To the River Bonnechere.

(IN SPRING.)
The Bonnecherc's banks are blooming, Where grows the cypress wild, Where early in lite's morning I wandered as a child.

And still while memory reaches, To days long, long ago, Beneath those shady bushes I've listened to its flow.

And still the river's rolling, No changes seen are there, But, ah! old friends are falling Like leaves in autumn's air

The Pioneer's are going, The marble marks their rest But still that River's flowing, In murnurs from the West

The old Rock's honest faces, I still remember well,

The wild thrush still is singing, As sweet now as of yore, While wild the foam is flinging. Its spray from shore to shore

Roll on--old friend-forever, Eternal to the sea. And may your song be even A soothing lullaby.

Dr. Campbell's Lecture.

Dr. Campbell delivered his lecture list night before a respectable audience. The attendance was not large, but that may be mainly accounted for by the unpleasant state of the weather. The views he put forward, as will be seen from the following report, were ably sustained by the arguments he used. The War . Commenced.

HE GERMANS IN SCHLESWIG REPULSE OF THE AUSTRIANS AND PRUSSIANS.

A GREAT BATTLE EXPECTED.

The news from Europe is highly import aut. The war has actually commenced, and where the destructive demon may cease its ravages, no one knows. For months past the chances of peace and war have been way ering in the balance but it appears from the following items of news that hostilities have actually commenced :-

Schleswig, Feb. 3. Friday, 6:30 p. m. At three o'clock this afternoon the Austrians attacked the position of Bistore, one Loglish mile South of Schleswig. Danes held their ground. There was sharp fighting till after dark. The King of Denmark walked towards the outposts. No casualites are known. The Danes lost one field piece. The firing continues. Another attack is expected to-morrow. The wounded are being brought in. The Times says the question to laudable objects.

Being informed through the medium of your paper, that one of this kind comes off in the new Church lately erected in Almonte. Prompted by curiosity, and the anticipation of spending an evening profitably, we start, or your Ramsay correspondent would to brave a severe frosty atmosphere, in rapid motion, through wreaths and hills of snow, barely escaping several turnovers. After a hard time, the physical features of what appeared to be a large town leomed in the dising is suppressed to be going on, as numbers of wounded are being constantly brought ance, but immeasurably diminishing as we approach. Soon we are at the place long noted for falling cataracts, woolen manufactories, the terminus of the B. & O. R. but, sir, I have no time to premise.

On arriving at the Church, I entered amid city style. The Church is not yet filled, so workmanship. I might describe it, but for building is soon nearly filled. On the plating tes dishes, others accompanied with uncount like vessels with copious effusions of tea, and servers filled with fantastic budgets of choice catables; in all making a luxuriant banquet tempting to the palate of the most fastidious receiver, and shews that the ladies belonging to the Church, are up to the times, in making 'railroad cake,' cogent bun, and other 'sweethread.' At length, ample justice being done to the good things, the cups are collected and we are ready for the musical and literary entertainment. Mr. Mofine is first called. Said he was not prepared to make a speech, as he expected and making an account of the inclemency of the sudience, and thought he would have nothing to do but listen. Under these circumstances is it to leave the matter to arbitration, pity that the Ramsay Luminary was not at hand, to give them chapter and verse for case, it is only like a drowning man grasping at straws. But your wily correspondent wishes to leave a false impression on the public mind, a position for which he appears to be highly gifted, and I suspect that his plotting I have trespassed too long on your space.—

And, in conclusion, would recommend Mr Observer to adopt the prayer of one (who is said by some to be wise): O! that some power the gift to gie us, to see oursel's as others see us, &c. By the by, Mr Editor, I uspect he thinks his own reason superior knowledge derived from an invisible source.

Gone Before Dearest mother, thou art sleeping, Thy dear face I see no more;

Though for thee we now are weeping, Thou art only "gone before." Dearest mother, now with angels,

Happy on that radiant shore, Though thy place is ever vacant, Thou art only "gone before." Dearest mother, now with Jesus, Whom on earth thou didst adore,

In thy footsteps I am coming— Thou art only "gone before." Dearest mother, angel mother, Thy sweet voice I hear no more:

And my heart is ever lonely-Thou are only "gone before.

The Name and Title of the Infant Prince. Some curiosity exists as to the name and title of the young Prince, some asserting that it will be Prince Albert Edward of Wales, whilst others think that he will receive some such designation as Duke of Cornwall or Duke of Gloucester. No 25th Inst, at eleven o'clock, A. M., for the named Albert Edward; but it is perhaps and for the despatch of other public businet so universally known that the name by ness. All interested are respectfully rewhich the Prince of Wales will ascend the quested to take notice of the said meeting. throne-(may the day be far distant !)-will be King Edward the Seventh. It is said that this was the express wish of the late Prince Consort, who thought that Albert I. would hardly sound congenial to the English ear. It has, however, grown congenial enough since his demise, through the respeet we pay to the memory of the good Prince. Unless the infant son of the Prince led Duke of Edinburg, that being one of the inferior titles borne by his father, Fredrick, Prince of Wales. If this precedent be followed in the present instance, the infant Prince will be called Earl of Dublin, ed notes. that being the only interior title of the presert Prince of Wales which is not inalieuably attached to him as eldest son of the Sover eign. In default of this or some other title by creation, it would seem he would be culled Prince Albert of Wales, -Court Jour.

After a marriage ceremony had been performed in one of the churches in Adrian, Michigan, the bride, when receiving the congratulations of her friends, shed tears, according to the established ridiculous custom; at the sight of which the groom fol lowed suit, with a copious flow of briny fluid. After his triends had succeeded in calming him, he said he couldn't help it, for he felt as bad about it as she did.

On dit, that the Princess of Wales aub mitted very reluctantly to the obligations of etiquette in the matter of wet-nursing the baby. The Prince of Wales would, it is said, have willingly indulged the natural wish of the young mother; but court traditions were too strong even for the Royal personages, who are supposed, not always truly, to be absolute masters in their own

Referring to Father Chiniquy (who has lately taken to himself a wife) the Montreau Witness says: We wish that we could find of the endinger account of the application of the endinger England, the United States and Canada. It will be remembered that a minister in England stated publicly that he had remitted to him £7000 sterling, or $35,000; and it is well known that he received large sums from other sources. What became of it all?

Some difficulties have arisen between Mr McGann and Dr. Morris, teachers in the asylum for the deaf, dumb, and blind at Toronto. Mr. McGann has withdrawn from the institution with fifteen pupils, and has opened another school. Dr. Morris remains with nine pupils.

A man advertises for "a competent person to undertake the sale of a new medicine, and adds that "it will be profitable to the undertaker." No doubt of it.

Mrs. McCarey, a Baltimore woman, was caught trying to smuggle liquor down to Portsmouth, Va. She had six large canteens of whisky concealed in her petticoats. The Supreme Court of California has decided that the law permitting U.S. soldiers to vote is unconstitutional.
