GROWTH OF MILLING INDUSTRY IN CANADA

Rapid Expansion in Keeping With Dominion's Position Among Wheat Producers of World

From its humble beginning at Port Royal in 1605, flour and grist milling in Canada has grown to be one of the Dominion's most important industries. According to an early census there were nine mills in operation in New France in 1655 while the latest figures (those for 1922) compiled by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics show 1,364 operating mills in Canada with a daily capacity of 134,125 barrels. The amount of wheat milled and flour produced by these mills showed a considerable increase during 1922. This year saw 81,413,649 bushels of grain converted into flour, as compared with 70,005,373 bushels in 1921 and 61,116,380 bushels in 1920. The production of flour during the 1922 calendar year reached 17,787,329 barrels, an increase of 2,466,170 barrels over the previous year and 4,680,609 barrels greater than 1920.

NEWTONVILLE

The Atwell brothers from Greenwich Coppage spent the week end here. Our school house has been undergoing needed repairs, the work being nearly completed. Mrs. Thomas Long and Mrs. L. W. Long, of Black River, visited relatives here on Saturday, returning home in the evening. A party from here attended church service at White Rock on Sunday evening.

TO DEFEND ULSTER

Sir James Craig Threatens Opposition if Decision Not Satisfactory BELFAST, Oct. 7.—Sir James Craig, Premier of Ulster at the opening of parliament today, said that if the British parliament passed the Irish Bill and the Boundary was finally fixed so that it would be acceptable to Ulster, "Well and good". On the other hand, he declared, no matter who was named as the third member of the boundary commission, if the decision was not acceptable to Ulster, he would not hesitate a moment if there was no other honorable way out, to resign and place himself at the disposal of the people, no longer as premier, but as the chosen leader to defend any territory which they might consider had been unfairly transferred from Ulster, Great Britain and the flag of the Empire.

SUNDAY OBSERVANCE

To the Editor of THE ACADIAN Mr. Editor.—Walking along Main street last Sunday morning, enjoying the freshness of the day, I felt that it was a day of rest. The calm and peace that reigned around me, as well as the closed business places, and the absence of traffic, all attested to that fact.

On approaching a gas-station, however, I noticed that the scene was very different. Instead of the rest and quiet prevailing elsewhere here all was bustle and hurry. People were busy buying and selling gasoline, while others were awaiting their turn to have their tanks filled. The garage behind was wide open. Several persons were standing by the doorway, and others passing in to where car accessories are usually kept on sale.

Remembering that there are both moral and statute laws prohibiting the sale of commodities on Sunday, except in cases of necessity and mercy, I wondered why the people of Wolfville, and not of Wolfville alone but of other places as well, permitted the violation of these laws on the open street. Perhaps it is allowed on the ground of public convenience. It cannot be thru Sunday, knowing it cannot be had on that day one can and will provide it on Saturday. Should the tourist run short of milk, the local dealer will happen to be till Monday. Did mere expediency justify the custom, we may well open all our business places and throw to the winds the Sabbath which our fathers held so sacred and the freedom of which they handed down to us at such a price.

Common and illegal as the practice is, it is not by any means universal. Everybody knows that there are many towns in Canada and elsewhere where gas is obtainable only on week days. Even if it were, the question still remains, namely, is it right or is it wrong. If it is wrong, it should find no place on the streets of Wolfville.

NORMA TALMADGE IS SCREEN BLACKMAILER IN "WITHIN THE LAW"

Sent to prison for a theft that another girl committed. Saved from an attempt at suicide. Initiated into a band of blackmailers working only "within the law". Specializing in breach of promise suits. Sworn to get square with the employer who "sent her up" as an example. Married to his son as a means of obtaining vengeance, but somehow this didn't work out as planned. These are some of the dramatic and romantic things that happen to Norma Talmadge, as Mary Turner, in the screen version of "Within the Law", the first National picture directed by Frank Lloyd, which will be shown at the Orpheum Theatre on Monday and Tuesday. But Mary is a good girl at heart and everything, of course, turns out well. It is said to be Norma Talmadge's biggest emotional role in motion pictures, and surrounding her is a cast of exceptional talent. Her leading man is Jack Mulhall, in the role of Dick Gilder, "victimized" son of Mary Turner's hated employer. Eileen Percy plays Aggie Lynch, the blackmailers, with whom Mary forms an acquaintance that sets her life on a new course. Lew Cody is seen as Joe Garson, forger, who sacrifices himself because of his love for Mary. Other important parts are taken by such celebrities as DeWitt Jennings, Lincoln Plummer, Joseph Kilgour, Helen Ferguson, Warden Crane, Lionel Belmore, Catherine Murphy and Thomas Ricketts.

MOTOR ACCIDENT ON SUNDAY

A bad motor accident which fortunately was not attended by bodily injury to the occupants occurred last Sunday afternoon at the intersection of Main street and Highland avenue. A Chevrolet sedan, belonging to Mr. Andrew Pearson, of Greenwich, and driven by his daughter, Miss Annie Pearson, was proceeding from Highland avenue to Main street, going west, when it collided with a Ford owned by Mr. John Atwell, of Gasperau, and driven by Miss May Cavanaugh, going east. The Ford was badly wrecked, while the force of the impact broke a wheel of the closed car, removed three tires and damaged the doors, no glass being broken. Miss Pearson was alone in her car while the Ford contained five persons.

RALLY DAY AT ST. ANDREW'S SCHOOL

Rally Day was observed by St. Andrew's Sunday School last Sunday morning in place of the regular church service. The centre front pews were reserved for the School scholars who marched in and took their places while singing "Holy, Holy, Holy". The remainder of the church was well filled with interested friends who thoroughly enjoyed the service.

In addition to the hymns and responsive readings, recitations were given by Ronald Smith, Lloyd Macpherson and Betty Williams, which were followed by scripture readings by the senior girls and boys. The title of the whole program was "Our Neighbors", and Rev. Mr. Hemmeon gave a very fitting address from the subject, "Who are our neighbors and how we can help them".

GREENWICH

On Tuesday, September 30th, our population was increased by the birth of a son to Mr. and Mrs. Harold Cleveland.

Mrs. Norman MacRae, of Lower Wolfville, who was a patient for two weeks at the home of Mrs. Grace Anderson, returned to her home, with her infant daughter last Thursday.

Mrs. Parsons, of Amherst, who spent a month at the home of her sister, Mrs. Frederick Ford, returned home one day last week.

Miss Gow, of Halifax, who was a guest for a week at the home of Mrs. (Dr.) Gow and family, "Ridgeland Farm", returned to her home last Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. Harry Neary has the deep sympathy of her neighbours and friends in losing her mother, Mrs. Gammon, of Medford, by death, last Friday morning. During her visit here at the home of friends, Mrs. Gammon had over to attend her funeral on Sunday afternoon at her late home in Medford.

Mr. and Mrs. John Fenwick spent the week end in Rawdon, Hants county. Mrs. Cecyl Hiltz, of Kentville, who is a patient at the home of Nurse Andrew, was gladdened on Sunday afternoon, Oct. 5th, by the arrival of a fine big baby-boy. Dr. Bradford Bishop, of Kentville, is the attending physician. Much interest is expressed in the community upon the arrival of this little son, as the mother was one of our own girls, being Gwendolyn, youngest daughter of Mr. C. C. Brown, a former well remembered resident.

A "sing" at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Fenwick on Sunday evening was enjoyed by a good number.

A few from here motored to Kentville on Sunday evening to hear and enjoy Rev. J. Hamilton Wigle, Principal of Mount Allison Ladies College, Sackville, N. B., who preached at the United church of St. Paul's and St. Stephen's. Special music was also an enjoyable feature of the evening.

Mrs. Andrew Fenwick, who is driving in her father's automobile in Wolfville on Sunday afternoon, had part in a collision on the Main street, which resulted in both cars being badly broken. We understand Miss Pearson was alone at the time and fortunately was not injured.

HUSBAND GAMBLER IN STOCKS WIFE SAVED HIM

Story of "The Silent Partner" is Filled with Strong Human Appeal

Some wives dig into a man's pocket for money, others make him dig. If you wanted to cure your husband of gambling in stocks, and at the same time keep his money in the family, how would you do it? Letrice Joy, as the wife of a stock gambler, shows one way in the intensely interesting Paramount domestic drama of New York life, "The Silent Partner", which will be the big feature at the Orpheum Theatre next Wednesday and Thursday. In this Charles Maigne production, Owen Moore takes the part of a small-statured clerk in a stock broker's office. When he suddenly gets the speculation fever, success turns his head. He resigns his steady position and moves from a modest kitchenette flat to exclusive Park avenue apartments. How woman's wit prepares for the crash that comes—how she stands by her husband even though he neglects her in the excitement of piling up newly acquired wealth—is revealed in the film version of this human Saturday Evening Post serial of Maximilian Foster's, adapted by Sada Cowan.

LABOR GOVERNMENT FALLS

Great Britain's first Labor government virtually came to an end at 11 o'clock last night, when by a combination of Conservative and Liberal votes, the House of Commons carried a motion demanding that a select committee of the House investigate the action of Attorney-General Sir Patrick Hastings in withdrawing prosecution in the case of the Communist, James R. Campbell, acting editor of the Workers' Weekly, charged with inciting His Majesty's forces to sedition. The vote was 364 to 198. It is expected that Premier Ramsay MacDonald will today see the King and ask for dissolution of Parliament.

GRAND PRE WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

Interesting Report of Institute Exhibit at Toronto Exhibition Given by Miss Stuart.

