NEW ERA IN EDUCATION TO BE INAUGURATED

Exit the Public and Separate School Boards and C. C. I. Trustees-Whole System of Educational Control to be Re-organized-End of Struggles Between Schools and Wards—Government Endorse Proposal Which Will Save Citizens Much Expense.

Chatham is to have a Board of Education elected by the people at

The present Public School Board will pass out of existence with the present year, the Collegiate Institute Trustees will throw in their lot and the Separate School will appoint special representatives. Bepoint special representatives. Besides the whole system in the conduct of educational matters will be reorganized for the purpose of materially lessening the expense and doing away permanently with all possible school or ward strife.

The ratepayers of the whole city will by ballot appoint their Board of Education at the next January elections, and the heavy expenses at present incurred, materially affecting the tax rate, will be considerably reduced.

The City Council, it is understood, will take the initiative at its next meeting—and the proposal will meet with hearty public support.

It is further intimated that, following the new act by the Government at the next session of the Legislature, the system will be made more effective by the consolidation of the schools of the urban municipalities effected under the same school government.

Speaking of the matter to The Planet this morning his worship Mayor Cowan, who has given the matter much thought and has been in communication with the Department, said: "I am convinced it is a move in the right direction and will prove a material factor in the reduction of our tax rate. Besides that it is surely best that the people themselves shall choose their representatives on these all important spending bodies. Whatever the new act has been put in operation splendid results have been attained. The initiative rests entirely with the Council and the matter will be taken up at the next meeting."

Mr. McKay has always been held in the highest esteem by all at The Planet, and his departure will leave a vacancy hard to fill. Few men held the confidence of their associates to a greater degree, and to his new business sphere he carries the best wishes of them all.

Mr. McKay's message was of the hearty reciprocal character that has been so large a part of the happy relationships that have so long existed. It conveyed his appreciation of the memento and the spirit which prompted it, and extynded kind and generous wishes for the continued prosperity of The Planet and its "boys."

"At the present's time business there is very dull by reason of the car strike. This strike is causing very strenuous times." "In connection with these rumors and misleading reports that a leading hotel in Chatham is for sale I would like you to state that the Garner House is not for sale," said Alex. Eberts this morning.

"Chatham is good enough for me and I shall always be pleased to meet my friends here and shall continue to do my best to provide the public with the best possible hotel accomodation."

This will be very welcome news to Chathamites and commercial men. Mr. Eberts is a very popular man and keeps an excellent hotel. He well deserves the extensive patronage he receives.

There were a couple of strangers who shut him up quite effectively and they thought Chatham was the prettiest and most up-to-date place in Canada. The feague had two divisions. The eastern was composed of Chathami and Darrell: the western of Detroit, Sandwich, Windsor and Amherstburg. and was ordered to pay home and home games with Darrell for the trophy.

The first game was played here as week ago Saturday, when Darrell succeeded, coming off victors in a hard fought game, the score being 2-1. As goals counted, Sandwich needed two goals to win, and these they managed to get on Saturday in the final game. The match was not as closely contested as the one played here, Sandwich setting the pace throughout the whole game.

The Darrell pig-skin kickers have won the cup two years in succession, and had they won this time the cup would have been their own. As if is now it is up for competition again.

W IS THE TIME TO ADVERISE

STEPHENSON - Proprietor. MONDAY, JULY 17, 1905.

THE URIQUITOUS SALESMAN.

When a salesman goes out on the road to find a market for his employer's goods he is a constant source of expense. When he eats drinks, sleeps and moves from place to place the house foots the billand pays his salary besides. The newspaper "ad," is a salesman that neither eats, drinks nor sleeps, and travels without expense to its employer. The commercial traveler, of course, is too valuable in many respects to be abolished, but his services may be made more profitable by employing the newspaper salesman as his advance agent and assistant. It can be made not only to pave the way for his approach, but in many cases to altogether dispense with the necessity for his visits And The "ad." has this additional advantage over the personal silicitor -if placed in the right newspaper it can cover in one day a territory that he couldn't cover in months, even years.

THE SALVATION ARMY AND ITS WORK.

