WERE PARTED BY A GHOST.

Grounds on which an Illinois woman seeks a divorce.

The ghost of her husband's first wife continually at her elbow, pulling her hair, pinching her arm and neck, making her completely unendurable to her.

There has been filed in the courts of this city a suit for divorce on grounds probably the most extraordinary in the annals of the law, the grounds being that a bona fide ghost prevents the lady bringing the suit from living with her husband in any degree of matrimonial quietude and happiness.

The plaintiff is Mrs. Theresa Baldwin, nee Miss Rippledans, of a prominent family, who was married on Dec. 14 last to Philip Baldwin of this place.

Mrs. Baldwin alleges that the ghost of her husband's first wife, Rosemond Baldwin, haunts their domicile, prevents her in various ways, and altogether makes life unendurable under the present husband's roof and forces her to live apart from him.

She declares that she was absolutely skeptical on matters supernatural, and that the beginning of her extraordinary experience would have laughed with the most matter-of-fact at the idea of a ghost haunting the wife's friends and that she had been entirely altered since her marriage.

Editor World: Last year and the year preceding considerable work was done on the South Sea, Marie ship canal on Sundays. This became so notorious that a complaint was laid before a local J.P. charging Mr. Michael J. Haney, the contractor, with violating the Lord's Day Act, but because he was not actually working himself the case was dismissed, and work on the Sabbath days went on more vigorously than ever.

A few weeks ago the Ministerial Association of the town referred the matter to the Hon. Attorney-General, and he replied in substance that the County Crown Attorney and the provincial constable were the proper parties to deal with the matter. Accordingly on the 18th of March Mr. Michael J. Haney contractor, appeared before the Hon. Attorney-General to answer to the charge of having his men employed on Sunday, March 6, as follows: Sixty-eight men moving a derrick, four teams and eight men at least moving a boiler, seven horses shod, and four or five men working all day in the blacksmith shop.

On the 20th inst. Mr. Haney again appeared before the same justice of the peace charged with having on Sunday, March 12, three men working in the blacksmith shop all day shoving horses and doing other work. On the following Sunday, the 19th inst., he had from 12 to 14 teams hauling cord-wood, which is a piece of work not mentioned on the convictions above mentioned, several to indicate that the said contractor intends to do the work on the Lord's Day.

In the case pending the teamsters themselves are to be summoned to stand their ground before the Hon. Attorney-General. It is but fair to those men to state that they are engaged by the month, and that they are not to be paid for any work done on Sunday, and that it is much against their will to have such work to do. Indeed, the men generally do not wish to work on Sunday, but when ordered to work are afraid to refuse.

It is currently reported that the contractor has advanced to the sum of $80,000 to complete the canal by July, 1894. Hence his seeming anxiety to prosecute the work on Sunday at all hazards. The contractor's question and we therefore make the above statement of facts on behalf of our countrymen, who are entitled to no rest whatever, should be deprived of their inalienable right to rest on the Lord's Day, but when ordered to work are afraid to refuse.

Her sister sees the lady in white. So much was she upset by the mystery of the ghost that she wrote for her sister, Miss Anna Belle Rippledans, who is the business company when Mr. Baldwin's business took him from her. The young lady, a sprightly miss of 19, was told nothing of what had happened, and she was very much surprised when the unhappy lady trusted to drive from her mind the delusion which she was beginning to believe was the cause of her sister's ghostly ghastr. But on the day after her arrival Miss Anna Belle destroyed this hope by remarking to her sister that she had seen a lady in white walking down the hall just before her, and asking where she had gone.

Her sister put her off with some trifle explanation, but the next day Miss Rippledans came to her and Mr. Baldwin, and she had just been talking to her sister, saying her into the apartment, she had been coming to find a trace of her. She insisted on her sister and Mr. Baldwin accompanying her to the room to aid her in her search, and she became angry when she asked him to come, and she put out as what he considered a hysterical creation of his wife's heated imagination, and charged her with being a mad woman, and she called her a mad woman, and she called her a mad woman, and she called her a mad woman.

Searching for the spirit. He went at once to Miss Rippledans's room and searched in vain for the intruder. He refused to believe that it was the spirit of his wife, though Mrs. Baldwin testified in her plea for divorce that on one occasion she heard her husband speaking to some one whom he called Rosemond, and to whom he addressed a prayer to go away and leave him in peace. On entering the room she found her husband alone, as far as she could see, and he became angry when she asked him to whom he was speaking, denying that he had been talking to any one.

After this began a series of petty persecutions by the ghost, the latter, for the most part, being invisible, but pinching Mrs. Baldwin on the arm and neck, and pulling her hair about her face. This was usually when she was alone or when only her husband was present, but on several occasions, in the presence of guests, she was hardly able to suppress cries of pain from severe pinches administered to her by invisible tormenter.

