Rare Herb and Root Extracts in this Liniment Give it Marvellous Power.

RUB ON NERVILINE.

You'll be astonished at the rapid pain relieving action of "Nerviline." Its effectiveness is due to its remarkable penetrating power—it strikes deeply, sinks to the very core of the trouble.

Nerviline is stronger, many times stronger, than ordinary liniments, and it's not greasy, ill-smelling or disagreeable. Every drop rubs in, bringing comfort and healing wherever applied.

You would scarcely believe how it will relieve a sprain, how it takes out lameness, how it soothes and eases a bruise.

Thousands say no liniment is half so useful in the home. This must be so, because Nerviline is a safe remedy—you can rub it on even a child with fine results.

Just you keep Nerviline on hand—it's a panacea for the aches, pains and slight ills of the whole family. One bottle will keep the doctor's bill small, and can be depended on to cure rheumatism, neuralgia, lumbago, sciatica, toothache, pleurisy, strains or swellings. Wherever there is a pain rub on Nerviline; it will always cure.

The large 50c. family size bottle is the most economical; trial size 25c. Sold everywhere by dealers.

TRUE LOVE'S PASSION.

CHAPTER XIV. True Love's Passion.

"You are very early this morning," Norah said, as the girl brushed out her hair. "Did you sleep in the house last night?"

"No, my lady," replied Becca, dropping her eyes from the glass in which she had been comparing Norah's face with her own. "No, I went home. And I found him in the avenue," she added, in a low voice.

Norah looked up with a start. There was no other "him" in the world for her that morning but Cyril.

"Him? Whom?" she asked.

"The pulter gentleman, Mr. Burne," said Becca, with a nod, as if Norah ought to have understood. "He was very bad."

Norah's face paled.

"Bad?" she echoed faintly.

"Yes," said Becca, taking a long tress in her hand, and holding it up to the light, but keeping her eyes fixed on Norah's pale face reflected in the glass. "Yes, he'd fainted."

Norah's hands clasped themselves tightly in her lap, and an inarticulate sound escaped her lips.

"He was dreadfully hurt. Broke his arm, I think."

Norah half rose, with a wild impulse to go to him there and then; then she sank back.

"Go on!" she breathed.

"He was as white as—as you are, my lady," said Becca, slowly, "and in dreadful pain. I don't think he'll die, though," she added, calmly.

A shudder shook Norah.

"Die!" fell from her lips.

"No, my lady. He was able to walk home after a bit," continued Becca, still watching Norah's face.

"Give me—give me my handkerchief, please," said Norah, feeling the girl's eyes on her, and wishing to gain a moment or two for self-control.

Becca fetched the handkerchief.

"I heard that he'd hurt himself fetching the horses," said Becca, "but he didn't say."

"What—what did he say?" asked Norah, thirsting to hear some words of his.

Becca waited a moment, and fixed her black eyes on the glass intently.

"He said, would you meet him at the place where he painted the dog, at five o'clock to-day," she replied.

Norah started, and the hot blood rushed to her face.

For a moment she was silent, her heart throbbing wildly.

"Are you—are you sure that is what Mr. Burne said?" she asked at last, in a low voice.

"Yes, quite sure, my lady," responded Becca.

Norah trembled and her breath came fast. How could she meet him after her father's prohibition? And yet—yet he was ill, had been injured in saving her!

She got up and went to the window. The girl's black eyes seemed to follow and trouble her.

"You may go now, Becca," she said, without looking round.

"Yes, my lady," said Becca. "And Mr. Burne, what am I to say to him if I see him?"

Norah turned to her.

"Say nothing. Stay," she added, as if forced to speak the words; "say that I will come—and see the picture," she added.

"Yes, my lady," said Becca, and noiselessly she left the room.

Norah leaned her head against the window frame.

She did not blame Cyril for sending her the message. She knew, instinctively, that it had been wrung from him in a moment of pain, and by his intense longing to see her, and it brought her a joy beyond all words.

Yes, she would go and see him, and tell him that they must be strangers from henceforth—her eyes filled with tears at the thought—they must part, never to meet again.

She finished dressing herself and went downstairs. The earl was in the breakfast-room, and handed her a note as he bowed her a good-morning.

"From Lady Ferndale," he said. "To inquire after your health after the accident, no doubt," he said. "A groom is waiting."

Norah opened the envelope. It was just the kind of letter which Lady Ferndale would write, full of affectionate anxiety and self-reproach.

"If I had only sent some one with you, dear!" she said. "I would come over this morning—and will if you are the least ill—but my husband has asked some people here early. Still, only say the word!"

But it was the next few lines that made Norah's heart beat and sent the blood to her face.

"And to think that that young man should have acted so nobly! Was I out, Norah, in my estimate? The coachman says that the way Mr. Burne flung himself upon the horses was grand, and I think it's the very best word to describe it. I am longing to see him, and thank him!"

"Well!" said the earl.

Norah hesitated a moment, then laid the letter beside his plate.

He raised it delicately, and held it out to her with a cold smile.

"Fardon me, but I have always entertained the greatest repugnance to perusing other people's letters," he said. "You had better answer it. Pray do not mind keeping me waiting."