Rider Haggard, who has been investigating the Salvation Army colonies in America, with a view to some scheme of land settlement for relieving the congestion of urban population in Great Britain, suggests a loan by the Imperial Government, grants of land and guarantees by different colonies, and contributions from cities and Poor Law unions, that may be relieved of persons now; a public charge. He proposes the creation of a superintendent of land settlements, to whom the management and administrative business of these settlements shall be committed; and that the selection of the people for settlement be entrusted to the Salvation Army, an effective organization, active everywhere and ready to assume the task, and to such other religious and charitable societies as desire to take part in the work. Moreover, he insists upon the element of business prosperity, so that no settler shall receive title to his land until all advances have been paid, and unemployed capital may be secure in seeking investment in projects for the development of uninhabited spaces of the empire. Mr. Haggard sums up what he considers the essential conditions in a scheme of land settlement, and sets forth these lessons:

"The first is to avoid the mistakes of the past especially by refusing to attempt any further settlement unless sufficient capital is available to inaugurate and to carry it on upon proved and businesslike principles The second is that the land should be cheap as well as suitable. The third that the colonists should be very carefully selected, all the circumstances and conditions of the individual families being considered. The fourth is that they should pay a fair price for the land, spread, however, over a considerable num ber of years, and the fifth-perhaps the most important of them allthat they should remain during that period under skilled, but sympathetic management." In other words, he would help those who are willing and able to develop some capacity, to help themselves; but what of the others, who, after all, constitute the real core of the problem, the great masses who are incapable of helping themselves?

VILLAGE CLUBS.

Nation, New York. Every one who has lived in an English village knows how important in the rural laborer's life are the clubs to which he pays a few pence weekly or monthly. The improvement one who talls behind with his "club money" is a marked man, while to pay it in "regular" covers a multitude of sins. But the Trousseau club, which in France induces girls to store up from the age of girls to store up from the age of nine, is non-existent in England. It is due to a desire of daintiness, even in the nonrest the poorest surroundings, which is until a surrounding surroundings, which is until a surrounding surrounding surroundings.

HOW WOMEN EAT.

Fortnightly Review. Women eat such queer things when they are by their lonely selves. What self-respecting man would lunch off a sultana cake, a tart, or an ice? Show me the self-respecting woman who has not done it! Women know how to cook-some of them-but none of them know how to eat. A woman feels that to eat well and substantially is a sheer waste. If it were not for men women would warn themselves in sable and point lace chamber along with the frozen meat.
The steamer is one large refrigerator, and the carge is mainly frozen meat. The refrigeration on them was provided, in the first place, for and starve to death.

WASTED FRUIT COSTS MILLIONS

Wonderful Value of Cold Storage Brought to the Attention of Government.

Valuable Suggestion From Herbert S. Clements and Mr. Armstrong-Some Facts and Figures.

Cold storage is a subject which has recently been discussed in the has recently been discussed in the House of Commons, thanks to Mr. J. E. Armstrong, M. P. for East Lambton, and Mr. H. S. Clements, M. P. for West Kent. Although the debate was in no sense a party one, it indicated clearly enough that the Minister of Agriculture is hardly familiar with the subject. His opinions as to the temperatures most suitable for the preservation of various fruits and dairy products are not the views of most authorities. For example, Mr. Fisher thought that 60 degrees was a suitable temperature for carrying apples. Morethat 60 degrees was a suitable fem-perature for carrying apples. More-over, he seemed to be of opinion that for the purpose of arresting decay there was no difference be-tween freezing point and a lower temperature. These ideas are as-suredly not generally held, and the fact that they belong to Mr. Fish-er suggests an explanation of his failure to granple with a situation failure to grapple with a situation that is so important.

LOSS ON APPLES $20,000,000.

LOSS ON APPLES $20,000,000.

It is estimated that in apples alone $20,000,000 is lost to the farmers of Canada every year as a result of the lack of proper storage facilities. Most of this loss falls upon the farmers of Ontario, because this province grows more apples than all the rest of the Dominion combined. It is the old story of a feast and a famine. When the apples are ripe they are so plentiful that they can be had for a trifle. In a few months, despite the most abundant crops, they are usually so scarce as to be numbered with the luxuries. Hundreds of thousands of bushels rot on the ground. This was the case last $\frac{1}{2}\text{Lord} \text{ was the case l Hundreds of thousands of bushels rot on the ground. This was the case last Fall, and has been every Fall. The few farmers who had storage plants were able to abolish losses of this kind. They had all their cropfor sale. Moreover, they held their apples until the glut of the market had been relieved, and then placed their stock at good prices.

A PRACTICAL INVESTIGATOR.

Mr. R. J. Cochrane of Fast North.

A PRACTICAL INVESTIGATOR.

