Plot That Failed, OR, Love That Would Not Be Denied.

CHAPTER V.

Too delighted, perhaps, for my Lady Lackland, from her place of espionage in a corner, put up her eyes and scanned her daughter's rapt and sometimes smiling face with something that was not altogether a pleased expression.

"Who is that good-looking young fellow with whom Ethel's dancing?" she asked of the dowager Lady Barnwell, a noted scandalmonger, and an authority on every one's position and eligibilities.

"That is young Fairfax. Handsome, is he not? Pity he's so poor."

"Poor, is he?" said the countess, grimly.

"Oh, yes, dreadfully. Works for his living—a writer, artist, or something of that sort. Really, I don't know exactly. He is in the Temple. Very amusing companion, evidently. Lady Ethel looks charmed with her partner."

"Yes," said Lady Lackland, coldly, and in her heart of hearts she determined that her daughter should receive a lecture upon the imprudence of wasting a dance upon such doubtful and dangerous men as Bertie Fairfax.

Meanwhile, Ethel was enjoying herself, and when Bertie, whose handsome face was beaming with quiet satisfaction and pleasure, softly suggested that they should try the corridor, Lady Ethel, after a moment's hesitation on the score of prudence, replied with an affirmative, and they sought the lobby.

Here there were a seat for the lady and a leaning-post for Mr. Fairfax, and the conversation which had been interrupted was taken up again.

Bertie was in the midst of an eloquent defense of a favorite artist, of whom Lady Ethel did not quite approve, when Lord Fitz again appeared.

"What an eel you are, Bert! I've been everywhere for you. I say, we're going down to Coombe Lodge; it's so beastly hot up here in town, and we're going to make a little summer picnic party; you know, just a nice number. Cecil Carlton, Leonard Waltham and his sister, and two or three more. My sister is going, ain't you, Ethel? Will you come?"

"Thanks," said Bertie, with something like a flush, and certainly a sparkle in his light eyes. "But I am booked to Leicester Dodson."

"Oh, yes, the Cedars; what a bore for us. Never mind, the Lodge isn't far off, and, if you go down, we shall all be together."

"Yes," said Bertie, glancing at the fair face beneath him, which was turned, with a quiet look of interest, to her brother; "yes. When do you go?"

"Next week, if Ethel can get herself away from this sort of thing."

"I shall be very glad to go," said Ethel; "I am longing for the green trees and a little country air."

"It's done, then; all the odds taken," said simple Lord Fitz.

At that moment came up Ethel's next partner.

Bertie relinquished her, with a smothered sigh. He knew that he should not see her again that night, for her programme was full.

"We may meet in a country lane next week," he said, softly.

"We may," she said, with a smile that parted her lips bewitchingly, and she was called away.

Bertie looked after her, then slowly descended the broad stairs, got his crush hat and strolled into the open street.

"That's the most sensible thing you've done for the last two hours," said Leicester Dodson's voice, behind him. "I'll follow your example," and he took out his cigar case. "Here, my man," he added, as his neat brougham drove up.

"Let us walk," said Bertie.

And they started slowly for the club.

It was very hot there, however, and the party were soon in Leicester's chambers, which were in the same inn and only one floor below Bertie's.

Leicester Dodson was a wealthy man, and quite able to afford luxurious apartments in the Albany, or at Meurice's, but he preferred a quiet set of chambers near those of his best friend, Bertie.

He did not work in them, but he read a great deal, and he enjoyed half an hour now and then spent in watching his hard-working friend.

He would sit in Bertie's armchair, with his legs extended before him, watching Bertie engaged on some article or poem or drawing, and, as he watched, would almost wish that he also had to work for his living.

So Mr. Leicester was somewhat of a philosopher and a cynic, as Bertie had said, and at times found life rather wearisome.

To-night he drew himself a chair—Bertie was extended upon an ancient, but comfortable, sofa, and lighting a fresh cigar, rang for claret and ice.

"Dreadfully hot, Bert. What on earth makes us hang about this horrible town, in this terrible weather? Fancy staying in London when all the green fields are holding out their hands and shouting, 'Come, and roll on us!' Fashion is a wonderful thing—so are you. Why on earth don't you speak? I never knew you so silent for so many minutes together, in my life. Are you asleep?"

"No," said Bertie. "Push the claret across the table with the poker, will you? When did you say you were going down to the Cedars, Les?"

"When you like," said Leicester Dodson, coloring slightly and turning his face away from his companion.

"To-morrow, if you like. I was going to say I wish it'd never left it, but I came up this week because—"

"Because what?" asked Bertie, as he stopped.

"Because," said Leicester Dodson, looking hard at the fire, in his grave, sedate way, "discretion upon the better part of valor."

"What on earth do you mean?" exclaimed Bertie Fairfax. "You never mean to tell me you were afraid of a man?"

"No," said Leicester, with his cynical smile; "of a woman. There, don't ask me any more. I am not going to make a fool of myself, Bert, but, while we're on the subject, I'll say that it would never do for either of us to do that."

"No," said Bertie Fairfax, with an unusual bitterness. "We can never marry, Les. You, because you are too—"

"Selfish," interrupted Mr. Dodson, placidly.

"And I, because I am too poor—"

"You will be rich enough some day, you clever dog," said Mr. Dodson, sentimentally.

"Yes, when I'm an old man, gray-headed and bent double. Never mind."

"I won't. Don't you, either," said

If Meals Hit Back And Stomach Sours.

"Pape's Diapepsin" ends indigestion, Gas, Dyspepsia and Stomach Misery in five minutes.

If what you just ate is souring on your stomach or lies like a lump of lead, refusing to digest, or you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food, or have a feeling of dizziness, heartburn, fullness, nausea, bad taste in mouth and stomach headache, you can get blessed relief in five minutes.

Ask your pharmacist to show you the formula, plainly printed on these fifty-cent boxes of Pape's Diapepsin, then you will understand why dyspeptic troubles of all kinds must go, and why they relieve sour, out-of-order stomachs or indigestion in five minutes. "Pape's Diapepsin" is harmless; tastes like candy, though each dose will digest and prepare for assimilation into the blood all the food you eat; besides, it makes you go to the table with a healthy appetite; but, what will please you most, is that you will feel that your stomach and intestines are clean and fresh, and you will not need to resort to laxatives or liver pills for biliousness or constipation.

This city will have many "Pape's Diapepsin" cranks, as some people will call them, but you will be enthusiastic about this splendid stomach preparation, too, if you ever take it for indigestion, gases, heartburn, sourness, dyspepsia, or any stomach misery.

Get some now, this minute, and rid yourself of stomach trouble and indigestion in five minutes.

Leicester; "and now for the Cedars. Suppose we say the end of the week?"

"Yes, that will do," said Bertie.