The October meeting of the Grand Pre Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Patrinquin with the president in the chair. Mrs. Bower gave a report of the sale held in the Tea Room on Thursday and Friday, October 2 and 3. There are still a good many articles left but the sale was as good as anticipated. Some of our members, also members of the community, were reported on the sick list. Sunshine boxes and flowers will be sent this week.

Next month is our annual meeting for the election of officers. Preparatory to that, a Nominating committee was appointed, consisting of—Mrs. Ayrton Johnson, Mrs. MacRae and Miss Laura Trenholm.

It was decided to celebrate the eleventh birthday of our Institute by holding a party, subject to two conditions,—first, that the cake be large; second, that the members put as few coppers as possible in the envelopes as it makes more work for the secretary.

The opening poem was read by Miss Magee. Miss Stuart, first vice president of the Federated Women's Institute of Canada, gave a splendid report of the work done at the Toronto Exhibition. Miss Stuart spoke in the highest terms of the executive and management of the Exhibition. Our splendid fish exhibit was also mentioned, but, of course, the topic was Institute work. As our motto always has been, "For Home and Country", a resolution was passed that it be copyrighted, making it impossible for magazines or newspapers to use the term for other than Institute news. Each province had a demonstration booth, with the exception of Alberta which is an independent body, receiving no help from the government, so they could not finance the transportation of exhibits this year. New Brunswick had an Industrial exhibit, Madame Blanchard manufactured flax, beginning with the seed and ending with woven towels made on a miniature loom. Manitoba demonstrated the correct way to dress. Models were used to show the incorrect as well as the approved method. The car and sanding of bees was also demonstrated. Prince Edward Island demonstrated home industry, namely, quilts, rugs, pillow cases. British Columbia represented a health centre, the booth being a miniature hospital. There were also flowers, evergreen products, fruit and honey. Ontario furnished a three-roomed suite—kitchen, living-room and bedroom complete with every necessary article of furniture, including a range sink and a full supply of glassware, dishes and tumblers, for $18.97, all articles being supplied by the T. Eaton Company. Nova Scotia had enlarged pictures of scenic views for tourist publicity purposes. The demonstration was in nutrition, specializing in canning and school lunches. The old fashioned lunch of thick bread and molasses and cake rolled in a newspaper was placed beside the model lunch composed of a jar of milk, several sandwiches, cookies and fruit in a sterile container, such as a shiny lard pail, when hot lunches are not available.

Mrs. Chambers favored us with a pleasing piano solo. Then Miss Ora Woodman gave a very interesting descriptive account of her recent European tour in England, France, Spain and Italy.

OPPORTUNITY FOR TOWN BUILDING

WHILE THE quarters occupied at present by the town offices are comfortable and very well adapted to the purpose, it is only reasonable that in the very near future more accommodation will be required than is now available. At different times since Wolfville became incorporated the idea has been discussed of the town erecting a building of its own that might provide for every need and be at once a credit to citizens and an ornament to the town. This appears to us as a very reasonable ambition and there is little doubt but that eventually it will be realized. A good many years ago a public meeting of citizens decided upon the erection of such a building, but owing to pressure which was brought to bear on the legislature by local interests which opposed the undertaking the action came to naught. During recent times when the matter was revived the difficulty has always been to secure a suitable location and such difficulty is bound to be more in evidence as the years go on.

Just now there appears to be a way opened to provide just what is required and at a cost most reasonable. The union of the Presbyterian and Methodist congregations of this town and the decision on the part of the united body to use the place of worship formerly occupied by the former leaves the edifice on Gaspereau avenue so long used for worship by the Methodists available for some other purpose. The building is now offered for sale and could be secured by the town at a sum probably two-thirds less than that which would be required to erect it now. Conveniently located in practically the centre of the town, the building is in a good state of repair and has plenty of room to provide for every demand likely to be made for the use of the various departments of town government and activity. The matter of remodeling would not be a serious one and could be provided for as conditions warranted. In any event it would appear to us as good business for the town to take immediate steps to acquire this property which at the price would provide a very satisfactory addition to our assets.

TOWNS SHOULD GET A SHARE

THE FACT that the provincial government is pressing this town for an excess on account of highway tax because of the inflating of our valuation by the Assessment Appeal Court in 1923, furnishes food for thought on the part of our citizens. At the time THE ACADIAN presented its views in anticipation of what was very likely to happen. The highway law imposes a tax of one per cent. on the assessment of each of the towns of the province, and since those who had charge of our affairs saw fit to increase the figures of the assessors and were supported in their action by the Council as a whole, it is not likely that the Highway Board will be willing to accept from us any less than that allowed by the act.

This paper has contended on different occasions that the government's method of dealing with the towns in this matter is most unfair, and we see no reason to change our opinion on the subject. While the towns provide a very substantial proportion of the funds raised by the province for highway work, and besides, as in the case of Wolfville, furnishes through their entire length a stretch of permanent street to augment the system of trunk road which the Board is attempting to establish, they get no part of the tax to which they contribute.

Another way in which the incorporated towns of Nova Scotia suffer because of the unfair attitude of the provincial rulers is in connection with the motor license fees collected. The towns get no proportion of these fees although their citizens naturally contribute very extensively. On the contrary, in British Columbia the amount collected is equitably divided and each municipality receives its due share. Summerland, a town of about the same size as Wolfville, this year received a cheque for $1,424.78, as its proportion of the amount collected, and each of the other towns and cities of the province got its share.

THE HOME PRINTER

THERE ARE so many "weeks" being started that it looks as if the fifty two weeks allotted to us will hardly prove sufficient for the world's needs. Before the entire list is spoken for, we would advocate a Be-Fair-With-Your-Printer Week. We are sure it is badly needed in almost every community. In consideration of such a week, we would advocate the following principles:

Your printer—make him your partner, not your victim. Don't get prices from one printer and then submit same to another, hoping for a cut in prices, unless you would like to have the printers do the same with you when they are in the market for some article of merchandise which you carry in stock. Give your home printer a chance before you buy your printing out of town.

In general, treat him with the same respect that characterizes your other business dealings and keep in mind the golden rule of business, to do unto others as you would be done by. Having properly observed this week, the spirit of it may stay with you during the remaining fifty-one. Such, we believe, is the big idea in all these special weeks.

HOW TO MAKE YOUR ADVERTISEMENTS PAY

FEW MERCHANTS really have the proper appreciation of what advertising means to them.

If a man spoke to his wife only once a month or every two months she wouldn't recognize his voice, says an exchange. Yet some business men advertise once a month or every two months and then wonder why they don't get more business. Advertise every week. Remember "the used key is always bright". The store that tells the public what it is doing every week is the store that gets there in the end.

AS IT IS DONE IN MIDDLETON

THE TOWN of Middleton has made provision for the weighing of coal and other heavy commodities that is working out most satisfactorily. A public scale has been installed with a public weigher who is a thoroughly disinterested person. All coal must be weighed thereon and the buyer pays a very small fee for the service. The proposition was strenuously opposed by the dealers but the town authorities insisted, and the public are well satisfied. So far the fees have been sufficient to provide for all expense and leave a respectable surplus.

A SUGGESTION FOR THE WINTER

THE ACADIAN would suggest that arrangements be made for a series of Sunday afternoon lectures during the coming winter. Wolfville is particularly adapted to such an undertaking since it numbers among its citizens many who are thoroughly competent to assist. We have in mind an array of speakers sufficient to fill the entire season. Then there are always numerous visitors in Wolfville during winter whose services might readily be enlisted. This program, if placed in the hands of a competent committee representing the various churches and other institutions of the town, would be a very pleasing and instructive feature of our community during the winter. Who will set the necessary machinery in motion?

BEER AND LIGHT WINES

THOSE WHO are somewhat advocating a more general use of light wines and beers in this country, and who point to the old country to disprove the potency of national prohibition, forget that the free use of the beverages constitutes the precise reason why millions of workers in Europe have never been able to secure as high a standard of living as have American workers. No man ever yet improved his health by taking poison into his system, and a brain befuddled by alcohol is a very poor equipment to prepare one to do his best in life.

MAINE GOVERNOR IS BOOSTER FOR NOVA SCOTIA

Was Much Impressed by His Visit to this Province and Advocates Closer Relations Between Nova Scotia and New England.

(From the Portland Evening News) AUGUSTA, Sept. 26.—Gov. Percival Baxter has just returned from a very interesting trip of several days in Nova Scotia.

The work incident to the primary election and to the campaign which occupied the best part of the summer. In fact, I saw more cattle there. "I felt the need of a few days' rest in Maine."

Mr. Chadbourne, my secretary, and myself. Many of them were new and all self took the boat to Yarmouth, Nova Scotia. We were well kept. The Boston, which is but 15 hours' run from the north shore to Digby, through the Annapolis Valley and across the peninsula to Halifax.

From Halifax, we made a trip of a few days outside the province of New Brunswick via St. John and Fredericton to a distance of 1300 miles. In this respect they are not well marked and where strangers get lost on the wrong roads.

I was much impressed with the splendid character of the people and with the great opportunities for development in Nova Scotia. That province possesses unusual natural resources. It has ample deposits of coal, iron, gold, silver and other minerals, has great water power, and fine farming land and fisheries of untold value. Its population is composed of people who, more than any other people I have ever met, resemble old time New Englanders.

It is not a mixed population, but is almost purely of English and Scotch ancestry. There is a distinct Nova Scotia type and no finer can be found anywhere.

Great progress has been made on Nova Scotia roads and in all our journey we did not come upon a single bad stretch, not even on some of the cross main highways. This road work has been done within 10 years. I could see they believe in maintaining their roads and do not allow them to go backward.