Saw a spectral hand. She remembers once showing a lady caller her hand, on which had just appeared a large and cruel bruise. This lady gave her evidence also. She says that her eyes chanced at that moment to be fixed on her hostess' puppy, plump hand, and that she saw the flesh caught up as by a strong grasp, and she felt a sharp pain to cry out in pain and to exhibit to her a purple bruise that had not been there the moment before. Mrs. Baldwin's maid testified to seeing a woman in white about the house, but she was never close enough to her to obtain sight of her.

The maid to whom Mrs. Baldwin described the figure she had seen on the first night of her installation in the house, and who is the only servant in the household who was retained after the first Mrs. Baldwin's death, testifies to the spirit mistress having drawn a perfect likeness of her predecessor as could only have come from one familiar with her in life or looking

I inherit some tendency to Dyspepsia from my mother. I suffered two years in this way; consulted a number of doctors. They did me no good. I then used your August Flower and it was just two days when I felt great relief.

Relieved in your August Flower and it was just two days when I felt great relief. I soon got that I could sleep and eat, and I felt that I was well. That was three years ago, and I am still first-class. I can never get dyspepsia again. I feel constipated the least particle a dose or two of August Flower does the work.

The beauty of the medicine, that you can stop the use of it without any bad effects on the system. Constipation while I was sick I felt everything it seemed to me a man could feel. It was of all men most miserable. I can say, in conclusion, that I believe August Flower will cure anyone of indigestion, if taken Life of Misery with judgment.

He refused to believe that it was the spirit of his wife, though Mrs. Baldwin testified in her plea for divorce that on one occasion she heard her husband speaking to some one whom he called Rosemond, and to whom he addressed a prayer to go away and leave him in peace. On entering the room she found her husband alone, as far as she could see, and he became angry when she asked him to whom he was speaking, denying that he had been talking to any one.

After this began a series of petty persecutions by the ghost, the latter, for the most part, being invisible, but pinching Mrs. Baldwin on the arm and neck, and pulling her hair about her face. This was usually when she was alone or when only her husband was present, but on several occasions, in the presence of guests, she was hardly able to suppress cries of pain from severe pinches administered to her by invisible tormenter.

Saw a spectral hand. She remembers once showing a lady caller her hand, on which had just appeared a large and cruel bruise. This lady gave her evidence also. She says that her eyes chanced at that moment to be fixed on her hostess' puppy, plump hand, and that she saw the flesh caught up as by a strong grasp, and she felt a sharp pain to cry out in pain and to exhibit to her a purple bruise that had not been there the moment before. Mrs. Baldwin's maid testified to seeing a woman in white about the house, but she was never close enough to her to obtain sight of her.

The maid to whom Mrs. Baldwin described the figure she had seen on the first night of her installation in the house, and who is the only servant in the household who was retained after the first Mrs. Baldwin's death, testifies to the spirit mistress having drawn a perfect likeness of her predecessor as could only have come from one familiar with her in life or looking

A GREAT BOSTON DIVINE

GRAPHIC FREE-HAND SKETCHES OF REV. JOSEPH COOK.

He Sounds an Alarm—Chicago During the Fair—The Prospect Appals Him—Horror of Vice in Great Cities—New York Worse Than Chicago.

Rev. Joseph Cook, of Boston, the lecturer and editor of Our Day, a religious and reform journal, and who is almost as well known in Chicago as an evangelist as in Boston, has fears for the moral condition of Chicago during the time the World's Fair is open.

He accused Chicago of being a hot city under normal and favorable circumstances, and then said that for some months after the last of May next it will be seven times hotter than the hottest former period in its history.

Chicago will be seven times hotter. History. Of the perils of the city he said they are harlots, drunkenness, Sunday anarchy and greed.

The opening sentence struck the key-note of his lecture. It was a warning, a warning of the perils of the city.

"We are approaching, in the world's fair, an imperial jubilee of civilization; and it is our solemn duty, as a nation, to prevent it from becoming accompanied by a local carnival of crime."

Then he said, "A kind word of the city and spoke of New York, as being worse, in one respect at least. He proceeded thus: "The duties of the mayor of the city of Chicago will be as great as those of the governor of any ordinary state during the time the fair is open. Let us ask, then, what are the prospects as to social evil and moral ascendancy in connection with this great exposition?"

"It is a fact, and no fancy, that the Women's Christian Temperance Union, the largest and most useful organization of women in the city."

"The duties of the mayor will be as great as those of the governor of any state. Men that history ever saw, announces that an effort is being made by places of unrepentable infamy in Chicago to bring to that city 25,000 girls within the next few weeks. A committee of some of the foremost ladies of Chicago recently waited on the mayor to enter a protest against the conspiracy supposed to be hatching on this topic, and the mayor replied to the ladies that he would put the whole power of his office at their disposal. He said that what they wished to prevent was worse than murder."

