Miramichi Advance. THE BITTER BITTEN. My uncle, Sir Charles Weathering, was an old gentleman who owned a large estate in Berkshire, and was very much respected by the people of his neighborhood. He was kind and indulgent to his tenants, many of whom would sacrifice their lives at any time to be of service to him. The country gentry for miles around were on the most intimate terms with him, and all spoke of him in praise.

There was one man, however, for whom my uncle had a decided antipathy: that was the Reverend B. H. Caldwell, who occupied the glebe lands adjoining my uncle's estate. They had been friends for a number of years but quarrelled at last over some trivial matter and it made my uncle's enemy for life. Uncle was a good man in most respects, but he had this one failing—if he once took a dislike to a man he never forgot it; and on this occasion his first impulse drove him to seek revenge upon the Reverend Mr. Caldwell.

At this time, in England, sectarianism was very much looked down upon by the Episcopal Church, and as the Reverend Mr. Caldwell was a rigid Episcopalian, my uncle's plan of annoyance was a terrible trial to the venerable gentleman who had been his family minister for twenty years.

The Episcopal church was within fifty yards of my uncle's estate and was the only place of worship the family had ever attended, therefore it was a serious affair to be at enmity with the rector. But uncle was equal to the occasion. He invited several prominent Methodist ministers to come on a visit, and very much to their surprise, offered to give them the ground on which to build a large church.

Of course this piece of magnanimity was eagerly accepted, and drew down upon his head the everlasting thanks of the whole denomination. The work was commenced at once, and was soon completed, under the care of the newly made convert, who took particular pains to have the building erected in full view of the Episcopal rectory.

Little did the Methodists know with what malignant satisfaction the projector of this scheme gloated over the success of his plot, and the terrible anguish of spirit that the Reverend Mr. Caldwell suffered then and during the remainder of his life.

A brilliant young minister was duly installed in the new church, and soon became the spiritual light of the district over which he presided. He was a bright, handsome young man, and had the good fortune to be unmarried. This made him a general favorite at my uncle's house for reasons which will appear presently.

My uncle had a family of sixteen children, three of whom were daughters. The youngest was by far the most beautiful, and was her father's favorite, a fact which he inherited a strong will, and notwithstanding my uncle's love for her, he had serious misgivings that she would bring disgrace upon herself and her family.

had soon that sign they would all have been there. "Release the prisoners," said the alcalde, while his sides shook with laughter.

"OUGHT TO KNOW—Lady—" "Where is the agent for these flats?" "Man at Door—" "I can rent the flats, mum." "Are the rents reasonable?" "Yes, mum." "What sort of a janitor have you?" "A very good one, mum." "Is he polite and attentive?" "Yes, mum." "Does he ever steal from the market basket of the tenants?" "Never, mum."

First Boy—"How do you like your new piano?" Second Boy—"Don't like it. If I don't do things right they'll get another boy, and if I do things right they'll keep me in 'em." (Street & Smith's). "You're not going to publish everything I say, are you?" asked Senator Sorghum anxiously. Not much," said the reporter: "I'll write to let some of your English get into the paper, I should have placed in half an hour." (Washington Star).

Eastern Stranger—"What are they lynching him for?" Quick Drop Dan—"Attempting suicide." They might just as well have let him kill himself." Dan—"No stirrer. Our boys don't believe in a fellow being so selfish." (Life). A young lawyer asked four hours to a jury, who felt like lynching him. His opponent, a grizzled old professional, arose and said sweetly, "Your Honor, I will follow the example of my young friend who has just finished, and submit the case without argument." Then he sat down and the beginner saw a great light.

W. T. Harris Still to the Front. He again offers the piano or $150 in cash, on the 10th of next March's terms same as before. Buy your goods at his stores—one ticket with each dollar purchase. DISEASED LUNGS CURED BY TAKING AYER'S Cherry Pectoral. I contracted a severe cold, which settled in my lungs, and I did what a doctor would do, but it did not improve. The medicine I gave me did not seem to do any good. I then saw a notice in the paper for Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. After taking a few doses my throat was relieved, and before I had finished the bottle I was cured. Dr. J.C. Ayer, Lowell, Mass., U.S.A. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral Highest Awards at World's Fairs. CHATHAM, N. B., DECEMBER 5, 1895.

Our Staples in England.

The approaching close of many deal-shipping ports on both sides of the Atlantic and the usual advance in freights and insurance rates, were accompanied this year with a relative rise in the prices of spruce, pine, birch and other woods in the British market.

