CHAPTER XX.

"Nay," he replied, "that would never do. You would scandalize all Seville. Do not fear. Let us speak of something more pleasant than illness."

"I cannot help it," said the poor young wife. "Your hands are burning hot, Rinaldo; your face changes from white to crimson; you do not look like yourself."

"My race is not a long-lived one," he said, drearily; and she looked at him in anxious alarm. "No Montalvo ever lived to be old."

"But you," she cried, clasping her hands—"you must live, my husband, or you must let me die with you."

Again the better nature of the man awoke within him, and he half recoiled that he would be true to her, come what might. But those debts, that dreary imprisonment that awaited him if he lingered here, the hopeless, helpless poverty, contrasted with the glowing picture which Luigi had painted of the time when he would be one of the richest men in Spain.

"Inez," he said, turning to his young wife, "all men are low-spirited at times. I feel terribly depressed to-day. Do not be started at my question. What should you do if I were to die?"

Count Rinaldo never forgot the look of anguish that came upon that beautiful face.

"Do, my husband," she replied, "I should die with you. I should go on living here until my heart broke. That would not take long. When I lose you, I lose all."

"I have a presentiment upon me," he said. "Ah, Inez, you will never forget me, I know. No one would miss me but you. My cousin would be Count Montalvo. He would be clever and worthy. If you lived to hear his name become famous in Spain, would it recall the poor count you loved you so well?"

"Do not talk to me so, Rinaldo," she cried; "you torture me."

"Then I will not, if it grieves you," he returned; but several times that evening he reverted to the cousin who would take his title.

In after years Inez remembered how that evening after he left her, he returned to her side, and folded her in his arms as though he would never release her. Again she smiled, and asked him if he was telling her love with her stretch. Poor girl! she little dreamed how or when she should see Rinaldo Montalvo again.

The following evening he did not come. She waited by the orange-trees until it grew late, and that night Inez first learned the torture of suspense! He must be ill, she knew. How she raved, blindly, madly, against her fate. He was ill, and she could not even go to see him or nurse him; there was no means by which she could ascertain how he was, or anything about him. Was ever fate so sad as hers? Madame Montalvo hardly knew the pale face that greeted her the following morning. All that day the girl lived in a torturing fever of suspense; it seemed that evening would never come. Long before the time she was at the trusty-place, watching, with wistful eyes, the road by which he should come. There was no sign of him; her eyes grew dim with tears, and her hands turned like ice. The suspense seemed killing her, when, in the far distance, she saw some one coming along the high road. One glance showed it was not her husband; it was Luigi Carnello, looking grave and anxious. Did he feel any sorrow or remorse when his eyes fell upon that pale, mournful face? It was so changed, he hardly knew it.

"What is it?" she cried. "Where is my husband? What are you come to tell me?"

Gravely, and with all seeming kindness, he told her that Rinaldo lay ill, and that he had begged him to see his wife, and give her many loving messages for him.

"Can I not see him?" cried the poor girl. "Remember he is my husband. Let me see him."

"It would be quite impossible," he

DOCTORS WANTED TO OPERATE

Mrs. Quillon Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Saved Her from an Operation

Monkton, Michigan.—"A first doctoring for eight or nine years with different physicians, without any relief at all, they said that I must have an operation. I had heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and often saw it advertised in different papers where some women had suffered just as I did and got well and strong again by taking the Vegetable Compound. I decided to see what it would do for me, and before I had finished the fourth bottle I was much better, the weakness stopped and the severe pains in my sides left me. I am now much stronger and do my own work and work in the factory besides. I am still taking the Vegetable Compound and give it all my friends. Mrs. M. QUILLON, 17 Moore St., Monkton, Mich.

Women should heed such warning symptoms as bearing-down pains and weakness, low backache, nervous trouble, and a persistent and faithful use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will seldom fail to help.

replied, "Rinaldo will hasten to you as soon as he is well."

A half smile of relief quivered for a moment upon her lips, and she said, more cheerfully, "Then he is not very ill; he will soon recover?"

"We hope so," was the reply; "but unfortunately the fever is very violent, and he has shown some symptoms we do not like. The best medicine that can be given him will be a cheerful message from you. If I tell him you look sad and unhappy, he will grieve deeply."

"Then I will try to look or feel either the one or the other," she said. "I need not, if you tell me he will be here perhaps to-morrow."

She kept back the fast rising tears, the bitter sobs that rose to her lips, and smiled as she bade the traitor "good-night."

"How did she bear it? What did she say?" cried Count Rinaldo, eagerly, that evening, when his friend sought him.

"She will not die of grief," replied Luigi, with a cynical smile. "She became quite cheerful before I left her. She will soon be consoled, I imagine."

So, day by day, regardless of the agony ruthlessly inflicted upon that young heart, the cruel plot was carried on.

In the quiet household of Sorrento they wondered much what had come over the beautiful high-spirited girl. She was pale and quiet, passing whole days in her room; going out for a short time in the evening, and returning more sorrowful than ever. Nita found her dinner untasted day after day, and she wondered what had taken life, health, and spirits from her young lady.

In her after life, Inez never forgot the slow, torturing agony of those days; to know that her husband, who had given up all for her, was ill, and yet she could not help him, was a grief beyond words. Had the risk been hers, she would have braved all, and have gone to him; but, for his own sake, she must not. The day seemed endlessly long; and when the evening, so anxiously waited for, came at last, a half hope would rise in her heart that he might be there.

Then came the dreary waiting near the orange grove, the hurried visit of Luigi, who looked graver and more anxious every day. She always tried to seem cheerful, that Rinaldo might not grieve over her; then followed the night of tears and lonely sorrow.

"Will it ever end?" cried the poor young wife. "Shall I ever be happy again?"

Then a deadly fear would seize her, lest this long illness should be dangerous, and she might never see her husband again. She suffered an agony that was rendered still more acute by her solitude and isolation.

One evening—Inez never forgot it—when she reached the orange-grove, Luigi was already there. The first glance at his face filled her heart with silent dread. She found in it something like sorrow, nervous hesitation, and fear.

"I could not come last evening," he said. "Rinaldo was worse, and I have sad news for you."

She grew pale as death, and her lips quivered as she looked at him.

"Sit down here," he said, "and I will tell you all. Promise me to be brave, as all Spanish women are in the hour of trial!"

"Tell me all," she said, in a low, hoarse voice, unlike her own.

Then, gently and tenderly he told her that Rinaldo was dead. Once he paused, for the rigid white face alarmed him, and he thought she was going to die; and he continued his story—how, two days ago, Rinaldo had been seized with the fatal fever raging in Seville; and how, weakened by his previous illness, he had succumbed to it immediately. "Before he died," Luigi continued, "he was conscious for one half-hour, and that he spent in talking to me of you."

He waited then to see if she would speak; but no words came, nothing broke the terrible stillness of that white face. He had expected a torrent of passionate tears, but the large, dark eyes were dry and burning, full of a dreadful horror. His heart smote him as he looked upon her. If she wept as women weep, he would have cared less; this grief was beyond him—he did not understand it.

THE OLD CAR.

I wandered through the junk James, where old dead autos sleep, and moldy tops and rusty frames were tangled in a heap, and in a corner stood a boat that ran for two decades; and 'er it someone used to gloat when gray old dames were maids; its wobbly rods of tarnished brass long since were wont to glow, and someone thought it had the class, some twenty years ago. If someone drove that car to-day around the village park, "Old Father Noah," men would say, "is riding in his ark." It looks like something handed down from days most remote, and all the auto fans in town would gush that ancient boat; no normal man would in it, ride, and make himself a show, yet someone viewed that bus with pride, some twenty years ago. And people come for mile on mile this ancient van to see, survey the relic with a smile, and murmur, "Hullo, cheery!" They cry, "There surely is no mate for such a thing as that!" It looks as strangely out of date as Gessler's stopwatches hat. Yet once in pomp and splendor, James, it journeyed to sea and fro, and no one called it ugly names some twenty years ago.

The Profiteer.

Two boys visited a doctor's surgery. They had no sooner closed the door than one of them placed his hand over his ear and jumped around, first on one foot and then the other, exclaiming, "There he goes—there he goes!"

When asked what was the matter, he said he had an insect in his ear.

The doctor placed the boy before a window and with a concave mirror threw a bright light through the ear speculum. The insect saw the light, crawled out to the edge of the speculum, and the doctor picked it off with his fingers.

"Thank Heaven! How much it it!" asked the boy.

He was told five shillings.

The other boy, who had been watching the proceedings, exclaimed, "Five shillings! Why, that's a bit stiff. You never took out that insect. It walked out."

Anniversary of the 1846 Fire.