Norah took the letter, and put it in her pocket—those few lines had made it very precious—and, going to a writing-table, wrote a brief note assuring Lady Ferndale that she, Norah, was quite well, and, after a moment's hesitation, she added: "Mr. Burne was badly hurt, I fear. That was all; and the words read, ah! so coldly."

At times the hours that day seemed to pass all too quickly, at others they dragged their length wearily along. Norah all day tried to make up her mind what she would say to Cyril, tried even to learn a few sentences, that she might repeat them by heart.

A practiced flirt, a London belle of even one season, would have known how to dismiss him gracefully; but Norah was no experienced flirt, she was simply a girl—woman whose heart had been touched for the first time.

As last the great clock chimed half-past four, and, with Casper at her heels, she started for the woods. Her heart beat faster as she approached the glade where she was to meet Cyril, and she paused and waited for a moment or two to try and quiet its beating.

Then she went on among the great trees flecked with the golden sunlight, and presently she put aside the leaves of a huge rhododendron, and stood before him.

Cyril had fixed his eyes, and was trying to paint. She saw that his left arm was in a sling, and the sight recalled everything that had occurred on the preceding evening, and a great wave of tenderness passed over her heart.

She stood for a moment unobserved by him, then he took out his watch, and, with a sigh of impatience, turned his head and saw her, in all her loveliness, framed by the dark green leaves.

He sprang to his feet and came toward her, then stopped, his eyes, full of the passion that burned in his heart, fixed on her face; and so they stood speechless, as far as words go.

He was the first to speak.

"You have come!" he said, in a low voice, and he held out his hand.

She put hers into it, and it was imprisoned in his eager grasp.

"Yes, I have come," she said, her eyes downcast, the color flitting over her beautiful face.

Something in her tone alarmed him, and he dropped her hand.

"Are you angry with me for sending you the message, for asking you?" he said.

"No," she replied. "Oh, no, no! But—" she stopped.

"It was wrong—I know!" he said. "I felt it when I had got home and thought of it; but—ah! I wanted to see you, soon, at once, and I did not know how—"

"I am glad you sent to me," she said, so simply, so sweetly, that he could have gone on his knees to her. "You are paining; will you—will you go on?" she faltered.

He understood her. She could talk with less restraint if he worked. He sat down before the easel, and took up his brush and the palette, which he managed to hold in the finger and thumb of his left hand, and painted blindly for a minute or two; then he turned to her as she stood beside him, her hands loosely clasped.

"May I speak now, Lady Norah? I have been counting the hours since I left you last night. I have so longed to see you—to tell you—ah, you know! What can I say but that I love you!"

Norah's hands clasped tightly, and her breath came and went fitfully.

"It broke from me last night, when I should not have spoken," he went on in a low voice, that trembled with eagerness and rang earnestly with the true ring of pure, whole-souled love. "I ought not to have spoken then, but—I could not help it; and now you know it, what will you say to me?"

He rose, but with a slight gesture she motioned him to his seat, and he sat down again, obeying her, and bent toward her, the sunlight falling on his shapely head and handsome face.

"Were you angry with me last night? Are you angry now? Have you come to tell me that I was presumptuous—ah, don't speak yet," for her lips moved, though no words had come. "Do you think that I have not thought over it all during the long hours I have lain awake? Lady Norah, you cannot feel more acutely than I do how unworthy I am that you should cast a thought to me."

Her lips formed a "No," but he went on, his voice scarcely above a whisper, his eyes speaking with more eloquent pleading even than his lips.

"You are the daughter of an earl, and I—I" he motioned to the easel with his brush. "I am a poor painter; one the world—the world to which you belong—regards as very much beneath you. And it is right. But a poor painter may have a heart, and I have given mine to you! I lay it at your feet, Lady Norah! It is yours to do what you will with—to accept or refuse."

He stopped to control his voice, which his passion had rendered hurried and broken.

"I can only say I love you, I love you! I have loved you—" He stopped, and then went on, his voice low and dreamy, as if he were speaking from his heart to hers. "Do you remember the evening you came to the Court? As your carriage drove in through the gates I stood there and saw you, and—ah! believe me—the moment I saw you my heart leaped. It seemed to cry out, 'I love you!' I did not know who you were, but you were the one woman in all the world for me from that moment; you will be the one woman until I die."

There were tears in her eyes, though she tried to force them back, and she put up one hand and covered her eyes for a moment, but she stood silent, and otherwise motionless.

"It was no passing fancy," he went on. "All that evening I could not forget you; and at night I stole to the great house, that I might be near you. And I heard you!" he said, his voice scarcely audible; "almost as if in answer to my prayer, you came out on the terrace and spoke, not to me—ah, no, I know!—but you seemed to speak to me."

"All my life has changed since that moment, for you have taken possession of it. I think of you all day, your face flits between me and the canvas, I hear your voice—" He paused. "Lady Norah, what will you say to me? Will you let me go on loving you—ah, you cannot help that, I must love you!—but will you try and love me a little in return?"

Norah's face grew almost white with the struggle that was rending her heart; the struggle between the desire to answer, "I love you already," and the desire to obey her father.

He looked at her, and his own face was pale beneath its tan.

"Is it so impossible?" he murmured, and the entreaty, the anxiety in his eyes almost overcame her.

"I—I cannot," she faltered, scarcely knowing what she said. "The earl, my father—"

She could get no farther.

