

CANADA

HOUSE OF COMMONS DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SECOND SESSION—THIRTIETH PARLIAMENT

26 Elizabeth II

VOLUME VIII, 1977

COMPRISING THE PERIOD FROM THE SIXTH DAY OF JULY, 1977,
TO THE SEVENTEENTH DAY OF OCTOBER, 1977, INCLUSIVE

INDEX ISSUED IN A SEPARATE VOLUME

Published under the authority of the Speaker of the House of Commons by the Queen's Printer for Canada

Available from Printing and Publishing, Supply and Services, Hull, Québec, Canada K1A 0S9 80020—1½

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Wednesday, July 6, 1977

The House met at 2 p.m.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[English]

PUBLIC SERVICE

REASON NAME OF ROBERT RABINOVITCH ON EXTRA PARLIAMENTARY OPPOSITION LIST—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Tom Cossitt (Leeds): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a matter of urgent necessity arising from the letter signed by the former solicitor general, the present Minister of Supply and Services (Mr. Goyer), dealing with an alleged extra-parliamentary opposition to which was attached a list of the names of 21 people whom the letter stated were suspected of being engaged in or sympathetic to EPO activity and suggested they should be watched in the interest of national security with more than normal care. I move, seconded by the hon. member for Winnipeg South Centre (Mr. McKenzie):

That the Prime Minister advise the House as to why the name of Mr. Robert Rabinovitch, assistant secretary to the cabinet for priorities and planning, appears on this list, whether or not he has been cleared of all such insinuation and innuendo with a subsequent apology being given, and if not, whether the government is prepared to either substantiate the minister's allegations or to clear the name of Mr. Rabinovitch now and to dismiss the former solicitor general from the cabinet as an obvious total incompetent.

Mr. Speaker: Such a motion requires unanimous consent. Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

FOREIGN INVESTMENT

SUGGESTED REFUSAL OF TAKEOVER OF DELIVRO CANADA BY UNITED PARCEL SERVICES—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Cyril Symes (Sault Ste. Marie): Mr. Speaker, I rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43 to move a motion of urgent and pressing necessity. In view of the fact the Foreign Investment Review Agency has allowed United Parcel Services of America Inc. through its subsidiary, UPS Ltd., to take over Delivro Canada Inc., despite objections from the Post Office, CN, CP Express and the governments of Ontario and Quebec, and in view of the fact that UPS of America has been convicted of monopolistic practices in the United States, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Cape Breton-East Richmond (Mr. Hogan):

That this House instruct the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce to intervene personally to stop this take-over, which will jeopardize Canadian companies and Canadian jobs.

Mr. Speaker: The presentation of such a motion pursuant to Standing Order 43 can be done only with the unanimous consent of the House. Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

[Translation]

HOUSING

SUGGESTED REDUCTION OF MORTGAGE INTEREST RATES—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Eudore Allard (Rimouski): Mr. Speaker, under the provisions of Standing Order 43, I ask for the unanimous consent of the House to discuss an urgent matter of pressing necessity.

Since Statistics Canada reports that a great many Canadians are experiencing housing difficulties; since more than 280,000 Canadian families spend over half their income for housing; and since interest rates are the main reason for the high cost of housing in Canada, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Bellechasse (Mr. Lambert):

That the House immediately take all necessary steps to reduce without delay the interest rates on mortgages so as to soften the impact of those excessive interest rates and to make the purchase of a house financially interesting for all Canadians.

Mr. Speaker: Under the provisions of Standing Order 43, this motion requires the unanimous consent of the House. Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

● (1410)

[English]

ROYAL CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICE

REFERENCE TO COMMITTEE OF CORRESPONDENCE CONCERNING BREAK-IN AT L'AGENCE DE PRESSE LIBRE—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. F. Oberle (Prince George-Peace River): Mr. Speaker, I rise under the terms of Standing Order 43 to move a motion of urgent and pressing necessity. Having regard to letters tabled yesterday by the Minister of Supply and Services (Mr. Goyer) relating to his involvement in the APLQ affair and having regard for discrepancies regarding the date of the RCMP's reply to Lieutenant Colonel Cameron, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Northumberland-Durham (Mr. Lawrence):

That the documents tabled by the Minister of Supply and Services on July 5, 1977 be referred to the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Presentation of such a motion for debate requires the unanimous consent of the House. Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

INCOME TAX ACT

REQUEST FOR AMENDMENTS TO CLOSE CERTAIN LOOPHOLES—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Dan McKenzie (Winnipeg South Centre): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a matter of urgent and pressing necessity under the provisions of Standing Order 43. My motion is prompted by the fact that the Department of National Revenue in information circular 76-4R under the sub-heading "Kickbacks, Bribes, etc." explains to businessmen how to turn a bribe into a tax write-off by obtaining a receipt and since this is another example of loopholes in our tax laws like the use of Section 18 of the Income Tax Act to write-off the costs of prostitution, I would like to move, seconded by the hon. member for Leeds (Mr. Cossitt):

That this House direct the Minister of Finance and the Minister of National Revenue to take immediate steps to introduce new legislation to tighten up the loopholes in the Income Tax Act which allow write-offs on such questionable items as bribes and prostitution.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Presentation for debate of such a motion requires the unanimous consent of the House. Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

GOVERNMENT ADMINISTRATION

SUGGESTION CAPE BRETON BENEFIT FROM DECENTRALIZATION POLICY—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Andy Hogan (Cape Breton-East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, I rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43, on a matter of urgent and pressing necessity.

In view of the fact that the decentralization policy carried out by the government has been happily received in all regions of high unemployment and low average income, and in view of the fact that all five eastern provinces have profited from this program up till now except Nova Scotia and its most needy populous area, that is, Cape Breton County, and in view of the fact that the minister in charge has been saying that the language question in Quebec is preventing this now, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Sault Ste. Marie (Mr. Symes):

That heavily unemployed Cape Breton in Nova Scotia be now the recipient of such a decentralization policy.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Presentation of such a motion for debate requires the unanimous consent of the House. Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: Oral Questions.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

CONFEDERATION

PROPOSAL TO ESTABLISH JOINT COMMITTEE ON NATIONAL UNITY

Mr. Joe Clark (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I was impressed and intrigued by the Prime Minister's reference yesterday to the major role to be played by members of parliament in bringing Canadians together. In light of that endorsement of the major role of members of parliament given by the Prime Minister, I should like to ask the Acting Prime Minister whether the government will agree to establish immediately a special joint committee of the Senate and House of Commons on national unity to recommend such constitutional, economic and social measures as will allow the federal system to respond fully to the needs of all Canadians?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, that question is presently before the House for debate. If and when it comes to a vote, we will make the position of the government known at that time.

Mr. Clark: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. I thought the Acting Prime Minister might be a little more slick in his reticence. I wonder if he might not come clean and tell the House of Commons whether the government of Canada intends to allow this parliament to become engaged in a continuing way in bringing together the people of this country and whether it is the intention of the government to establish the special joint committee that was referred to yesterday—yes or no?

Mr. MacEachen: The same answer, Mr. Speaker.

POSSIBILITY OF MEETING OF FIRST MINISTERS ON NATIONAL UNITY

Mr. Joe Clark (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, there appears to be a reversion on the government side from the position where, yesterday, there was the prospect held out by the Prime Minister that we were somebodies again, to the present situation in which the Acting Prime Minister refuses to state the position of the government of Canada on the position of this parliament in resolving the national unity problem. Since the Acting Prime Minister will not extend to this House the courtesy which he extended to a radio station earlier this morning when he answered there a question he refuses to answer in this House, let me try with another question. Let me ask if it is the intention of the government of Canada to convene immediately a meeting of first ministers, to call upon the continuing advice of the premiers of the various provinces of Canada concerning means to strengthen and reform the federal system?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I am not aware of any such plan to call a meeting of first ministers.

Mr. Paproski: What do you know? Resign.

An hon. Member: You don't look any too happy, Allan.

Mr. Clark: Mr. Speaker, I don't know what the House of Commons would be like if Allan MacEachen were alive.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

An hon. Member: That was nasty, Joe. You are getting careless.

PROPOSED PROGRAM OF CHEAP TRAVEL TO PROMOTE NATIONAL UNITY

Mr. Joe Clark (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, let me try another question. In his 1976 annual report the Commissioner of Official Languages proposed that the Prime Minister of Canada should meet with the presidents of Air Canada and CNR, to discuss the means by which there could be brought about a massive program of cheap, mass travel for Canadians, to allow Canadians to understand this country better. We know there has been a minor, little program introduced by the Secretary of State. I want to know if the Prime Minister has acted on that particular recommendation of the Commissioner of Official Languages and met with those officials to discuss the possibility of a program which would allow Canadians to better understand our common country.

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, to answer that point, the proposals the Leader of the Opposition mentioned are presently under consideration and we hope to be able to make a statement on the point in future.

Mr. Clark: Mr. Speaker, that was not the question. My question was, has the Prime Minister met with those presidents?

Mr. Paproski: Why don't you go back to sleep, Allan?

TASK FORCE ON NATIONAL UNITY—INQUIRY AS TO REPORT

Miss Flora MacDonald (Kingston and the Islands): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Acting Prime Minister. Will the special task force on national unity be preparing reports on its work or making recommendations for parliament to consider formally or will it, as set out in its terms of reference, act solely as a private source of advice to the government on unity issues? If it is to report to parliament, will this be done on an interim basis or only at the conclusion of its term of office; or, in fact, is parliament further to be excluded?

Mr. Grafftey: It will report after the referendum.

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Acting Prime Minister): No, Mr. Speaker, parliament is not to be further excluded. Parliament is presently debating the subject matter.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. MacEachen: That has been the object of several questions. The debate will continue today.

Miss MacDonald: My question concerns the task force or commission.

Mr. MacEachen: The purposes and objects of the task force are to be found in the statement the Prime Minister made yesterday. Certainly, the members of the task force are free to carry out their responsibilities as they desire and if they make reports or statements, surely it is open to members of parliament to become aware of them and take any action which is desired.

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): This is incredible!

ROLE OF PARLIAMENT IN NATIONAL UNITY ISSUE

Miss Flora MacDonald (Kingston and the Islands): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Given that the Acting Prime Minister has not said that the task force will report directly to this House and given that the present two-day debate on national unity was forced on the government by this opposition—

An hon. Member: Nonsense!

● (1420)

Miss MacDonald: Indeed it was. Given the obvious reluctance of the Prime Minister to involve this institution in any formal way on the greatest threat to our nation's survival, will the Acting Prime Minister say what he does consider the role of parliament as an institution to be in this issue, if he has considered the question at all?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Acting Prime Minister): First of all, Mr. Speaker, I should remind the hon. lady that the suggestion that a special debate be held on the subject of national unity was a suggestion by myself on behalf of the government.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. MacEachen: It was as a result of discussions which I had with members of the other parties that this debate has taken place. I am very pleased that the debate has had the effect it has had, that is to create this interest in the subject. Hon. members opposite had many opportunities in the course of this session to bring before the House on their allotted days the question of national unity and they failed to do so.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Miss MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, we in the opposition know what should be done on this particular question. What I am asking the Acting Prime Minister is what he thinks the government should be doing.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

* * *

TRADE

CANADA-UNITED STATES AUTO PACT—MEASURES TO ENSURE EQUITABLE SHARING OF GROWTH OF INDUSTRY

Mr. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa-Whitby): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Finance. No doubt the minister is aware that the first clause of the Canada-U.S. automotive agreement signed in 1965 states that the objective of that agreement is to ensure that both countries share equitably in future growth in the industry. A review of the pact which was tabled by the government last week shows that this country is losing out disastrously in many parts of the industry. Specifically, we have lost some 20,000 potential jobs in the auto parts industry. What was the government doing prior to the tabling of the report and, in particular, since then to redress this very important discrepancy in terms of the objective of the pact compared with its results?

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I will have to defer to my colleague, the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce, who has had the primary carriage of these considerations of the structure of the Canadian auto industry and auto parts industry and also with regard to the offset change in the provisions of the auto pact in this regard. On the basis of the analysis, we are now in the position to continue the discussions with the Americans with regard to the possible arrangement. The precise timetable, as I say, is that which my colleague has been presiding over.

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, the past four Ministers of Industry, Trade and Commerce, including the Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin, have been telling this House that they have been prepared to renegotiate the auto pact, at least ever since I have been here, and have done nothing. The Minister of Finance should be particularly concerned that we have had a $16 billion deficit in auto parts trade since 1965. Is the minister telling this House that as the financial minister, he has no direct input into proposed changes in the pact? If he is not saying that, can he tell us what kind of initiative the government is proposing?

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): Of course I am not saying that. I am pointing out to the hon. gentleman that the restructuring of this aspect of industry is dealt with by the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce.

Mr. Broadbent: They have done nothing.

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): The auto pact, over its history, has been substantially beneficial to Canada; the result has been very much more beneficial than had the Canadian industry not received that kind of protection. With regard to changes in the pact, particularly in relation to the impact on the U.S. and Canadian market of competition from other producers of parts and of automobiles, this has naturally been of some concern, particularly to those preparing for the multilateral trade negotiations.

Mr. Broadbent: Considering that since 1965 the United States has gained substantially more investment in relation to equity in the industry than Canada, and that in the auto parts section the industry in Canada produces only 6 per cent of North American auto parts although we consume 12 per cent of total parts, would the minister explain to us why he considers the net result of the pact to be beneficial? In the context of that answer, would he tell us which aspect of the pact he finds disagreeable and what specific suggestions he has in mind with regard to improvements in the arrangement?

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): The hon. gentleman is asking for a detailed explanation of the effect of the pact on the auto industry in Canada—

Mr. Broadbent: Any explanation.

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): I would think that coming, as he does, from an area which is directly concerned he should be as familiar as anyone with the beneficial effect the pact has had on investment and employment in his own constituency as well as in other parts of southern Ontario. I would gladly arrange for a detailed explanation of the pact to be made to him; he would then have a better understanding of the whole subject and might be in a better position to inform his constituents.

* * *

[Translation]

CONFEDERATION

POSSIBILITY OF SUMMIT CONFERENCE TO DRAFT A CONSTITUTION

Mr. Adrien Lambert (Bellechasse): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Acting Prime Minister.

In view of the announcement made yesterday by the right hon. Prime Minister about setting up a committee to promote harmony in our country, can the Acting Prime Minister tell the House whether that committee will be asked to meet the authorities of the various provinces to look into the possibility of holding a summit conference that would not be imposed by the federal government but would be agreed upon by the provinces and to which representatives of labour as well as business and finance would be invited in the hope that later on, at some other conference, a new constitution might be proposed that could be acceptable to all Canadians?

[English]

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (President of the Privy Council): I cannot go as far as that in predicting the outcome of the operations of the task force. As the Prime Minister stated yesterday, the primary purpose of the task force is to encourage the efforts of the general public, particularly of non-government organizations, in the field of national unity.

An hon. Member: Laughable!

[Translation]

Mr. Lambert (Bellechasse): Mr. Speaker, on a supplementary.

In 1970, the government asked a joint committee of the Senate and the House of Commons to study that constitutional problem. That committee reported to the House in March of 1972 and the governments, both federal and provincial have since seen fit not to take into account its recommendations. If the committee announced yesterday which will be asked to study the constitutional problem in our country, hands in an intelligent report, does the government promise to take it into consideration with a view to remedying the situation and restoring the confidence of Canadians so that we can live together in real harmony?

● (1430)

[English]

Mr. MacEachen: Mr. Speaker, I doubt whether the task force will operate precisely in the same way as the committee to which my hon. friend refers, which did report on the constitution of Canada. I believe that that report did have some rather important effects on the subsequent thinking of the government and provincial governments as well.

* * *

ENERGY

DEMPSTER PIPELINE—INQUIRY AS TO ECONOMIC FEASIBILITY AND DATE WHEN NATURAL GAS CAN BE DELIVERED

Mr. James Gillies (Don Valley): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Acting Prime Minister. It arises out of the report of the National Energy Board and the fact that the cabinet must make a very important decision quite soon respecting development of northern resources. I should like to know whether the government will be able to provide to members of parliament before the time of the debate on the pipeline answers to the following questions: (1) Will the Dempster extension be economically feasible? (2) What will be the socio-economic impact of the Dempster pipeline if it is built? (3) Will the government be able to guarantee that Dempster can be finished so that natural gas can be delivered to Canada by 1982? Will we have answers to those three significant questions before we begin the debate on the pipeline in August?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, as the Prime Minister indicated yesterday, the government has not yet had an opportunity to consider the National Energy Board report. We have undertaken that a decision will be reached following the presentation of all the reports, and that is likely to take place in the month of August. In the meantime we will make every effort not only to make information available to the House but to make available to the government itself information which will be required in making a reasonable decision. The questions which the hon. member has posed are questions that anticipate certain decisions by the government of Canada. At the present time no decision to build a pipeline or on the site of a pipeline has been taken by the government, but all the information will, of course, be accumulated in order to assist in that decision making process.

Mr. Gillies: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Is it the government's position that a decision can be made without answers to the questions I have just posed? In that regard, has the government underway at this moment, since time is so short, studies, a task force or anything which will give us a response to these questions, which I would argue must be answered before the government can make any sort of decision whatever on a pipeline?

Mr. MacEachen: Mr. Speaker, I believe the hon. member has made some valid representations which the government will have to consider before it makes a decision, and it will have to assess the type of information required in order to make that decision. But as I said earlier, the government have not yet had an opportunity to discuss these particular points since the NEB report was tabled.

* * *

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

POSSIBILITY OF COMPLETING ENVIRONMENTAL STUDY OF DEMPSTER PIPELINE PRIOR TO SEPTEMBER 1

Mr. Bill Jarvis (Perth-Wilmot): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question for the Minister of Fisheries and the Environment relating to the question which I put to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources yesterday but which he was unfortunately unable to answer. In view of the emphasis placed by the National Energy Board upon the importance of the Dempster link in the Alcan proposal, and in view of the fact that there has been no environmental study prepared or commissioned on this 600 mile corridor, is the minister able to tell us whether his department has the capacity to complete an environmental assessment of the Dempster link in an acceptable form before September 1 of this year?

Hon. Roméo LeBlanc (Minister of Fisheries and the Environment): Mr. Speaker, in fact the environmental assessment panel under Dr. Hill was given the mandate to include the Dempster link in its terms of reference. I expect its interim report—and I underline the word "interim"—before August 1, or on August 1. As I said in the statement which I made when the panel was set up, this initial report will be followed by a more thorough examination and details could be added to what would be environmental clearance if and when this is required. The panel will not necessarily terminate its work by August 1; it will give an interim report.

POSSIBILITY OF APPROVING ALCAN ROUTE PRIOR TO ENVIRONMENTAL ASSESSMENT OF DEMPSTER PIPELINE

Mr. Bill Jarvis (Perth-Wilmot): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Even on the basis of an interim report by August 1, is it the minister's position that the government may give a commitment to the Alcan route, an important part of which is the Dempster link, before receipt of an acceptable and thorough environmental assessment review of that link?

Hon. Roméo LeBlanc (Minister of Fisheries and the Environment): Mr. Speaker, I suppose the discussion will be on words like "acceptable". It is obvious that an environmental assessment report will identify the problems. Then, the work of putting in conditions which would overcome the problems could continue even after a decision is made. In other words, a decision can be made if something is "acceptable" on a given number of conditions, and this is the work which would continue.

* * *

NATIONAL DEFENCE

ALLEGED DIFFERENTIATION IN TREATMENT BY CUSTOMS BETWEEN FORCES PERSONNEL AND CIVILIANS

Mr. Robert McCleave (Halifax-East Hants): Mr. Speaker, my question is to the Minister of National Defence with, I hope, a side whistle to the beautiful ear of the Minister of National Revenue. Since Canadian customs is now using the practice of taking verbal declarations by Canadians returning to this country that their purchases abroad do not exceed $50 within the allowed period, would the minister ensure that armed forces personnel be treated the same way instead of exactly the opposite?

Hon. Barney Danson (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, that was a sort of double-pronged question. Certainly, I will yield to my colleague the Minister of National Revenue.

Hon. Monique Bégin (Minister of National Revenue): Mr. Speaker, I can assure the hon. member without any hesitation that the armed forces are treated equally, and if we were ever sinners in the past it was in giving them the chance of pre-clearance.

Mr. McCleave: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. I do not know which way to direct my supplementary because I have seen some documents which state exactly the opposite of what the hon. lady said and I would not want to doubt her word. May I therefore put the question down for ten o'clock and send both ministers a copy of the telegram which has gone out from the Department of National Defence in Ottawa, which says—I hate to say this—exactly the opposite of what the hon. lady said.

* * *

CONFEDERATION

TASK FORCE ON NATIONAL UNITY—REQUEST FOR TABLING OF TERMS OF REFERENCE

Mr. Andrew Brewin (Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, I should like to address my question to the Acting Prime Minister. Yesterday the Prime Minister announced a task force, but today, as I understood the Acting Prime Minister, though perhaps I got it wrong, he indicated that there were no written terms of reference. Am I correct that there are no written terms of reference?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Acting Prime Minister): No, I did not say that, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Brewin: Then, if there are terms of reference, will they be tabled in the House and perhaps made available through Hansard? Since the task force is supposed to be directed to the public as much as anybody, I think it is of the utmost importance that the terms of reference be made clear.

Mr. MacEachen: Mr. Speaker, it is my recollection that an order in council is required in order to establish the task force, and I will be happy to consider tabling that order in council.

* * *

● (1440)

[Translation]

BILINGUALISM

REQUEST THAT REPORT BY FÉDÉRATION DES FRANCOPHONES HORS QUÉBEC BE MADE PUBLIC

Mr. Roch La Salle (Joliette): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State.

Since the two-year study commissioned by the Secretary of State on the situation of Francophones outside Quebec has been completed and filed with the Secretary of State, I believe, can the minister tell us whether he is willing to give the public access to that report or study, for it seems, according to one newspaper which has already commented on it, that it does in fact represent fairly well the proposals or recommendations made by the Fédération des francophones hors Québec? Can the minister publish that study and if so, when?

Hon. John Roberts (Secretary of State): Of course, Mr. Speaker, I received that document yesterday. I read its recommendations last night. I have not all the document which is 500 pages long. I intend to send copies of it to all the regional offices and table it here in Ottawa so that hon. members, as well as the public, of course, can read it if they so wish.

REQUEST FOR COMMISSION TO STUDY POSITION OF FRANCOPHONES OUTSIDE QUEBEC—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Roch La Salle (Joliette): Mr. Speaker, on a supplementary.

Seeing that barely ten days ago the federation expressed its complete displeasure with the Tellier group and still recommended the setting up of a special commission by the Privy Council, can the minister tell us today, after having had, I believe, excellent communications with the federation, whether he is willing to recommend the establishment of the special commission so forcibly requested by the federation?

[English]

Hon. John Roberts (Secretary of State): Mr. Speaker, as far as I know, there has not been any communication from the FFHQ to me since the meeting at which the decision to establish the task force was made. I have not received any communication from them, at least one I am aware of along the lines the hon. member has suggested. If they write me, of course I will consider carefully whatever it is they suggest.

* * *

REGIONAL ECONOMIC EXPANSION

DEGREE OF SUPPORT FOR BRITISH COLUMBIA—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Bob Brisco (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the minister responsible for DREE and his parliamentary secretary, I address my question to the Acting Prime Minister. In light of the fact that British Columbia has been nearly sucked dry by federal taxation policies, and in light of the fact that we have seen in excess of $400 million of DREE funding transferred to the province of Quebec, which needs it, including $95 million for highway improvements, much of which is to be spent in the minister's riding and that of his provincial counterpart, the two architects of this agreement, is the Acting Prime Minister now prepared to indicate the degree to which the federal government is going to provide support to the province of British Columbia under the subsidiary agreement to be signed by the Prime Minister later this week?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I hesitate to regard the hon. member's question as serious, when he describes the policy of regional economic expansion as one of sucking the province of British Columbia dry. It is hardly in accordance with the noble sentiments we heard from his leader yesterday about national unity.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Brisco: Mr. Speaker, I invite the Acting Prime Minister to read the first part of my question in Hansard. Obviously, he was not listening.

As a result of the recent meeting relating to the critical and crucial water shortage of Castlegar and district, between the British Columbia director general for DREE and the British Columbia deputy ministers for economic development, environment and municipal affairs, is the minister prepared at this time to indicate whether this latest agreement, to be signed by the Prime Minister, is of sufficient scope to allow for DREE funding to be directed to this specific and serious problem?

Mr. MacEachen: Mr. Speaker, I will make inquiries and advise the hon. member.

* * *

[Translation]

HOUSING

INQUIRY WHETHER GOVERNMENT WILL APPROVE IMPLEMENTATION OF MARATHON PROJECT IN MONTREAL

Mr. Jacques Lavoie (Hochelaga): Mr. Speaker, I wish to put my question to the Minister of State for Urban Affairs. Further to the question I asked in the House a few weeks ago concerning the site of the Angus shops, after meeting with the management of the firm Marathon and after noting that this project is of a cooperative nature and that it would create approximately 4,000 new permanent jobs, could the minister tell the House whether he is willing to give his support to the members representing the ridings of Maisonneuve, Lafontaine, Sainte-Marie and Hochelaga, to consider thoroughly the Marathon project with a view to urging its implementation?

Hon. André Ouellet (Minister of State for Urban Affairs): Mr. Speaker, yes I had the opportunity to consider the file which is most interesting, and I congratulate the hon. member for trying to speed it up. In this regard, he can count on the support of my department.

* * *

[English]

CANADIAN BROADCASTING CORPORATION

REASON FOR OMISSION OF NEW BRUNSWICK FROM DOMINION DAY CELEBRATIONS

Mr. Leonard C. Jones (Moncton): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State. Did the Prime Minister and the Secretary of State receive my telegram of July 1, which was Dominion Day, regarding the obvious omission of New Brunswick in that CBC three hour program on Dominion Day night, and particularly in the opening remarks? Can the Secretary of State now give a better explanation for such an omission than that of the CBC, when it said it was because there was no mobile equipment available in New Brunswick? What equipment is necessary in order to say: "The province of New Brunswick"?

Hon. John Roberts (Secretary of State): Mr. Speaker, I welcome the hon. member's question. The hon. member for Saint John-Lancaster has been very vigorous in making similar presentations.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. McGrath: Romeo, Romeo, wherefor art thou?

Mr. Roberts: Of course, my hon. colleague sitting beside me has been involved as well.

Mr. Paproski: Dionne does not care, Roméo LeBlanc does not care.

Mr. Roberts: I should like to respond to these representations, Mr. Speaker, by telling the hon. member that I have communicated with the CBC and it indicated that in the planning of the program it was essential, because of the over-all demands on the system and the equipment, that events combining in one centre the appearance of a number of performers representative of various provinces be telecast. Such an event was available in the form of the Summerside lobster festival concert, which assured representation by artists from each of the maritime provinces, including the Jeunes Chanteurs d'Acadie from Moncton.

I should like to indicate to the hon. member, if any slight was taken to what happened, it was inadvertent since the producer for the entire program, Jack McAndrews, is a native New Brunswicker who is very conscious of the importance of New Brunswick in the celebration. He has apologized publicly for any slight which may have been taken, and I would do the same.

While I am on my feet, Mr. Speaker,—

Some hon. Members: Order, order.

Mr. Jones: Mr. Speaker, my supplementary is directed to the Secretary of State. I read the apology of the man which he mentioned, Jack McAndrews, who purports to be a native New Brunswicker. Nevertheless, he said that it was the lack of mobile equipment in New Brunswick. I should like to know why there is not equipment in New Brunswick, and what equipment is necessary to say: "The province of New Brunswick"? It can be said quicker than Pierre Elliott Trudeau or the Hon. John Roberts—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

[Mr. Jones.]

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS

REQUEST FOR EXPLANATION OF OVERSTATEMENT OF SUBSIDIES

Mr. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Minister of Transport. On June 16 the minister acknowledged that an error was made in the calculation of the revenue of Canadian National Railways as a result of an overstatement of certain subsidies which were received from the Canadian Transport Commission under the provisions of the Railway Act. The minister undertook to provide a more detailed explanation to the House or to give a statement. I am wondering if he is in a position to expand upon his answer of June 16, or whether he is prepared to table such information as to what the amounts were, the timeframe in which these subsidies were overstated and the precise amounts?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): Yes, Mr. Speaker, I would be glad to do that. The amounts which were overpaid related to the years 1974 and 1975, in the order of under $2 million in the first year and the balance of approximately $17 million in the second year. There was no impact upon the 1976 year, nor upon the business of the railway for 1977. The adjustments had already been made by the time I reported to the House the last time, as I have indicated. The appropriate adjustments will be made to the Canadian National accounts for the years in question.