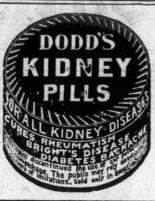

Mr. R. J. Cochrane, of East Northumberland, is a practical farmer, who has made first-hand investigation of the storage methods employed by progressive American apple-growers.
Recently interviewed by Ottawa nwespapers, he gave some interesting facts on the subject. Mr. Cochrane was quite willing to work in the orchards as an apple-picker in order to get his information, and this he did last Fall in dozens of farms in New York State. The farmers were mostly well-to-do men, some of them rich as a result of a few years' apple-growing, plus proper cold storage facilities.

"Every fruit-grower," he said,
"takes his fruit, newly picked, from the orchard to the cold storage warehouse. It is a question of hours only, for they would not think of allowing their apples to remain over night on the ground unprotected, nor will they allow time for the heat to generate, as it will, in a barrell of apples.

AMERICAN FARMERS' PROFITS.

AMERICAN FARMERS' PROFITS. "In many places the farmers owned their own storage plants, operating the ammonia engines themselves, storing their own fruit, and renting any extra space to their neighbors at 40 cents a barrel. This was at 40 cents a barrel. This was cheerfully paid, as in a few months they could get from $1 to $2 a barrel more, for their apples than their less provident neighbors. In many instances the owner of the plant found he could make more money by buying a few thousand barrels of apples outright and carrying them himself. In this way his profits exceeded the 10 or 20 per cent. which he made from storage charges. In Canada we have been conducting the apple business at haphazard as comapple business at haphazard as com-pared with the fruit farmers whose pared with the fruit farmers whose places I visted. Even when we talk of cold storage our minds store up a vision of a pile of ice gathered from some lake or river. Natural ice does not give the required temperature for a cold storage system. The changing atmosphere can be met by increased cold with an ammonia plant, whilst it cannot by matural ice. All the plants I saw were kept cold by the ammonia ice plant." WHERE NEW ZEALAND GAINS.

As a direct result of Canada's lan-ure to appreciate cold storage our fruit trade decreased by $14,000,000 last year. New Zealand's export trade is growing enormously, espetrade is growing enormously, especially in dairy products, and all through a system of transportation, which is thus described by Mr. J. Al Ruddick, chief of the dairy division of the Department of Agriculture: "We are beginning to learn, although it seems to be a slow process, that it is important that but ter should be kept at as low a temperature as possible from the time it is made. Canadians have been losing a good deal of ground in the markets of Great Britain through ing a good deal of ground in the markets of Great Britain through markets of Great Britain through negligence on this point. In that respect we are a long way behind our friends in New Zealand. All the refrigerator steamers sailing from New Zealand carry frozen meat. It is a matter of necessity that the temperature in the chamber be kept very low. As a matter of fact they very low. As a matter of fact, they are carrying frozen meat at a temperature from zero to 10 degrees. Butter, when it is shipped from New Zealand to England, is placed in the the frozen meat trade. As the butter trade has grown, the same boats have been used for the purpose, and so they have the best possible service for sending butter to England. Butter to be exported from New Zealand is put in store and frozen, and kept at a temperature of 10 degrees at least four full days before going aboard the steamer. So the butter is kept at a low temperature from the third or fourth day after it is made until it reaches England. This is one reason why New Zealand has been making such great progress has been making such great' progres in securing the trade of Great Britain for her butter. They are getting a good price, almost equal to Danish."

ROOM FOR STATESMANSHIP. As Mr. Armstrong pointed out, it As Mr. Armstrong pointed out, it is almost useless for a farmer to have a cold storage plant unless the storage chain is complete from orchard to table. Of what benefit is it to the fruit exporter to preserve his apples in fine condition for months if they must be shipped on a boat whose facilities are of the crudest kind? If there is not proper storage at the other end of the line, the precautions of both grower and steamship company amounts to little. The need is for a statesman who thoroughly understands the sitwho thoroughly understands the sit-uation to force the Government to take action in the interests of the fruit-growers of Canada. Cheesel and butter-makers would benefit just as much as fruit-raisers. These are the industries upon which Ontaria and the East must chiefly rely in order to maintain their standing, for wheat is surely the spoil of the Westerners.

Head and Has Disappeared.

Hamilton, July 15.—At the new brickyard yesterday morning, between 7 and 8 o'clock. Peter Williams, 3 George street, was laid out with a pickame. It is alleged that Jas. Shackleton, 876 West Jackson street, a south African veteran, threw the pick at him. A sad feature of the case is that Williams was married only two weeks age. He is an Englishman, and has been in Canada only ten months. From what the police have learned they say that Shackleton was teasing the Englishman and that a quarrel started. Shackleton and that a quarrel started. Shackleton and that a quarrel started. Shackleton then threw the pick. He left the brickyards soon after the occurrence, wenthome, changed his clothes and disappeared. He told some of his fellow workmen that he did not intend to hurt the Englishman.

