CLEANLINESS IS HEALTH
 By the use of Gillett's Lye, house cleaning is made a pleasure instead of a drudgery. It softens the water and cleans thoroughly whether the dirt is visible or invisible. Destroys all bacteria and infectious germs, removes obstructions from drain pipes, closets, sinks, etc. Refrigerators are made delightfully fresh and clean by using one teaspoonful of Gillett's Lye dissolved in two gallons of water.

 CHAPTER XII TO WED AN ACTRESS.
 "I thought it was out of fashion to be in love with your wife. Forgive me, I have been outside the world so long Pray go on."
 "And I love another lady."
 "Indeed!" came the cold response. There was no surprise, scarcely a trace even of displeasure; but the keen eyes glittered like those of an eagle as they rested on his handsome, manly face. "Don't you think it would have saved both of us some trouble and many words if you had mentioned this rather important fact when we were discussing the question the other night?"
 Lord Neville smiled faintly.
 "I did not know it myself," he replied. "I had not met the young lady."
 "Ah! love at first sight!" said the marquis, "interesting, but rather prudent. You have known her and seduced her and want to marry her, all how many days is it?"
 Lord Neville coloured.
 "I seem to have known her for years," he said, almost to himself.
 "And may I ask—I don't desire to appear inquisitive—who this young lady is? I didn't know that you had visited any of the people here. Do I know her?"
 "I think not, sir," said Lord Neville. "Her name is Doris Marlowe."
 "Doris Marlowe," repeated the marquis. "A pretty name. No I don't know it. There is no county family hereabouts, that I remember, of the name of Marlowe."
 "She is not a member of a county family. She is an actress," said Lord Neville.
 He looked up steadily, expecting to see the cold, laughty face break into an expression of rage, fury, scorn; but there was not the least emotion displayed on the thin, curled lips and glittering eyes.
 "An actress? Really? Dear me! This is very—entertaining! I was under the impression that only callow schoolboys ever fell in love with actresses. I should have thought—pray forgive me—that you were too old, if not too sensible, to be gully of such a gancherie."

Lord Neville pressed his foot down upon the Turkey carpet, and sat himself squarely in his chair in his effort to command his temper. He had resolved that nothing the marquis should say should rouse him to anger or to retaliation.
 "An actress! I don't think the Stoyles have ever had an actress in the family—and some of us have gone pretty low down for our wives, too."
 Lord Neville bit his lip.
 "If you knew Miss Marlowe, sir, think you would scarcely consider that I was condescending in asking her to marry me."
 The marquis stared at him as if he were some curious specimen, worthy of calm and careful consideration.
 "I will take your word for that. At any rate I won't venture to contradict you; but you must permit me to express my satisfaction that Fate has spared me to that extent. I have no desire to add an actress to my list of acquaintances."
 Lord Neville inclined his head.
 "This is exactly what I expected you to say, sir," he said, quietly; "but I considered it my duty to tell you, and to ask your consent as I should have asked my father's, had he been living."
 "Thanks. You are very considerate," said the marquis, with a frown; "and do not mind me. Pray unbosom yourself. Treat me as if I were your father, and dilate upon the lady's charms. Of course she is beautiful."
 "She is very beautiful," said Lord Neville, quietly.
 "—And clever. Quite a genius, in fact, and equally, of course, pure and innocent as the driven snow."
 The words—the tone—almost maddened Lord Cecil.
 His face crimsoned, then went pale and his eyes burnt fiercely as they met the keen sardonic gaze.
 "She is clever. She is a genius. Yes," he said, controlling himself by a great effort. "She will be, or would have been famous. As to her innocence and purity, she has been brought up and carefully guided by a man against whom and herself the tongue of scandal has not dared even to hint a word."
 "In—deed! You are singularly fortunate!" came the scornful response.
 Lord Neville sprang to his feet, a half-audible oath wrung from him in his torture; but the marquis waved his thin, white, claw-like hand.
 "Pray sit down. We had better endeavour to discuss this matter quietly. If she is an actress, that is no reason why you should treat me to dramatic attitudes. Pray be calm. I have no doubt and believe all you say—"