Nova Scotia's population and its area are about two thirds that of Maine but, like our own State, many of her young people prefer to go to the larger centers although they no doubt would be much better off to remain at home.

The hotels are well conducted and their prices are reasonable. In fact, we did not experience a single instance of overcharging, which is most unusual, especially in places that cater to summer visitors. The greatest encouragement to tourist travel in any country is two things, good roads and fair hotel prices. If either one of these items is lacking, it proves a serious handicap to tourist business. Nova Scotia people are not the kind to take advantage and their hotel keepers, unlike those in some places I have visited, do not charge all the tourist will bear.

THE FUTURE OF AGRICULTURE

Agriculture is coming back. The cities, teeming with people, must have an adequate supply of food.
That the man trained in scientific agriculture will find farming very lucrative in the future is our belief. We would point out the great open field to agricultural graduates in investigation and extension work. Banks, railroads, farm and dairy newspapers, manufacturing plants and farmers' co-operative organizations are all seeking men who know the scientific as well as the practical side of agriculture.

REASON WHY THERE WAS NO ONE AT BIRTHDAY PARTY

The following is part of an address delivered on Aug. 28th by Mr. Kelly, broker, at Memphis, to a retail merchants' convention.

A few weeks before my fortieth birthday, which was several years ago, my wife handed me a good-sized bunch of letters one morning, the letters being addressed and stamped, suggesting that I drop them in the mail box on my way to the office. I wore my raincoat that morning as it happened to be raining, so I slipped the letters in the pocket of the coat, and, upon arriving at the office, I placed the coat in my locker and forgot all about the letters. I did not wear that same coat again for several weeks, and that's where my trouble started.

These letters happened to be invitations to my fortieth birthday party. The evening of the party came, the stage was all set. The dinner was supposed to be at 6.00 p.m., but nobody showed up. We waited until seven, but my friends failed to arrive, then I and behold my wife said to me, "Do you recall a morning some few weeks ago when I gave you those letters to mail?" They were the invitations to your party. Immediately the thought struck me. "By golly, those letters are in the pocket of my raincoat at the office."

That incident reminds me of an old friend of mine who was to see me the other day. He told me about a motor trip he was making from Minneapolis up north to a few hundred miles. It happened to be on a Saturday. He visited several towns on his trip, calling in at many stores, and he remarked to me, "Do you know there were about two chain stores in each one of the towns I went through, and they were the only stores that were busy—the other stores didn't appear to be doing much of anything."

That caused him to investigate, just as a matter of curiosity, so I asked him the names of the towns he visited. I then wrote to the newspapers in each of the towns and requested that they send me their papers of Thursday and Friday, two days before the Saturday when my friend called at these stores. Upon receipt of these newspapers, I found that in four out of five papers, all the store advertising that had been done was by the chain stores. That solved the problem.

The retail merchants in the towns where my friend visited had failed to advertise in the newspapers, inviting the public to their store that Saturday, and the public not receiving an invitation did not come, but the chain stores had invited them with a neat, effective and attractive style and check full of common sense and naturally that is where they went. So the stores that failed to receive their friends were like my birthday party—the crowd didn't come.

STATE HEALTH INSURANCE

Health insurance, now figuring prominently in the calculations of the medical world, should be brought into existence as soon as possible because it presupposes the application of the principle of prevention rather than the principle of cure to the diseases of humanity.

Some system of health insurance would render necessary physical examinations for everybody at fixed intervals. The healing professions would find it more profitable to keep people well than to cure them after they became sick.

If the principle of prevention rather than cure ever became firmly established in medical practice, it would be the means of pulling the medical profession out of the slough of archaic and stagnant "ethics" and giving it the opportunity to progress and advance as other businesses have progressed and advanced.

If doctors were ever cut loose from the nonsensical theory that prohibits them from telling the public that they know all about the body and can keep the body in good health, the death rate would be cut in half in a very few years.—Vancouver Sun.

Sims.—"So you cured your wife of the antique craze? How did you do it?"

Jones.—"Gave her a 1914 car for her birthday."

OUT OF WORLD'S SERIES

Jimmy O'Connell (shown above), and Coach "Cozy" Dolan of the New York Giants, have been found guilty of bribery by Judge Landis, and suspended. The suspension was based upon a confession made by O'Connell and evidence furnished by Dolan, and followed information furnished by Heinie Sand of the Philadelphia National League Club. Sand stated that on September 27, O'Connell had offered him $500 to throw the game between the Giants and the Phillies played in New York on that day. Sand refused the offer.

TREASURES FROM WASTE

In a lecture at King's College, London, M. W. T. Gordon made the suggestion that pearl shell, mining in Birmingham might be highly profitable, and this brings strongly to mind the fact that industrial England is strewn with golden rubbish heaps.

The rapid progress of science and invention constantly reveals new methods of putting to profitable use material which until recently was regarded as useless waste, and the result is that vast dumps which have merely disfigured the landscape are being eagerly bought up and worked.

The pearl shell to which Mr. Gordon referred consists of shells of the pearl oyster, from each of which an old fashioned button could be cut. Today every atom of the beautiful iridescent material is valuable.

At various places on the East Coast he vast piles of ordinary limpet shells. There is one at West Mersea which contains hundreds of tons. Recently the value of these shells as poultry grit has been realized, and two years ago a shell-crushing factory was erected where these shells are being ground into grit.

At St. Helens, in Lancashire, the waste from the plate-glass works used to accumulate in mountains. The dump of one firm alone weighed more than one and a half million tons. Some time ago it was found that this material, which consists of sand, glass dust, and iron, could be converted into excellent bricks, so here again is a new industry out of waste.

A dreadful eyecore to the tourists residing at St. Ives was of monstrous dimensions of refuse, clay and stones, taken from the old Wheal Trenwith copper mine and thrown aside as worthless. Incidentally, the dump quite spoiled an otherwise desirable building site.

Then came the discovery of radium, and it was realized that this waste heap contained a great quantity of pitchblende, from which radium is extracted. A hundred men were set to work upon the dump, and not only radium but also a quantity of uranium was got from it.

Slag, the waste from the great blast furnaces of the North, is being turned into slag wool, the best of packings for steam pipes and boilers, slag bricks, and paving blocks. Scottish coal-owners have discovered that their long abandoned "rings" of waste coal have a very considerable value. As much as 25s. a ton has been paid for what was not long ago considered worse than useless.

Coal tar, cotton-seed, sawdust, soap waste, old bones—these and a hundred other "waste" products are now no longer waste, but, on the contrary, sources of wealth.

OLD EARTH CELLAR BEST FOR APPLES

One of the problems of the householder each year is what quantity of apples he can store economically, and for another question, "Why did not my apples keep well last winter?" or "Is there any way by which I can keep them better this year?" This does not apply, of course, to those who are fortunate in having the old fashioned cellar without a furnace, which was but frost-proof, and moist without being damp. It was and is in such cellar that apples can be kept to the best advantage and where they will best retain their flavour. The nearer the conditions approach those in this old earth cellar the better the results will be. First, the fruit should be kept as cool as possible without freezing. If the temperature can be kept between 35° and 40° F., this would be best. The higher the temperature the shorter the life of the fruit.

Next in importance is retaining the moisture in the fruit. If the individual specimens are exposed to a very dry atmosphere they will wither, hence the desirability of keeping them in such a way as to retain the moisture as much as possible, even though the air of the storage room be dry. This can be obtained, to some extent, by keeping the fruit in a closed package and, better still, in addition by wrapping each individual specimen in waxed or oiled paper, which will do much to preserve the moisture in the fruit, and to keep the disease from spreading from one specimen to another. It is also desirable, if one has nothing else in storage that will be adversely affected, to keep an open vessel with water in it in the room.

A careful choice of varieties should be made if one is going to lay in several barrels, or more than the family can use in a month or so, as notwithstanding favourable conditions for storage, the length of season that any variety will remain in prime condition is limited.

W. T. MACOUN, Dominion Horticulturist.

DISEASES OF APPLES

The percentage of disease, particularly rots and scald, found in apples in storage and on the markets, depends, according to United States Department of Agriculture, upon their whole past history; that is, upon the conditions under which they were grown and prepared for market, the amount of disease they showed when they were shipped or when they went into storage, and, finally, upon the conditions under which they were held in transit or in storage. The percentage of disease depends to a considerable extent also upon the length of time the apples have been kept in storage, those stored longest being the most seriously affected. Inspection of the commercial apple crop over a four-year period showed that the box crop suffered from a steady increase in percentage of disease from October till June; the barrel crop only from December to June.

An analysis of the records of the inspection service for 5,222 cars inspected during the four-year period, 1917 to 1921, is published in Department Bulletin 1253, "Diseases of Apples on the Market." Considering the inspections for the four-year period as a whole blue-mold rot occurred more commonly than any other disease. In the rots third; in the barrel crop, other rots exclusive of black rot, came second and black rot came third. Summer and fall varieties showed less disease, on the average, than winter or long-storage varieties.

In the barrel crop, the percentage of disease was less in cars from New York, Michigan, Virginia and West Virginia than in those from all other eastern states considered as a whole. The percentage of disease in the box crop was slightly heavier in cars from Idaho than in those from all other western states considered as a whole.

I respect all real religious creeds and do not interfere with any man's trust in them and always fair with those who do not. I would not exchange my Friend-ship for all the currency in this country. I am unspeakably grateful to my friends for each and every day that I am permitted to live, and I want to live that several will really miss me. I take the long, long trail, and I want so to live that my other will smile down and still call me boy.