"The Lacklands—at least, some of them—are going down to Coombe Lodge next week."

"Oh," said Leicester, significantly, glancing at the frank, pleasant face of his friend.

"Yes," retorted Bertie, "and the Mildmays are still at the Park, I suppose?"

"Yes," said Leicester, shrugging his shoulders with an air of indifference he was far from feeling. "So that we shall all be together—like moths round a candle," he added, cynically, as Bertie rose, with a yawn to mount to his own chambers.

Yes, all together, and near the meshes of that web which a skillful, cunning spider was weaving for them.

Captain Murchison had laid his delicate web ready for his flies.

CHAPTER VI.

Captain Howard Murchison had not exaggerated his powers of pleasing when making that important communication and revelation to his accomplice, Jem, under the Portland cliffs.

He had not been in possession of the marvelously comfortable suite of rooms at Mildmay Park many days before young and old, mistress and servants, were ready to pronounce the captain a most agreeable man, and his servant, Jem, a most amusing and obliging fellow.

The morning after his arrival, the captain went down to breakfast elegantly attired in a loose velvet shooting coat, which set off his strong, well-made figure to advantage.

His smooth face was set with a pleasant smile, and his voice was toned to a half-affectionate interest as he shook hands with Mrs. Mildmay.

"I hope you slept well, Captain Murchison?" she murmured.

The captain declared that he had never slept better, and that his quarters were all that could be wished.

"Violet is not down yet," said Mrs. Mildmay. "She is late, but we were rather later than usual last night, and, I dare say, the excitement of your arrival made her feel tired. Ah, there she is."

And Violet entered at that moment, and came up to give her aunt the morning kiss.

Then she turned to the captain, and once again his bold, watchful eyes shrank for a moment before the clear, calm gaze of her pure ones.

His salutation was a finished piece of acting, so reverential, so paternally affectionate, and so respectful.

Violet shook hands with him, and tripped to her seat.

"And did the ghosts annoy you?" she asked as the captain spoke of the night's rest.

"No; they were considerate to their guest. Perhaps when we are more familiar they may be more troublesome. You have had a good night's sleep, 'tis evident," he continued, glancing admiringly at her fair, fresh, blooming face.

"I always sleep well," said Violet, simply. "Neither ghosts nor indigestion disturb me."

"I thought perhaps that our little party had tired you, my dear," said Mrs. Mildmay.

"No, aunt," replied Violet. "It was a very pleasant one," she added, musingly.

"Very, the pleasantest I have participated in for some time," said the captain, with some truth. "I must congratulate you upon having some really agreeable neighbors. The vicar was a most delightful man, and Mr. and Mrs. Giles are most amiable."

"And what did you think of the Dodsons?" asked Mrs. Mildmay, with a half sigh.

"Most agreeable people," replied the captain. "So original and unaffected. The young fellow pleased me exceedingly," and he glanced at Violet under his dark brows.

"They are quite new friends—acquaintances," said Mrs. Mildmay. "Last night was the first time we have had the pleasure of their company."

"Indeed!" said the captain, with interest. "Newcomers, I suppose?"

"No; they have been here for some time," answered Mrs. Mildmay. "They live in the large, red house, the Cedars; perhaps you did not notice it? You can see it from the dining room windows. They are friends of Violet's making, and—though very agreeable people, still—"

"Still, they are—tallow chandlers," put in Violet, wickedly, "and aunt cannot forgive them."

Captain Murchison smiled a peculiar smile of conciliation for both the ladies.

"Tallow chandlers," he said, "can be very agreeable people; but I understand your aunt's prejudice, my dear Miss Mildmay."

"And I cannot," said Violet, with quiet gravity. "My father, and her voice lowered softly, "must have bought tallow when he traded with Russia, as I have heard, and I cannot see much difference between buying it in the first instance and melting it in the second."

"There is a difference," said the captain, softly. "But putting the question aside, I thought the Dodsons extremely nice people, and Mr. Leicester Dodson a well-informed person."

Violet looked at her plate. She did not echo the captain's praise or qualify it, so one could not tell whether she thought Mr. Leicester clever or not.

"Violet made their acquaintance in quite a romantic fashion," said Mrs. Mildmay, harping upon the subject, and she proceeded to recount the adventure of the parasol upon the cliffs.

While they were talking, Violet, who was facing the window which overlooked the lawn, saw the tall, graceful figure of Leicester Dodson sauntering up the path toward the house, in the indolent way which distinguished him.

On the 7th inst., at the Presbyterian Church, Mr. Matthew J. Murphy and Miss Mary F. Dillon, were united in the holy bonds of wedlock by Rev. Monsignor Leonard Ash, Monsignor St. John, of Toronto, Very Rev. James Whelan, of St. Francis. The bride was exquisitely fitted in cream satin with three orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley, bridesmaids were Miss Angela, her cousin, and Miss Belle and Murphy, daughters of the groom. Madge Kelley acted as flower girl. The groom was supported by Mr. Rick Bonita. The bride had some years matron of St. Boniface and afterwards became a keeper at the Presbytery. Channel Notes.

The second series of concerts in aid of the Patriotic Fund, was held in the Parish Hall on the evenings of the 16th, 17th and 18th December. Unfortunately the weather was not all that could be desired, consequently the attendances were small and the receipts suffered accordingly. Nevertheless a very creditable sum was netted, which has been duly forwarded to the custodians of said fund. The performers hope for better results next time.

The members of Channel Lodge, No. 25, Society of United Fishermen, attended Divine Service at St. James Church on Monday last, 28th ult., and after the order of Morning Prayer, heard an excellent sermon on Brotherly Love, the preaching being the Rector, Rev. H. J. Read. This Lodge elected their officers on the 22nd ult., which are as follows: W.M., Bro. C. T. James; C.O., Bro. Will J. Bragg; Chaplain, Bro. (Rev.) H. J. Read, Honorary; Deputy Chaplain, Bro. C. E. Pike; S.O., Bro. Alex. Batisse; Q.M., Bro. Emil Batisse; Secy., Bro. Wm. Blackmore; Purser, Bro. Emil Bragg; Lookout, Bro. A. Coffin; Chairman of Committee, Bro. George Batisse.

"Royal William" Loyal Orange Lodge held its anniversary celebration on New Year's Day, marching in processional order to the Methodist Church for Divine Service. The preacher was Rev. E. Taylor, who gave the brethren a very instructive discourse; the subject being one very appropriate at the present time, viz., "Liberty." Officers governing the Lodge for 1915 are: W.M., Bro. C. T. James; L.M., Bro. John Farrell; Chaplain, Bro. Henry Bragg; R.S., Bro. George Poole; F.S., Bro. George Evans; Tross, Bro. J. H. Wilcox; D. of C., Bro. Jas. M. Currie; Lecturer, Bro. Geo. Currie; Chairman Committee, Bro. A. Coffin; Honorary Secretary, Bro. John Hardy; O.T., Bro. Geo. Musgrave.

