Nova Scotia's Origin

(“Ivanhoe” in Winnipeg Telegram.)
How came our eastern sister Province by the Latin name Nova Scotia? Few people in or out of the Maritime Province could answer that question. But if they will read the “Supplement to the History of the County of Annapolis” by that accomplished and venerable antiquarian and historian, Dr. A. W. Savary (William Briggs, Toronto) they will learn, as I did, that Nova Scotia was originally intended to be as great a territory as New England. When Sir William Alexander, a Scottish knight who burned with zeal for the glory of his native land, obtained a charter from James I, empowering him to found a new colony in America, the name “Nova Scotia” appeared in it for the first time. “I showed them,” said Sir William, “that my countrymen would never adventure on such an enterprise unless it were that as there was a New France, a New Spain and a New England, they might likewise have a New Scotland.” In the present year of grace a Government grant of 160 acres of land is considered to be sufficient, but when this ambitious knight asked King James for a homestead in Nova Scotia the indulgent monarch gave him a kingdom. His territory included all of that is now Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, part of the State of Maine and part of the Province of Quebec. The charter issued in 1621 really made him hereditary king over the colony of Nova Scotia.

The charter having been obtained and the king's blessings along with it, the next trick was to explore his new possession. The first expedition failed to find Nova Scotia at all; the second explored the southern and western coasts. The cost of this survey party was £6,000, a dead loss for Sir William, who, like a canny Scot, thought the king ought to be approached for a subvention. He had such a pull with James that the king gave him a warrant on the treasury for the whole amount. But, alas, the Stuart treasury was usually empty and the King of Nova Scotia was never paid for his first losses!

Sir William, however, was not to be crushed by any reverses. He was a born booster. If he were living in Canada at the present time he would probably be publicity man in some western city. In 1624, he was a very heavy plunger in the land business and found it necessary to get out a fine line of advertising. He published a pamphlet in that year, which is probably the earliest literature in the land business in this country. It is entitled “An Encouragement to Colonies” and is not unlike some of the full page advertisements of these modern days. “Where,” he asks the buying, colonizing, land-hungry British nobles, “was ever ambition baited with greater hopes than here, or wherever had virtue so large a field to reap the fruits of glory, since any man who doth go thither of good quality, able at first to transport hundred persons with him furnished with things necessary, shall have as much bounds as may serve for a gentleman whereupon he may build a town of his own, giving it what name he will, and being the first founder of a new estate, which a pleasing industry may quickly bring to a perfection, may leave a fine inheritance to his posterity who shall claim unto him as the author of their nobility there, rather than to any of his ancestors who had preceded him though never so nobly born elsewhere. But even this elegant appeal failed to lure any of the gay young noblemen from the court of James I. But Sir William Alexander still had the king's ear and used His Majesty to put through another scheme. He induced the king to create a new order of nobility called “Baronet of Nova Scotia.” The way to become a baronet was to undertake to send so many settlers to Nova Scotia to people a barony. Each barony was to compose a third of a county, and was to be three miles long on the coast and to extend ten miles into the interior, to be divided into six parishes and to contain 6,000 acres of land. Each baronet was also to receive 10,000 acres besides the 6,000 belonging to his barony. In return for these concessions each baronet was to supply six armed men for two years towards the defence of the colony and was to pay 1,000 marks to help recoup Sir William for past expenses.

As a result of this skilful advertising, Sir William Alexander's son William sailed for Nova Scotia in 1628 with a fleet of four vessels containing seventy men and two women. They reached Port Royal in safety and the long and honorable history of Nova Scotia began. Many of the interesting details of this history, especially of the earlier years, may be found in Dr. Savary's careful volumes.

ELECTION OF A PERMANENT PRESIDENT

Political Factions in China Have Come to an Understanding on Issues.

Washington, Oct. 1.—The American Legation at Peking cabled the State Department yesterday that the Government and Opposition parties of the new Chinese Republic, which have been deadlocked for a long time over the question of the Presidential succession, have practically agreed to the immediate election of a president without awaiting the adoption of a new constitution. A method of procedure is now being arranged, and the election of Yuan Shi Kai as permanent president is expected to take place in time for the first inauguration of a regularly elected Chinese president to be held October 10, the first anniversary of the uprising at Wu Chang, which resulted in the overthrow of the Manchu dynasty.

SERIOUS DISTURBANCE.
While these things are going on in Peking, some serious disturbances are threatened on the boundary between China and Mongolia. The legation reports that 4,000 mounted Mongols with twenty machine guns are ten miles north of Kalgan, a city in the province of Chihli, only one hundred and twenty-five miles northwest of Peking. A large force of Chinese troops is at Kalgan, and it is believed that an engagement is imminent.

Friction is developing between various provinces, and the American consul at Chung King has telegraphed that fighting is likely to occur there at any moment.

Thaw films have been forbidden to be shown in all moving picture shows in Boston, and they should be everywhere else.

Many Changes in Staff at Acadia

New Library Under Construction on the University Grounds.

Wolfville, Oct. 1.—Today Acadia University opened its seventy-sixth college year with every promise of success. There are several new Chairs and new Professors installed. The following are the new appointments: Dr. Jones has resigned and become Professor Emeritus. Dr. A. F. Herrmann and Dr. J. P. Rice resigned the Chairs of German and French respectively.

G. B. Waldrop is to be Instructor in Greek, John F. Siewers, M. A., will be Professor of German, and G. Cavitchia, Professor of French. Dr. Tutts who for so many years has so ably carried on the work in History and Political Economy will now devote all his time to History, and A. B. Balcom, M. A., will take up the work in Economic Science. Prof. Haycock who has been carrying on the work in Chemistry and Geology since his first appointment, now takes up the work in Geology and J. A. Ambler, Ph. D., becomes Professor of Chemistry. Miss J. S. Haley, M. A., S. B., University Librarian, becomes Instructor in Library Science, and Ivan S. Nowlan, B. A., B. Th., becomes Instructor in Education. In addition to the Laboratory Assistant in Physics and one in Chemistry there has been added this year a Laboratory Assistant in Biology.

The equipment has increased considerably. At present there is under construction a library. It is to be of stone with a concrete foundation. The excavation is finished and the concrete mixer is at work. When finished it will hold about 125,000 volumes. James Reid, of Yarmouth, has the contract. On the College farm a large barn has been built which contains among other things a fine grade herd of fifteen head of cattle, all tested for tuberculosis. This herd supplies all the Institutions with milk and butter.

The Academy and Seminary have each been open a month. They have now settled down to their work. Both Dr. Archibald and Dr. DeWolfe, the principals, report a greatly increased attendance. Students at both institutions have been compelled to board outside, as both are filled to their utmost capacity.

About fifteen of the engineers attended the summer surveying class, ten in June, and five in September. The class was very successful and a great deal of practical knowledge was gained.

J. G. McKinnon is captain of the football team. Although many of the old team are not back, he is very sanguine and confident that the successes of last year will be repeated with even greater success.

ANOTHER MEDICAL TRIUMPH

(New York Times.)

Every mother and father of young children will bear with something more than interest the statement made by Dr. J. B. Murphy, of Chicago, that he brings back from Europe the news that scarlet fever can be freed of contagiousness. Scarlet fever is a somewhat mysterious, as well as a most terrible, malady, for though there is every reason to believe that it is of bacterial origin, its germ has never been isolated. Not only are its victims in serious danger of death from its direct consequences, but, if they survive these, only too often they suffer through life from grave physical or mental incapacities. It numbers among the most contagious of the fevers, and every case of it is therefore a public danger. The spreading of the disease is what Dr. Murphy says can be stopped, and by the very simple expedient of daily inunctions with oil of eucalyptus. This is a well-known germicide of the milder sort, and would hardly be expected to be efficient for the purpose, but the question is one of fact, not of expectation. If it meets the pragmatic test—if it works, that is, scarlet fever cured soon to be conquered, not by cure, but by prevention, which is vastly better.

The Provincial Sunday School Convention

The twenty-ninth annual Convention of the Nova Scotia Sunday School Association will be held this year in the busy town of Amherst, beginning on Wednesday, 22nd, and closing Friday night, 24th. St. Stephen's Presbyterian church has been chosen as the Convention church.

Preceding the Convention, there will be held on Wednesday morning and afternoon, a Pastor's Conference, for which a strong programme has been arranged. The main topic to be considered at this Conference will be “The Problem of the Teen Age.” Indeed, throughout the main Convention as well this will doubtless be the prominent theme. The Association is endeavoring through the medium of its Secondary Division, to solve the problem of holding the boys and girls in the Sunday Schools and for the church.

The International Sunday School Association will be represented by Rev. Franklin McElfresh, D. D., who occupies the position of Superintendent of the International Department of Sunday School Education. Dr. McElfresh is recognized as one of the Sunday School leaders of the continent and is no stranger to the Sunday School workers in Nova Scotia; having been in attendance at the Middle-ton Convention in 1911.

A strong and comprehensive programme has been prepared for the Convention, including among its speakers, men who are prominent in the Universities of the Maritime Provinces and in the active work of the church and the educational work of the day.

This will be a unique opportunity to all who are interested in the great work of the Sunday School and the church.

ANIMALS OF CANADA.

Northern Canada is still teeming with animal life. From some notes in the United Empire we learn that the musk ox still lingers among the Arctic fastnesses of the far north. The polar bear and the walrus are still comparatively common on the Alaskan and Arctic shores. Geese, ducks, curlews and a host of birds are yet to be found in the comparative isolation of their hidden sanctuaries. But year by year these nobler forms of animal life are becoming more and more open to the attacks of irresponsible individuals who have no care for the future, and who still believe that this wealth of animal life is worth preservation.

New Steamer on Yarmouth Route

The Governor Cobb Arrived With Large Passenger List.

