Religious Events Briefly Recorded.

(Catholic Standard and Times.)

A Dutch Catholic pilgrimage will visit Rome between the 9th and 20th of April.

The consecration of Mgr. Brindley as Bishop-Assistant of Westminster will, it is expected, take place on March 24.

Sister Mary Helen Ellis, one of the few survivors of the band of Sisters of Mercy who, under Miss Nightingale, went to attend the English soldiers in the Crimea, died lately at Walthamstow, England, in her eighty-second year.

Two peasants, man and wife, says the "Westminster Gazette," lately made their appearance at the Vatican bearing a letter of introduction to an official. They brought with them £3,200 as an offering from a donor who did not wish to be known and distrusted ordinary means of conveyance. It was delivered into His Holiness' own hands.

There is some speculation in Paris as to the possibility of the Princess Frederik Charles of Prussia being a Catholic. The Princess is now in Rome for the rest of the winter and it is recalled that her relatives, the Duke of Anhalt-Kothen and the Duchess Julia Anna, were received into the Roman Communion in 1874, in the Church of St. Paul, St. Louis, Rue St. Antoine, Paris.

A number of prominent women are in Catholic convents in England. Two of the Ladies Howard, sisters of the Duke of Norfolk, are nuns; so are Lady Edith Fielding, sister of Lord Denbigh; Lady Frances Bertie, sister of Lord Abington; Miss Dorman, daughter of Lord Dorman; two Misses Clifford, sisters of Lord Clifford, and Lord Lauderdale. Two of the Viscountesses Clifden's brothers are priests, one being Mgr. Clonon.

English exchanges announce the death of Right Rev. Abbot Henry Edmund Moore, O. S. B., at St. Mary's Woolton, near Liverpool, and Rev. Father Peter Sablon, O. P., at St. Peter's Priory, Hinkley, Leicestershire. Father Sablon was in his 83d year. He was companion to Father Thomas Barke when the latter visited the United States in the early seventies. His golden jubilee in religion took place October 14, 1898, and his diamond jubilee on the same date in 1898.

Catholic visitors to the Bernese Oberland who make the chief city of Switzerland their headquarters will be glad to hear that Bern now possesses a proper church wherein they may hear Mass. For years the Catholics of that city were obliged to go to Mass in a sort of out-house. Then the French Calvinists gave them the use of their "temple" on Sundays and festivals; but they have at last their basilica, situated near the Deer Garden. The church has been consecrated, and a Pontifical Mass sung there lately on the occasion of the jubilee of the Emperor of Austria, who is one of the benefactors of the Catholic community in Bern.

Semi-official information received from Rome confirms the announcement made some weeks ago that Rev. Canon E. X. Cloutier, of Three Rivers, Canada has been chosen by the Pope to fill the vacant See of Three Rivers, in lieu of the late Mgr. Lafleche. It has been known ever since the death of the latter that Canon Cloutier was his choice and that he had strongly recommended his appointment. Canon Cloutier was born at Ste. Genevieve de Batiscan November 2, 1848. He was ordained to the priesthood at Nicolet in 1872, and for some years was a professor and prefect of studies at the Seminary of Three Rivers and vicar of the Cathedral. In 1893 he accompanied Mgr. Lafleche to Rome, and on his return was appointed a canon and rector of the Cathedral of Three Rivers.

An ordinary meeting of the Sacred Congregation of Rites was held on the 11th instant at the Vatican, the Cardinal members and theological consultants giving decisions on the following questions: 1. Resumption of the cause for the canonization of Blessed Diego, of Cadix, confessor of the Minor Capuchins. 2. Introduction of the cause for the beatification and canonization of the servant of God, Alice Le Clerc, foundress of the Institution of Our Lady. 3. Election of St. Alfonso de Liguori as Protector of Nobles. 4. Election of St. Florian, Martyr, as patron of the new parish of Jersey, in the Archdiocese of Poona. 5. Concession and approval of the office and Mass proper in honor of Saints Placidus, Martyr, and Sigisbert, Confessor, founders of the Abbey of Desert, in the Diocese of Coira. 6. Solution of several liturgical questions.

The Catholics of Belgium follow with especial interest the steps that are being taken to procure the canonization of their renowned fellow-countrymen, Father Damien, the apostle of the lepers. To the committee which has been constituted to promote the introduction of the cause Leo XIII. has recently addressed a telegram, in which His Holiness expresses his desire to see in Belgium and other Catholic countries an increase in the veneration entertained for the heroic martyr of Molokai. It appears that Cardinal Parocchi, Prefect of the Congregation charged with the process of the canonization of saints, is very favorable to the introduction of Father Damien's cause. His Eminence has given every encouragement to the superior general of the order of which the saintly priest was a member, assuring him that the cause fulfilled all the necessary conditions. Cardinal Parocchi does not hesitate to compare the zeal and devotion of Father Damien displayed towards the lepers of Molokai to the sublime charity of St. Peter Claver for the Negroes.

