HAMILTON NEWS. FIGHTING THE ASSESSMENT. More Interest Than Usual in Court of Revision. THE WIDOW OF DR. MILLER Secured a Concession on the Life Insurance of Her Late Husband.

Dean Forner Went to His Home Exempted, But He Didn't Go—Dr. Berns' Building Must Now Pay Taxes—The Big Corporations Will Have 35 Lawyers Fighting the City to Day—Extension of the T. & B. Road to St. Catharines to be Pushed—General News.

Hamilton, Nov. 10.—(From The World's Staff Correspondent.)—There was more of human interest at the Court of Revision to-day than has hitherto been the case. Mrs. Miller, widow of the late Dr. Miller, prevailed upon the Court to assess only $13,000 of the $20,000 life insurance left by her husband on the ground that she had spent $7000. Rural dean Forner appeared against the assessing of his new house, which he receives from his congregation in addition to his salary, but the court held that he did not receive the money he got from the money's worth. Some say $6000 was knocked off of the J. Stinson property and $4000 off of R. Moody. Dr. Berns' school building, free from a college, is now assessed $10,000 more than the hospital. The big fight begins. The Canada Life, Prudential and Loan, Street Railway, William Hendrie, etc., are all plaintiffs, and 35 lawyers will fight the city.

Conservative Meeting in Ward 4. The Conservatives of Ward 4 held a rousing meeting to-night and elected of officers. They are: Chairman, A. J. McLeod; vice-chairman, T. F. White; secretary, H. H. Foster; Executive Committee, S. J. Whitehead, H. Drope and A. Dunn. Orchestral Club Concert. The Harris Orchestral Club held its 24th annual concert at Association Hall to-night before a crowded house. Mr. E. A. Hunt, the director, took pains to make the concert of the evening. The orchestra played admirably.

A Runaway Wreck. To-night a team of horses belonging to William Elliott of Barton, took fright at a trolley car on James-street and ran into another car. The rig was wrecked and 20 cans of milk were spilled on the road. The horses were captured in A. Copp's lawn on Aberdeen-avenue. Miscellaneous to-operation. The regular meeting of the East End Workmen's Club to-night was largely attended. John Jennings presided. Co-operation was the subject discussed. Philip Obermeyer and John Davis were the principal speakers. The members wanted committees appointed to look into the works and gas works were treated. It was stated that employees were compelled to be licensed to operate.

KELLEY MURDER TRIAL. Conductor Clark Remembered Her Father's Fare on the Train—Detective Carpenter Gives Evidence. Dover, N. H., Nov. 10.—In the Kelley murder trial this morning, the early evidence had a bearing on the presence of the team driver by Kelley on the day of the murder. John De Blue of Somersworth said it was Kelley who was driving the team. This witness said Kelley had talked with him about starting a roof garden over a two-story saw-mill.

Princess Theatre. Belasco and DeMille's "Lost Paradise," one of the strongest and best American plays ever written, will be staged by Chamming Stock Company at the Princess Theatre, 100 St. George-st., Toronto, in a manner which is intended to show beyond all doubt that it is the most brilliant and elaborate and complete staging of a play in any realistic effects are to be seen in the city. It is considered the best "Lost Paradise" ever written.

Highwayman. To-morrow morning at 9 o'clock the sale of seats will commence at the Grand Opera House for the engagement of the Broadway Theatre (New York) Opera Company, in DeKoven and Smith's new three-act comic opera, which is to be presented for the entire week, with Saturday matinee. In choosing a chorus for a comic opera, there are many experiences, owing to the unfitness of the applicants in point of facial uncleanliness, lack of voice or unsightliness of figure. Signor A. De Norellis was trying to do this at the Broadway Theatre lately for the chorus people for DeKoven and Smith's new comic opera, "The Highwayman."

TAILORISM
 A SENTIMENTAL FOLLY
 Rich men must burn their money somehow, and are the natural prey of high class tailors.
 But, men of moderate means, reflective minds, and business sense, should query why their hats and shoes are ready made before paying a custom tailor twice the price of "Fit-Reform" garments.
 As carefully made—as perfect fitting—as shape retaining.
 Brand and size and makers' price in left breast pocket.
 $10, $12, $15, $18, $20 per suit.
 Catalogue from Fit-Reform Clothing Co., Montreal.

