from the time he was elected in 1871 until the end of the session of 1878, and it was universally admitted on all sides that he was far the ablest and most effective debater in the house. Since then, according to the Toronto Mail, the Montreal Gazette, and other leading Canadian papers, he has maintained his reputation as a parliamentarian and speaker in the Dominion parliament. He is a man of deep-seated feeling, but he is known to be generous, and is for these reasons extremely popular. His family consists of his wife and two boys, the eleest one, Percy, although but eighteen years of age, the Dominion government placed in charge of the Observatory post, Digge's Island, Hudson Bay, in the summer of 1885.

Mack, William, J.P., Cornwall, was born on February 29, 1828, in Lennoxshire, Scotland. His parents were Robert and Margaret (Pollock) Mack, who emigrated to Canada in 1828, from Lanarkshire, Scotland, and settled in Huntingdon county, Province of Quebec, where they resided until their death. William Mack received a fair English education in the common school at Huntingdon county. He afterwards learned the milling trade in the same county, and moved to Cornwall in 1849—starting in that year, the first grist mill built in Cornwall, this mill being owned by the late John Harvey. He built the Express grist and flouring mills in Cornwall, in 1860, and has owned and operated them continuously to the present day, and has rebuilt and enlarged them several times. He took an active part in procuring the establishment in Cornwall of the extensive woollen, cotton and paper mills now there. Mr. Mack was a member of the municipal council of the town of Cornwall, from 1865 to 1868, inclusive of both years; was deputy reeve of the town during 1869-70; was reeve in 1871, deputy reeve in 1875, and reeve again in 1876. He was elected on all these occasions by acclamation. He was also warden of the united Counties of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry, for the year 1878. Mr. Mack has always been a Liberal in politics, -that also having been the political faith of his father-and has taken a deep interest in public questions, and an active part in practical politics. He represented the Electoral riding of Cornwall in the Ontario Legislature, from 1879 to 1883; was a candidate for the same position at the general election in the latter year, but was defeated by a majority of forty-one votes. He is a Presbyterian, and for the past ten years has been an elder in Knox Church, Cornwall. Mr. Mack married on May 10, 1855, Agnes, daughter of the late William Henderson, a native of Scotland. By this marriage there is a family of three children, two daughters and one son.

Cole, Wilmot Howard, Lieutenant-Colonel, Brockville, Ontario, was born at Brockville, February 16th, 1834. The patronymic Cole is of very ancient Saxon origin: it appears in the "Doomsday Book." The public records show that in the year 1640, Sir John Cole, of Shenley, in Hertfordshire, England, was a landed proprietor. His son, Adam, married and had issue a son, Cornelius. This Cornelius Cole emigrated to America in the year 1708; in 1711 he became a justice of Albany county, comprised within the limits of what was called "Livingston Manor." His land was next to that of W. T. Livingston, and extended from the Manor House road to Jansen's Kill. or creek, and was one of the finest farms in the manor. He had three sons, named Nicholas, John and Adam. On the breaking out of the rebellion, Cornelius Cole and his sons, John and Adam, espoused the cause of England, and the sons joined the Royalist forces. As the war proceeded, the feeling ran so high against the "Tories," as the

Royalists were called, that Cornelius Cole, although an old man, was seized and imprisoned, where he died a victim of fidelity to Fatherland. His property was confiscated, and his sons forced to seek a home in the wilds of Canada. In 1782 John and Adam Cole left, with other United Empire loyalists, for Canada, and passing up the St. Lawrence, they landed and settled in the County of Leeds, in that part now called the township of Elizabethtown, at a point on the river St. Lawrence about five miles west of the present town of Brockville, which place is still called "Cole's Ferry." Here Adam Cole settled, being, as he was frequently heard to say, the first person to begin a settlement in the township of Elizabethtown. Some years after the close of the war, Peter, a son of John Cole, returned to his grandfather's old home in Ulster county, to ascertain whether he could recover some of the family estate, which had been confiscated, but failed, as the authorities had granted the property to other persons. Adam Cole's wife was Thankful Fulford, also descended from loyalist stock. Her brothers, a short time after her departure with her husband, came to Canada and settled in the same neight bourhood, and they have left numerous descendants. Adam Cole's family, in 1812, consisted of nine sons and seven daughters, besides four who died in infancy. Five of the sons served in the war of 1812, the eldest, Peter, being present and assisted in the capture of Ogdensburg, and he subsequently held the rank of captain. house of Adam Cole was the general headquarters of the military, when they were in that section of country, or when moving between Montreal and Kingston. It is related of Peter Cole, the eldest son, that in the year 1810, the mail carrier was taken sick at his father's house, and Peter took the mail to Kingston, where he received that from Toronto and carried it back to Montreal. At Montreal he took charge of the mail for the west, which had been accumulating for a month and weighed upwards of sixty pounds, and carried it to Kingston. He accomplished the whole trip, going and coming, of 430 miles, on foot, in fourteen days, and this was in March, when the tramping most of the way was through the forest and very difficult. He received for this service from the government the sum of fifteen dollars. Abel Cole, who was the youngest son of Adam Cole, is the only one of that large family now living (1886), and is a hale and hearty old gentle-

His wife, Catherine man of eighty years. Seaman, is the oldest person now living (1886) in Brockville, who was born there. her father, Nehemiah Seaman, being one of the early settlers. Wilmot Howard Cole, second son of Abel Cole, was educated at He commenced mercantile Brockville. business in 1855, and continued in the same until 1882. The old spirit of loyalty which he inherited, prompted him upon the organization of the volunteer militia of Canada in 1855, to become a member of the old "Brockville Rifle company," commanded by Major Smythe (now of the 100th regiment, British army). The late Col. James Crawford, William Fitzsimmons (present postmaster of Brockville), the late Samuel Ross. William Morris, Thomas Camm and other business men of Brockville shouldered their muskets and learned the drill at the same Wilmot Howard Cole has filled every position in rank from private to colonel of battalion. In December, 1864, he went with the Brockville Rifle company, as lieutenant, to Amherstburg, in the County of Essex, remaining there on duty until the following May. In November, 1865, the fear of a Fenian raid was so strong in the vicinity of the River St. Lawrence that the officers of the Brockville Rifle company (who were at the time: the late Col. Crawford in command, and Lieut. Cole. Lieut. Robert Bowie, and the late Lieut. Windeat), offered their services without pay, and to increase their company to 100 men to do duty for the protection of Brockville and vicinity, by drilling the men and mounting a heavy guard every night, with sentries posted in different parts of the town, the men only being paid twenty-five cents per day. The offer was accepted by the government, and that duty performed until the ensuing March, when a large portion of the volunteer force were called out, and a provisional battalion formed at Brockville, under command of Col. Crawford, Lieut. Cole assuming command of the Brockville Rifle company, with which he remained on duty until the next November, part of the time at Brockville, and part at Cornwall. Again in 1870, as major of the 41st battalion, he was on duty at Cornwall during the Fenian excitement. On the 28th June, 1871, he was appointed to the command of the 41st battalion, a position he still holds (1886). Col. Cole has occupied various positions of trust and importance in the gift of his fellow-citizens. He was a member of the town council of Brockville for fourteen years; a director for many years, and president of the Johns-

to

fe

of

G

w

tio

G

te

'nя

th

na

A

ok

vi

CO

T

W

tl

By C

L

th

W

H

fo

w

de

ti

aı

be

M

lo

as

tε

C

da

N

cl

80

er

el

tl

ď

aí

fr

G

eı

C

h

N

town Mutual Fire Insurance Company; a member of the independent order of Oddfellows for many years, filling various offices in the local lodge and also in the Grand lodge and Grand encampment. He was chosen by his brethren to fill the position of grand master the year the Sovereign Grand lodge met in Toronto, and were entertained by their Ontario brethren. He has always taken an active part in everything that would advance the interests of his native town. In connection with the late Allan Turner, he worked for many years to obtain a system of water works for Brockville, and in 1881 they organized a company, consisting of Allan Turner, John McMullen, Thomas Gilmour, George A. Dana, and Wilmot H. Cole, to construct water works: and as a result of the efforts of these gentlemen, Brockville has now a most excellent system of water supply for all purposes. Colonel Cole was elected a member of the Legislature of the Province of Ontario for the Brockville riding, in the Liberal interest, at the general elections in 1875, and was a warm supporter of the Mowat government. He received the appointment of registrar for the County of Leeds in February, 1882, which position he now holds. He is president of the Brockville Fair Ground Association, and a director in the Brockville Loan and Savings Company. Col. Cole is a member of the Methodist church, and for over twenty-five years has been a trustee of the Wall street church in Brockville, and is looked upon by his fellow church members as ready to assist in carrying forward all enterprises for the benefit of the church. Col. Cole married Jane Adelaide, youngest daughter of the late Abram Phillips, of New York. Their family consists of four children, two sons and two daughters. The sons, following the traditions of the family, entered the volunteer force very early. The eldest, Eugene Maurice Cole, was bugler in the Brockville Rifle company in 1866, and did duty with that company whenever on service; he subsequently became lieutenant, after which he resigned, having removed from Brockville. The youngest son, Capt. George Marshall Cole, is now captain of No. 4 company, 41st battalion. The latest enterprise with which Col. Cole has been connected is one that will eventually benefit his native town more than all others, that is, the Brockville, Westport and Sault Ste. Marie Railway. The idea of a railway from Brockville to Westport had been entertained, and a charter was procured, but nothing further was done, and after a time the charter expired. Subsequently, Eugene M. Cole, who was in business in New York city, and having commercial relations with gentlemen interested in building railways and other public works, conceived the idea that a line of railway from Brockville to Sault Ste. Marie would prove an advantageous route in many ways, and at the same time benefit his native town. After much labour in gathering statistical information, he laid the whole matter before his father, who had it brought before the leading men of the County of Leeds, and the proposition made that if the municipalities would bear the expense of preliminary survey and obtain the charter, and also grant aid by way of bonus to the extent of $125,000, Eugene M. Cole would work up the scheme and obtain the capital and contractors to build at least the first section of the road to Westport. This was agreed to, the last bonus by-law being passed on the 15th July, 1885, and work on the construction of the railway commenced on the 13th January, 1886. Although ably assisted by many persons in the County of Leeds in connection with the enterprise, the credit of the inception of the scheme, and the labour in working it up materially and financially, belong to Eugene M. Cole, who is still quite a young man.

Cook, Simon S., Morrisburg, Ontario, was born in the township of Williamsburgh, County of Dundas, on the 15th day of September, 1831, and is the fourth son of Captain George Cook, and his wife, Sarah Casselman. (Vide sketch of Herman H. Cook, M.P., Toronto, page 114.) His paranta and the cook of the c rents are descended from United Empire loyalist stock. Simon S. Cook is a brother of the late J. W. Cook, who represented Dundas county in the Canadian Assembly from 1857 until 1861; and likewise of Herman H. Cook, who now represents East Simcoe in the House of Commons. Mr. Cook received his education at the Potsdam academy, in the town of Potsdam, State of New York. He was elected in 1867 a member of the first Provincial parliament of Ontario, for the County of Dundas, and was re-elected at the following general election; but was defeated at the general election of 1875. He was appointed registrar for the County of Dundas, in May, 1881, and has been for many years associated with his brothers, in the firm of Cook Brothers, in the lumber business. Cook married Emma M., eldest daughter of William Elliot, of Iroquois, County of Dundas, and has by this lady two children, a son and daughter.

Pearson, William H., Toronto, was born on the 9th November, 1831, at Brixton, County of Surrey, England. He is a son of Thomas Pearson, who was an underwriter in Lloyd's Coffee House Insurance Company, London. In 1834 he emigrated to Canada, settling in the township of Zora, where he purchased and cultivated a farm of 200 acres. Some time afterwards he removed to Brantford, where he engaged in the hotel business, continuing in the same till 1839, when he removed to Toronto, where he assumed the proprietorship of the "Ontario House." He removed to Kingston for a time, but shortly afterwards returned again to Toronto. During the rebellion of 1837-38 he was a lieutenant in the old Canadian militia. In 1845 he received the appointment of chief clerk of the Custom House. Toronto, which position he held till his death, which occurred in 1849. He left a family of five children, the subject of this sketch being the eldest. W. H. Pearson received his early education at the private academy, conducted by Mr. Galt, of Brantford, and afterwards at Toronto, at the private academy of the late John Boyd, father of the present Chancellor Boyd. He subsequently attended the Grammar school at Kingston, completing his course at the academy of the late Mr. Loscombe, Toronto. At the age of fifteen he left school and assisted his father in the Customs-house for a short period; but in April, 1847, he received the appointment of clerk in the Toronto post-office, at which time the whole business of the city was conducted by the postmaster, three clerks, and a letter carrier. Mr. Pearson remained in the postoffice until 1854, when ill-health obliged him to resign his office. However, in September of the same year he was appointed chief clerk of the Consumers' Gas Company, which position he held until 1874, when he was appointed secretary, and virtually manager, of the same company. This position he has held ever since. Mr. Pearson, it may be said, was one of the original promoters of the Consumers' Gas Company of Lindsay, and at the present time is one of the directors of that association. He has been treasurer of the Philharmonic Society; was a member of the Sons of Temperance from 1850 till 1853, and has always taken an active interest in tem-It is interesting to note perance work. that he was led to total abstinence and to the championship of temperance through the persuasive eloquence of John B. Gongh. Mr. Pearson is a member of the American

Gas Light Association; and in politics he has always been a Reformer. He was a member of the Church of England until the age of twenty, when, in 1852, he separated from that communion and joined the Methodist Church at Toronto, under the ministration of the Rev. James Caughey, an eminent revivalist. He connected himself with the Richmond-street Methodist Church, and immediately became a Sunday-school teacher. A few years afterwards he became classleader, and was for many years a leader of two classes, and in 1857 was appointed superintendent of the Sabbath school, at that time the largest in the city, which position he has held continuously up to the present time. Mr. Pearson has also continued in the class-leadership; and is one of the trustees of the church. Owing to the close attention which he has devoted to church matters, as well as to his business, Mr. Pearson has not been at liberty to give much attention to political or municipal affairs. He married in March, 1856, Mary Ann, daughter of the late George Cline, of Toronto, by whom he had a family of eight children, and six of these are still living. The eldest daughter, Mary Elizabeth, is the wife of George A. Macagy, the representative in Toronto of the firm of Pillow, Horsey & Co., of Montreal. W. H. Pearson. the third eldest, is superintendent of the

foreKisaN1& stiEP a OUN" ti u

B T C

MNAH apt yuna wata

ai S d

g st th R B b

al reliding

works of the Consumers' Gas Company, Akin, Thomas Beamish, D.C.L., Halifax, Barrister at law of Nova Scotia; Commissioner of the Public Records of that Province; a corresponding member of the Historical Societies of Massachusetts and Maryland, and of the Literary and Historical Society of Quebec, and honorary member of the Historical Societies of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, was born at Liverpool, Nova Scotia, on February 1st., 1809, only son of Thomas Akin, merchant, of that place. The family were settled in New England before the year 1675, and the direct ancestor of T. B. Akin removed to New Jersey about 1740. He went thence to Nova Scotia in 1758-9, and was one of the original grantees of the township of Falmouth, in 1760. T. B. Akin studied law with the late Beamish Murdoch, D.C.L., Queen's counsel, author of the "History of Nova Scotia," and was admitted to the bar at Easter term, 1831. He practiced as a solicitor in Halifax; was appointed commissioner in 1857, under a resolution of the House of Assembly, "for examining, arranging and preserving the ancient records and documents illustrative of the history and progress of society of the province for reference or publication, as the legislature may determine." Mr. Akin was twice elected a governor of the University of King's College, Windsor, N.S. Mr. Akin is the author of several pamphlets; first, a prize essay on the "History of Halifax, N.S.," read at the Mechanics' Institute, 18th April, 1839, and published by English & Blackadar, at Halifax, in 1847, pp. 62; second, a pamphlet entitled "A sketch of the Rise and Progress of the Church of England in the British North-American Provinces," Halifax, 1849, pp. 151; third, a pamphlet entitled "A brief sketch of the Origin, Endowment and Progress of the University of King's College, Windsor, Nova Scotia," Halifax, 1865, pp. 84; fourth, "Selections from the Public Documents of the Province of Nova Scotia," published under a resolution of the House of Assembly passed March 15th, 1865, edited by Thomas B. Akin, D.C.L., Halifax, N.S.; C. Annand, publisher, 1869. Mr. Akin is unmarried.

Robertson, Alexander, Brantford, Manager of branch of the Bank of British North America, was born at St. Fergus, Aberdeenshire, Scotland, in the year 1831. Having completed his education, he studied law in the office of Gray & Boyd, solicitors, Peterhead, Scotland, where he also learned the banking business. After spending six years in that office, he proceeded to Canada in 1853, in the service of the Bank of British North America, and in 1854 he went to the Brantford branch as teller. Shortly afterwards he became accountant, and in 1864 was given the management of the branch. The Brantford branch had been opened in 1845, with the late James Christie as agent, and upon Mr. Robertson's arrival, C. F. Smithers, who subsequently became president of the Bank of Montreal, was its manager. Mr. Smithers retired in 1856, and was succeeded by I. C. Geddes, who retained the management till the appointment of Mr. Robertson, who has ever since remained in Brantford, an experience not common to bankers, whose tenure in a given place is about as uncertain as that of officers of the regular military service. During his term of management, agencies of the bank were established at Paris and Dunnville, and placed under his direction. In 1878, upon his return from a trip to England and continental Europe, Mr. Robertson was presented with an illuminated address by the citizens, together with a handsome silver dinner and dessert service, the donors thereby conveying their appreciation of his long and valued services to the commercial interests of Brantford. Mr. Robertson is a man of conspicuous energy, and of wide public spirit; nor have the duties of his office disabled him from taking part in meritorious public enterprises. He was foremost in the movement that led to the establishment of the Brantford Young Ladies' College; and he has been president of its board of directors since its foundation. He is a director of the Brantford Gas Company; has been a member of the board of managers of Zion Presbyterian Church since its establishment in Brantford; has been many times elected president of St. Andrew's Society; has been president of the Brantford Curling Club, and was one of the original promoters of the Brantford Curling and Skating Rink, and of the Victoria Curling and Skating Rink. He is also captain of the Brantford Golf Club, and introduced that excellent game into Ontario in 1872. He was one of the original directors of the Brant Memorial Association, and has always been one of the foremost in every movement that has had for its object the promotion of the commu-As will be gathered from nity's interests. the above he is a lover of all manly sport, and healthful out-door exercises. Personally he enjoys the widest popularity; and he is recognized as possessing one of the soundest business heads in the country. Mr. Robertson married, in 1885, Nellie M., youngest daughter of Richard S. DeVeber, of St. John, N.B.

Nordheimer, Samuel, Toronto, whose firm for over forty-two years has stood at the head of the music trade of Canada, has been so prominently connected with the business life of Toronto, that some record of his career may well find place among "Representative Canadians." To the ability and energy of the brothers, Abraham and Samuel Nordheimer, the Dominion of Canada, and the Province of Ontario in particular, owes in great measure its musical taste, and not a little of that appreciation of artistic pianoforte playing which distinguishes almost all circles of Canadian society. This will be readily admitted in considering the achievements of the house of A. & S. Nordheimer, and in dealing briefly with the personal career of the subject of our sketch, who is one of the best examples we have of a successful and honourable business man. Samuel Nordheimer, who is of Jewish descent, and the seventh of eight sons, was born at Bavaria, Germany, in the year 1824. His parents' family were held in great esteem in their old German home, where they filled social positions and offices of trust, were widely known and honoured in their various mercantile and professional callings, and were much respected for their public spirit, and their numerous charities. and other philanthrophies. The commercial successes abroad, and in other parts of Germany, of some members of the family, and the literary and scholarly fame of others, have conferred distinction upon the native town, where for two hundred years they have held property; and this has increased the feeling of respect for the individual members of this family among the townspeople, who speak of a Nordheim, or Nordheimer, as they would speak of a Rothschild or a Vanderbilt. Connections of the family are millionaire merchants in Hamburg, and are there also known for their princely benefactions—the latest example of this being the erection of a woman's home and retreat, in Hamburg, which cost one of them (Max Nordheim) over \$150,000, and was made a present of to the city. Dr. Nordheimer, another relative, a brother, of Europeau and American fame, and a distinguished Oriental scholar and author, held a professorship for many years in the University and Theological Seminary of New York, where he died in 1842. It was at the instigation of this Professor Nordheimer that the two younger brothers, Abraham and Samuel. in 1839, came out to New York, where at first they attended classes in college, to acquire a knowledge of the English tongue. Samuel afterwards entered the employment of the late celebrated A. T. Stewart, where he rapidly rose to the position of a confidential clerk, and, under the great old merchant's eye, gained his first experience of business life. Abraham, who was an eminent musician and pianist, chose to follow the musical profession. Aided or introduced by the professor, his many gifts and accomplishments soon made him and his brother social lions among the old Knickerbocker families of New York. At this period, General Torrance, of later Crimean fame, then in com-mand of Her Majesty's 23rd Regiment of Foot, at Kingston, Upper Canada, was on a visit to New York, and there made the acquaintance of Abraham Nordheimer. general induced the latter to go to Kingston, at this time the seat of government, there to give musical tuition in the family of Sir Charles Bagot, the governor-general, and in other houses in the old historic town. Shortly after, he organized, in connection with a piano and music room, the first musical society, which he himself conducted. Some three years later, Samuel was prevailed upon to follow his brother to Canada, much to the regret of his employer. Mr. Stewart, who had taken quite a liking to him, and to the day of his death maintained a friendly correspondence with him. His arrival in Kingston was the occasion of the founding of the music house of A. & S. Nordheimer, though the headquarters of the firm were afterwards established at Toronto, with branches at Hamilton, London, Kingston, The success of Montreal, and Quebec. the firm was instant, for the brothers were able and energetic; and their business shrewdness enabled them to see a great future for their trade in Canada. This trade they built up on the wise decision to introduce only the best qualities of pianos, such as those manufactured by Chickering, Steinway, Stoddard, Dunham, and other celebrated European houses; and the connections then formed, the house has creditably maintained ever since, to the profit of the firm and the advantage of the public. In other ways have the brothers Nordheimer been of service to the country, in inducing and assisting numbers of the better grade of professional musicians to come to Canada, where the name of the firm has long been a household-word in musical circles. Nor has their wealth been used only for purposes of individual gain. The house was the earliest to build, in connection with their business, a concert and music hall, which they erected, first, in the building known as Nordheimer, or Masonic hall, Toronto, and afterwards in the edifice owned and used by the firm in Montreal. This enterprise was subsequently imitated by American music firms, in the erection of such buildings as Chickering and Steinway halls, New York, and other places of musical resort. In acknowledgment of this idea, as well as of their standing as a musical publishing house, the firm were made members of the American Board of Music Trade, a privilege to which only leading houses in the music publishing and manufacturing trade are eligible. In 1860, Abraham Nordheimer died in Germany, much regretted. Since then the large business carried on by the firm has been conducted by the surviving brother, who has of late years admitted his nephew, Albert Nordheimer, an accomplished musician and able business man, into partnership, and who has assumed charge of much of the business of the house, since finishing his education abroad. Apart from conducting his extensive business, in its manifold dep ing, tere the tuti \mathbf{Fed} the a di inst den Soci nen ing in b refi prov inde refu an a her tere his f Loui a we bar. of w ther ing nort and a ger tion com has r of To setti > Knig Spair born the y who Comp of Jo Cana Char $\mathbf{a}\mathbf{n}\mathbf{d}$ uncle credit under step-f Lowe he m guishe Taché Canad had b of the active vinci

departments, both manufacturing and selling, Mr. Nordheimer has taken an active interest in the founding and supervision of the affairs of many financial and other institutions in Toronto. He is president of the Federal Bank of Canada, vice-president of the Canada Permanent Loan Company, and a director in several monetary institutions, insurance, and other companies. As president for many years of the Philarmonic Society, he has done good service in permanently establishing the society, and in raising the musical taste of the community, and in bringing the means of an elevating and refining enjoyment to the people of the proprovincial capital. Mr. Nordheimer is an independent in politics, and has repeatedly refused political honours. In religion, he is an adherent of the Anglican church, though he retains an enthusiastic and intelligent interest in Jewish literature and the faith of his forefathers. In 1871, he married Edith Louise, daughter of the late James Boulton. a well-known local member of the Ontario bar. By her he has had nine children, two of whom were carried off recently by diphtheria. The family residence is the charming suburban villa, Glen Edith, in the northern outskirts of the city, where Mr. and Mrs. Nordheimer, on occasion, dispense a genial and princely hospitality. The erection of the Nordheimer mansion, on its commanding position, overlooking the city, has much aided the settlement of that part of Toronto, and given a strikfng and artistic setting to the northern boundary of the provincial capital.

Coursol, Charles Joseph, Q.C., Knight of the Order of Charles III. of Spain, Montreal, Judge of Sessions, was born at Malden, County Essex, Ontario, in the year 1820. He is a son of J. Coursol, who was an officer in the Hudson's Bay Company, and his mother was a daughter of Joseph Quesnel, one of the pioneers of Canadian literature. The father died when Charles Joseph was yet of very tender years, and the lad was adopted by his maternal uncle, the Hon. F. A. Quesnel. He had a creditable career at college; studied law under the late C. S. Cherrier, Q.C., his step-father, and was called to the bar of Lower Canada in 1841. Shortly afterwards he married the daughter of the distinguished statesman and patriot, Sir E. P. Taché. Political excitement ran high in Canada at this period, for the union of 1841 had been laid upon the still smoking embers of the late rebellion, and one of the most active, vigorous, and influential of the younger politicians was Mr. Coursol. As we might expect, he was to be found among the ranks of the Lafontaine reformers. Mr. Coursol soon won a high place at the bar, owing to his quick penetration, his sound and wide acquaintanceship with the law, and the vigor and the industry manifested in all his undertakings. As an advocate he was soon widely popular, for his influence in the court was always very great. During the Trent difficulty he raised a dashing regiment known as the "Chasseurs Canadiens," in 1866 when men's minds were full of apprehension anent the Fenian threats, Mr. Coursol put himself at the head of his battalion and marched to the frontier to repel these insolent marauders. Mr. Coursol was afterwards appointed by government to many important commissions, thereby recognising his great learning and the soundness of his judgment. He was afterwards appointed judge of the Sessions of the Peace, and chairman of the Quarter Sessions of the As police commissioner under the Dominion Act, he has had much important and confidential duty to perform in connection with the department of justice. But Judge Coursol has a continental as well as a Canadian reputation, for his connection with the "St. Alban's Raid," during the American civil war is familiar to all who have read the history of that time. The large majority of the Canadian bar endorsed Judge Coursol's act, and Lord Cairns and Francis Reilly both concurred. His name is likewise favourably connected with the pontifical Zouave movement, and with the great demonstration of June 24th, 1874, when the St. Jean Baptiste Society made the largest display ever seen in Montreal, to endeavor to bring back the French Canadians who had gone to the United States. He was elected president of the Society in 1872 and held the office for four consecutive years. He was unanimously elected mayor of Montreal in 1871. He has been a director of La Banque du Peuple, and been president of La Credit Foncier du Bas Alto_ether Mr. Coursol's career has been a spirited, brilliant, and successful one. What one regrets is that so few of the younger generation give promise of filling the places of such men as Judge Coursol, when they shall have left us.

Prevost, Leandre Coyteux, M.D.V., Ottawa, was born on the 25th of January, 1852, at St. Jérome, County of Terrebonne, Province of Quebec. He is a son of Jules Edouard Prévost, M.D., by Hedwidge Prévost, his wife. The family has for a long period been a prominent one, and has been identified with all the important political events which have taken place in the county of Terrebonne, and in the district of Montreal, from 1837 up to the present. The grandfathers of our subject joined the patriots in 1837-38, and were obliged to take refuge in the States during that agitated period. They were closely allied with Papineau, Dr. Wolfred Nelson, and others of the leaders of that stormy time. L. C. Prévost was educated at Montreal College (St. Sulpice); afterwards studied medicine at the Montreal Medico-Chirurgical School, affiliated with Victoria University, Cobourg, and subsequently in the Rotunda Hospital, Dublin, Ireland; at Paris, France, and in London, England. Upon the completion of his splendid medical course, Dr. Prévost settled in St. Jerome, where he engaged in practice with his father, and in November, 1877, he removed to Ottawa. He became a member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario in 1882. He is president of the Ontario Medico-Chirurgical Society; is president of the Ottawa Canadian Institute; and physician to the Ottawa General Hospital. He is a Roman catholic; and married on the 16th September, 1878, Mary Dora Aumond, of Ottawa. Dr. Prévost enjoys the reputation of being an extremely clever physician; and as might be expected, his practice is very large and select. His residence is in one of the most fashionable portions of the City of Ottawa, Daly avenue.

McMillan, James, Detroit, one of the leading manufacturers and capitalists in the State of Michigan, whose residence is Detroit, was born on the 13th of May, 1838, at Hamilton, Ontario. He is the son of William and Grace McMillan, both natives of Scotland, who emigrated to Canada in 1834, and settled in Hamilton. William Mc-Millan, the father of James McMillan, was well-known throughout the whole of Ontario, having been an officer of the Great Western Railway from its inception, until his death. He was connected with many of Hamilton's institutions; was a director in one of the banks, also in the Gas Light Company. He was a man of broad ideas, well informed on all subjects, and fearless in uttering his opinions, whether on church or state. He died in 1874, leaving a handsome property, which was divided among his sons who survived him. The subject of this sketch is the second son in a family of six sons and He began his educational one daughter. course in the Grammar school at Hamilton, a preparatory school for the Toronto college. Dr. Tassie, a gentleman of wide scholarly repute, was the teacher of the English department of that school. Instead of entering college, Mr. McMillan decided to learn the hardware business, and was placed in a hardware establishment for four years. After mastering the details of this business in its retail branch, he removed to Detroit. where he connected himself with the house of Buhl & Ducharmé, continuing there for two years. Through his father's influence he was appointed purchasing agent of the Detroit and Milwaukee Railroad. performing the duties of his new office, and only in the twentieth year of his age, we learn that he attracted the attention of a railroad contractor, the result of which was an engagement at a large salary. The position he now occupied brought him into contact with the hiring of men, the purchase of supplies, and the care of finances, in connection with the employment of a large force of About the time when the work was drawing to its completion, and Mr. McMillan was debating in his mind the propriety of continuing his relations with this contractor, which would have taken him to Spain, he was asked to accept his old place as purchasing agent on the Detroit and Milwaukee Railway, and decided to do so. In 1864, Mr. McMillan associated himself with Messrs. Newberry, Dean and Eaton, and formed with them the well-known corporation of the Michigan Car Company. From this concern have sprung many others, such as the Detroit Car Wheel Company, the Baugh Steam Forge Company, the Detroit Iron Furnace Company, and he is now the president of all these, and the largest owner. Mr. McMillan did not confine himself to Detroit and Michigan, but established with others, large car establishments in St. Louis, Missouri, and London, Ontario. The business of the firms in Detroit aggregates from three to five millions of dollars per annum, and an average of twenty-five hundred men are constantly employed. Five years ago, Mr. McMillan, with associates in Detroit and New York, built the Detroit, Mackinac and Marquette Railroad, a line 150 miles in length, running through the upper peninsula of Michigan. He is, and has been president of that company from the time of its inauguration. When any new enterprise is put in motion which is likely to be of benefit to Detroit or Michigan, Mr. McMillan is always on hand ready to help with his means and influence. Some years ago he became interested in the ship-

th

lar De

οW

ste

ba:

lar

tw

De

Sa

CÓI

tro

Co

ent

the

sor

do '

an

lica

alw

offic

tho

Mr.

Det

four

mar

son

with

ent

pires

exed

afra

all

head

of lif

self

a ca

gene

oster

chari

aid;

is ne

lan is

him

M

Lieut

Port.

Marc

had s tish a

gaged

lowed

was a

land.

In 183

three

daugh

charte

ise

ping trade of the lakes, and is now one of the largest owners of the Detroit and Cleveland Steam Navigation Company, and the Detroit Transportation Company, the former owning the finest iron and steel passenger steamers on the lakes; and the latter steam barges of the largest capacity. Mr. McMillan has been for many years a director in two of the largest banking institutions in Detroit—the First National and the Detroit Savings Banks. He is also interested in and connected with the management of the Detroit City Railway and the D. M. Ferry Seed Company, and many other large business enterprises. He has done much to improve the business blocks of Detroit, having built some of the finest, thus inspiring others to do likewise. He has for many years taken an active interest in politics and is a Republican; but up to the present time has always refused to be a candidate for any office in the gift of his fellow-citizens, although repeatedly urged to do so. In 1860 Mr. McMillan married Miss Wetmore, of They have six children living, four boys and two girls, two of whom are married and settled in Deiroit. His eldest son graduated from Yale, and is now engaged with others in the management of the different establishments of which his father is the president. Mr. McMillan is a man of rare executive ability, is quick to decide, is not afraid to assume responsibility, and under all circumstances, is cautious and coolheaded. Whilst yet scarce in the meridian of life, he has succeeded in winning for himself an almost princely fortune. Although a careful man of business, his personal generosity is very great, and is without ostentation; many young men of promise are indebted to his bounty; many charitable institutions are assisted by his aid; and an appeal to succour the helpless is never made to him in vain. Mr. McMillan is an honour to the country which gave him birth.

ege.

arly

de-

ter-

arn

l in

Irs.

ess

bit,

use

for

ace

the

lile

nd

ve

Magill, Charles, Hamilton, ex-M.P., Lieut.-Col. of Militia, was born at West Port, County Mayo, Ireland, on the 1st of March, 1816. His father, Robert Magill, had served for twenty-one years in the British army, and after the peace of 1815, engaged in commercial pursuits, which he followed until his death. Mr. McGill's mother was a native of Tralee, County Kerry, Ireland. She died at Hamilton, Canada, 1845. In 1832, the family, consisting of the mother, three sons, the youngest, Charles, and four daughters, emigrated to Canada, having chartered a vessel for themselves. The locality decided upon was Little York, whence the family removed to Hamilton in the following spring of 1833. In 1837 Charles Magill had some intention of adopting agriculture, and accordingly settled on a wild bush lot in the township of Binbrook, Wentworth, and worked steadily upon it for some time. During the December of that year, hearing of the disturbed state of the country and the calling out of the militia, he deemed it his duty to take part in the suppression of the revolt. He went back to Hamilton, and was chosen lieutenant of a company at a public ward meeting, and immediately put on active service. It speaks much for his patriotism, that he volunteered as a private to go to the front, at the time Navy Island was occupied by the rebels, the company to which he was attached not being ordered thither. This taste of military life induced Mr. Magill to try some other occupation than farming, and he abandoned his broad acres to become again a denizen of the town. Such are the simple incidents which sometimes change the whole tenor of men's lives. After the militia was disbanded in 1838, he was chosen clerk and treasurer of the Board of Police for Hamilton. In 1840 he entered into commercial business, and continued in it with uninterrupted success for thirty-two Always prompt and upright, and being a man of good business habits, he secured unlimited credit, although he succeeded without availing himself of the same to any great extent. He was indefatigable in his business until 1852, when he was elected a councillor for St. Lawrence ward, and alderman for the same wards in 1853 4 and He was elected mayor by the council for the year 1854-5. He was also chairman of the Board of Health for 1854, when he signally distinguished himself by zeal and assiduity in attending to the unfortunate emigrants who were stricken with cholera. The epidemic prevailed among the citizens to an alarming extent, but the mayor never faltered in his course. He held that he had a duty to perform, and he fulfilled his task with credit, and with danger to his life. The year 1855 was rendered remarkable in connection with the career of Mr. Magill, on account of the visit of the governor-general Sir Edmund Head, and the celebration of the fall of Sebastopol, both events taking place on the same day. In the evening a grand banquet was given, presided over by Mr. Magill, and which his Excellency and the ministers with him attended. He was elected a water commissioner in 1856, and subsequently chairman of the board, a position he held nearly up to the time of the completion of the water service, thereby assisting in carrying out one of the most important undertakings of the kind on this continent. He was mayor when an extensive system of sewerage, which has proved to be of the greatest benefit to the city, was perfected. In 1860, he was appointed one of Her Majesty's justices of the peace for the County of Wentworth. After a short respite from the office of mayor, he was again induced, in 1865, to become a candidate, and was elected by the large majority of 861. He was again returned by acclamation in 1866, and on the retirement of the late Hon. Isaac Buchanan from the representation of the city in parliament, he was elected by a large majority. Mr. Magill proved an excellent painstaking member, and although particularly faithful to his constituency, he was not unmindful of the general interests of the country. Strong in his feelings of loyal attachment to the Crown, he was a natural advocate of the confederation of the provinces as a means of concentrating not merely force against external aggression, but to secure the national prosperity, and so build up a bulwark founded upon British principles that would be able to resist all the shocks from without, and reflect on this continent the glory of those institutions which have spread their influence wherever civilization has extended. In 1865 he moved the Address in answer to the Speech from the Throne; and his first bill was for the establishment of co-operative associations, which are calculated to confer great advantages upon the industrial classes, in whose welfare he always takes a deep interest. Mr. Magill has served in other public capacities. As a Freemason, he has held distinguished positions in the order. He served as W. M. of Barton lodge at six different periods, and was elected first principal of Hiram chapter in 1856. He was first captain of the Godfrey De Bouillon encampment, Knights Templars, and Knights of Malta, in 1861-2, and eminent preceptor in 1880, and junior grand warden of the Provincial Grand Lodge for Upper Canada in 1852-3. He was elected to the same position in the Grand Lodge of Canada in 1856, and was district deputy Grand Master for the Hamilton district in 1857-60: grand superintendant of Royal Arch Masons for Hamilton district, in 1858, and at the convention of representatives from the lodges of this and the adjoining province called for considering the expediency of establishing a Supreme Grand Lodge, which met at

Hamilton on the 10th Oct., 1855, Mr. Magill was chosen to preside over the deliberations, and the result was the formation of a Canadian Grand Lodge. He was president of the Rifle Association of the seventh military district of Upper Canada in 1851, and afterwards had a seat at the Great Western Railway board of directors. He is now a director of the Gore District Mutual Fire Insurance Company. He might, if he had wished, been a member of the first local administration of Ontario, having been offered the position of Treasurer by John Sandfield McDonald, but he declined it, notwithstanding that the strongest inducements were held out. Such was his determination to preserve his political consistency that he would not accept office on any consideration whatever, preferring, as he did, to do nothing inimical to the Liberal party, with which he was politically allied. The Toronto Globe made the following reference to this circumstance at the time :- "Our Hamilton correspondent telegraphed us yesterday as follows: "Mr. Sandfield Macdonald came here last night, and offered the receiver-generalship to Mr. Magill. An extraordinary pressure was brought to bear by the tories on Mr. Magill to induce him to accept the office with such strong threatenings of opposition, if it was declined. But all was of no avail; Mr. Magill absolutely refused. Mr. Sandfield Macdonald has made another attempt and has failed. Mr. Magill has been true to his party and his principles, and has earned the unanimous thanks, not only of reformers, but of all who feel that the people of Ontario should have an opportunity of forming their own government, without the interference of the confederate cabinet." The Hamilton Times was equally outspoken on the subject. It said: "It became necessary to effect the object of the coalitionists that reformers should be induced to take a part in the political enterprises, a number of persons were approached who declined acceptance. Some ten or twelve days were exhausted in endeavoring to secure what he (Sandfield Macdonald) thought loose reformers. At last he solicited Mr. Magill to join the treacherous movement. But he made a mistake in the man; Mr. Magill was neither to be bought nor bribed. He showed himself no weak-kneed reformer, and after he had kept John Sandfield Macdonald in suspense for more than a day and a half, politely told him that he could not be a party to any such dishonorable arrangement." Mr. Magill was an advocate of moderate protection for home in-dust Hou the : sequ repo impo advo was : main ment ing n and manu incre gill, lieute ment trave and . when land, land, daugh Mr. M Magil didate ful, as

having positio Me was be on De David County Kent. public of the August was fir tested i for the legislat Clark, brough McCart views o Roman tember native o Carthy October reached ment wi ing on a with Mr accepted Creighto position

1856, he

west of

dustry, and was the first who moved in the House of Commons for a select committe in the manufacturers' interest; and in a subsequent session in June, 1872, presented a report recommending as advantageous the imposition of a duty of 20 per cent. His advocacy of the interests of manufacturers was not without important results, as it was mainly through it that agricultural implements, such as mowing, reaping, and threshing machines, were taken out of the free list Vinegar and placed in the 15 per cent. manufacturers were also benefited by an increase of duty upon that article. Mr. Magill, on 8th January, 1869, was appointed lieutenant-colonel of the Hamilton regimental division of reserve militia. He has travelled through Canada, the United States and Europe, his last trip being in 1874, when he visited England, Ireland, Scotland, France, Germany, Austria, Switzer-land, and Belgium, accompanied by his two daughters, Mary and Emma. In religion, Mr. Magill is a Methodist. In 1882, Mr. Magill was again induced to become a candidate for the mayoralty, and was successful, as well as for the following year, 1883, having been elected in all six times to the position.

McCarthy, John, Prescott, Ontario. was born in Dundee, Province of Quebec, on December 23rd, 1827. His father was David McCarthy, who was a native of the County Cork, Ireland, and his mother Ellen Kent. John McCarthy was educated in the public school as Dundee. He was a member of the municipal council of the township of Augusta for the years 1866, 1867 and 1868; was first deputy reeve in 1868; and contested the county for parliamentary honours for the first parliament of our Provincial legislature, but was defeated by McNeil Clark, who was elected. Influences were brought to hear in this election which Mr. McCarthy could not withstand. The religious views of our subject are strictly those of Roman catholicism. He married on September 1st, 1852, Catharine Mahoney, a native of County Cork, Ireland. Mr. McCarthy left his home in Dundee on the 20th October, 1847, and five days afterwards reached Prescott, where he found employment with Charles A. Payne, who was carrying on a distillery business. He remained with Mr. Payne until July, 1856, when he accepted the position of manager of John Creighton's distillery, at Prescott, and this position he filled for a year. In August, 1856, he moved to Maitland, seven miles west of Prescott, and entered into partnership with an American named Charles N. Russell, and, with him, carried on business as distiller, and when, after three years, Mr. Russell became dissatisfied, dissolved partnership, and left for his native country. Mr. McCarthy carried on the business for ten years longer. On Mr. Payne, Mr. Mc-Carthy's first employer, becoming possessor of the "Conway property," on which Mr. McCarthy now resides, he entered into partnership with Mr. McCarthy, and the new firm carried on the distilling business for four years, dissolving in July, 1867. Mr. McCarthy, in 1869, purchased the property, and, in the fall of the same year, he entered into partnership with James Quinn, and turned the old distillery into a brewery. This partnership lasted for eight years, and-Mr. McCarthy has since carried on the business on his own account. In 1881 he made considerable improvements to the premises by building a large malt house, costing some twelve thousand dollars, and rebuilt his brewery in 1883, at a cost of fifteen thousand dollars. Mr. McCarthy has a family of five sons and five daughters: the oldest son being engaged assisting his father in carrying on the business. Mr. McCarthy, in addition to the brewery, owns a very fine farm of 200 acres in the highest state of cultivation.

Rayside, James, South Lancaster, M.P.P. for Glengarry, Ontario, was born in April, 1836, in Montreal, and is a son of John and Janet (Grant) Rayside. John Rayside came from the Island of Bute, Scotland, and Janet Grant was born in the town of Ayr. John Rayside was an architect and builder, and Janet Grant, at the time of her marriage kept a millinery and dressmaking establishment in Montreal. James Rayside, the subject of this sketch, was taken to the village of Martintown by his grand parents at an early age. He was educated at the village school, learned the trade of carpenter and joiner, and afterwards engaged in the occupation of millwright for some years. He went to British Columbia in 1862, the year of the gold excitement, and was in a moderate degree successful. He married, on the 7th April. 1864, Margaret, daughter of David Mc-Dougall, North Bank, Charlotteburg. The family of Mrs. Rayside were amongst the earliest settlers of the County of Glengarry, and the name of her grandfather, Duncan Robertson, was a household word, and is handed down to the present generation for his liberality and kindness to all that sought relief. This branch of the family had a large connection. David Mc-Dougall married Mary Robertson, daughter of Duncan Robertson; and Mr. McDougall's mother was a Munroe, a family which had a wide connection, so that, taking it all round, Mrs. Rayside has a large number of cousins, uncles and aunts. Mr. Rayside has a family of four daughters and two sons living, and the two eldest daughters are now attending the Ladies' College at Ottawa. Mr. Rayside was councillor and reeve of the township of Charlotteburg from 1868 to 1872; was elected in the by-election to the Ontario Legislature in October, 1882, and again returned to fill the same position in In politics Mr. Rayside February, 1883. is a staunch Reformer; and in religion is a Presbyterian. He has been identified with the lumber trade since 1872, and still continues in the same business. He removed from Martintown, Glengarry, to Lancaster, Glengarry, in May, 1880, where he still re-Mr. Rayade was an unsuccessful candidate at the general election of 1879. He was first elected to the Legislative Assembly on the 18th October, 1882, on the resignation of the sitting member, Mr. Mc-Master, to stand for the Commons. Mr. Rayside is a useful and industrious member · of the legislature. Blaicher, Peter Campbell, Hammilton, was born in the County of Wentworth, near Hamilton, in 1835. He is a son of George David and Sarah (Campbell) Blaicher, who removed from the province of New Brunswick in 1835, and settled upon a farm in the township of Saltfleet. Upon this farm G. D. Blaicher laboured for a time, and in 1837, he took up arms on the side of the Crown. He died in 1875, leaving a family of six children, the subject of this sketch being the third eldest. Peter C. Blaicher received a common school education, concluding his studies in the Provincial Normal School, Toronto, whence he graduated in 1859, with high honours, being one of the four out of 160 pupils, who received a first-class certificate, grade A, as a teacher. He had, in 1854, received a secondclass certificate, being then in his seventeenth year. He taught now for a time in the County of Haldimand, but in 1860, obtained the position of second master of the High school in the town of Peteroorough, in which position he remained for five years, when he was qualified as an inspector of public schools for the Dominion of In 1865, Mr. Blaicher concluded to give up teaching and learn a profession; and accordingly in the same year he began te learn the drug business in Peterborough. In 1866, he removed to Hamilton, where he opened up a drug store, and in this business he has continued ever since. But Mr. Blaicher was a man who had always given much attention to municipal questions and public matters generally, and it was not strange that he soon came to be recognised as a "likely candidate" for some sort of a political position. He was elected a member of the Board of Education for the city of Hamilton in 1879; was elected alderman of number two ward of the same city, and reelected the years 1880-85, and at present time (1885), is chairman of the finance committee. He had held the position of chairman of the hospital committee, from 1880 till 1883, and it was during this period the present hospital was established, an institution which reflects credit upon the province, and owes not a little for its existence to the energy and public spiritedness of Mr. Blaicher. With secret society work, Mr. Blaicher has concerned himself much: he is a member of the Masonic order, and has held most of the offices in that body; is also a member of the A. O. U. W., and is master of Dixon lodge of Hamilton. In religion, he is a Protestant, and in politics a Conservative. He has always taken a leading part in political affairs, and is chairman of a Conservative Ward Association. He is likewise vicepresident of the Hamilton Pharmaceutical Society. Mr. Blaicher married in 1861, Jemina P., daughter of the late James Biggar, of the township of Trafalgar, and has issue three children. Of these Clara, the eldest and only daughter, is a graduate of the Wesleyan College, and married in 1883, S. N. Sterling, of the firm of Sterling Bros., wholesale merchants, of London, Ontario.

Httroli Pyst K yth recC win K fu

sa

in

et

30

sa:

tle

ex ed

881 eve

ho

ha

an

cou

on

fur

of

the

Mo

bе

tan

he

flor

and to l

diai

of t

gra

ing

non ing

Nor

han

atio

littl

the

day.

tere

long

then

and

Schultz, Hon. John Christian, Ottawa, Senator, was born in Amherstburg, Essex county, Ontario, in the year 1841. His father was of Scandinavian descent; his mother, Elizabeth Reilly, of Irish extraction. His early days gave no promise of the powerful physique and remarkable endurance developed in later years. At school, he was, although large for his age, rather delicate in health, and deemed by his schoolmates somewhat of a "Molly." It was no trouble for him to learn his lessons, and he seemed always to have leisure to do "sums" for his companions, or otherwise to assist in what, to them, were irksome tasks. He was what Whittier describes as "a silent, shy, peace-loving" lad, who gave to those about him no sign of the self-reliance and extraordinary will which after years developed.

His early education was received in part at) the hands of a retired soldier, whose narrowness and ignorance as a teacher were luridly relieved by handiness with the "tawse," and vigilance in detecting the peccadilloes of his scholars. After a few years spent behind the counter of a country store, kept by his half-brother, Henry Mc-Kenney, afterwards sheriff of Red River. young Schultz set ouf to qualify himself for the medical profession. Having no wealthy relatives to assist him, he chose to ship as a common sailor on a vessel plying between Chicago and Buffalo or Kingston; saved his wages, and attended, first, Oberlin College, in Ohio, and afterwards Queen's College, Kingston, graduating from the latter as a full-fledged medico in 1862. Without delay, save that of a single night, devoted to visiting his favourite aunt, Mrs. Captain Hackett, at Amherstburg, the young doctor, resolute, tall, and rendered athletic by his sailor's life, started for the Red River Settlement, which was then a sort of Wonder Land. For some years he was lost sight of, except by the few with whom he corresponded. How he and his brother toiled, whip-sawing by hand, out of Red River trees, every plank with which to build their first house; trading for furs with Indians and half-breeds, living sometimes on permican and such fish as they caught, or game they could shoot; the doctor visiting his patients on snow-shoes, and often taking his pay in furs or buffalo skins, these were matters of later narration to eager listeners when the usually reticent doctor, on his trips to Montreal to sell furs and buy supplies, could be coaxed by his familiars to tell of his distant prairie life. Observant and studious, he had informed himself of the fauna and flora, the soil and climate, the attractions and capacities of the great lone land, so soon to become known to the world as the Canadian North-West. He perceived the value of this region for grain-growing and cattlegrazing, and lost no opportunity of sounding its praises in the ears of listeners, then none too willing, in Canadian cities. Having purchased the press and types of the Nor' Wester, established by Ross & Buckingham, the Red River doctor varied his operations by writing items and articles for the little monthly or weekly sheet which was the precursor of the Winnipeg dailies of today. Loyal to what he deemed the best interests of the great territory which had too long been retained as a fur preserve by the then all-powerful Hudson's Bay Company, and bold in defence of the claims of settlers,

bugh.

re he

iness

Mr.

given s and

not

nised

of a

mber

ty of

an of

d re-

esent

com-

nair-

0 till

pre-

ıtion

and

ergy

her.

has

er of

the

the

odge

tes-

He

tical

tive

ice-

ical

B61,

Big-

has

the

of

83,

ов.,

ın,

rg, 11. his Schultz made himself obnoxious to the authorities of that corporation. At their instance he was on one occasion, in 1868, bound hand and foot, and consigned to prison as "a dangerous person," only to be released by an excited crowd of the inhabitants, who battered in the jail walls and broke open its door. The six or eight thousand members of the colony were now resolved to have some voice in the management of their own affairs, being heartily tired of Hudson's Bay rule, and communicated with Downing Street, asking sanction for a provisional government, or else to be allowed to elect some of the members of the council at Assinniboia. This was not granted, but these wishes of the people gave rise to steps on the part of the government of Canada, which resulted in the extinguishment of the Hudson's Bay Company's claims by payment of £300,000 sterling, and the transfer of the territory to Canada, in terms of the B.N.A. Act of 1867. When, in 1869, Hon. William McDougall went to Manitoba in the capacity of provincial governor, he was stopped at its threshold by order of the "Provisional Government," of which Louis Riel was the head and front. At this time, according to Archbishop Tache's evidence, "there was no British flag hoisted in the territory for two years previous to the movement," except the flag of Dr. Schultz; a Union Jack, which had the word Can-ADA upon it, and it was considered a party flag." Riel, with a hundred armed men had taken possession of Fort Garry, with its guns and stores, custom house books and papers; hoisted a flag with a fleur-de-lis and shamrock on it; made a prisoner of Dr. Walter Bown, the proprietor of the Nor'-Wester, for refusing to print a proclamation of authority; demanded the contents of Dr. Schultz' warehouse, and on his refusal planted cannon to command it, and threatened to knock it down. On December 7th, Schultz, with some forty-six other Canadians were treacherously made prisoners, and the doctor placed in solitary confinement. For many weary weeks he was thus kept in a room without fire, sleeping upon the floor with a single buffalo-skin for covering, watched by an armed guard, and refused the sight of his invalid wife, for whom he prescribed from out his prison house. But one night the guard was induced to watch outside instead of inside his door, when the doughty prisoner, whose only tools were a penknife and a gimlet, made an opening through the window fastenings, squeezed his body through, but in the attempt to let himself down the strips of buffalo skin gave way and he fell twenty feet, injuring his thigh. Lamed as he was, he had still to scale the fort's outer wall, from whose top he threw himself into a friendly snow-drift. Then with painful steps he walked some miles, and by daylight reached the house of a friendly settler, where he lay concealed, though sought for by Riel's emissaries far and near. Determined to reach Canada, he started as soon as his injured thigh would permit, and on snow-shoes, escorted by a shrewd and faithful Scotch half-breed guide, Joseph Monkman, and making a wide detour northward to avoid capture (for Riel had declared that "as for Dr. Schultz, he is exiled for ever, all his property is confiscated, and if found in the country he is liable to be shot,") reached Duluth, Minnesota. After a few days rest, Dr. Schultz and his guide pushed on to Windsor, London, Toronto, Kingston and Montreal. At all these points, and many others, their reception was most stirring, for the people learned then what indignities their countrymen of Boulton's force suffered as prisoners of the insurgents. For his intrepid stand in defence of the interests of Canada, Dr. Schultz was presented in various towns with addresses, a gold watch, a gold chain, a rifle, and other gifts. Indignation meetings were held, and at the one in Toronto, on April 6th, when Dr. Schultz, Charles Mair, Dr. Lynch and Mr. Setter were present-all refugees from Riel's violence—the government was called on to take action. In Montreal, an indignation meeting crowded the Mechanics' Hall, and an incautious sympathizer with the insurgents was thrown bodily down the stairway at the imminent risk of his neck. The subject of this sketch now returned to Winnipeg, giving his assistance to the organization of authority and the restoration of tranquillity. In the following year he was returned as member for Lisgar in the parliament of Canada, continuing to represent that constituency, with a short interval, until 1893, when he was chosen a senator of the Dominion. Diligence in business had brought Dr. Schultz considerable wealth. He had been a successful trader, and had acquired land in Winnipeg and other parts of the country which rose enormously in value during the "boom." He had also been prominent in organizing the North-West Trading Co., the Southwestern Railway Co., the Great Northwestern Telegraph Co., and other enterprises in the province. But his unstinted labors, carelessness of his health, and above all, the injuries and exposure suffered during imprisonment and escape, undermined his health, and for the past four years he has remained mostly at Ottawa, an invalid. His life has been at different times despaired of, but unfailing pluck has carried him on crutches to his seat in the Senate, where, in spite of a bronchial affection, he has pleaded for better treatment to the Indians, and has rendered great service to that western country through knowledge of its requirements and faith in its future. The delicate Essex lad, schooled on the great lakes, in the forest, on the prairie, has become a distinguished son of the great Dominion.

ac lo H

Cd

R

th

his of

to

Sta

ove

vea

bus

Mr

ter

fou

Pre

of

sist

tali

In 1

and

tive

whe

fore

he '

certi

comi

Mon

Cana

signe

and i

his n

April

been

pursu

1876,

1880, this i

he ret

warde

Gren

ing hi

owing

Pickup, John Wallwork, Brockville, Ont., M.D., L.R.C.S., Edin., was born at Stockport, near Manchester, England, June 18th, 1838. He is a son of Edmund Pickup and Sarah Wallwork, both of whom came to Canada in May, 1842. Mrs. Pickup died in 1848. Edmund Pickup carried on the business of bookseller, publisher, stationer and news agent in Montreal, for many years, and was well known as a prominent business man, and as one of the leading members of the Wesleyan Methodist church, of which he was a devoted adherent. He died in May, 1879. John W. Pickup was educated at Montreal, attending several of the leading private acadamies of that city, and concluding at McGill University. He was medical superintendent of the Quebec Lunatic Asylum from 1865 to 1869. He has always been a Conservative in politics, and has usually been connected with any association of that political character in the community. He was initiated into Freemasonry in St. John's lodge, E. R., No. 544, Carleton Place, in March, 1863, and on removing from the Quebec Asylum to Pakenham, Ont., in 1869, became the tirst W.M. of Eureka lodge, No. 248, G.R.C., presiding for three successive years as W.M. In 1874 he was first elected D.D.G.M. of the Ottawa district, which office he again held for the years 1878-9. Dr. Pickup was educated as a Methodist, but has always favoured moderate Episcopalianism. He married, on the 19th June, 1867, Alice Elizabeth Hulbert, of Prescott, Ont. There have been by this union three boys, the eldest of whom is studying law. Dr. Pickup first commenced practice in Richmond, Ont., in 1860, having graduated at McGill on May 4th of that year. He proceeded to England in 1862, "walked the hospitals," obtained the diploma of the Royal College of Surgeons, Edinburgh, and returned to Ashton, near Richmond, Ont., where he remained in general practice till the spring of 1864, when he removed to Montreal. Here he practised till his appointment to the position of superintendent of the Quebec Lunatic Asylum in 1865, which office he resigned in 1869, after four years' residence, to return to general practice at Pakenham, Ont. At the latter place he remained for ten years, removing to Brockville in May, 1879. Since removing to Brockville, Dr. Pickup has led an active professional life, and has taken a zealous interest in the progress of the town. He is now president of the Brockville Medical and Surgical Association.

ffered

nder-

four

a, an

times

rried

nate.

h, he

e In-

that

f its

The

great

be-

Do-

rock-

born

and.

und

hom

kup

d on

ion-

anv

hent

ling

rch, lied

cat-

the

and

was

na-

has

and

oci-

m-

nry

rle-

ras

is-

le-he tris is d ng at 2, o n-

Conley, Thomas, Kempville, Ontario, was born on the 2nd of August, 1841, in the County of Antrim, Ireland. He is a son of Robert and Mary (Stewart) Conley, both of whom still reside in Antrim, having passed their 74th birth-day. Thomas Conley received a public school education, and served his apprenticeship in Belfast to the business of merchant tailor. In 1858, he emigrated to New York, remaining in the United States until the fall of 1862, when he came over to Canada, settling in the following year at North Gower, where he commenced business for himself. On July 26th, 1863, Mr. Conley married Margaret Jane, daughter of Henry Mulvaugh, a gentleman who fought as a volunteer at the Windmill, near Prescott, in the winter of 1838, in defence of Canada. In 1867, Thomas Conley assisted in raising No. 4 company, 43rd battalion, and was chosen first lieutenant. In 1869, he took command of the company, and in May, 1870, was ordered out on active service at Fort Wellington, Prescott, where he passed a military examination before the board. On October 18th following, he was gazetted captain and received his certificate as an efficient officer, and also a commission as captain, signed by Lord Monck, who was then governor-general of Canada. In March 1873, Mr. Conley resigned his command owing to ill health, and in the same summer he paid a visit to his native home, returning in the fall. April, 1874, he moved to Kemptville, and has been engaged there since that time, in the pursuit of his trade as merchant tailor. In 1876, he was elected councillor; in January, 1880, was elected reeve of the village, and this latter position he held until 1886, when he retired. In 1884, Mr. Conley was elected warden of the united counties of Leeds and Grenville, and it can justly be said that during his term as reeve, and in a large degree, owing to his exertions, the town improved in many important ways. A steam fire-engine was purchased, an efficient fire company was enrolled, and Mr. Conley was elected chief, a position which he held for three years, when he retired. Mr. Conley became a member of the Orange Association in 1865, and a member of the Black Chapter, having occupied the position as master. In January, 1868, he became a member of Goodwood lodge, No. 159, A. F. A. M., at Richmond. He assisted in establishing a lodge at North Gower, No. 206, and was elected worshipful master for three terms. On settling in Kemptville, he became a member of Mount Zion lodge, No. 28, and was elected worshipful master for 1885. In March, 1885, he became a member of the Royal Arch Chapter at Ottawa, No. 16, Carleton Chapter. In politics Mr. Conley has always been a Liberal-Conservative, and taken a deep and active interest on behalf of his party and in the interests of the country. He has all his life been a Methodist, his father's family being among the first adherents of John Wesley, but formerly belonged to the Presbyterian church. His first wife died on October 20th, 1875, leaving four sons, all of whom are living. He again married in June, 1877, Letitia, daughter of William McLoughlin, of South Gower. By the latter marriage, there are one son and three daughters. A very fair measure of success has attended Mr. Conley's exertions, which may be attributed to his high personal integrity, his constant industry, and good business capacity. He has travelled through the greater portion of this country and through the United States, and as a place of residence and business, declares that he would not have any difficulty in giving the preference to the free and thriving Province of Ontario.

Montgomery, Hon, Donald, Senator, Park Corner, Prince Edward Island, was born at Princetown, Prince Edward Island, on the 19th January, 1808. He is the sixth son of the late Daniel Montgomery, who emigrated from Argyleshire, Scotland, to Prince Edward Island, upwards of a century ago, and who for thirty-five years re-presented Prince county in the Provincial Assembly. His mother was, before marriage, Miss Penman of New England. Donald Montgomery attended school at Princetown, and received an ordinary English education. He began when a very young man to give attention to public questions, and when he reached his thirtieth year, he was elected for Princetown to the Provincial Assembly of the island, in which body he sat until 1862. During this period he was for four years speaker of the House: and upon the Legislative Council being made elective in 1862, he entered that body, becoming its speaker. This office he held till 1874. In 1873 he was called to the Senate by Royal proclamation, and has since continued to sit in that body. Senator Montgomery is a moderate Conservative, but his course in the Senate has never been dictated by party exigencies. He is a man of very high personal character, and his counsels always have been wise, just and moderate. He married in 1835 Ann Murray, who died in 1858; he married again on the 2nd May, 1861, Louisa, relict of the late Lawrence W. Gall.

Pringle, Jacob Farrand, Cornwall, Judge of the County Court of the united Counties of Stormont, Dundas, and Glengarry; Local Judge of the High Court; Judge of the Surrogate Court; Surrogate Judge of the Maritime Court; Local Master Supreme Court, was born on June 27th, 1816, in the City of Valenciennes, Dept. Nord, France, and is a son of James and Ann Margaret (Anderson) Pringle. The family is a very ancient and very prominent one in Scottish annals. The surname is prevalent in the south of Scotland, a corruption, as Sir George McKenzie conjectures, of the word Pelerin, or "pilgrim." The anals of the Pringles state that one Pelerin, who had gone on pilgrimage to the Holy Land, having settled in Teviotdale, his descendants were called from him "Hop Pringle." the prefix "Hop" being synonymous with the British "Ap," or Irish "O," signifying a son or descendant. Hop Pringle is therefore supposed to have meant a son of the Pilgrim. The most ancient family of the name is in Teviotdale, where the name is numerous and is Hop Pringle of that ilk, now designated of Torsonce. Escallops are the proper figures of those of the surname of Pringle. The arms of Pringle of Torsonce are argent, a bend sable, charged with three escallops, or, crest, an escallop as the former. Motto, Amicitia Reddit Honores, and supported on the dexter side by a deer, sinister by a grey hound, argent, with collars about their necks sable, charged with escallops, or, and upon the compartment are the words Pressa est insignis gloria facti. Judge Pringle is directly descended from the Torsonce Pringles, and the family intermarried with the Ogilvies of Lounmay, and with the Abercrombies of Birkenbog, a member of which was the celebrated General Sir Ralph Abercrombie, who was killed in the battle near Alexandria, in Egypt. Judge Pringle's father, James Pringle, was educated at Watson's Hospital, in Edinburgh, and after completing his education, he went to England. where he obtained an ensign's commission, in the Dorset militia, under Col. Bingham. After serving in that corps for two years, he was appointed to an ensigncy in the 81st regt., in 1809. He did garrison duty at Blatchington and Eastbourne, in England, and at St. Hiliers, in Jersey. He sailed from Jersey in January, 1313, to join the regiment in Spain, and served under Generals Murray and Lord William Bentinck, on the east coast of Spain, until the close of the war in 1814. He was at the first and second sieges of Tarragona, at Barcelona, and in several small engagements, but not in any pitched battle. He marched across Spain from St. Filiu, near Barcelona, to Overzun. then to Bordeaux. The march continuing from the 4th of April to the 27th of May, 1814. On the 4th of June he embarked with the regiment for Canada, and arrived. at Quebec on the 8th of August. The regiment marched from Quebec to Kingston, where they were stationed until the 26th of May, 1815, when they left for England. They arrived at Spithead in August; on the 5th they sailed for Ostend, whence they marched to Paris. They were stationed near Paris until December, when they marched to Valenciennes, where they remained until the army of occupation was withdrawn from France. Mr. Pringle, who was then a lieutenant, was put on half-pay with several other officers on the reduction of the army in March, 1817. While the regiment was in Canada, Mr. Pringle married on October 3rd, 1814, Ann Margaret Anderson, daughter of Major Joseph Anderson, of Cornwall, whom he met for the first time at her father's house, on the 22nd of September. The wooing was short, but the married life was happy. In the autumn of 1817 they returned to Canada, where they remained for the rest of their lives. Mr. Pringle was clerk of the land board for some years; was deputy clerk of the peace, and deputy registrar for the Eastern district, under Arch. McLean, from 1825 until 1837, when Mr. McLean was raised to the bench, and Mr. Pringle received the appointment as clerk of the peace. He was also for many years clerk of the county council; and was also an elder in the Presbyterian church in Cornwall, in connection with the Church of Scotland. He died in October, 1860, and his widow survived him until August, 1870. J. F. Pringle was educated at

1

F

se u

W

W

ťο

th

In

of of

th

tio

the

at

hel

186

In

cer dea

the Cornwall Grammar school, by the Rev. ngle's H. Urquhart, a worthy successor of the Rev. Wat-John Strachan, afterwards bishop of Toroncom-He received instruction in classics, gland. mathematics, and the usual English branches ssion, given in a district school at that time, 1826 ham. to 1833. He left school in the beginning of rs. he 1833, passed as a law student at Osgoode 81st Hall in February of that year, and studied ity at law in the office of Geo. S. Jarvis, afterwards land. judge of the Eastern District Court. He was from admitted an attorney and passed as barrisregiter in November, 1838; was in partnership nerals with Mr. Jarvis until the close of 1840; he n the commenced business on his own account on e war the first of January, 1841, and continued to econd practice with success until November, nd in 1866, when he was appointed junior judge anv of the County Court of the united Counties Spain of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry. When rzun, the rebellion broke out in 1837, a company nuing of three officers and fifty men volunteered to May, go and occupy the fort at Coteau du Lac. He \mathbf{ar} ked was one of the fifty, and the company was at rived . the fort about two weeks, when they were regirelieved by another company. In December, gston, 1838, Mr. Pringle joined an independent th of company of artillery, which his father had land. been ordered to raise at Cornwall, and servn the ed as sergeant in the same until the 27th of thev May, 1839, when it was disbanded. The ioned company was soon after re-organized on the they sedentary list, and Mr. Pringle was made y relieutenant, which rank he held until Nowas vember, 1862, when he raised a company of , who f-pay infantry, and obtained the rank of captain. This company went through the usual drills ction and inspection until the 7th of March, 1866, e the when, in consequence of the threatened mar-Fenian invasion, it was called out for active garet service, and remained on duty at Cornwall Anuntil the 23rd of July, 1866. Having been r the appointed junior judge, Mr. Pringle was 22ndallowed to retire, retaining his rank. . but was elected a member of the Cornumn wall board of police, in 1846, and of the here town council in 1852-3-4-5 and 6. During īves. the last two years he was mayor of the town. l for In November, 1857, he was appointed clerk eace. of the county council of the united Counties diaof Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry; on until the 20th of February, 1858, on the resignathe tion of his father, he was appointed clerk of apthe peace for the same counties, and was Was at the same time county attorney. unty held these offices until the 15th November, esby-1866, when he was appointed junior judge. with In 1870, he was made local master in Chanber, cery; on the 17th of June, 1878, on the death of His Honor Judge Jarvis, he was Augd at made judge. Judge Pringle was made surrogate judge of the Maritime Court on the 8th of March 1879, and on the 14th of March 1882, local judge of the High Court. He is also judge of the Surrogate Court. He is therefore entitled now to sign himself: J. C.C., J.S.C., J.P., Ch.G.S., L.M.C., L.I. H.C., and S.J.M.C. Judge Pringle exerted himself hard for the improvement of the road from the town to the rear of the county, a distance of 18 or 20 miles, and succeeded in getting four miles of it made. He joined the Independent Order of Oddfellows in 1846, and held the offices of vice. noble, and past grand. In 1860 he joined the Masonic lodge at Cornwall, and held the office of master for one or two years, but he is not at present affiliated with any lodge. Judge Pringle has never taken an active part in politics, either local or federal, but he has always voted on the Conservative side as long as he had the right to vote; but since January, 1858, he has not voted even at a municipal election. Judge Pringle belongs to that branch of the Presbyterian Church of Canada, that was before the union in connection with the Kirk of Scotland. He is a member of the congregation of St. John's church; has been for many years an elder, and a trustee for the church property. Judge Pringle married on the 10th September, 1844, Isabella, third daughter of Colonel the Hon. Alexander Fraser, of Fraserfield, in the County of Glengarry. By this marriage there were nine children, five sons and four daughters. The youngest daughter, Edith, died in May, 1882. The eldest son, James Farrand, and the fourth son, George W., are in mercantile business in Cornwall; the second son, Alexander Fraser, is a doctor, practising at Northfield, Minnesota; the third son, Robert Abercrombie, is a barrister, in partnership with James Leitch, mayor of Cornwall; the fifth, William Rodger Mc-Intyre, is at McGill University, studying medicine. He went to the North-West last April, as a dresser in the Field Hospital corps, was on duty on the Northcote, when she passed Batoche on the 9th of May, and was wounded in the left shoulder very early in the action. The eldest daughter, Annie (now a widow), was married to Moren, of Halifax, M.D., son of James A Moren, of the same city, merchant. The second daughter, Margaret, married F. J. Hall, a son of the late James Hall, at one time sheriff of Peterborough; the third, Isabella, married Thos. Ritchie, of Halifax, barrister, son of the Hon. John Ritchie, late equity judge of Nova Scotia; the fourth, Mary Christine, married J. Athalmar Aylmer, civil engineer, son of the Hon. Henry Aylmer, of Melbourne, Quebec. Alexander Pringle married Clara Allen, daughter of Mr. Allen, of Northfield; Robert, married Ada Vanarsdale, daughter of J. Vanarsdale, of Cornwall.

Walkem, Richard Thomas, Q.C. Kingston, was born at Waterford, Ireland, on the 30th September, 1840. He is a son of Charles Walkem, late royal surveyor attached to the Royal engineers, and latterly of the Militia department, Ottawa, by his wife Mary Anne, daughter of George Boomer, and sister of the Very Rev. Dean Boomer, of the diocese of Huron. Charles Walkem belonged to a family, which lived for many generations near Galtash, in Cornwall, England. The Boomers are descended from a Huguenot family, which settled in the North of Ireland at the end of the seventeeth century. Richard T. Walkem is the fourth child of a family of seven sons and three daughters, the eldest of the former being at present the Hon. Mr. Walkem of the Supreme Court, British Columbia, and for many years premier and attorney-general in that province. The subject of this memoir was educated at Phillip's Montreal Academy, and at the High School and McGill College, Montreal, where he took first rank honours in classics and mathematics, and several prizes. He left Montreal in 1860 to study law in Toronto. Here he entered successively the offices of Geo. A. Walkem, Dr. Larratt Smith, and Adam Crooks. He gained the third year scholarship of the Law Society of Upper Canada, and was awarded a special scholarship in the fourth year, and he was senior or first-prize student in each year during his attendance at the law school. He removed to Kingston in 1864, and entered the office of the late Thomas Kirkpatrick, Q.C., M.P.; was admitted to the bar in November, 1865; entered into partnership in 1866 with J. P. Gildersleeve, and subsequently with J. B. Walkem. He was created a Queen's counsel in 1880, and subsequently became professor of equity in Queen's University, Kings-Mr. Walkem is the author of a work on Wills, published in 1873, and for many years used as a text-book for students by the Law Society. He published another work in 1874, on the law relating to the Property of Married Women. He is a member of the Church of England, and has been a delegate from St. George's Cathedral to the synod of the Diocese of Ontario for nearly twenty years. He has for many years likewise been a member of the Provincial Synod. He is a Freemason, and a member of the board of general purposes in the Grand Lodge of Canada, and is chairman of the committee on grievances and appeals. Mr. Walkem is a Liberal-Conservative, and has always taken an active interest in politics. He is vice-president of the Kingston Art School, and a director of the Gas Company. He married, on the 20th of April, 1870, Emilie, eldest daughter of Dr. Henderson, Q.C., chancellor of the Diocese of Ontario, and past grand master of the Grand Lodge of Canada. He has by this union four sons and one daughter.

b C c

b

fı

y le

te

D

81

th

th

vi

he

do

th

ca

we

for

wi

era

Co

cor

and

the

and

sec

tim

is

Mc

exe Par

ed a

in 1

М.

men

Cart

mat

in 1

Cou

vice

elect

the

Just

fall

Mini

a bill

of pa

crees

same

to th

likew

abolit

and t

gener

Laflamme, Hon. Toussaint, A.R., Montreal, P.C., ex-Minister of Justice for Canada, was born at Montreal, on the 15th of May, 1827. He is a son of Toussaint Laflamme, a merchant of good standing in the commercial capital of Canada, and his mother was Marguerite Suzanne Thibaudeau, of Point Claire, a lady who traced her descent from one of the first families of France. Her grandfather, we learn from a trustworthy source, had lived in Grand Pié, at the time of the expulsion of the Acadians, and he, in common with his compatriots, was forced to leave the land of his birth, for reasons which are familiar to all students of the history of French domination in America. While yet a bcv. young Laflamme espoused the cause of Liberalism, and identified himself with the great national and progressive move-ments of the day. He entered the college of St. Sulpice, and exhibited while there remarkable powers for study. He next entered the office of the Hon. L. T. Drummond, Q.C., afterwards judge of the Court of Queen's Bench, and in 1848, was called to the bar of Lower Canada. When only in his nineteenth year, he was elected to the responsible position of president of the Institut Canadien of Montreal. He soon became a leader among the younger political spirits, for he was full of zeal and of patriotism, and believed that his people were suffering grievous wrongs. Time and experience afterwards subdued the fire of his feelings, but he has always been a steadfast lover of his people, and true to the interests of his province. When L'Avenir, that bold and brilliant organ of the Rouges, was established, M. Laflamme was chosen to take a leading position upon its editorial staff. The policy of the party, we are informed, was reechoed in the impassioned columns of the new journal. The paper was at no pains to conceal its hostility to existing institutions, and every outbreak of the people in other lands was warmly applauded by the conductors of L'Arenir. It went at one time beyond the bounds of prudence in invoking hostility to Canadian institutions, and alarmed the church, whose clergy thereaftar waged a bitter war against M. Laflamme and his friends. The church was too strong for the young liberals, and the English population leagued itself with the French clergy. "After a short but brilliant battle," says Mr. Dent. "the party succumbed before the superior force which had been allied against them." M. Laflamme, we may say, was extremely active as the professional adviser of the seigneurs, who claimed indemnity in virtue of the Seigniorial Act of 1857-8, and he had, while one of the editors of L'Avenir, done much to bring about a settlement of the vexed question. Having given such careful and long study to the subject, he was well qualified to fill the position of counsel for the seigneurs, and he acquitted himself with marked ability and judgment. On several occasions he appeared before the Privy Council of England to argue the case, and commanded attention there by his brilliancy. In 1856, McGill conferred upon him the degree of B.C.L., and in 1873, of D.C.L., and he was twice elected batonnier for the section of the bar of Montreal, and several times selected delegate for the same. He is professor of the law of real estate at McGill University, and a member of the executive of the Reform Association of the Parti Nationale of Montreal. He was offered a puisné judgship in the Supreme Court in 1875, but declined the honour. In 1872, M. Laflamme was first elected to parliament to represent the County of Jacques Cartier. In 1874, he was elected by acclamation for the same constituency; and in 1876, was sworn in member of the Privy Council as Minister of Inland Revenue, vice the Hon. Mr. Geoffrion, and was reelected on November of the same year. On the 8th of June he became Minister of Justice, which office he held till the downfall of the administration in 1878. While Minister of Justice, M. Laflamme introduced a bill for further securing the independence of parliament; and a bill giving to the decrees of the Ontario Maritime Court the same meaning and force as are attached to those of the Court of Chancery. He likewise brought in a bill providing for the abolition of the office of receiver-general, and the creation of the office of attorneygeneral, who should be a cabinet minister,

ny

l a

in

7a-

est

he $^{\mathrm{he}}$

of

ese

he

his

R.,

For

th nt

in.

his

lu-

ed

μd

and preside over the Law department with the Minister of Justice. This bill the Senate rejected. Other important bills were also introduced, by or under the auspices of the hon. gentleman. He was an exceedingly capable minister, and his official decisions were remarkable for their learning, the closeness and clearness of their reasoning, and the judicial spirit that pervaded them. M. Laflamme has been head of the important law firm in Montreal of Laflamme, Huntington & Laflamme. He has never married.

