CHAPTER XIX.

"I want you to be my wife," he repeated. "I suppose you have seen this coming."

Decima found her voice at last. "No; oh, no, no!" she said, like one speaking mechanically; and it was well for his coolness that he did not see the shiver which followed her denial.

"Well, that's because you're so young and—and innocent," he said. "But I thought you might have guessed. I dare say your father does."

"My father!" The cry was almost one of amazement.

He nodded.

"Yes, he must have seen it; and I don't suppose he'd have any objection. Why should he? Look here, Miss Decima, I'm not going to boast—I know I'm not worthy of you; I don't know any man that is, but—well, as I say, I hate anything like boasting, but I can't help feeling that I've got the means to make you happy."

The horror was beginning to grow upon her, to make itself felt. She tried to rise, but she seemed under a spell, and there was something hideously fascinating in his cool, measured voice and tone.

"I'm a rich man. It wasn't swaggar when I said that I could buy a place like this." He looked round. "I'd buy a couple, half a dozen, if you expressed a wish to have them. I'm rich enough. But that's all I want to say about that. What I meant to say is, that all my money won't bring me happiness unless I can win you. I'm as deeply in love with you as a man could be."

"Oh, stop—stop!" she said. Her voice was broken, and faltered in her eagerness to stop him, but she saved one single word more. "I—I did not know, indeed—indeed, I did not know. I never thought, never guessed, Oh, do—do believe me. You must believe me."

"I do," he said.

"Well, then," she said, drawing a long breath, "you will not say any more, will not even think of it again." He looked at her fixedly.

"Does that mean that you refuse me?" he asked in a low voice.

She turned her lovely eyes with frank amazement at his, not understanding him.

"Oh, yes—yes!" she said, eagerly, as a girl speaks when she does not wish to wound. "I could not—could not!" She laughed a quivering laugh. "Why, I—I have never thought—I am so young; I—Oh, why did you tell me?"

There was pain in the voice, the pain of innocence at the approach of knowledge.

"You're not too young to be married," he said; "and as to your never having thought—well, I can understand that. You didn't know. But you know now, and I'll give you time to answer it."

WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

May Pass the Critical Period Safely and Comfortably by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Regina, Sask.—"I was going through Change of Life and suffered for two years with headache, nervousness, sleepless nights and general weakness. Some days I felt tired and unable to do my work. I gave Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial and found good results, and I also find it a very helpful Spring tonic and useful for constipation from which I suffer much. I have recommended Vegetable Compound to several friends, and am willing you should publish this."—Mrs. MARY W. LINDSAY, 810 Robinson St., Regina, Sask.

If you have warning symptoms such as a sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backache, dizziness, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness, irritability, and dizziness, get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and begin taking the medicine at once. We know it will help you as it did Mrs. Lindsay.

"No, don't; please don't!" she implored, with girlish eagerness. "I could not think. I—I am sure. All the thinking in the world would not make me. I could not!"

Every word she spoke, every emotion pictured on the lovely face, only made his desire more intense, his determination more solid.

"Do you hate me?" he asked, shortly.

Decima shrunk.

"Hate! Oh, no, no! Why should I?" "Do you dislike me?"

She moved uneasily.

"Why should I dislike you? My father—you have been kind—Oh, why do you ask me?"

"If you don't hate or even dislike me, you can grow to like me," he said, doggedly, with the persistence which had helped him to make his money.

"I'm in no hurry. I don't want to hurry you. I'll give you time to think it over."

"No," she said; and suddenly her voice had become full of womanly dignity. "I do not want any time. I am quite sure."

"But you can't be," he said. "I've taken you by surprise—you said so. You don't know your own mind. Take time. Don't answer me now. Tell your father"—he glanced at her, and something in his words and his glance—was it a presentiment?—made Decima shudder—"tell him and—ask him to advise you. It's a serious thing, matrimony. All your life depends upon it. It's like a big coup in mining shares; you rise or fall forever. Take time; only don't forget that I love you, and that I'd do anything to make you happy." He looked toward the ball-room. "None of those swells could say more than that, and they couldn't mean it more. I love you, and I'd spend every penny I've got to make you happy."

Decima was pale to the lips by this time; but there was no longer any tremor on them, nor was there any faltering in her eyes, dark enough now to be called black.

"I am sorry!" she said in a low, clear voice. "I must—I must—say no, a thousand times no! Will you—will you please find my father and tell him I would like to go home Mr. Mershon?"

Something in her voice, the touch of dignity in it, daunted him for a moment. He rose and stood before her, looking not at her face, but at the edge of her dress.

"I'll find him. But—but—I don't accept your answer. It's not my way. When I want a thing, I hold on till—I'll get it; and I want you, Miss Decima, very badly."

She looked up at him with a kind of surprised horror and repulsion. His face was pale, and his thin lips compressed tightly. The man looked—well, like a man who meant what he said. If she had had the least liking for him she would have felt some admiration for his dogged tenacity; but his determination repelled her.

"Oh, go, please!" she said; and he went.

He wandered about the rooms until he found Mr. Deane in the hall. He was talking to Lord Ferndale and one or two other men, talking in a high, strained voice, and emphasizing his words with his thin, lean hands. Mr. Mershon caught one sentence:

"The electric storage. My invention, Lord Ferndale. Mr. Mershon—my friend, Mr. Mershon—is bringing it out. There is a fortune, an enormous fortune—"

Mershon turned away with an oath and a sneer.

"I've got her fast enough!" he muttered; and he did not deliver Decima's message.

Decima sat quite still after he had left her. No attempt shall be made to analyze or describe her state of mind. What pen could do it? The first words of love had been spoken by—Mr. Mershon, let that suffice.

Her brows were drawn straight. She sat like one in a dream. And thus Gaunt found her. She did not hear his step until he was close upon her; then she seemed to awake, and turned to him with an eagerness which made the blood rush to his heart.

"This is our dance," he said, simply. "Your partners—those whom you have deserted—are rending their hair; I am prepared to be rend also."

She rose without a word, and he led her to the ball-room.

They began to dance. For a moment the room, the lights, the flashing diamonds, whirled like the prisms in a kaleidoscope, and her feet were uncertain; then, as his strong arms held her, she felt assured.

Gaunt waited, as he did most things he attempted, perfectly. She felt as if she were treading on air; as if she were supported by something as supple and strong as steel. A delicious sense of rest, peace, stole over her.

She looked, once, up at his face and met his eyes. They smiled down at her, and the smile sunk into her heart. She laughed softly; why, she knew not. His arms tightened round her, and she could feel his breath upon her hair.

Suddenly the room began to swim, the music grew to a roar in her ears, and the lights seemed to have been extinguished, as if a hand had passed over them.

He felt her sink on to his breast, felt the collapse, and, with all a strong man's self-possession, he carried her, apparently still dancing, toward the palm-house.

When they had reached it he looked down at her. She had fainted.

He lifted her in his arms, and bore her to a corner surrounded by giant ferns. It was almost dark there, and the only sound near to them was the plash of a fountain.

He held her in his arms, and looked down at her, all his soul in his eyes. Her head was lying on his breast, her lips, parted, touched the front of his shirt.

The man's great love overmastered him.

"Decima!" he whispered. "My darling, my darling!" At that moment, so selfish is the best, and the worst, of men, he almost wished her dead. "My darling, my love!"

He bent his head until his lips touched hers. His own lips were hot with the fever of passion, and, as if their fire had warmed her back to life, she shuddered and opened her eyes.

For a moment there was no intelligence in them, then she saw and recognized him. A shiver ran through her, and, all unconsciously, her arms tightened round him.

"I—am—glad!" she murmured, unconsciously.

"So glad—dearest!" he whispered.

"Yes," she said, faintly. "I have been asleep—and dreaming, and—ah! I thought it was some one else. Have I fainted, Lord Gaunt?"

"Yes," he said, hoarsely, as he allowed her—and helped her—to stand upright.

Her arm was still round his neck, and she drew it away without a blush, with perfect innocence.

"I am so sorry!" she said.

He was white to the lips, and his dark eyes glowed like coals.

"Decima!" he panted.

She looked at him with a faintly troubled smile. Then she frowned.

"He called me that!" she murmured, half unconsciously, and she shivered.

"He! Who?" he demanded.

She looked up at him, and swept the soft brown hair from her forehead.

"It—It does not matter! Oh, let me go home!" she said.

He stooped, still holding her, his eyes like spots of flame. So might the king of the forest be had so often hunted have looked when brought to bay.

With a great, a never-to-be-described effort, he controlled himself.

"Stay here!" he said, hoarsely. "I will find your father!"

Disks of black patent leather are applied with royal blue silk on a black crepe de chene dress.

The up-turned brim of a black velvet hat is of black lace, banded with jade-green ribbon.

Long, straight tunics and pannelings are results of the strong Chinese influence on dress.

In spite of its huge popularity last winter, monkey fur is the favored pelt for trimming this season.

The skirt of a black lace frock has across the bottom a wide band of white linen embroidered in black silk.

EAT and Get Thin

This is turning an old saying face about but modern methods of reducing fat have made this revision possible.

If you are overweight, opposed to physical exertion, fond of the table and indulgent in eating, and still want to reduce your excess flesh several pounds, go to your druggist for write to the Marmola Co., 9600 Parkside Building, Detroit, Mich., and give him (for send them) one dollar check, stating your ambition for a trim, slim figure, by using their good size box of Marmola Prescription Tablets compounded in accordance with the famous Marmola Prescription Tablets. Take one of these pleasant, candy tablets after each meal and at bedtime, and you will lose your fat at the rate of two, three or four pounds a week.

This contains the treatment until your weight is what you desire. Marmola Prescription Tablets are not only harmless but really beneficial to the general health. You don't need starvation diet or prescriptive concoctions. Just go on eating what you like, leave exercising to the future, but take your little tablet faithfully and without a doubt that fatty flesh will quickly take into itself wings, leaving behind it your natural and healthy clothes. In firm flesh and trim muscles.

"I Am Having a Terrible Time, I Simply Cannot Sleep"

PERHAPS it is something you have been eating?"
 "No, it is not. I am always careful about what I eat, particularly in the evenings."
 "Are you often that way?"
 "Yes, two or three nights a week, and I am getting worse all the time."
 "Is it your nerves?"
 "Yes, I suppose it is, for after any little excitement I am sure to have a sleepless night, and I do not know anything much worse than tossing in bed, unable to sleep."
 "Do you have headaches?"
 "Yes, often, more especially after a restless night."
 "Why don't you try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food? That is what nearly everybody uses for nervous troubles these days."
 "I don't know just why, unless because I have a dread of taking any drug that is strong enough to produce sleep."
 "But, my dear, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food will not produce sleep in that way. It is only after using it for a time and after the restorative influence is felt by the nerves that you will find yourself sleeping well and naturally."

 "So many of my girl friends have told me about using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food for sleeplessness, headaches, nervousness and such troubles that I have the greatest confidence in it."
 "How does it act?"
 "It is a restorative, makes the blood rich, feeds the nerves and builds up your system in every way so that the benefits are lasting."
 "How long will I have to use it?"
 "Oh, I suppose two or three months. It takes time, you know, to get exhausted nerves fully restored. It will not be long, though, before you find yourself sleeping well, enjoying your meals and entirely free from headaches."
 "Say, I believe I will try it, for I do suffer most terribly when I cannot sleep, and then I am so tired out next day."

NEW LICENSING BILL NEXT WEEK.

LONDON, Nov. 4. Premier Lloyd George stated in the House of Commons to-day that he had not yet decided whether he would attend the League of Nations conference in Geneva. He announced that a new Licensing Bill would be introduced next week.

NO HITCH IN MERGER PLANS.

TORONTO, Nov. 4. A financier in close touch with the merger plans of the British Empire Steel Corporation, is quoted as saying that no hitch has occurred in the plans and that arrangements are proceeding as rapidly as possible. Matters are now in the hands of lawyers of whom about ten are working on the merger. The laws and regulations of several different Canadian provinces have to be reconciled, and along with that are legal conditions in England from which some of the capital will be derived.

LONDON, Nov. 4. The House of Commons to-day took the second reading of a Bill empowering local authorities to hire empty houses compulsory.

STILL KING OF PRUSSIA!