Cyril started slightly.

FOUR DOCTORS DISAGREED

Pains Disappeared After Use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Wilmington, Del.—"I was suffering from a terrible backache and pains in my side, with bearing down pains and was very nervous. I was always tired, always drowsy, never could get enough sleep and could not eat. I had four doctors and each told me something different. I read of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and decided to try it. I got good results and I now feel better than I have felt for years and I am gaining in weight. I can gladly recommend it to all women."—Mrs. GEORGE W. SENEAL, 1611 West 4th Street, Wilmington, Del.

Backache and bearing down pains are danger signals which every woman should heed. Remove the cause of these aches and pains by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, that good old root and herb medicine. Thousands of women have testified to its virtues. For forty years it has been making women strong, curing backache, nervousness, ulceration and inflammation, weakness, displacements, irregularity and periodic pain.

"Lady Norah, what will you say to me? Will you let me go on loving you—ah, you cannot help that, I must love you!—but will you try and love me a little in return?"

Norah's face grew almost white with the struggle that was rending her heart; the struggle between the desire to answer, "I love you already," and the desire to obey her father.

He looked at her, and his own face was pale beneath its tan.

"Is it so impossible?" he murmured, and the entreaty, the anxiety in his eyes almost overcame her.

"I—I cannot," she faltered, scarcely knowing what she said. "The earl, my father—"

She could get no farther.

Cyril started slightly.

AN APPEAL

The Recruiting Committee of the Patriotic Association deem it necessary that the King's subjects in Newfoundland should be made acquainted with the present condition of affairs and that, by a full knowledge of the needs of Empire, the patriotism of the Colony may be stimulated.

From the beginning of the war now in progress, voluntary enlistment has been the basis upon which has been built up the Naval and Military contingents from Newfoundland. We have sent 1500 men for the Navy and 3000 for the Army. Not a few have been decorated for bravery, and all have sustained the highest traditions of the Empire and won for themselves and for the Colony undying fame.

In the North Sea, on the Atlantic, on trade routes and wherever duty has demanded, our Naval volunteers have acquitted themselves with distinction.

Wherever the Regiment has been called on to discharge its duty it has won unstinted praise.

But more men are needed to finish the work, to overwhelm the enemy, and secure the blessings of a lasting peace. We therefore appeal to the men of Newfoundland to offer themselves for service and to furnish His Majesty the King with a portion of that help which the Mother Country deems necessary to accomplish this result.

The obligation rests upon us to furnish reserves to fill the ranks, and our comparative immunity from the consequences of a state of war must not be allowed to blind us to the stern need of more men, not alone that victory may be secured but that Newfoundland's place in the Colonial Empire of Great Britain may be assured. It must not be said of us that the blood shed and the treasure expended has been in vain; but if the response which is anticipated be fully realized it will be blazoned to the remotest dependency of the Crown that the boast of this Colony has been well justified—most ancient and most loyal.

GOD SAVE THE KING.

The Will of France at the Decisive Hour.

The Reply of Senator Berenger to the Confidential Assertions of German Press and Public Men.

By HENRY BERENGER, Senator of France and Secretary of the Army Commission.

Translated from the Matin.
The great events which are passing in Europe are not the result of circumstance. They are the reward of will. It was because our armies willed that they did not perish on the Marne, later on the Yser, and finally before Verdun. It is because we have willed to survive victory that we have established behind our armies an arsenal commensurate with our armies, which, no more than they, can either be destroyed or exhausted. It is because M. Aristide Briand willed the unity of front and unity of action that he has been able successively to rally under our flags, by this lucky symbol, all the free people of France.

It will be an historic honor to our President of the Council to have given, by the clairvoyant force of will, to our country the diplomacy for her war—a diplomacy capable of inspiring heroism in our soldiers and work in our factories.

Those who, like us, for many months, have exercised upon his acts the parliamentary control with the independence and energy which belong to it, should to-day especially render to M. Aristide Briand that homage due the complete statesman of our warring France. Hence, we are proud to place full confidence in the head of our government and should even encourage him to inspire anew among all that indomitable will to win which is already, for our enemies, the token of their defeat.

But the task is yet far from being completed. The more the completion seems favorable the more should we redouble our efforts to advance it.

However glorious the sun may rise, in 1917, not a Frenchman should forget that in October, 1916, the invader is still in France; that the Boches are still twenty leagues from the capital, and that they still blacken by their infamies ten of our departments.

Nor should we ever ignore the fact that Germany goes on extracting from her mines and our more coal for her engines and factories, more iron for her cannon, her shells and her rifles. If they lack bread and meat they do not lack oil and steel. Nor do they lack laborers, for they have our prisoners and our outraged population.

We must expect assaults of fury still more violent, as their self-deception becomes more bitter.

Their angry declaration of war against Rumania, their grotesque celebration of the return of the Deutschland, their ferocious supplanting of Falkenhayn by Hindenburg, and their endless manifestos concerning universal annexation, all proclaim among those disappointed barbarians the supreme crisis of Pan-Germanic delirium.