McCrae, Thomas, of Guelph, Ontario, Stock-breeder and Farmer, is well known as the foremost breeder of Galloway cattle in Canada, and indeed the pioneer of the black polls in America. For over a quarter of a century he has advocated the excellence and hardiness of the Galloways, and now more of the first class Galloways on the farms and ranches of the Western States trace to animals from his herd than to any other herd in the continent. While he has bred and fed many good animals of other breeds—as shorthorns, polled Augus, and Ayrshires—he has never swerved from his faith in the Galloways. For many years his herd has taken a prominent place at provincial and other exhibitions, and numerous medals and diplomas attest the excellence of the animals of his breeding. Kintail, in Ross-shire, is the home of the Clan Macrae—originally spelt MacRa. The clan claims descent from the early emigration of Scots from Ireland. Icolmkill, the sacred isle of St. Columba, is the resting place of some of their early chiefs. In Kintail they were under the chief of the clan Mackenzie, and have been for a very long period allies of that clan. They took up the cause of the Stuarts, and were out in the rebellion of 1715, suffering very severely at the battle of Sheriffmuir. Many of the clan had to leave the Highlands at this time, and were scattered over the south-west of Scotland and the north of Ireland. The family from which the subject of this sketch is descended have been, since about that time, located in the hilly district of Ayrshire. Robert McCrae, of Cumnock, Ayrshire, had a son John, born in 1749. John lived for many years in New Cumnock and married Jean McCowan. He was a very godly man, and a strong supporter of the early dissenters, his house being a resort of the preachers of the old secession. He died in 1827, aged 78. His family consisted of seven sons and two daughters. The eldest, Marmaduke McCrae, born 1772, moved to Carsphairn, and for many years herded on the lofty Cairnsmore. He survived till 1856, being at the time of his death 84. His wife was Sarah Blackwood, and his son, David McCrae, was born at the Holm of Dalquhairn, 30th June, 1800. This David married Maria Munroe, who still survives, and their eldest son, Thomas, was born at Dukeston, Kells, 23rd October, 1820. David came to Canada with his son, and died at Guelph, in 1878, aged 78 years. Thomas had only such an education as the parish school of the Kells afforded, and at an early age he was sent to learn the mysteries of a shepherd's life. The training he then got he still retains, and he can yet pick out a sheep by its features, noting and remembering the face of the animal as others do the features of the human family. During his early life he was much among the Galloways, in their native district, and this, no doubt, accounted for his taking them up so strongly in Canada. nearing manhood he went again to school for a time, and then went into mercantile life, and began business in the village of Lauriston, about six miles from Castle-Douglas. He built there a shop and dwell-The shop is still the principal one in the village, and the business, with the post office, still retained and conducted by his nephews. Thomas had before this married Jean Campbell, daughter of William Campbell and Jean Scott. The Campbells were an old family on the upper ranges of the Water of Nith, William's father having been many years tenant of the farm of Daljig, New Cumnock. The family were Covenanters during the time of the persecution, as were also the Scotts, who came from near Lockerbie for greater security. Both families were strong dissenters, and supporters of the U.P. Church. In 1849, Thomas McCrae decided to emigrate to Canada, and having sold his business to his brother-in-law-Walter Scott Campbell-he left Kircudbright, with his wife, and family of two children- David and Margaret-and accompanied by his father's family, sailed by the Countess of Galloway to Liverpool, and thence by the ship Empress to New York. The voyage was anything but pleasant those days. An incipient mutiny amongst the steerage passengers was put down by the officers, and was not so formidable as the small-pox which followed. Arrived at New York, they came up the Hudson to Albany, where every effort was made to prevent the emigrants from going to Canada, and some were, against their will, sent west. They would not be turned, and by way of Rochester crossed Lake Ontario, landed at Toronto, and from thence went by boat to Hamilton. Arrived there in the month of May, the families were put in lodgings, and the heads sallied out to spy the land. Going down one of the streets in Hamilton, they saw a stage coach starting, and enquired where it was going, and received for answer, "To Galt and Guelph," and this was the first time they had heard the name "Guelph." They took passage, and after passing Galt, were the only passengers. The roads were very bad, and much of the way had to be made on foot, and several times the driver had to be assisted to pry the wheels out of mud-holes by the help of a fence rail. Arrived at Guelph, they went into the country the next day, and rented the farm of the late Mr. Davis, about six miles from the town. The families were brought from Hamilton as soon as possible, and the colonist life began. The new life was strange to them, but they went at it with a will, and did fairly well. Hearing of a church a few miles off, in Eramosa, they walked over one Sabbath day, and heard the late Dr. Barrie, of Eramosa, preach. At the close of the service the Dr., noticing the strangers, came forward, and shaking them heartily by the hand, welcomed them to the church and the land, and in his quaint, humorous way added:-"You have come to a grand country—a grand country, but the scum of all the earth come here." The acquaintance thus curiously begun ripened into friendship, which continued till Dr. Barrie's death. Thomas worked on the farm with his father all the summer and fall of 1849, but early in 1850 he moved into Guelph, and took such work as could be got. Times were dull—very dull—and even for a willing worker there was little to be got. His first job was cutting cord-wood with a buck saw. This was followed by barreling flour in the People's Mills and weighing grain, and in the spring he secured the position of clerk and bookkeeper in the Wellington Foun-This position he held for three years, and left it to go into business with David Anderson, in the Guelph Lumber Yard. This business began as McCrae & Anderson, continued for some time, and when Mr. Anderson left for his farm in Erin, the business was continued by Thomas McCrae alone for some time, and then as McCrae & Thomson, with John Thomson. firm purchased the saw mills and timber limits in East Flamboro', and the mills were

tl

tl

G

fi

th

G

te

A

se

tr

th

cle

m

th

sta

th

we

A.

fir

bu

sk

18

th

car M

tio

kn

Ha

the

WO

lor

tha lon

Un

he

WO

dia

rie

the

rep

ma

abo

the

wh

mo

sou

tari

bef

wit

had

in ·

Wi

Cot

som

hor

fem

run till the pine timber was all cut away in the section. During this time Mr. McCrae supplied the lumber and timber for most of the large buildings in Guelph, and for the Grand Trunk while building. Some of the finest pine lumber ever manufactured in Canada was cut at these mills, and while the commoner sorts were marketed at Guelph, the clear and select was sent by team to Lake Ontario, and shipped to Albany and New York. The pine in this section grew amongst hard-wood. The trees were few, but very large and fine, and the lumber was fine soft, and much of it clear. For many years there would be made clear planks, six, eight and ten inches thick, and too wide to go between the stakes of a waggon-fifty inches. the lumber trade was over, Mr. McCrae went into the knitting trade with J. & A. Armstrong and John Anderson, who, with Mr. McCrae's son, David, formed the firm of Armstrong, McCrae & Co. They built the woollen works in Guelph, on Horskinson street; the firm being formed in 1866. Since the Messrs. Armstrong left the firm and started the manufacture of carpets, the old firm has been carried on as McCrae & Co. The firm have a reputation for the excellence of their yarns and knitted goods all over the Dominion, from Halifax to Victoria. Thomas McCrae, from the time he became connected with the woollen trade, was anxious to utilize the long wools of Canada, and always regretted that there was no home demand for the long lustre wools that were exported to the United States. To obviate this as soon as he could arrange it, he had the firm put in worsted machinery to comb the long Canadian wools. This department is now carried on at the firm's mills on Mill-land, and the yarns turned out are sustaining the reputation of the firm for excellent workmanship. The mills of the firm employ about 300 hands, and are a great benefit to the City of Guelph. In 1863, Mr. McCrae, who had up to that time lived in Guelph, moved to his farm, a short distance to the south-west, adjoining what is now the Ontario Agricultural College. For some years before this he had been actively engaged with his Galloway herd, which he has now had for over twenty-five years. His success in this line has been already alluded to. With the pure-bred cattle he also took up Cotswold sheep and Essex pigs, and for some years has had very superior Clydesdale horses. He has a stud of seven pure-bred females, several of them prize winners. In

ı, d r,

er

ie al y p y d 1870 there was no market for the beef so largely grown in the County of Wellington. and Mr. McCrae set himself to find an outlet for the beef, which at that time was a drug, and could not be sold. He formed a partnership with Gideon Hood, George Hood and A. E. Goodfellow, went to England, and opened a market there, and for some years packed and shipped the largest part of the cattle coming to Guelph market. The business, whilst it did great good at a critical time, was not remunerative, and when by the opening of the live stock trade with England a new and permanent outlet was found, the business was discontinued. Thomas McCrae is an active Presbyterian. For many years an elder in the old U. P. Church-Rev. R. Torrance's-he took an active part in all church courts where his duties called him; was for many years superintendent of Sabbath schools, and is still an active member of the Home Mission committee of the Presbyterian Church of Canada. He was a member of the Pan-Presbyterian Council, which met at Philadelphia in 1878, and was a member of the union committee, which drafted the basis of union for the different Presbyterian bodies in the Dominion. In politics Mr. McCrae is a Liberal, as all his fathers were, and a strong supporter of all measures of reform tending to the good of the people. He has never filled any municipal office, would never join any secret society, and the only municipal office he has filled has been that of school trustee, which he did for several years, taking an active interest in all educational matters. He has a family of two sons and two daughters. The eldest son, David, being the manager in the firm of McCrae & Co., and the youngest, William, being a farmer and stock-breeder near Guelph. His daughter, Margaret, is the wife of Rev. R. Leask, of St. Helen's, and his youngest daughter, Jane, is with her parents at the old homestead.

White, Frederick, Comptroller of the North-West Mounted Police, Ottawa, was born in England, on the 16th February, 1847. He was educated in his native place, and on his arrival in Canada settled in the City of Ottawa. On the 18th of March, 1869, he entered the Canadian civil service as clerk in the department of Justice. In April 1876, he was transferred to the department of State as clerk in charge of the Mounted Police branch. On the 23rd September 1878, he was promoted to a chief clerkship; and in the same year was transferred to the department of the Interior, with the title of comptroller. In July 1883, he received further, the highest promotion by obtaining the rank of deputy-head. From 1880 to 1882 Mr. White was private secretary to the Right Honourable Sir John A. Macdonald. Mr. White is married to the eldest daughter of the late R. W. Cruise of Ottawa. There is probably not in the civil service of Canada a more popular official than Mr. White: and he is held in especial esteem by young men. Nor is the esteem confined to the officials of his own department: Mr. White's warm admirers are to be found in all the departments. It is certainly a cause for congratulation to possess the qualities of heart which can make one so popular; but it can also be said of Mr. White that he is one of the most efficient officers in the service; and that man never better earned or deserved promotion than he did. The department, at the head of which he has been placed, has come now to be one of the most important in the public service; and its responsibilities are certain to increase, for the Indian problem must grow more tangled before the difficulties are removed. But Mr. White is a safe man at the helm.

Bethune, James, LL.D., (deceased), was born on the 7th July, 1840, at Glengarry, Ontario. He is descended from two old and well known Scotch families: on his father's side from the Bethunes, and on his mother's from the Mackenzies. great-grandfather Angus Bethune, was a U. E. loyalist, who settled at Glengarry in 1778. Here were born Duncan Bethune, our subject's grandfather, and Angus Bethune, his father. [See elsewhere in these pages memoir of Angus Bethune.] The mother of James Bethune was Ann, daughter of John Mackenzie, of Glengarry. James Bethune spent two years at the University of Queen's College, Kingston, and then entered University College, Toronto, graduating from the latter institution in 1861, and receiving the degree of bachelor of laws. Concurrently with his university pursuits, James Bethune studied law, first entering the office of Judge Pringle, of Cornwall, and afterwards that of Edward Blake, Toronto. He was called to the bar of Upper Canada, at Easter term, 1862, and to the bar of Quebec, in 1869. At once, upon being admitted to the bar of Upper Canada, he commenced the practice of his profession at Cornwall, and three years later was appointed county crown attorney, for the united Counties of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry. Mr.

Bethune, however, had been a careful student of public questions, and had an ambition to enter political life. In 1870 he resigned his office and became a candidate for Stormont, at the general elections of 1872, for the Legislature of Ontario. He was unsuccessful, but upon the sitting member being unseated and a new election held, he was returned. He was re-elected at the general elections of 1875, and continued to represent this constituency till June, 1879. when he declined to become a candidate again, owing to his extensive practice and the importance of devoting to it his whole time and attention. He removed to Toronto in November, 1870, and in conjunction with the Hon. Edward Blake, S. H. Blake and J. K. Kerr, established the firm of Messrs. Blake, Kerr and Bethune. Upon the elevation to the bench of the late Chief Justice Harrison, and Chief Justice Moss, he associated himself with their former partners, Messrs. F. Osler and Charles Moss. and formed the well known law firm of Bethune, Osler and Moss, which was continued till the appointment of Mr. Osler to the bench. The firm thereafter was known as Bethune, Moss, Falconbridge & Hoyles, and it became one of the most prominent and successful legal firms in the country. In 1875 Mr. Bethune was elected a bencher of the Law Society of Ontario, and he had for some years been lecturer on jurisprudence for that body. He was one of the Queen's counsel appointed by the Ontario government, and when the constitutionality of such appointment was raised, he at once resumed the gown of stuff, and laid by the silken one. "While," says an authority before us, "there have been differing opinions as to the wisdom of this course, there has been none as to the high sense of honour that would not permit him to retain a distinction, the validity of which was open even to the slightest imputation." Mr. Bethune was one of the very ablest lawyers at the Canadian bar. His learning was wonderfully wide, and his power of penetrating a case, seeing its surroundings, and of then lucidly presenting it as a whole, remarkable. His statements were calm. clear and straightforward; and he was without a superior in the application of legal principles. He always scorned to avail himself of "quibbles," the stock-in-trade of little men; and he even candidly admitted the weak points in his own case. The judges were always glad when he came before them, for he never worried them with ad captandum arguments. His prac-

tic

cot

cor

tria

tut

nit

me

He

An

Oct

Dr.

the

die

ly r

com

the

ling

mer

Mar

Can

Cou

year

ner

lad:

tain

worl

shee

pres

offic

of E

com

wher

Nort

tune

Linc

with

came

Whil

the a

dent

presi

ed M

coun

ed up

1862.

retar

tion

velop

ity.

affair

best i

clearl

gigan

upon

place

they

in the

was a has he

H

tice was extensive, ranging from the Assize | court to the Supreme court; and he was connected with many important criminal trials, election trials, cases involving constitutional questions, and cases of great magnitude in equity. He always was a Reformer; and favoured compulsory voting. He was a Presbyterian, and an elder in St. Andrew's Church, Toronto. He married on October 30th, 1860, Elizabeth, daughter of Dr. Rattray, of Cornwall. By this union there were four children. Mr. Bethune died on the 18th December, 1884, profoundly regretted by the legal fraternity, and the community at large. His reputation was the highest for integrity, honour and sterling parts; and he had but just reached the meridian of his professional powers.

Hickson, Joseph, Montreal, General Manager of the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada, was born at Otterburn, in the County of Northumberland, England, in the year 1830. It is interesting to note the manner in which this north country English lad rose to the highest position he can attain amongst the railway men of the new Unaided, and solely by his own sheer strength of character, he gained his He started life in the present eminence. offices of the present North Eastern Railway of England, and when he retired from that company was agent at Carlisle. In 1851 when Mr. (now Sir James) Allport left the North Eastern Railway and allied his fortunes with the Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire Company, Mr. Hickson went with him, and after ten years' service he became assistant to the general manager. While engaged in this capacity he attracted the attention of Sir Edward Watkin, president of the M. S. & L. R., who was also president of the Grand Trunk. He appointed Mr. Hickson to the position of chief accountant of the Grand Trunk, and he entered upon his duties in Canada, in January, 1862. Shortly afterwards he was made secretary and treasurer of the company, a position in which he had opportunities of developing his talent of administrative capacity. In the direction of Grand Trunk affairs in England there was some of the best financial heads in the empire, and very clearly discerning that the success of their gigantic enterprise would depend largely upon the management, they resolved to place in the chair the man whose ability they had come to regard above all others in their employ, and in 1874, Mr. Hickson was appointed general manager, and he has held that office since. When Mr. Hick-son joined the Grand Trunk in 1861, its traffic earnings were for that year, $3,710, 319, with a mileage of 1090. In 1883 the revenue had become $18,828,691, which includes the Midland and Great Western earnings, and the total mileage was While the Grand Trunk Co. held the control of Canadian traffic there was no need to seek further extension, or other connections, but when there came into the field a rival enormously bonused by the government of Canada, it was simply a choice between extension or downfall. Here a timorous heart, or an ordinary head, directing the destinies of the Grand Trunk, would have been sadly out of place. Some men, those who knew the matchless capacity, the sound, clear judgment of Mr. Hickson, were satisfied that he was equal to the emergency; but there were many who said, "The Grand Trunk must go to the wall." But the difficulty seemed to be just the sort of task to call forth, not alone his ability, but his enthusiasm. At first we see him selling to the Dominion government, for the sum of a million and ahalf of dollars, the unremunerative Riviere du Loup line; and it next was announced that the Chicago extension was a fact accomplished, and that the Grand Trunk had connection with, was indeed part of, the great American system—including Canada as well as the United States-of railroads. Those who made the dark prophecies then had the fact brought home that the Grand Trunk was not going to the wall, and once more was the transcendent ability of Joseph Hickson made manifest. But though courage and enterprise of so large a character have marked the career of Mr. Hickson, he has been prudent in expenditure, and there is none of the looseness or leakage in his management which eat into the profits of great enterprises under less economical supervision. The history of the Grand Trunk under Mr. Hickson has been a splendid one; and its future is assured. No rival, no matter how supported by governments, can shake it now. Besides being manager of the Grand Trunk, Mr. Hickson is president of the Michigan Air Line; of the Chicago, Detroit, and Cana-ada G. T. Junction Railroad; is vice-president of the Montreal and Champlain Junction, and of the International Bridge Co., Buffalo. He is also a director of the Central Vermont Railway, and he is associated in the management of nearly 5000 miles of railway and steamboat service. Mr. Hickson married, in 1869, Catherine Dow, a niece of the great brewer, and has by this marriage a family of six children living. He is an office bearer in the St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church. Mr. Hickson's career is a successful one, due to hard work, allied to the too rare attributes on this continent of entire honesty and straightforward dealing: he does right because it is right. In his quarter of a century's administration of Grand Trunk affairs he has had to encounter many obstacles and dark forebodings, but his great quality of perseverance makes him overcome them, and attain results which, to one less persistent, would never have been achieved.

English, Rev. E. N., M.A., London, is a gentleman of learning and great administrative ability, and is principal of Hellmuth Ladies' College, in the City of London, Ontario. This popular institution is named after its founder, the Right Rev. Bishop Hellmuth, D.D., D.C.L., and was established in the year 1869. This college was founded with the object of providing a thorough, liberal and useful education for young ladies. The system of this institution is based upon "sound Protestant principles as the only solid foundation for the right formation of character." It is because it has adhered so closely to his aims, and achieved such splendid results that we give it a place in these pages as a representative Canadian institution. Being within a mile of the City of London, which is about three and a-half hours from Detroit and Suspension Bridge, on a through-rail route between the east and the west, the college is easily accessible from any point in the Dominion or the United States. The buildings, handsome and commodious structures, composed of stone and brick, are situated upon a prominent, high and airy location, and stand in the centre of large grounds, comprising 150 acres, and in the midst of most picturesque scenery, on the banks of the river Thames. The main building is 118 feet in length, by sixty feet in depth, with spacious corridors on each floor the full length of the building, and a verandah, in front of the building, ten feet wide. building contains capacious class-rooms, studios, museum, library, dining-hall, drawing-rooms, dormitories, private bed-rooms, sanitorium, baths, hot and cold, and all other appurtenances of a college. The width of the corridors, and the double staircases, afford ample room through all the passages of the building. The bed-rooms are large, airy, and well ventilated, and the doors are provided with transom ventilators. The premises have been expressly planned and arranged to meet every possible educational and domestic requirement of the pupils. The ventilation, heating and drainage are on the most modern and approved plan, and there is steam coil in every room. Hydrants with hose attachments, and fire handgrenades are placed on every floor, and there are the most complete facilities for protection and escape in case of fire. The table is supplied with wholesome food, in good variety, well prepared and well served; and the staff and pupils dine together. The discipline of the college, its domestic, social and educational departments, are under the careful and constant supervision of the Rev. Mr. English and his wife, the vice-principal. Mrs. English devotes herself to the comfort and health of the pupils, and is happy always to correspond with parents, or guardians, in regard to their daughters. A competent seamstress has the oversight of the young ladies' wardrobes, and with an assistant, makes all necessary repairs. Everything is done to make the college an attractive christian home, and the arrangements for the health and comfort of the pupils are A thorough course in French, German, Italian, Latin and Greek, and in the English branches is afforded; French is spoken in the college, and a French service is held in the chapel every second Sunday afternoon by a French clergyman of the Church of England. The musical department is unsurpassed, and is modeled after the great conservatories. Weekly lectures and recitals by the director, and rehearsals by the pupils, are prominent features in this department. Rare advantages are afforded in the various departments of drawing, painting in oil and water colour; pastel, and crayon; decoration on china, plush, velvet, &c.; wood carving, modelling, etching, repousse work and designing. The study of the Holy Scriptures and definite religious teaching occupy an important place in the college exercises. Divine service is held in St. Anne's chapel, situated in the college grounds. Habits of reading are fostered by a well appointed reading room, supplied with the best periodicals in literature and art, including French and German publications. Conspicuous attention is paid to the department of exercises and pastimes; calisthenics, dancing, and out-door sports, riding, driving, tennis, croquet, skating and tobogganing are provided for. In fine, the aim of this college is to direct and supervise, on broad and liberal principles, all employments, pastimes, and exercises of pupils, whether pertaining to their moral, intellec-

I

H T H

F

1

a: C

R

T

n

m

F

R

A

te

st

to

Si

of

 \mathbf{R}

di

uε

C

th

R

la

E

fo

da

re

of

an

tio

the

sh

an

wi

cul

the

exl

the

mo

wo

the

sm

leg

be:

girl

on

wit

tual or physical training. Of this institution the lady patroness is H.R.H. the Princess Louise. The president is I. F. Hellmuth, LL.B., and the vice-president is the Rev. E. N. English, M.A. The visitors are the Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of Huron; the Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of Toronto, and the Very Rev. the Dean of Huron. The professorial staff is as follows: Principal, the Rev. E. N. English, M.A., Toronto University; vice-principal, Mrs. E. N. English; professor of English literature and history, I. F. Hellmuth, LL.B., Trinity College, Cambridge, England; chaplain and professor of classics and mathematics, the Rev. G. B. Sage, B.A., Trinity University, Toronto; French chaplain and professor of modern_languages, the Rev. C. B. Guillemont, B. A., late of University of Paris, France; professor of natural science, the Rev. Minter Seaborne, late of London University, England; professor of physiology, A. G. Fenwick, M.D., M. R.C.S., England; teacher of English subjects, Miss K. Johnston, late of England; teacher of German, to be appointed. The director of the musical department is Thomas Martin, pupil of the renowned Capellmeister, Dr. Carl Reinecke, and various others of the most distinguished masters of the world, graduate and prizeman of the Leipsic Royal Conservatorium of Music, and winner of the Lord O'Hagan prize and medal in the Royal Irish Academy of Music, Dublin, Ire-The pianist and organist is Miss Elwell, R.A.M., medallist, and certificated for pianoforte, R.A.M., London, England. A vocalist is to be appointed at an early day. The art department is under the direction of J. R. Seavey, of European schools of art. We have before us a copy of the annual circular of the college, a publication in itself worthy of finding a place upon the parlour table. It is tastefully printed, showing the studies pursued in each year, and the letter-press pages are interspersed with illustrations from the discerning and cultured pencil of J. R. Seavey. One of these is encircled by a maple bough, and exhibits upon a hill the high river-bank, the beautiful college buildings, the Thames moving at leisurely pace below, past "rocky wooded shores." In another division of In another division of the picture you see a rustic bridge, half smothered in bushes, and beyond the college chapel. Still in another division may be seen a verandah upon which two young girls are seated, each with a book up-on her lap, while beyond is a sketch of bewitchingly beautiful scenery. Again, upon

hd

bd

 \mathbf{ad}

al

he

al.

þrt

al-

di-

m-

he

·y-

ac-

hts

re

þh.

in

is

ice

lay

he

rt-

ter

res

als

in

af-

₽w-tel, sh,

ch-

ıdy

ous

the

ege

by

ied

 \mathbf{and}

ica-

the

lis-

 \mathbf{n} d

ise,

lec-

another sheet, we get a view of the interior of the handsome college chapel, and the sketch overlays an exquisitely life-like spray of pine. Upon the cover is the picture which we have first described. As for the principal, the Rev. E. N. English, he is the very soul of enthusiasm, and he seems to be peculiarly gifted for the responsible position given to his charge.

Comstock, William Henry, Brockville, was born at Batavia, Genesee county, New York, on the 1st of August, 1830. The Comstocks were among the first settlers of the State of Connecticut. In 1795 Samuel Comstock, severed his relations with his native state, and removed to Gilbertsville, Otsego county, New York, where he located upon the extreme western limit of the settlement, at that time considered the "far west," Samuel's brother, John L. Comstock, of Hartford, Connecticut, was the author of "Comstock's Chemistry and Natural Philosophy," for many years one of the stan-dard text books of the United States. William H. Comstock, the subject of this sketch, is the son of Edwin P. Comstock, who removed to Batavia in 1828. Mrs. Edwin P. Comstock died in 1831, and her husband immediately proceeded to New York city, where he established an extensive drug and medicine business, the connections of the establishment spreading over the entire union. William H., having acquired a knowledge of the trade, in 1854 succeeded the firm of Comstock Brothers, and continued the establishment in New York city, and also opened a branch in Brockville. In 1864 the head office was removed from New York city to Morristown, St. Lawrence county, New York, opposite, and near, Brockville, Ontario, thus securing the personal supervision of the proprietor, who from this date made a specialty in the manufacture of the celebrated Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, which have become so famous throughout the republic, as well as in the British provinces. Having married Josephine, daughter of the late Billa Flint, Mr. Comstock took up his permanent residence in Brockville, becoming a British subject. In 1883 he contested the Brockville riding in the Liberal interest for a seat in the House of Commons, and was only defeated by a majority of five votes. In business operations he has been eminently successful, and has acquired a handsome He has devoted his energies and fortune. means to the improvement of his adopted town, and has been instrumental in causing the erection of many of the finest and most substantial buildings there. As mayor, and as member of the town council, he advocated all necessary municipal improvements with untiring zeal, his aim being to make Brockville one of the most beautiful towns in Ontario. We take pride in counting Mr. Comstock among Canadians, and have no hesitation in describing him as a representative one.

Mitchell, Thomas, Hamilton, was born near Brighton, in Sussex, England, in 1832. He is a son of Robert and Louisa (Mates) Mitchell, who emigrated to Canada in 1835, settling in what is now the town of Brantford. Here Robert Mitchell entered into the business of building and contracting, with his brother Thomas, continuing in the same until 1836, when he died, leaving four children, the subject of this sketch being the third of the family. Mrs. Mitchell is still living, and resides with her son, Thomas. In the days of Thomas Mitchell's boyhood, education was not as easy to obtain as at the present time, and he was left much upon his own resources for his educational training. At the age of nine he entered the employ of James Fish, of Brantford, and there remained four years. In 1845, he apprenticed himself to Alfred Reid, boot and shoemaker, of the same place, and here he remained till 1852. Then for a year he pursued his trade in different towns, but his health beginning to fail him, he was advised by his physician to renounce this trade. This he did, and entered upon the occupation of cigar-making, at which he continued till 1855, when he tried his hand at photography, in which he engaged for a year. He next returned to Brantford, there opened a cigar store, which he conducted for a year, and then began to travel for a broom manufacturing house in Brantford. In 1861, he entered the establishment of Bruce & Mugridge, of Hamilton, broom manufacturers, and three years later bought out the concern, which he carried on alone for seven years, when he admitted as partners Stephen King, of the township of Binbrook, Wentworth, and Charles Mitchell, his brother. This partnership continued till 1875, when it dissolved, and the management was assumed by our subject for the next six years (1881). A. W. Gage now entered as a partner, but in 1883 the connection was severed, and Mr. Mitchell once more assuming the sole proprietorship, which he has maintained, with constantly increasing popularity and success, down to the time of writing. Mr. Mitchell was for two years alderman of what is now No. 3 ward of the City of Hamilton, and he was one of the most active and influential spirits in promoting the scheme for the construction of the Hamilton and North-Western Railway, and to his zeal and push was the success of the project in a large measure due. During the agitation prevailing over this project. Mr. Mitchell, with George Roach, ex-mayor of the city, proceeded to Ottawa and represented to the government there the practicability of coming in by the west end of the city, thus saving the expense of bridging, and avoiding the menace to navigation, over the Burlington canal. This project strengthened the government in demanding from the company a substantial bridge crossing the canal. Mr. Mitchell's arguments proved most convincing, and the consequence was that one of the finest bridges in Canada now spans the Burlington Bay canal. Mr. Mitchell has been a shareholder in the Hamilton and North-Western Railway; in the Royal Canadian Insurance Company of Montreal, and in the Merchants' Building Association of Hamilton. He has likewise been a partner in the Rabjohn, Ring & Co. In 1875, he was foundry, of Hamilton. elected a trustee of the Orphan Asylum of Hamilton, which position he still holds. In religion, he professes Methodism, and has held all the church offices, being at present steward of Zion tabernacle, of which the Rev. Mr. Snyder is pastor. In church matters Mr. Mitchell has always taken an active and zealous part, and from year to year has been sent as a representative of his church to the conference. He was a member of the first general conference held in Toronto; is a member of the Bible Society, and of the Y. M. C. A. In politics, he has been a lifelong and a true Reformer. In 1857, he married Isabella, daughter of the late John McVicar, of Mount Pleasant, Ontario. We may add that the mother of our subject married twice, the second time in 1846, Mr. Ede, of Brantford, becoming her husband. She removed with Mr. Ede to Hamilton in 1863, and here he died two years later, leaving one daughter. Mrs. Ede is still living, residing with the subject of this sketch, and although in her eightieth year, she is healthy and active, enjoying the comforts and the care of her son's comfortable home.

Hamilton, Charles James, M.D., Cornwall, third son of the late Dr. Hamilton, of Goderich, was born on September 15th, 1855, at Goderich. He is a son of Morgan J. Hamilton, who was a son of Lieutenant Hamilton, of the Royal navy, by Annie L., eldest daughter of the late James

Wat Glas earl scho edu Upo ente non. 1879 the asso deat time wall. 33, Ross ComOtte Rose Orie is w 125, Orie аP. Fore Corn has . in .pe John best this o mem and e He i churc 1880, late J

cousin bec, f

Ch
risbun
Asher
Ann (
ville, tors Cham
mont, came at Sn

We n

son o

U. E.

eight

Moun

J. Mo

at Sn Count was o he did for wa ter.

Watson, merchant of Goderich, and late of Glasgow. Charles J. Hamilton received his early education at the Goderich Grammar school, and afterwards his professional education at the University of Toronto. Upon graduating, he settled in Goderich, entering into partnership with G. C. Shannon, M. D.: and removed to Cornwall in 1879, when he entered into partnership with the late J. J. Dickinson, M.D., and remained associated with that gentleman until his death in 1884. Dr. Hamilton was at the time of leaving Goderich to settle in Cornwall, assistant surgeon of Huron batt., No. 33, under Lieut,-Col., the Hon. A. M. Ross; and he was also a member of I Company, Queen's Own Rifles, under Col. Otter. He is at present senior warden of Rose Croix chapter, No. 18. Royal and Oriental Freemasonry, 33°, 95° and 90°; is worthy master of Cornwall lodge, No. 125, G. R. C., A. F & A. M.; a member of Oriental lodge, No. 163, I. O. O. F.; and a a P. C. R. of Court Stormont, No. 3, I. O. Foresters. He, likewise, is a member of Cornwall lodge, No. 214, A. O. U. W. He has always been and is now a Conservative in politics, believing that the policy of Sir John A. Macdonald and his followers is best calculated to further the interests of this country. Dr. Hamilton was elected a member of Cornwall town council in 1885, and deputy reeve of the same town in 1886. He is a devoted adherent of the Episcopal church. He married on December 22nd, 1880, Harriett S., eldest daughter of the late J. J. Dickinson, M.D. of Cornwall, Ont. We may add that his wife's father was eldest son of the late Noah Dickenson, M. D., a U. E. loyalist, who settled in Cornwall, over eighty years ago. Her mother was Miss Mountain, youngest daughter of the late S. J. Mountain, D.D., of Cornwall, and a first cousin of the late Bishop Mountain, of Quebec, first Episcopal Bishop in Canada.

Chamberlain, Theodore F., Morrisburgh, Ontario, the only son of the late Ashern A. Chamberlain, M.D., and Eliza Ann Chamberlain, of the village of Farmersville, County of Leeds, Ontario. His ancestors were of English origin; and A. A. Chamberlain, was born at Peacham, Vermont, U.S., on February 12th, 1810. He came to Upper Canada in 1815, and settled at Smith's Mills, township of Bastard, County of Leeds. In his early boyhood he was obliged to provide for himself, which he did by working in the summer months for wages, and attending school in the winter. He went to the school at Potsdam,

St. Lawrence county, N.Y., for a time; and soon after he commenced the study of medicine, attending lectures at Fairfield Medical College, New York. Esturning to his adopted home, he commenced the practice of his profession. At the age of sixteen he entered the militia service, and passed through all the grades till he attained the rank of major. He practiced his profession at Smith's Mills up to 1858, when he removed his family to Farmersville, township of Young, in the same county. In politics he had been a Reformer of the old school, being a warm friend of Baldwin and William Lyon MacKenzie. During what is known as the Beverley riots in South Leeds, he nearly lost his life at the hands of the Tory party, under the leadership of Ogle R. Gowan. He was one of the deputation from Upper Canada who went to the rescue of Lord Elgin, at the burning of the parliament buildings, in Montreal, 1849. He was for many years a justice of the peace of his county; and was made a member of the Masonic order, in one of the oldest lodges in Upper Canada, known as Harmony lodge. In 1859, he resuscitated the old lodge under the name of Rising Sun lodge, Farmersville, and was for several years master of the same. Dr. Chamberlain was postmaster from the first establishment of the post office at Smith's Mills (the name being changed by him to Harlem), up to the time of his removal to Farmersville. He was a member and licentiate of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario, and M.D. of the Philadelphia Eclectic Medical College, Pennsylvania, U.S. He was a member of the Wesleyan Methodist church. a staunch temperance man, and a member for many years of the order of the Sons of Temperance, holding most of the offices in connection with the order. He died on the 20th February, 1883. The mother of our subject was born on October 15th, 1803, in the town of Pawling, Quaker Hill, State of New York, and is now living at Farmersville. Her father Hewlett Toffy, was born in the same town, on December 5th, 1776. Her mother was born at Newfairfield, Connecticut, 9th of August, 1784, and died at Farmersville, 1876. T. F. Chamberlain has one sister who was born at Smith's Mills. on August 2nd, 1836, and is now living at Parry Sound, being the widow of the late John C. Miller, ex-M.P.P., for Parry Sound and Muskoka district. T. F. Chamberlain was born at Smith's Mills, on July 6th 1838. His early education was received partly at the township public school, and partly from his parents at home, and at the sabbath schools. His father taught him the rudiments of Latin, as it was not taught in any of the public schools. In 1851 he attended the Perth High school for eight or nine months, after which he engaged as a clerk, in the general mercantile store of Henry Lashley, at Elgin, township of South Crosby, County of Leeds. In this establishment he remained for two years, when, he proceeded to the City of Ottawa, and commenced the study of dentistry (1853), with F. D. Laughlin, D.D.S. After serving his term here he commenced the practice of dentistry in the County of Leeds, and the surrounding counties. In 1857 he went to Pawling, New York state, and in the same year to New York city, practising dentistry. In 1858 he returned home at the solicitation of his father, and studied medicine, matriculating in 1859 at Queen's College, Kingston, Ontario, passing his final examination in March 1862, for the degree of doctor of medicine. He then received a license from Governor-General Monck, to practice. On the 13th of April, 1862, Dr. Chamberlain located in Morrisburg, then a small village, very beautifully situated on the banks of the St. Lawrence, and has up to the present time continued the practice of his profession. In 1871 he received the degree of L.R.C.P.S., from the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons, Kingston. In 1866 he established a drug store in the village, and in 1873 sold it to Carman & Brown. During his practice he has trained a number of young men for the medical profession. Drs. Hart, McLane, Hows, Lane and Musgrove, were among those of his students who are now doing a lucrative practice in Ontario and in the United States. In 1855 Dr. Chamberlain was commissioned lieutenant in the 8th battalion, Leeds militia, under captain Wm. J. Smith. In 1857, he was made a member of the Masonic order, in Rising Sun lodge, at Farmersville, by dispensation of the Grand Lodge of Canada, not being of the full age of twenty-one years; in 1862 he joined by card Excelsior lodge, No. 142, G,R.C., in Morrisburg, and is still a member and a past master, having for a number of years been master of the lodge. In 1869 and 1870 he was elected by the Grand Lodge of Canada, district deputy grand master for the St. Lawrence district. On the 11th March, 1867, he became a member of the Grenville Royal Arch chapter, No. 22, at Prescott; in 1885 he took the ninety-five degrees in the supreme rite of Memphis, known as the

Sovereign Sanctuary degrees. In 1873 Dr. Chamberlain was elected as a member of the village council, and remained in that body till 1877, when he was elected reeve. This office he held till 1881, when he resigned. In 1884 he was again elected to the council, but resigned in 1886. In 1879 he was unanimously elected by the county council, as warden for the united counties of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry. During this year he was also one of a deputation which received the governor-general, the Marquis of Lorne and Her Royal Highness Princess Louise, at Cornwall, on their entry into the Province of Ontario, on their way to Ottawa. In the same year as warden of the united counties he and other gentlemen were instructed to proceed to Ottawa, and present an address to their excellencies on behalf of the united counties. In 1879 Dr. Chamberlain was chosen by the Reform Convention of the County of Dundas, as candidate for the Provincial legislature, and was defeated by 81 votes. In 1882 he was again chosen by convention for the same constituency, for the House of Commons, but was again defeated by 79 votes. He has been continuously a member of the High and Public school boards since 1869; and was for several years county superintendent of public schools for the County of Dundas. He was coroner for the united Counties of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry from 1868 to 1879, when he resigned to contest the county for the Ontario legislature; has been a member of the board of health; is medical health officer for the village of Morrisburg; and medical examiner for a number of life insurance companies. He is also a director of the Parry Sound Lumber Company, and of the Dundas Agricultural Asso-In conjunction with his brotherciation. in-law, W. G. Parish, of Farmersville, he established the first cheese factories in the County of Dundas in 1873. In 1874 he travelled from the foot of Lake Superior, north to the height of land, examining the minerals, timber and streams of that region. In 1878 he coasted along the Georgian bay to the French river, and up that river to Lake Nipissing. In 1883 he travelled through part of the southern, western and middle states to the Pacific coast, visiting all points of interest, especially those of the states of California, Nevada, Colorado and the territories of New Mexico, Arizona, Utah and Old Mexico. He has also travelled over most of the eastern states of the union. In 1884 he travelled by land around lake Nipissing and Georgian bay, to dov Dr. Me for his gra voc the the he : of Ahas mar the ville livii on ' her bein ville livir at M his e scho the King sessi Roy at K

the

in th of L Ston Irela age o on M Eliza sever town near wher of M sided went Coun John which upon the ei one c on th

subje

his g both

and h

at M

now

scho

was

S

the head waters of the Spanish river, and down that river to the head of lake Huron. Dr. Chamberlain is a member of the Canada Methodist church, but has much admiration for the Baptist church, of which communion his mother, his sister, and his late maternal grandmother were members. He is an advocate of temperance, having belonged to the orders of the Sons of Temperance and the Good Templars. On the 3rd July, 1862, he married Annettie Jane, third daughter of Arza Parish, of Farmersville, Leeds. She has three sisters living, and one brother, all married. Her mother was Eliza Bissell, of the township of Augusta, County of Grenville. Both her father and mother are living, and celebrated their golden wedding on the 17th June, 1883. Her father and her brother are general merchants, the firm being known as A. Parish & Son, Farmersville. Dr. Chamberlain has two children living, Watson Parish, the eldest, was born at Morrisburg, on May 19th, 1863; received his education here in the Public and High schools, and attended for three sessions in the arts department of Queen's College Kingston. He is now attending his first session in the study of medicine, at the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons at Kingston. The daughter, Lyrie, was born at Morrisburg, on March 8th, 1871, and is now pursuing her education at the local schools. Three children died in infancy.

Stone, Thomas, Chatham, Ontario, was born on the 2nd day of February, 1827, in the township of Elizabethtown, County of Leeds, Upper Canada. His father, John Stone, was a native of the County of Carlow. Ireland, and came to Canada in 1820, at the age of twenty-two. He married Mary Burns, on May 3rd, 1826, and settled on a farm in Elizabethtown, in 1834, when Thomas was seven years old. He removed thence to the township of Esquesing, County of Halton, near the village of Adamsville (now Acton), where our subject graduated at the school of Miss Electa Adams. Here the family resided for six years, after which, in 1840, it went west, settling in the backwoods of the County of Kent, township of Orford. Here John Stone purchased a bush farm, upon which he wrought and prospered, and died upon the same on November 16th, 1877, in the eightieth year of his age. His widow and one of his sons, A. J. Stone, are still living on the old homestead, near Highgate. Our subject's grandfather, Thomas Stone, and his grandmother, Elizabeth Cooper, were both born in the County Carlow, Ireland, and his great-grandfather, Lawrence Stone, was an Englishman. Thomas Stone, our subject, holds a commission as captain in the Sedentary Militia; he has also held the position of school trustee for the last eight years, and is a pastmaster Mason in Wellington lodge, of which he has been a member for over thirty years. In politics, he is a "moderate"; in religion, a Presbyterian. His parents were both Episcopalians, but soon after their marriage, became Methodists, in which church Thomas Stone was brought up. Mr. Stone has been married twice, first to Jane McQuarrie, in December, 1852. This lady died in December, 1855, leaving one son. He next married Adelaide Spencer, in June, 1857, by whom four sons and four daughters were born. She died on the 6th March, 1871. At the age of twenty years Thomas Stone left his father's home, and proceeded to Chatham, where he has since resided. Here he was in business as clerk in a general store with his uncle, James Burns, for five years; he then formed a partnership with his uncle and George Turnbull. On his uncle leaving the business at the end of two years, Mr. Turnbull and Mr. Stone continued the co-partnership till February, 1858. Since that period, Mr. Stone has been in the dry goods business alone, and has prospered therein, and has given to his children the advantages of an education, of which he himself declares he has felt the want. He is upright and honourable in all his dealings, and there is no other man who enjoys a fuller share of public esteem than he.

Nelson, Hon. Hugh, Senator, Burrard Inlet, British Columbia, was born at Larne, North of Ireland, on the 25th May, 1820. He is a son of Robert Nelson, of Shore Cottage, Magheramorne, Antrim, Ireland, and Frances Quinn. Hugh Nelson attended school at Larne, and his studies embraced all that is implied by the term "a thorough English education." Shortly after coming to this country, he engaged largely in lumbering operations in British Columbia, and has been very successful. He has also taken a deep interest in the fishing industries of that province, and was awarded a diploma of honor for special services rendered in connection with the International Fisheries Exhibition held in London, England, in 1883. Senator Nelson is a gentleman who has bestowed much careful thought upon questions of importance to the Dominion public; and upon the subject of our fisheries his knowledge is wide and very accurate. In 1870 he was elected to the Legislature of British Columbia for New Westminster, and in 1871, upon the entry of his province into the confederacy, was returned to the House of Commons for the same constituency. He continued to represent New Westminster till 1879, when (December 12) he was called to the Senate. In politics he is, and always has been, a Liberal-Conservative. As a senator his career has not been less useful and active than it was in the House of Commons. He is a gentleman of wide information and good judgment, and his opinions are held in very high respect in the Senate. Harkness, Adam, Iroquois, Ont., was born in the township of Matilda, County of Dundas, on the 10th day of October, 1835. He is a son of John Harkness, a native of the County Tyrone, Ireland, who emigrated to Canada in 1820, settling in the township of Matilda in 1826, and Catherine, daughter of Peter Fetterly, a U. E. loyalist, of German descent, who came to Canada from Schoharie county, N. Y., in 1784. John and Catherine Harkness settled on a farm in Matilda, about 1826, where their children all were born. Here John Harkness died in 1862, and his wife, in 1885. There were eight children, six of whom, two girls and four boys, reached maturity. The girls were the eldest, and Adam was the second of the boys. Our subject attended the public school, or as it was then called, the common school, pretty regularly until he was eleven years old, and during the winter seasons until he was fourteen. By this time he had acquired considerable proficiency in the branches usually taught in these schools, and had made some progress in bookkeeping, mensuration, geometry and natural He never attended any school science. afterwards, but continued to prosecute his studies during intervals of labour on the farm. This, he found not a bad way of acquiring an education, and he continued to keep very nearly abreast of his brothers, who were attending the High school during the same period. When he was about seventeen, the township council, with the assistance of the Education department, purchased a library for the township: the books were of the very best in English literature. It is scarcely necessary to say that he availed himself of the advantages offered, and soon became familiar with the writings of Macaulay, Carlyle, Jeffrey, Descartes, Robertson, and others of equal, or nearly equal, fame. This, with the keeping of a diary in which he recorded not only the events that transpired from day to day, but his reflections thereon composed and completed what may be called his curriculum. His father had been a member of the old district council. was an unyielding Conservative, and had continued to exert a considerable influence in local politics. Our subject was secretary of the Conservative committee for his own township during the Levislative Assembly elections in 1858. In 1859 he became township clerk; and this office he held until the close of 1871, when he resigned, and was elected deputy reeve (1872). He retired from the council, however, at the close of the term on account of the illness of his wife. In 1874, he was unsuccessful in a contest for the reeveship, but was elected in 1875; and the following year he became warden of the united Counties of Stormont, Dundas, and Glengarry. Having now reached the top rung in the municipal ladder, Mr. Harkness retired from municipal life, as he then thought permanently. In 1879, however, he was induced to re-enter the arena, and was again elected. He has, since that time, continuously represented his native township at the counties council, as reeve, and he is now the oldest member of the council of those counties. There is usually not much else than administrative detail in municipal life; and such improvements or advances as come within the province of councils, Mr. Harkness has endeavored to promote. In 1875 he was mainly instrumental in procuring a steam stonecrusher, that has done and is still doing a very great deal to improve the roads of his He also, in 1884, succeeded in township. carrying through the counties council a scheme for deepening the Nation river, a stream that runs through his county. The work is now in progress, and will cost between thirty and forty thousand dollars; and will drain about 20,000 acres of land, now subject to periodical inundation. In 1861, he organized a township agricultural society in Matilda; was several years its secretary-treasurer, subsequently its president, and is still connected with it as direc-He was elected an elder of the Presbyterian church in 1863, and was soon after chosen ruling or representative elder, and was a member of the Church of Scotland synod, up to the time of the union of the Presbyterian churches in Canada. He attended the meetings of the synod at Ottawa in 1874, and at Montreal in 1875, when the union was consummated. In 1883 Mr. Harkness was appointed postmaster of Iroquois, and manager of the G. N. W. Tel. Co. there. He is also president of the Mechanics' Institute, recently formed at that

pla Sc

 $\mathbf{D}_{\mathbf{I}}$

mi

of

of

as

gra

Gr

firs

dat

du

gra

san

sta

the

in

of t

act

rat

alw

par

is b

on

pen

Sta

tion

he '

ente

by s

van

1857

ther

fath

Cou

mot

an I

23rd

who

marı

he s

tinu

farm

1883

Prin

schoo

famil

in L

He w

Septe

and l

A. V

Semi

theol

instit

ninet

princ

positi

In 18

V

place. He became a member of the Grange Society early in 1879, and represented the Dundas division at the meeting of the Dominion Grange held in Toronto in December of that year. He was the author and mover of a resolution providing for collecting data as to the condition of crops from subordinate granges, and publishing the same in the Grange Record. This was, we believe, the first attempt made in this country to collect data direct from the producers; and it produced such good results in the hands of the grangers that the government adopted the same plan in organizing their bureau of statistics. In 1884 he became a member of the Canadian Order of United Workmen, in Iroquois, and was for two years master of their lodge there. He has always taken an active interest in politics, and holds liberal rather than radical or tory views. He has always supported the Liberal-Conservative party, because he believes that their policy is best calculated to build up a great nation on the northern half of this continent, independent of, and separate from the United States. He has given a great deal of attention to religious questions. As a young man he was inclined to be sceptical, and still entertains opinions that would be regarded by some of his co-presbyters as rather "advanced." He married on the 14th October. 1857, Louisa Theresa Graham, he being. then twenty-two, and she seventeen. Her father, John Graham, was a native of the County of Fermanagh, Ireland, and her mother, Olive Doran, was the daughter of an Irish-American. His wife died on the 23rd January, 1873, leaving five children, who are all still living, the two eldest being married. As soon as Mr. Harkness married he settled on a farm in Matilda, and continued to reside there, making his living by farming, until his removal to Iroquois in 1883.

d

Verreau, l'Abbe Hospice A., D.L., Principal of the Jacques Cartier Normal school, Montreal, is a descendant from a family which came from France and settled in Lower Canada, near Quebec, in 1687. He was born at L'Islet, Quebec, on the 6th September, 1828, and is a son of Germain and Marie Ursule (Fournier) Verreau. H. A. Verreau was educated at the Quebec Seminary, taking a full classical and part theological course. He taught in the latter institution for two years, commencing at nineteen, and thence proceeded to the principalship of Ste Thérèse College, which position he occupied for the next eight years. In 1856 M. Verreau removed to Montreal, and in March of the following year, when the Jacques Cartier Normal school was opened, he became its principal, a position which he still holds with credit to himself and to the highest satisfaction of the public. In addition to his work of supervision, he also engages in practical teaching, devoting himself in this respect to the subject of history, and the theories of education and instruction. In 1873, the provincial government deputed M. Verreau to proceed to Europe to make investigations there regarding Canadian history; and while on this mission he visited London, Paris, Rome and other important cities, making extensive notes of his travels. These notes were afterwards wrought in more extended form, and published in 1875 in the government's report on agriculture. Principal Verreau is a doctor of letters; a corresponding member of the Societé des Antiquaires de Normandie; and an officer of public instruction, France, a position granted him by the French government. M. Verreau was ordained priest in 1851, at the hands of the late Bishop Prince; and he frequently officiates in divine service. Principal Verreau has written some articles on Canadian history for the Journal of Public Instruction, and they have attracted marked attention for their tone, thought and general workmanship. It is a pity that Principal Verreau could not devote some more of his time and his splendid talent to purely literary work.

Colquhoun, George, M.D., C.M., Iroquois, Ontario, was born on the 7th of May, 1847, in the County of Dundas. He is of Scottish parentage, his father, Alexander Colquhoun, having emigrated in 1823, from Argyleshire; and his mother, Harriet Campbell Munro, in 1830, from Brora, Sutherlandshire. This worthy couple proved themselves successful pioneers in their adopted country. George Colquhoun, the subject of this sketch, attended the Cornwall High school, under the tuition of H. W. Davies, M.A. After leaving this school, Mr. Colquhoun, in the spring of 1869, removed to the County of Perth, and in the following winter taught school in section No. 7, township of Downie. In June, 1860, he proceeded to Cleveland, Ohio, spent the summer there and the next autumn went, via Cincinnati and Ohio river, to Louisville, thence to South Danville, Kentucky, from which point, after a residence of a year and a half, he removed, by way of Frankfort, Lexington, Cincinnati, Buffalo and Niagara Falls, He then went to to his native county. Montreal, and entered McGill College, where he studied medicine, and graduated from that institution in 1876. Registering in Quebec the same year, he began to practice his profession in that province; but in October, 1879, he removed to the Province of Ontario, and settled in the village of Iroquois, where he has since resided, 1880, he obtained his license from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario. In 1873 and 1874, he served as a private in the Prince of Wales Rifles, Montreal; but has since taken no active part in militia On February 6th, 1884, he was affairs. appointed an associate coroner for the united Counties of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry, and medical health officer for the village of Iroquois, and was secretary of the Iroquois Mechanics' Institute for the years 1885 and 1886. Dr. Colquhoun became associated with Lodge No. 213, A.O. U.W., in January, 1884, acting since that time as financier of the lodge. He is Liberal in politics, and holds that a tariff sufficient to provide for the necessary expenses of economical government, administered on sound business principles, will, in the highest degree, promote the interests of every Canadian citizen, and that it is necessary provincial rights should be clearly defined, and more scrupulously respected than they are at present. With this view, all Canadians who care for the ultimate integrity of the Dominion must agree. Dr. Colquhoun was trained up in his youth to respect the Holy Scriptures, and is an adherent of the Presbyterian faith, and succeeding years have deepened his impression of the supreme importance of the Bible, and strengthened his convictions of the untold benefits which the world owes to its influence. He married at Fort Covington, New York, on August 19th, 1879, Sarah Jeanette, of Huntingdon county, Quebec, a daughter of Moses Miller, who was born in Tyrone, Ireland, and Margaret Caldwell, of Champlain, Quebec.

Wilkinson, James Hands, Windsor, Ontario, was born at Sandwich, the county town of the old western district, on the 31st August, 1829. He is a son of John Alexander Wilkinson, lieutenant on halfpay in the 24th Regiment of Foot. Lieutenant Wilkinson first came to Canada in 1812, with the 37th Regiment of Foot, from which he afterwards exchanged into the 24th, and from which he afterwards retired on half-pay, in the year 1818. He represented the County of Essex in the Parliament of Upper Canada, from the year 1824 to 1836, in the Tory interest. In 1837, he raised a company of volunteers, which he uniformed at his own expense, to resist the invasion, by the rebels, of the Canadian The marauders had collected in force in the neighbourhood of Detroit. Michigan, U.S. He assisted at the taking of the schooner Ann, at Elliott's Point, near Amherstburg, then Fort Malden, on the 6th January, 1838, and also took part in the battle of Fighting Island. He was appointed judge of the Surrogate Court for the old western district in 1836, and was also a magistrate. He was instrumental in settling the free grant lands in the Counties of Essex and Kent, commonly known as the Talbot land-grant. Lieutenant Wilkinson married Frances, daughter of the late William Hands, a U. E. loyalist, who had settled in Sandwich in the year 1798. Mr. Hands was appointed sheriff of the old western district by Lieut.-Governor Peter Hunter, on the 16th July, 1802. His jurisdiction as sheriff then extended westward to the Pacific ocean, including our North-West territories, there being no sheriff west of him. He was appointed judge of Surrogate by Lieut.-Governor Maitland, on the 24th December, 1824. He was likewise Indian agent, and held all the district offices in that early time. J. H. Wilkinson was educated at the western district Grammar school, receiving at that institution an English and classical education. He entered the volunteer force, as cornet in the Essex Troop of Cavalry, with headquarters at Sandwich, in the year 1856, and was soon after gazetted captain. He established the newspaper Maple Leaf, in 1855, at Sandwich, and published the same for a number of years in the Conservative interest. He was a member of the board of school trustees in Sandwich for fifteen years; organized a company to build the first plank and gravel road in the County of Essex, about the year 1854; and was first president of the Liberal Conservative Association of Wind-He has always, we may add, been a consistent and staunch supporter of that party. Mr. Wilkinson's early years were devoted to agriculture, and it was only in the year 1877 that he gave up farming, and entered upon the practice of the law at Windsor. He has been a member of the Masonic fraternity for thirty years, and is a member of Windsor Preceptory No. 26 of Knights Templars and Knights of Malta. He married, on the 4th August, 1861, Emma Agnes, daughter of the late B. G. Garrett, formerly high sheriff of the Island of Newfoundland.

Arch

marl

Mon

land,

remo

old t

and

archi

alway

feelir

menc

vate

Dubl:

celler

of the

where Vince

tinue

progr

metaj

brillia

into t

for th

was c tracte

less p

lege,

positi

ates.

ence

tratio

mark

cess.

entere

the m

pursu

brancl

"One

institu

"was

a vene

vance

church

sonal

ln 184

vows c

receive

and at

at the

as "tl

church

a longi

lands,

there i

and it

brilliar

He rei

ters at

Lynch, Most Rev. John Joseph. Archbishop of Toronto, was born near the market town of Clones, in the County of Monaghan, in the diocese of Clogher, Ireland, on the 6th of February, 1816. He removed with his parents when two years old to a village, a few miles from Dublin. and here grew up to manhood the future archbishop of Toronto. His parents had always intended him for the priesthood, and feeling that he had the "vocation," he commenced his classical studies under the private tuition of a B.A. of Trinity College, Dublin. He was soon, for his years, an excellent scholar, and then entered a college of the Carmelite Brothers, near Clondalkin, where he spent a year. He next entered St. Vincent College, Castleknock, and here continued his classical studies, making marked progress in natural philosophy, rhetoric and metaphysics. He always stood conspicuous among his fellow students for his natural brilliancy, the rapidity with which he saw into the heart of a difficulty, but above all for the soundness of his understanding. He was cheerful, good natured, and visibly attracted his school-fellows, and he was not less popular with the deputies of the college, who frequently appointed him to the position as monitor to the under-graduates. At this early period he gave evidence of the splendid capacity for administration which in after life was destined to mark his career with such distinguished success. When twenty-three years of age he entered the novitiate of the congregation of the mission of St. Lazare, Paris, and here pursued the study of theology and other branches of an ecclesiastical education. "One of the best loved companions" at the institution says an authority before us, "was the present vicar-apostolic of Persia, a venerable man who has done much to advance the interests of the Roman catholic church in the East, and who enjoys the personal respect and friendship of the Shah." ln 1841, Mr. Lynch took upon himself the vows of the order; in the following year he received Tonsure and other minor orders, and at Trinity term following, was ordained at the hands of Monseigneur Affié, known as "the martyr of the Barricades," in the church of St. Sulpice. He was now filled with a longing for missionary work in heathen lands, and asked to be sent to China, "but there is a destiny which shapes our ends," and it was otherwise ordered for the learned, brilliant and enthusiastic young religieuse. He returned to Ireland, took up his quarters at St. Vincent's College, resuming his theological studies and discharging the duties of dean and moderator of discipline. During Trinity term of 1843, he was ordained deacon and priest at Maynooth College, by the Most Rev. Dr. Murray, archbishop of Dublin. He celebrated his first mass on the ensuing Corpus Christi, in the chapel of St. Vincent's College. During the three following years he was sent on several missions to various parts of Ireland, and in 1846, he embarked at Liverpool, bound for New Orleans, to engage in mission work in the "Lone Star State." Upon reaching New Orleans, we learn from the same author elsewhere quoted, that Father Lynch had a narrow escape from death. Night came on before the vessel reached the place of mooring, and by the time that the anchor had been cast into the yellow waters of the Mississippi, the darkness was intense. Father Lynch and the passengers, weary of the monotony of shipboard, attempted to get on shore without waiting for day light. Three other vessels were anchored between their own barque and the shore. Over these they cautiously crept, feeling their way by the ropes, and listening to the tumultuous waters below which were rushing here at the rate of thirty miles an hour. The quay was built of boards, and scarcely had the two landed in the Egyptian darkness, when Father Lynch walked deliberately, though of course unconsciously, over the edge of the quay. He was just about to be plunged in the roaring abyss, when he was grasped by his companion from behind and saved. He spent a period of two months at the capital of Louisiana, and during the time made a careful study of the character of the people among whom he had come to labour. He spent nearly three years in Texas, and during that period travelled over the greater portion of the State, and what his duties and labours were can be guessed, when it is stated that in the whole of this enormous mission, there were but four priests. Human life, at that period, was held in little esteem among the lawless adventurers that infested the country, and murders were of daily occurrence. While travelling through a remote portion of the state, he was stricken down with a maglignant fever, from which it took him long to recover. While yet unrecovered he departed for New Orleans, and it soon became plain that the only means by which he might regain his health was to seek a northerly climate. Therefore he repaired to St. Louis, Missouri, where he soon attained his wonted vigour. In 1848, he was appointed Superior of St. Mary's Seminary of the Barreus, and during his stay in the institution the membership increased from 30 to 120. But the situation of the place was unhealthy, and to the profound regret of all, the neighbourhood had to be abandoned. All his staff were stricken by the miasma which exhaled from the overflown waters of the river, and at last Father Lynch fell a victim to the unwholesome atmosphere. He was attacked by paralysis in the left side, and for a time his condition was critical. Soon after his recovery he was sent as a delegate from the congregation of the mission in the United States to an assembly of the order held in Paris; in 1849, he proceeded on a special mission to Rome, and while in the Eternal city, received from his Holiness many marks of favour. One of these was the bestowal upon Father Lynch of the right to hear confessions and absolve penitents in any part of the world. This is a boon rarely conferred, and only bestowed upon those of tried prudence and discretion. Father Lynch returned from Rome in 1850, and in response to the urgent solicitation of Dr. Timon, consented to found a house of his order in that diocese. In May, 1856, the institution which is known as the Seminary of our Lady of the Angels, was established at Niagara, where there is now a fine building and 320 acres of land. Dr. Lynch began the erection of this structure with one hundred dollars: what the institution is best attests his zeal, and the response that was made to his call. It was the connection of Father Lynch with the seminary that brought him prominently before the notice of ecclesiastical circles in Canada. In 1859, he was appointed by apostolic letters, bishop of Echenas in Partibus Infidelium and coadjutor of Monseigneur Charbonnel, bishop of Toronto. He was consecrated bishop at St. Michael's Cathedral, Toronto, on the 20th of November, in the same year, and in the following year Bishop Charbonnel retired, Bishop Lynch succeeding him in the vacant see. In 1862, he again visited Rome, and was created prelate assistant of the Pontifical In 1869-70, he was present at the Vatican Council, and made a speech in favour of the Papal infallibility, and he was upon this occasion appointed one of the consultors of foreign missions and Oriental rights. In 1870, Toronto was named the metropolitan see of Upper Canada, and of this see Bishop Lynch was created the first archbishop, and received the Pallium during the Council, 25th of March, 1870. Since his elevation to this high dignity, his grace has revealed in the fullest measure all the high qualities of administration, and of organization which had been manifested throughout his previous career. Regarded merely in a lay sense, he is one of the ablest men in the country. His enthusiam is boundless, and his people and the clergy seem never so happy as in responding to his calls. He is one of the ablest preachers on the continent, his addresses being remarkable for the depth of thought, their wide range, their culture, and their general impressiveness. His style is direct and clear, and there is behind all that he says, though held in artistic check, a passionate enthusiasm. The archbishop is a man of wide liberality, and is full of charity for earnest members of other denominations, whom he believes are doing the best according to their light. In education, in temperance, and in the promotion of all good works, it need hardly be said that he takes a profound interest. He has established in his archdiocese the Seminary of St. Mary and St. John; introduced the Redemptorist Fathers; the order of the Sisters Adorers of the Most Precious Blood; the Carmelite Monastry at Niagara Falls; a House of the Good Shepherd for magdalens; a home for working boys, and a home for respectable young women, besides many other educational establishments. He has been a great benefactor to his church and to the country of his adoption; besides, he entertains an ardent love of his native country, Ireland.

fron

year

he l

Gran

of t

the

Bro

hold Wor of N

Hol

in t

Sept on b

was

repr

and

ation

 \mathbf{M} on

lead:

1874

orde

Hou

ton

and

conf

ject

supp

vour

secui

*f*its t

niou

the 1

the 1

Bow

in po spiri

A pl

arriv

with

Maco

of Co

that

with

out :

cal s tiona

pract

ity in press

of the

mons

lamei

Hon. Plum

to th

life,

marr

child

Holton, Hon. Luther Hamilton. (deceased), was born at South Leeds, Ontario. in January, 1817, and removed to Montreal in 1826. He was a son of Ezra and Anna (Phillips) Holton, both of whom were of New England stock. His education was derived chiefly through private tuition, he being mostly his own tutor, while in pursuit of his studies. In early manhood Mr. Holton engaged in commercial pursuits, and was for a long time a member of the firm of Hooker & Holton, merchants and forwarders. He also engaged in railroad building, and was a member of the firm of Gzowski & Co., who constructed the section of the Grand Trunk Railway running westward from Toronto to Guelph. Before he entered into public life, Mr. Holton held various important and honorable positions. He was a member of the corporation of Montreal; was repeatedly president of the Board of Trade, and of the Montreal City Savings Bank; was harbor commissioner; vice-president of a free trade association, and a director of the City Bank. Mr. Holton sat for Montreal in the Canadian Assembly from 1854 to 1857; but in the last-named year he was defeated. From 1852 to 1857 he had been a government director of the Grand Trunk Railway. He was a member of the Executive Council of Canada from the 2nd to the 6th of August, 1858, in the Brown-Dorion, or "Short administration," holding the office of Commissioner of Public Works, on the former occasion, and that of Minister of Finance on the latter. Mr. Holton was a member for Victoria Division in the Legislative Council of Canada, from Sept., 1862, to May, 1863, when he resigned, on being appointed minister of finance, and was returned for Chateauguay, which he represented steadily in that body until 1867, and in the House of Commons from confederation until his death. He also represented Montreal Centre in the Quebec Assembly, leading the English opposition from 1871 to 1874, when he retired from that body in order to give his undivided attention to the House of Commons. In politics Mr. Holton always was an "advanced Liberal"; and though he was sturdily opposed to the confederation scheme, when the great proiect became consummated, he gave it his support, and cordially assisted in the endeayours to consolidate the Dominion, and to secure to the whole country the fullest benefits to be obtained from the free and harmonious working of the new constitution. On the 14th of March, 1880, he had dined with the minister of customs, Hon. Mackenzie Bowell, went to his hotel about midnight in perfect health and in usually buoyant spirits, and was taken ill almost immediately. A physician was summoned, but before his arrival, Mr. Holton had expired. He was, with one exception, that of Sir John A. Macdonald, the oldest member of the House of Commons, and his sudden taking off filled that body, which was at the time in session. with the profoundest grief. He had throughout his life been a careful student of political science and history, and upon constitutional law and parliamentary rules and practice, he was perhaps the highest authority in parliament. The press everywhere expressed the sorrow of the people at the news of the suddendeath of this distinguished and high-minded statesman; the House of Commons adjourned out of respect for the lamented dead; and Sir John A. Macdonald, Hon. Alexander Mackenzie, and Hon. J. B. Plumb, made lengthy and feeling tributes to the worth of his character, his edifying life, and his distinguished public labors. He married Eliza Forbes, by whom he had six children, only two of whom survive, viz:

Mary Eliza, wife of Byron M. Britton, Q.C., Kingston, Ont., and Edward, Advocate, who was elected to his father's seat in the House of Commons, a month after it had become vacant. Hon. Mr. Holton was one of the founders of the Unitarian church, Montreal, and continued his allegiance to the same until his demise.

Cronyn, The Right Reverend Benjamin, D.D., first Bishop of Huron, son of Thomas Cronyn, of the City of Kilkenny, Ireland, was born in that city in the year 1802. At an early period he evinced a strong inclination for the church. and entered Trinity College, Dublin, when he was only fifteen. He soon distinguished himself above the majority of his fellows, and graduated in 1821 as B.A. He subsequently obtained the degree of M.A., which he took in the year 1824, and in the same year won the regius professor's prize at the divinity examination. In the year 1825 he was ordained deacon by the Bishop of Raphoe, and proceeded to England, where he officiated as curate for some months in the diocese of Chester. After a few months sojourn in England, he returned to Ireland, and married Margaret Ann. daughter of J. Bickerstaff, of Lislea, Longford, Ireland (who died, in 1866, at St. Paul's rectory, London); and in the year 1826 he was ordained priest by the late arch-He served as curate bishop of Tuam. under his lordship, in the County of Longford, for six years, at the expiration of which time (1832) he came to Canada, and was immediately appointed to the London district, where, as rector of St. Paul's Church, he laboured until 1857. At this time a portion of the western province was constituted into the bishopric of Huron; he was elected to the position of first bishop of Huron, and in October following was consecrated bishop, at Lambeth Palace, by His Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury, assisted by their lordships the bishops of Winchester, Nova Scotia, and Sierra Leone. In the performance of his high and sacred duties he always took an active part in the leading questions appertaining to the church, and the moral and intellectual improvement of his adopted country. The amount of good work done by this pious and zealous prelate in his time can hardly be estimated, so energetic, earnest and philanthrophic was he in his endeavours to do good to his fellow creatures. He died at the See House. London, on the 22nd day of September, A.D., 1871, leaving, surviving him, three sons and three daughters.

Beaugrand, Honore, Mayor of Montreal, and Publisher of Le Patrie, was born on the 24th of March, 1848, at Lanoraie, County of Berthier, P.Q. His father, Louis Beaugrand, was a well-known captain and shipbuilder, and he comes from a seafaring family. His mother, Josephine Marion de Lanoraie, was the first daughter of Major Louis Marion. Both families emigrated to Canada in the first days of the colony, and are well known in business and social cir-The present mayor of Montreal was educated at Joliette college, and entered the Military school in 1865. After passing his examinations he went to Mexico, where he joined the French army, under Marshal Bazaine, who was there supporting the unfortunate Maximilian. After two years service, for which he received the Mexican war medal, he left Mexico with the French army, and went to France, where he resided for nine months. Returning to New Orleans, in 1868, he joined the staff of one of the daily papers there, and made journalism his profession. He has ever since been connected with the press in St. Louis, Mo., Boston, Chicago, Lowell, and Fall River. He returned to Canada in 1878, and founded La Patrie, in Montreal, in place of Le National, which had just suspended publication. The success of La Patrie has been on the increase ever since its foundation, until it is now one of the most prosperous dailies in the Dominion of Canada. Beaugrand is well known, both as a very polished magazine and political writer, and his works have gained for him the muchenvied decoration of the "palms" of the Academy of France. He also received, last year, the cross of knight of the Legion of Honour from President Grevy, and his name is well known in the journalistic world of France. In politics, he is a pronounced Liberal, and a supporter of the Hon. Edward Blake, and his paper, La Patrie, is the recognized organ of the French Liberal party in the Province of Quebec. His election to the civic chair of Montreal in 1885, created a sensation, as he defeated the Hon. J. L. Beaudry, who had occupied the position for ten years, and who was considered invincible. The Hon. Mr. Peaudry will be remembered in connection with the famous Orange riots of 1878, in Montreal. He was then mayor, and he prevented the Orangemen from marching in procession through the streets of Montreal. M. Beaugrand married, in 1873, Eliza, daughter of Samuel and Martha Walker, of Fall River, Mass. As mayor of Montreal, the experience of M. Beaugrand has been an eventful one. Hardly had he been installed in the civic chair, when a call was made for volunteer regiments to quell the North-West insurrection. He helped, as far as he could, the organization of the forces which went to the front, and during the absence of the volunteers, he organized relief committees to minister to the wants of the families that were left behind, oftentimes in destitute circumstances. During the floods of 1885-86, he again placed himself at the head of the relief committee, and rendered valuable assistance to the destitute families of the afflicted districts. During the prevalence of the small pox epidemic, in the summer and fall of 1885, Mayor Beaugrand had occasion to act very energetically by calling out the troops to subdue a riot, and by helping the police to enforce the ordinances and by-laws of the health authorities. Always on hand at the hour of duty, he was loudly praised by the press for the part he took in stamping out the terrible scourge that was afflicting Montreal. M. Beaugrand has travelled extensively over the United States and the Central American republics, and he has also visited Europe on different occasions. He speaks fluently the French, English and Spanish languages. The Montreal Gazette spoke in the following terms of his administration as chief magistrate during a critical period in the history of Montreal :- "He has displayed in an eminent degree the qualities which become the occupant of the mayoralty of a city of the importance of Montreal; energy, intelligence, impartiality, firmness in the enforcement of the civic laws and an enlightened progression in their amendment. M. Beaugrand's lines did not fall in pleasant places. The past year has been for him one of no ordinary trial and difficulty. He has been required to combat ignorance and prejudice, to risk the antagonism of a very large section of the community in the rigid application of the health laws, and he has ever proved himself to be actuated by the single desire to promote the interests of the city, irrespective of class, creed or race."

McDonald, Hon. John, Gananoque, was born at Saratoga, New York state, on the 10th day of February, 1787, almost immediately after the arrival of his parents from Scotland. His father, John McDonald, married Emily Cameron, and their Scottish home was at Blair Athol, Perthshire, Scotland. Upon arriving in America they settled in the vicinity of Saratoga, and as a large number came together, they gave to their in m them ing h celle he w tion the gentl integ empl taine kinda chan ness betw abou' broth Cana there Mr. prise. This and h for s anog sider gun. C. & roads it to fathe ville. Dona of th He w wards time time appoi Coun of th was c provi of th the s Mont of co While he en of Up his re was f Hous

of M

sional

grand

1837-

house

Sover

their new place of abode the name of Athol, in memory of the Scottish home so dear to them. John was the fourth son, and leaving home at an early age he at ended an excellent school at Glen's Falls. Subsequently he went to Troy, N.Y., and during a portion of his stay there was in the employ of the Hon. Townsend McCoun, a Quaker gentleman, highly esteemed for his sterling integrity and uprightness. While in his employment the subject of our sketch obtained a good insight into business of various kinds, as Mr. McCoun was a general mer-chant, a man of wealth, and did a large business in connection with sloops then plying between Albany and Troy. Some time about the year 1810, Charles McDonald, a brother of John, had come to Gananoque, Canada, and John intended to join him there, but upon his mentioning his views to Mr. McCoun, that gentleman, to his surprise, offered him a partnership in the firm. This offer was too good a one to be refused, and he accepted it and remained his partner for some years. In 1817 he came to Gan-anoque, Canada, bringing with him a considerable sum of money, a carriage, and a gun. The money he placed in the firm of C. & J. McDonald. Finding no suitable roads on which to use his carriage, he sold it to the late Billa Flint, of Brockville, father of the Hon. Senator Flint, of Belleville. The gun he never used. Mr. Mc-Donald was for some time colonel of one of the battalions of the Leeds militia. He was postmaster of Gananoque for upwards of thirty years, and was for some time a magistrate. Somewhere about the time of the rebellion of 1837-38 he was appointed a member of the Legislative Council of Upper Canada and at the time of the union of Upper and Lower Canada was called to the Legislative Council of the province of Canada, continuing a member of that body until after the removal of the seat of government from Kingston to Montreal. He was chairman of the board of commissioners of the Cornwall canal. While a member of the Legislative Council, he entertained Sir George Arthur, governor of Upper Canada and suite for two days, at his residence at Gananoque. This residence was for many years known as "The Brick House," and is still occupied by the widow of Mr. McDonald, and is a spot of occasional happy reunion for his children and grand-children. During the rebellion of 1837-38 the subject of our sketch kept open house for the officers and soldiers of his Sovereign (his family having been removed to the rural districts for greater safety), and he himself was on the alert night and day, using all lawful means in his power to aid in the suppression of the uprising. The first church built in Gananoque was erected mainly, or in whole, at the expense of the firm of C. & J. McDonald, and the bell purchased for it now hangs in the Gananoque market-house,—a rather ignoble ending for such a bell! In his religious views Mr. Mc-Donald was a Presbyterian, and was for many years an elder in that church. In 1831 he married Henrietta Maria Mallory, who was a step grand-daughter of Col. Joel Stone, one of the founders, we might say the founder, of Gananoque, who still survives him. Of their children two daughters and one son survive. The elder of the two daughters, Frances Georgiana, is unmarried, and has her home with her mother. The younger, Emma, is the wife of the Rev. John B. Mowat, D.D., one of the professors of Queen's College, Kingston, to whom she was married in June, 1861. The son is Judge The youngest McDonald, of Brockville. daughter, Adelaide, died in 1880. She had married in 1867, James O'N. Ireland, of the Trust and Loan Company, then of Kingston, now of Prince Arthur Avenue, Toronto. The Honourable John McDonald died at his residence, Gananoque, in the month of September, 1860. He was a Christian gentleman, a man of great uprightness of character, and of a kind disposition; and he was highly beloved and esteemed by all who had the pleasure and the privilege of his acquaintance.