I am quite convinced of it. We agree that she is everything that is beautiful and innocent and talented, and that you are very much in love with her—"
 And he laughed—such a laugh of taunting scorn and contempt as might have been echoed in Tophet.
 Lord Neville's face darkened.
 "Even in your day, my lord, all men were not scoundrels," he said grimly.
 "No," said the marquis, delighted at having driven him to retort. "No; there were some fools, even in my day!"
 "You shall call me what you please, sir."
 "My dear fellow, what else can I call you? Even you will not expect me to applaud such a step as you propose taking. You are a Neville; you will be the Marquis of Stoyles, a peer of the three kingdoms; you will get—or would have got—the Garter; and you propose to marry an actress! An actress! If there is any man in England who would not call you a fool, I should like to see him; I should like to see him very much, indeed. Why, my dear fellow, depend upon it no one thinks you more decidedly a fool than the girl herself."
 "By Heaven! if you only knew her!" broke from Lord Neville's parched lips.
 The marquis laughed.
 "Thanks again. But you'll excuse me, I trust. An actress! Come I'm not a betting man—now, but I will wager you a hundred pounds to five that before two months after you have been married you will admit to me that I was right, and that you were a great fool indeed."
 "I take you, sir," said Lord Neville, grimly; and he drew out his pocket-book and carefully potted down the bet.
 The old man's eyes alone with a swift approval. It was a touch worthy of himself.
 "And I'll make you another that in the same period the girl herself will be as sorry that she married you."
 "I don't take that," said Lord Neville, coldly. "For, considering the blood that runs in my veins, any woman's chance of happiness as my wife is a small one."
 CHAPTER XIII
 AN ACCEPTED OFFER.
 The effect of this retort upon the marquis was fearful. His face pale at all times, went livid, his eyes gleamed like ardent coals, his teeth came together with a click, and he drooped as if he had been struck; then in a moment or two he recovered himself and made an elaborate bow.
 "Fairly hit," he said, and his voice was very low and sharp. "Very well done, indeed. But you forgot, when you taunted me with the unhappiness of my own married life, that you were admitting that I spoke with experience."
 Lord Neville flushed.
 "By Heaven, sir," he said, quietly "you drove me too hard. I know little or nothing of your married life. I scarcely thought of it when I spoke!"
 The marquis waved his hand.
 "Don't spoil it by an apology," he said, quietly. "You struck home and should be satisfied. My marriage was almost as great a mistake as yours will be—almost, not quite. It ruined my life. If, by a little trouble, I could have saved you from a like experience, I should have been glad to have done so; but I am not prepared to take much trouble. We will, therefore, if you please, consider that you have made up your mind to marry this girl from the gutter—don't look so fierce. A girl who is of no family is from the gutter the pavement—that you have made up your mind to become the laughing-stock of all your friends, old and young; to chain yourself to a woman who will, while she lives, be pointed and stared at as 'the actress.' For special advice women are asked to write the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of forty years experience is at your service."

tion entitle you, and sink into grim solitude or the companionship of people of her class. We will take all this for granted. And now, what do you expect me to do, if I may ask?"
 "To request me to leave this house, to discontinue my allowance, and to cut me from henceforth," said Lord Neville, promptly but faintly.
 The marquis smiled.
 "Y—es," he said, nodding "that is my duty forcibly and concisely. This is what I ought to do; but all my life I have never done what I ought to have done, and have always done what I ought not. You are welcome to remain at the Towers as long as you please."
 Lord Neville looked with faint surprise, and the marquis sipped his wine slowly.
 "I shall double your allowance, and, as to cutting you, that would be inconvenient and troublesome, not to say vulgar. Of course I shall keep to my resolve respecting the property—that will go to Lady Grace, as I said."
 Lord Neville's face flushed.
 "She is welcome to it, quite welcome to it," he said at once. "I am glad that it should be so. I—I think you have acted very generously to me, and I thank you sir."
 The marquis inclined his head, a faint smile hovering about his thin lips.
 "You might be able to marry upon your allowance doubled, as I propose," he said. "You would not be very rich, but it might do."
 "It will be quite sufficient," said Lord Neville, as yet unrecovered from his surprise.
 "I shall not live very long, I hope; though, by the way, I should like to live long enough to win that five pounds of you"—Lord Neville smiled—"and then you will have the estate—such as they are."
 "I ask you to believe me that I am in no hurry. I do not wish, and never have wished, for your death," and his face flushed.
 The marquis waved his hand.
 "Thanks very much. But to return: I presume you have not the slightest doubt of the stability of your feelings? You are sure that you won't change your mind—your heart, I should have said?"
 "Quite certain," replied Lord Neville, Doris's face rising like a smile. "My happiness is bound up in Miss Marlowe. I shall never cease to love her."
 "Very good," said the marquis. "Of course you want to be married at once? Oh, I have no objection; it is a matter of perfect indifference to me, I assure you."
 "Then your kindness and liberality are all the more marked, sir," said Lord Neville. "I wish I could convince you of my gratitude; it is sufficient to make me forget—almost—all the hard things you have said."
 "Ah," said the marquis, "gratitude is a fine sentiment—very fine. But rather hollow and shadowy. If I were to ask you to do something, for instance, to prove this beautiful sentiment!" he sneered as a finish to the sentence.
 Lord Neville looked up.
 "I wish you would!" he said. "I should like to prove my sincerity, sir."
 The marquis looked round the room with a smile of idle amusement.

And the Worst is Yet to Come—

HER DAUGHTER WAS SAVED FROM OPERATION
 Mrs. Wells of Petersburg Tells How.
 Petersburg, Va.—"For two years my daughter suffered from a weakness and pains in her right side; at times she was so bad she could not do any work. For two years she was attended by the best physicians here, and both agreed that she would have to be operated on. I suggested Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and at first she refused to take it, but finally consented. From the very beginning it helped her, and now she is entirely well, and telling everybody how much good it has done her."—Mrs. W. D. WELLS, 226 North Adams Street, Petersburg, Va.
 If every girl who suffers as Miss Wells did, or from irregularities, painful periods, backache, sidesache, dragging down pains, inflammation or ulceration would only give this famous root and herb remedy a trial they would soon find relief from such suffering.
 For special advice women are asked to write the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of forty years experience is at your service."

MILLEY'S.

The Three Days' Match.

(Christian Science Monitor.)
The three days' match is, of course, the three days' country cricket match, as it was played in England in the days before the war; as it was played before the final authority on English cricket, deciding as it did a short time ago, that the time had come to "speed up" cricket like most other things. Limited the country match to two days. Doubtless the decision was reached only after the fullest discussion and after most careful weighing of all the pros and cons. Doubtless, too, the effect will be to make the game more lively, more full of incident, for, at the same time that the all-highest decided to limit the length of the match to two days, it decided also to issue the decree that in future only wins should count, and that the system of deducting losses from wins, in the final reckoning for the country championship, should be abolished.