To become convinced of this it is only necessary to read the enemy's papers—the Tag, which advertises a great offensive in the west in order to impose "a German peace"; the Frankfurter Zeitung, which announces for Germany "the end of the great period of 'strategic defensive' and the advent 'of positive operations'"; the Deutsche Tageszeitung, and the Tagliche Rundschau, which comment in the same precise manner on the declarations of the chief of the German General Staff on the Somme.

The time is not, therefore, one which should alone keep us strictly vigilant; it should still more cause us to redouble the activity in our chancelleries, in our general staffs and in our making of the materials of war. We should ask our Governments to press home, without delay, our advantages of the entire eastern front as well as those on the western. We should profit by the daylight which is still long, and let the great guns of all our armies speak—those of Salonika and the Strypa, like those of the Alps and the Somme.

No isolated front, no independent considerations, whether in the Balkans or elsewhere, should either obscure or obstruct the general conduct of the operations of the Entente.

How can we forget that in a few weeks the port of Archangel will be closed, and that it is of the greatest importance to the Entente—to every member of the Entente—to have established, before this period, between Russia and us the Mediterranean supply line for food and munitions?

The concentrated Rumanian and Russian armies, the army of Salonika—so powerful to-day with more than 400,000 troops, supplied with guns and all necessary material, trained and drilled during long months in its entrenched camp—ought to be fully ready to realize the most just and decisive views of M. Aristide Briand by co-operating without delay with the general operations of the Entente.

More than ever we should impose everywhere on our enemies that diplomatic and military initiative which all recognize as the superiority of a force indomitable in its right.

We must bring to their knees those who have boasted that they would force Europe to hers. The people of Paris and of France—this great people, one and inseparable since the memorable days of the Marne—have well understood the lesson of the eleventh hour.

In these days of anniversaries France does not forget her great dead in the renaissance of life which represents the European coalition to-day very nearly complete.

Without those who sacrificed themselves in the days of threatened catastrophe, where now would be the munitions of the factories, the treaties of diplomats, and the successful results of the alliances?

More now than ever before may their example be present among us! May each one of us remember that the final decision will alone belong to the best armed and to the best organized! Austro-Germany is already vanquished diplomatically. It remains to achieve this in a military sense.

It is to bring this about we must make more guns and shells, and if to make them we need more workers and more machines, and if we have to send forth more soldiers, workmen, and tools, why, let us ask of our civil and military chiefs what we have asked of them before—the decision, always the decision!

Concert and Sports for Volunteers.

A GREAT SUCCESS.

There was a large gathering of volunteers and their friends at the C. L. B. Armoury last night to witness the various exercises and pugilistic events.

Following the parade from the Recruiting Station in front of the Court House, the soldiers filed into the Barracks and took their seats. In his cigarettes and were all ready for the show. The affair opened with Swedish and platoon drill, followed by a bayonet fight. The contestants were: B. S. M. Pavor, S. M. Murrell, Sergt. Holmes, L.-C. Daley, L.-C. James and L.-C. Edens. This contest was watched with close interest by many of the audience as it was their first experience of seeing anything of the kind. The pugilists in the boxing events were:

S.-M. Murrell vs. S. Bursell.
Pte. Reid vs. Pte. McCarthy.
Lieut. Max Churchill vs. Pte. M. Winter.

The events were closely contested, as was evidenced by the interest shown by their favourites who gathered around the ring. As it was agreed that the decision would rest on points there was no knock-out. However, some of the glove fanciers managed to slip in a heavy punch now and again. At the conclusion of the manly sport an enjoyable concert was held, the following volunteers contributing numbers:—Corp. J. Strang, L. Corp. H. Mews, L. Corp. D. Henschell, Sergt. C. Newman and Pte. F. Udle. Pte. R. Kendall, in his usual pleasant manner, acted as accompanist.

During the interval the gathering was addressed by the Premier who reviewed the work of the Regiment since its leaving our shores in the early days of the war. He was pleased to state that upwards of 3,000 men had been sent to the front to build up our fighting force and that over 1,500 men had joined the Royal Navy.

The excellent band of the C. L. B. was in attendance and rendered several bright and patriotic airs during the evening.

Household Notes.

It is not well to cook cauliflower until it has been soaked in water for a time to draw out all insects.

When covering jelly cups with paraffin try pouring the paraffin out of an old tea pot or coffee pot.

The ham bone which has been trimmed to a finish will do very well to flavor a pot of boiled cabbage.

A dash of nutmeg or cinnamon is an improvement in baked apples, especially if the apples are insidial.

Nuts are easily digestible if thoroughly masticated, but they do not properly make part of a heavy meat meal.

Buy furniture for the house one piece at a time if necessary, but be sure that each piece is simple and good.

To roast chestnuts cut a slit on the flat side of each nut and put in a baking pan in a hot oven for twenty-five minutes.

We know other Machines! Autos Engines, etc

Why not our own Body Machine?

We study and admire the machinery invented by man, and too often overlook and neglect that most marvellous machine—the human body.

To understand and take care of the heart, lungs and liver; the arteries and veins, the skin, the teeth, the eyes and all the intricate machinery of the body, is no small task.

But, unlike any other machine, the body replaces its own wear and waste, and, consequently, the most attention required is that which has to do with the organs of digestion and excretion.

So long as proper food is supplied for nourishment and the liver, kidneys and bowels are regular in their work of eliminating poisonous waste matter from the system, the great majority of human ills are avoided.