The mammoth task of lighting the Vatican palace and gardens with electricity has just been completed under the able direction of Father Cabelli, a Milanese priest, who is also one of the greatest authorities on electric engineering in Italy. Father Cabelli has been warmly congratulated by the Pontiff on the very successful manner in which the complicated plant was installed. When we remember that there are over one thousand rooms in the Vatican, all of which are now lighted by electricity, it is easy to understand why the preparations occupied several months, a delay for which the Rev. Father Cabelli has been unjustly criticized. The ceremony of blessing the powerful dynamo and apparatus was performed by Mgr. Piffert, sacristan and parish priest of the apostolic palace. The Holy Father, who is a great admirer of modern science and of its marvelous applications, is now engaged in writing a Latin "Ode on Electricity" which is nearly completed, and will be published very shortly. A distinguished priest, who has had the privilege of seeing the work, says it is a veritable jewel of poetic inspiration and elegance.

The Golden Rose.

It is a very ancient rite of the Church that the Pope should, on the fourth Sunday in Lent (Rose Sunday), bless a Golden Rose which is usually sent to a Sovereign, to a celebrated church, or to some eminent personage. This present was substituted for the gold and silver keys, and for the pieces cut with a file from the chains that are said to have bound the hands of St. Peter, which were formerly sent. The solemn ceremony of blessing the Golden Rose, which takes place in the papal chapel in Rome, is thus described: A cardinal priest celebrates Mass, and some distinguished ecclesiastic delivers a sermon in Latin. The Golden Rose is blessed by the Pontiff himself, who recites a prayer, in which Our Lord is described as "the flower of the fields and the lily of the valleys." The Pope consecrates the rose with balsam, sprinkles on it powdered musk, and makes the Sign of the Cross over it with incense; then deposits it on the altar, where it remains during Mass. This ceremony is very ancient. It was observed as far back as the eleventh century. In the Middle Ages, when the Pope resided in the Lateran Palace, having first blessed the rose, he went on horseback to the venerable Basilica of Holy Cross, one of the seven principal churches of Rome. He wore the mitre, was accompanied by all the cardinals, and held the blessed flower in his hand. Having reached the basilica, he made a discourse on the mystic rosary symbolized by the beauty, the color, and the fragrance of the rose. Mass was then celebrated. After the Mass the Pope returned to the Lateran Palace. Surrounded by the Sacred College, he rode across the plain which separates the two basilicas, with the mystic flower still in his hand. For several centuries the custom has been to present the rose to some Catholic prince or princess; the Holy Father delivering it saying, "Receive this rose, the symbol of Jerusalem militant and Jerusalem triumphant, which shows to all Christians that the fairest of flowers is the joy and the crown of the saint. Receive it, beloved, noble, powerful and virtuous son [or daughter], that our Lord Jesus Christ may ennoble you, like to a rose planted on the border of a running stream. May God, thrice holy throughout all eternity, grant unto you this grace out of His abundant mercy and bounty! Amen—Ave Maria."

Over the Andes.

In Frank Leslie's Magazine the reader may find an interesting account, penned by F. Williamson, of a journey up the Magdalena River and a ride over the Andes to the Colombian capital Bogota. That city, we learn from this narrative, was founded in 1536 by Quesada, and is the finest and most interesting town in the republic. "On one side it is approached by a long avenue of acacia trees, and above the city tower the massive heights of Guadalupe and Monserrate. How high up in the mountains, reached only by the worst of mule tracks, and within five degrees of the equator, is this rich old city with 120,000 inhabitants, well paved streets, electric lights, telephones and trolley cars, and filled with the artistic productions of Europe. In the centre of the city is the Plaza Bolivar, with its gardens filled with old-fashioned European flowers, side by side with tropical plants. On the eastern side of the square stands the old cathedral, with its twin towers of gray masonry, looking very stately against the dark purple mountains behind. Near the cathedral is the beautiful Capella San Salvador (chapel of Our Saviour) filled with ancient paintings—many of them of great interest—and the vaulted ceiling covered with elaborately carved paneling. Below are the quaintly carved wooden galleries on each side of the nave, above the stone arcade. The kneeling, black-robed figures seen against the beautiful old gilded altar-piece in the dim light give one an impression long to be remembered." The contrasts that are to be seen in this Colombian capital are many and seem strange to American eyes, and only a short distance from the busiest Colombian towns this writer says you may lose yourself in forests whose primeval stillness is unbroken.—S. H. Review.

Monsieur Hobson and a Spanish Sister of Charity.