Villages Inundated as Jumba River Overflows its Banks

ALLAHABAD, India, Oct. 4.—Floods extending southward from Northern India have inundated 100 villages. The Jumba river has reached the walls at Allahabad and the great Jumba bridge is threatened. The country between Allahabad and Isanagar on the Rohilkhand Kumaon railway is entirely submerged. The entire Delhi area has been covered by the flood waters, extending as far as six miles from the banks of swollen Jumba and tributary rivers. Crops are ruined and peasants are taking refuge in the tree tops.

NOVA SCOTIA TOO

Vancouver Sun.—Orders for more than a million boxes of Canadian fruits have resulted from the Canadian fruit exhibit at Wembley.

Since the Wembley Exhibition began, a million people have seen that fruit, admired its appearance, and were impressed with its superiority. And from the impressions gained by those million people have come those orders for a million boxes.

This is one kind of merchandising, the most expensive and least efficient way.

Trained advertising writers could describe that fruit in print and create an even stronger desire for it than by actually laying it before the public.

And the audience of those advertising writers, in Britain, would not be 1 but 42 million people.

The sales success of the Canadian fruit exhibit at Wembley proves that the only thing that stands between British Columbia fruit and the British market, or the domestic market, for that matter, is lack of proper merchandising methods to actualize the potential demand.

But as hostesses at dinner parties and receptions, they were of inestimable value to the leaders of the parties.

With the change to Unionists and Liberals, a new tendency came in. Wives of statesmen were less content to be decorative. They preferred to take an active part in the political life of their husbands. They were never embarrassed by the advances of the radicals are now doing.

That is, they did know—you have told them so in times past—but do they all remember it? We all know that Ivory Soap floats, and that Royal Baking Powder is absolutely pure, and that children cry for Castoria and the kind of soap that makes a skin you like to touch, etc., etc.—and we're not going to forget about them for a minute, because the manufacturers spend millions of dollars a year telling us about them, day by day, and week by week, and month by month. They take no chances on being forgotten. How about your business? Isn't it just as important that you be kept in mind by the buying public in your territory as it is to the national advertiser that his product be remembered? You can cover your trade territory more easily, more cheaply in proportion, and more thoroughly than the national advertiser can cover the whole country. The Hants County Exhibition opened at Windsor yesterday, the opening address being given by His Honor Lieut.-Gov. Grant. Although the exhibition is distinctly Hants there are a number of fruit and domestic exhibits from Kings and Annapolis counties.

The football season opened in New Brunswick last Saturday. The Mt. Allison team defeated Moncton by the score of 14 to 0, and the U. N. B. players defeated the St. John Trojans by the score of 19 to 0. The N. B. colleges evidently have some good teams.

Thursday, Friday, Sat.

The wonderfully fine weather of the last few weeks was followed by a storm of wind and rain which began on Tuesday night and is still in progress. Apple picking, which was proceeding very favourably, has been suspended, while the crop suffers because of the storm.

The death occurred at Halifax last Thursday of P. St. Clair Harris, Supervisor of the Royal Bank of Canada for the Maritime Provinces and Newfoundland. Mr. Harris, who was in his 66th year, had been in poor health for some time. He was a son of the late Edwin Harris, of Aylesford.

A special meeting of the Town Council was held on Tuesday evening. Since no intimation was given THE ACADIAN our representative was unable to be present. We learn, however, that the meeting was called to consider a draft made by the Highway Board for the balance claimed with interest, and that after some discussion the Clerk was instructed to return the draft unaccepted.

October 9, 10, 11

Word has been received from Vancouver of a memorial service for the late Dr. Everett W. Sawyer, held Sunday evening in the Fairview Baptist Church, Vancouver. A large number of Acadia graduates and friends were present to honor this outstanding teacher of former days. Among those who paid tributes to the memory of Dr. Sawyer were Mrs. J. W. DeB. Farris, M.D., Dr. Theodore H. Boggs and the pastor, Rev. A. S. Lewis, D.D.

The remains of the late William C. Archibald, whose death occurred last week in Virginia, arrived in Wolfville on Friday afternoon, and the funeral took place on the arrival of the train. Rev. Dr. Marshall conducted the service which was held at Willow Bank Cemetery, where interment was made. Those of the family present were the widow, Mrs. W. C. Archibald, of Paradise; a daughter, Mrs. Morrison, of Halifax; a sister, Mrs. Lewis, of Parraboro; and the sons, Chipman, of Halifax; Earl, of Boston; and Dr. W. C., of Paradise.

Come Early

A notable instance of one possessing a large number of living descendants is that of Mrs. Milledge Schofield, of White Rock. Mrs. Schofield, who has almost reached her eighty-fifth birthday, is remarkably active and well for her years. She has eight sons grown to manhood, seven of whom are married. She has fifty grandchildren and forty-five great-grandchildren, all living. Her husband died a few years ago, and one of the sons with his family resides with his mother in the old home. This, we imagine is an unusual case—even in the fine old county of Kings or province of Nova Scotia.

THE WORLD'S SERIES

Much interest has been manifested in the World's Baseball Series this year, between Washington, champions of the American League, and New York, champions of the National League. The first game played on Saturday was won by New York, the score being 4 to 3 in 12 innings. On Sunday Washington won by the same score. New York won on Monday by the score of 6 to 4, and Washington again evened the series Tuesday by winning 7 to 4. New York again took the lead yesterday when they scored six runs to Washington's two. The sixth game will be played today at Washington.

DEATH RATE IN CANADA LOWER

Decrease is Attributed to Great Advances in Medical Science

OTTAWA, Oct. 7.—Contrary to the impressions of five years ago, the mortality rate in Canada has decreased during the past few years, declared C. C. Ferguson, of Winnipeg, General Manager of a prominent Canadian Life Assurance Company, in an address here.

The low death rate during the past four or five years has astonished insurance companies, he said. Five years ago most companies were figuring on a higher death rate due to war causes and the effects of the influenza epidemic. Mr. Ferguson was inclined to attribute the low death rate to the great advance in medical science in recent years.

UNDER CANADIAN ENSIGN

SUNDAY AT THE METHODIST CHURCH

Harvest Sunday was commemorated at the Methodist church, on Oct. 6, 7, and 8. The decorations of autumn leaves, and various fruits, canned goods, and vegetables were very numerous and of a splendid quality, which will be packed and sent to the home of the deaconess at Jost's Mission, Halifax.

Dr. Hodgson's subject was Gal. 7. "Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap", and was well reasoned upon, intelligible and clear. Special music was rendered by the choir.

At the evening service Dr. Hodgson took for his subject Ex. 23-19. "The first fruits of the land thou shalt bring into the House of the Lord thy God", which was beautifully expounded and before his congregation. The Canning String Orchestra played during each hymn with the choir and congregation singing with great enthusiasm.

GOLF AND GOLFERS

America has another billion dollar industry. A recent advertisement in the Golfers Magazine contains the following statement: "The expenditures for golf during 1924 are estimated at: $100,000,000 for dues. 100,000,000 for tires. 50,000,000 for golf apparel. 40,000,000 for caddies. 30,000,000 for golf balls. 25,000,000 for golf property. 25,000,000 for club salaries. 25,000,000 for golf resort hotels. 20,000,000 for club houses. 20,000,000 for travel. 15,000,000 for golf clubs. 10,000,000 for seeds. 5,000,000 for tobacco. 5,000,000 for club furnishings. 5,000,000 for course equipment. 3,000,000 for lockers. 2,000,000 for golf bags. 2,000,000 for beverages. 1,000,000 for golf architects.

A total of nearly $500,000,000, and $2,000,000,000 worth of automobiles will be used by golfers during 1924. $1,000,000,000 will be expended by golfers on or because of golf alone."

These figures are not only significant as indicating the proportions that golf is assuming in a commercial and financial sense, but they are revealing as indicating also the time and energy which is being expended on the golf courses of Canada and the United States.

Golf, like many other things, is all right in moderation. For the executive who must spend long hours at his desk under mental strain it provides exercise and relaxation under ideal conditions. But, as such figures as those given above indicate, golf in recent years has become a recreation not only of the business men who need the exercise and who can afford it, but the pastime of many others who might be using their time and their money to better advantage.

There is a too general tendency of the time to play rather than work. It involves all classes—the muscle workers who want a forty hour week and the brain workers who want to knock off at four o'clock and take an extra day at the end of the week. And it embraces those who are not particularly anxious to work at all. Visitors to England report that over there the race tracks are largely patronized now by the unemployed and are having a great time at it.

What is required to bring about economic stability is a willingness to work and a spirit of public service, from the leaders in business and industry down through the rank and file of the equally essential artisans and laborers.—Financial Post.

BOBBED HAIR IN VOGUE IN 1950

"The new woman" will no longer be able to employ as a sign of her emancipation a bobbed head of hair. It has just been discovered in the little town of Wympington, Northamptonshire, England, that this fashion is at least 500 years old. The restoration of the parish church there has revealed a painting depicting women with their hair bobbed in the style of 1924.

Hidden under coating of thin plaster were discovered wall paintings representing the Resurrection and the Judgment. The plaster has now been carefully removed to show the decorations. Most of the figures in the paintings are women. Some have their hair falling about the shoulders but the artist has given the majority short hair, cut exactly in the manner of the modern girl's coiffure.

Rev. C. L. Drew believes the paintings are of the same age as the church which was built in 1950.

STORY OF THE POTATO

Food it was First Used Only for Pigs and Cattle.

The question of where the potato is indigenous and where introduced by man has never been strictly answered. It seems sure, however, that the potato native of the mountainous districts of tropical and subtropical America, Chile to Mexico and even as far north as the southern part of Colombia.