LONDON, Nov. 4. More than sixty-two million Dutch florins have been paid to former Emperor William of Germany as King of Prussia by the Prussian Government since he fled to Holland, according to an official statement made to the legal committee of the Prussian Assembly on Wednesday, says a London Times despatch from Berlin.

LATEST RETURNS.

NEW YORK, Nov. 4. An almost record smashing electoral vote for Senator Harding, topping the four hundred mark and Republican majorities of more than a score in the Senate and 150 in the House were assured from virtually complete returns to-night from Tuesday's elections. With Democratic strong holds of Oklahoma, Missouri, and Tennessee definitely swept into the Republican party's ranks by crushing victory, the Harding-Coolidge ticket had 396 votes exclusive of five from Montana, where the Republican state ticket was victorious and the Presidential ticket ahead. The Republican landslide to-night had given the Republicans fifty-eight Senate seats, as against thirty-seven for the Democrats, with late returns undermining the seat of Senator Breckinridge, Democrat, Kentucky. His Republican opponent, Richard J. Ernst, forged ahead in a nip and tuck fight for the only Senate fight left unsettled. Of 36 Senate contests, Republicans captured 9 from the Democrats and elected all 15 of their candidates.

HARDING'S MAJORITY IN MASSACHUSETTS.

BOSTON, Nov. 4. Complete returns in Massachusetts show that Harding's plurality in the State was four hundred thousand. Final reports made no change in enormous pluralities accorded the Republican candidate for State offices.

"NOW DECEASED."

MARLON, Ohio, Nov. 4. Making his first speech as President-elect, Warren Harding declared at an election celebration of home folks here to-night that the Versailles League of Nations was "now deceased," although the new administration intended to see that the nation played its part in a new International Association, founded on peace and justice.

FIRST GERMAN SHIP IN NEW YORK SINCE WAR.

NEW YORK, Nov. 4. The first merchant steamship flying the German flag to come to the port of New York since July, 1914, arrived here to-day. The vessel, which marks the resumption of trade with Germany under the flag of that country, was the Sophie Rickmers, built in Germany during the war. She is flying the old German merchant marine flag.

FULL WORK IN MINES ON MONDAY.

LONDON, Nov. 4. Full work is expected to be resumed in the coal mines closed down by the recent miners' strike on Monday, when the railways are also expected to institute normal service. Restrictions on lighting in force since the beginning of the strike, probably will be removed to-night, but limitations on supply of household coal probably will be continued for the next two weeks. Reports from the coal fields to-day concerning the men's quick return to work are optimistic, but many mines cannot start fully till Monday. It is anticipated that it will take two months for all industries affected by the tie-up to get back to normal again.

DEFECTIONS FROM BRITISH GOVERNMENT.

LONDON, Nov. 4. Much interest has been aroused by the secession of Lord Henry Cavendish Beninck from the Ministerial to the Opposition side of the House of Commons. Lord Henry's family has high conservative traditions. He was returned at the general election as a Tory-Democrat-Coalitionist, but has always shown an independence of party whips. With the Cecil family he has expressed indignation against the Government concerning the alleged Irish reprisals, as was indicated the other evening when high words passed between him and Sir Hamar Greenwood, Irish Secretary, when they encountered each other in the lobby of the Commons. This explosion in its personal aspect evaporated in a few minutes. Oswald Mosley also accompanies Lord Henry to the other side of the House on the same grounds.

PLANS FOR COUNTER REVOLUTION DISCOVERED.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 4. The Berlingske Tidendes Kovno correspondent says to-day that Moscow newspapers received in Kovno, record an official announcement of a discovery by Soviets of plans for a big counter revolution. Precautions have been taken and thousands of persons are being arrested daily, the newspapers say, and the General Staff has detained three thousand of the former Czar's officers, who have been interned in Orenburg. According to the Moscow Pravda, as quoted by a correspondent, Leon Trotzky, Bolshevik Minister of War and Marine, in a speech in Petrograd declared, "I know danger is coming. I realize the possibility of a severe winter, but though three-fourths die of hunger and cold, the remainder will survive to carry to victory the world revolution."

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

WHY PEOPLE NOTICED HER.

At the little inn at which I stopped for some weeks last winter was a woman who never failed to attract people's admiring attention. She was not a pretty woman, though some called her so. The real word, as you soon saw when you stopped to study her, was "effective."

It takes, of course, a good deal of thought and practice to change a bad carriage into a good one. But when you think what you get out of it, it certainly seems time and effort well expended. Your figure will be vastly improved. I would guarantee that a woman with correct measurements and a good posture would make not half so good an impression as the woman with incorrect measurements and a fine carriage. Your health will probably be bettered. Your clothes will appear to much better advantage.

Whatever else may or may not be true about "Everywoman," it is surely true that she wants to be as attractive as she possibly can. A good carriage and a well-placed voice are charms we seldom come into touch with without noticing. Any woman can have both these. Is it not strange that so few do?

And in this effectiveness one factor was clothes chosen with perfect taste; another was a sweet face; another was hair beautifully and becomingly dressed. But the biggest factor of all was her carriage.

A Pleasure to Watch Her Pass.

One often heard people speak of her beautiful figure, but so far as ideal measurements go, she had no figure at all. She was almost 25 pounds under the ideal weight, but she carried herself so perfectly, with such a fine erectness and such a beautiful blend of grace and dignity that it was a pleasure to watch her as she passed from the dining room. One does not see one woman in a hundred with a carriage like that. One does not see ten women in a hundred with a distinctively good carriage.

Why Can't You Have It?

Yet what reason is there that one hundred out of a hundred cannot have a good carriage? Granted that such grace as this woman has, is partly a gift—a form of genius if you will (but don't forget that well-known definition of genius, "an infinite capacity for taking pains") and that only the exceptional woman could achieve it—there is surely no reason in the world why the average woman cannot stand properly and thereby enhance the attractiveness of her appearance and very likely improve her health.

More and more stress is being laid by the medical profession on the evils coming from improper posture. It is easy to see, when you stop to think of it, how the slumping position one often carelessly falls into must cramp the muscles of the stomach. And bad cases of indigestion are being remedied by putting the stomach back into its proper position either by corrective exercise or by support.

Fads and Fashions.

A new fur neck-piece has the head replaced by a long silken tassel. Some evening gowns feature the long, full skirt and square décolletage. New winter wraps have open shoulder seams extending to the waist line.

Some of the new sleeves are very tight and button close around the wrist.

Cuffs and collars of Venise lace are worn on a black velvet street frock. Flat velvet flowers are applied on chiffon and edged with flat jet beads.

Evening cloaks appear in light-colored velvet and tasseled wherever possible.

The collar of the suit-jacket is usually in high-roll style and closes at the side.

The transparent hem of lace finds the dinner-gown a suitable costume to adorn.

Misses suits are usually composed of the straight box jacket and fluted skirt.

Duvelyn dresses have collar and cuffs made of soft fur, such as squirrel or mink.

Turquoise blue satin and brown chiffon combine to make a charming evening dress.

For evening wear, satin skirts are topped by plain, square-necked velvet bodices.

Frocks of blue tricotine have collars of black satin, which button high around the neck.

A black velvet hat has a facing of black lace that drops below the edge of the brim.

THE FAT SUFFERER.

The fat man sickens and like the dickens his tortured system feels; he has the glanders and yaller janders and gout in both his heels. When convalescent, his woes senescent, he'd like to tell the tale of ailments gaudy that racked his body, and make his hearers pale. He'd fain be spelling his blood congealing pain epic by the week; but none will listen, no teardrops glisten on sympathetic cheek. And when he pauses with his; we'd hear him twitter of ordeals bitter, and sigh, and say, "Gee whizz!" But he is fatter than any hatter or plumber in the town; so when he'd babble and idly gabble, we promptly turn him down.

THE DREAMS OF YOUTH.
I wish I had my dreams again, my cherished dreams of olden days. Before I'd heard the call of men and learned to follow in their ways; For then the world was glorious with honor crowning every hill, And coming home victorious was just a test of strength and skill.

I feared no foe, those days of old, there were no pits for me to dread, Nor summer's heat nor winter's cold could daunt me as I fared ahead; Through eyes of youth I saw afar the heights of glory luring me, And thought without one hurt or scar I could achieve my victory.

I had no thought that I might err, that folly must be mine to know, That I should feel life's cruel spur or lose the road I wished to go; It seemed so easy to be true, so pleasant to defend the right, And there was naught I couldn't do in those lost dreams of young delight.

But now at times the road seems long, and facts are bitter things to face, It is not easy to be strong—one careless step may mean disgrace; I've learned among the haunts of men that hate and hurt are everywhere; I wish I had my dreams again when all the world was wondrous fair.

Killed While Asleep.

As Mr. George Lloyd, of Warrington, was driving a motor-cycle and side-car, containing his wife, Mrs. Emma Lloyd, 33, and daughter, Joan Lloyd, 4, at nearly 15 miles an hour, at Backford, near Chester, a stay snapped, causing the cycle and car to part company. The cycle went to one side of the road and the car to the other, where it crashed into a wall and overturned, throwing out Mrs. Lloyd and the little girl. At the time of the accident the mother was reading, and the little one was asleep on her knee. When the husband regained consciousness, he found his wife and child dead on the roadside.

A Prince's Forsaken Bride.

It is said that Prince Carol of Roumania, who was in London recently, has decided to break with the beautiful daughter of a Roumanian general whom he married in 1918. The Prince renounced his rights to the throne some months ago, and announced his determination to stick to his wife. State pressure, however, has caused him to reconsider his decision, and, to quote the Prince's own words, "the incident is now closed." Steps have been taken to dissolve the marriage, a "handsome portion" being given to the girl, who at one time refused an offer of £700,000 to relinquish all claims on the Prince.

Like Any Other Leg.

The bluntness of General Sir William Robertson is admirably illustrated by a couple of stories told by Colonel Replington in his reminiscences. "The First World War." After an exhibition of classical dancing by Lady Constance Stewart-Richardson with bare feet and a Maud Allan costume, he was asked if he did not think she had a very fine leg. "It's just like any other leg," was the reply. On another occasion he paid a visit to a small type of submarine, in which he could hardly stand or move. "Do you like the life?" he asked the commander. "Yes," was the reply. Sir William gave a grunt, and said, "Umph! You're easily pleased."

"Pull Together."

"Pull together"—it is a motto well worth giving to the nation to-day. On many points of policy there must always be sincere differences. Men see different roads to a common goal, and find controversy in questions where all are animated by common ideals. That is inevitable, and the stillness of all such disputes might be taken nothing nobler than poverty of thought and inactivity of mind. But many of the gravest problems of the day can be solved if all will pull together with the same cheerful sacrifice of the non-essentials of individuality that he showed in days of war. In the din of controversy and party cries we are apt to forget all but the issues on which we must profoundly disagree. It is well that we should be reminded of the many and far more important things on which we can all agree, and that we should be called back to the common tasks and ideals.—London Daily Express.

A Narrow Escape.

It was the old lady's first visit to the cinematograph. For a long time she gazed in silent awe at the wonders of the screen, where all sorts of impossible things took place. She could hardly believe the evidence of her own eyes. These things were real—they were actually happening. She stared with goggling eyes as miracle succeeded miracle. Then a motor car appeared on the screen, coming into sight in the distance, and racing along a country road at about a mile a minute straight out of the picture at the audience. Catastrophe seemed inevitable, and she shrank back in her seat. Then, just at the critical moment, it swerved aside and dashed out of sight. The old lady rose firmly to her feet, ignoring the protests of those behind her. "Come along, Annie," she said to her youthful niece, "it ain't safe here. That thing only missed me by a few inches."

Civic Commission

DEPRECATES PRESS REPORT OF ROBINS INCIDENT.

At the regular weekly meeting of the City Commission last night, the action of the Commission in connection with the removal of the building recently erected in defiance of the Municipal Regulations was discussed and the following statement was issued for publication:—

"The Municipal Council seriously deprecates the comments made by some section of the Press in the matter of the illegal action of a man named Robins in building a house on the Old Railway Track at the Battery, without submitting plans or asking permission of the Council to build. The facts of the issue are as follows:—

"It was reported in June last that Mr. Galeb 'Roberts' was excavating, evidently with the intention of building, and a letter was sent on June 14th informing him that no building would be permitted in that locality. Immediately he began to build he was informed by Mr. Coaker, the East End Road Inspector, that he was breaking the law. His reply was to the effect that he was going to build in spite of the Council or the law or anybody. He was then summoned and fined, and the Court then authorized the removal of the house as the law provides. When an attempt was made to carry out the law, Robins or his wife, committed a breach of the peace. Robins did not apply for permission to build, which is a gross breach of the law, and so far as anyone knows, has no title to the land upon which he built.