Thus was defeat shorn of half its penalty, and, to that extent, is the game relieved of caution. Nevertheless, there are many who will regret the disappearance of the three-days' match. Because in country cricket, although the game, is first and last the thing, the game, under the old leisurely style, had so many welcome surroundings. To the cricket-lover who followed the scores, and studied the averages who could tell you, offhand, who had won what and where he had won it, what bowler had done the hat-trick and what batsmen had made the most centuries, to such a one the days of a country match in his own town were a special joy. Even if he could not get away to attend the whole match, and this indeed was only open to the man of leisure, the special editions of the "evening" papers kept him informed as to the progress of the game, which side had "won the toss," who was batting and who was bowling, how the light was, and whether the pitch was fast or slow. Then would surely come the afternoon on the second or third day, maybe, when he could manage to get away early, and find his way to the ground. Who shall speak of the "great satisfaction" of that first survey of the field and that leisurely summer crowd that surrounded it, the choosing of a seat, the identification of the players, for all, at first sight, look alike, the filling in of the score card up to date with the help, always readily given, of the next door neighbour, what the time should bring forth?

And one of its great satisfactions was undoubtedly that which, under the new rules, is to some extent curtailed, namely, the leisureliness of everything. Not that the game was always leisurely, often it was very fast and very furious. But there were sure to be long stretches, especially in the early hours of the match, when the slow but steady piling up of a score, steady batting, steady fielding, and steady bowling seemed to fit it so well with the warm sunlight and the still air! The short sharp cheer for the bowler as he bowled his man, or for one of the fielders as he caught him; the tribute to the outgoing batsman, as he neared the pavilion, and to the incoming batsman as he walked toward the wicket; the changes after each over; the momentary pause in the game as the white-coated referee was appealed to and gave a decision; all these were the stock in trade of the country match. They will all be there, of course, in the two days' match, but everything will be taken at a faster pace. Leisureliness has vanished. Perhaps the change will make a better game of it, but the country fixture can never again be so "generous an event" as the three-days' match of the days before the war.

"Foreign Devil a Libel.

Delivered at the close of an address on the characteristics of China, the warning was none the less clear and significant coming from his excellency Liang Chi Chao, Minister of Finance of the Chinese Republic, and chief Chinese representative at the Paris Conference. "Hitherto," he said, "my country has not been characterized by the aggressive spirit of nationalism, or patriotism, of western nations. But if the powers place us in the position of having to choose between European patriotism and loss of independence, undoubtedly China will choose the former."

What is the reason for the feeling against the foreigner in China? Why, just this, said Mr. Liang, with very pardonable irony. China is not a Christian nation. She knows not that rule of conduct which enjoins forbearance with the smiter. In the coin in which she is paid she pays back again. Nevertheless, the term "foreign devil" is a libel on Chinese politeness, the result of mistranslation. In Chinese the term means "ghost of the sea" and was applied, in the old days, to the Dutch traders who came from over seas and had blue eyes. Blue eyes are not particularly admired in China.—Christian Science Monitor.

No Deserter.

(From the Washington Star.)
Representative Julius Kahn said at a dinner:—"What we call a 'dessert,' the English call a 'sweet.' Offer an Englishman a dessert, and he would not understand you. I remember a dinner here last year at which we entertained a number of English Tommies. At the end of the eleventh course the waiter approached one of the men with a huge dish of apple pudding. 'Dessert, sir?' he asked. 'Dessert? Not me!' replied Tommy. 'Not when I can get a feed like this for nothing!'"

Gone Fishing.

MADE TO ORDER.

The sole thought and purpose of the man who controls the destinies of the Fishermen's Protective Union is to gather together all the strings of the public service and then pull them to further his own ends.

And yet the man who could calmly sit down and write such dangerous doctrine is the very man who to-day is clamoring for fair play, something of which, if he knows its definition, he does not practice.

If the specific instructions issued to Councils from the Head Office, which were published yesterday, were subjected to an analysis, it will be found that a plot or a conspiracy was set afoot to destroy the inalienable rights of the electors.

ed, and the people could go to Hong Kong. Those who were not Unionists were to be allowed no say whatever in the disposition of the money, toward the raising of which each and every one had contributed his quota of taxation.

"We want Union Boards entirely," the instructions read, "no outsiders." Outsiders, that is, non-Union men invariably made trouble, and it can be imagined that this trouble resulted from their disagreement with the plans that all monies be spent in improvements benefiting Union property and Union men generally.

Another Seafaring Exploit. Two Newfoundlanders, anxious to return to the homeland after an extended journey abroad, arrived here last evening on the way to Bell Island in a motor launch little bigger than a fishing boat.

A Juvenile Court. Among the questions discussed at last evening's meeting of the Social Service Committee held in the Presbyterian Hall last evening, was that of the appointment of a probation officer to look after the erring boys and the institution of a juvenile court and home for delinquent boys where the proper environment would bring them to see "the error of their ways."

Economical Motoring. "I have a Chevrolet Model 'Four-Ninety' Touring Car," says G. H. McNamee, a prominent citizen of Canton, Ohio, in a recent letter.

FISHING PROSPECTS POOR.—Between Riverhead, Bay Roberts and Juggler's Cove the catch of codfish to date is 500 qts. Prospects are poor, and practically nothing was done last week, caplin being scarce.

The Veterans' Drive.

The divisional commanders and captains of the different teams of the G.W.V.A. "Drive" held a most practical meeting in the C.C.C. Hall last night. The funds raised have reached over $24,000, and for the general good of the cause, and to show the public the sincerity of the purpose for which the appeal has been made, it is now proposed that a board of trustees, comprising prominent commercial men in the community, will be elected to control the expenditure of the funds.