In an account of the sinking of the Merrimac contributed to the "Century Magazine" by Lieutenant Hobson he pays a beautiful tribute to a Spanish Sister of Charity. Describing the room he occupied in a prison at Santiago, he says: "I could see soldiers sweeping and washing up, while furniture was being taken in, among which I noticed with satisfaction a kind of Frank R. Robertson contributes to the Cosmopolitan an instructive paper descriptive of Manila as it appeared after its capture by the American forces. He deals quite at length with the character of the Filipinos, among whom he says that there exists an intellectual standard that is not at all understood or appreciated by Americans. He was present at the native congress held at Malolos last September, when the Philippine republic was declared, and of the eighty-three members present, seventeen, he says, were university graduates. Admitting the practical impossibility of portraying accurately the moral character of the Filipino, Mr. Robertson, nevertheless, credits him with a number of natural virtues and not a few vices. He tells us that the people of one island do not know those of other islands, do not speak the same language as their island neighbors and have different customs and habits. "A considerable element of the population," he says, "is the issue of unions between European and Chinese men and native women. The Chinese, almost without exception, marry Philippine women—a fact that accounts for more than two hundred thousand mestizos, or half-breeds. The Filipino, in a general sense, the one used by the foreigners in common conversation, is born of Spanish parents in the islands. In a true, technical sense, the genuine Filipino is the native Indian of the islands. He is referred to by the Spanish and Spanish-born Filipinos as Indian." Of Aguinaldo this writer says that he is braver personified; that his one consuming passion is liberty, and that he has sixty-five thousand well armed men, mostly Tagals, natives of Luzon, at his command. If that be true, unless diplomatic methods are brought to bear upon the Filipino leader, General Otis may find that he has a bigger job than he anticipated, apparently, on his hands. It is Mr. Robertson's opinion, however, that the Filipinos are not capable of governing their country.—S. H. Review.

Cardinal Mertel celebrated his ninety-third birthday on Thursday, February 9. Nino Cardinals—Caneva, Mertel, Coles, Richard, Kromann, Gruscha, Galeotti, Slauch, and Steinbuer—make up among them the respectable total of seven hundred and thirty-five years.

Acute Rheumatism

Pains in the Foot and Limb—A Complete Cure Accomplished by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"For a number of years I was afflicted with acute rheumatism in my left side and all the way down my limb into my foot. I live five blocks from my work and had to stop and rest several times in going and coming. I could get no relief from my troubles and was on the point of giving up my job when I happened to hear of Hood's Sarsaparilla. I purchased a bottle of this medicine and a vial of Hood's Pills and began taking them. Before I had half finished them I was relieved and it was not long before I was completely cured. I never lost an opportunity to praise Hood's Sarsaparilla, for my cure meant a great deal to me, as I have a family and must always be at my post." The Dominion exports for February fell off a quarter of a million, and the imports increased $900,000.

The foreign mails continue to arrive with the same irregularity; the teams between Aulac and Tormentine jog along at the usual slow rate, and a number of bags at Cape Tormentine Progressive, very!

The Dominion Government's bill to Gerry-mander the constituencies is far more sweeping than was at first supposed. It will apply to nearly every Province. County lines will be followed only when it suits the convenience of the Government to do so.

The Standard Oil Company conducts its business in Canada under the name of the Imperial Oil Company; but it is to all intents and purposes the same Yankee monopoly as across the line.

The residents of Fort Wrangle, and of Dyea, in that part of the Yukon territory, now in dispute, and who up to the present time have been under the jurisdiction of the United States authorities, have signified their desire to be released from their allegiance to the Republic and to become citizens of Canada.

The newspapers supporting the Government inform us that the Provincial Legislature will meet for the despatch of business on the 17th day of April. Now, all must admit that, for the great majority of the representatives, this is about as inconvenient a season of the year for them to be absent from their homes, as could possibly be chosen.

The St. John Sun, of the 16th inst., makes the following comment on the bill of fare presented at the opening of the Dominion Parliament on that date: The fourth session of the eighth parliament of Canada meets today, some two months behind time.

REPORTS from Ottawa state that, in the speech with which the session opened, the reference to the work of the Anglo-American Commission differs materially from the French version from that in the English version. The French version of the speech states that "an agreement had been reached on several of the questions at issue" when the disagreement over the boundary question arose, while the English version simply states that considerable progress had been made.

A BONDED warehouse has been established by the Dominion Government on the premises of John G. Scrimgeour, Cardigan Bridge. It is well known that this man has been one of the most notorious violators of the Scott Act in this Province. Time and again he has been convicted of infractions of the Canada Temperance Act.

Conservatives if possible. They are famous for such unfair methods of readjustment, as well as for every other manner of disfranchisement wherever they have a chance.

Referring to the extraordinary conduct of the United States representatives on joint high commission as to the Alaskan boundary matter, we find the Philadelphia Times quoted as follows: "Remembering how recently the United States threatened to go to war with Great Britain to compel her acceptance of arbitration to settle the boundary dispute with Venezuela, the attitude of the United States commissioners in refusing to refer the Alaskan boundary to arbitration seems a little embarrassing."

Now, all must admit that, for the great majority of the representatives, this is about as inconvenient a season of the year for them to be absent from their homes, as could possibly be chosen.

The speech with which the present session of the Dominion Parliament opened and which will be found in another column, certainly cannot be regarded as a singularly able state paper. It is very much more remarkable for what it omits than for what it contains. Its declarations refer almost entirely to past events rather than to the foreshadowing of future legislation.

The meeting at Pownal on Tuesday last week was organized by calling Hon. Geo. Forbes to the chair and appointing Mr. F. J. Nash Secretary. The attendance was not so large as was expected on account of the storm.

Whereas, the route of the southern branch railway and the site of the bridge across the Hillsborough River have already been surveyed, and the present Government committed to their construction.