In this connection Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are appreciated on account of their promptness and efficiency in arousing the action of these filtering and excretory organs, and thereby removing such disorders as liver complaint, biliousness, constipation, indigestion, kidney disease and backache. With these organs in healthful action there is no such thing as Bright's disease, hardening of the arteries and rheumatism.

HOW LONG WILL IT BE OCCUPIED?

PARIS, To-day. A despatch to the Temps from Salonika says that a semi-official announcement has been made at Sofia, that the Bulgarian Government has taken over the Administration of Dobrudja region of Roumania, consequent upon an agreement with the Central Empires recognizing Bulgarian sovereignty over the occupied region.

GREAT SERBIAN VICTORY.

ATHENS, To-day. Further details of the Serbian victory in the Cerna region last week have been given to the Associated Press by King Peter of Serbia. The Chukche height on the western slope of the Seltza mountains, which was captured on Friday, dominates the Cerna Valley and the road to Monastir and Prilep. The victory also puts the Serbians in touch with the French at Baldenti and apparently renders a combined advance on Negechani on the east bank of the Cerna and Tebavai on the slopes of the Seltza inevitable. The next move is comparatively easy. The Germans and Bulgarians were most strongly fortified on the Chukche, as it was the last height before the plain extending from Monastir opposite to Negechani on the west bank of the Cerna. An extensive marsh forms the only remaining obstacle to the attempt at the encirclement of Kenall, where the Germans and Bulgarians are still in force and to an advance on Monastir. More than 1,500 Germans and Bulgarians were made prisoners, among them thirty officers, and eight mortars, fifteen machine guns and several mountain guns were taken. The Serbian military officials here are delighted over the situation. They declare now that the Monastir offensive proceeded beyond the mountain. It can be continued despite the winter, as the cold weather and the freezing of the marshes will assist operations.

BRITISH TAKE BEAUCOURT.

LONDON, To-day. The British have captured Beaucourt on the Somme front as a result of the continuation of their powerful drive begun yesterday. Prisoners taken by the British number more than 5,000 up to the present according to an official issued to-night. The text reads: "The village of Beaucourt sur Ancre is in our hands. The prisoners reported to date number considerably over five thousand and more are coming in to-day. A local advance was made east of Butte De Warlencourt and practically all our objectives were gained and some 80 prisoners taken in this area."

BURNING TANKER BROUGHT TO PORT.

LONDON, To-day. The British tank steamer Petroleine, found abandoned at sea, has been brought into port with a French crew aboard, says a Lloyd's despatch. The master and twenty-two of the Petroleine's crew were landed at eleven last Sunday.

ADMIRALTY DENIES GERMAN FALSEHOOD.

LONDON, To-day. The Admiralty have issued a further reply to the German charge regarding the treatment of the survivors of the German submarine U-41 including the ship which sank the submarine, and affirms it is directly, explicitly and completely untrue to allege that there exists or ever has existed an Admiralty order that it is not necessary to rescue survivors of the crew of the German submarines. The British Admiralty on November 6th made a statement denying that it had ever given orders that the survivors of German submarines need not be rescued. This followed all the allegations by the German Admiralty regarding the sinking of the U-41, which was characterized as a second Baralong case, in which a British patrol ship flying the American flag deliberately ran down a row boat containing the only two survivors. This incident occurred on September 24th, 1915. According to the British Admiralty the neutral flag approached a German submarine on that date engaged in sinking a British merchantman. When within range the auxiliary hoisted the white naval ensign, fired on and sank the submarine then rescued the crew of the merchantman from boats. When this was done the auxiliary also rescued two of the submarine's crew who had climbed into a drifting boat.

FRENCH WAR MINISTER IN ATHENS.

LONDON, To-day. The French War Minister, General Roques, arrived at Athens and had a conference with King Constantine, according to a Reuters' despatch from the Greek capital. The main subject of the discussion was the Allies' demand for the establishment of a zone to avert collisions between the Royalist and Venizelist armies.

WAR REVIEW.

LONDON, To-day. The British drive began early on Monday morning amid fog and rain in the region of the Ancre River in France and netted them another village, Beaucourt, on the north bank of the Ancre. The capture of this village makes three that have fallen into the British hands since the advance began, the other two being Beaumont-Hamel and St. Pierre Division. There is no indication that the offensive has ceased at any point all along the five mile front. In the drive the British thus far have taken more than 5,000 German prisoners, and according to the last report more captives are being brought in. Aside from the gains in the Ancre region the British also have made an advance of about three miles southeast of Bapaume. To the south of the Somme the Germans are busily engaged in shelling the French positions in the region of Pressaville and on the sector of Blaches-Lamassonneville, with the French vigorously replying. On the remainder of the front, only bombardments have occurred.