In other words of late the conditions have been less favorable to our shippers, for although advances in freight and insurance rates came with their accustomed regularity, the prevailing business of business in England kept prices of wood goods from making proportionate advances. It is, however, gratifying to know that the outlook at the present time is more encouraging in this respect than it has been for at least six or seven years, bottom, in the constant decline of prices that has characterized the British and Continental wood markets, having, apparently, been reached

It is an old saying that when affairs are at their worst, they must mend, for there can be no standing still in regard to any of the elements of life whether it be commercial or other. The basis of which hopes of an improvement of some permanency in the trans-Atlantic lumber business are based, is a revival of the general export business of Great Britain, which of necessity increases the demand for the grades of spruce exported from the maritime provinces. That such demand exists is shown by the fact that the stocks of that wood held at leading British ports have gone into consumption much more rapidly of late than in the earlier months of the year and more than at any corresponding period in other years.

This condition is not that of one or two ports, but may be said to be general.

The London Timber Trades Journal of 23rd Nov. publishes the usual dock returns, and taking those of the Surrey

Commercial in the items of deals alone we find that for the week ending Nov.

16 the deliveries were 1,984 standards more than in the corresponding week last year, while the increase for the 46 weeks of 1895 to date was 10,341 standards, showing that about one sixth of the total increase was in the last week reported.

Prior, as we have said, have advanced to such an extent as to meet the increase in rates of freight and insurance, and the rise will probably be sustained, if prospects do not become too gloomy to take advantage of the brighter outlook and spill it by overstocking the market.

If they do that, the demands of the British manufacturers for spruce will be so easily

The Miramichi-Ooseola Collision.

The conclusions arrived at by Capt.

Smith, in the matter of the Miramichi-Ooseola collision, cannot but be received with the confidence they merit as those of a competent and impartial authority. Whatever course others who were called upon to deal with the subject may have followed, it is proper to take, Capt. Smith's criticisms and decision will be liberally accepted, and especially by the travelling public, as in the past, indeed, have seemed strange if such a catastrophe, involving loss of human life and clearly caused by negligence and inattention to duties imposed by law, should have been allowed to pass without responsibility for it being fixed, even as it has been, in a most convenient way, it none the less, just and logical manner.

Further experiments in India tend to establish the value of Prof. Haffkine's inoculations against cholera. Dr. Simpson, Health officer of Calcutta, reports one instance in which a fat case of cholera inoculated, two days afterward, of eleven of the eighteen remaining members of the household, and in second outbreak of the disease these eleven escaped while four of the seven uninoculated were attacked, three fatally.

After an outbreak in another locality 116 persons were inoculated out of about 200 in the district. This was followed by an outbreak in which 200 persons were inoculated. The result was that in these cases—save fatal—cholera and cholera diarrhoea, not one occurring among the inoculated persons. The discount of the inoculations is stated to be milder and of shorter duration than that of vaccination against small-pox. For complete protection, inoculation with a mild vaccine should be followed after five days by the use of a stronger vaccine. The operations are always harmless.

Numerous rubber-producing plants exist in West Africa. From a genus of climbing shrubs with stems four to six inches in diameter and numerous branches which appear themselves on nodding pedicels, an important industry was started on the Gold Coast in 1882 by Sir Alfred Maloney, and in 1893 the product had reached an annual value of $1,000,000.

In 1894 the governor of Lagos bought experience in rubber-collecting natives, the Gold Coast colony, now under rubber yielding trees, known to the natives as "Iro" or "Irai," was soon found to be abundant in the interior of the colony, and the rubber exports of Lagos is already important.

Not less than 700 cases of premature barb have been collected by Dr. Franz Hartmann, of Hallion, Austria, and are claimed to be the most numerous variety of more than 100 are given in a work now in press.

Nash's foot oil, purified by strips of lead and ammonia, has been found by an English chemist to be the best lubricant.

In addition to periods in disease or epidemics which are completed within the of the weather was clear and only ordinary care was required on the part of the steamer to keep clear of the schooner.

The emergency was sudden, and the pilot did what came to his mind at the moment, considering it would be of service.

The pilot of the "Ooseola" was not responsible for the emergency brought about by the negligence of the steamer, and it should be pointed out on his part, when required in a situation which compelled him to adopt one of two modes of escape, upon the instant, either to put the helm down, shut the sails, and slip the way of the vessel, or to put the schooner's helm up and try to avoid the casualty by ranning off her course.

If he had put the schooner's helm up, the sails would have filled, the schooner would have gained increased speed and the blow have been more severe.

The pilot of the schooner was therefore not to blame for his action, as he had the right of choosing a means of escape when he found the risk had been disregarded by the steamer.

In reviewing and carefully considering all the circumstances in connection with this casualty given in evidence at the enquiry, the court has come to the decision that the said collision was due to the steamer not having kept clear of the schooner and that the pilot of the schooner, as he should have done according to article 17 of the regulations for preventing collisions, between half past five and six o'clock on the evening of the 22nd, the pilot of the schooner Ooseola, as he should have lations for preventing collisions, between