Yarmouth, Oct. 3.—The steamer Governor Cobb, of the Eastern Steamship Company, arrived here this morning on her first trip for the Boston and Yarmouth Steamship Company, docking shortly after eight o'clock. The trip over was somewhat rough but she brought a fairly large passenger list comfortably. This is the second new steamer to appear on this route since spring, and too much praise can hardly be given to the new steamship company for its endeavor to promote the interests of this port. The Governor Cobb is a comparatively new boat, is over three hundred feet long with three decks, has triple screws and is fitted with turbine engines, is of 1,566 tons burden, and carries ninety men.

Captain W. H. Allan is in command, with Captain Alpin Sims, of this port as navigating officer and pilot. She has one hundred and sixty staterooms of the inter-locking type, making each room an outside one, and is this way light and airy. She accommodates about seven hundred and fifty passengers and is handsomely fitted throughout, the appointments of the spacious saloons being the best seen in this port yet. The “Governor Cobb” will make four trips to this port this fall, helping to complete the four trips per week schedule. Certainly a new era in passenger travel to this port has been opened.

Windsor, October 5.—Pumping three miles overlaid in a railroad trolley car to save three drowning men, Charles Fuller ended a race with death on the night darkened waters of the Avon river yesterday, rescued two but failed to reach the third man before he sank of exhaustion.

For two and a half hours the captain and two of the crew of the tugboat Chester, clung to the capsized hull of a row boat that was fast being carried out to sea by a current so strong that to attempt swimming ashore was useless. As the men were whirled about in the throes of a stormy sea, they were sighted miles away by Charles Fuller, who began his long struggle of rescue.

John Gilbert Thompson, coolie of the Chester, perished before help arrived; Captain Wesley Munroe and James Beech escaped by Fuller's efforts of Avonport. All three belong to Windsor, and Thompson was forty one years old.

They were aboard the tugboat Chester, ready to tow a barge, when the coolie suggested going ashore for some apples. They rowed away in a small boat and were nearing the wharf at Avonport, when Thompson slipped in trying to reach the painter. He fell to one side and the boat overturned, the occupants being precipitated into the stream. The three men got a grip on the craft, Thompson taking the middle position and thus they drifted out into the bay. The tide was too strong to swim. Persons ashore saw their plight, but no boat was available to essay a rescue.

One man, however, started in pursuit of the rapidly drifting row boat. Charles Fuller procured a trolley with great trouble and set out for Horton wharf about three miles distant. There he secured a boat and as night fell, his craft rode to the rescue. The three helpless men could not be seen in the darkness. Finally a cry was heard coming from Captain Munroe, and the overturned boat was located.

In the meantime, however, the choppy seas tossed the boat about, turning it over and over. Each time the three strugglers lost their hold but managed to swim back again. Thompson, numbed by the battle in icy waters, was unable to cling longer and when a wave dashed against the boat, he gave up, shortly before his companions were removed by Fuller. For his heroic efforts, Charles Fuller may receive a medal from the Royal Life Saving Society, as an application is to be registered in his favor.

Nova Scotian Immense Bank Fishing Fleet

(Halifax Herald)

Over one hundred and fifty Nova Scotian vessels are engaged in the deep sea fisheries this season, which means an increase of four hundred men and $250,000 capital. There are 30,000 people in the province directly dependent upon this pelagic industry. This livelihood of thousands of others are affected by the circulation of money resultant from the prosecution of the fisheries, and among its adjuncts are cold storage plants, shipyards, cooperage shops, boat shops and general outfitters.

The port of Halifax is the clearing house of the fisheries and one-half of the total value of all fish handled in the province passes through its customs house. The figures for 1911 relating to the banking fleet as distinct from that which operates off shore, shows a number of vessels engaged, 133; Lunenburg sends out 124 of these, Shelburne County three, and Richmond County six. Averaging their cost at $11,000 (initial cost complete, with outfit), there is a total of $1,463,000 invested in that branch alone. The 1911 catch of these vessels amounted to 225,000 quintals, valued at $1,500,000.

Each year is witnessing improvements in the fleets, in equipment, methods of fishing and increased facilities for handling the production. A greater number of boats are equipped with engines. Prior to 1905 there was not one modern cold storage plant in the province. Today there are four and one of the largest of these intends doubling its output within the next few years. The industry now employs 150 to 200 men.

EARTHQUAKES AT PANAMA.

Buildings Shaken and People Tumbled out of Beds.

Panama, October 2.—Two earthquakes of an intensity much more severe than any disturbances since the Americans took possession of the Canal zone occurred late last night. They were felt from Panama City to Colon.

The first shock was slight and was quickly followed by one of longer duration which shook the buildings to their foundations. The church bells were set to ringing, doors were thrown wide open, and the residents were brought tumbling out of their beds.

The first movements lasted about five seconds. It occurred about 11:20 o'clock. The second movement was of ten seconds duration. The people at midnight were gathered in the streets. The Jamaicans, who went through the disaster at Kingston, and the Italians, who have had similar experiences in their home country, were particularly alarmed.

According to the seismograph there were two slighter shocks, but these were practically unnoticed by the people. The general movement appeared to be from west to east. Those who are familiar with earthquakes said that the movement was more of an upheaval than a vibration from side to side.

There has been no severe damage to buildings, and no damage to the Canal is so far reported.

Liners Will Make Halifax Terminal Winter Port

Transportation Men Estimate That Halifax and the Intercolonial Will Benefit to the Extent of a Million Dollars by Decision of the Steamship Lines to Make This Port Their Terminus.

(The Morning Chronicle)

Montreal, Oct. 2.—Mr. G. M. Bosworth, vice-president of the C. P. R., with special charge of the steamship business, tonight confirmed the report that the Empresses and the new Allan liners Alsatian and Calgarina will make Halifax their terminal port during the coming winter. The reason for the sudden change of plans after the counter announcement had been made, was, he said, that the C. P. R. was able to complete arrangements for passengers and freight services over the Intercolonial from St. John to Halifax.

OFFICIALLY ANNOUNCED.

The C. P. R. Atlantic liners, Empress of Britain and Empress of Ireland, will sail to and from Halifax direct throughout the coming winter, according to an official statement handed out at the company's steamship offices here today. The call at St. John, which has been customary with the Empress boats during previous years, will, therefore, be eliminated. The first sailings made under the new arrangement will be those of the Empress of Ireland from Liverpool on November 29, and from Halifax on December 13. The Empress boats will await the arrival on Saturdays on which they sail from Halifax for the special trade which will leave Montreal with passengers on the previous day. The remainder of the C. P. R. Atlantic fleet will continue to sail to and from St. John direct, as usual.

WILL BENEFIT THE FISHERMEN.

Change in Schedule of Yarmouth Steamers Well Received.

(Morning Chronicle, Oct. 4.)

That the anticipated change in the sailing of the steamers between Yarmouth and Boston from Saturday to Friday so as to enable South Shore lobsters to arrive in Boston on Saturday instead of Sunday, will be of the greatest benefit to the fishermen of the North Shore is the opinion of M. H. Nickerson, who was in the City yesterday.

Mr. Nickerson was one of the first to suggest this change and for a long time has championed the cause of the fishermen in this respect. That there is a possibility of the change going into effect is a matter of great satisfaction to him.

Although much had been done in Boston to upset the hardships which the Sunday blue laws of that city entailed upon the fishermen, yet shipping lobsters to arrive on that day was far from satisfactory, both from inconvenience which might have been endured had it not resulted in serious financial loss. If the Boston and Yarmouth Steamship Company carry out the rumored reform, it will be a great boon to the lobster industry of the South Shore, while comparatively a very slight change in the schedule of the line is Mr. Nickerson's expressed opinion.

ANNOUNCEMENT

TO THE PUBLIC:— We have decided that on the 1st of November, 1913, we will commence A STRICTLY CASH BUSINESS.

In many ways we regret to make this change, as custom has established the credit system and it has gone to such an extreme that in some instances it is thought to be almost impossible to do business without the furnishing of the extra capital for the convenience of our customers. The keenness of competition to-day created through the high cost of living and increased expenses of business, and the fact that other large houses are adopting the cash system in order to enable them to retail goods at lower prices, forces us to this decision.

It may seem hard to some of our patrons to feel that the firm they have dealt with for years has taken this step, but we think that after a little consideration, even these friends will see the mutual benefit to be derived from a CASH SYSTEM.

Under the credit system you are not only supporting your own family, but assisting to support those who are not willing to be self supporting, in addition to helping pay the book-keeping and interest on money at present tied up in unpaid accounts, etc. While under the cash system we will be able to keep a larger and more modern assortment of goods in stock AT PRICES THAT WILL APPEAL TO YOU.

We trust that you may see your way clear to still continue your business with us, in any case do not withdraw your patronage without first balancing each transaction as it occurs.

Again thanking you for the many favors you have shown us from time to time in the past, and assuring you that we will endeavor to fill all your orders under the new system to the very best of our ability. We are

The bride was prettily and becomingly attired in white em-broidered voile, with the conventional bridal veil and orange blossoms and carried a bouquet of brides' roses and maiden hair fern. The gifts included a beautiful display of cut glass and silver. After receiving the congratulations of their friends, they left by motor for Attleboro. On their return from their wedding journey they will reside at 26 West Friendship Street, accompanied by the best wishes of many friends.

A TELEPHONE FOR THE DEAF.

An optical telegraph intended to fill the place of the telephone for talking with a deaf person, has recently been invented by a deaf and dumb married couple. It consists essentially of a keyboard, as in a typewriter, through whose keys single electric currents pass. In each circuit is included an incandescent lamp with a flat surface, bearing a letter of the alphabet or a Roman numeral. Pressing any key causes the corresponding lamp to glow. Thus words and sentences are spelled out and numbers are formed.