To-day's Messages.

PLEADED "NOT GUILTY." LONDON, July 22. (Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—Private P. H. Wilkie, 102nd Canadian Battalion, J. Connors, 13th Canadian Highlanders, A. McKeester, 3rd Canadian Reserve, A. Masse and R. F. McAllan, both of Camp D. Forestry Corps, who were committed for trial at Bow Street for manslaughter, in connection with the death of Sgt. Green, of the Epsom Police, and also Bugler Robert Todd, of the Canadians, who was committed on a Coroner's warrant, were brought up in the Surrey Assizes, Justice Darling presiding. They were indicted for unlawfully and riotously assembling to disturb the peace, and causing damage to property. All the accused were defended and pleaded Not Guilty.

AGITATOR FINED. MELBOURNE, Australia, July 22. Walsh, the Secretary of the Seamen's Union, was arrested and fined five hundred pounds sterling last week, for encouraging the seamen's strike, contrary to the arbitration act. In the course of a subsequent speech, he defied the government to imprison him, and boasted that while he was in jail not a ship would move, and that the action against him would cause a revolution. A Sydney despatch says the seamen there do not favor Walsh's reported military movement, and a plan is on foot to form a new union.

A SUPPRESSION BILL. WASHINGTON, July 22. By a vote of nearly three to one, the House, weary of talk on prohibition, to-day passed a bill for its enforcement, with provisions and penalties so drastic as to bring from the men who reframed it, the prediction that it would forever suppress the liquor traffic on American soil.

C. of E. Educational Campaign.

There was a 100% attendance at the meeting of the Captains of the teams last night. Not less than 240 out of a total required of 250 workers were reported as actually signed up, while the remainder were already practically assured. Mr. Stoll, who represents the Hooknury System and is directing all the activities of the campaign, confessed that such a degree of success at this stage is unusual in his experience. From the different reports of the Captains it was further evident that not a few "outsiders" have shown themselves anxious to be enrolled among the workers. The complete organization will be published in to-morrow's paper. With such practical proofs from every side of the interest that is being aroused in the drive, enthusiasm reached a high pitch at last night's meeting and will be more than maintained when the drive is officially launched to-morrow night. A meeting was also held last night of the members of the Captains' Guild, which was attended by many ladies of the other parishes as well, for the purpose of making arrangements for the "team and give" plan. It met with the approval of the Board of Education. Mr. Soper and Mr. Blatch, who superintended these matters during the Methodist drive, have offered their services and have been gladly accepted. Mr. Soper addressed the meeting and explained the working of various details. At the same time, Mr. J. A. Winter, Chairman of the Earn and Give Committee, met a number of the teachers and outlined the object and scope of the campaign. The plan is to have a most enthusiastic reception, the idea of asking the children to help being warmly approved by all the teachers. The "team and give" plan before their pupils and elaborate definite programmes. Arrangements have been made for the erection of a large Score Board on the vacant plot opposite the Board of Trade Building, upon which the results of the different teams will be tabulated from day to day during the progress of the drive.

No News. Nothing so far has been received at Channel with regard to the missing schooner Willie Roy and her crew of four, and though it is by no means hopeless that boat and men may turn up safely, yet every hour adds to the anxiety and fears of the relatives of those on board, and we trust shortly that the best news will be flashing over the wires. The Department of Marine and Fisheries has not received any replies to the enquiries made at the various telegraph stations on the West coast, and it is thought that the little vessel may be safe in some Cove far from reach by wire.

Arranging Luncheons. At a meeting of the ladies representing the Cathedral, St. Thomas's and St. Mary's, held in Canon Wood Hall last evening, it was arranged to look after the serving of luncheons in connection with the C. of E. Educational Drive. The ladies of each parish will attend two evenings.

Fine Music.

The Irish melodies discoursed by the C.L.B. Band at the concert last night received the heartiest commendations from the vast concourse of people present, more especially by our Celtic-Newfoundlanders who kept time with the music with their feet, to the familiar strains of Garryowen (the marching tune of the famous Connaught Rangers) and Charming Judy Callaghan. The Banks of Newfoundland, our own National melody, was also received with great enthusiasm and applause.

Government Arbitrator. Mr. George H. Badcock, of the Customs Department left yesterday by train to connect with the s.s. Ethie at Humbermouth en route to St. John's Bay and other ports in the Straits. There appears to be some little disputes amongst the fishermen in that neighborhood over trap berths, etc., and Mr. Badcock has been sent to smoothen matters over.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

DO YOU KNOW THIS TYPE?

Heaven defend me from the sort of person who prides herself on her frankness! One can forgive the person who is constitutionally frank, who doesn't realize that her way of saying just what she means is anything unusual, or if she does realize it, regrets it and regrets it as a fault. I have two such among my friends and while I sometimes wince at their candor, I don't resent it. And when they do give me a compliment I treasure it for life because I know it is pure gold and a yard wide. (Incidentally both of these people have Irish blood in their veins. I wonder why we consider the habit of blaming an inevitable accompaniment? It seems to me it is just as apt to be ultra-candid. Does anyone agree with me in this?)

But Cultivated Frankness Is Different.

But one (or should I say "it") feels quite differently when the person who deliberately cultivates frankness gets under way. Here are three examples from the lips of a woman who has either cultivated or fallen into this habit of frankness, as I happen to know she did not possess it in her younger days. A friend of hers (who has not an unlimited income), tells her that she has washed out a satin skirt and blouse. "Oh, don't tell me you've washed up that old thing again," she says; "I wish you would get rid of it."