Today is the 77th anniversary of the great fire of 1846, which destroyed and laid waste the city of St. John's. The fire broke out in the shop of Mr. Hamlin, a cabinet maker in George Street, off Queen Street, and was said to have been caused by the overboiling of a glue pot. The blaze quickly communicated to Queen Street and in a short time the whole collection of wooden houses in the locality were on fire. The fire, fanned by a rising wind, spread on to Water Street attacking Messrs. Rogerson's, Stewart's and C. F. Bennett's premises. In its westward progress it was stopped by the heroic effort of the fire brigade and a bucket brigade of citizens at Newman's premises near Springdale Street, but not before all the buildings in its course had been destroyed. Its wind meantime which blew from the westward, and soon the cry was heard from the crowd that Bennett's and Stewart's seal oil vats were on fire. It was then realized that the destruction of the whole town was inevitable, and despair seized on every mind and paralyzed every nerve of the onlookers. The fire ran east along the south side of Water Street and in the consternation cries were raised for the formation of a fire break to arrest the progress of the conflagration. Sir John Harvey, who was Governor of Newfoundland at the time, now appeared on the scene and taking in the situation at a glance ordered Mr. Stabb's house at O'Dwyer's corner to be blown up. This was immediately done, but it was soon found that this enlarged firebreak was not sufficient to stop the fire. The wind now seemed to blow with redoubled violence and hurried on the flames with fearful rapidity, and soon the rear of Mr. Pierce Grace's house was attacked and the flames from this spread to McBride & Kerr's and across the street to the wooden buildings on the north side of Water Street. The large quantities of oil and other highly inflammable materials in those stores and shops helped to feed the flames, and within an hour every building on both sides of this street down to Douglas & Co.'s was laid in ruins. The Custom House then took fire and lured the flames to Messrs. Robinson, Brooking & Co.'s, which quickly succumbed and then went on to Parker & Gleason's on the lower end of Water Street, destroying all buildings in its course. The fire then died out, having nothing more in its path to sustain it. More than a mile of the two principal streets were laid in waste. There were three deaths, an artillery man and two civilians. Besides the Custom House the public buildings destroyed were the Presentation Convent at Long's Hill, St. John's Church, Court House and Jail, the Theatre at the foot of Play House Hill, British Bank of North America, Savings Bank, Commercial Chambers and Colonial Treasurer's office. The public monies were all saved by being taken to Government House. The Roman Catholic Chapel (on the present site of the Star Hall), the Orphan Asylum (site of B.S. Hall), the Native Hall (Bannerman Park) and the Factory (site of present Snydon Hall), all of which escaped the fire were thrown open to the public for the shelter of the homeless and destitute. Sir John Harvey endeared himself to the people that day by his practical help and sympathy, and his presence prevented riot and disorder. He was ably seconded in the good work by Lieut.-Col. Law and M. A. Robe of the garrison, who had troops under their command. Besides the business places mentioned the following were destroyed:—Housnell's, Stabb Row's, Holmwood's, William Grieve's & Sons, Robert Aloop & Co., Rennie and Stewart's, William Warren's, John Warren's, Langley & Tessler's, P. & W. Carter's, Shea & Murphy's, Thos. Glen's, E. & N. Stabb's, J. & J. Kent's, R. O'Dwyer's, Nell McDougall's, Bowring Bros., R. & A. Rutherford, Robert Phily's, Michael Newlin's, Richard Howley's, Baine Johnston's, Edward Smith's, Wilson & Co.'s, James Clift's, S. G. Archibald's, J. Fox & Co.'s, R. Prowse, W. & H. Thomas, Gilbert Clapp's, J. B. Barnes & Co., Job Bros. & Co., Hunter & Co., James Tobin & Co., L. O'Brien, James Douglas & Co., Parker & Gleason, Edward Morris, Nicholas Gill, Walter Dillon, J. Cassel & Sons, Dunscombe & Harvey, Robinson Brooking & Co., J. Brookbank, John P. Mollaway, Richard Halloran, & Gleason's on the lower end of Water Street only Newman & Co.'s (now Hickman's) remained. The people who could not get shelter in the buildings mentioned that had been offered for their shelter huddled on the Barracks, pending the erection of camps there. Fortunately the weather was warm. The very morning after the fire the citizens were seen clearing out the ruins of their houses to erect new dwellings. Through the Governor and the leading citizens the assistance of the outside world was invoked, and two vessels were sent to New York and one to Halifax for provisions. Halifax subscribed £1,500 and the Government of Nova Scotia £1,000. The general Government of Canada sent £2,000 and that of Quebec £3,000. Prince Edward Island, St. John and Fredericton sent £1,000 each and the British Government £20,000. Her Majesty Queen Victoria issued letters to the Archbishops of Canterbury and York asking them to appeal to their clergy and congregations on behalf of Newfoundland, and in this way £10,000 was raised.

should never be placed in a damp or cold position, since the substance always remains remarkably sensitive; nor should they be exposed to heat. The best way if they are to retain their truth is to keep them in bran. The points of the best cues are usually made in French ash or maple, which have been found by experience to keep straighter than other woods. For the embellishment of the butt ebony is the favourite, but tulip wood—a wood from Brazil of a red colour with yellowish streaks—and rosewood are both employed sometimes.

At the Majestic Monday.

MARY PICKFORD IN "THE LOVE LIGHT."

The little fishing village in which Angela and her brothers lived nestled in the foothills that ran down to the sea. But there came a day when Angela's brothers and one other she loved answered the irresistible call, and she saw them, one after the other, go off over the hills to the sea. New it fell to the lot of Angela to tend the lighthouse, to keep the beacon burning brightly, guarding the ships from the treacherous rocks that edged the shores. But as a serpent found its way into paradise, so did an impostor, a self-seeker, steal into the little fishing village and into the very heart and soul of Angela herself. She loved and trusted and had faith in him. Using his love as a pretext, he made her an unknown aid in his operations until his scheming brought a great catastrophe into the life of the little village. When the girl realized the kind of man she had trusted and loved and married, and though a baby lay at her heart, she cast off the man who had brought sorrow and desolation and death into her life and she lives of her people. But this sacrifice did not satisfy the frenzied villagers. They made an out-cast of her, called her unworthy of motherhood, and took her baby from her and set another keeper in the lighthouse.

Billiards in the Making.

All About the Cues, Cloth, Table and Balls.

Nine out of ten billiards players, if asked to name the most important part of a billiard table, usually choose either the slate bed or the cushions. Actually the wood is of the very first importance, for unless this has been through a process of weathering for many years it will warp and render the table unplayable. Mahogany is by a long way the favourite for this purpose, but oak and walnut are both used. English oak, though wonderfully strong and durable, through its tendency to twist and split, is difficult for the carver and joiner to handle.

Do's.

FOR PEDESTRIANS.

Act normally when a vehicle approaches you. Trying to dodge confuses the driver, and makes him more liable to hit you. Cross the street at the cross walk. If inclined to be absent-minded wake up when crossing a street, and keep out of the hospital. Wait until a car stops before getting on or off. Give a driver sufficient space in which to pass you, remember you cannot tell what he is going to do. Be aware of traffic dangers, familiarity and contempt of them invites accidents.

IN THE REALMS OF SPORT.

THE TRUTH WITHOUT FEAR OR FAVOR.

PLAYTIME. All the world rejoices. The playtime now is here; the playtime is a gaytime the best time of the year.

Each week our attention is drawn to the various sports of the season, and athletes have not as yet reached the top of their form, which is due to the lack of warm weather, nevertheless, the season of athletic promise that athletes in St. John's will be up to the high standard.

Although many of our feet-footed athletes had decided to put away their shoes "for keeps," they were encouraged by their supporters to the many requests, they were keenly determined and more than ever. Our thoughts now should be looking forward to the next Olympic Games which will take place in Paris, August, 1924.

It is understood that the A.A.A. had under consideration and had very favorably commented on the meeting held last fall. In case the A.A.A. finally decide to make a representation to the Olympic committee that such a movement would be endorsed and encouraged by the Municipality, Government and in general, as meets of this nature materially to give Newfoundland her place in world's team, consisting of twelve men, that would be a credit to themselves and their country.

Canada, the United States, Australia, Japan and the other part of the world are already preparing for the next Olympics and in each case the athletes of the various countries are being up by their Governments.

Amateur Athletic Association has made rapid strides for the improvement of track events and is sure that if this Association has the loyal support due such organization, Newfoundland will have a strong representation in the Olympic Games in 1924.

CRITICISM OVER FOOTBALL DECISION. The decision handed down by the Delegates regarding the matter of players is the cause of criticism at present, not alone among the players themselves, but among the staunchest supporters of the game. The Football League since its inception has all through the years conducted the affairs of the league in an honest and straight manner, and if at any time attention was drawn to matters of importance the subject for consideration was always weighed well before arriving at a decision. In the present case, the rule regarding the participation with a team in two consecutive seasons, shall not be applied to play with another team when he gets the full sanction of the League. Any player who is desirous of securing his release, must have good reasons as to why he should make his club to play with another, and such information must be in the hands of the League for their approval.

League, at their last night of meeting had five cases of this nature referred to their notice, something in local football history. Two were referred to were given release, and are now free, while the remaining three players were refused their transfer, and have either to go back with their former team, or stay out of football for a period of one year. That the League acted wisely and justly on this very important point, nobody should doubt. Had the executive not been firm in their decision, it is quite possible that there would be no end to the trouble.

Horrified Critics of Much-Discussed Picture.

Sir William Orpen now reveals the secret of the much-discussed Academy picture, "The Unknown British Soldier in France," which to the uninitiated, seems weird and something of a caricature.

He spent nine months upon a picture of thirty-nine Allied leaders, grouped in the Hall of Peace at Versailles, and then painted them all out, putting in their places the coffin and the ghostly figures now seen. The picture to-day shows the Hall of Peace, a coffin covered with the Union Jack lying in the centre archway. Flanking it are two corpse-like soldiers, almost nude but for their shrapnel helmets and boots, and two child-angels hover above. Through the vista a Calvary is outlined against the sky.

Ghosts of the Fighters. Sir William is grievously disappointed, and even angry, because it has been described as a satire on war and a flippant treatment in paint of the British soldier. He says:—"The figures, of course, represent a dead soldier and the ghosts of the men who fought. They are looking through into the room where the Peace Treaty was signed. My sincerity will not be questioned when it is known that by painting out the original picture I sacrificed $2,000 of the price of my commission."

As to the ultimate fate of the picture, nothing is yet known. The Imperial War Museum, which commissioned the painting in its original form, will not, it is understood, accept the picture as now completed. "Satire on Civilization." The picture remains the most interesting picture of the Academy. These are typical expressions heard as one stands by it:—"Hideous! Ghastly! Wonderfully realistic. An unreasonable joke. Horrid. If Orpen had not done it, the Academy dared never have accepted it. It is shameful; it robs war of all its glory. What a satire on civilization!"

A nurse wearing two war medals stood silently before it, and then, as she walked away, made the sign of the cross. Two men faced the picture for some minutes. As they left it one said: "I don't like it; it makes me feel too damned uncomfortable."

Perhaps Sir William would regard that confession as proof that he had achieved his purpose.

How Smoke Screen Came Into Being.

Light includes brightened evidence concerning smoke screens which was given before the Royal Commission on Awards to Inventors during the hearing of a claim by Capt. Heaton Armstrong, an officer of the Decan Horse.