OSGOODE'S EXPENSIVE TREAT.
 Legals Must Pay for Complimentary...
 The Ontario Rugby Football Union Executive met last night at Clancy's to arrange for the Osgoode-Hall match. The meeting was not only a hot one, but long drawn out, as it took from 8 o'clock till nearly 11 to decide about a referee and the taking of the Osgoode-Hall match. The meeting was called for the purpose of discussing the match at Rosedale, Oct. 23. The executive held back Osgoode's cheque of $175, their share from last Saturday's game, to deduct $120 for tickets, which was done, not without some discussion on the part of the legalists. The bulk of this goes to Queen's and the Union.

MR. KEATING ON ELEVATORS
Finds Himself in a Rather Delicate Position.

OWING TO MUCH EVIDENCE
Shown Him in Favor of Hydraulic as Well as Electric Appliances.

On the Question of Repairs and Maintenance the City Engineer Believes the Weight of Evidence is in Favor of the Hydraulic Elevator. The Cost by Electric Installation, View $150,000. Would Also Be Saved by a Hydraulic Plant.

City Engineer Keating has prepared his report regarding elevators for the new City Hall. If the Board of Control face the issue at their meeting this afternoon, which seems probable, they will find themselves in a very delicate position in the direction of making a choice between electric and hydraulic systems as they were they tried to throw the onus on an only indirectly responsible official. The report contains details in cost of installation of the electric type is $140,000, while the hydraulic is cheaper by $10,000, than the lowest hydraulic type. The controllers know that when they opened the door for hydraulic they were in a delicate position.

Secondly, the report goes on to say: "The chief questions requiring consideration are: 1. Safety. 2. Reliability as to service. 3. Facility of handling and smoothness of operation in operation and maintenance. 4. Economy in operation and maintenance."

"After wading through a mass of correspondence, reports and documents, quite as bewildering and conflicting as the report on which I have already referred, and having given the matter as much consideration as I could, the conclusion to which I have arrived is that, so far as the three points mentioned above are concerned, there is little room for choice between the most modern type of hydraulic machinery and the latest improved electric appliances; that, in the one is practically just as safe as in the other, and that the cost of hydraulic is a great deal less than that of electric."

The engineer is thereby narrowed down to a question as to the comparative economy of the electric and hydraulic systems. The subject on which the board are still left to decide is the cost of the plant and the cost of the power. But they are not being asked to make a choice on this subject with any hesitations, but to give their opinion on the subject of the plant and the cost of the power. The report is a long one, and contains many details. It is a most interesting and valuable document. It is a most interesting and valuable document.

THE IDAHO DISASTER.
A Boat Sent Out to Patrol the Lake in Search of the Bodies of the Drowned Crew.

Port Dover, Nov. 10.—(Special.)—A telegram was received by Mr. Corton, agent here for Grand Trunk Railway, from the agent at Black Rock of the Transit Company, asking him to engage a vessel to patrol the waters along Long Point for any tidings of the drowned crew of the ill-fated steamer Idaho. Mr. Corton lost no time in engaging the fishing boat Germania, commanded by Captain Lowe, who is also the owner. No better man could undertake so dangerous a task, as he has sailed the waters of Lake Erie since his schooner, Long Point, was situated about 20 miles from Port Dover. One, looking at the chart, would conclude the bodies would be able to float about in the water. Mr. Corton, however, has done all that lies in his power to recover the bodies and bring them to shore. Some of the wreck was six miles west of Port Dover, and the boat was blown up on Long Point. It has cast a gloom over the town. There should be a life-saving station on Long Point, and perhaps now the town might make up for its neglect by another so disastrous a calamity.

THE MONSTER SHOE HOUSE
Two Big and Busy Stores
210 YONGE STREET, 510 QUEEN WEST.

This is not a sensational store—yet our prices always seem so. That is natural. Selling one hundred pairs of shoes while other stores sell one pair gives us great advantages both in selling and buying. One hundred small profits aggregate more than one large profit. Buying in such large quantities give us the bedrock entree into every shoe manufactory on the continent.

385 pairs For Friday, For... Men
Coeur de Leon Ladies' Shoes $1.60 a pair.

Regular price $3, $4 and $5 a pair. The manufacturer is content to sell his samples in Canada, as by so doing he keeps his home market steady and does not cause jealousy in any American city between his customers. Therefore Guinane gets every single pair of the Coeur de Leon samples carried by travelers for them.