Data concerning the known use of potato for food are not very definite. It probably was first taken to Europe from Peru by Spaniards early in the sixteenth century and spread to Spain to Holland, Burgundy and Italy, though cultivated only as a curiosity in a few gardens and little known throughout.

In "The Complete Gardener," published in 1719, it is not mentioned. It was first used for pigs and cattle. Then, on account of its high yield, it was suggested that it be useful for the poor and prevent famine, due to the failure of the grain crops.

As early as 1663 the Royal Society of London adopted measures to encourage cultivation in England. It spread quickly in Ireland, but not until the middle of the eighteenth century did it acquire any real importance on the continent of Europe. Of its first cultivation as a crop in North America, little is known.

CHAIRMAN OF CONCILIATION BOARD

SMUGGLING AS A NATIONAL MENACE

Official announcement is made of the appointment of R. Home Smith, of Toronto, to be chairman of the Conciliation Boards which will investigate the commercial telegraphers' dispute with the Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Telegraph Companies.

Common sense is the best business doctor the world has ever known.

Smuggling has reached such high proportions it is stated in official circles that to constitute a real national problem. It is being carried on with run running, the goods being smuggled in constituting the return cargoes to this country. The smuggled goods are chiefly textiles, silk, ready-made clothing, boots and shoes and cigarettes. In addition it is claimed that there is a heavy smuggling of automobiles in spite of the licensing regulations which exist in Canada. It is recognized by the business affected that the Customs Department is not now equipped to cope with such wholesale operations as are now being carried on and which are considered to be a corollary of prohibition in the United States.

STATISTICIAN'S POINT OF VIEW

W. Babson has a world-wide reputation as an authority on statistics. More than that, his business advice and his periodical reports guide the operations of many of the largest business corporations in the States. In one of his recent reports he says, "The prosperity of our country depends upon the motives and purposes of the people. The motives and purposes are directed in the right course only through the education of the nation, so we business men should spend huge sums to develop those fundamental qualities of integrity, industry, faith and service, which make for true prosperity. This is not the time to reduce investments in schools, colleges or in the Y. M. C. A. This is the time of all times to increase such subscriptions.

APPLIES HERE ALL RIGHT

There are showier towns than our little town, there are towns that are bigger than this. And the people who live in the quieter towns don't know what you see in the wealthier towns that you don't see in a town that's small; and yet up and down, there is no other town like our little town after all.

In the glittering streets of the glittering town, with its palace and pavement and thrall, in the midst of the throng you will frequently long for your own little town after all. If you live and you work in your own little town, in spite of the fact that it's small, you'll find in the end that our own little town is the best little town after all.—Exchange.

TOO MUCH FOR IT

A Scotchman was found dead in front of a one-cent punching machine. The coroner found the death had been caused by over-exertion. Investigation disclosed a sign reading: "Your penny returned if you hit hard enough."

THE DEADLY CIGARETTE

"The Hook," Vancouver, published recently under the above heading, subjoined interesting article "by one who had tried it."

The trouble with the cigarette is this, it's not a smoke, it's a dope. The cigarette being milder than the pipe, is generally inhaled into the lungs. Now the lungs are made up of air cells and blood cells, separated by a thin delicate membrane. When the air cells are filled with the air, by breathing, the blood, passing through the blood cells, draws its nourishment from the air through this membrane and thus qualifies itself to supply the need of nerve and brain and muscle.

The cigarette is not a smoke, it's a dope, because, when inhaled, the smoke is drawn into the air cells of the lungs and the blood draws the narcotic through this thin membrane, and carries the poison to the whole body; debilitating the nervous system and reducing one's mental and physical efficiency. That's where the cigarette gets its deadly work.

Inhaling tobacco smoke sends a shot of dope into the blood through the lungs. That's why I say the cigarette is a dope. Being a dope it creates an ever-increasing desire for the narcotic, so that its addict cannot comfortably be any length of time without it.

This interferes with his steady application to business or labor, reduces his efficiency and hampers his social relations.

Worse than that, the effect of the smoke on the membranes of the lungs is such that continual inhaling is suicide. The smoke taken so freely into the lungs thickens these membranes, so that, even when the cigarette inhaler breathes good air, the blood cannot draw from the air the nourishment necessary to enable it to supply the needs of the body.

The result is that instead of climbing up in his vocation, he is reducing his efficiency and wrecking his constitution.

I know this because it is my own experience. I was a cigarette fiend.

When two of your friends who have both undergone the operation for appendicitis get together, they won't notice if you go away and leave them to talk it out.

WOMAN'S EGG BLUE CHIFFON DRESS IS TRIMMED IN ECRU

A delightfully youthful frock designed for wear in the late afternoon and evening is sketched above. The material is robin's egg blue chiffon, and the dress is simply trimmed, using deep bands of ecru lace for trimming. The little square collar is also of ecru lace. The collar is confined at the front by shirring, and pastel flower motifs appear on either side of the bodice.

REPRESENTS B. C.

G. G. McGeer is presenting the case of the British Columbia Government in the Crow's Nest Pass case at Ottawa. Mr. McGeer declared that if the Crow's Nest Pass commodity rates were statutory and the discriminations were justified, some British Columbia interests would be ruined in so far as getting into contiguous markets were concerned.

ROADS "SAFE FOR DEMOCRACY"

During the present season altogether too many automobiles fatalities have occurred in spite of constant warnings regarding carelessness and other causes of danger. Hardly a day passes without adding a victim to the blacklist of the roads. The road is generally held responsible for these casualties, but, in most cases, they should be charged to imprudence, ignorance or contempt of the law.

Numerous are the opportunities for accidents; a complete enumeration of them is impossible. They are well known to the public. Railway crossings are responsible each year for the loss of thousands of lives; the speed limit, whether on the highways, or on the approaches, road and street intersections, excessive speed also takes a large toll. Automobiles are not always to blame for these accidents. In many cases, however, they are, and in many cases can be avoided by using the required caution.

Valid excuses for accidents were never so few as at present. The speed limit is clearly indicated on the highways, whether automobiles travel in open country, in a town or in a village; timely notice is given of curves, bridges, and railroads; appropriate danger signals are placed where needed; all posters, or other commercial advertisements liable to confuse with official signs and mislead the public, are removed from the limits of the roads; no improvement liable to do away with some possible danger is omitted on the highways.

No efforts to make the highway safe can succeed without the help of the travelling public, and the lives of automobilists cannot be saved against their will. It is pointed out that the motorist should never forget that the law is made for their collective and individual benefit, and that its object is not to collect fines, limit their liberty or needlessly annoy them.

Don't ask a man who is more than sixty years old to relate some of the reminiscences of his youth unless you really want to hear some.

Now that it is possible to photograph noise, perhaps somebody will get a life-like picture of New York.

SIX INCHES OF SNOW

Considerable Damage Done by Heavy Downfall in Temiskaming.

NORTH BAY, Ont., Oct. 3.—Reports trickling in from various parts of Temiskaming today indicates that considerable damage was done by Wednesday's snow storm. Heavy wet snow fell to a depth of six inches in several parts, including the Cobalt area. Many farmers who had not taken in their grain had it flattened by the snow which, however, disappeared within twenty-four hours. The great majority of Temiskaming telephone lines are out of commission, having broken under the strain of the snow clinging to them. In the Milberta section, several roads were blocked by trees which were broken down by the weight of the snow. Beautiful Indian summer weather has been experienced by all of the North for the past two days.

GOOD RECIPES

Cocunut Ice

This delicious sweet is inexpensive, easily made, and requires no cooking. Ingredients: Three and one-quarter cups icing sugar, one-half pound desiccated cocconut, three tablespoonfuls of cold water, a few drops of cochineal. Method: Roll sugar to free it from lumps, put it in basin with cocconut, and thoroughly mix, add water and knead well. When formed into one firm piece divide equally. Press one-half on plate and shape into large firm square. Add a few drops of cochineal to the other half, and knead well till the color is even, then put it on white half and press together. Leave it for twenty-four hours, then cut into bars.

Chocolate Cream Pie

One-half cup grated chocolate, one cup sugar, two tablespoonfuls cornstarch, two cups milk, two eggs, one teaspoon vanilla, one-eighth teaspoon salt. Melt chocolate over hot water. Mix sugar, cornstarch and salt. Add milk slowly to melted chocolate, stirring until smooth. Add dry ingredients and stir and cook over hot water until thick and smooth. Add yolks of eggs well beaten and cook a minute longer. Cool and add vanilla. Pour into a baked pie shell and cover with a meringue made with the whites of the eggs beaten until stiff and dry with one-quarter cup of sugar. Bake in a slow oven until a light brown.

Fig Cake

One cup of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of butter, two-thirds of a cup of sweet milk, two cups of flour, whites of four eggs and two teaspoons of baking powder. Sift the flour lightly before measuring it. Flavor to suit the taste. This will make three layers. After baking the layers, put between them the following, which has been cooked together ten minutes: Half a pound of figs, chopped fine, one teaspoon oil water, and half a teaspoon of sugar.

Carrot Pie

Two eggs, half cup milk, one cup mashed carrots, one teaspoon lemon juice, two tablespoonfuls melted butter, half teaspoon cinnamon and allspice, one-quarter teaspoon nutmeg, pinch of salt. Beat yolks of eggs, add milk and spices and butter and pour in pastry-lined dish, and bake about twenty minutes. Then cover with meringue of white of eggs and sugar and flavor with lemon. Put in oven to brown.