With comparative quiet still reigning on the Russian and Austro-Italian fronts, the Roumanian and Macedonian theatres continue the local points of interest. The Austrians near Orsova and the junction of the Austrian, Roumanian and Serbian frontiers have cleared the right bank of the Danube of the Roumanians' victory, which probably means the lessening of the impediments the Roumanians have placed upon the navigation of the river in this region. Again the Roumanians in the Alt Valley of Transylvania have been pushed back by the Austro-German forces who also have captured in the Jull Valley the Village of Bumbeshit and forced the Roumanian left wing in the region of Dragelavele to give way. Up in the north the Russians have been compelled to retire from the Gyergyo Mountains to the Roumanian frontier. The situation in Dobrudja still remains to be clarified. Just what the Russo-Roumanian troops and the forces of the Central Powers are doing there is not known. Petrograd and Bucharest say merely that the situation is unchanged. On the Monastir plain in Serbia north of the Cerna River the troops of the Entente Powers are attacking the German-Bulgarian lines. The battles have not reached a decision, according to Berlin. Aside from artillery duels in the Trentino region and demoralizing fire along the remainder of the front, quiet prevails along the Austro-Italian front.

AMERICA PROTESTING OVER DEPORTATIONS.

WASHINGTON, To-day. The deportation of Belgian civilians into Germany for forced labor has reached such serious proportions that the American charge at Berlin has been directed by the State Department to take the matter up personally with Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg. The charge was requested to say that such deportations could not but have the most unfortunate effect on neutral opinion, particularly in the States, which has the welfare of the Belgian population very much at heart.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

P. J. K.—We have read your letter with interest, but cannot see any good purpose in publishing it at present. The matter has been sufficiently brought to the notice of the authorities and a further controversy on the subject is not advisable until their views are made known.

NEW MINISTRY IN AUSTRALIA.

LONDON, To-day. A despatch from Melbourne, Australia, says that attempts of the malcontent section of the Labor Party to overthrow Premier Hughes has caused a serious split in the party and as a consequence the Premier has been obliged to reconstruct the ministry from his remaining followers so that he can carry on the Government with the assistance of the Liberals until a general election is held. The new ministry includes Hughes as Premier and Attorney General; C. F. Pearce, Minister of National Defence; J. A. Jensen, Minister of Marine, and Mr. Poynton as Treasurer. The Labor secessionists include 19 Senators and 24 members of the Houses of Representatives. Among these are M. Omalley and H. Mahon, who resigned from the Hughes ministry and forced the new labor party with Charles McDonald, Speaker of the House of Representatives, as acting leader. There are three parties now in the House of Representatives, none of them able to govern alone. Labor difficulties are increasing, 30,000 men being idle as a result of a coal strike and a hundred steamers have been laid up. Wool sales have been suspended owing to the impossibility of getting freight.

GERMAN PROPAGANDA IN RUSSIA.

LONDON, To-day. German propagandists are making every effort possible all over Russia to stir up dissension among the Allies and influence Russia to consider a separate peace, but there are no signs of the success of the persistent movement. This was the statement made to-day by Arthur Ruhl, American writer, who has just returned here from a trip through Russia and Roumania. Mr. Ruhl added that there was no expectation in Russia of the end of the war for another year at least. Though Russia's losses have been exceptionally high, this year's supply of soldiers seems inexhaustible.

Some of the Anomalies

(From the Boston Herald.) President Wilson has encountered many antagonisms, but they appear not to be deep rooted. He has offended beyond measure the solid business interests of the country, and yet their realization of his purposes has not permeated the great body of substantial citizens. If it should prove that he had been elected, in the face of the defeats which Tuesday night disclosed, it would indeed be a memorable achievement. Think of a Democratic candidate's being elected without New York! And elected without Illinois! And elected without any enthusiastic support from his own party in the three great cities of New York, Chicago and Boston, each one of which lowered him to very near the minimum it ever gave a Democrat!

Think of a Democratic candidate being elected without his own home State of Jersey; in fact, suffering an extraordinary reverse there! New Jersey was one of the three states that went Democratic in 1864, and one of the very small group in the north which remained loyal to Hancock in 1860. It this year deserted Woodrow Wilson because of or in spite of his living there. And yet he may be elected without it. Think of that, and ponder on the anomalies of this extraordinary contest!

THE STOCK DIVIDEND.

The stock dividend is something which occurs when there is no other place to put the money.

The object of the stock dividend is to provide genteel board and automobiles with red wheels for citizens who got in on the ground floor. By the simple process of taking a little foresight and wrapping it around a $100 bill, thousands of people have been enabled to retire from business and live off of semi-annual stock dividends which have escaped the sinking fund. This is why we see so many people who couldn't keep books in a shooting gallery living in the lap of luxury and wearing head-sig union suits.

The automobile industry produces a very swollen form of stock dividend, but it is not distributed among the common people to any alarming extent. When Henry Ford started out in business the neighbors would not call on his wife or take any of his stock, as he was considered about 99 per cent, non-com mensurable. This forced Henry to take most of it himself, with the result that his yearly dividends make the output of the

A Disgraceful Scene.

A disgraceful scene was witnessed at 1 p.m. to-day on Water Street, and not a hundred yards from the Police Station, when two men, much the worse for liquor, fought for over a quarter of an hour. Though the police arrived on the scene the combatants were exhausted. Both of them were considerably bruised and cut about the face, blood flowing freely. They were taken into custody and will have to answer for their conduct to-morrow.

Waiting for the Postman.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

"What's the hardest thing about your work?" I asked a man who has recently branched out in business for himself.

"He stops to look over his mail," he said. "Finally the postman actually comes into sight. He weaves his way toward you from house to house, with the most maddening deliberation. He stops to look over his mail; he stops to pass the time of day with the grocer's man; he waits interminably at front doors."