"Here are realities more horrible than any confessions with the burning of human beings in a fire. There are several things that hurt a man or a woman more than to cut the throat or to grill the whole body. As a stated upon what we may well call."

"The Woman's Exhibit. The Board of Lady Managers of the World's Columbian Exposition now is ready to install exhibits in its spacious and marvellously elegant building. The display of women's work will be one of the most attractive and instructive that will be open to the public; fabrics that were woven long ago, and which we use to this day, are the foundation of all knowledge, and the cement of all society.—Casaubon. Thus ought to be, even to superstition, in keeping by promises; and therefore should be equally cautious in making them.—Fuller.

The display of women's work will be one of the most attractive and instructive that will be open to the public; fabrics that were woven long ago, and which we use to this day, are the foundation of all knowledge, and the cement of all society.—Casaubon. Thus ought to be, even to superstition, in keeping by promises; and therefore should be equally cautious in making them.—Fuller.

THE PIN WAS ALIVE.

Now a Miner Enformed a Convivial Traveling Man.

L. B. Dyke, of Colorado, is a new kind of a temperance reformer. Being the owner of a mine he is enabled to travel and yesterday he arrived in Chicago on his way home from Florida. Just to be eccentric, he bought a champagne down South and had it fastened to the end of a little gold chain, so that he could wear it as a scarf decoration.

The lunatic little rapelle was about three inches long and, like all of its kind, changed the smoky color of its body when disturbed. Yesterday afternoon the owner walked up to the hotel bar to take a drink with a traveling man who had been "drinking over" in Chicago three days, and had a "penny account" and other things. The traveling man did not see the thing on the scarf until he had poured his drink. Then he glared hard.

"What's that?" he asked. "That scarf pin." "I wear no scarf pin." The chameleon flicked its tail and crawled out on the lapel of the coat, as the owner brushed his hand toward his scarf.

"Holy scowlers, it's alive!" shouted the traveling man. "What's alive?" and the miner again brushed the little animal, which crawled under his vest. Then he looked down and said, "Now, do you see anything?" "No liquor for me," said he suddenly, and made a dash for the elevator. The crowd broke into a laugh he was too far away to hear.—Chicago News Record.

Eviction. He—Miss Sharpdill, do you look favorably upon my suit? She—Certainly; it fits you beautifully.

Points of View. Mrs. Van Velvet—Yes, our dinner china is all over a hundred years old. Mrs. Sewed—Let, now! Can't you afford no new dishes?

PURELY VEGETABLE—Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They're a compound of refined and concentrated botanicals, and are the most effective and pleasant of all purgatives. They're the most effective and pleasant of all purgatives. They're the most effective and pleasant of all purgatives.

AMMUNITION IS A WHIRLPOOL WITH A MORE VORACIOUS THROAT THAN INFAMY ITSELF. The professional gambler in Chicago, and I hear that there were about two hundred applicants and only about fifteen of the brightest were received. They are made to pay a large sum for twenty lessons.

Has there ever been opened publicly before on the face of the earth a school for instruction in the art of gambling? "Anthony Comstock is in the thick of the contest to obtain the repeal of the law that gives vigils and rewards to race-track class of gamblers. He tells me that gambling ruins more men certainly, is a whirlpool with a more voracious throat than infamy itself. It ruins more men rapidly than drunkenness, and he believes it to be, in all our great cities, a vice far more fatal to the young and on the rapid increase."

Mr. Cook went on to speak in detail of the many robberies and murders which occur in Chicago streets, and concluded with an eloquent and impressive reference to the spirit of greed and selfishness which is responsible for many of the evils he referred to.

Aphorisms. We have nothing to do with our past but get a blessed future out of it.—Phillips Brooks. If you want knowledge, you must toil for it; and if you want it, you must toil for it. Toil is the law! Pleasure comes by toil, and not by self-indulgence and indolence. When one gets to love his work, his life is a happy one.—Ruskin.

Murmur not at the ill you may suffer, but rather thank God for the many mercies and blessings received at his hand.—Fenelon. Amusements are to religion like breezes of the wind to the flame—gentle ones will fan it, but strong ones will put it out.—Thomas. The gods are just, and of their pleasant vices make instruments to scourge us.—Shakespeare.

Morality without religion is only a kind of dead reckoning, an endeavor to find our place on a cloudy day by measuring the distance we have run, without any observation of the heavenly bodies.—Longfellow. Do to-day's duty, fight to-day's temptation. Do not weaken and distract yourself by looking forward to things you cannot see, and could not undertake if you saw.—Charles Kingsley.

The study of truth is perpetually joined with the love of virtue; and there is no virtue which derives not its origin from truth, and, on the contrary, there is no vice which does not its beginning from a lie. Truth is the foundation of all knowledge, and the cement of all society.—Casaubon.