Mr. Whitehead, for applicant, stated that Capt. Armstrong, was attached, as interpreter, to the Decan Horse, which went to France with the Indian Expeditionary Force. Soon after he arrived on the Western Front he realized the necessity for the evolution of some method of producing a protective smoke screen, which could be made by infantry themselves, and which would be non-poisonous. He began experimenting in December, 1914, but his efforts to produce dense smoke by burning grass and oil were voted a failure, although he gave his colleagues in the Regiment a good deal of amusement. After various other attempts, at his direction, Messrs. Pains, the fireworks manufacturers, made a special candle, which was successfully tried at G.H.Q. and used. Altogether close upon 200,000 smoke candles on the lines suggested by applicant were used by the War Office. Capt. Armstrong did not claim that the idea of a smoke screen was new.—Mr. J. Hunter Gray, K.C., for the Crown, indicated that he would prove that smoke screens were known in 1728.—Mr. Justice Sargent: One seems to have read of something of the kind in very much more ancient days.—Applicant mentioned that he was now Rouge Dragon at the Herald's College.—Lieut. General Sir Michael Frederick Rimington told the court that the idea of the smoke candle was investigated by Poch and Sir Henry Wilson in 1915, and was thought to be a good one. Witness used a smoke screen in South Africa, burning the dry grass. He saw no grass between the trenches in 1915. "Personally," witness said, "I was in favor of a Chinese 'stink bowl' I put it to my C.R.E. (Commandant Royal Engineers), but he said he wouldn't do it.—Mr. Justice Sargent: The Geneva Convention hadn't disappeared then?—No. I thought it would be very nice to lob the Chinese bowl into the Germans' trenches to stink them out.—Colonel Francis Adams, of the Decan Horse, related that prior to the war he had known smoke-covered attacks used by natives in a small State in India, who used to set fire to the horns of cows and drive them among the enemy, but they soon tired of that ruse.—Mr. Justice Sargent intimated that the Commissioner's decision would be promulgated.

Young Traveller Almost Succeeded in Trip.

Defeated in his efforts to reach a sick friend in Paris, Gordon Moss, 20 years old, of the steamer of the Labor Age returned in the steamer of the White Star liner Baltic, which arrived at New York from Liverpool.

Moss left the United States on April 14 on the White Star liner Adriatic with forty cents in his pocket. He boarded the boat as a "visitor." With the Adriatic underway, young Moss discovered that by mingling among the first class passengers he was less apt to be observed than if he had attempted to stow away. He said that he worked on the idea that there was always a luncheon served on board between breakfast and dinner, and tea between dinner and supper, so when these social functions were being held he would slide up to the tea-tables and secure his needed food.

Moss was neat appearing, wore good clothes and the passengers on the Adriatic assumed that he was the son of some wealthy man going abroad. On the third day out the steward observed that Moss did not appear in the dining saloon for regular meals. He was called to the purser's office and questioned, and admitted that he was without passage money, was anxious to get to Paris and had not bothered about the formalities of transportation. Friends he had made during his three days aboard ship made up a purse and paid his fare.

Arriving in Liverpool he was held by immigration authorities and placed on his honor to leave before the sailing of the ship on his return trip. Hiding in the immigration office building he waited until dawn of the day the ship was to sail, then, his word technically kept, escaped and made his way to London, walking most of the way. Failing to find the friends he sought in London, he sold his overcoat for ten shillings and tramped to Leeds.

Again he failed to find friends he thought would be there. Returning to London he applied for aid to the American consulate, and was told the immigration authorities were looking for him. Giving himself up he was sent home on the Baltic. On his arrival in New York, he was "broke" but cheerful and natty in appearance. He refused to accept money offered him, declaring: "I'm all right. Now that I'm back again I can take care of myself with ease. I'll find friends. No doubt about it, in half an hour after I get off this pier."

Chinese Funeral Customs

Those of the Am' who live immediately on the Coast, in the vicinity of Chinese villages, have adopted the Chinese custom of inhumation of the dead outside the house; but those who live inland from the Coast follow what was evidently their original custom, as it is still that of the Palawan and the Eastern Bunnun, namely, the burial of the dead in a crouching position, underneath the hearthstone of the family home.

Gruesome as the custom may seem to Western minds—and unhygienic—it is accepted as a matter of course by the tribes among whom it exists, and the idea of its exciting horror in the mind of anyone else, seems to them incredible and absurd. The houses of the people who practice this peculiar form of inhumation are substantially built of slate; one or more slabs of slate being used as a hearth, on which a fire is kept always burning—or, during the dry season, smouldering.

When the death occurs of any member of the family, the body is bound with strands of coarse grass in a stooping, or crouching, posture. Then, after the usual funeral ceremonies, both of wailing and of feasting, are concluded, the ashes are scraped from the hearth—care being taken, however, that the coals are kept "alive," for should these be extinguished, or grow cold, it would be considered an omen of evil, and would also "displease the Ottou" of the dead—and the hearthstones are removed. A deep hole is dug in the place from which the stones have been moved. This is usually lined with grass before the body is lowered into it. The personal belongings of the deceased are also placed in the grave, which is then filled in, the hearthstone replaced, and the fire rekindled. Then the life of the surviving members of the household goes on as before.—Acadian Recorder.

Keeping Well in Summer

"What one should do to keep well in summer," says Surgeon General H. S. Cummings, of the U. S. Public Health Service, "depends on what one has been doing during the winter." As winter occupations are infinitely varied it may seem at first blush that this dictum calls for equally varied summer programs. However, most occupations fall into certain groups which call for corresponding vacations.

"For instance, most men and an increasing number of women work hard all winter and take a vacation when summer comes. On the other hand, large groups of men and women (farmers, for instance) work hard all summer and take a vacation, if they ever get one, in the winter, when farm work is slack. Most women work hard in their own homes, and they too have earned a vacation, though their right to it is not always acknowledged. Some men and women appear not to work at all and would probably be very angry if any one accused them of working. These also need a vacation, but very few of them get a real one.

"A vacation should mean very different things to these various classes. A clerk, for instance, should do something that would make him use his muscles (though not to excess) and an iron mill worker something that would enable him to rest his. A girl who has been typewriting or packing cigarettes or cooking in somebody else's home should use her vacation in outdoor sports such as playing tennis or something like that. A tired wife and mother should rest by getting away from husband and children, soothing her nerves by chatting with other women, and having a few moments of genuine privacy. A 'society' girl who really works about as hard as anybody in the service of the Goddess of Pleasure and is probably (temporarily, at least) sick of teas and men and other girls, would do well to attend a Summer Normal School, where she would at least get a brand new outlook on life—unless she has courage enough to get a job in a factory, where, if she was not too haughty some 'factory girl' might take pity on her and teach her the ropes.

"The usual prescription for a vacation is exercise in the open air. Such advice assumes that exercise in the open air is the one important thing that most workers do not get. This is, of course, true in regard to many persons, but it is not true in regard to many others—farmers, street cleaners, and chauffeurs, for instance. Anybody who has been spending his or her winter evenings in stuffy rooms studying, playing cards, dancing, or just nodding, should by all means, get out into the open air in the summer. A truck driver, on the other hand, might well spend his vacation indoors.

"Exercise, particularly in the open air, is valuable, and, indeed, essential to continued good health. Exercise, however, is not a cure for physical and ignores mental health; and mental health is now considered to be about as important as physical health.

"Millions of persons, women in particular perhaps, need a 'change' rather than a 'rest.' "As a matter of fact, nearly everyone feels this, and unconsciously strives to act upon it. The 'tired business man' of whom papers say so much is not so foolish as some persons think when he goes to the theatre to listen to a farraigo of nonsense; for this is the very antithesis of his 'daily' work. Unfortunately, going to the theatre is like his business, indoors.

"Clerks or working men or girls who attend baseball games show better judgment, for they get mental stimulus; and, if they applaud the players or denounce the umpire with enough enthusiasm they get a good deal of physical exercise in the open air. On the other hand the farmer who works 15 hours a day from early spring to late fall might do worse than spend two winter weeks in the city, fighting off the wily 'condemners' of men and attending the movies. And more or less similarly for his wife. They would both get enough mental stimulus to sustain them through the laborious days of next summer.

"The point is to get new ideas for the brain to mull over. All persons, after being tied to one set of ideas (or to no ideas at all) for months, will find themselves a lot healthier and happier if they can pick up a totally different set during their vacation. Whether the ideas are wise or foolish, they can get a lot out of them, particularly if they can find friends who are considerate enough to find a contradictory set and to stand up for them. The two will prevent each other from vegetating and keep each other happy (even if furious) till the next vacation. Vegetating is the worst thing in the world for a human being—at any rate for the American species.

"It would be well if all persons would adapt this advice to their own circumstances and would plan vacations for the coming summer that differ radically from their daily occupations. Such vacations probably would not turn out quite as was expected; but that would be half their charm. Some persons might even wish they hadn't tried the plan for a week or so after they got home; but the chances are that the next summer they would try the same or some other 'contrary' plan once more."

The "Mist of Destiny"

The new British Prime Minister, Stanley Baldwin, judging from the comments of both British and American leading newspapers, would seem to be the man of destiny to make a successful solution of the many tangled problems confronting the Mother Country as well as the International questions of foreign policy. The Editorial comment in London may be summed up in the words of one great daily: "The King could have made no better choice." The New York Tribune says on the selection: "Probably no other factor could contribute more toward bringing the ties of good-will between Great Britain and the United States closer together than by the choice of Stanley Baldwin." It is also recalled that it was largely through his presence in the United States that the funding of the British War Debt was agreed upon so speedily and amicably. The larger problems to be faced are referred to as the wild, "untamed horses" left by Lloyd George and Bonar Law and include "German Reparations," "Relations with Soviet Russia," "Home Unemployment," "France's Debt," "Ruhr Occupation," "Payment of England's Own War Debt," and "The Near East Question." It is predicted that the new Prime Minister will face all these problems "with brains" and those who know him most intimately feel confident that he will become the man of destiny to solve them. He has the advantage of being a "commoner" and is in closer touch with those who constitute the majority of the people of Great Britain, and is in a better position to know their aspirations and their opinions and, therefore, to enlist their sympathy. In all this he has a decided advantage over many more conspicuous and experienced nominees, particularly Lord Curzon. He is strong with the working men and just now it is very important to have a man at the wheel who is able to properly appreciate the Labor viewpoint. He has a splendid grip of business questions confronting the Mother Country and has a wonderful knowledge of the mining, coal, steel and other British industries. The Dominions across the sea, including this Ancient and Loyal Colony, look forward with hope to the time when all these "wild horses" will be tamed.