There was little change in the condition of Williams last night. An operation was performed in the afternoon, and he has regained consciousness. The authorities considered his condition se critical that they decided to take an ante-mortem statement. T. H. Crerar, Acting Crewn Attorney, and Acting Chief Prentice went to the hospital for that purpose. There is still no lidings of Shackleton.

NORWEGIAN'S WORK

ROALD AMUNDSEN, WHO LOCAT-ED NORTH MAGNETIC POLE.

Declared to Be the Greatest Geographical Feat of the Present Century-First Gained Fame as First Officer of Belgian South Polar Expedition -Succeeded In Getting Through the Northwest Passage.

The world of science is taking great interest in the report that the Norwegian explorer Capt. Roald Amundsen has succeeded in his attempt to get through the northwest passage and locate accurately the north magnetic pole. A university professor-declares the accomplishment the greatest geographical feat of the present century. Capt. Amundsen set out on his quest June 17, 1993, from Christiania, Norway, expecting to be gone about four way, expecting to be gone about four years. He sailed in a small sloop of forty-six tons, the Gjoa, equipped with CAPTAIN AMUNDSEN. a petroleum engine for use in case of need, and with him were but seven others, Lieut. Gotfred Hansen of the Royal Danish Navy and six seames. The whole cost of the expedition was only about $27,000, which Amundsen paid chiefly out of his own pocket, so great was his interest in the problems he longed to solve for the world.

lems he longed to solve for the world. Iems ne longed to solve for the world.

The north magnetic pole is to be distinguished from the geographical north pole. The latter is a point; the former is believed to be a considerable area at Boothia, the most northerly peninsula of the North American continent, about 1,200 miles from the geographical northerly. There are magnetic forces in the pole. There are magnetic forces in the earth which cause the compass to assume a certain position at each place on the earth's surface. The north end of the needle points northward, but not exactly in the direction of the geographical pole. At some places it points east of the true north, at others west. east of the true north, at others west. If expeditions were to be imagined starting from various places on the surface of the earth and each moving forward always in the direction indicated by the north end of the compass needle these expeditions would at last meet at Boothia, which is thus called the north magnetic pole of the earth. If the expeditions took the direction indicated by the south ends of the needle dicated by the south ends of the needle they would meet on the Antarctic conthen, near the south pole, in Victoria Land. This is the south magnetic pole. These places are remarkable in that a so-called magnetic dipping needle will assume a vertical position at either of them, with the north end downward at the near the magnetic pole and vice versa.

the north magnetic pole, and vice versa. In 1831 the British Government sent In 1831 the British Government sent an expedition to the northwest of the American continent, and one of its members, Sir James Ross, surveyed the region with the view of discovering the north point of magnetism. He found that in Beothia the dipping needle was deflected only one-sixtleth of a degree from a vertical position. His instruments were not so accurate as degree from a vertical position. His instruments were not so accurate as those since invented. He assumed the magnetic pole to be actually only a point. Since his time scientists have justed themselves with questioning whether the pole remains where it was fixed by Ross or is constantly changing. It was to make observations which It was to make observations which would settle such points as these and also to make his way through the also to make his way through the northwest passage that Amundsen set out. Before he left Neumayer, the great German magnetician, said to him, "Young man, if you are able to make an exact determination of the earth's negociate north policy way will do a work magnetic north pole you will do a work of immense value to science.' Capt. Amundsen gained fame eight meandering is not what it is cracked years ago when he was first officer of years ago, when he was inst oneer of the Belgian south polar expedition, and it was while blocked in the ice of the Antarctic seas that he conceived the desire to penetrate the northwest passage and accurately locate the north magnetic pole.

The Auditor-General. Ottawa, July 17.—There were 47 inembers present when the Mouse met at 11 q'olock for its first Saturday sitat 11 o'clock for its first Saturday sit-ting this session. On motion to go into aupply, Mr. Leanex urged that, even at this late hour, some readjustment might be raide of the differences be-tween the Government and the Audi-tor-General, whereby his services might be retained to the country. Mr. Len-mex wanted a committee appointed to go ever the Audit Act and collect in-formation in order that next session a system of improvement in financial anagement of Canadian affairs might be evolved.