Sagona Got Jammed

The S. S. Sagona, which was north trying to clear several fish laden vessels that were icebound in Green Bay, returned last evening after an unsuccessful mission. The ice was so heavy that the Sagona was jammed for several days and only freed herself on Tuesday last when the ice melted. When the Sagona was leaving Twillingate to come here the floe was starting to pack tightly towards the land again.

Wedding Bells.

On the 7th inst., at the Presbytery, Placentia, Mr. Matthew J. Murphy and Miss Mary P. Dillon, were united in the holy bonds of wedlock by the Rt. Rev. Monsignor Reardon assisted by Monsignor St. John, of Torbay, and Very Rev. James Whelan, of St. Lawrence. The bride was exquisitely attired in cream satin with veil and orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley. Her bridesmaids were Miss Angela Kelly, her cousin, and Misses Belle and Ida Murphy, daughters of the groom; Miss Madge Kelly acted as flower girl. The groom was supported by Mr. Patrick Bona. The bride who was for some years matron of St. Bon's College and afterwards became housekeeper at the Presbytery, Placentia, was the recipient of many rich wedding presents from her hosts of friends and well-wishers. After the ceremony a sumptuous lunch was partaken of by the guests and the bridal couple took passage by the 4.30 train to St. John's.

Mother Is Child's Stomach Sour, Sick?

If tongue is coated or if cross, feverish, constipated give "California Syrup of Figs."

Don't scold your fretful, peevish child. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with sour waste.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, indigestion, diarrhoea, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul waste, the sour bile and fermenting food passes out of the bowels and you have a well and playful child again. Children love this harmless "fruit laxative," and mothers can rest easy after giving it, because it never fails to make their little "insides" clean and sweet.

Keep it handy, Mother! A little given to-day saves a sick child to-morrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Remember there are counterfeits sold here, so surely look and see that yours is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Hand back with contempt any other fig syrup.

DENOUNCED AS A HUGE SWINDLE

Vancouver, B.C., Jan. 4.—Strong condemnation of the scheme of business and management of the Canadian Home Investment Company was made by Chief Justice Hunter this morning, in ordering a winding up of the company under the provisional liquidatorship of James G. Forrester, manager of the Standard Trust Company. "It is apparent this company is in a hopelessly insolvent condition, and further that it is dishonestly insolvent. A more rotten case was never brought in court. This concern was obviously designed to swindle these people, who put their savings in it. There should be a law reaching this class of company. It is a swindle from beginning to end," said the Chief Justice.

The reports of the auditors of the Canadian Home Investment Company showed that a total of $105,000 out of $140,000 had disappeared.

SNOW.

WALT MASON

The boy looks out and sees the snow that's fallen by the ton; his eyes with rapture are aglow, for snow means heaps of fun. Upon his little sled he'll coast as fast as lightning goes, while dodging pilgrims pause to roast all boys and sleds and snows. And when he wears of his sled, snowballing still remains; he'll swat some old man on the head, and dislocate his brains. The good old snow brings that delight which every small boy seeks; he hails with glee that "mantle white" of which the poet speaks. The old man looks out at the snow that covers street and plain, and heaves a mighty sigh of woe, and has a mental pain. "Dodgast the snow," he cries; "alack, oddsfish and eke gee whiz! I'm due to have a fresh attack of jumping rheumatiz! Dire evils, in this time of sleet, my system will infest, and I'll have chilblains in my feet, pneumonia in my chest. I'll have to drink a peil of dope, my breast with grease anoint, and still the besetly aches will grope along my every joint. Alas, the days of long ago, which truly were sublime! When I was young there was no snow, we had no wintertime!"

THIRTY MILLION CARTRIDGES.

How much ammunition does a modern army use? We shall not know until after the war what the German and the Allied Forces have been expending; but we know what the Germans used in 1870-1. The total for rifles was 30,000,000 cartridges; for field artillery, 302,000 rounds. It is worth noting that battles are much less costly in ammunition than sieges. The siege of Strasburg alone cost weight for weight, three times the amount of ammunition used in all the decisive battles and actions throughout the whole war. Of course, these figures are a mere bagatelle compared with those of the present struggle, with its millions of soldiers and its quick-firing guns and its battles lasting for several weeks.

M. C. L. I. Debate.

The 48th annual session of the Methodist College Literary Institute opened last night with an interesting war debate which was thoroughly enjoyed by the large number who attended. Many changes have taken place since the last session, a fact which was particularly noticeable by the absence of familiar faces. Many members have nobly responded to their country's call, amongst them being the Secretary, Mr. O. Steele and Assistant Secretary, Mr. G. Taylor, both of whom are non-commissioned officers with the First Newfoundland Regiment.

The first business of last night's meeting was the appointment of a Secretary. Mr. A. S. Butler was chosen for the position, much to the satisfaction of the members who were present. The subject for debate was: "Is the war the result of economic or military pressure?" The leaders for the former were the President—Mr. J. S. Currie, Mr. R. Hearder and Mr. A. Soper; while the military side of the question was supported by Hon. R. Squires, Mr. W. Drover and Mr. W. Butt.

The principal argument for Economic was the rapid development of Germany's commercial, industrial and manufacturing concerns since the Franco-Prussian War. The increase in the population during that period was abnormal and the question of expansion naturally presented itself. She needed colonies and the only possible way for her to acquire them was to forcibly seize them, since other nations had checked expansion elsewhere. For this she made deliberate preparations which eventually resulted in the war of aggression which she is now fighting.

The contention of those supporting the Military side of the question was that Germany is essentially a military nation. The military spirit had been so fostered that her people had developed into a huge fighting machine, that considered itself superior to anything in the world. The idea that Germany had not room for expansion was refuted by those supporting the military side, who contended that jealousy of the power of other nations, particularly Britain, was the underlying reason for the war.

The military spirit, the development which had brought with it pride of race, was the pressure which brought about the great conflict. After the leaders had finished, several other speakers took part, amongst them being Mr. H. J. Earle, of Foggo. The debate throughout was most interesting and instructive and upon the vote being taken the majority decided in favor of the military side of the question.

FRIDAY, January 8, 1915.

Wise and Conciliatory.