• (1450)

Mr. Mazankowski: Am I to take it then that the minister is saying that the deficit for the years prior to 1976 will in fact be greater by the amounts that the minister has pointed out?

Mr. Lang: That is correct. In effect the deficit for 1974-75 will be larger by those amounts. The result is that CNR will be debited for those amounts in terms of its branch line subsidy program payments, but of course will be credited with identical amounts in terms of the additional payment by the Treasury of the deficit. The balanced financial position is therefore the same, but obviously the actual book deficits are larger for those two years.

* * *

MULTICULTURALISM

METHOD OF ARRIVING AT PAYMENTS FOR THIRD LANGUAGE TRAINING

Mr. Gus Mitges (Grey-Simcoe): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of State for Multiculturalism. In his speech to the Canadian Consultative Council on Multiculturalism in Vancouver two weeks ago, and in response to the council's recommendations, the minister announced some new programs regarding supplementary third language schools, such as the rate of $4 per hour for teachers up to a maximum of 50 hours a year, and, as well, for such teachers taking courses in personal development, $15 a day is to be allowed to cover travel, accommodation and tuition costs. How were these figures arrived at, was it as a result of a government study or were the figures arbitrarily picked out by someone in the minister's department?

Hon. Joseph-Philippe Guay (Minister of State (Multiculturalism)): Mr. Speaker, the new cultural enrichment policy to provide increased opportunities for many Canadians is well appreciated and received by the various ethnic groups in our country, and I can assure the hon. member of that. We arrived at that particular conclusion after many representations made by ethnic groups, and finally it was recommended to us by the Canadian Consultative Council on Multiculturalism. It was as a result of their recommendation, which we studied, that we came out with the program. It is not an ideal program; we realize that, but it is a start, a beginning. I can assure the hon. member and other members of the opposition that this program is greatly appreciated by all who benefit from it, all good Canadians.

* * *

ROYAL CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICE

BREAK-IN AT PRAXIS CORPORATION—REQUEST FOR CO-OPERATION WITH ONTARIO INQUIRY

Mr. F. Oberle (Prince George-Peace River): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Solicitor General and it relates to the decision of the attorney general of Ontario to set up an inquiry into the break-in and arson at the offices of the Praxis Corporation in Toronto. I would like to ask the Solicitor General if he will take every step to co-operate with the inquiry in Toronto, and will he make available to the inquiry such things as files from his own office, officers and ministers attached to his office over the years to appear before the inquiry to testify?

Hon. Francis Fox (Solicitor General): Mr. Speaker, I have already indicated to the House and to the attorney general of Ontario our desire to co-operate fully with them in the conduct of the investigation which he has referred to the police commission in Ontario.

Mr. Oberle: I would like to ask the Solicitor General if it is the intention of the government to complement the inquiry into the involvement of the various police departments with an inquiry into the involvement of the various political agencies in the whole matter of the extra parliamentary opposition, particularly the involvement of the former solicitor general and the involvement of the committee on security and intelligence headed by the Prime Minister at that time to determine what effect the EPO concept and the letter that the Solicitor General wrote at that time had on the individuals that were named.

Mr. Fox: I am not sure what the hon. member is getting at. If there is any specific matter he wishes to draw to my attention, I will be pleased to have it and examine it.

TRANSPORT

REQUEST FOR INCREASE IN FEDERAL SHARE OF COST OF HIGHWAY PROGRAM FOR ATLANTIC REGION

Mr. Jack Marshall (Humber-St. George's-St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Transport and it has to do with the $100 million highway strengthening program in the Atlantic region. The minister is aware that the ministers of highways in those provinces requested something more generous than the 50-50 cost-sharing which was offered by the minister. Has he had a chance to reconsider that decision, and will he be a little more generous in the cost-sharing with regard to the four depressed areas in the country?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): The ministers of highways have raised a number of issues. On most of them I was able to meet their wishes and adjust the program. On this one our position seems to be very reasonable since the highway programs we are talking about are essentially within provincial jurisdiction, and for us to offer 50-50 sharing seems reasonable. I have no change to make in that position.

Mr. Marshall: In view of the fact that one of the badly deteriorated highways is in the province of Newfoundland, in view of the fact that when the government built the Trans-Canada Highway it was on a 90-10 basis, and in view of the depressed state of the economy in Newfoundland, I wonder if the minister would consider for that particular part of the Trans-Canada Highway greater generosity in cost-sharing.

Mr. Lang: I am not sure that a previous generous treatment necessarily ensures its repetition at a later time. It might be difficult, when we are looking at highways from the transport point of view and the cost benefit analysis point of view, to justify different treatment for one province. In our analysis the improvements in these highways do indeed produce an economic benefit which justifies the expenditure. A great part of that benefit goes to the province, and the basic jurisdiction in relation to the highways lies with the province. That is the basis of our view in this matter.

* * *

ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE

INCARCERATION OF JAMES KENNEDY WITHOUT CHARGE—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Bill Clarke (Vancouver Quadra): My question is for the Minister of Justice, and I welcome him back from sunny Vancouver. I should like to refer the minister to my question on Monday at which time the acting Minister of Justice and the second acting minister were both absent, and therefore the Department of Justice was not represented in the House. My question concerns James Peter Kennedy who has been held in jail in Vancouver for over five weeks. I want to refer the Minister of Justice to a letter handed to me yesterday from the Minister of Manpower and Immigration in which he says:

The special inquiry officer conducting the hearing has decided to continue his detention.

Is it the policy of Canadian justice that any holder of a Canadian visa can be held for lengthy periods of time on the wish of a government bureaucrat, without charges being laid and without a public hearing?

Hon. Ron Basford (Minister of Justice): Any such holding would be pursuant to the Immigration Act and the law relating thereto. As I understand, the subject to whom the hon. member referred has taken habeas corpus proceedings in the courts in British Columbia. Obviously, it is a matter under inquiry and before the courts.

Mr. Clarke: The hearing that the minister refers to will be held tomorrow, but the question is: What is the charge on which Mr. Kennedy is being held?

Mr. Basford: As I understand—the Minister of Manpower and Immigration is not here unfortunately—it is a hearing under the Immigration Act being held pursuant to the Immigration Act.

* * *

PENITENTIARIES

SEARCH FOR PSYCHIATRISTS IN ENGLAND—REQUEST FOR ASSURANCE NONE AVAILABLE IN CANADA

Mr. Benno Friesen (Surrey-White Rock): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Solicitor General. Would he confirm that Dr. Craigan of his department, together with Jim Murphy of the Pacific region and Jim Phelps of the Saskatchewan region, went to England in order to interview psychiatrists, I presume to work in the penitentiary service. I wonder if the minister would confirm that he has worked together with the Department of Manpower to make sure there are no professional people in Canada who have been overlooked for this opportunity. It does seem strange that these officials went to England during the week of the Jubilee celebrations. Does the minister not think that that might not have been the most conducive time to conduct interviews?

Hon. Francis Fox (Solicitor General): I will be pleased to investigate the matter on behalf of the hon. member. I should point out, however, that traditionally there has been some difficulty in obtaining in this country that kind of high level psychiatric services.

* * *

POST OFFICE

PROPOSAL TO REFER MANAGEMENT AND OPERATIONAL PROBLEMS TO COMMITTEE

Mr. Bruce Halliday (Oxford): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Postmaster General. It relates to the topic of parliamentary committees, on which the government has been very sensitive and wary in the last 24 hours. In light of the sympathy expressed by the Postmaster General last Thursday, as reported on page 7223 of Hansard, concerning the motion by my colleague, the hon. member for Brandon-Souris, under Standing Order 43 which urged the Postmaster General to name a parliamentary committee, would the minister now indicate to us if he favours the establishment of a parliamentary committee to investigate and report on all aspects of our postal system?

● (1500)

Hon. J.-J. Blais (Postmaster General): It is too early to say, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Halliday: In view of that answer does the Postmaster General feel that members of parliament, together with appropriate research staff, are incapable of making a valid assessment, and if not, why would he not have what could be potentially a four-party, unanimous report upon which he could base changes in our postal system?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member for Broadview.

* * *

PUBLIC WORKS

PLACE GUY FAVREAU—SUGGESTION PROJECT BE DISCONTINUED AND MONEY ALLOCATED TO LOW COST HOUSING

Mr. John Gilbert (Broadview): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Public Works. In view of the representations of the Chinese community in Montreal that the plans to construct the $200 million Place Guy Favreau would destroy Montreal's Chinatown, would the minister now stop the project and spend the $200 million on low-cost housing in Montreal?

Hon. Judd Buchanan (Minister of Public Works): Mr. Speaker, the area to which the hon. member refers has been classified historically by the government of Quebec, and we have undertaken that anything we do there will respect such classification. However, we are looking at possible modifications to the development of Place Guy Favreau.

Mr. Gilbert: In view of the lack of consultation on the project—and that has been emphasized by the Chinese community—would the minister keep the Chinese community and other interested groups informed of any anticipated developments?

Mr. Buchanan: That is something at which I am looking very seriously.

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege. During the course of the question period in answer to a question by the hon. member for Kingston and the Islands (Miss MacDonald) the government House leader left the impression with the House—I hope it was inadvertent; if it was not, he deliberately misled the House—that the idea of a debate on national unity was first proposed by him representing the government. So that we might be absolutely clear, I would like to draw to the attention of hon. members that the first suggestion concerning this kind of intervention by the House of Commons did not come from the government but in fact came from the official opposition on more occasions than merely one.

The matter was first brought to the attention of the House of Commons by the hon. member for Victoria-Haliburton (Mr. Scott) on January 27, 1977 by way of a motion under Standing Order 26 because of the emergency situation which we felt had developed at that time.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): The subject matter of that motion on that day was the failure of the government to counter the threat posed by the government of the province of Quebec. That was the first time this matter came before the House of Commons. On April 18, 1977 the right hon. member for Prince Albert (Mr. Diefenbaker) again asked that the matter be brought forward. On March 30, 1977 the hon. member for Edmonton-Strathcona (Mr. Roche) asked that there be a debate in the House on this matter. Again on March 31, 1977 the hon. member for Edmonton-Strathcona asked that we proceed with that matter and deal with the problems of our confederation as well as the matters raised by the government ultimately in its motion, but as well on the basis of the social and economic problems facing this country.

Finally, the hon. member for Kingston and the Islands raised the matter with the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) on April 28, 1977. At that time the Prime Minister said he was favourably disposed to the idea. The proposal for the establishment of a committee and the involvement of parliament in this debate has been in existence for a long period of time. It was first raised by Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition, and I hope it was not the intention of the government House leader to mislead the House when he indicated that he was the instigator of the idea. He was nothing of the sort; he sat silent.

Some hon. Members: Shame.

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): The government House leader said we had opportunities to raise this matter on allotted days. As a matter of fact, we did raise the matter on allotted days. On May 19 on a motion standing in the name of the hon. member for Saint-Hyacinthe (Mr. Wagner) we had a debate here on national unity and on the failure of this government with regard to economic and social programs which has led to much of the distress we have in this country. In addition, when the government finally acceded, we gave up one of our allotted days for the debate. We pressed for extended hours for this debate. I asked the government House leader if he would give up one more day for the debate. There was no answer.

Some hon. Members: Shame.

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): The reason this is important as a matter of privilege is that the government House leader knows I have pressed him. This is my personal matter of privilege. I have pressed him for a debate involving the kind of motion which was put in the amendment dealing with a parliamentary committee. I did this in various meetings we have had because I feel it is important. Like the hon. member for Kingston and the Islands, I feel it is important that parliament be involved in an ongoing way. That was suggested in the motion put yesterday in the excellent speech by the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Clark).

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): Nothing that occurred between my friend, the government House leader, and me indicated that this would not be acceptable to the government until June 9, 1977 when I was advised that, notwithstanding the suggestions I had made and the pressure I had applied with regard to the form of the debate and the proposal of a committee, the government was reconsidering the motion it would put. I am now advised that while the Prime Minister initially felt that a parliamentary committee would be a good thing, it was the government caucus that finally indicated that it did not want to have that kind of intervention.

Some hon. Members: Shame.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I am prepared to hear the hon. member on the question of privilege, but he is wandering to the debate on the subject matter.

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): If the representation that it was the government which first dealt with this matter was innocent, and if the minister tells me that that is so, I accept that. However, if he is not prepared to say that, then I demand that he withdraw the statement that it was the government which first brought this matter forward because if he does not, the minister is misleading the House.

An hon. Member: Sit down.

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): There is one other matter I want to raise.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I do not know if there are to be further contributions. By way of a question of privilege the hon. member has raised complaints about statements made by the President of the Privy Council (Mr. MacEachen) during the course of the question period this day.

Mr. MacEachen: Mr. Speaker, I regret that so much time is being taken away from the all-important question of national unity by a debate over an item which, whether it is decided in one way or another, is really not very crucial.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

An hon. Member: National unity is not important?

● (1510)

Mr. MacEachen: Mr. Speaker, when I made the comment in reply to a question that it was I who had suggested that there be a special debate on national unity, I made it in good faith and I still believe it to be an accurate statement. The hon. member for Edmonton-Strathcona (Mr. Roche) did raise the question on March 10, 1977.

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): No; January.

Mr. MacEachen: The first reference is quite irrelevant to the question of a special debate—

Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): The truth is clearly crucial.

Mr. MacEachen: —because the Standing Order 43, as I heard the hon. member read it, made no request for a special debate on the question of national unity.

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): No, it was Standing Order 26.

Mr. MacEachen: Maybe I did not hear the full motion.

Mr. Clark: Ralph will explain it.

Mr. MacEachen: On March 30 the hon. member for Edmonton-Strathcona invited the government to bring before parliament some measure or measures "which will allow members to express their ideas and convictions about ways to hold the country together". He invited the government to bring forward some measures that would allow members to express their views. Maybe that was a suggestion for a debate and if it was, I give the hon. member full credit for it.

I referred to a statement that had been made in another forum by the right hon. member for Prince Albert (Mr. Diefenbaker) and I referred to statements made earlier by the hon. member for Don Valley (Mr. Gillies) about the relevance of parliament, and I went on to say it was my desire to bring forward opportunities to deal with special issues, including the question of national unity. That is the first occasion I can find when the matter was dealt with, and I think it justifies the comment I made earlier.

Mr. Speaker, the hon. member for Grenville-Carleton (Mr. Baker) has done something again today which has rarely been done by persons who carry the responsibility of House leader of their party and that is to refer to private and confidential discussions.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

An hon. Member: Nonsense.

Mr. MacEachen: I would simply point out to him that if he wishes to continue the valuable forum that we have had as House leaders, then he had better learn a very simple rule and that is, to keep matters confidential.

[Mr. MacEachen.]

Mr. Clark: Both sides of your mouth!

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I rise just to ask one question. Would it not be better to get on with the debate rather than argue over who fathered it?

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Scott: Mr. Speaker, I rise to speak on this question because I expected just what we have heard from the government House leader. This is why we are sitting here now instead of being out in our constituencies where we should be—it is because of his mismanagement and the excuse he has given to the House. I want to draw his attention to this, Mr. Speaker. On January 27 I moved, under Standing Order 26—I will not read the whole thing because if government members do not value the time of this House I do, with respect, and that is why I am on my feet now—but in part I said, as reported at page 2448 of Hansard:

> This question must be transferred from the public arena to its proper place, the chamber of the House of Commons, where it can be debated by the representatives of all the people of Canada.

I am very, very disappointed to hear the government House leader—who is supposed to be guiding the business of this House—make the statement he has today.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Hon. members will realize we are now locked into a disagreement over a representation of events that have taken place. If there is any connection with a question of privilege as I have defined it on previous occasions, I have not heard an argument to that effect as yet. There is a disagreement about the interpretation put upon certain statements and events. That is the way it remains.

An hon. Member: He can withdraw.

Mr. Speaker: Statements by ministers. The hon. Solicitor General (Mr. Fox).

Mr. Gillies: Mr. Speaker, on the same question of privilege—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I invited discussion on the question of privilege. I have now indicated that it is essentially a disagreement and does not constitute a question of privilege. I have, perhaps regrettably, made a ruling and I have no opportunity now to re-open the question. The hon. member for Don Valley (Mr. Gillies) seeks the floor on the question of privilege that I have just decided.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, a point of order.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. Solicitor General.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, a point of order.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Saskatoon-Biggar (Mr. Hnatyshyn) on a point of order.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order which relates directly to the statement to be made by the Solicitor General. I have the responsibility for responding to this statement which was received by our party at approximately 2.15 p.m. today, and I want to say something about that to the Solicitor General as well as the way in which he deals with this House.

The government House leader talks about taking up the time of the House and the apparent interest in this debate, but then allows the Solicitor General to make a statement on motions that will take up one hour of the time of this important debate. Important as his statement is, it could have been made at a later date. I think the first thing the government House leader should have done was ask that the time taken by this statement on motions be added on tonight. He could make a specific motion rather than sitting there in a cloak of sanctimony. If the statement is to be made, and if we are to give the national unity debate priority the government House leader should rise and ask that whatever time is used for the statement be added to the time for debate.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Solicitor General.

Mr. Clark: What a spent Canada.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[Translation]

ROYAL CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICE

ESTABLISHMENT OF COMMITTEE TO EXAMINE UNAUTHORIZED ACTS

Hon. Francis Fox (Solicitor General): Mr. Speaker, I thought very sincerely that the statement I am about to make would be of interest not only to the House but also to the general public, and I think it is important to proceed with this as soon as possible. Of course, Mr. Speaker, I am going to talk about a subject on which my colleagues are extremely well informed, and I think that the whole thing will require a minimum of time if there is some good will on all sides.

[English]

On June 17 last, I informed the House that the government had seriously considered the setting up of a Royal Commission of Inquiry in March, 1976 when, for the first time, the government was informed of the participation of the RCMP in the unlawful entry of the premises occupied by L'Agence de Presse Libre du Quebec, in October 1972. The Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) and the then Solicitor General received at that time repeated and unequivocal assurances from the RCMP that the APLQ incident was exceptional and isolated and consequently there was no need of a commission of inquiry. The government eventually decided, as I previously informed the House, not to establish a commission of inquiry. The government remained firmly committed, however, to re-examining the need for a commission of inquiry after the judicial processes, more particularly the investigation initiated by the Quebec authorities and the court proceedings that could follow, had run their normal course.

• (1520)

Since making my statement in the House concerning the APLQ incident, allegations have been made that members of the RCMP, and more particularly members of the security service, have, on other occasions, been involved in unlawful actions in the discharge of their duties. The APLQ incident, according to those who made the allegations, was not of an isolated and exceptional character as I had reported in my statement of June 17.

These allegations received our immediate attention. At my request, the deputy solicitor general of Canada and the assistant attorney general, criminal law, personally met with some of the individuals who made these allegations. In addition, I asked the Commissioner of the RCMP to undertake the investigations which were warranted. He later informed me, after having made preliminary inquiries, that some of these allegations might well have some basis in fact. According to the commissioner, it would appear that some members of the RCMP in the discharge of their responsibility to protect national security could well have used methods or could have been involved in actions which were neither authorized not provided for by law. As a result, the commissioner has modified his position and has recommended that the government establish a commission of inquiry into the operations and the policies of the RCMP security service, on a national basis.

[Translation]

In the circumstances, Mr. Speaker, and considering these new developments, the government has decided to establish an inquiry commission composed of three members who will be responsible for determining the scope and frequency of inquiry practices and other activities which are not permitted or provided for in the law, involving members of the RCMP, and for examining the policies and procedures regulating RCMP activities in their task, which consists in protecting the country and ensuring its security.

It is necessary, for the good administration of the RCMP, that all the light be shed on charges of unlawfulness that have already been made as well as on all other allegations of the same nature which might follow. That, Mr. Speaker, will be one of the important tasks entrusted to the commission set up by the government. After the light has been shed on these incidents which may be drawn to the attention of the commission, the decisions called for will unfold as they should in each particular case, in close co-operation, if need be, with the responsible authorities. But beyond particular incidents which might be brought before the commission, it is important to think about the lessons to be learned for the future. That is why the government has asked the commission's advice in terms of policies and procedures that govern or should govern RCMP activities in the accomplishment of their task, namely to see to the protection and the security of the country, of necessary mechanisms for implementing these policies and procedures, and finally of the amendments to the legislation which could be necessary, in keeping with the security requirements of our country.

Even if the commission is particularly requested to inquire into matters related to the security service of the RCMP, the government has also requested to have brought to its attention any incident involving illegal action on the part of RCMP members, outside of security service operations. Regular police operations are more immediately submitted to the control and surveillance of the courts. Nevertheless, the government prefers not to restrict the terms of reference of the commission to the security service, so that eventually it could know about incidents involving unlawful acts that could be drawn to the attention of the commission. Thus, the government will be able to take the necessary steps at the appropriate time.

[English]

I cannot emphasize too strongly the importance of the commission whose establishment I have just announced. We must, as I have just mentioned, get to the bottom of those allegations which have been made recently against RCMP members. This process will, I hope, help to clear the air and improve the climate within which our national police force is now working.

In a democratic society such as ours, the policies and procedures which govern the activities of the security service must conform with the rule of law. At the same time, the rule of law must be responsive to the requirements of our national security. The rule of law and the requirements of national security constitute two facets of one unique reality which have never been easy to reconcile even in countries with firm democratic traditions. The recommendations of the commission will, I am confident, assist us in meeting this ever present challenge.

As I said on June 17 last, the rule of law is and must be paramount. It constitutes the vital force of our society without which our basic freedoms run the risk of becoming empty slogans. Clearly, there can be no compromise in this regard; it is upon the rule of law that the integrity and survival of our democratic institutions and our fundamental liberties are based. The recommendations of the commission will help us, I have no doubt, to improve the policies and procedures that govern the activities of the security service, and will help us as well in our search for ways to improve the working of the security service in the vital role assigned to it for the protection of our national security.

I take pleasure in informing the House that Mr. Justice D. C. McDonald of the Supreme Court of Alberta will be chairman of the commission, the other members of which will be Mr. Donald S. Rickard of Toronto, and Mr. Guy Gilbert of Montreal. With the consent of the House I should like to table in both official languages official copies of the terms of reference of the commission.

Mr. Nowlan: You can't get away with that.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

[Mr. Fox.]

Mr. Nowlan: You members opposite should be crying, not clapping.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The minister's request to table a document is made after the tabling of documents has been called and therefore requires the unanimous consent of the House. Does the minister have consent to table those documents?

Mr. Lawrence: Mr. Speaker, with respect to the tabling of the documents—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. It is not a debatable proposition. Either the minister has unanimous consent to table the documents, or he has not. Does the minister have the consent of the House to table the documents?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Lawrence: No.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The documents cannot be tabled at this time.

Mr. Lawrence: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member cannot raise a point of order at this particular moment.

Mr. Lawrence: Mr. Speaker, the point concerns the tabling of the document. I rise on a question of privilege.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. According to the procedure under which we are now operating, the minister may make a statement, which is met with a statement in reply made by the parties. I am prepared to call on spokesmen of the various parties and allow questioning, within some discretion, but at the moment I am not aware that I am able to consider a point of order in respect of any of these proceedings.

Mr. Lawrence: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege, which is this. The Solicitor General (Mr. Fox) mentioned the tabling of certain terms of reference concerning a public inquiry or royal commission. Mr. Speaker, those could just as easily have been read to the House for inclusion in Hansard. In this way all people would know the exact terms of reference. I feel my privileges have been abridged by the minister's failure to do this. His action therefore deprives me of the necessary knowledge I must have in order to evaluate properly the statement the minister just made.

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, I rise on the same point of order or question of privilege, whichever it may be. If we are to respond seriously to the statement concerning the announcement of the inquiry or establishment of the commission, surely it is relevant that all members should be aware of the terms of reference within which the royal commission will work. I had the opportunity to read them, and they raise certain questions in my mind. I suspect they will raise questions in the minds of others, and are therefore relevant. Members should know them. I appeal through you, Mr. Speaker, to the minister. I ask him to reconsider what he has done and complete his statement by reading to the House the terms of reference of this royal commission.

An hon. Member: Or include them as an appendix to Hansard.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The minister has made his statement. I do not think there is any proceeding whereby the House can instruct or demand the minister to say more or less. There is a period provided for questions to be put by the opposition with regard to statements.

Mr. Lawrence: What are you hiding?

Mr. Ray Hnatyshyn (Saskatoon-Biggar): Mr. Speaker, if I may deal with the incredible—I must term it outrageous—statement the Solicitor General made, let me say that my party, and I am sure the NDP would be agreeable, would concur in any motion the Solicitor General might move to have the terms of reference printed as an appendix to Hansard in order that the people of Canada may know precisely the kind of document to which the minister was referring.

● (1530)

Mr. Fox: Mr. Speaker, I, of course, am trying to find a way which would make the terms of reference public. I tried to table them in the House of Commons. If it would be in any way helpful to the hon. member, I would be more than willing to consent, with the agreement of the House, that the matter be printed as an appendix to Hansard.

Mr. Clark: Well, we forced that out of them.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. At the moment there is no consent that the documents be tabled at this time. The minister has now indicated that he is prepared to ask that the documents be appended to Hansard as if they had been read. Does the House agree?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: There is no agreement.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, I note that the refusal came from the government benches. That will not be lost upon the Canadian public. It was the government benches that refused to have this printed as an appendix to Hansard.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I should indicate for the accuracy of the record that the refusal that I heard was not confined to one side of the House.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: I know that Your Honour's hearing is at least equal to mine, and I am not going to comment further.

The fact is that the terms of reference and the statement made by the Solicitor General are in keeping with the tradition that has developed within the government of attempting to avoid dealing with issues until the very last moment. It deals with very important matters raised in this House by members of the opposition. It is part of the tradition that it only deals with these matters after considerable pressure has been exerted by members of the opposition. In this case it has protested for a period of over one year with regard to the line of questioning that has taken place relating to this whole matter.

The government suggested that our questions were not constructive but rather destructive of our police force. However, today we have the Solicitor General standing up and having the audacity to tell this House and the Canadian people that he misled this House and the Canadian people on June 17 with respect to the activities of the RCMP.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Hnatyshyn: When the Solicitor General was appointed to his position we had some hopes for him as a man of ability, a man who with some sense of integrity would deal with his responsibilities as Solicitor General. However, he is now falling into the way in which his colleagues acted during the terms of their administration, waiting until the last moment. They have not let us have statements until the very last moment. They have been involved in a continuous misleading of this House and this country over a period of one year.

I read and listened to the statement of the Solicitor General. I should tell him that I received the statement in only one of the official languages. In future I ask that he take special care that we receive his statements in both official languages. I read and listened to the Solicitor General's remarks. I am incredulous. Not once in his five page statement did the Solicitor General mention the fact that the RCMP reports to a ministry and reports to a minister, the Solicitor General.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Not once did he mention the fact that in theory this government and the present and former Solicitors General have had and should have used ministerial responsibility with respect to the activities of the RCMP when the indiscretions and illegalities were reported to them. Not once did he mention this as an issue of government incompetence and potential wrongdoing.

We have been asked to believe by the solicitor general of the day that the government knew of the RCMP's interest in the raid on APLQ, yet in the formal meeting to discuss the letter accusing the RCMP of involvement in the APLQ break-in, he did not ask whether they were in fact involved.

When a letter was received by the office of the former solicitor general, the answer was that somehow he simply accepted advice. Letters have been tabled in this House stating that advice was received through the office apparatus and that he ignored serious suggestions of illegal acts by the RCMP. That has shown his incompetence to act in that position, by doing nothing with respect to a serious allegation.

The Solicitor General at one time stated that he had no knowledge of RCMP involvement. He subsequently indicated that he knew of the involvement but he did not take the reasonable rational step of acting on it. This statement that has been made by the Solicitor General is not credible. It seeks to whitewash the government while witchhunting on the RCMP by its terms of reference.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Hnatyshyn: The Solicitor General stated in his remarks today that they have not limited the investigation to the activities of the RCMP with respect to the APLQ but want to look at all RCMP activities and all the illegal activities of the RCMP. He failed very notably to mention the fact that the terms of reference will not be extended to involve the role of the Solicitor General, those who have held that office, and the activities of the RCMP and their degree of competence, incompetence or wrongdoing. That is a glaring omission from these terms of reference.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Hnatyshyn: On the basis of the Solicitor General's approach to this whole matter, we in Canada are running closer and closer to Nixonian politics of stonewalling until they are finally forced to give out.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Hnatyshyn: This may have some bearing on the reason why the Solicitor General has been so anxious to have an election now, before we can uncover more incompetence and more wrongdoing that has taken place.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Hnatyshyn: This is not the kind of inquiry that has been asked for by such responsible groups as the Canadian Bar Association. It is not the kind of inquiry asked for by such distinguished and eminent Canadians as the Hon. Emmett Hall, representing the Civil Liberties Union.