We are selling them for less than we paid for them, as we find this is the cheapest and surest way of advertising these superb and ideal shoes for women. Remember, only 385 pairs in this lot—and you must be here early for a choice. Many styles, shoes in every size, B, C, D widths.

$1.60 a pair. $1.25 a pair.

BOYS' AND GIRLS' SCHOOL SHOES. Boys shoes have to stand the brunt of a good deal of hard usage. They are tough on shoes. A long time we studied how to get a boys' shoe that would be as tough as an ironclad—and yet not clumsy. We got them made to our ideal a year ago—and we are called them "Tough and Trusty." They will last—more shoe life—more value—more toughness—than any other shoe we ever heard of.

Boston, Nov. 10.—A Stockholm special says: The most astonishing contribution of Dr. Sven Hedin, a young Swedish explorer, who has just returned to Stockholm after a four years' sojourn in what has hitherto been considered inaccessible portions of Central Asia. The facts which Dr. Hedin brings back are so marvellous as to have excited the interest of the world. He has discovered the existence of great cities and ranges of mountains, which even the most learned in the science of geography never dreamed. He found the remains of a great civilization, which he has named "Saka." He has also discovered the remains of a great empire, which he has named "Saka." FRIDAY'S DISAPPEARANCE
Has Caused Excitement in Barrie, Where He Was Well Known—Did He Return From England?

Barrie, Ont., Nov. 10.—(Special.)
The item in today's World about Fred Plewes' disappearance caused no little excitement about town here, where Plewes was well known, and it is thought that he will turn up all right, though he has not been seen here as late. In the first week in July Alex Sidwirth, who had been working in the steno department of Truth or Conscience, Toronto, jumped his job there and came to his home here, intending to return in a few days to cross the ocean with cattle. On Sunday, July 4, he met Fred Plewes about town, and the latter explained to him the circumstances of his disappearance. Plewes had gone to Toronto on Wednesday, the 7th, they left for Toronto, and in two or three days afterwards started off with a cargo of cattle for the Old Country. Since then, Plewes has not been seen. The Telegram office, London, England, but it is not known whether he said anything about Plewes' disappearance.

AMONG THE CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

The eighth annual show of the Toronto Gardeners' and Florists' Association is now in full blast at the Pavilion. Welcome in our leafy bowers, where November's breath has come; Welcome, golden-crested flowers, Ever fair 'Chrysanthema'! Like a herald's plumed face— Though the earth is void of grace, And the very birds are dumb, Cheerful 'gay chrysanthema'.

The eighth annual chrysanthema show of the Toronto Gardeners' and Florists' Association is now in full swing at the Pavilion. It was formally opened yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock by Lady Kirkpatrick, in the presence of a small but distinguished company of lovers of beautiful flowers. Lady Kirkpatrick was present, but owing to illness was unable to give an address, and Mr. Goldwin Smith made the formal opening remarks. He was very sorry that illness prevented the Lieutenant-Governor from performing a duty that had been his for the last four years. He hoped that he might be speedily restored to health. Mr. Smith said he had seen a wonderful transformation in flowers during the past year. This is the first year since 1917 that there has been a great difference in the buds of to-day and then, when illness of the valley and other common varieties delighted his eyes. That old man liked the flowers of the youth, and to him there was nothing more beautiful than the columbine. He could remember when orchids were first introduced to England, and how they were first introduced to the horticulture during the past fifty years, and there would not be a rose, carnation, gladiolus, or any other flower, that he did not know. He said that the chrysanthema was a very beautiful flower, and he was glad to see it so well represented at this show. Justice Meredith yesterday dismissed the Criminal Assizes peremptorily, because the Crown was not ready to proceed with the cases.

Justice Meredith is right. There is something decidedly wrong. In this particular instance, the cause of the Crown's unreadiness, people who may be innocent, who are ready for trial, and who demand trial, are compelled to either linger in jail, or mix with their fellows with the obloquy of an unproved charge hanging over their heads.

It is not by any means the first time that, on account of the Crown's unreadiness, the cause of the Crown's unreadiness, people who may be innocent, who are ready for trial, and who demand trial, are compelled to either linger in jail, or mix with their fellows with the obloquy of an unproved charge hanging over their heads.