The keyboard can be operated as fast as that of an ordinary typewriter, so that with practice communication becomes very smooth and rapid. Each station, of course, must contain both a sender and a receiver and these may be in different rooms or in houses a long distance apart. The instrument can be conveniently used for conversation between a deaf person and a normal person who is ignorant of the finger language. The silence with which the device is operated is a very important point in its favor. This feature might make it especially useful where quiet or secrecy in transmitting information is desired, in sending war news or in business houses.

THE MOUNTAIN SNOWS

(By Enos A. Mills in the Youth's Companion)

My work as snow observer on the Rocky Mountains gives me many exciting experiences, but a three-day trip, made last winter, was the most thrilling and adventurous that has ever entertained me on the trail. One February morning I set off alone on snow-shoes to cross the "range," for the purpose of making some snow measurements. The nature of my work for the state requires the closest observation of the character and extent of the snow in the mountains. I hoped to get to Grand Lake for the night, but I was on the east side of the range, and Grand Lake was on the west. Along the twenty-five miles of trail there was only wilderness, without a single house.

The trail was steep and the snow very soft. Five hours were spent to gain timber-line, which was only six miles from my starting place, but four thousand feet above it. Rising in bold grandeur above me was the summit of Long's Peak, and this, with the great hills of drifted snow, out of which here and there a dwarfed and distorted tree thrust its top, made timber-line seem weird and lonely.

From this point the trail wound for six miles across bleak heights before it came down to timber on the other side of the range. I set forward as rapidly as possible, for the northern sky looked stormy. I must not only climb up fifteen hundred feet, but must also skirt the icy edges of several precipices in order to gain the summit. My friends had warned me that the trip was a foolhardy one even on a clear, calm day, but I hated to receive the fury of a storm while on the most broken portion of the trail.

The tempest came on with deadly cold and almost blinding violence. The wind came with awful surges, and roared and boomed among the crags. The clouds dashed and seethed along the surface, shutting out all landmarks. I was each moment in fear of slipping or being blown over a precipice, but there was no shelter, I was on the roof of the continent, twelve thousand five hundred feet above sea-level and to stop in the bitter cold meant death.

It was still three miles to timber on the west slope, and I found it impossible to keep the trail. Fearing to perish if I tried to follow even the general course of the trail, I abandoned it altogether and started for the head of a gorge, down which I thought it would be possible to climb to the nearest timber.

Nothing definite could be seen. The clouds on the snowy surface and the light electrified air gave the eye only optical illusions. The outline of every object was topsyturvy and dim. The large stones that I thought to step on were not there; and when apparently passing others, I bumped into them. Several times I fell headlong by stepping out of a drift and finding a depression.

In the midst of these illusions I walked out on a snow cornice that overhung a precipice! Unable to see clearly, I had no realization of my danger until I felt the snow giving way beneath me. I had seen this precipice in summer, and knew it was more than a thousand feet to the bottom!

Down I tumbled, carrying a large fragment of the snow cornice with me. I could see nothing and I was entirely helpless. Then, just as the full comprehension of the awful thing that was happening swept over me, the snow falling beneath me suddenly stopped. I plunged into it, completely burying myself. Then I, too, no longer moved downward. My mind gradually admitted the knowledge that my body, together with a considerable mass of snow, had fallen upon a narrow ledge and caught there. More of the snow came tumbling after me, and it was a matter of some minutes before I succeeded in extricating myself.

When I thrust my head out of the snow mass and looked about me, I was first appalled by a glance outward, which revealed the terrible height of the precipice on the face of which I was hanging. Then I was relieved by a glance upward, which showed me that I was only some twenty feet from the top and that a return thither would not be very difficult. But if I had walked from the top a few steps farther back I should have fallen a quarter of a mile.

One of my snowshoes came off as I struggled out, so I took off the other and used it as a scoop to uncover the lost web. But it proved very slow and dangerous work. With both shoes off I sank chest-deep in the snow; if I ventured too near the edge of the ledge, the snow would probably slip off and carry me to the bottom of the precipice. It was only after two hours of effort that the shoe was recovered.

When I last struggled to the surface of the snow on the ledge, I looked at once to find a way back to the top of the precipice. I quickly saw that by following the ledge a few yards beneath the unbroken snow cornice I could mount to the top over some jagged rocks. As soon as I recovered the shoe, I started round the ledge. When I had almost reached the jagged rocks the snow cornice caved upon me, and not only buried me, but came perilously near knocking me into the depths beneath.

But at last I stood upon the top in safety. A short walk from the top brought me out upon a high hill of snow that sloped steeply down into the woods. The snow was soft, and I sat down in it and laid "a blue streak," my wet blue overalls recording the streak, for a quarter of a mile and then came to a sudden and confusing stop; one of my webs had caught on a spine of one of the dwarfed and almost buried trees at timber-line.

When I had travelled a short distance below timber-line, a fearful crashing caused me to turn; I was in time to see fragments of snow flying in all directions, and snow-dust boiling up in a great geyser column. A snowslide had swept down and struck a granite cliff.

As I stood there, another slide started on the heights above timber, and with a far-off roar swept down in awful magnificence, with a comet-like tail of snow dust. Just at timber-line it struck a ledge and glanced to one side, and at the same time shot up into the air so high that for an instant I saw the treetops beneath it.

But it came back to earth with awful force, and I felt the ground tremble as it crushed a wide way through the woods. It finally brought up at the bottom of a gulch with a wreckage of hundreds of noble spruce trees that it had crushed down and swept before it.

As I had left the trail on the heights, I was now far from it and in a rugged and wholly unfrequented section, so that coming upon the fresh trail of a mountain-lion did not surprise me. But I was prepared for what occurred soon afterward.

Noticing a steamy vapor rising from a hole in the snow by the protruding roots of an overturned tree, I walked to the hole to learn the cause of it.

One whiff of the vapor stiffened my hair and limbered my legs. I shot down a steep slope, dodging trees and rocks. The vapor was rank with the odor from a bear.

At the bottom of the slope I found the frozen surface of a stream much easier walking than the soft snow. All went well until I came to a rapid where, with no warning whatever, the thin ice dropped me into the cold current among the boulders.

I scrambled to my feet, with the ice flying like broken glass. The water came only a little above my knees, but as I had gone under the surface, and was completely drenched, I made enthusiastic moves toward the bank. Now snow-shoes are not adapted for walking either in swift water or among boulders. I found this out thoroughly after they had several times tripped me, sprawling, into the liquid cold. Finally I sat down in the water, took them off, and came out gratefully.

I gained the bank with chattering teeth and an icy armor. My pocket thermometer showed two degrees below zero. Another storm was bearing down upon me from the range, and the sun was going down. But the worst of it all was that there were several miles of rough and strange country between me and Grand Lake that would have to be made in the dark.

I did not care to take any more chances on the ice, so I spent a hard hour climbing out of the canon that the stream was in. The climb warmed me and set my clothes steaming.

My watch indicated six o'clock. A fine snow was falling and it was dark and cold. I had been exercising for twelve hours without rest, and had eaten nothing since the previous day, as I never take breakfast. I started a fire and lay down on a rock by it to relax, and also to dry my clothes.

In half an hour I started on again. Rocky and forest-covered ridges lay between me and Grand Lake. In the darkness I certainly took the worst way. I met with too much resistance in the thickets and too little on the slippery places, so that when at eleven o'clock that night I started a Grand Lake hotel, my appearance was not prepossessing.

The next day, after a few snow measurements, I set off to recross the range in order to avoid warm bear dens and cold streams. I took a different route. It was a much longer way than the one I had come by, so I went to a hunter's deserted cabin for the night.

The cabin did not have any door, and I could see the stars through the roof. The old sheet-iron stove was badly rusted and broken. Most of the night I spent chopping wood, and I did not sleep at all. But I had a good rest by the stove, where I read a little from a musty pamphlet on palmistry that I found between the logs of the cabin.

I always carry candles with me. When the wind is blowing, the wood damp and fingers numb, they are of inestimable value in kindling a fire. I do not carry firearms, and during the night, when a lion gave a blood-freezing screech, I wished he were somewhere else.

Daylight found me climbing toward the top of the range through the Long's Peak and Medicine Bow forest reserve, among some of the noblest evergreens in Colorado. When the sun came over the range, the silent forest vistas became magnificent with bright lights and deep shadows. At timber-line the bald summit of the range rose a thousand rounded feet, like a gigantic white turtle.

The slope was steep and very icy; a gusty wind whirled me about. Climbing to the top would be like going up a steep, ice-covered hot: roof. It would be a dangerous and barely possible undertaking.

But as I did not have courage enough to retreat, I threw off my snowshoes and started up. I cut a place in the ice for every step made. There was nothing to hold to, and a slip meant a fatal slide. With rushes from every quarter, the wind did its best to freeze or overturn me. My ears and my fingers grew so cold that they could hardly hold the ice-ax. But after an hour of constant peril and ever-increasing exhaustion, I got above the last ice and stood upon the snow.

The snow was solidly packed, and leaving my snowshoes strapped across my shoulders, I went scampering up. Near the top of the range a ledge of granite overtopped through the snow, and toward this I hurried. Before making a final spurt to the ledge, I paused to breathe. As I stopped I was startled by sounds like the creaking of wheels on a cold, snowy street.

The snow beneath me was slipping! I had started a snowslide! Almost instantly the slide started down the slope with me on it. The direction in which it was going and the speed it was making would in a few seconds carry it down two thousand feet of slope, where it would leap over a precipice into the woods.

I was on the very upper edge of the snow that started, and this was the tail end of the slide. I tried to stand up in the rushing snow, but its speed knocked my feet from under me, and in an instant I was rolled beneath the surface. Beneath the snow I went tumbling on with it for a seemingly long time, but I know, of course, that it was for only a second or two; then my feet struck against something solid. I was instantly flung to the surface again, where I was either spilled off or fell through the end of the slide, and came to a stop on the scraped and frozen ground out of the grasp of the terrible snow.