Further resolved, that this meeting request our Provincial Government to co-operate with the Dominion Government in the construction of the proposed bridge across the Hillsborough, the object of such co-operation being to secure a track for foot and carriage passengers in connection with the railway track.

Sir Charles in Ottawa.

A FEW days before the opening of Parliament, Sir Charles Tupper was accorded a grand reception in Ottawa. An immense public meeting was held and the following resolution was enthusiastically adopted: "That this meeting in extending a hearty welcome to Sir Charles Tupper, Premier of the Dominion, congratulates him on the wonderful energy he has displayed on behalf of the Conservative party and expresses its entire confidence in his leadership, trusting that he may long be spared to lead the party, and especially to see the adoption of a preferential trade policy which will give 'empire markets for empire producers,' thus rendering us independent of America or any other nation; a policy for which Sir Charles labored so many years, and the adoption of which will be a tribute to his devotion to Canada and the Empire."

ST. PATRICK'S DAY.

The Festival of Ireland's Patron Saint was celebrated in grand style in this city, on Friday last. The Benevolent Irish Society and the Ancient Order of Hibernians turned out in force and dressed in their silks and collars of green and gold.

The A. O. H. was headed by Gaibriath's head, and the B. I. S. by the League of the Cross band. About a quarter to ten the A. O. H. started from their rooms on Queen Street and marched to the music of their band to the rooms of the B. I. S., on Kent Street.

The day was appropriately celebrated at Cardigan Bridge, where a dramatic performance entitled "The Shamrock and the Rose," was presented in the public hall in the evening.

ALMOST IN DESPAIR. "My wife suffered with pain and distress from an affection of the throat caused by impure blood. She was almost in despair of ever obtaining relief, but finally procured a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla and after taking six bottles of this medicine she was completely cured."—JOHN WICKMAN, Gall, Ontario.

Morrison as Master of Ceremonies. His Lordship, the Bishop occupied his throne assisted by Rev. Father Clark and Rev. Dr. McMillan. The sermon was preached by Rev. P. D. McMillan. His text was taken from Esther VI. VII. "Honor is he worthy of whom the King hath a mind to honor."

The following resolution was then submitted by the same gentleman and adopted: Resolved, that we recognize the valuable results of the energy and well directed labors of the Board of Trade in removing obstacles to trade and opening new avenues; and we respectfully request that they use their valuable influence to secure the construction of the Southern Railway and bridge over the Hillsborough.

pal truths that he preached on the Mount and along the coast of Galilee—this was the message that the holy apostle of Ireland declared to his people. What a change came over that land in a few years. From the memorable hill of Tara, where St. Patrick first met Ireland's pagan monarch and his chieftains on the morning of Easter day in the year 432, the blessed influence went forth; it was poured out over the whole land till one and all were converted by it.

ALMOST IN DESPAIR. "My wife suffered with pain and distress from an affection of the throat caused by impure blood. She was almost in despair of ever obtaining relief, but finally procured a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla and after taking six bottles of this medicine she was completely cured."—JOHN WICKMAN, Gall, Ontario.

THE MOTHER SUPERIOR OF THE CHARLOTTEVILLE HOSPITAL.

The Mother Superior of the Charlotteville Hospital has recently added to the pictures in the Hospital parlor excellent crayon drawings of His Grace, Archbishop Begin of Quebec, and his Lordship Bishop McDonald of Charlottetown. These drawings are of splendid likenesses of the distinguished ecclesiastics. The work was performed by Mr. F. H. Tyrone of this city, and is artistic in the highest degree. Indeed the pictures are such that much credit on Mr. Tyrone as an artist.

LITTLE PROGRESS WAS MADE ON MONDAY in removing the debris of the Windsor Hotel fire in New York in the endeavor to discover bodies supposed to be buried. All day Sunday 200 men labored and the debris, mostly made of broken stones, twisted iron and brick would admit. Heavy sifting vapor arose continually, regarding the progress of the work, and keeping them for the most part away from the center of the ruin. From Fifth Avenue north to the debris that had fallen to the street had been taken away and men were able to do considerable work, but as yet had discovered no bodies.

THE FIFTH OF THE LENTEN COURSE OF SERVICES was preached in St. Dunstan's Cathedral on Sunday evening last, by Rev. P. G. Gauthier, of St. Dunstan's College. His theme was the "Communion of Saints." The Rev. preacher pointed out that the promise of a Redeemer had been given to Adam immediately after the fall of our first parents. Before the coming of our Lord, there were those who, from the beginning, lived according to the natural law, and from the time of Moses the Jews were obliged by the law given to them by Moses. Hence there were the two divisions of the human race, the Jews and the Gentiles. After the coming of Christ, these two branches were joined together, our Lord becoming the head of all the faithful. The great union took place on the day of Pentecost, when the Spirit of God descended upon the apostles, and the Church was born. The Rev. preacher next instanced the three divisions of the Church. The Church militant on earth; the Church suffering in Purgatory and the Church militant in heaven; the Church suffering on earth. The Rev. preacher instanced the three divisions of the Church. A DREADFUL HOLOGAUST.