It is pleasing to learn that the reply of Great Britain to the representations made by President Wilson as to delays in shipping, caused by Great Britain exercising the right of search, is of a conciliatory character. It should be remembered that President Wilson does not question the right of search by Great Britain to prevent contraband reaching the hands of her enemies. The protest was based on the delay caused by search and a paralysis of commerce which was attributed to it. As to the latter the New York Herald has pointed out that nothing is to be gained by exaggerating the extent of the paralysis caused by the exercise of this right, and that it is idle to attribute the falling off of commerce in certain branches to this cause, when it is obvious that to the war itself, as apart from search, the major part of this menacing commerce is due. On the other hand, it should be remembered that certain branches of commerce have been largely stimulated by the war, and that business men in the States are supplying large quantities of goods to Britain and her Allies, which she would never do but for the war. Indeed, so much is this so, that the influence of the German barge is being used to try to get Congress to pass a bill to prevent the citizens of the States from supplying contraband goods to Britain and her Allies. This movement is due to the fact that Germany and her Allies cannot get a safe passage of contraband to her borders, while her opponents wish their command of the seas, can do so. The intimation of Britain that she would offer no objection to the transfer of German steamers to American owners, provided use is not made of the purchase-money or the steamers to assist her enemies in the war, is a reasonable suggestion. But the suggestion that these steamers might be used by American owners to facilitate trade between North and South America, will not meet with the approval of the German enemies of Britain in the States. They do not want to see America capturing the German shipping trade with South America. Britain would like to see it, however, and would also promote in every reasonable way means for facilitating commerce in South American countries. The nearer South American trade is brought to the normal, the better for South America, the better for the States and Great Britain, and the better for the Newfoundland fish trade with the Brazils.

RUSSIA'S GIGANTIC OPERATIONS.—SPARTAN RULE IN NAVY CARRIED OUT.

LONDON, To-day. A complete change in the situation in the near East may be brought about by the Russian victory over the Turks in the Caucasus. If the Turkish defeat is as sweeping as has been officially reported—the virtual destruction of two and the repulse of a third Turkish army corps—Turkish men are hard up against the Russians. The loss of so many of their best trained officers and men, it is believed here, will compel the Turks to give up any ambition they had of invading their enemy's territories and concentrate on the defence of their own country. Military men, however, are taking even greater interest in the Russian invasion of Hungary through the Uzak Pass in the Carpathians and their rapid advance in Transylvania through Bukovina, simultaneously with their movement toward Cracow. These combined operations are the most gigantic undertaken in the war. Meanwhile the Russians are held by Austro-Germans in Western Galicia. Field-Marshal Von Hindenburg, German Commander in Northern Poland, can move but slowly because of mud in his offensive operation against Warsaw. A despatch from Petrograd says that aviators observed German artillery on the frontier railway stations which cannot be moved on account of the softness of the roads. It has been suggested that the Germans intended to use the Vistula for the transport of their guns, but with the Russians in possession of the northern bank, this is obviously a hopeless project. Although fighting has been intense at many points on the Western front, there is little or no change in Flanders where the fields and roads are under several feet of water. In that territory only artillery has been able to work, but in Northern France between Lille and Arras there has been some light fighting in which trenches have charged hands more than once. Hard fighting, too, continues in Alsace where the French claim to have advanced a little toward Altkirch. They have, apparently, got no further along the Cernay road from Steinbach. The British Admiralty is now convinced that the Spartan rule was destroyed by a German submarine. Making an announcement in the House of Lords, Earl Crew divulged the information that the Spartan rule which the Admiralty promulgated after the loss of the cruisers Aboukir, Cressy and Hogue, that no ships should go to the assistance of another for fear she too might be torpedoed, had been carried out. The captain of the formidable, although he knew his ship was doomed, signalled the other ships not to stand by.

THE MONTREAL TRAGEDY.

MONTREAL, To-day. One of the most shocking crimes that ever occurred in Montreal was discovered yesterday, when it was two days old. It was the murder on Tuesday morning of Mrs. Robert Van Looy, wife of a Belgian reservist who left about three weeks ago to fight for his native land, and her three children and the suicide on Tuesday night, in Carrierville of the murderer, Jean Moons, Brother of Mrs. Van Looy. The dead bodies of the mother and children were found in one bed in their home. There was evidence that the four had been strangled to death and placed in one bed by the murderer Jean Moons, the undoubted slayer of his sister and family, was seen leaving the house at eleven o'clock on Tuesday morning, supposedly about two hours after the tragedy. Although Moons shot himself to death in Carrierville on Tuesday night, his identity was not revealed until yesterday afternoon, when the detectives were looking for the wholesale murderer in Van Looy's home.

HEAVY FIGHTING IN ALSACE.

GENEVA, To-day. Fighting in Lower Alsace is daily growing in intensity around Steinbach, Cernay and Thannud villages. Houses and trenches are taken and retaken at the point of the bayonet and casualties on both sides have been extremely heavy. It is stated about 250,000 in all are engaged, that both sides are using heavy guns and that the Germans are continuously hurrying reinforcements from Rhine forts. Gen. Pau, it is stated, is in command of the French forces, which have made progress despite the fierce resistance of the Germans.

He telegraphs a statement by Mr. Diamandy to the effect that the Roumanian people have made up their minds and that active participation by the Roumanian army against Germany and Austria-Hungary is assured.

GERMANS ATTACK NEAR YPRES.

LONDON, To-day. The Germans are continuing their attack to the southeast of Ypres, where their heavy artillery has been steadily bombarding the Allies' trenches. There is a steady rain fall in most of Flanders and the floods are increasing in the Dixmude area. German infantry reinforcements in some places are advancing ankle deep in mud. Troops have been forced to sleep in the open for the last few days awaiting orders for the next counter attacks, and they are suffering severely in health. (Continued on page 5.)

ALMOST AT ALTKIRCH

PARIS, Jan. 8.—French troops are now only a few miles from Altkirch, in Upper Alsace, taking up their position in the town. German aviators, attempting to take Dunkirk, were put to flight by the French batteries. Fighting in Flanders is continuing, but no artillery conflicts, in which the French have gained the advantage over the Germans.

PETROGRAD, Jan. 8.—Anchor battle for the possession of Mlawa is developing. The Germans are sending reinforcements to strengthen their army, now in the hands of the Germans.

BRITAIN'S REPLY CONCILIA

LONDON, Jan. 8.—The reply of Great Britain to the American note regarding the right of search with its shipping, it is well-informed circles, is wholly conciliatory, and shows a disposition on the part of England to do everything within reason to avert delay in American shipping, a time-consuming loss of time is so costly to ship owners, England wishes everything in its power to do with the proper safeguarding of the interests of the Allies, and to state world trade and stimulate commerce, paralyzed, as it is, by the conditions. Consequently, it is declared, there is no disposition on the part of England to protest against the purchase of German vessels by Americans, where sales are genuine, and ships are not used as to what might reasonably be considered consequences of belligerence. Transferred German ships into American trade with Germany, would call for objections from the Allies, although cotton is not a hand, because the Allies, it would regard such use as a means of escaping the rigors of the war. At any rate objection not likely to be made until ships actually transferred and their use clearly indicated. It is probable that the Allies will hold until the close of the war, guarantee that it will not be of any use to belligerents. An American ship, purchased by the United States Government or sold to the Allies and prevent any objection, as a stimulation of trade with South America is great. While it is true that the sale of German vessels to the Allies will not help to relieve German shipping in New York Harbor, and German of the heavy expense of mail and insurance, undoubtedly, the consequences of war within the international practice, still probably would be willing to accept objections on this point, vessels (not permitted?) to trade in Norway, beneficial to many, Austria or Turkey.