In reply, Sir Wilfrid Laurier said he could net agree. Taking the working of the Audit Act, there was no reason for doubting its efficiency. It might not be perfect in every detail, but it was generally sufficient for the purposes for which it was created. Sir Wilfrid, referring to the Auditor-General, said his dury was simply to see that the money voted by Parliament was expended as ordered by Parliament. Sometimes the Government had accepted the imprevements suggested by Mr. Macdougall; sometimes it had not. In the latter event, he thought he was the latter event, he thought he was perfectly correct in saying that the action of the Government had never been challenged. The Auditor-General should-be the auditor, not the revisor, of the will of Parliament.

Made His Bed, Must Lie On It.

Made His Bed, Must Lie On It.

Regarding his resignation, Sir Wilfrid declared it was of his own free will, and not due to any action of the Government. He had made his position, and would have to abide by it.

Mr. Fester said that, during his term of office as Finance Minister, he always found Mr. Macdeugail a reasonable man, with a single eye to performance of duty in protesting, the interests of the country. The Auditor-General was deswinced that improvements to the Audit Act should be made. Mr. Fester-went on to say that, after all he had heard, and known of the Auditor-General, he had never, to his knowledge, tried to revise the policy of the Government. The Auditor-General wanted a treasury board that was fair. He also wanted reasons given when his recommendations were overruled. The Prime Minister had agreed that this request was reasonable. This opened, in Mr. Foster's opinion, the door to a reconciliation.

Resignation To Be Accepted. In reply, Mr. Fielding prefaced his remarks by saying, "The resignation of the Additor-General will be accepted, his successor appointed, and the public business will go on." Mr. Figlding, with some beat, declared that Mr. Mac-dougall had treated the Government dought had treated the Government most unfairly. It had been the wish that he should go in peace, but the time had come when the position of the Government in the matter must be vindicated. Statements such as had been made could not go on further without explanation. All the suggestions made by the Auditor-General could be carried out within the four corners of the Audit Act. Mr. Macdougall was, in the opinion of Mr. Fielding, an honorable man, but, in the opinion of the Government, he had an entirely wrong conception of the Audit Act. He wanted to be a dictator and controller. He desired to hose the public husiness of dicated. Statements such as had been

When the House met after luncheon, Mr. Fielding continued his diátribe against Mr. Macdougall. He cited numagainst Mr. Macdougall. He cited num-rous cases in which, in his opinion, the Auditor-General had exceeded the duties of his office. Mr. Fielding clos-ed by making a warm defence of the action of the Government in the dif-ferences with the Auditor-General. R. L. Deadly Explosion at the Home of George Carswell Blows Stove to Atoms

Dastardly Deed Preceded by Anony mous and Theatening Letters-Loaded Revolver.

As an ugly climax to a somewhat mysterious series of circumstances came the terrible explosion in the nome of George Carswell yesterday, when his kitchen stove was blown to atoms and Mrs. Carswell had a very close call for her life.

Police Officer Dezelia has charge of the investigation of this striking

A few days ago James Carswell, the brother, received the following anonymous letter through the mails headed by the pen drawing of a wide-

C. C. RICHARDS & CO.
Gentlemen,—Last August my horse was badly cut in eleven places by a barbed wire fence. Three of the cuts, small ones, healed soon, but the officers became foul and rotten, and though I tried many kinds of medicine they had no beneficial result. At last a doctor advised me to use MINARD'S LINIMENT and in four weeks' time every sore was healed and the hair has grown over each one infine condition. The liniment is certainly wonderful in its working.

LYDIA'S QUORUM

"Well, Lyddy, I'll get you the job if can, but it's going to be a mighty hard thing to get a 'corum,' " Deacon Watrous was saying. "You see, that young Wight thinks we ought to have a man. Of course you'll have my vote, but Bill Stiles is always straddlin' fence, and the last man he talks to gets This young feller's highfalutin talk kind of caught Bill's fancy, and he was totterin', but I took him in hand and now he's leanin' our way again.
I'll stick to him tighter than a brother and keep him away from Wight till the meetin' is over. It's tomorrow night."

"You are so good, Deacon Watrous, replied Lydia, raising grateful eyes, "and if I get the place I'll do my best to vindicate your choice."

"I'll do all I can, Lyddy," said the Lydia Gardner had spent the past summer away from home, and when she returned to the farm she had found the family in a state of gloom. Crops had been poor, a number of cattle had died, and the inevitable mort-gage had to be met. Lydia proposed to meet it by teaching in the district school. She had been reasonably certain of securing the position, counting on the deacon and Bill for a quorun but now this young man, who had fallen heir to the farm of his uncle, John Wight, and had come to the Corners in her absence, might carry his point of hiring a man to teach.