Working capital is the life-belt that keeps a business afloat when its earnings are suffering from cramps or while it is still learning to swim.—Forbes Magazine.

A Correction.

In our report on Sir Michael Deakin's speech in yesterday's issue the line "I think Sir John got full value out of using my name in the election," etc., should have read "I think Sir Richard got full value," etc.

Trade Notes.

GREEK EXCHANGE.

The Exchange situation in Greece has been subjected to some remarkable fluctuations the past six months. Around New Year it was 420 drachmas to the pound sterling. In the early part of May it had gone to 230, and two weeks ago to the surprise of the financial world it took a sudden jump to 1,500 drachmas to the pound. This indicates a poor prospect for fish sales in Patras and Piraeus.

OPORTO MARKET.

The Oporto Market offers good prospects for sales of early Newfoundland fish cargoes of 1923 fish. The stocks this week were reduced there to 25,457 quintals and the weekly consumption was 3,628, which is a splendid average for this season of the year. It looks as if this market will be clean by the middle of July, as there are only a few Newfoundland cargoes of old fish left to go forward.

PORTUGUESE BANKERS.

The Portuguese have been gradually enlarging fishery operations amongst their fishermen since the close of the war. The high prices they had to pay for imported fish revived fishing in their own coast waters and also sending out crews to the Banks of Newfoundland for cod. Last year they had ten bankers out and the work was so successful that this year there are over sixty fishing on the Grand Banks to supply their own markets.

BIG MOLASSES CARGO.

The largest cargo of molasses for the season arrived from Barbados by the schooner Evelyn this week-end. The freight consisted of 630 puncheons, 200 hoppers and 200 barrels of Molasses, Harvey, Downing, and Rendell. This makes the total since New Year over 4,700 puncheons, as against 3,500 puncheons this date last year. The market for new molasses continues strong at Barbados and no recession from present prices is expected.

"Her Husband's Wife."

FINAL PRODUCTION TO-NIGHT.

"Her Husband's Wife," staged by Mrs. John Baxter at the Majestic Theatre last night, was a decided success. The players were all in fine form, and were accorded a splendid reception by the capacity audience in attendance. The performance will be repeated to-night when His Excellency the Governor and Suite, and Prime Minister will be present. An added attraction for to-night's show will be the singing of Miss Mary Ryan between the acts. As the proceeds will be devoted to the Child Welfare Movement and Daughters of the Empire, it is hoped that a packed house will greet the performers in their final production.

St. Mary's Garden Party

The Annual Garden Party of St. Mary's Parish, takes place on Wednesday afternoon at Lester's Field. Last year's affair it will be remembered was a great success and this year the Committee hope to make the event even more enjoyable. Last evening the Sports Committee made the measurements for the three mile road race, which will be one of the features of the programme. The race will start at the Sanitorium gate and will finish with two laps of the field.

Baby Week Concludes.

EXHIBITION ENTIRE SUCCESS.

Baby week concludes to-day, and the exhibition has in every way been a success and it is believed much good will result from the daily health conferences, which were so largely attended. The attendance eclipsed that of last year and the various exhibits attracted considerable attention, from mothers especially. The medical men gave every assistance and the ladies who organized the exhibition are worthy of the thanks of the community. This afternoon all who were unable to attend on their appointed days are invited to the health conference.

Magistrate's Court.

A laborer, arrested on a drunk charge was granted his freedom.

A 33 year old laborer of the Higher Levels who was held on remand for larceny since Tuesday last, came up for trial this morning. The accused, who had already pleaded guilty of stealing a lady's costume, valued at $50.00 from the store of the U. S. Picture & Portrait Co., was also charged with three additional robberies. First, the larceny of a 22 repeater gun, valued at $32.00, the property of E. J. Buryse on the 1st June; second, the larceny of carpenter's tools, to the value of $8.00, belonging to Albert Faulkner, taken within the past month; and third, the larceny of tools, the property of Edward Bradbury, committed on the 15th of May last. The accused through his counsel Mr. A. G. King, B.L., pleaded guilty to three of the four charges, and Mr. King made a strong plea for mitigation of sentence owing to extenuating circumstances. The prisoner was then sentenced to a term of six months hard labor.

SIX YOUNG MEN NAMED CONNORS.

Six young men named Connors, Taylor, McCormack, Bages, Mugford and Rumsey, who were held on remand charged with stealing away on the S. S. Maplestar from St. John's to Montreal on her last trip, appeared in court this morning. The captain of the ship, who was present, stated that the accused were found on board the day after leaving port, and he gave them over to Constable Densey at Channel. The expenses incurred on board ship amounted to $12.00 for meals, and $50.00 for fares. Supt. O'Neill, J.P., also presented a statement amounting to $215.20 in meals and fares by rail from Channel to St. John's. The full amount of their joy ride cost $275.00. Each of the accused were given an opportunity of paying up the amount proportionally, which they each consented to do.

A Narrow Escape.

MOTOR CAR DEMOLISHES BICYCLE.

Albert Mercer, son of Mr. W. H. Mercer of Bowring Bros. employ, had a narrow escape from death this morning when he was run over by a motor car. The young man was proceeding over Springdale Street riding a bicycle when at the junction with New Gower Street a motor car, driven by Mr. Hubley, crashed into the bicycle, smashing it to pieces. Mr. Mercer was thrown heavily to the ground with considerable force. On being examined at Dr. Tall's surgery it was found that no bones had been broken, although the young man's head was considerably cut and bruised.

August 2nd.

LADS WILL PITCH THEIR TENTS AT TOPSAIL.

The C.L.B.C. are now busily engaged making preparations for their annual Camp, which takes place at Topsail the first week in August. The officers are contemplating on building a Mess Hut with a floor space measuring 30x20, and this will be made good use of by the boys for sleeping quarters during wet weather. General repairs and alterations to the camp grounds will also receive attention. Several of the officers have already signified their intention of staying into camp, and it is quite possible that Major R. H. Tall will be Camp Commandant. It is hoped that the lads from the Outport Companies will also spend a few days under canvas. Everything points to a very successful camp at Topsail this year.

Special Police for Humber.

One of the most popular policemen in the force, Constable Ambrose Conway, has been appointed to the special police force in connection with the Humber Development, and leaves in a day or so to take up his new duties.

He is taking charge of a squad of special police which the contractors for the Humber Development are organizing. Constable Conway joined the force in 1904 and during last winter was stationed at Port au Port.

Supreme Court.

LIBEL ACTION AGAINST ADVOCATE.

GATE.

The libel action taken by Mr. Jas. S. Ayre, a Director and Shareholder in the firm of Ayre & Sons, Ltd., against the Advocate was up for hearing in the Supreme Court this morning before Mr. Justice Kent and a special jury. Mr. L. E. Emerson appeared for the plaintiff. Mr. F. A. Mews for the defendant. The libel action arises out of the following part of an article which appeared in the "Evening Advocate" of March 15, last.

A SINISTER PURPOSE.

In the words of a well-known politician, the vapourings of the Tory Party would make a cat laugh. They have formulated a merchant party of Cashins, Crosbie, Monroe, Outerbridge, Moore, Long, Ayre, Hickman, who are going to save the people, and to get the Government they are prepared to spend thousands of dollars they have heeded from the people out of their business activities. And should they get their position to get it back out of the people again.

The following jury were sworn: M. Blackler, P. Bulger, P. Gleeson, J. Ash, P. Hallerhan, George Baird, C. Reid, Pat. Keefe, E. M. Gray. Mr. Emerson opening the case for the plaintiff called Mr. Shilling, 1st Clerk of the Colonial Secretary's Department, who gave evidence as to the proprietorship of the Advocate. Mr. Jas. S. Ayre was next called and examined by Mr. Emerson. A short cross-examination by Mr. Mews for the defence followed. No other witnesses were called. Mr. Emerson for the plaintiff and Mr. Mews for the defendant both addressed the jury, after which the trial judge made a review. The defence claimed first that the article was not defamatory; 2, that it was not capable of having a defamatory meaning; 3, that it was not published with malicious intent. In his summing up Mr. Justice Kent asked the jury to consider three points. 1. Did the Advocate publish the article complained of; 2. Did it refer to the plaintiff? Is it defamatory? The jury retired at 12.30 and at 1.15 p.m. returned to court with questions 1 and 2 answered by "Yes." In the third question they gave a dissenting verdict. The trial judge informed the foreman, M. Bulger, that the jury could not be relieved and that they had to agree on a verdict "Guilty or not guilty." Recess was taken until 3 p.m.

C. L. B. C. Camp

August 2nd.

LADS WILL PITCH THEIR TENTS AT TOPSAIL.

The C.L.B.C. are now busily engaged making preparations for their annual Camp, which takes place at Topsail the first week in August. The officers are contemplating on building a Mess Hut with a floor space measuring 30x20, and this will be made good use of by the boys for sleeping quarters during wet weather. General repairs and alterations to the camp grounds will also receive attention. Several of the officers have already signified their intention of staying into camp, and it is quite possible that Major R. H. Tall will be Camp Commandant. It is hoped that the lads from the Outport Companies will also spend a few days under canvas. Everything points to a very successful camp at Topsail this year.

CHAPTER XXIII.

THE MISSING SHIPS.

The Registry at Lloyd's in London contains the names of tens of thousands of ships, and each one of this vast number has had its own peculiar history, and has made its own particular record; some long and some short. Lloyd's may be said to be a universal marine agency, and its name is established in every maritime country. Lloyd's guarantee stands for the best in marine architecture, and when a ship is classed at Lloyd's agency, and is spoken of as being A.1. at Lloyd's, it implies that she is up to the standard, and is thoroughly fitted to combat the storms of old Neptune. But staunch as ships are built, and severe as is the test enforced by Lloyd's, many of the ships go down in wreckage or reach port disabled. Not all the ships that leave port reach their destination; hence we sometimes hear it said, or read it in the papers, that such a ship is long overdue, and is posted missing at Lloyd's. This of all the records seems the saddest of the lot, because it implies much uncertainty and long suspense. It means that since leaving port, whether outward or homeward bound, there has been no record of the good ship; no sister ship has passed her on the ocean, and all that can be said is, she is overdue—she is missing.