Baked Hash

One half pound round steak, one and one-half cups chopped carrots, one cup chopped raw potatoes, three onions, one cup milk, one teaspoon salt, one-quarter teaspoon pepper, one teaspoon minced parsley. Put meat, carrots, potatoes and onions through the food chopper. Mix thoroughly and add milk and seasoning. Put in a casserole or baking dish, cover with coarse bread crumbs, dot with bits of butter and bake an hour.

ORGAN AGAIN HEARD

Silent since 1918, when it was damaged by a shell from a German long range gun, the famous organ in the church of St. Gervais in Paris is again in use. Although it was not directly hit by the shell, which killed scores of worshippers in the church, the organ was seriously damaged by steel splinters which pierced the pipes and shattered the case. The repair work was a matter of laborious patching, and required considerable time. It was found necessary to replace only the bellows. The exact date of the making of the organ is not known, but it is believed to have been built in the early part of the sixteenth century. It was played upon for generation after generation by the noted family of organists, the Couperins. When the pipes were being put in order it was found that many birds' nests, swallows and martins, had been built inside them. Somebody is asking for the words of an old song, "The Increase of Crime," which was sung sixty years ago. Sixty years from now will anybody ask for the words of an old song, "Yes, We Have No Bananas," that was sung sixty years ago?

Mrs. J. M. Fisher left on Tuesday for Montreal, where she will spend the winter.

Mr. Chisholm, of Pictou, and Miss Neely, of Summerville, were in town Monday attending the funeral of Mrs. Murray McNealy.

Rev. J. L. Eash, M.A., formerly of Maritime Province, and more recently of West Summerville, British Columbia, has accepted a call to the pastorate of the Hantsport Baptist church, and will begin his ministry the second Sunday in November. Mr. Eash went west a few years ago for the recovery of his wife's health. This object having been accomplished, he is returning to his former associations, where he held pastorates at North Hantsport, Parraboro, Summerside, E. I., and Fredericton, N. B. He will be welcomed not only by the Hantsport church, but also by the whole Maritime Baptist convention of which he was a conspicuous member for a number of years, having served President for a term.

On Wednesday morning, Oct. 1st, at a residence of the officiating clergyman, Rev. F. E. Barrett, Windsor, two of our most popular young people, Gertrude Clara Fullerton, daughter of Mrs. N. Forsythe, and George Currie, of Currie & Son, were united in marriage in the presence of immediate relatives and a few intimate friends, the double service being used. Both bride and groom were unattended. The bride was charming in a gown of grey tulle, with iridescent trimmings. After the ceremony the happy couple left by auto for Prince Edward Island, the former home of the groom. They wish them many years of wedded happiness.

MRS. MURRAY MCNEALY

The entire community was saddened Thursday when it became known that Mrs. Murray McNealy had passed the Great Beyond, from which no traveller returns. The deceased had been ill for some time but bore her sufferings with cheerfulness and Christian fortitude. She will be greatly missed not only in the home but in the town as well. She is survived by her husband, of Montreal, who came to be present at the funeral, and one son, Kenneth, who has the sympathy of the whole community.

The funeral services were held from her late residence on Monday afternoon, conducted by the Rev. Dr. Dickson, assisted by Rev. J. W. Prestwood, D.D. The choir sang the following hymns, "Hold Thou My Hand" and "The Sands of Time are Sinking." The male quartette impressively rendered "We are Going Down the Valley." Many beautiful floral tributes to her memory were in evidence. Interment was in Riverbank Cemetery.

MARY OF MARGARET, D. MICHENER

Dec. 1st, 1849. Well, the month of November has flown away and winter about to set in; we have had a very pleasant autumn. This day has been equally and I thought there would be fewer scholars, but they were all here. Mr. Michener came over for us to go and spend the evening with him. Brother Robert came also. The night closed very stormy.

2nd. I stayed all night at Mary's, and it was very cold coming home, and froze hard. I went to Father's after getting and stopped till the evening service. I finished reading the Life of Mrs. Judson; it is very interesting, only they encountered many trials.

3rd. I had two new scholars today, and the children enjoy themselves well playing in it. I have been to call on Mrs. Barker for the first time since she lived there, and then I went to Mrs. Beckwith's for a call. I think I will go over to Grandfather's and spend the evening. Ann went up to Windsor in the "Sterling" yesterday. There have been several returned from sea the past week, Joseph and Asa Davidson among the number.

Friday evening, 7th. Last evening, John Rob and Ann came down; we studied Geography—which we find very interesting—after we were done with the maps we sang some of the songs which will never wear out as long as we live. How I wished Simeon was here too. Barbara stayed all night with me. This morning was much colder. I was invited over to Capt. Michener's to dinner. They had pigeon stew, which is the first I ever ate. I am to stop with Maria to-night.

8th. I came home early, did up the work and then went to Emily Ann's. After supper I started for Father's. I was much surprised and pleased to meet George Holmes by the school house. He got in to Halifax on Friday morning and then came up in the Saturday coach. I then called in to see Marcia and Woodbury. When I arrived at Father's I found them studying Geography, which we continued till Joe Davidson and David Huntly came in. We spent a most pleasant evening.

9th. We attended meeting in the morning. The house was well filled, many of the sailors being there who have lately returned home. In the afternoon we read and sang, then went to evening prayer meeting. I came again to spend the night with Maria.

10th. I had eighteen scholars today. Marianne Davidson, my brothers and sister Ann have been here all the evening. Barbara is staying with me.

11th. Wednesday evening. My family have all departed and it seems very dull. Mrs. Rebecca Beckwith has been in for a call. Last evening I took my work and went over to Capt. Michener's. I had just got to work when Ann came in for me to go to Olivia's. I soon got ready and we went down accompanied by John and Rob. We found Chipman there, and soon John Davidson and Louisa came in. We had the pleasure of looking over some new books, then we had a sing. David Huntly came also, after a meeting he had been attending. We all had a lunch of bread and cheese, then started for home. I stopped at Mary's; she left the candle burning for me.

Monday, 17th. I spent Saturday night and Sunday at Father's. After meeting we read some of the "Messenger" a communication from our colporteur, James Tabor; he is in Steviacke and the Lord has blessed his labors, and he has been instrumental in bringing many souls to Christ. The people of Steviacke have sent for ministers to have him ordained as their pastor. We also read a journal by I. E. Bill who has gone to England, and find it very interesting. We attended prayer meeting in the evening. It had been appointed as a special thanksgiving service for the safe return of the sailors. Joseph brought Adah to school today for the first. Mary and family have spent the day at Mother's; the boys and Ann have spent the evening here studying Geography.

LIFE

Give me a taste of life!
Not a tang of a seasoned wine;
Not the drug of an unearned bread;
Not the grape of an untitled vine.
The life that is really life;
That comes from no fount afar,
But springs from the toil and strife
In the world of things as they are.

Give me the whole of life!
The joy, the hope, and the pain,
The struggle whose end is strength,
The loss that is infinite gain.
Not the drought of a cloudless sky,
Not the rust of a fruitless rest;
Give me the sun and the storm;
The calm and the white sea crest.

Give me the best of life!
To live in the world with God,
Where the seed that is sown and dies
Lifts a harvest over the sod.
Where beauty and truth are one,
Where the right must have its way,
Where the storm-clouds part for stars,
And the starlight heralds the day.

Give me the toil of life!
The music and mind to dare,
No luxury's lap for my head,
No idly won wealth to share.
Whether by pick or plane,
Whether by tongue or pen,
Let me not live in vain;
Let me do a man's work among men.

Britain has mandates and protectorates in most of the territory shown on the map. Mecca has been taken by rebellious tribesmen known as the Wahabites, who have beaten the forces of King Hussein of the Hejaz. The British will probably interfere in this conflict. A more direct menace is that of the Turks who are threatening Mosul, an oil field centre. They have twice been beaten back by British airmen. The Turks are apparently ignoring the reference of the dispute to the League of Nations.

THE POSSIBLE BUT IMPROBABLE

(From the Muncie Evening Press.)
Here is a list of things that are possible, but improbable:
Beating a locomotive to a crossing.
Taking a long vacation and keeping a bank account.
Running the car a month without any expense except gas and oil.
Paying for an expensive car and an expensive home at the same time.
Catching a fish that is as big as the fish your friend caught last summer.
Getting out of big city hotels without tipping the help.
Finding the rattles and knocks in your own car.
Getting more money than you know what to do with.
Being engaged and then getting out of it.
Falling heir to a fortune.
So why attempt any of them?

A good temper should be well kept.
A bird one—ditto.

Beats Electric or Gas

A new oil lamp that gives an amazingly brilliant, soft, white light, even better than gas or electricity, has been tested by the U. S. Government and 35 leading universities and found to be superior to 10 ordinary oil lamps. It burns without odor, smoke or noise—no pumping up, is simple, clean, safe. Burns 94% air and 6% common kerosene (coal oil).

The inventor, J. M. Johnson, 246 Craig St. W., Montreal, is offering to send a lamp on 10 days' FREE trial, or even to give one FREE to the first user in each locality who will help him introduce it. Write him today for full particulars. Also ask him to explain how you can get the agency, and without experience or money make $250 to $500 per month.