She simply had to have the position, and she determined to help Deacon Watrous in his efforts to secure Bill's needed vote It would be useless for her to appeal to Bill—"Weathercock Bill," as he was called. She resolved to make a bold move and encounter the enemy whom she had never seen.

Hugh Wight was in the sitting room the old homestead pondering over this same subject of a quorum. When he succeeded to his inheritance he had determined to become a practical farmer and win the esteemed position his uncle had ever maintained in the hearts of the simple country folk. They had laughed at the young man for thinking he could be a farmer, but he had shown them he could learn from They were glad to have him succeed his uncle as a member of the school committee. That seemed to be more in his line

He had as firm convictions on the educational question as he had on most subjects, and he thought a man more fitted to wrestle with the difficulties of a country school than a woman. He bad not seen this applicant, but he did not approve of a young girl who had no preparation or experience in teach

In the midst of his cogitations there was a rap at the outer door. He opened it to admit a winsome, willowy girl with big, innocent eyes and an artless

"Are you Mr. Wight? I am Lydia

He acknowledged the introduction gravely and asked her to be scated. Hugh Wight was not a susceptible man, and Lydia's beauty only strengthened him in his belief that she was not competent for the position of school-competent for the position of school-teacher at the Corners.

"I am, as you know," she said, "a candidate for the position of teacher. I hear that you are in favor of hiring a man for the place, and I don't suppose anything that I could say would change your opinion. I came to ask you not to induce Bill Stiles to vote against me. He was somewhat surprised at this frank appeal. He liked directness.

"It means a good deal to us," she continued earnestly, "and if I don't get My salary would help him more than you can know."

Hugh felt as if he had been stealing sheep. She did not want the money for fripperies, then, but to help her father.
"What do you mean by my influencing Bill?" he asked.

"It's like this," she explained. "Deacon Watrous is of course for me, and Bill is, too, or would be, if you leave him alone and say nothing about the advantages of having a man, but the last person that approaches Bill has him, and they say you have a convinc-ing tongue. The deacon is going to try and keep Bill away from you until the meeting is over, but I didn't care to trust to that, so I came to ask you, I wouldn't presume to ask you to vote for me, only to let Bill alone."

Up to this time the eyes, voice and manner of the young man had not been at all encouraging, but in the hearty peal of infectious laughter that followed her request Lydia caught a note of appreciation, and some way she derived hope from his amusement.

"Miss Gardner, it strikes me as rather odd that you should come and show me the way to gain my point and then ask me not to take it."
"Maybe it is," she said wistfully,

"but I didn't know what else to do." He remained in deep study for a moment. He did not like to be influenced by personalities.

"Well," he said abruptly, "I'll not speak to Bill or in his presence about this matter, and I'll waive my objec-tions for this year and vote for you myself, though I still believe a man should have the place." Two bright spots burned in Lydia's

"Thank you. I will now have anook incredulous. They all said about here that you, a 'city chap,' could never make a farmer, but you showed them you could. I'll show you I can make a teacher."

Having made this telling point, Lydia took her departure. Immediately the housekeeper came in and expressed her approval of Wight's concession "Lyddy's a smart gal, and for all her purty looks and baby way she's got a heap of grit. Pity her pa didn't have it. He used to be a professor, and he's eddicated Lyddy to use good speech."

At the meeting the next night Lydla received a unanimous vote, and when teacher. She made companions of the big boys and girls and pets of the little ones. The country people were perfectly satisfied. In due course of time Deacon Watrous and Bill Stiles came to make the accustomed visit. Lydia was fully prepared for this occasion and in-vited them to question the class. They knew but a few questions to ask, and as they had paid many visits to the school the pupils knew the answers by school the pupils knew the answers by heart. Then Lydia asked them to sing a stirring war song and a hymn. Bill's little girl spoke a piece, carefully re-hearsed beforehand. The two members went away enthusiastic over the new teacher and told Wight he had better go and see for himself.

And he did, appearing suddenly and unexpectedly near the close of an Indian summer afternoon. Lydia's expression of dismay caused a titter of appreciation among the older boys. Instead of a reprimand she gave them an imploring look that could not be withstood, and order reigned at once. Ly-dia felt that the visitor had noted the look and interpreted it as a confession of inability to govern.

Just as she was about to call upon the school for a song little Bob Hanks let loose a mouse he had carefully confined in his book bag. Excitement prevailed among the girls and delight among the boys. Had Lydia known that she was to lose her position she would still have done as she did now, jumped up on her chair.

