Technical and Bibliographic Notes / Notes techniques et bibliographiques

copy average may be of the in	titute has attempted to ailable for filming. For bibliographically union mages in the reproduce antly change the usual below.	eatures of this que, which may tion, or which	copy whi alter any may	ch		lui a été po exemplaire bibliograph reproduite	a microfilmé le ossible de se pr qui sont peut nique, qui peuve , ou qui peuve thode normale	ocurer. Les c être uniques vent modifier int exiger une	détails de du poin une ima modific	cet t de vue ge ation
c	ploured covers/	•				Color	ured pages/			٠. ouverture de couleur	•			-	1 1	de couleur		,
								E
	overs damaged/ ouverture endommagé					1./	damaged/ endommagée:
	, area (are endemmage			-		i ages)	•	•
1 1	overs restored and/or					Pages	restored and/	or laminated/	, Co	ouverture restaurée et	/ou pelliculée				Pages	restaurées et/	ou pelliculées	. .
Co	over title missing/					Pages	discoloured, s	tained or for	od/1 1	titre de couverture n	nanque				1. / 1	décolorées, ta
				•		,		•	,
1 1	oloured maps/		-		*	1 1 -	detached/	j.
Ca	rtes géographiques en	Couleur	•	4		L Pages	détachées	*		٠.
Co	oloured ink (i.e. other	than blue or b	lack)/			Show	through/En	cre de couleur (i.e. au	utre que bleue	ou noire)		*	✓ Trans	parence c_	loured plates and/or	illustrations/				· ·		. ,		, anches et/ou illustration				1	1. 1	ty of print vari té inégale de l'	, ,	•
					,		to mogalo ac i		*	• "
1 1	und with other mater	•					nuous paginati			f
He He	lié avec d'autres docu	iments			•	Pagina	ation continue	*		:
Tig	ght binding may cause	e shadows or di	istortion			Includ	des index(es)/ ong interior margin/			2		Comp	rend un (des)	index ' reliure serrée peut ca torsion le long de la n					~ uis	torsion le long de la l	narge interieur	e	•			on header take re de l'en-tête :			, Bla	ank leaves added duri	ng restoration i	may appe	ar		, 20 111	ic de l'en-lete	provient.		• thin the text. Whenev		ese have		1	Title p	page of issue/	• en omitted from filmi e peut que certaines p	-	aioutées		ł	Page d	le titre de la li	vraison s d'une restauration a			e, '		Captio	on of issue/			٠.
ma	is, lorsque cela était p				l		de départ de la	livraison	. •	- pas	été filmées.	4		_ ·		•	•		Masth Génér	ead/ ique (périodiq	uael da la li	oiene ٠ .			•		Gener	idae (beriogid	ues) de la livr	aison 1 1	ditional comments:/							• Co	mmentaires suppléme	entaires:						1		*
This item	is filmed at the redu	ction ratio che	cked belo	w/				- nent est filmé au taux						*		• .
10X	14X		18X		22 X	٠	26X	•	30×
							4			, ,
•	12X	16X		20 X		24X		28X		32 X

A CYCLOPÆDIA

CANADIAN BIOGRAPHY:

BEING :

CHIEFLY MEN OF THE TIME.

A COLLECTION OF PERSONS DISTINGUISHED IN PROFESSIONAL AND POLITICAL LIFE; LEADERS IN THE COMMERCE AND INDUSTRY OF CANADA, AND SUCCESSFUL PIONEERS.

EDITED BY

GEO. MACLEAN ROSE.

Toronto: ROSE PUBLISHING COMPANY. 1886.

Entered according to act of the Parliament of Canada, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-six, by HUNTER, ROSE & Co., in the office of the Minister of Agriculture.

PRINTED AND BOUND BY HUNTER, ROSE & CO., TORONTO.

grove by some distinct that ne an the dor me it v for cou histo dians

accou

PREFACE.

It has been too long the custom to regard as proper subjects for biographical literature only persons who have figured in political life. In preparing the present work, any man or woman who has, in any conspicuous way, contributed to the moral, intellectual, industrial or political growth of the country, has been deemed a suitable person for these pages. To the heroism and uncomplaining industry of the men who hewed out homes in the wilderness, and little by little overcame the obstacles of nature, are we indebted now for our thriving cities, and for our wide stretches of cultivated lands; and to omit a record of their labors, and select only for permanent record the deeds of those who came upon the scenes when the rugged work was done, would be singularly unjust. We have had, and still have amongst us, men of great genius in engineering skill, and in mechanical contrivance; and it was fitting that a brief record of their lives, and what they accomplished for the community, should be handed down in the history of our common country. The same may be said of men prominent in every branch of commerce, of our notable divines, our eminent judges, our great lawyers, our talented medical men, and those who have contributed to the educational growth of the country. These it was considered were worthy of place side by side with the men who chose political careers, and have won more or less distinction therein. There is to be said in justification of all these records, that even the history of the man in an obscure village is a portion of the history of the country, and the aggregate record of "Representative Canadians" may be regarded in a young country like Canada, as a full historical account, in every sense, for the period covered by the biographical matter in Men are for ever drifting down the slow stream, and most of their deeds, like themselves, pass into oblivion; it is well while the opportunity is at hand to save as much of the record as possible for posterity. The labour, the time, and the pains spent in securing data for the sketches herein contained have been greater than would be believed; and the more so since accuracy of statement of fact, and the chronological order of incidents, have been so rigidly aimed at. Dates and facts have all been verified either by reference to the best published authorities, or to the persons themselves. For the most part, the call for the cooperation of the public in furnishing data for the records has been cordially responded to. As for the literary portion of the work, no pains have been spared to make that equal to the other features. To make the volume complete in the historically "representative" sense, memoirs of the most illustrious of the dead of this country will be found in its pages. The enterprise has been tedious. laborious and expensive; but if it will supply a record that the country should not let die; if it preserve the names of worthy men and women whose deeds deserve to be remembered, it surely will have well repaid the time, the anxiety, and the pains that have been expended upon it. A work of this kind could not be else than tedious; and, therefore, since its commencement, several changes have taken place: some of the persons in its pages have died; others have passed from one office to another, and dropped from public places; but with these latter exceptions and some other minor ones each memoir, it is believed, will be found to be an accurate record up to the present date.

GEO. MACLEAN ROSE.

TORONTO, February, 1886.

And Arc Ash Atk Awn Bago Baill Bain, Baine Bake Bake Bake

Balfo Barbe Barcla Barke Barna Barric Bartle Barton Basker Beach, Beattie Beaty, Beaugr

Al

An An

An

INDEX.

Page.	PAGE.
A	Becker, Leaman, Waterford 371
Abbott, Harry Braithwaite, Victoria 740	Bell, Archibald, Judge, Chatham 598
Abbott, Hon. Jno. Jos. C., M.P., Montreal. 796	Bell, Rev. George, LL.D., Kingston 501
Adam, Graeme Mercer, Toronto 637	Bell-Smith, Frederic Marlett, London 584
Akin, Thomas Beamish, D.C.L., Halifax 662	Bell, William Carrick, Ingersoll 395
Allan, Andrew, Montreal 317	Bell, William, Guelph
Allan, Daniel Hugh, Toronto 110	Bellemare, Raphael, Montreal
Allan, Hon. George William, D.C.L., Toronto 90	Benson, Thomas Moore, Q.C., Port Hope. 65
Allan, John Henry, Picton 409	Benson, Thomas, Port Hope 580
Allan, Sir Hugh 35	Bergin, Dr. Darby, M.P., Cornwall 443
Allen, Thomas, Toronto 168	Bethune, Angus, Cornwall
Allison, David Wright, Adolphustown 729	Bethune, James, LL.D 680
Ami, Henry M., M.A., Ottawa 113	Bethune, Right Rev. Alex. Neil, Bishop 303
Anderson, Thomas Ogilvy, Toronto 145	Bethune, Rev. Chas. Jas. Stewart, Port Hope 36
Anderson, William, J.P., Ameliasburg 421	Billy, Louis Adolphe, M.P., Quebec 337
Anderson, William J., London	Birrell, George S., Landon 521
Archibald, Hon. Adams G., Halifax 495	Blackburn, Josiah, London 466
Acrhibald, Hon. Thomas D., Sydney, C.B. 256	Blaicher, Peter Campbell, Hamilton 670
Ashley, Harford Thurlow, Belleville 213	Blake, Hon. Edward, M.P., Toronto 19
Atkinson, Charles Richard, Chatham 585	Blake, Hon. Samuel Hume, Q.C., Toronto. 72
Awrey, Nicholas, M.P.P., Binbrook 180	Blake, Hon. William Hume Blevins, John, Toronto
В	Body, Rev. Chas. William Edmond, Toronto 224
Bagot, Sir Charles 248	Booker, William Davis, Hamilton 94
Baillairge, George Frederick, C.E., Ottawa 69	Bourinot, John George, F.R.S.C, Ottawa 281
Bain, Thomas Boult, Tilsonburg 400	Bowell, Hon. Mackenzie, M.P., Ottawa 516
Baines, Dr. Allen Mackenzie, Toronto 65	Bowlby, Ward Hamilton, M.A., Berlin 123
Baker, Rev. J. Stamers, Port Hope 567	Bowman, Isaac Erb, Waterloo 108
Baker, William John, Belleville 307	Bowman, Israel David, Berlin
Baldwin, Hon. Robert, C.B 18	Branscombe, Henry William, Picton 762
Balfour, Wm. D., M.P.P., Amherstburg, O. 805	Bradley, Lieut:-Col. Alex. Priestly, Ottawa. 265
Barber, Major John Roaf, Georgetown 438	Bradshaw, Seth Wesley, Belleville 604
Barclay, Francis, Milton	Brandon, James, Toronto
Barker, Capt. Peter McGill, Orangeville 528	Brant, Chief Joseph Barnard, Francis Jones, M.P., Yale 159	Breck, Ira Allen, Kingston Barrick, Dr. Eli James, Toronto 206	Brereton, Dr. Charles H., M. P.P., Bethany 795
Bartlet, Alexander, Windsor, Ont 703	Bristol, Dr. Amos Samuel, Napanee 540
Barton, Edward Warren, Toronto 153	Britton, Byron Moffatt, Q.C., Kingston. 574
Baskerville, Patrick, M.P.P., Ottawa 752	Brock, Major-General Sir Isaac 20
Baskerville, Patrick, M.P.P., Ottawa. 752 Beach, Mahlon F., Iroquo's	Brock, Major-General Sir Isaac 32
Beach, Mahlon F., Iroque's 792	Brock, Major-General Sir Isaac. 32 Broley, Rev. James, Seaforth. 254
	Brock, Major-General Sir Isaac 32 Broley, Rev. James, Seaforth 254 Bronson, Henry Franklin, Ottawa 347
Beach, Mahlon F., Iroquois	Brock, Major-General Sir Isaac. 32 Broley, Rev. James, Seaforth. 254

Dinni Disne Dixon

Dixon, Dobson

Dodd, Dohert
Dohert
Dougal
Dougal
Dowd, Dowler, Dowler,
Downey
Draper, Drennar

PAGE.	Page.
Brown, Adam, Hamilton	Charlton, John, M.P., Lynedoch 84
Brown, Hon. George	Charteris, Charles George, Chatham, Ont 642
Brown, John Gordon, Toronto	Chauveau, Pierre Joseph Olivier, Montreal. 502
Brown, Prof. William, Guelph	Chisholm, Capt. William Bigger, Oakville 69
Brown, Richard, Toronto	Chisholm, Kenneth, M.P.P., Brampton 519
Brown, Richard, Toronto	Chown, Edwin, Kingston 703
Bryce, Rev. George, LL.D., Winnipeg 159	Christie, Hon. J. W., Brockville 561
Bryce, William, London	Christie, William, Toronto Church, Levi Ruggles, Q.C., Montreal 754 Claris, George Thomas, St. Thomas 370
Buell, LtCol. Jacob Dockstader, Brockville 773	Clark, Dr. Daniel, Toronto
Burbridge, George Wheelock, Q.C., Ottawa 47	Clark, LieutCol. Thomas W., Waterford 792
Burdett, Samuel Barton, LL.D., Belleville 462	Clarke, Charles Fitzwilliam, Tilsonburg 369 Burgess, Alexander Mackinnon, Ottawa 169
Burns, Charles, Toronto	Clarke, Francis, Belleville
Burns, Rev. Alexander, D.D., Hamilton 398	Clarke, Henry Edward, M.P.P., Toronto 132
Bygrave, Rev. Hilary, Toronto 523	Clarke, James, Belleville
C	Clarke, LtCol. Hon. Charles, M.P.P., Elora 278
	Clarke, Rev. John Stokes, Picton 789
Cameron, Hector, M.P., Toronto 275	Clarkson, Rev. John B., M.A., Belleville 273
Cameron, Hon. Malcolm 71	Claxton, Thomas, Toronto
Cameron, John, Toronto 226	Cleary, Bishop James Vincent, Kingston 647
Cameron, Malcolm Colin, M.P., Goderich. 255	Clements, Matthew, Milton 147
Campbell, Archibald Hamilton, Toronto 105	Clemow, Hon. Francis, Senator, Ottawa 299
Campbell, Dr. John, Seaforth	Close, Patrick G., Toronto 85
Campbell, Duncan, Simcoe 579	Clutton, Samuel Sparkes, Aylmer, Ont 413
Campbell, Sir Alexander, Toronto 79	Cochrane, Hon. Matthew Henry, Compton 430
Campbell, Rev. Thomas Metcalfe, Goderich 211	Cochrane, Rev. William, D.D., Brantford. 257
Cant, John, Galt 737	Colby, Charles Carroll, M.P., Stanstead 564
Canniff, Dr. William, Toronto	Cole, LtCol. Wilmot Howard, Brockville 659
Cantlie, James A., Montreal	Collins, Joseph Edmund, Toronto 538
Capell, John, Toronto	Colquhoun, Dr. George, Iroquois 689
Carling, Hon. John, M.P., London 77	Colquhoun, William, Cornwall 627
Carman, Robert Baldwin, Judge, Cornwall. 801	Comstock, William Henry, Brockville 683
Carmichael, James, Oshawa	Conger, Stephen Marshall, Picton 575
Carmichael, William Robert, Belleville 422	Conley, Thomas, Kemptville
Carney, Dr. Richard, Windsor	Conmee, James, M.P.P., Port Arthur 772
Caron, Hon. Sir Adolphe, M.P., Ottawa 396	Cook, Herman H., M.P., Toronto 114
Clause of Charles M.A. Toronto 445	Cook, Simon S., Morrisburg
Carpmael, Charles, M.A., Toronto 445	Cooke, Richard Plunkett, C.E., Brockville 697
Carroll, Dr. James, Norwich	1
Carson, Robert J., Kingston	Corbett, Charles Henry, Kingston 512
Carswell, Robert, Toronto	Corbett, George Frederick Cartier, Sir George E	Corbett, Patrick
Cartwright, Hon. Sir Richard, Kingston 322	Corbett, Richard511
Casey, William, Hamilton	Cordner, Rev. John, LL.D., Boston 98
Casgrain, Abbe Henry Raymond, Quebec 644	Cosby, Alfred Morgan, Toronto
Casgrain, Dr. Charles Eugene, Windsor 522	Costigan, Hon. John, M.P., Ottawa 133
Cassils, William, Montreal	Cotton, LieutColonel W. H., Kingston 787
Cattanach, Donald	Coursol, Charles Joseph, M.P., Montreal 665
Caven, Rev. William, D.D., Toronto 61	Courtney, John Mortimer, Ottawa 507
Chadwick, LieutCol. Chas. Eli, Ingersoll 409	Covernton, Dr. Charles William, Toronto 103
Chamberlain, LieutCol. Brown, Ottawa 555	Cowan, James, London
Chamberlain, Theodore F., Morrisburg 685	Coyne, James Henry, S. Thomas 518
Champlain, Samuel de	Crawford, John, Aylmer, Ont 412
Chapleau, Hon. Jos. Adolphe, M.P., Ottawa 193	Crawford, Patrick, Hamilton 547
Charlton, Benjamin E., Hamilton 571	Crawford, Rev. Edward Patrick, Brockville. 607

	Page.
Crerar, John, Hamilton	,
Crooks, Hon. Adam	Drennan, William Melville, Kingston 569
Cronyn, The Right Rev. Bishop Benj., D.D. 693	Drew, George Alexander, Elora
Cumbanland Colonal Frederick William 705	Dryden, John, M.P.P., Brooklin Cumberland, Colonel Frederick William 705	Dufferin, Earl of Cumming, Hugh Francis, Chatham 468	Duhamel, Joseph, Q.C., Montreal 283
Curry, George Calvin, Picton	Dunkin, Hon. Christopher
Curts, Rev. James, Newburgh	Dunnet, James Waters, Belleville 205
D	Dupuis, Dr. Thomas R., Kingston 559
_ , '	Dupuis, Prof. Nathan Fellowes, Kingston. 610
Daly, Malachy Bowes, M.P., Halifax 49	Durham, Earl of Darling, Andrew, Toronto	Dwight, Harvey Prentice, Toronto 45
Darling, William	Dymond, Alfred Hutchinson, Brantford 21
Davies, Rev. Henry William, D.D., Toronto 704	_
Dawson, George Mercer, D.S., Ottawa 413	E
Dawson, John Edward, London 746	Easton, Dr. John, Brockville 571
Dawson, Major George Dudley, Toronto 184	Easton, George, Brockville 596
Dawson, S. J., M.P. for Algoma 508	Eccles, Dr. Friend Richard, London 394
Dawson, Sir J. William, Montreal 40	Eddy, Ezra Butler, Hull Day, Dr. Henry Wright, Trenton 179	Elgin, Earl of Defoe, Daniel McCarthy, Toronto 312	Elliot, Hon. William, Judge, London 274
Denison, Colonel George Taylor, Toronto 245	Elliott, John, London
Denison, LtColonel Geo. Taylor, Toronto. 244	Elwood, Rev. Ed. Lindsay, M.A., Goderich 604
Denison, LtColonel Geo. Taylor, Toronto. 245	Emsley, Rev. William H., Napanee 498
Denison, LtColonel Fred. Charles, Toronto 246	English, Rev. E. N., M.A., London 682
Deroche, Hammel Madden, Napanee 506	Ermatinger, Chas. Oaks, M.P.P., St. Thoma 411
Desjardins, T. C. Alphonse, M.P., Montreal 212	Evans, George M., M.A., Toronto 426
De St. Just, Hon. Luc Letellier 188	Evans, H. Sugden, F.C.S., Ottawa
Deville, Edward Gaston, Ottawa 222	Dvans, 11. Duguen, P.A. S., Ottawa
Dewar, John, Milton	, . F
Dewart, Rev. Edward H., D.D., Toronto 207	77 1 1 7 1 77 36 D D . 11
Dewe, John, Ottawa	Fairbank, John H., M.P., Petrolia 605
Dickey, Hon.R.B., Senator, Amherst, N.S 717	Falle, Philip, Tilsonburg Farlinger, Captain Alexander, Morrisburg. 599
Dickinson, Moss Kent, M.P., Manotick 238	Farran, William Wallace, Clinton 192
Dickson, Rev. James A. R., B.D., Galt 492	Farran, William Wallace, Clinton
Dickson, Rev. James A. R., B.D., Galt 492 Digby, Dr. James W., Brantford 636	Farran, William Wallace, Clinton 192 Farrer, Edward, Toronto 378 Faucher de St. Maurice, N.H.E., Quebec 277
Dickson, Rev. James A. R., B.D., Galt. 492 Digby, Dr. James W., Brantford. 636 Dill, Jacob William, M.P. P., Bracebridge. 767	Farran, William Wallace, Clinton 192 Farrer, Edward, Toronto 378 Faucher de St. Maurice, N.H.E., Quebec 277 Fennell, John, Berlin 508
Dickson, Rev. James A. R., B.D., Galt	Farran, William Wallace, Clinton 192 Farrer, Edward, Toronto 378 Faucher de St. Maurice, N.H.E., Quebec 277 Fennell, John, Berlin 508 Fenwick, Dr. Kenneth N., Kingston 452
Dickson, Rev. James A. R., B.D., Galt 492 Digby, Dr. James W., Brantford	Farran, William Wallace, Clinton 192 Farrer, Edward, Toronto 378 Faucher de St. Maurice, N.H.E., Quebec 277 Fennell, John, Berlin 508
Dickson, Rev. James A. R., B.D., Galt	Farran, William Wallace, Clinton 192 Farrer, Edward, Toronto 378 Faucher de St. Maurice, N.H.E., Quebec 277 Fennell, John, Berlin 508 Fenwick, Dr. Kenneth N., Kingston 452
Dickson, Rev. James A. R., B.D., Galt	Farran, William Wallace, Clinton 192 Farrer, Edward, Toronto 378 Faucher de St. Maurice, N.H.E., Quebec 277 Fennell, John, Berlin 508 Fenwick, Dr. Kenneth N., Kingston 452 Ferguson, Dr. John, Niagara Falls 321
Dickson, Rev. James A. R., B.D., Galt	Farran, William Wallace, Clinton 192 Farrer, Edward, Toronto 378 Faucher de St. Maurice, N.H.E., Quebec 277 Fennell, John, Berlin 508 Fenwick, Dr. Kenneth N., Kingston 452 Ferguson, Dr. John, Niagara Falls 321 Ferguson, William, Kingston 506
Dickson, Rev. James A. R., B.D., Galt	Farran, William Wallace, Clinton 192 Farrer, Edward, Toronto 378 Faucher de St. Maurice, N.H.E., Quebec 277 Fennell, John, Berlin 508 Fenwick, Dr. Kenneth N., Kingston 452 Ferguson, Dr. John, Niagara Falls 321 Ferguson, William, Kingston 506 Ferrier, LtCol. Alexander David, Fergus 707
Dickson, Rev. James A. R., B.D., Galt	Farran, William Wallace, Clinton 192 Farrer, Edward, Toronto 378 Faucher de St. Maurice, N.H.E., Quebec 277 Fennell, John, Berlin 508 Fenwick, Dr. Kenneth N., Kingston 452 Ferguson, Dr. John, Niagara Falls 321 Ferguson, William, Kingston 506 Ferrier, LtCol. Alexander David, Fergus 707 Fiddes, Alexander, Toronto 242
Dickson, Rev. James A. R., B.D., Galt	Farran, William Wallace, Clinton 192 Farrer, Edward, Toronto 378 Faucher de St. Maurice, N.H.E., Quebec 277 Fennell, John, Berlin 508 Fenwick, Dr. Kenneth N., Kingston 452 Ferguson, Dr. John, Niagara Falls 321 Ferguson, William, Kingston 506 Ferrier, LtCol. Alexander David, Fergus 707 Fiddes, Alexander, Toronto 242 Fitz-Gerald, Frederick Ardell, J.P., London 708 Fitzsimmons, William, Brockville 727
Dickson, Rev. James A. R., B.D., Galt	Farran, William Wallace, Clinton 192 Farrer, Edward, Toronto 378 Faucher de St. Maurice, N.H.E., Quebec 277 Fennell, John, Berlin 508 Fenwick, Dr. Kenneth N., Kingston 452 Ferguson, Dr. John, Niagara Falls 321 Ferguson, William, Kingston 506 Ferrier, LtCol. Alexander David, Fergus 707 Fiddes, Alexander, Toronto 242 Fitz-Gerald, Frederick Ardell, J.P., London 708 Fitzsimmons, William, Brockville 727 Fleming, Sandford, C.M.G., Ottawa 389
Dickson, Rev. James A. R., B.D., Galt	Farran, William Wallace, Clinton 192 Farrer, Edward, Toronto 378 Faucher de St. Maurice, N.H.E., Quebec 277 Fennell, John, Berlin 508 Fenwick, Dr. Kenneth N., Kingston 452 Ferguson, Dr. John, Niagara Falls 321 Ferguson, William, Kingston 506 Ferrier, LtCol. Alexander David, Fergus 707 Fiddes, Alexander, Toronto 242 Fitz-Gerald, Frederick Ardell, J.P., London 708 Fitzsimmons, William, Brockville 727 Fleming, Sandford, C.M.G., Ottawa 389 Fletcher, Rev. Donald Hugh, Hamilton 429
Dickson, Rev. James A. R., B.D., Galt	Farran, William Wallace, Clinton 192 Farrer, Edward, Toronto 378 Faucher de St. Maurice, N.H.E., Quebec 277 Fennell, John, Berlin 508 Fenwick, Dr. Kenneth N., Kingston 452 Ferguson, Dr. John, Niagara Falls 321 Ferguson, William, Kingston 506 Ferrier, LtCol. Alexander David, Fergus 707 Fiddes, Alexander, Toronto 242 Fitz-Gerald, Frederick Ardell, J.P., London 708 708 Fitzsimmons, William, Brockville 727 Fleming, Sandford, C.M.G., Ottawa 389 Fletcher, Rev. Donald Hugh, Hamilton 429 Flint, John James Blecker, Belleville 184
Dickson, Rev. James A. R., B.D., Galt	Farran, William Wallace, Clinton 192 Farrer, Edward, Toronto 378 Faucher de St. Maurice, N.H.E., Quebec 277 Fennell, John, Berlin 508 Fenwick, Dr. Kenneth N., Kingston 452 Ferguson, Dr. John, Niagara Falls 321 Ferguson, William, Kingston 506 Ferrier, LtCol. Alexander David, Fergus 707 Fiddes, Alexander, Toronto 242 Fitz-Gerald, Frederick Ardell, J.P., London 708 708 Fitzsimmons, William, Brockville 727 Fleming, Sandford, C.M.G., Ottawa 389 Fletcher, Rev. Donald Hugh, Hamilton 429 Flint, John James Blecker, Belleville 184 Flock, Christopher William, St. Thomas 417
Dickson, Rev. James A. R., B. D., Galt 492 Digby, Dr. James W., Brantford 636 Dill, Jacob William, M.P. P., Bracebridge 767 Dingwall, James, Cornwall 748 Dinnick, Charles Richard Sleman, Toronto 161 Dinnis, Richard, Toronto 138 Disney, Right Rev. Richard R., Chatham 456 Dixon, B. Homor, K.N.L., Toronto 526 Dixon, Rev. Alexander, Guelph 428 Dobson, James, Toronto 382 Dodd, Murray, M.P., Sydney, Nova Scotia 563 Doherty, Wm. Burton, LL.B., St. Thomas 626 Doherty, William, Clinton 572 Dougall, Duncan, B.A., Windsor 732 Dougall, John, New York 304 Douglas, William, Chatham, Ont 697	Farran, William Wallace, Clinton
Dickson, Rev. James A. R., B. D., Galt 492 Digby, Dr. James W., Brantford 636 Dill, Jacob William, M.P. P., Bracebridge 767 Dingwall, James, Cornwall 748 Dinnick, Charles Richard Sleman, Toronto 161 Dinnis, Richard, Toronto 138 Disney, Right Rev. Richard R., Chatham 456 Dixon, B. Homor, K.N.L., Toronto 526 Dixon, Rev. Alexander, Guelph 428 Dobson, James, Toronto 382 Dodd, Murray, M.P., Sydney, Nova Scotia 563 Doherty, Wm. Burton, LL.B., St. Thomas 626 Doherty, William, Clinton 572 Dougall, Duncan, B.A., Windsor 732 Dougall, John, New York 304 Douglas, William, Chatham, Ont 697	Farran, William Wallace, Clinton
Dickson, Rev. James A. R., B.D., Galt	Farran, William Wallace, Clinton
Dickson, Rev. James A. R., B.D., Galt	Farran, William Wallace, Clinton
Dickson, Rev. James A. R., B.D., Galt	Farran, William Wallace, Clinton
Dickson, Rev. James A. R., B.D., Galt	Farran, William Wallace, Clinton
Dickson, Rev. James A. R., B.D., Galt	Farran, William Wallace, Clinton

H H H H H H H H

Ini Ini Inr

Jac Jaff Jane Jaro Jeffe Jess John John John Jones Joss, Joy, Karn, Kaulb Keefer Keefer Kenned Kent, Kerns, Kerr, J Killey, Kilroy, King, I

PAGE.	PAGE.
Frechette, Louis, LL.D., Nicolet, P.Q 318	Haggert, John, Brampton 435
Freeman, Dr. Clarkson, Milton 115	Hague, George, Montreal 333
Freeman, John B., M.P.P., Simcoe 699	Hague, John, Toronto 88
French, Frederick John, M.P.P., Prescott. 578	Hale, Horatio, Clinton Frost, John George, Belleville	Ball, John Sharp 188
Fuller, Samuel Street, Stratford 231	Hall, William, Toronto
Fuller, Thomas, Ottawa	Hallam, John, Toronto 82
Funcken, Very Rev. Louis, D.D., Berlin 455	Hambly, Major Philip Hele, Belleville 191 Hamel, Very Rev. Thomas Etienne, Quebec. 533
G	Hamilton, Clark, Kingston 548
Galbraith, William, Toronto	Hamilton, Dr. Charles James, Cornwall 684
Gall, George, Toronto 280	Hamilton, Hon. John , , 570
Galt, Hon. Thomas, Judge, Toronto 635	Hamilton, Hon. John, Senator, Montreal 593
Galt, Sir Alexander Tilloch, Montreal 75	Hamilton, William L., Brockville 651
Gardner, Samuel Fleming, Chatham 614	Hardy, Hon. A. Sturgis, M.P.P., Brantford 629
Garrow, James Thompson, Goderich 218	Harkness, Adam, Iroquois 688
Gaskin, Captain John, Kingston 446	Harper, Major, Whitby
Gault, Matthew Hamilton, M.P., Montreal. 431	Harper, John M., B.A., Quebec 229
Ghent, Samson Howell, Hamilton 121	Harrison, Glover, Toronto 541
Gibbons, George Christie. London 292	Harston, Charles Grenville, Toronto 81
Gibson, Lt. Cl. Inc. Morison, MPP., Hamilton 106	Harty, William, Kingston
Gibson, Stephen, Napanee 407	Harvey, Arthur, Toronto 515
Gilchrist, John, Orangeville 544	Harwood, Col. Antoine C. de L., Vaudreuil 803
Gildersleeve, Charles F., Kingston 586	Hay, David Davidson, Stratford 221
Gilholm, Robert, Galt 274	Hay, Peter, Galt
Gillies, Major John, M.P.P., Gillies' Hill 805	Hay, Robert, M.P., Toronto
Gilmour, Allan, Sr., Ottawa 627	Hayes, Dr. James, Simcoe
Girard, Marc Amable, St. Boniface 380	Head, Sir Edmund Walker 377
Girdwood, Dr. Gilbert Prout, Montreal 404	Heggie, Dr. David, Brampton 500
Gisborne, Frederick Newton, Ottawa 284	Himsworth, William Alfred 713
Glasgow, Major John, Hamilton 504	Henderson, Dr. Alexander Allan, Ottawa 26
Glass, Sheriff William, London	Henderson, Dr. William Henry, Kingston. 555
Gobeil, Antoine, Ottawa 93	Henderson, Jas. Alexander, Q.C., Kingston 535
Gordon, William, Stratford 366	Henderson, Rev. W. C., M.A., St. Marys. 444
Gowan, Hon. James Robert, Senator, Barrie 185	Henderson, William, Toronto 93
Graham, Peter, M.P.P., Warwick 763	Hendry, William, Berlin
Grant, Dr. James A., Ottawa 103	Henry, Hon. William Alexander, Ottawa . 360
Grant, John M., Woodstock	Henry, Dr. James, Orangeville 554
Grant, Rev. George Monro, D.D., Kingston. 178	Henry, Robert, Brantford 98
Grasett, Dr. F. Le Maitre, Toronto 163	Herring, John, Napanee
Gray, Henry Alfred, C.E., Stratford 362	Hewett, Col. Edward, Osborne, Kingston 638
Gray, Lt. Col. John, M.P.P., Parkdale 330	Hickey, Dr. Daniel C., Kingston 582
Graydon, John, Streetsville 783	Hickson, Joseph, Montreal 681
Greet, Thomas Young, Kingston 621	Higginbotham, John William, Oshawa 191
Gregg, Rev. William, D.D., Toronto 101	Hillyer, Dr. Edward Seager, Hamilton 86-Griffin, William Henry, Ottawa 302	Hilton, Francis Andrew, Trenton 747 Groves, Dr. Abraham, Fergus 465	Hincks, Sir Francis Gunn, Alexander, M.P., Kingston 806	Hobbs, William, Milton
Guy, James Odgers, Oshawa 120	Hobbs, William Richards, London 653
Gwynne, Hon. John Wellington, Ottawa 563	Hodgins, John George, LL.D., Toronto 566
Gzowski, Col. Casimir Stanislaus, Toronto 590	Hodgins, John, Ottawa u .	Hogg, William Drummond, Ottawa 141
H ••	Holden, Thomas, Belleville
Hadley, Sylvester, Chatham 587	Holgate, Prof. Thomas Franklin, Belleville. 207
Hagarty, Hon. John Hawkins, Chief Justice 473	Holmes, Dr. Tecumseh Kingsley, Chatham 460

PAGE.	PAGE.
Holtby, Thomas, Brampton King, John, Berlin
Holton, Hon. Luther Hamilton	King, William Frederick, B.A., Ottawa 57
Hore, Francis William, Hamilton	Kingsmill, Thomas Frazer, London 532
Hope, Dr. William, Sheriff, Belleville 376	Kirby, William, F.R.S C., Niagara. 457
Houston, William, M.A., Toronto 391	Kirkland, Thomas, M.A., Toronto
Howard, Allen McLean, Toronto 300	Kirkpatrick, LtCol. Hon. G. A., Kingston. 127
Howe, Hon. Joseph 176	Knees, Charles, Milton 453
Howland, Sir William Pearce, C.B., Toronto 301	Kranz, Hugo, M.P., Berlin 546
Howland, William H., Toronto 643	Kumpf, Christian, Waterloo Hudson, William Parker, M.P.P., Roslin 768
Hughes, James Laughlin, Toronto 104	L
Hunt, T. Sterry, LL.D., Montreal 269	Lackner, Dr. Henry G., Berlin 148
Hunter, John Howard, Toronto 733	Lacoste, Hon. Alex., Q.C., Senator, Montreal 160
Hunter, Rev. William John, D.D., Hamilton 387	Laflamme, Hon. Toussaint, P.C., Montreal. 676
Huntington, Hon. Lucius Seth	Lafontaine, Sir L. H 209
Hurteau, Hilaire, M.P., St. Lin	Laidlaw, Adam, Hamilton. 62
Hutchinson, Charles, London. 277	Landry, Auguste Charles P.R., M.P., Quebec 171 Tittoutinon, Charles, Zondon
• • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • •	Lane, Charles, Napanee
v.	Langelier, Francois C. Stanislas, M.P. Quebec 89
Innes, James, M.P., Guelph	Langevin, Sir Hector Louis, M.P., Ottawa. 82
Innes, Rev. George Mignon, M.A., London. 631	Langmuir, John Woodburn, Toronto 64
Innes, William Patrick, Simcoe 309	Lansdowne, Marquis of, Ottawa 70
Irwin, Dr. Chamberlin Arthur, Kingston. 539	Larkin, Patrick Joseph, St. Catharines 789 Larmour, Robert, Stratford 309
J	Lash, Zebulun Aiton, Toronto 657
Talana Dan Camual N. M.D. Vinanton 200	Laurent, Very Rev. Joseph M., Toronto 539
Jackson, Rev. Samuel N., M.D., Kingston 522	Laurier, Hon. Wilfred, M.P., Arthabaskaville 121
Jaffray, William, Berlin	Lavell, Dr. Michael, Kingston 403
Jameson, Robert Hamilton, Whitby 550	Lavery, William James, Hamilton 393
Janes, Simeon Heman, M.A., Toronto 592	Lee, Walter Sutherland, Toronto 48
Jardine, Rev. Robert, M.A., Brockville 639	Lee, William Augustine, Toronto 134
Jeffery, Joseph, London 571	Lefevre, Dr. John M., Brockville 721
Jessup, Hamilton Dibble, Prescott 630	Leitch, James, Cornwall
Johnson, Dr. William Henry, Fergus 481	LeMoine, James MacPherson, Quebec 528
Johnson, William, Belleville	Lennon, Rev. P., Brantford
Johnston, John, Belleville	Lewis, Dr. Frederick Wilson, Orangeville 605.
Johnston, Rev. Hugh, M.A., Toronto 215	Lewis, John, Belleville Jones, Charles Jerome, B.A., Ottawa 533
Jones, John, Toronto	Lewis, Right Rev. J. Travers, D.D., Ottawa 345
Joss, John, Toronto	Leys, John, Toronto
Joy, Dr. Sylvanus, Tilsonburg 371	Light, Alexander Luders, Quebec 454 Lindsay, James, Milton 167
K	Lizars, Daniel Home, Stratford Lloyd, Thomas Daniel, Barrie 406
Karn, Dennis W., Woodstock 591	Logan, Sir William E Kaulbach, Hon. Henry A. N., Lunenburg 344	Lorne, Marquis of Keefer, Samuel, C.E., Brockville 714	Luke, Joseph, Tilsonburg 724
Keefer, Thomas C., C.E., Ottawa 226	Lumsden, Hugh David, Montreal 768
Kennedy, John, Toronto	Lumsdin, John MacVeigh, Galt 779
Kennedy, Warring, Toronto	Lusignan, J. Baptiste Alphonse, Ottawa 745
Kent, John, Toronto	Lynch, Hon. W. Warren, M.P.P., Knowlton 118
Kerns, Major William, M.P.P., Burlington 763	Lynch, Most Rev. J. J., Archbishop, Toronto 691
Kerr, James Kirkpatrick, Q.C., Toronto 544	*
Killey, J. H. Hamilton	M
Kilroy, Rev. Edmond Burke, D.D., Stratford 268	MacArthur, Donald Alexander, Alexandria. 650
King, Dr. John S., Toronto	Macbeth, LieutColonel John, London 718

D	ال ــــــــــــــــــــــــــــــــــــ
PAGE.	PAGE.
MacCabe, John Alexander, M.A., Ottawa 303	McColl, Rev. A., Chatham
Macdonald, Dr. A. A., Toronto	McColman, Niel, M.P.P., Clarksburg 304
Macdonald, Hon. John Sandfield 54	McCord, A. T., Toronto 320
Macdonald, John, Torondo	McCracken, Thomas, Toronto 242
Macdonald, Lieut-Col. Archibald Hy., Guelph 125	McCrae, Thomas, Guelph
Macdonald, Right Hon. Sir John A., Ottawa 58	McCurdy, Dr. Archibald, Norwich 346
Macdonell, George, Cornwall 616	McDonald, Hon. John, Gananoque 694
Macdonell, Samuel Smith, Q.C., Windsor 720	McDonald, Hon. Wm., Little Glace Bay, N.S. 253
Macdougall, Dougall, Berlin	McDonald, Judge Herbert Stone, Brockville. 652
Macdougall, John Lorn, M.A., Ottawa 137	McDonald, Rev. Alex. Douglas, Seaforth 194
Macfadden, James, Stratford117	McDonald, William, Tilsonburg 609
Macfarlan, Hon. Alex., Wallace, Nova Scotia 573	McDonell, Augustine, C.E., Chatham 488
Macintyre, Thomas Macfarlane, Brantford 147	McDonough, Thomas, London
Mack, William, J.P., Cornwall 659	McDougall, Colin, Q.C., St. Thomas 434
Mackenzie, Hon. Alexander, M.P., Toronto. 548	McDougall, Hon. William, C.B., Ottawa 556
Mackenzie, John Innes, Hamilton 37	McFadden, William Hy., LL.B., Brampton. 442
Mackenzie, William Innes, Toronto 50	McGee, James, Toronto
Mackenzie, William Lyon	McGibbon, Duncan, Milton 752
Mackintosh, Charles Herbert, M.P., Ottawa. 51	McGill, Hon. James Maclaren, John James, Q.C., Toronto 470	McGreevy, Thomas, M.P., Quebec 489
MacLaren, Rev. Prof. Wm., D.D., Toronto. 225	McGregor, James, Detroit
Maclean, Rev. Mathew W., M.A., Belleville. 325	McGuin, John Bell, Napanee
Maclennau, Donald. Ban, Q.C., Cornwall 769	McGuire, Francis J., Trenton
MacMahon. Hugh, Q.C., Toronto 477	McGuire, Thomas Horace, Q.C., Kingston 702
MacMurely, Archibald, M.A., Toronto 738	McIntyre, Alexander Fraser, Ottawa 526
Macmaster, Donald, M.P., Montreal 497	McIntyre, Dr. Daniel Eugene, Cornwall 700
MacNab, Hon. Sir Allan 348.	McIntyre, John, Q.C., Kingston Macpherson, D. M., Lancaster. 728 McKellar, Archibald, Ottawa
Macpherson, Hon. Sir David, P.C., Toronto. 48	McKellar, Peter Duncan, Chatham 589
Macpherson, LieutColonel John, Ottawa 318	McKellar, Sheriff Archibald, Hamilton 56
Macqueen, Frederick William, Woodstock 189	McKenny, Thomas, Thombury
MacVicar, Principal D. H. D.D., Montreal. 149	McKeough, John, Chatham
Magill, LieutColonel Charles, Hamilton 667	McKeough, William, Chatham
Mair, Charles, Prince Albert, N.W.T 803	McKindsey, Hon. G. C., Senator, Milton 46
Mair, George, London. 332	McKinnon, Hugh, Belleville 726
Mallon, John, Toronto	McLaughlin, James Francis, Toronto 203
Manning, Alexander, Toronto	McLay, Dr. Peter W. McMurrich, Aylmer. 364
Marchand, Felix G., M.P.P., St. Johns, P.Q. 313	McLelan, Hon. A. W., M.P., Londonderry. 722
Marlatt, Dr. Charles William, Aylmer 365	McMahon, John Arthur, Kingston 594
Marling, Alexander, LL.B., Toronto. 619	McMaster, Hon. William, Toronto 464
Martin, Rev. N. H., Chatham	McMillan, Hon. Donald, Senator, Alexandria 137
Martyn, John Piper, St. Thomas	McMillan, Hugh, Detroit
Mason, Ambrose Wilcock, Toronto	McMillan, Hugh, M.P., Rigaud 158
Massey, Charles Albert 776	McMillan, James, Detroit 666
Massey, Hart Almerini, Toronto 774	McMillan, John, Toronto 209
Massue, Louis Huet, M.P., Varennes 141	McMurrich, William Barclay, M. A., Toronto 611
Mathese, David, Ottawa	McRae, William Ross, Kingston 527
Matthews, Wilbur C., Toronto 625	Meacham, James H., Belleville 553
Matthews, Wilmott Delouir, Toronto 340	Medcalf, Alfred, Toronto 124 Maughan, John, Toronto 55	Melville, Thomas R., Prescott
May, Dr. Samuel Passmore, Toronto 654	Mercer, Sheriff John, Chatham
McCarthy, Dalton, M.P., Toronto 624	Mercier, Hon. Honore, M.P.P., Montreal 709
McCarthy, John, Prescott 669	Meredith, William Ralph, M.P.P., London. 598
McCarthy, Judge Maitland, Orangeville 538	Merkley, Henry G., Morrisburg 701
McCaughey Samuel, Glyn, M.A., Seaforth. 232	Merner, Samuel. New Hamburg MACHINE, DAMINEL, ITEW MAINUUTY

Mor Mor Mor

Mor Mor

Morray
Moss
Moss
Mow Mow Mow
Mour
Moulr Muir, Muir, Muir,
Mullo
Muloci
Murph
Murph
Murph
Murray
Murray
Murray
Musson Mylius,

Page.	Page.
Merrill, William, Norwich 382	. N
Metcalf, James Henry, Kingston 626	Nairn, Alexander, Toronto
Miall, Edward, Ottawa 446	Nelson, H. A., Montreal 762
Middleton, Major-Gen., Sir Fred. D., Ottawa 490	Nelson, Hon. Hugh, Senator, Burrard Inlet 687
Millar, Alexander, Berlin 514	Nicholson, Henry Albert, London 504
Miller, Hon. William, Senator, Halifax 565	Niven, Dr. James S., London 579
Miller, John Stewart, Centreville 465	Nordheimer, Samuel, Toronto Miller, Judge William, Galt 405
Millett, James Elliott, Toronto 256	O , Millichamp, Wallace, Toronto 798	O'Brien, L. R., Toronto
Mills, George Hamilton, Hamilton 91	O'Brien, Michael Edward, Prescott 621
Mills, Hon. David, M.P., Palmyra 622	O'Connor, Daniel, Ottawa
Mills, James, M.A., Guelph 594	O'Gara, Martin, Ottawa 365
Milner, Thomas, Brampton 719	O'Hara, Major Walter 485
Minness, James, Kingston 747	O'Reilley, Dr. Gerald, Fergus 718
Mitchell, Thomas, Hamilton 684	O'Reilly, Miles, Q.C., Hamilton
Montcalm, Marquis of 93	O'Rourke, Thomas Alfred, Trenton 116
Montezambert, Lieut -Col. Chas. E., Quebec 797	Oliver, Colonel John Ryder, Kingston 723
Montgomery, Hon. D., Park Corner, P.E.I 673	Oliver, John Duggan, Toronto 96
Moodie, Mrs. Susanna	Orr, William H., Toronto 79
Moodie, Robert Baldwin, Toronto 177	Orton, Dr. George Turner, M.P., Winnipeg 766
Moore, Dr. Vincent Howard, Brockville 635	Osgoode, Hon. Chief Justice 100
Moore, James Douglas, St. Mary's 401	Oswald, LieutCol.Wm. Robert, Montreal 710
Moore, John T., Toronto 475	Owen, Joseph Gardner, J.P., Streetsville 525
Moore, Major Alex. Huggins, Hamilton 332	Oxley, James Macdonald, LL.B., Ottawa 784 Morden Amzi Lewis, Napanee
Morden, Wellington Jeffers, Hamilton 581	P
Morgan, Henry James, Ottawa	Paint, Hy. N.; M.P., Port Hawkesbury, N.S. 442
Morgan, Wm., M.P.P., Walsingham, Centre 770	Panet, LieutCol. Charles Eugene, Ottawa 358
Morgan, William Sidney, Hamilton 783	Pardee, Hon. T. Blair, M.P.P., Sarnia 7'
Morin, LieutColonel J., M.P.P., Ridgeway 757	Parke, E. Jones, Q.C., London 592
Morrice, David, Montreal	Parker, Robert, Toronto 288
Morris, Hon. Alexander, M.P.P., Toronto 536	Paterson, William, M.P., Brantford 149
Moss, Charles, Q.C., Toronto 386	Patterson, Rev. Ephraim, M.A., Stratford. 142
Moss, Chief Justice Thomas 440	Pearson, Edwin Pritchard, Toronto 122
Mowat, Hon. Oliver, M.P.P., Toronto 27	Pearson, William H., Toronto 662
Mowat, Rev. Prof. John B., D.D., Kingston 535	Pelletier, Hon. Chas. A. Pantaleon, Quebec. 162
Mowat, William, Stratford 331	Pells, Thomas, Toronto
Mountcastle, Clara H., Clinton 414	Pense, Edward J. Barker, Kingston 448
Moylan, James George, Ottawa	Perley, Henry Fullerton, C.E., Ottawa 125
Muir, John, M.A., Hamilton 101	Perry, John Ham, Whitby 612
Muir, Thomas McComb, London	Phelan Dr. Daniel, Kingston 537
Muir, William Ker, Detroit 714	Philip, Dr. David Leslie, Brantford 130
Mulholland, Robert, M.P.P., Cobourg 802	Phillips, Frederick, Toronto
Mulloch, Donald McGregor, Clinton 337	Phillips, Rev. Alfred Moore, B.D., Galt 424
Mulock, William, M.P., Toronto 519	Pickup, Dr. John Wallwork, Brockville 672
Murphy, Dr. Henry Joseph, Chatham 461	Platt, Dr. John Milton, Picton 554
Murphy, Dr. John Bernard, Belleville 560	Platt, Gilbert Dorland, B.A., Picton 334
Murphy, Edward, Montreal 764	Plumb, Hon. Josiah Burr, Senator, Niagara. 367
Murphy, Dr. Timothy Douglas, Hamilton 234	Poirier, Hon. Pascal, Senator, Richibucto. 228
Murray, Adam, London	Pollard, Dr. Stephen B., Toronto 96
Murray, Rev. James Alister, London 754	Ponton, Edward George, Belleville 459
Murray, Thomas, M.P.P., Pembroke 761	Poole, Rev. William H., LL.D., Detroit 477
Musson, George, Toronto	Porte, Captain Jonathan A., Trenton 328
Mylius, Dr. George Rudolph, Berlin 224	Potts, Rev. John, D.D., Toronto 259

京東京連通の教育を変かったのはまりとのなっているのでのできるでは、大きのはのでは、大きのでは、大きのでは、大きのでは、大きのでは、大きのでは、大きのでは、大きのでは、大きのでは、大きのでは、大きのでは、

INDEX.

PAGE
Powell, Colonel Walker, Ottawa 423 Powell, Grant, Ottawa 56
Power, Patrick 24	Rykert, John Charles, M.P., St. Catharines. 488
Preston, Dr. Robert H., M.P.P., Newboro' 74	[]
Prevost, Dr. Leander Coyteux, Ottawa 665 Price, Judge Cornelius Valleau Kingston 546
Pringle, Judge Jacob Farrand, Cornwall 674	Sanford, W. E., Hamilton 30 Schreiber, Collingwood, C.E., Ottawa 75
Q	Schultz, David L., Rockwood
Quinn, Rev. James C., Emerson, Manitoba. 233
 	Score, Richard John, Toronto 379
R	Scott, John Russell, Napanee 695
Radcliffe, Hon. Colonel Thomas 436	Scott, Robert, Galt 92 Radcliffe, Richard, Goderich 404 Rae, Dr. Francis, Oshawa
Rattray, William J 310	1
Rayside, James, M.P.P., South Lancaster. 669	Selwyn, Alfred R. Cecil, LL.D., Ottawa 356
Reade, John, Montreal 800	Sewery, Henry, Barrie
Reed, Joseph Benjamin, Toronto 38	Shanley, James, Q.C., London 784
Reid, Rev. William, D.D., Toronto 61	Shanley, Walter, M.P., Montreal 617
Reid, Robert, London 342	Shannon, Lewis William, B.A., Kingston 448
Rennie, William, Toronto 78	Sharp, John, J.P., Bath 553
Rice, Rev. James Joseph, Belleville 198	Sharpe, James William, Dresden 501 Richardson, Rev. James Bunning, London. 290	Shaw, LieutCol. George Alex., Toronto 166
Riddell, William Henry, Waterloo 108	Sheppard, Edmund, Bowmanville 44
Riopel, Louis Joseph, M.P., Quebec 463	Sherwood, Arthur Percy, Ottawa 731
Ritchie, George, Belleville 470	Shortiss, Thomas, Toronto
Robertson, Alexander, M.P., Belleville 386	Sibbald, Rev. E. W., Belleville 405
Robertson, Alexander, Brantford 663	Simpson, William, Toronto
Cobertson, James Smith, Whitby 170	Sinclair, Dr. Lachlin Curry, Tilsonburg 469
Robinson, Christopher Blackett, Toront 280	Sippi, Charles Augustus, M.A., London 701
Robinson, Hon. John Beverly, Toronto 449	Sippi, George Buckley, London 719
Robillard, Honore, M.P.P., Ottawa 790	Skead, Hon. James
Robitaille, Dr. Louis, New Calisle, P.Q 289	Skinner, LieutCol. J. Atchison, Hamilton 618
Robitaille, Hon. Theodore, Senator, Quebec. 272	Sleeman, George, Guelph
Rogers, Elias, Toronto	Small, Henry Beaumont, Ottawa 42
Rolston, William H., Toronto 380	Small, John, M.P., Toronto
Roper, John Pollard, Milton	Smart, William Lynn, Hamilton 35
Rorke, Joseph, Clarksburg 217	Smithers, C. F., Montreal 787
Rose, Daniel, Toronto 494	Smith, Alexander, Napanee 408
Rose, George Maclean, Toronto 352	Smith, Dr. Charles Merrill, Orangeville 617
Rose, Hon. Sir John, Bart., London Eng 658	Smith, George M., Aylmer, Ont 422
Ross, Arthur Wellington, M.P., Winnipeg. 174	Smith, Hon. Donald Alexander, Montreal 782
Ross, Dr. Alexander Milton, Montreal 759	Smith, Hon, Sidney, Q.C., Cobourg 240
Ross, Dr. James, Toronto	Smith, James K., M.A., Galt
Ross, Hon. Alex. M., M.P.P., Goderich 530	Smith, Larratt William, D.C.L., Toronto 426
Ross, Hon. George W., M.P.P., Strathroy. 43	Smith, Major Albert M., London 397
Ross, LieutColonel Thomas, Ottawa 211	Smith, Professor Goldwin, LL.D., Toronto 151
Ross, John Jeremiah, Chatham 560	Smith, William John, Toronto
Royal, Joseph, M.P., St. Boniface 583	Smithson, William Henry, Ottawa 200
Rutherford, Dr. David Bell, Morrisburg 799	Smythe, Edward H., Q.C., Kingston 305
Russell, Andrew, Ottawa	Snider, Elias Weber B., M.P.P., St. Jacob's 193
Ruttan, Dr. Allen, Napanee	Snider, William, Waterloo
Ryan, Hon. Thomas, Senator, Montreal 581	Spiers, William, Berlin Ryan, Peter, Toronto
10jau, 10001, 10101100 3/2	Springer, Sheriff Moses, Berlin 315

70
PAGE.	PAGE.
Spry, Daniel, Barrie 343	Trow, James, M.P., Stratford
Stairs, John Fitz-William, M.P., Halifax . 155	Turnbull, James, B.A., Clinton
Stanton, Dr. George, Simcoe	Turner, Hon. James, Senator, Hamilton 311
Steckel, Louis Joseph Rene, Ottawa 142	Turner, John, Toronto
Stephenson, Rufus, M.P., Chatham, Ont 645	Tupper, Hon. Sir Charles, London, Eng 499
Stevenson, James, Hamilton	Tye, Dr. George Archer, Chatham
Stewart, McLeod, M.A., Ottawa 759	Tytler, William, B.A., Guelph 363
Stone, Thomas, Chatham, Ont	. V
Strathy, Henry Hatton, Q.C., Barrie 411	T7 All T0 1 T0 01 1
Strathy, Henry Seton, Toronto 490	Van Allen, Daniel Ross, Chatham 456
Street, William Purvis Rochfort, London 460	Vanasse, Fabien Vertefeuille, M.P., Montreal 586
Strong, Hon. Samuel Henry, Judge, Ottawa. 486	Vaudreuil, Marquis de Stuart, John, Hamilton	Vanhorn, John F., Picton
Sulivan, Hon. Michael, Senator, Kingston 633	Van Straubenzie, LieutCol. Bowen, Montreal 777
Sulte, Benjamin, F.R.S.C., Ottawa 243	Verral, George W., Toronto
Sutherland, Hugh McKay, M.P., Winnipeg. 521	Verreau. l'Abbe Hospice A.,D.L., Montreal 689
Sutherland, Rev. Donald George, London 463	Vidal, Hon. Alexander, Senator, Sarnia 196
Swayze, George Albert, Belleville 329	Vickers, John Joseph, Toronto
Sweatman, Right Rev. A., Bishop, Toronto. 657	Vincent, Joseph Louis, Montreal 743
Sweetland, Sheriff John, M.D., Ottawa 237	w Swift, James, Kingston
Sylvester, Captain Solomon, Toronto 383	Wagner, Jacob Peter, Toronto 345
τ	Wagner, Joseph, Galt
	Wagner, Very Rev. J. Theodore, Windsor, Ont. 606
Tabaret, Very Rev. Joseph H., D D., Ottawa 452	Walkem, Richard Thomas, Q.C., Kingston. 676
Taché, Dr. Joseph Charles, Ottawa 68	Walker, LieutColonel John, London 341
Taché, Right Rev. Alex. A., St. Boniface 791	Waller, William Henry, Ottawa 39
Taillon, Hon. Louis Olivier, M.P.P., Quebec 531	Walsh, Michael, Ingersoll
Tait, Melbourne McTaggart, Q.C., Montreal 779	Walsh, Right Rev. John, Bishop, London. 296
Tait, Rev. Donald, B.A., Berlin	Walsh, William Legh, Orangeville 603
Tanguay, Abbe, LL.D., Ottawa	Ward, Henry Alfred, Port Hope 63
Tasse, Joseph, M.P., Ottawa	Waterhouse, John, Tilsonburg 656
Taylor, Cyrus Miller, Waterloo 266	Watters, Rev. Bernard James, Goderich 205
Taylor, Joseph, Detroit	Weatherhead, George Henry, Brockville 974
Tecumseh, Chief	Webb, William, Streetsville
Temple, Thomas, M.P., Frederickton 497	Weldon, Chas. Wesley, M.P., St John, N.B. 219
Thomas, Charles Lewis, Hamilton 786	West, Richard, Toronto 236
Thomas, Edward George, Woodstock 261	Whelihan, Patrick, St. Mary's
Thomas, Francis Wolferstan, Montreal 597	White, Frederick, Ottawa 679
Thompson, John, Tilsonburg	White, Hon. Thomas, M.P., Ottawa 402
Thompson, Thomas, J.P., Toronto 804	White, Richard, Montreal 793
Thomson, James, Newburgh 588	White, Solomon, M.P.P., Windsor, Ont 625
Thomson, Robert, Woodstock	White, William, Ottawa
Thornburn. John, LL.D., Ottawa 427	Whiteaves, Joseph Fred., F.G.S., Ottawa 204
Tickell, George Skinner, Belleville 118	Whitelaw, Robert, Woodstock 267
Tilley, Sir Samuel Leonard. Fredericton 128	Whiting, John Lanyon, Kingston 447
Tims, Thomas Dillon, Ottawa	Whitney, James Pliny, Morrisburgh 725
Tisdale, LieutColonel David, Q.C., Simcoe. 214	Whyte, William, Montreal 757
Tizard, George Langrish, Oakville 201	Wickens, Richard, Toronto
Todd, Alpheus, LL.D., C.B	Wicksteed, Gustavus W., Q.C., Ottawa 202
Todd, A. Thornton, Toronto	Wicksteed, Richard John, Ottawa 698
Toller, Captain Fred., Ottawa	Widdifield, Dr. J. Hy., M.P.P., Newmarket 785
Toms, Judge Isaac Francis, Goderich 601	Wiggins, E. Stone, LL.D., Ottawa 482
Townshend, Charles James, Amherst, 632	Wigle, Lewis, M.P., Leamington 807
Trerice, Alexander, Dresden 780	Wilkie, Daniel, M.A., Quebec

The second of th

Page.	PAGE
Wilkie, Daniel Robert, Toronto 796	Woods, Joseph 55 Wilkie, Rev., Daniel LL.D., 420
Wilkinson, James Hands, Windsor, Ont 690	Woods, Robert Stuart, Q.C., Chatham 47
Williams, Dr. Joseph Arthur, Ingersoll 293	Woods, Samuel, M.A., Ottawa 8
Williams, LtCol. A. Trefusis Heneage 153	Woodworth, Douglas B., M.P., Kentville 65
Williams, Walter Scott, Napanee 647	Workman, Thomas H., Montreal 778
Wilmot, Henry, M.P.P., Kingston 722	Worthington, Dr. Addison, Clinton 466
Wilmot, Samuel, Newcastle 755	Wright, John, London 32:
Wilson, Dr. John Henry, M.P., St. Thomas. 455	Wright, Joseph, Toronto 254
Wilson, Dr. William, Ottawa	Wright, LieutColonel Alonzo, M.P., Hull. 574
Wilson, Hon. Adam, Judge, Toronto 545	Wright, Rev. Joel Tombleson, St. Mary's 378
Wilson, Squire Frank, Toronto 480	Wright, Rev. Peter, B.D., Stratford 282
Wiman, Erastus, New York 339	Wright Thomas Henry, Sandwich 600
Winchester, John, Toronto	Wylie, LieutColonel David, Brockville 542 Windatt, Richard, Bowmanville 76
Withrow, Rev. W. H., D.D., Toronto 135	Y
Wolfe, General	Yarker, George Wheatley, Toronto 383
Wood, John Fisher, M.P., Brockville 252	Youmans, Mrs., Picton 419
Wood, LtCol. Alpheus Field, M.P.P., Madoc 758	Young, Hon. John 67
Wood, Samuel Casey, Toronto 485	Young, James, Ottawa 520
Woodcock, Ralph Alexander, Ingersoll 355	Young, Rev. Egerton Ryerson, Meaford 291
Woods, James P., Q.C., Stratford 472	Young, Rev. Joseph, Belleville 359
Woods John Toronto 159	Vouna Samuel Saujer Trenten 50

da
of boo
St. mo
the out sel
of san she lan hig tur
his sam
self len
hig
tur
His
sam
tena
len
len
settli
to be ten regio
was r regio
where strugg

A CYCLOPÆDIA

OF

CANADIAN BIOGRAPHY.

Moodie, Mrs. Susanna, was the sixth daughter of the late Thomas Strickland. of Reydon Hall, Suffolk, England, and was born on the 6th of December, 1803. This Strickland family was certainly one of the most remarkable known in England, since the famous "Nest of Nightingales," five out of the six daughters having made themselves more or less celebrated in the realm of letters. At the age of thirteen, Mrs. Susanna Moodie lost her father, at whose hands she had received her education. Mr. Strickland was a man of considerable wealth, highly cultured, and much devoted to literature, so he spent much of his means upon his library, and instilled into his family the same love for belles lettres that he felt himself. Many have regretted that the excellent man did not live to see the fruition of his care. Susanna, it is said, began to write when in her sixteenth year, her early productions being poems, and tales for children. In 1829-30, she put out a volume entitled, "Enthusiasm, and other Poems." In the same year, during a visit to London, she met Lieutenant J.W. Dunbar Moodie, Esq., fourth son of the late James Moodie, of Melsetter, Orkney Islands, to whom she was married on the 4th of April, 1831. Lieutenant Moodie belonged to the 21st Fusiliers, and was then on half pay. They left England in the following year for Canada, settling at Cobourg for a few months, thence proceeding to the Township of Hamilton, eight miles from Cobourg, where they took a farm. Here they remained a year, after which they permitted themselves, unwisely, to be pursuaded to settle in the backwoods, ten miles north of Peterborough. region was then a perfect wilderness. There was no church, no school, no refined society, and very little cleared land near where they took up their abode. Here, struggling with all the privations belong-

95

323

383

419

67

520

291

359

ing to life in the woods, they lived for eight years, in the meantime spending all their available money in the purchase of wild lands, and in the operation of the farm, an occupation for which the family, gentle bred, and unaccustomed, and unsuited to labour, were singularly unfit. When, in 1837, the rebellion broke out, Mr. Moodie, who, from his birth and military training, was a devoted loyalist, hastened away to Toronto, leaving his wife and four little children, the eldest being only in her fifth year, behind him in the bush. The summer following, he remained absent, and much of the crops were lost, because there was no help to harvest it. All this Mrs. Moodie vividly and feelingly describes in her delightful book, "Roughing it in the Bush." This was the first ambitious literary effort of Mrs. Moodie, and it attracted wide attention. The style was simple, limpid and picturesque: it was full of movement, and contained pen portraits which were true to the life of the hardships of the family's wilderness life; of the character of the neighbours with whom she was thrown in contact, and of her alternating hopes and disappointments. When the book came out the Canadians who were pictured in it were terribly wroth, and probably it was the sex of the author that saved her from maltreatment. But she never once exceeded the bounds of truth in her delineations, and invariably pictured the good traits as well as the bad ones, of the ordinary Canadian backwoods family. The book was brought out in England in 1850, but the greatest portion of its contents had already been published in the Literary Garland, Montreal. Encouraged by the success of this book, Mrs. Moodie afterwards brought out in quick succession, through her London publishers, the Messrs. Bentley, "Life in the Clearings," "Flora Lindsay," "Mark Hurdleston," "The World

Before Them," "Matrimonial Speculation," and other works of a more or less fictitious character. It may be said here that after eight years of travail in the woods, Mrs. Moodie received the glad tidings that her husband had been appointed Sheriff of the County of Hastings. In a late edition of "Roughing it in the Bush," brought out by Messrs. Hunter, Rose & Co., Publishers, Toronto, Mrs. Moodie writes a preface recounting the social, industrial, educational and moral progress of Canada, since the time of her landing. After Mr. Moodie's death at Belleville, in 1869, Mrs. Moodie made her home in Toronto with her younger son, Mr. R. B. Moodie; but on his removal to a new residence out of town, Mrs. Moodie remained with her daughter, Mrs. J. J. Vickers, and passed peacefully away on the afternoon of April 8th, 1885, surrounded by her children and grandchildren. Her aged sister, Mrs. Traill, was beside her at the last. Mrs. Moodie's often expressed wish to be laid beside her beloved husband at Belleville, where the happiest part of her years were spent, was carried out, and her remains were followed to their last restingplace, close to the beautiful Bay of Quinté, by a large number of dear friends. Mrs. Moodie lived to see Upper Canada develop from a rough wilderness into the proudest Province in British North America, and her sons and grandsons making their way successfully in various parts of the Domi-The youngest of Mrs. Moodie's descendants are some great grandchildren, all of whom, strange to say, are residing in the great Canadian North-West, which during the best part of her life-time was a terra incognita.

Baldwin, Hon. Robert, C.B. This distinguished, sincere and able advocate of liberal and responsible government in Canada, was born in the city of Toronto in 1804. He was the son of the Honourable William Warren Baldwin, of Summer Hill, near Corregoline, in the County of Cork, Ireland. Arriving in Canada, the family, like most immigrants of the time, had to settle themselves in the wilderness; and the Baldwins took up a homestead in the township of Clarke, on Lake Ontario. Soon growing tired of the disadvantages of backwoods life, W. W. Baldwin removed to Torento, then known as York, and made his residence at Spadina. Mr. Baldwin was a medical man by profession, having taken his degree of M.D. at Edinburgh; but not having a taste for that calling, after removing to York, he betook himself to the law. He represented Norfolk in the Parliament of Upper Canada, and about six months before his death, which occurred on the 8th of January, 1844, he was called to the Legislative Council. Robert, the subject of this sketch, entered the practice of law in 1825, in the well known firm of Baldwin & Son, continuing this calling through his political career till 1848, when he retired. He made his entry into public life by being elected as the Liberal candidate for the Upper Canada Assembly in 1829, in opposition to Mr. Small, the henchman of the Family Compact. The whole influence of the placemen was used against Mr. Baldwin, and William Lyon Mackenzie, who, with all his rashness and roughness, was right at heart, wrote: "Our earnest wish is that the election of Mr. Baldwin may prove to the world that the Capital of Upper Canada has burst her fetters and followed the praiseworthy example of her sister city. Quebec." Imitating the liberal traditions of his worthy father, Robert Baldwin found himself in uncompromising opposition to the Sir John Colborne administration; but his resistance was always offered with dignity, firmness, and proper restraint. Indeed had zealous Reformers like Lyon Mackenzie adopted the calmer and more convincing methods of Mr. Baldwin, muskets, pitchforks, and such like expedients, would not have been necessary weapons in the battle for responsible government. The opposition with which Mr. Baldwin allied himself had an existence as early as 1820, and was a formidable body; but it had the misfortune of gathering unto itself a num-ber of honest but over-zealous partizans. It is not fair to lose sight of the fact, no matter how odious to us may seem the dominancy of the Family Compact, that the hostility toward the Tory party at that time did not consist altogether of hatred towards political oppression, but in some measure in the natural antagonism of the lower class of the people to those of the higher social scale. Of the twelve years from 1824 to 1836, the Compact Government was in a minority for eight years in the Legislative Assembly; and bills passed by the Assembly were persistently rejected by the Legislative Council. Here indeed was a field for a patriot, and Mr. Baldwin did not neglect the opportunity. His voice was constantly raised with dignified firmness in advocy of making the Executive responsible to the House of Assembly. In 1836, he visited England to endeavour to impress upon Lord Glenelg the

of ac is hi

id

it

Ea oli

no

Lo

Ba

wa

had

adv

Bal

Cor

he

Cal

and

in 1

and

rupi

Hе

of t

In 1

His

dina

ber,

the

seve

mod

a cer

that

ment

powe

peopl

this,

for h

Clerg speak

altho

gift of him i regard

worth eldest

at Be

Cairng the Co

the 13

Domin

father.

never

was on

of the

Bla

necessity of applying the English principle of responsibility to the Executive. Glenelg, of course, did not permit Mr. Baldwin to be admitted to his presence, he being a Colonist, and not a Crown tool; but he allowed him to address him in writing. Mr. Baldwin's claim for Executive responsibility, his "one idea," as the Tories jeeringly called it, found a powerful advocate in Lord Durham; and it may be said that the publication of the Earl's report was the doom-sound of the oligarchical system. Yet responsibility did not come for many a weary year after this. Lord Metcalf, after the resignation of the Baldwin-Lafontaine Cabinet in November, was nine months without a Ministry. had declared that he would only consult his advisers on "adequate occasions." Mr. Baldwin was first sworn in an Executive Councillor, on Feb. 18th, 1836; and in 1840 he became Solicitor-General in Mr. Draper's In 1842, he became Premier and Attorney-General for Upper Canada, in the Baldwin-Lafontaine Administration, and this position he maintained till his rupture with Metcalfe the following year. He resumed office again in 1848, the date of the virtual downfall of the Tory fabric. In 1851, he quitted ministerial life for ever. His death took place at his residence, Spadina, near Toronto, on the 9th of December, 1858. Mr. Baldwin married a sister of the Hon. Robert Sullivan, who bore him several children. Robert Baldwin was a moderate Reformer, capable of progress to a certain limit, but incapable of it beyond that point. The vital principle of government, however, that of giving the governing power into the hands of a majority of the people, he devoted his life to advocate, and this, in the eyes of history, makes amends for his attitude towards the question of the Clergy Reserves. He was not a fluent speaker, but he was a convincing one, and although he never flattered, and had not the gift of geniality and bonhomie, all who knew him in private life or politically were one in regarding him as a sincere patriot, and a worthy high-minded man.

ar-

вiх

on

to

սԵof.

ldgh

re-

by for

þpĥе

of

ld-

þо, 88

sh

ay er ed

hе

is y, id ie

g n-ot le i-

d e

Blake, The Hon. Edward, Q.C., eldest son of William Hume Blake, was born at Bear Creek, now known respectively as Cairngorm, Katesville and Mount Hope, in the County of Middlesex, Upper Canada, on the 13th of October, 1833. He was christened Dominick Edward, after his paternal grandfather, but the first part of the name was never practically adopted. When Edward was only a few months old, his father, tired

a life in the backwoods, removed to Toronto, which was thereafter to be the dwellingplace of the gifted and high-minded Liberal statesman. When a very young lad, Edward Blake is said to have given evidence of the great mental powers that he was afterwards to bring to the service of his country. He was a rapid and omnivorous reader, and is said to have had unusual capacity for assimilation, and also an excellent memory. The family lived at Woodlawn, a tasteful and comfortable residence on Yonge Street, and there Edward Blake received his early education. He was instructed by a private tutor; and this was supplemented by the supervision of his classical studies by his excellent father. On Sunday evenings it was the wont of William Hume Blake to cause his sons to read aloud to him from the Scriptures and the sacred poets; and in this way Edward, at an early age, acquired the clearness and accuracy in delivery which are so prominent now in his public speaking. Mr. Courtenay was Edward's first tutor, and this instructor was succeeded by Messrs. Wedd & Brown, who afterwards became teachers in Upper Canada The latter institution he entered in his eleventh year, and at this time it is said he had read and digested a number of Among his classmates he did not stand conspicuously superior, but his mental parts were solid, and of that class which watchful masters say will endure. To get his lesson was a slight effort; so extraordinary was his memory that he could announce early in the evening that his tasks were completed, and he was prepared to read aloud. After some time, as the business of Edward's father increased, the family moved into the city, taking up their abode in the house on the south of Wellington and Bay Sfreets, and on the site occupied now by Messrs. Wyld, Brock & Co. When Edward was in his fourteenth year, he accompanied his father to the mother country, after which they visited Paris. After his return Master Blake again applied himself diligently to his studies. and was a successful competitor for the Governor-General's prize, for which he was complimented by Lord Elgin. He subsequently entered the Toronto University and duly graduated. His inclination being for the legal profession, he was articled to Mr. Alexander Macdonnell; was admitted as an Attorney in Trinity Term, 1856, and the following Michaelmas Term was called to the bar. He carried on business of the privations and hardships incident to | for some time alone, and then entered into partnership with Mr. Stephen Maule Jarvis, the firm being known as that of "Jarvis & Blake." This partnership was subsequently dissolved, when a new firm was established comprising Edward and his brother Samuel Thereafter the name of the Hume Blake. firm many times changed. In 1858, he married Miss Margaret Cronyn, of London, a daughter of the late Right Reverend Benjamin Cronyn, Bishop of Huron. An unaccountable lack of self-confidence led him, even when his talent had made him conspicuous, to often distrust himself, and it is said that during the early years of his practice he did not hold his own briefs. After a severe struggle with himself, and hard study, he outgrew this fault, and became in time one of the most able lawyers at the bar. Especially was he expert in cross-examination. Ever since 1867, the Reform party, which had been in a state of disorganization, and comparative lassitude, recognised what a gain it would be to add a man of Edward Blake's great ability and high character to its ranks. So many overtures were made to him, and, after much earnest solicitation, he reluctantly consented to their request. Mr. Edward Blake was elected to the House of Commons for West Durham, the same constituency which he represents at this day; and the electors of South Bruce chose him for the local legislature, dual represen-tation being then permitted. In December, 1869, he became leader of the Provincial Opposition, succeeding Mr. Archibald Mc-Kellar. He retained the leadership of the Opposition for eighteen months. Ontario elections of 1871, John Sandfield Macdonald's Coalition Government lost many of its supporters. On the assembling of the Legislature Mr. Mackenzie moved a a direct want of confidence in the Ministry, and Mr. Blake supported the motion in a magnificent speech. The Ministry was overthrown, and Mr. Blake called on to form a government, a task which he accepted much against his inclination. He took the office of President of the Council without a salary. Shortly after the prorogation of Parliament, the condition of his health made it neces-sary for him to go to Europe. In the autumn he resigned the leadership to take his seat in the House of Commons, dual representation having been abolished. very readily made his great abilities felt in the latter body; and his speech in reply to Sir John Macdonald on the occasion of the Pacific Scandal was the most powerful utterance that had ever been heard in that House. On the downfall of Sir John Macdonald's administration Mr. Blake entered Mr. Mackenzie's Cabinet without portfolio, but resigned on the following February, in consequence of ill-health. In 1875, he accepted office again as Minister of Justice, his health being improved by a visit to England. In June, 1877, he resigned the ministership of Justice and became President of the Council. Shortly after the downfall of the administration he was chosen leader of the Opposition in place of Mr. Mackenzie. Mr. Blake has been instrumental in the creation of several valuable acts of legislation. He advocates some change in our relations with the mother country; and, as far as can be ascertained, the change he proposes is the adoption of something in the nature of a federation of the empire. He advocates the reconstruction of the Senate in such a manner as to bring it more in harmony with popular institutions, and has made a speech powerful in argument and irresistible in logic, showing that Canada should have the right to make her own Commercial treaties. Mr. Blake's public character is above reproach, and his entire career has been an honour to Canadian politics. He has sickened of the ways of party, and is often pained at being held responsible for the utterances of irresponsible followers. He has frequently contemplated resigning the leadership of the Liberal party, declaring that expediency, not conviction, is some-times hardly less the rule among his supporters than among their opponents. is charged with being repellent in manner, but the truth seems to be that he is above flattery and the arts and tricks by which men of less honour and principle would maintain an ascendancy over their followers. Mr. Blake sometimes propounds schemes that are impracticable; he is frequently timid when the time arrives for decision and courage, yet for all this he is in all the higher qualities, the ablest, but not the most successful statesman in Canada. In this age when our people are party blind, and to a large extent demoralized by the corruption of politicians, a highminded and honourable man like Edward Blake, is sure not to get the recognition that he deserves. But the force of his example, and the wisdom of his precepts cannot fail to leave their impression on our young generation, and eventually to bear their fruit. It may not be out of place to add that he was defeated in South Bruce in 1878, but was the following year elected by acclamation for Durham, his present constituency.

e b o t m in fr

uı

of

w

to

en

bo TI

de

He

ph

an

res

183

of t est

of a

Mr

poli

bec

Sta

til i

don

the

ciat

M. F

rian

Chie

ward

Post

Edir

after

man

ofter

rigin

the r mous

name

missi

 $\mathbf{D}\mathbf{y}\mathbf{m}$ move

joine

the n

paper

cal le

ng i

active

Dymond, Alfred Hutchinson, was born at Croydon, County of Surrey, England, August 21, 1827. He was educated at the Public School of the Society of Friends at that place, of which institution his father, Mr. Henry Dymond, was for some time the Superintendent. He was engaged in early life in mercantile pursuits, but devoted himself chiefly, from the time of attaining manhood till thirty years of age, to advocating the abolition of capital punishment, lecturing in behalf of that movement in all parts of England, and exerting himself frequently with success in behalf of persons under sentence of death, where the justice of the conviction was open to doubt, or where ameliorating circumstances appeared to justify clemency. Many of his experiences while so engaged were related in a book published by him in 1865, entitled, The Law on its. Trial, not a few of the incidents recorded being of thrilling interest. He was also the author of numerous pamphlets and brochures on the same question. and all of these productions showed careful research, and fresh vigorous thought. In 1857 he received an appointment on the staff of the Morning Star newspaper, then recently established in London as the representative of advanced Liberal principles, and of which Mr. Cobden, Mr. Bright, and other Liberal political leaders, were active promoters. He became ultimately general manager of the Star, and continued to hold that position until its amalgamation, in 1869, with the London Daily News. During his connection with the Star, he had for his colleagues or associates, among others, Justin McCarthy, now M.P. for Longford, the well-known historian and novelist; Sir John Gorrie, now Chief Justice of the Leeward Islands; Edward Russell, Editor of the Liverpool Daily Post: Charles A. Cooper, Editor of the Edinburgh Scotsman, the late Dr. Faucher, afterwards a prominent member of the German parliament; Frederick W. Chesson, so often heard of as the Secretary of the Aborigines' Protection Society; William Black, the novelist; and Archibald Forbes, the famous War Correspondent. The two lastnamed gentlemen received their first commissions on the London press from Mr. In October, 1869, he re-Dymond's hands. moved with his family to Toronto, and joined the staff of the Toronto Globe. During the nine years of his connection with that paper he wrote a large portion of its political leading articles. Shortly after settling in Toronto he commenced to take an active part in political affairs, particularly

 \mathbf{Mac}

t re-

nsepted

alth

ship

the

the

Mr.

tion

He

vith

the

bf a ates

h a ony ade sisuld

er-

ter

188

He

is

for

rs.

ng

e-

p. He er, ve ch ld dds

In

during the Ontario elections of 1871, and the Dominion elections of 1872. general election of January, 1874, following on the downfall of the Macdonald Goternment, after the Pacific Scandal disclosures, Mr. Dymond was elected after a contest, by a majority of 338, for the North Riding of the County of York, his opponent being Mr. Wm. Thorne, the Warden of the County. He represented North York during the succeeding five sessions, giving a warm support to the Hon. Alexander Mackenzie's administration, and taking a very active part both in debates and the work of committees. At the general election in September, 1878, he was again, on the unanimous invitation of the Liberal party in the Riding, a candidate for North York, but under the adverse influences of the so-called National Policy reaction, was defeated by a majority of ten votes. He took a very active part in connection with the local elections of 1879, in editing the literature of the campaign, and addressing public meetings. He acted on several occasions as a commissioner in municipal investigations, under appointments from the Provincial Government. In 1880, he was appointed the executive officer and a member of the Ontario Agricultural Commission, the results of which appeared during the session of 1881, in the shape of five bulky volumes, including the Report and its Appendices, the compilation of the Report, and arrangement and revision of the whole mass of evidence being accomplished by Mr. Dymond in less than three months. In April, 1881, he was appointed by the Ontario Government, Principal of the Institution for the Education of the Blind at Brantford, which position he still holds. While in England Mr. Dymond was identified with efforts for parliamentary reform, the extension of the suffrage, and the repeal of all impediments to free and cheap literature. He was also a most enthusiastic supporter of the Northern cause during the American Civil War. While a member of the Canadian Parliament, he carried through a bill to enable persons charged with common assault to give evidence in their own behalf, the first measure embodying such a principle in Canadian criminal legislation. During the Dunkin Act agitation in Toronto, he was Vice-President of the association to promote the adoption of the Act, and presided at most of the large open-air gatherings held in the Amphitheatre on Yonge Street, in favour of the Act. Mr. Dymond, while in Parliament, assisted materially in the adoption of the present Temperance Act, popularly known as the Scott Act. He has always advocated the principles of Free Trade, so far as they may be found compatible with revenue necessities. He took, when in Parliament, a liberal view of the Pacific Railway policy, as necessary to the wants and exigencies of the Dominion, while opposed to undue haste in its construction, or to any arrangements calculated to retard the free settlement of the North-West. He has always advocated the broadest extension of Provincial rights as opposed to Federal centralization. He has been since early life a member of the Anglican Church, and has of late years taken an active part in the affairs of that Church, both locally and as a member of the Diocesan Synod of Huron, to which Brantford belongs. He married, in 1852. Miss Helen Susannah Henderson. of London, England, and has a large family of sons and daughters. As a writer upon political topics, Mr. Dymond occupies a prominent position. As a parliamentarian, he was industrious, vigorous, and always effective. His absence from Parliament now is a serious loss to his party and to the country.

Cartier, Sir George E .- Some of those who are authorities on genealogy, declare him to be a descendant of Jacques Cartier or Quartier who first discovered Canada. The discoverer, it is ascertained, left no issue in Canada, but he had some nephews who were in the habit of going backwards and forwards between Canada and France who did, and one of these is fixed upon as the ancestor of the subject of this sketch. George Etienne Cartier was born on the 6th of September. 1814, at St. Antoine, on the Chambly river, in Verchères, province of Quebec. Here resided the various members of the Cartier family, since the date on which he first took up his abode there; and the grandfather of Geo. Etienne was one of the first parliamentary representatives of the County of Verchères. Under the Constitutional Act of 1791, it may be noted this county was called Surrey. M. Cartier was educated at St. Sulpice College, Montreal, going through a collegiate course of eight years. Leaving College, he was articled as a student-at-law in the office of M. E.E. Rodier, a leading advocate at the Montreal bar. In 1835 he commenced the practice of the law, and chose Montreal as the theatre of his career. By the indomitable force of character which so contributed to his subsequent political prominence, he soon succeeded in forcing his way into the front rank of the legal confraternity and in establishing for himself a lucrative practice. He had associated with him in partnership J.

A. Berthelot and M. Dummerville. M. Cartier was a law student there were mutterings of discontent abroad; for this was the time when the Family Compact was dominant. In Lower Canada the heel of this pampered clique was most felt, for, in addition to the French being colonists, they were also an alien and conquered race; and the dull-witted gentlemen in the Colonial office regarded it as part of the moral duty of their officials to keep these people in restraint. There was a nominal representation in the House of Assembly, but the Legislative Council was the stronghold of the Family. Between these two bodies there was incessant strife, but in the contest the Assembly was always driven to the wall. This was the condition of affairs that produced the fiery, rash but patriotic and highminded Papineau. It is needless to say that the French Canadians almost to a man supported M. Papineau; and among the adherents was found the energetic and persistent barrister of Montreal, M. Cartier. But M. Cartier had much prudence and foresight, and refused to follow Papineau after the fiasco of 1837. Indeed in later years, after the exiled leader of the rebellion returned to his native land, he found in George Etienne Cartier an over-mastering rival. M. Cartier was first elected to parliament for the County of Verchères in 1848; and this constituency he continued to represent till 1861 when he defeated M. Dorion, the Goliath of the Rouges in Mon-On the 25th of January, 1856, he became provincial secretary in the MacNab-Taché Ministry; on the 24th of May in the same year he succeeded Mr. Drummond as Attorney-General for Lower Canada on the formation of the Taché-Macdonald administration. On the 6th of August, 1858, the wheel went round, M. Taché disappeared, and there was ushered in the Cartier-Macdonald Government. M. Cartier's political career was a very useful one, and he is looked upon, and perhaps deservedly, by the French Canadian people as the greatest statesman that the French Province has produced. was instrumental in the abolition of seignorial tenure; helped to produce the legislation making the Legislative Council elective; aided in the secularization of the Clergy Reserves, and in bringing about Confederation, besides several other important measures. Shortly after Confederation Her Majesty the Queen created him a baronet. He took an active part in the Pacific Railway project, and died in England just as the scandal in connection with that undertaking

O H

a go

m

A

M

th

inc

wh

Fr

sel

Jol

in

bod

pol

the

his

185 uр

ing

was coming into light. M. Cartier was a hard and fast partyist, but a devoted friend The great secret of his success of his race. was his strong ambition, and his almost phenomenal perseverance and energy. In private life his name was always above reproach, and in his public capacity, although as stated a conspicuous type of a partyist, very little of definite reproach clings about his name. Indeed some of his admirers, and those whose statements are entitled to regard, aver that the great statesman made a practice of sacrificing his private interests to those of the public. As a speaker he was sometimes regarded tiresome, but it would be more correct to say that he was exhaustive. It was customary with those who heard him making speeches to say, after he had sat down, that nothing more remained to be said. Every point of value was brought into light, every argument of weight was skilfully marshalled and made to bear in the direction of the speaker's con-He had the gift too, of being master of both English and French, an accomplishment necessary in a prominent Canadian statesman. The English statesman ought to know the French language if he would be in a position to judge fairly and understand correctly when discussion arises on the floor of the House. Now, Sir Hector Langevin is master of an incisive and most telling English, besides being one of the ablest speakers of his own language in Canada. M. Chapleau is also a very good speaker in English, besides possessing much oratorical power in his native tongue. As a statesman, it need not be repeated, M. Cartier was perhaps the most successful that has ever appeared in the French province. He was on the scenes during a period when there was bitter rivalry between the French and English races; and how himself and that most astute Englishman Sir John could ever work during all this time in the same traces, is a marvel to everybody. Some do say that Mr. Macdonald's policy was one of yielding to his rival till the hour came that put the chaplet upon his own brows. Once in the House,-in 1858, upon the resignation of the Ministry —the Honourable Isaac Buchanan summed up the character of M. Cartier in the following lines from Horace's magnificent ode :-

hile

ere

his

act

eel

or.

bn-

er-

in

the

ese

re-

 $_{
m pld}$

ies

est

11.

ho-

h-

Justum et tenacem propositi virum Non civium ardor prava jubentium, Non vultus instantis tyranni Mente quatit solida, neque Auster Dux inquieti turbidus Adriæ, Nec fulminantis magna Jovis manus ;

Si fractus illabatur orbis, Impavidum ferient ruinæ."

Brymner, Douglas, Historical Archivist of the Dominion, was born in Greenock. Scotland, in the year 1823. He is the fourth son of Alexander Brymner, banker, originally from Stirling, where the family held for many years, a prominent position. elder Brymner was a man of fine intellectual attainments, an enthusiast in letters, and refined in his tastes and feelings. He had great influence over his children, and took every opportunity to instil into their minds a hearty love for literature in all its branches. They had the additional advantage of frequent intercourse with living men of letters, and their acquaintance with the writings of the most eminent and esteemed authors of the time soon became exten-The mother of Douglas Brymner was Elizabeth Fairlie, daughter of John Fairlie, merchant in Greenock, who died at an early age, leaving his widow and family in comfortable circumstances. The subject of our sketch was educated at the Greenock Grammar school, where, under the skilful tuition of Dr. Brown, he mastered the classics and higher branches of study. After leaving school, Mr. Brymner received a thorough mercantile training. He began business on his own account, and subsequently admitted his brother Graham as partner, on the return of the latter from the West Indies. where he had been engaged for some years. The brothers were highly successful, the younger filling, in later years, several important offices, such as justice of the peace for the County of Renfrew, and chairman of the Sanitary Commission for his native town. He died in 1882, from typhus fever, contracted in the discharge of his duties as chairman, universally regretted by all. In 1853, Mr. Brymner married Jean Thomson (who died in 1884), daughter of William Thomson, of Hill End, by whom he had nine children, six of whom survived. eldest of these is William, a rising artist of an excellent school, who has studied for several years in the best studios of Paris. and whose recent exhibits have received general praise. The second son, George Douglas, is one of the accountants in the Bank of Montreal, and James, the third son, is in the North-West. Two daughters and a son are at home. In consequence of ill health, induced by close application to business, Mr. Brymner was compelled to retire from the partnership in 1856. Complete withdrawal from mercantile cares for a year having restored him to something like his former self, he removed to Canada in 1857, and settled in Melbourne, one of the Eastern Townships. Here he filled the office of mayor for two terms with conspicuous ability. On both occasions he had been elected without a contest, and without having solicited a single vote from any one, his belief being that an office of this sort ought to be conferred by the unasked suffrage of the constituency. He declined to serve for a third term, although earnestly requested to do so. While mayor, he introduced various improvements in the mode of conducting municipal business. Like many other immigrants possessing capital, he found his means vanishing before the financial crisis of 1857. Mr. Brymner drifted into what seemed to be his natural calling-literature, for which his early training and continuous study well qualified him. On the acceptance by Dr. Snodgrass of the office of Principal of Queen's College, the post of Editor of the Presbyterian, the official journal of the Church of Scotland in Canada, became vacant. It was offered to Mr. Brymner, his fitness for the position having been recognized by the leaders of the church, he having been an active member of the Church Courts as a representative elder, and his numerous contributions to the discussion of important religious topics being esteemed and valuable. Under his guidance, the editorials being written in a straightforward, independent spirit, the paper at once took a high place. Many of Mr. Brymner's articles on ecclesiastical questions were in particular much admired, and leading religious journals often made lengthly quotations from them. About the same time he joined the staff of the Montreal Herald, where in a little he was appointed associate editor with the Hon. Edward Goff Penny. Often, owing to the severe indisposition of Mr. Penny, Mr. Brymner had sole editorial charge of the Herald. He was noted as one of the most efficient and hard-working members of the Press Gallery at Ottawa, and in 1871, the Presidency of the Press Association devolved upon him. A year later, in 1872, it having been resolved to establish a new branch of the Civil Service, namely, the collection of the historical records of the Dominion and its Provinces, Mr. Brymner, with the approval of men of all political shades, received the appointment. Before leaving Montreal for Ottawa, an address, signed by leading men in the professions, in business, and of the different nationalities, was presented to Mr. Brymner, accompanied by a munificent testimonial. No better selection could have been made for the office of Archivist than that of Mr. Brym-He had peculiar fitness for the task imposed on him. His extensive historical knowledge, unwearied industry, patience, and love for research, his power of organizing and arranging materials for reference, etc., wers all admirable qualifications, and these he possessed to a remarkable degree. His reports are models, and present in clear and terse language the results of his labours. The story of the origin of the office, and the important part played in its construction by Mr. Brymner, will be found in the Archivist's report for 1883. In 1881, the Public Record Office (London) authorities republished the whole of Mr. Brymner's report as part of their own, owing, as the Keeper of Records, Sir William Hardy, said to the importance of the information it contained. Every year since then, copious extracts have been made from Mr. Brymner's reports. Perhaps it will not be out of place to insert here the following excerpt from the preface to the admirably annotated publication of "Hadden's Journal and Orderly Books," by General Horatio Rogers, who says :-'I cannot refrain from referring to the unwearied zeal and unfailing courtesy of Mr. Douglas Brymner, the Archivist of the Dominion of Canada, in affording me the fullest and most satisfactory use of the Haldimand papers and the other manuscripts confided to his charge. Would that all public officials in custody of valuable manuscripts might take a lesson from him!" Mr. Brymner is an adherent of the Church of Scotland, to which he has always belonged, and he has been one of the most formidable opponents of union. His evidence before the Senate Committee, on the 24th and 26th of April, 1882, which is substantially the argument of the non-contents on the union question, was presented with great power and skill. It can be found in a pamphlet of over forty pages, published by Hunter, Rose & Co., Toronto, 1883. The greater part of his literary work is anonymous. He possesses a fund of caustic humour, some of which found vent in his letters in Scotch, under the name of Tummas Treddles, an octogenarian Paisley weaver, originally contributions on curling to the Montreal Herald, but afterwards ex--tended to other subjects in the Scottish American Journal. These have ceased for some years, doubtless from the pressure of other and more serious occupations. His translations of the Odes of Horace into

O

li

tł

h

th

re

jе

ar

Jo

na

Bı

80

ed

aft aff

his

dia

fan

for

hin

too

bat

nia

fou

was

wit. Bra

Aft

low

till:

plac

Con

tion

he n

and life

Vall

prov

and bour

and

priva

oppr

spuri

bellic

revol

Six 1

Scotch verse were happy Imitations. A favourable specimen "The Charms of Country Life," is in the Canadian Monthly of 1879, the others having appeared in newspapers, and, so far as is known, have never been collected. He is another illustration of the fallacy of Sydney Smith's statement, that it requires a surgical operation to get a joke into a Scotchman's head.

Brant, Joseph, whose Indian name was Tyendinaga, was born in the year Some historians declare that he was a full-blooded Mohawk, others that he was only a half-breed, his father being Sir William Johnson, his mother a handsome girl of the Mohawk tribe. The weight of testimony, however, points to his being a son of one of the four sachems who visited London in the reign of Anne, and who were made the subject of papers by Addison in the Spectator and Steele in the Tattler. On the death of Joseph's father he married an Indian whose name was Barnet, whence came the surname Brant. It was through Sir William Johnson, however, that Brant received his early education, and the knowledge, which he afterward used to such purpose, of military affairs. Johnson had for many years, during his career as English Colonial agent for Indian affairs, been intimate with the Brant family; and Molly, Joseph's sister, who was for a long time his mistress, was married to him shortly before his death. In 1755 took place on Lake George the memorable battle between the English and French Colonial forces. The tribes had taken sides, and fought each other desperately. Johnson was in command, and under his wing, fought with the bravery of a hero little Joseph Brant, then only in his thirteenth year. After the close of this campaign Brant followed his guardian through many campaigns till the close of the French war. Then he was placed at the Moor Charity School, Lebanon, Connecticut, where he received the foundation of a sound English education. In 1763 he married the daughter of an Oneida chief, and subsequently settled down to a peaceful life at Canajoharie Castle, in the Mohawk Valley. Here he devoted himself to improving the social and intellectual condition, and to aiding the missionaries in their labours. In 1774 Sir William Johnson died, and his successor appointed Brant as his private secretary. About this time the tax oppressions of the Mother Country had spurred the colonists on to the verge of rebellion. Strong efforts were made by the revolutionists to secure the alliance of the

tial influence; but true to his pledge that he would "sink or swim with the English," rejected all overtures peremptorily. when the war broke out and Colonel Guy Johnson fled coastward to escape capture by the Americans, Brant, followed by the principal warriors of the Six Nations, accom-The Six Nations then formed panied him. themselves into a confederacy, accepted Royal commissions, and thereafter, till the close, were found fighting on the side of King George. Of this confederacy Brant was appointed principal War Chief, with the military title of Captain. He is described then as possessing in point of stature and symmetry of person the advantage of most men seen among his own well-formed race-tall. erect, and majestic, with the air and mien of one born to command, having been a man of war from his boyhood, his name was a tower of strength among the warriors of the wilderness. Still more extensive was his influence rendered by the circumstance that he had been much employed in the civil service of the Indian department, under Sir William Johnson, by whom he was often deputed upon embassies among the tribes of the confederacy, and to those yet more distant, upon the great lakes and rivers of the North-West, by reason of which his knowledge of the whole country and the people was accurate and extensive. In 1775 he went to England to consult with the impe-The fashionable West-end rial officers. threw its doors wide open to him, and he was received warmly into the bosom of so-The outcome of his visit was a closer riveting of the links that bound him to imperial interests. He was landed in New York State and, exposed to great peril, made his way to Canada, where, promptly placing himself at the head of his followers, he fought the battle of "The Cedars," forty miles above Montreal. The Americans were badly beaten, and after their surrender Brant was tried to his utmost to keep his blood-drunken braves from wreaking terri-ble tortures upon the captives. "From ble tortures upon the captives. East to West, wherever bullets were thickest," says one writer, "his glittering toma-hawk might be seen in the van, while his terrific war whoop resounded above the din of strife." His name has been associated with the massacre of Wyoming, and historians, essayists and poets have regarded him as a terrible fiend, reeking in gore; but the truth is that he was not in command on this terrible occasion, and that wherever his influence had effect it was used in the direction Six Nations, with whom Brant had a poten- of humanity and mercy. By the treaty of 1782 the ancient territory of the Six Nations was aceded to the United States, but the tribe's refused to be transferred with their la inds, preferring attachment to the British Crown. A tract of land was consequently set apart for the tribes on Grand River (the Ouse), and upon this territory he busied himself settling his people on his return from England. The settlement known as Mohawk Village was situated near the bend of the river, and immediately below what is now Brantford. The declining years of his life were made bitter by dissensions among the tribes; and in self-defence he slew a worthless and dissolute son. His last years were passed in his house at Wellington Square, now Burlington, a few miles from "He exercised," says a writer, "a profuse and right royal hospitality alike towards the whites and Indian warriors who gathered round him. On the first of May in each year he used to ride up in his coachand-four to Mohawk Village, to attend the annual Indian Festival which was held there. On these occasions he was usually attended by a numerous retinue of servants in livery, and their procession used to strike awe into the minds of the denizens of the settlements through which they passed." He died on the 24th November, 1807, being then in his sixty-fifth year. His last words were, "Have pity on the poor Indians; if you can get any infit ence with the great, endeavour to do them all the good you can."

Henderson, Alex. Allan, M.D., Ottawa, was born in Dunblane, Scotland, on April 14, 1845. His father was Rev. Alex. Henderson, and his mother's maiden name was Margaret Eadie. His father was for twenty years in charge of the United Presbyterian Church in Dunblane, Scotland. He came with his family to Canada in 1849. After his arrival he, in the course of his ministerial tour, visited the village of Fitzroy Harbour, on the Ottawa river. Being a lover of nature, he was so impressed with the romantic scenery of that locality, abounding, as it did and still does, with waterfall, lake, and woodland, together with fertile and well cultivated land, that he accepted the charge of the Presbyterian Although often recongregation there. quested to accept larger and more lucrative charges, for which he was well qualified by his more than ordinary ability, he declined, and remained in the place of his choice till his death. Our subject received his early education chiefly under his fether's care. A careful attention to classics was given in the lad's education, in addition to a general education. He subsequently entered Mc-Gill University, Montreal, and graduated in medicine, with honours, in 1870. McGill he was awarded the Holmes Gold Medal, the Primary Prize, and also a Special Prize sent from London, England, by Sir Duncan Gibb to McGill College for competitive examination in Clinical Surgery. After leaving college, young Henderson spent some time travelling through Canada and the United States, visiting friends and trying to select a satisfactory place for practicing his profession. Finally, at the request of friends in Ottawa, he selected that city for his home, and opened an office on Duke Street. A large practice was soon established here. In 1880 he removed from Duke Street to "Sparks Place," on Albert Street, and five years afterwards removed to his own residence, which is picturesquely situated on the corner of Albert and Bay streets, where our subject now resides. Dr. Henderson originated the idea of and was the first in Canada to apply successfully the plaster-of-Paris jacket for the immediate relief and subsequent cure of spinal irritation without any deformity. A description of several cases treated successfully by him in this manner was published in the Canada Lancet for March, 1881. This, so far as we are aware, was the first article published calling the attention of the profession to this mode of treating that troublesome disease. The first operation performed by him in this manner, and recorded in the article referred to, took place on March 11th, 1878. Since that date he has adopted that operation for every suitable case of that disease. Dr. Henderson is a member of the medical staff of the Protestant Hospital at Ottawa. He has been for many years connected with the Masonic Order, and has taken an active part in it. He was initiated into masonry in St. Paul's Lodge, in Montreal, during his residence in that city; and he occupied the Worshipful Master's chair of the Chaudiere Lodge of Ottawa for several years. He is also a member of the Carleton Chapter of Royal Arch Masons, and held office in it. He likewise belongs to "Court Ottawa" of the Independent Order of Foresters. an enthusiastic traveller, and takes advantage of the summer holidays to visit new places each year. He has visited the chief places of interest in Canada and the United He has not confined his attention to the cities alone, but has examined with interest many of the more secluded parts of our country, as well as sailed with pleasure over our noble lakes and rivers. He is a

h

1

d

e u

w

tł

of

Si

J

co

th

wl

K

an

en

be

the

bo

ap

wi

sire

at s

and

fini

who

Cor

adn

tere

 $_{\text{firm}}$

P. I

subs

tire

tinu

net.

tent

lead

the

sence

hand

member of the Presbyterian Church, and has been a Presbyterian from youth up. He is in politics a Liberal. On October 15th, 1872, Dr. Henderson married Miss Elizabeth S. Smith, daughter of John Smith, Esq., late Writer to the Signet, of Edinburgh, Scotland. He is of a genial disposition, and enjoys the society of his friends, of which he has very many warm ones.

In ld

d,

or

y.

hn

hd

c-

e-

ρn

bn.

m

 $_{
m ed}^{
m rt}$

lу

la ve d to s-mele 8. - al a. h re y is ne e is of t. of is \mathbf{n}

Mowat, Hon. Oliver, of Toronto, was born at Kingston, Ontario, on the 22nd of July, 1820. His father, the late Mr. John Mowat, was a native of Canisbay, Caithness-shire, Scotland, who in his youth had been in the British army, and served through the Peninsular war. In 1816 Mr. John Mowat came to Canada and settled in Kingston. Shortly afterwards he was married to Miss Helen Levack, also of Caithness, who had come out to Canada to link her fortunes with the Peninsula soldier. The fruit of this happy union was five children, three sons and two daughters, the eldest of whom was Oliver. He was educated under various teachers in Kingston, one of whom was the Rev. John Cruikshank, at that time held in high esteem as a teacher of youth. Among his fellow pupils were Sir John A. Macdonald, and the late Hon. John Hillyard Cameron. As soon as he had completed his educational studies, he entered the law office of Mr. John A. Macdonald, who was then a prosperous young lawyer in Kingston. Young Mowat was brought up among a circle of tories, and naturally enough was tory in leaning till the new and better man burst the traditional shell. When the rebellion of 1837-38 broke out, and nobody could be still, every one seizing either a pitchfork or a Queen's rifle, young Mowat, with military instincts borrowed from his sire, joined the drilling royalists. Mr. Mowat spent four years in Mr. Macdonald's office, and then removed to Toronto, where he finished his studies with Robert E. Burns, who subsequently became a judge of the Court of Queen's Bench. In 1841, he was admitted to the bar, and subsequently entered into partnership with Mr. Burns, the firm being known as Burns & Mowat. P. M. Vankoughnet (afterward Chancellor), subsequently joined the firm. After the retirement of Mr. Burns the business was continued under the firm of Mowat & Vankoughnet. Industrious, clear-headed, and persistent, Mr. Mowat soon became one of the leaders of his profession, and at the bar of the remodelled Court of Chancery, his presence was always felt. Business grew upon his hands from day to day, and after a time the partnership between Mr. Vankoughnelt and himself was, by mutual consent, dissolved. He subsequently associated with hims elf several legal gentlemen, and the firms wererespectively known as Mowat, Ewart & Helliwell, and Mowat, Roaf & Davis. Having reached the top round in the legal profession, and obtained the most extensive Chancery practice of any lawyer at the bar, he began to take a lively interest in the political questions of the day. Those who knew him as a tory boy marvelled that he had so completely sloughed his early leanings. Out and out, he was a Liberal, a reformer, though not one of the revolutionary type. He believed in the foundation virtue of the institutions which then existed, but was convinced that much reformation of the same was urgently and speedily needed. So when he entered the reform ranks, those fossils who believe that a man is born to his opinions as well as to his place, said "he has deserted his colours," not that he, ever since entering man's estate, had allied himself, or voted with the tories, but because, forsooth, his "father before him" had been a tory. That, however, was natural, it was In 1856, he was created a the tory way. Queen's Counsel, and appointed one of the commissioners to consolidate the general Statutes of Canada and Upper Canada, respectively. In 1857, he resigned his commissionership, and was elected to the House of Assembly for South Ontario, defeating Mr. Joseph Curran Morrison by nearly 800 votes. The Macdonald-Cartier administration was then in power, and Mr. Mowat found himself at issue with many of its measures. He was not then by any means a powerful or effective speaker, and has never since been noted for eloquence. He fell far, indeed, behind the impulsive, powerful, but often reckless leader of the reformers—George Brown. In the short administration of 1858, which, after four days' existence was brought to an end by means of the double shuffle, Mr. Mowat was Provincial Secretary. In 1857, he sat as alderman for St. Lawrence Ward. Toronto. and the year following for St. James Ward, and while a civic legislator, carried a measure "to provide for the better administration of the affairs of the corporation,' legislation is known as "Alderman Mowat's By-law." In 1861, besides running and being elected for South Ontario, he was prevailed on to seek the overthrow of Mr. John A. Macdonald in Kingston, but was unsuccessful. When the Sandfield Macdonald-Dorion administration was formed in 1863, Mr. Mowat becam e Postmaster-General, retaining that posity on till the following year. In the Taché-Mac donald administration he was at the he ad of the Post-office Department for four months. He took part in the conference at Quebec for the preparation of the Confederation scheme; and in 1864, on the death of Vice-Chancellor Esten, was appointed to the Chancery Bench in Upper Canada. In this position he acquitted himself with tireless industry, with efficiency, and in such a manner as to elicit the approbation of litigants and the bar, for eight Many of the judgments which he wrote are held now in high esteem by the legal profession for their strong grasp and marked elucidation of principles; for their clear interpretation of legal points, and their logical application of canons of law. It was a loss to the bench to be deplored that in 1872, the Vice-Chancellor re-entered poliitical life; but if the judiciary sustained a loss, politics decidedly gained by this step. The circumstance that led to this course was as follows: Under the recently-adopted Act prohibiting dual representation, representation in the Provincial parliament, and representation in the Dominion parliament, Messrs. Blake and Mackenzie resigned their offices in the Ontario administration for the wider and more alluring field, and Mr. Mowat was called on by the Lieutenant-Governor to form a new administration. On the 25th of October, therefore, it was announced that an administration had been formed with Oliver Mowat at the head as Attorney-General. During the years that have since elapsed, he has held the position of leader of the Government of Ontario, and continues to enjoy the confidence of a considerable majority of the people of his Province, who see in him an honest man, whose effort is always, even though not uniformly successful, to do that which he believes to be best for the country's interest. In 1872, Mr. Mowat was elected for North Oxford; in 1875, he was again chosen by acclamation, and was again triumphant in 1879 and 1883. At the last general election for Ontario, he was opposed by the combined forces of the opposition under Mr. Meredith and of the Dominion Government, but came out of the ordeal successfully, though with a diminished following. Fears were entertained by some during the following session that there would be a bolt of weak knees to the opposition, but the stars were sturdily fighting on the side of Mr. Mowat. A number of persons, with pockets full of money, obtained from no one just now knows where, had set themselves deliberately at work to purchase over to the opposition some of the Premier's followers. But the infamous enterprise was balked by some of the members tampered with, who promptly disclosed the plot and laid in the hands of the Speaker the money of the tempters. result was that the public conscience became more strongly than ever in sympathy with Mr. Mowat, and more hostile than before to the opposing party. It does not seem. fair to hold a leader responsible for the evil doings of his followers; nevertheless it can hardly be called unjust to affix some of the stain of this deep and deplorable disgrace upon the whole local Conservative party of Ontario. Space forbids us to enumerate all the measures of legislation which Mr. Oliver Mowat has been instrumental in calling into existence, but among the most important will be found the following: Act for the settlement of the Municipal Loan Fund: Act for the Consolidation of the Municipal Law; Act respecting the Administration of Justice; Act extending the franchise to income voters, and introducing the principle of voting by ballot; Act substituting a Committee of the Executive Council for the Council of Public Instruction, and appointing a Minister of Education instead of a Chief Superintendent; Act respecting education, for the encouragement of agriculture, horticulture, arts and manufactures; Act regulating the public service in Ontario; Act defining the powers of justices of the peace; Act establishing a fund of $200,000 in aid of the drainage operations, and to confirm the determination of the northerly and westerly boundaries of Ontario by the arbitrators, and to provide for the administration of justice therein; Act for the revision of the Statute Law of the Province; the Judicature Act, abolishing the distinction between law and equity and establishing a uniform mode of pleading and practice in the Courts; and a Registration Act founded on the "Torrens" system. In addition to these, in later years, a bureau of statistics, one of the most important departments in the public service, has been established; a board of health, which is likely to be potent for great good, has been formed; and a sub-department of forestry has been connected with one of the public offices. Mr. Mowat still enjoys unimpaired health, and is enthusiastic in his conviction that the "evil ones" opposing him cannot prevail. Through all the stormy time in which he has been leader, the periods when men put no bridle upon

ti

p

bı

tiı

B

pa

at

Me

880

and

tio

183

ter

the

 $\mathbf{E}_{\mathbf{80}}$

Perhaps the event in his career of which he feels, and ought to feel, most proud, is having obtained in England, before the Judicial Committee of the Imperial Privy Council, a decision in favour of Ontario for an extensive territory long in dispute and supposed to comprise 100,000 square miles. Mr. Mowat had always maintained that this territory belonged to Ontario; Sir John A. Macdonald took opposite grounds; so that now, for that and other reasons, followers of the Ontario premier say that their chief has brought from England the belt for the championship on constitutional law.

ely on

i11-

he

is-

he

he

þe-

hу

be-

m

vil

an

ce

of

li-

he

of

se

or p-ad ng ri-c-in s-of s, ne

Hincks, Sir Francis, was born at Cork, on the 14th of December, 1807. He was a son of Dr. T. D. Hincks, a member of the Irish (Unitarian) Presbyterian Church, a very distinguished scholar and an exceedingly worthy man. Francis, the subject of the present notice, commenced his education under his father, at Fermoy, and continued it in the classical and mathematical school of the Belfast Institution, then presided over by Dr. James Thompson, afterwards professor of mathematics at the University of Glasgow. In the month of November, 1822, he entered the collegiate department of the institution, and attended the logic and belles lettres, and the Greek and Latin classes during the winter session. But, in May, 1823, he expressed a desire to be a merchant, and it was finally arranged that he should be articled for five years to the house of John Martin & Co., previously to which, however, he had three or four months' initiation into business habits in the office of his father's friend, Samuel Bruce, Esq., notary public and agent. The period for which he was articled terminated in October, 1828, but he continued with the firm until the beginning of 1830, when he sailed to the West Indies as supercargo of one of Messrs. Martin & Co.'s vessels. He visited Jamaica, Barbadoes, Trinidad and Demerara, but not meeting with an inducement to settle in any of these colonies, he agreed to accompany a Canadian gentleman, whom he met at Barbadoes, to Canada, and proceeded to Montreal and Toronto, his object being to ascertain the nature of Canadian commerce and business. Having gleaned the information he desired, he returned to Belfast in 1831. In the following summer, having determined to settle in Canada, he married the second daughter of Alexander Stewart, Esq., a merchant of Belfast, and soon after their tongues, whatever may have been said sailed to New York, and proceeded against their administration, no reproach has ever been breathed against his private belonging to Mr. Baldwin. Mr. Hir oka Mr. Hir ouse soon obtained a high reputation for knowks ledge of business, and when Mr. Mackenzie attacked Mr. Merritt and others respecting the Welland canal, and obtained a parliamentary investigation, he was chosen, with another merchant, to examine the accounts. He was also appointed secretary to the Mutual Insurance Company, and cashier to a new banking company. On the appointment of Lord Durham to the government of Canada, Mr. Hincks commenced the Examiner newspaper, in the editorship of which he displayed such remarkable vigour and talent, that he was invited to become a candidate for the representation of the County of Oxford in the first parliament held after the union of the upper and lower provinces. The election was held in March, 1841, when Mr. Hincks was returned by a majority of thirty-one over his opponent, a gentleman named Carroll. Shortly after his election, he was appointed by Sir Charles Bagot Inspector-General, and was obliged, in consequence, to vacate his seat and return for He was opposed by John re-election. Armstrong, Esq., who abandoned the contest at noon on the third day, Mr. Hincks having a majority of 218. When Lord Metcalfe dissolved the Canadian Parliament in 1844, Mr. Hincks was defeated, his opponents being Robert Riddle, Esq., (a son-inlaw of Admiral Vansittart) who was returned by a majority of twenty over Mr. Hincks, and the Hon. Thomas Parke, who did not go to the poll. In 1848, however, he was declared elected by the legislature, by the large majority of three hundred and thirtyfive over his old opponent, Mr. Carroll, although the returning-officer had declared Mr. Carroll elected through some legal technicality in Mr. Hincks' qualification. Having for the second time accepted the office of Inspector-General under the administration of his first friend in Canada, Mr. Baldwin, he was re-elected without opposition. Upon the reconstruction of the ministry, consequent on the retirement of Mr. Baldwin, owing to his impaired health, Mr. Hincks was, through the strong expression of public opinion, named Prime Minister by the Governor-General, and until the latter part of 1854, held that post with distinguished honour, and with the confidence and respect of all the good men of every political denomination in Canada. On his return to Canada, from a visit to England, he was elected to represent the south riding of Ox30

or the fifth time, by a majority of 64 his opponent, J. G. Vansittart, a son ford fa Admiral Vansittart, of Woodstock, C.W. of and therefore a rather formidable opponent. After the resignation of the Hincks-Dorion administration, in 1854, Mr. Hincks crossed the Atlantic for a long holiday, after the years of turmoil and corroding care which had fallen to him by virtue of his active life, and his prominent place in public affairs. During his absence, through Sir William Molesworth, he was appointed Governor of Barbadoes and the Windward Islands. At the close of the term here, he was promoted to the Governor-Generalship of British In 1869, on the recommendation Guiana. of the Duke of Buckingham, he was created a Knight C. M. G. In 1869 he returned to England, and thence passed over to Canada, where, on the invitation of Sir John A. Macdonald, he entered the Ministry as Finance Minister, in place of Sir John Rose, resigned. He retained his portfolio till 1873, when he resigned, and withdrew from public life. There is no public man living, it can fairly be said, whose whole career has been more creditable to himself and to the country than has been that of Sir Francis Hincks. He died at the age of seventy-eight, in the City of Montreal, on the 18th of August, 1885, deeply regretted by his many friends and admirers. Sir Francis was twice married. His first wife died in 1874, and the following year he married the widow of the late Hon. Justice Sullivan of Toronto.

Sanford, W. E .- Among the business men of Canada who have won distinction as successful merchants, and who have by personal industry and genuine business ability succeeded in establishing great business relations and accumulating large fortunes, no name stands more prominently before the public, or is worthy of more honourable mention than that which stands at the head of this sketch. His career has placed him in the front rank of the "merchant princes" of the country. Success is always a relative term, and is used appropriately only when employed to describe conditions in which effort, guided by intelligence and skill, to a definite end, accomplishes its aims. If this be true, then no man in Canada to-day has a stronger claim to this distinction than the subject of our sketch. His business life has been simply a series of triumphs over difficulties that would have daunted weaker natures. These victories have been won by tireless energy, unyielding perseverance, a keen foresight of events, a skilful adaptation to the tastes and necessities of the public, and the intelligent use of definite means to a well defined purpose. The magnificent "Sanford Block" in the city of Hamilton, consisting of offices, warerooms, stock, show and packing rooms; the extensive business connections established in every province in the Dominion, and extending from the Pacific to the Atlantic, giving employment to over two thousand hands, and employing a capital of over $600,000, constitute a monument of which the most ambitious might be proud. Mr. W. E. Sanford was born in the city of New York in the year 1838. His father was an American by birth, and his mother English. Both parents dying while their son was a mere child, he was sent, ere he had reached his seventh year, to the Christian home of his uncle, the late Edward Jackson, of Hamilton, Ontario, one of the leading pioneer merchants of that city, and a man of great strength of character and singular uprightness of life. Under these salutary influences, his young life was moulded, and by their inspiration were developed those elements of character that have distinguished his business career. He received a liberal education in one of the Academies of New York, and at the age of 16 made his first venture in business, entering the well-known publishing firm of Farmer, Brace & Co., of New York, in whose employ he continued until he reached his majority. The remarkable business ability displayed by him, even at this early period, won for him the esteem and confidence of the firm, and also an offer of a partnership in the business. The death of the senior partner, occurring about this time, caused certain changes which resulted in the disappointment of young Sanford's hopes. The firm was re-organised, leaving him out. The value of his services was, however, recognised by a rival firm, from whom he received the offer of a situation and a salary of $3,000 per year. This offer he declined, determined in future to sink or swim as master of the ship he sailed. His own words were, "I am determined never to accept a position as clerk to any firm." Mr. Sanford now returned to Canada, was united in marriage to Miss Jackson, only daughter of his friend, Edward Jackson, Esq. Then he went to London, Ont., and entered into a business partnership with Murray, Anderson and Edward Jackson, and under the firm name of Anderson, Sanford & Co., carried on one of the largest foundries in western Canada. His wedded happiness was of short

n m

e٦

tŀ

to

cl

ed

of

pu

wh

WO

ne

Ca

lisl

laid the

me

ret

tak

firm

ley.

the Co.'

1884

ness E. S

of the

char

and

ів со

seve

duration, for at the end of about eighteen | months his accomplished wife died. Completely crushed and disheartened by the blow, he retired from the firm, and returned to Hamilton. His restless energies, however, refused to remain inactive, and with characteristic energy, he-with some New York dealers—went into the wool business. In less than a year, he was master of the situation, having obtained control of the wool market of the province, and was soon known among dealers as the "Wool King" of Canada. Not long after this, Mr. Sanford entered upon the business, which, under his skilful management, has grown into such large proportions, and in which he has achieved his greatest success, and with which he is still identified. At this time, the trade, in ready-made clothing, was at a very low standard. The only matter thought of by those in the trade was price. The questions of elegance and taste were not taken into account. Mr. Sanford formed a partnership with Mr. Alexander McInnes, for the manufacture of readymade clothing. With that keen discernment of what the public needed that has ever characterised him, he determined, from the best goods to be found in the market, to manufacture for the public demand clothing that would combine cheapness, with elegance and style of finish. $20,000 capital was invested at the beginning. The most skilful labour to be found was employed, and samples to meet the requirements of the public were produced. Mr. Sanford put the goods upon the market himself, while his partner attended to the office The goods were what the people needed, and from that day the trade in Canada was revolutionised; the character of the firm as "first class" was established, and the formation of future success Various changes have taken place in the personnel of the firm since its establishment in 1861. After ten years Mr. McInnis retired and two of the employés were taken in as partners, and the name of the firm changed to Sanford, Vail & Bickley. After five years, Mr. Bickley retired, the firm continuing as Sanford, Vail & Co." by which name it was known until 1884, when Mr. Vail retired, and the business was continued under the title of W. E. Sanford & Co. Since the establishment of the firm, and through all its subsequent changes, Mr. Sanford has been the moving and controlling spirit of the concern. He is complete master of all the details of the tes

in-

ell

ın-

bn-

ow

ess.

in

he

nt

ng

1118

as

ear

th,

bts

hе

th

le,

n-

of

fe,

ng

er

er.

of

hе

ЬS.

of

in hsș ly fi-

rt-

he

ie,

he

es.

it.

er,

rу

n-

to

r. ed

er en

to

m

Ьd

rn

the great public contracts, he at the time keenly observes and anticipates? change in the public taste, and invariably has the supply in advance of the demand. The requirements of each province or community becomes a separate study, and whether it be Prince Edward Island or Manitoba or the Pacific coast, each is suitably supplied from the endless variety produced at the central ware-rooms in Hamil-While other firms are studying the problem and counting the cost, Mr. Sanford is selling his goods and pocketing the profits. In the year 1866 Mr. Sanford was united in marriage to Miss Sophia Vaux. youngest daughter of the late Thomas Vaux, Esq., of the House of Commons, Ottawa, a lady of culture and dignity, whose genial and refined spirit makes the home delightful, and whose open hand of charity is a proverb in the city in which she lives. In social life Mr. Sanford is most affable and attractive, in manners he is courteous and gentlemanly. He is always the soul of the company in which he is found. He can come from the most perplexing concerns of business, and plunge at once into all the mirth and merriment of the evening party, as though there was no such thing as care in the world. For a man whose mind is so deeply occupied with the various financial schemes with which he is identified, one would go far to find another who has the disposition, and finds the opportunity to do so many acts of genuine kindness. A few flowers from his conservatory, or some rare relish to tempt the appetite, is his thoughtful and appropriate way of relieving the weariness of many a sick chamber. Mr. Sanford is a leading member of the Methodist Church, a trustee and steward of the Centenary Church, Hamilton, and a liberal supporter of the Missionary, Educational and other connexional agencies of the To each of the recurring General Conferences he has been invariably elected by the proper constituencies, and is treasurer of several of the most important church funds. As a citizen, he is publicspirited, and justly held in high esteem. He has been President of the Board of Trade, Vice-President of the Hamilton Provident Bank, and a Director of the Exchange Bank. Being thoroughly absorbed in business, he has taken but little part in politics, whatever he may do in the future. In politics, he is in sympathy with the protective policy of the present administration, several departments, as well as director of | and he consequently gives his support to the whole establishment. While he pi onservative party. A few such men a a city, and are indispensable to its sperity and development. When shrewdness, ability, enterprise, and industry combine, and succeed in accumulating wealth, the benefit is not alone to the one who is thus gifted, but to the many, to whom a means of livelihood is afforded, and to the city and country as well, on which they bestow the fruits of their talent and their toil.

Brock, Major-General Sir Isaac, K.B., was the eighth son of John Brock, Esq., and was born in the Island of Guernsey, on the 6th of October, 1769. The latter year saw the birth of three important infants, Isaac Brock, just noted, Napoleon Bonaparte, and Arthur Wellesley, afterwards Duke of Wellington. Young Brock, in his fifteenth year, succeeded by purchase to the Ensigncy of the 8th King's Regiment, which had become vacant by promotion. In 1790 he was promoted to a lieutenancy, and in 1793 he purchased his majority. He was in the expedition to Holland under Sir Ralph Abercrombie, and was wounded in the battle of Egmont-of-Zee. He was second in command of the land forces during the attack on Copenhagen by Lord Nelson. In the spring of 1802, Brock, now a lieutenant-colonel, was sent to Canada. He took the command at Fort George, and the 49th, which had attempted revolt, soon became one of the trustiest regiments in the line. 1805 Brock visited England, where he advocated the formation of a veteran battalion for Canada. In 1806 he became commander of the troops in Canada, taking up his residence in Quebec. When Lieutenant-Governor Gore returned to England on leave in 1811, Colonel Brock was appointed administrator of the Government. war broke out between England and the United States, and Brock, now Major-General, gave his great military abilities and his personal enthusiasm towards preparing Canada to bear her part with credit. He made Fort George his head quarters, and thence planned the campaign which has conferred such lustre on his name in Canada. The following extract from a speech delivered by Sir Allan McNab, in 1859, near the restored Brock monument on Queenston Heights, serves instead of a direct narrative of the honoured soldier's exploits:

"On that day, forty-seven years ago, was fought upon these heights what is known in history and in your family traditions as the

'Battle of Queenston.' It was, though crowned with ultimate success, a day of vicissitude, and not without alloy. When hostilities suddenly commenced on this side of the Atlantic in the year 1812, the gallant soldiers of the mother country were, under the illustrious Wellington, engaged in the sanguinary operations of the war in Europe; and knowing the inability of the King to succour us with reinforcements adequate to our defence, the illustrious Brock, with im-plicit faith, at once placed his reliance mainly upon the militia of the province, and our ever faithful Indian allies, for the protection of this part of Her Majesty's dominions. Events proved that his confidence was not misplaced. His first exploit was at the head of an expedition, which he organized, composed of volunteers from the militia and Indian warriors, and the few regular troops at his disposal. He led that expedition from the seat of government to the capture of Detroit, and such was his imposing advance, that the terrified garrison—the fort—the guns—and munitions of war were all surrendered at discretion. The clouds of war having been promptly. dispersed in that extremity of the province, soon gathered on the banks of the Niagara, and then ensued a series of encounters, in three successive years, which have rendered the Niagara frontier, already celebrated for its mighty cataract, famous in the military annals of the British empire. first serious battle was upon these heights. In the early part of that momentous day the enemy had gained possession of the elevated ground, and the intrepid Brock, regardless of their numbers and position, made a too daring attempt to dislodge them. While valiantly charging up the abrupt ascent, at the head of a far inferior force, he fell, mortally wounded. Brock fell—not as Wolfe fell—in the arms of Victory—for Victory still hovered in the distance. He fell, rather as Montcalm (a kindred spirit) fell—in the moment of repulse; and like both Wolfe and Montcalm, he most additive datable with health fell. He he met a soldier's death upon the battle-field. He fell in the arms of his country, and they shall for ever embrace him.

ta B ui

to M

wa lit

in

th

pa

ma

Ra

Ca

ma We sul

was

La

left par

Q, Q

of I

wer Sm:

tim

call

186 sub

him whe

rece

unde late

offic

of th

Judg

his agair

Cour still

mucl

been

teers

more

1870 now

maso

secy.

He i

Order

great

likew

exten Engla

many

and se copali

He was created a Knight of the Bath on October 10th, 1812, but died a few days afterwards, not knowing that the honour had been conferred upon him.

Smart, William Lynn, of Hamilton, was born at St. Albans, Middlesex, England, on the 16th of September, 1824. He is the eldest son of the late John Newton Smart, of Trewhiltt House, Rothbury, Northumberland, who married, in 1823, Mary Ann, co-heiress of the Rev. Thomas Gregory, vicar of Henlow, Bedfordshire, England, by whom he had ix children, the subject of our sketch being the eldest, who succeeded his father to the Trewhiltt and Netherton properties on his death in 1875. Smart (our subject) is a nephew of the late Admiral Sir Robert Smart, K.C.B., K.H.R.N. He received a first-class education, finishing his course at King's College, London. He left college in 1842, and was articled to Messrs. Smart & Buller

Attorneys-at-law and Solicitors in Chancery. where he remained for five years. He was dmitted as attorney in 1847, and was then taken in as a partner of the firm of Smart, Buller & Smart. He remained in this firm until 1853, when he came to Canada on a visit to the late Colonel Light, Woodstock, Canada, Mrs. Light being his aunt. The young man was much pleased with Canada, and after a little while concluded to remain here, having accepted the appointment of secretary of the Woodstock and Lake Erie Railway Com-This company afterwards amalgamated with the Amherstburg and St. Thomas Railway Company, under the title of the Canada Southern Railroad. Mr. Smart remained as its secretary until the year 1862. We might say that during the time of our subject's secretaryship of these railways he was admitted as an Attorney-at-law by the Law Society of Upper Canada. In 1864 he left the Canada Southern and entered into partnership with Mr. Hector Cameron, Q.C., M.P., the new firm taking the name of Messrs. Cameron & Smart. Their offices were on Toronto street, Toronto, where Mr. Smart continued until 1868. During the time of the partnership—1866— he was called to the bar of Upper Canada. In 1868 the partnership was dissolved, and our subject commenced business in Toronto for himself. Thus he continued until 1873, when he removed to Hamilton, where he received the appointment of Deputy Judge, under the late Judge Logie, and also the late Judge Ambrose. The duties of this office he discharged until the appointment of the present Judge Sinclair, who succeeded Judge Ambrose. In 1876 he retired from his judicial position, and began business again as barrister, opening an office in the Court House, Hamilton. In this office he still continues. Judge Smart has always felt much interest in military matters, and has been a member of the Woodstock Volunteers. He has likewise devoted himself more or less to civic politics, and was during 1870 and 1871 a councillor for Yorkville, now part of Toronto; belongs to the Freemason Seciety, and has held the office of secy. of the lonic Lodge, No. 25, Toronto. He is likewise a member of the Orange He has travelled through the greater part of the United States. He likewise has visited Cuba, and travelled extensively in Europe, passing through England, Ireland, Scotland, France, Germany, Spain, Russia, Switzerland, Tangiers, and several parts of Africa. He is an Episcopalian; and in politics professes Liberalreer yrisd the rinhtds yn mer, is n, d, he t, n-n,

 $_{
m on}^{
m ed}$

Įr.

he 3.,

He was a candidate for Conservatism. South Oxford in 1882, but did not succeed. He married, in 1863, Catherine McGill Crooks, daughter of the late John Crooks, Esq., of Niagara, and cousin of the Hon. Adam Crooks, Q.C., late Minister of Education. By this lady, who died in 1871, he has three children. He is a man of broad views, and though he looks with disfavour upon the Scott Act and other attempts at coerced abstinence, he is a sturdy advocate of tem-

Mackenzie, William Lyon, the staunch and impulsive Reformer, was born in Springfield, Dundee, Scotland, on the 12th of March, 1795, and came to Canada in 1820. He was descended from a peasant parentage, and when a mere infant was thrown for support on his brother. He obtained a meagre business education in Dundee, and at seventeen started for England, where he obtained employment as a clerk with Lord Lonsdale. On the 18th of May, 1824, appeared in Niagara the first number of his paper, The Colonial Advocate. It was roughly written, and dry, and declamatory, but it was on the right side, and made the oligarchists twist uneasily in their chairs. "Every effort," says Mr. Morgan, "except such as reason and the law might have sanctioned. was made to suppress the paper. A bitter personal quarrel, carried on by means of the press, between Mr. Mackenzie and some prominent members of the official party, led, in 1826, to the violent destruction of the printing office by a mob of irritated friends of the ruling party. The office was forcibly entered, and the types cast into the bay of Toronto. At this time, the paper was printed at that city. A most inopportune time was chosen for the work of destruction. It was probably not known to the rioters that the last number of the paper which it was intended to destroy had already been published: for if it had the act would have been as stupid and unnecessary as it was wicked and illegal. As the act was done in the face of day, the perpetrators of it were known, and damages were recovered against them, on the case being brought into a court of justice. We must suppose that the object of scattering the types into the bay was to put an end to the existence of an obnoxious newspaper; but the effect was precisely the contrary of what had been in-The paper, of which the last tended. number had already been issued, received from the violence used to put it down a new lease of existence. The Colonial Advocate, instead of expiring in 1826, as it would, if left to itself, continued to be published till 1833, when the press and types were sold to Dr. O'Grady. In 1828, Mr. Mackenzie was elected to the Canadian Parliament, for the County of York. The violence of the official party was not confined to the destruction of a printing office. Mr. Mackenzie had, in his newspaper, used language towards the majority in the Assembly, which that majority chose to regard as libellous, and they resolved to punish the representative for the act of the journalist. The alleged libel consisted of describing the majority as sycophants fit only to register the decrees of arbitrary power. Language quite as strong as this has frequently been used in the House of Com-For instance, Henry, now Lord Brougham, when in the House of Commons, said of the Minister Peel, 'I do not arraign him as much as I do you, his flatterers, his vile parasites,' for which language, so far from being expelled, he was not even called to order. But admitting the language used by Mr. Mackenzie to be libellous, the proper remedy would have been to bring the case before the jury. But that remedy was hopeless; it was notorious that no verdict could have been obtained against the publisher of the alleged libel. It was treated as a breach of privilege; on that ground the expulsion proceeded, and an attempt was made to render Mr. Mackenzie incapable of sitting in the Assembly. election could not, however, be prevented, for no member of the official party would have had the least chance against him; and as often as he was expelled—five times—he was re-elected; once when he was absent in England." He was chosen first Mayor of Toronto in 1836, and with all his faults, seemed to have been the darling of those who were doing battle for popular rights. His visit to Downing Street when the dominance of the Family Compact was most galling, was productive of several minor results; but it seemed to be our fortune to have gentlemen governing us then, who were conspicuous only for their utter unfitness for the position. Sir Francis Bond Head, with several trunks full of blank poems, plays and unfinished essays, made a great sensation on first appearing here, but he had a soft head, and the Tories promptly brought him into line. He was in Canada in 1837-38, the season of William Lyon Mackenzie's wild uprising near Toronto. Mackenzie did not succeed with his motley band of well-meaning followers, but with a price upon his head, fled the country through the wintry woods. He eventually obtained a pardon through . the influence of his friend, Mr. Hume, and returned to Canada. The Reformers gave him the cold shoulder, and the Tories raised their eyes in horror when they looked upon him. In 1850, he opposed George Brown for Haldimand, and defeated him. He held his seat in the Assembly till 1858, when he resigned. He died in comparative poverty, at Toronto, in August, 1861. 1822, he married Isabel Baxter, a sister of Mr. George Baxter, teacher of the Royal Grammar School at Kingston, and the same from whom so many of our prominent Canadians received their early tuition. He left seven children.

Canniff, William, M.D., M.R.C.S.,

h

1

a

F

рi

m

cal

the

and

dei

san

tio

the

the

tim

wit

turi

prac

he l thit

in T

was

lay i

profe

his p teres the

move

his f

in a

Dr. C

cal se

1867

medic

gate

gress. forme

at Qu

Provir

elected largely and als

ten "

valuab

ada," a

Dr. Ca

but has

of Engl

Officer

other of

sus Cor

danghte

Middlet

Eng., one of our well-known medical men and Canadian writers, was born near Belleville, Ontario, in the year 1830. He was the son of Jonas Canniff, who married in 1811 Letta Flagler, who was descended of a Knickerbocker family on the River Hudson. The grandfather of our subject was a native of Duchess Co., N. Y., and he took for wife an Irish maiden of good parentage named McBride. His father and a granduncle of our subject were U. E. Loyalists, and likewise members of an Irish Huguenot family. The granduncle was born at Bedford, New Rochelle, New York State, in the year 1757. Among the Huguenots expelled from France on the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes by Louis XIV., in 1685, were persons named Canniff. They found a home in Ireland and became naturalized. It may likewise be stated that these same two Huguenots were among the first settlers in New Rochelle. When the American rebellion broke cut, most of this family remained true to the empire, and at the close of the war John Canniff was a refugee in New Brunswick; from which place he came to Canada in 1788, being one of the first to settle in Adolphustown. He subsequently went to Thurlow, Hastings County, and settled there. James Canniff, our subject's grandfather, came to Canada some years after his brother, and settled in Adolphustown. After serving throughout the war of 1812, Jonas, Dr. Canniff's father, settled near Belleville. Here he erected a saw mill, and afterwards a very large stone flour mill. Young Canniff was educated at Victoria

College, Cobourg, and studied medicine at Toronto School of Medicine, and passed the Upper Canada Medical Board, and at New York University; and at the latter instituion took his degree. He was appointed a Youse Surgeon at New York Hospital, but after a year resigned the position and went to England. He then studied in London hospitals, and took M.R.C.S., London. In 1856 he passed the Army Medical Board, and did duty in the Royal Artillery. When the Crimean war was over he left the service, and travelled through Great Britain, France, and Germany, attending the hospitals of Edinburgh, Dublin and Paris. Then he returned to Canada and commenced practice in Belleville. He was called to the chair of General Pathology in the medical department of Victora College, and at the urgent request of the dean undertook the professorship of surgery in the same institution. He retained this position till 1863, when he resigned. During the American civil war, our subject visited the hospitals at Washington, and was for a time with the army of the Potomac. After witnessing a large number of cases he returned to Belleville, where he resumed practice for a time. But for a while past he had some inclination for Toronto, and thither in a little time he removed. Settling in Toronto, he began practice, and his name was so well known that no great difficulties lay in his way. He resumed his position as professor of surgery. Although devoted to his profession, he always took a deep in-terest in public affairs. He was one of the originators of the "Canada First" movement; but he always steadfastly set his face against those who outwardly, or in a covert way, advocated annexation. Dr. Canniff has been president of the medical section of the Canadian Institute. In 1867 he received an invitation from the medical faculty of Paris to attend as delegate at the International Medical Congress. In October, 1867, he, with others, formed the Canadian Medical Association at Quebec. He was first secretary for the Province of Ontario, and has since been elected President. He has contributed largely to medical and other magazines, and also to the daily press. He has writ-ten "Principles of Surgery," a clever and valuable book; "Settlement of Upper Canada," and various other works of interest. Dr. Canniff was brought up a Methodist, but has for some time attended the Church of England. He is now Medical Health Officer for Toronto, and has held among other offices that of chief officer of the Census Commission. He has six sons and one daughter. His eldest son served with Gen. Middleton's advance guard in the late North-West rebellion (1885), and was seriously wounded at Fish Creek. It may also be stated that Dr. Canniff was at the front during the Fenian raids in 1867. At the time of the Trent affair the doctor was president of a literary society in connection with the Methodist Church. The war fever in Toronto was high, and that society formed themselves into a company, of which our subject was elected captain. He drilled for some time in the City Hall, until the matter blew over. With respect to Dr. Canniff's literary works, there is only space here to say that the book, "Settlement of Upper Canada," is a very valuable addition to Canadian literature. The subject is touched with a loving hand, and one delights to linger over its pages. The matter contained in this volume must prove of greatest value to the future historian. It may be stated that Dr. Canniff was the originator of the U. E. Loyalist Centennial Celebration held in Toronto, 1884, and occupied the chair at the meeting in the Horticultural Pavilion on the nomination of Lieutenant-Governor Robinson. Dr. Canniff is in politics a Conservative, and a Freemason, being a member of Ionic Lodge of Toronto.

Allan, Sir Hugh, was born on the 20th of September, 1810, at Saltcoats, a seaport on the Firth of Clyde. He was a son of the late Captain Allan, a shipmaster who had been employed on vessels running between the Clyde and the St. Lawrence. Hugh was the second son, and his father destined him for the sea. He received but a very limited education, and in his thirteenth year was put into the counting house of Messrs. Allan, Kerr & Co, of Greenock. Here he remained for a year, when he sailed on his father's ship, the Favourite, for Canada. "Speaking," says the writer of a "Speaking," sketch of Sir Hugh's career, "of the river front of Montreal in the year 1826, Sir Hugh informs us that there were no wharves; that the bank shelved down from Commissioners street to the river; that in coming into the river the ships had to let go an anchor, and the work of unloading could only go on slowly, over a gangway, the horses and carts standing in the water. The habits of the people were as primitive as the city itself. They generally lived over their stores, and it was quite usual for them to sit on chairs on the sidewalk in the open air enjoying a chat." Young Hugh obtained a situation in the firm of William Kerr & Co, whose trade was in dry goods. After three years here spent in familiarising himself with the business, keeping accounts, etc., he grew discontented, for the ambition which was afterwards to make him so prominent began to stir in his veins. He visited Scotland again, where he made only a short stay, returning to Montreal. He met in the street on his return, Mr. James Miller, who was then connected with an extensive shipping business. He gave Allan a situation in his office, and the lad accepted the position with much glee. For this firm he made several large wheat purchases, and conducted other important transactions. His judgment was seen to be so good, and his capacity for business so unusual, that after the lapse of five years, he was admitted as a junior member of the firm. With his partners he soon won golden opinions. was not alone a sound-headed business man, but he was in reality a brilliant one. When the rebellion broke out in 1837 he joined the Fifth Battalion as a volunteer, but speedily rose to the rank of Captain. After the death of Mr. Miller, in 1838, the firm became known as Edmonston & Allan. The firm now began to make enormous strides forward, and in 1853 it commenced the construction of iron screw steamships. The Canadian was the first vessel built, and she made her first voyage in 1855, carrying mails and passengers the following summer. Thereafter the mail service continued by the ships of the firm down to this day. been very justly remarked that the history of this firm from the launching of their first steamer, almost down to the present, is the history of Canadian maritime commerce. It may be said that, during the progress of the Crimean war, two of the Company's steamers, the Indian and the Canadian, were employed by Great Britain and France as transport ships between Portsmouth and Marseilles to the Levant. In 1874 the Sarmatian and the Manitoban were chosen for a like service between England and the west coast of Africa. But Sir Hugh Allan's energies were not confined alone to steamboats, and the operations of the house bearing his name; he was among speculators of every grade, a prince as among mercantile men. Strange to say he had no taste for politics, though with politics he was much mixed "His politics," Goldwin Smith once said, "were the politics of steamboats and railways." He was a director of the Montreal Telegraph Company, the Montreal Warehousing Company, the Merchants Bank of Canada, the Mulgrave Gold Mining Company, and of the celebrated Pacific Railway. His connection with this enterprise has become historic. In order that his influence in the company might be predominant, he supplied Sir John A. Macdonald's ministry, on the eve of a general election, with large sums of money, which money was put to the laudable use of buy. ing votes, and otherwise seducing the constituencies. But before Parliament ratified the contract information leaked out respecting the loans by Sir Hugh Allan, the Ministry were arraigned, charged with corruption, and fell before the onslaught. Hugh had a princely residence at Ravenscraig, in Montreal, and a summer villa at Belmere, on the shores of Lake Memphremagog. For his eminent services to Canadian commerce he was knighted in 1871, as Sir Hugh Allan, of Ravenscraig. He married, on the 13th of September, 1844, Matilda, second daughter of Mr. John Smith, dry goods merchant of Montreal, by whom he had a family of nine daughters and four He died while on a visit to Britain. in Edinburgh, on the 9th of December, 1882, and his remains were interred in Mount Royal Cemetery at Montreal. Perhaps there is no other man known in history to whom Canada owes more of the prosperity that has fallen to her share than to Sir Hugh Allan.

a e la

to sl

w

in

th

C

te Tı

a

sc

mo

no 140

ing

jec

scie

lik

was

cal

trea

den and its (

of t

edit

its i

 $_{
m ten}$

and

othe

edly

sent

is a

for atter

the ral C

respo

New

Dave

place

ration

Toror

Strac

ronto

of the 1869

electe

the n

Monti

Bethune, the Rev. Charles Jas. Stewart, M.A., D.C.L., the distinguished subject of this sketch, was born at West Flamboro', Ontario, on August 11th, 1838. He is the third son of the Right Rev. Alexander Neil Bethune, second Bishop of Toronto, and Jane Eliza, eldest daughter of the late Hon. James Crooks. The Bethune family trace its lineage very far back in Scottish and French historical records. The first of the name who left Normandy for the British Isles came to Scotland in the reign of Malcolm the Third, a contemporary of William the Conqueror, in the eleventh century. Many men famous in Scotch history belonged to the family, among whom may be mentioned Cardinal Beaton (the name is frequently spelled and pronounced in this way), one of Mary Queen of Scots "Four Marys," the Archbishop Bethune of Glasgow, etc. The first of the family to come to Canada was the Rev. John Bethune, chaplain to a Highland regiment, who settled with his comrades in the County of Glengarry, Ontario, towards the end of the last century. He was the father of the late Bishop of Toronto and Dean Bethune of Montreal, and grandfather of the subject of our sketch. Young Bethune was educated at private schools at Cobourg and Upper Canada College. After leaving the latter institution he entered Trinity College, Toronto, and graduated B.A. therefrom in 1859 with firstclass classical honours. He took his M.A. in 1861 and received the honorary degree of D.C.L. from his Alma Mater in 1883, in recognition of his zealous and worthy services at Trinity College School. He was ordained deacon in 1861 and priest in 1862, by the late Bishop Strachan of Toronto. He was curate until 1866 with his father, then Rector of Cobourg, with the exception of a short period spent in England in 1863-4, when he was curate at Carlton, near Selby, in Yorkshire. In 1866 he was appointed to the charge of the Credit Mission, in the County of Peel, Ontario; and since September, 1870, has been Head Master of Trinity College School at Port Hope. From a very small beginning he has raised up this school to be one of the widest known and most successful in the Dominion. He has now a staff of eight assistant masters, about 140 pupils, and large and handsome buildings with extensive play grounds. Our subject has given much of his attention to scientific pursuits, and he is well known in the United States and Great Britain, as likewise in Canada, as an entomologist. He was one of the founders of the Entomological Society of Canada and its secretarytreasurer for seven years. He was president of the same Society from 1870 to 1875, and has continued since to be a member of its Council. He was entomological editor of the Canada Farmer for nine years, and editor of the Canadian Entomologist from its inception in 1868 to 1873. He has written a large number of papers on Practical and Scientific Entomology in these and other publications, and contributed repeatedly to the Annual Report on Insects presented to the Legislature of Ontario. is a fellow of the American Association for the advancement of science and has attended its meetings at various places in the United States; is a member of several Canadian scientific societies and a corresponding member of scientific societies in New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Buffalo, Davenport, Brooklyn, Halifax, and other places. He is also a member of the Corporation of the University of Trinity College, Toronto, and of the council of the Bishop Strachan School for Young Ladies, in Toronto. He was Honorary Clerical Secretary of the Synod of the Diocese of Toronto from 1869 to 1871, and has been repeatedly elected a representative of the diocese at the meetings of the Provincial Synod in Montreal. He has frequently visited England and travelled in the United States; he has also visited Paris, and has seen a good deal of Scotland and Ireland. Our subject has always been a member of the Church of England and associated with the "High Church" school of thought. He married on April 21st, 1863, Alice, second daughter of Lieut.-Colonel Forlong, K. H., of Toronto, late of Her Majesty's 43rd Regiment of Light Infantry, and his wife Sophia, daughter of the Hon. Henry John Boulton, of Holland House, Toronto. Colonel Forlong, when a young man, took part in the battle of Waterloo, and was wounded during the engagement. He carried the bullet, which could not be extracted, all the rest of his life. He died at Gore Vale, Toronto, in 1859. Dr. Bethune has five children living. An earnest and able worker for his church, a learned and deeply-skilled votary in a wide and important branch of science, and at the same time the able administrator of a denominational school made, by his own exertions, the most important among junior institutions in Canada. It has been given to few men whose names are written in this volume to accomplish so much and to accomplish it so well.

Mackenzie, John Innes, of Hamilton, the subject of this sketch, was born at the farm "Arderonie," Ross shire, Scotland, on the 5th May, 1822. He is the fifth son of James Mackenzie, by Grace, nee Innes. Our subject's father was an ensign in the Clanalpine Regt. of Fencibles Infantry. He served in Ireland, and fought at the battle of Vinegar Hill, in the County Wexford. In the year 1800 he was promoted to a lieutenancy in the same regiment. On May 24th, 1813 he was appointed Captain and Adjutant of the Eastern Regiment of Ross Local Militia, and was presented with the freedom of the Royal Burgh of Dingwall, Ross-shire, in 1801. He was the father of twenty-one children, and died on his farm. The subject of this sketch was educated at the Parish School of Logie Easter, and at the Parish School of Kincardine, Ross-shire. At fourteen years of age he entered on an apprenticeship in a general store in the Isle of Skye. In 1842 he emigrated to Canada, making the passage in fourteen weeks by The only serious trouble of sailing ship. his life was arriving in Canada without money or friends. But he had strong hopes in the country's future, and worked his way to his destination-Hamilton. Here and in the neighbourhood he served as a dry goods salesman until 1846, when he ventured, without any capital, to open a general store in Ingersoll, County of Oxford. Here, however, he had large success, and at 31 years of age he might have retired with an ample fortune. In 1853 he was offered, and accepted, a partnership in, and the management of, a new wholesale dry goods business by his former employers. He accepted the offer, and went to London, Ontario. This business he conducted successfully for thirteen years. In 1866, and in the interest of the Hamilton establishment, the two concerns were amalgamated in Hamilton. Subsequently he opened a wholesale dry goods business in Hamilton; and in 1877 sold out his interest therein to his then partners. Since that time he has been mainly engaged as Secy.-Treasurer, and General Manager of the Long Point Shooting Club. Later on he became License Inspector for the city of Hamilton. About 1862, in conjunction with Mr. James Moffatt, he organized a Highland volunteer company in the city of London. At their joint expense the two fully equipped the company, importing the clothing from Glasgow. Our subject was an honorary private, and Mr. Moffatt (now Lieut.-Colonel) was selected as captain. At the time of the Trent difficulty he raised No. 1 Company of the London Battalion, now the 7th Fusiliers, in which he served as captain. He went up for examination, and passed with a first-class certificate. In March, 1866, when moving to Hamilton, he sent in his resignation, but was prevailed upon instead to be transferred to the Hamilton command. In 1870 he was gazetted first Major in the Reserve Militia of the Regimental Division of the city of Hamilton, which rank he now holds. He was prominent in establishing the Dominion Telegraph Company, and was vice-President of that organization for many years. He was also a Director of the Wellington, Grey & Bruce Railway during the construction of that road; was an alderman in the city of London and Hamilton, and prides himself on never having solicited a vote. He was chairman of the Prince of Wales reception committee in London at the time of H.R.H. visit. He was President of St. Andrew's Society in London and in Hamilton; and also President of the Board of Trade in both cities. He became a Free and Accepted Mason in 1853, and is now a past master. He is a Presbyterian, and a Reformer in politics. He married in Nov., 1847, Married Pholometry County garet Phelan, of Abbeyleix, Queen's County, Ireland, now deceased. By this union he had two sons and two daughters, all of whom Altogether the career of Mr.

Mackenzie is one of which any one might be proud; and he is one of those to whom our young country must always find that she remains under a measure of indebtedness.

Reed, Joseph Benjamin, Toronto, the subject of this sketch, was born in the County of Oxford, in the Province of Ontario, on June 9th, 1845. His father was of American descent, and came from Massachusetts, in the United States. His mother came of the well-known Willson family, who were among the pioneer settlers who settled in York County in the early history of the province. Indeed this family may be said to be prominent among those who taught the infant province of Ontario, in those days when all that was needed upon her wide and fruitful acres were intelligence and thrift. It is to the example—the perseverance, the achievement—of such people that every country emerging into civilization has to return thanks for its progress, and for its very The father of this lady came existence. from Staten Island, in the United States. The subject of our sketch was educated in the common school of Oxford County at first; but he was subsequently sent to the Grammar School at Stratford. On completing his studies he cast about him for some suitable employment, and for the nonce became a book-keeper in a mercantile establishment. Such a position was not destined to hold him through life, and he quitted his situation in 1868. He next proceeded to Troy, in the State of New York, where he employed himself for the space of four years, after which he returned to Toronto. He now interested himself in real estate business, continuing in this occupation till the year 1875, when, believing that a better field lay open to his abilities in another direction, he connected himself with the Stadacona Insurance Company. This company was honeycombed, however, from the foundation to the top, and necessarily failed; so in 1877 he assumed the agency for the Liverpool, London and Globe Insurance Co., and in 1881 became agent for the Lancashire Fire and Life Insurance Co. It is stated that Mr. Reed does the largest insurance business in Toronto; as much, in fact, as some prominent companies do in the entire Dominion. He is a Freemason, and is independent in politics, taking a wide and advanced view of public affairs. In religion he is a member of the Presbyterian communion. He married, in 1867, Miss Cummer, a daughter of Mr. John Cummer, one of the earliest settlers in the County of York. Everybody, it need hardly be said, mo Bu knows Mr. J. B. Reed; and a very prominent gentleman said to the writer, "those who don't ought to." He is a quick, clear-headed business man, honourable and manly in his dealings, of large public spirit, and a favourite of all with whom he comes in contact.

ur

ю,

he

n-

as

a-

er 10

 $^{
m ed}$

he

to

he $^{\mathrm{1}}$

it.

he

ry

e-гy

ae s.

in

at

he

t-

ne

e-

h-

to

to ıe

Iе

1e

ld

n,

12,

l,

in

re

ıe

ıe

Waller, William Henry, Registrar of the County of Carleton, Ottawa, was born at Castle Waller, County Tipperary, Ireland, on the 14th May, 1835. He is the eldest son of the late Robert Alfred Waller and Elizabeth his wife. The family of Waller is descended from Alured de Waller, of Newark, County Nottingham, who died in 1183, and from whom descended David de Waller, master of the rolls for thirty-six years to King Edward III. Henry Waller, of Hockerton, brother of David, was great great grandfather of John Waller, of Groombridge, Co. Kent, the latter being father of Sir Richard Waller who participated in the glories of Agincourt, where he made a prisoner of the Duke of Orleans, and was specially honoured by Henry V. for his brave and gallant actions in that memorable conflict. The subject of this sketch is a descendent of Richard Waller, of Groombridge, who went to Ireland in 1641, and left two sons; the elder, Richard Waller, of Cully, Co. Tipperary, who married Elizabeth Redmond, and dying in 1701, was succeeded by his eldest son Edmund, who, dying without issue, in 1711, was succeeded by his brother, William Waller, Esq., of Cully. This gentleman married Blanche Weeks, by whom he had six sons and a daughter Jane, who married Richard Mannsel, Esq. The eldest son Richard, succeeded at Cully or Castle Waller, the family seat, and died in 1758, leaving by Elizabeth his wife, daughter of Admiral Holland, a son and heir, Richard Waller, who married Anne, daughter of Kilner Braizer, Esq., and had, with other issue, Richard Waller, of Castle Waller (the grandfather of the present Mr. W. H. Waller), who married Maria Theresa, daughter of Captain Burke. By this union there were six sons: Edward, William Henry, Robert Alfred, George Tyner, Theophilus and Rodger; and four daughters, Anna, Maria Theresa, Eleanor Ricarda and Bidina. Anna married Sir John De Burgho, of Castle Connell, Co. Limerick, and was mother of the late Sir Richard Donellen De Burgho, who was a first cousin of the subject of our sketch. The family arms are, Chequay or. and az.; on a canton gu., a lion rampant, double queud of the first. The crest: out of a ducal coronet, a plume of ostrich feathers, the 2nd and 4th az., the 1st, 3rd and 5th, arg., surmounting an eagle claw gu. The motto is Honour et veritas; seat, Newport or Castle Waller, County Tipperary, Ireland. Our subject was educated at Newport, in the County Tipperary, Ireland. Through family reverses, he had to leave school when about fourteen years of age, with the rudiments of a general English education, which formed the basis of a more extensive culture, in spare hours, in after years. In 1853, with his father and other members of his family, he came to Canada and settled in the city of Toronto; entered the Globe office and remained there about seven years, acquiring a knowledge of "the art preservative of all arts." During this period, in spare hours, he studied shorthand. Soon by continuous practice became proficient. Was incited to the study by picking up a leaf of a reporter's note-book one day upon the stairs. In 1861 he left the Globe and went to Ottawa, obtained a position on the Ottawa Union, a tri-weekly newspaper, as local reporter; and after a short time, in that capacity, was privileged to use the mysterious "We" in editorial contributions. Remained on the Union until 1865, when it changed hands and name, and became the Ottawa He then went into partnership with Mr. R. E. O'Connor, one of the proprietors of the Union. In 1871 he was elected President of the St Patrick's Literary Association, of Ottawa. In 1874-5 was elected a member of the Separate School Board; and during the same period represented St George's Ward as alderman in the City Council, occupying the important position of Chairman of the Finance Committee. He gave much attention to the office, and aided in putting the finances of the city in a satisfactory condition. In 1876 he was elected Mayor of Ottawa, after a sharp contest with C. W. Bangs, and in 1877 he was re-elected to the position by acclamation. He made himself very popular during the time of his Mayoralty by unostentatiously discharging the duties of the office; in a courteous bearing to officials and the public. He distributed several medals for meritorious acts; gave liberal contributions to all worthy objects demanding assistance, and made strenuous efforts to alleviate the condition of the working classes during the prevailing hard times. At the end of his second year's term as Mayor, he was entertained at a banquet by the citizens of Ottawa, and presented with a valuable gold watch, chain and seal, and | a beautiful illuminated address, expressing appreciation of his services to the city. In 1875 he was elected Vice-President of the Capital Mutual Building Society of Ottawa, and the following year president, which latter position he held until the termination of the Society in 1884. We have good authority for stating that in no single instance did Mr. Waller seek for any of the positions to which he was elected. He was solicited in every case. In 1879 he was appoint d to the office of Registrar of the County of Carleton by the Mowat Administration, which office he at present holds. The selection gave general satisfaction, and the duties of the office are most satisfictorily performed. Mr. Waller is a member of the Catholic faith; but in his religious views is very liberal. Since his acceptance of office he has ceased to be a politician. Prior to taking office, he acted with the Reform party. He married at Toronto in October, 1860, Miss Jane Nolan, daughter of John Nolan, of Moyne, Co. Mayo, Ireland. He has two sons and two daughters. Mr. Waller is about 5 ft. 10 inches high, is of slender build, but wiry, active and full of energy. He is studiously inclined; has always set a great value on time. He is very fond of music, poetry, gardening and horticulture, and in the latter pursuits, in spare hours, pleasure, profit, mental relaxation and health. These tastes, in his case, are not incompatible with practical business talent or ability. He is a fluent speaker, and his style as a writer is racy and practical. He has the courage of his convictions; and, on all subjects on which he treats, says exactly what he thinks. His lecture on "The Irish in Canada," of a few years ago, was a very popular effort, being referred to by nearly every newsparer in Untario in terms of commendation. He is civil and obliging in disposition, "gentle when stroked, fierce (only) when provoked." He has no taste for public balls, dinners and levees, but can enjoy the company of small social gatherings of persons of congenial In the domestic circle he is social and nospitable. Mr. Waller's success, in his adopted country, is one of the many evidences of what can be accomplished by welldirected personal endeavour and persevering industry.

Dawson, Sir J. William, M. A., LL.D., F.R.S., C.M.G., etc., one of the most distinguished living geologists, was born at Pictou, Nova Scotia, in 1820. He received his early training in the College of Pictou. Nova, Scotia. It is related that while engaged in his studies here the thoughtful young classman made extensive collections in the natural history of the province. Here we had given to us the dawn of an unusually brilliant scientific career. Leaving Pictou. young Dawson went to the University of Edinburgh, where he remained for a winter, returning again to Nova Scotia, where he began with ardour his geological researches. In 1842 Sir Charles Lyell, the eminent geologist, visited Nova Scotia, and he had for companion with him during his tour through the province the promising young graduate of Pictou. In 1846 young Dawson returned to the University of Edinburgh to study practical chemistry and other subjects bearing upon the prosecution of geological research. Four years later he was appointed Superintendent of Education for Nova Scotia. He was active in organizing the Normal School in that Province, and was appointed by Sir Edmund Head a member of a commission to regulate the affairs of King's College, now the University of New Brunswick. For many ways he interested himself in the promotion of education, but he never lost sight of the pursuit so near to his heart and his brain. In 1855 he was appointed to the position which he now holds of Principal and Professor of Natural History in McGill College and University in Montreal. Under his enlightened direction, McGill College has come to establish for itself a reputation over the world. From a paper on Dr. Dawson, published in 1875 by the Popular Science Monthly, we make the following excerpt :-- "A review of his more important scientific labours will show us how much may be done, even in the midst of engrossing educational occupations. As early as 1830 Dr. Dawson began to make collections of the fossil plants of the Nova Scotia coal formation. In 1841 he contributed to the Wernerian Society of Edinburgh his first scientific paper, on the species of field-mice found in Nova Scotia. In 1843 he communicated a paper on the rocks of Eastern Nova Scotia to the Geological Society of London; this was followed in 1844 by a paper on the newer coal for-mation. In 1845, besides exploring and reporting on the iron mines of Londonderry, Nova Scotia, he published a paper on the coal formation plants of that province. During the winter of 1846-'47, while studying in Edinburgh, he contributed to the Royal Society of that city papers on the

6gi

the

imp

Red

Edv

Mat

Cala

· Me

also grap

and

 $_{
m Hist}$

and

porte

the c

1852

he n

section of A wick.

mine

Dend

tusta.

found

and

palæ:

the fi

Geolo

a desc

rocks.

Super

the co

ian B

cussed

bearin

Super

native

Dawso

study

tiles, a

tions of

tions,

these s societi

are "

Story of "The all of v and ha ormation of Gypsum,' and on the oulder Formation,' and an article to meson's Edinburgh Philosophical Journal the 'Renewal of Forests Destroyed by The facts embodied in the last were bsequently employed by him in combatthe exaggerated periods of time assigned such changes by European geologists. m 1847 to 1849 we find him, with the he never-flagging zeal, pursuing his geogical researches, and giving the results to the world in frequent papers. The most important of these are: 1. 'On the Triassic Red Sandstones of Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island;' 2. 'On the Colouring Matters of Red Sandstones;' 3. 'On Erect Calamites Found near Pictou;' 4. On the 'Metamorphic Rocks of Nova Scotia.' also published his 'Handbook of the Geography and Natural Historyof Nova Scotia. and delivered courses of lectures on Natural History and Geology in the Pictou Academy, and in Dalhousie College, Halifax, and reported to the Nova Scotia Government on the coal-fields of Southern Cape Breton. In 1852, in company with Sir Charles Lyell, he made a re-examination of the Joggins section, and visited the remarkable deposit of Albertite at Hillsborough, New Brunswick." During his visit to the Joggins mines Mr. Dawson found the remains of Dendrerpeton Acadianum and of Pupa Ve-The former was the first reptile found in the coal formation of America: and Pupa Vetusta was the first known palæozoic land snail. In 1855 he published the first edition of his world-famed Acadian Geology. The following year he prepared a description of the Silurian and Devonian rocks, and during the summer visited Lake Superior, and wrote a paper and report on the copper regions of Maimanse and Georgian Bay. In this masterly paper he discussed the geological relations of the copperbearing rocks of the north shore of Lake Superior and the origin of the deposit of native copper. In recent years Sir William Dawson has devoted much attention to the study of fossil plants and carboniferous reptiles, and the physical and organic conditions of the more recent geological formations, and has published many memoirs on these subjects in the Transactions of various societies. Among his more popular works are "The Origin of the World," "The Story of the Earth," "Fossil Men," and "The Chain of Life in Geological Time, all of which have been published in London and have had large circulation in England and America. One of Dr. Dawson's most re ly u, of

r, re

 $^{\mathrm{hd}}$

is

ıg

ng n-

nd

hn

 $_{
m in}$

te ni-

of

n.

n

as

n

ie he

re

st

٩s

important scientific discoveries is that of Eozoon Canadense. This fossil the late Sir William Logan had noticed, and he handed his specimens to Dr. Dawson. The latter soon recognised—and was the first to do so -its foraminiferal affinities, and proceeded to explain its structure. It may be said that previous to this discovery the Laurentian rocks were regarded as devoid of animal remains, and were therefore called "Azoic." For this term Dr. Dawson substituted Eozoic. Dr. Dawson was elected a Fellow of the Geological Society of London in 1854, and of the Royal Society in He is a Master of Arts of Edinburgh, and a Doctor of Laws of McGill. In 1881 he was awarded the Lyell Medal of the Geological Society of London, England, for his eminent discoveries in geology. He was appointed by the Marquis of Lorne first President of the Royal Society of Canada, and had the principal place in organizing that body. Recognising his brilliant career in science, Her Majesty, in 1881, honoured him with the title of C.M.G., and in 1884, created him a Knight. In 1882, Sir William was President of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. In 1883 he travelled in Egypt and Syria, and published geological observations upon this old land of Biblical history and religious romance. He is now one of the vice-presidents of the British Association. In 1884 he received the degree of LL.D. from the University of Edinburgh, and in the following year was appointed President elect of the British Association for the meeting of 1886. Galbraith, William, Toronto, was born on the 23rd Dec., 1832, at Dumbarton, Scotland. The Galbraith family is a race of millers, our subject being the fourth generation, all having been engaged in this pursuit. His parents were John Galbraith and Christian Craig. His mother's kindred were well-to-do and highly respected farmers. Our subject was educated at Neilston, at the Parish School, with a view of becoming a minister, but owing to certain circumstances he entered into business with cumstances he entered into business with his father. He was always, however, of a studious nature, and while at his daily employment frequently made vast mental excursions. This habit he maintains to the present. His first idea of emigrating to Canada was occasioned by what he read of the country in Chambers's Journal. He left home in 1856 for Toronto, in which city he has since resided. He first obtained a situation through Mr. McMaster with Mr. James Young, produce merchant, with whom he remained for three years. In 1859 he formed a partnership with Mr. Robert Swan, which existed for six years, when Mr. Swan retired. Mr. Galbraith has since carried on the business with very good success. He was President of the Corn Exchange four times, and Vice-President of the Board of Trade twice. He took an enthusiastic interest in the Toronto, Grey & Bruce Railway when that line was first proposed. In 1883 he took a trip to Great Britain, and visited the scenes of his early youth. In religion Mr. Galbraith is a staunch Presbyterian, and in politics an uncompromising Liberal. He married in Feb., 1856, Janet Grey Wright, a native of Neilston, Scotland, and by this lady has had ten children, nine of whom are living. His eldest son is associated with him in the milling business at Allandale, near Barrie. Mr. Galbraith is a total abstainer, never having touched a drop of intoxicating liquor during his life. Wherever Mr. Galbraith is known he is respected, and is a persevering, honourable, and upright man.

Small, Henry Beaumont, Ottawa, the subject of this sketch, was born on the 31st of October, 1831, at Market Bosworth, Leicestershire, England. His father was the Rev. N. P. Small, Rector of Market Bosworth, and his mother's maiden name was Catherine Lee. The family belong to the Athol Clan, and the lineal descendant resides on the family estate of Dirnanean, Pitlochrie, Perthshire, where Alexander Small branched off to London in 1723, becoming a Court Physician, and acquiring large property in Buckinghamshire. The family intermarried into the Beaumonts and Dixies, two old Leicestershire families. Our subject was educated at Bosworth School, King's College, London, and Lincoln College, Oxford. From an early age he showed a leaning to literary and scientific pursuits; and as his intellectual parts became matured he concerned himself with a close and zealous study of natural history. It was because he believed that wider opportunities for the successful prosecution of this study existed in Canada, that he emigrated thither. In 1858 he moved to New York, where he was appointed Classical Professor at the Military College of Sing Sing. He afterwards engaged in private tuition in New York, but returned to Canada in 1865. It may be stated that our subject served in the United States Sanitary Commission during part of the American civil war, in Virginia, and was one of the first who entered Yorktown after its evacuation. He entered the civil service of Canada in 1868 in the department of Marine and Fisheries was transferred to the position of Private Secretary to the Hon. C. Dunkin, Minister of Agriculture, in 1871; went through the various grades, and finally became Chie Clerk of Immigration and Quarantine for Canada in 1885. Mr. Small is a director in Canada of the Glasgow-Canadian Phos phate Co., and connected with the Ossining Lyceum of Natural History, (New York State); the Ottawa Literary and Scientific Society; the Ottawa Field Naturalist Club and is honorary member of the Leicester Museum. He has travelled largely through out Canada and the United States. He a member of the Church of England, @ broad views, and without meddling un duly in politics, is a sound Conservative He married Henrietta, daughter of Thoma Falle, Esq., one of the oldest families of the Island of Jersey, on June 20th, 1853. By this marriage he has five children, three sons and two daughters, the eldest being rising physician in Ottawa. Mr. Small is the author of a number of works on forestry minerals, manufactures, etc., and is a contributor to the British press and to seven magazines.

Vaudreuil, Marquis de, a Frenci lieutenant-general, who had acted for some time as Governor of New France. He was sent to Canada as commander of the force bringing with him some eight hundred ma During the massacre of Lachine he went with three hundred of these to the relief Montreal. He also served in other expeditions, notably under De Frontenac in his celebrated expedition against the Iroquois and in the defence of Quebec against Admiral Phipps in 1690. A few years after wards he gained a signal victory over la Chaudiere Noir, at that time the most for midable and crafty of the Iroquois chieftains. Giving up the military for the naval service, in 1702, he obtained a seignior, and was appointed Governor of Montreal His marriage at Quebec to Louise Elizabeth Joybert de Soulange, daughter of Chevalie Joybert de Soulange, caused great dissatisfaction to the French Ministry, who strongly objected to the alliance of their colonial governors with the colonists themselves In 1703 he became Governor of Canada succeeding M. de Callières; in 1710 he took a most prominent part in the defence of Quebec, where his activity was unbounded; he also did all that lay in his power for the relief of Montreal. During the reign of Louis XV., he brought about many useful reformion, vin the 10th call the colony admin listing Valence Canadithan unis me Ros

s an

World

himsel

bition

and the

and ex withou to an a ege. bition tances prove a ever ma pvercon our soc of cours humble rural sc and the tion wh greatly his for and the worthy as Mr. . those w Ross, born ne sex, On As we h own for sical fra lectual cultivate his way persister origin. ceive th educatio districts

Building

efforts, i

third-cla

years de

he obtai

1868 eforms, in matters of education and civilizaneries tion, which were at that time greatly needed n the colony. He died at Quebec on the 10th of October, 1725, much regretted by all those who knew the sterling qualities of his character, and by the people of the clony who had felt the benefit of his wise ne for colony who had felt the benefit of his wise stor is administration as a soldier. He had been listinguished for bravery at the siege of Valenciennes, and during his service in Canada, as an administrator, he was more than usually successful, either as regards his measures of peace or war.

rivat

iniste

gh the Chie

Phos

sinin

York

entif

Club

ceste

ough

He i

g un ative

toma

of th

В

thre

ing d

s the

stry

COL

ver

SOM

rces

men.

went

ef of edi-

his

ois;

Ad

ter-

la

for !

ief• i

eval }

lier i

tis-

gly ial

Ross, Hon. Geo. William, LL.B., M.P.P., etc.—The career of this gentleman s an excellent example of what the New World can do for a man who sets before himself a high ideal of life, with the ambition to overcome the accidents of birth, and the steadfast purpose to rise to a useful and exalted position among his fellows, without the adventitious aids which belong to an artificial society and an age of priviege. In Mr. Ross's case a laudable ambition has not been thwarted by circumstances which in the Old World so often prove a bar to personal advancement, whatever may be the merit of him who strives to byercome them. With all the freedom of bur social and national life in Canada, it is of course not often given to one to rise from humble birth and the limited resources of a rural school training to high political office and the Ministership of Education—a position which Mr. Ross succeeded in attaining, greatly to his credit, before he had reached his forty-third year. Only unusual gifts and their devotion to high purposes and worthy ends could win such signal fortune as Mr. Ross has achieved far in advance of those who began life's race with him. Mr. Ross, who is of Scotch parentage, born near Nairn, in the County of Middlesex, Ontario, on the 18th of Sept., 1841. As we have hinted, he is the architect of his own fortunes. The possessor of a good physical frame, and a strong and active intellectual organization, which he assiduously cultivates, Mr. Ross has successfully fought his way upwards with a determination and persistence characteristic of his Highland origin. As a boy he was fortunate to re-ceive the sound but eminently practical education to be had in the older settled districts of the Province a generation ago. Building upon this, by his own unaided efforts, he succeeded in 1857 in obtaining a third-class county certificate, and for many years devoted himself to teaching. In 1859 first-class, County Board certificate. Two years later, he took a course at the Normal School, Toronto, and in 1871 secured a first class Provincial certificate. In the latter year he was appointed Inspector of Public Schools for the County of Lambton, and subsequently acted in a similar capacity for the Towns of Petrolea and Strathroy. While Inspector for East Lambton, Mr. Ross was in 1875 made the recipient of a handsome gold watch and chain, with a complimentary address from the teachers of the district, in acknowledgment of his zeal in educational work and his able and unwearied service in the profession. He was also presented with a flattering address by the County Council. "During those years," says a writer in the Canada School Journal, "when the establishment of additional Normal Schools was agitated in this province, and rival cities were clamouring for location of the proposed new schools within their limits, Mr. Ross took a leading part in the movement set on foot for the creation of County Model Schools, when it was found that the Government of the day hesitated to incur the outlay for additional Normal Schools. He devoted much time and attention to perfecting the new scheme of County Model Schools, and after their establishment, prepared the syllabus of lectures, and was for a time appointed inspector of Model Schools. The excellent results that have followed are a sufficient indication of the wisdom of his counsels, and of the energy and skill with which the scheme was put into practical operation. From 1876 to 1880 he was a member of the Central Committee, and was there a faithful advocate of the teachers' interests. He contended for the use of only one text-book on the same subject in the public schools, and was in favour of confining the Normal Schools to strictly professional work, leaving the academic or nonprofessional part of the students' training to the High Schools and Institutes." For some years Mr. Ross was engaged in journalistic work. At one time he owned the Strathroy Age and at another was part proprietor of the Huron Expositor. His great mental resources and intimate knowledge of public questions well fit him to shine in the field of journalism. In educational journalism he also made his mark, having conducted, with Mr. McColl, of Strathroy, the Ontario Teacher, a publication which was spiritedly edited and for a time of great service to the teaching profession. many of our public men, Mr. Ross has also he obtained a second-class, and in 1867 a been drawn to law, and though he has never practised the profession he has passed several of the preliminary examinations, and in 1879 wrote for and obtained from the Albert University the degree of LLB. For many years Mr. Ross has been an enthusiastic leader in Temperance and Prohibitory movements in Canada, and in the House of Commons, as well as in the Ontario Legislature, has earnestly advocated the cause of Temperance and taken active part in its legis-In 1879 he was elected Most lation. Worthy Patriarch of the National Division of the Sons of Temperance of North America, and for two years presided over their deliberations at Washington and at Cincinnati. In Reform politics Mr. Ross has for years been a well known and distin-A ready debater and a guished figure. lucid and incisive speaker he has again and again been of yeoman service to his party and done much to advance the cause of Liberalism throughout Ontario. "As a public speaker," remarks the authority we have already quoted, "Mr. Ross has a remarkable faculty of grouping his facts and presenting his arguments in clear, logical order, in which we find the influence of his early training as a teacher. He is quick at repartee, possesses a retentive memory, and a contagious enthusiasm which frequently expresses itself in genuine eloquence. He has the ardour and impulsiveness of a Celt combined with much prudence and sound judgment. He is a living example of the power of continuity of purpose and indomitable will, when linked with intelligence and high motive." Mr. Ross was first elected representative of West Middlesex in the House of Commons in 1872; two years afterwards, at the general election, he was returned by acclamation; he was again returned in the years 1878 and 1882, though in the following year he was unfortunate to lose his seat in consequence of bribery by agents. In Nov., 1883, he was appointed Minister of Education for Ontario, as successor to the Hon. Adam Crooks, Q.C., and in the following month was elected to the Legislative Assembly for his present seat, West Middle-To his important office Mr. Ross brings a strong, clear, and well stored mind, wide experience in teaching, a hearty enthusiasm in educational matters, and sterling qualities as a departmental administrator and public officer. He strikes the interviewer at once by his clear-headed pracical view of things, and gives the impression of an eminently safe man, a cautious but vigorous administrator, with no fads or crotchets, but with abounding energy, unflagging purpose, and strong common sense Mr. Ross married Christina, fourth daughte of Duncan Campbell, Esq., of Middleses who however died in 1872. In 1875 he again married, Miss Boston, of Lobo, Coun Middlesex, becoming his wife.

Sheppard, Edmund, Bowmanvill the subject of this biographical paper, wa born at Newark, Nottinghamshire, England on the 3rd of February, 1823. His paren were Christopher Hancer Sheppard, and h mother Maria, nee Stevenson. His fath it may be said, took a prominent interest politics in England, and was one of the for most supporters of Sergt. Wild, the Refor candidate, who ran in opposition for News to Mr. (now the Hon.) W. E. Gladston who was, in these early days, a Conservative Our subject received his primary education at Newark, and he afterwards attended Bethany College, Virginia, United State He was, in early life, a strict member of Church of England, but, in 1842, he di sented, uniting himself with the Christia church (Disciples) in Nottingham. From information published in the historical Atlanta of the County of Elgin, and from other sources the following is gleaned respecting our subject: "He is a man of no ordina cast of mind . and it is chiefly b cause his many friends in Western Ontar will read with interest the plainest facts his history that they are recorded her His public labours have been extensive, a mainly in two fields, educational and eva gelical. Mr. Sheppard was born in Newar England, in 1823, and emigrated to Cana in the Spring of 1843. He comment school teaching in the township of Mari ham, in the year 1844, attended Betham College for some time, and settled in Sout Dorchester in 1848. Mr. Sheppard early recognised the importance of our nation system of education, and the share of it administration which devolved upon him was performed with ability and zeal. Hi first appointment to the office of Local Sup of Schools was upon the recommendation Judge Elliott, of London (who had held the office of District Supt.), for North and South Dorchester in 1850. In that year assisted in organizing the Board of Public Instruction for the United Counties of Mil dlesex and Elgin. His colleagues were:
Mr. French of London, the late Bishs Cronyn, the late Mr. Silcox of Southwold and the late Judge Wilson. In 1859 was appointed Supt. of Schools for the Est Riding of Elgin, and upon the death of John S. McColl, in March, 1866, he was a who turing Ith, l in S chers vice chmei l good d was o of E nd-da though cause nself b life w ristian lneer o les of Wester esting ntrover are rker, -r relaxe loves.' nville stor of ich the mber. bruary Shepp Toron ughters. uth Dor me. T nily of ancy. Dwigh

rn at H ork, on I d moth

s fathe

e Dwig

s educ

use in C

14 to se

oyed in mained f

portunit

en in its cements

id secure elegraph ationed a nce was moved

nief opera

ree years

inted

est El

inted over the additional territory of est Elgin. The labours of the office for whole county, with much travelling, turing and preaching, severely taxed his Ith, and, in consequence, he resigned, l in Sept., 1867, was presented by the chers of the East Riding with a fine tea vice and a complimentary address on chment, expressive of their appreciation In 1848 Mr. Shepd good will d was married to Miss Nancy Bentley, o of English descent, and a great-greatnd daughter of a sister of John Bunyan. though Mr. Sheppard has done much for cause of education, and has distinguished nself by his lectures on scientific subjects, life work thus far has been that of the ristian teacher, and he was indeed the neer of the people known as the 'Disles of Christ,' or the Christian Church Western Ontario. He is affable and inesting in conversation, active and able in ntroversy; and, in fine, his characteriss are those of the earnest and zealous rker,—the man who never forgets friends, r relaxes his efforts in the cause which loves." Mr. Sheppard moved to Bownville in 1881. In that town he is now stor of the Church of the Disciples of ich the late Hon. John Simpson was a mber. His wife died at Bowmanville in bruary, 1883. His only son, Edmund Sheppard, is proprietor and editor of Toronto News. Our subject has two ughters. One married and is living in uth Dorchester; and one single, living at me. These are all that survive of a nily of twelve, most of whom died in ancy.

Dwight, Harvey Prentice, was rn at Belleville, Jefferson County, New ughte

llese

aga oun

, wa

glan

aren

nd H

fath

est

e for

efor

e war

ston

atin

ati

ende

tate of the di istin

Fro Atl

oth

ctin

nar

rk, on December 23rd, 1828. His father d mother are of New England origin. s father's name was Harvey Prene Dwight. The subject of our sketch s educated at a small country schooluse in Oswego County. He left school 14 to seek his fortune, and was first emoyed in a small country store, where he mained for three years. He then had an portunity to learn telegraphy, which was en in its infancy, and held out strong inicements to young men. He applied for d secured a position with the Montreal elegraph Company, in 1847. He was first ationed at Belleville, Ontario, when that ice was opened; and from here he was moved to Montreal, where he became hief operator, occupying this position for ree years, until the spring of 1850, when he was sent to Toronto to take charge of the Toronto offices, and in this position he has since remained, the whole business being now under his management. Under his able direction lines have been laid in every portion of the country where the roads made it at all practicable to establish them. At the present time Canada stands second to no country in the world with regard to cheapness and efficiency of its telegraph sys-This circumstance, it may be claimed with all justice, is due in a great measure, if not wholly, to the clear sightedness and excellent executive ability of Mr. Dwight. But Mr. Dwight has not confined his business abilities exclusively to the telegraphic system which owes to him its superb completeness. He has taken a very active part in a number of other important public enterprises, and is one of the best known men in Canada. Mr. Dwight is a member of the Church of England. His position is such that it has been necessary for him to refrain totally from politics. He was first married to Sarah Hutchinson, of Port Robinson, she being of Irish descent. This lady died. He subsequently married Miss Mary Margaret Helliwell, daughter of William Helliwell, a York pioneer. It is seldom that an efficient administrator, who must not regard economy as the least factor in good management, can be thoroughly popular with those around him, yet Mr. Dwight is greatly liked by his large staff of employees, and they would consider no word of eulogy too strong to bestow upon him. Mr. Dwight is one of the capable, active public spirits from whose brain and energy the community is always a great profiter.

Crerar, John, Barrister-at-law and County Crown Attorney, Hamilton, was born at Crieff, Perthshire, Scotland, in 1836. His father was a mechanic, possessed of great natural talent, had strong literary tastes, and was a well-known contributor in his own locality, to the journals of his day. Though long dead, his "sayings and doings" are still often quoted in the "reminiscence" columns of the Perthshire newspapers. Our subject was the eldest of five sons, all living with one exception, and occupying prominent positions. One is a well-known divine in the Free Church of Scotland (the Rev. Thomas Crerar, M. A., of Leith). divine has contributed to the literature of Scotland several valuable translations from the German writers on theological subjects. Our subject was educated partly in his native town and partly at the famous "Madras

College" of St. Andrew's. He entered a Scotch law office at an early age, but after three years' study he gave up law, and entered the service of the old Perth Bank, whence he joined the ill-fated City of Glasgow Bank, in Edinburgh. In 1857, he was induced by the late T. M. Daly, of Stratford (a relation by marriage) then M. P. for Perth in the old Parliament of Canada, to come to this country. In the fall of 1857 he received an appointment in the Bank of Montreal. Here he remained for ten years. In 1864, while stationed in the Bank of Montreal, at London, he married Miss Hope, eldest daughter of the late Hon. Adam Hope, Senator of the Dominion. In 1866, at Mr. Hope's suggestion, Mr. Crerar abandoned banking and commenced life afresh, as a law student, in the office of E. J. Parke, Barrister, London, C.W. Subsequently he studied with S. B. Freeman, at Hamilton, and with R. A. Harrison, afterwards Chief Justice, at Toronto. Mr. Crerar carried off the first Law scholarship at Osgoode Hall, in each year of his course; and in 1871 opened his office as a barrister, in Hamilton, where he now resides, and is the senior partner of the firm of Crerar, Muir & Crerar, Barristers, &c. He is solicitor for various corporations including the Molsons Bank, in that city, and the firm are reputed to do a large and lucrative law business. From 1872 to 1880 our subject became widely known as an active and trusted member of the Liberal party in politics. Notably a man who has the courage of his opinions, his political platform was rigidly defined and uncompromising. A student, con amore, of political economy, he was ever a pronounced Free-trader of the Cobden and Bright school. Thoroughly familiar with the literature of free-trade, he plunged into the parliamentary campaign of 1878 with singular enthusiasm, and through the press and on a score of platforms throughout Ontario he publicly analysed from the scientific economical point of view propounded by the recognized authorities of Free trade and Protection, the new dogma called the National Policy. His efforts were recognized by the press of his party as an exposition of trade principles from the Free trade standpoint which for thoroughness and ability were not excelled by those of any platform orator on the Liberal side during that memorable contest. In 1881 Mr. Crerar was appointed County Crown Attorney for the County of Wentworth, which necessarily precluded him from further active work in the position with that result specially in view. He is a powerful debater and a man of intense convictions. His views on public questions are given in a way to indicate that the speaker is absolutely indifferent whether these views are popular or unpopu-Immediately preceding his appoint. ment to his present office, he served for a time as an alderman in Hamilton City Council, where his uncompromising method of dealing with city affairs, purely upon their merits, was fully recognized. Mr. Crerar is a man of prepossessing appearance and possesses many social accomplishments. Himself an actor of great versatility he founded, some ten years ago, the celebrated "Garrick Club" of Hamilton, of which he is now president, a dramatic association whose productions on the stage, on behalf of the charitable institutions of that city, have always been excellent. In the social meetings of the members of his profession, "bar-dinners," our subject is always a prominent figure, his post-prandial speeches being singularly happy and amusing. It is by no means improbable that the subject of our sketch will again take his part in public politics, in which case there is little doubt, but we shall hear of him on the floor of one or other of our Houses of Parliament. He is a Freemason.

McKindsey, Honourable G. C., Milton, Senator of the Dominion, was born in the township of Trafalgar, in the County of Halton, Ontario, on the 29th of March, 1829. He was the son of William McKindsey and Jane McKindsey, both of whom were natives of the north of Ireland, and settled in the County of Halton. Our subject received a careful education, being at first put under private tutors and afterwards sent to the public schools. Before he reached his twenty-second year he had begun to show much interest in political questions; and we learn that it was more than once predicted that he would some day be found upon the floor of some legislature. He had no difficulty in making choice of a party, for he found himself a conservative by a sort of instinct. He was always ready to take part in any political movement going on, and before he was twenty-three we find him taking an active part in the election for his county, in which Dr. Hamilton and John White were candi-This time our subject's candidate Dr. Hamilton, was not successful. Thre years later (1854) another election occurred, and Mr. White, who was opposed by Col. politics, and it is supposed that he accepted | George K. Chisholm, found that he had deal ung c eorge ting I 0. Th oved to nce cor 855) th pointe WAR ilson li d came ree ye d Mr. oted to Macde t a stro conte hom we ıs defea generai cKinds e count m. Mc votes. e result d cons ampion eir plat d broug ould oth e ex-she licy upo ly refus ight hav lvantage rned hi provinci rfecting d the forts in sted in t ture, wh ajority o ars this d the ed ord of it saying ntleman ed reput

ghly qua

nd social

on [his

which l

eption

i cha

with

ed at 859,

He

deal likewise with the impassioned ung conservative, Mr. McKindsey, and orge K. Chisholm was successful, deting Mr. White by a majority of over 0. The following year Mr. McKindsey byed to Milton, and in that town he has ace continued to reside. In the year 855) that he removed to Milton he was pointed deputy sheriff of the county, but was virtually chief official, for Sheriff ilson lived at some distance upon his farm, d came but once in the week to his office. ree years later, Mr. Wilson resigned, d Mr. McKindsey was promptly pro-pted to the vacant office, by Sir John Macdonald. In 1872 Mr. McKindsey t a strong desire to enter public life, and contested the county with Mr. White, hom we have already mentioned, but he s defeated by a small majority. In 1882 reneral election came round, and Sheriff ckindsey resigned his office to contest e county once again, this time with Mr. m. McCraney, but he was defeated by This, it may be stated, was not e result of a square issue between reform d conservatism with our subject as its ampion, for the liberals introduced into eir platform the question of the Scott Act, d brought hundreds across the lines who puld otherwise have cast their ballots for e ex-sheriff. Not having formulated any licy upon the issue, our subject honourly refused to make any pledges, as he ight have done, for the sake of personal vantages. From that time forth he rned his attention, says an article from provincial newspaper at our hand, towards rfecting the organization of the county, d the success which has attended his orts in this direction was plainly manisted in the late election to the local legisture, when Major Kerns was elected by a ajority of about 150. The same authority ars this testimony to his personal worth, d the editor of this sketch endorses every ord of it, and could find himself justified saying more: "Mr. McKindsey is a ntleman of the strictest integrity, unsuld reputation and untarnished honour, ghly qualified by intellectual attainments nd social qualities for the important posion [his appointment to the Senate—Ed.] which he has been raised. With keen eptions, excellent judgment and high charactor, his appointment is looked with universal favour." Our subject ed at Brockville, on the 19th of Octo-859, Teresa, daughter of John Craw-He has one child. Mr. McKindsey

y in

man blic

cate

rent

pu-

int

or a

City

bod

eir

rar

and

its.

he

ted

he

ion

alf

ty, ial

n,

a

ies

lic

ŧ,

ne

Ie l

le

ρf

has likewise been a justice of the peace for the county, a captain in the militia, and president of the Agricultural Association of the County of Halton. He was called to the Senate on the 12th January, 1884, and at once takes his place as one of the ablest legislators in that body.

Burbidge, George Wheelock, Q.C., Deputy Minister of Justice for Canada. Solicitor of Indian Affairs, and one of the foremost members of the bar, was born at Cornwallis, Nova Scotia, on the 6th February, 1847. His father was Arnold Shaw Burbidge, of Cornwallis, and his mother, Lydia Amelia, daughter of David Eaton. Our subject was educated at Mount Allison Wesleyan College, where he took the degree of B.A., in 1864; and, in 1867, the degree of M.A. In June, 1871, he was called to the bar of New Brunswick, and practised his profession at Saint John, N.B., as a member of the firm of Harrison & Burbidge. On the 5th of February, 1873, he married Alice E. Maxwell, the third daughter of Henry Maxwell, of Saint John, N.B. He was Secretary to the Commissioners for consolidating the laws of New Brunswick, which completed its work in 1877. In 1882 he was appointed to the position of deputy of the Minister of Justice and Solicitor of Indian Affairs; and in 1883 he was selected as one of the commissioners to consolidate and revise the statutes of Canada. The most notable cases in which he has been engaged, since he became Deputy Minister of Justice, was the Liquor License Act case, which the late Mr. Bethune, Q.C., and he, for the Government of Canada, argued before the Supreme Court of Canada in September, 1884; and the trials of Riel and the other rebel prisoners, in which he was associated with Christopher Robinson, Q.C.; B. B. Osler, Q.C.; D. L. Scott, and T. Chase Casgrain, as counsel for the Crown. In all these cases, as well as in the record of his earlier legal career, Mr. Burbidge has revealed legal attainments of no ordinary kind; and especially has he given evidence of the judicial quality which stands more in his line of duty as deputy in the Department of Justice. His appointment, the editor takes pleasure in saying, was not due to the political pressure which sometimes makes mermen of fishes by order-in-council, but because of the eminent fitness for such an important place, which his career as a man and as a lawyer had revealed. Mr. Burbidge has a family of six children. religion he professes the doctrines of the Methodist faith.

Macpherson, Honourable David Lewis, K. C. M. G., P. C., Sir ronto, was born in Scotland on the 12th of September, 1818. He comes of an ancient and sturdy Scottish family, and in the markedly successful career which has been his, exhibits the characteristics of his race. Our subject went to school in Scotland, and completed his education at the Inverness Royal Academy. In 1835, with the thousands of others who were at this time turning their faces toward the New World, he set sail, resolved to try his fortune in Canada. Here was a new country large with promise and holding out encouraging, nay, beseeching hands to courage. and enterprise. Young Macpherson was just the man for such a field. It would be difficult at this distance to lay hold of every fact which would show the main-springs of his success; but the chief results stand out. Early in his career he took an earnest interest in public questions; and in 1864, three years before Confederation, at the solicitation of many, friends he offered himself, and was successful for the Saugeen Division. Lower Canada. He held his seat in the old Canadian Parliament as member for Saugeen, till 1867, when he was called by Royal Proclamation to the Senate. He had now amassed much wealth, was prominently connected with enterprises of national importance, and stood in high repute among his fellow-countrymen. It will be remembered that after the passage of the Act authorising the Canadian Government to enter into contract with any Company for the building of a railway from ocean to ocean, under the terms of the agreement with British Columbia, Mr. Macpherson was the means of forming, and was appointed president of an association known as the Interoceanic Railway Company incorporated for the purpose of constructing this great railway. The Government, however, did not conclude terms with the company, but gave the preference, subsequently, to the organization under the control of Sir Hugh Allan. Early in his commercial career Mr. Macpherson associated himself with the well-known firm of Gzowski & Co., contractors, who, it will be remembered, constructed several branches of Canadian railways, and other important works. Macpherson's judgment upon public questions, especially those relating to finance, commerce and kindred subjects, have always been held in the highest regard. In 1868, he was appointed arbitrator for the Province of Ontario, under the British North America Act, "for the division and adjustment of the debts, credits, liabilities and properties of Upper and Lower Canada." He was likewise vice-president of the Montreal Board of Trade. He has taken a deep interest in several social organizations and commercial institutions. He is a director of Molsons Bank; of the Western Canada Permanent Loan and Savings Conipany; of the Guarantee Company of North America, and has been president of the St. Andrew's Society, Toronto. Mr. Macpherson has exhibited a special talent for controversy on financial and commercial questions; his contributions to the literature on these matters have been very important. In 1869, he published a sound, lucid and comprehensive pamphlet on Banking and Currency; and between the years of 1877 and 1882, he published a number of works on kindred topics, dealing in the same searching and satisfactory manner with questions relating to public expenditure. On the 10th of February, 1880, Mr. Mac-pherson was appointed Speaker of the Senate, and member of the Executive Council without portfolio, and this position he held till the 17th of October, 1883, when he resigned the speakership and was appointed Minister of the Interior. His long and important services in the country, both in politics and commerce, pointed him out as one deserving of such additional honour as the Crown is in the habit of bestowing upon those who have served in the state honourably and with success, therefore, it was with no surprise that, in 1884, it was learned that Her Majesty had been pleased to confer the order of Knighthood upon the Honourable Mr. Macpherson. Our subject married in June, 1844, Miss Elizabeth Sarah, eldest daughter of William Molson, Esquire, of Montreal, and grand-daughter of the Hon. John Molson, who had been a member of the Executive Council of Lower Canada, and president of the Bank of Montreal. Latterly Sir David's health has not been good, and he has been obliged to resign (1885) his position as Minister of the Interior, and seek rest abroad from the gnawing cares of political and commercial business. Sir David is very tall, and has a dignified and commanding appearance. One of his daughters, Miss Isabel, is married to the Hon. George Kirkpatrick, Speaker of the House of Commons.

Lee, Walter Sutherland, was born in Toronto, on October 18th, 1836. His father was Joseph Lee, who with his wife, the mother of the subject of cur sketch, came in 1 fathe York dise, He w on th years publi a Car ing th His w living cated emy, fourte office busin tered maine of the Compa since. sary to tensive countr Rifle captair Reserv the Scl man fo years a and pre been a since 18 said. h He was rectors of the S of the C was elec pital, 18 since. terest in has beer tute. I Order, I Master, Mr. Lee widened He has France a he is, as

of the C

s a Libe

nterest

2nd, 186

Lenty, w

gentlema

In social and has h

came from London, England, to Canada in 1832, and settled in Toronto. father kept what was known as "East York Store," dealing in general merchandise, and did a very extensive business. He was one of the first settlers, and served on the aldermanic Board for a number of vears. He took an active part in all the public movements of those days. He was a Captain of Militia, taking part in quelling the troubles of 1837. He died in 1863. His wife, the mother of our subject, is still living. Walter Sutherland Lee was educated at Mr. James R. Mair's private academy, which he left when he reached his fourteenth year. He then went into the office of Mr. John Maulson, and learnt the business of accountant; and in 1855 entered the gas office as cashier, where he remained till 1864. Then he became manager of the Western Canada Loan and Savings Company, which position he has held ever since. This establishment, it is hardly necessary to say, is one of the solidest, most extensive and widely-known of its class in the country. He was a member of the first Rifle Volunteers in Toronto, and holds a captaincy now in the 7th Company of the Reserve Militia. He has been a member of the School Board since 1868, and was chairman for two years, 1874-75. He was for years a director of the Mechanics' Institute, and president for two years, 1880-81. He has been a director of the Industrial Exhibition since 1877, and of this institution, it may be aid, he was one of the early promoters. He was likewise one of the provisional directors of the Dominion Bank, a director of the St. Lawrence Foundry, and a director of the Confederation Life Association. was elected a trustee of the General Hospital, 1877, 1879, and re-elected each year since. He has always taken a very deep interest in education, and the past four years has been chairman of the Collegiate Institute. In 1858 he entered the Freemasons' Order, King Solomon's Lodge, and is a Past Master, Royal Arch and Knights Templar. Mr. Lee has enlarged his experience, and widened his observation by travel abroad. He has visited England, Scotland, Ireland, France and the United States. In religion he is, as his ancestors have been, a member of the Church of England. In politics he s a Liberal-Conservative, and takes great nterest in public questions. On February 2nd, 1860, he married Miss Emma Mary enty, whose father was a retired English gentleman, who came to this country in 1831. n social life he is genial and kindly hearted, and has hosts of warm friends.

nand

ilities

ada." Mon-

deep

s and

lirec-

stern

Doni-

orth e St.

her-

con-

ues-

e on ant.

and

and 1877 brks

ame

vith

ire,

Iac-

the

un-

he

he

ted

im-

oli-

one

the

oon

nr-

ith

ed

n-

he

ect

th

er

Macdonald, A.A., Dr. -- Albert Angus Macdonald, Toronto, was born on February 7th, 1851, at Cobourg. His father, Archibald Macdonald, was judge of the County Court, County of Wellington, and was a native of Cobourg, being a son of Captain Archibald Macdonald, of the 8th Regiment of Foot. His mother was a daughter of Rev. David Wright, whose parents were U. E. Loyalists, and who formerly settled in the Bay of Quinté region. The distinguished subject of this sketch was educated at Guelph, and then at Toronto University. graduating in medicine in 1872. He studied at St. Thomas's Hospital, London, England, and at Edinburgh, and took diplomas at the College of Physicians and Surgeons at Edinburgh, in 1873. He had, from his earliest years, set his heart upon being a medical man. Although studious of habit, he took a very active part in sports, being always very fond of hunting and rifle shooting, and was a member of the first Canadian Wimbledon team. Late in 1873, he returned to Canada, and was associated with Dr. Keating, of Guelph, and did a large He arrived in Toronto general practice. in 1878, and has been practising his profession in that city ever since, each year with increasing success, till now he has one of the largest practices established in the Queen He took a first class certificate at City. the Infantry School, being with the 60th and 29th Regiments, also a first class certificate in the Artillery School under Colonel Williams. He was surgeon to the Wellington Field Battery of Artillery from 1872 to 1879, since which time he has been surgeon to the Toronto Field Battery. He is on the active staff of the Toronto General Hospital, and on the consulting staff of the Infants' Home and Orphans' Home. In religion he is an Episcopalian, and in politics a Conservative. He was married on May 25th, 1876, to Frances Elizabeth Beardmore, daughter of G. L. Beardmore, of Toronto, and has three children, two girls and one boy. The doctor is possessed of great energy, and has strong convictions, and when he makes up his mind, after proper deliberation, he does not change. He is successful as a professional man, and a social favourite.

Daly, Malachy Bowes, M.P. for Halifax, and Deputy Speaker and chairman of Committees of the House of Commons, was born at Marchmount. near Quebec, on the 6th of February, 1836. Mr. Daly comes of an old and very honourable Irish family. He is a son of Sir Dominick Daly, who was for a quarter of a century Colonial Secretary in the old Canadian Legislature.' During this period he represented Megantic. He was subsequently appointed Governor of Tobago, and afterwards of Prince Edward Island. He was likewise Governor-in Chief of South Australia. He married Maria Gore, a daughter of Colonel Gore of Barrowmount, County Kilkenny, Our subject was educated at St. Mary's College, Oscott, near Birming-ham, England. Having completed his education and returned home, he was entered in a barrister's office, and began a study of the law. In 1864 he was called to the bar of Nova Scotia. He did not apply himself continuously to the practice of his profession, but was private secretary to his father, who was Governor of Prince Edward Island, for six years. He likewise became private secretary to Sir R. G. Macdonnell, Governor of Nova Scotia, and also to Sir Hastings Doyle. He was likewise provincial A.D.C. to Sir Fenwick Williams, the "Hero of Kars,"during the time that that illustrious officer was Governor of Nova Scotia. Mr. Daly always took an active part in benevolent work, and his purse has never been closed to the demands of the poor. He was for two successive years president of the Charitable Irish Society of Halifax; and at the time of writing is president of the General Council of the Society of Saint Vincent de Paul of Halifax. Naturally enough, Mr. Daly, whose father had spent twenty-five years as a representative in Parliament, and held during that period so important a place in the Government, turned his eyes towards Parliament. In 1878, the year that swept Mr. Alex. Mackenzie's government out of existence, our subject presented himself to the public of Halifax and was elected. He is and always has been, as his father was, somewhat of the old school of politics-a staunch Conservative. Yet, like his father, he is not innoculated with party virus; considering that he has gone far enough when he has proclaimed his allegiance, thrown his vote in favour of the measure which both he and his party think is for the public interest. At the last general election Mr. Daly was again elected. He married at Halifax, on the 4th of July, 1859, Miss Joanna, second daughter of Sir Edward Kenny, of Halifax, and formerly a member of Sir John A. Macdonald's administration. Early in the season of 1885 it was considered desirable to appoint a deputy speaker and chairman of committees to share with the Speaker the onerous duties of the chair. This is the English custom, yet, of course, some honourable gentlemen who oppose the Government | having entered the wholesale firm of Ker, criticised the appointment. Mr. Blake too exception, not to the creation of the office but to the manner in which the Prime-Minister was proceeding to create it. speakership or deputy speakership is part of the machinery of the constitution; and this machinery cannot be changed, increased of diminished except by Act of Parliament But Sir John was proceeding to create the office, by resolution of the House, when Mr. Blake tripped him, and as he could not help himself, accepted Mr. Blake's suggest Mr. Daly was elected unanimously tions. by the House, and has proven to be an excellent chairman. His judgment is good and his temper, even under great provocation, most excellent.

857, nana

Ridle

uildi

allas

he fi

rester

nd el

he ev

anced

 $_{
m omm}$

lownf

heanti

nd a iously

h Han

h the

eing n

idley

ntil 1

nt be

he cor

mbanl

orks :

f this

so tr

the

he tin

fter h

hip wi

rietor

g Co.)

the

rey &

ain th

arristo

is roa

ipissin

ill exi

lackenz

rey &

lvances

ev heca

r. Mac

rrender

rtner (

tion th er liab cepted.

e great

fferent

accum

the To

terward

Mackenzie, William Innes, Tor onto, was born in the County of Ross, Scott land, in A.D. 1824. His parents were Captain James Mackenzie and Grace Innes daughter of the late Dr. Alex. Innes, of Loggie, County of Ross, Scotland. Captain James Mackenzie, of Ard-Chronie (name of farm) County Ross, Scotland, was a captain and adjutant of the 78th Royal High landers, and retired to his farm from the army on half pay, where he resided till hi death, leaving a family of six boys and sir girls. Our subject was the fourth son. He was educated in the Royal Academy, in the town of Tain, Scotland, and received a the rough education. After leaving school he entered under an indenture of apprentice ship in the North of Scotland Bank, and served his full term of three years in that institution, and through his closeness and persevering attention to business, raised himself from position to position until he was appointed accountant, and was sta tioned at the town of Elgin, Scotland, where he remained until 1848. In that year he left Scotland and came to Canada to which country the majority of the family had already gone and settled in Hamilton After arriving in Hamilton he entered into the employ of the famous A. & T. C. Kerr, wholesale dry goods, as head book-keeper He remained with this firm for two years then left and bought out the retail dry goods business of A. & G. McKeand, in part nership with Thomas Balmer. After remaining for a short time in business, he dissolved partnership and went to New York, United States of America. After spending some time in New York, he was appointed to a branch of the business of Messrs. Daniel, Elgin & Co., Mobile, Alabama. In 1853 he came back to Canada, ke took lackenzie & Co., of London and Hamilton, office and assisted his brother, John I. Mackenzie, ne Min n winding up the retail business in Introduction of which John I. Mackenzie was prorietor. After closing up this business, in part of 857, he entered the employ as financial nanager of the great contractor, Samuel C. ased of Ridley, of Hamilton, and assisted in the ament milding of the St. Catharines viaduct, the ate the allasting of the Great Western Railway, en Mr. he finishing of the Sarnia branch and the ld no vestern, forty-eight miles of the Detroit nd Milwaukee Railway, with the wharves mousl nd elevators at Detroit and Grand Haven. an ezhe eventful non-payment of the money adgood anced to the Great Western Railway by the ovocacommercial Bank was the cause of the ownfall of the latter institution. In the Torneantime Mr. Mackenzie went to Eng-, Scot nd and joined Mr. Ridley, who had prewere iously gone there and secured contracts Innes h Hampshire, and also the main drainage n the city of London, Mr. Mackenzie aptan eing manager of the partnership of Messrs. idley & Webster. He remained there ame o a can ntil 1871, when he returned to Canada; High nt before his return he also managed m the he construction of the celebrated Thames ill his mbankment, one of the most wonderful nd sir orks in the world. The first division . He in the this work cost £530,000 sterling. He so travelled through the principal parts a tho the Continent, and was in England at ol he he time of the Franco-Prussian war. ntice fter his return he entered into partner-, and that hip with the late John Shedden (pronetor of the Shedden Transfer & Cartв and g Co.), and was engaged in the building aisei the Northern Division of the Toronto il he rey & Bruce R. R. to Owen Sound, and staain the division from Mount Forest to land, tha: nada, farriston. In 1873, during the building of is road, Mr. Shedden was killed on the ipissing R. R. However, the partnership mily ill existed under the original name of lton lackenzie & Co. In 1874 the Toronto, into rey & Bruce Company failed to pay the Σeπ, lvances made by Mackenzie & Co., and e per ev became insolvent. By the insolvency ears, oods r. Mackenzie lost his entire forture. He rrendered everything he owned to his late bartrtner (Mr. Shedden's) executors, on conretion that he would be released from furer liability, which offer the executors cepted. Instead of being discouraged by fter. e great loss, Mr. Mackenzie at once began Was accumulate another fortune, and after fferent ventures was appointed manager the Toronto House Building Association,

terwards changed to the name of the Land Security Co., which position he now holds, and as a proof of his push and energy, we can look upon one instance, viz.:-Mr. Mackenzie was the main mover in the purchase of the Gwynne estate and the O'Hara estate on which the town of Parkdale now stands, and his (Mr. Mackenzie's) company were the builders of the principal part of the place, and through his exertions the town has risen from a mere hamlet to one of the finest suburbs of the city of Tor-Mr. Mackenzie, both outside and in public meetings, has been called and addressed as the Father of Parkdale. regard to the company, Mr. Mackenzie has, through his indomitable and persistent pluck and push, raised it to the position of being the foremost in Toronto, and their suite of offices are really a credit to this city. The building in which they are belongs to the company, and is known as the Victoria Chambers, situated on Victoria St. In 1885 the residents of St. Mark's Ward, Toronto, elected him alderman to represent them in the City Council. He was married in 1855 to Euphemia Grieve, daughter of the late Geo. Grieve, coal owner, of Aberdour. Fifeshire, Scotland, and at her present age she is a tall, stately dignified lady, and of a kindly disposition, besides very affectionate and motherly. By this marriage there are seven children—three boys and four girls. Mr. George G. Mackenzie, the eldest son, being head book-keeper in the Land Security Co. He is a shrewd business man. The second son, Mr. Samuel R. Mackenzie, studied the drug business, and is now the manager of the largest drug establishment in Montreal, and one of the handsomest places in Canada, known as the Medical Hall, Windsor Hotel, Montreal. A brother of the subject of the sketch, Mr. Campbell Mackenzie, is now the managing partner of the Shedden Co., Toronto, Mr. Mackenzie has a shrewd, keen look, and is held in high esteem by all with whom he comes in contact, and outside of business he is sociable and kindly, as all those who visit his fine residence, known as Ardchronie, on Delaware ave., can testify. He belongs to the Freemasons; in religion is a Presbyterian, and in politics a Liberal.