"The Municipal Board about five years ago asked that no grants of Crown Lands should be made to anyone in that vicinity, as permits to build dwelling houses would not be granted sites in the neighborhood and if Robins had applied to the Council he could have obtained a site on the property on Quidi Vidi Road, but he evidently from the beginning intended to defy the law and deserves no sympathy whatever, and to encourage him as the Press has done, only brings him into greater trouble.

"The problem of the Battery was one of the first matters taken up by the Municipal Board. The conditions there are most unsanitary and the whole settlement illegal. So far as the Board could ascertain no permits have been granted for buildings there, and the people who have built have no title to the land or to the houses which they have built. Some few in the first instance, got leases from the Reid-Newfoundland Company but they have refused to pay rents. The land is Imperial property, possibly held by the Reid Newfoundland Company under lease for the balance of their term. The people living on it are squatters and the houses are nuisances in the eyes of the law.

"After long consideration the Board decided to ask for powers to take over the property from the Reid Co. or from the Government, with a view to trying to get the place under some kind of law and order. They proposed to allow such buildings to remain as were fit for occupation, to give the people some title to their houses, which they call theirs, to furnish a water supply and sewerage, to make the residents pay crown rents and taxes, and in short to remove them from the condition of outlawry in which they now exist. A section of the Charter asks for power to deal with the matter and if it had been passed four years ago, as it should have been, probably the present unsanitary and anomalous condition would have been remedied. For the Press to sympathize with a flagrant breach and defiance of the law is a public scandal."

Unequal Representation.

West Newfoundland has suffered much in the past through inproportional representation. All that stretch of country from Mosquito Hr. on the south-west coast to the Gulf of St. Lawrence thence northward through Straits of Belle Isle and south to Cape St. John's, with only three representatives, while the rest of the country—less than half of the whole—with thirty-three. And what applies to representatives applies also more or less in other matters. This state of affairs will continue just so long as such apathy is manifested by our people. It is up to our people to show concerted action against present conditions, and until they do so they cannot escape responsibility for their position. Personally we are in favor of one man districts, except possibly in thickly populated town sections such as St. John's. Take this district for instance. It is big enough for two districts with a representative for each. The same is likewise true of St. Barbe, and the rest of the West—Western Star.

Llewellyn Club.

REV. DR. JONES LECTURES ON ULSTER.

The regular monthly meeting of the Llewellyn Club was held last night in the Canon Wood Hall before an extremely large and representative audience. The speaker of the evening was the Rev. Dr. Jones who delivered an address on "Ulster, Its Prosperity and Its Patriotism."

The Rev. Dr. began his lecture with a short graphic description of some of the impressions received by him when he visited Belfast recently. He spoke of the magnificent City Hall, symbolic of the pride of the people in their city. He also mentioned the Orange Society, (a meeting of which he attended) which he said was representative of the loyalty of the people of Ulster. To illustrate this loyalty, the lecturer quoted figures with reference to the large number of V.C.'s received by men in Ulster regiments, and to the great response to recruiting appeals during the early part of the war. The lecturer then went on to speak of the Educational Institutions, which stood for the educational vigor of the people and of the shipbuilding yards which proved the industrious nature of the people of Belfast. To illustrate the intensity of feeling in Ulster the Rev. Dr. gave an account of his visit to Shankill and the Falls Roads. On the walls of the buildings of the former placards were displayed bearing on them the legend "No Surrender," and the windows of every house had orange curtains. The speaker, however, was pleased to see green curtains in all the windows on the Falls Road. He then gave three reasons for the prosperity of Belfast, which are racial, educational and social.

The lecturer then proceeded to present to his audience Ulster's opinion of the Nationalist movement. He said that Ulster thinks that the Nationalists have made several serious mistakes from a strategically political point of view. First, in seeking independence, which would be impossible in the interest of the Empire's integrity. He said that the Nationalists would accept Home Rule only as the first step towards complete independence. He pointed out that all the Dominions can be independent if they wish, but that they are all on good terms with England, for the reason that England recognizes their ability to assert the independence and treats them as sister nations, giving them seats beside her on the League of Nations.

The speaker went on to say that the principal of self-determination was not countenanced by the world generally as witness the objections of the Northern States of America to the secession of the Southern States and the terrible war which followed. He also quoted American opposition to self-determination for the Philippines Islands.

The second mistake was the putting of the blame of past misrule of the English on the present generation. It is scarcely reasonable to blame the sons for the sins of the fathers.

The third point was the rebellion during the war, and the refusal to submit to conscription.

The fourth and last point was the unwise policy of murder and assassination. The lecturer stated that as Ireland was not at war with England, the deaths reported daily could not be described in any other terms. He then said that any organization which was anti-British in character should be immediately disbanded. This remark was greeted with great applause. The lecturer concluded by saying that it was not right that anything should be done to cause friction in our community, and that it was wrong for any body of people to upset our peaceable existence.

The Rev. lecturer was listened to with close attention all through, and at the close Hon. John Anderson proposed a hearty vote of thanks, which was carried unanimously by the large audience present. During the evening Rev. C. A. Moulton looked after the lantern slides in connection with the lecture, which were most interesting. Quite a number of new members joined, and it was announced that there would be a meeting of Llewellyn Club every Thursday evening throughout the winter season. The meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

To-Day's Messages.

ITALIANS PLEASED.

ROME, Nov. 5. The Italian press as a whole rejoices over Harding's election, as it considers a change of administration at Washington may mean a change in the hostile attitude Italians consider towards Italy's aspirations in the Adriatic.

POLISH AMNESTY.

PARIS, Nov. 5. The Polish Government granted an amnesty to all political prisoners on Monday last says an official Warsaw despatch.

AERIAL CROSSING OF EQUATOR.

GUAYAQUIL, Nov. 5. Lt. an Italian navigator, piloting a biplane of the newspaper El Telgrafo, has made the first flight over the Equator. It was announced yesterday, the highest altitude reached being nineteen thousand feet.

LOOTED THE RUGS.

BERLIN, Nov. 5. Rugs, valued at two hundred thousand marks have been stolen from the Chilean Legation here.

FLAG HALF MASTED.

BUENOS AIRES, Nov. 5. Mayor Usher of the town of La Prida has ordered the flag on Town Hall half masted for two days, in memory of MacSwiney. Mayor Usher is of Irish descent.

A REST FOR WRANGL.

SEBASTOPOL, Nov. 5. General Wrangel has successfully withdrawn his troops to Crimea, by the advance of Soviet armies, south of Dniester River. At Salkova he captured one thousand of General Budenny's cavalry. The spirit of his troops is good but they are worn out by a five month's struggle and are glad to be assured of a rest in the Crimea.

LACONIC MESSAGES.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 5. In a characteristic, Laconic message to Baroness Wrangel, General Wrangel says, "we are fighting hard in full hope." The Baroness said, "all I want is the truth; no matter how bad it is I can stand it."

Fire on Schooner.

This morning at 9:55 the Central and East End fire companies were called to Marshall's wharf where the sch. Jean & Mary was on fire. The companies were not long in arriving and after about twenty minutes' work extinguished the blaze. It appears that the cook had put some fat on the stove to boil and went off to purchase a fish. When he returned to the schooner he found the forecastle in flames. The vessel, which has a load of coal for S. A. Darby, was not damaged, though the ceiling and some of the woodwork around the stove was destroyed, and some of the crew had their clothes burned. The vessel is owned by G. A. Buffett, Grand Bank, and is commanded by Captain Vaters. On returning from the scene, Mr. J. Bogan, who was standing on the chemical and hose truck, had his face badly bruised by coming in contact with the top of Marshall's archway.

Personal.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Barter, of Cape LaHune, Burgeo and LaPointe, were passengers by Glencoe to Placentia, and are now in the city.

Mr. Jas. MacDonnell, Member for St. George's, Sir Michael Cashin, and Hon. W. J. Higgins were passengers by express yesterday.

Mr. R. H. Anderson, formerly Manager of the local branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia, is here on a visit of inspection.

Woman's Way!

HER DETERMINED FIGHT FOR PLACE AND POWER.

(By M.T.W. in Liverpool Weekly Post.)

To-day women are meeting men on an equal footing in almost all departments of life. They have with great success demanded entrance into nearly all our professions and trades, and in many cases they are earning wages equal to those paid to men. One sometimes wonders where all this will end, and who in the long run will be left at home to look after the home? That, however, is a question that will have to be faced in the future if the progress of woman in this workaday world continues at this rate. In the meantime let us get hold of some of the facts.

Women Engineers.
This week the announcement is made that a company is being formed with a factory in the Midlands, and that the concern will shortly be opened with a staff entirely composed of women, from the works manager downwards. It should be noted that the works manager is a girl, who during the war was in charge of a machine shop, and has served a three years' apprenticeship as a mechanical engineer. The secretary of the company is another clever woman engineer. This experiment is one that will be watched by the public with some curiosity and interest. But, as women have made good in so many and varied spheres, there is no reason to doubt their ability in this particular direction. To a press representative the other day, Miss Hazlitt, secretary to the Women's Engineers' Society, said, "The factory is situated in the neighbourhood of an engineering college, so that the girl workers will be able to continue their technical studies in the evenings. They will work the regulation 47-hour week in the factory and be paid the district rate of wages for engineers."

Miss Hazlitt also gave the further interesting information that there are at least 100 qualified women engineers who have served their apprenticeship at a factory in Scotland, where a certain number of women are employed on skilled engineering work. A large number of others have had three or four years' experience in munitions factories, which makes them almost equally skilled. So many of these girls were anxious to carry on their engineering work that it was decided to start a factory controlled by women.

The Lady Doctor.

In the medical profession women are seeking to make for themselves secure positions. Indeed there are so many aspirants to the post of woman medical that the question is being asked is the profession going to be over-crowded. The prospects, according to an educational expert, are, to say the least of it, uncertain. The woman medical cannot find a living salary at once. The course is a long one, but good appointments do not come until an applicant has a record of work. In private practice it appears that private patients still favor the man doctor, that the mother does also for her children, and that even the mass of the women patients prefer the man doctor.

The returns from local universities show that there is a probability that the profession will soon be over-crowded. Exact figures are not available, but supposing there are 30,000 or 40,000 doctors in the country a supply from all the universities and "schools" of 4,000 or 5,000 a year would soon make the profession overstocked.

Women in the Pulpit.

Lately we have, both in London and the provinces, seen and heard the woman preacher. As one writer put it: "The force of all that is comprised in the 'advance of women' has been felt in religion as strongly as elsewhere." Our bishops have accepted the claim that women should be allowed a larger share in the government and work of the Church, and in approving of the revival of the Order of Deaconesses sanction the admission of women to Holy Orders. Some women claim the right to be admitted to the priesthood itself, but this the bishops, pre-emptorily disallow, declaring, "We believe for women the Order of Deaconesses is the one and only order of the ministry which has the stamp of Apostolic approval." Plainly there are to be no "women priests" in the Anglican communion.

Fair Sex in Law Courts.

Women lawyers may soon become as familiar to us as women doctors. There are already a number of ladies who have become "learned in the law" and have sought to assert their rights in this particular department of life, but they have "yet to win their spurs" before, as Fortis, their sweet voices will be heard in the law courts. Still in some branches, or should one write off-shoots, of the law-courts, women are taking equal position and responsibilities with men. They are to-day to be seen in the jury box, weighing with considerable thoughtfulness and skill the evidence of witnesses, and no doubt when the jury finds it necessary to retire to consider the verdict—giving with tact and wisdom sound advice to the male jurors who have had for so many years to decide on difficult points without the aid of lovely woman. Then again whilst the lady juror sits in one part of the court she has, at times, before her in the witness-box the female police officer, who since her advent into the department for the suppression of crime and vice has done much to help to make the streets of our cities cleaner and more attractive for everybody.

Other Useful Spheres.
Attired in suitable garments, woman has also come to stay on our farms, and her natural adaptability to circumstances has made her valuable as a worker on the land as well as in other places on the farmstead. She is also quite at home in our market gardens, and in this occupation as well as in that of farming she can command good wages.