At last he actually reaches the house next door. And then what does he do but stop and talk five minutes by the clock on the mantel (first by the one in your brain) with the lady next door. You always liked the lady next door, but you can't understand now how you ever did.

Eventually he actually comes up your own front path. You spring to the door. He fumbles in his bag and gives you—

Excuse me, but there is the postman's ring at last. I must answer it. Will you wish me good luck?

Minard's Liniment Co., Limited, Gentlemen,—In July 1915 I was thrown from a road machine, injuring my hip and back badly and was obliged to use a crutch for 14 months. In Sept., 1906, Mr. W. R. Outridge of Lachute urged me to try MINARD'S LINIMENT, which I did with the most satisfactory results and to-day I am as well as ever in my life.

Yours sincerely,

Gasolene Explosion.

Yesterday we referred to a gasolene explosion which occurred on the West Coast. Fred Brake, a young man of Bay of Islands, was the victim. The main facts of the accident are that Brake was about to "tap" a tank, which was going to be used to put gasolene in. There had been gasolene kept in the trunk before and the gas fumes were still there, but Brake did not know it and while he was doing some soldering the explosion happened. As a result Brake's head was badly shattered and burnt.

He was attended by Dr. Fisher, who we learn, holds out little hope of saving the unfortunate young man's right eye. The patient will likely be brought on to the General Hospital here for treatment.

Mean and Contemptible.

A few evenings ago a young lady of the city ran to the railway station with a catchel, which she was going to give her aunt, who was leaving on the evening train for a Trinity Bay point. The bag contained some valuables, including considerable money. Arriving at the station just as the train was pulling out, the young lady handed the parcel to a male passenger at the rear end of the last car, adding, "Give this to Mrs. —," but the latter has not yet seen her property or Mr. —. The man who received the parcel was tall, wore a long overcoat and a soft felt hat. He has not so far attempted to return the ill-gotten goods and it is a great pity that he should be allowed to remain at large.

Gasolene Explosion.

Yesterday we referred to a gasolene explosion which occurred on the West Coast. Fred Brake, a young man of Bay of Islands, was the victim. The main facts of the accident are that Brake was about to "tap" a tank, which was going to be used to put gasolene in. There had been gasolene kept in the trunk before and the gas fumes were still there, but Brake did not know it and while he was doing some soldering the explosion happened. As a result Brake's head was badly shattered and burnt.

He was attended by Dr. Fisher, who we learn, holds out little hope of saving the unfortunate young man's right eye. The patient will likely be brought on to the General Hospital here for treatment.

Mean and Contemptible.

A few evenings ago a young lady of the city ran to the railway station with a catchel, which she was going to give her aunt, who was leaving on the evening train for a Trinity Bay point. The bag contained some valuables, including considerable money. Arriving at the station just as the train was pulling out, the young lady handed the parcel to a male passenger at the rear end of the last car, adding, "Give this to Mrs. —," but the latter has not yet seen her property or Mr. —. The man who received the parcel was tall, wore a long overcoat and a soft felt hat. He has not so far attempted to return the ill-gotten goods and it is a great pity that he should be allowed to remain at large.

THE BRITISH ATTACK IN THE ANCRE REGION.

PARIS, Nov. 14. The British attack now in progress in the Ancre region, was preceded by four days of intense bombardment, and began in a dense fog, says Le Liberté's correspondent at the front. The British, he says, did not at first fire a shot, and were not perceived till they were upon the Germans. Rising from a creeping attitude when a few yards from the German trenches they charged with loud hurrahs. A French officer, who also was present, says he observed with astonishment the progress the British troops had made. Every man, the correspondent says, seemed to have a separate mission, and when he fell another immediately went after the same object. At the village of St. Pierre Division, where the fighting was bitter, the British delivered ten assaults. A whole German battalion, according to the writer, with a major commanding, laid down their arms. According to his correspondent the average depth of the front penetrated by the British was from 1,000 to 1,200 yards.

SERBIAN OFFICIAL.

SALONIKA, Nov. 14. The following official communication from the Serbian headquarters was issued to-night: On Monday we fought sanguinary engagements with the Bulgars and Germans on the Cerina River, which are not yet concluded. The enemy offered stubborn resistance, hence certain trenches were repeatedly changing hands. At the close of the day we were in definite possession of very important enemy positions near Tepavits. Apart from enormous losses inflicted on the enemy in killed and wounded, we took 1,000 prisoners, including a German battalion commander and several German officers. The booty captured is important, but the details are not available.

UNITED STATES WILL TAKE NO ACTION.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14. The United States has not and probably will not join with Spain and the Vatican or the Netherlands in a protest against the deportation of Belgians into Germany. It was officially stated here to-day. The States will preserve its independence of action in this case as in many others which have arisen during the war. The administration is much concerned over the deportations, but has not yet taken official action.

Don't Neglect Your Cough.