Scott, John Russell, Napanee, Ontario, was born in the village of Sydenham, township of Loborough, in the County of Frontenac, on the 7th day of October, 1834. He is a son of John Scott, who was born in Roxburgh, Scotland, and his wife, Helen Hume, of the same place. They were married in 1815, and in 1817 immigrated to this country, settling first_in Kingston, and shortly afterwards in Loborough. After contending for some years with the difficulties incident to immigrant life in the unbroken wildernesses of Canada, they finally settled in the township of Camden, County of Lennox and Addington, the homestead then acquired remaining a family centre for over thirty-two years. They were both adherents of the Presbyterian church, but associated themselves freely with the Methodists in public worship. Mrs. Scott died on the 16th March, 1869, at the age of seventy-five years, having lived a Christian life, quietly illustrating the Christian virtues. John Scott survived his wife about five years. Their remains lie side by side in the Camden East burial ground. The family consisted of nine children, of whom four boys and three girls survived their parents, and are now living. John Russell was the youngest son. received his education at the country school near his father's farm, and although of necessity somewhat meagrely equipped for the work of life in consequence, he has by diligent enquiry, careful observation, and varied experience, added greatly to his original stock of learning. Taught by his own experimental knowledge, he has always been an advocate of liberal education, and although averse to seeking public positions, accepted, in 1880, a seat on the board of education for the town of Napanee, the question of efficiency, as opposed to cheapness, being then an issue. The purpose for which he sought election having been accomplished, he retired in 1884. His life has been pre-eminently a business one, and in every aspect of it he has been successful, with that steady accretion which is the reward of prudent enterprise. His characteristics are a penetrating discernment of the merits of a proposition, a clear vision, accurate knowledge of men and principles, speculative desire duly controlled by caution, self-reliance, and a force of character which presses him forward rapidly, when once the foundations of an accepted course have been firmly laid, and the desired end agreed upon. In 1867 he opened business in Napanee, in company with W. S. Detlor, as chemists and druggists, and continued thereat for over ten years, when other aims led to the dissolution of a partnership which had continued amicably and ended profitably. In 1872 the subject of paper-making was agitated, and amongst the first to enter heartily into the new project was Mr. Scott. A joint-stock company of limited liability having been formed, he was speedily advanced to the position of managing director, and entrusted with the responsibility of building and equipping the required premises, located at Napanee Mills. This important task was satisfactorily performed, and the business of manufacturing progressed with gratifying success. In March, 1877, the extensive paper mills at Newburgh were purchased by the company, and added to the property previously held, thus greatly increasing the facilities for manufacturing. About this time, the entire interest of the company was purchased by Mr. Scott, Al x. Henry and W. F. Hall.

In 1883, Mr. Scott was entrusted with the duty of building, equipping and managing the new pulp mills at Fenelon Falls, and the trade of the firm now extends from Halifax to Winnipeg. As the country is every day attaining fuller development, the number of newspapers is on the increase; and with these continue to grow the operations of this already very extensive establish-The chief class of paper manufactured at these mills is that used by the newspapers, but there is also made there all kinds of toned and tinted papers used by job printers. The company has its western agency at 112 Bay street, Toronto; and there also are extensive warerooms. The there also are extensive warerooms. output of paper by these mills is about five tons per day. Mr. Scott has also been extensively engaged in the business of retail dry goods, and has a general store at Napanee Mills, in connection with which are the post and telegraph offices. Mr. Scott became a Freemason in 1868, uniting with Union lodge, No. 9, at Napanee, and has continued in good standing to the present time. In politics he is a staunch Liberal-Conservative, and although he has never accepted office, has always borne his share of the activities of party or-Comparaganization and party conflict. tively early in life he acquired much of that experience which has been so useful in business competition, and gained a wide knowledge of human nature in California and Nevada. In 1862 he set out for the Golden State, by way of New York and the Isthmus, and during the early part of the voyage his fellow-traveller, Charles Chamberlain, was buried at sea. Sad as this ceremony is at any time, it was doubly impressive to the subject of this sketch, who felt inexpressibly solitary as the Carribean waters closed over and hid forever the form of his friend. The through trip lasted thirty days, and getting to work at once, he plodded steadily at his trade, which was that of millwright, and did such other business as fell in his way during the ensuing five years. The first year was spent as a mechanic engaged in the erection of one of the mammoth mills, for that day, in the Sacramento valley. This flouring mill cost over $100,000, and was regarded as a wonderful exhibition of enterprise. Next year found him in Virginia city, Nevada, maintaining a cool head amidst the terrific whirl of mining excitement. He was employed by the Ophir and Mexican Mining Company, as foreman of their mechanical department. These companies were then kay ally him Ha sun per the and 188 188 kno tura of t has dist beer Jun

the

hav

qua

on the littl more her, again 1873 Lan three ing a kir

D

Cler

torn

ness

Stic

Heı in 1 grou dest the nati sent new man lege Will once way, exac an e boile day year the ward land ties sprea the leading miners, the "Bonanza" not having then been struck. He was an acquaintance of the great silver kings, Mackay, Fair, Flood and O'Brien, and especially "stood in" with J. M. Fair, consulting him about real estate and mining stocks. Having gathered together a considerable sum, he returned, in 1867, to Canada and permanently located at Napanee. Since then he has made three trips to Manitoba and the North West territory-in June, 1881, September, 1883, and September, 1885—and has acquired a very thorough knowledge of that country and its agricul-tural advantages. He has been a member of the Methodist church since 1854; and has been a trustee and steward of the Methodist church, Napanee, since 1870. He has been twice married; first on the 1st of June, 1869, to Emmeline, daughter of D. B. Stickney, of Newburgh, Ontario, who died on the 19th of December, 1872. She was the mother of two children, one of whom, a little girl, died in May, 1872, aged eleven months; the other, a boy, who survived her, is now attending college. He was again married ou the 1st of September, 1875, to Cornelia, second daughter of Chas. Lane, of Napanee, by whom he has had three children. Mr. Scott has a commanding presence, genial countenance, and is of a kindly and courteous disposition.

he

ng

he

ax

ry

m-

nd

ns

shac-

he

all

by

rn

 $\mathbf{n}\mathbf{d}$

'he ut

lso ess

ral

on

in at ıd-

sa.

gh

ys or-

ra-

 \mathbf{at}

in

de

hia

lhe

he

he

m-

his þly

h, ri-

at

le, ch

he

οf

ill

Douglas, William, Chatham, Ont., Clerk of the Peace and County Crown Attorney for Kent, was born at Halkirk, Caithness, Scotland, on the 1st September, 1836. He received his early educational instruction in his native parish, where he was well grounded in the "rudiments;" but it was destined that he was to finish his career in the new land beyond the ocean. If the native parish of Mr. Douglas did not present as much bustle and progress as the new world which was then holding out so many allurements, it was rich enough in legend. For in the selfsame Halkirk, where William Douglas was born, the good people once upon a time took, in the most public way, a tyrannical bishop who had been too exacting in the collection of tithes, and as an example to all tyrants in the hierarchy, boiled him in an enormous pot. From that day to this Halkirk has had no bishop. The years 1847 and 1848 were remarkable for the volume of emigration that poured towards America, and tidings of the boundless lands in Canada, and the splendid possibilities open to enterprise and ability being spread far and near, Mr. Douglas's father, and other parts of Scotland, resolved to try their fortunes in Canada. So in the year 1848, William Douglas with his parents, went on board the ship Thomas Harrison, commanded by Captain Harrison, at the port of Scrabster roads, and sailed away, and on arriving in Canada, the family settled in the County of Northumberland. William continued his studies for a time, and after he was thoroughly prepared, he entered the University of Toronto, from which institution he graduated in 1861. He had for some years past decided upon the study of law, and upon his receiving his bachelor's degree, he at once began the study of that profession. In due time he was called to the bar, whereupon he began to practise at Chatham. At the bar he achieved conspicuous local distinction for his soundness of view and his wide acquaintanceship with law; and when, seven years later (1868), he was appointed clerk of the peace and county crown attorney for Kent, it was felt that the recognition was no more than his merits deserved. In 1885, when the executive at Ottawa were creating some of the most distinguished of our legal fraternity Queen's counsellors, Mr. Douglas was adjudged as one well worthy to wear the silken gown. In religion Mr. Douglas professes Presbyterianism, and in politics he is, and has always been, a steadfast Liberal-Conservative.

Cooke, Richard Plunkett, C.E., Cedarcliffs, Brockville, was born at Birr, King's county, Ireland, in 1824. His father, Thomas Lalor Cooke, crown solicitor of Birr, was descended from the old Catholic family, the Cookes of Cordangan, whose history is to be found in "Burke's Landed Gentry." He was a man remarkable for his literary, astronomical and antiquarian tastes and acquirements. He wrote a "History of Parsonstown," and collected a large number of objects of interest and antiquity, including a valuable collection of ancient coins, which after his death was purchased for the British museum. His wife and the mother of our subject was Miss Antisell, of Schraduff, Kings county. R. P. Cooke graduated at Trinity College, Dublin, in 1848, with the degree of B.A. He studied engineering under Sir John McNeil, and obtained a firstclass diploma from the engineering school attached to the university. He came to Canada in 1852, being employed as engineer in charge of construction on the G. T. R. west of Toronto, and subsequently as divisional engineer. In 1859 he removed to among many others from Caithness-shire Kingston, taking charge as resident engineer of the central district, which extended from Toronto to Montreal. In 1861 he terminated his connection with the G. T. R., and some time after, being appointed managing director of the Brockville and Ottawa Railway, removed to Brockville, where he has since resided. In 1867 he resigned this position, and has since been engaged as engineer and contractor on various works in Canada and the United States, amongst others the Boston, Barre & Gardner Railroad, the Carillon canal works, the Toronto harbour works, and the improvements of the harbour at Nicolet, on which contract with the Dominion government he is still He is a Conservative in politics, engaged. He married in 1853, Anna and a catholic. Plunkett, daughter of the late Lynch Plunkett, of Castlemore, County Mayo, Ireland.

Wicksteed, Richard John, Advocate and Barrister, Assistant Law Clerk and English Translator of the House of Commons of Canada, Ottawa, eldest son of Gustavus William Wicksteed, Q.C. (See elsewhere in these pages), and Anna Fletcher, his wife, was born at Kingston, Upper Canada, on the 3rd of October, 1842. His father being an officer of the House of Assembly and the House of Commons, the subject of this sketch passed his youth at the various seats of government. He attended the schools kept by the following persons: Miss Abbott, St. Antoine street, Montreal, in the years 1848-49; Mrs. Browne, York street, Toronto, 1850; Rev. Dr. Lett and Mr. Grier, St. George's square, Toronto, 1850-51; Mr. Bellingham, London, England, 1851. He was a pupil at the High School, Quebec, under Dr. Smith and Daniel Wilkie, from 1852 to 1856; was enrolled at Upper Canada College, under Principals F. W. Barron, Dr. Scadding and Rev. Walter Stennett, attending these from 1857 to 1860; and was a student in the faculty of arts of the University of McGill College, Montreal, from 1860 to 1863, when he graduated with first rank honours in He subsequently attended special classics. courses in Morin College, Quebec, and Laval University, Quebec, and took his M.A. degree at McGill College in 1866. Mr. Wicksteed, entered the law faculty of McGill College, and graduated as B.C.L. in He also had the degree of LLD. conferred upon him by the same university. In 1879, Mr. Wicksteed was articled as a student-at-law to George Irvine, (now judge of Vice Admiralty), of the firm of Holt & Irvine, St. Peter street, Quebec, and was admitted to the practice of the law by the

Quebec section of the bar of Lower Canada. in 1867. He established himself in Montreal in 1868, joining George Macrae, Q.C. as the junior partner of the law firm. was subsequently called to the Ontario bar in 1872, and entered as attorney in 1873. In 1872, Mr. Wicksteed was appointed by Mr. Speaker Cockburn assistant law clerk and English translator to the House of Commons, which office he now holds. a private in the Civil Service rifle corps for three years; a private in Victoria rifle company, Quebec, for one year; obtained a second class Military school certificate; a first class Military school certificate; and became second lieutenant of the Quebec Garrison artillery for one year. He received a first class certificate from the Montreal School of Gunnery; was second lieutenant. first lieutenant, and captain of the Montreal Garrison artillery, covering a period of five years; was a member of the Militia Officers Association, Montreal; captain in the Governor-General's Foot Guards for one year; a trooper in the Ottawa Troop of Cavalry, for one year. Capt. Wicksteed saw active service in 1866, during the Fenian raid; in 1871 was in command of an artillery detachment sent to Isle aux Noix, during the threatened Fenian raid; and in 1871 at the Dominion elections. He attended the camp at Laprairie in 1881 as divisional A.D.C. and camp orderly officer. He is a member of the Retired Officers' Association. Dr. Wicksteed has been an active member of the following societies and associations: In Toronto, the Upper Canada College Debating Society. In Montreal, the Burnside Literary Society, the University Philharmonic Society, the Order of Cemented Bricks, the University Gymnasium, the University Cricket Club, Young Men's Christian Association, Montreal Sanitary Association, Mercantile Library Association, the University Society, St. George's In Quebec, Société Cassault, Society. Church of England Young Men's Association, Quebec Gymnastic Club, Quebec Skating Club, the Literary and Historical Society. In Ottawa, the St. George's Society, Orchestral Association, Rowing Club, Cricket Club, Philharmonic Society, Canoe Club, Musical Union, Amateur Athletic Association, C. S. Building Society, C. S. Mutual Benefit Society, Temperance Coffee House Company, Literary and Scientific Society, Field Naturalists' Society, Microscopical Society, Young Men's Christian Association, Literary and Legal Debating Society, Art Asociation, Society for the Prevention of Cr

of the

can (

Assoc

Dr. V

Chur

true 1

He w

Queb

Chur

Chur

of the

the S

total-

Temp

Engli

man

and

pamp

one e chism

tribu

odica

bers,

for N

ship

Augu

man,

John

New

in th

Episo

He v

struc

don,

lands

died

man

Rev.

dist of

ters o

lakes

wont

Detr

renu

dist

in w

died

the s

may

the

ed th

the t

In 1

of co

posit

owin

ous i

inter

Fr

of Cruelty to Animals. He is also a member of the Royal Canadian Academy, the American Canoe Association, and the American Association for the Advancement of Science. Dr. Wicksteed is a staunch adherent of the Church of England, which he regards as the true representative of the Catholic church. He was a teacher in the Sunday-schools at Quebec and Montreal; a member of Christ Church Lay Association, Ottawa, and Christ Church Choir, a lay delegate to the synod of the diocese of Ontario, and a member of the Society of the Treasury of God. He is a total abstainer, a member of the Montreal Temperance Association and the Church of England Temperance Society. As a literary man he is the compiler of various indexes and tables to the Statutes of Canada, a pamphlet on "The Canadian Militia," and one entitled the "Elector's Political Catechism." He is likewise a frequent contributor to Canadian newspapers and peri-His residence is, Victoria chamodicals. bers, Ottawa.

n-'-,

łé

ar

3.

Эy

rk

n-

as

or

n-

a $^{\mathrm{1}}$

ec

ed

al

ìt.

al

ve

ers

v-

r;

for

er-

in

ch-

hè

he

np C,

m-

n,

ive

80-

da

he

ity

nt-

he

n's

ry

ia-

e's

lt,

at-

30.

ty,

ket

ıb,

ia-

ual

use

ty,

cal

ia-

ty, ion

Freeman, John B., Simcoe, M.P.P. for North Norfolk, was born in the township of Windham, Norfolk, on the 22nd August, 1835. He is a son of D. W. Freeman, and Isabella, daughter of the Rev. John Bailey, who came from the City of New York about the year 1809, and settled in the township of Nissouri, as pastor of the Episcopal Methodist church at that place. He was one of the first to erect a brick structure in what is now the City of London, and was one of the first to take up lands on which that city now stands. He died about the year 1862. D. W. Freeman was the second eldest son of the late Rev. D. Freeman, minister of the Methodist church, and one of the pioneer ministers of that body on the shores of the great This able and zealous man was wont to travel from the Niagara river to Detroit, upon his sacred mission, without renumeration, and was the first Methodist minister to cross the river, and preach in what is now the City of Detroit. He died at the residence of the father of the subject of this sketch, about 1835. It may also be stated that he was one of the U. E. loyalists. Mr. Freeman adopted the life of a farmer, settling himself in the township of Windham, Norfolk county. In 1840, he was appointed superintendent of common schools for the county, and this position he held until 1872, when he retired, owing to ill-health. He always took a zealous interest in municipal and educational interests; was clerk of the township of

Windham council for several years; and clerk of the division court for the same district for fifteen years. He was president and secretary of the County of Norfolk Agricultural Association, and was secretary of the same until the time of his death, having held that position for twenty-five years. He died in 1874, leaving eight of a family, the subject of this sketch being the eldest. John B. Freeman received a sound early educational training, and concluded his studies in the Simcoe Grammar school. At the age of seventeen he left school and assisted his father on the farm, until the age of twentytwo, when he removed to a farm in the township of London, where he commenced operations for himself in the middle of the He remained here until 1874, and devoted most of his attention to stock-raising. Upon the death of his father, he removed to the old homestead in Norfolk, and there he still resides. Mr. Freeman, early in life, took an interest in public questions, and in education. He was elected a school trustee, while in Middlesex, and served as township councillor of Windham, Norfolk, for six years. In 1879 he was elected for the North Riding of Norfolk to the Ontario Assembly, defeating William Wilson, of Simcoe, by a majority of 128. He was re-elected for the same constituency in 1882, defeating William Wallace, of Simcoe, of "Rag Baby" fame, by a majority of 428, and now represents North Norfolk in the Ontario Legislature. Mr. Freeman's legislative career has been distinguished and useful. He was the first to present petitions asking for manhood sufferage, and to urge the concession of such a measure; and he was also the first to urge the necessity of only allowing one vote to be cast by each voter in the municipalities in which he resided. He has also been government whip since 1882, and his zeal and efficiency in this important office have met with cordial approval. He is a member of the 2.O.U.W.; and is charter member of Lypn lodge, No. 28, Toronto. In politics it is not necessary to say that he is and always has been a Liberal. He is a member of the County of Norfolk Reform Association, and director of the Reform Club recently established at Toronto. In religion, he professes the Methodist faith, like his paternal ancestors. He married in 1861, Jane, daughter of Thomas Scatchard, of the township of Nissouri, Middlesex, and brother of the late John Scatchard, who represented that county in the old parliament; and who died while in political harness. Both these brothers were pioneer settlers in Middlesex, whither they had come from England early in the present century. Mr. Freeman is essentially a man of progress; and he is one of those who believe that when motion ceases, stagnation begins. He is a man very much devoted to home life, and those who have met him in the domestic hour bear cordial tribute to the broadness of his sympathies and his kindly nature.

McIntyre, Daniel Eugene, M.D., Cornwall, Sheriff of the United Counties of Stormont, Dundas, and Glengarry, is the only son of James McIntyre, a captain in the British mercantile marine service, and Mary McLachlan, daughter of Ewen McLachlan, farmer at Appin, Argyleshire, Scotland. James McIntyre was one of five brothers, all of whom followed a seafaring life, save one, Duncan McIntyre, who entered the British army, and became a captain in the 68th regiment of the line (Durham Command). At the early age of twenty-three, James McIntyre was promoted to the command of a merchantman, of which he was part owner, and whilst the subject of this sketch was still a child, was lost with his vessel off the coast of Wales. Sheriff McIntyre was born in the town of Oban, Argyleshire, in the early part of the year 1812, and was an only child. He commenced his education at Oban, and on the death of his mother, in 1819, continued it in the parish school at Appin. He subsequently attended the Messrs. McFarlane's academy, George's square, Glasgow, a somewhat noted school in its day. Upon the completion of his studies, a position was secured for him in the business establishment of Stewart & Macdonald, then a somewhat large house, but now one of almost world-wide fame. He remained there for upwards of a year, but in consequence of the firm requiring him to be bound for a number of years, and largely, perhaps, because he had no taste for the business, or appreciation of the salary he was obtaining, he gave up his position and returned to the Highlands. In the following year, 1829, he entered the medical classes of Glasgow University, and prosecuted his studies within its ancient walls, with the exception of one year, or session, which he spent at Edinburgh University, until he graduated, in the spring of In the spring of 1835, Dr. McIntyre set sail for Canada, and after staying a short time with relatives at Quebec-Rodger Dean & Co.—a gentleman then largely in the shipping and timber business, he proceeded to Upper Canada, and located in the village of Williamstown, in the County of Glengary, then, as now, the most Highland county in the Province. Here he met with a warm welcome from his countrymen, and was at once adopted as one of themselves, his native language, the Gaelic, affording him a ready passport to their hearts and homes. In July, 1837, he married Ann, daughter of Colonel the Honourable Alexander Fraser, of Fraserfield, Glengarry. On the breaking out of the rebellion, in the same year, he was placed on the staff of the 1st Glengarry regiment of militia, as surgeon, and whilst passing down the St. Lawrence on the steamer Henry Brougham, was captured at Beauharnois by the rebels, and was, with many of his fellow passengers, amongst whom were the Hon. Edward Ellise and family, for several weeks confined in the house of the parish priest, who, though unable to obtain the release of the prisoners, had many kindnesses extended to them, until they were ultimately rescued by the Glengarry regiment which marched up and took possession of the town. On the suppression of the rebellion, he resumed his practice at Williamstown, but continued on the staff to perform the duties of surgeon, and was retained on active service at Lan-His other connection caster until 1842. with the militia force of the country was as major of the Stormont battalion, to which position he was gazetted in 1854. On his retirement he was granted the rank of lieutenant-colonel. Dr. McIntyre's intimate acquaintance with municipal and political institutions led to his services being sought by the people of the township of Charlottenburg, whom he represented in the old eastern district council (now the county council) for thirteen years, and when the Municipal Act came into force in the province, in 1849, by the terms of which wardens became elective, he was the first to be honoured by election to that dignified position for the three united counties. In the following session of the counties council, he was again elected to the warden's chair, and has been the only warden of the counties who has been called to fill a second term. Whilst he was an active politician, he was an ardent Reformer, and gave unstinted support to the Baldwin and Lafontaine governments in their battle for the constitutional liberties of the people of Canada. He was the friend and ally of the Honourable John Sandfield Macdonald in all his contests in Glengarry, largely assisting that gentleman in carrying the county against the powerful influence wielded in those days by the family compact

heig

gin,

his (Bill

Dr.

of (

lead

exce

cond

Inty the

fills.

note

tem

well

disc

wife ago,

his s

dau

Mcl

the

men

neve

who

sect

raise

expi

to٠٤

choc

Inty

his l

an a

the

Lon

Irela East

son

John

Irela

anci

Italy

polit

whe

who

this

to e

orga

wen

gier

man day.

Coll

Swif

You Corl

In 1849, when party strife was at its height, and the governor-general, Lord Elgin, was assailed and assaulted, because of his giving his assent to the Rebellion Losses Bill, by the hyper-loyalist cabal in Montreal. Dr. McIntyre was called upon by the people of Glengarry to head a deputation of its leading men, to present an address to his excellency, at Montreal, approving of his conduct. On the 10th May, 1850, Dr. Mc-Intyre was appointed to the shrievalty of the united counties, a position which he still During his term of office, he has been noted for the leniency with which he has tempered the administration of justice, as well as for the ability with which he has discharged the duties of his position. His wife, whom he married almost fifty years ago, continues to be his helpmeet; and of his seven children, two alone survive, one daughter and a son, the latter being A. F. McIntyre, barrister, of Ottawa. In religion the sheriff is a Presbyterian, but like all men who have lived in Glengarry, he has never obtruded his faith upon his friends who belonged to other sects. Indeed, when sectarian partyism has at any time been raised in his presence, it has been a favourite expression of his, that each man is entitled to go to heaven by the road of his own As we write, we find Sheriff Mc-Intyre, with his seventy-four winters upon his head, a typical Highlander, straight as an arrow, active in body, clear in intellect, discharging his duties to the satisfaction of the public.

ty of

land

with

and

lves,

ding

and ۱nn,

lex-

On

the f the

sur-

Law-

was

and

gers, Illise

ı the

un-

iers,

iem,

the t

and

supl his

d on

eon,

Lan-

ction

is as

hich

his

lieu-

e ac-

l in-

ught tten-

east-

ncil)

cipal

849,

ame

l by the wing

gain

been

has

st he

dent

rt to

ents

rties

iend

field

ırry,

ying

ence

com-

Sippi, Charles Augustus, M. A., London, Licentiate of Apothecaries' Hall, Ireland, was born at Hydrabad, Scinde, East Indies, on July 25th, 1844. He is a son of Charles Augustus Sippi and Elizabeth John, his wife, both of whom were born in The family is descended from an Ireland. ancient and respectable lineage in Tuscany, The great-grandfather left Italy for political reasons, and settled in Saxony, where he raised his family. The eldest son who was the grand-father of the subject of this sketch, studied music, and was induced to emigrate to Ireland, and take charge of the Kerry Militia Band, a famous musical organization at that time, and with him went to Ireland the renowed musician Logier (inventor of the chiroplast), and also many other well-known musicians of that day. C. A. Sippi was educated at Kilkenny College, Kilkenny, Ireland, (where Dean Swift went to school), at the endowed school, Youghal, County Cork; at Queen's College, Cork (one of the affiliated colleges of the Royal University of Ireland); the Royal College of Surgeons, Dublin; and at the Catholic University of Dublin. He studied instrumental music under John A. Sippi, organist at Lismore cathedral, and singing under the well-known tenor, Alexander D. Roche, Dr. Sippi came to Canada in 1865, and settled in Port Stanley, where he practised medicine for nearly two years. But the practice of medicine was always distasteful to him, and he resolved to take the first opportunity that offered and return to his first love, "music." In the early part of 1867, he was offered and accepted the position of house surgeon and teacher of classics, physiology and English, etc., in Hellmuth College, London, Ontario, by Bishop Hellmuth, under Dr. Sweatman, the present Bishop of Toronto, who was then head master at that institution. Dr. Sippi remained in connection with that institution until 1874, when he retired, and accepted the managership of the London branch of the firm of A. & S. Nordheimer, pianoforte agents, Toronto, which position he still While at Hellmuth College, on the representation of Bishop Hellmuth, he had the honorary degree of master of arts con-ferred upon him by Kenyon College, Ohio. Dr. Sippi has been for three years a trustee of the London Collegiate Institute, and organist and choir master of the Memorial Church, London; president for (1886) of the Ontario Music Teachers' Association; past master of Kilwinning lodge, No. 64, G.R.C., and past grand organist of Grand Lodge of Canada; and he is an honorary member of Court Pride of the Dominion, ancient order of Foresters. Mr. Sippi was also president of the Irish Benevolent Society of London, in 1884, a society founded with the object of uniting Irishmen of all creeds and shades of politics, and assisting their poor fellow-countrymen who come out to this country, and procuring employment for them. religion, he is a staunch Episcopalian. married in Templemichael church, on the 3rd of October, 1865, Rosa, youngest daughter of the Rev. James Bugge, B.A., vicar of Templemichael, diocese of Lismore, in the County of Waterford. By this union there are nine children living.

Merkley, Henry G., Morrisburg, Ont., was born in the County of Dundas, on the 7th July, 1812. He is a son of George and Catherine Merkley, his paternal grandfather, Major Merkley, being a U. E. loyalist, who settled at Dundas after the close of the revolution. During the war of 1812 he fought with the volunteer militia, and received therein the rank of colonel. George Merkley, the father of our subject, also took part in the war, bearing a captain's commission. He was likewise engaged upon the loyalist's side in 1837, and held then the rank of colonel. The land now occupied by H. G. Merkley is part of that drawn by his grandfather, Major Henry Merkley. H. G. Merkley was educated in the common schools of his native place; he served as lieutenant in the rebellion of 1837, and when the Dundas militia was called out upon active service, he was appointed quartermaster of the regiment. In education Mr. Merklev has taken much interest, and he has been a trustee of Public and Grammar schools for nearly a quarter of a century. In municipal matters, also, he has taken an active part; as he has done, indeed, in all political movements of his county, and of Ontario. He has always been a steadfast Liberal Conservative in general politics, and contested his county for the House of Commons in 1874, but was defeated. Mr. Merkley and his family are members of the Episcopal Church. He married, in 1841, Clara Flagg, by whom he has had three sons and seven daughters, all of whom have attained the estate of men and women. Mr. Merkley was engaged in the hat trade, and was occupied with commercial general enter-prises for twenty-five years. He has been an active and industrious member of the community, and has taken part in all movements which have had the industrial or moral improvement of the community for To write the career of such men their aim. as Mr. Merkley is to write so much of the country's history, for they leave their stamp upon the material and the intellectual life of the community.

McGuire, Thomas Horace, B. A., Q. C., Kingston, was born on April 21st, 1849, at that city. His parents were James B. McGuire, merchant and farmer, and Mary Brady, both of whom were born in the County of Fermanagh, Ireland. T. H. McGuire was educated in the public school, Collegiate Institute, and Queen's University, Kingston. While in the public school he won a scholarship, entitling him to two years' education in the Collegiate Insti-He entered the institute at fifteen, and at the expiration of two years, in a competitive examination, won the Watkin's scholarship. In the same year he entered college, he also won the Mowat scholarship, given to the best matriculant. During the four years spent at college, in every year, and in every department, he carried off the first prize, besides winning every special prize for English and Latin composition open to him. This record is without a parallel in the history of the university. He graduated in 1870, carrying off the Prince of Wales' gold medal. He then entered the law office of the late James O'Reilly, Q. C., who entertained a very high estimate of the hard-working student. He was admitted as an attorney in 1874, and was called to the bar in Michaelmas term, 1875. He was in partnership with Mr. O'Reilly for about a year prior to the death of the latter in 1875. After the death of Mr. O'Reilly he continued to practice, and has been very successful in his profession. Almost immediately after being called to the bar, he was entrusted with the defence of Dougherty, Foy, and the two Smiths, charged with the murder of one Matthew Garrett, at Sharbot Lake, and after a hard fight, lasting two days, his clients were acquitted, although the acting judge, the late Kenneth McKenzie, was strongly convinced of their guilt, and charged the jury very forcibly against Since then he has been engaged on every important criminal case tried in his county, and frequently in Napanee and Brockville. The case of Elijah Vankoughnet, tried for the murder of John Richardson, at the Kingston fall assizes in 1881, attracted much interest at the time. The prisoner had publicly confessed having committed the murder, under most coldblooded circumstances, and without a pre-tence at justification. His confession, giving minute details of the crime, appeared in all the local papers, and in the Globe and Mail, but by skilful cross-examination, Mr. McGuire succeeded in having evidence of the confession rejected on the ground that it was obtained by improper inducements. The jury failed to agree, and were discharg-The case came on again for trial at the following spring assizes, when much fresh evidence was produced, and not a shadow of a doubt apparently remained of the prisoner's guilt; yet such was the effect of a fervid speech by Mr. McGuire, that the jury, to the surprise of all, appended to their verdict of guilty, a strong recommendation to mercy. In July, 1883, McGuire was appointed a Q.C. He holds a certificate from the Military school at Kingston, was alderman from 1879 to 1884, inclusive, and during a greater portion of the same period, was a member of the separate school board. He has been an active member of the local Conservative Association, and is

one

Con

duri

polit

 $\overline{\mathbf{Add}}$

Len

pres

Pau

Mec

pres

tion

and

elde

and

Mat

been

of th

of th

edite

vigo

the

Cana

on I

of th

for t polit

trate

31st

Forg

is th

child

a so

Bart

paris

grou

in th

math

land

settle large

main

the e don,

and

since

to th

and l

when

Mow

police

1873

the

prese

one o

has i

tant r

the in

B

one of the joint secretaries of the Liberal-Conservative Association of Ontario; has, during the general elections since 1873, been a vigorous campaign speaker, addressing political meetings in Kingston, Frontenac, Addington, Prince Edward, South Victoria, Lennox, Leeds and Prescott. He has been president of the St. Patrick's Society for about eight years; of the St. Vincent de Paul Society, two years; of the Kingston Mechanics' Institute, two years, and is vicepresident of the Catholic Literary Association. Mr. McGuire is a Roman catholic; and married on July 2nd, 1877, Mary V., eldest daughter of John C. Cunningham, and a descendant of the celebrated Sir Matthew Hale. He has for a year past been editor-in-chief of the Daily News and of the Canadian Freeman, and is a member of the Canadian Press Association. In his editorial capacity he has proved himself a vigorous and graceful writer. He favours the continuation of the present relation of Canada towards the Mother Country; and on Irish affairs has been a warm supporter of those who agitate in a constitutional way for the amelioration of the economical and political affairs of Ireland.

erv

m-

th-

ni-

off

nen

nes

erv

nt.

74,

nas Mr.

ath

ath

ice,

ro-

ing

 $_{
m ith}$

the

of

and

his

ing

was

and

nst

on ·

his

and

gh-

rd-

in

me.

ing

olď-

bre-

giv-

l in

and

Mr.

hat

nts.

the

esh

low

the

the

to

iire

tin-

on,

ime 100l

i is

Bartlet, Alexander, Police Magis-Windsor, Ontario, was born on the trate, Windsor, Ontario, was born on the 31st December, 1822, in the parish of Forgue, County of Aberdeen, Scotland, and is the youngest member of a family of four children, all of whom are still alive. He is a son of Alexander and Mary (Redford) Bartlet. His education was obtained at the parish school, where he was thoroughly grounded in the English branches as well as in the rudiments of classics and the higher mathematics. Mr. Bartlet left his native land in 1841, and came to Canada, and settled at Amherstburg, then one of the largest towns of Western Canada. He remained in Amherstburg until 1853 (with the exception of a short time spent in London, Ontario), when he moved to Windsor, and here he has permanently resided ever since. In the year 1858 he was appointed to the position of town clerk of Windsor, and held that office until November, 1878, when he received at the hands of Mr. Mowat's government the appointment as police magistrate of the same town. 1873 he was prominently connected with the organization and completion of the present system of water works in Windsor, one of the best systems in the province, and has indeed been connected with all important municipal enterprises of Windsor since the incorporation of the town. During the period of his incumbency of the town clerkship, he prepared with one or two exceptions every by-law that was passed by the council. Besides the offices above mentioned, he has held that of secretary to the High and Public School boards since 1858 to the present time. During his whole life Mr. Bartlet has been a staunch Liberal, and a strong supporter of the Reform party. In religion he is, and always has been, a Presbyterian, and is at present ruling elder in St. Andrew's Presbyterian church session. married at Amherstburg in 1851, Helen McDonald, daughter of the late James Noble of that town, and has three daughters and two sens living. He is a man whose industry, public spirit and high and honourable aims have left a permanent impression upon the material and moral life of the community.

Chown, Edwin, Kingston, was born in Devonshire, England, on the 24th day of February, 1832. His father had been a farmer in England, and when he arrived in Canada his capital was exhausted. There was a family of six children, and Edwin. with the rest, had to be content with a common school education. From his eleventh year, Edwin Chown earned his own living. Early in life he engaged in various occupations; was at one time a confectioner, again a carpenter, and then a tallow chan-In 1836, he engaged with James Powell to learn the tin business, and served an apprenticeship of five years at the same. He then commenced business for himself, and steadily, if sometimes slowly, made his way up to a prominent and honoured place in the business life of the community. He served in the city council as councilman, and subsequently as alderman for a period in all of about twenty years; and he has been one of the governors of the Kingston General Hospital since 1877. Mr. Chown was for twenty-seven years a partner with Henry Cunningham, under the firm name of Chown & Cunningham, engaged in the manufacture of stoves and agricultural implements. In 1884 he reagricultural implements. signed his share in the business to his second son, Charles Douglas Chown. Mr. Chown has been twice married, first to Harriet Anning, by whom there is one child living, the Rev. Edwin Anning Chown, a prominent minister of the Canada Methodist church. He married the second time, Amelia Anning, and by this union there were seven sons and two daughters, five sons and one daughter of whom are living, and stationed as follows ;- Charles Douglas, of the firm of Chown & Cunningham; Henry Havlock, medical doctor at Winnipeg; Albert Pollard, druggist, Kingston; George Young, B.A. of Queen's, now a partner with his father in business; Alice Amelia, graduate of the Hamilton Teachers' College; Stanley Thorn, taking an art course at Queen's College. Thus, by upright and honourable dealing, by industry, care and economy, Mr. Chown has brought up his family in a way that would be an honour to any parent, and he has secured a competency ample forhis declining years.

Davies, Rev. Henry William, D.D., Toronto, was born on June 24, 1834, in Cleveland, State of Ohio, being a son of John and Cynthia Davies, of the same place. He came to Canada in 1840, and, after passing through an elementary school, entered the Cornwall Grammar school, under W. Kay. His studies at that institution embraced the usual branches of a Grammar school education. His parents did not remove to Ontario, and he was brought up by an aunt, on his father's side, who married the late Guy Carleton Wood, of Cornwall, whose sister was wife of Bishop Strachan in 1852 he matriculated at Trinity College, gaining a Divinity scholarship, and also the Burnside scholarship at the end of the first year. He graduated with classical honours in 1855, and proceeded regularly to the degrees of M.A., B.D., and D.D., the last two by examinations, being the first conferred on any graduate of Trinity College. He was appointed curate of St. Peter's, Cobourg, under the Ven. Archdeacon Bethune, afterwards second bishop of Toronto. In 1858. on receiving his appointment as master of the Grammar school, at Cornwall, he became curate of Trinity Church, under the late Ven. Archdeacon Patton. On removing to Toronto, in 1866, to fill the position of English master in the Toronto Normal school, he became assistant to the Rev. W. S. Darling of Holy Trinity, and for the last few years Dr. Davies has been attached, though not permanently, to St. Luke's; his services being at the command of any brother clergyman desiring assistance. was initiated into Masonry in St. John's lodge, Kingston, and on removing to Toronto, he affiliated with Ionic lodge, filling the chairs of chaplain, senior warden, and He is now grand master, respectively. chaplain of the Grand Lodge of Canada. Shortly after receiving the above-named appointment, Dr. Davies was requested by the Council of Public Instruction to write two works on English grammar, suitable for use in the Public and High schools of Ontario. In obedience to the request he prepared an English grammar for junior classes, and an Analytical and Practical Grammar-works showing much thought and care, and a thorough adaptation to their respective fields. He afterwards published an English Literature Primer, for the use of candidates preparing for second class teachers' examinations, a neat and valuable little book, which, as well as the works already mentioned, obtained an extensive use in the public schools. In 1871, upon the resignation of Dr. Sangster, Dr. Davies was promoted to the position of principal of the Normal School. From that time, as has been very truthfully pointed out in an educational journal, he laboured with earnestness and success in maintaining and extending the reputation of the institution over which he presided. He was ever ready to make any personal sacrifice for the benefit of his students, and the more clearly his character was understood the higher became one's admiration and respect for the man. He encouraged athletic exercises and field sports, and secured the establishment of a fine professional and general library for the use of teachers and students of the Normal School. Under his management the Normal School attained the highest possible repute for the thoroughness and the soundness of its methods; and one competent authority says :- "The plan which Dr. Davies pursues in teaching would give rise to great thoughtfulness and expansion of mind." About a year ago the public learnt with deep regret that Dr. Davies had severed his connection with the Normal School. One of the Educational journals subsequently printed the following paragraph :- "In the Rev. Dr. Davies' retirement from the Normal School, Toronto, that institution loses a most faithful and diligent head. Possessing a most kindly heart, it was perhaps unfortunate for his popularity, that a too conscientious estimate of the obligation he was under to his pupils to promote their interests, despite their own indifference, gave him for some little time at least a reputation for austerity that he scarcely de-We regret that for some time the learned doctor has been in delicate health. His temporary leisure will, no doubt, restore him to his usual vigour. We trust that the government will reward his long and faithful service to one of our most important provincial educational institutions, by an appointment to a less onerous, but

equa wish we conto a this conto to remed Davi Todo Patri with Ct (dece Volu in L holdi Civil quen was (Dubl at K entat comp tincti rollic was t C.E., he w works Comr ern C mout Upon was e the \mathbf{L} 1844, appoin Lord the E alty, F.R,S he ser yard, the co wallin his ter stg. p appro to H. the we as seco (afterv `man's paratio sion of the for the do

ous g

years,

liam D

equally honourable position." With the wish embodied at the close of this paragraph we cordially join ours. It would be a pity to allow the talents and the experience of this distinguished educationist and scholar to remain inactive, when we have so much need of them in educational circles. Dr. Davies married, on October 12, 1856, Emily Todd, youngest daughter of the late W. P. Patrick, who was for many years connected with the House of Assembly.

Cumberland, Frederic William, (deceased), M.P., Colonel in the Canadian Volunteers, of Pendarves, Toronto, was born in London, England, in 1820, his father holding a government appointment in the Civil Service at Westminster, and subsequently in Dublin Castle. His education was commenced at the Collegiate school, at Dublin, and from thence he was entered at King's college, London, under the presentation of the Earl of Ellesmere. Having completed his studies here without any distinction beyond that of being a mettlesome, rollicking youth, he was apprenticed, as was then the custom, to a William Tress, C.E., for five years, during which time he was engaged on various architectural works, and in the surveys for the Tithe Commutation Commission, and on the Eastern Counties, City and Richmond, and Plymouth, Exeter, and Falmouth railways. Upon the expiration of his articles, he was employed as an assistant engineer upon the London and Birmingham Railway. In 1844, he left the railway service, on being appointed, upon the recommendation of Lord Stanley (then Colonial Secretary), to the Engineering Department of the Admiralty, of which Colonel Brandreth, R.E., F.R.S., was director-general, under whom he served, as first assistant at H. M. dockyard, at Chatham. Here he superintended the construction of the dry docks and seawalling, involving an expenditure during his term of service of upwards of £100,000 stg. per annum. The works at Chatham approaching completion, he was promoted to H. M. dockyard at Portsmouth, where the works were of greater magnitude, and as second under Sir William Denison, F.R.S. (afterwards appointed governor of Van Dieman's Land), he was engaged in the preparation of designs, contracts, and supervision of construction of the three dry docks, the forts and batteries for the protection of the dockyard, and the erection of the various government buildings. During these years, 1845 to 1847, he also assisted Sir William Denison and Captain James, R.E., in editing "The Professional Papers of the Corps of Royal Engineers," a work of high rank and professional standing, which contains several papers contributed by his own pen. Having married Wilmot Bramley, whose sister was the wife of T. G. Ridout, then cashier of the Bank of Upper Canada, he concluded to make venture of emigration to a younger land. Resigning his position, and fortified by recommendations of the highest character, including one from Sir Charles Barry, the architect of the parliament buildings at Westminster, who testified that, from an acquaintance with his professional work as an architect, he had "the highest opinions of his qualifications and character," he arrived, after a six weeks passage in a sailing ship, at New York, and thence by the slow progress of the Erie canal came to Toronto, in the autumn of 1847. With great glee he used to relate his first earnings were earned in laying out the corner of Bloor and Yonge streets, and the incidents of his attendances at fires, in the capacity of valuator for the British American Assurance Co., his first regular appointment. In 1848, he was appointed county engineer for the County of York, and in 1851, was sent to England, and acted with much success, as secretary of the Provincial Industrial Commission, and as commissioner for Canada, at the Great Exhibition of all Nations, held at London, England, in that year. During the period, 1848 to 1858, it was then Mr. Cumberland left the imprint of his abilities upon the architectural features of Toronto. Taking into partnership, first, T. Ridout, and, subsequently, W. G. Storm, he established a superiority which secured to his firm nearly all the public buildings which were erected at that time, as well as a private practice of great magnitude. Being a man of unflagging energy, he also, during the earlier portion of his career, made use of his knowledge in railway matters, and in 1852, as chief engineer, undertook the superintendence of the construction of the Ontario, Simcoe and Huron Railway, then opened for thirty miles, to Aurora. He located the line north from Barrie, and selected Collingwood as the northern terminus. But a few farm houses were then existing in their vicinity, the shores were wooded to the water's edge, and the Hen and Chickens harbour was destitute of any inhabitants, where now stands the thriving town of Collingwood, with a population of 10,000. Having completed the construction, he, in 1854, resigned his position as chief engineer, and engaged solely in architectural work. Well educated in his eraft, with a fine eye for form, and great facility in planning and massing of structures, the St. James' cathedral, Normal school, and Osgoode hall, are not unworthy specimens of his designs. The senate of the University of Toronto, having now, under the guiding hand of Governor-General Sir Edmund Head, determined on the erection of buildings commensurate with its Iofty purposes, appointed Mr. Cumberland their architect, and at their request he visited England and the continent for a year, to prepare himself, by further study and comparison of the great edifices of the early ages. Returning, he devoted himself to the work, and completed the design and details for the present buildings, in the Queen's Park, Toronto, which were executed under his daily supervision. This magnificent structure, acknowledged to be, without parallel, the finest specimen of Norman Gothic architecture on the continent of America, was his last design, and formed a fitting conclusion to his architectural career. In 1858, the Ontario, Simcoe and Huron Railway had become bankrupt, and having fallen into a condition of dilapidation, was ordered by the government to be closed, as being unsafe for the public use. Having been appointed its vice-president, Mr. Cumberland saw an opportunity for exercising his talents in the working of railways, for which his experience in England had so peculiarly fitted him. Fully acquainted with every section of the country through which it passed, having faith in its future, and rare prescience as to its ultimate success, he devised a scheme for the re-organization of the company. Armed with new legislation for its absorption, and the creation of the Northern Rullway of Canada, he visited England, and, by his enthusiasm and personal influence, induced the English investors to double their previous investment, in order to save that which otherwise would have been irretriev-He returned in 1859, as its ably lost. managing director. Here began a connection which endured with fidelity on both sides for twenty-two years, until, with his death, in 1881, was terminated his term of service. He reconstructed the railway, and, casting aside the through business, he devoted every energy to the nurture and growth of the local interests of the disdistrict, and the economical and efficient working of the line. In the first year of management, although the total earnings were $21,657 less than those of the previous year, the company made a profit of $58,859, instead of suffering a loss. The same policy was consistently followed throughout. The strongest inducements were held out to lumbermen to develop the timber lands along the line, mills were encouraged, and stations opened at every point which showed any demand-indeed, so much was this the case, that an anecdote is handed down that on one occasion, when the conductor had stopped the train at a new road-crossing, the engine driver, leaning out of his cab, called out, "Wot's this?" and being told that it was "a new flag station," replied, in tones of disgust, "a new flag station! well, I should like to know whether I'm driving an express train or an omnibus!" The speed of the trains may not have been great, but in all his career not a passenger was ever hurt The railway facilities were, as it were, brought home to every man's door, and throughout his term of management, local interests reigned supreme. His constant efforts were directed to the creation of branch lines, which should tap the newlydeveloping country, and bring their traffic to the main stem. In this view he projected and constructed, under other companies, the North Grey, the Penetanguishene, and Muskoka branches, and just before his death, completed the organization for the construction of the Callendar branch, by which Toronto and the Province of Ontario are now united to the Canadian Pacific. These subsidiary lines were all afterwards amalgamated into the one company, and remain as evidence of his desire to give railway advantages to the district which his company From a gross earning of $240,044, served. in 1859, he advanced the revenues of his company to $1,289,507, in 1881, the year of his death, and never for one day during that term was the interest on its bonds in A persuasive speaker, and of great force of character, his personality pervaded all enterprises to which he devoted himself. and thus he made his railway fill a larger space in the public eye than, perhaps, its mileage or earnings, in comparison with other Canadian railways, deserved. When the Hamilton and North-Western Railway was constructed, in direct opposition to the Northern, it was thought that the day of his influence was gone, but with great patience and fertility of resource he waited his time, and his astonished opponents woke up one morning to find that just as they had completed their new line it had passed into his hands. From this time on opposition ceased, the people began to find that while

b

m

m

h

H

u

al

wa of

st

he

er

pla

di

wi

sti

tal

of

wa

of

rev

fin

shi

lar

In

org

10t

the

firs

þе

poi

ral,

Lo

he ·

Lov

had

For

the

izat

bec:

grai

faithful to his company he was earnest in his endeavours to advance their mutual interests. His dogged persistence and indomitable will in working out his designs for the advancement of his company, necessarily created hostility and opposition, but a thorough geniality of disposition, and perfect ease of access overcame much of this during his life, while after his death even his most inveterate opponents acknowledged merits, and added their testimony that no sordid motive or mean self interest ever prompted any of his lines of action. wards his employees he stood in the relation of a father and a friend. Seldom has firm rule, exacting instant and complete obedience, combined with kindly consideration, been better exemplified than in him. Hemade it his business to know, not only each man in the service, but also the condition of his family, and the inner details of his life. His object was to build up the old ideal union between master and man, and in this, not the least of his successes, he admittedly won the faithful service and full affection of all who were engaged under him. There was a deep significance in the utterance of one of his employees, who said, as he stood looking at his dead master's face as he lay in his coffin—"There lies the Northern Railway." The bronze monument placed at Allandale (the work of the Canadian sculptor, F. W. Dunbar), modelled with great success, and presenting a very striking likeness, has on its granite pedestal the inscription—"Erected by the men of the Northern and North-Western Railways, 1881," and fitly preserves the record of the esteem with which his memory is Mr. Cumberland was a man of fine social instincts, the very soul of friendship and hospitality. He interested himself largely in matters other than his business. In 1861, at the time of the Trent affair, he organized the regiment then known as the 10th Royals or Mechanics' Regiment, now the Royal Grenadiers, and becoming its first colonel, retained command until in 1864 he was, in recognition of his services, appointed aide-de-camp to the governor-general, a position he held until the departure of Lord Dufferin, when he resigned. In 1866, he went to the front on the staff of Colonel Lowry, at the time of the Fenian raid, and had particular charge of the railway service. For many years, he was an active member of the Masonic body, assisting in the re-organization of St. Andrew's lodge, of which he became master, and subsequently deputy grand master of the Toronto district; was 59.

icy

[he

m-

ng

ons

de-

se,

on

pp-

the

led

t it

nes

, I

an

eed

but

ver

re.

nd

cal

of

ly-

ffic

ted

the

us-

th.

uc-

`0-

OW

ub-

at-

ad-

ny

44,

his

of ing

in

led

elf,

ger

its

ith

en

ay Lhe

on

ile

one of the founders and vice-president of the Canadian Institute, and a president for two years of the St. George's Society. Was a president of the Mechanics' Institute, in which he always took a lively interest, founding in it a scholarship for his own Northern Railway apprentices, and designing and superintending the construction of its building-the present public library-as a free gift in its aid. In 1867, he represented Algoma in the Ontario, and again in 1871, in the Dominion parliament. He resigned, on finding the duties interfered too much with his railway practice. Late in life, he entered himself as a student at Osgoode Hall, and it is remembered that on being given for translation the Ode of Horace, beginning with " Exegid monumentum œre perennius," he, with much aptitude, added, in allusion to the surrounding buildings, of which he himself had been the architect, "Si monumentum requiris circumspice." (If you seek the monument, look around.) He was a member of the senate of the University of Toronto, and subsequently of Trinity College, a prominent member of the Synod of the Church of England, and a director of the Canadian Bank of Commerce. Fond of athletics and sport, he was at the time of his death, president of the Toronto Cricket Club, and of the Ontario Jockey Club; his youthfulness of disposition making him a great favourite among young men. He died at his residence, Pendarves, Toronto, on 5th August, 1881, in the 61st year of his age, deeply regretted, and leaving a large blank in social and public circles. A courtly, cultivated gentleman, of good presence and great personal magnetism, a speaker of clear and close reasoning, with a great flow of language, at times rising to eloquence; somewhat of a poet, yet intensely practical, vig-ourous in design, and with rare executive ability, it may truly be said of him, in all the varied matters in which he interested himself-Nihil tetigit quod non ornavit. It is the varied conditions attendant upon the early years of a young and growing community which call into play versatile abilities such as he possessed. Of these he did not fail to take advantage, and thus left his mark upon his adopted land.

Ferrier, Alexander David, Lieut. Col., ex-M.P.P., J.P., Fergus, Ont., was born in Edinburgh, Scotland, on the 13th November, 1813. His father was Louis Henry Ferrier, of Belsyde, Lintithgowshire, Scotland, who died in Quebec, February, 1883, where he held the position of collector of customs, having removed with his family to Quebec in June, 1830. His mother was Charlotte Monro, second daughter of Alexander Monro, professor of anatomy in the University of Edinburgh, who died in 1821. A. D. Ferrier was educated at the Edinburgh Academy and University. Upon his arriving at Quebec with his father, he entered a merchant's office, where he remained till 1834, and after a visit to Britain came to Fergus, Ont., in June 1835. Here he worked upon his farm till 1846, when he went to Elora, as book-keeper to Ross & Co., mill owners. &c. In 1849 Mr. Ferrier was appointed clerk to the Wellington county council, which position he held till 1871, when he resigned. He removed to Elora in 1844, and to Guelph in 1849. 1850 Mr. Ferrier married Magdalene Dingwall Fordyce, who died without issue in September, 1872. Mr. Ferrier returned to Fergus, to his old place in 1854; but sold out in 1875, and proceeded to Britain, and returned in 1878. In 1854 he did business in Fergus as accountant and conveyancer, &c., which occupation he gave up in 1875. He was a member of the old district council for four years, from 1845 to 1849, and in September, 1867, was elected M.P.P. for the Centre Riding of Wellington. He was a private in the Fergus volunteers in 1835, and served during the rebellion in 1837 and 1838. He obtained his commission as captain in the 13th Gore in 1839, and in 1859 was gazetted lieut.-colonel of the Fourth Wellington militia, which battalion he organized. Col. Ferrier was a commissioner of the old court of requests, and was made a J. P. in 1843. He was secretary to two road companies, Guelph and Arthur and Fergus and Owen Sound, till the county assumed them. He has not lately taken a very deep interest in politics, seeing that there are plenty of men for that business. He was a member of St. Andrew's Society of Fergus and also the Curling Club. Ferrier has travelled from Land's End to John O'Groat's, and from Quebec to Winnipeg; and he declares that Dunkeld in Scotland is the prettiest place that he has seen, and his own native town of Edinburgh by far a more beautiful city than any in Britain or in this Dominion. father was an elder in the church of Scotland, and he has been an elder in the Presbyterian church of Canada for over forty years. When he first visited Montreal, in September, 1830, the steamboat landed its passengers on a mud bank, as there was no wharf there of any kind. When Mr. Ferrier first saw York in 1834, there was a pool at the corner of Yonge and King streets covered with green slime, and a nice little creek at the west end meandering through the town. The leading hotel was not exactly equal to the "Queen's." There was no decent road north of Dundas, and there wasn't a tree cut between Fergus and Owen Sound. Tempora mutantur et nos mutamur in illis! Colonel Ferrier was appointed a school commissioner for Nichol in 1836, then township superintendent in 1843, and in 1879 chairman of the school board for Fergus. He held the latter position for six years, when he declined re-election for the

Fitz-Gerald, Frederick Ardell.

o pto pH tili tatio bei ci

tic

ta

re: bo

th

at

hi

vil

set

ou

leg

bo:

wa.

yet

isn

Sic

 $\mathbf{U}_{\mathbf{p}}$ jou

gie

and

mo

was

in :

por the

upo

he d

of

dow

in 1

Che

of t

dou

gau

heca

Hya

187

for

trusteeship.

London, J.P. for the County of Middlesex, was born on October 16th, 1840, in the township of London, in the county just named, and is a son of the late John and Rebecca Fitz-Gerald, descendants of an ancient Irish family. Mr Fitz-Gerald's parents emigrated from Ireland to Canada in 1820, and settled in the township of London. They had a large family, and the subject of this sketch and five daughters survive them, all of whom are married and comfortably settled. F.A. Fitz-Gerald was educated in the public schools of the township and city of London, receiving there a solid English education. He was one of the builders of the London water works in 1878; and his firm, F. A. Fitz-Gerald & Co., purchased the debentures issued by the city for their construction. His connection with secret societies has been confined to the Masonic craft and to the order of Foresters. He has travelled over the greater part of Europe, visiting the chief places of historic note and interest there. In religion, he was brought up in the Methodist faith, and has been a regular attendant of that church all his life. He married Mary Edith, eldest daughter of Major Charles Jones, of the same county, and formerly of London, Ehgland; and has a family of three sons and one daughter. Mr. Fitz Gerald is a Liberal-Conservative in politics, and takes much interest in public questions. He began life in the grocery business, in the City of London, and by unremitting industry, by watchfulness and by ability built up a large trade, which is now conducted upon his own property, on Dundas street, known as the Fitz-Gerald block. This is one of the most handsome structures in the city. For the past fifteen years Mr. Fitz-Gerald's attention has been principally directed to petroleum oil operations; his far-sightedness and sound judgment having seen therein

a good field for operation. He is largely interested in oil refining; and is president and managing director of the Imperial Oil Refining Company, an immense concern, composed of a wealthy corporation of oil men. His firm of F. A. Fitz Gerald & Co. are largely interested in the production of crude oil, and it owns extensive and valuable oil producing property in Enniskillen, Lamb-Mr. Fitz-Gerald is likewise ton county. president of the Oil Refiners' Association. He is also president of the London Furniture Manufacturing Company, and through his superior business ability restored an establishment that was fast decaying to one of the most prosperous concerns in western Canada, giving employment to a large number of artisans. He is also associated, as director, with several other important financial, manufacturing and commercial institutions in Ontario; and, regarded in any and every light, may be set down as a representative Canadian.

Mercier, Hon. Honore, Q.C., Montreal, M.P.P. for St. Hyacinthe, Quebec, was born at Iberville in the above province, on the 15th October, 1840. His father was born at St. Pierre, Montmagny, and established himself at St. Athanase, and later at Iberville, of which place he was one of the first settlers. Honore Mercier received a thorough literary education at the Jesuit's College, Montreal; studied law with Laflamboise & Papineau (now both judges), and was admitted to practice in 1865. While yet a law student he embarked in journalism, and gave his support to the Macdonald-Sicotte Liberal administration of 1862. Upon his admission to the bar he dropped journalism for a time, and devoted his energies to his profession. His ardour, industry and natural abilities soon gave him a foremost place at the bar; and thenceforth he was a marked man. In 1871 he appeared in the political arena at Bagot, as a supporter of M. Langelier (later Hon. Francois), the Liberal candidate. The following year, upon the earnest solicitations of his friends, he offered himself for Rouville, in the House of Commons, and was elected. After the downfall of the Conservative government, in 1873, M. Mercier yielded his seat to M. Cheval, in 1874, to avoid dividing the vote of the Liberal party in the case of the redoubtable Conservative candidate, M. Gigault, and on retiring again to private life, hecame partner to Mr. Bourgeois, of St. Hyacinthe, now judge in Three Rivers. In 1878 M. Mercier was the Liberal candidate for the House of Commons for St. Hyacinthe, and lost his election by six votes. On the 3rd June, 1879, he was elected to the Legislative Assembly to represent St. Hyacinthe, with a majority of 307, and was admitted into the Joly administration as solicitor general, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the Hon. P. Bachand. He held this office till the administration went out of office in the same year. In 1881, M. Mercier left St. Hyacinthe for Montreal. where he still practises as a lawyer; and at the general provincial election of December, 1881, he was elected by acclamation for his old constituency. M. Mercier's life has been a very busy and an extremely useful one: and has been devoted in turn to journalism, law and politics, and sometimes to all three together. He is ever ready for duty, and when he strikes a blow it is invariably with an iron hand. He is a ready and effective speaker, a strong and brilliant writer, and an extremely capable lawyer. Although in political fight he strikes hard, he never "hits when down," or "below the belt," but is honourable and even generous with opponents. M. Mercier is a moderate Liberal, and he has never put party above his country, or his personal interests before the public good. He has a true and high appreciation of the beautiful and the true, and as L'Opinion Publique says "loves the world, notwithtanding its imperfection, and politics in spite of their annoyances. 1883 M. Mercier was chosen leader of the Liberal opposition in the Quebec Assembly, at the instance of the then leader, Mr. Joly and still holds that position. He married on the 29th May, 1866, Leopoldine Boivin. of St. Hyacinthe, but she died. He married again on May 9th, 1871, Virginie St. Denis, of the same city.

McGregor, James, Detroit, Michigan, was born in Scotland in 1830, from the good old McGregor stock, and came to Canada in 1855. He was in charge of some of the car shops of the Great Western Railway for a long period; but in 1860 was selected to look after the car shops of the Detroit & Milwaukee Railway at Detroit, as master car builder. Here he remained until 1869, when he resigned, to assume the superintendency of the large car building shops of the Michigan Car Company, at Detroit, and he is still connected with that company. Mr. McGregor has a full share of this world's goods, and has recently built a fine modern house, on Jefferson avenue, Detroit, where he and his family reside during the winter. In summer the household betake themselves to Mr. McGregor's beautiful riverside residence, Alta Vista Farm, St. Clair, one of the most picturesque situations on the whole of the St. Clair or Detroit rivers. Mr. McGregor has a family of four girls and two boys, the former being accomplished and charming young ladies, and the elder of the boys an active help to his father in superintending the large manufactory under his charge. Mr. McGregor is a great reader, has a contemplative mind of the Scotch type, and is a genuine angler. He is probably the most expert angler for bass and other game fish on our inland lakes and rivers.

Oswald, William Robert, Lieutenant-Colonel, commander of the Brigade of the Montreal Garrison Artillery, was born at Seabank, Aberdeenshire, Scotland, was educated at Bellevue House, and was actually, although some timer later, under the same masters as Sir Peter Lumsden, of Afghanistan fame. He is the descendant of an ancient family which has held an honoured place in the annals of not only Scotland but of England since the days of the Saxon Heptarchy. The derivation of the name is suggestive of its Anglo-Saxon origin, os, signifying, "man," and wald, "wood." The legend says that the founder of the Oswald family was the Earl, or petty king of Northumberland of those early days, who had three sons, one a soldier, the second a sailor, who founded a family in Fife, and the third a merchant, the ancestor of the Oswalds of Ayr. From the soldier sprang the Oswalds of Dunnikeer and the Oswalds of Auchencruive, families of distinction in the shire. The colonel's father married a daughter of Captain Mackenzie, of Frendville, Aberdeenshire, who belongs to an old and well-known Highland family. It will thus be seen that the subject of this sketch legitimately inherits his love for military life, which, no doubt, he would have embraced in early days had the opportunity offered, and like many cadets of noble Scotch families who in the past have "filled a page in story," either in the annals of their country or in those of many nations, where the wandering Scot, like Andrew Fairservice and the hero of Quentin Durward, as graphically portrayed by Sir Walter Scott, have taken into their service, along with their swords a shrewdness and sagacity that has raised them to the front rank. Colonel Oswald's lines, however, lay in the more pacific and profitable, if less romantic, paths of mercantile life, and in 1866 he sailed for Canada. He stopped here for a year and a half before going back to his native land, and returned shortly after with the agency of the Scottish Provident and the Scottish Fire Insurance Companies; settled in Monttreal, and is now of the firm of Oswald Brothers, stock brokers, 53 and 55 St. Francois Xavier street, general agents for the City of London Insurance Company, and one of the senior members of the Stock Exchange. In 1868 he entered the Garrison artillery, then commanded by Colonel Ferrier, who was succeeded by Colonel Henry McKay and he, in his turn, by Colonel Torrence Fraser, who was the predecessor of Colonel Oswald. The colonel, during the seventeen years since his entry into the regiment, has been connected with the service, and continuously in the Garrison artillery, with the exception of three years in the Field battery, returning to it to take command on June 24th, 1881. He found it in a most demoralized state, there not being fifty officers and men all told, but going energetically to work he soon raised it to the standard of 1870, when it marched. 300 strong, to the front during the Fenian Being a strict disciplinarian, he soon restored its former efficiency. At the time of the raid he was lieutenant of No. 6 Battery at Trout river, when his command was under fire. Lieutenant Oswald met with an adventure during this campaign which might have had a very serious ending. He proposed to Colonel Ferrier to visit the Fenian camp at Malone, in disguise. and ascertain the strength of the enemy. He managed matters as he thought very cleverly, but towards evening, finding that he was an object of suspicion, reported himself to General Hunt, who was in command of the United States troops sent to prevent the Fenians from crossing the bor-The lieutenant asked General Hunt how he knew he was a spy. "We have known it all day," was the reply, "though "We have you think you are so well disguised. We spotted you the moment you sat down at the table for breakfast, and next time you try your hand keep on your hat. We saw the diagonal mark of the forage cap across your forehead, the covered part being whiter than that exposed to the sun, and knew at once you were a British soldier." About twelve years ago he joined the Dominion Artillery Association, was its first life member, and took command of the first Canadian team to Shoeburyness in 1881, winning the Marquis of Lorne's prize in the contest, between England and Canada. He succeeded General Luard as president of the associate:

po

pr

M

of

tic

of

he

Ju

to

th

do

Nc

tw

ten

in

ma

Ge

late

in :

The

Ro

thr

sub

Par

dau

tha

of

the

ern

Brit

real

Os w

rebe

Imp

Osw

ter

of t

of (

M.P

towr

1840

Dry

land

take

Cour

of o

thro

den,

his n

of W

the.l

riff P

tion, which position he now holds. The reception of the English team last season was principally due to the encouragement he gave, and it was owing to him that the 40 lb. breech-loading Armstrong guns now in the possession of the Canadian artillery were procured through the medium of the minister of militia. The cup presented by the Marquis of Lorne is a handsome specimen of the silversmith's art, and bears an inscription to the effect that it was a special mark of approbation for the energy and judgment he had shown. It was his intention, last June, to have gone with the Canadian team to England, but that project, on account of the North-West troubles had to be abandoned, especially as some of the best men were going with the Montreal brigade to the North-West. Lieut.-Colonel Oswald has two brothers: the eldest served as a lieutenant in the Victoria Rifles at Pigeon Hill in 1870; was captain and adjutant commanding a troop of fifty-two scouts, under General Strange, at Fort Pitt, during the late rebellion, and now holds a commission in the Mounted Infantry Corps, Winnipeg. The younger brother was attached to the Royal engineers in Egypt, and passed all through the recent campaign there. Our subject has long been a member of St. Paul's Church, his wife's mother being the daughter of Dr. Black, the first pastor of that church. Colonel Oswald is a member of the Masonic craft. He has travelled on the continent of Europe, through the Southern States, and through Canada as far as The brigade of Mont-British Columbia. real artillery, under command of Colonel Oswald, served through the North-West rebellion campaign of 1885, receiving the Imperial war medal for this service. Colonel Oswald married Miss Greenshields, daughter of the late John Greenshields, founder of the old and well-known dry-goods firm of Greenshields, Son & Co.

Dryden, John, Brooklin, Ontario, M.P.P. for South Ontario, was born in the township of Whitby, on the 5th of June, 1840. His father was the late lamented James Dryden, who was born at Sunderland, England, in 1806, and while yet an infant was taken by his parents to Walsingham, in the County of Durham. There the grandfather of our subject soon after met his death through a fall from his horse. James Dryden, an only child, emigrated to Canada with his mother in 1820, settling in the township of Whitby. Here the widow married again the late William Paxton, father of Mr. Sheriff Paxton. James Dryden resided with his mother and stepfather until he came of age, when he settled on lot 27, 2nd concession of Whitby. Here he married and remained till 1832, when he bought 200 acres on lot 20, 7th concession, forming the old homestead of Maple Shade. Here Mr. Dryden lived, and prospered, and died; here he saw villages and manufactures, and industries opening up, and the establishment of schools and villages, though when he first took up his residence there, the neighbourhood was a primeval wilderness. He was created a justice of the peace, and was a member of the old district council, when Ontario, York and Peel were united: He afterwards represented the township of Whitby, as reeve in the county council of Ontario. He held most of the municipal offices in the township, and was a director of the Bank of Ontario for many years, and was president of the Port Whitby and Port Perry Railway Company. He married three times; first, Abile Groat, by whom he had one child, still living. Some years later (1835), he married Elizabeth, daughter of the Rev. William Marsh, Baptist clergyman, and by this lady, there are four surviving children, one of whom is the subject of this sketch; another, George, manager and chief proprietor of the manufacturing firm of Paxton, Tate & Co., Port Perry; he married, a third time, Mary Stephenson, but she died without issue. John Dryden at first attended the common school, and concluded his studies at the Whitby High School. At the age of nineteen, he left school, and two years afterwards, having a desire for agricultural pursuits, rented the farm of his father, and since that time has remained on the old homestead, the property coming fully into his possession upon the death of his father. We may say that since assuming control of this fine property, he has enlarged and improved it, until now the estate consists of about 400 acres. He is captain of a company of Ontario county militia, and has always taken an interest in our volunteer corps. He was elected to the township council of Whitby, and held that position for a number of years, and he was subsequently elected reeve of the township by acclamation, being re-elected the two terms following, after which he withdrew from the office. He was likewise elected a school trustee, and this position he still holds, taking a deep interest always in educational work. In 1879, he was elected by the large majority of nearly 400 voters to represent the riding of South Ontario in the Local Assembly, and was re-elected in 1883, and still retains his seat in the House. He was a director and shareholder of the Lindsay and Port Perry Railway, up to the time of its amalgamation with the Grand Trunk; is a member and has been for a number of years president of the County of Ontario Agricultural Society; is president of the Dominion Short Horn Breeders Association; is a director of the American Clydesdale Association, and the Shropshire Sheep Association of the United States. He has always taken an active interest in agricultural matters. In politics he is a Liberal, and is one of the leading members of the Reform Association. His travels have been extensive, he having visited a good deal of Canadian territory, the United States and Great Britain. He is a Baptist; is president of the Baptist Union of Canada, and director of the Home Mission Society of Ontario in connection with that church. He married on the 13th of February, 1866, Mary Lydia, daughter of Thomas Holman, of the City of New York, a well-known publisher there, and has by this union six children. He is a man of remarkable energy, and of splendid business abilities. As a member of the legislature, he is active, and awake to all important matters coming before that House. His good judgment and his high repute gave him a prominent standing in the Assembly, and his constituency is to be congratulated upon being represented by so influential a man.

Wilkie, Daniel, M.A., Quebec.—The deceased Mr. Wilkie was born at Craignethan, County of Lanark, Scotland, on the 9th of November, 1815, and came to Canada in 1826, to reside with his uncle, the late Rev. Daniel Wilkie, LL.D., of Quebec city. [See life of Rev. Dr. Wilkie, page 420 After completing his education, he engaged for some time in mercantile pursuits, in the office of the late Hon. James Leslie, and subsequently joined the staff of the High School, of which his uncle was principal, and to which position he was afterwards appointed. Mr. Wilkie was a man of recognized abilities, but still more remarkable for his unceasing and laborious pursuit of knowledge. He devoted himself heart and soul to his profession as a teacher, bringing his stores of general information to bear on every subject which he taught. He possessed in an eminent degree those qualities of head and heart which fit one for successfully imparting knowledge to others, aud when it is added that he was a man of deep religious conviction and feeling, an earnest Christian, "ever striving in all things to adorn the doctrine of Christ, his Saviour," it need not be wondered at that the religious and moral influence of his character left an indelible impress for good upon his pupils. He was a man of warm sympathies, and of a kind and benevolent disposition, never failing to enlist the sympathy of his scholars, so that they were all eager to please him, by assiduous attention to their studies. There are many of his old pupils holding prominent positions throughout the Dominion, who remember with gratitude his zealous efforts for their advancement, and gratefully and affectionately cherish his memory. He was for many years the leading elder in St. Andrew's Church, Quebec; a faithful, zealous superintendent of the Sabbath school, taking a leading and prominent part in every Christian work in the city. Few men have led a more happy and contented life. The fruit of the Spirit was visible in his daily life and conversation, and it may truly be said of him, "Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright, for the end of that man is peace." The degree of M.A. was conferred upon Mr. Wilkie by McGill Univer-During his lifetime, Mr. Wilkie held the position of governor of Morrin College, in which institution he took a very lively interest, and was also a prominent member of the Quebec Literary and Historical Society. He died at Quebec, on the 10th of April, 1876, and was buried in Mount Her-He died at Quebec, on the 10th of mon Cemetery, on the banks of the St. Lawrence, where repose the ashes of a good many Scotchmen who have made their influence for good felt in Canada. Mr. Wilkie was married to Angelique Graddon. daughter of the late John Graddon, of Quebec, a descendant of the Cartier family, who were amongst the earliest French settlers in Quebec province. Mrs. Wilkie still The fruit of the union was four survives. sons and one daughter. The eldest surviving son, D. R. Wilkie, now resides in Toronto, and occupies the prominent position of cashier of the Imperial Bank.

y ca p sl hi hi at

 $\mathbf{t}\mathbf{h}$

te

H

 \mathbf{th}

th

fu

co

pe se

ca

mi

Ar

801 vig

qu

tra

tha

 $\mathbf{w}\mathbf{h}$

ove

pov

bοι

no

800

him

our

Mr.

the tion

mer

con

On,

offic

Pardee, Hon. Timothy Blair, Sarnia, Q.C., M.PP. for West Lambton, Commissioner of Crown Lands for the Province of Ontario, Bencher of the Law Society, was born in the County of Grenville, Ontario, on the 11th December, 1830. He is a son of A. B. Pardee and Jane Elliott, both deceased, and his paternal grandfather came originally to Canada from the Eastern States. Hon. Mr. Pardee's father was, during his life-time, a very prominent Son of Temperance, and for two years, 1864 and 1865, occupied the honorable position of Most Worthy Associate of the National Division of North America. Timothy Blair Pardee received his early educational training in his native county; but he afterwards attended school at Brockville. where he completed his course. in the latter town that he began the study of law, entering the office of the Hon. William Buel Richards, afterwards chief justice of Canada. Before his studies were concluded, however, young Pardee, like many other adventurous spirits, became possessed of the western gold fever, and suddenly leaving the office he set out for California. Here he spent two years; and then bent his steps to the still more alluring gold fields of Australia, where the next five years of his life were spent. He now became convinced that "searching for gold in pebble and clay" was not necessarily the shortest road to fortune, and a wider and a higher ambition entering his mind he turned his face towards his native land. Settling at Sarnia, Ontario, he resumed his reading of law, and finished the prescribed course in the office of Joshua Adams. At Hilary term, 1861, he was called to the bar, and has since practised his profession at Sarnia. He very speedily attracted attention among the legal confraternity, for he had almost all the qualities that go to make up the successful advocate. In the first place he was courteous and hearty in his manner, so that personal popularity at the very outset was secured. Then he was cautions, deliberating carefully over a matter before making up his mind, and this was a trait almost priceless. And when he arose to speak, he always had something to say; and what he had to say was put in a terse, straight-forward, and vigorous manner. But better than all these qualities, he was exceedingly swift in penetration and in discrimination, and revealed that thorough insight into human character which gives the lawyer so much influence over juries, and invests every man with a power over his fellow-men. He had unbounded energy, and an industry that knew no flagging; and it is not strange that he soon had established a foremost place for himself in his profession. Nearly all of our able lawyers turn to politics; and Mr. Pardee had to be in the fashion. At the first general election after confederation, he was elected to the Ontario parliament for West Lambton, and has since continued to represent that constituency. On October 25th, 1872, he accepted the office of Provincial Secretary in the Reform government, which portfolio he held until December 4th, 1873, when he became Commissioner of Crown Lands. In the administration of the affairs of this important department, Mr. Pardee has displayed marked vigour and ability; and to these facts even his opponents sometimes are obliged to bear testimony. From what had been known of Mr. Pardee as a lawyer, it might be expected that he would make his mark in parliament. This he has done, but he has not accomplished it in the way adopted by lesser men. Some of our politicians believe that the road to public distinction consists in talk; and that the greatest and most glorious thing that a legislator can do is to make a speech. But this does not seem to be Mr. Pardee's view. He seldom "airs" himself upon the floor of the house, but when he does arise he has something to say. His characteristics as a debater are lucidity, vigour and point; and there is always present manifest evidence of his tact. He is a man of marked parliamentary influence, and he is able to command "the ear" of the opposite side of the house as well as his own. It goes without saying, that, in general politics he is a Liberal. He married Emma K., daughter of J. K. Forsyth, of Sombra, Lambton county, Ontario, and has by this lady six children.

e

Himsworth, William Alfred, late Clerk of the Queen's Privy Council of Canada, was born at Montreal, on the 28th of August, 1820. He is the eldest son of William Himsworth, merchant and ship owner, from Berwick-on-Tweed, and Christina Agnes, daughter of the late Major Lynch, of Halifax, Nova Scotia, who was descended from U. E. loyalist stock. Mr. Himsworth served as clerk in the Commissariat from 1838 to 1842. He was called to the bar of Lower Canada in 1841; appointed clerk in the Executive Council office in 1843, and assistant clerk of the Council in 1851. He was sworn in as clerk of the Privy Council on the 1st July, 1872; acted as secretary to the Confederate council on commercial treaties, which sat in Quebec in 1864; was deputy governor for signing letters patent for Dominion lands; commissioner Dedimus Potestatem; commissioner in Queen's Bench for Ontario and Quebec, and a J.P. for the County of Carl-Mr. Himsworth married, in 1844, Louisa Morrison, by whom he had two sons and two daughters. The eldest of the family, William, is secretary of the Inland Revenue department at Ottawa. Mr. Himsworth died in January, 1880.