One of the most awful hologausts in the history of New York occurred on last Friday afternoon during the St. Patrick's Day parade, when thousands of people thronged the streets in the neighborhood of the junction of Fifth Avenue and 47th street, viewing the passage of the Irish procession. The fire broke out in the Windsor Hotel, on the corner of the streets named in which there were hundreds of guests and employes. Fire spread, with incredible rapidity. The flames went roaring up stairways and elevators and out of all means of escape. The crowds in the streets blocked the work of rescue and a terrible panic occurred in the hotel. Many people jumped from the windows and balconies and were killed and others were rescued more or less seriously, some fatally injured. The list of the injured is a long one, among the dead and missing are prominent people. Mrs. Leland, wife of the proprietor of the hotel, died in the hospital, and two of her daughters are unaccounted for. The first horror occurred just fifteen minutes after the fire broke out. A woman appeared at the window of a room on the fourth floor. She held her arms to the crowd below her. She raised her hands as if in supplication and in a moment climbed to a window and leaped. She fell about 100 feet and struck the iron railing in front of the hotel. Her body seemed to be impaled there but it fell off into the area way. She was dead. The woman was identified as Mrs. Amelia Paddock, of Irvington, New York. One of the most terrible scenes of the fire, at a time when the building was a seething cauldron of flames was the heroic rescue of several women from the upper stories. One had been carried down from the fifth story. Mrs. A. H. Fuller, of Pittsburg, Pa., then appeared with her maid at the window of the fourth story. It seemed like a ladder was raised. A fireman ran up and with great difficulty, brought down Mrs. Fuller and her maid. Just as she was getting out of the window a middle aged woman appeared at a window just north of that at which the ladder was raised. The woman fearing that she would not be saved prepared to jump. She was warned to keep back and became panic stricken and stepped back into the dense smoke that was pouring from the window. It seemed as though she had jumped and was falling below in despair. A hook and ladder man seeing the desperation of the woman seized a scaling ladder and went up a story after story through the blinding smoke. He climbed to the coping and just as the woman reappeared, the fire broke out and she was rescued. She was rescued by the firemen and taken to the hospital. She is now recovering from her injuries.

The Yeddie Gallant Case.

The court met in this city yesterday to deliver judgment in the Yeddie Gallant election case which was heard before Mr. Justice Hodgson at Alberton when Gallant was unseated and disqualified. From that decision he appealed, and the appeal was heard before the full court. The Chief Justice delivered a written decision holding that the election was void on account of corrupt practices by agents of Gallant, and on these points agreed with Mr. Justice Hodgson who first tried the case. In the second place the Chief Justice disagreed with the finding of the trial judge in holding that Gallant had personally bribed Colin Arsenault. The Chief Justice held that the money was given as a loan, and was not a corrupt act. Mr. Justice Hodgson adhered to the decision given by him at the trial and read a long judgment giving his reasons in full. Mr. Justice Fitzgerald concurred with the Chief Justice. He also read his decision. The appeal therefore from Mr. Justice Hodgson's decision was dismissed with costs to be paid by Gallant, but the disqualifying finding was reversed. The election is set aside and declared void by reason of corrupt practices by agents of Gallant.

Organization.

A large and influential meeting took place in Reid's Hall, Alberton, on Thursday, the 9th inst. Mr. James P. Cunningham, Sec. Vice President, was called to the chair, and the undersigned appointed Secretary. The President then made a few opening remarks, and called upon Mr. J. Albert Bennett, Governor, who explained fully the plan of organization, and the method by which it would be carried on. A letter was read from Mr. John P. Brennan, Governor for the Riding of Charlottetown, through illness, he was unable to be present. Mr. Edward Hawkes was then called upon, and on raising was received with shouts of applause. He went fully into the matter of organization and its importance, and then went into an exhaustive arrangement of the present government. Whereas, Sir Charles Tupper, the leader of the great Conservative party, is actively engaged in organization all over Canada, and is making a most successful campaign, and is now in the midst of a most successful campaign, and is now in the midst of a most successful campaign.

Whereas, a party organizer has been appointed in Montreal, with a view of placing the Conservative party in a perfect state of organization.

Therefore Resolved, that this meeting fully endorse the action of Sir Charles and the Conservative party in thus taking time by the forelock in preparation for the next contest.

Further Resolved, that this meeting desire to place on record its approval of the action taken by the late conference of the Liberal-Conservative party at Charlottetown, by means of which we trust a good and effective organization will be formed throughout this province, and we congratulate Senator Ferguson on the success that is crowning his efforts in the direction of organization.

The resolution was carried unanimously. Mr. H. H. Ramsay and Mr. G. R. Montgomery seconded, and the thanks of this meeting be tendered Mr. Cunningham for his able and efficient conduct in the chair, which was carried, and happily acknowledged by the President. This closed an important and successful meeting, inasmuch as we had in Mr. Larkin's conversion from the errors of Liberalism.

In Scott's Emulsion, the work is all done; that is, the oil in it is digested, all ready to be taken into the blood. The body rests, while the oil feeds and nourishes, and the hypophosphites makes the nerves steady and strong.