Thus it is that the days drag wearily on, and the weeks increase to months, and while every allowance is made, and every hope expressed, their comes a day when the last hope must be abandoned, and when it is said of the missing ship, "She is given up." The owners who waited her arrival, and who felt the responsibility of her loss, have had no other course, and they have had to stop the paynotes of the crew. The friends and families interested in the crew, have had to realize the fact, that their paynotes being stopped, the worst had actually taken place, and that the good ship in which their hopes were centered, and which they had expected would some day make port with their dear ones, whom they had hoped to meet, would not come again, for their ship is missing, and with the ship her gallant crew. All that can be said is, they have gone; but as to how, when or where, is a mystery. It may have been by storm or fire, or it may have been by collision, but none can tell; there is one stern fact that the ship

Kilbane Knocked Out.

CRIQUE'S GREATER STAMINA AND PUNCHING ABILITY GAVE HIM THE CHAMPIONSHIP — SENDS KILBANE TO THE FLOOR IN THE SIXTH ROUND.

New York, June 4.—Eugene Criqui, of France, hero of Verdun, won the featherweight championship of the world Saturday, knocking out Johnny Kilbane, of Cleveland, Ohio, in the sixth round of a 15-round match, before 25,000 people. Criqui's greater stamina and punching ability carried him to triumph. Kilbane, who had held the world title for eleven years had a shade the best of the defensive fighting, but at critical moments he was unable to stem the tide of Criqui's cyclonic attack. Early in the bout Kilbane smilingly held off the Frenchman and countered his swings with light left taps. Kilbane was fighting a purely defensive battle. Criqui, however, was forcing the fighting, and in the fifth Kilbane stopped smiling after straight lefts to the stomach and a left hook to the jaw. Criqui was boring through the champion's defence. Criqui's blows snapped like a flash, and Kilbane, aware of the danger, grew serious in his fighting. Kilbane spat blood.

The finish came with sensational suddenness in the sixth. Criqui starting from his corner with determination in his features, he feinted, then whipped in a terrific left to the body that staggered the champion. Kilbane drew away, expecting another left, but Criqui shot in a right across to the jaw and sent Kilbane back on his heels and toppling to the canvas. Kilbane rolled over under the ropes. He shook his head and managed to get to his knees at the count of six. Then, with a pained expression about the eyes, he sank back, clutching the ropes and heard the count of ten. One minute and 54 seconds of the round had passed when the pole was proclaimed champion of the world.

It was only the second time in his career that Kilbane had been counted out. In 1917, when featherweight king, he went out of his class to meet Benny Leonard, lightweight champion, and was knocked out in the third round. Dramatic ring-side scenes followed Criqui's sudden triumph. The challenger himself, almost stunned by the quickness of his victory, was quickly seized by his jubilant seconds. Freeing himself for a moment, however, he rushed to the fallen title holder's corner and kissed Kilbane on each cheek.

Criqui's victory was clean-cut and decisive, but experts were agreed that Kilbane had shown far from the form that won the featherweight crown for him in 1912. Defensively, Kilbane retained much of his old time skill, but his stamina and punching power were not the same. His footwork from the start showed that his legs did not have the strength to carry him through a gruelling championship contest.

Kilbane was born in Cleveland, of Irish-American parentage, April 18, 1889, and is therefore 34 years old. Criqui was born August 15, 1893, in Paris, and is thus in his 30th year. He has been fighting since he was 15. Before the war he engaged in more than 100 contests. He was a clever boxer, but failed to rise higher than the near-champions because of the lack of punching power.

Then the war broke out, and at Verdun the left side of his jaw was shot away. The rib of a sheep was grafted in his face and he was discharged from the hospital as unfit for military duty. After the close of hostilities he went back to pugilism. He turned from boxing to fighting.

While he never actually was knocked out, Criqui has failed to go the route on three occasions. In 1914 he retired in the twelfth round of a bout with Charley Ledoux, French bantam, but last year evaded the score by knocking out his countryman in one round. In 1919, against Tommy Noble, English featherweight champion, Criqui went nineteen rounds, refusing to go on for the twentieth after claiming that a low blow had dislocated a leg tendon. Later the same year Noble held Criqui to a draw, while at London the Frenchman refused to continue in a fight with Pal Moore when his claim of foul was disallowed in the fourth round. Last year Criqui won the European feather title, knocking out Arthur Wyns, of Belgium, in 13 rounds, and Billy Matthews, of England, in the 17th round.

Criqui will defend his title in a decision match with Johnnie Dundee, N.Y., within sixty days at the Polo Grounds.

Bark Used as Substitute for Breadstuff.

On the Carson National Forest in Northern New Mexico there was, within the memory of living men, quite a large Indian population, consisting of Navajos and occasional roving bands of Utes, Apaches and Comanches. These were gradually dispossessed and pushed back by the Mexican settlers coming in from the south up the valley of the Rio Grande, so that the last remnants of the original inhabitants disappeared to the arid West about 45 or 50 years ago. Formerly these people or some of them, cultivated patches along the lower valleys of the mountain streams. In the summer they spread out into all the little mountain valleys.

The Indians removed the dry outer bark of the trees by means of stone hatchets, after which the inner bark or cambium could easily be stripped off. This was dried and roughly ground by means of the metate and used as a substitute breadstuff to eke out the scanty supply of corn raised in the valleys which, to judge by cornucopia found in the once-inhabited caves, was of very poor size. The peeling of the bark was done in the early summer when the sap was flowing and the bark was easily removed. At this season the cambium is tender and palatable, being of sweetish taste and slightly aromatic, and is probably nutritious.

Gas That is Harmless.

DISCOVERY WILL PREVENT ACCIDENTS AND SUICIDES.

The reduction of the amount of carbon monoxide in household gas from the usual percentage of about 12 to the negligible quantity of 4 has been effected by Mr. C. B. Tully, a gas engineer and inventor, of London and Newark-on-Trent, who has thus, after three years' experimenting, rendered gas harmless, whether inhaled accidentally or by would-be suicides.

Liverpool has a special interest in this achievement, for Mr. Tully was formerly employed in the capacity of a foreman at the Athol-street works of the Liverpool Gas Company, where he displayed outstanding qualities. He has been working in collaboration with Dr. Jacques, also stated to belong to Liverpool, and Mr. J. H. West, of London.

"We have succeeded with Newark town gas, so we have no doubts regarding big-scale production," said Mr. Tully in an interview. "The gas will cost less than any hitherto used, and, as it is harmless, the household need no longer have any fears about the danger of leakage."

He said that by the same methods they could make a gas containing from 87 to 90 per cent. of hydrogen for synthetic ammonia, or for any other process requiring a gas rich in hydrogen, and Britain had now a chance of starting a new industry, and becoming an exporter instead of importing million of pounds' worth of synthetic ammonia.

Gas for R.A.F. dirigibles and balloons could be produced more cheaply than coal gas, with a lifting power four times as great.

Monday's Big Double Show at Nickel.

HAROLD LLOYD IN "DR. JACK," IS HEADLINER.

One of the biggest and most interesting programs witnessed at a local theatre since the coming of the Motion Picture will be seen at the Nickel Theatre on Monday. The headliner is Harold Lloyd's stupendous comedy triumph, "Dr. Jack." It is not an ordinary comedy, but something you will remember for a long while. As "Dr. Jack," a physician who cures people of their ills and unhappiness at the sacrifice of personal gain, the spectacled comedian portrays a character that will keep the audience chuckling from the beginning to the end of the picture. There is not a dull moment in "Dr. Jack" from the time Lloyd starts out from his home eating breakfast from a tray as he runs to his trusty Ford until he takes the charming Mildred Davis in his arms for the final fade out.

HOW TO CHOOSE A CONFIDANTE.

A man in whom a man's people seem to like to confide, told me this illuminating little story the other day: "Another man opened up his heart to me one night when we were walking together and told me a whole lot of things. He wasn't the kind of man who usually does get confidential, and right in the middle of it he stopped, and said: 'Darn it all, I know I ought not to be telling you this, but in all the years I've known you, you've never yet told me anything that anyone else told you—I guess that's safeguard enough.'"
His Best Compliment
"I never had a compliment," said he, "that pleased me more and never one that I had occasion to remember oftener when the temptation not to deserve it came to me."
"Then you do find it a temptation sometimes?" I asked, for he has the reputation of being exceedingly discreet.
"Was there ever anyone who didn't?" he countered. "When you know things that would make people's eyes stick out, isn't it always a temptation to make them stick? Of course you don't do it but—"

Snapshots Like Oil Paintings.
Something New for Amateur Photographers.
The writer will be pleased to answer questions if a stamped addressed envelope is sent. Several readers of Tit-Bits have written asking me to describe the bromoil photographic process.
A bromoil print is a bromide print which has been bleached out and, as it were, redeveloped in oil pigment such as the oil-colour artist uses. It is, therefore, permanent, like an oil painting, and possesses also the rich deep seen in such pictures. It differs in appearance, however, from the fact that the pigment is laid on paper instead of canvas. When well done it has the appearance of a mezzotint.
The result is due to a certain extract to the technical skill of the worker, but chiefly to his artistic taste. More than any other photographic process, it allows the worker to control the lights and shadows of his picture. Therefore, the better the artist, the better the result.
What You Require.
At the same time, it is possible for the inartistic photographer to make a straight bromoil print—a print corresponding exactly to the original bromide print in detail—and if well done, it will look much superior to the bromide print.
Any reader who has carefully followed the photographic articles in Tit-Bits is in a position to attempt bromoil work. For economy's sake, he should not attempt anything larger than half-plate at first.
The following will be necessary for a start: A six-foot bromoil brush, costing 2s. 6d.; tubes of hard and soft black bromoil pigment, a few sheets of clean blotting paper, and a piece of strong glass about twice as big as the size of the print to be bromoiled.
A bleacher is needed to bleach out the print. It can be mixed at home, and the writer will supply a formula to anyone who wants it, but the beginner would be well advised to buy a small bottle of ready-made stuff, which any photographic dealer will obtain on request.
The making of the original print is important. A negative that is full of sharp detail should be selected, and the bromide print or enlargement made from it should be exposed so that it is just right when it has been lying in the developer for three minutes. If it has got too dark in that time another print should be made with shorter exposure. It is useless for the novice to attempt to work on an over-exposed print.