Hugh caught the mouse, threw-it out of the window, ejected Bob and his book bag and in stentorian tone restored order. Lydia came down from her chair and in her confusion called upon the arithmetic class to come forward. She wished that Lige Jenkins had remained at home that day. Arithmetic was not his forte. She planned adroitly to omit him, but the visitor in stantly detected the omission and pounced upon the unfortunate lad. "Lige," he asked, "how many times loes 9 go in 27?"

To Lydia's dismay Lige promptly stepped to the blackboard and commenced a solution via long division. finally putting down 2 for an an-"Try again, Lige," urged Wight

Lige then substituted the figure

"You've got another guess coming, Lige."

The boy looked bewildered, and Lydia desperately came to his rescue "Lige, won't it go three times?" she asked insinuatingly.

Lige looked at her axiously.
"Why, yes," he replied slowly, "it will, but it's a dern'd tight squeeze!"

Then came that delightful unconstrained burst of laughter that Lydis Wight. The school joined with him The teacher looked at the clock and thankfully observed it was time for dismissal. She stood at the door until the last scholar had vanished. Then she came back to the platform, where Wight still sat and Lige lingered.

"Say," observed the lad earnestly 't'ain't her fault. I never did know nuthin' about 'rithmetic nohow. She's the best teacher we ever had." This touch of sympathy from the little champion was too much for Ly-dia. Her self control slipped, and her head went down on the desk

"Lige," said Wight gently, "you did better than I expected. There are lots of things in life more desirable than a knowledge of the science of numbers Take this dime and go down to the Corners and see what it will buy."

The boy sped happily away. Lydis raised her head. A little gleam of anger and defiance flashed through the

"You can send and get a man teacher as soon as you want to. I am glad I am not a man."

"So am I, Lydia," he said heartily, with such earnestness of voice and eyes that the slender hand of the schoolteacher went up in a pathetic little way to her eyes.

"I am your 'quorum,' you know," he said whimsically, but with the new softness still in his voice, "and I didn't come to inspect the school nor the scholars, but to take the teacher driving. Will she go?"

Her hands came quickly down from her eyes, whose dimness was melting away in a glow of pleasure. "Yes," she replied, "I will go."

The New England Kitchen.

There is a kind of sentiment about the kitchen in New England—a kind of sentiment not provoked by other rooms. Here the farmer drops in to spend a few minutes when he comes back from the barn or field on an errand. Here in the great, clean, sweet, comfortable place, the busy housewife lives, sometimes rocking the cradle, sometimes opening and shutting the oven door, sometimes stirring the pot, darning stockings, paring vegetables or mixing goodies in a yellow bowl. The children sit on the steps, stringing beans, shelling peas or bulling peas or hulling berries, the cat sleeps on the floor near the wood box and the visitor feels exiled if he stays in sitting room other incentive to do my best. Belfast, July 15.—An independent section of Ulster Orangemen, headed by Commoner Sloan, has issued a strik-ing manifesto to the country, appealing for the burial of sectarianism, which now is dividing Protestants and Catho-ness and involves the conception of lics, and invoking the co-operation of all secular forces in the promotion of the national welfare.

all secular forces in the promotion of the national welfare.

The manifesto expreses distrust of English parties, which, it says, will continue in the future as in the past to play off Catholics and Protestants against each other to the prejudice of the country's higher claims.

The country too long has been neglected in the strife of periy and creed, the manifesto continues, and there now is room for a patriotic party having the policy to rid Ireland of the domination of impractible creeds and organized tyrannies and to secure the desired redress.

$100 REWARD $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Conscription Impossible.

London, July 14.—In the House of Commons last night, Premier Balfour refered to the speech of Field Marshal Lord Roberts, and said he could never be led to believe that conscription could be successfully adopted in England. He maintained that the Government's scheme of army reform was the best solution of the problem.

Nervous mothers have nervous children and many a man and woman owes an irritable and despondent temperament to those days of dread when the mother waited the hour of her maternity. The use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription strengthens the mother for her trial. With strength comes a baoyancy of spirits and quietness of mind, which is one of the happiest gifts a mother can bestow on her offspring. sale Murderer McGill.

New York, July 15.—A New Orleans despatch to The Times says: From Mobile late Thursday night came the news from Honduras that Robert McGill, the Honduran who murdered 11 persons on an English vessel recently, was lynched at Utilla, Henduras.

President Bonilla had declared that he wanted no lynchings, as McGill was a British subject, but the citizens were wrought to a fremsy through the narrative of Miss Morgan, who has recovered to tell the happenings on the schooner. The jail was surrounded at nightfall, the guard quickly everpowered and McGill, raving and cursing, dragged from his cell.