LONDON, Jan. 8.—The German Military Government in Belgium has issued an official report that Cardinal Mercier had been arrested by German troops.

BRUTAL MURDER IN MO

MONTREAL, Jan. 8.—Mrs. Van Looy, wife of a Belgian reservist who left about three weeks ago to fight for his native land, and her three children were found in one bed in their home. There was evidence that the four had been strangled to death and placed in one bed by the murderer Jean Moons, the undoubted slayer of his sister and family, was seen leaving the house at eleven o'clock on Tuesday morning, supposedly about two hours after the tragedy. Although Moons shot himself to death in Carrierville on Tuesday night, his identity was not revealed until yesterday afternoon, when the detectives were looking for the wholesale murderer in Van Looy's home.

LONDON, Jan. 8.—The New Year opened with a favorable situation for the Allies, any they had known since the commencement of the campaign, report made by a military attaché to the British Embassy at the front. ALMOST AT ALTIRKIRCH.

PARIS, Jan. 7.
French troops are now only 2 1/2 miles from Altirkirch, in Upper Alsace, taking up their position in a forest near the town.
German aviators, attempting to attack Dunkirk, were put to flight by the French batteries.
Fighting in Flanders is confined to artillery conflicts, in which the French have gained the advantage over the Germans.

MLAWA AGAIN.

PETROGRAD, Jan. 7.
Another battle for the possession of Mlawka is developing. The Russians are sending reinforcements to strengthen their army, now facing the Germans.

BRITAIN'S REPLY CONCILIATORY.

LONDON, Jan. 7.
The reply of Great Britain to the American note regarding interference with its shipping, it is said in well-informed circles, is wholly conciliatory, and shows a disposition on the part of England to do everything within reason to avert delay to American shipping. At a time when freight rates are high, and consequently loss of time is so costly to ship owners, England wishes to do everything in its power consistent with the proper safeguarding of the interests of the Allies, and to facilitate world trade and stimulate commerce, paralyzed, as it is, by war conditions. Consequently, it is declared, there is no disposition on the part of England to protest against the purchase of German vessels by Americans, where sales are genuine, and ships are not used so as to avoid what might reasonably be called the consequences of belligerency. Use of transferred German ships in the cotton trade with Germany, probably would call forth objections from the Allies, although cotton is not contraband, because the Allies, it is said, would regard such use as a round-about means of escaping the effects of the war. At any rate objection is not likely to be made until ships are actually transferred and their prospective use clearly indicated. It is probable that the Allies will take the position that sale money shall be held until the close of the war as a guarantee that it will not be of assistance to belligerents. An assurance that a German ship, purchased by the United States Government or its citizens, would engage in South American trade only, probably would satisfy the Allies and prevent any formal objection, as a stimulation of trade with South America is greatly desired by the Allies. While it is pointed out that the sale of German ships in New York Harbor to the American Government or its citizens would inevitably relieve German ships in New York Harbor, and German citizens of the heavy expense of maintenance and insurance, undoubtedly consequences of war within the meaning of international practice, still England probably would be willing to waive objections on this point, were the vessels (not permitted?) to enter trade in Norway, beneficial to Germany, Austria or Turkey.

DENIES CARDINAL'S ARREST.

LONDON, Jan. 7.
The German Military Governor of Belgium has issued an official denial of the report that Cardinal Mercier had been arrested by German authorities.

BRUTAL MURDER IN MONTREAL.

MONTREAL, Jan. 7.
Mrs. Van Looy, wife of a Belgian soldier, now fighting against the Germans, and her three children, aged 8, years, 5 years, and 10 months, were murdered in their home. The discovery of the crime was made this afternoon. The dead mother and her children were lying in bed, apparently having been strangled.

CANADIAN BYE-ELECTIONS.

the progress of the war. "So far as the British are concerned," says the report, "the small expeditionary force of four divisions which took the field in August and which is steadily increasing in numbers and become injured to the war, can look back on a record of hard fighting such as the British troops seldom have sustained in the past. The struggle the last four months has entered upon its fourth phase. A slow, but none the less marked change which has taken place, resulted definitely in passing the initiative into the hands of the Allies. This is not shown so much by material results obtained, although at some points of the allied front ground has been gained, while in some places very marked progress has been made, resulting in the capture of guns and strongly entrenched positions; but our advantage lies in the fact that it is now the Allies who, for the past few weeks have assumed and maintained the offensive role, while the enemy has been acting on the defensive. The fact that the enemy is acting on the defensive does not mean and that some German units have even been withdrawn temporarily on this account.

Leaving Havre.
Mrs. Jones, wife of Chief Steward Jones, of the 'S. S. Mowenna, which brought a cargo of oats from Prince Edward Island for the French Army, received word by telegraph yesterday from her husband, saying that the ship would be leaving Havre, France, in a few days, though the message did not say whether the Mowenna would be coming here first or to New York; probably the latter as the ship will run the Red Cross service while the Stephano and Florizel are at the icefields.

OFFICIAL (7th), Midnight.
Fierce German attacks are reported to-night in Lassigny district, in Artois at crossing of Four de Paris, Varennes and Hautevevauchee Roads in Verdun district and on height overlooking Steinbach. All these attacks were repulsed. The President of the Republic signed a decree prohibiting the wholesale and retail sale of absinthe and other similar liquors. The second decree limited the opening of liquor bars.

Second Canadian

Contingent expected to leave in March

Ottawa, Jan. 4.—It is understood in Militia circles here that the second Canadian expeditionary force will leave for England early in March. It is expected that all necessary equipment, rifles, etc., will be available by next month, and the force will be ready to embark by the last week in February or the first week in March. Although no official information is given out here as to the plans of the War Office in connection with the Canadian troops, there is reason to believe that a brigade, at least, of Canadians will be sent to Egypt to assist the Australian, British and Indian troops there in the offensive operations against Turkey. Just what use is to be made of the nine regiments of mounted rifles now being raised throughout the Dominion, is not ascertainable at present, though it is believed that some of them will go to Egypt since the nature of operations now proceeding in Europe in the western war arena render cavalry of little use. Probably a portion of the mounted troops being raised will be retained in Canada for home defence purposes.

A Sudden Death.