She Herself Has Wretched Coffee.

Again she sits down to a table where she is a guest (her hostess is a relative, but I do think there are some things we shouldn't say even to relatives) and declares: "My, this is an awfully tough piece of steak. Where do you get your meat?" Her relative told me that the lady herself always had wretched coffee and that she plans next time she goes there to say: "My, this is the poorest cup of coffee I ever drank—where do you buy your coffee?" But I know she won't do it—she isn't that sort. Again, a close friend brings her some butterscotch from a place which has always been noted for its fine butterscotch, and she says tranquilly as she munches it: "B. doesn't make as good butterscotch as he used to." That is perfectly true and not the fault of the buyer, but said at just that moment it does grate.

Two Lines No One Need Cross.

There is a line at which the gracious and kindly becomes the insincere and fulsome—there is likewise a line where frankness passes into rudeness. Is there any need of crossing either of these lines?

How is this for a rule—
Never speak anything but the truth, but do not always speak the truth.

This is to certify that fourteen years ago I got the cords of my left wrist nearly severed, and was for about nine months that I had no use of my hand, and tried other Liniments, also doctors, and was receiving no benefit. By a persuasion from a friend I got MINARD'S LINIMENT and used one bottle which completely cured me, and have been using MINARD'S LINIMENT in my family ever since and find it the same as when I first used it, and would never be without it.

Fads and Fashions.

Some of the new blouses are called slip-on kimonos, and fall five inches below the waist.

The broad cape or bertha collar is an appropriate finish for a dress of eighteenth century type.

Panels are still at the top of Fashion's list and nothing is more becoming to the stout figure.

Daisies about the crown and velvet streamers down the back make a large flat hat very youthful.

The whole trend of veillings is towards simpler styles—the meshes alone are sufficiently ornamental.

Edges of short sleeves and round necks are prettily finished with bias bands cross stitched in contrasting color.

SEASONABLE SONG.

I like to talk of Christmas time, along in mid-July; I like to speak of cold and rime, snow falling from the sky; I like to tell of Santa Claus, the dearest fake that ever was, the most alluring guy I seem to see the crowded stores, where eager shoppers swarm, and though outside a tempest roars, in there it's bright and warm; and I behold the weary clerks who cuss old Santa and his works and clamor for reform. And I forget the summer heat, the weather that's a crime, while dreaming of the crowded street at merry Christmas time; I see the wreaths of evergreen, with holly berries strewn between, and hear the glad bells chime. The stormy clouds by winds are rolled across the wintry sky; and tingling shoppers cuss the cold and wish it were July. "Ah, me," they sigh, "how fine 'twould be to sit beneath a steaming tree, and simmer, bake and fry!" I see the children with their sleds upon the gleaming snow; and so, to divers little beds in ecstasy they'll go, to dream of Kringle and his pack, of reindeer on their shining track, fine presents to bestow. And dreaming thus of Christmas day, the anguish in me dies; if dreams will drive one's grief away, I hold that dreams are wise; and I lock blandly at the sun, and smile a few, and take a gun, and shoot a dozen flies.

The trimmings for Fall are almost crude in color—so positive are they. A buckle of pearl makes a pretty finish for the belt which fastens on the side.

A smart touch is gained by having a black velvet collar or a frock of beige satin.

Very pretty summer hats are trimmed with one large rose and a band of fur.

Dotted Swiss with colored dots makes a charming blouse to wear with a white skirt.

Rather narrow picot-edged ribbon makes the prettiest girdle for a chiffon dress.

Many of the new pockets are so fashioned as to call attention to the broad-hip effect.

Metal embroideries on lawn or organdie are one of the newest features of fashion.

Just Folks

HELPLESS DISBELIEVERS.

Dark are the skies to the faithless,
Bitter their hours of grief;
Heavy the blow that is struck by woe
To the people of no belief.
Having no God to trust,
They are tossed about by the winds of doubt
As helpless as grains of dust.

They may laugh and sing in their summer
And scold when their skies are fair,
But they wither and fade when their games are played
And they come to the touch of care.
For nothing that man has whispered
And nothing that man has said,
Can soften the grief of a disbeliever
In the hours when its love lies dead.

Life is but death to the faithless,
They sigh, "how fine 'twould be to sit
They have none to share in their black despair,
Nor a hope when the storm has passed.
They are broken reeds in their sorrow
Weak prey to the winds of woe.
For they've no belief that can comfort grief,
No strength for the bitter blow.

Faith is the light in the darkness,
Faith is the promise fair,
And none so stout he can do without
The strength of an earnest prayer.
For whenever man comes to sorrow
And whenever he bows to grief,
Let come what will, he can bear it Still
Sustained by a firm belief.

A Red, White and Blue Fish.

A fish of the golden breed with a red body, white fins and sides and a blue streak on its back, has been produced by Frank W. Hedden, of 47 Gaultier Avenue, Jersey City, a member of the Hudson County Aquarium Society.

Mr. Hedden said he crossed a Chinese Moor-black goldfish with a fish that had a red scaled Japanese and a brown transparent scaled Japanese goldfish for parents.

Mr. Hedden has christened his red, white and blue fish "Miss Liberty."

Nothing could be more simple or charming than the manner of trying a narrow girdle about the waist with a butterfly bow in front.

OVER-SEAS CLUB.

Interesting Address by Mr Francis R. Jones, F. R. G. S.