Mackintosh, Charles Herbert, M.P. for City of Ottawa, was born at London, Ontario, in 1843. He is a son of Captain William Mackintosh, of Wicklow, Ireland, who came to Canada as an attaché of the Ordnance Branch of the British army. He was subsequently county engineer of Middlesex, Ontario. It may be said that our subject is related to the celebrated Sir James Mackintosh, the essayist and historian. Mr. C. Mackintosh received his education at the Galt Grammar school and at the Academy of Caradoc. Having completed his education, young Mackintosh began a study of the law, but he never took sympathetically to this calling. He always had a strong inclination for literary pursuits; and his boyish brilliancy was the subject of much comment and admiration. When he was seventeen years old he wrote "Welcome to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales." and this contribution was deservedly popular. It was presented during the visit of His Royal Highness to Upper Canada. Two years later he wrote "Hurry-Graphs." which appeared in the London Free Press under the pen name of "Fat Contributor." At this period Mr. Mackintosh wrote with an extremely facile and sparkling pen, and his work, whether signed or under nom de plume, attracted comment and commendation. After a little he became city editor of the Free Press, and gave up studying law. In 1864 he became chief editor of the Hamilton Times, and the year following began the publication of the Strathroy Dispatch. This paper he continued to publish until 1874, when he sold it out. In 1871 he wrote "The Chicago Fire," which had a large sale; and in 1873 he produced "The Financial Panic in the United States and its Causes." In 1873 Mr. Mackintosh was managing editor of the Chicago Journal of Commerce, having taken that position in order to study the question of protection. The following year he took up his abode in Ottawa, and became editor of the Ottawa Daily Citizen. From 1877 to 1882 he edited the "Parliamentry Companion." During the fall of 1882 he visited England, where some months were spent in forwarding the interests of the railway enterprises in which he is interested; but Mr. Mackintosh never permitted his time or vitality to be absorbed by one undertaking. Being of unusual mental alertness, he is careful to keep divers irons in the fire at once. During the years 1876 and 1877 he published a number of pamphlets containing speeches, etc., on the question of protection, which at this time was engrossing public attention. In 1875 he was awarded the gold and silver medal for a prose poem at the Cornwall Centennial. Looking backward a little we find him in 1871 founding the Parkhill Gazette; and two years later he is sitting in the Town Council of Strathroy. In 1879 he resolved hat he would capture the civic honours of Ottawa. He did not deceive himself. He was elected mayor, and re-elected for the tw_0 In 1881 he was unseated succeeding years. on a technicality, but elected again. In 1879 he was chairman of the Dominion Exhibition, and in 1881 president of the Agricultural Association. He is at present president of the Ottawa Colonization Railway, and Ottawa and Gatineau Valley Railway, and of the Citizen Printing and Publish. ing Company. In 1871 he sought election to the Legislative Assembly of Ontario, for North Middlesex, but was unsuc-At the last general election (1882) cessful. he was chosen as the parliamentary representative for the City of Ottawa, his colleague being Mr Tasse. Mr. Mackintosh married on April 7th, 1868, Miss Gertrude, daughter of T. Cooke, Esq., J.P., of Strathroy. Our subject, it may be said, without claiming for him the empty title that 80 many a man cheaply gets, is emphatically what he is styled, "The Workingman's Champion." He is popular, however, with every section of the community, and his popularity is derived from his affable, hearty and genial manner, and the genuine zeal that he brings into the cause which he advocates. He is a sound Conservative, and everybody knows that Mr. Mackintosh has opinions of his own, and that he has both the courage and the ability to express them stood

Sessio

ber of retire

free, a

in bus

occuri

It is v

men o follow

till for the sh

Valiar

manuf

outsid to be f

was el

ing St.

appoin

tee, a new n

that ti

to Jar

Mr. T

enterir

man of

and 18

of Wo

scheme city, w

liberali

made t

poses,

to cons

was in

manipu

Mr. Tu

measur

erection

ion bu

street a

conditio

nedy t

n pron

he effe

proved

espects us who

ponsib

or Wes

Robinso

Ontario,

ue, it is as the

peaker,

astic of ares le

any pe

npy.

Turner, John, the subject of this sketch, was born on November 28th, 1828, at Eynsford, Kent, England. His father, William Turner, was a paper manufacture of that town, and died in 1844. John Turner was educated at a private school in When his studies were terminated he was apprenticed in a wholesale grocery business at Kingscliffe, Northampton. 6 the death of his father he was thrown upon his own resources, and has won his own way in the world. After the expiry of his apprenticeship, he managed a branch estab lishment near Peterborough, and shortly afterwards, having married young, decided that a new country was the best field for his ambition. So he came to Canada in 1855, and settled in Toronto on May 25th, 1855, a perfect stranger. He took a position in a little while with the late John McGee, Phoenix Foundry, when he remained for two years; after which he received a position as Assistant Chanberlain, succeeding Mr. John Boyd, and occupied this situation for seven years. He then joined in partnership in shoe mant facturing, the firm of Sessions, Carpenters Co. On Mr. Carpenter retiring, the fin stood as Sessions, Turner & Co. On Mr. Session's death, Mr. Cooper became a member of the firm. Mr. Turner subsequently retired and entered business with Mr. Tolfree, as John Turner & Co. He remained in business till the crisis in the shoe trade occurred, during which the firm went under. It is worthy of remark that 70% of the shoe men of both the United States and Canada followed suit. He remained out of business till four years ago, when he again resumed the shoe trade, the firm being styled Turner, Valiant & Co. This firm has the credit of manufacturing the finest boots and shoes outside of Boston and New York that are to be found for sale. In 1871, Mr. Turner was elected to the City Council, representing St. George's Ward, and was immediately appointed chairman of the Finance Committee, a circumstance quite exceptional for a new member. Mr. Turner served since that time, with one or two brief intervals, to January, 1885. It may be noted that Mr. Turner has, on every occasion since entering the Council, been elected Chairman of Finance Committee. For 1882-83 and 1884 he was Chairman of the Board In 1871, he introduced a scheme for consolidating the debt of the city, which was successful. Owing to the liberality with which the following Council made their appropriations for general purposes, it was necessary for Mr. T. to seek to consolidate the debt a second time. This was in 1877; and by wise and judicious manipulation he was again successful. Mr. Turner is due, in an exceedingly large measure, the success that has attended the rection of the present Industrial Exhibition buildings. In 1872 he found that the treet arrangements were in a deplorable condition, and at once set to work to renedy the evil. He took a very active part n promoting the local improvement bill, he effect of which is noticeable in the improved condition of the streets, both as espects cleanliness and paving. During his whole career he has never shirked reponsibility. In 1875 he contested the seat or West Toronto, in the Reform interest, nd was defeated by 350 of a majority. Mr. cobinson, the present Lieut.-Governor of ntario, was his opponent, and the defeat was ne, it is said, to the apathy of his party. He as the name of being a fluent and ready peaker, and can be bitterly severe and sarastic on occasion. As he grows older he ares less for the various positions which any people are anxious that he should ocupy. He was for many years a member of

He

 $\mathbf{t}\mathbf{w}_0$ ated

1879 iibi-

cul-

resi-

vay,

vay,

lish-

elec-

On-

suc-

882 pre-

col

tosh

ude.

ath-

hout

it 80

ally.

an's

with

his

ıble,

niné

h he

and

ı has both nem.

this

828,

her.

urer

John

ol. in

ated

cery

 $0_{\rm n}$

apon

Way

ap-i stab

ortly

ided

l for

la in

May

took

late

here

hich

ham-

and

He

and

er å

fire

the Congregational body, and is now a member of the Episcopal Church. For 20 years he strove for the Reform party, but on the introduction of the National Policy, as a manufacturer, with large interests at stake, he gave his adherence to the scheme. There is little doubt, if he desired it, but he could be returned in the next general election in the Conservative interests. He was married first in 1851, in England, but his wife died six months after marriage. He married a second time in 1854, and in 1858 his second wife died. In 1878 he again married, this time the widow of the late Dr. Hampton, who was a daughter of John Taylor, of Taylor Bru she also died in 1881. By the latter wife L. has two children. Mr. Turner is in independent circumstances, is generous in his dealings, and affable and kindly in private and public life.

Blake, the Honourable William Hume, was one of the Blakes of Cashelgrove, in the County of Galway. Dominick Edward Blake, one of the family representatives about the middle of the last century, married the Hon. Miss Netterville, daughter of Lord Netterville, of Drogheda. When she died he took for his second wife a daughter of Sir Joseph Hoare, Baronet, of Annabella, in the County of York. William Hume Blake was the son of Rev. D. E. Blake, by his wife, Miss Hume. He was born at the rectory, in Kiltegan, Wicklow, on the 10th of March, 1809. After graduating from Trinity College, Dublin, he began a study of surgery, under Surgeon-General Sir Philip Crampton. But surgery, with its dissecting-room jokes and frequent brutalities was not to his taste, so he abandoned the calling and began the study of theology, with a view to entering the church, as his elder brother, Dominick Edward, had done. Before his studies were completed, however, he married his cousin, Miss Catharine Hume, and a little later, in company with his elder brother, he emigrated to Canada. The reason given for the emigration of these two brothers are that at home their prospects were not brilliant; whereas strong pressure had been brought to bear upon them to come to Canada by Sir John Colborne, Lieutenant-Governor of Upper Canada. The elder brother was appointed to a rectory in the township of Adelaide; the younger purchased a farm near by, at a place now called Sydenham river, near Mount Hope, in Middlesex. One writer says: "With whatever romantic ideas of the delights of such a life Hume Blake had determined on making Canada his home, they were soon dispelled by the rough experiences of reality. The settler in the remotest sections of Ontario to-day has no conceptions of the struggles and hardships that fell to the lot of men who, accustomed to all the refinements of life, found themselves cut off from all traces of civilization in a land, since settled and cultivated, but then so wild that between what are now populous cities there existed only an Indian trail through the Mr. Blake was not a man to be easily discouraged, but soon found that his talents were being wasted in the wilderness. In after years he was fond of telling of the rude experiences of life in the bush, and among other incidents, how that he had, on one occasion, walked to the blacksmith's shop, before mentioned, to obtain a supply of harrow-pins, and finding them too heavy to carry, had fastoned them to a chain which he put round his neck and so dragged them home through the woods." While the eldest son, Dominick Edward, was a baby, the family moved to Toronto, then called York, where Mr. Hume Blake, who had tried surgery and divinity in turn, now resolved to enter the profession of the law. He accordingly commenced his studies in the office of the late Mr. Washburn. When the rebellion broke out in 1837, he was appointed paymaster at Toronto; the following year he was called to the bar of Upper Canada. The men he had there for rivals, and among whom and against whom he had to win his way, were Mr. Draper, Henry J. Boulton, R. B. Sullivan, Mr. Hagarty, Robert Baldwin, John Hillyard Cameron. "Mr. Blake," says another writer, "soon proved his ability to hold his own against all comers. He enjoyed some advantages which stood him in good stead, both while he was fighting his way and afterwards. His tall, handsome person and fine open face, his felicitous language and bold manly utterance gained him at once the full attention of both court and jury; and his vigorous grasp of the whole case under discussion, his acute, logical dissection of the evidence, and the thorough earnestness with which he always threw himself into his client's case swept everything before them." He was perhaps the most successful lawyer of that day at the bar. Above all was he overwhelming before juries. There are hundreds yet living in Toronto, who remember that when the insurance companies prosecuted Webb for arson and contended that rubber was incombustible, and would not communicate fire, how Mr. Blake, in the open court, took a pile of rubber and burnt it before judges and jury, thus undermining the case of the plaintiff, and obtaining the acquittal of the prisoner, Webb. There was strong evidence against Webb, however, and there was, perhaps, nobody who was not morally convinced that he was the incendiary; so that no one could rejoice at his escape from justice, even while they did pay homage to the ability of his liberator. In 1844 Mr. Blake presented himself as the candidate for the Second Riding of York, and now the County of Peel, but was defeated by his Tory opponent, Mr. George Duggan. During his absence in England, in 1847, he was chosen by a large majority for East York, and now the County of Ontario. The general election in this year decided to a great extent the fate of iron-clad toryism in Canada and its supporters being swept from power, the Baldwin-Lafontaine Ministry took the reins. In this administration Mr. Blake became Solicitor-General, and when he arose to speak in the House it was felt that in genuine eloquence, regarding all that that term implies-passion, pathos, humour, sarcasm, irony, scorn, force—he was without a peer on the floor of the Legislature. The Court of Chancery, which had for so many years been a reproach to the judiciary, was reformed by the Baldwin-Lafontaine Government; and to the Vice-Chancellorship Mr. Blake was appointed in November, 1849. He died in Toronto on the 17th of November, 1870. It need hardly be said that he was the father of the present Reform leader.

hold

tion

arriva gal s

clerk

disgu

often

"cor

schoo

law ir

He f

of M

Uppe

liame

the l hims

able

been

and v

Cana

oppor

viole:

the (

oppo

it m speal

more

Hous

so th in th

contr

of th

ture

opini

place

cond

ровве

ative

the gener

Cour

quire

conse

Russ

alter

retir

the o

of tl

oppo

Uppe

cordi

tion

The

Dasse

ques

in th

Mac

a pe

Cana

face

Macdonald, Hon. John Sandfield, Cornwall, was descended from 3 Highland family of much antiquity and respectability, and was born at St. Raphael, on December 12th, 1812. His father, Alexander Macdonald, is said to have swallowed Solomon's maxim of "spare the rod and spoil the child," and the discipline to which he subjected young John Sandfield was of such a nature that the high-spirited lad frequently ran away from home. The first of these excursions took place before he had completed his eleventh year. He was pursued by his irate parent, and conveyed back again to his home; but he soon made a second attempt, with a similar result. His second capture was effected at Cornwall, just when he was in the very act of negotiating with an Indian to convey him across the river in a canoe. His entire capital at this time was a quarter of a dollar, and the noble savage was disposed to hold out for double that sum. The negotiation was abruptly put an end to by the arrival of the father in pursuit of his prodigal son. Subsequently the lad became a clerk in a store at Cornwall, but became disgusted with an occupation which he so often heard characterised as that of a "counter-hopper." He, therefore, set his face in another direction. He went to school at Cornwall, and afterwards studied law in the office of Mr. McLean, of Cornwall. He finished his legal studies in the office of Mr. Draper, afterwards chief justice of Upper Canada. He was first elected to Parliament after the union in March, 1841. In the last Parliament there were two beside himself, Sir Henry Smith and the Honourable W. H. Merritt. Lord Sydenham had been sent out to carry the union into effect; and with that view too many of the Lower Canada elections, where the people had been opposed to the union, were carried by violence. Mr. Cuvillier, the nominee of the Government, was elected speaker, in opposition to Sir Allan MacNab. And here it may be remarked that, in Canada, a speaker seldom retains his seat, as such, more than one parliament. Every new House of Assembly elects its own speaker; so that there are often several ex-speakers in the prime of political life, who return, contrary to the English practice, to the floor of the house. The government was a mixture of politicians of different shades of The legislature was not free from opinion. placemen; and the government was not conducted by heads of departments who possessed the confidence of the representatives of the people. Neither the head of the crown lands office nor the surveyorgeneral was a member of the Executive Council. Family-compact Toryism had acquired a subdued tone in official circles, in consequence of the despatch of Lord John Russell, sent out in 1839, in which the alternative of supporting the government or retiring from their places was held out to the officials who had seats in either branches of the legislature. Mr. Macdonald was opposed to the government; but he was an Upper Canadian, and was far from being cordial with Sir Allan MacNab, the opposition leader for that section of the country. The rebellion, of which the effects had not passed away, had reduced everything to a question of loyalty and allegiance, especially in that part of central Canada which Mr. Macdonald represented. His position was a peculiar one. He voted with the Upper Canada Conservatives and the Lower Can-

the.

urnt

ning

g the

here!

how-

 \mathbf{w} ho

the

ce at

y did

ator.

s the

Tork,

s de-

eorge

land.

ority Onır de-

-clad

s ben-La-

this

citor-

n the

ence.

-pas-

corn,

floor

cery,

a re-

y the

id to

ıs ap-

ed in 1870.

ather

and-

ու չ

ıd reel, on exan-

owed

and

e to dfield

irited

The

efore

He

con-

8001

milar

ed at

y act

7 him

entire ı dol-

ed to

ada French leaders against the government; but he never attended a Tory "caucus," as party meetings are called in America, much less had he any intimate alliance with the Lower Canada opposition. In 1848, 1852 and 1854, Mr. Macdonald was elected without a contest in his old constituency of Glengarry. In the latter part of the year 1849, he was appointed solicitor-general under the Lafontaine-Baldwin administration, which office he held till the breaking up of that government in the autumn of 1851. He was elected speaker in Quebec in 1852, and held that position till the dissolution in 1854. In 1858 he was attorney-general in the Brown-Dorion government. In 1857 he was elected for Cornwall, his brother, D. A. Macdonald, succeeding him in the county, and this year was again returned for that town. He was one of the few Upper Canadians who was persistently opposed to representation by population; and although a Roman Catholic, he was never an advocate of separate schools. His opposition to them brought down upon him the censure of the priests; but although they from the altar recommended the electors to vote for Protestant candidates in preference to him, that recommendation was ever disregarded by the Highlanders. In 1862, on the defeat of the Cartier-Macdonald administration, Mr. Macdonald was called upon to form a government, which he succeeded in doing, Mr. Sicotte being the leader of the Lower Canada section of the Cabinet. In 1864, having resigned the seals, after the completion of Confederation, to which he was, by the way, strenuously opposed, he was called upon to form an administration in Ontario. In 1871 he retired from public life, and died the following year at his residence, Ivy Hall, in Cornwall. In 1840 he married a lady from Louisiana, the daughter of a United States Senator, who owned a large plantation of negroes, and who was shot dead in a duel in 1843.

Maughan, John, Toronto, Insurance Agent, the oldest in the service in Torento, was born at Markham, Ontario, on the 19th October, 1835. He is the son of John Maughan, of the Commissariat Department of Her Majesty's service, and Euphemia Stein, his wife, who was born in Dublin, and educated in Edinburgh, of Blackhall, Clackmananshire, Scotland, and grandson of Robert Maughan, Inspector-General of Taxes and Deputy Controller of Excise for Scotland. He was educated at private academies, and at Knox College, and left off studies in 1851, and commenced the study of law in the offices of Mr. Mowat and Mr. Helliwell, barristers, etc. He remained only one year with the legal firms named, and joined the Western Assurance Co. in 1852. He remained with this company for some years, and rose to the position of assistantmanager; and in 1871 was appointed manager of the Isolated Risk Insurance Co. He left that company to join the Royal Insurance Company in 1880, and is now its chief agent in Toronto. He joined the 4th Battalion, Militia, in 1856, (under Col. R. L. Denison), as ensign, and holds commission as captain from Sir Edmund Head, late Governor of Canada. He passed through the Military School, and holds a certificate dated 28th Sept., 1866. He is a member of the Church of England. He married in 1863 Miss M. E. Parks, a daughter of C. G. Parks, Esq., of Waterdown, Ontario, formerly of Belfast, Ireland, by which lady he has five sons and two daughters. was elected school trustee in 1880 and 1881, and alderman for St. George's Ward in 1882, and re-elected in 1883, 1884 and 1885. Mr. Maughan's personal appearance is in itself a guarantee for the integrity of his character. He is highly respected by all with whom he comes in contact, and has that which King Macbeth could not have, "love, honour, and troops of friends." Mr. Maughan is very fond of outdoor sports, and is quite an adept at cricket, boating, shooting, etc.

McKellar, Archibald, Sheriff of the County Wentworth, was born in Glenshire, three miles from Inverary Castle, Argyleshire, on the 3rd February, 1816. Glenshire belonged to the estate of the Duke of Argyle. Peter McKellar and Flora Mac-Nab, were our subject's parents, and they occupied a farm on the estate of the Duke of Argyle, but seeing that there was little or no prospect of advancement, or of acquiring land of their own in Scotland, they emigrated to Canada in 1817, accompanied by Mrs. McKellar's father and mother, brother and two sisters. After spending nine weeks in a sailing vessel going from Greenock to Quebec, they travelled in bateaux and schooners to Queenston, then the western limit of civilization, where the women and one infant (the subject of this sketch) stayed while the men went westward, on foot, through the forest, to select a good location for their little settlement. After they had nearly reached the Rondeau on Lake Erie, they decided to return to the township of Aldborough, the western extremity of what was then known as the London district, but now the western limit of the County of Elgin -the site of the City of London not being then surveyed. The inducements to return to Aldborough were, first, that there was. already a small Highland settlement there; secondly, the country was hilly, and more like their native land than that further west; and thirdly, the land belonged to the Government, and had been placed in Col. Talbot's hand for location. Having selected their lots, they returned to Queenston, and in ox teams, and such other conveyances that could be obtained, they took their families and belongings, and arrived at their new homes in time to erect shanties before the winter set Here the McKellar family remained until 1837, when they removed to a farm which they purchased in the township of Raleigh, County Kent, three miles west of the town of Chatham, on the banks of the River Thames. This farm is still the homestead of the family. For the first ten or twelve years of his life our subject attended the public schools in the township of Aldborough, where his parents first settled in He then was sent to Geneva, N. Y., 1817. and finally to the High School in Niagara, taught by Dr. Whitelaw. On leaving school he went to the farm, and settled there with his parents. Though he determined to make farming his business, he also engaged in lumbering. In 1857 he entered Parliament as member for Kent, having been a member of the County Council for fifteen years previously. In 1841, at the first election for Parliament after he became of age, he supported and canvassed for the Tory candidate, Mr. Joseph Woods, in opposition to Mr. Harrison (afterwards County Judge of York). Mr. Woods was returned. During this election he heard for the first time a thorough political speech by Mr. Harrison, and was greatly impressed by his arguments in favour of municipal institutions, especially those relating to voting in Provincial elections in each township, instead of groups of townships, as was the custom at this time, the polls being kept open for a week, causing some of the electors great inconvenience and loss of time and money. In the counties of Kent and Lambton, then united, many of the electors had to travel distances varying from ten to ninety miles before they could record their votes. Immediately after Mr. Harrison's defeat in Kent, he was elected for Kingston, and was appointed Provincial Secretary. Mr. McKellar, though prosecuting farming at the time, read the leading papers of the day, he being a subscriber for both the Colonist and Exam-

par

par

me

tha

pro

ton

gar

eve

hor

hin

had frie

han

pro

tha

tow

mea

Mr.

mur

wou

atio

repl

mun

mon

cour

peop

supp

liam

freq

liam

vote

hum

clair had

ofter

vote

forgi

said siona

other

him

vote.

Drain

of re

acres

in h

cheap

Comr

of Ag

priate

deber

thus

than

same

highe

the ba

which

It was

iner, the first the leading organ of the Tory Elgin party, and the latter that of the Liberal being party. During the next session of Parliaeturn ment he carefully read the debates and found e was here ; that Mr. Harrison was sincere in all he had promised the electors of Kent and Lambmore ton on the hustings at Chatham, with rewest: gard to municipal and elective reforms. He verntold his Tory friends that if Mr. Harrison lbot's ever became a candidate for parliamentary their honours again in Kent, he would support in ox him as vigorously and determinedly as he had opposed him in the last election. These could d befriends, with turned-up eyes and uplifted hands, asked in holy horror, "Why do you propose to do so?" Mr. McKellar replied nes in er set ained that, "if he gave us the municipal law, a farm township election law, and other minor nip of measures of reform, he would vote for Mr. Harrison." They then declared that est of f the municipal institutions were republican, and omewould, if enacted, certainly lead to annexen or ation to the United States. Mr. McKellar's \mathbf{nded} reply was that he did not care whether Aldmunicipal institutions were republican or ed in monarchical, so long as they benefited the N. Y., country and bettered the condition of the gara, people (as he believed they would), he would chool support them, and did so afterwards in Parwith liament and out of it. Mr. McKellar was d to frequently twitted afterwards, when in Parliament, that he had been a Tory and had gaged arliavoted once on that ticket. He always goodbeen humoredly admitted the impeachment, but fteen claimed that he, like a great many others, first had done it in ignorance, and since then he me of often shuddered at the thought that that r the oppovote might be the sin for which there is no forgiveness; and in view of that belief heunty said that he had done a good deal of misrned. sionary work with the view of bringing e first others out of the darkness that shrouded Mr. him when he gave that unfortenate Tory y his vote. Mr. McKellar was the author of the stitu-Drainage Law, which has been the means of reclaiming hundreds of thousands of ng in stead acres of waste land; and to aid the public stom in having this important work done as for a cheaply as possible, he had (while he was t inney. Commissioner of Public Works and Minister of Agriculture) the sum of $400,000 approthen priated to purchase drainage municipal ravel debentures bearing interest at five per cent., miles thus giving the public money at a lower rate nme-Šent. than they could get it elsewhere, and at the ointsame time securing to the Government the highest rate of interest obtainable from ellar, the banks and municipal debentures, than read which there is no better or safer security.

It was during Mr. McKellar's term of office, ng a

eam-

as Minister of Agriculture, that the Ontario College of Agriculture, which is now proving of so much benefit to the country, was established at Guelph. He carried through Parliament the charter for the Southern Railway, extending from the Niagara to the Detroit and St. Clair rivers, and was chiefly instrumental in raising upwards of $300,000 by way of bonuses in the southern counties to aid in its construction. He also carried the charter for the Erie and Huron Railway Company. This road extends from the Rondeau harbor on Lake Erie and runs north through the towns of Blenheim, Chatham, Dresden, and Wallaceburg, then to the St. Clair river to Sarnia, a distance of about seventy miles. Forty miles of this road has been operated during the past two years, and the balance of the line will be completed by the end of 1885. In 1854, Mr. McKellar was urged to consent to be nominated for Kent on the Reform ticket, and did so, but under great disadvantages, it being at a late period of the canvass, and he was defeated; but in 1857 he again came forward, and was elected by a large majority. He represented Kent for ten years, and at Confederation he was elected for the Provincial House, to represent Bothwell, which he continued to do until 1875. Then he accepted the shrievalty of Wentworth. During the last four years of his political life he was a member of the Government, both in the Blake and Mowat administrations, as Commissioner of Public Works and Minister of Agriculture and Emigration, and afterwards as Provincial Secretary. He married, in 1836, Lucy MacNab, his second cousin, who died February, 1857, leaving nine children, four sons and five daughters, of whom three sons and three daughters re-The eldest son, Peter D. McKellar, is registrar of Kent, and the two younger are on the old farm. The daughters are all married. In 1874 he married again Catherine Mary Mercer, widow of Lawrence Wm. Mercer, daughter of Dr. Grant Powell of Toronto, and grand-daughter of Chief Justice Powell, the second Chief Justice of Upper Canada. Mr. McKellar is a strictly temperate man, never having used spirits, beer or tobacco. He professes Presbyterianism, and is a staunch Reformer in politics. He has travelled through Great Britain and the United States. Altogether his career has been marked by energy, uprightness, ability, and success.

King, William Frederick, B.A., D.L.S., D.T.S., Ottawa, Inspector of Surveys for the Dominion of Canada, was born at Stowmarket, County of Suffolk, England, on the 19th February, 1854. His father, William King, and his mother, Ellen, nee Archer, came to Canada when our subject was in his eighth year, and settled at Port Hope, Ontario. His early educational training consisted at the first of private tuition, and he was afterwards sent to the Port Hope Grammar School, preparatory to entering upon his university course. He was always remarkable for diligence as a school boy, and without much seeming effort mastered his work. In 1869 he matriculated at the University of Toronto, and in 1875 graduated The tastes of B.A. from that institution. our subject, while in his undergraduate course, seem to have been for natural sciences and mathematics, and when graduating he was gold medalist in mathematics. Having obtained his degree, he turned his attention to the study of land and topographical surveying, and in due course became a regular Dominion land surveyor and a Dominion topographical surveyor. An active, energetic, clear-headed surveyor, as he always upon proper opportunity revealed himself to be, he was seldom found lacking employment. He served on the international boundary between the Lake of the Woods and the Rocky Mountains from 1872 to 1874. Since the last mentioned date he has been engaged in Dominion land surveys in various parts of Manitoba and the North-West ter-On the 13th June, 1881, Mr. King ritories. was appointed to the position of inspector of surveys. His long professional experience has necessitated wide travel, and there is hardly a place of note in our wide North-West that he has not visited. A position like that to which our subject was appointed required more equipment than is necessarily conferred by a mere professional knowledge of land and topographical surveying. Wide knowledge with respect to the quality and conditions of locality, and sound judgment, are among some of the many qualifications needed. These, it is said, Mr. King all brought to his position, and he is regarded as a very efficient officer indeed. He married, on December 21, 1881, Augusta Florence, daughter of John A. Snow, of Ottawa. The fruit of this union is one son, born on the 4th March, 1884. Before the time of our subject's marriage he resided at Port Hope, but he has since taken up his abode at Ot-Mr. King is an adherent of the Episcopal faith.

Macdonald, Right Hon. Sir John Alexander, K.C.M.G., D.C.L., LL.D., was born in Glazgow on the 11th day of Jan-

He was the second son of Mr. uary, 1815. Hugh Macdonald, who lived originally in the parish of Dornoch, Sutherlandshire, but. who early in life removed to Canada. When the emigration movement began in 1820, Mr. Hugh Macdonald and his family (John Alexander being then in his fifth year) took passage for British North America. Mc. Macdonald settled near Kingston, then the most important town in Upper Canada; and after residing here for upwards of four years, the family moved to Quinté Bay, leaving John Alexander, then in his tenth year, at The lad was placed at school in Kingston. the Royal Grammar School, under the tuition of Dr. Wilson, a fellow of Oxford University, and subsequently under that of Mr. George Baxter. After he had entered his sixteenth year, his father took him away from school and articled him in the office of George Mackenzie, where he applied himself When he diligently to study of the law. began to practise law, there were heard the first mutterings of the storm soon to break over the country; and the year following, numbers of disaffected persons, in Lower Canada under Papineau, and in Upper Canada under William Lyon Mackenzie, rushed blindly to arms. A body of hunters, as the invaders were called, under the command of a Pole named Von Shoultz, crossed from the American side over to Prescott, but Shoultz was captured, and his followers killed and dispersed. Courts-martial were established at London and Kingston, and at the latter city Shoultz and his accomplices were tried for their crimes. Young Macdonald was counsel for the unfortunate Pole, and by the skill and force of his address attracted wide notice. In 1844, during the most intolerable portion of Lord Metcalfe's rule, Mr Macdonald was elected for Kingston, de feating Mr. Manahan. On first entering the legislature, he sat unmoved at his desk while the frays for which that period of parliamentary history was remarkable went on, "looking," says a gentleman who remembers having seen him there, "half careless and half contemptuous. Sometimes in the thick of the mêlée he was busy in and out of the library. I scarce ever remember seeing him then about the House that he was not search ing up some case either then impending or to come up at a later date. He was for a great part of his time, too, buried in a study of constitutional history." His first speech was in reply to the Hon. Robert Baldwin, and though it was daring, it was based on a wide foundation of common sense. During the last days of toryism, Mr. Draper, the

Attor

ject a

Maco

but a

agem

time

mony

Baldy

ant; a

that

and l ances

Cabin

West,

MacN

popul

was fo

was (

under

Gener

dissolv

try, h old m

a shor

gated

donald

Canad

vering

the L

the per

tical ev

objects

wide gr

though

donald

chasm.

fruit, a state of

donald

admini

been re

(John 2

tenure

and eve

of those out of t

of parti

federati

George

McDou;

were m

John A.

was he and con

province

of his ze

the first and had

His care

memorie

Attorney-Gereral, came one day to our subject and said, "Your turn has come at last, Macdonald." He became Receiver General, but after a brief period assumed the management of Crown Lands, where, in a short time he reduced much confusion to harmony. But in 1849 the reformers under Mr. Baldwin and M. Lafontaine were triumphant; and during the riot and incendiarism of that year we see Mr. Macdonald's figure and hear some of his impassioned utterances. On the downfall of the Hincks-Morin became Attorney-General-Cabinet, he West, under the leadership of Sir Allan MacNab, but this ministry becoming un-popular, both in and out of Parliament, it was forced to resign, and Mr. George Brown was called upon to form a Cabinet. He undertook the task, but the Governor-General having refused him permission to dissolve the House and appeal to the country, he, after a few days, resigned, and the old ministry was recalled to power. After a short time, however, Sir Allan was relegated to the sick-room, and John A. Macdonald appeared as leader of the Upper Canada section, that ambitious and persevering spirit, George E. Cartier, leading the Lower Canada division. Then came the period of transition, during which political events seem to pass before the eye like objects in the kaleidoscope. There was a wide gulf between Upper and Lower Canada, though for a lengthy period John A. Macdonald in his own personality spanned the chasm. The seeds of discontent had borne fruit, and public sentiment was in a feverish state of unrest. Then came Sandfield Macdonald upon the scene as premier, but his administration crumbled away as if it had been reared on sand. The Taché-Macdonald (John A.) administration followed, but its tenure of life hung by the slimmest thread, and eventually it survived only by the mercy of those who were really its enemies. It was out of this dead-lock, or the "fatal balance of parties," that grew the impulse for a confederation. A coalition was formed, of which George Brown, Oliver Mowat, and William McDougall, on the part of the reformers, were members. Thereafter the figure of John A. Macdonald stands boldly out. It was he who led and shaped the movement, and conducted negotiations in the maritime provinces and in England; and in recognition of his zeal and service he was called to lead the first administration under confederation, and had a knighthood conferred upon him. His career since that date is fresh in the memories of most who watch public events. Though achieving many brilliant successes, once he found disaster, when in 1873 the Legislature declared him guilty of corrupt collusion with Sir Hugh Allan in a transaction relating to the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway; but whether this most successful and able statesman was guilty of the charge laid at his door or not, the people forgave him, and in 1878, with loud acclamation, took him back again to power. Sir John has always stood in high regard in the mother country, and in 1879 was sworn in a member of Her Majesty's Privy Council. In 1865, he received the honorary degree of D.C.L. from Oxford University; he also received the degree of LL.D. from Queen's University, Kingston; and is likewise a D.C.L. of the University of Trinity College, Toronto. Although he is now well advanced in years, he does not seem to have lost any of his old vigour; friends press more closely around him, and the circle of his admirers seems to grow larger every day. Since 1878 he has been instrumental in accomplishing several important acts of legislation, notable among those being the project, now nearly completed, of building the Canada Pacific Railway. Sir John resides at Stadacona Hall, Ottawa, and his social responsibilities are shared with admirable grace and success by his talented and exceedingly popular wife, Lady Macdonald. The following are some of the measures of legislation accomplished by the right hon, gentleman since his entry into public life: The secularization of the clergy reserves; the extension of the municipal system; reorganization of the militia; the reorganization of the civil service; the ratification of the Washington treaty; confedertion of B. N. A.; the construction of the Intercolonial Railway; the extension and consolidation of the Dominion: the National Policy; and the measure for the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Young, Samuel Squier, Trenton, was born at Brampton, on the 7th November, 1852. His father was born in Northumberland county, in 1808, and is descended from U. E. Loyalists. He married a native of Connecticut, U. S. When our subject was born his father was a Methodist minister stationed at Brampton, and Samuel was the youngest of seven boys. He was educated at the High School, where he matriculated. He studied law at various times in a lawyer's office, but owing to failing health he was obliged to abandon the profession, and took to his present business, that of wholesale grocer, entering into partnership with Mr. W. M. Ireland, in 1877. In 1879 Mr. Ireland died, and our subject has conducted the business ever since. Mr. Young has always shown a very deep interest in municipal affairs and public questions generally, and was for some time a member of the Town Council, and an officer of the Board of School Trustees. He was one of the fifteen gentlemen who purchased land on which to erect a dam, with the view of securing proper water privileges for the, town, and who now, with his confreres, hold the property as trustees for his fellow citizens. Mr. Young is an Oddfellow of Trent Lodge, No. 113. Between the time of his relinquishment of the law and his entry into business, he travelled through the States and Canada, and has visited all the important places in both countries. In politics he delights to call himself a Clear Grit, believing that the policy of the reform party must bring political salvation to the country. He married, in December, 1876, Miss Ireland, daughter of Mr. W. M. Ireland, one of the old settlers of Prince Edward Island, and who came to this country during the war of 1812. Mr. Young is a favourite with the public and in his own social circle

King, John S., M.D., Toronto, was born at Georgetown, in the County of Halton, Ontario, on April 26th, 1843. father, Stephen King, was born in England, and came to Canada in 1833. His mother, whose maiden name was Hess, was descended from a U. E. Loyalist family. Father and mother both live with Dr. King, our subject, the former being in his seventythird year, the latter in her seventyeighth. Stephen King was one of the first attendants at the first Congregational College. This building was situated near the south-east corner of Yonge and Wellesley streets, and was demolished only a year ago. Our subject may be regarded as a self-made He received little education at the hands of masters, and he was not content with these. Height after height of learning did he gain by his own exertions and own perseverance; and when he had attained his 19th year, this youth, who had been seen on winter's nights by the lamp with his books, was found teaching a school. He was an excellent teacher, and soon became principal of the Waterloo Central School. He was mainly instrumental in organizing the Waterloo County Teachers' Association; and for the first two years he was president by unanimous vote. He was meanwhile a paid contributor to various newspapers and periodicals. He soon ceased teaching, and became a well-known contributor to the Ontario press. He was for three years on the editorial staff of the Toronto Globe, during which time he was Canadian correspondent for the Chicago Tribune, in addition to other Canadian contributions. In May, 1866, he completed a course in the Toronto School of Medicine, and obtained his license to practice medicine. He is a member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario, and is an M.D. of the University of Victoria College. He was secretary for the Toronto Reform Association for two or three years, about 1867. By appointment of the Ontario Government he is surgeon to the Mercer Reformatory and Industrial Refuge, and has held this position since the institutions were opened. He is a mason of twenty-two years' standing, and belongs to Wilson Lodge No. 86, G.R.C. In the Knights of Pythias, he is Past Grand Chancellor and Supreme Representative of Ontario. In this order our subject has been an energetic worker. and he has earned the warm approbation of the brotherhood. At the last biennial session, composed of representatives of over forty Grand lodges, he was elected to the third highest honour this body can confer, by a vote of 59 to 22. He was mainly instrumental in securing the next biennial session to be held in Toronto in 1886. This, it is anticipated, will be the largest society demonstration ever held in Canada. Dr. King is endeavouring to arrange that fifteen or twenty thousand people shall visit Toronto on this occasion. He is likewise a member of the A.O.U.W., and has been medical examiner to the order for a considerable period. He likewise is a member of the Select Knights and of the Sons of England Benevolent Society. In connection with the latter he proposed a revision and reorganisation of the rituals, which were almost unanimously adopted. This shows a thorough knowledge of the govern-The Royal ment of such institutions. Arcanum also counts our subject among its membership, as does the St. George's Society. He is now a vice-president of the latter. He professes Presbyterianism, and in politics is an independent Reformer. Neither political side pleases him entirely, consequently he takes no active part with either. At the time of Mr. J. Rymal's candidature, however, he stumped the county of Wentworth, advocating Reform principles. We may add that Dr. King has now a very wide and lucrative practice. He has latterly associated Dr. Elliott with him in business. He is a widower and has two children living one a boy, aged 18, who is studying art; and a girl about 16 years of age. Dr. King

On-

the

iring

dent

ther

, he

o1 of

brac-

llege

ľand

toria

onto ears.

tario

rcer

and

tions

-two

 $_{
m pdge}$

nias,

eme

rder

ker,

 \mathbf{n} of ses-

over

the

ifer.

in-

nial

Phis,

iety

Dr.

fif-

visit

se a

peen

con-

em-

Sons

nec-

sion

hich

 Γ his

ern-

oyal

ong

ge's

the

and

ner.

ely,

vith

ndi-

y of

les.

erv

erly

ess.

ving

is very popular with the working classes. Reid, Rev. William, M.A., D.D., Toronto, was born in the parish of Kildrummy, Aberdeenshire, Scotland, on the 10th Dec., 1816, and educated at King's College, Aberdeen, where he took the degree of M.A. in 1833. He was licensed to preach the gospel by the Presbytery of Fordyce, of the Church of Scotland, in May, 1839, and shortly thereafter left for Canada, under an appointment as missionary by the Glasgow Colonial Society. In January, 1840, he was ordained and inducted into the pastoral charge of Grafton and Colborne, at that time within the bounds of the Presbytery of Kingston. His labours extended over a wide district, within the bounds of which there are now five Presbyterian ministers settled. In 1849 he was called to Picton, in the County of Prince Edward, where he remained until 1853, when he was removed to Toronto to take the position of general agent for the Schemes of the Presbyterian Church and editor of the Ecclesiastical and Missionary Record. Mr. Reid was in 1850 appointed moderator of the Synod of the Presbyterian Church of Canada; in 1873 he was moderator of the General Assembly of the Canada Presbyterian Church—the designation of the church after union with the United Presbyterian Church in 1861; and in 1879 he was moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, the union of the various branches of the Presbyterian Church having taken place in 1875. For a long time he has been one of the clerks of the General Assembly, as well as agent for the Schemes of the Church in the Western section. In 1848 he married Mary Ann Harriett Street, third daughter of W. Street, Esq., of Devonshire, England. For a number of years Dr. Reid has been officially connected with the Upper Canada Bible Society and the Upper Canada Re-ligious Book and Tract Society. In 1876 he received the honorary degree of D.D. from Queen's University, Kingston. For many years Dr. Ried has been actively engaged in the service of the Presbyterian Church, and is well and favourably known by the office-bearers and members of that Church throughout the Dominion.

Caven, Rev. William, D.D., Principal of Knox (Presbyterian) College, Toronto, was born in the Parish of Kirkcolm, Wigtonshire, Scotland, on the 26th of December, 1830. Our subject comes of a family

They were sturdy supthe local annals. porters of the solemn League and Covenant, and their names, we see it recorded, were enshrined on the roll of the Wigton martyrs. We find in the Canadian Portrait Gallery that "one of the most cherished traditions of the family on the mother's side, relates how one of them, for refusing to abjure his faith, suffered grievous bodily tribulation at the hands of the dragoons of 'Bloody Claverse'—known to history as John Gra-ham, Viscount Dundee." The father of our subject was the late Mr. John Caven, a sound and widely informed scholar, who was at one time a school teacher. 1847 he left Wigtonshire for Canada, and took up his abode in the township of North Dumfries, Ontario. He removed, after time, to the neighbourhood of St. Mary's, and here he continued to reside till the time of his death, which occurred in 1880. may be said that while in this country he one time employed himself as a teacher, and was subsequently a school superintendent. Everbody who came in contact with Mr. John Caven revered him. His manners were amiable, and his life a spotless one. The son William commenced his education under his father, in the Parish of Kirkcolm. He is described as having been a painstaking lad who always felt himself drawn towards the ministry. He prosecuted his studies for the ministry under the auspices of the United Presbyterian Church of Western Canada, in their seminary at London. The training of students for the ministry, at the time of which we are writing, was in the hands of the Rev. William Proudfoot, and the Rev. Alexander Mackenzie. Under these two venerable instructors our subject pursued his course. In 1852 he was licensed to preach by the Flamboro' Presbytery, and in October of the same year he was given the charge of the parish of St. Mary's and Downie. In 1855 he went to Scotland for the benefit of his health, but he did not surrender the charge of his parish. In 1866 he was appointed by the Synod to fill the chair of Exegetical Theology and Biblical Criticism, vacated by Professor Young the year previous, and he has continued down to the present time as professor of these subjects. In theological discussion he is moderate and unaggressive. but sound and uncompromising. To controvert opinions is part of his duty, and that duty, while done with thoroughness and zeal, is always done with moderation and with a thoroughly just, nay almost generous, statement of the other side. Though "kindly whose names find a prominent place among | in the conflict," the Church has nowhere a stauncher or more doughty champion. 1870 Dr. Willis, who was Principal of Knox College, an institution founded at Toronto for the theological uses of the Presbyterian Church, resigned his position, and our subject was appointed principal in his stead. This position he still holds, enjoying the respect of a sound and widely-informed scholar and a most judicious and capable principal. Through his exertions, seconded by those of Prof. Gregg, chiefly, funds were obtained for the construction of the present very fine college edifice. As a presbyter, and in his position as minister, he has always been a powerful advocate of a union of the several Presbyterian Churches in Canada. Nor have his exertions been without their fruit. first saw an amalgamation of the Free and United Presbyterian Churches of Canada, and was for fourteen years a member in the Canada Presbyterian Church. As moderator of the Canada Presbyterian Church the pleasant office devolved upon him of signing the articles of Union, in the name of the Church, between the Canada Presbyterian Church and the Presbyterian Church in Canada, in connection with the Church of Scotland. In 1877 Dr. Caven succeeded Mr. Goldwin Smith as president of the Ontario Teachers' Association. In the year 1856 he married Miss Goldie, of Greenfields, near Ayr, Waterloo county, Ontario. The fruits of this union are seven children.

Laidlaw, Adam, Hamilton, was born in the village of Bedrule, Roxburghshire, Scotland, on the 18th of March, 1833. parents were James Laidlaw and Elizabeth, nee Robson, and daughter of Adam Robson, of Jedburgh, Scotland, builder, etc. father of our subject came to Canada in 1862, settling in the township of Bentinck, County of Grey, Ontario, on a farm where he remained until his death in 1880. He left a family of seven children, the subject of our sketch being the fourth child. Some of the family are still residing in Scotland. Mrs. Laidlaw is living and dwells on the old homestead, which is now managed by her son, Robert Laidlaw, who came to Canada in the vear of his father's death. He is a robust, well-to-do farmer. The family consist of Robert, who manages the estate, and to whom it belongs now; of Margaret Laidlaw, wife of George Murray, Esq., of Nesbitt, Scotland; of Agnes Laidlaw, wife of William Rutherford, Esq., of the North-West Territory, Canada; Adam Laidlaw, of Hamilton; of Mary Ann Laidlaw, wife of Walter Laidlaw, Esq., of Bentinck township, Grey County; of George Laidlaw, of Dakota, United States, and Elizabeth Laidlaw, wife of William Jackson, Esq., of the township of Sullivan, County of Grey. Adam Laidlaw, the subject of our sketch, received a common school education in Scotland. At the age of sixteen, he left school and apprenticed himself to the carpenter and building business, in the small town of Oxnam, in the employ of the late Robert Huggan, Esq., a large builder and contractor of that place, and a most respected citizen. After remaining here for seven years, Mr. Laidlaw left the employ of Mr. Huggan, and, in the year 1856, sailed for Canada. He proceeded to Hamilton, and commenced his trade, working at the same until the year 1866, when he was chosen manager of the Hamilton Cooperative store. In this position he remained until 1869, when he retired and entered the foundry business in partnership with William Turnbull, Esq., of Hamilton, in the Mary Street Foundry, doing business under the name of Turnbull & Co. The partnership continued until 1874, when Mr. Turnbull retired and Mr. Laidlaw continued the business under the name of A. Laidlaw & Co. In 1878, Mr. Laidlaw admitted as partner, Mr. John G. Bowes, when the firm became known as Laidlaw, Bowes & Co. In 1884. Mr. Bowes retired and Mr. Laidlaw at once organized a Joint Stock Company, under the name of the Laidlaw Manufacturing Company, Mr. Laidlaw occupying the position of vice-president and manager. This Company manufactures all kinds of stoves, hot air furnaces, hollow ware, and castings; is the only one in the country that manufactures enamelled wares, and is most favourably known throughout the Dominion. It is now doing an enormous business, and every month sees a further widening of its popularity and custom. Our subject, it may also be said, was of the Home guard during the time of the Fenian raid in 1866. He has travelled through all parts of Canada, and visited the important cities of the United States. He is a Presbyterian, and in politics always has been a conscientious and sturdy reformer, and is an especially strong supporter of the Hamilton Reform Association. In 1875, he was appointed a justice of the peace. He married in 1859, Miss Janet Dickson, daughter of the late John Dickson. of Mossburmford, Roxburghshire, Scotland, by whom he has had three children, two boys and one girl. Mr. James A. Laidlaw, the eldest son is book-keeper in the firm, and also a stockholder. Miss Laidlaw, the eldest, married Mr. John Macabe, of Toronto, and the youngest, John D. Laidlaw, is employed

a

fc

sk

or

Ca

an

ap

Ďι

Εn

ent

tow

and

inc

fine

pro

ous In:

now

was Colo

also

elec

an e

self

occu

He i

Bene

mucl

He h

of his

State

Chur

regar

politi Conse

spirit

his co

Natio

ment:

Mr. V

fellow

and al

ity, w

So far

of a ba

Hamil

County

Cas

with the hardware firm of Messrs. Woods & Leggatt, Hamilton. It may be added, that the peninsular coal and wood stoves, among which may be particularly mentioned the self-feeding "Regal Peninsular," are manufactured by this company, and have a fame and a sale far beyond Canada. These, the American press declare, are am ngst the finest stoves ever sent from a four dry.

e of

p of law.

 \mathbf{m} on

ke of

him-

iess,

ploy

 \mathbf{arge}

ain-

left

year i to ork-

hen

Co-

ain-

ered

with

in

ness

 \mathbf{T} he

 ${
m Mr.}$

lued

law

as firm

In

law

ny,

fac-

ring

ger.

of and

that ıost

ion.

 \mathbf{a} nd

its

nay

ing

has

nd

ted

tics

rdy

up-

on. the

net on, nd,

bys the

nd

nd

Ward, Henry Alfred, Port Hope, whom we have chosen as the subject of this sketch, was born at Port Hope, Ontario, on August 20th, 1849. His father was a Canadian, but his grandfather settled when a young man at Port Hope. Here he studied and practised law, and was after a time appointed registrar for the County of East Our subject's mother was an Durham. Englishwoman. H. A. Ward was educated at Port Hope, and after he had left school, entered upon the study of law in his native town. In 1872, he was called to the bar, and since that time he has practised with He has not conincreasing popularity. fined himself exclusively to the cares of his profession, but has taken an active and zealous part in military and other enterprises. In 1866 he entered the volunteers, and is now a captain in the 46th Regiment, which was commanded by the late Lieutenant-Colonel Williams, M.P. Municipal matters also engaged his attention, and was in 1878 elected to the council of Port Hope; and an excellent councillor he soon proved himself to be, and in proof of which he now occupies the important position of mayor. He is a member of the Sons of England Benevolent Society. Our subject is a man of much observation and practical experience. He has travelled through all important parts of his own country, and through the United States as well. He is a member of the Church of England, and a worthy and highly regarded person in that communion. politics he professes the principles of the Conservative party, believing that the spirited policy of Sir John Macdonald and his colleagues, and such measures as the National Policy, are best for the development and permanent interest of the country. Mr. Ward is exceedingly popular among his fellow townsfolk, and is spoken of by one and all in the highest terms for his urbanity, whole-heartedness and sterling worth. So far Mr. Ward has elected to live the life of a bachelor.

Casey, William, of the well known Hamilton Planing Mills, was born in the November, 1833. His father's name was Patrick, and his mother's maiden name was Madigan. The parents both died in 1836, three years after the birth of our subject. He was educated at the National School in Limerick County, Ireland, receiving a plain English education. In 1851, being then in his eighteenth year, he emigrated to Canada, resolving to strive hard for a fortune in this new country. He settled in the town of Dundas, Ontario, where he entered upon an apprenticeship in a planing mill in carpentry and building. But Mr. Casey was a young man who was not destined to remain long in the employ of others. He was full of ambition, was sanguine, and quick to perceive where advantage lay. So in 1864 he entered business in Dundas as contractor and builder, in partnership with Mr. Mercer, and the firm was known as Mercer & Casey. The firm was very successful, and our subject accumulated about $30,000, which he lost, however, in the years 1866 and 1867. Nothing daunted he again rolled up his sleeves and went as foreman in the establishment of Mr. Bowman. Later he entered into partnership in the firm, and continued in the same firm till 1884, when the partnership was dissolved. Tiring now of Dundas he removed to the city of Hamilton, where he entered into business with his sons, the firm being known as Casey & Sons. The same quick business faculties that characterized our subject in the past are manifest still; and the firm is very rapidly increasing its business and growing in public esteem. Our subject spared a little time from the irksome hours of every day employment at his business to devote to municipal politics. For seven years he was town councillor for Dundas, but has never sought any other public honours. He had belonged to the Liberal Conservative Association since the days of the Hon. Robert Spence, down to the present time. He joined the Oddfellows, Manchester Unity, in the year 1855, and of this association he was a member for four years. He severed his connection with the society, it may be said, in consequence of the tenets of his religion forbidding continuance with a secret society. He has been a Roman Catholic from his birth. He married in Dundas, on the 17th November, 1857. His wife's maiden name was Mary Kelly, and she was a native of the same parish and county in Ireland as himself. By this marriage our subject has a family of ten boys and three girls, of which twelve are living. Six of the boys have completed their education and are County of Limerick, Ireland, on the 25th of | grown up. Mr. Casey has always taken a great deal of interest in local politics. He belonged to the Dundas Liberal-Conservative Association, and was chairman of one of the Ward committees. Our subject was likewise chairman of the Separate School Board of Dundas for several years. Messrs. John P. and James B. Casey are in partnership with their father, and are most enterprising young men. They supervise and manage the mills. They are contractors, having built the Dundas Cotton Mills, and Wesleyan Institute, now the House of Providence, and other public buildings. Mr. Casey is a happy and cheerful man, and bids fair to live a long life of usefulness.

Ross, Dr. James, of Toronto, was born in York township, in the County of York, on January 26th, 1832. His father, James Ross, came to Canada in 1796, and his mother, Elizabeth Wells, about 1800. These were married in York, now Toronto, in 1808. His father was a tailor by trade. He engaged in the American war of 1812 and was taken prisoner at the battle of York, but was released when the Americans vacated the place. He then returned to more quiet pursuits, and took up land in West York, and went into farming. In 1852 he gave up his farm and came to reside in Toronto, where he died in 1869 and his wife in 1860. This couple had a large family, and James, the subject of this sketch, was the youngest of eleven children. early youth James was very fond of agricultural pursuits, and, in 1847, ploughed at the great match held at Hamilton during the Fall Exhibition, and carried off the first prize (a diploma and $20 in cash), in the match for lads under sixteen years of age. This diploma now adorns the wall of the doctor's surgery. He was partially educated in the West York public schools, and in 1847 came to Toronto, and for some time took lessons at a private school. In 1848 he entered the Toronto School of Medicine, and obtained a license to practice medicine in 1851. He graduated at Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, in 1852, and in this year began the practice of his profession, which he has very successfully prosecuted up to the present. In 1867, during the Fenian raid, Dr. Ross acted as surgeon in the Toronto Naval Brigade, under Captain McMaster. He has during his public career occupied several important offices, and for several years was a member of the Medical Board, and from 1875 to 1880 a member of the Medical Council. He was also president of the Ontario branch of the Royal Caledonian Curling Club for 1883-4, and was for four years member of the Toronto School Board. The doctor has travelled a great deal in his day, and is very familiar with the various provinces com-prising the Dominion, the North-West and the United States. In religion Dr. Ross is a Presbyterian, and in politics a staunch Reformer. Some years ago, it was not an u. common thing to see father and son valk to the polls, the father voting for the Tory candidate and the son for the Reform. He has always taken an open and active part in politics; and for twenty years 'as been connected with the Girls' Home as physician. In private life Dr. Ross : genial and kindly, and a favourite wit's the public generally. Dr. Ross married in November. 1854. in Toronto, Miss Ann Jane McIntosh, a daughter of John McIntosh, a representative for North York, and has had a family of five children, three of whom are living.

Langmuir, John Woodburn, of Toronto, was born at Warwickmains, Ayrshire, Scotland, on the 6th November, 1835. He is the second son of the late Alexander Ralston Langmuir, who married Miss Jane Woodburn, of Aird. Both his maternal and paternal ancestors were well known Mr. Langold Ayrshire county families. muir was educated at Osborne's Academy Kilmarnock, and came to Canada in 1849. when only fifteen years of age. In accordance with the old Scotch system, he was placed for five years with the firm of Miller & Brothers, who then carried on a large mercantile business at Picton, in the County of Prince Edward, as well as in the City of Kingston. Having served his time in both these places, he acquired in 1853, the Picton business, which formerly was carried on by the firm, which along with the building of vessels for the lake trade, together with a large produce business, he carried on from 1853 to 1867. During that time he passed through all grades of municipal office, having served the town of Picton as councillor. reeve and mayor. In 1868, Mr. Langmuir. was appointed, by the Sandfield-Macdonald administration, to the position of Inspector of Prisons and Public Charities for Ontario. Prior to Confederation, there were four inspectors for the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec, and when the Act creating the office for Ontario was under the consideration of the legislature, fears were expressed that one inspector could not perform the work. These fears, however, were groundless, for Mr. Langmuir discharged the onerous and responsible duties of his position, not only to the entire satisfaction of the three admingati less tion supe offic Lone Idio Deaf tion tral and l muir assoc nent of the positi pany of the of the He is Retre establi has al and de nicipal of Quir he was brilliar do say, parts. taken a 16th B: nian ra Liberal ed by prevail welfare. part of ne is a.] ors for narried he late econd, egistrar o Mrs. ohn Bl ve sons

duir is

omestic

love, h

Bain

ie subje

onto, on

homas

ore

ations under which he served, but to public generally. A review of his fouryears of official labour would practically aprise a history of Ontario's public institions' system. His reports to the legislahre number fourteen large volumes, aggregating 4,000 pages of printed matter. No less than eight important public institutions were founded and organized under his supervision and direction during his term of office, viz.: The Asylums for the Insane at London and Hamilton; the Asylum for Idiots at Orillia; the Institution for the Deaf and Dumb at Belleville; the Institution for the Blind at Brantford; the Central Prison; and the Mercer Reformatory and Refuge at Toronto. In 1882, Mr. Langmuir resigned his government office, and associated himself with a number of prominent and wealthy men, in the establishment of the Toronto General Trust Company. The position of general manager of this company he now holds. He is also a director of the Federal Bank of Canada, and is one of the Niagara Falls Park commissioners. He is likewise president of the Homewood Retreat Association, a private asylum lately established in Guelph, Ont. Mr. Langmuir has always exhibited a wide public spirit, and devoted much of his attention to municipal politics while a resident of the Bay of Quinté region. At the age of twenty-four, he was mayor of Picton, and with sanguine brilliancy, those who remember him then do say, he added practical wisdom and solid parts. In military matters, he has always taken a deep interest. He was major of the 16th Battalion, and served during the Fenian raids of 1866. In politics, he is a Liberal, believing that the principles adopted by the reform party must in the end prevail and prove the best for the country's welfare. He has travelled over the greater part of the American continent. In religion, he is a Presbyterian, as have been his ancesors for many generations. He has been narried three times: first, to a daughter of he late Dr. Fairfield, of Prince Edward; econd, to a daughter of Mr. John Ridout, egistrar of the County of York; and third, Mrs. Ludlow, a daughter of the late Mr. ohn Bloodgood, of New York. He has ve sons and four daughters. Mr. Langwir is genial and kind hearted in the omestic and social circles, and lacks not love, honour and troops of friends." Baines Dr., Allen Mackenzie, e subject of this sketch, was born at Toonto, on May 12th, 1853, and is the son of

of

has

ery

om-

and

s is

Re-

11.

valk

'ory

He

part

een

ysiand

blic

ber,

osh,

nily

Ayr-835.

der

ane

mal

own ng-

my.

849, ord-

was ller

rge nty

y of

oth

ton

by

g of h a

om

sed

lor,

uir.

ctor

rio.

and

fice

1825. His father was well known in business circles, he being the senior partner in the brewery firm of Baines & Thompson. This establishment in later years changed its name, and it is hardly necessary to say that it is now known as "Cosgrave's." Our subject is descended of an old Shropshire, England, family Young Baines received his first tuition at the private school of Mr. Barron, Cobourg. In due time he was sent to Upper Canada College, where, in those days, most of the young men were educated. On leaving school he had little difficulty in making choice of a profession, for he always had felt a strong inclination for medicine; and, therefore, to the study of medicine he went. He was, we are informed, both an enthusiastic and brilliant student. From the Trinity College he took M. D. C. M., and from Toronto University M. B. Resolved to get the profit of study and experience abroad, he went, in 1869, to England, and attended the St. Thomas' Hospital at London. Here he remained for four years, in the meantime taking L.R.C.P., and then entered and remained for a time in Samaritan Hospital, London. In 1882 he returned to Canada with a theoretical as well as a practical medical education, such as it is the good fortune of few young Canadians to possess. Toronto, which city he chose as his practicefield, he soon found a splendid business on his hands. In time he became physician of the Toronto Home for Incurables, and also of the Infants' Home. He is likewise an examiner in toxicology and jurisprudence for Trinity College. Dr. Baines has seen much of the world. In addition to his lengthened residence in London, he has visited the Continent, likewise Egypt, India, and many other countries. Our subject does not concern himself with politics, but his political faith is Conservative. In religion he is a staunch adherent of Anglicanism. In manner, Dr. Baines is genial, and has abundance of energy.

e late Dr. Fairfield, of Prince Edward; cond, to a daughter of Mr. John Ridout, of Mrs. Ludlow, a daughter of the late Mr. Mrs. Ludlow, a daughter of the late Mr. He has we sons and four daughters. Mr. Languir is genial and kind hearted in the omestic and social circles, and lacks not love, honour and troops of friends."

Baines Dr., Allen Mackenzie, as subject of this sketch, was born at Tonto, on May 12th, 1853, and is the son of homas Baines, who came to Canada in Moore, a daughter of agood family of Tipperary, in Ireland. Miss Lowe, was born in Gloucestershire, England, on the 25th August, 1805, and died at St. Catharines, Ontario, on Mr. Thomas the 11th of August, 1877. Benson, her husband, was killed on the 12th of March, 1857, with fifty-seven others, in that shocking calamity caused by the breaking of the bridge over the Desjardins Canal, on the line of the Great Western Railway, near the City of Hamilton. Judge Benson's early education commenced under Whitelaw, at Niagara, in the Grammar School. Subsequently he was a pupil of the Rev. R. J. C. Taylor, M.A., Rector of Peterborough, whose Grammar school had then a Provincial reputation. From this school young Benson was admitted as a member of the Law Society of Upper Canada, passing his examination in the senior class, on the 10th of June, 1851. He also in the same year matriculated in University College, Toronto. He entered upon the study of the Law, at Peterborough, pursuing it subsequently at Port Hope, and completing his student course in Toronto, with the Hon. Adam Wilson, Q.C., now President of the Queen's Bench Division of the High Court of Justice, and the Hon. C. S. Patterson, Q.C., now a Judge of the Court of Appeal. During this time he took the law course at University College, and obtained three law scholarships. He was called to the bar on the 7th of February, 1859, having been admitted as an attorney and solicitor two years before. Mr. Benson commenced the practice of his profession in Port Hope, being drawn thither by family ties and friendly associations; though he had offers of advantageous partnerships in Toronto and other places. He continued his professional business in Port Hope, down to the time of his promotion to the bench, enjoying a large and important practice, and taking a foremost position at the local bar. Upon the change taking place in 1871, in the constitution of the Law Society, whereby the benchers became elective by the members of the bar, throughout the Province, Mr. Benson was elected a bencher, and took He was re-elected his seat in convocation. in 1876, and again in 1881. On the 11th of October, 1880, he was created a Q.C., by patent of the Dominion Government. He was appointed deputy Judge of the county court of his counties, on the 19th of September, 1882, and on the 3rd of November, 1882, he was appointed a junior Judge of the county court, and a local Judge of the High Court of Justice. These appointments were received with universal satisfaction, and the local press of both the leading political parties expressed warm encomiums and congratulations, as the following extracts will show: "Mr. Benson is well known in Cobourg, not only as a lawyer of marked ability, but as a gentleman in every respect His knowledge of the law is such as to en. inently fit him for the position to which ne has just been appointed." this appointment would be made, has long been expected. As to its suitability all are agreed. Mr. Benson's position as an able lawyer has long been recognized, and we feel certain that no judge in Ontario can fill a similar position with more credit to him "Judge Benson's appointment has been received with universal approval. Between the News and His Honour, there has been many a free lance. Nevertheless, the management of this journal extends a cordial congratulation to Judge Benson on his well deserved appointment, and trusts that he may be long spared to adorn a proud position in the provincial judiciary." extend to Mr. Benson our congratulations on his preferment. He is a gentleman in every way well qualified for the position." On the occasion of his holding his first sitting of the County Court and General Ses sions, on the 12th of December, 1882, the Hon. Sidney Smith, Q.C., the leader of the local bar, addressed Judge Benson, as fol-lows: "MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOUS: On behalf of the members of the profession of these counties, speaking for those present as well as for any who are absent, I have great pleasure in congratulating you, on your appointment. From a long experience at the courts here, I can safely say that m appointment of any prior occupant of the bench has given more general satisfaction than has yours. As a private citizen you have endeared yourself to all who have me you; while, by your course as a profession man, you have won the respect and esteen of all your associates. I say with all truth that I regard this appointment as not only complimentary to yourself, but one that will do credit to the government which conferred the honour upon you." complimentary addresses were presented to Judge Benson at several of the sittings of At the time of the the Division Courts. "Trent affair" in 1861, when there was great probability of war between (ireat Bri tain and the United States, Judge Benson took an active part in raising and enrolling companies of volunteers at Port Hope, and le was appointed lieutenant of the company of infantry then commanded by the

tl

e i

ncy,

or pro

nspect Volsele

at the compan

sional b

late Col

Col., an

volved u

obtained

Toronto

of the 4

duty wit

the colla

when all

he volu

his broth

has rece

Williams V. M.

commi

our, bu

he bencl

er of yea

hunicipal

er of the

welve yea

t. John'

se repres

ept two y

as been fo

ites from ynods, l

ly known lought" rustees a

anageme

ivinity Sc

the time

n of a bi thune, M inted to cepted by

d whose e ction of 83 elected

ay memb

l of St.

fore his

nson was

e, and wa

He h

Board.

lamented Col. Williams, M.P., who so tly distinguished himself in command e Midland Battalion in the North West. i'n company attained a high state of effincy, and more than once obtained one of ect en. e prizes then given by the Government r proficiency in drill and discipline, upon ne l aspection by Colonel (now General Lord) Volseley, and Colonel Mountain, R.A. ong are t the time of the Fenian raid in 1866, this company was enrolled in one of the Provible { sional battalions then formed, of which the late Col. Williams, was appointed Lieut .-Col., and the command of the company deimvolved upon Mr. Benson, who had previously obtained a first class certificate, at the val. 🖁 Toronto Military School, under Col. Lowry iere 🖁 of the 47th Regiment. Capt. Benson did duty with the Battalion at Kingston until he collapse of the Fenian disturbance, and when all was quiet again, he retired from he volunteer service, being succeeded by his brother, Mr. Frederic A. Benson, who has recently succeeded the late Colonel Williams in the command of the 46th Batt. V.M. Mr. Benson was for many years commissioner of the Port Hope harour, but resigned on his appointment to he bench. He has also been for a numer of years a member of the High School Board. Although often solicited to accept nunicipal honours, he always declined to do o. He has always been a steadfast memer of the Church of England, and was for welve years one of the church-wardens of t. John's Church at Port Hope. He has se represented that church since 1859 (exept two years) in the Diocesan Synod, and is been for several years one of the delestes from the Diocesan to the Provincial mods, He is identified with what is generly known as the "Evangelical school of ought" in the Church, and is one of the rustees and a member of the Board of anagement of the Protestant Episcopal vinity School, Wycliffe College, Toronto. the time of the "deadlock" in the elecn of a bishop to succeed the late Bishop thune, Mr. Benson was one of those apinted to select a candidate who would be cepted by the differing schools of thought, d whose efforts resulted in the unanimous ction of Bishop Sweatman. He was in 83 elected by the Synod of Toronto as ay member of the chapter of the Cathell of St. Alban the Martyr, at Toronto. fore his elevation to the bench, Mr. nson was in politics a Liberal Conservae, and was an ardent admirer and supter of the chief of that party, the Right

oli-

and

cts

kec

we

fill

ess, ls a

On

asts.

oud

We

0118

in

n."

sit

Ses-

the

the

fol-

UR:

3100

nce:

110

met onal

eem

Hon. Sir John A. Macdonald, and in the election contests in East Durham, he was one of the chief speakers at all political meetings. He was several times urged by the late Col. Williams and others to come forward himself as the representative of the constituency, but he invariably declined, preferring to confine himself to his professional duties. On the 26th of April, 1866, Mr. Benson married Mary Edith, the eldest daughter of the Rev. John McCaul, LL D., then President of University College, Toronto, one of the most beautiful and estimable young women of her day. She died on the 13th of December, 1870, and of this union two daughters survive. On the 25th June, 1874, Mr. Benson married Laura A., the second daughter of the Right Rev. Thomas Brock Fuller, D.D., D.C.L., the late Lord Bishop of Niagara. Of this marriage, there are now living two daughters and one son.

Young, Hon. John, was born in Ayr, Scotland, on the 4th of March, 1811, and received his education at the parish school. For some time he taught school in the neighbourhood of Ayr, but in 1826, with the object of bettering his position, he sailed for Canada, and on his arrival took up his residence in Montreal, where he obtained a clerkship in the mercantile office of John Torrance, one of the leading merchants of that time. In 1835, when only twenty-four years of age, he entered into a partnership with David Torrance in Quebec. Before the outbreak of the rebellion in Lower Canada, he took the liberty of representing to the then Governor-General, Lord Gosford, that there were troubles ahead, and urged the formation of volunteer companies, but unfortunately his suggestion was unheeded. However, when the storm did burst, the young Scot at once volunteered to aid in raising a regiment, a task which was accomplished in about twentyfour hours. Mr. Young had, in the mean-time, removed to Montreal, which city he foresaw, would in time become the centre of trade, and joined Mr. Harrison Stephens in business. During the Metcalf crisis, Mr. Young was returning officer, and there being every prospect of a serious riot, he at once searched for and seized arms wherever found. By means of this vi orous action he secured the peace of the city, and his name was specially mentioned in the Governor's despatch to Downing Street. It would be impossible in this short sketch to narrate all the enterprises with which his name has been associated, and we will simply say that his heart was thoroughly devoted to the interests of the city of his adoption, its harbour, its railway connection, its trade, and also its culture; and that in 1846 he espoused the principles of free trade with ardent enthusiasm, and remained faithful to them to the end of his career. In 1851, although Mr. Young had not been previously a member of Parliament, his administrative abilities and knowledge of trade were so well known, that he was chosen Commissioner of Public Works in the formation of the Hincks-Morin Cabinet, and he found a seat for Montreal, and continued to represent it until 1857, when ill-health compelled him to retire. In 1863, having regained his health, he presented himself as candidate for Montreal West, but failed to secure his election. However, in 1872, he succeeded in beating his opponent by a majority of 800. In the House of Commons he generally voted with the Opposition. For two years afterwards (in 1874) local interests so pressed upon him that he was compelled reluctantly to give up political life, and ceased to represent Montreal in the councils of the country. He at one time was president of the Board of Trade, and during the later years of his life filled the office of Harbour Commissioner for the port of Montreal. Mr. Young was a thorough Reformer, and in religion professed the simple faith of the Unitarians. He was a man of stalwart frame and fine presence, genial, able and vigorous. He died on the 12th of April, 1878, universally mourned by all classes in the city he had loved and served so faith-

Tache, Joseph Charles, M.D., Titulary Professor of Laval University, Knight of the Legion of Honour, and Deputy Minister of Agriculture, Ottawa. This very able and distinguished gentleman was born at Kamouraska, in the Province of Quebec, on the 24th of December, 1820. He is a son of Charles Taché and of Henriette de La Broquerie. Mr. Taché, the father, was captain of the celebrated corps "Les Voltigeurs," under the command of Colonel de Salaberry, during the war of 1812. distinguished family is descendant of the three first settlers, Hebert, Couillard and Martin, who inhabited Quebec in the time of Champlain. Louis Joliette, the discoverer of the Mississippi, is an ancestor on the father's side, and Pierre Boucher, Governor of Three Rivers, is an ancestor on the mother's side. Our subject is nephew to the late Sir Etienne Pascal Taché, and elder brother to Archbishop Taché. He received his classical education at the Seminary of Quebec, and his medical instruction in the same city. He has been an eager investigator from youth, and was also fond of hunting and travelling, these being almost his exclusive recreations. He was attracted to the study of medicine on account of the extensive connection of that science with other fields of human knowledge. On being admitted to the practice of medicine in 184 he settled in Rimouski, where he secured very extensive clientelle. He resided in Ki mouski till 1856. During his sojourn there he was elected for three consecutive parlia ments for the County of Rimouski, which he represented during nearly ten years. At the end of 1856 he resigned his seat to take charge of a new journal, Le Courrier du Canada, at After three years of editorship he was offered and accepted the situation of In. spector of Public Institutions. In that capacity he was one of a board of five of whom the first president was Dr. Nelson, whom he succeeded, on the death of that venerable gentleman. In 1864 he was transferred from the presidentship of the Board of Inspector of Public Institutions to the situation d Deputy Minister of Agriculture. It maybe remarked that he was the first to whom wa applied the title now given to all the chief permanent officers of the Departments of the Canadian public service. Since that time to the present year he has filled this office. He was, as already said, member of the Legs lature, Inspector of Public Institutions, and Deputy Minister. He represented Canada in France at the Paris Exhibition of 185 and also of 1867. He was British delegate from Canada, at the International Sanitar Conference of 1881, at Washington, and different times, belonged to several commi sions in Canada. Dr. Taché was the principal promotor, when member of the Legislatur of the harbour improvements in the low St. Lawrence. He never was connected it any way with secret societies of any kind but he belonged to several religious and charitable associations. Politically healway has identified himself with the Conservative party. He has travelled through England France, Italy and the United States, and is likewise visited almost every section of Provinces of Quebec, Ontario, New Brus nt at Qu wick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island. He is, and always has been, a strike adherent to the Roman Catholic Church He does not now take any active parti andise, an politics, being a public functionary; yet stmaster, en he sett He married, views are conservative. lton coun 1847, at Rimouski, Françoise Lepage, ad

lan

ior

to

bein

the

in of

nsive

peak

State

nure o

The P

British-A Union," "Trois L

which he ures and historical

ber of offi

culture,

Statistics.

l'rade Ma

Dr. Tache

entlemen Vritings a ll respect

nan. "Fo

ul readin

esides. "

ve as lon us office o

ulture, D

specially

under s

ble to rep

Chisho

er, Oakv

844, at (

ame was. aiden nar

me from

riginally

ursubject

olm, was

45, and

andfather lm (or i

ass, the h lm, on co otia. He is son, aft No. 1 Fl hich comp_{i}

ring the v

r was over

lton coun

lant of the first settlers and original iors of the place. Six children were to this union, three of whom survive, being a civil engineer, another a lawyer, the third, a daughter, married an after in of the Taché family. Dr. Taché is an nsive writer. His principal works, not peak of his lively polemics, are:—"On State of Agriculture," "The Seigniorial nure of Canada," "A Sketch of Canada," "The Paris Exhibition of 1855," "The British-American Colonies and their Federal Union," 1857; "Forestiers et Voyageurs," "Trois Légendes," "Les Sablons;" besides which he has published a number of brochures and contributions on several literary, historical and scientific subjects, and a number of official or semi-official papers on Agriulture, Public Health, Quarantine, Vital Statistics, Censuses, Patents of Inventions, rade Marks, and Copyrights. Altogether Dr. Taché is one of the most distinguished entlemen of which Canada can boast. His writings are cultured, original and plain, in ill respects the work of an unusually able. nan. "Forestiers et Voyageurs" is delightul reading, and it is brimful of instruction esides. "Trois Légendes," very justly, will ve as long as Canadian literature lasts. In is office of Deputy of the Minister of Agriulture, Dr. Taché has laid the Dominion, specially the scientific medical portion of under such obligation as it never will be ble to repay him.

the

iga-

int-

his

the

vith

ein 184 chi ere lia the the

ì he

tora

H

Chisholm, Captain William Biger, Oakville, was born 8th September, 344, at Oakville, Ontario. His father's ame was John Alexander, and his mother's aiden name was Sarah Pettit Bigger, who me from U. E. Loyalist stock, the family riginally moving here from Pennsylvania. ur subject's great grandfather, George Chisolm, was born near Inverness, Scotland, 45, and his father (subject's great great andfather), was James Sutherland Chis-lm (or in Gaelic, Chisalick), of Strathass, the head of the clan. George Chislm, on coming to Canada, settled in Nova otia. He died in 1843, aged 101 years. is son, afterwards Col. William, was lieut. No. 1 Flank Company Lincoln Militia, hich company stormed block Fort Detroit ring the war of 1812, and he was also prent at Queenston Heights. When the r was over, in 1816, he settled in Nelson, alton county. He traded in general merandise, and was at this time appointed stmaster, which position he held till 1834, en he settled in Oakville. He represented lton county for sixteen years in the Liberal-Conservative interest, and was appointed collector of Customs for Oakville in 1834. He was one of the commissioners of the Burlington Bay and Welland canals, and built and owned the first vessel that came through this waterway. He also built at Oakville the steamers Constitution, Oakville, and Burlington, and several sailing vessels. He married in 1812, and had six sons and four daughters, and he died on May 4th, 1842. Our subject was educated at the Oakville Grammar School, taking the ordinary course. On leaving school, which he did suddenly, and without apparent reason, as it was presumed he would have finished his course, then probably have studied for some profession, he went on the farm for some years. He later commenced fruitgrowing and packing, and noting the poor appliances in use for packing, etc., he introduced the present improved mode of handling fruit for market, and is now running the largest fruit package and basket factories in Canada. He has taken an exceedingly active part in the volunteer movement, having entered as private and worked himself up to captain. He was connected for fourteen or fifteen years with the volunteers, and put in all the drills, and he retired with rank of captain. He has been a member of the Town Council since 1872, and reeve of Oakville since 1878. He is a Freemason of Oakville Lodge, No. 400, and an Oddfellow of Oakville Lodge, No. 132, and belonged to the Orange Order for some time. Mr. Chisholm has travelled through the United States and Canada. In religion, he professes the faith of the Church of England. In politics, he is an uncompromising Conservative, and has been so from the beginning, and intends to die such. He married, on the 27th November, 1872, Mary Rebecca Howse, daughter of William Howse, who carried on business in Toronto. By this lady he has had four boys, only two of whom are living. Mr. Chisholm was one of the first candidates to pass at the first Military School of Toronto.

Baillairge, George Frederick, C. E., Deputy Minister of Public Works for Canada, Ottawa, was born in Quebec on the 16th October, 1824. This distinguished engineer is the eldest son of the late M. Theophile Baillairge, Assistant City Surveyor and Engineer of Quebec. His mother is Charlotte Janvrin, of Shorrel, Isle of Wight, and a daughter of the late Lieutenant Horsley, of the Royal navy, who served under Nelson on board of the Victory at Trafalgar. During the engagement he had his leg broken by a cannon ball. Our subject's mother, it needs hardly be said, was an Englishwoman, and although her husband was French, yet, strange to say, she can hardly to this day speak a word of the French language. G. F. Baillairge received his early tuition at the hands of the late Lieutenant Shadgett, of the British army, and finished his education in the Seminary of Quebec. Our subject studied law for a year, but did not believe that the legal profession was suitable to his taste and best endeavours. He had always much inclination for engineering pursuits, and, therefore, in 1844 entered the Civil Service of old Canada, in the Board of Works, as translator and assistant draughtsman of the engineering The Honourable H. H. Killaly was then president of this department of the government. Three years later he received the commission of provincial land surveyor, and, subsequently, for a considerable period, acted as surveyor and as assistant engineer on the various public works of Canada. In 1852 the government, recognizing his brilliant professional and administrative abilities, offered him the position of superintending engineer of the canals and other public works of the Province of Quebec, but the offer he declined. In August, 1852, he married Charlotte Rachel Giroux, daughter of P. Giroux, Esq., of Cedars village, County of Soulanges, P. Q. In 1870-71-72 he made the survey, location, plans and estimates for the construction of the Baie Verte Canal, from the St. Lawrence to the Bay of Fundy. Always a wise adviser of his department, a capable and clearheaded official, it is not to be wondered at that Mr. Baillairgé was mounting the ladder of promotion in the service. He was appointed assistant-chief engineer of the Department of Public Works in 1871, and afterwards superintending engineer of the Ottawa and St. Lawrence Canals in 1877-78. and was promoted to the position of deputy to the Minister of Public Works on the 4th of October, 1879. The position of Deputy Minister of Public Works is probably the most important in the Civil Service. Heavy responsibility for the proper administration of numerous important affairs rests upon the shoulders of this official. In a word he must be land surveyor, architect, engineer, and everything that is implied under each and all of these headings. For this task our subject is eminently fitted. He is a most efficient and upright deputy; and the service whose interests it is his duty to conserve, and the portion of the public with whom he is d stantly in contact, both find cause for c gratulation in him. The exhaustive rep containing the history of the Public Wo of Canada, from 1867 to 1882, toget hose r with its accompanying views and maps we my, t published in both languages under his ad nur rections and supervision in 1883. I rried rections and supervision in 1883. Baillairgé has had a family of five boys five girls, two of whom are dead. subject has had a useful and brilli career, and we hope that although health has been greatly injured by a joiney of 250 miles on snow shoes while l ing out the South Gulf Shore road, to Gas he will long live to adorn his profession.

adsto

ord La

Unde

e Mar

ent he

troduc

ensatio

uire in cientific

ommit

ne Join

he Chai nittees

as trav ng been states.

Park, Ca owne F

Iis.club

Reform,

nd Hui

owne m ady M

laughter K.G. I

William

anuary.

orn 12t

Mary, bo

ice Fra

Lord La

General

ıst, 1883

ortune

orial bo

Dufferin

political miss adv

guilty of

and Lord

governor try, whil

of the lie

as these of Lord

journ an

parties. addresses

Lansdowne, Marquis of (He Charles Keith Petty Fitzmaurice), G.C.M. in the County of Somerset, Earl Wycom of Chipping Wycombe, County Bucks, V count Caln and Calnstone, County Wil and Lord Wycombe, Baron of Chipping W combe, County of Bucks, in the peerage Great Britain; Earl of Kerry and Earl Shelburne, Viscount Clanmaurice and Fi maurice, Baron of Kerry, Lixnaw and Da kerron, in the peerage of Ireland; Govern General of the Dominion of Canada, born on the 14th January, 1845. lineage of his lordship is very ancient, a his ancestors have held very high places the realm, from the earliest history of o Our subject is the elde English empire. son of Henry, the fourth Marquis of La downe, fifth Earl of Kerry, etc., K.G., was born on the 5th January, 1816, and in from 1847 to 1856 was M.P. for Caln, a was appointed a lord of the treasury He was summoned to the House Lords in 1856 as Baron Wycombe, and m Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affai from 1856 to 1858. He married, in 184 Lady Georgina Herbert, daughter of Georgina Augustus, eleventh Earl of Pembroke, which lady died in 1841. He married again, i 1843, Emily Jane Mercer Elphinstone Flahault, Baroness Nairn, in her own right eldest daughter of the Comte de Flaham and the Baroness Nairn and Keith. In Marquis died on the 5th July, 1866, and was succeeded to the estates and titles by the subject of our sketch. His lordship has one brother, Edmond George, M.D., barrister-at-law, M.P. for Caln, and on sister, Emily Louisa Ann. He was educated at Eton College and subsequently at Ballid College, Oxford, and of the latter university he is an M.A. He graduated with honom in classics, taking a second class. He commenced political life as a lord of the trahe is dry in Mr. Gladstone's first government, e for c d was subsequently, in 1871, appointed ve repender Secretary of State for War under the lic Wo ight Honourable Edward Cardwell, during ght Honourable Edward Cardwell, during hose regime purchase was abolished in the my, the short service system introduced. d numerous other administrative reforms rried out. Upon the formation of Mr. adstone's second government in 1880, ord Lansdowne accepted the appointment Under Secretary of State for India, under e Marquis of Hartington. This appointent he resigned in the same year upon the troduction by the government of the Comensation for Disturbance (Ireland) Bill. e has been a member of several parliamenry committees and commissions, includg a Royal commission presided over by e Duke of Devonshire, appointed to enycome he pure of Devonshire, appointed to en-ks, V suite into the advancement of science and mentific instruction; the House of Lords ommittee upon the Irish Jury Laws, and ne Joint Committee of both Houses upon ne Channel Tunnel. Of the last two comittees he was chairman. Lord Lansdowne as travelled little, most of his time havng been spent upon his English and Irish His Lordship's seat is Bowood ark, Caln, Wilts; his town house, Lansowne House, 54 Berkely square, London. lis clubs are Brooks, Travellers, White's, leform, Devonshire, Turf, Marlborough, nd Hurlingham. The Marquis of Lansowne married, on the 8th November, 1869, ady Maud Évelyn Hamilton, youngest aughter of James, Duke of Abercorn, K.G. The fruits of this union are Henry William Edmond, Earl of Kerry, born 14th January, 1872; Charles George Francis, orn 12th February, 1874; Evelyn Emily Mary, born 27th August, 1870, and Beat-ice Frances, born 25th November, 1877. Lord Lansdowne was appointed Governor-General of Canada on the 24th of Augist, 1883; and he has since had the good ortune to be able to keep his gubernaorial boat out of troubled waters. Lord Dufferin became embroiled with one of our political parties because he would not dismiss advisers whom rumour had declared guilty of an odious betrayal of public trust; ad Lord Lorne stood between a lieutenantgovernor and a dominant party in the country, while the latter sought the destruction of the lieutenant. But no such difficulties as these have yet gathered about the path of Lord Lansdowne, and we hope his sojourn amongst us will be satisfactory to all parties. His lordship has delivered several addresses since his arrival, and it is ques-naps w r his boys a

brilli

bugh i

7 a jo Phile l

o Gas

ssion.

y Wil

ing W

erage

Earl

nd Fi nd Da

verm da, r

nt, a laceri

of a elda f Lan ln, a

sury i

ouse

nd n

À ffair 184

ne d

(Her

d.

tionable if we have a readier or more effective speaker in Canada. Lord Lansdowne is a young man, active and ambitious, and has chosen dignified methods for his own advancement, and we predict that he will succeed in achieving his ends.

Cameron, Hon. Malcolm, was the son of Mr. Angus Cameron, formerly of Argylshire, Scotland, and who came to Canada in 1806, as the hospital sergeant of a Highland regiment. The subject of this sketch was born at Three Rivers, on the 25th of April, 1808. His father, whose regiment was disbanded in 1816, kept a tavern at Perth, in the Ottawa district. Until 1822. the family resided here, after which young Malcolm's mother, anxious for the welfare of her child, now in his twelfth year, procured a situation for him with a farmer on the banks of the Mississippi river. great dread was that the child should become fond of drink, or that his character should become stamped by any of the recollections of his father's bar-room. Stamped his character was, but in the right way. The lad had at an early age, and the feeling was with him as a man, a horror of bar-rooms, and a deep dislike for the liquor traffic. He remained a farmer's lad for about three years, when he obtained a position in a store at Laprairie. Here he disagreed with his employer, threw up his situation, and set out on foot for Montreal, in which city he took the position at first of a stable-boy. In the old country, where so many of the distinguished men are born midway to their position, we suppose they could hardly believe that in such a way as this some of the greatest ornaments of Canada have eet out in life. The lad's mother now opened a boarding-house in Montreal, and her son lived with her during the following winter, and attended the district school. From all that can be gathered, his mother was a noble-souled woman, with a clear sound head, a great heart, and high aims for the future of her son. Young Malcolm subsequently obtained the position of clerk in a brewery, and this situation he held for about four years, giving great satisfaction to his employer. He saved some money, with which he purchased Hume's and Smollet's histories of England, which he read and reread with enthusiasm. This was an evidence in a way of what the man was yet to be. He now became a wide reader, amassing large stores of information. He was never scholarly or cultured, but he was well-read, intelligently read, and his range of knowledge was wide and useful. He soon opened a general store on his own account, and during a visit to Scotland, in 1833, married his cousin, Miss Christina McGregor, daughter of a Glasgow cotton spinner. years later he was elected for the county of Lanark in the old Upper Canada Assem-Sir Francis Bond Head was now strutting abroad through the Province, and exasperating the people by the manner in which he treated their requests for redress from political grievances. Against this mock tragedian, Mr. Cameron brought the force of his strong individuality. He who had fought for everything that he had possessed was not likely to defer to the unearned powers and positions of the dominant family compact. He opposed that combination with might and main, and though at the first his exertions seemed not unlike the sea flinging itself against the base of an invincible cliff, after a while the great fabric was seen to shiver, and then to begin rocking. In the parliament and upon the hustings he opposed oligarchy, favouritism, and corruption, advocated responsible government, and declared loudly for separation of church and state. Under Lord Bagot's administration he was Inspector of Revenue without a seat in the Cabinet; he had already refused the Inspector-Generalship under Sydenham. Under the Baldwin-Lafontaine administration he held a seat in the Cabinet. He was once President of the Council, again Commissioner of Public Works; was also Minister of Agriculture as well as Postmaster-General. Upon the Hincks reconstruction, in 1851, he became President of the Council. With Dr. John Rolph, somewhat after this time, he was the leader of the advanced radical element. In 1854 he was not sent to parliament, but in 1858 he was returned for Lambton again. In 1863 he withdrew from parliamentary life, and became, conjointly with Mr. George Desbarats, Queen's printer. In 1869 he was unsuccessful in contesting South Renfrew, and two years later he was defeated for South Lanark, in his contest for the local legislature. In 1874 he was successful again, being sent to the Commons for South Ontario. This seat he held till his death, which occurred at Ottawa, on the 1st of June, 1876. He was instrumental in the passage of much useful legislation, and strenuously advocated the abolition of imprisonment for debt. In public life he always kept his hands pure. His mercantile career was a chequered one, and he died a poor man, leaving little behind him save an irreproachable name.

Blake, Hon. Samuel Hume, Q.C., of Toronto, ex-Vice Chancellor of Ontario, long senior Vice-Chancellor of the University of Toronto, is the second son of the late Honourable William Hume Blake, and brother of the Honourable Edward Blake. He was born at the City of Toronto, on the 31st August, 1835. Elsewhere, in this volume the parentage of the subject of the present sketch is referred to (see the Hon. W. H. Blake, p. 53, and Hon. Edward Blake, p. 19). Samuel Blake received his early educational instruction at home, under the private tutorship of Mr. Courtney, and other gentlemen. In his eighth year he was sent to Upper Canada College, and the record which remains of his career here, shows that his intellect ripened at a very early age. He was a lad of great industry, and he is said to have had an almost phenomenal ca. pacity for the mastery of his lessons. These qualities were, however, not the most striking ones in the boy. At his father's fireside he had received unusually careful and thorough training in elocution, and when he passed into the public school, he became the wonder and emulation of the classes. Mr. Barron, the principal of the school, was in the habit of holding him up as an example to the other boys; and Lord Elgin, who attended a public examination held at the college, paid an eloquent tribute to this special accomplishment of the school-boy. On leaving college, he felt his tastes drawing him towards commercial life, and he entered the firm of Ross, Mitchell & Co., where he remained for four years. Before the period expired, he was convinced that commerce was not, after all, to his taste, and accordingly he passed the preliminary legal examination before the Law Society, and entered upon a study of law in the office of his uncle, the late Dr. Skeffington Connor. He was fired with the ambition to take a University degree now, and with amazing courage began the labours of the double study of law and arts. In 1858, he graduated as B.A., and he was admitted in the same year to the bar. Immediately he entered into partnership with his brother, and the firm became known as that of E. & S. H. Blake. It is hardly necessary to say how popular this new firm speedily grew. A legal firm with two such brains as those possessed by Edward Blake and by S. H. Blake, could not long remain in the shadow. Business increased at such a rate, that in 1872, our subject's professional income reached closely to $15,000 per annum. When Mr. Mowat, now premier of Ontario, retired from the vice-chancellorship

of

vit

Af

Mr

Th

hes

tha

offi

hac

mo

any

hea

min

men

inte

you

Com

tion

was

Blak

to bi as or

Maco

the v

when

done

whole

earne

cial li

Blake

ship

puzzle

once l

reason

where

may b

the old

old wo

the ser

occupi

and it

permit

which

verance

Mr. Ed

drawal

the firn

still bet

terest o

the lead

career a

than it

judgme

have in the gra

style, t

the wid

Februar

daughte

the

of Ontario, and Sir John A. Macdonald. invited Mr. Blake to accept the appointment. After some delay in considering the question, Mr. Blake consented to accept the offer. There is little room for wonder that he did hesitate, for he was relinquishing a practice that brought him $15,000 per year, for an office which gave a salary of $5,000. But he had worked overmuch, and his health was more or less undermined, and this more than anything else, probably, was the reason why he accepted Sir John's offer. Some curiously minded people said, that Sir John's appointment of so young a man as Mr. Blake was intended to mollify the opposition of the young chancellor's brother in the House of Commons, but this hardly deserves contradiction, for anybody must know that Sir John was shrewd enough to know that Edward Blake was a man whom it was impossible to bribe. No, this appointment stands out as one of the creditable actions of Sir John Macdonald's career. Mr. Blake retained the vice-chancellorship up to 16th May, 1881, when he resigned as his predecessor had done, and resumed practice once again at the bar. His stay on the bench on the whole may have been regarded as a wellearned holiday in 'the calm dignity of judicial life. It seems strange to many why Mr. Blake should have accepted the chancellorship in the beginning, and it likewise puzzles them that he should have resigned once he had accepted the office. But good reasons have been shown for the acceptance, whereas with respect to the resignation, it may be said that he felt his health ready for the old work again, and a vast quantity of the old work was waiting. His brother Edward, the senior partner, found much of his time occupied with his duties as a political leader, and it would seem like a wanton sacrifice to permit to go to ruin a splendid practice which had been built up by industry, perseverance and great ability. In later years, Mr. Edward Blake has announced his withdrawal from his regular duties as partner in the firm, the object being that he may be still better able to devote himself to the interest of the political party of which he is the leader. It may be said that our subject's career as a judge was not less distinguished than it had been as an advocate. His written judgments are among the best which we have in the literature of English courts for the grace and limpid eloquence of their style, the justness of their reasoning, and the width of their grasp. On the 2nd of February, 1859, he married Rebecca, third daughter of the late Right Rev. Benjamin

Q.C.,

tario,

ersity

late

l bro-

n the

He

this

ct of

e the

ward

d his

nder

, and e was

e rehows

age.

he is

l ca-

hese trik-

fire-

n he

e the

Mr.

s in

nple who

the

spe-

On ving

red he iod

was

ion

n a

Cronyn, Bishop of Huron. By this union. there is a family of three children living, one son and two daughters. Mr. Blake has always taken a sincere interest in all the great moral movements with which the time and place can bring him into contact, and an especially prominent part in the affairs of the Church of England. Once only has this richly endowed man been heard upon the political hustings, and that was in 1872, when Edward Blake was abroad for his health. He went down to his brother's constituency, and addressed the people on public questions. His speeches amazed many men who could not see how it was possible for a gentleman whose life had been spent as advocate and judge to acquire such a familiarity with outside questions; but this hardly astonished them more than his wonderful eloquence.

Logan, Sir William E., F. R. G. S., F. R. S., the eminent and distinguished geologist, was born in Montreal on the 20th of April, 1798. His grandfather, James Logan, and his grandmother, Margaret Edmund, were natives of the parish of Stirling, Scotland. James Logan was a burgess, and carried on the business of baker. Between the years 1756 and 1772 this worthy couple had a family of six sons and three daughters born to them; but death made sad inroads in the household, and took away one after another of this family until but two sons and two daughters remained. James Logan, like many of his countrymen, thought of bettering his fortunes in the New World, and taking his wife and two sons with him, William, the eldest, born in 1759 (the father of Sir William), and Hart, the youngest, born in 1772, sailed for America, probably about 1784, and found his way to Montreal. Here he established a large bakery, and with wise forethought, purchased considerable landed property in the neighbourhood of the city, where we find him in the last decade of the century comfortably settled on his farm, William carrying on the bakery, and Hart engaged in a prosperous importing trade. In the spring of 1794, Miss Janet E. Edmond, of Conniehill, near Stirling, niece of Mrs. James Logan, left her Scottish home and came to Montreal, and married her cousin, William Logan. The time-honoured sequence was thus, and as time rolled on they became the parents of nine children, five sons and four daughters; and the subject of this sketch was the third child of this union. The father, appreciating the value of education, sent William and his brother to an excellent school kept by Alexander Skakel, afterwards headmaster of the Royal Grammar School, in little St. James Skakel was a determined Scotchman, and like many a schoolmaster of his day and generation, was thoroughly acquainted with the art of flogging; but he was a good classical scholar, and trained his scholars well. Under him young Logan seems to have progressed satisfactorily, and to have acquired, among other things, a capacity for thrashing bigger boys than him-Whether he had learned all that his Montreal master had to teach him we are unable to say, but at any rate, in 1814, his father determined to send him to the High School at Edinburgh, which was then in the zenith of its reputation. Here he made good progress, and became a student in the University, and during the session of 1816-'17 attended the classes in logic, chemistry, and mathematics. During this one session at college he studied with great diligence, and obtained the first prize in mathematics, with "the goodwill of all the competitors, and here young Logan's university career came to an end. In 1818 he entered the mercantile office of his uncle, Mr. Hart Logan, of London, and after a time became a partner in the firm. After returning to Canada for a short time, where his attention was drawn to the geological characteristics of this country, he again crossed the Atlantic in 1829, and took up his reasidence in South Wales, Swansea, as manager of copper smelting and coal mining operations, in which his uncle was interested; but he left this situation soon after the death of the latter in 1838. During his seven years' residence in South Wales, Mr. Logan devoted himself to the study of the coal fields of that region; and his minute and accurate maps and sections were adopted by the ordnance geological survey, and published by the Government, under Sir Henry de la Bèche's superintendence. He was the first to demonstrate that the stratum of under clay, as it is called, which always underlies coal beds, was the soil on which the coal vegetation grew. In 1841 Sir William visted the coal fields of Pennsylvania and Nova Scotia, and communicated several valuable memoirs on the subject to the Geological Society of London. At this time he began an examination of the older palæozoic rocks of Canada; and the celebrated geological survey of Canada having been commenced, he was appointed its head, a trust which sufficiently indicated the high opinion entertained of his abilities and attainments by the government. This preference was,

however, nothing more than he was entitled to, considering the immense sacrifice which he made to remain in, and confine his studies to, a country endeared to him by all the ties of birth and station. It is a well known fact that he refused several offers from other governments for his services, including India, where a princely fortune was to be made by the geologist. In the course of his investigations upon the rocks of the Eastern Townships. which are the continuation of those of New England, Sir William showed that, so far from being, as had been supposed, primitive azoic rocks, they were altered and crystalized palæozoic strata; a fact which, although suspected, had not hitherto been demonstrated, and which was the key to the geology of North-Eastern America. found the rocks, which form the Laurentide and Adirondack mountains, previously regarded as unstratified, to be disturbed and altered sedimentary deposits of vast thickness, equal perhaps to all the hitherto known stratified rocks of the earth's crust. In 1851 Sir William represented Canada in the Great Exhibition in London; and had charge of the Canadian geological collection which had been made by himself or under his immediate direction. It was exhibited with great skill and judgment, displaying to the best advantage the mineral resources of Canada. The labour of arranging the specimens was very great, and so enthusiastic was he that frequently he sallied out at eight or ten in the morning, and would work for twelve hours without waiting to take refreshment. He had the satisfaction of knowing that his countrymen appreciated his services, and medals in profusion were allotted to Canada. He was also a com. missioner from Canada at the Industrial Exhibition at Paris in 1855, when he received from the imperial commission the grand gold medal of honour, and was created a Knight of the Legion of Honour. Here. ceived the honour of knighthood from the Queen's hands, in 1856; and in the same year was awarded by the Geological Society, of which he had long been a member, the Wollaston Palladium medal, for his preeminent services in geology. Sir William Logan was not only a Fellow of the Royal Society of London (1851), the Royal Society of Edinburgh (1861), and the Geological Societies of London (1837) and Edinburgh (1867), but also a member of the Geological Societies of France (1842) and Belgium (1847), of the Imperial Leopoldo-Carolinian Academy of Germany (1857), the

P

(1

th

th

ce

cie

A

В

et

of

of

of

He

W

qu

ne

Ot

age

in ( bor

cen

yea

in

wor

ent

tair

of

con

plet

ĥe ε

tice

tere

way

mak

the

ed

Scot

the .

of th

His

sprea

able

an .

Scoti

was (

in co

nentl

porti

1868,

ment

Inter

The y

of the

inten

ed su

sioner

tercol

with e

he wa

Philadelphia Academy of Natural Sciences (1846), the Maine Historical Society (1847), the Academy of Sciences of St. Louis (1857), the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, Boston (1859), the State Historical Societies of Wisconsin and Iowa (1859), the American Philosophical Society (1860), the Buffalo Society of Natural Sciences (1863), etc., etc. He received the honorary degree of Doctor of Civil Law from the University of Lennoxville, in 1855, and that of Doctor of Laws from McGill University in 1856. He died on the 22nd of June, 1875, in Wales, England, and his body lies in the quiet churchyard of Llechryd. He was never married.

en-

cri-

on,

l to

ion. sed

his

cely

plo-

ons

ips, Iew

far

mi-

and

ch.

een the

He

ide

re-

nd

ck-

wn 351

eat

of

lch

m-

th

 $_{
m he}$

of ci-

e of ed re

Collingwood, C. E., Schreiber, Ottawa, Chief Engineer and General Manager of Government Railways, and Engineer in Chief of the Canadian Pacific Railway, was born in Colchester, Essex, England, on December 14th, 1831. When in his twenty-first year he sailed for Canada, where the activity in the construction of railways and public works promised well to a man of ability and enterprise. Shortly after his arrival he obtained a position upon the engineering staff of the Hamilton and Toronto Railway, continuing in this employment till the completion of the road in 1856. Thereafter he engaged in fairly profitable private practice in Toronto, till 1860, when he entered the service of the Northern Railway of Canada, where he was employed making a restoration of the works upon the line. When the engagement was ended he entered the service of the Nova Scotia Government as division engineer of the Pictou Railway, and continued in charge of the works till their completion in 1867. His reputation as an engineer is widespread, and it was a reputation of considerable brilliancy. When the construction of an Intercolonial Railway through Nova Scotia and by the seaboard of New Brunswick was decided upon, there was no hesitation in considering that Mr. Schreiber was eminently qualified for the work of surveying a portion of the route, he was, therefore, in 1868, appointed by the Dominion government to take charge of the surveys of the Intercolonial route, via Lake Temiscouata. The year following he was placed in charge of the Eastern Extension Railway, as superintending engineer. In 1871 he was appointed superintending engineer and commissioners' agent for the entire length of the Intercolonial Railway. This position he held with eminent satisfaction until 1873, when he was appointed chief engineer of Government railways in operation. This position, it may be said, he continues to fill in conjunction with that of chief engineer of the Canadian Pacific Railway. Perhaps in the whole history of gentlemen connected with engineering in this country, there is no record that one will so readily pause to admire as that of Mr. Schreiber. His progress has been continuous, he has passed from one position of responsibility to another of still higher, with great rapidity, yet this is not due in any degree to political influence, and the writer believes that persons from both sides of politics have joined in bearing testimony to Mr. Schreiber's ability as an engineer and an administrator. Mr. Schreiber married a daughter of the late Captain McLean, of Scarborough, Ontario.

Galt, Sir Alex. Tilloch, G.C.M.G., D.C.L., is the youngest son of the late Mr. John Galt, a gentleman of some literary note, but of wider distinction from his long and successful connection with the Canada Company. Alexander Tilloch Galt was born at Chelsea, London, England, on the 6th of September, 1817, so that he is now in his sixty-seventh year. When he was a lad it is said that he was a pet of the literary lions who used to visit at his father's house, and that by the time he had reached his fourteenth year, he had become a contributor to the magazines. Two years after his first literary venture, he obtained a situation in the British America Land Company, and young Galt took up his abode in Sherbrooke. the Eastern Townships being the scene of the company's operations. By close application to business he rose steadily in the service, and in 1844 was appointed commissioner. For twelve years he held this position, during which the business of the company was prosperous, and the management of its affairs most satisfactory. 1849, Mr. Galt entered parliament as the representative for Sherbrooke. politician," says one writer, "he has always been remarkable for the moderation of his views, and has had little sympathy with the violent party measures of either side." From the outset, he has always professed liberal opinions, though upon entering parliament he opposed the liberal administration of Messrs. Baldwin and Lafontaine, and voted against the Rebellion Losses Bill. He took part in the annexation movement of that troubled period, and was one of the signatories to the famous manifesto. Upon the removal of the seat of government from Montreal to Toronto, consequent upon the destruction of the parliament buildings in the former city. Mr. Galt refired from public life, and returned to his duties in connection with the Land Company. In 1853 he entered political life again, being returned for the town of Sherbrooke, which seat he retained till Confederation. He put himself in opposition to the Hincks-Morin government, and gave a sort of uneven support to the succeeding administration, till its fall in When the short-lived Brown Dorion administration came to an end, Sir Edmund Head invited Mr. Galt to form a government, but he declined, and the "double shuffle" set the wheels of government rolling all right again. In the Cartier-Macdonald administration Mr. Galt accepted the post of Minister of Finance, as succes-The finances of the sor to Mr. Cayley. country were in a deplorable state when Mr. Galt went into office, and there seemed to be little confidence among the mercantile community. But the new Finance Minister had a clear capable head, his experience in financial matters was wide, and he had been singularly successful. Therefore it was that public confidence was in a measure restored when it became known that he had taken office. Then the stars began to work in his favour. There were no summer frosts, but there was a due proportion of rain and sunshine. The crops throve well, and the harvest was abundant. The merchants took heart and imported largely, and the result was that the Finance Minister was soon able to report a surplus. He consolidated the public debt of Canada and obtained a loan in England. Upon the formation of the Taché-Macdonald government in March, 1864, he again became Minister of Finance. Mr. Galt had for many years been favourable to a scheme of Federal union for the provinces, and had gone to England, accompanied by Sir George Cartier and Sir John Rose, to urge the scheme upon the Imperial government. When the movement for Confederation was inaugurated, he rolled up his sleeves and worked loyally till the close. He attended both the Charlottetown and Quebec conferences, and was in London in 1867, when the final terms of union were decided upon. In 1866 he went to Washington, and represented the Canadian government in an endeavour to obtain a renewal of reciprocity with the United States. Some time afterwards he differed from his colleagues on their educational policy, and resigned. In the first Dominion government, under Sir John Macdonald, he was Minister of Finance. He did not retain this position long, but resigned and took a seat as a private member. He strenuously opposed Sir John Macdonald's mission to Washington in 1871, but voted with the government, when the treaty, in the making of which Sir John was one of the commissioners, came before the House of Commons for ratification. He opposed the pledge to build the Pacific Railway in ten years, but during the session following he voted for this same pledge. In 1869 he was created a Knight Commander of the Order of St. Michael and St. George. In 1872 he once more entered private life. In 1880 he was appointed High Commissioner for Canada, to the Court of St. James, at a salary of $10,000 a year, and a residence, but it seems that the position was never very congenial to him, and he resigned the post in 1883, when Sir Charles Tupper was appointed to succeed him. Since Sir Alexander's return to Canada he has been in private life, but his splendid intellectual powers are yet in their full strength, and it would be a great pity if the services of one so eminent should be lost to the country.

Windatt, Richard, Bowmanville, the gentleman selected for this biographical notice was born at Cornwall, England, on the 10th of July, 1821. His father was Andrew Windatt, and he married Elizabeth Davy, of which union comes Richard Windatt. These parents arrived in Canada in 1835, and took up their abode in Darling-Shortly after getting settled, Andrew Windatt established himself in business in Bowmanville. Our subject received his education partly in England, and subsequently in Bowmanville. Having completed his studies, he went upon a farm for some years, as so many young men in these days were obliged to do on first coming to the country. But farming in this fashion was not an attractive occupation to our subject, so he very soon set himself to learn the trade of a cooper, which calling he believed promised good remuneration. He continued at this trade for some years, and retired, to be shortly afterwards appointed town clerk of Bowmanville. This position he has retained ever since the date of his acceptance of the office in 1857. At the time of the Fenian raids he became a member of the Home Guards, obtaining first an ensign's and afterwards a lieutenant's commission. Mr. Windatt was, in 1883, appointed clerk for the township of Darlington, and still holds the office. He has always been interested in the progress of education, and has been a member of the Bowmanville School Board for the

adv him favo of T W.A his marl with men Com Fact older the 1 up ii years ciple been gent affirn the c marr Her By tl Wind it is secret

City

Gene

Ca

last

occi

boa

mar

ers

the y tive Canad of M Carlin on the cated quite brewi and w ber o public direct pany; way (Stanle chairn sioner Carlin the co a consi didate hold t time of demon headed last twelve years, and on several occasions occupied the position of chairman of the board; and has been for some years chairman of the Board of Licensed Commissioners for West Durham. He is a strong advocate of temperance, and identified himself prominently with the agitation in favour of the Crooks' Act. He is a Son of Temperance, holding the position of P.G. W.A. In the manufacturing interests of his town, he has always exhibited a very marked interest. Among the enterprises with which he has been identified may be mentioned the Dominion Organ and Piano Company and the Bowmanville Cabinet Factory. He has travelled through the older portious of Canada, and also through the North-West. Mr. Windatt was brought up in the Methodist faith, but in these later years he has been a member of the Disciples of Christ. In politics he always has been a steadfast, conscientious and intelligent reformer, believing that the principles affirmed by that party must prove best for the country's interests in time. In 1850, he married Miss Yonnie, a native of Montreal. Her parents came to this country in 1814. By this union he has had six children. Mr. Windatt's manner is genial and kindly, and it is not difficult, therefore, to divine the secret of his popularity.

Carling, Hon. John, M. P. for the City of London, Ontario, and Postmaster-General of the Dominion of Canada, was the youngest son of Thomas Carling, a native of Yorkshire, England, who came to Canada in 1818, and settled in the County of Middlesex the following year. John Carling was born in the township of London, on the 23rd of January, 1828, and was educated in the public school there. While quite young he became a member of the brewing firm of Carling & Co., London, and was an active member of it for a number of years. He took part in nearly all public matters, and was for several years, a director of the Great Western Railway Company; the London, Huron & Bruce Railway Company; and the London & Port Stanley Railway Company, and was also chairman of the Board of Water Commissioners of the City of London. In 1857 Mr. Carling aspired to parliamentary honours, on the conservative side, and was returned by a considerable majority over the liberal candidate, Elijah Leonard, and continued to hold the position continuously down to the time of Confederation. Mr. Carling is not a demonstrative member, but the same clearheadedness and calm judgment that had served him so well in his important successful business affairs has stood him in good stead as a parliamentary representative. In 1862 he made his first appearance as a cabinet minister, having been appointed Receiver-General. At the general election, after the consummation of Confederation, Mr. Carling was again elected to the House of Commons, and was likewise returned as a member of the Legislative Assembly of Ontario. In the Ontario Assembly he was appointed Minister of Agriculture and Public Works. under the Sandfield-Macdonald administration, and this portfolio he retained till 1871. when fortune went against the administration, and it was forced to resign. In 1878 Mr. Carling was again returned to Parliament, and took his seat in the House of Commons, at Ottawa, but he did not take a portfolio in the new cabinet. However, in 1882, he was made Postmaster-General, and he has proven himself a careful, capable, and popular officer ever since. Although the Hon. Mr. Carling seldom makes a speech, but when he does it is always seasonable and to the point. He is married to Hannah, eldest daughter of the late Henry Dalton, of London, Ontario.

Drew, George Alexander, of the village of Elora, in the County of Wellington, Ontario, judge of the County Court of Wellington, local judge for the High Court of Justice for Ontario, chairman of the General Sessions of the Peace, and judge for the Surrogate Court for the County of Wellington, was born on the 28th February, 1827, near the village of Williamstown, County of Glengarry, Ontario. He is a son of John Drew, and Margaret, nee McKay, and is a great grandson of a United Empire loyalist, who was a Highland Scotch-Our subject received his education at the grammar schools in Williamstown and Cornwall. He first married on the 6th May, 1856, Elizabeth Mary, eldest daughter of the late John Jacob, of Port de Grave, Newfoundland. She died, and he married again on the 6th July, 1865, Maria Louise, second daughter of the said John Jacob. By the last marriage there are three children, one son, John Jacob Drew, and two daughters, Elizabeth Mary Drew and Hannah Bennet Garland Drew. There were no children by the first marriage. To look back now for a period, it may be stated that our subject having completed his education, resolved to adopt the legal profession, and therefore began the study of the law under the late Hon. John Sandfield Macdonald, at the town of Cornwall. He was called to the bar of Ontario in 1854, and in June of 1855 settled in the said village of Elora, where he always continued to reside and practice his profession. It soon became apparent that the young barrister was possessed of much more than the ordinary legal attainments; his business grew apace, and he soon acquired lucrative employment. On the 18th December, 1872, he was appointed Queen's Counsel. He had not long practised his profession before he began to take interest in public questions, and when in 1867 he came before his riding for election there were few men better informed than he upon questions of the day, and it hardly needs to be said that there were few who could discuss these questions with more vigour and readiness. He was elected for the North Riding of Wellington, and was re-elected for the same constituency in 1878. Throughout his public career our subject has been a steadfast Liberal Conservative, always gave a hearty support to Sir John Macdonald and his government. He was an ardent supporter of the national policy, and warmly advocated the early completion of the Canadian Pacific Railway. He retired from politics on the dissolution of Parliament in 1882, and was on the 23rd day of May, 1882, appointed Judge of the County of Wellington, and on the 27th day of June, 1882, was appointed local Judge of the High Court of Justice.

Frankland, Garratt Frank, Alderman, Toronto, was born in the village of Barrowford, Lancastire, England on the 7th of September, 1834. His parents were John Frankland and Ann Dixon. John Frankland, his father, died in 1862, and his mother, Mrs. Frankland, in 1865. Mr. Frankland, the subject of our sketch, was educated at the Grammar School, in the village of Marsden, Lancashire, and received such an education as would prepare him for a commercial life. When he left school he was apprenticed to a farmer and butcher for five years. At the expiration of this apprenticeship he left the old country and came to Canada, settling in Toronto. On arriving in Toronto, in 1854, he commenced life as a purveyor of animal food in St. Lawrence His early training for this business led eventually to the export of Canadian produce, especially cattle, sheep and horses, with which his name will ever be connected as one of the early pioneers of this great industry. In recognition of his services, the citizens of Toronto, in 1876, presented Mr. Frankland with a magnificent present, consisting of a service of silver plate and a clock of Parisian marble, accompanied by an illuminated address. At present he is engaged as an extensive exporter and feeder of cattle. In 1882 he was appointed one of Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace, and in 1885 was elected alderman for St. Lawrence ward. He belongs to the Freemason order. and is also a life-member of St. George's Mr. Frankland has travelled a Society. great deal, having crossed the Atlantic about fifty times, and has been the means of introducing Canadian cattle into the markets of Great Britain, Ireland, France and Germany. He has also done an extensive business with Albany, New York and Boston. In religion he is Episcopalian, and in politics a He was married in 1857, to Miss Jane Nelson, of Toronto, by whom he has had a large family, six of whom are Mr. Frankland's career has been an eminently successful one, and highly creditable.

ma

ane

on

suc

son

He

nee

and

dev

is a

eld

He

tria

mei

Ele

is o

one

and

crov

М. (

by 1

Can

Can

of H

East

pare

only

You

the l

ing

Sem:

his e King

being of yo

1838

inati

law,

sidy,

office

in 18

A. M

a fair

ton.

Hilar

ed a

and t

know

firm t

petiti

was a great

juries

sense.

and d

used t

ing th

his c

thems

€

Rennie, William, seed merchant, Toronto, was born in the township of Scarboro', County of York, on the 15th of March, 1835, in a small log cabin. His father and mother emigrated from near Edinburgh, Scotland, in 1832, and settled in Scarboro' in 1833, without any means. Our subject received a limited education at the common school, where the rod was freely used by the teacher, the late Sheriff Maughn, of Owen Sound. Being the eldest of the family, William had to take the lead in all work connected with the farm. There were neither reaping machines, mowing machines, nor threshing machines in his young days, so that work on the farm was laborious and repellant compared to what it is now; yet a farmer's life in those days, with all its drawbacks. had its pleasant associations. When twentythree years of age our subject spent a summer travelling in England, Scotland and Ireland, and also visited the Orkney Islands. When in his twenty fifth year, less one day, he commenced farming on his own account in Markham township, County of York, on a farm bought previously by his father, which farm he now owns. Two years after he married Sarah Glendinning, daughter of the late John Glendinning, a Scarboro' neighbour, and schoolmate. In 1870 he rented his farm, and began at his present implement and seed business in Toronto, on Adelaide Street east, near Jarvis, next door to where he is at present. This business has been a very great success. He also has an implement factory at 112 Richmond Street west, where he manufactures the elevator ditching machine for underdraining. On this machine he spent a large amount of money and time in perfecting it before it was put on the market, and it has proved a decided success. Mr. Rennie has a family of four sons, all of whom assist him in his business. He is first vice-president of the York Pioneers Society; a member of the St. Andrew and Caledonian societies, and an enthusiastic devotee of the roaring game of curling. He is a Reformer in politics; and has been an elder of the Presbyterian Church since 1869. He has likewise been an officer in the Industrial Exhibition Association since its commencement, and he also belongs to the Electoral District Horticultural Society, and is one of its directors. His career has been one of unceasing industry; his methods just and honourable, and his labours have been crowned with success.

ia

of

in

ce

er,

e's

nt

ŀo-

of

ess

In

to

he

re

 $_{
m en}$

ly

r, d. d

Campbell, Sir Alexander, K.C. M. G., is by name and blood a Scotchman, by birth an Englishman, and by adoption a Canadian. He is a son of the late Dr. James Campbell, and was born in 1821 at the village of Hedon, near Kingston-upon-Hull, in the East Riding of Yorkshire, England. His parents emigrated to Canada when he was only two years old and settled at Lachine. Young Alexander received his early tuition at the hands of a Presbyterian minister, spending some time also at the Roman Catholic Seminary of St. Hyacinthe. He completed his education under Mr. George Butler of the Kingston Royal Grammar School, Butler being the same master to whom the training of young John A. Macdonald also fell. In 1838 he passed the preliminary legal examination, and entered upon a study of the law, in the office of the late Mr. Henry Cassidy, an eminent lawyer in Kingston. In this office he remained till Mr. Cassidy's death in 1839, then he became a pupil of Mr. John A. Macdonald, who at this time was doing a fairly prosperous legal business in Kingston. He was admitted as an attorney at the Hilary term of 1842. He immediately formed a co-partnership with Mr. Macdonald, and the firm was thereafter for some time known as Macdonald & Campbell. firm throve, for there was not so much competition then as there is now. Macdonald was a shrewd though never by any means a great lawyer, but he had much tact with juries, and was endowed with good common sense. Young Campbell was cool headed, and did not kindle as William Hume Blake used to do some years before when addressing the court, but he compelled respect for They soon found his cautious manner. themselves in possession of a handsome competence, and feeling certain that their legal business was on a firm basis, they began to think of politics. From 1851 to 1852 Mr. Campbell was alderman for one of the Kingston wards. In 1856 he was created a Queen's Counsel. In 1858 he was elected to the Legislative Council in the Liberal-Conservative interest for the Cataraqui Division, and he always won respect for the soberness and soundness of his views. He was not a man that flamed across the political sky, and attracted every eye suddenly. Respect for him grew slowly, but it grew, and in 1863 he was chosen as Speaker of the Council. In 1864 he was asked to form a cabinet, but de-In the Taché-Macdonald Ministry he accepted the portfolio of Crown Lands Commissioner, and held this position through the various shifts of administration down to Confederation. He was a staunch advocate, of Confederation, and ably championed the cause in the Upper House, and was kept much on the alert in replying to Mr. Currie of Niagara, who fancied that from the confederation scheme would issue all sorts of political plagues and mischief, and it is admitted now that he very effectually bore down the contentions of this fertile prophet of harm. In 1867 he was called to the Senate. in which body he has sat since, maintaining the same characteristics that won him regard and attention in his earlier career. On the first of July of the same year he was appointed Postmaster-General, and retained the position for about six months, and then became Minister of the Interior. This position he did not hold long, for his party went out of office in 1873. He has since held different portfolios, and is at present Minister of Justice, a position for which he seems peculiarly well adapted, from the sober judicial cast of his mind. In 1879 he was created a knight of the order of St. Michael and St. George, at an investiture held in Montreal by the Governor-General. He married, in 1855, Miss Georgina Frederica Locke, a daughter of Mr. Thomas Sandwith, of Beverley, Yorkshire, England. Altogether, Sir Alexander Campbell's life has been a useful one to the public.

Orr, William H., Manager for Western Canada of the Ætna Life Insurance Company, of Hartford, Conn., was born near Bowmanville, Ontario, October 1st, 1836. He received a good common school education, and was apprenticed to the business of printing in connection with the first newspaper published in Bowmanville—the Bowmanville Messenger. His father, Henry Orr, was a native of Fintona, Tyrone county,

Ireland, and came to America when a young man, and settled near Woodstock, N. B., where he engaged in lumbering and building. His mother, Eunice, nee Kimball, was a Nova Scotian of Scottish descent. One half of the family of twelve were born near Fredericton, New Brunswick, and the other half in Darlington township, Ontario. Farming having proved too heavy an employment for so delicate a frame as that which our subject possessed in his early days, the lighter work of setting type was chosen. Many a noon hour while a printer did he devote to books and papers in the office, dinner being deemed of small account in comparison with the advantage to be had from an hour's study. And while other boys were on the green with bat and ball, young Orr studied the French dictionary and picked sense and meaning and mental power out of the crow tracks of Pitman's phonography. Our subject left Bowmanville at the end of three years, and went to New York city and acted as compositor upon a paper called Yankee Notions. He acted likewise as short-hand amanuensis to a Tribune reporter, and as clerk in the supply department of a hygienic cure. He entered as a student in the Hydropathic College, under the care of Drs. Trall, Taylor, Dio Lewis, and other famous thinkers of the period. About this time he assisted Henry S. Clubb, of Manchester, England, now of Grand Rapids, Michigan, in compiling a work entitled the "History and Results of Prohibition," and subsequently travelled through New York state as agent of the "Maine Law Statistical Society." Reaching Rochester, he was employed by the Daily Tribune to report the Lyceum Lectures. His first attempt was said to have been perfectly shocking to read. All the applause and cheers of a four-column lecture were there, but only half a column of the matter. Rapid improvement was made, however, and this department of the paper proved quite a success-much more so than the paper itself. In the spring of 1856, the subject of our sketch returned to his native province, and though not yet of age, became editor of the Oshawa Vindicator, founded six months previously by McMillen & Luke, his father having purchased for him the interest of the first named partner. At once the young editor connected himself with the temperance movement, and refused to insert liquor advertisements in his columns. The paper lost a few hundred dollars by this course, but gained what was of more value, and has made money for its several owners from | hands. Subsequently Mr. T. R. Christmas, that time till now. His printing office was once consumed by fire, but the paper was resuscitated, and his interest was shortly afterward disposed of to John Larke, now reeve of Oshawa. After a brief respite spent in travel, partly in the Muskoka district and partly through the Eastern States, we next trace his hand in the leading edi. torial articles of the Toronto Daily Glob. Hon. George Brown was in the Government, Gordon Brown in poor health, and therefore, during a considerable period the editorial care fell upon our subject and another writer, named Johnston, since deceased, with J. Ross Robertson, now of the Tele. gram, as their city reporter. In February. 1866, Mr. Orr, who, while in Oshawa, had married a daughter of the late Henry Pedlar, left journalism as a profession, and moved to Montreal, as one of the firm of S. Pedlar & Co., managers for Canada of the Ætna Life Insurance Co., of Hartford, This firm's canvassing success soon stimulated their sleepy competitors, and the business shortly grew to dimensions which attracted the attention of other outside companies, and of the Dominion Gov. ernment, and led to the establishment of the present insurance department, with Professor Cherriman as superintendent. Jealous of the success of the Ætna in Canada, doing business as it did at that time on the half-note system, most of the other companies united in a crusade against it through the Montreal Daily News. Mr. Orr's press training now came into play, and the columns of the Montreal Gazette gave answer to the charges of the News in such manner as to turn the tide again strongly in the Ætna's favour. Its strength and soundness and reliable character were thoroughly demonstrated, otherwise the outcome of the controversy must have been disastrous to it. About this time one of the three members of the firm, John Garvin, moved to Toronto, and established the company's business in Ontario. In 1870, Mr. Orr was induced to acquire the interest of Mr. Pedlar, and a few years later, by desire of the company, he also took charge of the Western Canada branch, and for some years' had the management of the entire business for the Dominion. His health, however, began to give way under so heavy a strain, the business having grown to large proportions, and he therefore invited Dr. J. R. Alexander, who had proved himself a most successful general agent, to take the care of the Montreal city agency off his his f given which r.ame remo ter to Canad branc ern in mas. busine hands at No: ably se have work; assista one is the fiel man, a time ar Our su but he ers and near w takes a

benevol

one of

enterpri Har onto, th at Tam August Harston England known High Cl was educ tives be: twelve h corps, sh early age in Russia served a of the gr ralter. in the Ro of captain went first a settlem brought c to this set men, and mill. He came to I of the Sta of Ontario

pany of G

Company]

rebellion ir

his faithful cashier for twelve years, was given a partnership in the Eastern branch, which was conducted at Montreal under the name of Orr & Christmas, while Mr. Orr removed to Toronto early in 1878, the better to reorganize and develop the Western Canada Branch. Five years later, both branches having grown amazingly, his eastern interest was disposed of to Mr. Christmas. He is now pushing the Ætna Life's business on to the westward, occupying the handsomest life insurance office in the city, at No. 9 Toronto Street, Toronto. He is ably seconded by his two sons, both of whom have been educated and trained to the work; also by a carefully selected staff of assistants and general travelling agents. No one is employed, as a rule, in the office or in the field, who is not a practical temperance man, and who does not devote his entire time and energies to the work assigned him. Our subject comes of Presbyterian stock, but he is a Methodist, and one of the leaders and officials of the Metropolitan Church, near which he resides, in Toronto. takes a warm interest in all temperance, benevolent and reform movements, and was one of the originators of the coffee house enterprizes both in Montreal and Toronto.

te

Harston, Charles Grenville, Toronto, the subject of this sketch, was born at Tamworth, Staffordshire, England, on August 10th, 1844. His father, Edward Harston, was a member of the Church of England, rector of Tamworth, and the first known man there in connection with the High Church movement. Young Harston was educated for a soldier, many of his relatives being connected with the army. At twelve he was captain of a boys infantry corps, showing soldierly proclivities at this early age. He was subsequently employed in Russia, Roumania and Turkey, and has served and travelled, knowing every inch of the ground, from Russia down to Gib-After having retired from service in the Royal marines, with rank and title of captain, he came to Canada in 1876, and went first to Muskoka, where he established a settlement known as Ilfracombe. He brought out twenty-five young Englishmen to this settlement and an Episcopal clergymen, and built a church in it and a grist mill. He sold out in November, 1884, and came to Toronto, taking the management of the Standard Life Assurance Company of Ontario. He is in command of E Company of Grenadiers, and commanded No. 4 Company Royal Grenadiers during the late rebellion in the North-West. This company led the famous charge at Batoche on 12th May, 1885, and for the work done that day Capt. Harston was promoted to be brigade major of Col. Straubenzie's, or "the fighting brigade" which staff appointment he held during the rest of the campaign. Mr. Harston is a Freemason; greatly devoted to athletic sports, and very fond of shooting, being the originator of a new game law for the better protection of game. He is also secretary of the Dominion Kennel Club, and much of the success of the exhibition last year is said to have been due to him. He has invented a new rifle, the "Harston," which some authorities think will supersede the "Martini-Henry." He is a staunch member of the Church of England, and a strong tory, but he, however, favours judicial reforms in Canada, and abominates everything in the shape of bribery or corruption. He was married in 1870 to Mary Regina Ellis, whose father was a large shipowner of London, England. Mr. Harston has re-visited England since he came out, and on the last occasion was the guest of his brother officers, and visited Alexandria ten days after the bombardment in 1882. It may be said that Captain Harston is one of those active, generous hearted, public-spirited men of whom any community has reason to be proud. The following historic facts may prove interesting:-The family came originally from Harston, in Cambridgeshire. It was once called Hart-Ston, so the family crest was naturally a hart (or stag); but our subject's paternal grandmother was a Jervis-Cooke, descended on through a female line of the Ellis' of Kedal Hall, Yorkshire, and through them from the Earl de Gray and Ripon up to Edward, the Black Prince. Through this line came to the family a curious old piece of plate, a cruet with silver bottles and thereon a crest of a naked woman with her hair all down. This has been the crest of that line for ages, but has been modernised into a mermaid. Tradition says they came by it in the following way: - Ages ago, in the days of Robin Hood, bandits, robbers, etc., there dwelt on the estate adjoining that of the family's ancestors, in Yorkshire, a beautiful and rich lady who lived alone in her castle and loved to roam through her forest and lands. One day as one ancestor was riding home through the woods from hunting, he heard the screams of a woman, and with the gallantry of the time, immediately rode to succour the damsel. He presently found himself in a small glade, and perceived his lovely neighbour stripped naked and tied to a tree, whilst three robbers were dividing the spoils of which they had stripped her. To rush forward and ride down these ruffians was the work of a moment, and then springing off his horse, wrapped his long riding cloak about the form of the fair lady, and mounting his horse, bore her unconscious form before him on the saddle to her home. This piece of plate was a memento of his exploit, presented to him by the lady herself, whom it is believed, he afterwards married. He adopted the figure of her tied to the tree, and she had it engraven as his crest.

Hallam, John, was born in Chorley, Lancashire, England, on October 13th, 1833, His parents were operatives in a cotton factory in Chorley, and were very poor, but they were honest and respectable, and frugal and thrifty. As soon as our subject was able to do anything he was put at work in a factory, and had no opportunity of getting education until he became twenty years of age, and then it was only by attending a night school that he attained his object. He came to Canada on September 2nd, 1856, arriving in Toronto; and on his arrival there he experienced very hard times, and was obliged to work at anything that offered. So for a period he was employed putting down posts, digging, delivering flour and feed, and doing other kinds of labour. He began business on his own account in June, 1866, as a hide, wool and leather merchant, and has succeeded in establishing a large and lucrative trade. He occupied the position of alderman for the city of Toronto for twelve years, and during part of that period acted as chairman of the Industrial Exhibition and many other important committees. He resigned the position in 1883, wishing to devote more of his time to his own affairs. Mr. Hallam was the first chairman of the Free City Library, and this institution is under no small obligation to him for its existence. From the time the project was first spoken of until the present, he has worked unceasingly for its success, and it must be a great pleasure to him to think that his exertions have been crowned with such abundant success. He has very generously presented the Library with 2,000 very valuable books. Mr. Hallam has travelled a great deal, having visited almost every country in Europe, except Norway and Russia, and nearly every state in the United States of America. In religion Mr. Hallam is a liberal christian, refusing to be bound by any creed or confession, and he worships God in accordance with the light of his conscience. In politics, he is an uncompromising radical of the Lancashire type, and a free-trader; the folly of protection having been brought home to him while he resided He remembers having seen in England. 6d. paid for a loaf of bread, which two days before had cost (under the Corn Laws) Mr. Hallam is the very double that sum. personification of activity, and this, combined with his unusual ability, has enabled him to grapple with and overcome the hard fortune which met him at the beginning of his life. His public career has been a very useful, and in many respects, a very brilliant one. As a legislator at the municipal board he was quick and eminently practical; while it stands upon record that he has propounded several measures of considerable municipal importance. Among these may be mentioned the abolition of tax exemption. He likewise advocated the abolition of taxes on incomes and personal property for municipal purposes, and maintained that the tax upon real estate is the only true basis of taxation. Mr. Hallam has been married twice; and his second wife, who is now living, came from Baltimore. Altogether Mr. Hallam's career has been highly honourable to himself, and not a little profitable to the community.

Langevin, Sir Hector Louis, K.C. M.G., the present Minister of Public Works for Canada, and the foremost living French. Canadian statesman, was born at the City of Quebec on the 25th of August, 1826. His father was the late M. John Langevin, who was assistant Civil Secretary under Lords Gosford and Sydenham; and his mother was Sophia Scholastique, a daughter of Major La Force, who served his country with much gallantry during the invasion of 1812-14. Young Hector Louis, the subject of this sketch, received his education at the Quebec Seminary, and in 1846 he left school to begin the study of law with the late Hon. A. N. Morin, at Montreal. He had an early taste for literature, and while pursuing his studies, wrote a great deal for the press. He became editor of the Melanges Religieux in 1847, and subsequently editor of the Journal of Agriculture, both papers being published in Montreal. When M. Morin retired from Montreal. practice, Langevin entered the office of the late Sir George Etienne Cartier. Thus began the connection between those two distinguished men which was destined to last so long, to be so close and so loyal, and of such importance to the French Canadians. as well as to the Dominion of Canada. In 1854 M. Langevin married Justine, eldest daughter of the late Lieut.-Colonel Charles he assum In 1870 mander of gory the absence acted as servative chief he

H. T

prese

City

chair

In 18

Cana

mayo

chief

chose

Queb

preser

He v€

admir

was tl

receiv

traini

howev

ure, a

it, nui

was fo

Brown

linquis

was re

took p

M. La

and or

Macdo

eral Ea

Genera

summa

federat

was a n

and wer

in perf

During

suavity

been sh

came in energeti

not the often e:

conciliat

ministra

State for year he

part.

1873, on ald's adm the gener successful William I Rivers, he

H. Tetu, J.P. In 1856 he was elected representative of Palace Ward in the Quebec City Council, and subsequently became chairman of the Water Works Committee. In 1857 he became editor of the Courrier du Canada, and during the absence of the mayor, Dr. Morrin, in England, acted as chief magistrate of Quebec city. He was chosen in the same year, 1857, as mayor of Onebec, and also as the parliamentary represent tive for the County of Dorchester. He very naturally was found supporting the administration, one of the leaders of which was the gentleman at whose hands he had received his political as well as his legal The Macdonald-Cartier Ministry, however, held life by a very precarious tenure, and as the difficulties thickened about it, numbers yielded up their seats, and it was forced to resign. Then Mr. George Brown was called to office, but had to relinquish it in three days. The old ministry was recalled to power, and a readjustment took place. On the 30th of March, 1864, M. Langevin became a Queen's Counsel, and on the same day entered the Taché-Macdonald administration as Solicitor-General East. In 1866 he became Postmaster-General, which office he retained till the consummation of Confederation. In the confederation movement he took a prominent part. He was a delegate to Charlottetown, was a member of the Quebec Conference, and went to England to aid the Home Office in perfecting the Confederation scheme. During this entire movement the tact, suavity and broad statesmanship which has been shown so prominently in later years came into light. Sir George Cartier was energetic, forceful, patriotic, but he had not the savoir-faire of M. Langevin, and he often exasperated where he should have In the first Dominion administration M. Langevin was Secretary of State for the Dominion, and the following vear he was created a C. B. civil. In 1869 he assumed the portfolio of Public Works. In 1870 he was created a Knight Commander of the Roman Order of Pope Gregory the Great. During Sir George Cartier's absence in England, in 1873, M. Langevin acted as leader of the French Canadian Conservative party, and upon the death of his chief he became the permanent leader. 1873, on the downfall of Sir John Macdonald's administration he resigned office. the general elections of 1878 he was an unsuccessful candidate for Rimouski; but Mr. William McDougall, the member for Three Rivers, however, made way for him, and he mis-

ld a

ving

ded.

een

lavs

ws) ery

omoled

ard

g of

ery

ant.

ard

hile

ded

pal

ned

ke-

on pal

on on,

his

om

eer ind

ch-

was chosen for the vacated constituency by acclamation. In the new Conservative administration he became Postmaster-General, which office he retained till 1879, when he became again Minister of Public Works. Regarding his brilliant parts, and the service he has been to the Dominion and to the French Canadian people, the Queen conferred upon him the knighthood of the order of St. Michael and St. George. Sir Hector Langevin, as has already been said, is an astute and wise statesman, and his whole aim is to create a feeling of brotherhood among his own people and their Eng lish-speaking compatriots, and to develop a feeling of loyalty throughout the country.

Darling, Andrew, Toronto, was born in the City of Montreal, on the 24th of March. 1852, and is of Scotch descent. Mr. William Darling, the father of the subject of this sketch, accompanied by his wife, emigrated from Edinburgh to Canada in 1838, and shortly after his arrival commenced the hardware business, which he still continues to carry on, and is well known in all business circles as a man of high character and excellent business qualifications. Some years ago he was appointed by the government as arbitrator and valuator in the Lachine Canal matter, and has been president of the Board of Trade, and several other important public bodies. Andrew Darling received part of his education at the Montreal High School, and subsequently spent three years in Geneva and Paris in various schools. Having completed the literary portion of his education, he travelled through all the chief countries in Europe. He likewise visited Egypt, Palestine and Turkey. When in his 23rd year, possessed of a thorough education and a mind refined by travel, he returned to Canada and associated himself with his father in the hardware business. In 1879, he associated with him his brother Thomas, and commenced business in Toronto, the firm being styled A. & T. J. Darling & Co. This firm deals in hardware. Through the sound business qualities of its members, it has pushed its way steadily onward, and is now one of the leading establishments of its kind in the Dominion. Mr. Darling has not yet held any public office, in the meantime preferring to devote all his time and thought to business. In religion, is a Presbyterian; and in politics a Reformer, who has nailed the reform colours to the mast. Mr. Darling is a keen business man, courteous and well-liked by all who come in contact with

Charlton, John, M.P. for North Norfolk, Lynedoch, was born near Caledonia, Livingston County, N.Y., on February 3rd, 1829. His father, Adam Charlton, came from Newcastle-on-Tyne to New York in 1824. His mother's maiden name was Ann Gray; her father's family came from Northumberland county, England, at an earlier period, and she was born at Gorham, N. Y., soon after they arrived in America. The Charlton's are one of the oldest families in England, and their genealogical records in Northumberland date back to the eleventh century. The subject of this sketch was educated at the McLaren Grammar School, Caledonia, N.Y., and at the Springville Academy, N.Y. In 1832 his father moved to Ellicottville, Cattaraugus county, N. Y., where he soon afterwards entered into the employment of the Holland Land Company. He remained in Ellicottville till his removal to Canada, in 1849. The earlier years of Mr. John Charlton's life do not furnish many events worthy of record. His father lived a portion of his time upon a farm near Ellicottville, and part of the time in the latter village. Here young Charlton learned to work on a farm, and in his leisure moments he learned to set type in the office of the Cattaraugus Whig. He likewise, for amusement. read a little law in the office of A. G. Rice, In the spring of 1846 he made a trip on a lumber raft down the Alleghany and Ohio rivers to Cincinnati, and always in later years retained vivid recollections of this five weeks' experience with the rough but warmhearted raftsmen of the Alleghany. his father removed to Canada, John was twenty years of age. The family settled near the village of Ayr, Waterloo county, and the next four years of his life was spent upon his father's farm, where he worked steadily and diligently. At the age of twenty four when about leaving for Minnesota, he accepted the proposal of George Gray, of Charlotteville, Ont., to open a country store upon Big Creek, in the County of Norfolk, at Wilson Mills, where the post office of Lynedoch had recently been established. A building for dwelling house and store was erected here, mainly by the labour of himself and his partner, and the firm of Gray & Charlton commenced business in 1853, with a total capital of less than $1,800, including the cost of the building. The country was new and pine timber was abundant. new firm soon managed to engage in the timber business, in connection with Smith, Westover & Co., of Tonawanda, N.Y., and by dint of economy and industry their business succeeded far beyond their expectations. In 1859, Mr. Charlton sold out his interest in the store at Lynedoch, and took charge of the extensive timber business of Smith & Westover in Canada. In 1861, in company with James Ramsdell, of Clarence, N.Y., he bought out the Canadian interest of Smith & Westover, and for four years Ramsdell & Charlton did a successful business. In 1865 Mr. Charlton bought the interest of his partner, Mr. Ramsdell, and conducted the business successfully in his own name for several years. Since then he has been associated in the lumber business with his brother, Thomas Charlton, and with Alonzo Chesbrough, of Toledo, Ohio; and at this time (1885) is actively engaged in the lumber trade in the firm of Chesbrough & Charlton, of which he is manager; and in the timber trade in the firm of J. & T. Charlton. Mr. Charlton still resides at Lynedoch, On, where he has had his home since 1853. In 1854 he married Miss Ella Gray, of Lynedoch, who was born at Portage, N.Y., August 12, 1838. Mr. Charlton's first connection with politics was in 1872, when he accepted the nomination for the Commons in North Norfolk, and after a sharp and exciting contest, extending from June 20th to August 5th, defeated Aquilla Walsh, Esq., the Intercolonial Commissioner, who had represented North Norfolk in the previous Parliament. He has continued to represent North Norfolk since that time, having been four times returned, viz., in the general elections of 1872, 1874, 1878 and 1882. In politics he is an advanced He has taken an active and labor-Liberal. ious part in the work of the House of Commons. In early life he was a Protectionist, but was led by subsequent investigation and study to pronounce in favour of a revenue tariff policy as the proper one. While he believes that Canada must ultimately become independent, he doubts whether the proper time has yet arrived for that change; and although fully alive to the material benefits that would accrue to Canada from annexation to the United States, yet is in favour of the continuance of Canadian autonomy, if a proper and honest administration of our affairs can be secured. He believes that the experiment of working out the British system of responsible government side by side with the American system, is likely to prove of great interest and value to the inhabitants of the two countries and to Anglo Saxon communities and other free commonwealths in all parts of the world In religion, Mr. Charlton is a Presbyterian,

and h
school
of the well at denom
and ki ness of purpos
there speech when h
mons, nublic

public . Clos subject of Nov Portgle regarde liberal complet the cus and tha of drug apprent expiry of large te Ireland. and fin in 1862 arrived arrival Messrs. tario. I to, and e tail groc opened a talent for and good able to h now. A sure of s business, with real Close has to politic five years Ward; an election b manded r board, for safe couns Toronto, Canada´I vice-presid way, and for Cooke other impo rick Close land, who

Our subject

and he takes a lively interest in Sabbath school work, and in the affairs and interests of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, as well as of the interests of other religious denominations. Mr. Charlton is of genial and kindly temperament, but possesses firmness of character and stubborn tenacity of purpose. His information is wide, and there is always a flavour of culture in his speeches. He always receives attention when he rises to address the House of Commons, and is regarded as one of the ablest public speakers in the Dominion. Close, Patrick G., of Toronto, the subject of this sketch, was born on the 19th of November, 1837, at Woodland House, Portglenone, Ireland. He received what was regarded, and really was in those days, a liberal education. When his studies were completed, he was apprenticed, as it was the custom to do with boys, to a trade; and that chosen for him was the business of drugs and groceries. The term of his apprenticeship lasted for six years, at the expiry of which, he set out to travel for a large tea importing house in the North of Ireland. He grew tired of this business, and finally became utterly dissatisfied, so in 1862 he turned his face for Canada, and arrived here in due time. Shortly after his arrival he entered into the employ of Messrs. Hamilton & Co., of Whitby, Ontario. Early in 1863 he removed to Toronto, and established in that city a small retail grocery business, and after awhile he opened a wholesale establishment. Here the talent for business, the untiring application and good judgment, which had been valuable to him in the past, proved advantageous now. After he had achieved a large measure of success, he retired from the grocery business, and has since engaged bimself with real estate transactions in Toronto. Mr. Close has given a good deal of his attention to political and municipal questions. For five years he has represented St. Lawrence Ward; and in the spring of 1877 he got his election by acclamation. He always commanded respect and attention at the council board, for his prudence, good judgment and safe counsels. He has been a director of the Toronto, Grey and Bruce Railway; of the Canada Live Stock Insurance Company; vice-president of the Erie and Huron Railway, and chairman of the Board of Trustees for Cooke's Church, and also held several other important trusts. His father was Patrick Close, a manufacturer of linen in Ireland, who died in 1877, in his 97th year. Our subject's mother lives at the old home in Ireland, and is now in her 88th year. Mr. Close is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and belongs to several lodges. He married on the 1st June, 1867, Mary Jane Walton, a native of Cumberland, England, who came to Canada when a child. Her brother is Dr. T. C. Walton, Surgeon in the American navy. Our subject is a staunch Conservative, believing that the national policy and other measures of Sir John Macdonald's government must prove of permanent good to the country. He professes the Presbyterian faith.

Woods, Samuel, M.A., Ottawa, the subject of this sketch, was born in the County of Tyrone, Ireland, on the 14th October, 1841. He is the youngest son of William Woods, by Martha, nee Henderson. Both these parents were of old covenanting stock, and were among the Protestant immigrants from Scotland who settled Ulster. Our subject was educated at the London, Ont., Grammar School, and at University College, Toronto, where the gold medal in classics was awarded to him in 1862. Among his classmates, it may be mentioned, were Prof. J. Loudon, the late Principal Buchan, Dr. James A. McLellan, Rev. Dr. Gibson, of London, Eng., and James Fisher, of Stratford. Excellent school and college editions of portions of Demosthenes, Virgil, Horace and Cæsar have been published by him, and have long been standard classics in our institutions of learning. Mr. Woods was a member of the University Rifle Company first formed during the Trent excitement, and he subsequently took a certificate at the Kingston Military School. He was rector of the Kingston Collegiate Institute, from 1862 to 1877, erecting for this institution a provincial reputation in the department of classics, and ranking it one of only four in the first class of Ontario. After this time he engaged in business for a few years, then unanimously, and without solicitation upon his own part, he was appointed principal of the Lake Forest Academy, Ill. This situation he held for two years, resigning in June, 1883. He was then, at the urgent request of the Board of Managers of the Ottawa Ladies' College, induced to accept the principalship of the college. In this excellent institution he is carrying out those ideas of education, which he has so long held and advocated, and is rapidly acquiring a very high place for his college. Mr. Woods was the originator of the Ontario Building and Saving Society of Kingston; was one of the original directors of the Kingston Street Railway Company, and he reorganized the present very successful Kingston Mechanics' Institute, of which he was president. Of this latter institution he is now one of the three life members, the others being the Right Hon. Sir John A. Macdonald, K.C.B., and John Carruthers. He was the originator and for four years president of the Irish Protestant Benevolent Society of Kingston. He is likewise vicepresident of the Ottawa Field Naturalists' Club, and a member of the Senate of the University of Toronto. In the Masonic order he is P.D.D.G.M., having held that position, in 1876, in the St. Lawrence district, and is a charter member of Minden Lodge, Kingston, and was a member of ancient St. John's, but demitted. In religion, Mr. Wood is a member of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, and belonged to the old kirk branch of that united church. He married on March, 1863, Elizabeth, third daughter of Wm. Ford, Kingston. She died in Oct., 1884, leaving four children surviving her. Our subject has always been a liberal Conservative in politics, but seldom takes any active part in any contest. He is a man of a strongly original mind, firm convictions, untiring industry, and marked energy. The institution of which he is the head, reflects the strongest possible credit upon him.

Hillyer, Edward Seager, M.D., Hamilton, was born on Aug. 17th, 1838, and he is the third son of Robert and Susan Hillyer, who came to Canada in 1848. Our subject was born in Sherbourne, Dorsetshire, England, where his father had been engaged in a manufacturing business, on a large scale, but having met with heavy losses, through the free trade policy of the Government of the day, resolved to try his fortune on this side of the Atlantic. He at first purchased a large farm in the vicinity of Waterford, Norfolk county, Ontario, and settled there. But he lost large sums in visionary schemes of agriculture and he removed after two or three years to Walsingham, where he purchased a large tract of pine timber land. Here he built mills and engaged in the lumbering business till he died in 1850. He left eight children, and it was amid the wildest and most unpromising scenes, without society and without friends, that the family were obliged to struggle; but time has wrought many changes, and the old homestead, still held by an elder branch of the family, is one of the most thriving and attractive in Canada. family connection on the father, as well as the mother's side, may be said to be historical. Our subject's paternal grandmother was a sister of John Dunning, the celebrated Whig orator and lawyer, who was made Solicitor-General in the Lord Shelbourne administration, and who was afterwards elevated to the peerage, under the title of the first Lord Ashburton, so called after the town in which for centuries the family had resided. The mother's family are among the most ancient and respectable of the west of England. His maternal grandmother was a Tidcombe, one of the Tidcombe's of Somersetsbire, a family which has held freehold lands in that county since the conquest. They were lords of the manor of Lovington from time immemorial. Young Hillver was educated, partly at the Academy and Grammar School of Sherbourne, and partly at Queen's College, Kingston, Victoria College, Cobourg, and at the Toronto School of Medicine. He was engaged in practice for ten years at Caledonia, Haldimand county, whence he removed to Hamilton in 1882. He has decided literary predilections, and has been connected with the press both in the United States and Canada, as editorial writer and contributor, and is likewise connected with various literary and scientific societies, in both countries, and takes a prominent position in each as writer and worker. He has travelled extensively in the neighbouring republic, and is familiar with the defects of their social system, and is not very favourably impressed with their political institutions. He has always been a consistent member of the Church of England, to which his ancestors have been attached since the Reformation, one of his grand aunts, having built and endowed a church at Frome, in Somersetshire. He has always been a moderate Conservative in politics, but independent enough to manifest his convictions even in the face of party exigencies. He takes a prominent part in the Hamilton Medical and Surgical Society, and in the Hamilton Literary Society. He delights to lend a helping hand to all movements intended to promote the progress of the community. He is a sidesman in St. Thomas' Church, under the pastorate of the Rev. Mr. Curran.

Evans, H. Sugden, of Ottawa, F.C.S., F.R.M.S., London, ex-President of the Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain, Honorary Member of the Pharmaceutical Societies of Paris, Vienna and St. Peterburg, member of the Pharmaceutical Association of America, of the Society of Public Analysts, and of the Society of Chemical Industry, England, Chief Analyst, for the bmin m. I on of and L wholes and E his seco the late ory, S cated at of Lon basines cialiv as it, he At this by the ciety of Evans' education ceutists memoir in the n by the s its curri medica. Dr. Th. macy, ar consider tions to ceutical A promi writes of one of th institutid commonl equally passed st have con pharmace pleted hi removed of the ma ment of h ize and p chemical mills. T sponsible placed his

Muspratt.

favourite analytical

he acquire engaged i

"The Cons

monia," "

"Isomorp

per," etc.

subject he

Society of

body in 1

bminion at Ottawa, etc., was born in Lonn, England, 1830. He is the voungest on of the late John Evans, Esq., of London and Liverpool (founder of the extensive wholesale drug firms of Evans & Lescher and Evans, Sons & Co. in those cities), by his second wife Anna, youngest daughter of the late Thomas Hawley, Esq., of The Priory, Shrewsbury, England. He was educated at Merchant Taylor's school in the city of London, whence he entered his father's business there, the details of which, especially as regards the scientific department of it, he prosecuted with great earnestness. At this time great efforts were being made by the founders of the Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain, amongst whom Mr. Evans' father was prominent, to elevate, by educational means, the status of pharmacentists in England, and the subject of this memoir became one of the earliest graduates in the new School of Pharmacy established by the society, successfully passing through its curriculum under Dr. Pereira in materia medica, Dr. A. T. Thompson in botany, and Dr. Th. Redwood in chemistry and pharmacy, and in due course in 1848 passed, with considerable credit, the necessary examinations to entitle him to the title of pharmacentical chemist and member of the society. A prominent pharmaceutical authority thus writes of Mr. Evans :- "Not only was he one of the most successful students in the institution, but to a far greater extent than commonly occurs, he continued to occupy an equally prominent position amongst the passed students, who by their scientific work have contributed to the advancement of pharmacalogical knowledge." Having completed his studies in London, Mr. Evans was removed to Liverpool, there to take charge of the manufacturing and scientific department of his father's business, and to organize and personally conduct the laboratories, chemical and pharmaceutical, and drug mills. The better to fit himself for the responsible duties thus assumed, Mr. Evans placed himself under the late Dr. Sheridan Muspratt, one of the late Justus Liebeg's favourite pupils, to study more thoroughly analytical chemistry, and under his tuition he acquired great skill in analytical work and engaged in many chemical investigations: "The Constitution of the Carbonates of Ammonia," "of Anthydrous Sulphuric Acid," "Isomorphism," "The Chromates of Copper," etc. His investigation on this latter subject he communicated to the Chemical Society of London in a paper read before that body in 1849, and thereafter he was elected a fellow of the society. For the following eighteen years Mr. Evans continued the active management of the laboratories and mills, being in 1854 taken into partnership with his father and brothers, when he married Kate Morse, only daughter of the late Charles Moss, Esq., of Grays Thurrock, Essex, and of the city of London. Mr. Evans became an ardent student of the micrscope as applied to chemical analysis, devoting much attention to analytical work generally, but especially in regard to the adulteration of drugs and food, being frequently consulted by the Municipal Board of Health in regard to the latter subject. The results of his investigations on the food supply of the city of Liverpool were embodied in a paper communicated to the Literary and Philosophical Society of Liverpool, in whose Transactions, with others on cognate subjects-"The Teas and Coffees of Commerce," etc.—it was published. Mr. Evans' microscopical researches at this time secured his being elected a Fellow of the Royal Microscopical Society of London. He filled every office in the Liverpool Chemist's Association, occupying the presidential chair, and as its honorary curator organized its museum. He also retained an active interest in his alma mater, being elected to a seat at the board of examiners of the Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain, the duties of which he discharged for eleven years; and for a like period he was returned to the council of the same body, until in 1869 he was elected to the presidential chair, and it was during his presidency that the Pharmacy Act came into force, giving to pharmaceutical chemists a legal status, and During to the society legislative powers. his term of office as president, Mr. Evans represented British Pharmacy at the International Congress held in Vienna, 1869, and in recognition of these services he received the diploma of honorary membership of the Societies of Pharmacy in Vienna and St. Petersburg. In 1873 he again visited Vienna by special invitation to serve as representative of Great Britain on the jury in the food section of the International Exhibition held there that year, and for which he also holds a diploma and other valuable recognition. In 1875 he was constituted a life governor of Saint Bartholomew's Hospital, London, in recognition of humane services rendered at a railway accident on the Midland Railway. Having made several business visits to Canada, and secured there a considerable business connection, he was induced, in 1866, to associate himself with Mr. Nathan Mercer in the purchase of the drug business of the late firm of Lamplough & Campbell, in Montreal, the management of which was entrusted to Mr. Mercer, while Mr. Evans continued to reside in England, where, after the death of his father and retirement from business of an elder brother. he removed to London, assuming the conduct of the London business of his English firms, and for some years devoted his attention chiefly to the London drug market—the drug market of the world. In course of time the Montreal business was greatly extended far beyond the original intention, and it became necessary for Mr. Evans to take up his residence in Montreal and assume the control of that business, and in 1877 he removed his family to this country and became a resident, with all his interests identified with the prosperity of the country. 1884 he retired from the personal responsibilities of his business. The position of chief analyst for the Dominion, unsought, was now offered to him and accepted, in the full conviction that its duties would be fulfilled con amore. Mr. Evans is a staunch Anglican. He is a Freemason, having been made in St. Paul's Lodge E. R. in Montreal, and has served in most of its offices, occupying at the present time the J.W. chair. He also occupied the same chair in the Mark Masters Lodge, and that of Scribe N. in the R.A. Chapter. He early espoused the A. and A. Scottish rite, and has advanced therein to the Consistory, holding the office of Grand Marshall in the Rose Croix Chapter and Grand Orator in the Grand Lodge of Perfection.

Hague, John, Toronto, Fellow of the Statistical Society, London, England, was born at Rotherham, Yorkshire, in 1829, and educated at the Grammar School of that town, where at the age of sixteen he entered the service of the local bank, of which his uncle, Mr. Dyson, was for many years manager. While in the bank as junior clerk, he became a contributor to the press as a writer of art criticisms and descriptive sketches. In 1850 he helped to start the Sheffield Free Press, for which he wrote a number of leading articles in advocacy of social reforms, chiefly of a system of compulsory, universal education, of which he was then and has ever been an enthusiastic supporter. Being strongly in sympathy with the nationalist movements in Europe, though under age, he became secretary of a committee which undertook the work of maintaining and ultimately settling a large body of Polish and Hungarian refugees, who, after the battle of Temesvar, took refuge in Turkey until they were cared for by the English people. In this work he met with the leaders of the revolutionary party, namely, Kossuth, Mazzini, Louis Blanc, and others, of whom he has a lively remembrance. He left business life at the age of twenty-one years, in order to prepare for the ministry of the Church of England, and read for some time as private pupil of Dr. Moorehouse, the present Bishop of Mel-Through the kind interest of the late Earl Fitzwilliam, he received a nomination to the Elland Scholarship at Oxford. but when about to enter college was stopped in his career, by being over the age provided as the maximum under the trust deed. Before again returning to banking life, Mr. Hague spent some months at Brighton, where he organized in St. John's parish, what is believed to have been the first coffee house and reading room, with nightly entertainments, in avowed opposition to public house attractions. He was moved to this work by seeing the terrible evils of intemperance among the destitute poor. After a brief stay in Birmingham, where he established a night school and free concerts for the most abandoned classes, he was anpointed sub-manager to the private bank of Wm. Jones & Son, near Wolverhampton, which afterwards withdrew from business. Here Mr. Hague having considerable leisure time at his disposal, spent it in founding and carrying on single handed a large night school for colliers and other men of the most illiterate class. He also organized and kept up for several years a weekly series of free concerts for temperance purposes, which were usually attended by from 500 to 800 men and their wives, and it is pleasing to note that it was demonstrated by actual inspection that these entertainments emptied the public houses. Here, also, he was a prominent worker in the County Educational Association, of which he was one of the lecturers and in which work he enjoyed in a marked degree the confidence and friendship of the late Lord Lyttleton, by whose influence the plan of the coffee house and its entertainments was adopted in many neighbouring towns and villages. Having gone into the iron business, which he found both uncongenial and pecuniarily barren, he came to Canada in 1871, and has since then been almost a daily contributor of financial articles to the newspapers of the day, not forgetting his favourite subjects, social reform, music, and the arts. In 1873 Mr. Hague was invited by two friends to or-

ganiz

dint d

found

of wh

vears.

found

which

of our

taken

mover

that so

which

In fur

temper

the ex

masses

tary a

many y

with re

Englan

adopted

is a wa

his wri

has or

Among

of Bills

Church

chanics

Social

form," Old," w

He was

late dis

cation i

Old Ma

notice a

received

then Br

Derby.

in Frase

ber of th

London.

Q.C., L1

the City

Bar for t

Ste. Ros

on the 2

of Capta

Julie Est

his fathe

who came

Rouen, F

tled at wards rer

likewise

gelier. (is descen ville, Fra

Lang

ganize a musical society, and succeeded by dint of several years enthusiastic labours in founding the Toronto Philharmonic Society, of which he was the moving spirit for many vears. He also was the chief agent in founding the Foresters Society in Canada, which has become one of the most successful of our benevolent associations, and has also taken an active part in various educational movements. Mr. Hague is of the opinion that social reform is the great structure of which political action is the scaffolding. In furtherance of the spread of education, temperance, the diffusion of art knowledge, the extension of pleasure resorts for the masses, and the enforcement of better sanitary and criminal legislation, he has for many years wielded and still wields his pen with recognized force both in the press of England, the United States, and of his adopted country, of whose institutions he is a warm admirer and defender. Although his writings would fill many volumes, he has only published several pamphlets. Among others, "A Sketch of the History of Bills of Exchange," "Lay Work in the Church," "A Plea for Recreation in Mechanics' Institutes," "Sunday-schools and Social Life," "A History of Prison Reform," and "Church Sketches—New and Old," which were all reprinted by request. He was associated with Mr. Merritt, the late distinguished art critic, in the publication in 1850 of a small work on "The Old Masters," which attracted considerable notice at the date of its appearance. For his "Defence of the Black Country," he received the generous recognition of the then British prime minister, the late Earl Derby. His first magazine article appeared in Fraser, in 1852. Mr. Hague is a member of the Victoria Philosophical Institute, k re-

or by

met

arty.

lanc,

 \mathbf{nem} .

ge of

for

and

Dr.

the

nina-

ford,

pped

pro-

rust

king

s at hn's

first

htly

to ved

erts

ess.

rge of

zed aly orom is by ats

 $_{
m Mel}$

Langelier, Francois C. Stanislas, Q.C., LL.D., M.P. for Megantic, Mayor of the City of Quebec, and Bâtonnier of the Bar for the district of Quebec, was born at Ste. Rosalie, Bagot, Province of Quebec, on the 24th December, 1838. He is a son of Captain Louis Sébastien Langelier, by Julie Esther Casault. He is descended on his father's side from Sébastien Langelier, who came to Canada from Fresquienne, near Rouen, France, in 1659. His ancestors settled at Sillery, near Quebec, and afterwards removed to L'Islet. Of this family likewise was the celebrated Bishop Langelier. On the mother's side our subject is descended from the Casaults of Granville, France, and to this family belonged the late L. J. Casault, founder of the Laval Universitý. Young Langelier was educated in classics at St. Hyacinthe College, and in law at Laval University, where he graduated with honours in 1861. He was always a diligent and brilliant student, and it was predicted of him that he would in himself keep alive the honours and the brilliancy which belonged to the distinguished family of which he was sprung. He was called to the bar of Lower Canada in 1861, and appointed a provincial Queen's counsel or in 1878, and a federal in 1880. professional career has been an unexceptionally brilliant and successful one, and he has added to good fortune in his calling the gift, for gift it assuredly is, of being extremely popular with the public, and held in the highest esteem. His talents and literary equipment was perceived by the. directors of Laval University, and on his return from Paris, in 1863, he was appointed professor of civil law and political economy in that institution. He is likewise a member of the Senate of the University. He had likewise been for seven years professor of Roman law. He was secretary of the first colonization society established in Canada, and he has always taken a zealous part on questions intended to promote the growth and development of his native land. He has been president of the Institut Canaadien, and is president of the Quebec, Montmorency and Charlevoix Railway Co. and a director of the St. Lawrence and Temiscouata Railway. In municipal politics he has taken a great deal of interest and was elected mayor of the City of Quebec in 1882, and re-elected in 1884, and at the time of writing holds that-office. He first entered politics in 1873, when he was elected to the Provincial Legislature for Montmagny. He was a member of the Executive Council and Commissioner of Crown Lands from the 8th of March, 1878, and treasurer of the Province of Quebec from March, 1879, till the resignation of the Tory ministry. He is and always has been an uncompromising Liberal or Rouge; but he is a Liberal in the best sense of the term, not being one of those liberals which unscrupulous Tory politicians have declared but too often through Quebec came under the censure of the Roman Catholic Church. It was felt by Mr. Langelier's friends that such brilliant talents as he possessed should have a wider scope than the provincial legislature afforded. He was, therefore, elected to the legislature for Portneuf in 1878. At the last general election in 1881, the Bleu forces were too many for him, and he was defeated. But in 1884, upon Mr. Frechette being unseated by the courts, he stood for Megantic, and was elected, thus achieving the end desired by his admirers-a place in the House of Com-And he has been an honour to the House of Commons. How rapidly Mr. Langelier is coming to the front is the remark made by every one who has kept an eye upon his career. He has splendid abilities, and unquestionably is destined for a com-manding position. Our subject married in 1864 Virginie Marie, daughter of the late I. Légare, Esquire, of Quebec, and sister of the Right Rev. C. E. Légare, V.G., Arch-bishop of Quebec; of R. R. Adolphe Légare, cure of Beauport, and Victor Légare, cure of St. Jean Chrysostom, near Quebec, whose family is connected with that of the late Hon. Legare, Attorney-General of U.S. He has had four children, all of whom are dead. It may be stated that Mr. Langelier has been a frequent contributor to Liberal newspapers in Quebec and elsewhere. He conducted to a successful issue the celebrated Charlevoix election case founded on clerical undue influence. He is and has always been a Roman Catholic, and says he is determined to remain one. Hon. George William, D.C.L., Toronto, Senator, and Chancellor of the University of Trinity College, Toronto, was born at Little York, now Toronto, on the 9th of January, 1822. father, the late Honourable William Allan, was a pioneer settler who took up his abode in York, during Governor Simcoe's term of office, and resided in Toronto till his death This gentleman, in his day, held a very prominent place in public esteem, and being possessed of more than ordinary ability and a good education, he enjoyed advantages not so common in those early days as now. He was the first postmaster for York, and the first Custom Collector for the port. During the war of 1812-15 he served in the militia as lieutenant-colonel, and his son has still in his possession the flags of his old regiment. He figured prominently, too, in commercial life, and was the first president of the Bank of Upper Canada. He also held a seat in the Legislative Council of old Canada for several years, and a seat in the Executive during the administrations of Sir-Francis Bond-Head and Sir George Arthur. Our subject's mother was Leah Tyreer, whose father was Dr. John Gamble, who belonged to a U. E. Loyalist family, and was a surgeon in the Queen's rangers. His corps was raised in Upper Canada after the arrival of Lieutenant-Governor Simcoe. George William was educated by private tuition during his earlier years, and was afterwards sent by his father to Upper Canada College. When the rebellion, headed by William Lyon Mackenzie, broke out in 1837, young Allan, then in his sixteenth year, left U. C. College, and entered as a private "the Bank Rifle Corps," of which the present Chief Justice Hagarty, Judge Galt, and some others still living were also members. He returned to the College at the end of the following year, and remained there until he went up for his examination as a law student which he passed in "the senior class," in Easter term, 1839. He was articled to and began his studies in the office of Messrs. Gamble & Boulton, and was subsequently called to the bar of Upper Canada, in Hilary term, 1846. Before entering upon the active practice of the law, young Allan was sent by his father to travel abroad, and in addition to a very extended tour through. out Europe, he visited many countries which in those days, were not quite as accessible as they are now. He went up the Nile to the borders of Nubia, and afterwards travelled through Syria and the Holy Land. Asia Minor, Turkey and Greece, meeting with not a few exciting adventures, arising more particularly from the lawless and unsettled condition, at that time, of many parts of Syria and Asia Minor. elected, not long afterwards, a fellow of the Royal Geographical Society of England, Mr. Allan early took a part in municipal affairs, his name appearing as one of the aldermen for St. David's Ward in 1849. In 1865 he was elected mayor of the city and served in that capacity throughout the year. In May of 1856, before again leaving Canadà for a lengthened tour abroad, he was presented by his fellow-citizens with a very complimentary address. It was done up in neat book form, and is now a most interesting document, as it contains the signature of men of all ranks, parties and creeds, a large proportion of whom have now passed away. Mr. Allan, in the autumn of 1858, in response to a requisition from the electors of the York division, for which he was returned by a very large majority, and took his seat for that division in the Legislative Council of old Canada, which he retained until confederation. Mr. Allan took a prominent part in the business of the Legislative Council, and filled the office of chairman of the Private Bills Committee in that body for many years. In May, 1867, he was called to the Senate by Royal proclama-

tion,

share

busir

havir

Bills

Stane

merc

years

Allan

the p

his n origin

Instit

dent,

Journ been a

educa

with '

he is r

he rec

the fo

In all

Mr. Al

He is t

artists,

Canada

valuabl

dian ar

ting I

scenery

to horti

has labe

ral Soci

five year and cult

his fello

ject tha

1857, th

subseque

ing the S mention military

always ta

connecte

and is h mental I

honorary

land, Mr.

an active

assemblie

the chair

Bible Soc

In busine

one post o

importanc

chief com

as well as and most

Western (

Rifles.

tion, and has ever since taken an active share in its deliberations, as well as in the business of the Committee of the House. having been chairman, first of the Private Bills Committee, and subsequently of the Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce, which he has now filled for many years. In politics he is a Conservative. Mr. Allan has always taken a deep interest in the promotion of literature and science in his native country. He was one of the original members of the Royal Canadian Institute, and has filled the chair as president, besides being a contributor to the Journal of the Institute. He has always been a warm friend to the cause of higher education, and has been closely connected with Trinity College University (of which he is now the Chancellor, and from which he received his degree of D.C.L.), ever since the founding of that Institution in 1852. In all matters connected with Canadian art, Mr. Allan has ever evinced a lively interest. He is the president of the Ontario Society of artists, and chairman of the Art Union of Canada, and is the possessor of a large and valuable collection of paintings by a Canadian artist, the late Mr. Paul Kane, illustrating Indian life and customs, and the scenery of the great North-West. Attached to horticultural pursuits himself, Mr. Allan has laboured as president of the Horticultural Society of Toronto, for more than twentyfive years, to foster a taste for the study and cultivation of flowers and fruits among his fellow-citizens, and it was with that object that he presented to the Society, in 1857, the five acres of land which, with the subsequent addition made fifteen, now forming the Society's Gardens. As we have already mentioned, Mr. Allan performed his first military duty at a very early age. He has always taken a warm interest in all matters connected with the Volunteers and Militia. and is himself Lieut.-Colonel of the Regimental Division of East Toronto, and an honorary member of the Queen's Own Rifles. A member of the Church of England, Mr. Allan has for many years borne an active part in the Synod and other assemblies of his Church. He has also filled the chair as president of the Upper Canada Bible Society for more than twenty years. In business affairs Mr. Allan fills more than one post of considerable responsibility and importance. He has been for many years chief commissioner of the Canada Company as well as president of one of our largest and most successful loan companies, the Western Canada Loan and Savings Com-

orge

tion

ards

ege.

iam

ung

. C. ank

hief

bme

He

the

l he

stu-

ss,"

l to

ers.

htly

ary

ac-

was gh.

ries

lac-

 $_{
m the}$

rds

nd.

ing

ing

un-

ıny

vas
the
nd.
pal
the
In
nd
ur.
nareng
of ge
y.
eof

pany. While in his twenty-fourth year he married Louisa Maud, third daughter of the late Honourable Sir John Robinson, Bart., C.B., chief justice of Upper Canada, and she died while sojourning at Rome, in 1852. He married again, in 1857, Adelaide Harriet, third daughter of the Rev. T. Schreiber, formerly of Bradwell Lodge, Essex, England, and has a family of six children, three sons and three daughters.

Mills, George Hamilton, of the City of Hamilton, Barrister-at-law and Notary Public, youngest son of the late James Mills, Esquire, was born in the town (now city) of Hamilton, on the 20th November, 1827. His father, James Mills, was born in Philadelphia in 1774, was the son of a U. E. loyalist, and as such entitled to 200 acres of land in Canada. He first came to Canada in 1793, accompanied by the late Hon. John Willson, of Grimsby, at one time Speaker of the Commons. His first occupation in this country was trading with the Indians for furs, which found a fairly good market in the United States. On his first visit to the locality now occupied by the city of Hamilton he found but one white resident, the late Col. Richard Beasley, who was also trading with the Indians. In place of the now well ordered streets he found on the site of Hamilton only an Indian footpath or trail. He permanently settled in the country in 1816, and finally purchased the 200 acres of land, which now forms the western boundary of the city, and upon which young Mills and most of his family were born. The maiden name of the mother of the subject of our sketch was Christina Hesse, whose father, Michael Hesse, came from Germany. His ancestors have held, and still hold, an estate on the Rhine, Germany. Mr. Mills was educated by the Rev. Dean Geddes, and commenced the study of the law in 1846, under articles with Judge Burton. He was called to the bar in 1851, having passed his final under the examination of the late Hon. Robt. Baldwin and the Rt. Hon. Sir J. A. Macdonald, at Osgoode Hall. He married on 14th March, 1854, Frances, daughter of the late Capt. Andrew Deacon, of Picton, Ontario, and granddaughter of the late Thos. Deacon, of the Ordnance department, Kingston, Ont. He was elected alderman for St. George's Ward in 1857, and chosen mayor of the city in 1858. He did not seek re-election to the council, but was, in 1869, again elected, by a large majority, alderman for St. George's Ward. During this year he moved the first resolution having in view the construction of the Hamilton and Lake Erie Railway, and | by forming a committee of leading citizens, in concert with his council committee, the enterprise ripened. Soon after this a charter was then obtained and the road constructed. He was also the first to move in the council a resolution endorsing the construction of the Hamilton and North Western Railway, and pledging municipal support and aid to the undertaking, advocating earnestly, during its early and trying stages, by eloquent speeches and able writing its construction. He was returned as alderman for the years 1870, 1871, 1872, and 1877, holding, during the most of these years, the position of chairman of finance. In 1860 our subject was elected president of the Hamilton Horticultural Society, with the late Judge Logie as vice-president; and was re-elected in 1861, and again in 1869, with John A. Bruce, Esq., as vice-president; and again in This society became the 1874 and 1875. leading floral institution of the Dominion under his presidency. In 1874 he was elected honorary member of it for life and at the same time presented by its members with a handsome silver service. In 1863 he was elected president of the Victoria Mutual Fire Insurance Company, which position he has continuously held to this time. In 1851 he visited Boston as the invited guest of the municipality of that place, on the occasion of the opening of the Ogdensburg and Boston Railway. Mr. Mills was a captain in the Sedentary Militia, when that body was superseded by the present volunteer force. He is a member, and always has been, of the Episcopal Church, and is a Liberal-Conservative, strongly attached to the political principles and doctrines of the late Hon. Robert Baldwin, for whose memory he entertains the highest respect. To Mr. Baldwin's integrity, ability and statesmanship he attributes in a large measure the foundation of our present liberty and prosperity. He believes that the national policy is a patriotic one, and that its continuance, until Canada is prepared for competition with other nations, will help on the foundation of a great nation, which he feels sanguine is the destiny of Canada. Mr. James Mills, father of the subject of our sketch, had ten children, of whom Mr. George H. Mills is the youngest, and the late Senator Samuel Mills the eldest. He has five children, the eldest, Mr. Sydney George Mills, is an officer in the NorthWest Mounted Police, with title of inspector and captain.

Scott, Robert, Galt, the subject of this sketch was born in the town of Galt, Ontario, in 1839. His father, James Scott. a gentleman of sterling character and excellent abilities, removed from Scotland, and settled in Dundas in 1829. Here he married and settled down for a few years, but with happy insight perceived that he would accomplish more by removing to Galt. Thither, therefore, he repaired, and he at once occupied himself in building up a business. He still resides in Galt, and is one of those who can point to his exertions as being among not the least important means through which his adopted town was able to take the proud place that it now holds in the business community of Ontario. The subject of our sketch received a sound common school education; and after his studies were ended, he began to learn the tinsmith trade. In order to make himself master in this business, he removed to Albany, New York, where he spent two years in a prominent and well-equipped establishment, and he removed back to Canada, and pursued his trade for a time in Guelph. Two years there convinced him that the better opportunity for his business existed in Galt, his native town. Consequently he removed there and associated himself in partnership with William Trotter in the stove, tin and hollow-ware business, under the firm of Trotter & Scott. In 1873, after the partnership had existed for ten years, Mr. Scott sold out his interest in the business, and six months afterwards purchased the Victoria Works, and engaged in the manufacture of hubs, spokes, rims, wheels, etc. establishment was afterwards changed to the style of the Victoria Wheel Co., and is now one of the largest factories of that kind in the province of Ontario. After a time Mr. Scott leased the establishment to Messrs. Perry & Cook, and went to the United States, dividing his time between the cities of Detroit, Cleveland, Atalanta, Georgia Tidings had now reached him that his property had been destroyed by fire, so returning home—this was in the fall of . 1882—he rebuilt the factory, and business was resumed, Mr. Scott entering as a partner with the lessees. Many in:luential townsmen, who had learned, during the many years of his residence, to appreciate his ability and manly worth, pressed him to allow himself to be put in nomination for a town-councillorship. To this he consented, and was elected in 1873. He acquitted himself in this position with so much uprightness, ability and zeal for the interests; of the town, that his fellow citizens ther elected him reeve. It was after this time hat to h with 1885 wort self : cent direc Co. ed n In po to res meas to pu say t has b tion count Marga Huro daugh to wh associ

tant w

Depar

born a

Quebe

Go

at the sity, w he grad the de law cle promot As law and effi departi worthy Mr. Ch turn s the tim but on from th his place and the deemed be a m Ennis's upon the World borne by the civing required branches ative. Masshow tion, and efficient pointed

The res

that he went abroad; but on his return to his native town, he was again received with feelings of much satisfaction. 1885 he was elected mayor, and a most worthy chief magistrate has he proven himself to be. In addition to his other promicent business connections, Mr. Scott is a director of the Gore Mutual Fire Insurance Co. In religion he is a staunch and honoured member of the Methodist communion. In politics he is a Reformer, liberal enough to regard with just appreciation all the good measures of his opponents, and true enough to put it in no man's power to be able to say that his principles ever wavered. He has been treasurer of the Reform Association for the South Riding of Waterloo county. Mr. Scott was married in 1876 to Margaret White, of Seaforth, County of Huron, and by this estimable lady has two daughters and one son. He is one of those to whom the community, with whom he is associated, must always be in many important ways deeply indebted.

Scott,

excel-

, and mars, but would

Galt.

he at

busi-

s one

ns as neans

ble to lds in

The

com-

udies

mith

ter in

New

pro-

nent,

pur-

Two

etter

Galt.

oved

tner-

e, tin

m of

tner-

Scott

d six

toria

e of

This

d to nd is kind

time

5378.

ited

ities

rgia

his

, so l of

ness

arttial

the

iate

n to

or a

ted,

tted

up-

hên

me

Gobeil, Antoine, Secretary of the Department of Public Works, Ottawa, was born at St. Jean Ile d'Orleans, Province of Quebec, in the year 1853. He was educated at the Quebec Seminary and Laval University, where, after a brilliant course of study, he graduated in law. In 1872 he entered the department of Public Works, and was law clerk of the department, from 1879 until promoted to the position which he now holds. As law clerk, it may be said, he was quick and efficient, and the administrator of the department saw in him an efficient officer, worthy of promotion should a vacancy occur. Mr. Chapleau and Mr. Ennis were each in turn secretaries of Public Works during the time that Mr. Gobeil was law clerk, but on Mr. Chapleau having been removed from the office, Mr. Ennis was appointed in his place. In 1885 the latter gentleman died, and the clever law clerk, Mr. Gobeil, was deemed by the heads of the department to be a man eminently qualified to fill Mr. Ennis's place, and he was accordingly appointed to perform the duties of secretary. The responsibility and the cares resting upon the shoulders of the secretary of Pub-

Works, are perhaps greater than those borne by any other subordinate officer in the civil service. Unceasing vigilance is required, and a familiarity with a thousand branches of public administration is imperative. Mr. Gobeil, though not long in office, has shown himself to be master of the situation, and he promises to be one of the most efficient secretaries of which the Public Works has ever been able to boast. He married in 1877 Miss B. Gingras.

Henderson, William, Toronto, the subject of this sketch, was born in the parish of Halkirk, in the County of Caithness, Scotland. His father was a farmer there; but gave his son the benefits which education confers, sending him to schools at Thurso and Wick. In 1833 numbers of persons were emigrating to the new world to seek their fortunes, and among the number was William Henderson, who on his arrival settled in Toronto, where his quick business perceptions, his good judgment and intelligence soon gave him a prominent citizenship. He was troublous times of 1837 to be in the melee, destined in the and was found in the city guards aiding in restoring order and maintaining the law. Always taking a broad and intelligent view of civic affairs and public matters generally, he came to be recognized as one who should be in a legislative sphere. So toward 1855 a number of his friends asked him to allow himself to be nominated for the City Council. He consented, and was elected to the council for 1855 and 1856, and while in the Council he acted as chairman of the Committee on Fire, Water and Gas, and got introduced and carried the first by-law creating a paid fire brigade. Possessed of a high sense of fairness, and having a character of high integrity, he was appointed a justice of the peace, and in that position now is often actively engaged, and gives eminent satisfaction as an administrator of justice. Mr. Henderson has been active in divers ways. His sympathies are large, and he has been prominent in the promotion of various measures of public and social utility. In 1859 he was president of St. Andrew's Society, but never attached himself to any secret society. In religion he is a staunch and honoured member of the Presbyterian Church. In politics he has supported the policy propounded by the old reformers, and so ably carried on by Mr. George Brown, Mr. Alexander Mackenzie and the other liberal leaders, In 1840 he married Miss Wilhelmina Munro Sinclair. He is at present manager of the Hartford Fire Insurance Company, of Hartford, Connecticut, for the Dominion of Canada.

Montcalm, Louis Joseph de Saint Veran, Marquis of, was the descendant of a noble French family, and was born near Nimes in 1712. At the age of fourteen he entered the army, and served in Italy as early as 1734. In 1756, he being then brigadier-general, was appointed to the military command in Canada. Reaching this country in May, he at once began his campaign, and singular success waited on his arms. He carried Fort Oswego, and the following year Fort William Henry surrendered. The harvest now failed in Canada, and Montcalm's soldiers were undisciplined Canadian volunteers, while the enemy was the best British stuff, thoroughly organized, and it may be said, bred to arms. Montcalm appealed to France for food supplies, but the French government were loth to expose much value afloat to the fangs of the English cruisers that infested the northern Atlantic waters. "Notwithstanding these disadvantages," says a writer, "he held his ground firmly, when, in the campaign of 1758, the English under Abercrombie, marched from the south toward the French dominions. Montcalm occupied the strong position of Ticonderago, made it still stronger by entrenchments, in constructing which he worked with the common soldiers, and, at the head of about three thousand six hundred men, awaited the attack of over fifteen thousand. After a fierce battle, which lasted four hours (July 8, 1758), the British retreated in disorder. The personal bravery which Montcalm had evinced, increased his popularity among his soldiers; and it is believed by many, that if he had received timely reinforcements, he could have maintained the supremacy of the French in North America, or held out for a much longer period; but the want of energy on the part of the home government, the scarcity of food all over New France, and personal dissensions between the governor and the military commander, forbade him to look for much assistance; and in the midst of victory he expressed his conviction that in a few months the English would be masters of the French colonies in America. Resolved, however, to struggle to the last, and, as he himself said, 'to find his grave under the ruins of the colony,' he actively prepared for the campaign of 1759. The English, on the other side, spared no exertions to make their conquest sure; troops were sent from Europe, the colonial regiments were thoroughly re-organized, and a strong fleet was to co-operate with the land forces. While Amherst and Prideaux were manœuvering to dislodge the French from their posts in the vicinity of Kingston, General Wolfe, at the head of eight thousand chosen troops, supported by the fleet in the St. Lawrence, presented himself before Quebec. The success of the whole campaign, or more properly the conquest of Canada, depended upon the taking of that city; and to protect it, Montcalm had concentrated his principal forces on the banks of the Montmorenci river. Being attacked in front by Wolfe, on July 31, he repelled him with considerable loss. Wolfe then changed his plans; he prudently landed his troops by night on the left bank of the St. Lawrence, above Quebec, climbed the table land that overhangs the city, and on the morning of 13th September, appeared with his whole force on the heights of Abraham, in the rear of the French army. Montcalm flew at once to oppose his advance, and by ten o'clock the two armies, nearly equal in numbers, each having fewer than five thous. and men, were drawn up in front of one another. Montcalm led the attack in person, but his troops soon broke before the deadly fire and unflinching front of the British; and when Wolfe, placing himself at the head of the 28th and the Louisbourgh Grenadiers, gave the order to charge with bayonets, the French fled in every direction. The gallant British general fell in the moment of triumph. Montcalm, having received one musket ball earlier in the action. was mortally wounded while attempting to rally a body of fugitive Canadians, a few moments after Wolfe was borne from the field. On being told that his death was near: 'So much the better,' he said, 'I shall not live to see the surrender of Quebec.' He died next morning; and his death was followed by the loss of all Canada, 'where his career,' as Bancroft observes, 'had been a wonderful struggle against inexorable destiny.' He was buried in the Ursuline Convent, on Garden street, Que-A public monument to the memory of both Wolfe and Montcalm was erected at Quebec in 1827, chiefly through the influence of the Earl of Dalhousie, then governor-general of Canada."

Booker, William Davis, Hamilton, the gentleman selected to form the subject of this sketch, comes of good old English stock, and was born on March 10th, 1828, at Nottingham, England. His father was the Rev. Alfred Booker, of the Baptist communion. He was a manufacturer of lace in England, but was meanwhile connected pastorally with his church. For a time he carried on business as an importer of lace at Montreal, and thence removed to Hamilton, where he continued in similar business for about six years. In December, 1843, he organized the Park Street Baptist church, of which he was ordained the first pastor, and retained the charge till his death, y w of an w] В or Fi Ba you is t cia Bo Eng beiı At : ary fath he d and year rema then now ing] from town ber, and of Mo pally throu Canad resolv tinued up. tary a Fire I tinues at one tary m ensign

He joi

the yea

membe

staunch treal or stituent

when or deacon,

the char

gious ho

He has !

ant sup

n

which occurred in 1857. It is hardly necessary to refer to the cause of his death, for thousands remember it. He was a victim in the terrible Desjardins Canal accident. Our subject's mother was Sophia, nee Varnum she had been an orphan from early years. She was a very pious and worthy woman, and died in 1845. The subject of our sketch is one of a family of eight; and is a brother of the late Col. Booker, who at one time commanded the 13th Battalion at Hamilton, and was also the organizer and commander of the Hamilton Field Battery; and of the Rev. T. Booker, Baptist minister in Mount Forest. youngest sister, who was born in Montreal, is the wife of Dr. Reid, a well-known physician and surgeon in that city. William Davis Booker received a sound and comprehensive English education, the place of his studies being the Nottingham Grammar School. At school he exhibited diligence and ordinary ability. He remained at school till his father decided to remove to Canada, which he did in the summer of 1842, arriving duly and settling, in the autumn of the same year, in Montreal It may be said that he remained in Montreal until May, 1843, and then removed to Hamilton. William was now engaged assisting his father in selling lace goods wholesale, and in travelling from Montreal to Sandwich through all the towns and villages on the way. In September, 1846, he retired from this occupation and became traveller for the foundry firm of McQuesten & Co, and he travelled, principally on horseback, for some eighteen years through all the settled parts of Western Canada, west of Belleville. At last this firm resolved to give up business, and he continued with it until everything was closed up. In August, 1865, he became secretary and treasurer of the Victoria Mutual Fire Insurance Company, and still continues in that same position. Mr. Booker at one time took much interest in military matters, and held the commissions of ensign and lieutenant in the old militia. He joined the Sons of Temperance about the year 1850, and six years later became a member of St. George's Society. He is a staunch Baptist, and was baptized in Montreal on January 7, 1843. He was a constituent member of the Park Street Church when organized in 1843; became trustee and deacon, continuing in the same position after the change of location to the present religious home, the James Street Baptist Church. He has likewise been for many years assistant superintendent of the Sunday school.

tha:

con-

anks

cked

elled

then

d his

e St.

table

the

with

nam.

calm

d by

l in

ous-

one

per-

the

the

self

irgh

vith

ion.

mo-

re-

on.

to to feπ

the

vas

٠I

his

in-

In politics he has been all his life a Reformer, but he once voted for Sir Allan MacNab, because he believed that he would. though a Tory, make a better representative of the city than his Reform opponent. He married in July, 1853, Sarah Field Goodenough, then residing with her father, Mr. John Goodenough, a retired officer of the Coastguard, Devonshire, England, at Kincardine, County of Bruce. He has a family of six children. The eldest, Mr. William Booker, is foreman of a large cattle ranche in Wyoming Territory. The other three young men are employed in different places in the city of Hamilton; and Helen, the eldest daughter, is married to Mr. George A. Crite, of the Star Auger Company, Hamilton.

Woods, Michael Joseph, Toronto, the subject of this sketch, was born near the town of Ballymahon, County Longford, Ireland, in the year 1847. His parents were James and Ellen Woods, who, in 1850, came to Canada, settling in Toronto; and subsequently engaged in farming. Mr. Woods was educated in Toronto, and received a common school education. After leaving school he had a great desire for painting, but not being able to satisfy his inclination, he entered as an employee of Mr. John Mallon, This was in the year 1865; somewhat later he entered into partnership with Mr. Mallon, who was a butcher. The firm carried on business with much success and popularity in the St. Lawrence Market. In 1871 Mr. Woods set sail for England, forming a connection in that country for the sale of cured meats. He was successful in his mission. and established agencies at Liverpool and Glasgow. During this visit he travelled through the principal cities of Great Britain and Ireland. It may be said that Mr. Woods was one of the first to consider the idea of shipping live stock to the markets of Great Britain. In 1881 he was chosen councillor for the village of Brockton at that time a suburb of Toronto. This office he held till 1884 when the village was amalgamated with the corporation of Toronto. In the same year he was chosen as alderman for the city of Toronto, and in that position has exhibited zeal and conspicuous intelligence in the discharge of his duties. In 1885, valuing his services, his constituents re-elected him. In religion Mr. Woods is a Roman Catholic; in politics he favours the policy of Mr. Blake and other liberals. 1881 he joined a syndicate whose object was the exportation of cattle to England, and during the time that he was engaged in this business he shipped no fewer than 15,000 head of cattle. However, owing to the rapid increase of his business in other directions, he was obliged to sever his connection with the company. In 1882 he was offered a justiceship of the peace, but here again the pressure of his extensive business interfered and he was obliged to decline the offer. Mr. Woods takes a great interest in our national game, lacrosse, and is an honorary member of the Ontario Lacrosse club, of which Mr. D. A. Rose is captain. his political methods are will be seen from the following extract taken from a card of his issued in the year 1885 to the electors of St. Mark's Ward :- "The ratepayers of your ward having always very kindly on former occasions placed enough confidence in me to elect me without any exertion on my part whatever; should that confidence still continue, I will, as heretofore, without making any rash promises, do all in my power for the best interest of the ward. therefore, take this opportunity of letting my friends know that I am a candidate. have scruples against making a personal canvass, for in my opinion candidates should be elected purely on their merits, and not through solicitations, as I am sorry to say is the case in many of the city wards."

Oliver, John Duggan, Toronto, of the well-known firm of Oliver, Coate & Co., of Toronto, was born in Hamilton, on the 31st May, 1847. His father was Stephen Oliver, at one time Sheriff of Hamilton, and his mother's maiden name was Duggan. Our subject's father came to Canada about the year 1812, settling in Hamilton. Margaret Duggan (his wife) was a daughter of the late Col. Duggan, of the British army, and sister of the late Judge Duggan, of Toronto. Mr. Stephen Oliver had ten children, the subject of this sketch being the youngest son. John Duggan Oliver received a sound commercial education, and concluded his studies at Upper Canada College, at the age of sixteen. He then entered the employ of E. M. Carruthers, forwarding agent and wharfinger, where he remained for two years. He next entered the wholesale house of Messrs. Moffatt, Murray & Co., and served a three-year apprenticeship at the business of the firm. At the age of twenty-one he entered the employ of Messrs. Wakefield, Coate & Co., auctioneers and commission merchants. This it may be said was the oldest firm of auctioneers in Canada, it having existed from 1834 to 1868. In the latter year Mr. Wakefield retired, and Mr. Oliver took the vacant place, having purchased his interest, when the firm charged its name to F. W. Coate & Co. In 1880, Mr. Coate retired, and the firm is still known as Oliver, Coate & Co., although Mr. Oliver is the sole proprietor. The popular name of this widely-known establishment is Since the business came exclusively into Mr. Oliver's hands he has greatly enlarged the premises. The length of this handsome place is now 240 feet, with a ceiling 25 feet high, and the result is that the room is one of the most magnificent in the dominion. The business, we might say, consists of auctioneering, commission, valuation, dealings in real estate, finance agency. Besides the splendid business that comes to the Mart from the public, the proprietor is official auctioneer for the Court of Chancery, and for Lloyds. Mr. Oliver has in the main confined himself to his business, but he is a man of large public spirit never. theless. He is a captain in the Reserve Militia, of which C. S. Gzowski is colonel. He is a member of the Church of England, and for seven years was warden of St. Ste. phen's Church, Toronto. He married, in September, 1870, Miss Elizabeth A. Coate, only daughter of F. W. Coate, ex-alderman of Toronto, and now resident in Rosseau, Muskoka district. By this union our subiect has a family of six children living. He has travelled through the United States, partly for recreation, and somewhat for business. Mr. Oliver, it would not be superfluous to say, has more than usual business capacity and a sound judgment, a sharp. quick penetration. He doos not concern himself much with politics, but he is an adherent of the cause of Canadian Conservatism. Mr. Oliver's appearance indicates his

Pollard, Dr. Stephen B.—Stephen Ballard Pollard, M. B., was born on May 11th, 1846, in the Township of Toronto, County of Peel. His parents were Joshua Pollard, who married Miss Mariah Hill. Mr. Joshua Pollard was a life long Reformer, and was one of the patriotic spirits who gathered under the banner of William Lyon McKenzie, in the stormy years of 1837-38. Mr. Pollard always credited Mr. Wm. Lyon McKenzie with laying the foundation of freedom and justice in Canada. Our subject was educated first in the district school at home; then in the Oakville County Grammar Schood, and subsequently in the Toronto School of Medicine. He graduated in medicine in the University of Toronto in 1869, since which time he has been in constant practice. He spent his first tool

He
which asha answ marr
Corn
Corn
boar

A

86

V

m

C

is

So

liv

act

of

He

ne

Baj

the

any

sen

Polla can con He h to be Ste ilton,

for his own born lage of father trade, Brierw life so but he two years in the County of Elgin, and then removed to Toronto. He has always been of a joyful disposition, but has never been given to excesses of any sort. His experiences of early life were of the most pleasant nature. He had kind indulgent parents, who were nevertheless firm when occasion required. The home fireside was always a happy desirable place. He has never evinced any taste for military affairs; and has never held any public office, nor been connected with any public enterprises. He joined the Orange Association in November, 1875, and has held several offices in the lodge, and is at present master. He joined the Masonic order in December, 1875, and has held various offices, and is a past master. He joined the A. O.U.W. in January, 1880, and was master of the lodge for two or three years. He is now a Past District Deputy Grande Master for York District. He united himself with the Select Knights of the A.O.U. W. in January, 1884, and is at present Commander of his Legion, and Deputy Grand Commander of the Grand Legion of Ontario; is President of Lodge Windsor, No. 35, Sons of England Benevolent Society. When living in St. Andrew's Ward, he was an active member of the Reform Association of the ward, being chairman one year. He has attended various churches, but never joined one. He is inclined to the Baptist belief, which in his opinion is nearer the true, eternal and primitive religion than any other form of worship. He is at present politically the same as when he first took any part in the affairs of the country. He is a reformer or grit, and does not know which term he likes best, but he is not ashamed of either, and is always ready to answer the call in either name. He was married on July 1st, 1874, to Margaret Cornnell, eldest daughter of the late John Cornnell, brewer, who sat at the aldermanic board of Toronto, for St. Andrew's Ward for several years. In private life Dr. Pollard is sunny-hearted and kind, and he can count hosts of devoted personal friends. He has an extensive practice, and is judged to be a most capable physician.

firm

o. In

s still

h Mr.

pular

ent is exclu-

reatly

f this

vith a

that

ent in

t say,

valu-

ency,

that

e pro-

urt of

r has

iness,

ever-

serve

lonel.

land,

Ste-

d, in oate.

rman

seau,

sub-

ates,

t for

aper-

iness

harp.

cern

n ad-

rvat-

s his

ohen

May

nto,

shua Hill.

Re

irits

liam

s of

Mr.

the

Can-

the

bse-

ne.

sity

Stevenson, James, Alderman, Hamilton, one of those men who has carved out his own way in life with much success, was born on the 11th March. 1826, in the village of Sedgley, Staffordshire, England. His father was Joseph Stevenson, a currier by trade, and his mother was Martha, nee Brietwood. Joseph Stevenson led a quiet life so far as his business was concerned, but he was a very intelligent and patriotic

He took a good deal of interest man. always in military matters, and belonged to one of the South Staffordshire regiments. He died in 1830. His son, the subject of this sketch, received the ordinary education that falls to boys at the common schools; and when he had entered into his eleventh year he was apprenticed to the trade of engine building, etc. He spent eight years at this business; and then, shouldering his pack, left his native village and proceeded to Birmingham. Here he plied his trade as a journeyman for some time; but, in 1850 he made up his mind that the new world held out brighter prospects for the work of his hands than the old. So he sailed for America, and stationed himself in Philadelphia, obtaining employment in the Baldwin Locomotive Works. In 1854 he packed up his worldly goods and departed for Canada, taking up his abode in Hamilton, then a small enough town, yet displaying the enterprise and push which afterwards gave to her the name of "the ambitious city." He obtained the responsible position of foreman in the locomotive department of the Great Western Railway, and held this position till 1876, when he entered into public life. He now began to concern himself with public questions, and chiefly with subjects of civil concern. Estimating at its proper value his capacity for municipal business, a number of townsfolk pressed Mr. Stevenson to put himself in nomination for a seat in the council, which he did, and in January, 1877, he was elected alderman for No. 4 Ward. He has been re-elected for the same ward every year since, and enjoys the respect and unshaken confidence of his constituents. In 1879 he was elected chairman of the Water Works Committee; and this important office he holds up to the present date. In 1857 Mr. Stevenson was director and shareholder in the Hamilton Industrial Building Society; and he subsequently became president of the same institution. office he held till the affairs of the company were wound up in 1869. He was also president of the Equitable Building and Loan Society, which discontinued business in 1871. Our subject has been a somewhat extensive traveller. He has visited the chief places in the United States and in Canada; and he has crossed the ocean to pay a visit to his native land. He was reared in the Episcopal faith, but as he advanced in life the doctrines of that church grew less acceptable and he became a Methodist. In Dominion politics he is a Conservative, and takes an unusual interest in the affairs of his party. He has been vice-president of the Conservative Association in Ward No. 4. He married on the 1st of July, 1861, Mrs. Rachel Harper, relict of the late Thomas Harper, and has no family. Mr. Stevenson is a gentleman of courteous and attractive manner. We may add that at the time of the Desjardins Canal accident Mr. Stevenson was one of the first persons upon the ill-fated scene and his assistance was most valuable and warmly remembered after that terrible accident. At the time of the Trent affair he organized a company of volunteers, but their services were not required, and it was disbanded after the excitement had ended.

Henry, Robert, Brantford, ex-Mayor of the City of Brantford, was born in Perthshire, Scotland, on November 30th, 1844. He is a son of John Henry, a contractor, and his mother, Jane, nee Dow, both being Our subject was educated in the parish schools of Perthshire until he reached his ninth year. Then, in 1853, he came with the family to Ontario, and finished his studies in the Brantford public schools. his twelfth year he entered the employ of Andrew Hudson, stationer, and in this employ remained for three years. He then became an apprentice to the grocery business with R. C. Allan. In 1862 our subject entered the warehouse of Charles Watts, the leading wholesale grocer in Brantford; and on the demise of Mr. Watts, in 1868, he became manager for Alfred Watts, the son of his former employer, who bought out the business. Mr. Henry held the position until 1871, when he became a partner. The firm was now known as A. Watts & Co., wholesale grocers. This firm also owns the Brantford soap works, the largest in the Dominion. The wholesale and manufactory, combined, embrace a very large business. The character of the firm stands the very highest, and its business relations extend throughout every province in the Dominion. Henry has held many positions of trust and responsibility during his career in Brantford. He has been president of the St. Andrew's Society, of the Caledonia Society, of the South Brant Agricultural Association, of the Telegram Printing Company, of the Liberal Conservative Association, and has been for two years past the president of the Brantford Board of Trade. He at one time was, for three years, a member of the High School Board. He has also been a director of the Brantford Young Ladies' College, since its establishment; and he takes a very active part in the municipal affairs of the city, having been elected to the council for the representation of the North Ward in 1876. Mr. Henry was elected to the mayor's chair in 1878 by a large majority, and was the first mayor of Brantford after its inauguration as a city. He was elected by acclama. tion in 1879, and offered the position a third During his term of time, but declined. office as chief magistrate the Lorne bridge across the Grand River was built, and is one of the best roadway bridges in Canada. Mr. Henry has always been an indefatigable worker in the interest of the city and county. In politics he is a Liberal Conservative; in religion a Presbyterian, and is a member of Zion Presbyterian church. He married Carrie E. Philip in December, 1879. daughter of the late Anthony Philip, and grand-daughter of the Rev. Dr. Buchanan, of Edinburgh, Scotland. He has three children. Mr. Henry is courteous and kindly-hearted, and is very popular with all classes of the people.

la

0

la

o

ca

th

ve

wa

800

pre

of

Tri

was

bui

was

greg

lar_

the

and

In J

and

Met

build

purc

at h

there

adver

a Uni

Passi

ed be then i

to Tor

morni

At the

he rec

organi

done-

First

having

During

Cordne

gregatio

by othe

consequ

rom all

Cordner, Rev. John, LL.D.—This eloquent and learned divine, who, for over thirty years occupied a prominent position among the clergy of the City of Montreal, was born July 3rd, 1816, in the parish of Hillsborough, County of Down, Ireland. By the removal of his parents, during his infancy, to Newry, in the same county, he passed his boyhood and early manhood in that town, receiving such education there as the best local schools afforded. His start in life was in a business direction, but this was given up for study and training, with a view to the Christian ministry, as more in harmony with his feeling and the tendency of his mind. Brought up in the First (Unitarian) Presbyterian congregation of Newry, in connection with the Remonstrant Synod of Ulster, his studies were carried on under the direction of that body, at the Royal College, Belfast. Licensed by the Remonstrant Presbytery of Bangor, he was ordained in September, 1843, at a special meeting of that Presbytery, held in Belfast, to the charge of the Unitarian congregation of Montreal, Canada. That congregation had been formed in the previous year, but had not as yet been provided with a church edifice or regularly ordained minister. Mr. Cordner's call to the ministerial charge of the congregation of Montreal came through an application from Montreal made early in 1843, to the Rev. Dr. Montgomery, one of the professors in connection with the College at Belfast. Dr. Montgomery was requested to recommend a suitable young man to take charge of the newly-formed congregation. Mr. Cordner's name was forwarded, and in due time a call came from Montreal, signed by John Young, L. H. Holton, Benjamin Workman, Thomas Workman, and fifteen others. In response to this call Mr. Cordner left Ireland for America, and after visiting New York and Boston, arrived at Montreal on Saturday, November 4th, 1843, and preached his first sermon to his congregation on the following day. The place of meeting was in a private house, where Sunday services continued to be held until a church was built. A lot of land having been secured for this purpose on Beaver Hall Hill, the foundations were laid early in 1844, and the church was opened and dedicated in 1845. As an indication of the state of feeling in Montreal at that period, it may be mentioned that the vendors of the land on which the church was built hesitated to give a deed to a society of Unitarians, on the ground of its presumed doubtful legality in consequence of heresy in denying the doctrine of the Trinity. This technical difficulty, however, was easily overcome, and a church was built without delay. In 1857 the church was found too small for the increasing congregation, when it was taken down, and a larger building erected on the same sitethe same building that now stands there, and is known as the Church of the Messiah. In July, 1845, Dr. Cordner visited Toronto, and preached in a church just vacated by Methodists, who had removed to a larger The vacated church had been building. purchased by a Unitarian friend and placed at his disposal for Sunday services; and there, to a congregation gathered by public advertisement, the first Sunday service by a Unitarian minister, was held in Toronto. Passing from Toronto to Oshawa, he preached before the Canada Christian Conference, then in session at that place, and returning to Toronto, he held Sunday services there, morning and evening, for the second time. At the close of the second Sunday meeting he recommended the friends assembled to organise a worshipping society, which was done—the same which now exists as the First Unitarian congregation of Toronto, having its church edifice on Jarvis street. During a period of thirty years or so Dr. Cordner had undivided charge of the congregation at Montreal; then it was shared by others for a few years, after which, in onsequence of failing strength, he retired rom all ministerial responsibilities, still rey ac-

city,

r the 1876.

chair

s the

gura,

ama-

third

m of

ridge

nd is

nada.

gable

and

Con-

nd is

h 879.

He

and

anan.

three

and

h all

-This

0727 ition

real.

sh of

and.

g his y, he d in here

His

but

ing,

y, as

the

the

tion

non-

were ody, d by , he

at a 1 in

con-

con-

ous

with

ame

taining, however, at the special request of the congregation, a titular connection as Honorary Pastor or Pastor Emeritus. On resigning his ministerial responsibilities in Montreal, he removed with his family to Boston, Mass., where he now resides. active ministerial and public life of Dr. Cordner was passed in Montreal. His interest in public matters was shown by his frequent contributions to the newspapers, editorial and otherwise. In 1844 he issued the "Bible Christian" as a monthly publication, mainly for the purpose of removing misapprehension concerning Unitarian views of religion, and giving the general public a better opportunity for understanding the grounds of Unitarian Christianity. end of six years, having fulfilled its purpose, it was discontinued. In 1854, however, again finding the need of some organ of expression through the press, he published a mouthly journal called the "Liberal Christian," and carried it on for five years longer. In November, 1868, he presented his congregation with a volume of "Twentyfive Sermons," as a memorial of his twentyfive years' ministry among them. He is, besides, the author of pamphlets and tracts, several of which have been reprinted elsewhere-notably one on the "American Conflict," which was reprinted in England and extensively circulated there during the civil war in the United States. He took an active part in securing Mount Royal Cemetery as a burial place for the Protestant population of Montreal, and was also one of the originators and corporators of the Protestant House of Industry and Refuge in that city. Dr. Cordner was married in October, 1852, to Caroline H., daughter of the Rev. Dr. Francis Parkman, of Boston, Mass. His family consists of two daughters.