An attempt by the government to whitewash its responsibility with regard to its relationship with the RCMP is an attempt to focus attention on that fine force for which we in this party have tried to preserve respect in this country, unlike the government and the Solicitor General.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Hnatyshyn: We cannot accept this to be a complete judicial inquiry with respect to the matters we have raised in this House, and only because the government has now decided to act under considerable pressure, unless there are included within the terms of reference the following: that the present Minister of Supply and Services (Mr. Goyer) must testify under oath with respect to his involvement in this whole matter.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Second, it must be completely clear in the terms of reference that there will be complete access to the minutes of the cabinet committee on security and intelligence, chaired by the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau).

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Third we believe the commission should have, on a confidential basis if necessary, and I refer to the previous suggestion as to the terms of reference that it could well be on a confidential basis to the commissioners as provided for in an inquiry, access to the files of the Solicitors General, past and present. Also, the terms of reference should provide that the present Solicitor General and the present Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development (Mr. Allmand), the former Solicitor General, testify under oath with respect to the operations of the RCMP.

The terms of reference should make it perfectly clear that it includes a complete investigation of the preparation and distribution of the extra parliamentary opposition list which has been of some prominence in this House. This is the list which is apparently related to the break-in at the Praxis Corporation in Toronto.

● (1540)

We finally suggest, and because we have had such a brief time these are only certain suggestions, and we may raise further suggestions for the benefit of the Solicitor General, that there also be an investigation of the wrongful destruction of RCMP documents alleged to have occurred on June 2 and 2 of this year. Unless these matters are included in the terms of reference we can only come to the conclusion that this inquiry is an attempt to stall any discussion with respect to this matter, an attempt to focus the inquiry exclusively on the RCMP. Certain senior officers of the force have something to answer with respect to its activities—I am not disputing that—but I want to make perfectly clear that the government bears a very substantial responsibility with respect to the incidents that are now raised and which have generated this judicial inquiry.

Since the Commissioner of the RCMP has stated that the illegalities of the RCMP may now be considered to be widespread we must also have the opportunity in this judicial inquiry to look at the climate which existed in government and in which apparently the government either neglected or refused to investigate allegations of wrongful acts committed by the RCMP. That should be an essential part of any inquiry, and it must be included.

I must say, in conclusion, that we feel the Solicitor General should give this undertaking that we shall not be precluded from asking questions or raising inquiries with respect to any illegalities on the part of the RCMP merely because there is now some general, wide-brush investigation in process. I hope the Solicitor General will deal with these matters when they are raised in the House, because we intend to raise them as they come forward in discharge of our responsibility to the people of Canada.

There is one danger which I should like to draw attention to with respect to this inquiry. I have been concerned for a long period with respect to the apprehension that the Prime Minister and solicitors general have felt with respect to the operation of the RCMP as some sort of threat to government. We in the opposition will be vigilant to ensure that this inquiry does not lead to suggestions being made by the government and actions being taken by which the government will attempt to obtain partisan political control of the RCMP.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Hnatyshyn: This is the kind of complaint one hears in editorial comments about the way in which the government itself regards the RCMP. We are concerned about the interface, about the operation between the force and the Solicitor General, but if the government takes any steps to attempt to use this situation as a vehicle to obtain political control over the RCMP it will be fought to the bitter end by members of our party.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Baldwin: Bring back impeachment!

Mr. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa-Whitby): Mr. Speaker, I must begin by saying I am just a little confused by the logic of the last point the hon. member made. If I understood the case which was being made, it was that in a democratic state it is absolutely essential for there to be political control.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Partisan political control.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Broadbent: Anyway, what is of basic importance in this matter is, precisely, political accountability, and I do not hesitate to say that this means political control. Of course if at some point the manner of political control becomes inappropriate then we make, in a free society, political judgments about the government concerned.

Mr. Clark: If we can get the evidence.

Mr. Broadbent: I wish to turn now to the subject of this inquiry. If I may say so, Your Honour did a real service to parliamentary democracy when you made the important ruling which enabled the House to conduct a serious debate on this matter, in the course of which all opposition parties had an opportunity to bring to the country's attention the serious mess we are now in, involving both the RCMP and the government.

It is a compliment to the parliamentary system and other free institutions that the editorial writers and the civil liberties groups, as well as others, should finally force the government to act in setting up an inquiry. However, I regret to say that the terms of reference of this inquiry will raise, in the mind of the public, at least as many serious questions as the inquiry was set up to answer. I, for one, cannot understand why the government has done what it has done in this respect, unless it is stupid or foolish or has something to cover up. I shall try to show what I mean in terms of the logic of my argument. There are some important questions to be raised about the terms of reference of this commission. I want to begin in the following way in terms of the sequence of getting the commission established.

We are now told that the Commissioner of the RCMP advises that RCMP members may have been involved in "activities which were not authorized or provided for by law". Important questions follow from that statement made this afternoon by the Solicitor General (Mr. Fox). The first question which occurs to me is: when did the commissioner learn this? When did he find out that this was the case? We have it on the authority of a number of ministers, including the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) not long ago, that something quite to the contrary was believed by the commissioner. When did he draw it to the minister's attention?

The minister did not tell us this afternoon when the government learned that there was perhaps a pattern of illegal activities on the part of the RCMP. Was it two weeks ago? When was it? I assume it was after the minister's statement in the House on June 17 when he said something to the contrary. Presumably, also, it was after he and the Prime Minister assured us that the Montreal incident of 1972 was an abberation.

On June 22 the Prime Minister assured me in the House that he had been informed that the Montreal incident was, and I quote from Hansard for June 22, "an abberation, an incident and an isolated one." That was just a couple of weeks ago. Now it turns out it was not an abberation or an isolated incident but that it was presumably part of a pattern. I repeat: when was the Solicitor General informed about this new situation? In replying to me on June 22 the Prime Minister was answering a question I raised about the allegations made by a former corporal in the RCMP who had alleged, back in 1972, that the kind of illegal activities which the minister today suggested were part of a pattern, did exist back in 1972. And it was on June 22 that the Prime Minister was replying to a question I put to him about the allegation by that corporal, who had made it in 1972 but repeated it just a couple of weeks ago.

Once again, the Prime Minister said—and this is important to the point I shall come to in a minute—that it was an isolated incident. It is clear now that it is not. It is clear, also, that the investigation allegedly undertaken, not in 1972 but in 1976, was a sham. When this matter was raised in the House a year ago, we were assured by the Solicitor General and the minister responsible to the House and to the people of Canada that this matter was investigated. We were assured last year that it was an isolated incident.

● (1550)

Surely some important questions arise. It is clear now, it seems to me, if I understand correctly the minister's statement, that there was a pattern of illegal activities by the RCMP—clearly the government believes that now, or it would not have set up this kind of inquiry—and I would think it is clear that this pattern of activities goes back at least to 1972.

If that is so, we on this side of the House are understandably concerned about the assurance that we were given, not only by the Solicitor General in the House last year but also by the Prime Minister, that the matter was under investigation, that indeed there was no pattern of wrongdoing at that time. I recall that that is all that was asserted. From my point of view, in terms of political accountability that is all that has to be said at this point.

I suggest another question which has to be answered by this inquiry if it is to be of any use to the people of Canada is this: in 1972 did the then solicitor general have access to all the relevant facts? It is on record—and again I reluctantly bring out the contradictions—that the Minister of Supply and Services (Mr. Goyer) said he was informed back in 1972. It is also on record through the words of the Solicitor General that the then commissioner of the RCMP and another senior official recalled—I forget the precise words but this is the logic and substance of the point—that they thought they normally would have verbally informed the minister. It seems to me that if the inquiry is to be useful it ought not to concentrate just on the RCMP in this instance but that the opportunity should be welcomed, I submit, by the government to clear up the contradictory implications of the statements which were made.

Similarly last year what kind of investigation was undertaken by the government? How much information was provided to the then solicitor general? How much information was provided to the Prime Minister? If, on the one hand, little information was provided to them, if they had just a superficial investigation, then they are politically accountable to this House for misleading the House and the country when they told us there had been a systematic and thorough investigation. That is what political accountability is all about, Mr. Speaker.

If, on the other hand, they were not informed by the RCMP last year, then it is important for us to ascertain the truth since questions are raised about the political accountability of the RCMP to the government. Either way, Mr. Speaker, we must examine the question. Either the government was deceptive and misled the people, or the government was not informed by the RCMP as it ought to have been. However, the terms of reference of this inquiry make it impossible for us to find the answer to that question.

Although in one sense we welcome the inquiry because it will examine some of the basic questions involved, as I said at the outset it will raise more questions than it will settle. What we have on the surface here is the government deciding to restrict narrowly the terms of reference to see whether there is systematic wrongdoing on the part of the RCMP. But the government has entirely left out very important and unresolved questions concerning political accountability on the part of the ministers themselves. Therefore from our point of view this is a very unacceptable inquiry.

As I have said, I take the view that the RCMP must be responsible to the cabinet of the day. In previous assertions in the House the Solicitor General, the Prime Minister, and others agreed with that. But they have also gone further. I am sure that if I checked back in Hansard I would find statements made by the Solicitor General and the Prime Minister in which they said that the political accountability point does concern them. If the political accountability point concerns them, why have they left it out of the terms of reference of this inquiry?

The implications are not pleasant, Mr. Speaker. The implications are that the government is either stupid or it has something to cover up.

Some hon. Members: Both.

Mr. Broadbent: Therefore I appeal to the government to reconsider immediately its terms of reference so as to include the very specific item of making it mandatory that this commission look into the political accountability question in general vis-à-vis the RCMP and the government, and specifically the political accountability that existed around the time of the 1972 break-in and that involved in the report back to the House in 1976 when the matter was seriously raised. Clearly, as it stands this commission is unacceptable.

[Translation]

Mr. Adrien Lambert (Bellechasse): Mr. Speaker, I shall be brief since there is a debate going on in the House on national unity, but I must say how surprised I am to see that RCMP members are the subject of a royal commission of inquiry. In my childhood I had great admiration for this police force, we used to call it the mounted police, it was more imposing, very impressive for us little boys, and I still admire it. But for the last three weeks, I have been greatly surprised to hear that RCMP members have committed unlawful acts. I appreciate they are human beings. I also appreciate they are under all kinds of pressures, but if we have come to the point where we cannot rely on our police forces to take care of our security, where their investigations are shady, I am wondering where we are all going?

In the beginning we were told that it was merely an illegal break-in on the premises of the APLQ. I do not know when we were told the truth, but at that time we were told: It happened only once; there is nothing wrong with overlooking it, just this once. But now, we are told that it happened in other circumstances. Other circumstances means several times: perhaps twice, perhaps five times, or ten times. Perhaps even 25 times. No one knows. In any event, there are surely victims when illegal raids take place. The law is not being respected, in addition to which the public is not being given the protection it is entitled to. I am absolutely amazed to see that in the minister's statement. It is written that allegations have recently been made to the effect that certain persons, then members of the RCMP, were implicated, in other circumstances, in procedures of inquiry or other acts that are not authorized by law.

There must be some code or other to guide police agents who are not dumbbells. They can read and understand the rules and instructions they are given. So, those people act according to their whims. In any event, Mr. Speaker, the statement says in part: Whereas public support of the RCMP in the discharge of its responsibility to protect the security of Canada is dependent on trust in the policies and procedures governing its activities. That is true, and it should be so.

Will a royal commission of inquiry really wipe the slate clean and restore public confidence? I certainly hope so. But there again, will it really be able to get to the truth of the matter and clarify the situation while restoring public trust in the RCMP? Be that as it may, if I could do anything to help clear up the matter, I would be eager to cooperate. It is in that frame of mind that I read the statement of the minister today. Further on, it says: And whereas the maintenance of that trust requires that full inquiry be made into the extent and prevalence of investigative practices or other activities involving members of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police that are not authorized or provided for by law.

I am somewhat broken-hearted to see that again the province of Quebec is involved in this. The government of the province of Quebec. I see the Solicitor General (Mr. Fox) who is saying no with his head, but if the newspapers are telling the truth, an investigation will be carried out in the province of Quebec in connection with the break-in at L'Agence de Presse Libre du Québec. Mr. Speaker, a provincial government and a federal government are both looking into the activities of our police forces. And in view of the current political climate, I really wonder if this is not likely to influence those who are in charge of these investigations. If only we could be convinced that they will cooperate for the general public well-being, I would be less concerned then to see that under two governments two inquiries will be held at the same time on the same matter. I understand that the Solicitor General (Mr. Fox) added in his statement that the inquiry commissioners will go farther in that matter.

In conclusion, I hope at least that a very serious inquiry will be made and that it will not result in confrontation with the Quebec Minister of Justice. I hope that Quebec City and Ottawa will try to serve well the interest of justice so that our policemen responsible for the security of Canadians will regain their confidence and the public will be able to cooperate efficiently with these people responsible for the interest and protection of the public. If we fail to do so, doubts will still be in the air, I am afraid. I am not overly impressed but I fear that the new generation has somewhat less respect than we do for our policemen who generally carry out their duties sometimes at the risk of their lives. Anyway, I am afraid about the result of that inquiry. I hope that it will be properly made, that it will give good results and that we reach the goal set.

● (1600)

[English]

Mr. McGrath: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. My point of order has to do with the matter which was raised earlier by my colleague. It is appropriate to raise it now in the form of a point of order because we have reached a stage in the proceedings where members, under the provisions of the Standing Orders, are entitled to direct questions to the minister based on his statement.

Royal Canadian Mounted Police

My point of order is this: a few days ago the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Gillespie) attempted to circumvent the Standing Orders by bootlegging what was an oral statement through the provisions of Standing Order 41(2), which provides for the tabling of documents. Today we see the same kind of procedure. Under the provisions of Standing Order 15(3) the Solicitor General (Mr. Fox) rises in his place to make a statement, and the operative part of that statement, namely, the terms of reference, are not read by him. He has to have them tabled. It is a fact that these terms of reference have already been distributed publicly to the press, but they have been denied to members of the House. Consequently I am being denied the opportunity to ask questions.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Of course I shall allow the hon. member to continue, but there is a practical difficulty, as I am sure the hon. member will realize. I should like the hon. member to address himself to the difficulty, and that is, the order of calling of business is the tabling of documents first and statements by ministers second. Under the circumstances, the minister could scarcely table the document before he made the statement, because the document relates only to the statement. There would have been a practical difficulty if the minister had attempted to table documents on terms of reference of a royal commission which he had not announced to the House.

Mr. McGrath: Mr. Speaker, I am afraid you misunderstood me. I was not suggesting that the minister should use Standing Order 41 to table the document. If he is going to make a statement under Standing Order 15(3), he should make the full statement and not try to circumvent the rule by asking the permission of the House to table the operative part of the statement. In effect he has not made a complete statement. The Standing Order makes provision not only for replies by representatives of the other parties, but also makes provision for members to direct questions to the minister, based on his statement. How can I direct questions to the minister, based on a statement setting up an inquiry into the operations of the RCMP, if I do not have before me and I do not know what the terms of reference of the inquiry are?

This is clearly an abuse of the Standing Order. If ministers are to be allowed to abuse Standing Orders in this manner, then I would suggest that by the same token we are going to be denied our rights under the Standing Orders. If Your Honour is not prepared to rule now, then you should take the question under advisement. There was not a great deal in what the minister had to say, apart from the appointment of the commission. The operative part of the minister's statement was not read into the record; it has not been tabled; we do not know what it is; and I suggest the minister should be directed to read that part of his statement into the record.

Mr. Speaker: I do not know if hon. members want to contribute to the point of order or want to ask questions. I will take the point of order under advisement, but in the circumstances I am having great difficulty. The minister could not table the document previously. Then he made a statement and offered to table the document, and that sequence would have required consent, which was not forthcoming. Then the suggestion is that the Chair is in a position to order the minister to read the statement. I do not know if I have that authority, but in any case I shall take it under advisement.

Mr. Lawrence: Mr. Speaker, in view of the fact that the terms of reference have been handed out to the press gallery in the press kit accompanying the statement of the minister, and were not given to members of this House or the subscribers of Hansard, my question to the minister now is: will he please read the terms of reference?

Mr. Fox: Mr. Speaker, if it will be helpful to the House, I must say once again I am astonished by these charges. Since the beginning of this afternoon I have been trying to table the document.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Fox: If the hon. member had allowed me to table it, he would have had a copy by now. In any event, I would be delighted to read the terms of reference. Following my reading of the document, I should request permission to table it. It seems to me that is the only way it will become part of the record for official viewing. My reading of the terms of reference quickly is not going to be particularly helpful to hon. members. But with Your Honour's permission, I would be prepared to read the terms of reference.

● (1610)

An hon. Member: Answer the question.

Mr. Fox: In answer to the question, I shall read the terms of reference. They read as follows:

WHEREAS it has been established that certain persons who were members of the RCMP at the time did, on or about October 7, 1972, take part jointly with persons who were then members of la Sûreté du Québec and la Police de Montréal in the entry of premises located at 3459 St. Hubert Street, Montreal, in the search of those premises for property contained therein, and in the removal of documents from those premises, without lawful authority to do so;

WHEREAS allegations have recently been made that certain persons who were members of the RCMP at the time may have been involved on other occasions in investigative actions or other activities that were not authorized or provided for by law;

[Translation]

An hon. Member: The interpretation system does not work.

Mr. Fox: Since the interpretation system does not work, I shall give the rest of the answer to the hon. member opposite in French.

WHEREAS, after having made inquiries into these allegations at the instance of the government, the Commissioner of the RCMP now advises that there are indications that certain persons who were members of the RCMP may indeed have been involved in investigative actions or other activities that were not authorized or provided for by law, and that as a consequence, the Commissioner believes that in the circumstances it would be in the best interests of the RCMP that a Commission of Inquiry be set up to look into the operations and policies of the Security Service on a national basis;

[Mr. Speaker.]

WHEREAS public support of the RCMP in the discharge of its responsibility to protect the security of Canada is dependent on trust in the policies and procedures governing its activities;

[English]

AND WHEREAS the maintenance of that trust requires that full inquiry be made into the extent and prevalence of investigative practices or other activities involving members of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police that are not authorized or provided for by law.

THEREFORE, the Committee of the Privy Council, on the recommendation of the Prime Minister, advise that, pursuant to the Inquiries Act, a Commission do issue under the Great Seal of Canada, appointing

Mr. Justice David C. McDonald of Edmonton, Alberta

Mr. Donald S. Rickard of Toronto, Ontario

Mr. Guy Gilbert of Montreal, Quebec to be Commissioners under Part I of the Inquiries Act:

[Translation]

(a) to conduct such investigations as in the opinion of the Commissioners are necessary to determine the extent and prevalence of investigative practices or other activities involving members of the RCMP that are not authorized or provided for by law and, in this regard, to inquire into the relevant policies and procedures that govern the activities of the RCMP in the discharge of its responsibility to protect the security of Canada;

[English]

Mr. Paproski: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. The minister is reading too fast and the interpreters cannot keep up with him.

Mr. Speaker: Yes, it is a difficult situation. The minister is reading very quickly, and of course that poses a great burden on the interpreters. Perhaps the minister could read a little more slowly.

Mr. Fox: The text goes on to read:

(b) to report the facts relating to any investigative action or other activity involving persons who were members of the RCMP that was not authorized or provided for by law as may be established before the Commission, and to advise as to any further action that the Commissioners may deem necessary and desirable in the public interest; and

(c) to advise and make such report as the Commissioners deem necessary and desirable in the interest of Canada, regarding the policies and procedures governing the activities of the RCMP in the discharge of its responsibility to protect the security of Canada, the means to implement such policies and procedures, as well as the adequacy of the laws of Canada as they apply to such policies and procedures, having regard to the needs of the security of Canada.

The Committee further advise that the Commissioners:

1. be authorized to adopt such procedures and methods as the Commissioners may from time to time deem expedient for the proper conduct of the inquiry;

2. be directed that the proceedings of the inquiry be held in camera—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Some hon. Members: Shame.

Mr. Fox: It goes on to read:

—in all matters relating to national security and in all other matters where the Commissioners deem it desirable in the public interest or in the interest of the privacy of individuals involved in specific cases which may be examined:

3. be directed, in making their report, to consider and take all steps necessary to preserve

(a) the secrecy of sources of security information within Canada; and

(b) the security of information provided to Canada in confidence by other nations;

[Translation]

4. be authorized to sit at such time and at such places as they may decide from time to time, to have complete access to personnel and information available in the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and to be provided with adequate working accommodation and clerical assistance;

5. be authorized to engage the services of such staff and technical advisers as they deem necessary or advisable and also the services of counsel to aid them and assist in their inquiry at such rates of remuneration and reimbursement as may be approved by the Treasury Board;

6. be directed to follow established security procedures with regard to their staff and technical advisers and the handling of classified information at all stages of the inquiry;

[English]

7. be authorized to exercise all the powers conferred upon them by section 11 of the Inquiries Act; and

8. be directed to report to the Governor in Council with all reasonable dispatch and file with the Privy Council Office their papers and records as soon as reasonably may be after the conclusion of the inquiry.

The Committee further advise that, pursuant to section 37 of the Judges Act, His Honour Mr. Justice McDonald be authorized to act as Commissioner for the purposes of the said Commission and that Mr. Justice McDonald be the Chairman of the Commission.

Certified to be a true copy, signed by the Clerk of the Privy Council.

To facilitate the reading of the material by hon. members I would once again request the consent of the House to table the full text of the document in both official languages so that hon. members may examine it at their leisure.

Mr. Joe Clark (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the reading by the Solicitor General (Mr. Fox) of a document which, however, he should have had the courtesy to circulate to all members of the House, as he did to members of the Press Gallery, before coming to the House of Commons.

I should like to ask the Solicitor General whether it is the view and the intention of the government that the terms of reference which he has just read allow the commissioners to require testimony under oath and preferably in public from the former solicitor general, the present Minister of Supply and Services (Mr. Goyer), concerning his precise role as the minister responsible for the RCMP during the period and concerning the events into which the inquiry will inquire.

Mr. Fox: Mr. Speaker, I think that once hon. members have had the opportunity to examine the terms of reference in detail, particularly paragraphs (a), (b), and (c), they will see that the terms of reference are drafted in very broad terms. It will be up to the commission to decide whom they would wish to hear. They could, of course, call the former solicitor general, the present Minister of Supply and Services (Mr. Goyer), and they could call me and my predecessor in office. The terms of reference are designed to permit the commission of inquiry to do so. Whether or not the commission would do it in camera or in public depends on the decision of the commission itself in conformity with its terms of reference and powers.

Mr. Goyer: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege—

An hon. Member: Sit down.

Mr. Clark: Mr. Speaker, the minister claims a question of privilege—perhaps he should speak first.

Mr. Goyer: I have already stated in the House of Commons that never before March, 1976, did I have any knowledge of illegal activities being committed by the RCMP—either prior to or following their occurrence. The Solicitor General (Mr. Fox) stated that the RCMP had given him the assurance that L'Agence de Presse Libre du Québec incident was an isolated incident and, as far as I know, this was correct. It is only today that I learned of alleged involvement of RCMP members in other illegal activities over the years, and I am pleased that a royal commission has been appointed to verify and study these allegations.

I can assure the commission of my fullest co-operation. It is importat to ensure that the police abide by the country's laws and that the RCMP image be respected both within and outside Canada.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I take it that the purpose of that intervention might be in anticipation of a reply to the question raised by the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Clark) as to whether or not it would be the intention of the minister to appear before the commission.

Mr. Clark: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I was interested in the continuing soap opera of the Minister of Supply and Services. I note that the terms of reference cited specifically by the Solicitor General allow the commissioners to conduct investigations concerning practices that are not authorized. This is contained in paragraphs (a) and (b), the only two parts of the terms of reference that are relevant here. In view of the fact that what is of interest to us in this House is precisely the steps which might—or might not, to give him the benefit of the doubt—have been taken by the present minister of Supply and Services to evade giving the authorization that a minister normally would have given, it appears to me that there is a possibility that these terms of reference—

● (1620)

Mr. Goyer: Make a charge!

Mr. Clark: The minister should move from soap opera to comic opera. It appears to me that the very careful wording of this particular term of reference relative to authorization would not require the appearance before the inquiry of the Minister of Supply and Services because he claims he did not authorize what should not have happened without his authorization. What I would like to have from the Solicitor General is a categorical undertaking that it is the intention of the Government of Canada to have the Minister of Supply and Services appear before this inquiry in open session, under oath, to explain all aspects and answer all questions relative to the state of his knowledge concerning the activities of the RCMP in any matter being inquired into by the inquiry. May we have that specific undertaking?

Mr. Fox: Mr. Speaker, prior to the hon. gentleman's question I must say I had some difficulty following the language which was being used. I noticed that at one point the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Clark) referred to an authorization which would normally have been given. It seems clear to me—and during the course of the debate it has always been clear—that in no case would any minister of the Crown want to be in the position of authorizing an illegal act because at that point, of course, he also would be involved in criminal activity. My understanding is that the Minister of Supply and Services (Mr. Goyer) has just promised to extend his fullest co-operation to the commission of inquiry.

According to the terms of reference which have been referred to in the House, it seems to me that the commission of inquiry will have all the authority necessary to inquire into the APLQ affair and to summon the witnesses it thinks are necessary to cast light on the questions surrounding the matter. For me, or for the government at this stage, to tell the commission how it ought to conduct its own inquiry would be improper. I think the terms of reference are clear. The commission has all the authority necessary, and my expectation is that the commission would want to look into the APLQ affair.

Mr. Clark: Mr. Speaker, I am sorry to have to keep pressing this matter. Given the government's obvious interest in clearing up this matter, I wonder if the Solicitor General would give us a clear undertaking now that the government will request that the Minister of Supply and Services be allowed to appear in open session under oath to explain all aspects.

Mr. Goyer: I have done it here, but still you ask questions.

Mr. Clark: Would the Solicitor General please answer that question?

Mr. Fox: Mr. Speaker, I cannot add very much to the previous answers I have given. The commission of inquiry has been set up and has full powers to inquire into all aspects which are brought to its attention. Some aspects will undoubtedly have to do with the APLQ affair. Questions have been raised in the House by various hon. members. They have raised questions of cover-up and other related matters. In the course of its inquiries into those matters I suppose the commission will wish to call on members of the government who have additional information in that regard.

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, I too have a question about the terms of reference. I am not a lawyer, and that may or may not be a handicap under the circumstances, but having read the terms of reference with care, I do not reach the conclusion the minister seems to reach, that is, that the royal commission can look into virtually an unlimited range of questions pertaining to allegations of wrongdoing. I think—and I put this in the form of a question to the minister—that there is a rather narrow legal interpretation of terms of reference and, if there is no specific mention of the political accountability point, is it not the case that once the commission begins its work and looks with care at its terms of reference, it may well conclude that, quite apart from what the minister says here today, it is not entitled to get into the political accountability question at all? I ask that in light of the fact that there is not a specific reference instructing the commission to do that.

My question is twofold. Is it not a clear possibility that the commission might read this document and reach that conclusion; second, if it is a possibility, given the minister's own expressed concern about the issue of accountability on many occasions in the House in recent weeks and the alleged concern of the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) about political accountability, why is that not in the terms of reference?

Mr. Fox: Mr. Speaker, I feel that the terms of reference are wide indeed. Section C of the terms of reference states that one of the powers given to the commission is to advise and make such reports as it deems necessary and desirable in the interests of Canada regarding the policies and procedures governing the activities of the RCMP. It can look at the policies and procedures, and this could include procedures regarding reporting to the political level.

Mr. Broadbent: It could.

Mr. Fox: Yes. If the commission believes it is necessary, I suppose it will be examining a number of matters. The terms of reference are extremely wide in the sense that they allow the commission to have a look at all allegations which have been made. I think some of them are clearly unfounded, but perhaps the commission will conclude that some of them have basis in fact. I suppose the commission will have a look at how matters were handled within the force and what relationship there was between the force and the responsible minister. However, as to the over-all question of accountability, if the government is not satisfied with the present state of accountability—and I am not saying we are not—then it would be up to the government to present legislation in the House. We would not want to divest ourselves of our responsibility in that regard.