I leaped to my feet and saw the slide sweep on in most impressive magnificence. At the front end of the slide the snow piled higher and higher, while following in its wake were splendid streamers and scrolls of snow-dust.

I lost no time getting to the top, and set off southward, where, after six miles, I would come to the trail that led to my starting place on the east side of the range.

I was twelve thousand five hundred feet above sea-level when the clouds broke up, and from this great height I looked down upon what seemed to be the margin of the polar world. It was intensely cold, but the sun shone with dazzling glare, and the wilderness of snowy peaks came out like a grand and jagged icefield in the far south.

After five hours on these silent but imposing heights I struck my first day's trail, and began a wild and merry coast down among the rocks and trees to my starting place.

ZAM-BUK
 MRS. A. SAICH, of Cannington Manor, Sask., Writes:—"My brother suffered severely from eczema. The sores were very extensive, and burned like coals into his flesh. Zam-Buk took out all the fire, and quickly gave him ease. Within three weeks of commencing with Zam-Buk treatment, every sore had been cured."
 This is but one of the many letters we are constantly receiving from people who have proved the healing powers of Zam-Buk. For eczema, piles, sores, burns, cuts and all skin troubles there is nothing like this wonderful balm. No skin disease should be considered incurable until Zam-Buk has been tried.

 CONDEMN'S THE "SIPPANCY" OF AN UNRESERVED AGE.
 Scottish Pastor Talks to Parents and Children—Smariness is not Wisdom.
 Montreal Star, 29th.—Cynicism, irreverence, sippancy, these were the objects of an attack made by the Rev. George Duncan, B. D., in St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, Beaver Hall Hill, yesterday.
 "No one will deny," he said "that our age is essentially an irreverent one. A rapid age is not a reverent one. Neither is an inquiring age. Although children today are taught that which their parents did not learn, it is not remembered that head knowledge is not wisdom, and that to be smart is not always to be wise."
 The parents, however, did not get off scathless. The Rev. Mr. Duncan mentioned that there was another side to the question, that the parents of today must partly answer for the prevailing temper of frivolity and irreverence among youth. True, much of this could be explained in the reaction against the stern repression of former years when innocent pleasure was choked off, yet there was today no apparent attempt to put aside sippancy and grapple with life's problems in a more reverent and serious manner. In this the church might also serve its function better, a church at once bright and deep, true to the busy present as well as to the venerable past.
 The Rev. George Duncan is one of the prominent divines of Scotland's capital city and the church, St. Cuthbert's, has one of the largest and most influential followings in the old land.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 8, 1913

There died last month in Chesterfield, Eng., a man familiarly known by a wide circle of friends and supporters, as 'Honesty Jimmy,' whose life should furnish an example and an inspiration to the young people of every land. He was the son of a coal miner, and at the age of eleven years was sent to the pit to work twelve hours for ten pence. For twenty-nine years he worked in different capacities at this employment, sometimes escaping severe accident in a wonderful manner, as, for example, on one occasion when twenty-five men working near him were drowned by an inrush of water. But, he did not, like many of his companions, in youth and early manhood spend his spare moments in idleness or frivolity. He betook himself to reading and study, attended night school, sought to acquaint himself with the industrial problems of the day, and general history, and identified himself with the Christian church. In process of time he began to be recognized as a man of intelligence, and good judgment; a man of opinions and able to support them by will-expressed reasoning; a man not adverse to taking the unpopular side of a question when to do so might endanger friendships which he would like to retain. Thus he became known by the sobriquet of 'Honesty Jimmy.' Finally, he was elected to Parliament and served his native Division as its representative until his death.

The news, 'Jimmy is dead,' quickly circulated, and the funeral services were accompanied by very marked demonstrations of general respect and regret. Flags in all the public buildings were raised half-mast, and all classes of the community assembled in large numbers and lined the streets all the way from the home to the cemetery.

Many a boy, of natural abilities just as good and educational opportunities far superior, has made a failure of life, because the spare hours of youth were spent in pursuits which furnished a momentary attraction and gratified the baser side of human nature, but furnished no sure foundation for usefulness and real success. The great differences between men are not so much differences of natural endowments as differences in determination to use the passing moments in the development of such endowments as they possess, whether they be small or great.

One ship sails east, and another west, By the very same winds that blow. 'Tis the set of the sail and not the gale Which determines the way they go. Like the winds of the sea are the ways of men As they journey along through life 'Tis the set of the soul that determines the goal, And not the calm or the strife.

The Duke of Wellington, though a great General, was a poor shot, Lady Shelly says in her Diary, that one day when the Duke was shooting with her husband, he first wounded a retriever, then peppered the game-keeper's gaiters, and then sprinkled with shot the bare arms of an old woman who was washing clothes near her cottage window. Her screams attracted the attention of Lady Shelly, who went to her and asked what was the trouble. 'I'm wounded, my lady,' she replied. In the endeavor to soothe her, Lady Shelly said, 'My good woman, this ought to be the proudest day of your life. You have had the distinction of being shot by the great Duke of Wellington.' The woman was in doubt whether to be proud or angry. But, when the Duke himself came and put a gold coin in her hand, she concluded to be proud.

Dr. Sun Yat Sen, the former provisional president of the Chinese Republic, is said to be in British Columbia, but is keeping incognito as it is claimed there is more sympathy with President Yuan than with him among British Columbia Chinese.

Four girls of the village of Nagyvoivrad, Hungary, whose marriages had been fixed for Sept. 21st, went into the woods the day before to gather flowers with which to decorate the church for their weddings. They were overtaken by a thunder-storm and all four were killed by lightning.

The people of Heidelberg, Germany, are horrified and pained over the suicide by shooting of Princess Sophia of Saxe-Weimar Eisenach, an unusually popular and beautiful young woman, caused by the prohibition of the reigning Grand Duke Wilhelm Ernest to her marriage with the son of a banker, unless she renounced both her title and dignities, which she refused to do.

A series of most remarkable improvements in cases of cancer treated by radium in the Middlesex Hospital, London, in the last six months are reported. A member of the hospital staff, however, says it is not maintained that these cases have been cured by radium, but that growths proved microscopically to be cancerous have disappeared in an astounding way under radium rays.

The changes made by Mr. D. C. Worcester, until recently Secretary of the Interior of the Philippines, that slavery and other forms of involuntary servitude, accompanied by a traffic in human beings, exist in the islands, have, a Washington despatch says, been officially substantiated. The matter is so serious that the United States War Department will, it is believed, have to take cognizance of the situation.

Two domestics employed in a cottage at Chelsea, a fashionable resort near Atlantic City, N. J., observing a man dropping small boxes of chocolate on the sidewalk as he walked along, thinking the action mysterious picked them up as two children were running to get them. Later on a druggist who examined the chocolates found that a small section of a bichloride of mercury tablet had been inserted into each of them and the hole carefully sealed with the chocolate paste. Sufficient poison had been placed in the candies to have affected seriously if not fatally any person who ate one of them and several would have been sufficient to have resulted in death.

Lieut.-Gen. von Bernhardt is severely criticised by the Cologne "Gazette" for an essay in which he spoke of the possibility of getting Ireland on the side of Germany in case of war between Germany and Great Britain. The article was based on an essay in the "Irish Review" on the attitude of Ireland in case England went to war. The article in the "Irish Review" is stigmatized as crazy, and as for von Bernhardt's contention that war between England and Germany is inevitable the "Gazette" says, that Germany will continue her policy of settling concrete disputes with England, with the support of an overwhelming majority of its population. This replies completely to the idea of a war of conquest against England.

Miss Mylott's Recital

Last Thursday evening the music lovers of Bridgetown enjoyed a rare treat in the opportunity of hearing Miss Eva Mylott, the famous Australian contralto, at the Court House. Miss Mylott has a voice of exceptional quality, the purity of her wonderful tones and her interpretation of the sentiment of her songs being a revelation to her audience.

Miss Mylott is to be congratulated on her pianist, Miss Hilda Aiken. She has completely mastered the art of subordinating the accompaniment to the song, while still making it an essential part. In the first part of the program Miss Aiken played two sections, "Humoresque" (Dvorak) and "Wedding Day" (Greig) in capital style. In the second part she favored the audience with a Maori song, "Waiata Poi," (playing her own accompaniment), a bright and clever rendition which included the Maori battle cry. The audience twice recalled the singer, who responded with "The low back car," an Irish melody, which gave great pleasure to the audience, and "Believe me if all Those Enticing Young Charms."

Miss Mylott and Miss Aiken returned to Bridgetown on Saturday from Digby, and rendered solos at the service in Providence Methodist church on Sunday evening.

Middleton Outlook—These are busy days at the clay works especially in the tile department. Last week a carload of tile was sent each to Halifax, Dartmouth and Charlottetown, and this week on one day enough was sold to lay three miles of drainage. At no time since the works were opened in Middleton have we seen so fine a lot of tile made.

Besides the bark Calburga, which they have chartered to load a million feet of lumber at Digby for the River Platte, the firm of Clarke Brothers, Bear River, have chartered the tern schooner Celia F., 343 tons, now at St. John and Catherine, 250 tons, now at Bangor, to load lumber for Cienfuegos.

Rally Day exercises were held in this church Sunday afternoon. A well filled church enjoyed a splendidly rendered exercise of songs and recitations. Profuse with tinted ivy and house plants the church presented a most inviting and inspiring appearance. Rally Day of 1913 was indeed most successfully observed in this church.

BETTER THAN OIL.

Sulphite Pulp-mills Furnished New Road-Sprinkling Material.