White, William, Secretary of the Post Office Department, Ottawa, a Justice of the Peace for the County of Carleton, and Lieutenant-Colonel, of the 43rd Battalion of Canada Militia, was born in London, England, January 6th, 1830. His father, whose christian name was the same as his own (as was also that of his grandfather), died when our subject was barely ten years His mother came to Canada in 1861. and died in 1882, in the 85th year of her age. His father's family have for many generations been settled in Devonshire, where the even tenor of their lives seems to have been but rarely disturbed. Our subject was educated at a private school near London, England, and shortly after leaving school he was appointed (19th February, 1846), to the English Civil Service as a clerk in the General Post Office, St. Martin's le Grand. This appointment he resigned in April, 1854, in which year he came to Canada. He remained at Goderich, in Western Ontario, during the summer of 1854, and in November of that year, entered the Civil Service of Canada as chief clerk in the money order branch of the Post Office department. This position he retained until Jan., 1861, when he was promoted to the secretaryship of the depart-He was gazetted a lieutenant in the 3rd Battalion of Toronto militia on 31st March, 1859, and transferred to the unattached list on the 18th May, 1860. At the time of the Trent affair in 1861, he joined the Civil Service Rifle Company, and served as a non-commissioned officer in that company, until the formation of the Civil Service Rifle Regiment. He commanded a company in that regiment (commission as captain, dated 21st Sept., 1866), until it was disbanded in Dec., 1868. was appointed to the command of an independent rifle company on the 23rd July, 1869, and promoted to the rank of brevet major, 25th Jan., 1872. On the organization of the Governor-General's Foot Guards in 1872, his company became No. 1 company of the Guards, in which regiment he was appointed senior major on the 20th Sept., 1872. He was promoted to the rank of lieut.-colonel, by brevet, 25th Jan., 1877, and was transferred from the Foot Guards to the 43rd Battalion as lieut.-colonel, on the re-organization of the 43rd Ottawa and Carleton rifles, on the 5th Aug., 1881. He commanded the Canadian team at Wimbledon, in 1884, on which occasion the team won the Kolapore cup. He has likewise been president of the Ottawa Athenæum and Mechanics' Institute, secretary of the Ottawa Natural History Society, and president of the Ottawa Field Naturalists' Club. Col. White was appointed in June, 1880, a member of the Royal Commission to enquire into the Civil Service of Canada. He has never taken an active part in politics, and cannot be said to belong to either of the two great political parties. He married at St. George's, Hanover Square, London, on 1st Oct., 1853, Elizabeth, daughter of George Keen, of Lambeth. He has had six sons, two of whom were drowned, and one daughter. Colonel White is said by those, whose testimony we must accept, to be at once one of the most popular and most efficient officers in the public service. In him is most happily united personal courtesy and official zeal.

Osgoode, Honourable Chief Justice, was born on March, 1754. in his fifteenth year he was admitted as a commoner of Christ College, Oxford, whence he graduated M.A. in July, 1777. He was admitted at Lincoln's Inn, and became a student in the Inner Temple in 1773. Mr. Osgoode's family had limited means, so the young man applied himself with assiduity to his profession. In 1779 he published a tract in 4to, entitled "Remarks on the Laws of Descent, and the Reasons Assigned by Mr. Justice Blackstone for Rejecting, in his Table of Descent, a Point of Doctrine laid down by Plowdson, Lord Bacon and Hale." This long-winded and proclamation-like title, did not take away from the value of the work, which was said to be both learned and judicious. At the bar Mr. Osgoode was not conspicuous for fluency or any other oratorical gift; he spoke slowly-almost painfully-but with extreme care, using such words as exactly conveyed his meaning. His talent was soon recognized, and when, in 1789, the province of Upper Canada was established, he was appointed chief justice. He sailed for Canada in April, 1792, in the same ship with General Simcoe, the Lieutenant-Gov-There was much confusion in the ernor. court when the chief justice came, but his clear, concise and methodical intellect soon created order; while the soundness of his judgments, and the unbending integrity of his character won for him universal esteem. In 1794 he was appointed likewise to the chief justiceship of Quebec, where he won the same high esteem which was bestowed on him in Upper Canada. In Quebeche formed an attachment for a very fascinating lady, but it appears that she did not return the devotion of the chief justice. With his private hopes wrecked, he, therefore, resolved to quit the country, the theatre of fond dreams and bitter disappointment. His friends said that he had grown lonely, separated from his English friends, and this it was that induced him to return. In 1801 he resigned his office and returned to Eng land on his official pension. This, together with his own property, was considerable. So after a short residence at the Temple he purchased a sumptuous set of apartments in Albany House. He there lived, in the enjoyment of society, universally esteemed, and never tempted from his resolution of remaining free from office, except in the case of two or three temporary commissions of a legal nature; which, from a conviction of his qualifications and integrity, were in a manner forced upon him. In these he was

d

in

w. la

To

Ch

Co

at

Do

Gr

me

ton

and

Sco

stu

of ·

teri

ing

cant

atte

ther

sequ

at th

theo

Chal

colle

Edin

he w byter

88 a

Com

labou

confi

ton]

1847, minis

now

this (

1857,

to be

which

years,

tor of

lecture

lege, a

the M

the firs

joined with Sir William Grant, and other great ornaments of the law. The last of them, which was for examining into the fees of office in the courts of law (in which he was united with the then accountantgeneral, and lord chief baron) was nearly brought to a conclusion at the time of his death. His health had generally been good till within a few years of this time, when he began to be an occasional sufferer from fits of the stone. The sorrow of his love disappointment in Quebec always remained with him, and he never married. He died in Albany House on January 17th, 1824. It was his name that was given to the seat of

T 115-

Nhen-

as a

ence

He

be-

773.

eans,

with

O he arks

asons

for Point

Lord

and away said

t the

в for

; he

with

activ

was

the

hed.

ailed

ship

Gov-

the

his

soon E his

y of

eem.

the

won

wed

c he ting

turn

lved

fond

His

iely.

this

1801

Eng

ther

ble.

ents

ion

n a

was his name that was given to the seat of law, Osgoode Hall, in Toronto.

Gregg, Rev. William, M.A., D.D., Toronto, Professor of Apologetics and Church History at Knox (Presbyterian) College, was born on the 5th of July, 1817, at Killycreen, near Ramelton, County Donegal, Ireland. He is a son of Daniel Gregg, who was for many years a ruling member in the Presbyterian Church, Ramelton. His mother was Jane, nee Graham, and the ancestors of both parents were Scotch. Our subject pursued his early studies in the classical school, Ramelton, of which the Rev. Edward Reid, Presbyterian minister, was principal. After leaving this school, he spent some years in mercantile and banking business, and then attended Glasgow College, and graduated therefrom with the B.A. degree. sequently attended Edinburgh College, and at that institution obtained his M.A. His theological course was conducted under Drs. Chalmers, Welsh, and Cunningham, in the college of the Free Presbyterian Church, Edinburgh. On the 13th February, 1846, he was licensed by the Free Church Presbytery, and immediately afterwards sent as a missionary to Canada, by the Colonial Committee of the Free Church. His labours for the first year in Canada were confined within the bounds of the Kingston Presbytery; and on the 22nd June, 1847, he was ordained and appointed minister of the congregation in Belleville, now known as John Street Church. this church he remained pastor till July, 1857, when he was translated to Toronto, to become pastor of Cooke's Church, of which he retained the charge for fifteen years, namely, till July, 1872. While pas-tor of Cooke's Church, he was appointed lecturer in apologetics (1864) in Knox College, and taught the theological classes inthe Montreal Presbyterian College during stitution (1867). He was likewise moderator of the Presbyterian Church of Canada. usually called the Free Church, in 1861, when the union was effected between this church and the United Presbyterian Church of Canada. In 1872 he was appointed professor of apologetics in Knox College, and still occupies that chair. He likewise conducts the classes of church history. In 1878 he obtained the degree of D.D. from the University of Hanover, U.S. Dr. Gregg has given much of his attention to worthy moral movements, and he has been for many years an active sympathizer in temperance work. His chief literary production may be said to be his volume, a "History of the Presbyterian Church in Canada." This is a comprehensive and painstaking work. He has likewise published several tracts and discourses, and edited a book of "Prayers for Family Worship." Dr. Gregg married on the 10th May, 1849, Phebe, eldest daughter of Dr. Rufus Holden, of Belleville.

Muir, John, M.A., B.A., LL.B., Hamilton, was born at Grimsby, Lincoln county, on the 13th June, 1843. His father was Andrew P. Muir, and his mother. was Sarah, nee Smith. John Muir's grandfather, Andrew Muir, came from Scotland to America in 1792. He reached Niagara in 1793, and died in 1855 in the 92nd year. of his age, well respected and beloved by all who knew him. The father of our subject, Andrew P. Muir, was born on 12th April, 1803. He was one of the first white children born in the township of Grimsby. When he was a young man there were troublous times in Canada, and he was out during the rebellion of 1837 on the loyalist side. He was afterwards a captain in the Militia. He is still living. Our subject's mother died in 1876, in the 70th year of her age. She was the daughter of a U. E. Loyalist, Mr. Isaac Smith. John Muir was educated at St. Andrew's Parochial School, under the charge of the Rev. F. J. Lundy, D.C.L., Rector of Grimsby; the common school; private tuition; the Grammar School, and finally at the University of Toronto, from which institution he graduated B.A. in 1865. The following year he took his degree of M.A. He obtained LL.B., with a silver medal, in 1873. In 1866 he entered upon a study of law, for which his tastes and inclinations seemed to fit him, in the office of Cameron & McMichael. He passed the attorney and barrister examinations in 1868 and 1869 the first half of the first session of that in- successively. Having obtained his certificate to the bar, he made no delay in seeking to establish a practice. He proceeded to Grimsby, where he tried his fortune for a while; but, although his success there was very fair, he was not satisfied with the prospects that the place at this time held out to his professional ambition. So in 1871 he returned to Hamilton, where he established himself by entering into partnership with Mr. John Crerar, now county attorney. Our subject is an enthusiast in his profession, yet has he sentiment and time to put at the disposal of other worthy employments as well. He obtained a firstclass certificate at the Military School in Toronto in 1865. He has not thus far made any decided effort to come into political prominence, although it cannot be said what the future may intend for him in this regard; but he has always been a Conservative, and believes Sir John Macdonald to be the only far-seeing and practical statesman in Canada. He approves of his general policy and methods, and is a staunch supporter of the national policy. He is a member of the Church of England, as his father and grandfather were; and with respect to his inclination in the matter of ritual, he is an old-fashioned evangelical. He believes in the inspiration of the Bible, and has no difficulty in reconciling that book with the declarations of science. He married in 1874, Anna Pettit, daughter of Jonathan R. Pettit, of Grimsby. By this union there are two children. At the time of leaving the Military School, Mr. Muir held the rank of captain, and was also drill instructor. He belongs to the Conservative Association, of Hamilton, and is one of the committee of management. If energy and ability, held in check and directed by good judgment, count for much, a good deal, in many ways, may be expected of this young barrister.

Siceman, George, Brewer and Malster, and one of the best known and most prominent citizens of Guelph, Ontario, was born in the village of St. David's, in the year 1841. When our subject was in his sixth year, his father, Mr. John Sleeman, moved from St. David's to Guelph, and here established himself in the brewing business. He had not long continued his business, when he came to the conclusion that it was destined to attain a wide growth. Therefore, after being three years in Guelph, he purchased the property, on which stands the Silver Creek Brewery, with which our subject's name is associated. Mr. John Sleeman now took a partner into the business, but the partnership worked somewhat disastrously, and several years of hard labour and intelligent industry were found to be without fruit. Therefore the partner. ship was dissolved, and the father of our subject once again took the management of the business into his own hands. Mr. Sleeman received a solid English education, attending school first at St. David's and subsequently at Guelph. When he was in his eighteenth year, he assumed control of the business, and it was soon perceived that he possessed qualifications for the position in a marked and satisfactory degree, In 1867 Mr. Sleeman, senr., retired from the business, and his son, our subject, resumed the entire management. Then the business began to increase in every direction; the establishment was enlarged and perfected: improved facilities were added, and in a little while everything in the splendid establishment was running with the regularity of clockwork. The connections of this firm now are very large, and it has agencies in Toronto, Hamilton, Brantford, Owen Sound, Stratford and Palmerston. In 1876 he was elected a member of the town council, and in the following year was elected second deputy reeve, by the largest vote and largest majority ever polled by a municipal representative in the town of Guelph. In 1877 he was elected second. deputy reeve; in 1878 he was elected first deputy reeve; and in 1879 he was elected reeve, and also chairman of the Inauguration Committee. In 1880, when Guelph became a city, he was elected its first mayor, and was re-elected to the same office in 1881 and 1882. In 1881 he was elected by acclamation; but in 1882 he was opposed; nevertheless his friends carried his election by a large majority. He had the opposition of the two city newspapers, who resisted the filling of the chair for the third term, by the same person; but this was the only decided ground for opposition. He was nominated the following year, but positively declined to fill the position if elected. He accepted and filled the position of chairman of the Provincial Exhibition, and of the Local Exhibition Committee for 1883. Our subject married in 1863, Miss Sarah Hill; of Aylesbury, England, by whom he has had eleven children, ten of whom are His eldest son is nineteen years of age, and is conducting a branch of the brewery in Brantford. Mr. Sleeman is still president of the Maple Leaf Baseball Club. and he has been for three years president of the Guelph Rifle Association. He is also

No

ha

age

ma

pat

me

tics

sou

vea

lect

whi

viz.

with

in a

tion

and

of t

Siee

of E

and

Euro

knov

owni

repre

Thou

place

well | pende

of co

neces

Sleen

one. ward,

Co

Toron

Esq.,

was be

Place,

was ed

Haffra

France

Dr. D

attend

Medici

1830 to

year h

burgh,

but wa

school,

John ai

son, K

the pro

uated a

same y

London

spring o

ship of Canada.

mer mo

trustee and treasurer of Progress Lodge, No. 158 I.O.O F. The latter position he has held since it was instituted ten years ago. He has always been fond of healthful manly sports, and has given them a cordial Like his ancestors, he is a patronage. member of the Church of England. In politics he takes no part. From a published source, we learn the following: "Twelve years ago Mr. Sleeman commenced to collect old coins, and acting on the principle which has distinguished his whole career, viz., 'whatever you undertake to do, do it with all your might,' he has succeeded within a few years in getting together a collection that has no equal in the Dominion, and which will bear comparison with some of the famous cabinets of Europe. Mr. Sleeman's list embraces a complete collection of English coinage, American and Canadian, and almost perfect records of the chief European countries. In fact there is not a known country on the face of the globe, owning a coinage system but what is liberally represented in this Canadian collection. Though Mr. Sleeman absolutely refused to place a money value on his cabinets, it is well known by his friends that he has expended thousands of dollars in the work of collecting them together. It is only necessary to add, in conclusion, that Mr. Sleeman's career has been an exemplary one. It has been honourable, straightforward, and successful.

ur

οf

nd

ne

Covernton, Dr. Charles Wm., Toronto, second son of James Covernton, Esq., of the Island of Antigua, West Indies, was born on August 12th, 1813, at Penton Place, Walworth, London, England. He was educated in London and at the Abbe Haffrangue's College, Boulogne-Sur-Mer, France, and was subsequently a pupil of Dr. Dugald McKellar, of Battersea. He attended the Windmill Street School of Medicine and St. George's Hospital, from 1830 to 1832. In the autumn of the latter year he went to the University of Edinburgh, attending some of the classes there, but was principally at the extra mural school, of which Drs. Gregory, Macintosh, John and Alexander Lizars, Liston, Robertson, Kemp and other eminent men were the professors. In March, 1835, he graduated at St. Andrew's. In August of the same year he obtained the diploma of the London College of Surgeons, and in the spring of the following year, the member-ship of the Apothecaries' Hall. He came to Canada in June, 1836, and spent the summer months in Toronto, and in October he settled in the County of Norfolk. During the rebellion he was out with the local militia, as surgeon of Col. Rapelges' regiment, and subsequently accompanied Sir Allan MacNab, from Brantford to the disturbed districts in Norwich. He was elected territorial representative of the Gore and Thames district in the Medical Council, and successively appointed vice-president and president, and in the spring of 1878 he was appointed to a chair in the Faculty of Medicine of Trinity College. In 1878 he left Simcoe, County Norfolk, for Toronto, and he was subsequently elected president of Toronto Medical Society, and in 1881 president of the Ontario Medical Society. In 1882 he was appointed by the government of Ontario a member of the Provincial Board of Health, and in the spring of 1884 was chosen chairman of the same body. As a delegate of the board, he was present at the fourth International Congress of Hygiene, assembled at Geneva, Switzerland, 1882, and in October, 1884, at the convention of delegates from the state boards at St. Louis; and in the following December, at Washington, district of Columbia. Covernton, it would be almost superfluous to say, is a most skilful medical man, widely popular and trusted in.

Grant, James A., M.D., Ottawa, Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians, and Member of the Royal College of Surgeons, London: Fellow of the Royal College of Surgeons, Edinburgh; Corresponding member of the Boston Gynecological Society, the distinguished gentleman who forms the subject of this sketch was born at Invernessshire, Scotland, on the 8th August, 1830. Our subject comes of a distinguished and His father was Dr. James able family. Grant, of Edinburgh, and for many years a prominent surgeon in Glengarry, Ontario; and his paternal grandfather was the learned James Grant, author of "Essays on the Origin of Society," and "Thoughts on the Origin and Descent of the Gael." A little while after the publication of the latter work, the author was presented with a large silver vase bearing the following inscription: "Presented by the Highland Society of Scotland to James Grant, Esq., of Corrimony, advocate, as a testimony of his treatise on the 'Origin and Descent of the Gael, 1819.' This was a prize essay, in which many of the most noted scholars in Scotland competed. The vase is in the possession of Dr. Grant in Ottawa. It may be interesting to note, as we pass, that Dr. Grant's correct appellation is Chief

Grant, as he is the present chief of The Grants of Corrimony. This statement will be found amplified in a new work recently published by Dr Fraser, of Edinburgh, and entitled "The Chiefs of Grant." Our subject's mother was Jane, nee Ord, and she brought her son to this country in her arms. Young Grant received his education in arts at Queen's College, Kingston, and took his medical degree, 1854, at McGill, Montreal. Having obtained his diploma, he settled at Ottawa. His great skill and noteworthy success in his profession soon attracted attention, and very speedily began the first of what afterwards became a magnificent practice. He has been physician to Lord Monck, Lord Liegar, Lord Dufferin, Lord Lorne and the Princess Louise, and is now physician to their Excellencies of Lansdowne. Honours have fallen fast upon Dr. Grant, but well have they been always earned. He has been president of the Mechancis' Institute and the St. Andrew's Society of Ottawa; he has been president of the College of Surgeons of Ontario: was a member of the International Medical Congress held at Philadelphia, in 1876, and was created one of its two vice-presidents in the department of surgery. He is a Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians and of the Royal College of Surgeons, London; a member of the Royal College of Surgeons, Edinburgh; and of the Geological Society of England. He is also consulting surgeon to the general Protestant Hospital, and to the general Catholic Hospital, Ottawa. Dr Grant is likewise a member of the Royal Society of Canada; and is ex-president of the Dominion Medical Association and representative of the University of Ottawa in the Medical Council of Ontario. literature of his profession, Dr. Grant is a gentleman of distinguished repute. has published, in British and Canadian periodicals, a large number of able, lucid, and comprehensive essays on medical and scientific subjects. In addition to his contributions to his own professed science, he is a geologist of high standing, and has made most valuable contributions to the literature of that important science. His style is clear, forcible and cultured, and his work has attracted very wide attention. Dr. Grant has likewise taken a share of public life. He is one of the sturdiest conservatives in the Dominion, and an iron-handed veteran in the day of battle; and sat for eight years in the Dominion Parliament for the County of Russell. Always a man of wide views, and one who, in a great measure, looked into the future far as human eye could see, he was found advocating strongly measures of legislation, whereof most legislators in those days knew nothing, but which, time has since crowned with its approbation. Grant was one of the first who saw the need of a transcontinental railway, and was the gentleman who introduced the original Pacific Railway Bill. He likewise advocated the admission of the North-West Territories into the Dominion of Canada, at a time when some men regarded the proposal with hostility, and others deemed the territories to be an illimitable and dismal stretch of frosty plain, whereon little grew but lichens. Dr. Grant married on the 22nd Jan., 1856, Maria, daughter of Edward Malloch, who sat for Carleton in the Legislative Assembly of Upper Canada. The fruit of this union was twelve children, four of whom are dead: and the parents and family are members of the Presbyterian faith. What surprises those most who have studied Dr Grant's career is his vast capacity for work, and his almost unparalleled industry.

Hughes, James Laughlin, Inspector of Schools, City of Toronto, was born.

on February 20th, 1846, near Bowmanville,

W.

de

an

tio No

an

vad

was

the

was

ant

in pres

Ho

Hug

be s

only

are 5

loo

sons

Hugh

and l

Volu

cate f

recor

vears

Branc

Scien

its ex

Toron

severa

tion.

Sabba

two y

Ontari

mittee

was ar

as a sp

examin teachei

by spec

twelve

the

He is a son of John Durham Co., Ontario. Hughes and Caroline Hughes, nee Laughlin. His father was for twenty-five years one of the leading Public School teachers in West Durham. Both his grandfathers were born in Ireland, in the County of Tyrone, and both were by profession soldiers, and fought under Wellington at Waterloo. After the battle of Waterloo his mother's father was stationed in France, and he married a French lady named Pierre. His grandfather Hughes married a sister of the Rev. Samuel McLung. the associate of Rev. Gideon Ouselev in establishing Methodism in Ireland. subject received his education in the public school taught by his father in the township of Darlington, Co. Durham; and afterwards in the Normal School, Toronto, under the late Thomas Jaffry Robertson and Dr. Sangster. He is also a graduate of the Military School in connection with H.M. 29th Regiment. He took a second class certificate of qualification to teach when twelve years of age, and from that time regularly took part in public debates with adults in connection with temperance organizations and literary societies. He regards this as a most important part of his training. At the age of thirteen he was editor of what was officially stated to be the first paper conducted in a good templar lodge in Ontario. He left school at fourteen, and for four years

subsequently managed a farm owned by his | father, and had a workshop in which he made the wood work of the implements used on the farm, and attended to such repairs as was necessary. He chopped cord-wood during the winter time and sold it to procure the necessary tools, and also to enable him to procure such books as he needed. At eighteen he accepted a position as teacher of a school in the township of Hope. The school was kept open only for six months in the year, and Mr. Hughes began the work of teaching with the idea that it would be a profitable way to spend the winter season when there was not much to do on the farm. His salary was $120 for six months. He soon developed a passionate love for teaching, and concluded to devote his life to educational work; therefore he attended the Normal School in Toronto in 1865 and 1866, and was selected by Dr. Sangster to fill a vacancy in Frankford before leaving the Normal School. On his 21st birthday he was appointed second assistant master in the Provincial Model School, Toronto. He was promoted to the position of first assistant in Jan., 1868, and became head master in Aug., 1871. He was appointed to his present position of inspector in May, 1874. How schools have increased since Mr. Hughes, first connection with them may be gathered from the fact that there were only 67 teachers in 1874, while in 1885 there are 237. The military feeling of the Waterloo veterans was transmitted to the grandsons. Three brothers are soldiers-Major Hughes and Adjutant Hughes of the 45th, and Sergeant Hughes of the 90th Canadian Volunteers. He took a second class certificate from the 29th Regt., but has no military record. Our subject has been president of the Toronto Teachers' Association for six years, and was president of the Canadian Branch of the Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle for the first three years of its existence. He was also president of the Toronto Sunday School Association, and for several years secretary of the same association. He was honorary Secretary of the Sabbath School Association of Canada for two years, and for four years secretary of the Provincial Teachers' Association for Ontario; was a member of the Central Committee of Examiners from 1877 to 1882, and was appointed by the Ontario Government as a special commissioner to investigate the examination frauds in connection with teachers' examinations in 1877. He became by special dispensation a Good Templar when twelve years of age, and was the first W.

he

of.

ose

has

Dr.

eed

the

terl

ies

en

08-

to

of

d

Chief of Toronto lodge. He became a member of St. Andrew's Lodge, A.F.A.M., and was worshipful master in 1883. He became an Orangeman in 1882, and is now an officer in Temperance L. O. L., 140, and also in the County Lodge for Toronto. He has visited most of the leading cities in the United States at various times to study educational methods and systems, and was sent by the Ontario Government to St. Louis to report on the Kindergarten system in that city in 1883. Mr. Hughes takes an active interest in our national sports, and held for seven years the presidency of the Toronto Lacrosse Club, and for eleven years played in all the important matches of the club. He was also the secretary for two years of the National Lacrosse Association. Mr. Hughes has been chiefly instrumental in the introduction into Ontario of industrial drawing, the Kindergarten, the phonic method of teaching reading, and systematic hand training as a means of intellectual development. He taught the opening lesson in connection with the Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle at Chautauqua on the day of the founding of the society in 1878. Mr. Hughes has written several works, which have been well received by the teaching profession in Canada and the United States, his "Mistakes in Teaching" having been twice republished in the United States, and was adopted by the State Board of Education for Iowa as one of the books to be read by the teachers of that state. He has also published "How to Secure and Retain Attention," "The Teacher before his Class," " Drill and Calisthenics," "Topical History of England," "Topical History of Canada," and "The Practical Speller." Mr Hughes is one of our foremost educationists, and occupies a high standing among all educational circles. He married in Dec., 1869, Miss Annie Agnes Sutherland, of Toronto, who died in 1884. Mr. Hughes is a Liberal-Conservative in politics, and in religion a Methodist.

Campbell, Archibald Hamilton, Toronto, was born on 12th August, 1819, at Carbrook, Stirlingshire, Scotland, the country seat of his father, John Campbell, W.S., who was born in 1770, and who was the great-grandson and representative in the male line of John Campbell of Easter Shian and Garrows, in the County of Perth, grandson of John Campbell of Edramuckie Castle, on Loch Tay. Mr. Campbell of Carbrook married, in 1794, Frances Allen Brown, grand-daughter of William Mayne, of Powis and Logie, Counties Perth and Clackmanan, the great-grandson of William

Mayne of Pile, who lived in the time of Mary and James VI., was succeeded by his son John, born 1586, and who died in 1696 at the age of 110. (Vide Burke's Extinct Peerages, art. Mayne.) Our subject was educated at the Edinburgh Academy and the University of Edinburgh, at both of which the studies were chiefly classical. always was fond of out-door sports and athletic exercises, and in studies of natural philosophy and mechanics. On leaving the University he adopted banking as a profession, but subsequently took up the study of Scotch law. In 1845 he came to Canada, and on the copper mining excitement breaking out, became connected with a mining enterprise on Lake Huron, which, like other similar ventures, was unsuccessful. Being offered the post of manager in a bank in Montreal he returned thither in 1851. In 1856 he was married, at Hillingdon church, near Uxbridge, England, to Louisa, youngest daughter of Henry Fisher, Esq., of Hillhead, Dunkeld. In the same year he removed to Kingston, the head office of the bank, and resided there till 1854, when, having become interested in a large lumbering concern in the County of Peterborough, he retired from the bank, and has since devoted himself to that business. In 1874, having sold the mills and timber limits, he removed from Peterborough to Toronto, where he now resides, and carries on the business of the Muskoka Mill and Lumber Company. When residing in Montreal, the Oregon dispute appearing likely to lead to a war with the United States, he obtained a commission in the Montreal Light Infantry, commanded by Col. Dyde. On leaving the province he retired with the rank of captain. He is connected with various public companies as a director or president of the board, is also a member of the Board of Trustees of the University and U. C. Colleges; but has not aspired to other public office. In 1840, whilst residing in England, he was initiated in the mysteries of Freemasonry. He served as W. M. of St. Paul's Lodge, Montreal, and J. in the R. A. Chapter of the same lodge. He has since youth attended the services of the Church of England, which he believes to be the best form of church polity, as a monarchy is the most perfect form of civil government. He has always held what are called evangelical views, and is a member of the diocesan and provincial Synods. He was one of the founders of the Church Association, organized for the purpose of putting a check on ritualism, and now takes a warm interest in Wycliffe College. His political views, have always been strongly conservative, but he would at any moment sacrifice party to honest and pure government. He has three sons, the eldest being a barrister in Toronto, a silver medalist of the University, and a gold medalist of the Law Society; the second a B.A., Toronto, studying medicine at Edinburgh University; and the third, also a B.A., Toronto, is manager of the Muskoka Mills, on the Georgian Bay. He has also three daughters.

a Pwince Cici en sit of ex rig Pr

an

sit

ilte

a n

sec

abo

aŝ

88

the

skir

the

gaze

Octo

tatio

the 1873

he d

whil

On t

off th

badg

the meet

or S

mand

in 18

ed in

cup.

team

match

comm

feated

long r

is a m

Rifle Rifle

vears

Rifle (

deep in mili

wasa

for the

for two membe of Tore

1873 r

Gibson, John Morison, Lt.-Colonel. M.P.P., Hamilton, was born in the township of Toronto, County of Peel, on the 1st of January, 1842. Our subject is a son of the late William Gibson, who came to this country in 1827 from Glamis, Forfarshire, Scotland, and shortly after his arrival, married Mary Sinclair, whose family belonged to the township of Nelson, in the County of Halton. William Gibson was a farmer, and died when his son John was only three years of age. Mr. Gibson is a cousin of the late David Gibson, who formerly represented North York in the old Parliament of Canada, and who was prominently associated with William Lyon Mackenzie in the troubles of 1837. was educated at the Central School, in the city of Hamilton, where, under the head mastership of J. H. Sangster, now Dr. Sangster, he made rapid progress, soon becoming head boy of the Hamilton school system. He matriculated in the University of Toronto, in 1859, attended University College for four years, taking high honours, with scholarships, during his course, and graduated in 1863, taking the Prince of Wales' prize, at that time bestowed on the most distinguished graduate of the year. His college course was mainly devoted to the study of languages, as is evidenced by the fact of his taking silver medals in the departments of classics and modern languages, and the prize in the department of oriental languages. By including Hebrew, Chaldee, and Syriac, among the tongues to which he devoted his attention, it might be supposed that the church was his destiny. He commenced the study of law in the office of the firm of which the present Justice Burton was at the head, in the city of Hamilton, and during the term of his articles, he entered the law course of the University, receiving the degree of LL.B. and the gold medal of that faculty in 1869. His course as a student was marked by close application. He was called to the bar in Michaelmas term of the year 1867. After practising alone for about a year, he entered into partnership with Francis Mackelcan, Q.C., with whom he has ever since been associated in business under different firm names in carrying on an extensive practice in the City of Hamilton. During the Trent excitement in 1861 he was one of the first to enroll on the organization of the University Rifle Company, along with other men of his year, such as Wm. Muloch, M.P., ex Mayor McMurrich, of Toronto, Dr. Oldright, and many of the professors, including Professors Croft, Cherriman, Wilson, Buckland, Chapman, Loudon (then a student), and Hirschfelder. On leaving the University, he joined the 13th Battalion, of Hamilton, as a private. In 1865 he attended a military school, taking a first as well as second class certificate of efficiency; and about the same time received a commission He was present as ensign in the 13th. as a lieutenant of the leading company of the battalion at Ridgeway, in 1866, in the skirmish with the Fenians. He rose through the various grades of rank till he was gazetted lieutenant-colonel on the 26th October, 1876. He has a very high reputation as a rifleman, and was a member of the teams to Wimbledon in the years 1874, 1875 and 1879, on each of which occasions he distinguished himself as a marksman; while in 1879 his record was most brilliant. On this occasion he succeeded in carrying off the Prince of Wales' prize of £100 and badge, a prize which vied in importance to the Queen's itself. He also, at the same meeting tied the winner in the Olympic, or Snider championship match. He commanded the Canadian team to Wimbledon in 1881, when the British team were defeated in the match for the Rajah of Kolapore's cup. He was a member of the Canadian team in the great international two days' match at Creedmoor in 1876, and in 1882 commanded the Canadian team which defeated the Americans for the first time in long range rifle shooting. Colonel Gibson is a member of the Council of the Dominion Rifle Association, president of the Ontario Rifle Association, and has been for many years president of the well-known Victoria Rifle Club, of Hamilton. He has taken a deep interest in educational as well as in military matters. For many years he was a member of the Board of Education for the City of Hamilton, and was chairman for two years. At the first election of members for the Senate of the University, of Toronto, under the University Act of 1873 re-constituting the Senate, he was

views

e, but

ty to

three

onto,

and a econd

Edin-

lso a

skoka

also

onel.

own-

the

is a came

For-

his fam-

lson,

bson

John bson

who

the

was yon

He

, in

the

now

oon

hool

sity

sity

urs.

and

of

the

His

the

the

de-

ital

ich

honoured by his fellow graduates by being one of the first senators selected. He has continued a member down to the present time, having been re-elected in 1878 and He was examiner in the Faculty of Law for 1872 and 1873. Our subject has wide and prominent connection with secret societies. He is a Freemason, and is past-master of Strict Observance and Temple Lodge of Hamilton. Of the latter he was first master. He is a past first principal of St. John's Royal Arch Chapter, a past grand superintendent of the Hamilton district of the Grand Chapter of Canada, and a past District Deputy Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Canada. At present he is commander-in-chief of the Provincial Consistory of the Scottish Rite, and is a member of the Supreme Council of that Rite within the Dominion of Canada. From an early age he took an active and foremost part in Liberal politics. For many years he energetically filled the position of secretary of the Reform Association of Hamilton. the retirement of Mr. J. M. Williams from public life, in 1879, he became the candidate of the Reform party, for the Legislative Assembly, and after a very spirited contest, defeated Mr. Hugh Murray, the popular Conservative nominee. Again in 1883, notwithstanding that the city had, since 1878, been represented in the Commons by Conservative members, he was re-elected by a considerable majority over Mr. Richard Martin, Q.C., the regular Conservative nominee, and Mr. Edward Williams, the labour candidate. He has taken a prominent position in the Legislative Assembly, and was freely spoken of in connection with the portfolio of Education as successor to the Hon. Adam Crooks, but in consideration of the exigencies of the political situation at that time, he favoured the appointment of the present minister, resulting as it did in the redemption of West Middlesex for the Reform party. In 1884 he was appointed to the important chairmanship of the Standing Committee on private bills, a position requiring the exercise of much tact and judgment. He has experienced more than the usual allotment of ups and downs in domestic life. He married first on the 26th October, 1869, Emily Annie, daughter of the late Ralph Birrell, of London, Ont., She died on the 3rd June. 1874. He married again on the 26th September, 1876, Caroline, second daughter of the late Hon. Adam Hope, senator. She died 9th October, 1877. Married third time, 18th May, 1881, Elizabeth, daughter of the late Judge Malloch, of Brockville, and they have two children, a son and daughter. In all his relations he is courteous and generous hearted. He is one of the most promising among our younger politicians, and his day for a portfolio must soon come.

Bowman, Isaac Erb, of Waterloo, the subject of this sketch, was born in the township of Woolwich, in the County of Waterloo, Ontario, 1832. Here he was brought up, and here he attended school. subsequently entering the Rockwood Academy till he was prepared to begin and make his way in the world. Our subject is the son of John B. Bowman, a gentleman well known for high character; and his mother was Lydia, nee Erb. When Isaac reached his eighteenth year he had not made up his mind with respect to an avocation; but he had a good education, and an opportunity presenting, he entered a school as master. He liked the profession of teaching, took pride in his work, and was very successful. As a teacher he remained employed till 1860, when certain allurements lay bea yound the teaching profession. But in the meantime Mr. Bowman had not confined himself exclusively to the duties of the class room. In 1857 he became clerk of the township of Woolwich, and held the position till 1873. In 1858 he was appointed treasurer for the same municipality, and he holds this position at the present time. Those who had watched his career for some years, concluded that he had excellent qualifications for parliament, so the electors of North Waterloo, in 1864, elected him as their representative in the Legislative Assembly of Canada; and again in 1867 to represent them in the House of Commons, and this seat he held until 1878. Mr. Bowman was always what was known as a "solid" representative, and his judgment could always be relied upon. Mr. Bowman is president of the Ontario Mutual Life Insurance Company, and this position he has held since the organization of the He is likewise president company in 1870. of the Mercantile Fire Insurance Company, and a director of the Waterloo Mutual Fire Insurance Company. He was appointed a justice of the peace in 1860; and has always taken a deep interest in the progress of moral movements. He is a prominent member of the Methodist communion. In 1857 he married Nancy Kaufman, daughter of Andrew Kaufman, late of Preston. died in 1858. He married again, in 1861, Lydia Bowman, daughter of J. W. Bowman. He adopted the tanning business in 1857, which he has pursued with uniform success ever since; and is at present a partner of the tanning firm of Bowman & Zinkan, of Southampton, and is carrying on a kip tannery at St. Jacob on his own account.

Wickens, Richard, Toronto, was born on the 13th August, 1826, near Win. chester, Hampshire, England. His parents belonged to that locality, and the family came to Canada in 1836. His mother's maiden name was Dinah Barlow. Our subject received a general mercantile education until he was fourteen years old, and was engaged in mercantile pursuits in Quebec until the spring of 1854, when he removed to Toronto. In 1854 he entered the service of the British America Assurance Co., and remained with that company for nineteen In 1873 he assumed the general agency of the Commercial Union Assurance Co., of London, England, for Western On-He was at first associated with Mr Westmacott, who died in 1879, and later with Mr. Mitchell, who died in November, 1884. He is a member of St. George's Society, having served actively for one or two years. He has travelled through England, Scotland, Canada, and also through the Eastern and Southern States down to Florida. In religion our subject is a Methodist. parents were of the Church of England, but he changed his religious views some time ago. He is independent in politics. married in Feb., 1848, Martha A. Booth. Mrs. Wickens died Feb. 21st, 1885, after having borne a family of ten children, five of whom survive her. Mr. Wickens has no cause to complain of his success in Canada, having a good business, which he built up by intelligence, upright dealing and per-His father served during sistent energy. the rebellion of 1837-38, and was disabled for life by his horse falling upon him and dislocating his thigh and shoulder. Mr. Wicken's face reveals his kindly heart, and this is avouched by hosts of warm friends.

Riddell, William Henry, Waterloo, the subject of this memoir, was born in the village of Sparta. in the township of Markham, County of York, Ontario, on the 18th of August, 1837, a year memorable in the annals of our country as that of the rebellion—a popular uprising against the grinding domination of a junta of oligarchs, aided and abetted by the unwise administration of the arbitrary lieutenant-governors of those days. His father's name was William Riddell, and the maiden name of his mother Margaret Lavin. His father

wh
"S
in
and
"T
His
teri

min

Co

be

fat

des

del

shot Have rare turn ture taug held ished ished of to resort learn

was t

habit did h inves and sects, appoir result pose l truth boson which much country

the for Lavin
then cometrol
as the extrac
having

his fa

the Grands king, Jonatha monard conclust campai and ha and hadaught time, l Irish t was Irish by birth, having been born in the County of Mayo, Ireland, where also, we believe, were born his father and grand-father. The family, however, was of Scotch descent, and claimed kinship with the Riddels, of Glen-Riddel, in Scotland, one of whom was immortalized by Robert Burns, "Scotia's sweetest bard," in a poem written in April, 1794, on the death of his friend and patron, and whom the poet laments as "The Man of Worth, and has not left his peer." His father was brought up a rigid Presbyterian, and having received a liberal education, was, by his parents, destined for the ministry; but in this, as the sequel will show, they were doomed to disappointment. Having mastered the Celtic language-a rare accomplishment in those days-he turned his attention to its ancient literature; but instead of finding, as he had been taught, that wherever the Catholic Church held sway ignorance and superstition flourished apace, he, on the contrary, was astonished to learn from authentic sources that when Europe was a corpse beneath the hoof of the Vandal, Catholic Ireland was the resort of students of all nations, the mart of learning and the home of worth; that she was then "the school of, the west, the quiet habitation of sanctity and literature." did his inquiries rest here. He pursued his investigations into the region of polemics, and examined the claims of the various sects, to be in spiritual matters, the divinely appointed teachers of mankind, with the result that, like Noah's dove, finding no repose he returned, weary of the search after truth elsewhere, to rest his head on the bosom of the Catholic Church. This step, which was taken from conviction and after much deliberation, cut him off at once from his family, and, in 1830, he left his native country and landed in Upper Canada. In the following year he was married to Miss Lavin, in St. Paul's Church, in what was then called "muddy little York," now the metropolitan City of Toronto. Her family, as the name La Vin indicates, was of French extraction, the founder of its Irish branch having crossed over from sunny France to the Green Isle in 1689, with the fugitive king, James II. of England, to assist that monarch to regain his crown; and on the conclusion of peace, after the disastrous campaign of 1691, settled in the country, and having married one of "Erin's fair daughters," the family, in the course of time, became even "more Irish than the Irish themselves." In the fall of 1837, cess

r of

i, of

tan-

was

in-

enta

nilv

er's

ub-

ion

was

bec

ved

ice

and

een

eral

nce

Dn-

Hr.

ith

84..

ot-

ern

In His

hnt

me

Нe

h.

ter

while his parents were on their way into the city to have the subject of this sketch baptized, his father was arrested by the "royalists" as one who had dared to hold opinions on public questions in opposition to those held by the Family Compact; but when the peaceful nature of his mission was made known, he was released, and allowed to proceed on their journey. In 1848 he removed to the "Queen's Bush," and took up a block of land in the wilderness lying west of Nottawasaga, in what, when surveyed some years afterwards, was called the Township of Osprey, in the County of Grey. Here, out of the forest, he hewed a home for himself and family, where he resided for a quarter of a century, until his death in 1873, much respected by all who knew him. He was, in all that the term implies, a pioneer of civilization in Western Canada, and as such deserves a place among "Representative Canadians." The facilities of acquiring, "in the bush," even the rudiments of a common school education were, for many years, limited, but his parents having determined to give him the best education in their power, the subject of our memoir was sent, in 1854, to Collingwood, the school of which town was then taught by Mr. A. McMurchy, for many years past rector of the Toronto Collegiate Institute, and a graduate in arts of the Toronto University. This was his alma mater. From its halls, in 1856, at the age of nineteen, he entered the profession of teaching, which he followed with more than average success until the close of 1865, when he abandoned that calling for the more active if not more profitable business of fire underwriting, representing for many years the Waterloo Mutual and other companies in the counties of Wellington, Grey and Bruce. In January, 1867, he married Miss Fannie L. Redmond, daughter of Ed. J. Redmond, Esq. an educationist of varied attainments and a teacher of much success, who occupied the position of head master of the Cobourg common school for twenty-five consecutive years. Many of hispupils (Chief Justice Thos. Moss, the Canavans and others), made their mark in the legal and other professions in after years. He counted among his lifelong personal friends the late lamented Dr. Bethune, Lord Bishop of Toronto, the late Judge McDonald, of Guelph, and many other distinguished men. He was Irish by birth, and was related to that noted Wexford family of Redmonds, which has given to Ireland two of the ablest men, orators and parliamentarians to be found among that gifted body of statesmen who at the present time constitute the Irish party in the British House of Commons, under the leadership of Charles Stewart Parnell. Of this marriage there were born three sons and a daughter, but by one of those dispensations of Providence not always comprehended by human reason, he suffered the untimely loss of his wife and children -a bitter affliction in which he was sustained by the generous sympathy of a wide circle of relatives and friends. In 1868 the Ontario Mutual Life obtained an Act of Incorporation from the House of Assembly for Ontario, one of the conditions of which was that before the board could issue the first policy (it being a purely mutual company without any capital), 500 applications for insurance, averaging $1,000 each, had to be procured; and to assist in floating the company (the first of its kind in Canada), Mr. Riddell undertook an agency for it, and succeeded in securing a fair share of the required 500 charter-members, several of whom may be counted among its policy holders at the present day. Thus he was identified with the company in its infancy, little thinking that later on he would become one of its chief executive officers. 1869, desirous to gain experience of city business, he accepted a position in the counting room of the manufacturing establishment of Messrs. Wilson, Bowman & Co., Hamilton, and in 1870 was made manager of their factory at Fergus, erected for the purpose of meeting the foreign demand then existing for the Lockman Family Sewing Machine. In the summer of 1872, this factory having shut down, owing to the depression then prevailing in all branches of business, both on this continent and in Europe, he severed his connection with the firm, and in the following spring engaged with the Williams Manufacturing Co., Montreal, of which Sir Hugh Allan was president, as their superintendent of agencies. In the fall of that year he was married to Miss Maggie H. Redmond (under authority of special indult, dated Rome, August 17, 1873), in St. Michael's Cathedral, Toronto, by the very Rev. Vicar-General, now Right Rev. Dr. Jamot, Bishop of Peterboro', and spent the winter of 1873-4 in the great commercial capital of Canada, assisting the Company's officers to get out its financial statement for the year. In the spring of 1874 he again took the field, meeting with remarkable success. A change in the management having taken place, he left the service of the Company and embarked on the troubled sea of journalistic enterprise. Early in his somewhat checkered career, he aspired to the honour of contributing his mite towards the enlightenment of that un. certain factor in political calculations, namely, public opinion, and we, therefore, find him either in the press or in the thick of the battle on the hustings, taking an active part in the electoral contests of the day. In 1876 he was offered, by Mr. J. L. Troy, the founder of the Toronto Tribune, and accepted, a joint interest in that paper. In the fall of the same year a sale of this publication was made to Messrs. Carroll and Lurkin, St. Catharines, Mr. Thos. McCrosson taking the nominal management, with Messrs. Troy and Riddell on the staff, and Mr. Alexander Robertson in charge of the editorial department. On Mr. McCrosson's appointment, in 1879, to the wardenship of the Reformatory at Penetanguishene, Mr. Riddell became the manager, and, in 1880. managing editor of the paper. While holding this position, his old friends at the head office of the Ontario Mutual Life, feeling the need for some person of Mr. Riddell's experience and training to assist the manager in the growing work of the company, offered him a position, and shortly after he entered on the discharge of his duties the board created the office of Secretary of the company and appointed him its first incumbent-an office he has filled with general acceptance to all having business to transact with the company. That the popularity of the management has lost nothing by Mr. Riddell's accession to its staff may be learned from the fact that during the past five years, covering the period of his official connection with the company, its volume of assurances in force has increased over 150 per cent., and its income in cash over 200 per cent. Mr. Riddell is a self-made man, having been the architect of his success in life as well as of his education. From the desk of the schoolmaster he has passed from one post of responsibility to another until he has, while yet in the prime of manhood, attained to the honourable and responsible position of being one of the leading life insurance men of Canada.

Ci to cu an più to Uli

to

or; he

by the Mr

fan

the

his

Thi

the

tric

Fru

of A Net

day

of N

died

a b

The

mon

ies a

leavi

pate

purs

28th

He a

purp

sion

obtai

the

place

taine

Oueer

part

ter w

to To

Stratf

office

maine

Toron

donale

the la

terson

ter, at the fir

Compa

mated

ronto.

is now

of Tor

Allan, Daniel Hugh, Toronto, the subject of this sketch, was born in the township of North Easthope, in the County of Perth, in the Province of Ontario, on 31st December, 1842. His father was the late Rev. Daniel Allan, who received his education at the University of Aberdeen, Scotland, from which he graduated in due course, and was ordained a member of the Presbyterian Church. In 1837 he left Scotland and came Canada as a missionary, and in such occupation he remained for three years, his circuit being through the Hamilton, London and Stratford districts; but before the expiration of his term, having made up his mind to remain in Canada, he settled in Stratford. I non the division of the church he leagued himself with the Free Church, and removed 10 North Easthope, taking charge of and organizing the congregation there. In 1841 he married Margaret Macdonald, of Guelph, by whom he had a family of seven children, the subject of this sketch being the eldest. Mr. A. McD. Allan, the second eldest of the family, was for a long period the editor of the Huron Signal in Goderich, and wielded his pen in the cause of the Reform party. This gentleman, it may be said, is one of the most prominent agriculturists in the district, and he is likewise conspicuous in the Fruit Growers' Association. A sister is wife of A. P. Hopkins, Esq., banker, of Omaha, Nebraska; a brother, J. S. Allan, is Sunday school superintendent for the State of Nebraska; a brother, Evan Allan, M.D. died at Old Orchard, Maine, in 1872, and a brother and sister died in childhood. The subject of this sketch received a common school education, finishing his studies at the Guelph Grammar School. After leaving school he remained for a time on the paternal farm, but having a taste for military pursuits, he joined No. 1 Company of the 28th Battalion of Perth, as a private, in 1865. He afterwards removed to Toronto for the purpose of qualifying himself for a commission from the military school there, and soon obtained a first-class certificate. While at obtained a first-class certificate. the school the Fenian raid of 1866 took place, and our subject, by permission obtained through the commandant, joined the Queen's Own Rifles as a private. He took part with the volunteers in their encounter with the Fenian raiders, and came back to Toronto as a sergeant. On returning to Stratford he began the study of law in the office of Carroll & McCulloch, where he remained for a few months. He then came to Toronto and entered the law office of Macdonald, Stevens & Howard; and afterwards the law firm of Patterson, Harrison & Patterson, finally taking his degrees of barrister, attorney and solicitor. He was one of the first promoters of the District Telegraph Company, which was afterwards amalgamated with the Telephone Company of Toronto. In politics he is a Reformer, and is now secretary of the Reform Association of Toronto, a position he has held since

prise.

er, he ng his

at un-

name-

, find ick of active

y. In

y, the

d ac-

. In

pub-

and

Cros-

with

, and

f the

son's

hship

Mr.

880.

hold-

head

eling

lell's

ana-

anv,

r he

s the

the um-

ieral

sact

y of

Mr.

arn-

five

icial

e of

150

200

an,

in

the

om

ntil

od,

ble

in-

ıb-

hip

1880. In religion he is a Presbyterian. being a member of St. Andrew's Church. On his return from Stratford he rose successfully from sergeant to senior major of the Queen's Own Rifles, and as a captain took much interest in his company, especially in rifle-shooting, in which branch of military proficiency he has never ceased to warmly advocate the more thorough training of the volunteer militia. He has been for many years chairman of the regimental rifle committee, and as such, coupled with the fact of his being himself an excellent shot, he has been the means of bringing the regiment into the position of being, as a shooting corps, second to none in the Dominion. During the late campaign in the North-West he did good service as second in command of the contingent of his corps, which formed part of the Battleford column. Altogether his is a career that a young man. setting forth in the world to carve his way, might study with profit.

Morgan, Henry James, Chief Clerk of the Department of State, Ottawa, was born in the city of Quebec, on November 14, 1842, and received his education at Morrin College in that city. He married in November, 1873, Emily, second daughter of the Honourable A. N. Richards, Q.C., late Lieutenant-Governor of British Columbia. He entered the public service on the 19th of November, 1853; and was a sessional clerk in the Legislative Assembly of Canada from 1860 to 1864, when he was appointed private secretary to the Honourable Isaac Buchanan, then president of the Executive Council. He was transferred to the Provincial Secretary's Department during the same year, as private secretary to the Honourable William McDougall, C.B., then a member of the coalition cabinet of Taché-Macdonald, and after the accomplishment of confederation he was appointed to the department of State as a junior second-class clerk; and in October, 1873, he was promoted to first-class, and was given charge of the State Records of Canada. In this capacity he took charge of the ancient State Records of Canada, which had been lying for many years in the vaults of the old Government House at Montreal, and brought them to Ottawa, where they were placed with the collection in the department of State, which by law is under the custody of the political head of that department for the time being. On December 22nd, 1875, he was appointed to a chief clerkship, with the title of Keeper of the Records. In January, 1879, he obtained a chief clerkship of the first grade. He was appointed chief clerk of the Department of the Secretary of State in June, 1883, replacing Mr. Grant Powell, who was promoted to the under-secretary-In 1869 he was a commissioner to the Western States to enquire into and report upon the existence of the Texan cattle plague. Mr. Morgan was called to the bar of Quebec in January, 1873, and to that of Ontario in Easter term during the same year. There is no one in Canada to whom our native literature is under deeper obligation than it is to the gentleman who is the subject of this sketch. Every writer of history or biography, who seeks material for his work, finds in Mr. Morgan's books a splendidly equipped storehouse; while his productions possess literary merit, they are in the highest degree practically useful. Mr. Morgan is the author of the books, "Tour of H. R. H. the Prince of Wales through British America and the United States," published in Quebec in 1860; and of "Sketches of Celebrated Canadians and Persons Connected with Canada," published in Quebec in 1862. This was a most valuable work, and the first important attempt ever made to get into book form the biographies of the principal actors in the history of the country. Besides this, from the same pen are "The Place British Americans have won in History," a lecture; "The Bibliothean Canadians, or a Manual of Canadian Literature; " which the Westminster Review pronounced to be equal in merit to Lowndes and Watt, the leading English biographical authorities of the day; "The Canadian Legal Directory, a Guide to the Bench and Bar of Canada," &c. With his usual literary enterprise and quick perception of the needful, he, in 1862, established the "Canadian Parliamentary Companion," which most indispensable work he continued to publish and edit up to 1876. He edited the "Speeches and Addresses of the Hon. Thomas D'Arcy McGee in favour of British American Union," issued in London at the time of the confederation movement. 1878 he established the book for which public men and history must ever remain under the deepest obligation to him, "The Dominion Annual Register and Review." This contains a concise record of all important political, social and general topics of the year; gives a synopsis of the literary output; information respecting the press; the condition of education and all important information upon the subject; a list of the important dead; besides a mass of other indis-

The government has lately pensable facts. given an annual grant to Mr. Morgan to aid him in the publication of this work; and the only comment we have to make is that the sum should have been greater. Mr. Morgan has had divers honours con. ferred upon him. He is a corresponding member of the Manitoba Historical Society. of the Buffalo Historical Society, of the Literary and Historical Society of Quebec, of the New York Historical Society, and of the American Geographical Society. He is a fellow of the Royal Society of Northern Antiquaries of Denmark, of the Statistical Society of London, and one of seven Hon. orary Fellows of the Royal Colonial Insti-As a departmental offitute of England. cer, Mr. Morgan is pronounced, by an eminent Canadian statesman, to be the best "all round man in the public service." We have to repeat what we stated at the opening, that to no man in Canada is the practical literature of Canada under such obliga. tion as to Mr. Henry J. Morgan.

Brandon, James, Toronto, the subject of this sketch, was born in Montreal, on December 25th, 1852. His father was born in Ireland, and came to Montreal about the Here he married, first, Jane vear 1845. Barry, a daughter of the Rev. John Barry, a missionary to Bermuda, who died on that island; and whose wife and family afterwards removed to Montreal. James' mother died when he was only three years old, and his father married again, Fanny Scott, a lady from Donegal, Ireland, and removed-to Toronto in 1867, where he went into business. Our subject was educated at the High School of McGill College, Montreal, and in Toronto at the Grammar School, under Dr. Wickson. On leaving school he began as a commercial traveller for Jennings & Brandon (his father being a partner in this firm), and continued in their employment for several years, and then became a partner in the firm of Brandon & Co. He always had strong business proclivities. His father had intended him for a profession, but he had a pretty strong will of his own, and went in the direction whither his inclination led him. In 1878 he left the dry goods business, and went into insurance exclusively, representing the Phoenix, of London, England, and the London Guarantee and Accident Assurance Company. He was a member of Q. O. R., No. 2 company, for two years; and was elected for St. Patrick's Ward to the city council, in 1884, and in 1885 by the largest vote ever polled by a Toronto alderman. He is a trustee of the in led led ried daug old city Vict and is hi insig

estee

the b

of Re

Ar

he

ket

of

On

was

Cor

AI Geole 23rdRiviè Provi His f tor of Ottaw Prote He st Franc missio over t the Ld surviv Annie of her land, o Since t ary an and O amaire.

Protest
aronali
the Cuv
ism in Metteta
district,
bued w Christia
had bee and neig
She has benevole

Ontario.

Methodist church, and is also a member of the Ancient Order of Foresters, and is Regent of St. Stephen's Council, Royal Arcanum. When in the dry goods business he travelled as buyer in the European markets, and consequently has seen a good deal He is vice-president of the of the world. Ontario Pump and Windmill Company; and was managing director of the Trade and Commerce Mutual Fire Insurance Company in 1881. Early in life he was a Reformer, but since the adoption of the national policy, he has given loyal adherence to the party led by Sir John A. Macdonald. He married on June 6th, 1876, Miss Sara Mara, daughter of Mr. Thomas Mara, who is an old York pioneer, and was one of the first city aldermen, and served as captain of the Victoria Fire Company. He has one boy and one girl. The prominent success which is his has been achieved by unceasing industry, through the possession of good business insight, and not a little through the high esteem in which he has been always held by lately

an to

vork :

ake is eater.

s con-

nding

ciety,

f the

ebec.

nd of

He is

them

stical

Hon-

Insti-

offi-

emi-

best

We

pen-

acti-

liga-

sub-

l, on

born

the

Jane

rry,

that fter-

ther

and lady

To-

ess.

nool ento

son.

his

and

eral

the

had

d a

in

the business public. Ami, Henry M., M.A., F.G.S., of the Geological Survey, Ottawa, was born the 23rd November, 1858, in the village of Belle-Rivière, County of Two Mountains, in the Province of Quebec, in the Ottawa Valley. His father, the Rev. Marc J. A. Ami, pastor of the French Presbyterian Church of Ottawa, Ont., was of Swiss parentage, and Protestant descent, and Genevan by birth. He studied in Switzerland and Eastern France with Mr. Henri Jaquet, the leading missionary spirit of his time, and then came over to Canada in 1853, as a missionary in the Lower Province. He is one of the few survivors of that terrible wreck when the Annie Jane lost upwards of three hundred of her passengers off the West Coast of Scotland, on the 28th September of that year. Since then he has been engaged in missionary and ministerial work both in Quebec and Ontario. His mother was Anne Giramaire, of Glay (Doubs), France, also of Protestant descent and parentage, from the arrondissement of Montbéliard, the home of the Cuviers and the cradle of Protestantism in France. She was related to the Mettetals, Besançons, and Peugeots of that district, and came to Canada in 1854, imbued with the missionary spirit and true Christian piety, such as from her infancy had been instilled into her by the friend and neighbour, in the person of Mr. Jaquet. She has ever since been devoted to works of benevolence and charity both in Quebec and Ontario. Young Ami's parents were, accordingly, among the first Protestant missionaries who came to Canada to evangelise the French; and although they endured much persecution and troubles at first, their labours were crowned with much success. He, received very early training at home, there being no Protestant schools in the district. At the age of three his parents removed to Joliette, where he attended the mission school; thence private tuition, until the family removed to Ottawa, when his studies in English may be said to have begun. He then attended the Central and High schools; then the Collegiate Institute, when, in 1877, he entered McGill College, Montreal, where he received the training and education which seemed best to fit his taste and inclinations, namely, researches in natural sciences. Here he studied under the able and distinguished Sir William Dawson, G.C.M.G., LL.D., F.R.S., F.G.S., and his love for natural science soon developed. During the course at McGill College he obtained various scholarships and prizes, which enabled him to carry on his Followed the studies more successfully. honour courses in natural sciences under Drs. Dawson and Harrington, but on account of ill health, the result of too much undertaking in junior years, was not open to compete for the Logan medal. Mathematics and natural sciences were amongst his predilections at school and the university, with a decided taste for logic and other metaphysical studies. Botany, geology, and palæontology occupied most of his attention; but he also attended fectures for a whole year in Law Faculty of McGill College, for which he felt much the better. From early childhood Mr. Ami has abstained from intoxicating liquors, and thus has been a supporter of rigid temperance principles, and he practices total abstinence for the sake of others. Fossil remains in the rocks attracted his attention at an early age, and he has since made pretty extensive collections of plants in several parts of Canada, and added a few to the Canadian flora; whilst the collections in fossils from Montreal and Ottawa have occupied for several years his leisure hours. On leaving the University, where he graduated, taking a first-class degree - Bachelor of scarcely a month had elapsed when he was appointed to a position on the Pal-æontological staff of the Geological Sur-vey of Canada, shortly after the removal of the museum from Montreal to Ottawa. Such a position was in keeping with his early and present tastes, as also with the good will and pleasure of his friends at the University and at Ottawa. For a number of years it was his intention and purpose to study for the ministry, and he had an earnest desire to go into the work; but his health and partial weakness of his eye-sight, as also his own conscious unfittedness for the work; as also the interesting and profitable claims of science caused him, almost unawares, to be insensibly led into the latter pursuit. He has been on the palæontological staff of the survey since June, 1882, and is at present holding the post of Assistant Palæontologist. He is now engaged in determination, identification, classification and study of the fossil remains of Canada, in connection with the museum and geological Survey at Ottawa. The natural history resources of Ottawa and vicinity, the work in connection with the Field Naturalists' Club, and especially in contact with and the help of Mr. Fletcher, whose acquaintance he first made in 1878, have all been incentives to work-not to mention the removal of the National Museum from Montreal to Ottawa, and meeting such men as Dr. Selwyn, Mr. Whiteaves, Prof. Macoun, His first paper on geology was read at Ottawa before the O.F.N.C., in the fall of 1881, whilst the winter of 1881-'82 saw his first pamphlet or work on "The Utica Formation in Canada," which was read before the Natural History Society of Montreal, and also before O. F. N. C. at Ottawa. Then followed "Notes on Triarthrus spinosus, Billings," and various reports on stratigraphy and palæontology of Ottawa and vicinity, and a catalogue of fossils from the district about Ottawa. Then, in the winter and spring of 1884-'85, he wrote a thesis for the senate of McGill University, for which was granted the master's degree in Arts. The subject dealt with the "Utica Formation in Canada," bringing the subject up to date. The degree of M. A. was conferred on him by Sir William Dawson, in May, 1885. He has been for four years a member of "A" Company Governor-General's Foot Guards. Since June, 1883, he has been a permanent civil service officer, in the Department of the Interior, Geological Survey branch. He is and has been a member of the council of the Ottawa Field Naturalists' Club for several years, since 1881; and joined the O. F. N. C. from the year of its organization, 1879.

Dunkin, Hon. Christopher, was born on the 24th of September, 1811, and was educated at the Universities of London and Glasgow. He emigrated in early life to America, and was a teacher of Greek. in Harvard University. He removed to Canada some time before the rebellion and edited the Morning Chronicle, of Montreal, from May, 1837, till the following He was appointed secretary to summer. Lord Durham's Education Commission, and was also appointed to the Post Office Com. mission. On the consummation of the union of 1841, he was appointed assistant secretary for Lower Canada, and this position he retained till May, 1847. He studied law, and was called to the bar of Lower Canada in 1846. In 1844 he stood for the County of Drummond, but was defeated by In 1857, however, he Mr. R. N. Watts. was elected for Drummond and Arthabaska, This constituency he represented until 1861. when he was defeated. He was the following year elected for Brome, which constituency he continued to represent till the date of Confederation, when he was again elected for it by acclamation. Mr. Dunkin was reared a conservative, and showed his sympathy with that party through his entire career; but he was always independent of trammel, and voted according to his conviction. In 1867 he became provincial Treasurer of Quebec, and in 1869 entered the Dominion Cabinet as Minister of Agriculture and Statistics, This office he held till 1871, when he became Puisné Judge of the Superior Court of Quebec. He died at Montreal on. January 6th, 1880. He married Miss Mary Barber, a daughter of the late Dr. Jonathan Barber, of Montreal He was president of the Shakespeare Club of Montreal; a member of the Council of Public Instruction from 1856 to 1859; he was lieutenant-colonel of the Montreal Light Infantry; and from 1866 to 1872 he was lieutenant-colonel of the 52nd (Bedford) Battalion of VI. He was the means of the creation of much important legislation, and the measure with which he was most concerned bears his name, and is known as the Dunkin Temperance Act of 1864.

se th Q

8e

Ca

fat

we

Ge

wh

Ap

ma

the 187 das

the

wide

othe

Joh:

Dun

eigh

after

tario

lum

Was

Scho

lamb Whei

Way 1

clear : trade,

tracts

erecte

Domi

and h himse largely city, b

ment :

and t

career

cared f

ing att

Cook, Hermon H.—The history of successful and upright business men in Canada has few, if any, names more prominent than that of Hermon H. Cook. Mr. Cook comes of that good old stock that sacrificed their possessions to the loyalty they felt for their sovereign. His grandfather, Mr. George Cook, at the time of the Revolutionary war, left the Mohawk valley, New York where he had acquired a valuable property, and settled in Dundas county, Canada John Cook, a son of George and an uncle of our subject, is well remembered in the older Greek . annals of the country, as a staunch and ved to worthy representative of Dundas county, bellion. for many years, in the old parliament of f Mon-Canada; his name standing boldly out llowing among the band of men, who though loyal tary to to the heart's core to the British Crown, reon, and sisted with unflinching front the domination e Comof the Family Compact, and acts of irresponof the sible officials of unrepresentative governssistant ment. The father of Mr. Hermon H. Cook is posiwas George Cook, the younger brother of studied John just described, and owing to the law Lower of primogeniture, in force at the time. was for the left without fortune upon the decease of his ated by father who died intestate. But he soon ver, he carved out a competence for himself; occuabaska. pied various positions of trust in the public il 1861, service; was a captain of militia, serving in followthe war of 1812, and receiving from the nstitu-Queen a gold medal in recognition of his he date services. The mother of Hermon was Sarah elected Castleman, a lady of German descent, whose in was father was Tinus Castleman, a prominent and is symwell-known inhabitant of Dundas county. entire George Cook had five sons, the youngest of endent whom was Hermor H., born in Dundas on to his April 26, 1837. These sons made their vincial mark in the commercial and public life of entered the country. James William, who died in Agri-1875, was the worthy representative of Dunhe held das in parliament from 1857 to 1861; he was adge of died at the senior member of the extensive and widely known firm of Cook Brothers, the e marother members of which were George J. and of the ntreal. John L. Simon S. was a representative for Dundas in the provincial parliament for eight years, subsequent to Confederation; e Club incil of .9; he after which he removed to Morrisburg, Ontario, where he established an extensive bntreal lumber business. The subject of this sketch was educated at the Iroquois Grammar 872 he (Bed-School in Dundas, and in 1858 began the means lumber business in the County of Simcoe. egisla-When the construction of the Midland Raile was and is way to Georgian Bay was proposed, with a dear insight into the future of the lumber Act of trade, Mr. Cook bought extensive timberory of tracts on the region near the terminus, and erected there the largest saw-mill in the n Can-Dominion. His predictions were verified; ninent and he succeeded not alone in creating for Cook rificed himself a handsome fortune, but in being elt for largely instrumental in building Midland Mr. city, by the extensiveness of the employment to labour afforded by his enterprises; ution-York and those who have watched Mr. Cook's perty, career say that, while his own interests are cared for by a quick, clear head, and unceasmg attention, the comfort of those depen-nada. cle of

dent upon him, and the well being of all in his employ, are with him deep and alwaysremembered considerations. The Midland mill, which has a sawing capacity of 25,000,-000 ft. in the year, was burnt in 1877, but it was promptly replaced again, and the great business went on with undiminished activity and success. It is men like Mr. Cook, masters of commercial science, who make valuable parliamentarians; and so in 1872 our subject was induced to enter the field for the representation in the House of Commons of North Simcoe, and defeated the Conservative candidate, Mr. McCarthy. In 1874 he was again elected; was unseated by petition, but returned again by a majority of 72 votes. In the general election of 1878 he was unsuccessful, Mr. McCarthy, his old opponent, defeating him by 49 votes. But he was elected for the local legislature of the Province of Ontario in 1879, and sat for three years, then resigning, was elected for House of Commons for East Simcoe, at the general election of 1882, which seat he still holds. In the House of Commons Mr. Cook is one of the most valuable members assembled there. His judgment is always sound, his insight quick, and nearly always accurate; and he has been instrumental in producing a number of acts of valuable legisla-He is a clear, terse, and vigorous speaker, and those who have heard him. friend and opponent alike, admit that he always appeals to men's reason, never to their prejudice. He is in religion of the Methodist church; and he married in 1861, Lydia, a daughter of Mr. James White, of the County of Simcoe. By this lady he has two daughters.

Freeman, Dr. Clarkson, of Milton, the worthy subject of this biographical sketch, was born in the township of Tra-falgar, County of Halton, in 1827. His father, Isaac Freeman, was born in Elizabethtown, New York, in 1794, and removed with his parents to Canada in 1800. In 1812, when American arms began to gleam upon our borders, Mr. Isaac Freeman, then only a lad in his eighteenth year, promptly ranged himself among the defenders of his country, serving through the entire war. After the side on which he had fought had seen victory upon its banners, he married, in 1817, Miss Hannah Kelly, and settled in the township of Trafalgar. Always a true lover of liberty, and hater of tyranny, he saw with manly resentment the oppressions of the Family Compact; so in 1837, when the grievous discontent of the people flamed forth in rebellion, he was one of those who assisted in the pursuit of William Lyon Mackenzie, who had had a price set upon his head and was fleeing from the country. This sturdy, zealous man, had a family of thirteen sons and two daughters. Clarkson Freeman, whom we have chosen as the subject of this sketch, is the sixth son, and received a common school education, and afterwards higher in extent and sufficient to equip him for important undertakings. This education, however, like that of so many other men, whose history is written in the creditable work of their hands, was obtained under great difficulties. He was obliged to work on his farm, and it is related that when pursuing his studies he would guide his team with one hand, and read from a book in the other. Having attended the common school for about a year, he entered the Grammar School at Palermo, County Halton, then taught by Mr. Andrew Hall. After remaining in this institution, for a year, he was enabled to take the teachership in the village of He subsequently pursued his stu-Boyne. dies in the City of Toronto, but his eyes became affected from a too close application of study, and it became necessary to perform an operation upon them to remove a grotte that was forming. After a short respite from study, and during which time he had fully recovered from the effect of the operation, he determined to take up the profession of medicine, and began his studies under Dr. Rolph, of Toronto, continuing the same in the University, from which institution he graduated in 1853. He at once began to practice his profession of doctor in the village of Lowville, in the County of Halton, afterwards removing o Cummingsville. In the year 1854 he married Miss Elizabeth Martha, eldest daughter of the late James Cobban, M.D., of Milton. Milton, however, offered the greater attractions to the brilliant young practitioner, so in October, 1854, he removed thither from Cummingsville, where he practised with his father-in-law, Dr. Cobban, till the latter's death. Dr. Cobban, it may be stated, was one of the most noted and skilful practitioners in the County of Halton. In 1860, owing to ill-heath, he was advised to visit the old country, and the result was a complete restoration of his prostrated energies, and the acquisition of a larger and valuable store of professional knowledge. The latter was the result of careful observations during bis visits to all the great hospitals of England, Ireland, Scotland and France. Durng the late American war, Dr. Freeman offered himself as a volunteer surgeon, and was accepted and attached to the 2nd Division of the 6th Corps of General Grant's army of the Potomac. He passed through the most notable battles of the last spring campaign. Among these engage. ments were the celebrated nine days battle before the taking of Petersburg and Richmond, and the subsequent bitter struggle before the surrender of General Lee. When the war was over he returned again to Canada, and his townfolk, unwilling that such brilliant talents as he possessed should not be in some way turned to the public benefit of the town, chose him for mayor of Milton. and re-elected him again by acclamation in 1871 and 1872. In religion he is a member, in very high standing, of the Methodist Church, and in politics he is a staunch and highly-regarded Conservative. He is a Freemason, and a member of a number of benevolent associations. Although his hair is now nearly white, he is still full of energy, and there is doubtless yet for him a long period of usefulness. In manners he is in the most thorough sense gentlemanly, and exceedingly courteous and kind. He is, as he deserves to be, one whom his fellow townsmen would delight to honour and to see honoured. While Dr. Freeman was mayor, 1870, 1871, of Milton, he was one of the first of the promoters of the Credit Valley Railway in obtaining bonuses, and owing to his zeal and earnestness in having this road carried through, he nearly undermined his health, but still kept ahead of him the interest of the town.

O'Rourke, Thomas Alfred, was born on August 20th, 1853, at Trenton, in the County of Hastings. His father was Hugh O'Rourke, and his mother was Mary, nee Fenelon, both of County Carlow, Ire-Mr. O'Rourke, senr., settled in land. Trenton in 1844, and for years carried on the grain business. He amassed considerable property, and occupied the position of town councillor for several years. Thomas Alfred received his early education in the separate school at Trenton; he was then sent to St. Michael's College, Toronto, and finished his education at Toronto University in 1878, taking the degree of B.A. He is now proceeding to the degree of LLB. During his course in the University he took honours in modern languages, natural sciences and classics. From an early age he had a strong predilection towards the study of law, and on leaving college began its study, and after being admttted to the bar, he began practice in Trenton, where he has

duti
State
a ke
Cath
marr
Jessi
of T
man
make intell
portu

back.

of the

High

M

rem pros

so f

Surro Perth 1821, souri. miles James name army i severa He ob in 181' of 183 also se father. London English gan to other p of school Mary's been m is conr Stratfor St. Jam 1850 M when he once beg solicitor

to St. M

Here he

June, 18

he has does not views, bu

Knox (H

on 19th

Lean, da

resident

subject's

where he

are seven sons, all remained ever since, and now carries on a prosperous business. Mr. O'Rourke has, so far, confined himself to his professional luties, but he has travelled through the States and Canada, always observing with In religion he is a Roman a keen eve. Catholic, and in politics a Reformer. He married, on April 24th, 1882, Miss Mary Jessie Keith, daughter of Mr. D. S. Keith, Our subject is, doubtless, a of Toronto. man who will, when the proper time arrives, make his mark. He is quick, energetic, and intelligent; one of those who, with the opportunity offered to him, cannot be kept back.

ฉากกั

2nd

ral

sed

ast

ge-

ttle

ch-

gle

hen

an-

uch

not

efit

on,

in

er, list

and ee-

ev-

is

gy,

in

nd

o₩

ŧ0

of

ng er-

> vas on, vas

ry, re-

Macfadden, James, Stratford, Clerk of the County Court, Local Registrar of the High Court of Justice and Registrar of the Surrogate Court in and for the County of Perth, was born on the 25th day of April, 1821, in what is now the township of Nissouri, in the County of Middlesex, about six miles from London. His father's name was James Macfadden, and his mother's maiden name was Reid. His father was in the army in the old country, and was engaged in several battles for which he held a medal. He obtained his discharge from the army in 1817, but he took part in the rebellion of 1837 as captain. His son, our subject. also served during that rebellion under his father. James Macfadden was educated at London, Ontario, and received a common English education. At an early age he began to show interest in educational and other public affairs, and has held the office of school trustee and was councillor in St. Mary's for the years 1863 and 1864. He has been much interested in Freemasonry, and is connected with a Masonic lodge, the Stratford Lodge, 332, and is past master of St. James' Lodge, St. Mary's. From 1838 to 1850 Mr. Macfadden resided in the States, when he returned to London, where he at once began the study of law. He passed the solicitors' examination in 1854, and removed to St. Mary's to practise law there in 1855. Here he remained for eleven years, and in June, 1866, he moved to Stratford, where he has lived ever since. Mr. Macfadden does not entertain any very strong religious views, but he is at present an adherent of Knox (Presbyterian) Church. He married on 19th January, 1860, Katherine A. Mc-Lean, daughter of William McLean, now a resident of Sarnia, but at the date of our subject's marriage he resided in St. Mary's, where he was married. By this union there are seven children, four daughters and three sons, all of whom are living.

Dewar, John, of Milton, Ontario, the subject of this sketch, was born in Aberfeldy, Perthshire, Scotland, on the 22nd of August, 1829. His father was Mr. John Dewar, who married, in 1828, Emily Knight, and by this lady he had nine children. In 1830, being then just two years married, he sailed for Canada, and on his arrival settled in the township of Esquesing, County of Halton, where he devoted himself to farming. When the father left for Canada, the subject of our sketch was just nine months old. He was sent at an early age to school, continuing his studies till his fifteenth year, when he began to teach school. year later he entered the Grammar School in Palermo, in the County of Halton, and spent four years in teaching, and then he repaired to the United States, and entered Franklin College, in Ohio. He returned Franklin College, in Ohio. He returned to Canada in 1852, and began a study of the law in the respective offices of S. M. Jarvis, John McNab, and Morrison & Lees. concluding under the legal tutorship of the late Angus Morrison. In 1858 he went to Milton, and began to practice as an attorney. A year later he was admitted barrister; and in August, 1868, upon the death of Gilbert Tice Bastedo, was appointed Crown Attorney and Clerk of the Peace. Most brilliant and successful had his career been all along, and his achievement was all the result of a quick, keenly-discerning mind, and a tireless energy and application. He has been superintendent of public schools; was several times school trustee, and at the time of writing this sketch is chairman of the school board. He is also, and has for many years been, president of the Mechanics' Institute in the town of his adoption. Mr. Dewar is a gentleman whose exceedingly brilliant natural parts have not alone been improved by an excellent education, but by the advantages of travel. In 1870 he left on a visit to the old country, travelling through the most interesting parts of England, Scotland, and Ireland; thence he passed over to France, an extensive tour of which he made, returning again to Canada. He likewise visited the principal cities of the United States. There is no part of human experience more valuable than travel among the different conditions of men, to those who have the seeing eye and the receptive mind, and it is not at all to be wondered at that Mr. Dewar returned with his mind enriched, and with his eyes opened to the conditions of men, and the conduct of affairs, to a degree that renders him a valuable acquisition to the commun-

In religion he is a staunch Presbyteraian, but not a bigot, for he yields to every man the right to worship God in the way that he thinks best. In politics he is a Reformer, and has always lent his voice and his hand to those whom he believed were promoting the cause of good government. Up to the time of his appointment as county crown attorney he was secretary to the Reform Association of the County of Halton. He was married in October, 1874, to Miss Jane W. Somerville, a daughter of Mr. Robert B. Somerville, late M. P. for Huntington, Province of Quebec, and at one time a manager of a branch of the Standard Bank of Canada. Mr. Dewar was a member for some time of the town and county council, and retained this position till receiving his crown appointment, when he resigned. His father died in 1879, beloved and lamented by all who had known him so long as a worthy citizen. But the qualities of the father are exhibited well in the son, to whose career many a young man would do well to look up as a guide and incentive to his justifiable ambition. Tickell, George Skinner, Furniture Manufacturer, Belleville, Ontario, was born in Bristol, England, and chronicled in the old family Bible at 7 a.m. Sunday, 12th April, 1829; baptized in St. Augustine Church, Bristol, 10th May, 1829, only surviving son of John Skinner Tickell and Eliza Tully Tickell. The father was a native of Devon, England, and the mother, of Bristol, England—the father being of Cornish and the mother of Welsh origin, the subject of our sketch being, therefore, in all probability, of ancient British stock. The family having removed from Bristol to Whitchurch, near Tavistock, Devon, the early life and school days of our subject were spent in Tavistock and Torquay; and at the age of fourteen years he was duly apprenticed for the term of seven years to learn the trade of cabinetmaker, in Tavis-This term having been faithfully served, he engaged in business, and with few intermissions continued up to the present time. In the year 1857 he was married to Hannah Beeltam, a native of Cheltenham, England, and he shortly afterwards emigrated to Canada, and in the spring of 1858 settled in Belleville, where he has since resided, and carries on the manufacture of furniture. He has four sons and one daughter living. Mr. Tickell's first religious views or ideas were formed with the Congregational body, in England; but coming to Canada any Calvinistic doctrines he may have held were dispersed. believing, as he said to the writer, in free grace for every repentant sinner; hence his connection with the Methodist Church. In politics Mr. Tickell, is a Reformer, but liberal in the true sense, as he holds that every one has a perfect right to his own opinions. During the national policy agitation, Mr. Tickell gave his support to Sir John A. Macdonald, in the belief, as he informed us, that the change would be beneficial and tend to build up our industries. Mr. Tickell is an Oddfellow. being a member of Mizpah Lodge, and has passed through the several chairs, and acted in the capacity of N. G. for some time. He is also a Freemason, and a member of Eureka Lodge, in Belleville. Mr. Tickell is one of the aldermen of the city, and has represented "Ketcheson," the commercial ward of the city, for a period of four He has filled other important posiyears. tions, having been at one time president of the St. George's Society, and is now vicepresident of the Board of Trade, and vicepresident of the Mechanics' Institute. Mr. Tickell has travelled considerably on this continent in connection with his business, visiting the large centres, viz., New York, Boston, and Chicago, in order to gather information regarding his business. only once visited his native land (in 1883). twenty-five years after leaving it. now well up in years, he still carries on the business, and as helps has his two eldest sons with him. He has been a successful man, and has the largest and oldest business in his line in Belleville, and does a wholesale trade throughout Canada.

UA wu ath A trof he his

in

in

stu

in

tor

Mo

Mc

bet

to p

Kn

Swe

tric

edit

star

and orga

Jun

whic

Kno

ceed

then

pecto

terfe

he w

of Br

1865 form

Brom

remai

Duri

the 1

with

came returi

He ha

comm

for a 1

mayor

den of

ried I

C. Pet

ton, b

a men

Lynch, Hon. William Warren, M.P.P., B.C.L., Q.C., D.C.L., was born near the village of Bedford, County of Missisquoi, Province of Quebec, on the 30th September, 1845. His father, Thomas Lynch, came from the County of Cavan, Ireland, about the year 1830. He served during the Canadian rebellion in the Shefford Troop of Cavalry, and died at Knowlton, Brome county, on the 19th March. 1883. His mother, Charlotte R. Williams, was born at Stukely, County of a hefford, Province of Quebec, in the year 1805. Her parents were descendants of U.E. Lovalists, who came from the State of Vermont at the close of the American revolutionary war. She is still alive. Mr. Lynch, after taking advantage of the elementary schools in the vicinity of his birthplace, went to Stanbridge Academy in 1858, then a most flourishing institution under the direction of Hobart

Butler, M.A., where he prepared himself for a university course. During his last year at Stanbridge he acted as assistant eacher to Mr. Butler, and then entered the University of Vermont, Burlington, in August, 1861, but owing to the civil war which had shortly before broken out, the university course was considerably affected, and Mr. Lynch did not continue his studies there. In September, 1862, he entered the Arts Course of McGill University, Montreal, having secured one of the scholarships offered at a competitive examination. His health failing, he was obliged to abandon his studies before the Christmas examinations. He then engaged in school teaching in winter, and worked on his father's farm in summer. In 1865 he was admitted to the study of the law, and pursued his studies in the office, first of S. W. Foster, of Knowlton, and afterwards of John Monk, of Montreal. He took his degree of B.C.L. at McGill in May, 1868, and secured the Elizabeth Torrance gold medal, and was admitted to practice in June. The following year he commenced the practice of his profession at Knowlton, and subsequently removed to Sweetsburg, the chef lieu of Bedford District. In the fall of 1870 he assumed the editorial control of the Observer, which was started at Cowansville, an adjoining village, and which has since become an influential organ of public opinion in the district. In June, 1871, during the provincial elections, which were then in progress, he went to Knowlton to report for his paper the proceedings of nomination day. There were then two candidates in the field, and unexpectedly to Mr. Lynch, and without his interference, both candidates withdrew, and he was declared member elect for the County of Brome. During the Fenian troubles of 1865 Mr. Lynch took an active part in the formation of a company of volunteers at Brome, of which he became lieutenant and remained such until his resignation in 1871. During the Fenian raid of 1870 he was at the front with his battalion. In keeping with the promise made to his electors, he became a resident of the County of Brome, returning to Knowlton in the fall of 1871. He has held successively the offices of school commissioner and chairman of that body for a number of years; and was also the mayor of the township of Brome, and warden of the county. In May, 1874, he married Ellen Florence, eldest daughter of J. C. Pettes, a successful merchant of Knowlton, by whom he has two children. He is a member of the masonic fraternity, and

rsed,

free

ience urch.

mer.

holds

o his

olicy

port

elief,

fould

our llow,

l has cted

He

r of

ckell

rcial

four posi-

nt of vice-

vice-

Mr.

this

iess,

ork.

in-

has

83), ugh

the

dest

sful

usi-

es a

en,

orn

Iis-

0th

mas

an,

hef-

wlch.

ns,

ro-

ar-

ose

was some years since deputy grand master for the district of Bedford. Mr. Lynch early in life identified himself with the Conservative party, to which he has ever borne faithful allegiance. He took an active part in the political discussions in the Legislature of Quebec on the subject of the dismissal of the De Boucherville government, by M. Letellier, and it was upon a motion made by him that the Joly government were defeated on the 30th October, 1879. He was made a Q. C. by the Joly government in 1879, which was subsequently ratified by a similar title conferred upon him by the Federal authorities in 1881. When M. Chapleau assumed office as premier of the province, he invited Mr. Lynch to the council as Solicitor-General, which appointment was subsequently ratified by the electorate of Brome. On the abolition of the office of Solicitor-General, Mr. Lynch was appointed Commissioner of Crown Lands, on the 31st July, 1882, which office he still holds. He has been a member of the successive governments of the Province of Quebec since the defeat of the Joly administration. Mr. Lynch has always taken a lively and earnest interest in all matters pertaining to education, and has twice held the presidency of the Provincial Association of Protestant Teachers. In June, 1883, the University of Bishops College, Lennoxville, conferred upon him the honorary degree of D. C. L. He is a member of the Church of England, and has been a delegate from the Knowlton congregation to the Diocesan Synod for the past twenty years, during which time he has frequently been chosen a delegate to the Provincial Synod, as well as a member of the Executive Committee of the Diocese of Montreal.

Wilson, William, M.D., Ottawa, Advocate and Barrister, was born at Chambly Canton, in Lower Canada, on the 22nd November, 1835. He is the eighteenth in descent, by a younger branch of the family, from Adam Wilson to whom a grant of land was made near Bromhead, England, in the 37th year of Edward the First for services in the Scottish wars. Dr. Wilson's father, whose name was the same as our subject's, was a man of varied and extensive acquirements. He spoke and wrote several modern languages, and was an excellent classical scholar. He was sent out at an early age to Hayti, at the instance of Wilberforce and Clarkson, as tutor to the son of Henry Christophe, king of Hayti, but a revolution soon terminated his engagement. Returning to England, he studied surgery, and married the eldest daughter of Francis Bayley, of Passmoors House, in Essex. His frequent conversations with his son on the subject of his eventful life, during which he imparted to the latter much information, which is rarely acquired in the ordinary course of education, greatly influenced the after life of the subject of this sketch, and fitted him for the course of life he was destined to adopt. Dr. Wilson was educated at a classical school kept by the Rev. Joseph Braithwaite, at Chambly, in its day one of the most prominent Canadian educational establishments. So carefully was instruction imparted that before he had attained his fourteenth year, Dr. Wilson passed the examination for admission to the study of Entering the University medicine. McGill College, Montreal, he took the degree of doctor of medicine, in due course, at the age of twenty-one. But his tendencies did not lie in the direction of that profession, and he shortly after commenced the study of law, and was called to the bar of Lower Canada in 1865. Previously to that date he had been employed as a translator to the House of Assembly, and has continued in the public service ever since. 1871 Dr. Wilson was appointed assistant law clerk to the House of Commons of Canada, and has discharged the duties of that important office ever since. This office calls for not only a fair knowledge of common law and the statutes of Canada, but also a familiarity with those of each of the provinces composing the dominion; and in addition to this a thorough knowledge of both the English and the French languages. Dr. Wilson holds the rank of surgeon in the volunteer force, to which he was appointed Upon the disbanding of the Civil Service Rifle regiment, he retired retaining hisrank. In 1883 he was appointed one of the commissioners to revise and consolidate all the statute law within the province of the Dominion Parliament, and took a prominent part in that very important work which has been most favourably commented on by eminent jurists. He has achieved a reputation in connection with the branch of the profession to which he has more especially devoted his attention, which has caused his name to be known throughout Canada. He is at present chairman of the Board of Management of the Civil Service Mutual Benefit Society. He took part in municipal matters for several years, as councillor of the village of New Edinburgh, and during the years of his service as such, he assisted greatly in forwarding several enterprises of vast advantage to the municipality. In this connection he more especially prides himself on a thorough system of drainage, in favour of which he strove, and at length successfully for years. He ultimately retired in consequence of an excess of official duty calling for all his time. He is a member of the Church of England, a representative in both the diocesan and provincial Synods of that Church, and has repeatedly served as Wilson married in Dr. churchwarden. 1862, Frances, eldest daughter of the late Colonel Charles MacDonnell, formerly of the Connaught Rangers, and great granddaughter of Sir William Johnson, whose connection with the establishment of British supremacy on the North American continent is too well known to be dilated upon here. In conclusion, he may be described as a man, with whom duty has ever been the foremost thought, and one whose pride it is to be found, in season and out of season, at

es cl G

th

₩o

in

Da

Ca

the

the

res

Ch.

frie

ed

cou

was aliv

who

the

had

and

some

Searc

ter v

on h reme

thou;

the

early

for

wishi

him.

phia, in the stitut

consid findin

art at

In oth at Reg

the t Toron

of law

Univer

article man, ( whom

when h

ed an o

profess

appoint

County

year 18

Rolph,

he succ

the du

his post and ready.

Guy, James Odgers, Oshawa, was born in Cornwall, England, on February 21st, 1828. His father was Thomas Guy, and the maiden name of his mother was Marjory Odgers: they both came of old Cornwall They arrived in this country in families. 1842, and took up a farm a little north of Oshawa, where they remained till they died. Our subject gained most of his education in England, at a village school. It may be mentioned that the Guys are a long-lived race. The father died at 84 and the mother at 82 years of age. Our subject was engaged in farming till he was twenty years of age. and then he became a clerk at the Oshawa Harbour, and after three years, he was found capable of taking charge of the business, which he accordingly did. About the year 1865 he commenced business as a coal merchant, and has been very successful ever In 1882 he and his son, a smart young man, added to the coal, a grain and wholesale produce business, under the style of Jas. O. Guy & Son. For thirteen years our subject was a member of the county council; was for eleven years reeve; and prior to that he was two years deputy-reeve, and in 1872 he was warden of the county. He has travelled extensively through the United States and Canada. Mr. Guy is a Methodist, and always has been a Reformer. and does not believe that the national policy has any salutary influence, indeed he regards it as a piece of unwise, stupid and retrograde legislation. He married in January, 1852, Rachael Luke, of East Whitby. This lady comes of old stock, her people having settled in Canada in 1834. By this estimable lady he has a family of seven children, five of whom are living. Mr. Guy is very affable, and is one of the most popular, respected and worthy men in obshawa.

rtion

bn a ir of fully

nse-

 $_{
m lling}$

the

both

that

3.8

in

late

y of

and-

hose

tish

nent

ere.

s a

the

it is

, at

was

arv

and

orv

wall

v in

h of ied.

ion

r be ved

her

ged ge,

wa

ซลล

าร์เ-

 $_{
m the}$

oal

ver

nd

yle

Ghent, Samson Howell, Clerk of the County Court of the County of Wentworth, was born in 1834, near Burlington, in the County of Halton. His parents, David Ghent and Mary G. Ghent were both Canadians. The latter is still living, but the former has been dead a few years. the time of his death he was the oldest resident in the township of Nelson. David Shent was an old Reformer, and a strong friend of Mr. Lyon McKenzie. He secreted that gentleman, when escaping from the country, in a pea-stack on his farm. It was in winter, and McKenzie was kept alive by food carried to him by Mr. Ghent, who used to pretend that he was going to the stack to feed the cattle. The authorities had traced the refugee as far as this farm, and were convinced that he was concealed somewhere upon it. After an ineffectual search in every conceivable place, the matter was given up, and Mackenzie went again on his stealthy journey. Mr. S. H. Ghent remembers the presence of the red coats though only a child then, and the terror of the family in the trying situation. At an early period, young Ghent manifested talent for drawing and painting. His father, wishing to encourage the same, sent him, in 1847, to New York and Philadelphia, to study in the Academy of Design in these cities. He remained at these institutions for nearly two years, and made considerable progress in the fine arts; but, finding little encouragement in Canada for art at that time, he discontinued his studies. In other respects his education was obtained at Regan's Academy, and afterwards under the tutorship of Rev. Mr Lorimer, of Toronto. He was subsequently a student of law for two years in the LLB. course, University of Toronto. In 1855 he was articled as law student to the firm of Freeman, Craigie & Proudfoot, Hamilton, with whom he continued to the end of the term, when he was admitted a solicitor, and opened an office in Hamilton. He practised his profession for two years, when he was appointed clerk of the County Court of the County of Wentworth. This was in the year 1863. In 1875, on the death of George Rolph, registrar of the Surrogate Court, he succeeded to that office. He performed the duties of the former office for twentytwo years. Before his appointment he was active in politics. When the first election for legislative councillors was held in the Wentworth Division, he went over the North Riding of the county, and obtained the signatures of leading reformers to a requisition to Dr. Smith to allow himself to be nominated, which he did, and Dr. Smith was afterwards elected He possesses some originality, and is the author of several productions in verse. Among them, a song on the game of bowles, which begins as follows:

Cricket, Ball, Lacrosse and Curling, All are manly games you say, Grand they are, but not so whirling As the game of Bowles I play.

Also a song on Burlington Beach, commencing in this way:

When down at the Beach, the first season I spent, I thought it a strange looking place of content, All bounded by water on every side—Such a small strip of land on which to reside.

We take also the following from a philospher, as his friends often speak of him:

"O, man! with all your failings you are blest, Without your fellow man you could not rest; The noblest principle in the mind of man Is always to be happy—when you can; And nobler still that principle is shown When happiness is not enjoyed alone."

Mr. Ghent was a school trustee for the Collegiate Institute and public schools of Hamilton for thirteen years, and during that time assisted in building most of the handsome structures in that city devoted to the purpose of education. In 1861 he married Ruth Annie Lovejoy, the accomplished daughter of the late John Lovejoy, of Brantford, proprietor of the Hamilton and Brantford Road Company. They have a large family, one of whom Miss Lillie, has great musical talent, being able to name any note on the piano by sound. Mr. Ghent's mother was the daugher of the late Samson Howell, one of the earliest settlers of the County of Halton. Our subject belongs to the Church of England, and is a Reformer in politics. He is of a strong poetic turn, and many of his verses have given pleasure to the reader of local journals.

Laurier, Honourable Wilfred, B.C.L., A.C., P.C., M.P., for Quebec East, and leader of the Rouge or French-Canadian section of the Liberal party of the Dominion, was born at St. Lin, L'Assomption, in the Province of Quebec, on the 24th of November, 1841. He comes of a very old and distinguished family, and his ancestors were among the first families that established themselves in La Nouvelle France. He was educated at the College of L'Assomption, and having finished his literary studies he was entered for the study of the law in the office of the Honourable R. Laflamme. Here he devoted himself diligently to the study of his chosen calling, and in due time he was called to the bar of Lower Canada. This was in the year 1865; but the year previous he had taken, at McGill University, the degree of B.C.L. In October, 1880, he was appointed Q.C. Mr. Laurier always, from a very early age, took a deep interest in public questions, and was resolved, when the first opportunity offered, to seek a position in the legislature. For a period, also, he gave his attention to literature and journalism, and he edited for some time Le Defricheur newspaper. He was an earnest advocate of temperance, and was a delegate to the Dominion Prohibitory Convention, held in Montreal, in 1875. At the general election of 1871 his ambition to get into public life was realized, he being that year elected to the legislative assembly of the Province of Quebec for Drummond and Arthabaska. He remained in the local assembly till January, 1874, when he resigned in order to contest the same seat for In the provincial parliathe Commons. ment his record had been excellent. was known to be a sincere, upright, able and well-informed public man, and had proven himself a genuine Liberal in the truest and best sense of the word; so when he came to ask his constituents to send him to the wider sphere of usefulness they did not refuse him. At once, on taking his seat in the House of Commons, his brilliant abilities and his high character were at once acknowledged. Sir John, through his Pacific Railway transaction, had been relegated to the opposition benches, and Mr. Mackenzie had been called upon to form an administration. Mr. Laurier was invited by the new premier to enter the Cabinet, and was given the portfolio of Inland Revenue. This office he held for a year, when the government resigned. Returning to Drummond and Arthabaska, he was defeated, but the member for Quebec East, the Hon. I. Thibaudeau, resigned, and Mr. Laurier was elected for that seat. He has represented Quebec east since. On the 13th of May, 1868, he married Miss Lafontaine. Mr. Laurier is one of the most moderate and judicial members of the House of Commons. As a speaker, he always appears as if he regarded some responsibility as attaching to every word he utters. He is calm and reasonable, and always receives respect and attention when he rises, and has always, on such occasions, something to say. He speaks with a very pure French accent, and is a very effective speaker.

Pearson, Mr. Edwin Pritchard. Toronto, the subject whom we have chosen for this sketch, was born on the 23rd of July, 1845, at Dublin, Ireland. His parents are still both living in Toronto, and his father was at one time engaged in the dry-goods business. Mr. Pearson was educated at Up. per Canada College, where he exhibited much mental alertness. After leaving college he entered the dry-goods business, thus employing himself for about seven years; but such an occupation was not congenial to his tastes; it was too slow; and it left no great room for his ambition, therefore, he began to look about him for some employment or occupation more to his taste. In a little while, thereafter, we see him engaged in an insurance business, and concerned with brokerage. Mr. Pearson's life has not been by any means uneventful. During the Fort Erie disturbances or the Ridgeway combat, as it is known, he served in the merchants' company of volunteers, now known as No. 5 of the Queen's Own, and h also served during the St. Alban's raids. He always exhibited much ardour in military matters, and served regularly at the military school, and he now holds a first-class certificate from Major-General Napier, and this entitles him to a captain's commission, should he be called upon to act. His zeal has, however, not been confined to the military channel. He is an ardent lover and patron of sports, taking especial interest in lacrosse, our national game. But to patriotism and sports alone Mr. Pearson has not confined his zeal, for he has always taken an active part in municipal matters, and, in fact, in all questions with which the welfare of the public are concerned. As an instance of how his services were appreciated in the cause of education, it may be stated that he held the office of school trustee for seven With benevolent and other associations he has likewise been prominently connected. He is also a member of the Board of of Underwriters, and of the Board of Trade, a mason of the Doric Lodge, and an Oddfellow. He has ripened and enlarged his experience by extensive travel through Great Britain, where none of the lessons to be learned by a man who keeps eyes and ears open, were lost upon him. In religion he is a member of the Church of England, and ha In poli of Sir the po party i was m Miss J was the who gr eventu liberal when h son rep Compa the fire Boy

LL.B.,

of the

Berlin,

Townse

rio, Ca

father v send, a farm la in Norf conside vanced ary, 18 by, dur was a r Jersey, the Bri left the polis co Bowlby served, having pany o landing Bay of in recei Govern: one of t Bowlby the anc settled: at such family 1 nial bra from go

William

an emir capacity

Times, a dor to (

erously

family 1

pelled t

tant re

family.

and has high standing in that communion. In politics he supports the administration of Sir John A. Macdonald, believing that the political course of the Conservative party is best for the country's welfare. He was married on the 25th of April, 1871, to Miss Jennie Lake, of Kingston. Miss Lake was the daughter of one of those sturdy men who grappled with fortune, overcame, and eventually saw his exertions crowned with liberal success. Our subject came to Canada when he was in his fourth year. Mr. Pearson represents the Northern Fire Insurance Company, in Toronto, and is a member of the firm of Pearson Brothers, brokers, etc.

nd

nd

ιks

d.

en

lу,

re

her ds

ed

ge mut

nis

no

he

ру-

nа.

ed

ot

he

ay he

υW

гy

iis

li-

Bowlby, Ward Hamilton, M.A., LL.B., County Crown Attorney and Clerk of the Peace for the County of Waterloo, Berlin, Ont., was born in the Township of Townsend. in the County of Norfolk, Ontario, Canada, on October 4th, 1834. father was the late Adam Bowlby, of Townsend, an extensive farmer and speculator in farm lands, who owned large tracts of land in Norfolk and adjoining counties, acquired considerable wealth, and died, at the advanced age of 91 years, on the 26th Februarv. 1883. His grandfather, Richard Bowlby, during the American Revolutionary War, was a resident of the then Province of New Jersey, and being firm in his allegiance to the British Crown, became a U. E. Loyalist, left the United States, and settled in Annapolis county, Nova Scotia, where Adam Bowlby was born in 1792. Adam Bowlby served, while a mere lad, in the war of 1812, having been placed in command of a company of coast guardsmen to prevent the landing of privateers on the shores of the Bay of Fundy, and for this service he was in receipt of a pension from the Canadian Government, up to the day of his death, as one of the veterans of the war of 1812. The Bowlbys are an old English family, but as the ancestors of the subject of this sketch settled in the British provinces of America at such an early period, this branch of that family may be now properly called the colonial branch of the family, and are descended from good U. E. Loyalist stock. William Bowlby, an English barrister and an eminent war correspondent, who, in the capacity of correspondent of the London Times, accompanied Lord Elgin as ambassador to China in 1859, and was there treacherously killed by the Chinese, and to whose family the Chinese government were compelled to pay a large indemnity, was a distant relative of this branch of the same family. The mother of the subject of this sketch was Elizabeth Sovereign, daughter of the late Leonard Sovereign, of Waterford, Ont., and niece of the late Philip Sovereign, M.P.P., member in the first parliament of Upper Canada at Niagara. Mr. Bowlby's great-grandmother, on the father's side, was a sister of Josiah Wedgwood, the celebrated English chemist who invented the Wedg-, Ward Hamilton Bowlby was educated in a clergyman's school at the Woodhouse Rectory, near Simcoe, and in the grammar schools at Simcoe, Streetsville and St. Thomas, and at University College, Toronto, and graduated both in arts and in law at the University of Toronto. During every year of his college course he held a first scholarship, and on graduating to the degree of B.A. in the University of Toronto, in 1856, he obtained the Jamieson gold medal, and again on graduating to the degree of LL.B., in 1858, Mr. Bowlby obtained the University gold medal in law, he being the first person who ever had that honour from the Toronto University. Mr. Bowlby studied law in the office of the law firm of Wilson, Patterson & Beaty, of Toronto, which firm was then composed of the present Chief Justice Wilson, Judge Patterson, and Mr. James Beaty, Q.C., M.P., and he was called to the bar and admitted as a solicitor in May, 1858, and has now practised the legal profession for over twenty-seven years Mr. Bowlby is a member of the in Berlin. law firm of Bowlby & Clement, one of the leading law firms in the County of Waterloo, and is a sound lawyer, a good counsellor, an excellent cross-examiner of witnesses, and a shrewd man of business. He is also a solicitor for two of the chartered banks doing business at Berlin and Waterloo, and is solicitor for one of the largest insurance companies in Ontario. During his long professional career he has argued many important cases in the High Court at Toronto, and in the Supreme Court at Ottawa, and has always enjoyed a large and lucrative practice, and been in every way most successful, and is financially rated as one of the wealthiest citizens of Berlin. Mr. Bowlby has often been a member of the town and county councils; was reeve of Berlin from 1863 to 1868, and has been a member of the Public School Board of Berlin for the past twenty years, and has always done his utmost to promote the interests of education. In February, 1862, the Cartier-Macdonald Government issued a proclamation dividing the County of Waterloo into two registration districts, and offered Mr. Bowlby the position of registrar of North Waterloo at Berlin, but, in consequence of the fact that the old registrar afterwards elected to retain the registrarship at Berlin, the Government appointed Mr. Bowlby registrar of South Waterloo, at Preston, on March 17th, 1862. and although he, at first, accepted the office and performed its duties for a length of time, yet he refused to comply with the law requiring him to remove his place of residence from Berlin to Preston, as he would not give up his law practice at Berlin for the registrarship at Preston, and a change of government having taken place in the meantime steps were thereupon taken to abolish the new registry office for South Waterloo, and on October 15th, 1863, under the auspices of the Macdonald-Dorion Government, there was passed the Act of Parliament, 27 Vict. cap. 35, whereby the ridings of Waterloo were re-united for registration purposes. Mr. Bowlby was appointed to the offices of County Crown Attorney and Clerk of the Peace for the County of Waterloo, by the first Provincial Government of Ontario, on December 24th, 1867, which offices he has ever since held, and in both of which he has given every satisfaction. Mr. Bowlby has travelled much in foreign parts, having crossed the Atlantic several times, and in the years 1879 and 1880, in company with his wife and daughter, he made a tour of fourteen months abroad and visited all the principal cities and places of interest in Great Britain and continental Europe. He is a member of the Church of England. Holding government offices for the last eighteen years, he has not recently taken any part in political matters, but in politics he is now generally supposed to be in sympathy with the Liberal party. Mr. Bowlby has one of the prettiest and most delightful residences in Berlin, situate in an enclosure of eleven acres, surrounded by a beautiful well-kept lawn, dotted over with clumps of evergreens, deciduous trees and shrubbery, and here and there flanked with spruce and cedar Mr. Bowlby has four brothers, viz., Alfred Bowlby, Esq., M.D., of Waterford; William Bowlby, Esq., of Simcoe; D. S. Bowlby, Esq., M.D., of Berlin, and J. W. Bowlby, Esq., LL.B., barrister, of Brantford; and he has an only sister, Mary Ursula, wife of Col. Walker Powell, the Adjutant-General at Ottawa. Mr. Bowlby was married on April 10th, 1861, to Lissie, eldest daughter of the late J. Hespeler, Esq., founder of the village of Hespeler, and he has an only child, a daughter, Annie Hespeler Bowlby, now the wife of George H. Perley, Esq., a junior partner in the well-known and extensive lumbering firm of Perley & Pattee, of Ottawa.

Medcalf, Alfred, the subject of this sketch, was born in the City of Toronto, in 1841. His father, Francis Henry Medcalf. ex-mayor of the city, married Mary Harrison, a lady belonging to Philadelphia, who is now seventy-six years of age. Mr. F. H. Medcalf, the father of our subject, carried on for many years the foundry business. and during his long career won the confidence and respect of his fellow citizens. On the demise of the father, the son succeeded to his business, and he is now one of our most prosperous mechanics. Young Medcalf received his education in the public schools of Toronto, and left with a good Alfred Medcalf is a English education. gentleman of strict moral habits, and edifies those who come within the circle of his influence by his upright conduct. He has always been fond of travel, seeing what the great busy world has to show, and was absent about two years, when a young man, in Philadelphia, Brooklyn and Ohio, perfecting his skill in mechanical pursuits. On his return to Toronto, he entered into partnership with his father, and this partnership continued till the death of the latter in 1880. He now fell to the sole proprietorship of the business, and under his management it has lost none of its old vitality or prestige. Mr. Medcalf has not, however, surrendered himself solely to mechanics and the work of his establishment, as will be seen from the fact that for the last eight years he has been one of the assessors of the City of Toronto, besides being a school trustee. Early in life he joined a temperance society, and has all his days been a rigid abstainer from intoxicating drinks, and has done a good deal in the way of resisting a traffic which has brought misery to so many households. In the temperance body naturally a man of his character and ability could not fail to find recognition, and consequently he has held several high positions in the society. In his eighteenth year he connected himself with the Orange order, and in that body has held distinguished offices from time to time. In religion he is a prominent member of the Church of England communion, and in politics he has followed in the footsteps of his worthy father, who was an intelligent and uncompromising Conservative. Our subject is now chairman of one of the Conservative city-ward associations. He married, in 1866, Miss Elizabeth Thompson, of Toronto, by whom he has had four children, three boys and one girl. In social life Mr. Medcalf is geni ance whos ers a Otta of P N.B. late . missi Trea Ap-P at ar and gover repor River the y Massa in the Mr. privat mar S 28 ·S Instit the p 1848. explor of rail were s time an eng Brasse and N the sa structi tween 1856, H Brunsv constru Amerid Shedia comple For a with go vate p Scotia a services vincial

signed,

Messrs.

tractors

politan England

importa

to New works in

of the

ment ra

genial and kind to all who enjoy his acquaintance, and he is one of the class of men whose personal followers and warm admirers are never few.

m of

this

nto,

cálf,

rri-

who

H.

ried

ess,

nfi-

ens.

suc-

one

ung

ub-

bod

s a

di-

of

Hе

hat vas > ct-On

rtnip in ip

ge.
ed
of
he
en
o,
fe
as nal
is

Perley, Henry Fullerton, C.E., Ottawa, Chief Engineer of the Department of Public Works, was born in St. John, N.B., in 1831. He is the eldest son of the late M. H. Perley, who was Imperial Commissioner of Fisheries under the Reciprocity Treaty of 1854. He is a descendant of Allen Ap-Perley, of Wales, who, in 1630, arrived at and settled in Ipswich, Massachusetts, and is a great-grandson of Israel Perley, who, in 1761, at the request of the then governor of Massachusetts, examined and reported on the lands bordering on the River St. John; in New Brunswick, and in the year following headed those who left Massachusetts, and took farms and settled in the parish of Mangerville, on that river. Mr. Perley was educated in St. John at private schools, and at the Collegiate Grammar School, Fredericton, N.B., and served 38 a pupil with John Wilkinson, member Institute of Civil Engineers, and entered the public service of New Brunswick in 1848, and was employed for four years on exploratory surveys for a perfected system His abilities as an engineer of railways. were soon recognized throughout the maritime provinces, and in 1852 he accepted an engagement by Messrs. Peto, Betts & Brassey on surveys in New Brunswick and Nova Scotia; and was employed by the same firm from 1854-56 on the construction of the Grand Trunk Railway between Montreal and Brockville. In August, 1856, he again entered the service of New Brunswick, as resident engineer on the construction of the European and North American Railway between St. John and He was engaged here till the completion of the line in December, 1860. For a period now he had no connection with government, and was busy with private practice. In May, 1863, the Nova Scotia government sought and secured his services: and he filled the position of provincial engineer for two years, when he resigned, to take the position of agent for Messrs. Kelk, Waring Bros. & Lucas, contractors for the construction of the Metropolitan (underground) Railway, London, England. At the completion of this most important engagement in 1870, he returned to New Brunswick, and took charge of the works in connection with the improvement of the freighting facilities of the government railways of that province, and the construction of the deep water terminus and the extension line thereto, at St. John. In May, 1872, he was appointed engineer in charge of harbours, etc., in the maritime provinces for the Department of Public Works, and held that position until the close of 1879, when his great engineering abilities, and markedly brilliant and successful professional career, was recognized by the appointment to his present position of chief engineer. The best proof of Mr. Perley's qualifications is found in the succes ful accomplishment of his many important undertakings, and the demand his services were in by governments and powerful companies. His position as chief engineer is not an easy one to fill; nay, it is hard, most difficult, and wearing. But if the writer is to trust testimony, which he believes to be strictly correct, Mr. Perley is master, thorough master, of his trying department; and gives evidence of the same sound judgment that characterized his professional career before he took up his abode at Ottawa. He married, in 1853, Julia E., daughter of the late Joseph Fairweather, of St. John, N.B., by whom he has had five children. In 1861 our subject volunteered during the Trent difficulty, and assisted in raising the New Brunswick Engineers, with which corps he was connected until 1881, when he was appointed engineer officer at headquarters, and attached to the headquarter staff.

Macdonald, Archibald Henry, Guelph, Lieutenant-Colonel, commanding the 1st Provisional Brigade of Field Artillery, Active Militia, Barrister-at-Law and Solicitor of the Supreme Court of Ontario, was born at Cobourg, on the 21st July, 1848. He is the eldest son of Archibald Macdonald, late judge of the County Court of the County of Wellington, and Jane Ann his wife, who was a daughter of the Rev. David Wright. Judge Macdonald was the eldest son of the late Archibald Macdonald, of Cobourg, formerly a captain in H. M. 35th Foot, and colonel of the 4th Northumberland Militia. Lieut.-Col. Macdonald was educated principally at the Guelph Grammar School, and studied law in the office of Judge Kingsmill, now of Walkerton, then practising in Guelph, and his partners, being called to the bar at the head of his class. in Hilary term, 1870, and in the ensuing term admitted as an attorney. Mr. Macdonald first joined the militia as a private in the Guelph Rifle Company, and obtained a 2nd Class Military School certificate, 10th August, 1864; and 1st Class, 8th March.

Soon after he was appointed instructor to the company, with the rank of captain, and he went with his company to the front in March, 1866. He obtained a first class certificate in gunnery from the Royal Artillery School, at Toronto, on the 26th May, 1870. He was commissioned as lieutenant in the Guelph Garrison Battery on the 12th August, 1870, of which he was appointed captain on the 12th April, in the following year. After serving as adjutant in the 30th Battalion Artillery Militia, at the annual drill at Goderich, 1871, the battery was converted into a field battery, "The Wellington," in September, 1871, when Captain Macdonald was appointed to command it, and received as a special case promotion to the brevet rank of major on 16th April, 1875. Subsequently the Ontario Field Battery was raised at Guelph, and the batteries were brigaded as the 1st Provisional Brigade Field Artillery, on the 24th March, 1880, when Major Macdonald was appointed to the command, and was given the rank of lieutenant-colonel on the 25th Nov., 1881. He has served on the staff of Deputy Adjutant General Taylor, at London, and at Sussex, N.B. He commanded the detachment of Canadian Artillery sent to the Shoeburyness competitions, in 1883, and has with so much success commanded his brigade that out of five years, from 1879 to 1884, in which prizes for general efficiency were offered to field batteries by the Governor-General of Canada, each of his batteries has twice won the cups. He is president of the Council of the Dominion Artillery Association, and a member of the Executive Committee, and he is also a member of the Council of the Dominion Lieut.-Col. Macdonald Rifle Association. stands high in the records of his townsfolk for ability and integrity; and for the years 1884 and 1885 he has served as alderman for Guelph. In politics, he always has been an unswerving Conservative, and in religion, he is a member of the Church of England. On the 21st October, 1875, he married Alicia, daughter of the late Robert White, of Guelph. We should be by no means surprised if our subject's position as alderman were only a step in the direction of wider political usefulness.

Hendry, William, of the town of Berlin, in the County of Waterloo, manager of the Ontario Mutual Life Assurance Company, was born in the City of Aberdeen, Scotland, on the 2nd day of March, 1834, and baptized in the Presbyterian Church, by the late Rev. Dr. Kidd, of Aberdeen. His father, Alexander Henry, was a cabinet-maker, and his mother's maiden name was Ann Milne. They, with their children, two sons and one daughter, emigrated to Canada in the year 1836, and settled, in the then back woods, on a farm between Fergus and Elora. Here a small clearing was made, and a comfortable log dwelling erected. On the 1st of March, 1838, the day before the subject of this memoir was four years old. his father was killed when felling a tree, and the lamentable occurrence resulted in the breaking up of the home and dispelling its prospects. The boy's mother, who was possessed of strong will power, braved the almost insurmountable difficulties of her lot, and succeeded in obtaining for her son, William, as full a common school education as could be obtained at that time. The lad was placed under the tutor. ship of Mr. James McQueen, who still survives, and who has rarely been excelled in the country as a teacher. Her efforts were also untiring in inculcating the principles of the moral law, the Bible being her text-book and dearest companion. She enjoined regular attendance at Sabbath school, under the superintendence of the Rev. George Melville Smillie, who is yet pastor of Melville Church, Fergus. After leaving home, however, and as his years of reason were attained, the Presbyterian doctrines which he was taught appeared so contrary to those taught by our Saviour, to his idea of the divine attributes, and to reason, as he saw it, that young Hendry gradually rejected the doctrines of his youth, preferring those of the sacred Scripture as he found and understood them, and until he was thirty-five years old he found no sectarian doctrines which he could accept. The theological and other writings of Swedenborg had been for some time his reading and study, and after very full reflection he found in them complete and satisfactory tenets of doctrine. These he warmly embraced as to doctrine and life, and the New Jerusalem Church has no more earnest worker among her members than he now is, his motto, as that of his church, being, "All religion has relation to life, and the life of religion is to do good." His wife, who had been brought up a Methodist, also joined him in the reception of the new church doctrines. In his fifteenth year our subject left home and engaged in mercantile business as salesman, and soon thereafter as bookkeeper, in the mercantile and milling firm of C. Hendry & Co., of Conestogo, in the County of Waterloo, the senior member being his brother, who is ten years older.

and

par

He

186

in t

Cov

ed :

who

eng

Wat

owi

who

whie ship

Mut

gani

pres

and

agen

by 1

offer

and

mane

the b

dry 1

sibili

verar

life a

clusiv

imme

count

time

which

hower

and e confid

Hend:

town

one so

no de

was cl

the Co

during

tice of missio:

frateri

at Ber

positio

taking craft, t

of the

interfe

he has

Chapte

the ge

this sk

1830, w

Althou;

Ble

and this connection resulted in a business partnership under the firm of C. & W. Hendry, which existed for some years. In 1864 an opportunity offered itself to engage in the growth and scutching of flax in the County of Grey, which Mr. Hendry accepted in partnership with Mr. W. D. Perine, who, with his brothers, were extensively engaged in that business in the County of Waterloo. This venture was unprofitable, owing to the destruction by fire of his whole mill property and the year's crop, which was manufactured and ready for shipment. About this time the Ontario Mutual Life Assurance Company was organized at Waterloo, with I. E. Bowman, president; C. M. Taylor, vice-president; and Moses Springer as secretary and general agent. A manager was deemed necessary by the directors, and that position was offered to Mr. Hendry in August, 1870, and accepted, first on trial, and then permanently, after the principles and details of the business had been acquired. Mr. Hendry now felt the weight of a heavy responsibility; a great future appeared open to the Ontario, to be secured only by perseverance, skill and integrity; the business of life assurance was being done almost exclusively by foreign companies, causing an immense annual financial drain on this country, and it required great labour and time to overcome the many prejudices which then existed. The Ontario is now, The Ontario is now, however, a creditable Canadian institution, and enjoying the fullest measure of public confidence. In November, 1854, William Hendry married Sarah Washburn, of the town of Berlin, and the family consists of one son, three daughters and two grandsons, no deaths having occurred. Mr. Hendry was clerk of the seventh Division Court of the County of Waterloo from 1856 to 1864, during which term he was appointed a justice of the peace, and still enjoys that commission. In 1871 he joined the Masonic fraternity in Grand River Lodge, No. 151, at Berlin, passed through the various official positions, and served two years as W. M., taking a warm interest in the welfare of the craft, till the fall of 1877, when congestion of the brain and a form of spasmodic tetanus interfered with his speech, since which time he has become a member of Grand River Chapter, No. 70, of Berlin.

two

ada

then

and ade,

On

the old.

and

the Iling

was

rved

s of

her

hool

that

tor-

still

lled

orts

rin-

her

en-

ool, ev.

btor

ing

son nes

dea

as

ing Ind

an

eo-

prg

Blevins, John, City Clerk, Toronto, the gentleman who forms the subject of this sketch, was born on the 11th of July, 1830, within two miles of Armagh, Ireland. Although born in the green isle, his father was of English descent. He was educated at Armagh Academy, and was preparing to enter Trinity College, Dublin, when, on the invitation of his brother, then a practising barrister, he came to Canada, in September, 1848. In October of the same year our subject commenced the study of the law in Toronto, with Dr. McMichael, and proving himself to be a painstaking student, he was called to the bar in June, 1854, and up to last year, he successfully practised his profession. As a mark of his talents, it may be mentioned that while studying law, he gave lessons in Greek and Latin and the higher branches of mathematics, with the view of furnishing means to eke out his then scanty income. He was appointed City Clerk in December, 1884, and now enjoys well-earned rest from such an arduous lot as his has been. He became a Freemason twenty years ago, but has not devoted any time to the order. Mr. Blevins has travelled through the United States, and in 1863 went to see the land of his birth. He is a member of the Church of England, and of this religious, persuasion were all his He has taken an active, able and intelligent part in politics, and of the two political parties offered for our acceptance. he has an unhesitating preference for that led by Sir John A. Macdonald. Mr. Blevins has been married, but his wife died fourteen years ago, leaving him with two children, both of whom are girls. Mr. Blevins has been an active member of the community, in proof of which he served for a number of years as alderman, during which period he gained many warm friends.

Kirkpatrick, Lieut. - Col. Hon. George Airey, Q.C., M.P., etc., Speaker of the House of Commons, was born in Kingston, Ontario, 13th September, 1841, and is the fourth son of the late Thomas Kirkpatrick, Esq., Q.C., who came from Coolmine, County Dublin, Ireland. Mr. Kirkpatrick received part of his education at the Grammar School, Kingston, and the High School, St. Johns, P. Q., after which he was sent to Trinity College, Dublin, where he graduated with high honours, receiving the degrees of B.A. and LL.B.; he also graduated as moderator and silver medalist for law, literature and political economy. Returning home, he entered his father's office, and there applied himself to a diligent study of the law, and was called to the bar of Upper Canada at the Hilary term, 1865, and was appointed Queen's counsel on the 11th October, 1880. He received from his alma mater, in June, 1884, the degree of

LL.D. In military affairs Mr. Kirkpatrick has always taken an active part, entering as a private during the Trent affair, and rose step by step in the ranks till he reached the highest command, that of lieutenant.-colonel. He went again into active service in the town of Cornwall, during the Fenian invasion, and acted during that period as adjutant to the 14th P.W.O. Battalion, V. I. He was elected president of the Dominion Rifle Association, and also commanded the Wimbledon Rifle team in 1876. In commercial life, Mr. Kirkpatrick has always had the advancement of his native city at heart, and has been one of the foremost in founding several of its most He holds at the present important works. time the office of director of the Kingston & Pembroke Railroad; is president of Kingston Water Works Company, and president of the Canada Locomotive Works of Kingston. He was chairman for some time and afterwards secretary of the Board of Trustees of Collegiate Institute, being connected with the board since 1870. A large number of his friends, perceiving his marked abilties, and being anxious that they should be employed for the benefit of his country in some legislative sphere, waited upon him and pressed upon him to allow himself to be put in nomination for the seat made vacant by the death of his father. This was in the year 1870, and our subject's father had for many years represented Frontenac. electorate which had felt such confidence in their young representative were soon convinced that their forecasting had been correct, for he at once manifested the same excellent intellectual qualities in public which he had shown in his private affairs. Whenever he arose in the House it was for the purpose of accomplishing something important, and when he spoke attention was given to him. His manner never repelled, but always gathered support, his bearing being dignified, kindly, but firm, nay, uncompromising. Soon men about the Treasury benches began to say one to another that Mr. Kirkpatrick's day for some position in government was drawing near. Meanwhile he had given his attention to legislative measures; and it was he who introduced the measure which aimed at securing a lien for seamen's wages on vessels plying on inland waters. Year after year he introduced his measure, till eventually it found expression in Mr. Blake's Maritime Court Act for On-How important Mr. Kirkpatrick's measure was is now apparent to the public; and sailors on inland seas regard him justly as their benefactor. As we have said, Mr.

Kirkpatrick was first returned to the House of Commons for Frontenac in 1870. general election of 1872 he was returned by acclamation; again returned in 1874, in 1878, and by acclamation at the last general Perceiving his courtesy, dignity election. and address, and his acute knowledge of parliamentary procedure, he was elected Speaker on the 8th of February, 1883, that being the date of the opening of the present parliament. .. As a Speaker he has been dignified, impartial and effective; and he has always held the reins of the House with a firm hand. He married first, on the 25th October, 1865, Miss Frances Jane, daughter of the late Hon. John Macaulay. She died on the 20th of January, 1877. He married again on the 26th of September, 1883, Miss. Isabel Louisa, youngest daughter of the Hon. Sir David L. Macpherson, Senator. In politics it need hardly be said Mr. Kirk. patrick is, and always has been, a Conservative. In religion he is a member of the Church of England.

Tilley, Sir Samuel Leonard, K.C. M.G., one of the most prominent of Conservative statesmen in Canada, and at present Minister of Finance, is the great-grandson of Samuel Tilley, one of the United Empire Loyalists. The subject of this sketch was born at Gagetown, Queen's county, N.B., on the 8th of May, 1818, so that he is now in his sixty-eighth year. He was educated at the Gagetown Grammar School, and in his thirteenth year he became apprenticed to an apothecary. Before beginning business for himself, Mr. Tilley was for a time in the employ of Mr. William O. Smith, druggist, a gentleman of superior intellectual parts, and who observed public movements with much interest. It was, probably, from him that the future Finance Minister of Canada derived his first lessons in political economy; and we may, without being far astray, take for granted that Mr. Smith very plainly saw that his lessons were not likely to be wasted on this clear-headed and enthusiastic young man. Young Tilley being sprung from loyalist stock, it was only fair to assume that whenever, if ever, he should bring himself before the public, he would find a prepossession in his favour. He became a prominent member of a debating society when seventeen, and took a leading part in the political discussions, and shortly after became a staunch and ableadvocate of the cause of temperance. It may here be said that from that far-past day to this Mr. Tilley has always been loyal to his temperance principles, has always seized the oppor upon of his cepts. servic of the 1854, the o Patria two y heard was tl Ansley ity. of the the cor to She Assem Tilley followi to und nents, Hon. J mot A a judge nor], ar the gov cession was na treacher resolved Tilley, S upon pu ing that office, v their sea in that electors, and all t H. Nee Tilley the was not] Milton." ant, and the new a to this, breaks, h of power New Br ments du session of sion of 1

the liquo

power, and tration in

till March

ence held

cuss marit

peared at

made a tel

opportunity to forward the movement, and upon all occasions has shown the sincerity of his character by the practice of his precepts. In recognition of his distinguished services in the cause, the National division of the Sons of Temperance of America, in 1854, elected him to the highest office in the order, namely that of Most Worthy Patriarch, and which position he held for two years. In enlarged politics the first heard of Mr. Tilley was in 1849, when he was the seconder on the paper of Mr. B. Ansley, who was returned by a good majority. He was one of the foremost promoters of the Railway League, organized to secure the construction of a railway from St. John to Shediac. In 1850 he was elected to the Assembly for the City of St. John. Mr. Tilley was at this time a Liberal. following year the Tory manipulators began to undermine the foundations of their opponents, and they seduced from allegiance the Hon. J. H. Gray and the Hon. R. D. Wilmot [Mr. Gray was afterwards appointed a judge, and Mr. Wilmot a lieutenant-governorl, and these two good gentlemen entered the government. On the day that their secession became known, the Liberal party was naturally shocked and pained at the treachery, but closed up their ranks and resolved still to fight the enemy. Messrs. Tilley, Simonds, Ritchie and Needham thereupon published a card to the people, declaring that if Mr. Wilmot, who had accepted office, was re-elected, they would resign their seats in the House, as they could not, in that case, represent their views. The electors, however, returned Mr. Wilmot, and all the parties on the card, except W. H. Needham, resigned their seats. Mr. Tilley then returned to private life. But he was not long to remain "a mute, inglorious Milton." In 1854 the Liberals were triumphant, and Mr. Tilley obtained a portfolio in the new administration. From that time up to this, with the exception of a couple of breaks, he has enjoyed a remarkable lease of power, having been a member of the New Brunswick and Dominion governments during many long years, except the session of 1851, and part of the extra session of 1854. In 1856 he was beaten on the liquor question, but in 1857 regained power, and became leader of the administration in 1860, which position he retained till March, 1865. He attended the conference held in Prince Edward Island to discuss maritime union, and subsequently appeared at the Quebec conference, where he made a telling speech on the importance of use

the

by

in

eral

nity

of

ted

har

ent

dig-

has

h a

ōth

ter

ied

ied.

iss.

the:

or. rk-

C.

esidied tch
y,
he
tuol,
nng
a
h, coey,
er
ing
th
ot
d

the province he represented. The proceedings of the Quebec conference were kept from the public with the most zealous care, but one member belonging to a sea province told his wife one day that "it was no use, he was unable "to keep it any longer." He unburthened himself to a newspaper editor. when with the speed of the wind intelligence of the affair was spread through the British North American provinces. At once in the lower provinces a storm of opposition was raised to the scheme, and presses rolled out tons of pamphlets, placards, circulars and open letters, denouncing the scheme, and calling upon the people to rise and thwart Tilley and other enemies of his country. The ministry fell. The Irish were all the time rampant and unappeasable. They all remembered how Ireland had once been sold. and their representative newspaper became so bitter as to eventually overreach its aim. To help along the scheme and defeat the great booming of the Irish, fate brought along the Fenian scare. The Government resigned, and Mr. Tilley was sent for to form an administration. A new election took place in 1866, and the anti's got a still worse drubbing than had fallen to the lot of the supporters of confederation. A short time afterwards Mr. Tilley attended the conference in England, formed to procure a Chart of Union, and he was, in July, 1867, made a C.B. (civil), in recognition of his distinguished services. He resigned his seat in the New Brunswick legislature and government to become Minister of Customs in the new Canadian Cabinet. From November, 1868, to April, 1869, he acted Minister of Public Works, and on the 22nd of February, 1873, he was made Minister of Finance. This office he held till the downfall of the administration on the 5th of November of the same year. He then became lieutenantgovernor of his native province, which office he held till 1878, when he took the field again, with the triumphant result so well known. In the new Conservative administration he became once again Finance Minister, and shortly afterwards framed the legislation with which his name will be connected so long as the history of Canada is read, namely the National Policy. On May 24th, 1879, he was created a Knight of the Order of St. Michael and St. George by the Governor-General, acting for the Queen. Sir Leonard Tilley has been twice married, first to Julia Ann, daughter of James T. Hanford, of St. John, N B; and second, in 1867 to Alice, eldest daughter of Z. Chipman, of St. Stephen, N.B. Sir Leonard Tilley's career has been an honour to his country, and one that young men who aim to do well in public life should seek to remember.

Philip, David Leslie, M.D., Brantford. This popular and successful physician was born at Richmond, Ontario, in the year 1841. His parents were Anthony Philip, and Isabella Mowat, nee Buchanan, and both were of Scottish stock. His father was a native of Aberdeen, in which city he spent his early years, attending Marshall college. Our subject's mother was born in Edinburgh, and she was a daughter of the Rev. Dr. George Buchanan, of that city. The name Buchanan is well-known in Scottish annals, and many members of this distinguished family took a leading part in Scottish ecclesiastical history. Young Philip was educated at the High School, Vankleek Hill, in the ()ttawa valley, and subsequently attended McGill Medical College, gradu ting as M.D., from that institution in 1861. He took honours, obtaining the Holmes prize for thesis and also the prize in clinical After leaving college, he promedicine. ceeded to Woodstock, Ontario, and entered into partnership with Dr. John Turquand, a well-known physician, who was president of the College of Physicians and Surgeons for Ontario in 1867. This partnership was continued for two years. He then went to Plattsville in the same county, where he remained seven years enjoying a very large Upon leaving Plattsville, the practice. medical profession of Oxford county tendered him a public dinner in the town hall, and presented him with a fine case of surgi-He removed to Brantcal instruments. ford in 1872, and has since been engaged in his profession there, doing a large and lucrative practice. Dr. Philip belongs to the Presbyterian church, and has been a member of the board of the Collegiate institute for eight years, of which he is at present chairman. He was elected in 1882, 2nd vice-president of the Ontario Medical Association; and in 1885, he was chosen to represent the Erie and Niagara division in the Ontario Medical Council. He has contributed various articles to the current medical literature, and these contributions have revealed much original thought, accurate research, and a clear, graceful and vigorous literary style. Dr. Philip is a man of energy and character, and of large public Although his practice is large, his connection with enterprises beyond professional work is varied, and as we have shown, important. He is a member of Brant Lodge,

A.F. and A. M, and he is likewise a member. of the Brant County Medical Association. Schultz, David L., was born at Rock. wood, Eramosa, in the County of Welling. His father was Barnard ton, Ontario. Schultz, and his mother, whose maiden name was Martha Jackson, were married at Guelph, Ontario. Our subject's grand. father came from Pennsylvania and settled in Niagara, and after remaining there for some years, removed in 1826, to Rockwood. and took up land, and upon this same land lives at this day the father of David L. The grandfather took part in the Schultz. war of 1812, and fought bravely on the Canad an side. Mr. Schultz's celebrated maternal grandmother was a relation of General Jackson, and nearly every one of her ancestors were more or less prominent in military circles. David L. Schultz was educated in the common schools, and completed his studies at Rockwood Academy. At fourteen he left school, and engaged himself at the work of milling, at which occupation he continued for twelve years. He then entered a general store at Under. wood, but only conducted the business for a short period, when he sold out and returned to Rockwood, where, with a determination to win, and sleeves rolled up, he commenced business again. His undertaking was attended with very 200d success. Subsequently he turned his attention to stone quarrying, and obtained the general contract for supplying stone to the Grand Trunk Railway. This contract is He has been extremely still in his hands. active, and being blessed with good judy ment, and having seldom invested in unprofitable undertakings, he now finds himself in a comfortable position. He joined the volunteers, 20th Lorne Rifles, No. 6, in 1872, and is now captain of a company, having passed very successfully a military examination at the Infantry School, Toronto, in the spring of 1885. He is a mason of Speed Lodge, No. 180, Guelph, and an Oddfellow of Silver Star Lodge, Weston. In addition to his office of clerk of the Division Court, he is a commissioner for the High Court of Justice, and also issuer of marriage licenses. He has travelled through Canada and visited the principal cities in the United States. He is a Presbyterian, and in politics an independent. He married at Underwood, Janet Gunn, who is dead. By this marriage he has one girl. Mr. Schultz has the character of being very prompt and particular about all matters of man paris. Caith and Math and v Posto other Post (signed the C credit other Mr. M

M

tende

Post

was a tender Post (that p Maria White. in 1884 Tec energe

in 177

His fa

Puckes

battle, eshinw: so sav Scioto recorde that ab watawa of unit against rison a in the 1811, T the son ally to t dier-gen and at t present, warriors on the British 2 rison, ha Commod command sonal con horse bei three bal left arm, with his from his his feet.

brother. I

Matheson, David, Assistant Superintendent of the Savings Bank Branch of the Post Office Department, Ottawa, is a Scotchman by birth, he having been born in the parish of Canisbay, near John O'Groat's, Caithness-shire, on the 25th October, 1840; and emigrated to Canada in 1861. Mr. Matheson joined the civil service in 1863, and was appointed Private Secretary to the Postmaster-General. In 1868 he, with another officer, was appointed to organize the Post Office Savings Bank, and specially designed the plan of accounts which has made the Canadian system of Savings banks a credit to our country, and a model that other countries have been pleased to adopt. Mr. Matheson, in recognition of his services, was appointed, in 1881, Assistant Superintendent of the Savings Bank Branch of the Post Office Department, and still occupies that position. In 1865 he was married to Marianne White, daughter of Mr. M. White, of Quebec. This estimable lady died in 1884.

mber.

tion.

lling-

rnard

aiden

rried

rand-

ttled

e for

boot

land

d L

n the

the

rated

n of one rom-

hultz

and emy.

aged

hich

ears.

ıder∙

s for

and

h a

olled

His

good tten-

the

ct is

mely

udg-

unhim-

ineà

any.

tarv

onte,

n of

Ddd-

In

Sion

High

Tecumseh, Chief .- This renowned, energetic, and daring Indian chief, was born in 1770, and died on October 5th, 1813. His father was a Shawanee brave, named Puckeshinwa, and when he was killed in battle, his illustrious son was a child. Puckeshinwa was valorous and terrible in war, so say the Indian legends, and lived on the Scioto river, Ohio. The following story is recorded of Tecumseh :- "It is supposed that about 1806, he and his brother, Elskwatawa, the prophet, formed the project of uniting all the western Indians in a war against the Americans. When General Harrison attacked and defeated the prophet in the battle of Tippecanoe, November 7, 1811, Tecumseh was absent on a visit to the south. In the war of 1812 he was an ally to the British, with the rank of brigadier-general. At the siege of Fort Meigs, and at the second assault in July, he was present, being at the head of two thousand warriors. In the battle of Moraviantown, on the Thames, at which Proctor was the British general the American general, Harrison, had for his aides General Cass and Commodore Perry. Colonel R. M. Johnson commanded on the left, and came into personal conflict, it is said, with Tecumseh. His horse being killed and himself wounded by three balls in his right thigh, and two in his left arm, the savage chief rushed upon him with his tomahawk; but, drawing a pistol from his holster, Johnson laid him dead at his feet. In this battle, Colonel Johnson's brother, Lieutenant-Colonel James Johnson, was killed. The project of uniting all the western Indians against the Americans, and the efforts made to execute the project, display a savage energy and perseverance rarely to be met with. The prophet as well as the warrior being now deceased, such a combination will probably never be made again. No one, however, can fully calculate the inestimable value of those devoted 'red men, led on by the brave Tecumseh during the struggle of 1812. But for them, it is probable, that we should not now have a Canada; and if we had, we would not enjoy the liberty and privileges which we possess in so eminent a degree. King Phillip Pontiac, the Ottawa chief, who in 1763 captured Michilimackinac and invested Detroit; and the Prophet and Tecumseh may be regarded as the most remarkable of the savage warriors of America." But witty, discerning and able though this prophet was, he was the greatest impostor and the most consummate liar of his time. He pretended to have died, to have been in the land of the blessed, then to have risen from the dead by virtue of some divine powers within him. every way possible, and most fertile was his imagination, did he work upon the credulity of the Indians. Once he heard through the almanacs, that on a stated day there would be a total eclipse of the sun, so he went about among the tribes, who had heard nothing of it, and who were not aware that the white men could predict "dark days," announcing that on a certain day he would spread darkness all over the land as an earnest of the things to follow; and when the day came the Indians flocked together, half in awe, marvelling if indeed the prophet was as mighty as he said he was. Slowly a keen black shadow began to creep over the face of the sun, the heavens became of a, sickly orange colour; still the shadow crept onwards till the whole face of the sun was sout from sight, and a dismal gloom fell upon the face of the land. The awe of the Indians knew no bounds, nor their reverence for the prophet, who they believed was in direct alliance with the Great Spirit, if he were really not the Manitou himself. But a most hideous looking great spirit was this prophet. His face was of a more than usually repulsive Indian type, and, to add to its comeliness, it had only one eye, the other having been destroyed by an arrow when he was young. There is no doubt that Tecumseh abetted this impostor, but history justifies him-that is, the English historian does-since his aim was the manipulation of the tribes in the service of the British flag.

The word Tecumseh has received many translations, one being "The Shooting Star," another "The Flying Tiger," and still another, "The Wild Cat Springing upon his Prey." Of these the former is generally accepted.

Clarke, Henry Edward, M.P.P. for West Toronto, the subject of this sketch, was born at Three Rivers, Quebec, on 20th of March, 1829. He is a son of Henry Clarke and Ellen, nee Armstrong, both of whom came from Midhill, County of Fermanagh, Ireland. Our subject received his tuition, which comprised a sound and practical English education, from public teachers and private instructors, and at fifteen years of age Mr. Clarke left home to push his fortune in the world. At the age of eighteen he had learned the trade of saddle and trunkmaking, and found employment in one of the large shops in Montreal. remained until 1848, and then removed to Ottawa (then Bytown), where, in 1849, when barely twenty years of age, we find him fereman of the largest saddlery shop in the town, and here he remained for about four years, working diligently, and perfecting himself in his trade. Mr. Clarke again returned to Montreal in 1853, and the next year he was sent to Toronto to open a branch trunk store for R. Dean & Co., of Montreal. Mr. Clarke now resolved to carry on business for himself, and in ten months after his arrival here he bought out R. Dean & Co. Although he had very little capital at his command, he had industry and perseverance, and the result is that we now find him at the head of one of the largest trunk manufacturing establishments in America. Although an active man in his own business, yet Mr. Clarke has found some time to devote to public For eight years he was a director of the Mechanics' Institute; was alderman for St. George's Ward in 1879, and for St. Andrew's Ward for the years 1881, '82, and '83. He was chairman of the Court of Revision in 1881, and of the Executive Committee in 1883. He was elected, in 1883, to represent Toronto West in the Provincial Parliament, which seat he still holds; and he is also one of the directors of the Fede-Mr. Clarke is an Orangeman, ral bank. having joined the order in 1849. He travelled extensively in 1878, and visited London, Edinburgh, Dublin, Belfast, Paris, Geneva, Mont Blanc, Berne, Lucerne, Munich, Vienna, Trieste, Venice, Florence, Rome, Naples, Pompeii, and other historic places. On his return, he delivered a lecture called "Impressions of a Tour in Europe," in Richmond Street Methodist Church, and afterwards pullished it in pamphlet form, Mr. Clarke belongs to the Methodist denomination, and in politics is a Conservative, He married in May, 1856, Anne, daughter of the late Thomas Kennedy, of Montreal, and has had a family of three children, a boy and two girls. His son died at the age of fourteen years. Mr. Clarke's career has been industrious and honourable, and he now enjoys the fruits of his labours and the respect of his fellow men.

McGee, James, Toronto, is a native of the North of Ireland. He served a seven years' apprenticeship, from January, 1835, to 1842, as a manufacturer of linen, with one of the largest firms in Belfast, and he was for four years flax-buyer in the Irish, Dutch and Belgian markets; and afterwards he spent two years in the same business, in France. He came to Canada early in the year 1847, and took out a patent for a new process of rotting flax, and established a scutch mill at Weston, and for some time. in conjunction with the mill, carried on the cordage and rope walk at Yorkville. This business was not successful, as the climate was not suited to it, and it was a step too far in advance of the development of the business facilities and of the manufactures the country. Some time after, Messa. Blaikie & Alexander tried to introduce the flax business at Georgetown, and Messa Gooderham & Worts also endeavoured to establish a linen factory at Streetsville but both efforts failed, and the attempt, after heavy losses, had to be abandoned. Tun ing the scutch mill at Weston back again into what it had formerly been, a saw mill he then went into lumbering. Selling out this property, which has since become the woollen factory of Mr. Wilby, Mr McGe moved up into Vaughan and King, and also into Essa, and built saw mills and carried of the lumber business. He supplied, among other things, in the year 1854, the timber for the cribbing of the esplanade, under the Cotton & Manning contract, and the span for two sea-going vessels, being built by f Hayes & Co., and did a large lumber bus ness in those localities up to 1869. Being large shareholder in the Royal Canada Bank, which, in consequence of mismanage ment, had to close its doors, he was calle upon by meetings of shareholders held in Whitby, Brampton and Toronto, to take part in the reorganization of the bank, which has did, and acted as director, under the presi dency of the late Hon. John Crawford, and dian, merge the he he resi his lun 1871, aiderm conneil took ar the ne When t Associa were er the Cit perman assistan Toronto whose e

of great

gricult

of the C

the H

master

te large been in he still the Unidirector Exhibitittorney Henry, I un active Manitoul Dufferin, Methodis Reform. aughter ownship.

ueen's usiness.

costig ter of 11 f Canada rovince on d receive ge of St., in public and indict, and unected pointed unty, an Common very earl the solid become bove all, received urse white wards 18 lets of Vi the Hon. Alexander Campbell, now Posttrope," master General; but when the Royal Canach, and dian, jointly with the City Bank, became merged into the Consolidated Bank, and the head office was moved to Montreal, he resigned this position. Having sold out his lumber business to W. & R. Henry, in 1871, he moved into Toronto, and sat as aderman for St. John's Ward in the city conneil, for the years 1877 and 1878, and took an active interest in the movement for the new Exhibition Park and buildings. When the Provincial Agricultural and Arts Association, for whose use these buildings Fire erected, failed to keep their promise to the City Council, to hold their exhibitions permanently in this city, he then gave his assistance to Mr. Withrow in forming the Toronto Industrial Exhibition Association, whose exhibitions have since proved to be of great assistance in the promotion of the gricultural and manufacturing interests i the City of Toronto, and the Dominion t large. Although Mr. McGee has not been in active business for some years, e still continues to act as a director of he Uuion Loan and Savings Co. He is director and treasurer of the Industrial Embition Association, and is trustee and ttorney for the estate of the late W. & R. Henry, lumber merchants, which carries on n active saw mill business at Kagawong, fanitoulin Island, Randwick and Lisle, Dufferin, and in the city. Mr. McGee is a lethodist, and his political preferences are eform. He married in 1850 the eldest aughter of the late James Stewart, of York pwnship. His son, Captain McGee, of the neen's Own, is associated with him in usiness.

t form,

lenom.

vative

ughter

intreal;

lren, a

the age

eer has

and he

and the native

a seven

, 1835,

1, with

and he

Irish.

rwards

ısiness,

arly in t for a

blished

e time,

on the This climate

too far

e busi-

ures 🖟

Messa.

uce the Messra.

ired to

tsville.

t. after

Turn-again w mill.

ng out me the McGee

nd als

ried of

mongs

timbe

der the e span

by P

r buai

Being 1

nadısı

anage

calle

ield i ke par ich b

presi

d, and

Costigan, Honourable John, Minter of Inland Revenue for the Dominion Canada, was born at St. Nicholas, in the rovince of Quebec, on February 1st, 1845, nd received a sound education at the colge of St. Ann's. When his education was inpleted, he moved over to New Bruns-ick, and thereafter for many years was nnected with various pursuits. He was pointed registrar of deeds for Victoria unty, and a judge of the Inferior Court Common Pleas for New Brunswick. At very early age Mr. Costigan gave evidence the solid intellectual qualities, which were become so conspicuous in after years. Pore all, those who watched him closely recived an unvarying persistency in any use which he marked out for himself. wards 1861 several of the leading inhabiots of Victoria county decided that they would ask Mr. Costigan to offer for the legislature, and he consented to do so, and was elected. Mr. Costigan sat in the New Brunswick Assembly till 1866, when he was defeated. He was during that period regarded as one of the ablest men in the house, both sides always paying great deference to his opinions. At the general election after Confederation he was returned to the House of Commons, and has held his seat uninterruptedly for Victoria county ever since. On May 23rd, 1882, he was admitted to the Privy Council as Minister of Inland Revenue, and still occupies this position. On the 20th May, 1872, Mr. Costigan moved an address in the House of Commons, praying His Excellency to disallow the New Brunswick School Act, on the ground "that said law is unjust and causes much uneasiness among the Roman catholic population." Some time before the introduction of Mr. Costigan's resolutions, persons had gone up and down through New Brunswick declaring that the province must have a system of free, non-sectarian public schools, and children of every denomination must attend these schools, and that one and all, according to his real or personal property, would be taxed to maintain the educational system. So far this was good. The province had for many years previously made liberal grants for education, but the schools were under denominational control; there was no thorough system of inspection; no uniform course of instruction, and subjects were taught on the old fashioned parrot plan, an old teacher standing behind the educational bulwark, driving education home with a birch rod. Therefore it was a wise and progressive movement that some one set on foot to reduce this chaos of catechism and birch, and arithmetic and letters, into one harmonious, efficient and enlight ened system. The new idea carried the province by storm, and then there was appointed a chief superintendent of educa-To this gentleman was assigned the task of drawing up an educational chart, outlining courses of instruction, and prescribing texts. He had just the qualifications needed to carry out the will of the narrow politicians with respect to education and the Roman catholics, and so rancorously was he disposed towards catholicism that, it is averred, when writing a letter, he carried his hatred so far as to avoid crossing his t's. He imagined that all priests and lay brothers were bad men, and all nuns wicked women, not fit in character or garb to teach in the public schools, therefore he drew up a regulation making it unlawful for any teacher employed in the public schools to wear any badge, garb or emblem distinctive of any denominational sect or order. This, of course, excluded nuns, lay brothers, and people of a like ecclesiastical fashion, and the liberal and high-minded proviso was characterized as "the government's infamous millinery regulation." Holy Church had no cause for panic when the idea of free, non-sectarian schools was at first broached, although it fidgetted and fretted itself almost out of its vestments; now it had a genuine grievance. It was when this narrow regulation had been put upon the statute-book that Mr. Costigan, a Roman Catholic, raised his voice in the House of Commons and besought parliament to interpose its hand in justice to the minority in his province. He was now ably seconded by Mr. Timothy Warren Anglin, who pleaded till he became pathetic for justice to his coreligionists. Mr. Anglin's newspaper, the Freeman, week after week, was laden with complainings against the injustice of the New Brunswick legislature. It declared that it was the duty of Sir John A. Macdonald's government to interfere its authority and maintain right. Then Sir John fell under his Pacific scandal load, and the reformers returned to power, bringing with them Mr. Anglin, whom they put in the Speaker's chair. During the first session of the new parliament, Mr. Costigan again arose and moved his resolution, which ended in these words; "That the Government should advise His Excellency to disallow the Acts passed by the New Brunswick Legislature.' In this case Mr. Speaker Anglin's support ended with putting the resolution. The whole country knew how he had the Roman catholic interests at heart, but it was inexpedient now to press the matter-inexpedient of course to embarrass his government, though this was the very course that his great store of wisdom had suggested when Sir John was in office. So Mr. Costigan had to fight the battle alone. To dispose of the matter, the governor-general did not disallow the New Brunswick School Act, and it would have been a constitutional crime had he done so. Nor did Mr. Costigan desire the repeal of such portions of the law as were just; he merely sought to remove the intolerance and bigotry that disgraced the Act in the "millinery regulations." Although the Act was not repealed, Mr. Costigan's exertions were not without fruit, for Dr. Rand's anti-catholic provision was expunged, and the doctor himself, as political decency in New Brunswick increased, began to totter in his chair. At last Mr. Blair asked him to resign, and he is now back in the province, where we hope a career of usefulness shall always be open Mr. Costigan's other great act in to him. parliament was the submission, in 1882, of "The Costigan Irish resolutions," praying that Her Majesty might grant Home Rule government to Ireland on the self-governing colonial plan, likewise praying for the relief of "suspects," and asking other ameliorations. In so far as these resolutions addressed themselves to the question of Home Rule for Ireland, history shall always applaud their author, for he was only asking for a country, dear to him by ties of race. a political condition, the success of which he had tested. But it was a pity, a sad pity, that he, and parliament behind him, should have so far forgotten themselves as to advise another country as to what she should do with offenders against her own laws. Mr. Costigan's career has been a very able one. He is a clear headed, firm handed administrator, and has his department thoroughly under control. He married, in 1855, Miss Harriet, daughter of Mr. John Ryan, of Grand Falls, New Brunswick. His admirers have recently presented him with a splendid residence in Ottawa.

Lee, William Augustine, Toronto, the subject of this biographical record, was born at Port Hope, in the Province of Ontario, on August 26th, 1826. His father, Patrick Lee, emigrated to Canada in 1822 and his mother, Mary Flynn, came in 1824; and both were brought up in the County of Tipperary, Ireland. They were married in Port Hope in 1825, and located on land there called the Newcastle district. Finding a pioneer life very arduous, Mr. Lee went into the employ of the Canada Company as a surveyor. This company had a contract from the Imperial government, and were surveying and resurveying the country. After this he entered the employ of John D. Smith, father of the present Hon. Sydney Smith, as book-keeper, and about the year 1836 he went to the States and returned again to Canada next year, and settled in Stamford, It was here that and opened a school. the subject of our sketch was educated. After leaving school, where he had made a creditable showing, owing to his industry and his natural cleverness, he learned the trade of a cabinetmaker with Mr James Reed, of Hamilton, and Messrs. Jacques & Hay, of Toronto. Failing health now necessitated a change, and he commenced the busin ing to he re agent Co. I and lo and st enviab P. Lee ness, t a youn office. alderm for 23 for eig in 1883 portion a Ron servati a parti tions f measur terest. of the has for gether

industr ability.

With 8.C., To

dist M 1839. side, of James 1 and his born in cated a lege, Co 1864 he instituti 1883. 1 the Roy of Dr. A Withrow thereby riched h Great B Germany land. F an inclir work. Europe, recounter a vivid. Dr. With whom he the Met since bee Montreal 1874, his business of contractor and builder, but owing to the too keen competition in this line, he relinquished the business and became agent in 1873 for the Western Assurance Co. He incorporated with this a real estate and loaning business, and has, by persistent and straightforward efforts, reached a very enviable position. His second son, Frank P. Lee, is a partner with him in the business, the firm being W. A. Lee & Son, and ayounger son, John L., is the cashier in the office. He represented the city in 1859 as alderman, and has been returning officer for 23 years. He was likewise tax collector for eight years, but this position he resigned in 1883. He has travelled through a large portion of the American continent. He is a Roman catholic in religion, and a conservative in politics; but he is by no means a partisan. He calmly judges public questions for himself, and supports what ever measure he believes most in the public interest. He married Mary Lawlor, a sister of the late Dr. Lawlor, and by this lady has four sons and two daughters. Altogether here is a career exhibiting tireless industry, unswerving uprightness and good

Wick

At

il he.

hope

pen

et in

2, of

ying

Rule

ning

re-

neli-

ions

u of ways

king

ce, a

ı he

oity.

ould

vise

l do

Mr.

one.

inis-

ghly

Miss

, of

mir-

len-

nto,

was

On-

her.

22;

324 :

y of d in

and ling

rent

as a

rom

rey-

this

ith,

ith,

he

to to

hat

æd.

e a

try

Withrow, Rev. W. H., D.D., F.R. S.C., Toronto, editor of the Canadian Methodist Magazine, was born in Toronto in 1839. He is descended, upon the father's side, of U. E. Loyalist stock. His father, James Withrow, comes from Nova Scotia, and his mother, Ellen, nee Sanderson, was born in Ireland. Rev. Dr. Withrow was educated at Toronto Academy, Victoria College, Cobourg, and Toronto University. In 1864 he graduated in arts from the latter institution; and in divinity at Victoria in 1883. In 1884 he was elected a Fellow of the Royal Society of Canada, in the stead of Dr. Alpheus Todd, deceased. Rev. Dr. Withrow's travels have been extensive; and thereby he has much improved and enriched his mind. He has travelled through Great Britain and Ireland, France, Italy, Germany, Holland, Belgium, and Switzerland. From very early years he had shown an inclination and aptitude for literary work. A volume called "A Canadian in Europe," Rose Publishing Co., Toronto, recounted the impressions of the traveller in a vivid, careful and comprehensive way. Dr. Withrow married Miss S. A. Smith, by whom he has four children. He entered the Methodist ministry in 1862, and has since been stationed in turn at Waterford, Montreal, Hamilton, and Niagara. 1874, his splendid literary talents, having been acknowledged, he was elected editor of the Canadian Methodist Mayazine and Sunday school periodicals, and has been thrice re-elected. In addition to his valuable work already noticed, and as editor of the magazine, Dr. Withrow has produced a number of other volumes, all exhibiting the same picturesque and trenchant style. most notable of these works is "The Catacombs of Rome;" and Mr. Gladstone, on seeing the work, wrote to its distinguished author, expressing his admiration of it. The book has reached three editions in England, the only book we suppose ever published in the colonies of which the same can be said. "The Catacombs" is certainly an excellent piece of literary workmanship; while containing much stately and solemn thought, it throbs with all the fascination of a novel. The portraiture is graphic; the touch is light; and there is collected an unusual quantity of matter, not a line of which is not either vivid as to description, or most suggestive as to thought. "Valeria, the Martyr of the Catacombs," is a tale of early Christian life in Party. tian life in Rome, from the same happy pen. It has all the charm of the novel, and all the value of a work with a field so important and a writer so capable. This book has been republished in England, and also in the United States; but we know not whether, in the latter case, the book fell into the hands of a pirate or an honest man. There are several other tales from the same pen, such as "Neville Trueman, the Pioneer Preacher," "The King's Messenger," "The Romance of Missions," "Barbara Heck,"

"Men Worth Knowing," "Missionary Heroes," etc. So far as permanent value to Canadians is concerned, the piece de resistance of Dr. Withrow's literary labours is his "History of the Dominion of Canada." With reference to the literary qualities of this work, the editor thinks he can do no better than reproduce with approval the following, from the Toronto Mail: "The Rev. Dr. Withrow, of this city, has performed a really patriotic work in the preparation of his admirable 'History of Canada.' He has a real genius for historical research. Dr. Withrow has performed his work well, and done an important service to his country. It deserves to be widely circulated and generally read, especially by the young people of the Do-Nothing is better calculated to minion. create and foster that national and loyal spirit upon which so much depends in the future of this great country than that its past history should be more accurately and thoroughly known by the Canadians. In view of these facts, Dr. Withrow's 'History of Canada' is cordially recommended to the public." Dr. Withrow has also written a number of pamphlets and booklets—one of them a prize essay—on varied aspects of the temperance reform, which which he is in strong sympathy.

Fraser, Honourable Christopher Finlay, M. P.P., one of the most eloquent debaters in Canada, was born at Brockville, in October, 1839. Mr. Fraser is of Celtic origin, his father, John Fraser, being a Scotch Highlander, and his mother, Sarah, nee Burke, of Irish birth and parentage. It fell to the lot of our subject, when a boy, to be poor, for his parents, like the majority of pioneers, brought into the new country very little gold in their purses. But this very poverty seems to have been a stimulus to the ambition of the lad, and it is said that he resolved early in life to carve out his own fortune. In order to accomplish anything, young Fraser knew that he must become equipped with an education. Schools in those days were sparse, and yet well conditioned; and the best of such tuition as his purse afforded he was resolved to have, and have it he did. We are told that he did not hesitate to put his hand to any employment that was offered, and it was between the periods of such employment that he attended school. When a mere youth he was found employed in the office of the Brockville Recorder, working for a little salary, which he most carefully hoarded to use in his education. But even this honour able ambition, and all the dauntless industry could not have availed, had our subject been composed of the ordinary clod material. But no such composition was his. He was gif ed with altogether unusual mental alertness, and his utterances, when only a boy, were remarkable for their brilliancy, force and sometimes for their wit. When he had obtained what he deemed a sufficient education, the young man (this was about the year 1859) entered the office of the Hon. A. N. Richards, late lieutenant-governor of British Columbia, and began the study of the law. He was a hard-working student, and after passing a most creditable examination, was, in 1865, called to the bar. He settled down to the practice of his profession at Brockville, where a profitable business soon began to grow up around him. Most observant people about Brockville had the young man in mind when he came back from his studies to open a law office in their midst; and before he had been long with them in his new rôle, they began to perceive that his abilities were quite beyond the usual. But the young advocate was all this while fashioning out his own career for him-He had no sooner established himself fairly in his profession, than he began to give attention to political questions. At the election of 1867 for the confederated provinces, he offered himself as a candidate for his native place, but was defeated by a narrow majority. Some years later he again present. ed himself for election, but was again defeat. Later on our subject was to distinguish himself by taking a conspicuous part in the formation of what was known as the Roman catholic League. Roman catholics being in a minority in the province, Mr. Fraser judged that they would be more effective if united in a public body, when asking for certain rights, than if they remained discon-This was a wise movement for the sake of the object stated, and a just one: but it was also a very clever move, and since that day Mr. Fraser has come to be regarded as the political director of his co-religionists in Ontario. In 1871, Mr. Clark, who had some time before defeated Mr. Fraser for South Grenville (in the Legislative Assembly) died; and our subject, once again presented himself, and was returned at the head of the poll. His great abilities were at once recognized in the legislature, and a year later he was appointed Provincial Secretary and Registrar. On appealing to his constituency for the usual ratification of his acceptance of office he was elected by acclamation. Heremained Provincial Secretary till 1874, in the Mowat administration, when he became Commissioner of Public Works. This office he has since held, and he has taken from the first a commanding place in the legislature, He is ready, brilliant and powerful in debate, whether the question be an old one or one sprung upon him, and he is a man with whom the opponents never care to He is not malicious nor unkindly in his place upon the floor when attacking or defending, and one and all are delighted to sit and listen to him so long as he remains upon his feet; for whether they agree with what he is saying or not, they are pleased with the fresh, vigorous, brilliant and manly way that he has of saying it. Overwork in these later years had told so upon his constitution that it was feared he might have to lay aside the harness; but we are glad to be able to say that there is now every ground to believe that a long career of usefulness and brilliant public service still remains before the Honourable Christopher Finlay Fraser.

ad Sco

and

Ηu

in

of o

a sl

τhe

bor:

ted

ente

whe

plica

carr

and

On h

in n

time

presi

ral S

resen

Asser

his te

of Co

1872

he su Mr. H

He wa

anpea

elected

House

tinued

Augus

Mr. N

genera

was su

dougal

ln poli

no par

married

Morris.

ing offic

occupie

M.D., §

Alexand

an old S

known

Grove,

land, w settled i part of the in Gleng

1835. H Mary Og

still alive

and on

Mel

Macdougall, John Lorn, M.A., Auditor General for the Dominion of Canada, Ottawa, is a native Canadian, though of Scotch descent. His father, John Lorn Macdougall, emigrated to this country in 1821. and was for some years connected with the Hudson's Bay Co., and subsequently settled in the Bathurst district. He was a man of considerable influence in his day, and for a short time represented Renfrew county in the Canadian Assembly. the Canadian Assembly. John Lorn was born in Renfrew in 1838, and was educated at the High School, in Montreal, and entered the University of Toronto in 1855. where he distinguished himself by close application to study. He graduated in 18.9, carrying off a gold medal for mathematics. and a silver medal for modern languages. On his return home, he took an active part in municipal affairs, and served for some time as warden for his county; and was also president of the South Renfrew Agricultural Society. In 1867, he was chosen to represent South Renfrew in the first Ontario Assembly: and during the last two years of his term he was also a member of the House of Commons, but at the general election in 1872 he suffered defeat. However, in 1874, he succeeded in defeating his opponent, Mr. Bannerman, by a majority of seventy. He was unseated on petition, but on again appealing to the electors in 1875, he was reelected, and once more took his seat in the House of Commons. Mr. Macdougall continued to represent South Renfrew until August, 1878, when he was appointed by Mr. Mackenzie's government as auditorgeneral, in the room of Mr. Langton, who was superannuated. In religion Mr. Mac. dougall professes the Presbyterian faith. In politics, he is a Reformer, but now takes no part in political contests. In 1871 he married Miss Morris, daughter of Mr. P. Morris. Mr. Macdougall is a very painstaking officer, and fills the important post he occupies to the satisfaction of all concerned.

eiva

the

this

im-

self

give lec-

ces

his

row

enteat-

iish

 $_{
m the}$

han-

ing

ser

e if

for

hn.

the

ne:

nce

sts

ad

ly) ed he

McMillan, Honourable Donald, M.D., Senator for the Dominion of Canada, Alexandria, Ontario, is a descendant of an old Scotch Catholic family of that name, known as the McMillan clan, of Falcon Grove, Glengarry, Inverness-shire, Scotland, who emigrated to this country and settled in Glengarry, Ontario, in the earlier part of this century. Our subject was born in Glengarry, Ontario, on the 5th March, 1835. He is a son of Duncan McMillan and Mary Ogg McDonell. His mother, who is still alive, is a descendant of a good family, and on both sides his ancestors were true

Jacobites, and fought for "Bonnie Prince Young McMillan received his Charlie." early instruction at the hands of private tutors, and when he had acquired a gool education, he repaired to Toronto to study He was very diligent at his studies, and passed a successful examination, taking his M.D. at Toronto in 1865. Possessed of his diploma, he at once began the practice of his profession. He soon earned a repute for much skill and carefulness, and with considerable rapidity a practice grew up. He now began to turn his attention to municipal matters, and in time sat as councillor for his native county. and subsequently as reeve. It may likewise be said that he is a J.P. and coroner for the united counties of Stormont. Dundas and Glengarry. On the 17th of November, 1857, he married Amy Ann, a daughter of A. Lewis, J.P., of Aylmer, Ontario. By this union there are eight children. In 1875 the Honourable D. A. Macdonald was appointed lieutenant-governor of Ontario, and this made vacant the representation of Glengarry in the House of Commons. At once our subject went into the field, but he suffered defeat by a small majority. He took the case to the courts, and unseated his opponent, Mr. McNab; but on being again offered the nomination at the convention, he declined. Mr. John McLennan then received the nomination, and though not successful at that election, he ran again in 1878 and carried the county. Dr. Mc-Millan's influence and hard work for his party did much to gain this, and the subsequent victories, for it will be remembered that the Reformers carried the county in 1872 by over 1,300, and in 1882 that majority was turned into a minority of 223, when Mr. McMaster, the present member, was elected. Our subject is president of the St. Andrew's Society of Glengarry, and an honorary member of the Celtic Society of Montreal. His whole career has been one of unflagging industry, and his influence is felt in the community among which his lot has been cast. He has always been a constant, sound and highly-respected Conservative, and his party must always remain under deep obligation to him for generous and sturdy service. On the 11th of January, 1884, he was called to the Senate, and all who have watched his career congratulated the government on their choice. Many years of usefulness, we hope and doubt not, yet remain to Mr. McMi'lan, and we may be certain that when the opportunity arrives in the sphere to which he has been called, and wisdom and practical and prudent counsels are desired, that the voice of Senator McMillan will not be silent. Our worthy subject is a member of the Roman catholic church.

O'Connor, Daniel, Barrister, Ottawa, the subject of this sketch, was born at Ottawa, on the 25th of January, 1835 father was Daniel O'Connor, who was born in Tipperary, Ireland, in 1796. He was a gentleman of considerable culture, and of strong literary inclinations. He embarked in a mercantile business in Clonmel, but after a time he retired and purchased a lieutenancy in the 1st Regiment of Light Infantry, organized to aid the South American patriot service. He saw very much of the world, having travelled about 9,000 miles. He left a diary, and extracts which have come to light reveal that he had a clear and very just insight into character and questions. There is revealed a warm generous heart, a love of things honourable and straightforward; but a detestation of everything questionable or dishonourable. There is evidence too of very strong personal prejudices. But every sentence written is the work of a man of culture; of one who genuinely loved letters, and reverenced his art. After his travels he returned once again to his home at Farrinlare, and shortly afterwards married Miss Power, the daughter of a neighbouring mill owner, and in 1826 the young couple emigrated to America. In 1827, after travelling through various states of the Union, he settled, with his family, consisting of himself, his wife and one child, at Nepean Point, afterwards Bytown. Shortly after the arrival the second child was born, and this was the first birth in Bytown, the present City of Ottawa. Colonel By, the commanding engineer of the Rideau canal, welcomed Mr. O'Connor heartily, and made a gift of several town lots to the young visitor. Mr. O'Connor died on May 8th, 1858, and he was then the oldest magistrate in the county, and he was likewise the oldest militia officer in the 4th Carleton, his commission bearing date the 23rd of April, 1836. At the time of his decease he was major in this regiment. Under the Draper administration, in 1842, he was appointed treasurer of the County of Carleton, and this position he held till his death. He was for many years chairman of the grammar school board of the county, and, during the emigrant fever calamity of 1847, of the local board of health. In 1834 he was a candidate for the County of Russel, but was defeated by seven votes. At the time of his death he left seven children, of whom Daniel, the subject of this sketch, was the fourth. Young O'Connor first attended the grammar school, and completed his studies at the Ottawa college. In 1852 he began the study of the law, in the office of the late John Bower Lewis. In 1852 he was admitted to practice as attorney and solicitor. For about eight years our subject was professionally connected with Mr. (now Judge) Robert Lyon, and subsequently with the late Daniel Wade. He is now head of the well-known legal firm of O'Connor & Hogg. Mr. O'Connor is said to be an extremely conscientious and painstaking lawyer. ed to his profession, yet Mr. O'Connor has given a considerable amount of attention to political questions, and for many years has been president of the Liberal-Conservative Association of Ottawa. In 1878, on the accession to power of the ministry of Sir John A. Macdonald, Mr. O'Connor was appointed to the very important office of solicitor for the Crown business at Ottawa. The St. Patrick's orphan asylum was established largely through Mr. O'Connor's instrumentality. and he was its vice-president during the years 1866-67-68; and he has since been its president. This charitable institution gives shelter to more than a hundred inmates in one year. Wherever there is a benevolent or charitable project, Mr. O'Connor is sure to be connected with it. It need hardly be said, that he is like his father, a Roman catholic. He married Catharine Charlesetta Willis, daughter of Wm. R. Willis, formerly of New York city. By this union he has had six children.

Dinnis, Richard, Toronto, was born in the village of St. Day, Cornwall, England, on the 18th of September, 1834. His parents were John Dinnis and Martha, whose maiden name was Foote, of England. Mr. Dinnis engaged in the business of founder and heavy iron worker in the town of Falmouth, Cornwall, and in this employment he continued until his death in 1854, leaving eight children. The subject of this sketch was the second youngest child. Richard Dinnis received his education in a private school, in the town of Falmouth, under the well known William Eastman, one of the best private tutors of that section. After leaving school, at the age of fourteen, he was apprenticed to the building business carried on by the firm of Oliver & Sons, and remained with these gentlemen until 1856. Some time before this he had left the bench and became head clerk and manager for the firm. During that time Mr. Dinnis

le

ci

in 18

M

ar

of

ch

su

th

th

bu

Du

He

fri

nai

VOI

the

pec

he

and

studied architecture, so that it might be, in after years, of value in his building business. In 1856 he left the old country and landed in Toronto, with his wife, and engaged as bookkeeper and assistant with Mr. Pim, then one of the best known contractors of the city. He remained with Mr. Pim one year, and then engaged with Worthington Bros., contractors, as their gen-ral manager, and with them he remained until 1865, when he went to Ohio, U. S., in the employ of Worthington & Robertson, as a railroad builder. In 1866 he returned to Toronto, and commenced business for himself in contracting and building. Mr. Dinnis has been engaged in the erection of some of the principal buildings of the city, among which are the University of Toronto, the Provincial Exhibition buildings, the Standard bank, and numerous other stately mansions and warehouses. Mr. Dinnis was engaged during the Trent affair, as a volunteer in No. 1 company, 10th Royals, and held a lieutenant's commission; and he is president of the Toronto Telephone Manufacturing Company. He is a Mason, and pastmaster of Rehoboam Lodge No. 65; he also belongs to the Masonic Benevolent Board, and was Grand Worthy Councillor of the Good Templars. Mr. Dinnis has been for years one of the foremost advocates of temperance, believing that the widespread use of intoxicants is the greatest curse with which any land can be afflicted. Mr. Dinnis has been an extensive traveller, and he has been through most of the United States, and three times visited the chief places of interest in Great Britain. He is a Baptist in religion, and a conservative in politics. He was married on April 10th, 1856, to Miss Eliza Ann Chard, daughter of Mr. Arthur Chard, of Falmouth, England. and one of the most prominent gentlemen of that town. Mr. Dinnis has had seven children. Mr. Arthur Dinnis, a son of the subject of this sketch, assists his father in the office.

 $_{
m hom}$

the

the

dies

egan

late

ad.

itor.

(dge

the

the

ogg.

convot-

has

n to

has

tive

ohn

nted

for

Pat-

gely lity.

the n its

ives

s in lent

sure

v be

man

rles-Illis.

hion

orn

and,

ents

hose

Mr.

nder

Fal-

nent

eav-

this

lich-

pri-

nder

e of

Af-

, he

ness

and 856.

nch

for

Bell, William, Guelph.—William Bell, the head of the well-known firm of organ-builders at Guelph, Ontario, was born in Dunfries, Scotland, on September 5th, 1833. He is a son of William Bell, also of Dumfries, Scotland, and of Mary, whose maiden name was Wateret. When old enough, young Bell was sent to school, attending the educational institutions in his native town. When he left school he was equipped with a sound English education; for he was always a bright and a brilliant lad, and had turned his school days to good account. Having completed his education, he must needs turn him to some employment; consequently, he mastered a trade, which he plied for some time; but when he reached his twentieth year he resolved that he would ascertain what fortune had in store for him in the new world. He arrived in Toronto, but made no lengthened stay in that city. To New York he was resolved to go; and here he remained till 1864, during which year he paid a visit to his brother, who had begun the manufacture of organs and melodeons at Guelph. Canada. So allured was he with the prospect which the enterprize held out, that he took a partnership in the business, and remained in Guelph. After a little, his was the head that planned and the hand that directed the business. In time the brother retired, and the management came entirely into the hands of William. We have seen it stated that the Bell organ manufactory, like many another important undertaking, had its origin in a very humble way. In 1865 the upper room in "a rickety building on Windham Street was enough to meet the demand," while a couple of hands were all that was necessary to turn out the one complete organ each week. Very soon, however, the enterprise, with Mr. Bell's strong hand and soundly calculating head behind it, got out of its swaddling clothes. Not long thereafter there reared itself upon the site of the old factory a capacious and stately three-story brick building, equipped with every convenience for the trade to be carried on within its walls. In the newly equipped establishment there were turned out each month 100 organs; and there were about 100 hands employed. In a little, Mr. Bell's instincts taught him to look to England for a market, and the result of the effort was splendid success. The editor avails himself of the following extracts respecting Mr. Bell and his splendid factory, from Brianard's Musical World: " In 1881, being unable to obtain more room for extension at the old building, he decided on the erection of a second factory, and to occupy both. This idea, once formulated, was carried out with an energy, which showed the man to be equal to the emer-The new building was erected at a cost of $35,000, from which an estimate can be formed of its dimensions. But the acquisition of room was not the only question considered in its construction. Architectural beauty was not lost sight of, and its basement walls of cut stone-above that the three-story pile of brick work, with the whole surmounted by a mansard-make it one of the handsomest as well as one of the largest structures Guelph can boast of. Four large dials on the tower, which surmounts the central corner, announce the time of day to the neighbourhood and to passengers on the Grand Trunk Railway. the station of which company is quite contiguous to the factory. Both Mr. Bell's institutions are now running to their full, and they have a capacity of turning out twentyfive complete organs per day. In short the history of this trade has been development and success from the time of its inception. Now fifty different styles of instruments are made, varying from one valued at $100 to a large church organ, with double banks of keys and imitation pipes. The same superior finish is shown in all, both with respect to tone and appearance, and this is one secret of the success which Mr. Bell has achieved. While his organ now has secured the greatest part of the home trade, it is constantly gaining a large share of patronage in foreign markets. In one year over fifteen hundred instruments were shipped to England alone, and since then this has been increased to an average of a car load every four days, which are sent direct to London, and thence distributed throughout the kingdom. Shipments are likewise sent regularly to Continental Europe, Australia, South America, the West Indies, India, Java, New Zealand, China, Mexico, Tasmania, South Africa, and even Japan has received her quota. In private life Mr. Bell is known as a genial-hearted man. In public life he has done much for the good of the community with whom he dwells, by employing a very large force of hands at good wages. In this he has been a public benefactor, and the results of his beneficence are visible in the comfortable, happy homes of many of his workmen. The regard in which he is held by his fellow-citizens is shown by his election for several years to the School Board, of which he is now a valued member. He is also a prominent member of the local Board of Trade, and in this capacity he has been instrumental in securing many advantages for the royal city of Guelph. Having done his share of hard work, he now endeavours to find more time for leisure, and in order to do this the better he has taken in as partners his son, W. J. Bell and A. W. Alexander. [The former has been for seven years closely connected with the business and whose special duty is to do the foreign trading and look after the export business generally. This young man has been in nearly every foreign country, and has just returned from the South Pacific, and is preparing to go to England to take charge of their European branch in London]. Mr. Bell is vice-president of the Traders Bank and director of the North American Assurance Company. He is a member of the Presbyterian church; and has been for twenty-two years a Freemason. He married in 1861 Isabella M. Christie, and by this lady has had two children.

joi

arc

ret

a l

to

bui

and

to

upo

cap

Ful

Gre

thre

elie

Nov

a v

a 80

of S abor

Mas

lege,

a br

Quel

late

of th

proth

M. N.

self :

tific :

amon

provi

years

for th

said t

move

farmi

the C

throu;

made

specti

return

Agricu

concer

ment a

He v

Michig

and pr

the d

schools

himself

abilitie

ing the

provinc

as a s

his pro

lt requi

proved

M

Fuller, Thomas, Chief Architect of the Department of Public Works, Ottawa, was born at Bath, England, in 1823, and there he was educated. Upon leaving school he was articled to an architect in Bath, and subsequently pursued his studies in several architectural studios in London. The first work of importance entrusted to Mr. Fuller's care was the erection of a cathedral at Antigua, West Indies, to replace the old building destroyed by the earthquake. completion, he returned to England, and practised his profession at Bath and Clifton for some years, during which several buildings were erected from his designs in that neighbourhood, and also in Wales. Believng, however, that better opportunities existed in the new world, he came to Canada in 1857, and settled in Toronto, commencing the practice of his profession in partnership with Mr. Chilion Jones, of that city. In 1859, in the competition for the parliament and departmental buildings and governor's residence at Ottawa, their design for the Parliament building was adopted, and the second premium was awarded them for their designs for the Departmental buildings, and Governor's residence. Mr. Fuller then removed to Ottawa, and remained there until 1867, when in the competition for the new capitol for the State of New York, at Albany, his design was one of the three to which equal premiums were awarded; and in the second competition, to which the three were invited, Mr. Augustus Laver, one of the three (who was one of the architects of the Departmental buildings at Ottawa), agreed to associate himself with Mr. Fuller, and prepare a joint design, which was ultimately adopted. Shortly after this, in the competition for the new city hall and courts at San Francisco, Cal., the designs of Messrs. Fuller and Laver were adopted. Thereupon Mr. Laver left for that city, and Mr. Fuller remained in New York State until 1881, when he returned to Ottawa, and on the 9th of December of that year was appointed to his present position, Chief Architect of the Dominion. While the service cannot but rejoice to have at its disposal the skill of an architect so eminent as Mr. Fuller, yet his retirement to official life may be regarded as a loss to architecture. It is not necessary to point to his design of the Parliament buildings, for the fusion of strength, beauty and utility, in that beautiful design is plain to every intelligent person who has looked upon the structure. Hardly less warm com-mendation, it is said, does the design for the capitol at New York State deserve. Mr. Fuller married in 1853 a Jaughter of W. Green, Esq., J.P., by whom he has had three children.

Massue, Louis Huet, M.P. for Richelieu, was born at Varennes, on the 3rd November, 1828; and is descended from a very ancient family of Orleans. He is a son of the late Aimé Massue, Seigneur of St. Aimé, who represented the County of Vercheres, in the Legislative Assembly, about 1810, by Celeste, nee Richard. Young Massue was educated at St. Hyacinthe college, and he is described as having been a brilliant lad at school. He married at Quebec in 1850, Esther, daughter of the late Colonel Perrault, and grand-daughter of the late F. X. Perrault, for many years prothonotary of the district of Quebec. M. Massue is a farmer, and has made himself familiar with the principles of scientific farming, and his influence is marked among many agriculturists in his native province. He has been for the last six years president of the Council of Agriculture for the Province of Quebec; and it may be said that he has been connected with all the movements towards improved and scientific farming, and he has likewise had to'do with the Cochrane ranches. He has travelled through the United States, and while there, made accurate and wide observation respecting agricultural pursuits, and upon his return he made reports to the Council of Agriculture of his province. He has been concerned with the purchase and improvement of the exhibition grounds in Montreal. He visited the agricultural colleges at Michigan, U.S., and at Guelph, in Ontario, and pressed upon the government of Quebec the desirability of establishing similar schools. M. Massue is a successful farmer himself, but much of his great energy and abilities have been spent towards bettering the system of farming throughout his Farming, M. Massue regards as a science, and as a science he wishes his province to regard and to practice it. It requires just a few more apostles of imother parts of Canada, to lift farming from the plane of stupid drudgery to the place that it should hold. Our subject has a considerable military career to look back upon. He is a major in the volunteer force, and was sent to Amherstburg in 1865, in command of a detachment, and he remained there from the 27th of April till the 3rd of July. He was at St. Johns, Province of Quebec, as junior major of the battalion; and in the same year he was sent to Lachine in command of a detachment. This was at the time when we were threatened with a second Fenian raid. M. Massue was vice-president of the Bank of Jacques Cartier in 1878-79, and is a director of the Credit Foncier du Bas Canada. He is a staunch liberal-conservative, and a consistent and able advocate of protection. He succeeded Sir Adolphe Caron as whip of the party, and is a highly respected member of the House of Commons, and is very popular through his own district and through the province of Quebec. He is genial and polite in address. In religion he is a Roman catholic.

Hogg, William Drummond, Ottawa, Barrister-at-law, was born in the town of Perth, County of Lanark, Ont., on the 29th February, 1848. His father was David Hogg, a son of Lieutenant John Hogg, of the Royal artillery, a native of Edinburgh, Scotland, who as an officer, took part at the siege of Copenhagen, at the battle of the Pyramids, battle of the Nile, etc. David Hogg emigrated to Canada in 1832, and was one of the pioneer settlers of the town of Perth, where for many years he carried on a large furniture manufacturing business. He died in 1882. His mother was Isabella Inglis, who was a native of Clackmanan, Scotland, and came to Canada in 1831, and settled with her relatives in Lanark village. County Lanark. Mrs. Hogg was of the Hall family there, whose branches now extend to many parts of Ontario-Peterborough, Sarnia, Brockville, Perth, etc. She died in 1881. Our subject was educated at the high school, Perth, pursuing a course of general studies. He commenced the study of the law in the office of E. G. Malloch, county crown attorney, Perth, and afterwards spent several years in the office of Paterson, Bain & Paterson, of Toronto. He was called to the bar at Hilary term, 1874. Mr. Hogg was for many years connected with temperance societies, and at one time held all the offices in the order of the Sons of Temperance. He is a member of St. Andrew's Society, Ottawa, and for many years was solicitor for proved agriculture, like M. Massue, in the society. In 1882 he made an extended tour through Manitoba and the North-West, being at this time interested in lands in that part of the Dominion. Mr. Hogg was brought up a Presbyterian, but he is not a member of any church. He believes that the Christian religion, although it has not accomplished all it might be supposed capable of, is the only religious system worthy the name of a religion. He was married on September 14th, 1875, to Louisa Agnes Rattray, third daughter of the late Dr. Charles Rattray, of Cornwall, Ontario. After ad-mission to the bar, in 1874, Mr. Hogg became a partner with Daniel O'Connor, of Ottawa, barrister-at-law, and has continued to practice with him under the firm name of O'Connor & Hogg since that time. During the last few years he has been engaged before the Supreme and Exchequer courts at Ottawa, on behalf of the Crown, in a number of important cases, involving both prerogative and constitutional questions. Amongst such cases were the now somewhat celebrated ones of Doutre vs. the Queen, and MacLean vs. the Queen. Our subject was led to the study of law by the accidental circumstance of reading, when a boy, the life of the Honourable William Wirt, once attorney-general of the United States, whose career attracted his mind to the profession to which a man of such high moral character and great ability belonged. The late lamented James Bethune, Q.C., was married to Mr. Hogg's wife's sister, and for many years he had the great pleasure of being the intimate friend of that brilliant lawyer. Through his father, our subject is a relative of the "Ettrick Shepherd," the great Scottish poet, James Hogg. He has never taken any active interest or part in politics, but he believes in the efficacy of our colonial position, with the present form of government of the country.

Patterson, Rev. Ephraim, M.A., R.D., Stratford, the subject of this sketch, was born in 1826, in the neighbourhood of Perth, County of Lanark, then a portion of the old Bathurst district. His father, George Patterson, was a native of the town of Perth, Scotland. He came to Canada in 1814 with his regiment, the 37th Regiment Foot, and took part in the struggle then going on with the United States. Before coming to Canada, he served with his regiment in the Peninsular war. With his wife Ann Marigold, a native of the city of Worcester, England, he settled at Perth, Ont., in 1816, when the site of that town was a forest. ()ur subject was educated at the Perth Grammar School, where he passed through a full classical and mathematical course of study. From 1845 to 1849 he studied theology at the Diocesan Theological College, Cobourg, then under the management of Rev. Dr. Bethune, late Bishop of Toronto. $\mathbf{W}_{\mathbf{hile}}$ pursuing his studies at that institution, he gained on one occasion the "Kent Testimonial" prize for a theological essay, and stood first amongst the candidates for deacon's orders in the examination held at Co. bourg, in 1849. He was ordained to the diaconate by Bishop Strachan in 1849, and was appointed curate of Cobourg, and classical tutor to the second division of theological students. In 1850 he was advanced to the priesthood, and appointed missionary at Portsmouth and Wolfe Island, in the County of Frontenac In 1851 he removed to Stratford, having been appointed pastor of St. James' Church in that town, the incumbency of which he has held from that time to the present, a period of thirty-four He received the appointment of rural dean of the County of Perth, from Bishop Hellmuth. Having passed the B.A. examination at Trinity College, Toronto, he was admitted to that degree, and subsequently received the degree of M.A. from that University. In 1857 he took a prominent part in the controversy that arose between the friends of Dr. Cronyn and Dr. Bethune, in relation to the election to the first bishopric of the Huron Diocese, and in this controversy he exhibited a singularly effective and sound style of argument. For many years he was chairman of the Perth County Board of Grammar School Trustees, and of the County Board of Public Instruction for the granting of teachers' certificates of qualification. He was also repeatedly appointed by the county council as local superintendent of schools for several townships in the county, and public school inspector for the town of Stratford, by the Board of Education. The latter position he resigned in 1872, owing to the increasing pressure of parochial work. In 1852 he was married to Jane Wauchope, youngest daughter of Donald Mackenzie, Esq. formerly of Ottawa. Mr. Patterson is a devoted churchman and a tireless worker, and is gifted with very able intellectual parts.

Steckel, Louis Joseph Rene, Chief Clerk, Engineering Branch of the Public Works Department, Canada, was born on September 5, 1844, at Wintzenheim, Upper Rhine, Alsace, France: He is the third son of George Louis René Steckel, of Benfeld, Alsace, notary public, who was for many years assistant mayor of Wintzenheim, also chef e Franc Lanfe family but le the fa Quebe was b young surged Schole second René S French Nation ment a Robesi brated Zurich Souwai 1800 as was the ter of and bo the lat created The mo vember late Fr public, of Lauf wealthy several Previou several late M. J France t Frankfo The grai sented t Council Louis Sc to repres Our subj German] of drawi schools o ledge of tern state always g mathema member piccolo i himself : which are architects

ing and a

which he was admit

in Lower

chef de bataillon of the National Guard of France, and Madeline Eugénie Scholer, of Laufen, Canton Berne, Switzerland. family came to Quebec city in August, 1857, but left Canada for the Western States in the fall of 1858. Our subject returned to Quebec in the spring of 1860. His father was born August 20, 1814, and is the youngest son of the late Jean René Steckel, surgeon, of Benfeld, and Marie Genevieve Scholer, of Huningen, Alsace, who was his second wife. His grandfather was Jean René Steckel, who served as surgeon in the French regular army, and also in the Garde Nationale. He was on duty with the regiment around the scaffold at the execution of Robespierre, and took part, under the celebrated General Moreau, in the battle of Zurich in 1799, against the Russians under Souwarov, and in that of Hohenlinden in 1800 against the Austrians. His first wife was the late Marie Gabrielle Müller, daughter of the late Barthelemi Müller, notary and bourgmestre of Benfeld, and sister of the late Colonel Charles Müller, who was created a baron by Napoleon the First. The mother of our subject was born on November 4, 1817, and was a daughter of the late Francis Constantine Scholer, notary public, and the late Mary Ann Ricklin, both of Laufen, Switzerland. Her father was a wealthy owner of real estate, including several mills and a bathing establishment. Previous to his marriage he had acted for several years as secretary to his cousin, the late M. Bacher, who was then ambassador of France to the confederation of the Rhine at Frankfort, under the first French empire. The grandfather Scholer at one time represented the district of Laufen in the Federal Council of Switzerland at Berne, and his son Louis Scholer was also elected several times to represent that district in the said council. Our subject was educated in the French and German languages, and taught the rudiments of drawing, geometry, etc., in the cantonal schools of Benfeld. He acquired a knowledge of English at Quebec and in the westtern states by private tuition. He showed always great aptitude for drawing and mathematics, and he loved music; and was a member of the church choir, playing the piccolo in the school band. He applied himself strongly to master the sciences which are necessary for civil engineers and architects to be versed in, as civil engineering and architecture were the professions which he felt most inclined to follow. He was admitted to the study of land surveying in Lower Canada on the 8th of May, 1858, after passing the ordinary examination. He followed lectures given in Laval University on natural philosophy, chemistry, geology and botany in 1860 and 1862. After his return to Canada from the western states, he continued his professional studies in the office of Charles Baillargé, the eminent engineer and architect, who is now city engineer of Quebec, and president of the Board of Examiners for land surveyors of Lower Canada, Fellow of the Royal Society of Canada, and Knight of the order of St. Sauveur de Monte Reale, Italy, etc. He was employed as draughtsman, etc., on the Gaspé and Gulf Shore Road surveys ordered by the Public Works department of the old Province of Canada in 1861 and 1862. He furnished Mr. Charles Baillargé in 1862 several new and elegant geometrical solutions of difficult problems in land surveying, besides other novel geometrical propositions, which he published in 1866 in his treatise on geometry, trigonometry, etc. He was appointed draughtsman on the Public Buildings, Ottawa, April 26th, 1863, under John Page, the then chief engineer of Public Works. He was permanently appointed to the dominion department of Public Works, in the engineering branch, on the 1st January, 1870. He assisted George Frederick Baillargé, civil engineer, who is now deputy minister of the Public Works department, from 1870 to 1873, in the extensive surveys made by him on the isthmus of Chignecto for the projected Baie Verte canal from the Gulf of St. Lawrence to the Bay of Fundy, and also in connection with many other harbour and river works carried out in various parts of the dominion. He was appointed assistant engineer on the outside service of the Public Works department, August 4th, 1873. He surveyed several lines for the projected Cedars Canal on the north store of the St. Lawrence, between Lakes St. Francis and St. Louis, from 1873 to 1875, and in 1876 the River St. Charles estuary, etc., in connection with the improvements which are being carried out on a large scale in that part of the harbour of Quebec and the new graving dock at Levis. He superintended the construction of the models of the new locks of the enlarged dominion canals which were sent by the Canadian Government to the Paris International Exhibition of 1877. The Public Works department was awarded a diploma of honour for these and other exhibits. He was appointed chief clerk of the engineering branch in the department of Public Works 1st July, 1880. He carried on, under instructions from the chief engineer, H. F. Perley, in 1881 and 1882, extensive hydrographic surveys of the St. Lawrence ship channel between Quebec and ('ap à la Roche; also in 1883 and 1884 geodetic levelling operations of precision along the rivers Richelieu and St. Lawrence, from Lake Champlain towards tide water in the gulf. The results of these survevs may be used with confidence, both for engineering and scientific purposes. became a member of the Institut Canadien Français d'Ottawa, October 5th, 1865, being the first public officer admitted, and he has uninterruptedly kept up his connection with that institute to the present day. He was prominently connected with the Ottawa Musical Union from 1863 to 1865 as flutist and librarian, and he acted as conductor of the choir in the Cathedral of Ottawa from 1865 to 1867. In 1868 he made a three months' tour through England, France, Switzerland and Germany. He is a Roman catholic, and has never given much attention to purely political matters. He married on June 25th, 1873, Catherine O'Connor, voungest daughter of the late Daniel O'Connor and the late Margaret Power, both natives of the County of Tipperary, Ireland, and among the first settlers of old Bytown, founded in 1827, now the City of Ottawa. At his death, 1858, Mr. O'Connor was the oldest magistrate in the County of Carleton, also the oldest militia officer in the 4th Carleton, holding the rank of major in this regiment. His wife is a sister of Mrs. Friel, who is the first-born within the limits of the present city of Ottawa, and widow of the late mayor, H. J. Friel, of Ottawa.

Wagner, Joseph, Galt, the subject of this sketch, was born in Eich, Germany, in the year 1832. His father was Adam Wagner, and this gentleman, who had six children, left his native land in 1846, and taking passage with his wife Catherine and family, settled in Buffalo, New York state. There is no element in the United States, or in any of the colonies that more contributes towards a solid, frugal and valuable community than the German, and this fact receives abundance of testimony in some of the most thriving agricultural districts in the United States and Canada, where the German population predominates; and in the arts and manufactures of the cities, too, this is not less conspicuous. The father of the subject of our sketch exhibited well the characteristics of his people, and kept Joseph at school till he obtained education enough for business pursuits. At the age of tifteen he began to learn the trade of tanning, and worked for some time in the City of Buffalo. In 1861, however, he resolved to try his fortune in Canada, and crossing the line, he went to Brantford. where he remained for a slort time, and then removed to Dundas. After close upor two years he went to Galt, where he engaged in the tanning business with the late John Davidson, and subsequently entered into co-partnership with Mr. David Spiers, ex. mayor of Galt. His quick, accurate insight, and his inherent spirit of enterprise soon convinced him that he could make his way alone, so he dissolved partnership, and opened a business for himself in the manufacture of fine grades of leather, comprising morocco and fancy leathers. From the first his business, owing to his clear head, and excellent methods, began to grow apace, and in 1882 he took with him into partnership his son, Theodore Joseph Wagner, a young gentleman who gives evidence of the same superior qualifications that make the father conspicuous in business circles, and who attends to the books, and superintends the general business of the He is quick and practical, and already has achieved a large share of Dobularity. But Joseph Wagner does not confire his attention solely to his own business, and for his own exclusive benefit. He has always been anxious to see public affairs efficiently and honestly managed, and perceiving this, the town-folk were desirous that he should represent them in some public capacity, therefore he was advised to allow himself to be put in nomination for the town councillorship, and consenting to do so, he was elected in 1885. The same qualities that he exhibited to such advantage in the management of his private affairs, were not lacking when he took his seat at the council board. Mr. Wagner is a staunch and respected member of the Roman catholic church. In politics he approves of the measures of Sir John Macdonald, believing that the national policy operates in the interests of the community at large. He was married first, in 1858, to Miss Madeline Demnier, of Buffalo, U.S.; but this lady died in 1873, leaving two children, of whom Theodore is one. He married again Miss Elizabeth Hays, of Guelph, by whom he has had three chil-In social qualities Mr. Wagner is all that one would desire, being kind and large-hearted, and showing that friendly German spirit which characterizes the race with all those he comes in contact with.

ject

h to

hin.

wa

cived

On lea

lawyer's

tention

the viev

in this r

Then, li

he was s

resolved

Montrea

that city

arrival tl

lation of dry-good

of Ogilvy as one of all his en

tions, and

emplovers

large prop

cided, to r

to open a

of Toronto

was carried

then only

pointed th

business h

Brechin la

nership in and most p

the "Queer

on is an a

Trade; is

Society; as member of politics Mr.

ails to see.

hat the cou

national pol

Presbyterian

n 1874, the

William Ing

Macdou

ario, was bo

ommercial c

828. Althor

true Celt, as inders from

all's father w

owerful clan

other was

astern Argy

arlike Macgr

irs. Macdoug

Anderson. Thomas Ogilvy, the ject of this sketch, is one of the young to whom Toronto is really indebted for hing its dry goods trade. Mr. Anderwas born at Brechin, Forfarshire, Scoton the 2nd of April, 1849, and rewived his education in the parish school. On leaving this institution, he entered a lawyer's office, not, however, with the intention of studying law, but simply with the view of acquiring more knowledge, and in this position he remained for three years. Then, like many of his young countrymen, he was seized with the desire to travel, and resolved to visit America, and he landed in Montreal in 1867, and resolved to make that city his home for some time. On his arrival there, young Anderson found a relation of his carrying on a large wholesale dry-goods business.—the head of the firm of Ogilvy & Co., -and he was soon installed as one of his clerks. Mr. Anderson devoted all his energies to this new sphere of operations, and soon rose in the estimation of his employers. The business began to assume large proportions, and it was ultimately decided, to meet the growing trade in Ontario, to open a branch establishment in the City of Toronto. Accordingly in 1871 this idea was carried out, and Mr. Anderson, though then only twenty-one years of age, was appointed the asssistant-manager. Since then business has grown immensely, and our Brechin lad-having been taken into partnership in 1877—is now one of the leading and most public spirited mercantile men in the "Queen City of the West." Mr. Anderon is an active member of the Board of Irade; is a member of the St. Andrew's Society; and being a keen curler, is a member of the Granite Curling Club. In politics Mr. Anderson is a Reformer, and alls to see, when everything is considered, hat the country has gained anything by the ational policy. In religion he is of the Presbyterian faith. Mr. Anderson married n 1874, the eldest daughter of the Rev. William Inglis.

of

the

re-

and

rd.

and

bor

red

bo

ito

Macdougall, Dougall, Berlin, Onario, was born in the City of Glasgow, the ommercial capital of Scotland, in the year 328. Although by birth a Lowlander, he is true Celt, as both his parents were Highunders from Argyleshire. Mr. Macdouall's father was a member of the ancient and owerful clan whose name he bore. His bother was a native of Glenorchay, in astern Argyleshire, once the home of the arilke Macgregors. For generations back Irs. Macdougall's ancestral relations followed the profession of arms. Several of them occupied high rank as officers in the British army, and served with marked distinction under Wellington in the Peninsula and in other parts of the world. Mr. Macdougall's father came to this country, and arrived in the Province of Quebec at a time when it was in a most primitive condition, and privations and hardships were the lot of every adventurous settler. He remained for a time on the banks of the Chateauguay river, where Mr. Macdougall, then a boy of seven years, acquired a fair knowledge of the French dialect as spoken in the district. His father removed from there to Toronto. where he went into business. There the subject of this sketch received such an education as could be had at the best schools of the time. He applied himself to his studies with the zeal and perseverance for which he is distinguished, and, being fond of books and a great reader, he made the best of his time. His father died when he was about sixteen years of age. By this event he was thrown upon his own resources. This circumstance in his case was not without its advantages. It strengthened his natural spirit of self-reliance, and inspired him with much of that strong determination and decision of character which were so often evinced in a marked degree in his subsequent career, and which singles him out as a self-made man in the fullest sense of the word. Having manifested, when quite young, a preference for the printing business, he secured for himself a situation in what was then the leading publishing house of Toronto, that of Rowsell & Thompson. There he made himself the practical master of the "art preservative" in all its branches, an acquisition that in those days was indispensable to any one who looked forward to embarking on his own account in any newspaper enterprise. After he acquired a knowledge of printing, he looked about him for a favourable opening in that line of business; but, as the time was unpropitious and his means very limited, he commenced to write for the newspaper press, a taste for which he evinced while in the service of his late employers. At this period of the newspaper press of Canada, no one could contribute to it without being irresistibly drawn into the politics of the day. Although he acquired a knowledge of the art of printing in connection with a Conservative journal, his mind was early imbued with liberal sentiments, and the high-handed way in which public affairs were carried on by the Family Compact of that time, made him a confirmed reformer. Mr. Macdougall continued to take a lively interest in the political questions of the day, and he, along with Peter Perry, the father of the present registrar of the County of Ontario, was mainly instrumental in getting up several influential deputations of independent yeomen, who visited Montreal, then the capital of the province, and by their addresses and presence strengthened the hands of the representative . of the sovereign, Lord Elgin, who was severely denounced by the conservatives for having given his sanction to the "Rebellion Losses Bill." Mr. Macdougall's first attempt at journalism was the starting of a family paper. It was ably conducted and met with considerable success; but the time for such an enterprise had not yet arrived. Mr. Macdougall disposed of his journal, and turned his attention to political journalism, almost exclusively. He for a time contributed occasional articles to the Toronto press. He then became connected with the Hamilton Journal and Express, where his articles attracted marked attention. He subsequently removed to Belleville, County of Hastings, where he became the editor and joint owner of the Hastings Chronicle. There his services in the cause of reform and good government were highly appreciated by the Reform party. About the year 1855 he undertook the editorial management of the Kent Advertiser, which was published in the flourishing town of Chat-While there he rendered most valuable service to his party, both by his pen and personal exertions, in numerous political campaigns. He was subsequently offered a favourable opening in Berlin, the county town of Waterloo. The county is one of the most populous and flourishing in the Dominion, settled chiefly by Scotch and old country and Pennsylvania Germans. Upon Mr. Macdougall leaving Chatham he was tendered a public ovation, and presented by the leading gentlemen of the county with a very flattering address. At Berlin he assumed the editorial management and proprietorship of the Berlin Telegraph and German Canadian, the former an English and the latter a German newspaper; both of which he carried on successfully until he retired from the press. Previous to such retirement he was presented with a splendid gold watch and chain, accompanied by a flattering address signed by the leading reformers of the County of Waterloo, in acknowledgment of the valuable service he had rendered to his party and to the county.

In all these spheres of arduous and harass. ing labour (for the life of a faithful journalist is seldom anything else), Mr Macdougail was ever an active and earnest worker in the political ranks with which he had early identified himself. He was no less ready by speech, than with his pen, and during his long connection with the press, extend. ing over a period of nearly thirty years, took an honourable and useful part in the party struggles in the western province of the Dominion. Many old reformers in the County of Hastings, but especially in the counties of Kent, Essex and Waterloo, will long remember his incisive and pungent advocacy of the principles of his party, and his stirring appeals on behalf of their com. mon cause. Having the reputation of being a shrewd and discerning politician, he has enjoyed continuously a large share of the esteem and confidence of the leaders of the liberal party. In 1859, Mr. Macdougall materially assisted Mr. Gillespie, then editor of the Hamilton Spectator, in establishing the Canadian Press Association. In 1862 he was elected president of that Association, and afterwards made one of its honorary life members. In 1864 he severed his long and active connection with the press. He in that year received from the late Hon, Sandfield Macdonald, who was then prime minister, his appointment to the registrarship of the County of Waterloo, an office which he still holds, as an appropriate reward of his past public services, which were generally acknowledged, by journals of both sides of politics, as being well deserved In 1875 the Mackenzie government appointed a commission to represent the Dominion at the Philadelphia Exposition of which the late Hon. L. Letellier de St Just was ex officio president. Associated with him were the late Hon. Senator Penny Montreal; the Hon. Senator Wilmot, and Mr. D. Macdougall. Mr. Wilmot sub Mr. Wilmot sub ter of th sequently retired from the commission in the C and the Hon. Mr. Letellier being appointed John Cle lieutenant-governor of Quebec, the Hon came to C. A. Pelletier, Minister of Agriculture was selected to fill his place. The Hon ln 1825 h he remain Mr. Penny and Mr. Macdougall were the moved, th in the Cou two active and working members of the commission, on whose shoulders the wor farm with and responsibility of the undertaking rested county to death, whi On receiving formal intimation that the 1873, great commission had concluded its labours, the He was ki Hon. C. A. Pelletier, Minister of Agri an upright culture for the Dominion, sent an office letter to each of the commissioners, com veying the warmest thanks of the govern nage Mr.

men

ner:

Acce

case,

mini

finel:

doug

hand

State

by a

parch

succe

Macd

ferin,

replyi

sented the E

ence t

dresse

he cor

succes

and re

tender

tion to delphia

Macdo

in all c

resides.

with its

times fi

High So

way has good an

there or

vice. F

and inte

will alw:

respect a still in t

course of public ar

Clem

Fork, no

were Joh

ment for the earnest and indefatigable manner in which he discharged his official duties. Accompanying each letter was a morocco case, containing a large and handsome Dominion gold medal, and a short address finely engrossed on parchment. Mr. Macdougall was also made the recipient of a handsome bronze medal from the United States Centennial Commission, accompanied by a complimentary letter, engrossed on parchment. And, as an evidence of the success which attended the labours of Mr. Macdougall and his colleagues, Lord Dufferin, the then Governor-General, when replying to a congratulatory address, presented to him at Ottawa, on his return from the Exhibition, made a most pleasing reference to them; and also sent a letter ad-iressed to the Hon. Mr. Penny, in which he congratulated the commissioners on the success which had attended their efforts. and requested that his personal thanks be tendered to Mr. Macdougall for his attention to his lordship during his stay in Philai 1862 iation, In his political retirement Mr. delphia. Macdougall has taken undiminished interest in all concerns in the district in which he norary is long resides. He has heartily identified himself with its educational interests, has several Be Hon. times filled the position of chairman of the High School Board of Trustees, and in every prime way has used his influence to help on every istraroffice good and philanthropic object or movement. there or wherever else he could be of serte revice. From his well-known ability, energy n were f both and integrity of character, he possesses and erved will always retain in a large degree popular respect and confidence. Mr. Macdougall is t ap still in the prime of life and in the ordinary course of things has many years of continued public and private usefulness before him. le Sti iate enny harass-

ournal-

dougail

ker in d early

s ready

during

extend

years.

in the

ince of

in the

in the

oo, will

ungent

ty, and

r com-

f being

he has

of the

of the

lougal

editor

lishing

, and

sion

inted

Hon

ture

Hon

word

Clements, Mathew, was born in Little York, now Toronto, in 1826. His parents were John Clements and Jane Barr, daughter of the late William Barr, of Omagh, in the County of Tyrone, Ireland. John Clements was a farmer, and in 1823 came to Canada and settled in Cornwall. In 1825 he removed to Little York, where he remained until 1831. Once more he removed, then to the township of Trafalgar, in the County of Halton, and settled on a farm within a mile of Milton, now the county town, and remained there until his death, which occurred on the 21st February, 1873, greatly lamented by all his neighbours. He was known as a zealous Christian and n upright man. Mrs. Clements is still uive, and enjoys good health. By marriage Mr. Clements had a family of ten children, and the subject of this sketch was the eldest. Mr. William Clements, the second son, is deputy sheriff under Mr. Mathew Clements. Mathew received a common school education, and after leaving school went to farming, in the township of Trafalgar, where he remained for thirty-one years. In 1882, he removed to the town of Milton, and was appointed sheriff of the county in the same year, and this position he still continues to hold. Mr. Clements was an assessor for eleven years for the township, and in 1868 was elected councilman for the township. This office he held for two successive years, and in 1870 was elected deputy reeve, which office he retained until the year 1875. In this year he was elected reeve of the township, remaining reeve until 1881; during this period he was warden of the county for two years. In 1882 he was, as we have already seen, appointed sheriff of the County of Halton, and in 1854 he was appointed a justice of the peace. In religion he is a Methodist and in politics an advanced Reformer. Progress has ever been his motto. Mr. Clements held for several years the secretaryship of the Halton division of the Grange Lodge. Mr. Clements married, in 1853, Margaret Orr, daughter of the late Andrew Orr, of the township of Trafalgar. They have three children, two sons and one daughter. He is a strong advocate of temperance, and a supporter of the Scott Act and its sims.