After development, the print should be rinsed in water and placed in plain hypo solution. An acid bath must not be used.
After fixing for a quarter of an hour, the print must be washed for an hour in moving water. This is really the way to make a first-class bromide print for any purpose, and it presents no difficulty to the ordinary photographer. After washing, it should be hung up to dry in a warm or draughty place.
Right through the process of making the print, care must be taken to keep it perfectly clean and free from finger-marks. What is known as an ordinary bromide paper must be selected—not a platinum-matt paper.

Wife Head of Family in Travancore.

While in some parts of the great Indian Empire the Hindu wife is so subjected to her husband that she is not supposed to eat at the table with him or even look at him or even look at him in the face, in the Province of Travancore, on the other hand, "matriarchy" or the rule of woman, survives almost in its pure state.
In marriage the woman chooses her husband and he comes to her house to live. Until quite recently she could dismiss and divorce him, whenever she felt like it. Now, however, divorce is by mutual consent. The woman is the head of the family. She owns property in her own right. When she dies her property passes on to her children, but that of her husband on his death passes on to his mother's nearest kin.
There are no child marriages in Travancore, such as prevail throughout the rest of India, where there are millions of child widows. This province has less illiteracy than any other state in India. Its people claim they are the most progressive, prosperous and happy in all India.

Study Your Tennis Faults

TIPS THAT WILL IMPROVE YOUR PLAY.

If you wish to improve your tennis, you should think over your strokes and puzzle out for yourself the reasons for your successes and failures.
When you make a winning shot, remember how you played it: the position you were in, the angle of your racket, the "feel" of the ball at the moment of impact, and so on. After a time you will be able to repeat the successful effort almost mechanically, falling into the correct position, and "tuning" your swing to a nicety.
In the same way, a mistake never be dismissed lightly. Discover how the error was made. Then you will be able to set about remedying your worst faults, and by means of intelligent criticisms of your own play you should be successful in eradicating your most obvious mistakes.
In match play you should concentrate upon your strong points, but in practice give chief attention to your weak strokes.

Save Your Strength.

If you are expert at hard forehand driving and can "place" the ball with reasonable accuracy, go up to the net once or twice in order to induce your opponent either to try some high and deep lob or to run in at a short return. Then make for your true position behind the base-line and produce your hard, straight, passing drives as winning strokes.
It is of little use tiring yourself out by sending over your "killing" shots time after time if the player battling against you is in a good position to return the compliment. You will have to use guile and cunning in order to make effective use of your strong point.

Of course, if you are the more experienced performer, you will be safe in keeping to your base-line game altogether, and relying on well-placed drives to win points, but in an even match, or against a stronger opponent, this is too much in the nature of "defensive warfare," as you are simply waiting for your opponent to make mistakes, rather than hoping to win by your own superior play.

Should your specialty be "volleying," you will have to produce some "deep court" shots in order to keep your opponent back and give yourself time to reach the net for your favourite smash.

When playing this type of game, remember to keep opposite the ball, so that the amount of space for a passing shot against you is reduced to a minimum. Play for the corners of the far court in preference to placing the ball along the middle line, and then you will have plenty of room for a winning "smash."

Face That Means Points.

You may find that your opponent is a better tennis exponent in every way than you are, but not nearly so active. In this case, "chop" your returns to the service when you are the striker out, dropping the ball short over the net. Keep to the middle of your own base-line, so that you will always have to move forward in making a stroke. Do not worry much about "length,"

TRINITY

OUR TEMPORAL AND SPIRITUAL ASSETS.

It has always been a great pleasure to me to notice and to broadcast the coming of some person or persons to Trinity, in the best interests of our temporal welfare; meaning as it does the welfare of that department of our individual and collective life. Realizing, however, as I have always done, the truth that our souls are as real as our bodies; that the spiritual life and interests of any community are included in its greatest assets, and that "man does not live by bread alone," I offer no apology for thankfully recognizing and publishing, as I have always done, the coming to us of those persons whose object is, the best interests of our spiritual life and welfare. The person who has just come to us in this respect is The Bishop of Newfoundland. In his sacred office and as the earthly channel he came to us to convey a special gift of the Holy Spirit that God had associated with the Apostolic Rite of the "Laying on of Hands," upon those who have been baptized, and come to the years of discretion.

The Bishop came to us by the express on Monday, May 28th, and began his work in the Parish of Trinity East. At 7.30 p.m. the first service was held in Christ Church, Port Rexton, where a class of 88 was presented by the rector, Rev. E. P. Law, and confirmed in the presence of a congregation that filled this large and beautiful church. On Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock the Service was at St. Silla's Church, English Harbour. Here a large congregation took its part reverently and devoutly in the service, at which 22 confirmed their Baptismal vows, and were confirmed by the gift of the Holy Spirit. At 3 o'clock another Service was held at St. Nicholas' Church, Champney's East. Here again the church was filled with people from Champney East and West, and the 64 candidates for Confirmation were from both settlements, owing to the new church at Champneys West not being ready for service. At 7.30 the last service in this parish was held in St. Andrew's Church, Trinity East. Here the people's part of the Service was rendered in their usual reverent and devotional manner and 45 candidates were presented and confirmed.

On Wednesday the Bishop began his work in the parish of Trinity, by a Service in the Church at Trouty, where 15 candidates were presented by the rector (Rev. C. M. Stickings) for the Apostolic Rite, and received the Gift. The Second Service in this parish was held in St. Paul's Church, Trinity, at 7.30. Here 50 candidates were presented, and through the Laying on of Hands with prayer, received the spiritual blessings of the Sacramental Rite, so necessary and so helpful to the young life of the community. On Thursday the Bishop, accompanied by the rector and Rev. E. P. Law, left Trinity for New Bonaventure. At 3 o'clock the corner stone of the new church was laid (with the special service appointed for that work) in the Name of the Holy and Undivided Trinity. In the evening 62 candidates of the classes of Old and New Bonaventure were presented in the Church at Old Bonaventure; made their vows and received the Blessing. On the following day 15 were confirmed at British Harbour and 22 at Ireland's Eye. The Bishop then went into the Mission of Smith's Sound, in which Rev. W. J. Rowe is the Incumbent. To revert to the service held in the Church at Trinity. In addition to the beauty of it and that of the building in which it was held, it is worthy of notice that the Bishop, who conducted the Service, and his Chaplain (Rev. Canon Lockyer) were born in Trinity, and years ago were boys in the congregation of the same church. Again, the rector, Rev. Chas. Stickings (who assisted at the Service) and Canon Lockyer are brothers-in-law to the Bishop, and hence, any one of the three is a brother-in-law to the other two.

REV. CHARLES M. AND MRS. STICKINGS LEAVE FOR ENGLAND.
Rev. Charles and Mrs. Stickings left Trinity on Tuesday last for St. John's, en route to England, where they will make their permanent home. Before they left Trinity, Mrs. Stickings as the President of the Girls' Friendly Society and of St. Paul's Guild, was entertained by them respectively; presented with an address assuring her of their highest appreciation of, and their gratitude for her unselfish work; expressing regret at their leaving Trinity, and asking her acceptance of parting gifts to remind her of her co-workers for Christ and His Church. Later, a farewell address from the parish was presented by the Churchwardens to Mr. and Mrs. Stickings. This was accompanied by a purse of gold, and embodied the regrets and best wishes of the parishioners. The departure of Mr. Stickings leaves the parish vacant for a while, during which temporary arrangements will be made for spiritual work. God be with you till we meet again.

A FAMILY PEDIGREE OF SIX GENERATIONS.

Mr. John Samuel McGrath of Trinity asked me if I could find anything of his ancestors in the old Church books, and the following is what I have found:

1. Philip MacGrath, of the Kingdom of Ireland, married Hannah Keane, 1748. A son, Philip was born in 1757.
2. Philip MacGrath married Catherine Sooley 1788. A son, John was born in 1796.
3. John MacGrath married Sarah Stone 1826. A son, Philip was born in 1834.
4. Philip MacGrath married Rachel Hookey, 1864. A son, John Samuel was born in 1866.
5. John Samuel MacGrath married Mary Harding. A son, John was born in 1892.
6. John MacGrath, unmarried.

There were other children in each generation; but I give only those through whom the consecutive line was maintained down through the six generations, and again to emphasize the marked carefulness as shown by the old clergy in their entries of official work in the parish.

LOCAL ITEMS.

Mrs. Phyllis Erikson returned to Trinity from St. John's last week to recuperate after an attack of flu. Trinity and home will do the trick.

Mr. Malcom Jenkins of Bonne Bay, spent a week with parents and friends at Trinity. Glad to see you Mack.

The annual liming of fences and other properties in Trinity has begun, and the town is looking cleaner already. Keep it up.

Mr. Samuel Grant has decided to go out of the motor car business, and is asking for tenders for the purchase of cars, etc.

Mr. Grant has repaired and painted the exterior of his dwelling house, and it looks all the better for it. No person can afford not to paint his house.

Mr. Fred Coleman of Green Island Cove has brought his family to Trinity. They will live in the house on the Ash property, that now belongs to Mrs. Jessie Maitland, St. John's. There are not many vacant houses in Trinity, though the town has never been so dull as it is to-day.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Hayter, and Mrs. Abel Rowe left on Tuesday for Toronto, where they will make their home for the future.

Capt. Robert Fowling is having his dwelling house freshly painted. His fine property occupies the most commanding position in Trinity, and we are glad that the Captain realizes what this means from a scenic point of view, and keeps the property "ship-shape" all the time.

There was laid to rest on Saturday last the body of Mrs. Robert Miller, Trinity East, aged 81 years. She was familiarly and affectionately known to us fifty years ago as Chrissy Cook. She was a daughter of Phillip and Marie Cook who live "around the point," and who were well known citizens of 100 years ago. May they all rest in peace.

The four sons of the late Abel Rowe have erected a neat and Christian-like headstone at their father's grave in St. Paul's Cemetery.

Whilst putting the old headstones upright in the church yard, Trinity, we dug up one dated 1744 (the oldest in the yard). The lettering of the inscription is well cut; and yet, in the following epitaph the first letters of the lines, and the pronoun "I" are in small letters in stead of capitals, as follows:

"I here lie in my soft bed of dust, waiting ye resurrection of ye just." It is so seldom that such an omission of capital letters is found on a headstone, and especially on one where the lettering is so well done, so I am at a loss to understand the reason why. What do you think.