Experiments recently conducted at Queen's University, Kingston, show conclusively that the dark-colored liquor obtained as a waste product in the manufacture of sulphite wood-pulp makes a better dressing for public highways than the low-grade oils now used. The two treatments were compared under identical conditions, and it was found that the same quantity of concentrated (four to one) waste liquor will last longer than road-oil when subject to the washing of rain, and has the additional advantage of being free from the nauseating odor so objectionable in low-grade oils. The Laurentide Pulp and Paper Company have been using this waste liquor for a considerable time on the streets of Grand Mere, Quebec, where their mills are located, and find it very satisfactory.

The Bulletin on Pulpwood recently issued by the Dominion Forestry Branch at Ottawa, states that one-third of the pulpwood used in Canada, in 1912 was manufactured into pulp by the sulphite method, the other wood constituents being dissolved out by a solution of calcium sulphate and piped into the rivers as waste-liquor. Thus one-half of every cord of pulpwood becomes absolute waste, as also the 140 lbs. of sulphur used in its dissolution, for the sulphur becomes so combined organically that it cannot be economically recovered.

It is calculated that material valued at over one and a quarter million dollars is thus wasted in Canada each year.

The utilization of this enormous waste is, therefore, a very important problem in Canada, where an increasing amount of sulphite pulp is being manufactured every year. As a temporary expedient, the use of this waste liquor as a road dressing is to be desired, for it would prevent the contamination of the rivers on which sulphite mills are situated.

Here is a woman who speaks from personal knowledge and long experience, viz., Mrs. P. H. Brogan, of Wilson, Pa., who says, "I know from experience that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is far superior to any other. For croup there is nothing that excels it." For sale by all dealers.

ELECTRIC ICE-CREAM FREEZER.

An electric ice-cream freezer has been devised by a London inventor. In the usual freezer tank, generally of larger size for wholesale manufacture hotels, or the like, is mounted a tubular coil supplied from a carbonic acid machine which takes the place of ice and salt. The small machine is mounted on a wall frame together with a small electric motor which drives it by belt from above, so that the outfit takes up very little floor space. Cleanliness is secured by the entire absence of crushed ice and salt and there are no wet floors. It is claimed that the electric device also gives considerable economy in working. Another point is that where there are electric motors already in use for other purposes, the ice-cream machine can be driven from them without entailing the extra expense of a motor.

Wreck Salving is Profitable

Disabled Ship Bought for $1,840 Worth $60,000 and Many Similar Instances Occur.

London, Sept. 23.—Another instance of lucky speculation in wrecks, this time by a Melbourne firm, has created a mild sensation among underwriters here. A disabled ship was bought for $1,480 and was found to be worth $60,000.

The ship was the Jean Bart, a French bark, of 1,981 tons net, just towed into harbor after lying a battered wreck for two months. She was built only twelve months ago, and was on a voyage from Antwerp to Waterloo laden with 3,000 tons of pig iron and coke, when she ran aground on Waudang Island, in Spencer Gulf, South Australia. It was confidently stated that salvage was hopeless, but Messrs. J. Bell & Co., grain merchants, of Melbourne, made a bid, and the wreck was sold to them for $1,840. Some critics laughed and remarked that they were paying for a hold full of water which could not be raised. But perseverance succeeded, and in addition to realizing $60,000 Messrs. Bell will have the Jean Bart sailing the seas again, for she is very little damaged.

While members of Lloyd's admitted to an interviewer that this is regarded as one of the plums of the business, there have been several similar ones.

"Round the shores of Britain every year," said the marine broker, "there are a number of wrecks which would yield a large profit to any enterprising buyer provided he had the necessary facilities to sell or dispose of the property. Some years ago a steamship was wrecked off Yorkshire and the buyer was a man who knew little about such matters, but he bought the vessel for about $1,500. It was not a big ship, but she had a valuable cargo on board, and it was feared that the bottom had been ripped out and the cargo lost. In the cargo was a number of pictures. Few firms care to touch the business, and the underwriters let it go for the sum stated. But the ship was inspected and raised, and then, to the surprise of everybody, the cargo was discovered to be little the worse for its immersion. The property sold for nearly $50,000."

"There was another case a year or so ago of a ship which was wrecked with a valuable cargo on the Coast of Africa. She was given up as hopeless and sold for a song. The new owner took a sporting chance, knowing the value of the cargo, of chartering a ship and steaming out to the wreck. He succeeded in raising her and towed her to Gibraltar. Here the cable parted and she was lost for two days, but ultimately was found again and brought to the Thames. That ship is still on the seas under a new name and the owner made his fortune out of the deal."

"Few people have any idea that there are scores of wrecks lying around the shores of the United Kingdom. In some cases they are entirely abandoned to any one who cares to take the 'pickings,' but in others they have been sold to local firms for a small sum. Even the amount of iron and wood in some hulls would pay for the cost of salvage. One easily remembers the fate of the Oceana, which went down off Folstone, the Mahatta, on the Goodwins, and the Preussen. From the Lizard one can see quite a number of wrecks on the coast line, and it has often been suggested that if these boats were salvaged systematically a profitable business could be built up in this way."

For Baking Success —This Oven Test

Success on some baking days can be expected no matter what flour you use. But constant success is rarer. It can be assured in only one way. The miller must select his wheat by oven test.

So from each shipment of wheat we take ten pounds as a sample. We grind this into flour. Bread is baked from the flour. If this bread is high in quality, large in quantity, we use the shipment from which it came. Otherwise we sell it. Constant baking success comes as a matter of course from flour bearing this name

OLD TOM

(By Alice Jean Cleator, in Our Dumb Animals.)

John Porter mounted the veranda steps with an apprehensive heart. Yet he reassured himself. "Women are such silly sentimentalists in such matters—always letting their sympathies run away with them."

"Better brace up and tell her—the sooner the better."

Mrs. Porter looked up smilingly from her letters which the postman had just left. Her pleasant attitude made his task the harder. But feeling that the dreadful ordeal would give ease to his troubled conscience he sat down and began:

"Now, Doris, you mustn't take a cu over what I'm about to say. But I may as well out with it first as last."

"I've sold Old Tom. I hadn't expected to sell the old fellow; I'm sorry already, but I had a chance to get fifteen dollars for him, and if he could not have got rid of that cough and rheumatics, even a jockey soon would not have bought him for three."

Porter expected a protest of words, but there was complete silence. The accusing sentence of a court of justice could not have given him a keener torture.

At last, in a strange tone his wife inquired:

"Who bought Old Tom?"

"Tony Menzi."

"That huckster who was around here yesterday?"

"Yes."

"Has the man gone?"

"Yes, he started with him for the city at three o'clock this morning."

Then Mrs. Porter "spoke."

"John, I'm going to say something I've never thought, felt or said before! I'm ashamed of you! You've often made a protest at cruelty in the community, but what have you done but a thoughtless and cruel deed?"

Tom gave us twenty years' work for nothing but his board. He's hardly ever had a whole week-day of rest. It's been Tom here and Tom there, always put to do the extra jobs, and trips to town often when he was tired out. And now, just because he was getting old and lame and had a cough, you've sold him to a life of misery and neglect. I thought you despised a traitor. But what else have you been to Old Tom? I wish I could at least have said good-by to him and told him how faithful he has been!"

Porter knew he had the wrong side of the argument, yet he made a spirited defence, saying that farmers were a practical sort and couldn't let 'chicken-heartedness' stand in the way of business.

"Seeing his words of no effect, a happy thought struck him."

He took out his pocket-book and tossed three five-dollar bills into his wife's lap.

"I heard you talking about getting a new dress the other—"

But she did not wait for him to finish.

"Do you think I could wear a dress bought with the price of Old Tom? I'd rather wear a three-cent calico!"

Little more was said, but each day at the time Porter had been used to prepare Old Tom's bran mash he had a strange sense of remorse and longing for the faithful old creature, and a feeling of loneliness came over him as he passed the empty stall.

Over a year later, Porter on a business trip, was driving his "machine" through a beautiful section of country several hundred miles from home.

He heard angry shouts and saw a short distance ahead a heavily loaded wagon and a fallen horse.

Something was wrong, and he stopped his auto.

The wagon was twice too heavily loaded for the old horse that evidently had passed from one master to another and had at last become the victim of the jockey and been sold to an ignorant, coarse peddler.

The man had been whipping the horse, but finding that of no use was securing a fence-rail to further beat the old creature.

"Put that club down!" commanded Porter. "What's the trouble?"

The peddler obeyed, pointing angrily to the horse and wagon.

"He notta no good! I pay t'ree dollar! Man cheat. Horse notta no good! I kill him!"

Porter freed the horse from the miserable, ill-fitting harness. A faint neigh of recognition greeted him. It was Old Tom!

"It's the first time John ever forgot," thought Mrs. Porter with a wistful smile as the day passed on to afternoon and no reference was made to her birthday. The pleasing little "surprise" gift that always marked the day was lacking.

She heard voices at the side veranda and going out, was greeted by a sight that filled her eyes with joyful tears. Her birthday gift had not been forgotten! Old Tom's familiar face greeted her—just a shadow of his former self, silent as to the harrowing experiences of the past year, but neighing for joy at the sound of her familiar voice.

"Old fellow, your vacation has just begun," said Porter, "but I fear it's come pretty late. You'll be a star-boarder as long as you care to stay. I've learned my lesson."

Old Tom was a "star-boarder" for two months. Then one dreary autumn morning he was found "asleep" under the whispering chestnut tree where in his busy life he had seldom had a restful hour in its peaceful shadows.

J. W. Copeland, of Dayton, Ohio, purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for his boy who had a cold, and before the bottle was all used the boy's cold was gone. Is that not better than to pay a five dollar doctor's bill? For sale by all dealers.

PROTECTING THE BANK NOTE

A special staff of examining clerks devote their attention to detecting forgeries in the Bank of England. Of late years there have not been many cases of forged notes, but during the eighteenth and early part of the nineteenth centuries the bank suffered severe losses from counterfeit notes. The story of the first recorded forgery forms a unique chapter in the book of romance. A certain linen-draper, named Vaughan, was passionately in love with a fair maiden whose father was a man of considerable wealth.