Macintyre, Thomas Macfarlane. M.A., LL.B., Brantford, Principal of the Ladies' College, is a Canadian by birth, but his parents came to this country from Argyleshire, Scotland. His mother was Margaret, nee Carswell, and his maternal grandmother was a Macfarlane. The subject of this sketch was born in the year 1841, in the township of Orford, County of Kent, and having obtained a good education in the village school, he prepared himself for the profession of teaching. His first school was at Port Glasgow, in the County of Elgin; and his second was the village school at Duart. He continued his studies in the Grammar School at Wardsville, which was under the headmastership of the Rev. D. J. Macdonnell, B.D. In 1864 he entered the Belleville Seminary, then affiliated with the Toronto University, with the view of taking the University course. He passed his second year in the University in 1866, and in the following year, Albert College having obtained university powers, he became a charter graduate in arts of that institution. It was his intention to prosecute still further his mathematical studies, which were his favourite pursuits at that time. but was offered the position of adjunct professor in mathematics in the college, which position he accepted. In addition to the work of the mathematical department, Professor Macintyre devoted himself closely to the study of the modern languages and history, and the latter department was placed under his charge during the third year of his professorship. In 1870 he received the appointment of headmaster of the Bowmanville High School, and in 1872 that of the Ingersoll High School. His religious training was obtained in a strict Presbyterian home. He was largely influenced by the godly life of a most intelligent, pious and devoted mother, who is still living. For many years Mr. Macintyre had a view to the ministry, and in 1878 was making arrangements to take a theological course, when he was called to fill the important position of principal of the Presbyterian Ladies' College in Brantford, Ontario, which position he still holds. In this year he obtained his degree of LL.B. Under his wise administration, this institution has become favourably known for its elevated standard, and the thoroughness of its achievements in the higher education of When the Toronto University made provision for the holding of local examinations for women, this college at once availed itself of the advantages afforded. The principal has taken a deep interest in all the educational questions of the day, and has been a strong advocate of a provincial university, with federated colleges, combining and preserving both state and de-nominational interests. As a teacher he nominational interests. As a teacher he stands deservedly high. Principal Macintyre is one of the few successful men who have remained in the profession, and have risen to occupy the prominent places available to talent in the profession. He is in the strictest sense a student. Whilst he has devoted much attention to philosophical subjects, his systematic reading, since 1868, has been in the department of history and early English. His method of teaching history is essentially the topical, giving special prominence to dramatic unity. He has one of the best selected historical libraries in the country. In 1883 he visited Great Britain and the continent, having in view the places of historic interest. As a public lecturer, Principal Macintyre has gained a high reputation. His lectures on Lord Nelson, Culloden, Cromwell, Imperial Federation, the Moor in Spain, and others, give evidence of his grasp of historical subjects, and his power to give a vivid setting to the thoughts and actions that He was have influenced men and nations. married in 1870 to the second daughter of the late Robert Walker, of East Whitby. Robert Walker was one of the early settlers in Whitby, well known and highly esteemed. In politics he was a staunch Liberal, and frequently urged to become the peoples' representative in parlia. ment, but resolutely refused to enter into political life. There are now living many who can remember the valuable services which, in his day, he ably rendered. He died in 1870 at the early age of 56. Principal Macintyre, is in the prime of life, is an earnest student, and is blessed with a sound constitution, and has prospects before him of increased usefulness, and of attaining still higher distinction in his chosen depart. ment of work.

pul

on

of ·

rece

Har

emb

Eng

He

Brai

1869

may

men

Bran

and test 1

Mini

conte

He l

most.

and l

seltisl

In rel

ent ch

byteri

1863,

Davie

nnion

re ali

n Ha

trang

ame Hamil

where

busine

h owl

Paters

Ferrier

Lackner, Dr. Henry G., of the town of Berlin, Ontario, was born on the 25th day of December, 1851, at Hawksville, in the township of Wellesley, Waterloo county, Ontario. His ancestors were very worthy German people, and his parents came from Baden, Germany, in 1839. Arriving in Canada they wended their way to the township of Wellesley, where William Lackner, the father of our subject, undertook farming. But he did not farm in the plodding way, and upon a mediocre scale. In due time he became a thriving and leading agriculturist, and besides his success in this war, engaged himself largely in stock-raising The old homestead now contains nearly four hundred acres of the finest agricultural land in Ontario. Our subject's father has been the holder of several municipal and other public offices in the township and county. His son, Henry George, attended the public school until the age of fourteen years, when he obtained a scholarship at matriculation examination at the Berlin Grammar School He attended this institution for two years. when he commenced the profession of teach-He taught two of the best public schools in the county, from 1868 to 1872 inclusive. Subsequently he attended the Toronto School of Medicine for four years, and in 1876 he obtained his license from the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Ont, by passing an honorary examination. He also graduated in medicine at the Toronto University. In the same year he obtained the degree of M.B. with honours, and took the Starr gold medal and the first University silver medal (1876). He at once comhistorical e a vivid tions that

He was daughter of East ne of the nown and he was a urged to in parliaenter into ing many e services red. He Princilife, is an h a sound efore him attaining

en departthe town e 25th day e, in the county. y worthy ame from riving in the town-Lackner, farming. ing way, due time agriculthis way, - raising. arly four ural land has been nd other county. he public rs, when iculation r School ro years, of teach t public

to 1872

ded the

ır yeara,

from the

s, Ont.,

on. He

Toronto

bbtained

nd took

Univer

ce commenced practice of his profession in the town of Berlin in 1876, and has been there ever since in practice. Every young practitioner finds difficulty in building up his practice, and in the beginning the same abour awaited our subject; but he was persistent, and he had his heart in his work, and now he enjoys high repute for professional skill, and has established for himself a most valuable practice. He was appointed physician to the House of Industry and Refige for the county of Waterloo (1881), and medical health officer for the town of Berlin in 1884. He holds both of these positions at this time. In religion he is a member of the Lutheran Church. He married in 1880 Helen A. Mackie, eldest daughter of John A. Mackie, J.P., who is at present the oldest established general merchant in the County of Waterloo. Paterson, William, M. P., Brantford, Ontario, one of the most brilliant of our public men, was born in Hamilton, Ontario, on the 19th September, 1839. He is a son of James and Martha Paterson, who came to Canada from Aberdeen, Scotland. He received his education at the schools of Hamilton and Caledonia, and his studies embraced, besides the ordinary branches, English, French, Latin and general classics. He entered public life as deputy reeve of Brantford, which position he occupied from 1869 to 1871 inclusive, and he was likewise mayor of Brantford in 1872. He was elected member of the House of Commons for South Brant in 1872, and again in 1874, in 1878, and in 1882. His opponent in the first contest was Sir Francis Hincks, then Finance Minister, and his opponent in the last three contests was Alfred Watts, of Brantford. He has been connected in his time with most of the public enterprises of Brantford, and has always shown a genuine and uneltish concern for the interests of the people. In religion he is a member of the Independent church, but his parents were strict Presbyterians. He married on September 10th, 1863, Lucy Clive Davies, daughter of T. C. Davies, of Brantford township, and by this mion there are five children, three of whom re alive. Our subject lived with his parents n Hamilton till they died in 1849. It is trange to remark that they died on the ame day in August, his mother being in Hamilton and his father in Port Dover, where he had gone a day or two before on business. The cause of death was cholera. Iwo days after his parents' death, young Paterson was adopted by Rev. Andrew Ferrier, D.D., of Caledonia, a Presbyterian minister, and an old friend of his parents. He lived with this worthy man as his son till he was nearly fifteen years of age, when he became a clerk in a large grocery store in Brantford, in which situation he remained for about nine years, leaving it to enter business for himself in 1863. In this year he formed a partnership with Henry B. Leeming, of Brantford, under the firm name of Leeming & Paterson, and began the manufacture of biscuits and confectionery. Mr. Leeming retired in 1876, and since that time Mr. Paterson has been sole proprietor of the factory. The business has grown steadily under his management, and is now one of the most thriving industries in the Dominion. Mr. Paterson has always been a champion of the Reform cause; and we may now, in summing up, add that in the entire Liberal ranks there is not a more worthy man to be found than Mr. William Paterson. His ability is of the very highest order, and he has no peer in the House of Commons as a flashing, witty, pithy speaker. A warm, sunny humour pervades many of his speeches, and though he can be and often is severe, there is never any We believe that malice in his utterances. we should be justified in saving that in the House of Commons Mr. Paterson has not the ill will of any man, and this, notwithstanding that no other member upon his side of the House, has more frequently or more effectively arraigned the occupants of the Treasury benches. The writer, speaking for himself, would rather listen to a speech from Mr. Paterson, when at his best, than from any other member of the legislature.

MacVicar, D. H., D.D., LL.D., Principal of the Presbyterian College, Montreal, Canada, and Professor of Dogmatics, Church Government and Homiletics, was born in Dunglass, near Campbelltown, Cantyre, Scotland, on November 29th, 1831. His father, John MacVicar, a farmer in Dunglass, was a man of great physical and intellectual vigour, and was widely known and highly respected in Scotland and Canada for his ability, generosity, and sterling integrity. While diligent in business he delighted to rest in the truth of the motto of the family crest-"Dominus Providebit" The Lord will provide. His wife, Janet MacTavish, was a person of similar character, possessed of an unusual degree of energy and executive ability. She lived to be ninety-two years old, and to see her children and children's children in positions of usefulness and influence. Dr. Mac-Vicar was one of twelve children, and the youngest of seven sons. His parents emigrated to Canada a few years after his birth and settled near Chatham, Ontario. His early education was conducted by a private tutor, and he afterwards pursued his studies in the Toronto Academy and University. He took his Theological course in Knox College, Toronto, and for two years taught classics and other subjects in a private academy in that city, conducted by his brother, Rev. Dr. MacVicar, now Professor of Apologetics, etc., in MacMaster Hall, To-In 1859 he was licensed to preach the gospel by the Toronto Presbytery. Immediately after he was offered pastoral charges in Collingwood, Erin, Bradford, Toronto, and Guelph. He accepted a unanimous call to Knox Church in the last named city. His high preaching powers and eminent gifts as a pastor had already become widely known and recognized, so that in the fall of 1860 he received a call from Coté Street Free Church, Montreal, as successor to Dr. Fraser, now of London, England. He accepted the call and was inducted into his new charge on the 30th of January, 1861. During his pastorate, which lasted for nearly eight years, the congrega-tion attained a very high state of efficiency; the membership almost doubled, and great missionary zeal was manifested in the founding of several district Sabbath schools, two of which are to-day not only self-supporting but influential city congregations. In 1868 he was appointed Professor of Divinity in the Presbyterian College, Montreal. work entrusted to him was in reality the founding of the institution, which existed then only in its charter. Now the seminary has extensive and costly buildings, a large and valuable library, a staff of four professors and four lecturers, with over seventy students in attendance, and it has sent out over one hundred ministers and missionaries. Its total assets amount to over a quarter of a million dollars. bespeaks an energy and enterprise worthy of all praise. It is unnecessary to speak of Dr. MacVicar's ability as a teacher. His pre-eminent qualifications in that respect are known all over the continent, and have been felt and recognized far beyond the sphere of college work. He has long taken the deepest interest in the work of French evangelization. By overture to the Presbytery of Montreal and the Assembly, he originated the work of training French and English-speaking missionaries and ministers, and organized the Presbyterian French work, which has been so successful.

has been for many years, and is now, chair-. man of the Board of French Evangelization of the General Assembly. He served for many years on the Protestant Board of School Commissioners, Montreal, and his services in this connection have been invaluable to the cause of education—a fact to which the press has borne repeated testi-At the time of the federation of the provinces of the Dominion, he took a leading part in securing the educational rights of the minority in the Province of Quebec, His public lectures and addresses, educational and theological, and his articles in reviews, are widely known. Among his educational works, his two arithmetics, primary and advanced, are standard text-books. During the session of 1871 he was lecturer on Logic in McGill University. In 1870 he received the degree of LL.D., honoris cansa, from that University, of which he is also a In 1881 he was chosen moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyter. ian Church in Canada, the duties of which office he discharged with acknowledged firmness, courtesy and judgment. In the same year he received the diploma of membership of the Athénee Oriental of Paris; and two years later his alma mater conferred upon him the degree of D.D. He has always taken a prominent part in the work of the General Assembly, having been a member of that court every year since his ordination. He was appointed a delegate to each of the three great Presbyterian Councils which met in Edinburgh in 1877; in Philadelphia, 1880; and Belfast, 1884. In the Philadelphia meeting he read a paper on "The Catholicity of Presbyterianism" and at Belfast he was chairman of the Committee on the admission of churches into the alliance. He has served seven years on the International Bible Lesson Commit-He is now honorary president of the Celtic Society of Montreal, and takes an active part in its transactions. On three occasions Dr. MacVicar has travelled in Great Britain and Europe, and his merits are well known and highly appreciated far beyond the borders of Canada. Some years ago he received and declined a very cordial call to become the pastor of the South Presbyterian Church, Brooklyn, N. Y., at a salary of $7,000 per annum. Dr. MacVicar was married May 1st, 1860, to Eleanor, youngest daughter of Robert Goulding and Ann Bridgland, who were both born in England, and came to Toronto when it was only a village and known as Little York. he was se the Rova Mrs. MacVicar was educated in Toronto

and 1

of u

also f

occup

nity five c

Sm

LL.D

and I

of A

where

a pra

from

at Wy

other

receiv

school

by his

For he

of poss

given

thinke

an und

being

he com

bore a

larship

Latin

essays,

gradua

class in

tion he

ship of

tion he

be a tir

land, an

proved

spirit of classic v

religiou

and wr

brillian

diate pu

younger

around

 bar at L

dom fin

and Mr.

which h

life long

in dealir

of the ti

ment, ar

ant secr

enquire

Universi

tion to it

When a

and while she has made her home the scene chair-. of unbroken domestic happiness, she has also filled the high social position she has ocupied with distinguished wisdom, digmy and success. She is the mother of fre children, two daughters and three sons. smith, Professor Goldwin, M.A. LLD. and D.C.L., Toronto.—This learned and popular writer was born on the 13th of August, 1823, at Reading, England, where his father had been for some time a practising physician; though the family from which he sprung had originally lived at Wybunbury, in Cheshire. Like so many other distinguished Englishmen, Mr. Smith received his early education at Eton, which school was soon to receive added honours by his brilliant University course at Oxford. For here it was that he first evinced evidence of possessing the rare talents that have since given him so prominent a place among the thinkers of the century. He first entered as an undergraduate of Christ Church, but on being elected to a demyship in Magdalen, he completed his course in that college. He bore away the Ireland and Hertford scholarships, obtained the Chancellor's prize for Latin verse, and for English and Latin essays, and crowned his series of undergraduate successes by graduating with a first class in classics. Two years after graduation he was offered, and accepted, a Fellowship of University College, of which institu-tion he became tutor. This happened to be a time of much mental activity in England, and the brilliant young Fellow soon proved that he was destined to be a leading spirit outside of college, as well as within its classic walls. He closely observed the various religious, political and social movements, and wrote on many topics in his keen, brilliant, incisive style, commanding immediate public attention, and drawing all the younger and aspiring minds of the college around him. In 1847 he was called to the bar at Lincoln's Inn, but minds like his seldom find in the law a permanent attraction, and Mr. Smith, luckily for the calling to which he surrendered himself, was won to a life long service to literature. His ability in dealing with the vexing public questions of the time attracted the notice of government, and in 1850 he was appointed assistant secretary of the Royal Commission to enquire into the general condition of the University of Oxford, "especially in relation to its revenues, discipline and studies." When a second commission was appointed he was secretary; and he was a member of the Royal Commission to examine into the

ation

d for

rd of

d his

inval-

ct to

testi-

f the

lead-

ights

ebec.

duca-

es in

edu-

orim-

ooks.

turer

70 he

ausá,

lso a

rator

yter-

hich

dged

the

nem-

aris;

con-

He

the

been

e his

gate.

rian

377;

884.

aper

m";

into

ears

mit-

the

an

ree

in

rits

far

lial

est a car

or,

condition of Popular Education in England. It was chiefly while commissioner that Mr. Smith obtained that insight into the working and needs of the various seats of learning that has given such value to his views on educational questions, both in his native country, and in the United States and Canada. In 1858 he was elected professor of Modern History at Oxford, a position which he filled in a way that attracted the admiration of all authorities. Meanwhile his able advocacy of liberal reforms in matters educational, religious and political, won for him a world-wide name, and when he visited America in 1864, he was warmly welcomed, and received from the Brown University the degree of LL.D. From his own University of Oxford he subsequently had conferred upon him the degree of D.C.L. He staunchly advocated the abolition of slavery, and warmly sympathised with the North during the civil war. Four years after his first arrival in America he was appointed Lecturer in English and Constitutional History in Cornell University, at Ithaca, New York, and this office he still holds, although for the past twelve years he has been a resident of Toronto. It may be said that, in 1866, Mr. Smith left England to cast his lot in the new world, but leaders of the Liberal party, with whom he had so long been in accord, and who knew and prized the assistance he had given to their common cause, were loth to let him go; and among other inducements placed at his disposal a constituency with a certain liberal majority, but he refused all overtures. Nor have his English friends since ceased their solicitations for him to allow himself to be put in nomination for a safe constituency; he left England stricken down by a sad family bereavement, and resolved to spend the rest of his days beyond the Atlantic. In 1872 Mr. Smith took up his abode in Toronto, where he at once became prominent in educational circles. He was appointed a member of the Senate of Toronto University, was elected the first president of the Council of Public Instruction, and was for two years president of the Provincial Teachers' Association. Since coming to Canada, Mr. Smith has unreservedly devoted his time and genius to a furtherance of all projects that can advance the people, intellectually, socially and morally. He has given a prestige to Canadian letters by his active and prominent connection with native literary undertakings; he was a contributor to the Canadian Monthly, and afterwards to the Toronto Nation, in both of which periodicals his voice was raised on all occasions, when words of advice and warning were needed. Subsequently he established The Bystander, a journal which for a period appeared monthly, then quarterly, but which, after some time, was discontinued to make room for The Week, in which paper, however, his characteristic style, trenchant, fresh, keen, and brilliant as ever, is recognised over the well-known nom de plume, "Bystander." In private life Mr. Smith is the genuine type of the cordial, courteous, high-bred English gentleman; and in addition to his activity in literary work, he has, since coming to Toronto, taken a prominent part among those who care for the poor, to whom, it is attested, his purse is always open. It need not be said that he has by his example elevated the tone of the native press, given life and stimulus to independent journalism, and taught the journalistic profession that there is such a thing as honour belonging to its calling. In England, Mr. Smith was a Liberal, but in Canada he has eschewed party connexion. In 1875 he married Harriet, daughter of Thomas Dixon, Esquire, of Boston, and widow of the late William Boulton, Esquire, of Toronto. As a master of style Mr. Smith has no superior, if an equal, living. Among some of his works of the last thirty years may be mentioned, "Irish History and Character," "Lectures on the Study of History," "Three English Statesmen—Pym, Cromwell, and Pitt," a volume of essays which included that on the "Great Duel of the Seventeenth Century, and "The Political Destiny of Canada."

Forster, Archibald McDonald, Hamilton, our subject, was born on May 11th, 1843, in Markham. His grandfather, John Forster, was a native of Newcastle-on-Tyne, England, and was engaged in the lead and coal mining business. One day, while examining one of his mines, he was accidentally killed, and when his estate was wound up, it was found that little or no means had been left to support his large family of chil-In 1830 the grandmother and family emigrated to Canada, with the view of improving their condition. Matthew W. Forster, the father of the subject of this sketch, the eldest, was an engineer and machinist by trade, and on his arrival he got a position on board the John Bull, one of the steamboats plying between the ports of Quebec and Montreal. He next found employment on a steamboat, the Union, running between Little York and Niagara town, and other boats belonging to the Hon. John Hamilton, and some years afterwards he had the honour of being one of our early settlers who with others built the first two propellors, the London and the St. Thomas, for the lake Archibald M. Forster was educated in the Markham and Uxbridge Grammar schools, and there he received an English education, with some Latin. His father conducted a foundry and machine shop, and into this shop Archibald went after he had left school. In 1862, business losses having overwhelmed himself and his father, the foundry was given up, and he took a situation in a railroad shop as an iron finisher. Then he went as second engineer upon a steamboat on the western lakes, and after having taken out a certificate of qualification, he found that, in consequence of his being a British subject, the United States authorities would not recognise it, and he had to turn to something else. He went back to the workshop again, but shortly after went into the news business, having rented from the Great Western Railway Company the right to sell books and newspapers in some of its trains. In the meantime his ingenious brain was at work, and we find him inventing and patenting, in 1866, a preparation to clean scale from steam boilers, and in 1868 what is known to machinists as a self-oiling cup. As these inventions promised to be of great value, in 1877 he established a brass foundry in Hamilton, and in this shop we find him to-day manufacturing all kinds of brass goods, of the most excellent and marketable description, and likewise several specialties which are his own invention, and which are used all over the Dominion. Mr. Forster was brought up a Methodist, but changed his views, and now attends the Episcopal church. He is also a Freemason. For many years Mr. Forster was a staunch Liberal, but having accepted Sir Leonard Tilley's national policy, he has ever since been a Conservative. He married in 1872, Miss Minnie Hollinhead, youngest daughter of Mr. Hollinhead, manufacturer, of Dundas. By this lady he has had four of a There are two girls and one boy family.

Woods, John, Alderman, Toronto, was born in the County of Longford, Ireland; and at the age of sixteen he sailed for America, and landed in Toronto, on the 9th of March, 1849. Mr. Woods received his education in the public school of his parish. On his arrival he obtained employment in the dry goods establishment of Walker & Hutchinson, on King street. However, after a few years, he abandoned inetwork journ maki groce north owing remo side o was e Ward. to star (forme its rep Woods and g mittees stockho ligion longs one of societie Conser Conserv St. Mar to Miss late Jol jala, Co county, family o girls. ments, h assist hi men, wh with the Woods' d be proud Barte onto, wa in the Ci John and Rhode Is children, the eldest

to Canada

Catharine

match fact

out the bu

where he r

packed up his time b n this city of ginger

eer; but

o the man

ng to seve ontinue i

imself in t

f coffees ar

this

this business, and learned the trade of cabinet-making with Jacques & Hay, and worked in their shops for some time as a journeyman. In 1859 he gave up cabinet-making, and established himself in the grocery, wines and liquor business, on the north side of Dundas street, and afterwards, owing to the enlargement of his business, removed to his present place on the south side of Dundas street, Toronto. In 1882 he was elected alderman for St. Stephen's Ward, and in 1885 was again called upon to stand as candidate for St. Mark's Ward (formerly Brockton), and was duly elected its representative in the City Council, Mr. Woods is a member of the executive, fire and gas, court house and reception committees of the city council; and is also a stockholder in the Standard Bank. In religion he is a Roman catholic, and belongs to the St. Vincent de Paul Society, one of the most worthy of the benevolent societies of Toronto. In politics he is a Conservative, and is the chairman of the Conservative Association for the ward of St. Mark. Mr Woods was married in 1857. to Miss Margaret Lawlor, daughter of the late John Lawlor, of the township of Adjala, County of Simcoe, a native of Queen's county, Ireland. By this lady he has a family of nine children, six boys and three girls. Owing to Mr. Wood's many engagements, his sons, James D. and William P., assist him in his business, and these young men, who are well educated, are favourites with the public. Altogether, Mr. John Woods' career is one of which any man may be proud.

the .

who

llors,

lake

cated

nınar

glish

ither

and had ving

the

tuaher.

bn a

after

tion.

ng a

iorid to

k to

ent

rom

the orne

ous

nt-

868

ing

ass we

> Barton, Edward Warren, Toronto, was born on the 30th of May, 1846, in the City of Boston, U.S. His parents, John and Elizabeth Barton, were born in Rhode Island, and had a family of five children, the subject of our sketch being the eldest. In 1846 Mr. John Barton moved to Canada, and settled in the town of St. Catharines. Here he started a pail and match factory; but four years later he sold but the business, and removed to Hamilton, where he remained till 1853. Once more he packed up his worldly effects, and set out, his time bending his steps toward Toronto. In this city he engaged in the manufacture of ginger beer and Dr. Cronk's sarsaparilla eer; but after a time he turned his attenthe manufacture of stocking yarns. Owng to severe competition he did not long putinue in this business, but engaged imself in the manufacture and preparation f coffees and spices. In 1862 he sold out this business likewise, and commenced the manufacture of brooms. In 1868 he sold out the business to his partner, Mr. Howarth, and retired, and in 1874 he died. Edward W. Barton, the subject of this sketch, received a public school education, and at the age of fifteen he found employment with his father, in the woollen mill. After the sale of the mill, he went into the broom factory, and in 1867 he was appointed manager of the works, and continued as such until 1870, when he began business for himself; and now he has one of the largest establishments for the manufacture of brooms and brushes at 20 Givens street, in Toronto. In 1869 Mr. Barton joined the Garrison Artillery of Toronto, under Captain McLean; and in the same year he received a first-class certificate in the School of Gunnery in Toronto. Before this date, after receiving his certificate, he was offered a lieutenancy, but declined. Mr. Barton has acted for nine years in the various capacities of corporal, sergeant, drill instructor, and quartermaster-sergeant, and has not yet received his discharge. Mr. Barton was, in 1884, elected alderman for St. Stephen's Ward, and was re-elected by acclamation in 1885. He is now a member of the Board of Works and Water Works committees. He is an Oddfellow, and has received all the honours within the gift of that society; and is second in command in the newly-formed encampment of Oddfellows. He likewise belongs to the United Workmen, and was the representative of that order during its last session at Toronto. In addition he is a past officer in the Royal Arcanum, a grand president of the Sons of Canada, and an officer in the Orange order. He is likewise president of St. Stephen's Ward Reform Association. Mr. Barton is in religion a Presbyterian, and in politics a Reformer. He married in July, 1864, Janet McLennan, daughter of Kenneth McLennan, of Toronto, and has had nine children. Francis, Herbert and Kenneth W., now assist in the management of their father's business.

Williams, Arthur Trefusis Heneage. — The late Lieutenant Colonel Williams, M.P. for East Durham. Ontario, was born at Penryn Park, Port Hope, Ontario, in 1837. He was a son of Tucker Williams, a commander in the Royal Navy, who sat for Durham, in the Canadian assembly, from 1840 to 1848. "In his early boyhood," says a writer in the Port Hope Times, "Arthur Williams was sent to Upper Canada College, then the royal grammar

And the state of the state of the school of the province, where he was the pupil of F. W. Barron, Esq., M.A., the principal, and was the fellow-student of many who, like himself, have figured conspicuously in the history of this country. Prominent amongst these was the Hon. Edward Blake. In 1854, at the age of seventeen years, our subject was left fatherless. and deep indeed was his distress. passionately fond of his parents, and was the constant companion of his father whenever he was at home. Many of our older residents can recall the portly figure of Mr. Williams, as he walked, leaning on the arm of his slender and youthful boy; the evident pride of the father in his son, and the equally evident love and respect of the son for his father. Shortly after his father's death the guardians of his son sent him to Scotland, where he attended Edinburgh University, and enjoyed the valuable instruction of Prof. Aytoun, and other distinguished men, whose friendship he retained in after years. Having completed his college course, he travelled extensively in Great Britain and Ireland, and upon the Continent, having as his companion and intimate friend a college chum, the late Mr. Wells, who was afterwards an oculist and aurist of some distinction in London, England, and who was a gentleman of very high culture, of affluent means, of great acquaintance with the prominent men of the day, and of a warm heart and charming address. tween these two the firmest friendship existed up to the time of Mr. Wells' death, some years ago. Upon coming of age, Mr. Williams devoted himself to acquiring a knowledge of the affairs of the large estate left by his father, and actively co-operated with the executors and trustees under his father's will, who were his mother, and Messrs. William Fraser, John Ogilvy, and James Scott (now deceased), in the management of the extensive properties committed to them. Soon afterwards, at the request of the trustees, he assumed the entire direction and control of the estate, and continued in charge of it until the various divisions amongst the beneficiaries relieved him of some of the shares. Still, up to the time of his death, he retained the management of a considerable part of the properties, and administered them with the same assiduity and care which had always distinguished his business relations. The burthen thus laid upon him, even from his earliest manhood, was one which, in a degree that will, perhaps, never be duly appreciated, must have weighed upon him, and deprived his life of much of the leisure and relaxation which he might otherwise have enjoy. He married a daughter of the Hon. ourable Senator Seymour, but she died In early life our esteemed and lamented subject connected himself with the volunteer service, and for a considera. ble period before his death he had been Lieut.-Colonel, commanding the 46th East Durham battalion. He did not adopt any profession, but delighted to call himself a farmer. But he was a man of large and generous public spirit, and connected him. self with a number of important enterprises. He was chairman of the Port Hope Har. bour Commissioners; president of the Midland Loan and Savings Company, and a director of the Midland Railway. He com. manded the Wimbledon team of riflemen in 1880. He began public life by entering the Ontario Legislature, at the general election, in 1867. In 1871 he was reelected by acclamation to the same house. He was first elected to the House of Commons at the general elections for 1878, and was re-elected a the last general election. Through life a: alous Conservative, he was always held in respect and honour by his party; but his personal relationship with gentlemen opposed to him on public questions was always of the most cordial kind. When the unfortunate disturbance broke out in the North-West, Colonel Williams put himself at the head of his men, and marched to the front. His bravery there inspired those who followed him, and his kindness to his men, denying himself comforts for their sake, won the love of every man under his command. It is admitted on all hands that while all the troops engaged behaved with the most splendid steadiness and courage, the inception of the grand charge which carried the day and broke the backbone of the rebellion, belonged to Col. Williams, and gained for him by unanimous consent the title of "the hero of Batoche." This, says our author ity, was our hero's first "baptism of fire," and the coolness, judgment and dashing bravery he exhibited in the midst of a very hailstorm of bullets, called forth the high est encomiums of the commander of the expedition, and deepened—if that were pos sible—the love and devotion of his officer and men. Had he lived to return, h would, undoubtedly, have been in the first rank of the heroes of the campaign. After the battle of Batoche, he, with his batta lion, the scattered parts of which had no come up, proceeded with Gen. Middleto

to P

and

patch

Bear.

north

wear!

retur

ita.

on A

there

expect

for the

time

finally to ac

were I ever b

of his 1

the pr

raised

chill of men d quences

the me

he decli

capture

whateve

"rolled

the hum

a severe

added to heat at t

28th Jur

had suffe

the 1st .

ordered

Dominio

for which tempted

battalion,

the labou

go aboar

down, and anything

From tha

never rose day, the 2

momentar

a quarter of Saturda

to its rest

while as yel

ing, he obse

would be 1

over now, a whole cam

terred at 1

attended by

hom near a bled in that

w Prince Albert, and thence to Battleford xation ' and Fort Pitt. From there he was desenjoy. patched to Frog Lake, in pursuit of Big Hon-Bear, and on to a point twenty-four miles died d and north. This was a most fatiguing and wearying march; but we are told that he with returned to Fort Pitt well and in good spirideralbeen its. Here, however, his camp was pitched on a muskeg of damp, spongy ground, and 1 East there for fourteen weary days they waited, t any expecting each day to bring them the order self a for the homeward march. It was during this e and time that the disease was contracted which himfinally carried him off. That determination rises. Harto accept for himself no luxuries which were not available for his men, which had Midever been the distinguishing characteristic and a of his military life, prevented his accepting the proper camp-bed, which would have emen mised his body above the dampness and chill of the ground. He would fare as his neral men did, whatever might be the consequences. It is truly affecting, in view of the melancholy circumstances, to hear that he declined the camp-bed his servant had aptured for him, and resolved to share whatever privations were borne by his men, "rolled himself in his blanket and slept on the humid, cold ground." This brought on severe cold, with pains in his limbs, and added to it was the effect of the burning hat at the church parade on Sunday, the 3th June, which led him to believe that he had suffered a sun-stroke. On Wednesday, the 1st July, when a general parade was ordered to celebrate the birthday of the Dominion, which he so dearly loved, and for which he had hazarded his life, he attempted to take the command of his noble lattalion, but found he was not equal to the labour. The surgeon advised him to go aboard the steamer Northwest and lie down, and he did so, no apprehension of mything serious been then entertained. from that bed in the captain's room, he never rose, and delirium setting in on Monday, the 2nd July, he remained with only momentary returns of consciousness, until aquarter past nine o'clock on the morning of Saturday, the 4th July, his spirit passed to its rest. Once during his illness, but Once during his illness, but while as yet no one suspected the fatal ending, he observed to a gentleman: "Well, it would be hard lines if I should be bowled over now, after passing unhurt through the thole campaign." His remains were inared at Port Hope, on the 21st of July, stended by the largest concourse of people, hom near and far, ever before seen assembled in that town.

com-

ering

s re-

ouse.

Com-

and

tion.

was

y his

with

ues-

rind.

roke

iams

and

here his

com-

very

tted

en-

ndid the

and

be-

hiщ

the

Stairs, John Fitz-William, M.P., Halifax, the worthy gentleman who is the subject of this sketch, was born at Halifax, the city which he now represents in the Dominion Parliament, on the 19th of January, 1848. He is the eldest son of the Honourable William James Stairs, who has been a member of the Legislative Council of Nova Scotia, and is one of the leading merchants in that province. Mr. Stairs received his first intellectual instruction at private schools, and he afterwards attended the Halifax Grammar School, and later still took a course in Dalhousie College. Mr. Stairs was not very long before he began to display those excellent business qualities which now are manifest to all his fellow citizens, and it soon became clear that he was not content to remain with his business all the time while public affairs called for men of sound understanding. He watched all the leading public questions, heard this side and heard that, but quietly came to his own conclusions. This has been his manner ever since. He never allows himself to be pushed into extravagances, or to get excited when coolness and deliberation are the qualities then most in need. In November, 1879, he was elected to the Legislative Assembly of Nova Scotia, and in December of the same year he entered the Executive Council, where he remained till May, 1882. At the general election of this year (1882), he did not offer himself, having become somewhat tired of provincial politics. Mr. Stairs was chosen warden of Dartmouth. on the 1st of May, 1883, and retained the office till the same month of 1885. In 1883 a vacancy occurred in the House of Commons, owing to the retirement of M. H. Richey from the representation of Halifax, to accept the lieutenant-governorship of Nova Scotia. It was clear, without any dispute, that no other person was so well fitted in all respects for the vacant position as our subject, and when it was announced that he was a candidate, no opposition was raised, and he was elected by acclamation. As a member of the House of Commons, Mr. Stairs has revealed the same diligence in the performance of his duty, and the same practical wisdom which had characterized him beforehand. the most loyal and faithful of members to his constituents; and there is, probably, no other private member in the House of Commons who has so large a personal correspondence, and who attends to it with such promptitude. Mr. Stairs is connected with some very important public enterprises, and is a director of the Dartmouth and Halifax

Steamboat Co.; of the Nova Scotia Sugar Refining Co.; of the Nova Scotia Steel Works, at New Glasgow; and he is also a member of the firm of Wm. Stairs, Son & Morrow, shipping and general merchants. Mr. Stairs is, and has always been, a Presbyterian. On April 27th, 1870, he married Charlotte J., daughter of Judge Fogo, of Pictou. The fruit of his marriage is five children.

Eddy, Ezra Butler, Hull, Province of Quebec.-This gentleman, to whom the inhabitants of Ottawa and neighbourhood owe so much for his business enterprise, was born on the 22nd of August, 1827, on a farm near Bristol village, in the State of Vermont, U.S. He is a son of Samuel Eddy, a gentleman of Scottish descent, and his mother was Clarissa Eastman, a direct descendant of the famous Miles Standish, and his grandmother was also a Standish. Mr. Eddy was married, on the 29th December, 1846, to Zaida Diana Arnold, who was born on the 26th June, 1828, in Bristol, Vermont, U.S., and is a daughter of Uriah Fields Arnold, son of John Arnold, of Frankfort-on-the-Main, Germany. Our subject was brought up on the farm until he was about ten years of age, and during part of this time he attended the district school. His father then moved from the farm into the village of Bristol, and began hotel-keeping, and young Eddy became his assistant. While here he again had the privilege of attending school for four winters. Not caring for his mode of life, and having a strong inclination for general business, at the age of fifteen, Ezra left home and went to New York city, and here he procured a situation in a mercantile house at three dollars a week, and on this sum had to board himself. He was, however, promoted in three months, and received ten dollars per week, and he was soon entrusted with the banking business of the firm. After a year, not enjoying city life, he returned home to Vermont, and commenced business for himself, by purchasing butter, cheese, etc., and taking the same to the Boston and New York markets. In 1851 he engaged in the manufacture of friction matches. at Burlington, Vermont, and continued here until 1854. This year he went to Ottawa (then Bytown), in search of a location in which to establish business, and he then decided upon Hull, opposite Ottawa city, and moved there in the fall of 1854. He at once began the manufacture of matches, and the present magnificent business had then its first start. In 1856 he added the manufacture of wooden ware, such as pails, tubs, washboards, clothes-pins, etc., to his business. In 1858 he commenced lumbering in a small way; but all these branches increased in volume from year to year, up to 1868, when the business had reached a magnitude of one million dollars per annum; and at the present time the yearly out-put is upwards of $1,500,000. In 1882 his entire premises were consumed by fire. and this entailed upon him a loss of $250,000. over and above insurance. With characteristic enterprise and courage, in the space of twelve months new premises were erected. and he was able to turn out nearly the same quantity of goods, as during former years, With respect to his religious connections, Mr. Eddy was brought up a Baptist, and still continues in that faith. His wife is a Metho. In 1871 he was elected to the Quebec Legislature, and sat for four years. the establishment of the Ottawa Ladies' Col. lege, he was made president, and held that position for some years; and he was also mayor of Hull for several years. Mr. Eddy joined the Corinthian Lodge, A. F. & A. M. Ottawa, in 1860, and the Royal Arch Chap. ter in 1873. The Eddy Lodge, A. F. & A. M., in Hull, was named after our subject, and he was its first master. When it was instituted it had only a membership of nine persons, but at present it boasts of seventy members. Mr. Eddy has occupied the position of district deputy grand master, and is now a past district deputy grand master of the Masonic order. When he went to Hull in 1854, there was only a population of about 125 persons in the village; but after he had established his works there, it began to grow very rapidly, and now numbers about 9,000. His works alone give employment to something over 3,000 persons. Between 1847 and 1854 he had three children born to him, two boys and one girl. Both boys died when very young, but the daughter is still living. Altogether, in summing up the career of this enterprising, far-seeing and honourable business man, there is not to be found anywhere in our young country, one who better deserves the appellation of a goahead Canadian.

King, John, Berlin, Ontario, a well-known member of the legal profession, resides at Berlin, in the County of Waterloo. Although of Scotch parentage, and of Highland Scotch descent, Mr. King is a native of Canada, and was born in Toronto, September 15th, 1843. His father came of an English military family, several of whose members saw a good deal of active service with the British army abroad. One of these. marrie Aberd sidera 800N Fraser deensh King, inherit cated Woolw army. Horse tember a subal ment of Grosse the qua wards o Quebec. along t lowed t mand a services Colonel of the afterwar tion of o he contr Quebec. of age, a him. and of ad ary abilit on gunna married, daughter ronto, an present re A daught subject of marriage. living, wa of Highla her father of Lorne, mother a clan of the Argyleshir large fami a time in and afterw he was eng A materna time to the Syracuse, York, H principally

Northern a

were killed

these, Mr. King's paternal grandfather, married a Scotch lassie in the Highlands of Aberdeenshire, who was possessed of considerable property in her own right, and soon afterwards retired comfortably near Frasersburg, in the parish of Tyrie, Aberdeenshire, where our subject's father, John King, was born. He was an only son, who, inheriting a love of military life, was educated at the Royal Military Academy at Woolwich, with a view to his entering the army. He subsequently joined the Royal Horse Artillery at Aberdeen, and in September, 1834, was despatched to Canada, in a subaltern capacity, in charge of a detachment of his battery. He was for a time at Grosse Isle, below Quebec, in command of the quarantine station there, and was afterwards quartered at Kingston, Prescott, and Quebec. During the fillibustering troubles along the St. Lawrence frontier, which followed the rebellion of 1837, he was in command at Fort Wellington, Prescott, his services there being highly commended by Colonel Williams, R.A., the commandant of the Johnstown district. A few years afterwards, while superintending the erection of defensive works at this same place, he contracted an illness of which he died at Quebec. He was then scarcely thirty years of age, and had a promising career before him. He was a man of soldierly qualities, and of acknowleged professional and literary abilities, and was the author of a work on gunnery and military engineering. He married, on April 22nd, 1841, Christina, daughter of Alexander Macdougall, of Toronto, and sister of D. Macdougall, the present registrar of the County of Waterloo. A daughter who died in infancy, and the subject of this notice, were the issue of this marriage. Mr. King's mother, who is still living, was born in Glasgow, Scotland, and is of Highland Scotch parentage and descent, her father being of the clan Macdougall of Lorne, of Oban in Argyleshire, and her mother a Macintyre of Glenorchay, of the clan of that name in Inverness and eastern Argyleshire. Her father emigrated with a large family to Canada in 1830, settled for a time in Chateauguay, in Lower Canada, and afterwards removed to Toronto, where he was engaged in a manufacturing business. A maternal uncle emigrated at the same time to the United States, and settled near Syracuse, Oswego county, State of New York. He there reared a large family, principally sons, all of whom served in the Two Northern army during the civil war. were killed fighting under Grant in the bat-

his

ber-

ches

ear,

hed

per

irly

882

ire,

000,

er-

of

ed.

me

rs.

15.

ill

0-

ec

tles around Vicksburg. Mr. King's earliest years were spent in Prescott, Brockville. and Toronto, where his mother resided after her husband's death. He received his early education at the old Toronto Model School, then opposite Upper Canada Coffege, on the present site of Government House, and was subsequently a pupil at the Belleville, Chatham, and Berlin grammar schools. He and his mother resided with his uncle, Mr. Macdougall, who was connected at different times, as editor and publisher, with the newspaper press at these different places. In September, 1857, the family removed to Berlin, where they have since resided. In September, 1859, Mr. King entered the University of Toronto as a matriculant in the Faculty of Arts; commenced his undergraduate career as a resident student in the following year; was admitted to the degree of B.A. in June, 1864, and to the degree of M.A. in June, 1865. He was engaged as a private tutor during the greater part of his University course; was distinguished as a student for his literary and rhetorical attainments; was a first prizeman in University college as English essayist and public speaker, and won the last University prize awarded for the best thesis by candidates for the degree of M.A. He was also elected twice in succession president of the University College Literary and Scientific Society, and afterwards secretary of the University Association. He was one of the original projectors of a University journal and review, his name appearing in the first prospectus issued as chairman of the committee who had charge of the undertaking. The project failed for want of substantial encouragement, but was subsequently revived with success in the publication known as The 'Varsity, to which Mr. King was a frequent contributor in the first years of its existence. He was also a member of the University Rifle Corps (No. 9 Q. O.R.), from its formation, in the Michaelmas vacation of 1861, till he graduated. and subsequently volunteered and served at the front with his old comrades during the Fenian troubles in 1866. Upon taking his degree, he assumed editorial charge of the Berlin Telegraph, to which he had previously been contributing, and conducted it for about a year. In April, 1865, he was admitted at Osgoode Hall as a student-atlaw, and was at the same time articled to James Maclennan, Q.C., in whose office he studied his profession. He passed as attorney and solicitor in Michaelmas term, 1868, and was called to the bar in Michaelmas term, 1869. Upon being admitted as attorney, he opened an office for a few months in Toronto, and was at the same time appointed assistant law-clerk of the Legislative Assembly, and private clerk to the Speaker of the House, the late Hon. John Stevenson. While acting in these capacities, the Hon. J. S. Macdonald, then premier and attorney-general, offered him the law clerkship, vacated by the retirement of Mr. Miles O'Reilly, Q.C. He declined this appointment for the active practice of his profession, which he commenced in December, 1869, at Berlin, and has there since continued. For about three years he also had an office at Galt, in the same county, and was for a time associated there with E. J. Beaumont, in the firm of King & Beaumont. The partnership was dissolved in January, 1885. At Berlin he was solicitor for the Consolidated Bank, and is now solicitor for the Canadian Bank of Commerce, its successor. He is also county solicitor, and, as Crown counsel, conducts criminal business at the assizes in different parts of the province. He is a Liberal in politics, an ex-president of the North Water-loo Reform Association, and, for many years past, has taken a prominent part in electoral contests on the Liberal side. He has nearly all his life been a writer for the newspaper press; wrote for the Canadian Monthly during its existence, and is an old member of the Canadian Press Association. He has always been an active University man, rendering service in many ways to his alma mater, whenever her interests required it, and is a member of the University Senate, having been elected to that body by his fellow-graduates in May, 1880, and re-elected by acclamation in May, 1885. He is also a member of the Royal Arcanum Society. Mr. King married, December 12th, 1872, Isabel Grace, youngest daughter of the late William Lyon Mackenzie, M.P., so distinguished in the early struggles for responsible government in this country. Two sons and two daughters are the issue of this marriage, He is a member of the Presbyterian church, and takes a zealous interest in church matters.

McMillan, Hugh, M.P., J.P., Captain of Militia, Rigaud, Quebec, was born at Rigaud, Province of Quebec, on the 19th December, 1839. He is a son of Lieutenant-Colonel Donald McMillan, who sat in the House of Commons for the County of Vaudreuil from 1867 to 1872. His father was of Scotch descent, and emigrated to this country in 1823, from Aberdeen, Scotland, and settled in the County of Glengarry, with the colony of Highlanders. His mother was M. Julie Charlebois, a lady of French descent. Our subject was educated at the Mong. real college, and pursued a general course and classical studies for the period of eight years. He is described as having been a painstaking student, and when he left college he was equipped with a very thorough and, at the same time; a very practical edu. cation. He took an interest afterwards in military matters, and was promoted to a captaincy. He was a county councillor for fifteen years, and was elected F. P. Commissioner of Small Causes. He has like wise been connected with the Vaudreuil & Prescott Railway Company. He married on the 11th February, 1862, Agnes Mongenais, daughter of J. B. Mongenais, who represented the County of Vaudreuil in the Leg. islative Assembly of Canada, from the year 1848 to 1861, and the same county in the House of Commons, from 1878 to 1882 Mr. McMillan was a merchant, at Rigaud, from 1865 to 1873, having succeeded his father in the business. He then sold out and built a saw mill, which he now works Mr. McMillan has always taken a very active part in the political contests of Vandreuil county, as well as those in the neigh. bouring county of Prescott He refused many times the candidature for both Houses of Parliament, until 1882, when he accepted the nomination for the House of Commons. and was elected. He has always been a sterling friend of his county, and is now an active representative in Parliament. Mr. McMillan in politics is a Conservative, and in religion a Roman catholic.

McGill, Hon. James, the founder of McGill University, in Montreal, was born in Glasgow, Scotland, on the 6th of October. 1744, and at an early age emigrated to Canada, and settled in Montreal. Here he entered into mercantile pursuits, and after having amassed a large fortune, he devoted his time and means to the advancement of his adopted country. He became a member of the Legislative and Executive Councils of Lower Canada. During the war of 1812, he took an active part in military affairs, and so valuable were his services that he rose to the position of brigadiergeneral. Mr. McGill, will, however, be chiefly remembered for his charity, and the warm interest he took in the cause of education. About the end of 1813 he died at the age of sixty-seven, leaving behind him a name of more value and of more enduring quality than marble or brass.

Yale, B on the 1 Isaac Jd rine, ne from ar and his Francis setts pri gentlem ford rec educatio studies of English himself from ear adventui travellin himself prior to the 6th Stillman children, ager of th pany; A Mara, sp British C and Geo. ject had rected hi ony then who was study, pe future in He theref solved to there. H fair succes nard's Ext incorporat Company, province. extensivel breeding, in steambo tract in 1 western d Telegraph trict of Ta prior to co and he was same distri Mr. Barnan tive advoca ber of the the confede the other p politics he though he is that there a

Bar

Barnard, Francis Jones, M. P. for Yale, British Columbia, was born at Quebec, on the 18th February, 1829. His father was Isaac Jones Barnard, and his mother Cathenne, nee Telfer. Our subject is descended from an old Yorkshire, England, family, and his first ancestor in the new world was Francis Barnard, who settled in Massachusetts prior to 1642. At the latter date this gentleman's name first appears on the Hartford records. Our subject received his education in the City of Quebec, and his studies comprised what is known as a solid English education. He did not care to bind himself down to professional routine, but from early years he had a strong spirit of adventure and enterprise, and talked about travelling to seek his fortune. He employed himself in various ways in his native city, prior to taking his departure from it. On the 6th of July, 1853, he married Ellen Stillman, and by this union has had three children, viz., Frank S. Barnard, now manager of the British Columbia Express Company; Alice Telfer, who married John A. Mara, speaker of the local legislature of British Columbia, and member for Yale; and Geo. Henry Barnard. When our subject had reached his thirtieth year, he directed his steps to British Columbia, a colony then little known, but young Barnard, who was given to careful consideration and study, perceived that there was a brilliant future in store for this remote British colony. He therefore rolled up his sleeves and resolved to carve out for himself a fortune there. He first engaged in mining, with fair success, and afterwards established Barnard's Express and Stage Line. In 1878 he incorporated the British Columbia Express Company, which operated through the entire province. Mr. Barnard has been engaged extensively for a considerable time in horsebreeding, and has also a large interest in steamboats. He likewise had the con. tract in 1875 for the construction of the western division of the Canadian Pacific Telegraph Line. He represented the district of Yale in the Legislative Assembly prior to confederation, from 1866 to 1871; and he was elected to the Commons for the same district in 1879, and again in 1882. Mr. Barnard was always a strong and effective advocate of Confederation, and a member of the Yale Convention in 1868, when the confederation of British Columbia with the other provinces was first mooted. In politics he is a Liberal-Conservative, and though he is not bumptious, it is well known that there are few men in the House whose

was

les-

nt-

rse

ght

n a ol-

igh

lu-

in

) a

10

11-

e-

ЭŊ

judgment upon important and critical questions may be more readily accepted with safety. All that he has in repute and in worldly goods, of which he has a large share, he has attained through his own industry, uprightness and perseverance. Mr. Barnard is an attendant of the Presbyterian church, and resides in Victoria, B.C.

Bryce, Rev. Dr. George, M.A., LL.B., LL.D., Winnipeg, was born on the 22nd of April, 1844, at Mount Pleasant, Brant county, Ontario. His parents were George and Catherine Bryce, and his mother's maiden name was Henderson. Mr. Bryce, senior, came from the neighbourhood of Dunblane, Perthshire, Scotland, where the family has been traced back by baptismal records to 1640. In the reign of James I., one Walter Bryce was tried at Dunblane on the charge of wizardry, but was acquitted on the interference of influential friends. Our subject's grandfather carried on a long and extensive lawsuit against the Earl of Moray to protect a feudal right invaded by the earl. Young Bryce was educated at Mount Pleasant Public Schools and Brantford Collegiate Institute. matriculated in Toronto University in 1863 with honours. He took numerous honours, scholarships and prizes during his course, chiefly in science and English. He graduated with a medal in 1867, and entered Knox College, Toronto, in 1868, where he became president of the Literary and Metaphysical Society. From this institution he graduated in 1871, taking five out of the six scholarships open. He was selected by the College professors to be assistant and successor in Chalmers' Church, Quebec, whither he went in 1871. It may be added that he took prizes for English essay writing in Toronto University and Knox College. He entered the volunteer service in 1862, during the excitement of the Trent affair. With a young school mate he organized the Mount Pleasant Infantry, a company of the Brant battalion. He was connected with the University Rifles, Queen's Own, in 1863, and entered the Military School, Toronto, in 1864, whence he took a second class certificate of fitness as to duties of captain. He was at Laprairie camp as a cadet under General (then Colonel) Wolesley in 1865, and was with the University company at Ridgeway, acting as ensign, and made out the roll of the company of present, killed, wounded and missing, after the conflict. He was appointed by the Home Mission Committee of the Presbyterian General Assembly in August, 1871, to leave Quebec

Accesses to the composition of the composition is and proceed to Winnipeg, to found a college among the Selkirk settlers on the Red River, and also to organize a Presbyterian He was ordained in Church in Winnipeg. Toronto on September 19th, 1871, and arrived in Winnipeg, going the last 300 miles over the prairies by stage through Minne-He organized the college, which he called Manitoba college, the same being established at Kildonan, four miles from Winnipeg. He obtained incorporation for the college in 1883, and the following year it was removed to Winnipeg. In 1877 he was one of the chief founders of the Manitoba University, which combines St. Boniface (Roman catholic), St. John's (Episcopal) and Manitoba college (Presbyterian). He has been on the executive of the University since its beginning, and has framed many of its most important statutes. He urged in 1880 the erection of new college buildings, obtained subscriptions, and in 1881 saw begun, to be completed in 1882, the present beautiful building of Manitoba college, valued, with grounds, at $70,000. He was elected in 1877, on the first School Board for Winnipeg under the cities and towns act, and served for three years. He was appointed first inspector of Winnipeg Public Schools in the same year, and was chairman of school management. In 1871 and 1872 he acted as examiner in natural history in Toronto University, and has been an examiner in natural science in Manitoba University since 1878. For several years he was chairman of the Board of Examiners of Public School Teachers in Manitoba. He organized Knox Church, Winnipeg, and was its first moderator, 1872-3. He likewise organized St. Andrew's Church, Winnipeg, in 1881, and has held the first service in many of the new settlements of Manitoba. He has opened, or re-opened, some twenty new churches in Manitoba. He is a trustee of all Presbyterian Indian mission property in the North-West, and in 1884 was appointed by the General Assembly the moderator of the first Presbyterian Synod of Manitoba and the North-West territories. He was one of the incorporators, and from 1874 to 1879 a director of the Winnipeg General Hospital, and for 1877 and 1878 was secretary and treasurer of that institution. In 1881 he was appointed delegué regional of the Institution Ethnographique of Paris. In 1878 he was one of the incorporators of the Historical and Scientific Society of Manitoba, and was from 1878 to 1883 corresponding secretary of this society, and for 1884 and 1885 its president. On being relieved of the heavy duties of mission secretary, Dr. Bryce, in 1881, began to pay more attention to authorship. In 1882 he published in London (Sampson, Low & Searle, publishers) his work, "Manitoba: its Infancy, Growth and Present Condition." octavo, 364pp. This volume has had a wide sale. An English gentleman read it in New Zealand, and coming to Manitoba by way of San Francisco, purchased 100,000 acres of wild land in the province. The work is largely a vindication of the Earl of Selkirk, the founder of the Red River Settlement, The author has had the pleasure of reversing the unfavourable opinion formerly held in Canada of the earl. During a visit to Britain in 1881-82, Dr. Bryce visited the then Earl of Selkirk and Lady Isabella Hope, his sister, and had access to the family papers in preparing his work. The article "Manitoba" in the Encyclopædia Britannica is by Dr. Bryce. During the year 1884 his publications were, "Plea for a Canadian Camden Society" and the "Five Forts of Winnipeg," published by the Royal Society of Canada; "Education in Mani-toba," published in the Canadian memorial volume by the British Association; "Our Indians," by the Y. M. C. A. of Winnipeg; "Coal," by the C. P. R. Literary Association, Winnipeg; and "The Mound Builders," by the Historical Society. Dr. Bryce is now engaged on a work of considerable size and importance on a department of Canadian and North-West history. Our subject has visited England, Ireland, Scot. land, France and Italy, Eastern States, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Quebec, the Rocky Mountains, and has written descriptions of many of his travels. He received early and careful religious instruction in a Christian home. He is now in church matters, while an ardent churchman, an enemy of ecclesiasticism. He married, September 17th, 1872, Marion Samuel, daughter of the late James Samuel, Kirkliston, near Linlithgow, Scotland.

Lacoste, Hon. Alexandre, Q.C., D.C.L., Senator, Montreal, was born at Boucherville, in the Province of Quebec, on the 12th of January, 1842. Alexander Lacoste is descended from an old and distinguished French family, which emigrated from France many years ago, and settled at Boucherville, Province of Quebec. His father, Hon. Louis Lacoste, was a senator of the Dominion, and his mother was Marie Antoinette Thais Proulx. Young Lacoste received his early education at the College of St. Hyacinthe, and he concluded his st On th ried a bensk M. L law, a brillia standi year, Canad his pr a lucra up aro able, a was to 1880 he to the I Quebec 4th of I resigned Senate. subject the sam more in sition, tl made a body let assist wi Lacoste teemed ( was born His fath tised law was Ham prominen career, an ployment his legal t was educa after comp trade of a trade -he Davenport. a spirit of city on th adjudged t ward for la be obtained he set sail f landed at T men had be the West." as a builder lator. He lil in the selling certain tract thereon. H night into bu

Dinn

man, T

his studies at the Laval University, Quebec. On the 8th of May, 1866, M. Lacoste married at Montreal, Dame Marie Louise Glo-Having completed his education, M. Lacoste entered upon the study of the law, and is said to have been assiduous and brilliant, and possessed of a sound understanding. When he reached his twenty-first year, he was called to the bar of Lower Canada, and at once began the practice of his profession in Montreal, and soon found a lucrative and important business grow up around him. He was prompt, he was able, and he was to be trusted: what more was to be needed in a young advocate? In 1880 he was created a Q.C.; and was called to the Legislative Council of the Province of Quebec, for the Mille-Isle division, on the 4th of March, 1882. The following year he resigned, and in 1884 he was called to the Senate. As a legislative councillor our subject was distinguished for solid, and, at the same time, brilliant abilities. It was more in deference to his fitness for the position, than to political exigency that he was made a member of the Senate, in which body let us hope he shall long remain to assist with wise counsels. All his life M. Lacoste has been a sturdy and highly esteemed Conservative.

ssion

paç 2 he

w & oba:

on."

wide

New

y of s of k is

ent.

ers-

eld

to

Dinnick, Charles Richard Sleman. Toronto, the subject of this sketch, was born at Davenport, England, in 1844. His father was James Dinnick, who practised law at Davenport, and his mother was Harriet Dinnick. His father had a prominent standing at the bar in his early career, and he subsequently entered the employment of the government, who utilized his legal talents. The subject of our sketch was educated at the Davenport schools, and after completing his course, he learned the trade of a carpenter. Having mastered this trade he opened business for himself at Davenport. He soon became possessed of a spirit of unrest, and longed to get to some city on the American continent, where he adjudged there was to be found better reward for labour and enterprise than was to be obtained in England. Therefore, in 1871, he set sail from England, and in due season landed at Toronto, which before this date men had begun to call "the Queen City of the West." In Toronto he opened business as a builder, contractor and general speculator. He likewise began to deal extensively in the selling of properties, in buying up certain tracts of land and building houses thereon. He had a quick, far-reaching inlight into business, and he soon saw that his enterprise was being crowned with success. One achievement became the foundation for another one still more important. Dinnick has shown concern for affairs lying beyond the circle of his own business. At present he is a member of the Sanitary Association, an institution badly needed in Toronto. In 1881 he joined the Masonic order, and is a very highly respected member of that body. He is likewise an Oddfellow, having joined this association in 1880. In religion he is a member of the Methodist No political party can lay communion. claim to him, he being an advocate of pure and efficient administration, and takes an intelligent and unbiased interest in public questions. In 1866 he married Eliza Ann Brown, a daughter of Austin Brown, of By this lady he has had five Toronto. Through unfailing integrity and children. persistent industry Mr. Dinnick-although he has sustained in the vicissitudes of fortune some heavy losses-has now secured a handsome competence, and holds one of the first places among the builders and contractors of Toronto.

Beaty, James, jr., Q.C., D.C.L., M.P.— Here is an instance of what can be accomplished by a man of integrity who puts a high aim before him, and unfalteringly pursues his way, doing always the right and his best. Mr. Beaty was born at Ashdale Farm, township of Trafalgar, in the County of Halton, on the 10th of November, 1831. His father was an estimable gentleman, John Beaty, who emigrated from the County of Cavan, Ireland, and who, on reaching Canada, engaged himself in agriculture, which calling he pursued for half a century at Ashdale Farm. It was at this old homestead that the subject of this sketch was brought up, and from intelligent parents, who by word and precept always set an example of the right, did he receive his early tuition. At first he attended the public school, and subsequently entered the grammar school at Palermo, in Trafalgar. Leaving the Palermo school in 1849, he was sent to Toronto, where he received private tuition for a period, and at the following Trinity term he was entered as a student of law in the office of Adam (now Chief Justice) Wilson and Dr. Larratt W. Smith. While pursuing his studies he evinced much grasp, and a faculty for mastering readily the principles and details of the law. In 1855 he was called to the bar, and in the following year entered into partnership with Mr. Wilson and Mr. C. S. Patterson. The personnel of the firm was subsequently changed by

Messrs. Wilson and Patterson being called to the bench. Mr. Beaty's was always one of the clearest heads at the bar, and in 1872 he was created a Queen's counsel by the Dominion government, subsequently obtaining the same distinction from the government of Ontario. In 1872 he received his degree of B.C.L. from Trinity College; and in 1875 the degree of D.C.L. was conferred upon him. He began the career of politics, in which he was afterwards to distinguish himself, by being elected alderman for St. James' Ward, Toronto. While sitting as alderman he introduced the "Beaty Bylaw," a plan changing entirely the system of civic affairs. Two years later he was elected mayor; and was the following year re-elected, defeating his opponent ex mayor Morrison by over 900 votes. Mr. Beaty's professional career has been a peculiarly successful one, and he has conducted a large number of cases with marked skill and force from the Court of Appeal down. In politics he is now, as he has been through a consistent career, a Liberal-Conservative; but he frequently, many years ago, resisted the pressure of friends who were desirous that he should offer himself for a field giving wider opportunity for his usefulness. In 1880, however, his advisers prevailed, and he presented himself for the representation of West Toronto in the Dominion Parliament, and was successful, defeating his opponent by, His course in para handsome majority. liament fully justified expectations, and the large number of prominent acts of legislation which, through him, have become law, bear testimony to his industry and appreciation of the public needs. At the general election of 1882 Mr. Beaty was once more successful, defeating his opponent by a decisive majority. In religion Mr. Beaty, though brought up a member of the Anglican communion, now belongs to no denomination, simply accepting the Bible with the message it announces. He has written frequently for the secular and religious press, and for legal and literary He has the faculty of conperiodicals. vincing by the clearness of his reason, and by an unaggressive forcibleness in presenting his views. He is a clear, terse and forcible speaker, but does not obtrude his addresses upon parliament, unless the occasion is a sufficient one. Mr. Beaty married on the 10th of November, 1858, his cousin Fanny Beaty, by whom he has one daughter living. Pelletier, Hon. Charles Alphonse

Pelletier, Hon. Charles Alphonse Pantaleon, C.M.G., B.C.L., Q.C., P.C., Schator, Quebec, the distinguished subject

of this biographical sketch, was born at Riviere Ouelle, in the Province of Quebec. on the 22nd January, 1837. His father, a very worthy gentleman, was J. M. Pelletier. a merchant and farmer of high standing and good success; and his mother was Julie, her maiden name being Painchaud. This lady was a sister of the late Rev. C. F. Painchaud, founder of the College of St. When our subject was old enough. Anne. he was sent to St. Anne's College, and passed through the grades of that institu-Thereafter he entered Laval Univer. sity, and in graduating obtained the degree of B.C.L. This was on the 15th September. In 1861 M. Pelletier married Su. sanna, a daughter of the late Hon. Charles E. Casgrain, M. L. C., but this lady died in 1862. He married again Virginie A., second daughter of the late Hon. M. P. De Sales La Terriere, M.D. This gentleman had sat in the parliament of Lower Canada, and subsequently in that of United Canada. M. Pelletier devoted himself faithfully to the study of the law, and in 1860 was duly called to the bar, and began the practice of his profession. He soon began to distin. guish himself as an advocate, both because of his brilliancy and of his great knowledge of the law. In after years (1879) his legal qualifications were formally acknowledged by his investiture with the silken gown of Queen's counsel. He has always held the highest possible place among his confreres of the French bar, of which he has been He occupies now the highly creditable position of joint city attorney of the city of Quebec, with L. G. Baillairgé, Q.C., a most worthy gentleman in all respects, very favourably known in Quebec. In everything national and calculated to promote the interests of nationality or the material welfare of his province, M. Pelletier has been prominent, and has been thrice elected president of the Society de St. Jean Baptiste, Quebec. In military matters this enterprising and highly public spirited man has been likewise prominent. He was for several years major of the 9th Battalion, known as the Voltigeurs de Quebec. During the Fenian raid of 1866, he was in command of this battalion, and in the same year he retired, but retained his rank. Before the completion of confederation, when public men looked to larger achievement in political life, M. Pelletier offered himself for the representation of Kamouraska. A special return was made, and this constituency was disfranchised for some months; but in 1869 our subject his p as a of po and r seate taine and . He v of 18 He w ion po vince atrent Queb stitue year h bill h which same t bly an Pelleti in the he was investe The H that tir always tleman tain for In the c admittee one. - H orous a In the f defeated letier, w office. importan of the Ca Universa iuent se created a Michael October. the Senat is hardly guished

Liberal, a liberalism

in the D .

Graset

erick Le M

1851, in T

James Gra

b rn at Gil 8ett's) gra

M.D., dep

and was sta

achi

seat

achieved his aim by winning the Commons rn at seat for Kamouraska. At once, on taking iebec. his place in the house, he was marked out her, a as a man much above the ordinary standard letier. of politicians. He soon revealed learning, nding and much thought, and brilliancy, and deep-Julie, seated conviction, and very promptly ob-This tained a hold upon the respect of the house, and he has never relinquished that hold. He was re-elected at-the general elections of 1872; and chosen by acclamation in 1874. He was not alone concerned now in dominion politics, but the affairs of his own province in the local legislature engrossed his attention. In 1873 he was elected to the Quebec Legislative Assembly, for the constituency of Quebec East; but the following year he was obliged to resign his seat, for a bill had passed the Dominion legislature which declared that no person could at the same time hold seats in a provincial assembly and in the Dominion parliament. Pelletier continued as a favourite member in the House of Commons till 1877, when he was invited to the Privy Council, and invested with the portfolio of Agriculture. The Hon. Alexander Mackenzie was at that time premier of Canada; and it must always remain to the credit of that gentleman that he invariably sought to obtain for high office both integrity and ability. In the case of M. Pelletier it was universally admitted that his choice had been a happy one. He was a careful, conscientious, vigorous and capable departmental head. In the following year Mr. Mackenzie was defeated at the polis, and the Hon. M. Pelletier, with the rest, resigned the seals of office. Always taking a deep interest in important public matters, he was president of the Canadian Commission for the Paris Universal Exhibition of 1878 For his emment services on that occasion, he was created a Companion of the Order of St. Michael and St. George, on the 29th of October, 1878. In 1877 he was called to the Senate, which body he now adorns. is hardly necessary to say that our distinguished subject is in politics a staunch Liberal, and his services in the cause of liberalism in his own province, as well as in the Dominion, are well known.

C. F;

of St.

ough,

, and

stitu-

iver-

egree

nber.

Su-

arles

died

A., . De

man

ıada,

ıada.

y to

duly

ce of

stin-

ause

edge

egal

lged

n of

the

eres

een

dıt-

the

.C., cts,

מנ

-010

the

Pel-

een

de

ary

1þ-

ni-

nd

er

er

Grasett, Dr. F. Le Maitre.—Frederick Le Maitre Grasett was born 1st April, 1851, in Toronto. His father, Rev. Henry James Grasett, late Dean of Toronto, was brn at Gibraltar, in 1808. His (Dr. Gra-Bett's) grandfather was Henry Grasett, M.D., deputy inspector of Army Hospitals, and was stationed at Gibraltar when Dean

Grasett was born. Henry was present at the Trinidad disturbances, in 1797, and he was in Malta in 1800. From 1809 to 1813 he served under Wellington, during the Peninsular war. In 1813 he was sent to Canada as surgeon-in-chief, serving during the American war, and at its conclusion, his son, the dean, was sent to England and received his early education at Southsea, and later at the Royal Grammar School, Quebec. He afterwards graduated at St. John's, Cambridge, England, taking the degree of B.A. in 1834, and of M.A. in 1842, and B.D. in 1853. In 1834 he returned again to Quebec, and was ordained by the late Bishop Stewart, and remained till 1853. chaplain to the bishop till his death in 1837. He was and in this year succeeded Dr. Strachan as rector of Toronto. He was created dean in 1867. He was president of the Upper Canada Religious Tract Society, and of the Bible Society. He held several positions in connection with the High and Public Schools from 1846 to 1875. He was a member of the late Conneil of Public Instruction, being the third and last chairman, which position he held for thirteen years. He was four years member of the Board of High School The subject of our sketch was educated first at a private school, then at Hellmuth College, under A. Sweatman, the present Bishop of Toronto. From his earliest years he evinced predilections for the study of medicine, and always declared that he desired to be a doctor. He studied one year at the Toronto Medical College, and afterwards at the Edinburgh University in Scotland; at London, England, and at Dub-Altogether, he was about seven years at Edinburgh, during which time he was House Physician and House Surgeon of the Edinburgh Infirmary, and took his degree of M.B.C.M. at Edinburgh University. He is a member of the Royal College of Surgeons, England, and a Fellow of the Royal College of Edinburgh, which latter, it need hardly be said, is a very distinguished office to hold, only one other in Canada is the recipient of a similar distinct tion. In religion Dr. Grasett is a member of the Church of England, and in politics a Conservative, but takes no active parin public affairs, being a quiet gentleman who finds his time fully occupied with professional, social and domestic duties. married in 1883 Jane Scuart Todd, daughter of A. T. Todd, of Toronto. He has practised in Toronto since 1882, and has built np an extensive and lucrative busines. Dr. Grasett is, by common consent, one of the most notable physicians that the Queen city boasts, and in social life he has many friends.

Huntington, Hon. Lucius Seth, comes of Puritan stock, and was born at Compton, in the County of Stanstead, Quebec, on the 26th of May, 1827. He was educated at the common schools, studied law at Sherbrooke, and afterwards taught in a township high school for a period. was called to the bar of Lower Canada in 1853, and in 1856 became proprietor of the Waterloo Advertiser. In 1861 he was elected to the House of Commons for the County "From the outset of his parof Shefford. liamentary career," says a writer, "he developed remarkable aptitude for parliamentary life, more especially as a speaker. had a never-failing command of vigorous language, and made himself conspicuous for his scathing criticism of measures whereof he disapproved. His energy and good judgment also made him useful as a member of committees. It has been said that Mr. Huntington's views were of an advanced character, to which it may be added that on some subjects they were altogether 'in advance' of most of his colleagues. was an avowed advocate of Canadian Independence, and, both in his speeches and in his writings, urged his views upon the public with frequency, as well as with considerable power of oratory. In these views he found few sympathisers among the members of parliament, and some of his opponents were wont to taunt him with being an annexationist in disguise. His almost isolated position in this respect interfered, to some extent, with his usefulness to his party, but he never made any attempt to conceal or dissemble his views, and had the full courage of his opinions. After the accomplishment of confederation he yielded his allegiance to the new order of things. He arrayed himself on the side of the Opposition, and was from first to last one of the most uncompromising opponents of Sir John Macdonald's government. His opposition was fraught with momentous results to the government and to the country at large." It may be said, before passing on to the more remarkable circumstances in his public career, that, in 1863, he became Solicitor-General East in the John Sandfield-Macdonald administration. During the session of 1873 remarks of a vague kind surcharged the air about Ottawa. It was generally concerning the late elections that the rumours were about, concerning large sums of money used in some way, and obtained from a mysterious quarter. Everybody expected a startling disclosure; no one save a few of the ministers knew what the disclosure was to be In painful anxiety the House sat from day to day till the 2nd of April arrived, when Mr. Huntington, with much agitation in his face, arose and began to read a resolution. It set out with the usual form of such resolutions, but its burthen was that an understanding, previous to the last election, had been come to between the Government and Sir Hugh Allan and Mr. Abbott, M.P. that Sir Hugh Allan and his friends should advance a large sum of money for the purpose of aiding the election of ministers and their supporters at the ensuing general election, and that he and his friends, in consideration of such monetary aid, should receive the contract for the construction of the Pacific Railway. The announcement came upon the House like the explosion of a bombshell flung upon the floor. Sir John Macdonald sat there as inscrutable as a stone, made no sign, and uttered no word. The resolution was treated as a want-of-confidence motion, and, before explanation or discussion came, it was voted down by a majority of thirty-one votes. Later on followed Sir John's motion for a committee of enquiry. A storm raged in the House for many days, and it ended in the downfall of the ministry. In the Liberal Cabinet which came into power, with the Hon. Alexander Mackenzie at its head, Mr. Huntington became president of the council. In 1865 he succeeded the Hon. Telesphore Fournier as postmaster-general. In 1878 he resigned with his colleagues. Mr. Huntington has been twice married, first to Miriam Jane, daughter of Major David Wood, of Shefford and second to Mrs. Marsh, widow of the late Charles Marsh, C.E. During the sum. mer of 1884 Mr. Huntington appeared in a new rôle, in that of author, bringing out simultaneously in New York and Toronto his political novel, "Professor Conant." This volume has received handsome treatment from the press, and a warm reception from the public.

Kennedy, John, Toronto, the subject of this sketch, was born in the township of King, County of York, Ont., on the 1st of November, 1852. His father was Martin Kennedy, who came from Tipperary, Ireland, and his mother's name was Mary Nevin. John Kennedy received the rudiments of a sound English education in the common schools, and after completing his studies, took a fancy for a trade. He set to work to master carpentering, and

the R
ded to M
partn
gentle and j active
mills, senior
Kenna

is a 1

face.

ро

re

CO

gei

COL

ex

and

equ

offe

SUC

he .

coll

mer

spac

opei

west

for

squa

ful

rega

him :

is a l

and i

Mayor born in 26th, I born a time the bush. the mi and occ was a new as ye Guelph on the he reti Mennor Bingem sylvania years of continued in this trade for about seven years. Having reached his twenty-second year, it occurred to him that in this age there is much the higher prize to be won by the possession of a thorough education; so he repaired to London, and there entered the commercial college, applying himself diligently to the study of all the branches contained in its curriculum. As might be expected, his career there was a clever one, and he left the institution, feeling himself equipped for any occupation that might offer. He was satisfied there was much success to be won in the occupation which he had chosen at the first; so, on leaving college, he again resumed his late employment, and continued in the same for the space of about a year. He now established himself in the planing business, setting in operation a planing mill, on Queen street west, in the City of Toronto. Continuing for three years he removed to McDonald square, where he still continues a successful business, having the confidence and regard of all with whom his business brings him into contact. In politics Mr. Kennedy is a Reformer, and he favours a prudent administration of affairs without parsimony, and in religion he is a respected member of the Roman catholic church. It may be added that at the time of our subject's removal to McDonald square he took with him into partnership his brother, Daniel Kennedy, a gentleman of marked business enterprise and push, and the possessor of a clear, active intellect. Daniel has control of the mills, while general supervision falls to the senior partner of the business. Daniel Kennedy, like his brother, is practically conversant with his trade. John Kennedy is a man whose energies are written in his

tartling

e min-

s to be day to

en Mr.

in his

lution.

resoln-

under-

n, had

ent and

M.P.,

should

ie pur-

rs and

al elec-

n con-

ıld re-

of the

came

bomb-

Mac-

stone.

The

f-con-

ion or

by a n fol-

tee of

se for fall of

which

ander

n be-

65 he

ier as

igned

has

Jane,

ford.

the sum-

in a

out

onto

nt."

reat-

tion

ject

p of t of

rtin

Нě

Snider, William, Waterloo, Ontario, Mayor of the town of Waterloo, Ont., was born in the village of Waterloo, on October 26th, 1845. His father, Elias Snider, was born at Waterloo, in Sept., 1815, at which time the town site was merely a house in the bush. After attaining manhood, he learned the milling trade, in the mill now owned and occupied by Wm. Snider & Co. He was a member of the council, while the place was yet a district, and the council met at Guelph. He took an active part in politics on the Reform side, but in these late years he retired, and is now a minister of the Mennonite church. His mother, Hannah Bingeman, was born in Bucks county, Pennsylvania, in August, 1815. When ten years of age her parents moved to Canada. and settled on what is known as the old Bingeman farm, about one mile east of Bridgeport. Young Snider, himself, was educated at the common schools, this being the only facility of education within his reach. He was elected member of the village council in 1872, which position he held for six years. In 1878 he was elected reeve of the town, and this office he retained for three years. In 1881 he was unanimously elected warden of the county; and after this date he retired from municipal honours until the present year, when he was elected mayor of the town. Mr. Snider was president of the Waterloo County Millers' Association for a number of years, and he is now vice-president of the Waterloo County Millers' Mutual Fire Insurance Co., head office, Hamilton. This office he has held for the last six years; and he is now a director of the Waterloo Mutual Fire Insurance Company. Mr. Snider has always taken an active part in all the leading matters in his native town, particularly in the building of the market house, in obtaining incorporation, and in bringing the branch of the Grand Trunk R.R. to Waterloo. These are, however, only a few instances of his zeal. Our subject has travelled through Canada from Winnipeg to Halifax, and has visited a great many parts of the United States, including the large cities. He married at Rochester, N.Y., on June 11th, 1867, Lydia Ann Bowman, daughter of Mr. Bowman, of Bloomingdale, Ontario. When Mr. Snider was nine years of age his father sold his mill property and farm in the then village of Waterloo, and moved to the farm upon which he now lives, about one mile north of Waterloo. Young Snider remained on the farm until he was nineteen years of age, and then entered the mill to learn the milling trade. In 1870 his father gave him an interest in the business. At that time the firm was making a high grade of flour, known as the "Haxall manufactured by stones, first grinding very high, and then cleaning the farina or coarse middling. This flour was sold in Boston as high as $17 per barrel during the American war, and no other flour manufactured in America was equal to it. In 1876 the company put in the first set of rolls, which are now so generally in use. In 1879 our subject, with A. Kraft, his present partner, bought the mill property from Mr. Snider, senior, but before running the mill, made improvements, putting in a new boiler and engine and a number of rollers and other machinery to the extent of about $10,000 worth. They also put up the first brick chimney in the town of Waterloo. In 1881 they built the Central Block, now owned and occupied by Mr. Theo. Bellinger. In 1880 they built an addition to the old mill 46 × 46, five stories high, using part of the structure as an elevator, and in the other part they put a full line of rolls and other machinery necessary to make a complete mill, increasing the daily capacity from 150 to 300 barrels. They likewise extended the track from the Grand Trunk station to the mill, and put in a 40 ton track scale. During the present year they put up another addition, 40×50 , two stories, for storing flour. Mr. Snider also has an interest in the saw mill property at Rosseau Falls, Muskoka, and a few years ago invested in some real estate timber land in the northern part of Michigan, on the shore of Little Traverse Bay.

Draper, Hon. William Henry, one of the foremost politicians of his time, and so long an ornament to the bench as Chief Justice of Upper Canada, was born on the 11th of March, 1801, in his father's rectory, in one of the Surrey suburbs of London, England. His father was a clergyman of the Church of England, and was rector of St. Anthony's, in Watling street, London. When only a little lad, William Henry, his head full of romance, and a spirit of adventure, ran away to sea. He was afterwards a cadet on board of an East Indiaman, but in his eighteenth year he gave up the sea, and set out for Canada, where he arrived in 1820. He taught school for a time at Port Hope, and in 1823 began the study of law in the office of Mr. Thomas Ward. A short time after this, through the interest of influential friends, he was appointed deputy reporter of the counties of Northumberland and Durham. He married, about this time, Miss White, a daughter of Captain George White, of the Royal navy. In 1828 he was called to the bar, and shortly afterwards removed to Toronto. The Hon. John Beverley Robinson met Mr. Draper, and was so pleased with his address that he offered him a place in his law office, which was readily accepted. In 1837 he was called to the Legislative Council, and accepted a seat in the Executive without office. In 1838 he became solicitor-general of Upper Canada, which office he held through the stormy period of the rebellion. He had once held a colonel's commission in the County of Durham, and was now appointed colonel of a York battalion. Upon Mr. Hagerman's resignation. he become attorney-general. Mr. Draper was not generally considered as being a member of the family compact. He was brought up a Tory, and nearly everything respectable in a social way that he saw on coming to Canada was also Tory. It was natural for him, therefore, to be a Conservative. He was a brilliant man, with excellent judgment, but it seems to us with a not very far-reaching insight. He seemed, more than once in his career, to be strangely oh. livious to the public movements then going on, which to men of only ordinary perception must have seemed full of significance. But perhaps he belonged to that class of which it is said, oculos habent et non vident, perhaps he did not want to see the significance that was in those movements. But Mr. Draper never railed against fate. came, and came to remain, he welcomed and recognized. Despite his opposition, the Reformers won responsible government in its full sense. When that boon was granted, we have a recollection of having heard that Mr. Draper was glad in a sort of a way. He was of an entirely different stamp from Hon. John Cartwright, who thought that war would soon swallow our institutions up if the people had the government in their hands Mr. Draper had a most persuasive eloquence, whence he obtained the name of "Sweet William." The summer following Lord Elgin's arrival in Canada, Mr. Draner withdrew from public life, to the great dignity of the judgment seat. He became a Puisne Judge of the Court of Queen's Bench, succeeding Mr. Justice Hagerman. In February, 1856, he became Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas, in the room of Sir James Macaulay. In 1863 he became Chief Justice of Upper Canada, succeeding the Hon. Archibald McLean. This position he held till 1869, when he became president of the Court of Error and Appeal. He died at his home, in Yorkville, after a tedious illness, on the 3rd of November, 1877.

Shaw, George Alexander, Lieutenant-Colonel, Toronto, was born at Kingston, Canada, on June 24th, 1844. This gentleman is a direct lineal descendant of the MacDuff who was created first Earl or Thane of Fife, for services rendered to Malcolm Canmore, King of Scotland, in 1057. In 1163 Shaw, the third son of the fifth Earl of Fife, for gallant conduct in battle, was appointed governor of the castle at Inverness. This appointment remained in the Shaw family for several generations, and it is here that the name Macintosh originated, thus, Mac-an-Toiseach, meaning son of the foremost or chief man. Angus pres 131 one land vitl grea Sha first capi and inva ceive in va amor garri. house Tord hono Her dnrin grand the 69 genera the ta will be father was en the sar only fi out of subject a lieut served Shaw belonge Colonel ada Cd and afte College, dinary military

cumstan

He ente

clerk in

in positi a minin

however

service.

Silver M

elsewher

School in

wards firs

with the

raids, bei

He was se

ing the Lo

ant in the

in May, 1

and held

gus, the sixth chief of the Macintoshs, was present at the battle of Bannockburn in 1314. The family is essentially a military one, and sprung of the royal blood of Scotland. The first connection of the family with this country was when Mr. Shaw's great grandfather, Major-General Æneas Shaw, a U. E. loyalist, served during the first American rebellion. Major Shaw occapied the first house built in York in 1793, and it was destroyed during the American invasion of 1813. For his services he received a free grant of large tracts of land in various parts of the Province of Canada. among them being 500 acres north of the garrison at York. On this he built a log house in 1795, calling it "Oak Hill" (i.e., Tordarroch), and in this house he had the honour of entertaining the Duke of Kent, Her Majesty's father. He died of fatigue during the war of 1813. Our subject's grandfather, Captain Alexander Shaw, of the 69th, formerly the 35th, fought in seven general engagements in Europe, and was at the taking of Alexandria, in 1813. Thus it will be seen that Captain Alexander Shaw's iather was fighting in Canada while the son was engaged in the east doing battle under the same flag. Captain Shaw was one of the only five officers of the regiment who came out of the Alexandrian affair alive. Our subject's father was George Shaw, who was a lieutenant in the Queen's Rangers, and served during 1837-38. The mother of Mr. Shaw was Ellen Hewson, of Dublin, and belonged to an old Irish family. Lieut. Colonel Shaw was educated at Upper Can-ada College and Trinity College school, and afterwards at the University of Trinity College, and at these places acquired an ordinary classical education. He has had military tastes from youth, but owing to circumstances he did not become a regular. He entered the civil service as railway mail clerk in 1867, and continued so, advancing in position, till 1882, when he commenced s mining and lumbering business. He, however, still holds a position in the civil service. He has large interests in Colorado Silver Mountain mining districts, as well as elsewhere. He went through the Military School in 1865, taking second, and afterwards first-class, certificates, and he served with the 10th Royals during the Fenian raids, being in command of H Company. He was selected as one of the captains during the Louis Riel troubles, and was lieutenant in the 4th Sedentary Militia. He became in May, 1871, adjutant-in the 10th Royals, and held this rank for six years; then he

eing a

e was ything

a.wr.on t was serva-

excel-

a not

more

y ob-

going

ption

which

percance

Mr.

What

d and

e Re-

n its

d, we

Mr.

was

Hon.

war

p if

heir

sive

ne of

ving

aper

reat

ame

en's

an.

tice

om

me

ing

ent

But

was promoted junior major, then senior major, then commanding officer (lieut.-colonel), with which rank he retired in October, 1880. He is an Orangeman; a member of St. Andrew's Society; and also belongs to the Sons of Scotland and the Caledonian Society. He also belongs to the Board of Trade, and the Workingmen's National Co-operative Union, and is vice-Consul for Hawaii. Lieut. Colonel Shaw has travelled through the United States and In religion he belongs to the Canada. Church of England; and in politics he is a Liberal-Conservative. He married on August 30th, 1882, Marion Christina Bastedo, daughter of Gilbert Bastedo, crown attorney for the County of Halton. It may not be uninteresting to state that the arms of the Shaws of Tordarrach are: Quarterly first and fourth-or, a lion rampant gules, armed and languid azure; second and third. Argent, a fir tree growing out of a mount in base, all proper; on a chief gules charged with an augmentation of royal standard of Scotland, a canton of the field, thereon a dexter hand couped lesswise, proper, holding a dagger point downwards, gules. Crest: a dexter hand and forearm couped, holding a dagger erect, all proper. Motto: Fide el Fortitudine.

Lindsay, James, was born in the town of Enniskillen, County of Fermanagh, Ireland, Nov. 4th, 1833. His parents were James Lindsay and Catherine, nee Gilmore, who were married in Ireland. They had a family of six children, of which the subject was the youngest. Catherine Gilmore was the daughter of Davidson Gilmore, of the County of Fermanagh, Ireland. James Lindsay was a farmer, and was also the captain of a merchant vessel. Consequently he was commonly known as "Captain Lindsay." In 1840 he left Ireland and came to Canada, settling in the county of Peel as a farmer. He died in the same year. James Lindsay, jr., attended the common schools till he was eighteen, and then went into a stave and shingle factory. He remained in this business for two years. He then went to the States, returning again to Canada in 1859. He settled in the county of Peel, and remained there until 1869, when he moved to the town of Milton, in the county of Halton, where he rented the saw mill and stave factory and cooperage from George B. Abrey. After three years he bought the whole manufactory from Mr. Abrey, and has remained in this business ever since, doing one of the most extensive trades in the County of Halton. He belonged to the Peel Rifles, and was a non-commissioned officer. In 1879 he was elected to the town council of Milton, and re-elected in 1883. He subsequently had the opportunity of again entering the council, but refused. Mr. Lindsay, it may be said, devotes his ability, time and enterprise entirely to his own mills. He belongs to the Orange society, and he has been deputy-master for several years. He has travelled through all Canada, and most of the United States. He is an Episcopalian in religion, and in politics a staunch Conservative. He was married in 1855 to Miss Pirsis Jane Church, daughter of the late Oranage Church, of the County of Peel, and one of the most prominent persons in the county. Mr. Lindsay has had a family of eleven children, all of which are living.

Allen, Thomas, Alderman, Toronto, was born in the County of Armagh, Ireland, on May 31st, 1831, and was a son of William Allen, a worthy and highly respectable farmer, who from his fine and imposing stature was known to his neighbours and the country folk around by the sobriquet of "Big William Allen." Thomas Allen was sent to the Irish National schools, and his studies comprehended the ordinary branches of reading, writing and arithmetic. The knowledge received at these schools, however, in the case of the ambitious young Allen, was only a foundation upon which to rear a structure of practical experience. As soon as the lad had completed his studies he went to work upon his father's farm, and strove there faithfully till he was nineteen years old. Then came the failure of the potato crop in Ireland, with its attendant famine and horror. With the thousands who fled from the stricken land was young Allen, and he turned his face westward, and sailed for Canada in 1850, but was not long out from land when there came violent weather and the ship was tossed about for fourteen days. Then she returned into the Cove of Cork, and our subject, glad of the rescue from almost total shipwreck, retired to his home, where he remained for nearly a year. The following year he set out again, and arriving in Toronto, went to his cousin, Samuel Platt, who kept a brewery where the gas works now stand. In this establishment he learned the brewing and malting business, and at such occupation has he, in the main, been engaged from that day to this. Here he took engagements as brewer and foreman. He was likewise for a time in the establishment of W. Copeland. In 1868 he joined in partnership with Hugh Thomp- office in Toronto, where he soon established son and leased the East End Brewery. In. 1875 he purchased his partner's interest in the business, and continued the establishment alone. He has not accumulated a very large fortune, but Mr. Allen now retired from the business with a very considerable income. He belonged to the volunteers over a quarter of a century ago, and again volunteered in 1866 when the Fenians were crossing over to Ridgeway. He went to Thorold as sergeant of No. 10 Com. pany, Tenth Royals, but the company's services were not required. Shortly after wards he retired from the regiment. Mr. Allen is now serving his sixth year as alderman, and is popular and respected, not for much speaking, but for honest, straightforward and well-judged conduct. Mr. Allen has grown up with the city, and thoroughly understands its needs. He belongs to the Orange and Freemason societies. and to the Irish Protestant Benevolent Association. In politics Mr. Allen has always been a consistent Conservative. He has been twice married, first to Miss Margaret Brown, whose family belonged to the county of Grey. They were married in 1857, and she died in 1873. He married again in 1877 his present wife, who was a daughter of the late Edward Beckett, the well-known ironfounder and temperance advocate. Our subject has had twelve children, and ten are living, and two are dead. Mr. Allen though well advanced in years, devotes his whole time to the interest of the people, and is a staunch supporter of the Episcopal

Crooks, Hon. Adam, LLB., late Minister of Education for the Province of Ontario, was the son of Honourable James Crooks, a gentleman who took a prominent and creditable part in public affairs. Adam Crooks was born at "The Homestead," in the township of West Flamboro', Wentworth, on the 11th of December, 1827. The family is of Scottish descent, and settled in Canada in 1794. Young Crooks attended the public schools in his own neighbourhood, and in his twelfth year he entered Upper Canada College. In his eighteenth year he matriculated at King's College-now the University of Toronto—and stood first in classics. In his second quarter he took the Wellington scholarship, and, when graduating, carried off the gold medal for classics and the first silver medal for metaphysics. He now began the study of law, and was called to the bar of Upper Canada in 1851. He opened an a incrativ were very was painst of M.A. v and in 18 daughter o C.B., of who fough wife died a Crooks red the followi lor of the position he In 1863 he In politics 1867 the R new blood. Mr. Crooks He, therefo Riding of T lature, but later, howe stituency. Crooks was Mowat re-co ber, 1872, I treasurer, a ded, in 1876 In 1875 he v but was soon Oxford. He urership in that office. himself, alwa education. duty was his tion departm sure. His or for what they tizanship. It that, to a larg the scapegoat upon his owr often were not leagues and tl made to pay t every other de is, and Mr. But when his there was not, any one among colleagues who to their own word for him. affected to be a at the state in had fallen. M faults as an adı

the time when

every now and a jucrative practice. His business habits Tere very correct, and in his profession he was painstaking and thorough. The degree of M.A. was conferred upon him in 1852, and in 1856 he married Emily, youngest daughter of the late General Thomas Evans, C.B., of Montreal, a distinguished officer who fought at Lundy's Lane in 1812. His wife died at Toronto in 1868. In 1863 Mr. Crooks received the degree of LL.B., and the following year was elected vice-chancellor of the University of Toronto, which position he held till 1872, when he resigned. In 1863 he was created a Queen's counsel. In politics Mr. Crooks was a Liberal. In 1867 the Reform party was badly in need of new blood, and leading members pressed Mr. Crooks to offer himself for parliament. He, therefore, offered himself for the West Riding of Toronto, for the provincial legislature, but was unsuccessful. Four years later, however, he carried the same constituency. In the Blake administration Mr. Crooks was attorney-general. When Mr. Mowat re-constructed his Cabinet in October, 1872, Mr. Crooks became provincial treasurer, and to this department was added, in 1876, that of minister of education. In 1875 he was defeated for East Toronto, but was soon afterwards elected for South Oxford. He resigned the provincial treasurership in 1877, Hon. S. C. Wood taking that office. Mr. Crooks, a cultured scholar himself, always took the deepest interest in education. A labour of love as well as of duty was his administration in the Education department, but he did not escape censure. His opponents railed at him bitterly for what they called his bigotry and his partizanship. It has always seemed to the writer that, to a large extent, Mr. Crooks was made the scapegoat of his party. He had to bear upon his own shoulders alone sins which often were not his own, but those of his colleagues and the department. Education was made to pay tribute to party expediency, as every other department in the public service is, and Mr. Crooks was held responsible. But when his health and mind gave way, there was not, so far as this writer has seen, any one among his colleagues, among those colleagues who had manipulated education to their own ends, to stand up and say a word for him. Indeed by their silence they affected to be a little scandalized themselves at the state into which educational affairs had fallen. Mr. Crooks had a number of faults as an administrator. He wavered at the time when firmness was required, and every now and again threw the department into the throes of a general change. Out of this grew dissatisfaction over the country; out of it grew the disgusting rivalry between publishers, and the demoralizing scenes of canvassing and bribery among school boards and school trustees which afterwards prevailed throughout the province. But for this, even, Mr. Crooks was only in a measure responsible. He should get credit for all that he did in the cause of education. He was always courteous, and won the good will even of those who differed from his judgment and his methods.

Burgess, Alexander Mackinnon, Ottawa, Deputy Minister of the Interior of Canada, was born on the 21st of October, 1850, at Strathspey, Inverness-shire, Scotland. He is a son of John Burgess, by Ann Davidson, nee Mackinnon. Young Burgess was educated at the parish school of Advie, at the Grammar School of Aberdeen, and at the University of Aberdeen. His first public office was that of editor and chief reporter of the debates of the House of Commons, at the inception of the official reports in 1875, and as editor and chief reporter of the debates of the Senate and House of Commons of Canada in 1876. On the 1st of November, 1876, he was appointed private secretary to the Honourable David Mills, then Minister of the Interior. On the 1st January, 1882, he was appointed secretary of the Department of the Interior, and on the 1st July, 1883, was created deputy Minister of the Interior. Mr. Burgess has visited Manitoba and the North-West territories, on various occasions, in connection with his official duties in the Department of the Interior; and he also visited Washington in the winter of 1885 on official business. On the 7th July, 1873, Mr. Burgess married Maggie Beatrice Anderson, daughter of Thomas Anderson, of Portsoy, Scotland, poet and publisher. Before coming to Canada, Mr. Burgess was a clerk in the employment of the great North of Scotland Railway in 1867. He joined the press of Scotland in 1869, and on his arrival in this country, in 1871, became a member of the reporting staff of the Toronto Globe. He attended the sessions of parliament in that capacity in 1872, 1873 and 1874. He became editor of the Ottawa Times, on the 1st July, 1874, and subsequently purchased that newspaper from McLean, Roger & Company, parliamentary printers, but sold it to Isaac B. Taylor in the summer of 1876. Very soon thereafter, as already stated, he entered the civil service as private secretary to the Hon. David Mills. Much might be added to the table of events in the career of Mr. Burgess; but the editor will content himself with adding the testimony of those well qualified to speak respecing our subject's official qualities. These, we believe, are well known to be painstaking zeal in office, and courtesy, fair dealing, and efficient administration as a rublic servant.

cient administration as a public servant.

Robertson, James Smith, Whitby, the enterprising and successful publisher, printer, etc., whom we have chosen as the subject of this sketch, was born at Toronto, on the 6th of April, 1853. He is a son of the lately deceased and lamented John W. Robertson, and Mary, nee Smith, who is still alive. Young Robertson received a very careful education. He was first sent to a private school, and when he had completed the studies prescribed there, he entered the Victoria street public school. Although he made a very creditable display at his task, and was very fond of his books, yet he suddenly took it into his head to leave school, and seek for employment, which he found in a grocery store, where he remained for six months. But the grocery trade was not to his liking, and we soon find our enterprising lad engaged in the book business with R. S. Thompson. He retained this position for two years, after which he went into the store of A. S. Irving, and remained with him for the next eight years. In July, 1874, he removed to Whitby, Ontario, where he had persuaded himself there was an opening for the book business. Here he commenced in the retail trade, and he had fair success. In 1880 he opened a printing office, and being joined by his brothers, issued a paper called the Saturday Night. This publication was continued for three years, when Mr. Robertson bought out the Whitby Chronicle, merging the two papers into one. He has continued since to be the proprietor and editor of the Chronicle, and it is hardly necessary for the writer of this sketch to inform his readers that the newspaper in its own field, which is not a narrow one, has since held an influential, worthy and profitable position. Mr. Robertson seemed to have set out with the idea that the best way to kill opposition is to bribe it out of existence; so he began by buying out rivals whom he regarded as a menace to his success. This explains why it is that we see the little Saturday Night absorbed by the long established Whitby Chronicle. In 1882 Mr. Robertson decided to try his fortune in the book trade in Toronto, and he purchased the book, periodical and general stationery store known as Wilkinson's, situate on the corner of Toronto and Adelaide streets, and this is now one of the most popular news, book and general stationery depots in Toronto. The excellent business instincts, and the courtesy of the proprietor are revealed through the establishment. Mr. Robertson has had his turn at public life among his other employments. In 1881 he was elected councillor for Whitby, and has been re-elected to that office ever since. He has held the important offices of chairman of the fire and water committee; also of the finance and assessment committees. Mr. Robertson joined Eastern Star Lodge of Oddfellows in 1875, and he also belongs to Charter Lodge of the A.O.U.W. in Whitby, Mr. Robertson is a member of St. Andrew's church board of management, and for some time he held the position of president of the Young Men's Association. He has always taken an active part in temperance work, and he was president of the Blue Ribbon organization, and the secretary to the Scott Act organization during its existence in Whitby. His tastes are strongly inclined toward politics, and he is well known as one of the truest and most solid Liberals in Ontario. In 1879 he married Annie Moore Kerry, and by this union has four children. The Robertson Brothers. lately sold out their book business in Whitby, and now confine themselves there to publishing the Chronicle. They have also retired from the retail book business in Toronto, and have opened handsome and commodious premises for their subscription book department in the Mail building, to which branch the subject of our sketch devotes a large portion of his time. He is genial and cheerful in all his relations, and enjoys respect and much good will.

Mallon, John, Toronto, the subject of this sketch, was born at Middletown, County Armagh, Ireland, on the 22nd of September, 1836. He was the youngest son of James and Margaret Mallon, who emigrated with their family to Canada in 1847, and settled in Toronto. A few weeks after their arrival the father died of a malignant fever, which was raging at the time. Mr. Mallon attended one of the city schools for about three years. After leaving school he was apprenticed as a salesman in the butchering business in the St. Lawrence market. He being of a delicate constitution, and knowing that this was a healthful business, and one which required little capital at that time to begin with, he was induced to enter it. In 1861 he commenced business for himself in stall No. 14 in the St. Lawrence market,

Landry,
Robert, A
of the Milit chre; Knigh
the Great; L

and SU

it neces

whom

mother

formed

in Toro

in-law.

man) in

then car

Mallon

this nat

alderma

Mallon i

who witl

Mr. Mal

separate

of vears

of Toron

and then

office. In justice of treasurer

incorpora

to the Cit

honourar

Bank for

was amalg

Savings C

of that co

nected wi

shipping o

and Glasg

the live-st

extensive!

Mallon is

Roman ca

an intellig

position of

ciation in

in 1862, H

James and

Longford,

living, one paring him

undergrad u

and at the t

school in 18

winning the private life and has the friends. Jd

assists in th

business at S

man.

and succeeded so well, that in 1864 he found it necessary to add No. 16, which he leased from his former employer, Mr. Murphy, whom he had served as apprentice and foreman. In 1865 he found it necessary to add another stall, No. 12, and his premises then formed the best business stand of its kind in Toronto. At this time he took his brotherin-law, Michael J. Woods (now city alderman) into partnership, and the business was then carried on under the firm name of John Mallon & Co., and was continued under this name until Mr. Woods was elected alderman, when he retired, leaving Mr. Mallon the sole proprietor of the business, who with his usual tact still carries it on. Mr. Mallon was a trust-e for one of the separate schools in West York, for a number of years; and he was alderman of the City of Toronto during the years 1873 and 1874. and then retired, declining to run again for office. In 1876 Mr. Mallon was appointed a instice of the peace. He held the office of treasurer of the village of Brockton from its incorporation, in 1880, until its annexation to the City of Toronto, in 1884. He was an honourary director of the Toronto Savings Bank for a number of years, and when it was amalgamated with the Home Loan and Savings Company, he became a stockholder of that company. He has also been connected with several enterprises, such as shipping cured meats to Liverpool, London and Glasgow, and has likewise engaged in the live-stock export trade. He also deals extensively in real estate. In religion Mr. Mallon is a much respected member of the Roman catholic church. In politics he is an intelligent Liberal, and has held the position of chairman of the Reform Association in St. Mark's Ward. He married. in 1862, Ellen E. Woods, a daughter of James and Ellen Woods, of the County of Longford, Ireland. He has eleven children living, one of whom, the eldest, is preparing himself for a profession, and is an undergraduate of the University of Toronto, and at the time of examination at the model school in 1882, he took the highest honours, winning the governor-general's medal. In private life Mr. Mallon is genial and kindly, and has the warm regard of many personal friends. John F. Mallon, his second son, assists in the general management of the business at St. Lawrence market.

laide

most

nerv

ness

etor

ent.

life

l he

has

He

man

the Mr.

of

to:

bv.

۱n-

for

ent

has

hce

st-ellid ed as s,-t-to on d

Landry, Auguste Charles Philippe Robert, A.B., Quebec, Knight Commander of the Military Order of the Holy Sepulchre; Knight of the Order of St. Gregory

of Montmagny and L'Islet; President of the Quebec Conservative Association; Vicepresident of the Union Agricole Nationale of the Province of Quebec; President of the Montmagny Agricultural Society; Secretary of the Montmagny No. 3 Colonization Society; Member of the Entomological Society of Canada; Member of the Bibliographical Society of Paris, etc., was born at Quebec, 15th January, 1846. He is a son of the late Dr. J. E. Landry, by the late Caroline E., nee Lelievre. Dr. Landry was, in his time, the first surgeon of the Province of Quebec, one of the founders of the Laval University, in which he was a professor for nearly thirty years, and at the date of his death (17th June, 1884), proprietor of onehalf of the Quebec Lunatic Asylum. The family is of Acadian extraction, their ancestors having came from Anjou, and settled in Acadia at Beaubassin. They were scattered in 1755 by the British troops, and came to Canada, and settled in Bonaventure county, at Tracadiéche (since Carleton), where Mr. Landry's father and grandfather were born. In 1855 M. Landry entered the Levis College, where he remained for two years under the tutorship of the well-known Frère Her-In 1857 he commenced his menigilde. classical studies at the Quebec Seminary; leaving this institution in July, 1866, after having obtained most successfully his degrees of B.A. He was, in the years 1865-66, named assistant-professor of the course of chemistry at the Laval University, which position he occupied once more in 1866-67. At that time he was asked by the late Dr. Hubert Larue to analyse the different alcoholic beverages of the City of Quebce. On this occasion he published a scientific pamphlet, "Les boissons alcoholiques et leurs falsifications," which contained the result of all his different analyses. In the fall of 1866 he entered St. Anne's Agricultural College, which he left in the winter of 1867, to return to his chemical studies at Laval University. He came back in the spring, but left definitely in the fall of 1867. He became professor of agriculture at the Quebec Normal School, and ex-officio a member of the Agricultural Board of Trade. In the beginning of the spring (1868), he had, in the Quebec newspapers, a very hot contest with Mr. L'Abbe Pilote on agricultural matters. At that time he left for St. Roch des Aulnets, where he spent the whole spring and part of the summer in learning agricultural practice, on the well-known farm of M. J. Bte. Dupuis, ex-deputy of the Great; Lt. Colonel of the 61st Battalion | the County of L'Islet. In this same year

(1868), Dr. Landry purchased from the Quebec archbishop, the valuable property he possessed at St. Pierre Riviere du Sud, in the County of Montmagny, and on the 1st October, 1868, M. Landry took possession of his new home. On the 6th of the same month he was married, and constantly lived at St. Pierre until March, 1881. He then left St. Pierre, and in view of helping his father in the management of the Quebec Lunatic Asylum, took up his residence on Beauport road, at Villa Mastai, formerly the residence of Dr. James Douglas. Mr. Landry has since become the proprietor of that villa, as he also became one of the proprietors of the Quebec Lunatic Asylum, on the death of his father. During his stay at St. Pierre, M. Landry devoted his whole time to farming and politics; and in 1871 he took a prominent part in G. Bossé's election. The following year Hon. M. Beaubien, Commissioner of Crown Lands, was defeated by M. Taschereau in the general elections for the Dominion Parliament. M. Landry fought the battles of the two campaigns, and this brought him into notice; and in November, 1873, when M. Fournier was sworn in a Minister of the Crown, M. Landry was selected by the Conservative party to fight M. Langelier, the Liberal candidate for Montmagny. Landry was defeated by a majority of 189. In 1875 a general election took place, and the same two candidates ran one against the other, but victory crowned M. Landry's persistency, and M. Langelier was defeated by eight votes M. Landry delivered, in the fall of 1875, the answer to the address from the Throne. In 1876 the court of elections, composed of Justices Routhier, Marc-Aurele Plamondon and Wilfrid Dorion, annulled M. Landry's election, and disqualified him, Justice Routhier dissentiente. This has been held since to have been merely a political and partisan judgment. M. Landry appealed to Her Majesty's Privy Council, but was refused; and he then published his defence in a pamphlet, entitled "Ou est la disgrace," in which he pointed out and proved, the partisanship of Justice Plamondon and Dorion, the two Liberals who condemned him. In 1878, at the general elections for the Dominion Parliament, M. Landry was again selected by the Conservative party as its candidate, and succeeded in defeating M. Carbonneau, his opponent, by 38 of a majority. Again in 1882 M. Landry carried his election, beating his opponent, M. Choquette, by 120 votes of a majority. M. Landry was made captain of

No. 2 Company, 61st Battalion, in 1869 and he was called twice to the front in 1870 during the Fenian invasion. He had, the second time, the command of the whole bat-When Lt.-Colonel Beaubien died (1877), leaving the command to Lt. Colonel Colfer, he acted as major; and when Lt. Colonel Colfer retired, he was promoted Lt.-Colonel, and is now in command of the 61st. He was a cadet of the military school. where he took his second class certificate in 1865, and obtained his first-class certificate before a special board in 1884. offered, and accepted in 1875, the command of the Canadian Wimbledon team. In 1873 he was called to the Quebec Agricultural Council, and for an essay on Agriculture, he obtained the first prize, a gold medal. He went to Europe in 1880, accompanying his father, who travelled for the sake of restoring his health, and he visited England France, Italy and Switzerland. He returned to Rome in 1883 to plead before the Papal Court of the Propaganda, the celebrated case, Landry vs. Hamel, and was then created a Knight of the Order of St. Gregory the Great. In 1881 he was a delegate to a mass meeting of the French. Canadians at Burlington, and delivered a patriotic speech of the festival of the 24th He is a Roman catholic, and is opposed to all secret societies, because he says they are forbidden by natural law, and the laws of the church. He delivered on March 4th, 1880, in the House of Commons. a remarkable speech on the relations between Church and State, a speech which brought him the congratulations of all the bishops of the Province of Quebec. He is a Conservative and protectionist. He married on the 6th October, 1868, Wilhelmina, daughter of the late Captain Etienne Couture, and he has had six children, two of whom are living.

Toller, Captain Fred., Ottawa, Comptroller of Dominion Currency, and the subject of this sketch, was born in England on June 21st, 1841. He received his education in England, and as he was approaching mau's estate, set sail for Canada. On the 30th September, 1871, he entered the civil service of the Federal Government, as senior second-class clerk. On the 1st of July, 1873, he was promoted to a first-class. From the 1st of January, 1879, to June 30th, 1881, he was private secretary to Sir Leonard Tilley, Minister of Finance. On the 1st of July, 1881, he was appointed comptroller of Dominion Currency, and that position he holds at the present time.

But N sorbed that b outsid ance i hibited matter of the 0ttawa popula task, b accomp for org comple obedien partmei ledged the 11th ter of Brunsw Nair those S pluck, a country, ing their of cases, was born 22nd of John Na father wa mill own number Flour Mi the river ington F received. School, a Academy cipal Flin boys have things ge ge of six as an assis father die being the ment of t him, and f successfull.

business in

and broth

had alread

Here, how tent himsel landed in T main long i

wood villad

tario, with

of grain puried on in

But Mr. Toller did not become entirely absorbed in the civil service, like so many in that body, who are content to let the great outside world wag so long as pay-day dawns once in the month. He always felt and exhibited a great deal of interest in military matters; and is at the present time captain of the Governor-General's Foot Guards, at Ottawa. To be at once a good officer, and a popular one, is an extremely difficult double task, but it is one that Captain Toller has accomplished most perfectly. His capacity for organization is very marked, and he has complete control of his men, who give him obedience, respect and good-will. As a departmental officer, Captain Toller is acknowledged to be very superior. He married on the 11th of July, 1872, Annie, third daughter of Z. Chipman, of St. Stephen, New

69

870

the

bat-

lied

nel

٠t. -

ted

the

ool,

in

ate

vas

nd

Nairn, Alexander, Toronto, is one of those Scotchmen who are endowed with pluck, and despite the attractions of native country, leave it for the purpose of advancing their fortune, and who, in the majority of cases, succeed. The subject of this sketch was born in the City of Glasgow, on the 22nd of March, 1832; and his parents were John Nairn and Margaret Kirkland. His father was well known in Glasgow as a large mill owner a d grain merchant, and for a number of years carried on the Garroch Flour Mills, near the Three Tree Well, on the river Kelvin; and later on, the Washington Flour Mills, of Glasgow. Alexander received his early education at the Normal School, and afterwards finished it in Flint's Academy, Glasgow; and when he left Principal Flint, he had what nearly all Scotch boys have, a fair and useful knowledge of things generally worth knowing. At the ge of sixteen he entered his father's office, as an assistant in the business. In 1851 his father died, leaving six children, Alexander being the eldest son. The whole management of the business now devolved upon him, and for five years he carried it on very successfully. In 1856, having sold out the business in Glasgow, he joined his mother and brothers in Stirlingshire, where they had already purchased a mill and a farm. Here, however, Mr. Nairn could not content himself, and he left for Canada, and landed in Toronto in 1857. He did not remain long in this city, but removed to Rockwood village, County of Wellington, Ontario, with the object in view of studying and making himself proficient in the system of grain purchasing and milling, then carried on in the county. In 1858 he commenced business for himself in Rockwood, as a general store-keeper, and grain commission merchant, and had the honour of being among the first to ship grain over that section of the Grand Trunk Railway, and this was in a large degree the means of building up Rockwood. In 1865 he purchased the Everton flour and saw mills, and also the farm, and carried them on with his other business, while at the same time he took a very active part in the erection of a Presbyterian church and public school, and was one of its trustees. On his departure in 1874 for Toronto, the inhabitants of the village, as an expression of their gratitude for what he had done for the place, presented he and Mrs. Nairn with a handsome illuminated address, accompanied with a beautiful mantel-piece ornament. in Rockwood, Mr. Nairn became one of the directors of the Toronto Fuel Association; and in 1871, becoming interested in the coal mines of Ohio, he was the first to introduce into Canada the celebrated Streetsville coal. In 1875, Mr. Nairn entered into partnership with his brother Stephen, under the name and style of A. & S. Nairn, wharfingers and coal merchants, and shortly after, the firm built one of the finest docks in the city, and which is known as the Nairn Mr. Nairn, apart from A. & S. Nairn, still carried on several contracts, and supplied, among others, the Grand Trunk and Great Western Railways with wood. giving employment to a large number of men in the State of Michigan, as well as along the Buffalo and Goderich Railway, in making and delivering timber and rail-He was also interested in the way ties. lake trade, and a large shareholder in the Western Transportation Coal Co.; and in 1879 he was elected a director of the Toronto, Grey and Bruce Railway. In 1880 he purchased the flour, saw and woollen mills at Hanover, in the County of Bruce, and this property is still controlled by him. In 1884 the partnership was dissolved, and Mr. Nairn virtually retired from active business. In 1865 he was elected to the Corn Exchange, which is now known as the Board of Trade, and in which he still holds a seat. He is a director of the London and Ontario Investment Co., and is also on the directorate of several other institutions. In religion Mr. Nairn is a Presbyterian, and belongs to St. James' Square Church, and is the chairman of its board of management, In politics he is a Reformer, and takes an active interest in all public questions. He was married, in 1864, to Elizabeth Ann Davis, daughter of the late Frederick Davis, St. Hélier's, Island of Jersey. As will be seen, Mr. Nairn's business career has been a very successful one, and is worthy of imitation by our young men. Now that he is able to take the world easy, we hope he will be long spared to enjoy the abundant fruits of his industry, and help in all the good movements that have for their object the bettering of the world.

Dewe, John, Chief Dominion Inspector of Post Offices, Ottawa, was born at Stockwell, near London, England, on the 5th of July, 1821. His father was Henry Tombs Dewe, a merchant in the City of London, and the eldest son of the Rev. John Dewe, vicar of Breadsall, near Derby. The family, of which there are several interesting records in the Bodlean library, at Oxford, is of Norman origin, the name being formerly spelled D'Eu and D'Ewe. mother's maiden name was Eliza Prior: and she was a daughter of Thomas Prior, of Desford, near Leicester. Our subject was educated at a private school near London, but on the death of his father, obtained, at the age of seventeen, a situation as clerk in the secretary's office of the General Post Office, St. Martin's le-Grand, in which be served for five years. During a portion of this time, he sat at the next desk to that occupied by Anthony Trollope, the novelist. Sir John Tilley, who was some years afterwards secretary to the department, was a clerk in the same office. In July, 1843, he was appointed by the Postmaster-General to a surveyorship in the Canadian Post Office, which at that time was under Imperial control. He served as surveyor for the Central Postal District, with headquarters at Kingston, until shortly after the transfer of the Post Office to Provincial management in the year 1851, when he was appointed P. O. Inspector for the Toronto Postal Division, with headquarters at Toronto. At the time of the Trent affair, in March, 1862, he joined the Civil Service Co. of the Queen's Own. He resigned his commission in this corps in 1863. mained at Toronto until Oct., 1870, when he was appointed Chief P. O. Inspector for the Dominion of Canada, with headquarters at He has travelled in his official capacity through all the provinces of the Dominion. He has also visited, when on leave of absence, France, Belgium and Germany. In religion he has been a member of the Church of England from his youth upwards. Inspector Dewe was married at Perth, Ont., on the 31st of October, 1850, to Clara Alicia, daughter of Colonel Henry Nelles, of Grimsby, Ontario, who served with the Canadian troops in the war of 1812, He is now a widower, his late wife, having died on the 25th of June, 1885. He has no sons. His only daughter is married to L. K. Jones, of the department of Railways and Canals.

Ross, Arthur Wellington, M.P. for Lisgar, Winnipeg, was born on the 25th of March, 1846. in the township of East Williams, Middlesex county. His father, Donald Ross, was born in Tain, and his mother. Margaret Ross, in Glasgow, Scotland. By his birth he secured the traits of character peculiar to both branches of the Scottish Donald Ross was the eldest son of Arthur Ross of the 78th Highlanders, who fought in twenty-five battles, and was wonnded five times. He served under Sir Ralph Abercrombie and the Duke of Wellington, and he lost his eye-sight with the sands of Egypt, but regained it again. He settled in the township of Adelaide, Middlesex co. His grammfather died aged 85; his widow died afterwards, aged 94 years. Our subject was educated in the public schools at Nairn and London; at the Wardsville Grammar School; at Toronto Normal School, and at the University College. From the latter institution he graduated as B.A. In his studies he paid special attention to the En. glish branches as contradistinguished from the classicai. In his early life he worked on the farm, and performed the various kinds of work incident thereto. He always had simple tastes and habits, and was extremely caurious in making any step. He began life by school-teaching at $17 per month, and at this calling he accumulated some money, and speculated in oil lands during the oil excitement in Ontario. He increased his small sum largely, then went to the Toronto University. Eventually he lost the money made by his earlier enterprise, and again began work at school-teaching, becoming head master of the school in Cornwall, where he taught for two years. He afterwards became inspector of schools for the County of Glengarry, under the then new Public School Act, remodeled the whole system of instruction in the county, and gave general satisfaction. In 1872, during holidays, he visited Manitoba, and was obliged to travel by stage from Breckenridge to Winnipeg, a distance of nearly 300 miles; and had a varied experience in travelling by buckboard on the prairies. By this he acquired such a knowledge of the country that he became impressed with its varied resources. In 1874 he again visited M peg. posit a law mill there Winn W. H Manit then b in the ants f and ha joined of the and it Bank, Compa Compar pany, Scotia, ness. Killam returne bly of M quay go into opp to suppo out a cer the cour returned governme assistance ceased t oughly c his seat in of Lisgar He was prominen run as an ran on th firm of Ro real estate senior par He holds whole of th prietor in He was the the City o amount of bas taken a and develor als from La

Mountains,

operator and

Russ took th

North-West

in the Man

Company be first local di ed Manitoba, and invested money in Winnipeg. In October of 1874, he resigned his position as inspector of schools, and became a law student in the firm of Crooks, Kings-mill & Cattenach, Toronto. He remained there until May, 1877, when he moved to Winnipeg, and joined his brother, the late W. H. Ross. He was admitted to the bar of Manitoba in February, 1878, when the firm then became Ross & Ross, and took the lead in the land business, pushing claims for patants for homesteads, and purchasing scrip and half-breed claims. In 1879 the firm was joined by A. C. Killam, now Justice Killam of the Court of Queen's Bench, Manitoba, and it became solicitors for the Ontario Bank, Manitoba Mortgage and Investment Company, Quebec Mortgage and Investment Company, the British Canadian Loan Company, and afterwards the Bank of Nova Scotia, and worked up a large general business. Subsequently the firm became Ross, Killam & Haggart. In 1878, Mr. Ross was returned for Springfield for the local assembly of Manitoba, as an opponent of the Norquay government, but when the French went into opposition, he signed the round robin to support Mr. Norquay, if he would carry out a certain programme. On an appeal to the county on the new issue, he was again returned for Springfield. He supported the government loyally, and gave them every assistance, until he was convinced it had ceased to be no party, and became thoroughly conservative. In 1882 he resig ed his seat in Springfield to contest the County of Lisgar with Dr., (now Senator), Schultz. He was pressed to enter the contest by prominent men of both parties, and asked to run as an independent. He accepted, and m on this ticket, and was elected. The firm of Ross & coss made large purchases of real estate in Manitoba, which, after the senior partner's death, Mr. Ross kept up. He holds lands and town property over the whole of the North-West, and is a half proprictor in the Birtle saw mills and limits. He was the patentee and had the naming of the City of Brandon, and spent a large amount of money in its development. He has taken a deep interest in the discovery and development of coal and other minerals from Lake of the Woods to the Rocky Mountains, and is the largest real estate operator and owner in the North-West. Mr. Russ took the necessary steps to secure for the North-West a loan company, which resulted in the Manitoba Mortgage and Investment Company being started, and was one of its first local directors, and was also the pro-

Henry

erved

ar of

wife.

1885

mar-

nt of

И.Р.,

oth of

Wil-

Don-

ther.

Br

acter

ttish

n of

who

oun-

alph

s of d in

low

iect

irn

nar

at ter

his En-

οn

ds

ad

moter and one of the directors and treasurer of the Winnipeg Gas Company; a director of the Winnipeg Water Works Company; was vice-president of the M. and N. W. Railway; a director of the proposed Hudson Bay Railway, Winnipeg and S. E. Railway; Winnipeg Street Railway, and Assiniboine and Red River Bridge Company, and he has been connected with nearly every other enterprise for the advancement and development of the North-West. Mr. Ross was one of the first benchers of the Law Society, having been elected in 1880, under the new Act. He also took an active part in military matters, and was for three years a private in No. 9 University Corps, Queen's Own Rifles. He has travelled a good deal in England and the United States. Mr. Ross has been identified with the Liberal party, although elected as an Independent for Lisgar, but opposed the Opposition in their policy with regard to granting aid to the Canadian Pacific Railway Company. In religion Mr. Ross is a Presbyterian. He was married, 30th July, 1873, to Jessie Flora, daughter of the late Donald Cattanach, of Laggan, Glengarry, by whom he has had thrre children, two sons and a daughter. In habits he is quiet, yet liberal and very social. In all matters he is plucky and enterprising, the last two qualities being the secret of his successful career. With the public he is very popular, and in social life has many warm friends.

Frankland, Henry Robertshaw, Toronto; was born in the village of Chester, Don and Dauforth road, county and township of York, on the 1st day of September, 1858. His parents were Garrett F. Frankland and Jane Nelson. Mr. Frankland came to this country in 1854, and settled in Toronto, where he has remained ever since, doing an extensive export trade (for fuller particulars vide sketch, page 78, of Garrett F. Frankland). Henry Robertshaw Frankland received a common school education. and after leaving school entered as an apprentice in the butchering business with his father, in St. Lawrence market. In 1876, at the age of eighteen, he commenced business for himself in his father's old stand, which had been closed for about two years. Here he was obliged to build up a new trade in opposition to the old traders in the market, and, through energy and attention to business, he has succeeded. In 1883 he was elected deputy reeve for the township of York, and was re-elected for the years 1884 and 1885, and this office he now holds. He is also a member of the county council of York, and in 1884 he was appointed a justice of the peace. He is an extensive stockholder in the Grip Publishing Co., and in the Central Bank. He is a Freemason, and a member of the ancient order of United Workmen. Mr. Frankland has crossed the Atlantic eight times, visiting all points of interest in Great Britain and Ireland, and on one occasion, combining business with pleasure, he disposed of a cargo of cattle. He has also travelled through nearly the whole of the United States, visiting the principal cities. In religion he belongs to the Church of England, and in politics is a Reformer. He married on the 19th day of November, 1879, Mary Catherine Smith, daughter of William Smith, carriage manufacturer, in Toronto, and by this lady has two daughters. In private and social life Mr. Frankland has lots of friends and in business circles is highly respected.

Howe, Hon. Joseph.—The late Hon. Mr. Howe was born at the North-west Arm, about two miles from Halifax, in December, His father was John Howe, a U. E. loyalist, who was at one time a printer in Boston, but who subsequently became a writer for the newspapers. It may here be said that the word U. E. loyalist passes current in all parts of Canada as an equivalent for aristocrat, our people taking, it would seem, almost for granted that all those who gathered up their movables, after the colonies had effected their independence, were high society gentlemen, and in some way personal friends, if not blood relations, of the Crown. The truth of the matter is that the U. E. loyalists comprised all sorts of people, unlettered yeomen, eleemosynary shoemakers, printers, blacksmiths, weavers. spinners, and a few handfuls of gentlemen who had a little blue china, and whose ancestors came out in the Mauflower. When these loyalists settled in the loyal provinces that now form Canada, the Crown could not be so ungrateful as to let them go unrecompensed for the sacrifices they had made at the dictates of their devotion; for it is not to be disputed that a number of the refugees really did make sacrifices to their loyalty. For hundreds, however, the war might be regarded as a perfect god-send. They left their empty shoe-making stalls, and were presented with a large tract of land in Ontario, Nova Scotia, or New Brunswick, in consideration of their "devotion." But to return to Joseph Howe. He went to school in an irregular fashion in Halifax. and picked up the rudiments of a roughand-ready sort of education. He was of a rugged frame, had an exuberance of animal spirits, and was fond of crag, and forest. and hill. He had indeed, those who knew him say, the "poetic temperament,"_ though it must be confessed that he did not show much of it in the verses, by so many called poetry, which he afterwards In 1817 he began to learn the printing business at the Gazette office, Halifax This paper was owned by his younger bro. ther, John. He served out his full appren. ticeship, and then engaged himself in journeyman printing work. While learning his trade young Howe is said to have read voraciously every book that he could lay hands upon. He also published in the Gazette a lot of verses, which, however, did not amount to very much as poetry. "One morning," says a Canadian writer, "while taking a solitary swim in the Arm, he was seized with cramp and felt himself sinking. He cast an agonized look round, and caught sight of the dearly-loved cottage on the hillside, where his mother was just placing a lighted canlde on the window-sill. The thought of the grief which would overshadow that mother's heart on the morrow inspired him with strength to give a last despairing kick. The kick dispelled the cramp, and, hastily swimming ashore, he sank down exhausted, but thankful for his deliverance. It was long before he could summon courage to acquaint his parents with the circumstance." Joseph Howe began a newspaper business on his own account, in 1827, becoming part proprietor of the Weekly Chronicle, the name of which was afterwards changed to that of the Acadian. He som sold out the latter, and purchased the Nova Scotian. In this newspaper he wrote with great earnestness, eloquence, and force. His style was pregnant, trenchant, and sometimes overwhelming. He married, in 1828, Catharine Susan Ann, a daughter of captain John McNab, of the Nova Scotia Fencibles. Mr. Howe's celebrated Legislative Review began to appear in 1830, and attracted wide notice. In 1835 he published an article which the oligarchists could not tolerate, and he was indicted for libel. He consulted various lawyers. can be no successful defence made for you," they all said, and some invited him to make a humble apology, and throw himself upon the mercy of his prosecutors. He borrowed a lot of law books, read all he could find on libel, and convinced himself that the learned men of the law were wrong. He pleaded his own case, and his heart became comforted, as he saw among the jurors an old man, with tears streaming from his eves.

a ve

who

case

dumb

Howe

electe

Halif

throu

Halib

Howe

public

iron-h

nor, c

mon '

" righ

not be the p called.

land,

Jordan

cat's-p provok

at the 1848 t

erals.

form a

provinc

from th

1863 he

Young,

Since t

per, in a furiou

Howe.

on the q

was opp

that he

but bec

ing a ge union, a

the mea

complish

veteran

donald,

vince, b

ing the

Hence h

1869 as p

later he province

indian a while gro

gression sical. In governor

few week

Howe wa

inces whi

duced.

eves. The jury returned in ten minutes with a verdict of "not guilty," and the lawyers who had said, "he who pleads his own case has a fool for a client" were in a way dumbfounded." From this day forward Mr. Howe was a noted man. In 1836 he was elected to parliament for the County of Halifax; and two years later he travelled through Europe, in company with Judge Haliburton, better known as "Sam Slick." Howe returned in 1838 and plunged into public work again. Sir Colin Campbell, the iron headed autocrat, who was then governor, could not understand what the "common" people meant by talking about their "rights," and with him, Mr. Howe, it need not be said, was at issue. On petition of the province, Governor Campbell was recalled, and was succeeded by Lord Falkland, a son of William IV., by Mrs. Jordan. After a time Falkland became a cat's-paw in the hands of the Tories, and provoked herce hostilities from the Liberals. at the head of whom was Joseph Howe. In 1848 the day of triumph came for the Liberals. Mr. N. Mackie was called upon to form a government, and Mr. Howe became provincial secretary. In 1851 he retired from the representation of Halifax; and in 1863 he became premier, in the place of Mr. Young, who was elevated to the bench. Since the entry into public life of Dr. Tupper, in 1855, there had been a steady, often a furious, hostility between himself and Mr. Howe. The strife was greatest between them on the question of union, to which Mr. Howe was opposed. But Dr. Tupper prevailed, not that he was a greater man than Mr. Howe; but because luck was on his side—there being a general movement in the direction of union, and the Imperial government desired the measure. When confederation was accomplished the now almost broken-down veteran was made to see, by Sir J. A. Macdonald, that he could be loyal to his province, by accepting the inevitable and making the best of the new order of things. Hence he entered the Dominion Cabinet in 1869 as president of the council. Ten months later he became secretary of state for the provinces and superintendent general of Indian affairs. His health was now all the while growing feebler, and his mental retrogression seemed to keep pace with his physical. In 1873 he was appointed lieutenantgovernor of Nova Scotia; but he died a few weeks afterwards. As an orator, Joseph Howe was the greatest man that the provinces which comprise Canada have ever produced.

orest.

knew

e did

by so

vards

brint-

ifax.

bro-

oren-

f in ning

read

lay

the

did

One

hile

was

ing.

ght

the

ting

The

in-

de-

Kumpf, Christian, Waterloo, the worthy gentleman chosen as the subject of this brief memoir, was born at Beerfelden, Hesse, Darmstadt, Germany, on the 22nd August, 1838. At an early age-when in his eighth year-he emigrated to Canada, settling at Galt, Ontario. Here he attended the common schools till he had secured an education sufficient for all his future and important business purposes. In 1862 the government appointed him the postmaster of Waterloo, the duties of which position he discharges in the most satisfactory manner. From 1866 to 1877 he was treasurer of the town of Waterloo, and in 1878 was elected mayor. This position he also held during 1879. The following year he was appointed town treasurer, and this important office he holds, to the satisfaction of his townsfolk, at the present date. He married in 1862.

Moodie, Robert Baldwin, Toronto. was born at Belleville, Ontario, on the 8th of July, 1843. His parents were Lieutenant J. W. Dunbar Moodie, late sheriff of Hastings, and Susanna Moodie, nee Strickland, author of "Roughing it in the Bush" and other popular works (vide sketch of Mrs. Moodie, p. 17). Robert was educated at the Grammar School and Albert College, Belleville, St. Mary's College, Montreal, and Bishop's College, Lennoxville, Quebec. After completing his education, in 1859, he entered his father's office in Belleville, and acted as deputy sheriff until the death of his father, Sheriff Moodie, and from 1863 to 1865 as chief clerk in the same office, under Sheriff Taylor, who succeeded his father in the shrievalty of Hastings. In 1865 he resigned his position, and engaged in a manufacturing business in Trenton; but in consequence of some inducements held out to him when started not being fulfilled, he abandoned the business, and shortly afterwards decided to remove to the United States. He, therefore, left Canada in the spring of 1865, and proceeded south, with the view of bettering his position; but after travelling six months in the States of Kentucky, Mississippi, Arkansas, Tennessee, Alabama, Lousiana and Texas, he returned to Canada, having in the meantime discovered that, in consequence of the very unsettled state of the United States at that time, there was very little chance of his procuring a permanent position. Soon after his return, he was offered, and accepted, the position of manager in the large art house of C. H. Williamson, Brooklyn, New York, and in this establishment he remained until the Fenian trouble began, in 1866, when he resigned his position, and returned, with two hundred patriotic Canadians, to assist the volunteers then stationed on the frontier for the protection of the country. He then joined the Hastings battalion, and served at Prescott until the Fenian excitement died out, when he took command of the schooner Alert, of Belleville, and sailed Lake Ontario for the balance of the year. In October, 1866, Mr. Moodie entered the service of the Grand Trunk Railway Company, as freight clerk at Seaforth. He was promoted to the agency at Brantford in 1868, contracting agent for the western district in 1875, and agent at Toronto in 1881, when he resigned his connection with the Grand Trunk Railway Company, and was appointed by the Dominion Government to take charge of the western freight and passenger business, Intercolonial Railway Company, in Toronto. Mr. Moodie joined the Masons in 1863, and continues to take a lively interest in all that pertains to this ancient order. Mr. Moodie is a member of the Episcopal church, and in politics is a Conservative. On the 27th June, 1863, he married Sarah Ellen Russell, of Belleville, and has six children alive-four girls and two boys. Mr. Moodie has proved himself to be a true patriot, and a worthy son of worthy parents.

Grant, Rev. George Monro, D.D., Principal of Queen's University and College, Kingston, Ontario, was born on the 22nd December, 1835, at Stellarton (Albion Mines), a village situated on the East River, in the County of Pictou, Nova Scotia. His father, who was a native of Scotland, taught a school in the village where our distinguished subject was born and reared. He was respected by those who knew him for his fine abilities and uprightness of charac-The family removed to Pictou, and young George Monro attended the academy of that town. It is said that he was not remarkable for close application to study, but that he could master his books with very little difficulty. "He was," says an authority, "fonder of play than of his lessons, and always ready for a play, a scramble, or a holiday, or a fight at a moment's notice. He was ambitious and pugnacious, and had several perilous adventures such as do not commonly fall to a boy's lot. On one occasion he was thrown into the East River, at Pictou, by a big boy with whom he had been fighting, and to whom he refused to acknowledge himself beaten. His antagonist left him to scramble out of the river or drown as luck might have it. He and some of his playfellows, for the mere love of mischief, were experimenting with a hay cutter, in the absence of its owner Young Grant's right hand was caught by the knife and taken completely off. deprivation has never seriously inconvenienced him, and he has been known to say, 'I do not know what I would do with a second hand if I had it.'" He bore away the Primrose medal from the Pictou academy. In his sixteenth year he entered the West River Seminary of the Presbyterian church of Nova Scotia, receiving his instruction in classics and philosophy at the hands of the able Professor Ross, afterwards president of Dalhousie college, Halifax. He remained in the seminary for two years, and was elected by the committee of the Synod of Nova Scotia as one of four bursars to be sent to the University of Glasgow, to be fitted for the ministry of the Presbyterian Just as he had attained his Church. eighteenth year he proceeded to Scotland. His career at the university was character. ized by singular success. He took the highest honours in philosophy, and also carried off first prizes in classics, moral philosophy and chemistry, and the second prize in logic. In divinity he took the Lord Rector's prize of thirty guineas for the best essay on Hindoo literature and philosophy. When his studies were completed, he was ordained a minister of the Church of Scotland, and upon his return to Canada he was appointed a missionary in his native County of Pictou. Here all the wonderful energy of his nature. his zeal and brilliancy, began to manifest themselves. In a little while, however, a wider sphere of usefulness was opened for him in Prince Edward Island, and here he laboured for two years with the most marked success. In May, 1863, he was inducted into the pastorate of St. Matthew's Church, Halifax, which he retained until his appoint ment, in 1877, to his present position at the head of the University of Queen's college at Kingston. During his fourteen years of ecclesiastical labours, the work he accomplished was very great. He had been a director of Dalhousie college, a trustee of the Theological seminary, a member of the various committees of presbytery and synod. and a persistent, energetic advocate of Presbyterian union. The Principalship of this University gave to our subject the very scope that he needed for the exercise of his great energy and capacity for organization. A new flow of warm, thrilling blood was infused by this appointment into Queen's, and

n

th

ag

sin

to

ver

one

poi

per

and

our

the

of A

old :

the .

the f

were

Corn

class.

this v

thing

ceive

to eng

for up

Scotla

marrie

emigra

hisarr

but s

County

he, in it liberally bounded forward into a place among the foremost universities of Canada. In addition to the splendid success achieved here, Principal Grant now began to give much of his attention to public and literary topics. In the summer of 1872 he accompanied Mr. Sandford Fleming on a tour across the continent, inspecting the location of the Canadian Pacific line. The party left Toronto on the 16th July, 1872, and reached Victoria, British Columbia, on the 9th of October following. The result of this journey was the book, "Ocean to Ocean," a work of wide grasp, close observation, and a poetic flavour from plain and mountains. Good Words Dr. Grant wrote a series of articles on the great North-West, and he contributed to the Canadian Monthly, the Maritime Monthly, The Contemporary Reriew, and Scribner's Magazine, able and interesting papers, with observations on his travel, and with respect to our great international highway. His pen is still active in the various publications in Canada, and now and again his voice is heard from the pages of the Century Magazine. He has in these later years fought with singular ability and with success the battle of university consolidation, showing the wisdom and the fitness of the maintenance of the Queen's and similar well-equipped institutions, according to their present status as autonomous Universities.

he mere

g with a

owner

t by the conve-

to say,

with a re away

ou aca-

red the

yterian

nstrue-

hands

s presi-

rs, and

Synod

ars to

to be

terian

d his

tland.

racterighest

ed off

sophy

logic.

prize

y on When

ained

, and inted

cton.

ture.

nifest

er, a d for e he irked

icted

arch.

ointt the

llege

rs of

om-

n a

e of

the

iod.

his

He

The

McKellar, Archibald, Ottawa, is one of those men whom Canadians like to point at as proof of what can be done by a person possessed of dogged perseverance and thrift. Mr. McKellar, the subject of our sketch, was born in February, 1815, in the Island of Bute, the southern portion of Argyleshire, and when only eight days old was carried, along with his mother, to the small Island of Gigha, where he spent the first eight years of his life. His parents were Duncan McKellar and Catherine Mc-Cormick, and they belonged to the peasant class. They were not blessed with much of this world's goods, but yet they spent something on Archibald's schooling, and he received some education. He was early forced to engage with neighbouring farmers, and for upwards of twenty-six years worked in Scotland as a farm hand. In 1841 he was married to Agnes Pollock, and the pair emigrated to Canada. Mr. McKellar, on his arrival, worked on a farm near Montreal, but shortly afterwards removed to the County of Vaudreuil, and carried on farming. Things not succeeding to his liking, he, in 1857, removed to a farm near Ottawa |

City and began dairy-farming, and it is gratifying to say, this business has proved very successful. He is now the possessor of one of the finest farms in the County of Carleton, and has a herd of about seventy milch cows, which gives milk to many of the inhabitants of the Capital. Though now well advanced in years, Mr. McKellar takes an active interest in agricultural shows, and is a great advocate of all measures calculated to improve the class whom he represents. Mr. McKellar is a devoted adherent of the Presbyterian church, and in politics is a staunch Reformer. The fruit of his marriage is a son and two daughters. His son John is actively engaged in the business with him, and has already proved himself a worthy son of a worthy father.

Day, Henry Wright, M.D., Trenton, was born in the township of Kingston, on the 6th September, 1831. He is the son of Calvin W. Day, farmer, and Elizabeth Wright, his wife. His ancestors were United Empire loyalists, and his great grandfather, Barnabas Day, once lived on the present site of the City of New York. Near the close of the American revolution, this ancestor came to Upper Canada, selected government lands four miles west of the present site of Kingston, then returned to New York state, and brought his family in a canoe from Sackett's Harbour. The grandfather of the doctor was then only nine years old. The original Day homestead, selected about one hundred years ago, is still in the possession of the family, and is occupied by Sydney W. Day, a younger brother. His mother was of Scotch descent, and her mother belonged to a United Empire loyalist family. Dr. Day received a thorough mathematical and classical education at the old Newburgh Academy, and his medical education at Queen's University, Kingston. He secured his degree of M.D. in 1859, when he immediately settled at Trenton, where he has since remained, each year adding to his large circle of friends and patrons, and to his reputation as a medical man. In 1869 he was elected a member of the Council of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario, for the Quinté and Cataraqui districts, and held that position for three years, and again from 1880 to the present time. He has also been elected president of the Council of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario. Many years ago the doctor was surgeon of a battalion of militia; and in 1866, when the first Fenian raid occurred, he organized a battery of garrison artillery, was made it captain, and kept up his connection with the volunteers until 1882. He was a member of the school board of Trenton for fourteen or fifteen consecutive years, and assisted in building up the excellent system of graded and grammar schools; and was also in the town council eight years, and strove to promote the best-interests of the town, being always known as a public-spirited man. In 1881, when Trenton was incorporated as a town, Dr. Day was elected its first mayor, and held that office for two In 1860 he was appointed coroner for Hastings, and in the united counties of Northumberland and Durham. He was also president of the Provisional Board of Directors of the Central Ontario Railway. Dr. Day is a Freemason, and has taken a very active part in the order. He has been master of the Blue Lodge, and he has also filled the chairs in the Chapter and in the Encampment, and is a past district deputy grand master and past district superintendent. He is a Methodist in religion. In politics he is a Reformer, and comes of an old reform family. He married on December 31st, 1857, Eliza Anne Purdy, of Ernestown, whose father was a native of Canada, and her mother of the State of New York. The doctor is full of public spirit and enterprise; is a skilful, successful and popular practitioner, and in the social circle has many well-wishers. He is one of the class of wide-idea men to whom communities for ever remain under obligation.

Kent, John, Toronto, the subject of this sketch, was born in the City of Toronto, on the 8th of December, 1836. His parents were Joseph Kent and Ann, nee Newton, of Caistor, Lincolnshire, England. His father was a brickmaker in Caistor, but in 1836, he left the old country and came to Canada, and settled in Toronto. Here he engaged in trading, afterwards opening a shop on King street, in the Chewitt building, and on the site on which the Rossin House now He remained in business until stands. about 1860, when he retired, and, in 1882, he died. John Kent was educated in Canada, and received a public school education. He learned carpentering with Robert Briggs, and, after mastering the trade, worked at the same in different shops in Toronto, continuing until 1870, when he entered into business with his present part-These enterprising ner, Frank Hillock. gentlemen commenced operations on Bay street, as lumber dealers, and remained there until 1873, when they removed, owing to the increase of their business, to the corner of Albert and Chestnut streets, where they now have one of the largest lumber, yards in the City of Toronto, and where they do one of the most extensive trades pertaining to their line in the Dominion. Mr. Kent has always given evidence of much public spirit. He has belonged to the 10th Royals, now Grenadiers, and held the rank of sergeant, and he went with his company to the front at the time of the Fenian raid In 1866, he was elected school trustee for St. John's ward, and continued in that office until 1882, when he retired; also, in 1882 he was elected alderman for St. John's ward. and re-elected in 1883. In 1885, he was appointed a justice of the peace. At the time of the semi-centennial of Toronto, Mr. Kent was appointed one of the musical committee, and faithfully performed his duties. He is a Freemason, and holds the office of pastmaster in St. Andrew's lodge, No. 16, He has travelled a good deal G. R. C. through the United States and Canada; and in 1884, he took a trip to Britain, and visited the chief cities and places of interest. In religion he is a Methodist, and belongs to the Carlton street Methodist church. He is superintendent of the sabbath school, which office he has held for a number of He is also president of the Toronto Methodist Sabbath-school Association. In politics he is a Reformer. He was married. in 1858, to Mary Jane McCloskey, daughter of George McCloskey. Mr. Kent has a family of eight children, two girls and six boys, one of whom, Newton Kent, is attending the University of Toronto, intending, after graduation, to study the profession of Mr. Kent's career has been highy creditable to himself, and to those who bear his name.

co

A i Ui

eri Oc da

cou

Ins

son

Tin We

182 sett

183

and

er H

the

the

the

entei

Quel

conv

secut

mitte

of lac

Thon

of th

in Qu

the ea

ness o

exten:

were a

knowl

ada, a

countr

Awrey, Nicholas, M.P.P., Binbrook, the subject of this sketch, was born in the township of Binbrook, County of Wentworth, Ontario, on the 8th of June, 1851. Mr. Awrey is descended from German Scottish stock. His ancestors belonged to an old German family, who had settled in New England some years before the war of independence, and were possessed of considerable means, but when the colonies revolted, they sacrificed all, and took up their abode in a land where they could see the British flag wave in the breeze. His father was Israel Awrey, whose mother was a Miss Macpherson, a lady of Scottish descent, and his wife was Miss Rymal, a daughter of George Rymal. Young Awrey, attended in his earlier years the public schools of Wentworth; but he concluded his studies by a course at the Grammar School of Hamilton. Mr. Awrey has always exhibited a large public spirit, and at the time of the Fenian raid, he took an active part in the formation of a corps of volunteers, and was one of the commanding officers of the Binbrook company, now forming part of the 77th battalion. From a very early age our subject took a deep interest in politics, and he soon declared it to be his intention to try some day for a place in the legislature. His friends perceived that he was well informed on public questions, and he had the ability to make himself heard; therefore, when he had not yet reached his twentyeighth year, he was elected representative in the Ontario Legislature for the South Riding of Wentworth. His career since has been marked by industry, and painstaking. He is one of the most observant and thoughtful men in the House, and he devotes himself heart and soul to the interests of his constituents and of his province. Awrey has travelled extensively through the United States, and through our own westem territories. He married on the 15th of October, 1872, Hasseltine Barlow, youngest caughter of Richard Barlow, of Wentworth county, and the fruit of this union is three children.

ne cor-

where

umber,

where

trades

inion.

much

e 10th

e rank

npany

n raid,

ior St.

office

1882

ward,

was

t the

, Mr.

com-

uties.

ice of

p. 16,

deal

; and

and

erest.

ongs

He

hool.

er of

onto

In

ried,

hter

as a

six end-

ing,

pear

ok.

the

õ1.

led

ies

up ee

Tims, Thomas Dillon, the Financial Inspector for the Dominion of Canada, third son of the late William and Catherine Dillon Tims, was born in Castle Pollard, County Westmeath, Ireland, on the 6th January, 1825. The family came to Canada, and settled in the City of Quebec in the year 1834, where Mr. Tims, senior, died in 1836. and his widow also died in 1862. A younger brother, Frank D. Tims, now occupies the position of deputy auditor-general for the Province of Quebec, and their sister, the Reverend Mother St. Catherine, who entered the monastery of the Ursulines at Quebec many years ago, is still living at the convent, after having occupied for two consecutive terms—the longest period permitted by the regulations—the high position of lady superioress. While still quite a lad, Thomas D. Tims became connected with one of the principal mercantile establishments in Quebec, of which he became manager at the early age of nineteen years. The business of the firm being of a very varied and extensive character, ample opportunities were afforded him for acquiring a thorough knowledge of the commercial affairs of Canada, as well as those of the principal foreign countries then trading with this country.

Having determined upon starting in business on his own account, he was tempted to select the new and rising town of St. Mary's, in the County of Perth, Western Canada, as a point where a large business might be established and profitably carried He accordingly moved there with his family in 1855, and soon afterwards was offered and accepted the position of agent of the Commercial Bank of Canada, and, therefore, became the pioneer banker at St. Mary's. His prospects of success in extensive grain and other business of a general character, which he endeavoured to establish, were, however, soon blighted by the delays that took place in the opening of the Grand Trunk Railway, then in course of construction, and almost completed to St. Mary's. The general depression in trade throughout the world at this time (1857) so severely affected business at St. Mary's, and the prospects of revival there seemed so remote, that Mr. Tims was reluctantly obliged to abandon the prospects he had formed, and, in 1858, moved with his family to Toronto, on his appointment, under Sir A. T. Galt, then finance minister, to a leading position in the audit branch of his department, where he was immediately allotted the important special duty of superintending the compilation and printing of the public accounts, and the preparation of the estimates for parliament. During his long sojourn at St. Mary's, Mr. Tims occupied a very prominent position in the county. Having been appointed a magistrate soon after his arrival, he took a lively interest in all public matters, especially those affecting the welfare of his new home. On severing his connection with the bank, he was the recipient of very complimentary acknowledgments from the president and general manager for his successful management, under great and unforeseen difficulties, and his removal to Toronto was the cause of universal regret, even amongst those with whom Mr. Tims had differed widely on public questions of the day. The very large experience Mr. Tims had acquired in commercial affairs proved invaluable in connection with the duties he was afterwards destined to discharge in the public service. Being an expert in all matters relating to accounts of a complicated character, his previous training enabled him to afford great assistance to his chief in improving the system of conducting the business of the department. In 1863 Mr Tims was instructed by government to enquire into prison management at Montreal, where the publication of his reports gave rise to considerable discussion in the newspapers of Previous to this he had also been selected an expert in accounts to assist the commissioners appointed by government to inquire into the affairs of the Grand Trunk Railway. He was also instructed, during the same year, to accompany the Board of Prison Inspectors on a visit to all the penitentiaries, reformatories, lunatic asylums, and prisons of the province, which resulted in the accounting business of these institutions being placed on a uniform footing in all parts of the country. His valuable services in this connection were suitably acknowledged by the inspectors in their annual reports. In 1866, Mr. Tims was requested by government to superintend the engraving and printing of the first issue of legal tender notes at Ottawa. The system of checks established by him met with the entire approval of the auditor-general and the minister of finance, and subsequently proved a perfect success in every respect. When confederation took place, on the 1st July, 1867, Mr. Tims was authorized to proceed to Quebec, on application of the first provincial treasurer, to assist in the work of organizing a financial system for the new province. After spending several weeks there, during the greater portion of the time in charge of all fiscal affairs, he completed voluminous reports, which met the entire approval of the provincial treasurer, the auditor-general and the finance minister, and which subsequently became the basis of legislation in regard to the matters to which they related. On his return to Ottawa, Mr. Tims was instructed to proceed to the maritime provinces for the purpose of inquiring into and reporting on a system of conducting Dominion affairs there. It may be here mentioned that when the Union Act took effect the old province of Canada was divided into the new provinces of Ontario and Quebec. The existing departmental machinery at Ottawa was, therefore, used for some time in conducting fiscal business for these two provinces. On the other hand, it was considered expedient to appoint the Local Governments of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick agents of the Dominion for the time being, until the departments at Ottawa were prepared to assume direct control of their respective branches of the public service in these provinces. On arrival at Halifax, early in October, 1867, Mr. Tims found public affairs in a very unsatisfactory position. The first general election in the province under the Union Act, for both the House of Commons and the Provincial Leg. islature, had only recently taken place, resulting in the defeat of most of the unionist candidates. For the Legislative Assembly the anti-confederates, as they were called. carried every constituency except one. The first local government appointed under the Union Act had tendered their resignation to the lieutenant-governor, but their successors had not yet been gazetted. The declaration of the leaders of the anti-confederate party to ignore the Union Act, to collect their revenues as if no union had ever existed, and to declare all Dominion authority at an end in the province when they assumed the reins of office, caused intense excitement throughout the country. The best informed people believed the situation so grave that an armed rebellion would be the result. Instead, therefore, of carrying out his original instructions, Mr. Tims was ordered to remain at Halifax, authorized to immediately open a branch of the finance department there, and to assume temporary charge of all Dominion affairs in the province, until such time as the departments at Ottawa could assume the management. During his continuous stay of nearly a year in Nova Scotia, and having been furnished with credentials from His Excellency Lord Monck, then governor-general, to Sir Hastings Doyle, the lieutenant-governor, who received and treated him with marked kind. ness and distinction, Mr. Tims was afforded numerous opportunities of meeting most of the leading people of the province, which enabled him to remove many existing prejudices in regard to the western provinces. and smooth the way to a considerable extent for the negotiations that subsequently took place between the late Hon. Joseph Howe and the Hon. A. W. McLelan, now minister of marine and fisheries, acting for the province, and the then minister of finance, the Hon. Mr. (now Sir John) Rose, on behalf of the Dominion. These negotiations, it will be remembered, resulted in bringing about a better state of things between the province and the Dominion. The thorough knowledge of affairs acquired by Mr. Tims also enabled him to render valuable assistance in the preparation of statistics used by the finance minister during the negotiations. Although for a time after his arrival in Halifax, Mr. Tims became, as a Canadian official, a special object for daily abuse by the more violent anti-confederate newspapers, these attacks gradually ceased as he became better known in the city. He soon acquired a host of friends, even amongst

f c d ptu 18 th to ap qu of ye: ne

un

fina

No

the

Hal

hav

was

lowi

finat

and

vince

men

made

vince

by th

short

north

he fo

comm

The si

Tims

first t

follow

on the

vinces. Washii

govern

there.

minion.

periodi

branche

those most bitterly opposed to the union with Canada. In the course of an exciting debate, during the first session of the Legislature after his arrival, Mr. Tims's name being mentioned, the Hon. Mr. Annand, the leader of the government, in reply, referred to Mr. Time's thorough knowledge of their fiscal affairs, and of his conciliatory course toward his government, in very compimentary terms. On returning to Ottawa for the Christmas holidays, Mr. Tims was congratulated warmly by his chief, and was specially complimented by the governorgeneral for the tact he had displayed, and for the successful manner in which he had carried out his instructions, under great difficulties. Matters having assumed a more promising aspect, Mr. Tims was enabled to turn his attention, in the latter part of 1868, to affairs in New Brunswick, where they were soon placed on a similar footing to Nova Scotia. In the interim he was appointed a member of a commission to enquire into and report on the management of railway affairs in Nova Scotia. In the year 1871 Mr. Tims was appointed to the newly-created office of financial inspector, under Sir Francis Hincks, then minister of finance. In the same year it became his daty to open savings banks throughout Nova Scotia, and to organize the offices of the assistant receivers-general at Montreal, Halifax, and St. John. British Columbia having entered the union, in 1871, Mr. Tims was instructed to proceed there in the following season for the purpose of settling financial affairs with the local government, and establishing savings banks in that province, and a branch of the finance department at Victoria. During the year 1873 he made his first official visit to the new province of Manitoba, travelling to Winnipeg by the Dawson route, in the then unusually short time of seven days. On reaching the north-west angle of the Lake of the Woods, he found assembled there between 700 and 800 Indians, to negotiate a treaty with commissioners appointed by government. The sight was one to be remembered. Mr. Tims also visited Charlottetown, for the first time, on official business during the following year, and placed financial affairs on the same footing as in the other provinces. He has also more than once visited Washington officially, with letters from the governor-general to the British minister there. As financial inspector for the Dominion, it is the duty of Mr. Tims to make periodical inspections of all the outside branches of the finance department. He al Leg.

ice, re-

nionist

embly

called,

er the nation

ucces-

ie de-

feder-

collect

er ex-

ority

y as-

e ex-

best

on so

e the

g out

was

ed to

ance

rary

pro-

ents

ent.

vear

hed

wrd

ast-

vho

nd-

ded

t of

ich

rees.

ent

ok

we

he

The

has also had continuous charge at Ottawa of all fiscal business of the railways owned and operated by the Dominion government since confederation. During the meeting of the British Association at Montreal, in 1884, a very interesting paper by Mr. Tims, on Government savings banks, prepared by the request of the chairman, was read, and has been published in full by the economics branch of the society. Mr. Tims married, at Indian Lorette, in 1849, Louisa Flora, youngest daughter of the late John Stansfeld, a leading merchant of Quebec. Mr. and Mrs. Tims have had a numerous family, eight of whom are still living. All are members of the Roman tatholic church. His headquarters are at Ottawa, where his family has resided since the removal of the seat of government from Quebec, in 1865. He held a captain's commission in the Militia at Quebec at the time of his departure for St. Mary's, and it bears the signature of the late Lord Elgin, governor-general of Canada.

Dowling, The Very Rev. Thomas Joseph, P.P., V.G., Paris. The very reverend gentleman, who forms the subject of this sketch, was born in the County of Limerick, Ireland, on the 28th of February, 1840. When he was about eleven years old, his father, Martin Dowling, emigrated with his family to Canada, and settled in the City of Hamilton. Here the subject of our sketch attended a select school until he entered St. Michael's College, Toronto, in the autumn of 1855. In this institution he remained seven years, and was one of the founders of St. Michael's Literary Association, a society of advanced students formed for the purpose of improvement in the art of public speaking, and for the cultivation of English literature; and for the encouragement of this society he contributes an annual prize, known as the "Dowling Silver Medal." In 1861 he was placed on the staff of professors, and as classical teacher took charge of a class for one year. In the following year he entered the Grand Seminary of Montreal, where he finished his theological studies. He was ordained priest on the 7th of August, 1864, by the Right Rev. Bishop Farrell, in St. Mary's Cathedral, Hamilton; and on the 5th of October following, he was appointed paster of the missions of Paris, including the town of Galt, the townships of Burford and North and South Dumfries, the villages of Ayr, Glenmorris and Harrisburgh, and for a time the villages of Hespeler and Preston. As the church at Paris was unfinished and in serious financial difficulties, he travelled to Chicago and to the oil districts of Pennsylvania, on a lecturing and collecting tour, and in two years succeeded, by the aid of his congregation and friends, in paying off the debt. This church, which is now one of the handsomest in the province, he has since renovated, enlarged and decorated, at an outlay of about twenty thousand dollars. It was dedicated under the name of "The Church of the Sacred Heart of Jesus," by Right Rev. Bishop Crinnon, on the 6th of February, 1881, on which occasion his lordship appointed Father Dowling, Vicar General of the diocese. On the 6th of September, 1873, he purchased the property on which is situated the Paris separate school and residence for the sisters of St. Joseph, which cost about $4,000. In 1877 Father Dowling accompanied the Canadian pilgrims to Rome; assisted at the Golden Jubilee of Pope Pius IX., and presented an offering to the Pope on behalf-f-the clergy and laity of the diocese of framilton. In 1880 he built St. Patrick's Church, Galt, and then resigned the charge of that parish. On the 17th of January, 1883, he was elected by the clergy of Hamilton, vicar-capitular of the diocese, which office he retained until the arrival of his Lordship Right Rev. Dr. Carbery, the present distinguished Bishop of Hamilton, who re-appointed him vicar-general. So singularly zealous for his church, and so able an exponent of her doctrines, it is no wonder that the vicar-general is beloved by his people, and respected by his ecclesiastical superiors.

Dawson, Major George Dudley, Royal Grenadiers, Toronto, was born on January 7th, 1839, in the County of Carlow, Ireland. He is the second son of the Rev. George B. Dawson, who was for more than thirty years rector of the parish of Aghade, in that county. His mother was a sister of Lieutenant-General Sir Dudley Hill, K.C.B., who died when in command of a division in India, in 1852. Young Dawson received his education by private tuition and at Kilkenny college, and entered the army (when sixteen years of age) on March 16th, 1855. He was ordered to the Crimea, in October of the same year, but when the ship arrived at Malta, news of the armistice was received, and no more troops were sent on. He remained at Malta for a year, and returned to England in the autumn of 1856. He served in various parts of England and Ireland from 1856 to 1861. He took a first class certificate at the School of Musketry, Hythe, in 1859, and acted as assistant instructor of Musketry to a depôt battalion at Cork and also Athlone, Ireland, for two years. Major Dawson came to Canada with the 47th Regiment, in 1861, and he held the appointment of out-post officer for four years at Kingston. Hamilton, and Toronto. He also acted as brigade major to the field force under Colonel Lowry during the Fenian raid at Fort Erie, in 1866. In 1867 he sold out at Halifax. He married on January 7th, 1869. Elizabeth, eldest daughter of the late R. P. Crooks, barrister, of Toronto, and niece of the Hon. Adam Crooks, late minister of education for Ontario. He went into business as a wine merchant in 1870, at Toronto, in partnership with E. H. Foster, but the latter retired from the partnership in 1875. He founded, in 1871, The Bodega Wine Co., of Canada, with branches at Montreal and Ottawa. On the reorganization of the old Tenth Royals, in 1880, under Lieu. tenant-Celonel Grasett, Major Dawson became senior major of the regiment, and assisted in developing the corps. He served during the whole of the rebellion in the North-West, in 1885, and received a wound in the charge on Batoche on May 12th, 1885. From the above facts it will be seen that Major Dawson is a gentleman of enterprise. courage, and sound business insight.

Flint, John James Bleecker, was born December 29th, 1838, at Belleville, Ontario. He is a direct descendant on his father's side of a U. E. loyalist family. His mother's maiden name was Eliza Haskins. who was born in Dublin, Ireland. Her grandfather, on the mother's side, possessed a large estate in Ireland, but became financially involved, died, and his son, Dr. James Haskins, and daughter, Eliza, came to Canada and settled in Belleville. On the death of his mother, he was adopted by the Hon. Billa Flint, when at the age of four years. He was sent to the Belleville Grammar School under the late Alexander Burdon, and completed his studies at Victoria College, Cobourg. He became ensign in No. 5 company of volunteers, one of the first volunteer companies of Belleville. He was elected town councillor in 1868, and filled that office until 1872, when he was elected mayor of For the last ten years he has Belleville. been connected with the firm of Flint & Holton in the lumbering and milling business. Mr. Flint was president of the Belleville Literary Society for several years, and was also president of the Legal and Literary Society of Belleville. He is now president of the Belleville Bar Association, and was president for a number of years of the of th 38 a he fo Rober the 1 memb solicit ville. police adhere tively and H ber of 1 the con zier, A Yellow he mar: Holton. Gov

Belle

in P

very

Senator indicial the Co 22nd D Hatton When v year his and the of our Crown a This tru the ripe had atter Ireland, cation wa education tered upo tor-genera was called in partner after, bein ed judge d now embra This appo win-Lafon tribute is r capabilities man whom the age of 2 Such an ar not altoget history. heart and s tions in the trict were so lowing his Relleville Reform Club. He is a Liberal in politics, and for many years took a very active part in the political contests He commenced practice of the county. as a barrister in November, 1862; in 1866, he formed a partnership with City Clerk Robertson, and subsequently, in 1878, with the late Mr. Jellett, and is now senior member of the firm of Flint & Sherry, solicitors for the Bank of Commerce, Bellerille. Mr. Flint was, in 1884, appointed police magistrate of Belleville. He is an adherent of the Methodist church. He actively assisted in the erection of a Hospital and Home for the Friendless, and is a memher of the advisory board. In 1859 he visited the continent in company with Judge Lazier, Alexander Robertson, M.P., and the late Mr. Jellett; and in 1884 he visited the Yellowstone Park. In September, 1866, he married Eliza, daughter of the late E.W. Holton, and niece of Hon. L. H. Holton.

and

lajor Regi-

ment

King-

acted

nder

d at ut at 869.

R. P.

ce of

r of

ousi-

nto,

the 875.

ine

real

the

ieu-

be-

and

the

nd

85. nat

se,

ras le, lis

Gowan, Hon. James Robert, Senator, Barrie, and ex-Judge of the judicial district of Simcoe, was born in the County of Wexford, Ireland, on the 22nd Dec., 1817. His parents were Henry Hatton and Elizabeth (nee Burkitt) Gowan. When young Gowan was in his fifteenth year his parents emigrated to Upper Canada, and thereafter, for many years, the father of our subject was deputy clerk of the Crown and Pleas for the County of Simcoe. This truly worthy man died in 1863, at the ripe age of 84. James Robert Gowan had attended school for several years in Ireland, but the greater part of his education was obtained in Canada. When his educational studies were completed, he entered upon a course of law with the Honourable James E. Small, of Toronto, solicitor-general for Upper Canada. In 1839 he was called to the bar, and began his practice in partnership with Mr. Small. Four years after, being called to the bar, he was appointed judge of the judicial district of Simcoe, now embracing Muskoka and Parry Sound. This appointment was made by the Baldwin-Lafontaine Liberal Administration. No tribute is needed from any pen to the legal capabilities and the integrity of a young man whom Robert Baldwin would select, at the age of 26, to fill a place upon the bench. Such an appointment is extremely rare, if not altogether exceptional, in our judicial history. The young judge at once entered heart and soul into his work, and his exertions in the judicial organization of his district were so successful that in the year following his appointment the magistrates of the district presented him with a snuff-box of wrought gold, bearing an appropriate inscription. The district over which Judge Gowan was called to preside was one of the largest in Upper Canada, and he was obliged to face many hardships and dangers in his pioneer work. But, under his patience and energy, obstacles disappeared, and "with such diligence," says a writer, "did he perform his duties that after the lapse of nearly twenty-six years he was able to say, 'I have never been absent from the superior courts. over which I preside, and, as to the division courts (except when on other duties at the instance of the government), fifty days would cover all the occasions when a deputy acted for me.'" As will be seen by glancing at the "Canadian Legal Directory," government as well as associations of the bench always held the judgment, learning and wisdom of Mr. Justice Gowan in high esteem. In 1857 the judges of the courts of Queen's Bench and Common Pleas, being empowered to associate a district judge with them in making certain provisions regarding fees, under the Common Law Procedure Act, elected Judge Gowan for that duty. The Act for assimilating the Canadian law of probate and administration to that of England, and providing for courts in every judicial district, required the appointment by the governor of three judges—a judge of one of the superior courts of common law, a judge of the court of chancery, and a county judge, to make rules and orders regulating procedure in these courts, and for carrying the provisions of the law into full effect-and Justice Burns, Vice-Chancellor Spragge and Judge Gowan were the three judges appointed for the purpose in August, 1858, and who subsequently framed and settled the orders which now regulate the courts. Sir James Macaulay thus wrote in regard to the services rendered by our subject in the work of the consolidation of the public statutes of the country: "I feel every confidence that a good work has been achieved and a desirable basis laid for future legislation; and for the able services rendered by Judge Gowan, the government, the legislature and the public, as well as myself, are indebted to him." In 1869 Judge Gowan was appointed chairman of the Board of County Judges, a body which regulates the procedure of the division courts and settles conflicting decisions, their orders having the force of law throughout the province. After the confederation of the provinces it became necessary to assimilate and consolidate the criminal laws of the several provinces. This,

under the auspices of Sir John A. Macdonald, was accomplished in 1869, in a series of enactments, by the parliament of Canada, which are now law. In the preparation of this important consolidation, Judge Gowan co-operated throughout. In 1871 Judge Gowan was appointed, with four other justices, Adam Wilson, J. W. Gwynne, S. H. Strong and C. S. Patterson, a commission to enquire into the constitution and jurisdiction of the several courts of law and equity, etc. In August, 1873, Judge Gowan, the Hon. C. D. Day and Judge Antoine Polette were appointed royal commissioners to investigate certain charges against the ministry in connection with the Canada Pacific Railway contract. Justice Gowan has always shown rare energy and earnestness, conscientious and scrupulous care—and an unflinching firmness, based upon conviction—and his career as a judge was remarkable for its brilliancy, industry, and usefulness. From the "Canadian Portrait Gallery" we learn that "Judge Gowan has always taken great interest in the cause of education, being intimately connected with the provincial school system for over thirty-six years, as chairman of the Board of Public Instruction from its formation, and for many years past as chairman of the Senior High School Board of the County of Simcoe, finding time, amidst his other engagements, to perform satisfactorily and acceptably, the duties of these honourary and honourable positions." "In early life," says the same authority, "and up to a short time before his appointment, the judge was a frequent writer for the lay press in Toronto." In religion our subject is an Episcopalian. He was married in July, 1853, to Anna, daughter of the late Rev. S. B. Ardagh, rector of Barrie, and incumbent of Shanty Bay. Ardraven, on the outskirts of Barrie, beautifully situated, and fronted by Kempenfeldt Bay, is the residence of our distinguished subject. He was called to the Senate on the 29th January, 1885, and the press of the country, and many of those politically opposed to the administration, complimented Sir John Macdonald upon his choice of the senator. An eminent lawyer from Halifax, N.S., and a member of the Opposition, concluded his speech in support of the Bill enabling a wife to appear against her husband in the event of his neglecting to provide her with the necessaries of life, with the following reference to Senator Gowan :- "I think that this Bill, and two others which we have had before us, already go to show the wisdom exhibited by the Government in placing the honourable member from Barrie in this chamber. From his position my hon-ourable friend learns what the defects are which the judges, who are now on the bench, find in the criminal law, and he is able from his own experience to recognise defects that have existed for some time. Legislation such as he has introduced is just the kind of work which is calculated to give this Senate weight and respectability through the country, and I think that measures of this sort do us a great deal more service in public estimation than debates, extending no matter how many weeks, on the general question of our utility." "A Member of the Ontario Bar" published for private circu. lation "The Addresses and Proceedings in connection with the Retirement from the Bench of His Honour Judge James Robert Gowan," giving selections from printed matter touching his career. His Honour, it may be said, had retired from the bench on the 24th Oct., 1883, after having been engaged in the judicial office for nearly forty years.

McGuire, Francis J., Trenton, was

he has he he sch can h

or hi

ntell

horo

oyed

evera ipon ot pl

om

ions

mbiti

fe, pr

Canada

hen n ouring

f unpa

mploy

ne of

reater etermi Ve find

ient, a

ommen

ith wh

ntitled

us sei

ennedy

nbroker

ight w

never

ould do

e prom

omitable

templary

knowle

ss, his a

rved, so born in the County of Leitrim, Ireland, about the year 1820. His father was James McGuire, and his mother's maiden name Ellen McRann. Miss McRann belonged to an old Irish family, and the McGuires came originally from Fermanagh county. Mr. McGuire was educated in Drumsna, Leitrim county, and at sixteen years of age sailed for Canada, and arrived in Quebec in 1841, where he stayed for a year as clerk in a grocery store, and then moved to Kingston, where he remained for a short period, as a clerk in the same trade. Thence he removed to Douro, Asphodel, and Percy, and taught school in these places. His teaching extended over a period of four years. He then settled in Trenton, and opened a general store, and continued business until 1875, when he was appointed collector of customs at Trenton; which position he has retained ever since. He was commissioned ensign and quartermaster in the militia, and was appointed justice of the peace in 1862. He is a school trustee, and at the present time chairman, of the Board of Separate Schools of Trenton. He was one of the original members of a syndicate for procuring the erection of a dam above Trenton, the facilities of which would be of immense advantage to the town. The dam is now in course of erection. He is a member of St. Patrick's Society, and has travelled through Canada and the United States. In religion he is a Roman catholic, and has been for several gears church warden. His official position as debarred him from taking a very promment part in politics. He married, in 1854, annie J. McElheran, who was a native of Cushendall, County Antrim, Ireland, and laughter of Alex. McElheran. By this lady he has four boys and one girl. His wife has been for some time dead. In private He Mr. McGuire is very genial, and has numerous friends.

acing the

in this

ny hon-

defects

now on and he is recognise ne time.

ed is just

d to give

, it may

on the engaged

years.

n, was reland.

James

name longed

Guires county.

ımsna,

ars of n Que-

year

then

nained

same

o, As-

ool in over a

led in

and .

e was nton ;

ince.

rter-

jus-

chool

man

ren-

iem-

ereccili-

van-

urse

ck's

ada

is a

through sures of Kennedy, Warring, Toronto. Like many others who have made their mark in ervice in ktending Canada, the subject of our sketch, Warring Kennedy, is an Irishman, having been born general mber of n the County Down. When young in years e was taken to Londonderry, and placed in te circudings in school, where he received a good English alucation sufficient to qualify him for a busi-less career. He commenced life in a dry rom the Robert ted matoods store in the town of Kilrea, but at the ppiration of his apprenticeship he went to Belfast, where he lived many years, earning or himself a reputation second to none for ntelligence, individual application to and horough knowledge of business, and enoyed such an exemplary character that everal positions of trust were conferred pon him. Finding that the harvest was ot plenteous, and that labourers were far om few, Mr. Kennedy's natural inclinaions, animated as they were by the laudable mbition of securing a prize in the race of ie, prompted him in 1857 to emigrate to lanada. He arrived in Toronto at a time hen not only Canada itself, but the neighouring States, were passing through a crisis unparalleled distress, and the prospects of mployment were far from cheering. ne of Mr. Kennedy's stamp, however, the reater the difficulties the stronger was his etermination to completely overcome them. e find him, therefore, at the earliest moent, accepting a situation by no means ommensurable, either in salary or position, ith what his business qualifications fairly ntitled him to expect. The opportunity hus seized has never been lost, and Mr. ennedy's subsequent career has been one nbroken success. "Doing with all his ight what his hand has found to do," never putting off till to-morrow what he old do to-day," he has more than fulfilled e promise of his early youth. His in-mitable energy, his untiring industry, his emplary character, his devoted attention knowledge of, and regularity in his busiis, his abnegation of self in his studious al for the interests of those whom he red, soon attracted the notice of commercial men. His services were eagerly sought for, and he received rapid advancement, passing in succession from one employer to a more lucrative appointment under another, until at last we hear of him promoted to a yearly salary of four thousand dollars. Having climbed to the top of the ladder in the subordinate grades, Mr. Kennedy, in 1869, secured the co-operation and partnership of two of his former fellowworkers (in the store of John Macdonald & Co.), and with them established in Toronto a wholesale business, known as the firm of Samson, Kennedy & Gemmel (now Samson, Kennedy & Co.), and such is the estimation it is held in, and so great the confidence reposed in its management by retail merchants, that in less than ten years the annual sales amounted to nearly one million dollars, a result as unprecedented as it is well merited. Mr. Kennedy has been a candidate for civic honours, and been repeatedly solicited to accept nomination to a seat in parliament by the party of Reform. He was elected an alderman in 1871, and polled the largest vote on record up to that time in favour of any Toronto city alderman. He unsuccessfully contested the mayoralty in January, 1877. The unsolicited requisition to allow himself to be put in nomination, and the amount of support he received, notwithstanding the fact that he did not personally canvess a vote, clearly indicate the public opinion entertained of the man. High as Mr. Kennedy's position is in the business world, he occupies no less a conspicuous place in the circle of religion, for, irrespective of being a leading member of the Methodist church, he is also a local preacher, class-leader and trustee, and was superintendent of the Elm Street Sabbathschool from 1866 till 1878. He is also on several conference committees, and was a delegate in 1874, 1878 and 1882, from the Toronto district to the General Conference of the Methodist church, and took a prominent part in the debates of that important legislative body. He was also a member of the Toronto Annual Conference in 1884 and 1885. He was, in 1872, elected president of the Irish Protestant Benevolent Society; in 1873, on the organization of the Commercial Travellers' Association of Canada, he was chosen as its first president, a position to which he was for several years subsequently elected, and is now an honorary director. He is also a trustee of the Necropolis and the Mount Pleasant Cemetery, a director of the Upper Canada Bible Society and minute secretary of the board.

Kennedy is also a member of the board of management of the House of Industry; is a director of the Saskatchewan Land and Homestead Company, and was for several years a director on the board of the Real Estate Loan and Debenture Company. He is a good public speaker, indeed, few commercial men have the facility for expressing themselves in public possessed by him. Mr. Kennedy married the daughter of his first employer, the late James Macaw. A long period of usefulness is, we trust, still before him, and should he decide on entering the political arena of public life, and turn his attention to matters of "state, it is not too much to expect for him a success equal to that he has already achieved in the "church" Methodist, and in the "world" of commerce. In a condensed sketch it is impossible to do adequate justice to or point out the many lessons to be learned from a study of the character of a man of Mr. Warring Kennedy's calibre. Suffice it to say that his name and example will ever shine forth to the immigrants, salesmen, shop-boys and young men of the future, as a brilliant beacon, towering high above and always before them in their voyage through life, warning them by the brightness of its light to give a wide berth to the "rocks" of "idleness," the "shoals" of "procrastination," and the "troubled waters" of dishonesty; encouraging them to steer through the calm seas of industry, diligence, perseverance and integrity, a continuance on which course will, after carrying them safely past all dangers, guide them at length into the haven of success. In a biography of self-made men, Mr. Kennedy fully deserves a distinguished place; he may truly be said to have been "the architect of his own fortune;" gratifying as this reflection must be to him, it pales before the consciousness he enjoys that through the whole of his career he has carried himself without reproach, and the knowledge he possesses that among Toronto's many worthy citizens no one to-day stands more deservedly honoured, respected and esteemed by his fellow-men than the young apprentice boy of a dry goods store in an obscure Irish town.

Hall, John Sharp, was born in Scotland in 1797, and settled in Montreal in 1830. In Edinburgh he occupied the position of writer to the signet; but on coming to Canada he first taught school, and afterwards took up the profession of accountant, which he practised for many years. He was an ardent lover of the temperance cause, and a hard worker among the Sons of Temperance of the Province of Quebec. The Grand Division elected him as its Grand Scribe, and for over twenty years he filled He was also a Past Grand this office. Worthy Patriarch of the same organization. In 1882 he was elected by the National Division of the Sons of Temperance of North America, at the session held at Concord, New Hampshire, Most Worthy Associate, and occupied this position for two years. At this time he was the oldest Son of Temperance attending the National Division He died at Bedford, Quebec, at the residence of his son, J. M. Hall, on the 30th September, 1885, at the advanced age of eighty-seven years and eight months, and his body was interred in Mount Royal Cemetery, Montreal.

De St. Just, Hon. Luc Letellier, the late ill-starred Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec, was born at Rivière Ouelle, on the 12th of May, 1820. Like most of our Canadian public men of note, M. Letellier studied law, and practised his profession for a time, after which he entered political life. He was elected for the first time, in 1850, to the parliament of old Canada. Не таз defeated at the general election of 1852, and again in 1857. Three years later he was elected for Granville Division to the Legislative Council, where he sat till the union. In 1863, he became minister of agriculture in the Sandfield Macdonald administration, and this office he retained till the following year. In May, 1867, upon the completion of the confederation, he was called to the Senate, by proclamation for the division of Granville. For the following six years, he was leader of the opposition in that body. In the Liberal administration, which came into office in 1873, he became minister of agriculture; but towards the close of the following year, he resigned his portfolio, and was appointed lieutenantgovernor of Quebec, in room of the late Hon. René Edouard Caron, deceased. He had not long occupied the position of lieutenant-governor, before he began to find himself more or less at variance with certain members of the local government, especially with the premier, M. De Boucherville. The variance originally arose, partly from the different points of view, from which ther contemplated public affairs generally, and each seems to have been of opinion that the other was trying to usurp functions foreign to his office. M. Boucherville, on several occasions, showed a disposition to substitute the power of the executive, for that of the them all the parties of Marcrisis. world missed new of this co then. bec, as at las minion power.

either

though

violen

ordina

that h

of his

by no

lieute

good d

ness o

premi

the fol and th opposi depriv had no trough went a isters nor-ge reterre Downi vice of Letelli ground ness w sure by the two sure of dismiss majori

office, heart-b Ske
ator Sk Hall, i
land, I
the lat Englan
only da
the Ch

too, in

Letelli

ward t

at the

Letelli

ordinary courts of law. It is fair to add f Temthat he was urged on to this course by some The of his colleagues, and that the offence was Grand by no means confined to him alone. The he filled lieutenant-governor all along manifested a Grand good deal of firmness, and used great plainization. National f North ness of speech in his conferences with the premier. By degrees, the difference between them became wider and wider, and ere long, oncord; al the members of the administration were sociate. parties to the dispute. Finally, on the 24th) years. of Tem-March, 1878, matters were brought to a crisis. On that day it was announced to the ivision. world that the lieutenant-governor had dishe resimissed his cabinet, and was about to form a ae 30th new one. Such a hurricane has not been in _age_of this country for many a day, as there was then. The storm soon spread beyond Quehs, and Royal bec, and sped from Halifax to Vancouver. at last the question was taken to the Doellier, minion Parliament, but the liberals were in ernor of power, and they could not be expected to on the either censure or punish M. Letellier, alof our though he had unwittingly erred, and done etellier violence to constitutional principles. But sion for the following year the liberals were ousted, cal life. and the party who had declared when in n 1850. opposition that if they could they would Не таз deprive him of his lieutenant-governorship, 52. and had now come into power. The question was he was trought up in the House of Commons, and Legiswent against the lieutenant-governor. Minunion. isters advised his dismissal, but the goverculture nor-general, Lord Lorne, hesitated, and then inistra• reterred the whole case to Downing street. ill the Downing street wrote back, "Take the adon the vice of your ministers;" and forthwith M. ie was Letellier was expiated to party spite. The on, for ground for dismissal was that his "usefullowing ness was gone," in view of the votes of cention in sure by the two houses of Parliament; and ration. the two houses of Parliament voted the cenpecame sure on the lieutenant-governor for having ds the dismissed his advisers while they had a ned his majority in the Assembly. It was made out, enanttoo, in some way, that the course of M. ne late Letellier was dictated by his desire to for-He f lieuward the interest of the liberals in Quebec o find at the expense of the conservatives. Letellier was, therefore, thrown out of certain heart-broken, in 1883.

Skead, Hon. James. The late Senator Skead, of Ottawa, was born at Moresby Hall, in the parish of Moresby, Cumberland, England. He was the eldest son of the late William Skead, of Whitehaven, England, and his mother was Mary Selkirk, only daughter of the Rev. James Selkirk, of the Church of England, Whitehaven. Mr.

office, and disgraced. He died, some say, ecially

e. The

m the

h they

v, and

at the

oreign

everal

stitute

of the

Skead was educated in his native town, at the rectory, and came to Canada in 1832. The family settled at Bytown (the present City of Ottawa), and, as there was very excellent promise then in the timber trade, Mr. Skead, after a time, engaged in this business, and he may now be regarded as one of the pioneer lumber merchants of the Ottawa. He married February 1st, 1842, Rosena Mackey, daughter of James Mackey, Mackey's Island, County Down, Ireland. Upon the accomplishment of confederation, in 1867, he was called to the Senate by royal proclamation. Early in 1881 he resigned, but was re-appointed on the 24th of December of the same year. Senator Skead was a man of great business capacity, and during his lifetime he established very wide business connections. He served as president of the Ottawa Board of Trade; of the City of Ottawa Agricultural Society, and of the Ottawa Liberal Conservative Association. He was likewise, at one time, president of the Ottawa Agricultural Insurance Company; president of the Upper Ottawa Steamboat Company; president of the Dominion Board of Trade; a director of the Ottawa Association of Lumber Manufacturers; of the Madawaska River Improvement Co.; and of the Caughnawaga Ship Canal Company. He was vice-president of the Canada Central Railway Company, and of the Montreal and Ottawa City Junction Railway. In 1874 he was elected president of the Liberal-Conservative Association, which met in Foronto, on 23rd September of that year. He at one time served as alderman for the City of Ottawa; and also was president of the Agricultural and Arts Association of Ontario and of the Ottawa St. George's Society. In 1876 he was presented by the latter body, with a handsome gold cross of St. George, for his hearty services in promoting the affairs of the association. In 1876 he was appointed a judge of the timber department at the United States Centennial Exhibition. He had considerable parliamentary experience, having represented Rideau Division in the Legislative Council of old Canada from 1862 to the date of union. The Senator was a man of splendid business abilities, and in every walk of life his individuality and influence were felt. He died 5th July, 1884, leaving a wife and six

Macqueen, Frederick William, Woodstock, was born in Woodstock, Ontario, on the 22nd of May, 1850. He is the eldest son of the late Honourable Judge Macqueen, of Woodstock. With respect to his paternal ancestors we find the following, which, we reproduce : " David Shank Macqueen was the scion of an old and distinguished Scotch family. The Isle of Skye, from which his father came with his regiment, still retains affection for a home of proportions in her local history. Dr. Johnson, we are told by Boswell, spoke of the Rev. Dr. Macqueen as the most learned man in North Britain, and one of the finest gentlemen of the day. Judge Macqueen was born at Quebec, 12th of September, 1811, and was the son of Captain Alexander Macqueen, by Grace, daughter of the Honourable Thomas Fraser. He received his education at Cornwall, under the Rev. Dr. Urquhart, and afterwards moved to Brockville to study law. This was in the stormy days of 1837-38. From the Report of Services for those years we extract the following: - While pursuing studies at Brockville, the rebellion of 1837-38 broke out in Lower Canada, and Mr. Macqueen was sent on January 2nd, in a batteau to Cornwall, with a detachment of men in charge of arms for the Glengarry militia. Upon his return from this difficult and hazardous service, he was appointed lieutenant in the troop of cavalry commanded by Capt. Harvey, which he had assisted in raising. He was then sent to Dickenson's Landing to bring up the headquarters of the 32nd and 83rd regiments, under the command of Captains Markham and Colquhoun. This duty having been done, he assisted, under the authority of Sir John Colborne, commander of the forces, in raising a company of the Queen's Loyal Borderers, in which regiment he was gazetted captain in January, 1838, and served in that corps at Brockville for six months. While in Brockville certain suspicious looking vessels, crowded with men, having appeared off the town, apparently making for Prescott, Mr. Macqueen volunteered as a - private marine on board Her Majesty's Steamer Experiment, Lieut. Fowell, to follow them, and his services having been accepted, he was on board when she opened fire at Prescott upon the before mentioned vessels, and upon the steamer United States. The enemy having landed at the Windmill, Mr. Macqueen went on shore, and volunteered on the advance guard of the left wing of the attacking force, under the command of the late Col. R. D. Fraser, which advance guard received the first fire of the enemy from behind the stone walls surrounding the butternut orchard at that place.' This division compelled the surrender of the rebel commander, who handed his sword to Mr. (then Capt.) Macqueen, trophy of the victory which is still in the possession of the family. Shortly after this Mr. Macqueen was called to the bar, and after a brief practice as a barrister, received the appointment of Judge of the County of Ox. ford." Speaking of the death of this worthy gentleman, which occurred June 6th, 1885 an eloquent and accurate pen says: "It is unnecessary for us to dwell upon his long services of forty years as the chief magistrate of this county. They are the most endearing mementoes of a life long to be remembered. On Tuesday he was laid at rest in the quiet little churchyard of Hunting. It was a glorious day of sunshine above, and as those who knew and loved the kind old man looked across the valley to his old home on the hilltop, nestled among the trees he loved so well, one could not but think such a day was in accord with the close of the life of him who had passed away. Judge Macqueen was married to Fanny Maria Harriet, second daughter of James Muttleberry, M.D., inspector general of Army Hospitals, England, in June, 1847, who survived him, together with two sons and four daughters." His son, the subject of this memoir, received a finished education. He first attended the Trinity School at Port Hope, and afterwards entered the University of Trinity College, Toronto. When about twenty-two, he left college and began the study of law in the office of the Honourable Edward Blake, Toronto, where he remained till 1876. Owing then to his appointment to the clerkship of the First Division Court for the County of Oxford, and ill health, he discontinued his legal studies. In 1870 he joined the Queen's Own Rifles, and served as private in Trinity College Company, No. 8, for three years. After his departure from Toronto, he joined No. 6 Company, 22nd Battalion "Oxford Rifles." as a private, and shortly afterwards was appointed staff-sergeant. In 1876 he was promoted to the lieutenancy of No. 1 company, and in 1878 he obtained the captaincy. Since his promotion he has always been specially mentioned in the annual reports of the Canadian militia. Mr. Macqueen is president of the Woodstock Amateur Athletic Association, and was one of the principal organizers of that body. He is likewise secretary and treasurer of the Woodstock Rifle Association, and was for five years a director of the Western District Rifle Association, at London. He was for two years financier of the A.O.U.W., and has been receiv Freen terest he is it welfar all, ir By an and ir friends operat Dr. Ba and he return month many. tion wa Macqu in rifle copalia Oshawa on Mar Higgin ness in Canada three y In 186 Higgin School, proved leaving store, a store w name c they ha since. deputy: represer years.

Hig

of the S office th been ele very his master I an Oddf a very fe there are who can and exp is a no subjects. tious M Reforme 1874, Lo lady is settlers, dian. I dent, and ${\tt Committ}$

ing the

receiver from 1882 to the present. He is a Freemason. He has always taken an interest in politics, being a conservative. But he is independent of parties, and looks to the welfare of the country as the end for which all, irrespective of divisions, should strive. By an accident in 1883 he lost his sight, and in accordance with the wishes of his friends, went to London, England, where an operation was performed by the celebrated Dr. Bader. The operation was successful. and he fully recovered his sight, and before returning to Canada he spent about five months on the continent, chiefly in Germany. To show with what skill the operation was performed, we might say that Mr. Macqueen has since been able to take part in rifle matches. In religion he is an Episcopalian.

anded

en. 🖫

n the

r this

after

d the

f 0x.

orthy

1885.

It is

long

nagis-

st en-

e re-

rest

ting-

shine

l the

o his

r the

but

· the ssed

d to

r of

eral 847,

sons

ct of

Port

ni-

hen

gan

bur-

he

ap.

ies.

les,

Higginbotham, John William, Oshawa, was born in Manchester, England, on March 14th, 1853. His father was John Higginbotham, who carried on a drug business in Manchester. The family came to Canada in 1856, when our subject was about three years of age, and settled in Toronto. In 1865 they moved to Bowmanville. Higginbotham was educated in the Model School, Toronto, under Dr. Carlyle, and proved himself a good scholar. In 1873, on leaving school, he entered his father's drug store, and business succeeding, a branch store was opened at Oshawa, under the name of John Higginbotham & Son, and they have carried on the drug business ever since. J. W. Higginbotham was second deputy reeve of Oshawa in 1882, and has represented his ward in the council for five years. He is most worthy grand president of the Sons of England, which is the highest office that body can confer, and as he has been elected twice in succession, it speaks very highly for his popularity. He is a master Mason of Lebanon Lodge; and also an Oddfellow. Mr. Higginbotham possesses a very fertile brain, and a ready tongue, and there are few men in his section of country who can cope with him in arranging ideas and expressing them with such effect. He is a noted speaker on various important subjects. Mr. Higginbotham is a conscientious Methodist, and an uncompromising Reformer. He married on August 24th, 1874, Lorinda Hoar, of Bowmanville. lady is descended from a family of early settlers, being herself a native-born Cana-He is a Sunday-school superintendent, and has been chairman of the Relief Committee, which has done good work during the past winter. He lives for others more than for himself, and is emphatically, a good man, and enjoys the respect and good will of all who know him.

Hambly, Philip Hele, Major 49th battalion, Hastings Rifles, Belleville, was born at Plymouth, Devon., England, on the 2nd Oct., 1835. His parents, Philip and Mary Ann Hambly, came to Canada with their family in 1848. Mr. Hambly, senior, bought out the business of the late Henry Corby, and by the application of persistent energy, soon extended the capabilities of the establishment. Hambly's bread soon came to be a household word, and the prosperity of the institution was thereafter assured. He built a gravel road, from Belleville to Napanee, but he was, it is said, too particular and over-scrupulous in the fulfilment of his contract, and lost money. He it was who built the sewers of Belleville, and he was part purchaser of the steamship City of the Bay. This boat did not pay. However, it was a bold venture, and those engaged in the enterprise deserved credit. In consequence of an injury, he retired from business in 1865, leaving the establishment to his son Philip. The mother of P. H. Hambly, is now in her eighty-fourth year, with eyesight and hearing as good as most young women possess, and her intellect is as keen as ever. She can put tea before a visitor, with bread and butter of her own making, and clotted Devonshire cream of her own scalding, as handily as any Devonshire maiden of twenty. She was born in Cornwall, England, and his father in Devonshire. They are both now living in their home at Corbyville. Our subject was educated at Plymouth, England. He joined the old He joined the old Belleville rifle company at its inception, and attended the military school at Toronto, under Colonel Peacock, and took a first-class certificate. He went to Amherstburg during the Fenian raid of 1864 in his old company, under the command of Major Lévesconte. Col. Brown was then lieutenant, and the present minister of customs was ensign. Our subject remained at Amherstburg for four months, acting as drill instructor; and in 1868, having been promoted ensign, went to Aultsville with his company. He was promoted to the captaincy of No. 1 company, on the formation of the 49th battalion. He is a Royal Arch Mason, Eureka being his mother lodge, of which he is past master, and on retiring from the chair, was presented with a very elegant past master's jewel. He is a member of the Church of England. On the 10th November, 1865, he married Mary Ann, eldest daughter of Henry Mayo, of Belleville, and the fruits of the union are seven boys. At the brigade camp in 1883, he was presented with a handsome portrait of himself, in oil, by The following extracts we take from the speech delivered by Major Hambly in reply to the address presented to him on the occasion * The material of which the Canadian volunteer force is composed is, doubtless, second to none the world can produce; but under the present system of organization, it fails to secure that esprit which would result from discipline, and there can be no discipline while officers continue to be so dependent on the inclination of their men, when called upon for duty. The necessity for frequent resort to humiliating persuasion, places the officer under such a compliment as to render reproof for indiscipline out of the question. I have heard officers, in attempting a muster for commanding officer's parade, receive the most insolent abuse. Authority will say, why didn't the injured individual have the offender brought before ma? The officer answers, 'Well, the fact is, he happens to be a neighbour of mine, and exercises some influence among the company, and if I attempt a punishment, it will be the last time he and his And so the friends will turn out with me.' matter ends. The effect of such a proceeding on those who know of it, is, of course, so bad as to need no comment. What should we do? Well, I consider that, as the state protects every man in the pursuit of his avocation in life, every man owes to the state, in return, a certain amount of military duty, and it should be given, whether he likes it There is no necessity for exacting or not. any unreasonable period for drill. Four months is sufficient to render any man of ordinary intelligence competent in drill and the performance of duty, such as guard, etc., but these four months should be continuous, and in brigade. Having served his four months, he should have a written discharge, and be relieved from further duty, except in the event of absolute necessity, in which event, having kept his commanding officer notified of his change of residence, should he make one, he might be held available, and called upon for duty. would be no necessity, perhaps, for increasing the annual vote. Let a quota be gathered from each district, in such numbers as the vote would permit of. The men could be balloted for duty, which, perhaps, would be the least objectionable mode. They might be warned for duty, three months in advance of the gathering. So gathered and drilled these men, whenever called upon in after life, could be brought together in a few days, fit for the most serious duty. They would go home disciplined, entitled to the respect of their fellow countrymen. and having a proper respect for themselves. conscious and proud of the knowledge they had acquired. No one could taunt them with having misspent their time, or with having been enticed from home through their vanity for a uniform, or from any childish craving for novelty. They would have gone, as a matter of duty, without any nonsense about it, and no father would object to his son's performing this duty. Hav. ing acquired habits of obedience and system, he would, in the great majority of instances. return home a better son, and an instrument for the dissemination of a properly understood regard for the force." These are wise, practical and timely words, and we trust that they will come for perusal before the eyes of many an officer and man in our militia service.

Farran, William Wallace, Clinton, was born on the 12th of Nov., 1834, in the township of Osnabruck, Stormont, Ontario. The precise locality of his birth is now called Farran's Point. He is a son of Charles C. Farran, who conducted flouring and grist mills. Mr. Farran had also engaged in farming, and in lumbering. He died in August, 1883, at the age of 75. He was born, like his son, at Farran's Point. Our subject was educated at the public school in his native place, at the Cornwall Grammar, and a High School in New York state. He was first employed at seventeen years of age, under Tom S. Rubidge, C. E., on the surveys of the Grand Trunk Railway, and was thus engaged for about three years. He then acted under William Ellis, C.E., on the construction of the Grand Trunk Railway at Prescott, where he had charge, as resident engineer, of a section; subsequently, when that section was completed, he had charge of another section at Mallorytown, west of Brockville, on the Grand Trunk Railway. After completion of this work in the fall of 1856, he was employed under George G. Dixon, chief engineer of the Brockville and Ottawa Railroad, as resident engineer, in charge of the construction of a section at Carleton Place. In February, 1858, he was employed by the firm of Wilson, Row & Co., contractors, as engineer, to construct about one hundred and twenty-four miles of county gravel roads, in the County of Huron, and this enterprise occupied about three years. Mr. Farran was one of the after Count hy the then d of dec he con einer ouilt i operati vis, of Jarvis) ventur as the was the the par sold on was ap ton, Co Cooper 1866, h of Clin succeed become mayor term.

ran, M become & Co., our sub
he join private of Farr gaged it is a mer
married
daughte
Landing
Mr. Far

any you for it ha

Snid

Macphe

ton for

manufa

M. PP., in the (Riding of 19th Ju Son of Face Bing is descert came at in the Sonider, temigrate county, he settle his thrif first speculators, in 1861, in oil lands, after the discovery of petroleum in the County of Lambton the previous year, and by the aid of an aged American, who had then discovered a process, as he thought, of deodorizing the coal oil or petroleum, he commenced the construction of an oil ennery. There were three oil refineries built in 1861, and these three went into operation at the same time. George S. Jarvis, of Cornwall (son of the late Judge Jarvis), was our subject's partner in this venture. This was a difficult undertaking, as the manufacture of Canadian petroleum was then in its infancy. In November, 1864, the partners abandoned the oil springs and sold out. On the 1st of December, 1864, he was appointed division court clerk at Clinton, County of Huron, by the late Judge Cooper, and this office he has since held. In 1866, he served as councillor in the village of Clinton, and was reeve of Clinton for the succeeding six years. After Clinton had become incorporated as a town, he was mayor for part of a year to fill an unexpired term. In November, 1882, he joined D. F. Macpherson and C. E. Hovey, in the Clinton foundry and agricultural implement manufactory, the firm being known as Farran, Macpherson & Hovey, they having become successors of Glasgow, Macpherson & Co., established in 1862. In this business our subject is now engaged. In May, 1883, he joined J. P. Tisdall in the business of private banking in Clinton, under the style of Farran & Tisdall, and is also still engaged in private banking. In religion he is a member of the Church of England. married on the 24th January, 1867, Ellen, daughter of Dr. Archibald, Dickenson's Landing, County Stormont. The life of Mr. Farran must be stimulating reading to any young man with ability and ambition; for it has been a very successful one.

lled

ther

uty.

tled

ien.

ves,

hey

hem

with

ugh

any

ould

any ob-

Iav-

em,

ces,

ient

der-

rise.

rust

the

our

ton,

the trio.

lled

rles

and

rced

died

was

Our

ol in

nar,

He

age,

sur-

was

hen

con-

at lent l

hen

e of

of

vay.

ll of

G.

and

, in

was

uct

iles

· of

out

Snider, Elias Weber-Bingeman, M.PP., St. Jacob's, Ontario, representative in the Ontario House of Assembly for the Riding of North Waterloo, was born on the 19th June, 1842, in the town of Waterloo, Waterloo county, Ontario. He is the eldest son of Elias Snider and Hannah, his wife, nee Bingeman. Our subject, we may say, is descended of an old Swiss family that came at an early date to try their fortunes in the new land of America. Jacob S. Suider, the grandfather of E. W. B. Snider, emigrated from Pennsylvania to Waterloo county, Ontario, in the year 1806. Here he settled down on a farm, which, under his thrift and intelligence, maintained his family in comfort. Young Snider, the grandson, our subject, was sent to the common school in the town of Waterloo, and being a diligent boy of good intellectual capacity, he was equipped with a sound education when his school days came to an end. Some time after this he turned his attention to milling at German Mills, and he continued at such occupation with very fair success till 1871 when he moved to St. Jacob's, where he still continued his milling operations. ability, industry and untiring attention to business have borne Mr. Snider their fruits, and he takes a very prominent place in the occupation which he has chosen. On the 19th of April, 1864, he married Nancy Weber, daughter of David Weber, of Waterloo township. Mr. Snider has, from early years, we have been informed, interested himself in politics, and given serious and careful attention to public questions. At the bye-election for North Waterloo, in Waterloo, in June, 1881, he offered himself for the legislature, and was elected. His course met the expectations of his constituents, and he was re-elected in 1883. He is a careful, clear-headed representative, and his opinion always carries weight in the House, and is received with respect by every one. He is a Liberal, and in thorough accord with the Honourable Oliver Mowat as leader of Chapleau, Hon. Joseph Adolphe, LL.D., Q.C., P.C., Secretary of State for Canada, was born at Ste. Therese de Blainville, Terrebonne, province of Quebec, on the 9th of November, 1840. M. Chapleau's ancestors came from France, and were early settlers in the seigniory of Terrebonne. He received his education at the colleges of Terrebonne and St. Hyacinthe, and was a very brilliant lad at school. After having completed his education, he was entered as a student-at-law. He applied himself very diligently to the study of his profession, and more than one who observed the handsome, commanding, silvery-tongued student, predicted laurels for him in the legal profession. Others said, "the legal profession will not hold him for itself. The public sphere alone will satisfy such abilities and such ambition as he possesses." In 1861 he was called to the bar of Lower Canada, and twelve years later was created a Queen's counsellor. He was the last president of the Institut Canadien Français of Montreal. He was created Commander of the Legion of Honour, France, on the 10th November, 1882, and Commander of the Order of St. Gregory the Great (Roman) in 1881. He was elected by acclamation a member of the Quebec legislature for the County of Terrebonne in September, 1867, and entered the administration of that province on 27th February, 1873, as solicitor-general, which position he held till September of the following year. The Ouimet government then resigned, and he with it. On the 27th January, 1876, he entered the De Boucherville government as provincial secretary and registrar. This position he held until the dismissal of the government by Lieutenant-Governor Letellier in 1878. He then became leader of the Conservative opposition, and was ever a terror to the political existence of M. Joly. Some of the most eloquent, fiery and able speeches-that have ever been heard in any of our provincial legislatures was delivered by M. Chapleau against the Ronges, their principles, and chief of all, against their leader. He was not alone powerful as an orator, but he was consummate in finesse, in the art of managing, holding together, and making his way through dangerous and labyrinthine places. Joly could not stand against such a man. We are in the habit of looking upon M. Joly and his Rouge following as victims of the Conservative bias of the Legislative But notwithstanding that, the action of the Legislative Council was the immediate cause of M. Joly's downfall, the overthrow of the Rouges, the man who undermined that party, discredited it before the country, and made its existence impossible, was J. A. Chapleau. During the nineteen months of M. Joly's administration, M. Chapleau never lost a day during and between the sessions of the House, in his vigorous denunciation of M. Letellier's coup d'etat. He overran the province, attending hundreds of meetings and carrying dismay into the very strongholds of the Liberal party, and during the whole of that period he never lost one of his followers in spite of all the temptations that were unceasingly offered to them. When the Rouges fell, Lieutenant-Governor Robitaille, who had succeeded the deposed M. Letellier St. Just, called upon M. Chapleau to form an administration. He remained premier and minister of agriculture and public works until 1882, when his health became so poor that he was obliged to throw the corroding cares of leadership off his shoulders. resigned, and M. Mousseau succeeded him as He then entered the Privy premier. Council, as secretary of state for Canada, succeeding M. Mousseau, who had succeeded him in the premiership. In July, 1884, he was appointed a commissioner to proceed to British Columbia for the purpose of investigating and reporting upon Chinese immigration to Canada. M. Chapleau has not devoted his time exclusively to politics, but has been connected with several private enterprises. He was, among other like offices, a director of the Laurentides Railway Company, and of Le Credit Foncier du Bas Canada. He is a director of the Pontiac and Pacific Junction Railway, and the vice. president of Le Credit Foncier Franco-Cana. dien. He was at one time a professor of criminal jurisprudence, and he now holds the chair of international law in Laval University, Montreal section. He has the degree of doctor of civil law in that institution. Those who predicted a brilliant career for M. Chapleau, on seeing his deportment at college, and at a law student's desk, have not seen their forecastings unfulfilled. M. Chapleau is probably the ablest French ora. tor in the Dominion of Canada; while there are few men, perhaps there is not one man. in the House of Commons, whom the writer would rather listen to, talking in English M. Chapleau is a born orator. In than he. build, in the pose of his head, the sway of his body, he is an orator. But the greater qualifications lie behind these. He is eloquent, fiery, impassioned, fluent, and he has the knack of throwing a sentimentality through every sentence he utters. Add to this a clear. powerful, musical voice, every tone of which falls upon your ear distinctly as the note of a silver bell. M. Chapleau married in November, 1874, Marie Louise, daughter of Lieutenant-Colonel King, brigade major,

try :

of a

in th

atter

the

the

For

his s

the

duri

the

ing 1

durir

ed as port a

Tas a

ford.

in the

an as churc

licens

in Oct

Clinto

he wa

Clinto

1869.

таз с

superi

village

mith.

Donale

church

chairm

In Apı

ducted

church

remain ed the

of Han

at Seaf

High S

tion ser

while t

of Engl

he trav

North-

He has

McDon

of June

ter of J

the mar

are dead

book-ke

of Turn

His seco

Mather,

other bo at home.

clearly :

Sherbrooke. McDonald, Rev. Alex. Douglas, Seaforth, Province of Ontario, was born on Nov. 9th, 1832, in the citadel, Quebec. His parents were John and Isabella (Douglas) McDonald, and they died before our subject attained his eighth year. His father had been a bandmaster in the 79th Highland regiment, and was present at the battles of Corunna and Waterloo. The regiment was ordered home, and bandmaster McDonaid remained in Canada. In 1837 he joined the Queen's Own Rifles, under Col. Kingsmill, to aid in the suppression of McKenzie's rebellion. For his service in the army he received a pension of two shillings a day, and a grant of land, consisting of 200 acres, in the township of Clarke, County of Dur-Shortly after the rebellion was over, this worthy man died. Our subject had a brother seven years older than himself, and he died many years ago. After his fathers death, A. D. McDonald went into the coun.

gry and lived with a farmer, where he worked for his board till he was eighteen years of age. He then commenced his studies, in the face of almost every difficulty. He attended a school at Toronto, known as the Toronto Academy, under the charge of the late Professor Gale, Knox College. For some years after he had commenced his studies, he worked on the farm during the summer, and attended the academy during the winter. He taught school on the fourth concession of Blenheim, during the summers of 1853 and 1854; and during the summer of 1855 he was employed as a missionary, and preached at Westport and Newburgh. In 1856 and 1857 he was a missionary at Collingwood and Bradford. After graduating from Knox College in the spring of 1858, he was employed as an assistant of the late Dr. Bayne, of Knox church, Galt. During the summer he was licensed by the Hamilton presbytery, and in October of that year he went to preach at Clinton, Huron county. In April, 1859, he was ordained minister of Willis Church, Clinton, and remained there until April, 1869. During eight years of that time he was clerk of the Huron presbytery, and superintendent of common schools in the tillage of Clinton and township of Tuckermith. In August, 1869, the Rev. Mr. Mc-Donald was settled as pastor of Knox church, Elora, and acted for some years as chairman of the High School Board there. In April, 1879, he was called to, and was inducted as pastor of, the First Presbyterian church, Seaforth, and in this position he remains still. During the year 1883 he filled the position of moderator of the Synod of Hamilton and London; and he has acted at Seaforth for two years as chairman of the High School Board. In 1880 his congregation sent him on a trip to Great Britain, and while there he visited the best known cities of England, Ireland and Scotland. In 1882 he travelled through Manitoba and the North-West, going as far as Moose Jaw. He has been all his life a Presbyterian. Mr. McDonald was married at Paris on the 23rd of June, 1859, to Agnes Cavan, third daughter of James Cavan, of Paris. The fruit of the marriage is ten children, four of whom are dead. The eldest son is employed as book-keeper in the wholesale establishment of Turner, MacKeand & Co., Winnipeg. His second son is book-keeper with John Mather, merchant, Winnipeg, and three other boys, and the youngest, a girl, are still at home. The life of Rev. Mr. McDonald clearly shows what can be done through |

f in-

se im-

as not

s, but te en-

ttices.

Com-

ı Bas

c and

vice-

Cana-

or of holds

Uni-

ne de∙

stitu-

career

tment

have

h ora-

there

man,

writer nglish

r. In of his

ualiñ-

nent.

s the

rough

clear.

which

ote ci

ed in ter of ajor,

glas,

rn on

His

iglas)

subather

hland

les of ; was

pnaid

oined

lings

nzie's

y he dav,

cres, Dur-

over,

ad a

her s

М.

perseverance under adverse circumstances, and is a good example that might be followed with advantage by many of the young men now studying for the ministry.