In this brief survey I am aware that I have only touched upon some of the many useful spheres filled by women, specially mentioning those that have but lately engaged the attention of the girls who either have, or prefer to earn their own livings. I do not overlook the fact that many now occupy seats in the offices of our merchants, and others who have given special attention to their studies make clever and careful dispensers. But when all is said and done, one feels compelled to assert that women shine with greater lustre in the home as wife and mother. Man does not object, speaking generally, to see woman working by his side, but really he feels much happier when he sees her at the head of his table or caring for his children, and he even overlooks then her little flights of frivolity occasionally as she puffs a cigarette—but, oh, goodness, not a pipe!—just to show that she has "just as much right to indulge in such things as a man."

Walking Through Fire.

A striking demonstration of the fire which he is the inventor, was given recently by a discharged soldier named Truro at the Chelsea Football Club's ground, Stamford Bridge. Leading members of the Metropolitan Fire Brigade were present. The most spectacular item on the programme was the walking through fire by Mr. Truro clad in a suit of khaki treated by his fire-resisting solution. Shavings were soaked in petrol and set alight, and the inventor not only walked through the blaze, but knelt down in it without his clothing being ignited, or he himself, apparently, suffering the slightest inconvenience.

Masonic Service in New York Cathedral.

Representatives of more than 200 Masonic lodges in New York filled the Cathedral of St. John the Divine recently at their annual service under the auspices of the Grand Lodge of the State of New York. The Rev. Simon Raymond Cohen, rabbi of the Keap Street Synagogue, Brooklyn, a Grand Chaplain, read from the Scripture. The Rev. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, pastor of the Central Congregational Church of Brooklyn, also a Grand Chaplain, preached the sermon and walked in the procession beside the Very Rev. Howard Chandler Robbins, Dean of the cathedral.

Bishop Charles S. Burch, another of the five Grand Chaplains, made an address of welcome. Rabbi Cohen read the first thirteen verses of Chapter 6, Deuteronomy, and the New Testament lesson was read by the Rev. Dr. Cornelius Woolfth, pastor of the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church. Canon E. Briggs Nash was master of ceremonies. The flag of the grand lodge hung opposite the American flag and on the chancel rail were two banners of the lodge. Every seat was occupied and many stood.

A feature of the service was the singing of the "Star-Spangled Banner" by the assemblage, led by the choir under Dr. Miles Farrow, organist and choirmaster, while an altar boy stood in the centre of the chancel and held aloft the Stars and Stripes.

Those who arranged for the service were: High Robinson, Grand Master; Arthur S. Tomkins, Deputy Grand Master; Harold J. Richardson, Senior Grand Warden; Charles H. Johnson, Junior Grand Warden; Christopher C. Mollenhauer, Grand Treasurer; Robert Judson Keaworthy Grand Secretary.

After welcoming his fellow masons, Bishop Rurch said it gave him special pleasure to welcome to the cathedral pulpit the speaker of the afternoon, "my brother in Masonry, my brother in religion and my dear friend."

Dr. Cadman wore a Geneva gown, a scarlet divinity hood, his collegiate hood and his lodge medal suspended from his neck on a purple ribbon. He pleaded for a more profound reverence for the past. "Our own age is now sorely wounded in its own soul," he said. "We have not so much to fear from a revival of the paganism of Plato as we have from the paganism which preceded the year 1914. I exhort you not to cultivate the spirit of cowardice. Masons as a class have never been accused of that. Especially, I exhort you thus in a Presidential campaign when every sort of confusion clouds the air. The integrity of all men means more than compromise."

"There never was a day in the history of America when she was so in danger of losing her greatness as in this day. She has to watch very carefully that she is not tured from her great responsibility and her great power. She will have to use discipline."

Dr. Cadman closed by praising the pronouncement on the need for the reunion of Christendom, made by the recent Lambeth Conference. "The Christian Church is coming back to her own," he said.—Ex.

Jazzola Masquerade Ball

About 100 couples attended the Jazzola masked ball in the C. C. C. Hall last night. The costumes were very pretty and the scene as the dancers moved around was dazzling. Miss E. Joyce as a ballet dancer was awarded first prize for the ladies, and Mr. Frank Bennett, as Mephistopheles, won the gentlemen's first prize. Mr. J. Robinson attended to the catering in his usual first class manner.

The Other Side.

Editor Evening Telegram

Dear Sir,—The attention of the Provisional Dominion Council has been called to a lecture delivered by the Rev. Dr. Jones on the 4th inst. The lecturer touched upon so many points that a complete reply is impossible here, but the Press Committee of this Council will shortly present the other side of the shield on the issues of Ulster, economics, murders and "reprisals," and the general policy of the present national movement in Ireland. Of more immediate concern than these questions, which in Newfoundland are of only academic interest, are the Rev. lecturer's assertions about this League. He is reported as having described it as "admittedly anti-British" and as having stated that it excites sectarian and racial animosity in this country. He is further reported as having hinted that the League has sought to use improper pressure on the newspapers, and as having said that it "should be disbanded."

If the Rev. Doctor is correctly reported he has been grossly misinformed about the League, and we regret that if he desired information about it he did not come to us. We shall deal with the above allegations seriatim.

1. We do not know who it is that admits that the League is anti-British; certainly this Council does not. We deny the charge emphatically. The League holds that the right of self-determination—which, "foolish phrase" though it be, was held good enough to be embodied in the war aims of the British Empire—ought to be immediately extended to the Irish nation. Considerations of abstract justice and of sympathy with Ireland's misfortunes have helped us to this conclusion, but there is also another powerful consideration which has swayed us and which we recommend to the attention of the Rev. lecturer.

As a component part of the British Empire Newfoundland has a right and a duty to see that the Empire's reputation for freedom and justice is kept unimpaired. If we may share the pride in the noble deeds that have been done in the British name, then we must also share the shame that attends such incidents as those of Balbriggan and Trim. The best friend of the Empire is he who seeks to preserve the lustre of its high reputation, to restate it in the confidence of the outside world, and to heal its most serious malady by striving to end the Irish quarrel in the only way in which it can be ended. If men like Asquith, Smuts, Chesterton, Henderson, Gibbs, Gough, Scott, Gardiner and Massingham—to mention only a few—are anti-British because they have ventured to criticize acts of what used to be called "Prussianism" on the part of the British Government, and to advocate that the Government live up to its word, we have no more to say than that at least we are in good company. But for our own part we consider these men far better friends to British institutions than those who decry every criticism as treason.

2. "The League incites to racial and sectarian strife." We have only to say that the League welcomes to its membership men and women of every race and every creed, that its meetings are open to the public, that its principles involve neither racial nor religious distinctions, and that it has always treated all creeds with the highest respect. It has even made it clear that its quarrel is with the British Government and not with the British people.

3. The hint that the League seeks to exert improper pressure on the press is one that can only be characterized as utterly without foundation. If the rev. lecturer really meant to convey that impression he should have given the particulars. This League will never willingly give rise to any division among the people of Newfoundland. If any incitement to ill-feeling comes it will not be from the Self-Determination League. It asks only a fair hearing. But the members of the League hold firmly to their belief in the righteousness of the cause they are pleading, and they will be neither silenced nor intimidated in the exercise of their undoubted rights as free citizens of a free Dominion.

We have the honor to remain, Sir, Yours very truly,
PROVISIONAL DOMINION COUNCIL,
S.B.I.L.N.
R. T. McGrath,
Chairman.

No Lack of Applicants.

ANOTHER SIGN OF THE TIMES.
From early this morning crowds of men seeking employment in the lumber woods, lined Water Street from Browarigg's corner to Callahan's tinmith's. If the company had taken every applicant, they would have enough men to cut every stick of wood in Newfoundland. Experienced men only are given jobs, and out of every 100 applicants about 20 are being selected. The police had all they could do to keep a passage way open for pedestrians and prevent the crush breaking through the windows of the stores nearby, and for a time the Finance Minister's window stood in great danger.

More Price Cutting.
CONFUSION SPREADING.
It is reported that there has been a reduction in the price fixed for Labrador fish in the United Kingdom, and that a sale has been made at a figure below published regulation prices. It appears, so from what we have been informed by a fish exporter, who says that he offered a firm a cargo of fish at the Regulation price, and in a subsequent message an offer from the same firm was made him, which was nearly 5¢ below the regulation and at which he refused to sell. A further message from the firm informed the dealer that a cargo had been purchased by them below regulation prices. It is conceded by many fish exporters that the fixing of prices has become a farce. In fact the regulations as to qualities are now so intricate that the whole fish business has become balled up. All the fish shipped from the Labrador, except one cargo, was marked prime, but on arrival across, owing to the alterations in the regulations, the grade became second, and buyers refused to accept it for No. 1.

The People Must Act.

Every man who has participated in the public affairs of Newfoundland, and who is blessed with health and vigor is morally blameable if he does not use every effort to help stamp out the evil which threatens the welfare of the dominion at the present moment, and stand up in protest against the serious menace which endangers our political and commercial existence. It is the bounden duty of every citizen to safeguard our sacred liberties. It is doubly the duty of our public men—past and present—to step into the breach and save the country from the clutches of revolutionary demagogues, who are sapping her very vitals. The people of this Colony to-day are terrorized: they are paralyzed with fear at the conditions which threaten the land. Hunger, unemployment and destitution, with their accompanying evils menace the breadwinners. Newfoundland is in the grip of the Bolsheviki, and far worse will happen if the people do not at once make an attempt to break the chains that bind them to the chariot wheels of the spellbinders, who threaten their independence, and who appear to possess no other policy than that of reckless expenditure of the taxes wrung from an already overburdened population.

Is it possible, under such conditions as have been recapitulated, that the Opposition members will longer remain silent? If so, then the public should impress upon them the need for immediate action. If no man amongst those who are the regularly constituted Opposition in the House of Assembly, cares to take upon himself the responsibilities of leadership in the present crisis, let the people seek a leader outside the ranks. Let them get a man who will be capable of uniting all the forces of clean and sturdy Opposition: a man who will be guided solely by the present needs and future welfare of the people. We have in our mind's eye such an one and feel impelled to name him, but prefer to leave the choice to the masses, who should convene a public meeting without delay and choose a leader of integrity and honesty of purpose to whom they could look with confidence and in whom they could place implicit trust. Conditions in this dominion, at the moment, are deplorable. The men who control its political destinies are incapable of weathering the approaching storm. The ship of state is battling with tempests and beset by shoals and reefs, and the financial breakers are dead ahead. Must the old ship ultimately become a wreck, broken and destroyed? This will surely happen unless the people arise, in their might and majesty and thrust the present incapables in charge from the command. No time should be lost. The matter is too serious for delay and instant action is necessary if a tragedy in our political affairs is to be averted.

As an authority on fish, the Star is a marvel.

Notes and Comments.

For a journalistic failure we seem to be giving the Advocate a lot to think and write about lately.

The late King of Greece was bitten by a monkey, and people are waiting to see if any kind of bug has bitten ex-King Constantine.

A Boston woman leader promises a war on tobacco as strenuous as that waged against liquor. Is there any room left for the weed in your cellar?

The prisoner: "There goes my hat. Shall I run after it?"
Policeman: "What? Run away and never come back again? You stand I'll run after your hat."

In a recent lecture tour, Mrs. Pankhurst told American audiences that the women would beat Bolshevism. Her daughter, accused of conspiracy with Lenin, proves the rule.

A man in Omaha burnt all his wife's clothing because she wouldn't stay in at night. After a careful examination of a few evening styles we can't see that it would make much difference.

In yesterday's issue of the Advocate, the Telegram and its editor were mentioned no less than forty-two times, on the editorial page. We are getting almost as much free advertisement as Mr. Coaker himself.

The clearing and sailing of fish cargo carriers from St. John's and the outports are published in the Telegram daily from the Custom House reports, and no suppression of the number so sailing for market has been made. Try another, Faustus.

A Thames barge was knocked down by a taxicab last week. It is said that his opening remarks were good, and were almost completed when they had to be postponed, as he had an engagement the following Wednesday.

The schoolmaster asked his class if any of them could tell him what an epidemic was.
No answer.
"Well, I will tell you. An epidemic is anything that spreads. Now, what is an epidemic?"
"Jam, sir!" shouted the class, in chorus.