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, I find that answer incredible. Considering that during the period when we were questioning in the House about the 1972 break-in in the first place, to which the minister refers in his opening paragraph in the terms of reference, serious conflicting implications—and I will not put it more strongly than that—emerged with regard to the degree of knowledge of the then solicitor general—and I am not questioning that minister's integrity at the present time at all—and considering that we have conflicting testimony in its implications from then Commissioner Higgitt, another man whose integrity I have no other reason to question, is it not important to have that resolved and to have the political accountability with regard to that specific incident looked into?

Second, is it not important for the commission, given the important principle of ministerial responsibility, to look into the information which was given to the House a year ago, when the Prime Minister and the then solicitor general said that after the 1972 issue was raised in the House it was investigated, there was no pattern established and they received adequate answers? I forget the precise words, but the clear political commitment made in this House by the Prime Minister and the then solicitor general was that there was an investigation and there was nothing to be concerned about.

Is it not important, in terms of the public knowledge of this event, to know whether there was a cover-up, to use the going word, whether the government of the day was misleading us or whether the RCMP was misleading the government at that time? Surely that is a very basic question that in one sense goes to the root of the whole problem and this whole inquiry, and leaves open the possibility of getting answers rather than making it mandatory.

● (1630)

Mr. Fox: Mr. Speaker, there are a number of instances that have been brought to the attention of the House and a number of instances, as I indicated in my statement, that have been brought to my attention since I made my statement in the House on June 17. It is my firm belief that the terms of reference not only allow the commission of inquiry to look at those cases which have become public but some which are not public at the moment because they have been brought to my personal attention and have been investigated. It would also allow them to look at other possible cases coming up or that they may uncover during the course of their investigation. The powers they have would enable them to look at the APLQ affair from beginning to end to see whether, as the hon. member for Greenwood (Mr. Brewin) suggested, there was a criminal cover-up at any level. That is, of course, one of the things that the commissioners will be looking at during the course of the inquiry.

Perhaps I should read Hansard again, but my understanding of the whole matter is that assurances were given to the House, on the basis of information received by the force, that the APLQ affair was an exceptional and isolated incident. Of course I stand by those statements. It is only post-June 17, post the time that I made a statement in the House—

Mr. Broadbent: When did you find out?

Mr. Fox: —that specific allegations were brought to my attention. As I stated here, it is not enough simply to have allegations. I asked the Deputy Solicitor General of Canada and the Assistant Deputy Attorney General, Criminal Law, to interview the people who had made the allegations and to look further into the allegations to see if there was any semblance of fact there. I also requested that the commissioner of the RCMP look into them to see whether on his side there was any basis in fact. It was only when I received reports to the effect that there apparently may be some basis in fact—

Mr. Broadbent: When did you find out?

Mr. Fox: —that this was brought—

Mr. Speaker: A supplementary, the hon. member for Northumberland-Durham (Mr. Lawrence).

Mr. Allen Lawrence (Northumberland-Durham): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question relates to the very restrictive terms of reference. I can well understand why the minister was ashamed to read them in the House. Having had a hand in drafting terms of reference I can assure the House that they are extremely restrictive.

Based on the logicality of the terms of reference, wherein the inquiry has been called because of certain allegations, the main allegation in this House involves the former solicitor general. This means that inextricably interwoven in this whole matter was the knowledge of serious and, as it turns out, genuine, allegations of police intervention in criminal activities—knowledge which was sent to the minister. In other words, there was ministerial knowledge of serious allegations. That was the basis of most of the allegations that came certainly from this party, within this House. Bearing that in mind, is it not rather strange that there is absolutely no term of reference to permit the commissioners to inquire into the relationship not only of the minister but also of his staff, with the RCMP?

I do not want the minister to make the same error that the hon. member for Oshawa-Whitby (Mr. Broadbent) made when he confused political responsibility with political control. We are talking about political responsibility here. Why was there not a term of reference inquiring into the relationship between the political head and the operational head of the RCMP?

Mr. Fox: Mr. Speaker, I think one of the premises on which the hon. member's question is put is that someone was aware of potential or alleged criminal activity. I think it is quite clear, and my statement bears it out, that as soon as any matter concerning alleged criminal activity was brought to my attention or to the attention of any Solicitor General, the necessary steps were taken to investigate it.

The establishment of the royal commission is a clear indication of the government's stand that the police must act within the limits of the law. Through the top management of the force, the police completely subscribe to that proposition. The whole purpose of the royal commission cannot, by any stretch of the imagination, ever be conceived as a cover-up operation. If it were it would be a poor way of handling the matter. The fact is quite the opposite. The purpose is to give to the commission of inquiry all the latitude and power it needs to look into every allegation, founded or unfounded, whether brought forward in a responsible or irresponsible manner, and to get to the bottom of the matter. Surely that is the purpose of the royal commission.

Mr. Lawrence: I have a final supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Back in 1973 the existing system failed. Serious and genuine allegations of criminal activity were made to the minister, and he bungled it. It may not have been his fault but he bungled it one way or another. The system failed. Under these terms of reference the commissioners cannot inquire into that relationship. I suggest to the minister that is a whitewash term of reference. Why are the commissioners not asked to inquire into that relationship?

Mr. Fox: Mr. Speaker, I think if the hon. member looks at the terms of reference he will find that the commission has full power to inquire into all matters it wishes. The hon. member conveniently forgets that a number of initiatives have been taken by this government which relate in good part to the problem of accountability raised by the Leader of the New Democratic Party (Mr. Broadbent). I refer to the changes in the Protection of Privacy Act in 1974 concerning both the criminal side of the operations of the RCMP and the security side of the operations of the RCMP.

The hon. member referred to the situation in 1973. Naturally we are all interested in finding out whether some forms of criminal activity were entered into by some police officers—as a former attorney general the hon. member should be well placed to know that with a force of 19,000 people spread across the country it may unfortunately happen that some person committed an act that he ought not to have committed. I do not think that is sufficient reason to say that it is necessarily a pattern of activity. It has raised sufficient concern in our minds, however, that we feel that full light should be shed upon the matter.

[Translation]

Mr. Lambert (Bellechasse): Mr. Speaker, since the commission will be committed to scrutinize seriously the various break-in situations, in cases where they would discover that an RCMP officer acted in cooperation with other police forces, either the Montreal Urban Community's or the Sûreté du Québec, would they have under their terms of reference the authority to compel officers of those other police forces to give evidence before them in order to further clarify the case? If so, would such evidence be kept secret or made available to the public?

Mr. Fox: Mr. Speaker, in answer to this, I would say that under the exact terms of reference they are to scrutinize the actions of the police force for which we are responsible federally. The aim is not to inquire into the actions of municipal or provincial police forces. The commission, however, has all the powers of a commission of inquiry, including that of issuing subpoenas, of requiring appearances before the commission and, where Canadian citizens wherever they may be in Canada had information of such a nature as to enlighten them on RCMP operations, clearly the Commission could require them to appear. As far as in camera proceedings are concerned, the commission is instructed by the government that all hearings must be held in camera in matters involving the national security of Canada. In other matters, the commission has discretionary powers to decide whether hearings are to be held in public or, in keeping with the inherent rights of citizens to be protected against allegations unless there is some degree of evidence against them, to decide that those parts of the hearings that could affect the civil rights of Canadian citizens should also be held in camera.

[English]

Mr. F. Oberle (Prince George-Peace River): Mr. Speaker, the government takes this matter of national security and intelligence so seriously that the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) chaired the cabinet committee on national security and intelligence. On that committee served the then solicitor general, the then minister of justice, and the then minister of national defence. Since there was interplay between that committee and the RCMP through the Solicitor General my question is this: Does the government intend to have the Prime Minister, who was the chairman of the committee, or the secretary of that committee, testify before the commission under oath on those incidents which will be exposed in the inquiry?

• (1640)

Mr. Fox: Mr. Speaker, the hon. gentleman's question relates, apparently, to some grandiose scheme or plot. He spoke of evidence. I do not think we have seen evidence of the type of grandiose plot he described in his question. It would be up to the commission of inquiry to decide on the conduct of this inquiry and, if it was found in the incidents the hon. member referred to that there was a cover-up, it could ask witnesses to appear. On the other hand, speaking hypothetically, if the commission came to the conclusion there had been no cover-up, and if people were entitled to assume that the investigation the Montreal Urban Community Police had launched would come to a head, I suppose the commission might not pursue the matter further, in the belief there is nothing else to pursue. The province of Quebec instituted a commission of inquiry, which is considering precisely why the inquiry conducted by the Montreal Urban Community Police into the APLQ affair came to an end.

Mr. Oberle: The minister accuses me of introducing another grandiose scheme to the House. Those grandiose schemes, so-called, to which I drew the minister's attention probably led to the setting up of this inquiry. The minister is still hanging on to information he obtained from me, and I intend to give him additional information. Being a layman and not a lawyer, I do not know if certain sections of the Federal Court Act, particularly section 41(2), will apply to the inquiry being launched. I am referring to provisions allowing the minister to sign an affidavit, on the strength of which he can withhold evidence from the court if it is deemed as being injurious to national security, cabinet secrecy, federal-provincial relations, and so on. I ask, will that provision of the Federal Court Act be waived in this particular inquiry?

Mr. Fox: Mr. Speaker, I hate to disappoint the hon. member, but none of his wild accusations or allegations led me to change my stand. After following up by way of investigation the allegations the hon. member made, I was not able to find evidence of criminal conduct or criminal wrongdoing. Be that as it may, the question the hon. member raised a number of times in the House is presently being investigated by the Ontario Police Commission, and I am content to leave it at that for the moment.

To answer the hon. member's specific question, if I were to exercise the rights which parliament confers on me under sections 41 and 42 of the Federal Court Act during the course of the inquiry I am sure the hon. member would hear about it and I would be fully accountable for my actions in that regard, as usual to the House of Commons.

Mr. Oberle: The minister has not said if that particular section will apply to evidence which the commission may request of a minister of the Crown or even the Prime Minister.

If the allegations or information I have made known privately to the Solicitor General are without foundation and have nothing to do with the setting up of the commission inquiry, will he now give me permission, publicly, to divulge that same information to the press, since, according to what he says, it is without foundation?

Mr. Fox: Mr. Speaker, two different considerations are involved.

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): One is the truth.

Mr. Oberle: Yes, or no.

Mr. Fox: We are talking about the foundation for the conduct of the inquiry. I hope the hon. member agrees that most of the information he relayed to me related to police forces not under the jurisdiction of the federal government.

Mr. Oberle: It related to the RCMP, your office, and officers in your office. Answer yes or no.

Mr. Fox: Obviously the hon. member feels strongly about the matter. The matter is being examined impartially and independently. Surely the hon. member, a member of the Progressive Conservative party, does not object to the Ontario Attorney General, for whom I have the greatest respect as an attorney general, looking into the matter. As for the other part of the question, I think I answered it fully in my previous response. I would not intend to file any such affidavit, but I would have to consider the matter. I suppose if the commission wants to look into matters which have nothing to do with its terms of reference, I would need to consider the matter.

Mr. Oberle: That is right. You would cover it up.

Mr. Fox: Further, I would seek the advice of the law officers of the Crown on how I should conduct myself in the circumstances and I shall answer in the House of Commons, as usual, for any actions I may take.

Mr. Oberle: I have finished playing ball with you.

Mr. Fox: The Federal Court Act gives me certain powers. And it is not for me to say parliament was wrong in giving me those powers.

Mr. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Mr. Speaker, my question is supplementary to that asked by the hon. member for Northumberland-Durham (Mr. Lawrence). Let me preface it by saying I have read the terms of reference carefully and they seem narrow and restrictive. Would it not be in the minister's own interest to include in the terms of reference provisions which would allow the commission to inquire into the relationship between the Solicitor General and the RCMP, particularly as it relates to accountability and responsibility? Surely that is germane to this whole question. I ask the minister, in light of the exchanges which have taken place in the House today—and I commend him on his manner of handling himself—if it would not be in his own best interest to have that matter spelled out in the terms of reference, so that the commission can look into that particular relationship and determine if it can be improved?

Mr. Fox: Mr. Speaker, no. I appreciate the hon. member's advice, but from my reading of the terms of reference I cannot share his opinion that they are restrictive. The first part would allow the commission to conduct such investigations as, in the opinion of the commissioners, are necessary. I cannot think of broader language. Part (b) would give the commission power to report facts relating to any investigative action or activity, and so on. That language is also broad in the terms of reference. I could have phrased the terms of reference in such a way as to resrtrict them solely to the APLQ matter, the Praxis affair, or to some of the other matters other hon. members raised. I felt it would be better to hold a more open, wider inquiry. I wanted to let the Canadian public know that this commission has all the powers necessary to look into all the allegations of wrongdoing on the part of the force. I want to re-establish, in that way, the previous excellent reputation of the force, a reputation it still deserves, and will continue to deserve.

Mr. John Gilbert (Broadview): Mr. Speaker, the minister stated that only recently he had obtained information concerning incidents of alleged wrongdoing on the part of RCMP officers. On the basis of that information, apparently, he set up the commission of inquiry. How many incidents of alleged wrongdoing were brought to the minister's attention? More important than that, have any people been suspended as a result of the allegations of illegal action, and have any been charged?

Mr. Fox: Mr. Speaker, between June 17, I believe, and the present, a number of allegations have come forward. Consequently the deputy Solicitor General has had but a short time to examine these allegations. I asked him to do it. I also asked the Commissioner of the RCMP to look into the matter. This has been done as quickly and humanely as possible, in the circumstances. Certain new facts came to light in the past couple of weeks, and it takes a certain length of time to determine if there is any basis to some allegations. I cannot say that we have hard evidence at present as to who committed what acts. We felt that the best way to deal with the matter was to set up an independent commission, which would examine the facts and so avoid the sort of criticism the hon. member's leader levelled at the government concerning the RCMP in-house investigation of 1976.

• (1650)

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I will see the hon. member for a supplementary question, and conclude questioning with the hon. member for Wellington-Grey-Dufferin-Waterloo (Mr. Beatty), the hon. member for Richmond (Mr. Beaudoin), and the hon. member for Moncton (Mr. Jones).

Mr. Gilbert: Will the minister direct his attention to the number of incidents that were referred to him? Is it right to assume that no persons have been suspended or charged? More important, in light of the information supplied by the hon. member for Central Nova (Mr. MacKay), will the minister take steps with regard to protecting the documents and letters that may be involved with regard to investigation?

Mr. Fox: Yes, Mr. Speaker. A directive has now been issued by the Commissioner of the RCMP to stop any further destruction of documents by the RCMP, even in their normal course of operation in the destruction of documents that have lost their use.

Mr. Perrin Beatty (Wellington-Grey-Dufferin-Waterloo): Mr. Speaker, will the minister indicate whether my understanding of the terms of reference is correct, that the commission of inquiry is specifically directed that the proceedings of the inquiry be held in camera on all matters relating to national security? If that is so, can the minister indicate whether any investigation into the mishandling of this affair by the former solicitor general, the Minister of Supply and Services (Mr. Goyer), conducted by this commission will have to be held in camera in view of the fact that the illegal break-in into L'Agence de Presse Libre du Québec was justified on the grounds of national security? In other words, is it not the case that the terms of reference are so restricted that the inquiry is directed by the government that any investigation of the activities of the former solicitor general with regard to the L'Agence de Presse Libre du Québec affair will have to be held in secret behind closed doors?

Mr. Fox: Mr. Speaker, that is not the reading I have of the terms of reference. The terms of reference are quite clear that if, in the opinion of the commission, there is a matter of national security which is at stake, it has the power and is indeed directed to sit in camera. However, if matters do not relate to national security, matters which I presume are information and national security is not involved, there would be no obligation to sit in camera.

In light of previous experience, for example in crime inquiries in Montreal where numbers of people had allegations made against them and no opportunity to defend themselves, a commission should take that into consideration and make up its mind whether there is a public interest and whether it should be held in camera or open. They should also consider whether individual rights are involved which may be adversely affected if the proceedings are not held in camera.

Mr. Beatty: Mr. Speaker, members on this side of the House will be very interested to see whether that investigation will take place in camera or in open session.

With regard to the terms of reference, may I also ask the minister whether in his opinion they are intended by the government to be broad enough to cover the exchange or correspondence tabled in the House yesterday by the Minister of Supply and services which included a letter from his assistant, Mr. Cameron, dated October 11, 1972, and marked urgent. It asked the RCMP for a recommendation as to what sort of acknowledgement, if any, should be made to the letter of allegation from L'Agence de Presse Libre du Québec, concluding with the final sentence "It is noted that reply has been requested by 11 a.m. on Friday, 13 October, 1972, two days later." , and to determine what the reason was why it took 15 days, including 13 days beyond that deadline, for the RCMP to reply, and determine whether there was any other form of communication by the RCMP and the Solicitor General's office during that period?

Mr. Fox: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member's question may be very interesting from a historical point of view. The facts are as the Minister of Supply and Services has indicated. The letter was discussed at a subsequent meeting with the head of the RCMP. The matter was dealt with at that time in the manner I indicated in my statement and the minister indicated in his. What happened in between does not seem to have very much relevance.

[Translation]

Mr. Léonel Beaudoin (Richmond): Mr. Speaker, when the Solicitor General made his statement on the APLQ incident on June 17, 1977, I thought precisely that it was certainly not of an extraordinary or isolated nature. Here is my question: To pursue the matter I had raised at the time with the Solicitor General, in view of the fact that the Quebec government has appointed Mr. Keable to investigate almost the same matter, because it would be wrong to think that this inquiry will be carried on largely outside Quebec, since it will take place essentially in Quebec, I believe, can the minister tell the House whether this royal commission—and I congratulate him for setting it up because it was necessary, in my opinion—will cooperate with Mr. Keable or will they have authority to ask Mr. Keable to appear before them as regards the investigation he has been carrying on? Can he also tell us what results can be expected? If so, does he think this matter might lead us to a constitutional fight.

Mr. Fox: Mr. Speaker, I do not think this matter might lead us to a kind of constitutional fight, as the hon. member has suggested. In my opinion, our position is extremely clear. If it had been an isolated, extraordinary and very specific case, if it were a criminal offence perpetrated within this province, this inquiry would fall under the jurisdiction of the provincial attorney general, who is responsible for the administration and implementation of the Criminal Code within his province, and this is what we have done.

At the present time, other allegations lead us to believe that it was not an unusual nor an isolated event. Therefore, as the government responsible for the federal police force, it seems to me quite normal to set up a commission of inquiry to examine the behaviour of the federal police under the circumstances. However, I do not expect any clash between the two commissions of inquiry and I do not see why the federal commission should call Mr. Keable as a witness. I think that Mr. Keable has very definite terms of reference on four specific questions which have been raised, among others why the inquiry of the Montreal police force came to an end. As for us, there would be other practices, perhaps illegal, which we suspect and we really want to solve the matter and learn exactly what happened.

[English]

Mr. Leonard C. Jones (Moncton): Mr. Speaker, I wish to ask the minister three questions. They will be very brief and he can answer them briefly. Will all the members of the cabinet, the parliamentary secretaries, their predecessors in office, their respective staffs and all relevant documents, be compellable witnesses and compellable documents by subpoena or otherwise? Does this inquiry include certain problems that are taking place in the RCMP in New Brunswick? Will the government pay for counsel and legal fees for the RCMP individually and collectively?

Mr. Fox: Mr. Speaker, with regard to the first question I believe the answer in broad terms will be no. With regard to the second question relating to the RCMP inquiry by the New Brunswick government, once again the answer is no, if I understood the question. On the third question as to whether legal counsel would be provided to members of the force, there is a force policy under which in most cases funds for legal assistance are provided to members of the force in connection with things that may have been done in the pursuit of their duties.

Mr. Jones: Do I understand that the inquiry will not have the right to subpoena members of the cabinet?

Mr. Fox: Mr. Speaker, if it is a legal question the hon. member is asking me, I will have to check. However, I cannot imagine that if any member of the cabinet is asked to supply relevant information to the commission of inquiry, he would not be willing to do so.

* * *

● (1700)

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, I have two questions for the government House leader. First, what is the intention of the government with respect to business for tomorrow, Friday, and next week?

Mr. MacEachen: Tomorrow we shall resume the third reading of Bill C-27 followed by C-17, the Air Canada bill, and C-49. Next week I would hope also to deal with the report stage of the amendments to the criminal law.

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): The other question I have in mind relates to the debate on national unity which, according to the understanding between all parties, was to occupy two days. By the luck of the draw, there happened to be one long day and one short day. The government saw fit, for a reason which escapes me, to make a statement in the middle of the short day. I am being charitable when I say the reason escapes me; this has happened on other occasions and I think it is a practice which ought to be avoided. That a statement of at least partial capitulation, which some have called a cover-up, should have made in relation to an important matter on a day set aside for a debate on national unity is beyond my comprehension, and the government House leader owes an apology for dealing with the matter in that way.

In addition, he owes us some time. I am not worrying about the time we took up on the question of parliamentary privilege. That is part of the normal parliamentary process and I might add that more could be heard about that matter tomorrow. But as to the statement catapulted in by the minister, I believe the request made by one member of the House to extend the time set aside for the debate so as at least to make up the period lost, about an hour and 45 minutes, ought to be granted by the government House leader, and I would ask him to seek whatever order might be required so that the time could be made up.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. MacEachen: The hon. member says it escapes him why the Solicitor General (Mr. Fox) decided to make a statement today.

An hon. Member: It doesn't escape me.

Mr. MacEachen: It does not escape me, either. The reason is related to the importance of the matter, one which, in the opinion of the Speaker, was of such urgency just a short time ago that the business of the House of Commons was set aside to deal with it. It was the view of the government that just as soon as a decision had been taken to establish a royal commission related to our national security, that decision should be communicated to the House of Commons as quickly as possible.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. MacEachen: That is why the statement was made today. It was because of the gravity of the subject matter, and for no other reason. The hon. member said his question of privilege was part of the parliamentary process. Of course it was. But a statement by a minister is also part of the parliamentary process and was justified on the grounds I have indicated.

The hon. member has suggested that further time might be made available for today's debate on national unity. I am not ready to make or to receive a proposal at the present time because I know the circumstances are not right and that the mood is not right at the moment for securing the kind of concurrence which would be required. However, I would be ready to consult through usual channels to determine whether it would be possible to agree on some extended period. The hon. member for Grenville-Carleton (Mr. Baker) must bear in mind that the proceedings of the House have been taken up with these two matters—important matters—which have engaged the time, interest, and intellect of members of the opposition, for the most part, rather than members of the government.

Order Paper Questions

Mr. Clark: The government House leader has said that the atmosphere in the Chamber is not now conducive to an agreement on an extension of hours. I simply want to say on behalf of my party, and I am sure the spokesmen for the other parties on this side of the House will agree, that we are prepared to support an extension of the time of debate today to allow the agreed time to ensue for a discusion on national unity, and we do not want that decision to be delayed simply because the government House leader is in a state of pique. We are prepared, now, to agree to the extension of sitting time until 8.45 p.m. tonight.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Suggestions are being made by way of a point of order. There is no point of order to be dealt with at the moment.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): I think it would not be unreasonable for us to have discussions among the House leaders while debate goes on this afternoon. We might agree to the suggestion which has just been made by the Leader of the Official Opposition (Mr. Clark). However, I would offer an alternative, perhaps even two options. To sit right through until 8.45 p.m. would be unfair to everyone. Perhaps we might rise at six and sit from 8.p.m. until 10 p.m. Or maybe we could sit until 7 p.m., as now ordered, and then sit for an hour or two on another day. After all, we had the experience the other day of trying to make arrangements on the spur of the moment in this Chamber, and look where that got us.

Mr. Speaker: That is the difficulty in which we find ourselves—we are attempting by way of a point of order to determine whether or not agreement can be reached. It is not a proper vehicle for such a discussion. Some proposal would have to be made to the House for consideration. Obviously, the time is not right.

[Translation]

Mr. Lambert (Bellechasse): Mr. Speaker, I must admit that in the course of the afternoon an hon. member on the government side suggested the idea of extending the sitting from six to eight o'clock or from eight to ten o'clock with a break for supper between six and eight o'clock. I answered that yesterday we happened to suggest such an extension for today but he refused. This time, I put some conditions, as was my privilege. They were to tell me about this but I did not hear from them. As far as I am concerned, I stick to the status quo as defined in the motion which has been passed yesterday proposing to sit until seven o'clock tonight.

[English]

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the following questions will be answered today: Nos. 1,521, 1,553, 1,611, 1,784, 1,948, 2,320 and 2,464.

[Text]

DEMURRAGE CHARGES

Question No. 1,521—Mr. Malone:

What was the demurrage cost of grain ships for the crop year 1975-76 at the Port of (a) Vancouver (b) Thunder Bay (c) Churchill?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): In so far as the Canadian Wheat Board is concerned: The Canadian Wheat Board advises that their records are not kept by individual ports but are broken down only into East Coast and West Coast categories. Demurrage charges for the 1975-76 crop year for West Coast ports, the bulk of which were at Vancouver, were $3,114,919, while those for East Coast ports were $193,812. No demurrage costs were incurred at Thunder Bay and Churchill.

CONSULTING WORK FOR FARM CREDIT CORPORATION—MANITOBA INSTITUTE OF MANAGEMENT

Question No. 1,553—Mr. MacKay:

1. Was the Manitoba Institute of Management employed in 1975 and 1976 to do consulting work for the Farm Credit Corporation and, if so (a) were tenders called before the contract was awarded (b) who selected this firm and who decided to award it the contract?

2. Was the Chairman of the Farm Credit Corporation, Mr. Baldur Krustjanson, a director or a member of the Board of Manitoba Institute of Management when the Institute was employed to work for the Corporation?

3. How much has the Farm Credit Corporation paid in total to the Manitoba Institute of Management?

Hon. E. F. Whelan (Minister of Agriculture): Farm Credit Corporation advises: 1. Yes. The Institute assisted the Corporation in the preparation of terms of reference for a management audit program. (a) It was considered inappropriate to put the project out to tender until the terms of reference had been completed. (b) The selection was made by the Chairman and ratified by the Members of the Corporation.

2. Yes.

3. Payments made to the Manitoba Institute of Management Inc. were as follows:

Year	Consultation	Expenses	Total
1975	$30,940	$6,814	$37,754
1976	$33,660	$9,308	$42,968

DYLEX LTD.

Question No. 1,611—Mr. Jones:

1. Is Dylex Ltd., 637 Lakeshore Blvd. West, Toronto, Ontario, a federally incorporated company and, if so (a) on what date was it incorporated (b) what are the objects of the company (c) who are the officers and directors (d) who are the shareholders and, in each case (i) how many shares are held (ii) what is his/her address?

2. Is the company Canadian owned and, if not, what percentage is foreign?

3. What is the name and address of any branch, subsidiary or business associated or controlled in any way by Dylex Ltd. and what are the details of all holdings in each case?

4. Has any investigation or inquiry been made by the government into Dylex Ltd. and (a) if not, for what reason (b) if so, what are the details of the findings?

Hon. A. C. Abbott (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): 1. Yes. 1.(a) April 4, 1928. (b) The objects of the corporation are contained in the Letters Patent and are available to the public from the Corporations Branch of the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Note: Too lengthy to be contained in an answer). (c) Louis H. Posluns, James F. Kay, Wilfred Posluns, Irving Posluns, Jack Posluns, Samuel F. Kay, David Korn, Arthur Zaldin, Hubert J. Stitt, William Singer, Daniel W. Casey, Lionel Robins, Irving Levine, Harry Rosen, Kenneth Axelrod, George Fine, Henry Zagdanski, Samuel Shainhouse, Sydney Loftus, Schuyler M. Sigel. (d) Information disclosed by the Corporation in Section A of the Annual Return required to be filed under the Corporations and Labour Unions Returns Act reveals that of the total 869,079 issued shares, 145,422 are owned by Oelsak Limited—address: 637 Lakeshore Blvd. W., Toronto M5V 1A5. 117,477 are owned by Nadler Bros. Limited—address: 637 Lakeshore Blvd. W., Toronto M5V 1A5. There is no information on the owners of the other issued shares.

2. Eight hundred sixty-three thousand, seven hundred sixty-five shares are held in Canada while 5,314 are held in the United States.

3. See Table "A".

4. (a) No investigation has been made by the Corporations Branch into the affairs of Dylex Ltd. since no complaints from shareholders have been received. (b) In 1973, Dylex Ltd. (Fairweather Inc.) was convicted under section 36 of the Combines Investigation Act. For a separate case, again of section 36 of the Combines Investigation Act, Dylex Ltd. (Fairweather Inc.) was acquitted in March 1974.