Muir, William Ker, Detroit, General Manager of the Canada Southern Railway, was born at Kilmarnock, Avrshire, Scotland, on the 20th March, 1829; and is descended on his mother's side from the Howies, Covenanters, of Lochgoyne. When a youth, attending school, he displayed a taste for railroad and mechanical engineering, and had also a leaning for surgery. The latter part of each school-day was spent in an engineering establishment, and there his genius for that profession was quickened and developed. There he acquired that knowledge of mechanical work which proved of such value to him in the great undertakings which the future had in store for him. Upon severing his connection with this establishment, he obtained a position in the parcel and ticket office of the Glasgow and South Western Railway, serving through all the grades of railroad employment, in the parcel, ticket, passenger and freight offices. Early and late he worked on and off the trains, acquiring a knowledge of every form of railroad work. We learn that in the course of a few years he was promoted to an important position in the engineer and manager's office. Here he served creditably for several years, when he accepted a responsible position in the service of an English railway company. When connected with this company, C. J. Brydges, then managing director of the Great Western Railway of Canada, offered him a position on the latter railroad, which he accepted, and at once left for Canada. October, 1852, he assumed the duties of his new position before the first section of the railway between Niagara Falls and Hamilton was opened. Mr. Muir assisted in opening the line for traffic, remaining in the service of the company until about He was then sent to Detroit to assume the management of the Detroit and Milwaukee Railway, in the completion of which to Lake Michigan the Great Western Company had taken a large pecuniary inter-Under the management of Mr. Muir this railroad was completed in its entire length; was thoroughly equipped with rolling stock; secured two magnificent steamships to ply on Lake Michigan between the western terminus of the road, Grand Haven and Milwaukee. For passenger and freight accommodation the condition of the road was made the very best. In December, 1865 Mr. Muir resigned his position to accept the office of assistant general superintendent of the Michigan Central Railroad, under R. N. Nice, then general superintendent. So ably did he perform the duties of that office that, after a few years, the Great Western Railway Company offered him the office of general superintendent, which he Under his control this line became one of the best equipped in the country, and a general improvement in the management of its business soon became conspicuous. He changed it from the Canadian broad 5 feet $6\frac{1}{2}$ in. gauge to the American narrow gauge of 4 feet $8\frac{1}{2}$ inches; added new narrow-gauge rolling stock, and equipped it thoroughly as a connecting link between the western and eastern railway systems. This task completed, he again assumed the superintendence of the Detroit and Milwaukee road, but immediately afterwards retired to accept the management of the new railroad through Canada, with its branches on the American side, known as the Canada Southern Railway lines. He has since been general manager of this road. and under his wisdom, the length and extent of his experience, and his splendid business capacity, this thoroughfare has become one of the very best on the continent. It is a fact that the passenger trains over this line make faster time than is accomplished upon any other road on the American continent.

Keefer, Samuel, Civil Engineer, Brockville, Ont., was born at Thorold, in the Niagara District, about eight miles from the Niagara Falls, on the 22nd January, He is the fourth son of George Keefer, of Thorold, and Catherine Lampman, who were married on the 5th of February, 1797, and who had five sons and four daughters. In the year 1859, at the request of the Rev. (afterwards the Right Rev.) T. B. Fuller, his son furnished him with the following particulars in relation to the Keefer family, which he had derived from his father before his death. His grandfather, Samuel Keefer, the great-grandfather of the subject of this sketch, lived in Alsace, near the City of Strasburg, then a province of France, but now a part of the German empire. After his death, his widow married Frederick Saverine, and came to America with her son, George Keefer, when he was only ten years old. This George Keefer in 1768, married Mary Maria Conke, of Philadelphia, by whom he had two sons, George and Jacob, and one daughter, Mary. George the eldest son, was born at a place called Pepper Cotton, in the County of Essex, in the then province, now State of New Jersey, on the 8th November, 1783. On the breaking out of the great rebellion (or revolution foo hat a t Ind Nia The He gra incl The tak 181 in t ran batt Mu war men whil feve thir cont

of

hi

ed

ar

of

clo

ing

sla

me

wif

pel

rul

sadldid in fatook proves spiriliam of the president of th at Th 85th daugh of Gr U. E. at Gr ary wa from they scender to Camemb of 1776, as the historians prefer to call it), his father, George Keefer, the elder, espoused the foyal cause, and served in the King's army under Sir William Howe, until he died of a fever contracted during the war. At the close of the war, all his property, comprising two farms, a distillery, and one female slave, was confiscated by the new government, and his two sons, George and Jacob, with their widowed mother, were compelled to seek another home under British rule in Canada. They made their way on foot from New Jersey, through a thinly inhabited country, and in some parts through a trackless wilderness, guided only by an Indian trail of blazed trees, and crossing the Niagara river, proceeded to the township of Thorold, then an almost unbroken forest. Here, in 1798, the Provincial government granted him 400 acres of land, which now includes the beautiful site of the town of Thorold, through which the Welland canal takes its course. During the American war of 1812 he served in the defence of the country in the 2nd Regiment of Lincoln, with the rank of captain, and was present at the battles of Chippewa and Lundy's Lane. Much of his time was taken up during the war on outpost duty, watching the move-ments of the enemy on the frontier. It was while so employed that his wife contracted a fever, of which she died in July, 1813, in the thirtyfifth year of her age. While the war continued, his farm and other affairs were sadly neglected, but as peace returned so did order and prosperity. He was engaged in farming, milling, and merchandise, and took a leading part in all works for the im-provement of the country. Actuated by this spirit he took part with the Honorable William Hamilton Merritt in the construction of the Welland canal, and was the first president of the Welland Canal Company, before that great work was assumed by the government. In I815 he married Jane Emery née McBride, of Niagara, by whom he had five sons and one daughter. He died at Thorold, on the 26th June, 1858, in the 85th year of his age. His first wife was the daughter of Peter and Elizabeth Lampman, of Grantham, who, like the Keefer's, were U. E. loyalists, and took up their residence at Grantham, at the close of the revolutionary war. The Lampmans came originally from Hanover, in Germany. In religion, they and the Keefer's were Lutheran, descended from the Hugenots; but in coming to Canada they naturally became staunch members of the Church of England. The German name of Kieffer, meaning cooper in

at.

he

 \mathbf{he}

n-

he

ne

he

hd

nk

hit

of

ts

as

Нe

d,

nt

88

is

 \mathbf{d}

English, has been retained by the branch of the family in the United States (c.g. Speaker Kieffer. U. S. senate), but in Canada it has been anglicised and spelled as pronounced "Keefer." Not inheriting a taste for military pursuits, Samuel Keefer never held any rank in the militia service, but when the Trent affair threatened war with the United States, he underwent, in Quebec, a course of drill as full private in the Civil Service regiment, then first established. He was elected member of the institution of Civil Engineers, London, England, on the 11th March, 1860; has been a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, New York, from 6th January, 1869; a member of the Canadian Institute, Toronto, from its first establishment, and has been a Fellow of the Royal Colonial Institute, London, since 1875. Mr. Keefer was appointed secretary of the Board of Canal Commissioners for the improvement of the navigation of the River St. Lawrence, in 1883; and on the commencement of the construction of the Cornwall canal in 1834, under John B. Mills, he was made his assistant, and continued afterwards an assistant engineer on that canal, under his successor, Lieutenant-Colonel Phillpots, up to 1839. In 1839 he was appointed secretary to the Board of Works, then established for Lower Canada under on ordinance of the Special Council of the province and upon the union of the two provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, in 1841, and the establishment of a board of works for the two provinces, he was appointed engineer to that board on the 17th He filled the position of August, 1841. chief engineer to the department of Public Works for thirteen years, from 1841 to 1853, but for three years of this time, 1846-7-8, he was placed locally in charge of the Welland canal, to complete the enlargement begun under Samuel Power, C.E., who had resigned. In 1852 he made a survey for the Sault St. Marie canal, on the Canadian shore, for the Canadian government, but the work was never undertak-The works constructed under the department during the first decade of the union, were of the most varied character, consisting of canals, roads, bridges, slides, harbours and lighthouses. He personally surveyed and established the line of the Beauharnois canal, the first enlargement of the Lachine canal, and the locks and dams at St. Anne's and St. Our's, and directed their construction. Amongst his works special mention may be made of the solid timber lock gates which he introduced for the first time on the St. Lawrence canals in 1850, in place of the more costly framed gates previously in use. The adoption of these gates, constructed after his plans, has proved a signal benefit in promoting the safely and economy of navigation. beautiful suspension bridge over the Chaudiere at Ottawa, the first of the kind in Canada, was amongst the earliest of his engineering triumphs, having been completed as early as 1844. In 1853 he resigned his position under the government, to take the more lucrative situation of resident engineer on a division of the Grand Trunk Railway, under A. M. Ross, the chief engineer. In that capacity he finally established the line between Montreal and Kingston, which he had previously surveyed for the government, and remained in the service of the company to personally superintend its construction. At the same time, by a minute hydrographic survey of the River St. Lawrence, in front of Montreal city, he fixed the line of the Victoria bridge where it now stands. He also projected the high level bridges over the Ottawa at St. Anne's, and over the Rideau canal at Kingston Mills. At the first opening of this section for traffic, he for a short time, superintended this division, until he returned once more to the government service. During this time he was also supervising engineer of the Brockville and Ottawa Railway, acting on behalf of the company and the municipalities, and in that capacity directed the location of the line, and determined the character of the works. Mr. Keefer was appointed government inspector of railways under the Accidents on Railways Act of 1857, and held that position for seven years. After having made a personal inspection of every line of railway then existing in Canada, and put in force the provisions of that act for the greater safety of travel, the duties of deputy commissioner of Public Works were added to those of Inspector of Railways, and he continued to fill both offices until 1864, when he retired from the public service to his private residence in Brockville. As deputy commissioner of Public Works, he was charged as his first duty, in the absence of the chief commissioner, with the selection of the plans for the public buildings at Ottawa, which had been previously advertised for. His report upon these plans was approved by His Excellency in Council in 1859, and the works were forthwith begun under his direction. It was by his arrangement that the three handsome blocks of buildings were disposed as they now stand on three sides of the square on Parliament Since his retirement from official life, Mr. Keefer has been engaged in the private practice of his profession, taking an interest in local manufactures and joint stock companies, and occasionally serving the government on commissions. In 1869. he completed for the Bridge Company that magnificent triumph of engineering skill, the suspension bridge, at Niagara Falls, of 1268 feet span, at that time the longest single span bridge in the world, and only now excelled by the great Brooklyn bridge. For his plan and account of this gigantic and masterly work sent to the Paris Exposition of 1878. he received the diploma and gold medal of that exhibition, awarded to him by a jury of engineers. A detailed account of this work was published in Engineering in 1859. In November, 1870, Mr. Keefer was appointed secretary to the Canal Commission, of which Sir Hugh Allan was chair-Their report, prepared under Mr. Keefer's directions, was laid before parliament in February, 1871. In 1872 he made a survey of the Baie Verte canal for the government, and his reports and plans approved by his colleague, Colonel Gzowski, were submitted to the minister of Public Works, on the 18th February, 1873. On the 16th June, 1880, he was appointed one of the members of the Royal Commission, along with Judge Clarke and E. Miall, to enquire into "the conduct and prosecution of the Canadian Pacific Railway from its inception to the present time." Their report, dated 8th April, 1882, was laid before parliament, together with two bulky volumes of evidence taken in the course of the enquiry, and has prevented further parliamentary enquiry on the subject. The Dufferin bridge at Ottawa, and the widening of the old Sapper's bridge, in the same city, were completed by him in 1875. Mr. Keefer has been a staunch Conservative all through his life. He was brought up in the tenets of the Church of England, and is an active member of that body still; and is a delegate both to the Diocesan and provincial synods, and has been on the Mission Board for the diocese of Ontario for many years. Mr. Keefer has been twice married; first, to Anne E, second daughter of the Honorable George Crawford, senator, and sister to His Honour John Crawford, late lientenant-governor of Ontario. She died in January, 1876, leaving no children. He married a second time in December, 1883, Rosalie E., eldest daughter of Captain C. A. B. Pocock, R. N., then living at

Broc recor years great servi mon old (prom Duri officia has Catha and i and h win, He is all his Di ator. on th of R. senta years, 1851. of Ma rents from land; land. sented ants o county tury, ter, H the fa R. Mc lem o Kings " Wel educat emies, ago, Latin. of mod College an offs many to thei brough work, i had on now th stances longer and at articled Vice-A practiti

ed six

adınissi

Brockville. It will be seen from this brief record that Mr. Keefer has devoted the best years of an active life, and the whole of his great genius and engineering skill to the service of his native country; and in such monuments of his ability, he has left traces in old Canada as must long keep his name a prominent one in the history of our country. During the period of his official life and official connection with the government he has resided at Kingston, Montreal, St. Catharines, Quebec, Toronto and Ottawa, and in all these places he is widely known, and has won what even kings have failed to win, "love, honour and troops of friends." He is kindly in heart, manly, and frank in all his dealings.

nt

 \mathbf{a}^{t}

8 le

s-

d

m

ug er

Dickey, Hon. Robert Barry, Senator, Amherst, Nova Scotia, was born there on the 10th November, 1811. He is a son of R. McGowan Dickey, who was a representative for Cumberland county for fifteen years, until his voluntary retirement in 1851. His mother was Eleanor, daughter of Major Thomas Chapman. Both his parents are dead. His father's parents came from County Antrim, in the north of Ireland; his mother's from Yorkshire, England. Both families are still largely represented in these counties; and the descendants of those who emigrated to Cumberland county in the middle of the eighte-nth century, abound in it now, as well as in Colchester, Hants, and Kings, Nova Scotia. Among the family was William Dickey, father of R. McGowan Dickey, who solved the problem of reclaiming vast tracts of marsh in Kings county, by building the celebrated "Wellington aboiteau." R. B. Dickey was educated at the Truro and Windsor academies, in the usual formula of sixty years ago, viz., English, grammar, arithmetic, Latin, and Greek, there being no professors of modern languages in those days. King's College, Windsor, of which the academy was an offshoot, has more recently sent forth many men whose careers have done honour to their alma mater. Young Dickey was brought up at home in early life to do farm work, in a scattered country district, which had only one place of public worship, where now there are thirteen. His father's circumstances precluded the son from remaining longer than three and a half years at school, and at the early age of fifteen Robert was articled to the late Judge Stewart, of the Vice-Admiralty Court, then a successful practitioner at Amherst, with whom he served six years before attaining legal age for period he walked daily six miles to and from the office, except on stormy days, when he was privileged to ride on horseback. He was called to the bar in January, 1834, and succeeded to the lucrative practice in the office where he had studied, and carried on the same until he had attained a competency, ten years ago, when he retired from active practice, his predecessor's success having followed him. While engaged in practice he took part in all the leading cases: and was made a Q.C. in 1863. Ever since his admission to the bar he has lived in the town of Amherst, three miles from his birth-place, resisting pressing inducements to remove. Mr. Dickey holds the rank of lieutenant of militia, to which he was appointed in 1835. He has been registrar, surrogate, and judge of probate for twentyone years; was U.S. consular agent at Amherst for twenty years; served many years as director of the N. S. U. Telegraph Company; was twice selected as delegate to New York to negotiate leases of lines to the American and Western Union companies: and was subsequently sent to effect a sale of the company's property to the Western Union, which was accomplished at a premium, and proved a boon to the shareholders and the public. In 1858 and 1865 he visited the Colonial office as a delegate of the Nova Scotian government, at his own expense, on the subject of the Intercolonial Railway. In 1864 he attended, as a delegate from Nova Scotia, the Charlottetown and Quebec Union conferences, and was the only one of thirty-three delegates who declined. while in favour of union, to subscribe to the Quebec resolutions, on the ground that the financial terms were not fair to the Maritime provinces. These being largely modified in London, where he was not asked to attend. he supported the union resolutions in the Nova Scotia Legislative Council. He was called to that body in January, 1858, and continued a member till confederation, when he was appointed to the Senate by Royal proclamation. While in the Legislative Council, he defeated the Synod Bill, introduced by the Bishop of Nova Scotia, and carried the Substitute Act, under which this church has been working for years; secured the present Joint Stock Companies Act; and was largely instrumental in effecting arrangements for the transfer of Nova Scotia coal areas to the government a quarter of a century ago. Senator Dickey is a shareholder in the Amherst Boot and Shoe Factory. still in successful operation; was associated admission as an attorney. During this long | with others in the Spring Hill Mining Company, the largest and most productive coal mine in Nova Scotia, from 1865 to 1883, when it was sold to the Cumberland Coal and Railway Company, of Montreal. has travelled extensively in England, Scotland, Ireland, France, Belgium, and Switzerland, in the various provinces of the Dominion, and in eleven states of the American Altogether, he has crossed the Atlantic thirty times. In religion he has been a Presbyterian from youth up. In politics he is a Conservative, but advocates economy and retrenchment in the administration of public affairs, especially in the number and salaries of office-holders. In legislation he judges every question upon its merits, without reference to party. He married, on the 10th October, 1844, Mary Blair, third daughter of Hon. Alexander Stewart, C.B., There are issue of this of Scottish descent. marriage three sons and two daughters, all of whom are married except the youngest The senator is of fair complexion, derived from his father's side, tall and erect from his mother's Yorkshire ancestry; and he is devoted to travel, music, and the fine

O'Reilly, Gerald, Fergus, M.D., C.M., M.C.P.S.O., was born at Hamilton, Ontario, on 7th of February, 1858. He is a son of Gerald O'Reilly, by his wife, Henrietta Waters. His father, Gerald O'Reilly, graduated in medicine at Trinity College, Dublin, in 1828, and became a member of the Royal College of Surgeons, Ireland, in the same year. He practiced medicine in Hamilton from 1835 to the time of his death in 1861, and was the leading medical practitioner in Hamilton during his day. life, it may be added, was shortened by over work. Dr. John O'Reilly, an uncle of the subject of this sketch, was one of the best known physicians in New York city, where, from his practice, he accumulated a large fortune. He was a fellow of the Royal College of Surgeons, Ireland, and an honorary member of several European medical societies. Dr. O'Reilly, of Fergus, has three brothers, Dr. Charles O'Reilly, medical superintendent of the Toronto General Hospital; Dr. E. B. O'Reilly, surgeon on one of the Allan steamships, and H.H. O'Reilly, manager of the Bank of Hamilton at Listowel. It is interesting to note that a great uncle of our subject, Dr. Hugh O'Reilly, was confidential surgeon of George IV., and has a tablet erected to his memory by that sovereign, in St. George's Chapel, Windsor. Gerald O'Reilly was instructed till his tenth year by a family governess; he then entered the Grammar School at Simcoe, Ontario, and afterwards attended the Hamilton Collegiate Institute. At the age of fifteen he matriculated in medicine; in 1873 entered Trinity Medical School, Toronto, and graduated from that institution in 1879, taking the degree of M.D., C.M. He also became a member of the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario in the same year. Dr. O'Reilly is an office-bearer of St. James' Episcopal Church at Fergus. He is vice-president of the Fergus Club; was president of the Fergus Turf Club in 1884: and has held the position of president and vice-president in several other sporting and athletic associations. He has always taken an active interest in sporting matters, and has given encouragement to healthful out-door exercises and recreations. He became a member of Mercer lodge, No. 347, A. F. & A. M., Fergus, in 1885; and is a member of the Conservative Association for Centre Welington. It is hardly necessary to add that he has always been a staunch supporter of Sir John A. Macdonald, and of his measures of public policy. Dr. O'Reilly has travelled extensively through the United States and Europe, and "walked" the hospitals in London, England. He entered into partnership in January, 1881, with Dr. George T. Orton, M, P., Fergus, and remained associated with that gentleman for one year, when he bought the practice. He has now one of the largest practices in the County of Wellington, and his professional popularity is every day on the increase. Dr. O'Reilly was senior resident assistant house surgeon to the Toronto Hospital during 1879 and 1880; and he had also previously acted as medical assistant in the Hamilton and Guelph Hospitals. Dr. 0'-Reilly is unmarried,

 \mathbf{E}_{1}

an

M

ca:

se

of

in

wi

cu:

we

bei

ar

age

far

the

Car

he

In

hol

ren

dur

low

left

gro

bus

eral

tere

Hе

ness

beer

and

trad

grai

each

He

deal

port

mar

In 1

batta

1874

Bran

vear

the t

years

havii

ner i

and

mem

Work

In po

the]

held t

alway

form,

His

includ

Euror

Macbeth, John, Lieutenant-Colonel, London, Ont., was born in 1836, in the Red River Settlement, North-West territory. He is a son of George and Catherine (Sutherland) Macbeth, both of whom were natives of Kildonan, Sutherlandshire, Scotland, and who were among the early pioneers of the Selkirk settlement. John Macbeth studied for the legal profession in the office of the late H. C. R. Becher, Q.C., London, and was called to the bar in 1859. He joined the first volunteers in 1854, and maintained his connection with the same, save for a slight interval, until 1878, when he resigned, retaining his rank. He was appointed deputy-clerk of the Crown and registrar of the Surrogate Court for Middlesex in 1860, which office he still holds.

Milner, Thomas, Brampton, Ontario, was born in 1840, near Thirsk, Yorkshire, England. He is a son of William Milner and Elizabeth Storey, also of Yorkshire. Mrs. Milner died in 1846. William Milner came to Canada about the year 1855, and settled in the township of Puslinch, County of Wellington, where he engaged in farming. in which occupation he continued up to within a few years of his death, which occurred in 1881. By the first marriage there were three sons, the subject of this sketch being the eldest. Thomas Milner received a national education in England, and at the age of eleven left school, and engaged in He remained so occupied until the date of his emigration with his father to Canada in 1855. After arriving in Canada he engaged in farming for about four years. In 1860 he entered the employ of K. Chisholm & Co. as clerk in Brampton, and remained with them for thirteen years, during which time he advanced from the lowest rung of the ladder up, and when he left he occupied the highest position in the grocery department. In 1873 he commenced business for himself in Brampton as a general grocer, and in the following year entered extensively into the produce trade. He has ever since continued in this business, and from year to year the same has been increasing and growing more popular and profitable. In 1881 he extended his trade to outside places, beginning to buy grain, at Georgetown and Malton, and at each place establishing large warehouses. He also purchased extensively from other dealers in wheat, barley and peas, for export, disposing of such produce in the markets of the United States and England. In 1862, Mr. Milner joined the 36th Peel battalion, and was corporal of the same. In 1874 he was elected to the town council of Brampton, and continued to sit for some six years, when in 1880 he was elected reeve of the town, which position he held for the years 1881 and 1882, and is now mayor, having been elected last January. Mr. Milner is a Freemason, Ionic lodge, No. 229, and is pastmaster of the same; he is a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen; and has also been an Oddfellow. In politics, he is a Liberal; is president of the Reform Association of Peel; and has held that office for four years. He has been always an active worker in the cause of reform, taking a leading part in all elections. His travels have been considerable, and include Canada, the United States, and Europe. He travelled extensively in Eng-

Sim-

the

e of

873

nto,

B79,

also

e of

the

arer

gus.

was

84;

and

and

an

has loor

. &

ber

ıtre

add

rter

ea-

has

ted

the

red Dr.

re-

for He

the

nal

se.

ant

the

el,

ted

th

land, Scotland and France, visiting all points of interest, for the two-fold objects of pleasure and information. Mr. Milner is a Methodist, and a prominent member of the Queen Street Methodist Church of Brampton; is a class leader and a local preacher; and a member of the building committee of the new church now being erected at a cost of some $35,000. He has been superintendent of the Sunday-school for some ten years, and is secretary of the quarterly He married first in 1863, Sarah board. Ann, second daughter of the late Joseph Hodgson and Mary Hodgson, who is still living in Brampton. He had by this mar-riage one son. Mrs. Milner died in 1867, and he again married in 1869, Jane Hodgson, fifth daughter of Joseph and Mary Hodgson, and sister of his deceased wife. By this lady he has had three sons and three daughters. The two eldest are dead. The son by the first marriage, William Edward Milner, is manager of his father's business in Georgetown; and the Malton business is managed by his youngest brother, W. H. Milner. Mr. Milner attends closely to his business, and by such attention, and by his fine natural abilities has acquired a handsome competency. Unaided by any outside help, he has, by his own indomitable will and determination to succeed, seen himself rise, step by step, to the "top of the tree" in the mercantile trade. Few men in the history of our times have had so much to contend with as Mr. Milner in achieving this eminence. His early education in Engand was received under serious disadvantages, he having only such time to gain knowledge as his circumstances would al-What he afterwards obtained in Canada was thoroughly practical. However, as we have said, he surmounted everything, and although still a man young in years, he is invariably consulted in enterprises, financial and otherwise, for his experience is wide and ripe, his judgment sound, and his peneetration quick and accurate. Altogether, the career of Mr. Milner has been a credit and a decided gain to the community with whom he has been brought into contact.

Sippi, George Buckley, London, was born at Rajkoot, Bombay, East Indies, on March 10th, 1847. [For his family lineage see memoir of Charles Augustus Sippi, elsewhere in these pages.] G. B. Sippi was educated at the endowed school, Youghal, County Cork, Ireland; at Queen's College, Cork, one of the affiliated colleges of the Royal University of Ireland), and studied music under John A. Sippi, organist of Lismore cathedral, and under Dr. Marks, of Manchester, England. After pursuing a course of musical studies for several years, he hegan the study of anatomy and medicine at the Queen's College, Cork, where he remained four years. At an early age, he had learned to play the violin, organ and piano; with the former instrument he excelled, and, while yet a boy, he played some of the most difficult solos at leading concerts in Ireland. He likewise played first violin in orchestra at two of the Triennial Handel Festivals held in the Crystal Palace at London. G. B. Sippi came to Canada in 1870, as teacher of music at Hellmuth College,-the Right Rev. Dr. Sweatman, the present bishop of Toronto, being then head master-and as organist of the Protestant Cathedral of the Holy Trinity, London. This position he held until 1876. Six months of that period he spent at Montreal, on the invitation of Rev. Canon Dumoulin, as organist and choirmaster of St. Martin's Church; but not caring to reside permanently in that city, he was requested by Bishop Hellmuth to return to Hellmuth College. On the invitation of Dean Boomer, he again took the position of organist of Holy Trinity. In 1876 he was appointed organist and choirmaster of St. Paul's Cathedral, London, which position he now holds. Mr. Sippi left India in 1854, and went to Ireland with his father, living in Ireland and England until 1870. He is a member of Kilwinning lodge, No. 64, G.R.C.; and a member of the executive committee of the Ontario He is un-Music Teachers' Association. married.

Macdonell, Samuel Smith, Q.C., Windsor, Ontario, was born 21st February, 1823, at Toronto. He is the youngest son of the Hon. Alexander Macdonell, by his wife Ann Smith. His father when a youth served as lieutenant in the Royal Highland Emigrant Regiment in the Revolutionary war of the United States, and took part in several important battles. Captain Allan Macdonell, who served in the same regiment as his son Alexander, after the independence of the United States was recognized, settled at Quebec with his family. After his death, Alexander came to Upper Canada, on its organization as a province, with General Simcoe, and was appointed by him first sheriff of the Home District. On the first parliament being summoned for Upper Canada, he was made speaker of the House of Assembly. In the war of 1812 he served as paymaster-general of militia; and afterwards was made a member of the Legislative Council. His mother, Ann Smith, came to Upper Canada from her home in Long Island, New York, with her brother, Colonel Samuel Smith, who was colonel of the Queen's Rangers, a regiment which had also served through the Revolutionary war, and most of the officers and soldiers of which regiment came to Upper Canada and took up land as U. E. loyalists. Col. Smith had a large tract granted him in Etobicoke township, near Toronto, on which he resided until his death. During the absence of Sir Peregrine Maitland in England for several years, Col. Smith was administrator of the Mr. Macdonell, at a very government. early age, was sent to Upper Canada College, where he remained for eight years, going through the whole course of that institution from the preparatory school. On the opening of the University of Toronto, then called King's College, he resumed his classical studies, taking his degree of B.A. second in first-class University honours at the end of 1845. In the interval between leaving Upper Canada College and entering the University, he had studied law in the office of the Hon. Henry Sherwood, then attorney-general; and, after taking his degree of B.A., entered the Law School of the University, coming out first of the class on taking the degree of B C.L. He was called as a barrister in 1847. He received a commission in the militia, under the old system, as ensign in the 2nd North York, in 1842; as captain in the 5th battalion, Toronto, in 1847; was transferred to the 2nd Essex, as major, in 1851; and appointed lieutenant-colonel of the 1st Essex in 1862. At the time of the last mentioned appointment there existed an apprehension that the Trent affair would be the cause of war between Great Britain and the United States; and on the appointment being made, an order was sent him from the militia department to call out seventy-five men for active service, with the privilege of serving as captain. Mr. Macdonell had the men enrolled, inspected and accepted in three days, himself volunteering to serve as captain. A short time after completing his University course, and being called to the bar, he commenced the practice of law at Amherstburg. At the end of a year he was appointed clerk and solicitor of the western district council, and removed to Sandwich. Afterwards he was appointed successively clerk and solicitor of the united counties of Essex, Kent and Lambton, and of Essex and Lambton, relinquishing the office when Lambton separated from Essex.

a

la

m

ti

oi

ci

bı

in

in

G

B

of

ta

ati

fai

80

an

As secretary of the Board of Instruction of Essex and Lambton, he performed the duty of examining candidates as to their qualifications to be teachers. He removed to Windsor in 1853, and when Windsor became incorporated as a village, next year he was elected reeve. He was again elected reeve in 1855 and 1856; and during those vears, was elected warden of Essex. When years, was elected warden of Essex. Windsor was created a town in 1857, he was elected mayor: and likewise during the four succeeding years. He was appointed master and deputy-registrar in Chancery in 1857; county crown attorney in 1858, succeeding to the office of clerk of the Peace in 1871. He was appointed deputy-registrar of the Maritime Court in 1879. All these offices he still retains. In 1881 he was made a Q.C. Whilst warden he induced the county council to build a new court house and gaol, the then existing one being unsuitable, and on leaving the wardenship the county council presented him a testimonial as a recognition of his useful measures and active ser-Whilst mayor of Windsor he was chiefly instrumental in having a town hall and school houses built, improving the streets, and acquiring for the town a valuable square, formerly used for barracks. Having with a few associates purchased two farms in the central portion of Windsor, he had them laid out into lots and offered for There being no travelable road connecting Windsor with the Talbot road, the main road through the county, he constructed a gravel road of over six miles to form the desired connection, by which means most of the trade with farmers was diverted from Sandwich to Windsor. through a number of years municipal duties and land matters occupied much of his attention, Mr. Macdonell has had important and varied experience in the practice of the law. On his first arrival in Essex he was made secretary of the Conservative Association of the county, and until his acceptance of a public office in 1858, acted in that capacity, and took an active part in politics, but for many years has not been engaged in political strife. Besides visiting all the important places in Canada and the United States, Mr. Macdonell has travelled in Great Britain, Europe and the West Indies. Brought up in the doctrines and observances of the Roman catholic Church, whilst retaining a kindly feeling and great consideration towards the adherents of that ancient faith, Mr. Macdonell owns to having himself outgrown ecclesiastical creeds, dogmas and ceremonies; which he regards as rene to g Is-

lonel

the

also

and

h re-

k up

ad a

own-

habir

Sir

veral

the very

Col-

ears.

that

hool.

To-

e res de-

rsity

nter-

llege

hdied

Sher-

after the out ee of

er in

the

n in

in in was

r, in

el of

f the

listed

zould

itain

oint-

him

out h the

Mac-

and

ering

com-

call-

ce of

year

the

d to

 $_{
m nted}$

hited

and

the

ssex.

tarding, no longer fitting, useless and fast becoming moribund. He holds that the time has come for higher and better teachings to be given to the people than those used in barbarous ages-teachings derived from a more perfect knowledge of nature's laws, and their operation upon human life, and in harmony with scientific truths already discovered and that may yet be discovered; as well as teachings of truer rules and principles of human conduct, evolved from the higher mentality of the present age, and addressed to a higher intelligence ready to receive them; and that thus the physical and natural, as well as the mental and moral condition of the masses of mankind will be raised from their present degradation and uplifted to a higher level. In 1856 he married Ellen Gillis Brodhead, daughter of Col. D. D. Brodhead, of Boston, Massachusetts, a descendant of one of Washington's generals. She died in 1878, leaving one son and three Through his marriage, Mr. daughters. Macdonell has formed a somewhat extended acquaintance in the Eastern States. As a lawyer, the standing of Mr. Macdonell is very high. His knowledge of the law is wide, his perceptions are keen, and his judgment sound. His presentation of a case is characterized by straightforwardness, by lucidity, and by force; at times, when the weight of the matter fires his imagination, he rises to passionate eloquence, his appearance is commanding, and full of dignity. "He has," says an authority before us, "honoured all the relations of life by the strictest fidelity."

Lefevre, John M., M.D.C.M., Brockville, was born at Belleville, Ontario, in His grandfather was one of the 1853. Lefevre's of Three Rivers, who came from France and settled there towards the end of the last century. The father of J. M. Lefevre went to Belleville and engaged in the lumber business, and died, the year after his marriage, of cholera, during the dreadful epidemic of 1854. Dr. Lefevre received his primary education at the public and high schools of Stirling, Ontario, and subsequently attended the Normal school at Toronto. Having made up his mind, at an early age to devote himself to the study of medicine, he determined to give a few years to teaching, and at the same time prepare for a college After filling the position of master course. in the Trenton and Brockville separate schools, he found himself in a position to attain his object; and in 1876, at the age of twenty-three, entered McGill University. After a three years' course at that institution, he graduated, taking the first Sutherland gold medal. He entered into partnership with Dr. Morden of Brockville, an old established physician, who died the following August. In 1882 he accepted the position of surgeon to the Algoma branch of the Canadian Pacific Railway, under construction by H. Abbott, and spent a year He returned to and a half on the line. Brockville in 1884, and resumed the practice of his profession. Dr. Lefevre is assistant surgeon of the 42nd battalion. a Roman catholic, and a Liberal-Conservative in politics. He was elected, in 1886, a member of the town council of Brockville, and judging from his energy and his ability, it is safe to predict for him a creditable political career. Dr. Lefevre married on the 28th of June, 1883, Lily Alice, eldest daughter of R. P. Cooke, C.E., Cedarcliffs,

Brockville. Wilmot, Henry, Kingston, M.P.P. for Frontenac, was born in the township of Pittsburg, County of Frontenac, Untario, on September 22nd, 1826. He is a son of John Wilmot, by his wife Sarah Milton Wilmot. The former came to Canada about 1812, and settled near Kingston in 1821, after having served a long term of years in the Royal navy, and he was engaged in the battles of Anholt and Copenhagen, under Admiral Nelson. Mrs. Wilmot was a descendant of that illustrious line to which Milton the poet belongs. Mr. Wilmot was on board the manof-war which towed the Chesapeake and Shannon, after their famous battle, into Halifax. Henry Wilmot received his edueation in a common school in his native township, where the rudiments of an English education were taught. On the completion of his education, young Wilmot was inclined to adopt carpentering, but after a few years he engaged in the milling and lumbering business, in which occupation he continued with success for a number of years. At the formation of the Kingston Field Battery, he entered the ranks as a private; after a short time he was promoted, and served as an officer for eighteen years, when he received full command, and continued to hold that position for six years, being then allowed to retire, retaining his rank. He has also received a first-class certificate from the School of Gunnery at Kingston, and was stationed at Kingston during the excitement of 1866. For many years Captain Wilmot has been closely connected with the Agricultural Association of Frontenac as director; and he has also filled the office of president of the same society. He contracted for and built the greater portion of the Kingston and Gananoque road, which was the chief route along the frontier. Captain Wilmot has been a life-long member of the Conservative Association, and has always taken a lively interest in politics. He was elected for several years to aid in directing the municipal affairs of the County of Frontenac and the township of Pittsburgh. He was chosen a delegate of the Conservative Association, and elected a member of the Ontario Legislature in 1883. He has found time enough during his active life to visit all the places of interest in Ontario and Quebec, and he has also visited New York, New Jersey, Delaware and Connecticut. From his earliest recollections, Captain Wilmot has been an adherent of the Episcopal Church of the "low" type, and has been churchwarden of the same for some years. He married Anne Graham, daughter of a west Highland family, then residing in Pittsburg, in 1850, and has had six sons and one daughter, all of whom are living. After the completion of the Kingston and Gananoque road, he settled down to agriculture on a small farm on the banks of the St. Lawrence, five miles from Kingston. Commencing with a small capital, he has each year added to his farm, and has been blessed with continued prosperity. He has now upwards of 600 acres, 500 of which is farmed en bloc. The eldest son of our subject Peter G., is commander of the Kingston Field Battery, and the second son, John Alexander, is a lieutenant in the same corps. Mr. Wilmot has been for thirty years, and is still a director of the Midland County Fair, and he has always taken a deep interest in agricultural matters. He is a very useful member of the legislature, and enjoys the respect of that body. Like his ancestors, he always has been a Conservative.

d

A

ti

li

p

h

is

n

p

al

li

18 ne

al

M

th

hε

ri

of

of $^{\mathrm{th}}$

be

ca

pr

Βι

in٠

en

an

mia

to

sev

be

opi

ful

wa

on

in

wa.

In

his

ma

mo

pul

tion

McLelan, Honorable Archibald Woodbury, Minister of Finance, and M.P. for Colchester, N.S., was born at Londonderry, Nova Scotia, on the 24th of December, 1824. Mr. McLelan is descended from a family which came from Londonderry, Ireland, in the last century, and settled in Nova Scotia. Our subject received a careful early training; and was subsequently sent to the Mount Allison Wesleyan Academy. Leaving school, having acquired a sound education, he had little difficulty in making up his mind with respect to the pursuit that he ought to adopt. With his personal advantages, and taking other circumstances into consideration, mercantile undertakings were the most feasible, and to him held out large promise. Therefore, into mercantile transactions he entered : and as this was a period when the carrying trade was entirely in the hands of vessel-owners, and the vessels were all wooden bottoms. Mr. McLelan engaged in the profitable trade of ship-building. The profits of building ships suggested the still greater advantage of owning ships, and in the capacity of builder and owner Mr. McLean did a very thriving business. He always took a very deep interest in political questions, and as early as 1858 was elected to the Nova Scotia Assembly for the County of Colchester. He retained his seat till 1863, and thenceforth till the union represented North Colchester. No finger has ever been pointed at the public character of Mr. McLelan. He is scrupulous in doing the duties of his office; and he is always careful, equal-handed and satisfactory. When he rises to speak he commands attention, for his views are wide and practical, and his head stocked with valuable information. He married in 1854, Caroline Metzler, of Halifax. On the 20th May, 1881, he was sworn a member of the Cabinet, and president of the Privy Council, also taking charge of the department of Marine and Fisheries during the illness of the minister; and on the 10th July, 1882, he was officially appointed minister of Marine and Fisheries. In the administration of the affairs of that important department of the executive he desplayed all those thoroughly important qualities which had been manifest in his personal commercial career. He was not impulsive, but with proper deliberation surveyed every side of a question before pronouncing upon it. But when he did give his decision it was invariably certain to be sound and enlight-He remained at the head of Marine and Fisheries until 1885, when ill-health made it necessary for Sir Leonard Tilley to resign the portfolio of finance; and as several months had shown expenditure to be greater than income, it was the general opinion in government circles that a careful and somewhat close-handed financier was the man needed to help to put a check on the out-goings. There was no difficulty in concluding that the Hon. A. W. McLelan was the man most competent for the office. In addition to the faith that was held in his firmness and judgment he had recently made certain speeches in the House of Commons which showed a thorough mastery of public financial questions; with the operation of industries, and the general relations of commerce to public finance. The expec-

ton

hief

mot

ser-

n a

ted

the nac

was 880-

ario

ime

the

and

веу,

ear-

een

the

n of $\mathbf{n}\mathbf{n}\mathbf{e}$

and 850.

all

n of

set-

h on

iles

 \mathbf{n} all

rm, ros

res.

lest

der

se-

t in

for

the

tavs

nat-

the

that

has

ald

and a at

h of

end-

llon-

and

eiv-

bse-

yan

ired y in

the

his

cir-

ntile

d to

tations formed of the hon minister were not too high, for he has shown himself a firmhanded, clear-headed minister of finance. As a speaker he is clear, direct and forcible, and he has a happy way of bringing in facts derived from experience or observation in illustration of any theory or assertion that he happens to bring forward; and, as a consequence, when upon his feet, he invariably receives the closest attention from the house. He does not obtrude himself; but when the time arrives he is ready for it, and he then compels attention where it is not given to him with cordiality or with grace.

Oliver, John Ryder, Colonel Royal Artillery, Kingston, Professor of Surveying and Military Topography at the Royal Military College of Canada, is the eldest son of the late John Dudley Oliver, J. P., of Cherrymount, (now Tigroney) in the Vale of Avoca, County Wicklow, Ireland, and his wife, Mary Susan, who was a daughter of the late Valentine Green, of Normanton Hall, Leicestershire. His father was the head of a younger branch of the Olivers of Castle Oliver, (now Cloghanodfoy), County Limerick, a family descended from Captain Robert Oliver, a distinguished army officer in the time of Cromwell, who received large grants of land in the south-west of Ireland in reward for his services. Several of this family were at different times members of the Irish parliament, while others attained high rank in the army, navy, and church. Further family details are to be found in "Burke's Landed Gentry." Colonel Oliver was born at Ashby de la Zouch, Leicestershire, on the 16th December, 1834; and completed his education at Caius College and Trinity Hall, Cambridge, where he obtained a mathematical scholarship. In September, 1855, he was gazetted to a lieutenancy in the Royal Artillery, having obtained a direct commission by competitive examination, passing fifth out of one hundred and fifty candidates. The company to which he was posted embarked on 1st May, 1857, in a small sailing vessel, for service at the Cape of Good Hope. A few days after its arrival at Cape Town news was received of the outbreak of the Indian mutiny, and it was at once re-embarked in H.M.S. Penelope, reaching Calcutta in September, about the time that Delhi was captured. terwards, Lieutenant Oliver was ordered up country by horse dak for special service at Cawnpore, and arrived there in time to take part in the three days severe fighting, (26th to 28th November), in which General Windham, with a force of only some fifteen hundred, withstood the attacks of a trained army numbering at least fifteen thousand men, with a powerful artillery, till relieved by Sir Colin Campbell's force from Lucknow. He also took part in the battle of Cawnpore, on the 6th December, 1857. Shortly afterwards he rejoined his own battery, which had been marching up country, and served with it through the long campaigns which followed, and which only terminated by the mutiny being finally crushed out in the spring of 1859. During this fifteen months of almost daily marching, the battery took part in a great number of actions of more or less importance in the Doab, Rohilcund and Oude, including the action of the Kalee Nuddee, the final siege and capture of Lucknow, the battle of Barelly, and the capture of Rampore Kusseah, about sixty of its men losing their lives from various causes. In February, 1859, the battery came to a rest at Allahabad; and Lieutenant Oliver shortly afterwards obtained five months leave of absence, and proceeded to Simla, whence he made a walking tour of six hundred miles through the higher ranges of the Himalayas, crossing several passes which were at that time little known. For this journey he was subsequently elected a member of the Alpine club. In 1860 he was appointed to the Royal horse artillery, but was soon afterwards invalided to England, on account of a severe attack of fever, and served for a time at home stations, besides passing through the long course at Shoeburyness. In 1863, having exchanged to a battery of horse artillery in India, he returned there, spending en route three months in South Africa, where he travelled several hundred miles through the western province. On arriving in India he was almost immediately dispatched to the Punjaub to join a mountain train battery which was being raised (but too late) for the Umbeyla campaign. This battery was stationed at Peshawur, and was subsequently (towards the end of 1864) detailed to join the small force collected for the subjugation of Bhootan, and Lieutenant Oliver, having been promoted captain, accompanied it, and served through the cam paign in command of the artillery of the left column, including the capture of the hill fort of Dalimkote, on the 6th December, 1864, in which three out of the six artillery officers with the force lost their lives. A severe fever contracted in this campaign necessitated a return to England; and in August, 1865, he joined the Staff College at Sandhurst, (having passed the entrance examination while in India), graduating second on the list in December, 1866, with a special recommendation for mathematical attainments. He then joined a battery at St. Helena, where he remained more than two years, part of the time in command of the Royal artillery, and part of the time specially employed as acting engineer. In the summer of 1869 he was recalled to England to take up the appointment of brigade major of artillery at Aldershot, which post he held till promoted major of a field battery in February, 1874. He was subsequently detached from it for several months in 1876 for special duty with the intelligence branch of the war office. In September, 1877, he received his present appointment, and proceeded to join the Military College at Kingston. In addition to the above details, he has at different times travelled in most of the countries of Europe, and was once nearly made prisoner by the Carlists in the war of 1875. Colonel Oliver has received the Indian mutiny and Indian frontier war medals, with clasps for Lucknow and Bhootan, and has been twice mentioned in despatches. He is a member of the Alpine club, and Army and Navy club, and is on the panel of the grand jury of the county Wicklow. He is Church of England by religion, and a member of the English Church Union. He has been an occasional contributor to various magazines, and is the author of a text-book on "Practical Astronomy and Geodesy." He has been twice married. First, in 1864, to Georgina, daughter of the late F. Harrison, of Stanground, Hunts. She died in 1874; and their son, Arthur, who was born in 1871, died in 1875; secondly, in 1880, to Mary, daughter of the late W. G. Hinds, manager of the Bank of Upper Canada at Kingston, by whom he has a daughter, Lucy, born in 1883.

oth 1 eb Ah tid ob a L coarra oth mawth woo www.srear

A

tu si fr ha li

we H th tir In

on be

at Bi

laı

be

in

m: Ca Lo

M

Luke, Joseph, Tilsonburg, was born at St. Blazey, Cornwall, England, on the 26th May, 1814. His parents were William and Mary (Trembesh) Luke. The family were largely interested, many generations back, in tin and copper mines in Cornwall, but in 1834 William Luke concluded to remove to Canada. In April of that year, after a long voyage of five weeks, the family landed at Quebec. Accompanying Mr. Luke were his two brothers and their families. Soon afterwards they all removed to the township of Whitby, when William Luke engaged in farming, and where he remained until his death in 1843. There were eleven children in the family, the subject of this sketch being the second eldest son. Joseph Luke received a general business education.

He remained a short time with his parents at Whitby, and then removed to the city of Toronto, where he entered the employ of his brother-in-law, Richard Jewell, at that time a brewer in the said city. There he remained for about two years, when, in 1841, he removed to the town of Dundas, entering the employ of John Patterson, brewer. He remained in Dundas until August, 1842, when he began business for himself in St. Thomas, which place at that time contained a population of only five hundred inhabitants. In 1845, Mr. Luke bought out the St. Thomas brewery, and began business for himself His trade extended all over the Western country, including London, where his business was ponderous, chiefly owing to the fact that three regiments of regulars were stationed there. The amount of ale and porter consumed by these regiments alone was enormous. mained in St. Thomas until 1865, when he concluded to remove to Tilsonburg, and in the same year built a large brewery and malt house in that town, the same being now known as J. Luke & Son's brewery, and where an extensive trade is being done. At the time of the rebellion of 1837-38, he went as a volunteer in a company then commanded by Captain (afterwards judge) Campbell, of Niagara, to the front, and was stationed opposite Navy Island. It is a well-known fact that Mr. Luke, while on sentry duty, was the first to perceive the rebels on the island. He recounts many an amusing story of those stirring times. After the ending of the rebellion he returned to his home suffering from severe sickness, contracted by exposure while at the front, and which lasted several years. He has never been much of an aspirant for public offices, being content to allow others to wear the honours to be won in that sphere. He attends strictly to his own business and the interests, and we doubt if he could afford time to attend to any political or duty office. In politics he is Conservative; and in religion, an adherent of the Church of England, being one of the eight hundred confirmed at Austell church, Cornwall, by the late Bishop Philpotts, bishop of Exeter, England. Since coming to this country he has been church warden for several years, both in Tilsonburg and St. Thomas. He was married, on the 9th of October, 1845, to Caroline Coombes, by Bishop Cronyn, of London, Ont. Miss Coombes, of Gawbridge Mills, Somersetshire, England, whose mother after her husband's death came to this country, with her brother, the late Dr. Cornish, brought her family with her, and settling in London, Ont., from which place Mr Luke was married. Mr. Luke has had six children, five of whom are living, two sons and three daughters. Both sons are engaged with their father in the brewing business, and Ada is married to William B. Tindell, of the Parry Sound Lumber Co., Parry Sound. Although Mr. Luke is now in his seventy-second year, he is hale and hearty, and from all appearances has yet many years of usefulness before him.

Whitney, James Pliny, Barrister-at-Law, Morrisburgh, was born in the township of Williamsburgh, in the County of Dundas, about three-quarters of a mile west of the battle-field of "Chryslers' farm," on October 2nd, 1843. His father was Richard Leet Whitney, and his mother, Clarissa Jane Fairman. Mr. Whitney, senr., who died at Morrisburgh, in 1883, at the age of seventyeight years, was descended from Henry Whitney, - a scion of the Whitney family, who was of considerable local importance in Herefordshire. England, -who emigrated to America, about the year 1640. The only descendants of Henry Whitney now living in Canada are the subject of this sketch, his elder brother, Albert, who resides at Prescott, Ontario, and a younger brother, Edgar, who lives in Montreal, together with their children. Two other brothers, Edwin and Oscar, reside in Minnesota. Richard Leet Whitney was in early life a blacksmith, but later on became a farmer in comfortable circumstances. He resided in the township of Osnabruck, County of Stormont, on the banks of the St. Lawrence river, where the subject of this sketch became familiar with every detail in the life of a Canadian farmer, having lived and worked at home until he became eighteen years old. His father afterwards removed to the village of Aultsville, and thence to Morrisburgh, where he resided until his death. His widow is still living. James Pliny Whitney was educated at the common schools of the locality, and at the Cornwall Grammar school, then under the head mastership of the Rev. H. W. Davies, D.D., afterwards head master of the Toronto Normal school. He entered upon the study of law in the office of Macdonald & Maclennan, Cornwall, Ontario, of which firm the late Hon. John Sandfield Macdonald was the senior member. He did not complete his course, and for a time gave up the study of the profession. He returned to it, however, was admitted as solicitor, and called to the degree of barrister-at-law, at Osgoode

Hall, Toronto, in Easter term, 1876, since which time he has practised in Morrisburgh, County of Dundas. During his practice, he has been engaged in some very important cases, both of a public and private nature, the management and result of which have reflected credit upon him. He entered the volunteer force as a private, while a boy in Cornwall, at the time of the Trent affair, and was a member of the force for a number of years, during which he was on active service at Cornwall for five months, at the time of the first Fenian raid. During this time he was advanced to the position of sergeant; and is now a major in the Reserve militia of the County of Dundas. Mr. Whitney has been for nine years secretary of the Liberal-Conservative Association of the County of Dundas, and has taken an active and prominent part in political movements, and Provincial and Federal elections for the past ten years. He is an earnest believer in and advocate of the political doctrines of the Liberal-Conservative party of Canada, and is of that school of political thought which from the time of the retirement from public life of Robert Baldwin, slowly but surely, became alienated from the Reform party, and finally coalesced with and became part of the Liberal-Conservative party of to-day. He is an advocate of the broadest civil and religious liberty, and a firm upholder of British connection. Mr. Whitney has the courage of his convictions, and in times of political excitement and activity, is always to be found doing battle in the front rank of the Conservative party. He stands very high in the estimation of his party friends, and is looked upon by political foes as a powerful opponent, while in his professional capacity he possesses the confidence of all classes in the community. He is president of the Morrisburgh Lacrosse Club; and a High school trustee. He was baptized in, and is an adherent of the Church of England. He married on the 30th of April, 1877, Alice, third surviving daughter of William Milford Park, of Cornwall, Ontario, a native of Ireland. The issue of this marriage is one son and two daughters.

McKinnon, Hugh, Chief of Police of Belleville, was born in the township of Vaughan, York, on the 4th May, 1843. He is a son of Martin McKinnon, and Flora Lamont, daughter of Mr. Lamont, of Argyleshire, Scotland. Martin McKinnon was born in the Island of Mull, Argyleshire, Scotland, and came to this country in 1819, settling in the County of York. Here he engaged in the business of general merchant, at the place now known as Maple, and retired to the more quiet life of a farmer about 1834. He died in 1858. We may add that Mr. McKinnon figured prominently in the well known "Vaughan Rectory case," now a matter of history. There was a family of eleven children, the subject of this sketch being the youngest son. Hugh McKinnon received a thorough education, concluding his studies in the Čity of Hamilton. At the age of nineteen, he entered the law office of Thomson & McKinnon, Hamilton, where he remained for three years. In 1865, however, he decided to relinquish this occupation, and in the same year received the appointment of Provincial and Dominion detective, having his headquarters at Hamilton. Since that time his name has been pretty constantly and prominently before the public, he having had charge for the Crown of some very notable cases. Among these may be mentioned the celebrated Caledonian murder case; the Lucan and Biddulph outrages committed by the Donnelly gang, who subsequently were so ruthlessly murdered; and recently the Lazier murder, in the County of Prince Edward. In connection with his official position, Mr. McKinnon can relate many startling and interesting stories. In 1877, he received the appointment of chief of the police of the City of Belleville, and resigned the position of Dominion detective. He has since resided in Belleville, holding the office mentioned, besides being high constable for the County of Hastings. Mr. McKinnon is a Freemason, and belongs to Belleville lodge, No. 123; is an Oddfellow; a member of the Caledonian Society of Hamilton, and was president of St. Andrew's Society of Belleville for two years. Mr. McKinnon has always taken a lively interest in athletics, and has occupied a prominent place in the arena for several years. At the International games held in Toronto in 1875, he succeeded in winning the medal given to the "best general athlete." He then visited all the prominent cities in the United States, including Buffalo, Troy, Providence, Boston, and New York, victory following him wherever he competed. On the third day of August, 1876, he competed at Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, for the heavy weight championship of North America, and was successful, he having won the championship, two handsome medals and $400. The presentation was made by His Excellency Lieutenant Governor Sir Robert Hodgins. His next and crowning victory was

de

fol

the pe

ing

vic

in

ret

the

pai

fev

me abl

pol

Pre

dat

On

the

He

Ire

par the

itar

9th

dur

wou

nec

afte

vice

the grat

the

to r

Bro

his sket

the

Fitz

com

mar

by tl

year

Male

cont

mair year

in E

build

own busi

ful,

town

skill.

inter

mov

as or at the International games, held in Philadelphia on the 14th and 15th days of August following, when he succeeded in winning the International medal in the finest competition ever seen in the United States. He then extended his tour to Baltimore, Washington, Brooklyn, Troy, New Haven, Providence, Boston, and finally to New York, in all of which places he was successful in retaining his laurels. In these competitions the most noted athletes in the world took Mr. McKinnon now possesses no fewer than forty-three gold and silver medals, won by himself in his most remarkable and prominent career as an athlete. In politics he is a Reformer, and in religion a Presbyterian. He married, in 1873, Jennie, daughter of John Lamont, of Chatham.

Fitzsimmons, William, Brockville, Ontario, is one of the best known men in the united counties of Leeds and Grenville. He is a native of the County of Donegal, Ireland, and came to Canada, with his parents, when a child, in 1822. His father, the late Robert Fitzsimmons, adopted a military life in his early days, and served in the 9th Light Dragoons, in Spain and Portugal, during the Peninsular war, and was severely wounded in one of the engagements, which necessitated his retirement from the service after fourteen years and a half of active service. He was in receipt of a pension up to the time of his death. In 1822, he emigrated to Canada, and settled at Perth, in the County of Lanark, where he continued to reside until 1851, when he removed to Brockville, spending the declining years of his life with his son, the subject of this sketch. He died in 1861, having reached the advanced age of ninety-five. William Fitzsimmons received his education at the common school, at the Perth district Grammar school, and at a private school taught by the late Judge John Wilson. When twelve years of age, he entered the employment of Malcolm McPherson, at that time a leading contractor and builder in Perth, and remained in his service for the period of six years. In 1841, he removed to and settled in Brockville, where he entered into the building and contracting business on his own account. He continued in this line of business up till 1882, and was very successful, most of the principal buildings in the town being monuments of his enterprise and skill. He identified himself early with the interests of the town, and soon after his removal thither, became generally recognized as one of the leading public men of Brockville. In 1847, he was elected a member of the board of police, which at that time took the place of the town council, and of which the Hon. W. B. Richards (now Sir W. B Richards) was then a member. Subsequent to that time, he filled a seat at the council board for thirteen years, during eight of which he was mayor of the town; and he was six times elected by acclamation. He had the honour of being the first mayor of Brockville elected by popular vote. In educational matters, he has also always taken a deep interest. He was for eleven years a member of the Board of Education, and largely to his efforts the town is indebted for the excellent schools it now possesses. Fron the time that Mr. Fitzsimmons first went to Brockville, he took an active part in politics, warmly espousing the cause of the Conservative party. In 1867, he was the candidate, in the Conservative interest, for the constituency of Brockville, for the Ontario Legislature. His opponent was the Hon. C. F. Fraser. The election resulted in Mr. Fitzsimmons' return, by a majority of thirty six. In 1871, he was again elected to the legislature. In 1875, owing to a change in the boundaries of the constituency, he was defeated. In his old constituency his majority was 114. At the general election for the House of Commons, in 1878, Mr. Fitzsimmons was the choice of the Conservative party as their candidate. In this contest he was successful, defeating J. D. Buell, by a handsome majority. At the election, in 1882, he declined offering himself as a candidate. In that year the postmastership of Brockville became vacant, and Mr. Fitzsimmons was appointed to the office, a position to which, by a long and faithful service to the Conservative party, he was justly entitled. In the halls of parliament, the influence of Mr. Fitzsimmons was widely and decisively felt. It was entirely through his efforts, while in the House of Commons, that the appropriation for building the handsome public buildings in Brockville, just completed, was obtained. When in the legislature, he was one of the first to suggest the scheme for the relief of the municipalities from the municipal loan fund indebtedness with which they were burdened. and worked energetically until his object was accomplished. In him, Brockville had an able representative in the council halls of the country, and one who was ever ready and willing to do whatever lay in his power to further the interests of his constituents. All local institutions, having for their object the welfare of the town and its people, found in Mr. Fitzsimmons a warm friend and supporter. He was for several years a director of the Mechanics' Institute, of which he was president for two years. For a long period he was an officer of the Brockville fire brigade, and took a lively interest in its affairs. He also interested himself to some extent in military matters, and joined the Brockville rifles at the time of their first organization, in 1855. Benevolent societies have found in Mr. Fitzsimmons one of their most enthusiastic workers. In Oddfellowship, he has always taken an especial interest, and, in 1853, when the order came very nearly dying out in Canada, it was mainly through the efforts of the late Dr. Reynolds, of Brockville, and Mr. Fitzsimmons, that it was resuscitated, and new life inspired into it. In 1846, he became a member of Brock lodge, No. 9, and during the period that has intervened since then, he has filled nearly every position in the lodge and encampment. For a number of years he served as representative to the Grand Lodge, and, in 1875, that body elected him to the position of grand master, the highest honour in their power to confer. He is also prominent in Masonic circles. He became a member of Brockville lodge No. 9 (now Sussex lodge No. 5), in 1848. He is a past second prin-cipal of Sussex Royal Arch Chapter, No. 50; also treasurer of Thousand Island Rose Croix Chapter, No. 12, of the Sovereign Sanctuary of Royal and Oriental Freemasonry. He has been exalted to the degree of Knight Templar and Knight of Malta in Gondemar Preceptory and Dupuis Preceptory, No. 16, G. R. C. Mr. Fitzsimmons still enjoys the position of postmaster, much to the satisfaction of the general public. Mr. Fitzsimmons is a staunch supporter of the Church of England. In 1839, he married Ann Taylor, of Kingston, by whom he had a family of ten children. She died in December, 1872. In 1883, he married Mrs. Denny, of Brockville, widow of the late James Denny, merchant. There is no family by the second marriage.

Carney, Richard, Windsor, Ontario, M.B. Toronto University; M.D. Bellevue Hospital, Medical College, New York; M.C.P. and S., Ont. (all 1869), was born at Barrie, Ontario, on the 8th August, 1842, and is a son of Richard Carney, late sheriff of Algoma district, by Mary Johnston, both of whom were born in England. Richard Carney was educated at the Owen Sound Grammar school, being a pupil when that institution was first opened under the Rev. Mr. Mulholland, about 1855. He subsequently entered Upper Canada College, which he attended from 1861-64, whence he carried off four prizes for English composition and verse, and also for Latin verse. He next entered Toronto University, following his arts course (1864-5), with honours; attended Toronto Medical School from 1865 to 1867; Bellevue, New York, from 1867 to 1869, and graduated in 1869, with honours at Toronto University. Dr. Carney was a member of the old No. 9, University company, Queen's Own Rifles, from 1864 to 1869; held a second class certificate, Military school, Toronto (1865); attended at Laprairie camp in September, 1865, and served in 1866, in connection with the Fenian raid. He was appointed surgeon in 1885, to the 21st battalion, Essex county, Ontario, at its re-formation during the North-West rebellion. Dr. Carney was deputy reeve for Windsor, during the years 1877, 1878 and 1879. He has been a member of Ontario Medical Association since its organization, and has been a member of St. George's Society, Windsor, for the last four years, being part of this period vice-president. He has also been secretary of the County Liberal-Conservative Association for several years, and has been chairman of the Windsor branch from 1882 to the present time. In religion, Dr. Carney is an Episcopalian. He married in Toronto, on November 14th, 1870, Georgiana, youngest daughter of the late Gavin Burns, for many years postmaster at Oshawa. Dr. Carney settled in Windsor, in August, 1869, where he has since remained continuously in the practice of his profession. He has the repute of much skill and learning in his profession, and these qualities, added to his industry and personal popularity, have won for him a very excellent practice.

er C fr re 18 an war th

on

ca

tei

M

an

tru

im

wit

lie

god

tra

lan

wid

was

twe

mai

che

to g

ence

ing

a co

gan

By :

a fai

aske

with

prov

good

of t

Mr.

the f

jacen

ing d

concl

Conse

of ch

result

that s added

ing y

the p thouse

cheese

shippe

repres

The bu

fifty had or $60

Macpherson, D. M., Lancaster, was born on the 1st concession of Lancaster, lot No. 15, County Glengarry, on the 17th of November, 1847. He is a son of John Macpherson, who was born in Kinguessie, Scotland, in the year 1797, and came to Canada in 1801, settling down with his father on the present homestead, at Front Lancaster. When John Macpherson reached manhood's estate, he engaged as a merchant for a time in the village of Lancaster, and then carried on the lumbering business for several years; subsequently he settled on the farm mentioned of two hundred acres. He was very active and industrious, and a leading farmer until he died at the age of seventy-two. He was also a captain of the Glengarry militia. The mother of D. M. Macpherson was Catherine Cameron, daughter of the Hon. John | Cameron, of Fairfield farm, Summertown. from Charlottenburgh, Glengarry, who rerepresented the County of Glengarry from 1825 to 1832, when parliament met in Niag-Mrs. Macpherson, who died in 1860. was a warm-hearted mother, a loving friend, and good to the poor, and it is not strange that she was beloved and esteemed by every-The subject of this sketch was educated in common county school, in school section, number one, township of Lancas-With respect to political creed, Mr. Macpherson has always held reform views, and believes that the Liberal policy is the true party principle for advancement and improvement. He has had no connection with any secret society, nor does he believe that the same are conducive to the good of mankind. Mr. Macpherson has travelled considerably in America and England, and his knowledge has been much Mr. Macpherson widened in that way. was engaged in farming pursuits, until twenty-one, when his father died. He was a prize taker and a professional ploughman, and noticing a good opening in the cheese manufacturing business, determined to give it a trial. So without any experience or advice he determined to begin making cheese from a dairy of eight cows, and a complete outfit was secured, and he began the manufacture in the spring of 1870. By hard work and close care the season was a fair success. The following year, 1871, he asked two of his neighbours to supply him with their milk. They did so, and the trial proved very successful. The third year a good sized factory was established, the milk of two hundred cows was received, and Mr. Macpherson made all into cheese. But the following year two petitions from adjacent sections were received for the starting of new factories, and Mr. Macpherson concluded to give that undertaking a trial. Consequently he began the new system of cheese factory combinations, and the results were very satisfactory, so much so that several more conjoined branches were added the following year, and each succeeding year large additions were made, until the past season of 1885, the number rose to sixty-six factories, turning out seventy thousand boxes, weighing 4,500,000 lbs. of All of this enormous output was shipped and sold in the English market, representing a value of over $350,000.00. The business now employs one hundred and fifty hands, and has a capital only of $50,000 or $60,000. In 1882, a cheese box factory ol

9,

r. 9,

and steam saw mill was added, and in 1885 an additional steam saw mill. These establishments turned out four million feet of lumber, and two hundred thousand boxes in 1885, giving regular work to forty hands. Mr. Macpherson has, in the meantime, taken out five patents on improved and original cheese machinery, two of which are a marked success. He was corresponding editor of the dairy department of the Hamilton Live Stock Journal for some time. The brand of cheese made is called the "Allangrove of Canada. It is well known in England, and much sought for by dealers. Mr. Macpherson is a man of almost phenomenal activity, of splendid business ability, and has a great gift of foresight. But Mr. Macpherson has marked abilities of a general nature, and those who know him feel that if he would consent to enter the political arena he would be a decided acquisition to the public life of Canada. With respect to his religious and political views he is Liberal and Protestant. He married on 17th January, 1871, Margaret, daughter of Duncan McBean, of Front Lancaster.

Allison, David Wright, Adolphustown, was born at the aforenamed place, in the year 1826. His parents were children of Benjamin Allison and Henry Hroon, who left their homes and property at the close of the Revolutionary war, in 1784, and settled in the township of Adolphustown as United Empire loyalists. D. W. Allison was educated in the schools of his native place, his studies embracing such subjects as are implied by the term "sound English education." Sometime after leaving school he entered into commercial pursuits, and how successful his exertions have been is best told by looking at the position which he now holds in the industrial life of the country. He has been extensively engaged in the manufacture of lumber and salt in the Saginaw valley, Michigan, and has had an important interest in mineral lands, and is proprietor of the valuable Saginaw mine in Marquette county, Michigan. In addition to these enterprises, Mr. Allison is engaged in farming upon an extensive scale, and is the largest land owner in the County of Lennox. Mr. Allison was warden of the counties of Lennox and Addington for the year 1881, and in 1883 was elected to parliament for the County of Lennox. He is a member of the Masonic craft, and has obtained the highest degrees conferrable in this country. He is, and has always been, a member of the Methodist church. In 1876, he married Amelia Elizabeth Membery.

Dowd, Rev. Patrick, pastor of St. Patrick's Church (Roman Catholic), Montreal, was born in the County of Louth, Ireland, in 1813, of respectable parents, in good circumstances. At an early age he evinced an ardent desire to devote himself to the church. He made his classical course at Newry; and went to Paris in 1832, and pursued his theological studies in the Irish college of that city. His course was a brilliant one, and on the 20th May, 1837, he was ordained priest by Monsiegneur Quelen, archbishop of Paris. After his ordination he returned to Ireland, where he lived about ten years--six with the archbishop of Armagh—and was president of the diocesan seminary of that town for one year. In 1847 he joined the order of St. Sulpice, and went to Paris for that purpose. After spending a year in their noviciate he was admitted a member of that illustrious body. He went to Montreal, June 21st, 1848, and officiated at St. Patrick's Church; and when Father Connolly left St. Patrick's, over thirty years ago, Father Dowd was appointed by the superior chief pastor of the congregation, a position which he has retained ever since. Shortly after his arrival, he saw the necessity of an asylum for Irish orphans in Montreal, and early in 1849 established one, and the same year commenced the building of the present St. Patrick's Orphan Asylum, which was opened in November, In 1865 he established St. Bridget's Home for the old and infirm, and the night refuge for the destitute. In 1866-7 he erected the present commodious building on Lagauchetiere street for the home and refuge. One can hardly estimate the vast amount of suffering relieved and of the good done by these charities. In 1872 he established St. Patrick's school, on St. Alexander street, This school is for opposite the church. girls, and is conducted by the reverend ladies of the Congregation of Notre Dame, whose reputation as educators is known all over America. Over 500 pupils attend this school, and the splendid institution is another monument of Father Dowd's untiring zeal to forward the interests of his people. Aided by the ladies of St. Patrick's congregation, he organized the annual bazaar for the support of the Orphan Asylum, and these bazaars have been, from the first, re-The first was held in markably successful. October, 1849, and they have been continued yearly till this date,—the last held was the thirty-sixth consecutive bazaar,-and we have pleasure in recording that Protestants as well as Catholics assisted in this good work.

Besides the above, Father Dowd has done much to ornament and beautify the interior of St. Patrick's Church, which, next to Notre Dame, is the most richly decorated in Montreal. In 1866, when the dismemberment of the ancient parish of Notre Dame was proclaimed, Father Dowd's quick and vigilant eye saw that the congregations of St. Patrick's and the other Irish churches of the city would suffer seriously thereby, and he promptly petitioned the Holy See that the Irish catholics of Montreal should be left in the undisturbed possession of their old His petition was received and privileges. substantially granted, and their position confirmed and defined to their satisfaction. In 1877, he organized the great Irish Catholic pilgrimage to Lourdes and Rome. can recollect the prayerful anxiety that was felt when the vessel carrying the pilgrims and their beloved pastor was not heard of for several agonizing weeks. Prayers were offered in all the churches, without distinction of creed, a pleasing proof, that the people of Montreal are not so bigoted or intolerant as some would make them appear. When they returned, Father Dowd met with an enthusiastic reception, and was presented with a life-size portrait of himself for the Presbytery of St. Patrick's, where it now hangs. Father Dowd has, on several occasions, been offered the highest dignities in the church, but has always declined them,twice, at least, having refused the mitre, namely, the sees of Toronto and Kingston, preferring to remain with his St. Parrick's congregation, to whom he has devoted his life, feeling as he has always felt, that he could do more good there than he could do elsewhere, even though he wore the mitre. His large and comprehensive views have preserved him from falling into defects common to petty minds. His great intellect never deals with minor difficulties, but grapples only with questions of major importance. He has exhibited, in his long career, great talent and enterprise in the conception and execution of the various good works referred to above, which stamps his as a master mind. Joined to remarkably deep and profound thought is his powerfully persuasive eloquence, whose golden chords have been tuned with exquisite harmony to the highest subjects of religion, not only in St. Patrick's pulpit, but also in Toronto, Kingston, Ottawa, and other places in this country and in Ireland, where his brilliant and impressive sermons were greatly ad-His depth of argumentation and mired. his sublimity of expression give way at co h h

pi da ha

88 gr

m

re

8U

pl is

pa

pe pe

sal

рe

ag

po fer

an

aft

for

de

Ιt

jus

ric

 \sin

to

Mo

tim

goo

say

73r

of

hea

Con

at

is a

son

the

ing

to

belli

min

Sher

 U_{pp}

judg

was

and

lotte

(now

four

Sher

ada,

eral,

moments to the charm of gay and innocent conversation. It is chiefly in the exercise of hospitality that the largeness of his Irish heart becomes apparent. His residence is the home of the Irish ecclesiastic, whether priest or prelate. While sharing his abundant but frugal repast, his welcome guests have frequently remarked that "the best sauces served at table were his fatherly smiles and his pleasing anecdotes." members of the Irish Canadian pilgrimage referred to, bear witness to the intense pleasure which his company affords. Most pleasing and fascinating in social circles, he is firm and unbending in the discharge of his pastoral duties; without any exception of persons and without consulting his own personal interests, he directs his flock with a safe hand, warns his parishioners of any impending dangers; he calms the fears of the agitated mind, consoles the sick, assists the poor and encourages and comforts pious and Endeared to all, respected fervent souls. and revered by all, his counsels are sought after by large numbers of his fellow-citizens, for his knowledge extends through every department of divine and human science. It is impossible in this brief sketch to do full justice to the Reverend Pastor of St. Patrick's; indeed, to write his memoir in full. since he came to Montreal in 1848, would be to write the history of the Irish catholics of Montreal for the last thirty-five years, so intimately has he been associated with every good and charitable work. We are glad to say, though Father Dowd has reached his 73rd year, he still preserves all the features of intellectual youth and enjoys excellent health.

one

rior

otre

on-

lent

was

rigi-

St.

the

, he

the

t in

old

and

tion

on.

ho-

All

was ims

of

ere

nc-

eo-

tol-

ar.

ith

ted

the

low

ca-

l in

re,

St.

lie-

lt,

he

re

lve

ito

Sherwood, Arthur Percy, Ottawa, Commissioner of Dominion Police, was born at Ottawa, on the 18th March, 1854. He is a son of Edward Sherwood, who was a son of Livins Peters Sherwood, he being the son of Captain Justus Sherwood, a leading U. E. loyalist, whose letters and reports to Lord Haldimand at the time of the rebellion, 1776-84, are preserved in the Dominion archives at Ottawa. Hon. L. P. Sherwood was speaker in the Parliament of Upper Canada from 1821 to 1825, and judge of the court of Queen's bench. was born in St. John's, Lower Canada, 1777, and died in Toronto. He married Charlotte Jones, of the township of Augusta (now the town of Brockville). They had four sons and three daughters—Hon. Henry Sherwood, attorney-general of Upper Canada, Hon. George Sherwood, receiver-general, and afterwards judge of the County of Hastings, Samuel Sherwood, formerly registrar of the City of Toronto, and Edward, late registrar of the County of Carleton. Of the daughters one married Hon. Jno. Crawford, late lieut.-governor of Ontario, one the Hon. John Elmslie, and the other the late Dr. John King, of Toronto. The mother of A. P. Sherwood was Isabella Penelope, daughter of the late Colonel Turner, of the Royal engineers, who was born in Ross Castle, Lakes of Killarney, Ireland. After being thoroughly grounded in elementary education, A. P. Sherwood entered the Ottawa Grammar school, where he concluded his educational course. At present he is captain in No. 1 company, Ottawa and Carleton rifles. He was deputy sheriff of the County of Carleton from June, 1877, till April, 1879; was chief of police of Ottawa from April, 1879, till October, 1882; was superintendent of Dominion police from October, 1882, till November, 1885, when, at the death of the late Augustus Keefer, he was appointed commissioner of Dominion police. In April, 1883, Captain Sherwood married Esther Alberta, youngest daughter of the late James D. Slater. Captain Sherwood was the special messenger who carried the government's warrant for Riel's execution to Regina, leaving Ottawa on Thursday night, and arriving in Regina by special at seven o'clock on Sunday evening.

Taylor, Joseph, Detroit, was born in England, in 1843. He was educated as a railroad man on the London and North Western Railroad, being duly apprenticed. He passed through the practical and clerical departments with much success, and in 1863, accepted the invitation of Thomas Swinyard, to act as his private secretary, with head-quarters at Hamilton, Ontario, Mr. Swinyard, at that time, being general manager of the Great Western Railway. Mr. Taylor remained on the Great Western for more than ten years, during most of the time as chief assistant to the general manager, and materially helped to develop the resources of the property. Since relinquishing rail-road life, Mr. Taylor has been connected with Messrs. Newberry & McMillan, Detroit, the large manufacturers of railway cars, car wheels, axles, bar iron, etc., and in the position of secretary has contributed greatly to the success of Newberry & Mc-Millan's various enterprises. He is a young and active man, of a practical turn of mind, and is highly esteemed for his business. ability. He is a classical scholar, and an accomplished linguist. A book written by him, under the title of a "Fast Life on the Modern Highway," and published by Harper Bros., New York, 1874, had a large sale, and contains a fund of humour, which is perhaps a characteristic of all Mr. Taylor's occasional writings, whether in verse or prose. He lives in a beautiful house, which he has recently built in one of the finest streets of Detroit. He has been twice married, but is now a widower with four children, the oldest an accomplished young lady, and the youngest a baby.