The Acid Test for Reformers.

(Bruce Barton.)

A hundred and fifty years ago there lived a man who wrote a splendid book.

The title was "The Friend of Men," and the progressive elements in France and England hailed it as an important contribution to their cause.

What sort of a man was the author, the Marquis of Mirabeau?

He did his best to ruin the career of his son, the great Mirabeau.

He kept his wife locked up in an asylum the greater part of her life, while he lived with another woman.

He persecuted his daughter, and reviled his second son.

In his study, locked away from the world, he could dream fine dreams of universal kindness and friendship; but in actual life the "Friend of Men," as Carlyle said, "was the enemy of almost every man he had to do with."

I have known a good many reformers in my life, and have found them an interesting study.

Of course, as a class, they are not as interesting as reformers were two hundred or three hundred years ago; and for the simple reason that there is now no danger nor inconvenience attached to the profession.

When a man ran the risk of being burned at the stake or losing his head on the block for the sake of convictions, he compelled a certain admiration whether one agreed with him or not.

But the modern reformer runs no such risks. He may denounce the rich until he is out of breath, and the penalty is only applause. He may thunder away at the church or the state, and instead of incurring any sacrifice he wakes up to find his picture in the Sunday papers.

But the two general types of reformers remain what they have always been—the small, quiet, conscientious group of those who back up their words by their works; and the noisy, unpleasant and selfish group who criticize conditions as they are, but do nothing by their lives to make conditions better.

Before I accept any man's criticism at face value, I want to know of him: Is he supporting a wife and children? Is he as good a husband and father, on the whole, as the men he is denouncing?

Does he pay taxes and vote? Is he as good a citizen as those whom he would overthrow?

If he does not meet these tests, then though he speak with the tongue of angels, he does not interest me, and I will not leave my book at night to go out to a hall and listen to him.

This truth was written many years ago:
"If any man say 'I love God' and hate his brother he is a liar: for he that loveth not his brother whom

2500 Quintals Went Down

WHEN SCHOONER SANK.
The following message by the Deputy Minister of Customs from the Sub-Collector at Catalina:—"Schr. H. B. Haakel, belonging to P. Templeman, sprang a leak whilst crossing White Bay on November 1st and sank with 2,500 qts. of Labrador codfish. Crew taken off by schr. Cactus and brought here." The schr. was bound to Catalina from the Labrador and was a vessel of about 95 tons. This is the second cargo of Labrador fish that has gone to the bottom within the past week, the schr. Bernard B. Conrad being reported abandoned in mid-ocean whilst bound to Malaga with 3,400 qts. from J. Rorke & Sons.

Ordained to the Priesthood.

An impressive and interesting Ordination Service, took place on "All Saint's Day," at 10 a.m., in the Anglican Cathedral, when the Rev. James R. Davies, B.A., was ordained Priest, by His Lordship Bishop White, assisted by seven priests, viz., Revs. Canon Jeeves, Field and Smith; Dr. Bolt and Facey; Rev. J. Brinton, (Chaplain) and Rev. Pike. The Bishop wore his magnificent cope and mitre. The Ordination Service was preached by the Rector, Canon Jeeves, and was a helpful and uplifting discourse. Rev. J. Davies came to Newfoundland in January last, shortly after being ordained Deacon by the Bishop of London, in St. Paul's Cathedral, London, Eng. After a course at St. Augustine's College, Canterbury, and Cambridge University, Mr. Davies took his B.A. degree. Since coming to this country he has been Curate to Rev. Canon Smart, R.D. of Heart's Content, but will now be transferred to Fogo as Incumbent of Joe Batt's Arm.

When war broke out Mr. Davies was about to be ordained, but immediately entered the Royal Navy, returning to Burgh Missionary College, Lincolnshire, to complete his theological training, when the great conflict ended. The late Captain R. Davies, R.N., of H.M.S. Griffin, father of the above, was well known in Newfoundland in the eighties, when on the North American Station. Rev. J. and Mrs. Davies leave on the next boat for their future home and will be followed by the good wishes of their many friends in England and Newfoundland.

The Evening Telegram joins in wishing them many years of happiness and prosperity in their new life.

Obituary.

THOMAS HORWOOD.

The death of Thomas Horwood occurred yesterday forenoon, at the residence of his sister, Mrs. W. H. Moulton, Queen Street, after an illness of about three months, death being attributed to cancer of the liver.

About two months ago the deceased, who was a prominent merchant of Rose Blanche, Nfld., came here and entered the Hamilton hospital for treatment. The disease, however, had made such inroads on his system that it was soon discovered he was beyond earthly aid, and he left the hospital to spend the short period that remained between him and eternity at the home of his sister, where everything possible was done to make his brief stay comfortable. He died fully resigned.

Mr. Horwood was one of the most successful business men at Rose Blanche, and in the course of his varied and extensive dealings with the business fraternity of North Sydney, he made a wide circle of true friends, who will deeply mourn his passing.

The deceased, who was only forty-eight years of age, is survived by his wife, four sisters and four brothers, as follows: Mrs. W. H. Moulton, Mrs. Harry LeMoine and Mary residing here, and Mrs. R. L. Jefferson, Halifax, and George at Glouce Bay, John, of this town, and James and William, prominent merchants of Rose Blanche.

The remains will be taken to Rose Blanche to-night, after funeral services, conducted by Rev. A. W. Nichols, Rector of St. James' Anglican Church.—North Sydney Herald, Nov. 2.

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

Susu Meets Mishap.

On the trip north the S. S. Susu had her rudder post broken off in a seaway. The accident happened Sunday night last while on the way to Carmanville. The crew made temporary repairs with wire cables and the ship was able to make all ports of call. It is likely that the Susu will be sent to Harbor Grace for repairs as the dock here will be engaged for the next three weeks. Meanwhile it is likely that the S. S. Edmund Donald will take up the Susu's route.

Kilts and Mosquitoes.
Here is a story of the Gordon Highlanders taken from a very entertaining new book by Lord Frederic Hamilton, entitled "The Days before Yesterday."
"The last time that I was in Calcutta, the Gordon Highlanders had just relieved an English regiment in the fort, and on the first Sunday after their arrival four hundred Gordon Highlanders were marched to parade service at St. Andrew's. The most optimistic mosquito had never in his wildest dreams imagined such a succulent banquet as that afforded by four hundred bare-kneed, kilted Highlanders, and the mosquitoes made the fullest use of their unique opportunity. Soon the church resounded with the vigorous clapping of hands on bare knees and thighs, as the men endeavored to kill a few of their little tormentors. The minister, hearing the loud clapping, but entirely misapprehending its purport, paused in his sermon, and said—

"My brethren, it is verra gratifying to a minister of the Work to learn that his remarks meet with the approbation of his hearers, but I'd have you remember that all applause is strictly out of place in the House of God."

"The Spicy Breezes."
Travelling by sea from Calcutta to Ceylon, Lord Frederic Hamilton tells in his new book "The Days before Yesterday" how he heard some American ladies engaged in missionary work repeating to each other lines from a well-known hymn. They were then within about a hundred miles of Ceylon, and the lines were—
"What though the spicy breezes Blow soft o'er Ceylon's isle."
They repeated them over and over again until he "loathed Bishop Heber for having written them." They even asked the captain how far out to sea the spicy breezes would be perceptible. I suddenly got an idea, and going below, I obtained from the steward half a dozen nutmegs and a handful of cinnamon. I grated the nutmegs, and pounded the cinnamon up, and then with one handful of each, I went on deck, and walked slowly up and down in front of the American tourists. Soon I heard an ecstatic "My dear, I distinctly smell spice then!" Another turn and another jubilant exclamation: "It's quite true about the spicy breezes. I got a delicious whiff just then. Who would have thought that they would have carried so far out to sea?" A sceptical elderly gentleman was summoned from below and he, after a while, was reluctantly forced to avow that he, too, had noticed the spicy fragrance."

The Wit of Dr. Hatchell.
Dr. Hatchell, physician to countless Irish Viceroys, was a well-known figure in Dublin, and a wit. His carriage was once held up by two men. "We know you, Dr. Hatchell, so you had better hand over your watch and money quietly." "You know me!" answered the merry little doctor, with his tremendous brogue, "so no doubt you would like me to prescribe for you. Saltpetre is a grand drug, and I often order it for my patients. Sulphur is the finest thing in the world for the blood, and an elegant disinfectant. By a great piece of luck, I have all these drugs with me in the carriage, but"—and he suddenly covered with his revolver one of the men who had come round to the carriage door—"they are all mixed up together, and there is the least taste in life of lead in front of them, and, by God! you'll get it through you; if you don't clear out of that." The men decamped immediately.

VERDON WOMAN HAD SUFFERED 30 YEARS.

Mrs. O'Dess Was in Misery Night and Day—Like New Woman Since Taking Tanlac She Declares.

"For the past thirty years," said Mrs. Melvin O'Dess, of 1089 Ehal Street, Verdon, P.Q., "I have hardly seen a well day. I seemed to suffer from almost everything, indigestion, headaches, nervousness, and loss of appetite, and even the little I did manage to eat would bloat me all up with gas until I could hardly breathe. I was so restless I could scarcely sleep at night, and I would get up in the morning so tired and dizzy it was all I could do to get around. I also suffered a great deal from constipation and was so nervous that the least little noise would almost make me cry out. I was simply in a miserable condition, and nothing I took seemed to do me any good.

"I heard so much good about Tanlac that I made up my mind to try it, and I'm pleased to say that it has only taken five bottles to make me feel like an entirely different person. My appetite is so good now that I can hardly get enough to eat, and my troubles have all disappeared so that I'm feeling just fine all the time. Why I feel every bit of twenty years younger, and can never praise Tanlac enough for the good health it has given me."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, in Parade by Mrs. Martin F. Byrne, in Upper Gullies by Heber Andrews, in Portland by H. C. Haines, in St. Joseph, Salmonier, by Mrs. J. Gush. In Miramichi by Exploits Valley Royal Stores, Ltd., in Flat Island by William Samson, in Jamestown by C. Ristopher Haines, and in Lewisporte by Urial Freaks-adv.

British Leads Great Expedition to the Antarctic.

PRIVATELY FINANCED EXPEDITION FOR COMMERCIAL AND SCIENTIFIC OBJECTS.

NEW YORK.—John L. Cope, left commander in the British Navy, left New York for Norfolk, Va., whence he will sail on the most ambitious Polar expedition ever undertaken. Utilizing three oil-burning ships, a fleet of airplanes capable of crossing the ice on sledges if need be, dogs from the Hudson Bay country, and wireless on the planes and at land stations to be established, he and his English companions purpose to circumnavigate and explore the Antarctic continent. Their object is not attainment of the South Pole, although they may reach it. It is purely commercial and scientific. They expect to find new seas for whaling, to open new sources of mineral wealth and to promote the establishment within the Antarctic Circle of meteorological stations whose reports will have a bearing on trop conditions throughout the world.

Privately Financed. The enterprise is called the British Imperial Antarctic Expedition. Cope, its head, was surgeon and biologist with the Shackleton expedition of 1914-1917. He and his comrades were marooned for two years when the Aurora, the rescue ship sent for the Shackleton party, was blown away by a blizzard, leaving them on the great ice barrier surrounding the Antarctic continent. The present expedition is sent out by the Polar Research Laboratories of the University of Cambridge, and, said Commander Cope, is privately financed, part of the money coming from Norwegian whalers, part from the research laboratories, and the rest from other sources.

The members of the first of preliminary expeditions, which is now starting, expect to return in 1922, and then go back to the Antarctic in another ship and be gone until 1928. There will be 110 men in the second party.

Lars Christensen and Company, Norwegian whalers, and others interested in the exploration, have placed at the disposal of the expedition three 7,000 ton oil-burning steamships built for whaling, and a 200-ton "catcher." The first of the big ships, the Thor I, is now at Norfolk. Another is on the way from Cardiff to the Falkland Islands. The members of the first party, in addition to Commander Cope, are Captain George Wilkins, second in command, who spent three years in the Antarctic with Stefansson, and who is a photographer and surveyor; N. C. Lester, R.N., navigator; and Thomas W. Bagshaw, geologist.

Tells of Plans.

A fifth member will join at Montevideo, where Wilkins and thirty dogs—Canadian huskies—will be waiting when the Thor I, with Cope and his friends, get there.