Shares or other Corporations Held by Dylex Limited

	Manner	Date	Place
Family Fair Inc.	Letters Patent	January 12, 1968	Ontario	100 per cent
Dylex Acceptance Corp. Ltd.	Letters Patent	May 4, 1928	Dominion	100 per cent
Fashion Council Ltd.	Letters Patent	December 24, 1971	Ontario	100 per cent
Fairweather Inc.	Letters Patent	October 6, 1959	Ontario	52.9 per cent
Harry Rosen Men's Wear Ltd.	Letters Patent	October 11, 1956	Ontario	100 per cent
National Knitting Mills ltd.	Letters patent	July 26, 1955	Ontario	100 per cent
Bradford Spinners Ltd.	Letters Patent	December 3, 1964	Ontario	100 per cent
The Young Canadian Clothiers Corp. Ltd.	Letters Patent	April 21, 1970	Dominion	N/R
Canadian Clothiers Corp. Ltd.	Letters Patent	April 13, 1965	Ontario	100 per cent
Jermaines (1948) Ltd.			B.C.	100 per cent
Jermaines (Oakridge) Ltd.			B.C	N/R
Inactive Companies
Dylex Properties (Eastern) Ltd.	Letters Patent	December 14, 1960	Ontario
W. H. Leishman & Co. Ltd.	Letters Patent	September 3, 1933	Dominion
Crown Tailoring Co. Ltd.	Letters Patent	February 24, 1932	Ontario
W. R. Johnston & Co. Ltd.	Letters Patent	November 21, 1933	Ontario
Daroff of Canada Ltd.	Letters Patent	May 28, 1965	Dominion
Sobel, Newman & Kutner Ltd.	Letters Patent	February 5, 1965	Ontario

CIDA CONTRACTS AND CANADIAN POPULATION

February 23, 1977

Question No. 1,784—Mr. McKenzie:

1. How many Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA) consulting and construction contracts were awarded in (a) 1974 (b) 1975 (c) 1976 to (i) British Columbia (ii) Alberta (iii) Saskatchewan (iv) Manitoba (v) Ontario (vi) Quebec (vii) the Atlantic provinces (viii) other?

2. What percentage of the total number of CIDA consulting and construction contracts in (a) 1974 (b) 1975 (c) 1976 were awarded to (i) British Columbia (ii) Alberta (iii) Saskatchewan (iv) Manitoba (v) Ontario (vi) Quebec (vii) the Atlantic provinces (viii) other?

3. What percentage of the total Canadian population in (a) 1974 (b) 1975 (c) 1976 lived in (i) British Columbia (ii) Alberta (iii) Saskatchewan (iv) Manitoba (v) Ontario (vi) Quebec (vii) the Atlantic provinces?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): In so far as the Canadian International Development Agency is concerned: The answer to parts 1 and 2 of this question will be found in the following table.

Consulting and Construction Contracts

	1974		1975		1976
	Number	Per cent	Number	Per cent	Number	Per cent
British Columbia	14	12.3	14	12.3	10	8.1
Alberta	7	6.1	4	3.5	7	5.6
Saskatchewan	2	1.7	2	1.8	2	1.6
Manitoba	6	5.3	—	—	3	2.4
Ontario	34	29.8	53	46.4	34	27.4
Quebec	45	39.5	35	30.7	57	46.0
Atlantic Provinces	5	4.4	4	3.5	9	7.3
Other	1	0.9	2	1.8	2	1.6
	114	100.0	114	100.0	124	100.0

In so far as Statistics Canada is concerned: 3. The percentage of the total Canadian population in 1974, 1975 and 1976 in British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Ontario, Quebec and the Atlantic provinces is provided on the following chart.

Order Paper Questions

Percentage Distribution of Canadian Population for 1974, 1975 and 1976[a]

	1974	1975	1976
British Columbia	10.7%	10.8%	10.8%
Alberta	7.6	7.7	7.9
Saskatchewan	4.0	4.0	4.0
Manitoba	4.5	4.5	4.4
Ontario	36.1	36.1	36.1
Quebec	27.3	27.1	27.0
Atlantic Provinces	9.5	9.5	9.5
Territories	0.3	0.3	0.3
Canada	100.0	100.0	100.0
(Total population, in thousands)	(22,446)	(22,800)	(23,110)

[a] Post-censal population estimates produced by using 1971 census counts as the base. All these figures will be revised based on final counts from 1976 Census.

PARTIES HELD IN CONJUNCTION WITH THE PROCLAMATION OF NEW CITIZENSHIP ACT

Question No. 1,948—Mr. Epp:

1. What is the projected cost to the taxpayer for parties held or to be held in Vancouver, Kelowna, Prince George, Edmonton, Calgary, Regina, Saskatoon, Winnipeg, Oshawa, St. Catharines, Peterborough, London, Windsor, Sudbury, Thunder Bay, Waterloo, Barrie, Hamilton, Saint John, Halifax, Moncton and Charlottetown in conjunction with the proclamation of the new Citizenship Act?

2. What is the projected cost to the taxpayer for the liquor to be served at each of the parties?

Hon. John Roberts (Secretary of State): Costs incurred for receptions held as part of the information programme on the occasion of the Proclamation of the New Citizenship Act: 1. Vancouver, $4,052.85; Kelowna, $1,007.57; Prince George, $1,089.20; Edmonton, $1,516.00; Calgary, $1,890.20; Regina, $1,531.00; Saskatoon, $1,996.00; Winnipeg, $2,310.32; Oshawa, $1,611.64; St-Catharines, $1,775.73; Peterborough, $1,898.00; London, $2,500.38; Windsor, $1,704.12; Sudbury, $1,685.21; Thunder Bay, $1,211.40; Waterloo, $1,524.05; Barrie, $1,485.50; Hamilton, $1,794.57; Saint John, $2,535.45; Halifax, $1,852.58; Moncton, $1,691.13; Charlottetown, $1,910.45. Sub-total, $40,573.35.

2. Vancouver, $1,506.30; Kelowna, $152.35; Prince George, $263.20; Edmonton, $360.00; Calgary, $628.45; Regina, $474.50; Saskatoon, $930.00; Winnipeg, $763.02; Oshawa, $663.64; St-Catharines, $509.80; Peterborough, —; London, $1,189.00; Windsor, $791.12; Sudbury, $754.25; Thunder Bay, $543.40; Waterloo, $545.71; Barrie, $382.50; Hamilton, $711.50; Saint John, $1,405.15; Halifax, $1,152.17; Moncton, $847.50; Charlottetown, $845.15. Sub-total, $15,418.71.

TELECOMMUNICATIONS—COSTS OF EQUIPMENT AND SERVICES

Question No. 2,320—Mr. O'Sullivan:

1. With reference to the answer to Question No. 1,943, which stated in part, that the total cost included in the 1975-76 Estimates of the Department of Manpower and Immigration for telephone and other related communications equipment rentals was $4,412,836, what was the cost (a) incurred by (i) the Atlantic Provinces (ii) Quebec (iii) Ontario (iv) the Western Provinces (v) Yukon (vi) NWT (b) for (i) telephone equipment (ii) teletype equipment (iii) radio and other mobile communications devices rental (including any paging equipment) (iv) payments for actual communications services and rental of time on communications lines?

[Mr. Goodale.]

2. With reference to the answer to Question No. 1,943, which stated in part, that the total estimated cost included in the 1976-77 Estimates of the Department of Manpower and Immigration for telephone and other related communications equipment rentals was forecast as $4,153,189, what was the cost (a) incurred by (i) the Atlantic Provinces (ii) Quebec (iii) Ontario (iv) the Western Provinces (v) Yukon (vi) NWT (b) for (i) telephone equipment (ii) teletype equipment (iii) radio and other mobile communications equipment rentals (including any paging equipment) (iv) payments for actual communications services and rental of time on communications lines?

Hon. Bud Cullen (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): 1. (a)(i) Atlantic Provinces, $426,078; (ii) Quebec, $1,104,-829; (iii) Ontario, $1,823,503; (iv) Western, $1,034,457; (v) Yukon, $11,276; (vi) N.W.T., $12,693. (b) Atlantic: (i) $314,-912; (ii) $1,693; (iii) Nil; (iv) $109,473; (b) Quebec: (i) $858,404; (ii) $39,216; (iii) Nil; (iv) $207,209; (b) Ontario: (i) $1,484,820; (ii) $83,493; (iii) Nil; (iv) $255,190; (b) Western: (i) $642,981; (ii) $27; (iii) Nil; (iv) $391,449; (b) Yukon: (i) $5,698; (ii) Nil; (iii) Nil; (iv) $5,578; (b) North West Territories: (i) $8,008; (ii) Nil; (iii) Nil; (iv) $4,685.

2. (a)(i) Atlantic Provinces, $395,071; (ii) Quebec, $1,045,-935; (iii) Ontario, $1,741,349; (iv) Western, $943,245; (v) Yukon, $11,504; (vi) North West Territories, $16,085; (b) Atlantic: (i) $318,406; (ii) Nil; (iii) Nil; (iv) $76,665; (b) Quebec: (i) $821,185; (ii) $59,354; (iii) Nil; (iv) $165,396; (b) Ontario: (i) $1,448,961; (ii) $107,079; (iii) Nil; (iv) $185,309; (b) Western: (i) $682,167; (ii) Nil; (iii) Nil; (iv) $261,078; (b) Yukon: (i) $5,643; (ii) Nil; (iii) Nil; (iv) $5,861; (b) North West Territories: (i) $9,341; (ii) Nil; (iii) Nil; (iv) $6,744.

CBC—SUITS FOR OLYMPICS

Question No. 2,464—Mr. Beatty:

1. Did CBC have a number of employees measured for special suits to be used during the Olympics and, if so, how many?

2. Were any suits subsequently purchased and (a) if so (i) how many (ii) at what cost (b) if not, for what reason?

Hon. John Roberts (Secretary of State): I am informed by the CBC as follows: 1. No employees were measured for special suits. Certain items of clothing were supplied but were to the nearest stock size.

2. No. Separate items were purchased. (a)(i) Sufficient quantities were ordered for the more than 2,000 Olympics personnel under the control of CBC as host broadcaster as well as for personnel involved in CBC domestic coverage. The clothing purchased served as a uniform and readily identifiable appearance for these personnel. (ii) 198 melon jackets at $63.40 each, 16 blue jackets at $63.40 each, 1,997 "common image" windbreakers at $26.17 each, 16 melon pants or skirts at $30.80 each, and 4,046 blue pants or skirts at $25 each. (b) Not applicable.

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Shall the remaining questions be allowed to stand?

Mr. McCleave: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order involving all members of the House and arising out of the answers just given to us by the Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Goodale). Looking at today's order paper I find there are at least 24 questions of a vintage more than a year old. Some of them were placed as early as November 3, 1975, on the order paper of another session.

● (1710)

I simply want to say that it is not acceptable to have 24 questions standing in the name of one person, which happens to be the hon. member for Leeds, (Mr. Cossitt) remaining unanswered. There is more than inability to answer at work here; there is vindictiveness at work, and I for one am not prepared to be a member of a free assembly which allows the government to show spite, malice, and deliberate indifference toward any of the members of this assembly.

I am not going to go through all of them because we should get back to the national unity debate, but question No. 31 in the name of the hon. member for Leeds is almost a classic illustration of the problem he is up against. Let me read just part of it:

With reference to the answer to question No. 3,573 of the first session of the 30th parliament, asking details on government business awarded to Urbanetics Limited which stated: "See answer to parliamentary question No. 3,359" of the first session of the 30th parliament, for what reason does the government consider this possible since question No. 3,359 of the first session of the 30th parliament has not been answered?

I think that is contempt of an almost unbelievable degree. I just want to tell the parliamentary secretary this, that some of those questions are going to be answered, and they are going to be answered starting tomorrow, or I will use the technique or moving the adjournment of the House on every possible occasion on behalf of the hon. member for Leeds until the government comes to its senses and revokes this revolting habit simply because it does not like the fact that a member has moved from one side of this political principality to the other and has changed from being a Liberal to being a Conservative.

In any event, I have made my indignation known and I am going to use every technique I can against the parliamentary secretary and the stonewalling of the government.

Mr. Goodale: Mr. Speaker, my hon. friend from Halifax-East Hants and I have had an opportunity to work rather closely with one another—at least, I had thought that was the case—in our work on one particular standing committee of this House, as well as in the House itself, and I am amazed and disappointed at what he has just said, particularly with regard to his imputing of motives to me and to the government in the process of answering questions which appear on the order paper. What he has just said is not only untrue, but I think unfair, and leaves a wrong impression with all members of the House and certainly with those who watch the proceedings of the House. I must take strong exception to the tone and the tenor of what he said, because it is simply untrue.

I have indicated on other occasions when dealing with a similar point of order that it is our objective to endeavour to answer all of the questions which appear on the order paper before the end of this session. I indicated to hon. members that in recent days some members had placed rather extensive lists of questions on the order paper which had the effect of delaying the process of answering questions simply because of the new bulk of questions appearing on the order paper.

Nevertheless, Mr. Speaker, we do intend to respond to all of the questions before the end of this session. We will do our level best to do that, and I can inform the House that with respect to some of the questions to which the hon. gentleman referred in his remarks just now I think I will be in a position to provide answers within the next couple of days. But I can assure him that the suspicions that he has expressed with respect to motives are absolutely without foundation.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Shall the remaining questions be allowed to stand?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

* * *

MOTIONS FOR PAPERS

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I ask that all the notices of motions for papers be allowed to stand for today.

Mr. Speaker: Is that agreed?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

[English]

CONFEDERATION

DEBATE ON NATIONAL UNITY

The House resumed, from Tuesday, July 5, consideration of the motion of Mr. Trudeau:

That members of this House dedicate themselves anew to the continuing unity of Canada as a free and independent country organized on the basis of a federal form of government with two official languages and a diversity of cultures.

And on the amendment of Mr. Clark (p. 7321).

Mr. Leonard C. Jones (Moncton): Mr. Speaker, last night at 11 o'clock when we adjourned I had just quoted a paragraph from the document which had been tabled in this House some weeks ago called "A National Understanding". Perhaps that should be re-entitled "A National Misunderstanding". The paragraph I had read reads, in part, as follows:

In any event, the federal government asserts that it is incompatible with the unity of Canada that Canadian citizens should be able, when they move from province to province, to send their children to schools where they are taught in their own language.

What this paragraph means, Mr. Speaker, I have no idea. But what it says is that it is not beneficial to national unity for a parent to be able to place a child in school of his or her own language when moving from province to province. Surely the language in that document must be in error, because the statement goes on to say that facilities should be provided—we might conclude in the French language—for those transferring from the province of Quebec to any other province.

Already this has conflicted with the previous statement on incompatibility with national unity. The paragraph goes on to say that facilities will continue to be provided in the province of Quebec for those transferring into that province. How can English language facilities be continued in the province of Quebec when Bill 1 states that people coming into the province must be educated in the French language? In the next paragraph of this statement the government agrees with the policy that Bill 1 promotes, that immigrants into the province of Quebec must be educated in the French langugage regardless of their origin, or even their wishes. The government feels this must be the case if the province is to remain predominantly a French language province.

The government also states in the same paragraph that the same choice must be available to immigrants to other provinces. It would seem to me that there is no choice for immigrants in the province of Quebec.

We have allowed Quebec to have a double standard for too long now. It is time we realized that we cannot continue to live as a nation with ghettos of English and ghettos of French. We must become Canadians. And that goes for Quebec too; they must become Canadians if they are to remain in Confederation.

In closing, may I say that the Quebec story is a sad one indeed. It leaves all of us, in the maritime provinces particularly, in a peculiar situation. My suggestion is that the Quebec problem, the national unity problem, be taken out of the political arena. It is time that members of parliament, each and every one of us, realized that we do not sit here as party members but as the representatives of the people of Canada. It is time that the government turned to the realities of the situation at hand and stopped making a bit of a mockery of disunity. It is time it stopped making our disunity a popularity issue.

It is perhaps true that if a non-partisan committee comprising members of parliament, Senators, MLA's and elected officials of all kinds met on a tripartite basis in all parts of the country, and non-partisan regional committees were set up across the country, we just might make some headway. But as it now stands the politicians are inflating the emotions of all concerned persons, so that soon a viable solution may not be possible due to emotion upheaval.

If unity is to be achieved, equality must be the law. It must be the rule. We must have equality of race, religion, creed, of province and region. Politicians alone cannot begin to mend the problems of the state. The people of this country must also be consulted. Unlike other members here, I suppose I have to say why I do not agree entirely with forcing the province of Quebec to stay in Confederation, or in unity. Unity can be accomplished only if all parties are willing. There must be a consensus ad idem before we can reach any kind of agreement. Likewise, for reconciliation there must be some consensus.

• (1720)

Unity can only be attained if all Canadians become true Canadians. Unity and the repairing of a state can be fulfilled only if we all take the time to work together toward a common goal. The best place to start uniting this country is with a common goal of work for all. Some refer to this as full employment. I suggest we can have something approaching full employment. In seeking truth and happiness, we will find unity and harmony in our country, and in seeking unity and harmony among our peoples we will find a better nation, one which is strong and free.

I find it difficult to bring myself to support a motion which alleges and states continuing unity. There has not been national unity but a great deal of disunity, and economic problems which have been caused as a result of improper implementation of programs, hastily and ill-conceived by the federal government, and by some of the provincial governments as well.

National unity cannot be achieved in debate by politicians, but like love and brotherhood can be only achieved by people working together with God's will and counsel. As to linguistics, which is only part of the national unity question—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Order. I regret to inform the hon. member his allotted time has expired.

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Halifax): Mr. Speaker, yesterday, my leader made a tremendous speech. I did not fully realize what a shattering day it was for the government until the two foxes in the government today concocted this method of trying to capture the media.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Stanfield: The second fox being my old friend, the government House leader.

I enter this debate today with a feeling of great sadness. It is almost exactly ten years ago that I, as the premier of Nova Scotia, decided to enter federal politics. I thought I might be able to do something to strengthen our country, and in particular to improve the understanding between French-speaking and English-speaking Canadians, and also to improve economic opportunities in the Atlantic provinces. It makes me sad to view the sorry state today of the economy of those provinces, but it moves me almost to tears to see our country economically hobbled and menaced by threatened disintegration.

I wish to speak to this House very bluntly, and I should like to be heard, even though some members may not like what I say. What I say will be said very deliberately. I do not wish to add to the difficulties of our country, but we must be frank with one another and with Canadians. Disunity today is not entirely the fault of the government, but the government ought to set the tone and should give leadership. I say that it is not just the government's fault, because some individuals and groups outside the government and outside the Liberal party have pushed concepts of this country which are clearly divisive.

The right hon. member for Prince Albert (Mr. Diefenbaker) has expressed concern about the rise of provincialism. Certainly excessive provincialism is divisive, but there are concepts and goals which transcend provincial or regional lines and which are even more dangerous to Canadian unity because they are divisive, even if they are put forward in the name of national unity. Thus, our present crisis is not just the fault of our present government.

This government has too often engaged in confrontation and polarization, rather than reconciliation. We saw these tactics employed to set the east against the west back in 1973 and 1974 in connection with oil, for the purpose of trying to secure votes in an election, leaving wounds in the west that will be many years in healing. The present emergency relates to the province of Quebec. Admittedly one cannot reconcile to federalism those who are fully committed to separatism; but did this government have to polarize opinion in Quebec between federalism and separatism? You either accepted the Trudeau concept of federalism or you were stigmatized.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Stanfield: This federal government made no effort to reconcile Quebec nationalists who were federalists but were also concerned by the heavy hand of Ottawa in areas they consider vital to the future of their province—language and culture. Whether or not this hard line was maintained by the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) and his colleagues, this was maintained tragically through an underestimate of the strength of Quebec nationalism. It was not very long ago that the Prime Minister said separatism in the province of Quebec was dead. Whether or not this was a result of a tragic mistake in judgment is speculation. What is beyond speculation is that the Trudeau government helped to polarize opinion in the province of Quebec.

I am very unhappy that the Prime Minister chose to risk the future of our country on a shoot-out between himself and René Lévesque. In all honesty and fairness I have to say that Mike Pearson would never have done it. The lesson in this for the future is not that we should now try to conciliate Mr. Lévesque or members of his government—dedicated separatists—but that we should create confidence in the minds and hearts of Quebecers who are not separatists but yet do not buy the Trudeau orthodoxy.

The ministers of the government are reported to be urging an early election on the basis that this would settle things down. My attitude toward the next election is a little different from theirs. I will not be running again. My professional interests will not be involved. A federal election will prove nothing as far as the future of Quebec is concerned. Because of traditions in that province, the Liberals will probably win a substantial majority of the seats. This will in no way indicate that Premier Lévesque could not win a substantial majority for the provincial government when the chooses to go to the people. We could conceivably go on for some time with federal Liberals and the Parti Québécois each doing well in the province of Quebec, with our country churning in a continuous turmoil. Perhaps the government and its supporters are happy with such a prospect. Obviously they are happy with the way things are going. One can observe this daily in this Chamber. Politically they were in a bad situation before the election of the Lévesque government. If the Lévesque government had not been elected, this government would have to invent it. They have tried to wring every last ounce of political benefit from crisis, and apparently will continue to do so while pretending not to.

• (1730)

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Stanfield: But our problems of unity, the future of this nation, surely are, or should be, beyond partisan rivalry. The future of our country is at stake. The country was created by co-operation between politicians who had been bitter opponents but recognized that only through co-operation and joint effort could everything be prevented from going down the drain.

One of the alarming aspects of the present danger is that the government sees this crisis as a political benefactor. The Prime Minister has not even called in the provincial premiers; he has not even consulted or invited other federal party leaders for private discussions. No doubt his supporters will point to the Pepin-Robarts commission as a non-partisan response to this crisis. I do not object to that commission, indeed I wish it well, but our problems will be solved, if they are solved at all, as the Prime Minister himself has said, by the elected representatives of the people. The commission may be helpful, but it is far short of an indication that the Government of Canada is putting the interests of the country ahead of its own partisan electoral interests.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Stanfield: There is one area in which we have had bi-partisanship or, more accurately, multi-partisanship, that is, bilingualism. We have had multi-partisanship toward institutional bilingualism not because the government sought it but because the leadership in the opposition parties supported institutional bilingualism. I supported it because I considered it to be in the national interest, as well, frankly, as in the long term interests of my own party, but it was and is an unpopular policy in a large portion of this country, in the west, through much of Ontario and through much of the Atlantic provinces. In my own province of Nova Scotia public opinion was heavily opposed to that policy as it was perceived by the people.

Those of us who supported and continue to support bilingualism do not expect any medals, but it was not easy for many members of my party to vote for a measure that their constituents thoroughly disapproved of as they perceived it. It was particularly difficult for members from the west, for reasons that the hon. member for Lisgar (Mr. Murta) indicated very clearly last evening. It was difficult for many members, but who was it who tried to induce as many members as possible to vote against the Official Languages Act? Who was it who arranged by stealth to have the necessary number of members call for a recorded vote in order to put the greatest possible constituency pressure on members? Who was it? It was the hon. member for Crowfoot (Mr. Horner).

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Stanfield: And that is only part of the story. To find Canadians whose conception of Canada differs more from the Prime Minister's than that of the hon. member for Crowfoot you would have to look pretty hard.

Yesterday the Prime Minister emphasized the need for accommodations. A few weeks before his government launched its charter on language rights, about which the minister will probably be speaking in a few minutes, the Prime Minister made a deal with the hon. member for Crowfoot. Is this what the Prime Minister means by accommodation? The Prime Minister has betrayed those who supported him at no small cost to themselves in putting in place and trying to gain acceptance for the central theme of his conception of Canada.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Stanfield: I do not know of any act of comparable cynicism committed by any prime minister of this country. Machiavelli would be proud of him. What hypocrisy! But the cynicism and the hypocrisy of the Prime Minister do not weaken in any way my support, nor the support of my leader, which is more important, for language equality in Canada. Bilingualism is generous in spirit and essentially necessary to our country.

Miss Bégin: That is not what Joe said yesterday.

Mr. Stanfield: That is exactly what Joe said yesterday.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Grafftey: And you know it, Monique.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Stanfield: Do not get too excited over there; there is more to come. Be patient.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Order, please. The hon. member for Halifax (Mr. Stanfield) has the floor. Will he please address the Chair?

Mr. Stanfield: I say that a policy of bilingualim is essential to the country.

A policy of quasi-unilingualism—English across the country with French permitted in Quebec and perhaps around the national capital—would not work, quite apart from any concept of justice in the country. It would be resented, of course, by the Francophones. Needless to say, unilingual French in any part of the country would be resented by the Anglophones.

Having said that, one must recognize and state—as the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Clark) did yesterday and we would be wise to recognize it—that bilingualism does have its divisive aspects. For the English speaking minority in Quebec and for the French speaking minority in other provinces, bilingualism has a very strong positive appeal if it carries conviction—I do not know how much conviction the government's appeal carries today. It is their best assurance of something like equality of language.

An hon. Member: You sound bitter.

Mr. Stanfield: I am bitter because of the mess in which I find my country to be.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Grafftey: He sacked you; aren't you bitter?

Mr. Stanfield: I only have a few minutes left.

I believe that institutional bilingualism is necessary in Canada, and I think that should be reasonably clear by now. But it is folly to believe that bilingualism by itself or in itself will unify this country. I believe that millions of Canadians, including a good many in Quebec, accept it grudgingly at best. It would be of no service to Canada to pretend otherwise. I believe that Canadians should be encouraged to learn both French and English. I believe we should make that far easier than we have in the past.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Stanfield: I would like to see both English speaking and French speaking minorities in Canada able to go to school, to be taught, in their own language.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Stanfield: Minority language rights are a worthy goal for Canada and for Canadians, but language rights—and it is equally important to be realistic—if we can achieve them, and I hope we can, will not unite us. Language differences will continue to cause tension.

I hope that we in Canada can overcome the feelings of intolerence and insecurity that are so often associated with language differences, but if we are wise we will not try to build national unity on language differences. I think that this is a fundamental error of the Prime Minister. Language differences are a cause of stress and strain, not cohesion. Certainly they are too a source of enrichment, but why pretend they are a source of unity? Certainly the language of English and French speaking minorities should be respected, both in terms of decency and for the future of our country, but we will have a far better chance of achieving unity if we recognize the stress and strain and look elsewhere for our national cohesion.

● (1740)

I disagree with those who oppose bilingualism, and I will continue as long as I live to fight people who oppose bilingualism in Canada. We are a bilingual country, and recognition of this truth is essential to our survival as a country, but bilingualism will not by itself unite Canada. The government tragically under-estimated the difficulty of persuading Canadians across the country to accept bilingualism, and now the government seems, unfortunately, to be making bilingualism the heart of its program of national unity.

Mr. Sharp: Who said that?

Mr. Stanfield: I listened to the Prime Minister yesterday. I read the charter and listened to the Secretary of State (Mr. Roberts). I distinguish between the government's political strategy and its unification strategy. Its political strategy, outside Quebec, is very simple; it is Rene Levesque. The Prime Minister and the Minister without Portfolio will not be running in Alberta on language policy. They will be running against Rene Levesque; that is very simple. The government's unification policy seems to be bilingualism. Admittedly, it throws in some other things like regional equality and equality of opportunities, but with the regional disparity and the unemployment we have today nobody takes the government very seriously in those areas.

The government seems to be putting all its marbles on bilingualism, and that is not good enough. Canada is English-speaking and French-speaking, but it is much more. We must accept Canada's duality, and cheerfully, but we must accentuate the "much more", not by having a phony war on poverty, a phony quest for a just society, or a phony war against controls one time and a phony crusade for controls another time, and not by cynical deals which compromise the government's principles and its integrity. Let us start with a little simple honesty. We need goals which are both realistic and challenging, goals which recognize our right to differ and which recognize our right to be different but goals that sublimate our differences. That is our challenge. And I thank the House for listening to me.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. John Roberts (Secretary of State): Mr. Speaker, I have followed the debate so far with great interest and some dismay. There have been many moving, eloquent, and challenging speeches. I am going to confine my remarks to the speeches made by the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Clark) and by the hon. member for Oshawa-Whitby (Mr. Broadbent), even though there have been other speeches which deserve response. I am going to do that because, to my surprise, the debate has revelaed much greater divergences among the party leaders as to the approaches which should be taken in relation to this major issue of national unity than I thought was the case before the debate began.

It is clear that we are now embarked as a society on the process of a fundamental re-examination of our governmental structures. I am going to give some warnings and state some reservations, not about undertaking that process but about some of the dangers in that process.