LOOKS BAD FOR THORN.

see the house and Thorn offered the woman who had the key, money but she would not take it. She then turned to the woman in the room. This man owned the Woodside house and Thorn told him to bring the key for one of the rooms of the Woodside house. I think Thorn gave the name of Braun when he hired the house. Thorn took the key and told the landlady he did not know when he would move in.

Thorn said he would kill him.

"Then Thorn told me that he would kill Goldsuppe in the Ninth-avenue house and put his body in a trunk and send it away. I said: 'No, don't do this.' Thorn then told me to bring Goldsuppe to the Woodside house and he would kill him there. I have to do it," said Martin told me to do.

At the Woodside cottage.

In describing the ride on the ferry, Mrs. Mack said that she went to the front of the boat. Thorn stayed on the rear. Soon after the boat was in the stream, Thorn was much excited and said that he had thrown the head overboard. On reaching New York he went to the house, where she burned the piece containing the clothing. In elaborating her account of the scene at the Woodside cottage, Mrs. Mack said: "On Friday morning I had a talk with Goldsuppe and told him that we had crossed the river for a baby farm. He said: 'All right.' That was 8 o'clock in the morning. We left the house between 8 and 10 o'clock on a Ninth-avenue and took a car for the 34th-street ferry. In Long Island City we got on a trolley car, which rode out to the Woodside house, reaching there at 10 o'clock. I had the keys and opened the door. I was much excited and went through the house to the back yard. Goldsuppe went upstairs. I heard the shot and felt like I had been shot. I went out in the yard and said: 'I shot him; he is dead.' Martin was much excited; he said: 'I feel like I had been shot.'"

Gradually the lawyer led the witness up to the morning of Friday, June 25, he said that the crime was committed. She said she and Goldsuppe left No. 9 York between 8 and 10 o'clock that morning and after they had crossed the ferry they boarded a trolley car, which left them at the Woodside cottage. She said she and Goldsuppe went out to the back yard and she saw Goldsuppe enter and examine the bushes while she stood nearby. She went upstairs and I heard a shot. Martin Thorn then came running down, and when he met me he said: 'I shot him; he is dead.' He was very excited and I was half dead, said the self-confessed murderer, breathlessly.

"What did you do then?" asked Judge Weller.

Thorn Had Everything Packed.

"He told me to go home and come back at 5 o'clock. When I came back that evening Thorn had everything packed up in bundles. He handed me a bundle which he said contained Goldsuppe's clothes; he took another bundle, which was wrapped in greyed paper. He said that that was Goldsuppe's head and that was done up in plaster Paris. We took the trolley car and went over to New York on a ferry boat."

"On which ferry?"

"I don't know; I am a stranger to the city, and can't say. When we reached New York I went home and Thorn went to the other trolley car and got the bundle and found clothes."

"Which clothes?" asked the prosecutor.

"William Goldsuppe's," replied the woman, emphatically.

"I saw Thorn that evening again and he told me to meet him at the following morning (Saturday) at the 34th-street ferry. The woman spoke fairly intelligible English, with a very strong German accent.

Thorn and His Lawyers.

During the recital Thorn's lawyers left their accustomed seats, near the prisoner, and were accommodated with chairs closer to the witness. Thorn listened to every word with his lips closely pressed against his hands and was writing on his knees. Frequently his lips became dry and parched, and on occasions he would moisten them with his tongue. His face bore that same stolid look of indifference which it has worn all the while, but his eyes were unsteady.

When he was not gazing at his accuser, he was casting furtive glances around the court room and up into the galleries, which were crowded with men and women. Mrs. Mack told of the purchase of the olooth and other wrappings, and identified some letters which she got from Thorn.

"I saw Thorn that evening again and he told me to meet him at the following morning (Saturday) at the 34th-street ferry. The woman spoke fairly intelligible English, with a very strong German accent.

Identified Four Photographs.

Before the close of the direct examination, Surrogate Weller showed Mrs. Mack four photographs. She identified them as those of Goldsuppe.

Surrogate Weller then asked: "Why do you not make this statement before Mrs. Mack replied: 'I don't want to have it on my mind, and then began to cry. It was some time before she resumed her testimony, and then she said: 'I make this statement of my own free will. I want to get it off my conscience. No promise of mercy has been made me. I wanted to clear my mind, and I don't care what happens over me, what they do with me.'"