Commander Cope, of the Biltmore recently, told reporters of his plans. He said that the party would go from Montevideo to the Falkland Islands, and after scientific work there proceed to Deception Island, just outside the Antarctic Circle. There the whole process of whaling will be filmed for motion pictures.

Leaving the Thor I at Deception Island to continue its whaling operations, the explorers will go in the "catcher" to Hope Bay, in Graham's Land. There the dogs will be harnessed and the party will sledge along the west coast of Waddell Sea as far as it can get, hoping to reach Coastland on the eastern side. If it makes this objective and returns to Hope Bay, as planned, it will have sledged 1,500 miles, 1,200 of them over unknown ground. The expedition intends to reach Hope Bay by the first week in June, 1921, and to return there in February or March, 1922.

Unlike previous expeditions, it will erect no huts, but will depend on snow houses and tents for shelter. Another innovation will be the continuous sledging. Heretofore explorers at the southern end of the world have rested at some base during the four months of Antarctic night. The Cape party expect to keep in motion throughout this period of darkness.

Extensive Preparations.

The Thor I, having finished its whaling, will return to Norway. Then it will go to England, pick up an airplane and crew and be back at Deception Island in 1922. After a photographic survey, the Thor I, with Cope and his comrades aboard, will return to England to prepare for the greater expedition. It will bring back a complete cinematographic record of the country explored.

There is building at Southampton now a special ship for the use of the second expedition. Upon the return of the explorers to England in 1922, it will be finished and manned. In the same year this ship, with the larger Cope party, will set out in circumnavigate the whole Antarctic continent. It will carry several airplanes especially built for flying under Polar conditions, the type to be determined by the Royal Aeronautical Society up on the basis of the report of the tests made by the first expedition. The engines will be Rolls-Royce.

Set Out With Planes.

From the Bay of Whales on the New Zealand side of the Antarctic continent, whence Amundsen made his dash to the Pole, a short party will set out with three airplanes equipped with powerful wireless. Meanwhile a second ship will leave South America for Graham's Land. There a land station will be established. The ship from England will circumnavigate the continent from east to west. This expedition will have to lay by during the winter of 1922-24 probably at Cape Ann, on the South African side of the continent, but the airplanes will be used constantly in making surveys.

Crossing the Waddell Sea, the party expects to reach the Falkland Islands in 1924 or 1925. At the same time the ship that left South America will be going to the Bay of Whales and getting the party to be left there. When off Graham's Land this ship will be in touch with the Graham's Land wireless station and receive reports, based on the airplane surveys, of coastal and ice conditions. Half-way down the coast it will pick up wireless messages from the Bay of Whales.

This use of the wireless sweeping the Antarctic continent, is expected to make the progress of the expeditions ships comparatively safe. The party to be left at the Bay of Whales will be taken to Graham Land will be taken to South America.

Great Objective.

By that time five years will have elapsed. The members of the second expedition do not expect to see England again until 1926.

"Why do we do it? Are we fools?"

said Commander Cope. "Well, let's see what our objects are. In the first place, over one-half the world's supply of whale oil comes from the Antarctic regions, and new whaling grounds must be developed. Secondly, we shall study weather conditions. Meteorological conditions on the Antarctic continent affect conditions all over the world. Finally, there is undoubtedly great mineral wealth on the Antarctic continent, and we hope to locate it."

Egypt's Autonomy.

Zaghlul Pasha is not satisfied. He has journeyed from Cairo to Paris and from Paris to London to tell the world that the benefits that are to come to Egypt under the settlement formulated by Lord Milner "will not satisfy Egyptian Nationalist ambitions." Yet Egypt has been given a larger share of autonomy than any other nation since the slogan of self-determination was trumpeted at the Peace Conference.

The Great War affected the destinies of Egypt more than those of any non-combatant country. The Khedivate, a nominal viceroyalty under the Sultan of Turkey, came to an end in December, 1914, with the abandonment of the suzerainty and the declaration of a British Protectorate. Yet the principle was maintained of supporting a Mohammedan ruler on a Mohammedan throne. The new Sultan was aided by a Legislative Assembly that was partly elective and partly nominated. The veto of the High Commissioner was retained, but the assembly had power to initiate legislation. Egypt acknowledged the new regime was an improvement on the old, but the cry of "Egypt for the Egyptians" was yearly more clamorous. The Nationalists were uncompromising. They demanded the withdrawal of the army of occupation and the substitution of native Egyptians for Europeans in every branch of the State service. Their demands met with a most generous response from Commission that went to Egypt under Lord Milner to study their problems. Egypt was even given the privilege of controlling her own foreign affairs and appointing her own diplomatic representatives. It was agreed that the army of occupation should be withdrawn within a stipulated period, although a small British force was to be retained to guard the Suez Canal. But Britain demanded a "special position" so far as the Sudan was concerned, and it is on this matter that the Nationalists have chosen to quarrel. Britain agrees to guarantee Egypt against external aggression, but she is unwilling to abandon a country for the peace of which she has shed so much blood and treasure during the last forty years. Zaghlul seems hard to please.—Montreal Daily Star.

Why Editors Go Grey.

Contributions—Comic and Curious. A book, recently published, written by a little girl, had to be collected from numerous odd scraps of paper on which it had been laboriously printed by the childish hand.

For one occasional success of this kind editors and publishers have to consider thousands of contributions, some of which are extraordinary. A scientific man tried to persuade the editor of a popular weekly paper to publish his massive and life-long work on beetles. The idea was to fill the paper each week with an installment of the treatise until the end of it was reached.

What the reader of that periodical would have said when they opened it week after week to find it full of beetles cannot be imagined.

Another editor was asked to buy what his writer had entitled "The Bible Beautiful." He had conceived the notion of re-writing the Bible in racy language, and he was wildly indignant when no editor would publish it. "Would you care to read an article under the heading, 'Pleasant Way of Meeting Death'?" Yet such a cheerful contribution had to be declined by several papers before its author gave up hope of making fame as a journalist.

Written on Wall-Paper.

The more morbid some people can make their work the greater they seem to think are its chances of acceptance. A carpenter, having written a poem on corpses, painted it on some wood cut to the shape of a coffin. Then he had photographs taken of it and offered them to various papers for reproduction. Now he complains that editors won't accept a good thing when they get the chance!

Another queer offer was a novel written in huge handwriting on the back of a number of rolls of wall-paper. The task of editors requested to read this effusion was less painful than that of one who received a serial story, 125,000 words in length, the principal and almost only character in which was a pet canary called "Jim." Naturally Jim never attained any notoriety beyond the editorial office.

Another aspiring author, having kept a diary of the sayings and doings of her little boy, thrust the thrilling work at a famous magazine and demanded £500 for it.

The fond mother's cheek was mild compared with the self-importance of a grocer with two shops in a small town. He expanded the trivialities of his uneventful life into a 10,000 word autobiography, and, with photographs taken at all stages of his career, offered it to a paper then publishing a "Self-made Man" series.

Some people write up petty grievances and little family scandals, and, keeping strictly to the proper names of the persons involved, try to sell them to editors.

Not long ago a leading monthly review received an article on "Why—(mentioning the name of an unknown village) Should Have Street Lamps." It was an optimistic man who thought the world was going to work itself into throes over the controversy that was evidently raging in his village.—Tit Bits.

Here is a story about the late Lord Charles Beresford:—

He was in the Carlton Club and had just received a shilling's worth of stamps from the waiter when Mr. Bankes-Stanhope, a fussy old member, reproved him for smoking a cigar, smoking being strictly forbidden in the hall of the club at this time. "He reproved Lord Charles for his breach of the club rules, in, as I thought, quite unnecessarily severe tones, he kept his temper, but detached one penny stamp from the roll, licked it, and placed it on his finger.

"A Little Oversight." "My dear Stanhope," he began, "it was a little oversight of mine. I was writing in there, do you see" (a friendly little tap on Mr. Bankes-Stanhope's shirt, and on went a penny stamp), "and I moved in here, you see" (another friendly tap, and on went a second stamp), "and forget about a cigar, you see" (a third tap, and a third stamp left adhering). The breezy admiral kept up this conversation, punctuated with little taps, each one of which left its crimson trace on the old gentleman's white shirt front, until the whole shilling's-worth was placed in position. Mr. Bankes-Stanhope was too late to notice these little manoeuvres; he maintained his hectoring tone, and never glanced down at his shirt front. Finally, Lord Charles left, and the old gentleman, still puffing and blowing with wrath, struggled into an overcoat, and went off to an official party at Sir Michael Hicks Beach's, where his appearance with twelve red penny stamps adhering to his shirt front must have created some little astonishment."

October's Children.

WHAT THEY ARE LIKE, AND WHY THEY SHOULD WED.

People born in October—or, more accurately, between September 20th and October 20th—are charming, lovable, and capable, but Nature did not design them to go through life alone. They want someone to "balance the scales" for them; to supplement their deficiencies, to control their weaknesses.

They are by nature—and perhaps they would not be so lovable if they were not—unstable. They are up in the clouds one day, and down in the depths the next; gay and gloomy in turn, and neither for long. They are either, all one thing or all the other—creatures of extremes, of moods and tenets.

They are almost morbidly sensitive. An unkind word or a look will wound them. They love praise, even flattery. Give them either, and they will do their utmost to deserve it. If you fail to appreciate them, they will "freeze up." You can do nothing with them; they will become moody and disagreeable.

In fact, they are very much like spoilt children.

Very Sweet and Lovable.

And you can scarcely help spoiling them; for they are normally very sweet and lovable. They "have a way with them" which is not at all easy to resist. Let them see that you love them, and they will spare no effort to deserve and return your love; for if they are a little wrong-headed, they have large hearts.

But don't try to oppose or restrain them; you will rouse the worst in them and do no good. They respond gladly to coaxing and caresses; they kick vigorously against coercion.

They are full of good and generous impulses; but often lack the strength of character to give full effect to them. They are seldom happy long, for they are usually craving for something they haven't got, or can't get. But they don't worry about the future. To-day is enough for them. To-morrow can take care of itself.

They mind their own business, and don't interfere unasked in yours. They cling like leeches to their convictions and their friends though the former may be wrong, and the latter unworthy. And they are usually "straight as a gun," with a positive hatred of humbug and pretence and false-dealing. They are demons for work if once they take to it; and unless they are checked (a delicate and risky proceeding), are apt to take far too much out of themselves.

Socially they are as a rule very popular; and rightly so, for they are very bright, genial, and entertaining, just the kind of people you like to have about you; and if they are extravagant, they spend their money more to give others pleasure than themselves.

Most Careful How They Marry. They have, too, more than their share of brains, and make a success of life if they choose work suited to their tastes and abilities. They are especially likely to succeed as artists, writers, and musicians, as lawyers or public speakers.

One of their chief passions is for Nature; and for this reason they are happy in a country life, surrounded by the beauties and peace of mountain and meadow, river and wood. October women are, with few exceptions, dowered with exceptional fascination, which almost amounts to magnetism. They are "bundles of affection"—warm-hearted, impulsive and loyal. They take to domestic life as a duck to water; are excellent housekeepers and devoted, self-sacrificing wives and mothers. The man fortunate enough to marry one of them is to be envied.

And the men are no less desirable; for they have the same qualities of heart and loyalty. They are loving and chivalrous; good husbands and fathers. And, if suitably meted and encouraged, they can scarcely fail to succeed in life.

But with so many amiable weaknesses it is of the highest importance that the October-born should be very careful in the choice of their life-partners; for if marriage can "make," it can also mar them. The wife or husband they should seek is someone whose qualities supplement theirs to make the "scales" (the sign under which they are born) level—someone of strong character, well-balanced, unemotional; and who will give them the love and appreciation, and also the patience they need.

These desirable partners they will find among those born between January 20th and February 20th, and between August 20th and September 20th. They are the natural mates of the children of October, and marriage with them will give the greatest possible prospect of mutual happiness.

Going Strong at Ninety.

A few weeks ago a youthful old lady of one hundred and two summers took her first trip in an aeroplane, and "enjoyed it immensely."

When one considers how much of the world's work has been done by men long past the allotted span, one can treat with contempt the foolish dictum that regards all men over two-score as fit only for the lustral chamber. Lord Halden's next birthday will be his ninety-eight, but he remains as keen and active as many men half his age. Lord Strathcona, who lived to be over ninety, was a worker to the end, and his cousin, Lord Mount Stephen, was ninety-one last June.