35

Dougall, Duncan, B.A., Barrister-at-Law, Windsor, Ontario, was born on the 6th October, 1841, at Rosebank, his father's residence, situate on the Detroit river, between Windsor and Amherstburg, about two miles above Amherstburg. He was the third son of James Dougall, son of John Dougall, and grandson of Duncan Dougall. manufacturers and merchants of Potter Hill House, near Paisley, Scotland. Dougall was born there in 1810, and came to Canada in 1826 to join his brother, John Dougall (late of the Montreal Witness, and now of the New York Witness), in the wholesale dry goods business. After doing business for a short time in Quebec, they removed to Montreal, and in 1828 James Dougall opened a branch warehouse in Toronto, which establishment was the first wholesale store in that city. Having been burnt out in Toronto in 1830, he removed to Windsor and commenced business there, still retaining an interest in the Montreal Peter Redpath subsequently enterprise. joined the Montreal firm, which was afterwards known as Dougall, Redpath & Co. Windsor, at that time, was an important shipping point for the west and north-west. James Dougall was, in addition to his other business, for many years agent of the Hudson Bay Company at Windsor, as well as agent for the Commercial Bank of Kingston. He afterwards acted for the Bank of Montreal, having sub-agencies at Amherstburg, Chatham and London under him, and he had likewise branch stores in these places. James Dougall took an active part as a magistrate in defending the frontier and suppressing the rebellion in 1836-7. being neither arms, ammunition or provisions to supply the militia which the magistrates had decided to call out, he advanced $15,000 from his own private funds to purchase the necessary supplies in Detroit, the only place where they could be obtained in time to be of service. In 1840 he built Rosebank House, where he resided until 1854. He was engaged largely in agriculture and horticulture, having extensive nurseries at Rosebank, and afterwards at Wind. sor, whither he again removed in 1854. He was a Reformer in politics, and in 1856 was a candidate for the Legislative Council for the Western Division, comprising the counties of Essex and Kent. He was op posed by Colonel-Prince and by Colonel Rankin, the former of whom was elected. He was again a candidate for the Legislative Council for the same division in 1860, and was defeated by Sir Allan MacNab by a very small majority. He was mayor of Windsor for seven or eight years, being chief magistrate at the time of the Prince of Wales' visit in 1860. James Dougall married, in 1832, Susan, youngest daughter of Francois Baby, who was for sixteen years a member of parliament for Essex, and who was appointed in 1807, by George III, lieutenant of the County of Essex, an office afterwards abolished. By this marriage he had seven children, five sons and two daughters. Duncan Dougall, after attending for a time a private school at Amherstburg, went in 1852 to the High school at Montreal, where he remained until 1856. In 1857 he entered McGill College, where he graduated, taking tne degree of Bachelor of Arts, in the spring of 1860. While at McGill he took two years of the law course connected with that university, but owing to his removal to Toronto in August, 1860, he did not take his degree in law. The Hon. John Abbott, Judge Torrance, Mr. Laflamme, O.C., and Mr. Lafrenne, Q.C., were the law lecturers at McGill at the time of his attendance at that institution. In August, 1860, he commenced the study of law in the office of Robinson & McBride, at Toronto, and continued in the same office until he was admitted as an attorney and called to the bar. in Michaelmas term, 1863. Immediately upon being called to the bar, Mr. Dougall entered into partnership with Robinson & McBride, and continued with them until' 1867, when, owing to ill-health, he retired ? from the firm, and gave up his practice for about a year, part of which time he spent in In 1868 he commenced practising Boston. at Windsor, and has continued to practise there ever since. While in Toronto in 1865, Duncan Dougall passed through the Military school, taking a certificate under Colonel Peacock, who was then the commandant of the school. Owing to ill-health, he has never since been able to take an active part in military affairs. He was elected deputyreeve of Windsor for the years 1874-75-76, but retired in the last-named year; and he has since declined the candidature for munie

ta

co

in

in

fri

tal

str

tio

the

the

me

he

W.

the

Ho

the

tion

cal

Que

eacl

fact

was

ad e

fess

scho

scho

Bea

uati

 $_{
m the}$

reco

lar.

scho

autu

unit

Dun

dark

powe

was i

cipal

refus

fore

unite

joyed

few

Dunc edly

Buch

schoo

Mr. I

field

toget

their

secon

cast

who w

he fou

nicipal honours. He has always, however, taken an active interest in municipal and county affairs. Mr. Dougall is a Reformer in politics, though very independent, and inclined to criticize the acts of his political friends, as well as those of his opponents, when he believes them to be wrong. He takes a warm interest in Canada, and holds strong views on most of the political questions of the day. Though brought up in the Presbyterian church, he has been for the past twenty five years an attendant and member of the Church of England. In 1883 he married Edith G., only daughter of J. W. Bloomer, of Baltimore, Maryland.

 $nd \cdot$

He

856

ncil

the

op>

nel

ed.

ive

 $\mathbf{n}\mathbf{d}$

ery

sor

gis-

les'

. in

ois

ap-

ant

rds

en

ın-

ed

ng

tt, nd

at nof Hunter, John Howard, Toronto, the son of William Hunter and Charlotte Howard, was born at Bandon, Ireland, on the 22nd December, 1839. After instruction under various classical and mathematical masters, he spent two years in the Queen's University, Ireland, carrying off each year honours and scholarships in the faculty of arts. On removing to Canada, he was admitted to the University of Toronto, ad eundem statum, and entered on the profession of teaching, first in Common (Public) schools, and soon after as a Grammar (High) school master. He became principal of Beamsville Grammar school in 1860, graduating as B.A. in the same year, and took the degree of M.A. in 1861. On the strong recommendation of that distinguished scholar, Professor G. P. Young, then Grammar school Inspector, Mr. Hunter was, in the autumn of 1865, appointed principal of the united Grammar and Common schools of Dundas. For secondary education those were dark days. Grammar school trustees had no power of taxation; the legislative grant was insignificant; assistance from the municipality was generally grudged, and often refused. No reliable revenue could therefore be had, unless the Grammar schools united with the Common schools, which enjoyed the right of taxation. Except at a few places—such as Galt, Hamilton, and Dundas,—the Grammar schools were wretchedly housed and equipped. The late J. M. Buchan was then teaching the Grammar school at Hamilton, and frequently visited Mr. Hunter at Dundas. In their study of field botany, the two friends often walked together the five-mile road which separated their schools. The forlorn landscape of secondary education was day by day overcast with fresh difficulties. Mr. Buchan, who was of a gentle disposition, and rather prone to despondency, often declared that he found the needful nervine and tonic in his companion's fearless and enterprising temperament. After the Grammar school masters, by incredible exertions, had overcome the want of books, appliances, and assistants, and had brought within a few weeks or months of the university, pupils who were likely to enter it with distinction, they found that Upper Canada college-a wealthy and pretentious Grammar school of Toronto-bribed away their pupils with socalled scholarships, passed them on to the University, and appropriated to itself the honours so hardly earned by the Grammar schools. This despicable work was fast demoralizing the Grammar schools, and presently would have proved fatal to the Provincial University itself. One autumn evening (Saturday, October 19, 1867), Mr. Hunter suggested that the Grammar school masters of the whole province be invited to a conference. The leading members of the profession were found to be favourable to this suggestion, and Messrs. Hunter and Buchan joined in a circular (dated November 30th, 1867), calling a convention at Toronto. A large attendance of leading educationists responded, and thus was organized the Grammar School Masters' Association. The meeting was held on Friday, January 31d, 1868, in the old Toronto Grammar school. Of the condition to which secondary schools had fallen in some country towns, an idea may be gathered from the circumstance that the Grammar school of the metropolis was housed in a wretched frame building, standing at the corner of Stanley and Nelson streets, at the precise focus of the most shameful purlieus of Toronto. This edifice, when under the stress of public indignation, it ceased to be a temple of learning, was discovered to be fit only for receiving rags and scrap iron. Out of the disreputable building and quarter in which the convention was assembled, Mr. Hunter made a telling object-lesson and a dramatic occasion .- Three-quarters of a century ago the Imperial government had munificently endowed with crown lands the Grammar schools of Upper Canada; the Toronto school had, moreover, through private munificence, acquired valuable city lots; how had things come to such a pass with Grammar schools generally, and how came the Metropolitan school to be housed in such a kennel? He would tell them. Upper Canada College had filched their patrimony, had filched also the private endowments of the Toronto school, and had served a writ of ejectment to turn it out of even such poor shelter as the school now

With its ill-gotten revenues, U.C. College was now demoralizing and destroying the Provincial Grammar schools.—This bolt out of the blue, startled not only the convention, but the whole province. Returns were moved for in the legislature. Indiscreet friends of Upper Canada College filled the columns of the Toronto journals with violent letters and editorials, and for some time Mr. Hunter was the best abused man in the province. He had a mass of convincing evidence already in his hands, but he held it back for six months, until he had critically examined every link, and riveted it in its place. Three several times the rolls of parliament had been destroyed by fire, and it was only by incredible labour and research that some of the missing records could be discovered. The Grammar School Masters' Association re-assembled in Toronto on Monday, August 3, 1868. So timorous were the Grammar school authorities of Toronto, that the use of their delectable building on Stanley street was refused, and the masters assembled in the Mechanics' Institute, now the Public Library building. Mr. Hunter presented his report in proof-sheets, which formed a closely printed pamphlet of 55 pages ("The U. C. College Question:" Dundas, Jas. Somerville, 1868). This document, supported in every line by references to the public records, laid bare an unexampled series of transactions-improper alienations of endownents; appropriations of the proceeds to private uses; wholesale plundering of educational trusts. The effect of this publication was instantaneous. The Hamilton Spectator, of September 2, 1868, said: "Short as is the time during which the above pamphlet has been afloat, we can see by our exchanges that the province is already profoundly moved by the facts which this statement discloses. Journals representing all shades of political opinion, journals discordant on almost every other question, are on this question quite unanimous." School boards, county councils, and the corporations of cities, towns, and villages, passed resolutions, and memorialized the legislature. When parliament met, Robert Christie, member for North Wentworth (now Inspector of Asylums and Prisons), formally laid a series of eight charges against the college, and moved for a select committee. The supporters of the college headed off this motion, and the matter was referred to a committee already sitting, the majority of whom were avowedly hostile. In spite of all obstructions, however, the evidence was flowing in, and setting so strong against the college, that the committee abruptly rose and reported progress. Next session the campaign was renewed with similar manœuvres, and almost every session since, there have been manifestations of the provincial feeling against the institution. Though U. C. College has not been disendowed, Mr. Hunter completely succeeded in his real objective points, which were the re-endowment of the Grammar schools, and the reform of university administration. In 1871, parliament increased the Grammar schools' appropriation from $57,500 to $70,000, and in 1873 to $82,000, and further increases have since been made. Municipal contributions to Grammar schools have been made obligatory, and the trustees have been given the power of taxation. Numerous other reforms advocated by his pen have reached the statutebook-notably the recognition of girls as High school pupils. While thus leading great educational movements, Mr Hunter was most assiduous in the immediate duties of his profession. His Grammar school won many brilliant distinctions. In August, 1870, he received, through the governorgeneral, Lord Lisgar, a cablegram from the Imperial government announcing that one of his students, Frank Beverley Robertson, had won a foremost place among the hundreds of matriculants in the University of London, and had been awarded the Dominion Gilchrist scholarship, with £100 sterling per annum for three years. In 1869, the encroachments of the Chief Superintendent of Education upon the rights of local school authorities were becoming so intolerable that Mr. Hunter determined to contest the ground inch by inch. School Bills of 1868-9, and 1869-70, were dissected in editorials contributed to the leading journals, and the Sandfield-Macdonald government refused to proceed with the measures. In the session 1870-71, the autocrat of the Education Office turned to bay, and would hear of no further postponement. The new bill was worse than any of its predecessors. Mr. Hunter called on Dr. Ryerson, and represented the unreasonable and extravagant character of some of the provisions. One clause provided what was in effect perpetual imprisonment for a parent neglecting to sent his child to school; other clauses were almost as bad. No modification would be entertained, and Mr. Hunter published an analysis of the bill. Friday, the 6th January, 1871, was a regular fieldnight in the Assembly. When the Hon.

M.

mer

mer

gest

han

ling

Blal

spee

to v

son'

publ

Janı

Afte

pera

lishii

print

as ir

autu

to th

Gran

ation

lished

Mr.

fully

matte

Specto

editor

arines

Mr.]

accom

he is

deep∴

learnii

with t

spirit i

none i

clear,

school

depres

legiate

the att

tions fl

dents c

Andrew

Willian

pointed

the Act

Superin

be entr

This be few mor

Mr.. Hu

bodies o

menced

ing of t

He urge

be cons

The dis

Question

force thi

M. C. Cameron moved the second reading, members from both sides joined in so tremendous an onslaught that the Globe suggested the Speaker of the House had better hang out a notice-board inscribed "Mangling Done Here." Late in the night Mr. Blake rose, and delivered a magnificent speech, in which he tore the School Bill to very shreds. Then followed Dr. Ryerson's notorious "Letters" to Mr. Blake, published in the Toronto Telegraph, of January 13, 1871, and following issues. After nearly three months of this vitu-peration, Mr. Blake replied simply by publishing his speech in the Assembly, and printing in parallel columns the School Bill as introduced and as amended. In the autumn of 1871, Mr. Hunter was appointed to the headmastership of the St. Catharines Grammar school—one of the oldest foundations in the province, having been established as the Grantham Academy in 1829. Mr. Hunter's reputation had now been fully established, and his movements were matters of general interest. The Hamilton Spectator, 20th of September, 1871, said editorially: "Dundas loses and St. Catharines gains immensely by this appointment. Mr. Hunter is not only one of the most accomplished teachers in the Dominion, but he is also a man endowed with a power of deep and original thought, with a love of learning which amounts to enthusiasm, and with the rare gift of being able to infuse his spirit into others. As a writer, we know of none in Canada with a style more pure, clear, and vigorous." The St. Catharines school was soon lifted from a state of great depression, and attained the rank of a Collegiate Institute; the building was doubled, the attendance was quadrupled, and distinctions flowed in on the school. Twice the students carried off the Gilchrist scholarship-Andrew Pattullo the scholarship for 1872-5, William Fraser for 1873-6.-Mr. Hunter pointed out that, even in its amended form, the Act of 1871 committed to the Chief Superintendent powers that could properly be entrusted only to a representative body. This became more evident even in the first few months, administration. In July, 1872, Mr. Hunter addressed several educational bodies on the position of affairs, and commenced a public agitation for the recasting of the Council of Public Instruction. He urged that the University Senate also be constituted on a representative basis. The disclosures in "The U. C. College Question" required little argument to enforce this latter change, and the senate was

o ′,

re-organized by the Act of 1873. reform of the Educational Council followed in 1874, and was precipitated by signed articles, contributed by Mr. Hunter, to the Ontario Teacher (August, 1873), and the Canadian Monthly Magazine (December, 1873). An interior view of Dr. Ryerson's personal administration was first given to the public in the latter article; some scandalous occurrences were disclosed, and references were furnished to official docu-It was of course expected that these new representative bodies would conduct their business under the public eye, and publish official records of their proceedings, but both bodies shut the doors in the faces of their constituents.

The phantom Council of Public Instruction, after a brief and flickering existence, was snuffed out. Mr. Hunter addressed himself, in 1873, to the administration of the University in articles published in the Ontario Teacher (April and August). The senate were severely handled for their antiquated curriculum, their secret sessions, and the non-publication of proceedings. Many of these medieval absurdities have since been laughed out of the curriculum; lean reports of the proceedings are now given to the press; but the objectionable secret sessions remain, and Mr. Hunter continues annually to make a motion in University Convocation for open sessions of the senate. For many years Mr. Hunter regularly kept up his scientific studies, and worked in a laboratory, pursuing private research. He especially interested himself in the project of technical education for our artisans, and in a published lecture delivered in the theatre of the Toronto Normal School (August, 1872), he elaborated a scheme for establishing a school of science, which would bear the same beneficial relation to artisans as the Agricultural College does to farmers. In 1873, the legislature gave the School of Science a statutory existence, though with an appropriation quite inadequate for a comprehensive treatment of technical instruction. In 1874, Mr. Hunter accepted the charge of the Government Institution for the Blind at Brantford. Under his management the institution became the largest, or next to largest, in America, and became widely known for the novelty and ingenuity of its appliances. To this busy hive all earnest students were welcomed, but for drones it was not "a pleasant land of drowsy-head." The Annual Reports were eagerly sought for by American and foreign correspondents, and were reproduced in several European languages. An article contributed to the Canadian Monthly, in August, 1880, presented, in probably its strongest form, the claim of the blind upon the state, In 1877, the succession to the property of his father, recently deceased, had called Mr. Hunter across the Atlantic, and while spending some months in Great Britain and on the Continent, he visited many of the leading institutions for the blind. Even without wilful obstructions, the faithful management of such an institution is a severe strain. From the very outset, Mr. Hunter had been incessantly embarrassed and thwarted by intriguing officials, and every innovation, however desirable, in rules or in methods of teaching, afforded of course an opportunity for mischief. In 1881, the introduction of a new writing appliance—designed by Mr. Hunter, and most strongly commended by the Louisville Convention of Instructors of the Blind -was seized on to mislead and excite the pupils, and seriously disturb the Institution. Mr. Hunter asked for an official inquiry into his management. The attack upon him proved such a contemptible fiasco that the provincial press roughly handled his assailants. Grip's cartoonist, Bengough, catching the spirit of the occasion, pictured Principal Hunter as routing a swarm of venomous mosquitoes with a flip of his handkerchief. After his assailants had been discomfited, and officially rebuked, Mr. Hunter asked to be relieved of his thankless charge. The government reluctantly complied, and promoted him to the responsible position of Provincial Inspector of Insurance, for which his knowledge of mathematics and finance adapted him. His retirement from the work at Brantford was deeply regretted in the United States and Europe as a most serious blow to the true interests of the blind; and it continues still to be lamented. Mr. Anagnos, the eminent director of the Boston Institution for the Blind, in his report for the year ending September 30th, 1885 (p. 85), enumerates the great investigators of Europe, who by their skill and research have advanced the education of the blind, and adds: "Unfortunately, since the retirement of Mr. J. Howard Hunter from the principalship of the Ontario Institution, in Brantford, Canada, Mr. A. Buckle, of York (England) is the only one among the English-speaking superintendents, on either side of the Atlantic, who can compare favourably with these men in intellectual acumen, force, and clearness of thought, refinement of taste, ripe scholarship, and linguistic attainments." While at Brantford, Mr. Hunter occasionally refreshed his mind with oldtime studies. His versatile taste is perhaps best illustrated by a brief enumeration of papers contributed to the Canadian Monthly in 1880: January; "The University Question" (a searching examination of the educational horizon at that date); March, "Studies of Greek Poets;"

"The Civil Service in Great Britain;" August, "The Education of the Blind,"
"The Early History of Galt;" September,
"Greek Classical Literature." In 1881, Mr. Hunter made better known to Canadians the merits of their French laureate, L. H. Fréchette. This article (Canadian Monthly, January, 1881) was reproduced in French on both sides of the Atlantic, and called forth a very handsome acknowledgment from the poet himself. On assuming the Department of Insurance, Mr. Hunter devoted several months to the close study of insurance legislation. He brought together into a manual the provincial statues, which were dispersed through many volumes, and prefixed an exhaustive analysis of the whole legislation. The important judgment of the Imperial Privy Council on provincial jurisdiction in Insurance was analysed with such care and skill as to elicit judicial recognition. This publication has proved of great utility to insurance companies, and to the legal profession. In 1882 a firm of publishers invited Mr. Hunter to give the public schools the benefit of his teaching experience and literary taste, by compiling and editing a set of "Royal Readers." The committee to whom the government referred the various competing Readers gave Mr. Hunter's books the first place of literary merit, upon which the government awarded them exclusive authorization for Normal schools and other Government institutions. The strongest commendations were also given to the public press by well-known authors and littérateurs W. J. Rattray, in the Mail, J. E. Collins and J. C. Dent in the World, etc. The publication of Picturesque Canada, in 1882-3, drew on Mr. Hunter's pen for contributions, and in his articles entitled, "From Toronto Westward," "Central Ontario," and "South-Eastern Quebec," he took the opportunity of restoring much romantic history, which had been altogether lost or forgotten. These articles were very warmly received by literary critics, and Mr. Hunter was urged to undertake a more extensive treatment of our national history. He has

devo years the p to le tende to say fect p by w ample opinie раввіс his pe he re that i his in unerr of del sage o kin's, of des ever birds, flush o once to while o mical l Hunte daught ness, S sons ar sons, G greatly > medals McI of this Millan, Septem educati was inc brother entered ing his eral sur waukee knowled and ad been m roads, h ent kind to the c This m acquirin tations that Hu the com tending much con pany, an considera devoted the spare moments of the past few years to collecting historical material, but the pressure of official duties has not hitherto left him the leisure necessary for extended authorship. It is not exaggeration to say that Mr. Hunter is master of a perfect prose style. His work is characterized by wide and careful observation, and by ample thought; and where it deals with opinion it is always sincere and sometimes passionate. But when Mr. Hunter turns his pen to a description of external nature, he reveals all the qualities of the poet. All that is beautiful in nature he loves, and in his interpretation of the same his touch is unerring, and sympathetic. The same sortof delight that one feels in reading a passage of Gauthier's prose, or of our own Ruskin's, is experienced in coming upon a piece of description in Mr. Hunter's pages, whatever be the theme, the whistling of wild birds, the dyes of our autumn woods, or a flush of color in the sky. His touch is at once true to nature and the human heart, while one delights to linger over the rhythmical balance of his periods. In 1862, Mr. Hunter was married to Annie Gordon, daughter of the late John Gordon, of Inverness, Scotland. The family consists of four sons and three daughters. The three eldest sons, Gordon, William, and Alfred, have all greatly distinguished themselves in Toronto University, carrying off scholarships and medals.

Univer

McMillan, Hugh, Detroit, the subject of this sketch, is the son of William Mc-Millan, and was born in Hamilton, Ontario, September 28th, 1845, in which city his education was received until 1861, when he was induced to go to Detroit, whither his brother, James, had preceded him. Hugh entered into railway life in that city, securing his first position in the office of the general superintendent of the Detroit & Milwaukee Railway. He rapidly acquired a knowledge of railway departmental details and administration, and might now have been merely a prominent manager of railroads, had not his predilections for a different kind of life led him to turn his attention to the operations of the Michigan Car Co. This manufactory was about this time acquiring proportions exceeding the expectations of its promoters and it was here that Hugh McMillan began as secretary of the company, those arduous labours extending through several years, which so much contributed to the success of his company, and laid the foundation of his present considerable wealth. In course of time, when his brother, James, assumed the presidency of the company, Hugh took control as vice-president and general manager, which position he still retains. In addition to this office he is also vice-president of the Baugh Steam Forge Company, and of the Detroit Car Wheel Company. He also holds administrative positions in many other companies, the list of which is too long to recite. Although only forty years of age, he is president of one of the most flourishing banks in the city of Detroit, the Commercial National. A few years ago he was one of a syndicate formed for the purpose of constructing a railroad across the Upper Pen-insula of Michigan, from Point St. Ignace to Marquette. This work was put through with great energy and dispatch, and in this enterprise Mr. McMillan developed great ability as an organizer, and afterwards as an administrator. This road will in the near future also connect Sault Ste. Marie with Marquette, and thus become an important link between Mr. McMillan's native land and his adopted country. He has been from the beginning a director and secretarytreasurer of the road. He is of a social disposition, and entertains in a princely manner at his fine modern house on Jefferson avenue, in Detroit, as well as at his country chatean near Lake St. Clair. Mr. McMillan has been president of the "Detroit Club," a leading social organization of three hundred prominent citizens of Detroit. Eighteen years ago he married Ellen Dyar, an accomplished and amiable lady, who is now the happy mother of a daughter and three boys, whose education is progressing. As stated, Mr. McMillan is still a young man, and possessed of the aggressiveness and energy which are his prominent personal characteristics, he cannot fail, with the blessing of health, to still further extend his wide influence and enterprises, for the benefit of his community and country.

Cant, John, Galt, was born in Rossshire, Scotland, on the 30th June, 1830. He came to Canada with his father, in 1843, settling at Galt; and here his father died in 1869, leaving a family of eleven children, John being the fourth. In Galt John Cant learned the trade of harness making, but about the year 1872 he gave up this business, and entered as book-keeper in the firm of Cant, Gourlay & Co. Here he remained till 1881, when he entered into partnership with William Laidlaw, Hugh Cant and Andrew Cant, in the manufacture of woodworking machinery; and the operations of the house have since met with considerable

In 1882, Mr. Cant was elected to the town council of Galt, and at the period of writing, is serving his third year in that body. He has likewise sat at the schoolboard, having been always interested in the promotion of education. Mr. Cant is a Presbyterian, and has for many years been a trustee of Knox church. In general politics he has always taken an intelligent interest, and is a staunch advocate of the policy of the party led by Hon. Edward Blake. Mr. Cant married in 1861, Margaret, daughter of the late John Veitch, of the town of Galt, and one of the early settlers of that place. By this lady he has a family of three children, one son and two daughters. Our subject, it may be said, is senior member of the business house already alluded to; and he gives his attention to the financing and general management of the same. Mr. Cant has all those qualities which in commerce make a man successful, and which obtain the esteem and the good will of the community. MacMurchy, Archibald, M.A., Toronto.-The subject of this sketch, the wellknown and much respected rector of the Toronto Collegiate Institute, and one of the foremost educationists of the province, was born in Scotland, on a farm by the sea shore, called Stewartfield, not very far from the beautiful town of Campbelltown, in the Cantire peninsula of Argyleshire. When very young he was sent to the parish school near by the family home, and lived his early life amid the rugged hills and scented heather of his native Highlands, with the roar of the sea in his ear and its bracing ozone in his lungs. His parentage on both sides was Highland, his father's people being farmers, and for years furnishing ministers, elders, church workers to the ecclesiastical establishment of Scotland. The deeply-embedded influences, arising from devotion to such work, which has done so much for Scotland and for Scotland's sons, left their impress upon the young lad's mind, and was an important factor, in later years, in the building up of his character. When quite young be came to Upper Canada with his father's and his grandfather's family, the latter consisting of eleven sons, all eager and able to subdue the wilds of Canada. Of these sturdy young men, one son, the Rev. John MacMurchy. was for years the much loved minister of the Eldon congregation; while the others became prosperous farmers and useful citizens in various parts of the province. The subject of our present sketch was early drawn has honourably and usefully been engaged for years. When quite a young lad he began teaching in one of the rural schools of the province, at which work he remained until 1854, when he entered the Normal school, Toronto, then under the able management of the late T. J. Robertson, assisted by the Rev. Wm. (now Doctor) Ormiston, of New York. This training school for teachers he attended for twelve months, in order to qualify himself for his profession. After receiving his certificate, he opened and taught the first public school in the town of Collingwood, and in 1856 matriculated at the University of Toronto, taking honours in several departments. During his university career, he taught for a time in the Provincial Model school, Archibald MacCallum, M.A., being headmaster, and while at college was able to take first-class honours in mathematics, English branches, French, the sciences, and logic. Throughout his course he was a first-class honour man in mathematics, in which department he shone, and in it graduated with firstclass honours and a medal. In his university career some of his fellow-undergraduates and friendly competitors were the late Chief Justice Moss, recently deceased; the able litterateur, William J. Rattray; the present Chancellor of Ontario, J. A. Boyd, M.A.; and Thomas Hodgins, M.A., Q.C., Master in Chancery. On graduating, Mr. MacMurchy devoted himself with great earnestness and assiduity to his life-work as an educator, his academic standing and honours in sciences, mathematics, and moderns, as well as his sterling character, serving him in good stead. In 1858 he was appointed mathematical master in the Toronto Grammar school, at that time under Dr. M. C. Howe, and succeeded to the rectorship in 1872, on the retirement from ill-health of the Rev. Dr. Wickson. In this important position, as head of the leading educational institution in the provincial school system, Mr. MacMurchy has done excellent work, as the record of the institute shows, in the honours taken by the pupils at the matriculation examinations of the various Canadian colleges and universities. His thorough scholarship, varied professional attainments, and careful training has enabled the institute to turn out numbers of young men who have made, and are making, their mark in Canadian public, professional and mercantile life, and fitted many others to fill their individual spheres in Canadian society with credit to themselves, and with to the educational profession, in which he | reflected honour and credit on the institution

in ·

bes

sch

pro

fiel

Sen

sen

pro

the

he 1

this

able

"Re

awa

sens

have

lem,

of a

com

auth

tics,

giver

and .

with

Besid

these

ling

in the

their 1875

able

which

tionis

these

MacM

lish a he ha

payme

works

hands intere

also le

sume

of car

profes

Month

to be

say mu

vate li

bear ea ness, a

to the

his per

him or very pr

comme

ciplinar

more ge

exhibite

vate life

in which they received their education. But besides Mr. MacMurchy's own special school-work, he has found time to serve the profession with great advantage in other For years he was a member of the Senate of Toronto University, as the representative of the teaching profession of the province, and has been an active worker in the Ontario Teachers' Association, of which he was at one time president. While filling this office Mr. MacMurchy delivered two able inaugural addresses on the subject of "Religious Education in Schools," which have awakened the public conscience to a lively sense of duty on this important subject, and have led to an imperfect solution of the problem, in the issue by the Ontario government of a volume of extracts from the Bible recommended for use in schools. As an author, in his own department of mathematics, he has also ably served education, and given to it a number of works in elementary and advanced arithmetic, which have met with great acceptance from the profession. Besides receiving authorization, in 1870, for these works in his own province, their sterling worth has won for them authorization in the neighbouring province of Quebec, and their introduction and use elsewhere. In 1875 he also prepared and published a valuable book of "Exercises in Arithmetic," which has been of much service to educationists and of real value to pupils. In these educational ventures, it is due to Mr. MacMurchy to say, that to the joint English author of two of his early publications, he has most honourably made large annual payments, derived from the sales of these works; an innovation as creditable as it was handsome. Mr. MacMurchy's enthusiastic interest in the educational profession has also led him, for many years back, to assume the financial responsibility and care of carrying on a well-known and high-class professional serial, the Canada Educational Monthly, of which he is now understood It is not permitted us to to be editor. say much here of Mr. MacMurchy in private life; but his many and ardent friends bear eager testimony to the warmth, heartiness, and fidelity of his friendships, and to the uprightness and sterling worth of his personal character. Those who know him only in the class-room, in which he very properly is a strict, and some would commendably say, an old-fashioned dis-ciplinarian, miss, in the severe rector, the more genial side of his character, which is exhibited to friends and intimates. In private life, he is beloved for his warm-hearted, true, and affectionate manner, his wide sympathies, his shrewd knowledge of men and the world, and his vast fund of political professional, and social humour. The latter is ever chastened by a religious cast of mind, which gives elevation to his character. and is the mainspring and source of his charity and sense of brotherhood. In religion, Mr. MacMurchy, is a Presbyterian, of the Old Kirk section of that body, and is an elder and an active and useful member of the congregation worshipping in Old St. Andrew's, Toronto. He is also superintendent of the Sunday school of this church, and has acted in that capacity, in connection with other churches, during the past sixteen years. In church matters he has always taken a lively interest, and at various times has represented congregations in the minor courts of the church as well as in the Presbyterian General Assembly, to which he has been repeatedly elected by various presbyteries. In politics he is a staunch Conservative. Mr. MacMurchy has also given his services to the nation in connection with the volunteer militia of the country. In 1860, when an undergraduate of Toronto University, he joined the university corps of the Queen's Own Rifles, and was present at the affair with the Fenians at Ridgeway, on the 2nd of June, 1866. Subsequently he entered the Military school at Toronto and won a 2nd class certificate, after obtaining which he acted for some years as lieutenant of the Toronto Garrison Artillery. In 1859, Mr. MacMurchy married Marjory Jardine, daughter of James Ramsay, of Linlithgow, Scotland, who came to Toronto in 1850. Mr. Ramsay belonged to a branch of an old Scottish family. Mr. MacMurchy has three sons and three daughters, who inherit the virtues, as well as the intellectual attainments of their worthy parents.

Beattie, John, J. P., Fergus, Ont., was born in Aberdeenshire, Scotland, on April 22, 1821. He is a son of William and Elizabeth (McDonald) Beattie, his parents being both natives of Aberdeenshire. Wm. Beattie pursued the calling of a farmer, and emigrated to Canada in 1839, settling in the township of Nichol, Wellington, taking up a farm there, and continuing upon the same until his death in 1862. John Beattie received a common school education in Scotland, and came to Canada with his parents in 1839. He remained for a while with his father upon the farm, but afterwards took up land for himself, which he continued to farm until 1867, in which year he was appointed agent of the Royal Canadian Bank, at Fergus. This position he held until the suspension of that institution in 1870. He shortly afterwards opened an office for himself as private banker, in which avocation he has continued ever since. was lieutenant in the old Canadian militia at the time Sir Edmund W. Head was gov-In 1851, Mr. Beattie was elected to the township council of Nichol, and continued to sit in that body until 1860, when he was elected reeve of the township. This office he held until 1867, when he resigned. In 1871 he was appointed clerk of the County of Wellington, and this office he still holds to the entire satisfaction of the community. Mr. Beattie was among one of the first J. P.'s appointed in his county. He has been secy. -treasurer of the Nichol Mutual Fire Insurance Co. since 1860; and he is a member of Mercer lodge, No. 347, Freemasons, of Fergus, and is treasurer of the In politics, Mr. Beattie is a Conservative, and he is a member of the Conservative Association of Wellington. visited the greater portion of Canada, having a large interest in lands in the North-West territories. In religion he is a steadfast Presbyterian. Mr. Beattie married in 1850, Janet, daughter of Thomas Wilson, a farmer of the township of Garafraxa, Wellington, and a native of Lanarkshire, Scotland; and he has by this union a family of thirteen children, eleven of whom are living.

Abbott, Harry Braithwaite, Victoria, British Columbia, was born at Abbottsford, Eastern Townships, on the 14th of June, 1829. He is a son of the Rev. Joseph Abbott, missionary of the Church of England, who was sent out by the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel. His father, the Rev. Mr. Abbott, was born in Westmoreland, England, and educated at Glasgow University; and his mother, Harriet Elizabeth, was a daughter of the Rev. Richard Bradford, at one time chaplain of Her Majesty's forces at William Henry (Sorel), and afterwards resident missionary at Chatham, Quebec. H. B. Abbott was educated at the Montreal High School and McGill He assisted in raising a battalion of infantry in Argenteuil, at the time of the Trent affair, of which he was gazetted He has since been placed upon He has been a justice the retired list. of the peace, and a commissioner under the Act for the better preservation of the peace on public works since 1884. He was appointed on the engineering staff of the St. Lawrence and Atlantic Railway in 1847

(afterwards the Grand Trunk Railway), under C. S. Gzowski, chief engineer, and remained upon it till its completion, after which he was appointed resident engineer of a division. In 1857, Mr. Abbott took a contract in connection with Cortland & Freer, for the maintenance of way of 150 miles of the Grand Trunk Railway, and on the expiry of this contract, the firm of Abbott & Freer leased the Rivière du Loup section of that railway, which they opened and ran successfully for one year. then took charge of the Carillon and Grenville Railway, in which they had a large interest, and remained in charge of the same till its purchase by the Ottawa River Navigation Company. In 1864, he was appointed managing director and chief engineer of the Brockville and Ottawa Railway, and in 1872 built the Carleton Place and Ottawa Branch of the Canada Central Railway. He was then elected president of the Brockville and Ottawa Railway, and managing director of the Canada Central, and the Brockville and Ottawa railways, in which position he remained till 1873. In the following year he entered into a contract in conjunction with Duncan Macdonald, for the construction of the portion of the Occidental Railway between Montreal and Ottawa, and built a portion of that road, including the bridges across the Back River and Reviére du Chene. In 1876, he organized the Eastern Extension Railway Company, and undertook the construction of the line, and was appointed engineer and manager of construction. In 1877, he was re-appointed managing director of the B. and O. and C. C. railways, and remained in that position for one year, when he proceeded to Nova Scotia and assumed charge as chief engineer and manager of the Eastern Extension Railway, retaining this office until June 1882, when he was appointed manager of construction of the Sault Ste. Marie branch of the Canadian Pacific Railway, which he duly completed. He returned to Montreal in March, 1884, and received the appointment of supervising engineer of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and in the following May, was appointed manager of construction of the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railfrom Sudbury West. He completed the division (about 200 miles) in May, 1885, and laid track upon seventy-five miles further. Mr. Abbott made all the arrangements, and had charge of the passage of the troops over this division in March and April, 1885, when the volunteers were on the march to the North-West. He was appointed general superin-

tend

Brit

poli

serv

mon

1872

alwa

Mar

His

and

Bool

on 19

well

gow

his

leavi

of w siste

rema

fathe

of Co

Mr.

Frint

1850.

came

early

bet w

used

days,

to a

mode

dug d

mill

other

his de

severa

marri

howev

gener reache

and i

with,

was a

thoug

cient

til ad

much

devise

agains

motion

though

ing dra

He res

particu

Cain's

absurd

Samso

earth 1

spilled

tendent of the Canadian Pacific Railway in British Columbia in January, 1886. In politics, Mr. Abbott has always been a Conservative, and he ran for the House of Commons in Brockville and Elizabethtown in 1872, but was defeated. In religion, he has always been an Episcopalian. He married Margaret Amelia, daughter of Judge Sicotte. His home has been in Brockville since 1864, and his family are now resided there.

Carswell, Robert, Toronto, Law Bookseller, was born at Colborne, Ontario. on 19th July, 1838. His parents, Hugh Carswell and Elizabeth Hanna, came from Glasgow in 1833. His mother died soon after his birth, and his father two years later, leaving behind three sons and one daughter. of which the subject of this sketch, and his sister, now living in St. Louis, Mo., only Robert was indentured by his remain. father to Henry Frint, living two miles east of Colborne, where he remained until after Mr. Frint's death, ten years later. Frint was a pioneer, who passed away in 1850, at about seventy-five years of age. He came with his parents from Germany at an early age, when there were no settlements between Cobourg and the river Trent. He used to tell of the hardships of his early days, when wheat had to be taken ten miles to a mill to be ground, and when the best mode of travel was in streams in a canoe dug out of a log. He built the first flour mill west of the Trent, and he also built other flour and saw mills, and at the time of his death owned a large property in mills and several hundred acres of land. Mr. Frint married twice, but had no children. He, however, adopted nine orphans. He dealt generously by all, giving to each boy, as he reached twenty-one years, fifty acres of land, and in his will he remembered each one with, at least, two hundred dollars. He was a man of good judgment in business. though illiterate. His word passed as sufficient in all dealings. He worked hard, until advanced in years, and then he spent much of his time in the house, trying to devise inventions, one to make a vessel sail against the wind, another to cause perpetual motion, &c. He was temperate in his habits. though he daily took his morning and evening dram, never exceeding a wine glass full. He read the Bible, but could not believe it, particularly the early part of Genesis; and Cain's going out and finding a wife, seemed absurd to him, as also the tales about Samson and David. He did not believe the earth revolved because his mill pond never spilled out in the night. These characteristics caused the neighbours to say that he never could be saved, and so when he died, the minister did not send him to heaven. He made no intimate friends, and there were but few at his bedside when he died. He benefited others, and seemed satisfied with small returns for his kindness. whose tender mercies are over all His works has a means of bringing out whatever of genuine good there was in a life, which measured by church creeds would be condemned, but regarded by deeds appeared to manifest in a high degree the love of his neighbour. Robert Carswell made the best use of his time when allowed to attend the common schools, and qualified for teacher at the Grammar school in Brighton, and at the age of seventeen commenced teaching. After teaching two years he entered at its opening the then Belleville Seminary, where he remained about two years, six months of which he was English teacher, and member of its faculty. Then he went to Middletown, Connecticut, U. S., to enter the Wesleyan University, and continued there two years. in which he passed the examinations required up to the third year. At this time his finances gave out. His entire course in education was attended with difficulty having only enough money to get along by the most rigid economy, and availing himself of every opportunity to earn something. The last year he sold books to the students. The studies pursued were those assigned in the usual arts course. He was at this time an earnest member of the Methodist Episcopal church, and had made his home with the Rev. S.W. LaDu, since he began teaching. At college he joined a secret society, the "Alpha Delta Phi" for mutual benefit, and attended its meetings regularly, entering heartily into them, but resolved after leaving college not again to join any society, for pledge himself beyond what the church or Bible directs, thus retaining fully the right of judging for himself in all acts of charity or otherwise. Mr. Carswell commenced business as agent for Appleton's Cyclopædia in 1862, removing to Toronto two years afterwards. In this line he did not succeed, but was led into business with the lawyers soon after. Owing to entire lack of training and want of capital, he did not enter exclusively into his present business until 1872. He was the first to found in Canada an exclusive law book trade. When he commenced in 1872 there was probably not sold in Canada in one year the value of law books now sold by his house in one month. He has so conducted and guided his business that daily orders and communications are now received from every part of Canada, from Halifax to Vic-The postage account of his house in one year will reach a thousand dollars, and travellers last year visited the chief villages, and all the towns, and all the cities in every province in the Dominion, as also the chief cities in the United States and Great Britain. It is a business the special growth of civilization. Owing to the multiplicity of transactions in civil life, law books are required on almost every subject of business. By means of cheap postage a book can now be transmitted so cheaply to any part of Canada or the United States, that the expense is not felt, and banking facilities are so convenient that small accounts can be collected promptly, or money remit-In 1877 he erected the Equity Chambers, the fine building, among the best in the city, on the corner of Adelaide and Victoria streets, and which is used chiefly for law offices. He has in connection with his business a law book bindery, in which are employed about twenty persons. He has made no travels as such, but has spent about three years in the United States, and has travelled throughout Canada and the northern states east of the Mississippi, and crossed the ocean to Great Britain ten times, and lived in Edinburgh, Scotland, four years. He left Canada early in 1879, not then intending to again return, and opened a law book business in Edinburgh, which is still carried on. Religion has had a hold on him from a very early period, and he joined the Methodist church at sixteen years of age, and from then until he was thirty-two he took an active part in all the prayer meetings, class meetings, Sunday-schools, revival meetings, and occasional camp meetings, that were held in that body in the vicinity in which he resided. He had considerable conversation with many of its ministers, studied carefully its doctrines, listened to its best preachers, and fully believed that the Methodist church was the best, and good enough for anyone. About sixteen years ago, there began to be held services of the New Jerusalem (or Swedenborgian) in Toronto, conducted by John Parker, a brass finisher. Mr. Parker frequently visited Mr. Carswell's place of business, sometimes calling in question certain tenets of Methodism, which he always succeeded in easily placing at a disadvantage. Once he challenged Mr. Carswell to prove that Christians were better than heathens. The question at first was annoying, but he stated persons seldom changed the religion of their birth. If born Roman catholics, Episcopalians, Presbyterians, Baptists or Methodists, such they lived and died with rare exceptions, and the same occurred with Mahommedans, Buhddists, &c., &c. In reply to an appeal to Methodist experimental religion, he stated that no experience in the breast could equal that of the Spiritualist, who claims to hold intercourse with his departed ones,-such a one asserting that he enjoys actual intercourse with the spiritual world, and is enthusiastic over its bodily delights. Thus no one should judge of his religion from any warmth of feeling in his body. The learned heathen is quite as sanguine that his sacred books are as old and as holy as the Christian is of his Bible. The object Mr. Parker had in view in this conversation was the need of a higher perception of the truths of the Bible. He insisted that the Bible was written according to a fixed law, in which the literal sense was not so much to be attended to as its spiritual truths, which were now revealed, and that the truths of religion can be seen rationally and as clearly and positively known to be true as is any proposition in Euclid, and can be brought home to the conviction of any one who is willing to study in like manner, as mathematical truth to its students. Mr. Carswell having been frequently worsted by Mr. Parker without ever having on his part attacked that gentleman, finally to test his contentions for the Word of God, Mr. Carswell put questions as follows .- You say in the Bible that a word in Genesis has the same meaning spiritually as in the New Testament, and if so, what does the word "man" mean in the first chapter of Genesis? Mr. Parker's answer was that God is the only man, but that the Lord is in the constant effort to make man, and he is made a man only so far as he receives from him love and wisdom. That is, man is a receptacle of love and wisdom, or their opposites. At this reply Mr. Carswell smiled, and asked what about memory, hatred, malice, &c., if man is only a recipient of love and wisdom? Mr. Parker's retort was that memory was the store house of what wisdom required. and that hatred, malice and the like, were from the love of self, that is, if any one crossed another's love, hatred was the result, and in fact, that all things in man's mind could be referred to love or wisdom, or their opposites. Finding himself likely again to come out second, Mr. Carswell turned to the New Testament and quoted "Take up thy bed and walk," and asked if

 $\mathbf{d}\mathbf{o}$

hi

sp

on

en

dia

an

fav

cat

the

Je: tha

fur

lem

the

tion

full

Dui thou

at fi

deņ

dent

has he fo

he h

in hi

Crea

nitel

men

seen

is the

and

Chris

man'

power

to re

This

doctri

then '

of thr

as it is man i

all tru

of God

expect head ?

himse

 \mathbf{Heave}

tle say

of the room

Jesus :

the H is, whe

said re

what does "bed" mean there? The reply was, "bed" means "doctrine." That is, if a man is a Methodist he rests in those doctrines and walks; walking denotes to do his duties. To take up one's bed and walk, spiritually means to go in the discharge of one's daily duties according to his conscience. Mr. Carswell believing that Methodism had nothing to fear from investigation, and that the points made against it, and in favour of the New Jerusalem, were only because taken by a skilful opponent, and that the same might be made against the New Jerusalem, requested some book to read that would give, in a compact form, the fundamental doctrines of the New Jerusalem. From that date Mr. Carswell began their study, hoping to find flaws, contradictions and absurdities in them, that would fully offset those taken against Methodism. During the first year he read about two thousand pages, but though he read much, at first, that he did not believe, he could not deny it. He has now been a diligent student of those doctrines for fifteen years, and has found them beyond all price. Though he found much he could not at first receive. he has since been satisfied that the fault was in his lack of knowledge. The Lord as his Creator, Saviour and Regenerator, has been greatly exalted in his conception as an infinitely loving Father, and his regard for all men more fully enhanced and all clearly seen to be his brethren. The chief doctrine is that God is one in essence and one in person, and that He assumed our humanity. and manifested himself as the Lord Jesus Christ. That in that humanity he conquered man's foes, delivering him from the then power of hell, and made it possible for man to return again to his heavenly Father. This is placed strongly against the popular doctrine that God is in three persons. For then the mind is unable to think otherwise of three persons than of three gods, which, as it is contrary to the Word, destroys in man in his first and highest plane of being all true conceptions of God, and as the idea of God is the head of religion, what can be expected of a body on which is an insane head? That Jesus is the only God, he himself testifies, when he says all power in Heaven and on earth is his; and the Apostle says, in him Jesus dwells all the fulness of the Godhead bodily. If all, there is no room for another. There is a trinity in Jesus; the Father being within him, and the Holy Spirit being sent by him. That is, when Jesus breathed on his disciples he said receive ye the Holy Spirit. Man is an image of this trinity, his soul answering to the Father, his body to the Son, and his activities or sphere to the Holy Spirit. That is, there is a trinity in man, but he is only one person, so God is one in person and one in essence. The revelation of the spiritual truths of the Bible within its literal sense constitutes the Lord's second coming, and we are now living in the new age when all things are to become new. Mr. Carswell's whole ambition is to do what he can to bring to the free examination of his fellowmen these glorious truths; free examination, because what a man does not receive willingly does not remain in him, but may be the means of great injury to him hereafter. Only what a man really loves abides in him after he leaves the body. Death unveils the man, but does not change him more than a night's rest.

Vincent, Joseph Louis, Montreal, was born at Longueuil, opposite Montreal, on the 19th March, 1835. His father, Antoine Vincent, a farmer of Longueuil, and his mother, Melanie Cèrè, both sprung from ancient French families, who settled in the county about 1750. The Vincent family is still very numerous in Longueuil and different parts of the province. After having passed through the usual grades of the elementary school in his native village, he entered upon the course of the Longueuil Model School, where he acquired sufficient knowledge to fit him for mechanical pursuits, in which he subsequently showed great proficiency, having conducted for a number of years, in partnership with other gentlemen, a large iron foundry at Longueuil. Shortly after confederation, M. Vincent turned his attention to the public service, and was appointed to a position in the Inland Revenue at Montreal, on the Having successfully 1st August, 1867. passed the first-class and special class examinations prescribed by that department, his qualifications soon attracted the attention of his superiors, who promoted him to the deputy collectorship in July, 1877. The position of collector becoming vacant, he was in May, 1879, advanced to that office, which he now holds, and the duties of which he fills to the satisfaction of his department and the public generally. M. Vincent's promotion was entirely due to his meritshis special knowledge, activity, and atten-Nor were tion to every detail of duty. these qualifications reserved only for his department. He found time and occasion to serve his native municipality. On the 16th July, 1867, he was elected school commissioner for the village of Longueuil, an office to which he was re-elected on the 13th July, 1877, and which he still continues to fill with such acceptance that he was elected president of the school commissioners in July, 1880, an honour which he yet enjoys. He has been treasurer and, later, president of the Benevolent Society of St. Antoine de Longueuil, and is at present treasurer of the St. Jean Baptiste Society of the same locality. Furthermore, M. Vincent has rendered valuable public service to his native town, having been elected municipal councillor in 1876, and again in 1878. It was during this interval that the Longueuil water works were constructed, and Councillor Vincent was chosen chairman of the committee, where his practical knowledge and business aptitudes proved of great assistance, and he was present at the inauguration of this important work in October, 1877. The reward for all these services was reached in 1880, when M. Vincent was elected mayor of the town of Longueuil. increasing duties of his office as collector of Inland Revenue did not allow him, however, to occupy the civic chair more than one year. Like most French-Canadians, M. Vincent was born and bred a Roman On the 9th November, 1858, he married Philomene, daughter of Narcisse Bissonette and Therese Theroux. The fruit of this union was fifteen children, four of whom died in tender age. The eldest son, Louis Napoleon, died in his eighteenth year; and the third, Phileas Antoine, was cut off at the age of twenty-two, after having obtained his diploma as civil engineer at the hands of the Hon. G. Ouimet, superintendent of Public Instruction. He had followed the course of the Polytechnic of Montreal. Nine children are now living-three daughters and six sons.

Preston, Robert H., M.D., Newboro', M.P.P. for South Leeds, was born in the township of Bastard, Leeds, Ontario, on the 15th March, 1840. He is a son of Anthony and Margery (Lang) Preston, his mother being a daughter of the late Major Lang, an officer in His Majesty's service in the yeomanry of Ireland during the rebellion there of 1798. Major Lang came to this country about the year 1820, and settled in the County of Leeds as a farmer, where he died in 1854. Anthony Preston was born in the County of Mayo, Ireland, and came to Canada about 1820, and settled in the township of Bastard, Leeds, where he began farming, in which employment he continued until his death, in 1876. He had been married twice, first to Miss Hannah, who died about 1833, leaving one son. During Mr. Preston's lifetime he was prominently before the public of his own county, and was one of her Majesty's justices of the peace. R. H. Preston, the subject of this sketch, was the second son of the second marriage, and received a thorough education, first at the common schools, and afterwards at the Smiths Falls Grammar school. In 1859, he concluded to study medicine, and attended first the Ann Arbor Medical College, Michigan, and graduated therefrom with the degree of M.D. in 1862. He then went to New York, and attended one session in Bellevue College, when he again returned to Canada, and entered the medical department of Queen's College, Kingston, graduating in the spring of 1864, and obtaining a licence from the governor-general to practice medicine in Ontario. He soon afterwards located, and began practice, in the village of Newboro', on the Rideau canal, where he has resided ever since. He has established a large and lucrative practice there, and as a surgeon is known as one of the most successful in that part of Canada. In 1868, he was appointed coroner for the united counties of Leeds and Grenville, which office he held until his first election to the legislature, in 1875, when he resigned. In the same year he contested the South Riding of Leeds in the Conservative interest, against the late Reuben Fields, Reformer, defeating him by a majority of 340 votes. In 1883, Dr. Preston contested the same riding against W. H. Fredenburgh, defeating him by a majority of 287 votes. Dr. Preston is president of the Brockville, Westport and Sault Ste. Marie Railway. which road, we may say, came into existence partly through the untiring exertions of Dr. Preston, who was one of the prime movers. The Dr. is a member of Freemasons' lodge, No. 157, A.F. & A.M., G.R.C., and district deputy grand master of St. Lawrence district. He is also a member of the Orange order, and has been county master of North Leeds. In politics he is a Liberal-Conservative, and is member of the Liberal-Conservative Union of Ontario. In religion he adheres to the Church of England, and is one of the delegates to the synod of the diocese of Ontario. He married, in 1868, Elizabeth, second daughter of the late Benjamin Tett, who was at one time M.P.P. for the County of Leeds, and a member of the old Parliament of Canada for the same county for many years.

an d h

Ct N A

tu

ta th

0

of

on so Or

of

Sc

Lu

of

M

fro

en

Bo

Ou

kil

tod

sid

the

jec

soo but

me

Lus

nin

was

the

not ple

min

sixt at t

Moi

und prer

Mad

М.

Cou

Dou

of th

In 1

Trib

Hya

certi 1864

the:

the

the a

to th

Preston has many estimable social qualities, and in professional and parliamentary life duty is to him above all other things. He has always taken a warm interest in agricultural matters, and is president of the North Crosby and Newboro' Agricultural Association. Upon the floor of the legislature Dr. Preston speaks with the well-contained confidence of one who is master of the subject and the situation, and therefore always receives close and serious attention.

Lusignan, J. Baptiste Alphonse, Ottawa, was born at Saint Denis, County of Saint Hyacinthe, Province of Quebec, on the 27th of September, 1843. He is a son of Jean Baptiste Lusignan, by his wife Onésime Mâsse, who died in 1872. She was of German descent by her father, and of Scotch descent by her mother. Jean Baptiste Lusignan comes from the historical family of that name. One of his ancestors, Jean Miel de Lusignan, emigrated to this country from the Province of Poitou, France, at the end of the 17th century, and was married at Boucherville, Province of Quebec, in 1699. Our subjects' grandfather, Antoine, was killed at the battle of Saint Denis, and there too his father, aged nineteen, fought by his side against the British troops in 1837, when the insurrection was suppressed. Our subjects' father fled to the United States, but soon after returned. He was the youngest but one of seven brothers. He became a merchant, and married in 1841. J. B. A. Lusignan is the eldest of eleven children, nine boys and two girls. Young Lusignan was educated at the College of Saint Hyacinthe, entering that college in 1852, when yet not nine years old. He went through a comple curriculum of classic studies, which terminated in 1859, he being then not quite sixteen. He studied divinity for three years at the Seminary of St. Hyacinthe, and at the Montreal Seminary. In 1867, he studied law under M. Fournier, now a judge of the Supreme Court, and formerly a minister of the Mackenzie government; afterwards under M. Papineau, now judge of the Superior Court, and finally under the late Joseph Doutre, Q.C., at Montreal. He was a pupil of the Laval University at Quebec in 1862-3. In 1863, he became assistant editor of the Tribune, Quebec, and of the Journal de Saint Hyacinthe. He took second and first-class certificates at the Quebec Military school in 1864. He wrote a pamphlet in 1864 against the management of that school, which had the effect of putting the French cadets on the same footing as the English, and secured to them equal consideration. In February, 1874, he became private secretary to Sir A. A. Dorion, minister of Justice, and in March to Hon. T. Fournier, minister of Inland Revenue. Later on in the summer of 1874, he became private secretary to the Hon. F. Geoffrion, minister of Inland Revenue. He is still in the same department, a second-class clerk. In 1864, he became first president of a legal society, called "Le Cercle Légal," with Mr., now the Hon. L. O. Taillon, attorney-general for Quebec, as vice-president at Montreal. From 1865 to 1868, he was one of the board of directors of the Institut Canadien of Montreal, acting in various capacities. He was assistanteditor of l'Union Nationale in 1865; and in the same year editor-in-chief of Le Pays, the leading French organ of the Liberal party in Montreal, until 1868, when he resigned in order to be admitted to the bar. He was admitted to the Lower Canada bar in December, 1868, and practised in Saint Hyacinthe from that date to January 1874. He was Crown prosecutor at Aylmer, County of Ottawa, Province of Quebec, in July, 1878; was president of L' Institut Canadien Français of Ottawa, in 1881, and declined reelection in 1882. He founded in the spring of 1885, the St. Lawrence Fishing Company, having its seat of operations on the Labrador coast, with Count de Puyjalon as manager, and of this, he, M. Lusignan, was one of the directors. He was also one of the founders and directors of the Stadacona Club, Ottawa, in 1883; president of the Convention Nationale, in connection with the celebration of the Saint Jean Baptiste festivity in June, 1885, at Ottawa. He was one of the invited speakers at the Congrès National of the Saint Jean Baptiste Society, in Montreal in 1884, where he spoke on literary criticism. He was elected member of the Royal Society of Canada in May, 1885, to replace N. Bourassa, who had resigned, and was then appointed secretary to the French (or 1st) section. He took an active part as speaker in over fifty Federal and Provincial elec-tions, from 1863 to 1878. He is a regular contributor to La Patrie (Montreal), and to the literary reviews. We may say that M. Lusignan signs all his articles. He published in 1872, a law book, which is a continuation to Judge Ramsay's "Digest of Reported Cases" in Lower Canada. His book extends from the end of 1862 to end of 1871, and contains 308 pages in 8vo. It has proved a decided financial success. He published in 1884, "Coups d'æil et coups de plume, 342 pp. in 8vo. He published, in 1867, a pamphlet of 86 pp. against Confederation, intituled: "La Confédération, couronnement de dix années de mauvaise administration." M. Lusignan is an honorary member of several literary societies, both in France and Canada, and also of benevolent and national societies and sporting clubs. He is a republican, favouring the independence of Canada in the near future. His travels have been confined to the Labrador coast, and he is now writing an account of his travels in La Patrie. He is a Roman catholic, but not bigoted, conceding the liberty of thought, of speech and of worship to every man. He married in June, 1869, Malvina, daughter of I. N. Melangon, of Joliette, Province of Quebec, advocate. There are only two living children, both girls, by this union.

Cantlie, James A., Montreal, was born at Clungmore, in the parish of Mortlach, Banffshire, Scotland, on the 5th June, 1836. His father adopted agricultural pursuits, but the son chose for himself a commercial career, and commerce became the gainer by that choice. James A. Cantlie received an ordinary English education, and in the year 1854, was apprenticed to Patrick Collie, wholesale and retail dry goods merchant, Union street, Aberdeen, with whom he remained until the death of his employer in December, 1860. Four years of steady attention to business, and a deep interest in the pursuit he had chosen, placed Mr. Cantlie at the head of the retail department. At the death of Mr. Collie the business was purchased by Symon & Co., with whom Mr. Cantlie entered into another engagement, remaining, however, but a short period. A young man possessing the knowledge and experience of the dry goods business such as Mr. Cantlie by this time had attained, was not likely to be long idle, and shortly after leaving Symon & Co. he effected an engagement with Pratt & Keith, wincey manufacturers and wholesale and retail dry goods merchants, Aberdeen, with whom he remained until the spring of 1863, when an offer came across the Atlantic for his ser-He lost no time in preparing to leave his native heather and home to repair to a far western country, more congenial to his advanced ideas, and in May, 1863, he landed in Montreal. On the 11th of the same month he entered the employment of William Stephen & Co., of that city. the fall of 1863, after he had become somewhat accustomed to the habits and peculiarities of the Canadian people, he began to travel for this firm, and continued as one of their representatives on "the road"

until November, 1865, when, after acquiring a thorough knowledge of the country and its demands for English productions, he was deemed sufficiently qualified to visit the English markets on a purchasing tour, whither he made the first trip, as assistant buyer, in November, 1865. He continued to cross the Atlantic in this capacity at the different seasons until the business was sold out, in 1847, to the present firm of Robertson, Linton & Co. He did not continue with the incoming firm, but accepted a position with George Stephen & Co., dealers in Canadian woollens, and continued to represent them until 1869, when he entered into a co-partuership with Alexander Ewan and William Stephen, under the firm name of Cantlie, Ewan & Co. This partnership was not of long duration, Mr. Stephen retiring soon after its formation; but the title of the firm was continued by the two remaining partners. Mr. Cantlie was always a zealous worker in anything belonging to the personality of the commercial travellers. He identified himself closely at all times with the fraternity, and was elected one of the first officers of the Toronto association without his knowledge, showing how highly his executive services were valued by his fellow travellers. He was also elected president of the Dominion Commercial Travellers' Association, of Montreal, in 1880, and re-elected president by acclamation, in 1881, and to him is due, together with his brother officers of that association, the persistent fighting against the outrageous commercial traveller's tax in New Brunswick and Quebec, and the carrying of the case, with regard to the former, to the Supreme Court at Ottawa, winning for the association a great victory, and wiping out for ever a barbarous law. Mr. Cantlie's object is to make the Commercial Travellers Association of a benevolent character, whereby assistance can be rendered in time of need, and it is gratifying to know that they have ample means at their command.

Dawson, John Edward, London, Ontario, Assistant Superintendent of the Grand Trunk Railway and the GreatWestern Railway, was born on the 20th of February, 1841, in the County of Carlow, Ireland. He is the third son of the Rev. George B. Dawson, M.A., rector of Aghade, and brother of Major G. D. Dawson, of the Grenadiers, late of Her Majesty's 47th Regiment. His mother was a sister of Lieutenant-General Sir Dudley Hill, K.C.B., who died when in command of a division in India, under Lord Napier. Mr. Dawson received his education

ctil an JHT tett Pne

w H to co fa

gı th ta

ne

fa

ar

by private tuition, and at Kilkenny College. Having a strong inclination and natural talent for railroading, he entered the service of the London and North-Western Railway, at Smithwick, where he remained for two years before coming to Canada. He arrived here in 1860, and his efficiency and experience being well known in railroad circles, he easily obtained a position in the audit office of the Grand Trunk Railway Co., Montreal, remaining there for one year. Thence he removed to Windsor, to take a position on the Great Western Railroad Co. He has been with this company ever since, having occupied various positions of high trust and responsibility. In 1866, he was station master at Niagara Falls, and was sent by Mr. Swynard to Fort Erie, where he had full charge of all the military transport during the Fenian raid. In 1872, he was sent by W. R. Muir, the then general manager of the Great Western Railway, to organize the Loop Line of the Great Western Railway from Glencoe to Fort Erie, and upon that occasion personally superintended and organized the whole of the staff. Mr. Dawson is a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen, in which society he takes an active part. He has travelled over the whole of the United States as well as Canada, and has visited all the great railway centres on the continent. Being far seeing, and indefatigable in his exertions for the company, and in seeking to accommodate the public, he enjoys a large share of popularity. Mr. Dawson is an English churchman, and a sincere and worthy Christian gentleman. He married on the 20th of May, 1862, Jane, daughter of Dr. J. Lougheed, of Sligo, Ireland, a most estimable wife and mother. The issue of the marriage is a son and daughter. Since Mr. Dawson joined the service of the Great Western Railway, he has been presented on three occasions with illuminated addresses and valuable gifts by the employés of the line.

Hitton, Francis Andrew, Trenton, was born at Perrytown, August 28, 1859. His father was the Rev. John Hilton, rector of St. Anne's, Toronto, who came to this country with his father (our subject's grandfather) in 1845. He settled in Toronto, the grandfather taking up land there. His father died in 1872. They had the disadvantages and hardships inseparable from pioneer life at this period in Canada, but the family nobly wrestled with the difficulties, and triumphed. It is to that class our subject belongs, and of which Susannah L. Moodie writes with so much feeling in her charming book, "Roughing it in the Bush." Young Hilton was educated at Upper Canada College and Trinity College School, which institution he left at fifteen years of age. At his father's death he went into a law office for temporary occupation, and he afterwards decided to make law his profession, and studied with A. P. Poussette, in Peterborough. He worked hard and persistently, and was called to the bar in 1882. He then moved to Trenton, and entered into partnership with Mr. Forbes, the firm being styled Forbes & Hilton. Since that date this firm has been successful in business, which, from the ability and close occupation of the gentlemen comprising it, is steadily increasing. He has travelled through the States and Canada. He is a strong supporter of the Church of England, and is a Conservative; and he firmly believes that the principles propounded by the party of which Sir John A. Macdonald is head, are best for the country's welfare, and must remain triumphant. Mr. Hilton is an Oddfellow, and takes an active interest in the society. He is extremely popular in Trenton, every one having the warmest and most appreciable word when his name is spoken. It might not be too much to predict for him some day a high place in his country. Mr. Hilton is not yet married.

Minnes. James, is one of the most successful business men of Kingston, and the firm of which he is the head is the largest wholesale dry goods house between Montreal and Toronto, and the volume of its business will compare favourably with that of the larger houses of either of the cities mentioned. Mr. Minnes is a man of conspicuous energy, of commanding presence, and affable and kindly manner. In the ordinary course of business, he has visited the principal markets of Europe, and the leading cities of the United States. Like most of our prominent Canadians, he has been connected with the militia service of Canada. He became a member of the 14th battalion in 1855, retiring in 1866, with the rank of captain. In 1851, he first entered the retail business; became a partner in the same in 1864, under the firm name, Macnee & Waddel, now Macnee & Minnes, and entered upon wholesale operations in 1870. Mr. Minnes has connexion with several important commercial enterprises; he is vicepresident of the Kingston Cotton Mill, and president of the Kingston Hosiery Co. He married a daughter of Captain Taylor, of Kingston, and is in religion a Presby terian.

Brown, John Gordon, Toronto, was born in Alloa, Clackmannanshire, Scotland, on the 16th November, 1827, being the junior of his brother George, by some six years. [For his parentage, see sketch of his brother, the Hon. George Brown, in these pages.] He received his education partly in Edinburgh and partly in New York, to which latter city he came with his parents in his eleventh year. Five years later he moved to Toronto, where he has resided almost constantly since. On going to Toronto, he connected himself with the Globe newspaper, at that time the mouthpiece of the more vigorous and progressive portion of the Reform party of Canada West. Mr. Brown edited the Quebec Gazette for about the space of a year, and from time to time he has travelled much through Europe. In 1851, he visited the Great International Exhibition in London, contributing a comprehensive and interesting series of descriptive letters to his newspaper. From the time of his return home, the editorial management of the Globe was mainly under his control, for the Hon. George Brown, for many years before his death, concerned himself very little with the details of editorial management, devoting himself almost altogether to the commercial department, and political matters not directly connected with the newspaper. "It was," says an authority lying before us, "Mr. Gordon Brown's close and practical supervision and forcible pen which, during these years, maintained and extended the well-won prestige of the Globe. his brother fell by the hand of a murderer, many people who were in ignorance of the real relation in which Mr. Gordon Brown stood to the journal, expected a marked falling off in vigour and interest; but as time wore on it became plainly evident that its old-time reputation was destined to be fully sustained by his formal elevation to the position he had long virtually occupied." Mr. Brown was eminently a journalist of enterprise and of originality, and when the complete management of the Globe passed into his hands, it attained a position as the purveyor of news which it had never approached before. Mr. Brown is a man of quick insight, and has a decided faculty for sizing up" men, and in the selection of his staff he saw almost at a glance in what way a man could be most useful to him. As a writer, Mr. Brown's style was swift, direct and vibrating, and there were always present in his contributions evidence of sincerity and marked strength. He frequently dictated an editorial to his amanuensis as he paced up and down the floor of his office, and the sentence once uttered, there was little changing or tinkering with it afterwards. But it was only upon important occasions that Mr. Brown himself did this, and you could easily find in the Globe the articles that were his, from the fine ringing and rousing tone which they exhibit. But Mr. Brown was not destined to remain long at the head of the Globe. The lesser kind of politicians and other adventurers were desirous of using the paper for the promotion of their own ends, but Mr. Brown was a man of too strong an individuality and too high a sense of duty to permit anything of the sort to happen. The rest is known. One and all conspired against him, and he withdrew from the Globe. His secession from the journalistic field is an enormous loss, and his place cannot easily be filled. He was soon afterwards appointed registrar of the Surrogate Court of Toronto, and in this office still continues.

th

ar sk J

вe

so

ca

st

gr (6 ar te in

to th

an

ha

ha

 \mathbf{m}

CO

w

of al

by St

w

be

ol

on

na

gr C. 17

20

an

his

Ja

yo

fat

wa

his

ot

pr

Αı

Ĺе

Do

wa

of

M

yea

acı

La

wa

bor

the

wa.

Dingwall, James, Cornwall, was born at Meadow Bay, on the road to Cornwall, Canada West, on the 8th May, 1840. His paternal grandfather, James Dingwall, was a U. E. loyalist, and he was born about the middle of the eighteenth century, in Strathspey, Scotland. While still a young man he and an elder brother, John, (grandfather of Judge Drew, of Guelph,) emigrated to America, and settled in the valley of the Mohawk, near Albany. At the breaking out of the Revolutionary war, each of the two brothers owned and lived upon comfortable and valuable homesteads in that pleasant and fertile valley. They both having refused to join the revolutionists, were then given to understand that if they remained quiet on their farms they would not be molested; but they declined, and were active and open in their sympathy and aid to the loyalists. In revenge, the revolutionists (or continentals) drove away their cattle. Later James Dingwall was imprisoned, and with several others had to "run the gauntlet," that is, to make a dash for one's life between two rows of Indians armed with withes or rods, and past an Indian armed with a tomahawk at the exit between the two files of Indians. Each was only to strike the person running when opposite him, and must not strike in front. Subsequently James Dingwall, continuing his hostility to the revolutionists and his aid to the loyalists, was imprisoned; and with others condemned to be executed. The night before the day fixed for the execution they broke through the roof of their prison, and escaped by tearing their bed clothes into strips and knotting them into ropes. Finally, James Dingwall and his brother, after enduring many hardships, reached Canada with Sir William Johnston's band of patriots about 1784, and settled upon the first settled farm on the south side of the river Raisin, between Lancaster and Williamstown, and this homestead of 300 acres is still owned by his grandson. He was a man of great stature. (6 feet 2 or 3 inches) and of powerful frame and physique, and a man of strong character and great determination. He is buried in the Presbyterian graveyard at Williamstown, and it is recorded upon his tombstone that "he fought and suffered for his king and country." His grandson deems it a happy circumstance that he may be said to have bled for his country, considering how many in these degenerate days ask their country to bleed for them. James Dingwall married Catherine Ferguson, daughter of Alexander Ferguson, another U. E. loy-This Alexander Ferguson died in October, 1785, and was buried in the Presbyterian graveyard on the shore of Lake St. Francis, in the village of Lancaster, where his tombstone with this date can still be seen. This Lancaster graveyard is the oldest in eastern Ontario, and there is only one tombstone in it of an earlier date, namely, that of Mr. McKenzie, (greatgrandfather of the late James Bethune, Q. C.) which records that he died in June, 1785. Alexander Ferguson's homestead of 200 acres, a mile west of Lancaster village, and upon Lake St. Francis, is still owned by his descendants. By Catherine Ferguson James Dingwall had fourteen children, the youngest of whom, named Malcolm, was the father of our subject. Malcolm Dingwall was born in 1812. In 1837 he went with his fellow Glengarrians to St. Phillippe and other places in Lower Canada to aid in suppressing the rebellion. In 1839 he married Anne McLennan, daughter of Roderick Mc-Lennan, of Lancaster, and eldest sister of Donald McLennan, late of Port Hope, hardware merchant; of John McLennan, sheriff of the County of Victoria, and of James McLennan, Q.C., of Toronto. In the same year he settled upon a homestead of 240 acres in Meadow Bay, two miles west of Lancaster village, and on the road to Cornwall, and here the subject of our sketch was born. Malcolm Dingwall was an elder in the Presbyterian church at Lancaster. He was an excellent English and Gaelic scholar, and took a deep interest in educational matters. The homestead is still owned by a brother of James Dingwall. James Dingwall's maternal grandfather, Roderick Mc-Lennan, was like his other ancestors, a man of strong and marked character. He was born in Scotland upwards of a century ago. About the beginning of the present century he emigrated with his father to Canada, and settled in the third concession of the township of Lancaster, where his own and his father's homesteads are still owned and occupied by descendants. He was the owner of several fine farms, and it is illustrative of his character that on one occasion, long before our present railways were built-indeed before the old stage or mail waggons and sleighs were regularly run between Montreal and Toronto-he made a trip to Toronto, nearly 300 miles distant, to secure the title to one of his farms. On another occasion, a relative of the name of Mc-Leod, a Presbyterian clergyman, in South Carolina, died in that distant country, and it was reported to his relatives in Canada that he had left them a large fortune to be looked after. This was about the year 1830, and Roderick McLennan made the journey to Carolina to enquire into the matter. We are to recollect that this was before the days of telegraphs or railways, or even steamboats. He was a man who took a keen interest in educating his family, and died at a good old age, universally respected. He married Mary McPherson, daughter of Alexander McPherson, of Lancaster, by whom he had a family of ten children, of whom our subject's mother was the eldest, and James McLennan, Q.C., of Toronto, the youngest. James Dingwall, the subject of this memoir, was the eldest of the family. He attended the Lancaster public school until his seventeenth year, and afterwards the Williamstown Grammar (High) school. In the autumn of 1858 he matriculated at Queen's College, Kingston, took a full arts course, and graduated B.A. "with honours in all the subjects," in the spring The balance of 1861 and the of 1861. year 1862 he spent in miscellaneous reading, and during 1863 he was head master of the Kemptville Grammar or High school. In the spring of 1864, Mr. Dingwall began the study of law, in the office of Mowat and McLennan, of Toronto, being articled to his uncle, James McLennan. He continued four full years with Mr. McLennan, and was called to the bar in the spring of In October of the same year he entered into partnership with the late William Ross, of Cornwall, barrister, who for many years previously had been the law partner of the late Hon. John Sandfield Mc-Donald. He remained in partnership with Mr. Ross until his death in December, 1882, since which time he has carried on a large law practice alone. When he went into partnership, Mr. Ross's business was insignificant, owing to his eyesight having failed him; but to-day Mr. Dingwall's business is probably more profitable than that of any other lawyer in Cornwall. In February, 1873, he was appointed county crown attorney and clerk of the peace for the united Counties of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry, and he has now held the position longer than any of his predecessors. There are between 300 and 400 qualified justices of the peace in these united counties, and the work of the two offices of county crown attorney and clerk of the peace for a population of upwards of 70,000 is necessarily large and varied. Mr. Dingwall can claim that during the thirteen years he has held office he has made no mistake. never given an official opinion or advice that has been challenged. And he can claim that the policy he has pursued has had much to do with the noted absence of crime in these counties. Apart from his official position, his professional business has been very lucra-Both the late Mr. Ross and himself prided themselves upon discouraging litigation, except where absolutely necessary. was said of Mr. Ross that he uniformly killed more suits than all the other lawyers in the town brought. These two successful lawyers engaged largely in loaning money, and their influence was a valuable check upon the operations of the loaning companies. For instance, Mr. Dingwall has in the eighteen years he has been in practice in Cornwall, taken upwards of seven hundred mortgages in his own name, and he has had occasion to take legal proceedings upon only three out of that number in that time. the fall of 1879, he spent upwards of five weeks acting as counsel for the town of Cornwall before A. H. Dymond, appointed a special commissioner by the Ontario government to enquire into the financial affairs of the town. The enquiry was one of the most exciting affairs that ever occurred in Cornwall. It led to the exposure of many scandalous transactions and effected a permanent revolution for the better in municipal matters in the community. In 1882 and 1883, at great expense of time and work, Mr. Dingwall carried to a successful completion a re-survey of the front half of the | in what is wrong. He affirms that when town. He did the whole work of getting up petitions and having them signed, hunting up evidence, urging on the municipal council, &c., alone, and almost unaided by any one, and he had to overcome much unscrupulous opposition. To realize what he effected it should be stated that the town is upwards of one hundred years old, that there was not a single old monument to be found, that people built their fences where they pleased, that many of the principal streets were encroached upon to the extent of five, seven, eight, ten, and even sixteen feet. This state of matters had become intolerable, but the citizens seemed helpless,—the leading men of the town having attempted to move in the matter and failed, and the late Andrew Hodge, when mayor, had D. R. Brown, P. L. surveyor, spend a week hunting for evidence of the original survey without result. Now the re-survey has been made and confirmed by act of the Provincial legislature, and the buildings that now encroach upon the streets, fences, &c., will in time be rebuilt on the proper lines. The re-survey is worth hundreds of thousands of dollars to the town, and an achievement for which Mr. Dingwall must be remembered in time to come, seeing that the town will before long become an important city. In 1880 he was appointed by the counties' council a trustee of the Cornwall High school, the object of his appointment being to ferret out and put an end to certain improper financing of the then board, and he accomplished the object aimed at by the council, and has remained on the board ever since. When he became a member of the board, the attendance in the school was about forty; now it is near one hundred, and the school is efficient and flourishing. Mainly owing to his persistent exertions, the counties' council have recently built a handsome new county building at the court house, for offices for the court's officials, at a cost of about $15,000. In his official position Mr. Dingwall has had to act a principal part in many important cases. Mr. Dingwall takes a deep interest in gardening and forestry, and has invested a good deal of money in wooded lands, and derives a good deal of pleasure from his transplant-ing operations. Mr. Dingwall belongs to no secret society; he abhors them. Good men, he admits, join such societies, intending to act only with the other members in what is right; good, and benevolent; but he maintains that they are often led to back each other through thick and thin

b

f

b

te

la

tł

sy In

h

ri

H

ch

ti

w

si

Gı

do

be

wl

a e

Αŗ

M:

rei

Jo

of

Le

tov

Le

Co

Vic

Tru

of ·

dir

Gra

was

firs

gea

wit

Gre

2,2

way

rive

Rai

sem

com

pan

Hav

part

com

a man joins a secret society he ceases to be in a position to say as in the Lord's prayer "lead us not into temptation." Mr. Dingwall is a Calvinist and a Presbyterian, and believes the Presbyterian form of church government is the model upon which the best political governments are and will be formed. It is that, he points out, of local bodies dealing with small and local matters; and of larger bodies dealing with larger and more general subjects. It is. therefore, he concludes, a philosophical system, and so will stand the test of time. In politics, Mr. Dingwall believes in the greatest good to the greatest number. He hates monopolies; and believes in vested rights, if honestly and honourably acquired. He believes in being conservative of the good we possess, and would only make changes slowly and cautiously. At the same time he believes this wonderful age in which we live, calls for our being liberally progressive in all things. In his hatred of governmental corruption he would be called a rabid Grit. He does not believe in the hideous doctrine that a politician need necessarily be corrupt, affirming that it is only those who are corrupt themselves that preach such a doctrine. He is a Liberal by conviction. Apart from this he is by nature and by descent conservative. In 1878 he married Mary Hunter, by whom he has four children. His wife is a younger daughter of John Hunter, an old and respected citizen of the town. Her mother was Christina Leitch, a sister of William Leitch, of the township of Cornwall, father of James Leitch, the present mayor of the town of Cornwall.