Tanguay, Abbe, LL.D., F.R.S.C., etc., Ottawa, the celebrated French-Canadian genealogist, was born in Quebec in 1819. In 1839 he graduated at the Seminary of Que-Whilst at college he is said to have exhibited great diligence and painstaking, and these traits might be taken as the foreshadowing of what he was afterwards to become in the literary sphere. Our subject had for fellow-students E. J. Horan, afterwards bishop of Kingston, and the Honourable Joseph Cauchon, late lieutenant-governor of Manitoba. On the 14th May, 1843, he was ordained priest, and he afterwards became curé missionary of the parishes of St. Raymond and St. Basile, Portneuf county, Rimouski, St. Michel, of Bellechasse, and St. Henedine, County of Dorchester. The first of our subject's works saw the light a short time before his ordina-tion to the sacred ministry. "It had," says Benjamin Sulte, "reference to the correspondence of his confrere, M. Bolduc, a missionary in Oregon, and was entitled 'An Account of a Voyage from Quebec to Oregon, around South America.'" "Natural history," continues M. Sulte, "was a subject which had great attractions for him; he obtained many interesting things from different parts of the world bearing upon this science. One of his curiosities in this respect was the fossil of a sea-elephant, which he presented to the University of Laval. This fossil was found in 1853 in the field of a farmer at Rimouski, about 200 feet above the level of the St. Lawrence, and five miles in the interior of Pointe au Pere, of Rimouski. This fossil was sent to the exposition in Paris in 1855. There are many memorials of the activity and patriotism of Abbe Tanguay at Rimouski, of which we may particularly mention the magnificent church there to-day, used as the cathedral of the diocese; also the college there was founded by him, which, since 1855, has received a government subsidy, as well as the convent of the ladies of the congregation at that place." How well his tastes and instincts fitted him for the task which was to make his name so prominent in letters, we learn from the same authority. He says:-"One might naturally ask, when and how did the idea of a genealogical dictionary come to enter his mind? It was an idea which, we might say, was stamped in his mind when his existence began, which was in keeping with the peculiar taste and talent of his boyhood. When very young he was remarked for his curiosity and interest in finding out the names of his neighbours and their ancestors. These facts would be so impressed on his mind that in conversation he would, to the astonishment of all, correct errors made by aged persons with regard to the names of their relatives or ancestors of two or three generations back. This peculiar talent was combined with the qualification of being able to rapidly arrange catalogues, clear and concise, giving the information he had obtained; he was a statistician by nature. He was regarded by his family in the light of a walking dictionary, and he had the same reputation at college among his fellow-students. He was sent to the College of Ste. Anne de la Pocatiere, at the age of nine years, and was the youngest pupil there. It was the year when this educational institution was first opened. About twenty years from that time, it happened that a list of the pupils who first entered this college was required, and those interested in the matter were astonished to find that Abbe Tanguay possessed a complete list. It apppeared also, that during the three months which he spent at the college, he had made a note of many little circumstances, which were afterwards interesting in connection with the history of the college." The extent of the labour of this distinguished gentleman in the preparation of his Genealogical Dictionary of the old French-Canadian families, is simply amazing to contemplate. He has not alone visited every part of this continent whereto it was necessary to go for the verification of dates, births, marriages and other incidents, but he has been in Europe, where he conducted the most painstaking investigations in public and private libraries, baptismal registers and other church records. The dictionary is not intended to be a biography; it is entirely genealogical, containing reliable information in this respect. It is universal in its object, that is, it associates itself with all classes of people. The work, so far as it is advanced, embraces one hundred years in volume, the first which has been published. The second and third volumes will soon appear, comprising another period of sixty years, and these will be followed by three more volumes, which will extend to the present century; its completion is, therefore, being rapidly realized. The more the dictionary advances, the more interesting and important it will be. There are very few works of which so much can be

"It is natural that the Frenchpredicted. Canadian portion of the population," we quote again M. Sulte's words, which we cordially endorse, "of Canada should highly appreciate their countryman, Abbe Tanguay, to whom they are in so special a manner in. debted, his literary labours having been wholly directed to their benefit and honour. and it must be most gratifying to them as well as to their benefactor to find that the literary men of the English-speaking population of Canada, as well as of America, are not insensible to the important and valuable services, in a literary and historical point of view, which Abbe Tanguay has rendered to They view with envy, combined society. with admiration, the Genealogical Diction. ary, and their regret is that peculiar circumstances should exist which make it impossible for the dictionary to embrace generally the ancestry of the English, Irish and Scotch Canadian." Upon the following circumstances was the book planned and the author There were four distinct groups guided. constituting the French population found in Canada during the seventeenth century. viz., first, that of Acadia in 1604; second, of Quebec in 1608; third, of Three Rivers in 1635; and fourth, of Montreal in 1641. In 1700 the Canadians (embracing only three groups) had spread themselves over a large extent of country, around the great lakes, towards the south-west, and had begun to lay foundations of large establishments which have ever since been continually increasing. To keep track of these groups, it was necessary to follow them over an extent of territory, which in a direct line would exceed 3,000 miles; and to classify the distinct families, their descent from generation to generation had to be carefully traced. For example, a man born in France was married in Acadia, went to reside in Quebec, where his children were baptized: removed afterwards to Montreal, where his wife died; he married again in Detroit; and at last he himself died in some parish on the banks of the Ohio or Mississippi, where some of his children settled, while others had remained in the valley of the St. Law-

Vidal, Hon. Alexander, of Samia, member of the Senate of the Dominion of Canada, was born at Brocknell, Berkshire, England, on the 4th of August 1819. He is the eldest surviving son on the 1819. The family, of Spanish origin, emigrated to England in the latter part of the seventeenth century. In 1834 Captain Vidal,

wa.
un
col
wh
wa.
ano
Du
gov shi
of

to Vi

:h

H

ch

cal

the

in

Manor Manor

Cou

com

Wes

the

the lithe with the with the with the with the lithest the lithest true

a mo
of th legisla presic tion, l
and l

and lof the sion o

accompanied by his wife and family, came to Canada, and settled in Sarnia. Senator Vidal received his educational training in the Royal Mathematical School, Christ's Hospital, in London, England, and studied, chiefly, mathematics, navigation, and nautical astronomy, with the view of entering the navy. In 1837 he served as a private in the militia, when it was called out to suppress the rebellion of that year; and was promoted afterwards, step by step, until he gained the rank of lieutenantcolonel in the Lambton reserve militia, which he still holds. In 1843 Mr. Vidal was licensed as a provincial land surveyor, and for ten years followed this profession. During this period he was employed by the government to survey parts of the town-ships of Bentinck and Glenelg, the township of Saugeen, the town plot of Sault Ste. Marie, and all the mining locations on the north shore of Lake Huron and River Ste. Marie. He also accompanied Captain Anderson to the north shores of Lakes Huron and Superior, as commissioners, to arrange with the Indians for the transfer of lands to the Canadian Government. In 1853 he was appointed treasurer of the County of Lambton, and is still the trusted and faithful servant of his county. In 1861 Mr. Vidal presented himself as a candidate for election to the House of Assembly, and was defeated; but in 1863 he was elected to the Legislative Council, for the St. Clair division, which comprised the counties of Lambton and West Middlesex: this seat he held until the confederation of the provinces, when the Legislative Council was abolished and the Senate established. In the year 1853 he was selected as agent for the Bank of Upper Canada, in Sarnia, and held this office until the bank closed its doors, in 1866. This same year he was appointed agent for the Bank of Montreal, and resigned this position in 1874, with the view of being free to attend his parliamentary duties, he having been appointed to the Senate in January, 1873. Hon. Mr. Vidal connected himself with the temperance reform in 1840, and has been ever since true to his pledge of total abstinence, and a most active worker, both in and out of the Senate, in promoting prohibitory legislation. In 1874 he had the honour of presiding at the great temperance convention, held at the City of Montreal, that year; and has been annually elected president of the Dominion Alliance for the Suppression of the Liquor Traffic, since its forma-ench-

ch we

iighly

guay,

er in-

been

nour.

em as

t the

popu-

a, are

uable

int of

ed to

bined

tion-

cum-

mpos-

erally

cotch

rcum-

uthor

roups

ound

tury,

cond,

livers

1641.

only

ver a great d beolish-

tinu-

 $_{
m these}$

over

t line

assify

from fully

rance

de in

ized ;

e his , and

h on where

thers

Law-

rnia,

nion

Berk-

gust. f the

ated

ven-

idal.

w.

English Loan Company, from the first year it opened its office in London, Ont. 1880 the Senator visited Britain, and was well received by his many friends; and he and Sir Charles Tupper were entertained at a public breakfast given in their houour by the United Kingdom Alliance, in the Westminster Hotel, in London. Senator Vidal was a member of the Church of England until 1843, when he united himself with the Presbyterian church, and has been for many years an elder in that body; and has represented the Sarnia church in the General Assembly. He is also a worker in the Sunday school, and may be found, Sunday after Sunday, teaching a Bible-class in the Sarnia Presbyterian church school. In politics he is a Liberal-Conservative. On the 8th December, 1847, he married Catherine Louisa, daughter of the late Capt. Wm. E. Wright, of the Royal navy; she died 19th April, 1882, and by this union five sons and two daughters were born. These are alive, except one son. Two daughters and two sons are married and settled in life. Altogether, Senator Vidal has had a stirring and useful career, and our hope is that he may be long spared to enjoy his well-earned honours, and take a part in passing a measure prohibiting the importation, manufacture and sale of alcoholic liquors in Canada.

Jaffray, William, Berlin, Ontario, was born on March 6th, 1832, at Shrewsbury, England. He is a son of Peter Jaffray, a native of Stirling, Scotland, and Mary Ann, nee Gittins, of Shrewsbury. Mr. Jaffray, senior, we may say, was a gentleman of excellent literary attainments, and was, for a number of years, editor of the Shrewsbury Chronicle. Our subject, for one year, attended the Diocesan School in his native place. When very young, he entered the sedentary militia, and in 1854 was promoted to a lieutenancy. Our subject, it may be said, comes of a newspaper race, for the "inherited tendency" seems to manifest itself in the matter of the journalistic instinct, as well as in legal, military or ecclesiastical leanings. Some members of the family occupy prominent journalistic positions in Birmingham, England; some in Australia; some, as we see, in Canada, and several in the United States. In 1856 our subject became editor of the Galt Reporter and Berlin Chronicle, and for several years took an energetic, prominent and influential part in the political contests of South Waterloo. He married, on January 26th, 1854, Agnes Jackson, a native of Kilmarnock, tion, in 1875. He was president of the | Scotland, and the fruit of the union was eight children. Three of the sons are publishers and propietors of the Canadian-American Journal, another holds an important office in the St. Paul M. & M. R.R., at Des Moines, Iowa, and the fifth is a partner with our subject, both being Grand Trunk R.R. agents in Berlin. Mr. Jaffray's father, we may say, established the Galt Reporter in 1847, and the son became partner with him in 1851. In 1856 the Berlin Chronicle was founded, but the enterprise was sold out in 1861. Mr. Jaffray has always been an unyielding and sturdy Conservative. In 1862, Mr. Jaffray was appointed postmaster for Berlin, and in 1864 he became the express and telegraph agent. In the period extending from 1865 to 1883, our subject has been councillor, deputy reeve, reeve and mayor, and occupied the last named position for two years. He has always been active and interested in municipal affairs, and although an Englishman, has in many contests been victorious, by considerable majorities, in a German town. He is an Episcopalian, and has been a member of church choirs continuously for over forty years. He once went to Scotland and England, and took a three months holiday through the two countries. It is scarcely necessary to say that our subject is one of the most popular and respected inhabitants of Berlin.

Rice, Rev. James Joseph, Belleville, the subject of this sketch, is a native of Newfoundland, and was born at Twillingate, (a town which gives name to the Northern Electoral District of the "Ancient Colony,") on 22nd March, 1830. He is of English descent, his father and mother (James and Ann Rice) having had birth respectively in Devon and Somerset. James Rice, sr., arrived in Newfoundland in 1806, and after some years in mercantile life, received the appointment as Sheriff of the Northern District (Twillingate and Fogo), a position which he continued to hold uninterruptedly until 1874, when, at the age of eighty-two, he relinquished office and life together. His only brother, R. P. Rice, has again and again been returned, sometimes without opposition, as member of the House of Assembly for the district. The whole family were strict Episcopalians, although liberally disposed toward other sections of the church. Education in Newfoundland is under the charge of the different religious denominations, which receive government aid according to the service rendered; and in the Twillingate school of the Church of England he obtained the rudiments of an education, on which, in after life, was laid a solid upbuilding. At the early age of eleven years, Mr. Rice, jr., obtained the consent of his parents to leave home, and, proceeding to St. John's, the provincial capital (200 miles distant), he entered the Times printing office, and continued there five years, till 1846 On the 9th June, of that year, a terrible fire laid the city in ruins; and shortly after, and consequent upon this, at the age of six. teen, another change of residence was made. His clothing destroyed by fire, and possessed of only what he wore, he secured a place on board a schooner bound for P. E. Island. and worked his passage. On the voyage he more than once narrowly escaped death by drowning. Once, when at the helm, and he the only one on deck, the vessel shot out of a fog bank, and the beetling cliffs of the Newfoundland coast in another minute would have carried destruction to ship and all on board, but for his prompt action and coolness in the presence of danger. Again. in a heavy gale, the vessel missed stays in coming about, and he was knocked overboard by the main boom, but the unaccountable presence of mind of an aged. stiff-limbed Acadian Frenchman, rescued him from certain death on that occasion. A month later, he reached Charlottetown, where, in the printing business, the subsequent seventeen years of his life were spent. During this period, his life was shaped, and his life work determined. 1850 he was united in marriage to Ellen Penelope, youngest daughter of James and Catharine Pollard, old residents of Charlottetown. In 1854, he purchased the Advertiser (a weekly Reform newspaper) office, to which he gave both editorial and mechanical management for nearly four years. In 1855 he received a commission as lieutenant in the 1st Queen's county regiment of militia, having been first elected to that position by the Prince of Wales Rifle Co.. This position he continued to hold until 1859, when, impelled thereto by religious convictions, he resigned his commission. In 1858, Mr. Rice made a profession of converting grace, under the ministration of the late Rev. Cephas Barker, of the Bible Christian Church, and united with Methodism. In the autumn of 1857, he was recalled from a lucrative position in Pictou, N. S., to assume mechanical management of the Protestant newspaper, established to resist the Roman Catholic demand for the expulsion of the Bible from the provincial public schools. This business relation continued until 1863, when Mr. Rice abandoned secular life for the itin

rears as

rears at

in 1868,

ive yea

very ad

ment, le

His first manville

ments to

ton. Clin

twenty-t

(hristia)

church

marked

ments, w

parsonag

his breth

instance,

comforta

he bowed went to '

ation in

prospecte

gave any way to co

Hall, how

in Octobe

two serv

secured in building,

was occup

cember of dedicated

hall, cong

but, once

pastor exe

greatly in gathered,

(June, 187

hundred t

and one of appointme

pincott str city. The

had grown teachers, t

scholars, to personally

most of t

$7,500 tow

the first c

union of I

santly fell

secretary of years, and

and at the

was unanim

ment.

1368.

the itinerant ministry. Having served three rears as such at Vernon River, and then two rears at West Cape, in P. E. Island, he was, in 1868, transferred to Ontario. During his ive years' ministry on the island, he took a very active part in the temperance movement, lecturing over a large part of its area. His first appointment in Ontario was Bowmanville (the Connexional headquarters), in 1868. He subsequently received appointments to Oshawa, Toronto, London, Hamilton, Clinton, and Cobourg, and during the twenty-two years he laboured as a Bible Christian minister, the improvement of church property received at his hands marked attention-new erections or enlargements, with improvements in churches and parsonages, following almost every appoint-He was always ready to go where ment. his brethren decided he ought to go. For instance, after fifteen months at Oshawa, comfortably placed, and the work flourishing, he bowed to the voice of the committee, and went to Toronto, to establish the denomination in the provincial metropolis. Having prospected, he found not one adherent who gave any encouragement, or offered in any way to co-operate. He secured Agricultural Hall, however, and, from the first Sunday m October, 1871, to February, 1872, held two services every Sunday. A lot was secured in the meantime, and, a temporary building, having been erected thereon, this was occupied thenceforward, until, in December of 1873, Agnes street church was dedicated and occupied. Up to leaving the hall, congregations had greatly fluctuated, but, once occupying premises over which the pastor exercised full control, congregations greatly increased, a good Sunday-school was gathered, and at the close of his pastorate (June, 1875), he had a congregation of four hundred to five hundred at Agnes street. and one of eighty to one hundred in another appointment which he had opened on Lippincott street, in the north-west part of the city. The membership under his pastorate had grown to seventy-five, Sunday-school teachers, to twenty-six, and Sunday-school scholars, to two hundred and sixty-six. He personally canvassed, while in Toronto, the most of the connexion, and raised about $7,500 towards the Toronto property. From the first conference he attended, to the union of Methodism, official duties incessantly fell to his lot. He was finance secretary one year, missionary secretary two years, and conference secretary three years, and at the Mitchell conference, in 1878, he was unanimously elected president. He was

his,

les

ce, Hi.

ire

le.

ed

district superintendent of London, Toronto, and Cobourg districts-filling the latter position at the time of the amalgamation: His sympathies were always with a United Methodism, and he was linked in with the movement from its inception to its consummation. In 1870, he represented his denomination at the great gathering in Toronto, (developed chiefly under the hand of Rev. Dr. Dewart) and gave one of the fine addresses on that occasion, his subject being, "Methodism, its characteristics and mission." He was a member of the union committee all through its work, and, on the assembly of the first general conference of the Methodist church, he was unanimously chosen as its associate From the Bay of Quinte consecretary. ference he received his first appointment as a minister of the new church, to the City of During his London pastorate, he lost by death the wife of his youth, and, while on his next field of labour (Hamilton), he married (August, 1880) Mary Edith Cressall, daughter of the late John Coates, of Quebec city, but born in King's county, Ireland. Of a large family born of his first marriage, five still survive, the eldest of whom is Rev. J. P. Rice, of the Toronto conference, who has been in the itinerant ministry for twelve years. Rice is still full of vigour, both physically and mentally. His life, in many ways, beside that of his sacred profession, has been useful and active.

Musson, George, Toronto, the subject of this memoir, was born at Toronto, on the 3rd of November, 1836. His parents, William Musson and Mary Ann Woodley, were natives of England, and were married in that country. His father for a number of years was engaged as a tin plate manufacturer, in England; but in 1820, allured by the brighter prospects which a new country held out for intelligent industry, he set sail for Canada, and in due time reached Toronto (then Little York), where he settled. George Musson attended the Toronto Academy for a time, but finished his studies in Upper Canada College. In 1853 he entered into the employ of the late William Monaghan, one of the largest retail grocers in the city, and here he remained for two years, when he took a position in the office of Wakefield, Coate & Co., auctioneers and commission merchants. In this situation he remained for twelve years, during which time he held the position of book-keeper. He found, however, that this was a slow way to get along in the world, at least for one of his fitness and ambition, so he left for Buffalo, U.S. Here he formed a partnership with his brother, Henry Musson, in a general grain and commission business, and continued in this partnership for two years, when he returned to Toronto, and began for himself a mercantile brokerage business. After a time John Morrow joined him, and in 1878 the firm embarked in the foreign commission trade. In this they have continued, and they now carry on a very large business in teas, coffees and sugars. They have direct connection with China, Japan, the West Indies, Rio de Janeiro, and other shipping ports, and their transactions extend from one end of Canada to the other. In 1861, during the Trent excitement, Mr. Musson enlisted in No. 1 Company of the Queen's Own Rifles, and after serving for some time, he received an ensign's commission. However, he soon afterwards transferred to the 10th Royals, retaining the same rank he had held in the Queen's Own. Shortly afterwards he was promoted to the captaincy of No. 5 company; and during the time of the St. Albans' raids, in 1865, he was sent to Laprairie, as senior officer of two companies. These two companies were detailed for duty, and quartered in the barracks at Laprairie for two months. In the following year, during the Fenian raid, he was sent with his regiment to the front, and stationed at Fort Erie, where the regiment remained under canvas for three weeks. In 1883 Mr. Musson was appointed vice-consul for the Empire of Brazil at Toronto. He married, in 1863, Agnes Balfour, third daughter of the late John Balfour, of the firm of Scobie & Balfour, publishers and stationers, Toronto. By this union he has had six children, three of whom survive. He is a member of the Church of England, and has been for six years warden in the Church of the Redeemer, Toronto. In politics he is a steadfast Conservative, and one who studies and masters for himself the questions of the

Smithson, William Henry, Assistant Accountant, Post Office Department, Ottawa, Canada, was born at Portland, St. John, N.B., on the 28th February, 1834. He is the son of the late Rev. William Smithson, and his wife, Elizabeth Harrison. His father was descended from an old Yorkshire, England, family; and his mother was the daughter of a U. E. loyalist officer, who, with his brother, also an officer, took up their grants of land at Sheffield, on the St. John river. His mother, who is still living, is now 84; but his father died suddenly in 1866, at the age of 69. Mr. Smithson, sr., was for over forty years a Wesleyan Methodist minister in high standing; and his first appointment was to the Shetland Islands. He came to New Brunswick in 1827, where he was married. "A very prominent feature of Mr. Smithson's char. acter was his catholicity of spirit. When leaving his last circuit to go on the retired list, in his closing service, the clergymen of the Episcopal and Presbyterian churches accompanied him to the pulpit, and after his farewell sermon delivered appropriate addresses. He was stationed at Portand, St. John, at the time of the cholera visitation, in 1834, and, by a remarkable coincidence, twenty years after, when the cholera again raged in that city, he occupied the Without intermissame sphere of labour. sion, demands were made upon him, often by entire strangers, but none were ever refused. When pestilence was walking in darkness and wasting by noonday, causing dismay to strong hearts, and spreading a funereal hue over every habitation, he braved the plague, and tracked the cholerastricken city by day and night, amongst high and low, rich and poor, whenever or wherever duty called him. The last three years of his public ministry were spent in the Halifax, N.S., district, of which he was chairman; and those who were with him in that district, and by whose unanimous suffrages he had been elected to that honourable position, the highest that could be accorded to him, except the presidency of the conference, will ever cherish a deep remembrance of his fidelity and kindness, his anxiety for the cause of God, and his solicitude for the welfare of his brethren." Thus said the Provincial Wesleyan. Other newspapers, likewise, bore not less hearty tribute to the worth of the deceased. His mother is universally loved and respected by a large circle of friends in both New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. The following tribute was paid to the memory of his mother's brother, the late Rev. Canon Harrison, Church of England, by the press: "Few men in his profession, or, indeed, in any capacity of life, were more sincerely loved and respected than the late devoted rector of St. Luke's Church. He leaves behind him a fragrant memory and an hon-ourable name." Another of his mother's brothers was the late Hon. Charles Harrison, for a great many years a member of the Legislative Council of New Brunswick. Our subject was educated at Albion Vale Academy, Annapolis, since discontinued; and at Sackville Academy, now a college. He and in t wic. He

in J

ant

dep

tion

of t

the

and

Arcl

the 1

wher

to th

wick

sona

ort :

part-

cipal

dist 1

actua

Smit

Louis

Hon.

lative

Charl

80, ar

the H

Counc

his de

Legisl

has. h

is only

he was

and af

N.B.,

and dr

ist and

ton, N

years,

ment.

Tiza

w38 bo

on the

George

in the c

iect wa

School,

He was

Helliwe

articles

and soc

the firm

son, O'H

he conti

on his ov

was like

dist.

oursued general studies, including French and the classics. He was appointed clerk in the Post Office Department, New Brunswick, May 1, 1860, and accountant in 1867. He was removed to the head office. Ottawa. in June, 1868, and made assistant accountant of the Dominion of Canada Post Office department, on July 1st, 1873, which position he now holds, to the fullest satisfaction of the service and the public. He joined the ancient order of Freemasons in 1855 and soon after was exalted to the Royal Arch degree, and assisted in establishing the first Royal Arch Chapter in Fredericton, where he resided. When he was appointed to the Post Office department of New Brunswick, the postmaster-general, who was a personal friend, offered him the position withort any application or solicitation on the part of himself or his friends. Owing principally to his father having been a Methodist minister, it may be related that he has actually resided in ten different places. Mr. Smithson married on the 1st June, 1858, Louise J. youngest daughter of the late Hon. Charles Perley, member of the Legislative Council of New Brunswick. Hon. Charles Perley died in 1877, at the age of 80, and had represented Carleton county in the House of Assembly and the Legislative Council of New Brunswick from 1843 until his death, having been appointed to the Legislative Council in 1863. Mr. Smithson has had three children, but of these there is only one daughter living. When at school he was most interested in chemistry studies, and after leaving there went to St. John, X.B., for the purpose of becoming a chemist and druggist, and afterwards opened a chemist and druggist establishment in Fredericton, N.B., which he carried on for several years, before joining the Post Office Department. In religion, he is a Wesleyan Metho-

esleyan

; and

retland

rick in

A verv

s char.

When

retired

gymen

urches

l after

priate

rtand.

visita-

coinci-

holera

ed the

ermis-

often.

ever ny in using

ing a

o, he

olera-

ongst

er or three

nt in

e was

him

nous

hon-

d be

y oi deep

iess,

his

en."

ther

arty

His

rted

iew.

ing

his

Tizard, George Langrish, Oakville, was born in Weymouth, Dorset, England, on the 11th of June, 1847. His father was George Tizard, and he engaged extensively in the coal business in that place. Our subject was educated at the Toronto Grammar School, which he left at the age of sixteen. He was then articled as a student-at-law to Helliwell & O'Brien. In 1868, when his articles expired, he remained in the office, and soon afterwards became a partner in the firm, which assumed the name of Robinson, O'Brien & Tizard, and in this position he continued till 1877. He then practised on his own account for a year in Toronto, and was likewise for another year partner with another gentleman. In 1879, he removed to Oakville, where he has practised ever since with very fair success. He served in the Queen's Own Rifles, and holds a second class certificate in the military school, and he was gazetted as ensign in the 2nd battalion of York Militia. But Mr. Tizard also gave a good deal of attention to civic politics, and in recognition of his services in this direction, a number of his fellow citizens waited upon him, and asked him to allow them to nominate him for the city council. He consented and was elected alderman for St. John's ward, in the City of Toronto. This was in the year 1878-79. He is now also a High School trustee for the town of This, it may be said, is an ap-Oakville. pointment by the county council. Mr. Tizard is a Freemason of Oakville Lodge, No. 400; and he is also a member of St. Paul's Royal Arch Chapter. He is likewise past county master in the Royal Black Knights of Ireland, Toronto; and past district master in the centre Toronto Orange order: He has travelled through the United States and Canada, and also through England. religion, he is, and always has been, an Episcopalian. In politics, he is a straight Tory, and has been so from his youth. He married on the 11th of September, 1872, Johanna Mitchell, daughter of Colonel Mitchell, who served during 1837, in quelling the rebellion led by William Lyon Mackenzie, and she is also granddaughter of Gen. Adamson, who served in the Peninsula. By this lady, he has had five children, four boys and one girl. In manner, Mr. Tizard is genial and kindly. In a public and business way, he is exceedingly popular, and socially his following of friends is large and one of fifteen appointed to superintend the cattle plague of 1867; and was for three years clerk and treasurer of North and South Orillia and Matchedash. In 1861 he joined the Masonic Order of Scotland. Up to his twentieth year Mr. Brown was largely employed by his father in the superintendence of forest tree planting in England and in Scotland; in the extensive drainage of farms; and in the general improvement of landed estates. From twenty to twentyfour he was engaged on a survey of the estates of the Earl of Seafield in Banffshire, Scotland, and had also the personal management of the estates of Andrew Stewart, M. P. for Auchlunkart, in the same county. In 1860 he received the important appointment of factor to Colonel Farquharson of Invercauld, Braemar, Aberdeenshire, Scot-This estate is one of the most extensive in Scotland, and embraces about 135,000 acres of land, with nearly 500 tenants, 30,000 sheep, and corresponding Highland characteristics, such as shooting, fishing, etc., and unusually valuable woods and forests. was chiefly because of Mr. Brown's intimate practical acquaintance with Arboriculture that he received this onerous appointment. He took an active part in improving the roads of the district, and in introducing traction engines for the conveyance of timber to the railroads, and ultimately to the extension of the railway itself. Canada presenting better prospects for his family of three sons and three daughters, he emigrated in 1871, and bought a farm near Orillia, and in addition to farming acted as provincial land surveyor; and he was appointed to the charge of the Ontario Agricultural College and Experimental Farm in 1875. Prof. Brown is author of various important papers, among others one on "British Sheep Farming, published in Edinburgh, and one on the "Claims of Arboriculture as a Science," read before the British Association for the Advancement of Science. He is gold medal-list of the Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland, as well as of the Scottish Arboricultural Society. It is hardly necessary here to say how prosperous has been the Guelph Agricultural College since Prof. Brown took its management. Its reputation for excellence is now so well established that its membership each year includes students from the most distant parts of Canada, from Great Britain, and from the United States. Professor Brown is an enthusiast in his work, and, besides his duties as head of the Agricultural and Experimental departments of the college, he has given lectures upon scientific farming, stock-raising, etc., through many parts of Canada. He is also skilled in forestry, and his brother is government conservator of Forests for South Australia.

Brown, William, D.L.S., C.E., Professor of Agriculture, Guelph Agricultural College, was born on the 14th April, 1835, at Turriff, Aberdeenshire, Scotland. He is a son of James Brown, LL.D., author of "The Forester," and now a resident of Port Elgin, Ontario, Canada. His mother was Janet Erskine. His great grandfather, on his father's side, was cousin to Rev. John Brown, minister of Haddington, commonly called "Bible Brown." Professor Brown was educated principally in the neighbourhood of Edinburgh, in the ordinary parochial schools of the country, and he attended school up to his seventeenth year; thereafter he was entirely self-taught. He was a justice of the peace in Aberdeenshire for twelve years, and railway director there for five years, ending 1869. He was also commissioner for the County of Aberdeen,

Wicksteed, Gustavus W., Q.C., Law Clerk of the House of Commons, Ottawa, the subject of this sketch, was born at Liverpool, England, in December, 1799 His father was a member of the Cheshire and Shropshire family Wicksteed. mother was of a Lancashire family, and her name was Tatlock. Mr. Wicksteed came to Canada in 1821, on the invitation of his uncle, Mr. Fletcher, who was soon afterwards appointed judge of the then new district of St. Francis, Quebec. He studied machanical engineering in England, and was for some time employed in work connected with that profession. In 1825, he commenced the study of the law under the late Colonel In the fall of 1828, he entered the service of the Legislative Assembly of Lower Canada as assistant law clerk. In 1841, on the motion of John Neilson, he was appointed law clerk and chief English trans. lator to the Legislative Assembly of the Pro. vince of Canada; and in 1867, to the same office in the House of Commons of Canada; and this office he holds still. In 1841, he was appointed, with the Honourable Mr. Heney and A. Buchanan, a commissioner for revising the Statutes and Ordinances of Lower Canada, with the present Justice John. son for secretary. In 1854, His Excellency the Earl of Elgin, gave him his silk gown. In 1856, he was appointed, with Sir J. B. Macau. ay, ex-chief justice, and five other gentlemen from Upper Canada, and A. Polette, R. MacKay, A. Stuart and T. J. J. Loranger (all now judges), and Geo. De Boucher-ville (now clerk of the Legislative Council), from Lower Canada, a commissioner to "examine, revise, consolidate and classify" the Public General Statutes of Canada. In 1864-5, he was a commissioner, with ex-Chancellor Blake and Justice Day, for fixing the remuneration to be paid by the government to the several railway companies On the death for the carriage of mails. of Mr. Lindsay, Sir George Cartier offered Mr. Wicksteed the clerkship of the Legislative Assembly, but told him that he would prefer his retaining his present position, which he considered of greater importance. He has been twice married in Canada, first to the second daughter of John Gray, first president of the Bank of Montreal; and secondly, to the eldest daughter of Captain John Fletcher, of Her Majesty's 72nd regiment, then an officer of Her Majesty's Impehave think himse member of write of write of most He is, the old official

rial C

a hou

above, Ever a rary in with " produce nicely that we of the chiefly of thei not sur mical In his "I may mention having and tab place in niche in niche in sisting.' always i earliest mental. but hope Church, the Timity is not sk, why aw clerk print ver

I may b

lone offi ication f nade so it is but tot knov politician terse, bu f poesy cknowle avention act.' O

rial Customs at Quebec; and he has been a householder in each of the five cities which have been the seats of government. thinks, therefore, that he may now fairly call himself a Canadian, without ceasing to remember that he is English born. At the time of writing, our worthy subject is still in office, and though he is now in his eighty-sixth year, he performed his duties through the iate over long and trying session with the most complete satisfaction to everybody. He is, it may be said, the oldest official, and the oldest man in the civil service of Canada. In addition to Mr. Wicksteed's successes in official and professional life, as chronicled above, he has won many laurels in literature. Ever since a boy he' has shown strong literary inclinations, and a yearning to speak with "a lettered tongue." His chief literary production is "Waifs in Verse," a volume nicely bound and well printed; we only wish that we had the space here to give specimens of the author's work. The poetry assumes chiefly the form of vers de societé; and some of them, indeed a great many of them, are not surpassed for verve, wit, ease of rhythmical flow, and happy and clever hits. In his "apology" for his "Waifs" he says, "I may have a modest wish for honourable mention in the Canadian list of authors, as having written something besides statutes and tables of statutes :-

ough

ed in

con-

Q.C.,

, Ot-

born

799.

shire

His

l her

came

f his

fter-

dis-

died

was

cted

nced

lonel

l the

ower

, on

ap-

Pro

ame

ada;

was

eney

re

ower

ohn-

ency In cau-

ntle-

ette,

nger

her-

cil),

fy"

In

ex-

ńx-

ovnies

ath

red

sla

on,

ساld

In Morgan's useful book my place is small; In stately Taylor's work I've none at all;—

I may have a secret aspiration for a higher place in the former, and some little obscure niche in the latter :- 'Vanity, perhaps, assisting.' I have arranged the pieces almost always in the order of their birth, and the earliest ones, are therefore, the most sentimental. I was young then and am old now; but hope you will think the lines on old Christ Church, and the touching In Memoriam to the Times, show that in my old age the quaity is not quite extinct in me. But you may sk, why should I, a rather ancient Q.C., and aw clerk to the House of Commons, write and print verses. My good friend, what I have flone officially is the very reason and justiication for what I am doing now. Having nade so much heavy prose in statute form, it is but fair to add a little rhyme. ot know that any of our present leading oliticians have distinguished themselves in erse, but they must have the main element f poesy in them, when their very opponents knowledge their speeches to be 'full of avention,' and of 'imagination all comact.' On this point, therefore, I am justified by precedent and authority as ample as a lawyer could wish for. But you may, perhaps, object, that I have occasionally been a little harder on public men and their doings than befits my position; that I by no means inculcate teetotalism as becomes the author of a temperance bill; and that I am sometimes slightly critical on my French Canadian fellow-subjects. But be pleased, my dear friend, to remember that I almost always wrote in a representative character, and had to express the feelings and views of my constituents, my non-paying clients, rather than my own." The edge and cleverness of Mr. Wicksteed's writings may be guessed from these extracts. The prose bits, interspersed through the volume, are hardly less clever than the "Waifs," themselves. The editor has seldom seen a volume that he has read with more interest than these "Waifs" of the genial law clerk. He has made some skilful translations of verse, among which may be noted that of Dr. Louis Honoré Frechette's poem, Fors l'honneur. In Memoriam, 8th Sept., 1860; Levis burning his colours to prevent their surrender to the It is not often that a poet is satisenemy. fled with a translation of his work. Dr. Frechette was, and in the next number of La Patrie he spoke of "Waifs in verse" as "ce fin recueil de poésies détachées, où l'enthousiasme du patriote se mêle à la verve caustique de chansonnier, la note légèrement sentimentale avec la petite pointe du satiriste de bonne humeur." "This bright little collection of occasional poems, in which the fire of the patriot mingles with the caustic wit of the songster, and a gently sentimental tone with good humoured satire."

McLaughlin, James Francis, one of Toronto's prominent general grain and flour dealers, was born at Mono Mills, in the County of Cardwell, on May 1st, 1852. His father, who was one of the worthiest and most highly respected inhabitants of Cardwell, came to Canada in 1830, and settled at Mono Mills, where, perceiving that milling would unquestionably be profitable, he built a grist mill. We have anticipated, however, in saying that he settled at Mono Mills, for this latter name came to be applied in consequence of the existence of Mr. McLaughlin's mill. The subject of our sketch received the best education that could be obtained at Mono Mills; and when he had attained his fifteenth year, he left school and began to learn the business of milling in his father's employ. But he was a young man of altogether unusual energy, capacity and ambition. This is well proven by the fact, that when he reached his twentieth year he bought his father out, undertook himself the management of the mills, and simultaneously conducted a general store. It is not often that of a young man of twenty as much as this can be said. This double and extensive business Mr. McLaughlin managed with marked ability and success till 1881, when a desire, which he had had for some time, to go to Toronto, prevailed. In the Queen City he saw an opening for a successful grain and flour business; and in such manner he established himself there. He did not let his hold upon the profitable, and now historic, Mono Mills go, but still carries them on in conjunction with his business in grain and flour. It is hardly necessary to say that the success which attended Mr. McLaughlin's early exertions has not been denied to him in his new and larger sphere. For the greater part his time and attention are absorbed by his large and growing business, nevertheless he has paid much attention to politics in his He contested Cardwell with Thomas White, (now Minister of the Interior), in 1882, and though he was not successful, he polled the largest vote ever given to a liberal candidate in that constituency. Our subject has travelled much, and in his travels he has kept his eyes observantly open. He married, September, 1883, Isabella Small, who had formerly resided at Mono Mills. By this union he has had one child. Mr. McLaughlin is a Roman catholic. He is extremely genial, and very agreeable in manner.

Joseph ~ Frederick, Whiteaves, F.G.S., F.R.S.C., Ottawa, the subject of this sketch, was born December 26, 1835, at Oxford, England. He was educated near Oxford, London and Brighton. Between the years 1855 (or a little earlier) and 1861, he devoted his attention to the study of, first, the invertebrate zoology; and, second, to that of the invertebrate palæontology of the Jurassic rocks of the immediate vicinity of his native city. At the request of the late Professor Phillips, he prepared a paper on "The Land and Fresh-water Mollusca inhabiting the neighbourhood of Oxford," which was read before the Ashmolean Society in 1857, and published in the transactions of that body for the same year. also published some of the results of his palæontological studies in the "Report of the British Association for the Advancement of Science," in 1860, and in the "Annals and Magazine of Natural History" (London), for 1861. During the last named year he came to Canada. From 1863 to 1876, both years included, he was scientific curator and recording secretary to the Xatural History Society of Montreal, and contributed many papers on Canadian zoology and palæontology to its journal, the " Canaadian Naturalist and Geologist." He prose. cuted five deep-sea dredging expeditions to the Gulf of St. Lawrence in 1867, 1869 1871, 1872 and 1873, the last three under the auspices of the Department of Marine and Fisheries of the Dominion government, and published papers descriptive of the results of these investigations in the reports of the Department of Marine and Fisheries, in the "Canadian Naturalist," the "Annals and Magazine of Natural History" (London) and in the "American Journal of Science and Arts." He first joined the Geological Survey of Canada, in 1874, and for two years had charge of the Mesozoic and Ter. tiary fossils and zoological specimens in the museum of that institution, under E. Billings. He was elected palæontologist and zoologist to the Survey in October, 1876, and subsequently one of the four assistant directors. His principal publications. since he joined the Survey, are illustrated monographs on the invertebrate fossils of the Upper Cretaceous rocks of Vancouver Island and other islands in the Strait of Georgia adjacent thereto; on those of the Middle Cretaceous rocks of the Queen Char. lotte Islands; on those of the Guelph for. mation of Western Ontario; and on those of the Laramie and Cretaceous rocks of the Bow and Belly River districts. Also various papers on the fossil fishes of the Devonian rocks of Scanmenac Bay, P.Q., and on those of Campbellton, N.B., as well as others on the recent marine invertebrata of the Pacific Coast of Canada. In addition to those in the annual reports of the Survey, he has contributed papers, mostly on paleontological subjects, to the Transactions of the Royal Society of Canada; to the Reports of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, to the "American Naturalist," and to the "American Journal of Science and Arts." He was elected an honorary member of the Ashmolean Society, Oxford, England, in 1857; a Fellow of the Geological Society of London, in 1859; an honorary member of the Natural History Society of Montreal, in 1876; and a Fellow of the Royal Society of Canada, in 1882. He has worked a good deal with the microscope, and has devoted the greater part of his life.

to the

his spec

tebrata

lover o

neal an

charge,

not read

Dan

Bellevil

Caithne

married

ói our

there re

At the e

to Paker

Ottawa,

left Pal

Peterbo

Here h

He recei

English,

mathem

at the A

whither

he swept

mathema

1842; ar

unteer f

afterward

battalion

löth bat

he was p

friends to and havi

elected, a

in 1883.

and agair

advocate

Scott Act

mayoralt

Mason an

Dunnet

he there

He has fo

the Oran

in both of

in high st

the Epis

church-wa been a s

likewise, a

before mo

are altoge

On Nov.

Jane Gib

the staun

goods mer

reer, as re

1840.

to the study of paleontology and zoology, his speciality being recent and fossil invertebrata. A palnstaking official, an ardent lover of science, this gentleman brings a main a knowledge to the work in his charge, which science and the public will not readily forget.

ory"

amed

3 to

atific

Xa-

con-

 \log_{7}

ana-

rose-

ns to 869

nder

rine

hent.

orts

ries.

nals

on), ence

rical

two

Ter-

in

E.

gist

her.

bns.

ted

ver

of

the

an ose on tic in

Dunnet, James Waters, Mayor of Belleville, Ontario, was born at Thurso, Caithness, Scotland, on the 14th January, 1840. He was a son of James Dunnet, who married Jane Gilchrist Waters. The parents of our subject first came to Montreal, and there remained for the period of four years. At the expiration of that time they moved to Pakenham, a small village not far from Ottawa, and there abode. But James W. left Pakenham in 1864 and proceeded to Peterboro', where he commenced business. Here he remained until 1870, when he finally took up his abode in Belleville. He received his education, which comprised English, ancient and modern languages, mathematics, and the other higher branches, at the Academy of Kirkwall, Orkney Islands, whither he was sent from Canada, and where he swept all the first prizes in classics and He came to this country in mathematics. 1842; and he became a captain in the volunteer force, active militia, in 1862. afterward became paymaster of the 57th battalion, Peterboro', and major of the 15th battalion A. L. I., Belleville. In 1881 he was prevailed upon by a large number of friends to offer for a seat at the civic board; and having accepted the invitation, he was elected, and was re-elected in 1882 and again in 1883. In 1884 he was elected mayor; and again re-elected in 1885. He is a strong advocate of temperance, and adopted the Scott Act as his platform when he ran for the At the time of the arrest of mayoralty. Mason and Slidell upon the high seas, Mr. Dunnet was a resident of Pakenham, and he there raised a company of volunteers. He has for many years been connected with the Orange and Oddfellows' societies, and in both of these organizations is a member in high standing. In religion he professes the Episcopal faith, and has served as church-warden for several years. He has been a superintendent of Sunday-schools likewise, and held that position in Peterboro' before moving to Belleville. His sympathies are altogether with the Low Church party. On Nov. 9th, 1864, he married Elizabeth Jane Gibson. Mr. Dunnet is now among the staunchest and most prominent dry goods merchants in Belleville, and his career, as referred to in the beginning of this sketch, reveals his regard and popularity among his townsfolk. It may be that higher public honours are in store for Mr. Dunnet.

Watters, Rev. Bernard James, Parish Priest of Goderich, was born in the City of Quebec on the 29th Sept., 1845. This able and pious priest was a son of John and Jane (McGauran) Watters, who who came from the Province of Connaught. Ireland, the former from the town of Castlebar, and the latter from the town of Sligo. Mr. Watters took up his abode in Quebec upon his arrival, and afterwards conducted in that city a mercantile business. Young Bernard Watters began his educational studies at the High School in Quebec, in 1859, under the late Dr. Smith, the rec-tor of that excellent institution. Here he remained for two years, following the general course; but he also took private lessons in classics, from Dr. Smith, for a period of three years. He likewise attended the French Seminary, where he completed a fine classical course, and acquired an intimate knowledge of the French language. In 1865 he entered Ste. Anne's College. below Quebec, and here joined the philosophical class, of which the Rev. Andre Pelletier was the able professor. In 1866, under the professorship of the Rev. Achille Valier, he began a course in chemistry, physics, astronomy, botany, etc. The year following he entered the ecclesiastical state, and received the tonsure at the hands of the late Right Reverend Charles Baillergeon, archbishop of Quebec. In 1868 he received minor orders at the hands of the He now commenced his same archbishop. theological studies, which were pursued under the pious Father Blanchet. In 1869, feeling a desire for mission life in Ontario, the young seminarian applied for and received his exeat from the archbishop, and set out for the diocese of London, into which he was adopted by its learned and distinguished bishop, Rt. Rev. Dr. Walsh. He here received the orders of sub-deacon and deacon, at the hands of that prelate, on the second week of October, 1869; and on the 28th October of the same year, he was After ordination, he reordained priest. mained a few months with the bishop, and in Jan., 1870, he was appointed assistant to the Very Rev. Dean Murphy, P. P., Dublin, Ont. He remained here fifteen months, when he was recalled by the bishop to his palace. Here he remained for nearly three years as assistant at St. Peter's, and for some time as secretary. In June, 1873, he was appointed by his lordship, rector of Corunna, a parish situated on the St. Clair river, six miles below Sarnia. Father Watters built a brick church in Port Lambton while parish priest of Corunna, and made many improvements in the two churches and the house while there. He remained in this parish till he was promoted to the pastorship of Goderich, of which place he is at present parish priest. A brief reference to the late Rev. B. McGauran, brother of Rev. Mr. Watters' mother, may be appropriate here. He was born in the parish of Ballisodare, County Sligo, on the 14th August, 1821, and came to this country with his parents at an early age. In the spring of 1847, he was appointed chaplain at Grosse Isle, and was the first priest stricken by the ship fever of that terrible year, from the effects of which, and the labours he underwent, he never fully recovered. the same year he was appointed vicaire of St. Patrick's, Quebec. In 1848 he was appointed missionary in the Eastern Townships, his mission including nearly the whole of the present diocese of Sherbrooke, and, as during his incumbency of this very extensive mission, the construction of the Grand Trunk Railway was in operation, his labours were neither few nor light. signing his charge through sheer exhaustion in 1854, he was named des-servant of L'Ange Gardien, and later vicaire of St. Joseph of Levis, and later vicaire in the parish of Notre Dame de Levis, on the healthful heights of that town, opposite Quebec. 1871, on the occasion of his silver jubilee in the priesthood, he was presented with an address, accompanied by a gold watch and chain, by the committee of St. Patrick's church. In 1872 he visited Europe, and in Ireland he was the recipient of many marks of esteem, notably from the late distinguished Archbishop McHale, whom he first met in historic Cong, and was subsequently his cherished guest in Tuam. In London he was most warmly received and hospitably entertained by Cardinal Manning, to whom he imparted a large amount of information concerning Canada, particularly with regard to the school system; thus, no doubt, laying the foundation of the Cardinal's subsequent action in providing for so many of that great city's waifs. In Rome he was accorded a private audience by the late Pope Pius IX., and was authorised to bestow the Papal benediction on his people, a privilege which he availed himself of, and the solemnity of that Sunday in St. Patrick's is still fondly Specially honoured by the remembered. Cardinal-Dean Patrizzi, he was accorded a great many spiritual privileges, amongst others that of erecting an altar in his private residence and of celebrating Holy Mass there whenever he should think fit. The crowning work of his life was the foundation of the St. Bridget's Asylum at Quebec.

Barrick, Dr. Eli James, Toronto, M.D., M.R.C.S., England, L.R.C.P. and S., London and Edinburgh, one of the many successful medical practitioners Toronto can boast of, was born on the 28th De. cember, 1838, in the township of Wainfleet. Welland, Ontario. Dr. Barrick is descended, on the mother's side, from Jacob Ott, a U. E. loyalist, who came over from the State of Pennsylvania at the close of the last century, and settled on a farm in the township of Wainfleet, County of Welland. Here he abode, and brought up a family of nine children, two sons and seven daughters. all of whom married and settled in that part of the country. Their descendents form a large portion of the population of Wainfleet and contiguous parts. Dr. Barrick attended the common school in Wainfleet, and when twelve years old, removed with his eldest brother, Benjamin, to a farm six miles further west in the township of Moulton. On this farm he worked, and attended the common school until 1856. His habits at this period were marked by great industry, and he showed a strong desire to become a builder, therefore, in the spring of 1856 he began to learn the building trade: but an attack of the ague coming on in the afternoon of the commencing day, caused him to return to school. This turned the whole current of his life-work. On resuming school he pursued his studies with more than ordinary industry; and in the fall of the same year he went to Toronto, and entered as a pupil at the Normal School. Here he attended two sessions, and at the close of the second, 1857, he received a second-class certificate. In January, 1858, he took charge of a common school in the township of Humberstone, four miles east of Stonebridge, and taught with great success until May, 1880, and again resumed studies at the Normal School for another In June, 1881, he was one of five who received the highest certificates granted. In the following July, on recommendation of the teachers at the Normal School, he took charge of the common school No. 9, township of Puslinch, County of Wellington, which he conducted with remarkable success for three and a half years, and then gave it up to attend Rolph's Medical School at Toronto. In 1866 our subject obtained able to member thirty y tees of His con principa this ca the Oral the Cou Foreste In polit vative. married and the children two boy of Drs. Octavius Co.,) and with the Devonsh Holg Professor Belleville

Victo

some in N

Engl

Thon

the fi

reside

ing hi

œsfu

lege o

Surge

He re

ticed

()ctob

the R tomy,

After

he wa

and di

positio

school

the wh

profess

cided

and w

took a stainer

ever si

that th

to purs

of liqu

œived

woman

strengt

which t

nongst the degree of M.D., from the University of is pri-Victoria College. After graduating, he spent Mass. some time at the hospitals and dispensaries in New York, and then went to London, England, where he resumed his studies at Thomas's Hospital for one year. He was the first Canadian who took the position of resident accoucheur at that hospital. During his residence in London, he passed successfully examinations before the Royal College of Physicians and the Royal College of Surgeons, in both London and Edinburgh. He returned home in May, 1867, and practiced medicine in Dunnville, until 1st of October of the same year. Again he entered the Rolph School as demonstrator of anatomy, and commenced practice in Toronto. After holding this position for three years, he was appointed professor of midwifery and diseases of women and children, which position he held until the dissolution of the school in 1874. Since then he has devoted the whole of his time to the practice of the profession. Very early in life he had deaded convictions in regard to temperance, and when about sixteen years of age, he took a firm stand, and became a total abstainer, and he has continued to be one ever since. The doctor is fully persuaded that the only safe course for a young man to pursue is to totally abstain from the use of liquors. His religious training he received from his mother, and this Christian woman's teaching has been a tower of strength to her children and grandchildren, which the scepticism of the age has not been able to shake. Dr. Barrick has been a member of the Methodist church for nearly thirty years, and at present is one of the trustees of the Metropolitan church, Toronto. His connections with societies have been principally as medical attendant, and in this capacity he has been connected with the Orange Lodges Nos. 212, 657 and 127; the Courts Robin Hood and Hope, A. O. Foresters; and Hay & Co's Benefit Society. In politics Dr. Barrick is a Liberal-Conservative. On the 28th of April, 1870, he married Kate Head Newcombe, of Toronto, and the fruit of this marriage was eight children, only three of whom now survivetwo boys and a girl. Mrs. Barrick is sister of Drs. James and William Newcombe, and Octavius and Henry (of O. Newcombe & Co.,) and Mrs. A. J. Mason, all of whom, with their mother, came to Toronto from Devonshire, England, in 1856.

The

dation

ronto.

nd 8.,

many

ronto

h Deafleet.

scend-

)tt, a n che

f the

n the

land.

ly of iters.

part

rm a

Vain-

at-.

and

his

six

loul-

ıded

bits

dus-

be-

of

de :

the

sed

the

ing

ore

of

en-

ol.

:he

58, hе

> Holgate, Thomas Franklin, B.A., Professor of Mathematics, Albert College, Belleville, Ontario, was born in the County of Hastings, Ontario, on the 8th April, 1859. He is a son of Thomas Holgate, who was born in Yorkshire, England, and settled in Ontario in early life. He was a pioneer settler, and afterwards held the commission of justice of the peace. His mother, Eleanor, whose maiden name was Wright, was descended of United Empire loyalist stock. Our subject was educated in Albert College, taking the governor-general's medal for proficiency at matriculation, and honours in mathematics throughout the whole course. He received the degree of Bachelor of Arts in 1884, and was immediately appointed professor of mathematics in Albert College, having gained experience in teaching in the public schools, and as tutor in Albert College. He studied at first and attended college with the view of making teaching his life work. He is examiner in mathematics for Victoria University, and also holds a first class grade A certificate from the Educational department. He assisted in organizing a company of volunteers in Albert College, in connection with the 15th battalion A.L.I. active militia, and rose to the rank of lieutenant. He volunteered for service in the North-West, in the late rebellion, and was ordered to the front, but when it was decided to take only one company from the 15th, on account of duties at the college, the order was cancelled. Our subject is in full connection with the Methodist church, and has twice been lay representa. tive to the annual conference of that church from Belleville tabernacle. He was married on August 12th, 1885, to Julia Sharpe, daughter of John Sharpe, J.P., of Ernestown, Ontario. His wife is of U.E. loyalist descent. Her grandfather, Lucas Sharpe, was for many years a pensioner, on account of active service in the war of 1812.

Dewart, Rev. Edward Hartley, D.D., Toronto, a prominent divine and author in the Methodist church, and a prominent Canadian litterateur, was born in the County of Cavan, Ireland, in the year He is, we observe, by authentic records, of mingled Scotch and English descent, his father's ancestors having come originally from Scotland, and his mother's from England. When he was six years old he came, with his parents, to this country, the family settling in the County of Peter-borough, Ontario. Here Edward Hartley Dewart passed his boyhood and his youth. Schools in those days were few, and they were as a rule deficient in system, and not provided with competent heads. The educational facilities open to young Dewart were not better than those just characterized, but the lad was a persistent student, and his love for reading amounted almost to a passion. His home was pretty generously stocked with books, but through all these he went, and then he read every volume that he could borrow from his neighbours. It is not much to be wondered at that his church and his adopted country were in after years to get a good account of him. In the year 1847, he resolved to avail himself of greater educational advantages, we are told, and to qualify himself for a broader sphere of usefulness. In order to effect this object he started one wintry November morning, from his secluded forest home, to become a student of the Normal College in Toronto, which had been opened a few months previously for public instruction. With characteristic energy and determination, he travelled the whole of the distance, one hundred and twenty miles, on foot. prosecuting his studies here with remarkable success, he returned home at the end of the academic year, taught school for about twelve or fourteen months, and came back again to attend lectures for another session. His ability and assiduity as a student soon rendered his proficiency so marked in all his studies that he was frequently employed by the professors to assist them in teaching their classes. In 1851, he was called to the work of the Christian ministry, in connection with the Wesleyan Methodist church, of which he had been a member since 1843. He commenced his ministerial labours on the St. Thomas circuit, some months after the meeting of the conference, as junior preacher, under the direction of the chairman of the After remaining a second London district. year on this circuit, he travelled respectively for one year the Port Hope and Thorold circuits. On completing his four years' probation, he was ordained in London, in June, 1855, and sent to Dundas. The next year, he married Miss Matilda Hunt, of Hamilton, Ontario, and was appointed superintendent of the St. Andrew's circuit, on the Ottawa He laboured here for two years, when he was sent to the Odelltown circuit. In 1860 he was stationed by the conference in Montreal west. Very shortly afterwards he was compelled, owing to enfeebled health, caused by protracted overwork before coming to the city, to resign his charge, and to retire temporarily from the pastorate. his health had become restored, he undertook the superintendence of the St. John's circuit, where he laboured for three years. Thereafter we find him at Collingwood, at |

Toronto, and at Ingersoll. In 1869 he was elected editor of the Christian Guardian, a position for which his passionate love for literature, and for literature of the highest and best, eminently fitted him. position he has since filled, with unbounded credit to himself and to the publication under his charge. Conference after conference saw him re-elected to the control of this At the great general conference of paper. united Methodism, in 1883, he was elected by acclamation by the united church. Notwithstanding the large amount of church work pressing upon his time, our distinguished subject has been enabled to employ his pen in the production of a considerable quantity of enduring work. He is a grace. ful and pleasing writer of prose, and his verses, of which he has written a goodly number, embracing patriotic, domestic, and religious themes, have much lyrical fervour and artistic skill. Chief among the former may be named, "John Milton," "Niagara Falls," and "Voices of the Past." It is interesting to note that his first literary effort of importance was an essay, written in 1858, against the use of tobacco. a valuable prize over a large number of com-În the numerous field his contripetitors. butions have been frequent, and they have always borne the stamp of strong intellec-tual individuality. In recognition of his high attainments, Victoria College conferred upon him the degree of Doctor of Divinity. Dr. Dewart, says an authority already quoted from, is a man of great force of character, and of marked natural ability. He is, in the true sense of the term, a self-made man, and his success is largely attributable to his indomitable perseverance and unwearied application. He has always been a diligent and laborious student, and a close observer of human nature. In connection with the movement for the consolidation of Canadian Methodism, he took a leading part in advocating lay delegation and union principles; and at the London conference, in 1873, when a plan of union had been agreed upon by the Wesleyan, Eastern British American, and New Connexion conferences, he, in conjunction with Dr. Nelles, was appointed a delegate to the British conference, to represent the relations arising out of the proposed union, and to arrange the terms of settlement with the parent body. He was also a member of the Methodist Ecumenical conference, which met in London, England, in At the recent Methodist union, he did not approve of some points in the basis of union; but always sustained the principle

cate

catio

mem

comu

cision

earne

his s

intell

of str

ions,

ing at

of br

and (

wheth

stanne

liquor

irom .

a men

from

sketch

East,

M. La

cation,

the la

laid by

nseful

early i

as he l

pared .

says a

"he i

Papine:

Pretre ,

France,

at his

as litt

circums

1337 fr

Lafonta

feeling

Edward

propert

the cha

than M

abled to evidence

like tha

ironical burdity (

aliy. M

position nimself

priests.

Policy, h

noral co

be presu

he coinc

triking.

La

ciple of union. He has been a strong advocate of a system of united university eduation for the Province of Ontario. As a member of church courts and conference committees, he displays sagacity and deasion of character. As a preacher, he is earnest, practical, and at times eloquent; his sermons are calculated to quicken the intellect as well as the spirit. He is a man of strong convictions, tenacious of his opinions, and fearless and outspoken in expressing and maintaining them. He is also a man of broad views, of progressive principles, and of advanced ideas upon all subjects. whether civil or ecclesiastical. He is a staunch advocate of the prohibition of the lianor traffic.

an, s

e for

ghest

This

nded

l un-

rence

this

ce of

ected

Not-

urch

istinploy

rable

race-

l his odly

and

vour

rmer

gara Ît is

rary

en in won com-

ntri-

llec-

his

rred

uty.

oted

ter.

aan, his

l ap-

ent

ver

lian

70-

es;

nen by an, on-l a re-sed le-a

Lafontaine, Sir L. H., was descended from Antoine Menard Lafontaine, who was a member of Parliament for Lower Canada from 1796 to 1804. The subject of this sketch was born at Boucherville, Canada East, in 1807, and was the third son of A. M. Lafontaine. He received a sound education, and then entered upon the study of the law. He was a diligent student, and laid by during his study-time a vast fund of useful theory. Fortune waited upon him early in his career at the bar; and as soon as he had become "rich enough" he pre-"At first," pared himself for public life. says a writer of the Washington Sketches, "he was a follower, then a rival of Papineau. The latter was with the Parti Pretre; the former led that of La jeune France, and the priests shook their heads at his orthodoxy; in fact spoke of him as little better than an infidel. circumstances alter cases. Both fled in 1837 from warrants for high treason. Lafontaine reached England, where, not feeling himself safe, by the assistance of Edward Ellice, who had the greatest single property in Canada, he escaped across the channel to France. More fortunate than M. Papineau, he was very soon enabled to return, there in reality being no evidence against him. His fate had been like that of Defoe: he had written an ironical letter to A. M. Girouard, on the absurdity of rebellion, which was taken literally. M. Lafontaine now found himself in position to lead, and he forthwith set himself to conciliate his old opponents, the priests. Whether from conviction or from policy, he went regularly to mass, and his moral conduct being irreproachable, it is to be presumed that he was sincere, though he coincidence of interest and devotion is triking. When M. Papineau came back, he found his chair occupied, and forthwith M. Papineau took the extreme party, La jeune France, with but a small following. He advocated annexation, abolition of tithes, and of seignoral rights, while M. Lafontaine stuck to responsible government, and as nearly as possible to the status quo. In 1834, M. Lafontaine, who, after the death of Lord Sydenham, had worked himself into place as the head of the French party, quarrelled with Lord Metcalfe. The issue was taken on a general election. The Tory party was then in the ascendancy in Upper Canada, and, united with the moderates, out of forty-two representatives, returned all but nine, and of these three were doubful. M. Lafontaine brought up his wing of the brigade gallantly; but it was no use; the centre and the other wing were routed. He was doomed for three years to the 'cold shades of opposition,' in which he showed great constancy and industry. In March, 1848, the Tory party fell to pieces, and went to an election in sheer desperation. Their opponents in Upper Canada gaining twenty seats, saved all the French counties, and gained Montreal and three English or mixed counties, giving them a majority of two-thirds of the house. M. Lafontaine then resumed his old place. M. Lafontaine, in style of thought, was like all the French who form their ideas from books, theoretical and dogmatical. He was not an eloquent speaker, his utterance being thick and guttural, and his English, though good in structure, was bad in pronunciation. In fact he rarely tried the latter. But he was a close and compact logician, and never lost his temper. M. Lafontaine remained in office, until October, 1851, when the Hincks-Taché, administration was formed. On the 13th August, 1853, he was elevated to the chief-justiceship of the Court of Queen's Bench of Lower Canada, and on the 28th August, 1854, was created, for his eminent services, a baron of the United Kingdom. He married twice, first in 1831, Adèle, only daughter of A. Berthelot, Esquire, an advocate of some standing in Lower Canada; and secondly in 1860, a widowed lady of Montreal," He died on the 26th February, 1864.

McMillan, John, Alderman, Toronto, has been for more than twenty years an active worker in the temperance cause, and to-day he enjoys the fullest confidence and respect of the great army of temperance men. He was born at Bushmills, County Antrim, Ireland, Dec. 21st, 1840. When he was four years of age, his parents emigrated to Canada, and young John grew to manhood in the old City of Quebec, where he was educated at the Protestant Commissioners' School. His parents, of the old Covenanting stock, hoped to see him a minister of the Presbyterian church, but the youth did not fall in with this plan, and at an early age he struck out to fight his own way in the battle of life. He has been a teetotaler from his boyhood. In 1860 we find him prominent in a Good Templar Lodge at Smith's Falls, Ont., and later on an active member of Neptune Division, Sons of Temperance, in the City of New In New York he lived for six years, making his mark as a temperance worker, labouring with the foremost workers of the cause, and the chairman of a committee that held regularly a series of public temperance meetings in the Botanic Hall, in the Cooper Institute, and on the dock at the foot of Market slip. Here his association with the of the prohibition movement pioneers grounded him in the firm principle to which he still adheres. Here, too, another important influence was brought to bear upon his character and career. At twenty-two years of age he was married to Elizabeth Armstrong, of New York, a lady who, though then only sixteen years of age, was like himself, an earnest worker in the temperance cause, her interest in which she still retains. In New York he became an officer in the Grand Division of Sons of Temperance, and when, later on, he made the City of Toronto his home, he transferred his allegiance to the order here, and rose rapidly in the favour of his brethren. He was made Grand Worthy Associate, and in 1882 his services were recognized by his being elected Grand Worthy Patriarch for Ontario, a position which he held for two years, during which time the order nearly doubled its membership. For his services he received the warmest thanks of the Grand Division at its session at Kingston in 1884. He has also been for many years an officer of the Dominion Alliance; he was secretary of the association that conducted the successful campaign against grocers' licences in Toronto two years ago; he was a prominent figure in the York county and Toronto Dunkin Act contests; and he was for a number of years a member of the board of directors of the Toronto Temperance Reformation Society. He is a member of Erskine Presbyterian church, and in politics a Reformer. A successful business man in the wholesale fruit and oyster trade, and an active politician, Mr. McMillan has the esteem and confidence of a great number of our best citzens, in proof of which they elected him as alderman for St. James' ward. As yet, Mr. McMillan is comparatively a young man, and we trust, has a long useful future before him. We wish him all that extensive recognition and success that public men of his merits ought to have. He has a family of three children—two sons and a daughter.

Simpson, William, Toronto, was born in the village of Huntley, Aberdeenshire, Scotland, in the year 1847. His parents His parents were Alexander and Isabella, nee Staples. Mr. Simpson was an overseer of farms in the district about Huntley, and was so employed for forty-one years. He then retired: and died in 1884, leaving a family of five. The subject of three boys and two girls. this sketch is the fifth of the family. William Simpson received what is regarded as a good English education. When his studies were completed, his father apprenticed him to the trade of carpenter and builder, in the village of Huntley, under George Gray. In 1864, when master of his trade, William left Huntley and went to the City of Aber. deen, where he remained for over two years. In 1866 he moved to London, and worked there at his trade for four years. Then he got tired of the routine in the old country, and, packing up his effects, went on beard a ship bound for Canada. He landed in Toronto, and plied his trade in that city till 1880, when he purchased the buildings and machinery on 312 and 314 Queen street west, and embarked in the manufacture of sashes, doors, blinds, and other descriptions of kindred woodwork. Here he has continued ever since, and he is now the head of a prosperous, well established and popular business. Mr. Simpson is a Mason, and belongs to St. George's Lodge; to the Occident Chapter, and to the Royal and Oriental Rite. He is also a member of the A.O. of United Workmen. He is a highly respected member of the Presbyterian church; and his politics are those of the reform and progressive school. He married, in 1872, Margaret McGuire, daughter of the late James McGuire, of the County of Fermanagh, Ireland. This gentleman was in his day one of the most prominent barristers in the court. He died in 1843, and his daughter (Mrs. Simpson), came to Canada in 1868.

The number of children by this union is seven, two boys and five girls. We may add that Mr. Simpson has accumulated a great deal of property since he began busirepre R of Co tawa, 1821. his gr land was il settle Frase tain i and w 1759. Gilles ject's worth of sup

after I

the M

and wa

ness

must centur treal, James Black 1 sisted o majori ful in leaving military was im on havi and im he join Here he banded: Canada this corp at the had a clerks! Lower C at that officer of Upper a removed remained seat of getreal; and 1849, who wern me governme abode in antil Noment wa His prom the office he becam office. Ir inance de was unde ness in Canada; and in every respect he must be regarded as one of Canada's staunch representative men.

 \mathbf{a} and

best

d him

s yet,

young

luture

exten-

bublic

e has

and a

born b

shire,

erents

aples,

in the

o em-

tired;

f five,

ect of

illiam

as a

tudies

d him

er, in Grav.

illiam

Aber-

rears.

orked

en he

ntry,

peard

ed in ty till

s and

street

re of

tions

con-

head

opu-

. and

Occi-

rien-

A. 0.

pect-

; and

pro-

Mar-

ames

Ire-

опе

the

hter

868.

la 18

may

nsi-

Ross, Lt.-Col. Thomas, Accountant of Contingencies, Finance Department, Ottawa, was born at Montreal on the 8th July, 1821. His father was David Ross, Q.C., and his grandfathers were both officers in Highland regiments. His paternal grandfather was in the Montgomery Highlanders, and he settled in Quebec in the year 1760. Captain Fraser, his maternal grandfather was a captain in the Fraser Highlanders, 78th Foot. and was present at the taking of Quebec in 1759. This officer became seigneur of St. Gilles de Beaurivage by purchase. Our subject's father was a very able lawyer, and a worthy man, and his mother was a woman of superior culture. Her acts of charity live after her. She was the principal founder of the Montreal Protestant Orphan Asylum, and was one of its office bearers for half a century. Our subject was educated in Montreal, by the Rev. Dr. Black and the Rev. James Ramsey. The school kept by Dr. Black was opened in 1829. The family consisted of five sons and four daughters. The majority have passed away, having been useful in many ways in their generation. On leaving school his inclinations were for a military life, but the fulfilment of his desire was impracticable. However, he was bent on having as much military life as possible, and immediately on leaving school, in 1838 he joined the Montreal Rifles as a private. Here he remained until the corps was disbanded in May, 1839. The rebellion in Lower Canada was the cause of the embodiment of this corps. In November, 1839, he received at the hands of the late Sir Dominic Daly, a clerkship in the provincial secretary's office. Lower Canada. The office was in Montreal at that date, but he became a permanent officer of the department on the union of Upper and Lower Canada, in 1841. removed to Kingston in May, 1841, and remained there until May, 1844, when the seat of government was removed to Montreal, and there he lived until autumn of 1849, when, on the alternate system, the government was removed to Toronto. He bode in Toronto and Quebec, alternately, antil November, 1865, when the government was taken permanently to Ottawa. his promotion to the different grades in the office took place in 1842 and 1858, when he became chief clerk in the secretary's office. In 1870 he was transferred to the inance department, when that department was under the control of Sir John Rose, bart., K.C.M.G. Under his auspices Mr. Ross carried out the formation of the stationery office, which has proved a great success in a financial point of view. His service has now extended over a period of fortysix years. With the exception of G. Wicksteed, law clerk of the House of Commons, he is now the only clerk in the civil service who went to Kingston in 1841, from Lower Canada. Mr. Ross's military career has been as follows:—Private and corporal of A Company, Montreal Rifles, 1838 and 1839; lieutenant and acting adjutant general, Montreal Garrison Artillery, 1844; unattached captain and major, 1846 and 1850; captain Quebec Garrison Artillery, A Battery, Active Militia, 1865; captain B Battery, Ottawa Garrison Artillery, 1865. In June, 1872, he raised the Governor-General's Foot Guards, of which regiment he is commanding officer, with the rank of lieutenant-colonel. In 1885 he commanded the Wimbledon team. Lt.-Col. Ross became a Freemason in 1843. He was grand pursuivant in the Provincial Grand Lodge of Montreal and William Henry, and afterwards at Quebec. He was grand secretary for the Provincial Grand Lodge, Quebec and Three Rivers. He ceased his connection with Freemasonry on the severance of the union between England and Canada. Lt.-Col. Ross visited Europe twice, and England on several occasions. From youth up he has been an Episcopalian. His first wife was Maria Sarah Macaulay, daughter of George Macaulay, son of the Inspector General of Hospitals Macaulay, who settled in Toronto after the war of 1812, and by this union there was one daughter, who is married to Dr. J. A. Clayton, a Cornish gentleman, now in the finance department. He was again married in 1863, to Ellen E. Creighton, eldest daughter of the late Captain Creighton, a retired officer, who had held commissions in the 81st and 70th regiments of Foot. In politics Colonel Ross is, and always has been, a Conservative. He is of a kindly heart, and has genial winning manners.

Campbell, Rev. Thos. Metcaffe, a minister of the Methodist Church, and now stationed at Goderich, is the eldest son of the late John and Margaret Campbell, of Dundas. He was born November 9th, 1839, in the township of Hawksbury, on the west side of the Ottawa river, midway between Ottawa and Montreal, and brought up in the town of Dundas, which was the home of his family for eighteen years. He belongs to a branch of the house of Argyll, which have with care and pride preserved their record of descent from the first duke of that name, who took a prominent part in the rebellion which placed William of Orange and Mary on the throne. Rev. Mr. Campbell received his early education in the town where he was brought up, and also took a thorough course of training in the Mercantile College of Buffalo, intending to follow commercial life. But his course was ordered otherwise. At about twenty years of age, in connection with the death of his father, a conviction of duty which had followed him from childhood became deeply intensified, and he promptly sacrificed excellent business engagements and prospects, and entered upon a course of study for the ministry, at Victoria College. He was received as a probationer in 1866, and duly ordained to the ministry in June, 1870, by the late Dr. Punshon, in the old Adelaide street Methodist church, Toronto. His appointments since his ordination have been Dunnville, Ridgeway, Merritton, Windsor, Sarnia and Goderich, in all of which places he has left substantial results of his energy and ability, in largely increased congregations and membership, and improved church property. As a preacher, Rev. Mr. Campbell is clear, logical and fluent, with a strong, commanding voice, and a manner graceful, yet im-His sermons abound in illustrations drawn from observation, history and science, and to these things, as well as to an intense earnestness, the popularity and results of his preaching may be traced. His written and published lectures are prepared with great care, and have been received with much favour, especially that on "The Dispensations," delivered before the Guelph conference, held in Owen Sound in June, 1885. Rev. Mr. Campbell is a strong temperance worker, and an ardent and impassioned advocate of total abstinence and prohibition. During the last few years he has also taken an active part in the councils of the church to which he belongs. He was a member of the General Conference of the Methodist Church of Canada in 1882, and also a member of the delegated body which framed the discipline of the now united Methodist Church. At the conference of 1885, he was elected to the office of district superintendent, a position for which his administrative ability and inspiring energy eminently fit him. He was married, on June 22nd, 1870, to Martha, youngest daughter of Thomas Williams, Esq., St. Thomas, a graceful and gifted lady whose eminent piety and abundant labour in the church have borne much fruit for Christ.

children, three boys and three girls, bless their parsonage home.

Desjardins, T. C. Alphonse, Mont. real, M. P. for Hochelaga, Quebec, was born at Terrebonne, Quebec, on the 6th of May, 1841. The family settled in Canada. before the cession of the province to Great Britain. The father of our distinguished subject, was deputy sheriff of the district of Terrebonne for a number of years. Young Desjardins was at first instructed in Mas. son college, and when his course ended here, he entered the Seminary of Nicolet. After leaving the last named institution master Desjardins began to consider what profession he should adopt, and he had little difficulty in making choice of the law. So he entered the office of Wilfred Provost; but subsequently, he went into the office of Fabre, Lesage & Jetté, of Montreal. In 1862 he was called to the bar, and began the practice of his profession. He continued in practice till 1867; and then journalistic literature won him to itself. He became one of the associate editors of L'Ordre, and his pen was remarkable always for brilliancy and edge, and sometimes for pungency. For four years he remained with L'Ordre, then he became editor of Le Nouveau Monde, which position he held from 1872 to 1879. paper, like its dashing editor, was Liberal-Conservative, and it had an independent ring about every sentence that it uttered, When it began its career of educating the people, conservatism was in a sorry plight in many parts of the province; and it is due to M. Desjardins to say, that his pen was largely instrumental in infusing courage and life and ambition into his political confreres. M. Desjardins was first elected to parliament by acclamation, at the general election of 1874; he was re-elected at the general election of 1878; and by acclamation again at the last general election. He is a very powerful, comprehensive and convincing speaker; and he always commands the attention of the House. He has delivered effective speeches favouring the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railroad, and in urging an amnesty to Riel after the rebellion of 1860-61. He is an advocate of separate schools, and warmly sympathised and co-operated with Mr. Costigan in his exertions to have an obnoxious school law passed in the New Brunswick legislature repealed. On the 17th May, 1864, he married Virginie, eldest daughter of Hubert Pare. She died in 1874, leaving four children. He has since married Hortense, youngest

We que panior journa dent of created 30th Jist to being Holine organize conting the Hot first purious first parious first parious panions with the same first parious firs

daugh

first purperare the Conthe seven might a elected Bus Carthe Ric pany.

presider Railway

Canadia
where i Railroac
the Ott
has take ment of Canada,
was chai
men sele olicy, a

ries and

St. Jero

Gran Hayor of Scotland,
s a son vife and 854. (C
amily mario, and ubject b
late of e

he hands
t first a fterward ave hear al stude
est accou
e entered uently he

he busin expand ons for is now lost expen daughter of Joseph Barsalou, of Montreal. We quote from the "Parliamentary Commanion: "-" M. Desjardins retired from curnalism in September, 1879. He is presitent of the Jacques Cartier Bank. He was created a knight of the order of Pius IX. Mth July, 1872, after his return from a mit to Rome, where he had the honour of being admitted to an audience with His Holiness. Ha took an active part in the organization of the Canadian Papal Zouave ontingent, which went to the assistance of the Holy Father in 1868. He was one of the authors of the Programme Catholique. first published in April, 1871, which was prepared for the purpose of being offered to the Conservative party, as a basis on which the several opposing sections of that party might agree." In 1882 M. Desjardins was elected president of Le Credit Foncier du Bas Canada, and in 1883 became director of the Richelieu and Ontario Navigation company. In last July he was elected vicepresident of the Montreal and Western Railway Company, a line to be built from St. Jerome, terminus of a branch of the Canadian Pacific Railway to the Desert, where it will cross the Gatineau Valley Railroad, and thence run westerly through the Ottawa valley region. M. Desjardins has taken an active interest in the developnent of the commercial relations between Canada, France and Central Europe. ras chairman of a committee of business men selected to study and promote such a policy, and open new markets to the indusries and unknown resources of Canada.

bless

Mont-

, was 6th of

mada,

Great

rished rict of

oung

Mas-

ended

colet.

tution

what little

. So

vost;

office

treal.

and

He

then

itself.

ors of

e ai-

some-

rs he

ecame

posi-

This

oeral-

hdent

ered.

g the light

s due

was e and

reres.

arlia-

elec-

geneation

e is a

vinc-

s the

ered

truc-

and

e re-

te of

ised

.law

e re-

ried

aré.

ren.

Grant, John M., Woodstock, Ontario, layor of Woodstock, was born at Elgin, cotland, on the 2nd of October, 1849. a son of Thomas Grant, who, with his rife and family emigrated to Canada in 854. On arriving in this country, the amily made their way to Woodstock, Onario, and here took up their abode. Our ubject being only five years old at the ate of emigration, his education fell into he hands of the Woodstock masters. He first attended the primary schools, but fterwards entered the high school. ave heard that he was a diligent and careal student, and turned his time to the st account. Shortly after leaving school, entered his father's tannery, and subsemently he joined himself with his brother. he business of the firm very soon began expand and establish important connecons for itself all over the country; and is now one of the best equipped, and ost expensive tanneries in the Dominion. But our subject has not always confined his abilities to his private business, for he has taken a deep interest in political questions, and is ever ready to go upon any platform to express his views, and help along what he believed to be a deserving cause. He is quick, energetic, effective, and sincere, and saying this we know of no higher compliments that could be paid to a public man. He has always professed the doctrines of the Reformers, and he is one of the leaders of the party in his county. Mr. Grant has occupied all the positions in the gift of the people of Wood-He has represented them for a number of years in the county council; was reeve for the years 1881, 1882 and 1883, during which time he was a leading member of that body. During the year 1884-5 he filled the position of mayor to the fullest satisfaction of the people. He has always been aggressive and progressive in his advocacy of public questions; and has done a great deal to bring Woodstock into prominence and position. He has always been elected by handsome majorities; and the longer he is before the people, the higher seems to become the public appreciation of his qualities. The well-being of his adopted town seems to be his greatest public care; and the townsfolk, it seems, are neither blind to this fact, nor unmindful In 1875 he married Isabella Watson. eldest daughter of Alexander Watson. The fruit of this union is one child.

Ashley, Harford Thurlow, Belleville, was born on June 14, 1840, in the home in which he at present resides, fifth concession of Thurlow, County of Hastings. His father was Simcoe Ashley, of Massachusetts, and his mother, Mary, nee Nash, of New York. His father settled in Canada in 1803. Young Ashley, the subject of this memoir, received a common school education, and completed his studies in a select school in New York state. He also attended Albert College, Belleville, and the Commercial College at Poughkeepsie, N. Y. He was auditor of the township of Thurlow for 1869 and 1870. He was elected deputy-reeve of the same township for 1871, 1872 and 1873. He was elected reeve in 1874, and continued in such office up to date (1885.) Elected warden of the County of Hastings, 1880; he was chairman of the Gravel Roads Committee for the said county for 1879 and 1885. He became the choice of the Reform Convention of East Hastings for their candidate in the House of Commons, in 1882, but was defeated by

John White, the sitting member, by about fifty votes. Mr. Ashley has been largely instrumental in the rebuilding of the village of Foxboro, which under the impetus given it by him, has risen from a dilapidated country village, to the most thriving village in the township. Among other improvements was the laying out of a cemetery, and building a vault for the same by Mr. Ashley, which is known as Ashley Cemetery. He erected; in 1871, on the farm on which he was born, and near the village, a cheese factory known as "Ashley's." This factory has been of immense service to the local community. He sometime afterward purchased the Thurlow cheese factory, which had been, heretofore, unsuccessful in its management, and which was burned on 4th July, 1878. On this site Mr. Ashley erected a new factory, which was in successful operation inside three weeks from the date of the fire. Both these undertakings, under the energetic management of Mr. Ashley, have been very successful, and remain so to-day. In 1874, our subject purchased the carriage works at Ross Corners, formerly owned by W. H. Vermilyea, and which had been closed. Here he worked up a successful trade. In 1878, he built a handsome block of two stores and a bank, known as the Ashley block, the latter occupied by the Belleville branch of the Bank of Commerce, situated on the east side of Front street, in the very heart of the business centre of the City of Belleville. This block is three stories high, and one of the best structures in the city. In 1882, Mr. Ashley purchased the premises of the Wallbridge Foundry in the said city. The premises had been idle for some time, and were at the time of purchase in a very dilapidated condition. After obtaining possession, he put them in thorough repair, and removed his carriage business thither, from Ross He then organized a company known as the Ashley Carriage Company, with a capital of $60,000, of which $36,000 was subscribed on the 1st of April, 1885, and this company now employs about thirty hands, and are turning out buggies, phaetons, tubular axle lumber waggons, and cheese machinery. The wrought iron tubular axle, of which this company owns the patent, bids fair to revolutionize the solid iron and wood axle in use at present. is an adherent of the Presbyterian church. He married on the 15th of September, 1874, Sabra Maud Vandewater, daughter of Henry Vandewater, of the township of Sidney, by whom he has had three children, two of whom are living, both being girls. When the City of Belleville was approached by the speculators who were "booming" the smelting works and still enterprises, Mr. Ashley was one of the parties selected by the citizens to enquire into the bona fides of the promoters. The result was that the people of Belleville escaped what might have been a very undesirable acquisition.

R

th

re

an

fo

ale

Co

ac:

of

Do

W

an

Tie

has

pol

Co

ano

Jol

def

οf

thr

var

0n

his

ner

nan

Jan

the

Tise

Mr.

Cou

bus

to I

Qué

he

enjo

seve

Tisc

way in lu

Pott

prie

and

com

abou

say t

the

ente

shoo

in or

Shoo

owns deer

ber c

Epis

daug

Chris

withi

Tisdale, David, Q.C., Lieut.-Colonel, Simcoe, Ontario, was born in the township of Charlotteville, Norfolk, Ontario, on the 8th September, 1835. His parents were Ephraim and Hannah, his mother's maiden name being Price. Her father, James Price, was a U. E. loyalist who came to Canada shortly after the declaration of independence, and settled in the township of Walsingham, and left numerous descend-The grandfather of our subject, Ephraim Tisdale, lived at Freetown in 1775, and was obliged to leave because of his loyal sentiments. He was also obliged, later on, to abandon his ship, to avoid capture, and like many another, true to the old flag, he lost everything that he possessed Then he settled in New Brunswick, but after a time removed to Upper Canada. He left eight sons and four daughters, and all his children, except Walker, came to Upper Canada with him. His father, Ephraim Tisdale, served in the war of 1812, and took part in the battles of Queenston Heights and Lundy's Lane, and died February 12, 1883, at Charlotteville, in the County Norfolk His father served in a troop of horse in the rebellion of 1837, and was over twenty-seven years in service. The rebels one night surrounded his house, and except for his absence with his troop, he would undoubtedly have been killed. He had his forage cap taken off by a cannon ball at the battle of Navy Island. He was born in 1801, and took a very active part in politics in his early Young Tisdale received his early days. education at Simcoe Grammar School, and studied law in the office of G. R. Van Norman, at Simcoe, from 1852 to 1854, and then went into the office of Read, Leith & Read, Toronto, where he completed his term in February, 1857. He joined a company of volunteers at Simcoe as a private at the time of the Trent difficulty, and he was made captain of the company. He was gazetted lieutenant-colonel of the 39th Norfolk Rifes in December, 1868; and was thanked in general orders for dispersing, on the requisition of the civil authorities, with part of his regment, a prize fight near Port Dover, Lake Erie, in the spring of 1872. He was one of the delegates who formed the Dominion Rifle Association, but declined to serve on the council on account of pressure of business. Mr. Tisdale was appointed deputy registrar and master-in-chancery at Simcoe; and was likewise chosen reeve and councillor for the town of Simcoe for several years, and also member of the county council for the County of Norfolk. In 1876 he took an active part in a railway enterprise, the object of which was to construct a railway from Port Dover, Lake Erie, to Georgian Bay, at Wiarton, and after much manipulation, time and labour, saw his scheme carried out. Mr. Tisdale is a moderate Conservative, and he has, from early years, taken an active part in politics, and he thoroughly believes that the Conservative party is the party of progress and of true reform. In 1874 he opposed John Charlton in North Norfolk, but was defeated. Lieut Colonel Tisdale is a man of wide experience, and he has travelled through the United States, and visited various parts of the South during the war. On his arrival in Simcoe, after completing the old his studies, Mr. Tisdale formed a law partnership with R. T. Livingstone, under the name of Tisdale & Livingstone; and in 1872 James Robb, of Hamilton, was admitted to the partnership, and the name changed to Tisdale, Livingstone & Robb. In 1884, on Upper Mr. Livingstone having been appointed d took County Judge of Norfolk, he retired from the hts and business, and the firm's name was changed to Tisdale & Robb. Mr. Tisdale was made a orfolk. Quéen's Counsel in 1872. Up to this time in the he had closely attended to business, and v-seven enjoyed a large practice, and had refused ht surseveral offers to join firms in Toronto. Mr. absence Tisdale has been interested in several raily have way contracts; and is now largely interested taken in lumbering. He is president of the J. E. Navy Potts Salt and Lumber Co., who are protook a prietors of large steam mills in Michigan and Wisconsin. The annual out-put of this early early company, from the various mills, amount to ol, and about 70,000.000 feet of timber. We may n Nor id then say that Mr. Tisdale bought out, last year, the interest the Federal Bank had in this Read, erm in enterprise. Our subject is very fond of shooting and fishing, and took an active part any of in organizing and perfecting the Long Point Shooting Club on Lake Erie. This club now at the s made owns and has the finest wild fowl and wild zetted Rifles deer preserve in the world. He is a member of no church, but is an adherent of the in gen• Episcopal communion, of which his wife and isition daughters are members. He believes that s regi-Christianity is too broad to be embraced Lake within the particular tenets of any church, girls.

oached

ming"

prises.

elected

e hona

tas that might is:tion.

olonel.

wnship

on the s were maiden

James

ame to

of inwnship

escend-

ubject.

own in

ause of

bliged,

id cap-

sessed.

k, but

fa. He and all

im Tis-

, 1883,

one of

and that salvation is quite within the reach of all the children of our heavenly Father, if they do what is right and proper. married October 16, 1858, Sarah Araminta Walker, by whom he has two daughters and two sons. His eldest son is now studying law; and his youngest son, having completed his education, is engaged in cattle ranching. Lieut.-Colonel Tisdale is an active man, and a fit subject for our Canadian young men to follow. Johnston, Rev. Hugh, M.A., B.D. Toronto, was born in the township of Southwold, Ontario, on January 5th, 1840. He is a son of John Johnston, a yeoman of Scotch extraction, and Mary Ann, nee Teetzel, whose grandfather was a German. Johnston received in his youth an ordinary education, but being of an ambitious and sturdy temperament, he resolved to carve out a prominent place for himself in the world. As a first step towards this end he proceeded to Toronto, where he attended the Normal School, from which he carried away a first-class teacher's certificate. Obtaining his license to teach, he was fortunate enough to immediately obtain charge of the High School at Arkona, in the County of Lambton. Here he taught for a year with marked success, but had yet attained only his eighteenth year. He then became a candidate for the ministry in the Methodist church; and to the end of ordination, entered Victoria college at Cobourg, where he took a full course in arts. He graduated in 1864 as medallist and valedictorian of his class. In the following year Mr. Johnston was ordained, and appointed to Toronto. In 1866 he proceeded to Montreal as an assistant to Rev Dr. Douglas in the Montreal West charge. In the following year, he went to Windsor, Ontario, where he had the pastorate of a church for three years. When his term here expired, he was invited again to Toronto, and whilst in that city he made a study of Hebrew, having as his preceptor, Dr. Herschfelder. In 1874 his alma mater conferred upon him the degree of Bachelor of Divinity. His next appointment was to the Centenary Church, at Hamilton, this charge being the largest in the jurisdiction of the London conference. After his term of three years here had elapsed, he was invited to the pastorate of the Wesley church in the same city. Under his superintendency while he retained this incumbency, it was erected into a larger and very beautiful church. In 1878 an urgent request was sent from the quarterly official board of the St. James Street church, Montreal, asking for his transference to the Montreal conference. This request was complied with, and under his pastorship the church throve in strength and numbers. In 1882 Rev. Mr. Johnston was transferred from Montreal to the Metropolitan church, Toronto. After completing his term here, he was called to the Carlton St. church, the pastorship of which he holds at the time of writing. Rev. Mr. Johnston is a very able and successful preacher, and there is an air of scholarship in all his utter-He is a man of a broad, generous heart, and a cheerful temperament. We may add, likewise, that he wields a very able, and a very graceful pen. He has for many years been a contributor to the religious periodicals of his denomination; but he has, likewise, been a force on occasion, in the secular press. He was correspondent on the expepedition which went through British Columbia to the Pacific coast. "His letters," says a competent authority, "were fresh, racy, and popular, being copied not only into Canadian but into United States and English newspapers." In 1876, Rev. Mr. Johnston married Eliza, daughter of Alderman Richard Holland, of Montreal. The fruits of this union are a family of seven sons and one daughter. The well-known and very able book, with the apt and poetical title, "To-ward the Sunrise," is also from the pen of Rev. Mr. Johnston. This work, we learn, has already reached the third edition. may be interesting to know that our subject was an intimate, personal friend of Rev. Dr. Punshon, He was with him in Italy, in his extreme illness, and accompanied the great divine to London. It was his pen which furnished to the Christian World the details of the closing hours. Mr Johnston is only now in the prime of his manhood, and a long career of usefulness and brilliancy yet is, we hope, allotted to him.

Hobbs, William, Milton, was born in the town of Dundas, County Wentworth, Ontario, on the 14th of November, 1848. His parents were William Hobbs and Sarah Anne Philip. Mr. Hobbs came from Buckinghamshire, England, in 1843, and settled in Toronto as a miller, where he remained about one year, after which he removed to Dundas, where he was engaged in the milling William Hobbs business until his death. received a common school education, and after leaving school, began to learn the dry goods business, continuing at this employment until 1863. He now undertook to master the milling business, in the employ of E. & G. Egleston, at Ancaster village, and here he remained for two years, and then went to Dundas, and entered the employ of James Coleman, of that town. Hobbs remained in Dundas for five years. and in 1870 left for Hamilton. In 1877 he arrived in the town of Milton, and entered into partnership with J. D. Cum. mings. This partnership lasted for three years, when Mr. Hobbs and Mr. Cum. mings dissolved the partnership. Our subiect now associated himself with Peter Campbell, of Milton, in milling, but this partnership was dissolved in 1882. Hobbs started for himself once again, and is now possessed of one of the best flouring mills in Canada. In 1884, he was elected councilman for the town of Milton. He belongs to the Independent Order of Odd. fellows, and has held the office of sec-He has travelled through Canada retary. and the United States. In religion he is a Presbyterian, and in politics a supporter of the Reform party. He was married in 1874, to Jessie Murdoch, daughter of George Murdoch, of Strathroy, and by this lady has had two children. Mr. Hobbs is one of those persons who has a hearty, kindly word and good wish for one and all; therefore, he is a business favourite, as well as the possessor of many warm friends in the social circle.

ser yealv his liar year of

son

in

ele

vot

25

ma

last

mag

high

dea

1884

men

hood

com

left

cand

Com

Johr

for t feate

we h

the

decea

form

stood

bar.

Re

in the

Coun

His f

City

Canac

years

elder

hards

shipwi

but th

now T

the fa

sketch

Mary,

native

grated

and lo

died in

childre

teen.

at the

hood o 1837-38

Holden, Thomas, Belleville, Ontario, was born in the County of Oneida, New York, U.S., in the year 1840. His parents. soon after his birth, turned their faces toward Belleville, and settled in Shannonville, a small village nine miles distant from Belleville. Here the subject of our sketch spent his early years and pursued his first studies. While still young, he went to Cobourg to attend the classes of Victoria College, where he graduated in 1860. He was an industrious and brilliant student, and gave much promise in those days of that energy of character and capacity of intellect which were in his after life to come to such excellent use. Having finished his studies, he began the study of law in the office of William Kerr, Cobourg, and subsequently with the present Chief Justice Cameron. When his term of study was ended, he was called to the bar (1863), and began the practice of his profession. In the following year he became a member of the firm of Ross, Bell & Holden, of Belleville. In 1870 the Honourable John Ross retired, and the following year the firm was re-constructed and known as Bell, Holden & Bell; but in 1872, Mr. Holden retired. In 1866 Mr. Holden was pressed to enter civic politics, and consenting, was chosen as the repreemploy sentative for Baldwin ward. For four Mr. years he continued to hold this office, and vears. always, so far as the limited field in which 877 he his work afforded room, displayed his brilid enliancy and natural ability. Cum-During the three years 1869 and 1870 he accepted the position of chairman of the finance committee. Cum. 1871 he contested the mayoralty, and was successful, defeating Alexander Robertr sub-Peter son. In 1872 he was not a candidate; but it this in 1873 he again offered, and was again Mr. elected, defeating J. J. B. Flint by sixty and is uring votes. In 1877 he entered municipal politics as alderman for Ketcheson ward, and relected He mained in the council till 1880. But in the Oddlast named year he was appointed acting magistrate, and held that office, to the sechighest satisfaction of the public, till his anada e is a death, which occurred on the 28th of June, ter of 1884. The lamented deceased had been a member of the Methodist church from boyed in hood, and was an honoured member of that eorge communion at the time of his death. He ly has left a wife and seven children. He was a ne of candidate for East Hastings in the House of word Commons in 1872, but was defeated by efore, John White. In 1879 he was a candidate s the social for the legislature of Ontario, but was defeated by Alexander Robertson, whom, as we have seen, he had himself defeated for the mayoralty of Belleville. In politics tario, New ents. deceased was a consistent and thorough Refaces former. He was an able advocate, and stood in the front rank of the provincial nonfrom

xetch

first

t to

toria

860.

stn-

hose

apa-

after

Hav-

the

err,

pre-

his

i to

his

be-

l &

on-

o₩-

and

Mr.

Rorke, Joseph, Clarksburg, was born in the township of Tecumseh (near Beaton), County of Simcoe, Ontario, April 26th, 1832. His father, Richard Rorke, a native of the City of Waterford, Ireland, emigrated to Canada, in 1820, when a youth of fifteen years of age, in company with four or five elder brothers, who, after undergoing the hardships and perils of the sea voyage, and shipwreck off the Isle of Anticosti, losing all but their lives, made his way to Little York, now Toronto, when he shortly after located the farm upon which the subject of our sketch first saw the light. In 1831 he married Mary, eldest daughter of Thomas Hurst, a native of Roscommon, Ireland, who also emigrated with his family to Canada, in 1820, and located in the same township. died in 1880, aged seventy, leaving eleven children surviving out of a family of fourteen. Our subject received his education at the public school, in the neighbour-hood of his birthplace. The troubles of 1837-38, made a lasting impression on his mind, creating a spirit of loyalty to Queen and country, and a stern opposition to all attempts to weaken British influence, and the connexion with the mother country. When young he was very fond of literature and adventure, and desirous for a military and active life. He left school at the age of fourteen, and spent a short time as clerk in a country store. In 1848 he removed with his parents to the township of Collingwood, in the County of Grey, and located lands adjoining the present village of Heathcote, where his father still resides. This being a period when railways were unknown in Ontario, the pioneer settlers of Grey were obliged to contend with many difficulties and undergo great hardships, Holland Landing being the nearest base for supplies, and Toronto the nearest reliable market. His mind matured rapidly under the hard experience of the next five years, and he soon began to take an active part in the political struggles of the country. He remained on the farm with his father until the close of 1858; and taught school in Thornbury, during 1859 and 1860. He spent the next four years in the employ of the Messrs. Marsh, general merchants, Clarksburg, as accountant. In 1867 he married Susan, daughter of the late John Donaldson, of Mount Norris, County Armagh, Ireland, who emigrated to Canada in 1846. After his marriage, he settled permanently in Clarksburg, and opened an office as notary public, conveyancer, land loan and general agent, which he still car-His wife died in 1883, leaving two sons and three daughters living, a son and daughter having died before her. He received his first commission as captain in the 4th battalion Grey Militia, taking rank and precedence from the 4th of February, 1858, from Sir Edmund Head; and his second commission as captain in No. 4 company, division Reserve Militia of the regimental division of North Grey, taking rank and precedence from 2nd of April, 1869, from Sir John Young. In 1868 he was gazetted lieutenant in No. 7 company, 31st Grey Volunteer Infantry battalion. In 1869 he attended the School of Military Instruction, Toronto, and obtained a second class certificate, bearing date, November 24th. 1869. He received a captain's commission in the 31st Grey Volunteer Infantry battalion, taking rank and precedence from February 28th, 1870. At the time of the Trent affair, he assisted in raising a flank company in his regimental division, in which he was appointed ensign, the lieutenant-colonel and major accepting the captaincy and lieutenancy therein, but fortunately their services were not required. In the late Riel rebellion (1885), he with other officers of the 31st tendered their services to the government. He was appointed a justice of the peace for the County of Grey, January 25th, 1859; a commissioner in B. R., May 2nd, 1864; and a notary public, April 10th, 1867. These offices he still holds. He was likewise appointed a returning officer for the electoral district of the East Riding of Grey, in the Dominion elections for 1882. He represented the township of Collingwood, in the municipal council as follows: as councillor in 1866; as deputy reeve from 1868 to 1871; as reeve from 1873 to 1878; and was elected warden for the County of Grey, in 1876. He was one of the principal promoters of the North Grey Railway scheme, and became one of the provisional directors. was also a member of the board of directors of the North Grey and Northern Extension Railway Companies, until these lines were purchased by the Northern Railway Company. He also took an active part in the county legislation, in granting municipal aid to the Toronto, Grey and Bruce Railway, and the Wellington, Grev and Bruce Railway schemes. He became a member of the Orange association in the year 1853, being the first member initiated in the township of Collingwood, and has remained in connection with the order ever He filled the master's chair for several years in No. 523 and No. 1396; and was elected the first district master of Collingwood district in 1861; and was re-He was chosen deelected in 1880 81-82. puty county master for N.R. Grey in 1882-3; and at present he holds the rank of P. D. M., Collingwood district. He was also regularly received into Freemasonry, in Pythagoras Lodge, No. 137, G. R. C., on the 20th of December, 1861; and is a charter member, of Beaver Lodge, No. 234, A. F. & A. M., Clarksburg. He has also been a member of Manitou R. A. C., No. 27, G. A Liberal R. C., Collingwood, since 1870. Conservative in politics, he has been an active member of the party for the last thirty-five years; and was elected vice-president of the Liberal-Conservative Association of North Grey in 1874; and filled the office of president of the Liberal-Conservative Association of East Grey from 1875 1878. Mr. Rorke contested the riding of East Grey, with A. W. Lauder, in 1879, for the local legislature, as a resident candidate in the conservative interest, but was defeated. Our subject is a Presbyterian. All who come in contact with him, either in business or in social life, have invariably found him to be a gentleman in the highest sense; and he is of a kindly, and retiring disposition in private life; but in public he is always ready to raise his voice in the interest of the people. Mr. Rorke is very much attached to the gun and rod, and takes unbounded interest in all sports. He took an active part in the formation of the Beaver Valley co-operative society, now in active business in Clarksburg, and is one of the directors of the institution.

or we wi

rot

Vi

str

for

vea

he

was

ing

beir

time

His

cong

who

0ne

of M

clock

mend

which

the v

utes

This

subje

is an

count

procui

ment.

jr., re

vate s

living !

a time,

ronto

A. B.

After le

he beg

and bui

mained

went f

staved

he marr

He then

the late

ward str

as a de

one of t

Queen's

at the t

signed tl

was elect

1882 he w

ward, and

active par tem, and

tario.

Garrow, James Thompson, Bar. rister, etc., Goderich, was born near Niagara Falls, on the 11th March, 1843. He is the eldest son of Edward and Rebecca Garrow. natives of Scotland, which worthy couple are still living upon their farm, adjoining the Our subject completed town of Seaforth. a common school education at the Gode. rich Grammar School. He was articled as a law student with the present judge of the County Court of the County of Huron. Justice Toms, and he was admitted a solicitor in May, 1868, and called to the bar in November, 1869. On his admission to the roll of solicitors, he entered into partnership with M. C. Cameron, the present M.P. for West Huron, and remained in that firm (Cameron & Garrow) practising at Goderich till July, 1874. He has since continued the practice of his profession there, and has for years enjoyed a large business. He is now senior member of the law firm of Garrow & Proudfoot. In politics Mr. Garrow is a staunch Reformer, and in religion a Presbyterian, being a member of Knox church. Our subject was under the Rev. Dr. Ure. for seven years reeve of the town of Goderich (1874 to 1880 inclusive). For the last year he was warden of the county council of Huron, and he then retired from municipal So far he has not taken an active duties. part in politics, though he is undoubtedly much interested in public questions. He is a member of Maitland Lodge, No. 112, A. F. & A. M. He married on July 17, 1872, Mary, eldest daughter of the late Rev. Charles Fletcher, of Goderich, and by this union has five children, all of whom are liv-As a lawyer Mr. Garrow stands very high in his profession, for industry, for ability, and for high personal worth. He is a gentleman of much modesty of character, but diffident though he is in appearing in the public light as a representative man, here it is the duty of the biographer

to put him.

Downey, Thomas, jr., Toronto, was born in Richmond Hill, County of York, on the 12th of February, 1843. His parents were Thomas and Anna Downey, nee Smith, who married in Ireland, and landed in Toronto in 1842. Mr. Downey, senr., adopted the business of carpenter and builders and constructed the public schools situated on Victoria street, John street, and Phoebe street. In 1878 he was elected alderman for St. John's ward, and re-elected for the years 1873, 1874, 1875, and 1876, when he retired from public life. Mr. Downey was one of the first promoters in the building of the Elm street Methodist church, being a trustee for many years and at the time of his death, which occurred in 1879. His demise was greatly lamented by all the congregation, and by the citizens of Toronto, whom he had served so long and faithfully. One strange incident in the life and death of Mr. Downey may be mentioned. The clock which Mr. Downey bought when commencing house-keeping in Toronto, and which was continuously in use, stopped at the very moment of his death, at nine minutes to twelve o'clock, p.m., March, 1879. This clock is now in the possession of the subject of this sketch. Another curiosity is an Orange certificate, brought to this country, which, in its form and way it was procured, makes it a most curious instrument. It bears date 1834. Thomas Downey, ir., received his early education at the prirate school of David Storey, who is still living in Toronto. After remaining here for a time, he finished his education at the Toronto Grammar School, under the late A. B. Howe, who was then its principal. After leaving school, at the age of fourteen, he began to learn the trade of carpenter and builder, in his father's shop. He remained so employed for five years, when he went to the United States. There he stayed in different cities until 1869, when he married and returned again to Toronto. He then purchased the lumber business of the late Thomas Briggs, situated on Edward street. He still carries on business as a dealer, builder and contractor, being one of the foremost in that trade in Ontario. He belonged to No. 1 Company Queen's Own Riffes, and was a corporal at the time when Captain Macdonald resigned the command, and Colonel Otter was elected to the position of ensign. In 1882 he was elected alderman for St. John's ward, and re-elected in 1883. He took an active part in the local improvement system, and the benefits of this system can be

rian.

ither

iably

ghest

iring

ublic

n the

very

takes

took

eaver

ctive

Bar-

igara s the

row.

e are

the

eted

ode-

icled

ge of

ron.

olic-

r in

the

ner-

1.P.

firm-

rich

the

for

now

row

is a

res-

cch, was rich

of

pal

ive

dly He

seen in the block pavements and other improvements. He was also chairman of the legislative committee for the city council. He belongs to the Orange order, and has been for twenty-one years a member. He is past master of L. O. L. No. 396; belongs to the Independent Order of Oddfellows; is a Freemason; is a member of the A.O.U. Workmen, and also belongs to the Sons of Canada. He married, at Memphis, Tennessee, in 1866, Esther Van Vleck, daughter of the late M. F. Van Vleck, one of the early settlers of Wisconsin, U.S. Mr. Downey has had eight children, of whom seven are still living-five boys and two girls. The eldest son, George E. Downey, assists his father in his business. Like his father, he is a Methodist, and one of the oldest members of the Elm street Methodist church. Mr. Downey is a staunch Reformer, and is vice-president of St. John's Ward Reform Association, and is popular in social as well as private life.

Weldon, Charles Wesley, D.C.L., Q.C., M.P., St. John, N.B., was born at Richibucto, N.B., on February 27th, 1830. is a son of the Honourable John W. Weldon, for many years a representative for the House of Assembly of New Brunswick; for eight years speaker of the House; and a judge of the Supreme Court of New Brunswick for nearly twenty years. He died on February 10th, 1881, in the eighty-first year of his age. His mother, Frances Chandler Upham, who died in 1844, was the youngest daughter of the Honourable Joshua Upham, a judge of the Supreme Court of New Brunswick at its first organization. Judge Upham was a loyalist from the State of Massachusetts, and entered the army during the revolutionary war. He became a colonel of dragoons, and was aide-de-camp to Lord Dorchester. He died in London in 1807. The Honourable Charles W. Upham, of Salem, Massachusetts, a well-known writer, was a son of Judge Upham. Judge Upham's first wife was a daughter of Colonel Murray, of Rutland, and his second wife a daughter of Charles Chandler, the grandfather of the Honourable Edward B. Chandler, late lieutenant-governor of New Bruns-Our subject was educated at the Grammar School at Richibucto, and at the Windsor Academy. He entered King's College, Windsor, in 1844, and graduated with honours as optime, or double first, in 1847. He became M.A. in 1851; and in 1884 received the honorary degree of D.C.L. He began the study of the law with his father at Richibucto, and was admitted to the bar in New Brunswick in 1852, and | commenced practice in St. John. He was appointed Queen's counsel in 1873. Weldon is president of the New Brunswick Electric Telegraph Company, a director of the New Brunswick Railroad Company, a director of the Fredericton Railway Company, and also of the Carleton Branch Railroad Company; a vice-president of the Eastern Marine Insurance Company, director of William Parks & Son (limited) cotton factory; was for several years president of the Barristers' Society of New Brunswick, and is a bencher. He is president of the St. John Law Society; and has been warden of Trinity Church, St. John, since 1875, and has been a delegate to the Diocesan Synod, and also to the Provincial Synod of Canada. He is a member of Carleton Royal Arch Chapter of St. John. In 1873, at a citizens' meeting, he was nominated a candidate for mayor, but was defeated. In 1865 and 1866 he took an active part in opposition to the scheme of confederation; and in 1878 was nominated, with Honourable Isaac Burpee, as the candidate of the Liberal party for the Dominion Parliament for the city and county of St. John, and was elected. 1882 he was again elected for the same constituency. The first important case in which Mr. Weldon engaged was, in 1856, Lawton vs. Tarratt, where he was associated with the late S. R. Thomson, against the late Hon. R. L. Hazen, the present Justice Gray, of British Columbia, and other leading counsel of the day. In 1864 he was associated with Justice Gray as counsel for the Southern Confederacy on the Chesapeake case, where the parties who captured this vessel were arrested and ordered to be extradited by the police magistrate of St. John, on a charge of piracy; but upon an application by Mr. Weldon to the present Chief Justice of Canada, then on the New Brunswick bench, after an able argument the prisoners were discharged, and subsequently Messrs. Gray & Weldon successfully defended other parties tried on a charge of piracy, in the Court of Admiralty, before Carter, C.J., and Parker and Ritchie, JJ. Since that time Dr. Weldon has been engaged in many of the most important cases in New Brunswick, and also before the Supreme Court of Canada on appeals from that court. Dr. Weldon's legal attainments are admitted to be very wide and very profound, and as an authority on maritime law he has no peer in Canada. He does not very often address the House of Commons, but whenever he rises he at once gets the attention of members. He is a nervous, somewhat impetuous speaker, and this, added to the clearness and purity of his language, and the straightforwardness of his ideas, make him very effective in debate. He has been always a very consistent and very prominent Liberal. In religion he is a steadfast member of the Church of England. He married on March 21st, 1860, Annie, only daughter of John Tucker, Esq., who died in August, 1885.

Champlain, Samuel de, came of a noble family of Brouage, in the province of Saintonge, France. In the year 1600, he commanded a vessel on a voyage to the East Indies, acquiring a high reputation for his skill as a naval officer. On his return to France, the prospect was mooted of prosecuting the discovery which had been made in Canada, by Cartier, and De Chatte, the governor of the colony, secured the services of Champlain. The intrepid navigator set sail on the 16th of March, 1603, accompanied by Pontgravé, who had already made several voyages to Tadousac, a trading post at that point, where the cold sullen waters of the Saguenay are sluiced into the St. Lawrence. After tarrying for a short period here, the explorers took a light batteau, ascending the St. Lawrence, as far as the falls of St. Louis. the cataract which had formed the terminus of Cartier's explorations. The falls of St. Louis were in the neighbourhood of the Indian settlement, Hochelaga, and at this place Champlain tarried for a time to obtain information from the Indians; and he made some careful explorations along the St. Lawrence. Sailing for France in August, when he reached that country he found that De Chatte was dead and Sieur de Monts appointed in his place, who engaged him as his pilot in another voyage to the new world. On March 7th, 1604, Champlain set out on his second voyage, arriving at Acadie, or what was known later as Acadia, on May After much cruising, in search for a desirable situation for a settlement, a small island, about twenty leagues to the westward of St. John river was chosen. This was St. Croix island, and thereon the discoverers established themselves. In 1607, Champlain was sent on another voyage to Tadousac, and on the 3rd of July of the following year, he laid the foundation of Quebec. He erected staunch barracks, cleared the forest from the ground, and sowed many acres of rye and wheat. He had none of the commercial instinct in him, else he might soon have made himself rich by traffic with the Indians; he was only concerned in laying the f the n Dom: durin head. plain the n being ter, s amon for th of the like a could 1609. tribes, the c Champ its ow makins natives forth : lake to expedia their v lake, a they re comme lain fro he reco and the fied the panic. with fif visits to

was con the dist Condé a ed adhe and reso ness of C out a nu entered the face hunger a ing and c obliged t Kirke, w equipped taken to strenuous and Canad the treat Acadie a exertions He was ap did not li

tration, in

He well m other ex

the foundations of enduring settlements in the new world, and establishing firmly the Dominion of France therein. Conspiracy during the first winter in Canada raised its head, but the scheme to assassinate Champlain was discovered by Capt. Testu, one of the miscreants suffering death, the others being sent to the galleys. During the winter, scurvey in a malignant form broke out among the colonists, and Champlain sought for the medicine—a decoction of the bark of the auneda -which Cartier had under a like application used so successfully, but he could not obtain any. In the summer of 1609, the Hurons, Algonquins and other tribes, put on their paint to march against the common enemy, the Iroquois; and Champlain, who loved such enterprise for its own sake, and further being desirous of making allies of so many powerful tribes of natives joined them. From Sorel he set forth with his savage allies, entering the lake to which he gave his own name. expedition hoped to surprise the Iroquois in their villages, but they met them upon the lake, and turning their prows shoreward, they resolved to bivouac for the night and commence the battle on the morrow. Champlain from his covert, shot two chiefs whom he recognized by their plumes. The noise and the execution of the firearms, so terrified the poor Iroquois that they fled in sad panic. The expedition returned to Quebec with fifty scalps. Champlain made many visits to France, and also joined in several other expeditions against the Iroquois. He was continued as lieutenant-governor under the distinguished nobleman, the Prince of Condé and Montmorency. He was a devoted adherent of the Roman catholic faith. and resolved to plant the cross in the wilderness of Canada. With this aim, he brought out a number of Jesuit fathers, who nobly entered in the work assigned to them in the face of every danger, baffling with cold, hunger and superstition in its most degrading and cruel forms. In July, 1629, he was obliged to surrender Quebec to Sir David Kirke, who came against him with a wellequipped English armament. He was then taken to France, where he exerted himself strenuously for the recovery of New France, and Canada was restored again, in 1632, by the treaty of St. Germain, together with Acadie and Cape Breton. Champlain's exertions were not without due recognition. He was appointed governor of Quebec, but did not live long to carry out an administration, in which his soul was bound up. He well merited the title of the father of

New France. In a large sense he was, and though he was credulous, superstitious and almost fanatical, he had an enormous fund of energy and much sagacity and penetration. It is doubtful indeed, if the founding of a colony in such circumstances as he was placed, could have fallen into the hands of a better man.

May, David Davidson, Registrar North Riding, County of Perth, Stratford, was born at Broughty Ferry, near Dundee, Scotland, on the 28th of January, 1828. In 1843 he came to Canada, taking up his abode for a short period in Montreal, where he employed himself in a mercantile office. He moved then to Bowmanville, Upper Canada, where he was for many years in the employ of the late Senator Simpson, and from Bowmanville he removed to the County of Simcoe, where he also occupied himself with commercial pursuits for a time. He then moved (nearly thirty years ago) to Listowel, north Perth, where, in conjunction with his father and brothers, he erected a saw and grist mill. Our subject is a son of Robert Hay, who was descended from an old Inverness-shire family. His mother, Catherine McKiddie, who is still aiive, was a native of Forfarshire, Scotland. He was educated at private schools in Forfarshire and Dundee, and pursued chiefly the English branches and mathematics. He was for ten years in succession the reeve of Elma, in the County of Perth; and was likewise reeve of Listowel for several years after its incorporation. Of an active temperament, and taking a deep interest in the progress of his county, he was largely instrumental in bringing about the construction of the northern gravel roads in the County of Perth. He was foremost too in the movement which resulted in the construction of the southern extension of the Wellington, Grey & Bruce Railway, by way of Listowel. With his brothers he constructed the first ten miles of the road, and spent several months in the municipalities interested, promoting the passage of by-laws in aid of the road. He was likewise active in procuring government aid for the road. Mr. Hay also assisted in procuring bonuses for a railway line from Port Dover to Stratford; and, in conjunction with Colonel Tisdale and S. S. Fuller, secured bonuses for the Stratford and Huron Railway, from Stratford to Wiarton. In 1867, he contested North Perth for the legislature, but was defeated by Mr. Monteith. In 1873, he was employed by the Ontario government, as special emigration agent in Europe, and lectured upon Canadian resources in England and Scotland.

He returned the same year, and took charge of, for several months, the Ontario home emigration work, interviewing and conferring with various county councils, and other bodies, with respect to immigration and kindred subjects. He was for nearly twenty years division court clerk at Listowel; and was also a justice of the peace for the county. In 1874, he contested North Perth again, and this time was successful, and was re-elected in 1879. In 1883 he was defeated. In the last named year, he was again employed by the Ontario government as special emigration commissioner in England and Scotland. He attended that year, in the interests of Ontario, the Royal Show in York, and that of the Highland Society at Inverness. He lectured in Scotland, his work having special regard to securing emigration of tenant farmers. In January, 1884, on the demise of the late Mr. Robb, he was appointed registrar of the North Riding of Perth. Mr. Hay has also been school trustee and president of the agricultural society. We may add that he has always taken an active interest in educational and social ques-With respect to his religious convictions, it may be said that he was brought up a Presbyterian, but after his arrival in Canada, he became connected with the Congregational body and retained the connection for about twenty years or more. He then embraced the doctrine of conditional immortality, and for years lectured regularly in promotion of these views. He is now again connected with the Congregational body, but he still holds very firmly to the doctrine of the second coming of Christ. He married on the 23rd of March, 1851, Janet Rogerson, of Innisfil, County of Simcoe. This lady is descended from a Dumfries (Scotland) family.

Deville, Edward Gaston, Surveyor General of Dominion Lands, Ottawa, was born in 1849 at La Charité Sur Loire Nievre, France. He is a retired officer of the French navy; and was educated at the Naval School, Brest. He had charge of extensive hydrographic surveys in the South Sea Islands, Peru and other countries. In 1874 he retired from the navy and came to Canada. Shortly after his arrival, he entered the employ of the Quebec government, where he remained from 1874 to 1879, as inspector of surveys and scientific explorer. In 1877 he was commissioned as provincial land surveyor; and in 1878 he was appointed examiner of masters and mates for the port of Quebec. 1878, he was commissioned as Dominion land and topographical surveyor; and he was appointed a member of the board of examiners for Dominion land surveyors the same He became inspector of Dominion land surveys in 1881. Finally, in 1885, he reached the top round of the ladder, becoming surveyor-general of Canada. He is a Fellow of the Royal Astronomical Society, and of the Royal Society of Canada, and is in the section of mathematical, physical and He is the author of chemical sciences. "Astronomic and Geodetic Calculations," and of several able scientific papers. He married, in 1881, Josephine, daughter of the Honourable G. Ouimet, superintendent of public instruction, and late premier of n in a Pin hi ii Pi pin al 18 G ci m so whe ha Mi Co ena Bri

con

the

in

con

erai

son: elde

acti

pan

Ron

born able

Cour

emig

after

city,

Cana

Strat

of te

suffic

to the

town

of our

to pu of a d

tined

mine

possib

few y

the er

Hìgh

the ea

plied 1

sics ar

occupi

Quebec.

Vickers, John Joseph, Toronto, proprietor of "Vickers' Express" and president of the Vickers Express Company. This enterprising gentleman was born in Dublin, Ireland, in 1818, and was the second son of John and Hannah (Leeson) His father held a Vickers of that city. government position in the treasury depart. ment in Dublin, for many years, and he died when John Joseph was but six years Mr. Vickers' early education was acquired in Dublin, and when a young man, he entered the service of the City of Dublin Steam Packet Company, and remained in their service for several years. In 1849, he left Dublin, and arrived in New York, bearing introductory letters from Mr. James McHenry, of Liverpool. He entered the service of the Howard Steamship Company, and continued in the employ of this company for about two years. In the meantime, having heard of the splendid agricultural prospects of Canada, young Vickers, who had lots of energy and ambition, determined to try his hand at farming, and putting his resolution into effect, he left New York and moved to the Bay of Quinté district, and settled upon a farm in Prince Edward County. Two years practice as an amateur farmer convinced Mr. Vickers that rolling logs and growing buckwheat was very different to what he had imagined it, he abandoned agriculture, and left for Toronto. In 1852, he engaged with the American Express Company, and continued in their service for two years; when, on the completion of the Northern Railroad, he embarked in the express business on his own account, and by strict attention and great exertions, he has developed his present extensive connection. In 1858, in conjunction with others, Mr. Vickers visited the Lake Superior district in the first steamer (The Rescue), to Thunder Bay. He then noticed that the Kaministiquia river would examin the future be a great harbour, and e same scting on his own prophetic instincts, he minion purchased, after its survey by the govern-85, he ment, land, in that region, and owns nearly becomhalf of the navigable portion of the river e is a frontage on the north side. The Canadian ociety, Pacific Railway now runs through the greater and is portion of his property. Since his settlement al and in Toronto, he has taken an active interest in nor of all that concerns the city's welfare, and in tions." 1864 was elected alderman to represent St. He George's ward, and he remained in the counter of cil until 1870. During the time he was a endent member of the council, he proposed the rehier of solution to construct the new water works, which was carried in October, 10th, 1870. ronto, He is captain in the Sedentary Militia, presihaving held a commission for many years. pany. Mr. Vickers' political opioious are strongly brn in Conservative. In 1855, he married Cathers the ine Mary, eldest daughter of the late Lieut-eant John W. Dunbar Moodie, of the British army, the first Sheriff of Hastings eeson) held a

epart-

nd he

years

as ac-

man,

uhlin

ed in

19, he

hear-

ames

d the

Com-

f this

the

endid

oung

am-

arm-

ffect,

ay of farm

prac-

Mr.

nick-

had lure.

aged

and

ars;

iern

1181-

ten-

l his

, in ited

am-

hen

Lennon, Rev. P., pastor St. Basil's Roman catholic church, Brantford, was born in the year 1846, of poor, but respectable parents, in the parish of Ballymacnab, County of Armagh, Ireland. His parents emigrated to America early in 1848, and after locating for a few years in New York city, and Harvestraw, N.Y., they came to Canada, and settled near the present City of Stratford. Here they remained for a period of ten or twelve years, when, not finding sufficient land for all the family, they went to the Western States, and located near the town of Hastings, Minnesota. The subject of our sketch, however, remained in Canada, to pursue and complete his studies. of a delicate constitution, his parents destined him for some profession, and determined to give him the best education then possible to be obtained. After spending a few years in a country log school, he passed the entrance examination to the Stratford High (or then called) Grammar School, at the early age of eleven years. Here he applied himself diligently to the study of classics and mathematics, for five years, and occupied a front rank in all his classes.

county, her mother being Susanna Moodie.

the eminent authoress, whose "Roughing it in the Bush", and other publications have contributed not a little to our national literature. The issue of this marriage is four sons and six daughters, all living. The eldest son, John A. D. Vickers is the active superintendent of the Express Com-

Although the only catholic attending the grammar school, for two years, he was a general favourite with both teachers and pupils, whose esteem he won by his talents and good conduct. In the year 1864, he entered the college of St. Sulpice, Montreal, when he again distinguished himself in all the branches, making the full course in six years, the usual time being nine years. After graduating from the college, he entered the Grand Seminary of Montreal, to prepare for the priesthood, by three years study of theology. He was ordained priest by Bishop Walsh, of London, on the 30th of June, 1873. During the first year after his ordination, Father Lennon laboured with zeal as curate in the City of London, the town of Amherstburg, and the parish of Stratford. To the last named place he was called upon the appointment of the late Bishop Crinnon, then incumbent of Stratford, to the See of Hamilton. Bishop Crinnon, however, knowing the ability and sterling qualities of the young priest, obtained as a favour from the Bishop of London, the transfer of Father Lennon to the Diocese of Hamilton, as private secretary, which important office he filled for five years. He was then appointed assistant to the Venerable Dean O'Rielly, of Dundas While in Dundas, besides attending to his various duties, and aiding the pastor in working up the mission, he was mainly instrumental in founding the now famous home for aged men and women, known as the House of The late venerable Father Providence. McNulty, of Caledonia, had for many years before his death thought of procuring a home for the destitute with the means he had saved after forty years of hard missionary life, and at the suggestion of Rev. Father Lennon, bought the Methodist seminary of Dundas, beautifully situated and overlooking the town, for this purpose. He placed implicit confidence in the administrative talents of Father Lennon, and gave over all his earnings without reserve. Nor had he reason to regret it; for he had the pleasure to see with his own eyes the institution in a flourishing condition and had the happiness of dying within its walls, having been chaplain over it for the space of six years. His remains repose in a beautiful nook near the building, and the soft zephyrs passing through the trees that shade his humble grave, sing the requiem of the good old priest, who gave all he had to make a home for the poor. After three years of laborious missionary work in Dundas, Father Lennon became broken

Accordingly, in 1881, he took a trip to Europe, and during four months, visited England, Ireland, France, Germany and Italy, returning in good health. On his return, he was appointed for short periods to the missions of Caledonia. Walkerton and Arthur. But in May, 1882, he was permanently stationed in Brantford, where he set at work immediately to finish St. Basil's church, already deeply in debt. It was a bold undertaking, but Father Lennon was equal to the task, and thanks to his energy, zeal and great administrative powers, Brantford possesses one of the finest churches in Ontario. As a preacher, Father Lennon has a clear, ringing voice, capable of filling the largest church edifice. His style is pointed and argumentative, and while at times ornate, aims chiefly at conviction. He takes a deep interest in all matters relating to the welfare of church and state, prudently avoiding anything of a purely political nature. By such means he commands the respect of all classes. While he is an ardent champion of his own faith, he respects the honest convictions of those that differ from him in religion; and although he is a warm loyal citizen of the country of his adoption, he is an enthusiastic lover of the country of his birth, and takes a lively interest in all relating to the Emerald Isle. Mylius, George Rudolph, M.D., Berlin, the subject of this memoir, was born on the 30th of April, 1837, at Alsfeld, Grand Duchy of Hassia, Germany. His father was George Mylius, M.D., a physician of excellent standing, and his mother was Louisa Hornung. G. R. Mylius grandfather was Carl Mylius, who came from Silesia, Prussia, during the Napoleonic war of 1814, and 1815, to Alsfeld, in Hassia, where he obtained an appointment under the government. Rudolf, from his fifth to his fourteenth year, received his educational instruction by a tutor at Romrod, Hassia, where his father was established as government physician in Kreisarzh. When four-teen years of age he went to the Giessen High School, and when he reached his eighteenth year, to the University of Giessen, where he began the study of medicine and chemistry under Liebig and Will; botany under Hoffman; physiology under Bischoff, continuing till 1860. He took his degree of M.D. in December, 1859. He took Dr. Mylius came from Germany, by way of New York, in March, 1860, and took up his abode in Berlin, where an uncle of his, Mr.

down in health, and his physician ordered a change of climate as necessary to recovery.

Charles Kranz, was living, and here he at once began to practice his profession. In 1875 he attended lectures at the Toronto School of Medicine, to enable him to pass an examination, and on April 24th, 1876, he obtained a license and certificate of M.D. from the Ontario Medical Board. His practice, is now very large, and he enjoys the reputation among all classes of being a very successful and skilful physician and surgeon. From 1862 to 1872 he devoted his energies toward the manufacture of beet root sugar in Berlin, but his efforts, like similar efforts in other parts of Canada, were unsuccessful He has held no public office except that of school trustee, and this office he filled for six years. · He is associated with the Foresters, and has been medical officer of Court Berlin, No. 72, since January 29th, 1883. Dr. Mylius was brought up in the Lutheran church, and still strictly adheres to that body. He married, on October 9th, 1861, Dorothea Fridohen Klotz, eldest daughter of Otto Klotz, of Preston. By this union he has had three children, two daughters and one son, all of whom are living.

H is the second of the second

on

dau Cli

a m

his

pect they

Dr.

the o

of r

worl

adop

ed o

of th

paid

ronto

Dioce

" V

Missio God, v

expect

among Oxford

time v

Divini

was cre Position

ness, m

able an

great p

there w

whose n to us fro

een mon

Wrangle

Univers

Scholar, Divinity

bridge. ly weigh him the years he hat wou

whose

Body, Rev. Charles William Ed. mund, M.A., D.C.L., Provost of Trin. ity College, Toronto, was born at Clapham. Surrey, England, on October 4th, 1851, and he is a son of the Rev. Elihu Edmund and Sarah, Body. The Rev. Elihu Body was for a time mathematical master of the Clapham Grammar School, of which the present Professor Pritchard, of Oxford, was the head master; and he is now Vicar of Wonersh, Guildford, Surrey. Our subject was educated at St. John's College, Cambridge. He entered in 1871, and graduated B.A., with mathematical honours (6th wrangler,) in 1875. He took second-class theological honours in 1876; Bell's University scholar in 1872; Carus Greek Testament Prizeman in 1876, and Tyrrwhit's Hebrew Scholar in 1878. He was a Fellow, and Lecturer in Theology, at St. John's College, from 1878 to 1881. He was lecturer in Theology in Pembroke College, Cambridge, from 1880 to 1881; and in the last-named year he became Provost of Trinity College, Toronto, and Vice Chancellor of that University. During his career as a lecturer at Cambridge, he was several times University examiner in the Pass and Honour Schools of Theology, and for the Tyrrwhit University scholarship. He was also select university preacher, etc., and while in this office, took an active part in fostering theological study in the university, as likewise in the foundation of a new flourishing theological training school for candidates for holy orders at Cambridge. In conjunction with some three or four other young Fellows of Colleges, he was assistant curate in the large parish of Chesterton, from 1876 to 1881. Since 1881 Rev. Dr. Body has taken an active part in raising a large supplemental endowment for the University of Trinity College, and of the sum of $200,000 required, $110,000 has already been raised. 1884, Provost Body, in conjunction with the Rev. Reg. H. Starr, B.D., was sent to Eggland on behalf of the endowment movement, where they met with good success. Dr. Body has also taken an energetic part in the movement for obtaining biblical instruction in the public and high schools of Ontario; and he is now chairman of the Synod Committee on religious instruction for the diocese of Toronto. He married. on July 12th, 1881, Frances Mary Perry, daughter of the late J. Perry, J. P., of Clifton, Bristol, England. Provost Body is a man of marked ability and zeal, and under his capable and wise management, the prospects of Trinity College are brighter than they have ever been since its institution. Dr. Body was not satisfied when accepting the control of the college to fall into the lines of routine, but he very promptly set at work to make a study of the country of his adoption; and to this end personally visited our North-West, and various other parts of the Dominion. Of the following tribute paid to Provost Body by the Bishop of Toronto, in his charge to the Synod of the Diocese in 1881, we gladly avail ourselves:

re heat

on. În

Foronto

to pass

1876, he

f M.D.

is prac-

oys the

a very urgeon.

nergies t sugar

efforts

cessful

that of

led for

Forest-

Court

, 1883,

theran

o that

. 1861.

ughter

union

ghters

a Ed-

Trinpham,

1, and

d and

y was

f the

a the

d, was

car of

ubject

Cam-

nated

(6th

-class

Uni-

l'esta-

whit's

as a

t St.

e was

llege,

n the

Trin-

or of

as a

veral

and

the

was

and

fosy, as rish"With regard to the immediate object of our Mission, it was crowned, by the good guidance of God, with a success far beyond our most sanguine We ventilated our want fully expectations. amongst the Bishops and the two Universities of Oxford and Cambridge, where we spent some time visiting the leading Fellows of Colleges and A real and wide interest Divinity Professors. was created in the Diocese, and in the important position to be filled, and we met with much kind ness, much active and ready help. A considerable and daily increasing list of names, many of great promise, were before us, when we found there was a possibility of securing a gentleman whose name and high reputation had been known to us from our first inquiries for a Provost eighten months before. The Rev. C. W. E. Body, whose brilliant University record was sixth Wrangler, second class Theological Tripos, University Scholar and Tyrwhitt's Scholar, was at the time resident Fellow and Divinity Lecturer at St. John's College, Cam-But other qualifications than these chiefin the Provostship of Trinity College. For some rars he had devoted himself to the very work that would best fit him for that office—religious work amongst the young men of the University at a time when liberalism, indifferentism, and avowed unbelief, were spreading like a leaven through the intellectual life of fellows as well as undergraduates. In this most important field of labour, closely associated, first with Professor Lightfoot (now Bishop of Durham,) and after-wards with Professor Westcott, his successor, Mr. Body acquired such influence over the minds of the younger men, and achieved such conspicuous success, as to attract attention from those in higher places who are closely watching the course nigher places who are closely watching the course of religious thought, and to earn him a reputation not only in his own University, but in Oxford. However, you will feel, and he will feel, that the wisdom of our selection has yet to be proved by the results of his work in his new sphere. He enters upon it full of earnest purpose inspired by the magnitude of its scope, and the incalculable importance of its issues in the future of the Church in this great Province. I commend him to your cordial welcome among us, and pray you to aid and further his efforts, in the trust that, with God's blessing upon them, we may yet, ere long, see Trinity College, the child of the old age of the first bishop, take its rank worthily as the University of the great Church of England in Ontario, and become the rallying point, in which will unite, in perfect charity, and with fullest confidence, the temporarily separated phalanxes of the one undivided army."

MacLaren, William, D.D., Professor of Systematic Theology, Knox College, To-This learned divine was born in the township of Torbolton, in the County of Carleton, and is the fifth son of David Mac-Laren, who was born at Drumlochey, Perthshire, Scotland, in 1788. His parents were married on 6th January, 1817, and after residing some years in Glasgow, came to Canada in 1822, and settled for a short time at Richmond, Ont. They then removed to the township of Torbolton, on the Ottawa river, where William was born, on the 26th January, 1828. Subsequently, David Mac-Laren removed to Wakefield, Quebec. where he died in 1869, and his wife followed him six years later. He was a farmer, millowner and merchant, and was for a number of years associated with two of his sons in the well-known lumbering firm of James MacLaren & Co., Wakefield and Ottawa. Professor MacLaren received his preliminary education in the Grammar School, Ottawa, and in the Toronto Academy, an institution which, owing to changes in the educational system of the province, was subsequently His college training was secured in closed. Knox College, which at that time gave both a theological and an arts course. He also attended certain classes in the University of Toronto, although it was not then on its present liberal basis. On 1st June, 1853, Rev. W. MacLaren was ordained by the Presbytery of London, in connection with the Presbyterian Church of Canada, and was inducted into the charge of the church at Amherstburg, Ont. Here he entered upon his responsible duties, and met with an encouraging measure of success. 1857 he moved to Boston, Mass, having received a call from Knox church, Beacon street, now known as the Columbus Avenue The congregation Presbyterian church. was then in connection with the Presbytery of Montreal. This connection having been found inconvenient, it was, on his advice, dissolved, and the congregation was transferred to the Presbyterian church in the United States, and Mr. MacLaren returned to Canada. After receiving various invitations to important spheres of labour, Mr. MacLaren accepted a call to the John street Presbyterian church, Belleville, where he laboured with success until 1870, when he was called to the pastorate of Knox church, Ottawa. During his residence in Ottawa, he held by appointment of the General Assembly for the session of 1872, the position of Lecturer on Apologetics in the Presbyterian College, Montreal. In 1873 he was appointed by the same body to the chair of Systematic Theology in Knox College, and as a professor has achieved success in his alma mater. In 1883, the University of Queen's College, Kingston, conferred on Professor MacLaren the degree of Doctor of Divinity. Dr. MacLaren has always taken an active interest in missionary operations, and in the general work of the church, and was for sixteen years convener of its Foreign Mission Committee. The General Assembly, 1884, conferred on him the highest honour in its gift, by electing him to the office of moderator. In 1854 Dr. MacLaren married Marjory Laing, third daughter of James R. Laing, of Niddrie Park, Melbourne, Quebec. He has living, one son, David, a licentiate of the Presbyterian Church, and one daughter, Elizabeth Barnet, now Mrs. Arthur Mowat.

Cameron, John, Editor and Manager of the Globe, Toronto, was born in the township of Markham, Ontario, on the 22nd of January, 1843. His father was a native of Argyllshire, Scotland, and his mother of the north of Ireland. When a boy he went to reside in London, Ontario, and in the Free Press office he learned the printing trade. On the expiration of his apprenticeship, and when only about twenty-one years of age, he conceived the idea of starting an evening paper in London. He had little or no means, and the paper to succeed must pay its own way day by day. The first number of the Evening Advertiser, was accordingly issued on the 27th of October 1863, and fortune smiled on the venture from the start. This paper was at first of very small size, but it filled a long felt want. and it grew in circulation, size and prestige. year after year, until it is now one of the most prominent morning and evening dailies in the province. In December, 1882, Mr. Cameron gave up his position on the Adrer. tiser, and the Hon. David Mills, M.P., became its editor, while William Cameron, who had been from the first associated with John Cameron, assumed the business management. On taking the editorship and management of the Globe, Mr. Cameron introduced many reforms in the arrangements of its news columns, etc., and this newspaper now stands as a model daily. Mr Cameron is a pronounced Liberal, and a consistent advocate of the temperance re-"He," says a writer in The Scot in British North America, "is essentially a man of tact, shrewdnesss and resource, and though criticism has not been silent as to the effect of the change in the style of the great newspaper, the destinies of which have been entrusted to his keeping, it must be admitted on the whole, borne well the trying ordeal of comparison, with his veteran predecessor."

Keefer, Thomas C., C.E., Ottawa, the very distinguished subject of this sketch, was born at Thorold, near Niagara, on the 4th of November, 1821. His grandfather, George Kieffer, was a U.E.L. and an Alsatian Huguenot. His paternal great-grandfather. Samuel Kieffer, married Ann Waldruff, of Westervallen, in Germany, and died in Alsace, on the Rhine, leaving two sons. George and Jacob. Their mother married Frederick Saverine, and emigrated with him to America, when George Kieffer was ten years old. This was about 1750. Our subject's father was born on Pepper Cotion Creek, near Newton, Sussex county, in the then British Province of New Jersey, in 1773. On the breaking out of the Revolutionary war, in 1776, his father joined the Royalists under Col. Barton, and went to New York, leaving two valuable farms and a distillery, which were confiscated by the United States. After serving several years. he died of typhoid fever in the army hospital on Staten Island, and is buried there. His son George, in his eighteenth year. (1790), came into Canada by an Indian trail to where Buffalo is now built, with other loyalists, and returning, brought his mother here in August, 1792. He established him-which was ele land (ternal Armag came w 1776, h Mary Februa Genera cide), w This far Healys, of Irela An und sented ment of and acci made av his brot Michigan married her cous aunt, Ar McBride Thomas Canada young me his caree: being up he was e and with engineer capacity f ancy, and much atte soon in th a little w Ottawa R ished, and among en Seizing hi posed in h Philosophy ject of thi sparsely s was, that be disastro depopulație The essay gnages, and everybody's Buston to Mr. Andre treaty. He preliminary Railway, ai

Lawrence a

toria bridge

self at

WINGEL WITH

self at Thorold, on the Welland Canal, of which he was one of the promoters, and was elected the first president of the Welland Canal Company. Our subject's maternal grandfather was Peter McBride, of Armagh, one of the Irish volunteers who. came with General Carleton to America in 1776, having previously married in Tralee, Mary Bradshaw, who was born there 2nd February. 1756. She was descended from General Bradshaw (a brother of the regicide), who was sent to Ireland by Cromwell. This family were connected with the Springs, Healys, Twists and McCarthys, of that part of Ireland, both Protestants and Catholics. An uncle, Edward McBride, who represented the town of Niagara in the parliament of Upper Canada, was a noted mason, and accused of being one of the party who made away with Morgan. Another uncle, his brother James, was mayor of Munro, Michigan, and sheriff of the county, who married a niece of Sir L. H. Lafontaine; her cousin Loranger married our subject's aunt, Anne McBride. Another uncle, Thos. McBride, married Mary Detlor, of Napanee. Thomas C. Keefer was educated in Upper Canada College, whereto went most of the young men of his time. In 1838 he began his career as engineer, his first employment being upon the Erie Canal. Subsequently he was engaged upon the Welland Canal, and with marvellous speed became division engineer upon that work. Mr. Keefer's capacity for work, his knowledge, his brilliancy, and his originality brought him very much attention now, and his services were soon in the very highest demand; hence in a little we find him chief engineer of the Ottawa River works. This office was abolished, and the occupation of this Othello among engineers was gone for the nonce. Seizing his pen he was soon found exposed in his bold and brilliant essay, "The Philosophy of Railroads." Briefly, the object of this paper was to show that in a sparsely settled country, as Canada then was, that railroads would, as investments, be disastrous; but, that in order to prevent depopulation, they must be constructed. The essay was translated into foreign langnages, and the ability of the writer was on everybody's lips. Mr. Keefer was sent to Boston to assist the United States consul, Mr. Andrews, respecting the Reciprocity treaty. He was in 1851 appointed to make preliminary surveys for the Grand Trunk Railway, and for a bridge over the St. Lawrence at Montreal. The present Victoria bridge is the outcome of the plans of

ıre

цe.

he

Ir.

Mr. Keefer at that time. In 1851 he opposed the broad guage, and later, the narrow one, advocating the standard guage for Canadian railways, and the subsequent change of guage, both broad and narrow, to the standard guage has confirmed his prescience. He gained Lord Elgin's prize for an essay on the Canals of Canada, and the production was remarkable for its breadth of view, the economical weight, indeed, we might say, the statesmanlike prescience which it revealed. In almost every important engineering project in the country this brilliant engineer has been in some manner or another concerned. He constructed water works for Montreal, Hamilton, Ottawa, and other cities, and advised with respect to the construction of works in Nova Scotia and New Bruuswick. He was likewise chief engineer of railways in Upper and Lower Canada. To one theory he seemed always to be wedded, namely, the military and political significance of railways, and he made no important allusion to our railway systems in which this idea was allowed to remain in the background. His correspondence to the press on public works has been voluminous, and seldom gainsaid. He held that as soon as the extinguishment of the Hudson Buy Company's title was accomplished, an allthrough Canadian or Canada Pacific Railroad was a logical consequence. In 1878 he was sent to Paris, as Chief Commissioner for Canada to the International Exhibition, and France honoured him as a distinguished engineer by conferring upon him one of the higher grades of the legion of honour, and by appointing him one of the jurors for the class of engineering. He is a member of the Institution of Civil Engineers of London and of New York. He commenced the public advocacy of the Grand Trunk Rullway in 1847, and of the Canadian Pacific in 1869. His military record is confined to service on the frontier in 1837, at Fort Erie, and to drilling in Toronto, in 1861, for the Trent affair. Mr. Keefer has travelled in the northern, middle and western States to the Pacific Ocean, and in Europe. When a boy our subject had some narrow escapes. Once he was struck senseless in his father's mill at Thorold, and bears the indent in his skull now. He was, in November, 1845, swamped in a rapid in the Ottawa river, his canoe was lost, and his bowsman drowned. He himself escaped with difficulty to a rock, from which he was rescued, with clothing frozen stiff, by the last boat of the season. In religion Mr. Keefer's opinions are taken from the Bible—non-denominational. He married Elizabeth, daughter of the late Honourable Thos. Mckay, by whom he has had seven children, five of whom are still living. He is not a political partisan, supporting measures rather than men.

Poirier, Hon. Pascal, Richibucto, New Brunswick, was born on the 14th February, 1852, at Shediac, New Brunswick. He is of old Acadian descent, and a member of a very honourable family. Young Poirier received a very thorough education, completing his course of studies at St. Joseph's College, Memramcook, in the Province of New Brunswick. Having finished his education, he entered a law office. He was diligent and brilliant as a student, and a very successful legal career was frequently predicted for him by those who had observed his ways. In 1876 he was called to the Quebec bar, and began practice. The young advocate always had strong literary instincts, and he wrote in a very pure and cultured French style. But there was more than grace in the works of his pen. There was marked originality, and there were very frequent outbursts of brilliancy. At an early age he was a contributor to the daily and weekly press, writing for the most part in French, though his English work was also very cred-Some of his reviews and essays were remarkable for their sharp insight, and true critical faculty. But the literary work by which he is best known, and which must always survive in our native letters, was his book known as "L'Origine des Acadiens." This work concerned itself with the early settlement of old Acadia by the Acadian immigrants, the early struggle of the Acadians, and all the important events connected with their subsequent career. The book has the true historic fervour; is a very graphic and rememberable piece of portraiture; and it contains a number of eloquent and brilliant passages. When M. Poirier was in his twentieth year, he received the appointment of postmaster of the House of Commons; and this position he held uninterruptedly from 1872 to 1885. Then occurred a vacancy in the Senate for the Province of New Brunswick. For a long time it had been urged, and with every justice, that the Acadians had not their due share of senate representation, and Mr. Pierre A. Landry, the able, brilliant, and patriotic member for Kent, pressed that an Acadian now should have one of two appointments to be made in New Brunswick, the senatorship alluded to, or a judgeship for the bench of the Supreme Court, so called. Being asked which he would favour, he made it plain that he would prefer seeing the senatorship go to his people, and accordingly M. Poirier was chosen. The appointment was everywhere received with marked satisfaction, and it was felt that M. Poirier was a decided acquisition to the Senate. Let us hope that our subject may be able to continue to devote some of his fine talents to the production of further literary work. M. Poirier has travelled extensively. He was twice in England, and has also been in France; and he studied for six months in Paris. He was married, in Montreal, on 9th of January. 1879, to Mile. Anna Lusignan, sister of Alphonse Lusignan, a member of the Royal Society, and one of the foremost French-Canadian litter-The Lusignans occupy an important place in the history of old France, one of the name having been king of Cyprus and Jerusalem. It may be stated that our subject is descended from the French Neutrals, who were exiled from l'Acadié, Nova Scotia, in 1755, which episode has been sung by Longfellow, in his Evangeline. In manners, the Honourable M. Poirier is genial. and in bearing he is courteous.

rs ci un the value of to Or ye: tic

cie

Jar

and 0n

F.E

ing

10t

shir

Rob

dua

first

0n

His

ery,

facti

high

stone

ish,

it wa

subje

of hi

he w lege, i

one f

prom

lege

and a

retire

by th

Educa

the So

ton.

a grad

and so

of Do

Univer

post-gr

physica

mously

Institu

Johnson, William, Belleville, Ontario. was born in Antrim, County Antrim, Ireland, on the 28th September, 1842. His forefathers were Warders on the borders of England and Scotland. During the revolution of 1688-90 they espoused the cause of civil and religious liberty, and fought under King William the Third, for which services they received grants of land from the king, at Oldstone, near Antrim, in Ireland, where the family have since resided. Mr. Johnson is the eldest son of the late William Johnson, a merchant of Antrim. Mr. Johnson, jun., came to Canada in 1863, and settled in Belleville. Immediately on coming to this country he enrolled himself in the volunteer force, and was on active service with his battalion, the 15th Argyle Light Infantry, at Belleville, in March, and Prescott, in June, 1866. He has devoted a great deal of time to Sundayschools, having been almost continuously a Sunday-school Superintendent since 1864. His services to this department of church work were recognized by Sunday-school workers from all parts of the Dominion, when they elected him president of the Sunday-school Association of Canada, at the great convention held in Belleville in 1876. He has been since 1873, a member of the Board of Education of the City of Belleville, and since 1882 its chairman. Descended from men who fought under King William at the Boyne, and elsewhere, and having very early inlife been imbued with the principles of the Orange Association. he united with that vast organization in Belfast, Ireland, in 1860; and here the tireless energy and enthusiasm, which are characteristic features of his character, were early recognized and appreciated. In coming to Canada he at once united with the association here, and since then has filled almost every office in the various primary, district, county, and grand odges. He has, for three successive years, 1883, 1884 and 1885, been unanimously elected Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Ontario East. He has twice been sent to the old world as a representative of the Orangemen of Canada, and has been for years recognized on both sides of the Atlantic as one of the leaders of the Orange society. Mr. Johnson is the eldest brother of James Johnson, editor of the Ottawa Citizen, and of John W. Johnson, principal of the Ontario Business College, Belleville.

eeing

d ac-

e ap-

with

at M.

the

may

f his

r lit-

ł ex-

and

d for

d, in

Mlle.

usig-

and itter-

por-

one

prus

our Neu-

Vova:

sung

nan-

nial.

ario.

Ire-

His

ders

rev-

ause

ight

nich

rom

Ire-

led.

late

im.

in

me-

en-

and the

in

Hе

ay-

Harper, John M., B.A., Ph.D., F.E.I.S., Quebec, the subject of the following biographical sketch, was born on the 10th July, 1845, at Johnstone, in Renfrewshire, Scotland. Dr. Harper is the son of Robert M. Harper, printer, bookseller and publisher, of Johnstone, and founder of the first weekly newspaper printed in that place. On the maternal side, he is of Celtic origin. His granduncle, the late Robert Montgomery, was for many years a prominent manufacturer in Johnstone, where he was held in high esteem by his fellow citizens. Johnstone forms part of the Paisley Abbey parish, a district famous for its schools, and it was at one of the best of these that the subject of our sketch received the rudiments of his education. From the parish school he went to the Glasgow E. C. Training College, an institution founded by Stowe, and one from which America has drawn several prominent educationists. He entered college as a Queen's scholar of the first rank. and after completing the full course of study, retired with the highest certificates granted by the lords of committee of Council on Education, and with special certificates from the Science and Art Department, Kensington. After coming to this country he became a graduate of Queen's University, Kingston, and some years ago he received the degree of Doctor of Philosophy from the Illinois University, after completing the three years' post-graduate course in the section of metaphysical science. In 1881 he was unanimously elected a Fellow of the Educational Institute of Scotland, an honour seldom conferred upon teachers labouring outside of Britain, and only upon those of advanced experience. Before leaving Scotland he had received an appointment to an academy in New Brunswick, where he laboured successfully for the full term of his engagement. After several years residence in the Maritime Provinces, he was eventually appointed principal of the Victoria High School, St. John, N.B., the largest institution of the kind in that section of Canada. Here, as elsewhere, he laboured to raise the teaching profession in the estimation of the public, and endeavoured to foster an esprit de corps among the teachers themselves. He succeeded in introducing many of the improved methods of imparting instruction by holding meetings with the teachers, and otherwise followed up his efforts in this direction by giving instruction in drawing, chemistry, botany and kindred subjects. In 1877 the Hon. L. H. Davies, premier of Prince Edward Island, visited the educational institutions of St. John, and meeting with the principal of the Victoria school, was not slow in recognizing his worth as an educa-After carefully examining the system under which the St. John schools were being conducted, and no doubt anxious to introduce such a system in his own province, he invited Dr. Harper to accept the position of superintendent of education in Prince Edward Island. This generous offer, however, was declined, as the head master of the Victoria school had no desire to leave his adopted province. But not long after, the Victoria school building was destroyed in the great fire of St. John, and on hearing of the calamity, Mr. Davies followed up his previous offer by asking Dr. Harper to assume the principalship of the Provincial Normal school in Charlottetown. This the latter did, but only on the understanding that he would be free to return to St. John as soon as the Victoria school was rebuilt. While on the island the value of his work was at once keenly appreciated. In a letter written by the premier, in which he gives expression to the general sentiment of the public in regard to educational progress on the island, he says: "As a matter of fact, Mr. Harper organized the whole school. What existed under the name of Normal school was merely a name. He infused life and vitality into it. The bitterness of religious strife was such when he took charge as to defy all attempts to make the school in any sense a provincial one. By tact and judicious management, he succeeded in overcoming all that, and under his rule the school has been a great success. Intimately connected with him as I was for nearly two years, I can speak of his ability, tact and administrative power, because he was, in addition to being principal of the Normal school, also superintendent of the city schools. He succeeded in carrying out the difficult task of grading Protestant and Catholic children in the schools so that entire satisfaction was given to the citizens. I consider the province owes him a debt of gratitude for his successful labours." Nor is the testimony of others less explicit. "Mr. Harper," says the Rev. Mr. McLennan, "has occupied for some time the position of principal of the Normal school of this province, and of superintendent of the city schools, having been invited to occupy these offices by the Government for the purpose of establishing a system of training, organization and equipment suitable to give effect to a Public School Act, passed by the Legislature in 1877. The high reputation which he enjoyed as a teacher and writer on school affairs—the influential situation he was filling at the time as principal of the Victoria school, St. John, New Brunswick, and the recommendation of prominent educationists who were acquainted with his career, pointed him out as eminently fitted for the position offered to him in Prince Edward Island. The heavy task which he undertook was performed with vigour, ability and acknowledged success. The condition of the city schools, in point of organization, and methods of instruction, was soon brought into conformity with that which characterises the best public schools in other provinces. A superior public edifice was constructed at a cost of $30,000; while in the Normal school, the work of instruction and training, conducted more immediately by himself, gave indications of the value of that special work, virtually new in this province." At the end of a year or more, when Dr. Harper proposed to return to St. John, the government of Prince Edward Island, being anxious to continue the work of educational progress so successfully inaugurated, put forth every effort to induce him to resign his position in New Brunswick, and to take up his abode permanently in Charlottetown. After some delay they succeeded, and for three years the subject of our sketch became a resident of the island, holding during the last year of his residence, when a change of government, in 1879, brought about the amalgamation of the Normal school and the Prince of Wales' college, the position of professor in the amalgamated institution, with special supervision of the department for the training of teachers: Beyond his professional reputation, however. Dr. Harper has not failed to make his mark as a gentleman of matured literary tastes. From his earliest years he has taken a deep interest in literature and literary pursuits. In Nova Scotia he took an active part in establishing a literary periodical, devoted at its inception to the cultivation of Canadian literature, and has continued more or less frequently to contribute to our periodical literature in prose and verse. Many of his lyrics have been highly praised, while some of his poems in the Scottish dialect merit a prominent place in the literature of his native country. He also enjoys a repu. tation of some distinction as a writer and compiler of school text-books, and is the author of several excellent lectures, including "Plato," "The New Education," "Cause and Effect in School Work," and others. The Literary and Historical Society of Quebec is indebted to him for two valuable papers, published in the Transactions, and entitled, "The Maritime Provinces," and "The Development of the Greek Drama," He is also a contributor to the Transactions of the Royal Society of Canada. Dr. Harper at present holds the position of rector of the Quebec High School, being, besides examiner for teachers' licenses, secretarytreasurer of the Protestant Board of School Commissioners, and for a season was interim professor of mathematics in Morrin College. He is also president of the Teachers' Local Association; vice-president of the Provincial Association of Teachers; vice-president of the Quebec Literary and Historical Society, and vice-president of the St. Andrew's Society. He was married to Agnes, daughter of William Kirkwood, of Stanley Muir, Paisley, by whom he has had two sons and five daughters. Mrs. Harper died in 1883. In the rank of progressive educationists, Dr. Harper occupies a prominent Few can show a fuller record of honest work done in the interests of education in Canada. Indeed he has always been most ready to lend his experience, professional training, and his literary ability to advance the interests of a calling which is now being universally recognized as second in importance to no other.

Leys, John, Barrister, Toronto, was born at Pickering, Ontario County, Ontario, on the 27th January, 1834. He is a son of Francis Leys, a pioneer settler in the township, who came from Aberdeenshire, Scotland. His mother was Rachel Ernst, of Pickering. Our subject received his early education eren ing o ente Angr mitte self : throu wher estab impo able took ing t solici from the M is a rears He m late alway part, the R fully house Fu born o on the stone' son of

Johr

twel

he e erected known was fir old, ne as an he was by the Simcoe Rev. M mained months Dundas Having

the D

Cynth

father

Gener

the el

Niagar

that p

mill or

Having as cleri general tablishi last tw charge at Pickering, in a school conducted by John Vert; but when he had reached his twelfth year, he was sent to Toronto, where he entered the academy of which the Reverend Alexander Gale was president. Having completed his educational studies, he entered upon a course of law in the office of Angus Morrison, and in 1860, he was admitted to the bar. He at once applied himself to the practice of his profession, and through his fine abilities, which are everywhere acknowledged, he soon succeeded in establishing for himself a remunerative and important practice. He has taken considerable interest in railroad enterprises, and took a specially prominent part in organizing the Narrow Gauge Railway. He was solicitor for the Toronto & Nipissing Railfrom its inception until it was merged in the Midland system. In religion, Mr. Leys is a Presbyterian, and was for several years secretary of St. Andrew's Society. He married in 1865, Helen, daughter of the late William Arthurs. In politics he has always taken a great interest and an active part, and he has cast in his fortunes with the Reform side. He has twice unsuccessfully contested East Toronto for the local house, but the day of Mr. Leys is coming.

OW.

his

rarv

ken

rary

tive

de-

of

ore

eri-

any

hile

lect

e of

pu-

and the

ud-

use

ers.

ble

lnd

nd

ns

ar-

es

yol

al

Fuller, Samuel Street, Stratford, was born on August 26th, 1833, at Niagara Falls, on the estate of his grandfather, within a stone's throw of the great Niagara. He is a son of Thomas Brock Fuller, late Bishop of the Diocese of Niagara. His mother was Cynthia Street Fuller. The paternal grandfather was Major Fuller, aide-de-camp to General Brock. Our subject's mother was the eldest daughter of Samuel Street, of Niagara Falls, one of the first settlers in that place, and the builder of the first grist mill on the river. His grandfather likewise erected the first flour mill, near what is now known as the Burning Springs. was first sent to a common school in Thorold, near where his father was then stationed as an Episcopal rector. In his ninth year, he was sent to a boarding-school, conducted by the Rev. Mr. Evans, at Woodhouse, near Simcoe. Hence he went to the school of Rev. Mr. Geddes, Hamilton, where he remained for five or six years. For eighteen months further, he attended a school at Dundas, under the tutorship of Mr. Regan. Having completed his studies, he entered as clerk with U. C. Lee, of Stratford, in a general business. He remained in this establishment for four years, and during the last two he was chief clerk, and had sole charge of the hardware store. Being now in his twentieth year, he left for New York, where he entered a wholesale hardware establishment, in order to familiarize himself with the business, and remained so employed for two years. He returned again to Canada, and formed a partnership with his twin brother, Thomas Richard Fuller, now at Toronto, for the purpose of carrying on the hardware business, and they bought out the business of U. C. Lee. Our subject remained in partnership with his brother for ten years, during which time they did an extensive and lucrative business. sold out to his brother, to carry on flax manufacturing, as there was now a good opening for that business in the neighbourhood of Stratford. He very soon was head of an extensive business, and employed a large number of hands. He remained in the flax trade for about ten years, then retired and rented the mill, which was one of the best in Canada, to J. & J. Livingstone, of Baden. His reason for giving up and renting this splendid property was, because he was now deeply interested in the completion of the Port Dover and Lake Huron Railway, of which road he was a director from its inception, and this new enterprise completely occupied his mind. He subsequently became president of the Stratford and Huron, which afterwards formed part of the Port Dover and Lake Huron Railway system, and remained president of same until its consolidation with the Port Dover and Lake Huron Railway, and the Wellington and Georgian Bay Railway, a road built from Palmerston to the town of Durham, when Colonel Tisdale, of Simcoe, was elected its president, and our subject vice-president of the consolidated railway, known as the Grand Trunk, Georgian Bay and Lake Erie Railway, which position he still retains. He is also a Director of the British Mortgage Loan Company of Stratford, a very successful company. He was one of the four parties, it may be mentioned, who constructed the Stratford and Lake Huron Railway from Stratford to Wiarton, one of the best built local railways in Canada. After the consolidation of the Stratford and Huron Railway with the other lines, it was leased to the Grand Trunk Railway. Shortly afterwards our subject took re-possession of his flax mill property, and fitted it up for a wool stock factory. After running for less than a year, it was burnt down, through which Mr. Fuller lost $13,000, above insurance. He did not rebuild. He was also burnt out once, while carrying on the flax mill, but the loss was not then so serious, being about $4,000. Mr. Fuller represented the town of Stratford, as deputy reeve of the County of Perth in 1865. He married on the 18th of November, 1863, Mary Ann Smith, of Stratford. This lady belongs to an English family. who had settled a few years before in Strat-She had four brothers residing in Stratford at the time, and three of them still reside there; one of these, George, is a doctor; another, William, is a bank clerk; and the third, J. Grason, is a barrister and attorney. The late Honourable Justice Smith, of Manitoba, was the other brother. The fruit of this marriage is four sons and two daughters. One daughter died as an infant. Mr. Fuller is the owner of a quantity of real estate in Stratford, Palmerston, Atwood and Wiarton. He is not engaged now at any particular business. Looking back he can see the place now a city, which was, when he began his operations in it, only a village. In religion, Mr. Fuller is an Episcopalian; and in politics, a Conservative. He is president of the Conservative Association for the North Riding of Perth. In 1882 he went as far west as the south Saskatchewan, and saw the first dwelling, a small frame house, erected in Regina.

Burns, Charles, Toronto, the subject of this sketch, was born in the County of Wicklow, Ireland, on the 11th of January, 1840. In 1849, with many others who at this period were turning their faces toward the new world, he removed, with his parents, to Canada. His father was Simon Peter Burns, who, on arriving in this country, took up his residence in the County of York, where he lived till his family was grown up. The subject of our sketch received a good common school education; and after his studies had been completed, went on the homestead farm, and here he remained for some time; but farming was not to his taste. It occurred to him, that, with the right sort of capacity there was opportunity for good achievement in Toronto; so thither he removed, and established himself as a dealer in flour and feed. He remained at this occupation for about three years, and then opened a shop for general groceries. Thus he employed himself for nine years, after which he engaged in the ice business. sides these occupations, Mr. Burns has been active in a score of other directions, being a gentleman of large and generous public spirit. As proof of this, it may be instanced that he has held the position of trustee of separate schools for a quarter of a century, and for the past three years he has been chairman of the finance Committee. For the last four years he has been, and still is, a director of the House of Industry; and is at this time grand president of the Emerald Beneficient Association. In 1881, he was appointed a justice of the peace, and those who know his high personal integrity, and and never-failing sense of justice most cordially agreed that a good choice had been made. In religion Mr. Burns is a prominent member of the Roman catholic communion; in politics he is a Reformer. He was married in October, 1858, to Sarah Kenny. Mr. Burns's personal appearance reveals the hardy determination, the activity and the force through which he has been able to accomplish so much, and to du ab tai en wi

hey soli Ro

me

tor

froi

the

bee

yea:

Ťru

was

Boa

tion

Inst

the !

Was

vorl

were

hold

byte

by r

as by

tions

broad

in th

celler

in the

the po

cation

McCa

daugh

terian

and c station

late D

have h

girls.

both d

Frank

1885.

Seafort

of him

Thursd

citizens of the d hey, on this to studious

made h

who kn

years, a

accomplish it so well.

McCaughey, Samuel Glyn, A.M. Barrister, Seaforth, Ontario, the subject of the following sketch, was born in the year 1830, near Ballymena, County Antrim, Ireland. He was educated at the Royal Belfast College, the educational cradle of great num. bers of distinguished men, among whom might be mentioned, Dr. Thompson, professor of mathematics in that institution. afterwards occupying the same position in Glasgow, and to which his now celebrated son, Sir W. Thompson, succeeded; Sir Francis Hincks, Dr. John Hall, and many others of equal note. Mr. McCaughey's father was Thomas McCaughey, a linen draper, and agriculturist, owning several farms and belonging to a family of landed proprietors. His mother, still living, is Jane (Glyn) In 1854 the subject of this McCaughey. sketch, with his brother, James McCaughey, LL.B., barrister, Ingersoll (now deceased). came to Canada. James McCaughey was reeve and afterwards mayor of Ingersoll for a number of years, and was the most popular man without exception in the South Riding of Oxford. At two different times he was chosen as the Conservative standardbearer, and was considered the only man able to wrest that reform constituency and return a conservative member for the House of Commons. But his relations persuaded him not to accept, though he was pretty certain of being elected, many reformers having signed the requisition, asking him to be a candidate. He died at the early age of forty-six years, a little over two years ago. For some time the subject of this sketch was with his brother in Ingersoll in the practice of law, but about 1863, some twenty years ago, he located himself in Seaforth, and has been ever since, until lately, in the practice of the law in that He had with him as partner, for town.

some fifteen years, Frank Holmested, and the firm was known as that of McCaughey & Holmested. They did a large pusiness during that time. The firm was dissolved about two years ago, Mr. Holmested retaining the practice, and Mr. McCaughev entering into the business of private banker with W. Logan, under the style of Logan & Co. During the time that Mr. McCaughey was in the practice of the law, he was solicitor for the Consolidated Bank and the Royal Canadian Bank from its commencement to its going down. He was also solicifor for the Canadian Bank of Commerce. from its start in Seaforth, until he gave up the practice of the law. Our subject has heen reeve of the town of Seaforth for three vears, chairman of the Board of School Trustees (common) for many years, and was the first chairman of the High School Board, and is still a trustee of that institution. He is also chairman of the Mechanics' Institute, an institution second to none of the kind in the province. Mr. McCaughey was also president of the International Salt rorks of Goderich and Seaforth until they were sold, and was one of its largest stockholders. He is also an elder of the Presbyterian church, Seaforth, and is known by members of the congregation, as well as by his fellow citizens, to be a conscientions and sterling Christian man. He is broad-spirited, and a man who is interested in the progress of all good works. His excellent literary tastes, and his deep interest in the cause of education, fitted him well for the position which he has held in the educational bodies of his adopted town. Mr. McCaughey married in 1868, Sarah Ferris. daughter of Rev. Robert Ferris, Presbyterian minister of Fethard, south of Ireland, and chaplain to the Presbyterian soldiers stationed in that town, and niece of the late Dr. Ferris, of St. Catharines. They have had four children, two boys and two girls. The girls are living, but the sons are both dead. One died in infancy, the other, Frank Thomas McCaughey, died in March, 1885. He was a student in the High School, Seaforth. The Seaforth Expositor thus spoke of him at the time of his death: "On Thursday morning, March 5th, 1885, our citizens were surprised and pained to learn of the death of Master Francis T. McCaughey, only son of S. G. McCaughey, Esq., of this town. Frank was a manly, quiet and studious lad, whose exemplary character made him a universal favourite with all who knew him. He was old beyond his years, and it would seem that his active

diren

at this

Bene-

as ap-

those

v. and

st cor-

l been

prom-

c com-

He

Sarah

arance

he acne has

nd to

A. M.

ect of

year

Ire-

elfast

num-

vhom

pro-

ition.

on in rated

Fran-

thers

r was

and

d be-tors.

lyn)

this

hey,

ed).

was

for ppu-

uth

mes

ard-

nan

and

use

ded

tty

ers im

rly wo of

and powerful mind was too much for a not over robust beds. He was the pride and hope of a happy household, and his death will be a terrible blow to his fond and devoted parents. But in the depth of their grief they will have the consolation of memories which are denied to many others, as few parents have had to mourn the death of so affectionate, obedient and exemplary a son." The Seaforth Sun also said regarding him: "He was a youth of great promise, was well educated, and was a general favourite with our people. When a bright boy like deceased is cut down by the merciless hand of death like a flower, it is sadvery sad indeed." Mr. McCaughev is a Reformer in politics, though he does not take a very prominent part therein, his tastes not lying much in that direction. His father had two brothers, John and Frank. John died at a good old age, at the old homestead in Rosherry, County Antrim. He had no children. Frank is dead also. He married a sister of Sir Samuel Wilson, who is now living on the property of the late Lord Beaconsfield. His sons, two of them, Samuel McCaughey and another, are among the great sheep farmers of Australia. It was here that the Wilsons, their uncles, amassed their great wealth.

Quinn, Rev. James C., Emerson, Manitoba, was born near Belfast, Ireland, on the 27th May, 1845. His father was Richard Quinn, and his mother Jane Cochrane. He entered Queen's College, Belfast, in 1865, and subsequently the General Assembly's College of the same city. He distinguished himself greatly at college, taking prizes in Hebrew and Christian Apologetics during his theological career. Rev. Mr. Quinn also took a course of medical study while at the university; and gave much attention during his arts course in Queen's University, Ireland, to natural philosophy and natural science and mineralogy. On the 26th August, 1873, he left Belfast for Newfoundland, but in the following year crossed over to Nova Scotia. In December of 1874, he went to New Brunswick, and was inducted into the pastoral charge of St. James' church, Scotch Ridge, N. B. He was inducted to the pastoral charge of the Presbyterian church, Sherbrooke, N.S., 1st May, 1877; was called to and settled in Tabusintac and Burnt church (Miramichi, N.B.) 1st May, 1881; was called to St. Luke's, Bathurst, N.B., on the 1st May, 1883; and called to labour in Manitoba, by appointment of the Home Mission Board, on the 1st September, 1885. Our subject is a member of the Phonetic Society of England; also of the Free and Accepted Order of Freemasons, Ireland. He has given much attention to the agricultural interests of the communities in which he has resided, and has also taken a prominent part in all that affected the wellbeing of society. He was the first to introduce into the counties of Northumberland and Gloucester, N.B., the system of pre-serving green fodder in silos, commonly known as "ensilage." He likewise introduced Shropshire sheep into Northumberland and Gloucester, N.B.; and encouraged by personal effort the introduction of thoroughbred Ayrshire cattle and poultry into Gloucester, N.B. He had charge of a station for the American Ornithological Society when resident at Bathurst, N.B. And all this he did in addition to the full work in a large and widely scattered parish, requiring as a rule three services every Sabbath and three week night services. His religious views are Calvinistic. He married on the 10th April, 1872, Anna Wilson, of Belfast, daughter of William Wilson, cutler and surgical instrument maker and hardware merchant, of the same city. She is a niece of the late Rev. Dr. Alex. Wilson, of South Carolina, U.S. It is a pity that there are not more men like Mr. Quinn in the country; men who, while attending to the spiritual welfare of their flocks, look after their temporal improvement as well.

Capell, John, Toronto, was born in Middleton-Cheney, Northamptonshire, England, on the 15th October, 1851. His father was John Capell, and his mother Ann Williams. The parents were married in England, but they emigrated to Canada in 1871, and took up their abode in Newmarket. They had nine children, and of these the subject of our sketch was the eldest. On their arrival, Mr. Capell, senior, employed himself as a farmer, and is still at the same calling, near Richmond Hill, in the County of York, He is a sincere, upright gentleman, a thrifty, frugal, intelligent farmer, and enjoys the respect and good-will of his neighbours. His wife, our subject's mother, is still hearty, and there are doubtless many ripe and useful years yet in store for Their family, like this excellent couple. themselves, are doing well. Mr. Capell received a fair education at Middleton, his native town. When he was sixteen he went to Banbury, Oxfordshire, where he was apprenticed to the trade of carpenter and joiner, in the employ of J. & T. Davis, and here he remained for five years. He was now a hopeful young journeyman of twenty-one, and a thorough master of his trade. Although he possessed a fair education, he was ambitious, and resolved to possess more; so when the tiresome day was ended, he was found at a night school studying branches to fit him for such walks in life as we have no doubt his sanguine young imagination was brooding over. In 1871 the family emigated, as we have seen, to Canada. They went to Newmarket, Ontario, for here three of Mrs. Capell's brothers had already betaken themselves. These three brothers were George, Joseph, and John Williams. John Capell, jr., did not remain long at Newmarket, but entered into the employ of Withrow & Hillock, at Toronto, and he afterwards went to work for Hastings & Peterkin, likewise large wood-work manufacturers. Here he obtained a thorough knowledge of every variety of work that might be said to belong In the spring of 1880 he reto his trade. solved, along with Mr. Hewitt, a fellow workman in the same shop, to begin business on their own account, and the new firm took the name of Hewitt & Capell. The firm commenced operations in March. 1880, in a shop on Queen street west. But business grew so fast that these enterprising men had to seek larger premises on Sheppard street, and here they remained until 1884, when their business had assumed such proportions that they were compelled to lease a large building, 57 Adelaide street west (which building is now owned by the firm), where they now manufacture on a large scale a varied class of wood-work. Only the most skilled workmen are employed by this firm in the various departments of their factory, and, as a result, their work is of the highest and most satisfactory kind, and is in constant and ever-increasing demand. The only association with which Mr. Capell has leagued himself is that of the United Workmen. In religion, Mr. Capell is a member of the Baptist church, in which communion he stands high. He is now, and has always been, a Conservative. In 1875, he married Mary Ann, daughter of William Dean, of Banbury, Oxfordshire, England. Mrs. Capell came to Canada in 1872. The fruit of this union is four children, three of whom are living.

She Floor But Her

orni

tiro

his t

rer pror

the

Onta

in la

Coun

villag

Unite

ættli

in th

he re

broth

City (

groce

for a

Ontar

remov

mcei

elder

tinuec

the "

Hami

when

name

was n

to ill-1 the W on his New Y six of this sk

to the Times

from 1

the de

We nee

ity and

Mr. M

will be

tions o

lary.

and str

promin

ocial e

and dea

esteeme

nore th

to speal are sure

remarks

hip,

Murphy, Timothy Douglas, M.D., Hamilton, of the well known Hamilton Whip Company, was born in the City of Hamilton on the 20th November, 1832. His father was Daniel Murphy, and his mother's maiden name was Ellen Flood.

the was the eldest child of the late James 150d, of Glasgow, who was one of the inners of Canada. He came to this counin 1820, settling in the township of Embrook, in the County of Wentworth. Here he engaged in the lumber trade, oming extensive mills and timber lands proughout Upper Canada. To facilitate ha trade, he purchased large vessels to confer his timber and lumber to the lower provinces. In 1860 Mr. Flood removed to the village of Kingsville, Essex county, Ontario, where he remained until his death in 1870. Daniel Murphy was born in the County of Cork, Ireland, in 1823, in the tillage of Barehaven, and emigrated to the Inted States with his parents in 1826, large intling in New York state. He remained in the United States until 1838, when he obhe removed to Canada with his mother, bothers and a sister. He settled in the ry var-belong City of Kingston, where he engaged in the grocery trade. After remaining in Kingston a busifor a short time, he removed to London, e new Capell. Untario, where he married. In 1848 he removed to Hamilton, and entered into the grocery business in partnership with his elder brother, Timothy Murphy. He con-But brising tinued in this trade in what was known as the "Old Checkered" store, on King street, Shepuntil Hamilton, until his brother's death in 1853, sumed when the business was continued under the pelled name of D. Murphy & Co. Mr. Murphy street was now sole proprietor. In 1860, owing by the to ill-health, he concluded to take a trip to on a the West Indies. In the following year, work. on his way home, he died in the City of e em-New York, leaving a family of eight boys, epartsix of whom are still living, the subject of their this sketch being the third son. Alluding ctory to the death of Mr. Murphy, the Hamilton creas-Times of March, 1861, says :- "A telegram with from New York on Friday last announced elf is the death of this gentleman in that city. igion, We need scarcely say that in this communaptist ity and elsewhere among those with whom tands Mr. Murphy was well acquainted, his death een, a will be deeply lamented. In all the rela-Mary tions of life his conduct was truly exemp-Banlary. Among business men his enterprise Capell f this and strict integrity had earned for him a prominent position, while in the family and m are ocial circles he was beloved by all near and dear to him as deservedly as he was 1.D., esteemed by those who enjoyed his friend-hip. An intimate acquaintance, lasting ilton An intimate acquaintance, lasting nore than one-third his lifetime, enables us y of 1852. lo speak feelingly on this subject, and we are sure scores of friends will join us in the lood.

emarks we have made. Mr. Murphy came

of his

educa-

ved to ne day

school

ı walks

nguine

er. In

e seen.

narket.

Capell's

selves

oseph,

r., did

ntered ock, at

b work

he refellow

March.

hither from Kingston in 1840, but only stayed about a year, when he removed to London, and there commenced business. He came back to Hamilton in 1848, and was associated in business with his brother, Timothy Murphy, who died here in 1853. Since then he has done a heavy business on his own account, and had succeeded in making a handsome fortune. Disease of the heart, however, rendered it necessary for him to seek relief in a milder clime, and on the 31st of December last he proceeded to Bahama, but to no purpose. On his way back he was overtaken by death in the City of New York, and thus at the age of 38 has been taken from a successful career and a large family of young children. He was a native of the County Cork, Ireland." Some of the family are in the United States occupying responsible positions. One, John Redfield Murphy, M.D., is a prominent physician in Kansas City; another, Daniel S. Murphy, is employed in the Central Pacific Railway, California. The remainder of the family are living in Hamilton. Timothy Douglas Murphy, M.D., the subject of our sketch, received a finished education, concluding his studies in Rush Medical College, Chicago, where, after a course of four years, he received the degree of Doctor of Medicine, graduating in February, 1879, with high honours, and being one of the two of the 125 applicants for the position, who were appointed House Doctor to the Cook County Hospital, in the City of Chicago. He remained House Doctor until the fall of 1879, when he returned to Hamilton, where he married. He returned again to Chicago, where he practised his profession until 1881. Again he returned to Hamilton, family affairs requiring to be arranged in the matter of his father's estate. Finding the management of his interests would require more attention and a longer time than he at first thought, and so would seriously interfere with his practise in Chicago, he reluctantly decided to abandon his profession for the present and remain in Hamilton. His natural business abilities could not long remain inactive, and after a short time we find him one of the principal promoters of a manufacturing industry, namely, the Hamiiton Whip Co. Of this institution he is, at time of writing, secre-The firm is tary-treasurer and manager. one of the foremost now in Canada, manufacturing excellent descriptions of whips, and the prominent position which this company now holds among our manufacturers, supplying as it does a class of goods which the mercantile community in the past were obliged to procure from our American neighbours, is undoubtedly due to his business tact and ability. Our subject has travelled extensively through the United States, and was two years in San Francisco in the employ of the Central Pacific Railway. He is a Roman catholic, and a staunch supporter of the N. P. He married in October, 1879, Emma Florine Martin, daughter of Philip Martin, of Hamilton, Ontario, one of the oldest residents of the city, and a most successful merchant, who has lately retired from active life, leaving his business in the hands of his sons, Philip and Andrew Martin. Mrs. Martin Murphy is well known throughout the country as one of Canada's most brilliant singers, she having taken part in opera and concerts in various parts of the country. She is a pupil of Senor Agramonta, the celebrated Italian teacher of vocalism, of the City of New York. Among many flattering notices now before us of the talented lady, we can only find room for one. Alluding to Miss Martin's debut in New York, the New York Sun thus spoke :- "Miss E. Martin made her first appearance before a New York audience on Friday, 21st inst., at Chickering Hall. She sang the difficult Rondo from 'Don Pasquale,' when she introduced some difficult cadenzas; with staccato notes, trills and roulades, the rendition was highly artistic in the details. Her voice, a pure soprano of great compass, extending to E in alt., is well adapted for the singing of bravuro, and from the first notes she captivated the numerous audience that filled the hall. the diatonic scales, trills and staccato passages were so distinctly and clearly accomplished that, after the final cadenza in staccato, the applause was unanimous, and three times she was forced to come out and acknowledge it. This successful debut predicts for Miss Martin a brilliant future in the divine art of singing, and she is already a very distinguished singer."

West, Richard, Toronto, the subject of this sketch, was born in the County of Fermanagh, Ireland, in the year 1834. His parents were Francis West and Louise Armstrong. They were married in Ireland, and the fruit of this marriage was two children, Richard and John. John West is now a resident of New South Wales, Australia, where he carries on a large stock farm. When the subject of this sketch was only one year old, his mother died, and some time afterwards his father married again, and by the second marriage was born to him five more

Francis West still resides on the children. old homestead in Ireland, respected and he. loved by all who know him. Richard West, the subject of this sketch, was educated in Ireland, at one of the "paid schools." The arrangement was that each pupil should pay for his own education. At the age of seventeen, in 1855, he left Ireland, and soon after landed in New York. He was employed in Jersey City for a short time, and then moved to Long Island, and took charge of a farm. He remained on this farm for about eighteen months, and then left for Toronto. Shortly after his arrival he opened, on Queen street West, a wholesale and retail grocery, flour and feed store, in conjunction with a Mr. Brown. This partner. This partnership was dissolved in about a year; and in 1860 Mr. West started in the coal and wood business, and in 1862 added groceries to his trade. In 1864 he became contractor for supplies, and in this branch he is at the He has been a successful present time. merchant, and accumulated a good deal of He, along with William Watson. a gentleman with whom he entered into partnership in 1876, owns the handsome property known as Occident Hall, corner of Queen and Bathurst streets, and in this building various of the West End societies Mr. West has served in the meet weekly. volunteer artillery, and at one time held the position of sergeant in the Field Battery. He received his discharge in 1865, having completed his eight years service. Mr. West is a Freemason, and stands high in the order. He was married on the 3rd of October, 1866, by Rev Dr. Grasett, to Mary Jane Boddy, of Toronto, by whom he has had seven children, four of whom are alive. In religion Mr. West is a Methodist; but before his marriage he was a member of the Church of England. In politics he is a Conservative. It need hardly be said that Mr. West is highly regarded as an upright and worthy citizen.

ight

the er

dition

the E

Quebe tte F

ettler

the se

the co

includ

dition

35th o

surren

the da

proclai

lormin

of the

Genera

from

observ

betwee

and pr

session

These

Montes

could r

had cor

manner

Were

attemp

advant

morenc

repulse.

the vici

and 13t

his troo

favoure

accliviti

commar

ealm,

were in

once the city, an

The bat

the Fre

nage wa

severely

the Fren negligen

feeblene

fered fro

ernment valuable

how prec

lost it.

Montcali

their seco

ously wo

the field

Wolfe, James, the conqueror of Quebec, was born at Westerham, Kent, on the 15th of January, 1726. He was the son of Edward Wolfe, an officer in the British army. The following historical statement shows his connection with various expeditions against French holdings in the provinces now forming the Dominion of Canada. In 1758 he was sent, with the rank of brigadier-general, on the expedition against Cape Breton, in which Boscawen commanded the sea, and Amherst the land forces. The brunt of the French fire in landing before Louisbourg was borne by the left division ender Wolfe, the attacks by the centre and on the the divisions being mere feints to distract and be-In 1759, the memorable expethe enemy. l West. tion which afterwards shed such lustre on lucated the British arms, was fitted out against hools." Quebec by Pitt, who had resolved to deprive should French crown of its most important age of ettlements in America. The command of id soon the sea forces was entrusted to Saunders; the command of the land forces (7,000 men ie, and including provincials), to Wolfe. The expedition arrived at the Isle of Orleans on the charge ırm for Sth of June; the fort of Niagara had been eft for surrendered to the British under Amherst the day before. In August Wolfe issued a proclamation to the Canadian peasants, informing them that the forces were masters of the river; while a powerful army, under General Amherst, threatened their country from the interior; calling upon them to observe a strict neutrality during the struggle between the French and British crowns, and promising to protect them in their possessions and in the exercise of their religion. These promises he most faithfully kept. Montralm had concentrated all the forces he muld raise in the province of Quebec, and had completed his fortifications in a masterly manner. The months of July and August were spent in repeated unsuccessful atattempts to drive the French from their advantageous post at the Falls of Montmorenci; and here the British suffered a repulse, on attempting to effect a landing in the vicinity. On the night between the 12th and 13th of September, 1759, Wolfe landed his troops immediately above Quebec, and, avoured by the night, ascended the steep activities to the Plains of Abraham, which command that city from the west. Montcalm, when he learned that the British were in possession of these heights, saw at once that nothing but a battle could save the city, and he took his measures accordingly. The battle was strenuously contested, but the French at length gave way. The carmage was frightful; both sides suffered severely; but, from all accounts, we believe the French most; this is attributed to some negligence of the French officers, and to the feebleness of their men, who had long suffered from want. Indeed, the French govemment never took much pains to retain so valuable a dependency. They never knew how precious Canada really was until they lost it. But to return to the fight. Montcalm and Wolfe fell in the action, and their seconds in command were both dangerously wounded, and were obliged to leave the field before the fate of the day was de-

as em-

open-

ile and

n con-

artner-

and in

l wood

to his

or for

at the

cessful

leal of

atson,

l into

dsome

ner of

ı this cieties

in the ld the

ttery.

aving

Mr.

gh in

rd of

t, to

vhom

vhom

etho-

ras a

In

nard-

rded

Que-

the

n of

itish

nent

edi-

rov-

ada.

of

inst

ded

The

ore ion

Montcalm lingered for a day or two; but the young, gallant and intrepid Wolfe. expired almost immediately. Tradition and history have it, that, while he lay wounded on the field of battle, the cry, "They run!" arose along the line. As he was raised from the ground he asked, "Who run?" "The French," was the reply. He seemed to feel satisfied; he had accomplished the purpose for which he had been sent. "The French!" (then he added) "I die happy!" And falling down, he instantly expired. It is re. lated that while the boats were gliding along toward the landing whence the soldiers were to scale the hill and attack the French, that Wolfe, keeping time with his hand, in a low tone recited several stanzas from Gray's Elegy; and that after he had finished, turning to some of the officers, he said, "Gentlemen, I would rather be the author of that poem than the conqueror of Quebec." On the plains of Abraham where this noble hero fell a monument stands to his memory, and Frenchmen, it is said, pass by it now without any feeling of bitterness. As if to salve their wounded feeling, in a public garden looking down upon lower town stands a double marble column, half of it to the memory of the English conquerors, the other half to do memory to the darling of la belle France and her sons in our own colonies, the heroic, grand-souled and chivalrous Montcalm.

Sweetland, John, M.D., Ottawa Sheriff of Carleton, is a son of Simon and Jane (Morris) Sweetland, and was born in the City of Kingston, Ontario, on the 15th August, 1835. Dr. Sweetland is descended from the Sweetlands of Exeter, Devonshire, England. He completed his education at Queen's College, in his native city, and in 1858 graduated from the medical depart-Having obtained his diploma, he at once opened an office at Pakenham, Lanark county, Ontario, and began the practice of his profession. He set out in his professional career to win; his energy was untiring, his ability very marked, and naturally he soon found himself the master of a splendid In addition to an active and practice. useful career in his profession, Dr. Sweetland has performed various important public duties, and has been identified with several conspicuous enterprises. For example, he has been coroner for the counties of Lanark and Renfrew; surgeon for Carleton county jail; and surgeon for the County of Carleton general hospital; he has also been surgeon for the United Protestant benevolent society; for the order of Foresters; and of

Dr. Sweetland in the order of Oddfellows. 1877, was elected president of the Ottawa Medico-Chirurgical Society; he was president of St. George's Society seven years; was for three years president of the Ottawa Reform Association; is president of the Beechwood Cemetery Company; and has been first vice-president of the Ottawa Ladies' He was commissioner during the construction of the Ottawa waterworks; and for many years held the position of director of the first and second Mutual Building societies of Ottawa. Dr. Sweetland was for four years master of Doric Lodge, No. 58, Canadian registry. Dr. Sweetland was likewise a member of the North American St. George's Union; was chosen vice-president of that society in 1879, and president not long afterwards. In December, the doctor was appointed Sheriff of the County of Carleton, and he still holds that office. In 1883 he was president of the Dominion Sanitary In 1884 he became president Association. of the Athletic Grounds Association of the City of Ottawa; and he was elected president of the Rideau Club in March, 1884, and again in March, 1885. Sheriff Sweetland is a member of the Episcopalian church, and a man of singularly blameless life. He has always shown the deepest possible interest in the advancement of moral movements and reforms, and is generally in the front of all Christian work. He has been On the first occasion he twice married. married Isabella, a daughter of Sheriff Dickson, Kingston, Ontario. She died in 1872, leaving two daughters, Elizabeth J. and Selina Florence. He married again, in 1874, Catharine Blasdell, relict of the late Nicholas Sparks, son of Nicholas Sparks, the founder of the City of Ottawa. By this union there are two children, John Blasdell and Caroline Florence.

Dickinson, Moss Kent, M.P., for County of Russell, Ont., was born 1st June, 1822, in the village of Denmark, Lewis county, State of New York. He is the youngest, and only surviving son, of the late Barnabas Dickinson and Lydia Davenport. The former was born at Hatfield, Mass., U.S., 5th May, 1783; the latter at Spencertown, Conn., on the 1st June, 1793. Both are lineal descendants of the Pilgrim Fathers, who landed in New England from the Mayflower. Barnabas Dickinson came to Canada about the year 1812-13, and was the first contractor for the conveyance of the mails, then carried on men's backs, from Montreal westward. After the close of the war of 1812-15, he established the first line of public conveyance by boats and coaches between Montreal and He was the founder of Dickin. Prescott. son's Landing, on the St. Lawrence, then a stage station, now a prosperous and thriving town. About 1820 he transferred his Cana. dian business to his younger brother, the late Horace Dickinson, of Montreal, who died of cholera in 1832. He then obtained several important mail contracts in the State of New York, and removed to the village of Denmark, where he connected his several stage lines with a line of passenger packets on the Erie canal, between Schenectady and Oswego. He returned with his family to Canada about 1827-28, and died at Cornwall of cholera in 1832. The widow and family removed to Prescott in 1833. Our subject was educated at the common schools of Cornwall and Prescott, and at the academies of Low. ville and Denmark, State of New York. His studies were those required for a commer. cial calling. He has been a private of a juvenile corps, raised in defence of the frontier at Prescott, during the rebellion of 1837-38, and filled the same position in the Ottawa City Rifle corps, during the Fenian excitement of 1864-65. He left Prescott in the fall of 1838 for the State of Illinois, in the capacity of a merchant clerk. with the late Hiram Norton, ex-M.P. for the County of Grenville, in the old parliament of Ontario; visited Chicago, which then contained only about 3,500 inhabitants, and now has a population of over 700,000, and returned to Prescott in 1840. From-that year until 1844, he acted as clerk in the post office and custom house at Prescott; and then (1844) he commenced the forwarding business on his own account, with one steamer and one barge, spon the St. Lawrence. Ottawa and Rideau rivers, plying between Kingston and Montreal. This was prior to the completion of the St. Law-He subsequently extended fence canals. his line to Quebec and Lake Champlain, with branch offices at Kingston, Ottawa. Montreal, Quebec, Burlington, and Whitehall, his fleet now consisting of sixteen steamers and sixty barges. In 1850 he freighted for the late Hon. Thos. McKay, half a million feet of sawn lumber, this being the first shipment to and the introduction of the Ottawa valley lumber trade into the United States, and was its total export for that year. This trade for 1884 showed a total export of 625,000,000 feet, of which about 400,000,000found its way to U.S. markets via Lake Champlain. Also from 1850 to 1857 he was associated with the late J. M. Currier, ex-M.P. for Ottawa city, under the name of fir be 18 thi fro 18

to tio

mo

sell

he

has

var

was 186

two

tern

of 0tta

Don

he v

men

Dòn

a ma

men

of

Hon

and politi cial a

is a

in 18

of the

died

daugi

specto

of Ca

Kilda

18 a s

of an

remov

sevent

among

prelate

dragod

ral Ste

of Geo

shire. lath's,

1842, a

from 18

compri

lettres,

physics

to 1854

connect

Me

Currier & Dickinson, in the manufacture of sawn lumber at Ottawa. This firm was the first to open the Boston market to the lumber products of the Ottawa valley, and in 1852 forced, as it were, the first car load through by rail. He resided in Kingston from 1844 to 1848, in Montreal from 1848 to 1862, and at Ottawa from 1862 He then severed his connection with the forwarding trade, and removed to Manotick, on the Rideau river, fifteen miles from Ottawa, County of Russell, now a flourishing village, of which he was the founder in 1859. This village has an extensive water power, and has various mills in operation. Mr. Dickinson was elected mayor of the City of Ottawa, in 1864, and was returned by acclamation the two succeeding years, 1865-66. During his term as chief magistrate, the confederation of the provinces was accomplished, and Ottawa became the permanent capital of the Dominion. At the general election of 1882, he was first nominated as the Conservative member for the County of Russell, in the Dominion Parliament, and was returned by a majority of 309. He cast his first parliamentary vote at Kingston in 1844 in favour of John A. Macdonald, now the Right Hon. Sir John A. Macdonald, premier, and has continually since been allied in politics with the Conservative party, provincial and federal. In religion Mr. Dickinson is a Presbyterian. Mr. Dickinson married. in 1846, Elizabeth Mary, youngest daughter of the late William Trigge, of Toronto. She died in 1866, leaving two sons and two daughters.

real and

Dickin.

then a thriving

is Cana-

her, the

al, who btained

ie State

Illage of several packets

ady and

mily to ornwall

family

ect was ornwall

of Low-

k. His mmer-

e of a

e fron-

ion of ion in ng the

e left

tate of t clerk.

P. for

parlia-

h then

s, and

0, and

n-that

nepost

; and ward-

with

he St.

, ply-This

Law-

ended

with

Mon-

all, his

s and

or the n feet

ship-

ttawa

tates,

year.

ort of

0,000 Lake

rier,

Moylan, James George, Ottawa, Inspector of Penitentiaries, for the Dominion of Canada, was born at Maynooth, Co. Kildare, Ireland, in the year 1826. is a son of Michael Moylan, a descendant of an old and prominent Cork family, which removed to Galway in the early part of the seventeenth century, and which included among its members several distinguished prelates, and also the dashing and brave dragoon of the American Revolution, General Stephen Moylan; and of Mary, daughter of George Bird, of Little Haywood, Staffordshire. Our subject was educated at St Jarlath's, Tuam, between the years 1838 and 1842, and at the Royal College, Maynooth, from 1842 to 1847. His course of studies comprised the humanities, rhetoric, belle lettres, natural philosophy, logic, metaphysics, ethics, etc. From the years 1851 to 1854 he resided in Washington, D. C., in connection with the Chilian Embassy, and as correspondent for several journals of the North as well as the South. From 1854 to 1856 he was attached to the staff of the New York Daily Times. In 1858 he commenced the publication and editorial management of the Canadian Freeman. In 1869, at the joint request of the then premier, Sir John Macdonald, and the late Hon. J. C. Chapais, Minister of Agriculture, he undertook a mission to Ireland to advocate emigration from that country, in the interest of the Dominion. He remained there until the spring of 1872, and during his residence in Dublin, he published, in various leading journals, a series of papers on Canada, containing a fund of useful information, respecting the government, resources, manners and institutions of the country, highly beneficial to intending emigrants. letters were reproduced and much commended by some of the principal newspapers in Canada. Mr. Moylan was instrumental in causing a considerable number of very desirable settlers to come to Canada, in preference to the more distant colonies. Though often urged by men of prominence and position to enter public life, Mr. Moy-lan's quiet habits and literary pursuits led him to avoid any further active participation in politics than the support which he gave his party, through his journal and occasionally on the hustings. In 1872 he was appointed Director of Penitentiaries, and in 1875, on the abolition of the board, the late government offered him the position of Inspector, which he accepted, and still holds. During his term of office four new penitentiaries have been opened, viz., St. Vincent de Paul, Manitoba, British Columbia and Dorchester (N. B.), the first, third and fourth named he inaugurated. performance of his duties he has visited all the provinces of the Dominion. The Penitentiary system, under his supervision, operates very satisfactorily, and can compare favourably with that of much older Mr. Moylan's Annual Reports countries. on Penitentiaries, to the Minister of Justice, are valuable documents, full of experience and practical knowledge of the subjects which he treats, and are always well received and favourably noticed by the portion of the press which takes an interest in penitentiary matters. He has been a steady and earnest advocate of prison reform, and has been the means of introducing several changes and improvements into the penitentiary administration which are important and advantageous. Mr. Moylan has been, through life, a strict and staunch Roman catholic. He married Bessie, daughter of the late D. Markham, of Dunbeg, County Clare, and niece of "The O'Gorman" of the Causeway, Ennis, who was also uncle of Colonel "The O'Gorman" Mahon, M.P... Major Purcell O'Gorman, ex. M. P. for Waterford, and Judge Richard O'Gorman, of the Supreme Court, New York. He has a family of two daughters- Mr. Moylan is one of the most popular, and at the same time one of the most efficient officers in the public service.

Smith, Hon. Sidney, Q.C., Cobourg, Postmaster-General from 1858 to 1862, was born at Port Hope, Upper Canada, on the 16th October, 1823. His grandfather, Elias Smith, was a United Empire loyalist, who adhered to the British standard through the American revolutionary war, and afterwards came to Canada, founding what is now the town of Port Hope. John David Smith, the father of the subject of this notice, was a member of the Legislative Assembly of Upper Canada, from 1824 till 1827. James Smith, afterwards Judge of the County of Victoria, brother of Sydney Smith, twice represented Durham and once Victoria in the Legislature of Canada; and another brother, J. Shuter Smith, also sat in parliament up to Confederation for the County of Durham. The education of Sidnev Smith commenced under Archdeacon (afterwards Bishop) Bethune, at Cobourg; was continued at the Home Grammar school, and ended under the care of the late Dr. Jonathan Short, of Port Hope. Studying law in the office of Smith (his brother, John Shuter,) & Crooks, he was admitted to the bar in 1844. The same year he commenced practice in Cobourg, where he soon became solicitor to the Commercial Bank, and succeeded in establishing the largest business in the district. He also became solicitor to the Bank of Montreal, to the Midland Railway of Canada, and to the Commissioners for the Town Trust of Cobourg. His first law partner was his brother, John Shuter Smith, the partnership continuing until the latter was appointed master of the Court of Chancery, in 1850. Three years after he took in, as a new law partner, Mr. (now Hon. Justice) Armour. In 1862 Mr. Smith became a Queen's Counsel. He was elected municipal Councillor in 1853, for two places the town of Cobourg, and the township of Hamilton, in which the town is situated. The election of warden, or presiding officer of the county councils, sometimes takes the shape of a political contest. Such was the case in 1853, when Mr. Smith was elected warden of the united counties of Northumberland and Durham, being reeve of the township of Hamilton. In 1854 Mr. Smith contested the west riding of Northumberland, against Col. D'Arcy E. Boulton, and was then first elected a member of the Legislative Assembly. This was the first election that occurred after Mr. Hincks' bill, reforming the representation in parliament, came into effect. Mr. Smith was twice elected for this constitu-In these two latter elections he was opposed, in the first, by Mr. (afterwards Senator) Asa A. Burnham, and in the second by a Mr. Grimshaw; and although the most strenuous efforts were made by the opposition, and the thunders of their press exerted against him to a greater extent than on any previous occasion, to cause his defeat, yet he was triumphantly returned. his opponent only polling a small number of votes. On his first entry into parliament, in 1854, Mr. Smith moved the address in reply to the speech from the Throne. He supported all the liberal measures, such as the secularization of the clergy reserves. etc., from the time of his advent into parliament. In 1854 he was chairman of the so-called corruption committee. In this year he placed upon the statute book the Chattel Mortgage Act, which is still in force. Till 1856 he supported the coalition, of which Sir Allan MacNab was the head, and then he went into opposition, being dissatisfied with the course pursued by Sir Allania the leadership of the government, and when the latter had ceased to be able to discharge his duties, owing to ill health. At the close of the session in this year, Mr. Smith went to Germany for the benefit of his health, returning much improved. On the 2nd of February, 1858, Mr. Smith was appointed Postmaster-General, with a seat in the Cabinet; which office he held, with the exception of the period of the ministerial crisis in 1858, when he became President of the Council and Minister of Agriculture, till the government resigned, in 1862, consequent upon defeat on the Militia bill. From 1858 to 1862 Mr. Smith was a member of the Board of Railway Commissioners. In 1858, Mr. Smith introduced and carried through parliament the Consolidated Jury Act for Upper Canada; this Act, with the exception of a few unimportant amendments. recently made in the local legislature of Ontario, being still the law. In the session of 1859, he moved and carried an address to the Queen, praying Her Majesty to recommend the Imperial Parliament to grant a subsid

arrang

with .

arrang

France

reveno

in the ada on

he acc

Canada

office.

if indee

Canada

able an

ment c

the ben

of the

duty M:

Europe.

Canadia

ister, de

his own

ceeding

eral, w

departm

little pro

inland re

best of w

less task

contracts

but the

ministra

To show

his two only nece

sort of s

Elgin, as second a

which M

two of steamers,

Still our daunted;

altogether

being so c

sion was p terminatio

details of

Smith was the Nethe

which at o

revenue fr

was fourte

arrangeme

cluded sor

arrangeme

were carrie

tical result

mail subsid

subsidy to the Canadian line of ocean steamers. In connection with the Atlantic mail arrangements, Mr. Smith covered himself with laurels. He succeeded in forming arrangements with the United States, France, Prussia, and Belgium, for the conrevence of mail matter across the Atlantic in the Canadian steamers, and through Canada on the Grand Trunk Railway. By this he accomplished more for the benefit of (anada, than had any of his predecessors in office. He proved himself one of the best, if indeed not the best, Postmaster-General Canada has possessed, and one of the most able and efficient members of the government of the day. This is no fiction, as the beneficial results of his administration of the postal service go to prove. duty Mr. Smith undertook, in proceeding to Europe, was not as an interested party in the Canadian steamers, but as a responsible minister, determined, as far as possible, to make his own department self-sustaining. Succeeding to the position of Postmaster-General, with a large balance against his department in the annual accounts, with little prospect of improving receipts in the inland revenue, he determined to make the best of what appeared, in a measure, a hopeless task. By curtailing the cost of home contracts, a considerable saving was effected; but the crowning act of Mr. Smith's administration was the ocean postal service. To show what he had to contend against in his two separate missions to Europe, it is only necessary to allude, first, to the freezing sort of sympathy he received from Lord Elgin, as English postmaster-general. The second and most painful discouragement which Mr. Smith met was in the loss of two of the best of the Canadian ocean steamers, within a few months of each other. Still our Canadian delegate was not to be daunted; he knew that Lord Elgin was not altogether omnipotent, and was far from being so considered in England. The mission was prosecuted with zeal, and with determination such as had no parallel. The details of his scheme of ocean service, Mr. Smith was enabled to present to Prussia, the Netherlands, and France, in a light which at once commended approval. The revenue from the first Canadian ocean mail was fourteen shillings. After Mr. Smith's arrangement, in 1859, the mail freight included some forty bags, and by the later arrangements upwards of one hundred bags were carried by a single steamer. The practical result of this was that, while the ocean mail subsidy in 1860 was nominally increased

ing In

ing

rcy

a

his

ter

ta-

Ir.

tu-

ras

ds

he

gh

from £50,000 a year to £104,000, there was no actual increase of expenditure involved. Mr. Smith's arrangements, in other words, brought for the first year of their operation upwards of $200,000 into the exchequer. If to this we add that the annual balance of £40,000, which appeared against the post office when Mr. Smith assumed the reins, had disappeared, enough is said to show with what singular ability and success the postal interests of the country were administered in his hands. In 1860 Mr. Smith settled that much-vexed question-the abolition of Sabbath labour in the post offices in Upper Canada. In the general election of 1861, Mr. Smith was defeated in West Northumberland, but he was shortly after elected to the Upper House for the important division of Trent. In 1863 he resigned his seat in the Legislative Council, and contested Victoria for the House of Assembly, but was defeated. He now returned to the practice of his profession at Peterboro' where his wonted success at the bar waited upon him. During the progress of the election in 1874, for West Northumberland, in which he was a candidate for the House of Commons, Mr. Smith advocated advanced views in the matter of the franchise, pronouncing in favour of manhood suffrage, reciprocity of tariffs with the United States, representation of minorities, protection to Canadian industries, etc. On the 24th of November, 1866, he was appointed inspector of registry offices for Upper Canada, being re-appointed to that office for the province of Ontario at Confederation, which position he still holds. In this capacity he has perfected the registry system of the province, to the entire satisfaction and to the admiration of every one concerned. Of late years Mr. Smith has lived in comparative retirement, yet it is not improbable that the voice of one who has so well proved his many qualifications for public life will be again heard in Parliament, Mr. Smith not having more than reached the age of ripened intellect and experience. During the visit of the Prince of Wales to Canada in 1860, while the royal party were staying at Cobourg, His Royal Highness and suite were the guests of Mr. Smith, at his residence on the shores of Lake Ontario, between Port Hope and Cobourg. On the occasion of an excursion on board the steamer Ploughboy, in 1859, in which the leader of the Government for Upper Canada, the Hon. (now Sir John A.) Macdonald and his colleagues, together with a party of friends, participated, the steamer having become disabled by an accident to the steering apparatus, during a heavy wind storm on the lake, which caused great consternation among the excurtionists, and nearly resulted in the loss of the entire party. In connection with this incident a piece of plate in Mr. Smith's possession tells this story:—" Presented to Hon. Sidney Smith, Postmaster-General of Canada, in commemoration of his fearless behaviour and effective services, the admiration of all on board, in saving the steamer Ploughboy from wreck on the dangerous shores of Lake Huron, on the tempestuous night of Saturday, July 2nd, 1859—by one of the passengers." In 1844 Mr. Smith married Miss Bennett, of Cobourg, by whom he had several children, his eldest son, H. H. Smith, being commissioner of Dominion Lands, and chairman of the Land Board, at Winnipeg; another son, Sidney Smith, jr., being a chief clerk in the Post Office department at Ottawa.