Sir Clifford Allbutt, who was president of the British Medical Association at their last annual meeting, possesses, in spite of his eighty-four years, the energy of a young man; while Thomas Edison, greatest of living inventors, said in a recent interview, "At seventy-five I expect to wear loud waistcoats with fancy buttons, also spats. At eighty I expect to learn how to play bridge, whist, and talk foolishly to women. At eighty-five I expect to wear a dress-suit every evening at dinner, and at ninety—well, I never plan more than twenty years ahead!" Edison is now seventy-three, but it is quite evident that he still has the heart of a boy.

Other greatest of portrait painters, lived to be ninety-nine years old, and painted his last picture at that age. Soret painted a picture for the Royal Academy when he was ninety-four; while Madame Rosa Bonheur was 70 when she painted her famous picture, "Horses Tramping Out Wheat."

Goethe was over eighty when he wrote the second part of "Faust," and Disraeli and Chateaubriand were both making love at seventy.

Prophet of the Sword.

FACTS ABOUT LIFE AND TEACHING OF MOHAMMED.

The prophet Mohammed was born in the city of Mecca in the year 569. During the ninety years that followed the prophet's death, his followers established their faith by the sword, eastward through Persia to India, westward through Egypt along the entire northern coast of Africa, northward to the gates of Constantinople, with all Syria in their hands. In the year 710, they invaded Spain and established the Moslem Caliphate that endured until the end of the fifteenth century. They threatened, indeed, to conquer the whole of western Europe, and were only stayed when Charles Martel defeated the Arabs at Tours in France just one hundred years after Mohammed's death.

The story of the early Moslem conquests is unique in human history. The faith (or, if you will, the fanaticism) that inspired the conquering armies has an extraordinary interest. The faith of Mohammed has still over a hundred million adherents. They were driven from Spain centuries ago. The power of the Turk in Europe has now been destroyed. But Islamism remains the religion of the Arab; the subtle Egyptian, the Afghan, and the fighting Pathan, and of large sections of the most intelligent Indians and of the Persians. Across two continents from the Atlantic to the Pacific, the daily summons to prayer comes from the minarets of the Moslem mosques: "God is great! God is great! There is no God but God. Mohammed is the prophet of God. Come to prayers! Come to prayers! God is great! God is great! There is no God but God! Mohammed was a successful merchant until he was nearly forty. Then he began to preach, and his preaching cost him his earthly goods. For thirteen years he endured persecution and misrepresentation in his native Mecca, and in 622 he made his final "hijra," or flight, to Medina, where he spent the rest of his life, where he died, and where he was buried.

It is established that Mohammed learned much of the doctrine that he taught from the Nestorian Christians living in Arabia. By the sixth century the Christian Church in the east had broken into a number of contending heretical sects. Of these the Arians and Nestorians are the most interesting. Both sects (with subtle theological differences) rejected the doctrine of the Trinity, and regarded our Lord not as God but as a God-inspired teacher.

The Moslems believe in one God, "single, immutable, omniscient, omnipotent, all merciful, eternal. They believe that the Koran is the divine revelation of the mind and will of God. They believe in the Resurrection and the Final Judgment. They believe that God has sent six great prophets to guide men in the way they should go—Adam, Noah, Abraham, Moses, Jesus, and last, and greatest, Mohammed. Their religious practice demands prayer, almsgiving, fasting, and pilgrimage.

Mohammed insisted on the importance of bodily cleanliness as emblematic of purity of soul, and his injunctions to kindness are exalted and poetical.

Deal not unjustly with others, and ye shall not be dealt with unjustly. If there be any debtor under a difficulty of paying his debt, let his creditor wait until it be easy for him to do it; but if he remit it in alms, it will be better for him.

It may be suggested that the practice of the Moslem has often been in striking contrast with the teaching of Mohammed. But, alas, it can with equal justice be pointed out that the practice of the Christians is in sad contrast with the teaching of Christ. It was in 622, the year after his arrival in Medina, that Mohammed began to preach the gospel of the sword: He and his followers attacked a caravan belonging to his Mecca enemies, and this small affair marked the beginning of his temporal power, and of his acceptance of the fact that the world must be roughly compelled to accept his comfortable doctrines. Islamism became the fighting man's religion.

Napoleon declared that he preferred it to Christianity. Its chivalry and comradeship attracted the fighter as much as the promise of heaven to the soldier who fell in battle for his faith. The heaven was far more alluring than the mystic hereafter of the Christian, where there is no marriage or giving in marriage, and the natural instincts of the fighting man found justification in the example of the prophet, who, with a general simplicity of life, was a great lover of women and the husband of many wives.

Mohammed was a man of middle height, with a large head, Semitic nose, a full-lipped mouth, and a long beard. His voice was musical, and he was an eloquent speaker. He was markedly kindly, consistently practicing what he preached. He was original, bold, with abnormal intelligence, and an amazing memory. He was unquestionably a genuine mystic, and it is certain that he implicitly believed that he was the appointed prophet of God, and that the words of the Koran were dictated to him by God.

European countries. Many of these are in connection with the delimitation of territory and frontier, but among others are the determining of what a nation is, and what nations there are in that seat of unrest.

A Tangled Situation.
"It is beyond the mind of man to tell exactly what the situation is in Central Europe, and this caused to a certain extent by the divergence of opinion between France and England as to the policy to be adopted. France always has one menace hanging over her, and that is a fear of a revived Germany, while we are more interested in setting Germany on her feet industrially, so that she can pay her debts to us and the other nations. France professes friendship for Hungary, Czecho-Slovakia, for General Wrangel and also his opponents. The whole problem is one of vast perplexities, and it has defied the will of man, in other words, the Peace Conference, to solve it."

As a result of the war conditions in Central Europe were beyond description. Czechs from all over the world returned to their native country, but there was not work for them, and as a result paper money was issued that had an inflated value, famine set in and many died of starvation. In an attempt to cope with the situation the Czechs abolished the nobility and confiscated all estates and became a communist republic. While the commission was trying to modify the actions of the Czechs, these people were harassed by economic problems, and at the same time the Czechs and Slovaks, who hate each other, were held together by a slender thread.

Similar conditions of unrest and distress were experienced in all the countries of Central Europe, and the speaker cited many incidents to the members of the club that clearly showed the precarious conditions of the different nations. Starvation faced them all, they either were fighting their neighbors or distrusted them, and in all the proletariat was supreme. Behind everything else was the workings of the French who, the speaker said, now sought to be the supreme military power of Europe.

What the final outcome of the developments will be is beyond conjecture. While one country is friendly to a number of others, these latter are almost in a state of war against one another. Czechs, Slovaks, Magyars, Hungarians, Austrians, Poles, Russian Bolsheviks and Germans are all unsettled, and everywhere the proletariat stands in need of wise counsellors and leaders.

British Troubles Due to Bolsheviki.

EUROPE'S SITUATION. (American Paper) "Never was there a more opportune time for us to give to the Mother Country our heartfelt sympathy than now," said Capt. James A. Roy, of Queen's University, to the members of the Empire Club at yesterday's luncheon, while discussing the present situation in Great Britain. "The present crisis may seem like a fight between capital and labor, between the miners and the Government, but it is really a fight between the two principles, misrule by the proletariat and constitutional government.

"In 1914 Great Britain was faced by the attempt of the German Empire to attain world-wide dominance, but in 1920, she is being faced by an even more subtle attack. It is an attack of propaganda from the Bolsheviki headquarters to overthrow the economic system, not only of Great Britain and the Empire, but of the entire world. It is simply a fight of the Bolsheviki against constitutional government. The Russian Government is tottering, and Lenin and Trotsky are having the last desperate gamble and hope to bring this question to a head.

"Bolshevik Russia feels there is one power that stands between her and her infernal machinations, and that power is Great Britain. The workmen of Europe take the lead from the workmen of Great Britain in their actions, habits and thoughts, and if the Bolsheviki gain the victory there it will mean quick success throughout the remainder of the continent. If the workers of Great Britain can be restored to a tranquility of mind and soul, it will be a tremendous help towards settling the problems of Central Europe and the conquering of the world-wide menace of Bolshevism. If not, then it will mean endless trouble between capital and labor.

"We must stand up with the Mother Country now as we did in the war. Then we sacrificed life and wealth to help her, and now she needs our sympathy more than ever. It would be a great help to her to know that the daughter countries over the seas are with her to the finish. We must pull together with a strong understanding and sympathy with the great Republic across the border, and realize that law and order must prevail against Bolshevism. It is not by diplomatic machinations that the problems and cancers of the world are going to be healed, but by the strong, solid front of the Anglo-Saxon races. That is the true League of Nations. The solution of the problem will not be for the benefit of Europe, but of the whole world."

Capt. Roy, who is now assistant professor of English literature in Queen's University is well posted on the European situation of to-day. During the war he served on the British Intelligence Staff, and while the Peace Conference was meeting in Paris he was appointed to the Allied Mission of Control at Teschen, in Silesia, where he assisted in determining and settling the various difficulties that confronted the Central European nations. Previous to the war he was lecturer at St. Andrew's.

In speaking of the condition of Central Europe, he stated that it was a question of extraordinary breadth and the more one delved into the subject, the more bewildered he became. Rather than speak of the situation in Central Europe, one should think of the changes in the situation there. Things, such as nations, boundaries and governments, change with such great rapidity that it is hard to keep track of the situation. The two main causes for the unrest, that prevails throughout Central Europe, as well as the world in general, are political and economic.

After explaining his journey to Teschen, he told of the problems that confront the people of the Central Appreciation of St. George's Bishop-Elect.

Editor Evening Telegram
Dear Sir,—Whilst we all rejoice in the distinguished honor conferred upon Very Rev. H. T. Renouf in his appointment by His Holiness the Pope to the Bishopric of St. George's, we cannot but give expression to the regret we feel in losing such a capable and energetic Pastor at St. Patrick's. His work stands out as a lasting monument to his untiring energy and unexcelled business ability. When we review the many improvements in the Parish particularly in the Church and its surroundings, and when we take into consideration the toil and worry that such tasks entailed, we cannot but feel proud of our esteemed Pastor and rejoice that St. Patrick's is the Parish to be honoured on this auspicious occasion, for honoured we are in the honor conferred upon the Bishop-Elect. The example in industry, attention to duty, as well as administrative ability displayed by our reverend Pastor, has had a wonderful influence on the parish, for no one could but be imbued with a spirit of enthusiasm in Church work who watched his self-sacrificing efforts. He taught us many lessons of zeal, punctuality and strict attention to duty while his love for the chaste and beautiful engendered in us similar traits. What he would have accomplished had he remained with us of course cannot now be realized, but judging by what he has done in his comparatively short term of office would bespeak as it were great things for St. Patrick's in the future. Our loss spells gain for the people of St. George's and it remains only for us one and all to congratulate that Diocese upon having for its future Bishop our revered Pastor Very Rev. H. T. Renouf.

On Sunday next we will be afforded an opportunity to show our appreciation of the Bishop-Elect and it goes without saying that the parishioners of St. Patrick's will respond in that wholesome and enthusiastic manner which is characteristic of the people of that parish.

Yours, etc.,
CATHOLICUS,
St. John's, West, Nov. 6th, 1920.

Historical Society.

This Society met a great reception from the general public last season, and their monthly meetings proved very successful. Lectures were given on important historical subjects. President LeMessurier started the season, and he was followed up by Dr. J. Alex. Robinson, Miss Morris, W. A. Munn, Dr. Vincent Burke, Recording Secretary Warwick Smith and the Corresponding Secretary, H. F. Shortis, who delivered two lectures.

New life was put into this Society and many new members joined up. There is a general wish that the coming season will be even more successful than the last.

At the October meeting a communication was received from his Excellency, Governor Harris, who takes a deep interest in the Society, and he expressed his opinion from personal investigation with the Imperial authorities regarding our first coin—also the definite selection of a national flower.

Preparations were made for a celebration on the arrival of the Banners of the Old Newfoundland Fenibles, expected at an early date from our High Commissioner in London, Sir Edgar Bowring. The Vice-President, Dr. J. Alex. Robinson, will also interest himself whilst in England in seeking information about other Banners, rolls, etc., of the Old Newfoundland Regiments.