"We sailed wherever ship could sail,
 We founded many a mighty State,
 Pray God our greatness may not fail
 Through craven fears of being great."
 —Tennyson.

A list of more than fifty guests met Mr. Francis R. Jones, F.R.G.S., at the luncheon given at Wood's West End Restaurant by the Board of Trade yesterday at one o'clock. These were: Sir Edgar Bowring, Sir P. T. McGrath, Hons. S. K. Bell, P. Templeman, R. A. Squires, M. G. Winter, W. J. Ellis, W. B. Grieve, and Messrs. Hiscock, Meehan, T. A. McNab, Dr. John Grieve, D. M. Baird, H. E. Cowan, Harold Mitchell, K. M. Blair, John Steer, C. R. Steer, Frank Steer, Geo. R. Williams, W. R. Warren, R. F. Goodridge, Avalon Goodridge, G. M. Barr, J. J. McKay, (President Board of Trade), Percie Johnson, J. S. Monroe, C. A. Bell, R. A. Templeton, H. W. LeMessurier, Arthur Donnelly, R. B. Job, T. H. Griffiths, Col. Rendell, Arch Munn, Mayor Gosling, C. E. Hunt, Frank Bradshaw, and J. C. Puddister, representing the Daily News; H. Halliburton, the Star, and J. R. Smallwood the Telegram. After the lunch had been dealt with the guest of honor was introduced by President McKay, and in opening Mr. Jones referred to the pleasure it gave him to visit Newfoundland. His object in coming, he did not mind admitting, was to increase the membership of the Overseas Club, which he represented. He trusted that his visit here would have that effect. Mr. C. R. Steer is the local secretary, and all applications for membership could be sent him. The number of Newfoundlanders who are in the Club is small, and rather curious to relate is that the largest body is in Catalina, where about 70 or 80 are members. They were enrolled by the late Mr. Norman Snelgrove, and he felt much regret at his inability to go there. The fishermen would be away, in any case, and beyond visiting Grand Falls on Thursday, he could not go to any other will assist, if only the membership is large and the members willing and enthusiastic. Altogether Mr. Jones' discourse was the most interesting heard for a long time, and every guest left with a deep and favorable impression of his powers and abilities as a lecturer. Sir Edgar Bowring proposed, Mr. H. W. LeMessurier seconded and President McKay moved a vote of thanks, this being given by acclamation.

All for Education— Education for All.

Editor Evening Telegram
 Dear sir.—Could a more inspiring motto be adopted than that of the C. E. Educational Campaign when carrying on their intensive drive for school improvement in St. John's? One feels confident at once, on reading such an encouraging caption. And so the teams should be confident—very confident—for what man has done man can do. The Methodist drive was very successful. There can be no doubt—no room for doubt—that the C. E. object will be left well behind if the cause is taken up eagerly and earnestly for public sympathy is strongly with it. The war has taught us to think in millions where formerly we thought in thousands, and there is our warrant for the greater vision.

Yours faithfully

How's 'At, Umpire?

BOWLING AT FUR AND FEATHER.
 The Handley-Page aeroplane which stopped a cricket match at Lords' recently is the latest form of interruption in cricket.

Animals and birds have done it in the past. Browne, of Brighton, who was considered by many to be the fastest bowler of his day, once killed a dog with one of his deliveries.

A dog fared better during a match at Rossall in 1903.

It was the match between the local club and the M. C. C., and in the middle of the game a large hare dashed in amongst the players. J. T. Hearne was just in the act of bowling, and he tried to hit the hare instead of the opposite wicket.

The umpire was so taken up with the situation that he forgot to call a wide. Mr. A. N. Hornby threw his hat at the animal, but it was too quick for him, and ran straight between his legs.

Spooner and Frank Harcy both tried hard to secure a hare pie; and players and spectators joined in the chase, but all in vain. The hare escaped into an adjoining field, where, sad to relate, it was bowled over by a dog.

Caught a Flying Swallow.
 Syd Gregory, one hot day, was at his usual place, cover-point, when a player thinking perhaps that Gregory was rather absent-minded, startled him by shouting:

"Look out, Syd!"
 Gregory, quick as lightning, shot out his hand and made a brilliant catch. It was not the ball he held, however, but a swallow; and for weeks he was chaffed about his "winged catch."

A seagull once stopped a match in which the Gloucestershire team was playing. The whole eleven left off their game to take cock-shies at the bird. The brothers W. G. and E. M. Grace were playing with Gloucestershire that day, and they heartily enjoyed the fun.

They were not so successful as Tom Hearne, the uncle of J. T. Hearne, when he bowled a ball and hit a pigeon which flew across the Islington ground during the Middlesex vs. Netts match. He had the bird stuffed, and it was on view at the Crystal Palace when the Jubilee Exhibition was held there in 1897.

Unintentionally a bowler killed a swallow at Godalming while bowling to the Earl of Winterton, the ball striking the swallow in its flight.

As the result of a wager a certain trundler won £100 for the Earl of Tankerville by hitting a feather laid on the pitch for him to bowl at.—Pearson's Weekly.