McCraken, Thomas, Toronto, was born in Bonaventure, Quebec, in 1835. His parents were James McCraken and Mary Mc-He came to this country in 1819, Craken. settling in Bonaventure, Quebec, and adopted the business of lumbering and ship-build-He was one of the largest and most extensive dealers and merchants in Quebec. At the time of the administration of Lord Gossford, as governor-general of Lower Canada, Mr. McCraken represented the County of Bonaventure in the parliament of that time, and it may be mentioned that, in order to attend to his parliamentary duties, he had to walk the distance of four hundred miles on snow shoes. At the time of the Mackenzie rebellion he raised a company of volunteers. In 1844, he removed to Ottawa, and was one of the pioneers in the lumber trade on the Ottawa river. He died in 1862, leaving five sons and two daugh-Mrs. McCraken is still alive, and residing in Toronto. Mr. McCraken, the subject of this sketch, was educated at the private school of Mr. Wilkie, of Quebec, and finished his education in the Grammar School at Ottawa, then called Bytown, of which the present Judge Ross, of Ottawa, was principal. After leaving school, in 1850, he entered the employ of the large lumber firm of George E. Hall, of Quebec, on the Gatineau river. He afterwards went to Three Rivers, in the employ of Wm. Price & Co., of Quebec. In 1854, he left the lumber business and began banking in the Gore Bank, Hamilton, Upper Canada. In this institution he remained until 1869, when he entered the employ of the Royal Canadian

Bank, and became general manager of the same in September, 1879. This position he continued to hold until 1876, but a short time afterwards resumed his former occupation in the lumber business, in Toronto, and in this business he still continues. He holds the rank of adjutant in No. 2 troop, Wentworth cavalry, which troop had the honour of forming the escort to His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, on his visit to Hamilton in 1860. Mr. McCraken is a director of the Land Security Company, formerly the Toronto House Building Association. He belongs to the Freemason order, and has held the office of assistant grand secretary of the Grand Lodge of Canada. In religion he is a Presbyterian, and has been trustee and treasurer in Knox Church, Toronto, for some years. In politics he is an independ-He was married, in 1862, to Helen Crawford, of Hamilton, and has a family of four children, three being alive. in the Gore Bank, and before leaving their employ, Mr. McCraken was offered the position of cashier in that institution, which he declined, owing to his accepting a position in the Royal Canadian Bank, Mr. Mc-Craken acted as manager for the Gore Bank in London for some two years, and at the time of leaving Hamilton for London, to take the management of the branch there. he received an address from the citizens, and a testimonial from the Masonic bodies to which he belonged. On leaving London, he was also presented with a handsome illuminated address by the citizens, and also was presented with a most handsome testimonial from a number of his friends, at the time of the amalgamation of the Royal Canadian and City banks. The presentation was made, on behalf of the donors, by the late Honourable George Brown.

b H or es an H da

lar

Fi

po:

on

the

Was

plyo Mar

Fre

Bay Sult

1756

man

Rive

at th

Was

At te

well:

speal

of th

eveni

ings :

Fiddes, Alexander, Toronto, was born in Scotland, in the village of Aberlady, Haddingtonshire, in the year 1840. His parents were James Fiddes and Joan Thompson, daughter of David Thompson, a sea captain in the merchant service. Mr. Fiddes. sen., was a son of James Fiddes, an officer in the army. At an early age he went to sea, and followed the life of sailor until he was thirty years of age, when he returned home, married, and settled down in Aberlady, and afterwards entered the service of the Earl of Wemyss, where he remained until his death, which occurred in 1884. He left a widow who is still alive. Mr. Fiddes had ten children, five boys and five girls, Alexander, being the fourth child. Alexander Fiddes received a common school eduer of the cation, and after leaving school at the age of thirteen, went to sea in the merchant service, osition he t a short but soon after he abandoned sea life, and r occupawent to Edinburgh, and began to learn the trade of plumbing. He remained here in onto, and He holds the employ of Hay & Addis for five years, p, Wentwhen the firm closed business. He then enhonour listed into the Haddingtonshire Artillery, Highness He then and served his full five years. left the army, and went to Glasgow, where Hamildirector he finished his trade in the shop of one After a time he went to formerly John Lockhart. belfast, and remained there for a year, sociation. , and has working at his trade. He then went to secretary Liverpool, where he remained for some six religion He afterwards went to Manchestrustee ter, and different cities in Great Britain, and onto for in 1862 returned to Ireland. He settled in ndepend-Belfast, where he remained for some time. to Helen After which he removed to Greenock, Scota family land, where he remained for twelve months, While then he once more returned to Belfast, and ng their from thence, in 1873, sailed for America, l the polanding in Toronto. Mr. Fiddes did not stay long in Toronto, but went on to Brantford, n, which position Ir. Mewhere he found employment in the workshops of the Grand Trunk Railway. Some re Bank time after this he returned to Toronto, and d at the worked with John Ritchie & Son, as plumdon, to ber: In 1881, he formed a partnership with Henry Hogarth, and this firm now carries h there, ens, and on successfully a plumbing and gasfitting dies to establishment. In religion, Mr. Fiddes is an independent, and in politics, a Reformer. London, some ii-He was married, in 1862, to Elizabeth Boyd, nd also daughter of Henry Boyd, of Belfast, Iree testiland, and by this lady he has had seven of , at the a family. yal Cantation by the Sulte, Benjamin, Ottawa, President First Section Royal Society of Canada, was born at Three Rivers, Province of Quebec, He is on the 17th of September, 1841. the only living son of Benjamin Sulte, who was owner and captain of a schooner which plyed between Quebec and Halifax, and Marie Lefebvre, whose ancestor was the first French settler at Baie du Febvre (Lefebvre's Bay, Lake St. Peter), in 1683. The first Bay, Lake St. Peter), in 1683. The first Sulte (Jean) came to Canada as a soldier, in 1756, in one of the regiments under the command of Montcalm. He settled in Three Rivers. Young Sulte left the Friars' school at the age of ten, and since that day he never was one week at a time without a salary. At ten he could read, write and calculate well; and by his connection with English speaking boys, he had a good knowledge of their language. He always devoted his evening hours to reading, and his readings are as a rule systematically chosen,

o, was perlady.

). His Chomp-

a sea

Fiddes.

officer

rent to

ntil he turned

Aber-

vice of

nained

4. He Fiddes

girls,

Alex-

but history has his preference. He does everything very quickly, because he never takes up work without first having carefully prepared the material for it, and he frames a plan of action for every detail. There, then, can be no delay, no misunderstanding, no remodelling of the work. At first he was a clerk in a dry goods establishment, then in a grocery store. He then became a book keeper with G. A. Gouin & Co., a large lumbering firm. He subsequently became purser on board one of the vessels plying between Montreal and Three Rivers; then we find him a merchant, selling clothing in connection with the building of the Three Rivers and Arthabaska Railway; then, again, as book-keeper at Gouin's. This brings us down to 1864. As he had made some name for himself in 1859, by writing in the newspapers, he was considered in 1864 as a future newspaper editor, i. e., a politician, but he never had any fancy for politics, and once in stating the fact, he concluded by saying, 'thank God that I never had." So he continued producing literary articles in prose and verse, in a regular Gatling gun shower. In 1863 two companies of infantry were organized at Three Rivers, and M. Sulte joined one of them; and in 1865 his company (No. 1), was sent to the Niagara frontier, and he was made color-sergeant of it. On his return in July, he went to the military school, Quebec; then followed, as an editor, the autumn session of Parliament, and in February next (1866), joined his company again at the Missisquoi frontier. In July, when the men returned home, he was called to Ottawa by L. N. Duvernay, proprietor of Le Canada, and he became the chief editor, as the Honourable E. Gérin was leaving for a tour in Europe. In those days a French paper in Ottawa was a large undertaking, because there was the whole valley of the Ottawa to attend to, whilst at present, Montreal, and even Quebec furnish reading matter in abundance, and hourly to the French population of that large region. the 19th of November, 1867, M. Sulte entered the service of the House of Commons. as one of its translators; and on the 19th of May, 1870, he was removed from the House of Commons to the Department of Militia and Defence, where he is now employed. He is a staunch Roman catholic. The societies in which he took an active part are as follow:-From 1861-65, president Cercle Littéraire, Three Rivers : 1866, member (corresponding) of the Cercle Artistique and Littéraire, of Bruxelles, Belgium; 1866, secretary Société St. Jean Baptiste, Ottawa;

1874-76, president Institut Canadien-Francais, Ottawa. In 1875-76, the building at present occupied by that institution was erected at a cost of $23,000. In 1875, M. Sulte became a member of the Literary and Historical Society, Quebec; in 1876, a member (corresponding) Société Normande de Géographie, Rouen, France; in 1877, president of St. Joseph section Société St. Jean Baptiste, Ottawa, and also president of St. Thomas Benevolent Society, Ottawa; in 1878, a member of the Société Historique de Monttreal, and State Historical Society of Wisconsin; in 1879, a corresponding delegate l'Institution Ethnographique de France; in 1882, a member of the Royal Society of Canada; in 1883, president-general St. Jean Baptiste of Ottawa; and in 1885, he was made president of the first section of the Royal Society of Canada. In the year 1878 he visited the New England states, and delivered lectures in the French Canadian centres. Although he is a Conservative, since 1867 he has taken no part in political affairs. the 3rd of May, 1871, he was married in Ottawa, to Augustine, youngest daughter of Ettienne Parent, Under-Secretary of State. With reference to his wife's sisters, we may state that Josephine, the eldest, married Antoine Gérin-Lajoie, one of the best French-Canadian writers; and that the second, Mathilde, married Évariste Gélinas, a brilliant journalist and a capital essayist. M. Parent was looked upon as the best newspaper editor that ever conducted a campaign in French Canada. Ettienne Henri Parent, M. Sulte's brother-in-law, is the chief engineer of the St. Lawrence canals, from Lake Ontario downwards. He studied in Paris. Our subject, as his friends say, is rather full of fire; ready to laugh, ready to fight. He never had a headache, and he has a voice which can fill any hall. His father was drowned 15th Nov., 1847, in the wreck of his vessel on the Gaspé coast. His mother is eighty, is in good health, no grey hairs yet. The first efforts of M. Sulte in the field of literature, were verses published in 1859-60, under various noms de plume. Soon after, in 1861, he signed his own name, and at once attracted the attention of those whose taste made them attentive to the revelation of coming men. The Honourable P. J. O. Chauveau, secured his productions for Le Journal de l'Instruction Publique, where he gave many good songs and patriotic verses. In 1864, was founded in Montreal La Revue Canadienne, and M. Sulte immediately became one of the most regular collaborators of that publication; and he is now the only one of the old stock on the list. There he printed in 1868 his first article on the question of the destruction of our forests, a subject which at once made him known as a deep observer of the resources of Canada, and a strong prose writer. In 1870, appeared Les Laurentiennes, a very elegant volume. containing all the national and patriotic verses of M. Sulte. In the same year was published the first part of the "History of Three Rivers," his native city. The luxur. ious style of publication adopted by the author frightened the public, and the subscription was meagre, but M. Sulte only answered: "Wait, and you will pay five times the same amount of money for the same work in a few years." We are told he is sure of that result now. In 1873, was distributed in Europe a pamphlet, entitled Le Canada en Europe, a very sharp criticism by M. Sulte, of the nonsense published in Europe about Canada. Several pamphlets appeared afterwards from his pen, such as "The History of the French-Canadians in Ottawa," and "Notes on Early Travels in the North-West Territories." In 1876, he published Les Chant's Nouveaux, a continuation of Les Laurentiennes. A good volume is the one published in 1876, under the title of Mélanges d'Histoire et de Littérature, the whole is relative to Canada. Another book called Chronique Trifluvienne was printed in 1879, telling about the events which took place in Three Rivers, between the years We have heard this work 1640 and 1665. highly praised. In 1881, he published a large album, of unknown plans and sketches relating to the 17th century on the St. Lawrence. The first volume of Histoire des Canadiens-Français was published in 1882, and the 8th and last one in the spring of 1885. It covers the whole history of Canada, but deals principally with the settlers, and very little with other matters pertaining to the history of that country. Other works of M. Sulte, such as large indexes to series of historical documents, have been put in circulation. We hear he is now preparing three volumes of his articles spread, since 1860, in various reviews, both in Canada, United States and France.

n J le in th

m: In

in ob

ca

oli

in

no

Gu

it.

izit

tha

pre bro

for

Tor

req

the

com

õth

ette

1860 offic

fairl

unte

the

for 1

war

iden

Denison, Lt.-Col. George Taylor, of Bellevue, Toronto, was born at Dovercourt, Harwich, England, 27th December, 1783. He was one of the earliest inhabitants of Toronto. His father, Captain John Denison, left England to settle in Canada in 1792, and after living four years in Kingston, came to Toronto in 1796. Lt.-Col. Denison served in the war of 1812 as an officer in the York Volunteers. In 1822 he organized the volunteer cavalry troop now known as the Governor-General's Body Guard. He maintained this corps at considerable expense from 1822 till 1837, when he commanded it during the rebellion. He was appointed to the command of the West York Militia in 1838. His eldest son, the late Lt.-Col. Richard L. Denison, commanding the cavalry troop in the second rebellion of 1838. He was a member of the first council for the City of Toronto, and for many years represented St. Patrick's ward in it. He died in 1853. His first wife, Esther Borden Lippincott, was the only child of Captain Richard Lippincott, a provincial U. E. loyalist officer, from New Jersey, who left the United States after the conclusion of the war of the revolution, and after a stay of some years in New Brunswick, settled near Toronto, in the township of York.

iere he

ques-

a suh-

n as a anada.

ppear-

olume.

triotic

ar was

ory of

luxur-

by the e sub-

lv an-

times

same

s sure

buted

anado

y M.

urope

eared

"The

Otta-

n the

pub-

ation

is the

tle of

the

book

ed in

took

years

work

large

relat-

ence.

iens-

e 8th

vers

prin-

with

y of

alte.

rical

ion.

mes

ious

and

or,

ver-

þer,

ohn

Denison, Colonel George Taylor, of Rusholme, Toronto, the second son of this name, was born at Bellevue, Toronto, 17th July, 1816. He was educated at U. C. College, studied law, and was called to the bar in 1840. Although a lawyer by profession, the energies of his life were devoted to the volunteer service. In 1837 he served at the battle of Gallow's Hill, and the winter march to Scotland village, Canada West. In the siege of Navy Island he took a prominent part, and was one of the officers who obtained the information which led to the capture and destruction of the steamer Caroline. In 1838 he was appointed lieutenant in the cavalry troop raised by his father, now called the Governor-General's Body Guard, and in 1846, obtained command of it. In 1855 he took an active part in organizing the militia under the new law passed that year, which was the foundation of the present military system of Canada. brought a squadron of cavalry into the new force, and shortly afterwards organized the Toronto Field Battery, and in 1860 at the request of Sir Edmund Head, he organized the Queen's Own Rifles, and was appointed commandant of the volunteer force of the 5th and 10th militia districts. He was gazetted to the rank of full colonel in October, 1860, and from that time he was the senior officer in the province of Ontario. He may fairly be considered the founder of the volunteer force in Toronto, having organized the cavalry, artillery, and rifles. He was for many years an alderman for St. Patrick's ward in the City of Toronto, was vice-president of the York Pioneers, and for a long time a member of the Synod of the Church of England. He died on the 30th of May, 1873.

Denison, Lieutenant - Colonel George Taylor, of Heydon Villa, To-To those who think of the law of heredity, there is probably in Canada no more noticeable instance of its continuity, than the subject of the following sketch. "The child is father of the man," as Wordsworth says, but the child is the son of its father as well, and the leanings and temperament stored up in a family seem, with occasional lapses and variations, to be as surely transmitted from father to son, as the lineaments of form and face. of heredity is, perhaps, more undeviating in families of military disposition than in any The organizing faculties, the instinct of obedience and of command, and the toughness and endurance inseparably associated with the military character, are not less likely to be transmitted than more irregular and impressionable qualities. Genius, it is said, is not hereditary; and, limiting this term strictly to the creative mind, in the ideal world of poetry and art, the saying is a correct one. But, in the wider acceptation of the term, it applies to special ability in other spheres of mental activity, and, in this sense, its appearance may reasonably be looked for in a family distinguished for generations by a particular That it is possessed by the subject of our sketch, will not be denied by any Canadian who is proud of his country's advancement, and of the intellectual achievements of its sons. Hitherto Canada has furnished but few opportunities for the exercise of military ability—a happy circumstance, in the opinion of those who look upon war as an unmixed evil, and to be avoided even at the cost of national dishonour. But history proves that wars are often unavoidable, unless at the cost of national existence. Aggrandizement and injustice are not yet eliminated from the polity of nations, nor ambition, sedition, and wild-justice from the thoughts of individuals, and wars will not likely cease until human nature casts out its faults. have said, Canada has, until recently, been a restricted military arena, and it is surprising that, under depressing conditions, her military spirit has been kept alive. But she is now the conscious mistress of half a continent, with enlarged interests, and a weighty future, wherein may arise more than one struggle for existence. The Dominion has been rudely awakened to a knowledge of the fact that, like other countries, she must sustain her national reputation by force, and be prepared to cope with dangers from within as well as from with-The late momentous rebellion in the North-west has dispelled the indifference with which many Canadians looked upon their citizen-soldiers; and it is now seen how much the Dominion owes to men who, in the face of apathy, and even ridicule, kept alive, often at their own expense, that volunteer organization which saved the Dominion in its hour of peril. The Canadian volunteer, wedded, as a rule, to civil employment, cannot be expected to make an extensive study of military science, or con-The subtribute largely to its literature. ject of this sketch, however, has, in a remarkable manner, exemplified what may be accomplished by a native Canadian of genuine talents and industry, and has proved that the man who can rightly apply them may successfully compete with experienced officers in the old world, and win a prominent place as a military writer in European re-Lieutenant-Colonel George Taylor Denison was born at Bellevue, Toronto, on the 31st of August, 1839, and is the eldest son of the late Colonel George T. Denison, of Rusholme, in the same city. His great grandfather, Captain John Denison, of the 2nd West York Regiment, England, came to Canada in 1792, and settled in Toronto in 1796. On the mother's side, Lieut.-Colonel Denison is of U. E. loyalist descent. great grandfather, Captain Richard Lippincott, of New Jersey, was a prominent upholder of the British interest. Lieutenant-Colonel Denison was educated at Upper Canada College, and is an LL.B. of the University of Toronto. He was gazetted to the active militia in 1855 as cornet, was made a major in 1862, and was promoted to the lieutenant-colonelcy of the Governor-General's Body Guard in 1866, which rank and command he still holds. In 1861, he was called to the bar, and on the 20th January, 1863, married Caroline Macklem, daughter of the late Oliver T. Macklem, of Chippewa, She died on the 26th February, Ontario. Lieutenant-Colonel Denison served in the City Council, as alderman for St. Patrick's ward, during the years 1865-66-67. In 1866, he served during the Fenian raid, and commanded the outposts on the Niagara river, in the fall of that year, under Colonel Wolseley. In 1872, and again in the following year, he was sent to England as special commissioner, to represent the Ontario government in emigration matters. ln 1872, he contested Algoma for the House of Commons, but was defeated by the Hon. J. B. Robinson. In 1877, he was appointed police magistrate for the City of Toronto, and in 1885 he served in the North-west rebellion. His literary works are as follow: 1. "Man-ual of Outpost Duties," published in Toronto 2. "History of the Fenian Raid," 1866. 3. "Modern Cavalry," Toronto, 1866. 3. "A London, England, 1868. This work, translated into German, was published at Mun-It was also translated into ich in 1869. Russian, and published at St. Petersburg, in 1872, by order of the present Czar. It was also translated into Hungarian, and published at Buda-Pesth in 1880. 1874, the Emperor of Russia offered prizes for the best "History of Cavalry." Lieutenant-Colonel Denison competed, and was awarded the first prize of five thousand rou. He visited St. Petersburg on this occasion, and was presented to the Emperor and Empress of Russia. This work, like the former, has been translated into Russian, This is a work of German, and Hungarian. great value, and is a standard authority on its subject in Europe. He received for it from Lord Dufferin a bronze medal, (honoris causa). In 1882, Lieutenant-Colonel Denison was appointed an original member of the English literature section of the Royal Society of Canada, and, during his absence in the North-west, in 1885, was elected president of the section. Lieutenant-Colonel Denison was a Conservative in politics until the Red River rebellion, in 1870, when, dissatisfied with the conduct of the government in their treatment of Riel, and their apathy in reference to the punishment of the murderers of Thomas Scott, he opposed them, and contested Algoma in the Reform interest in 1872.

a 11 This is to be but the

m

M

fro

en

in

fro

par Go

he of

Ger

ord

ical

St.

yea

was

He

Ma

0li

on :

Bra

Apr

Mar

len Yor

and

sum

repe

Can

of th

(Nor

Denison, Lt.-Colonel Frederick Charles, C.M.G., is the second son of the late Colonel George Taylor Denison, of Rusholme, Toronto. He was born 22nd Nov., 1846; was educated at Upper Canada College; studied law, and was called to the bar in 1870. He served in the administrative battalion at Niagara for some months in 1865, as lieutenant, and, on the 20th August, of the same year, was gazetted cornet in the Governor-General's Body Guard, in which capacity he served during the Fenian raid of 1866, on the Niagara frontier. He was gazetted lieutenant on the 6th December, 1867, and served as orderly officer to Lord Wolseley, on the Red River expedition of 1870, and was mentioned in He was appointed captain in despatches.

1872, major in 1876, and lieutenant-colonel in 1884. On August 26th, 1884, Lord Wolseley telegraphed to the Governor-General to organize and send to Egypt a force of Canadian voyageurs, to aid him in the camnaign in the Soudan for the relief of General fordon, and suggested that the command should be given to his former orderly officer, who had acquired considerable experience in river navigation in the Red River expedition of 1870. Lord Lansdowne telegraphed the offer to Colonel Denison, it was accepted, and Colonel Denison at once set about the task, and on the 15th September, 1884, the contingent sailed from Quebec. The valuable service rendered by the Canadian boatmen was acknowledged on all hands. Colonel Denison accompanied General Earle's column, and took part in the battle of Kirbekan. He was mentioned in despatches by Lord Wolseley, and also by Lord Hartington, who moved the vote of thanks to the troops in the House of Commons. For his services in this campaign, he was made a Companion of the Order of St. Michael and St. George. On his return from the Soudan, he was attacked with enteric fever, and was detained a long time in hospital at Cairo. This prevented him from returning to Canada in time to take part in the North-west campaign with the Governor-General's Body Guard, of which he is the second officer. He is the author of the "Historical Record of the Governor-General's Body Guard," with its standing orders, and is a Fellow of the Royal Historical Society of England. He represented St. Stephen's ward, as alderman, for the years 1878-79-80-81-83-84, and for two years was chairman of the executive committee. He is a Conservative. He married Julia Macklem, second daughter of the late Oliver T. Macklem, of Chippewa, Ontario, on 22nd April, 1874.

of Com-

d police

and in

bellion.

" Man-

Coronto

Raid,"

valry," tran-

Mun-

d into

rsburg,

ar. It

, and

prizes

Lieu-

d was

d rou-

n this

aperor

ke the

ssian,

ork of ty on

for it

onoris

Den-

er oi

Royal

sence

ected

lonel

until

, dis-

vern-

their

nt of

osed

form

ick

the

i, of 2nd

ada

the

tra-

 $_{
m nths}$

l()th

cor-

rd,

Fe-

ier.

De-

in

In

J. B.

Brook, Joseph, Simcoe, was born in Bradford, Yorkshire, England, on the 16th April, 1842. His parents were Richard and Martha Coates. Richard Brook was a woollen manufacturer in the village of Putsey, Yorkshire. In 1847 he set out for America, and settled in New York state, where he resumed his old manufacturing business. After repeated removals from place to place in the U. States, he decided to try his fortune in Canada. In 1862, he was appointed manager of the weaving department of the Port Dover, (Norfolk county), woollen mills. He remained at Port Dover three years, and then proceeded to Simcoe. Here he commenced business for himself, taking into partnership his son, Joseph, the subject of this The firm was known as R. memoir. Brook & Son, and went largely into the manufacture of cloths, flannels, tweeds, yarns, etc. Mr. Brook, senior, died in 1872, and the business was continued by the sons. Mrs. Brook is still living. Joseph Brook was educated in the State of New York. When he reached his twelfth year, he entered the employ of a woollen manufacturer, and he acquainted himself with the business, and here remained until 1864. He then came to Canada, and joined his father in business. In 1883, he erected a mill for the manufacture of worsted yarns, and formed a joint stock company, with a capital of $30,000. Mr. Brook was appointed manager of the enterprise, and holds the position up to the present time. When the mill had been erected, this enterprising company at once ordered machinery from England, and commenced the manufacture of all kinds of woollen goods; and, from the first day that the wheels began to revolve, it has carried on a very successful business. The products of the establishment go to every part of Canada, and the quality of the goods is a credit to our young country. The company employs fifty hands the year round. Mr. Brook's own mills, already referred to, carry on a large and profitable trade; but, of course, its relations are of a local nature. Mr. Brook is a Freemason, being junior warden of Norfolk Lodge, No. 10, A. F. & A. M., and is likewise a member of the Ancient Order of United Work-He is a Methodist, and a Liberal-Conservative. Mr. Brook married, in 1864, Selina, daughter of Amos and Elizabeth Barber, of the City of Auburn, New York Mr. Barber came to Canada about five years ago, and established woollen mills at Port Elgin, Ontario, where he now carries on operations, his firm being known as A. Barber & Sons.

Verral, George W., Alderman, Toronto, was born on the 5th March, 1829, in Seaford, Sussex, England. Being of a delicate constitution, he was not sent to school until he was about twelve years of age, and then he entered a private boarding school in the town of Lewis, the principal being Mr. Button, and at the school he remained for about two years, and received a fair common school education. After leaving school he paid a short visit home, and at the age of fourteen, he sailed for Canada, and landed in Toronto in 1842. On his arrival, Mr. Verral, who had been reared in comfort, was obliged to begin at gardening in summer, and to drive a team in winter. After remaining at this business for some time he went to the village of Weston, in 1845, and worked on a farm for Mr. Downey, for the purpose of learning the system of farming in Canada. He remained for about one and a half years, and, in 1847, returned to Toronto. Having now a great desire to deal in horses, he took charge as manager of some of the principal stables in Toronto, and for some time continued at this business. He then entered the employ of the Grand Trunk contractors' surveyors, and remained with them for five years. Once again the desire for horse-dealing grew upon him, and about the year 1855, he bought a cab and appurtenances, and established himself in the cab and livery business. From that date he has continued in this business, and has at the present time one of the largest coupé, cab and livery establishments in the City of Toronto. In 1884, Mr. Verral was elected alderman for St. George's ward, and in 1885 was re-elected by acclamation. He has been a member of St. George's Society for some years. About the year 1865 he returned to the old country on a pleasure trip, taking with him one of his children, George W. Verral, who remained in England for about nine years, and coming back in 1874, he concluded his studies at the Commercial College, Toronto. Again, in 1882, Mr. Verral crossed the ocean, and visited points of interest in England and Scotland. In religion he is a member of the church of Eng-In politics he is a Reformer. He married, in 1855, Ann Farley, of Toronto, by whom he has had eight children. The eldest is George W. Verral, who now assists in the management of the business with his father. In 1884 Mr. Verral opened another stable on Queen street east, Toronto, and has placed his second son, Charles E. Verral, in charge thereof. In public life Mr. Verral is a great favourite, and through his kindly manners, has in social life many friends. His career has always been upward and onward.

Bagot, Sir Charles, Baronet, G.C.B., was born on the 23rd of September, 1781, at Blithfield, in the County of Stafford, where, since a period prior to the Norman conquest, his ancestors had lived. 'He was the second son of William, Lord Bagot, and Louisa, daughter of Viscount St. John, brother and heir of the celebrated Bolingbroke, whom Pope addresses in his opening of the "Essay on Man." He married Lady Mary, daughter of the third Earl of Mornington, brother of the Duke of Wellington, by whom he left three sons and five daughters. Sir Charles entered public life in 1806, as Under-Secretary of State for foreign affairs, at the time when Mr. Channing held the seals of that department in the Duke of Portland's administration. In 1814 he was sent on a special mission to Paris; he was afterwards appointed successiory plempotentiary to the United States, and ambassador to St. Petersburg and the Hague. When Lord Amherst returned from India. he was offered the viceroyship, but ill health forbade his acceptance of the office. In 1811 he was requested by the Earl of Derby (then Lord Stanley), to undertake the governorship of the British North American colonies, which office he accepted. entering on his duties on the 10th of January, 1842. When the Liberals heard that he was coming they put up their hands in dismay. Sir Charles was a tory, and this was the time when responsible government was trembling in the balance; and the tories who thought that if power got into the hands of the people, the country would run into anarchy and ruin, put up their hands in gratitude when he landed; but Sir Charles was not a weak man like Sir Francis Bond Head, who followed those who were nearest to his ear. He set himself to work to ascertain the political condition of the country, and to see if the Liberal party had any grounds for the complaints of evil treatment which they had been so persistently making. And his investigation led him to the belief that they had grounds; therefore, in choosing his advisers, he took into his confidence representatives from the French province who hitherto had been studiously ignored, and reformers from Upper Canada, with the wise and high-minded Robert Baldwin at their head. When the tories saw this they were covered with consternation, and muttered in great trepidation that the Christian had turned Turk. Under his regime Mr. Hincks was inspector-general; Mr. Baldwin, attorney-general west; M. Lafontaine, attorney-general east; M. Morin, commissioner of crown lands, and Mr. Aylwin, solicitorgeneral. Unfortunately, at that time, for Canada, this wise and best of statesmen did not see the end of his full term. In 1843 his health so failed him that he asked to be recalled, and he was succeeded by Sir Charles Metcalfe. Sir Charles Bagot died a few months after his return to England, leaving a name that was unblemished, and one that ought never to be forgotten by any true Canadian.

18 Jo Ci Ci Po bei dei

twe cire dea Bar Por

affa

dec

par 184

for

a te

No.

Octo

miss

vinc

year

abol

1874

scho

years

autu

who

Powe and a

Power, Patrick, late of Halifax, was corn at Kilmacthomas, in the County of Waterford, Ireland, on the 17th March. 1815. He was the eighth child, and second son of Lawrence and Katharine Power of Kilmacthomas, and was the youngest of the family who reached mature age-a sister who was younger than he having died when agirl. He emigrated to Nova Scotia when only eight years of age, being preceded by his father and some of the elder children, while the remainder went from Waterford to Halifax in the same ship with himself. He lived in Halifax with one of his sisters for some years, and went to school. Afterwards, while yet a boy, he went to Antigonish, where his elder brother, David, was settled, and where he pursued his studies somewhat further. His education was of the kind at that time bestowed by ordinary English schools. In or about the year 1832 he went into business in Halifax, as a merchant, in company with a brother-in-law, named Ring. The co-partnership did not last very long, and Mr. Power, after its dissolution, went into business for himself. In October, 1840, he married Ellen, the eldest child of John and Katharine Gaul, a native of the City of Waterford, whose parents had emigrated while she was still an infant. Mr. Power carried on an extensive business as a merchant from a period, some three years before his marriage, up to the date of his death. For some years the struggle against difficulties was severe, but the obstacles were surmounted; and during the last twenty years of his life, he was in easy circumstances. For some years before his death he was a director of the People's Bank of Halifax. At an early age Mr. Power began to take an interest in public affairs, and even before his marriage was a decided and active member of the Liberal party, at that time led by Hon. Mr. Howe. In 1848 he was appointed a justice of the peace for the County of Halifax. He also served a term of three years as alderman for Ward No. 1 of the City, his term beginning on October 1st, 1851. He was appointed a commissioner of the Poor Asylum and Provincial and City Hospital, in or about the year 1857, and continued to serve until the abolition of the Board of Commissioners in 1874. He served as a commissioner of schools for the City of Halifax for several years, and upon his resignation, in the autumn of 1869, was succeeded by his son, who occupied the position for ten years. Mr. Power was for very many years a prominent and active member of the Charitable Irish e daugh.

life in foreign

ing held

Duke of

he was

plenipo-

ambas-

Hague.

India.

but ill

e office. Earl of

dertake

North

cepted.

f Janu-

rd that ands in nd this

rnment

e tories

to the

would

their

; but

ke Sir

se who

imself

dition

Liberal

blaints

rvesti-

they

is ad-

resen-

hith-

d rewise

their

were

tered

h had

incks

ttor-

ttor-

ioner

itor-

, for

h did

1843

d to

Sir

died

and.

and

anv

Society of Halifax, in which body he filled at different times various offices, including the presidency. When the difficulties the presidency. occurred, which led to the withdrawal by the Roman catholics of their allegiance from the Liberal leaders, it was with much difficulty that Mr. Power elected to side with the mass of his co-religionists. He saw that there were faults on both sides, and knew that, if harsh things were said and written on the one side, there had been not a little provocation from the other. While he always took a deep interest in politics, he had no wish to occupy any recognized public position, and being constitutionally retiring, and somewhat nervous, shrank from speaking in public, or even appearing on platforms at large gatherings. Owing to his lack of ambition and retiring disposition, and possibly to some extent to a feeling that attention to his legislative duties would be inconsistent with a due regard to the interests of his varied and extensive business, Mr. Power declined a nomination for the County of Halifax, at a time when the nomination was equivalent to an election. He was, however, forced from his voluntary retirement by the agitation that arose in Nova Scotia, upon the publication of the proceedings of the union conference held at Quebec in As most of the prominent politicians in the province favoured the confederation scheme, the opposition to it was of necessity championed by the business Meetings were held, an anti-confederate organization was established, and its members set vigorously to work to defeat what they regarded as a pernicious and unpatriotic scheme. In this organization and agitation, Mr. Power was prominent and active, and took part in some public meet-When the union was an accomplished fact, he hesitated long to yield to the wishes of his co-labourers in the popular cause, and become a candidate for the House of Commons. While he was in this state of indecision, an offer of a seat in the Legislative Council of Nova Scotia was made to him, subject to no condition whatever. Mr. Power might continue to be an anti-confedate, and to work with his old political friends if he chose. But he knew that the object was to remove all possibility of his becoming a candidate at the approaching election, and it was generally understood, that if he were removed from the field, Doctor (now Sir) Charles Tupper would be one of the government candidates for the County of Halifax. At the same time that the seat in the Council, either for himself or his son, 大学のでは、これのできないというないのでは、までいることのないないとなってはないできます。 subject only to the condition that Mr. Power should not become a candidate at the election, was placed at his disposal, an intimation was made from a very influential quarter that a refusal to accept the offer, made on behalf of the government, would be followed by serious consequences to himself and his family. Mr. Power promptly declined the offer, and from that time forward there was no hesitation on his part as to his candidature. In September, 1867, his colleague, Mr. Jones, afterwards minister of militia, and he were, notwithstanding very extraordinary measures taken to secure their defeat, elected by a handsome majority over the government candidates for the representation of the County of Halifax in the House of Commons. After the overwhelming defeat of the unionist party at the general election of September, 1867, a convention of the victorious candidates for the Commons and Local Assembly was held in Halifax. The necessary steps were taken to form a local government, and some consideration was given to the course most desirable to be pursued by the Dominion members elect. Mr. Howe, Mr. Annand and Mr. Jared C. Troop were about proceeding on a delegation to England to make an effort to secure a repeal of the union, the enactment of which the petitions of the people of Nova Scotia had been unable to prevent, and it was suggested that the case of the delegates would be not a little strengthened if the members chosen to the House of Commons refrained from attending the then approaching session of the Dominion Parliament. Only three members were prepared to adopt the course indicated. They were Mr. Carmichael, of Pictou; the late Mr. Chipman, of Kings, and Mr. Power. After the failure of the repeal delegation, Mr. Power allied himself to the Liberal party in the House of Commons, but was never what is known as a thick and thin supporter of his leaders. He always felt that confederation was a bad thing for the Province of Nova Scotia at large, and for the City of Halifax in particular; so that while he gave a general support to the Liberal leaders, it was simply to him a choice of the less of two evils, and his sentiments towards the two great parties of Canada were not unlike those entertained by Mercutio towards the Capulets and Montagues. remarkable instance of his independence was afforded by his conduct with respect to the Washington Treaty. When that measure was before the House of Commons, Mr. Power, feeling convinced that the effect of the treaty upon his own province would be good, did not hesitate to sever himself from his party, and delivered a speech in favour of the adoption of the treaty, which showed a more intimate practical knowledge of its probable working in the Lower Provinces, than any other which was made on that occasion. In 1872 Mr. Power and his col. league, Mr. Jones, were defeated at the gen. eral election, but were again elected in 1874. Mr. Power, who had been delicate from in. fancy upward, had a serious attack of illness in the autumn of 1877, from which he never altogether recovered, and his parliamentary friends noticed, during the session of 1878. that a marked change had taken place in him. The urgent solicitations of his political allies and supporters induced him, much against his will, to become a candidate at the general election of that year; and the minister of militia and he were overwhelmed by the tidal wave which then swept over the Dominion. His own defeat did not cost Mr. Power a pang, as he had lost most of his interest in matters of earth, and turned his thoughts more and more upon spiritual things with each succeeding year. His life after 1878 offers nothing to the chronicler that would possess much interest to the reader. His vital powers gradually failed, and he passed away calmly, and almost without pain, on the 23rd of Febwithout pain, on the 23rd of February, 1881, within three weeks of the close of his sixty-sixth year. By his will, he left the greater portion of his property for religious and charitable purposes in connection with the Roman catholic church, of which he had always been a zealous and active member. When the charitable society of St. Vincent de Paul was established in Halifax, Mr. Power joined it, and continued his membership for the thirty years which intervened between that date and his death. His charity was of the broadest and best kind. His gifts were limited to no place or creed, and were largely of the kind mentioned in Scripture, done in secret. As a consequence of his general mode of life, and of his many gifts for charitable and religious purposes, Mr. Power was, on the 19th of July, 1870, made a Knight of the Order of St. Gregory the Great, by Pope Pius IX. In politics and in business, Mr. Power's course was characterized by caution, acuteness, sound judgment, originality, independence and tenacity of purpose. His moral record was without a blemish; and if in domestic and social life he had any defect, it was that of showing much less than he felt. By his eight

His 6

s me

teen

His s

eldes

ligiou

died:

third

City.

gethe

of M

died a

in Ap

the p

and a

died v

Mr. P

wife o

his thi

is a r

at pres

Jersey

husbar

of com

was bo

on the

of Wil

father

land, a

U. E.

Prince

townsh

of the children

George

upon hi

years of

D. B. St

Prior to tended t

obtained

remaine

the tern

he tang

adjacent linquish

take cha

Son, and

at Picto

several y

a half in late Dav

known as farming i

Curry co

sold out

partner w

Cord

marriage, above-mentioned, Mr. Power had gight children, five sons and three daughters. His eldest child, and only surviving son, is member of the Senate of Canada, having teen called to that body in February, 1877. His second son, John, died in infancy. His eldest daughter, Katharine, became a religious of the order of the Sacred Heart, and died at Manhattanville in April, 1871. His third son, Patrick, was lost in the steamship, (ity of Boston, in the winter of 1870, toether with Mr. Barron, a business partner of Mr. Power's. The fourth son, Edmund, died at St. Mary's Jesuit College, Montreal, in April, 1866, from the effects of a fall on the playground, being then fifteen years and a half old. The youngest son, David, died when about three years and a half old. Mr. Power's second daughter, Mary, is the wife of Judge McIsaac, of Antigonish, and his third daughter and youngest child, Ellen, is a religious of the Sacred Heart, and is at present stationed at Atlantic City, New Mrs. Power, who survived her husband, is still alive and in the enjoyment of comparatively robust health.

ald be

from

avour

owed

of its

nces,

that

col-

gen-

1874,

m in-

lness

iever

htary

878, ce in itical

nuch

e at

the

elm-

over

st of

rned

tual

life

icler

the

led.

nost 'eb-

lose

left

lfor

nec-

of

ac-

ety

ned ind

rty ate

the

ere

ere

re, his fts

Curry, Geo. Calvin, Picton, Ontario, was born in the County of Prince Edward, on the 10th of March, 1825. He is a son of William Curry and Harriet Hill. His father was a native of County Down, Ireland, and his mother was a descendant of a U. E. loyalist family, and belonged to Prince Edward. The family settled in the township of Helliwell, in 1820. The family of the worthy couple numbered eighteen children, ten sons and eight daughters, George being the second child. He remained moon his father's farm until he was fourteen years old, when he was indentured as clerk to D. B. Stevenson, general merchant of Picton. Prior to entering this employ, he had attended the Grammar school at Picton, and obtained a good English education. remained with Mr. Stevenson for five years, the term set in his indentures, after which he taught school for several years in the adjacent townships. Some time after he reinquished the profession of teacher, to take charge of the business of S. Wilson & Son, anufacturers of farming implements, This engagement lasted for several years, and then Mr. Curry purchased a half interest in the works carried on by the ate David Baker, and the firm became known as Baker & Curry, manufacturers of farming implements. In this business Mr. Curry continued for five years, when he sold out his interest in it, and joined as a partner with W. P. Reynolds, in a mercantile business, under the name of Curry & Reynolds, which was carried on with good In 1882, howsuccess for nineteen years. ever, Mr. Curry sold his interest to his partner, and retired from active business. He then accepted the office of police magistrate for the County of Prince Edward, and this position he still holds, discharging his duties with unmistakable ability and general satisfaction. Mr. Curry has held various offices in municipal affairs. In 1873 he was warden of the county, was reeve of the town of Picton for several terms, and councillor for many years. He has been a justice of the peace for nearly forty years. To Mr. Curry is largely due the credit of constructing the town hall and county offices, all of which are a credit to the county, and monuments to the public spirit of its citizens. While in partnership with Mr. Reynolds Mr. Curry engaged in shipbuilding on his own account solely; and he built several schooners which are now engaged in lake traffic, and he still owns an interest in some of them. Mr. Curry has always been a staunch supporter of Reform principles, and is now looked upon as a leader in the ranks of that party. He is an adherent of the Methodist church, which was the church of his fathers. He married on the 14th April, 1857, Catherine Richards, a daughter of John Richards, a farmer of the township of Helliwell, and a descendant of old U.E. loyalist stock. By this lady he has three surviving children, two sons and one daugh-The eldest is in business as a druggist at Gore Bay, Manitoulin Island. The daughter married the Rev. J. M. Hodson, B.A., a minister of the Methodist church of Canada. The youngest son resides with his parents.

Walsh, Michael, Barrister-at-Law, Ingersoll, Ontario, was born in Ingersoll, County of Oxford, on the 25th of November, 1838. His parents were John Walsh and Jane Crotty. They came from Nenagh, Ireland, and settled in Ingersoll in 1832. Young Walsh was educated at the Ingersoll public and grammar schools, and upon completing his educational studies, he entered the law office of James McCaughey, LL.B., in 1861. He pursued his studies here for four years, when he proceeded to Toronto, and entered the office of the Hon. Stephen Richards, where he remained for a year, completing his course. After being admitted to the Bar he was in the office of Mr. Spencer for one year; and then returned to Ingersoll, where he entered into partnership with Mr. McCaughey, under the name of McCaughey & Walsh. This partnership lasted till 1878, since which time he has conducted business in his ownname only. During the Trent difficulty Mr. Walsh was a private in the Ingersoll Infantry Company. He attended the London Military school in 1865, and took a captain's certificate under the 16th Regiment of Foot. - He was summoned to the first encampment of cadets at Laprairie, in September, 1865, for three weeks drill and The camp was composed of inspection. 1,100 military cadets, divided into three battalions; two of these were English and one French-speaking; and these afterwards became the officers of the volunteer force of Ontario and Quebec. We may say that our subject left school in his twenty-fourth year; and in later life he held the position of school trustee for some years. He is a director and also the secretary of the Ingersoll and Thamesford Gravel Road Company, 1869 he joined the Freemasons, in King Hiram Lodge, No. 37, Ingersoll, and became junior warden. In 1884 he became master of the lodge, and this position he still holds. He has visited the old country, spending, in 1875, six weeks in Ireland, and visited the most important points. Walsh is an Episcopalian, and a Liberal-Conservative. He always has taken a zealous part in the cause of his own political party, and has for four years been secretary of the Liberal-Conservative Association of South Oxford. Mr. Walsh, senior, we may add, was a farmer in Canada. Mrs. Walsh came of a prominent old Irish family. Her father, Mr. Crotty, was descended, on the mother's side, from a Spanish family named Antony, who settled in the south of Ireland a couple of centuries before. The late Colonel Crotty was a member of the same family. Miss Crotty married the father of our subject in Canada, and she is still alive, and in the enjoyment of excellent health. During the rebellion of 1837, Mr. Walsh, senior, took an active part on the loyalist side as sergeant in Her Majesty's He is still alive, and enjoys good health, though now verging upon his eight-There was a family of eight ieth year. children, of whom our subject was the eldest.

Wood, John Fisher, M. P., Brockville, was born in the township of Elizabethtown, County of Leeds, Ontario, on the 12th October, 1852. Mr. Wood comes of a good, sturdy Scotch stock upon his father's side, he being John Wood, a railroad contractor, who came from Dundee, Scotland, and settled at Brockville. Mr. Wood, sen., married Ann, daughter of the late Thomas Wadden, of Ballycastle, County of Mayo. Ireland, who was the mother of the subject of our sketch. When a boy Mr. Wood received a careful elementary training, and in due time entered the Farmersville Grammar school, and when he left that institution he had a good English education. Without any delay, the law was chosen for him, and by him. At the Easter term in 1876 he was called to the bar of Ontario, and immediately began the practice of his profession. Mr. Wood's legal business began to grow with great rapidity, and he was soon found to be a capable, and at the same time a reliable lawyer, which satisfied his clients. Although successful in his calling, he has been enabled to devote a good deal of his attention to projects outside of his profession. He is solicitor for the counties of Leeds and Grenville, and solicitor for the Brockville Building and Savings Society. He is likewise vice-president of the Brockville, Westport and Sault St. Marie Railroad, which was subsidized by the Dominion Parliament last session (1885). In 1882, Mr. Wood offered himself for the Dominion Parliament for Brockville, and was elected, and now enjoys a very high place in the respect of the House of Commons, and is frequently pointed to as a coming man. His politics are deep-seated Conservatism.

fro

ton

ron

mai

the

rņp

to a Tur

kno

ada

elde uarj

Mui

Tore

D.C

₩e scho

muc

and

tion

he w symp

of th

whic

all co

resig

Clint

positi

Schoo

ista in

has fo

amon

stitut

receiv

high

due to work,

M

tor, L

tingui in the

in the

Allan,

and bo

and old

ents ar

the th

Turnbull, James, B.A., Clinton, Ontario, was born on the Teviot, a few miles from Kelso, in Roxburghshire, Scotland, on the 15th of May, 1831. His parents William Turnbull and Elizabeth were Cairns. Young Turnbull received his early educational instruction at the parish school in Eckford and the public school of Hawick, respectively. Thence he entered the high school at Woodstock, Ontario. This school was under the mastership of the late Mr. He completed his course at the Strachan. University of Toronto, where he spent four years, taking high honours in classics at matriculation, during his first and second years. He graduated, in 1861, taking away the gold medal for modern languages. With respect to Mr. Turnbull's connection with public offices, we may say that he was for five years first vice-president of the Mechanics' Institute at Clinton, and for the succeeding five and a-half years was president of the same institute. He has frequently been president of the Teachers' Association in his own county; and was for two years a member of the town council. While serving in this body, he was chairman of the by-

Mr. Turnbull has never law committee. n., maraken a prominent part in polities, but he is Thomas athorough-paced Reformer, and in a quiet f Mayo, way has always given his best support to his subject party. His travels have been confined to his very youthful period. When a boy in Vood re-, and in 1840, he left the town of Hawick with his rammar parents, proceeded to the seaport of Annan, ution he and thence to Liverpool. From Liverpool, Without the family went to New York, thence to Alim, and bany by a Hudson river steamboat, and then Rochester. The next year they set out from Rochester, by steamboat for Hamilon, Ontario, touching at Port Hope and Toronto. From Hamilton they proceeded to Woodstock, in which town they abode for many years. Mr. Turnbull was baptised in the old Kirk of Scotland; but when the dismption of 1843 took place, the family began to attend the Free Church of Scotland. Mr. Turnbull is now a member of the body known as the Presbyterian Church in Canada, and he has been for many years an elder in that church. On the 29th of Jannary, 1862, he married Elizabeth Jane Mc-Murray, daughter of Thomas McMurray, Toronto, and niece of William McMurray, D.C.L., at present archdeacon of Niagara. We may say that Mr. Turnbull had taught school in Oxford county for two years, with much success, before entering the university, and having obtained his degree, his inclination again led him to school work, for which he was fitted intellectually as he was by sympathy. In 1862 he became head master of the Caledonian high and public schools, which position he held, with satisfaction to all concerned for nearly six years. He then resigned to accept the headmastership of the Clinton high school (April, 1868), and this position he still holds. The Clinton High School has a staff of four masters, all specialists in their several departments. The school has for many years now taken a high place among the High schools and Collegiate institutes of the province; and has always received a liberal measure of praise from the high school inspectors. This is doubtless due to the fact that our subject loves his work, and is such a finely equipped scholar. McDonald, Hon. William, Sena-

6 he was

immedi-

fession.

ow with id to be reliable

lthough

enabled

ntion to

d Gren-

Build-

ikewise

estport

ich was

ent last

offered

ent for enjoys

House

ed to as

-seated

on, On-

w miles

otland.

parents

izabeth

s early

school

lawick,

e high school

te Mr.

at the

nt four

sics at second

away

With

with

as for echan-

e suc-

sident

ently iation

ears a

serv-

ie by-

He is

tor, Little Glace Bay, Nova Scotia, the distinguished subject of this sketch, was born in the County of Inverness, Nova Scotia, in the year 1837. His father's name was Allan, and his mother's name was Mary, and both were members of the well-known and old historic clan Macdonald. The parents are still living, being reckoned among the thrifty farming class whose industry and intelligence have been the makers of our national importance. The father came from Scotland in 1829; the mother in 1832. Allan McDonald was one of those who truly appreciated the value of a sound education, and predicting, perhaps, somewhat of the future that was open to the subject of our sketch, sent him to the best schools within reach. At first he attended school at Inverness, and subsequently entered the Antigonish college of St. Francois Xavier. school and college he gave evidence of those solid and active intellectual qualities which became manifest when a wide sphere of usefulness lay open to him. At the age of sixteen he received a license to teach school, and continued at this occupation for about two years. It was after this period that he attended college, his object being to acquire the higher branches, including mathematics and classics. After leaving college he again taught for four years; two years in Victoria county, and two years in Lingan, Cape Bre-A man of Mr. McDonald's capacity and ambition would be pretty sure not to be found a very long time engaged in teaching; so at the expiry of the period mentioned he resolved to try his fortune in mercantile life. Accordingly he commenced the transaction of a general commercial business, and very soon saw that he had set out on the proper road. At Little Glace Bay it was that he established himself, and there he has continued to this day, and may be said to have been through all these years a benefactor of the community among which his lot is cast. As might be expected, success waited liberally upon his exertions, and his business connections and importance grew apace from year to year. But he did not, like so many other successful men, bury himself selfishly in his private concerns. He always has exhibited a large share of public spirit, and has many times been found foremost in movements for the public good. He has always been a friend of the temperance cause, and in his time has done a good deal to advance it. In religion he is a highly respected member of the Roman catholic communion. In municipal affairs he always took a hearty interest, and was a member of the General Sessions of the Peace for his county. In 1867 his friends were certain that he would offer himself for the local legislature, but considering that he was too young, he declined, in the meanwhile giving close study to public questions. He was then offered the shrievalty of the county, a position of much importance, as his county was the third largest in the province.

Always looking broadly upon public questions, he was one of the few who, in 1867, supported the movement for the confederation of the provinces. Recognizing his commanding abilities, several influential persons pressed him to offer himself for parliamentary honours; and naturally having an inclination in that way, he yielded to their solicitations, and in 1872 he first entered parlia-He did not pledge himself to any course till he could see for himself; and, therefore, he took his seat in parliament as an independent member. Here he made careful observations and came to the conclusion that, on the whole, the policy of the Liberal-Conservative party was best for the interests of the country; at the same time he felt strongly convinced that the reformers were factional, and favoured Ontario altogether too much against other portions of the Dominion. Pleased with his course in parliament, he was re-elected in 1874, 1878, and 1882; and two years later a vacancy occurring in the Senate, he was called thither, much to the gratification of the many who had watched, approved of, and been edified by, his public course. He held the position of postmaster for a number of years, and was superintendent of telegraph offices for Little Glace Bay. On Feb. 7th, 1865, he married Catharine McDonald, by whom he had seven children, three boys and four girls, the youngest being dead. Mr. Mc-Donald is one of those who is indebted to himself for his fortune and his honours, and may be taken as an example of what may be achieved by perseverance.

Broley, Rev. James, pastor of the Methodist church, Seaforth, Ontario, and financial secretary of the Goderich district of the Guelph conference, was born in the County of Tyrone, Ireland, on the 22nd of August, 1835. His father was James Broley, a descendant of a Huguenot family,-the original name being De Broglie, a name well known in France, and his mother Agnes Lindsey, a lady of Scotch descent. Both parents were born in Ireland. The family, in 1837, emigrated to Canada, and settled in the township of Vaughan, York county, Ont. Here our subject received such educational advantages as the common schools had to offer, and he studied Latin under a private tutor. When he reached his sixteenth year, he received a certificate from the board of public instruction authorizing him to teach public schools in the counties of York, Ontario, Peel, and the City of Toronto. He taught school for five years, and being then twenty-two, was received as a candidate for the Wesleyan Methodist ministry. Attwenty-six, having successfully completed a four years course of study, he was ordained to the work of the ministry, in the town of Brantford, on the 9th of June, 1861, under the presidency of the Rev. Joseph Stinson. D.D. During the same year he was united in marriage to Maria Matthews, of Acton, a young lady of great personal charms and men. tal cultivation. She has ever been an excellent helpmeet for her husband in his work. and her worth has been recognized in all the churches where our subject has been stationed. Some of these stations were Bowmanville, Orangeville, Windsor, Watford. Palmerston and Seaforth. Mr. Broley was for several years local superintendent of shoools in Lambton county; and he has taken an active and very successful part in all the great moral questions of the day. For nineteen years he has been a master mason of A. F. and A. M., and he is likewise an Orangeman. The fruit of the union just referred to is four children. Rev. James Broley is well and favourably known throughout western Ontario as a preacher of more than ordinary ability. His style in the pulpit is argumentative, and his discourses, which are always logical, are invariably presented with an eloquence that commands the greatest attention and admiration. As a pastor, his kindness of heart and brotherly sympathy win for him a place in the affections of all his parishioners. Mr. Broley enjoys the esteem of all classes of the community where he is known. and his manly, stirring appeals on behalf of truth, have made his ministry one of great power and success.

Wright, Joseph, Toronto, the subject of this memoir, was born in the town of Glanford, Lincolnshire, England, in the year 1847. His father was Jacob Wright and his mother Martha, whose maiden name was Quipp. This couple came to America with their family in 1852, landing in Philadelphia, U.S. Here they remained till 1854, when they crossed over to Canada, and settled in Toronto, and here the father of our subject resolved to try his fortune. He engaged himself as a contractor and builder, and has continued in that occupation up to the present time. It is hardly necessary to say here that Mr. Wright, senior, is one of the best-known builders in Toronto, and some of the finest building contracts in that city have fallen into his hands. He had a family of nine children. Joseph Wright, one of the number, is the gentleman of whom we speak in this me establish Cam

ich, M. P in Perth
12th of Highlane

BC.

Cı

tee

the

ple

lea:

187

bus

So:

Dr.

serv the

havi

and

now

cessi

Que

Wrig St. I

in 18

by a 1877,

Heal

comn

to re

of Yo

alway

intere

asm w

He is

man,

fare of official

he ha

brough

church

broade

questic

Reform

Andrev

eral ye cutive (

In 1878

and ver

Commo

that pe

Wright

are mos

and is u

He at first attended the common schools, but concluded his studies at the University of Toronto. When in his seventeenth year, he entered into the employ of the late Dr. Howson, druggist, as an apprentice, and here remained until the completion of his term of apprenticeship. After leaving Dr. Howson, he entered the employ of the late John Hallamore, druggist, and he remained for a period of two years. In 1870, he decided to try his fortune in a business in which he had a personal interest. So we find him joining in a partnership with Dr. Howson, in whose establishment he had served his apprenticeship. After two years, the partnership was dissolved, Mr. Wright having bought out his partner's interest, and assumed the entire control himself. And now we find Mr. Wright carrying on a successful drug business in the shop, corner of Queen and Elizabeth streets. In 1876, Mr. Wright was elected as one of the aldermen for St. Patrick's ward, in the City Council, and in 1877 he was re-elected, heading the poll by a majority of three hundred votes. 1877, he was chairman of the Board of Health, and also acted as chairman of the committee appointed by the City Council to revise the City By-Laws. Mr. Wright is a justice of the peace for the County of York and the city of Toronto. He has always been a zealous worker in the city's interest, and gave his time and his enthusiasm without being moved by selfish motives. He is both a Freemason and an Orangeman, and takes an active interest in the welfare of these bodies. With respect to his official standing therein, it may be said that he has passed all the chairs. He was brought up in the tenets of the Methodist church, but has latterly come to possess broader views upon religious and theological questions. In politics he is an unflinching Reformer, and has been chairman of the St. Andrew's Ward Reform Association for several years. He is also a member of the executive committee of the Reform Association. In 1878, he was looked upon as a probable and very likely candidate for the House of Commons. It might not be too much to say, that perhaps that house may yet see Mr. Wright upon its floor. Mr. Wright's premises are most tastefully and elaborately fitted up, and is undoubtedly one of the best retail establishments in Toronto.

At.

leted a

dained

own of

under

ited in cton, a d men-

excel-

work,

all the n sta-

Bow-

tford.

y was

nt of

e has

part

day.

naster

like-

union

Rev.

nown

acher

le in

dis-

are

ence

and

ss of

him

ishif all

wn.

lf of

reat

ject

of

the

ght

me

tica

till

tinson,

Cameron, Malcolm Colin, Goderich, M.P. for South Huron, Ontario, was born in Perth, County of Lanark, Ont., on the 12th of April, 1831. He is descended from a Highland-Scotch family, and was educated at

Knox College, Toronto, with a view to entering the ministry of the Presbyterian church. After some time, however, his mind underwent a change, and he felt that his vocation lay in another direction. He, therefore, began to read law in the office of Judge Deacon, of Renfrew; and was called to the bar of Upper Canada in 1860, at Easter. Term. He at once began the practice of his profession, entering into it with zeal, and a determination to take a foremost place at the bar. How much he was justified in his resolution, has since been proven by his brilliant legal achievement. In 1876 he was invested with the silken gown of counsellor, and he is now senior member of the widely-known firm of Camerom, Holt & Cameron, of Goderich. In 1856 our subject began his political career as councillor for the town of Goderich. - For twelve years he remained a member of the civic board; and was for one year reeve, and for four years mayor. He took a leading part in the establishment of the extensive and profitable salt works in the County of Huron; and as always been foremost in any notable enterprise which has for its object the development of the industries of his section of Canada. Towards the establishment of the free harbour of refuge at Goderich, and of the commercial harbour at Bayfield, he did splendid service by his able advocacy of the scheme in his place in parliament. He was first elected to the House of Commons in 1867; was re-elected in 1872 and 1874, in 1878, and at the last general election. From the outset, Mr. Cameron has been an uncompromising Liberal. He had no sooner taken his seat in the House than his position became established, as one of the foremost men amongst his party. He has always found that a regard for the best interests and well-being of the county obliged him to oppose the main policy of the party led by Sir John A. Macdonald; and he is earnestly convinced that to a considerable extent the well being of a state depends upon how its public affairs are administered by the government, and this is why his opposition to a policy which he deems pernicious has always been so consistent and so pronounced. We may say that there is no member in the House of Commons whose voice commands more attention and respect than does that of Mr. Cameron. When he arises he is prepared thoroughly with argument, and upon constitutional and legal questions his utterances are invariably looked upon as those of an authority. He married in May, 1855.

Jessie H., daughter of Dr. McLean, who was associated in the survey and explorations of the lakes of Western Canada, Captain Bayfield being commander of the exhibition. The fruit of the marriage is seven children, and one who died at Jacksonville, Florida, in 1876, aged seventeen years. His eldest daughter was recently married to John Galt, son of the late John Galt, registrar of Huron, grandson of John Galt, the novelist, and nephew of Sir Alexander and Judge Galt. Our subject has a fine residence called "The Maples," in the town of Goderich.

Archibald, Hon. Thos. Dickson, Sydney, C.B., member of the Senate of Canada, was born in Onslow, Nova Scotia, in 1813. His father was David Archibald, of Onslow, brother of the celebrated Samuel George William Archibald, of Truro, master of the rolls, and attorney-general of Nova Scotia. His mother was Olivia Dickson, of Truro, of the old family of Dickson, well known in the annals of that place. David Archibald, and his brother, Samuel George William, married sisters. Mr. Archibald, the subject of this sketch, was educated at the Pictou Academy. After completing the usual routine of studies taught at the academy at the time, he became clerk with the late James Primrose, of Pictou, and shortly afterwards entered the service of the General Mining Association of London, in their office, at the Albion Mines in Pictou county. In the year 1832, he came to Cape Breton, and entered into partnership with his brother in a general business in connection with the Sydney Mines. This business, under the name of Archibald & Co., has been continued ever since, and is one of the oldest in the Province of Nova Scotia. The firm have taken part in almost every sort of enterprise that has been attempted in the island of Cape Breton, having, not only been engaged in supplying the mines, and in shipping coal in all directions, but also, very largely in ship-building, in prosecuting the fisheries, including the sealfishery, and as ship-owners and general shipping agents. In 1861 the firm commenced to open up the Gowrie coal mines in Cow Bay, Cape Breton, which enterprise now ranks as one of the foremost and most. successful in the island, and of which they are the sole proprietors. Mr. Archibald acted as agent for the Bank of Nova Scotia for a number of years, when an agency of that bank was established in Cape Breton, and represented the United States of America at Sydney as consular agent, until

In 1856 he was apcalled to the Senate. pointed a member of the Legislative Council of Nova Scotia, in which body he remained until appointed Senator at the confederation of the provinces in 1867. From 1860. to 1863 he was a member of the Executive Council of Nova Scotia during the administration of the Hon. Joseph Howe. Mr. Archibald has been married three times, and is now a widower. His first wife was Susan. daughter of William Corbett, of Pictou, to whom he was married in 1839, and by whom he had seven children, four of whom are living. His second wife, to whom he was married in 1867, was Elizabeth, daughter of George Hughes, of Boston, U.S. He was married a third time, in 1874, to Maria Louisa, relict of the late John Buryneat, of Truro, who died at Ottawa, suddenly, of hemorrhage of the lungs, nine months after. In religion, Mr. Archibald was wards. brought up a Presbyterian, and has remained one all his life, having been for many years a member of that church. As a politician, Mr. Archibald was connected with the old Liberal party of Nova Scotia; but since confederation, which he supported, he has given the Conservative party of the Dominion a fair and consistent support.

Millett, James Elliott, was born on the 25th of January, 1847, at Lismortagh, Fethard, Tipperary, Ireland. His parents were John Millett and Sarah Harrington. daughter of William Harknett Harrington, whose residence in the City of Cork was Sydney Hall, and his country residence was known as Hanover Hall, near Macroom, Cork county. Mr. Harrington was a gentleman who owned a large estate in Ireland; and he devoted most of his time to visiting different parts of the world for pleasure and instruction, and died in 1850 at a ripe old age, lamented by all who knew him. John Millett owned extensive properties in the County of Tipperary, Ireland; andin 1841 he married Sarah Harrington, whose father has just been described. By this lady he had seven children, three sons and four daughters. Mr. Millett lived the life of a private gentleman, never engaging in politics, or in any business, but his influence could be felt through the whole district in which he lived. Here he enjoyed, for his sterling qualities, a large share of respect and warm good will. He died in 1870, lamented by all to whom he had been a kind friend and benefactor. He never forgot to help those in distress, and he always had a cheering word for those striving for a position in the world. Mrs. Millett she m tutors and se on the and R ways there Morto but ow ily, he he cam the dif ment, l Novem the em brewere remaine by ind brother the late who bui who had viously, emigrate sisters in his arriv Toronto just form obtained Here he sequently joint stoc known br on Parlia pany th Toronto," August, 1 establishn He marrie leen Philli lips, archi perary, Ir of the Chu tive in pol Board of member of is kindly in his dealing and regard

died

and

friend

lived.

of Zion C Paisley, Sci parents bein His father the family the renown died in 1872, two years after Mr. Millett, and her loss was greatly felt by all her friends and by the community in which she lived, and especially by the circle in which she moved. James was educated by private tutors; and he studied civil engineering, and served four years on the engineer's staff on the works of the Limerick, and Killaloe and Rathkeale & Newcastle Junction Railways in the County of Limerick. He left there to join the engineer's staff of Sir Morton Peto, bart., then going to Russia; but owing to reverses occurring in the family, he was unable to leave. In April, 1864, he came to Toronto, Canada, but owing to the difficulty of getting immediate employment, he returned to Ireland in the following November. In the spring of 1866 he entered the employment of Messrs. Jameson, large brewers and distillers, in Dublin, where he remained for eight years, until influenced by inducements held out to him by his brother, who was at that time manager for the late Benjamin Walton, contractor, and who built the Custom House, Toronto, and who had been in Canada for some time previously, he resigned his position there and emigrated to Toronto with his wife and two sisters in April, 1874. A few months after his arrival he entered the employment of the Toronto Brewing & Malting Company, then just formed, as book-keeper, and afterwards obtained the position of secretary-treasurer. Here he remained for eight years. sequently forming with a few friends a joint stock company, he purchased the wellknown brewery belonging to Wm. Copland, on Parliament street, and named the company the "Copland Brewing Co., of Toronto," and entered into possession in August, 1882. This extensive and popular establishment is now under his management He married, on the 20th Nov., 1871, Kathleen Phillips, daughter of Robt. Boyle Phillips, architect, of Roseville, Clonmel, Tipperary, Ireland. Mr. Millett is a member of the Church of England, and a Conservative in politics. He is a member of the Board of Trade, Toronto, and likewise a member of the Ontario Jockey Club. He is kindly in all his relations, and upright in his dealings, therefore he has the respect and regard of all who know him.

ap-

ncil

ried

era-

860 rive

118-

Mr.

and

an.

to

om

are

ter

He

of

Cochrane, William, D.D., minister of Zion Church, Brantford, was born in Paisley, Scotland, February, 9th, 1831, his parents being William and Mary Cochrane. His father was born in Dalry, Aryshire, and the family sprung from the same stock as the renowned seaman, Thomas Cochrane, afterwards Earl of Dundonald, or Lord Cochrane. - His mother was from the Island of Arran, Scotland. After attending the parish schools of his native town from the age of four and a half years until twelve, he entered the shop of Murray & Stewart, booksellers and stationers, where he remained between ten and eleven years. 'He was a youth of indomitable energy, and devoted all his leisure hours to study. So great was his thirst for knowledge during the latter part of that period, that he gave up all his spare time to the study of the classics, and finally entered the University of Glasgow, going from Paisley every morning at 5 o'clock to attend classes. When he was in his twenty-third year, two gentlemen in Cincinnati, who had known him in Paisley when a mere child, and who had heard of his persevering efforts to obtain a higher education, offered him a home and ample means to study for the ministry, on condition that he would come to the United States. Although the proposal was strongly opposed by his pastor, the late Rev. Dr. Wm. Fraser, of the Free Middle Church, Paisley, and other friends-who wished him to enter the ministry in the Scottish Church—he accepted the offer, and after spending a few weeks in Cincinnati, entered the classes of Hanover College, Indiana, in September, 1854, where he graduated with highest honour, and took his degree of B.A. in 1857. During the last year of his course in Hanover, he pursued his theological studies, along with the regular branches of the art course, under the direction of the Rev. Dr. Jonathan Edwards, professor of Theology in Danville, Kentucky, and recently pastor of the Seventh Church, Cincinnati. Immediately after his graduation, he entered the Princeton Theological Seminary in New Jersey, and pursued his studies there for two years, under the Rev. Drs. Hodge, Alexander, McGill and Green. In February, 1859, he was licensed to preach by the Presbytery of Madison, Indiana, and was called and settled, as pastor of the Scotch Presbyterian Church, Jersey City, N.J., on the 7th June, 1859, where he continued for three years. In December, 1861, he paid a visit to his friend, Rev. Dr. John Thomsom, then minister of Knox Church, Galt, by whom he was asked to preach in Zion Church, Brantford, which was then vacant, and heavily burdened with a debt that almost threatened its extinction. Immediately afterwards, the congregation sent him a pressing and unanimous call, which he was led seriously to consider, and finally accepted. Inducted into his present charge on the 13th of May, 1862, he has served his people faithfully for nearly twentyfour years. During this long period he has received repeated calls and flattering invitations to wealthy churches, in other and much larger cities than Brantford. Boston, New York, Newburyport, Detroit, Chicago and Toronto, have all endeavoured to have him, but he has firmly resisted the temptation to leave Brantford, and sever the ties that bind him to an attached people. his ministry in Brantford, the congregation has more than quadrupled in numbers, and has now upwards of 600 members. In addition to his pastoral work, Dr. Cochrane, in 1874, founded the Brantford Young Ladies' College, assisted by other gentlemen in his congregation, and acted as president from its start, until 1880, teaching some of the higher classes during every session. For fifteen years he has filled the office of clerk of the Synod of Hamilton and London, and for fourteen years was clerk of the Presbytery of Paris. For thirteen years he has been convener of the Home Mission Committee of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, an office of great responsibility and labour, and entailing a large amount of travel and correspondence. With all these ecclesiastical burdens, he is at the same time one of the most public-spirited citizens that Brantford contains. He has been for thirteen years president of the Mechanics' Institute, now Free Library, and fully identifies himself with every educational and literary enterprise that has for its object the good of the community and county. Rev. Dr. Cochrane has had his full share of honours from the church he has loved and served so well, and from other quarters. In 1864, he received the degree of M.A. from Hanover College, and again, in 1875 the degree of Doctor of Divinity, having at the same time the offer of the latter honour from another college. 1869, he represented the Canada Presbyterian Church at the General Assemblies of the Scottish and Irish Churches. In 1873 he was sent as deputy to Manitoba, in connection with college and mission work, and again in 1881. In July, 1882, he was sent as deputy to visit the churches in British Columbia, and at the last General Assembly, held in St. John, N. B. (June, 1882), he was unanimously elected to the highest gift within the church—the moderatorship of the General Assembly. In 1884, Rev. Dr. Cochrane was also appointed one of the deputies to the Pan-Presbyterian Alliance in Belfast. Rev. Dr. Cochrane is an indefatigable worker, on the platform, in Church courts and by his pen; and no clergyman is more frequently called to preach special sermons at anniversaries and on the opening of new churches. As a preacher he is popular in the best sense of the term. Though a speaker of great readiness and fluency, his sermons are prepared with the greatest care, and as a rule written in full He uses his notes very little in the pulpit; his delivery is forcible, animated and impressive; his arrangement is logical, his style clear, and his illustrations often vivid and striking. Thoroughly despising sensationalism of all kinds, he preaches the gospel in its simplicity and purity, and by his clear exposition of truth, and earnest appeals to the heart and conscience, seldom fails to make a deep impression upon his hearers. Within the last few years he has published four volumes of sermons,-"The Heavenly Vision," "Christ and Christian Life," "Warning and Welcome," and "Future Punishment, or does Death end Probation?" These volumes admirably stand the These volumes admirably stand the crucial test of the closest study. As a writer he is clear, terse and vigorous, and his style. though affecting nothing of the ornate, possesses many of the graces of the polished scholar. In addition to these volumes, he is a frequent writer for the press, and several of his papers have been republished in American periodicals. As a lecturer, were he to respond to all his applications, during the winter season he would never be at The church in which Rev. Dr. Cochrane statedly ministers is now one of the finest in Ontario. In 1868 the edifice was enlarged by the addition of galleries; in 1876 a handsome organ was added; and this year it has been entirely remodelled and enlarged at a cost of $14,000. Rev. Dr. Cochrane was married July 24th, 1860, to Mary Neilson Houstoun, of Paisley, Scotland, who died January 8th, 1871. In October 2nd, 1873, he was again married to Jennette Elizabeth Balmer, of Oakville, Ontario. His family consists of three boys and a girl. and his eldest son is at present connected with a large commission house in Chicago.

Mason, Ambrose Wilcock, Toronto, Artist, was born at Bickleigh, near Plymouth, Devonshire, England, on February 16th, 1851. He is a son of Lawrence and Elizabeth Ann Mason. His father was a very successful agriculturist in South Devon, and for many years wore the uniform of Her Majesty's service in the yeoman cavalry.
Our subject was educated at the Ontario Institution for the Deaf and Dumb, at Belle-was tion char; Deaf was : in oi Engl After self 1 artist rewai as art in To He w Duml referr presid institu Metho he sta ried, Elizab an E county esta bli

and an place i

marke

ly and

His est

Toront

copied, crayon.

ville

tine

drav

And
tario, v bec, on was the tor of remark link tha
past to living (
and on
in the d
dation o
ed durin
at the si
the force

ers of the married whom he survive, of this secated at while the Canadian ing in a

Early in life he formed a taste for ine arts, and spent his leisure hours in drawing and sketching. His artistic faculty was more fully developed under the instruction of the late Mr. Ackermann, who had charge of that department of study in the Deaf and Dumb Institution. His chief aim was to qualify himself as an artist, especially in oil and crayon portraiture. He came from England to Bowmanville, Ontario, in 1857. After leaving the institute, he placed himself under the tuition of some of the best artists in Toronto, and, finding that success rewarded his labours, followed his profession as artist, first at Belleville, and afterwards in Toronto, where he came to reside in 1883. He was drawing master in the Deaf and Dumb Institute during the years already referred to, and he was also for a time vicepresident of the Literary Society of that institution. In religion Mr. Mason is a Methodist, and in politics a Reformer, and he stands staunchly to his colours. He mar-ried, on the 3rd November, 1884, Fannie Elizabeth Lewis, daughter of Samuel Lewis, an Englishman, of Leamington, Essex county, Ont. Mr. Mason, we may add, has established for himself a wide popularity, and an enduring repute. He has a high place in art circles, and, in addition to his marked professional ability, he is, personally and in business circles, extremely popular. His establishment is at 10 King street east, Toronto, and here pictures are made or copied, in oil, water colour, Indian ink and crayon, according to high artistic excellence.

rch

nan cial

en-

he

rm.

nd

the

ıll.

it :

m-

his

vid sa-

the

bv

est

om

1as

he

ľu-

in

ng

Anderson, William J., London, Ontario, was born in Sorel, province of Quebec, on the 12th January, 1843. His father was the Rev. Canon Anderson, M.A., rector of Sorel. It may be interesting to remark that Canon Anderson is the last link that binds the old Church of England past to the present, he now being the only living Crown-appointed rector in Canada, and on his death the last crown endowment in the dominion ends. On the recommendation of Sir John Colborne, he was inducted during the troubled times of 1838, and at the same time was appointed chaplain to the forces, Sorel being then the headquarters of the military power. In 1840, he was married to Miss Henshaw, of Montreal, by whom he had nine children, of whom five survive, the eldest living being the subject of this sketch. W. J. Anderson was educated at the collegiate institute, Sorel. Born while the stirring events of the French-Canadian rebellion were still fresh, and living in a large garrison town, his natural taste was towards a military life. His father's friend, Sir John Colborne, then field marshal, offered him a commission in the line, free of purchase, but his father objected, and obtained instead a situation for him in the Bank of Montreal, Montreal. He served various positions at the branches in Kingston, Cornwall, Quebec, and New York, and in 1870, was appointed accountant at St. John, N.B. At that time the "anti" feeling ran high, but in spite of that the delightful social pleasures of the city made it a very desirable place to live in. In 1871, he was promoted to the accountantship at Montreal, and there met his future wife, Emily Boyle, eldest daughter of the Rev. Felix Boyle, M.A., rector of Frampton, to whom he was married on the 21st February, 1872. He afterwards was appointed assistant manager at Toronto, and after a few months was promoted to the management of the Brockville branch, in which beautiful town he remained for four years. He then was appointed manager of the London branch, and moved to that city on 1st April, 1883. Four children have been born to him, two boys and two girls. Mr. Anderson has been always a staunch Conservative, but never took an active part in politics. is a member of the Masonic body, and for many years took an active part in the volunteer movement.

Potts, Rev. John, D.D., Toronto, was born in 1838, at Maguire's Bridge, County Fermanagh, Ireland. After an uueventful childhood, John Potts determined at an early age to leave the land of his birth and try his chance in the new world. accordingly hear that when only seventeen, the young man started for the Southern States of America, taking Kingston in his route. As a straw will at times influence the current of a stream and direct it from its original course, Mr. Potts' sojourn amongst his Kingston relations, associated as it was with the pleasantest reminiscences, induced him on his return from the south to select Canada as the land of his adoption, and (many enticements to go elsewhere, notwithstanding), forsaking all others he has kept only unto her. Originally an Episcopalian, Mr. Potts' intercourse with the Wesleyans of Kingston, at that time under the spiritual guidance of the Rev. George Douglas, was not without its effect upon him, and he became a Methodist. The young man's first step in life was trodden in the path of commerce, and we find him engaged in mercantile pursuits at Kingston and Hamilton. Work of this kind was, however, uncongenial to his tastes, it is no matter of surprise, therefore, that yielding to the earnest solicitations of his friends, seconded as they were by his own natural desires, Mr. Potts at the age of nineteen, prior to the expiration of his Arts course, at Victoria College University, Cobourg, was induced to study for the ministry. period of probation was passed on circuit at Markham, Aurora, Newmarket, and lastly at Thorold, during his residence, in which place the young man completed his theological studies, and was received in full con-Subsequent to his ordination, when only twenty-three, the young minister's first field of labour was at Norter street Church, London, as assistant to the Venerable Richard Jones; from thence, at the expiration of his time, he was appointed to a charge in Yorkville, and was associated with the Rev. E. H. Dewart, then at Elm street. Such was the estimation in which this young worker in the Lord's vineyard was held, that in 1866, he was chosen (no small compliment for a man of only twenty-eight) to be the first pastor of a new church erected in Hamilton, to commemerate the centenary of American Methodism, and thus became within the short space of ten years the minister in a congregation where he had formerly been a member, and Sunday-school teacher. Mr. Potts' acceptance of the Hamilton charge was at first opposed by the Stationary Conference Committee, but their misgivings as to his ability to fill the church soon proved to be groundless, for such were his talents and popularity, and so forcible his preaching, that Sunday after Sunday multitudes flocked to hear the Word spoken by his mouth. While at Hamilton, Mr. Potts was invited to come to Toronto, to the church in Adelaide street, but fearing the time he would have to devote to the superintendence of the building of the Metropolitan church, then in course of erection, would interfere with what he considered strictly ministerial work, he declined this charge, and accepted that of St. James street, Montreal, which had been simultaneously placed at his disposal in succession to the Rev. Dr. Douglas. Equal success attended Mr. Potts in this his new field, and after a space of three years he returned to Toronto, and was placed in charge of the Metropolitan church in that city, where he rapidly increased the number of the congregation. The close of his ministrations there saw him again removed to Elm street, and for a second period we again see him in charge of the Metropolitan, Toronto.

the close of a second term in the St. James street Methodist church, Montreal, Rev. Dr. Potts was called back to Toronto, and is now the pastor of Elm street, it may be said, for the third time. Mr. Potts is a staunch supporter of temperance, having first advocated its cause when only fifteen. He is also connected with the Young Men's Christian Association and Bible Societies. He and the Rev. W. MacVicar, of Montreal, are the Dominion representatives on the International Committee, which select the Sunday lessons for all schools all over the world. The subject of our sketch is a member of the Board and Senate of the Victoria University. He is likewise a member of the board of the Montreal Theological College, and also a member of Committee, and has charge of the publishing interest of the church. In 1878, he was elected the first president of an association which was formed in Toronto, embracing ministers of all denominations. In July, of that year, the Wesleyan University, Ohio, in due appreciation of his merits, admitted. him to the degree of D.D. On the death of Rev. Dr. Topp, he was appointed, in 1879, to succeed him as chairman of the Home for Incurables, an institution likely to prove of incalculable benefit to the people of Toronto, the foundation stone of the new buildings of which was laid by Her Royal Highness the Princess Louise, on the occasion of her first visit to Toronto, in September of the same year. Never doing anything by halves, unostentatious, strictly imbued with a consciousness of the responsibilities of his sacred office. Rev. Dr. Potts rarely takes a leading part in lectures or meetings of conference, but prefers to thoroughly identify himself with his ministerial work. Gifted with no ordinary power of eloquence, possessing a tongue as it were the pen of a ready writer, with a complete mastery over the subject he handles and a splendid voice in his delivery of it, Rev. Dr. Potts is unsurpassed in the pulpit, and rivets the attention of his hearers. Of a commanding presence, having the advantages of a superior intellect and an equally poised mind, and possessed with great physical strength, Rev. Dr. Potts is never weary in well doing. Ever ready to assist those who are trying to lead a Christian life, he fearlessly denounces in no measured language of condemnation and warning, those who are walking in the ways of wickedness and vice. Combining in his person the suivater in modo with the fortiter in re, he is known far and wide beyond the limits loved hono outsi odists views in by assist worke of the out th and br go ab amelio dition eager (to reta luctane the suc in the life be career years to when r Christia Rev. I tower o he by h in which after he will be him.

Tho stock, th the City His fath land, an Thomas and afte at Toron and atta the Mili commane graduate Hamilton organ-bu Thornton tered this for the (ronto. known as of the la institutio 1875, he and remo a field for began the exertions Every year and outpu

limits of his own denomination. He is beloved and revered by his own congregation; honoured, respected and esteemed by those outside its pale. A Methodist of the Methodists, he is a man of the most liberal views; believing that true religion is hedged in by no sectarian prejudices, he willingly assists to the utmost of his power all fellowworkers, irrespective of creed, in the service of their Great Master, and cordially holds out the right hand of christian fellowship and brotherly love to all, who, like himself, go about doing, and are endeavoring to ameliorate the spiritual and temporal condition and welfare of their fellow-men. The eager desire of his several important charges to retain him amongst them, and their reluctance to part with him, amply testify to the success of his labors in the past; being in the full vigour of his manhood, should his life be spared, Rev. Dr. Potts has a long career of usefulness and work before him in years to come. The historian in the future when recording the progress and growth of Christianity in Canada, will not fail to place Rev. Dr. Potts in the foremost rank; a tower of strength in his own denomination, he by his example indicates to all the way in which they should walk, and generations after he shall have passed away his memory will be blessed, and his works will follow

Thomas, Edward George, Woodstock, the subject of this sketch, was born in the City of Toronto, on the 2nd October, 1853. His father and mother were natives of England, and came to Canada in 1832. Mr. Thomas was first sent to the public schools, and afterwards attended the Model School at Toronto. Having completed his studies, and attained his sixteenth year, he entered the Military school, 29th regiment, then commanded by Colonel Farrington; and graduated in due time, and then moved to Hamilton, where he learned the trade of organ-building, in the establishment of Thornton & Green. After he had mastered this trade, he was appointed manager for the Canada Organ & Piano Co., of Toronto. In 1874, he established what was known as the burial case factory, now one of the largest, most thorough, and popular institutions of its kind in the country. In 1875, he sold his interest in this business, and removed to Woodstock, where he saw a field for organ-building. Here he at once began the manufacture of organs, and his exertions were soon rewarded with success. Every year saw an increase in the capacity and output of his establishment, till the business attained its present large dimensions. In 1881, Mr. Thomas was elected alderman for the City of Woodstock, and likewise for 1883, in which latter year he He was a painstaking and clearretired. headed civic legislator, and during his official term, was chairman of the fire, water and light committee. He has taken considerable interest in secret society affairs, and is a prominent member of Odd-Fellows' lodge, No. 88. He is likewise a member of the Grand Lodge, and has held high trusts in the Masonic order. In religion our subject is a staunch Episcopalian. He married in 1872. Margaret Campbell, daughter of the lafe William Campbell, of Hamilton, and by this union has had four children. In politics he is a staunch Reformer; and he does not content himself with merely wishing his party well, but he is a constant and zealous worker.

Shortiss, Thomas, Toronto, was born in Bristol, England, on the 7th July, 1822. His father was Thomas Shortiss, and his mother Mary Bourke. Mrs. Shortiss came from Tipperary, Ireland, and was connected with some of the first families in the south of Ireland. The family came to Canada in 1826, and settled in Toronto, then known as Little York. Our subject was educated at the Toronto Grammar School, and at the Upper Canada College. On leaving school he went into the dry-goods business and continued in it for seven years, and afterwards, for a short time, was connected with the civil service. In 1854 he entered the lumbering business, and was one of the first in developing the County of Simcoe, where, among other industrial improve-ments, he built a large steam mill. He turned his attention later to minerals, and he and his partner were among the first to explore Lake Superior as prospectors. Through their means chiefly that territory was brought before public notice. The mining interest at this time was in a very poor condition, and nobody believed that the minerals in this region were worth troubling about. Mr. Shortiss has been engaged in mining and lumbering ever since the period stated, and owns a large tract of lumber on the Ottawa river. He was captain in the 4th Battalion, Toronto, for fourteen years, under Col. Richard Denison. He was alderman for the City of Toronto for the years 1854-55, and has been connected with most of the important public enterprises in that city. He is a Master Mason, of Ionic He has travelled through Europe lodge. and the States. In religion he is an Episcopalian, and in politics a Conservative. He married in Oct., 1855, Hester S. Wakefield, whose father was then a very prominent man in business in Toronto. Mr. Shortiss is of a most genial temperament, and kindly of heart; therefore he does not lack warm friends, of which he has many.

Durham, Earl of. — John George Lambton, Earl of Durham, the greatest of those English statesmen that we include in the history of Canada, was born on the 12th of April, 1792, and received his education between Eton and Cambridge. On reaching maturity he was sent to Parliament for Durham. He had previously married Miss Cholmondeley, who died on the 11th of July, 1815. In the following year he espoused Lady Louisa Elizabeth Grey, daughter of the then prime minister of England, Earl Grey. This was the nobleman, by the way, who used to be in such a state of trepidation at the Cabinet councils sometimes lest his impetuous son-in-law should break beyond bounds. Mr. Lambton was descended of an old aristocratic family, but his ancestors had nearly always striven in the cause of popular liberty. When the future Earl took his seat in Parliament, he at once began to busy himself with questions of reform. With heart and soul, too, did he always enter into any enterprise. In 1821 he introduced a measure to amend the existing law relating to representation; and all the fossils and the tories were scandalized; Lambton, they felt sure, with his radicalism, and leanings toward the common people, would disgrace his lineage. A strong bulwark of sticks-in-the-mud arose and said all such legislation as Lambton proposed was in the direction of undermining the foundations of the Constitution. Not so many years afterwards an almost identical measure was submitted, and the fossils had to swallow it. On the 17th January, 1828, Mr. Lambton was raised to the peerage with the title of Baron Durham, of the City of Durham and of Lambton Castle. In 1831 he lost his son, Charles William, a promising boy whose beauty has been immortalized by the pencil of Lawrence. On the 12th March, 1833. Lord Durham retired from the cabinet. received an earldom, and in the summer of the same year, proceeded on a special mission to the court of Russia. In 1835, his lordship returned to Russia as British ambassador, and remained there until the summer of 1837; and, in the following year went out as governor-general to Canada, whence he returned, after a few months' absence, without any permission from government, and died in 1840. When he came to Canada he found the smoking embers of the recently subsided rebellion; and that ill. feeling, heart burnings, and the most painful discontent were abroad through the country. His lordship obsrved that the constitution was practically suspended, that trial by jury was no longer effective, and that to make things better it was necessary to begin at the foundation. To this end he issued divers ordinances, which declared. among other things, an amnesty to all the rebels, save their leaders, who were declared banished to Bermuda. It was declared that should they return without permission they would incur the penalty of death. Lord Brougham, in England, the ferocious opponent of Lord Durham, was delighted when he heard the strange tidings from Canada. With sledge-hammer and bitter style, of which he was master, he showed how the governor-general had transcended his authority in banishing to an island, over which he had no control, and in declaring that men who had never been brought to trial. and who must be presumed innocent till proven guilty, should be made to suffer death if they again showed their faces in Lord Durham doubtlessly did Canada. transcend his powers, but desperate cases are made better very often only by desperate remedies; and it is highly probable that had his lordship been permitted to have his own way, the results would have been what everybody wished. But he went down before the storm of censure, and was recalled in disgrace. However, before receiving the notice of recall, and wounded deeper than a mean mind can imagine, he set sail for England, where, shortly afterwards, he died, as some have supposed, of a broken heart. His report, which appeared shortly after his return to England, was the most masterly state paper in our colonial history. The scheme of a union for legislative purposes of the British North American provinces was laid down, and the fullest constitutional freedom for the people was insisted on. Nay, the Earl's eyes looked forward still to to a day when he thought that these provinces, united as one, might take their place among the independent nations of the We quote the following respecting his lordship, from the colonial historian. Robert Montgomery Martin :- "By birth and inclination, Lord Durham was one of the earliest advocates of political and popular reform; and to his credit, he it said, he was ever foremost to aid the cause of the oppressed. His sympathies were Saxon,

and

Nor

strug

of h

few

croac

Durh

oppr

With

to re

in ol

his co

or pa

when

energ

hand

patric

chara

There

Mr. M

suitab

minde

more :

writte

when

not for

lumbe

in the

what]

into ef

the col

our pro

Montge

WI

pian.

Registr

of Per

County

er, die

leaving

maiden

eleven

the tent

farm un

the mea

In 1848

at New

an elder

died in

period in calamity well as t

and he fo means ar

educate.

he pushe

don, On

resided.

Ohio, wh

1832.

and consequently with the people, but the Norman, or feudal pride, was often seen struggling with the more liberal principles of his early ancestry. At a period when few men stood forward to oppose the encroachments of ministerial power, Lord Durham was always the staunch opponent of oppression, whether national or individual. With a generous disposition, he was prompt to relieve distress, and expend his wealth in objects conducive, as he thought, to his country's good. There was no niggard or parsimonious spirit in his proceedings, whenever it could be proved that money or energy could advance the cause he took in hand; and an unsullied integrity and lofty patriotism were among the distinguishing characteristics of this lamented nobleman. There is very little more in the pages of Mr. Martin respecting Lord Durham that is suitable to any man who is not so narrowminded as Martin evidently was. more than usually dull writer seems to have written his cumbersome pages at a time when still a few of our public men could not forego a slur to the dead lion; but the lumbering censure is very ridiculously read in the light of the present time. Most of what Durham advocated has been carried into effect; and those very schemes which the colonies have adopted, and which were our proudest boons, are those which Robert Montgomery Martin characterises as Uto-

ill-

in-

he

n-

nat

nd

ry

he

ed.

he

ed

at

ey rd

0-

en

of

he

u-

ch

Whelihan, Patrick, Saint Mary's, Registrar of the South Riding of the County of Perth, was born at Peterfield, in the County of Tipperary, Ireland, April 23rd, 1832. His father, James Whelihan, a farmer, died when the son was two years old, leaving a widowed mother, Elizabeth, whose maiden name was D'Arcy, with a family of eleven children, of whom our subject was the tenth child. He was brought up on a farm until sixteen years of age, receiving in the meantime a national school education. In 1848 the family came to America, landing at New Orleans, La., where the mother and an elder brother took the yellow fever, and died in Cincinnati, Ohio. This was a trying period in the life of young Whelihan. The calamity nearly exhausted his means, as well as that of a brother eight years older. and he found himself at sixteen with small means and a younger sister on his hands to educate. Afflicted, but not disheartened, he pushed forward as far northward as London, Ontario, where some of his friends resided. He soon afterwards returned to Ohio, where he made an engagement to work for an English railway firm, Chamberlain, World & Walker, and had charge of a supply store, while the partners were building railways in Ohio and Pennsylvania. After having placed his sister at school at Cleveland, he purchased and paid for two hundred acres of land near the village of Lucan, in the Huron district, Ontario, then called the Queens Bush). On this farm his late brother's family still reside. In 1851, Mr. Whelihan went to Kingston, Ontario, and spent two years with the firm of Brown & Hearty, acquiring a knowledge of the dry goods business. In the spring of 1853, he removed to London, and spent a short time with the Hon. Frank Smith, who was then a leading merchant and importer in that city. Having branched out from that establishment in 1854, he settled in St. Mary's, County of Perth, and was a general merchant there until October, 1871, (except two years spent at Stratford), when he was appointed registar. In 1867 he purchased the business of Mr. Corcaran, wholesale and retail grocer at Stratford, and conducted the same successfully for fifteen months, while carrying on his farming operations in the township of Blanchard. At the end of the period named, he resold the business back to Mr. Corcoran, and repurchased his old establishment in St. Mary's, from which he retired in the spring of 1872. At twentyfour years of age he was appointed justice of the peace, and that office he still holds. He is also one of the license commissioners for the South Riding of the County of Perth: and is registered at Washington, D.C., as a Canadian magistrate to facilitate the drawing of pensions of soldiers who reside in Canada, who were engaged in the late civil war. Mr. Whelihan represented the South ward in the town of St. Mary's, in the municipal council, for several years; and he made the first audit sheets after the place had become a town. He is also a trustee of the collegiate institute, and takes great interest in education. He has been a faithful worker for every public in-terest ever confided to him. He is a mem-ber of the Roman catholic church, and has lived an unblemished life. In July, 1855. Anne Amelia Wells, of London, Ontario, was joined in marriage with Mr. Whelihan, and of fourteen children, the fruit of this union, twelve are living. His eldest daugh-ter, Mary Jane, is the wife of Dr. Han-over, of London, Ont.; Charles Edward, the eldest son, has been his father's deputy for nine years, and has excellent business Three daughters have been educated at the Sacred Heart Academy, London, Ont., and two daughters and a son attend the Collegiate Institute, St. Mary's. The younger children are in the local schools Mr. Whelihan is giving of lower grade. his children a good mental drill, and rearing them in the ways of temperance, virtue and industry. During the seventeen years that he was in mercantile life, he was also engaged in farming, and has now one hundred and tifty acres in the corporation, his home not being more than five minutes walk from his office. His specialty is stockraising, and principally in Norman per-cheron horses; Ayrshire, and grade cattle; and pure bred Southdown sheep. In Norman percheron horses he has some very choice animals, his own importations direct from France, and purchased by himself personally from the most noted horse-breeders in the north of France. He deserves great credit for his enterprise, being the first one, so far as we know, in Ontario to import horses direct from France.. All others had purchased their first stock from Americans. Mr. Whelihan is proving a benefactor to his country, and especially to the locality where he resides, by improving the stock of horses, etc., in the country for miles around. In 1883, Mr. Whelihan with his wife spent three months in Europe, visiting many places of importance, combining business with pleasure, for during the visit he made some fine selections of Norman percheron horses in the north of France. These are now to be seen on his farm, which we may add, is known as "Thorn Hill Place," St. Mr. Whelihan was at one time an Mary's. active politician, but the nature of his office requires him now to maintain a neutral position.

Hayes, James, M.D., C.M., M.C., P.S. O., Simcoe, Coroner of Norfolk county, Ont., was born in Simcoe, on the 15th December. 1844. His parents were David Hayes and Maria Theresa Glennan. Mrs. Hayes was a daughter of the late Dr. Glennan, of Dublin, Ireland. In 1818, the family of John Have left the town of Antrim, and sailed for Canada, and after landing they remained a short time at Quebec. The parents were taken with cholera and died, leaving the father of our subject, then in his eighth year, and he was taken to the town of Cobourg, where he remained till he reached man's estate. He learned the trade of liquor manufacturing, and afterwards removed to West Flamboro', and established a distillery there. In 1832 he proceeded to Simcoe, where he established another distillery, which he conducted for a number of years. In 1855, he retired from active business, and has since resided with his son, Dr. James Haves. Mrs. Hayes died in 1847. James Hayes was educated in the union schools, and in the Grammar school of Simcoe. In 1862 he repaired to Montreal, and entered the medical department of McGill College, where he pursued his studies until 1866, when he graduated as M.D., C.M. In 1869, he received the title of M.C.P.S.O. He at once returned to Simcoe, and opened an In 1868 he purchased the drug business of John Winch, and associated himself in partnership with J. F. Wilson. The business was continued till 1869, when Dr. Hayes sold out his interest, and devoted himself exclusively to his practice. In 1871 he took in as his partner Dr. Corlis, and this partnership lasted till 1873, when Dr. Corlis removed to St. Thomas. It may also be stated here that in 1870 Dr. Hayes bought out the drug business from Mr. Wilson, and took into partnership R. T. (now Judge), Livingston, the company being known as Hayes & Livingston. The business was managed by W. W. Livingston, now town clerk of Simcoe. This business was carried on for four years, when in 1874, Mr. Haves sold out his interest to Mr. Livingston; and from this time he has continued to attend closely to his practice, the result of which is that he now is one of the most prominent practitioners in the county. He applied himself diligently to his profession, until 1883. when he bought the drug business from Mr. Livingston, taking into partnership at the same time John B. Farlow, and the establishment was now known as Hayes & Farlow. In 1885 the partnership ceased, and Dr. Hayes bought out his partner's interest. Dr. Hayes was for some years assistantsurgeon in the 39th battalion, Norfolk Rifler, and he retired in 1882. In 1872, he was elected councillor for the town of Simcoe, and was re-elected in 1876-77. He then retired from municipal affairs for a time. In 1885, he was elected mayor of his native town by acclamation. He is connected with the newly developed mineral springs at Montana, with the Simcoe Worsted Woollen Mills, and other public enterprises. He is a Mason of Norfolk lodge, No. 10, A.F. & A.M, and is past master of the same lodge; he likewise belongs to the Simcoe lodge of Oddfellows; and is the physician of this lodge; he is an Independent Forester, and the physician of that body, and is jail surgeon and attending physician of the county Poor House. He is an Episcopalian and a

Jenniston, churc 1875. doctor ter of five cosecond

Pe on the were V name Mr. F land, i called the bu tive pa lion, or in 1849 the sub younge Pells, t commo twelve ilv not Mr. Pe his time one of the Pat. the age McBain pied the House, tive yea the trad abroad, landing that cit he left a in the Sc until th when he Toronto. J. P. Wa 1877, wł business laide stre tinnes, a contracto premises was entri belonged Major Nic of the old holder of member o

F. & A. M

phis Maso

to the Ind

Liberal-Conservative. He married in 1869, Jennie, daughter of the Rev. Martin Livingston, late minister of St. Paul's Presbyterian church, Simcoe, who was superannuated in 1875. Mrs. Hayes died in 1870, and the doctor married again, in 1873, Mary, daughter of Wm. Bowlby, of Townsend. He had five children, two of whom survive. The second wife died in 1883.

he

ρg

in

he

6.

at

n

d

is e it d

Pells, Thomas, was born in Toronto, on the 3rd of May, 1839. His parents were William Pells and Susan, whose maiden name was Dent, both belonging to Toronto. Mr. Pells came from Holt, Norfolk, England, in 1829, and landed in Toronto, then called "Muddy York," where he took up the business of bricklayer. He took an active part, at the time of Mackenzie's rebellion, on the side of the loyalists. He died in 1849, leaving a family of eight children, the subject of this sketch being the second youngest. Mrs. Pells died in 1875. Thomas Pells, the subject of this sketch, received a common school education. At the age of twelve years, when his father died, the family not being in the best of circumstances. Mr. Pells was obliged to devote the most of his time to helping his mother. one of the boys who first sold the Colonist. the Patriot and the Globe in the streets. At the age of sixteen, he was apprenticed to McBain & Withrow, whose shops once occupied the space on which the Grand Opera House, Toronto, now stands. After serving tive years at carpentering, and learning the trade, Mr. Pells went to try his luck abroad, and set out for the United States. landing in New York. He remained in that city for one and a half years, when he left and went to Vicksburg, Mississippi. in the Southern States. Here he remained until the outbreak of the American war, when he returned to Canada, settling in Toronto. He now entered the employ of J. P. Wagner, where he remained until 1877, when he opened for himself in the business of builder and contractor, on Ade-In this business he still continues, and is one of Toronto's most noted contractors, and the building of the fine premises now occupied by Farley & Co., was entrusted to Mr. Pells' hands. He belonged to the first militia corps, under Major Nickenson, and he was also a member of the old fire department. He is a stock-holder of the Central Bank. Mr. Pells is a member of St. Andrew's Masonic lodge, A. F. & A. M., also Egyptian Right of Memphis Masonic lodge. He likewise belongs to the Independent Order of Oddfellows, to the Ancient Order of United Workmen, to the Select Knights, the Royal Arcanum lodge, and to the Toronto Gun club. In all these societies Mr. Pells holds a very prom-He has travelled through the inent place. United States, visiting all points of interest. In 1885 he visited, together with Mrs. Pells, the New Orleans exposition. He is a Methodist, and a Conservative in politics. married, on the 5th of August, 1862, Sophia Marion Baker, daughter of the late Job Baker, one of the oldest inhabitants of Toronto, who died in England, to which country he had removed in 1876. Mr. Pells has had three children. He is a most genial gentleman in social life, and one that attracts all with whom he comes in contact. We may add that Mr. Pells has just erected a handsome building on Adelaide street, known as the "Grand Central Roller Skating Rink."

Bradley, Alexander Priestley, Lieutenant-Colonel, Secretary to the Department of Railways and Canals, Ottawa, was born on the 26th of October, 1831, at Portland, County of St. John, in the Province of New Brunswick. Is a son of John and Jane Matilda Bradley, the maiden name of his mother being McColl. His educational studies were pursued in St. John, New Brunswick, and he attended the Grammar school in that city. He has held commissions in the 6th regiment, Cumberland, Nova Scotia militia, as follows:-He was appointed captain and adjutant on the 4th of August, 1854; major on the 18th September, 1863, and lieutenant-colonel on the 27th September, 1866. By militia general orders, dated 3rd January, 1879, he was placed on the retired list, retaining the rank of lieutenant-colonel. In 1848, he removed from St. John to Parrsboro', Nova Scotia, where he was employed in a merchant's office. He was appointed deputy registrar of deeds for the District of Parrsboro', Cumberland, under commission dated 9th September, 1852. He received the commission of registrar of deeds on the 16th November, 1857; was appointed postmaster on the 10th August, 1863; issuer of marriage licenses on the 9th July, 1864; and police magistrate in 1869. He resigned the foregoing on the 1st July, 1871, on his appointment as assistant accountant in the Department of Public Works, Ottawa. He was appointed private secretary to the Honourable Sir Charles Tupper, C.B., K.C.M.G., then minister of Public Works, on the 17th October, 1878; and held a like position under him as minister of Railways and Canals up to May

He was then appointed chief clerk and secretary of that department. Mr. Bradley is a Methodist, and has been since childhood. He has held official connection with the church for many years, both in Nova Scotia and at Ottawa; was a member of the Montreal conference for the sessions of 1884 and 1885, and is a member of the missionary committee of that conference. He married, on the 2nd November, 1854, at Parrsboro', Nova Scotia, Mary E. Chubbuck, daughter of the late James L. Chubbuck, and granddaughter of the late Edward Dixon, of Sackville, New Brunswick. Our subject is well known as a capable, painstaking and zealous public official, and these qualities are invaluable in a man at the head of a department so important as that presided over by Mr.

Bradley.

Taylor, Cyrus Miller, Waterloo, was born in Ancaster, Wentworth county, Ont., in the year 1831. He is a son of Abraham Taylor and Anna Baxter, both of whom came to this country in 1817, from Jefferson county, New York state. Young Taylor's father died when our subject was four years In 1844 he went to live with his eldest brother at Bridgeport, County of Waterloo, and he received the principal part of his education at the common school. 1851 his brother moved to the township of Wellesley, in the same county, and for several years young Taylor worked upon his brother's farm during the summer seasons, and attended school during winter. From 1858 to 1861 he was employed teaching school, and as a clerk, in the County of Waterloo. He married, in 1857, a daughter of W.H. Hacking, one of the pioneers of the present town of Listowel, and postmaster from its earliest days to the present. In 1861 Mr. Taylor commenced an insurance agency in the town of Waterloo. not been long so engaged before he conceived the idea of starting a company with the view of becoming its manager, and set about the formation of the Waterloo Mutual Fire Insurance Company, which commenced doing business in the spring of 1863, with Mr. Taylor as its manager and sole agent. In a year or two, however, the success of the company was so great as to create a wider field of operations than could be attended to by him, in the capacity of manager and agent, and, therefore, agent after agent was appointed, until the whole of Western Ontario was represented. The success of the mutual principle, as it had been applied in the Waterloo Mutual Fire Insurance Company, suggested to the mind of Mr. Taylor the propriety of establishing a life Assurance Company, which should be purely mutual and entirely in the interest of its policy holders. Mr. Taylor immediately act. ed on his convictions, and with the assistance of Isaac E. Bowman, the then member of the House of Commons, and Mr. Springer. the member of the Legislative Assembly of On the scheme very soon assumed a practical shape; and application was made to the Legislature of Ontario in the fall of 1868 for the incorporation of the Ontario Life Assurance Company, which was g anted in the spring of 1869. The office of manager of the Waterloo Mutual, and the position of vice-president of the Ontario Life has been held by Mr. Taylor ever since of their organizations. the dates the year 1861 Mr. Taylor began to study the views of a religious body styled Christadelphians, and notwithstanding his prejudice against a system of religious teaching so subversive of his previous convictions respecting the religious doctrines taught in the scriptures, in a short time he became thoroughly convinced of the truthfulness of the system of religious truth taught by those people, and connected himself with them in 1862. He has prepared the following synopsis of his religious belief :- That God, the great first cause, the creator and upholder of all things is a personal being, having a localized habitation in some part of his vast domain, styled Heaven in scrip-That there is no other being coeternal or co-equal with Him. That Jesus Christ the "Son of God" and "Son of Man" had no existence save in the purposes of the Deity until his birth. That on account of his perfect and sinless life, God raised him from the dead, and he became the Prince of Life, to give eternal life to all his faithful brethren. That the spirit. whose source is God, is an all pervading principle, undefined in its nature, but known by its name and operations as follows:—1st. As a creative, life giving and life sustaining agency. 2nd, The medium through which God is omnipresent in all parts of His universe. 3rd, The channel through which God has spoken to us by "Holy men of old," and the power in the hands of these men by which they performed miracles in attestation of their divine mission. That these divinely inspired and attested words are the scriptures of divine truth, and are the only appeal to the intellectual and moral faculties of man to lead him in the "way everlasting." That the angels are a class of real tangible beings, immortal in

the

are

of.

Tha

seng

ing

man

"wh

no

devi

pers

scrip

temp

or de

That

is wl

and an er

of tl

ence.

vond

that !

veale

realiz

and c

tion f

betwe

life is

are no

the re

will b

come

Christ

ledge. will b

on imi

be " 1

ing in

have s

out la

the Je

again i

the kir

the kir

That

Mount

Jerusal

"Mour

David,

this ea

righteo

Adam,

things a

of all t

prophet

then Go

it is do

and dea

things c

God.

their nature, whose powers of locomotion are not to be attributed to their possession of wings, but to their immortal nature. That these beings, in their capacity as messengers and representatives of God in carrying out His purposes in His dealings with man, have personated the Great Jehovah, "who dwells in light unapproachable; whom no man hath seen or can see." That the devil has no personal existence, but is sin personified, and that in the language of scripture, "When a man is tempted he is tempted and drawn away by his own lusts or desires." That man is entirely mortal. That his superiority over all other animals is wholly due to his superior organization and education. That he does not possess an entity within which survives the death of the body in a conscious state of exist-That his innate longings for a life beyond the grave harmonizes with the idea that God is his creator, and that He has revealed a way in which this hungering may be realized. That way is through the belief and obedience of His word, and a resurrection from the dead. That in the interval between death and the resurrection "our life is hid with Christ in God." That there are no rewards or punishments until after the resurrection and judgment. That those will be raised from the dead who have become amenable to the judgment seat of Christ, by the possession of light and knowledge. That the faithful among this class will be rewarded "by this mortal putting on immortality." That the unfaithful will be "beaten with few or many stripes, ending in the second death." That those who have sinned without law, will perish without law, and sleep a perpetual sleep." That the Jewish people will be gathered back again to the "mountains of Israel." "That the kingdoms of this world will yet become the kingdoms of our Lord and his Christ." That then "the law will proceed from Mount Zion, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem," when Jesus Christ will reign at "Mount Zion on the throne of his father David, before his ancients gloriously." That this earth is the everlasting home of the righteous. That Christ, the "second Adam," will establish such an order of things as will eventuate in the "restitution of all things spoken of by all God's holy prophets, since the world began." That then God's will "will be done on earth as it is done in Heaven" and sin, suffering and death will not exist in the universe of God. Finally, that the belief of "the

life.

arely f its

act-

ssist-

mber

nger.

ly of

ed a

de to

1868

Life

ed in

ager

n of

has

since In

tudy

ista-

reju-

ng so s re-

n the

hor-

the

hose

hem

low-

That

and

ing,

part

rip-

co-

esus

n of

oses

ac-

God

ıme

all

ing

wn

lst.

in-

His

ich

of

ese

the name of Jesus Christ" and a "baptism into Christ" is the beginning of that path that leads to life eternal.

Whtelaw, Robert, Woodstock, Ontario, was born in the parish of Merton. Roxboroughshire, in 1827. His parents were Andrew Whitelaw and Isabella Gladstone. Andrew Whitelaw was, for many years a thrifty farmer in his native place; but in 1840, he sailed with his family to Canada. settling in the town of Guelph, our subject being then in his thirteenth year. Farming was again commenced in the new country, and Andrew Whitelaw continued to reside on the farm of his eldest son, William, three miles from Guelph, till his death in 1846. A family of six children survived the worthy man, and Robert was the youngest. The lad received only a common school education, at the parish schools in Scotland, and worked upon his father's farm till he was sixteen years old. The following year, 1844, he left his home and proceeded to the town of Dundas, where he began to learn the trade of millwright, in the shop of the late firm of John G. Gartshore & Co. Here he served an apprenticeship of four years; and upon the expiry of his term, went to the United States, settling in Buffalo. In this city, he worked at his trade for a short time, and then returned to Canada. In 1850, he bent his steps towards Toronto, entering into the employ of Lowe, Turner & Gibb, machinists, where he remained for two years. The firm now failed, and Mr. Whitelaw rented the shop of the bankrupt establishment, and opened business for himself. Here he continued for about a year and a half, when he sold out to Henry Hawke. He now became engineer upon a large steamer, and thereafter was employed upon several boats plying-upon Lake Ontario. He continued in this business for two seasons, after which he removed to the town of Simcoe, where he took the position of foreman in the foundry of the late John Boyd. In the fall of 1857, he left Simcoe, and engaged as foreman with Thomson & Muirhead, of Beachville, in the Oxford foundry, in which position he remained for two years. He then purchased the interest of the senior partner, Andrew Thomson, but in 1860, rented his interest to Robert Thomson. In 1862, Mr. Murhead and our subject purchased the interest of Mr. Thomson, and carried on business under the name of Whitelaw & Co. The partnership continued till 1866, when Mr. Whitelaw bought out the entire interest of things concerning the kingdom of God and | the establishment, and carried on the business himself. In 1874, he removed his business to the town of Woodstock, where he still continues with marked prosperity. It is proper to add that Mr. Whitelaw has had his share of reverses and crosses in his business life. His premises were twice destroyed by fire, once in Beachville, in 1869, and again at Woodstock, in 1875. Not at all daunted, this courageous and enterprising man speedily erected a new and improved establishment, upon the ruins of the old one at Woodstock. In this splendid establishment, he now manufactures all kinds of machinery, including chiefly engines and boilers. His house, we may also add. has erected mills throughout every part of Mr. Whitelaw was elected coun-Canada. cillor for the township of North Oxford, and held the position for three years. He has been vice-president of the Woodstock Board of Trade since 1882; and he is a shareholder in the Millers and Manufacturers' Insurance company of Toronto. So far as our subject's religious views are concerned, we may say that he was brought up in the Presbyterian faith, but has since given in his adherence to the doctrines of the Baptist church. politics, he is a true-blue Reformer. He married, in 1853, Margret Blackwell, of London, England. By this lady he has four children. Two of them, Robert G. and Andrew O., are in their father's employ. The firm is one of honourable repute, and is now firmly entrenched in the community. Kilroy, Rev. Edmond Burke, D.D., Pastor St. Joseph's church, Stratford, Ontario, was born in Ireland, on the 30th of November, 1830. His parents emigrated to Canada in 1836, and settled near Windsor, Ontario. Father Kilroy, after suitable training, and when in his fifteenth year, entered the University of Notre Dame, Indiana; and from this institution, graduated in 1852, with high honours. He continued his theological studies till 1854, when he was ordained a priest. From this period till 1856, he was one of the best known missionary priests in northern Indiana and southern Michigan; through what at that time formed the missions which heattended, there are now twenty priests stationed. In 1856, Father Kilroy, was appointed president of the University of Saint Mary's of the Lake, Chicago, Illinois, continuing in this caracity for two years, and giving great satisfaction to all interested. But in 1858, he became pastor of the church in Laporte, Indiana; and shortly afterwards was transferred to the City of Lafayette, where he presided over the most important parish, within the diocese of Fort Wayne, till 1864, when he took charge of Sarnia, Ontario. During the American civil war, Father Kilroy was appointed special agent of the state of Indiana. by Governor Morton, to see after the wounded belonging to that State in the armies of the Cumberland, Mississippi and the Potomac. He readily accepted the position, as it gave him an opportunity of ministering to the spiritual wants of hundreds of Roman catholic soldiers, who otherwise must have died without the rites of their religion. From 1864 to the present time he has been actively engaged in mission work, in the diocese of London, as pastor of Sarnia, of St. Mary's, as rector of London Cathedral, and as parish priest of the City of Stratford. During 1876-77, he visited Europe, and travelled through England, Ireland, Spain, France, and Italy, with the Right Reverend Bishop Walsh, of London. During his stay in Rome, he received from the College of the Propaganda his doctorship in divinity. It need hardly be said that Rev. Dr. Kilrey, is one of the best known catholic priests in the province of Ontario. He is an eloquent and effective preacher, is an able lecturer; eminently sociable and kind in his manner, but above all, is untiring and zealous in his exertions to win men to virtue. This latter he seeks to accomplish by making virtue appear pleasing and attractive, rather than by a propaganda of rigid and austere piety, which, however good in itself, cannot be other than repulsive to the great majority of men.

Todd, A. Thornton, Toronto, the subject of this sketch, was born at Buncrana Castle, County Donegal, Ireland, Respecting the family of Mr. Todd, we learn the following from Burke's Landed Gentry: Thornton, James Henry Todd, of Westbrook, Co. Donegal, J. P. and D. L., was a lieutenant-colonel of the Donegal Militia. He was authorized by Royal Letters to take the name of Thornton in addition to that of Todd, having succeeded to the estates of Sir William Thornton. William Thornton-Todd, of Buncrana Castle, Co. Donegal, son of Daniel Todd, Esq., by Letitia Thornton his wife, aunt of Sir Wm. Thornton, and grandson of John Todd, Esq, by Elizabeth Patterson, married Wilhelmina, daughter and heir of Daniel Patterson, of Fox Hall, Co. Donegal, by Jane his wife, sister and co-heir of Henry Vaughan Brooke, for many years member of parliament for that county, and had issue. Daniel his heir; William, captain in the 85th Regiment; James Henry, captain in 40th

ald. danı Dun 16.0 edno Roy 1837 as lie Drag Toro ors of the 1 a pas H real, 1826. paren sion, study preve he bed

Benja

Haven

Sillima

princip

in Am

Sillima

chemic

college.

Reg Tho

sub Fitz

scientif School. sketch a privat eralogy search i edited Survey by Mr. required and mi Prof. Si Hunt w position. His con during r antil Ju wish of work dur not confi and mine amount o

years of]

administr

The most

the geolog

talline rod

Regiment, now of Westborough, and A. Mr. A. Thornton-Todd, the subject of this sketch, married first, Miss Fitzgerald, daughter of Major R. Fitzgerald, of Kingston, and secondly Miss Evans, daughter of the Rev. George Evans, of Dungannon, County Tyrone, Ireland, and its issue. Mr. A. T. Todd, received his education at Foyle College and Dungannon Royal School, and during the rebellion of 1837, he served in the incorporated militia as lieutenant in command of the St. Thomas Dragoons. Mr. Todd is now chairman of the Toronto Club; and is also one of the directors of the Standard Bank. Mr. Todd joined the Masonic order many years ago, and is a past master.

ge of

ng the

as ap-

diana,

ound-

ies of

Poto-

. as if

tothe

catho-

e died

From

tively

ese of

y's, as oarish

uring

relled

ance,

ishop

y in

f the

lrey,

sts in

uent

urer;

ner,

n his

atter

rtue

than

iety,

t bé

rity

the

rana

Re-

we ided

, of L., egal' Let-

ldi-

l to

ton.

tle,

by

m.

dd,

ied

iel

Hunt, T. Sterry, LLD., F.R.S., Montreal, was born at Norwich, Conn., Sept. 5th, 1826, of an old New England family. His parents designed him for the medical profession, but a strong inclination toward the study of chemistry, mineralogy and geology, prevented his becoming a physician. In 1845 he became a special student of the late Prof. Benjamin Silliman, of Yale College, New Haven and afterward, his assistant. Prof. Haven, and afterward, his assistant. Silliman was for more than a generation the principal teacher of chemistry and geology in America, and his son, the second Prof. Silliman, had already organized a private chemical laboratory in connection with the college. This was the germ of the present scientific department of Yale—the Sheffield School. As early as 1846 the subject of our sketch was a worker in that laboratory, had a private class in crystallography and mineralogy, and published his first original research in the American Journal of Science, edited by Prof. Silliman. The Geological Survey of Canada then recently organized by Mr., afterwards Sir William E. Logan, required the services of a competent chemist and mineralogist. Mr. Logan applied to Prof. Silliman to supply the want, and Mr. Hunt was strongly recommended for the position, which he assumed early in 1847. His connection with the survey continued during more than a quarter of a century antil July, 1872, when, much against the wish of the government, he resigned. His work during the long term of his service was not confined to the branches of chemistry and mineralogy alone, but embraced a large amount of field geology. During the latter years of his connection with the survey, its administrative details were under his charge. The most important problems presented by the geology of Canada are those of its crystalline rocks. To their study Dr. Hunt addressed himself from the beginning, giving the first clear notions ever presented of our earlier rocks. He afterwards gave the names of Laurentian and Huronian, laying the foundation of what he regards as the work of his life—the study of the problems of the origin and succession of the older rocks. While pursuing questions of great abstract interest and importance in geology, Dr. Hunt gave constant attention to the economic and practical departments of the survey. He was the first to make known the deposits of phosphate of lime in Canada, and call attention to the commercial value of the product as a fertilizer. He collected and sent specimens to the foreign exhibitions of 1851, 1855 and 1867. He investigated the petroleums of Canada, and their distribu-Later he studied in detail the salt deposits of Ontario, analyzing the brines, determining their geological origin, and pointing out the best modes of manufactur-He early made extended analyses of the soils of Canada with reference to scientific agriculture, a work which has not received the attention it deserves. His studies of the mineral waters of the Dominion were the most complete of any ever made in the world, and enabled him to frame for the first time an intelligible theory of the origin of saline waters. During his connection with the survey he took part in the great exhibitions in 1856 and 1867, at both of which he was a judge. He was also one of the judges at the Centennial Exhibition at Philadelphia in 1876. Dr. Hunt has done much work in teaching, having during the years 1856-62 been professor of Chemistry at Laval University, Quebec; of which institution he is still honorary professor. His annual course comprised forty lectures in the French language. Subsequently ne was for some years lecturer at McGill University in Montreal. In 1872 he accepted the chair of geology in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in Boston, a post which he resigned, in 1878, in order to devote himself to study and professional work. His scientific attainments and work have been widely recognized, both at home and abroad. He was made M.A. at Harvard in 1852, subsequently received the title of Doctor of Sciences from Laval, and Doctor of Laws from McGill. In 1881 he had the unusual honour of degree of Doctor of Laws from Cambridge in England, in special recognition of his eminence in geology. Among distinctions accorded him in early life was that of being created a Fellow of the Royal Society of London in 1859. In 1874 he was made a member of the National Academy of Sciences of the United States, which numbers one hundred of the most distinguished scholars and students of America. In 1882 he was one of those called by the Marquis of Lorne to aid in the organization of the new Royal Society of Canada, and became that year the chief of the Section of Physical and Mathematical sciences. In 1884 he was elected president of the society. Dr. Hunt was one of the founders of the American Association for the Advancement of Science at Philadelphia in 1849, and was its president in 1870. He took an active part in inducing the association to meet in Montreal in 1882, and laboured strenuously in making that meeting the success it proved. An early member of the American Institute of Mining Engineers, he was president of that body in 1877. As a founder and life member of the American Chemical Society. he became its president in 1880. In 1876 he organized, in concert with some American and European geologists, the International Geological Congress. At its first meeting in Paris, 1878, he was made secretary, and at its second meeting in Bologna, in 1881, he was elected vice-president. The third congress, held in the same year in Berlin demanded his presence, but the meeting of the British Association rendered it impossible for him to leave Montreal. He is one of the vice-presidents for the Association's meeting, and moreover chairman of the Committee of Invitations and receptions on behalf of our citizens. Among his decorations is that of the Legion of Honour bestowed by Napoleon III., and the cross of St. Mauritius and St. Lazarus, from the reigning King of Italy. Dr. Hunt's contributions to scientific literature are numerous. These include many publications in the Geological Survey of Canada during twenty-five years, and his report on azoic rocks constitutes a volume of the Geological Survey of Pennsylvania, to which he was attached in 1875-6. In the general catalogue of scientific papers, published by the Royal Society of London, we find his contributions, up to 1874, to have been 155 in number. Since which time his published articles, essays and memoirs have probably brought up the total to more than 200. A selection from these, entitled Chemical and Geological Essays appeared in 1874, and a second edition was issued in 1878. It is understood that a second volume will soon beforthcoming. As a popular lecturer on scientific subjects, Dr. Hunt is well known; within recent years, he has delivered two courses before the Lowell Institute in Boston. His labours as a professional geologist and metallurgist, in questions connected with the mining and working of coal, iron, copper, etc., are widely appreciated in the industrial and commercial world. A chemical green ink, which he invented in 1859, has given the name to American currency. He disposed of his patent for a small sum, and the application of his ink to the printing of greenbacks and bonds, conferred a handsome fortune on the buyer. A glance at the list of Dr. Hunt's scientific papers will show that his studies cover a wide range, not only in practical and theoretical chemistry, mineralogy and geology, but in the lofty questions of general philosophy and the relations of the sciences. In his study of the older rocks he has probably comprehended a wider field than any other living geologist. His explorations have extended from the Gulf of St. Lawrence southward to the Gulf of Mexico. and westward to the Mississippi Valley and thence to the Pacific. In Europe he has made frequent studies in Great Britain, Switzerland and Italy, and has been enabled to co-ordinate the crystalline rocks of both continents, and to show their similarity of conditions. The conclusion of his work on the crystalline rocks, giving not only their classification and their succession, but the natural laws of their development, forms an extended memoir which was presented to the Royal Society of Canada, at its meeting in May last, and is now in course of publication. Dr. Hunt married, in 1878, the eldest daughter of Mr. Justice Gale, of Montreal. The union has been childless. Dr. Hunt unites a very extensive acquaintance with literature, and good powers of criticism in art, to his attainments as a savant. Whether in the laboratory, lecture hall or drawing room, he awakens admiration by his brilliant and diversified powers.

an hi

80

am

a i

ian

Cos

J.

Goo

Ou.

is a1

and

ers d

He

of N

His

and

of th

heres

his co

strun

"Frie

busin

aucces

iarm a one y busine engage

nis eff

interes

son co

entirely opened

coal, at also est

into pa

Dininny

Elmira,

ested in thracite

Cosby, Alfred Morgan, one of Toronto's best known citizens, was born in the County of Welland, on 11th Sept., 1840. His ancestors were United Empire loyalists, who chose pioneering in a country over which floated the banner of England to a new state fashioned by enthusiastic republics, who crowned and uncrowned their own king every four years. Our subject has in his veins a mixture which has produced some excellent men, to wit, Irish and Scotch; and he seems to have the fire of the one tempered and restrained by the cold caution of the other. Our subject was educated in Toronto, and took away from the schools such knowledge as was regarded ample for a life of business. Most lads on leaving school have their eye upon one occupation in preference to another; and in the use of young Cosby, a banker's life had most allurement. So, in 1861, he entered the Bank of Toronto as a clerk; and after a career of industry, and a display of much excellent business ability, he was appointed to the charge of a branch at Port Hope. This position he held until 1876, when he retired from banking life. Leaving Port Hope Mr. Cosby was chosen to the management of the London & Ontario Investment Company; and at the head of this important cusiness he has remained ever since. It need only be said with respect to the business qualifications of our subject, what has already been stated, that he is energetic, and said by those who come in contact with him to be possessed of a clear head and a sound judgment. He does not feel any ambition to make a noise, and has not taken a prominent part in politics, but he is a Liberal. In religion he professes Presbyterianism, as did his ancestors. In 1870, Mr. Cosby married Clara A. Worts, daughter of J. G. Worts, of the widely known firm of Gooderham & Worts, distillers, Toronto. Our subject now resides in Toronto, and he is an important acquisition to the business and social life of the city.

His

ist and

ed with.

n, cop-

the in-

hemical

59, has

y. He

m, and

nting of

ndsome

the list

l show

ot only

miner-

estions

ions of

r rocks

er field

explo-

of St.

Iexico,

ey and

he has

ritain, nabled

rity of

rk on their

nt the

ms an ied to

eeting

blica-

eldest

treal.

Hunt

with

sm in ether.

wing

rilli-

To-

n iu

840.

ists.

over to a

bub-

own has

ced

and

e of

old

Rogers, Elias, of the firm of Elias Rogers & Co., Toronto, is a native of Canada. He was born on a farm near the village of Newmarket, on the 23rd of June, 1850. His parents were amongst the early settlers, and were well known as leading members of the Society of Friends. Mr. Rogers adheres to the same denomination, and since his coming to Toronto, has been largely instrumental in organizing and establishing a "Friend's Meeting" here. Mr. Rogers' business career has been one of marked success. His early years were spent on the farm at his old home. When about twentyone years of age, he began in the lumber business, and although not very extensively engaged in that enterprise, success attended nis efforts. A few years later he became interested in coal mining property in Jefferson county, Penn., turning his attention entirely to the coal business, and, in 1876, opened an office in Toronto for the sale of coal, at wholesale, throughout Canada. He also established a retail business, taking into partnership, soon afterwards, F. C. Dininny, a wealthy gentleman residing in Elmira, New York, who was largely interested in the mining and shipment of anthracite coal. The firm being in the very best position with regard to supplies, they have been enabled at all times to furnish the best grades of coal at the lowest prices. This, together with the strictly honourable course pursued by them, and a careful attention to business, has given them a first place in the coal trade of the Dominion. They supply the wholesale trade direct from the mines, while their facilities for the retail business in Toronto, may be justly said to be unsurpassed. Their sheds for storing coal on the Esplanade, between Berkeley and Sherbourne streets, are the largest in Canada; and they have during the past year purchased a large property at the foot of Bathurst street, and have completed the erection of railway trestles, sheds and pockets, the first of the kind in Canada, where the cars are handled by steam power. The cars are drawn up an incline, and the coal is unloaded, screened, and loaded into the carts, ready for delivery, without the use of a shovel. They also do a large fire-wood business, and have the most modern machinery for sawing and splitting. A continuous stream of horses and carts may be seen passing in and out of their yards. Mr. Rogers is still a comparatively young man, and it is gratifying to note the continued success he has achieved.

Roper, John Pollard, Milton, was born in 1825 in the town of Ashburton, Devonshire, England. His parents were John Roper and Sarah, nee Pollard, and his father was occupied with the trade of wool combiner up to the time of his death, which occurred. in 1848. Upon the death of Mr. Roper, Mrs. Roper, the widow, sailed for America, and she died in Cleveland, Ohio, U.S., in 1881. There were nine children, the subject of this sketch being the eldest, and out of this family there are only three now living. P. Roper never received what people now-When he a-days would call an education. was young it required a considerable purse to meet the expenses of a boy's schooling, but what education he received he put to good use. After leaving school he was, apprenticed to Joseph Hamlin, a tanner, in the town of Buckfestleigh, Devonshire, and here he served his time, and remained in Devonshire about thirty years. Then he left for Canada, landing at Quebec in 1853; and remaining there for a short time, he went to the United States, and stopped in Cleveland, Ohio, where he was employed on the Lake Shore Railroad. In 1854 he returned to Canada, and, settling in Toronto, he entered and remained in the employ of George Michie & Co. for two years. In 1856 he left Toronto and went to Milton, and here he opened business for himself in the grocery and provision trade, and in this busimess he has continued ever since, and now carries on one of the most extensive trades in this line in Milton. He was one of the first councillors of the town of Milton, and acted in that capacity at intervals several times. He is at present a councillor in Milton. Our subject belongs to the Orange society, and has held several offices in that body. has travelled through Canada and the United States, and profited much by what he has In religion he belongs to the Church of England, and in politics is a solid, yet liberal, Conservative. He was married in 1846 in Buckfastleigh, to Grace Memmory, who died in 1871. He again married Mrs. Ann Speedy, and by the second marriage had four children. Mr. Roper is the genuine type of a warm-hearted, open-handed English gentleman, who likes to see all happy, and to draw around him many friends. In business circles he is not less popular than in the social sphere. Robitaille, Hon. Theodore, M.D., Senator, and ex-Lieutenant-Governor of the Province of Quebec, was born at Varennes, in the Province of Quebec, on January 29th, 1834. Our distinguished subject is descended from one of the oldest French One of his grandfamilies in Canada. uncles, M. Robitaille, was chaplain to the Active Militia Force of Lower Canada during the war of 1812. The family took an active part in the war on the loyal side. Another granduncle, the Rev. Louis Brodeur, after spending seven years as a missionary in New Brunswick, was appointed curate of the Parish of St. Roches des Aulnets where he died, bequeathing his wealth to the Sainte Anne College, of which institution he was one of the founders. Another granduncle, Jean Robitaille, sat in the Canadian Legislature from 1809 to 1829. Our subject's father was the late M. Louis Adolphe Robitaille, N.P. Theodore received his early education at Varennes, but after a time he was sent to school in the United States. Returning therefrom he entered the Seminary of Ste. Therese, afterwards entered in succession the Laval University and the University of McGill Col-From the latter institution he graduated M.D. in 1858. He was a most successful practitioner of medicine, but one of his taste, and ambition, and ability, could not be confined to the bread-and-butter routine of a profession. He always felt a strong inclination to enter public life, and he took a great deal of interest in political questions. He was first returned to the Canadian Assembly for Bonaventure in 1861. and held the constituency till the union He was always an active and efficient member, and promptly drew the attention of the House to his abilities. From 1867 to 1878 he sat in the House of Commons; and on the 30th of January, 1873, he was sworn into the Privy Council as receiver-general for He was not destined, howthe Dominion. ever, to hold office long, for in November of the same year Sir John A. Macdonald's transactions with Sir Hugh Allan caused the overthrow of the government, and Dr. Robitaille resigned with the administration. On the 26th of July, 1879, he was appointed to the lieutenant-governor-hip of Quebec in the stead of M. Luc Letellier de St. Just. It will be remembered how this dismissal and of M. Robitaille's consequent appointment came about, so that it is only necessary to refer to it briefly. When M. de Letellier was appointed to the lieutenantgovernorship of Quebec, political feeling was in a very bitter condition in the province. The new incumbent was a Liberal, with the strongest party leanings. For advisers he had M. DeBoucherville, and men of such pronounced Conservative type as M. Chapleau. He did not feel when the doors of the council were closed as if he were taking his seat among friends. Apparent cordiality existed, but there subsisted feelings of mutual distrust. Yet the lieut.-governor was powerless to do harm, being tied up with a constitutional claim to his advisers so long as they did not encroach upon his prerogative. But very soon they did this. They caused certain proclamations bearing M. Letellier's name to be published in the Official Gazette. and some of these said proclamations the lieut.-governor had not seen until they so appeared before the public. Adding these encroachments upon his prerogative to certain alleged unwise acts on the part of his accusers, he found a cause against his cabinet and dismissed them. This was unquestionably a startling coup in a province enjoying responsible government, so long as the administration was supported by a majority in the House. At once the question was taken to the central parliament. The House of Commons, the majority of which were liberal and friendly to M. Letellier, refused to discuss the matter, but the Senate, the majority of which was conservate, did discuss it and found the lieutenant-governor, so far as its dictum went. The next year the liberals were guilty.

off

up cer

del

'nis

pla

his

dig

heh

sam

high

He

lotte

and

Ques

Legi

Belle

near this s

late

leadir

found

father

Mr. O

school

street,

lege, i

youth

life's 1

a phys

establi

practica

tering 1

a slight

pletely

mercan

growing

was enr

some of

tions, al

England

ples of the confi

Very Re

These led to this e

convinced

conflict ar

conviction

threw the

held sway

tion was o

Lord Jest

whose brig

and he em

The peace

course

C

everthrown and the conservatives came to office. At once M. Letellier's act was brought un before the House of Commons, and censured by the majority. After some little delay, occasioned by the reference of the puestion to England, M. Letellier was dismissed, and Dr. Robitaille appointed in his place. The new incumbent administered his office with firmness, impartiality, and dignity. Illustrious, respected, and admired he had been as an active partyist, and these same tributes were attributed to him for the higher judicial quality in his new sphere. He married in November, 1869, Marie Charlotte Emma, daughter of P. A. Quesnel, and grand-daughter of the late Hon. F. A. Quesnel, for many years a member of the Legislature of Canada.

fical

Ca-861

ion

em-

the 878

> on in-

for

ow-

r of

ld's

sed

Dr.

on.

ted

bec

ıst.

sal

es-

as

Clarkson, Rev. John B., M.A., Belleville, Ontario. About fifty years ago near the city of Toronto, the subject of this sketch was born. He is the son of the late Thomas Clarkson, for many year a leading merchant of Toronto, one of the founders of the Bank of Toronto, and the father and president of the Board of Trade. Mr. Clarkson was educated at the famous school of the late John Mair, on James street, and for years at Upper Canada College, in the halls of which so many of the youth of our capital have received their life's literary training. Wishing to become a physician, he spent a year in a chemist's establishment, in order to obtain a more practical knowledge of drugs, before entertering upon the study of his profession. By a slight circumstance, this purpose was completely changed. He entered his father's mercantile office, and continued there with growing favour for years. His father's home was enriched by many sons and daughters. some of whom have reached eminent positions, all of whom attended the Church of England, and were well drilled in the principles of Christianity. Our subject entered the confirmation classes of his rector, the Very Rev. Dean Grasett, and was in due course confirmed by Bishop Strachan. These lectures were made a great blessing to this eager youth. His judgment was convinced, and his conscience aroused, conflict and distress prevailed under a deep conviction of sin. Doubt and darkness threw their gloomy pall over his mind and held sway for months. His painful condition was overcome by looking in faith to the Lord Jesus, the Sun of Righteousness, whose brightness chased all the gloom away, and he emerged a new creature in Christ. The peace and joy which followed gave another character to life. Its pleasures were purer, its duties were accomplished more easily, and everything was viewed in the light of two worlds. All home and business claims were met with increased fidelity, while the leisure time was given to cottage visitation and tract distribution. Quick promotion in the very large business of his father, greatly increased his responsibilities, and served to reveal his capacity for commercial pursuits. This was detected and appreciated by others. For. on becoming of age, an extensive merchanti offered him a most lucrative partnership, but no commercial inducements were sufficiently tempting to effect business contracts, which would interfere with a long cherished purpose to enter other, and, to him, more congenial pursuits. He felt called to preach the gospel of Christ. This, however, brought a double crisis, His father's hopes, for his commercial ascendancy were crushed. His own fears to enter Trinity College, as, the only institution at that time available. to prepare for the ministry of the English church, were heightened. He shrank from the demand, and declined with sorrow. Widening fields of usefulness were opening in other branches of the Christian Church. which were eagerly and regularly occupied. Mr. Clarkson was attracted to the services of the Methodist church, and in course of time entered its membership and ministry. The way back to college providentially opened, and four years were happily and successfully spent at Victoria University, Cobourg, where he took out the well-earned degree of B.A. During these years a full course of theology was satisfactorily completed. At Quebec, in June, 1863, and just after graduation, he was ordained to the office and work of the ministry. From that time to the present, Rev. Mr. Clarkson has continued to command some of the most influential pulpits of his church. Among the towns, eminent service has been rendered in Galt. Woodstock and Owen Sound; and he has occupied one of the chief appointments in five of our cities, viz. - Kingston, Montreal, Brantford, Toronto, and Belleville, where he is just closing his pastorate of Bridge street church, and as superintendent of the Belleville district, which is in the Bay of Quinté conference. He was for many years missionary treasurer of the London conference, and once secretary of it, and was elected to the general conference of Montreal, in 1878. His early commercial advantages are an ever-growing factor of usefulness in the executive work of the denomin-

His public discourses are prepared with great care, and evince much research. They are packed full of good ideas and well delivered with a rich strong voice. They are quaint, incisive, distinguished for perspicuity, strength of statement, and are exegetical rather than oratorical, pictorial unother than logical. This last quality gives him enormous power over the youth to whom an art sermon is preached once a month. He is deservedly esteemed for his excellency of character, elevated by a rare sweetness of disposition which runs its brightness through his laborious ministerial life, all the duties of which are most conscientiously discharged under a deep sense of their great responsibility. In June, 1867, Rev. Mr. Clarkson was married to Miss Whalley, the only daughter of the late B. Whalley, of Montreal, formerly of Leeds, England, who, after a life of great suffering, passed away, in Toronto, in 1881. His present wife is the youngest daughter of Wm. Scarff, of Woodstock, Ontario, Their only child and son is called Douglas. Mr. Clarkson has travelled extensively on this continent, and has been three times in Europe. His contributions to the press have been fugitive articles on various topics with an occasional scientific essay. Many allege that so strong a pen, should be more freely exercised.

Elliot, Hon. William, City of London, Ontario, senior Judge of the County of Middlesex, was born in the year 1817, on his grandfather's property, where his father resided, at Stoniegate, in the County of Durham, England. Mr. Elliot received his education principally under the Rev. Dr. Mortimer, for twenty-five years head master of the London city schools, England, and subsequently prebendary of St. Paul's. Mr. Elliot's father was of the family of the Elliots of Stobbs, in Roxburghshire, Scotland; and his mother was one of the Huttons of Marske, in Yorkshire. In 1836, Mr. Elliot's father, with his family, left New-castle-on-Tyne, to take up land on the Mississippi. But his residence there was not entirely satisfactory, and the following year he left the United States, and settled on the river Thames, two miles from London, After the death of his father, which occurred shortly after the arrival in Canada, Mr. Elliot occupied himself with farming, and continued to do so till 1847, when he commenced the study of the law. In 1852, he was called to the bar, and at once, possessed of energy, much learning in the law, and abilities far beyond the average, began to practice his profession. - Unusua. ability is sure, sooner or later, to become apparent, and especially is this true in the case of the legal profession, where success in such a large portion of the field depends upon ability. Mr. Elliot was soon a barrister of respectable standing, and no one was surprised when, in 1869, he was called to the bench as judge for Middlesex, in the room of the Honourable James Small, deceased. For five years our subject acted as superintendent of public schools in the old London district, which then comprised the counties of Middlesex and Elgin, and he has had likewise a varied experience with municipal bodies. He married, in 1848. Miss Robinson, a daughter of Samuel Robinson, M.D., of Dublin, and sister of Mrs. Hume Blake, and of Judge Robinson, of Lambton. Judge Elliot and his family recently suffered a severe blow in the death of their son, Skeffington Connor Elliot, an estimable and very promising young man, who fell in the conflict at Duck Lake, Northwest territory, between the Dominion forces and the insurgents under Louis Riel, on the 26th March, 1885, in the twenty-sixth year of his age. He was in an excellent practice in the law at Prince Albert, on the Saskatchewan, when, with twenty-five other young fellows, he hurried to the front, to uphold the supremacy of the law, and, with eight of his volunteer comrades, died on that fatal field for their country. His remains having been brought to London his native place, the people of that city and vicinity testified by a public funeral, and in many other ways, their regard for their brave young fellow-citizen. Judge Elliot belongs to the Episcopal church, and entertains the opinions which are represented by what are called the Broad church party. No one is more extensively known than he in the part of Ontario where he has resided for the last forty-nine years. As a judge he is, through his integrity, his ability, his patience, and his learning, an ornament and an honour to the bench.

Gilholm, Robert, Galt, was born in the township of North Dumfries, in the County of Waterloo, in 1833. His parents were Robert Gilholm and Ann, nee Forman, who resided in Borosden, Northumberlandshire, England, and removed to this country in 1832. They settled in the township of North Dumfries, about one and a balf miles west of Galt, where the father adopted the life of a farmer. He had seven children, Robert, the subject of our sketch, being the third. Young Gilholm wa he this a He dan Du girl

aı

Gill bus dist dese with conn is af cons thrif indel

ronto

Brotl

Mary

and s

was be and we the E destinus oldier poleon Mr. Br. ent in Penins The sau that the promine his fellorise from his fello In the y sion, an Toronto. proceded gomery's when Wi promptly He was a

He was a tion betw land, and Crown a man died received a common school education, and went on the farm with his father. At the time of his father's death, which occurred in 1844, Mr. Gilholm came into possession of the farm, where he remained until 1859, when he leased the farm and came to Galt. Shortly after, he and George Hogg bought out the saw mill of Dryden & Sutherland, and now carry on the lumber business under the firm of Gilholm & Hogg. In 1879 he was appointed school trustee, which position he still holds; and in 1883 was elected to the town council of Galt. In religion he is a Presbyterian, and in politics a Reformer. He was married in 1856 to Jane Scott. daughter of the late William Scott of South Dumfries, and has had six children, five girls and one boy. His son, Robert Scott Gilholm, is now carrying on the jewellery business in the village of Preston, a short distance from Galt. Mr. Gilholm is very deservedly held in high repute with all those with whom he has ever had any business connections, and in private and social life he is affable and highly esteemed.

ana

the

ces:

mde

bar-

one

lled

the

de-

l as

old

the

he rith

48.

ób.

lrs.

οί

re-

oř

es-

the

th-

ces

he

ear

as-

ier

to th

on

renis

> nd eir

Brothers, Joseph, Milton, to whose conspicuous public spirit, intelligence and thrift the town of Milton is under no small indebtedness, was born in the City of Toronto, on the 3rd of January, 1837. Mr. Brothers is the son of Joseph Brothers and Mary Sinclair, and he had thirteen brothers and sisters. His father, Joseph Brothers, was born in the County of Armagh, Ireland, and when in his twentieth year, he entered the British army as a private. He was destined to be more than a barrack-walking soldier, for these were the days when Napoleon was terrorizing over Europe. So Mr. Brothers saw much service, being present in numerous engagements during the Peninsular war and received several wounds. The same intelligence, ambition and energy that the son found potent in reaching the prominent place which he now holds among his fellow-countrymen, enabled the father to rise from rank to rank in the army and pass his fellows, till he became quartermaster. In the year 1832 he was retired on a pension, and sailed for Canada, and settled in Toronto. During all the stormy years that preceded the outbreak and the fiasco at Montgomery's farm, he dwelt in Toronto; and when William Lyon Mackenzie rebelled, he promptly threw himself in with the loyalists. He was a zealous champion of the connection between the colonies and the motherland, and readily gave his services to the Crown as drill sergeant. This worthy man died in 1847. Joseph was past ten years old at the time of his father's death, but he received a sound education, and at the age of seventeen began to learn the trade of a machinist. Having mastered this trade, he repaired to Chicago, where he remained for a short period, and then returned to the County of Halton, settling in the village of Palermo. A young man of his character and business address would not naturally be obliged long to solicit notice, so he soon entered into partnership with the late Jacob Lawrence in the business of manufacturing implements. Milton soon held out inducements to him that he could not resist. and thither he went, entering as manager in the foundry of John White, ex-M.P. He had now accumulated some capital, and resolving to push his way, depending upon himself alone. After three years he purchased the establishment, and conducted it successfully, and to-day he is reaping the labour of his industry. In 1866, at the earnest solicitation of many friends who saw in him a man of unusual ability and high character, he presented himself as a candidate for the town councillorship of Milton, and was elected, and continued in this position until 1880, when he was elected reeve, and occupies this position at the present time. In religion Mr. Brothers is an attendant of the Methodist church, and highly esteemed in that body; and in politics he is a Reformer, and president of the Milton Reform Association. In 1858, on the 7th of October, he married Mary Melinda Dorland, by whom he has had six children. Two of these, William Dorland Brothers and John Anson Brothers, are partners in their father's general business. These are justly regarded among the most prominent and efficient business men of Milton. William attends to the office in the capacity of bookkeeper, and John renders assistance to his father in the general management. Mr. Brothers is a gentleman to whom the citizens of Milton owes a good deal, and it is pleasant to know that they fully appreciate his worth.

Cameron, Hector, M.A., Q.C., Toronto, M.P. for North Victoria, Ontario, one of the most distinguished of our public men, and a brilliant and able advocate, was born at Montreal on the 3rd of June, 1832. Our subject is descended from the Glen Dessery branch of the historic clan Cameron, of Inverness-shire, Scotland. He is the only surviving son of the late assistant-commissary general, Kenneth Cameron, and is a nephew of the late John Cameron, that clever politician, who from 1857 to 1861 represented Victoria in the old Canadian Assembly. Mr. Cameron had all the early advantages in education such as careful private tuition could confer, and when he was sufficiently prepared, he was sent to England to continue his education. He entered King's College, London, and here, we are informed, always held a high place among his many brilliant classmates. After he had gone through the course prescribed at this institution, he repaired to Dublin, and entered Trinity College as an under-graduate. He took the full course at this institution, revealing the same width and quickness of intellectual parts as he had shown earlier, and he duly graduated as B.A. in 1851. His education completed, he returned to Canada, and was articled as a law student in the office of Hon. John Hillyard Cameron, Toronto. We may say here that some time after his return to Canada he took the degree of M.A., at the University of Toronto. The same diligence that he exhibited in pursuit of his educational studies was noticeable when he entered upon his professional study, and at the Easter term, in 1854, he was called to the bar of Upper Canada. Later (1872) he was invested with the silk gown as Queen's counsel, and subsequently became a bencher of the Law Society of Ontario. On being admitted to the bar, he promptly entered upon the practice of his profession, establishing himself in the City of Toronto. Here his excellent education, his natural abilities, his attention to his office, his courtesy, and his general air of superiority, soon brought a considerable practice. From that time to the present that practice has continued to grow, not-withstanding that much of Mr. Cameron's attention has been devoted to political life, in which he takes a prominent part. He always felt himself drawn towards public life, and no sooner had he been admitted to the bar than he began to interest himself in the questions that engrossed the attention of the country. The first opening by which he might try his fortune occurred at the general election in 1867, in South Victoria. But the brilliant young barrister had not yet convinced the people that he was a man whom they ought to take pride in calling their representative, and he was defeated. He returned to his office and resumed his practice, saying, however, to his disconsolate friends, "Don't be dispirited: I am not. This defeat only gives edge to my ambition to get into parliament, and I shall be there yet." The words sounded prophetic, and time revealed them to be so. Five years rolled round, and another general election was proclaimed. In 1874 he was in the field again, speaking with vigour, wide knowledge, and dignified restraint, but once more was he unsuccessful. Still undaunted, he continued to practice his profession, watching public questions at the same time. But Mr. Cameron was certain now that he had not been beaten by fair means, and some of his friends filed a petition against the successful candidate, Mr. Maclennan. who was unseated. Both men again ap. pealed to the constituency, but the unseated member was again sent back. Again, too, was the case taken into the courts, and once more was Mr. Maclennan's election declared The strife was now ended, and Mr. void. Cameron was declared the duly elected member for North Victoria. Mr. Cameron has held this seat ever since, and opposition to him now seems little more than a matter of form. At once, on taking his place in the House, he began to give evidence of the parliamentary brilliancy which had been predicted of him. He is not a fluent or a flashy orator, but he is ready of speech, and his arguments are always forcible. sound and solid. He possesses marked energy, and there is little chance of that measure lagging or failing in the House to which he has once lent his interest. On constitutional questions he is one of the foremost authorities in the country; and it is upon men like him that Sir John A. Macdonaid is in the habit of falling back for those opinions upon constitutional and other questions, which, through a press of other business, he has not the time to form for himself. There does not seem just at present to be an opportunity for Mr. Cameron in the cabinet, where his solid abilities might be turned to still greater account for the Conservative cause, but the time can not be very far away when a portfolio will assuredly come to him. Mr. Cameron has conducted a number of very important legal cases before the Canadian courts, and he was selected by the Canadian government to argue the question of the boundary of Ontario before the Judicial Committee of the Imperial Privy Council. Mr. Cameron married in August, 1860. Clara, eldest daughter of William Boswell, barrister-atlaw, of Cobourg, and grand-daughter of Captain Honourable W. Boswell, R.N.

e

C

fo

18

N

ice

Be

ne

Hε

dis

jec

bec

Bei

Sir

sub

a ca

He

in t

Afr

to g ď'Ĥ

war,

tillo

Was

elev

and

he w

shell

He re

Scott, William, was born in Galt, in 1838. His father was James Scott, who came to Canada, from Scotland, in 1829, and having first settled in Dundas, afterwards removed to Galt. Mr. Scott was educated in Galt, and obtained a common school education. After leaving school he learned the building trade. In 1859 he went to the United States, where he remained for some time, and then he returned to Galt. and commenced business for himself in a planing mill, and in this occupation he has remained ever since. He was chief of the Fire Department for two years, and belongs to the order of Foresters, and holds the office of district chief ranger for Wellington and Waterloo. In religion, he is a highly regarded member of the Methodist communion; and in politics he gives in his adherence to the party led by the Honourable Edward Blake, believing that the principles upon which it rests its fortunes, and the policy which it propounds, are best for the interests of our country. He married, in 1862, Ellen Yates, who died in 1875. again married, on July 25th, 1882, Mrs. Mary Ann Laraway, of Galt. By his first marriage he had three children, and by the second marriage one child. Observing the devastation that intemperance is working everywhere in the land, Mr. Scott is an able and sincere advocate of total abstinence, and never loses an opportunity to forward, as far as he can, the great movement whose aim is the suppression of the widespread

ection

n the

wide

t once

inted,

ssion

time.

nat he

, and

gainst

nnan,

n ap-

seated

, too, l once

clared

l Mr.

lected

neron

sition

natter

in the

f the

been

tor a

beech,

cible.

arked

that

ase to

On f the

and it

Mac-

k for

other

other

n for t pre-

neron

ilities

nt for e can

will

n has

legal

d he

ment

ry of

ee of

neron

ldest

er-at-

er of

lt, in who

829,

fter-

Faucher de Saint Maurice, Narcisse Henri Edouard, Quebec, M.P.P. for Bellechasse, was born at Quebec, on the 18th April, 1844. He is a son of the late Narcisse Constantin Faucher de Saint Maurice, advocate, warden of the County of Bellechasse, seigneur of Beaumont, Vincennes, and Mont-a-peine, and of Catherine Henriette Mercier, both being members of distinguished old French families. Our subject was educated at the Seminary of Quebec, and he married in 1868, Josephine Berthelot D'Artigny, niece of the late Sir Louis H. Lafontaine, baronet. subject went to Mexico in 1864, and became a captain in the 4th Mexican Sharpshooters. He afterwards served with the same rank in the 2nd battalion of Light Infantry of Africa, and subsequently was aide-de-camp to general the Viscount Courtois Roussel d'Hurbal. He served through the entire war, was made prisoner at the siege of Saltillo, and was condemned to be shot, but he was afterwards exchanged. He was in eleven battles, two sieges (those of Oaxaco and Satillo), and thirty-two engagements: he was twice wounded by a ball and by a shell, and had one horse killed under him. He returned to Canada in 1866, and was for fourteen years clerk of Private Bills of the Legislative Council of the Province of Quebec. He has contributed largely to the newspaper press in France, Canada, and the United States. He is likewise author of the following works: "De Quebec à Mexico," two vols.; "A la Brunante," novels, one vol.; "Choses et autres," lectures, one vol.; "De Tribord à Babord," one vol.; "Promenades dans le Golfe Saint Laurent," (through the islands and maritime provinces) two vols.; "Procedures Parlementaires;" "Cours de Tactique;" "Relations de ce qui s'est passé aux fouilles faites lors de la demolition des casernes des Jesuites, à Quebec," and "Rapport sur l'Exposition Internationale de Geographie, Venice." He was editor in chief of Le Journal de Québec during one year and a half, and is now editor of Le Canadien. He was for some time librarian and a member of the Council of the Literary and Historical Society of Que-He is a member of la Societé des gens de Lettres de France, and its official representative in North America; is honorary chairman of the Press Association of the Province of Quebec; was commissioner for the Province of Quebec at the International Exposition of Geography at Venice, in 1881, where his books received a first class diploma; was the first president of the French literary section of the Royal Society of Can-He was created a knight of the imperial order of Gaudaloupe, by the Mexican emperor, and received the medal of the Mexican campaign from Napoleon III., and the military medal for valour and integrity given by the late Emperor Maximilian. He was created a knight of the Legion of Honour, 26th July, 1881, for exceptional military services rendered to the flag of France. He is a member, or corresponding member, of the geographical society of Paris, Bordeaux, and Marseilles, of l'Académie Française de Rouen, of la Sociéte Archeologique et Historique de la Saintonge. On the 2nd December, 1881, he was elected a member of the Quebec Legislature for the County of Bellechasse, and that seat he still occupies. He has travelled in France, England, Ireland, Switzerland, Italy, Austria, Corsica, Elba, Newfoundland, Labrador, through all Canada, the United States, Cuba, the Bahamas, Martinica, Mexico, St. Pierre and Miquelon.

Hutchinson, Charles, London; Ontario, County Crown Attorney, and Clerk of the Peace for the County of Middlesex, was born at Newcastle-on-Tyne, on the 22nd June, 1826. He is a son of Francis Hutchinson, of Newcastle-on-Tyne, physician, and Frances his wife, daughter of George Losh, of Soisy, near Rouen, France, and grand-child of John Losh, of Woodside, near Carlisle, England. Our subject's father was the only son of Captain Charles Hutchinson, of the East India Company's service, who was actively engaged in the great events of the latter part of the last century, and the beginning of the present one in India. He died eventually in Sumatra, where he held a military command during the period of Britain's rule in that island. His father (our subject's great-grandfather), who was an officer in the British army, was married in Halifax, Nova Scotia, and Charles Hutchinson has a letter in his possession written to his great-grandmother, by a brother officer of her husband, who was present at the Thus it will be seen that the family of our subject has, for a considerable time, had connection with Canada. The family of our subject's mother belongs to the landed gentry of Cumberland, and have owned an estate at Woodside, since the reign of King Stephen, as appears by a title deed of that reign. The name was formerly Arlosh. The property referred to consists of about 3,000 acres, beautifully situated about four miles from Carlisle, and fairly fertile, and wooded with ancestral oaks. The subject of this sketch went first to the Royal Grammar school, Newcastle, where Judge Elliot also received a portion of his education. Young Hutchinson afterwards attended a school near Durham; and thence entered another institution at Darlington. Family troubles, however, compelled him to leave school early, and earn his own living; and so it came to pass that before he had reached his fourteenth year, he accepted a situation in the office of the Walker Alkali Company, at Walker, near Newcastle. These works were established in the last century, by Lord Dundonald, father of the famous Admiral Lord Cochrane, and our subject's granduncle, John Losh, of Woodside, and were, at the time of his entering the office, the property of Miss Sarah Losh, the owner of Woodside and representative of the family. The life here, however, did not please him, although presenting fair prospects, and, therefore, having acciden-tally met a friend from Canada, Frederic Errington, a son of the vicar of Mitford, in Northumberland, whe had settled in Canada, and was at home on a visit to his parents, he determined to accompany him to Canada, with the view of farming.

In the year 1846 he sailed for Canada, and upon his arrival stayed upon Mr. Errington's farm at Westminster for a time. Six months at farming convinced him thorough. ly that the work was not suited either to his inclination or his aptitude; so having made a number of friends in London, he removed thither, and articled himself to the late H. C. R. Becher, Q.C., a barrister of good standing. After five years study, he was called to the bar (November, 1852), and was immediately taken into partnership with Mr. Becher, his legal preceptor. This association continued for three years, when it was dissolved by reason of our subject's departure for England. Mr. Hutchinson was a lieutenant in the first cavalry troop organ. ized in his neighbourhood. Mr. Rivers, then of the Bank of Upper Canada, but now manager of Molsons at Brockville, be-Our subject served only a ing captain. short period, as the work took up too much of his attention; and it was a time of profound peace. He was appointed county crown attorney in March, 1858, on the creation of the office, and succeeded Colonel. Askin as clerk of the peace in the fall of 1869. He joined St. George's Masonic lodge about thirty years ago; and is now a member of Kilwinning lodge, at London. Mr. Hutchinson is a steadfast churchman (Episcopal), as his forefathers have been. He has been twice married: first in Detroit. in 1858, to Frances Mary Street, sister of William P. R. Street, Q. C., of London, who died in childbed in 1861. He married, secondly, Annie Johnson, daughter of Henry A. Johnson, of the Post-Office department, London, by whom he has had eight children, six of which survive. In summoning up we may say, that if our subject did not set apart for himself the political objects for which many strive so hardly, that he has in a less ambitious way earned a respectable crown, and fairly placed himself among the industrious, capable and successful men' whom we must call representative.

1

at ej

ov

av

50

Ci

wł

re

at

La

Ιn

SOI

for

the

dis

For

wh

a ti

self

tion

loca

tion

the

Clar

that ware

Lafe

affai

a cor

and

it. w

ed

man polit

vinci

enong so he

Mirre

the

contr

Amer paper

of our

mande

this p

ner, F

other:

Clarke, Hon. Charles, Elora, Ontario, Lieutenant-Colonel, M.P.P. for Wellington Centre, Justice of the Peace, and Speaker of the Legislative Assembly of Ontario, was born in the grand old cathedraleity of Lincoln, England, within sound of the famous bell known as "Great Tom," on the 28th November, 1826. He was a pupil of Mr, afterwards the Rev. Thomas, Cooper, who became such a prominent figure in the Chartist movement in England. He subsequently attended an advanced institution at Waddington, Lincolnshire, under the tuition of George Boole, well known as the author of several mathematical works, and who became first professor of mathematics in Queen's College, Cork, Ireland. Before he was fourteen years of age, he entered the extensive establishment of John Norton, of Lincoln, to learn the business of a draper. Mr. Norton was a prominent Radical, and an intimate friend of John Bright and Richard Cobden; and it is not to be wondered at if a young man like our subject, with eves wide open for important public questions, and yearning for the day when his own voice might be heard, should carry away in his mind the foundations of a very sound and very enduring liberalism. Young Ciarke developed into manhood at a period when England was in the throes of a trade revolution, when the hand of the nation was at the throat of monopoly, and the Corn' Laws were on their trial before the people. In 1844, he emigrated to Canada, following some of his connections who had gone before a short time previously. He settled in the township of Canboro', in the Niagara district, and devoted himself to farming. Four years later, he removed to Hamilton, where he found commercial employment for a time. Whilst so engaged, he amused himself during leisure hours in writing descriptions of the scenery about Elora, for the The merit of these contributions attracted the attention of the editor of the Hamilton Journal and Express, and Mr. Clarke was solicited for contributions to that journal, and a little while afterwards became its sub-editor. Baldwin and Lafontaine were now at the head of affairs, and the paper gave the administration a cordial support. In a few months the young journalist got control of the paper, and thereafter during his connection with it, which lasted till 1850, It was conducted with vigor and marked skill for a man of such little experience in colonial politics. A semi-weekly journal, in a provincial town, was not a vehicle important enough for the conveyance of his thoughts, so he began to contribute to the Toronto Mirror, and he was requested by Mr. (now the Honourable) William Macdougall, to contribute a series of articles "to the North American. These brilliant, sound and able papers appeared under the title, "Planks of our Platform," and very naturally commanded wide attention. He likewise, about this period, contributed to the Dundas Banner, Paris Star, Toronto Examiner, and other reform journals. In 1852, the Back-

and

ing-

Six

igh-

his

ade

red

late

ood

was

was

rith

880-n it

de-

was

an-

าคท ωx

be-

r a

nch

ro-

ntv

the

nel

of

nic

· 3.

m,

an

it,

of

οf

ad In btiy, ed nid ewoodsman was started under his political editorship at Elora, and it did sturdy service in the cause of reform and general political progress. About this time, too, (1852) Mr. Clarke married Emma, daughter of James Kent, of Selkirk, in the County This worthy lady died in of Haldimand. 1878, and Mr. Dent, in the "Canadian Portrait Gallery," pays this tribute to her worth:—" Mrs. Clarke was truly a helpmeet. She was possessed of remarkable activity of body, was a clear and incisive thinker, a pleasant, not profuse, conversationalist, and a mother among ten thousand. Her broad, common-sense views, and her cheerful application of them in the affairs of everyday life, were of service to her husband in facing many of the inevitable difficulties that arise during every long and busy public life " There were five children by this marriage; and the only son, Charles Kirk, who, as a student, was on the medical staff of the Asylum for Insane, Toronto, for several years, and afterwards medical assistant at Hamilton and Kingston, is now superintendent of Rockwood Asylum for Insane in the latter city. In 1881, Mr. Clarke married a second time, and became united to Rose, eldest daughter of James Halley, of Ponsonby, Ontario. In 1857, Elora was incorporated, and Mr. Clarke elected to the council. He was appointed reeve in the following year, and for many terms afterwards occupied a seat in the county council of Wellington. He was a school trustee for several years, and served for a considerable time on the Elora High School board, always evincing a zealous interest, in educational affairs. In all matters relating to the progress of the town or his own county, he has taken an active interest; but he is none the less a friend of the entire province, because his own constituency is so dear to him. In 1861, he was appointed lieutenant in a volunteer rifle company at Elora; in 1866 he became captain, and served for three months at Chatham and Point Edward, during the Fenian raid. He was gazetted senior major of the 30th Wellington battalion of Rifles, and, later, was promoted to the command. He is a zealous, active, efficient, and popular militia officer. At the general election of 1871, he was elected by a majority of six hundred and seventy-four votes, for Centre Wellington, to the Ontario Legislature, defeating Mr. McLaren, a Reformer nominated by a Conservative convention; in 1875 he was reelected by acclamation; in 1879 was reelected by a majority of six hundred and sixty, and was re-elected at the last general As Speaker (which position he accepted in 1880, on the retirement of Hon. R. M. Wells, and to which he was re-elected without opposition in 1884), his course has been characterized by a judicial impartiality, prompt and sound judgment, and a dignity and a firmness which, while never standing in the way of legitimate freedom of debate, have always kept discussion with-As a writer, Colonel in the proper limits. Clarke is bright, pointed, terse and vigor-ous. There is a literary flavour in his style, and a musical balance to his sentences. In repartee he is quick, and sharp as a needle; and in debate is ready, interesting, and effective.

Gall, George, Toronto, the well-known Contractor and Builder, was born in the town of Peterhead, Aberdeenshire, Scotland, in the year 1840. His father was George Gall, a gentleman of sterling qualities, who pursued the occupation of architect, contractor, etc., in his native country, his mother's name was Isabella Chalmers. His father died in 1872. George Gall, the subject of this sketch, received a common school education, and remained under tutors till he reached his fifteenth year. Then he was apprenticed to John Chalmers, to learn the trade of carpenter and He served an apprenticeship of four years, and he then left and went to the City of Aberdeen. Here he worked at his trade until 1861, when he left Scotland, and came to Canada, settling in St. John, New Brunswick. He afterwards made trial of his fortune in Woodstock, a town just then budding on the banks of the St. John river; but he was not attracted by the prospects that the place held out to him. In 1863 he had grown somewhat sick of New Brunswick, and sailed for Boston, which was only a short passage by boat from St. Here he remained a year and a half, and then he felt a yearning to go home again to Scotland. In a little while we find him on board ship, homeward bound. In 1864 he landed in the City of Aberdeen, where he remained, and worked at his calling, for the next seven years. But in the year 1871 the desire re-arose in him to see what fortune had to bestow upon him in the new world. So he went on board a vessel once more, and took passage for New York. In this active and rapidly expanding metropolis he plied his trade for three years; but at the end of this period he turned his face toward Canada. Arriving in Toronto he resolved to establish a business; and he began as builder and contractor: He was a man of good judgment, and being ever on the alert, everything began to fare well with him in his new undertaking. Success had been his in so liberal a measure that in 1880 he bought out the planing mills. and factory belonging to the estate of William Elliot. In 1883 he entered into partnership with Thomas McCraken, but this partnership was dissolved two years later (1885); and Mr. Gall, our subject, found himself manager and proprietor of the entire concern. Mr. Gall has travelled through the principal cities of the United States as well as Scotland. He is a member of the Presbyterian faith, and is manager and elder of the College street Presbyterian church, Toronto. He has never concerned himself much with politics; but he is nevertheless a staunch Reformer. He was married in 1871 to Maria Mark, daughter of George Mark, of Strichan, Aberdeenshire, Scotland. By this marriage there is a family of six children. For integrity in business, and for success, he is esteemed as are all worthy men.

SHd till ob oH mN of an

Isl

ori

loy sul

une

ter.

pro

of

stre

this

inot

his a

Tor

ting

pron

freq

secui

ships

easil

the y

men stinct

dissa

prom

move him.

afford

yearn

pect,

attach

came

contin

Subsec Halifa

that jo

1861

Bourin

to thè

was ap

writer,

pointed

In 1879

Robinson, Christopher Blackett. Toronto, the editor and proprietor of the Canada Presbyterian newspaper, was born in the township of Thorah, Ontario county, in 1837. His father was born in London, England, but was educated in Scotland, and remained there for many years; and his mother was of Highland descent, and belonged to the clan Gunn. Mr. Robinson, junior, entered journalism at the age of twenty years, and edited in Beaverton, for a couple of years, the Canadian Post. In 1861, he removed this paper to the town of Lindsay, where he continued to publish it for about ten years, during which time, through able management, the Post became a valuable newspaper property, taking high rank among local weeklies. In 1871, Mr. Robinson sold out his interest in the Post, and removed to Toronto, where he began the publication of the Canada Presbuterian, which, under his energetic and wise control, speedily attained great success. The Presbyterian, without pretending to be in any sense the official organ of the Presbyterian church, has won for itself high appreciation, as its large subscription list testines, as a forcible exponent of the general public opinions of that body, and one of the recognized vehicles of intelligence specially affecting its interests, and indicative of its progress. Mr. Robinson is also the printer and publisher of The Week, a weekly literary journal of considerable merit.

Bourinot, John George, Honorary Secretary of the Royal Society of Canada, Fellow of the Statistical Society of London, Honorary Corresponding Secretary of the Royal Colonial Institute, Clerk of the House of Commons, Canada, and author of several important works and essays, was born at Sydney, Nova Scotia, on the 24th of October, 1837. He is a sun of the late He is a son of the late Honourable J. Bourinot, Senator of the Dominion, and grandson of Judge Marshall, of His mother was a daughter Nova Scotia. of the late Judge Marshall, well known as an advocate of temperance, and for his works on religious and social topics. His father's family came originally from Normandy, were Huguenots, and settled in the Island of Jersey. The Marshalls were Irish The father of Judge Marshall originally. was a captain in the British army, and a loyalist. In his early days, our distinguished subject received his intellectual training under the tutorship of the Rev. W. Y. Porter, at Sydney. The preceptor saw much promise in the lad, and often spoke highly of his quickness of perception, and of the strength of his intellectual grasp. this period of tutorship was over, Mr. Bourinot's father conceived the idea of sending his son to the university of Trinity College, At college young Bourinot distinguished himself, and he always was a prominent figure in his class. His industry frequently called forth admiration; and he secured the Wellington and other scholarships. When he left college, he could not easily decide upon a calling. It was with the young graduate as it has been with all men possessed of a pervading literary in-He was restive, and looked with dissatisfaction at any course of life that promised only a drudgery and a routine, removed from the dear aspiration that was in The newspaper press has always afforded a sort of escapement for literary yearning; and as was quite natural to expect, to the newspaper press the young man attached himself in the meantime. He became parliamentary reporter and editor, continuing in such position for some time. Subsequently, in 1860, he established the Halifax Reporter, and was chief editor of that journal for a number of years. 1861 to the year of confederation, Mr. \mathbf{From} Bourinot was likewise chief official reporter to the Nova Scotia Assembly. In 1868, he was appointed to the Senate as shorthand writer, and this office he retained until appointed second clerk assistant in April, 1873. In 1879, he was promoted to the first clerk the scheme.

ctor:

be-

n to

ing.

sure

nills.

Vil-

art.-

this

ater

und

tire

ugh

ag.

the

and

ned

er-

ar-

of

re,

ily

88,

all

tt.

hé

in ·

in

n,

nd

iis

n,

ο£

or

οf

iŧ

assistantship. In February, 1879, he was appointed first clerk assistant to the House; and on the 18th December, 1880, he became chief clerk of the House of Commons. Through the greater part of his life Mr. Bourinot has been a tireless literary workman, and his articles are remembered by all who took interest in the discussion of important public questions. His essay on the "Intellectual Development of Canada," which appeared in the pages of the Canadian Monthly, was a careful, elaborate and valuable treatise on the intellectual development of the colonies as an unwedded brotherhood, and of Canada subsequent to the union. He has contributed to many leading papers of this continent, to the Toronto Mail in its inception, and to the New York World. He was for years one of the best known contributors to the Canadian Monthly. His desire has always been to create a love for Canadian subjects. has contributed papers to the Royal Colonial Institute, which have attracted much attention. One of these papers, which referred to the Federation of the empire, was deemed so important, that Justin Mc-Carthy devoted a whole chapter of his "History of our own Times" to its consideration. An article in Blackwood, (to which he has been one of the very few Canadian contributors), on the "Progress of the New Dominion," was reviewed by the London Times as "the best article that has yet appeared on the subject in a British periodical." He has also written other papers in the Westminster Review, the London Quarterly, the Scottish Review, and other leading British periodicals, with the view of making Canada better known to the British world. Of late years he has devoted his leisure time for the most part to constitutional and parliamentary studies, and has written a large work on "The Practice and Procedure of Parliament, with a review of the origin and growth of parliamentary institutions in the Dominion of Canada," which has been most favourably reviewed in England and Canada, and has already been accepted as a constitutional authority in every depend-ency of the Crown. The London Times, in a three-column review, wrote most approvingly of the work, and the Australian press has also noticed it in very eulogistic Mr. Bourinot is an advocate of the grand idea of Imperial Federation, and a member of the executive committee appointed at a public meeting in Montreal, in May, 1885, with the object of promoting

Wright, Rev. Peter, B.D., Stratford, Ontario, was born at Westruther, Berwickshire, Scotland, October 15th, 1839. His parents, Peter Wright and Helen Cockburn, were persons of unblemished character, and deservedly held in high esteem in the circle of their acquaintance. Mr. Wright received his early education at the parish school of his native place. Being favoured from childhood with vigorous health and a strong mind eager for knowledge, he made the best of his advantages under the vigilant eye of his teacher and the fostering care of a Chris-Before he had attained his matian home. jority, he took leave of his native country and arrived in Canada in 1859. For two years after he engaged in agricultural pursuits, and had sole charge of a farm in the neighbourhood of Cobourg. During the short time spent in this pursuit, Mr. Wright followed his natural inclination for study, and by commendable perseverance in attending evening classes, qualified himself to become a public school teacher. Having passed the prescribed examinations, he obtained a certificate, and for two years devoted himself with much enthusiasm and success to the duties of that profession, while at the same time he prepared for matriculation in Toronto University. While pursuing his course as an undergraduate, with the ability and force of character for which he has since been distinguished, and after he had entered upon theological studies, circumstances constrained him to turn aside for a time to his former profession of For three years he acted as printeaching. cipal of the High School at Norwood, and for one year as principal of the High School at St. Mary's, Ontario. In presiding over both institutions he fully evinced, by his methods of instruction and discipline, his eminent skill and proficiency as an educator, and received the clearest testimony to this effect from the Inspector and trustees. Had he seen fit to continue in this line there can be no doubt that he would have done much to advance the interests of higher education, and would have speedily enjoyed merited promotion. But he felt irresistibly called to the office of the Christian ministry and consecrated his life to the work of preaching the gospel. He accordingly withdrew from the High School of St. Mary's, returned to Knox College, Toronto, and completed his theological curriculum with distinction in 1870, and was, in due course, licensed and ordained as a minister of the Presbyterian church. His popular pulpit powers at once attracted attention, and in August of the same year he was settled as pastor of Erskine church, Ingersoll. His flock became much attached to him, and it would seem as if he were destined to remain among them. But the eyes of other congregations were turned towards him, and after being twice called to Chalmers' church, Quebec, he vielded to this importunate solicitation and was translated to that city in February. 1875. His ministry there was productive of much good. There was a marked increase in the attendance and membership of the church, and much religious interest awak. ened, especially among the young. Mr. Wright's next charge was Chalmers' church. Montreal, which he assumed towards the end of 1877. During a pastorate of over three years he was instrumental in extend. ing and consolidating the congregation, and in removing, in part, a heavy burden of debt which rested upon the church property. In addition to his ministerial duties, he rendered efficient service in the Presbyterian College, Montreal, as a lecturer in classics and mathematics, and at the same time entered with earnestness and zeal into the missionary operations of the Presbytery. It appears from the statistics of the General Assembly that the congregation of Strat-ford, of which he is now pastor, is steadily advancing in all respects under his care. As a theologian, Mr. Wright is Augustinian or Calvinistic, and has not been given to change. As a preacher, he is clear, forcible, and eloquent in style, and thoroughly evangelical in matter. As a pastor, Mr. Wright is diligent, tender and faithful, and readily gains the confidence and esteem of his parishioners.

Smith, William John, Alderman, was born in Toronto, on the 8th Oct., 1852. His parents were John Smith and Mary Mc-Garahan. His father was born in Toronto, on the 13th of September, 1811, and was thus one of its early pioneers. His father, who is still alive and in the enjoyment of good health, adopted farming as a trade. liam John Smith, the subject of our sketch, received his education in Toronto, first from private tutors, then in the public schools, and completed it at the academy of Mr. Orr, at that time on Mutual After leaving school, he entered the civil service as clerk in the Post Office department, and remained in the government employ until 1883, when he and C. J. Smith joined as partners, for the purpose of carrying on a wholesale wood and fuel business, which they established on Berkeley street, near the Esplanade, and at the the In r land man dau of E drer secretapa

hom

thi

Ιn

ald

Co

WO

tion

son

Mon the Jose His City busin the a ject, the C took Hyac a bril

lege

as his study one o firms the ba partne bault, profess an unit boiler York, with the present of the pres of the Rainvi firm of demise to Duh sent na & Marc among torical

Mr. D

torical of his unb profession his e this place the firm still continues to trade. In 1885, Mr. Smith was elected one of the aldermen for St. Matthew's ward, in the City Council, and is now a member of the water works, the fire and gas, exhibition and reception committees. He belongs to the Freemasons, and was also at one time a member of the Orange order. He has travelled through the whole of Canada and the United States. In religion he belongs to the Church of England, and in politics is a Conservative. He married, in 1872, Julia Blanche Kerrison. daughter of the late John David Kerrison, of England. By this lady he has two children. He is exceedingly popular, and the secret of his popularity lies in his ready, capable intellect, and a great fund of bonhommie. In society, Mr. Smith is a very decided favourite.

ne

m

ng

ns

hg

c,

bn

of

Duhamel, Joseph, Barrister, Q.C., Montreal, was born in the city just named, on the 20th January, 1836. His parents were Joseph Duhamel and Domethilda Mousset. His father was a worthy merchant, in the City of Montreal, and is now retired from business, and in his eighty-fourth year. At the age of seven, young Duhamel, our subject, entered the preparatory department of the College of St. Therese, and subsequently took a full course at the College of St. Hyacinthe. At eighteen he had completed a brillant classical career at the Jesuits' College in Montreal. He then selected law as his profession. He passed his term of study in the office of Badgley & Abbott, one of the most eminent Montreal legal firms at that time. Upon his admission to the bar on the 7th April, 1857, he formed a partnership with the late Cyrille Archambault, a gentleman of great reputation in the profession, who whilst travelling came to an untimely death by the explosion of the boiler of the steamer St. John, in New York. He afterwards formed a partnership with Gustave Drolet, now retired from the practice of his profession, and a chevalier of the Legion of Honour, France. Mr. Duhamel afterwards became the head of the firm of Duhamel, Rainville, Rinfret & Rainville. The acceptance by one of this firm of a superior court judgeship, and the demise of another, caused it to be changed to Duhamel, Pagnuelo & Rainville. The present name of the firm is Duhamel, Rainville & Marceau. Owing to his high reputation among his fellow countrymen, his great oratorical qualities, knowledge of the law, and his unbounded energy and devotion to his profession, Mr. Duhamel, almost immediately on his entering the bar, commanded one of the largest practices of the Montreal bar. His legal career has been both useful to his countrymen and lucrative to himself. one of the legal advisers of the Grand Trunk Railway Company, the Canada Atlantic Railway Company, the Jacques Cartier Union Railway, and has also a large commercial practice representing many wholesale houses, etc. An alderman at nineteen, Joseph Duhamel had already served two years in the city council of Montreal before he reached his majority, an example of popular favour unknown in the history of the municipal government of Montreal. In those days the question of representation according to nationality in the city council was very prominent. The residents of St. Mary's ward solicited Mr. Duhamel to become a candidate; and he was relected over the head of many older aspirants by a large majority. Mr. Duhamel did not disappoint the sanguine anticipation of those who had brought him forward. Indeed so thoroughly satisfied were they with their choice that when his term of office had expired, his contituents strongly urged him to present himself again, but he declined on account of his professional duties. Some years afterwards, yielding to the solicitations of his friends, leading merchants, lawyers, etc., of the Montreal east ward, he was re-elected for three years more, and during this time he devoted himself with much zeal and assiduity to the interest of Montreal. During the last twenty years, Mr. Duhamel has been repeatedly solicited to become a candidate for the mayoralty. In 1884 again, a large and influential deputation of men representing all nationalities and professions waited upon him, and urged him to allow himself to be put in nomination, but his professional duties requiring all his time, he declined. In politics Mr. Duhamel has always been a Liberal, and to his assistance both by pen, and speech on the public platforms, the liberal party is under very considerable obligations. Immediately on his leaving college, he took an active part in electoral struggles. At twenty, he was the victim of his devotion to his party at an election which took place for the Alma division, a thorough conservative constituency. At a meeting of the whole division which took place at Sault-au-Recollet, he had in spite of the threats of a crowd, composed of several thousand persons, succeeded in getting on the platform, and when there, he spoke so successfully that the enemies of the Liberal party to put an end to the discussion, suddenly overthrew the hustings and attacked him with sticks, and fired several pistol shots at him, and left him for dead on the spot. When attended to, it was found that two of his ribs and his right arm had been broken, a large wound had been received on his head, and in consequence of which he was confined to his bed during several weeks. Mr. Duhamel has repeatedly been asked to become a candidate for legislative honours, but has always preferred to devote himself to the law, a career in which his energy and ability have been crowned with great success. On the 28th of April, 1882, as a mark of respect, as well as an acknowledgment of his talents, and of his faithfulness to his party, in the Province of Quebec, Mr. Duhamel was unanimously elected president of the Reform Association. It is not unreasonable to suppose that the sterling qualities, which have enabled him to fulfil so well his duties will win success in a still more extensive field of action, and should he ultimately consent to enter the political arena, he will, no doubt attain the position which his ability seems to mark out for him. Mr Duhamel travelled through Europe, during the year He was married in 1859, to Alphonsine Masson, daughter of the late Damase Masson, who was formerly one of the most eminent wholesale merchants of the City of Montreal, and one of its most useful and enterprising citizens. Our subject is, a Roman catholic.

Gisborne, Frederic Newton, Engineer and Electrician, was born at Broughton. Lancashire, England, March 8th, 1824. From a late publication entitled "Derby and Derbyshire Worthies," we take the following extract:—The family of Gisborne is perhaps one of the oldest and most honoured of the county "trees" of England. of Saxon origin, and was in the old days spelt "Gisburn." For a very long while they lived in Yorkshire, where they held a large estate, known as "Gisburn Park." During the 15th century, however, they left the shire of many acres, and settled in Derbyshire and London. In an old register in the church of St. Alkmund, Derby, are recorded the names of the children of Thomas Gisborne, accompanied by the dates of 1539 and 1541 respectively, whilst in Staveley church, there is a monument containing an inscription to the "Rev. John Gisborne, rector of Staveley, and prebendary of Durham, and his three children, General Gisborne, Dr. Gisborne (physician to His Majesty King George III.), and the Rev. Francis Gisborne." During their long connection with the county, the Gisbornes have been prominently associated with many public movements of importance, several of their number greatly distinguished themselves for their philanthropy and enlight: ened service. The Rev. F. Gisborne left large bequests to different county institutions, and founded many charities. He also left the princely sums of £10,000 to Greenwich hospital, and £20,000 to St. Peter's college, Cambridge, with which fund "Gisborne Court" was built and some scholarships established. The late Rev. Thomas Gisborne, prebend of Durham, whose eldest son was M.P. for North Derbyshire, and for Carlow, Ireland, and his brother, John Gisborne, of Darley Dale, were widely known and respected. Several members of the family were Cambridge wranglers and mayors of Derby, and have acquired a family connection with the Poles, Batemans. Byrons, Babingtons, Darwins, Evans, and other houses of historic note. \mathbf{F} rederic Newton Gisborne, the subject of this biography, is grandson of John, and eldest son of Hartley P. Gisborne, of Darley Dale, Derbyshire; and on his mother's side received his second name from her famous ancestor, Sir Isaac Newton. He was educated by the Rev. R. Pidcock, vicar of Warslow, Staffordshire. Dr. Cowan, Toxleth Park, Liverpool, and Rev. W. Thompson, of Cheadle, Cheshire, assisted by special instructors in mathematics, civil engineering, botany, etc. In January, 1842. young Gisborne started upon a journey round the world, and during a tour of three and a half years visited the Cape de Verd and other Atlantic ocean islands, Australia, New Zealand and the Society islands, where he remained some time, taking an active part in withstanding the French occupation of those islands. He quitted Tahiti when the natives were defeated and Queen Pomare was banished to Bola-Bola. He then visited Pitcarn's Island, the romantic home of the descendants of the mutineers of H. M.S. Bounty, where he was the guest of October Christian, the first child born upon that island. After touching at several other groups he arrived at the Sandwich islands, visiting during subsequent explorations Mouna Roa, the grandest volcano in the world, on the island of Hawail. Thence he sailed to the Gulf of California, and landing upon the coast, rode across the continent to Vera Cruz, via the City of Mexico. He then travelled through Yucatan and Guatamela. and being from youth a keen sportsman and unerring rifle shot, had many stirring adventures during his travels, which terminated

pro

spr

hon

acti

pan

son

gra

twe

arri

med

St.

184

and

elec

Stat

first

Con

the

chan

lead

Ame

was

ing

adas

will

Was :

ciatio

wick

the r sessid

the p catio

sion

of N

from

upon

ferre

repre

to, ar

ria t durin

shoes

dragg

gan ac

within award

iation.

Mr. G

operat

during

the dis

able,

prior t

Hon.

in seve

ing ele

sulated

arrival

vocated

telegra

protem, by his return to England during the spring of 1845. Finding, upon arriving home, that family affairs necessitated prompt action and example, Mr. Gisborne, accompanied by his younger brother Hartley (who, some years later, became Director of telegraphs in Egypt, where he resided for nearly twenty years) sailed for Canada, where they arrived during July, 1845, and almost immediately afterwards purchased a farm near St. Eustache, where they resided until May, 1847. Finding such pursuit uncongenial, and noting the successful advent of the electric telegraph in England and the United States, F. N. Gisborne became one of the first operators of the Montreal Telegraph Company, and for that company opened the first station at Quebec, in the old Merchants' Exchange. Associated with the leading men of Quebec, the British North American Electric Telegraph Association was then formed for the purpose of connecting the Maritime Provinces with the Canadas, and with the liberal consent and good will of the Montreal company, Mr. Gisborne was appointed general manager of the association, and was deputed to visit New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, where he explained the new science to the legislatures, then in session, and lectured before the public on the practical value of telegraphic communication throughout the continent. His mission was so successful that the government of Nova Scotia undertook to erect a line from Halifax to Amherst conditionally upon Mr. Gisborne's services being transferred to them by the association which he represented. This request was finally agreed to, and Mr. Gisborne returned to Quebec ria the north shore of New Brunswick. during which journey he walked on snowshoes between Campbelltown and Metis, dragging over 100 lbs. weight on a toboggan across the Gaspé mountains, 108 miles, within three days. For this service he was awarded a handsome gratuity by the association. From the spring of 1849 to 1851. Mr. Gisborne was superintendent and chief operator of the government lines at Halifax. during which period he was observant of the discovery of gutta-perch as an imperishable, subaqueous, insulating material, prior to which he was associated with the Hon. F.O. I. Smith, of the state of Maine, in several practical experiments for conveying electric signals through submerged uninsulated metallic circuits. Shortly after his arrival in Halifax, Mr. Gisborne strongly advocated an attempt being made to establish telegraphic communication with the Island

οf

nı-

ht:

eft

tu-

lso

'n-

r's

ar-

as

nd

 $_{
m nn}$

ly of

s, id ic on of Newfoundland, and by permission of the government of Nova Scotia, during the winter of 1850-51, visited that Island, with this special object in view. When there he contracted to erect a land line between St. John's and Carbinear, via Harbour Grace, which he completed that summer; and started on September 1st, 1851, with a party of six men to survey on foot a practical route accross the widest and most rugged section of Newfoundland, from St. John's westward to Cape Ray. Parting with his men, mid-way at Long harbour, whence they returned by boat, Mr. Gisborne accomplished the remaining two-thirds of the journey, accompanied by two Indians, one of whom died within a few days, from the hardships encountered. During the winter session of 1851-52, the legislature of the island granted to F. N. Gisborne, and his associates, a telegraph construction charter, with exclusive privileges for the term of thirty years, and, by permission, with most flattering testimonials from the govern-ment of Nova Scotia, Mr. Gisborne resigned his superintendency, and a good salary to carry out the enterprise, which he had himself projected and initiated. He then visited New York, and there obtained an assurance of all the capital required from Horace B. Tibbetts, and D. B. Holbrooke, of New York, and from Thos. A. Dexter. and General John Tyler, of Boston; and upon his return to Halifax, laid before the Hon. Joseph Howe, the then astounding and apparently chimerical project of a transatlantic submarine cable connecton, between Newfoundland and Ireland. The annexed letter from Mr. Howe, when Secretary of State for Canada, and the published cor-respondence between I. W. Brett, and Mr. Gisborne, in the early part of 1852, (one year after the laying of the first ocean cable, between England and France), are proofs positive, that to Mr. Gisborne, and to Canada is due the credit of the conception and primary practical movement for transatlantic telegraphy, and if further evidence be required, note an appendix to the Rev. M. Harvey's text book of the history of Newfoundland, Mr. Harvey being personally conversant with the enterprise from its earliest initiation. On the 20th of November, 1852, Mr. Gisborne, under exceptionably difficult circumstances, laid the first ocean cable on this side of the Atlantic, connecting Prince Edward Island with New Brunswick, and when occupied with several hundred labourers, during the following spring, of 1853, in constructing the land line across Newfoundland, the New York capitalists disagreed among themselves, as to a division of their respective interests in the undertaking, and stopped payment, thus leaving Mr. Gisborne responsible for $50,000 of indebtedness, over and above the proceeds of his private property, in sealing vessels and land, which he at once utilized in part payment of the company's liabilities. The government of Newfoundland, also assisted in paying labourers' wages in a most noble and liberal manner, relying upon Mr. Gisborne's assurance, that he could and would re-organize the enterprise. In accordance with such promise, Mr. Gisborne again visited New York, during the winter of 1853-54, and there, for the first time, met Cyrus W. Field, who was at that period, a licensed junk dealer and a wellto-do dealer in rags, etc., for paper manufacturing, but had no connection with telegraphy whatsoever. After examining Mr. Gisborne's plans, and reading his correspondence with Mr. Brett, Mr. Field was greatly impressed with the immense importance of the enterprise, and their after negotiations terminated by Mr. Gisborne returning to St. John's, Newfoundland, accompanied by Cyrus W. Field and his brother Dudley, the well-known lawyer, when the legislature, per Mr. Gisborne's petition, cancelled the original charter to himself and his associates, and granted a new one to the New York, Newfoundland, and London Telegraph Company, incorporating Peter Cooper, Moses Taylor, Marshall O. Roberts, Chandler White, Cyrus W. Field, and Frederick Newton Gisborne, with extended privileges and exclusive rights during a period of fifty years from that date. Mr. Gisborne was appointed chief engineer, but, for good and sufficient reasons, resigned within a month, and during the remainder of that year travelled throughout the United States. After great waste of capital in an unsuccessful attempt to construct the land line across Newfoundland, the management of Mr. Field's brother Mathew and other American engineers, Mr. Gisborne was solicited and again accepted the chief engineership, and by the first week of October, 1856, completed the work to the entire satisfaction of the company, receiving from the venerable philanthropist, Peter Cooper, as president of the enterprise, a flattering testimonial as to his skill, energy, and integrity. Mr. Gisborne then engaged with Cyrus W. Field and the late Sir Edward Archibald, British Consul at New York, to proceed to India, and there, upon joint account, secure privileges and pecun. iary assistance for submarine cable connection with Bombay, ria the Red Sea, with further eastern extension; but, upon arriving in London, he became acquainted with facts, re C. W. Field's private negotiations with Mr. Brett, re transatlantic connec. tions, which, among other reasons, induced him to abandon the contemplated journey and all connection with telegraphy, pro time That Mr. Gisborne committed a grave error by abandoning a profession in which he had become eminent, he is now free to allow. In May, 1857, he returned to Newfoundland, and at a public dinner was presented with a valuable statuette in silver, representative of science and perseverance, and bearing the following inscription:-" As a testimonial of the high esteem entertained for him by the community of Newfoundland, and for the indomitable energy he displayed in traversing the hitherto unexplored regions of the island, preparatory to the introduction of the electric telegraph, as well as to mark the universal admiration of his successful endeavours and scientific ability in carrying out that enterprise, which he him-Labor omnia vincit. 1856." self projected. For several years he afterwards devoted himself to mining pursuits, during which time he explored the island eastward around the coast, from Cape Ray to the Straits of Belle Isle, being associated in several ven. tures with his staunch friend, the late Hon. Charles Fox Bennett, at one time premier of the colony. While actively engaged in such pursuits, he met with a severe gun shot wound, which for some time incapacitated him from physically arduous explorations, and returning to London devoted his attention to scientific pursuits and inventions. While there he had the honour of representing the interests of Newfoundland, as acting Commissioner, at the great exhibition of 1862, and three years later again, represented that colony at the great Paris exhibition of 1865. He was also appointed London Agent for mines and minerals by the government of Nova Scotia, and, during 1869, again crossed the Atlantic to investigate the gold quartz leads of that province. Meanwhile, during his residence in London, Mr. Gisborne was a regular exhibitor at the soirees of the Royal Society, and was noted for the variety and value of his inventions, for which nine medals have been awarded. Among these were :- His electric, pneumatic, and mechanical ship signals; anticorrosive and anti-fouling compositions for the bottoms of iron ships; the electric re-

at

ap lat

lat

ca

arı

dia

Hi

rei 18t

the

chi

tin

lar

vel

Sch

con

Por

ed

fort

mer

bur

prid

valu

hav

ciou

que

Gist

an a

are

in N

tenti

Mr.

cepte

Gove

the

The

whic

tin's

made

servi

milit

durir

ent l

flatte ernm

fully

usefu

ready

upon a pun

N. Gi

Alida

I.E.

he ha Edwar

early : Mr. G

cording target, improvements in gas illumin-We may here add that his semation, etc. aphore was awarded a gold medal at our late Fishery Exhibition in London, his latest inventions being an anti-induction cable, an iron telegraph pole with iron cross arms, which have been adopted by the Canadian Government for use on their northwest prairies, and an improved telephone. His recent maps of Canada are also in high repute. During his visit to Nova Scotia in 1869, Mr. Gisborne became interested in the coal fields of Cape Breton, where, as chief engineer of an English company, which inally expended over three millions of dollars in that country, he established and developed the Reserve, Lorway, Emery, and Schooner Pond collieries; superintended the construction of the Sydney to Schooner Pond railway; and, as contractor, constructed the Lorway to Louisburg railway, in all forty-two miles in length, with two immense shipping piers at Sydney and Louisburg harbours. The then existing high price of coal, and anticipated increasing value of coal fields throughout the world, having proved to be temporary and fallacious, the company collapsed, and, consequent upon such unlooked for disaster, Mr. Gisborne had to begin the world afresh, at an age when the best energies of most men are on the wane. For a season gold mining in Nova Scotia continued to occupy his attention, but, prospects being discouraging, Mr. Gisborne, in 1879, was offered and accepted the superintendency of the Dominion Government Telegraph and Signal Service, the position which he at present occupies. The successful and satisfactory manner in which he has carried out the Hon. Dr. Fortin's gulf cable scheme, reorganized and made remunerative the British Columbia service, and rapidly constructed first-class military telegraph lines in the North-west, during the late rebellion, is a matter of present history; and his numerous and most flattering testimonials from the various governments and companies whom he has faithfully served, are the best evidences of the usefulness of his career. Mr. Gisborne is a ready speaker, and has lectured frequently upon a great variety of subjects. He is also a pungent writer of press articles. Mr. F. N. Gisborne married, 1st September, 1850, Alida Ellen, second daughter of the late I. E. Starr, Halifax, Nova Scotia, by whom he had two children. She died in Prince Edward Island, January, 1854, at the early age of nineteen; and in April, 1857, Mr. Gisborne married Henrietta, youngest un.

iee-

ith

riv-

ith

ons

ec-

ced

iey

m.

ror

ad

In

nd,

hа

ive

he

ial

Ьy

for

in

ns

ıc-

to

ıc-

in

11-

ed

ch

ıd

οf

T

n

daughter of the late Francis Hernaman, of Broadmead, Newton-Abbot, Devon, England, by whom he has four children now The eldest, Francis H., is one of the barristers in the Department of Justice, Ottawa; and the second, Hartley, is district superintendent of the Government Telegraph Service in Manitoba and the North-West provinces. Mr. Gisborne is one of the original fellows nominated to the Royal Society of Canada, He is a member of the Institution of Engineers and Electricians, London, England, and has from time to time been a member of the Society of Arts and other scientific institutions. He is a member of the Church of England. and broad and liberal in his views. thoroughly conversant with the resources of the Dominion, having resided in and travelled over every province of Canada, has been the direct means of introducing a very large amount of capital and much skilled labour into the country, and has undoubtedly at heart the best interests of the Dominion with which he has been so intimately connected for over forty years. The following is the letter from the Hon. Joseph Howe, alluded to in the foregoing sketch:

MY DEAR GISBORNE, -Without desiring, in the slightest degree, to undervalue the services rendered to civilization by the body of eminent men who have just been rewarded for laying the Atlantic cable, I own to some feeling of disappointment in not seeing any mention made of your name, as I have reason to believe you were the first pioneer of the enterprise, as well as the original promoter of electric telegraphy in the Maritime provinces. In the winter of 1848 you came to Halifax and interested the government. of which I was a member, in the subject of telegraphic communication. A bill was introduced, and £4,000 was expended by the government for and tajour was expended by the government for construction of lines to connect Halifax with New Brunswick, Canada, and the United States. When that line was completed, you were employed to manage it under a commission, of which I was the chairman, the Hon. George Young and William Murdoch, Esq., being the other members. This line was subsequently purchased from the government by a company, which has since extended branch lines to every shire, town, and seaport in the province. 1850 you discussed with me, and subsequently laid before the commissioners, a plan for connecting Newfoundland with the Continent of America, and obtained leave of absence to enable you to go to that island and secure support to the My brother commissioners are both project. dead. On your return you asked leave of absence to go to New York to promote an extension of the line to England, and spoke confidently of being able to extend it across the Atlantic, and connect Europe with America. Up to this time I never heard the idea suggested, and, though reading the English and American. reading the English and American papers, never saw any allusion to the practicability of such an enterprise. As no capital could be got in Halifax, you naturally sought in London and New York for co-operation and assistance. I do not, of course, know what took place abroad; but of this I have no doubt, that until you went to New York nobody had suggested or taken any steps towards promoting an Atlantic telegraph. As the ORIGINAL PIONEER AND PROJECTOR of this great work, it appears to me that you ought to place yourself in your true position, and that, if not included among those who are to be honoured and rewarded, you should at least endeavour to obtain from your countrymen, and from the world at large, who are to be benefited, the recognition which you deserve as the ORIGINATCR AND PRACTICAL PRIME MOVER of the great enter-prise now so happily brought, by a combination of public-spirited and able men, to a fortunate consummation. It ought not to be forgotten that the very line across Newfoundland, now used by the Anglo-American Company, was originally, at great pecuniary sacrifice and risk of health, explored by you and constructed by yourself as chief engineer of the New York, Newfoundland, and London Telegraph Company. Believe me, very sincerely yours, (Signed), JOSEPH HOWE. London, 25 Saville Row, Feb. 12, 1867.

Parker, Robert, Toronto, Ontario, was born in Manchester, England, in the year, 1858. His parents sailed for Canada, in 1861, settling for a time in Quebec, where Mr. Parker was sent to school, and he received a fair common school education at Berthier-en-haut, Quebec. Leaving school at the age of eighteen, he left for the States, travelling through the principal cities and towns in the northern portion, and he subsequently went to the old country, visiting his native city, Manchester, and he likewise took an extensive tour through the principal manufacturing towns of Great Britain. The sole object of this trip, was to gain a full and thorough knowledge concerning the business of dyeing. He returned then direct to Hamilton, Canada, with a view to engaging in this business; but the inducements there were not of such a nature as to offer any encouragement. Consequently he removed to Toronto, in 1876, and opened a place of business, at 830 Yonge street, In the short time since he commenced, he has been successful in building up a most prosperous business. In April, 1877, he opened a branch office at 211 Yonge street, and in the fall of the same year, opened another at 339 Queen street, west. In 1879, he opened still another at 4 John street. north, Hamilton. In 1883, a branch office was established at 225 Queen street east, Toronto. All these establishments are in a flourishing condition, and their custom and popularity are widening every day at an unusual rate. Besides the branch offices named he employs an agent in each fown of importance, in Ontario, through which medium a large mass of business is obtained. Mr. Parker has just had erected on Yonge street (Nos. 755 to 763) a fine three story brick building, with a frontage of 30 feet, and running back 150 feet, in which he has put a lot of new machinery, etc., to accommodate his growing business. Mr. Parker was married in 1882, to Barbara Willimine Gordon. He is a young man of gentle-manly easy manner, and is of quiet demeanor; but he possesses much natural shrewdness and far sightedness in business How important those features are to the successful business man it is not necessary to say. How he has profited by this quality in his splendid business is manifest enough.

ah

bu

bu

wl

de

wh

pre

cit t.W

In

Jo

tar

Ch

He

ı)£

ing

offi

wor

he i

app

you

tan

tion

for

whi

brot

peri

The

sum

ship

whic

The

surp

have

taste

spot,

and

a we

and;

with

vanc

is on

Prote

treas

sociat

dist

mem

of the

of the

cultur

sherif

mean:

ly hor

Temp tion, a

many

much

Glass, William, London, Sheriff of the County of Middlesex, descending, on the paternal side, from an old, well-known family of the County of Armagh, Ireland, the old farm homestead being still owned and occupied by his cousin, Samuel Glass. In the year 1819, Samuel Glass, father of the Sheriff, at the age of nineteen years, left his home to seek his fortune in Ganada, having for his point of destination the township of Westminster, in the London district, where his sister, wife of the late Lieut.-Colonel Orr, had settled two years previously. Crossing the Atlantic he made acquaintance of Mr. Owrey, a well-to-do retired merchant from the town of Donaghadee, Ireland. Young Glass induced Mr. Owrey to accompany him to the township of Westminster, and there they both settled in the year 1819. Seven years subsequently, Mr. Glass married Eliza, daughter of Mr. Owery, purchased and settled upon the beautiful farm known as Mount Pleasant, now owned by Benjamin Davis, in West-On this farm William and David were born. In the year 1830 Mr. Glass sold this farm and moved to the Township of London, and the following year, removed to the village (now city) of London, where for many years he carried on the flour and grain business, and where he resided up to the time of his death, in 1877, having a short time previously celebrated his golden wedding, his five sons, William, David, Samuel, James, and Archibald, with their wives and children, being present. William, the subject of this notice, was born on the 20th of May, in the year 1827. At the age of eighteen, in company with his brother David, he commenced the flour and grain business, two years afterwards the partnership was dissolved, William continuing the business, greatly extending the same, having buyers in Chicago, Detroit and various points in Canada, to which was added the wholesale and retail grocery business, and dealing extensively in real estate, all of which were carried on with due caution and profitably. In 1854, Mr. Glass was elected city councillor, which position he held for two years, and then refused re-election. In 1855, he married Pheebe, daughter of John Guernsey, Esq., of Queenston, Ontario, by whom he has three sons living, Charles True, Samuel Frank, and John Henry, the first named being a graduate of Toronto University, and is now spending the last year of his law course in the office of Messrs. Moss, Hoyles & Aylesworth, of Toronto. About the same time he received a commission in the militia force of Canada. In September, 1858, he was appointed Sheriff of the County of Middlesex. At the time he was considered very young for appointment to such an important office, but he has given great satisfaction in the discharge of his onerous duties for the past twenty-seven years, during which time he has been ably assisted by his brother Samuel, who has, during the same period, filled the position of deputy sheriff. The sheriff now owns and occupies, as a summer home, the farm, in London township, north part of lot 19, 3rd Concession, onwhich his father lived over fifty years ago. The scenery on this farm is said to be unsurpassed in Western Ontario. The grounds have been ornamented and laid out with taste, making altogether a most charming spot, where his many friends are hospitably and pleasantly entertained. The sheriff has a well established reputation for kindness and generosity, his name being connected with many undertakings calculated to advance the interest of his native county. He is one of the founders and trustees of the Protestant Orphans' Home; trustee and treasurer of the Young Men's Christian Association; one of the trustees of the Methodist church of Canada, of which he is a member; one of the trustees and proprietors of the Oregon Silver Mining Company; one of the founders, and president of the Agricultural Savings and Loan Company. The sheriff is reputed to be a man of large means, and an extensive landholder, strictly honest and upright in all his dealings. Temperate in his habits, of robust constitution, and great activity, he bids fair to spend many more years of usefulness, and do much by his well matured judgment and

own

nich

ned.

nge

tory

eet,

has

om-

ker

iine

tlede-

ıral

ess

ires

t is

ted

s is

of

wn

nd,

ıed

188.

of

da,

۲n-

lis-

ate

ars

иde

re-

ıa-

Ír.

iip

ed

ıt-

of

he

st-

id

ıd

tο

ır

on =

large experience, to benefit the community among which he is so well known, and highly respected.

Robitaille, Louis, M.D., C.M., New Carlisle, Quebec.—This distinguished gentleman is descended from one of the most illustrious French families in Canada. Monsieur Robitaille, one of his grand-uncles, was chaplain to the active militia force of Lower Canada during the war of 1812. All the Robitaille family were noted for their loyalty, and took an active and most zealous part during this war. Another grand-uncle of our subject, the Rev. Louis Brodeur, spent seven years as a missionary in New Brunswick. He was subsequently appointed curate to the parish of St. Roche des Aulnets, where he died, bequeathing his wealth to the College of St. Anne. Still another grand-uncle, Jean Robitaille, was a member of the Canadian Legislature, from 1809 to 1829. Our subject is a son of the late Louis Adolphe Robitaille, notary public, and a younger brother of the Hon. Theodore Robitaille, late lieut.-governor of the Province of Quebec. He was educated at the local high school, Seminare Ste. Thérese, and at McGill University, Montreal, where he graduated as Doctor of Medicine and Master in Surgery (M. D., C. M.), March, 1860. sequently he practiced his profession with good success at New Carlisle and adjoining neighbourhood. On the 24th March, 1869, he was appointed captain of Reserve Militia; and in January, 1869, he was appointed surgeon of the regimental division of Bonaventure. In 1864 he was chosen by the central board of health to act as medical officer for the parish of New Carlisle, when an epidemic of smallpox, which had been imported by foreign vessels, was He retained the position until 1867, when the danger disappeared. In 1871 he was appointed commissioner for the census for the County of Bonaventure. In 1875 he was named vice-consul of France, under the great seal of the French republic, for the district of Gaspé; and in 1883 he was named one of the justices of peace, under the new Act of the Province of Quebec. In 1873 he was offered the position of collector of customs for the port of New Carlisle, which he accepted, but resigned on Feb. 8, 1883. He was called to the Senate by letters patent, but this seat he resigned, for political reasons, on the 25th January, 1885. On July 31, 1885, by order-in-council, he was appointed inspector of customs, and vice-president of the Baie des Chaleurs Railway. In 1879 he was elected by the leaders of the Conservative party to the seat in the Commons for the County of Bonaventure, the seat having become vacant by the then member, his brother, the Hon. T. Robitaille, accepting the appointment of lieut .- governor of the province of Quebec, but declined the honour, and gave his influence to the present member, who was elected by a large majority. Hon. L. Robitaille has been an extensive traveller, and has, among other countries and places, travelled through Italy and Europe generally. He is one of the leaders of the Conservative party in the County of Bonaventure, and is a Roman catholic. Courteous in all his relations, and energetic in character, he is just such a man as can have so much of public achievement as he It was much regretted when he resigned his seat in the Senate, for it was felt that that body was losing a brilliant and

Richardson, Rev. Jas. Banning, London, Ontario, was born at Halifax, Nova Scotia, on November 23rd, 1843. He is a son of James and Louisa Sophia Richardson. His father, who was born in Liverpool, England, was descended from an old Scottish family belonging to Glasgow. About the beginning of this century, James Richardson went to Nova Scotia, where he engaged himself in mercantile and banking enter-In 1802, he married his cousin, Louisa Sophia, eldest daughter of Matthew Richardson, of Studley House, Halifax; and he died at Liverpool, England, on the 30th November, 1847, leaving six children, the youngest of whom is the subject of this When James Banning was in his sixth year, his mother was again married, chosing as her second husband, William Clark, of Belmont House, Guysborough, and formerly of Halifax, Nova Scotia, and thither the family removed. Our subject's early educational instruction was received from a private tutor, the Rev. W. G. T. Jarvis, B.A., under whose careful training he was prepared for the Collegiate School at Windsor, N.S., and this institution he entered in 1859, the Rev. D.W. Pickett, M.A., being principal. Taking a course of two years at this institution, he matriculated in June, 1861, at the University of King's College, Nova Scotia, of which the Rev. George McCawley, D.D., was president. He took a full course in arts and theology, and in June, 1865, after due examination, received the degree of Bachelor in Arts. At the Encoenia of 1874, he read an English thesis on the Atonement. and was advanced to the degree of M.A. On leaving college, at the close of 1865, Mr. Richardson spent the year which intervened before he was of age to receive holy orders, as lay assistant to the rector of Dartmouth, and on Sunday, the 23rd of December, 1866. was ordained deacon in St. Luke's Cathe. dral, Halifax, by Bishop Binney, of Nova He was at once licensed assistant curate to Rev. W. F. Pryor, of Dartmouth, and took up his residence at the Eastern passage, Halifax harbour. In 1868, he crossed the Atlantic, and made a tour of England, Scotland, Ireland, and part of France, and in the same year, soon after his return to Nova Scotia, on the resignation of Rev. W. F. Pryor, was appointed rector of Dartmouth. He was ordained priest by the Bishop of Nova Scotia, at Halifax, on St. Thomas' day, 1868, and by the same prelate was married, in Christ Church, Dartmouth, July 6th, 1869, to Mary Jane, daughter of Lawrence Tremaine, M.D., of Charlotte-town, P. E. I., and widow of the late Richard Hartshorne. Their issue has been eight children, four sons and four daughters. After a happy ministry of more than six years in Dartmouth, Rev. Mr. Richardson was chosen rector of St. Thomas' Church. Hamilton, Ontario, as successor to Rev. J. P. Dumoulin, which position he held until June, 1877, when he was appointed, on the nomination of the congregation, by the Bishop of Huron, to the rectorship of the Cronyn Memorial Church, London, Ontario. Here he followed the Rev. W. H. Tilley, a former classmate at college, and this position he has continued to hold successfully for the past nine years. In 1879, Rev. Mr. Richardson made a second voyage to England, received a license from the Archbishop of Canterbury, and was engaged for some weeks as deputation preacher for the Colonial and Continental Church Society. Our subject is honorary clerical secretary of the Diocesan Synod of Huron, an office to which he has been annually re-elected for the past seven years. He was appointed examining chaplain to Bishop Hellmuth, in 1882, and upon the succession of Bishop Baldwin, was appointed by him to the same office. In 1885 the Bishop of Saskatchewan, with the concurrence and recognition of the Bishop of Huron, conferred upon Rev. Mr. Richardson, whom three years previous he had made his commissary in Huron, the title and dignity of Honorary Canon of his diocese, being one of the four extra diocesan clergy, the others being Rev. Canon Curran,

M. A

ley.