THE BEGGAR GIRL.

BY SARAH FRANCES ASHERBURN.

"They cruelly say, 'Move on, move on! From street to street I roam; I wish this endless tramp was done, That once I might go home.'"

"I cannot recall my mother's face, Or was it fair or brown; (Oh, that to-night I could find a place In peace to lay me down!)"

"When she died I was a little thing, Now I am nearly ten; Oh, if I could but hear her sing 'Rock-a-by-by' again!"

"To-day I saw a tiny boy, To his mother's gown he clung; He gaily skipped and laughed with joy, And she was fair and young."

"Once, as I passed along the way, A lady smiled at me; I followed her over town that day, As happy as I could be."

"I am so tired! If I could hide Beneath the window there, And watch the children play inside— I love their pretty hair!"

Under the low, broad, all the lid, And watched the children's game, Till darkness closed each weary lid, And the fragile, anguished form— —Ave Maria.

President Faure's Last Moments.

Writing from Paris, the correspondent of the Liverpool Catholic Times discusses some "side lights" which show Madame Felix Faure and her daughter, Mademoiselle Lucie Faure, acting as ministering angels to the death-stricken President. In spite of their anguish at the approaching loss of one who was among the tenderest of husbands and parents, they thought first of the soul of the dying man and spared no efforts to procure him a priest in his last moments. These details are sedulously concealed by the anticlerical press, from the accounts of which it would be easy to believe M. Felix Faure an embodiment of official atheism. Such was far from being the case. It is true that after his elevation to the Presidency of the Republic he dared not show in public the color of his religious opinions, but his inner life proves that as fond he was neither atheist nor irreligious. As in the case of M. Carnot, so in his, it was evidently due to the feminine influence of his household that his end was distinctly a Christian one. For we must regard it as a Christian end, though a priest did not arrive on the scene until M. Faure had sunk into unconsciousness. The Abbe Heug, cure of the Madeleine, had been sent for, but before he could arrive Madame Faure and her daughter were heard calling in anguish from a window of the Elysee: "A priest! A priest! it is he who is too late!"

A municipal guard heard them and went off on a volopedee in quest of a priest. In the street close by he came accidentally upon the Abbe Renaud, of the Madeleine, and taking him by the arm drew him quickly towards the palace of the Elysee. It was to the good offices of this poor man that M. Felix Faure owed the last absolution. Before sinking into unconsciousness he had said to his daughter Lucie, bending over him: "Felix, priest; if it's a plus que ce, And with her hand rested the "Fater," after having asked pardon of those around. The cure of the Madeleine and the Rev. Pere Fouillette, superior of the Dominicans of the Rue du Bac, arrived too late. Another side light shows us Mademoiselle Lucie Faure entering the medical man, Dr. Bergeron, to tell her the truth as to her father's state, so that a priest might be sent for. And another shows us Madame Faure entreating to be spared the anguish of the new President's first visit. On this we see the courageous daughter stepping forward and saying to her mother: "Mother, if our father could speak he would tell you to receive him. You know he never shrunk from any duty." After this Madame Faure, with admirable tact and courage, went through the ordeal of receiving M. Loubet's visit.

It is no easy matter to express an opinion on the influence that the expected death of M. Felix Faure and the election of M. Loubet in his stead as President of the French Republic is likely to have upon Catholic interests in France. It will probably have no direct influence whatever. M. Loubet belongs to the same political school as did the late M. Faure; that is to say, the school of Republicans who, without having the inclination or the courage to uphold with the slightest suspicion of zeal or conviction the cause of religion in the country, nevertheless recognize that religion is a force which, like the forces of nature, must be respected. They know that any public exhibition of distinctly Catholic feeling would be fatal to their political ambition. And yet it is often found that their children are brought up in the Catholic faith, and that their wives are only held back by political considerations and marital authority from taking an active part in distinctly Catholic works. The late Madame Carnot was one of the most shining illustrations of this exemplary Catholic woman of contemporary France, who is compelled to renounce the ardor of her religious faith in order not to interfere with her husband's interests and to play into the hands of his enemies. A lamentable state of things truly in a country when those holding the highest offices are compelled, if they have any ardor of Christian faith, to give no sign of it except in the privacy of the family.

For many years this has been the case in France. Marshal McMahon was the only President of the French Republic who, being a zealous Catholic, had the courage of his convictions. All his successors had been "Opportunists," a designation which in French politics may come day come to mean "Catholics," but has certainly not done so yet. Nevertheless, we have no right to say that they were not Catholics. M. Carnot died as one, having at his own wish received the last sacraments of the Church. There is every reason to believe that M. Faure, had his seizure not been so terribly sudden and so rapidly overwhelming to the intellect, would have ended his life in the same manner. The fact that Mme. Faure did not think it necessary to consult him before sending for a priest shows that she knew what his wish in such an event would be. It is by these details that we are made to realize from time to time that France is still Catholic France, notwithstanding that so many men in public life are ashamed or are afraid to own what they believe. It can never be said of the late President that he was an adversary of religion. On the contrary, on more than one occasion, he defended the interests of the Church. The worst that can be said of him is that he was indifferent to the observance of religion, but he was truly charitable and benevolent. The utmost that Catholics can expect from M. Loubet is that he will not show less good will than his predecessor did in defending Catholic interests.

