LECTURE ON THE AGRICULTURAL the question of agriculture.

As noticed in our last number, Professor Johnston, of European celebrity, Jectured before the Members of the Institute and others on Friday evening last, on which occasion the Hall was crowded. He was of opinion however, that on this occasion it was all for the best, as he had not then completed his report, and he would not have been enabled to have lectured to them on any thing so interesting as the resources of this Province. He had now obtained the permission of the Governor, and would give them a short outline of the report which he had made on the agricultural capabilities of the country. He alfuded to the great consequence of a knowledge of the geological formation of a country, in order to arrive at correct conclusions as to its agricultural resources; as by examining a geological map of the country. NEWS BOYS ADDRESS. TO THE PATRONS OF THE STANDARD Moned sum: JANUARY 1 1860

Onward, still onward, are the wild words of time, As he rushes impetuous bye! The old year has closed—a new year is mine In its whiel to eternity

The vision's awa, the pageant has passed,
With its throes and its throbbings of pane,
The year's lang same, before them aye cast Their dawnings of sorrow and stain.

Dare we look at the retrospect, of th' past year, Lo! a cloud of accusers is nigh, Our follies and vices successive appear, In the arras of memory.

Truce to this strain, it suits not the day, For mitths' and festivitys' cheer, Let us ring out a measure, a blythesome lay, In praise of this happy New Year.

In the wee still hours of night,
When sonorous Morpheus pillow'd my head,
I woke in a devil's own fright?

It was no horrible shape it bore, Tho' it look'd like a devil's grim It had no tail, but was spotted o'er, With ink-'twas-a Printer's limb It had an ink-bottle in its hand,

With paper and grey goose quilt; Rise up, it cried, with an air of command, Here's a roll of paper to fill. Give as a smack of the year that's past,

'Mid the annals of forty-nipe.

The Printer then vanished into air thin-The Printer's Devil, I mean;
And so without preface, I shall beginLong life to Victoria, our Queen. Elest be her home, Britannia's land,

Blest be her sons, no servile bri Nor scourge, nor fetter ee'r did stain Her little Isle which gems the main. ong may she hold her birthright sway, Lespite the factions of the day; long in her diadem, may there stay; Brunswick! Scotia! Canada!

Seethe and hiss, boil and bubble, Old Europe's cauldron teems with trouble, Austria's quenched old Haugary's light, Back'd by BEAR Russ-whose might n

France still panders for new measures, Exhaustless in her men and treasures. Old Rome is on the verge of doubt, Bowls her Popes as balls about.

Britain yet repels the shock,
Tho' seas of trouble beat her rock,
Yet based upon a spotless faith,
She hears, but heeds not, stands un and will stand for ages more, Aye, and will stand for ages more Till Ocean's billows cease to roar.

But now, kind friends, in distant lands
No longer let us roam,
But mount npon our Pegasus' steed,
And ply the steel for home.

A radical change is wanted here, Reductions the cry to day, From the Governor down to the Office Sweep, His pay—by his merits weigh.

Let the Lawyer's fees be reduced to naught, As Billy Needham urges; This Billy 'sdeath upon all that's fat, In speech—a Boauerges.

Direful his wrath in the tectoral cause, Should he feel a little excited By a drink—forbidden by temperance laws, He'll lecture if paid and invited.

All hail to our Rail Road! Success to the cause, Again, and again we'll applaud it, Success to its President, in three times thre In wine or in water we'll laud it.

Success to J* R* and his friend Mr. Sharp Our noblest of railway protectors.
Success to the Admiral, success to the Earl,
Success to our Roard of Directors.

Hurrah, for the year that's now begun, The prospect brightens—a new sun Will shine upon us, we shall be A land of wealth—fertility!

The nucleus of a railway web, The nucleus of a rankey web, Stretching from the Ocean's bed, To Canada's remotest bound, Crossing the prarie Indian's ground, Filling the wilderness with cheer These, are roxans, of this year -