Can

with

the l

Miss

of D

katch

ber o

Huro

electi

Prov

tario,

Surge

iety (

Pract

Lond

was b

Count

He is

maide

His fa

land, a

in th

Martin

ruler a

repres

the Br

in We

the bir

here t

for the master

the Gra

his ter

College

the stu

his de

He like

of Med

beginni

most er

his rep

has atte

firmly .

He has

affairs,

the 7th

he serv

North V

tional at interest.

public a

He also

lishment

and the

Universi

societies

and Odd

Fr

M.A., Hamilton, Ont.; Rev. Canon Hawksley, M.A., Oxon, London, England; Rev. Canon Cooper, of S.P.G., England, who with the Archdeacons of Saskatchewan and Missionary Council, under the style and title of Dean and Canons of the Diocese of Saskatchewan. Canon Richardson is a member of the senate of Western University and Huron College Council, and a delegate by election from the Huron Diocese to the Provincial Synod of Canada.

Fraser, John Martin, London, On-cario, B. A., M.D., Member Royal College of Surgeons, England; Member Obstetical Socjety of Dublin; Professor Principles and Practice of Medicine, in Western University, London, Ontario; Surgeon of 7th Fusiliers, was born in the township of Westminster, County of Middlesex, on August 12th, 1836. He is a son of Donald and Jane Fraser, the maiden name of his mother being Martin. His father was a native of Inverness. Scotland, and his mother was born near Newry, in the County of Down, Ireland. Mrs. Martin was a sister of the well-known home ruler and patriot, John Martin, who was a representative for the County of Meath, in the British parliament. The parents settled in Westminster, Ontario, two years before the birth of the subject of this sketch, and here they resolved to carve out a fortune for themselves. After young Fraser had mastered the primary branches, he entered the Grammar school, at London; and when his term was completed, he went to Queen's College, Kingston, where he entered upon the study of arts and medicine, taking out his degrees at the Kingston University. He likewise attended the Lednich School of Medicine, at Dublin, Ireland. Since first beginning practice, Dr. Fraser has been most energetic in his professional work, and his repute for learning, and the success that has attended his skill, have brought him a firmly established and lucrative business. He has always been interested in militia affairs, and at present is the surgeon of the 7th Fusiliers, of London, Ontario, and he served in this capacity, throughout the North West rebellion of 1885. In educational affairs, he has likewise taken a great interest, and he has been trustee of the public and grammar schools, of London. He also took a very active part in the establishment of the London General Hospital, and the Medical Department of the Western University. His connection with secret societies has been confined to the Masonic and Oddfellows' order. In politics, Dr.

Fraser is a Conservative; but he is not aggressive, and as a rule contents himself with casting his vote for the party that has his preference. In religion he has always been a zealous and highly respected member of the Presbyterian communion. He married on February 1st, 1866, Sarah Braerton Wilson, second daughter of the late William Wilson, of Morpeth, Ontario. We may say that Dr. Fraser began his professional career in Morpeth, in 1861, continuing here for three years, when, after a year's additional medical study in Europe, he established himself at Ridgetown, where he remained till 1868, in which year he settled down permanently in London. Dr. Fraser is associated in partnership with Dr. Wilson.

Young, Rev. Egerton Ryerson, Meaford, was born April 7th, 1840, near the Rideau Canal, in the Province of Ontario. He is a son of the Rev. William Young, a venerable minister of the Methodist church, now residing in Trenton, in the 78th year of his age. His mother was Amanda Waldron, a sister of the late Rev. Solomon Waldron. Our subject comes of United Empire loyalist stock, and the family is one of the first that, out of devotion to the old flag, penetrated into the wilds of Canada. They settled in what is now the township of Murray, near the flourishing town of Trenton. In common with other members of that heroic band, Mr. Young's ancestors endured many privations, and suffered many hardships. As the son of a Methodist minister, he enjoyed the varied school advantages of the different places in which his father was stationed. At sixteen years of age he commenced teaching school in the township of Emily, County of Victoria. He afterwards spent two sessions at the Normal School, Toronto, where he obtained a second and a first-class certificate, at the same time taking private lessons in classics. After teaching for nearly two years, as head master of the school in Madoc, he entered the ministry of the Methodist church; and after the usual four years of probation, he was ordained, in the year 1867, in the City of Hamilton, where he was at the same time appointed pastor of the Hamilton First Methodist church. During his stay in this city he married Elizabeth Bingham, eldest daughter of the late Joseph Bingham, of Bradford. Mrs. Young has proved herself marvellously adapted for her position, and by her courage and tact, as well as by her kindly disposition and benevolence, as also by her power of song, has been made a blessing to many, not only on their stations in Ontario, but also in those far off isolated regions among pagan Indians, where for years, with her husband, she uncomplainingly toiled and suffered. Five children, one boy and four girls, make up their happy household. Soon an urgent request came from the missionary authorities of the church, asking Rev. Mr. Young and his wife to go out and engage in the missionary work among the Indian tribes in the great North-West territories. They went, leaving Hamilton on the 10th of May, 1868; and reached Norway House on the 29th of July, having been on the journey two months and nineteen days, the last fourteen of which were spent in an open row-boat on Lake Winnipeg. At this dreary northern mission-field they resided for five years, hearing from the outside world only twice a year, and living hundreds of miles from any white settlement. Their only associates were the few fur-traders and the Indian bands around them. Great success attended their efforts at this old Indian mission, and when they left it it was one of the largest and most flourishing in the country. Mr. Young opened up the mission at Nelson River, and in other directions so enlarged his field of missionary toil that it was over five hundred miles long. Over this wide parish he travelled in summer in a birch canoe, and in the winter with his dog trains. He often slept in the snow with his faithful Indian dog-drivers and dogs around him, when the spirit thermometer indicated from forty to fifty below zero. The wintry blizzards often swept over them, and sometimes they were covered with drifting snow. Sufferings and hardships untold were often endured on these long trips, which sometimes lasted for weeks; but the success attending the effort more than compensated the devoted missionary. The winter of 1873-4 was spent by Rev. Mr. Young in attending a series of missionary anniversaries in Ontario and Quebec, in company with the Rev. Mr. Crosby, a successful missionary from Brittish Columbia. So successful were these meetings that they very materially aided in bringing about that year the gratifying increase of the income of the Missionary Society of over thirty thousand dollars. March, 1874, Rev. Mr. Young returned to the North-West. At Winnipeg his faithful Indians and dogs were awaiting him, and with them he journeyed over the frozen surface of Lake Winnipeg to Beren's river, travelling by nights only, on account of the brilliant glare of the sun, which when reflected from the dazzling snow causes intense pain in the eyes. At Beren's river he established the first mission among the Saulteaux Indians. With his dog-teams, Rev. Mr. Young drew the timber for his parsonage and school-house through the snow, a distance of twelve or fourteen miles. Many were his discouragements and difficulties : har a comfortable house was at length erector. and the mission was firmly established. Several years were spent at Beren's river. and then Mrs. Young's health failing, they returned to Ontario. Belonging to a church which has incorporated into it the itinerancy, Rev. Mr. Young, like other Methodist ministers, has frequently to move; but he has put in since his return his full term of three years at Port Perry, Colborne, and Bowmanville, and is now, 1885, stationed in Meaford. At the great international gathering of returned missionaries, held at Wesley Park, Niagara Falls, August, 1885. where scores of representative missionaries from various parts of the world, met for a ten days' convention, Rev. Mr. Young tooka prominent part, and his addresses and Mrs. Young's Indian songs will not soon be forgotten. He was one of eight selected to hold a three days' missionary convention at Thousand Island Park, and spoke several times on his favourite theme, pleading for help and sympathy for the fast expiring aborigines of this great continent. With the Temperance movement Rev. Mr. Young has most actively identified himself. and he is a prominent member of the order of the Sons of Temperance.

Gibbons, George Christic, London. Ontario, was born in St. Catharines, Province of Ontario, on the 2nd July, 1848. His education was obtained at a private lissitution conducted by the Rev. T. D. Phales. and at the Grammar School of his native town. When his school days were ended he began the study of the law, entering the office of the late Warren Rock, QC., at London; and he subsequently went into the office of Miller & Miller, St. Catharines. When he was in his twenty-first year (1869). he was called to the bar, and immediately began the practice of his profession in London. He obtained a military certificate, and during the excitement of the Fenian raid enlisted, and became first colour sergeant of No. 7 company, 7th London Fusiliers. He applied himself diligently to the practice of his profession, and soon saw his exertions crowned by the possession of a well-established and important business. He is president of the Liberal Association of the City of London; and is likewise a trustee of the Middle conv + (c) bb bell Mon dren at th and -Cana necti ronto were and : muir. His f but a of ni Robe came the to his ap as a j for Ca and a he car ber ti ment. with J shire. of Jac as cal sessed ed to had p their e dation is one After they w two h proper discou rebuilt tune l Jacque compe Craig, for th ship, Co. I when leaving the bu extensi the ma and J_{J} facture

tion, a

Canada

Middlesex Bar Association. His religious convictions are those of Methodism. Mr. Gibbons married, in 1876, Elizabeth Campbell Craig, daughter of Hugh Craig, of Montreal. There is a family of four children, two boys and two girls. Mr. Gibbons at this day enjoys the largest commercial and collection business in the Dominion of Canada, besides a good general legal constitution.

aection. Hay, Robert, M.P. for Centre Toronto, is a Scotchman by birth. His parents were Robert Hay and Elizabeth Henderson, and he was born in the parish of Tippermuir. Perthshire, on the 18th of May, 1808. His father was a small farmer in anything but affluent circumstances, and had a family of nine children. At the age of fourteen, Robert had to push for himself, and he became an apprentice to a cabinetmaker in the town of Perth. After faithfully serving his apprenticeship, he worked for some time as a journeyman, and then in 1831 he sailed for Canada, and landed in Montreal, in June, and after spending two months in that city, he came to Toronto on the 11th of September the same year, where he found employment. In 1835, he formed a partnership with John Jacques, a native of Cumberlandshire, England, under the name and style of Jacques & Hay, and commenced business as cabinetmakers, etc. The capital possessed at this time by the firm only amounted to about eight hundred dollars, but they had pluck, and with two apprentices and their own willing hands, they laid the foundations of a business which at this time is one of the largest of its kind in Canada. After being in business about twenty years, they were twice burnt out, and lost about two hundred thousand dollars worth of property and machinery. But this did not discourage these persevering men. rebuilt their workshops, and since then fortune has smiled on them. In 1870, Mr. Jacques retired from the business with a competency, and Charles Rogers and George Craig, two worthy men who had long worked for the old firm, were taken into partnership, and the name changed to R. Hay & Co. This partnership continued until 1885, when Messrs. Rogers and Craig retired, leaving Mr. Hay in entire possession of the business, which is still carried on in the extensive workshops on the Esplanade; and the magnificent show rooms, corner of King and Jordan streets. The furniture manufictured by the firm is of the finest description, and not only finds a ready market in Canada, but a good deal of it finds its way to Great Britain. Some prominent English families have adorned their homes with the furniture made by R. Hay & Co. in Toronto, among others Lord Abinger and Mr. Bass, M.P., the great English brewer. Mr. Hay, though always a busy man, yet he finds time to do something outside his workshops and office. In September, 1878, he was elected to represent Centre Toronto in the Dominion Parliament, and again at the last general election he was returned by the same constituency. Mr. Hay at one time allied himself with the Reform party, but, during the depression in trade, he supported the National Policy, and since then has cast in his lot with the Liberal-Conservatives. Mr. Hay favours the temperance reform, and would rejoice to see a prohibitory measure passed by parliament. On November 18th, 1847, Mr. Hay married Mary Dunlop, a native of Glasgow. lady died in 1871, having borne eight children, six of whom at the time of her death survived. Of these, one son and three daughters still live. Mr. Hay is in all respects a self-made man. Relying on his own strong arm and indomitable will, he set out in the world, and has by frugality and untiring industry raised himself to a position which ought to merit the crown of wellearned success.

Williams, Joseph Arthur, M. D., L. R.C. P. London, M. R.C.S. and L.M., Eng., Ingersoll, Ontario, was born at Queenston, Canada, in 1837. His father belonged to Carmarthenshire, Wales, and came to Canada in 1837, with Captain Dixie, in whose employ he was. Shortly after his arrival, he married Rebecca Smith, a native of the County of Cavan, Ireland. and settled upon a farm near Queenston, where he remained for fifteen years. This farm, we may say, was in the immediate neighbourhood of Brock's monument. He did not confine his attention solely to farming; he also became a breeder of fancy stock, doing in that way a very large business. In 1851, he left Queenston and removed to the County of Oxford, where he purchased a farm of 600 acres, located in the township of Dereham; and he then began to devote the greater part of his time dairying. He remained upon this farm till his death, which occurred in 1885. He left ten children, the subject of this sketch being the second of the family. Joseph Arthur Williams, received a sound educational training, chiefly under the instruction of private tutors; and between intervals of study, he assisted his father upon the farm. In 1859, he resolved to study medicine, and the following year proceeded to Toronto, where he entered the Toronto School of Medicine; and he subsequently attended the medical department of Victoria College, at Cobourg, and graduated M.D. in 1863. In the same uated M.D. in year he went to the village of Florence, Lambton, where he remained for a period of two years. He then received the appointment of demonstrator of anatomy, in Victoria College, Cobourg, which position he held till 1867. With so much satisfaction did he fill that position, that the students made him a present of a number of valuable books, which are still to be found on his shelves. During his vacation at the college, he visited New York city, and devoted his attention chiefly to a study of the eye and In 1866, he proceeded to London, England, in order that he might see practice in the great hospitals there, and he was in the metropolis during the time of the cholera in London east. He remained during the summer and part of the following year, attending principally St. Thomas' and Guy's hospitals. While there he went up for three examinations, and was successful: 1st, Licentiate Royal College Physicians of London, 1866; 2nd, member Royal College of Surgeons, in January, 1867; 3rd, Licentiate Midwifery, Royal College of Surgeons, in February, 1867. Immediately after the examinations, the doctor returned to Canada, and resumed his duties in Victoria College. In the same year he resigned, and began practice in the town of Ingersoll, in partnership with Dr. Hoyt, and this partnership continued for seventeen years, when it was dissolved, and Dr. Williams began practice alone. By energy, and pro-fessional skill, and by virtue of his high repute for learning and his success in practice, his business is now large and steadily growing. In 1869 he was appointed member of the Board of Education for the town of Ingersoll, and that position he has held almost continually since, doing his utmost, with marked results, in the cause of public instruction. In 1876 he was elected to the council of the town of Ingersoll, and was re-elected in 1878. In 1880 he was elected a member of the Medical Council, College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario, for the Gore and Thames division, and was re-elected by acclamation in 1885. He is an active member of the Oxford Medical Association, and is also the medical health officer for his He is an Oddfellow, and adopted town. has been medical examiner for that society for several years, and holds the same office for a number of insurance companies. is a Liberal-Conservative, and an active and talented member in the cause of that party, and has been president of the local Liberal-Conservative Association. In 1882 he contested the South Riding of Oxford, against the Hon. Adam Crooks, and was defeate by a narrow majority. Let us hope the day is coming which will see him in the position for which his talents so well suit him. He is a Methodist, and has held the position of recording steward of the King street Methodist church for many years. He married, in 1871, the relict of the late Mr. Alexander. but she died in 1878. He again married El. eanor Fullerton, daughter of Matthew Fullerton, of South Dorchester, and by this union has one son.

Joss, John, was born in Aberdeenshire. Scotland, on the 22nd of January, 1851. His parents were John Joss and Jane Taylor. His father followed the occupation of gardener and farmer, and still continues that business in Aberdeenshire. John Joss. the subject of our sketch, received a common school education in Aberdeenshire, and in 1867 learned the trade of carpenter and joiner, serving thereat five years. He worked as a journeyman carpenter and joiner in his native country for about a year, after which he removed to Newcastleon Tyne, England. In 1873 he set sail for Canada, and settled in London, County of Middlesex, where he remained about a year and a-half. In 1875, Mr. Joss removed to Toronto, and acted as foreman with Robert Anderson, builder. In 1878 he established a business for himself as builder and contractor, and in that occupation he has remained ever since. Since that year he has engaged extensively in building properties on speculation, as well as for private use. In religion Mr. Joss is a Presbyterian, and he is an elder of Old St. Andrew's church. He has also been the superintendent of the St. Mark's mission Sunday-school, in connection with St. Andrew's church, for the last eight years. He has always been active and zealous in promoting every undertaking that has had for its object some moral good. Mr. Joss is also an untiring advocate of temperance, and believes it to be the duty of the legislature to put down by force of law the traffic in an article which has never brought good, but always evil to every home and to mankind generally. In politics Mr. Joss is an uncompromising Reformer, believing that the principles of the liberal party of Canada are best calculated to promote the public and business ed a Toroclar 1876 ried Jam deer socia and all r

of th

Sir

Suth

Marc

Cana

Jame

L

wel

vail

in i

par

seat

of A the e abetl eldes erlan been Her of or follov who son-ii Inver Argyl The p the I proac quis c white hair, his fa indep velvet and H educa

succes

drews

by app

Scotti

missio

and B

literar

posses

cultiva

welfare, and that they must ultimately prevail. He has always been an active worker in the political field. He is not a blind party-follower, but a man who has deepseated convictions, and vigorously affirms and defends them. With respect to his busines, it may be said that Mr. Joss carries on very extensive works, and is regarded as one of the foremost contractors in Toronto. He was married, first, to Eliza Clarke, of Aberdeen, Scotland, who died in 1876, leaving no family. In 1880, he married Barbara, second daughter of the late James Rettie, of Rothie Norman, Aberdeenshire, Scotland, and of Toronto. social life Mr. Joss counts many friends; and in his business relations he has what all men court—the confidence and respect of those with whom he has dealings.

Lorne, Marquis of.—The Right Hon. Sir John George Edward Henry Douglas Sutherland Campbell, K.G., G.C.M.G., Marquis of Lorne, ex-Governor-General of Canada, was born at Stafford House, St. James Park, London, England, on the 6th of August, 1845. He is the eldest son of He is the eldest son of the eighth Duke of Argyle and Lady Elizabeth Georgiana Sutherland Levison-Gower, eldest daughter of the second Duke of Sutherland. The young Marquis seems to have been a favourite when a child, for we find Her Majesty the Queen, in her "Journal of our Life in the Highlands," makes the following very pleasing allusion to the boy, who as time sped on was to become her son-in-law. Speaking of her reception at Inverary Castle, the seat of the Duke of Argyle, in Argyleshire, Scotland, she says: "It was in the true Highland fashion. The pipers walked before the carriage, and the Highlanders on either side as we approached the house. Outside stood the Marquis of Lorne, just two years old, a dear, white, fat, fair little fellow, with reddish hair, but very delicate features, like both his father and mother; he is such a merry, independent little child. He had a black velvet dress and jacket, with a sporan, scarf and Highland bonnet." The marquis was educated at Eton, and afterwards passed successively to the University of St. Andrews and Trinity College, Cambridge. In 1866, he became connected with the military, by appointment, as captain of the London Scottish Volunteers, and in 1868 was commissioned lieutenant-colonel of the Argyle and Bute Volunteer Artillery Brigade. For literary and artistic pursuits the marquis possesses much natural ability as well as cultivated taste, the result of study, observation, and experience. His first published work was, "A Tour in the Tropics," the result of his observations during a trip through the West Indies and the eastern part of North America, in 1866. Although the author was very young at this time, the appearance of this work displayed to the public the keen sense of observation and discriminating judgment which he inherits from his father. During this trip he made his first visit to Canada, and conceived a very favourable impression of this country. His next publication was, "Guido and Leta, a Tale of the Riviera," a meritorious poem which attracted much interest, not so much on account of its titled author, as because of the genuine worth and beauty of its composition. In 1877 appeared from his pen "The Book of Psalms, literally rendered in Verse," which is doubtless the best of his literary productions. It called forth considerable praise, and is really a work of great merit. In 1868, he became a member of the House of Commons, representing the constituency of Argyleshire, and was reelected by acclamation in two subsequent general elections, and continued in parliament until his appointment to Canada. During part of the Duke of Argyle's term of office in Mr. Gladstone's Cabinet, the Marquis acted as his private secretary, displaying much aptitude for affairs of state. On the 21st of March, 1871, he was united in marriage to Her Royal Highness the Princess Louise Caroline Alberta, Duchess of Saxony, the sixth child and fourth daughter of Her Majesty Queen Victoria, who was born on the 18th of March, 1848. Since her marriage brought her prominently before the public, she has been regarded with much affectionate interest by the people, and her personal qualities, independently of her high rank, are such as to have earned for her love and respect. She is very accomplished in art and music, and gladly took her part in the duties of hospitality devolving on the Governor-General, when she was in Canada. Her marriage with the Marquis took place at Windsor, in St. George's Chapel, and was solemnized with imposing ceremonies. Soon after this event, the Marquis of Lorne was mentioned in connection with the governor-generalship of Canada, and it was generally believed that he would be the successor of Sir John Young, but the appointment was finally given to Lord Duf-Upon the expiration of the latter's ferin. term of office, however, it was deemed expedient to offer the appointment to the marquis for various reasons, and he and his Royal wife were received in the Dominion with great popular demonstrations of welcome. On the occasion of their visits to all the principal cities in Canada, during the summer of 1879, they were accorded a welcome which could scarcely be more enthusiastic, and all classes seemed to vie in doing honour to their Queen's representatives. In 1883 his lordship's very satisfactory term expired, and he was succeeded in his office by the Marquis of Lansdowne.

Walsh, Right Rev. John, Bishop of His Lordship, Bishop Walsh, was London. born in the parish of Mooncoin, County of Kilkenny, Ireland, May 24th, 1830, and is descended from a very old and influential The first of the family in Ireland accompanied Earl Strongbow from Wales in 1179, and settled in the County of Kilkenny; and like the Geraldines, they became "more Irish than the Irish themselves." In the course of time they gained large possessions, known as the "Walsh Mountains." This property was afterwards confiscated during the Commonwealth, and in the reign of William Ill., when the older branches emigrated to France and Austria, and took military service in those countries. In the former the title of Count Terrant was conferred on the representative of the For generations his lordolder branch. ship's forefathers lived in that condition of comfort and independence which the better class of farmers enjoy, especially in the province of Leinster. On the mother's side he is of the Macdonalds, a most respectable family, and one which, like that of Walsh, has produced a number of zealous and learned ecclesiastics. His Lordship's course of studies were commenced at St. John's College, Waterford, and terminated at the Seminary of the Sulpicians, Montreal. After his ordination, in 1854, Father Walsh was appointed to the Brock mission, bordering on Lake Simcoe. In 1857 he was placed in the charge of the parish of St. Mary's, Toronto. Full of the spirit of his holy vocation, he applied himself with zeal and constancy to the discharge of his manifold duties. Very soon after the consecration of Bishop Lynch, in 1859, his lordship summoned Father Walsh to his aid as rector of St. Michael's Cathedral. He filled this important and responsible position about two years with marked success and ability. At the end of this time, to the great joy of his old parishioners, and the regret of those belonging to the cathedral, he finally resumed his administration of St. Mary's, as parish priest and vicar-general of the diocese. The health of

Dr. Pinsoneault, Bishop of Sandwich, having become impaired, it was found necessary to select a successor for him in that see. Accordingly the hierarchy of the ecclesiastical province of Quebec unanimously nominated Vicar-General Walsh as the future bishop. The choice was ratified by the Holy See. The consecration of his lordship took place on 10th November, 1867, in St. Michael's Cathedral, Toronto, with great pomp and ceremony, and amid the prayers and rejoicings of the vast concourse assembled on the auspicious occasion. The late Dr. Baillargeon, Archbishop of Quebec, was the consecrating bishop. The elevation of Bishop Walsh to the episcopal rank was hailed with sincere pleasure, not only by the clergy of the diocese of Toronto, but also of the dioceses adjoining, as he was much and deservedly loved and esteemed by his brother priests. When assuming the government of his diocese, his lordship immediately applied himself with extraordinary resolution and ability to the important duties of his exalted office. He displayed administrative talent of the highest order. He began by making a careful and thorough examination into the affairs of the diocese. The result was well calculated to tax his courage and energies. He found that a large and pressing debt must be liquidated, that the re-organization of the clergy and missions, was imperative; that a member of priests should be provided; that in many parishes, churches and presbyteries were to be built de novo, or improved by restoration or enlargement; that the interests of education everywhere demanded attention, and that asylums for the orphan and for the infirm poor were to be established. In a word, a vast amount of arduous and constant labour awaited his lordship. He grappled earnestly with the difficulties, that presented themselves in all directions. Nobly seconded by his generous flock, he succeeded within the incredibly short period of three years, in paying off to the last dollar the large debt which had encumbered the diocese. The new cathedral of London may, without exaggeration, be termed the great work of his episcopate. Its lofty and majestic form attracts the eye of every stranger visiting the forest city, and this stately pile is now on all sides looked on as the first of the metroplis of Ontario's fair western peniusula, and the glory of the diocese of London. In point of architectual merit, in beauty and symmetry of proportion, chasteness and refinement of ornamentation, solidity and strength of construction, this

sple

stat

vin

mos

His

his

that rite

how

lord

ship

ed o vari

mos

atte

afte

and

or r

nific

relig

wor

whe

sent

hear

cese

of th

the

good

of L

Tor

of hi

struc

pries

Lone

ful a

Cana

justl

the 1

pren

prou

title

plans

steps

ment

brok

of th

place

was .

this

of tl

and 1

minic

cours

aisles

tistry

The

bread

sept

groun

splendid edifice already, it may be fairly stated, stands without a peer in this province, and will, when completed, be, in most regards, without a rival in this country. His Lordship Bishop Walsh had long set his heart upon raising in God's honour and that of holy religion a temple in some manner worthy the solemn and sublime rites of the Church of Christ. There were, however, difficulties in the way. Upon his lordship's assumption of the chief pastorship of this diocese he had, as already pointed out, an enormous debt to remove, while various works of religion and charity of the most pressing necessity called for immediate attention and energetic action. It was only after a priesthood had been formed, schools and presbyteries built, churches constructed or renovated throughout the diocese, a magnificent college placed on a solid footing, religious communities established—in a word, piety, learning and religion everywhere made flourish -that his lordship consented to entertain the purpose dear to his heart of erecting a cathedral for his diocese that would for ages stand in testimony of the depth and sincerity of the faith of the Catholics of Western Ontario. good time at length came, and the Bishop of London invited Mr. Joseph Conolly, of Toronto, one of the very ablest gentlemen of his profession, to draw up the plans for a structure befitting the times, worthy the priesthood and people of the diocese of London, and creditable to the most beautiful and picturesque city in the Dominion of Canada. The people of London, always justly proud of their fair city, nestling in the very heart of the garden of Canada's premier province, now feel more than ever proud of London, as it lays just claim to the title and dignity of a cathedral city. The plans drawn up, his lordship at once took steps, in view especially of the encouragement from priests and people, to have ground broken and work commenced. The turning of the first sod for the new cathedral took place in July, 1880, and its corner stone was laid on the 23rd of May, 1881. this solemn ceremony assisted the bishop of the ecclesiastical province of Toronto and priests from every portion of the Dominion. The cathedral was four years in course of construction. It consists of nave, aisles and transepts; chancel, chapels, baptistry; towers, sacristy and morning chapel. The length of the interior is 180 feet; breadth, 68 feet; breadth across transept over 100 feet; the height from the ground to roof of main roof is 88 feet, and

av-

ary

ee.

esi-

sly

fu-

the

rd-

in

eat

ers

em-

ate

vas

of

vas

the

also

uch

his

rn-

ite-

30-

s of

ra-

gan

in-

Che

age

and

the

ns,

ests

les,

uilt

en-

ion

hat

irm

l, a

our

est-

m-

led

hin

IIS,

rge

ese.

th-

ork

stic

sit-

of

ern

of

in

te-

oli-

each of the imposing towers will, when fully completed, stand with their spires 215 feet from the ground. The style of architecture is that of the early French period, in which many of the grandest mediæval cathedrals were designed and built. The seating capacity of the cathedral is placed at 1,200. The cost thus far of this splendid structure is somewhat more than $100,000. The cathedral of London was solemnly dedicated and opened for religious worship on the 28th of June, 1885; bishops and priests from all parts of Canada and the United States being The ceremony was the most in attendance. gorgeous and impressive ever witnessed in Ontario. More than $10,000 was subscribed on the occasion in aid of the building fund. One of the most pleasing incidents in the life of Bishop Walsh, who has ever characteristically shunned popular favour and demonstration, was the receptions tendered him by the citizens of London, on his return from Ireland, in 1882. His reception is set forth in the Catholic Record of October 6th, in that year. home-coming of Bishop Walsh on the 28th ult. imparted an additional eclat to the attractive features of the fair week. The right reverend gentleman arrived in New York on Monday last, having accomplished the trip across the Atlantic in the remarkably rapid period of eight days, via the steamship Servia, in company with Ven. Dean Wagner, of Windsor, and Rev. Father Flannery, of St. Thomas, who were his companions during his sojourn in the ever Green Isle. Upon becoming aware of the expected return of the right reverend gentleman, the members of his flock, and other friends in the city and vicinity, determined to accord him a cordial welcome, and preparations were made for celebrating his arrival in the city in a fitting manner. The Bishop was received at Hamilton, Thursday afternoon, by Monseigneur Bruyère, Rev. Dr. Kilroy, of Stratford; Father Brennan, of St. Mary's, and the Bishop of Hamilton, and after a biref interval the party boarded the G. W. R. accommodation for this city. The reception accorded to his lordship was really magnificent, and must have been peculiarly gratifying to him, as a spontaneous expression of the esteem in which he is regarded by his own flock and the citizens of London at large. Long before the arrival of the train, citizens began to congregate at the Richmond street depot, which in a short time presented an extremely animated appearance. The spacious platform was filled to excess by an eager throng, which endured with perfect good humour and equanimity the jostling, elbowing, and pushing inseparable from a large assemblage, while they anxiously strained their eyes eastward in an effort to obtain the first glimpse of the incoming cars. At length the whistle was heard, and as the long train dashed up to the depot, the band of the Seventh Fusiliers, which was stationed upon the platform, struck up 'Home, sweet home.' The appropriate character of the selection gained the approval of the audience, and as the venerable prelate, rejuvenated by his brief sojourn in the land of his nativity, emerged from the car, and stood for a moment with uncovered head, cheer after cheer went up from the immense concourse of people, while at the same time a stream of fireworks shot heavenward. welcome was magnificent and well worthy of the City of London, his Lordship and companions being escorted to carriages in waiting by an enthusiastic throng of people. All being in readiness, the band struck up 'St. Patrick's Day,' and the procession commenced its progress up Richmond street, to the bishop's palace, the stirring strains of 'Garryowen,' and other popular Irish airs, adding an inspiring effect to the march. On arriving at the palace his lordship and the accompanying clergymen took up positions upon the balcony, and order having been restored, Mr. John Wright advanced to the front, and read the following address: 'To His Lordship, the Right Rev. Dr. Walsh, Bishop of London-May it please your lordship-We, the undersigned citizens of London, comprising not only those whose privilege it is to follow your spiritual guidance, but also many who, though not of the flock you rule with such paternal solicitude and success, fail not to admire your exalted qualities, most respectfully tender you a very hearty welcome on your return to your episcopal city. We hope in all sincerity that your lordship's health has been permanently benefited by your brief sojourn in We earnestly trust that you the old land. may be long spared to the diocese of London, upon which your virtues and talents shed such lustre, and beg of you to accept the accompanying testimonial as a feeble token of that regard in which we and the many on whose behalf we may on this occasion justly presume to speak, sincerely hold your Lordship.' The address was accompanied by a purse containing $1,000, a His lordvoluntary testimonial of esteem. ship, who was much affected by this hearty welcome of the citizens of London, after expressing his sincere thanks for the address and its accompanying munificent gift, said he was glad to be once more at home in London, in this 'Canada of ours.' We here,' he said, 'enjoy a common and rich inheritance in free institutions, just laws. and the possession of equal rights. We live under a form of government which is the best balanced in the world, which combines liberty without license, and authority without despotism, which gives to all the largest measure of rational and well-regulated freedom, whilst it affords ample protection and security to life and property. We are there fore a happy people, and it is our duty, as it is our highest interests, to live together in peace and amity, fulfilling the duties of good citizens, living in the profession and practice of the Christian religion, which is the guarantee of individual happiness-the secure basis of society, and the solid foundation of kingdoms. In this way shall we help to build up here in Canada a great and noble and prosperous commonwealth, which will be the refuge of the oppressed of other countries, and the happy homes of millions of freeman and of prosperous citizens." Upon the conclusion of his lordship's address a display of fireworks was given, after which the crowd, fully 3,000 in number, dis persed. On Thursday evening, October 5th. his lordship was entertained at dinner in the London Club by a number of citizens. Amongst the gentlemen present were Hon. J. Carling, M.P., Col. Walker, Major Leys, B. Cronyn, C. Goodhue, Jas. Mahon, P. Mulkern, M. Masuret, J. Blackburn, F. W. Fitzgerald, J. Reid, Dr. Sippi, and about thirty other representative citizens. After the usual loyal and patriotic toasts, the chairman proposed the health of the guest of the evening, which was very warmly received. His lordship made a very happy reply, expressive of his thanks for the honour done him by so distinguished a body of his townsmen, and of the duty resting on every citizen to promote, in every possible manner, that harmony amongst all classes without which the country could not pros-On the following Sunday the Bishop lectured to an immense audience in St. Peter's Cathedral, on "Ireland and the Irish." In the fall of 1884, his lordship proceeded, by special invitation, to Baltimore, to attend the Plenary Council held in that city, - the most memorable ecclesiastical gathering since the Council of the Vatican in 1869-70. The Bishop of London occupies in the Catholic hierarchy a foremost place as a profound thinker and facile writer.

As w

Gree

lette

chari

his li

the

tion.

stud

ornat

impr

choic

with

tion

pasto

and '

and

valua

and p mind.

Lords

git qu

handl

Cle

called

Canad

Que.,:

John

ment,

wound

in figh

father

the la payma

the sa

Upper

ceived

and wl

as was the ac

cantile

of yea

vice of

ot Ma

was co

In the

directi

that ti

promin

witness

during

has bee

est. I

younge

Powell.

and col

for som

of Que

forward

in 1850

was a m

As well acquainted with the classic lore of Greece and Rome as he is erudite in the letters of modern times. Bishop Walsh is charming in conversation, and fascinating in his literary productions. As a pulpit orator, the bishop has achieved a high reputation. His sermons betoken plan, thought, study, and are ever practical. His style is ornate, eloquent, full of point, logical and impressive. He has easy command of the choicest language, illustrating his subject with a suitably applied imagery. The attention of his audience never wearies. The pastorals of his lordship-always opportune and welcome—are models of composition and pregnant with instruction. In their valuable pages he dispenses to his clergy and people the treasures of his well-stored mind. In all truth it may be said of his Lordship's literary productions, "nihil tetiqit quod non ornavit," whatever subject he handles he embellishes.

ress

said e in We rich

WS,

live

the ines

ith-

gest

ree-

and

ere

. as

her

s of

and

h is

the

un-

and

iich

her

ons

ns.'

ad-

ter

dis

th.

in

ns.

on.

уŝ, Р.

W.

out

ter

the

est

re-

рy

on-

of

on

ble

Clemow, Hon. Francis, Ottawa, called to the Senate in 1885, is a native of Canada, having been born at Three Rivers, Que., in 1821. He is the son of the late Capt. John Clemow, an officer in the 41st regiment, British army, who received a fatal wound on Queenston Heights, while engaged in fighting the battles of the empire. The father of Collingwood Schriber, C. E., and the late Major Donaldson, at one time paymasters of pensioners, were captains in the same regiment. Senator Clemow is an Upper Canada College boy, and there he received a good classical and general education, and when he finished such a course of study as was deemed sufficient to qualify him for the active duties of life, he began a mercantile career. After spending a number of years in Toronto, he entered the service of the then leading forwarding firm of MacPherson, Crane Co., with which he was connected in Montreal and Kingston. In the year 1841, he turned his steps in the direction of Bytown, now Ottawa, and since that time he has been a permanent and a prominent resident of that city. He has witnessed its growth and development, and during the many years he has resided here he has been active in promoting its best interest. In 1847, he married Margaret Powell, youngest daughter of the late Colonel Powell, who had been captain of the 8th and colonel of the 101st regiments, and was for some time commandant of the garrison of Quebec. In Ottawa he carried on the forwarding business, from which he retired in 1850. From 1860 to the end of 1862, he was a member of the city council, in which capacity he gave his best services to the work of civic legislation. He was chairman of the board of water commissioners from the inception of the water works scheme ununtil the city assumed control of the management. He has been manager of the gas works since 1866. In politics, Mr. Clemow is a pronounced Conservative. He is one of those men who when attached to principles never hesitate about proclaiming them when occasion demands, and asserting their nature, or defending them when assailed by an opponent. But his strong and uncompromising adherence to his political principles never interferes with his social and personal friendships. He likes a bold outspoken expression of opinion, and thinks none the less of a man because he is unable to agree with him on political or other questions. For many years Senator Clemow has been a leading member of the Orange order in eastern Ontario, and the extent of the confidence his brethren in Carleton have in him, may be estimated by the fact that during the last eight years he has occupied the position of county master. Among all classes and creeds in Ottawa, Senator Clemow is highly esteemed. His active business habits, his keen perceptive faculty, his capacity for grasping and readily comprehending intricate questions of importance, admirably qualify him for doing good service in the "Upper House" of the Parliament of Canada.

Hay, Peter, Galt, was born in Lauder, Berwickshire, Scotland, on the 1st of March, 1835. His parents were George Hay, and Ann Morrison; and they followed the occupation of weavers. Peter Hay was educated in the common schools, and after leaving school at the age of fifteen, learned the trade of a blacksmith. In 1855, he left Lauder and went to Glasgow, where he remained for about two years. In 1857, he left for Canada, and remained in Montreal until 1861, following his trade. In 1861, he removed to Galt, and entered and remained in the employ of Goldie & McCulloch until 1869; was afterwards with James Warnock & Co., and in 1882 started business for himself in the manufacture of machine knives or edge tools, on Victoria avenue, in the town of Galt, where he now carries on the well-known business associated with his name. For a considerable time he belonged to the Amalgamated Society of Engineers. His experience has been enlarged by considerable travel, having frequently visited many important centres in the United States. In religion he is a Presbyterian, and in politics a Reformer. He was married in Galt, on February 20th, 1879, to Eizabeth Wallace, by whom he has had one girl. His business extends through the entire province, and his name is one that is held in high regard among all circles in the community.

Russell, Andrew, late Chief Clerk of the Department of the Interior at Ottawa, was born in Glasgow, Scotland, on the 29th June, 1804. He is a son of Alexander Russell and Janet Jamieson. received his education at Glasgow in the Common and Grammar schools, leaving Glasgow with his parents, sister and brother for Quebec, in May, 1822. The family settled in the township of Leeds, County of Megantic, in June, 1822. Our subject was appointed superintendent of colonization roads and settlements in Megantic, by the governor-general, Sir James Kempt, in June, 1829. On the union of Upper and Lower Canada, he was placed in charge of the Surveys Branch of the Crown Lands Department for Canada West; and in 1857 he was appointed assistant commissioner of Crown Lands for Canada. On the Confederation of the provinces, the Department of Crown Lands was divided, and our subject went to Toronto as assistant commissioner In 1870 he for the Province of Ontario. returned to the capital to assist in the Census service. In 1874 he received the appointment of chief clerk in the department of the interior; and in 1883 retired, after fifty-four years public service. Confining his attention purely to official duties, our subject never meddled in politics. He married in May, 1834, Lucy Chandler Lord, eldest daughter of Lieutenant-Colonel P. C. Lord, senior J.P. for the County of Megan-During Mr. Russell's term of office he faithfully devoted his professional abilities to raising the standard of the surveying profession, and what he accomplished may be gathered somewhat from the following copy of an address presented to him by the Dominion Land Surveyors:

To Andrew Russell, Esq.,

The Surveyors throughout the Dominion of Canada take this opportune time of presenting you with this address, expressing as it does in but a feeble manner, the esteem in which you are held by the profession. During your fifty-four years of public service in the departments of the old Province of Canada, and of the Dominion of Canada, you have preserved that high standard of public morality, integrity and faultless character so worthy of emulation. In the Crown Lands Department, as well as in the Department of the Interior, you have left your ineffaceable mark; ever prompted by the sense of duty, regardless of personal ends. A generation has seen you in harness, unassuming but treading the path of honour. But our gratitude centres especially upon your professional career. It was you who introduced into Canada the use of the transit theodolite upon the public surveys, displacing the less accurate and variable compass. It was you who pointed to the stars for a sure guide instead of the ficklinagnetic pole. Through your unceasing effort surveying has attained its present high standard ever aiming higher, and is now an honourable profession. Rightly may we style you the father of astronomic surveying in Canada, and proud are we of so worthy a progenitor. May the laurely wreath you have won, resting in its snowy bed, brighten your remaining days in your quiet retreat, and posterity will record: "His work is well done." Signed on behalf of the surveyors, by

Dom. Land Surveyors.
A. H. COTTON, Sec.-Treasurer.

Howard, Allan McLean, Toronto, was born at York, now Toronto, in 1825. He is a son of James S. Howard, who was born in Bandon, Cork, Ireland, in 1798, and Salome McLean, born at Fredericton, New Brunswick, in 1792. His father was a grand. son of Nicolas Ouard, a Huguenot, who left lower Normandy, France, after the revocation of the Edict of Nantes, and settled in London. In 1819, he sailed for Canada, and obtained a situation with the Hon. Mr. Allan, who at that time held nearly all the offices in the town and district. When they were divided, in 1828, Mr. Howard was appointed postmaster, and this position he held till 1837, when he was most unjustly removed by Sir Francis Bond Head. In 1842. however, he was appointed treasurer of the old Home district, which then comprised the counties of Wellington, Simcoe, Peel, and Ontario. He died in 1866. Salome Mc-Lean, our subject's mother, was a daughter of the late Captain Archibald McLean, and grand-daughter of the late Captain James French, a loyalist officer in Delancy's corps. Captain McLean had command of a troop of horse in the New York Volunteers, serving through the American rebellion of 1776, and was wounded at the severely contested engagement of Eutaw Springs in South Carolina. In 1812, the same brave officer was adjutant of militia in New Brunswick, and represented the County of York in the legislature of that province for up-He died at his wards of twenty years. residence. Nashwaak, New Brunswick, in Mr. Howard was educated at the Home District Grammar school, conducted by Dr. McAulay, situated on the corner of New and March streets, now Jarvis and Lombard. He holds a captain's commission in the 7th battalion, Toronto, commanded by the H the Tren chants' co First Div since 1854 of Canada Life Insu the Ontar Howard held the o gate to th sition, he political disinclina party com ment of t independe it is not a alty so the itself, an ranks cou country. donald, a whose bro York, and eration Li had eight The eldes office; an charge of Teronto: charge of North-We youngest.

iers in the Howl C.B., K. citizen of English d being one emigrated landed on in 1620, numerous families in Sir Willia Duchess c born in th 1811. Hi of New Y than Hov former wa he engage bush, Ne cent, New Toronto, a age. Our derhook a 1830, sett]

and engag

by the Honourable G. W. Allan. During the Trent affair, he joined the 2nd Merchants' company. He has been clerk of the First Division Court in the County of York since 1854; is a director of the Central Bank of Canada; a director of the Confederation Life Insurance Company, and a director of the Ontario Industrial Loan Company. Mr. Howard is a zealous churchman, and has held the office of churchwarden and of delegate to the Synod. Owing to his official position, he has never taken an active part in political work; yet, notwithstanding his disinclination in that respect, should any party come into office with the dismemberment of the empire through such means as independence or annexation for a policy, it is not at all to be doubted that the lovalty so thoroughly bred in him would assert itself, and he would be found in the front ranks counselling allegiance to the mother country. In 1852, he married Miss Macdonald, a native of Edinburgh, Scotland, whose brother is treasurer of the County of York, and managing director of the Confederation Life Assurance Company. He has had eight children, two of whom are dead. The eldest is a clerk in the Division Court office; another, James Scott, is priest in charge of the parish of St. Matthews, in Teronto; Donald is practising law, and had charge of a company of Grenadiers in the North-West expeditionary force; and the youngest, Harold, is one of the paying tellers in the Central Bank.

Howland, Sir William Pearce, C.B., K.C.M.G., Toronto. This leading citizen of our western metropolis, is of English descent, his American progenitor being one John Howland, a Quaker, who emigrated with the band of pilgrims, who landed on the "bleak New England shores" in 1620, whose descendants are now very numerous, and include many prominent families in Canada and the United States. Sir William Pearce Howland is a native of Duchess county, New York state, and was born in the town of Paulings, 29th of May, 1811. His parents, who were also natives of New York (Duchess county), were Jonathan Howland and Lydia Pearce. former was in early life a farmer, but later he engaged in mercantile pursuits in Green-bush, New York. He died at Cape Vincent, New York, in 1842, and his widow in Toronto, a few years ago, at a very advanced age. Our subject was educated at the Kinderhook academy, and came to Canada in 1830, settling in the township of Toronto, and engaging in mercantile business, in partnership with his brother. They soon opened another branch of their business at Standley's mills. Their business brought them in connection with the early settlers of what now comprises the counties of Peel, York, Cardwell, and Simcoe. In 1840 he purchased the Lambton mills property, and soon after engaged in the wholesale grocery trade in Toronto. He is now extensively engaged in the milling business at several points in the province, and, in connection with his son, W. H. Howland. conducts one of the largest exporting produce establishments in the country. public were not long in perceiving Mr. Howland's adaptability to render them efficient service, and the many important positions which he has been called upon to fill, and the able and acceptable manner in which he has discharged his multifarious duties, evidence the possession of executive abilities of a high order. Sir William has been an influential member of the Toronto Board of Trade, and was its president for several years. He is also president of the Ontario Bank; president of the Anchor Marine Insurance Company; president of the London and Canadian Loan and Agency Company; president of the Ontario Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and president of the Confederation Life Association of Canada. To do justice to Sir W. Howland's long and useful political career would require space far in excess of that at our disposal, and we can therefore but briefly mention the official positions in which he has served. He was a member of the Executive Council, Canada, from May 24th, 1862, until March 29th, 1864; and again from November 24th, 1864, until the union; July 1st, 1867, was sworn in one of the Privy Council, and became minister of Inland Revenue, holding that position until July, 1868, when he was appointed lieutenant-governor of Ontario. In 1854, in conjunction with the late Hon. J. McMurrich, Mr. Gordon Brown, Hon. W. Mc-Master, and a few others, he made the first practical movement for the opening up and, as it eventually proved, final acquisition of the North-West territory. These gentlemen provided funds to send Captain Kennedy to that territory, with instructions to invest a certain sum in the products of the country, to return by the interior to Fort William, and report upon the practicability of the route, the character of the country, and the prospects for trade. This action was followed by the organization of a company, the purchase of a steamboat, and the commencement of the construction of a When on public business in England, in conjunction with Judge Sicotte, they organized a small committee, upon which the Barings and Glins were represented, to cooperate in such manner as was necessary to carry out the objects of the company in this country. They pressed their views upon the Imperial government and different administrations in Canada, and contended that if the Intercolonial Railway was built, that it would impose a burden upon Ontario quite out of proportion to any benefits to be derived from it, and in that case urged that as a compensation, and to obtain the acquisitions to the people in Ontario, that the government should take steps to acquire and open up the North-West, and the result is now before us. From 1857 to 1868 he represented the constituency of West York, first in the Canada Assembly until the union, and from that event, in the House of Commons. During the time Sir William was in the Executive Council he was minister of finance during the first year, and receiver-general during the second; postmaster-general from November 24th, 1864, until August 30th, 1866, when he was again appointed minister of finance, and held that office until he entered the Privy He was peculiarly fitted for the duties of the last-mentioned position, owing to his long and successful commercial experience, and conducted its affairs with signal ability. In 1865 the government appointed him a commissioner, with Mr. (now Sir) Alexander Galt, to visit Washington in the interests of reciprocal trade between the United States and Canada; was re-appointed to the same mission in connection with Sir A. T. Galt, the present Justice Henry, and Sir A. J. Smith, 1866; and to the London conference, 1866-67, to complete terms for the union of the British American provinces. Again in 1875, his services were required as a commissioner to report on the route of the proposed Baie Verte canal. From July, 1868, until November, 1873, Sir W. Howland filled the position of lieutenant-governor of Ontario, and upon his retirement therefrom left behind him an enviable record of official probity and administrative ability. appointment to the chief civil office of the province was one which met with much favour from the public generally as well as from his party, and the highest expectations of his friends were not disappointed. As a partial recognition of his distinguished public services, Her Majesty created him C.B. (civil) in July, 1867, and in May. 1879, conferred upon him the order of knighthood. Sir William has been twice married, first in 1843, to Mrs. Webb, who died in 1859; again in 1866, to the widow of the late Captain Hunt. He has three surviving children, two sons and one daughter. Sir William is modest and unassuming in disposition, courteous in manner, self-possessed and dignified in demeanour, honourable in the highest sense; possessing the instincts which characterize the true gentleman, he affords a fine example of a successful and useful career, and one worthy of imitation.

William Henry, Deputy Griffin, Postmaster General of Canada, was born When he had reachon August 7th, 1812. ed his seventeenth year, he entered the Imperial civil service as a clerk in the office of the deputy postmaster general, and four years later, the authorities perceiving his very great efficiency, promoted him to the position of surveyor of Post-offices, east of Kingston. When the post-office was transferred to provincial control in 1851, Mr. Griffin was made secretary; and on June 12th, 1857, he was appointed deputy postmaster general of old Canada. The year following the completion of Confederation, he became deputy postmaster general of the Dominion, and has remained in that position ever since. Mr. Griffin has always exhibited a marked capacity for administration, and is, perhaps, one of the most thorough and efficient officers in the entire civil ser-He has, it might be said, consecrated vice. his life to his duties; and where his duties are there lie all his attention and his interest. The government has always recognized Mr. Griffin's fine abilities, and especially his capacity for organization. In 1868 it was considered necessary to re-organize the civil service, and Mr. Griffin was appointed one of the commissioners to carry out this object. He was likewise a member of the Civil Service Commission of 1862. He has been a member of the Board of Audit since the organization of that body in 1858; and since 1864 has been a member of the Board of Excise, Customs and Stamps. It was Mr. Griffiin who negotiated the postal convention with the United States in 1875. He is vice-president of the Civil Service Building and Savings Society; and is also chairman of the Civil Service Board. Mr-Griffin is still hale and hearty, exhibits the same excellent capacity for administration as he did in his more youthful days, and we Will Aug Beth Cana the f daug tish (voted Beth ing a he st of 182 retur famil that] to the

lose s

tion o

to Yo

he in

doub

years

Nei

Seco1

B

classi applie wise l aforet deaco year v of Qu by, h then chief : settle dawn, the di the y was a thwar into h in this zeal, appoir tained vears l

Bethur in St. bishop ern N consect sion sh Dr. Stu died at statem "Those his dec

Strach

have e

doubt not that there are yet for him many years of official usefulness.

C. B.:

879,

ght-

ied.

l in

the

ring

Sir

dis-

pos-

3137-

the

tle-

ess-

v of

uty

orn

ach-

the

ffice

on

his

the

t of

ans-Mr.

une

ost-

rear

on,

the

osi-

on.

agh

er.

ties

er-

ted

his

the

has ace

nd ird vas

n-(5.

Bethune, Right Rev. Alexander Neil, D.D., D.C.L.—The late Mr Bethune, second Bishop of Toronto, was born in Williamstown, in the County of Glengarry, in August, 1800. His father was the Rev. John Bethune, the first Presbyterian minister of Canada, and our distinguished subject was the fifth son of a family of six sons and three daughters. The Bethune family was of Scottish origin, and settled in Canada with the devoted band of U. E. loyalists in 1783. Young Bethune received his early educational training at the Cornwall Grammar school, where he studied under Dr. Strachan; but the war of 1812 broke up this school, and the student returned to Montreal, where he joined his family, resuming his studies. It appears that Dr. Strachan had taken a strong liking to the lad Bethune, and was resolved not to lose sight of him; so when, upon the invitation of General Brock, the doctor removed to York to take charge of the school there, he invited Mr. Bethune to assist him as classical tutor. To this duty the young man applied himself with diligence, and he likewise began the study of divinity under his aforetime master. He was admitted to deacon's order, in 1823, and the following year was ordained priest by Bishop Mountain of Quebec. Spending a few years at Grimsby, he was appointed rector of Cobourg, then known as Hamilton, this being the chief town in the Newcastle district. settlement at this period was only in its dawn, and laborious and trying were the duties that fell upon the shoulders of the young missionary; but Mr. Bethune was a man whom obstacles could not thwart, and he threw his whole energy into his work. For forty years did he labour in this charge, illustrious for his ability, his zeal, and his industry. In 1847, he was appointed archdeacon of York, but still retained his Cobourg charge. After twenty years had elapsed the advanced age of Bishop Strachan made it necessary that he should have episcopal assistance, and in 1867, Dr. Bethune was consecrated coadjutor bishop, in St. James' Cathedral, Toronto, by the bishops of Toronto, Huron, Ontario, Western New York and Michigan. Upon his consecration it was provided that the succession should fall to him upon the death of Dr. Strachan. The pious and zealous bishop died at Toronto, in February, 1879. This statement we find in a work at our hand: Those who only saw Bishop Bethune during his declining years can form little conception of his earlier labours. When at Cobourg, in addition to his periodical and archdiaconal work, he lectured on theology, and also conducted a church newspaper, without in the slightest degree neglecting the duties he owed to the flock committed to his charge. Bishop Bethune wrote a number of works chiefly upon theological and devotional subjects; and his most noteworthy production was one of more general character entitled, 'Memoir of the Right Reverend John Strachan, D.D., LL.D., first Bishop of Toronto." Dr. Bethune married a daughter of the Honourable James Crooks, by whom he had ten children, five of whom survive. Of these may be mentioned the Rev. Charles James Stewart Bethune, M.A., head master of the Trinity college school, Port Hope, (vide biographical sketch), who has gained more than a Canadian reputation through his ability as an entomologist. We make the following extract from a sermon preached in St. Peter's church, Cobourg, on the 9th February, 1879, by the venerable John Wilson, M.A., after the funeral of Bishop Bethune. "The younger clergy, who now complain af privation and suffering, little know what was patiently endured by their elder brethren, when most of this country was a wilderness, and the difficulties of travelling from place to place almost insuperable. And yet all was patiently borne, if so be they might be instrumental in carrying the glad tidings of salvation to their poor and destitute brethren. I have accompanied our dear departed friend, while he was rector of this parish, in many a toilsome journey, and shared with him in many an act of self-denial, and I never heard one impatient or complaining word escape his lips, but all was borne with the most examplary patience and fortitude. But why need I dwell on these things? His unceasing labours are well known to you all. For some forty years he went in and out among you, visiting the sick, comforting the mourners, and administering the consolations of religion as they were needed. In a word, he was a model parish priest; and the result of his faithful labours is still manifest and deeply cherished by many a devout and faithful christian heart throughout this community."

MacCabe, John Alexander, M.A., Principal of the Normal School, Ottawa, was born in the County of Cavan, Ireland, on the 9th of January, 1842. Mr. MacCabe was educated chiefly in the Irish National schools, and at the Normal School, Dublin, Ireland. His career as a master has been an active and an important one, as the following record will show. He was English and mathematical master in the diocesan seminaries of Belfast, Kilmore and Killarney, Ireland; was (1869) mathematical master in the Provincial Normal School, Truro, Nova Scotia, and at his own request was transferred to the English master-ship in the latter school. In 1875 he became Principal of the Provincial Normal School at Ottawa. Mr. MacCabe takes an active interest in many organizations proper to his position. He is president of the St. Patrick's Literary Association; president of the Particular Council of the Society of Saint Vincent de Paul; president of Branch 28 C. M. B. A. He is likewise a member of the head quarters board of examiners of candidates for admission to the Royal Military College, Kingston, and a member of the board of examiners for Carleton He was graduated B. A. at the Our subject University of Ottawa in 1877. married, on the 29th of April, 1869, Kate Anna, only child of James Kelly, of Ennistymon, County Clare, Ireland. It will be inferred from the foregoing that activity and energy are qualities in Mr. MacCabe's character; two essentials for every successful educationist. At a superficial glance it would be impossible to estimate the importance of the educational and literary bent of a man whose methods and opinions become law with a large portion of the teachers in our public schools, and the attainments of Mr. MacCabe are said to be very satisfactory to the Minister of Education and to the profession. He is well grounded, is master of the approved educational methods. and gets the credit of keeping himself in line with the advancing age. He is a Roman catholic.

McColman, Neil, M.P.P., was born in the parish of Kilcoman, Island of Islay, Argyleshire, on the 15th of February, 1834. He is a son of Peter McColman and Ann McAffer, daughter of the late Duncan McAffer, of the village of Kilnare, on the west coast of Islay. Our subject's father adopted the life of a farmer, and with the outflow of emigration, came to Canada in He settled in Caledon West, where he remained for four years, then he removed to the township of Collingwood and began as a farmer. He is still living and in his 86th year. Mrs. McColman died in 1878. There was left a family of six, the subject of our sketch being the second youngest. Neil McColman received a common school education in Islay, Scotland. After coming to this country, being then only twelve years of age, he began farming, and con. tinued at this occupation with good success, until 1882, when he retired, and rented his farm of 100 acres. He then removed to Thornbury to superintend the construction of the harbour works in that village, where he still resides. In 1867, Mr. McColman was elected to the township council of Collingwood, and in 1869 was elected reeve for the same township, and he was reelected for several years afterwards. 1884, upon the death of the late A. W. Lauder, M. P. P., he contested the representation for the East Riding of Grey for the Ontario house against Robert Myles, of Euphrasia township, and he succeeded in defeating his opponent by a majority of 622 votes, which was a very decided victory. Our subject is a member of the Orange Association, and has held the office of master for some years. At present he is district chaplain of Collingwood District, and is a member of Lodge No. 1087. He is a man of wide and ripened experience, and has travelled through the greater part of Canada and the United States. In politics Mr. McColman is a Liberal-Conservative, and was president of the East Grey Conservative Association for six or seven years. He resigned this office at the time of his elec-He is a member of the Provincial tion. Liberal-Conservative Association. He was married, in 1857, to Martha Green, daughter of Maymon Green, of the County of York, a native of Yorkshire, England, and by this lady has a family of six children. Mr. McColman's public career, has, so far. been a credit to him, and those who have watched his administrative abilities in municipal matters, consider him a shrewd. level-headed man, and fit to take a place in any deliberate assembly.

W

co

hi

he

we

ba

set

ear

an

Te

dri

era

rea

ang

per

and

me

Car

occi

bus Wi

has

183

use

nun

pera

80-C

the

fron

the

visit

pres

man.

vive.

riage

and

the c

in 18

lishe

issue

a wee

Dougall, John, New York (late of There are few men now living Montreal). who have done more good as a journalist and a temperance reformer than the subject of our sketch. John Dougall was born in the town of Paisley, Scotland, on the 8th of July, 1808, and was descended from an intelligent and thrifty ancestry. His grandfather, Duncan Dougall, who was only thirtysix years older than his grandson, John Dougall, was the son of a well-to do weaver, and was engaged as a manufacturer of mus-This gentleman, was an enthusiastic tory, even in the midst of the most rampant radicalism, and a man of imperious but affectionate nature, passionately fond of flowers, a taste for which descended to his grandchildren. His son, John Dougall, the father of our subject, was said to have been the greatest reader in Paisley, and a keen reformer. He gave his two sons, John (of Montreal), and James (of Windsor), a desultory education, including almost unlimited reading, and to encourage the lads in their love for learning, started a boys' literary club in his own house. Out of this club, which consisted of six members, sprang one poet and three journalists, all of considerable note. John Dougall, with the idea of going to South America, learned the Spanish language. But this field of enterprise was abandoned, and, at the age of eighteen, in 1826, he sailed for Canada, taking with him a large assortment of goods, with the view of establishing a branch house and a commission business. In the prosecution of his business he travelled a good deal, and became familiar with the then rising towns west of Montreal, and a winter spent in the backwoods of Lanark gave him an insight into the privations suffered by our pioneer settlers. Mr. Dougall was temperate from early youth, but not until 1828 did he take an active part in the temperance movement. Temperance (that is abstinence from strong drink, but the use of wine and beer in moderation) was first publicly advocated in Montreal, in 1828, by the Rev. Mr. Christmas, and out of this sprang the Montreal Temperance Society, which Mr. Dougall joined, and at once became one of its most active members. He then became editor of the Canada Temperance Advocate, the organ of the new departure, and this position he ably occupied, in addition to carrying on his other business, until 1846, when he started The Witness newspaper, with which his name has been for so many years identified. In 1835 it was discovered that the moderate use of wine and beer did not decrease the number of drunkards, the Montreal Temperance Society therefore abandoned the so-called temperance pledge, and adopted the more sensible one of total abstinence from all drinks that intoxicate. In 1838, the Rev. Dr. Kirk, of Boston, having visited Montreal, Mr. Dougall was so impressed with the preaching of this zealous man, that the piety of his boyhood was revivel, and in 1840, shortly after his marriage, he joined the Congregational Church, and has remained a consistent member of the church ever since. The Witness started in 1846; continued for ten years to be published as a weekly sheet; and then it was issued as a semi-weekly, a tri-weekly, and a weekly. In 1860 a daily edition was added

welve

con-

ccess.

ented

noved

struc-

llage.

(cColcil of

reere

s re-

. In . W.

repre-

ey for

ies, of

ed in

of 622

ctory.

range

mas-

istrict

l is a

a man

d has

anada

Mr.

. and

erva-

· He

elec-

incia

e was

augh-

ty of

, and dren.

o far.

have

n mu-

rewd.

ce in

te of

iving

nalist

bject rn in 8th of an in-

rand-

hirty.

John

aver,

mus-

iastic

pant

it af-

flow-

rand-

at the low price of one half-penny, and, though maintaining the strict religious and temperance character of its predecessors, it rapidly reached, through the interest excited by the American war, what was then an unprecedented and startling circulation. Such was the early success of this venture in point of acceptance with the people, that its founder never ceased to contrive how to secure the establishment of daily papers of similar character in other places. He visited several cities, spoke at an International Young Men's Christian Association Convention in behalf of cheap daily Christian newspapers; addressed, on the same subject several important religious gatherings, and conferred with the editors of religious weeklies about beginning daily editions, but found no one prepared to try the experiment. Owing largely, perhaps, to the failure of the New York World to carry out the similar religious intentions of its founders, the proposal was not carried out till 1871, when Mr. Dougall was practically encouraged by a gentleman of means to commence the enterprise himself, and the New York Daily Witness was begun, and carried on for seven years, when it was obliged to succumb at last during the depression of 1878, after a large sum of money had been expended in it; but it left behind it the New York Weekly Witness, which now has a circulation approaching a hundred thousand copies weekly, and it is believed, exercises an influence in that country second to no other publication. Though Mr. Dougall is now in his seventy-seventh year, he is still hale and hearty, and apparently has a good many years of usefulness still before him. The Montreal Witness has been under the management of John Redpath Dougall since his father went to New York in 1871, and we are pleased to say that it is one of the most popular papers in the province of Quebec, and taking its daily and weekly circulation into account, is, perhaps, the most largely read newspaper in Canada. It is almost unnecessary to say that John Redpath Dougall has followed in the footsteps of his father, and is a staunch advocate of Temperance and Prohibition.

Smythe, Edward H, Q.C., LL.D., Kingston, Ontario, was born at Wymondham, near Melton Mowbray, Leicestershire, England, in the year 1844. He is a son of the Reverend W. Herbert Smythe, formerly of the diocese of Huron, and subsequently of Tamworth, diocese of Ontario. Young Smythe received his early educational instruction at the North London Collegiate school, England, and the London Grammar School. In 1863 he entered Toronto University, from which institution he graduated In obtaining his Arts de-B.A., in 1867. gree, Mr. Smythe entered the office of the late Thomas Kirkpatrick, where he began a study of the law. In 1870 he was called to the bar, and at once, with the energy which has always characterized him, began to practice his profession. But he had more than energy; he had a sound knowledge of the law, and he had unusual ability. It is no great wonder that he made his mark in his profession. In 1881 he received the degree of LL.D.; and in 1885 he was invested with the silken gown of counsellor. He likewise holds two silver medals. Mr. Smythe served during the Fenian disturbance of 1866 and 1870; and he was present with the University Rifles during the action at Limeridge, on the 2nd of June, 1866. He was major in the Princess of Wales Own Rifles, but retired in 1881, retaining rank. To civic politics likewise has our subject given considerable and very earnest attention. He was for four years an alderman for the city, and was mayor during 1885. He is likewise a member of the board of trustees for the Collegiate Institute. Is past president of St. George's society of Kingston, and warden of Ancient St. John's, No. 3, A.F. & A. M. He married, in 1872, Eliza, eldest daughter of George M. Wilkinson, of Kingston. Mr. Smythe is an Anglican in religion, and a Conservative in politics. Carmichael, James, Oshawa, was born in Argyleshire, Scotland, on February 9th, 1821. His father was James Carmichael, and his mother's maiden name was Cowan. Her family is very old in the annals of Argyleshire. Our subject came to Canada in 1842, and his people followed him three years later. He was educated at a parish school in Scotland, and later on in Glasgow. In that city also he was apprenticed to a dry goods dealer, in 1837, and remained in this occupation till he sailed for Canada in 1842. He first went to St. Thomas, and then to London, taking situations in dry goods houses. In 1846 he removed to Toronto, and began business here in 1848, for himself, in the dry goods line. In 1853 he opened a branch in Oshawa, and in 1854 he opened another branch in Prince Albert. In 1873 he retired from the dry goods business in Oshawa, having in the meantime disposed of his other branches. In 1873 he began the manufacture of stoves and this business he conducted for eight years, and then sold out. In 1877 he became postmaster, and has retained this position ever since. He has been a school trustee for twenty years, and this fact affords some evidence of the interest he has taken in education. He also took much interest in municipal affairs, and was reeve for some time. He was manager and president of the Oshawa Stove Company, while he was connected with that company. He is a master mason of Cedar Lodge, and is highly regarded among his brethren. He has travel. led extensively through the United States, and visited all parts of Canada. In religion he is an Episcopalian, and his politics are in accord with those held by Alexander Mackenzie and Edward Blake. He has always taken a deep interest in public affairs, and at one time received unanimous nomination for South Ontario, but private business relations prevented his acceptance of nomination to enter the House of Commons, and so refused to run for parliamentary honours. He married Frances Dain, from Newcastleunder-Lyne, England. She died in 1871. Mr. Carmichael is very genial in his manners, and is looked up to as a leading man in the town of Oshawa, and he has well earned the respect and the high regard in which he is held.

Innes, William Patrick, Simcoe, was born at Inverdruie, Rothiemurchus, Inverness-shire, Scotland, on the 6th of November, 1832. His parents were Robert and Amelia, the maiden-name of his mother being Patterson. Mr. Innes, senior, was a mechanical engineer and draughtsman, and was very noted in his profession. He died in 1853, in the town of Inverness, Scotland, leaving a family of seven children, of which William Patrick was the third. Mr. Innes is descended of one of the oldest families in Scotland. The family line is traced back to the reign of Malcolm IV. of Scotland (1157). At this time a charter was granted to one Beroaldus de Flandrensis, who came from Flanders. Upon settling in Scotland this person took the local name of Innes, which means island or peninsula. Part of his property was situated in Moray-The subject of this sketch received a fair education, and after leaving school went to Glasgow, where he entered the employ of J. & P. Stewart, iron merchants and manufacturers, where he remained for one year, and on the failure of this firm he went to Dalkeith, near Edinburgh, where he entered the employ of David Pursell, of the Elmfield Iron Works, situated at Dalkeith, near Edinburgh. His employment here at first was that of cashier, but subsequently he the :
Grin
this :
ness
and
years
and c buye separ
chase

bec:

to g

land

ceed

mar

We

sive

join

and

ente

syth

men

part

disti

bein

a pa

In 1

and

this

then

gus, stean das, In th ing a the to partn place. contra tired with with : Port 1 can c fishing purch localit for ab chased Curtis Willia busine his nep ed the tired fi the gro Dr. Ja coe; I Judge became manager. He resolved, however, to go to Canada, and in September, 1857, landed in Quebec. From Quebec he proceeded to Dundas, where he engaged as manager in the employ of J. M. Kirby, of West Flamboro', who carried on an extensive milling and distillery business conjointly. He remained here for about a year, and then returned to the town of Dundas, entering the employ of Billington & Forsythe, manufacturers of agricultural imple-Two years later he entered into partnership with John Walton, brewer and distiller, at Chatham, Ontario, the firm being known as Walton & Innes. Although a partner in this concern, he still retained his position with Billington & Forsythe. In 1860 he purchased his partner's interest, and removing to Chatham, he carried on this business there for about two years. He then sold the premises and removed to Fergus, where he entered into partnership in the foundry business with the late James Grindley. Four years later he retired from this firm, and then took charge of the business of James Coleman, a large manufacturer and grain merchant in Dundas. For two years he remained in the establishment. and during this time was the principal grain buyer as well as general manager. Before separating himself from this firm he purchased the business of Cameron & Innes, steamboat owners and forwarders, of Dundas, carrying on the enterprise till 1873. In this year he retired from business, selling all his property. In 1874 he removed to the town of Simcoe, where he entered intopartnership with George Jackson, of that place, in the manufacture of furniture and contracting. Two years later Mr. Innes retired from the firm. During his connection with Mr. Jackson he was also connected with a large fish-freezing establishment at Port Ryerse, Lake Erie, where an American company was engaged in pound-net fishing. The company failed, and Mr. Innes purchased the entire fishing interest in that locality, carrying on the business there for about four years. He likewise purchased the grocery establishment of John Curtis, of Simcoe, and took his nephew, William Brander, into partnership. business was carried on until 1881, when, his nephew coming of age, Mr. Innes handed the establishment over to him, and retired from the firm. While connected with the grocery business, he, in connection with Dr. James Hayes, at present mayor of Simcoe; R. T. Livingston, barrister, and now Judge Livingston; Joseph Jackson, lumber

00

ne

in

in

ne

he

n-

ter

reel-

es,

on

in

ac-

ys

at

ion

re-

in-

nd

rs.

le-

71.

an-

an ell

ne,

us, Vo-

ert

her

nd ied

ot-

en, rd.

est

sis, in of > red ool inind one ent en-

th,

merchant, now member of the Dominion Parliament for South Norfolk, established the Simcoe Canning Company, which business continued until 1881, when Mr. Jackson and the subject of this sketch purchased the interest of the other members of the The newly-organized business was conducted under the name of the Simcoe Canning Company. The business, which still continues, and is attended with abundant success, consists in the canning and preserving of all kinds of fruits, vegetables, poultry, etc. The firm have also in connection with the canning department, extensive evaporators for drying fruits and vege-The establishment employs about tables. one hundred hands, during the busy season. They purchase all the surplus stock of fruits and vegetables in the surrounding country, besides importing large quantities from other sections of Canada and the United States. The trade of this enterprising house now extends through all of Canada, and there are occasional shipments to Great Britain and South America. Mr. Innes was a member of the Dundas artillery company, under Colonel William Notman; and has been a member of the Simcoe school board for a number of years. He has been connected with almost every great enterprise near him in a prominent way; and has always given his support to the Conservative party when political questions arose. He has been an elder of St. Paul's (Presbyterian) church for several years. In 1868, he married Marion Livingstone, daughter of the Rev. M. W. Livingstone, Presbyterian minister, Simcoe. The fruit of this union is a family of six children, four boys and two girls. Altogether our subject's career has been one of unusual energy, enterprise, and business pluck.

Baker, William John, Belleville, was born on the 9th May, 1835, in Belleville, Canada. His father, John Baker, was a native of England, who came to Canada with the British troops at an early period. When he left the army he settled in Belleville, where afterwards, as we have seen, was born the subject of this sketch. William John Baker received his early educational instruction at a private school, for at this time public schools had not been established at Belleville, or in its neighbourhood. made the very most of his opportunities, and by and by, when the world lay before him, through which he must win his way, he was not unprepared, in an intellectual sense, for the work. He was apprenticed to the trade of carriage-making, and after faithfully serving his time, in 1861 he commenced business on his own account. 1883 he was elected alderman in Belleville, and was re-elected for 1884 and 1885; and we presume that it will fall to the next who writes a sketch of his life to note that some time after 1885 he occupied the mayor's chair. In religion he is a Presbyterian. He married in August, 1855, Emily, daughter of Captain Edward Thomas, of Kingston, Ontario, and by this union there were twelve children, seven of whom are living, namely, two boys and five girls. His eldest son, William Hanry, who had been associated with his father in the business, died recently, at the age of twenty-nine years. Our subject has a son, Frederick Charles, at Prince Albert, and during the late Riel uprising, a house belonging to him at Duck Lake was gutted by the half-breeds. We may add that Mr. Baker is a most enthusiastic sportsman. His business is a firmly established and extensive one, and is understood to be making wholesome progress all the time. Carroll, Dr. James, M.A., Norwich, Ontario, was born on the 4th of December. 1829, in the township of Toronto, County of York. He is a son of Lieutenant-Colonel William Carroll and Ann McIntosh, of the City of Toronto, who settled there about 1809. She was a sister of the late John Mc-Intosh, M.P. for the old Parliament of Upper Canada. This lady died in 1863. Our subject's grandfather was an old U. E. loyalist, who fought on the British side in 1776, and after the triumph of independence, left his home in Maryland, and proceeded to Fredericton, New Brunswick. The family came originally from Ireland. Mr. Carroll resided in New Brunswick till 1809, when he removed to the province of Ontario, settling with his family in the town of York, where he remained until his death. His son, William Carroll, took up a bush farm in the County of York, where he remained till 1842. During the war of 1812-15, he took an active part in the defence of his country, and was present at the battle of Lundy's Lane, at the taking of Fort Niagara, and in several other engagements. In 1842, he removed to the township of Norwich, where he again engaged in farming, continuing so employed till his death in 1864. Mr. Carroll was a brother of the late Rev. Dr. Carroll, Methodist pastor of Toronto, who died some time ago. He was a staunch Liberal, and always fought sturdily in the cause of political progress. Dr. James Carroll was the youngest of six chil- his profession, and at Ottawa he has remain-dren. He received a good education, partly through private tuition, and partly through attendance at the common schools. After leaving school he proceeded to Toronto, and entered upon the study of medicine in the Toronto School of Medicine, graduating from that institution with his M.D. in 1852. He then returned to the town of Norwich. where he at once began to practice his profession. Close attention and great professional proficiency bore their fruit in a large and remunerative practice. Dr. Carroll was a member of the Canadian Militia, and acted as surgeon in the organization. For some years he held the position of president of the Brantford, Norfolk and Port Burwell Railway Company. Like his father, he was a faithful Liberal. His religious professions were those of Methodism. He married in 1858, Emily Cromwell, daughter of the late John Cromwell, of the township of South Norwich. She died in 1860, leaving no family, and the Doctor followed her on the 31st of October, 1885, and in his fiftyseventh year, deeply regretted by a large circle of friends.

e p bi fo si fii ha G

ex sh lic

ev Co Th

an

is

ve:

col

a c

his

ter

cul

mo

He

far

tra

thr

ber

int

wel

tari

Rai

bor

Rol

fast

for

and

tow

Mr.

cou

cent

to n

a m whe

bus

Lar

Dur

mas

Bish

thro

certi

the .

lion,

Bran

the

Col.

Hodgins, John, Ottawa, Barrister-at-Law, etc., was born at Huntley, County of Carleton, August 12th, 1852. Our subject is a son of the late James Hodgins, one of the first pioneers of the Ottawa Valley, and grandson of the late Thomas Hodgins, who came to this country in 1821, and settled in the Ottawa Valley when it was a complete wilderness, and civilization in its infancy. His mother. Eliza Holmes, was daughter of the late William Holmes, of the East India service. Both parents were of Irish descent, and died some years ago. John Hodgins received his early educational instruction at Huntley, and afterwards he entered the old County Grammar School of Carleton (now the Collegiate Institute). In 1870 he was gold medallist of this institution; and he took, during his course, the highest honours in the school. He afterwards proceeded to Toronto, where he pursued his studies with close application, so close indeed, that his health failed him, and he was obliged to close his books. He then entered the civil service of Canada, but of this life he soon grew tired; and in 1874 he began the study of law in the office of Cameron, McMichael & Hoskins, Toronto. He pursued his studies in the Law School at Osgoode Hall, whence he took his degree in law. In 1879 he was called to the bar of Ontario, but shortly afterwards he removed to Ottawa, where he began the practice of ed since. Close application, good ability, and personal and professional integrity soon brought their reward. It was not long before Mr. Hodgins found himself in possession of a lucrative and wide-extending practice; and he is now head of the well-known firm of Hodgins, Kidd & Rutherford. He has taken some interest in military matters. and holds a commission in the Governor-General's Foot Guards. Mr. Hodgins is not exclusively shut up in his profession, but shows that he possesses a wide spirit of public enterprise. He is connected with nearly every important public enterprise in the County of Carleton and in his adopted city. These enterprises comprise stock companies and kindred organizations. Mr. Hodgins is a Liberal-Conservative, and belongs to a very old Conservative family. He takes considerable interest in politics, having been a candidate for the legislature in 1883, for his native county. He takes a deep interest in everything connected with agriculture, in which occupation he has been more or less engaged during his lifetime. He is at present the owner of an extensive farm in the township of Huntley. He has travelled extensively on this continent and through Europe. In religion, he is a member of the Episcopal church, and is deeply interested in everything pertaining to its welfare.

ltly

igh ter

in

ing

ch.

ro-

es-

rge vas

act-

me

t of

rell

was ons

in

ate

uth

no

the

ity-

rge

at.

of

ect

e of

ind

vho

l in

ete

cy.

of

dia

nt,

ins

l at

the

ton

he

nd

est

ro-

his

in-

red

life

gan

ur-

red

Robert, Stratford, On-Larmour, tario, District Superintendent Grand Trunk Railway, in the County of Dundas, was born in September, 1841. His parents, Robert and Elizabeth, were born near Belfast, Ireland, from which city they sailed for Canada, on the day of their marriage, and on their arrival they settled in the township of Matilda, County of Dundas. Mr. Larmour is one of the pioneers of that county, and he has now lived over half a century on the farm where he felled the trees to make room for his shanty. He served as a militiaman at the battle of the Windmill, when that place was invested by the fillibusters from the hunter's lodges. Young Larmour, our subject, was educated at the Dundas County Grammar School, the headmaster at that time being Mr. Carmen, now Bishop Carmen, of Cobourg. He passed through all the forms, and took a teacher's certificate, the late Rev. Dr. Ryerson being the examiner. He joined the 3rd Battal-lion, Grand Trunk Railway Brigade, at Brantford, as captain in 1866, and obtained the rank of major; and he served under Col. Wolesley, at Thorold camp, in 1867. Mr. Larmour was employed as assistant of the postmaster, Geo. Brouse, when only sixteen years old. Here he learned telegraphy, and he afterwards entered the service of the Montreal Telegraph Company, and was transferred from that company to the Grand Trunk Railway Company, on the completion of the line from Montreal to Brockville. He is a master mason, and was made in 1864, in Elgin Lodge, Montreal. In religion he professes Episcopalianism. He married, on the 25th of December, 1866, Lizzie Gardham, daughter of John and Elizabeth Gardham, both of whom were born in England, but removed to Canada early in life. For some years they lived in Kingston, where the father of Mrs. Gardham held the position of military storekeeper, under the Imperial government. Shortly after entering the service of the Grand Trunk Railway (with which company he has now been connected for twentyeight years), Mr. Larmour was removed to Island Pond, Vermont; thence to Portland, and to various other points on the Atlantic and St. Lawrence division, until the completion of the Victoria Bridge, when he was removed to Montreal, and later on to Kingston, and again to Montreal. When the Prince of Wales visited Canada, our subject was chosen telegrapher, and whose duty it was to accompany the Prince when he was travelling through the country. In 1865, on the retirement of O. S. Wood, he applied for the position of superintendent of the Montreal Telegraph Company, and was warmly supported in his application by many of the then directors. will be remembered by many that the question of the appointment of Mr. Wood's successor was brought before the Legislative Assembly, then sitting in Quebec, and was finally decided that the venerable secretary, James Dakers, should assume the management without appointing a successor to Mr. Wood. He was appointed district superintendent of the Buffalo and Goderich district of the Grand Trunk Railway, in the spring of 1866 and took up his residence at Brantford. In June of that year the Fenian raid at Fort Erie took place. He was at Fort Erie the morning of the crossing, and sent the first alarm to the general in command at Toronto. retreated, with all the rolling stock of the railway, to Port Colborne, and took a prominent part in the movements of volunteers until the affair was over. For this he was specially thanked by the board of directors, and he has now in his possession a number of letters showing the high value set upon his cool-headedness, and prompt, wise action, at a time when confusion was everywhere. In 1869, our subject was removed to Stratford, having the line from Stratford to London and Sarnia added. Afterwards was added the line to Detroit and Jackson, Michigan, and finally the line from Stratford to Toronto, and from Port Dover to Wiarton and Durham. He was relieved of the charge of lines in Michigan.

Lewis, John, Belleville, Ontario, the longest established hardware merchant of that place, is a native of Chatham, England, where he was born on March 31st, 1821. Though of English birth, he is of pure Welsh extraction, both his parents having been natives of Wales. His father, Lewis Lewis, enlisted in the British army early in life, and was drafted into the Royal engineers. In 1823 his corps was sent to the West Indies, and during his service there, his children resided with their grandparents, near Aberystwith, South Wales. The family moved to Devonport, England, in 1827, and lived there until 1831, when Lewis Lewis came to Quebec with his regiment, and his family came with him. The elder Lewis was a singularly upright and God-fearing man, and was so noted in the regiment for his piety that he was dubbed by his com-rades "the holy Lewis." The influence of his precept and example was not lost on his His eldest son, Eben, became a children. prominent and useful minister of the Congregational church, in England, and afterwards laboured for many years and with distinguished success as a missionary in Hindostan. John, the fourth son, and the subject of this notice, was, in 1834, apprenticed to a liquor merchant, but the business was distasteful to him, and after his five years apprenticeship had expired, he abandoned the calling, and went into the hardware business. For eight years, from 1841 to 1849, he served as a clerk in a wholesale house in Montreal; but his enterprise and ambition prompted him at last to launch into business on his own account, and in September, 1849, he established the first hardware store in Belleville, and he has continued this business ever since. Lewis has also done much towards encouraging the manufacturing interests of Belleville. He was for some time engaged in the lumber business on an extensive scale, and was largely interested in the manufacture of skates, carriage springs and hames; but none of these enterprises proving profitable, they were one after the other abandoned. Mr. Lewis is generally regarded as one of the soundest and ablest of Belleville's business men. He has several times been elected by his fellow citizens to represent them at the municipal board, and while he served as a town councillor, he was an energetic and faithful guardian of the town's interests. Mr. Lewis was a member of the first Oddfellows' lodge established in Montreal, the Prince of Wales lodge, which he joined in 1844. He is also a member of the Masonic craft; and has for many years been on the commission of the peace. From early manhood Mr. Lewis has been in politics a staunch supporter of Reform principles, and was on one occasion the standard bearer of his party. When the provincial elections occurred in 1875, he was president of the West Hastings Reform Association, and was selected by the reformers of that riding to contest it in their interest. There were two other candidates in the field,—the reform vote was split,—and after a vigerous and exciting campaign, he was defeated by a In religion Mr. Lewis narrow majority. has been a Methodist all his life, having joined the church of his father and grandfather, whilst yet a lad, and remained in it up to the present time. For many years he has been secretary to the Board of Trustees of the church to which he belongs. He has been twice married. In 1851 he was wedded to Mary E. Jones, eldest daughter of Rev. R. Jones, of Cobourg, Ontario, and a large family was the result of this union. In 1871 Mrs. Lewis died, and two years later Mr. Lewis placed her sister at the head of his household.

Rattray, William J., Toronto.-The late Mr. Rattray was born in London, England, in 1835. The family came to Canada in 1848, and settled in Toronto. Mr. Rattray, sr., carried on business as a baker for many years on Yonge street, Toronto, and was highly respected as a citizen. William entered the Toronto University in 1854, and devoted himself earnestly to study, especially in the department of metaphysics and philosopy, and soon developed rare intellectual gifts as an active reasoner. He was elected prize-speaker and president of the College Literary Society, and his clear and thoughtful utterances soon won for him a brilliant reputation among the young men of his time. On graduating, he carried off the gold medal in mental science. Mr. Rattray was for many years before his death, connected with the Toronto press, his most noteworthy work being done on The Mail. A series of articles which appeared weekly in this paper, extending over several years,

P H

G

m

ar

he

dealing with the conflict between agnosticst of ism in its various forms and revealed religveral ion, excited a great deal of attention at the as to time, and were greatly admired by a wide and circle of readers. They presented the orthowas dox side of the question with great force the and ability. He also wrote articles to the mber Canadian Monthly, and was amongst its most ed in popular contributors. The last work on hich which he was engaged was the "Scott in British North America," a four volume book er of years which will forever reflect credit on its author, Fromand he had nearly completed the last volpoliume, when death came and put a stop to his prinfurther usefulness here. Mr. Rattray's indard tellect was an unusually active one, and his ncial brilliant natural faculties were cultivated by ident assiduous steady and constant reflection. Estion, sentially a many-sided man intellectually, he that displayed equal power and grasp of his subhere ject in dealing with current political and soc--the ial topics, as in grappling with the deeper crous problems of life and eternity, which of later by a years engrossed so much of his thoughts. .ewis His style was notable for its lucidity, ving smoothness and fluish, which made everyrandthing he wrote readable, and pleased even in it when it did not convince. Personally, Mr. ra he Rattray was one of the most honourable of stees men, and though owing to his somewhat e has retiring disposition, his circle of intimate dded friends was not numerous, there were many Rev. who, having had only a passing acquaintance, large felt great sorrow at his premature death. 1871 He died in Toronto, on the 26th September, Mr. 1863, after an illnesss, the long and insidf his ious approaches of which had greatly impaired his customery vital force. By the The > sustained a great loss. Turner, Hon. James, Senator, Hamiltor, Ontario, was born in Glasgow, Scotland, on the 31st March, 1826. He is a son of the late John Turner, of MacLellan & Turner, power loom manufacturers, Glasgow. His mother was Catherine Mitchell. Young Turner received his education at private schools, and later on at the Glasgow High School. When in his twenty-second year he emigrated from Glasgow to Canada, proceeding to Hamilton, where he took up his abode and has remained ever since. He married, in June, 1850, Caroline Huldah Greene, of Kingston, Ontario. In religious matters, Senator Turner gives his allegi-ance to Presbyterianism. His success has heen most conspicuous, and he stands now among the foremost business men in Canada. He is head of the firm of James Turner & Company, importers and whole-death of Mr. Rattray, Canadian literature

Eng-

hada

Rat-

r for

and

liam

and

cial-

and

llec-

was

the

and

m a

men

l off

Mr.

ath,

nost

ail.

kly

sale grocers, at Hamilton; and is likewise senior partner of Turner, Rose & Co., wholesale grocers and tea merchants, in Mont-real; and of Turner, Mackeand & Co., wholesale grocers, in Winnipeg. As early as 1867 our enterprising subject began to do business at Fort Garry. With reference to this firm, we may be permitted to quote the following from a reliable quarter:--" Any work professing to give an outline of Hamilton industries would be incomplete unless it gave prominence to this old firm. When the late John Turner and his brother, the now senior partner, established the house thirtyseven years ago, Hamilton's population did not exceed eight thousand, and there were but few industries of any magnitude in the From the commencement the firm's career, like Hamilton's, has been one of continued growth and success. The present partners are Hon. James Turner and Alex-The senior partner—one of ander Turner. the chosen few, who by push and honourable enterprise have really created Hamilton the great trade centre that it now is—has always been among the first to contribute his name, influence and means to any effort and enterprise that aimed to build up the city. ator Turner is vice-president of the Bank of Hamilton, a director of the Hamilton and North-western Railway Company, a member of the executive committee of the Northern and North-western, a director of the Northern and Pacific Junction Railway Company. He also takes an active part in the affairs of the city, is a member of the executive committee of the Board of Trade, to the great satisfaction of his fellow citizens; and has the honour of representing Hamilton in the Dominion Senate. The head partner is also the senior in the firm of Turner, Rose & Co., of Montreal, and Turner, MacKeand & Co., of Winnipeg. James Turner & Co. commenced business in Manitoba, in 1867, having built the first brick store in that growing metropolis of the North-West in 1872." Senator Turner was president of the Hamilton Board of Trade in 1869; was a director of the Wellington, Grey and Bruce Railway during its construction, and was president of the Hamilton and Lake Erie Railway from its inception until amalgamated with the Hamilton and North-Western Railway. He visited the North-West territories with the Honourable Joseph Howe in 1869, and since then has travelled through that region almost annually, having been as far as the Columbia river and at Edmonton. In 1882, he sailed down the Saskatchewan from Edmonton to Winnipeg. Eulogy of Senator Turner is not necessary, for his career is before the reader. But let it be said that his life is a most remarkable one in a business sense. Senator Turner has displayed industry, commercial insight, and judgment far above the common order; and in his place in the Senate his counsel and decisions are always held in the highest possible regard. He is not less worthy, and an ornament, as Senator than as merchant.

Defoe, Daniel McCarthy, Alderman, Toronto, was born at Belleville, Ontario, in April, 1835; and was a son of Joseph and Joanna Defoe, of that place. He received his education in his native town, studying English, Latin and mathematics, at Albert College, Belleville. April, 1859, he entered the office of G. E. Henderson, Belleville, to study law; and passed his primary examination at Osgoode Hall, in May, 1861. He continued his studies for three years in the office of Mr. Henderson, then entered with A. R. Dougall, also of Belleville, where he remained for fifteen months. At the end of this period he removed to Toronto (August, 1863), entering the office of Patterson, Harrison & Hodgins, of that city. The concluding nine months of his prescribed study-period was spent in this firm; and in May, 1864, Mr. Defoe was admitted to practice as an attorney and solicitor of Osgoode Hall. He now entered into a legal partnership with Laurence Heyden, of Toronto, and this partnership continued till 1869, when Mr. Heyden retired; and from that time to the present our subject has continued, and with marked success, to practice law upon his own ac-A sound and practical knowledge of his profession, energy in its practice, and very excellent natural abilities have told in He has our subject's favour as a barrister. not confined himself entirely to the law, but has given a great deal of attention to subjects of civic concern. He entered the city council as alderman for St. Andrew's ward in 1882; and has been re-elected for that office every city election since. resignation of Colonel F. C. Denison, in September, 1884, Mr. Defoe was elected chairman of the Executive Committee, and still continues to hold that position. Our subject is a staunch Conservative, and has been vice-president of the St. Andrew's ward branch of the Liberal-Conservative Association. He is a Roman catholic. He married on the 12th September, 1882, Anna Marion Jackson, only daughter of the late Captain Charles Jackson, of the United States army. It is very generally conceded that Mr. Defoe is one of the most useful, able and zealous aldermen that the City of Toronto has ever had in her service, and we have little doubt that at no distant day the citizens will show their appreciation of his fidelity to their interests by electing him their mayor.

able

card

Tor

Elgi

dom

educ

he

subs

In 1

and

his:

Lore

gene

Čath

maic

cond

ency

both

Elgir

ing (

disço

of the

was

coun

ous

justly

ablest

the d

vices

our g

on th

were

the la

States

his g

every greatr

ing ca

the po

gation

the co

cieties

in son

govern

mind:

to the

called

the cor

which

ter fee

dent tl

who w

the cor

has int

calmly

bearing

plaud !

carryin

Johnston, John, Belleville, Inspector of Schools for South Hastings and the City of Belleville, was born twelve miles from Inverness, Scotland, in the year 1838. In 1846. he arrived in Belleville with his parents. William and Susanna Johnston. When he had attained his eighth year he began to at. tend the public schools of Belleville, and continued to do so for five years. When he became old enough to be of service, he worked during the spring, summer, and early autumn upon the farm with his father. and attended school in winter. So great were his industry and capacity that he was able to keep up his year's work notwithstanding his summer absence. In the spring of 1857 he obtained from the county board a first-class certificate, and on the 1st December of the same year, began to teach a public school in the second concession of Sidney, being then in his nineteenth year. He taught here for two and a half years, and then proceeded to Toronto, where he entered the Normal School, under Thomas J. Robertson, M.A., as head master, and Herbert Sangster, as second master, obtaining at the close of the term a provincial certificate, second-class, grade A. In 1861 he began to teach the very school at which he attended while working upon the farm. In May of the same year he married Augusta Rowe, of Sidney, and settled down to teaching and education as a life work. In 1866 the trustees of his school permitted him to attend the Normal institution; and during his absence his wife took charge of his school. He now took a first-class provincial certificate, grade B; and in June, 1871, obtained a grade A. He taught this school with so much success, and in a manner so satisfactory to the public, that in April, 1871, the county council unanimously appointed him inspector of schools for South Hastings. In 1874 he was likewise appointed inspector of schools for Belleville. Inspector Johnston is a member of the St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, under the ministrations of the Rev. M. W. McLean, M.A. He has likewise been president of the South Hastings It is not Teachers' Association since 1871. overstating the case to say that Mr. Johnston is one of the most popular, and at the same time most efficient school inspectors in the province of Ontario.

Eigin, Earl of.—The Right Honourable James Bruce, Earl of Eigin and Kincardine, Baron Bruce of Kinloss and of Torry in the peerage of Scotland, and Baron Elgin of Elgin in that of the United Kingdom, was born in 1811. He completed his education at Christ Church, Oxford, where he was first-class in classics, in 1832. subsequently became a fellow of Mereton. In 1841, he was elected for Southampton, and the same year, owing to the death of his father, succeeded to the title. In 1846. Lord Elgin was promoted to the governorgeneralship of Canada, succeeding Earl Cathcart, whom he had also followed at Jamaica. The admirable manner in which he conducted the affairs of this great dependency is well known and fully recognized, both in England and this country, Lord Elgin having obtained the credit of having consolidated and united the somewhat discordant political and social elements of the two provinces, of which Canada was then composed, eradicated many evils and abuses, and placed the affairs of the country in a most perfect and prosperous condition. Indeed, his lordship is justly recognized as one of the best and ablest of the governors that have guided the destinies of this great country. His services here entitled him to a large share of our gratitude, and his name to be enshrined on the brightest page of our history, if we were only to speak of the great benefits of the late reciprocity treaty with the United States, which assuredly owed its existence to his great genius and ability, but almost everything we witness in Canada of any greatness, bears some impress of his fostering care and management: the public works, the post office, the clergy reserves, the navigation laws, the normal and model schools of the country, agriculture and agricultural societies, and exhibitions—all these have been in some way connected with his lordship's government, are the productions of his noble mind; or we are indebted for their existence to the powerful party which Lord Elgin called into office to administer the affairs of the country. As to the rebellion losses bill, which unhappily caused such deep and bitter feeling to be displayed, we are confident that at this present day the very men who were loudest in condemning him for the course he pursued, would, now that time has intervened, and they have been enabled calmly and dispassionately to survey the bearings of the case, be the very first to applaud his resolution and determination in carrying out a measure which had been re-

1119

ver

libt.

OΩ

in-

tor

ity

ln.

346

ts,

he

at-

nd

en

he

nd

er,

eat

as

hng la

m-

lic

y, ht

en

rtrt

he

e, to of of ad s-

solved on by his ministry, and demanded by a large portion of the people of the country. This was the only time and the only measure that caused Lord Elgin to be at variance with any part of the community. The result has proved that he was right. His policy was supported by the Imperial government and the Queen, and when he tendered his resignation in consequence of the riots and scenes which took place, and the public feeling exhibited against him, he was requested to remain and govern the country for a short time longer. He did remain, he obeyed the call of his country, and conformed to the Queen's command, and his remaining produced the happiest results for the country's welfare and the people's good; so much so, indeed, that on his departure the whole population of the province expressed a general regret that he could not remain always with us. Before he was long in Canada it was discovered that he was one of the ablest public speakers that we possessed, and it has been said that on many a blustering winter day could his manly form be seen address-He was-his ing a Canadian gathering. high-minded father-in-law, the Earl of Durham, excepted—the greatest governor-general that has yet appeared in the pages of Canadian history. He died in fatty degeneration of the heart, while making a tour through India, of which he had been appointed viceroy in 1861.

Marchand, Felix Gabriel, M.P.P. for St. Johns, Province of Quebec, was born in St. Johns, on the 9th of January, 1832; and he is the youngest son of Gabriel Marchand and Mary McNider. With respect to the ancestors of this distinguished publicist, we may say that Jean Marchand, son of Jean Marchand, merchant of St. Sauveur, Diocese of Larochelle, France, emigrated to Quebec, about 1680, and was married there in 1682. Nicolas, his grandson, was killed by a cannon ball under the walls of Quebec, in 1759; Louis, son of Nicolas, was captain of a merchant ship on the high seas; and his eldest son, Gabriel, the father of our subject, was educated at the Quebec seminary, and commenced his commercial career with the late Honourable Louis Massue, in the then famous wholesale and importing establishment of John McNider, on Fabrique street, Quebec. became manager of the establishment, and moved to St. Johns, P.Q., in 1802, founding there the first commercial house of importance, and carried on a large and profitable business with the surrounding country. He took part in the defence of Canada during the American war, as commander of the 2nd Kent battalion of He married, in 1810, Mary Mc-Nider, daughter of the late John McNider, above mentioned. He retired from business in 1816, to a country seat on the Richelieu river, below St. Johns, where he occupied himself during the remainder of his life in agricultural pursuits on a large scale. He repeatedly refused legislative honours, and specially on three different occasions the appointment as legislative councillor. filled for a number of years the positions of magistrate, commissioner of the Chambly canal, commissioner per didimus potestatum, etc., which, on account of a disagreement with the governor-general, Lord Alymer, he resigned en bloc, together with his lieutenant-colonelcy, on the 1st July, 1831. During his long and active career he was the friend and benefactor of most of the business men in St. Johns. He took a prominent part in all the progressive movements in this section of the country; and succeeded, with his two brothers and a few other settlers, by heavy personal donations and exertions, in erecting a church at St. Johns, and in organizing the now flourishing parish of that name. In 1837-38, he was in favour of a constitutional agitation for the settlement of our political grievances, communicated with Papineau on the subject, and, at his suggestion, called the famous meeting of St. Athanase, to express his views; but the agitation had got to such a degree of intensity, that his counsels of moderation remained unheeded, and the insurrectional movement had to take its course. He died on the 10th March, 1852, at the age of seventy-two years. During his funeral, all the shops were closed, and business suspended in St. Johns, in token of respect for its oldest and most respected inhabitant. Felix Gabriel, our subject, received a classicil education at St. Hyacinthe college, subsequently studied law, and, in 1854, was admitted as notary. He has since practised his profession in St. Johns, excepting during an interval of nineteen months (1878-79), when he was a member of the Provincial administration. He continued on the old homestead, following, like his father, agricultural pursuits, and was repeatedly elected president of the St. Johns Agricultural Society. He initiated, in 1863, with the late Hon. C. J. Laberge, the volunteer movement at St. Johns and He was appointed lieutenantvicinity. colonel, commanding the 21st battalion, Richelieu Light Infantry, in 1866; was on active service during the different Fenian troubles-his corps, on account of its advanced position, being generally sent to the frontier at the first alarm, and replaced in St. Johns by corps from the interior-commanded the brigade, composed of the Prince of Wales regiment, Victoria Rifles, Royal Scotts, Hochelaga battalion, and 21st Richelieu Light Infantry, with a detachment of Montreal cavalry, which was sent to reinforce Lieutenant-Colonel Osborne Smith, during the night following the Fenian invasion at Eccles Hill, in 1870; and retired from active service in 1880, with the rank of lieutenant-He was elected a member of the colonel. Quebec Legislative Assembly for the County of St. Johns in September, 1867, and has been constantly re-elected to that position, which he still holds. He formed part of the Joly administration, as Provincial Secretary in 1878, and as Minister of Crown Lands in 1879. He has taken part in the establishment and promotion of many of the public enterprises in St. Johns and vicinity; amongst others, the St. Johns Manufacturing Company, the St. Johns Wcollen Factory, the St. Johns Building Society, and La Banque de St. Jean. He established, with the Hon. C. J. Laberge, in 1860, at St. Johns, the French Liberal organ of the district of Iberville, Le Franco Canadien, which is still in existence. He has continued in journalism since then, and contributed to most of the French Canadian Liberal organs. He was chief editor of the French Liberal daily, Le Temps, published in Montreal in 1883. He has contributed several poetical and dramatic works to the French Canadian literature, the most important being : Fatenville, comedy in prose ; Erreur n'est pas Compte, comedy in prose; Un bonheur en attire un autre, comedy in verse; Les Faux Brilliants, comedy in verse; Le Lauriat de l'Université, comic opera. These plays have been favourably received by the French reading public. Les Fanx Brilliants was lately honoured by a most flattering article in a Parisian review, La Revue du Monde Latin, of last August. Marchand was appointed a member of the Royal Society of Canada (section of French literature), and elected president of that section in May, 1884; and is also a member of L'Acadamié des Muses Santones, of Royan, He received, in 1879, from the French government, the distinction and decoration of Officer of Public Instruction. He has been a consistent Liberal since his early youth, has belonged to all the political organizations of that party for over thirty

year

LIOV

one s parti

liter

Pari

ried

Turg

geon

Bish

and

Turg

Cana

marr

recen

daug

comn

subje

prose

spirit

and l

milit

and a

of th

refor

them

born

tal, Y

Isaac

ther v

conve

enter

his e politic

staun

three

Leagu

The f

settle

on a

subjec

of Ca

Gram

When

learn

ville,

Cincir

South

see, M

other

cinnat

of the

Bowm

remov

for hi

furnit

the se

During

a prac

Fr

years, and taken an active part in all its movements. He travelled in Europe during one season after leaving college, and devoted particular attention to the study of French literature, during a stay of two months in He is a Roman catholic, and married 12th September, 1854, Marie Herzélie Turgeon, daughter of the late Louis Turgeon, of Terrebonne, a relative of the late Bishop Turgeon, of the diocese of Quebec, and a niece of the late Honourable Ovide Turgeon, Legislative Councillor of United Canada. Eleven children were born of this marriage, six of whom are living, one son, recently admitted to the bar, and five daughters. It is hardly necessary to offer comment upon any particular feature of our subject's career. His writings, both in prose and verse, are characterized by pure spirituality, sensitiveness to external beauty, and by very marked culture. As for his military career, it has been one of energy, and always revealed the prompt patriotism His services to the cause of reform have been numerous, and many of them have been weighty.

ian

ad-

the

in

m-

nce

yal

he-

of

rce

ing

ιat

ive

nt-

the

nty

has

on,

the

ary

in գհ.

lic

у;

ur-

ac-

nd

ed,

at

he

en,

ed

to

or-

ch

n-

rał

ch

nt

ur

n.

Lê

ıt-

ice

ſ.

he

at

er

n,

1e

e-

Frost, John George, Belleville, was born on the 18th of August, 1846, at Birstal, Yorkshire, England. His parents were Isaac Frost and Anne Whitehead. His father was an extensive reader and a finished conversationalist, and was very sociable and entertaining in his manners; and before his emigration to Canada was an active political worker. He had been always a staunch supporter of liberalism, and was for three years secretary of the Birstal Liberal League, during the Corn Laws agitation. The family came to Canada in 1849, and settled north of Belleville, near Canifton, on a small farm and market garden. Our subject was educated at the public school of Canifton, Hastings county, and at the Grammar School of Belleville, Ontario. When sixteen he left home, and began to learn the trade of cabinetmaking at Belleville, finishing at Toronto. He went to Cincinnati in 1865, thence through the Southern States, visiting Nashville, Tennes see, Memphis, New Orleans, Charleston and other prominent places, and returned to Cincinnati in the spring of 1866. In the fall of the same year he took up his abode in Bowmanville till the year 1874, when he removed to Belleville, and began business for himself in that town as manufacturer of furniture, and successfully passed through the severe commercial depression of 1878-9. During the nine years he was engaged as a practical mechanic he was opposed to a resort to strikes as a means of settlement of disputes between capital and labour, holding that skill, efficiency and experience should be the basis of remuneration, a belief that he has consistently carried into practice since he himself became an employer. During the agitation of the nine hour movement in western Ontario, in 1872, and whilst yet a working mechanic, he ably opposed the movement as being impracticable under existing circumstances, and wrote several articles to the press upon the subject, which were extensively quoted at the time. He was elected in 1879, and continued to represent Coleman ward of Belleville at the council board until the close of the session of 1883. There was a triangular contest for the mayoralty in 1884, and Mr. Frost, who was one of the contestants, was defeated; and in 1885 he again sustained defeat by a very narrow majority, after a very energetic contest. He was appointed chairman, in 1866, of the executive committee of the Mechanics' League of Cincinnati, Ohio, an organization for the promotion of mechanical knowledge and art designs in furniture; was made a Mason in 1871; a Royal Arch Mason in 1872, and passed successively through the official positions connected therewith. He is an active member of the Independent Order of Oddfellows and Encampment; is trustee of the Oxford Lodge, Sons of England. Belleville; and was president of the Young Men's Reform Association, Bowmanville, in 1869-70. He was chairman of the executive committee of the Hastings Reform Association in 1881 and 1882; and chairman of the Court of Revision, Belleville, in 1883. connection with the latter office, the justice and equity of his decisions were commended by the press, and not denied even by unsuccessful appellants. Mr. Frost travelled through the manufacturing centres of the United States, as commissioner for the Bowmanville Furniture Company, to ascertain and report upon the advantages of modern machinery facilities, and the advantages and system possessed by Americans for the manufacture of furniture. With respect to his religious convictions, he believes in personal responsibility to God, and is opposed to the dogmas of man and the human'y created forms of religion. He married, in February, 1871, Maggie Mc-Sorley, second daughter of the late Andrew McSorley, of Bowmanville, Ontario. has two daughters.

Springer, Moses, Berlin, Sheriff of the County of Waterloo, Ontario, was born near the village of Doon, Waterloo county, on the 31st of August, 1824. His parents, Benjamin Springer and Mary Springer, were of U. E. loyalist stock. His great-greatgrandfather was born in Amsterdam, Holland, and occupied the position of Episcopal clergyman, and he afterwards removed to Stockholm, Sweden, where he was created a bishop, and also a baron. The bishop had one son, named Charles Christopher, the great-grandfather of Moses Springer, whom he educated for the Episcopal ministry. The young man, however, was never ordained a priest, but simply acted as a lay reader. He came to America in 1665, and settled in the State of Deleware, locating himself where the City of Wilmington now stands. he built a church, the first of its kind in the neighbourhood, and which was known as the Swedish Episcopal church, and, strange to say, the building is still used for purposes of public worship. Sheriff Springer's grandfather was also educated for the ministry, and was settled at Poughkeepsie, New York At the beginning of the Revolutionary war, this worthy man was shot down in his own yard, and died from the effects of his wounds. His grandmother emigrated, with the rest of the family, to Canada, about the close of the war, and settled in the neighbourhood of Hamilton. Our subject's father, Benjamin Springer, was educated by the late Colonel Beasley, who likewise brought him up to the general mercantile Three times, while carrying on business. business for himself, was this unfortunate man burnt out by the Indians, and his losses were so heavy that he was obliged to abandon altogether this kind of business, and take to farming, and continued to farm until 1834, when he fell a victim to the cholera scourge, then prevalent in Upper Canada. He left a family of seven sous and four Sheriff Springer, under these daughters. circumstances, received very little schooling, for at thirteen years of age he had to begin to work for a living. Being of a studious turn of mind, he, with the assistance of an old school teacher, named William Collins, acquired considerable knowledge, and succeeded in procuring a third class certificate, which enabled him to teach school. At this occupation he continued for about five years. He then studied surveying, and for about seven years he followed the profession of provincial land surveyor. Mr. Springer then took to a mercantile life, which he enjoyed for some years, and afterwards became a conveyancer, etc. He was a plodding and persevering man, and soon he acquired influence and wealth, for we find that, in 1857, he was elected the first reeve of the village of Waterloo, and held that position for about sixteen years, and when the village was incorporated as a town, he was elected its first mayor, and held the office for two years, and then resigned. In 1867, he was selected by the Reformers to represent them in par-hament, and was elected to the Local Legis. lature for the North Riding of the County of Waterloo, and held this seat continuously for fourteen years, when he resigned, and was appointed to the office of sheriff of the County of Waterloo, and this position he During his legislative now worthily fills. career he rendered valuable and important services to his constituents, notably in connection with the settlement of the municipal loan fund scheme, and with the settlement of the Crown Lands dues, and in the former respect his services were so satisfactory to the town of Berlin, that the authorities of that town presented him with a valuable gold watch and chain. He assisted in organizing the Waterloo Mutual Fire Insurance Company, and was its president for seven years. He has also been a mem. ber of the Waterloo school board for thirty years, and chairman for the last twenty-five With respect to Sheriff Springer's religious convictions, it may be said that he was brought up among the Mennonites, and lived among these people from his tenth to his twentieth year, but he now attends the German Evangelical church. He married, in 1845, Barbara Shantz, who died on the 13th October, 1884. The fruit of the union was twelve children, ten of whom survive, and are scattered over Canada and the United States. Altogether his career has been worthy, honourable, and successful.

Rae, Dr. Francis, Oshawa, was born in Frederickton, N.B., on July 8th, 1833. His parents came from Scotland some time before that date, and settled in New Bruns-When our subject was about three years old, his parents went to Uxbridge, and began farming, but only remained here a few years, when they removed to Stouffville, in the County of York, purchased a farm, and settled permanently. Mr. Rae was educated at the common school and the provincial Normal school, Toronto. At nineteen he commenced teaching in the public schools, and continued in this occupation for about ten years, and during the time, he studied medicine. He graduated in medicine at Toronto University in 1865, and for a short period afterwards studied his profession in New York. During the same year he returned to Oshawa, and com-tions of V mayo for th accla at th He i 139, Corin encar Enca Gran been tario has b since of th

meno

since

meas

and h strong 1865, Curric six ch Dr. I and h token held t public can co

All

the la

held

coats, Vide well-k the Cl of pas years. ceived when i In 184 ant a brothe biogra ergetio history cent b name ated in Allan ber of from (conceiger bomedius grants, ships ron sc

7

a- a 🖏

menced practice, and has continued it ever since, and now he can look upon a large measure of success as the fruit of his exertions. He is surgeon to the 34th Battalion of Volunteers. He has been reeve and mayor of Oshawa for the last ten years, and for the last six years he has been elected by acclamation. He was examiner in medicine at the Toronto University for 1875 and 1876. He is a Freemason of Lebanon lodge, No. 139, and he is likewise an Oddfellow, of Corinthian lodge, No. 61, and of Ontario encampment, No. 11; a member of Grand Encampment and Grand Lodge, and Past Grand Patriarch, and since 1872 he has been one of the representatives from Ontano in the Sovereign Grand Lodge. He has been coroner for the County of Ontario since 1868, and one of the seven members of the Board of Health, and has likewise held other offices. Dr. Rae is a staunch and highly respected Presbyterian, and a very strong Reformer. He married in October, 1865, Elizabeth Jane, daughter of Andrew Currie, of Chatham. By this lady he has had six children, four of whom are still living. Dr. Rae is extremely genial in manners, and his frequent re-election as mayor is a token of the high esteem in which he is held by his townsmen. Socially, as well as publicly, he is a very great favourite, and can count many warm personal friends.

illage

about

s ins first

ears.

ected

par-

∍egisounty

ously

, and

f the

ın he

lative

rtant

con-

icipal.

ment

rmer

ry to

ies of

uable

n or-

nsur-

t for

mem-

hirty

y-five

ıger's

at he

, and

tenth

tends

mar-

d on

f the

hom

and

r has

born

1833.

time

runs-

three

idge,

here

ouff-

ed a

Rae

and

At

the

occu-

the

ated

865,

died

the

com-

ul.

Allan, Andrew, Montreal, brother of the late Sir Hugh Allan, was born at Saltcoats, Ayrshire, Scotland, Dec. 1, 1822. [Vide Sir Hugh Allan.] His father was a well-known shipmaster and trader between the Clyde and Montreal, and had command of passenger ships for a period of over thirty years. Andrew was the fourth son, and received his education in the old country, and when in his seventeenth year came to Canada. In 1846 he became a member of the important and rapidly rising firm of which his brother, Sir Hugh, had been a partner. biographical sketch of this brilliant and energetic business man necessarily implies a history of the development of the magnificent business in ocean traffic, with which the name of Allan must forever remain associated in Canada. Over thirty years ago the Allan Brothers, perceiving the great number of people who were constantly sailing from Great Britain and Ireland to America, conceived the idea of a line of ocean passenger boats, which would be the chief carrying medium for the great concourse of emigrants. In 1853 they had fifteen sailing ships afloat, but to these they added two ronscrew steamships, to ply between Liverpool, Quebec and Montreal. At a little later period, stimulated by the success of the venture, two similar boats were added to their fleet. Before the period when the enterprise of the Allan Brothers began to assert itself, mails crossed the ocean very slowly; but in 1857 the firm made arrangements to carry fortnightly mails between Liverpool and Quebec in summer, and between Liverpool and Portland, Maine, in winter. At a later date the Canadian mail service was enlarged to a weekly line, and its steamers were as noble and as splendidly equipped as any ship that crossed the Atlan-The fleet has continued to increase up to the present time (1885), when it is composed of the following list of magnificent ships :- Liverpool mail line : Numidian, (building), Parisian, Sardinian, Polynesian, Sarmatian, Circassian, Peruvian; Newfoundland fortuightly mail line: - Hibernian, Nova Scotian, Caspian, Newfound-land; Glasgow freight and passenger line:— Carthaginian, Siberian, Buenos Ayrean, Norwegian, Grecian; London freight and passenger line: Corean, Scandinavian, Nestorian, Lucerne. A fortnightly service between Glasgow and Boston, and another between Glasgow and Philadelphia is also maintained by the following ships: -Prussian, Manitoban, Canadian, Phanician, Waldensian, Austrian, and Acadian. Some fourteen sailing ships belong to the fleet, making a gross tonnage of over 200,000 tons. The Allan Brothers were the first to adopt the spar or flush deck on their steamers; and in making this costly revolution they not only failed to find the co-operation of the London Board of Trade, but had the hostility of that body, by its refusal to allow them any concession in the way of measurement for harbour dues, etc. In addition to his very prominent connection with his own firm, Andrew Allan holds several important business trusts in Montreal, and some of these we may mention. He is president of the Merchants Bank, the Montreal Telegraph Company, the Manitoba and N. W. Railway Company, the Canadian Rubber Company, the Windsor Hotel Company, and the Montreal Lumber Company; and besides he is on the directorate of numerous other manufacturing, mining, and business companies. He is likewise one of the Harbour Commissioners of Montreal. Mr. Allan married, in 1846, a daughter of the late John Smith, of Montreal, and has eight children. He is a man of vast energy of character, clear and wise insight, and a wide spirit of enterprise tempered with just prudence.

Macpherson, Lt.-Colonel John. Director of Dominion Government Militia Stores, and Keeper of Militia Properties, Ottawa, was born in Lancaster, Glengarry, Ontario, on the 8th of January, 1830. Having completed his education, he entered mercantile life in Montreal, and continued to carry on business for several years in that This kind of business was not congenial to him, and having what seemed an all-absorbing yearning for military life, he abandoned mercantile pursuits, and joined the Canadian militia, and with heart and In 1849 soul he entered on his new duty. the first substantial recognition of his zeal and efficiency in a cause which at this time needed clear heads and strong hands, came to him, namely a commission in the 3rd battalion of the Montreal Militia. After a little it came into his mind that a first-rate company, chosen from among Highlanders, might be established in the Province of Quebec. and in 1856 he carried out his scheme and was appointed captain of the company. The militia authorities move with a pace fully as slow as those in any other department of the service, yet in his case they bestirred themselves, and promoted Captain Macpherson to the rank of major. he obtained another step, being gazetted brigade major to the active force of Montreal. The following year he was appointed brigade major of Military District No. 11; but so far he had smelt no powder, and paraded only upon mimic fields. In 1865 he became a lieutenant-colonel of militia, and the following year, during the Fenian troubles, served with the staff of Major-General Lindsay at Montreal. In the same year he was appointed deputy-assistant adjutant-general of Militia, and given the command of one of the military districts in Lower Canada. In 1869 he acted as deputy adjutant-general commanding Military District No. 3, in Ontario; and the following year he was appointed acting superintendent of Military Schools in the Dominion. This position he retained until the threatened Fenian raids in April, when he was again appointed on the staff of Lieutenant-General Lindsay, as assistant adjutant-general. On this occasion he assumed command of the active militia brigades concentrated in Montreal, and accompanied the staff of His Royal Highness Prince Arthur to the scenes of action on the Missisquoi and Huntingdon frontiers. When his services here had terminated he joined the staff at headquarters, and acted for a period as deputy of the Minister of Militia and Defence, and as accountant in the department. In 1880 he was appointed by Sir John A. Macdonald's administration to his present position of director of Militia stores and keeper of Militia properties. Altogether Lieut.-Colonel Macpherson's career has been one of unusual activity, and his force of character such that it would be impossible to be unconscious of it. In a wider military field, where graver issues come under consideration, we may be very sure that Lieutenant-Colonel Macpherson would have made a name that the recorder of able exploits in the military world would have felt pleasure in putting in his pages.

Frechette, Louis, LL.D., (Queen's and McGill,) officier d'Académie Laureate of the Institute of France, Nicolet, Quebec, was born at Levis, in the Province of Quebec, on the 16th of November, 1839. He is a son of the late Louis Fréchette, contractor, and Marguerite Martineau de l'Ormière. His paternal ancestors belonged to the Isle de Rhé, France, and emigrated at the early settlement of the colony. future poet Laureate of the French Canadian people received his literary education at Nicolet College. Having completed his course here, and at the Laval University in Quebec, he entered upon the study of the law, and was admitted to the bar in 1864. From 1865 to 1871 he resided in Chicago, and was foreign correspondent in the land department Illinois Central Railway. In 1871, he returned to Canada and took up his residence in Quebec. He now felt considerable aspiration for public life, and in the lastnamed year ran in the County of Levis for the Provincial parliament, but was defeated by Speaker Blanchet. In 1872, he ran in the same county for the Dominion parlialiament, and was defeated again by a very small majority. In 1874, however, he was successful in his exertions, being returned for Levis to the Federal parliament; and he suffered defeat at the hands of his former opponent, M. Blanchet for the succeeding parliament. Mr. Frechette is a member of the Royal Society, and was lately president of the French section. He was married, in 1876, to Emma, second daughter of J. B. Beaudry, banker, of Montreal, and has three children. He took up his residence in Montreal in 1878, and resided there until last summer; he now lives in Nicolet, where he follows literary pursuits exclusively.
M. Frechette edited Le Journal de Québec. 1861 and 1862; Le Journal de Lévis, 1864 and 1865; L'Amerique, (Chicago,) 1868-1870; La Patrie, (Montreal,) 1884 and 1885; he contributed actively to L' Opinion Publique, chett Loisi ďun (vol. ales, last t the F autho unan and d 1862 dy,) "Th "Un ada," " Let Histo de pl into W. D Geor poem plete.

d'Ou

know

(Mor

ral o mark here brief, said singir man, right agina truly of w here the a perfe till tl cast i oppor quan we sl our F M. F

"Whi T Dre

Sur

we gi

our g

We li by J.

3

(Montreal,) and wrote occasionally for several other periodicals. The list of M. Frechette's publications are as follows: "Mes Loisirs," (vol. of poems,) 1863; "La Voix l'un Exilé," (a poem,) 1869; "Pêle Mêle," (vol. of poems,) 1876; "Les Fleurs Bo. é. ales," and "Les Oiseaux de Neige." These last two volumes of poems were crowned by the French Academy of Paris in 1880. The author was granted the 1st Montyon prize unanimously. He has published as dramas and comedies: — "Félix Poutré," (a drama,) 1862; "Les Notables du Village," (a comedy,) 1862; "Papineau," (a drama,) 1880; "The Thunderbolt," (a drama,) 1882, and "Un Dimanche Matin à l'Hotel du Canada," (a comedy.) His prose works include, "Lettres à Basile," (1872,) and "Petite Histoire des Rois de France," under the nom de plume of CYPRIEN. He has translated into French "A Chance Acquaintance," by W. D. Howells, and "Old Creole Days," by George W. Cable. Two new volumes of poems, from the same pen, are nearly complete, namely: "Les Oublies," and "Voix M. Frechette's work is d'Outre-mer." known so well, and received with such marks of favour, that it is hardly necessary here to enter upon an estimate of it. To be brief, however, and to be just, it may be said to have a flavour all its own. singing comes straight from the heart of the man, for no chord is struck that is not a right chord. He has a soaring and active imagination; he has the seeing eye and the truly interpretive insight into the subject of which he sings. He is likewise master here of that proud patience which enables the artist to linger over his line till it is perfect; to struggle with stubborn language till the thought stands out like a shadow east in the shining pool. We have not the opportunity here to present considerable quantities of the verse of M. Frechette, as we should like to do. Professor Roberts, our English poet, has made a translation of M. Frechette's poem "La Liberté"; and we give two stanzas to show the method of our gifted and crowned French brother:

nted

tion

litia

Al-

reer

his

. be

[n a sues

very

rson

rder ould

en's

eate

շոе-

e of

839. ette,

de

iged .

ated

The

ana-

n at

urse

շսթ.

law,

rom

W28

art-

, he

resi-

able

ast

for

ated

ı in rlia-

very

was

ned

l he

op-

par-

the

the

i, to

iry,

hil-

ont.

last

iere

ely.

bec.

and

70;

he

Įив,

S.

"A child, I have set the thirsting of my mouth To the broad chalices of Loves that craze; Surely, alas! I have found herein but drouth; Surely has sadness darkened o'er my days.

"While worldlings chase each other madly round The gay track of frivolous gayety, Dreamer, my dream earth's utnest largery

Dreamer, my dream earth's utmost longings bound,—

One love alone is mine, my love is Liberty." We likewise take the following translation by J. D. Edgar, M.P., of verses which appeared from the Laureate's pen in "Pêle-Mêle":

- "The forest has spells to enchant me, The mountain has power to enthral; Yet the grace of a wayside blossom Can stir my heart dearer than all.
- "O towering steeps, that are mirrored On Saguenay's darkening breast! O grim, rocky heights, sternly frowning, The thunders have smitten your crest!
- "O sentinels, piercing the cloudland, Stand forth in stupendous array! My brow, by your shadows enshrouded, Is humbled before you to-day.
- "But peaks that are gilded by heaven, Defiant you stand in your pride From glories too distant above me, I turn to the friend by my side."

We might give many instances of the spontaneousness, the freedom, the wealth of fancy, and richness of music which characterize this poet, but as we have said, it is impossible to do so in these narrow limits. Lovers of the higher literature in Canada will be glad to learn that M. Frechette promises us a pair of volumes soon; and that he has consecrated his days henceforth to literary work. Let lower natures scuffle in the dark and migrapolitical and second contents.

and miry political places.

Hall, William, Alderman, Toronto, is a native of England, having been born in Manchester, on the 20th of April, 1833. His parents were William Hall and Ann Whitehead, and this couple had a family of nine children, the subject of our sketch being the fourth son. Mr. Hall, senior, farmed in the neighbourhood of Manchester, and having retired on a competency, lived a retired life for some years, and died in Young William was educated in the parish school, and having acquired a fair education, at the age of fourteen he was apprenticed to the trade of carpenter and Having faithfully served his apprenticeship, he began business for himself as contractor and builder in Manchester, and succeeded very well. At the time of the Crimean war he was appointed general foreman of builders in the army works corps, under Sir Joseph Paxton, and was located at Balaclava until peace was proclaimed, when the corps returned to London, and were disbanded. Upon leaving the army he returned to Manchester, where he remained for a short time; and in 1857 came to Canada, settling in Hamilton, in which city he was appointed clerk of the works or supervisor, in the employ of the Great Western Railroad Company. He remained in that position until the date of the Desiardins canal accident, when he was appointed bridge inspector. Having seen that all the structures of this class were in a proper state of repair, he secured the contract for building the Hamilton elevator, and afterwards erected for the company an elevator and other works at Sarnia. After being for a time a builder and contractor, he conceived the idea, in 1872, of building a mill and cutting oak lumber for the English market, and with this object in view he left Toronto and proceeded to Waubaushene. on the Georgian Bay, and erected a mill. A village soon sprang up in the neighborhood of the mills, and it became a thriving place. In 1882 Mr. Hall sold out his property here to A. P. Dodge & Co., and removed to Toronto. Here he entered into an agreement with Mr. Cumberland to put on a line of barges in connection with their Northern Railway, for the purpose of carrying lumber between Toronto and Oswego, and Mr. Hall has been engaged in this business ever since. Among shipowners and shippers he is well known as "Captain Hall," owing to his connection with vessel property. In 1883 Mr. Hall was duly elected alderman for St. Andrew's ward in the City Council of Toronto, defeating his opponent, Alderman Defoe. In the following year, 1884, he refused to stand; but in the year 1885, at the solicitation of his many friends, he consented to stand for his old ward, and was elected, defeating Alderman In the present council he is a Farley. member of the water works, board of works and harbour board committees. He belongs Mr. Hall has travelled to the Freemasons. extensively through Canada, the United States, and has about a dozen times crossed the Atlantic, visiting all points of interest in Great Britain and Ireland, and combining business with pleasure. In religion he belongs to the Church of England, and in politics is a Conservative; but is hostile to bringing general politics into municipal affairs. He married, in 1857, Elizabeth Bentley, of Manchester, England, who died on the 29th of May, 1881, leaving four sons and two daughters. In 1883 he again married, Mary Mathews, of Toronto. Mr. Hall is genial in manners, and has numbers of friends.

Sanders, Edward Howard, Port Hope, Ontario, was born at Bridge House, Christ Church, County of Hants, England, on the 28th March, 1832. His father was the late Major Sanders, K.F. and K.G.S., of The Hall, Thirsk, Yorkshire, England, formerly in the Royal Spanish army; and also the representative of the Sanderses of Sanderstead and East Grinstead, in the counties of Surrey and Sussex, in direct descent from Sir Roger de Sanderstead. He married first Aheia. second daughter of Henry Gaitskell, of the Paragon, Southwark, County of Surrey: and second, in 1854, Jane, sister and coheiress of the late John Bell, M.P. for Thirsk, Yorkshire. Our subject was educated by private tutors in England, until his fourteenth year, then at schools in Belgium and Germany. He was subsequently sent to a military school for cadets in Austria. and entered the Imperial Austrian army in 1849, having obtained a cadetship in the 6th Regiment of Dragoons (Count Figuelmont), and served in this regiment for six years in Hungary, Transylvania, and Gallicia. He was promoted first lieutenant in 1854. but resigned in August, 1855, having accepted a commission in Her Majesty's service with the view of serving his own country in the field during the Crimean war. He was next appointed adjutant of the 2nd Hussars, B.G.L., commanded by the late Lord Elphinstone, and served in this corps until disbanded in 1857. He proceeded to British Columbia in 1859, and was appointed stipendiary magistrate and gold commissioner for the Yale District in April of that year, and also a member of the Legislative Council. In 1862, he was appointed judge of County Courts, and retired on a pension in 1880. He is a member of the Church of England. He married first, on the 8th December, 1862, at Fort Hope, in British Columbia, Annie, eldest daughter of the late William Moresby, barrister-at-law, and brother of the late Sir Fairfax Moresby, admiral of the fleet; secondly at Clinton, British Columbia, on the 27th August, 1879, Essie, Cranstone, second daughter of John Coulter, of Dundalk, Ireland.

McCord, A. T., the subject of this sketch, was born in Toronto, on the 14th of April, 1848. His father was Andrew Taylor McCord, and he was the first city treasurer of Toronto, which position he held with much acceptance for forty years. Our subject received his education at Upper Canada College and the Toronto Grammar School, and while pursuing his studies gave evidence of the sturdy intellectual qualities, which in later life distinguished him in all his undertakings. Having left school, Mr. McCord proceeded to New York, where for a time he engaged in the commission business. After this he returned to Toronto, and established himself in a general wholesale groc genial to waras he Commerc but agair Too clos andermi 20 abroa through scene ha returned India Isl stock-bro both of th it soon b broadly a sent time Canada o institutio Among t Cord has be menti member -Own. In Liberal-C cate of th measure dict. he hustings the count of such hearted. an active Benevole highly re nominatio not be re and his ju Fergu M.P. for of Middle is descene extraction and Ayrs younger s of large p Ireland, i Thomas, army, the of 1743. Horse (no the Duke Henry F.

Cavan m

the Irish

came to C

don town

was Jonn

a justice of

Ferguson

sale grocery. This, however, was not conrenial to his tastes, and some time afterwards he became a clerk in the Bank of Commerce. Here he did not remain long, but again established a business for himself. Too close application to duties began to undermine his health, and he was obliged to 20 abroad for recuperation. He travelled through Europe, where rest and change of scene had the desired effect, but before he returned to Toronto he visited the West India Islands. He now entered into the stock-broking and insurance business. For both of these he revealed much aptitude, and it soon became known that his business was broadly and firmly established. At the present time he is manager for the Dominion of Canada of that popular and widely-trusted institution, the London Guarantee Company. Among the public projects in which Mr. Mc-Cord has interested himself the military may be mentioned. Some years ago he was a member of No. 4 Company of the Queen's Own. In politics Mr. McCord is a staunch Liberal-Conservative. He is a sturdy advocate of the national policy, and when that measure was before the people for their verdict, he was one of those who upon many hustings pointed out the advantages which the country had reaped from the adoption of such a policy. Mr. McCord is largehearted, and has much public spirit, and is an active member of the Irish Protestant Benevolent Society. In religion he is a highly respected member of the Baptist denomination. In business capacity, it need not be repeated, he is quick and fortunate, and his judgment is excellent.

Ferguson, John, M.D., Niagara Falls, M.P. for Welland, was born in the County of Middlesex, Ontario, in the year 1839. He is descended from an Irish family of Scotch extraction, whose estates lay in Galway and Ayrshire. In 1660, James Ferguson, a younger son of the family, became possessed of large property in the County of Cavan, Ireland, in which place he settled. His son Thomas, and grandson Richard, entered the army, the latter taking part in the troubles of 1743, as an officer of the King's Black Horse (now the 7th Dragoon Guards), under the Duke of Cumberland. His grandfather, Henry Ferguson, held a commission in the Cavan militia, and took an active part in the Irish rebellion of 1798. This gentleman came to Canada in 1824, and settled in London township. The father of our subject was John Ferguson, of Middlesex, who was a justice of the peace in that county. Young

London Grammar School, and afterwards entered the medical department of Victoria College, Toronto, and was also a private student under the late Dr. Rolph. In 1864 he graduated M.D. from Victoria College, and then left for the city of New York, and entered Bellevue Hospital, under Austin Flint, M.D., and attended the hospital for wounded soldiers at Blackwell's Island. On his return to Canada he began practising his profession, but after four years practice he abandoned it and began contracting for public works. He built a portion of the New York and Oswego Midland Railway, and the Galt and Berlin Railway. built, likewise, (from 1873 to 1877) six miles of the Welland canal enlargement, and, in company with Robert Mitchell, constructed the larger portion of the Toronto water works. He was personally in charge of these operations, and also of the St. Catharines water works. In company with H. C. Symms, he built and established the first wood pulp mill at Sherbrooke, in the province of Quebec. D: Ferguson has taken an active part in political contests, as a Conservative, appearing in the fight in nearly every election since 1867. In that year he assisted for seven months on the public platform A. P. Macdonald, who was elected in West Middlesex; John H. Munroe, who was elected in West Elgin; also in Bothwell and in North Middlesex. In 1871 he took an active part in the South Waterloo election, in the interest of Abraham Erb, who was the candidate of the Sandfield Macdonald ministry. During 1873, he went through South Waterloo, delivering a number, of vigorous, powerful and brilliant speeches in behalf of Mr. Phin and the Conservative cause; and he took a similar course through North Wentworth, Waterloo and West Middlesex, Mr. McKechnie profiting by his effective addresses. In 1882 he appeared on his own behalf before the electors of Welland, and received the reward of his ability, his integrity, and zeal, in being chosen for parliament. He has since sat in the House of Commons; and he was very speedily looked upon as one of the clear headed and solid members of that body. He is vigorous, ready and practical, and his judgment upon public questions is certain to be careful and to be sound. In 1879 and 1880 he travelled with his family extensively through Ireland, England, Scotland, France, Germany, Switzerland and Italy. He married, in 1869, Miss Robinson, only daughter of the late William Robinson, who was Ferguson received his education at the then mayor of the town of Galt, and who contested the South Riding of Waterloo in the Conservative interest against Jas. Cowen, in 1863; and in that reform constituency came within sixty-three votes of being elected. The fruit of the union is four children, three daughters and one son. The two eldest daughters died in 1874. The son is attending Upper Canada College, and is in his fourteenth year. In 1881, Dr. Ferguson purchased a large fruit farm on the banks of the Niagara river, and upon this farm is the celebrated Whirlpool Rapids Park. We may add, in conclusion, that Dr. Ferguson is not a parliamentary gladiator; but whenever the occasion demands he is ready, and gives his views with promptness, with point, and with effect. Jones, John, Alderman, Toronto, was born in Glamorganshire, Wales, in the year 1843. His parents, George Jones and Jane Clifford, were born in England. George Jones was a contractor, and was one of the men who laid the rails for the railroad between Kensington and London, the first railroad built in the world, and known as the Quaker's line. It may also be mentioned that Mr. Jones' father was foreman of the coal mines at which the celebrated engineer, George Stephenson, worked as engineer. Mr. Jones came to this country in 1850, and landed in Toronto on May 1st, of the same year. On getting settled he took up the business of contractor and farmer, in which joint occupations he remained until his death in 1866. He left two children. In 1875 his wife followed him, both being buried together in the Don Mills cemetery. We might mention here that Mr. Jones was the contractor for the removal of the timber from the farm of old Sam Legge, one of the first pioneers of York, and on which site Mount Pleasant cemetery now stands. John Jones, the subject of our sketch, was educated in Toronto, and received a common school education. After leaving school in 1858, he went upon a farm, and remained there for about five He then went as a sailor upon the upper and lower lakes of Canada, and held the position of second mate. Upon the death of his father, in 1866, he gave up the life of a sailor, and commenced the business of market gardening in Toronto. At this business he remained for seven years. He then began brickmaking on his present site, St. Lawrence ward, Toronto, and has continued in this business ever since, each year with He belonged to the increasing success. 10th Royals, now the Royal Grenadiers, and was in this corps for three years. In 1884 he was elected alderman for St.

Matthew's ward, Toronto, out of nine candididates, with a majority of eighty-nine; and was re-elected in January, 1885, over five candidates, by a majority of 185 votes. At the present time he is on the board of works, market, health, court house and medical health committee of the city council. At the time of the visit of the British Association to this country, Mr. Jones, with other aldermen, accompanied them on a trip through the upper lakes as far as Port Colborne. Mr. Jones belongs to the Episcopal church, and is a warden in the Leslieville church. In politics he is Conservative. He belongs to the Orange order, and was master of the Leslieville lodge, No. 215, for seven years. In 1878 he joined the Freemasons, in the Oriental lodge, and was master of this lodge for three years. He is also a charter member of Crystal lodge of the Ancient Order of United Workmen, and held the office of recorder for two years. He belongs likewise to the Black Knights of Ireland, an advanced Orange order; also to the Sons of England: and has been a member of the Oddfellows and Foresters. He was married, in 1866, to Mary Ann Hunter, a daughter of William Hunter, of Toronto, and one of the By this marriage he has earliest pioneers. had twelve children, of whom eight are Mr. Jones is gentlemanly and corliving. dial in his manners, and one to whom the majority of people would be drawn. Mr. Jones was presented by the members of Orient Lodge, A.F. and A.M., G.R.C., No. 39, with a gold past master's jewel, valued at $85.00, a silver tea set worth $95.00, and a French clock, worth $75.00, in recognition of services rendered the order, he having, while master of the lodge, initiated no less than sixty-three members.

an ·

liki

and

was ters

nor

figh

wrig

now

ties

tion

the

the

it fa

can'

how

In .

Fran

onel

land

and

surr

the take

the :

mos

only

natu

life :

it, o

was

Asse

and

Cons

ever

conf

for t

mou

the -

while

oppo

coule

gene

Hon

Upor

men

porti

coun

time

turn

there

save

nece

in di

he ra

and

men,

the t

cent.

state

Cartwright, Hon. Sir Richard William, K.C.M.G., late Finance Minister of Canada, Kingston, was born at Kingston, Upper Canada, on the 4th of December, 1835, and is consequently now in his fiftieth year. He is a son of the late Rev. R. D. Cartwright, who was at one time chaplain of the forces at Kingston. Young Richard received his early educational training at Kingston, and was afterwards sent to Trinity College. After his return from Dublin, he Dublin. entered for a time upon a study of the law, but his inclinations led him into banking life. In due time we find him occupying the position of director, and subsequently of president of the Commercial Bank of Canada. He was likewise a director of the Canada Life Assurance Company. From an early age he seemed to have a strong liking for the study of financial questions; and before he entered public life at all he was regarded as an authority on such matters. Although himself and his party have not been fortunate, for the stars sometimes fight against the ablest of men, Mr. Cartwright was, while finance minister, and is now regarded as one of the greatest authorities upon monetary and commercial questions in Canada, perhaps, indeed, he is the greatest. Sir Leonard Tilley has been the more successful man of the two, but is it fair to measure ability by success? We can't get this question settled in Canada, however, and shall not cross the line with it. In August, 1859, Mr. Cartwright married Frances Alexander, eldest daughter of Colonel Alexander Lowe, of Cheltenham, England. By this worthy lady he has a large and promising family. All Mr. Cartwright's surroundings and associations belonged to the Conservative class. His relatives had taken a prominent place in the public life of the country, and one of them was one of the most inexorable tories in the land. With only conservative traditions before him, naturally enough Richard entered public life a tory, and as the reformers would put it, one "dyed in the wool." In 1863 he was elected a member of the Legislative Assembly for the united counties of Lennox and Addington. He sat as an independent Conservative, giving a steady support, however, to Sir John A. Macdonald. After confederation Mr. Cartwright was elected for the County of Lennox. In 1870 the rumours of his disaffection were confirmed by the announcement from his own lips, that while he had no intention to give factious opposition to the government, his support could no longer be relied upon. At the general election of 1872 he defeated the Hon. J. Stevenson by a large majority. Upon the fall of the Conservative government in 1873, Mr. Cartwright accepted the portfolio of Finance and entered the privy council. But he came into office upon evil times. The wheel of fortune had begun to turn the wrong way. He found it necessary, therefore, to readjust the tariff in order to save sufficient income to square with the necessary expenditure. His opponents, as in duty bound, set up a howl at him because he raised the tariff from fifteen to seventeen and a half per cent.; they were the same men, by the way, who subsequently raised the tariff themselves to nearly thirty per cent. It was the case, however, and was so From stated by Sir Riehard himself in a speech at

andi-

; and

five

orks.

edical

At

socia-

other

trip

Port

Epis-

nser-

brder.

odge.

oined

, and

vears.

rystal

nited

corder

to the

anced

land :

ellows

66, to

Wil-

of the

e has

t are

d cor-

m the

Mr.

ers of

. , Ne.

alued

0, and nition

aving,

o less

hard

Minis-

ings-

mber,

iftieth

. Cartof the

ceived

gston.

ollege.

in, he e law,

inking ıpying

nently

nk of

of the

the

At

Montreal, that he had intended to put on more taxes in 1876; but that he was overruled by his colleagues and their supporters. In 1878, the Reformers went out of office, and Mr. Cartwright with them. On the 24th of May he was created a knight of the Order of St. Michael and St. George by the Marquis of Lorne, at an investiture held in Montreal. It may here be added that nothing in Sir Richard's life is more worthy of note than a speech delivered by him during the summer of 1884, at the Grand Opera House, Toronto. It need not be said that hitherto a discussion of Canadian independence had been held to be beyond legitimate bounds, and any one who raised the question was pretty sure to be regarded as a veiled traitor. But Sir Richard, in taking stock of the outlook for the future, declared that the question of independence was a legitimate one for discussion, without committing himseif to its advocacy. His speech was applauded rapturously. The Reform press, as a rule, followed, either with reticence or weak approval, and a few flew into a passion. Some of the Conservative papers again cried out treason, but no dead came out of their graves. It is not overstepping the bounds to say that Sir Richard Cartwright is more popular at this moment in his party than he has ever been, but this statement does not imply that he ever lacked the well-wishes or the admiration of his colleagues or of the Liberal party. But he seems to be constantly attaining a greater intellectual growth; and his speeches in the House of Commons from year to year grow more powerful. He is gifted with a faculty for very clear and very close reasoning; his speeches give evidence of careful research, and they are always pleasing because of their literary style. But it is in polished invective and sharp sarcasm that Sir Richard is most effective; and when his mood is a bitter one his opponents-squirm at their desks as if in bodily pain. Politicians and their organs may abuse opponents as they will, but this much can justly be said of Sir Richard Cartwright by any one: he is a man of the highest possible personal character; is devoted to his country; and zealous in his efforts to serve her. Besides these merits he is a gentleman upon whose official or political escutcheon no shadow of evil-doing rests.

Wright John, London, Ontario, was born at Upwell, Cambridgeshire, England, He received his education in his native town; and when he reached man's estate, in 1854, resolved to seek his fortune in Canada. Having arrived in this country, he cast his eyes about him, and though there was opportunity in many directions for a young man of less energy and ability than himself, he resolved to try his fortnne at farming. So he settled in the County of Oxford, Ontario, where he farmed for a number of years. He was not long engaged in this occupation, when he came to the wise conclusion that cattle-raising, combined with crop-growing, was a profitable business, and we next find Mr. Wright engaged successfully in raising thoroughbred Durham cattle and Leicester sheep. Tiring of farm life, he visited England, and remained in that country for about two years, when he again returned to Canada, and took up his abode in London, where he has ever since resided. In 1874, he began business as a stock-broker, and being a careful, conscientious man, he has avoided the rocks on which many in the same line of business have been shipwrecked, namely, "speculations" and "marginal operations." Wright, though he was appointed, in 1870, lieutenant in company eleven of the West Riding of Middlesex Division Militia, has no great inclination for military life; yet like many other loyal subjects he is always ready in case of need to defend his adopted Mr. Wright is country against its foes. always found foremost in all benevolent and humanitarian movements; and when the handsome infirmary attached to the Protestant Orphans' Home, in London, was being built, he acted as secretary-treasurer He is now a member of for the builders. the advisory board of the Orphans' Home, and has also a place on the board of several other benevolent institutions. Some years ago he was elected a life member of the St. Mr. Wright is an ad-George's Society. herent of the Episcopal church, and in politics he is a Liberal Conservative.

Bryce, William, Wholesale Bookseller and Stationer, London, Ontario, was born in Glasgow, Scotland, on the 15th February, 1846, and with the members of his family emigrated to Canada, in May, 1854. After a residence in Toronto and vicinity for about two years, the subject of this notice removed to London, and has been a resident of the Forest City ever since. Mr. Bryce received a public school education, and at the age of fourteen had reached the fifth form ---an uncommon achievement at that time. A year later he entered the employment of Robert Reid, (now Collector of Customs) with whom he remained eight years. In 1868, Mr. Reid assisted him to branch out for himself, and from the then small beginning, he has steadily increased his business opportunities, until at the present time the name of Bryce is known in every village, town and city in Ontario, where a book or fancy store is located. Mr. Bryce employs a large staff constantly, uses his capital in his business only, and avoids in every way speculations of an ulterior character. He attends closely and strictly to his business, and is known as one of the most diligent and energetic merchants in London. In politics he is a Reformer, but avoids mixing business and party questions in any way. A Methodist in religion, he is as liberal in this as in politics, and allows an opponent equal latitude of thought in both as he claims for himself. Mr. Bryce was married on the 3rd of October, 1871, to Jane Davidson Johnson, eldest daughter of John Johnson, Apple Hill Farm, township of Westminster. In the stirring times of 1865-6, our subject was an active volunteer-a member of the 7th batallion of London Light Infantry-and saw service at the front with his company. He also attended several camps of exercise, and did duty at Thorold, Goderich, and other places. On more than one occasion a commission was offered to him, but he respectfully declined the honour, preferring to serve with the companions of years, by whom he was ever regarded in the highest esteem. Mr. Bryce is a member of Forest City lodge, No. 38, Independent Order of Oddfellows. and also of Adelphian encampment of the same order. He has been for two years past a member of the executive committee of the Booksellers' Union of Ontario, and along with other leading members of the trade, was instrumental in its institution. He visits the leading British and continental centres of commerce yearly, and is the largest importer in his line of goods inwestern Ontario. He is comparatively young and vigorous, and bids fair to live to a good old age.

ed a

that

and

fabri

pute

kind

as V

a pas

repre

ted t

for o

He t

ness.

glove

turn

and:

world

West

1869

he e

and

1880

the n

ing s

been

most

one.

seein

self :

ness

spo

chur

Scot

ents

Mac

com

Glas

he v

upor

futu

Hall

stud

sion

Jers

Shor

and

gara

land

of th

duct

Pais

pres

Chu

dant

cour

Ame

tual

effic

M

Wanhorn, John F., Picton, Ontario, was born on September 18th, 1842, in the County of Prince Edward, Ontario. His paternal grandfather emigrated from Dutchess county, New York, in 1786, and settled in Canada. Our subject received his education in Prince Edward county, and then turned his attention to industrial pursuits. He likewise had an inclination for municipal politics, and was town councillor in his native town for the years 1878, 1879 and 1880. In the last named year, he established a large soap business; and as the result of careful and practical experiment, produced a self washing soap, i. e., a compound that would wash clothes without rubbing, and not injure the finest and most delicate fabric. This soap now has a world-wide repute; and it was the first soap of the kind made in Ontario. The article is known as Vanhorn's electric soap. Mr. Vanhorn is a past grand in the I.O.O.F., and also a representative to the Grand lodge. He visited the Pacific coast in 1864, where he was for one year manager of a large lumber yard. He then established a fruit and cigar business, and he likewise tried his fortune at glove-making, but owing to ill health, he returned to Canada after a residence of three and a half years on the other side of the new world. He likewise visited Honduras and the West India Islands. Mr. Vanhorn married in 1869, Magdalen Hadden. Three years later he established a grocery business in Picton, and continued in it for eight years; and in 1880, as elsewhere stated, he embarked in the manufacture of electric evasive self washing soap. Through life progress has always been characteristic of his enterprises; but his most important undertaking is his late one. Mr. Vanhorn is courageous and farseeing in his undertakings, and shows himself to be possessed of very excellent business abilities.

17

4

in-

ess

the

ge,

or oys

l in

vay He

ess,

ent

pol-

ting

. Ā

this

jual

for

the

dson

son,

ster.

ject

the

-and

any.

cise,

and

on a

e re-

ng to

hom

eem.

odge,

lows,

f the

years

ittee

, and f the

tion.

inen∙

is the

ds in-

oung

good

tario,

n the

His

utch-

ettled

duca-

then

suits.

unici-

in his

9 and

blish-

result

roduc-

Maclean, Rev. Mathew Witherspoon, M.A., Minister of St. Andrew's church, Belleville, was born in Glasgow, Scotland, on the 11th June, 1842. His parents were Malcolm Maclean and Catherine Macpherson. Mathew Witherspoon Maclean completed his education at the University of Glasgow, in 1862. While a divinity student. he visited Canada, and was then prevailed upon to make this country the field of his future labours. He entered the Divinity Hall of Queen's College, Kingston, where he studied for two years; and then took a session at Princeton Theological Seminary, New Jersey, U. S., where he graduated in 1866. Shortly afterwards he returned to Canada, and was licensed by the presbytery of Niagara, in connection with the Church of Scotland, on the 13th June, 1866. In August of the same year he was ordained and inducted to the pastorate of St. Andrew's church. Paisley, in the County of Bruce, by the presbytery of Guelph, in connection with the Church of Scotland. Here he found abundant scope for his zeal and energy. country," says the 'Scot in British North America,' "was newly settled, and the spiritual wants of the people had been but inefficiently and irregularly supplied." We further learn that Mr. Maclean was the only pastor belonging to his denomination within forty miles. His work extended over the large area of five townships, and in addition to daily pastoral visits, he travelled, every Sabbath from twenty to forty miles, preaching three times a day. His church increased so rapidly that it became necessary to provide additional accommodation for what had previously been a sparse and dwindling congregation. Three mission stations were organized at different points in the neighbourhood. In 1871, he accepted a call to the pastorate of the Mill Street Presbyterian church at Port Hope, where he remained for two years. On November 12th, 1873, he became pastor of St. Andrew's, Belleville, the oldest Presbyterian church in the city. Mr. Maclean was clerk of the presbytery of Kingston, in connection with the Church of Scotland, from the date of his settlement at Belleville up to the time of the union of the Presbyterian churches of the Dominion. He is a member of the Board of Trustees of Queen's University, Kingston; is president of the Belleville Mechanics' Institute and Library Association, of which he was a prominent orginator and promoter; is a trustee of the Belleville High School; is convener of the Home Mission Committee of the presbytery of Kingston, having charge of an extensive mission field, and is chaplain of several local organizations. Mr. Maclean has been a somewhat extensive traveller: he has visited the West Indies, the Western States, Europe and Manitoba. On the 29th of September, 1869, he married Isabella Elizabeth, eldest daughter of George Davidson, of the firm of Davidson & Doran, Kingston foundry, an ex-mayor of that city, and one of the oldest members of the Board of Trustees of Queen's University.

Morrice, David, Montreal, was born in Perth, Scotland, and is descended from Scottish ancestors on his father mother's side as far back as they can be traced. He enjoyed the advantages of careful Christian training in his home, and received a thorough secular education in the High School of his native place, where he first entered business. He afterwards went to Ireland, spending some time in Dublin. and Cork, and thence to England, residing chiefly in London, Liverpool and Man-At an early age he thus gained a chester. very complete knowledge and wide experience of mercantile affairs, which he has since turned to such good account in the country of his adoption. When about twenty-three years old his mind was attracted to the new world, where so many of his fellow-countrymen have accumulated wealth and achieved distinction. He selected Canada as the field of his enterprise, and arrived in Montreal in 1855. Here he remained for a short time, and afterwards took up his residence in Toronto, where, for several years, he acted as buyer for a large wholesale establishment. During his stay in the western capital, and ever since. he has been pre-eminently distinguished for christian liberality and activity. Toronto he was for some time an earnest and successful Sunday-school teacher in Knox church. Afterwards he became a leading spirit in a small group of zealous christian workers who gathered around the late Rev. Dr. John Taylor in founding Gould street United Presbyterian Church, now St. James' square Church. In addition to the pastorate of this little flock. Dr. Taylor was sole Professor of Divinity in the United Presbyterian Hall, and performed the duties of his chair with much learning and ability. For his church it was, however, the day of small things, and the struggle for existence was hard and protracted. In this good work Mr. Morrice expended time, thought and money, without stint, indeed, he gave all that he acquired, except what was absolutely necessary for personal support. He acted as Elder, Sunday-school teacher, member of the board of management of the church, and a director of the United Presbyterian Mag-In all these capacities his services were abundant and invaluable, and before leaving the city he had the satisfaction of seeing the congregation slowly emerging from its weakness and difficulties. fall of 1863, Mr. Morrice removed to Montreal, and it is here that his greatest works have been undertaken and accomplished. The enterprise and large movements of this commercial metropolis afforded full scope for his rare business capacity, and he soon founded the firm of which he is head. general merchants, manufacturers and manufacturers' agents, they carry on the largest business in their line that is done in Canada. They have warehouses in Montreal and Toronto, and deal exclusively with the They control about forty wholesale trade. cotton and woollen mills. in different parts of the country from Halifax to Sarnia, and several of these are the largest in the Dominion, more than one of them being capable of turning out, per annum, manufactured goods to the value of over one million dollars. On his arrival in Montreal, Mr. Morrice was attracted to the Free

Church. Coté street, by the preaching of the Rev. Dr. MacVicar, now Principal of the Presbyterian college. He was speedily called to office as an Elder, and in 1863 was appointed Assistant Superintendent of the Sunday-school. The church was then crowded, and the scene of much Christian and missionary activity, to which he contributed more than a little. On the retirement of the Hon. Justice Torrance from the office of Sunday-school superintendent he was called to that position, which he has held for over twenty years. In 1876-77, he took a very active and generous part in the erection of the Crescent street Presbyterian Church, an edifice which was found necessarv to meet the wants of the Coté street congregation, and which for costliness and magnificence is prominent among the many ecclesiastical buildings of Montreal. Mr. Morrice is Treasurer of this church, and has contributed very largely to its building and other funds. His great and most widely influential work, however, is in connection with the Presbyterian college, Montreal, As chairman of its Board of Management he has displayed wisdom, energy and liberality, which have earned for him the admiration and gratitude of thousands, and will hand down his name to posterity as one of the great benefactors of our country. From the very inception of the institution he was its warm friend and supporter, and a firm believer in its future success and usefulness. He contributed freely to its endowment and scholarship funds, and witnessed with unfeigned satisfaction its rapid progress. On the 25th November, 1880, he addressed a letter to the Rev. Principal MacVicar, intimating his decision to erect for the college a convocation hall, library, dining-hall, and additional dormitories for students. These extensive buildings, all of stone, and which are beautiful and admirably adapted for their purposes, were proceeded with at once, and finished, at a cost of over eighty thousand dollars, and opened, amid universal rejoicing, on the 28th November, 1882. Mr. Morrice received cordial thanks and congratulations from Christian people of various denominations from all parts of the country, and from far beyond it. Professors, students, ministers, elders, and the General Assembly, the supreme court of the church all heartily united in a similar recognition of his munificence, which has been followed by large and generous endowments to the institution by other friends. The press, far and wide, took occasion to commend in emphatic terms this noble benefaction. One city jo

gener

which

latest

was to

churcl

to giv

entern

only d

rest w

his vi

pravei

them

whose

to be

suppo

confin

the co

truly

intere

of his

ing m

tions.

Assoc

Sailor

In Ju

son,

benev

the sc

won f

all w

second

have a

are nd

the th

ronto

profes

of sev

in the

guish

throp

may f

as in to aba

their

comm

Chris

disper

time,

merch

ally,

time

ing '

opera

to the

tific t

Micro

-11:00

city journal truly said, "Mr. David Morrice, while of a retiring disposition, has been so generous a giver of the good things with which he has been blessed, that this, his latest act of liberality, was little more than was to have been expected. He had only to discover the educational needs of the church to which he belonged to be impelled to give of his bounty, and help forward an enterprise second to no other work. Not only did he pray that 'the Lord of the harvest would send forth more labourers into his vineyard,' but he supplemented these prayers by contributions, and implemented them with the educational machinery of whose operation the David Morrice Hall is to be the scene." It would be a mistake to suppose, however, that Mr. Morrice has confined his efforts to any one channel. On the contrary, he has shown himself to be truly public-spirited, manifesting a practical interest in everything that affects the weal of his city and country, and materially aiding many Christian and benevolent institutions, such as the Young Men's Christian Association, the General Hospital, the Sailors' Institute, House of Refuge, etc. In June, 1861, he married Annie S. Anderson, of Toronto, a lady whose social and benevolent qualities have made her home the scene of true domestic happiness, and won for her the warm esteem and love of all who know her. She has admirably seconded him in all his undertakings, as have also his sons, the two eldest of whom are now members of his business firm, and the third an undergraduate in arts, in Toronto University, preparing for the legal profession. Mr. Morrice's family consists of seven sons and one daughter. in the prime of life, and with his distinguished ability, courage, energy and philanthropic spirit, the church and his country may fairly expect much from him in future as in the past. He is not the style of man to abandon great enterprises before he sees their proper completion. In combining commercial activity with truly practical Christian effort, and in freely and wisely dispensing his bounty during his own lifetime, he has set an example which our merchant princes, and wealthy men generally, would do well to follow. While his time is necessarily much absorbed in directing extensive and wide-spread business operations Mr. Morrice devotes spare hours to the gratification of his literary and scientific tastes, and is a member of the Montreal Microscopic Club and similar institutions. He is a ready and effective speaker, and

of

of

lily

363

of:

len

ian

tri-

ire-

om

nt,

has

he

the

ian

ces-

eet

and

any

Mr.

has

and

lely

ion

eal.

ient.

ber-

nir-

will

e of

rom

was

firm

ess.

and

un-

0n

ed a

in-

lege

and

hese

hich

for

nce,

hou-

ersal

Mr.

con-

ious

oun-

sors,

ieral

irch,

on of

d by e in-

, far

em.

0ne

carries much weight in religious gatherings, and in the General Assembly of which he has been frequently a member. Lane, Charles, Napanee, Ontario, was born in the township of Augusta, Grenville county, on the 10th of August, 1814. father, Henry Lane, was a native of New York state, and came to Canada with his father, George Lane, one of the U. E. loyalists, and settled with his family in the township of Augusta. His mother was a daughter of Mr. Handley, of the British army, and was born in Canada. Our subject received a common school education, that being all that lay within the reach of a youth at this primitive period of the country's history. He stayed on the farm of his father until he was about twenty years old, when he left to take a position as school teacher, for which he had previously been fitting himself. His first school was in the township of Elizabeth, in the County of Leeds, now the village of Addison. In this school he spent three consecutive years, and afterward pursued the same vocation, with a slight interregnum, in various adjoining townships. Mr. Lane married on March 5th, 1840, Lucinda Taplin, a daughter of Henry Taplin, of Elizabethtown, County of Grenville. Soon after his marraige he gave up teaching, and accepted a position as manager of the Temperance Mills Manufacturing Company, located in the township of Young, in the County of Leeds. This enterprise was under the control of temperance men, who were a power even in those days; and they carried on the business of grist milling, carding, sawing, dyeing, etc., in their establishment for many years most successfully. Mr. Lane, in time, relinquished this employment to engage in farming, having bought seventy-five acres in the township of Augusta. Here he lived three years, when he sold his farm and bought another of 120 acres in the same township, near Prescott. This farm, upon which he resided for thirteen years, he added to, from time to time, until it reached over 300 acres; and he engaged in mercantile pursuits and the manufacture of potash, etc., in addition to his agricultural work. In 1859, Mr. Lane sold this property, and bought another lot of 500 acres, which he farmed, at the same time occupying himself in saw-milling and shingle-making. On this farm he lived fifteen years, visiting Europe, whence he imported a variety of merchandise which he disposed of to advantage. In October, 1862, he was promoted to a captaincy in the second battalion of the Grenville Militia, having held a lieutenant's commission for some time previously. In 1872 he sold this farm, and moved to the town of Napanee, where he still resides. When on his farm near Prescott, he was appointed postmaster at Charlesville, which office took its name from the christian name of our subject. The first municipal office held by him was in 1850, when he was elected councillor for the township of Augusta; and while in this township he was elected councillor no less than twentytwo times, and frequently was elected reeve and deputy-reeve. Our subject was one of the original stockholders in the St. Lawrence and Ottawa Railway (now a part of the C.P.R. system), and like others, he did not find it a paying speculation to himself personally, although it proved to be of an immense public benefit. Mr. Lane has always been associated with the Temperance reform movement, and is identified with many temperance societies both secret and public. He is also a mason of many years standing. He has been in Europe twice, and when there visited places of prominent and historic interest. Being a gentleman of acute observation, he returned with a mind well stored with that peculiar information and experience which is only to be had through travel, and the possession of the "seeing In 1839 he became a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, which connection he strictly maintained up to the union of that church with the other Methodist bodies. He has had thirteen children, nine of whom are living; seven are married, and two still dwell with their parents. Since his residence in Napanee, Mr. Lane has been for eight years a member of the town council; and in 1847, while in Augusta, he was appointed a justice of the peace. His career has been characterized by energy, honourable conduct, and by success.

Tait, Rev. Donald, B.A., of Toronto University, pastor of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, Berlin, Ontario, was born in Halkirk, Caithness-shire, Scotland, on the 16th of December, 1850. His parents were Donald Tait and Catherine Campbell. Donald Tait received his primary educational training at the Free Church School. Halkirk; but after leaving this institution, he pursued a course of private studies under a competent tutor. In 1871 he entered the University of Edinburgh, where, for one session, he made a special study of Latin and Greek. In the spring of 1872 he sailed for Canada, and upon his arrival began to attend classes in University College and also in Knox College, Toronto. fall of 1873 he entered the University College, receiving the standing of a second year student ad eundem statum from Edinburgh University. In 1876 he graduated in arts, whereupon he entered Knox College to take a theological course. In April, 1879, his studies were completed in this institution, and the young graduate was licensed to preach the gospel by the Presbytery of Toronto, in July of the same year. We may say that during the last two sessions of his attendance at Knox, he acted as classical tutor in the literary department connected with that institution; and every year during the three which his course included, he received a scholarship at the competitive examinations at the close of each session. He was ordained pastor of St Andrew's Church, Berlin, Ontario, on the 6th of October, 1879. He married, on December 30th, 1879, Mary Browett, daughter of the Reverend Robert Wallace, Toronto. This lady died at Niagara Falls on the 27th of September, 1881; and Mr. Tait married again on July 8th, 1885, Anna B., only daughter of M. B. Perine, manufacturer at Doon, Ontario. With respect to the religious views of Mr. Tait, it may be said that they are in accord with those embodied in the standards of the Presbyterian church. Mr. Tait is a very earnest, logical and effective preacher, and he is endued with the most active zeal in his pastoral work. During his stay at Edinburgh he attended the ministry of the Rev. Dr. Horatius Bonar, the celebrated hymnist.

Porte, Captain Jonathan A., Trenton, was born in the County of Wexford, Ireland, on the 25th of February, 1841. His father was a native of King's county, and occupied the position of head constable; and his mother, whose maiden name was Sparrow, was descended from an old military family. On both sides, it will be seen, our subject comes of military stock. Captain Porte came to Canada, in 1853, and settled in Picton, Bay of Quinté. He was educated at P. E. County High School, and at the Grammar School, Belleville, and left school in 1859. He subsequently spent a few years in the United States, as a clerk in a mercantile firm. In 1864 he ran a small steamer, the John Greenway, and continued to do so for six years later, when she was burnt. He then built the Norfolk, but after running one season, he sold her. A few years later he built the steamer Utica, which he still owns. In the years 1879-80, he built, along with another gentleman, the Mary Ethel; and in the winter of 1880 he

Ther purs in H local has a matt and Rifle 1867. he to mian is ber on In 1 street busin

tı

de

th

Tı

th

wl

tra

Ca

co

Co

su

lie

in

old

he

ger

qui hor

jeci

Eng

wer

scei

rece

of a

tow.

year

to

cour

for t

his :

instru paying of bus
since that no
domin
umbia
a succ orches

built the Varuna, which vessel he still controls. About the year 1882 the Mary Ethel was sold to the Trenton and Bay of Quinté Navigation Company, of which Captain Porte is a large shareholder. He is president of the Trenton and Bay of Quinté Navigation Company, and was a member of the first council after the incorporation of Trenton as a town. He is also a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen, in which body he is a past master. travelled through the United States and Canada. He is a Methodist, although he comes of Quaker stock; and in politics a Conservative, but does not bind himself to support any party, although he is a firm believer in the national policy. He married in 1868, Miss Garrett, whose family were old settlers in P. E. county. By this union he had one child, a girl. The captain is very genial, and we should judge, has all the requisites for making his passengers feel at home while under his care.

n the

Col-

year

urgh

arts.

take

his

tion.

d to

Tor-

may

f his

sical

cted

ring

e re-

ex-

He

rch, 879. Iary

bert

gara

and 885,

ine,

re-

t, it vith

est,

en-

rgh Dr.

ry, g's ead

len

an vill k. nd as nd Claxton, Thomas, Toronto, the subject of this sketch, was born at Norfolk, England, on March 15th, 1837. His parents were Thomas and Martha Claxton, both descended from English families. Our subject received his early training, which consisted of a solid English education, in his native town; but when he reached his fourteenth year, (1851), he emigrated with his parents to Canada. Coming as strangers into a country where bread was to be had only for toil, young Claxton was convinced that his best course was to master some trade. Thereafter, for fifteen years, we find him pursuing the trade of a shoemaker. While in Kingston, he became attached to the local volunteer corps, as bandsman, and he has always taken a hearty interest in military He removed to Toronto in 1863, and joined the band of the Queen's Own Rifles, to which corps he was attached until 1867. During his connection with the corps he took part in the defence against the Fenian raid of 1866. He was afterwards a member of the Tenth Royals band for four years. In 1869, he opened a store at 31 Adelaide street east, where he carried on for a year a business, principally as repairer of musical instruments. Finding this undertaking a paying one, he removed to his present place of business, 197 Yonge street, where he has since built up a wholesale and retail trade that now extends over the entire area of the dominion, from Nova Scotia to British Columbia. Mr. Claxton was the first who made a successful attempt at organizing a local orchestra, and he now controls the well-known and capable "Claxton Orchestra," composed of thirty professional musicians. He is the only Canadian dealer that has issued an illustrated catalogue of musical instruments, and has at present the leading music trade of Canada. In addition to the advancement of music and musical culture being Mr. Claxton's professed trade, it is with him, and has always been, a labour of love.

Swayze, George Albert, Professor of Commercial Science and Penmanship, and Head Master of the Business College connected with Albert College, Belleville, Ontario, was born on the 14th May, 1843, in the County of Haldimand, in what is known as the "Scotch Settlement." His father was Daniel Freeman Swayze, son of the late Rev. Caleb Swayze, a minister of the Methodist church, of Thorold township, Welland, Ontario; and his mother, Sarah, was a daughter of the late George Althouse, of Grimsby, Lincoln county, Ontario. Mr. Swayze's paternal grandfather came from New Jersey, and his maternal grandfather from Pennsylvania, both arriving in Canada about the beginning of the present century. In 1842 our subject's father took up a "bush" lot from the government, and for several years the family had to wrestle with the rough ways of pioneer life. George was set at work as soon as he was old enough to be of use, and we find that he soon had learned "To plough, to sow, to reap and to mow, And to be a farmer's boy."

Although farm work was betimes uncongenial to the tastes of young Swayze, it was the means through which he acquired a vigorous physical constitution. His first schooling was obtained at the little log school-house, about a mile from his father's farm; and as his help upon the farm grew to be more important his study-time came to be confined to the winter months. attainments must have been very limited had he not, at the age of sixteen, resolved that he would get an education. Then commenced, as we learn from "Studies for Real Life," a struggle for knowledge under difficulties. His efforts in this new direction were not openly opposed by his father, who wished him to remain on the farm, but who considered anything like a liberal education unnecessary for a farmer, but still he was obliged to perform his full amount of work on the farm. The time allotted him at school during the winter months was diligently improved, and in the spring, when he was compelled to leave school, he induced the teacher to write headlines for him to copy at odd times until the next winter. He had heard of others obtaining a good education under even more discouraging circumstances, and believing that "what man has done man may do." and "what man has done man may do, also that "where there is a will there's a way," he persevered, greatly encouraged at times by his kind teacher, who rendered him all the assistance in his power. At the are of eighteen, and in the following winter, he left the farm and entered the teaching profession, in which occupation he remained for more than ten years in the public schools. In 1865 he attended the Toronto Normal School and obtained a provincial certificate, and thus became independent of county boards. While in Toronto he made great improvement in penmanship, so much so that when the final examination came he received next to the highest possible mark in writing. In the year 1868 he obtained a "Spencerian Key to Practical Penmanship," and following the instructions contained therein, he was enabled, by careful and continuous practice, to still further improve his writing. teaching in the vicinity of London, he decided to take a course in the London Commercial College, then ably conducted by the late Jas. A. Elliott. The next summer, Mr. Elliott's health failing, he was obliged to retire from the business. Mr. Swayze purchased Mr. Elliott's interest in the college in June, 1873, and then began his commercial college career. During the three years he conducted that institution he enjoyed a good share of the public confidence and At the expiration of three patronage. years Mr. Swayze sold his interest in the college to the proprietor of the late Middle-sex Seminary. Two months after leaving London he accepted a position in Beatty's College, Belleville, as teacher of bookkeeping, arithmetic and assistant in penmanship. This situation he retained until the spring of 1877, when the Board of Education for the City of Belleville advertised for a writing master for the High and Public schools. Mr. Swayze applied and received the appointment, although eight others were applicants for the same posi-This position he held for more than seven years, viz., until July, 1884, when he resigned it to accept the position he now occupies. Mr. Swayze is an enthusiast on the subject of writing, and we feel that he is now filling the position nature intended him to labour in. Had he not been endowed with an indomitable perseverance he would have succumbed to his adverse circumstances in early life. Mr. Swayze's religious convictions are, and always have been, those of Methodism. He married, on June 28th, 1865, Esther A. Jones, fourth daughter of the late Peter Jones, formerly of Beverley, Wentworth county, but more lately of Malahide, Elgin county, and sister of the Rev. P. W. Jones, Methodist minister of the London Conference, and R. A. Jones, V.S., of Springfield, Elgin county. It is, we may add, as a business educator and teacher of penmanship, that Professor Swayze is most widely known. As for his art as a penman, it may be said with accuracy that his work presents both beauty and symmetry.

Gray, John, Lieut.-Colonel, Parkdale. M.P.P. for West York, Ontario, was born at Yorkville, in the County of York, on the 5th of January, 1837. His parents were John and Jane Gray, who came to Toronto from Rossmede, County of Meath, Ireland, in the year 1834. Our subject received his early educational training at private schools, but when he was prepared he proceeded to the academy situate at Rochester, in the State of New York. Lieutenant Colonel Gray has had a somewhat conspicuous mili-He enrolled in the Toronto tary record. Field Battery on the 7th June, 1856, and was appointed drill instructor in the same corps in 1860. In 1866 he was commissioned first lieutenant in the Toronto Field Battery, and in 1870 he was gazetted captain. 1875 he became brevet-major, and in 1883 took the rank of major. In February. 1885, he reached the upper round, becoming lieutenant-colonel. During the Fenian raid, in 1866, our subject was in active service, and commanded a detachment on board of the gunboat Prince Alfred, in October, 1869. He likewise served d ring the late rebellion in the North-West (1885), being on duty with his corps in command of the Toronto garrison. He has commanded the Artillery Brigade in camp during the He is a most capable years 1882-3-4. officer; is full of zeal for military work; and respected and admired by the men under his command. Colonel Gray began his political career in 1879, by receiving election as first reeve of Parkdale, upon the incorporation of that place. He was re-elected to the office in 1880, and again in He always has taken a very sincere and deep interest in public affairs; hence it came to pass that when, in February, 1883, he presented himself before the people of West York, they elected him to cupi has and as t nurs leagu he w Cons 1885 Com dent ciety Hort Indu and : A.M Maso ronto Color 1861. ter of forme of the

ters.

Gray'

fined

of Per

Scotla

Mowa

cated

M

the

had

is a

ıng,

weig

partly Bain, or disc the o schola the po of cor and c countr settlin the pr office, ing his classes and to Sandfo a sessi pal bei son, w master. in 184 tion "

"great

the Provincial legislature. Nor have they had any reason to repent of their choice. He is a hard worker in the interests of his riding, and a man whose views have much weight, notwithstanding the fact that he occupies an Opposition bench. In politics he has always been a steadfast Conservative. and he has never wavered in his convictions as to the superiority of the line of policy pursued by Sir J. A. Macdonald and his colleagues. During the years 1881 and 1882 he was president of the West York Liberal-Conservative Association; during 1884 and 1885 he was president of the Masonic Hall Company at Parkdale; for 1885, was president of the Toronto Electoral District Society; has been vice-president of the Toronto Horticultural Society; is a director of the Industrial Exhibition Association at Toronto, and is past master of Alpha lodge, A.F. & A.M. of Parkdale. He was initiated in Masonry in 1869, at Stevenson lodge, To-His religion is Episcopalianism. Colonel Gray married, on the 29th July, 1861, Catherine Angelina Calverly, daughter of Joseph Calverly and Mary Stuart, formerly of Hull, England. There is issue of the marriage four sons and three daughters. One son died in infancy. Colonel Gray's industrial exertions are chiefly confined to his extensive nursery.

ir-

re-

rth

ly

re

er

n-

y.

or

ıis

Mowat, William, Stratford, County of Perth, was born in Wick, Caithness-shire, Scotland, in 1830. His parents were George Mowat and Annie McKay. He was educated there, partly at the parish school, and partly at a private school kept by Peter Bain, whose brother had, in 1840, invented or discovered a system of telegraphing, and the old schoolmaster frequently held his scholars spell-bound by his description of the possibilities of the telegraph as a means of communication between distant points and countries. Mr. Mowat came to this country with his parents, in 1845, and, settling in Toronto, he was apprenticed to the printing business, first in the Herald office, and then in the Globe office. During his apprenticeship, he attended evening classes in the Toronto Mechanics' Institute. and took lessons in mathematics under Sandford Fleming, now of world-wide fame as a railway engineer. He also attended a session at the Normal School, the principal being the late Professor Jaffray Robertson, while the assistant, or mathematical master, was Professor H. Y. Hind. Early in 1846, he attended "a public exhibition" in the old City Hall, at which the "greatest invention of modern times," as the hand bills set forth, "would be put in operation and explained, whereby messages would be transmitted by electricity in an instant of time, by expert operators." Mr. Mowat's curiosity was aroused to see the practical working of the telegraph, and wending his way to the hall, found it crowded to the doors. Two operators, one at each end of the room, sat at a table on which was an instrument, and these were connected by a wire which stretched across the floor. Messages were handed to the operators by persons in the audience, and transmitted word for word as announced by the receiving operator. When the excitement was at its height, a well-known public man connected with the press announced that he detected the operators, who could plainly see one another, casting signs at each other, and he strongly de-nounced the operators as "Yankee humbugs," and the meeting broke up in great Each operator read the mesconfusion. sages from a roll of paper, sound operators being then unheard of. Amongst his companions at "the case," were James Somerville, M. P., of the Dundas Banner; Patrick Boyle, of the Irish Canadian Charles Mackenzie, (brother of Hon. Alex. Mackenzie), of Sarnia; and George Tye, of the Bramp-When Mr. Mowat had comton Times. pleted his apprenticeship, he was placed in charge of the mailing department of the Globe, and had as his assistant C. W. Bunting, now manager of the Mail, then a young lad about fourteen years of age. Mr. Mowat afterwards occupied subordinate positions both on the editorial staff of the Globe and also on that of the Colonist, the latter then published by Samuel Thompson, and the principal editor was George Shep-pard, who was, without exception, the ablest and most polished writer ever connected with the Canadian press. In the spring of 1852, Mr. Mowat was engaged as editor and printer of the Backwoodsman, a small weekly paper published at the village of Elora. In 1853-4 he was engaged in the law office of his friend, the Hon. O. Mowat, where he acquired a knowledge of matters pertaining to law. During these two years his pen was not idle, for he contributed a series of articles to the Northern Ensign, published at Wick, pointing out the advantages and capabilities of Canada as a field These articles atfor Scottish emigrants. tracted the attention of the Canadian press, and the Globe and other journals commented He also contributed favourably on them. several articles to Mackenzie's Week'y Message, (published by the late William Lyon Mackenzie after his return from exile,) on various subjects which then (1853) agitated the public mind. In January, 1855, he was engaged as editor of the Stratford Beacon, and in the course of a few months became proprietor, and continued the publication of the paper until near the close of 1863, when he disposed of the business to William The Beacon, from the first Buckingham. day of its publication, took a leading part in the struggle of the Reform party for measures which ultimately triumphed and became law. Mr. Mowat took a very active part in many an election contest in Perth, and it was at his urgent solicitation that the late Hon. M. Foley was induced to contest Perth with the late J. M. Daly, whose influence until then was unbounded. Mr. Mowat has been frequently honoured by his fellow citizens with municipal responsibilities, and has always been an active promoter of every enterprise tending to the advancement and welfare of the interests of the infant city of which he is an extensive property owner. He has been engaged in business as a private banker since 1863. In 1860 he was appointed a Justice of the Peace for the County of Perth, and has acted as License Commissioner under the Crooks Act for North Perth since 1880. In 1852 he married Jane (his cousin), daughter of the late Andrew Mowat, of Wick, and has living a family of three sons and one daughter. His only sister is married to Daniel Rose, of the publishing firm of Hunter, Rose & Co., of Toronto.

Mair, George, Manager of the Federal Bank, London, Ontario, was born on the 25th January, 1852, at Darnaway, Elginshire, Scotland. His parents were George and Ann, the maiden name of his mother being Whyte. The early studies of George Mair were pursued at Cooperhill and Moyness, and included a general English education and Latin. Mr. Mair's military record is confined to a four years' connection with the Elginshire Rifle Volunteers. On the 25th May, 1868, he entered the Caledonian Bank at Forres, as junior, for a term of three years, and left that institution on the 1st of June, 1871, holding the position of teller. On the 1st March, 1872, he entered the Canadian Bank of Commerce, receiving a salary of $300; and he resigned on the 15th of September, 1874, his salary being then $900, and joined the Federal Bank at London as accountant. In June of the year following he was transferred to Aurora as manager; to the Kingston managership in April, 1878; to the Guelph managership in June, 1880, and to that of London, which office he now holds, on the 1st July, 1885. This latter branch, it may be said, is the most important in the Federal Bank. Dur. ing the troubles of the bank in 1884, Mr. Mair, whose sound judgment and excellent business capacity were known to the head officers of the institution, was deputed by Mr. Yarker, now general manager, to act for him in clearing up business in Manitoba. where affairs were more critical than in any other portion of the bank's area. success with which he accomplished this trust is now well known in banking circles, and a tribute is paid to him by Mr. Yarker in his report to the shareholders. Mr. Mair was brought up in the Presbyterian faith, but he has latterly attended the Church of England with his wife, and now prefers the services in that church. He married in August, 1876, Minnie E., daughter of David W. Doan, postmaster of Aurora, and granddaughter of Charles Doan, J.P., of the same The latter gentleman was prominently to the front, during the rebellion of William Lyon Mackenzie, on the loyalist side. She is likewise a grand-daughter of John Babcock of Atalanta, Missouri; and it will be remembered that this is the gentleman who has been so strongly pressed, and so often, to stand for the governorship of Mrs. Mair's family, on her the State. father's side, are descendants of the Philadelphia Quakers. Her mother was born in Paris, France, but of English extraction.

Moore, Major Alexander Huggins, Hamilton, Ontario, manager of the Stinson Bank, was born on the l5th August, 1843, at Rathdrum, County Wicklow, Ireland. He is a son of John, third son of the Rev. Alexander Moore, who was descended of an English family that settled in the County of Louth during the reign of Queen Elizabeth. The family, however, came originally from Spain. His mother was Isabella, youngest daughter of John Huggins, of Kildallan, County Armagh. Alexander Huggins Moore came to Canada with his parents in 1848; and received his early educational training in the Hamilton public schools, where he took the classical and mathematical course. As a boy, the subject of this sketch, commenced business life as a clerk in the dry goods business, having been in the employ of Charles Magill, M.P., for about a year and a half, when he was appointed to a clerkship in the Hamilton water works office, which he left after an eighteen months' service, to enter

He 1 struc regin 1866. gara at car camp land A Ba to Se ficate occasi major Milita duties Moore is tho terior ber or affairs the ot the lat

(presid presen

was of

West 1

other e

of the

of his officers

can giv

for tha

Major

trustee

He was

the

ow:

esta

yea

cha

one

posi

proj 188

186

Н.

of t clas:

in J

at F

He

1866 brev

appo

on t

ing

perfe

while

point

the employment of Stinson's Bank, then owned and carried on by the late Thomas Stinson. He has been in the service of this establishment (with the exception of a few years during which he was teller in the Exchange Bank of Canada), for over twentyone years, and is now its manager, to which position he was appointed by the present proprietor, James Stinson, in January, 1884. He enlisted in 13th battalion in 1865, and attended the military school of H. M. 16th Regiment from May to August of the same year, taking first and second class certificates. He was appointed ensign in June, 1866, while the regiment was lying at Port Colborne during the Fenian raid. He became lieutenant on 28th December, 1866; captain on the 20th Jan., 1870; brevet-major on 20th Jan., 1875, and was appointed junior major of the regiment on the 28th Sept., 1883. He became acting adjutant on the 5th Feb., 1874, and performed the duties of the adjutantcy while with the corps till he received the appointment of adjutant, 13th January, 1882. He received the appointment of drill instructor, 3rd July, 1873, and was with the regiment at Port Colborne and Thorold in 1866, at Grimsby camp in 1870, and at Niagara camp in 1871. He was brigade major at camp in Niagara, in 1872 and 1874, and camp quarter master at Niagara and Holland Landing in 1875. He was attached to A Battery, School of Gunnery, from March to September, 1876, taking a first-class certificate in gunnery and artillery. On several occasions, during the absence of the brigade major of the 3rd Brigade Division No. 2 Military District, he performed that officer's duties, making inspections, etc. Major Moore is a zealous and energetic officer and is thoroughly versed in military law and in-In 1879 he sat as a memterior economy. ber on the first court of enquiry into the affairs of the old 10th Royals, at Toronto, the other members of the commission being the late Colonel Durie, D.A.G., of Toronto, (president), and Colonel R. B. Denison, at In 1876 Major Moore present D. A. G. was offered an inspectorship in the North West Mounted Police Force, but family and other engagements prevented his acceptance of the offer. Before dismissing the subject of his military career we may say that it is officers of the stamp of Major Moore that can give efficiency to our militia, and earn for that body the confidence of the public. Major Moore served as a separate school trustee for three years, 1879, 1880 and 1881. He was elected alderman for No. 6 ward, in ich

he

ur-

Ir.

ent

ad

bу

or

þa,

ny he nis in the city of Hamilton, in 1883 and this position he still fills with much satisfaction to the city. In 1884 he was elected chairman of the Hospital and House of Refuge Committee of the Council, and under his administration, in 1884, the entire staff of the city hospital was changed and a new regime established, greatly to the benefit of the institution. He was re-elected chairman in Major Moore is vice-president for 1885. the sixth ward of the Liberal-Conservative Association. He has ever been a strong supporter of conservative principles and of the In municipal affairs he national policy. has always been an advocate of careful and economical administration, and an opponent of the schemes of the ward politicians, counselling ever the promotion of measures for the social, material and educational improvement of the community. He always has been emphatically the friend and advocate of the workingman. In religion Major Moore is a member of the Roman catholic church, having become a convert to that faith in 1874, on Easter Sunday of which year he was received into its com-munion by the Very Rev. E. J. Heenan, V.G., who with the late Bishop Farrell had for some eighteen months instructed him. It was after a long course of study and severe reading which convinced him of the truth of Catholic doctrines, that he took a step which at the time caused his friends great pain, and brought about a temporary estrangement of many of them. While firm and consistent in following out what he believes to be his duty, as a Roman catholic, he is neither bigoted nor narrow minded allowing others the same right to judge for themselves which he has exercised. He was married in January, 1879, to Anne Marie Stinson, daughter of the late Ebenezer Stinson, one of Hamilton's earliest and most enterprising settlers, a gentleman who was universally respected, and who has left behind him as a momento many beautiful avenues, particularly in the south-east end of the city, which he laid out and planted. Mr. Stinson also donated to the Anglican church of St. Thomas, the beautiful site on which that church is erected. Mrs. Alex. H. Moore became a convert to the Roman catholic faith in the year 1875, nearly four years prior to her marriage with Major Moore.

Hague, George, General Manager of the Merchants Bank, Montreal, was born at Rotherham, England, in the year 1825. He is descended from an o'd Yorkshire family, who have been settled in the neighbourhood of Rotherham, (the Rotherwood of "Ivan-hoe") in the West riding, for many generations, an ancestor having held a farm from Lord Strafford, in the reign of Charles I. This farm, it may be said, was held by the singular tenure of a peppercorn annually. When a lad attending school, he showed an aptitude for mathematical calculations, and this quality led to his entering the office of the Sheffield Banking Company. Here he remained for a period of eleven years, during which time he received that thorough grounding in banking which has since been so large a factor in his success. Subse-quently he engaged himself with a firm of railway contractors; and in 1854 was sent to Canada to take charge of the company's finances. The death of the principal partner brought the business to a close; and Mr. Hague returned to his old profession in 1856, receiving the position of accountant of the newly-organized Bank of Toronto. Four years later he was placed in charge of the Cobourg branch of the bank; and upon the death of the president, Mr. Angus Cameron, a few years afterwards, he was promoted to the position of cashier, which office he held for fourteen years. While holding this office, Mr. Hague took an active part in all matters relating to the polity of banking, and, in co-operation with other bankers, and with members of parliament, offered an unflinching resistance to the proposal of the government to change the basis of the circulation of the banks. ertions were crowned with success, and the government scheme was withdrawn, after having been two sessions before parliament, to be succeeded by another in the nature of a compromise. This proposition was introduced and carried through by the late Retiring from the Sir Francis Hincks. service of the Bank of Toronto at the close of the year 1876, Mr. Hague was induced, a few months afterwards, to take charge of the Merchants Bank of Canada, as there now had come a time of crisis and peril, when quick and true insight, sound and sober judgment, and thorough experience were indispensable. All these qualities Mr. Hague possessed—the public had confidence in his capacity—and in due time it became known that the affairs of the bank were once more upon a safe footing. Mr. Hague has remained General Manager ever since; and the success of the institution which he directs is known to the public. For the last twenty years he has been a frequent contributor to the financial journals of Canada; and he has also taken a deep interest in the with Dr. Platt, M.P., then a student of cause of literature and education. He is chairman of the Congregational College of Montreal; and a governor of McGill Uni-He was for several years president versity. of the Montreal Young Men's Christian Association, and has been a zealous supporter of various enterprises connected with the development of the Congregational church in the Dominion.

Platt, Gilbert Dorland, B.A., Inspector of Public Schools, Picton, was born on February 7th, 1837, in the township of Hallowell, County of Prince Edward, Ontario. His parents were Henry Platt and Emily Preston, both descended from U.E. loyalists, who came from New York state sometime about the beginning of the present century. His maternal grandmother, Helen Palen, saw the first steamboat on the Hudson river, just before leaving with the family of her father for a home in the wilds of Canada. The latter, though too young to take an active part in the Revolutionary war, was afterwards subjected to such constant annoyance on account of his fidelity to the British crown, that he was at last compelled to leave his ample estate, and seek peace amid the hardships of pioneer life. The subject of this notice was brought up on a farm, and up to his seventeenth year received only such an education as was afforded by the public school of the neighbourhood, when his services were not required on the farm. In his seventeenth year he began teaching a public school, but, after a few months' experience, gave up his situation, and became a student in the Toronto Normal school, then in charge of the late T. J. Robertson, M.A., as head master, and Rev. Dr. Ormiston as second master. At the end of two sessions, Mr. Platt received a firstclass certificate, and was appointed to one of the public schools in the City of Ottawa. Here he remained during the year 1857, at the close of which he resigned his position. and attended the Collegiate Institute at Fort Edward, N. Y., where he took up Latin, Greek and French. In September, 1859, he became a matriculant in the University of Toronto, but continued to pursue his studies privately; and the next year was appointed principal of the United Grammar and Common schools of the village of Gananoque. After holding this position for three years and a half, during which his health became somewhat impaired, he attended lectures for a part of the year in University College, and then turned his attention to commercial In September, 1866, in company affairs.

ren he ' B. : his dul Sch the sity year pret of h to ta effor Tem hear

me

nev

fed

tribu in th mari the town of fo ters. that M most Cana Scotl mere

ceive

Colle

to n

acade demy fathe Macd meda. ing cl tered Ganai then 1 sition Farlar time 1 ness in establi compe his sit With t in 1847 entere & Co, Macdo a year, 1849 w of esta tablish medicine, he established the New Nation newspaper, so named in anticipation of confederation, and in connection with which he remained until 1870. In December, 1868, he was appointed to succeed the late John B. Denton, as superintendent of schools for his native county, and in June, 1871, was duly appointed county inspector, under the School Act of that year. In 1873, after the customary examination, he was admitted to the degree of B.A., in Albert University, Belleville. During the past sixteen years and upwards, his attention has been pretty fully occupied with the arduous duties of his office. He has, however, found time to take an active part in the various local efforts for the promotion of the cause of Temperance and Prohibition, to which he is heartily attached, and to which, in addition to numerous newspaper articles, he has contributed a "Temperance Primer," for use in the schools. In July, 1859, Mr. Platt married Harriet Louisa, eldest daughter of the late William C. Williams, clerk of the township of Hallowell. His family consists of four children, one son and three daughters. The repute enjoyed by our subject is that of a zealous and capable educationist.

is

of

ni.

nt

an

p-

 \overline{ed}

n-

rn

of

n-

te e-

he

Macdonald, John, Toronto, one of the most enterprising and successful merchants Canada can boast of, was born in Perthshire, Scotland, in December, 1824 When a mere youth he came to this country and received his early education, first at Dalhousie College, Halifax, and then at Bay street academy, Toronto. At the Bay street academy, conducted by the late Mr. Boyd, father of the chancellor of Ontario, young Macdonald had the honour of winning the medal for classics. Mr. Macdonald, having chosen the mercantile profession, entered the employ of C. & J. Macdonald, at Gananoque, and served for two years. then returned to Toronto, and took a position in the house of the late Walter Mac-Farlane, on King street east, who at that time was doing perhaps the largest business in Upper Canada. After living in this establishment for about six years, he was compelled, through failing health, to give up his situation, and seek change of climate. With this end in view he sailed for Jamaica, in 1847, and after resting for a short time, he entered the mercantile house of Nethersoll & Co, the largest on the island. Here Mr. Macdonald remained for somewhat less than a year, when he returned to Toronto, and in 1849 we find him making the bold attempt of establishing an exclusivly dry goods establishment on Yonge street, near Richmond street. Business prospered, and in 1853 he moved to larger premises on Wellington street, nearly opposite his present magnificent warehouse. Thus we see laid the foundation of the present large wholesale and importing house of John Macdonald & Co. After a period of nine years of successful business, Mr. Macdonald entered the handsome premises on the south side of Wellington street, and to these have since been added another pile of buildings which now occupies the ground formerly covered by the North American Hotel and the Newbigging House on Front street. These premises were bought at a great out-lay of capital. They have a frontage of 100 feet, with 140 feet in depth, and are six stories high. About one hundred men are employed, including the buyers, in the British and Amercan markets, and the establishment is, without doubt, the largest of its kind in Canada, and will compare favourably with any of the wholesale houses in the largest cities of the United States. Macdonald, realizing the idea that the world has claims upon him outside his warehouse, entered public life as member for West Toronto in the Legislative Assembly of Canada. His opponent on this occasion for parliamentary honours being the present lieutenant-governor of Ontario, Hon. John Beverley Robinson, whom he defeated by a majority of 462 votes; and sat in parliament until confederation was accomplished. At the next general election he was defeated for the House of Commons, by the late Mr. Harrison, who afterwards became Chief Justice of Ontario. In 1875 a vacancy having occurred in Centre Toronto, a constituency established in 1872, Mr. Macdonald was invited to become a candidate, and having consented, he was returned by acclamation. In 1878 however, when the national policy cry was raised, and people imagined they could be made rich by Act of Parliament, Mr. Macdonald was defeated by Robert Hay, the present sitting member, by a majority of 490 votes. In politics, Mr. Macdonald has always been what may be styled an independent Liberal, discarding party views when they seemed to trammel his settled convictions. He opposed the coalition of 1864, and voted against the confederation of the provinces. This attitude towards party, when its claims conflicted with duty, he clearly defined in his reply to a request asking him to be a candidate in 1875. He promised to give the government a cheerful support but declined to promise more, and to the credit of the requisitionists they conceded to him in advance a perfect freedom. of judgment in deciding upon all questions. Mr. Macdonald has been a director in a number of business companies. He has taken a deep interest in the affairs of the Board of Trade and the General Hospital. Education, too, has claimed some of his time, and for some years he has been a senator of the Provincial University, Toronto, visitor of Victoria College, Cobourg, and a member of the High School Board. In all religious and moral movements Mr. Macdonald has lent his aid, and is always ready to help everything calculated to elevate humanity, by tongue, pen and purse. Mr. Macdonald is a member of the Methodist church, and had it not been that his health failed him when a young man, and on the advice of his physician, he would have studied for the ministry, and to this church he has for many years devoted his time and talents. He has long been a member of the executive committee of its general Conference, and treasurer of the missionary society. Outside of his own denomination he has taken a conspicuous part in the work of the Evangelical Alliance, the Bible Society, the Temperance reform, and the Young Men's Christian Association, and has been twice elected president at the united convention of Ontario and Quebec. Mr. Macdonald has written two very interesting brochures, "Business Success," originally a lecture; and a practical address to "The Young Men of his Warehouse," both of which should be in the hands of young men. Mr. Macdonald's career is a striking instance of what energy and perseverance, combined with integrity and uprightness, may accomplish for a young man just starting upon life's battle.

Hore, Francis William, of the well known firm of F. W. Hore & Son, Hamilton, was born January 9th, 1821, at Hunstan parish, Sussex, England. His father was John Hore, and his mother's name was Ann Boxal, and both are now dead. John Hore was a farmer, but failed in the year 1837, and went to Canada. Our subject received his education at the school at Sidlesum Mills, England; but he was required to leave school at the early age of thirteen, and had no opportunity to attend afterwards. When young he was very fond of sports and games, especially cricket. He was the first to establish cricket in Galt, having brought out balls, bats, etc., from England. Amongst those who played at that time were the following gentlemen: -Wm. Andrews, John Young,

Wm. Barlow, Mr. Wilkens, McKay brothers and Warnock brothers. Young Hore was also very fond of shooting and fishing; indeed, he still enjoys these recreations. He was an apprentice to a butcher for three years previous to leaving England. He arrived in Hamilton in June, 1837, but remained only a few weeks, and removed to Galt. There were nine children in the family, and they were quite poor, and all that were old enough went to work at whatever they could obtain. Our subject, his father, and two younger brothers, helped to build the Dundas and Waterloo road. In the fall of 1848 they removed to West Flamboro', and a short time afterwards young Hore engaged with the Hon. James Crooks to work at his saw mill at Crook's Hollow. This position he held till 1851, when he took an interest in the business with A. & D. Crooks, sons of the Hon. In the year 1854 he with. James Crooks. drew from the firm and removed to Lynden, where he bought a saw mill. At Lynden he lived over two years, when he sold out, moved back to Flamboro', and rented a saw mill at Greensville. Subsequently he bought the mill, with a small farm attached. and did a very prosperous business for several years. In 1872 pine timber had grown very scarce, and our subject was obliged to think of some other business. So with characteristic enterprise he erected a large hub and spoke factory, and taking his oldest son, Francis Hore, into partnership, carried on an ever-increasing business up to the year 1879, when the factory was destroyed by fire, the firm losing about one-half of their hard-earned capital. However, in 1879, they purchased a magnificent manufacturing property in the City of Hamilton, and the business rapidly increased. Soon recovering the severe loss by fire, in 1883, the factory was doubled in capacity, and in addition a large wheel factory was added, and the firm is now turning out finished carriage wheels of the highest quality, and in continuously increasing quantity. works are now the largest of the kind in Canada. Since the commencement of our subject's business career he has always been honourable and honest, and made it a rule to pay his debts in full, although more than once in doing so he has disbursed the last dollar in his possession. We may say that Mr. Hore watched the Galt bridge at the time of the McKenzie rebellion. He was born a tory, and he is now a sturdy Conservative. Mr. Hore was married on May 1st, 1852, to Sophia Fearman, daughter of

B

C

te

A

re

su

fro

M

str

he

har

atte

tate

mal

inst

fror

and

a m

mos

his

0ril

pany

Ward

in 1

King

ficate

comp

upon

Mallo

Lana

count

Dass j

it wa

satisf

sixtee

school

Wm. Fearman, and sister of Mr. Fearman, of Hamilton. The fruits of the union are rothers re was of Hamilton. seven children living. The two eldest sons ng; inare now in business with their father. Mr. He Hore's health is good; he is quite active, three and in appearance is much younger than He the record of his years. Our subject was 7. but member for West Flamboro' Council for fifoved to teen years, and was for three years deputy in the reeve, but resigned the office when he reand all moved to Hamilton. In 1864 he was electt whated to the township council, and he was a ect, his member of the committee appointed to lped to select a site upon which to erect a county d. In iail. Mr. Hore has impressed his mark West rwards upon the industrial community, and he has shown those conversant with his career James what can be accomplished through integrity Crook's 1851.

usiness

Hon. e with-

ynden,

ynden d out.

nted a

tly he

ached.

ss for r had

t was

ss. So

cted a

ng his

rship,

up to s des-

e-half

er, in manu-

ilton.

Soon

1883.

nd in dded,

ished

, and

The

nd in

f our

been

, rule

than

e last

that

t the

was

Con-

May

and industry. Malloch, Donald McGregor, Clinton, Inspector of Public Schools for North Huron, was born in the township of Nepean, Carleton county, Ontario, on the 20th September, 1834. His parents, Donald and tember, 1834. Annie, nee MacGregor, soon afterwards removed to the township of Drummond, in Lanark county, where the boyhood of our subject was spent. They had emigrated from Perthshire, Scotland, in 1833. D. M. Malloch received his early educational instruction in the public schools at home, but he afterwards received private tuition at the hands of the late Mr. McLaren, head master of the Perth High School. Sometime afterwards he proceeded to New York, where he attended the Fort Edward Collegiate Institate. Upon his return he entered the Normal school at Toronto, spending, at that institution, two sessions, and taking therefrom a first class certificate, with grade B and A in succession. Mr. Malloch has also a military record to be summed up with his most creditable educational record. During his principalship of the public school in Orillia, he was elected ensign in No. 7 company, Simcoe Foresters. Some time afterwards he was promoted to the lieutenantcy. in 1866 he attended the military school at Kingston, and obtaining a second class certificate, became the regular instructor of his company till the close of 1867. He resigned, upon his removal to Clinton. During Mr. Malloch's career as a master, he taught in Lanark, Elgin, Perth, Simcoe and Huron counties, and those who are competent to pass judgment upon his work, declare that it was very excellent, and gave complete satisfaction. He spent six years in Orillia, sixteen years as principal of the Model school at Clinton, and in January, 1884, received the reward of his competency and long and efficient service by receiving the appointment of inspector of schools for North Huron. Mr. Malloch is a Freemason, having been initiated in St. Mark's lodge, No. 94, at Port Stanley, 1858. He was the first worshipful master of Orillia lodge, No. 192; and he has filled the chair in Clinton lodge, No. 84, for several years. He received the capitular degrees in Signet chapter No. 34, Orillia, in 1870; the orders of Knights Templars and Knights of Malta in Mount Calvary encampment in the same place, and in the same year; and likewise the investment of Knight of the Red Cross of Rome and Constantine. The council degrees were conferred in 1875. Mr. Malloch is a past first principal of Seaforth chapter, No. 66; preceptor of St. Elmo preceptory. No. 24, Goderich; past grand registrar Grand Lodge of Canada, 1875. and past grand superintendent of Huron District for 1883 and 1884. His religious conviction is that of Presbyterianism. Mr. Malloch married on Dec. 31st, 1868, Isabella Murdoch Wilson, a native of Glasgow, and daughter of Thomas Wilson. Inspector Malloch is a Conservative in politics, but he has never taken an active part in political questions, and he holds the opinion that teachers should stand aloof from party strife, and that education should remain apart from politics. Our subject was vicepresident, for a number of years of the Clinton Mechanics' Institute, and has always taken a zealous interest in the affairs of that organization. He assisted, likewise, in the selection of the books which comprise the library of that body.

Billy, Louis Adolphe, M.P. for Rimouski, Quebec.—This gentleman's ancestors, Jean Francis de Billy and Catherine de Lamarre, came from Paris, France, in 1674, to the parish of Champlain, district of Three Rivers, Province of Quebec, and removed thence, in 1705, to Gentilly, County of Nicolet. Our subject is a son of Solomon Billy, farmer and trader in Gentilly, P.Q., by Theotiste Beaufort, dit Brunelle. He was born in Gentilly on the 13th October, 1834, and received a thorough classical education at Nicolet College. As a student he is said to have been very brilliant, and to have shown great intellectual grasp. He entered upon the study of the law in Quebec, and was called to the bar of Lower Canada, on the 7th December, 1859. He married, at Rimouski, on the 4th July, 1864, Adele, daughter of the late Peter Gauvreau, a notary of Rimouski, and sister of the Rev. Antoine Gauvreau, curate of Notre Dame de la Victoire, Lévis, and he was induced, in 1861, to remove to the district of Rimouski. He went thither and practiced his profession till 1871, when he entered into partnership with A. P. Letendre, attorney, and now prothonotary of the Superior Court for the district of Rimouski. He was stipendiary magistrate for this district from the 20th February, 1873, until he resigned, at the special request of the electors of the County of Rimouski, who wished him to run as their representative for the House of Commons at the general election in 1882, when he was elected by a majority of 108 over his opponent, Dr. Romuald Fiset. M. Billy is president of the Rimouski St. Jean Baptiste Society, which he organized in 1880, and was its delegate to the Convention Nationale, at Quebec, in 1880; at Montreal, in 1884, and at Ottawa, in 1885. He has been and at Ottawa, in 1960. He has been president of the Mutual Fire Insurance Company of the counties of Rimouski, Témiscouata, and Kamouraska, since 1880. He is also vice-president of the North-West Central Railway Company. He is a strong Conservative, and, of course, supports the present government. M. Billy is a loyal member of his party, a staunch and influential representative of his county, and a doughty worker for fair play to his province. He is quick and brilliant, and is a useful and able member of Parliament.

.