The love-sick swain knew that the quickest way to win the girl was to give some proof that he was a man of means. To his end he employed several men to engrave for him a Bank of England note for £20. When twelve of the notes had been worked off, he presented them to his lady fair.

Unluckily the imposition was soon discovered, and poor Vaughan was hanged

PRINCESS AND QUEEN MARY ARE AT ODDS.

Cannot See Eye to Eye on Question of Equal Suffrage.

London, Sept. 25.—The most unmistakable indications yet published, as to Queen Mary's views on suffragism, is afforded by what has happened this week with regard to Lord and Lady Spencer's invitation to Princess Patricia of Connaught, to be one of the house party at Althorp, with the King and Queen.

Princess Patricia recently appointed Miss Glentail, a prominent suffragette to be her lady in waiting, during the absence of Miss Adams, and the new appointee was to have gone to Althorp this week in attendance. The Queen refused to meet Miss Glentail and the Princess would not go to Althorp without her.

The incident as far as the Princess was concerned was closed by the latter sending her regrets to Lady Spencer and going with her aunt, Princess Henry of Battenburg, to Abergeldie Castle, Scotland.

WORLD'S WEALTHIEST WOMAN.

The decision of the German Government to add extensively to their armaments recalls the fact that Frau Krupp, the proprietrix of Krupp's, Germany's leading gun-making firm, is the richest person in that Empire.

By an interesting coincidence the wealthiest taxpayer in France is also a woman. She is Mme. Lebaudy, mother of Jacques, Emperor of Sahara, and is believed to be worth at least £8,000,000. She holds her wealth in horror, and lives under an assumed name all the year round in a small flat in Versailles, where the domestic staff consists of one servant, who is assisted in the work by her mistress.

Mme. Lebaudy gives away nearly the whole of her income, most of her donations being bestowed anonymously. It is an open secret, however, that for many years past she has made up the annual deficit of the leading French Royalist paper, which usually amounts to about £16,000.

Great as the wealth of these two ladies is, there are at least two women in the United States with even larger fortunes. Mrs. Russell Sage administers an estate worth about £28,000,000, and Mrs. A. E. Harriman controls but little less.—Ireland's Own.

WORKERS OR SHIRKERS

Those dairy farmers who are carefully noting the total production of each of their cows for the season are finding some curious differences. For instance, in one Ontario herd the yield of a nine-year-old grade that freshened March 5th was 4,930 pounds of milk up to the end of July; her stable mate, also nine years old that freshened March 12th, receiving the same feed and care gave only 2,970 pounds of milk. Over half a ton of milk in that short period indicates a considerable difference in income between the two cows.

In another herd at the same farm calved April 3rd and 4th, there is a difference of 1,490 pounds of milk and sixty pounds of fat up to the end of July. This means between fourteen and fifteen dollars that one cow earned more than the other. Are your cows workers or shirkers? Dairy records alone will provide the means of ascertaining these facts beyond question. Forms for weighing milk either daily, or on three days per month, are supplied free by the dairy division, Ottawa. In your letter of application state which you want.

TO BENEFIT OTHER SUFFERERS

You May Publish My Letter About "Fruit-a-tives"

Mr. Jones is proud to acknowledge the great debt of gratitude he owes "Fruit-a-tives". He is glad to have his letter published in order that other sufferers may be induced to try these wonderful tablets made of fruit juices.

SARNIA, ONT., FEB. 5th, 1911

"I have been a sufferer for the past 25 years with Constipation, Indigestion and Catarrh of the Stomach. I tried many remedies and many doctors, but derived no benefit whatever. Finally, I read an advertisement for "Fruit-a-tives". I decided to give "Fruit-a-tives" a trial and they did exactly what was claimed for them. I have now taken them for some time and find they are the only remedy that does me good. I have recommended "Fruit-a-tives" to a great many of my friends, and I cannot praise these fruit tablets too highly."

TWENTY MILLION CO-OPERATORS

(London Morning Post.)

No one who is accustomed to mark the trend and significance of events will, we are sure, be disposed to dispute that the Ninth International Co-operative Congress, which met at Glasgow, is a very considerable event. The congress has grown in less than twenty years to represent over twenty millions of members, belonging to 130,000 co-operative societies in twenty-four different countries. The movement which it stands for is therefore, one which cannot be left out of account in any survey of social and industrial progress.

Delegates were present from all parts of the world. France, Belgium, Germany and Switzerland each sent one hundred co-operative delegates, and Great Britain was represented by over three hundred; the United States, Russia, Holland, Scandinavia, Spain, Italy, the Balkans and Rumania sent a number of co-operators, and it was expected that India and Japan would do so during the progress of the meetings.

HIS INCOME.

There was a certain well known singer in London many years ago who in the pride of his heart greatly exaggerated to the tax collector his own assessment. "The fact is," he afterward confessed to the commissioners, "I have not 1,000 pence of certain income." "But are you not stage manager to the opera house?" "Yes, but there is no salary attached to it." "But you teach?" "Yes, but I have no pupils." "Then you are a concert singer?" "True, but I have engagements." "At all events you have a very good salary at Drury Lane?" "A very good salary, but these circumstances the tax was remitted."

CAN A MAN FORGET HIS MOTHER?

(By R. Walter Wright)

Can a man forget his mother? Well I shouldn't think he could. "Less he can forget his childhood and almost everything that's good." When I waken in the morning, it is natural for my thought to take of woe's my share. Just to wander back half-dreaming to my little baby cot. When I get up and am dressing for to take of woe's my share. Then I think of how my face she washed and how she combed my hair; How she used to sit up evenings when we boys to bed had gone, Mending up our coats and trousers, sewing lots of buttons on.

When I meet the laughing children with their bags and boxes full, I most always think of mother, how she fixed me up for school; How she packed my dinner basket, put in good things on the sly, With the usual bread and butter and the piece of apple pie. Home at night, can I forget it? Never been so hungry since. O, the plate of warmed potatoes, the big huns, the tarts of mine; I'd give now at the great ban net, every puff, icy cake, For the cookies with the carawaye mother used to make.

When night came and eyes were blinking, mother said, "It's time for bed."

Often had some queer ideas running through my sleepy head; At her knees when I was saying, "Now I lay me down to sleep."

Where did God, I used to wonder, put our souls at night to sleep? Didn't feel a bit like dying, "For I should die before I wake."

But I somehow felt contented when I said "For Jesus sake."

Not a worry buzzing round me, not a scheme my brain to spin, Just slid softly off to dreamland when my mother tucked me in.

Went to church all fixed up—mother said you hardly could have guessed who I was, but I felt rather awkward in my Sunday best.

Then she taught us our School verses and I thought it quite a feat.

When I knew the Ten Commandments, and the "Postles' Creed could be read."

Good things she was always saying in her wise and homely way, "Don't spend all your money, lay up something for a rainy day."

Still they stick like burns, her proverbs, "Good friends must not be forgot."

Be sure you're right, then go ahead, and "Strike the iron while it's hot."

How she hated whiskey bottles, "Just as soon," the words I hear, "Have old Satan in the cellar as a keg of wine or beer."

Swearing roused her as an insult to her Father, God of all; Still, about an oath there's something makes my very flesh to crawl.

Felt I was an Ananias if I yielded to a lie, Always seems than be dishonest, it is better far to die.

Can a man forget his mother? I should hardly think he can, "Less he can forget most all things that have made of him a man."

When you have a bad cold you want the best medicine obtainable so as to cure it with as little delay as possible. "I MUST CUT OUT CIGARETTES"

It was at an amateur athletic meet. A young man who entered for the 100-yard dash, the 220-yard hurdles and the quarter mile, came to chat with a group of friends in the grandstand.

He pointed out the stars, and told who would be likely to win some of the events in which he was not a competitor. Then came the call for the first heat of the 100-yard dash, and he, with four other men, went up the track to the starting line.

He wasn't "placed." As the flying men passed that little bunch of his friends in the stand, he was seen to lose his stride, to weaken for a moment. In that moment the race was lost.

"What was the matter with you when you went by here?" It was one of his friends speaking, as the athlete came slowly toward them, five minutes later.

And this was his answer, "Cigarettes," he said. "By the time I had gone fifty yards I knew my lungs couldn't do it. I could feel the cigarette 'goneness.' And I lost ground because my mind was bad. I've got to cut out cigarettes."

To many a boy that incident should preach its own sermon. It is true on the track and the diamond, on the gridiron and the river, in the gym and on the courts—the young man who would succeed athletically must cut out cigarettes.

And that is only the beginning. Success in athletics is a great thing, but there are other contests, other tests of stamina and strength. No young fellow can meet them with confidence unless he will cut out cigarettes.

There are arguments a-plenty of nobler sort against cigarettes, arguments that appeal to manhood and a manly self-respect. But, even reckoning only low-level motives, and desire to win, the longing for applause, and rewards of prowess, there are no two opinions possible. — Epworth Herald.

SO SHERIDAN PAID.

Richard Brinsley Sheridan, the famous dramatist and orator, was always in pecuniary straits, and constantly besieged by the creditors. A creditor came into his room one day, and found him seated before a table on which was a heap of gold and notes.

"There is no use in looking at that, my good fellow," said he to the visitor. "That is all bespoken for debts of honor."

"Very well," replied the tradesman tearing up his security and throwing it into the fire, "now mine is a debt of honor, too."

"So it is, and must be paid at once," said Sheridan, and he handed him the money without further demur.

The Home

SORE THROAT.

At the slightest indisposition a child's throat should be examined immediately. Most mothers have some difficulty in doing this and will find the following method a help: Take a large silver spoon and hold it back of a candle with the inner surface turned toward the light. This combination placed before the open mouth of the child will enable you to reflect a strong light in the throat and ascertain its condition with absolute certainty.