GENTLEMEN OF THE ROAD

Montreal recently observed, "No accident week." Perhaps there were fewer accidents than usual that week but no sooner was the week past than an unusual number of accidents were recorded over the week end and auto accidents were in the majority among them. In issuing a warning against accidents previous to the observance of the "safety" week attention was called to the Motor Vehicle Act and the following fourteen "Rules of the Road" contained in the safety pledge certificate, in use in New York, were given prominence:

1. To be always ready for any emergency by watching the road and concentrating upon the driving.
2. To watch out for curves, crossings and bridges.
3. To always keep the automobile under perfect control.
4. To keep the brakes and steering gear in good working order.
5. Never to stop or slow down without signalling to the driver of the car behind.
6. Never to take a turn without caution and warning.
7. Never to cut off a vehicle unless there is ample space.
8. Never to stop in a narrow place in the road, if other drivers are thereby inconvenienced.
9. Never to start out from the curb without ascertaining that the road is clear.
10. To consider the safety and comfort of other automobiles as well as one's own.
11. Never to try and save a minute or two, if by that the lives of other persons are endangered.
12. To obey all the rules of the road as laid down by law and by common sense.
13. See to it that the chauffeur or other persons driving one's automobile observe these rules.
14. To be always careful, vigilant, courteous and thoughtful—a gentleman of the highway.

An automobile owner who was a "bug" on fuel saving put a new-fangled carburetor on his car. It was guaranteed to save 20 per cent on gasoline. Next, he added special spark plugs that were good for another 20 per cent. To save another 20 per cent., an intake super heater was put on. Then the crank case was filled with an oil that would add 20 per cent more. Next, he installed a patented rear axle, good for 20 per cent, and finally equipped the old bus with high-pressure "cords" that would bring another economy of 20 per cent. Now that he has a fuel economy of 120 per cent., it is necessary for him to stop every 100 miles and drain the gasoline tank to stop it from overflowing.—Detroit Motor News.

CHAPTER XX

For a few days Rod went about a little, picking up threads of old acquaintance with places and people. The uneasy consciousness of a heart which might fail him at any moment troubled him now and then. Once or twice he felt that strange fluttering. But it did not stop—not quite. He wondered if he had passed a crisis that first night at home when he felt himself locked in a grapple with death itself. And so he was very careful. It was easy to be apathetic, to be completely acquiescent. Nothing, he thought, would ever again make his heart swell with such repressed passion as the sights and sounds of the western front, the carnival of non-combatants in Paris and London, the bitterness with which for so long he had seen the agonies and endurance and destructiveness of war as sheer waste—blind, blundering waste, the offspring of cupidity wedded to arrogant ignorance.

He wanted to forget what could not be changed. Here it was easy to forget, at least to thrust it all into the background, now that he was home. For a time he would rest. When his heart strengthened he would take stock of his resources and move with determined purpose in some direction, toward some as yet indefinite goal.

In the meantime, free from military discipline, interminable parades, orders, red tape that fettered the hands of initiative and bound up a man's mouth so that he needed only two phrases in his vocabulary, "Yes, sir" and "No, sir," he went about in his native city observing, noting, listening in clubs, homes, on the streets, in hotel lobbies where he went to meet other men who had just come back.

As the landscape endured and the outstanding architectural features, many things had changed, contrary to his first glad impression, were still changing at an accelerated pace in this winter of 1919. In four years and a half his native city, when he came to examine it closely, presented a transformed physiognomy.

Its lifeblood, people and money, flowed in a heavier stream through complicated arteries. Vancouver was bigger and better, he heard on every hand. New industries, shipyards, shipping, more elaborate affairs. The war had done a great deal for British Columbia, an elderly banker naively remarked to him.

Rod conceded that it probably had. But he had also done something "to" British Columbia. He couldn't say just what. It wasn't clear enough in his mind. But he could feel it. Or perhaps it was only himself. He could not be sure. He could dimly apprehend a difference. His world was changed. Phil was dead. Grandfather Norquay took his long sleep beside other dead Norquays in the plot at Hawk's Nest. Grove flourished largely, a scintillating comet, streaming across the moneyed spaces.

Rod sometimes paused after dark in some distant part of the city to look at the flamboyant sign with a speculative interest, without the old resentment, but with a shade of disapproval. Grove was become a big man—Rod couldn't escape that conclusion—a big man in his chosen field. Scarcely a day but some newspaper quoted him. He figured in local print co-equal with the Fenwick Conference and the latest authentic report of Lenine's death. Nearly nine years now of waxing great in the financial firmament. Grove bade fair to win greater fame and fortune than that old forbear of his who beat around the Horn to found a family in the wilderness where the land filled his eyes with pleasure and his soul with peace.

Would old Roderick have found pleasure and profit in discounting notes, clipping coupons at so much per cent, buying and selling bonds and mortgages, squeezing little debtors and bolstering up big ones for a consideration? Rod smiled at the quaint notion.

But he had evidently underestimated Grove's capacity. Grove had his community behind him. His finger was in every pie. His skill at extracting plums was envied and admired.

"He's what they mean when they talk about the greatest of our country," Rod thought cynically. "That sort of thing."

Oliver Thorn had sold his timber to the Norquay Estate and retired to live in a cottage on the Capilano slope fronting on the city, where he could, as he told Rod, spend his last years seeing the sun rise from behind the Connaught range and set behind the far, blue ramparts of Vancouver Island. John P. Wall, Grove's father-in-law, had made a fortune in building wooden ships and another in airplane spruce. Wall's youngest son had been killed overseas, but his eldest had been too precious an asset to the community to risk his life in war. Isabel was a beauty, still unmarried. (It seemed to Rod an astonishing thing when Mary told him Isabel was her dearest friend.) The Demes and Richbons flourished, with one or two gaps in the younger ranks. They had grown richer with the war, vastly more sure of themselves, setting a pace in the social parade that lesser folk found hard to follow.

There were two avenues open along which Rod could saunter to exercise this detached observance of his own people: the times which automatically opened to him, and brief daily contacts with men downtown. Socially things seemed a little more feverish, people just a trifle keener in the futile pursuit of futile diversions, the dancing just a little more frankly sensuous, the drinking a little freer, the talk looser. If one couldn't or wouldn't keep the pace one was "slow." It amused Rod and it vaguely troubled him. These people seemed so remote from so many things of importance that pressed close on them, matters that constituted both a warning and a threat. Downtown it was worse. Uptown links—down town. The economic link—the strongest link in the invisible chain—shackled them together whether they knew it or not.

And downtown was frankly of the make, with the most shrewd and far-seeing, already privately dubious about a let-down in the swift flow of affairs that followed the close of European hostilities. Perhaps it had always been the same. He had not been aware how consistently material, how harshly practical, the world of commerce must be. But he couldn't get used to that, because they tot up Canada's share in the reparations, the gloating on what enlarged African and Asiatic possession meant to trade, their chesty pride in having swept the Hun from the seas (as if they had done it in their office chairs). He couldn't get used to that, because it was invariably accompanied by an undertone of growling about confiscatory taxation, enormous pension bills.

Here and there some elderly hardshell solemnly viewed with alarm three items debited to the war: first, the growing demand for labor for shorter hours, increased pay and a voice in the conduct of industries for which they furnished the motive power; second, the Bolshevik upheaval in Russia which constituted a horrific menace to the sacred rights of private property; third, the military strength and insistent demands of France.

The war as a business proposition! Rod got up and walked away from a group of men in a club who rather vindictively discussed these important phases of the European debacle. If that were all—commerce—shipping—iron—coal—territory—indemnities. If that were all! His heart wouldn't stand his talking to those bankers and merchants and manufacturers and brokers as he wished to talk. He left them. What was held as piracy and brigandage for the individual became somehow the unchallenged privilege of a nation, if only the scale of operations were large enough. The Barbary corsairs were at least open in their demands. They flew the Jolly Roger and their victims walked the plank without ado. Nor did the pirates get their fighting done by proxy and then grumble because they found it expensive.

Yes, the world, his world, had changed. Of all that he had known through youth and early manhood only his wife—like the sea and the mountains—remained steadfast, a desirable reality. Now, more than ever, he was filled with gratitude and wonder that she had stood loyal, devoted, staunch as a rock in the bewildering flux of a period that seemed to him, in occasional somber moods, to have quickened the disintegration of men and the cherished virtues of men to a degree that made him apprehensive.

This couldn't be the reality of things, he assured himself. He had somehow got them twisted. His vision and his understanding must be askew. He had to stop pondering about it all. It was difficult for him to do this. He had always been a thinking being. That faculty had cursed him in France. On duty in trenches, in action, in long lonely vigils, his mind had hammered him with insistent questions and speculations on the why and the wherefore of human activities. Many an answer that came like the answer to a sum saddened him. One could not see too clearly.

He found it so now. But at least he, as an individual, was not too deeply involved in the stand clear of all this feverish hurrying and scurrying to nowhere after nothing. There must be something a man could do in the world that would bring him dividends in satisfaction of accomplishment, as well as dollars. For him, because his forbears had been both adventurous and far-seeing, there was no immediate economic pressure, and he was free to look to the future. He had no great responsibilities, beyond himself and Mary and their boy. If he needed more than the minor share which he held in the Norquay estate, he could surely get it without bowing his head and twisting his moral sense awry before the Moloch of commerce.

The more he saw of town the more he desired to turn his back on it. Not because it was town but because for so long he had had his fill of noise and motion. To sit amid a great silence, the strange, restful hush of a forest, in the shadow of great mountains,—that calm, secure peace, to hear only the sighing of wind in high mountain branches, the muted song of running water, the whistle of birds' wings,—that was his wish.

Practical wisdom forbade. There was really one place where he longed to be with Mary and his son, and they could not go there. Hawk's Nest was no longer his home. It was Grove's. His road and Grove's diverged too sharply for him to go there even as a guest. Elsewhere they could not find comfort at that season. It was a winter of sleet and snow, of alternate frosts and rains. A half-sick man couldn't go camping like a pioneer with a woman and a child. And it was not camping such as that Rod longed for, he knew, as the spacious background and comfortable security of his birthplace.