At the outset I want to associate myself with the comments made by the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) yesterday when he said that he, and indeed the Liberal party, do not stand for the status quo. Far from it; on several occasions we have indicated that we are committed to considering, together with the people of Canada, the possibility of basic changes in the direction of the country, in our federal institutions and in our constitution. I support that.

I hope that the comments I make will not be interpreted as an indication that that open approach is undesirable, but I want to express hesitations I have about the expectations which may be aroused in that process. The first reservation has to do with the idea of decentralization, which has become "a buzz word" or a magic wand, described by many people as an approach which will almost automatically resolve the difficulties which are facing our Confederation.

The Leader of the Opposition yesterday made himself the exponent of the view that decentralization of jurisdiction and administration is the proper response to the problems we now face. I think the hon. member for Oshawa-Whitby gave the proper reply to that suggestion. In Canada we already have one of the most decentralized federations in the world, and in the last 15 years it has become much more so. Yet it is hard to say that in the process of decentralization we have abated the forces which have a tendency to divide this country. It is difficult to believe that further moves in this direction will automatically result in a resolution of the tensions within our society and that they will keep it together.

It is interesting to reflect on the analysis Mr. Parizeau, the minister of finance of Quebec, made when describing what led him to become a separatist. Mr. Parizeau said that the basis for his decision was his belief that Canada has already become so decentralized by way of giving powers to the provinces that it will be unable to maintain itself effectively as a single society and as a single economy, and that therefore he had to go whole hog and embrace the separatism philosophy in order to use the state to achieve desirable public goals. I believe he is wrong, but I think the reasoning which led him to adopt his decision—decentralization of federal powers having gone too far—is something which should be a warning to those who believe that the resolution of our problems could be found axiomatically in a further decentralization of federal power. That is not to say that we should not discuss decentralization. We should look at powers in terms of functional needs and decide which are most appropriate to which level of government. However, it would be a tragic mistake to believe that decentralization itself is a magic wand which will resolve our problems.

I believe that the same is true of constitutional change. There are those who embrace the idea of almost any kind of constitutional change as a means of resolving our difficulties. The fact is that twice in the past 15 years we have embraced constitutional change. We have tried that direction.

Yesterday the Leader of the Opposition objected to the federal government's "buying into" provincial areas of jurisdiction. He must know that at the Victoria Conference the federal government suggested that the federal spending power be limited. Twice in the past 15 years we have not succeeded in finding a solution through constitutional negotiations. If we have not been able to succeed in 15 years of negotiations with provincial governments, which at least accepted the idea of the maintenance of Canada as one country, what basis for optimism do we have that we can successfully undertake negotiations now when we have as one important factor on the other side, the government of Quebec, which refuses even to accept the idea of the maintenance of Canada as a fundamental basis for negotiation? In the words of my namesake and friend—sometimes it is confusing—the hon. John Robarts, "it takes two to make a deal," two to negotiate, and unless we have at least the common understanding that we are seeking to preserve some entity called Canada, negotiations cannot possibly lead to a successful resolution.

Mr. Paproski: You don't want to negotiate.

Mr. Malone: You can't negotiate with a gun.

Mr. Roberts: It is certainly worth discussing different approaches or different views at the provincial level or with the people of Canada. Perhaps we can agree on precise grounds for negotiation, but negotiations should not be undertaken simply for their own sake. They should be undertaken when there are reasonably optimistic grounds to think that those negotiations could lead to success.

It would be a tragedy if these buzz words or magic wands, as I have called them, were taken for complete reality; it would be a tragedy if they persuade us that if we simply undertake constitutional negotiations, or a re-thinking of powers, or a different management of economic policy, our problems would be resolved. That would lead us away from the main question which confronts us; it would be a tragedy to believe we can escape confronting the present "moment of truth".

● (1750)

As the Prime Minister said yesterday, we have, as a society and as a country, arrived at the moment of truth. It is not, as the Leader of the New Democratic Party said, a moment of truth in which the Prime Minister claims that Quebecers must decide between being Quebecers and Canadians. That is a complete distortion of the moment of truth. The question that Quebecers face is whether they wish to be Quebecers within Canada or Quebecers without Canada.

There is a moment of truth, too, for English-speaking Canadians, which calls upon them to decide what kind of Canada they wish to create, what idea of the country they have for the future.

It is not simply a question of leadership. Yesterday the Leader of the New Democratic Party asked why have we abandoned leaderhip in the province of Quebec? Why let René Lévesque take the action? Why have we not been saying that French should be the language of work in the province of Quebec? Why have we not been doing the same things to indicate our support for strengthening the Francophone culture and language in Quebec? Mr. Speaker, where has the hon. member for Oshawa-Whitby been? We have been saying those things. The Prime Minister has been saying them. He showed leadership in Quebec before he entered this House. He showed it as Prime Minister in the speech he gave in Quebec City after the election of November 15, and in the speech he gave to the United States Congress. Do hon. members opposite think the Prime Minister has not provided leadership, that the public does not see that leadership in view of the place we stand in the opinion polls of this country? As a Ukrainian friend of mine used to say, "It is a nonsense."

Mr. Hnatyshyn: I do not think you have any Ukrainian friends.

Mr. Roberts: Mr. Speaker, I have a Ukrainian friend sitting right beside the hon. member.

Mr. Paproski: Not if you keep on like that.

Mr. Roberts: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the jibes of hon. members. Seriously, however, I think we have arrived at the point where there is a fundamental divergence of opinion between political parties, and I think that is important.

The question is: what is our idea of this country we are trying to build? I said earlier that I approached the debate with some sense of dismay. A large part of that stems from the remarks made yesterday by the Leader of the Opposition. I would have thought that those remarks might be the result of some imprecision or carelessness of language in debate, but he restated them quite clearly last night on television.

His remarks, reported at page 7319 of Hansard, reveal an idea of this country at variance with the idea of Canada that we, as a government, hold for our country. It is clear that he regards bilingualism, or official languages, not as something which unites this country but as something which divides it; not as something that is valuable and to be welcomed, but something that is grudging—

An hon. Member: That is true.

Mr. Roberts: The hon. member says that is true. I hope it is not, and I trust that I am not misstating the comments of the Leader of the Opposition. He regards it not as something which draws us together but something which drives us apart. He feels that unity in our country is despite bilingualism, and is not based upon it.

That is a fundamental divergence from the approach we take on this side of the House. We do not regard two official languages as something to be accepted grudgingly. We do not believe it is divisive. The Leader of the Opposition said that two official languages, by definition, divide us. I suppose you could say the fact that there are two sexes, by definition, does not unite. Yet in fact those divisions are the basis of solidly uniting a family unit. So it is with two official languages. It is our view that the existence of two official languages is a keystone to our society—not one that we are reluctant about, not one that is regrettable or a source of division but something that we welcome and embrace. It is at the heart of our idea of Canada.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Roberts: There are, of course, many other elements of national unity and we have talked about them in this debate. I am not suggesting that bilingualism is the sole pillar of unity in this country. It is essential to the fabric of this country and to the survival of this country that Canadians accept it as a strand that is to be welcomed and appreciated, not something to be scathingly diminished as the Leader of the Opposition did yesterday. He reminds me of a man who stumbles over opportunity, picks himself up, dusts himself off, and races away from that opportunity. Two official languages give opportunity to this country and instead of slighting it we should support it, welcome it, and make it the idea of the country we are trying to build for ourselves, our children, and our children's children.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Roberts: If the hon. gentleman wishes to maintain that idea of Canada he expressed in debate yesterday, it illustrates the fundamental division between this side of the House and that side,—a division on which at one stage the people of this country will have to pronounce.

I should like to refer to the consequent comments of the hon. gentleman. Speaking of the situation in Quebec, as reported at page 7320 of Hansard he said:

> If they have doubts about the future of their language and their culture within the boundaries of their province, they do know that their National Assembly, which represents a population more than 80 percent French-speaking, will always be much more conscious and more capable to act to preserve the French language and culture than any other legislature, including the parliament of Canada.

That is also a fundamental divergence from the position taken on this side of the House. It is our argument to French-speaking Quebecers that the maintenance of Canada, of a federation, which contains two official languages, is a better and safer means of protecting the language and culture about which they care than if Quebec separated and became isolated from the other contingent parts of Canada.

It is an overriding objective of our policy to ensure that there is a context for the survival and flourishing of the French language within the province of Quebec and outside it. That is an essential preoccupation of this government, and we do not believe it can be safely left to a provincial government alone.

I want to say to the hon. gentleman that the argument he presented is the argument the separatists presented in the province of Quebec—that the legislature of Quebec and the government of Quebec are a better safeguard for what they care about than the maintenance of the federal system. If the hon. gentleman believes that—I hope he does not, but that is what he said—that, too, is something upon which the country will soon have to pronounce. I say that seriously because—and I think also of the hon. member for Halifax (Mr. Stanfield)—it seems to me that the Conservative party has now brought forward an idea of Canada in their approach to official languages and what they wish this country to be, that I for one cannot possibly accept. I think that is of fundamental importance.

I do not want to conclude without referring to the speech of the Leader of the New Democratic Party. The major part of his speech was interesting but I do not have time to discuss it all. I want to refer to his closing remarks, however, because there too I find a rejection of the idea of Canada that we are trying to build on this side of the House—a clear rejection which I think is of extraordinary importance. In the last paragraph of his speech, reported at page 7325 of Hansard, he said:

> What I think is really required in our country, more than anything else, is a leadership which says to the people of Quebec and to ordinary Canadians outside the province that there are, in fact, two great cultures. I say that to the Prime Minister who tries to pretend that somehow it is simply a multicultural society. It is multicultural, but he knows as well as I do that there is a predominant Francophone culture established as a society in the province of Quebec, and there is the English community outside of it.

I say to him that his idea of Canada which is that there is one country, two languages and two cultures, is fundamentally in opposition to the idea this government has developed. What we stand for is one country, two languages, and a plurality of cultures.

● (1800)

Mr. Paproski: At election time.

Mr. Roberts: Mr. Speaker, if the hon. gentleman wants to fight an election on that issue I, for one, am prepared to enter the lists; and because of my personal friendship with the hon. member I should like to see him return after the election, but there would not be many beside him on the benches opposite.

Mr. Paproski: I meant you only talk about other cultures at election time.

Mr. Roberts: I say to the hon. member for Oshawa-Whitby—I am sorry he is not here, but I am sure the party's former leader will convey my words to him—that he should be precise and know what those words of his mean. I hope he is not saying he espouses a bicultural country. Our diversity of cultural heritages is not something to be fobbed off, but something to be supported, something which should thrive, for it is an essential, integral part of what we are trying to build.

An hon. Member: Only at election time.

Mr. Roberts: Let me also say, because I do not have much more time, that the situation of—

[Translation]

. . . Francophones outside Quebec and that minority is very important. That is the core of the policy we are following. That is not something to publish or use during partisan debates. We are really concerned about creating a situation whereby these groups will be able to preserve their culture so that it may survive and flourish outside and inside Quebec as well.

National Unity

[English]

We have a marvellous opportunity in this country. People outside this country look in wonder and amazement at a country which has so much in human and physical resources, and a long tradition in history and culture, but which is at the point of trying to decide whether it can continue as one country, whether it can survive. In one sense I suspect the election of November 15 was useful, for it made us much more conscious of what it is we are proud of in this country and what we are trying to create. We are reflecting in the present debate on this idea of one country. That idea of our country for us is one of two languages, two languages at the heart of that country, as a keystone for what we are doing. They should not be accepted as an unfortunate necessity and a temporary phenomenon, but as something as the heart of two countries—one country and two languages—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Paproski: Two countries, that is right. You said it, John.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Order, please.

Mr. Roberts: I did not mean that. I corrected myself immediately. We have one country, at the heart of which are two languages but many cultures.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Order, please. The hon. member's time has expired.

Mr. Malone: So, you believe in two countries.

Mr. Roberts: We believe in one country in which there are two languages and many cultures—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Order, please.

[Translation]

Mr. Adrien Lambert (Bellechasse): Mr. Speaker, that is for me a serious duty to take part in the debate on the motion put forward by the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau), which reads as follows:

> That members of this House dedicate themselves anew to the continuing unity of Canada as a free and independent country organized on the basis of a federal form of government with two official languages and a diversity of cultures.

Mr. Speaker, in a few words, that motion sums up the whole history of our country, Canada, which was founded on the recognition of equal rights for two official languages, French and English, and of various cultures. The constitutional debate did not arise overnight, it is not likely to end tomorrow; however, during the last few years, a certain consciousness appeared and expressed itself in a real constitutional activity. This debate on Canadian harmony, by its nature, will show the need for Canadians like me to conceive a new constitution in order to replace the existing one which is essentially a deal reached between two nations that founded our country.

Since 1760, Canada has experienced many constitutional changes. The first regular constitution, born of the British system, was the royal proclamation of October 7, 1763, effective August 10, 1764. It is at that time that New France was officially named the province of Quebec, but its territory was broken up later and King George III submitted the people to English law and abolished French law. In 1774, the Statute of Quebec recognized the French fact and re-established the French civil law, but the province was administered by London. Still the Statute of Quebec may be considered as the great charter of Canadian freedoms. Therefore, it is important that Canadians of 1977 be aware of the detailed events which have developed and which constitute the history of our country.

This constitution of 1774 raised the dissatisfaction of the English element, just as in 1977 there are some who challenge the reality of equal rights for the French-speaking and English-speaking people even if the number of citizens of either language is not equal. No wonder then that in 1977 many Canadians of either tongue want a new constitution, which would be better suited to the present time, because for the last 300 years our country has had several forms of constitution, but that did not check its growth and the fact that it has become an important nation whose reputation is well known at the international level.

In 1791, the new constitution had the effect of dividing the province of Quebec in two distinct governments, one for Higher Canada now known as the province of Ontario and the other, Lower Canada, that became the province of Quebec. Thus, this new constitution recognized the political existence by giving the colony a separatist constitution set up under the model of the British constitution of that time, and this constitution created the first legislative assembly. That was the beginning of our constitutional struggles.

In 1837, Canada was the scene of the patriots' uprising, which resulted in the Union Act of 1840. Later on, the delegates of both Upper and Lower Canada, together with those from New Brunswick and Nova Soctia, took part in a conference in London which began in December 1866, and it is during this conference that a new constitution was adopted and received royal assent on July 1, 1867, a document which is known as the British North America Act. Then was born the federal government as we know it today. That is why we have every reason to say that the federal government was born from the will of the provinces and that it must still be subjected to the provinces and not become their master.

During the debate which took place before the adoption of the final constitution, two opposite approaches of the Canadian state had collided. Some, with Macdonald, were in favour of a single state in what they called at the time the legislative union of the provinces. Others, with Cartier and the French-Canadian delegates, were seeking a federal system which left a wide margin for self-government by the provinces. That formula was finally adopted, and it was recognized that French Canadians would never have agreed to join Confederation if it had not guaranteed the legal existence of the French element in Canada. Thus, section 92(13) confirmed the existence of separate civil law in Quebec, and section 94 gave the federal Parliament authority to make provision for the uniformity of all laws in Ontario, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia all the while it being forbidden to change the Civil Code of Quebec adopted in 1866. That is why we can say with reason that Quebec is not a province like the others. Which does not mean that it is in any way worse than the others for all that. No, Quebec is not a province like the others, and the Fathers of Confederation were the first to say so. It was confirmed by the constitutional act of 1867 and it has been thus for 110 years. One Prime Minister of Canada alone spoke one unfortunate phrase, and he lived to regret it because it gave rise to much controversy in Quebec. Indeed, the right hon. Louis St. Laurent one day said that Quebec was a province like the others, which does not reflect the truth of the matter.

In 1977, the constitution no longer meets adequately the needs of either Anglophones or Francophones. More than ever before throughout Canada, there is talk of the need for a new constitution if Canadian unity is to be preserved. The problem does not exist only since the November 15 elections; it is not only since then that Quebecers in particular are not satisfied with the interpretation and application of the constitution by the federal government. Under Mr. Duplessis' government, Quebec fought against the centralization of the governments in Ottawa, and Mr. Duplessis insisted on their giving the provinces more autonomy. Remember the alliance between Mr. Duplessis and Premier Hepburn of Ontario to check the centralization of the then Liberal government. The struggle continued under Mr. Jean Lesage, the Quebec premier. He was the one who first used the expression "State of Quebec". Daniel Johnson went one step further and spoke of equality or independence. His reasoning was very logical. Bertrand, who succeeded him, continued in the same vein. Robert Bourassa, the Liberal premier of Quebec, even while Ottawa had a Liberal Prime Minister, could not get along with it where the constitution was concerned. Since 1867, the federal government has centralized the power and allowed French Canadians to be the victims of many injustices.

An English Canadian, named Gordon Robertson, recalled some of these injustices when speaking before the graduates of Dalhousie University in May 1977, and I quote:

> His thesis is clear: "For more than a century, both at the provincial level, except for Quebec, and at the national level, our history is the denial of the very principle of the coexistence on an equal footing—or even simply of the coexistence—of both cultural communities."
>
> Here are the facts:

He recalls a few facts, and I quote:

> In 1885, Louis Riel was hanged because he attempted to defend the interest of French-speaking Metis in the west.
>
> In 1890, Manitoba failed completely to consider the rights of the French language and made English the sole language in its legislative assembly, in its statutes and in its courts.

Of course, such measures are unacceptable, whether they originate from French or English-speaking people. What is right, is right! What is wrong is wrong! One has to recognize it. I continue that quotation:

> In 1891, the clauses of the law regarding the French language were repealed in the Northwest Territories.
>
> In 1905, the newly formed provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan denied any rights to the French language on their soil.
>
> In 1913, Ontario passed regulation 17 which forbade the teaching of French in its schools.

And Mr. Robertson ended by the following remark which I quote:

> Sweeping aside as an illusion the argument regarding the standard of living used by so many Liberals, Mr. Robertson predicts that lest the Anglophones start doing away with their pettiness, their lack of understanding and their hostility "the French Canadians will sooner or later rather take the chance of impoverishment in order to recover their dignity. A proud people cannot be bought".

● (1810)

If such were the comments of a Francophone, one could say that they came from someone who likes beefing, and does it all the time. But these were the comments made by an Anglophone who observed the situation, who knows that everything derives from history and simply intends to warn us against the situation we are presently experiencing in Canada. What is the use of talking about national unity when one knows full well that the federal government finds it to its advantage to keep the opinion of the provinces divided in order to keep running the show. This difference of opinion has been evident for quite some time. We find division everywhere. The provinces still feel dissatisfied after every conference. No one can or wants to agree. It has now been 50 years since the federal government and the provinces have been talking about patriating the constitution, but we have never succeeded in putting forth a formula for an amendment on which everybody could agree.

So long as we will not decide to deal seriously and in depth with a revision of the power sharing formula, it will be useless to expect to get a new constitution. We cannot expect to unify a country while there still are serious regional disparities and thousands of workers unemployed. Mr. Speaker, I will take the liberty to quote a few sentences which were pronounced in Toronto last March 21 by the Chairman of Royal Bank of Canada who said:

> . . . the problem of Canadian unity which confronts us today (and which may very well destroy our country if we do not settle it) has its origin in the type of federal system which we have adopted.

And he added:

> . . . it is not the time to replaster but rather to rebuild, a task which is inevitably linked to the constitutional reform, . . . and in the review of our constitution we would be better off to study a system which would ensure better consultation mechanisms between the provinces and the federal government . . . as the series of federal-provincial conferences which we have had so far seem to have turned into avenues of confrontation, contestation and political publicity.

Incidentally, we have had 27 federal-provincial conferences on that subject since 1963 but we have not moved one single step forward.

We were told a few weeks ago that personalities would tour the country lecturing on national unity. I would invite them to visit our constituencies and address our former textile, clothing, furniture or shoe industry workers. Let them speak at leisure to them. They will be listened to with such attention, but let them also listen afterwards. Those workers will repeat what they are telling us. The federal government is not discharging its responsibilities, it is letting in imports to compete with our own production, workers are laid off and plants are closing down.

They will tell them for instance that in January 1977, 68 per cent of the Canadian shoe market was occupied by imports. So let us stop dreaming in colour and let us tackle the real causes. Canadian harmony is a very laudable goal to everyone, but under the current constitution, it is sheer utopia. As long as our provinces do not have enough revenues to cope with their responsibilities to the people, there can be no Canadian harmony.

I had an opportunity to follow through as an observer one fiscal federal-provincial conference. Provinces were requiring a larger part of the fiscal basis, but the federal government refused to transfer any more tax revenues because it did not have enough for itself. So the conference ended without solving the problem. In January 1966, at a federal-provincial conference of welfare ministers in Ottawa, Quebec requested no less than the transfer of family allowances, old age security pensions and manpower centres.

At the 1968 federal-provincial conference, Premier Daniel Johnson stated: "The government of Quebec insists on regaining full responsibility for social security for two main reasons. First, the coexistence of two governments in that area hinders efficient social security planning, allows for contradictory programs and leads to administrative duplication and waste. Then because social security measures on the whole affect the nation fundamentally as a society."

The most serious and sound suggestions that were made yesterday by my colleague, the hon. member for Shefford (Mr. Rondeau), should serve as a basis for the drawing up of a new constitution. For my part, I would recommend that the provinces equip themselves with a mechanism having the authority required to call a real summit meeting which would be attended by representatives from all the provinces, the federal government, community organizations, social and cultural organizations, industry, business and finance. Then, the provinces could meet again to draw up a new constitution incorporating the suggestions and recommendations made at the previous meeting. Such a new constitution should spell out as clearly as possible the actual role of the federal and provincial governments. I am convinced that this procedure would afford greater satisfaction and would generate a genuine harmony in this country.

In 1970 a joint committee of the Senate and the House of Commons was set up to look into the whole constitutional problem. It submitted a report on March 16, 1972, and each and everyone of us as well as the government would find it profitable to take a second look at it and draw our inspiration from it because the report does contain rather commendable suggestions. However, Mr. Speaker, if we really go to the bottom of things, we will find that the main cause of the lack of understanding between the provinces and the federal government is mainly and above all of a monetary nature.

As long as the federal government will engage in loansharking with the provinces, which means that they have to pay back $5.00 for each dollar they borrowed, it will not be possible to live in harmony. It is not right that a government should lend money to another government for profit; it should be first and foremost to provide services for the people.

If the legislative, executive and judicial branches of any sovereign government are the powers that be there is another source of power which supersedes governments themselves. This super power which does not proceed from any constitution and which is exercised under no specific conditions or requirements is the monetary power. As monetary matters come under federal jurisdiction, if the federal government were to fulfill all its responsibilities in this area by making this financial system available to governments and to the people, it would largely contribute to the settlement of the constitutional problem.

● (1820)

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Order. I regret to interrupt the hon. member but the time allotted to him has expired.

Mr. Maurice A. Dionne (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I am somewhat dismayed at the bitterness of the attack by the opposition on the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau). One would be forgiven for concluding that members opposite wanted this debate as an occasion on which to attack and seek to destroy the Prime Minister. That attack will not work. I will not deal with the specific statements which have been made because my hon. friend, the Secretary of State (Mr. Roberts), has dealt with them very effectively.

There was one charge made in the House this afternoon which I believe should not go unanswered. I refer to the attack upon the hon. member for Crowfoot (Mr. Horner) by the hon. member for Halifax (Mr. Stanfield). I would point out, Mr. Speaker, that on May 27, 1969, in the vote on Bill C-120, "an Act respecting the Status of the Official Languages of Canada," there were 17 members of the Conservative party who voted against that bill, and that at that time the party opposite was led by the hon. member for Halifax. Ten of those members who voted against Bill C-120 are still members of the Conservative caucus today.

Some hon. Members: Oh!

Mr. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): Mr. Speaker, none of us has ever made any personal attack on members over there for the way they voted on any bill.

I am participating in this debate today in order to express some thoughts on the question of national unity from the point of view of a representative from New Brunswick, to try to state what Confederation means to us. First, it means a guarantee of our provincial identity. New Brunswickers, and indeed all Canadians with roots in Atlantic Canada, are a strong-willed people, fuelled by a quiet pride in their cultural heritage and regional distinctiveness. We cherish a unique heritage upon which our province has been built. It is a three-fold heritage. There is the Acadian heritage, the loyalist heritage, and the Irish heritage. From these backgrounds our province derives a flavour which we cherish and defend, and it is in the defence of this provincial identity that we have consistently rejected a wider maritime union. It is also the reason we embrace Confederation, for we are confident that this Confederation with nine other provinces guarantees our right to be different and singular; it guarantees our distinct regional identity.

Second, it means a firm commitment to social reform. Throughout Confederation, Canada has built a concern for the needs and well-being of all its people and has grown strong on the basis of four commitments from the federal government, commitments which are shared by every provincial government in this country, or, at least, by every provincial government save one. They are: to do everything possible to avoid another great depression; to establish a system of social security and other support programs which will minimize the privations of family rearing, of old age, of unemployment, of sickness, and of crop failure; to create a society of greater opportunity culturally, linguistically, economically, and educationally; and to strengthen the federation of Canada and the economy of each region by a fair distribution of the wealth of our country in order that all our people will be able to maintain a basic standard of living—the standard to which they have become accustomed through good fortune, good government, and good personal and collective effort.

Confederation is based on a willingness to share a political process of cooling and reconciliation, of working out regional differences through sensible compromise rather than through senseless confrontation and violence.

What would separation by the province of Quebec mean to us, Mr. Speaker? It would mean the loss of the idea of the rich provinces helping the poor. It would create a new era of provincial selfishness and isolation. It would mean the loss of a large number of regional-development-minded members of parliament from Quebec, and thus a weaker voice for economic development in the less wealthy areas of our country. In addition we would lose our relatively easy and inexpensive access to central Canadian markets with a resulting rise in the cost of our food, clothing, and manufactured goods. Restricted accessibility to central Canadian markets would also hinder the sale of our processed foods and of our pulp and paper exports.

● (1830)

Another result is that subsidies for imported oil would probably be discontinued, resulting in increased annual energy costs of approximately $450 for every man, woman and child in the Atlantic region. This would result not only in higher fuel bills for home heating and travel but, even worse, a much slower rate of industrial development where such development is most urgently needed. Coupled with the loss of federal aid, even in part, the result would be a severe economic crisis. In such a crisis we would probably be forced into a union with all the Atlantic provinces, or into becoming part of the state of Maine. Our provincial heritage and identity would thus be subject to the melting pot of maritime union or of American homogeneity.

So how should we look upon Quebec, Mr. Speaker? Separatist tendencies are not a new phenomenon, nor are they restricted to Quebec. Indeed, in New Brunswick our legislature was clamouring for separation from Canada even before the ink had dried on the British North America Act. Separatist tendencies do rear their ugly heads in various regions throughout Canada but are held in check by the belief of each region that its existence and identity are secure.

This sense of security does not exist to the same extent in the province of Quebec. As a predominantly rural society, Quebec probably could remain isolated and develop independently; but with the change to an industrialized society which began after the war and became greatly accelerated during the sixties, Quebec has been forced to defend its identity against the larger North American English society which dominates business and industry.

Thus, Quebec needs new guarantees for the continued existence of its Quebecois culture. Support for Confederation by Quebecers must be based on the ability of the federal government and the Canadian people adequately to guarantee their continuation. We need, on the one hand, a constitutional revision and, on the other, a new tolerance by all Canadians. We must show the people of Quebec that we will guarantee their identity, and we must give them concrete proof by our actions. If we cannot convince them of our sincerity they will be forced into the arms of the racism now being advocated by René Lévesque.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I want to turn my attention for a moment to the Acadians. Aside from the indigenous people of Canada, probably no other single group of Canadians has made such a valiant effort to preserve and protect their linguistic and cultural heritage. The fact that the Acadians were able to survive, to reconstruct their lives and to maintain a distinct way of life following the expulsion and dispersion in 1755, is indeed a great tribute to the tenacity and devotion of these people.

It is only in the last generation that a real effort is being made to bring the Acadians into the mainstream of New Brunswick life. The greatest impetus to that drive came from that great Acadian premier of New Brunswick, Senator Louis J. Robichaud. But the separation of Quebec would be very detrimental to Acadians. It would mean the removal of the largest group with the greatest possible interest in bilingualism and the development and enhancement of French Canadian culture. Without the Quebec bulwark, these values would fade. As Bill 1 has made plain, an independent Quebec would offer no such protection to minorities and none to Acadians. Even joining Quebec would mean the loss of the Acadian identity.

There are those, of course, who would advocate a separate Acadian state. Such a state is simply not economically viable.