It was proposed to burn him in front of the home of Miss Morgan. The mob went so far as to build the fire, but the pleadings of the British consular agent finally persuaded the mob to put the negro to a less fearful death. He was bound, and still protesting and begging strung up to the verandah of the Morgan home and riddled with bullets.

LIVELY FIRE AT WINDSOR, N. S. Historic Hotel Is Gutted—Town Was

In Danger. Halifax, July 15 .- Fire started in the Halifax, July 15.—Fire started in the Dufferin Hotel at Windsor, N. S., about 10.30 o'clock yesterday morning and gained great headway in a few minutes. All the firemen could do was to keep the fire from spreading to the buildings on the left, Bennett, Smith & Sons' block, and ether buildings in the vicinity. The falling of burning timbers caused great danger. The hotel was built in 1366, the year the Prince of Wales visited Windsor.

The citisens worked with buckets to put out fires on buildings caused by sparks. The new station was in great danger, and at noon the round house and freight shed were on fire. It was impossible to stand on Upper Water street on socount of the terrific heat.

At 2.30 the fire was about out. The Dufferin building is a perfect wreck. The D. A. R. station was on fire at the time, and the train going west was delayed three hours. There is about $12,000 insurance on the Dufferin.

Hope For Indigent Insane

Hepe For Indigent Insane:

Toronto, July 15.—Premier Whitney yesterday listened to a plan eutlined by a delegation of doctors by which they hope to avert the ever-increasing number of the insane. The plan suggested to the Government is to practically train the doctors and nurses who come in contact with such cases what proper treatment should be, and also the sending of patients to wards established in hospitals, instead of placing them under the harsh care of a common jail. There will probably be such a ward established in the new hospital. A commission on lunacy was advocated. Dr. Pyne, who, with the Premier, listened to the various speakers, was warmly in favor of the proposition. The Premier was not prepared to say how the proposals of the deputation would be treated, but he assured those present that the Government was alive to the gravity of the situation and were pleased to have suggestions made.

Hundreds of Shots Fired.

New York, Ju y 15.—"San Juan Hill," the district bounded by Amsterdam and West End avenues and Sixty-fired sirects, so called because of its notoriety as a battle-ground, was the scene last night of a furlous race riot, which required the reserves of no less than 17 police precincts, numbering more than 250 men, to queil after many shots had been fired and several persons had been seriously injured. No one was killed.

Tokio, July 16.—(2 p.m.)—It is officially announced that the Russian centre holding Darlins and vicinity was attacked July 11, and offered stubborn resistance. The attack was remawd at dawn of July 12, when the Japanese dislodged the Russians, driving them in the direction of Mauka. This vicitory ensures complete occupation of South Sakhalin by the Japanese, included among whom was Lieut. Maximta. Four field pieces, one machine gun and the ammunition warehouses were captured. The Japanese-loss was about 70 men killed or wounded. The Russians lost some 160 men. Quiet at Gusshu Pass.

Gunshu Pass, July 16.—Reports that the Russian army is in a precarlous situation appear to be without foundation. Investigations made by correspondents of the Associated Press show that neither flank has been turned, and that in fact the Russian wings, are more advanced than the centre. The Japanese centre is strengly fortified. Many siege guns have been emplaced along the Changtufu-Nanchenge line, and there is a triple ring of forts commanding the Mandarin-road. The Japanese are using novel elephant-trap style of entrenchments, consisting of ditches covered with platforms, which are balanced in the middle, and which till into vertical positions under the feet of the attackers.

China's Rele.

St. Petersburg, July 16.—China's possible role in the Russo-Japanese peace negotiations is attracting more attention. The foreign office intimates that China's notification that she would decline unless assent was previously given to her to send a representative to the peace conference, to consider the Washington treaty binding if its provisions affecting Chinese territory were regarded as prejudicial, was sent to all the powers in the form of a circular note. Russia, according to the foreign office, sent no reply to Pekin, but it may be significant that some papers which occasionally have official inspiration, like Prince Cuktomsky's Viedomosti, look with complaisance, if not satisfaction, upon the prospect 'hat China may try to have a voice in the terms of peace.

The Shanghai correspondent of a news agency reports that China has already selected Wu Ling Fang, former minister to Washington, to go to the United States to watch the proceedings.

Hartwig, director of the first department of the foreign office, to state that the instructions to the Russian plenipotentiaries cover 20 pages. They are very detailed, being especially specific as to the leveling of the fortifications of Vladivostak.