Seargeant, Lewis James, Montreal, Vice-President of the Chicago and Grand Trunk Railway Company, Traffic Manager of the Grand Trunk Railway Company, and director of companies affiliated with the Grand Trunk system, is an Englishman; was born at Trowbridge, Wiltshire, and first came to America in 1874. Mr. Seargeant's English railway career is associated with the largest of British railways, the Great Western, capital, £73,000,000, length, 2,210 miles. His earliest experience of railway construction and management was derived in connection with the South Wales Railway, a Great Western affiliated line. semi-independent and operated by a joint committee. The South Wales Railway Company promoted the development of Milford Haven, as a great international port, more particularly in connection with American commerce, in which result the sympathies of the late Mr. Brunel, their engineer, were largely engaged, and had in contemplation alternative plans for crossing the River Severn. One of these has recently been accomplished by the construction of a tunnel, which is the greatest railway work of the age. On the amalgamation of the South Wales with the Great Western Railway Company, Mr. Seargeant was the recipient of a substantial douceur from the proprietors in recognition of his services, and the Great Western board appointed him super-intendent of the South Wales division. At that time the Earl of Shelburne, father of the Marquis of Lansdowne, the present governor-general of Canada, was chairman of the Great Western Company. Early further promotion followed, and under complimentary circumstances, which evidenced the appreciation of Lord Shelburne and Sir Daniel Gooch, the present Great Western chairman, to whom England and America are largely indebted for the Atlantic cable. Mr. Seargeant was appointed chief officer of the South Devon, and subsequently of the Cornwall and West Cornwall railways, which together constituted a compact system between Exeter and Penzance. The South Devon had been the subject of experiments by Mr. Brunel, with the atmospheric system, and its fortunes were at this time at a low ebb. Upon Mr. Seargeant devolved the duties of general manager, secretary, and secretary of the joint committees of the Great Western, Bristol & Exeter, South Devon. and Cornwall companies. He was also the official representative of those interests before parliamentary committees. The success of Mr. Seargeant's management was evidenced by largely increased dividends. During this period he was offered the appointment of agent or chief officer of one of the largest Indian rallway systems, a position from the delicate relations of the imperial and local governments and railway companies, requiring the experience of the character of that within Mr. Seargeant's functions. He declined the appointment at the request of the Great Western, aud was further promoted. Towards the close of his English railway career he was, with representatives of the other companies concerned, engaged in framing an agreement for the division of traffic between the Great Western and London & South Western systems, at the numerous points where these large systems came into competition. Upon resignation of his several offices in England. Mr. Seargeant brought with him to this country evidences of the highest consideration and friendship, chief among which was an intrinsically valuable presentation from a large number of directors and officers of the companies with which he was connected, and of men serving under him. Mr. Seargeant was the first appointed traffic manager on this continent. He represents the inter-ests of the Grand Trunk system in the trunk line executive, and other committee meetings at New York and Chicago, and has consistently advocated the division of competitive traffic on equitable principles, and the settlement of differences between railcompanies by arbitration. He is a cultured man, a good linguist, and has an imposing appearance. He has written many exhaustive arguments on the pool question, and we have before us a very able article on the English railway system, contributed by Mr. Seargeant to the Railway Review. He married Elizabeth Sedley Barnes, of London, England, sister of Dr. Robert Barnes, the celebrated physician.

Baskerville, Patrick, M.P.P., Ottawa, was born at Townland, Ballyrushen, Tipperary, Ireland, in November, 1833. He is a son of George Baskerville, by his wife, Mary McDonnell. His father was a son of Benjamin Baskerville, who was descended from an old Norman family which settled in Ireland about the time of William the Con-The family records were, however, queror. all destroyed by fire in 1858, and included a great deal of matter that would have been of interest to the public. George Baskerville adopted the calling of a farmer in Ireland, but in 1847, he concluded to come to Canada. In the summer of that year he landed in Bytown, and shortly afterwards engaged in the trading and grocery business. In 1857, he engaged in the hotel business, but after the short term of six months, his premises were burned, and he lost, having no insurance, every article of household property. The family, not discouraged, started anew in life, and at the time of Mr. Baskerville's death, he was in comfortable circumstances. It was owing to the family's working and unanimity that they survived the great loss referred to. Mr. Baskerville died in 1875, and Mrs. Baskerville in 1867. They had nine of a family, the subject of this sketch being the eldest son. Patrick Baskerville received a common school education, and after coming to Canada, engaged in farming and lumbering for a few years. But in 1854 he received the appointment of freight clerk in the then Bytown and Prescott, now the St. Lawrence and Ottawa Railway, which position he held for eight years, but not being satisfied with his avocation he commenced business for himself as a grocer and provision merchant. He continued so occupied alone, until 1870, when he admitted as partners his brothers, George H., Wm. J., and John Baskerville, under the firm name and style of P. Baskerville & Bros., and this business they still continue in the City of Ottawa. At the time of the Trent affair, our subject joined the volunteers, under Capt. Galaway. Baskerville is a life member of St. Patrick's Literary Society of Ottawa; was for two years president of the St. Patrick's Society of Ottawa; and was also for two years president of the Catholic Young Men's Society of the same city. In politics Mr. Baskerville is a Liberal-Conservative. In 1879 he was elected to the legislature of Ontario, defeating an independent and reform candidate by a majority of sixty votes, and he was again elected in 1882 by a majority of 640. Mr. Baskerville has been an extensive traveller, visiting the United States, Great Britain, Ireland, and France, and the Paris Exposition in 1878. In religion he is a Roman Catholic. As a parliamentarian, Mr. Baskerville is industrious, and well-informed, and he devotes his talents zealously to the interests of his constituency. In commercial life as well as in the political sphere, he is far more than an ordinary man. He is

ar ca af gu av co tr.

ir

ne

de M Ec

by Tw

ma

die

age

gre

wei

dre

too

liar

con

ner of I

Tor

of I

whi

par

styl

tion

four

Sinc

min

polit

year

Boar

presi

in t confi

Darl

calle

ers,

bank

influ

this |

there

1878,

for N

by M

mate

kenzi

Hon.

his o

of no

largel

McGibbon, Duncan, Barrie, was born in the township of Nassagaweya, County of Halton, Ontario, on the 18th of October, He is a son of John and Isabella (McCallum) McGibbon, both of whom came from Perthshire, Scotland. John McGibbon was descended from ancient Scottish stock, his great-grandfather having fought at Culloden. Duncan McGibbon was educated in the common schools, and at an early age engaged in the occupation of school-teaching; but this calling was not congenial to his tastes, and in 1866 he began the study of law in the office of Wm. Laidlaw, Toronto. He afterwards entered the office of Blain, Ferguson & Co.; and in 1871 was called to the bar of Ontario. In 1880 Mr. McGibbon joined the ancient order of United Workmen, and held the past-mastership in the same for a time, and in 1881 he was elected grand representative of the order. McGibbon is a steadfast Presbyterian; and in politics he gives his allegiance to the party led by Sir John A. Macdonald. 'He married on the 31st May, 1871, Ann Perrit, of Grimsby, whose grandfather composed the famous "Midnight Gallop."

Darling, William, Montreal, deceased, 1 was born in Edinburgh, Scotland, in 1819, and when he was in his twenty-first year, came to Canada, establishing himself shortly afterwards at Montreal, where so distinguished and honourable a business career awaited him. His father having adopted commerce in Edinburgh, the son resolved to try his fortune in the same sphere of activity in our new country. He entered into the iron and hardware trade, and remained connected with the same till the time of his death, achieving a wide measure of success. Mr. Darling married Miss Davidson, of Edinburgh, and there were eight children by the union, two of whom died in infancy. Two girls grew to maturity, one of whom married Dr. G. W. Ross, of Montreal, and died suddenly, within a year of her marriage, the other died unmarried. Four sons grew up with their father's business, and were associated with him as partners. William and James remained in Montreal, Andrew and Thomas J. went to Toronto, and took charge of the business there, while William Darling, the subject of this memoir, continued up to the time of his death a partner in both firms. He was the eldest brother of Henry W. Darling and Robert Darling, of Toronto, and of Thomas and Adam Darling, of Montreal. The business of the two houses which Mr. Darling controlled, reached every part of the several provinces, and while its style never changed, its methods of operation always brought credit to the deceased founder for honourable and upright dealing. Since 1840, he has been constantly and prominently identified with the commercial and political interests of Montres Formany years he was a member of the Council of the Board of Trade, and for several terms its president. When the Merchants Bank was in trouble several years ago, such was the confidence of his fellow business men in Mr. Darling's clear-sightedness, that he was called by unanimous voice of the shareholders, to take part in the management of the bank. It was largely due to Mr. Darling's influence that George Hague was called to this bank, and the deceased merchant was thereafter Mr. Hague's right-hand man. In 1878, Mr. Darling was the Liberal candidate for Montreal West, when he was defeated by M. H. Gault. Mr. Darling was an intimate friend of the Hon. Alexander Mackenzie, Hon. Edward Blake, and the late Hon. L. H. Holton. On commercial law, his opinion was regarded as second to that of no lawyer in the Dominion, and he was largely concerned with Mr. Abbott in framing the Insolvency Act that was repealed He was selected by the Macin 1879. kenzie government as commissioner to expropriate lands for the enlarged Lachine canal, and so well was his work appreciated, that on the change of government Sir John Macdonald retained him in that position till his duties were completed. died at his residence at Hochelaga, on the 18th of November, 1885, of inflammation of the lungs. The character of Mr. Darling was the very highest, and he was a man of splendid abilities. Modesty is often associated with men of the highest worth, and this was eminently so in the case of Mr. Darling, and as pointed out by a leading newspaper after his death, his shyness often kept him in the back ground, when his talents would have taken him to the front. At a meeting of the directors of the Merchants Bank of Canada, the following resolution was passed :- "That the directors of the Merchants Bank of Canada desire to place on record their deep sense of the loss the bank and mercantile community have sustained in the death of their late esteemed colleague, Mr. William Darling. His large experience and sound judgment were uniformly used in the advancement of the interests of the bank, and his assiduous attention to the many important matters brought before the board greatly contributed to the position the bank now occupies in the community. The directors beg to convey to the widow and family of the deceased, their sincere condolence on the loss they have sustained, and for the purpose of duly conveying to them this mark of appreciation and sympathy, direct that a copy of this minute, duly engrossed and signed, be forwarded by the president and general manager on behalf of the bank. Andrew Allan, president; G. Hague, general manager." The Council of the Board of Trade of Montreal, passed the following: "Resolved-that the Council of the Montreal Board of Trade, fully recognizes the valuable and varied services so untiringly rendered to the commercial and trade interests of this city, by the late William Darling, Esq., during the many years in which he served as a member of the council, and afterwards as president of the board, and the council now records its deep sense of the loss sustained by Montreal in his decease; that a copy of this resolution be communicated to the bereaved family, together with an expression of the sincere sympathy of the council. Permit me to say, that I personally share in the regrets of the council, and tender also my respectful condolence. I am, dear sir, yours sincerely, W. J. Patterson, secretary; William Darling, Esq." Mr. Darling was often consulted by his brother merchants, and was frequently called as arbitrator between them, as well as for the government in disputes that would otherwise have been carried before the higher courts in the Dominion. He was much devoted to farming and gardening, and these occupations he carried on to some extent at his residence, Bloomfield House, Hochelaga.

Murray, Rev. James Allister, pastor of St. Andrew's Church, London, Ontario, was born at Big Meadows, Roger Hill, County of Pictou, Nova Scotia. His father was a Scottish Highlander, from Sutherlandshire, and his mother a native of the parish of Humbie. His parents emigrated from Edinburgh to Nova Scotia early in the present century. The subject of the present sketch was the youngest of twelve children, and was born in 1833. Mr. Murray had the claims of the Christian ministry early impressed upon his mind by his parents, and his early education was directed accordingly. He studied for some three years at the Grammar school, in Tatamagouche, under the able superintendence of the late John Currie, famous as an expert in teaching. Mr. Murray afterwards studied at the celebrated Pictou Academy, and after teaching at Salt Springs, Pictou county, for three years, entered the Presbyterian College at West River, Pictou, where he took a full course, and after an extra session at the Free Church College, Halifax, was licensed to preach, in 1857, by the Presbytery of P. E. Island. Before entering on the ministry, he taught with success for three years the Grammar school in Upper Musquodoboit, County of Halifax. labouring for a short time in the Home Mission field of Nova Scotia, he received, almost simultaneously, four calls to important charges, viz., Newport, Maitland, Economy, and Annapolis. Having referred decision as to acceptance of call to the Presbytery of Halifax, Mr. Murray was ordained pastor of the Presbyterian Church, in Annapolis Royal, in 1857. This is interesting from the fact of its being the origin of the Presbyterian congregation in that beautiful old town. After three years successful labour in his first charge, he accepted a call to the congregation of St. Luke's Church, Bathurst, N.B., in connection with the Church of Scotland. He subsequently removed to Ontario, and accepted a call to St. Andrew's Church, Mount Forest, from which he was called to St. Andrew's Church, Lindsay, and accepted the same. During his ministry in Lindsay, the great union of all the Presbyterian bodies in the Dominion took place, and being a strong advocate of union, he resigned his charge, in order to promote the union of the local congregations. Within a short time he was called to St. Andrew's Church, Niagara Falls; St. Andrew's, Hamilton, and St. Andrew's, London. He accepted the latter, which is one of the most eligible congregations in the Dominion. At this date (February, 1886), Mr. Murray has entered upon his eleventh year in the pastorate of this important charge, and being in the prime of life, maintains his usefulness and popularity. Rev. Mr. Murray is regarded as a preacher of marked intellectual power, and one of the most eloquent, earnest, and successful ministers of the Presbyterian church. He is married to Georgiana, second daughter of the late William O. Smith, of St. John, N.B., by whom he has living three sons—William Odber Smith, Cyril Claud, and Ciarence Herbert.

Church, Levi Ruggles, Q. C., Montreal, was born at Aylmer, on the 26th May, 1836. He is descended from one of the oldest families in New England, his ancestors having emigrated from the old country to the colony of Massachusetts, in the early part of the seventeenth century.....One of these, Colonel Benjamin Church, distinguished himself in the French and Indian wars in which the New England colonists were engaged, having commanded the volunteer army, which, in a protracted kind of guerilla warfare, defeated and afterwards killed the celebrated Indian King, Philip, who had given so much trouble and alarm to the early settlers. At the breaking out of the revolutionary war, the Church family, respectable both in numbers and position, being Whigs, espoused the Republican cause, except two, who took up arms to defend the royal prerogative. One of these was killed in battle, and the other, Jonathan Mills Church, was taken prisoner in 1777, by the American army, from whose custody he escaped and came to Canada, and ultimately settled in the neighborhood of Brock-He took an active part in defending Canada during the war of 1812-13-14, and died at a very advanced age in 1846. Our subject is the second son of the late Dr. Peter Howard Church, of Aylmer, P. Q.; and grandson of the above mentioned Jonathan Mills Church. Levi R. Church was educated at Victoria University, Cobourg. He graduated in medicine at the Albany des 183 Fa We He of and of

I

ù

t

C

of

pi

C8

ag

vi

th

m

E

te

is

Am alis luti to t und his Medical College, and at McGill University, where he took final and primary, thesis prizes. He studied law under the late Henry Stuart, Q.C., and subsequently under Edward Carter, Q.C., and was called to the bar, Lower Canada, in 1859. He was created a Q. C., 1874. He is president of the Pontiac Pacific Junction Ry. Co., and of the Upper Ottawa Towing and Steamboat Company, and a director of the Bank of Ottawa. He also served during twelve years as one of the governors of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Lower Canada: was prosecuting attorney for the District of Ottawa from July, 1868, until the 22nd September, 1874, when he was appointed a member of the Executive Council of the province of Quebec, and was sworn in as attorney general, which office he continued to fill until transferred to the treasurership of the province, the 27th January, 1878. He negotiated, during his occupancy of the office of treasurer, a provincial loan in England for the purposes of constructing the provincial railways. He sat for the County of Ottawa from 1867 until 1871, when he retired, but on accepting office in 1874, was returned by acclamation for the County of Pontiac, and was re-elected by acclamation at the general election of 1876, and again in 1880, after a contest. He is a member of the law firm of Church, Chapleau, Hall, & Nicolls. Montreal. At the formation of the Chapleau administration, in 1882, he was offered his choice of either of the two offices previously held by him in the Provincial cabinet, but declined. In 1883, he was again offered the treasurership of the province, which he again declined, preferring the active practice of his profession. married on September 3rd, 1850, Jane Erskine, daughter of William Bell, barrister, and niece of General Sir George Bell, K.C.B.

ry, ie sy of iis ieid ie

Wilmot, Samuel, Newcastle, Ontario, is a Canadian by birth, but of English descent. He was born on the 22nd August, 1822, at his present residence, Belmont Farm, in the township of Clarke, County of West Durham, and Province of Ontario. He is the youngest of four sons, all living, of the late Major Samuel Street Wilmot, and Mary Wilmot, his wife, and grandson of Captain Samuel Wilmot, of the Loyal American regiment, a United Empire loyalist, who at the close of the American revolution sacrificed his property, and emigrated to the Province of New Brunswick, to live under the British flag. Major Wilmot in his youth left his parental home in New Brunswick, to seek his fortune in the then wilds of Upper Canada, some time previous to the war of 1812; in which outbreak he was actively engaged, taking part in the battle of York, and other engagements, as colonel in command of a Canadian volunteer regiment. In the early history of the county he represented the old Newcastle district division, in the Provincial Parliament of Upper Canada. By profession he was a provincial land surveyor, and laid out many of the present townships in Ontario. He was selected by the government to inspect and value crown and clergy lands. On his retirement from public life he continued his farming operations on his property at Belmont Farm, in the township of Clarke, until his death in 1856, at the age of eighty-two years. He married in 1798 Mary, daughter of John Stegmann, formerly an officer in the Prussian army, who came to Canada at the time of its early settlement, and practised as a provincial land surveyor. He was drowned, along with a number of the principal functionaries of the province, en route to Kingston, on important public business, on a schooner off Presqu'isle, on Lake Ontario. Not an individual on board or a vestige of the wreck was ever found. The Wilmot name is a familiar one in New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Ontario. In the two former provinces, the family has for a long time held some of the highest public positions. The late Judge Wilmot, of Fredericton, N. B., formerly lieutenant-governor of that province, was first cousin to Samuel Wilmot, and the same relationship exists between the present Honourable R. D. Wilmot, formerly president of the Senate, and member of the Dominion government, and now the immediate ex-governor of New Brunswick. Samuel Wilmot, the subject of this notice, was educated in his early youth at Upper Canada College, entering it when the institution was first established, where he obtained prizes for efficiency in classics and English studies. He held the rank of captain in the militia force of the province; and at the time of the call for troops to quell impending difficulties connected with the Trent affair, he volunteered his services with a company of seventy-five men, for immediate duty. They were soon disbanded, as the difficulties were quickly ended. In his early youth he was selected by youthful companions to command a small troop of horsemen as a home guard, for the village of Napanee, during the rebellion of 1837-38, all the militia force having been called to the fort at Kingston. This boyish troop, when on night duty, captured rebel teamsters in the act of carrying arms and amunition from the neighbourhood of Belleville to their confederates, who had planned an attack In acknowledgment, these on Kingston. young troopers were presented with a banner, bearing the motto, sans peur et sans reproche. Mr. Wilmot has taken no inconsiderable part in municipal and other public affairs of the country. He has held the office of justice of the peace for upwards of thirty years, and he has been prominent in his native township, being elected by acclamation for many years, as reeve, or executive head of the municipality. He has also held the reeveship of the village of Newcastle, and has represented both of these municipalities in the counties council of the united Counties of Northumberland and Durham, by which body he was elected to fill the warden's chair. He has been practically-engaged in farming operations from his youth to the present time, at his residence Belmont Farm, and has had a life-long connection with agricultural bodies, holding the office of president, or director, of the township of Clarke and Durham Agricultural Societies from time to time, for upwards of thirty years. He was elected a member of the Agricultural and Arts Association of Ontario, for two consecutive terms, of three years each, by the several county agricultural societies, comprised within the limits of the Newcastle district division. He was elected president of the Provincial Association in 1879; and presided over the first Dominion Exposition of Agriculture, Arts and Manufactures for Canada, which was held at Ottawa in 1879, under the immediate patronage of His Excellency the Marquis of Lorne, and Her Royal Highness the Princess Louise. On retiring from the presidency of this board, he was presented with a gold medal as a souvenir, by the unanimous voice of his associates in the While taking a prominent part in agricultural and other pursuits, Mr. Wilmot's attention, of late years, has been more particularly devoted to the science of aquaculture, and the artificial breeding of tish, in which experiments he has been more than ordinarily successful, and has earned for himself well merited repute throughout Canada and in the United States, and also in parts of Europe. From a very small beginning, which originated with himself as an amateur, in his private residence at Belmont Farm, the science of artificial fish culture, through his personal enterprise and official zeal, has become an established governmental industry throughout Canada His earliest exertions were acknowledged in 1873, by the Societé d'Acclimatation de France, by the presentation of a silver medal, transmitted through the French government, for his efficient services rendered in that department of practical science, and by obtaining the gold medal for excellence in piscicultural exhibits, awarded by the Dominion Exposition of Agriculture and Arts at Ottawa in 1879. connection with this undertaking, Mr. Wilmot holds the office of superintendent of fish cultural operations for Canada, under the Dominion government, and by his exertions the work is now extensively applied to all the provinces of the Dominion, except Manitoba, and forms no inconsiderable branch of the Fisheries department of Canada, in the practical working of twelve separate fish-breeding establishments of large capacity. The hatchery in British Columbia, on the Pacific coast, and nine others in the Maritime provinces, bordering on the Atlantic, are almost exclusively used for the breeding of salt water salmon (salmo salar). But in the Province of Ontario at Newcastle and Sandwich, where the other two nurseries are located, the leading commercial fishes of the great lakes, salmon trout and whitefish, are principally reared. During the season of 1885, upwards of one hundred and ten millions of fish eggs were deposited in the hatching troughs of these nurseries; ninety-five millons of these were at Newcastle and Sandwich; and the total output of young fish into the waters of the country from these hatcheries, now reaches in round numbers, upwards of three hundred and ninety-three millions of the most valuable species of Canadian fishes—ninety per cent. of which could not have been brought into existence were it not for the artificial means thus adopted, as the ova from which these young fish were bred, would otherwise have been cast away as offal. Mr. Wilmot took an active part in the great International Fisheries Exhibition in London in 1883. In July, 1882, he was directed by the government to collect a comprehensive exhibit of the fishery products of the Dominion, to form the Canadian branch of the World's Fishery Exposition to open in May, 1883. He was afterwards appointed chairman of the executive commission in charge of the Canadian exhibit in London, where his untiring efforts were unceasingly put forth to give prominence, and ultimate success, to his native country, by a satisfactory arrangement and intelligent exhibit of Canadian fishes and fishery appliances generally. Mr. Wilmot is a Protestant, and a member of the Church of England, following the instincts of his father, the late Samuel Street Wilmot, who built at his own expense the first Episcopal church in the rectory of Clarke, donating it with a glebe of fifteen acres of land from his farm to the diocese of Toronto... Mr. Wilmot was married in June, 1872, to Helen Matilda, daughter of the late Charles Clark, of Cobourg, and sister to George M. Clark, judge of the united Counties of Northumberland and Durham. The issue of this marriage is four sons and three daughters, all of whom are now living.

Morin, James, Lieut-Colonel, Ridge-way, Ontario, M.P.P. for Welland, was born in the County of Limerick, Ireland, on the 10th May, 1849. He is a son of Michael and Ellen (Nash) Morin. His father adopted the business of a waggon-maker, and came to Canada in 1851, settling at Port Robinson, Welland county, where he engaged in the work of carpentering. He died in the following year, leaving seven of a family, the subject of this sketch being the youngest. Lieutenant-Colonel J. Morin received his early educational instructions in the common schools, and completed his studies at the Commercial college of Buffalo. He left school at fourteen, and began to learn the trade of carpenter, under E. Cutler, of Ridgeway, and continued at this occupation about a year, when Mr. Cutler opened a general store, and Mr. Morin relinquished work and entered into the mercantile business. In 1865 he was appointed manager of the firm, and this position he still We may say that the business has increased very greatly. Mr. Cutler engaging in large rolling mills operations and in building and contracting. The sole management of all this enormous undertaking is in the hands of the subject of this sketch, Mr. Morin joined the militia in 1867, the 44th battalion in 1868, and entered the Military school at Toronto. Here he obtained a second-class certificate, and in September of the same year was gazetted captain of No. 7 company. Again in 1872 he attended the Military school at Toronto, and obtained a first-class certificate. In June, 1872, he was appointed major of the 44th battalion, and in June, 1877, was promoted lieutenant-colonel. In May, 1870, Captain Morin saw active service, being commander of the detachment stationed at Fort Erie, during the Pigeon Hill affair. He is now in command of the 44th. In 1871 he was appointed township clerk of Bertie, Welland, and still holds that office. In 1877 he was appointed a justice of the peace, and was also license commissioner for six years in the same county. He has been chairman of the Ridgeway school board for six years, taking much interest in educational work. In 1883 Colonel Morin was elected to the Ontario legislature for the County of Welland, defeating George L. Hobson, the Conservative candidate, by a majority of fiftyfive votes, the riding having been formerly conservative. He always has been an unflinching Reformer, and is eminently a man of progress, of energy, and of general ability. As to his religious belief, he was brought up in the Roman catholic faith. He married in September, 1870, Janet A., daughter of Alexander Wilson, a descen-dant of a U. E. loyalist. There have been by this marriage a family of five children.

Whyte, William, Montreal, General Superintendent of the combined Eastern and Ontario divisions of the Canada Pacific Railway, was born at Charlestown, in Fifeshire, Scotland, in September, 1843. He was educated at the schools of his native place. At the age of eighteen he entered the service of the North British Railway Company, remaining as a clerk in the same till 1863. In the last named year he came to Canada, and upon his arrival joined the Grand Trunk Railway service, receiving the appointment of freight clerk at Cobourg, Ontario. In May he was transferred to the freight office at Montreal, occupying a similar position till the early part of 1867, when he became freight foreman of the sheds. He was afterwards appointed yardmaster in the Toronto yard; and in 1870 was promoted to the night station agency at Montreal. About a year later it was announced to him that he had received the appointment of freight and station agent at Stratford. During the time that he held charge at the latter point, a change was made from the old broad to the standard gauge, and for a full year every passenger and way car load of freight had to be transferred at Stratford, entailing an enormous amount of additional labour and trouble on both Mr. Whyte and his staff. But his plans were so well laid, and promptly carried out, that little delayand no blockade-was occasioned by the change. In 1874 he was moved to London, where he held a similar position till January, 1881. He was then ordered to Toronto, to take the entire charge of the important freight offices and sheds at that city. In November of the same year the company acknowledged his services by appointing him assistant-superintendent of the Central division from Kingston west to Stratford, including the Galt and Waterloo branches. After remaining in that position for about a year and a half, he severed his connection with the Grand Trunk, and accepted the position of general superintendent of the Credit Valley Railway (May 1823), on the resignation of James Ross. Following this appointment soon came that to the management of the Toronto, Grey and Bruce, which in September of the same year became a part of the Ontario and Quebec system, and was afterwards designated the Ontario division of the Canadian Pacific. When the Ontario and Quebec road was completed in August of 1884, its management likewise fell under the control of Mr. Whyte. What his administration has been since his elevation to this important office is very well known. Corporations, it has been well said, are bodies without souls, and they are not in the habit of promoting a man out of feelings of sentiment or of friendship. But corporations have eyes; and they are ever on the alert for administrative talent. The genius for the management of railway traffic, which Mr. Whyte possesses, was perceived, the reader will see, as soon as the opportunity for the display of his talents was opened to the subject of this sketch. Mr. Whyte is a man of quick insight, and as he possesses a cool and a clear head, it does not take him long to see his way out of a difficulty, and come to a decision. Eminently, it may be repeated, he is an administrator, being above all things swift and expedient, and sound of judgment. He is an extremely popular railway official; and in the social life of Toronto his removal from that city was much regretted. Mr. Whyte married in 1872, Jane, daughter of Adam Scott, of Toronto. There has been issue by this marriage a family of three girls and two boys.

Wood, Alpheus Field, Lieut.-Col., Madoc, J.P., M.PP. for North Hastings, was born in the State of New York, on the 30th May, 1828. He is a son of Thomas and Frances (Peckins) Wood, his mother being a daughter of Richard Peckins, who was a descendant of one of the earliest settlers of the State of Vermont. Thomas Wood adopted the life of a mechanic, in the State of New York, but came to Canada in 1810, settling in Bath, Bay of Quinté, where he continued his calling. During the war of 1812, he served in the Kingston

Guard, and afterwards received a pension. He lived to the great age of ninety-three, and died in 1882, at his son's, in Madoc, leaving five of a family, the subject of this sketch being the fourth eldest. A. F. Wood received a common school education, finishing his studies at Fredericksburg. His family removed to the County of Hastings, in 1843, and at the age of eighteen, he engaged in teaching school in the County of Hastings, and so continued to do for three years. In 1849, he concluded to adopt a mercantile calling, and commenced business in the town of Madoc, as a general merchant, and in this business he has continued ever since. 1854, he admitted as partner James Deans, under the firm name of Wood & Co. The partnership existed for three years, when they dissolved, Mr. Wood carrying on the business himself, and he continued to do so until 1879, when he retired from the general store business, but has since been a partner in the hardware business, in which he still continues. In 1878, he engaged in the grain trade, and to facilitate the operations of his large business, erected an elevator, with a capacity of some 30,000 bushels. and he is now devoting all his time to grainbuying. Mr. Wood was an ensign in the old Canadian militia, and was promoted from rank to rank until 1870, when he was appointed lieut-colonel of the North Hastings battalion. In 1857, he was elected reeve of the township of Madoc, and remained in that position for twenty years, during ten of which he served as warden of the county. In 1877 he retired, and thereafter took no part in municipal or other public life, until 1883, when he received and accepted the nomination to stand for the North Riding of Hastings, in the Conservative interest, for the Ontario Legisla-He succeeded in defeating Peter Vankleek, the Reform candidate, by a majority of 208 votes. Since becoming a member of the legislature, he has introduced and carried through successfully the Sunday Excursion Act, and an amendment to the Railway Act, which act prevents the expropriation of mines by railway companies. In 1870, he was appointed census commissioner by the Dominion government. He has been president of the Belleville and North Hastings Railway for three years, director of the Grand Junction Railway, and of the Toronto and Ottawa Railway. In 1880 he was appointed government valuator of Canada by the Dominion Government, and this office he still holds. Colonel Wood is a member of the Freemason craft, w be pi sic

of

an th

th

fra

an

ted

the

В.

88

wa.

Ge

He

lodge No. 204, Madoc, and has been master of the same and treasurer for several years. In politics he is an independent Conservative, and is a member of the Liberal-Conservative Association of Madoc, and a member of the Provincial Conservative Association Council. In religion he is a Presbyterian, and is an elder in the same church at Madoc. He married, in 1850, Eliza Ann, daughter of Daniel Ross, J.P. of the County of Hastings, a well known gentleman in the part of the country in which he resides. Colonel Wood has two sons and two daughters living, Herbert R. Wood, the eldest son, being a gold medalist of Toronto University, and assistant lecturer in the Natural Science department of the same, and the second son, William, is at present attending Upper Canada College. We may add that the subject of this sketch is a brother of the Hon. S. C. Wood, late treasurer of the Ontario Government [which see elsewhere in these pages], and at present manager of the Freehold Loan Company. Colonel Wood is noted for his close attention to business, and to this we may ascribe his conspicuous success in mercantile life. He has been president of the Scott Act Association of Hastings, and is superintendent of the Sabbath-school of Madoc, and all through his life has been interested in the welfare of the community in which he resides. He is an earnest and matter of fact speaker, as he is in life, and whenever he arises to address the House, he is listened to with attention and respect. He is agent at Madoc for the Freehold Loan Company, also the Canada Landed Credit Company, and does a general agency business in the same place.

Stewart, McLeod, M.A., Ottawa, was born at Ottawa, in the year 1847, and belongs to the family of the Stewarts of Appin, both upon the father and mother's William Stewart, his father, was one side. of the foremost men in the Ottawa valley, and represented (Bytown) now Ottawa, and the County of Russell for several years in the old parliament of Canada. He was one of the fathers of the lumber trade, and was the framer of the Cullers Act and other important measures. McLeod Stewart was educated at the Ottawa Grammar school, and at the University of Toronto; and graduated B.A. from the latter institution in 1867, and as prizeman in reading and M.A. in 1870. He was appointed a lieutenant in the Governor General's Foot Guards on its first formation. He has held, and now holds, several important public offices, some of which let us enumerate. He was president of St. Andrew's Society for three years; he is a director of the Protestant Hospital; a director of the City of Ottawa Agricultural Society; and a director of the Metropolitan Street Railway; director of the Edmonton and Saskatchewan Land Company of Canada; vice-president of the Stewart Ranche Company; director and secretary of the Canadian Granite Company: and president of the Canada Atlantic Railway Company. He is solicitor of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, at Ottawa, and of other large corporations. Although possessing a large and lucrative legal practice, Mr. Stewart has found time to identify himself with nearly every public and private enterprise in the City of Ottawa, whether of a local or national character. He is a strong Liberal-Conservative, and has rendered important service to his party. Hehas been three times in Europe, and on one of his visits spent nearly twelve months on the other side of the Atlantic. In religion he is a Presbyterian. Mr. Stewart married in 1874, Linnie Emma, eldest daughter of Colonel Walker Powell, adjutant-general of Militia and Defence for Canada. It has been the good fortune of few Canadians to achieve so early in life so much either in the general business of the community, or in the legal profession, as Mr. Stewart has accomplished. If he could be won away somewhat from his present engagements and induced to enter the political arena, he would be a very valuable acquisition to the political life of Canada.

Ross, Alexander Milton, M.D., Montreal, the eminent Canadian Philan-thropist, Scientist and Author, has had a career of striking interest. He was born on December 13th, 1832, in Belleville, Ontario. His parents were descendants of Scotch Highlanders, who came to Canada from Ross-shire, Scotland, in 1758. In his boyhood he made his way to New York city, and after struggling with many adversities, became a compositor in the office of the Evening Post, then edited and owned by William Cullen Bryant, the poet. Mr. Bryant became much interested in young Ross, and ever after remained his steadfast friend. It was during this period that he became acquainted with General Garibaldi, who at that time was a resident of New York, and employed in making candles. This acquaintance soon ripened into a warm friendship, which continued unbroken down to Garibaldi's death in 1882. It was through Dr. Ross's efforts in 1874 that Garibaldi obtained his pension from the Italian government. In 1851 Dr. Ross began the study of medicine, under the direction of the celebrated Dr. Valentine Mott, and subsequently under Dr. Trall, the hydropathist. After four years of unremitting toil, working as compositor during the day and studying medicine at night, he received his degree of M.D. in 1855, and shortly after received the appointment of surgeon in the army of Nicaragua, then commanded by General William Walker. He subsequently became actively and earnestly engaged in the antislavery struggle in the United States, which culminated in the liberation from bondage of four millions of slaves. "Dr. Ross was a personal friend and co-worker of Captain John Brown, the martyr. Although Dr. Ross's sphere of labour in that great struggle for human freedom was less public than that of many other workers in the cause, at was not less important, and required the exercise of greater caution, courage and determination, and also involved greater per-Senator Wade, vice-president sonal risk. of the United States, said, in speaking of the abolitionists:—"Never in the history of the world did the same number of men perform so great an amount of good for the human race and for their country as the once despised abolitionists, and it is my duty to add that no one of their number submitted to greater privations, perils or sacrifices, or did more in the great and noble work than Alexander Ross." He has received the benediction of the philanthropist and poet, Whittier, in the following noble words, which find their echo in the hearts of thousands:—

"DR. A. M. ROSS.

- "For his steadfast strength and courage In a dark and evil time, When the Golden Rule was treason, And to feed the hungry, crime.
- "For the poor slave's hope and refuge, When the hound was on his track,
 And saint and sinner, state and church, Joined hands to send him back.
- "Blessings upon him!—What he did For each sad, suffering one, Chained, hunted, scourged and bleeding, Unto our Lord was done.

JOHN G. WHITTIER,

Secretary of the Convention in 1833, which formed the American Anti-Slavery Society."

The sincere radical abolitionists, with whom Dr. Ross was labouring, were despised, hated and ostracised by the rich, the powerful and the so-called higher classes; but Dr. Ross always possessed the courage of his opinions, and preferred the approval of his own conscience to the smiles or favours of men. During the Southern rebellion he was employed by President Lincoln as confidential correspondent in Canada, and rendered very important services to the United States government. For this he received the special thanks of President Lincoln and Secretary Seward. When the war ended, with the downfall of the Confederacy, Dr. Ross offered his services to President Juarez, of Mexico, and received the appointment of surgeon in the Republican army. The capture of Maximillian, and the speedy overthrow of the empire, rendered Dr. Ross's services unnecessary, and he returned to Canada and to the congenial and more peaceful pursuits of a naturalist. The object of his ambition now was to collect and classify the fauna and flora of his native country, a labour never before attempted by a Canadian. He has collected and classified 570 species of birds that regularly or occasionally visit the Dominion of Canada: 240 species of eggs of birds that breed in Canada; 247 species of mammals, reptiles, and freshwater fish; 3,400 species of insects; and 2,200 species of Canadian The Montreal Herald, of August 19, 1884, says :- "Dr. Ross has been a member of the British Association of Science for the last fourteen years, and of the French and American Associations for the past ten years. The following brief sketch will, therefore, prove doubly interesting in view of the approaching gathering of scientific men in this city. He has devoted special attention to the ornithology, ichthyology, botany and entomology of Canada; has personally made large and valuable collections of the fauna and flora of Canada; has enriched by his contributions the natural history museums of Paris, St. Petersburg, Vienna, Rome, Athens, Dresden, Lisbon, Teheran and Cairo with collections of Canadian fauna and He is author of "Birds of Canada" (1872), "Butterflies and Moths of Canada" (1873), "Flora of Canada" (1873), "Forrest Trees of Canada" (1874), "Mammals, Reptiles, and Freshwater Fishes of Canada" (1878), "Recollections of an Abolitionist" (1867), and "Ferns and Wild Flowers of Canada" (1877). He received the degrees of M.D. (1855), and M.A. (1867); and was knighted by the Emperor of Russia (1876), King of Italy (1876), King of Greece (1876), King of Portugal (1877), King of Saxony (1876), and the Shah of Persia (1882), and received the decoration of honour from the Khedive of Egypt, and the decoration of the Palm Leaf from

THE SECTION STREET

Qı

J.

in

18

an

Μı

lan

yea

shi

He

bus was

hea

bete

the

four

bein

ceiv

ing Smi

ente

Lyon he ro

for C

the government of France (1879). He was offered (and declined) the title of Baron by the King of Bavaria, in recognition of his labours as a naturalist. Dr. Ross was elected a Fellow of the Royal Society of Literature and the Linnean and Zoological Societies of England; the Royal Societies of Antiquaries of Denmark and Greece; the Imperial Society of Naturalists of Russia; the Imperial Botanical and Zoological Society of Austria: the Royal Academy of Science of Palermo, Italy; a member of the Entomological Societies of Russia, Germany, Italy, France, Switzerland, Belgium, Bohemia and Wurtemburg." For several years past Dr. Ross has laboured with his characteristic zeal and energy in behalf of moral and physical reform. He is always on the side of the poor and the oppressed. no matter how unpopular the cause may be. He does his duty as he sees it, regardless of consequences to himself. During the smallpox epidemic in Montreal (in 1885), Dr. Ross was a prominent opponent of vaccination, declaring that it was not only useless as a preventative of small-pox, but, that it propagated the disease, when practiced during the existence of an epidemic. In place of vaccination he strongly advocates the strict enforcement of sanitation and isolation. He maintains that personal and municipal cleanliness is the only scientific safeguard against zymotic diseases. Dr. Ross is a resident of Montreal, and a member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Quebec, Untario and Manitoba.

Murray, Thomas, Pembroke, Ont., J.P., M.PP. for North Renfrew, was born in the County of Carleton, Ontario, on the 18th January, 1836, and is a son of James and Elizabeth (Burrows) Murray. James Murray was born in King's County, Ireland, and came to Canada in his twelfth year, with his parents, settling in the township of Goulbourne, County of Carleton. He followed for some time a mercantile business, near the Rideau Canal, while it was being constructed; but owing to ill health, he abandoned this business, and betook himself to farming, and continued at the same until his death in 1848. He left four of a family, the subject of this sketch being the eldest son. Thomas Murray received a common school education, finishing his studies at the Grammar school at After leaving school, he Smith's Falls. entered the employ of the late W. R. R. Lyon, of Richmond, Carleton county, where he remained for four years. He then left for Ottawa, and entered the employ of Porter Brothers. He resided in Ottawa for five years, carrying on business for himself during a portion of the time, when he removed to Pembroke, where he entered into partnership with his brother, Michael Murray, under the firm name of Murray Brothers. Michael died shortly afterwards, when Mr. Murray admitted as partner his brother, William, changing the firm name to T. & W. Murray, and under this style they still continue to carry on a general mercantile business. A large and very profitable trade in furs, produce, lumber and general merchandise is the result of the energy, thrift and good business abilities of the partners. Mr. Murray was elected town councillor of Pembroke in 1863, and remained in that position for a considerable time, and was for several years reeve of the town. In 1868, he contested North Renfrew for the House of Commons, against John Rankin, and was defeated by a small Shortly afterwards Mr. Rankin resigned his seat, and Mr. Murray was again a candidate for the vacancy; but the late John Supple, who represented the same constituency in the local house, being favourable to the election of the late Sir Francis Hincks, who was desirous of a seat in the House of Commons, resigned his seat in the Ontario legislature, on the condition that Mr. Murray would not contest the Dominion election. Mr. Murray accordingly contested the election for the Ontario house, against Thos. Deacon, Q.C., and defeated his opponent. At the next general election he was defeated by Mr. Deacon. In 1871, he contested Pontiac and North Renfrew for the House of Commons, but was unsuccessful. In 1879 he ran, in the Liberal interest, for North Renfrew, for the Ontario legislature, against his old opponent, Mr. Deacon, whom he defeated by over 100 of a majority. Mr. Murray soon afterwards resigned his seat to run for the House of Commons against the present representative, Peter White, but was defeated. Lastly, in 1883, he contested the same riding, and was returned over Mr. Deacon by over 160 of a majority, to the Ontario legislature. In one of the elections in which Mr. Murray was defeated for the House of Commons, the successful candidate, Mr. White, was unseated, and Mr. Murray's brother, William, contested the seat against Mr. White, and defeated him. Mr. White, in turn, protested Mr. Murray's election, and unseated him after he had sat one session. Both again went to the polls, when Mr. White was elected. Mr. Murray is a Liberal in politics, and in religion a Roman catholic. He married, in 1855, Jane, daughter of James Copeland, of Richmond. Mr. Murray is a very capable business man, and has achieved much success, having now several branch stores in the Ottawa district. He has push and enterprise, and his manners have secured to him the widest share of popular esteem. He owns a great many of the buildings and town lots in Pembroke, situate in what is known as the Murray ward, and he is also a large property-holder in the rising village of North Bay, on the north shore of Lake Nipissing, where a year ago was nothing but bush. Now, however, owing largely to Mr. Murray's enterprise. it is a promising village with a population of over 700 inhabitants, and a hotel erected by the Messrs. Murray at a cost of over $10,000. Mr. Murray exhibits the same energy in the legislative sphere that he shows in his own business concerns, and this quality, together with his excellent judgment and his familiarity with public affairs, give him much influence in the legislature.

Branscombe, Henry William, Picton, Ontario, was born at Hallowell, County of Prince Edward, in 1837. His father, Arthur Branscombe, was the grandson of a British officer, who served in the war of the American revolution, and after the treaty of 1783, removed to Grand Lake. Queen's County, New Brunswick, at which place a large number of the same name still reside. Early in the present century, the grandfather and father of Mr. Branscombe, removed to Hallowell, Upper Canada, and settled near what is now the village of Bloomfield. Arthur Branscombe married Catharine Burlingham, daughter of a U. E. loyalist, who came from Duchess County, N. Y., at the close of the war. The Burlingham's were amongst the most successful of the old settlers of Prince Edward county, and constitute to-day one of the most extensive and respectable families in that county. Henry W. Branscombe was educated in his native township, and at an early age commenced the study and practice of dentistry, in which profession he has risen to the foremost rank. In 1862 he left his native town for New York city, where he practised his profession with marked success for five years. He then returned to Picton, and after a sojourn of a few years, removed to Chicago, where he remained till 1879, when he returned to Canada and permanently His careful, steady and settled at Picton. industrious pursuit of knowledge, together with the deep interest he has always taken in dentistry, secured for him an honourable recognition by his professional brethren, in his election to the position of secretary to the Dental Association for Ontario. After his removal to Picton he combined the business of chemist and druggist with that of dentistry, and has for several years successfully conducted both branches. In all local enterprises Mr. Branscombe has been found to give a helping hand. For five consecutive years he has occupied a seat at the council board, where he has made his influence felt to a marked degree. He has for years been a director of the County Agricultural Society, and is also treasurer of the Bay of Quinté Fire Insurance Company. He is an active member of the Methodist church, an enthusiastic Freemason, and a determined and energetic worker for the cause of temperance. He married in 1866, Sara E., daughter of the late Rev. Cyrus Allison, whose name is familiar amongst the temperance workers, who under the appellation of the Womans' Christian Temperance Union have done so much of late years to arouse public opinion upon this important question.

BHH PH Whit olodi

ce

de

up cit

an

hir

lin

ent

On

Co.

An

wa

a sd

fron

ado

ed i

fam

Will

ucat

rem

nine

cant

the e gene

six y

parti

tion Mr.

the fi

well l

1882 whar

lingto

ed in merch

merca Hamil

Nelson, H. A., Montreal, (deceased) was born in Keene, New Hampshire, on October 20, 1816, and removed to Montreal when twenty-four years of age, in the year 1840, entering into business with the late Isaac Butters, under the name of Nelson & Butters. The firm so existed until 1861, when Mr. Butters retired on account of illhealth, and O. S. Wood took his place, until he retired from a similar cause in 1874. Mr. Nelson then took into partnership his four sons, and the firm name was changed to that of H. A. Nelson & Sons, which at present it bears. In the year 1878, Mr. Nelson was elected to represent Montreal Centre in the Quebec legislature, as a supporter of M. Joly, and represented the constituency for three years, when he retired. But it was as an alderman that Mr. Nelson was best known. Occupying a seat in the municipal council for the long period of fourteen years, and for the latter portion holding the important post of chairman of the Finance committee, a position for which he proved himself singularly well fitted, his name will be associated with what was best calculated to secure a judicious regulation and expenditure of the civic funds, and to promote the best interests of the city generally. In the commercial community Mr. Nelson was equally well known and esteemed. In addition to building up a large and prosperous private business, he was a trusted councillor on the the boards of several public companies and institutions. He was a director of the Molsons Bank, president of the Loan & Investment Association, and vice-president of the Provincial Loan Association. The decessed gentleman was also foremost in works of a charitable nature, and the boards and committees of several charitable societies have missed his kindly presence, his sympathetic aid, and his valued advice. Particularly, his death was mourned by the pastor and congregation of the American Presbyterian Church. For many years he was an active member of that church, and at his death was senior elder, the chairman of the Board of Trustees, and superintendent of the Sunday School, in all of which his loss has been deeply felt. This worthy man died at home in Montreal, on the 24th December, 1882. Speaking of his demise on the following day, the Gazette said: "By his death the community loses a large-hearted, upright and honourable citizen, and the city, one who as a member of the council and in various other capacities has proved himself a man of sound judgment, of sterling integrity, and of active and beneficial

hle

in

to

ter

8i-

of

88-

cal

nd

cu-

he

lu-

for

he

ist

a

աջ

d)
on
al
ar
te
&
l, il
r.
at
th
as
e
L.
r

enterprise. Kerns, Major William, Burlington, Ont., M.P.P. for Halton, was born in the County of Halton, on the 6th of September, 1840. He is a son of Nicholas and Mary Ann (Waterbury) Kerns. Nicholas Kerns was born in the County of Halton, and was a son of Nicholas Kerns, who came thither from Germany. The father of Major Kerns adopted the life of a farmer, and so continued until the time of his death. He had a family of six, William being the eldest. William Kerns received a common school education; and after completing his studies. remained in the old homestead until he was nineteen, when he began to learn the mercantile business. In 1860, he entered into the employ of Waldie & Co., of Burlington, general merchants, where he remained for six years. Then (1866) he was admitted a partner in the firm, maintaining the connection until 1880, when Mr. Waldie retired, Mr. Kerns carrying on the business under the firm name of W. Kerns & Co., it being well known and still conducted by them. In 1882 he purchased the warehouses and wharves of the late Wm. Buntin, of Burlington, and has since that date been engaged in the business of wharfinger and grain merchant, in connection with the general mercantile trade. In 1866 he entered the Hamilton Military school and obtained a under Colonel Vankoughnet, and was dis-second class certificate, under Col. Peacock, and after leaving school was appointed ensign in the 20th, row Lorne Rifles. 1883 he obtained a first class military certificate. He holds the position of senior major in the corps. He has been a school trustee in Burlington, and held the position for ten years, being always interested in educational work. In 1879, he was by acclamation chosen reeve of the village of Burlington, and was re-elected for the three successive years without opposition. In 1883, he contested, in the Conservative interest, the County of Halton, against Dr. Robinson, of Milton, and was elected by a majority of 150 votes. Major Kerns is the first vice-president of the Federal Life Insurance Company, of Hamilton; is a member of the Masonic craft, lodge No. 165, A.F. & A.M., of Burlington, and past master of the same; also of the Scottish rite, in which he has taken the 31st degree. He is also grand steward of the Grand Lodge of Canada He is also an Oddfellow, a member of the A.O. U.W., and past county master of the Orange order. In politics he is a very sturdy Conservative, and in religion, a Presbyterian. He married in 1868, Ellen, daughter of Charles Morris, of Burlington, by whom he has had four children, two of whom are living. Major Kerns is one of the most industrious members of the legislature; and in committee his energy, good judgment, and wide stock of information upon most of the subjects up for consideration, make him an extremely valuable member of the house. A man of such equipment naturally commands considerable influence; and Halton is to be congratulated upon its representation.

Graham, Peter, Warwick, Ontario, J.P., M.P.P. for East Lambton, was born in the County of Cumberland, on the 16th July, 1821; and is a son of Thomas and Elizabeth Graham. Thomas Graham engaged in the occupation of a carter and hotel-keeper in England; but in 1834 he set sail for Canada, landing in Quebec with his family. He settled in Cote St Charles, County of Vaudreuil, where he took up a farm, and here remained until his death. Mrs. Graham died in England. Graham received a common school education in England, and after his arrival in Canada adopted farming for three years; then public discontent broke out in rebellion, and Mr. Graham was one of those who joined the volunteers under Captain Crawford, No. 8 company. He afterwards transferred to the 3rd Provisional battalion, charged as a non-commissioned officer after the rebellion was crushed. He soon afterwards came to Upper Canada, and after engaging in different pursuits at various places, settled down on a rented farm in the township of Binbrook, Wentworth county. Here he remained for five years, when he purchased a farm of 300 acres of bush land in the township of Warwick, County of Lambton, on which place he has ever since resided. Mr. Graham was elected township councillor of Warwick, and was elected first deputy reeve of that township, and subsequently reeve for several years. He has also been connected with a number of public enterprises in his portion of the province; is a member of the Grange Society; has been president of the Township of Warwick Agricultural Association; and a director of the County Association. He has always taken an active interest in agricultural concerns. Mr. Graham was elected the first member representing the East Riding of Lambton in 1875, after the redistribution of seats, and he still continues to represent that constituency. During the John Sandfield Macdonald Administration he was appointed a justice of the peace. Mr. Graham was the first publicist to advocate the adoption of the Tile Drainage Act, which afterwards came into force. He has for years advocated legislation to amend the act respecting the division lines in rural municipalties, as passed in 1871, and known as the Property Amendment Act; and during the present session (1886) has a resolution to that effect before the house. Mr. Graham is a strong advocate for female sufferage, a man fully imbued with the spirit of wise and enlightened modern progress, and altogether a very valuable member of the Ontario legislature. Mr. Graham, we may add, is in favour of abolishing the Government House, and seconded the resolution introduced by Mr. McIntyre with that object in view (Session 1866). He is also in favour of the abolition of the Upper Canada College. We may further add, that Mr. Graham had the honour of proposing the Hon. Alexander Mackenzie, on his first appearance for parliamentary honours, on the hustings at Sarnia. In religion, Mr. Graham adheres to Methodism, is trustee of church property, and has been delegate to the London conference for two sessions. He married Catherine Chambers, of Glengarry, daughter of James Chambers, and had by that lady nine of a family; she died in 1873. He again married, in 1874, Mrs. Celesta Jane Ward, by whom he has had two children.

Murphy, Edward, J. P., Chevalier of the Sacred and Military Order of the Holy Sepulchre, was born on the 26th July, 1818, in the County Carlow, Ireland, and came to Montreal in 1824, with his parents and brothers, and there has since resided. Mr. Murphy claims a lineal descent from Donal Mor (or the great) O'Murphy, a chieftain of considerable power and territory in the County Wexford, Ireland, temp Henry VIII. In the reign of Edward VI, he and his sept were overcome, and with a number of his clansmen, was attainted, for resisting the encroachments of the "English Pale," and a large portion of their ancient territory, "The Murrows," comprising the present Barony of Ballaghkeen in that county, was confiscated to the Crown, and granted to favorites in that and succeeding reigns. (See "O'Hart's Landed Gentry," pages 113 and 114, and state papers of sixteenth and seventeenth centuries.) Mr. Murphy's family are related to the Sarsfields, the O'Byrnes, Kavnaghs, Rudkins, Motleys and other families of position, in the counties of Wexford, Carlow, and Wicklow. His father, Daniel Murphy, of Ballyellen Mills, County Carlow, and his uncles were largely engaged in business as corn factors and millers, and they had an extensive trade with Waterford and the other chief towns in the South of Ireland. Mr. Murphy, seur., came to Canada in 1824, and died in Montreal, in 1846. Mr. Murphy's mother was a daughter of Peter Byrne, of the County Carlow, a descendant of the old and distinguished family of the Byrnes, of Ballycapple, one of the senior branches of the great sept O'Byrne, of the County Wicklow. Having received, at Esson's Academy, his commercial education, at the age of fourteen he was engaged as a clerk in the hardware business. In 1846 he became principal salesman in the old established firm of Frothingham & Workman, wholesale hardware merchants, which position he occupied until 1859, when he became a partner in that business, now, and for many years past, the most extensive in the Dominion. Mr. Murphy has assisted in maintaining the firm in the high position it has so long and deservedly enjoyed. Yet business, with all its cares and anxieties, did not absorb his entire attention. His first step in the philanthropic efforts that have marked his whole life was in connection with the establishment of the earliest Irish Catholic Temperance Society organized in Canada. The late lamented Bishop Phelan, of Kingston, was at that time (1840) pastor of the Irish people of Montreal, and ministered to

e n

a

C

ca be th

an

se

P

he

me

to

th

siz

be

pil

hoi

the

oft

tru

the

zen

Mu

that

pro

nev

thei

1842

Catl

brot

had

host

ber

und

min

anch

SirF

ished

ed ha

and

spect

the l

in his

his fe

of th

Socie

himse

this

was

their spiritual wants in the venerable edifice, the Recollet Church, now amongst the things of the past, but around which clustered many fond remembrances for the older inhabitants. Into the temperance cause Mr. Murphy threw himself with his whole soul, seconding the efforts of the good Father Phelan. In 1841 he was elected secretary of the association, and so continued until 1862, when he was presented with a massive solid silver jug and a most flattering address by the society, in recognition of his invaluable services in the total abstinence Long years of active work did not cause him to abate his efforts in, what may be termed, the cherished object of his life, the propagation of temperance principles amongst his fellow countrymen. He was several times elected president of the St. Patrick's Temperance Society, a post which he at present holds; and again in 1884, its members feeling that something more ought to be done in recognition of such devotion, they presented him with a magnificent lifesize portrait, in oil, of himself. He has now been for over forty years one of the main pillars of total abstinence in his adopted home, and may without flattery be styled the standard bearer of the cause. It has often been said, and with a great deal of truth, that the man who appears to forget the old land, makes a very indiffierent citizen wherever his lot may be cast. Mr. Murphy is a striking example of the class that contribute so much to the progress and prosperity of their adopted home, and yet never cease to sympathise with the land of their forefathers. In the good old days of 1842, when the Irishmen of Montreal, both Catholic and Protestant, formed one grand brotherhood, ere narrow-minded politicians had succeeded in dividing them into two hostile camps, Mr. Murphy became a member of the original St. Patrick's Society under the presidency of the late Benjamin Holmes. In those days, and in later, such men as the late William Workman, Sir Francis Hincks, and many other distinguished Irish Protestant gentlemen, were joined hand in hand with their Catholic brethren, and the Irish people of Montreal were respected, and their influence felt throughout the land. Mr. Murphy was indefatigable in his exertions to promote the well-being of his fellow-countrymen, through the medium of the national organization. In 1860, he was elected president of the St. Patrick's Society, a position he filled with credit to himself and benefit to that body. About this time he was gazetted captain in the valier

f the

July,

i, and

arents

sided. from

chief-

ry in

Jenry

e and

mber

isting

Pale,"

tory,

esent

was ed to > (See and

ven-

y are Kav-

ilies

Car-Iur-

and

ness

d an

the

and.

824,

hy's

rne, the

nes,

hes

nty

n's the

k in

me

hed

ale

n.

Montreal militia, 4th battalion; he was also named to the commission of the peace, and in 1861 he occupied the responsible position of commissioner of the Census for the City of Montreal under the Canadian government. In 1862 Mr. Murphy revisited the scenes of his childhood, and cast once more a loving glance on the green hills and pleasant valleys of his native land. During his absence in Ireland he was elected a director of the City and District Savings Bank of Montreal. This position he filled until 1877, when he was elected to the presidency of that flourishing institution, an office to which he has been annually re-elected. and which he holds at the present time. He fills the important trust of marguiller or churchwarden of the parish church of Notre Dame, a singular mark of the confidence reposed in him, and the kindly feelings evinced towards him by his French Canadian fellow-citizens. Again and again he has been solicited to accept municipal and parliamentary honours, which he has always declined. Nevertheless, he has not abstained from participating in the political struggles of the country. A friend of liberty, he sympathised with the gallant band of patriots whose blood shed on the field of battle and trickling down the scaffold in 1837 and 1838, secured for Canada the priceless boon of constitutional government. In politics, he is a Liberal-Conservative, and through good report and evil report, he has always manfully stood up by the party, that his experience has led him to believe has the true interests of Canada at heart. Enjoyment of the blessings of constitutional freedom of Canada has made Mr. Murphy's sympathetic heart yearn for similar advantages to his native land, and in consequence he has always warmly advocated and assisted the movements set on foot here in favor of Home Rule for Ireland. With such a record any man might well rest content to see his name go down to posterity; but Mr. Murphy has still other claims to public gratitude. As far back as thirty years ago, mainly through his exertions, the "early closing movement" was carried into effect, whereby the clerks in the hardware trade secured the afternoon of Saturday for their recreation and mental improvement, a boon that has since been widely extended for the benefit of clerks in other branches of business. He is one of the vice-presidents of the Natural History Society of Montreal, and also of the Numismatic and Antiquarian Society, in the transactions of both of which he has taken an active part. He is a life governor of the Montreal General Hospital, and also a life governor of Notre Dame Hospital of the same city. He is also a member of the Societe Historique de Montreal. is and has been one of the Catholic School commissioners of the City of Montreal. In this position he felt more acutely than ever the greatneed of a good commercial education for our youth, and his energies were centred to effect that object. To give an impetus to the movement he generously founded the "Edward Murphy" prize of the annual value of $100, in perpetuity, for the "encouragement of commercial education in Montreal." This prize consists in a gold medal of the value of $50 and a purse of a like amount, and is open to all competitors. During these long years of arduous labour, Mr. Murphy has found time to cultivate his taste for scientific pursuits, and his public lectures, always delivered for the benefit of charitable objects, on "The Microscope and its Revelations," and on "Astronomy, have invariably met with a hearty reception by the public. He pursued these favourite studies in the few moments he could snatch from his pressing occupations, and the success that has attended his efforts is another proof of how much can be accomplished by well directed labour. A post of honour, entailing arduous duties as well, was conferred on Mr. Murphy, 1879, that of har-bour commissioner, which he now fills. He (Mr. Murphy) was twice married, first to Elizabeth, daughter of the late Thomas McBride and Mary Price, of Dublin, Ireland, by whom he has two daughters living. Secondly, to Maria Georgiana, daughter of the late Hon. Judge Power, of the Superio Court of Quebec, and Susan de Gaspé, his wife, (daughter of Philip Aubert de Gaspé, seigneur of St. Jean Port Joly, the author of "Les Anciens Canadiens," and other works on Canadian history.) By this marriage Mr. Murphy has one son and two daughters, all living (1886). His eldest daughter was married to the late E. C. Monk, advocate, of Montreal, son of the Hon. S. Cornwallis Monk, one of the judges of the Court of Appeal for the Province of Quebec. As a successful merchant Mr. Murphy's word is as good as his bond in the commercial community. He is the patron of education, the noiseless toiler in scientific pursuits, a sincere and devout Catholic, whose name will ever be connected with St. Patrick's Church, its asylums and kindred institutions. His investiture as a Chevalier of the Sacred and Military Order of the Holy Sepulchre, in 1882, is a well merited tribute to his worth by the ecclesiastical authorities of his church. We conclude Mr. Murphy's biography by saying that he is respected and trusted by his fellow citizens of all origins and creeds as a loyal and devoted son of Canada.

Orton, George Turner, M.D., Winnipeg, M.P. for Centre Wellington, is a son of Dr. Henry Orton, who came to Upper Canada from Leicestershire, England, and settled in Guelph in 1835. He was a county coroner for many years, and died at Fergus in 1869. The wife of Dr. Henry Orton, and the mother of the subject of this sketch was Mary Jerram, also a native of England, she died at Nottingham, England, in 1858. George Turner Orton is a brother of T. J. Orton, surgeon-major of the British army, who entered the service on 15th January, This brave officer served with the Royal artillery in the trenches before Sebastopol, in 1855, and at the assault of the Redan, on the 8th of September; receiving in recognition of his services, a medal with a clasp, and also a Turkish medal. He served with the Central India field force under Sir Hugh Rose in 1858, and was present at the siege and capture of Fort Chandairee; at the siege and capture of Jhansi; at the battle of the Betwa; the action at Koonch; the actions of the 17th, 18th and the 21st of May at Golowlie, and at the capture of Calpee. He was subsequently engaged in various actions in the Bundlekund district, for which he received a medal. He accompanied the Perak expedition as principal medical officer of the force, and his conduct was mentioned in desspatches; and he received a medal with clasp. George T. Orton attended the Grammar school at Guelph; studied German with a private tutor at Berlin, County of Waterloo, Ontario; and pursued his medical studies at the College of Surgeons, Dublin, Ireland, and at the University of St. Andrews, Scotland, from which he was graduated M.D., in 1860. He was subsequently elected a member of the Royal College of Surgeons, England. Dr. Orton practised, for a short time, in England; but he soon resolved to ascertain what fortune had in store for him in Canada. He joined his brother in Ancaster, near Hamilton, and practised his profession along with him for some time, and in August, 1861, he removed to Fergus, and settled there. His ability, his professional skill, and his industry soon gave him a remunerative practice here. Dr. Orton was a captain of a volunteer company, formed soon after the Fenian raid of 1866; and

t

h

E

d

S

fe

tl

cl

V.

tl

O

tl

to

CI

sį

ac te

hi

of

th

th

bı

tie

ca

U

pr

8U

ju

fro

he became surgeon of the 30th battalion of Wellington rifles. He began his political career as councilman, and served three successive years as reeve. Dr. Orton has taken an active part in the promotion of important public enterprises. He was one of the foremost in advocating the construction of the Wellington, Grey and Bruce, and the Credit Valley railways. Dr. Orton first sought election to parliament in 1872, but was defeated. In 1874 he was successful, but was unseated on petition. In 1882 he successfully contested Centre Wellington, defeating Sir Richard Cartwright; and in 1883 removed to Winnipeg, where he entered into partnership with Dr. Brett. He was exchanged from the 30th battalion to the 90th battalion, Winnipeg rifles, with which corps he went to the front, in the advance column of General Middleton. He was appointed brigade surgeon, and was present at the battle of Fish Creek, and also Dr. Orton was chief medical of Batoche. officer of the Rocky Mountain division of the Canadian Pacific in 1884 and 1885, and he was subsequently appointed coroner for British Columbia. Dr. Orton married Ann, daughter of William Farmer, formerly of Sutton-Maddock, Shropshire, England, who for many years engaged in lumbering on the Gatineau river. There have been seven children by this union, but two only survive, both being daughters. The career of Dr. Orton has been an active and an exextremely useful one. He is not one of those self-seeking politicians whose patriotic acts are intended to bring fruits to their own pockets; but he is loyally devoted to the affairs of the public. To the agricultural interests of Canada he has devoted special study, and the labour and the achievements of the parliamentary committee, which bears his name, have passed into history. He has always been a champion of the national policy, and the object of his committee was to ascertain the effect of There was that policy upon agriculture. the usual minority report, but the great bulk of the evidence confirmed the contentions of Dr. Orton. He has been an advocate of reciprocity between Canada and the United States; and has been, in short, prominently connected with all the great subjects within the sphere of political ad-We expect to hear much yet judication. from this able and large-minded publicist. Dill, Jacob William, Bracebridge, clesi-

con-

aying

s fel-

28 2

Win-

son

pper

and

unty

rgus

rton.

etch

and,

858.

r. J.

my,

ary,

the

Se-

the

ving with

He

orce

was

Fort

e of

the 7th.

and

bse-

the

ed a

edi-

rce.

des-

vith

am-

nan

of

edi-

ub-

St. was

se-

lol-

ac-

he

nad

his

nd for

red

m-

Dill, Jacob William, Bracebridge, Ontario, M.P.P. for Muskoka and Parry Sound, was born on the 3rd September, 1840, in the village of Preston, County of

Waterloo. He is a son of Henry and Mary (Rose) Dill, his mother being a daughter of Mr. Kose, one of the first pioneers and residents of the County of Waterloo. Henry Dill came to Canada in about 1830, and settled in the township of Waterloo, where he began farming. In this occupation he continued for some time, and died in 1874. Mrs. Dill is still living. There was a family of six children, the subject of this sketch being the eldest. Jacob William Dill received a liberal education, and after leaving school at the age of seventeen, resolved to adopt a mercantile life. In 1867 he entered the employ of the fate Mr. Hespeler, of Preston, but he shortly afterwards removed to Pembroke, where he received from Sir John A. Macdonald the appointment of conducting German settlers to the several settlements in the township of Alice, in the County of Renfrew. Mr. Dill remained in this position until the fall, when he entered the employ of Kennedy & Russell, general merchants, of the village, now the town of Pembroke, at a salary of $4 per Here he remained for about two years, when he proceeded to Lake Nippissing, in the District of Nippissing, where he engaged in trade with the Indians, having a store in that place. He continued so occupied for four years, but not finding the undertaking successful, he removed to Penetanguishene, where he took a position in the store of Mr. Mitchell, a merchant and lumber dealer. Here he- remained for two years, when he resigned and removed to the village of Mattawa, District of Nippissing, where he became manager of N. Trimmon's general store and supply depot in that village. He resigned this situation, and removed to the village of Bracebridge, District of Muskoka, where he engaged in business for himself as general store-keeper. He continued his operations here alone until 1876, when he admitted as partner, William Kirk, the new firm being known as Dill & Kirk. business which Mr. Dill commenced with ? such a small beginning, began at once to increase, and in 1875 he found it necessary to enlarge the premises by extensive additions. After the entry of Mr. Kirk as partner, the two decided to open a branch store at the village of Magnetawan, in the District of Parry Sound, which sub-establishment they still continue to maintain. Mr. Dill was appointed school trustee for the village of Bracebridge in 1882, but he resigned the office in 1883, to "run" for the reeveship of the village. In 1873 he was elected councillor of the township of McCauley, which position he held until 1876, when the village of Bracebridge was incorporated; and then Mr. Dill was elected councillor of the village. He served as reeve for the years 1878, 1879, 1882 and 1883, and was appointed warden of the County of Victoria in 1882. In the fall of 1883, having received the nomination of the Reform convention for the District of Muskoka and Parry Sound, he contested the election for the seat in the Ontario Legislature-made vacant by the disqualification of the Conservative member, Mr. Farquier, who had carried the riding with a majority of 200-with Gilbert Eachern, the Conservative candidate, defeating him by 127 votes. Mr. Dill is a Freemason, lodge No. 360, Muskoka, and has been secretary of the same; is also a member of A.O.U.W., and is treasurer of lodge No. 204, Bracebridge. He is a staunch Reformer in politics, and was president of the Reform Association of Bracebridge for some time. In religion, he is a Presbyterian, but at the same time liberal in his views, believing the conscience of each one should be the guide in all religious matters. But he regards it as the bounden duty of all persons to connect themselves with some church, since the churches occupy such a vital place in the moral and religious life of the people. Since 1875 Mr. Dill has taken an active interest in agricultural matters, and upon the organization of the Muskoka District Agricultural Society, he was appointed its treasurer. This position he still holds, and during 1881 he was chairman of the Muskoka Fire Relief Committee, in which he took a deep interest, owing to the sufferings of the inhabitants from bush fires being very great. Mr. Dill married in the fall of 1868, Mary Annie, eldest daughter of the late James Wright, of Penetanguishene, one of the oldest residents of that district, and has by this lady nine of a family. Mr. Dill is much devoted to manly games and pastimes, such as canoeing, shooting, fishing, cricket, and all the other healthful exercises. His energy of character is very marked, and he is admitted to be a capable and well informed member of the legislature.

Hudson, William Parker, Roslin, Ontario, M.P.P. for East Hastings, was born in the township of Thurlow, Hastings, on the 13th February, 1841. His father was Charles Hudson, and his mother Margaret, daughter of the late Rev. Thomas Armstrong, a Church of England minister. Charles Hudson was born in England, and came to this country with his parents about the year 1820, settling in Montreal. His father, Samuel T. Hudson, was a machinist, and erected the first steam engine in the City of Montreal. He removed to Prince Edward county and built large mills by the lake on the mountain; and died in the County of Haldimand in 1877. Charles Hudson, his son, learned the blacksmithing trade, and continued at the same for a time, then retiring to his farm where he still resides. He has six of a family, the subject of this sketch being the eldest son. William P. Hudson received a common school education, and at the age of fourteen entered his father's shop as apprentice to the blacksmithing trade. He remained so employed until his twenty-fourth year, when his father retired and assigned the shop to him. That the enterprise and business abilities of Mr. Hudson may be seen, we may state that in two years from the time of his taking the premises, he had worked up a business of from $2,000 to $12,000 per annum. continued in this business until 1885, when he retired from active life. In 1874 he was elected deputy-reeve of the township of Thurlow, Hastings county, and remained in office for three years, each year being elected by acclamation. In 1882 he entered the municipal council as deputy-reeve, and in 1883 contested the east riding of the County of Hastings against N. S. Appleby, the Reform candidate, defeating him by a majority of seventy-seven votes. Mr. Hudson is treasurer of the East Riding of Hastings. Agricultural Association; is a Conservative, and president of the Conservative Association of his own riding. He is a Presbyterian, and an elder of his church in the village of Roslin. Mr. Hudson married on the 9th of January, 1866, Jane, daughter of James Fargay, a retired farmer of the township of Thurlow, and has by this lady three children. Mr. Hudson is not often heard upon the floor of the legislature, and it would be well if the same could be said of many of the members of the House. But he carefully watches and weighs questions, and is ready at the right moment with a well fortified opinion upon a given dispute. This quality, allied to his ceaseless industry, has begotten much respect for his judgment.

orl pth other characters was

m

tio (D 18' No Co Als

De

me

Mo

of

Wa

Kin

of J

eng

Val

187

Lumsden, Hugh David, Montreal, Dominion Land Surveyor, and Provincial Land Surveyor for the Province of Ontario, and member of the Institute of Civil Engineers, England, was born at Belhelvie Lodge, Aberdeenshire, Scotland, on the 7th of September, 1844. He is the youngest son of the late Colonel Thomas Lumsden, C.B., of Belhelvie Lodge, Aberdeenshire, and Hay Burnett, his wife, second daughter of John Burnett, his wife, second daughter of John Burnett, nett, of Elrich, Aberdeenshire. The other members of the family were five sons and five daughters, viz.:—General Sir Harry Burnett Lumsden, now of Belhelvie Lodge; John McVeigh Lumsden, now of Galt, Canada; Thomas Lumsden, late of St. Françoise Xavier, Manitoba (who was killed in Sept., 1885, by being gored by a bull belonging to himself); General Sir Peter Stark Lumsden, lately commissioner for the settlement of the Afghan boundary; William Henry Lumsden, who was killed in action near Delhi, on the 25th August, 1857, a lieutenant in the 68th, Native infantry, and second in command of the 1st Punjaub infantry. Of the five daughters, the eldest married the Rev. James Johnstone, of Potterton, Aberdeenshire; the second married the late Colonel John Patton, of Grandholme, Aberdeenshire; the third married Captain George Cleghorn (now Tancred), an officer of the Scots Greys, now of Weens, Roxboroughshire; the fourth is unmarried, and the fifth married the late Captain Frank Sherlock, of Brighton, England. H. D. Lumsden was educated at Belleview Academy, Aberdeen, and at Wimbledon School, Surrey, England. He joined the 34th battalion as lieutenant of No. 7 company, in the spring of 1867; received a second class M. S. certificate in July of same year, and continued in that position until promoted to the captaincy of the same company about the year 1876, when owing to constant absence, he was allowed to resign, retaining rank. He was reeve of the township of Eldon, in the County of Victoria, during the year 1870, and president of the Eldon Branch Agricultural Association for that year. He was engineer-incharge of the location party on the northern portion of the Toronto and Nipissing Railway, in the County of Victoria, under Edmund Wragge, from October, 1870, to April, 1871; engineer in charge of location of a portion of the Toronto, Grey and Bruce Railway (Dundalk to Berkeley), from May to August, 1871: engineer in charge of survey for the Northern Railway from Penetanguishene to Coldwater, from August to November, 1871. Also from December of the same year to December of 1872, he was in the employment of the Northern Railway, under Mr. Moberly, making surveys and the location of the portion of the Meaford branch, Washago to Gravenhurst and Bracebridge, King to Angus, etc. From the beginning of January, 1873 to December, 1874, he was engineer in charge of surveys on the Credit Valley and Victoria railways. From May, 1875, to June, 1876, he was in charge of a

ince

the

the

rles

ing

me,

re-

iect

am

du-

red

ck-

ved her

Иr.

in

the

of

He

en

725 of

in

ed

n-83

of

e-ri-

is gs asurvey party for the contractors of the G. B. branch of the C.P.R., between the mouth of French river and Lake Amabel du Fond, Mr. Murdoch, C.E., being chief engineer. From August, 1876 to July, 1879, he was in charge of the Georgian Bay branch surveys location and construction for the Dominion government. From May, 1880, to to March, 1881, he was in charge of a party on the survey in the North-West territories for the Canadian Pacific Railway from Bird Tail Creek, north-westward; and from March, 1881, to November, 1884, was chief engineer of the Ontario and Quebec Railway. He has been, from the latter date to the present, engineer on the Canadian Pacific Railway. Mr. Lumsden served his time, and subsequently practised as a P. L. S. in Woodville, in the County of Victoria, until 1881, when he removed to Toronto, where he remained until November, 1881, when he moved to Montreal, where he at present resides. He is a member of the St. Andrew's Society, of Toronto, and was elected a member of the Institute of Civil Engineers, England, in March, 1885. He was baptised in and still is a member of the Church of England. He married, in Toronto, on the 29th October, 1885, Mary Frederica, only daughter of J. W. G. Whitney of that city.

Maclennan, Donald Ban, Q.C., Barrister-at-Law, Cornwall, was born on the 17th October, 1836, in the County of Glengarry, Ontario. He is a son of Farquhar Ban Maclennan, and Catherine Fraser, his wife. The latter died in 1841, and the former in 1868. D. B. Maclennan was educated at Queen's College, Kingston, Ontario, graduating as B.A. in 1857, and taking the degree of M.A. in course in 1861. After graduating, Mr. Maclennan became headmaster of the Watertown and Port Dover Grammar schools, until May, 1861, when he commenced the study of law in the office of the late Honourable John Sandfield Macdonald, the senior member of the law firm of Macdonald & Maclennan, in which his late brother, John B. Maclennan, was the junior member. In 1864, he continued his legal studies in the law office of Mowat & Maclennan, at Toronto, until August, 1865, when he was called to the bar. He immediately commenced the practice of his profession at Cornwall, as the third member of the firm of Macdonald & Maclennan. The changes occasioned by the death of the late Mr. Macdonald, in 1872, and of the late John B. Maclennan, in 1873, resulted in the formation of the new firm of Maclennan & Macdonald, which continued the old business, and in which our subject was the senior member until 1883. The name and composition of the firm was then again changed, and the business has since the latter date been carried on by the firm of Maclennan & Liddell, of which Mr. Maclennan is the senior member. He joined in the volunteer movement arising out of the Trent affair, and held a commission in the volunteer force at Cornwall from 1862 to 1864, when he removed, temporarily, to Toronto. Mr. Maclennan has been a member of the Temporalities Board of the Presbyterian Church for the last three years, and a member of the Board of Trustees of Queen's University, of Kingston, since 1879. He was a candidate at the general election for the Dominion in 1878, in the Reform interest, for Cornwall, but was defeated by a majority of 38 votes. He is a member and elder in the Presbyterian Church, and married on the 12th July, 1871, Elizabeth Margaret, daughter of Samuel Cline, of Corn-wall, merchant. There have been eight children, two of whom are dead. Mr. Maclennan was appointed a Q.C. in 1876.