That part of New Brunswick which is home to the largest group of Acadians is in a state of economic distress and requires continued federal help. Although the idea of a separate Acadian state might make a few purists happy, it would cause a lot of hungry bellies among the workers. Furthermore, there is no guarantee that the rest of New Brunswick would react peacefully to such a proposal. Acadians need a Quebec in Confederation.

Therefore, what can we all do? We can create the national will to maintain Confederation. We must show the separatists that we want Condederation and that we are willing to fight for it. We must create a new social contract by which the rights of every minority and every group are amply protected—a social contract embodying a new constitutional arrangement; a social contract embodying the willingness of each Canadian to respect unselfishly the rights and needs of each other and of each region of our great country; a social contract embodying the goal of social and economic equality for all Canadians; and for us in New Brunswick, a social contract in which we work for the right of Acadians to work, to live, to receive justice, in their own language, and to ensure that they receive a fair share of provincial wealth and opportunities.

In conclusion let us return to the fundamental ideals on which this nation has grown and prospered—the commitment to provincial self-identity and the commitment to social reform. Let us get our youth involved in promoting and protecting these ideals. There is a great reservoir of strength in our youth. René Lévesque has offered Quebecers an equitable society but a racist society. Let us offer Quebec and all of Canada an equitable society and a just one. If we fail to make this fragile Canadian experiment work, we are unworthy of the trust our forefathers have placed in our hands. We are unworthy of the place we have proclaimed for ourselves in the world. We are unworthy of our nation. The future is in our hands. Let us not fail to bear the torch.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

* * *

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Mr. MacEachen: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I should like to report to the House that we have had some consultations, and in order to provide additional time for this debate tomorrow we have agreed to devote the period from four o'clock until six o'clock to it. I should like to go further and say that I will call it as the first item under government business. If we get to government orders before four o'clock, we would have until six o'clock for the debate; but I should suggest that because we do not know what may intervene tomorrow—there may be a repetition of what happened today—and if we do not get to government orders until 4.15 o'clock or later, I would suggest we sit for at least two hours from that moment, even if it is beyond six o'clock. I want to assure the House that there will be no unhappy moments that we can avoid in any event.

[Mr. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi).]

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I want to say that the minister is notably generous on his birthday. In the spirit of that generosity I should like to wish him a happy birthday and say that we concur in the proposal.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, we did have a very pleasant meeting at which we came to this agreement, and we are happy to concur in it.

I join with my hon. friend in extending to the President of the Privy Council (Mr. MacEachen) best wishes on his birthday. I do not wish him many returns of what he has been through on this particular day. However, I do hope his fortieth, forty-first and all his other birthdays, now that he is past the age of 39, will be happy ones.

● (1840)

[Translation]

Mr. Caouette (Villeneuve): Mr. Speaker, I am glad to have this opportunity to join with my two colleagues in this discussion, and I might add it is precisely with this kind of debate that we will finally reach a consensus and above all bring about unity among all the parties represented in this House. I should also like to join my two colleagues, in wishing a happy birthday to the President of the Privy Council (Mr. MacEachen). Many happy returns.

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Is it agreed?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): It is so ordered.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, perhaps one point should have been made clear, that is, that there will be no private members' hour tomorrow afternoon.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Is it agreed?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

* * *

CONFEDERATION

DEBATE ON NATIONAL UNITY

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Trudeau:

That members of this House dedicate themselves anew to the continuing unity of Canada as a free and independent country organized on the basis of a federal form of government with two official languages and a diversity of cultures.

And on the amendment of Mr. Clark (p. 7321)

Mr. Douglas Roche (Edmonton-Strathcona): Mr. Speaker, it is very significant that the Secretary of State (Mr. Roberts) who finished his speech a few moments ago did not attempt to refute the serious charge made in the preceding speech by the hon. member for Halifax (Mr. Stanfield) that the Prime Minister's (Mr. Trudeau) actions on the language issue have been an incomparable act of cynicism, more so than that of any prime minister in the history of our country.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Roche: The hon. member for Halifax told the truth and it cannot be denied.

Yesterday my leader made a magnificent speech on national unity which showed why this country would be so much better united if he were the prime minister.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Roche: Time is short. Alberta wants action, not oratory, on national unity, so I will take only one minute to make four points.

First, Alberta is committed to Confederation. The outflow of dollars from Alberta to Ottawa has averaged $172 per person per year. Our contribution to the well-being of Canada, through staging in oil and gas increases, will soon be measured in the billions of dollars.

Second, Alberta believes that the Prime Minister is blackmailing the Canadian people by insisting once again that languages are at the heart of the national unity problem. Rather, national unity demands a redispersal of power and economic advantage based on the principle of stronger rights for all provinces. We will not accept language problems in Quebec as an excuse for not dealing with Alberta's economic problems.

Third, Alberta supports linguistic fairness, but the application of the Official Languages Act has divided Canadians, and that is why the act should be re-examined. Bill 1 in Quebec, if passed, should be sent to the Supreme Court. Minority rights in every province should be strengthened, including more services for ethnic Canadians.

Fourth, Alberta wants a new national economic policy that recognizes western Canada not only as a region of primary producers but as a major manufacturing complex. We want new transportation and tariff policies that will accelerate development of secondary industry and secure greater markets for Alberta petrochemical and manufacturing exports.

A renegotiated Confederation demands not a public relations task force but fundamental economic and social changes. A stronger Alberta is good for a unified Canada.

Let us stop this lament for a nation and get on with an all party parliamentary committee to draw blueprints for the rebuilding of Canada.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Donald W. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): Mr. Speaker, never has my country been more deeply divided than it is today, more deeply at odds with itself, inside itself. It has been threatened before, but it is deeply divided today. It is threatened today, not because of the government which was elected in Quebec on November 15 last, but because of the policies of this government, its confrontational stances and its rigid centralism. These things had much to do with the separatist vote in the province of Quebec last November. That vote prompted uneasy stirrings, moreover, elsewhere in this land, to which I shall come.

Today in this House we witnessed two events which indicated to me that the policies of the government will continue unchanged and that the government has learned no lessons from the past. Even in the face of the unity crisis the government is concerned only with its perpetuation in office.

The first of these incidents was a statement on motions on a matter which has been before this House for, I would say, four or five months. It was brought to the attention of this House by members of the party which I have the honour to represent. After almost five years of dead silence this statement came in the midst of this debate which, despite what the government House leader said, was not brought on by his initiative but by the initiative of hon. members on this side of the House. We had that interruption because of the outstanding speech made yesterday by the Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition (Mr. Clark), which captured the imagination of the press. As the hon. member for Halifax (Mr. Stanfield) said, one of the "foxes" tried to get into the act today to draw attention away from yesterday's speech. That was the first indication that the government had one interest and one interest alone, namely, its perpetuation in power.

The second incident took place when the government House leader misled the House and was not required to withdraw his remarks. I came into this House with an innate Canadianism, which I hope all of us in this House have. I have studied Canadian history, political philosophy, and political science. I served in the defence of my country when it was threatened. I proudly represented my country abroad, but only up to a point, until I ceased to represent my country abroad. I came into this House thinking that with that background I could represent my constituency well in this forum and believing I could make some contribution to my country. But what do I find? I find this kind of jiggery-pokery, this nonsense of choosing this time in the midst of an important debate to draw attention away from a good speech, for a political end.

While the hon. member for Halifax was speaking, an hon. member opposite had the downright effrontery to say that the hon. member was feeling bitter. Of course he retaliated quickly. The hon. member for Halifax said he was feeling bitter because of the mess this country is in, and I am feeling bitter because of that too. It is very sad that, considering my record in defence of my country and in representing my country, I have cause to be bitter.

● (1850)

I am glad we had no part in drafting the resolution under debate altough I think we had a hand in bringing about the debate. The resolution begins:

> That members of this House dedicate themselves anew to the continuing unity of Canada . . .

Mr. Speaker, I stand here proudly. I defy anyone to require me to dedicate myself anew to the unity of Canada. I have been working for the unity of Canada all my life.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): Surely there is somebody on that side of the House with enough command of the English language to produce something meaningful for us to debate. In the middle of the remarks made by the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) yesterday he had the effrontery to come up with the notion that what we need at this stage is a task force. That is what required us to call for a proper forum in which these matters could be discussed. There has been a down-playing of this parliamentary forum as the proper place in which these matters should be discussed.

I would draw to your attention, Mr. Speaker, that Australia is facing this same problem. Their constitution is not working well and they have established an Australian constitutional convention. An article published in "The Parliamentarian" in April this year, written by the Attorney General of the Commonwealth of Australia, sums up the purposes of the convention. The last paragraph reads:

> The solutions to basic constitutional problems must be political solutions acceptable to the people at large and the open discussion of constitutional issues by politicians from all the major political parties and representing all the regions of the country should contribute much to the removal of difficulties which have bedevilled constitutional reform and Commonwealth state relations in the past.

Just by changing a few expressions in that paragraph we have the justification for the commission recommended in the amendment to this resolution.

I should like to make some more comments but I am not going to stand in the way of others who wish to speak. I urge the government to reconsider its notion of a task force, and to assign to those to whom it belongs the problem of looking into the matters which have brought us to our sorry state—matters which have caused bitterness in many minds because of the confrontations the government has brought forward. I cede the floor, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Gus MacFarlane (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, usually it is a great honour and privilege to join in any debate in this House, but at this moment in the history of our country it is very important to say something in a positive way about the unity of the country. I am not going to try to assert any particular reason or right that I might have.

Born of Scottish parents who emigrated to this country, to live in Verdun, Quebec, I, with my family, associated with one of the great founding races of this country. Mr. Speaker, my parents chose to live here; they were not born in this country, although I was fortunate enough to be born here. My parents, of Scottish heritage, decided they wanted to live in this country and bring up their family here. In those early days I remember hardly any discussions, in that province or city, concerning the division of the country, although there was bigotry and unfairness. But it was not directed just at the French or English; it was directed at the Jew, at the so-called hunky, at the black, and at others. I grew up at a time when such bigotry and unfairness were rampant.

Because of my experiences and because of my background, I am not willing to listen to those who say that our different cultures, the cultures of the English and French, our two great founding races, and the cultures of other ethnic groups, are divisive. I am not willing to admit that the acceptance of such diversity of cultures brings about divisiveness in Canadians.

May I call it seven o'clock, Mr. Speaker?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Order, please. It being seven o'clock p.m., pursuant to orders made on Thursday, June 30 and Tuesday, July 5, 1977, this House stands adjourned until tomorrow morning at eleven o'clock.

At 7 p.m. the House adjourned, without question put, pursuant to Special Order.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Thursday, July 7, 1977

The House met at 11 a.m.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

EMPLOYMENT AND IMMIGRATION REORGANIZATION ACT

MEASURE TO ESTABLISH DEPARTMENT OF EMPLOYMENT AND IMMIGRATION, ETC.

The House resumed consideration, from Tuesday, July 5, of the motion of Mr. Cullen that Bill C-27, to establish a Department of Employment and Immigration, the Canada Employment and Immigration Commission and the Canada Employment and Immigration Advisory Council, to amend the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971, and to amend certain other statutes in consequence thereof, be read the third time and do pass; and the amendment thereto of Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre).

Mr. John Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, when I was on my feet on Tuesday of this week, speaking on the amendment of the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles), to refer the whole question of the qualifying period back to the Standing Committee on Manpower and Immigration, that is, the work period required for people with minor attachment to the labour force to make them eligible for unemployment insurance, I mentioned the fact that after the committee had completed its deliberations I had written to all the premiers and major trade unions across the country. I thought that was the right thing to do for any member of the House who wanted to make some constructive suggestions on any bill at any stage.

When I was speaking last Tuesday, I read into the record the first letter I received, which was from the Premier of New Brunswick, Mr. Richard Hatfield, who, I believe, is a Conservative premier. He wrote a very honest letter, part of which I read into the record. I also read from the brief his views with respect to the report stage of the bill and committee hearings on it. I pointed out that Mr. Hatfield was concerned about the fact that there seems to be no meaningful consultation among the federal and provincial governments with respect to legislation. Mr. Hatfield pointed out that Bill C-27 and the superimposition of 54 regions with respect to unemployment insurance reflected this very dramatically.

The whole point he made was that the government always responds in an ad hoc way to criticism of legislation. The premier was particularly critical of the fact that while the government recognized regionality in the amendment brought in by the minister whereby in three years a qualifying period of 14 weeks will be required before a person will be able to obtain insurance benefits, the opposite seemed to be true, and the premier said that amendment was unacceptable to his province and to his government. He raised the question as to whether the government expects regional disparities to disappear overnight in three years' time. Surely, if the argument for disparity exists now as a result of the inaction of the government, it will exist in three years' time. So why should the government propose the elimination of regionality? I admit that I do not share Mr. Hatfield's political ideology or philosophy, but I certainly appreciate his honesty and the manner in which he responded to an opposition member from this corner of the House. He was co-operative and informed me of the kind of thinking that is going on within his government.

• (1110)

In the committee the United Auto Workers very clearly outlined labour's response to Bill C-27. The message that came through loud and clear from the UAW was that this is not the time for the government to be tampering with the Unemployment Insurance Act, and that the government ought to be going about the business of stimulating the economy and introducing policies which will create employment opportunities. The government should not be blaming victims for their own predicament at this time. The UAW made a very moving appeal in its brief. The brief said, "We want jobs. We want employment opportunities". In a very emotional way, the UAW made the argument that the right to work is as basic to Canadians as the right to education, free speech or organization. I think this government has far too long used the unemployed and unemployment in its fight against inflation. The government has used the unemployed as scapegoats in its effort to remain in power. That is what this debate is about. The government thinks it can get off the horns of this dilemma easily, but I hope the people of Canada will focus on what is taking place in this House.

I hope the people of Canada will realize that unemployment does more to disunite the country that it does to unite it. For the last two days there have been many pious speeches and there has been much rhetoric about loving each other. It has been said that the way to solve our problems is to love each other. Suddenly we are going to have a national love-in, and that is supposed to cure the problem of disunity. The youth of Quebec are experiencing 16 per cent unemployment, while the national youth unemployment rate is 13.8 per cent. That is a great disincentive to unity. When one part of the country has a high youth unemployment rate, that is certainly a disrupting influence and is a cause for disunity.

If the government really wants to put the boots to the separatists, it has to show the young people of this country that there is something to be gained from participating in federalism. Young people should be able to get jobs because of the initiatives of the central government. They should be assured that the central government is strong enough to direct the economy and to satisfy their aspirations and hopes in terms of employment opportunities. The government should be able to satisfy their dreams about material gain. Let us not forget that that is a very strong incentive these days. Hon. members opposite talk about incentive and about giving corporations incentive. When are they going to start talking about giving incentive to young, unemployed people and to the unemployed generally? Unemployed people want jobs so they can earn money to buy things that television tells them they are not complete without. The government should be providing jobs, not fiddling with the Unemployment Insurance Act and trying to tighten up when we are experiencing high unemployment.

In addition, last Tuesday I was discussing some of the serious problems within the country and hoping the government might zero in on those problems. One of our problems is that our country has developed a hinterland economy. I referred to Japanese-Canadian trade relations as a microcosm of the problem that faces Canada. I believe that problem was the reason for the visit of the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) to Japan some months ago. The problem is that 96 per cent of our exports to Japan are raw materials, while 95 per cent of our imports from Japan are finished products, primarily automotive products, cameras and electronic equipment. We have locked ourselves into the position of being producers of raw materials. Our people are hewers of wood and drawers of water. That is as it always has been. We mine raw materials and ship them out either in a semi-processed state or in a raw state. That is the experience in the area from which I come. We export raw materials and we export jobs along with them. We have no infrastructure for research and development. That is all found in the parent company countries. It is not found in Canada.

I am not the only one who is saying this. I am not an economist, and certainly not a corporate elitist, but it is interesting that as every day goes by we have more ammunition. We can pick up any paper or document, whether it be a Manpower publication or a private sector publication, and in those papers and documents we have ample ammunition for this debate on the question of employment in Canada. I would like to refer to an article which appeared in the Toronto Star of Monday, July 4, 1977. The article is headed "Lack of science means fewer jobs". This editorial quotes the chairman of the Science Council of Canada as saying:

> Council Chairman Josef Kates says the impetus must come from governments, which account for 40 per cent of Canada's collective spending. And the main thrust must come from Ottawa, because the problem is national.

He was talking about the development of an industrial strategy to develop strong Canadian capabilities in science and technology; in other words, research and development. The article continues:

> The areas in which Canadian know-how is weak, he says, touch every individual: housing, energy, natural resources extraction, communications and electrical transmission. Other areas, such as Arctic and oil sands technology, are ones in which Canadians should excel—and benefit from—but have been left to foreigners to develop and exploit.
>
> The rewards for asserting what Kates calls "technological sovereignty" are many. "The economy will be strengthened, employment will be generated. We will have the capability to solve our own problems and adjust to change and we will strengthen the sense of Canada as a nation."
>
> By failing to accept the challenge, Canada instead has a weak economy, high unemployment and a heavy reliance on outsiders to solve our problems and make our decisions.
>
> Kates echoes the sentiments: "A selective 'buy-Canada' attitude should be reflected in policy formulation to ensure the long-term well-being of firms deemed essential to support technological sovereignty. Most industrialized countries have in place policies which favour indigenous companies over foreign firms."
>
> There is more at risk than the loss of Canadian scientists, managers, entrepreneurs and other essential economic movers to the United States and elsewhere.
>
> What's really at stake is the ability of Canadians to arrange their own economic affairs—and, by extension, their own political and cultural affairs—in a way that's best suited to Canadians rather than as an adaptation of somebody else's brain power.

That was the chairman of the Science Council of Canada speaking on the whole question of the need to develop Canadian technology, research and development. That is the very basis for creating an economy which will expand and provide jobs for the many gifted and talented young people our school systems are producing but who presently stay unemployed. Indeed, they cannot even find the necessary eight weeks of employment to qualify for unemployment insurance benefits. Our amendment proposes that clauses 29 and 30, dealing with the qualifying period, should be referred back to the committee. We said this was a very serious step, moving from the eight-week minor attachment period to a regional rate that ranged from 10 to 14 weeks, depending on the unemployment rate in the 54 regions of Canada. We criticized this step because of the bureaucracy that will be needed. Members of parliament deal with unemployment problems every day and well know how complicated is the act. We can envisage the nightmare when 54 regions are superimposed on the act and the people who administer it have to sort out what the rate is on any given day and consider who has moved into the area, what their last address was, and so on.

● (1120)

Everything is blamed on the computer these days, not on the bureaucrats who put the information into the computer. Just as unemployment is the scapegoat for the inadequacies of this government, so is the computer the "fall guy', for the bureacrats. Even moving to the regional rate, going from the minimum 10 weeks to 14 weeks, depending on the rate of unemployment in a region, will place hardship on many of the unemployed who cannot find eight weeks's work, much less ten.

This matter was brought to our attention by L'Association des Travailleurs de Rivière du Loup who sent a brief to the Standing Committee on Labour, Manpower and Immigration in which they pointed out that it is not easy for many people to find work for those extra weeks. In fact, 9,205 people are registered with the local Manpower centre at Rivière du Loup, out of a potential labour force of 33,000. This means 30 per cent of the labour force is actively seeking work. The figures do not include those registered in Manpower training programs or those receiving social welfare assistance, even if they are able to work. They are a minority. Job opportunities in the community are very limited and people cannot even find eight weeks' work, much less the ten weeks that is being proposed.

The question of the importance of work has been discussed in this debate. Some would have us believe that people do not want to work today, that they are work-shy or are not interested in working. I disagree with this view. There has been talk of loss of the work ethic, but I do not believe this has happened at all. It is a fact, however, that the government does not have the ability, the foresight or the will to do things with the economy that would put people to work, so it finds all sorts of excuses for its lack of ability. To reinforce this, I should like to quote from a paper entitled "Jobs and poverty: a report on Canada's working poor", published in June, 1977, where the following passage appears:

Work means more to most people than simply making money. Above and beyond the income it produces, and the things money can buy, work brings self-respect and personal satisfaction and defines a person's position in his community and the wider society. Where and how we work strongly influences most aspects of our lives, from friendships we maintain and places we live, to the way we raise and educate our children. Along with the family, work is a core institution which provides order and meaning to our daily lives.

We see that for many people who are unemployed, and for the poor, work is a very important pastime because it gives them dignity and a sense of belonging in the community. I want to comment, now, on why the government felt it had to tamper with the qualifying period. The minister and his bureaucrats all said it was a disincentive to work.

Mr. Alexander: You said all that before.

Mr. Rodriguez: Mr. Speaker, when we were in committee—

Mr. Hogan: You never seem to get the message.

Mr. Rodriguez: We will give it to you now.

Mr. Alexander: Oh, sit down.

Mr. Rodriguez: The Canadian Labour Congress appeared before the committee and presented a brief. A rather interesting exchange took place between the hon. member for Hamilton West (Mr. Alexander) and Mr. Chafe who represented the congress.

Mr. Alexander: Don't be selective; read it all.

Mr. Rodriguez: I want to quote from the passage which related to the qualifying period, as follows:

MR. ALEXANDER: It has been brought to our attention that as a result of studies, whether or not we are talking about the comprehensive review, the eight-week eligibility period or qualifying period, as the case may be, was a disincentive. It has been pointed out that those who were working were really taking advantage of the act because they could have worked longer but in certain instances they did not, and the commission or the minister, as the case may be, found as well that when the benefits ran out, as a result of being involved with an eight-week eligibility period, it was not too long thereafter that these persons were able to acquire employment. Have you any reply to those, I believe, correct statements made by the minister.

The hon. member for Hamilton West thinks the eight-week minor attachment period is a disincentive to work, but he did not produce any facts to support that view. Mr. Chafe gave him what I consider an appropriate answer when he said:

MR. CHAFE: Well, Mr. Alexander, if I might deal first of all with the popular phrase "disincentives to work", in our view, having looked at most of the material that has been produced in this respect, that the studies we refer to, which were done largely by economists and people in the academic field, are not at all positive about that. In fact, there have been glaring inconsistencies in some of the studies done. One of them, in particular, was done on the basic premise that all unemployment is voluntary in the first place and he went from there to try to reach a conclusion that the new Unemployment Insurance Act of 1971 had a disincentive effect that would increase, I believe, the average unemployment rate by 1.5 per cent. To be quite blunt about it we think these studies that were done in that respect are far removed from reality, that the people who are doing them are largely doing it on a theoretical basis and that they know nothing about the realities of "joblessness".

There have been other indications of similar activity on the periphery of unemployment insurance and nobody, in our estimation, yet, has presented any kind of concrete proof whatsoever that the minor-attachment claimants, under the present act, are the perpetrators of all of the so-called difficulties that seem to be attributed to the operation of the Unemployment Insurance Act. It is a matter of record, with the Unemployment Insurance Commission, that the minor attachment claimants in the system are a minority of the claimants.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Order, please. I regret to interrupt the hon. member, but his allotted time has expired. He may continue with the unanimous consent of the House. Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: No.

Mr. Rodriguez: Who said no?

An hon. Member: Everybody said no.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Order, please. The hon. member for Hamilton West (Mr. Alexander) on a point of order.

Mr. Alexander: Mr. Speaker, in light of the fact that the hon. member did not know who said no, and so that there will be no mistake on the record, it was I, the hon. member for Hamilton West, who said "No" to the hon. member for Nickel Belt (Mr. Rodriguez).

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Rodriguez: You should be ashamed of yourself.

● (1130)

[Translation]

Mr. Charles-Eugène Dionne (Kamouraska): Mr. Speaker, the amendment which is now being discussed reads as follows:

That the motion be amended by deleting all the words after the word "That", and by substituting therefor the following words:

"Bill C-27 be not now read a third time, but that it be referred back to the Standing Committee on Labour, Manpower and Immigration for the purpose of reconsidering clause 29 and 30 thereof."

Realizing now that clauses 29 and 30 should be reviewed and amended, I consider this amendment should be supported and I will briefly state why it should be done.

To require that a claimant should have worked at least 12 weeks to be entitled to unemployment benefits is to lay a direct charge against the unemployed, leading us to believe that they are responsible for their own predicament. This new clause to the legislation proposed by the government directly affects the poorer workers since most workers who qualify with a minimum number of insurable weeks of employment are the following: the older workers, the less educated who keep their jobs for a shorter period, because available jobs are often for a short period. Students who do not wish to pursue their education and who, as a first experience, choose to work in the summer, find themselves unqualified for benefits due to this new provision, and so do the workers who pick fruit, vegetables or tobacco in various provinces of Canada.

This provision does not take any account of modern requirements in terms of personnel hiring in private, public or near public enterprises. More and more frequently, a business will need skilled workers for a short period of time. These skilled workers are generally hired for a specific type of work of short duration. The bill under consideration provides an increase from eight to twelve weeks of insurable employment to qualify for benefits. The government and its supporters want to make us believe that the majority of unemployed who qualify with a minimum of eight weeks of insurable employment are chronic unemployed.

It is obvious that with the provisions of this bill and many others, the government intends to make a viable enterprise with an insurance that eliminates factors involving the greatest insurance risks. A social legislation, such as the one which deals with unemployment insurance, should not be administered with the same standards which apply to private enterprise, especially when workers are footing the bill.

Over the first few years after its adoption, the Unemployment Insurance Act was in line with the economic requirements of the period. In spite of occasional tensions, the economy started to recover strongly in the post war period, and over the first few years of operation, the unemployment insurance scheme came out with a surplus. Through its 1971 amendments to the Unemployment Insurance Act, the government has considerably strayed from the basic principles of a truly social legislation, the purpose of which was mainly to redistribute incomes. By setting the eligibility minimum requirements at eight weeks of insurable employment, without taking either regions or type of employment into consideration, the government should have foreseen that the workers of richer areas would pay for workers of not so rich areas where the rate of unemployment is very high, due to seasonal unemployment. Over the past couple of years, however, the government has been compelled to supplement heavily the unemployment insurance fund. As a matter of fact, a high rate of employment and a dramatic reduction in the number of available jobs have considerably increased the deficit of the unemployment insurance fund.

[Mr. Dionne (Kamouraska).]

Seasonal unemployment in some areas of Quebec such as the Lower St. Lawrence and the Gaspe peninsula rose slightly because of the lack of significant investments which could have reduced the unemployment rate by creating new jobs. Each winter, we experience a period of chronic unemployment and there are practically no jobs available for workers. In spite of this fact, the Unemployment Insurance Commission keeps disqualifying claimants who are not actively seeking jobs. This is nonsense, but unfortunately such are the results of this inadequate legislation.

This situation further deteriorated to the extent that in February 1977, there were 932,000 unemployed, according to Statistics Canada, an unemployment rate of 9.1 per cent which is a precedent in Canada since Statistics Canada started to compile data. Unemployment has so increased, both in scope and frequency that it has now become impossible to consider it as a risk in terms of an insurance. The unemployment problem is no longer a probability, but a cyclic and permanent reality. With this in mind, the whole philosophy that prevailed when the unemployment insurance plan was set up should be reconsidered and brought in line with the 1977 new conditions of a recessionary economy.

In adopting Bill C-69 in December, 1975, the government excluded claimants 65 years of age or over and repealed the section dealing with increased rate for breadwinners. Bill C-27 follows the same path in that it aims at disqualifying claimants who have worked 8 to 11 weeks while reducing the benefit period for all categories of workers. The objective of this bill is to save about $275 million, so that all claims can be paid out of the Unemployment Insurance fund without direct government intervention.

However, it is easy to understand that the real cause for unemployment is not the excessively large number of unemployed people who are entitled to benefits, but rather an oversupply of workers in an ailing economy. A jobless worker should not be considered as a lazy man but rather as a victim of present economic fluctuations. So, we must reorganize that sad system, that topsy-turvydom, and enable everyone who is willing to earn a living honourably to offer his services to employers capable of giving them jobs. There are so many things to be done in Canada! Generally, Bill C-27, even amended, clearly represents a step backwards as compared with the present act. Instead of improving it, every decision being taken is such as to make things tougher for the unemployed. That legislation comes at the wrong time since all government studies foresee an increase in unemployment.