Up Popocatepetl.

(From Modern Mexico.)

"Our guide told us to eat but little, but to take a lunch with us. They then strapped our feet in wooten cloths to protect them from the cold and snow. Mounting our horses we rode through the timber and across a barranca whose sides were soft ashes, in which our horses sank at every step; then above the timber line, through the zacaton grass, which reaches into the snow. Finding the snow extending further down the mountain than usual our guides advised us to ride as far as possible in order to save our strength, but soon our horses were panting and able to go only a few steps at a time. So we dismounted and prepared for the journey on foot. We had yet nearly four thousand feet to ascend over a smooth surface of snow, so steep that we went in zigzag fashion, stopping every few steps to lie down—presumably to admire the scenery. To the left lay the valley of Mexico, still in the shadow, except in a few high places, which the early sun had tinted with gold. Almost directly under us we could see the town of Amecameca with the Sacromonte and the white convent buildings, and beyond the three lakes, Chalco, Xochimilco and Texcoco, glisten. The sun lit up the spires and towers of Mexico City, and it seemed as if the whole world was under us. The valley of Puebla was hidden by light fleecy clouds, driven from the Gulf coast, and above them, toward Arizaba's peak, with its beautiful white dome and the castellated towers of Malinche.

Finally, at 11.30 o'clock, our guide said: "All esta el crater," and in a few minutes we were on the rim, warned by the guide not to go too near its edges. We threw ourselves down and at first could only pant and gasp for breath, the only sound being the loud thumping of our hearts in chorus. In a short time we were able to rouse ourselves, take a swallow of cognac, eat a sweet lemon and a cracker and enjoy the awful grandeur of the scene.

Before us was a great black opening of an oval shape, longest from north to south, with its walls of obsidian to a depth of five or six hundred feet. Owing to overhanging walls we could not see the lowest point. On the further side was a great patch of yellow, and from its crevasses rose a cloud of steam, on as we were told, sulphurous gas, which had melted the snow above. The guides informed us that this is where the sulphur rock was taken out, and one said he had stayed down there for thirty days at a time, and the other had made a trip each day from the sulphur house to the crater, taking down the rock to be refined at Tlaxcala.

I found it took a great effort to walk a few steps and more to make a few pictures. My body was as heavy as lead and my mental powers seemed dormant. I seemed as if just half awakened from a sleep. After a time our breath came more easily and our heartbeats became more natural; but yet there was the dazed feeling. The snow was too soft to permit our walking round the rim, as it was liable to slide down with the weight of a person. Hearing a strange echo from our voices, I drew my revolver and fired several shots into the crater, which echoed back and forth with a really wonderful effect, followed in a moment by a crash on the opposite side as a great mass of rock and snow, loosened perhaps by the waves of sound set in motion, or possibly by a glancing ball, fell into the abyss. It was like a great peal and roll of thunder amid the awful stillness which soon settled over everything as before.

We seemed to look over the top of Ixtacchuatl, and as the clouds by this time had covered the valley of Puebla almost entirely, it looked like a great white sea with billows rising and falling. The valley of Mexico was as a flock of white sheep on a hillside, so far below and so small did the clouds appear. Ajusco was a great black island, as the misty haze was around the Cuernavaca valley, and the little mountains or foothills looked like ant hills. We seemed as if suspended in air, for so white and dazzling was the snow on the mountain below us that we could hardly see without the use of colored glasses, and scarcely noticed that we had any thing under our feet. "Fime seemed done," and after only twenty minutes our guides suggested the return. I focused my camera on my guide, seated on the peate or rush mat, ready to start down on, perhaps the most wonderful coasting in the world, and then took my seat behind him, and had my companion press the automatic shutter.

In fifteen minutes we were at the snow line once more, whence we had been six hours ascending. Our guides said they had made the trip down in five minutes when the snow was sufficiently hard. We found some places so soft that my guide pulled me on the improvised toboggan. We walked to the ranch and after a light lunch mounted our horses at two o'clock, looking up to the great dome of snow with a different feeling from that which we had entertained in the morning. We had been initiated into its awful mysteries and should ever after have much more respect for Popocatepetl.

"Warm Hearts."

The following editorial article from the New York Mail and Express is of a kind rarely found in the daily press:

"There are men and women who grow kind as they grow old—warmer and fallier in sympathies as life advances. On the other hand, the tendency is to freeze as the blood moves more slowly. Organized charity can generally secure ready response in shape of money. But the personal response that is at once the charm of life among equals and the grace that prevents offense in the minds of dependents is not easy to preserve. The very prosperous man, as a rule, grows imperious in manner. He has become accustomed to his own way. The little affability that he has left he saves up for men stronger than he. His clerks, the yopogay, men who do his bidding in various agencies and must meet him personally, are not impressed with the sway of the spirit of the gentle Jesus in him. His austerity goes a long way toward discounting his religious professions. He seems cold-hearted. He is cold-hearted. He may be a thousand miles from an 'infidel,' but he preaches infidelity without intending it.