Mrs. Mack's tears had no effect on the prisoner, and, as if any one should expect to enjoy her discomfiture, as the old-time grin played around his mouth.

Most Damning Evidence.

Mr. Howe began his cross-examination of the murderer in a very insinuating way, and soon made the witness acknowledge that the house in Woodside was rented for the sole purpose of killing Goldsuppe there; that she deceived him there; that when she brought the olooth and other wrappings, it was for the purpose of packing up the portions of his body after she should have finished his murderous task. Adroitly and cleverly, the legal expert made the woman acknowledge the most damning and cold-blooded preparations for getting rid of her lover.

"And did you do it?" asked the prosecutor.

"No," replied the witness.

"Did you cry when you hired the olooth?"

"No."

"Did you cry when you were bringing your lover to be butchered?"

"No," replied the woman.

"Did Goldsuppe say that your lover was he?"

"No," said Mrs. Mack. "He was not. I never loved any man outside of my husband."

The answer caused many of the spectators and several of the jury to murmur. Thorn's set features relaxed for a moment.

Loved Thorn From Fear.

"For how long did you live with Goldsuppe, prior to the time you lured him to Woodside?" asked Mr. Howe.

"About a year," she replied.

"You loved Thorn, too, did you not?"

"No, he made me. He choked me and threatened to kill me if I did not love him as he said, shaking her head slowly from side to side. This answer made Thorn smile again.

"The witness then was afraid of Thorn," asked Mr. Howe. "Thorn had a syringe and said he would put something in it which would destroy my eyesight and that of Goldsuppe."

"Was it a fear of this syringe that made you buy the olooth before the man was dead, and the same fear after he was dead which made you burn his clothing?"

"Now, on Friday, the day of the alleged killing, June 25, you took Goldsuppe to the house, and he was killed, did you?"

"Yes," asked the lawyer. "Yes," "Did you see the pistol fired?"

"No."

"Where was you?"

"In the yard."

"Did you see Goldsuppe where he was lying?"

"No, I did not see him."

"Did you not see him in the house at all?"

"What after he was dead?"

"What made you go back to the house where your lover was killed?"

"Thorn told me to come."

Blood in the Bathroom.

"How many parcels did you see?"

"Two."

"Where were they in the front room, or where?"

"They were in the front room."

"Did you see any blood in the house?"

"Yes, in the bath room."

"On the floor?"

"Yes, there was not much blood, but there was some."

"How many spots?"

"I didn't count. I can't tell."

"What was on the floor on the only place where you saw blood?"

"Yes; then I saw blood in the front room. The witness said she was downstairs in the front room."

"Yes."

"Thorn took you in to see them, did he?"

"Yes."

"He told you they were portions of your dead lover?"

"Yes."

"Did you see the head?"

"No."

"I showed you a photograph, supposed to be Goldsuppe's arm and chest; did you see it in the house?"

"No."

"What now, may I ask; did you cry when Thorn told you he had shot your lover?"

"Goldsuppe's eyes filled up, and she replied: 'Yes, I did cry then. I could not help it.'"

The Lawyer Was Severe.

Lawyer Howe's manner towards the witness was aggressive in the extreme, and he put the questions in a scathing tone.

"What did you do when you first came to this country? What was your occupation?"

"How many children did you kill, Mrs. Mack?"

"I never killed none to my knowledge, and I can prove it by my records," answered the woman with emphasis.

Several other questions in this vein followed, all of which the witness replied with positive denials.

Mr. Howe retired from the room for a few minutes, during which time Lawyer Moss and the prisoner held an earnest consultation.

"The witness nodded an assent. Mrs. Mack's letter to Thorn, written in the Queen's County Prison, with which she sent him potatoes, and addressed to her as 'Dear Martin' and 'Dear child,' and suggested that they end their lives, was translated. She acknowledged that she wrote the letter, but insisted that she had never loved him at any time, and was pretending that she did, because she was afraid of him."

"I did everything I could to satisfy him," she said. "I gave him every cent of money I had."

A Change of Tactics.

Mr. Howe changed his tactics after this, and turning suddenly, he shouted to the top of his voice:

"Mrs. Mack, was it not you who shot Goldsuppe?"

The woman was startled, but regained her self-possession in a moment, and half smiled: "No, I did not."