The ushering in of 1915 has witnessed many sudden deaths but none with such awful suddenness and under such sad circumstances, as that which occurred this morning when Mrs. John Furlong, of York Street, was snatched in an instant by the Grim Reaper, heart failure being the cause. Deceased, who was a splendid type of young woman, was 31 years of age, and wife of Mr. John Furlong, master pilot. Mrs. Furlong, without complaint, retired at the usual hour last night with her little five-year-old daughter, while her husband went out for the night on duty. The latter returned home at six o'clock this morning and on entering his room was dumfounded to find his beloved partner cold in death, lying in bed beside her darling child. It was indeed a sad home-coming for the bereaved husband who will have the sympathy of the community. At the time recently did she complain of being unwell, and death is supposed to have followed a sudden attack of the heart. The Telegram extends its deepest sympathy to the sorrowing husband and other relatives.

More About the Cynic Keeping House.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

"Still keeping house?" asked the A u t h o r - m a n ' s wife.

"Yes," answered the Cynic. "I've persuaded mother that the house is still intact and that she can play invalid a bit longer."

"How about your own work?" asked the Author-man.

"Doing that too."

"Where do you find time?"

"I don't find it—I save it," said the Cynic. "I've not my days on schedule now. That saves time. Take ordering, for instance. Mother waits till the order men come and then begins to think what she needs. Frequently she thinks of something else and either goes to the store, or spends time telephoning for it. That all wastes time."

Menus Made Up Ahead.

"I make up my menus several days ahead, jotting in the margin what I need to order for each meal. As I notice anything is out, I add that to my list. All I do is hand the order to the man and he's out of the house in a jiffy—no delay, no mistakes."

"Mother said to let housework slide, but I knew she would worry, so I didn't. But this was done on schedule. The first day I took time to plan the work so I wouldn't be wasting steps or motions—and saved that time the second day in increased efficiency."

"I did one thing that mother won't do—few women will. I put the window shades up as far as possible. Too much light is considered hard on the paper and the carpet, but by George too little is a good deal harder on the Few houses have enough light anyway, and to cut off half of what they do have is on a par with pasting black paper over half the electric light bulb you use at night. Mother goes peering about the room, looking for something she could see in a minute if she had the curtains up, and then she has to stop and see if it's really what she wants. The eye strain in semi-lighted rooms means less efficiency and loss of time all day long. Any modern factory owner can tell you that. Just look at a modern factory—all windows."

Imitating the Factory Builder.

"In brief, I set definite limits for my work, saving every minute I could. I had so much housework to do before nine o'clock—not before eleven o'clock. I honestly believe that the average housewife has, not too little time for her work, but too much. She has no spur toward efficiency."

"Give a man two weeks in which to do something, and he'll do it and think he has worked two weeks' worth. Give him a week for the same job, and if he's any good, he'll do the same work not by humping twice as hard, but by eliminating waste effort and getting sixty seconds value for every moment run."

"That's my philosophy of housework."

THE BERESFORD BROTHERS.

Several good stories are related by Lord Charles Beresford in his Memoirs, recently published. One refers to the memorable election to York City, when he had for opponent Sir Christopher Furness (afterwards Lord Furness), and his brothers, Lords William and Marcus Beresford, went down to help him in what proved to be a very fierce contest.

"Lord Marcus accompanied me to a meeting," writes Lord Charles, "and I told him that he must make a speech. 'I can't,' he said; 'I don't know what to say.' I told him to begin, because he was sure to be interrupted, and then, being an Irishman, he would certainly find something to say. Lord Marcus thereupon rose to his feet, and a voice immediately shouted, 'Who are ye?' It was enough. The fire kindled. 'Who are we?' cried Lord Marcus. 'I'll tell you who we are. We are three brothers, and our names are Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego. And we have come here to put out the burning fiery Furness!'"

They did, but only just, for Sir Christopher Furness lost by only eleven votes.

BEST ANECDOTE ON SIR JOHN JELICOE.

Sir John Jellicoe, when a captain, was once aroused very hastily in the middle of the night by the officer of the watch, who stated in great excitement that the ship was on fire near the magazine. "If that is so," said Jellicoe, "we shall soon know about it." The officer rushed back to the scene of danger, and again returned, saying, "You need not be afraid, sir; the fire is extinguished."

"Afraid!" replied Jellicoe. "What do you mean by that, sir? I never was afraid in my life." And looking the officer full in the face, he added, "Pray how does a man feel when he is afraid? I need not ask how he looks."

Household Notes

To have delicious mince meat use the following idea: To a gallon crock of mince meat add a pint of preserved citron.

A delicious dessert is made with bananas put through a potato ricer, and sliced orange and pineapple added.

Keep a child's ten-cent washboard in the bathroom—it will be a convenience when washing out small articles.

Those cereals are preferable which are whole natural grains, steamed in a double boiler for twenty-four hours.

The housewife can frequently omit meat from a meal if she makes good its loss with cheese, nuts, milk or cereals.

When making tea, instead of the usual spoonful for the pot, add a lump of sugar. When drawn the tea will be just as strong.

If a piece of woollen cloth is placed on the floor where glass has been broken, all the little particles of glass will stick to the cloth.

Instead of rolling the dry bread to make crumbs, try putting them through the meat grinder. It does the work beautifully and quickly.

When cleaning grates add half a dozen drops of turpentine to the black lead, stir well, and a beautiful polish will be the result when finished.

Silk, if burned, gives off a disagreeable smell, similar to that of burnt feathers, whereas cotton or artificial silk are practically odorless.

Do not throw away one bit of the celery. Wash the undesirable parts and boil them with the soup bones. It will give the soup a delicious flavor.

If the cake rises rapidly in the middle like a pyramid and cracks, it is cooking too quickly. A well-cooked cake should be flat on top when done.

When ironing delicate garments put powderedorris root between the folds of the ironing blanket. A delicate perfume will permeate the clothing.

Almost all vegetables—except beans—should be cooked in as little water as possible; then this water thickened with butter, cream and the tiniest amount of flour.

To waterproof boots melt together two parts beeswax to one part of mutton fat. Apply this to the leather at night, and in the morning wipe well with a piece of flannel.

If a magnet is kept in the hook and eye box, it will be an easy matter to pick up the hooks and eyes, and any hook that will not be picked up by the magnet do not use, because it will rust.

Every cellar should have many shelves for the convenience of the housekeeper. There should be one or two hanging shelves. By this means the cellar may be kept in order and sanitary.

Adding Machines.

They Are Not New, as Pascal Invented One in the Year 1642.

The adding machine is of modern development, but not a modern invention, a possible one having been invented in 1642 by Pascal (1623-1662) a celebrated French geometer, philosopher and writer. Later, in 1671, the adding machine was modified to facilitate multiplication by Gottfried Wilhelm Leibnitz, a German mathematician of great achievement, and his invention was followed by many improvements.