Mr. MacKenzie Brown, M.H.A., representing the District of Twilliate, spent the week-end in Trinity. Glad to see him.

Trinity was deeply pained on Saturday last to hear of the death of Edith White at St. John's. Edith came to live at the Rectory in Trinity eight years ago, when her father died. Increasing years increased the affection that everybody in Trinity had for her. She went to St. John's last fall to spend the winter with her sister, and stepmother (Mrs. White at the Church of England Orphanage). Whilst there she was attracted by the work of professional nursing. She applied to be trained at St. Mary's Hospital, and was accepted as a probationer. The work fascinated her, and her letters to her aunt and others in Trinity were full of expressions of happiness in, and love for the work, for which, in some ways, she seemed to be fitted. Those of us, however, who knew her best, followed her with hopes mixed with fears, knowing how fundamentally frail she was; and we were not greatly surprised to hear she had succumbed to the inevitable requirements of a vocation that she had fallen in love with. Grant her Lord with this life finished. Rest in Paradise with Thee.

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION RE GEORGE W. PITTMAN.

In the outline history of the descendants of William and Ann Pittman, who came to Trinity from Abbotsbury, England, about 1789, I mentioned the fact that their sixth child, George White Pittman, was a seaman on the brig Hannah in 1818, and that he died and was buried in Carbonear. In a letter just received from Rev. W. B. Bugden of Carbonear, I have the additional information: "Yesterday we were cleaning up our cemetery here and we came across a headstone with the following inscription:

To the Memory of George W. Pittman—A Native of Trinity—Who departed this life 19th day of August, 1822. Aged 32 Years.

In behalf of myself and the relatives of Mr. Pittman I thank Rev. W. B. Bugden for sending me the above definite information re George White Pittman.

We expect a visit from His Excellency the Governor on Thursday, the 14th inst.

The many friends of Mrs. Jenkins will regret to hear that she is very ill.

The marriage of John Morris and Amy Tavernor took place at St. Paul's Church.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Grant left by the Neptune for Blanc Sablon.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

A. B. Grand Falls—Thanks for letter to which I will reply more fully later. The Bugdens of Trinity and English Harbour came from Christ Church, Hants, England. The following entries embody the first mention of the name in the old church registers:

"1770, May 7th, Married—John Bugden, Jr. of Christ Church, Hants, and Sarah Bestone, English Harbor."

"1772, October 17th, Married—William Bugden, planter (Trinity) and Mady Verge, daughter of the Widow Verge."

Those two men—John and William Bugden—evidently were amongst the progenitors of the Bugdens of English Harbour and Trinity.

J. C.—The clerk of old St. Paul's Church, Trinity, in 1755 was Thomas Clifford. On the 50-leaf of the old register is the following:—"Register belonging to the Church here in this Harbor of Trinity. In care of me, Thomas Clifford, 1776."

L. P., New Perille—Thank you for the old and interesting documents. I shall refer to them later, and in the meantime I shall take good care of them.

W. S.—Yes, Bishop White, Canon Lockyer, and Rev. Charles M. Stickings are brothers-in-law; Canon Lockyer and Rev. Charles Stickings having each married a sister of Bishop White.

S. B.—Don't worry. I have a copy (for private reference) of all my week-end articles to Evening Telegram. They number one hundred and twenty-five, and probably they will be interesting a hundred years to come.

Confessions of a "Crime Merchant."

SOME AMAZING INGREDIENTS THAT GO TO MAKE UP THE DAILY LIFE OF A NEWSPAPER CRIME-WRITER.

If variety be the spice of life, then I may claim that the existence I lead is full of spice to overflowing.

For my calling is that of a descriptive writer on a famous newspaper. Mine is the task to give to the world a moving picture of the great cases which, from time to time, come before the courts of law, both criminal and civil. To me sensational crime, grim tragedies, and the plumbing of human emotions to the very depth constitute "the daily round; the common task."

Take a specimen day, not long ago. At eleven o'clock in the morning I saw a notorious trafficker in cocaine sentenced to six months' hard labour at Bow Street Police Court, London. At twelve I was at the hearing of the famous Russell case in the Divorce Court. At three-fifteen I heard a man sentenced to death at the Old Bailey. At four I was back in the Divorce Court. At seven I was at Epsom preparing for a famous racehorse trainer to write his turf reminiscences. And at nine-thirty I was seated in a stall at the Palladium. At the witching hour of midnight I was sound asleep. Not a bad series of events to crowd into one day!

Just for curiosity I kept a note of the number of different beds I slept in last year. That number was the astounding one of 246. Irregular meals, late hours, travelling thousands of miles in trains during a year, all mean "Our Special Correspondent" must be possessed of an iron constitution.

The successful securing of the story, as it is termed in newspaperland, becomes a sort of religion. Everything must bow to it. Be hungry, thirsty, cold, worn out, miserable, but get the story into Fleet Street at all costs and in time to catch the edition. Until the magic words "end message" have been written, telephoned, or telegraphed, personal feelings must be swept aside, kept under, trampled ruthlessly down.

Always ready packed in the office must be the travelling bag of "Our Special Correspondent." Having a quiet hand at bridge in the club off Fleet Street at three o'clock, he may be in the train starting a three hundred miles journey at four. He may be back in two days; he may be away two weeks. All depends on the story and its development.

A good-sized volume would be required to hold stories of the many experiences of a unique character which have befallen me during my life as a "special." I have space for only two.

Some years ago I went to live among the denizens of the netherworld of crime in the East End for the purpose of writing a series of articles on this evil but fascinating phase of life.

One night in a notorious club which subsequently figured largely in the annals of East End crime I got into conversation with a German, who was a far-famed receiver of stolen property.

I made, quite inadvertently, an incautious remark concerning "fences," and no sooner were the words out of my mouth than this particular member of the fraternity struck me a blow on the jaw which seemed to set every tooth in my head rattling.

Although a "Special," I am but human, and I promptly hit him back. In an instant the drink-laden atmosphere was thick with curses. The whole place was pandemonium. There was little room to move. Men were fighting each other for no apparent reason, and I was getting a fair share of the blows.

Suddenly a well modulated voice called out a sharp command in a tongue I did not understand. The effect was electrical. Uprighted hands were stayed almost in the act of striking. A silence that was almost eerie fell over the place that a second or so before had been a seething cauldron of maddened men.

The owner of the voice came forward. "Let me escort you safely outside, sir," he said with the bow of a courtier.

I gladly accepted the offer, and hurried away—but not before I had the man's face fixed firmly in my memory during a brief moment in which he was majestically waving aside my protestations of gratitude.

The next time I saw my rescuer he was in the dock. His name was Stingo Morrison, and he was sentenced to death (but afterwards reprieved) for the murder of Leon Beron at Clapham Common.

Calling at the house of a man I wanted to interview at Paddington Green, I was told by the wife that her husband had gone to the local debating society a few hundred yards away. Not wishing to miss my man, I went there and so by chance listened to a good-looking, well-spoken young man delivering an address on subtle poisons.

The subject was one that fascinated me. I stayed to the end. And not until much later did I know that the eloquent speaker on subtle poisons was none other than Arthur Deveron, the head who subsequently poi-

GREAT WINDFALL FOR THE NATIONAL GALLERY.

Great paintings which are world-famous will shortly come into the possession of the National Gallery. They were the property of Mrs. Mond, widow of Dr. Ludwig Mond, F.R.S., and mother of Sir Alfred Mond, M.P., who has just died at her residence in Avenue Road, Regent's Park. Dr. Ludwig Mond died in 1916. His will provided that his pictures should remain with Mrs. Mond during her life, and on her death 66 of them, named in a list, should be offered to the National Gallery. If the trustees of the National Gallery select any of the 66 they must, under the will, select at least four-fourths of them, but they may make up three-fourths by selecting any pictures from the remainder of the Mond collection. The list of 66 includes—

The crucifixion—Raphael.
Madonna and Child—Titian.
Portrait of Pietro Aradino—Titian.
Madonna and Child—Gentile Bellini.
Pieta—Giovanni Bellini.
Large Holy Family—Fra Bartolomeo.
Heads of two Angels—Correggio.
Head of an Angel—Correggio.
Flora—Palma Vecchio.
War Vessels—Tintoretto.

Some of the pictures in the list are by Italian painters who are not yet represented in the National Gallery. The list does not include Mantegna's "Holy Family," which is in the Mond collection, but it may be selected by the National Gallery trustees. Raphael's "Crucifixion" is the dominating

The Romance of the Antarctic.

At half-past three in the morning of January 6th, 1922, in the cabin of the tiny Quest, which was lying at anchor off Grytviken, a whaling station of South Georgia, Sir Ernest Shackleton died in an attack of angina pectoris following an influenza. Thus, with something of an anti-climax, the curtain fell on one of the most exciting lives of our time. It was a profoundly disappointing close of a career whose chief characteristic was, indeed, disappointment. Shackleton had written long previously, that he seemed fated to "strive for the things that are out of reach." It is literally the case that all his expeditions failed of their professed object. But each was a glorious failure. Not Scott himself, who discovered the South Pole (1912), and gave his life at the moment of triumph, looms so gallant a figure of romance as Shackleton—who had to abandon the struggle when only 87 geographical miles distant from this consummation of his dearest hopes.

It was in 1908 that Shackleton, after incredible sufferings, was compelled to turn back from his dash to the South Pole. But what mysterious urge was it that, in later years, drove him to taste again of those agonies of the Antarctic although the Pole had been reached in the meantime by his rivals? As I turn the pages of Dr. R. H. Mill's "The Life of Sir Ernest Shackleton" (Heinemann, 21s. 6d.), I find myself asking this question in bewilderment. It is an unanswerable question. The psychology of the born explorer is beyond the comprehension of the stay-at-home. Who, for the love of it, could seek this kind of thing?

One or another was now always suffering from that intense inflammation of the eyes euphemistically termed "snow blindness," and one day in a fog they blindly crossed a tremendously deep crevasse without seeing it, though the snow bridge which carried them was the only narrow crossing place in its whole length. Hunger was constant. "We always dream of something to eat when asleep. . . . My general dream is that fine, three-cornered tart is flying past me upstairs, but I never seem able to stop them. Billy dreams that he is cutting huge sandwiches, for somebody else always. The captain—lucky man—thinks he is eating stuff, but the joy only lasts in the dream, for he is just as hungry when he wakes up."