Curts, Rev. James, Newburgh, County of Addington, Ontario, ex-President of the Bay of Quinté Conference of the Methodist Church, was born in the vicinity of Weston, township of York, July 25th, 1829, and is the eldest son of the late Peter Curts, who moved from Pennsylvania, U.S., with his father's family, in the year 1803, and settled near Richmond Hill, and subsequently in York township. His mother. whose maiden name was Lever, was a daughter of the late James Lever, senior, who settled in Little York, now the City of Toronto, in 1816, and was the first class-leader and Sabbath-school superintendent in the Methodist church in York. He assisted in building the first Methodist church here, and took a prominent part in the establishment of the Methodist book-room, and the publication of the Christian Guardian. After living to the ripe age of ninety-three, he was killed by falling down the stairs of Mr. McMaster's wholesale house, Toronto. His mother became a widow in 1857, and in the year 1867 was married to Mr. Philip Bartholomew, one of the early and well-respected settlers in Markham township, York She is now in her eightieth year, and exhibits much bodily and mental vigour, and she is highly esteemed by a large circle of friends. Our subject's forefathers, on his father's side, came originally from Ger. many, and were of the Lutheran church. After their settlement in Canada, they took the liberal side of politics, and the larger portion of the family united with the Meth. Mr. Curts received his eduodist church. cation principally under the tutorship of John Paul, M.A., at Weston. In 1849 he was led to surrender his life to the work of preaching the gospel, and united with the late Methodist Episcopal church. He was soon advanced to the office of local preacher. and his services were not only in much requisition, but he was earnestly importuned by the church, in accord with his own convic. tions of duty, to enter the itinerant ministry, for which he commenced at once to study and prepare, and was cordially received on probation in the Niagara conference in 1852. Since that time he has filled some of the most important and responsible offices in the church, having been elected secretary of the conference consecutively for twenty-two years. He was elected and served in the office of presiding elder for For several years he was a eight years. member of Albert College board, and has been a member of the Alma College board, (the Ladies' college at St. Thomas), from its organization. He was appointed, by the late general conference of the M. E. church, a delegate on the committee to formulate the basis of union. On the formation of the union of all the Methodist churches in this country, he was elected the first president of the Bay of Quinté Annual Conference. At the close of his term of office, the following resolution was adopted :- "Moved by Rev. J. B. Clarkson, M.A., and seconded by George Webb, Esq., and resolved, that this conference, at the expiration of the presidential term of the Rev. James Curts, desires to express its high appreciation of his valuable services in the discharge of the responsible and onerous duties of the office, as first president of the Bay of Quinté conference of the Methodist church, and to place on record its high estimate of his noble christian character, and earnestly pray that he may long be spared to share in the honour as fellow-labourer in the cause of the Lord Jesus Christ." He has been a delegate to every general conference of the late M. E. church, after he became eligible. He was also a delegate in the first united gen-

fr

he

yє

H

fo

du

of

tio

Sh

offi

dep

lea

Th

eral conference, where he was elected a member of the book committee, and placed on the executive. He was married, on March 6th, 1855, to Elizabeth Louisa Adams, eldest daughter of the late Thomas Adams, merchant, in Utica, N. Y., who came from England and settled in the City of Utica, in 1822. She was educated in the Ladies' Academy, Utica. Emily Chubbuck. one of the teachers, was subsequently the third wife of the celebrated Judson, Baptist missionary. Mrs. Curts, who has been a Sabbath school superintendent, has an excellent record in her devotion to the Sabbath school cause, as well as for the influential relation she has sustained to the cause of temperance, as vice-president of the Women's Christian Temperance Union. Likewise, too, is she esteemed for her deep-felt sympathy for the poor and afflicted, and with all charitable institutions designed to lift fallen humanity from the degradation of sin and misery to purity and happiness. They have eight children living, namely: Orpey Catherine, Lillian E., (married to G. N. Golding, druggist, Chesley, Ont.), Anson A., Thomas A., Robert M., Alice Gertrude, Harry E., and James A. Four of the family

ip.York

th year,

l vigour,

ge circle

hers, on

om Ger-

church.

nev took

he larger

e Meth.

his edu-

rship of

1849 he

work of

with the

He was

reacher.

ch requi-

uned by

convict minis-

once to

ially re-

confer-

as filled

ponsible

i elected ively for

ted and

lder for ne was a

and has

board.

from its

the late

hurch, a

late the n of the

in this

resident

ence. At ollowing

by Rev.

ded by

hat this

e presi-

rts, de-

of his

the re-

office, as confer-

o place

is noble

ray that he hon-

of the

a dele-

he late ble. He ed gen-

Wiman, Erastus, New York, the largehearted "Canadian abroad," and one of the leading business men of the first commercial city of the United States, was born at Churchville, County of Peel, Ontario, in 1834. In early life Toronto became his abiding place, and in the schools of this city he received the school training that fell to the lot of the average Canadian boy in those days. At the age of sixteen he was ready to commence in earnest the battle of life. He selected the printing office as his starting point, and apprenticed himself to the Hon. Wm. Macdougall, proprietor of the North American office. For four years he worked faithfully at the case, and served an honourable apprenticeship. When he emerged from the office as a journeyman printer, he had not yet attained his majority. A few years more of the quiet routine of the com-posing room sufficed for "Chaz" Wiman. His active brain, in the intervals of work, found an avenue for usefulness in the conduct of a newspaper published in the intersts of the Cadets of Temperance, this organization owing its birth chiefly to his efforts. Shortly after leaving the North American office, young Wiman drifted into the news department of the Toronto Globe, then the leading paper of the metropolis of Ontario. The late Hon. George Brown, was quick to recognize Mr. Wiman's abilities, and promotion to the commercial editor's chair soon followed. In this post the young journalist displayed such a power to gauge financial affairs generally that he attracted the attention of R. G. Dun & Co., of the mercantile agency, who secured his services and placed him in control of their Ontario branch. At this time Mr. Wiman was only twenty-six years old; but upon his broad shoulders there was an old head, and in a very short time he mastered the situation and vastly improved the service. Mr. Wiman was subsequently placed in charge of the Montreal branch, and here, once more, he showed that unconquerable energy and capacity for detail which had characterized every effort of his business life. In 1867, he received a further advance, being given a partnership in the New York house, and the control of the city business. We have thus sketched, very briefly, Mr. Wiman's life in Canada, We have thus sketched, prior to his removal to New York. At the age of thirty-three, Mr. Wiman started in the greatest city of the Union a career that has been the pride of his compatriots. He has been-and is now-the brain power behind the Dun mercantile agency. Although his position in the firm calls for an immense amount of mental labour, Mr. Wiman does not confine himself to this business. A few years ago he became interested in the telegraph lines of the Dominion, and in the face of much opposition he moulded and shaped a project for the consolidation of conflicting interests across the line, and the Great North-Western Telegraph Company was the outcome. He became President of this system —one as complete, considering the immense territory covered, as there is anywhere. Canada, in proportion to population, has more telegraph offices and more miles of wire than any other country in the world. Mr. Wiman is also one of the directors of the Western Union, and his voice is a potent factor at the board in determining the policy of the company. Our readers doubtless know that it takes an exceptionally able and far seeing man to secure a place in the highest commercial circles of New York—a city that counts its Wellingtons and Napoleons of business enterprise by the score. But a plucky and determined Canadian is not balked by ordinary obstructions, and the greater the task before him the greater the energy he puts forth to attain the object of his desires. As an old resident of Staten Island, Mr. Wiman saw that that important suburb of New York was being held back by influences of a depressing

At the head of this enterprise character. was Vanderbilt, who regarded Staten Island and all its institutions as his property. It was necessary to tackle Vanderbilt, and Mr. Wiman did so with avidity. generaled the American railway king at every point, and while the latter was rubbing his eyes, secured control of the Staten Island Railway Company. Since then he has, by the purchase of Island ferry landings and the construction of a railway around the face of the island, greatly improved transporta-tion facilities thereabouts. The organization of this system, the Rapid Transit, has given Erastus Wiman a commanding position in the railway circles of his adopted city. The social side of Mr. Wiman is most pleasant to contemp ate. With all his business cares to contemp¹ate. -he is without doubt the busiest man in New York—he is ever in the vanguard of entertainers. To keep alive the memories of his native land is one of his great aims in life. He uses the wealth that has come to him to benefit others and enlarge the enjoy-ment of his fellow men. The Wiman baths in Toronto bear testimony to his regard for that city and the patriotism which dominates many of his acts. The city of Montreal, during her carnival fesitivities, found in him an active friend, for through his influence large numbers of eminent New Yorkers were induced to visit the Canadian metropolis. The establishment of a Canadian club in New York this year (1885) was Erastus Wiman's idea. The elegant quarters at No. 3 Washington Square are now the rendezvous of resident and visiting Canadians, and in the pleasant rooms of the club some noble gatherings have already taken place. We have spoken of Mr. Wiman as an entertainer. Hundreds will say with us that he is the prince of entertainers. When the Canadian Press Association visited New York in the summer of 1885, the members became Mr. Wiman's guests, and as such were transported hither and thither until surfeited with sight seeing. In his boyhood days Mr. Wiman was an active participant in the sports of his native land, and he has done his utmost to make lacrosse popular in the United States. He is always a spectator at matches and sometimes takes the position of referee. Every year has witnessed a visit from one or more of the prominent clubs to New York, under Mr. Wiman's management. year, 1885, two clubs from the Dominion have visited New York, viz.: the Niagaras and Montrealers, and the members of both stand ready to vouch for their countryman's unbounded hospitality. Mr. Wiman is also a hearty supporter of cricket, and was chair. man of the reception committee which metand entertained the Gentlemen of England, who visited New York in 1885. Mr. Wiman has the look of a solid business man. There is shrewdness, sense and determination in every lineament of his face. He is physically strong; is of medium height; and is in the prime of life-being in his fifty-first year. A New York newspaper recently said: "Erastus Wiman is the coming man of the metropolis. He intends to make Staten Island blossom like the rose, and before another decade occurs in our history, Staten Island will be lined with wharves and the B. & O. R. R. will have an outlet to New York through his combinations. He is as generous as he is enterprising. If he continues to pursue the course he has travelled. we may expect to find in Erastus Wiman a second George W. Childs, the well-known philanthropist and business prince of Philadelphia." This opinion shows in what high esteem the subject of this sketch is held by New Yorkers, who know him as a liberal and enterprising citizen and a gentleman of courteous and affable manners. Wiman has been the architect of his own fortune. He has shown what "the Canadian abroad" can do. His career forms a lesson that every young Canadian, who has selected the United States as the country in which he proposes to battle for place and fame, should take to heart. And that part of it which shows Mr. Wiman's great love for his native land, his interest in her progress and aims, should be emulated by every Canadian-American.

Matthews, Wilmot Delouir, of the firm of W. D. Matthews & Co., Toronto. one of our rising business men, was born in Burford township, Brant county, Ontario, on the 22nd June, 1850. His father is Wheeler Douglas Matthews, and his mother. Maria Colton. Mrs. Matthews is descended from an old New England family, the first of whom came over in the May Flower, and afterward settled in Pennsylvania. Mr. Matthews, sen., owned a grist mill, and carried on business as a produce dealer in Bur-ford, and removed to Toronto in 1856. Mr. Matthews, jun., was educated at the Normal school, Toronto, where he distinguished himself as an apt scholar. In 1867, when he left school, he went into his father's office as clerk, and in 1873 he was taken into partnership by his father, and the business has ever since been successfully carried on under the name of W. D. Matthews & Co. This firm does a large business in flour.

d sl H M of w. se W an de Ye Gr

me

and

we.

ing

Was

the

con

and

regi

one

and

eral

in t

and

grain and malt, and they own six malt houses-two in Canada and four in the United States. Mr. Matthews is a gentleman of marked business capacity, and is associated with several prominent business institutions. He is a director of the Dominion Bank, and at the age of twentysix, became president of the Toronto Corn Exchange, which position he held for three years. He is likewise a director of the Canadian Lloyds, and is a member of the present Council of the Toronto Board of Trade. He is a Freemason of 3° St. Andrew's lodge, and is likewise an Odd Fellow of Manchester Unity, Noble Grand Mercantile lodge. Mr. Matthews has travelled through most of the United States, and has visited England, Ireland, Scotland and the Continent. In religion, he is a Methodist, and in politics, a Liberal, but prefers to call himself an independent Reformer. He married Annie Jane, daughter of Neil C. Love, of Toronto, on August 29th, 1872. He has two children, one boy and one girl. It is not flattering to Mr. Matthews to say that in his business relations, as well as in general life, he has won both confidence and respect, and that the community is much the better of his presence in it.

air-

met

nd.

nan

tere

h in

lcal-

s in

îrst

aid:

of

ten

ten

the Tew

a a s

eon-

led.

hwn

ila-

igh

bv

eral

stus

wn

na-

ıs a

has

7 in

and

bart

ove

oroery

the

nto.

ı in

rio,

· is

her.

ded

irst and

Mr.

ar-

nr-

Mr.

or-

he

fice

Walker, Lieut.-Colonel John, London, Ontario, was born at Inverary, Argyleshire, Scotland, on the 24th January, 1832. Hisfather was John Walker, and his mother, Mary McHardy. His grandfather was an officer of the Breadalbane Fencibles, from which the famous "Black Watch," or Fortysecond Highlanders was formed. John Walker attended school at his native place, and concluded his studies at Stirling academy, Scotland. He joined the Queen's Own Yeomanry Cavalry, at Glasgow, Scotland, in 1854, continuing with that regiment till the organization of the volunteer force in Great Britain, and was appointed captain of the Grenadier company 19th Lanarkshire regiment, Scotland. He came to Canada in 1864, and organized a militia company at Bothwell, County of Kent, Ontario, on the breaking out of the Fenian troubles in 1866. He was subsequently transferred as captain to the 7th Fusiliers, London, attaining to the command of that regiment in June, 1877, and retiring with his rank in 1884. The regiment under his command had become one of the model regiments of the Dominion, and elicited praise from the successive generals in command of the forces. Colonel Walker accompanied Colonel Peacock's force in the Fort Erie Fenian campaign of 1866, and was put in command of the Windsor frontier force during the threatened Fenian trouble in 1870. He was vice-president of the first Canada Pacific Railway Company, of which Sir Hugh Allan was president; a director in London, Ontario, of the Ontario Savings and Loan Co., and the Equitable Loan Co.; president of the School of Art and Design; vice-president of the London, Huron and Bruce Railway Co.; director of the Canada Chemical Co.; director of the Imperial Oil Co.; president of the Machanics Institute; director of the Sovereign Fire Insurance Co.; president of the St. Andrew's Society; director of the City Gas Co., and London Life Assurance Co.; one of the founders of the Protestant Orphans' Home, and is connected with many other of the charitable institutions of the city. He married, in Scotland, 1856, Janet, daughter of John Machattie, manager of the Carron Iron Co., Leith, Scotland, who died in 1863. He married again in Canada, in 1868, Laura, daughter of Jacob Hespeler, of Hespeler, Waterloo county, Ontario. In 1865, he purchased for a number of Scotch capitalists the large tract of oil producing lands owned by the late Hon George Brown, in Bothwell, and for some years resided on the property, carrying on operations for the Scotch Company. He subsequently removed to London, Ontario, where he erected chemical works and an oil refinery, and where he has since resided, with the exception of short periods at Montreal and A man who has achieved as Winnipeg. much as this, and who can trace his success in every case to his own ability and enterprise, is not an ordinary man. In the first instance Mr. Walker's business qualifications were held so high that he was selected by his friends in Scotland to come to Canada and take charge of the Bothwell property, with the object of cultivating the lands, and developing the oil springs with which it abounded. The region was at this period, owing to an influx of labourers from the United States, in a very noisy and rough condition; but the presence of Colonel Walker, his firmness and energy of character, had a pacifying effect, and he was appointed magistrate there. Colonel Walker has always had an aversion for political warfare, and it was circumstances rather than choice that forced him, in 1874, to take to a field which had for him but little fascination. At the election for the House of Commons in that year, he contested the constituency in the Liberal interest against John Carling, now (December, 1885) Minister of Agriculture in the Dominion government, and defeated him by a majority of over seventy votes. The election was contested in the courts, and Colonel Walker was unseated, and in the renewed contest unfortunately lost his seat, but he has continued to be a prominent and influential supporter of the Liberal party.

Reid, Robert, Collector of Customs, London, Ontario, was born in Paisley, Scotland, on the 1st day of January, 1822. He is a son of James Reid and Jessie Watson. Both his father and grandfather took a prominent part in the struggle for civil and religious liberty in Scotland, that was so fiercely carried on about the close of the last century, and during the first thirty years of the present one. His father was a loyal subject, though an advanced Liberal; and he was a devout christian of the Baptist persuasion. There was a family of seven sons and three daughters, and the subject of this sketch was the youngest son; and the eldest sister was married about the time During his boyhood, of Robert's birth. Robert's educational training was confined chiefly to reading the Bible and learning the Shorter Catechism. When only six years old, he was set at work in the weaving business, which was then a flourishing industry in Paisley. After he had reached his twelfth year, he attended night school for a couple of years, notwithstanding that he worked from six o'clock in the morning till seven or eight o'clock at night, at the weaving trade. But he was resolved, in spite of fortune, to win an education for himself; and after a hard struggle he became possessed of the three R's, and a fair knowledge of English grammar. At this time his father was a member of the Encyclopædia Club, of Paisley. This club had purchased the "Encyclopædia Brittanica," and every three months met and distributed the volumes amongst the members. Thus there was always to be found a couple of volumes of this book in Mr. Reid's home, and it was in reading the subjects treated here that young Reid acquired the solid, accurate knowledge, and the taste for literature, which became When in his conspicuous in his after life. twentieth year he left Scotland for the United States, and, though the youngest of the family, he was the first to go abroad and seek his fortune. He landed in New York in November, 1842, and went to Buffalo by the Erie canal the following spring; but not caring for the United States:he proceeded to Toronto in the autumn of 1845. Shortly after his arrival he obtained employment from the late John Eastwood, proprietor of the paper mills on the Don river, at the village of Todmorden. Although devoting himself faithfully to his duties in this establishment, Mr. Reid began to study po. litical questions, and in a short period was thoroughly conversant with leading political events, and during his residence at Toronto became personally and politically attached the late lamented Hon. George Brown, In the summer of 1848, Mr. Reid left To. ronto and went to London, where he established a branch of the Toronto Eastwood publishing business. Eighteen months afterwards he bought out the stock, and carried on the business with much success till 1878, in which year he received the appointment to his present office of Collector of Customs at The printing and publishing bus-London. iness is still carried on with enterprise and success by his two sons, Robert and George, under the name of Reid Brothers & Co. Mr. Reid married, in 1851, Ann Jane Mc-Elroy, daughter of the late William McElroy, farmer, near Bolton village, in the township of Albion. Her parents had emigrated to Canada from Ulster, Ireland. The family was a prominent one in Ireland, her grandfather having been a magistrate of Ulster. Ann Jane McElroy was a distinguished graduate of the Normal School at Toronto. She had been head mistress of London Central school, and was a most successful and popular teacher. The fruit of the marriage is eight children, seven sons and one daughter. One of the sons is dead. The sons have nearly all grown to manhood, but one of them, Arthur W., died suddenly last year of heart disease, in his twenty-fifth year. He was a most promising young man; was a distinguished graduate of Toronto University, taking all the scholarships in his department every year, and graduating with the gold medal in mathematics. Obituary sketches, bearing tribute to his brilliant achievements, appeared in the Toronto Globe and in The 'Varsity, the organ of the University. A third son, George M., distinguished himself in the North-West rebellion, as adjutant of the 7th Fusiliers. General Laurie, who had command of the brigade while the 7th was stationed at Swift Current, so admired his conduct, that he sent a recom-mendation to the Minister of Militia, and he was promoted, for efficiency, to a captaincy while on the field and in active service. Mr. Reid has always been interested in the St. Andrew's and Caledonian societies, and was president of the same for several years. He has always taken an active part in politics, and has given his support to the Liberal party

every

great

truste

the C

latter

counc

point

He w

Comn

Free

by a

organ

of th

some

the po

with t

Churc

some

chairn

the Re

he has

years.

to be

read 1

that a

has be aided

this n

comm

true to and ho

recogn

public

lament

was ga

militia

Very

favour

Office :

1835.

Marlbo

Provin

Samuel

of Lau

who joi

and car

founder

in the

After t

tired fr

as abov

the day

grated

near th

the Co

father's tilda, n

they res

Spi

party; and he holds that it is the duty of every true citizen to interest himself in the great questions of the day. He held a school trusteeship for over eighteen years, both at the Common and High School boards, to the latter of which he was elected by the city council, and held the office till after his appointment to the collectorship of Customs. He was also appointed by the High and Common School boards as a member of the Free Library board, which, though carried by a vote of the people, has not yet been organized. He was also appointed a justice of the peace by the Mowat government some years ago, but has never qualified for the position. He has always been identified with the U. P. branch of the Presbyterian Church, though his religious convictions are somewhat in advance of that body. He is chairman of the management committee of the Rev. Dr. Proudfoot's church, with which he has been connected for the last thirty-five years. Mr. Reid's career is one the more to be respected and emulated by those who read this sketch, when it is remembered that all the creditable achievement which has been his was the work of his own unaided hands. Sincere and honourable has this man been in all his relations to the community; and he has been unswervingly true to his political party, who both respect and honour him. We may say that the first recognition that he ever obtained of his public services, was from the illustrious and lamented Lord Elgin. In the year 1851, he was gazetted, and received a commission as militia officer, signed by the Earl himself. Very naturally, the recipient prizes this favour most highly.

d d

> Spry, Daniel, Barrie, Ontario, Post Office Inspector, was born 29th November, 1835, near Burritt's Rapids, township of Marlborough, in the County of Carleton, Province of Ontario. He is the son of Samuel Spry, of Lewtracher, near the town of Launceston, County of Devon, England, who joined the Royal Sappers and Miners, and came to Canada with Colonel By, the founder of the City of Ottawa, to assist in the construction of the Rideau canal. After the completion of the canal he retired from the army and settled on a farm as above. His mother, Janet McLean, was the daughter of James McLean, who emigrated from Perth, Scotland, and settled near the mouth of the river Humber, in the County of York. Shortly after his father's death, the family removed to Matilda, now the village of Iroquois, where they resided some time, and in the month of November, 1846, removed to the City of Toronto. He was educated at the common schools in the County of Carleton, and afterwards at the Model school in the City of Toronto, where he acquired an education that fitted him to fill the various offices that he has since held with so much credit. After being a short time in a law and land office, he turned his attention to mercantile pursuits. In the year 1854 he was appointed to the Toronto post office, and remained in the department fifteen years, when by his strict attention to his duties, and his genial manner, he commanded the respect and esteem both of his fellow clerks and those in authority. He was promoted from one step to another, until he was transferred to the Post Office Savings Bank, at Ottawa, in the month of May, 1869. This place he soon found did not agree with his health, and in consequence resigned his situation in the Post Office Department, October, 1869, and entered into mercantile life in the City of Toronto, where he carried on business until June, 1876, when he was appointed post office inspector of the East Toronto division. In November, 1879, he was transferred to the town of Barrie, and placed in charge of the Barrie postal division. He was initiated into Masonry in King Solomon's lodge, Toronto. on the 11th day of March, 1858, and immediately took an active and lively interest in all the branches of Masonry. He was elected secretary in 1859, and has filled from that time until the present important positions in the craft until in July, 1882, he was elevated to the Grand Master's chair. where his matured judgment, genial manners, and zeal for the craft so commanded the respect and love of his brethren that he was again re-elected in 1883. He now fills the important position of past grand master. In Capitular Masonry, Cryptic Masonry, Knights Templars, etc., he has filled the principal offices, having been elected in 1879-1880, grand first principal Z of the Grand Chapter of Canada; in 1872-1873, to the office of grand master of Cryptic Masonry, and in 1884, honorary deputy grand master of the Templar Body of Canada. He has also received the 33° of the A. & A. S. R. He has been presented, at different times, with very valuable testimonials for his services to the craft. In the military, Daniel Spry has done duty as ensign in the 10th Royal regiment, and lieutenant in the Queen's Own Rifles, Toronto, and has held the position of captain in the Reserve Militia for the Centre Riding of the City of Toronto, since March, 1873. He has been a director of the Toronto House Building Association, (now Land Security Co.), vice-president of the Toronto Mechanics' Institute, and president of the Barrie Mechanics' Institute. He was also president of the Ontario Literary Society, a society that was composed of young men now filling prominent places in our country, and who gave great impetus to literary pursuits in the City of Toronto about twenty-five years ago. When taking part in politics, Mr. Spry was a Reformer, and was secretary of the Reform Association of Toronto, from which office he retired in 1876. He is a member of the Church of England, of the low church school, and has been elected a delegate to the Synod of Toronto every year since 1882. He has been twice married, first to Mary Jane Burgess, on the 3rd of May, 1859; and next to Mary E. Fortier, daughter of Charles G. Fortier, collector of inland revenue, Hamilton, on the 30th of April, 1867. His son, Lieutenant Spry (now captain), accompanied the York-Simcoe Regiment to the Nort-West. was the youngest officer at the front, being under seventeen years of age. In literary work, Mr. Spry was connected as a contributor with the Poker, Momus, and Grumbler, well known comic journals, formerly published in Toronto, and The Gavel, a Masonic journal published in Orillia.

Kaulbach, Hon. Henry Adolphus Newman, LL.B., Q.C., Senator Lunenburg, N.S. The distinguished gentleman who is the subject of this sketch was born at Lunenburg, Nova Scotia, in 1830. comes of a very distinguished and honourable German family, one member of which was Wilhelm Von Kaulbach, officer of the Legend of Honour, and director of the Royal Academy of Fine Arts at Munich, who, in 1846, painted for Louis I. of Bavaria the "Destruction of Jerusalem." He is the great-grandson of Martin Von Kaulbach, an original grantee and settler of Lunenburg, N.S., in 1752, and grandson of Henry Kaulbach, who was appointed High Sheriff of Lunenburg by Governor Wentworth, 1798. This office, and others of high distinction, Sheriff Kaulbach held till 1828, when he resigned in favour of his son. Lieut.-Col. John Henry Kaulbach. This latter held the high sheriffship up to the time of his death, which took place in 1879, and his eldest son is the subject of this sketch. It is interesting to state that our subject's grandmother, Kaulbach, lived to the age of 104 years, and had fifteen children. At the time of her death she was in perfect health, and enjoyed the full possession of all her faculties. When she had reached her hundreth year, her centenary birthday was celebrated with all the affectionate enthusiasm of her hosts of relatives, and at that banquet there were no fewer than five generations of the family present. His mother, who was Frederica. a daughter of Adolphus Newman, is now in her 85th year, and enjoys perfect health. Every one of our subject's lineal ancestors, for at least two centuries back, lived at least to see his fourscore years. Henry Adol. phus Newman Kaulbach was at an early age put under private tutors, then at the Lunen. burg Grammar School, finishing his training in classics under the tutorship of the Rev. J. C. Cochrane, D.C.L. His education completed, he was sent to Harvard University. from which institution he graduated LLB. He studied law likewise with his uncle, Hon. John Creighton, sr., Q. C., M.P.P., and afterwards a member of the Executive Council of Nova Scotia, and president of the Legislative Council. At a later date our subject entered the office of the Hon. (now Sir) William Young, then leader of the Nova Scotia government. In 1855, after a diligent application to his studies, he was called to the bar, and commenced practice. He soon proved himself to be a lawyer of wide, firm and ready grasp; but notwithstanding his eminent fitness for the legal profession, he soon began to concern himself in other In all his enterprises he has won affairs. the success to which his commanding abilities have entitled him, and he adds to the positions of senator and prominent barrister, now that of being one of the most prominent ship owners and land proprietors in the Maritime provinces. He had always shown much inclination for public life and legislative work, and entered the House of Assembly of Nova Scotia, as representative for Lunenburg, in 1863, defeating the then leader of the government, Hon. Jos. Howe, by an immense majority. His ability was at once recognised in the house, and he held his position till the consummation of the union. He was one of the most useful and energetic members of the legislature, and persistently and forcibly advocated a federal union of the provinces. He was a member of the Nova Scotia Central Board of Agriculture, and of free public schools. Indeed, upon every question of national importance and wide liberality, he had pronounced opinions, and his views were always such as time has since emphatically vindicated. He was beaten at the general election of 1867, by the powers that opposed free schools and confederation. On the 27th of March,

18

sit

18

So

reș

Pi

K.

Go

Ιt

pre

the

bac

Re:

stri

Chi

fori

sur

fell

ing

lovi

tem

and

and

God

ront

and in tl

30th

Wag

whic

and 1838 perio

and a

subje

Mr.

ceede

that

canal

time-

ily h

like a

hono

world

honou

seven

which

Canad Gehri

Falls,

and f

1855 I

the R

has p dences

V

1872, he was called to the Senate, and still sits one of the most worthy and able memhers of that body. He married, first, Eunice Sophy, only child of the late John Harris. of Thornhill, King's Co., N.S., who died in 1879; second, on the 9th September, 1880, Sophy Anne, daughter of G. H. Ryland, registrar of Montreal, and his wife Mary Pitt Gore, and grandniece of Sir John Gore, K.C.B., G.C.H., and of General Sir Arthur Gore, killed in battle at Bergen-up-Zoom. It may also be stated that the mother of the present wife of our subject was a sister of the wife of Sir Dominick Daly. Mr. Kaulbach was appointed lieut.-colonel of the 1st Regiment of Lunenburg County Militia and Volunteer Artillery in 1859. Although strictly brought up in the doctrines of the Church of England, he became slow in performances until he had the inestimable pleasure of the social society of Professor Longfellow, of Cambridge, Massachusetts. During his law training there, his genial and loving ways drew our subject to the contemplation and enjoyment of the beauties and wonders of creation in the garden, field and forest, and from nature up to nature's

her

h all

ts of

e no

mily

rica.

w in

alth

tors.

least

∖dol-

v age

nen-

ning

Rev.

com-

sity.

J.B.

ncle.

P.,

tive

the

our

now

lova

dili-

lled

He

ide.

ling

ion.

her

won

bili-

the

ris-

iro-

ors

ays

and

e of ive

hen we, s at eld

the

nd

nd

ber

Wagner, Jacob Peter, one of Toronto's prominent builders and contractors, and alderman, was born at Bischmisheim, in the Rhenish province of Prussia, on the 30th May, 1826. He is a son of Peter The family, Wagner and Dorothea Smith. which consisted of the parents, four brothers, and two sisters, emigrated to America in 1838. Thousands of other Germans at this period were constantly arriving in New York, and among this influx came the family of our subject. After a short stay at New York, Mr. Wagner, senior, and his family, proceeded to Rochester, New York, reaching that city on June 1st, after a journey by canal—the only means of travel here at this time-which occupied eight days. The family here prospered fairly, and our subject, like all those other young men who have won honourable places for themselves in the new world, was always ready to engage in any honourable and profitable employment. For seventeen years he lived at Rochester, after which his destiny began beckoning him to Canada. In 1848, he married Elizabeth Gehring, who is still alive, of Rensalaer Falls, St. Lawrence county, New York, and formerly of Bavaria, Germany. 1855 Mr. Wagner came to Toronto to build the Rossin House; and since his coming he has put up many of the city's fine residences and stores. He very soon earned the repute of being one of the most capable and trustworthy builders and contractors in Toronto, and it is not to be wondered at that business with him rapidly grew. In 1876-1877 Mr. Wagner completed the Central prison for the Ontario government. Our subject has had eight children, of whom three were born in Rochester and five in Toronto. Six of these are living, viz., William J. Wagner, physician; George P. Wagner, manufacturer: Charles F. Wagner, architect: David C. Wagner, accountant; Susan C. Wagner, now wife of Rev. R. von Pirch, Berlin, Ont.; Mary S. Wagner, accountant contact of the c ner, now wife of J. A. Valin, barrister and attorney, Ottawa. It is pretty certain to happen, when the public observe that a man is very capable in the management of his own affairs, if they be right, that they begin to desire his services in directing their concerns; and this, in Mr. Wagner's experience, was the case. In 1876, at the request of a number of leading gentlemen, our subject allowed himself to be put in nomination for St. Patrick's ward, and was elected. He was a very capable alderman, his insight being quick, and his judgment sound. In religion Mr. Wagner is a staunch Lutheran.

Lewis, Right Rev. John Travers, D.D., LL.D., Lord Bishop of Ontario, was born at Garry Cloyne Castle, the country seat of his uncle, the late John Travers, in the County of Cork, Ireland, on the 20th June, 1825. He was the eldest son of the Rev. John Lewis, A.M., curate of St. Anne's, Shandon, Cork, with which are so widely associated the repute of the "Bells of Shandon." His mother, still living, is the daughter of the late John Lawless, of Woodview, Cloyne, in the County Cork. While yet a boy, the bishop's father died of cholera, contracted in the hospitals of Cork, while labouring among his parishioners, leaving him heir to his uncle's estates, then of considerable magnitude, including Garry Cloyne Castle, the estate adjoining the far-famed Blarney Castle. He was educated, as a lad, at Hamblin and Porter's school, in Cork, and later on at Trinity College, Dublin, where, on entrance, he obtained the Primate's first Hebrew prize, and from whence he graduated as senior moderator and gold medallist in ethics and logic in July, 1847, having throughout his undergraduate course obtained both classical and mathematical honours. Turning his attention to the study of divinity, he was in the following year, on 16th July, 1848, ordained a deacon in holy orders in Christ Church College Chapel, Cambridge, by the Lord Bishop of Chester, and priest in the September of the following year, by the Lord Bishop of Down, Connor and Dromore. In July, 1848, he was appointed curate of Newtownbutler, in the North of Ireland, where he remained till the year following, when, desiring to visit his mother and family, who had meanwhile settled in Canada West, he crossed in a sailing ship, and visiting Toronto, was appointed by the bishop (Rev. Dr. Strachan), missionary at West Hawkesbury, on the Ottawa river. On the 22nd July, 1851, he married Annie Henrietta Margaret, eldest daughter of the late Hon. Henry Sherwood, attorney-general of Upper Canada, of United Empire loyalist stock, and a prominent member of the Conservative administration of that day. Following close upon his marriage came the news of his uncle's death in Ireland, but learning that the affairs and property of his uncle had been left much embarrassed, he resolved to make Canada his home, and settle in this country permamently. In 1854 he was promoted to the rectory of St. Peter's Church, Brockville, where he remained until the question of dividing the then large diocese of Toronto was mooted. In an election, on the 13th June, 1861, at Kingston, by the vote of both clergy and laity, he was chosen the first bishop of Ontario, as the new Episcopal see, extending from the Ottawa to the Trent river was called, and this appointment was subsequently ratified by Her Majesty's Royal letters patent, constituting himself and his successors lord bishops of Ontario. This occusion was, we believe, the last on which the Imperial authorities caused letters patent to be issued. The bishop, elected in his 36th year, the youngest at that date of the Bench of Bishops of the Church of England, was consecrated at St. George's Cathedral, Kingston, the seat of the see, on the 25th March, 1862. There he remained until 1871, when Ottawa having in the meantime been made the capital of the Dominion, and since become the most important city in the diocese, he removed there with his family, where he now resides. The bishop is the author of many published charges and sermons, as well as lectures and articles in the Journal of Sacred Literature, London, England, and in the American Quarterly Church Review. He was the original author and promoter of the meeting of the Lambeth Conferences of all bishops of the Church of England, at home and abroad, including those of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the United States, and was mainly instrumental in inducing the British Association for the Advancement of Science to meet in Montreal in 1884. In November. 1885, by the order of His Excellency the Governor-General in Council, the bronze medal, struck in commemoration of confederation in 1867, was presented to the bishop as an expression of appreciation of "his important services ln the cause of literature and science." The bishop is an Anglican Churchman of liberal views that have done much towards making the Church of Engand in eastern Ontario united and peace-The Bishop has two sons and four His eldest daughter mardaughters living. ried R. C. Hamilton, third son of the late George Hamilton, of Hawkesbury, C. W., and his second daughter is the wife of F. Hilton-Green, of Montreal. His eldest son, Travers, is a member of the Ontario bar, in partnership with A. F. McIntyre, and practices his profession in Ottawa; having married in 1884, the second daughter of Collingwood Schreiber, C. E. This is an age when religion has more to do than teach, for some of the ablest minds of the day have come forward disputing its pretensions, and denying the divinity of its inspiration. The time was in the history of this antagonism when ministers in the pulpit might gather their robes about them and scorn to make reply to their assailants; but that day is past. This is an age of great enlightenment, of wide reading, of popularized science; and the young man with a little learning who comes to doubt revelation and the divine origin of the whole religious system, is only brought back again to his right mind by hearing in the pulpit vindication and proof of the religion which the priest is commissioned to teach. This we are glad to say seems to be Bishop Lewis's view of the question too; for he has on many occasions adorned his pulpit by the defence of religion, as well as by its expounding. He is a man of wide and profound learning, and we doubt if there is living an abler defender of the religious system against Well would it be, if Agnesticism than he. the clergy generally would seek to follow his example. For, as we have already said, anti-religious science can no longer be treated with silence. Henceforth the silence of the pulpit will not be called contempt, but ignorance.

nai Ha loy the Cu You bei set Gri

wh

No

and

tha

ing

aliv

is i

Arc

firs

com

At

stud

hon

Lyn

two

to i

whi

188 whe

late

duct

a la

ever

poin

way:

Boa:

He

mem

conn

Wor

exan

teres

fast

tive

teria

Anto

Heni

The

of a

ceedi

B

the o

stood

lakes

Ottav of sav

Sarat

24th

Alval

Bron

McCurdy, Dr. Archibald, M.B.M.C., P. & S.O., Norwich, Ontario, was born in the township of South Norwich, Oxford, on September 19th, 1847. His parents were Thomas Stuart, and Elizabeth, the maiden name of his mother being Hagerman. Miss Hagerman was one of the well-known U.E. lovalist families that came to Canada after the declaration of independence. Mr. Mc-Curdy, senior, was born in the State of New York, and came to this country in 1817, being then only five years old. His parents settled upon a farm in the vicinity of Grimsby, where he remained until 1840. when he removed to the township of South Norwich. Here he took a farm in the bush. and became one of the sturdy pioneers of that place. He had two sons, Archibald being the youngest. Mr. McCurdy is still alive, resides upon the old homestead, and is in the enjoyment of good health. Young Archibald received a thorough education, first entering the Woodstock college, and completing his course at Trinity, Toronto. At the age of twenty-three he began the study of medicine, graduating in 1876 with honours. He removed to the village of Lynedoch, Norfolk, where he practised for two years; after which he betook himself to the village of New Durham, Brant, in which place he practised for four years. In 1882, he returned to the village of Norwich. where he purchased the drug business of the late Dr. Lount. This business he has conducted with much success, conjointly with a large and constantly-increasing practice, ever since. In 1885, Dr. McCurdy was appointed surgeon for the Grand Trunk Railway; and he is likewise a member of the Board of Health for the village of Norwich. He belongs to the Freemasons, and is a member of Ridout lodge, No. 95; he is also connected with the Ancient Order of United Workmen, of which body he is also medical examiner. He has always taken a deep interest in public questions, and is a steadfast and solid supporter of the Conservative party. His religion is that of Presbyterianism. Dr. McCurdy married in 1882, Antoinette Eliza, daughter of Isaac Brock Henry, of Winona, Wentworth county. The fruit of this union is one son. He is of a very energetic temperament, and an exceedingly skilful physician.

d was

ritish

cience

mber,

v the

ronze

onfed-

ishop

is im-

ature

glican

done Eng-

beace-

four

mar-

late

. W.,

of F.

t son.

ar, in

prac-

mar-

Col-

n age

teach,

e day sions.

tion.

tago-

night

rn to

t day

hten-

rized

little

n and

s sys-

right

ation

briest

glad

w of nany.

fence

ding.

ning,

abler

ainst

e, if

w his

said,

- be

ence

mpt,

M.C.,

n in

l, on

Bronson, Henry Franklin, Ottawa, the one man, it has been said, who understood the feasibility of converting the large lakes and furious and foaming falls of the Ottawa river, into a channel for the driving of saw-logs, was born in the town of Moreau, Saratoga county, New York state, on the 24th of February, 1817. His parents were Alvah Bronson and Sarah Tinker. Mr. Bronson is of mixed Scottish and Welsh descent, and the family, which is now scattered through most of the Northern states, at an early period settled in New England. Members of this enterprising and clever family were the Hon. Greene C. Bronson, of the New York bench, and the Rev. Asa Bronson, who was for many years pastor of the First Baptist Church, at Fall River, Massachusetts. The first of the family to find his way to Canada was the subject of our sketch, and shortly after he came here he led off in the lumber business. H. F. Bronson spent his youthful days at Queensbury, Warren county, New York, in the family of the late J. J. Harris, and he concluded his education at the Poultney academy of Vermont. "Young Bronson," says a reliable authority lying at our hand, "became an apt scholar in agricultural sciences, but soon showed a preference for woodland foraging, predestined, as he was to become a great marauder of pine forests." In 1840, Mr. Harris, already alluded to, purchased extensive pine tracts, erecting mills on one of the upper Hudson lakes. He formed a partnership with his young and trusted friend, Mr. Bronson, "whose assets consisted of a sound constitution, a resolute will, unbending integrity, skill with the hand, and a mind to work." The partnership continued for twenty-two years, and during the last ten years of the association, the greater portion of the business responsibility fell upon our subject, owing to the failure of Mr. Harris' health. It soon became plain that the pine was rapidly disappearing from the upper Hudson; therefore, in 1848, Mr. Bronson passed over to Canada, proceeding along the Ottawa valley, till the thunder of the Chaudiere falls burst upon his ears. At once he was satisfied that here was an excellent place to begin lumber operations; for the timber seemed inexhaustible, and the water power magnificent. turned home, but in 1852 he persuaded Mr. Harris to accompany him to the Ottawa val-When they reached again the region of kingly pines and booming waterfalls, they were everywhere met with testimony from river experts, saying that the Ottawa was not suitable for the safe driving of saw logs, but Mr. Bronson recommended to his partner the purchase of the hydraulic lots at the Chaudiere falls, then held by the Crown. At the sale of the lots, made by Mr. Horace Merrill, general superintendent of the Ottawa river works, a purchase of the lots was made, and here, under the personal super-vision of Mr. Bronson, was erected the mills, a portion of which still exists in the splendid works still in operation within sound of the galloping thunder of the falls. The mills having been erected, Mr. Bronson removed his family to Ottawa, and there they were established permanently. The relation of Mr. Bronson to the sawn lumber trade of the Dominion of Canada will be better understood when it is learned that his was the first movement in the Ottawa district for the manufacture of sawn lumber for the United The original mill embodied States market. all the modern improvements of the times, including iron gates of novel model, a contrivance planned by Mr. Bronson himself, and afterwards used in most of the gang saw mills on the Ottawa river. Several other gentlemen, stimulated by the enterprise and success of Mr. Bronson and his partner, likewise set out for Ottawa; and, after a time, chiefly owing to the persistency of Mr. Bronson, a series of costly river improvements were effected, which made the driving of logs upon the Ottawa a matter of greater convenience than upon many a smaller stream, which has no large lakes to act as a reservoir for checking the fury of the spring In 1864, Mr. Harris retired freshets. from the business, Mr. Bronson still continuing in extensive manufacture of sawn lumber, and owing to his splendid abilities as a manager, his operations not alone maintained their ground, but gradually The present firm at Ottawa, of increased. which our distinguished subject is the head, is known as Bronsons & Weston, and comprises, besides the senior partner, Erskine H. Bronson, son of H. F. Bronson, and Abijah Weston, of Painted Post, New York. The latter gentleman is one of the most extensive lumber merchants in the United States, having business connections in no less than nine or ten different points in the states of Michigan, New York and Vermont. Our subject's firm own two mills at Ottawa, running ten gates, and having a capacity for producing sixty million feet of lumber per season; nor can it be believed that the day is near when these great and busy wheels shall stop, for the company are proprietors of extensive and excellently timbered tracts of pine upon the upper Ottawa and its tributaries. This firm is likewise connected with John W. Dunham, of Albany, New York, and Hermon K. Weaver, of Burlington, Vermont, and through these gentlemen operate at Burlington the second largest, and in many respects the finest mills, in the New England states, for the dressing and resawing of lumber. They have a yard at Albany for the sale of lumber in the rough, and this, the Northwestern Lumberman says, gives them, with their Ottawa mills, the necessary facilities for converting the standing timber into all the varieties of manufactured lumber required for the builder's use, and placing it directly in the consumer's hands, without the interference of middlemen. The Burlington firm is known as Bronsons, Weston, Dunham & Co. Mr. Bronson married, on November 5th, 1840, Editha E. Pierce, of Bolton, N. Y. and has had four children. Gertrude, the only daughter, is the wife of Levi Crannell, confidential clerk for Bronsons & Weston The sons are Erskine Henry, Frank P., and Walter G. The family are members of the Mr. Bronson, like Presbyterian church. another great prince of business men, Sir Hugh Allan, has not cared for political life. and held himself aloof from parties, but he has been connected with several benevolent institutions and business enterprises. He likewise is president of the board of managers of the Ottawa Ladies' College. If his business career has been marked by great ability, by enterprise, by honour, and by great achievement, his private and social relations have won for him everywhere good will and the highest regard. To men like Henry Franklin Bronson, Canada, and in particular the business life of her capital, must ever remain in debt.

MacNab, Hon. Sir Allan, Baronet. of Dundurn, Hamilton, was born at Niagara, on the 19th of February, 1798. grandfather, Major Robert MacNab, of the 42nd regiment, or "Black Watch," held the post of Royal Forester in Scotland, and resided on a small estate called Dundum, at the head of Loch Hearn, Perthshire, Scot-His father, Lieutenant Allan Mac-.land. Nab, entered the army in Her Majesty's 71st regiment, and was subsequently promoted to a Dragoon regiment. He was attached to the staff of General Simcoe during the American revolutionary war, and after the close of that war, he accompanied General Simcoe to Canada, and settled in the western part of the province. His wife was the youngest daughter of Captain William Napier, commissioner of the port of Quebec, who was the mother of the subject of our sketch. When Allan was a lad going to school. Toronto was attacked by the Americans; and full of a desire at this early time of life to do something for the Crown, he was, at his own earnest request, put on board Sir James Yeo's ship, where he was rated as a midshipman. This ship showed herself at Sackett's harbour, Genesee tion wa ment u sent wi pied. with th Fort N ism in the 49t ended. Montre to the ment l the adv In 1817 began t the bar made Q of the k began h by being Wilson, worth. three pa ment no elections Messrs. Sir Allai to the C recognize mother it was the Card on fire. Niagara iollowers

MacNab

Gore," a

where he

in attack

barn at ( pointed

under th

most serv

prime mi

destined

his admir

tion was a

Militia A

ed in 183

of premie

tion of stricken v

in the Ho

borne in swathed in

gia pro vi

and ot

the lak

and other places, on the American side of the lake. He left the navy, where promotion was slow, and joined the 100th regi-ment under Colonel Murray, and was present when the Niagara frontier was re-occupied. The plucky lad also was to the front with the advanced guard at the taking of Fort Niagara; and for his miniature heroism in the storming he was made ensign in the 49th regiment. After the campaign was ended MacNab formed his regiment in Montreal, and shortly afterwards marched to the attack of Plattsburg. In this engagement he had the honour of commanding the advanced guard at the Sarnac bridge. In 1817, after the reduction of the army he began the study of law, and was called to the bar in 1825. He was some time lateremade Queen's counsel, the first appointment of the kind in Upper Canada. In 1829, he began his long and very useful public career by being elected, with the Honourable John Wilson, to represent the County of Wentworth. Having served for the county in three parliaments, he was returned for Hamilton, defeating Mr. Harrison, the govern-ment nominee. His opponents in successive elections thereafter till his retirement were Messrs. Tiffany, Freeman and Buchanan. Sir Allan rendered some important service to the Crown, and these services the Crown recognized, and thereafter his zeal for the mother country was most conspicuous. it was displayed in the cutting out of the Caroline steamer, which his men set on fire and turned loose to go over the When MacKenzie and his Niagara falls. iollowers rose in rebellion in 1837, Allan MacNab promptly marshalled the "Men of Gore," and made straightway to Toronto, where he united with Sir Francis Bond Head in attacking the unorganized rebels in the barn at Gallows Hill. Sir Allan was appointed speaker of the first Parliament under the Union, and in this capacity was most serviceable as a politician. He became prime minister in 1854, but his rule was not destined to be of great duration. During his administration the Clergy Reserves question was set at rest, the Reciprocity Act passed, Seigniorial Tenure abolished, and the Militia Act adopted. Sir Allan was knighted in 1838; and he retired from the office of premier in 1856. Towards the latter portion of his parliamentary career, he was stricken with gout, and his last appearance n the House of Assembly was when he was borne in there by two stout serving men, swathed in flannels, to make a sort of apologia pro vita sua-to explain his conduct, vestern.

ir Ot-

he va-

ed for

tly in erfer-

irm is

St Co.

õth.

. Y., , the

nell.

ston.

, and

f the

like

Sir

life.

t he

olent

He

ana-

f his

great

d by good like

d in ital,

net,

iag-

His the

held

urn, cot-

Iac-

ty's

pro-

was lur-

ied

in vife Vil-

and briefly to refer to his career and his services to his country—for his party, with Mr. John A. Macdonald at its head, had decided to drop him overboard. In October, 1857, he retired from public life in Canada and went to England, that he might be near the Crown of which he had become so enam-He believed that Englishmen had not forgotten that he had destroyed the Caroline; and therefore he entered the field against Admiral Pechel, for the representation of the town of Brighton, England. It need not be recorded that he was beaten. In 1860, he returned again to Canada, and was appointed to the Legislative Council, where he remained till an attack of sickness carried him away. Sir Allan MacNab married in 1821, Elizabeth, daughter of Daniel Brooke, by whom he had a son and a daugh-This lady died. He again married, in 1831, Mary, eldest daughter of Sheriff Stuart, of the Johnstown district, by whom he had two daughters. One of these married Viscount Bury, M.P., eldest son of the Earl of Albermarle, and the other a son of Sir Dominick Daly. He was a man of high personal character, and in official life he would scorn to do that which might make a gentleman in private life ashamed. He was a sincere lover of his country, and an able politician, though sometimes inflexible when it was inexpedient to bend; but taken altogether his name is a very bright one in the pages of Canadian history.

Trow, James, M.P. for South Porth. Ontario, Opposition Whip in the House of Commons, was born at Newtown, Montgomeryshire, North Wales, in a house on the banks of the Severn river, on the 16th December, 1827. His parents were Thomas and Mary Trow, both of Newtown. Young Trow did not receive any education at the hands of masters, save what he received at the Welchpool common school, and subsequently at Liverpool, England. But a youth of his energy and wholesome ambition was not likely to stop upon the threshold of intellectual pursuit, and after his school days at Liverpool came to an end, we find him industriously pursuing all the English branches during his spare hours. How far successful he was with his own ambition and industry for tutors, it is hardly necessary to tell those who have become familiar with his career as a politician and as a writer. James Trow's father, it appears, had emigrated to America, and thither the son followed some time afterwards. He does not appear to have been much impressed by what he saw in the United States, and thus it was that he came to think about seeking his fortune in one of the Crown colonies. He came to Ontario, and settled in the County of Perth, where he obtained a school, which he taught for seven years, with the same success that has marked his career ever since. During this time, owing to frugal habits, he laid by a considerable sum of money, which, by judicious investment, soon began to bring to him a liberal return. Mr. Trow was not by any means shut up within himself, or concerned merely in advancing personal objects; but he began to take a generous and active interest in important public questions and enterprises. In 1857, he organised a company of volunteers in Shakespeare, employing drill instructors at his own expense. Of this company, it need hardly be added, he was captain. In the municipal affairs of North Easthope, at a very early period he began to take an in-A man of his energy, business caterest. pacity, and intelligence, would be certain to come to the front in any community; hence we look with interest upon his record at Easthope. He was assessor of the township for two years, township clerk for ten years, and reeve for twenty-one consecutive For no less a period than twenty years has he been warden of the County of Perth, and chairman of the finance commit-He is likewise a High School trustee, and has taken that interest in education, which is only to be expected of a man who is himself cultured, and able to appreciate the benefits to be conferred by our schools. He is now vice president of the Perth Mutual Insurance Company, vice-president of the British Mortgage and Loan Company of Stratford, and a director of the Ontario Mutual Life Assurance Company of Berlin. With respect to his political career proper, we may say that Mr. Trow sat for South Perth in the Legislative Assembly from 1867 to 1871. In the latter year he was defeated: but in 1872 he was elected to the House of Commons for the same riding. He was reelected (by acclamation) in 1874, and again in 1878, and at the last general election. He at once took an enviable and an enduring place in the House of Commons. This was not achieved through any striking oratorical brilliancy, but the young member was found to possess sound understanding, ready and accurate insight into public questions and parliamentary business, and, not least, excellent temper and moderation. Mr. Trow was chairman, during five sessions of parliament, of the Immigration and Colonization Committee, involving great and onerous duties, and he has been whip for the Liberal party for ten years. He has always been a consistent and prominent member of the Reform party, yet it is extremely doubtful if there is a man upon the ministerial side of the House who is not his friend. To be popular, as Mr. Trow is popular, and at the same time be true to a party's cause, as he is true, is indeed one of the most difficult matters within the scope of this writer's imagination. Mr. Trow has travelled more extensively through Manitoba and the North-West territories probably than any other member of the House of Commons, having spent several months each season, for six summers, in these re-Making careful observations, he published the results, and so valuable were his contributions, that the Dominion administration, his political opponents, put the matter in pamphlet form and distributed eighty thousand copies for the enccuragement of immigration. Sir Charles Tupper and Hon. J. H. Pope, Minister of Agriculture, have both acknowledged in the House of Commons that there is no man who has done as much by his writings as Mr. Trow to open up the country and give to intending emigrants reliable and accurate information respecting the soil, climate, and natural resources of the Dominion. Mr. Trow has Mr. Trow has also travelled through every province of the Dominion, and written graphic descriptions of the places he visited; and, in company with his family, visited, a few years ago. England and Wales, Scotland, France, Ger many and Belgium. He wrote a series of most readable and graphic letters on the Franco-Prussian war, after having made examination of the various battle-fields. These letters were extensively reproduced in the Canadian press. In 1847, Mr. Trow married Mary Moore, of Blenheim, Oxford county, and has issue five children, four sons and one daughter. His business now is that of banker, broker, conveyancer, and real estate valuator. He has striven in the right way, and be has achieved. His career is well worthy the emulation of any young Canadian.

Fraser, William Hugh, Dominion Appraiser, Customs department, Ottawa, was born on December 17th, 1826, at St. Andrews, Fifeshire, Scotland. Hugh Fraser, of Inverness, Scotland, a member of the Lovat branch of the Clan Fraser, was his grandfather. His father was William Fraser, and his mother Anne Anderson. William Hugh Fraser was educated at Madras College, St. Andrews, and completed his course under large emig arriv side the s the 1 lic s affair one (pany 1870 ger i and Fras cut. enga City Man

acted

when

the boro

scho

year

ware

organ was c Frase visor held was a toms, know was c invalu Maso maste receiv and w Haver Conne Lodge past recogn pute i Grand to the He is committook paign He ha. Scotlar In religation: a mem 1856 h

of the

died.

sentat

the tutorship of Rev. John Arthurs, Helensborough, Dumbartonshire. After leaving borough, Dumbartonshire. school he served an apprenticeship of seven years to the dry goods business, and afterwards held the position of buyer in several large houses in Great Britain. In 1853 he emigrated to Canada, and shortly after his arrival settled in Hamilton, where he resided for a number of years, and carried on the same business as he had done while in the mother country. Being a man of public spirit, he took an active part in local affairs, and has the honour of having been one of the original members of No. 2 company, Hamilton volunteers. From 1858 to 1870, Mr. Fraser filled the position of manager in a large house in the United States, and was senior member of the firm of Fraser & Newcomb, New Haven, Connecticut. He returned to Canada in 1870, and engaged in the commission business in the City of Toronto. In 1871 he organized the Manufacturers' Association of Ontario, and acted as its secretary from 1871 until 1879, when he resigned the position. He also organized the Elora Carpet Company, and was one of its first directors. In 1876, Mr. Fraser was appointed secretary to the Advisory Board of the Centennial Exhibition, held in Philadelphia that year. In 1879 he was appointed Dominion Appraiser of Customs, where his extensive and accurate knowledge of the business over which he was called upon to preside makes him an invaluable officer. Mr. Fraser joined the Masonic fraternity, in 1863; was made a master mason, in Oriental lodge, Utica, N.Y.; received the degrees of chapter and council, and was also created Knight Templar in New Haven, commandery No. 2, New Haven, Connecticut. He is a member of the Grand Lodge of Canada, and received the rank of past grand registrar from that body, in recognition of his services during the dispute in connection with the secession of the Grand Lodge of Quebec. He was a representative of the Grand Lodge of Wisconsin, to the Grand Lodge of Canada, until 1884. He is an honorary member of St. John's commandery, Philadelphia. Mr. Fraser took an active part in the political campaign of 1878, in the Conservative interest. He has travelled through England, Ireland, Scotland, the United States and Canada. In religion he was a member of the Congregational church till 1879; but at present is a member of the Presbyterian church. In 1856 he married Jane, youngest daughter of the late Rev. James Middleton. She died. In 1865 he married Maggie Sophia

the

ways

nber

nely

inishis

pop-

to a

e of ope has

ani-

rob-

use

nths

rehe

ere

hinthe

ted

ge

707

re-

nas he

ns

ny go. Webster, second daughter of the late James Webster, of Hamilton. Issue by first marriage, two daughters; and by the latter, one daughter.

Winchester, John, Toronto, by reason of his integrity, perseverance and success, is taken as the subject of this sketch. He was born in the town of Elgin, Scotland. on the 27th August, 1849. His parents were John Winchester and Isabella Hossack. The couple came to Canada from Scotland when they were young, and settled in Toronto. Mr. Winchester, senr., for some time after his arrival, worked as a shoemaker, but becoming tired of this trade he betook himself to gardening, in which he was fairly successful. Mrs. Winchester died about 1875, and her husband in 1877. A family of four sons were left. John, the subject of this sketch, was sent to the Public school, where he received a scholarship from the trustees, and then entered the Grammar school. Having completed his studies, he entered upon a course of law in the office of George Morphy, who is still practising. In 1871 he was admitted to the bar, and in the same year joined Mr. Morphy in partnership, the firm becoming known as Morphy & Winchester. Mr. Winchester's business increased to such an extent that he was obliged, in 1880, to devote himself specially to it, and the partnership was dissolved. He then opened an office for himself on King street, Toronto; but in 1882, on being appointed registrar of the Queen's Bench division of the High Court of Justice, he gave it up. In May, 1883, the government finding it necessary to appoint an Inspector of sheriffs' and other county offices under government control, chose Mr. Winchester for the position, and he thereupon resigned his former office. In March of 1884, at the request of the chief justices of the three divisions of the High Court, the government appointed him an Official Referee of the High Court, and both these offices he now holds. In 1868 our subject entered the Military School at Toronto, and received his certificate in the same year. When St. Stephen's ward was formed, in 1876, he was elected senior school trustee for the ward. He was elected alderman for the same ward in 1878, and re-elected by acclamation the following year. In 1879 he was chairman of the water works committee of the City Council, and while in this position he, together with the late Mr. Brough, water works manager, made a trip through the United States, to study the method to procure pure water, and the result of this trip was the extension of the pipe into the

When retiring from the council, in 1879, he was appointed trustee of the Toronto Collegiate Institute Board. In 1881, when the village of Brockton became incorporated, he was selected reeve of the village; but in 1882 he was obliged, in consequence of his governmental appointments, to retire from the position. Mr. Winchester is an elder of Chalmers Presbyterian church, Toronto, and in politics a Reformer. He was president of the St. Stephen's Ward Association for several years, and at the time of his retiring from public life, was president of the West York Beform Association. He married, in December, 1873, Mary Butler, a daughter of the late William Butler and Hannah Butler, nee Nichols, of Co-The first three of Mr. Winchester's children were in the world while their maternal great-grandmother still lived. She was Mrs. Stabler, of Smith township, Peterborough. Mr. Winchester has a family of seven children. His disposition is agreeable, and his bearing gentlemanly. Rose, George Maclean, senior member of the firm of Hunter, Rose & Co., printers, and of the Rose Publishing Company, Toronto, forms the subject of the following This gentleman being a member of the firm concerned in the publication of the "CYCLOPÆDIA OF CANADIAN BIOGRAPHY," for reasons of delicacy we refrain from giving an original sketch of his career, as we do in the case of all others finding a place in the volume; but in order that the aim of the work may be carried out, which is to give a place to those men who are truly representative Canadians, we present, without further apology, the following memoir, taken from "The Canadian Biographical Dictionary and Portrait Gallery of Eminent and Self-made Men" :- "In the interesting biography of Robert Chambers, the Edinburgh publisher, from the loving pen of his brother William, we are told that their father had strong convictions as to the importance of allowing children to think and struggle for themselves. To the parental determination of many a Scottish father on this point, Scotia's sons owe much in enabling them successfully to battle with the world, and in many lands to achieve distinction. Beginning at the bottom of Fortune's ladder, the rugged tutelage of an early and unassisted start in life has ever been the young aspirant's best incentive to ascend it. With no patrimony, save that which a self-reliant nature could win for itself, and no heritage but that of health and a fair name, the career of Scottish youth has generally had little of adventitious aid to favour it Success most often has had to be wrested from a seemingly unwilling Divinity, whose gifts in the end rarely fail, however, of being won by conscientious persistency and tenacious purpose. In the career of the subject of the present sketch, what we have said finds ample illustration. Born in the Royal Burgh of Wick, Caithness-shire, on the 14th of March, 1829, the unpromising surroundings of the early life of George Maclean Rose were such as have tutored many of his countrymen to hardy endurance, and inspired them with the national ambition to rise in life. Now at the head of the firm of Messrs. Hunter, Rose & Co., one of the largest printing and publishing houses in the Dominion, the callow beginnings, now almost forty years ago, of Mr. Rose's apprenticeship, in the office of the celebrated John O'Groat Journal, present a contrast as striking as it is significant. The step from the one position to the other was attained at no single bound, but has been wearily reached by toilsome and assiduous labour and an unflagging will. With no pecuniary subsidy to start life upon, and with but the scant education which falls to the lot of most Scottish youths, our young apprentice reached his majority after passing seven years in the printing office already referred to. In 1850. he took a position in the office of the North. ern Ensign, a Reform journal just then started by Mr. John Mackie, a leading temperance advocate and political writer of North Britain, who had, during the full period of Mr. Rose's apprenticeship, acted as editor of the John O'Groat Journal. Here he only remained for about a year, as his father, Mr. Donald Rose, conceiving the purpose of emigrating to Canada, was about to leave Scotland to come hither, and desired the subject of our sketch to join the family in their resolve to set out for the Reluctantly consenting, Mr. New World. G. M. Rose joined the party, and bade farewell to the companions of his childhood, and especially to his friend Mr. Mackie, for whom he had the warmest affection, and whose teaching, Mr. Rose gratefully acknowledges, powerfully influenced him in his after-life. Taking ship, the Empress of Banff, at Scrabster Roads, Thurso, the family set sail for America, and after a passage of over six weeks, arrived at Quebec, whence they proceeded to Montreal, where they were met by Mr. Rose's elder brother, Henry, who had come to Canada in 1848. In these early days, employment was scarce in the colony, and after eagerly searching

for i

whil

mon

ultin

John

the I

perar

paper

some

Georg

and p

Canad

then

mont

respor

did n theref

entere

he re

this ti

his ch

brothe

sisters.

meetin

Mr. I

money

charact

make t this er

with h

name o Job Pr

their e

ceeded i

thers di

bitious o

the work province the vill:

John M. Chronicle

moved t

Mr. H. 1

he occu

Hamilton

tion of T

that of '

1857 just visable to

ness revi

by the

East Mid

and repor

he accept

year, whe George S

join them

paper. N

iness.

for it for about two weeks, and having meanwhile nearly exhausted the small store of money he had when he landed, Mr. Rose ultimately found work in the office of Mr. John C. Becket, who was then publishing the Montreal Wilness, the Canadian Temperance Advocate, and other semi-religious After working for Mr. Becket for some months, he was engaged by Mr. George Matthews, the engraver, to number and prepare for signature the first issue in Canada of the Bank of Montreal notes, just then being printed by him. After some months, Mr. Rose, though conscious of the responsibility of the work entrusted to him, did not find it congenial to his tastes; he therefore resigned his position, and again entered the office of Mr. J. C. Becket, where he remained for some months longer. At this time (1853) his father died, leaving in his charge his mother, two sisters, and two brothers, both of whom, with one of his sisters, being younger than himself. After meeting the expenses of his father's funeral. Mr. Rose found that he had very little money left of his slender savings; but, with characteristic determination, he resolved to make the most of what remained. this end in view, he formed a partnership with his brother Henry, under the firm name of 'H. and G. M. Rose,' Book and Their capital being small, Job Printers. their establishment was of corresponding extent. But they were industrious, and succeeded in a modest measure in obtaining business. In the beginning of 1856, the brothers dissolved partnership, and George, ambitious of more rapidly making his way in the world, directed his steps to the western province. Shortly after this we find him in the village of Merrickville, assisting Mr. John Muir to establish the Merrickville Chronicle. After a brief interval, he removed to London, and took charge there of Mr. H. Newcomb's printing office, a position he occupied until he was induced by Mr. Hamilton Hunter to join him in the publication of The Atlas—the firm being known as that of 'Hunter & Rose.' The hard times of 1857 just then coming on, it was deemed advisable to discontinue The Atlas until business revived, awaiting which he was offered, by the late Mr. Marcus Talbot, M.P. for East Middlesex, the position of city editor and reporter on the London Prototype, which he accepted, and held until the following year, when he was pressed by Messrs. George Sheppard and Daniel Morrison to join them in Toronto on The Colonist newspaper. Mr. Rose now removed to the pres-

r it

sted

208e

eing ena.

ject

hier

yal

4th

hd-

ean

his

in-

to

of

the

the

lal-

en-

hn

ik-

lhe

no

an

ent provincial capital, but instead of coming to terms with those well-known journalists, he accepted in preference the position of manager of the printing office of Mr. Samuel Thompson, for whom he published, during the period of its existence, the Toronto At-This journal was started to take the place of The Colonist, which had begun to oppose the government of the day, leading off in opposition with the striking and longremembered article, Whither are we Drifting? Mr. Thompson having obtained the printing contract for the Legislative Assembly and Legislative Council of Canada, it became necessary, on the removal of the Government to Quebec, to establish a parliamentary printing office in that city. take the practical management of this office Mr. Rose was chosen, and in the fall of 1859. he removed to the ancient capital. a year after this Mr. Thompson, unfortunately, found himself in financial difficulties, and was compelled to make new arrangements for the prosecution of his business. This necessitated the formation of a company, with Mr. Robert Hunter, an experienced accountant, and Mr G. M. Rose, its practical head, as partners. In the following year, Mr. Thompson retired, and the business fell into the hands of the chief members of the company, Mr. Hunter and Mr. Rose, who, under the firm name of Hunter, Rose & Co., completed Mr. Thompson's five years contract, and secured its renewal for a further period in their own names. When the Government, in 1865, removed to Ottawa, the parliamentary printing office necessarily had to follow. To that city the plant and business were transferred, and with them Mr. Rose, who now became a citizen of the new capital. While at Ottawa, Confederation was accomplished, and the business of Mr. Rose's firm was largely augmented. year later, and after the formation of the provincial legislatures, the late Hon. John Sandfield Macdonald, finding himself in difficulty with the government printers he had contracted with in Toronto, arranged with Mr. Rose's firm to open a branch at the seat of the Local Legislature, which they did in 1868, having received a ten years lease of the parliamentary printing. To take charge of this Toronto establishment, Mr. Hunter removed to the provincial capital-Mr. Rose remaining at Ottawa until the contract with the Dominion Parliament, in 1871, was completed. At its expiry, Mr. Rose then made Toronto his residence; his firm consolidating their business at that city. this time, with commendable ambition, Mr.

Rose's firm entered upon a branch of commercial enterprise, in the publication of Canadian reprints of English copyright works, which for many years laid the reading public of the Dominion under great obligations to the house of Hunter, Rose & These reprints consisted principally of works of fiction from the pens of the notable novelists of the day, among whom were Wilkie Collins, Charles Reade, Lord Lytton, and a number of writers of lesser The republication of these popular works of the time was spiritedly and intelligently made for a number of years—their authors receiving handsome recognition of their labours by the enterprising firm The undertaking, issuing their works. while enabling the publishers to do an intellectual service to the reading community of the country, and to honourably recompense the English authors whose books were reproduced, was very helpful in stimulating the nascent printing and publishing industries of Canada, which, though without otherwise bearing much fruit, proved the practicability, under favourable legislation, of Canadian publishing houses supplying In these entertheir own book market. prises of the firm, Mr. Rose's practical skill and good taste were of much service in the mechanical manufacture of the issues of the house, which to-day easily leads, in the artistic character of its book-making, and the facilities with which work is turned out, the The connection, for trade of the country. many years as printers and now as owners and publishers, with our national magazine, THE CANADIAN MONTHLY, testified to the public-spirited character of Mr. Rose's firm, and to the liberal encouragement which it has always given to Canadian literature and its dissemination among the people. 1877, Mr. Robert Hunter, for sixteen years Mr. Rose's partner in his business operations, died, leaving him the sole member of the firm, which, since 1860, had industriously and successfully toiled on the weary road to A year later, he took fame and fortune. into partnership with him a younger brother, of large experience also as a printer, and the two now compose the firm which has been so long and favourably known as Hunter, Rose & Co. So far, we have only dealt with Mr. Rose as a man of business. Let us now, before closing, say a brief word or two with regard to the distinguishing traits of his character which have marked his public and Although for many years industriously occupied in building up a prosperous and important business, he has found time to take an active and prominent part in. schemes tending to elevate his fellow-men. and to benefit the communities among whom his lot has been cast. In this respect, he has loyally followed in the footsteps of his early friend, Mr. Mackie, of Wick, whose devotion to the interests of humanity and brotherhood, in the home of his childhood, made so powerful and lasting an impression on his youthful mind. The chief sphere of his active philanthropy and self-sacrificing interest has been that of the temperance lodge-room; and many and varied are the organizations, in the cities of which he has been a resident, which have had the benefit of his sage counsel, and felt the inspiriting effect of his intelligent, practical zeal. At an early age circumstances led him to take the total abstinence pledge, and when he came to Canada, ten years later, he eagerly joined the working army of his warmly-espoused cause, the Sons of Temperance, and has ever since occupied a prominent position in the While a resident of the Provbrotherhood. ince of Quebec, he was elected to the highest position in the gift of the Order, and when leaving the ancient capital, the fraternity presented him with a handsome gold medal as an acknowledgment of the work he had done in their interest. Since he came to Ontario, he has filled, for a double term, the office of the head of the Order, and was presented on his retirement with an elegant and costly piece of plate. At Ottawa he was also the recipient of a gold medal for services rendered to the temperance cause; and from an Orange lodge in Quebec he received another gold medal for his championship of Protestantism. Devoting himself so earnestly, as he has done, to the cause of temperance, he has escaped in great measure the seductive wiles of political life; but he has ever taken a lively interest in questions of political government, though subordinating his party predilections to loyal interest in the cause he has had most at heart. When questioned as to what are his political principles, he has always replied by saying that he is a 'Reformer of the Reformers,' and that, as a Prohibitionist, his fealty would be given to the party who would pass enactments in suppression of the liquor traffic. In religion, Mr. Rose styles himself a Liberal-Christian, and is an active member and office-bearer in the First Uni-In early years tarian Church of Toronto. he was connected with the Congregational body, but feeling restive under the doctrinal beliefs of that church, he joined the Unitarian communion, under Rev. Dr. John main

Cord

WAR

Man

Man

unio

child

and t

ance,

has a

tenar

Besid

home

of the

Of m

his pr

with

world

ance '

tious

is eas:

pathy

all it

swaye

to the well a

unassi

sion,

behalf

this ca

champ

if in kind.'

Rose's

Georg

may t

the ho

News

as in

been i

larity :

capaci

publish

very co

book-k

his bro

Ingers

Englar

ents w

Peers.

1826, 16

being t

commo

reached establis

stock, v

cantile

with tl

where :

W

Cordner, at Montreal, and has since remained in that denomination. Mr. Rose was married, in 1856, to Margaret C. J. L. Manson, daughter of the late Mr. William Manson, farmer, Oxford county, and the union has been blessed with a family of ten children, nine of whom are alive-six sons and three daughters. In personal appearance, Mr. Rose is of medium stature. He has a robust frame, a ruddy, pleasing countenance, and a manner urbane and kindly. Besides the distinguishing accent of his homely Scottish speech, he possesses many of the racial characteristics of his country. Of much natural penetration and sagacity, his progress through life has dowered him with a shrewd, practical knowledge of the world, and given him an intimate acquaintance with his fellow-men. With a conscientious sense of his obligations as a citizen, he is easily influenced by appeals to his sympathy and to his purse. If he has a fault at all it lies in the direction of being overswayed by his heart; but he can be stern to those who forget the necessity of 'living well and worthily.'- Usually of quiet and unassuming address, he is capable, on occasion, of firing into vehement outbursts on behalf of his favourite topic—abstinence. In this cause he has been a life-long and worthy champion, and for his services in its behalf, if in nothing else, he deserves well of his kind." We may add that three of Mr. Rose's sons, Dan. A., William M., and George M., are connected with the firm. It may truly be said that the impetus which the house has acquired as a purveyor to the News companies and Railway lines, as well as in its general publishing concerns, has been in no small measure due to the popularity and the active and excellent business capacity of Dan. A. Rose, manager of the publishing department. William M., a very competent young gentleman, is head book-keeper of the firm, and is assisted by his brother, George M.

t in-

en.

nom

has

his

iose

and

hoc

sion

of 6

cing

nce

the

has

efit

ing

t an

the

ame

ned

ısed

ver

the

rov-

igh-

and

ter-

gold

k he

ame

rm,

was

ant

was

ser-

se;

re-

ion-

lf so

of 6

iea-

fe;

t in

ugh

· to ıost

his

lied

the

ist,

vho

the 7les

ive

ni-

ars

hn

Woodcock, Ralph Alexander, Ingersoll, Ontario, was born at Cheshire, England, on the 26th April, 1826. His parents were William Woodcock and Susannah Peers. His father was a farmer, and died in 1826, leaving two children, Ralph Alexander, being the youngest. The latter received a common school education, and when he reached his eighteenth year, entered the establishment of W. C. McLeod, of Woodstock, with the object of mastering the mercantile business. After serving four years with this firm, he returned to England, came to Canada, and settled in the town of Ingersoll, Ontario, where he engaged himself as a clerk with D. Phelan. In 1853, five years later, he moved to the town of Woodstock, where he commenced a dry goods business, on Dundas street, and continued in the same for seven years. 1860, he sold out and returned to Ingersoll, where he has resided ever since. Mr. Woodcock was one of the first lieutenants of the first company ever organized in the County of Oxford, and he acted as an officer in the militia till 1860, when he retired. In 1862, in consideration of his high character, wide popularity, and general fitness he was appointed town clerk. In 1867, the year of the coal oil excitement, he was secretary of the Ingersoll Petroleum and Mining Company, of Bothwell, which afterwards removed its office to Petrolia. He sold out his interest in this company in 1870. Woodcock is a Freemason, and has held several offices. He is an adherent of the Church of England. He married in 1855, Catherine M., daughter of Patrick Phelan, of Abbyleix, Queen's county, Ireland, and has two children. One of these, Elizabeth, is the wife of Dr. Harcourt, of Chicago, Ill.

Muir, Thomas McComb, Manager of the Ontario Car and Foundry Works, London, was born at Kilmarnock, Ayrshire, Scotland, on the 8th February, 1839. When Mr. Muir was in his eleventh year, the family removed to Sanquhar, Dumfriesshire, but his education was continued for a time longer at the Kilmarnock academy. brothers, W. K. Muir and James H. Muir, both of whom now reside in Detroit, Michigan, were then in Glasgow, as assistant manager and cashier respectively in the Glasgow and South-Western Railway. Our subject, likewise removed to Glasgow, and here began a business career by entering as clerk in the large manufacturing firm of J. & R. Cochrane. In 1854 he came to Canada, whither his brother, W. K., had already gone the year before, to take the superintendency of the Great Western Railway at Hamilton. Upon arriving he at once entered this great concern as an official in the audit office. He remained in the service of the Great Western for fourteen years, and during this period his course was steadily upward, for he was possessed of reliable and practical business instincts, and soon attained the position of accountant and auditor; but at the expiration of the period named, a number of his friends pressed upon him to accept the accountantship of the Gore Bank, where he remained for a year, and again at Hamilton, which he did, resigning his railway connection. In 1869 the business of the Gore Bank was absorbed by the Bank of Commerce, upon which Mr. Muir removed to Detroit, where he connected himself with several large manufacturing and saw-mill interests until 1871, when he again returned to Canada, as manager of the Ontario Car Works, which position he continues to hold. Notwithstanding his onerous business duties while at Hamilton, in Detroit, and now in London, Mr. Muir has always and everywhere been actively associated in christian work, both in the Y. M. C. A., and in Sabbath-schools. When leaving Hamilton, in 1869, he was made the recipient of addresses and handsome testimonials from the Y.M.C.A., and Sabbath-school teachers of the Central Presbyterian church. Although a Reformer in politics, he never took any very active part in the elections or party altercations, and only held one municipal office, that of deputy reeve, of London east, while that was an incorporated town. Mr. Muir married while at Hamilton, in November, 1862, Mary Colcleugh, daughter of Captain William Colcleugh, long and favourably known in connection with the mail line service on Lake Ontario. His wife died in London, 1st of February, 1881, leaving five children, two daughters and three sons, yet surviving.

Phillips, Frederick, Toronto, was born in Twillingate, Newfoundland, in 1843. His father was born in Somersetshire, England, and settled in Twillingate, in the north of Newfoundland, at the time when a considerable part of the island was held by the This was about the year 1812, the French. date of the war between the United States In 1822 he married Elizabeth and Britain. Cooper, daughter of John Cooper, one of the leading business men of Twillingate. Here, like the rest of the inhabitants, Mr. Phillips became what is known as a "planter." In 1872, he retired from business and went to Toronto, Ontario, and died in 1882, leaving a family of nine children. Frederick, whose career we are sketching, was the third youngest. He received his earlier education in the common schools, but completed his course at the University of Toronto. When young he had a passionate yearning for the sea, and studied navigation. After spending some ten years as a sailor, he came to Toronto and, having abandoned the sea, he learned the trade of carpenter and builder. In 1870, he began business on his own account, and has carried on, as a contractor and builder, ever since with very marked Mr. Phillips has been since 1870 success.

a member of the Independent Order of Oddfellows, and is a past grand of Canada lodge, No. 49, Toronto. He also belongs to the Freemasons, and is a member of St. Andrew's lodge, No. 16, Toronto. Mr. Philips has travelled throughout nearly ail Canada, including Labrador. He has visited nearly every state of the American union, and also England, Scotland and France. His religious views may be described as those held by the Congregationalists, and his politics are those of unflinching and progressive reform. He married in 1870, Mary, daughter of the late John Knight, formerly of St. John's, Newfoundland, but latterly of Toronto, and one of the oldest and best known Newfoundland families. Mrs. Phillips' great-grandfather fought under General Wolfe, at the taking of Quebec. The subject of our sketch, it may be remarked, comes of a military family, his grandfather having served under Wellington at Waterloo.

sente

1856

sione.

he wa

Prosp

1861

Victo

Austr

highe

ment

to exp

He wa

der Bo

the B

ciety,

to 180

and le

late Si

tenden

Domin

Selwyr

obligat

been u

a cons

since I

geologi

more

careful

ing the

control

to be b

the stat

was in

of disci

great.

agricult

conduct

logical t

some sh

habit of

into th

utility.

and the

partmen

to he ab

of such

and of

compete

Whitby,

Ontario,

father, W

wall, and England.

1848, lea

utterly o

Major H

the town

bition of member

Harp

Selwyn, Alfred Richard Cecil. LL.D., F.R.S., F.G.S., Director of the Geological and Natural History Survey of Canada, was born in England, in 1824. Our distinguished subject is the youngest son of the Reverend Townshend Selwyn, canon of Gloucester cathedral. His mother was the daughter of Lord George Murray, bishop of St. David's, and grand-daughter of John, fourth Duke of Athol. He received private tuition at home, after which he was sent to Switzerland, where he completed his education. In 1845, being now distinguished for his attainments in geological science, he was appointed assistant geologist on the geological survey of Great Britain. His excellent abilities attracted attention among distinguished practical geologists, and in 1852, Mr. Selwyn was appointed by the secretary of state for the colonies, on the recommendation of Sir T. De La Bache, the director of the survey, to undertake the geological survey of the colony of Victoria, Australia. Previous to 1854 much interest was aroused respecting the coal beds and gold-fields in Tasmania, and the government of that colony cast about it for a practical scientist, who could give definite information upon the question. There was no difficulty in concluding that Mr. Selwyn was just the person, could his services be secured. Asking him if he would undertake the enterprise, he consented, and he at once set at work to make examinations through Tasmania. His reports were in the highest degree satisfactory. In 1859 the government of South Australia invited him to do it a similar service, and he consented, with similar satisfactory results. In 1856 he was appointed one of the commissioners of mines, for Victoria; and in 1858 he was made a member of the Science and Prospecting Board. He was likewise, in 1861 appointed a commissioner for the Victoria International Exhibition. Australia, Dr. Selwyn was held in the highest possible regard by the government; while the whole colony was ready to express its obligations for his services. He was a member of the Government Tender Board, and a member of the councils of the Board of Agriculture of the Royal Society, and of the Acclimatization Society up to 1869. In the latter year he resigned, and left Australia for Canada to succeed the late Sir William E. Logan, in the superintendence of the geological survey of the In Canada, Dr. Dominion of Canada. Selwyn placed the public under the same obligations as the people of Australia had been under. Sir William Logan had been a constant and painstaking worker, but since Dr. Selwyn's coming, the work of the geological survey has widened, and grown more arduous. Year by year, through careful consideration, the director is reducing the great and important work under his control to a system. Where everything had to be begun-where the material of which the staff operating in the various provinces was in the nature of things raw—the work of disciplining and perfecting has been very great. Add to this fact that in later years agriculture and settlement are coming to be conducted somewhat under the light of geological teaching, and this has brought what some short-sighted persons have been in the habit of regarding as an abstruse science into the region of practical, every day, utility. This then has added to the labours and the importance of Dr. Selwyn's department. It is gratifying for Canadians to be able to find that work so important, of such importance in actual achievement, and of such moment in promise, is in such competent and distinguished hands.

rda

ngs

of

Λr.

ail

ted

on, ce.

as

nd

ry, rly

rly est nil-

ral

ect

nes

ng

iI,

he of 24.

est

'n, ier

ay, ter

eat
ed
eophe
T.
to
l-4
he
nd
ut
ve
n.
at
iis
ld
dare 59
d

Harper, Major, Police Magistrate of Whitby, was born in the town of Whitby, Ontario, on the 1st of November, 1835. His father, Walter Harper, was a native of Cornwall, and his mother a native of Devonshire, England. Mr. Harper, senior, died in 1848, leaving the subject of this sketch utterly dependent upon his own exertions. Major Harper received his education in the town of Whitby, and the chief ambition of his young life, was to become a member of the legal profession; but fortune, as we have seen, had not been kind, and he was obliged to take a course other than that dictated by his inclinations. He therefore began to work on a farm, but after a time he found this vocation did not suit him, and he gave it up and learned the trade of carpenter and builder. trade he succeeded, and in a short time he became an expert machinist, and to-day may be reckoned one of the cleverest in the Dominion. But his close, and we might say, loving pursuit of his chosen trade, did not hinder him from taking an interest in certain public questions. A man of careful and comprehensive observation, the people of Whitby became desirous of having his services in their municipal council; therefore, in 1868, they elected him town councillor, and re-elected him to the same position for five successive years. He was then elected mayor, and held that office for a period of two years. Whilst mayor, he was appointed police magistrate of the town, and holds that office still. He joined the Masonic order in 1867, and the Oddfellows in 1872. In politics he has always given his support in the cause of Reform, believing that the principles professed by that party, would, if carried into effect, prove best for the interests of our country. He married on November 4, 1856, Emeline Pierson, whose father was one of the earliest settlers in Northumberland county.

Smith, James K., M.A., Galt, Ontario, was born in Aberdeen, Scotland, on the His father, Alexander 11th April, 1827. Smith, was a successful and highly respected merchant, and burgess of Aberdeen, and his mother was Ann Johnston. There were four sons, all of whom entered the ministry of the Church of Scotland. John, after a brilliant course at college and in theology, died ere taking license. Another, William, after a distinguished course at college, was minister of a congregation in the Church of Scotland for several years in Blairgowrie, Scotland, where he was associated with the sainted R. M. McCheyne, of Dundee, and Dr. Macdonald, of Blairgowrie. Another, Alexander, is now occupying a mission field in Brandon Presbytery, The fourth is the subject of North-West. this sketch. James K. Smith spent five years at the Grammar school in Aberdeen, the two last under the celebrated Latinist, Dr. Melvin. Thereafter he took the four years' course at Marischal College, Aberdeen, obtaining a scholarship of $45 (£9 stg.), at the entrance by competition, and taking the degree of A.M. at the close. He then purI VII AT WIND IN THE PARTY OF T sued medical studies with the view of following that profession, but changing his mind, took a full theological course of three years at the Free Church Divinity Hall, Aberdeen, and one year at the New College, Edinburgh, under the celebrated divines, Drs. Thomas Chalmers, William Cunningham, and John Duncan. Thereafter he was licensed to preach the Gospel by the presbytery of Aberdeen. For three months he assisted the Rev. S. O. Dods, in Maybole, Ayrshire, and received a call to the Free East Church of Forfar, which he declined, as he desired to visit his friends in Canada. In the fall of 1852 he received a call to the Free Church in Ramsay, Canada West, and was ordained to that charge in 1853. 1856 he became pastor of the First Presbyterian church in Brockville, and remained there till 1865, when he succeeded Dr. Bayne, the father of the Free Church in Canada, and Dr. Thomson (who had returned to his former congregation in New York city), in the charge of Knox Church, Galt. In 1872 he became the first pastor of the newly-formed congregation of Fort Massey, in Halifax, Nova Scotia, one of the leading churches, if not the leading one, in the lower provinces. Being re-called to his former church in Galt, he became for the second time (a very unusual circumstance in pastorates) pastor of that church, which has at present the largest communion roll, very nearly 1000, in the Presbyterian Church in Canada. In all his charges, his ministry has been successful, but in Ramsay, and Knox Church, Galt, especially, his lacours have been crowned with remarkable manifestations of divine power in those spiritual and lasting fruits which constitute a pastor's jury. During his pastorate in Brockville, he was clerk of the presbytery there, and held the position of superintendent of schools, succeeding the Rev. Dr. Lewis, now bishop of Kingston and Ottawa In Galt he has occupied for several years the position of chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Galt Collegiate Institute, one of the most celebrated educational institutions of the province. At the time of the Fenian raid Mr. Smith was chosen chaplain of the Galt infantry company, and accompanied them to the camp at Thorold. For the benefit of his wife's health, the season of 1870-71 was spent in San Francisco, California, on which occasion Mr. Smith visited most of the remarkable places of interest in that state. While in San Francisco he supplied the pulpit of the First Presbyterian church of that city, one of the largest congregations in the state of California, and was invited to be. come its pastor. Since his return to Galt. he has received several invitations from churches in the cities of Canada and the United States, but has elected to remain with his people. On October 20th, 1857, he married Christina, fifth daughter of James Cumming, Esq., of Williamstown, Glen. garry. The issue of this union is four children. The eldest son, James Cumming, who passed through University College and Knox College with honours, is now temporarily supplying the Presbyterian church at Newmarket, Ontario. The Rev. James K. Smith is a man of singular zeal; he is untiring in his work, and one of the ablestpreachers in the denomination. The record given speaks emphatically of the approval with which his ministrations have been met by the important congregations over which

ation,

Artille

troubl

7th m certific

from t

was a

terest

of his

he was

1874, 1

Februa

and wa

tia and

tary en

singula

deputy fied sa

govern

daught

in 1855

children

of R. V

dreuil;

1878 le

married

Bellefeı

whom h

born in

County

Decemb

and Sylv

Canada.

were bo

an early school i

mained :

his earl

M.A., fo

the Iroq

seventee

to Albert

Seminary

were sper

ing school

Grenville

ceived as

Methodis

as junior

Edward c

years. E

ville circ

where he was stati

Brockville

he was ap

took char

our years

church.

You

he has presided.

Panet, Charles Eugene, Lieutenant-Colonel, Deputy Minister of Militia and Defence, Ottawa, was born in Quebec, on the 17th November, 1830. He is descended from an old and prominent French Canadian family, his great-grandfather having come from France and settled in Canada more than a century ago. Col. Panet's grandfather, Jean Antoine Panet, was the first speaker in the Legislature of Lower Canada, and he held this position for twenty-three years. The father of Deputy Panet was Philip, late judge of the court of Queen's Bench, Lower Canada. He married Luce, daughter of M. Casgrain, Seigneur of La Bouteillerie, also a descendant of a very old family. Charles Eugene was educated in the Quebec Seminary, and at the Jesuit College, of Georgetown, D.C. Having completed his education, he entered upon the study of law in his native city, in the office of the Honourable J. T. Taschereau. He applied himself diligently at his studies, receiving approbation for his application and mental alert-He was called to the bar in 1854, and he at once began the practice of his profession in Quebec; but at the expiry of three years, he turned his attention to other matters. He was for a period of fourteen years sole coroner for the city and district of Quebec, and this was one of the largest coroner districts in Lower Canada. In military matters Colonel Panet has always taken a deep interest. He was for many years in command of the 9th Battalion, which he was instrumental in organizing. He retired with his rank of Lieutenant-Colonel on 23rd April, 1880. He is a member of the council of the Dominion Rifle Association, and vice-president of the Dominion Artillery Association. During the Fenian troubles of 1868, he held command of the 7th military district; and he has a first-class certificate from the Board of Examiners and from the Military School. Colonel Panet was a gentleman who had taken a deep interest in public affairs; and as a recognition of his splendid abilities and his character, he was called to the Senate, on March 2nd, 1874, to represent the La Salle division. In February, 1875, he resigned the senatorship, and was appointed Deputy Minister of Militia and Defence, an office for which his military enthusiasm and his excellent abilities, singularly fitted him. Since assuming the deputyship, he has given the most unqualified satisfaction to the public and to the government. Colonel Panet married a daughter of Felix Lussier, of Varennes, in 1855; and she died in 1859 leaving two children. In 1862, he married a daughter of R. W. Harwood, of the parish of Vaudreuil, Montreal district, and she died in 1878 leaving eight children. In 1880 he married a daughter of Mr. Jos. Lefevre de Bellefeuille, Seignor of St. Eustache, by whom he has had two children.

Young, Rev. Joseph, Belleville, was born in the township of Augusta, in the County of Grenville, Ontario, on the 23rd December, 1843. His parents were William and Sylva Pike, and they were both born in Canada. His grandparents, on both sides, were born in the New England States. At an early age he was sent to the common school in the neighbourhood, where he remained until his seventeenth year. Among his early teachers was Wm. A. Whitney, M.A., for many years past the principal of the Iroquois High school. When nearly seventeen he was sent (September, 1860), to Albert College, then known as Belleville Seminary. The next seven years of his life were spent at this institution, and in teaching school in the counties of Hastings and Grenville. In the spring of 1867, he was received as a candidate in the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal church, and was sent as junior minister to Milford circuit. Prince Edward county, where he remained for two years. His next field of labour was Aultsville circuit, in the County of Stormont, where he remained for two years, and then was stationed in the village of Lyn, near Brockville. At the expiration of two years he was appointed to the City of Ottawa, and took charge of the Ottawa West M. E. In this station he officiated for our years, and was sent next to the town | of Picton, where he had charge for two years, and then was appointed to the Kingston church, which had just been opened in the spring of 1879. Here he remained for three years, organizing and building up a congregation, and succeeded in gathering a large attendance, especially at the evening services. On his departure from the City of Kingston, he was requested to take the pastorate of the Cobourg M. E. church, and accepted the position, where he laboured for two years, until the consummation of Methodist union. He was then reappointed by the stationing committee of the united church. His first work was, on receiving his appointment, to unite the Methodist Episcopal and Bible Christian congrega-This was accomplished to the satisfaction of all parties concerned, and Mr. Young counts this as among the happiest and most successful years of his ministerial life. At the conference in June, 1885, he was stationed in the City of Belleville, as the pastor of the Methodist Tabernacle, where he is now ministering, to the full satisfaction of his congregation. He acted as secretary of the Bay of Quinté conference, M. E. church, for three successive years, namely, in 1875-6-7, and was a member of all the general conferences of the Methodist Episcopal church from the time he was first eligible until the Methodist union was consummated. He was ordained deacon by Bishop Richardson, in 1869, in Ottawa, and to the office of elder two years later by the same bishop. He was converted on the 4th of July, 1864, and immediately connected himself with the M. E. church, of which his parents had been lifelong members. His connection with the Methodist church from the first has been unbroken, and he was an ardent advocate of the unification of Methodism in the Dominion of Canada. His marriage took place on the 20th of September, 1869. His wife was Margaret Anne, daughter of Daniel J. Wright, of Cressy, Prince Edward county. To estimate briefly the chief characteristics of this worthy minister, we might say that he is a faithful and zealous worker in the cause of religion and of his church, an eloquent and effective preacher, a man of unswerving purpose, and more than usual capacity for organization.

Clark, Dr. Daniel, Superintendent of the Provincial Asylum for the Insane, Toronto, was born in Granton, Invernesshire, Scotland, on the 29th August, 1835. His father, Alexander Clark, was a native of Morayshire, Scotland. The family came to NEW TOTAL

Canada in 1841, and took up a farm near Port Dover, Norfolk county. In 1850, Daniel set out for California, and after undergoing considerable hardships, succeeded in making a considerable amount of money by placer mining. The following year he returned to Canada, and began at once to obtain an education. After attending the Simcoe Grammar school for some time, he pursued classical and medical studies at Toronto, graduating from the Victoria University medical department, in 1858. He then went to Europe, and took a course of lectures at Edinburgh University, and spent some time visiting the hospitals in London and Paris, besides visiting Belgium, Holland and Germany. He returned to Canada in 1859, and commenced the practice of his profession at Princeton, Oxford county, Ontario. In 1864 he joined the Federal armies of the Potomac and James rivers, as a surgeon volunteer, attached to the surgeon-general's department, and at the close of the war returned home. Clark has been for many years a frequent contributor to our periodicals, especially to the Medical Journal, Stewart's Quarterly, the Maritime Monthly, Canada Methodist Magazine, and the Canadian Monthly. He is the author of a work entitled "Pen Photographs" (published in 1873), comprising descriptive sketches of eminent persons, essays and scenes of travel; and also of a novel dealing with the Canadian rebellion of 1837, called "John Garth." In addition to these Dr. Clark has written, and continues to write, considerably on professional subjects. 1872 he was chosen a member of the Medical Council of Ontario, and was re-elected to the position in 1875. During the two following years he filled the Presidential chair of the council. Dr. Clark has also held the positions for several years of examiner in chemistry for the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario, and examiner for two years in obstetrics and medical jurisprudence for Toronto University. December, 1875, on the retirement of Dr. Joseph Workman, he was appointed to the responsible position which he now holds, by the government of Ontario, at the request of the Medical Council and the Medical Societies of this province, and results have shown the wisdom of the choice. Dr. Clark married on the 6th of November, 1859, and the fruits of the marriage were three children, all dead. As a specialist in the treatment of insanity Dr. Clark is said to have no rival among the profession in Canada.

Henry, Hon. William Alexander, Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, Ottawa, was born in Halifax, Nova Scotia, on December 30th, 1816. He is a son of Robert N. Henry, merchant, who held a number of local offices, by Margaret, whose maiden name was Hendricken. W. A. Henry was educated at the High school at Halifax. and when his course expired he entered upon the study of law in the office of the Honourable Alexander McDougall. In 1840 he was called to the bar, and began to practice his profession at Antigonish; but he subsequently removed to Halifax, and resumed his profession there. It is no exaggeration to say that Mr. Henry was a young man of great promise; and before he was a month in practice, he was chosen to represent the County of Sydney, now Antigonish, in the Legislative Assembly. he entered the house his mind was well made up respecting public questions, and his voice was heard raised in many protests against the system of irresponsible government practised in his province, and calling for a reform of the political system. He was soon recognizied as one of the foremost Liberals of his province, and though he once suffered defeat, he participated in the triumph of his party, which was likewise the triumph of the cause they had been championing in 1848. From this time on to 1867 he held his seat continuously for Antigonish, but in the last named year he was defeated because he favoured the scheme of Confederation. In the meantime he had established a very high reputation at the bar; was elected president of the Bar Society, at Halifax, and mayor of that city. In 1849, he was created a Queen's counsel, and he accepted a seat in the Executive Council in the same year. In public life, Mr. Henry was never a truckler, nor can it be be charged against him that he ever surrendered his convictions to party neces-It was his shaping hand, says an authority before us, that led to measures for the protection of the fisheries, at the Gut of Canso, and other Canadian waters, from the inroads of American fishermen, that secured the province of Nova Scotia as complete a set of telegraphy as that of any part of the continent, and that in the face of great and stubborn opposition effected im-One of these, the portant legal reforms. Chancery reform measure, was adopted by the mother country; and in 1851 appeared the first edition of the Revised Statutes of Novo Scotia. Mr. Henry had previously carried the resolution of the house under

whi

and

of]

pro

adn

ther

in t

erni

was

he h secr

that

not

men

Hen

thol

done

only

his

the o

adm

gene

of th

pres

adop

conn

Low

New

carri ial.

with

persi

of co

a pr

meet

obje

Mari

atter

wher

In 18

gene

year,

this

time

to th

write

thing

He s

Would

a cor

diver

disda

who s

tion o

tence

in ref

Brun

he re

on, i

The same of the sa

...

which the work was prepared, and thus, under his guidance, Nova Scotia had the honour of being the first of all the colonies of Britain to carry out the great legal improvement. The revision of the work was so admirable as to draw from Lord Campbell, then chancellor of England, a high eulogy in the House of Lords. In 1854, the government was re-organized, and Mr. Henry was appointed solicitor-general, which office he held till 1857, when he became provincial secretary. At this period the cry was raised that Roman catholics in the province were not accorded the same treatment by government as the Protestants were; and Mr. Henry, who was representing a Roman catholic constituency, desiring to see justice done to all, changed sides, which was the only course open to him consistently with his duty. In the struggle which followed, the opposition was successful, and in the new administration Mr. Henry became solicitorgeneral. The year before he had been one of the delegates which went to England and pressed upon the Imperial government the adoption of a measure to build a railway connecting Halifax with the provinces of Lower and Upper Canada, being through New Brunswick. This idea was afterwards carried out, and the road is the Intercolonial. From 1857 to 1867, Mr. Henry acted with the Conservative party, and he was a persistent and able champion of the scheme of confederation, when that question became a practical one. In 1864, he attended a meeting held in Prince Edward Island, the object of which was a confederation of the Maritime provinces; and he subsequently attended the conference held in Quebec, when a draft of the constitution was made. In 1863, for a third time he became solicitorgeneral, holding that position until the next year, when he became attorney-general; and this portfolio he retained till 1867, at which time the administration was handed over to the provincial local government. As one writer has put it, Mr. Henry never had anything in common with the village statesman. He saw the immeasurable benefits, which would necessarily flow from union through a cordial linking of the scattered weak and diverse colonies; and he treated with just disdain the trammels of narrow minded men who saw in union nothing but the destruction of their own insignificant political existence. Mr. Henry was in London, in 1865, in reference to the Nova Scotia and New Brunswick railway, and in the following year he represented his government at Washingon, in discussing the continuance of the

on

ert

ber

en

788

ed

840

to

out

nd

٠x:

a

to

ti-

en

de

his

sts

ng He

ost

he

ise

en

on

for

ne

ad he

oy. el,

an er

esan es

Washington treaty. He likewise was a member of the London conference, which formulated the plan of confederation, and was one of two members who made the original draft of the Confederation Act. But the success of the confederation scheme as we have seen, cut off Mr. Henry's politial career, and he devoted his energies anew to his profession. He was offered a seat upon the Supreme Court Bench of Nova Scotia, by both Conservate and Liberal administrations, but declined. On October 8th, 1875, he was summoned to the Supreme Court of Canada. That position he still adorns, with his unblemished character, his integrity, and his great ability. Mr. Justice Henry has been married twice. He married first, at Nova Scotia, in 1841, Sophia Caroline, daughter of Dr. McDonald, Antigonish, she dying in 1845; and secondly, in 1850 to Christiana, daughter of Hugh McDonald, of Elmbank, Antigonish. He has lost seven children, and has one son by his first wife living; two sons and two daughters of the second union survive. This has been said of him, and said truly, so we reproduce it: "Socially the judge towers like a Saul. He shakes hands like a brother all the year round, and not at certain times only, like some candidates for office. His cordiality knows no ebb, it is always flowing at high tide, and the Dominion has no truer and nobler man."

Dowler, William Arthur, B.A., Tilsonburg, Ontario, was born at Manotick, near Ottawa, on the 26th of April, 1862. His father was the Rev. John Armstrong Dowler, from Carrick-on-Shannon, Ireland, and Mary, daughter of John Williams of Ottawa. Mr. Dowler arrived in Canada in 1840, settling at Huntington, in the province of Quebec, and during the first years of his residence in Canada, occupied himself as a contractor. Leaving the province of Quebec, he proceeded to Ontario, and feeling a call for spreading the gospel, entered the ministry of the Methodist church. Since then he has continued his ministrations in that denomination, and at the present time is stationed at Horning's Mills, Ontario. He had four children, and the gentleman who is the subject of this sketch was the second eldest. Another of the family was the Rev. W. J. Dowler, B.A., who is in charge of a congregation at Victoria, Vancouver Island, William Arthur Dowler British Columbia. received his first educational instruction at home, started to attend school when seven years old, and when eight years old took the first prize for the third book form in the town of Delta, Leeds, at the county ex-

When in his eleventh year he amination. entered the High school at Perth, and afterwards studied for a term at the Iroquois High school. Matriculating in his fourteenth year he entered the University of Victoria College at Cobourg, and completed his arts course before his eighteenth birthday, graduating B.A. In the latter part of 1880 he entered upon the study of law in the office of Messrs. Frost & Frost, of Owen Sound. In 1883 he took the position of manager in in the office of Lazier & Dingwall, barristers, Hamilton, where he completed his course. At his second intermediate examination he took one of the scholarships; and two weeks after his twenty-second birthday, he successfully passed his examinations for barrister and solicitor, standing well in both exminations. In 1884 he went to the town of Tilsonburg, where he began to practice at Already he enjoys a high reputation as a lawyer in the field of his choice. Shortly after his arrival at Tilsonburg he received the appointment of solicitor for the Federal In politics he takes a genuine interest, but so far has not given his adherence to any party. He is likewise known to feel deeply interested in municipal affairs and in education; and ere long he will, doubtless, be found turning his talents to account in some public position. He is a member of the Methodist church, and is unmarried.

Daniel Home, Stratford, Lizars, Judge of the County of Perth, Ontario, was born at the town of Renfrew, Scotland, on the 22nd February, 1822. He is a son of Daniel Lizars, of Edinburgh, Scotland, who married Robina Hutcheson. When our subject was in his eleventh year the family emigrated to Canada, and settled at Goderich, in the County of Huron, where Mr. Daniel Lizars subsequently held the office of clerk of the peace for the county. He died in March, 1876. The family, we may state, moved from Goderich to a farm in the township of Colborne, and here our subject resided for a period. Daniel Home Lizars attended school in Edinburgh and Renfrew, in Scotland, and completed his education in Goderich (Ontario) Grammar school. His education completed, he was not long in making up his mind as to the profession for which his tasks and intellectual qualities fitted him. He entered upon the study of law in the office of John (afterwards Judge) Strachan in Goderich, where he was remarkable for his diligence. At Hilary term, in 1853, he was called to the bar, and at once began his professional career as a practitioner in Goderich and Stratford, in partnership with John Strachan. The partnership lasted for five years, when Mr. Lizars was appointed county attorney (1858). His wide knowledge of the law, and his mastery of its principles, were well known, and when in 1864, it became known that he was summoned to the county bench, nobody was surprised, and one and all applauded the ap. pointment. He still retains this office. The Judge was appointed a master in chancery in 1877, and local judge of the High Court of Justice in 1882. He has a military career too to look back upon. He was a member of Captain Luard's company of volunteers at Goderich, in 1838; which company had styled itself the "bloody useless." He afterwards became lieutenant in the first battalion of the Huron militia. When Stratford became a town incorporate, a number of friends pressed Mr. Lizars to become a candidate for the mayoralty. He consented to run, but was defeated by Colonel J. C. W. Daly, by a very small majority. In this connection we may point out that he never has been an office seeker, and neither practised nor admired the methods by which too many seek political preferment. He became a member of the Oddfellows, Manchester Unity, in 1848, and was a municipal councillor for Stratford during 1856 and 1857. He married in July, 1848, Esther Longworth, daughter of John Longworth, of The family surviving consists of nd two daughters. The eldest Goderich. one son and two daughters. daughter is the widow of the late Mr. Justice Smith, of Manitoba.

N

Ţ

N

u

to

L

bı

B

ve

tin

at

ex

G

rit

he

br

aft

the

bo

joi

18 fai

rie

tair

Fu

Gray, Henry Alfred, Stratford, C.E., Engineer in charge of the Public Works department, Western Ontario, was born on the 21st November, 1843, at Edgbaston, near Birmingham, England. His father was Edmund A. Gray, for many years a prominent educationalist connected with the Anglican church. He was also an artist of considerable talent and repute, and many of his paintings were exhibited by the Society of Arts, of which He always encouraged he was a member. his son in drawing and sketching, and gave to him his first lessons in mathematical drawing. He died 7th October, 1857; and his wife died 24th January, 1852. The family from which Mr. Gray is descended is Scottish, and very old. His paternal grandfather was attached to the British embassy at Moscow, Russia, for a number of years. His brother was one of the firm of the original Broadwoods, piano-makers, London Mr. Gray jr., was educated under Doctor Charles Baker, at Doncaster, Yorkshire, and at Saltley College, near Birmingham, under Canon Gover, M.A.; and was intended for the ministry of the Anglican church, and at school he was remarkable for his studiousness. He showed a great inclination for the pursuit of art; nor was he content to catch his inspiration at second hand, for he was found in those days abroad in the field, with sketch book and "at nature's own lips drinking Not finding in himself a vocation for the ministry, he entered the service of the Midland Railway of England, where he served as a student, engineer, etc., under the general manager, Sir James Allport. In 1863, he terminated his connection here, and proceeded to Bombay, India, upon special He was stationed in the West Indies from 1864 to 1866; came to Canada in 1866, and joined the staff of exploration surveys of the Intercolonial Railway, and acted on surveys and location till 1871, as assistant engineer. In 1871, he was appointed by the commissioners engineer in charge of the construction of the Nova Scotia section of the In 1873, upon the completion of railway. the road, he was appointed engineer of permanent way, and held this charge till 1875. From 1875 to 1878, he was chief engineer of the Cape Breton Company's railways, completing the narrow guage line from Sydney to Louisburg; was also consulting engineer of the Londonderry Iron and Steel Works, Nova Scotia; and engineer in charge of the Western Counties' Railway construction in Nova Scotia. He was appointed to the Public Works department of Canada in 1878. under Sir Charles Tupper, and transferred to the department now under Sir Hector Langevin, in 1879. Mr. Gray designed and built the large college at Memramcook, New Brunswick, and several churches and convents in towns where he was stationed from time to time; and a splendid Gothic church at Truro, Nova Scotia, is the work of this extremely capable architect. In 1866, Mr. Gray became a Freemason of the Scottish rite, and held office in that association till he became a Roman Catholic. He was brought up in the Anglican church, but after leaving college, associated himself with the Swedenborgians, but never joined that body. After some years of study, he at last joined the Roman Catholic church, (May, 1857), and is now an ardent adherent to that faith, although not at all bigoted. He married Alice Lomer, second daughter of Captain George Lomer, late of the Royal Irish Fusiliers, on the 20th September, 1865. Her father was officer in charge of military oartner-

zars

His

tery

rhen

um-

was

ap-

The

cery

ourt

reer

hber

rs at had

He

first

trat-

ber

e a

ited W.

this

ever

rac-

ame

ster

nn-857.

ng-

of

s of

lest

Mr.

Ε.,

de-

the

ear

Ed-

ent

can

ble

ngs

iich

ged

ave

ical

and

nd-

ssy

on.

prisons, and died of yellow fever in 1863. This lady died in Cape Breton, on 7th February, 1879, leaving five children, one of whom, the second eldest, Edmund, was drowned in the same year. He married again, on the 12th May, 1880, Catherine McDonald, daughter of John McDonald, lumber merchant, Ottawa, and niece of Alex. McDonell, one of Canada's oldest contractors. There are no children by the second marriage. Mr. Gray has three sons and one daughter living; the eldest son, educated at St. Michael's College, Toronto, is now an officer in the Bank of Hamilton. Mr. Gray has not been lost in his profession by any means, and has given much of his time and a good deal of enthusiasm towards the promotion of education and other worthy He is a man of large heart and objects. cheerful disposition, and encourages manly sports, yachting and boating, in which he himself participates. He is a lover of music and of art, and an advocate of the legitimate drama. He is always ready to assist younger members of his profession.

Tytler, William, B.A., Head Master Guelph Collegiate Institute, Ont, was born on the 5th January, 1842, in the township of Nichol, near Elora, Wellington county, Ontario. His father was William Tytler, and his mother, Jane Inglis Forbes, aunt of Archibald Forbes, the celebrated special war correspondent. Mr. Tytler pursued his educational studies in the town of Elora, attending the Grammar school of that place, after he had passed the primary depart-A university course was planned, and he matriculated at the University of Toronto. His course here was characterized by industry, and he was especially distinguished in the classes for science and classics. He graduated in 1862, taking the gold medal for natural sciences. Mr. Tytler has likewise something of a military record. He has been a private in the Queen's Own, Toronto University Company, and has been a member of volunteer companies at Carleton Place and at Smith's Falls, Lanark county. The City of Guelph was the first to take advantage of the free libraries act; and in 1862, a library was established there, Mr. Tytler being secretary, and chief worker in connection with that in-He married on the 23rd July, stitution. 1879, Martha C. Harrison, younger daughter of Milner Harrison, of St. Mary's. He is a member of the Presbyterian church. We may say that Mr. Tytler at once turned his attention to the work of teaching upon graduation; and his record has been a very creditable one since he was head master of the Carleton Place Grammar school, during 1863 and 1864; of the Smith's Falls Grammar school, from 1865 to 1868; of the St. Mary's High school from 1869 to 1874; and was appointed head master of the Guelph Collegiate Institute, in February, 1875, which position he still holds. Mr. Tytler, it can be said without any exaggeration, stands in the front rank of the Canadian teaching profession. He is a sound scholar; and he brings both industry and enthusiasm into his work. When, in 1875, he assumed charge of the Guelph school, there were only twenty pupils; now there are found upon the roll not less than one hundred and eighty.

McLay, Peter Walker McMurrich, M.D., M.C.P.S.O., M. R.C.P.S., Edin., M.F.P.S., Aylmer, Province of Onbec, was born in Glasgow, Scotland, on the

12th August, 1845. His parents were Duncan McLay and Jane McMurrich. Mrs. McLay was a daughter of the late Duncan McMurrich, of Kilmarnock, Scotland, and sister of the Revs. Peter and John McMurrich, prominent ministers of the Church of Scotland. Mr. McLay, senr, occupied himself as a merchant in Scotland till the year 1854, when he emigrated to America, settling during the same year in the town-ship of Southwold, Elgin county. Here he began farming, and in such pursuit occupied himself till his death, which occurred in 1876, leaving a family of eight children behind him, the gentleman who is the subject of this sketch being the youngest son. Mrs. McLay died in 1878, being then at the ripe age of eighty-six. P. W. M. McLay received his primary educational training in his native town, but on arriving in Canada he entered the Grammar school at St. Thomas, where he concluded his studies. Thereafter we find him for a period teaching school at West Elgin, and again studying medicine in New York. 1866 he returned from the States and entered Victoria University, Toronto, and from this institution graduated M.D. in 1870; and during the same year passed a successful examination at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, in Kingston, receiving therefrom the degree of M.C.P.S.O. He immediately proceeded to the village of Aylmer, Ontario, where he began practice, continuing till 1872, when he resolved to gain a more extensive knowledge of his profession. Proceeding to Great Britain, he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons at Edinburgh, where he continued his studies for a

He then went to Glasgow, and between this and the last mentioned city spent a period of two years, obtaining his degree of member of the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons, Edinburgh, and graduate of the Royal College of Surgeons and Obstetricians of Glasgow. Having obtained these degrees, he remained for some time visiting in the great hospitals at London, Edinburgh and Glasgow, and in the winter of 1873 returned to Aylmer, where he established himself, and has continued in practice ever since. Reading so much of Dr. McLay's career, it will without hesitation be concluded that he has proven a success in his profession. And this is, indeed, the case. His very wide medical learning, and his experience in the great hospitals of the world at once gave him a standing among the front men of his profession; and to this he added energy of the most persistent sort upon his own account. Very soon he was known as one of the most successful practitioners in his province, and as the master of a well established and lucra-In 1866 Dr. McLay attended tive practice. the Military Cadet School at Toronto, and graduated therefrom. For eight years he has been a member of the High School Board at Aylmer, has been coroner since 1875, and is a Grand Trunk Railway sur-In 1877 he was elected councilman of the town, and was re-elected for the years 1878 and 1879. In 1880 he was elected reeve, and re-elected in 1881. He has been a member of the Grand Masonic Lodge of Scotland since 1872, and is an Oddfelloward a Forester, taking a very active part in promoting the interests of these organizations. In politics Dr. McLay is and has always been a zealous Reformer, and he has been president, secretary and treasurer of the local Liberal Association. He is a ready and exceedingly close debater, and has spoken rousing and telling words for his party upon a good many platforms. . He has been an extensive traveller, and is a student and lover of belles lettres. In this connection it may be said that he has met several of our modern poets, among these being Longfellow and Bryant. He was present, too, it is worthy to note, at the funeral of Charles Dickens. He is independent in religion, but is benevolent in his views, being always ready to throw the broad mantle of charity over the views of others, receiving only for truth that which will stand demonstration. He married, in 1871, Polly Ann, youngest daughter of David F. Davis and Mary Birdsall, both of Malahide, Elgin county, On-

sh

of

of

sic

su

gil

M

Aj El

be

an

gra

to

too

no

wa

La

15.

sur

con

ed

gra

and

loy

dur

latt sub

was

Lat

clas

Elg

stuc

sess

tori

Trir

Uni

of t

Apr

conc

Hos

exai

geor

the

Feb

Dr.

actic

he n

the

work

dent

for]

becar

No. 4

he fil

ward

of A

tario. The father of his wife is a highly respected citizen, and represented the township as reeve, and was likewise a member of the county council. In addition to these offices he is a magistrate, and he still resides at the old family homestead. Our subject, we have only to say in closing, is gitted with excellent social qualities.

be-

int

ree

si-

lu-

ns

ng

for

at

in

er,

n-

SO

out

en

in-

cal

eat

ıa

es-

he

nt.

ost

nd

ra-

led

nd

he

ool

ice

ur-

an

ars

ed

en

οf

nd

ro-

ns.

ys

en

he

nd

on

an

nd

it

ur.

wc

is

les

Marlatt, Charles William, M.D., M. C.P. S., Ontario, M. R. C. S., England, Aylmer, Ontario, was born in Yarmouth, Elgin county, Ontario, on the 24th September, 1845. He is a son of John Marlatt and Patience Jane Courser. His paternal grandfather, a United Empire loyalist, came to Canada from New Jersey, when a boy, and took up land from Colonel Talbot, near where now is situate the City of St. Thomas. was a captain of militia and fought at Lundy's Lane and Stony Creek, in the war of 1812-15. He likewise took an active part in the suppression of the rebellion of 1837, his company being in one of the most dissaffected parts of the province. His maternal grandparents came from New Brunswick, and were descended from United Empire loyalists, who came from Massachusetts during the revolutionary war. John Marlatt had a family of five children, and the subject of this sketch was the eldest. was educated in the common schools, and in Latin by private tutors; and took a firstclass certificate from the county board in Elgin, in December, 1864. He began the study of medicine in 1868, attending two sessions at the medical department of Victoria University and the final session of Trinity medical school, graduating at Trinity University, likewise passing the examination of the Medical Council for the province, in April, 1872. In May he sailed for Britain, concluding his medical studies at St. Thomas' Hospital, London, England, and passing the examination of the Royal College of Surgeons in November, 1872. He remained in the hospital, widening his experience, till February, 1873, when he returned home. Dr. Marlatt has never taken any specific action in political matters, for he finds that he needs most of his time and attention for the successful prosecution of professional work; nevertheless he has acted as president of the Liberal-Conservative Association for East Elgin since January, 1883. He became a member of St. Thomas lodge, No. 44 A. F. & A. M., in September, 1871; he filled the offices of secretary and junior warden in the same lodge, and was master of Alviston lodge, No. 323, for three years, was sent from the latter lodge as a representative to the Grand Lodge, and he went in a similar capacity in 1885 from Malahide lodge, No. 140. He has likewise been a member of the Oddfellows, and chief councillor in the Chosen Friends. The early years of our subject's life were spent in labour upon his father's farm, and it was only during the winter that he was enabled to attend school. Inclement days, when he could not work outside, and evenings not in his school period, were spent reading history, biography, works of travel, and such books generally as were to be found in the small libraries in the neighbourhood. How profitably he spent his time, and how wisely he read, will be inferred from the fact that when he reached his nineteenth year, he obtained a first-class teaching certificate. He taught school with very great success for four years; but after his return from England, in 1873, he began to practice medicine in St. Thomas. Here he remained till 1876, when he removed to Alviston, Ontario, where a wider field was open for one willing to endure the hardships of a new and rough country. He remained here for six years, during which the results of his exertions were most satisfactory; but his health had failed him, and he removed to Aylmer, where he might pursue his practice with less strain upon his constitution. His professional learning, his skill, and his geniality and kindness of heart, have contributed much toward our subject's fortunes; and he is now master of a very wide and lucrative practice. He has been very fond of manly games and sports, but has been obliged to yield his inclinations to professional claims, and he finds compensation in his well selected library. His religious convictions are those of Methodism. He married on July 16th, 1873, Jane, only daughter of L. S. Leonard, who was born in New York state, the family having originally come from Wales. After coming to America the family engaged in iron founding. Mr. Leonard afterwards moved to Canada, settling at Long Point; but after a time he went to St. Thomas, where, in connection with his brother, he established a foundry. He afterwards became very prominent in the industrial, political and social life of the commu-

No. 44 A. F. & A. M., in September, 1871; he filled the offices of secretary and junior warden in the same lodge, and was master of Alviston lodge, No. 323, for three years, and secretary for two years. In 1882 he

In 1857 he course in his native country. emigrated to Canada, resolved to seek his fortune in the colonies. A young man of his natural brilliancy, his ambition, and his excellent education, was not long in perceiving that there was plenty of room on the upper seats in the legal profession. This profession, it is true, is becoming over-stocked; but there is always plenty of room for the best men; and this, no doubt, was the way in which Mr. O'Gara looked at the case too. He studied law in the office of Mowat & Maclennan at Toronto, graduated L.B. at the University of Toronto, in 1861, and was admitted to the bar in the same year. When he achieved this the young barrister repaired to Ottawa, where he at once began to practice his profession. How successful he has been as a barrister it is hardly necessary to say, for Mr. O'Gara practices in every court in the Dominion. He is senior member for the firm of O'Gara & Remon, and the law business of this establishment is extensive and important. He is yet a young man, but his knowledge of the law is very wide and extremely sound, and no one could hesitate to place him among the most prominent practitioners at the Can-adian bar. His attainments as a lawyer are characterised by soundness of judgment, by close, clear reasoning, and a prevailing justness of logic. In 1863 he was appointed police-magistrate of Ottawa, and still holds that position, rendering justice with eminently judicial success, and with equity. In 1882 he was appointed a Queen's counsel. He was born, it may be said, in the Roman catholic faith, and still adheres to the faith of his forefathers. He married, in 1864, Margaret, daughter of John Bowes, architect The issue of this marriage is of Ottawa.

eleven children, three of whom are dead.
Gordon, William, Mayor of Stratford, is a native of Canada, of Scotch and English extraction. He was born on the 9th April, 1841, in the township of Woolwich, in the County of Waterloo, Province of Ontario, and near the village of Winterbourne. is the second son of John Gordon, who came to Canada in the year 1830, and settled in said township, in the year 1832, being one of our pioneer settlers. In 1838 he married Fanny Martin, eldest daughter of Martin Martin, architect, of Brighton, England, then a school teacher in the town (now city) of Guelph. He was the only son of John Gordon, of the city of Aberdeen, Scotland, who for many years carried on a large cabinet and house-furnishing business. William Gordon is one of a family of six children, all whom are still living-four sons and two daughters. Two of the brothers are farmers in Woolwich township, one on the homestead, the other on a farm near by. The youngest is a commercial traveller, residing in Winnipeg. The eldest sister is the wife of Dr. Douglass of Bruce county, and the youngest the wife of Frederick J. French, barrister, of Prescott and M.P.P. for South Grenville. The subject of this sketch was educated at the common school in the village of Winterbourne. He left home at fifteen years of age, and became apprenticed to the mercantile business, with Walter Holmewood, then doing a large gen. eral mercantile business at the village of Winterbourne, with whom he remained four After spending a year and a half at home and different places, he took a situation in the establishment of Hugh Moore, in the town of Dundas, with whom he remained four years; and he was subsequently in the estab. lishment of Mr. Corrie, then of Dundas, now of St. Thomas, for two or three years. During his residence in Dundas he took a prominent position as a member of the Pro Bono Club-a literary and debating society of considerable importance at that time in the town. He was secretary for two consecutive terms, and at the close of the second, was unanimously elected president, which position he also retained for two This club, at that time, was only second in importance in the province to the Ontario Literary Association, of Toronto, and had amongst its members Feytherston (now Judge) Osler; his brother B.B. Osler, now Q.C.; Hugh MacMahon, Q.C.; his brother, Dr. MacMahon, M.P.P., North Wentworth, and James Somerville, M.P.. North Brant, as well as many other men whose names might be mentioned, now filling high posts of honor throughout the United States and Canada. He left Dundas about the month of February, 1866, and opened a dry goods business in St. Mary's, having bought out the stock and business of James McQuaig, now of Toronto. In October of the same year, he married E. Jennie Quarry, eldest daughter of the late John Quarry, ex-mayor of Dundas, and continued to do a very large business in St. Mary's, till 1870, when he removed to Stratford, where he continued in the same lin of business for some years alone, and in conjunction with John J. Clark, now deceased. In January 1871, his wife, by whom he had three children, died; one of the children died prior to its mother, and another about sixteen months afterwards. The eldest, now

e

ri

ez

da

W.

ar

m

ve

ho

fo

ac

te

ea

ag

to

COI

ree

In

the

ele

ele

The

and

of l

resi

ted

tion

wel

mai

now

he o

year

tate

ness

the

for 1

exan first tain

reac

The

outse

of a

and

and 1

to lea

was r and

vario

came

prom

serva

Mr.

early

politic

P

a boy of eighteen years, is, a student in the Collegiate Institute, and is a lad of considerable promise. In 1879, Mr. Gordon married again to Mrs. Carrall, widow of the late Jas. Alexander Carrall, barrister, and ex-mayor of the City of Stratford, and third daughter of the late Col. W. F. McCulloch, who was one of the first settlers of Stratford, and the first mayor of the town. He is a member of the English Church, but not a very regular attendant. From early boyhood he has been an ardent supporter of Reform principles, and has always taken an active part in elections in all municipal matters of importance; is a fearless, forcible and earnest speaker, having at all times the courage of his convictions. He was first elected to the Stratford council in 1880, after a hot contest. In 1881, he ran for the third deputy reeveship, but was defeated by fifteen votes. In 1882, he contested the mayorality, and was again defeated. In 1884, he again entered the lists, and after fighting one of the hotest election battles ever seen in Stratford, was elected mayor by fourteen of a majority. The election took place on the 7th January, and that very day was the 14th anniversary of his landing in Stratford as a permanent resident. In January, 1885, he was re-elected mayer by acclamation. His administrations of the affairs of the office have been so well and impartially discharged that even many of his then strongest opponents would now be among his warmest supporters, should he offer for a third term. For the last ten years, he has been doing a large real estate, money lending, and insurance business, and is one of the largest tax payers in the city.

wo

ers

ne-

'he

ing

ife

he

ch.

ıth

ras

he

n-

al-

'n-

of

nr

on

Plumb, Hon. Josiah Burr, Senator for the Dominion of Canada, offers a rare example of a gentleman who in middle life first entered politics, and in a few years attained an eminence in parliament which few reach after a lifetime of political struggle. The Hon. Mr. Plumb had, however, at the outset of his political career, the advantage of a long experience in banking, railways, and other important business of a public and responsible nature—so that he had little to learn when he entered political life—and was ready to apply a vast fund of knowledge and experience to the discussion of the various political and social problems which came up in parliament. He at once took a prominent place as a member of the Conservative party in the House of Commons. Mr. Plumb is an American by birth and early training. His knowledge of American politics and public men is unequalled by any other Canadian statesman, -while as a loyal British subject, by choice and preference, he stands forth as a type of many educated and sensible Americans, who feeling that blood is thicker than water,—find no difficulty in renewing their older ties of natural allegiance, and making their home in the Dominion of Canada, among their kinsfolk, the descendants of the United Empire loyalists, who preserve the purest type and the best characteristics of the original colonists of the United States. Mr. Plumb was born at East Haven, Connecticut, the son of the Rev. Elijah Griswold Plumb, of Farmington, and of Grace Hubbard Burr, of New Haven, in the same state. father of Mr. Plumb was ordained in 1807, as priest in the Episcopal church of the United States, by Bishop Jarvis of Connecticut, and was the descendant of an early settler of that state, who came from England, and members of whose family held representative offices in the colony prior to the revolution. On his mother's side Mr. Plumb descends from Colonel Andrew Burr, of Fairfield, whose ancestor came from England in 1630, and was the joint purchaser from the Indians, with William Pyncheon and Henry Smith, in 1636, of lands which now include the site of the City of Springfield, Massachusetts. Among the ancestors of Colonel Andrew Burr, were John Burr, senator, who died 1694; Peter Burr, chief justice of the superior court of Connecticut, speaker of the lower house, senator and member of the Governor's council. He His son, Aaron Burr, was died in 1724. president of Princeton college, and father of the celebrated Colonel Aaron Burr, vicepresident of the United States. Colonel Andrew Burr, the immediate maternal progenitor of Mr. Plumb, was member of the lower house for Fairfield, from 1727 to 1747, speaker from 1741 to 1745, member of the upper house from 1746 until his death in 1763. In 1755 he was appointed, with three others, to assist the governor and council in regard to raising forces for the defence of the King's just rights and dominions in North America. He commanded the forces of Connecticut in the famous siege and conquest of Louisbourg, in 1745, one of the most daring and successful military expeditions on record, which a handful of colonists carried to completion against a fortress which the French had hewn out of the solid rock, and strengthened by the best engineering devices employed for twenty-five years, until it was supposed to be impregnable. But the hardy and resolute colonists landed their forces and siege trains, and took up their position in the face of the enemy; Colonel Burr's command being conspicuous in the most advanced and danger-After twenty-five days of furious ous post. bombardment, aided by a small British squadron, under Admiral Warren, Louisbourg and the island of Cape Breton surrendered on the 16th June, 1745. Colonel Burr and 350 of his command were detailed for garrison duty in the captured fortress. By the treaty of Aix La Chapelle, in 1748, Louisbourg was restored to the French. was again finally besieged and taken by Wolfe and Amherst in 1758, a victory which cleared the way to Quebec, and led immediately to the conquest of Canada. The gallant part taken in the first siege and capture of Louisbourg by Mr. Plumb's ancestor well deserves to be commemorated here. Mr. Plumb was largely engaged in banking, and in the early railroad enterprises in the United States. He was for many years manager of the State Bank at Albany, N.Y., and a leading director in several banks in Buffalo and Oswego. He was one of the committee of eight to whom was entrusted the consolidation of the several railways of the State of New York, which form now the New York central line and which were merged into a single corporation. In the winter of 1861, Mr. Plumb was placed by a great representative meeting of the Democratic party of the State of New York on a committee to confer with the slave states on the Northern border, with a view of preventing, if possible, the impending conflict. Although an active member of his party, Mr. Plumb neither held nor sought public office of any kind. Mr. Plumb married, in 1849, the youngest daughter of the late Colonel Samuel Street, of Niagara Falls, sister of the late Thomas Clarke Street, member of parliament for Welland. She died in 1868, leaving six children. The eldest, Thomas Street Plumb, took a high stand at Rugby, graduated with honours at Baliol, Oxford, and was called to the bar from the Inner Temple, in 1876. He was a member of the law firm of McCarthy, Hoskin & Osler, Toronto. He died early in May, 1885, having attained a high reputation in his profession, which promised him its highest honours. The second son, Frederick, was educated at Rugby, and Christ Church, Oxford, and married the youngest daughter of the late Senator Dickson, of Niagara. The third son, Duncan, was educated at Rugby, and is the manager of the Globe Cattle Company in the Western ter-

Mr. Plumb's eldest daughter is ritories. married to Christopher Robinson, Esq., Q.C. Toronto, and his second to Mr. Charles Rose, Professor of Modern Languages at Hobart College, N.Y. His youngest daughter is living at home. Mr. Plumb's first entrance into public life was at the general election in January, 1874, when, with great reluctance, he accepted the Conservative nomination for Niagara, upon a requisition signed by a majority of the voters of the constituency. He was elected, but unseated, and re-elected by a far larger majority over In this parliament Mr. his opponent. Plumb's great political and financial abilities were speedily disclosed, and he was regarded as a very able and rising member of the House of Commons. In the electoral campaigns of 1877-78 he accompanied the Hon. Sir John A. Macdonald, at his request, through Ontario and the Eastern Townships of Quebec, where he distinguished himself as a brilliant and powerful advocate of the policy of protection for Canadian industries and of the Canadian Pacific Railway, the two questions to be submitted to the new parliament. The elections of 1878 were a great triumph for the Conservative party, although it happened that both Sir John and Mr. Plumb were defeated. Mr. Plumb, however, on petition, obtained his seat for Niagara, and his opponent, Mr. Hughes, was unseated and disqualified. In that parliament Mr. Plumb took a prominent part in the debates and business of the house. He was chairman of the special committee on the Hon. Mr. Mackenzie's railway contracts between Fort William and Red River. In 1880, Sir Leonard Tilley having made the budget speech, he was selected to reply to Sir Richard Cartwright, in place of Sir Charles Tupper, who was prostrated by ill-In the bill for readjusting the constituencies, in 1882, Niagara and Cornwall were merged in their respective counties of Lincoln and Stormont. Mr. Plumb was, by that measure, deprived of his old seat for Niagara. The local candidate having unexpectedly resigned in North Wellington, Mr. Plumb was nominated for that riding, and defeated by twenty majority. His usefulness was too great to admit of his retirement from public life. He was called to the Senate prior to the meeting of the new parliament, in January, 1883, and took his seat as a member of that body. As a senator he was distinguished by his urbanity and judicial rectitude upon all the questions that came before the house, and made several exhaustive speeches which are not easily to be for-

0

tl

ol

ch

te

ha

an

80

an

fer

th

Aı

cit

Ph

pir

wa

bet

dor

and

Bri

far

care

ano

fuln

have

pub.

Can

have

Mr.

write

two

perso

an ei but

best

and.

ready

with

conve

to sha

sesses

dowe

memo

and e

once o

at fau

page o

others

gotten. One upon the Canadian North-West. containing comparative statistics in regard to the growth and productions of the Western States with the climate, soil, and other capabilities of our great territory. He spoke also on the Dominion finances and upon the loan bill of 1884. One of his best efforts was his speech upon the Senate, in 1885, with analysis of the constitution and composition of that body. His speech upon the Indian Franchise, at the close of the session of 1885, was most able and convincing. In that speech Mr. Plumb showed an amount of knowledge of Indian history, and of the character and present condition of that interesting people which professed students have rarely attained. Mr. Plumb warmly and convincingly advocated the claims of the settled Indians to the electoral franchise, and few will now dispute the justice of conferring upon these people, who are among the oldest subjects of the Crown in North America, the civil and political status of citizens of our Dominion. In politics Mr. Plumb is a Conservative, loyal to the Empire and to the Dominion. He is one of those far-seeing statesmen who look forward with hope to a closer bond of union between the mighty and ever-growing kingdoms, dominions, provinces, principalities and powers which compose the gigantic British empire. This brief memoir has so far only touched the public and political career of the Hon. Mr. Plumb. another side of his character known in its fulness only to his intimate friends, who have often to regret that the exigencies of public life have kept out of the arena of Canadian literature a name which would have been one of its brightest ornaments. Mr. Plumb is as ready and accomplished a writer as he is a speaker and debater. These two qualities, which rarely meet in the same person, are found united in Mr. Plumb in an eminent degree. He has written much. but published very little, and that not the best of his various compositions. An original and comprehensive mind, much reading, ready wit, and power of expression, infused with true literary flavour, make Mr. Plumb's conversation the delight of those privileged to share in it. One faculty Mr. Plumb possesses in a degree which few men are endowed with, and which all might envy. memory marvellous for its retentiveness. and equally facile in yielding up everything once committed to its keeping. It is never at fault, but always open to him like the page of a printed book. Words said by others, events, persons, names, poetry,

Q.C.,

arles

es at աշհ-

first

neral

great

ative

ition

the

ated,

over

Mr.

bili-

s re-

er of

toral

uest,

hips

aself

the

tries

the

new

re a rty, ohn

mb.

för

hes.

par-

part

use.

ttee

con-

ver.

the

y to Sir

ton-

by

for

on,

ng,

prose, facts and figures, never vanish from his mind as they do in time from most men. Things never get mixed, and never refuse to come promptly to his call when needed. One of the elements of Mr. Plumb's power in parliament is the readiness and exactness of his quotations and references to words and opinions expressed by his opponents. His facts and figures are never at fault, or inaccurate. His cleverest opponents, although they may dispute his opinions, have learned that there is no confuting his statements, or challenging his facts. His power of bringing order out of confused questions, and his method of simplifying complicated public accounts, are the admiration of his friends, and made him one of the most trusted and trustworthy members of either House of Parliament. Mr. Plumb's oratory is of a high order, well fitted for great public debates, although equally cogent and persuasive, when used in the minor discussions and addresses of social life. His language is refined and copious, flowing freely and naturally, and never failing to grasp the very inmost core of the question under examination. He is still in the vigour of life and power of intellect, a man whom, if he be spared, the country will learn to honour the more it comes to know him. Mr. Plumb is an enlightened and liberal member of the Church of England, connection with which has been inherited by him from a long line of religious ancestors. His loyal grand-uncle, the Rev. Dr. Hubbard, rector of New Haven, Connecticut, before and during the revolution, for more than half a century, was remarkable for his firm adhesion to his duty. He refused to discontinue the customary use of the prayer book in his parish, and in spite of persecution and personal danger ceased not to pray publicly for the King during the whole war. Mr. Plumb has for many years been a member of the diocesan synods of the church, and one of its most efficient and useful members. He was, in 1883, one of the representatives of the Canadian synod at the general triennial convention of the Episcopal church in the United

Clarke, Charles Fitzwilliam, Tilsonburg, Ontario, was born at Ballinasloe, County Galway, Ireland, on the 26th Sept., 1839. His father, William Clarke, was connected with the Bank of Ireland at Ballinasloe, and afterwards lived the life of a retired gentleman; but in 1851 he decided to try his fortune in Canada, and in that year took passage on an ocean ship, arriving in Toronto, where he remained till his death,

He was a brother which occurred in 1861. of John Clarke, late of Waterford, Ireland, but now an official of Dublin Castle. The educational training of the subject of this sketch was very careful; he had, at first a private tutor in the person of Mr. Maynard, of the Upper Canada College, and afterwards attended the higher schools. When he reached his sixteenth year, he had made up his mind to devote his life to law; and accordingly entered the office of Duggan & Burns, Toronto, where he remained for a period of two years. He then entered the office of Cayley, Cameron, & McMichael, Toronto, and later on he went with Mr. Vankoughnet, where he concluded his studies. In 1862 he was called to the bar, and he at once established an office at Toronto, where he began practice. Very soon he was satisfied of what he had surmised before, namely, that a city like Toronto, swarming with young practitioners, and having so many men of established and eminent repute, was not the most desirable place for a beginner who has ambition to be at the front. It was not that Mr. Clarke shirked the contest of forcing his way through the legal throng; but he knew that Blackstone himself, under like circumstances, must necessarily remain for a considerable period in legal obscurity. He removed to the town of Clinton, and established himself there; and in that place he continued to practice At the expiry for a period of six years. of this time, he went back again to Toronto, where he remained for about two years; and then, after careful deliberation, resolved to establish himself at Tilsonburg, Oxford county, where he has remained ever since. His success has been considerable; for he is now one of the foremost lawyers of that town and the master of an important and lucrative practice. Mr. Clarke is an Oddfellow, and likewise a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen. His religious faith is that of the Church of England. He married in February, 1864, Grace Madora Thompson, daughter of the late Joseph Thompson, of Millbrook, Victoria, Ontario; and by this lady has a family of two children. Clarke is a man of very great energy, and he likewise has the repute of being widely and soundly versed in the law.

Claris, George Thomas, St. Thomas, Ontario, was born at Buffalo, N.Y., on the 21st of January, 1848. His father, John Claris, was the eldest son of John Claris, of London, England, a prominent member the London Stock Exchange, who was born in Canterbury, England; and his mother,

Jane McLachlin, eldest daughter of Captain McLachlin, was born at in London, Ontario. Mrs. Claris, senr., died on the 14th of April. 1853, and Mr. Claris, senr., on 9th October. 1856. This worthy couple were married in October, 1845, and there was an issue of two children, Jennie Rosina and George George was left an orphan at Thomas. the age of eight years, and went to live with his uncle, George Thomas Claris, who was appointed by will, his guardian and trustee. He resided at St. Thomas, Ontario, and was treasurer of the County of Elgin, up to his death, in 1873. During his lifetime, he was one of the most prominent financial men of St. Thomas, and was connected with several important public and private enterprises in the county. George Thomas Claris received a careful education; at first attending the common schools of St. Thomas, and afterwards, in 1863, graduating at the Grammar school in that city. When in his fifteenth year he left school, and now felt an inclination to learn the wholesale furnishing business; and with this end in view set out for Chicago, where he entered the wholesale house of the late firm of George E. Newman & Co. He left this firm in 1866, and proceeding to Buffalo, entered Jewett's wholesale boot and shoe manufacturing house, as assistant book-keeper. He remained in Buffalo till 1869, during which time he had become bookkeeper, and afterwards cashier at Jewett's, enjoying the highest record of the head of the house, and of all with whom his position brought him into contact. In 1869, he resolved to try his own fortune, and returned to Chicago, where he entered into partnership with B. Rogers, in gents' furnishings, the firm being known as Claris & Rogers. The undertaking met with considerable success, but in 1871, came the great fire, and their establishment was swept away. After the fire, he returned to St. Thomas, where he engaged in private banking and brokerage; and in such employment he has continued ever since. His business is now of large proportions, and it is established solidly, and with the highest re-In 1872, in connection with Messrs. Weldon and Pendleton, Mr. Claris erected the Opera House Block, in St. Thomas; and in the following year bought out the interest of these gentlemen in the property. From political sides, he has always held aloof; and in religion he is, and always has been a member of the Church of England. He married, in 1879, Carrie Augusta, daughter of A. G. Smythe, of London,- fai

Ve:

frc

go

tha

18

Sw

du

the

gen

car

was folk

fath

of I

reac

Can

side

the

enga

at R to W

1845 suits

for 1

moth

Sove

early

Beck

man,

mana

Beck

in his

of all

living

Leam

only i

retros

ceived

his stu

wise a

College

and r

tered a father. 1862, v

terest.

Mr. D.

bought

the ma

sold ou

He res

a banl with L.

L. Becl

transact

has gro

l

Ontario, government immigration agent; and has a family of two children. The family of Mr. Claris, it may be said, is a very ancient one. They originally came from Switzerland, and one ancestor was a governor of a province called Glarus, in that country. Glarus, it may also be stated, is the old spelling of the name. From Switzerland the family went to France, but during the persecutions of the Huguenots, they fled to England. Mr. Claris is a gentleman of remarkable energy, and his

otain

ario.

pril.

ber.

d in

e of

orge

h at

with

stee.

was

his

, he

ncial

cted

vate

mas

at

St.

nat-

city.

lool.

the vith

here

late

left

alo,

hoe

ok-

B69.

ok-

t's,

ead

his 869.

re-

nto

ur-

з & sideat career shows how industrious he was Becker, Leaman, Waterford, Ontario. was born in the village of Waterford, Norfolk county, on the 13th August, 1836. His father, Barton Becker, was born in the State of New York in the year 1800. When he reached his twenty-fifth year he removed to Canada, settling in Waterford, where he resided for several years, thereafter moving to the village of Rockford, in which place he engaged in milling operations. He stayed at Rockford some years, but returned again to Waterford and resumed milling there. In 1845 he engaged in general mercantile pursuits, and carried on an extensive business Our subject's for nearly twenty years. mother was Harriet, daughter of Morris Sovereign, of Waterford, and one of the early pioneers of that place. In 1862 Barton Becker retired from the business, and Leaman, the subject of this sketch, assumed the management, the firm being known as L. Becker & Co. Mr. Barton Becker is now in his eighty-fifth year, but is in possession of all his faculties; and his wife is likewise living. There was a family of five children; Leaman being the fourth member, and the only son of the family. We shall take a retrospective glance at his career. He received a good English education, concluding his studies at Berea College, Ohio. He likewise attended Bryant & Stratton's Business College at Buffalo. In 1858 he left school and returned to Waterford, where he entered as a clerk in the establishment of his father. In such capacity did he remain till 1862, when he bought out his father's interest, and entered into partnership with Mr. D. R. Foster. In 1865, however, he bought Mr. Foster's interest, and continued the management alone until 1878, when he sold out, and retired from active business. He rested for five years, and then opened a banking establishment in partnership with L. H. Slaght, with the firm name of L. Becker & Co.; and the partners now transact a general banking business, which has grown to considerable importance, and to be of great convenience to the commu-Mr. Becker is a Freemason, and has held the highest positions in the lodge, No. 113. Waterford. He also has been a member of the Grand Lodge. He is likewise a Workman, and is master of the Waterford lodge: is a Royal Templar, a member of the Canadian order of Home Circle, and a trustee in the Supreme Lodge, Home circle. He has travelled much, having visited the principal places in Canada, the United States. Great Britain and Europe. He is a member of the Baptist denomination. He married, in 1864, Mary F., daughter of Leonard Sovereign. Mr. Becker has not given a great deal of attention to politics, but he makes choice of the principles of the Reform party. He was a shareholder and director in the Waterford and Simcoe Road Company; and was one of a syndicate of five which purchased the road. He remained part owner till the sale of the same to the municipalities in 1884. Mr. Becker is a social favourite; is agreeable and kindly in manners, and is a patron and practiser of healthful outdoor sports. He is a man of the highest integrity of character.

Joy, Sylvanus, M.D., Tilsonburg, Ont., was born on July 4th, 1833, at Utica, in the State of New York. He is a son of David Joy, who emigrated from England to New York, and of Theresa Hodgkiss. David Joy owned and operated the York cotton and woollen mills situated near Utica. After retiring from business, he held several county offices in Jefferson. He died in 1861. Mrs. Joy died when the subject of this sketch was yet a child. Sylvanus Joy received his preliminary educational instruction in the common schools of Jefferson county. When he reached his tenth year, he went to Lafargeville academy where he remained for a period of two years, and then spent a year and a half at the Black River Institute. Watertown, New York, and a period of two and a half years at Union College, Schenectady. When he reached his sixteenth year he resolved to adopt the medical profession, and in preparation for that end attended the University of New York. From this institution he graduated M. D. with honours; after which he officiated at Bellevue Hospital, New York, for two and a half years as house surgeon. In 1854 Dr. Joy concluded to try his fortune in Canada, and in that year entered Queen's College, Kingston, from which he graduated in 1856. Since that time the successes which he has achieved in his profession have been many. He has been for twenty-five years associate coroner of the County of Oxford; is staff surgeon of the Great Western Railway of Canada; was county surgeon for five years. In 1880, he conceived the idea that sugar might be manufactured from sorghum, grown in this latitude, feeling that should such an enterprize succeed, much might be saved to the Dominion, both by adding a new industry as well as in the purchase money paid to foreign countries. He was the prime mover in organizing a joint stock company to test the feasibility of the undertaking; and travelled over a considerable portion of the west and south where sorghum and the sugar cane is grown, to gain practical information upon the subject. When he returned home he completed the organization of the company, of which he became president, and expended $14,000, in the purchase of the latest and best approved machinery. The first year bid fair for great success, but failure to secure a crop the succeeding years, on account of climatic influences, caused an entire failure of the scheme. In 1865 Dr. Joy undertook vine growing and propagating for wine purposes; and for the past ten years has cultivated about twenty acres of grapes, which have yielded an annual production of ten thousand This wine was awarded a gallons of wine. diploma for excellence of quality at the last World's fair held in Paris, France, and has become familiar and favourably known throughout the Province of Ontario. has also the largest apple orchard and general fruit farm in Ontario, situated about three miles from Tilsonburg, where extensive vaults have been erected. In 1855 Dr. Joy became a Freemason and for several years occupied the master's chair; and subsequently he associated himself with the Royal Arch Chapter in Woodstock, Ontario. His travels have been extensive, and include a visit to leading cities in England, France and other portions of the Continent. From youth up he has been a member of the Church of England. In 1855 he married Miriam, daughter of the late John Mark Collver, of the township of Townsend. The issue of this marriage was two daughters, one born in April, 1857 and the other in November, 1858. The eldest displayed a great talent for music, which was thoroughly cultivated under the best masters in America. She was married in September, 1876, to Dr. J. T. Moore, who is now one of the leading physicians in Minneapolis, Minnesota. He holds the position of dean of the Minneapolis College of Physicians and Surgeons, also of the Minnesota College of Pharmacy, located in Minneapolis; and he occupies the chair of Theory and Practice of Medicine in the College of Physicians and He was likewise one of the pro-Surgeons. moters and organizers of both institutions. The youngest daughter, Ida Joy, displayed a very marked talent for painting in oil, particularly portraits; and who, after utilizing all the best instructive talent in America. was sent to Europe, where she remained under the best masters for nearly eight years, during which time she distinguished herself by her ability, receiving medals for paintings exhibited at five of the great Salon exhibitions in Paris and at Dragvignan in Southern France, and at Caen in Eastern France. For a painting at the Royal Albert exhibition in London, England, she also received another medal. Before her return home with her mother, (who remained with Miss Joy during the whole time of her absence,) she travelled through France, and visited the Belgian Art galleries, and those at Venice, Naples, Florence and Rome, making copies from several of the most celebrated works of the old masters. She has but recently returned to Canada, and is beyond question one of the most noted and acomplished artists in America. Since coming to Canada Dr. Joy's life has been spent in the County of Oxford and his time chiefly devoted to the practice of medicine and surgery. He has acquired a provincial reputation, and one of the most extensive practices in the province, having patients constantly in charge from places even beyond the Dominion of Canada. In public Dr. Joy gives his adherence to the Conservative party, and he is a sturdy and effective worker for the cause in his own locality. He is the very embodiment of energy, is learned and popular in his profession and altogether a man of broad and professional sympathies.

b

C

ki

18

tr

b€

of

tra

an

m

w8

th

Gl

se(

ste

bu

and

sul

tra

but

ito

ly į

test

me

the

by 2

for

is a

gres

he :

rega

bulv He

the

trod

groc

Ryan, Peter, Toronto, Ontario, was born at Carlisle, County of Cumberland, England, on the 23rd August, 1842. He is a son of Bernard Ryan, born on October 12th, 1812, in Ryan's Town, near Newry, in the County of Down, Ireland; and his mother was Susannah (Tait) Ryan, born at Carlisle, January 6th, 1819. Mr. Ryan's maternal grandfather was an officer in the Rifle brigade, and fought under Wellington in the Peninsula campaign and at Waterloo. He was Scotch, and a sturdy Wellingtonian Peter Ryan was educated at the Church school at Carlisle, and at a private school in Whiteham, Cumberland. Mr. Ryan has no military record; for if he had it would give the contradiction to his convictions. He believes in the abolition of war, being in this respect a follower of Joseph Sturge. He has taken a very active part in municipal affairs in Toronto, and was alderman for St. George's ward from 1879 to 1883. In addition to his own business connections, he is a partner in the Joseph Hall Agricultural Works, Oshawa, and a woollen merchant. With respect to Mr. Ryan's political convictions we may state at once that he is an advanced radical and a thorough believer in the soundness of free trade and direct taxation. He is a follower of Edward Blake in the Dominion policy, and a follower of Oliver Mowat in provincial politics, and a pronounced reformer generally. Mr. Ryan has travelled extensively through Great Britain, and claims to know England better than any other man in Canada. He is a member of the Roman Catholic church; his father held the same faith, but his mother was an adherent of the Church of England. He married at Ormskirk, Lancashire, England, on the 11th July 1861, Margaret McConnell. He left school young, and engaged in the horse and cattle trade, assisting his uncle, who was a Cumberland mountaineer of the immense stature of six feet eight inches. He subsequently travelled through England as an auctioneer and hardware dealer from fair to fair, and market to market, having a number of large wagons or vans lighted up with gas. At the time of the American war, he made a handsome fortune running the blockade on Glasgow and Liverpool steamers; and subsequently did business on the Hull line of steamers, owned by L. C. Kearson & Co., but the greater part of these were captured and lost, and with them the gains of our subject's early years. He came out of the transaction about £1600 worse than nothing, but though offered a settlement by his creditors, he refused to compound and ultimately paid all his debts with interest. He contested West Toronto against the present member, James Beaty, Q.C., who was at the time mayor of the city, but was defeated by 236 votes. Since that time he has offered for no parliamentary position. Mr. Ryan is a gentleman of the widest and-most progressive ideas. Himself a Roman catholic, he not alone accords the right of private judgment in religious matters to others, but regards the differences in religious form as bulwarks of religious and political liberty. He has been a life-long abstainer, and was the first member of the city council to introduce the bill for the separation of the grocery and liquor trade which became law be of

and

pro-

ons.

ed a

par-

zing

rica,

ined

ight

hed for

alon

n in

tem

bert

also

nrn

with

her

and

hose

me,

nost

She

ıd is

oted

ince

been

ime

cine icial

sive

ents

he-

blic

rva-

tive lity.

y, is and

onal

was and,

le is ober

wry,

n at

an's the

> ton loo.

> > the

Mr.

had

the year after. He is one of the vice-presidents of the Reform Association of Toronto, and is one of the readiest and most powerful platform orators to be found in the whole ranks of the Liberal party. During election time his services are in high demand, and the sledge-hammer work usually falls to his share. He is unquestionably a forcible speaker; and has that trick of gesture which none but the born orator ever re-When delivering a phrase or an epithet, Mr. Ryan has the art of sometimes seeming to throw physical weight into his oratorical blow, doing this by a sudden sway of his body, or swing of his arm, He is highly endowed with the quality of being ble to think on his legs, and when he is sometimes wrought to a high pitch, denunciation or contention comes from him like a torrent of fire. He is a man with a clean escutcheon, with splendid abilities, and is pretty certain to be heard from some day in high political quarters.

Innes, James, Editor and Publisher of the Guelph Mercury, M.P. for South Wellington, was born in Huntly, Aberdeenshire, Scotland, on the 1st February, 1833. After leaving school, he adopted the profession of school teacher, and successfully devoted himself to the work in Scotland for five years. In 1853 he left his mother country, and came to Canada, and adopted journalism. He began his career in the Globe office, Toronto, and was afterwards engaged on the Banner, Hamilton, now the Times, and on the Colonist, Toronto. 1861 he went to Guelph to edit the Advertiser, and the following year took charge of the Mercury, and has edited and published this paper ever since. This journal, it is almost needless to say, has a high standing among the Reform papers of O tario. At the last general election Mr. Innes was returned by the Reformers of South Wellington as their representative in the House of Commons, and there is no member in that house who tries more to advance the interests of his constituents than he does. Mr. Innes was for seventeen years a school trustee, and was for some time chairman of the Guelph Board of Education, and also takes an interest in many public en-terprises. Mr. Innes married in London, England, September, 1873, Helen Gerrard, widow of Jonathan Date, planter, Granada, West Indies, also a native of Aberdeenshire; and if any of Mr. Innes' old friends should visit his comfortable home in the City of Guelph they are sure to receive a true Highland welcome.

Hale, Horatio, Clinton, Ontario, is a native of the United States, who has been long resident in Canada. He is a lawyer, but is chiefly known in both countries as a The following writer on scientific subjects. account of his earlier life, before his removal to Canada, is condensed, with some slight alterations, from the sketch in Dr. Allibone's "Critical Dictionary of English and American Authors," published in 1859:—"He is a son of the distinguished authoress, Mrs. Sarah J. Hale, and of the late David Hale, a leading lawyer of Newport, N. H. He graduated at Harvard in 1837, where he was so highly distinguished for his aptitude in the acquisition of languages, that whilst still an undergraduate he was selected to fill the post of philologist to the United States exploring expedition, commanded by Captain Wilkes. The result of his learned investigations will be found in vol. vii.,- 'Ethnography and Philology,'-of the series of works which compose the history of that noble enterprise. Mr. Hale's intelligent labours have elicited warm commendation from highly respectable authorities, both at home and abroad." The distinguished English philologist, Dr. Latham, in his recent work on the "Natural History and Varieties of Man," remarks that Mr. Hale's work contains "the greatest mass of philological data ever accumulated by a single inquirer." The following lines from the American Journal of Science give perhaps as good an account of this great work as could be conveyed in a brief description:-"The first 225 pages are devoted to ethnography, or an account of the customs, religion and civil polity, and origin of the natives of the several countries and islands visited by the expedition. remaining 440 pages comprise the philology of the same regions. The various dialects of Polynesia are treated of under the general head of a comparative grammar of Polynesia, followed by a Polynesian lexicon. guages of the Feejee Islands, the Kingsmills, Rotuma, Australia, and the northwest coast of America, and some dialects of Patagonia and Southern Africa come next under consideration. We feel assured that a glance at the work will excite surprise in all at the amount of information collected, and pleasure at the system and perspicuity with which the whole is presented." After the completion of this work, Mr. Hale visited Europe and other portions of the eastern continent, and on his return was admitted to the bar. He is now engaged in the duties of his profession, but occasionally finds time to contribute an essay on his favourite theme to some periodical in this country, or in Great Britain.' To the foregoing sketch may be added some omitted dates and other particulars. Mr. Hale was born on May 3. 1817, in Newport, N.H., and was admitted to the bar in Chicago in 1855. He married in the previous year, in Jersey City, Mar. garet Pugh, daughter of the late Wm. Pugh. Esq., J.P., of Goderich township, in the county of Huron, Canada West. Mr. Pugh was of English birth, and was one of the earliest settlers in that county, where he purchased a considerable tract of land. Wearying of the hardships of an emigrant's life, he removed, with his family, in 1837. to the United States, where he soon afterwards died. In 1856, the land which he had purchased in Canada had become valuable by the progress of settlement, and, at the request of the heirs in England and the United States, Mr. Hale assumed the charge of it. He finally took up his residence on the estate, which is now included within the limits of the flourishing town of Clinton. He has since devoted his time partly to professional pursuits, and partly to scientific investigations, chiefly in languages and in that attractive and important study of recent growth, known as anthropology, or the "science of man." In the course of these inquiries he has visited various Indian tribes in Canada and the United States, and has carried on an extensive correspondence. The results of his researches have appeared in the transactions of learned societies and in some separate publications. The most important of these is an octavo volume, entitled "The Iroquois Book of Rites," which appeared in 1883, in the "Library of Aboriginal American Literature," edited by the distinguished ethnologist, Dr. D. G. Brinton, of Philadelphia. The basis of this work is a curious manuscript-or rather two manuscripts-in the Mohawk and Onondaga dialects, relating to the origin, laws and ceremonial usages of the Iroquois confederacy. These manuscripts, whose composition dates from the last century, were discovered and translated by Mr. Hale, who has prefaced his version with a full account of the Iroquois The eminent historian, Dr. J. G. people. Shea, says of this work : "It is a philosophical and masterly treatise on the lroquoislesgue and the cognate tribes, their relations, language, mental characteristics and policy, such as we have never had of any nation of this continent." A description of the "Tutelo" Tribe and Language," published originally in the Transactions of the American Philosophical Society of Philadelphia, in March, 1883, n li tl n M w n le of m M m th ab

As ing ed ris

an

its Bla ing

erd

(18 eric

An

οî

alre

logi

Per

Eng

Buf

beer

in i

Can

and

tion

Clin

char

were

chair

pres

these

pond

auth

tions

large

schoo

out t

great

porta

mote

was t

into

and v

allow

gives the interesting and really romantic history of a small tribe of Indians, who formerly resided in Virginia and North Carolina, and thence migrated northward, through Pennsylvania and New York to Canada, where the last survivors were found by Mr. Hale, and, to the surprise of ethnologists, were proved, by their language, to be connected with the Dakotas of the far west. In 1882, Mr. Hale, as a member of a committee of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, which met in that year at Montreal, took part in organizing the first meeting of the section of Anthropology in that association; and, somewhat remarkably, two years later, in the same city, he was one of the committee of the British Association, which organized the first meeting of the like section in that world-renowned society,—an evidence both of the recent rise and progress of this branch of science, and of the position held by Mr. Hale among its cultivators. A report by him on the Blackfoot tribes was read at the last meeting of the British Association, held in Aberdeen, in September, 1885. He is now, (1885), one of the vice-presidents of the American Association, and president of its Anthropological section. He is a member of many learned societies besides those already named,—including the Anthropological Institute of Great Britain, the Anthropological Society of Washington, the Pennsylvania Historical Society, the New England Historic-genealogical Society, the Buffalo Historical Society, etc. He has been a frequent contributor to periodicals in the United States, Great Britain, and Canada, on scientific and literary topics, and has taken particular interest in educational matters. Through his efforts the Clinton High School and the Clinton Mechanics' Institute and Library Association were established, and he was for many years chairman of the High School board and president of the Institute. While holding these positions he gave much time to correspondence and interviews with the Ontario authorities, and to the circulation of petitions to the legislature, which resulted in largely increased public grants to the high schools and mechanics' institutes throughout the Province, and in legislation which greatly enhanced their efficiency. One important result of the legislation thus promoted by Mr. Hale, it may be mentioned, was to secure the admission of female pupils into the high schools, on the same terms and with the same advantages which were allowed to male pupils,—a privilege which

r in

etch

ther

у 3,

tted

ried

Mar.

ugh,

the

ugh

the

∠ he

and.

nt's

837,

ter-

he alu-

, at

and

the

esi-

ded

n of

ime

y to

ges

ıdy

ese

bes

has

ce.

red

l in

im-

tit-

ap-

ri-

he

on,

ÍS

ıu-

ia-

re-

y.

tes

nd.

ed

G.

h-

8-

18,

of .

lo•

in

had previously been denied to them. Mr. Hale has also taken part in various public enterprises, and, in especial, was chairman of the committee which secured the means for the construction of the London, Huron and Bruce Railway—a successful work, which has added largely to the prosperity of the fertile and rapidly improving district through which it passes.

Thompson, John, Tilsonburg, Ontario, was born in the town of Wigton, Cumberland, England, on the 25th June, 1821. He is a son of Isaac Thompson and Mary Pape. Mr. Thompson was a farmer in England, and cultivated the same farm for many years; but in later life became the keeper of an hotel. He died in 1858, leaving a family of five children. The subject of this sketch was the only son. He received a common school education at Wigton, England; but when he reached his thirteenth year, he was apprenticed to George Studholme, harness-maker. In 1840, having finished his apprenticeship, he began to work as a journeyman; but in 1843, being full of ambition, opened an establishment of his own. After a time he removed to Brampton, England, but the road to fortune here was slow; and lured by the fair reports that now and again reached his ears from the colonies, he set sail for Canada, arriving in due time in Hamilton. He worked for a short period as a journeyman, but during the following year began business for himself in Tilsonburg as a harness-maker. He has continued ever since in the occupation, and his industry, his patience, his courage in the face of the most circumscribing difficulties, have won for him ample success. He might well retire now from business, and spend the remainder of his life upon his creditably won gains; but he is too active to be still. He has seen many ups and downs in his career, and one instance we cannot forbear relating, viz., that when he commenced business for himself, his entire capital consisted of thirty-three dollars in cash, and three sides of harness leather. But what a capital of pluck the man must have had! He served for four years in the volunteer service in England. In 1867, he was elected a member of the school board for the town of Tilsonburg; and this office he held for nineteen years. In 1874 he was elected councilman for the same town, and has served in this capacity for eleven years, and was four years in the county council. In 1885, he was elected reeve of the town. Being a man of a large public spirit, he has been actively connected with a number of public enterprises. He has been a Freemason for twenty years, and has held several offices in King Hiram lodge, No. 78, Tilsonburg. When in England he was connected with the Manchester Unity Oddfellows. In political questions Mr. Thompson has always taken a deep interest, and he gives his steadfast allegiance to the principles of the Liberal-Conservative In religion, he is a staunch adherent of the Church of England. He married, on the 25th March, 1848, Margaret, youngest daughter of the late William Miller, of Wigton, Cumberland, and grand-daughter of the late Isaac Thirlwell, of Grape Rigg, Cumberland, England. There has been nine children by this marriage. Joseph Thompson, the second eldest son, assists his father in the management of the business. The late John Thompson, the youngest son of our subject, who died in 1882, was known through the country as a singer of much power and culture. Himself and his brother were in the habit of taking part in most of the local concerts under the name of the "Thompson Brothers." Throughout the neighbourhood this young man was respected and beloved, and his early death was widely and deeply mourned. Thompson, the eldest, is engaged in carrriage trimming in Tilsonburg. Joseph Thompson, the second eldest son, in 1885 visited his parent's relatives in Europe, travelling through England, Ireland, and Scotland. Meanwhile, our subject continues at the head of his business enjoying respect and good will.

Hope, William, M.D., Sheriff of Hastings, who was born on the 15th January, 1815, near Belfast, in County Antrim, Ireland, was the son of John Hope, who was married to Ann Forsyth of the same county. Both families, as the names indicate, were originally from Scotland, but they had been settled in Ireland for 200 years before this century began; and for several generations they had been engaged in the manufacture of fine Irish linen. 1822 John Hope came from Ireland to Kingston, Canada, with his family. The fact that the trip from Montreal up the river occupied three weeks, gives one a glimpse of the state of things in this country in those days. Robert Hope, now of Newburg, the eldest son of the family, went into business as a general merchant in Bath, then a place of some importance. William was clerk for him for some years, but having decided to study medicine, he went to Kingston, and for some time had the advantage of attending a school taught by Mr. Jeffers, father of the Rev. Dr. Jeffers, 3 man whom Dr. Hope recollects as being possessed of much of the intellectual power. which has since distinguished his gifted son. He completed his general studies at the Kingston Grammar school, then taught by a Mr Baxter, a famous teacher of those days. under whose rod most of the professional men of the time in the Midland district passed in their youth. Young Hope then went into the office of Dr. Samson of King. ston. This gentleman had a reputation throughout the Upper Province for skill, such as could hardly be acquired in these days by any medical man. He had come to this country before or during the war, as surgeon to the 104th, and on the removal of that regiment from this country, he was induced to resign his commission, and settle in Kingston, twelve of the principal families there entering into a regular contract to pay him £25 each a year for his life, thus securing him an annuity of £300, an income which was very much augmented by his extensive general practice. Mr. Hope studied and saw practice with him for several years, attending lectures meanwhile at the University of the State of New York, where he graduated M.D. in January, 1838. took out his license under the Medical Board of Upper Canada in the following April. Dr Hope at once settled in Belleville, where for forty-three years he devoted himself assiduously to the practice of his profession. His extensive, and in the earlier days of bad roads, very laborious practice, did not, however, engross his whole attention: everything that made for the improvement of the community, had not only his sympathy, but his active support. He was for years a member of the old board of police, and when our municipal system came into operation, he was for a long time a member of the town council; he was mayor in 1860, when the Prince of Wales visited Canada, and lay off Belleville on a lake steamer for some hours, but, for reasons which need not now be entered upon, did not land. Dr. Hope was for many years a school trustee, and was largely instrumental in introducing the free school system into Belleville, the first municipality in which it was established in Upper Canada. The writer has often heard Dr. Hope speak of the cordiality with which he and the present minister of customs, the Hon. M. Bowell, worked together in this matter, though in matters of general politics they were as far apart as men could be under our free ge Se ed Dr he

aig apj Ha

and

bee

def

exa

yea bre

den

hon

on r

mar

the :

Her

Win

vice

rem

from

Hop

from

has

presi

nized

of the

came

temp

the p

just

cours

life a

Liber

it in e

hope

Was e

ahade

unself

appoir April,

he had a kind

Sir F

80 mu

1837-8.

mitage

His fa

Head,

curate .

cated

first-cla

low of

by natu

He

constitution. Dr. Hope was appointed surgeon to the county jail by the Quarter Sessions when the county was first established; he was also surgeon to the Deaf and Dumb Institute from its beginning; he held both these appointments until he resigned them on becoming sheriff. He was appointed surgeon in the second battalion of Hastings militia in 1847. The writer holds a commission in the same bloodless corps, and is proud to know that if they have never been led to victory, they have never suffered defeat. He was a member of the board of examiners of the Medical Council for the vears 1871 and 1872; and his professional brethren elected him for many years president of the Belleville Medical Society, an honour which he resigned into their hands, on retiring from active practice. Dr. Hope married in 1843, Augusta, only daughter of the late Sheriff Spencer, of Northumberland. Her only brother is George B. Spencer, of Winnipeg, who organized the customs service in Manitoba and the North-West, and remained at its head until his retirement from active service a few months ago. Dr. Hope was a member of the Bible Society from its first organization in Belleville, and has been several times, and is now the president of that branch. He early recognized the unwisdom of the drinking usages of those days, and nearly forty years ago became, and has ever since been a pronounced temperance man. One familiar only with the public sentiment of to-day, can get no just idea of the moral courage of such a course at that time. Dr. Hope was all his life a consistent and active member of the Liberal party: he clung to it and fought for it in every vicissitude of its fortunes without hope of reward or regard for defeat, and it was esteemed by his fellow citizens of every shade of politics as a graceful recognition of unselfish devotion to principle, when he was appointed by Mr. Mowat's government in April, 1881, sheriff of the county, in which he had lived so long and so worthily.

Mr.

ing

er.

on.

ng-

Mr.

ys, nal

rict

aen

ng-

ion

ill.

ese

me

οŧ

tle

ies

Head, Sir Edmund Walker, was a kindred of the impulsive and enthusiastic Sir Francis Bond Head, who came in for so much criticism during the rebellion of 1837-8. Sir Edmund was born at the Hermitage, near Rochester, Kent, in 1805. His father was the Reverend Sir John Head, M.A., seventh baronet and perpetual curate of Egerton, in Kent. He was educated at Oriel College, Oxford, taking a first-class in classics. He also became a fellow of Mereton College. Sir Edmund was by nature a student, and through his industry he became a man of varied knowledge, and possessed considerable culture. studied politics much as he studied Sophocles or hydrostatics, that is to say, accurately, logically, or, better still, scientifically. He even so far concerned himself about two words, "shall" and "will," as to write a book upon them. This, of course, the writer does not cite by way of admiration ;-a man who goes around the world with a microscope in his hand must needs, when giving up hislabours, leave a large portion of creation that he has not seen at all. A German professor devoted his life to writing about the five Cases, and his greatest regret, when upon his death-bed, was that he had not confined himself to the Nominative case. An article written by young Head in the Foreign Quarterly Review attracted the attention of the Marquis of Lansdowne, who suggested to the clever young writer that he ought to study ecclesiastical law. The advice was accepted. He was subsequently appointed to an assistant poor-law commissionership, at a salary of £1,000 per annum. His administration was so satisfactory that he was soom appointed commissioner at a doubled salary. In 1838, upon the death of his father, he succeeded to the family title. In the same year he married Anna Maria, daughter of the Rev. Philip Yorke. In 1847, he was appointed lieutenant-governor of New Brunswick, which position he held till 1854, when he became governorgeneral of British North America, succeeding Lord Elgin. He was not very long in Canada before he found out that he was getting into hot water. It was a bone of fierce strife between the Conservatives, under John A. Macdonald, George E. Cartier, and others, and the Liberals, led by that uncompromising and powerful reformer, George Brown. It was during his administration that occurred what is known as the "doubleshuffle." He would not bend to the wishes of George Brown, and strove hard to demolish the contentions of that leonine reformer by a state paper which is one of the cleverest among the minor papers that we have in Mr. Brown and his followers at-Canada. tributed certain unworthy motives to the governor-general, because he would not grant a dissolution; and it was even said that a judge of the bench leagued himself with the tories, and gained possession of Sir Edmund's ear. Never has viceroy been assailed with such harsh criticism as was he-He died at his town house in Eaton square, London, on the 28th of January, 1868. By his death the baronetcy became extinct.

Farrer, Edward, Chief Editorial Writer of the staff of the Mail newspaper, Toronto, was born near Castlebar, County of Mayo, Ireland, in the year 1850. The name in Connaught is generally written "Farragher." Mr Farrer received a most careful educational training, and after having passed through primary institutions entered Stoneyhurst College, England. Having terminated the regular course here, he proceeded to Rome, where he completed his education. When he had attained his twentieth year (1870) he came to Canada; was for a time on the editorial staff of the Daily Telegraph, and upon the establishment of the Toronto Mail, in 1872, joined the editorial staff of that paper. He rethe editorial staff of that paper. He remained with the Mail till 1881, when he went to New York, engaging there as foreign editor of the World. This connection lasted for a little better than a year, when strong inducements held out to Mr. Farrer prevailed; and he proceeded to Winnipeg, remaining there for two years as editor of In the fall of 1884, the Times newspaper. he returned to the Mail, Martin J. Griffin, librarian of the Parliamentary library of Canada, being then chief writer of the editorial staff. On Mr. Griffin's retirement, Mr. Farrer took the leading place, and at the present time occupies that position; Christopher W. Bunting being the managing director of the paper. Mr. Farrer, who is a very finished scholar, has made much careful study of the language of our Indian tribes, and the kindness of Archbishop Tache has opened many desirable doors to We are promised, him in this direction. that, should Mr. Farrer find time, he will some day put the result of his researches in Indian philology into permanent shape. would not be a sketch of Mr. Farrer which failed to make mention of his ability as a writer, and the individualities of his style. We may at once get at the main point of the matter by saying that he is, beyond writer connected question, the ablest with the political press of Canada. There is not, so far as our observation goes, another journalist amongst us whose judgment and tact can at all times be relied upon with such confidence as his. Although his writing is by no means devoid of passion and fire, these are so admirably tempered, and held within check, that the skill of the man never loses its sway. As for his literary style, there is no exaggeration in saying that it is admirable; and it is a cause for surprise to those who are at all judges of literary matters, how, in the hurry which his position must necessarily impose on him he can pay such attention to his art, The chief characteristics of Mr. Farrer's sentences are their sheer directness, their absence of wordy adornment, the fitness and nicely judged aptness of the epithets used and with all these qualities there is an exquisite lightness of touch, which brings the most overwhelming sentences to you upon tip-toe. There is a sober cadence, a serious. ness and a dignity through all his serious subjects; and the unobtrusive, but potent rhythmical balance of his sentences so please the ear, that one likes to linger over It has been Mr. Farrer's lot his periods. to occupy the first chair of the Mail during more than one important occasion. When we adopted a national policy, reformers cried out that such a measure would endan. To our subject is ger British connection. attributed the retort on the morning following, "Then so much the worse for British connection." In the late pitiable outburst occasioned by the execution of Louis Riel, Mr. Farrer's pen has been used in such a way in the Mail as to delight every conservative who has read, and to win, as we believe time will show, many a reformer to the ranks of conservatism. The article headed, "A Grave Crisis" is, in our judgment, the ablest, the justest, and the most convincing, that we have ever read in a Canadian news-

Wright, Rev. Joel Tombleson. Rector, St. James' Church, St. Mary's, was born at Upwell, Isle of Ely, England, on the 16th March, 1834. His mother was of Huguenot descent, and for several generations, the family, on his father's side, had resided on and managed their own estate in the Isle of Ely. While an infant, the subject of our sketch was left an orphan, and at an early age was placed in the care of the Rev. Robert Reynoldson, of Wisbeach, Cambridgeshire, England, receiving a liberal education. The lad remained under this tutorship for nine years, afterwards residing successively in Norfolk, Cambridge, and Essex counties, until the year 1855. He then came to Canada, repairing to Oxford county, Ontario, where, while under the pastoral care of the Venerable Archdeacon Marsh, he concluded to enter the ministry of the Church of England, and, after due study, was admitted to holy orders by the Right Rev. Benjamin Cronyn, at the opening of Christ Church, Chatham, Ontario, in 1861. The following The following year, he was admitted to the order of priesthood by the same bishop, in St. Paul's Church, London. He was incumbent of

to S hold year paris Gotl and solid reno and He v suit d stitu clerg the p by the ation a pro power tion o points able to tion (held th the tru ject to tees. case a incorpo the pow tion of Vice-Ch court, in favour, Court of case to t of the ju Chancell the judge being du tiff. No case to ti Council & associatio not only church, b favour of equity. and reach ber, 1884. man cont synodical out prece ical churd still in stat

Wright pu

tional gov

Wa

cou

Wardsville and places adjacent in Middlesex county, for over eight years; then removed to St. Mary's, Ontario, becoming the rector of St. James' church. This pastorate he still holds, and has held for a period of fifteen During the incumbency of his first parish, he took part in the erection of three Gothic brick churches at Newbery, Glencoe and Bothwell. At St. Mary's, the plain but solid stone church underwent alteration and renovation at a cost of six thousand dollars, and ranks among the finest in the diocese. He was plaintiff in the celebrated Chancery suit of Wright vs. the Synod of Huron, instituted on behalf of himself and the other The action was for clergy of the diocese. the purpose of determining the nature of the Clergy Trust, which had been created by the clergy at the time of the secularization of the Clergy Reserves; and to obtain a proper construction thereof, as to the power of a corporation in the administration of a trust committed to it. The main points were, whether the synod was amenable to its constitution, and the determination of the tenure upon which the clergy held the appropriation of an annuity under the trust-whether as a vested right, or subject to the same being diverted by the trustees. The importance and magnitude of the case arose from the circumstance, that all incorporated societies were concerned as to the power they possessed in the administration of trust funds committed to them. Vice-Chancellor Proudfoot, in the Chancery court, interpreted the trust in the plaintiff's favour, which judgment was reversed by the Court of Appeal. The plaintiff carried the case to the Supreme Court, and, whilst two of the judges were in favour of the Vice-Chancellor, two were in favour of sustaining the judgment of the Court of Appeal, a fifth being dubitante, decided against the plaintiff. Notice was then given to appeal the case to the judicial committee of the Privy Council of England, and for this purpose an association was formed. The sympathy, not only of the members of the English church, but of all Christian bodies, was in favour of the plaintiff on the ground of equity. The case was commenced in 1881. and reached the Supreme Court in December, 1884. The circumstance of one clergyman contending single-handed against a synodical body for so long a time, is without precedent in the annals of synodical church government. The case is still in statu quo. In the year 1879, Mr. Wright published a work on Constitutional government and Synod legislation, which received wide and careful attention. He has filled the office of grand chaplain to the Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons, having been elected at Ottawa in 1883, his mother lodge being Albion, No. 80, G. R. of Canada. He lectured and preached upon the morality of Freemasonry; and a sermon upon "The Hearing Ear" was published at the request of St. James' lodge, No. 73, This address was and widely circulated. a defence of the principles of the order. He was married, on March 15th, 1860, at Portland, Maine, U.S., by the Rev. Dr. Burgess, afterwards bishop of the diocese of Quincy, Illinois, to Annie Ind Wells, of Fulbourn, Cambridgeshire, England, a member of the family of the well-known English brewers, Ind, Cope & Co., Romford, Essex, and cousin of the Rev. James Ind Weldon, D.D., and Rev. Edward Ind Weldon, late head master of Tunbridge school, Kente England, the former subsequently being rector of a parish in the County of Kent, and canon of Canterbury Cathedral. Her brother, John Wells, M.A., was for some time head master of the High school, Allahabad, India, instituted for the higher education of the sons of native gentlemen, and under the direction of the Calcutta Diocesan Church Society. The family consist of three children, two daughters and a son. Wright, it only has to be said in conclusion. is a gentleman of extensive and varied reading; he is a sound scholar, a close reasoner, a good platform speaker, and an effective preacher. He is soundly orthodox, and a faithful adherent of the Evangelical school. He is popular among all classes, and as a gentleman enjoys high esteem. An official of the Masonic order, he receives the high regard of the craft.

Score, Richard John, of the firm of Score & Sons, Tailors and Furnishers, Toronto, was born in Toronto, on the 9th of March, 1842. He is a son of Richard Score and Harriet Curtiss. The subject of this sketch pursued the first portion of his educational studies in the Toronto schools. After leaving the Grammar school, he attended the Academy at the old town of Niagara, conducted by the Reverend T. D. Phillips. After completing his education, he associated himself in business with his father, who had been a pioneer in trade during the days when Toronto was known as Muddy York. By the strictest attention to his business, and by a very marked capacity for commercial enterprise, the junior member in this old-established industry succeeded in spreading the business of the house through all the provinces of the Dominion, till at this moment the establishment is one of the largest retail importers of furnishings and fine woollens in the coun-Mr. Score is a gentleman of large public spirit, and he is a member of the Toronto Board of Trade. Though he has never specially identified himself with the affairs of party, he is an earnest, steadfast Conservative, and has frequently declined nomination for a place on the school board and in the civic council. He has. however, devoted his attention largely to Sunday-school work, and he has for the last four years been superintendent of the Elm street Methodist Sunday-school, one of the largest schools in Canada, having an average attendance of 525 persons. He is also one of the board of managers of Elm street church. Mr. Score married Clarissa, second daughter of Thomas Metcalf, one of our oldest and most worthy citizens, and has issue four sons and two daughters. two eldest sons are asseciated in business with their father, Roiston, William H., Toronto, was born in the City of Toronto, on March 27th, 1841. He is a son of William Rolston and Sarah Jones. His parents were married in 1838, at Toronto. William Rolston, senior, learned the trade of carpenter and builder in Longford, Ireland, in which county he was likewise born. In 1837, he Ín 1837, he sailed for Canada, landing in Toronto, and shortly afterwards he took part in the Mackenzie rebellion, upon the loyalist side, acting as an ensign. He, with his brother John, who emigrated with him, soon found employment with the firm of John Ritchie, builder, and at this business, and in the same firm, the two continued for no less than nineteen years. During the Southern rebellion, they crossed over to the American side and entered into the employ of the War department in building pontoon bridges for the Northern army. Ìmmediately upon peace being proclaimed, they returned to Toronto. Our subject's father then entered into partnership with his brother, John Rolston, in a small carpenter and jobbing business, and remained so until his death, which occurred in 1870. Rolston died in 1858. Young Rolston, our subject, was educated in the City of Toronto, attending the Model school for a period. When in his fifteenth year, he was set to learn the trade of mason and bricklayer, in the employ of Worthington Bros., and he was employed in the building of the University of Toronto. In 1863, master of his trade, he left Toronto and went to Barrie, as contractor for the building of the residence of Dalton McCarthy, M.P. When Mr. Rolston was in Barrie, being an expert in setting boilers, he was engaged by W. E. Dodge & Co., Williamsport, Penn. U.S., to set the boilers in their mills on the Maganetawan river, north shore of Georgian Bay. After his arrival at the head of the Maganetawan, it took him seven days on snowshoes to reach his destination. From this we learn something of the difficulties to be surmounted by contractors in those days. and the energy and perseverance necessary to make a successful life. He remained in Barrie, engaged as a builder, until 1878, when he went to Buffalo, U. S. While in this city, he was in the employ of the municipality, as inspector of Bird av. In 1882, he left Buffalo and anada. He then accepted a enue sewer. returned to Canada. contract from John Livingston, for the erection of the Bolt works at the Humber, a suburb of Toronto, and he concluded the contract in 1883. He was employed during the following year by the city council of Toronto, as inspector of sewers; and while he held this position, the well-known Garrison creek sewer came under his supervision. Some time afterwards, he severed his connection with the city, and began for himself as builder and contractor. Mr. Rolston belongs to the Ancient Order of United Work. men, to the Oddfellows, and to the Sons of Canada. He is secretary of Toronto lodge. S. O. C., No. 3. In his youth he attended the Episcopal church, but in later years his religious sympathies have led him into Methodism. He is a sturdy Conservative in politics, and has held office several times in local associations. He married, on the 16th December, 1863, Harriet Rosetta Holdsworth, daughter of John Holdsworth, a resident of Barrie, and one of the oldest and most respected residents of that town.

be H

at

of

wa.

and

tic

Αu

he

ma

tre

in

left

duc

pre

184

Can

maj

biog

scrib

duri

der

troo

their

Arch

ship

plant

gall,

tory

cours

gover

He a

law i

to his

abilit

men

large

and h lishma

tion.

one m ject of

behalf

pointm

express

gentler

Govor

tember

at a lu

quarter

was pr

Smith.

ministe

upon w

under

took pl

was elec

the peor

ed confid

capacity.

Girard, Marc Amable, St. Roniface, Manitoba, was born at Varennes, a village fitteen miles distant from Montreal, on the 25th of April, 1822. He is French by descent, and his ancestors were farmers. The homestead whereon he was born still exists, and has lasted for 200 years. His grandfather lived there for sixty-two years, and his father for sixty years a married life. M. A. Girard at first attended the parish school, but subsequently entered college at St. Hyacinthe. When he left Varennes, in 1870, he was captain of the reserve in his military district. Once through college he chose as a profession the law. In the beginning of 1839, he signed articles of clerkship with the late Honourable M. Lacoste, a notary, practising at Boucherville, and afterwards a senator of the Dominion. In February, 1844, he was called to be a notary of Lower Canada, and returning to Varennes, began to practice his profession, continuing to do so till August, 1870. During these twenty-six years, he filled the position of county councillor, mayor of Varennes village, and secretarytreasurer of the school board, and he was in possession of all these offices when he left his native place for Manitoba. He induced Sir George Cartier to accept the representation of the County of Verchéres, in 1847, and accepting this advice, the great Canadian statesman was elected by a good majority. To write at full length the biography of M. Girard would be to describe the condition of the country before, during, and after the first rebellion under Louis Riel. After General Wolesley's troops had frightened the rebels out of their stronghold, the Honourable Adam G. Archibald was invested with the governorship of the newly-acquired province, sup-planting the Honourable William MacDougall, whose official connection with the territory was so disastrous. Mr. Archibald, of course, found it necessary to establish a government and arrange chaos into order, He at first set about putting the Manitoba law into operation; and to do this called to his aid two gentlemen of experience, ability and prudence. One of the gentlemen called, was Alfred Boyd, a man of large means, and now resident in England; and he was chosen because he was an Englishman and to represent the English section. Amongst the French people towered one man, and he was M. Girard, the subject of this sketch. He was summoned on behalf of the French people, and his appointment was received with unmeasured expressions of satisfaction. These two gentlemen were sworn in members of the Govornor's Council, on the 17th of September, 1870, and immediately afterwards, at a lunch in the Hudson Bay Company's quarters, the toast of the new government was proposed by the Honourable Donald A. Smith. The lieutenant-governor with his ministers had now to determine the basis upon which the new province would begin under the law. The first general election took place in December; and M. Girard was elected by acclamation for St. Boniface, the people having come to feel unbounded confidence in his wisdom, integrity and

rrie,

resi-

Mr.

t in

W.

nn.,

the

gian

the

on

om

s to ¥78.

es-

re-

un-

S.

οť

a7-

nd

l a

ec.

n-

he

o-

he

on

n.

elf

k-

of

d

h

Senate, and nominated senior member of the North-West Council; and hereupon he resigned his place in the local government, the Honourable M. Royal taking the vacated place. In 1873,—the Honourable Mr. Morris being now lieutenant governor of the province-after a vote of want of confidence in the administration had been passed, M. Girard was called upon to form a government and did so. "The first constitutional government," says an extract from an ably written and published letter before us, "was formed under the leadership of M. Girard. As I remarked in a previous letter that gentleman is such persona grata to all parties, that on this and subsequent occasions, his high character and personal popularity afforded the means of forming a government to pass the important measures then before the house, and carry on the public business until matters had so shaped themselves as to enable the formation of a permanent cabinet." At one time, when he had withdrawn from the local legislature, the Honourable M. Cauchon, lieutenant-governor of Manitoba, with M. Norquay, as premier, telegraphed to M. Girard at Varennes, offering him a place in his government, and this gentleman accepted the Provincial secretaryship, subsequently becoming Minister of Agriculture. It was in the latter capacity that he presided upon the organization of the first provincial Board of Agriculture. As above stated, M. Girard was senior member of the North West Council, as long as that body existed, and it was his brain that devised much of the most important early legislation for that new and important portion of our His advice as an administrator has always been characterised by breadth of view, by extensive acquaintance with the subject in hand, and by a broadly patriotic spirit. In the Senate his career has been an active one. An amendment of his to a bill before the chamber, was carried providing that the French language as well as the English, should be used in the public and official documents. The change of the Pacific Railway from the narrows of Lake Manitoba to the south of the said lake, is in great part due to the efforts made by a special committee of the Senate, which was formed at his request, and over which he presided during two consecutive sessions. M. Girard was appointed to the bar of Manitoba in 1870, and he was the first president of the St. Jean Baptiste Society, capacity. In 1871, he was called to the tion and Selkirk Agricultural Society. and president of the Society of Coloniza-

was married in 1878, in the Cathedral of Montreal, by Bishop Fabre, to Marie Louise Aurelie La Mothe, widow of the late Alfred Versailles; and he has had two children by this marriage, one daughter and one son; the girl is living yet, but the boy died in Varennes, in April, 1883.

Dobson, James, one of Toronto's oldest and most esteemed citizens, was born in Mohill, County of Leitrim, Ireland, in 1810. His father was Matthew Dobson, and his mother Ann Park. This worthy couple came to Canada at the close of the French wars, the father of Mr. Dobson having been a soldier, and served for nearly twenty-one years in the British army, retiring with a quarter-master's pension at the end of that period. When James Dobson was seventeen years of age, he was bound as an apprentice to Francis Irwin, architect and builder, Carrick-on-Shannon, Ireland, and faithfully served a period of seven years. On the completion of his apprenticeship, about 1834, he sailed for Canada, and after his arrival, spent some time in the eastern part of the country, and the following year came west, and found employment with the late George H. White, in Yorkville, now part of the City of Toronto. After spending some time in Canada, he removed to New York, where he remained for a short period, and again took up his abode in Yorkville, purchasing a house and lot a little south of where the old town hall now stands, and began to work at his trade. He had not been long settled here when the rebellion of 1837 broke out, and Mr. Dobson took up arms on the so-called loyal side, joining a company of volunteers under the captaincy of Walter McKenzie, with John Hillyard Cameron as lieutenant. Peace having been restored, Mr. Dobson returned to his business. At this time things were very different from what they are now in Yorkville. The population of the village did not number a great many, yet the moral and religious welfare of the rising generation was sadly neglected, there being no schools, and only one small frame church, erected by the Primitive Methodists. Mr. Dobson generously gave up his house-while a new church was being built -for religious purposes, and for a Sundayschool. He also assisted greatly to have a school and temperance hall erected, and succeeded in his laudable work. Mr. Dobson, having succeeded in amassing a considerable amount of property, retired from the building business in 1851, and opened a store for the sale of merchandise, being also made postmaster for the village. In 1863. Mr. Dobson was made a justice of the peace for the County of York; in 1868 he was made a commissioner for taking affidavits in B. R., and in 1870 he was appointed issuer of marriages, all of which positions he still In 1852, Mr. Dobson took an active part in having Yorkville incorporated. and when the first election for the council was held, he was chosen one of the five, and was made reeve of the new municipality. He remained a member of the council for seven years, and was twice elected chair-During the whole public career of this worthy man, he has taken a deep interest in all that pertains to the well-being of He has been foremost his fellow-citizens. in all church work, and in the temperance reform movement no one has shown more enthusiasm, or spent more time and money in advancing the principles he has during his long lifetime loved. In religion Mr. Dobson is a Methodist, and in politics a Reformer. In 1840, Mr. Dobson married Sarah Ann, daughter of the late Captain Moore, of York township, a veteran who fought under General Brock, and was wound. ed at the battle of Queenston Heights. The issue of this marriage was eight children, two of whom died in infancy. Three sons and three daughters are now grown up to do credit to the good training they received in their youth. Taken all in all, Mr. Dobson has had a successful career, and one that can with safety be taken as an example of what may be achieved by perseverance and upright dealing in this fair Canada of ours.

Merrill, William, Norwich, Ontario, was born in the town of Batavia, State of New York, in 1817. His parents were Baldwin Merrill and Mary Heath. In 1818 the family left the United States and came to Canada, settling near Fort Erie. This was after the war of 1812-15, in which Mr. Merrill, sen., took part. He at once betook himself to farming, and so continued until 1833, when he removed to the village of Norwich, Oxford county. He purchased a farm in the township, and settled down again to the life of a farmer. He remained here until his death in 1864. Mrs. Merrill died in 1872. A family of ten children remained, and of these William, the subject of this sketch, William Merrill received was the fourth. his education at the common schools, and when he was in his eighteenth year, began to learn the trade of cooper. When this trade was mastered, he commenced business for himself in Norwich, continuing in the same for ten years. In 1845 he gave up the ately h heavy ! est in Libera in the been a vears. daught of the wich. childre up this that M man, w his ow exertion Sylv was bo York, (father

er was

were m

a farm i

were an

tract of abode al

Sylveste

five chil

Solomor

all rece

period a

with the

coop at lu

ber l

and l

that has o

a lar

parti

likew

the fi

of go

lished

remov

wich.

his 8

know

rill, w

edifice

which

church

vear 1

Mr. N

towns

appoin

connec

Port I

tions o

road to

cooper business, and resolved to try his luck at lumber; so he began by purchasing timber lands in the township of Burford, Brant, and hereupon erected large saw-mills. Since that time, now about sixteen years ago, he has continued in this business. He added a large plaining mill, and occupied himself partially in building and contracting. He likewise manufactured cheese boxes, being the first in the locality to make that class of goods. To facilitate his now established and thriving business, in 1885 he removed his planing operations to Norwich. In 1881, he took into partnership his son, William S., and the firm is now known as Merrill, Son & Co. Mr. Merrill, we may say, has built some of the largest edifices in this part of the country, among which may be numbered schools and churches. The firm employs during the year round about thirty-five men. In 1845 Mr. Merrill was elected councillor for the township of Norwich, and in 1870 he was appointed a justice of the peace. He was connected in the building of the Huron and Port Dover Railway. He built all the stations on the line, and was interested in the road to the extent of $50,000, but unfortunately he came out of the undertaking a very heavy loser. He always has taken an interest in political affairs, and is a prominent Liberal in his locality. He is a class leader in the Norwich Methodist church; and has been a member of the official board for forty years. He married, in 1874, Eliza Jane, daughter of the late Joseph Woodrow, one of the old pioneers of the township of Norwich. The issue of the marriage is eight children. We have only to add in summing up this successful and praiseworthy career, that Mr. Merrill is eminently a self-made man, who has achieved everything through his own wise, energetic and honourable exertions.

48

ill

n

:1

ıd

r

r-

ρf

e

S

Sylvester, Capt. Solomon, Toronto, was born in the township of Scarboro', York, Ontario, on the 16th June, 1837. His father was Samuel Sylvester, and his mother was Janet Taylor. This worthy couple were married in Canada, and settled upon a farm in the township of Scarboro'. They were among the very first pioneers of this tract of the province, and took up their abode about nine miles from Toronto. Mr. Sylvester, senr., died about 1845, leaving five children, two girls and three boys, and Solomon was the third in the family. They all received such an education as the period and the place afforded, and Solomon with the rest attended regularly the public schools. But he had always expressed a strong desire to go to sea, and when he was in his thirteenth year, he proceeded to carry his wish into execution. He did not go as far as the briny ocean, but resolved to seek his fortune upon the inland seas. He first went on board the Atlantic, in 1857, he being then in his twentieth year, and became master, and held that position in several vessels until 1869, when he gave up this business. In this year he joined in partnership with his brother Daniel, and James H. Hickman, the firm being styled Sylvester Brothers & Hickman, and they began as wharfingers and general storagemen, in premises on the Esplanade. The business prospered. In 1879 Mr. Hickman died, and the name was changed to Sylvester Brothers, Solomon being the senior partner. In addition to Mr. Sylvester's interest in this business, he is owner and part owner of several steamboats and vessels sailing on the lakes. During the Trent excitement Mr. Sylvester joined the Naval Brigade, under Captain W. F. McMaster, and was stationed in Toronto, and he held the office of master mate, the highest position that could be atattained. Mr. Sylvester has been a member of the Odd-Fellows' association, and held office in that order. He also belonged to the Sons of Temperance, and in that society occupied for years the position of recording Most successful business men feel scribe. it incumbent to travel, and our subject has visited the chief cities in Canada and the United States. His religious views are those of Presbyterianism, and he is manager and elder of the West Presbyterian church, Tor-In politics he binds himself to the creed of the Reform party, and is an advocate of liberal measures in the full and best sense of the word. He married in 1867, Janet Paterson, widow of the late Robert Paterson, of Kingston, Ontario. The lasue of the marriage is five children, two boys and three girls.

Yarker, George Wheatley.—The success of George W. Yarker is the success of a man of resource. This is the clue to his good fortune; and, as is often the case with successful men, he owes his advancement in life to gifts, partly natural and partly acquired. In Mr. Yarker's case, while he has great natural abilities, these have been improved by training and discipline, so that when the flood-tide of opportunity came, it found him equipped and ready for his work. This is the lesson so many of us need; to regard success as the outcome of preparation, rather than as the result of luck or opportunity. As a rule, we forget to get ready to do things before we begin, and alas! so often fail, to do them. In Mr. Yarker's remarkable career, the reverse of this truth has had a remarkable exemplification. The subject of our sketch, though a Canadian, is a descendant of an old English family, which, for over four hundred years, has held lands in Yorkshire. Sir Bernard Burke, in his "Landed Gentry," says that the family of Yarker, in its existing branches, derives from Leyburn Hall, Leyburn, parish of Wensley, Yorkshire, where for many generations its representatives peaceably enjoyed their feudal holdings, meddling neither in politics nor in commerce. The family motto, la fin couronne les œuvres (the end crowns the work) would indicate that its founders lived in no ignoble ease, and were conscious of the rectitude of their acts, and confident that they would meet with final approval. From the Quebec Almanac of 1815, we learn that Mr. Yarker's grandfather, Robert Yarker, came to Canada during the War of 1812-14, as deputy paymaster general of the forces, and was stationed at Montreal, where he died in 1835. The son of this officer, and father of the subject of our present sketch, became a resident of Kingston, where he was a well-known leader in society and patron of the turf. He died in 1847, at Kingston, where Geo. W. Yarker, our present subject, was born, on the 28th of March, 1836. Mr. Yarker received his education at the old Grammar School, at Queen's College Preparatory School, and at Queen's College, Kingston. In 1854 he began his banking career in the office of the Trust & Loan Co., Kingston; but two years afterwards he left its employment to enter the Bank of Montreal as a junior, in whose service he uninterruptedly remained for nearly thirty years, rising by successive steps to the position of teller, accountant, agent, manager, and inspector. In 1873 he was sent to London, England, in charge of the bank's business, and remained at the head of that agency for over a year. But he is best known, however, as manager of the Bank of Montreal at Toronto, a position he was chosen to fill in 1868, on the important occasion of the withdrawal of the late Archibald Greer as manager, and the Hon. Wm. MacMaster as local director, to establish the rival Bank of Commerce. In this breach, though very young, Mr. Yarker proved himself the right man, and throughout enjoyed the confidence of the commercial, governmental, stock-broking and banking classes of the community, whose relations with the bank were always made pleasant by the uniform courtesy and accessibility of the manager, as well as by the talent and nice sense of honour he displayed in all his transactions. But Mr. Yarker's methods were not only able and honourable, they were broad and elastic. In the management of his great trust, while he was eminently conservative in his dealings, he never tied himself hand and foot to the old school traditions of banking. In many large tran. sactions he was a fearless though safe oper. ator, possessing experience, nerve, and a calm judgment. While holding personally aloof from schemes and speculations, in which he had many opportunities of joining, he gave the bank's legitimate aid in further. ing not a few enterprises, which proved of advantage to the city and province. As the banker and trusted adviser of several railways, while under construction, he was of great service, alike to the projects them. selves and to the institution he so effi-Such schemes as the ciently managed. following had the benefit of his aid and counsel: the Credit Valley R. R., the Toronto, Grey & Bruce, the Grand Junction, the Georgian Bay and Lake Erie, Central Ontario and the Prince Edward railways. During his long incumbency Mr. Yarker served the Bank of Montreal with signal zeal and devotion, under the general managements of Mr. Davidson, Mr. King, Mr. Angus, Mr. Smythers, and Mr. Buchanan. But the time came when Mr. Yarker was induced, from a sense of public duty, as he stated to his old friends, to sever his relations with the Bank of Montreal, and to give a Western bank, at a grave juncture of its affairs, the benefit of his abilities and experience. This step he was loth to take, not only because he was naturally attached to the traditions and methods of the Bank of Montreal, but because by virtue of long service, he had acknowledged claims on the pension fund of that institution, and in a few years was entitled to retire with a large annuity. In June, 1884, however, at a grave crisis in the history of Canadian banking, and at a most critical moment in the affairs of the Federal Bank of Canada, Mr. Yarker was urged to take the general management of that bank, which he reluctantly did, and only at the earnest solicitation of its directorate and the managers of other banking institutions. The acceptance of this position had an instantaneous effect in quieting public alarm, and was the means of saving the institution from ruin. Mr. Yarker's famous Report. the b share of Ca cated disclos ment. large tions. Mr. Y new fe the tir with th after receive Yarker Militia able t and is sports. torious is a go dent of first pr Associa he has Cool de uniform sporting of his I enviable in manı with a Yarker l of friend many wh at his h warm he Mr. Yark daughter ness, Sco ters Edit Yarker i England, Barcl an Barcl of this sk. 15th of M were Mat Mr. Barcl entered the lery at Wo sent into a seral of the tory of the Moore in $ of that m paign. H Copenhage possession

port (Nov. 20, 1884), upon the affairs of the bank, was unanimously accepted by the shareholders, as well as by the Parliament of Canada, and was eulogized and advocated by the whole press of the country. It disclosed not only skilful and vigorous treatment, but a ready power of dealing with large figures and intricate banking questions. In readjusting the stock of the bank, Mr. Yarker was the author of an entirely new feature in bank legislation, which at the time was considered unlikely to meet with the approval of Parliament, but which, after criticism in committees, promptly received the assent of both Houses. Mr. Yarker was a lieutenant in the Canadian Militia in 1860-61; has been a considerable traveller for pleasure in Europe; and is an ardent upholder of all manly sports. He has often captained a victorious cricket eleven in first-class matches; is a good tennis player; a past vice-president of the Argonaut Rowing Club, and first president of the Bankers' Athletic Association, at the annual games of which he has presided for the last ten years. Cool decision, equanimity of temper, and uniform courtesy, have helped him in the sporting-field as well as in the busy theatre of his life's occupation, and given him an enviable position in the community. Affable in manners, of gentlemanly instincts, and with a chivalrous sense of honour, Mr. Yarker has attached to himself a large circle of friends, and is gratefully regarded by many who have received genuine kindness at his hands, and who esteem him for his warm heart and considerate acts. In 1861 Mr. Yarker married Margaret Fraser, eldest daughter of Hugh Fraser, Esq., of Inverness, Scotland, by whom he has two daughters Edith Louise, and Maud Eleanor. Mr. Yarker is an adherent of the Church of England, in what may be called its broad, liberal and moderately high sense.

Barclay, Francis, Milton, the subject of this sketch, was born in Scotland, on the 15th of May, 1822. His parents' names were Matthew Barclay and Mary Fleming. Mr. Barclay, senior, at the age of eighteen, entered the British army, joining the artillery at Woolwich, and was very soon after sent into active service, and took part in several of the engagements recorded in the history of the times. He was with Sir John Moore in Spain, serving through the whole of that memorable and unfortunate campaign. He was also at the bombardment of Copenhagen, when the British took forcible possession of the Danish fleet. In consequence of ill health, he gave up his military life, and returned to his native town, and commenced business as a manufacturer of Paisley shawls, his warehouse being in what is known as Cumberland Court. ln 1832, Mr. Barclay, senior, emigrated with his young family to Canada, and commenced farming in the township of Markham, and in 1837, the year of Mackenzie's rebellion, he removed to the township of Trafalgar, in the County of Halton; but some years before his death he resided in the town of Oakville. He was known and respected as a conscientious and honest man and humble Christian. Francis lived upon the farm with his father, till he was about seventeen years of age. This mode of life not suiting him, and having somewhat of a restless disposition, he left the farm and tried several occupations, amongst others that of school teacher, but finally turned his attention to a business life, and in the spring of 1848, in partnership with the late Peter McDougald, of Oakville, commenced a business in the village of Georgetown, County of Halton. In 1849, Mr. McDougald retired, leaving the business with Mr. Barclay, which he carried on with success, extending it year by year, and by his spirit of enterprise and character for fair dealing, secured a strong hold upon the confidence of the public. In the autumn of 1863, he found it advisable to make a change in his business, and took into partnership two young men who were clerks with him-James McLean and William McLeod-the style of the firm being, McLean, McLeod & Co., Mr. Barclay being a silent partner, but manager of the business. Mr. McLean dying in 1865, the business was continued by Mr. Barclay, with Mr. McLeod as junior partner, under the style of Barclay, McLeod & Co. This firm built up the largest retail business in the county. In 1871, Mr. Barclay sold out his business in Georgetown and removed to Toronto, and engaged in a wholesale boot and shoe business in the old Iron Block, Front street, which was burned down in 1872, and, along with many others in that unfortunate fire, he suffered a heavy loss. ing up his business in Toronto, he returned to Halton, and carried on business in Milton and Georgetown. In the spring of 1881, the death of the late Thomas Racey created a vacancy in the registrarship for the County of Halton, to which Mr. Barclay was appointed, and still holds the position. Mr. Barclay is one of the old justices of the peace for the county; was the second reeve to represent Georgetown in the county council; he also represented Milton at the county council board as reeve; and, had his ambition run in that direction, would have been asked to contest the county for a seat in parliament. Mr. Barclay in religion is a Presbyterian, and in politics a decided He is of a genial and kindly dis-Liberal. uncompromising with all position. but

shams and false pretences.

Robertson, Alexander, Belleville, Ontario, M.P. for West Hastings, was born at Trenton, County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, on the 5th of December, 1838. He is a son of William Robertson, lumber merchant, who came to Canada from Glenelg, Inverness-shire, Scotland, in 1827. Our subject's father married on the 2nd November, 1837, Jane Simmons, a native of Canada, and daughter of a United Empire loyalist. At the wedding Sir John A. Macdonald acted Wm. Robertson, who died as groomsman. in 1861, was a descendant of the Robertsons, of Strowan, a race who were noted for their bravery and fine physique. When James I. was murdered in Black Friar's monastery, in presence of the Queen and her attendants, by Sir Robert Graham, the murderer made his escape to the Highlands, hiding in the Braes-o'-Mar, where he was captured by Robert, grandson of Robert of Athol, founder of the Clan Robertson. brave deed, and the taking of Graham to the Queen, he was rewarded with a Crown charter, dated in 1452, erecting a large quantity of lands into a free barony, and also with a coat of arms,-A naked man manacled, under the achievement, with the motto, "Virtutis gloria merces. The family moved from Trenton to Belleville when Alexander was seven years old, and he was educated He afterwards in the Grammar school. studied law with George E. Henderson, Q C. He was called to the bar in 1864, and has practiced his profession in Belleville ever since. He is now a member of the firm of Robertson & Thomas. Mr. Robertson was a member of the town council from 1864 until 1870, when he was elected mayor. He was also elected mayor at the inauguration of the city in 1878, and again by acclamation in 1879. He has done much to beautify and build up the city, and advance its material and other interests, having erected in 1876 the elegant brick block, known as the Robertson Block," on the east side of Front street, and a similar one, in 1879, on the west side. He served as captain in the Argyle Light Infantry at Prescott during the Fenian excitement of 1866. In politics he is a Conservative. In 1873, he was offered by acclamation the membership in the House of Commons for East Hastings, but declined. In 1879, at the urgent request of his many friends, he became a candidate for the Local Legislature in West Hastings, and was elected over Thomas Holden, by a large majority; but in 1882 he resigned his seat to become a candidate for the House of Commons at the general election, and defeated James Brown, his opponent, and he is now the representative for this riding. He is a member and trustee of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church; a prominent member of the Masonic order, and a Forester, and he takes a lively interest in promoting and encouraging public games and manly sports. He was married in June, 1870, to Mary Georgina, eldest daughter of Dr. Robert Stewart, of Belleville. She died in 1874, leaving one child, Ethel Jane, born in July, 1871. Mrs. Robertson was a woman of kind and genial disposition, having a special talent for music, and being much beloved by a large circle of friends. Her death was a serious loss to society in Belleville.

Moss, Charles, Q.C., Barrister, Toronto, was born at Cobourg, Ontario, on the 8th March, 1840. His father, John Moss, was born near Maryborough, Queen's county, Ireland, and his mother first saw the light in Belfast, Ireland. They were married in 1835, at Cobourg, but in 1846 removed to Toronto, where they continued to reside for the remainder of their lives, [vide sketch of the late Chief Justice Moss] the father dying in 1868, and the mother in Of the children who survived them the first born was Thomas, afterwards chief justice of Ontario. Charles, the subject of The fourth this sketch, was the third son. son was William, who died at Winnipeg on 23rd June, 1882. Respecting him we find the following notice in the Winnipeg Times, June 24th, 1882:-" Mr. Moss came to Winnipeg in the fall of 1879. He was the brother of the late Chief Justice Moss, of Toronto, and of Mr. Charles Moss, Q.C., of that city. He took to journalism early in life, and for some time held a position on the Cleveland press. On his arrival here he joined the staff of the Free Press, and soon afterwards became its chief editorial writer. That position he filled with singular ability. He was a powerful and scholarly writer; but while he held strong political views, he always agreed to differ kindly with those opposed to him, and never wittingly struck below the belt. The death of a young man of his great promise is a loss, not alone to the Free Press, but to Canadian journal-

Winn mired his re the w hind l ed by atten God 1 from the G of tha wish t and so That apprec and p had w a warı sincere the los

îsm.

by al

or ma

Althou shall e and h many of whi always Be it a lutions Charles mon so vantag for a ti 1864, c ing arti membe He was

Novem

and ca

would v

him a

turned

be gues

each of

away a

to the b

he becar

Moss,

Osler w

subsequ

tice Ha

& Moss

Harriso:

in Octob

late Jan

thune, (

the appo

when th

100 mg