"Was it not you who cut up the body?"

The witness nodded an assent.

The woman frantically yelled back a denial: "No."

"Did any one tell you to say you did not shoot Goldsuppe?"

"No, I have never spoken of it."

Mr. Howe then discontinued the cross-examination, and asked permission of the court to reserve further cross-examination of the witness, which was granted.

Judge Weller then proceeded with the re-direct examination, which was conducted with the aid of an interpreter, but nothing new was elicited. It was simply a strengthening of her previous evidence.

Thorn's Denial.

As the examination was proceeding Thorn sat with his head bent slightly forward and turned towards the left, while he evidently tried to hear every word with his right ear. At times he would fold his arms and keep them in that position for five or six minutes, and then he would clasp either thumb in the opposite hand and rest his hands on his knees.

A recess of an hour was taken at 12:30 o'clock. Thorn was handcuffed then to Capt. Melvyn and led out of a side door, while Mrs. Mack remained seated in the witness chair, in charge of a deputy sheriff, and talked to the court interpreter.

As soon as the court room was cleared Mrs. Mack was conducted through the courtroom by the District Attorney's private office. During her cross-examination, in answer to a question from Mr. Howe, Mrs. Mack said: "I did not live with Thorn."

Mrs. Mack then admitted that she had visited Thorn's room in a house on East 21st-street, New York, and remained there for two hours at a time. Mr. Howe said: "You told me that you were intimate with him?"

"No, I had to go to see him, because I was afraid he would kill me."

Client Believes the Story.

During recess, District Attorney O'Connell of New York made the following statement: "If it were not for the legal requirements that the confession of an accomplice must be corroborated before it can go to the jury, I would not have Mr. Youngs to close his case at once, so thoroughly am I convinced that the jury, as well as everyone else, read that Mrs. Mack is telling the truth. The confession is sound and true in every particular, and amply settles the evidence which we already have. But all of the witnesses will be called who we have expected to use, so as to make assurance doubly sure and to furnish the corroboration of an accomplice's testimony, which the law requires. This is the culmination of the hard work of my assistants, as well as of the District Attorneys of here. Everything I could would be but constrained by those who have handled and are handling the case for the people that punitive justice will be done in full measure. It is laughable now to think of those who tried to bluff us with the story that Goldsuppe is alive and well."

THORN HAD A LONG KNIFE.

The Blade Was About Eight Inches in Length, Mrs. Mack Said.

New York, Nov. 10.—When the court re-convened Thorn took the seat allotted to him and Mrs. Mack resumed their place in the witness chair. In reply to Judge Weller's first question, she said that Martin Thorn had a long-bladed knife.

"How long was it?" asked the assistant prosecutor.

The witness stood up and measured about eight inches on her arm. She said Thorn gave the knife to her the evening of the killing and she retained it until they were both taken together in the wagon on Saturday. Thorn asked her about it and she gave it away on the side of the road, some distance from Woodside, but she could not locate the exact place.

The number of the knife was entered in the record.

The telegram, said to be from Goldsuppe, which was introduced earlier in the trial, was again brought up by the people. It was handed to Mrs. Mack. She failed to identify the telegram, and it was not in evidence.

Cross-Examination Renewed.

Later Mr. Howe renewed the cross-examination and asked for the record which the detective found in Mrs. Mack's apartments. When it was produced it was carried to the witness stand and then Mr. Howe handed it to the witness.

She said she showed it to Goldsuppe and after he and Thorn had quarrelled (Goldsuppe) unloaded it and put it away in a closet.

"He told me not to touch it," said the witness, "and told me if I did I would do something to me." Thenceforth a few more questions, the witness left the stand and was provided with a chair for the remainder of the day.

It was with a big sigh of relief that she got down from the witness seat. She occupied it from 9:20 in the morning until 2:07 in the afternoon, with the exception of the adjournment for lunch. The prosecution tried for three times to get the telegram admitted in evidence and produced the original copy and called the young man to the stand. He swore that he saw the telegram and that the court sustained the objection.

Coroner Tutbill's Evidence.

Coroner Tutbill of New York was then called to prove that the several portions of a human body found in the three bundles belonged to the same person.

In cross-examination by Mr. Howe, the coroner said he was not certain as to the severing of the legs and there was every indication that all had been done by the same person in New York, either up town or down town.