Give the Clerks a Chance

In these days of labor agitation when manual workers are demanding even to the point of revolution, for an eight-hour day of labor and a half holiday on Saturday, there is danger of these same people being the means of imposing great hardships and injustice in a large class of people in every town and city. We refer to the clerks, especially in provision stores. Many people clamoring for short hours themselves, by their shopping customs, impose intolerable hours, especially on Saturdays, upon clerks and delivery men often keeping them on the strain till midnight and thus wearying them so that even Sunday is spoiled for them. This is all wrong. Let the people who demand short hours and a half holiday on Saturday refuse to buy anything on Saturday afternoon. Should this become general the evil of long Saturday night open shops and wearied clerks would stop. Storekeepers would soon, from self-interest, close their shops when trade did not make it profitable to keep them open. The shops are kept open late because of the selfish forgetfulness of the very people who are clamoring for shorter hours for themselves.—The Wesleyan.

Royal Ascot.

STORIES OF SPORTING KINGS AND THEIR SUPPORT TO THE KING OF SPORTS.

More than two centuries have gone since Queen Anne drove on to the Ascot Heath in state to inaugurate the races on the course which she herself had designed, and to applaud the winner of "Her Majesty's Plate of 100 guineas."

So delighted was the Royal lady with her new race-course and its success that, during the brief remainder of her life, she not only attended every meeting, but took the whole world of rank and fashion in her train, thus cradling the infant in the Royal pomp and splendour which have ever since distinguished it.

It is true that after Anne's death the glory of Ascot was a little dimmed for the first two Georges were not enthusiasts for the "sport of kings." But under the patronage of George II, it blossomed into new life and still greater splendour as the resort of fashion, and the Mecca of horse-lovers.

So popular indeed did the meeting become that it attracted not only the world of rank and of sport, but pick-pockets, swill mobsmen, and loafers by the thousand. The common was dotted with scores of gambling-booths, in which large sums were won and lost; wrestling matches and prize-fights for heavy stakes took place on the course; and among many other excitements cock-fighting could always be relied on.

After Waterloo.

Seldom has Ascot seen such glorious times as those when George III., accompanied by his Queen and the many members of his family, drove on to the Heath in all the magnificence of Royal equipages, making their stately and triumphant progress past the long row of towering booths, crowded with the flower of the English nobility, the loveliest women, and the most celebrated personages in the kingdom, and to the thunderous applause of the thousands of more humble spectators.

In the long succession of brilliant Ascot meetings not one, perhaps, shines out with such splendour as that of 1815, when, after years of bloodshed and terror, Europe was at last at peace.

All the world of rank and beauty mingled freely with the crowds, and joined in the thunders of cheers that greeted the dazzling array of Royal carriages which flowed on to the course.

First came the Tsar of all the Russias, with his gorgeous retinue; Queen Charlotte came next, followed, amid rolling thunders of applause, by the King of Prussia. Another ovation greeted the Prince Regent and his brother of York; but when the cry rang out "Blucher! Blucher!" the enthusiasm, strange as it seems to read to-day, of the assembled thousands burst all bounds.

In Honour of Blucher.

The tumult of shouts rose in deafening crescendo until the very sky seemed to quiver. Ladies wildly flouted their handkerchiefs, men flung hats and umbrellas into the air; while hundreds fought and scrambled to shake the veteran's hand, or even to touch his uniform.

The glories of that wonderful year were recalled in 1844, when the Royal procession included, not only Queen Victoria and Prince Albert, but Nicholas I. of Russia, and the King of Saxony.

So delighted was Nicholas with the race for the Gold Cup, which was won by Lord Albemarle's colt by inches, after a terrific neck-and-neck struggle with Corona, that he offered to present a plate worth £500 to take the place of the Cup, and to be known as the "Emperor's Plate."

Another red-letter day in the Ascot calendar was 1853, which was made memorable by the presence of the Prince of Wales with his three-months' bride.

"So rapturous," we are told, "was the cheering that the Princess's eyes brimmed with tears, which struggled for supremacy with her smiles."—London Answers.

Localizing the World.

Every time you look up in the sky now, you either see an airplane or get a cinder in your eye. Airplanes have been added to the daily menu as a regular stunt along with the other habits. In time to come, airplanes will be part of the makeup, like watches, glasses, styles, corns, etc. Time will be taken by the forelock and be twisted into giving more minute value per hour. Distance will be "just around the corner" then. Citizens can live in one town and hold down a job in another climate. During the winter keep the family down south and hop back and forth daily to the office up north. "Next door neighbors" will be spread over all the map. The tourist of to-day will be of the "Man about town" speed then.

Islam and the Golden Horn.

(Christian Science Monitor)

One of the most interesting and useful of the many minor statements on sundry issues of international importance submitted to the Peace Conference was certainly that of Mr. Charles Vamvacas, formerly a member of the Ottoman Parliament as a Christian subject of the Sultan of Turkey. Mr. Vamvacas' statement dealt with the question of the actual position occupied by Constantinople and the Sultan of Turkey in the estimate of the Muhammadan world. It constituted a reply to the recently issued appeal by British Muhammadan subjects urging the maintenance of the Sultan in Constantinople, and declaring that any attempt to hand over the city to some Christian people or state, or to place it under international control, would cause grave dissatisfaction to the Muhammadans throughout the world.

The inference, of course, of such a plea is that, according to the Muhammadan point of view, Constantinople has a sacred value, hence if the Padishah of the Osmanli were removed from the Golden Horn it would amount to an attack on the "faith or belief" of the followers of Muhammad." Mr. Vamvacas insists that to make such assertions is to go against the traditions of the Muhammadan believers themselves. Constantinople, he says, is not a sacred city even to the Turks, who actually term it a city of Ghiaours—a conquered infidel place. Unlike Mecca and Medina, it is not a center of Muhammadan cult, and bears no name to show that it is considered holy, sacred, or illuminated, such as is conveyed, for instance, by the qualifying term sherrif, moukerem, or munever, attached to Mecca, Medina, and Damascus.