The next meeting of this Society will be held on Thursday next, 11th inst., at the Council Room of Higher Education. Two new members were elected at last meeting, and many more have signified their intention of joining.

Dear Sir,—Permit me through the columns of your paper to correct an impression conveyed by a notice in one of the recent issues of all the city papers, to the effect that there shortly comes before the Supreme Court a case entitled "Harvey & Company, Limited, versus Howard J. McDougall." I wish to point out that this case is being conducted in my name only as Liquidator of Willar & Company, Limited,—in Liquidation, and not in any personal capacity, and has reference only to a question of law arising out of the Liquidation.

There are no claims against me personally by Harvey & Co., Ltd., or any other firm. Trusting that you will oblige me by inserting this explanation.

Yours very truly,
HOWARD J. McDOUGALL,
St. John's, November, 4th, 1920.

North West Coast.

There is trouble at some of the smaller outports because of the manner in which the steamers have been missing them and over-carrying passengers and freight. Several indignation meetings have been held and at these there has been some very plain speaking and quite a display of bitter feeling. At quite a largely attended meeting held in the school-room at Daniel's Harbor, some of the chief points of complaints were embodied in a lengthy and strongly worded resolution. While due praise was given to some old and new captains as Messrs. English and Parsons, there were complaints in other directions, and it developed that quite a number of persons have suffered losses of both time and money because of the manner in which coastal transport work is being conducted. At this meeting Mr. Henry was the chief speaker and the resolution was moved by Henry House and seconded by Peter White. The Parsons Pond people also held a meeting. Mr. Henry again speaking, and a resolution of protest was moved by T. Blanchard and seconded by George Payne. There were strong appeals for better treatment of ports of call and many troubles and grievances of this part of the coast were discussed.—Western Star.

Harbor Grace Notes.

The s.s. Neptune arrived in port Monday evening from the Labrador, having on board a few passengers and some freight for this place, and the near-by settlements. Owing to the stress of weather on that night and the next day, she was forced to remain in port, but got away as soon as it moderated.

Capt. Arthur Snelgrove, of the schooner Asquith, is in town spending awhile at his home. Capt. Snelgrove has been away for a number of months doing business on the deep, and his friends welcome him back to the home-town again.

The many friends of Mr. Fred McKay, of St. John's, and son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. McKay, of this town, will be pleased to hear of his promotion to manager of Messrs. Parker & Monroe's Factory, St. John's. Mr. McKay has performed his work faithfully and well, as foreman of the above named place, for a number of years, which resulted in his promotion. This old town is always pleased to hear of the well-doing of its men and women, and extends congratulations to Mr. McKay and family.

We are very pleased to note Capt. Abraham Keen's letter regarding the "Harbor Grace Slip" and its officials, in the Daily News of the 3rd inst. The dock company must certainly feel proud of same. Judging by the business done by the dock of this place, for the past summer, we feel sure Capt. Keen is voicing the sentiments of many of the ship owners who have had their vessels attended to here from time to time. It's a great pity the town does not possess more such industrial concerns as our marine dock, and having men of progressive type (as stated in Capt. Keen's letter) at the head of affairs. Anyway, let us be optimistic and hope for his things in connection with this old town during the days to come.

Mrs. C. G. Relief left town on Monday for the city to make her home there. Her two daughters, Misses Winnie and Marguerite are holding prominent positions there. Whilst we regret the departure of so many of our friends, who have been leaving the place from time to time this fall, yet we extend to them our best wishes for their welfare in the land of their adoption.

Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Munn and daughter Miss Muriel, were passengers to arrive from the city by last night's train.

The schooner Little Princess, Capt. W. Keen, came off dock about 2 p.m. to-day, and is being towed to St. John's by the s.s. D. P. Ingraham. Capt. M. Rose, which arrived in port at dinner hour.

British Firm Hit by Restrictions.

The appended letter has been received by a prominent fish dealer, and given us for perusal. Upon reading the contents we asked if the matter contained had a direct bearing on his business. His reply was, "This is one of a series," and in a former communication he had made arrangements for the sale of a cargo at a profitable figure, but owing to the regulations, the deal had to be called off, with the consequence that he is out of pocket to the tune of thousands of dollars. The fish dealer in question is in favor of the regulations, but thinks he should be allowed to dispose of his produce where, when and how he likes. Asked if he would undersell others in the market, he replied, "I am not in business to lose money. The more I make the more fish I can buy; buying more makes more competition and with the latter, prices go up for the fishermen. The old system of unrestricted trade stood the country for years, and there is no reason why it would not continue to do so. The new regulations and restrictions has after one season placed this country in chaos." The letter of Messrs. Lind and Couto, is fair comment on the restrictions imposed to the detriment of free trade.

OPORTO, Oct. 13, 1920.

Dear Sir,—We have your valued favor of the 17th August and note contents with thanks.

The large quantity of Norwegian fish sent here at the end of August and beginning of September amounting to 38,133 cwt., which threatened to break the market, met with a good demand, and the stock is now reduced to about 9,000 cwt. Another steamer is now being loaded for Oporto. Fresh sardines in abundance have checked consumption of codfish, and strikes of fish labourers and river workers have also interfered, but on the whole September has been a good month. Portuguese schooners are now arriving from the Banks and their fish should shortly come on sale. Norwegian fish, owing to its cheaper price, is being consumed in districts hitherto confined to Newfoundland fish. This is partly due also to the fact that we, not being permitted to receive consignments from Newfoundland, are obliged to supply our country dealers with the Norwegian article.

The Edith M. Cavell, Ronald B. Moulton and Ena A. Moulton are still outside waiting orders. If these cargoes had come in to our consignments, they would have been sold out immediately at good prices, as many of our customers who are tied to us, would have preferred British fish if we had had it. We cannot understand what benefit there is to Newfoundland in forcing the only remaining British house here out of the trade and prohibiting consignments to Portugal, whilst still allowing them to Spain, especially when it is well known that we have always upheld prices to the benefit of shippers.

Yours very truly,
LIND & COUTO.

The Herring Fishery.

The herring fishery in Bay of Islands the past week has continued good so far as quantity, though the fish on Monday were more or less of a small run. This however is said to be due principally to small meshed nets. The best fishing in Humber Arm on Monday was at the bar, off Humbermouth. In Middle Arm there was good fishing all last week. Three new factories are operating on the Humber Arm this year. They are O. Brown, M. E. Boland, and C. & W. Bartlett, while Platt is operating two factories one at Middle Arm and one at Curling. J. T. Thorne began packing on Monday. The

NOTICE.

Under and by virtue of "An Act respecting the General Hospital" (George V., Cap. XIX.), and with the approval of the Governor-in-Council, the Board of Governors of the St. John's Hospital hereby give notice that they have fixed and prescribed the following scale of fees to be levied from and paid by all persons who occupy beds or undergo treatment at the Hospital. The scale is to come into operation on the 1st day of January, 1921.

SCALE OF FEES.
Every person receiving treatment in the General Hospital shall, after December 31st next, pay fees according to the following scale:
Persons admitted to the public wards $1.00 per day; persons occupying private rooms $10.00 per week in addition to the daily fees of $1.00.
Every applicant for admission to the Hospital must bring with him or her a certificate of the Superintendent of the Hospital certifying that such applicant is a proper subject for Hospital treatment.

Under the provisions of the General Hospital Act, 1915, all patients who are unable to pay fees shall be required to bring with them a certificate of their inability to pay, which shall be signed by the resident relieving officer, or where there is no such officer, by a Justice of the Peace, or Clergyman or other responsible person. The fees of such patients thereupon become payable by the Commissioner of Public Charity by virtue of the said Act.

By order of the Board,
J. W. WITHERS, Chairman.

Sugar!

We are told that you can buy sugar to-day in this town for 27 and 19 cents per lb. by the barrel and 25 cents per single lb. One firm had some sugar arrived here this week which cost twenty eight and a quarter cents at St. John's. Why is it then that some people can buy sugar at St. John's and sell it here for 28 cents per lb. and other people have to pay 28 and 14 cents. We are told that you can buy sugar at Grand Falls to-day four dollars cheaper by the barrel than you can at St. John's. Ye Gods! There is something radically wrong! We know of people in this town who had to pay 28 and 24 cents per lb. for sugar by the barrel and sold it for 20 cents and other people could buy at the same time and sell for 28 cents per lb. What is it that some people can get sugar cheaper? It is because "blood is thicker than water!"—Trinity Enterprise.

Using Waste Lumber.
 By-Products of Sawmill May Be Valuable.
 Only forty per cent of our cut timber is utilized; the rest is thrown away. This sounds as if we were wastefully wasteful; it means really that the unused sixty per cent is in such shape that it would not pay to use it. The problem of utilizing waste material, we are told by James D. Lacey, writing in the Lacey Timber Digest, is that of making its utilization profitable. This problem, he says, is being rapidly solved, in the case of timber wastes, by the work of chemists; for chemistry affords the chief key in this instance. The enhanced value of timber to-day is making profitable the conversion of waste into merchantable products—hence the activity of those who are studying these products. Not improbably, Mr. Lacey thinks, the by-products of the sawmill will outrival, in the near future, the finished lumber. Alcohol, tanning extracts, turpentine, pine oils, fibre for all sorts of fabrics, "wall board," insulating materials—these are but a few of the products that may be obtained from sawmill waste formerly thrown away. Writes Mr. Lacey:
 "It is not altogether improbable that the time may come when the by-product distillates of wood will rank in value with the product of the co-ordinate sawmill operation. No one knows just when the production of petroleum may begin to fall below the tremendous and constantly increasing demand for oil. Whenever a serious shortage sends oil prices above a certain point, however, ethyl (grain alcohol distilled from wood) will afford an efficient substitute for many purposes for which oil products are now used, including the operation of internal-combustion engines for the automobile and other automotive machinery. Grain alcohol may be produced from any wood at relatively low cost and by a process which yields other products of value as well. Wood alcohol produced by destructive distillation, is one of the pioneer by-products is increasing rapidly, but for direct use and to serve as a denaturing agent for grain alcohol distilled for industrial use.
 "Relatively few of the important chemical by-products can be produced from any one wood. Tanning extracts, for example, are obtained chiefly from the bark of oak and hemlock. Turpentine is reclaimed from those woods possessing the necessary resinous content. Pine oils as the name implies, are produced from the pines. But chemical scrutiny demonstrates that practically every wood possesses important by-product possibilities that may be greatly magnified as experts explore further the field of organic chemistry.
 "During the war the range of by-products was greatly increased. In Germany fabrics of many varieties were developed and manufactured from wood. Wood fabric rugs and carpets of serviceable character were produced. Bags and sacks, fibre silks, imitation leather, and many other articles of utility found market as substitutes for materials that were no longer obtainable. In the United States, too, recent years have seen remarkable development in the use of wood in manufacture of wall board, an industry of great and growing size, and in the production of linoleums, heat-insulating materials, etc., thus creating important industries that are totally dependent on our forests for their primary raw material.
 "Progress is dependent upon the chemist's pioneer work plus commercial development and exploitation that create demand and find markets. Until these things began to be done, the lumber manufacturer necessarily limited his utilization to the conversion of his raw material into lumber and other primary products which he could make and sell with profit.
 "Much of this chemical pioneering has been done, but far more is coming, and as it comes it will steadily cut down the percentage of waste. Less of the tree will be left in the woods to rot. Less will be discarded as valueless at the mill. And a constantly increasing volume of other products than lumber will develop out of the sawmill industry, with resulting increase in the profits, operation and proportionate enhancement of the value of timber.
 "It is not unreasonable to suppose that eventually the value of chemical by-products may very nearly equal the value of the direct products of the sawmill."
Woman Chess Champion
 Beginning to play chess when she was twelve years of age, Mrs. A. B. Stevenson now holds the proud position of woman chess champion. She first learned the game from her brothers, afterwards joining a club in West Hartlepool, where she beat the majority of opponents. Her successes in various competitions ultimately led to the championship.
 Mrs. Stevenson tells an amusing story of an incident which occurred at one of her matches.
 "My opponent, an elderly man," she says, "became so absorbed in an interesting game, that when tea was brought in he absentmindedly took up a pawn, instead of a lump of sugar, put it into his cup, and started to stir vigorously!"