Whereupon, as a sensible man eschews the unattainable, he put it out of his mind. In the spring,—he and Mary lay awake nights planning what they would do in the spring.

It came home from one of these desultory excursions abroad a little before dinner one evening.

"Your father has phoned twice since five o'clock," Mary told him. "He asked you to have you call him up when you came in."

Rod got his conviction.

"You telephoned, pater," he said.

"Was it anything of importance?"

"Well, yes. Can you come down to the club after dinner, Rod? If not tonight, then by nine in the morning?"

"I'll come tonight. Say eight o'clock."

He hung up the receiver. As he got ready for dinner his mind was divided between the playful squeals of his son romping in the living room and the almost plaintive note in his father's voice over the wire. Norquay senior had changed with everything else. He had aged. Losing Phil had been a blow. But he was a proud man—and he had two sons left. That grief had not put care lines in his face, or caused the abstracted brooding into which he sometimes relapsed. Rod understood, of course, that the war had completed the break-up of the old family life at Hawk's Nest which Grove's embarkation on a career had begun, or Grove's personality had begun. His father admitted that he no longer cared to live at Hawk's Nest.

"One doesn't like to be alone all the time," he had put it quite simply. "Too many ghosts haunt those corridors for an old man. And at one's age one does not care to set up an establishment in town. When any of the others find occasion in summer, I go to Hawk's Nest. Otherwise I live at the club."

Yet the place was kept up. Stagg, the butler, his wife who ranked as housekeeper, a cook, two maids, and two gardeners held a sinecure. One could, Rod assumed, step in and find Hawk's Nest quite as of old.

He came back to his father. What bothered him? It couldn't be money or affairs. The Norquay estate was rock-ribbed. Timber, land, gilt-edged securities. It must simply be that he was getting old and lonely. When a man is sixty and all his life has been spent in a well-appointed home, surrounded by a fairly numerous family and still more numerous relatives, he can hardly reconcile himself to the empty shell of a house, or the artificial atmosphere of even the most elaborately appointed club. Rod felt sorry for him. But if Grove hadn't failed to carry on the family tradition, Hawk's Nest would still be the year-around rendezvous of the clan, as it had always been. No effect without a cause. Rod put aside the thought that his elder brother could be blamed for a great deal if one chose to be critical.

His father sat smoking a cigar in a chair that commanded the club entrance, and he led the way to his rooms as soon as Rod appeared.

He took some papers off a table and sat fusing with them. He didn't seem inclined to talk at first, beyond a few casual remarks. Rod waited. He knew his father. He felt that something was coming,—something that rested with a great weight on the elder man's mind. Since Rod came home there seemed to have arisen between them a more keenly sympathetic understanding than had ever existed before. It wasn't a matter of words. It was a feeling. Rod divined intuitively that his father had some deep trouble to share with him. He could not have defined any reason for this belief. It existed as a belief. In that conviction he waited.

"Five years ago," Norquay senior began abruptly. "I looked forward to sitting back with a pipe and slippers and a book while my sons carried on in the old way. For a hundred and thirty years, to speak precisely, we have gone ahead solidifying our position, doing well by ourselves and all connected with us. We seemed—as a family—to have acquired a permanence, a solidarity, beyond that of any family in this province. We have become a sort of institution. We were here first. Of the exploring adventurers, we were the first to take root. You know the family history. We have helped to make this country what it is. We have acquired a great deal of material power, yet I do not recall that we have ever abused it. In each generation we have had a lot of faithful service, and we have had it because we have scrupulously observed some form of obligation to those who served us. Men have trusted us as being persons entirely trustworthy. We have not been Shylocks. We have not been arrogant. We have never been greedy for more."

Five years earlier Rod would have assented, as a matter of course. Now he stirred slightly in his chair, as his father paused, and observed dispassionately:

"Would you include Grove in that last?"

"I am coming to Grove," Norquay senior answered. "To arrive at Grove by a logical sequence is the reason for this summing-up of ourselves. A few weeks before your grandfather died he said to me, 'My father once prophesied that Hawk's Nest would some day hatch out an eagle. What's the last hatchling? Sparrows. Sparrows! Quite apropos of nothing. We hadn't even been talking. He grew very uncertain in his mind at the last. A great age, Rod. Nearly ninety. He scarcely comprehended the war. Grove was there with a house party. I think their high spirits annoyed him. Sparrows!'"

He contemplated the rug with a fixed frown.

"I wonder if he were right," he said at last.

To be continued.

Minsard's Liniment for Dandruff.

'LINING THE CONNAUGHT TUNNEL

Upper left—In spite of heavy snowfalls and below zero weather the work of lining the Connaught Tunnel is continued through the winter months. The cloud-wrapped heights of Mount Abbott and Ross Peak stand as western sentinels of the little town.

Upper right—Glacier, B.C., showing Mount Macdonald, 9,482 feet, through which the five mile Connaught Tunnel passes, with an altitude of 10,000 feet, is on the western slope.

Lower left—The resident engineer's bungalow nestled among giant evergreens on the banks of the Illecillewaet River.

Lower right—Western Portal of the Connaught Tunnel, showing the face boss and the two huge 14 ft. steel fans which ventilate the "big hole."

High up on the crest of the lofty Selkirk with half a dozen of the finest mountain peaks in the world hunching their snow-clad shoulders about its rows of trim brown houses, lies the picturesque town of Glacier on the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway through British Columbia. Three and a half miles distant from this little construction centre, which has virtually been called into being through the lining of the Connaught Tunnel, hangs the great Illecillewaet Glacier on the slopes of Mount Macdonald and two miles nearer nestles Glacier House, the annual mecca of thousands of summer tourists.

Few of the surrounding peaks at Glacier are less than 9,000 feet in altitude. The famous Cheops, Mount Sir Donald, Ross, Eagle and Abbott Peaks encircle the little settlement. In winter time a blanket of snow enfolds town and mountains alike. In spring the brilliant yellow slide lilies follow the ever-receding snow line as it climbs higher and higher up the mountain sides. Life is enlivened in the summer months by the crowds of guests who throng Glacier House and transform the scene again with generous splashes of orange, crimson and russet.

Common interest in the great engineering project under way has brought about a very definite community spirit at Glacier. For almost every youngster's daddy works in the big tunnel in one or other of the various branches of work which the lining demands, and every household is regulated by a schedule of working hours which begins at 5 a.m. and ends at 11 p.m. Half a hundred children attend the little brown school house and various clubs for the grown-ups provide interests of a recreational and cultural nature.

Engineers, foremen, carpenters, machinists, drillers, electricians, laborers and train crews make up the wage earners among the 600 residents of Glacier. Single men live in a well ordered camp. Here, as in the little homes where the men with families live, all the conveniences of a modern city are enjoyed including electric lights and running water piped from a nearby mountain stream.

The lining of this five mile tunnel, the longest on the American continent, with a steel reinforced concrete jacket represents one of the most interesting engineering projects now under way anywhere in the world.

Beneath 6,000 feet of mountain the Connaught Tunnel cuts under Mount Macdonald between the stations of Connaught and Glacier. With the opening of this underground short-cut in 1916 the Canadian Pacific Railway overcame the many difficulties which the old Rogers Pass route had presented. Track curvature to an amount corresponding to seven complete circles was eliminated; the summit attained by the Railway was reduced by 555 feet; the trackage was shortened by 600 and a half miles and more than four miles of snow fields which had been necessary on the slopes of Mount Macdonald were dispensed with.

The lining of the "big hole" was begun in 1920 and when this work is completed the Connaught Tunnel will stand as one of the finest and most complete engineering jobs in the universe. Undertaken in the name of safety, the Connaught Tunnel has always been a "safety first" proposition. Throughout its construction days, during the eight years it has been in operation and the four years that it has already taken to line it, it has been singularly free from accident.

Nearly 600,000 sacks of Canadian cement will have gone into the lining of the Connaught Tunnel when it is finished. Practically all the machinery used in the work is Canadian made, including the huge compressors and powerful motors. The four types of reinforced steel collapsible forms, which are used in the various stages of the lining process, came from a western Canadian plant and the Sydney E. Jenkins Company, B.C., Limited, construction engineers are in charge of its lining.

The tunnel's concrete jacket is completed in sections 22 feet long, each section taking about four or five days to prepare, when it is sometimes necessary to do considerable blasting, one day to fill with concrete and three days in which to set. Six complete sets of forms are at work within the tunnel which means a completed section for every working day in the week, or a total of 132 feet in six days.

More than 100 powerful flood lamps illuminate the tunnel at these six working points. Owing to the remarkable ventilating system, which in itself is one of the most interesting and important features of the tunnel, working conditions are excellent. At the western portal two great steel fans, driven by two 500 h.p. four cylinder semi-Diesel engines, turn at the rate of 255 revolutions a minute driving a brisk breeze through the five-mile length of this great underground passage. The ventilation thus created makes it possible for trains to pass through the tunnel with practically no discomfort to passengers and for workmen to remain at their tasks for eight consecutive hours without detriment to health or vigor.

One comes upon many surprising things in the course of a walk through the great double-tracked tunnel. Grains of wheat fallen from the thousands of cars of Canada's 1923 bumper crop which have passed through on their way to the port of Vancouver have taken root for many yards within each portal and the tiny field mice ever in search of provender scamper across the tracks within the very heart of the tunnel. At two points in the tunnel wall does lead through the solid quartzite rock to the pioneer here and here in this miniature tunnel one finds two brilliantly illuminated and immaculate "white lunches." White capped chefs preside in these underground restaurants dispensing steaming bowls of soup and fragrant coffee to the small army of workers who are bringing to completion the lining of the Connaught Tunnel.