Morgan, William, Walsingham Centre, Ontario, M.P.P. for South Norfolk, was born in the village of Stirling, Hastings county, on the 8th December, 1848. He is a son of the late John Dwyer Morgan, by his wife, Jane, daughter of the late William Kingston, a prominent farmer in the County of Hastings. John Dwyer was born in Glamorganshire, Wales, and came early in life to Canada with his parents, who settled in the County of Hastings, and engaged in farming and lumbering. Mr. Morgan, the father of the subject of this sketch, at about the age of thirty, began for himself in the lumber trade, at which he continued, in Norfolk, until his death, in 1871. He was reeve of the township of Walsingham for some years, and took a conspicuous interest in militia matters, being captain of No. 4 company, 39th battalion, and organized a company at the time of the Trent emeute. He afterwards went to the front, being stationed at Paris at the time of the Fenian raid. He took an active interest in agricultural matters, being for a time treasurer of the South Norfolk Agricultural Society. He had a family of three, the subject of this sketch being the eldest. William Morgan received a common school education, and at the age of eighteen commenced business for himself as a merchant, in the village of Walsingham Centre, continuing at the same for five years, when he removed to the village of Port Rowan, where he resolved to try his fortune. Three years later he again sold out, and returned to Walsingham, re-engaging in his old business, in which he has continued up to the present time. In 1882, Mr. Morgan commenced the manufacture of paints and colours, engaging a number of artizans. He was elected reeve of the township of Walsingham, and remained in the council for four years, giving marked satisfaction. In 1879, he was elected to the Legislative Assembly of Ontario, in the Conservative interest, for the South Riding of Norfolk, defeating Oliver Austin, the Reformer, by a majority of 20 votes. He was elected again in 1883, defeating James McBurney, of Simcoe, by 29 votes, after an exciting contest. He was the youngest member of the Ontario legislature at the time of his elec-Mr. Morgan is a member of the Freemason lodge, No. 174, Walsingham Centre, and Simcoe Ezra chapter, No. 23. In politics he is a Liberal-Conservative, and in religion is a Methodist, but is not narrow, according the right of conscientious choice of faith to every man and woman. Mr. Morgan is much devoted to out-door sports, but does not allow them to interfere with his business or with duty. He is a member of the old Walsingham volunteer company, and was stationed at Paris during the Fenian raid as a private, but he was promoted to the rank of corporal before his return home. At an early age he took a course at Kingston Military school, and received a second class certificate; and when the independent companies were organized into a battalion, he was promoted captain of No. 4 company, 39th battalion, which position he held until 1885, when he was appointed paymaster of the battalion, holding that rank now. In 1871, he was appointed treasurer of the township of Walsingham, but declined the position. He is also postmaster and agent of the G.N.W. Telegraph Company, and treasurer of the Walsingham Agricultural Society. He has always been a staunch advocate of manhood suffrage, and although young-looking in appearance, is yet old in public life.

O'Reilley Miles, Q.C., Hamilton, Ontario, was born near Niagara Falls, on the 18th May, 1806. Both his grandfathers were U.E. loyalists, who fled from the United States at the close of the American revolution. He received the greater portion of his education at the Niagara Grammar school, and afterwards entered upon a study of law in the office of the late John Breakenbridge, in the old town of Niagara; but

ahic si hih H coth

po Cl

ni

pr pr upon the death of Mr. Breakenbridge, in 1828, Mr. O'Reilley went to Toronto, where he completed his studies in the office of the late Messrs. Baldwin & Son. He was called to the bar in 1830, whence it will be seen that he is now the oldest practising barrister in Ontario. Through his wide and sound knowledge of the law and his natural brilliancy, he soon secured an extensive practice. He was one of Sir Allan MacNab's "Men of Gore," who quenched the insurrectionary flame at Montgomery's tavern, near Toronto; and at the trial, in the following spring, of the 106 prisoners confined in the Hamilton jail, charged with high treason, Mr. O'Reilley, unaided and alone, defended the whole of them. The late Chief-Justice Draper, and Mr. (afterwards Sir) Allan MacNab prosecuted for the Crown, Chief-Justice Macaulay hearing the case. Though public feeling was highly strained at the time, and though the prosecution was conducted with marked ability, the remarkable fact remains that not one of the whole number was convicted of the higher offence. The learned judge, at the close, paid Mr. O'Reilley an elaborate compliment on the ability and zeal with which he had conducted his case. On the 7th of February Mr. O'Reilley was appointed judge of the district court of the district of Gore, then embracing Wentworth, Halton, and Brant, and portions of Waterloo, Wellington, and Haldimand. In 1853, he resigned this office, and returned to practice in the courts, taking charge for a short period of the legal department of the Great Western Railway Company, whose affairs were then considerably embarrassed. Mr. O'Reilley was largely instrumental in bringing the affairs of the company back to a prosperous and satisfactory condition. Naturally, from what is known of Mr. O'Reilley personally and as a practitioner, we might expect to hear that he was, while upon the bench, an ideal judge. His quick and accurate insight, his command of legal principles, and his wide information, endowed him with the highest capacity for judicial administration. He was at the same time dignified and courteous, and a Brutus in his adherence to the line of justice. In 1856 he was appointed Q.C., and in 1871 a master in Chancery. In 1880, being the fiftieth anniversary of his call to the bar, the legal profession of the County of Wentworth presented him with a handsome service of plate, and an address signed by the members of the bar in the county. The presentation was made in the new court house, 18i-

the

m-

nd

na.

of

cil

bn.

ve

in-

le-

of

n-

 \mathbf{he}

ec-

he

 $\mathbf{n}\mathbf{d}$

ekdd:d

in the City of Hamilton, in presence of a very large assemblage of ladies and gentlemen, the law students presenting him, on the same occasion, with a fine pipe of mammoth size, and a piece of tobacco of corresponding dimensions. At this date (1886) Mr. and Mrs. O'Reilley, although well advanced in years, still enjoy good health, and are probably the oldest surviving inhabitants of the City of Hamilton, where they have resided since 1831, and celebrated their golden wedding in 1883, at their house (The Willows), where they have lived for over fifty years. Mrs. O'Reilley is the second daughter of the late James Rany, late of Mount Pleasant, County of Brant, formerly of the City of Bath, England.

Bellemare, Raphael, Inspector of Inland Revenue, District of Montreal, is descended from an old and honourable French family, which came from France to Canada about 1650, his father being Paul Bellemare, of Yamachiche, where Raphael was born on the 22nd February, 1821. His mother, Marguirite Gelenas, was sprung from the same old stock. Raphael Bellemare received his primary education at his parent's home, and was sent to the College of Nicolet, to follow a course of classical studies. He was afterwards, from 1845 to 1847, professor of Belles Lettres in that illustrious institution. Leaving college, he began the study of law, repairing for that purpose to Montreal, and entered the office of the late P. R. Lafrenaye, A.C. He was subsequently transferred to the office of Judge Coursol, where he concluded his course of study. During the same time he, from 1847 to 1855, succeeded to the editorship of La Minerve, then the principal organ of the Lafontaine-Morin, or Reform party. As a writer he displayed great gifts, and there were always present in his contributions force and brilliancy, and a powerful logic. Through all the great questions that were discussed with such stormy temper, such as public schools, the secularization of the clergy reserves, and the representation by population, La Minerve was to the fore front, and the able pen of Mr. Bellemare conspicuously active. Abuse was burled at him by L'Avenir, by Le Moniteur and by Le Pays, but he kept his temper, held his ground, and with dignity and ability fought his battle, winning the admiration and the gratitude of his friends. Mr. Bellemare being a devoted son of his church, therefore, favoured the continuance of religious instruction in schools, contending that without such instruction the nation must eventually grow into infidelity. And very probably Mr. Bellemare was right. Mr. Bellemare was admitted to the bar, but never practised there, he having been won away to the journalistic field where he accomplished such doughty and brilliant work. At the confederation of the provinces he was appointed to the office which he fills at the present time; and during his many years of official life no complaint has been uttered against him, he being a most zealous and capable officer. He received a diploma as corresponding member of La Societé des Antiquaires de Normandie ; held the office of alderman of St. Lewis ward, Montreal, for six years, showing great ability in this field, and receiving the hearty recognition of his fellow citizens. He was one of the originators, and the secretary, of the graduates of Nicolet College, which was held in 1866; was connected with the organization of the Canadian Zouaves; and was for many years secretary of the St. Jean Baptiste Society. He has been one of the board of the Fabrique of Notre Dame; and is one of the directors of the Montreal City and District Savings bank. He has been for over twenty years president of the St. Vincent de Paul Society, and has been a prominent and active member in that body. He has kept up his literary connections, and his contributions could always be known by their strong flavour of the writer's individuality. He is one of the founders of the Societe Historique de Montreal, and is known for his taste for historical researches and his most valuable and rare collection of books. In 1849 he married Anastasie Geoffrion, daughter of Romain Geoffrion dit St. Jean, of Boucherville. She died in 1882, having had five children, three sons and two daughters. The two daughters only are now living, Mathilde, the elder, is the wife of D. L. Desaulniers, advocate, now in the parliamentary service at Ottawa, as French translator. Josephine is the wife of P. A. Jodoin, commercial and manufacturers' agent, residing at Belceil. In May, 1885, Mr. Bellemare was a second time united in marriage, his present wife being Mde. M. L. Euchariste Normandin, who was the widow of the late Alfred Normandin, merchant, of Montreal.

Conmee, James, Port Arthur, M.P.P. for West Algoma, was born in the township of Sydenham, County of Grey, on the 13th October, 1849. He is a son of Matthew and Rosanna (Shaughnessy), his mother being a native of the County of Leitrim, Ireland. Matthew Conmee came to Canada from the County of Sligo, Ireland, when very young, with his father, who settled near the present town of Belleville, where he engaged in the lumber trade. After remaining here some time, he (the grandfather) removed to the township of Sydenham, where he engaged in farming. He died in 1850. One of his sons was Matthew, the father of the subject of this sketch, who also engaged in farming in the township of Sydenham, leaving at his death in 1876, three of a family, the subject of this sketch being the youngest. James Conmee received a common school education, terminating his studies at the Owen Sound Grammar school, and left school about the age of fifteen. Thereafter he engaged at various occupations for a short time. During the American war he enlisted in the Northern army in the 8th New York Cavalry, under the command of General Custer. He was sent to the front; and was engaged in a battle shortly before the surrender of Lee. After the war was ended, he returned to Canada, and engaged in railway construction both in Canada and the United States, until 1871, when he removed to Port Arthur, Algoma District, where he has been engaged in contracting and railroad building since. He tendered for Section A of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and upon his tender the work was let, a company being formed for the carrying out of the contract. Mr. Conmee sold out to the company, taking a subcontract from them for a portion of the same line. In 1877 he was elected to the town council of Port Arthur, and remained in that body for several years. In 1881, Mr. Conmee was appointed a justice of the peace. In 1882, Mr. Conmee became actively engaged in the construction of the Canada Pacific Railway, east of Port Arthur, as the head of the firm of Conmee & McFennan, handling about sixty-four miles of the Lake Superior section. In 1884 the C. P. R. Co. commenced falling behind in payments, and Mr. Connee's firm completed their contracts upon their own resources; but owing to no settlement having been arrived at between Mr. Conmee and his firm with the C. P. R., he instituted a suit against the company for $300,000, the action being now in legal progress. He was elected mayor in 1885, and in the same year was elected to the Ontario legislature, defeating I. C. Gough, the Conservative candidate, by a majority of eighty-three votes. He is a member of the Masonic craft, lodge No. 287, Port Arthur. In politics, he is a Reformer. Mr. Conmee is a Roman catholic; and he married, in 1875, Emily F., daughter of Joseph Cox, of the township of St. Vincent, County of Grey, and has by this lady a family of three children. In 1885, Mr. Conmee purchased the large saw and planing mills from Thomas Mark, of Port Arthur, and is engaged extensively in the lumber trade. Mr. Conmee is a man of very great energy and enterprise, and he gives promise of having a very useful legislative career before him.

lled

ere

re-

ner)

am.

the

llso

yd-

ree

ing

la,

his

οl,

en.

pa-

an

the

m-

to

tle

ter

ın-

til

or

b-

o. id

Todd, Alpheus, LL.D., C.B., déceased, was born in England, in 1821, and came to Canada in 1833. Prior to the union of the provinces, he was assistant librarian to the Legislative Assembly of Upper Canada, and was continued in the same office by the Legislative Assembly of United Canada, until 1856, when he was appointed chief librarian of the provinces. The library, when he first became connected with it, consisted of less than 1,000 volumes. Large and valuable portions of subsequent additions were destroyed by fire in Montreal in 1851, and in Quebec in 1854. In the session of 1856 a library grant of £10 000 was made, and Mr. Todd was sent to Europe to expend it. He executed his important commission with the greatest skill and judgment, and thereby, it may be justly said, laid the main foundation of the present magnificent collection of upwards of 108,000 volumes. It has been made under his care and supervision, and presents a catalogue which is the best monument of his indefatigable and most valuable labours in that direction. Having, as it were, grown up with his books, Mr. Todd had become an essential part of the library. A mind of universal literary receptivity, had enabled him largely to absorb and assimilate the vast stores upon its shelves. The numerous ponderous folios containing the classified indexes are largely in his own clear and beautiful hand writing, and as an instant and exhaustive reference for authority or information in any volume which they contain, the amiable librarian was never at fault. By ministers, public officers, the judiciary members of both houses and by authors, his services were in constant requisition, and no one left him without being strongly impressed with the clearness of his statements, the readiness of his richly stored memory, and the gentle courtesy with which he imparted its treasures, and to this may be added a never-failing promptness in conducting the large correspondence which his duties involved. Amid the absorbing duties of his office, however, and notwithstanding their exhaustive nature, he found time to supply valuable contributions to the history of constitutional and parliamentary government, and his works upon these subjects are authorities in England as well as in Canada. His principal works are entitled: (1). "The Practice and Privileges of Parliament"; (2). "Brief Suggestions in regard to the Formations of Local Governments"; (3). "On the Position of a Constitutional Governor under Responsible Government"; (4). "Parliamentary Government in England"; and (5). "Parliamentary Government in the British Colonies." Dr. Todd's work was remarkable for its wide range of thought, and for the clearness and accuracy of its He was a man who seemed observation. to have made a note of everything that passed, either actually or before his mind, that could be brought to bear upon the great subject to which he had consecrated his life. Into constitutional questions he seemed to have an intuitive insight, and his declarations upon the same are made in a simple, graceful and direct style that is as clear as running water. And the work will remain, and its opinions will be quoted as long as there exist parliaments based upon the spirit of the British constitution. Edinburgh Review said :- "It is a remarkable circumstance that we should be indebted to a resident in a distant colony, the librarian of the Canadian House of Parliament, for one of the most aseful and complete books which has ever appeared on the practical operation of the British constitution." The Saturday Review said :- "At the first sight there seems a certain boldness in the notion of one whose experience is exclusively colonial, venturing to instruct people at home in the nature and scope of the system by which they are governed. But Mr. Todd has kept himself so accurately informed upon all that has been said and done in the mother country, and he has so diligently read everything that has been written here at all likely to throw light upon the subject, that nobody will detect the least colonial or provincial flavour in his book.

Buell, Jacob Dockstader, Lieut. Colonel, Brockville, Ontario, was born at the place of his present abode; on the 4th October, 1827. He is a son of the late William Buell, of the 7th Leeds militia, who held the medal with clasps for the battle of Chrysler's Farm, 1813, and who was one of the representatives for the County of Leeds, in the Upper Canada Assembly, from 1828 to 1836; and he is a grandson of the late William Buell, a United Empire loyalist, and an officer of the King's rangers, who represented the County of Leeds in the Upper Canada Assembly, from 1801 to 1804.

J. D. Buell received a careful educational training, attending the minor and Grammar schools of his native place; and upon completing his course, entered upon the study of law, being called to the bar of Upper Canada at Michaelmas term, 1854. He first married Susan Chaffey, of Pittsburg, U.S., who died in December, 1857. He next married (1861) Margaret Sophia, fourth daughter of the late Rev. Edmund J. Senkler, M.A., formerly of Docking, Norfolk, England. Colonel Buell has always taken a deep interest in militia matters; has held a seat in the Dominion Rifle Association, and is lieutenant-colonel in the 42nd battalion, Brockville. In the municipal affairs of Brockville, he has been a foremost figure. and served as mayor of the town for many years; and he is a master in Chancery. In 1871 he contested Brockville riding for a seat in the Legislative Assembly of Ontario, but was defeated; but the following year he was elected to the House of Commons for the same constituency, being re-elected in 1874. In 1878 he was again in the field, but was defeated by Mr. Fitzsimmons. In politics Colonel Buell has always been a Liberal.

Massey, Hart Almerni, President of the Massey Manufacturing Company, Toronto, was born in the township of Haldimand, Northumberland county, Ontario, on the 29th of April, 1823. His grandfather settled in Canada in 1807, and served in the war of 1812, teaming for the troops from Kingston to Toronto, leaving his son, Daniel, a boy of only twelve years old, the entire charge and management of the homestead. He had to attend the market with grain, settle up accounts, and pay the men. Few boys at his age would have been able to do this. The grandfather was born in Vermont, and in 1803 removed with his family to Jefferson county, and in 1807 the family, as we have seen, crossed the border, having heard of the greater facilities for farming in Canada, and settled in the township of Haldimand. Daniel Massey imported one of the first thrashing machines brought into Canada in the year 1830, and afterwards imported others for use on his own land and for sending them out to thresh on neighbouring farms. Prior to the introduction of these machines, the grain had to be harvested by sickle and cradle and threshed in the barn by cattle being driven over the grain in the most primitive manner. Mr. Massey gave great attention to the clearing of wild lands, and under his personal supervision, as many as 1,200 acres were chopped and cleared, frequently employing 100 hands at the work. H. A. Massey received his early education in Jefferson county, New York state, where he had been sent to stay with his father's relations. On his return home he entered Victoria College, Cobourg, and remained there during the years 1842-44. While a boy he took great interest in machinery of all kinds, and delighted in devising improvements in farming implements. At school and at college, he not unnaturally exhibited the commanding intellectual parts which have distinguished him during his business career. Upon leaving college he became much interested in the management of his father's farms, and the desire for improved implements took such possession of his mind, that in the year 1847, he induced his father to establish a foundry and machine shop, for the manufacture of farming implements at Newcastle, Ontario. In the same year he married Eliza Ann Phelps, of Johnstown, New York, and soon afterwards took entire charge of his father's farms. In 1850, he was appointed justice of the peace for the Counties of Northumberland and Durham, and continued to act in that capacity for twenty years. In 1851, he removed to Newcastle, and began to devote his attention practically to the subject with which he used to amuse his leisure hours when a boy. What he achieved it is hardly necessary to say, as every one has heard of the fame of the firm of which Mr. Massey is the head. In 1852, he was taken in as partner and business manager, and this year they commenced the manufacture of the "Ketchum Mower" and the "Burrell Reaper," the first reapers and mowers ever manufactured in Canada. In 1855, H. A. Massey became sole proprietor, his father (the founder of the business) retiring. On the 15th of November, of the following year he died, at the age of fifty-nine. The same year the "Manny Combined Reaper and Mower" was commenced; and the Hon. William McDougall, then editor of the Canadian Farmer, purchased one of these machines, a short time after. Six years later, the Wood's Mower appeared; and in 1863, the justly celebrated Wood's Self-rake Reaper was first made in Canada. For several years Mr. Massey worked side by side with the men employed in the factory, and was literally one of them; his motto was then and is to-day, " never to ask a man to do anything he would not do himself." In 1863, he became a Freemason, and is now a master mason of Durham lodge. In 1864, a fire occurred which destroyed the entire property, foundry and machine shops, some ten or twelve buildings, including the stove and tinware business, which was also carried on by him, the total loss being estimated at $30,000 -but with characteristic energy they were soon rebuilt, and on a much more extensive scale than before. In 1867 he made a tour through the United States, visiting the chief places of historic interest and the great manufacturing centres, making notes of everything that struck him, as likely to aid in the development of his business on his return. During his absence, the management of the new extensive establishment, devolved temporarily upon the shoulders of his eldest son, Charles Albert. [See sketch elsewhere.] In the same year he went to Paris, France, with a number of machines which the government had purchased from him. The object of the purchase was to show the excellence of Canadian skill in the manufacture of farming implements, and for these he received several prizes. In 1870, his health began to fail, and his physicians ordered a temporary absence from business, and at their advice, the following year, he took up his residence in Cleveland, Ohio. On the 27th of September of that year, the business was incorporated, with a stock capital of $100,000, of which $63,000 was under the control of Mr. Massey, himself being appointed president, and his eldest son, C. A. Massey, vice-president and manager. Under the new management the business rapidly increased. In 1874, one of most successful implements, "Sharp's Horse Rake" was the first manufactured. It received the highest honours at the Centennial Exhibition, Philadelphia, 1876. The "Massey Harvester" was the next venture, which was commenced in 1878; the "Massey Mower" followed in 1879. The business had now assumed such vast proportions that greater facilities for shipment, and a better labour market were found indispensable. The company resolved then to remove to Toronto, which they did in the fall of that year. The amount of business done this year was $100,000. One important rival—The Toronto Reaper and Mower Company—began to grow almost within hearing of the rumbling of the wheels of their own factory, but in 1881, this was absorbed into the Massey Manufacturing Company, necessitating an increase in the number of workmen, and with the result of doubling the business for the following year. In 1883, the total amount of business done was a million of dollars, an increase of over ten-fold that in 1871, when the company was was first incorporated. From the date of their establishment at Toronto, up to the

ag.

son

ban

пO

ge, the

eat

de-

ing

l he

ing

ıed

₽v-

the

ch

17,

io.

nn

on

of

te

present time, the business has never ceased to expand, and there are now employed throughout their splendid building, no fewer than from 400 to 500 men. Mr. Massey frequently visited Canada during his residence in Cleveland, and personally supervised the building of the works now located in Toronto. In 1882, the business had grown to such an extent that the younger members of the family were required to assist, and were made directors. At this time his health had been so far restored, that he was able to return to reside in Canada, and devote his whole attention to the business. Though now sixty-three years of age, he is still hale and active with the old energy and insight as pronounced as ever. His beard and hair are sprinkled with grey, but his movements reveal his force of character. In his business relations, Mr. Massey is a great favourite, and in private and social life he has many warm friends. He is genial, affable and kindly, and it would be impossible to come in contact with him for any length of time, and not see those qualities through which rightly exercised their possessor has become one of the most prominent manufacturers in the Dominion of Canada. In religion, he belongs to the Methodist church, and is recognized as one of its most worthy members. In politics he is a sound Liberal, believing that the principles held by that party are, and will eventually prove best for the country's general welfare. He has always taken great interest in public questions, municipal and general, and was for some time councillor for the village of Newcastle, and president of the Woollen Company in that place, and while residing in Cleveland, was president of the Street Railway Company, also of a prominent coal company in the United States, and in which he is still largely interested. He has had five children, four of whom are sons. The eldest, Charles Albert, was for thirteen years vice-president of the company; the second is Chester Daniel; the third Walter Edward Hartthese two being directors of the company. The youngest son Frederick Victor, is now attending Toronto University. Some idea of the magnitude of their business, may be obtained from the following number of machines sold: — 30,000 "Sharp's Horse Rake;" 12,000 "Massey Harvester;" 6,000 "Massey Mower;" 20,000 "Toronto Mower;" about 5,000 "Binders." To this might be added as many more, which we have no space to mention of other machines. From one end of Canada to the other, as well as to numerous foreign markets, the firm ships its goods. Year after year the increasing business has necessitated large additions to the works, and the expenditure of enormous sums of money for tools and machinery. In 1884, a large four story addition and elaborate offices, library and reading room, lecture room, dining and concert hall for the use of the employees was completed-making one of the handsomest and most extensive manufacturing establishments on the continent. In 1885, the demand for their machines in the North-West, had grown to such an extent, that a handsome new office building and store house were erected in Winnipeg. At the great International Exhibition held at Antwerp, Belgium, 1885, they were awarded the gold medal of the highest class for their exhibit, one of each of their machines having been selected by a committee appointed by the Canadian government, to represent Canadian harvesting machinery. The men who have assisted the farmer to produce so much more, and with far less labour, should surely be esteemed public benefactors, and it is honour to the country that we have such "Representative Canadians.

Massey, Charles Albert, deceased, the eldest son of H. A. Massey, President of the Massey Manufacturing Co., Toronto, was born at the old homestead in the township of Haldimand, Northumberland county, on the 20th September, 1848. From his earliest years he was of a thoughtful turn of mind, and when other boys of his own age were seeking pleasure in out-door sports, he was frequently found busy at study. He matured early, and preferred the society of those older than himself. At the age of thirteen, he had attained such proficiency on the organ, that he commenced to undertake the duties of organist in the Methodist church, at Newcastle, and continued to do so for three years. His early education was received, first under the care of a governess at the home of his grandfather, afterwards attending the academy at Newcastle, and for a short time, the common school, and later, the Grammar school, which was instituted about this time. At sixteen, he entered Victoria College, Cobourg, where he remained two years. While at school and college he gave unmistakable evidence of ability, and the integrity which characterised his subsequent connection with his father's business. In 1866, at the age of eighteen, now possessed of a sound education, he longed to enter the practical business of life, and leaving college at once entered his father's factory, and exchanged the student's gown for the smock and overalls, and commenced in the iron foundry department. He was brought into close contact with the workmen and machinery, and made familiar with the business to which he devoted his life. In the fall of this year he made a tour of the Western States, with his younger brother and sister. and two aunts, visiting Kalamazoo, Chicago, Dubuque, and Cleveland. At the place first named, he met, for the first time, the young lady who afterwards became his wife. Returning home after a few weeks he took a course at the British American Commercial College, Toronto, and afterwards a course at the Military school for about two months. This concluded the student life, and a few months after his return home, the responsibility of the management of his father's business devolved upon him, owing to his father's trip to the Paris Exposition in the summer of 1867. To this task he proved himself equal, and there were no disasters to be accounted for to his father on his re-This responsibility and experience was of great value to him. He was at this time not nineteen years of age. In 1870, the business was incorporated under the name of the Massey Manufacturing Co. His father, H. A. Massey, was appointed president, and Charles Albert, vice-president and manager. On the 12th October, he married Jesse Fremont, third daughter of Hiram Arnold, of Kalamazoo, Michigan, and after a brief wedding tour to Detroit and Cleveland, they took up their resi-dence in the old homestead, with its extensive verandah and spacious grounds, which they occupied for nine years. The year following his marriage (1871) his father's health necessitated his absence from the cares of business, and removal of himself and family to Cleveland, Ohio, leaving Charles sole representative of the family at Newcastle. At the end of five years the business had increased fifty per cent. Every appliance, extension, or help were seized upon by the young manager, and his unbounded hopes were never blighted. In 1877 he was appointed one of the village council, and was perhaps the youngest candidate ever elected to that office. In addition to this he was for some time one of the directors of the Ontario Bank, and was sought after to stand for political honours, but declined, he having his time fully occupied in the management of the business, one of his principles being that whatever he undertook to do, to do it with all his might. His father, during this time, made him oco ii d & taE y bill the

casional visits, but had little or nothing to do with the management of the business. more than to give advice. In 1879 the business was double that of 1870, and the removal of the works to a more convenient location became necessary. Consequently arrangements were made and new premises erected in Toronto, under the personal supervision of H. A. Massey. The management of such a concern as nowerested upon his. shoulders was too great a strain upon his constitution. Up to this time, in addition to the general duties of manager, he had attached to all the advertising, the engaging. the men, adjusting the wages, puchasing the stock, superintending the agencies and sales, and attending to the correspondence and banking. Sometimes in connection with his other duties, he would write as many as 100 or 150 letters in a day. This continual anxiety and responsibility seriously affected his health, and necessitated a rest and change of scene. In September, 1883, he made a trip to Manitoba, accompanied by his wife. While it was mainly for change and rest, it was partly on business that the tour was made. On the return journey from Brandon to Winnipeg he was taken seriously ill, but in about three days was able to resume his journey homeward. Toward the end of January, 1884, he was again attacked, and confined to his room. which he never left. He died on the 12th February, 1884, aged thirty-five, of typhoid fever, beloved by hosts of friends and his many relations, leaving a widow and five children. His chief characteristics were a wonderful aptitude for managing men, comprehensiveness and originality of mind, and a clear perception and unerring judg-He had a complete control over his temper under the most trying circumstances. A memorial stained glass window has been placed in the office of the works.

of

rn

ce

Van Straubenzie, Bowen, Lieut.-Colonel, Montreal, Deputy Adjutant General, of the Canadian Militia, was born at Spenithorne, County of York, on the 12th of April, 1829. He is the third surviving son of the late Thomas Van Straubenzie, major in the Royal artillery, and Maria, youngest daughter of the late Major Bowen. His ancestor, Philip William Casimir, was a cap-tain in the Dutch guards, and came to England from the Netherlands; and his younger brother, General A. Van Straubenzie, was governor of Lutphen. The family held high rank in the Netherlands, as the prefix "Van" indicates noble descent.

Philip William Casimir was naturalized by act of parliament, and married Jane, only daughter of Cholmeley Turner, of Kirk-leatham, County York, by Jane, grand-daughter and sole heiress of Sir Henry Marwood, baronet, of Busby Hall. County of York, and by her he had issue, Marwood Turner and Charles Spencer, the latter marrving Anne Theophila, daughter of the Rev. J. Davison, of Blakiston, County Durham, and grand daughter of Sir George Vane, of Raby, and had issue, with others, Thomas, Lieut -Col. Van Straubenzie is nineteenth in direct descent from King Edward III. (See Burke's Royal Families," and "Burke's Landed Gentry)." Lieut.-Colonel Van Straubenzie was educated at St. Peter's, York, the Grammar school, Richmond, County York, and at Woolwich. He entered the army in 1846, as ensign, in the 32nd Regt., and was present with his regiment at the first and second siege operations before Mooltan, including the action of Sorozkornd, and received a medal and clasp. He was very severely wounded on the 28th December, 1848, and his brave conduct was mentioned in the despatches. He also served with the 32nd on the frontier of India in 1851-2, under Sir Colin Campbell, and was present at the affairs of Nawardund, Prunghur, and Shaskoti, receiving a medal and clasp. He served in the Crimes from October, 1855, to May, 1856, on the staff of his brother, Sir Charles Van Straubenzie, who commanded the first brigade of the Light division. He served in China from 1858 to 1860, on the staff, as brigade major, and was present with the expeditionary force in every engagement from its landing at Pehtang to the occupation of Pekin, and received therefor the medals and clasps, and rank of major. His conduct was likewise mentioned in the despatches. He served on the staff in Mauritius, from 1862 to 1866; served with the N.W. field force, under the command of Sir F. Miduleton, against the rebels in 1885, and was in command of the Infantry Brigade at the battle of Batoche. For this he received a medal and clasp, and was mentioned in the despatches. He came with his regiment to Canada direct from the Crimea, and married on the 9th October, 1857, Annie Macaulay, second daughter of the late John S. Cartwright, M.P., for the counties of Lennox and Addington, and has issue, Arthur Hope, a lieutenant in the Royal engineers; Bowen William, a lieutenant in the 24th Regiment, or South Wales Borderers; Casimir Cartwright, Charles Turner, and three daughters. Lieutenant-Colonel Van Straubenzie retired from the army in 1868, purchasing a property near Kingston, Ontario, where his family at present reside. He was appointed to the command of the Third Military District in May, 1876, and transferred to the Fifth District. in 1881, which he at present commands. Lt.-Colonel Van Straubenzie had two uncles killed in the Peninsular war; one a captain in the 24th Regiment, at the siege of Cuidad Rodrigo, and the other as a lieutenant in the 40th Regiment, at the storming of Badajos. It may be added that the great uncle of our subject, Marwood Turner, lieutenant-colonel, commanding 52nd Regiment, served in India, and in the American He was a deputy-lieutenant for the North Riding of Yorkshire, and was subsequently appointed vice-lieutenant, in which capacity he acted for many years, during the absence of the lord lieutenant. He was colonel of the "Loyal Dabs," a corps 1540 strong, which he raised, and afterwards colonel of the North York Militia regiment. Lt.-Colonel Van Straubenzie's grand-father is at present the only member of the family who has not served the Crown in the army or navy. Since it came to England there are but few families that can show such a Workman, Thos. H., Montreal, Hardware Merchant and Banker, was born near Lisburn, County Antrim, Ireland, on the 17th June, 1813. He emigrated to Canada in May, 1827, in a sailing ship, which was dismasted at sea, and arrived at Quebec, after a passage of fifty-nine days. He is the seventh son of Joseph Workman, formerly of County Londonderry, Ireland, whose ancestors originally came from Oxfordshire, England, during the time of Cromwell. Mr. Workman received his primary education in Ireland, which was afterwards completed at the Union school, Montreal, where he received a thorough mercantile training, as well as a good knowledge of English grammar, classics, and mathematics. He was a volunteer during the Canadian rebellion in 1837 and 1838, and was present at the battle of St. Eustache, the march upon St. Benoit, and other minor operations, and did garrison duty in Montreal during both the above winters. He was promoted to the rank of first lieutenant in March, 1838, and as such was an officer in command of the Montreal gaol guard, where over five hundred political prisoners were confined. On one of these occasions he signed the receipt for the bodies of two important persons committed to gaol for treason. Both these gentlemen afterwards filled important positions in the governments of Canada. They died several years ago, much esteemed and regretted. Mr. Workman is a senior partner in the extensive and long-established firm of Frothingham & Workman, iron and hardware merchants, whose reputation and credit stand amongst the first in the Dominion. He entered the employ of that firm as office boy and junior clerk, fifty-two years ago, and has been connected with it ever since. In 1843, he became a partner, and soon assumed the chief management and control of that important establishment. He has been engaged on the same premises, in St. Paul street, for fifty-two years. During that time, however, they have been re-built and much enlarged. The firm has always been distinguished for honourable dealing and truthful statements, and has uniformly imported the highest quality of goods. Mr. Workman is president of Molsons Bank, and has been for twenty-nine years on the board of direction, the last seven of which he has been president. He is also president of the Sun Life Assurance Company, and has held that position since its establishment, thirteen years ago. He is a director in the City and District Savings Bank, an institution having over 33,500 depositors, and controlling a very large amount of cash. He is also a director in the Canada Shipping Company, and has been president, for two years, of the Irish Protestant Benevolent Society. He was unanimously elected to the House of Commons, at Ottawa, for Montreal Centre, immediately after confederation, in 1867. He sat till the close of that parliament, and declined renomination, although pressed to come forward again. He was, however, induced to offer himself, in 1875, for Montreal West, and was opposed by Thomas White, whom he defeated, after a very sharp and animated contest. He thus, on two occasions, represented in the Commons the two most important constituencies in the Dominion. He is a life governor of the Fraser Institute and Free Library, of Montreal, to the establishment of which he has liberally contributed. He has also contributed largely to the McGill University, and to the School of Medicine connected therewith, as well as to many other public insti-tutions in Montreal. He was a member of the old "Doric Club," founded in 1836, with the view of preserving the connection of Canada with Great Britain. This was a most useful and active institution during the troubles of 1837 and 1838, assisting the government very materially on important occasions. It numbered about one hundred and fifty members, of whom not more than two are known to be now alive. Mr. Workman has travelled over the greater portion of the United States and Canada; also over England, Ireland and Scotland, and Europe (except Russia), on three several occasions. His religious views are very broad and liberal. He claims the right of private judgment, independent of creeds and dogmas, and willingly concedes the same to all parties. He is a disciple of Darwin, Tyndall, Huxley and Spencer, and a firm believer in the ultimate triumph of their teachings. He left school in 1829, and ever since has been a hard worker, often for weeks at a time, for sixteen hours per day. He commenced life with a distinct determination that industry, honesty and honour should guide all his actions. Acting on these, he has succeeded in building up a very large business, acquiring a handsome independence, and a reputation of the highest order in every section of Canada. He has resided in Montreal for fifty-nine years, and has witnessed the marvellous changes which have taken place during that time. But these would fill volumes, and cannot be further noticed here.

They

d and

part-

ished

n and

n and

min-

firm

-two

th it

tner.

ment

ent.

ises,

Dur-

n re-

has

able

has

of of Iol-

nine

last

He

nce

nce

He av-

500

rge

in

ish

8.8

m-

Lumsden, John MacVeigh, Galt, Ontario, was born at Futteyghur, East Indies; and is a son of the late Colonel Thomas Lumsden, C.B., of Belhelvie Lodge, Aberdeenshire, Scotland. For a full genealogical record of the family see "Burke's Peerage." His mother was Hay, second daughter of John Burnett, of Elrich, Aberbeenshire. The other members of the family were six sons and five daughters, viz., General Sir Harry Burnett Lumsden, now of Belhelvie Lodge; John MacVeigh Lumsden, the subject of this sketch; Thomas Lumsden, late of St. Francoise Xavier (who was killed in September, 1880, by being gored by a bull belonging to himself); General Sir Peter Stark Lumsden, lately commissioner for the settlement of the Afghan boundary; William Henry Lumsden, who was killed in action, near Delhi, on the 25th August, 1857, a lieutenant in the 68th Native infantry, and second in command of the 1st Punjaub infantry; and Hugh David Lumsden, engineer, Canadian Pacific Railway. Of the five daughters, the eldest married the Rev. James Johnstone, of Potterton, Aberdeenshire; the second married the late Colonel John Patton, of Grandholme, Aberdeenshire; the third married Captain George Cleghorn (now Tancred), an officer in the Scotch Greys, now of Weens, Roxboroughshire; the fourth is unmarried; and the fifth married the late Captain Frank Sherlock, of Brighton, England. J. M. Lumsden received a thorough education, attending school at Bromeley, Kent, England, and subsequently entering Marishal College, Aberdeen, Scotland. Mr. Lumsden has had considerable political experience. He was reeve for a number of years of the township of Pickering, and afterwards represented South Ontario in the House of Commons. Mr. Lumsden never became a party chattel, reserving the right to think and act for himself upon all political questions. He was elected by the Liberal-Conservative party, but maintained his independence. In religion he gives his allegiance to Presbyterianism. He married in 1864, Margaret Ballengal MacKay, of Caithness-shire, Scotland, by whom he has had three children.

two boys and a girl.

Tait, Melbourne McTaggart, Q.C., Montreal, was born at Melbourne, Quebec, on the 20th May, 1842. He was the youngest son of the late Thomas Tait, who settled at Melbourne in 1834, and who afterwards became one of the leading men in the townships. He was éducated at St. Francis College, where he pursued the usual branches of study. In 1859, he commenced the study of law, at Montreal, in the office of Bethune & Dunkin, and attended the lectures on law in the University of McGill College, from which he received the degree of Bachelor of Civil Law, in the spring of 1862. After being admitted to the bar, in June, 1863, he commenced the practice of the profession at Melbourne, in partnership with the Hon. W. H. Webb, Q.C. In 1870, he removed to Montreal, and became a partner of the Hon. J. J. C. Abbott, Q.C., with whom he is still associated, the firm name now being Abbott. Tait, Abbotts & Campbell. His departure from Melbourne was deeply regretted, as he had always taken an active interest in the public institutions of his native place, and when he left, carried away with him many marks of the high esteem in which he was held by his townsmen. The legal firm with which Mr. Tait is connected has always stood in the first rank; and since Mr. Abbott's retirement, some years ago, from active practice, Mr. Tait has been its practical head. He has been engaged in many important cases. In February, 1882, he was appointed a Queen's Counsel, and has for some years held the office of treasurer of the bar of Montreal. Mr. Tait has been a prominent member of the Masonic order, his career as a Mason having commenced in St. Francis lodge, Richmond, P.Q., in 1863. After having filled several subordinate offices, he was elected master in 1867, and this office he held for two years. He also filled the office of grand steward of the Grand Lodge of Canada. On his removal to Montreal, he became a member of the Royal Albert lodge, G.R.Q, of which he is still a member. He was one of those who took an active part in bringing about a settlement between the Grand Lodges of Canada and Quebec, when the latter, owing to confederation, formed itself into a separate grand lodge; and he was ever found amongst those who anxiously sought to heal all differences in an amicable manner. He was an active member of the board of general purposes from the formation of the Grand Lodge of Quebec until the board was abolished in 1881. In 1871, he was elected district deputy grand master for Montreal, and was re-elected the following year. In 1876, he was elected to the office of deputy grand master, and at the annual communication, held in 1877, was unanimously elected grand master, at which time he was probably the youngest G.M. in the This position he occupied for Mr. Tait was chairman of the fraternity. two years. committee for the revision of the Ritual, and also of the committee for the revision of the Constitution, and has been for some time chairman of the committee on Jurisprudence. He took second and first-class certificates at the Military School at Quebec, in 1864; was lieutenant of one of the companies of the 54th battallion, when it was called out at the time of the Fenian raid; and subsequently became captain of the same company, from which position he retired, retaining his rank, on his removal to Montreal. In 1863, Mr. Tait married Monica, daughter of the late James Holmes, of Montreal, who died at Kingston, in 1876. In 1878, he married Miss Kaign, of Newport, R.I. He has several children. Mr. Tait is a member of the Church of England, and a Conservative in politics.

Folger, Benjamin Webster, Kingston, Ontario, was born at Cape Vincent, N. Y., on the 24th April, 1838. He is a son of Frederic A. and Laura Folger, and received his educational training at Cape Vincent. Mr. Folger is one of those capable and enterprising citizens of the great republic to the south of us, to whom the country is indebted for some of her most important national achievements. For railway construction the Folger Brothers, as they are known, have a genius; and the Kingston & Pembroke Railway, an undertaking of gigantic importance, considering the conformation of the surface over which it passed, is a monument of their courage and ability. Most of those who knew the nature of the route, with its enormous rocks and steep hills; its deep gorges, and stretches of bog; the tangle of forest, the lakes and rivers in the way, dismissed from their minds the practicability of ever being able to construct thereover an iron road. The Folger Brothers saw the obstacles, but they were not de-How successful was their undertaking is now a matter of history; and the extensive and important territory pierced by the road must ever remain under a debt of gratitude to these sturdy and courageous men. The elder brother, Benjamin, the subject of this sketch, is a man of fine character, generous and manly; and his great strength of purpose is plainly written on his face. As an instance of the magnitude of the difficulties in the construction of the Kingston and Pembroke road, it may be stated that no less than eight contractors engaged for the construction, but one after another withdrew or failed. Chisholm, McDonald & O'Brien, men of good calibre, however, took the contract, and performed the great task with thorough success. Mr. Folger is largely interested in iron mining in connection with his larger railway operations. He devotes himself to his own affairs; belongs to no secret society or political party; and has never voted. In religion he is a "Chris-tian without a creed." He married on the 27th January, 1864, Antoinette Louise

ai 18 H

in (E

 $\mathbf{G}_{\mathbf{c}}$ m

col

 \mathbf{Br}

he

wi: Ki

ver

 $\mathbf{p}_{\mathbf{o}}$

in 8

WOI

28 stro

and

lite

1868

Fall

at F

Sem

He

scho

poin

in t

1871.

and .

form

prize

Trerice, Alexander, Dresden, Ontario, was born in the township of Yarmouth, County of Elgin, Ontario, on July 8th, 1835. His father was Isaar Trerice, who was born at Nova Scotia, and is still living, though in his 84th year; and his mother was Euphemia McKillop, of Scotland. Alexander Trerice received a common school education, and at an early age engaged in such employment as offered; for when he was a lad nearly everybody was obliged to throw off his coat, roll up his sleeves, and enter into the hard work of pioneering. But young Trerice had plenty of ambition, and he had the good judgment, likewise, to not hesitate in entering any employment that he could use as a steppingstone to something better. At first, therefore, we find him engaged as a carpenter and joiner; after a time as a carriage and waggon manufacturer; and next eringect for himself a saw mill, which is still in his possession. He also built three steamboats and two sailing-vessels: and at the present has about $50,000 invested in boat property. Mr. Trerice was reeve of the village of Dresden from 1876 to 1880; was warden of the County of Kent in 1880 and 1881, and was the first mayor of the town of Dresden. For twenty years he has been a magistrate and commissioner, and he has been connected with every public enterprise in which the interests of the town were involved, since its incorporation. Mr. Trerice is a member of the Methodist communion. He was first married on March 6th, 1856, but his wife died; and he married again on the 23rd April, 1885. We may add that We may add that Mr. Trerice moved to Dresden from Yarmouth in 1855, and has remained there ever since. His personal history has been part, and a conspicuou part, of the political and commercial history of Dresden as a village and as a town.

ωf

Foster, Hon. George Eulis, Apohaqui, New Brunswick, A.B., D.C.L., M.P. for King's, N.B., and Minister of Marine and Fisheries, was born on September 3rd. 1847, in the Province of New Brunswick. He is a son of John Foster, who was a descendant of a U. E. loyalist who settled in New Brunswick in 1783, by Margaret (Haney) Foster, who was descended, on her father's side, from German stock. George Eulis Foster attended the common schools, the superior school in King's county, and entered the University of New Brunswick in September, 1865, at the head of the matriculating class, and was winner in a strong competition for the King's county scholarship at the same university. He took, during his first year, the Douglas gold medal for an English essay, in a competition open to all the classes, and won the compound achromatic microscope, as a first prize, for natural science. His strong points at college were mathematics and classics, with a strong liking for English literature and history. He graduated in 1868; taught the Grammar school at Grand Falls, N.B.; became superior of the school at Fredericton Junction, and in the Baptist Seminary at Fredericton, one year at each. He became principal of the Ladies' High school at Fredericton in 1870, and was appointed professor of classics and history in the University of New Brunswick, in 1871. He studied at Edinburgh, Scotland, and Heidelberg, Germany, and took at the former a medal, one first, and three other prizes. He assumed the duties of his chair in the University of New Brunswick in 1873, and occupied the same until January 1st, 1879, when he resigned. Acadia College, N.S., conferred upon him the title of D.C.L., in 1885. He was examiner in Grammar and English at the Provincial Normal schools, Fredericton, from 1874 to 1879. Early in life-in the thirteenth year of his age-Mr. Foster identified himself with the order of the Sons of Temperance. later with the British Templars, the United Temperance Association, the Dominion Alliance, and the International Temperance Association. He filled the offices of G.W.P. Sons of Temperance; Most Worthy Grand Templar of the British Templars of Canada; National Chief of the United Temperance Association, Vice-President and President of the Executive of the Dominion Alliance. of Canada and president, for four years, of the International Temperance Association. During Professor Foster's occupancy of the University chair, he frequently delivered lectures and addresses upon temperance topics, and upon his resignation of the chair he engaged in an extensive lecturing tour, delivering addresses on the total abstinence and prohibition questions in all the provinces of Canada, and most of the eastern and western States of the United States. He likewise edited several temperance papers. He has been identified for many years with the Y.M.C.A. of Fredericton, and was a member of the executive of the International Sabbath school Committee. After a lecturing tour of remarkable success. Professor Foster resolved to try what fortune had in store for him in the political sphere; though considering how wide and how brilliant his achievements had been, we may be sure that he had no misgivings in taking the contemplated step. In looking about him for a constituency, naturally that one nearest his heart, the county wherein he first drew breath, suggested itself, and to King's he went, though it was represented by that stalwart politician, Col. James Domville. The friends of Mr. Domville considered the act of Professor Foster as one that could be properly described only by the phrase "cheeky, but what they thought made no difference to the young candidate—he proceeded with his canvass, addressing the people everywhere upon the leading national topics. Against such eloquence as Professor Foster brought into the field, Major Domville was powerless, but apart from his ability as a debater, the people of King's had put the highest estimate upon the integrity of the

Mr. character of the young candidate. Foster was elected in June, 1882. election was voided, and he was again elected in November, 1882. He was re-elected, after his acceptance of office, again on December 31st, 1885. His majority in June, 1882, was 71 votes; in November, 1882, 281 votes, and in December, 1885, 384 votes. On December 10th, 1885, he was sworn of the Privy Council, and invested with the portfolio of marine and fisheries. Professor Foster has travelled in all the provinces of Canada, and through the greater portion of the United States, having visited England, Scotland, France, Germany, and Switzerland. He is a member of the Free Baptist denomination, and for many years has been, and is now, a prominent member of its conference, and he was president of the Union Baptist Educational Society in 1884-5. The Hon. George Eulis Foster is a Liberal-Conservative in politics-a full believer in the future greatness of Canada. He favours a British connection, merging into an Imperial Federation, of all the colonies with the home country, on terms that shall preserve local self-government and community of trade and defence. He is a supporter of the C.P. Railway scheme, in the interests of a fuller union, an increased interprovincial trade, an enlarged foreign commerce, as also for the settlement and development of our great North-West. Professor Foster was an important addition to the Canadian Cabinet. He is one of the foremost speakers in the country, if force and clearness of statement. fluency, and adherence to logic can entitle him to that place. He is a man of great energy, and of boundless nervous force. A literary grace pervades his style, but his speeches are never florid, or beyond the bounds of good taste in this respect. There is a singular earnestness in his manner, and nearly every speech that he delivers resolves itself into a series of propositions, one consequent upon the other. As we have said, he is a speaker of much force, and sometimes his eloquence rises to the height of passion. After the Hon. George Eulis Foster has acquired a little more parliamentary experience, men with open joints in their armour would do well not to provoke him to conflict.

Smith, Hon. Donald Alexander, Montreal, Pictou, N. S., and Fort Garry, Winnipeg, was born in the North of Scotland, at Morayshire, in the year 1821. He there received a careful classical education, and, when his course terminated, came to Canada. There is no other public man in this country whose career has been more prominently identified with the history of our great North-West than the Hon. Donald A. Smith. Early in life he entered the employ of the Hudson Bay Company, and rose from post to post till he became a director, and afterwards resident governor and chief commissioner of the Hudson Bay Company. In 1870, he was appointed a member of the Executive Council of the North-West territories, and he was a special commissioner appointed to enquire into the causes, nature and extent of the North-West insurrection of 1869-70; and for the tact, the care, and the comprehensiveness with which he performed this important duty, he received the special thanks of the Governor-General-in-Council. Mr. Smith is patron of the Manitoba Rifle Association; was the first president of St. Andrew's Society, in Winnipeg; and has been connected, in high official capacities, with the following companies, viz :- the Mitchell Steamship Co.; the Bank of Manitoba; the Railway Equipment and Railway Stock Co.; and likewise with the Manitoba Presbyterian College. Mr. Smith represented Winnipeg and St. John in the Manitoba Assembly from its first sitting, in 1871, until January, 1874, when he resigned, in order to confine his attention to the House of Commons. He was first returned to the Commons on the admission of Manitoba into the union, in 1871; was re-elected at the general election of 1874, and again at the general election of 1878. In politics, he may be described as an independent Conservative, as witness this declaration of his own :- "As he has no favours to ask, and nothing personal to desire, from any government, he will support only such measures as are conducive to the advancement of Manitoba and the North-West territories, in the first instance, and to the general prosperity of the Dominion." Mr. Smith was the last resident governor of the Hudson Bay Company, as a governing body. He has likewise been a director and member of the executive committee of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company; is vicepresident of the Bank of Montreal, and was one of those who went through, on the first train on the Canadian Pacific Railway, from ocean to ocean. He was present on the 7th of November, 1885, at Craigellachie, B.C., when the last spike was driven in that great undertaking. The Hon. Donald A. Smith has one of the finest private residences in the Dominion, at Montreal; he likewise has a seat at Pictou, N.S., and another at Silor hand od onthis Givi

ye

off

vil

ree

a n

He

dat Gra

tior vill

of t

self

tion

ver Heights, Fort Garry, Manitoba. Mr. Smith has always taken a deep interest in the cause of education and in 1883 presented to McGill college the munificent sum of $50,000 as an endowment for collegiate classes and eventually for the higher education of women; and he was one of the purchasers for presentation to the same college, of the superb Shakesperian library of the late Thomas D. King. Mr. Smith has a deep admiration for art, and has a valuable and beautiful collection of pictures, among which are works by Raphael, Rembrandt and Van Dyck. For a picture by J. A. Aitken, representing the Falls of Niagara, viewed from the extreme edge of the American side, he paid $2,500. Mr. Smith married Isabella, daughter of the late Richard Hardisty, who at one time served as an officer in the British army, and some time afterward in the Hudson Bay Company. Upon the whole, his career has been characterized by marked individuality and strength of character, by fine abilities, and the highest sense of public integrity and honour. trust that there is yet many years of usefulness before this distinguished and deserving an in

more

ry of

onald

em-

and

lirec-

and

Bay

nem-

orth-

com-

the

orth-

the

ness

tant

the

th is

on;

So-

ted,

ving ship

way and ian

peg bly

ry, ine

He

the

in

ion

of

ess

18

p-

Graydon, John, Streetsville, Ontario, was born in the County of Fermanagh, Ireland, on the 23rd of December, 1836. came to Canada with his parents in 1843, and settled with them in the village of Streetsville, where he has remained till the present. His parents were William and Margaret (Gardner) Graydon, and his forefathers emigrated from Scotland to the North of Ireland, as many others did, on account of religious persecution. The Gravdon family is a very ancient one, and the coat of arms shows a hand and dagger, hunting horn, compass and square, denoting that they were warriors, sportsmen, and mechanics. The educational advantages of young Graydon were such as the village of Streetsville afforded him, until he was sixteen years of age. Mr. Graydon has filled the office of councillor for the village of Streetsville, from 1867 until 1877; the office of reeve for four years; and he was appointed a magistrate on the 14th of November, 1871. He has served in that capacity since that date with eminent public satisfaction. Mr. Graydon was the first to move in the agitation to get railway communication to Streetsville, and this agitation led to the building of the Credit Valley, now a section of the Canadian Pacific Railway. He exerted himself for years in that movement, in connection with the late lamented James Gooder-ham and others. Mr. Graydon is a sturdy Conservative in politics, and has worked for and with his party faithfully and with zeal, but in all his career he never purchased a vote. He has been a private member of the Orange order for thirty years, and has also been a member of various temperance societies, and has been a total abstainer since he was seventeen years of age. At that early time he joined the Methodist church, of which he is still a member. He is actively associated in church work, especially in that of the Sabbath school, having been associated with one Sabbath school for over thirtysix years. Mr. Graydon married, on the 31st day of January, 1866, Jane Anderson. by whom there are living one son and three daughters. He engaged in lumbering, in connection with a saw mill, planing mill, and a sash and door factory. He has engaged likewise in building and contracting; and has a coal yard, and brick yard, and other important branches of business upon his hands. He is a gentleman of marked enterprise, of good ability, and of the highest integrity of character.

Morgan, William Sidney, Hamilton, was born in Toronto, January 12th, 1839. His father, Richard Morgan, and mother, Catherine Elizabeth, came to this country from England, in the year that King George IV. died (1830), and settled at Peterboro'. Thence they moved to Brantford, where they remained for a short time. In 1836. Mr. Morgan moved to Toronto, and started a large carriage business, which was successful; but like many others, he was not satisfied, and sold out the business, going to the States. But he did not care for living in the States, and soon returned to Canada. settling in Hamilton (1847), where he entered into business, and after a few years retired. Mr. Morgan's mother is a daughter of the late George Gwinne Bird, of Bowmanville. Dr. Bird was a pupil of Dr. Abernethy, and waited on him when he performed some of his great surgical opera-Dr. Bird had a record of the pedigree of his ancestors back to William the Conqueror. Richard Morgan had four sons, George, William, Robert, and Benjamin, and in 1860, he started them in commerce; George in the drug, and William, Robert, and Benjamin in the flour and grain business, under the name of Morgan Brothers. In 1869, the firm erected large flouring mills, the operation of which turned out very successful. In 1801, William S. Morgan married Jinnettee Richardson, of Hamilton. Their family consists of two sons and two daughters. Mr. Morgan has taken } a very active part in municipal business. In 1881, he was elected an alderman, and has held that position ever since. When the new board of health was formed for the City of Hamilton, he was elected chairman, and held that position for two During his chairmanship, he introduced, and had carried out, several improvements in the sanitary departments of the city. He introduced the measure for scavengering of the city, and had a furnace built to cremate all animals that die in the city, and also the offensive garbage; and he likewise introduced the system of house to house inspection. He received the warmest praise from the people and the city press, for the able and painstaking manner in which he carried out his duties. He was appointed on the board of health in 1885, but declined taking the chairmanship. Mr. Morgan is a member of the English church, and is zealous for the welfare of that body. He has in his possession one of the oldest relica in America. It is a stained glass window from one of the old abbey churches in England, and brought to this country by Dr. Bird. It is over a thousand years old.

Shanley, James, Q.C., London, Ontario, was born at the family seat, "The Abbey," Stradalby, Queen's County, Ireland, and is a son of the late James Shanley, a member of the Irish bar, who emigrated to Canada about the time of the rebellion, settling in the County of Middlesex, Ontario. The family is ancient, and has been prominent for many centuries in the County of Leitrim; but the late James Shanley, possessed of the spirit of emigration, which had pervaded the sister isles, resolved to try his fortunes in Canada. For further particulars respecting the lineage of this family see "O'Hart's Irish Pedigrees," and "King James' Irish Army List."] Speaking of the sons of the late James Shanley, the author of the "Irishman in Canada" says:—"The sons of this gentlemen are men of whom the Irish people may be very proud; their integrity and fine sense of honour would mark them out in a community where sharpness had not begun to take hold. I have never met these gentlemen, but I have heard much of their singularly high standpoint in regard to whatever they busy themselves with; a great deal, which implies not merely that sense of honour which would feel a stain like a wound, but a goodness of heart which at the present day is only too rare. The Shanley family is an old Celtic one which has been known for centuries in the County Leitrim, and the family characteristics are traceable to the proud, kindly Celtic blood." James Shanley, the subject of this sketch, is a brother of Walter Shanley, M.P. for South Grenville, a memoir of whom see on page 617 of this volume.

Oxley, James Macdonald, LL.B., B.A., Department of Marine and Fisheries, Ottawa, was born at Halifax, Nova Scotia, on October 22nd, 1856. His father. James Black Oxley, came from a Yorkshire family which settled in Cumberland county, Nova Scotia, in the latter part of last century, and his mother Ellen (Macdonald) Oxley, from a Scotch family, resident in Antigonish county. His ancestors, on both sides, were occupied in agricultural pursuits: but his father engaged in business in Halifax, and was long one of the best known merchants in that city, being extensively interested in insurance, mining and other important industrial enterprises. J. Macdonald Oxley, his second son, was educated successively at the Halifax Grammar school, at Dalhousie University (where after a successful curriculum he graduated B.A. in 1874 with honours in mental and moral philosophy), and at Harvard University, where he took a partial course in law during 1876-77. In 1878 he obtained, by examination, the degree of LL.B. from the Halifax University. While at Dalhousie University Mr. Oxley may be said to have begun his literary career by acting as assistant editor to the Dalhousie Gazette, and contributing frequently to its columns. Taking up the study of law in 1874, he was admitted to the Nova Scotia bar in 1878, having in the meanwhile been a constant contributor to the daily press on miscellaneous subjects; and for some months a leader writer on the Morning Berald. He practised law in Halifax from 1879 to 1883, and during this time was joint editor of a series of "Nova Scotia Decisions," in three volumes, published by A. & N. McKinlay, Halifax; and sole editor of "Young's Admiralty Decisions," published by Carswell & Co., Toronto. He also translated Eugene Sue's "L'Orgueil," which was published in the "Seaside Library," No. 1590, as "Pride, or the Duchess," and cordially praised for its ease and accuracy. He also acted as one of the official reporters of the House of Assembly during the sessions of 1881-82-83. In April, 1873, he was appointed to the position in the department of Marine at Ottawa, which he now holds, and since then has by his assiduous attention to literature, in his leisure

of ton w

a

sit

m

of

he

to

bri

thi

Ju

dau

of

dau

D.I

tor.

Onte

Edir

hours, and the remarkable success which has attended his writings, won for himself a prominent position among the litterateurs of Canada. He is a recognized contributor to the following periodicals:-The Week and Canadian Methodist Magazine, of Toronto; the Popular Science Monthly, Magazine of American History, Continent and Our Youth, of New York; Wide Awake and Outing, of Boston; Lippincott's and Sunday School Times, of Philadelpha: Current and Literary Life, of Chicago; Cosmopolitan, of Rochester, N. Y., and others of less note. In September, 1885, he won the prize offered by Literary Life, of Chicago, for the best epitome of a famous story or poem, his subject being "The Scarlet Letter," and in December of the same year the prize offered by the Halifax Critic for the best Christmas story. He has always been connected with the Methodist church of Canada. sidering the extent of Mr. Oxley's official duties, one marvels at his industry and capacity, when a survey of his literary achievements is made. As a writer, Mr. Oxley reveals an active and almost boundless imagination, and he goes direct to the heart of his subject. His love for nature is warm and true; and it is not strange that his descriptive work is exquisite and vivid. His style is swift, clear and direct, and while the touch is light and dainty, force is never absent from it. Mr. Oxley's range is extremely wide; -he is capable of producing off-hand a vivid, sunny story for young folks; a piece of dramatic fiction, an historical essay, or a running commentary upon current political topics. His brain seems never to be at rest, and important subjects, which have escaped the minds of others, are constantly suggesting themselves. Of each one of such suggestions he promptly makes a note, and when time is on his hands, he sits down and gives the thought development. His outdoor work has the perfume of clover fields and pine forests; and when he touches the inner world, his work is true to the heart of man. We predict a very brilliant career in the domain of letters for this gifted aspirant. Mr. Oxley married on June 10th, 1880, Mary Morrow, eldest daughter of James B. Morrow, of the firm of S. Cunard & Co., Halifax, and granddaughter of the Rev. Matthew Richey, D.D., the renowned Methodist pulpit ora-

nty

d."

ch,

for

on

В.,

er-

ova ter,

ire

ty,

en-

ld)

in

 $_{
m oth}$

its;

ıli-

wn

ely

ner

ac-

ed

ol,

in

ral y,

> Widdifield, J. Henry, Newmarket, Ontario, M.D., M.R.C.S. England, L.R.C.P. Edinburgh, M.P.P. for North York, was born in the township of Whitchurch, Ontario, at the old family homestead "Maple Grove Farm," in the County of York. He is a son of Charles Ellis and Angeline (Hughs) Widdifield, daughter of Joseph Hughs, who was originally of Welsh de-Mr. Hughs was born in Pennsylvania, but moved to Canada, and settled in North York. The family, during the Mc-Kenzie rebellion was identified with the Liberal party. Charles Ellis Widdifield was a son of Henry Widdifield, a U. E. Charles Ellis Widdifield loyalist, of New Jersey. He was of English descent, and came to Canada, preferring to live under the British flag, and settled on the homestead farm, Maple Grove, in the year 1801. He had a family of four children, the father of the subject of this sketch being the only son. The family was in sympathy with McKenzie's cause, although not taking an active part in the rebellion. During Robert Baldwin's campaigns in North York, he always made Maple Grove farm his home, being a warm personal friend of Mr. Widdifield. Henry Widdifield, the grandfather, died in 1869, and Charles E. Widdifield died in 1873, C. E. Widdifield both at the homestead. had a family of four children, the subject of this sketch being the second eldest. Maple Grove farm, the place of his birth, is situated in the township of Whitchurch, being lots 32 and 33 of the 3rd concession of that township, and it still remains in the possession of James Edward Widdifield, the third youngest of the family. J. Henry Widdifield, the subject of this sketch, and brother of William C. Widdifield, B.A., barrister-at-law, of Newmarket, received a sound and careful education, finishing his studies at the Newmarket High school. At the age of twenty, he concluded to study medicine, and, in 1865, entered the Victoria University, where, for two years, he was a private pupil of the late Hon. Dr. Rolph. He remained here until he graduated M.D., in 1869. After graduating, he resolved to prosecute his studies in Europe, and in the same year left for England, entering the hospitals of London, and afterwards of Edinburgh. During one session, he attended lectures in the St. Thomas Medical and Surgical College, duly graduating, and being admitted to the membership of the Royal College of Surgeons of England, and the Royal College of Physicians of Edinburgh. In the fall of 1870, he again returned to Canada, and was admitted to the membership of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario, and immediately commenced practice in Newmarket, where he still resides, and enjoys a large and lucrative practice. Dr. Widdifield joined the Queen's Own Rifles during college days, and afterwards entered the School of Military Instruction, in Toronto, where he received a second-class certificate in 1866. He re-entered the same in 1868, under Col. Lindsay Farrington, commandant, and received a first-class certificate, and in the same year, entered the Toronto School of Gunnery, under Colonel, after Major-General, Anderson, as commandant, obtaining therefrom a first-class certificate. However, he had taken no active part in military matters until the rebellion of 1885, when he offered his services to the government, and also offered to raise a battalion in North To show that the offer was a bona fide one, he organized a company in a few hours of some fifty men, but the offer was declined. In 1872, Mr. Widdifield was appointed coroner for the County of York, which office he resigned in 1874, upon accepting the nomination for parliament. 1879, he was appointed a justice of the peace for the county. In 1875, he contested the North Riding of York, in the Reform interest, against Erastus Jackson, of Newmarket, defeating him by the large majority of 489 votes; and was re-elected in 1879, defeating Edward Murphy, of Newmarket, by 509 votes. He was again elected, in 1883, defeating C. C. Robinson, son of the Lieut.-Governor John B. Robinson, of Toronto, by a majority of 854 votes. During his first session in the legislature, he moved the Address in reply to the Speech from the Throne, and acted as ministerial whip from 1876 to 1878, when he resigned the position, and since that time has been chairman of the standing committee on standing orders. In 1874, he was nominated for the House of Commons, but declined, owing to his professional duties, and was again nominated for North York, in 1882, accepting the nomination; but on this occasion, he was "gerrymandered" out of the riding. During the doctor's parliamentary career, he has taken a very active part in the business of the House, and has successfully carried through a number of bills, including the Ontario Pharmacy Act, in 1884; while for several years he has urged upon the government the necessity of removing obstructions from the mouth of the Severn river, thereby lowering the waters of Lake Simcoe. and thus draining a large tract of land. Largely as a result of those representations, the work has been partially accomplished. Dr. Widdofield has likewise advocated manhood suffrage. He is a member of the Masonic craft, Tuscan lodge, No. 99, New-market; of the Doric chapter, No. 60, of the same place, and a Knight Templar. He was master of the lodge, and first principal of the chapter for several years, and is at the present time district deputy grand master of the Toronto district, which includes the counties of York, Peel, part of Ontario, and the City of Toronto. He is also a member of the Grand Lodge of the Ancient Order of United Workmen, and for the past five years, has been provincial medical examiner of the order, as well as of several other societies. In politics, he is a Liberal, and is honorary president of the Newmarket Young Men's Reform Club, and a member of the executive committee of the Ontario Reform Association In religion, he believes in orthodox Christianity, according to others the right to hold their own views. He attends the Church of England. Dr. Widdifield is the very embodiment of energy and industry, he is a ready and forcible debator; is well informed upon political questions; and, altogether, a valuable member of the Assembly.

Thomas, Charles Lewis, Hamilton, was born in Thornbury, Gloucestershire, England, on the 4th of May, 1828. a son of John Morgan and Mary (Lewis) Thomas, there being thirteen children, Charles Lewis being the oldest. Of these five were sons and eight daughters, and three of the sons are still living and all engaged in the music business, viz.: J. J. Thomas, who is connected with subject in the piano trade, and E. G. Thomas, organ manufacturer of Woodstock, Ontario. Four of the daughters are still living. John Morgan Thomas emigrated to Canada, from Bristol, England, in 1832, settling in Montreal. He was afterwards of the pioneer piano manufacturers of Canada, and to him is due the honour of being the inventor of the full metallic frame, now so universally used by all the piano manufacturers, he having taken out the patent, now in Charles Lewis Thomas's possession, forty-five years ago. Mr. Thomas removed to Toronto in 1839, and carried on piano manufacturing there till his death in 1875. Charles Lewis Thomas was educated in Toronto, receiving an ordinary English education. He is a man of much public spirit, and has been an alderman for the City of Hamilton for the last two years. He was a member of the Odd Fellows, Manchester Unity, joining the same in Toronto in 1848, and filling all the offices in succession, up to the past grand.

t f

n

pe

C

lei

7t.

th

of

W

bo

con

 $_{
m the}$

The

nor.

real

who

8eve

Jud

Dav

the

bec,

celle

He has also been a member of the Masonic Fraternity for the past twenty-two years, and belongs to the Hamilton Lodge of Perfection, and Hamilton Sovereign Chapter of Rose Croix. In politics he is a Conservative. With respect to his religious convictions, his parents, we may state, belonged to the Church of England, but the subject of this memoir joined the Methodist church thirty years ago, and for the last fifteen years held the position of treasurer and recording steward for Zion Tabernacle, Hamilton. He, in 1855, married Mary Ann, daughter of J. B. Bagwell, of Mimico, near Toronto, and in the same year removed to Hamilton and commenced piano manufacturing at the same stand that he occupies at the present time. The piano business was an occupation according to Mr. Thomas' heart, for since his infancy he had been connected with it. [For a sketch of his brother, see page 261 of this volume.] Referring in a lengthy article to the Thomas establishment at Hamilton, a local paper said: "The Thomas piano, from the outset was destined as a piano to be not merely of fine glossy exterior or made for cheap use, but an instrument in which the purchaser might invest and feel satisfied that, with fair treatment, it would last a family for a lifetime, and always be prized as a valuable possession. From the first days of public exhibitons these instruments have been subjected to the test of impartial comparison with pianos of all other makers, and it seems to have been the policy of the house to invite criticism and impartial comment from all sources, so that their instruments might be improved and perfected by this method, and the retention of as nearly as possible the same staff of workmen."

the

the 788

of

the

ter

the

 $\mathbf{n}\mathbf{d}$

per

Her

ive

her

her

is

ng .

he

m

he

đв

ld

in-

r;

n,

Cotton, W. H., Lieutenant-Colonel, Commandant af the Royal School of Artillery, Kingston, was born in Montreal, on the 7th January, 1848. He is the eldest son of the late Henry Cotton, of the civil service of Canada. Henry Cotton was the son of William Miles Cotton, of England, and was born in St. Petersburg, Russia, in 1817, coming to Canada in 1836, and serving in the civil service for upwards of forty years. The late Mr. Cotton married in 1847, Eleanor, daughter of David Ross, Q.C., of Montreal, who now survives him. David Ross, who died in Montreal, in 1837, aged sixtyseven, married Jane Davidson, daughter of Arthur Judge Davidson, of Montreal. Davidson, afterwards judge, was clerk of the Court of Appeals in the Province of Quebec, in 1778, during the period that His Excellency Sir F. Haldimand, was governor-general of that province. John Ross, arr officer in Wolfe's army at the taking of Quebec, was the great great-grandfather of Lt. Col. W. H. Cotton, the subject of this sketch. W. H. Cotton was educated at Toronto and Quebec, receiving a general English education, embracing the study of classics. At the time of the organization of the schools of artillery, and the permanent corps connected therewith, Col. Cotton was then (1871) a captain in the Ottawa Garrison Artillery, having been transferred from the Quebec Garrison Artillery. He was the first captain of A Battery Regt. C. A., and in 1882 succeeded to his present appointment on the promotion of Lieut.-Colonel Irwin. He twice visited Wimbledon in connection with the Wimbledon team, in the years 1871 and 1875. Col. Cotton is a staunch member of the Church of England. He married in April, 1876, Jessie, daughter of the late John Penner, of Montreal, and grand daughter of the late Chas. Penner, of Lachine, who afterwards resided in Kingston. He has four children living, two sons and two daughters. Smithers, C. F., Montreal, President of the Bank of Montreal, was born in London, England, on the 25th November, 1822. The head of the largest banking institution on this continent, and one of the most important financial corporations in the world, his career ought to be of special interest to the young man beginning life, who would learn the secret of success. And yet, as is generelly the case with able, energetic, clear-sighted men of business, who have attained the highest rank in their profession, the route by which Mr. Smithers reached his actual goal of honour and influence was, in one sense, extremely uneventful. Though there is no man in the Dominion-not even the prime minister himself-whose utterances are more anxiously awaited and more eagerly received than his; though his words are more fateful to the mercantile community than was the oracle of Delphi to the ancient Greeks; though over the broad Dominion, and beyond its borders, his forecasts cause deep searchings of heart and give rise to "obstinate questionings" in financial and commercial circles, the story of his rise to power, so far-reaching, may be told in a few brief sentences. His life may be divided into three periods. Of these the first was spent in his native land, and it was during those twenty-five years that Mr. Smithers' character acquired the solidity and tone which stood him so well in his later We are often reminded—on the career.

authority of some ancient observer—that the poet is born, not made. With equal truth we might assert that bankers are born bankers. At any rate, Mr. Smithers is one in a thousand—in ten—in a hundred thousand. But, however endowed by nature, no man can excel in any art, science or vocation without experience. Mr. Smithers had an admirable apprenticeship for the role of responsibility he was destined ultimately to assume. His whole previous training might seem to have the single aim of fitting him for the office which he fills so admirably to-day. Arriving in Canada in 1847, he entered the service of the Bank of British North America, with which his connection lasted for eleven years. They were years of political conflict, and towards their close Canada was nearing the great crisis of which the result was to be confederation. Commercially, their most important outcome was the reciprocity treaty of 1854. It was then, moreover, that an effective impulse was given to those great enterprises for the establishment of means of intercommunication which transformed the business of the country and prepared the way for the subsequent union of the long isolated provinces. On the course of banking transactions these events could not fail to exert a marked influence, and when, in 1858, Mr. Smithers became associated with the Bank of Montreal, the day of small things had almost passed away. The growth of that institution has been an index of the rate of After the conquest, Canada's progress. the anomalous condition of the currency was a source of serious embarrassment to the merchants of Quebec and Montreal. Remedying ordinances were passed in 1764, 1765, 1777, 1795 and 1808, but they proved only a partial cure. In 1792 a number of gentlemen undertook to start a bank under the name of the Canada Banking Company. But the establishment from which they looked for so many benefits to commerce never became more than a private concern. In 1808, after a fresh currency act had been passed, another attempt was made in the same direction, a bill to institute the Canada Bank being referred to a special committee in the Quebec legislature. Again, however, prejudice prevailed, and the bill was defeated on grounds which to modern ideas would appear ridiculous. It was not till ten years later that the merchants of the two rival cities were fortunate enough to have their long repressed aspirations fulfilled,the Bank of Montreal and the Quebec Bank coming into existence simultaneously in 1818. The development of the former has had few parallels in the world's financial A biographic record of its growth from small beginnings to its present status, as the most potent of monetary institutions in the Western hemisphere would be both interesting and instructive. But ex uno disce omnes. Of those who in recent years have guided its destinies, Mr. Smithers is, to borrow a term from diplomacy, by far the most statesmanlike. The last man to draw notice to himself, his rare talents could not long escape recognition. After filling several important charges, he was selected to be the agent of the bank in New York, conjunction with Mr. Walter Watson. In that capacity he gave entire satisfaction, and when, in 1879, Mr. R. B. Angus resigned, he took that gentleman's place as general manager. Two years later, he accepted the high position which he still retains, on the retirement of Mr. (now Sir) George Stephen, to assume the presidency of the Canadian Pacific Company. In discharging the duties of so responsible an office Mr. Smithers has earned a world-wide reputation for sagacity, foresight and all the qualities that make a good administra-His annual reviews of the financial condition and commercial prospects of the Dominion-a feature of bank reporting which he originated—are remarkable for their comprehensive range and firm grasp of the significance of movements and occurrences affecting the well being of the country. In style they are models of clearness of statement and logical argument, and so generally sound are their economic principles, and so trustworthy the forecasts thence deducted, that everywhere Mr. Smithers' utterances are received with a confidence well nigh unbounded. The success of the bank, under his management, is shown by the declaration at last meeting of a bonus of one per cent., in addition to the half-yearly dividend of five per cent. Speaking of the report just read, the president said that the gist of it all was that, after amply providing for losses, and paying two dividends of five per cent. each, and a bonus of one, or eleven per cent. altogether, they were able to carry forward $379,569, or over $73,000 more than they began the year with. As to the distribution of profits, they had to guard against paying too much or too little, the danger being in the former line of conduct. Still, stockholders had rights which they were bound to respect, and he did not believe in keeping everything for posterity. The most significant feature in the masterly address, with which Mr. Smithers moved the adoption of the last report, was his announcement of his willingness to advocate the policy of putting the banks upon the American system, and requiring them to secure their issues by the deposit of Government bonds. For himself, he said he had been long in favour of the plan, and if it was not pressed at the last legislation on the subject of banking, it was not because the Bank of Montreal was not ready for the change, but out of consideration for the opinions of other bankers. Mr. Smithers believed, however, that since then the most, if not all of his colleagues, had come to be in sympathy with his views, and he therefore availed himself of the opportunity of placing them on record. The challenge thus thrown down was taken up in the press, and leading bankers expressed themselves for and against the change. As the charters do not expire for some five years, there is still abundant time for full thought and discussion on the subject, which, it may be recalled, was a questio vexata, in the early years after confederation. There is much to be said on both sides, while on the one hand, the policy advocated by Mr. Smithers would have obvious advantages in placing the currency on a sound basis, and removing the necessity for detailed monthly statements, on the other, a system which has been so long identified with the business of the country could hardly be altered without disturbance to important commercial interests.

has

ial

rth

us,

ns

th

mo

ars

is.

far

to

ıld

ng

æď

rk,

at-

is-

n-

n's

er,

ill

ir)

су

is-

an'

de

all

·a-

ial

he

ch

mai-

ct-

le

 $\mathbf{n}\mathbf{d}$

nd

st-

at

·e-

d-

nis

on

t.,

of

st

ıll

8, ıt.