Those who have any knowledge at all of the long and complicated history of the caliphate cannot fail to recognize the justice of these contentions. The great Arab cities already mentioned, to which must be added Baghdad, Yemen, and Assir, have never recognized the religious supremacy of the Ottoman Caliph. On the contrary, they look upon the Sultan as distinctly a usurper, and insist that the true claimants to the caliphate are in Mecca. Indeed, when Mutassen, son of the great Caliph Haroun-al-Raschid, in a time of stress called in the Turks for his aid, in the ninth century, his act practically marked the end of the caliphate as a great politico-religious power. Ever since that time it has merely existed as an institution in the Ottoman Empire. To the devout Muhammadan the great caliphs were never the sultans of Turkey, no matter how magnificent their estate or wide their empire, but the caliphs of Medina, of Damascus, and of Baghdad. Then, as Mr. Vamvacas justly points out, the Arab chiefs have never recognized the Ottoman Caliph's authority on many questions of first importance, but have steadily preserved their independence and religious convictions.

As to the Indian Muhammadans who were, of course, the authors of the plea to which he objects, Mr. Vamvacas declares that they are never seen in Constantinople paying their respects to the padishah, but that, on the contrary, their objective and that of the Algerians and the Tunisians, has always been Baghdad. All this is, of course, very much to the point, but if any proof were needed of the practically vanished authority of the Ottoman Caliph, it would be found, surely, in the way in which the Caliph's call to a holy war in the November of 1914 was practically ignored throughout the whole Muhammadan belt, outside the Turkish Saxon.

The Poppies of France.

(From the Boston Herald.)

Ever since John McCrea's great little poem won its place in the popular heart the world has known that poppies blow in the fields of Flanders, but only those who have travelled France in late spring and early summer realize how widely and how profusely that scarlet blossom colors the landscape from the Channel to the Mediterranean. It borders the roadsides, it blazes with special ardor in the wheat fields, it clammers over the crumbling ruins and even nods from thatched roofs. Those who have journeyed in the last two months through the northwestern France find the poppy blossoming in places and under conditions that give it an almost uncanny significance. Where it merely dots a trench-carved field it fairly riots along the edges of the trenches themselves and even in their depths. Looking down on such a field from a distant height, the trenches appear as a dotted line zig-zagging across a background of green. Even those cruelly battered regions north and east of Verdun, every square yard literally churned by many months of shellfire until the visitor would have sworn in early spring that nature could work no appreciable change there, much less bring a flood of color, for years to come, have become waving masses of scarlet. An observer at Verdun in late June writes:—"For miles those hills and valleys are covered with poppies; it is an extraordinary and moving spectacle. From a distance it looks like a vast sea of blood." It is the same on other battlefields and even among the cluttered ruins of the devastated villages. The residents view the thing with superstitious awe. They say that there have always been poppies in that region, but never in numbers approaching those of this year. Who can say what processes of the soil and sun have been at work where millions of men shed their blood? Are these myriads of blood-buffed blossoms of the trenches and battlefields only a whim of nature, unrelated to war and death? And be it remembered that the plea of John McCrea was not in vain. The world of civilization and humanity did not break faith, and he and his fellows can sleep in peace where poppies blow.

The South African Miracle.

(From the London Chronicle.) General Botha left our shores yesterday. If our countrymen who were killing President Kruger with their mouths some twenty years ago had been asleep in the meantime and had awakened to read this intelligence, they might have concluded that General Botha was returning to his own country in accordance with an amnesty for prisoners of war. Would they have believed the miracle that one of the ablest of our former enemies in arms had come to Europe and was again leaving Europe, as the Prime Minister of a British South Africa? Surely they would have been the more credulous when they learned that the Government in power in Britain at the time of the miracle included statesmen who had declared that the Boer control of South Africa, or even of the Transvaal and the Orange River Colony, would be tantamount to British surrender. Do we recall the contrast of the ignominy of the Boer General and his countrymen in Great Britain 20 years ago, and the respectful tribute which is universally paid to him and them today in order to discredit further our intransigents? Is it our object to imply that the astonishing transformation which we now witness in British and Boer relations is due alone or principally to British magnanimity and British genius for reconciling apparent incompatibles? By no means. Common sense has prevailed over passion on both sides, and British and Dutch alike in South Africa have recognized that neither race can exist there under any conditions of comfort without co-operation. Lord French, the other day, described the Boers as the most chivalrous enemies we had ever fought, and since then we have learnt that they are also the most reliable friends. We look from South Africa to Ireland with renewed hope. It is clearly not impossible that we may yet see Mr. de Valera himself acclaimed in London as the first Prime Minister of a contented Ireland.

Personal.

Mr. J. C. Puddister, P.P.G.M. Loyal Orange Association, left by express today for Ottawa, at which place the 1919 session of the Sovereign Grand Lodge of British North America, takes place. Mr. Puddister is the representative of the Provincial Grand Lodge of the L.O.A. in Newfoundland.

With careful investors, safety of income and principal is the first requirement.

¶ For institutions, partnerships, business men and investors generally, investments should be readily marketable, and also readily acceptable as collateral.

¶ One of the types of issues which best fulfills these requirements is usually the short term bond or note. Early maturity adds stability to its market course and the issue is paid at par, and in some instances at a premium, within a few years or less. Among business men and institutional investors who may desire to sell these investments at almost any time, there is a strong preference for short term issues. Let us furnish our proposals. We will do so on request.
