Russia confronts America with an example to our shame. A little ahead of us in Emancipation, she is greatly ahead of us in securing civil rights to the emancipated. At the Worcester Convention in Massachusetts, over which Mr. Sumner presided, M. Kannist, a gentleman connected with the Chancerv of the Emperor Alexander, was on the platform, and had the unusual happiness of hearing his own country quoted by an American senator as in some respects a model for the American Republic. The argument was so pert, the allusion so happy, and the occasion so striking, that the convention broke forth with simultaneous applause, in the midst of which the representative of imperialism bowed his acknowledgements. It remains for the representatives of republicanism to profit by the les-

And the house of representatives answered Washington by the voice of Madison: "We adore the invisible hand which has led the American people through so many difficulties to cherish a conscious responsi bility for the destiny of republican liberty." More these words were spoken; the United States have Ye wiles waste the dark hours in raking and passed through severer trials than were then foreseen; and now, at this epoch in our existence as our nation, with our Union purified by sorrows, and strengthened by conflict, and established by the virtues of the people, the greatness of the occasion invites us once more to reneat with solemnity, the pledges of our fathers to hold ourselves answerable before our fellow-men for the success of the republican form of government. Experience has proved its sufficiency in peace and in war; it has vindicated its authority through dangers, and afflictions, and sudden and terrible emergenties, which would have crushed any system that had been less firmly fixed in the heart of the people. At the inauguration of Washington the foreign relations of the country were few. and its trade was repressed by hostile regulations : now all the civilized nations of the globe welcome our commerce, and their governments its way hesitatingly along an untried path, with communication as to be hardly known to one another, and with few historic traditions extending the states is swift and intimate; the experience tions, and has created an intense, indestructible nationality. Soon I let the busy town with its many lights behind me, and stepped out into the dismal moor. The snow lay much deeper here on the untrodden footpath, and seemed to fall even more heavily than before, so thick and blinding that I found myself perpetually straying from the proper roadway, and with difficulty retraced my steps; the cold felt keener also and a sharp east wind had risen. At times I grew almost breathless with the stroggle, and thad to pause for gathering strength ere Liseed the storm once more. At length I rejoiced to see the guiding-post, which was placed where three roads metant against which I was thankful to lean for a few asconds until I had recovered breath.