A little cold may not seem a dangerous thing—you may be inclined to let it go on hoping that to-morrow it will be better—but can you afford to take chances? Just as the little insignificant acorn grows if let alone, to the mighty giant oak, that cough if not stopped may grow to a very serious illness. When a Cough starts there's no telling where it will end. You know no doubt, of cases right among people you have known, where serious complications and fatal illness have had their start from a neglected cough or cold. "Don't neglect your cough!" Stafford's Phorotone Cough and Cold Cure is what you should take. For sale at Stafford's Drug Store, Theatre Hill, and Stafford's Pharmacy, Duckworth Street. Price 25c. postage 5c. extra.

chant submarine is to take the place of the Bremen, a sister ship to the Deutschland, which was lost with all hands on her maiden trip to the States is now being built in Germany. Definite information regarding the new vessel is lacking, but the submarine is said here to be purely mercantile in character, her arrangements being similar to those of the Deutschland. It is not known when the vessel will be ready for her first trip. The Deutschland, it was learned to-day, will not carry any regular mails from the States to Germany the coming trip. Negotiations for a trans-Atlantic submarine mail service have been carried on between the German Embassy and the post office department, but the operating company has not yet fully agreed to the service, because it is felt the submarine service, being in the nature of an extraordinary one, should command a higher rate, just as the States post office charges a higher rate for special delivery.

BRITAIN'S NOTE MADE PUBLIC.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14. The British reply to the latest American note protesting against the trade with black list, which was made public to-day by the State Department, states that the rights of neutral traders under international law have been ruthlessly cancelled, and defines the black list measure as municipal regulations, plainly concerning only the British Government and British citizens, and contends it is designed to shorten the war. The note fails to meet the American demand that the names of American firms be stricken from the black list, but attempts to convince the State Department that the British position is just and founded on law. It leaves open the door for further negotiations which are expected to follow.

COMMENT ON HUGHES' RESIGNATION.

LONDON, Nov. 14. Commenting on the resignation of General Sir Sam Hughes, who raised Canada's Overseas Forces, the Westminster Gazette said editorially to-day: "The resignation is not surprising after the recent amazing speech of General Hughes. It is just conceivable our hospital arrangements may have broken down as far as some individual Canadians were concerned, but for the succour of all our wounded we have mobilized all our available civilian surgery. We don't even understand the suggestion that any were put at the mercy of first year medical students."

Ships of Stone

To Italy Belongs the Credit of Their Invention.

Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir.—The article entitled "A Ship Made of Stone" and appearing in your issue of last evening is misleading as it gives the impression that the idea of a concrete ship is new and the invention of a Norwegian. Please permit me to draw your attention to an article in "The Shipping World" for October, under the title "Reinforced Concrete in Shipbuilding," which says that, "remarkable though this development undoubtedly is, it cannot claim priority in novelty and originality," and then goes on to say, "Italy and not Norway is the real home of the concrete floating carrier, and boats were being constructed of that material well over a decade ago, while various attempts to introduce it into shipbuilding practice have also been made in the United States. To Signor Gabellini belongs the credit of giving practical effect to this shipbuilding innovation in Italy."

The same issue of "The Shipping World" shows the barge Liguiva being built on a floating pontoon. This craft built in 1905, is 54 ft. in length and 18 ft. in beam. "Moreover," says "S.W." "the Italian Government some years ago experimented with a 300 ton cargo boat built to its order," and "an order for more of the same type was an index of the success attending her use."

Yours truly, ARTHUR ENGLISH. St. John's, Nov. 14th, 1916.

EUROPE'S WAR.

It seems as though the dreary war will never have an ending; the peace the world is longing for, no white-winged dove is sending. A year ago we hoped and prayed that ere another summer the soldier would have sheathed his blade, and gone to work as a plumber. We saw the winter months advance, and as the spring drew closer, we hoped that he would soak his lance, and open up as grocer. And when the vernal freshets roared, we watched the man in armor, and hoped that he would can his sword, and get a job as farmer. Alas, our hopes were all in vain; the world is mad and dizzy, and Europe, counting up her slain, is still supremely busy. It seems to me if kings and czars would hold a friendly meeting, and pass around some good cigars, first one, then 't'her treating, they soon might end the beastly scrap that's kept the world affrighted, and fix the blamed dip-swinged map so all would be delighted. But horse sense is a sacred thing, a cure for war and dangers; to which the captain and the king have evermore been strangers.

Mr. Nath. Yetman, R. N. R., and Mr. Nath. Snow, R. N. R., were in town for a couple of weeks on a visit to friends. They left on Saturday's afternoon train to join the "Briton."

A number of men who work in the woods in winter time went in on Saturday to fix the road so as to make their work easier for horses and men. They spent the day in repairing the road, but will find the advantage that repairs all through the winter while hauling wood to their homes.

"I received a wedding announcement, and in the lower left hand corner is written: 'At home after July 1st.' What shall I do in response?" asked Doris anxiously.

"It is not necessary to acknowledge announcement cards but is proper to leave cards or call on the bride's parents within two weeks after receiving the formal announcement. You should also call on the bride on or after the date of her receiving day," replied her aunt.

All Children Love "Syrup of Figs" for Liver and Bowels.

Give it when feverish, cross, bilious, for bad breath or sour stomach.

Look at the tongue, Mother! If coated, it is a sure sign that your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.

When peevish, cross, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, doesn't eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad, has stomach-ache, sore throat, diarrhea, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

You needn't coax sick children to take this harmless "fruit laxative," they love its delicious taste, and it always makes them feel splendid.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. To be sure you get the genuine, ask to see that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.