CLEVER PATCHING.

Sometimes a shirt that is good everywhere else will have a small hole on each side of the front, below the neckband where the points of the collar come. To mend these places almost invisibly, try this plan: Cut a piece from the lower part of the shirt and dip into the cold starch you are using for the cuffs, lay it over the holes, matching the figures carefully, and pass the iron over it. The patches must be renewed every time the shirt is washed, of course, but put on in this manner they are much less noticeable than when sewed on.

NURSING MOTHER.

The strain and effort required to nurse a rapidly growing child require something more than the ordinary three meals a day to retain a standard of health sufficiently great to maintain the mother's body in that healthy condition required to impart happy, robust health to her baby.

She must not allow herself to run down, and as alcoholic stimulants are forbidden, so also are strong tea and coffee. She will have to restrict herself for a lunch between meals to milk, if it is tolerated, milk gurnels or a cupful of one of the prepared foods made with milk and flavored with cocoa, if desired. She must take care not to drink so much as to impair her appetite for the regular meals.

PUTTING AWAY CLOTHING

Caring for your clothes is true economy. Even the cheaper grades of clothing wear longer and look better if you take care of them. This care applies especially to the packing away of your clothing for the different seasons. It is not a costly task, and you need neither cedar chests nor moth-proof bags. Tissue paper, plenty of newspapers (moths abhor newspapers) and large pasteboard boxes are all that is needed.

The large boxes which hold underwear at the department stores are the best and most durable. Failing these use those sent out by coat and suit houses.

They will not occupy as much space as you fear. If you do not have an attic in which to store them, the boxes may be put on a shelf in the closet or they may be placed in two stacks on the floor.

It will be a great satisfaction if like articles are grouped together and the contents of the boxes marked on the outside. Anything wanted can then be easily found.

HOW TO MAKE A BREAD POULTICE.

Some skill and practice are required to make a good bread poultice for it is apt to become heavy, lumpy, and sloppy, or dry, hard and sticky. The best way is to get a sufficient supply of breadcrumbs, then stir them into the boiling water, stirring and beating them all the time exactly as one does linseed meal. Then cover it up with a plate or saucer, and leave it by the fire, or, better, still, over a kettle of boiling water, for about five minutes, to give it time to swell; then spread it on clean linen, dipping the knife or spatula into hot water to prevent sticking. Turn up the margin of the linen in the usual way, and apply to the inflamed part, putting the bread next the skin. A little grease spread over first will prevent sticking, because bread has a tendency to stick, and it hurts very much if dry, hard little bits have to be picked off the edges of a wound. It will save time if a sufficient supply is made for two or three poultices, as the preparation does not spoil (unless it is allowed to go sour), and it can easily be warmed afresh over a kettle of boiling water.

HOW SHE FELT.

A country school teacher was cashing her monthly cheque at the bank. The teller apologized for the filthy condition of the bills, saying, "I hope you are not afraid of microbes."
"Not a bit of it," the schoolmarm replied. "I'm sure no microbe could live on my salary."

ITS USEFULNESS.

"Waiter," asked the impatient customer, "do you call this an oyster stew?"
"Yesuh," replied Mr. Ernestus Pinkley.
"Why, the oyster in this stew isn't big enough to flavor it."
"He wasn't put in to flavor it, suh. He is jes' supposed to christen it."

OBJECTED TO THE TONE

City Editor (to reporter)—"One minute, Jones, I don't know whether it is absenteeism on your part, or an expression of your views on matrimony, but I'd rather, when you have occasion to write about a wedding, not have you say that Miss Smith and Mr. Brown 'underwent' a marriage ceremony."

JUST HER HUSBAND.

A woman mounted the step of a car carrying an umbrella like a reversed sabre.
The conductor touched her lightly, saying, "Excuse me, madam, but you are likely to put out the eye of the man behind you."
"He's my husband," she snapped, with the tone of full proprietorship.

Harry Lauder tells an amusing story of two Glasgow women who met in the street and began to discuss the domestic affairs of a newly-married couple. "Aye, Mrs. McTavish," said one, "so Jennie's got married?"
"She has that, Mrs. McTavish," replied the other. "An' how is she gettin' on?" the first woman wanted to know. "Oh, no sae bad at a'," was the reply. "There's only one thing the matter, she thinks she could hae got a better man. But, the, there's always something."

Small Boy—"What is a roost, papa?"
Parent—"A roost, my son, is the pole on which chickens roost at night."
Small Boy—"And what is a perch, papa?"

Small Boy—"Well, papa, could a chicken roost on a perch?"
Parent—"Why, of course."
Small Boy—"And could they perch on a roost?"
Parent—"Certainly, of course."
Small Boy—"But if the chickens perched on a roost, that would make the roost a perch, wouldn't it?"
Parent—"Oh, yes, I suppose so."
Small Boy—"But if just after some chickens had perched on a roost, and made it a perch, some chickens came along and roosted on the perch, and made it a roost, then the roost would be a perch and the perch would be a roost, and some of the chickens would be roosters, and—"
Parent—"Susan, take this child to bed before he drives me mad."

THE LITTLE DEVOTTEE.
Dr. Hugo Munsterberg, the famous Harvard psychologist, was talking about Christian Science and in the midst of a profound and brilliant analysis of the cult he paused to tell an anecdote.

"The children of vegetarians," he said, "loathe meat, which they call graveyard fruit; and the children of Christian Scientists are more convinced devotees than the parents themselves."
"There's a little Boston urchin named Mary, an urchin of five years, who is a Christian Scientist to the marrow."
"Mary fell one day and barked her skin, and, rubbing the hurt with her hand, she began to cry. Her aunt, an unbeliever, happened along at this moment. The aunt was mindful of Mary's faith and of those contradictory tears, and with a mocking smile she said:
"Why Mary, are you hurt?"
"No, I ain't hurt," sobbed the little girl, restraining her sobs as best she could.
"But if you are not hurt, why are you crying?" said Mary, "because I'm mad."
"And what are you mad about?"
"I'm mad—boo, hoo!" wept the little girl, "because I can't feel I ain't hurt."

HOW TO KEEP EGGS.

For family use, the most satisfactory method of preserving eggs is to pack them in a tight vessel and cover them with a ten per cent solution of silicate of soda or water glass. The eggs must be fresh and the shells clean, as a spoiled or dirty egg may spoil the rest.

We have found six-gallon stone jars the most satisfactory vessels to use. They will hold eighteen to twenty dozen. It is unnecessary that the eggs be placed with the small end down; they may be laid in promiscuously. Set the vessel in a cool, dark place and fill it to within an inch of the top with eggs.

Water glass or silicate of soda is an amber-colored liquid that can be purchased of druggists or poultry supply dealers at fifteen and twenty-five cents per quart. Dilute it with ten parts of pure water. It is better to boil and cool the water for this purpose. The eggs should be completely covered with the liquid and kept covered. They may be kept for a year by this method, and are perfectly good and wholesome at the end of this time.

SAWDUST FOR FLOORING.

Artificial floorings are now being made out of sawdust concrete. The cement used consists of a solution of magnesium chloride to which pulverized magnesia is added. The sawdust is then used in any desired quantity. Floors manufactured in this way are more resilient than concrete, and are not good conductors of heat. They wear well, and do not burn, charring under the fire test.

A NEW DISCOVERY
 Professor LaFountain has a new discovery that has proven beyond all doubt that hair will grow even on a bald head (with an exceptional case where the skin has become so tight over the skull as to be immovable). In this case there is nothing between the scalp and skull to retain nourishment. Hair has been grown on many who have been bald many years. All persons with itchy and chronic scalp sufferers from life and dandruff have been rewarded with wonderful growths of the most luxuriant hair after a very short treatment. The N. Y. Marion Company of Buffalo, N. Y. has arranged with Professor LaFountain to distribute this wonderful new discovery in each town and city in Canada and the United States, and have appointed a reliable druggist to sell this remedy exclusively and to guarantee it. It has been made to sell at 50c. a large bottle so that no one need be without it. The name of this preparation is SAGEINE. Makes the hair beautiful when used as a dressing, and it puts a natural wave in women's hair. W. A. Warren is agent in Bridgetown. Stop in and get a bottle of SAGEINE without delay. SAGEINE beautifies hair of every shade, as it restores natural lustre, and is guaranteed to grow hair no matter how diseased the hair follicle may be.

NOME, ALASKA, ALMOST WIPED OUT BY STORM
 Two Miles of Territory Next to the Sea Devastated.
 Nome, Alaska, October 6.—Nome has been almost destroyed by a storm. The south side of Front Street is gone. The sandspit is gone. Two miles of territory next to the sea was devastated. No lives were lost.
 The storm that last night began beating in from Bering Sea was the worst ever known here. Men and women worked all night in the icy water to save their household effects. The electric light plant was wrecked and telephone service cut off. The loss is estimated at a million and a half dollars.
 There will be much suffering and outside help will be required. Winter is at hand and it will be impossible to get in supplies needed.
 The steamships Victoria and Cornin, which were lying in the roadstead, ran to the open sea and escaped damage. All the small boats on the beach were destroyed. Five hundred houses have been demolished and more are falling.

FIVE INCHES RAIN IN TWELVE HOURS.
 Fifty Miles an Hour Gale on Jersey Coast.

New York, Oct. 1.—A rain storm that reached almost cloud-burst proportions descended on New York this afternoon, establishing a record precipitation that flooded streets, tied up the subway, hampered surface and elevated traffic in the city and suburbs for several hours, and caused great property loss within approximately twelve hours. Four men were buried in a sewer cave-in and were rescued alive. Lightning played about the city and struck an elevated train and several buildings, setting fire which the deluge extinguished. Incoming trains from all directions were delayed, some of them several hours, as cuts and tunnels resembled rivers within canons.