This is from a description not of Shackleton's last Antarctic trip but of his first—the one he made with Scott in the Discovery. Shackleton might have remained at home, in comfort, after these experiences. He took to journalism and became sub-editor of the Royal Magazine; then he obtained the secretaryship of the Royal Scottish Geographical Society, and, having married, lived very happily in Edinburgh. He stood—unsuccessfully—for Parliament. He dabbled in business enterprises. All manner of doors were opening to him. But that strange lure, the lure of the Far South, impelled him to leave home, wife, and children and vanish once more into the wastes of snow and ice to a realm with "cold so extreme that the paraffin used for heating the cooker was of the consistency of cream," and across a continent with scenery as melodramatic as a nightmare.

Before him rose great bare mountains with prodigious cliffs falling sheer for thousands of feet to a stupendous glacier which descended between them from a high snowfield far to the south and lay like a road to the Pole, smooth and straight and gently sloping. Distance made nothing of details of structure which were soon to assume gigantic proportions.

On the return journey, when the attempt to reach the Pole had failed, an incident occurred which shows us how it was that Shackleton won the worship of all who worked for him—Wild, who had been the first to be stricken with dysentery, was unable to eat the horse-flesh, and suffered horribly from hunger. At breakfast-time a biscuit was served out to each, which could be eaten at the time or kept till later in the day. On 31st January Wild finished his at once, and as he was starting on the march he found Shackleton's hand slipping a biscuit into his pocket. "What's that, Boss?" he asked, and the answer was, "Your need is greater than mine." He resisted, but Shackleton was irresistible and fought in silence with his hunger, for he knew his friend was more hardy put to it than himself. The other two men never knew of the incident. No one could say that Shackleton was acting the part of Sid Philip Sidney for his own glory, for until now the facts were written only in Wild's private diary. There he says, "I privately forced upon me his one breakfast biscuit and would have given me another tonight had I allowed him. I do not suppose anyone else in the world can thoroughly realize how much generosity and sympathy was shown by this; I do, and by God I shall never forget it." He never did, as the record of their great friendship abundantly history—the escape to Elephant Is- proves.

"The wreck of the Endurance was the wreck of all Shackleton's dreams of a second polar triumph," writes his biography, but the end of the Endurance was only the beginning of one of the finest episodes in maritime land and the voyage in the James, a boat only twenty-two feet long, over 800 miles of tempestuous sea to South Georgia.

Life on the James Caird can hardly be described, and it cannot even be imagined by those who have seen the huge waves of the Southern Ocean only from the deck of a liner. Those on board the little craft were already exhausted with the dreadful year of winter they had come through, their clothes were worn and battered, their skin flayed at every joint with the horrible sea-blisters, which salt water, cold, and the friction of rough cloth produce.

They could not stand up, except for a moment or so, holding on to the mast or stays; they could not lie down except on the rough angles of the ballast and the cases under the dripping canvas "deck"; they could not even sit except in the open well of the stern, where the steersman on his four-hours' turn at the helm was often so cramped that he could not unbend his knees or lift his hands when relieved. Cooking was, sometimes possible, one man holding the Primus lamp, two squatting, one on each side, holding the cooking pot and lifting it clear when the worst fumes of the distracted boat threatened disaster.

Down in the hollow of the waves the little boat would lie a while, shut into an illusive calm between two hills of water, from the summits of which the spume flew far overhead; a moment later she would rise on the crest and be flung forward by the shrieking wind in a smother of spray, rushing down into the next still hollow only to be hurled again into the tempest. The sea-birds kept, then company, little "Cape pigeons" which Shackleton could not shoot (he had his double-barrelled gun with him) because they looked so friendly. Great albatrosses, whose span of wing almost equalled the length of the little boat, swooped so low over it that the expression of impersonal interest in their hard, bright eyes could be seen, and it aroused a feeling akin to that of the Ancient Mariner after he fired the fatal shot, so they, too, passed immune.

A Lonely Grave.

The conclusion of that epic story is known to all. But the mystery remains as to why Shackleton yet again went south. He was, as his first skipper said of him when, fresh from school, he went to sea as an apprentice, "the most pig-headed, obstinate boy I have ever come across"; and this obstinacy remained with him to the last and took him to a lonely grave on a barren island near the rim land assembled to do honour to of the Antarctic Circle. On March 2nd, 1922, a memorial service was held in St. Paul's, where the highest in the Shackleton the obstinate. Old comrades who had sailed with him on various expeditions came from far, and the moving and magnificent service concluded with the sounding of the "Last Post," but "the minds of many present were away in the grander scene at South Georgia under the dome of heaven, with the wash of the waves and the wailing of the sea-birds as the most plaintive of all funeral music."

Lady Shackleton was right when she decided that her husband's burial should take place not in England but under the shadow of those mountains in South Georgia which he had

CATCHES ARE REPORTED AT L'ARDOISE AND LOUISBURG.

Salmon have recently struck in all along the coast from L'Ardoise to Louisburg. Fair catches have been made off the former port, but nothing much has been done at the historic town. Patches of drift ice still hover off the shores here, with the result fishermen are chary of setting their nets, fearful of losing them. A ready market in Boston is available for shipments of these fish.

Fishermen near Margaree report a strange happening a short time ago. They were setting a trap, and finished work for the night after assisting the leader to the shore. In the morning they found over a hundred haddock meshed in the twine.

There are 4 grades of roofing felt selling in Newfoundland, "BARRETT'S" is guaranteed the highest grade.

"Barrett's" 1, 2 and 3-ply felts have been in use in Newfoundland for more than 50 years.

The best roof known in America is a "Barrett" roof, "Barrett's" felt ONLY is used in putting on a "Barrett" Roof. Ask any Architect.

"Barrett" 1, 2 and 3-ply felts are really made of felt saturated with genuine coal tar—the 2 and 3-ply felts have a layer of coal tar pitch between each ply.

"Barrett's" felts are made to give good wear, therefore they cost more than roofings made of paper saturated with diluted asphalt.

If you use "Barrett's" felt instead of common felt, a new roof covering for your house may cost you $2.00 more for the whole roof.

Roofs covered with "Barrett's" felt are secure, the extra cost of one or two dollars (for the entire roof) is money well spent.

Which felt do you intend to use?

Architects, Builders and Contractors prefer "Barrett's" Felt.

Gliding Attempted Fifty Years Ago.

The majority of people are of the opinion that the "gliding" man has achieved something new. This is not altogether correct, however, as the following interesting letter in the London Times, from David Draper, of Rio de Janeiro, will show:
"Goodman Household was the son of one of the settlers who landed from the wreck of the Minerva, which went ashore on the Fountain Rocks at Durban.
"Being of an ingenious turn of mind, he became a self-taught mechanical engineer, and went in for constructing machinery in the days when skilled men were scarce in the infant colony of Natal.
"While watching the flight of the large vultures (assavogels), he came to the conclusion that it was possible to imitate them, if he could succeed in designing a machine capable of supporting his weight in the air. From then on, the flying denizens of the air had a very bad time.
"Not content with confining his studies of the flight of birds to the vulture only, he included all manner of flying animals, bats, and so on. Weighing these carefully, and measuring the wing-area of each victim, he succeeded in arriving at a basis of calculation which led him to believe that flight without motive power was possible, provided he could obtain the necessary material for constructing the wings.
"These calculations he placed before the celebrated mathematician, Dr. Coleso, at that time resident Bishop of Natal, who gave his opinion that Household's figures were correct. To obtain the material required, a special quality of densely woven silk was imported from Switzerland and specially designed steel tubes from England.
"With these he constructed a large

New Diet for Cattle.

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., May 30.—The feeding of western sheep and cattle on the screenings from the big elevators at the head of the lakes has been carried on successfully during the past winter. They are brought here from the prairie provinces and finished for shipment to eastern markets. The plan of feeding western sheep on the screenings here was inaugurated by R. C. Harvey, an Alberta sheep rancher, two years ago. In 1921 he wintered some 6,000 sheep. The railways granted him a through rate to eastern Canadian points with stop-over privileges. The sheep were fed on a diet consisting of screenings, mixed with an allowance of hay. After being fed for the winter months on this concentrated ration, the animals showed a very profitable increase and were reloaded for eastern markets. About half the output was sold in Toronto and the remainder exported to United States markets. Last winter Mr. Harvey wintered and fed over ten thousand sheep, the experimental stage is over, and a saving of thousands of dollars annually is expected to result from this new scheme. Fattening of cattle on the elevator screenings was tried out during the past winter with gratifying results. There is practically an inexhaustible supply of the screenings at the head of the lakes, and the wintering of cattle, as well as sheep, will probably be carried on extensively next winter. There is only one drawback and that is the scarcity of hay, but this is being investigated by municipal and other city organizations with a view to relieving the situation, and making Fort William a profitable centre for winter feeding of western stock.

Pushed Over Precipice.

"With the assistance of a half-dozen natives the material was carried from the homestead to the hill-top—a moonlight night having been chosen—and assembled there. The operator took his seat, and ordered the natives to push the machine over the precipice.
"They were by no means inclined to obey orders, as they expected that they would be punished if their master was killed, but he succeeded in persuading them, and finally he found himself in the air, over a valley at least one thousand feet deep.
"The machine had been so balanced that, by altering the position of his body slightly, he could tip or lower the front end, and by this means he

Wedding Bells.

BAIRD-CODNER.
On Wednesday, the 6th inst., a quiet but pretty wedding took place at St. Joseph's Church, the contracting parties being Miss Jennie Codner, of Torbay, and Mr. John Baird, member of the Postal staff. The marriage ceremony was performed by the Rev. Fr. Pippy. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Rosie Codner, while Mr. Gerald Baird, brother of the groom, acted as best man. A large number of friends were present and congratulated the young couple on their happy union. After the ceremony the wedding party motored to the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. Codner, Torbay, parents of the bride, where the wedding supper was partaken of. Next morning the happy couple left by train for Argentina where they will in future reside. The presents received were numerous and costly, testifying to the esteem in which the young couple are held.