"The influence of the 'lowly Nazarine' was certainly a softening influence. Himself the holiest personage that ever appeared on earth, he yet condescended to men of low degree. His was not an exclusive spirit. The reign of Christianity is therefore essential to a true democracy. No simulation of equality will do in a republic. We are equal in rights and we must preserve the sentiment in the heart. It may be safely said that the only way this is possible is by that 'charity' or love which was so gloriously sung in St. Paul's poem. The spread of the Christian religion is the sole guarantee of the continuance of the experiment in popular government which engages us. We love to talk of the high moral principle which actuated us in liberating Cuba and the Philippines. But unless we mean nothing except bathos, we mean a kind, gentle, loving wish for the welfare of our fellow-man. We love man as man. This was the old-fashioned talk of the colonial days. No man blushed to use such language a hundred years ago.

Americans grew austere. The rush has made us brusque. Kind speech is lacking and 'orders' are fired at employees. Business is a machine. The noise is the clank of steel and grind of cog. So intense is the competition that only efficiency counts, and mercy has little influence. Fewer are the men of years and position who take young men in their employ into their intimate friendship. The old men are too many instances use the young men, that is all. And as in the nature of things, an elderly man loses his friends by death, he himself becomes solitary and sear. God is avenged for his neglect, for the idly stry of materialism chills to the bone.

There is actually an idea abroad that the play of the affections impedes business activity. If one has been saturated with this idea all day down town, it is sure to show at night up town, in the home. The tremendous increase of litigation, of which we do not remember to have seen much current criticism, is an index of the decay of kindness.

"Once in the history of the world there appeared a heart so glowing that all the rains of night could not quench its fire. Once there has been stretched out to us a Hand so warm that it faltered not in the clammy touch of the dead Lazarus. The unspoken value of a close association with Jesus Christ is the communistic warmth. It is not necessary to be dogmatic. It is necessary to be constantly reading of Him. No hard-pushed man can afford to let the day pass without standing for a moment with the Good Samaritan group. The thrill has gone through all the earth and saved us from savagery. That series of pictures shown us in the New Testament has been like fire kindled in winter. It changed the loveless, classic age. Has it, as a force, ever had a sufficient substitute? Have secular poems or music or art ever been able to control the selfish, ageing human heart as these simple stories of the pitying Jesus have done? Nor is there in the contemplation of his life a mystic influence. His life possesses the claims of the strictest theology seem established. The New Testament in the breast pocket keeps the heart warm by miracle.

The effect produced by the Pope's letter on the minds of Protestants is all that could be wished for. It was evidently written with a view to their enlightenment as well as for the guidance of those of the household of the faith. Coming at a time when the whole country is stirred up by religious controversies of some sort, and written as it is in the spirit of the Epistles of St. Paul, it is calculated to make a deep impression on all serious minds. If we may judge by editorial references to the letter in the newspapers, it has been read attentively by outsiders as by those to whom it was nominally addressed. Witness the following passage from an editorial in the Times-Herald of Chicago: "Pope Leo's letter on Americanism strikes across the present like an invocation to the past. It affects us strangely in this age of whirling changes, individual assertion and doubt. Immutability, imperishability, is the refrain. There are no concessions. In language dignified, sonorous and impressive, the note of authority swells forth to command the old allegiance. One must be totally devoid of emotion not to feel its influence, not to recal under its spell 'the pomp and splendor' of many a great historic pageant."—Ave Maria.

The Bishop of Providence recently sent to his diocesan eighteen hundred copies of a letter appealing for funds to support priests who minister to the inmates of State institutions. The answer to this call, after very disappointing response; however, it met with a noble response from an unexpected quarter, as we learn from the "Providence Visitor." The State Board of Charities and Correction voted to Bishop Harkins and his successors the yearly sum of $1,000 to defray the expenses of priests attending the institutions in charge of the Board. This generous action is as gratifying to the Catholics of the whole country as it must be to the good Bishop of Providence. The Catholics of Rhode Island would do well to remember the gentlemen composing their State Board of Charities. Among them are the Lieutenant-Governor and a Protestant minister, the Rev. Dr. Cuyler.—Ave Maria.

I took three bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla and have not been troubled with swelling since."—Hastings, Saginaw, Mich., Ont.

Women Need Not Suffer

From those terrible side aches, back aches, headaches and the thousand and one other ills which make life full of misery. Most of these troubles are due to impure, imperfectly filtered blood—the kidneys are not acting right and in consequence the system is being poisoned with impurities.

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS

are daily proving themselves woman's greatest friend and benefactor. Here is an instance: Mrs. Harry Fleming, St. Mary's, N.B., says: "The use of Doan's Kidney Pills restored me to complete health. The first symptoms I noticed in my case were severe pains in the small of my back and around the loins, together with general weakness and loss of appetite. I gradually became worse, until, hearing of Doan's Kidney Pills, I got a box from our druggist. I am pleased to testify to their effectiveness in correcting the troubles from which I suffered."