A notable experimenter in this line was Charles Babbage (1792-1871), an English mathematician, many years professor of mathematics at Cambridge university. In order to secure accuracy in tables of logarithms he conceived the idea of doing the work by machinery and was commissioned by the British government to superintend the construction of a machine for the purpose. He spent much time and money in experimenting and attained some remarkable results, but died before perfecting his machine.

All calculating machines contain certain features devised by special reference to the work to be done, including circular metallic disks, wheels with teeth, etc., ingenious, but not more complicated and no more responsive to human intelligence than many other machines. The thinking is all done by the operator.—Philadelphia Press.

BELGIANS ORDERED TO JOIN GERMAN ARMY.

Amsterdam, Jan. 4.—A remarkable telegram from Overpelt, in Belgium, states that all young Belgians available for 1914, 1915 and 1916 levies have been ordered by the German commander to present themselves at the Town Hall to-day for enrolment in the German army.

VICTORY

Roast Ostrich.

Roast ostrich was the prime dish at the Y. M. C. A. cafeteria Christmas dinner at Los Angeles, California, more than 1,500 people being served from one bird. The ostrich was five months old and dressed for cooking it weighed more than 100 pounds. Each of the drumsticks tipped the scales at 16 pounds. In its preparation 125 pounds of dressing were used. Of this there were 50 pounds of chestnuts, 150 loaves of bread, 30 pounds of butter, 25 pounds of onions, 25 heads of celery and one pound of spices. The stearite bird was roasted in an oven six feet square.

ESSEN.

By GEORGE FITCH.

Author of "At Good Old Slwash."

Essen is one of the few cities in the world which is enjoying unparalleled prosperity at present.

It is indeed pleasant to turn to Essen after gazing upon the ruined towns of Belgium and the depressed and agitated capitals of Europe. In Essen all is peace, prosperity and activity. A hundred thousand happy workmen go cheerfully to labor each morning and return contentedly at night to the bosoms of their families. They receive good wages and live in beautiful little homes, collected into model villages. They have libraries, theatres and schools of their own and pensions when they are too old to toil. They do not have to rise early and lug ten pounds of cartridges four miles in order to fire them at the foe, receiving as they do so assorted cannon balls in the thorax. In all the warring countries Essen is the one great heaven of peace. It is a forest of steel stacks surrounded by bowers, flowers and laughing, playing children.

This is because Essen is busy making the guns for the rest of Germany. Essen has been making guns for almost 100 years. The Krupp built Essen and kept adding to it from generation to generation until it is now the greatest manufacturer of homicidal weapons in the world, and its factories are of almost inconceivable magnitude. In Essen they build cannon large enough to use the Alabama's old guns as projectiles and machine guns which can manufacture 10,000 widows an hour. If Germany had not had Essen she would not have been half as afraid of Russia—because Russia would not have had to be afraid of Germany.

Essen is a city of 200,000 people and is a model municipality. The Krupps have always been very kind-hearted people. They have taken good care of their workmen and have built homes and villages for them which are the wonder of civic experts. Over 100,000 workmen have thus been made happy and carefree and it is only cost-

THE MOST PATHETIC INCIDENT I WITNESSED.

(By a Soldier.)

During the progress of the fighting on the Aisne I got separated from my company, and hid all night in a wood. Next morning I fell in with a French soldier, who, in good English, told me he was in a similar predicament. But he added that we were close to his home, and he dearly wanted to see his wife and child. Would I accompany him? I consented, and after much tedious travelling we arrived at his homestead. There we stayed about two hours, and his wife and child came back to the main road to bid him good-bye. The parting was most affecting. Tears were streaming down their faces, when suddenly some shots rang out, and the child fell down, killed by a bullet in the head. A shriek from the mother, and another volley claimed her as a victim. Then we saw the Uhlan, and I had to drag the almost demented man away from the bodies of his loved ones. Coming to himself, and dashing his tears away, he led me by a route he knew, until eventually we reached our lines again.

Interesting Letter

From Private E. Kelly.

The following letters, written by Private Ernest Kelly, of the Newfoundland Contingent, have been received by his brother Thomas Kelly and Co.'s.

Salisbury Plains, December 4th.

Dear Brother,—Well, old boys are enjoying ourselves fine; this is going up to Scotland in bars, most all the other (the Canadian) are going in huts. Think the general is pleased with us. He views to-day and so did Lord Brassey, are not going to be attached to Canadian Company as I believe you too smart for the most of us. There is a place about two miles from here called the Stonehenge. It is said to be two thousand years old, a place where the old Romans used worship before going to battle; it are stones 12 feet square piled up at one another and nobody seems understand how they were put there. It is a grand sight and I am glad I saw it. We see lots of men every day but we are not allowed to kill them, I wish we could. There is a flying school here and I have been up in the clouds lots of times. It's great to be up there and look down at the earth. We do our drill by platoon, 4 sections to a platoon. We take turns at scouting every morning. At 3 o'clock we go after those left at 2. We have to find them the way we do it sometimes is by tying our ears to the ground. Not is to make a sound. I got taken prisoner the other night. Says, boy, it's great fun. A soldier's life, although I would like to be in John's for Xmas. I will see a bit of the world, anyway. I have been in dozen places already. I am engaged nearly every night singing at camps and all my spare time is taken up learning songs. I have a job to do this letter as all the boys are singing and playing mouth organs, etc., we are downhearted. "No." We are in shooting this week, 75 rounds a man. I think we are going to spend some time in January on a rury. I wish were there. I will be satisfied to get 25 before get me. I have seen thousands of Germans in England as prisoners, wish we could get at the German, would go without my meals this week. The boys are tormenting to sing another song so I will have to say good-bye.

Fort George, Dec. 12th, 1914.

Dear Brother,—We are now on a grand sight-seeing trip. My wish to see it kept up a while. We went to Salisbury Plains on the 7th inst. at 10 p.m., and arrived at Fort George at 1 p.m. next day. You can see a fine run we had, going over Highlands on a train going at 60 m.p.h. I think Scotland will be better quarters for us than Salisbury Plains. The weather is better than being very little snow and frost scarcely. We are near the North Sea and if there is a battle will hear the guns. The British come here for coal. The Iron works was in last week. There are sea planes near the Fort. The itself is like something you read about, but a fine place for (the Kaiser) to go. We have daisy man and that is Gus O'Brien everybody here loves him. He is charge of our platoon. I will say good-bye for now.

How Wounds Heal

Few people have any idea of the wonderful process by which we heal. Stitching, dressing, etc., are important operations, but none of them can make good the damage or repair the loss of tissue in a wound. The work of our good friends in blood, the white corpuscles—"scavengers," so called because they destroy disease germs.

When a wound is made, a bone is broken, a nerve torn, etc., it is chiefly these corpuscles finding their way to the blood vessels into the injured bullet or bayonet are repaired. Union of broken bones, nerves, etc., is effected by the corpuscles lining their way into the coagulated blood which surrounds the wound.