ıt.

 $^{\mathrm{rd}}$

ey

 \mathbf{n}

g

in

ıd

fi-

Larkin, Patrick Joseph, St. Catharines, Ontario, was born in Galway, Ireland, in the year 1829, and when a boy of eight years, accompanied his parents to Canada settling in Toronto in 1837. mained here fourteen years when he removed to St. Catharines, and resumed his seafaring occupations in what was then known as the "marine centre" of Upper Canada. Passing through the various grades of his sea-faring life, he rose to the command of a vessel and retired an owner and possessor of a handsome competency. In 1874 he was elected to the council of his adopted city, in which he served several terms. active mind again led him into large enterprises, and in 1875 he undertook an extensive contract on the new Welland Canal, which he completed to the entire satisfaction of the government. The firm of Larkin, Connolly & Co. then obtained the contract for the construction of the Quebec graving dock and Harbour works, and at the present time (1886) his firm is building the celebrated Esquimault graving dock, British Columbia. The firm of which he is the head, has in various parts of the Dominion, undertaken and carried to successful completion, several large contracts. In politics Captain Larkin has always been a Reformer, having at an early age identified himself with that party. He was un-animously chosen president of the Reform Association of Lincoln in 1876, which position he retained until 1882, resigning in that year, and bearing out of office with him the goodwill and grateful appreciation of the body over which he presided for six He has at all times taken an active interest in every enterprise that was calculated to advance the material prosperity of his city. St. Catharines has one of the finest systems of water works in the Dominion of Canada. The Captain was one of the original promoters of this enterprise, and has held a seat at the water works board up to the present time. In religion he is a Roman catholic, and while he enjoys the full confidence and fellowship of his co-religionists, he has by his courteous bearing, his sterling honesty, and devotion to principle, earned the esteem of men of all creeds and nationality. In 1882 Captain Larkin was chosen by acclamation mayor of St. Catharines and amid the hearty applause of his fellow citizens was, without opposition, elected to the same honourable office the succeeding year. He is one of the best known men in southern Ontario, and has by his indomitable energy and trained talents, done very much to advance the interests of his city, and develop the resources of the Niagara peninsula. In his domestic life he is singularly happy, having in Mrs. Larkin, whom he married in 1861, an accomplished and affectionate wife, whose fine traits of character are reflected in her refined and highly educated daughters. He is a man whose hand and purse are always open to the claims of charity, and among the members of his own church is held in esteem and respect. A shrewd and active business man, in the prime of his ripened manhood, gifted with keen discernment and talents of a high order, Captain Larkin will, we predict, continue to grow in prosperity, and in the good opinions of his host of friends.

Clarke, Rev. John Stokes, Pastor of the Canada Methodist Church, Picton, was born in the town of Clewes, north of Ireland, on Feb. 8th, 1833. He is a son of John and Rose (Stokes) Clarke, John Clarke being a merchant and Clerk of the Peace. The Clarke family left England in the reign of William III., and afterwards held various civic and other important offices, in the County of Monaghan, Ireland. John Stokes Clarke was educated at his native place, his tutor being the Rev. William White, a Presbyterian minister. When in his seventeenth year, J. S. Clarke came to Canada, and began a study of theology in the Methodist school at Toronto. In 1854, he entered the ministry, and since that time has been pastor at Barrie, London, Bradford, Napanee, Grimsby, Thorold, Whitby, Oshawa, Picton, labouring at each place for a full three years. Large ingatherings have resulted from his ministrations, and over three hundred members were added to the congregation at Oshawa under his pastorate. Mr. Clarke is an exceedingly effective platform orator. His style is not florid or diffuse, but direct, clear, forcible, and appealing. Upon the platform the same qualities make him very effective. He is a man imbued with deep zeal for the cause of the gospel, and he has a heart full of sympathy for the distress of With temperance work he his fellow-men. has been prominently identified, and was Grand Chaplain of the Independent Order of Good Templars, and afterwards Grand Worthy Chief Templar. While holding this important office he had control of the lecture work of the order in Ontario, and was one of the ablest executive officers that ever filled the responsible post of head of the order. He is an Oddfellow, and has usually been chaplain of the lodges where he resided. He is a man of wide influence in the community, this influence extending beyond the pale of his own denomination. He married, on September 16, 1858, Maria, daughter of Edward Green, of London, Robillard, Honore, Ottawa, M.P.P. for Russell, was born on the 12th of January, 1835, in the County of Two Mountains, parish of St. Eustache. He is a son of Antoine Robillard, by Melie Loriaux, daughter of M. Beauchamps, who came to Canada from France. M. Robillard was a descendant of an old French family, and early in life engaged in the occupation of builder and contractor in Ottawa, and was the assistant builder of some of the first residences in that city, among which may be mentioned that of Colonel By and the French Cathedral, He retired from active business about 1860. and died in 1883, leaving eleven of a family. Mrs. Robillard is still living with her son, the subject of this sketch, who is the eldest living son. Honoré Robillard received a good education, taking a classical course at the Ottawa college. At the age of seventeen he left school, and the gold fever being at his height in Australia, he left Ottawa for that far region. He remained for a time at the Cape of Good Hope, and landed at Port Phillip, Melbourne, in May, 1853. After arriving there, he was for five years employed in the gold fields, between New Zealand, New South Wales and Victoria; but not finding the occupation profitable, he returned to England in 1858, and after spending a short time in Scotland and Ireland, returned to Canada, landing at Quebec on the 10th of April, 1858. He now purchased one of the farms belonging to his father, on which was a lime stone quarry, and this he commenced to operate, and it is known at present as the Gloucester Quarry and Lime Works. He remained at home until 1862, when the gold fever broke out at British Columbia, and thither Mr. Robillard set out in the spring of the same year, going by the Isthmus of Panama and San Francisco, touching at Acapulco, Mexico. He reached Victoria in the month of May, and set out for the Carriboo district. where he duly arrived. He remained in the gold fields until the following fall, when he returned by the Thompson river, and engaged with a company which was engaged in building the first waggon road in British Columbia. After remaining two months with this company, he set out for Oregon, United States, where he remainfor nine months, engaged at quartz mining. He then concluded to return, and in December, 1864, arrived at Ottawa, where he has remained ever since, attending to his quarries, quite disgusted with gold mining and quite sick of gold fevers. In 1870, he was appointed a lieutenant in the Reserve Militia, 1st battalion of Carleton. In the same year he was appointed a justice of the peace. In 1874, he was elected deputy reeve of the township of Gloucester, Carleton county, and in 1875, became reeve, which office he resigned owing to illness in his family. M. Robillard is now and has been for some time school trustee as French representative in the Collegiate Institute of Octawa. In 1882, he contested the County of Russell in the Conservative interest, against his brother, Alexander Robillard, a Reformer, and Charles Bil-lings, an Independent, defeating both of them, by a majority of 322 over his brother, and 750 over Mr. Billings. M. Robillard is a shareholder and vice-president of the French Building Society of Ottawa. In politics, he is a staunch Liberal-Conservative, and is a member of the Ontario Conservative

Union, and a member of its executive committee. He has been a Roman catholic from youth up. He married in 1860, Philomene. daughter of the late P. Barrett and Flavie Barrett. She died in 1878, leaving seven of a family, and M. Robillard again married in 1879, Gléphire, daughter of the late J. B. Richer. There is no issue by the second marriage. In private life, he is extremely courteous and popular, and although he has not yet had sufficient opportunities to reveal his gifts as a public man, enough has transpired from his career to show that he is indefatigable and painstaking in the interests of the constituency committed to his charge. Altogether his conduct bodes a career full of promise.

Tache, Right Rev. Alexandre Antonin, Archbishop of St. Boniface, was born at Rivière du Loup, on the 23rd July, 1823. He is a son of Charles Taché, who was a captain in the Canadian Voltigeurs in the war of 1812-15. His Grace is descended from one of the most notable and remarkable families in this country, having for ancestors Louis Joliette, the discoverer of the Mississippi, and Sieur Varennes de la Verandrye, the well-known explorer of the Red River, the Upper Missouri and the Saskatchewan. Jean Taché was the first of the name to arrive in Canada, and he settled at Quebec in 1739, marrying demoiselle Marguerite Joliette de Mingan. He possessed an immense fortune, but the conquest ruined him. His son, Charles, settled at Montmagny, he having three sons, one of whom was Sir Etienne Pascal Taché, who died premier of Canada in 1865. Charles, the eldest of the three, had likewise three sons, Dr. Joseph Taché, a brilliant Canadian writer, deputy minister of Agriculture, and Chevalier de la Legion d'Honneur; Louis Taché, sheriff of St. Hyacinthe; and Alexandre Antonin, the distinguished subject of this memoir. His father died in January, 1826, when the future archbishop was but three years of age; then his mother with her young family left and returned to There our subject Boucherville, Quebec. remained until his tenth year. In 1833 he was sent to college at St. Hyacinthe, and there for the next eight years he studied classical philosophy and all the branches that belong to a thorough course. In September, 1841 he began his course of theology in the Grand Seminary of Montreal. After one year here he returned to St Hyacinthe, as one of the professors, and in this capacity continued his course of theology. In October, 1844, he joined the Oblates as a novice, and in June, 1845, he set out for Red River, where such a career of influence and usefulness awaited him. During the journey he was ordained deacon of St. Boniface, and on the first Sunday after his arrival he was ordained priest, by his Lordship Bishop Provencher (12th October, 1845). The following day, having completed his novitiate, he pronounced his vows as an Oblate, and in the spring of 1846, he left St. Boniface for the Indian missions of the far North-West, Isle à la Crosse being his head quar-His duties here were of the most trying kind, and called into requisition a good constitution, faith and zeal. With all these was the gifted young missionary blessed. It is not necessary to point out what his hardships, and even the dangers, must have been in a wide wilderness like the great North-West, with a mission among hostile and even murderously disposed Indians. But Father Taché soon won his way to the hearts of hosts of these wild people; and a large number of conversions rewarded his industry. It might be supposed that since the young priest had chosen to "bury himself alive," so to speak, in the wilderness, that he would be lost sight of in high ecclesiastical quarters; but The venerable such was not the case. bishop. Monseigneur Provencher, had kept While his eye upon the young missionary. at Isle à la Crosse, and being only in his twenty-sixth year, he received a letter from the venerable bishop announcing that the latter had chosen him as his coadjutor, and requesting his return to St. Boniface. on reaching St. Boniface, he found a letter instructing him to proceed to Rome for consecration; and the ceremony was performed in the cathedral of Viviers, at the hands of the Bishop of Marseilles. Upon his return to Canada he set out for Isle à la Crosse, where he remained till the death of Bishop Provencher in 1853. He then assumed episcopal charge of this enormous territory, and by his tireless zeal, and splendid enthusiasm, soon saw churches, seats of learning and religious houses, commensurate with the needs of his people, established in the territories. His connection with the events of that time, is a notable matter of history, and need not be dealt with extensively here. That government handed over, virtually, to Monseigneur, the settlement of terms with those engaged in revolt, there seems to be no doubt whatever. When his lordship set out from Ottawa with the instructions of Joseph Howe and of Sir John Macdonald, he regarded himself, and was so regarded by the government, as invested with plenipotential powers. The difficulty that afterwards arose was due to the fact that the ministry did not foresee that outrages, which ought not to be compounded. might take place before the bishop reached While Monseigneur was on his way to Fort Garry, Scott was shot; and the bishop, deeming his authority to cover such a case, with the same force as it covered the looting of stores and the uprising against proper authority, he offered, in the name of the government, a general pardon. His position afterwards was a painful one. The diocese of St. Boniface, it may be added, was divided in 1863, and the north-west portion was formed into what is designated the apostolic vicarate of Athabasca-Macken-At the time of the erection of the Metropolitan See another portion of the diocese of St. Boniface was detached, and formed into the diocese of St. Albert, where the unfortunate insurrection of 1885 took place. Archbishop Taché has been more influential than any other man in the North-West territories, in the promotion of peace and good-will among his people and the English-speaking settlers. A man so gifted and blessed, so full of energy, so remarkable for his piety and zeal, would adorn any position in the theological sphere.

Clark, Thomas W., Lieut.-Colonel, Waterford, Ontario, was born in the township of Rainham, County of Haldimand, on the 23rd February, 1812. He is descended from a military ancestry, his father and grandfather having been officers in the British army; and his maternal grandfather a United Empire lovalist. His father, William Clark, belonged to the commissariat, and was attached to the Turkey Point division of the Canadian militia, and was stationed for a time at Port Dover, under the command of Colonel Nichols. died in 1813, and after two or three years his widow married Aaron Slaght, one of the pioneers of the township of Townshend. Thomas W. Clark attended school during the winter months of his early boyhood, but the rustic school of this early date was an extremely crude and rudimentary institution. But the lad was full of ambition and energy; and he was resolved, in the face of the adverse circumstances, to equip himself with a share of education sufficient for the needs of a practical life. He became a wide and devoted reader, and he is to-day one of the best informed gentlemen in his own portion of the province. Through life he has been engaged in agriculture, but for twelve years also he was a successful merchant and miller. It is worthy of record that when he was sixteen years old the township was so sparsely settled that it required the whole male population within a radius. of six miles to raise the frame of a small barn. There was not a buggy or other one-horse wheel vehicle in the township, and not more than two or three lumber waggons. "There was," says an authority before us, "no money in circulation; whisky was the only basis of value, and the only circulating medium, and no well-off farmer was without from six to twelve barrels in his cellar; not for his own use, of course, but obtained in exchange for his products." In education Colonel Clark has always taken a very deep interest, and when the common school act was passed in 1845, he was elected one of the first three commissioners for Townshend. He was the first elected reeve of the same township, and was re-elected several times afterwards to the same position. In 1852 Colonel Clark was appointed a justice of the peace, and has filled that office since, being known. as an efficient and most impartial magis-Colonel Clark has been a commistrate. sioned officer in the Canadian militia for the past thirty-eight years, and at present holds the rank of lieutenant of the regimental division of the North Riding of Norfolk. He married in 1833, Nancy, a daughter of the late Gabriel Culver, of the township of Windham, and the fruits of this marriage is a family of nine children.

Beach, Mahlon F., Iroquois, Ontario, was born on November 10th, 1833, in the township of Oxford, County of Grenville, Ontario. His father was Mahlon Beach, a son of David Beach, and was born in the state of New Jersey, on October 26th, 1793. He moved to the township of South Gower, County of Grenville, when a child, with his parents, who were among the first settlers in that district. The mother of Mr. Beach was Mercy May, daughter of Lyman Clothier, and she was born in the State of New York, on May 12th, 1798. When a child she moved to the township of Oxford, County of Grenville, with her parents, who built the first mills in what is now known as the village of Kemptville. M. F. Beach was educated at the common schools of his native place, and early in life set out to carve his own fortune. He first worked at the millwright business, and in 1856 went to the township of Winchester, County of Dundas, and there built a small steam saw mill. He then added other machinery and

tilk aBiC tittibe of ta or buildings, such as planing mills, sash and door factory, &c., and likewise flour mills. During the years of 1861-2-3-4, he engaged in square timber operations, taking the timber to Quebec. In the spring of 1883 he bought a water privilege on the St. Lawrence canal, and moved to Iroquois in June of the same year, and there commenced building a roller flour mill, which was put in operation in the fall of 1884. At Mr. Beach's place in Winchester, where he still continues the old business, he saw grow up what is now the village of West Winchester. Between the years 1861 and 1878 Mr. Beach was connected directly or indirectly in general store business, and he has always been successful in his undertakings. On the morning of July 12th, 1884, his mills at West Winchester were destroyed by fire, and a number of other valuable buildings, a quantity of sawn lumber, flour, wheat, &c., to the amount of about $75,000, were all swept away, without any insurance to cover the loss. This naturally crippled him financially; but nothing daunted, he commenced again, building up the mills, and in a much better manner than the former ones, except the flour mill, which is not yet rebuilt. His public career has been confined to municipal affairs; and he was warden of the united Counties of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry for the year 1873. Mr. Beach is a Liberal in politics, and in religion is a Quaker, but was brought up by Methodist parents. He married on October 18th, 1865, Louise C. Wickwire, of the township of Augusta, County of Grenville. There is a family of ten boys, all of whom are living. There was one girl, who is dead.

 \mathbf{br}

White, Richard, Montreal, was born in Quebec, in the year 1835, and has devoted the best years of his life to journalism. In 1853, in conjunction with his brother, now the Hon. Thomas White, minister of the Interior, he established the Peterborough Review. It espoused the cause of reform, as represented by those followers of Robert Baldwin, who, by the famous coalition of 1854, became allied and identified with the Conservatives. Richard White undertook the business, while his brother assumed the editorial management of the journal. In the beginning of 1865, the brothers White became proprietors of the Daily Spectator, of Hamilton, which under their control, attained the rank of the chief Conservative organ of Western Ontario. While it remained in their possession, it continued to exert a leading influence on public opinion, and its circulation steadily increased. The Craftsman, a Masonic magazine, was alsopublished by the firm. In 1870, on the retirement from journalism of Lowe and Chamberlin, Mr. Richard White, in com-pany with his brother, purchased the Montreal Gazette, the oldest newspaper in the Dominion (having been founded in 1778), and the foremost representative of Conservative principles in the province of Quebec. In their hands it achieved a marked prosperity, and, though its success was largely due to the rare literary and political gifts of the editor-in-chief, to-Richard White must be ascribed no slight share of the credit. In 1879, the name of the firm was changed to that of "The Gazette Printing Company," and Richard White was appointed managing director. The qualities which he displayed in the discharge of his important duties are thus set forth by the Marquis of Lorne in his work on "The Dominion of Canada":--" Active, pushing and popular in social and commercial circles, he has acquired the highest reputation for his conservative business methods and talented honourable management of this great publishing house. He has made it the best equipped and most complete establishment of the kind in Canada, and has introduced a thorough system of organization, which ensures the prompt and satisfactory execution of the largest orders, either for job, book, commercial or newspaper printing, lithographing, stereotyping, etc. Mr. White's great executive abilities and vast practical experience as a publisher are only equalled by the warm interest he has ever manifested in all measures best calculated to advance the permanent welfare and prosperity of the metropolis of the Dominion. Loyal to the great conservative principles of national policy, he is a recognized leader of opinion, while throughout commercial circles he has built up a fine advertising patronage for the Gazette, and the paper is now in every respect a source of credit to its owners and the city wherein it has already celebrated its first centenary of existence." Those who have paid a visit to the Gazette printing establishment will know that the description just quoted is perfectly accurate. No office in the Dominion has turned out better work of all kinds, and such publications as the Royal Society's "Transactions," the volume of "Canadian Economics," consisting of papers read before the British Association at Montreal, and Bourinot's "Parliamentary Procedure, would reflect no discredit on any of the great publishing houses of either hemis-

In addition to the daily and weekly editions of the Gazette, the company publishes the Legal News, the Montreal Law Reports, the Canada Medical and Surgical Journal, and the Educational Record. This extensive and varied business has now been under Richard White's constant supervision for sixteen years—years of steady progress, the reward of assiduity, foresight and integrity. One feature in this uninterrupted success is especially worthy of note—the rare changes in the large staff of employees. Of these the most important have been associated with the office since Mr. White took charge of it. There could be no more forcible or practical evidence of the esteem in which he is held—esteem, moreover, of which he is kept in rememberance by a little museum of souvenirs, one of which is a fine oil portrait of himself. Of his popularity with the larger community outside of the Gazette office his election in 1886 as one of the aldermen for the important west ward, is sufficient indication. Until the present year Mr. White had firmly declined all invitations to enter public But in 1885, on his return from England, he found the city a prey to a terrible epidemic of small-pox. The usual tourist travel through the city was suspended. Business of all kinds was at a stand-still. The community was in a state of dismay, bordering on despair, while, as a crowning calamity, a large portion of the people set themselves obstinately against vaccination. A proper health organization was urgently needed. It was not a time to hesitate, or make excuses. So, when Mr. White was asked to serve, he felt it to be a patriotic and civic duty to accept the responsibility. He laboured daily with his colleagues till the plague was stayed, and would then have gladly retired to private life. But those who had witnessed his zeal and efficiency in the hour of need, and recognized the benefits that the city had derived from his executive talents were not willing to lose his services. A requisition, numerously signed by the most influential residents in the west ward, was a fresh challenge to his public spirit, and Mr. White yielded to the solicitations Neither did they desert of his friends. him. The fight was valiantly fought on both sides, and though his oppnent was an honourable man, an alderman of three years' standing, Mr. White won the day by a majority of thirty-one. When the result of the poll was known, amid much enthusiasm, the newly elected alderman thanked his

they had stood by him so steadfastly, he would omit no effort to fulfil the expectations that they had formed of him. William Cassils, president of the Municipal Reform Association, said that in honouring Mr. White the electors had honoured themselves. It was a hopeful sign for Montreal when gentlemen of his character, ability and energy took an interest in civic administration. Mr. White's accession to municipal office was regarded with no less favour in the other wards, the general opinion being that his admission to the council would be a real gain to the city. Mr. White wields "the pen of a ready writer," is a fluent and effective speaker, and possesses the advantage, which, for a public man in the Province of Quebec, is of no slight importance, of being able to address an audience in French and English. Like most successful men, he married early, his wife, formerly Jean Riddle, a daughter of John Riddle, for many years a well-known and much respected citizen of Montreal. His eldest son, W. J. White, B.A., B.C.L., is a member of the firm of Busteed & White, advocates, Montreal. His second son, Smeaton White, is associated with the business department of the Gazette office.

Weatherhead, George Henry, Mayor of Brockville, Ont., was born on the 10th of April, 1841, at Port Elmsley, County of Lanark, Ont. He is a son of Alexander and Mary Weatherhead, his father being one of the first settlers in the township of North Elmsley, where he carried on a large lumber business, and in connection with his brother, William L. Weatherhead, a large forwarding business from Perth to Montreal. These two men did much towards opening up that part of the country at that early time. In 1838 they dissolved partnership, Alexander purchasing the adjoining lot to the village, and erecting a saw mill, a stave mill, and a woollen factory thereon. These he ran for several years, retiring from business in 1857. He then rented the mills, but through the carelessness of the night-watchman the property was destroyed by fire, with no insurance. This was a heavy blow to Mr. Weatherhead, for the loss was no less than $30,000. Though then in his sixtieth year, he at once commenced to build up the saw mill portion of the property, and after doing so he was obliged to mortgage the property for a large amount to purchase limits to supply the mill with logs, but during the first year after the mill was completed, he contracted faithful supporters and promised that as a heavy cold, and from the effects of it died

n a so y cohi a 18 ci T

in

fir K

inį

be Mı

est

nes

Ju

of

bui

of

in

yea

Mu

able

man

in 1862, leaving a family of eight children, five boys and three girls, our subject being the oldest and not quite twenty-one years of age. George Henry Weatherhead had received as good an education as was to be had at his native place, for in those early days the country did not abound with High schools and colleges as it does now. Nevertheless, he was fairly well equipped in this regard, and assumed the responsibility of taking care of a large family, the youngest being only four years of age. The business was badly disorganised by his father's illness, but the young man's perseverance would have overcome the diffficulties, had he not met with a serious accident, on the 21st June, 1863, in the saw mill, losing his foot at the instep. This was a very serious set-back; but he was able in the following year to keep books for H. N.Sherwood, who owned the Port Elmsley mills, and in 1865, made arrangements with his father's creditors, and saved the homestead and one hundred acres of land, which kept the family together, In 1866, Mr. Weatherhead went to the town of Perth, as a clerk in a general store, where he remained nearly four years. His health then failed him, he being kept too closely confined. He again returned home, not being able to do any manual labor; yet not satisfied to remain idle, he at once commenced to look up a contract for taking out lumber, which he succeeded in getting; and during the winter of 1870, he took out 7,000 logs, and the year following 5,000, doing well with this contract, and at the same time getting back his health. He was afterwards engaged by a lumber firm to cull lumber, and in March, 1872, was sent to Brockville in that capacity. In 1873, he went into company with Thos. Kearns in the retail lumber business; in 1874, they took another partner into the firm,-which then became known as "T. Kearns & Co"-but the business not proving very profitable, they sold out in October, 1875. In November of the same year, Mr. Weatherhead purchased the half interest of the general insurance and loan business carried on by J. T. White; and in June, 1881, he bought Mr. White's share of the business and has kept year by year building up the same, and to-day has one of the best insurance and loan businesses in Eastern Ontario. He has been eight years secretary-treasurer of the Brockville Mutual Building Society, which terminates in April, 1866, it being a ten years terminable society. This society having been managed so well, Mr. Weatherhead had no

he

ecta-

Wil-

ipal

ring

em-

real

lity

ain-

uni-

our

hion

ncil

hite

is a

8868

ı in

im-

nce

P88-

er-

lile,

uch

lest

a

ite,

on,

18i-

the

ву, of

he

ied ecerom lid

he

еy

ng

ng acral Hety e.d, 0.

trouble in establishing a permanent society, known as the Brockville Loan & Savings Company, with a capital of $200,000, and at the first board meeting he was chosen manager. Mr. Weatherhead holds and has held several important offices. He has been secretary-treasurer of the Brockville Mutual Building Society from 1878 to the present time; is, as we have seen, manager of the Brockville Loan & Savings Company; is a director and stockholder in the Brockville, West Port & Sault Ste. Marie Railway Company; and was elected mayor of Brockville for the year 1866. He joined the Masonic body in 1870, and is now a past master; also a Royal Arch Mason; and is M. W. of Rose Croix chapter, No. 14. He has belonged to the Church of England from his youth, and is church warden of St. Peter's church, at Brockville. He joined the Oddfellows in 1873, and has passed through all the chairs, and held the office of district deputy of the St. Lawrence district.. He married in March, 1872, Maggie Bell Steele, of Perth, Ontario, and has issue, four boys and two girls. Two boys died in infancy.

Brereton, Charles Herbert, Bethany, M.D., M.P.P. for East Durham, Onwas born in the township of West Gwilliambury, Simcoe county, in January, 1845. He is a son of Cloudsle S., and Charlotte (Fisher) Brereton. Mr. Brereton was born in Norfolk, England, and early in life came to Canada, settling in the township of West Gwilliambury. Here he engaged, first as a general merchant, and afterwards as a farmer, which occupation he followed until 1874, when he died, leaving six of a family, the subject of this sketch being the eldest son. We may add, that during the Mackenzie excitement he raised a company of volunteers, and placed them at the service of Sir Allan MacNab, and he used to relate many interesting incidents of that time. Charles H. Brereton received a sound education, and completed his studies at the Bradford Grammar school. At the age of nineteen he began to study medicine with Dr. T. C. Schofield, now of Toronto, and then of Bond Head, Simcoe county, and after two years entered the Rolph School of Medicine, and graduated at the age of twenty-three. After graduating he removed to the village of Bethany, Durham county, where he commenced to practice, and where he has remained ever since. Dr. Brereton was first lieutenant of the Durham Field Battery for a number of years, and then resigned. In 1881, upon the death of the late John Rosevear, he contested the vacant seat with Mr. Russel, the Reform candidate, and defeated him by the large majority of 227 votes. He was re-elected in 1883, defeating Mr. Elliott, warden of the counties of Durham and Northumberland, Dr. Brereton is a by 218 of a majority. member of the Freemason lodge No. 145, of Millbrooke, and also belongs to the Odd-In politics he has been always a staunch Conservative, and an energetic worker. In religion he adheres to the Church of England. He married, in 1876, Eliza, daughter of Thomas Proctor, of the township of West Gwilliambury, and has issue, five children. Dr. Brereton, we may add, is a descendant of the celebrated Admiral Brereton, whose name is so prominently connected with the stirring history of 1812-15. He is an energetic representative and a useful member, and he makes it a rule to attend to his own affairs, but if persons come to a conflict of opinion with him, he is well able to bear his portion of the brunt. Dr. Brereton has been a very successful practitioner, and in the village in which he resides is well known and greatly respected.

Wilkie, Daniel Robert, Toronto, Cashier of the Imperial Bank of Canada, was born at Quebec, on the 17th December, 1846. He is a son of the late Daniel Wilkie, M.A., who was for many years rector of the Quebec High school, and Angelique, daughter of John Graddon, of Quebec. D. R. Wilkie was educated at the Quebec High school, and at Morrin College, prosecuting his studies for several years at the latter institution. Upon completing his educational course, he entered upon a business career, joining the staff of the Quebec Bank, on the 18th May, 1862, and in the same year he became assistant accountant of that institution. In 1867, he became accountant of the Montreal branch of the bank; in the same year he was transferred to St. Catharines, Ont., as manager of the branch in that place; and in 1872, became manager of the Toronto branch. He accepted the position of cashier of the Imperial Bank of Canada, when that bank was organized in March, 1875, and continues in that capacity. Mr. Wilkie is a vice-president of St. Andrew's Society of Toronto; a member of the council of the Board of Trade, and a director of several commercial undertakings. He is a strong advocate of universal free trade, involving protection to native industries and interests, so long as rival communities maintain hostile tariffs. He married in 1872, Sarah Caroline, third daughter of the late Hon. J. R. Benson, senator, of St. Catharines. Mr. Wilkie served for several years in the Stadacona Rifles, 8th batt., volunteers. In banking, as in commercial circles, the repute of Mr. Wilkie stands very high, and no one who knows has any hesitation in attributing to him a great measure of the present excellent status attained by the Imperial Bank. He is a man of marked energy and enterprise; is exceedingly quick to penetrate a situation. and to see wherein lie the interests of his bank, and where the same are safe; but his whole career has been tempered by prudent restraint and caution; while the bank itself is as we see it stated in another quarter, in the best sense "a conservative institution."

Abbott, Hon. John Joseph Caldwell, Montreal, M.P. for Argenteuil, Quebec, was born at St. Andrew's, County of Argenteuil, Lower Canada, on the 12th March, 1821. He is a son of the Rev. Joseph Abbott, M.A., first Anglican incumbent of St. Andrew's, who emigrated to this country from England in 1818, as a missionary, and who, during his long residence in Canada, added considerably to the literary activity of the country. He married Harriet, daughter of the Rev. Richard Bradford, first rector of Chatham, Argenteuil county. The first fruit of this union was the subject of this sketch. Abbott was carefully trained at St. Andrew's with a view to a university course, and in due time he was sent to Montreal, entering McGill college. At this institution he greatly distinguished himself for his brilliancy, soundness and industry, and he graduated therefrom as a B.C.L. He soon afterwards entered upon the study of law, and in October, 1847, was called to the bar of Lower Canada. Upon commercial law he became one of the leading authorities of the country, and he had not been long in practice before he established for himself the reputation of a wise and capable counsellor. In 1859, he first entered political life as representative for Argenteuil in the Canadian Assembly, and this constituency he represented till the union, when he was returned for the House of Commons. From 1874 to 1880 he was out of public life, but since that time he has occupied his seat. The greatest legislative work in the career of Mr. Abbott, is his celebrated Insolvent Act of 1864; for although there has been much legislation since affecting the question, the principles laid down in that measure have been the charts by which all since have proceeded. This established the reputation of Mr. Abbott; and he published a Manual, oud aloob CavCtRB es wBN

with ample notes, describing his act. Busi-Wilkie ness men flocked to his office to consult dacona him on a measure which they believed no nking. one else could so well elucidate, and naturof Mr. ally enough, out of this his legal practice e who grew to enormous proportions. Mr. Abbott. ing to the reader need hardly be reminded, was cellent . He prise ; the legal adviser of Sir Hugh Allan in the negotiations anent the Pacific Railway; and it was the confidential clerk of Mr. Abbott ation. who purloined the private correspondence, of his the publication of which created such a but his scandal, and brought about the overthrow udent of Sir John A. Macdonald's government. For a short period, in 1862, Mr. Abbott itself ter, in held the position of solicitor-general in the tion." Sandfield Macdonald-Sicotte administration; caldand prior to his acceptance of that office he , Quewas created a Q.C. Mr. Abbott has added hty of imperishable fame to his legal reputation 12th Rev. by his Jury Law Consolidation Act for Lower Canada; and another important hcummeasure of his was the Bill for Collecting o this Judicial and Registration Fees by Stamps. mis-He is likewise the author of various other dence important public measures. Mr. Abbott literhas been entrusted with many important affairs of a national character. It will be remembered that he went to England, in 1879, with the Hon. H. L. Langevin, on rried chard rgennion the mission which resulted in the dismissal J. C. of Lieutenant-Governor Luc Letellier de St. rew's Altogether, this man's career has hd in been a splendid success, and although he ering holds no office in political circles, his is reatone of the foremost minds in Canada. He ncy, married, in 1849, Mary, daughter of the ated very Rev. James G. Bethune, D.D., late ards dean of Montreal. Octoower came oun-

ctice

epu-

In

pre-dian

pre-

rned

4 to

ince

The

Mr.

t of

uch

the

ave

ave

tion

nal.

Montizambert, Charles E., Lieut.-Colonel, commandant of the Royal School of Artillery, Quebec, was born at Quebec, in 1841. He is a son of Edward Louis Montizambert, late law clerk of the Senate, and Miss Bowen, daughter of the late Chief-Justice Bowen Col. Montizambert is descended from an old French family, who came to this country in 1635, and, as will be seen by reference to the archives of Canada, an ancestor of his, M. de Montizambert, was given command of the first volunteer company ever raised in Canada. Col. Montizambert counts among his ancestors Pierre Boucher, first governor of Three Rivers, one of whose sons took the name of Boucher de Montizambert, from the family estate in France. Some of the latter's sons were officers in the French army. The Boucher de Boucherville and Boucher de Nivervilles are branches of the same family.

On the maternal side two of the brothers of Colonel Montizambert's grandmother were English officers in the 7th Fusiliers. of them was killed at the taking of Martinique. An uncle of Col. Montizambert, Major Montizambert, of the 10th Foot, was killed while leading his men at the storming of Mooltan; whence it will be seen that the subject of this sketch descends, on both sides, from a family of soldiers. Charles E. Montizambert was educated at Toronto for commercial pursuits, but he showed very early a decided taste for military life which caused him to enter with great zest into the volunteer movement, serving for many years as captain and adjutant of the Quebec Volunteer Garrison artillery. When A and B Batteries were organized, in 1871, he was appointed major in command of B Battery, with brevet rank as lieut.-colonel, under Colonel (now General) Strange. On the latter's retirement, Major Montizambert became lieut.-colonel and commandant of B Battery, at the Quebec citadel, but moved with the battery to Kingston six years ago. He was second in command of the Wimbleton team on one occasion, and was subsequently attached for several months at Woolwich for artillery instruction. Col. Montizambert commanded under Colonel Strange during the labour riots in Quebec some years ago. He married a daughter of the late James Gibb, a wealthy merchant of Quebec. The Montizamberts, though originally Roman catholics, are now adherents of the Angican Church.

Martin, Rev. N. H., Chatham, Ontario, was born in Somersetshire, England, His father was a clergyman of the Church of England. N. H. Martin was educated at St. Paul's School, Stony Stratford, and carried off from that institution the highest prizes for mathematics and English literature. He has been pastor for the past seven years of Christ Church, Chatham, and during that time has been the recipient of many testimonials and addresses, from the congregation, the Sabbath schools, curling clubs, and various other societies. This popular, energetic and able pastor was elected grandmaster of the I.O.O.F. of Ontario, at the session of the Grand Lodge in Hamilton, in August, 1885; and this position he now occupies. He married in October, 1884, Miss Elliott, daughter of the Rev. F. G. Elliott, rector of St. John's Church, Sandwich, and a member of one of the oldest and most respected families in the County of Essex.

Millichamp, Wallace, Toronto, Ont., was born at the Lozells, Birmingham, England, on the 27th day of May, 1839. His father, Joseph Millichamp, removed to the United States, in 1842, and settled in St. Clair, Mich., where he built the first furniture factory in the place, and where the family resided until 1856, when he removed to Toronto. He removed to Rochester, in 1862, and died there in 1883, at the advanced age of seventy-eight years. During the residence of Joseph Millichamp in Birmingham, he was an official member of the Congregational church of the Rev. John Angell James, and for many years was superintendent of the Sunday-school. He also took a great interest in all church work, and was connected in church fellowship with Bond street Congregational church, in this city, under the pastorate of Rev. Mr. Marling. His mother, Catherine Pool Wainwright, who survives her husband, has now reached/the age of seventy-two, and has all her faculties unimpaired, so much so that she undertook, a short time ago, to visit her daughter in Galveston, Texas, a journey of over five thousand miles in extent, and returned mproved in health and spirits. The subject of our sketch is one of a family of tent children, seven sons and three daughters, of which family he is the third. From early life he developed signs which convinced all interested that he was of a mechanical turn of mind, and would make his mark in life, and the results have fully justified this prediction, for we find that in 1855, he came to Toronto to assist his uncle in the brass-finishing and plumbing trade. This business having been disposed of, he determined to learn the gold and silver plating, and during his apprenticeship, devoted his evenings to the study of such subjects as were necessary for his calling. In 1864, the young man began business for himself, at No. 80 Queen street west, and was amply rewarded with what is always in store for energy and intelligence-success; and in his case the success was far beyond the highest expectations of his friends or himself. He also added "house furnishings" to his business of plating, which was now requiring a large amount of time and attention. During his stay on Queen street, he pulled down the old premises and built a large block of stores, still keeping his manufactory at the back, but this grew too small, and he built another factory, at No. 14 King street east. This also grew too small, and, after three years, he was compelled to remove to the large premises now occupied by him, and known throughout the city and country as "Millichamp's Buildings," situated on Adelaide street east, near the Post Office, under the firm name of W. Millichamp & Co., manufacturers of plain, ornamental, and fancy show cases, gold and silver plating. The business is owned by Wallace Millichamp alone, the company being only a formal designation. The present magnificent buildings, at the above place, were erected by Mr. Millichamp, at considerable cost, in 1875, but several modern improvements were made in 1885. Mr. Millichamp is now enrolled on the assessors' lists as being one of the fifth largest taxpayers in Toronto. He has never neglected the important duty of guarding the city's interests; for, as early as 1858, we find him taking an active part in political struggles under the reform banner, and many of the leading men of the party can bear witness to the zeal with which he fought their battles. He proved his unselfishness by positively refusing office of any kind, preferring to be a simple private in the ranks of the people, until the year 1878, when he accepted the nomination for the office of school trustee, for the ward of St. John, believing that by so doing he could advance a cause which had, with that of temperance, been one of the great objects of his life. After a sharp and severe contest, he was defeated by the late Charles Fisher, the majority being very small. Notwithstanding his strong and pronounced support of liberal principles, both in parliamentary and municipal affairs, when the general elections took place, in 1878, and the trade question was the all-absorbing topic, he felt it his duty to support the national policy, believing it to be for the best interests of Canada to foster and encourage home manufactures, and he has continued a supporter of the same, being an active official of the Dominion Manufacturers' Association. In the year 1882, his friends brought him out as "the people's candidate" in St. James' ward for aldermanic honours, and the record of the votes for that year show how highly the citizens esteemed their standard bearer. Duly appreciating his services as alderman for 1883, they nominated and elected him by acclamation for 1884, and their labour was not lost, as he made a fight for the people on the water works engine question that will long be remembered, although the popular vote of the people did not endorse the stand he took in this matter. During the two terms of aldermanic office, he served as a member of the markets and health committees, and the fire and gas com-

in

ch

T

bι

in

of

 \mathbf{m}

of

D

ac

an

Ĺļ

E

St

is

 \mathbf{R}

an

dia

18

bu

an

un

M

on

Su

Th

in

da

Bla

me

nes

gra

his

wh

wh

Ru

mi

lan

Ma

Ru

the

erf

in :

beg

bus

reti

tion

kno the

he

tion

and

of l

Mr.

Col

mo

He

mittees, also the exhibition committee. During one term, he filled the responsible post of chairman of the water works department. The demands on his time, from family and business circles, did not prevent him assisting in the organization and continuance of the many societies which help to unite men. Mr. Millichamp is an active member of the Board of Trade, an official of the Dominion Manufacturers' Association, an active member of St. Andrew's lodge, A.F. and A.M., Toronto lodge of Odd Fellows, L. O. lodge 275, Kent lodge, No. 3, Sons of England, Excelsior lodge United Workmen, St. George's Society, and many others. is also an ex-member of the Queen's Own Rifles. He has pronounced religious views, and is a member of the Wesleyan or Methodist church of Canada. On the 3rd April, 1862, Mr. Millichamp married Mary Garbutt, of Toronto, and ten children, five sons and five daughters, are the result of this union.

ide

ler

o.,

nd

g. il-

ly fi.

re

le

e-

ap as in a-

 \mathbf{n}

ie n

h d e e

rflff

Rutherford, David Bell, M.D., Morrisburg, was born in Belleville, Ontario, on December 22nd, 1856, his parents being Susan Magdalen Stephenson Blaind, and Thomas Rutherford. His mother was born in Dumfries, Scotland, in 1823, and was the daughter of William K. Blaind and Alicia Blaind. His father was one of the Blainds, merchants and shippers, who failed in business, after which our subject's maternal grandfather came to Canada (1832), with all his family, excepting our subject's mother, who followed in 1848, settling in Belleville, where they permanently resided. Thomas Rutherford was born in Lanton, about two miles from Jedburgh, Roxburghshire, Scotland, on October 5th, 1815. His mother was Mary Bell, of Cessford, who, marrying D. B. Rutherford, paternal grandfather, lived thenceforth at Lanton where Thomas Ruth-Thomas came to Canada erford was born. in 1842, and settled in Belleville, where he began contracting for buildings, in which business he continued successfully, until he retired in 1876. Dr. Rutherford's education was obtained first in the common school, known in Belleville as the Hospital school, then he went to the Grammar school, where he received most of his preliminary education, Alexander Burden being the preceptor, and who for thirty years filled the position of head master. From 1873 to 1877 inclusive, Mr. Rutherford attended the Commercial College and Albert University, Belleville, working for his father during the summer months, or contracting upon his own account. He began the study of medicine at Queen's | of the London Loan Company.

University, Kingston, in 1877, and had a very creditable course in that institution. He was appointed demonstrator of anatomy to the class of 1880 and 1881; was chosen prize director for the Ontario Medical Council; was elected first vice-president of his alma mater society, and obtained by professional competition the house surgeonship of Kingston General Hospital, 1881 and 1882. Dr. Rutherford went to Morrisburgh, in June of 1882, and at that place he has since been practising his profession. Dr. Rutherford served for three years in the 15th batallion, A.S.I., as full private in the rear ranks, refusing promotion. He has travelled through Western Canada very thoroughly, as far as Kicking Horse Pass, both by rail and on foot. Through his industry, his natural brilliancy, and through the learning for which he enjoys such high local repute, Dr. Rutherford is rapidly establishing for himself a handsome practice. He is a Presbyterian, and is unmarried.

Murray, Adam, London, Ontario, County Treasurer of Middlesex, was born on August 1st, 1808, at Liddesdale, Roxburghshire, Scotland, and is a son of Charles and Elizabeth (Armstrong) Murray, both of the same place. He received his elementary educational instruction at the place of his birth, but emigrating to the colonies at an early age, he completed his studies at the Grammar schools of St. John, N.B., and Fredericton, the capital of the same province. Mr. Murray shortly afterwards moved westward, and he was appointed Inspector of schools for the township of Westminster, County of Middlesex. In 1857, he was appointed county treasurer, and has filled that office since, to the thorough satisfaction of the public. Mr. Murray gives his allegiance to Presbyterianism, and joined the first Presbyterian church, in the City of London, and has continued his connection with it since. In politics he has always been a Reformer, and he gave his zealous support to Robert Baldwin, and to the party which was known as the Baldwin reformers, continuing his allegiance to the same party under its changed appellation. But Mr. Murray has not hungered after political distinction; his life. however, has been a useful, industrious and honourable one, and his character stands the highest for integrity. He married, on the 19th of October, 1835, Jane Beattie, of Dumfriesshire, Scotland. Charles Murray, his son, was at one time manager of the Federal Bank, London, and is now manager

Reade, John, Montreal, was born at Ballyshannon, County Donegal, Ireland, on the 13th November, 1837. He was educated at Portora Royal School, Enniskillen, and Queen's College, Belfast. He came to Canada in 1856, and assisted by some friends, established the Montreal Literary Magazine, which, though favourably received by the press, failed for want of support from the public. Mr. Reade afterwards became associated for a time with the Montreal Gazette, and passed some years between journalism and private tui-tion. In 1859 he began the study of law, passing the preliminary examination, but learning that the rectorship of Lachute College was vacant, he applied for the situation, which he obtained, retaining the same for three years. During this time he was able to pursue the study of theology, and in 1864-5 was ordained by Bishop Fulford as a clergyman, and in that capacity served in the eastern townships (see Bibliotheca Canadensis). In 1868-9, Mr. Reade had charge of a Church of England journal in Montreal, and renewed his connection with the press of the latter city, which connection has since continued. For the last sixteen years, with the exception of an interval of a year or so spent in the country, Mr. Reade has been connected with the Montreal Gazette. Since 1874 he has been regularly on its staff as literary and assistant general editor. But it is as an author, as the writer of verse, that Mr. Reade has the greatest claim upon the biographer. Among his contributions to the higher class literature may be mentioned, "The Prophecy of Merlin and other poems," Dawson Brothers, 1870. Since the appearance of this volume, Mr. Reade has written more than enough to make another book, which it is hoped the public will shortly see. Our author has also written a number of translations, including passages from the Greek of Homer, Æschylus, Sophocles, Eurpides, Pindar and Lucian; from the Latin of Horace, Ovid, Virgil, &c.; from the French of Lamartine, Beranger, André Chénier, Victor Arnault; and of Canadian poets, Madame Glendonwyn (Miss Chauveau), Dr. Hubert LaRue, F. R. Angers, &c.; from the German of Herder, Schiller, Koerner, Heine, &c.; and from the Italian of Leopardi, Caterina Franceschi, Alfieri, &c. Some of the latter translations were highly commended in the Eco d'Italia, of New York. Mr. Reade has also written some tales:-"Winty Dane's Transformation, "The De Chalneys," "The Ecclestons,"

&c. He has contributed either prose or verse to every magazine or review that has been started in Canada during the last thirty years; and he purposes publishing soon a volume of essays on subjects connected with Canadian history, literature, &c. Some of these were papers read before the Montreal Athenæum, Kuklos Club, Literary and Historical Society of Quebec (of which Mr. Reade is an honorary member), the Royal Society, &c. Others were delivered as lectures, and others contributed to magazines, while several have not been in any way made known to the public. Among the collection are these: "Were the ancient Britains savage or civilized?" "Thomas D'Arcy McGee as a poet," "Exploration before Columbus." "History in geographical names," "The origin of Canadian geographical names," "Origin and early history of the alphabet," "The Half-breed," "Language as indicating conquest," "Brit-ish Canada in the last century," "Some curious kinships—an essay in philology," "The Ethnology of Canada," and a critical and historical sketch of "Canadian Literature." This work will probably be published next fall. Some of Mr. Reade's historical papers have been translated into French. One of them, a review of Abbé Desmazure's admirable biography of Abbé Taillon, author of the "Histoire de la Colonie Française," and quite a library of other works, was translated and published in Paris as a small volume. Of the work of Mr. Reade there has been but the one verdict by all the critics, namely, that it is fine and true, exhibiting all those varieties of excellence that go to make verse imperishable. Writing to Mr. Reade of the volume referred to, the late William Cullen Bryant said: "It is no small merit in my eyes that you have avoided that misty phraseology in which so many poets of the day are accustomed to wrap up their reflections, and that you clothe yours in a transparent, luminous diction." John J. Whittier describes "Dominion Day" as "a fine outburst of patriotic song," and bestows general praise upon Mr. Reade's work. A like commendation came to the author from Longfellow. But hosts of competent critics have employed their pens in praise of Mr. Reade's work, and the paper by L'Abbé Verreau, in the Revue de Montreal, is a comprehensive tribute to the achievements of our author. We reproduce the following stanzas, "Thalatta, Thalatta," for they exhibit so many qualities, grace, ease, fervour and the lyrical lament:-

A

w.

su G:

in

in

he

of

 $d\mathbf{r}$

he

Dr is

the

wh

Fe

861

of

cie

ber

cia

act

ose or at has thirty oon a l with me of Monerarv which , the vered nagaany nong cient omas ation geohised," Britome gу, ical era-phi-

ubhisnto bbé bbé Coher ris Mr.

lict

 $\mathbf{n}\mathbf{d}$

elle. ed d: ou in 18-

us

In my ear is the moan of the pines-in my heart is the song of the sea

And I feel his salt breath on my face as he showers his kisses on me; And I hear the wild scream of the gulls, as they answer the call of the tide, And I watch the fair sails as they glisten like gems on the breast of a bride.

From the rock where I stand to the sun is a pathway of sapphire and gold,

Like a waif of those Patmian visions that rapt the lone seer of old : And it seems to my soul like an omen that calls me far over the sea-But I think of a little white cottage and one that is dearest to me.

Westward ho! Far away to the East is a cottage that looks to the shore-

Though each drop in the sea were a tear, as it was can see it no more

For the heart of its pride with the flowers of the "Vale of the Shadow" reclines, And—hushed is the song of the sea and hoarse is the moan of the pines.

This is at once true to nature and the heart of humanity, without which qualities death must wait upon all verse. How accurately the discerning eye of Mr. Bryant judged of the quality of such work, for if ever diction was transparent and luminous, the above surely is, and like the above is all of Mr. Reade's verse. We await the promised volume with much expectation.

Melville, Thomas R., Mayor of Prescott, Ontario, was born at Prescott, on December 19th, 1847. His father, Thomas Melville, was a sea captain for many years. Abandoning the salt water, he came to Canada, and located at Prescott, Ontario, where he followed mercantile pursuits. The subject of this sketch was educated at the Grammar school in his native town. Leaving school at the age of fifteen, he embarked in the printing business, but being in poor health, he abandoned this pursuit at the end of two years, and commenced the study of drugs and medicines. At the age of twenty he purchased the drug business of the late Dr. Andrew Melville, of Prescott, which he is still conducting. He was connected with the Prescott Garrison artillery company, which was in active service during the Fenian troubles of 1866. During the past seven years he has been secretary-treasurer of the Electoral District Agricultural Society of South Grenville, and for a number of years secretary of the Reform Association of the same county. He took an active part in organizing the Prescott Oddfellows lodge, which is now one of the most prosperous in Canada. In his earlier years he was prominently connected with all the local athletic associations and rowing clubs, which in those days gave the old town of Prescott an enviable position in the athletic world. At the age of twenty-one he was elected a member of the town council, which position he held for twelve years. He was elected mayor in 1885, and again returned by acclamation in 1886. A staunch Liberal in politics, he has been an active worker in all political contests.

Carman, Robert Baldwin, Cornwall, Junior Judge of the County Court of the United Counties of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry, was born at Iroquois, in the County of Dundas, on the 23rd day of October, A.D. 1843. He is a son of U. E. loyalists on both sides of the house; his father being Philip Carman, who died in May, 1875, his mother, Emmeline, daughter of Peter Shaver, or Schaffer, who represented the County of Dundas for a long period of years between 1820 and 1840. Judge Carman was educated at Matilda County Grammar school, and at Belleville seminary, afterwards Albert College. He concluded his course in arts at Albert College, Belleville, in 1866, and received his degree of B.A. from Albert University in 1867, and that of M.A. in 1868. In 1866 and 1867 he attended Lawrence Scientific school in connection with Harvard University, Boston, taking while there a course of chemistry under Prof. Gibbs, and attending a course of lectures by Prof. Agassiz on zoology, and a course by Prof. Gray on botany. Upon his return from Boston he acted as professor of chemistry in Albert University for four years, and then began the study of law, taking his barrister's degree in 1873. He began practice in Cornwall, in the same year, and was appointed deputy judge of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry in 1879, and junior judge on March 23rd, 1883. He was a member of the volunteer corps at Belleville, and was at Prescott during the Fenian raid, in 1866, acting as sergeant. Judge Carman is a Freemason and an Orangeman, having joined both of these orders when very young, and has also been connected with the Sons of Temperance and with the Good Templars. Judge Carman is a member of the Church of England. He was brought up an Episcopal Methodist, but never connected himself with that Judge Carman was appointed a church. revising officer under the Dominion Franchise Act. He married, on June 1st, 1872, Cecilia L. Halet.

Mulholland, Robert, Cobourg, Ontario, M.P.P. for West Northumberland, was born in the township of Haldimand, near Cobourg, Ont., on the 13th of October, 1838. He is a son of John and Mary Jane (Beatty) Mulholland, who came to Canada from the north of Ireland. After the arrival of John Mulholland in Canada, he settled in the township of Haldimand, and was one of the pioneers of that place. He bought 100 acres, and settled down to the life of a farmer, which occupation he followed until 1876, when he retired, and gave his attention to the duties of magistrate, to which office he had been appointed. He is a man of excellent judgment, and a high character for integrity, and he gives much of his time to settling questions between persons who appeal to him as arbitrator. Mrs. Mulholland died, and Mr. Mulholland again married Mrs. McNulty, a lady of Scottish birth, by whom he had two of a family. By his first marriage there were five of a family, the subject of this sketch being the second son. Robert Mulholland received a sound education, and finished his studies at the Commercial College, Oswego, N.Y. After leaving the common school, at the age of fifteen, he entered mercantile life, and, in 1853, went into the employ of the late Robert Harston, P.M. and general merchant, of Baltimore, where he remained for three years, during which time Mr. Harston had opened a branch store at Rosemeath, Northumberland, and Mr. Mulholland was placed in charge of the same. He succeeded the late Rev. William Case as postmaster of that place, and at that time this was the only post office in the township. In 1857, his time being expired with Mr. Harston, Mr. Mulholland entered into partnership with Alexander Kennedy, and purchased the business of John S. Grafton, in the adjoining village of Alderville, and engaged in general merchandise, under the name of Kennedy & Mulholland, which firm continued for eight years, when it dissolved, and the business was sold out. Mr. Mulholland then removed to the town of Cobourg, where he formed a partnership with Peter Brown, in a general hardware and grocery business, under the firm name of Mulholland & Brown. This business continued until 1875, and during which time he formed a partnership in the dry goods trade with William Graham, under the firm name of Graham & Mulholland, purchasing the business of Minaker & Bro., of the same town. This business was conducted for a year, when Mr. Mulholland sold his interest to D. H. Minaker. In 1873, the firm of Mulholland & Brown purchased the hard-ware business of John Mulligan, of Port Hope, and Mr. Brown took the management. of this branch. Mr. Brown, however, a short time afterwards sold out his interest in the Cobourg business to Mr. Mulholland, who carried it on until 1881, when he disposed of it, and has since devoted his time in winding it up. Although he has been offered and refused partnership in wholesale houses in Toronto, he has not yet decided to again re-enter mercantile life. His interest in the Port Hope establishment he sold to his son, Robert Alexander, who carries the business on under the old firm name of Mulholland & Brown. In 1875, Mr. Mulholland was elected to the town council of Cobourg, and remained in the council for four years, during two of which he was chairman of the finance committee. He retired from the council in 1879, and was appointed a member of the board of commissioners of the Town Trust, and is now chairman of the board. In 1883, he contested West Northumberland for the legislature, having received the unanimous nomination at the convention of the Liberal-Conservatives held at Cobourg. He succeeded in defeating his opponent, John C. Field, ex-M.P.P., the Reform candidate, by a majority of sixty votes, although the seat had been held for eight years by the Reform party. Mr. Mulholland has been a director of the Cobourg Ladies' College, and also of the Canada Agricultural Insurance Company. He has always been a Liberal-Couservative, and has taken an active part in the formation of the Liberal-Conservative Association in his riding, being a warm supporter of the N.P. and the C.P.R. measures of Sir John A. Macdonald. Mr. Mulholland invested considerably in North-West lands, and was fortunate enough to come out a gainer at the time of the "boom." During 1881 he travelled throughout England, Ireland and Scotland, in company with Mrs. Mulholland and Miss Ida, his daughter, visiting all points of historic interest. In religion he is a Presbyterian, and has been one of the managers of the Cobourg Presbyterian Church for twelve years. He married, in 1859, Mary Kennedy, sister of Alexander Kennedy, J.P., his late partner, by whom he has three of a family: John Mulholland, the second son, is now receiving his education in Victoria University, in Cobourg; the eldest having succeeded to

HOCS

J d M I m 18

m

th th 18

wa Si

re

th

er: his

ing it his father's business in Port Hope. Mr. Mulholland is very much devoted to his public duties, and the same energy and alertness which have been manifest throughout his business career he has shown in the legislative sphere. Owing to Victoria University being in Mr. Mulholland's riding, he takes a very deep interest in the University federation scheme; and is also now engaged in devising a scheme whereby the toll-gates of his county may be abolished, and is furthering legislation with that end in view. Mr. Mulholland claims that the Municipal Loan Fund settlement of the town of Cobourg was unjust to that town, and insists that the government should give it better terms. He is a painstaking member-closely watches and studies public affairs,—and while his judgment upon general questions is sound, his own constituency have in him

terest

m of hard-

Port

ment

r, a

erest

and,

dis-

time

been 10le-

yet

life.

lish-

der,

the

wn.

l to

ain-

ring

the

the

em-

the

the

th-

re-

 $_{
m the}$

ves

ex-

or-

ad

rm

tor

of

m-

u-

in

ve

a watchful guardian. Harwood, Antoine Chartier De Lotbiniere, Vaudreuil, Adjutant-General Militia, M.D. No. 6, was born in Montreal, on the 23rd of April, 1825, and called to the Montreal bar in 1848. He was the eldest son of the Hon. Robert Irwin Harwood and Josephti de Lotbinière, seigneuresse of Vaudreuil, daughter of the Hon. A. C. De Lotbinière, speaker of the Quebec house in 1793. His father was a member of the Special Council in 1838, and member of parliament for Vaudreuil in 1858; also a member of the legislative council of Quebec in 1860. He was educated at the Roman Catholic College, Montreal, and received a thorough classical training, taking a two years course. and at that early time gave evidences of the brilliant talent time so fully developed. His military career dates from January, 1869, since which time he has been deputy adjutant general in command of Military district No. 6 up to the present. In his official capacity he has been an ornament and example to the service. From 1863 until 1870 he was a member of parliament, representing the County of Vaudreuil, and perhaps his most notable utterance there was the speech delivered by him in the Legislative Assembly on the 9th March, 1865, on confederation. This deliverance was considered by the late able statesman, Sir George E. Cartier, the most notable on record dealing with the question of union at that time, and while being delivered the venerable knight drew attention to the fact that his noble ancestor—whose portrait was hanging directly opposite Colonel Harwood-if it was possible for him to be present in spirit, would be proud of his talented descendant. Colonel Harwood is a staunch Roman catholic. He married, on February 4th, 1851, Margaret Angelique Lefebre de Bellefeuille, daughter of Colonel Eustache Antoine Lefebre de Bellefeuille, in his lifetime seigneur of St. Eustache Mille Isles, and in 1882 deputy adjutant-general of Militia for Canada. We cannot close our brief sketch of this gifted gentleman without referring to a speech made by him at Chambly, on June 8th, 1881, before his Excelcellency the Marquis of Lorne, on the occasion of the inauguration of the monument to M. DeSalaberry, a relative of Mr. Harwood's. The dignity, the brilliancy, and the fluency then displayed were not only commented upon by the press, but by the representative of royalty. Colonel Harwood's success in social circles is as notable as his public career. He has travelled extensively in Europe, and while abroad had his magnificent voice trained by the celebrated preceptor of Jenny Lind, as well as by his compeer Bataille, of the Theâtre Opera Comique de Paris.

Mair, Charles, was born at the village of Lanark, in the Bathurst district of Upper Canada, on the 21st September, 1840, and wat educated at the Perth Grammar School and Queen's College, Kingston. His father, the late James Mair, emigrated from Scotland to Canada nearly sixty years ago, and established large business interests in Lanark and Perth, and was one of the pioneers of the square timber trade in the Madawaska and the other tributaries of the Ottawa. Mr. Mair's familiarity with nature may be traced to the business in which his family was engaged, and which brought him into direct contact with forest and stream, and created a love for field sports. For a short time Mr. Mair was engaged in the study of medicine, but was called away from that study by the Honourable William McDougall to make researches in the Parliamentary Library, in reference to the question then pending about the transfer of the North-West territories to Canada. In 1868, Mr. Mair published a volume of poems entitled "Dreamland and other poems," which was very well received by the press, but which had only a limited circulation, as a large portion of the edition was burnt in the Desbarat's fire while being bound. In the fall of 1868 Mr. Mair was appointed by the government as paymaster of the party sent under Mr. Snow to Red River, to open up communication with the Lake of the Woods. He took with him a quantity of MSS., including several poems which he was pre-paring for publication. In the fall of 1869

the first rebellion broke out, and Mr. Mair | was taken prisoner with a number of other loyal Canadians, and for many weeks was kept in close confinement in Fort Garry, and afterwards in the Court After some weeks, Louis Riel told Mr. Mair that he intended to have him executed, but with the assistance of his fellow prisoners, Mr. Mair and a few others succeeded in effecting their escape, and reaching Portage La Prairie. Here they raised a force, which, under Major Boulton, marched to Fort Garry and induced Riel to deliver up his prisoners. Afterwards, by treachery, Major Boulton and Thomas Scott and others were captured, and Scott murdered. Mr. Mair escaped and walked on snowshoes some 400 miles, reaching St. Paul in thirty days, whence he came to Ontario, where he, Dr. Schultz and Dr. Lynch, received a hearty welcome from their native province. After the restoration of law and order, Mr. Mair returned to the North-West and endeavoured to recover his papers and MSS., which had been scattered during his imprisonment. All his efforts were unavailing, and the work of years was gone forever. Disheartened by the loss, he abandoned literature, and entered into the fur trade and general business at Portage La Prairie, where he remained till 1876, when he moved to Prince Albert, where he resumed the same business. During this period, at long intervals, he contributed a few articles to the Canadian Monthly. About the year 1883 he foresaw the trouble coming, which culminated in the North-West rebellion of 1885, and finding that no steps were taken by the government to remove the causes of discontent, he decided that it would be unsafe to leave his family at Prince Albert, and, therefore, removed to Windsor, Ontario, where he settled down to wait till the troublous times were ended. Finding that he had enforced leisure, he turned again to literature, and wrote the drama of "Tecumseh," which has just been issued (March, 1886). While he was engaged at this work, the rebellion broke out, and he at once made up his mind to proceed to the North-West and take part in the campaign. He was attached to the Governor-General's Body Guard as quarter-master, and served with that corps during the whole campaign, and returned with the same to Toronto, where the corps were relieved from active service, and he was enabled to complete his drama. Notwithstanding the fruition and promise in Mr. Mair's early volume, "Dreamland and other poems," it is by his lately published work that he will take a foremost and an enduring place in the domain of purely Canadian letters. A volume of high-class verse is not a work that usually finds a rapid sale; but the history of the book under discussion, has been unprecedented in Canada in this respect. At the date of writing, though "Tecumseh" has been only a few weeks before the public, the edition is almost exhausted. It was received by the press with the strongest possible encomiums, and is the first book, wrought entirely of Canadian material, that has taken a thorough and permanent hold upon our own people. Its passports to the heart of the Canadian community were its lofty spirit of patriotism, the nobleness of its sentiment, its sympathetic insight into the questions with which it deals, and its splendid literary qualities. The imagery is rich and varied, but it is always true to nature, and to the "Tecumseh" is a work that human heart. the country will not allow to perish. It is gratifying to be able to write in this way of a drama, the subject of which is Canadian material, the writer of which is a son of our own soil. Mr. Mair married on the 8th September, 1869, at Red River, Eliza Mac-

po

d١

ta of

So M

on

laı

D

an

th

wł

un

Sc

dr

six

аp

six

to

wo

Ma

rica

and

in '

On

sple he

tak

was

mil

cou

mar

ove

for i

visi

Bru

in r kenney, a niece of Dr. Schultz.

Thompson, Thomas, J.P., Toronto, head of the firm of Thomas Thompson & Sons, King street east, Toronto, was born in Toronto, on January 9th, 1832. His father was a native of Yorkshire, England, and his mother was Rebecca Boyce. The subject of our sketch was married, at the age of twenty-three, to Hester Carbert, and has had a family of seven sons, two of whom, Boyce and William, are partners in the business, Boyce, the eldest son, being admitted in 1881, and William two years later. In 1882, Mr. Thompson was induced to stand as candidate to represent East Toronto, in the Liberal interest, in the Dominion Parliament, but was defeated by the present member, Mr. Small. It is not from connection with political annals that Mr. Thompson is looked upon as a representative Canadian, but from the fact that he has made for himself a conspicuous name in his native city as a thorough man of business and a successful merchant. He is one of the few who have passed through many periods of commercial depression, and built up an extensive business on a sound basis, and in consequence gained the confidence of his customers, and maintained his credit. Mr. Thompson has crossed the Atlantic seventy-three times, and was on board the Great Eastern on her last voyage home, when she was supposed to have been lost, having been twenty-one days out; but, fortunately, after a terrible voyage, arrived safely. Mr. Thompson has been a member of the Methodist church from his youth up. An old and worn out pocket book that he carried for many years contains the following scrap, showing the principles which have been his guide :- "Energy is a four-story virtue, and always pays. It is one of those accounts on which there is no discount. The chief difference among mankind is not so much in gift or talent as in energy-the drop of water that chisels the stone is only another name for energy. Nothing resists this virtue, and it conquers what it will, the only condition being time." His sons inherit the business tact and the high principle of integrity which have distinguished Mr. Thompson throughout his business career. To these young men the great proportion of the business to-day, maintained in the face of keen competition, is largely

do-

me lly

the

ce-

the าลส

the

red

en-

an

ur

of

rit

ht,

ns

hé

at

of

hn

Gillies, Major John, Gillies' Hill, Ontario, M.P.P. for North Bruce, is a native of the Parish of Kilcalomnell, Argyleshire, Scotland. He is a son of Hugh Gillies and Mary Blue, the latter being a descendant of one of the old families of the West Highlands, who were originally of the Mc-Donald clan. Hugh Gillies was a farmer, and came to this country in 1855, settling in the township of Elderslie, County of Bruce, where he remained engaged in farming until his death in 1869. Mrs. Gillies died in There was a family of ten children, the subject of this sketch being the Major John Gillies received sixth eldest. a parochial school education. At the age of sixteen he left school, and having a desire to travel and to try his fortune in the new world, he, in company with his two brothers, Malcolm and Dugald Gillies sailed for America, and reached Canada in August, 1852, and shortly afterwards settled upon a farm in the township of Elderslie, Bruce county, Ontario, and is now the possessor of a splendid farm of 300 acres of land, on which Mr. Gillies has he at present resides. taken some interest in militia affairs, and was appointed senior major of the Canadian militia. In 1856, he was elected township councillor of Elderslie, and continued for many years in the council, being reeve for over fifteen years and warden of the county for five years of that time. He has been provisional director of the Toronto, Grey and Bruce Railway, having taken much interest in railroad enterprises. In politics Mr. Gillies is a staunch Liberal. He contested the North Riding of Bruce for the Commons against Colonel Sproat, defeating him in 1872 by a majority of twenty-three votes, and was elected by acclamation in 1874. In 1878, he again contested the riding against Colonel Sproat, and gained the election by a majority of 156 votes. In 1882, after the "gerrymander act," he was defeated by Alexander McNeil, being handicapped in the constituency by nearly 400 votes. However, in 1883, Mr. Gillies contested the same riding for the Ontario legislature against James Rowan, and was elected by a majority of 120 votes. Mr. Gillies is one of the most zealous and punctual members of the legislature, and devotes a great deal of attention to public affairs, and especially to them that are of moment to his own constituency, He does not often speak, but when he does, his utterances are characterised by careful thought and a thorough knowledge of the subject under discussion. In religion he is a staunch Presbyterian. He is not married.

Balfour, William Douglas, Amherstburg, Ont., M.P.P. for South Essex, was born in Forfarshire, Scotland, on 2nd August, 1851. He is a son of David Balfour, a member of a Kincardineshire family, and Janet Douglas. Mr. Balfour, sr., came to Canada about 1857, and engaged in railroading. He is still living in the village of Allanburg; and Mrs. Balfour is like-wise living there. There were five of a family, the subject of this sketch being the eldest. William Douglas Balfour received a Public school education, concluding his studies at the Grantham Academy, St. Catharines. At the age of fifteen he left school and engaged as school teacher in the townships of Grantham and Louth, where he remained for five years. He then received the appointment of secretary of the St. Catharines Board of Trade, and also that of librarian of the Mechanics' Institute. In 1872, he established the St. Catharines daily and weekly News, in partnership with R. Matheson; and these two gentlemen continued the publication until 1874, when the firm dissolved, Mr. Balfour retiring in the same year. He then removed to Amherstburg, Essex, where he founded a weekly paper, in partnership with J. A. Auld, under the firm name of Balfour & Auld, the paper being called the Amherstburg Echo. This partnership continued until 1885, when a joint stock company was formed under the name of the Echo Printing Co., Mr. Balfour being president of the company, which position he retains still. In 1872, Mr. Balfour was elected a public school trustee for St. Patrick's ward, St. Catharines, and retained this office for two years. After going to Amherstburg, in 1875, he was also elected a school trustee, and was re-elected for four successive years, during which time he was chairman of the board. In 1878, he was elected reeve of the town of Amherstburg, and served as chairman of the finance and educational committees of the county council, as well as auditor of the criminal iustice accounts. He was also chairman of the finance committee of the town council of Amherstburg. In 1883, after his election to the Legislative Assembly of Ontario, he retired from the Council of Amherstburg. In 1879, he contested the election for South Essex in the local house, with Lewis Wigle, M. P., and was defeated. In 1882, when Mr. Wigle was elected to the Commons, Mr. Balfour contested the same riding with Peter Wright, reeve of Colchester South, Essex, in the bye-election, and was elected, in the Reform interest, by a majority of seventy-two votes. At the general election of 1883, he defeated Thomas B. White, reeve of Anderdon, by a majority of thirty-four votes. On first appearing in the house in 1882, Mr. Balfour moved the address in reply to the speech from the throne, and has since served on the following committees, viz.: Public accounts. printing, municipal, railways, and private bills. Mr. Balfour, we may state, it was who introduced the bill which has been considerably discussed through the press, viz., that providing for the admission of Delos R. Davis, (coloured) of Colchester, to the bar of Ontario. Although persistently opposed, Mr. Balfour successfully carried his point, in the face of pronounced opposition by the legal fraternity, under the ægis of the law society. He has also carried on a vigorous crusade for the abolition of toll roads, and has already secured some legislation in that direction, as well as approval from both sides of the house. Mr. Balfour has also introduced and carried through several amendments to the Municipal Act. He has been a member of the Oddfellows, and has been, for ten years, a director of the South Essex and Anderdon and Malden Agricultural societies; has served as president of both, and is now a director of the South Essex Farmers' Institute. In 1868, he was secretary of the Y.M.C.A., at St. Catharines, and continued for some six years in that connection, besides being secretary at the provincial convention, held at Belleville, in 1872. In politics Mr. Balfour is a Liberal Reformer.

and is a member of the Reform Club, of Toronto. He was for eight years secretary of the South Essex Liberal Association, and for the last eleven years has delivered numerous campaign speeches in the interests of his party, through his own section of the country. We may add that he was conspicuous in the late "bribery conspiracy," which has been ventilated through the press of the country, and tried in the courts. In that case, of course, Mr. Balfour appears as a man of integrity and honour. In political work Mr. Balfour takes the deepest interest. He has the advantage of being thoroughly well informed upon current political history, and as his ability as a debater is very pronounced, he frequently joins very effectively in debate. To get the 'ear of the house" is a very high compliment to bestow upon a speaker; but it is noteworthy that when Mr. Balfour is upon his feet, the house assumes an attitude of attentive listening. The chief speech, perhaps, delivered by him in the house was that, in 1885, in defense of Mr. Mowat's Redistribution Bill. Mr. Balfour is a Presbyterian. He married, in 1876, Josephine, eldest daughter of the late Colonel T. F. Brodhead, of Grosse Isle, Michigan, U. S., who was commander of the Michigan Cavalry Brigade, and who met a soldier's death at the field of Manassas, in Virginia. By this lady, Mr. Balfour has a family of five children.

t I t it c thi te in te ni ev gi wa

Gunn, Alexander, M.P. for the City of Kingston, Ontario, is a Scotchman by birth, and came to Canada with his parents when a mere lad. He was born at Brims, Caithness-shire, Scotland, on the 5th of October, 1828. His father was James Gunn, who carried on farming and contracting in Caithness, and his mother was Janet Both parents died many years ago, and left a family of two sons and three daughters, all of whom, with the exception of one daughter, still survive. Alexander, the eldest, received his early education at Forss parish school in Caithness, and finished in Kingston, where his parents first resided in coming to this country. Mr. Gunn began his career in the grocery business, with John Carruthers, in Kingston, and has kept steadily at this branch of business, until he may now be considered a prince of the trade. Being a public-spirited gentleman, he was induced by his many friends and admirers to offer himself as candidate for the House of Commons for the city in which he had spent nearly all his life; he consented, and at the general elections of 1878, was elected, defeating no less a personage than Sir John A. Macdonald, who had held Kingston as a "pocket borough" for a great number of years. Mr. Gunn was again elected at the last general election, and as lime moves on he seems to become a greater favorite than ever with his friends of the Limestone City. In politics he has always been a steadfast Liberal, and it makes his election victories all the more important that he not alone defeated the Conservative chief, as we have already seen, but defeated him in the very centre of old Torydom. Mr. Gunn married, on the 13th October, 1864, at Kingston, Angelique Agnes Matthews, daughter of the late Robert Matthews.

nb, of

sec-

socia-

a de-

n the

. 88C-

at he

con-

ough

n the Ifour nour.

ze of

cur-

28 2

ntly

t the apli-

at it

r is

attihief

the

Mr. four 876,

olo-

chi-

the

et a in

188 lity

by

nts

Dc-

hn,

in

het

ers ree on

Wigle, Lewis, Leamington, M.P. for South Essex, was born in the township of Gosfield, in the County of Essex, on March 10th, 1845. He is a son of Solomon Wigle, and Ann Iler. Mr. Wigle, senior, represented the County of Essex in the first Ontario Legislature, from 1867 till 1871, and who was a staunch supporter of Sandfield Macdonald. Solomon Wigle had the first contract, in 1860, for carrying the mails from Learnington to Windsor, and it will be interesting to state that Lewis Wigle carried it the first time it went over the road, and continued to do so for a year. He then left the rather laborious work, and took the position of clerk in a store for a year, when he returned to the farm, upon which he wrought in summer, and attended school in the winter. His father established him in a business at Leamington, in 1864, when he was nineteen years old, and there he has resided ever since, carrying on a business which has given him handsome profits. Mr. Wigle was reeve of the township of Mersea, from 1867 till 1875; was elected to represent South Essex in the Ontario Legislature, at the general election 1875; but was unseated on petition, and re-elected in September, 1875. defeating his mother's brother on both occasions by a majority, first, of 47; and, subsequently, of 384. He was again elected at the general election in 1879, defeating, the present member, Balfour, by a majority of 159. He resigned his seat in 1882, and tried conclusions with the Dominion candidate, and was elected to the Commons, defeating William McGregor, ex-M.P., by a majority of sixty votes. Mr. Wigle is president of the Leamington and St. Clair Railway Co., and secured a subsidy for the same in the session of 1885, from the government, of $3,200 per mile. Operations upon this road have just now commenced. Mr. Wigle is a member of four different agricultural societies, and belongs to the executive committee of the Conservative Union, Toronto. A staunch and able party-man, he has done considerable "stumping" in favour of the national policy; he took part in the bye-elections held in West Northumberland, in 1885; in East Simcoe, and in West Kent, 1885, and in the local bye-election held in 1885. In politics, Mr. Wigle is a Liberal-Conservative of the most pronounced type. He has always watched political questions closely, and the views that he entertains upon public matters are the result of close investigation. He has been always zealous in the furtherance of his party's interests, and when he sat in the Ontario Legislature, he was one of the Liberal-Conservative whips. He is regarded as a very useful member of the House of Commons, being active in watching the interests of his own constituency, and at the same time keeping himself well informed upon the general business with which parliament deals. Mr. Wigle is a Methodist. He married, on October 14th, 1868, Rebecca Hairsine.