Within the city the traffic congestion was such that the resources of the transit companies and the ability of the police to handle the crowds were severely taxed. Brooklyn Bridge saw the greatest traffic rush in its history.
 Thos. H. Walsh, a train despatcher, bossing a pumping gang in the subway, slipped and fell in third rail and was killed. Patrolman Hugh Clark, of Jersey City, was electrocuted at his street call box, which had been charged with electricity by cross wires.
 There was little wind here, but along the New Jersey coast there was a gale blowing fifty miles an hour. Rain swelled the Passaic River and the streets of Newark were inundated. Low-lying Jersey meadows became seemingly part of the river.

YARMOUTH MAN KILLED BY AN ELECTRIC SHOCK.
 Yarmouth, October 2.—Michael White, an employee of the People's market, is dead, the result indirectly of an electric shock received while handling an electric light in the ice-chest of the store this morning. It is thought that the shock, although not sufficient itself to kill, affected his heart. It happened just after he had started to work. Doctors were at once called and worked over him for a long time, but without avail. An inquest was held, and a verdict "accidental death, cause unknown," was found. He was between fifty and sixty years old.

 Sirs,—I came across a bottle of MINARD'S LINIMENT in the hands of one of the students at the University of Maryland, and he being so kind as to let me use it for a very bad sprain, which I obtained in training for foot races, and to say that it helped me would be putting it very mildly, and I therefore ask if you would let me know of one of your agents who is closest to Baltimore so that I may obtain some of it. OBITUARY
MRS. JUDSON ROBBLEE.
 (Annapolis Spectator)
 A telegram received by Mrs. James Clark of Lower Granville, a niece of the deceased on Sept. 7th, conveyed the sad news that Mrs. S. A. Robblee, widow of the late Judson Robblee, formerly of Lower Granville, had passed away that day at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Edward Spurr, 479 Bergen Ave., Jersey City, U. S. Mrs. Robblee was a Miss Crosscup and was born in Lower Granville in 1831. When a young woman she married Judson Robblee and for years resided in her native place, where she was very highly esteemed for her many excellent qualities. About twenty-six years ago her husband disposed of his property and moved to Deep Brook afterwards going with his family to Cleveland, Ohio, the home of his only son Albert E. Robblee, now connected with the Atlas Oil Company in that city. A few years ago Mr. Robblee departed this life, and the subject of this obituary went to reside with her only daughter, Mrs. Spurr, wife of Capt. Spurr, where she remained until the end came. Many of your readers will remember this quiet, unassuming lady whose christianity was more fully shown in her consistent religious life than in a more external display and will extend their deep sympathy to the bereaved family.

THE PROGRESS OF DAIRYING IN CANADA.
 Conditions affecting the marketing end of the dairy industry in Canada have undergone rapid changes during recent years. In the past it has been the custom to estimate the growth of the industry on the export trade. This, however, has become an entirely unreliable guide because Canada no longer has butter to spare, but on the other hand finds it necessary to import from other countries. Cheese exports too have greatly decreased. These facts were brought to the attention of the Select Standing Committee on Agriculture and Colonization during the past session of Parliament by Mr. J. A. Ruddick, Dairy and Cold Storage Commissioner who showed very clearly that the industry is not losing ground but is making steady progress. It was brought out that the Canadian people are consuming relatively more milk and milk products than heretofore and that an increasing quantity of milk is being manufactured into condensed milk, casein and other products.

During the course of Mr. Ruddick's evidence he gave out a great deal of interesting information concerning the tendency of the industry. This has now been printed in a pamphlet of fourteen pages for free distribution to all who apply for it to the Publication Branch of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa.

RADIUM GAS GOOD FOR CURATIVE PURPOSES.
 London, October 2.—The radium institute announced tonight the discovery of the fact that the emanation of gas given off by radium is as efficient for curative purposes as radium itself. A method has also been discovered whereby the gas can be conveyed to medical men throughout the country for use among their own patients.
 The gas, although given off constantly, does not weaken the parent substance. The institute has only four grammes of radium in its possession, but the use of the gas will increase its utility enormously.

In the best German forests the annual expense is $13 an acre, but the gross returns are as much as $24; thus they yield a net return of $11 an acre each year.

POTATO FOUND THAT WILL RESIST BLIGHT AND FROST
 Discovery Would be a Great Thing for Canada and the Potato May be Introduced Here.

Auckland, N. Z., Sept. 27.—A new blight-proof and frost-resisting potato has been discovered by John Harris, of Ohura road, Rautahi, New Zealand. The discovery is said to be the most important one in agriculture for many years and the Agricultural Department of the New Zealand Government has investigated the phenomenon and admitted that the properties claimed for the new potato are beyond question.
 Mr. Harris has been experimenting with potatoes for years and some time ago he noticed a healthy stalk growing among a crop of Northern Stars and El Dorados all of which were affected by blight. He took up the root of the healthy plant and finding it in a perfect state began to experiment. The result is that a potato now called the New Era has been grown. The plant was carefully nourished and tended and for several seasons a new crop was propagated from the seeds of the previous crop. The variety has been placed under the closest observation but on no occasion has there been the slightest trace of blight or disease caused by frost though the crop planted next to it has been blackened by severe cold and is even now badly affected. So strong is the growth of the new variety of potato that some of the tops can be extended to a length of seven feet. The tubers are the color of lemons and from 10-lb. to 11-lb. tubers are being taken from a single stalk. The average yield is about nineteen tons per acre.

Mr. Bayliss, of the government agricultural department, has made an inspection of the growing crop, and though he has formed no theory to explain the origin of the New Era he admits that the potato is really frost-resisting and blight-proof. A frost in the district where the new potato was found is no small affair. The land is 2,000 feet above sea level, and the cold is often so severe that potato cultivation has been stopped. The new potato will give a great impetus to the potato cultivation of the Dominion.

RARE HONORS TO GAYNOR'S BODY.
 While in Liverpool, England, rare honors were paid to the body of William J. Gaynor, Mayor of New York, who died on shipboard recently, while on his way to England. It was placed in state in the town hall of Liverpool, the first occasion of this being done in the case of any body in two hundred years. In darkness and in rain and in silence thousands of the citizens of Liverpool waited with heads to show their respect for the Mayor of New York. There was no music, no military escort, nothing to hold the idle and the curious uncovered in that bleak drizzle. "It was this," says the New York Sun, "that was unexpected, the simple grief of these English people over the death of a man of another country whom they had grown to honor."

UNITED STATES TARIFF BILL

The United States Tariff Bill is expected to pass into law before the end of this week. The conference report was presented to the House on Monday, and will come before the Senate on Wednesday. President Woodrow Wilson has no doubt that the bill will reach him for signature this week. The bill subjects Canadian imported wheat to a duty of ten cents per bushel; flour, forty-five cents per barrel; potatoes, ten cents per bushel, until such time as the Canadian Government removes the duty on corresponding imported articles from the United States. Chief interest now centres in the conflict of opinion between the United States House and Senate regarding the tax on cotton futures, and the impression in official circles at Washington is that this tax will be reserved for future legislation. Cement, asphalt and limestone, pig iron, scrap iron and ferro-manganese, used in making high-priced steel, were free-listed. All duty was removed from cattle, sheep and other food animals, also from wheat and its products—when imported from countries which do not levy duty against United States wheat—and from eggs. The House closest observation but on no occasion has there been the slightest trace of blight or disease caused by frost though the crop planted next to it has been blackened by severe cold and is even now badly affected. So strong is the growth of the new variety of potato that some of the tops can be extended to a length of seven feet. The tubers are the color of lemons and from 10-lb. to 11-lb. tubers are being taken from a single stalk. The average yield is about nineteen tons per acre.

THE CLOCK THAT SPEAKS.
 Tells Time in Pleasant Baritone Voice.
 (Dartmouth Patriot)
 A phonograph clock has been perfected by Max Marcus, a German, after many years of labor. He is confident that his invention will come into general use. It not only keeps time to the second, but tells the time in a clear baritone voice. "Four o'clock!" and "Four thirty!" says the clock in loud, distinct, but pleasantly modulated tones, and the half and full hours may be repeated at will by the pressing of a button. The quarters are not spoken.

MONCTON GIRL IS MARRIED TO MILLIONAIRE.
 Boston, Oct. 3.—When the steamer pulled into its Boston dock yesterday from New Brunswick it carried a passenger Miss Marion V. M. Mackenzie, of Moncton, N. B., and impatiently waiting on the dock was Joseph Thayer Gilman, a millionaire car manufacturer, of Chicago. The pair rushed to the City Hall, where their marriage intentions were filed. The romance began when Mr. Gilman spent his vacation two summers ago in Moncton. There he met Miss Mackenzie. After the first trip to Moncton, he made it a point to go there every time he could get away from business. Mr. Gilman is Vice-president of the Goodwin Car Company, of Chicago. That was the ruler today of the Chicago Board of Trade, and is a Director of many large corporations.

PRINCE FINED $7 FOR INSULTING TELEPHONE GIRL OVER WIRE.
 Berlin, Oct. 6.—Prince Charles of Wrede was fined $7 by a court-martial at Wurzburg, Saturday, for insulting a telephone girl over the wire in complaining of the poor service. The Prince, who is Captain of Cavalry, admitted having said that the telephone office at Ansbach was apparently a hog pen and that the girls were evidently reading novels between the switches. He tried to excuse himself by saying he was exasperated at the bad service.
 It was admitted that the service was so bad that anything he might say about it would not be an exaggeration, but even that did not give the Prince the right to be insulting in his remarks.

THAW'S TREATY RIGHTS NOT VIOLATED IN CANADA
 Washington, Oct. 7.—None of Harry K. Thaw's treaty rights as an American citizen were violated when the Canadian immigration authorities forcibly deported him a few weeks ago. That was the ruling today of Solicitor Joseph W. Folke, of the State Department.