They throw out what are called "proteases" become fixed, and each other. A new tissue is formed, which becomes endowed with blood vessels. Fibres follow. These serve to keep the torn tissue of the wound in what is surgically called "opposition."

In this tissue, in the case of a broken bone, bone salts are deposited where nerves have been torn, bullet, nerve fibres grow, and these fibres, in the course of time, contract, and it is by that process of contraction that the edges of a wound are brought together and healed.

How Wounds Heal.

Few people have any idea of the wonderful process by which wounds heal. Stitching, dressing, etc., are important operations, but none of them can make good the damage, or replace the loss of tissue in a wound. This is the work of our good friends in the blood, the white corpuscles—the "scavengers," so called because they destroy disease germs.

When a wound is made, a bone broken, a nerve torn, etc., it is chiefly by these corpuscles finding their way out of the blood vessels into the surrounding tissues that the injuries by bullet or bayonet are repaired. The union of broken bones, nerves, skin, etc., is effected by the corpuscles finding their way into the coagulated blood which surrounds the injured parts.

They throw out what are called "proteases," become fixed, and join each other. A new tissue is thus formed, which becomes endowed with blood vessels. Fibres follow, and these serve to keep the torn tissues of the wound in what is surgically called "opposition."

In this tissue, in the case of a broken bone, bone salts are deposited; where nerves have been torn by a bullet, nerve fibres grow, and so on. These fibres, in the course of healing, contract, and it is by that power of contraction that the edges of a wound are brought together and united.

GALILEO died 1642, aged 78. The famous mathematician and astronomer of Pisa, who while still a youth discovered the law of pendulum vibration by seeing a lamp swinging from the roof of a cathedral. He also constructed the first telescope, with which he made numerous astronomical studies.
SIR LAWRENCE ALMA-TADEMA born 1836. The son of a Netherlands notary, who came to England in 1869, where he soon made a name for himself as a painter of classical pictures of great beauty of colour and delicate design. An exhibition of his works was held at the Academy in 1913.

THE HODDEN GREY.

Way, way for the Hodden Grey, For the fiery cross burns red, Thro' London town borne up and down
The ancient spell has sped, O'er hill and dale each warlike Gael It called to meet the foe, And spirit feet on the London street, March with us as we go.

Way, way for the Hodden Grey, For the lads from o'er the Forth, From Tweed and Tay and the Silvery Spey
The shilling in the North, Some ne'er have seen the heather green
On hill or Highland ben, But the spirit's there to do or dare, That led our Highland men.

Way, way for the Hodden Grey, For we fear no foreign foe, Our Grandires bold as in days of old March with us as we go.
For Scotland's might, for Britain's right
We march to win the day, And the foe shall shout, 'mid battle rout,
"Way for the Hodden Grey!"
—Wilfred Lorraine Anckorn, in London Times.

"Hearts of Women"

Is Nickel's Special. The Vitagraph actors, among the best in America, appear at the Nickel Theatre this evening in a two part special entitled: "Hearts of Women." This is a very interesting story. Two women of entirely different walks of life reveal nature that are most contradictory to expectation. Julia Swayne Gordon and Naomi Childers are the principal characters. "The Cat's Paw" is another big two reeler. The Thanoson artists are responsible for it and they handle it exceptionally well. There are two other bright pictures. Miss Margaret Ayer will repeat her popular Irish song. Remember the matinee for children to-morrow; don't fail to send them, extra pictures will be given.

Up to Its Motto.

The Crescent Picture Palace is certainly keeping up to its motto: "Nothing but the best." Read down the big programme advertised in another part of this paper, every number is a feature produced by the best Companies, and every performer ranks highest amongst motion picture artists.
Mr. J. O'Neil Farrell sings a patriotic ballad: "To fight for the country he loves so well, and the sweetheart he leaves behind," introducing "Soldiers of the King" and "A long way to Tipperary." Don't miss seeing this show at the Crescent.

The "Skogstad."

The Norwegian steamer Skogstad, which came to port two days ago short of coal and leaves this afternoon for her destination, belongs to the same company of owners as the Storstad, which rammed and sunk the S. S. Empress of Ireland in the Gulf of St. Lawrence nearly a year ago.

When you mean to mash potatoes cut them in slices before boiling and they will be done much sooner.

DRY SACK Sherry
FROM SPAIN'S RICHEST WINE PROVINCE.
Matured in wood for over fifteen years—most stimulating and nourishing of all the products of the grape. In bottles only—of all good dealers.

Pros

Germany about 100,000 lives a day now owned by a beautiful lady, Frau Krupp. She is very kind and has made a great deal of since the war began. But she not invent the cannon herself. She's scientists to do this. She is a great mistake, Frau Krupp is compelled to invent her own. By this means civilization receive a great boost, for Frau couldn't invent a cannon to her life, and in time, peace would dawn over all Europe for want of improvements in man-killing.

There we stayed about hours, and his wife and child back to the main road to bid good-bye. The parting was most sad. Tears were streaming down faces, when suddenly some shots out, and the child fell down, killed a bullet in the head. A shriek the mother, and another volley her as a victim. Then we saw a man away from the tent, and dashing his tears away, I me by a route he knew, until finally we reached our lines again.

SHELL RIPPED OFF COAT!

The reason why the Marquis of Anglesey, one of the wealthiest peers in England, suddenly returned from France, a few days ago, and after remaining in the Ritz Hotel 24 hours, hastened back to rejoin his regiment, was revealed to-day.

Anglesey was forced to apply for a brief leave because he actually did not have a coat to his back. The wear and tear of campaigning frayed the fragile quality of khaki designed by a fashionable tailor, and a piece of shrapnel ripped the whole back out without wounding his lordship.

The Marquis had two uniform coats made during his brief visit. It is curious to note that the last holder of the title of the present Marquis was chiefly famous as the possessor of the most extensive wardrobe in England, which included more than 500 coats.

The Marquis did the right thing, visiting his tailor, as we have always advised customers when a garment is badly torn to have it replaced. Dry Cleaning will not remedy such defects.

MAY I SAY

Thank You

Owing to the kind support and excellent discernment of those of my friends who purchased Murphy Calendars I am happy to report that the business from St. John's during the first week of the Calendar season exceeded that obtained by any new salesman of the Murphy Co. in the whole of the United States and Canada.

To those of my friends who bought Murphy Calendars I extend sincere thanks and express the wish that the new business brought them by the use of Murphy Calendars will more than repay them for the investment.

To those of my friends who have not yet bought I would say there are many beautiful Calendars left, and to look over the Murphy samples is an education in itself, even if you do not wish to buy a Calendar, and I am all times only too pleased to show the samples.