Just about all the studies made by civil servants, at top and lower echelons, forecast higher rates of unemployment in coming months and years. So, in view of that, the Minister of Manpower and Immigration (Mr. Cullen), advised by officials of the government, decided to amend the Unemployment Insurance Act and cancel the right of thousands of people to unemployment insurance benefits. To my mind, that is the wrong approach. Allow me to point out, in passing,—yes, I do want to point it out—that doing away with the rule on four consecutive weeks without benefits susceptible of interrupting the period does improve slightly the present system. That may be the only improvement in the bill, because, as I stressed to the House, it took two years of work, a team of civil servants and another minister to understand at last that this article terminating a benefit period after a four-week non-qualifying period should be modified. Then it was realized that this would adversely affect workers who seek employment or who could accept a job to such an extent that several people in my area called me when they could get a job without knowing how long it would last. I advised them to stop during the third week or else the civil servants of the Unemployment Insurance Commission would terminate their benefit period. The act is so silly that we were sometimes forced to make suggestions so that people would not be deprived of income, not knowing for sure whether they could work three, four or five weeks at a time, when the unemployment rate is high. This qualifying requirement from 10 to 14 weeks of employment is an improvement in comparison with the initial legislation. It is nonetheless a definite step backwards in comparison with the present system which provides for a universal qualifying period of eight weeks of insurable employment.

• (1140)

Precise details will have to be incorporated into the final draft of the legislation such as entitlement conditions of a worker going from a low to a high unemployment area. I remember asking this question at the Standing Committee on Manpower and Immigration and the senior official of the department took a lot of time to answer me. He made quite a phraseology. He spoke for 15 minutes and could not tell what would happen to an unemployed man who would leave Gaspésie with a certain amount of weeks to see his friends or his parents in Toronto and he could not tell whether that man would have a chance to find himself a job. But once there, he is still unemployed. Would he still be eligible for unemployment benefits? Therefore, given the circumstances, it is absolutely essential that this piece of legislation be clarified so that it may be implemented.

What seems particularly alarming in this new way of assessing entitlement to unemployment benefits is the relative nature of statistics. By raising the entitlement conditions, the government eliminates many unemployed, which artificially reduces the unemployment rate, but I insist on the fact that it is only an artificial reduction. The result of this measure will be a longer qualifying period, which will make entitlement to benefits more difficult for people out of work who are not on the Manpower centres records.

A lot of people as well as various groups concerned with this legislative measure have addressed a number of briefs to the Standing Committee on Labour, Manpower and Immigration, for example groups of lawyers from the legal assistance services in the area of Sherbrooke, Montreal and particularly in the lower St. Lawrence area, from Rivière-du-Loup to the Gaspe peninsula. These people are constantly dealing with problems arising from this unduly complex legislation. Every Monday morning, at the commission's offices in Cabano and Rivière-du-Loup, I meet lawyers from the legal assistance offices in Cabano and Rivière-du-Loup who are there to defend unemployed people caught in a bind, and there are dozens of cases like that regularly. Why? Because we have a legislation which hardly applies at all. Agreed, the Unemployment Insurance Commission has paid out millions of dollars to unemployed people those last few years, there is no question about that, but why? Because there are thousands of unemployed people in Canada. But that is not a reason good enough to try and change the legislation to get rid of part of them, since they will still remain unemployed and have to resort to social assistance because they will have no other source of income. That is not the best way to run the affairs of the country in the interests of the workers in Canada. Most of them are willing to work and try to earn their living honourably. We must provide them with the chance to do so.

I would like to quote from the conclusion of a brief which has been prepared by representatives of the legal commission in my region. It says that finally, the unemployment insurance legislation was at the outset based on the principles of an insurance against a risk, namely the temporary and occasionnal loss of one's job. With the development of the scheme, and more particularly with the extension brought about in the legislation in 1971, the government has changed it into a social legislation for redistributing the income of workers favoured with full employment to workers living in high unemployment areas.

We find it unacceptable that the government decide to change the current system by reducing the coverage at a time when the number of claims has risen dramatically among workers. The government should have considered increasing revenues rather than reducing benefits. Further, a true economy-priming policy would have reduced the number of claimants and boosted revenues. Keeping this in mind, and despite a few minor improvements such as extended right of appeal, and even with the amendments brought forward by the minister on April 26 last, Bill C-27 is a step backward. There may have been abuses, but the proposed remedy is out of proportion. It affects mainly those workers who have the largest exposure to unemployment, those in high unemployment areas.

I have in my files hundreds of cases of all kinds. This morning I dictated no fewer than ten letters, all pertaining to unemployment problems.

They originate in a UIC office in my area, either Rivière-du-Loup or Lévis, and then go to the arbitration board and the Federal Court, always because of a badly drafted law. How can we then feel inclined to support such a legislation, when we know it will make things more difficult for the unemployed? We cannot. If I could cast 100 votes against it, I would.

Recently, the National Council of Welfare put out a brief concerning employment and poverty. I would like to quote from the last page of the brief, to give an idea of the interest taken by those people who follow the situation all over Canada. They know the problems. It is their job to take the public's opinion, to make surveys and try to make practical suggestions to the government. Here is the last sentence of their brief:

In Canada, 60 per cent of the poor are working, without being able to earn a decent living.

One can see that in addition, working conditions are difficult.

In a society which distributes a large part of its wealth on the basis of work, the plight of low-wage earners is shocking and unjustifiable. The latter have been deceived by work ethics and deprived of minimum fringe benefits and working conditions which most Canadians now consider as a right.

The kind of legislation now before us is not likely to improve the lot of those people. As long as they have the opportunity to work, their wages are not even adequate and they cannot draw unemployment insurance benefits whenever they are unemployed. It must be kept in mind that since their wages are not very high, the rate of their benefits are not either.

In the Montreal La Presse of Tuesday June 14, an article dealing with the brief I have just quoted reads as follows:

In a society which distributes a large part of its wealth on the basis of work, the council added, the plight of the poor is both terrible and inexcusable.

To meet the problems of low income people, the very first thing to do would be to develop a plan under which they would at least be garanteed an income at the poverty line. This is the very first step to take.

It is unfortunate that a real guaranteed income program, a real legislation which would ensure a guaranteed income to everybody, has not been brought forward in Parliament. We have heard about it for ten years and even more, and the Minister of National Health and Welfare, (Mr. Lalonde) has occasionally put forward specific proposals which he intends to implement. This is a step in the right direction, but it is far from being a real legislation on guaranteed income which should be enforced in a country such as ours, which likes to distribute its wealth around the world—and I have no objection to it, I am quite willing to help those who face difficulties. But we, Canadians, should be clever enough to provide all Canadians with a standard of living that will enable them to look forward to the future with enough assurance.

● (1150)

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Is the House ready for the question?

Some hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): The question is on the amendment in the name of the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles). All those in favour of the amendment will please say yea.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): All those against will please say nay.

Some hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): In my opinion the nays have it.

[Mr. Dionne (Kamouraska).]

And more than five members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Call in the members.

The House divided on the motion (Mr. Knowles, Winnipeg North Centre) which was negatived on the following division:

● (1200)

(Division No. 72)

YEAS

Messrs.

Beaudoin
Blackburn
Brewin
Broadbent
Caouette (Villeneuve)
Caouette (Témiscamingue)
Dionne (Kamouraska)
Gilbert
Hogan
Jones
Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre)
Laprise
Leggatt
Muir
Orlikow
Peters
Rodriguez
Rondeau
Symes—19.

NAYS

Messrs.

Alexander
Andras (Port Arthur)
Andres (Lincoln)
Appolloni (Mrs.)
Baker (Gander-Twillingate)
Baker (Grenville-Carleton)
Baldwin
Beatty
Bégin (Miss)
Blais
Blaker
Blouin
Boulanger
Breau
Brisco
Buchanan
Bussières
Caccia
Cadieu
Cafik
Campagnolo (Mrs.)
Chrétien
Clark (Rocky Mountain)
Clermont
Coates
Crosbie
Cullen
Cyr
Danson
Darling
Daudlin
Dawson
De Bané
Dick
Douglas (Bruce-Grey)
Drury
Duclos
Dupont
Dupras
Ellis
Elzinga
Epp
Fairweather
Faulkner
Fleming
Fox
Francis
Friesen
Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier)
Gendron
Gillespie
Goodale
Goyer
Graffftey
Gray
Guay (St. Boniface)
Guay (Lévis)
Haidasz
Halliday
Harquail
Herbert
Hnatyshyn
Hopkins
Huntington
Isabelle
Jamieson
Jelinek
Johnston
Joyal
Kaplan
Kempling
Knowles (Norfolk-Haldimand)
Lajoie
Lalonde
Lamontagne
Landers
Lang
Langlois
Lapointe
La Salle
Lavoie
Lawrence
Leblanc (Laurier)
LeBlanc (Westmorland-Kent)
Lefebvre
Loiselle (Chambly)
MacDonald (Cardigan)
Macdonald (Rosedale)
MacDonald (Miss) (Kingston and the Islands)
MacEachen
MacFarlane
Martin
Mazankowski
McCain
McCleave
McIsaac
McKenzie
McRae
Milne
Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich)
Munro (Hamilton East)
Neil
Nicholson (Miss)
O'Connell
Olivier
Paproski
Parent
Patterson
Pearsall
Pelletier
Philbrook
Pigott (Mrs.)
Pinard
Portelance
Poulin
Railton
Ritchie
Roberts
Robinson
Roche
Rooney
Rynard
Sauvé (Mrs.)
Savard
Scott
Sharp
Skoreyko
Smith (Saint-Jean)
Stanfield
Stevens
Stollery
Tessier
Towers
Trudel
Turner
Watson
Whiteway
Whittaker
Wise
Wood
Yanakis—141.

● (1220)

Mr. Speaker: I declare the amendment lost.

The question, therefore, is on the main motion. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the said motion?

Mr. Arnold Peters (Timiskaming): Mr. Speaker, we have returned now to the debate on third reading of the bill after what I think is an unfortunate lack of appreciation by hon. members of the advantages of the amendment moved by the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles). It is my hope, coming as I do from a depressed area in Canada, that further changes will be made to the bill.

It is odd that one can call part of Ontario a depressed area, because most people think the province has no problems. Nevertheless, in northern Ontario, in particular, unemployment insurance is very important to sections of the population which the government does not wish to support, namely, the class of people who are attached to the labour force in a limited way, not because that is their wish but because of the area in which they live. This is true, of course, of other areas of Canada. I was pleased to see that one or two members recognized their responsibility with regard to those areas and did something about it to bring about changes. To be fair to them, other hon. members may have no problem in this regard. It is probably a fact that many people with short-term attachment to the labour force are to be found in a large area of Canada, but not in a large number of ridings; therefore, the matter is of small concern to some.

We have contended during the debate on this bill that one part of it is excellent and another part deserves further study. That is the part to which we are very much opposed. It does not warrant our support. I am referring to the section of the act which would merge the Unemployment Insurance Commission and the Manpower job placement officers of the Department of Manpower and Immigration. It is bad enough that many hon. members are not interested in the unemployment rate in Canada, but at least they could sit here quietly. I would appreciate it if they would leave, go on holiday, or do whatever they want.

Mr. Baldwin: Where could we get better entertainment than this?

Mr. Peters: I would appreciate it if they took themselves off somewhere else, because I intend to speak until one o'clock and also later today on this section of the act. Also, I intend to move an amendment, after which there will be a vote, and another vote after that. So if these members are just waiting around here for something to happen, it will not happen and they might as well go for lunch. I certainly would encourage them to do so.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Order, please. There appear to be a lot of conversations. I suggest that hon. members wishing to carry on conversations go behind the curtains, into the lobby.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Peters: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate your assistance. As the hon. member for Moncton (Mr. Jones) suggests, I will start over again. I may do just that, Mr. Speaker, and again and again. Nobody will be able to detect whether or not this is in order, with all the hubbub that is going on.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Peters: I was opposed in the first place to separating the unemployment section of the department from the employment section or job placement agency. Unlike the Conservatives, I am not too happy with the job placement agency in Canada—and that goes back to the time when I was a young lad looking for my first job. In those days one had to buy a job. Since I was too poor to buy a job, I had to get it another way, although it really was not very different. Seeing that everybody is so interested in what I have to say, and it is such a pleasant afternoon, I will be pleased to tell the House about it. When I went to look for a job, the logical place in northern Ontario to do so was in the mining industry. I accompanied my father to Timiskaming and I went to the job placement agency. In those days the job placement agency was a private company run by a one-armed bandit.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Peters: That was literally the case. You had to pay, because that was how they operated. The government did not assist you in finding employment in those days. You made your payment. I do not know exactly what it was, but I gave him quite a story. I told him that I had come out of the bush—I had been working in the bush before Christmas, and this was around February—that I had been staying in a hotel and had a big bill to pay, that I owed the restaurant for meals and was pretty hard up. I said to him that I would certainly appreciate his help. He was kind enough to send me to one of the smaller mines, the last mine on the back road where the drifters went. Prior to that I had been to another mine. I knew the brother of the superintendent at that mine fairly well. I went to the bunkhouse and was interviewed, and I left without a job because the price of the job was a bottle of Black and White scotch every payday. I understand the superintendent collected that from almost everyone he hired. He lived for many years, and he died of an ailment of the liver. However, it took many years and many employees before that happened. I am sure other hon. members remember the depression and could tell similar stories about how jobs were obtained. Some of their stories might be better than mine. I was an employer before I started to work in the mines.

● (1230)

Mr. Trudel: Now it comes out.

Mr. Rodriguez: Free enterprise capitalist.

Mr. Peters: I was an employer in a very small way. My father worked for the government. He was away most of the time and left a younger brother and me to run the farm. We had to hire people to help on the farm. I heard some fairly good sob stories which probably were true. Those stories indicated to me the indignation of looking for employment under those kinds of circumstances. I was very pleased when in 1940 the national employment service was established and the government started to assist in providing employment.

Mr. Jones: They established a new bureaucracy.

Mr. Peters: I am not sure whether that was the reason it was established. That is when we started getting unemployment insurance numbers which became substitutes for names. That service later developed in to our social security system. Numbers were more important than names. A name could be given and a file could not be found; but if a number was given, it could be found. A bureaucracy developed, and that was part of the problem. There were two sections of the national employment service. In one section people lined up and asked the agent if there were any jobs. It really did not matter very much in those days what the job was. If the agent had a job for digging ditches, you were supposed to take it. If you did not want the job, you were not able to draw benefits because the agent would not give you a slip to go over to the other section to get your benefits. If the agent did not have a job for you, he gave you a slip and you went to the unemployment insurance section.

At that section there was a card of about six inches by eight inches. The card indicated all your payments and how much they were, and on the reverse side there was a record of withdrawals. When you made a withdrawal, that amount was taken off, and your balance was so much. You knew when you were running out. You knew all the factors, and you knew how much you had been paid. You could talk to the girl at the desk. She had all that information, and you could argue and discuss the point. You could appeal decisions, or you could accept them. It was not a bad system. I would be prepared to go back to that system.

For some mucky-mucks that system meant line-ups—and if there is one thing people in Canada hate, it is a line-up. Every day in my office I do not have a line-up of people but I have a line-up of unemployment insurance problems. People can no longer line up and ask about unemployment insurance. They just wait and wait. They get in touch with their member of parliament, with their northern affairs officer or with the Unemployment Insurance Commission. Those are unsatisfactory line-ups. They are 100 per cent more demoralizing than asking a girl to get your card to see whether you are entitled to any benefits. In days gone by, if you were entitled to benefits the girl at the counter handed the benefits over the counter in cash. You did not have to pay a premium at the local grocery store to have your cheque cashed. You did not have to pay a charge to cash your cheque at the local beer parlour or wherever you may have taken it. You got your money, and that was that. You were entitled to it, and you knew you were entitled to it. You knew how much you were entitled to, how much you paid in, what your balance was, and how long you could continue collecting.

Mr. Rodriguez: There were no computers.

[Mr. Peters.]

Mr. Peters: There were no computers and no civil servants in the gallery. They did not exist. They did not have to exist. There were only a few, and they were very competent. As the years went by, the bureaucracy got bigger, but the people in that bureaucracy became less competent to handle individual problems. It is not that the commission does not have some very competent people, because it has—but who is appointed to deal with my claim, my question, or my request for information? I telephone the unemployment insurance office because I live 150 miles away from it. I phone the district office and ask about my claim. Who do I ask? I ask a young girl who was picked up off the street two or three days before and who does not know which office she is working for. She does not have the faintest idea about benefits or anything else, because she was the last one hired. Her superiors have not had time to talk to her. However, she answers the telephone and says, "I don't know" and hangs up. I ask for her name, and she says she does not have to give her name. She thinks I am asking for a date. Her mother told her not to make that kind of date, and the commission has not yet told her what to do. That is exactly what happens. We no longer have a situation where you can walk into the national employment office and be offered a job or not. In days gone by, if you were not offered a job you made a request for benefits. You either received benefits there and then, or you didn't. This happened every week when you turned up at the office. Nowadays, people appear only to make their presentations once a month to Canada Manpower so that they meet the requirements and are not taken off the rolls. They may be looking for jobs, but in my area looking for a job is a stupid thing to do. In my riding there are little towns of 200 people 50 and 75 miles from nowhere.

Mr. Baldwin: What about their voting habits?

Mr. Rodriguez: Some vote Conservative.

Mr. Peters: Sometimes many people visit those little communities and some people work there, but in the winter season there are no jobs. The people know there are no jobs in those little communities. The tourist camps are closed, the restaurants are closed—everything in the community is closed, so people have obviously left.

● (1240)

We could discuss some of the other things that affect small communities. Maybe it is only because the minister does not know about small communities that he made some of these changes. But Sarnia is not such a large city that he could not look at the surrounding area. Surely he could drive to Oil Springs, Petrolia, Dresden, or some of the communities that have the same problems as those in my area. The last time I was in Oil City there was a dance hall and a motel. My cousin ran both of them, but he was pretty well living on the pogey. Maybe the minister should go out and look at that community. Petrolia is not much better off. Dresden is a nice little tourist town in the summertime, but in winter I think they must just sit around the fire and talk about the days when it was the end of the underground railway for runaway slaves from the United States. Maybe the minister has never been there. I am sure that if he had, some of the rules made for unemployment insurance benefits would make no more sense to him than they do to me.

It has been decided that over a three-year period these two departments should come back together again. The people in my area are asking who is going to be bumped, red-circled, downgraded. Are the staffs to be integrated? Maybe one section should be eliminated.

Mr. Rodriguez: Which one?

Mr. Peters: I do not want to say that, because it is "damned if you do" and "damned if you don't." Maybe we could just lay everybody off and start again, hiring the good ones and leaving the bad ones out. I have a list of bad ones, if anybody wants it. I would start pretty high up the ladder, because every time I phone either the Manpower office or the unemployment insurance office, they are off on a coffee break. It is called a business meeting, but it lasts from Monday morning until late Friday afternoon.

When an individual wishes to deal with a government agency, we have a situation much like the saying that not only must justice be done but it must be seen to be done. If the minister were to take a survey of how many people in the country are satisfied with the operation of the unemployment insurance scheme and Manpower, I think unemployment insurance would come out on top. There are two Manpower offices in my area. One could have been eliminated a long time ago because most people do not even know it is there. In combining the operations of these two departments, the minister has not been very fair with the staffs in letting them know who will be redundant, and so on. I am asked questions about this quite often; but of course I do not have the information.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased that this wedding has taken place. I was violently opposed to the divorce. In my opinion, the split did not make any sense and I am pleased that the minister has suggested combining the agencies. The operation of the unemployment insurance fund should be viewed in a light different light from the operation of other departments of government. Money contributed by the individual and the employer, with some from the government for administration costs, is entrusted to the UIC. These moneys are handled rather loosely. I think we have an obligation to handle them better.

I have always had a good relationship with the top management of the Unemployment Insurance Commission, Mr. Speaker, because I am interested in what they are doing. I know some of the practical difficulties that can arise from legislation and many times modifications and changes have been as a result of my suggestions. I am sure this is also true in respect of other members. We are directly involved in the business of the commission and are obviously in a position to assist. I think it is safe to say that over the last ten years at least three or four hours each day have been devoted by one member of my staff to unemployment insurance problems. If that is true for other members as well, it means that approximately 150 people, in effect, work for the Unemployment Insurance Commission at no expense to the commission.

● (1250)

It is apparent, Mr. Speaker, that the new legislation will make the collection of unemployment insurance a complicated process. Under the previous act a man knew exactly where he stood. Under this act, a claimant will go for benefits and will confront a situation like this, "Mr. Jones, you are not entitled to any money because you have used all your benefits, you have not worked long enough, or your contributions were not large enough", and so on. Or, if the worst comes to the worst, the claimant will be called to apply again, or will be told he can appeal his case or submit a new application, and so on. He will return to square one.

Mr. Speaker, the old system was not so complicated, and I suggest members of parliament are out of their cotton-picking minds when they make this process so complicated. Under the old system, you were not accused of not looking for work. The UIC people did not say to you, "Do you have transportation?" These factors entered into the question and were given their due weight. You were interviewed, and at the interview it was determined whether you were eligible for UIC benefits. If you were eligible, you were given a slip which you took to the benefits section and collected benefits. The process was relatively simple. Now it is to be a puzzle.

What is more, you came face to face with the employees of UIC, and if they did not treat you politely you could threaten them with a poke in the nose. Occasionally some of them got a poke in the nose because people got mad. It seems to me that we are now complicating this process beyond all reason and without justification. Or perhaps the government wants to create more employment for unemployment insurance, Manpower and Immigration civil servants. Perhaps it wants to expand the civil service and can justify the expansion only by making this bill more complicated.

The minister has not thought through the ramifications of certain variables included in the bill. The minister comes from an area where times have been good. The government Crown corporation, Polymer, prospered. It was located in Sarnia where jobs were plentiful. Polymer was a good Crown corporation.

Mr. Rodriguez: But Polysar is in deep trouble.

Mr. Peters: I grant you that. Nevertheless, Polymer was good for Sarnia. It employed many people at high wages. Perhaps there was little unemployment in the minister's area. Let me ask him this question: Will a small pocket of unemployment in an area otherwise prosperous affect the over-all unemployment rate of the region? I suppose the bright young executives the government likes to hire would feed such questions into the computer. If you ask it the right questions, the computer can answer in seconds. On the other hand, if things go wrong the computer could take weeks or even months to answer.

Say a plant goes bankrupt in a small town and lays off its entire work force. You could have a pocket of high unemployment in an area otherwise prosperous. Would the computer take this pocket of unemployment into account? Would that affect the over-all standing of the region? Would regional unemployment benefit levels be affected? What would happen if unemployment in Oil Springs and Petrolia were high, but at low levels in Sarnia? Would the high level of employment in Sarnia affect the eligibility of people in Oil Springs and Petrolia for extended benefits? Will the standing of the general region be affected? There may not be much unemployment in Sarnia; I do not know; I have not been there for some time. I can ask relatives about conditions in the area; I have many relatives there.

An hon. Member: In the hotel?

Mr. Peters: No, the hotel burned down some time ago. That relative retired. He went to Sudbury.

Mr. Rodriguez: Another capitalist.

Some hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Peters: Mr. Speaker, I was talking about what would happen if unemployment in Oil Springs, say, were high at a time when unemployment in Sarnia was low. I think I have made my point. I suppose the government would feed the problem into the computer. I am concerned about the people of Kirkland Lake who face major problems. About 1,000 have been laid off in the area, one of the largest gold mines having closed. Their lumber industry is hurt, and other resource-based industries are badly hit. It seems to me we should make conditions easier in these areas.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Order, please. It being one o'clock, I do now leave the chair until two o'clock.

At one o'clock the House took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The House resumed at 2 p.m.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[English]

ROYAL CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICE

PROPOSED ADDITION TO TERMS OF REFERENCE OF COMMISSION OF INQUIRY—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Joe Clark (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a matter of urgent and pressing necessity under the provisions of Standing Order 43. The terms of reference for the inquiry into the RCMP are silent in the one area which has been of great concern to the House of Commons and to the public—the question of the quality of the political responsibility for the RCMP exercised by past Ministers, and the implications of that responsibility or lack of it for the constitutionally essential doctrine of ministerial responsibility.

I would therefore move, seconded by the hon. member for Wellington-Grey-Dufferin-Waterloo (Mr. Beatty):

That in the opinion of this House the terms of reference for the Royal Commission into the operations of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, established under the Inquiries Act, should be amended by

(1) adding after the last "whereas" clause the following: "and Whereas it is essential that this inquiry demonstrate that proper ministerial accountability for the Royal Canadian Mounted Police has been exercised in the past, and that proper procedures exist for exercising full ministerial responsibility at present and in the future;" and

(2) by adding at the end the "Therefore" clause after paragraph (c) the following paragraph:

"(d) to investigate and report on the manner in which Solicitors General have exercised their constitutional obligation to supervise fully the activities of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and report thereon to the Parliament of Canada."

Mr. Speaker: Under the terms of Standing Order 43 unanimous consent is required before such a motion can be presented. Is there such consent?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

PROPOSED CHANGE IN TERMS OF REFERENCE OF COMMISSION OF INQUIRY—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa-Whitby): Mr. Speaker, I expect the same fate will befall my proposal.

Considering that the Parliamentary Secretary to the Solicitor General (Mr. Lee) told the House on June 15, 1976 that an investigation into the RCMP break-in in the fall of 1972 had been completed, presumably to the satisfaction of the government, and considering there is conflicting testimony as to the degree of knowledge possessed by the then solicitor general in 1972 pertaining to this break-in, and considering that the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) indicated in the House on June 20 and June 22 of this year that he was concerned about the political accountability aspect of RCMP activities, and, finally, in order to avoid the implication that the Royal Commission announced yesterday will have as its sole purpose the making of a scapegoat of the RCMP, I ask leave to move, seconded by the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles):

That this House instruct the government to change the terms of reference of the Royal Commission to include an additional clause (d) to read:

(d) To investigate and report on the adequacy of accountability procedures designed to ensure effective authority over the RCMP by the elected government of the day.

Mr. Speaker: Such a motion requires the unanimous consent of the House under the terms of Standing Order 43. Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

[Translation]

INDUSTRY

MEASURES TO PREVENT CLOSING OF SHOE MANUFACTURERS—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Léonel Beaudoin (Richmond): Mr. Speaker, pursuant to the provisions of Standing Order 43, I ask for the unanimous consent of the House to move a motion requesting immediate action as regards the shoe industry in Canada.

Considering that the Anti-dumping Tribunal which is now examining the situation of this industry in Canada agreed to present an interim report next week on a specific category of shoes and considering the urgency for all shoe manufacturers to know the specific steps that will be taken by the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce in this very important sector and considering finally that the complete report of the tribunal will be tabled next fall only, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Villeneuve (Mr. Caouette):

That the House urge the ministers responsible for the importation of shoes, namely the Minister of Finance (Mr. Macdonald) and the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce (Mr. Chrétien), to ask the Anti-dumping Tribunal to give next week a general idea of government measures to prevent the closing of our Canadian plants.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The House has heard the motion of the hon. member. Pursuant to the provisions of Standing Order 43, this motion requires the unanimous consent of the House. Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

● (1410)

[English]

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

SUGGESTED REFERENCE TO COMMITTEE OF INTERNATIONAL JOINT COMMISSION REPORT ON GARRISON DIVERSION—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Dean Whiteway (Selkirk): Mr. Speaker, I rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43 on a matter of urgent and pressing necessity. In view of the fact that the International Joint Commission is expected to table its final report on the Garrison diversion project this month, and in light of the serious ramifications of this report for Canadian wildlife and waterways, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Perth-Wilmot (Mr. Jarvis):

That this House direct the soon-to-be released final report to the Standing Committee on Fisheries and Forestry for examination and review so that members of this parliament and the people of this country might be assured that Canada's interests in general and Manitoba's interests in particular have been protected.

Mr. Speaker: Pursuant to Standing Order 43, presentation of such a motion for debate can be done only with the unanimous consent of the House. Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

GOVERNMENT ADMINISTRATION

SUGGESTION PROPER METHOD OF MINISTERIAL ACCOUNTABILITY BE DEVELOPED—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. G. W. Baldwin (Peace River): Mr. Speaker, I have a motion under Standing Order 43 which I am sure is sufficiently moderate to command the support of hon. members opposite. The urgent and pressing circumstances arise from the facts leading to the appointment of the commission of inquiry into the RCMP. These revelations, the last of a number of cases affecting government departments, expose the myth of ministerial responsibility and establish that many ministers have been either duped or kept in ignorance or were deliberately deceiving parliament and the people. Therefore, I move:

That this House demands that the government develop a method of true accountability to parliament and the people, and in particular should immediately provide an appendix to the green paper on public access to government documents which would eliminate the mockery of ministerial responsibility as a reason for rejecting a review process when governments refuse to disclose information.

Mr. Speaker: Pursuant to Standing Order 43, presentation of such a motion requires the unanimous consent of the House. Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

ANTI-INFLATION BOARD

CONDEMNATION OF EXPENDITURE ON TAKING POLLS—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, I rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43 on a matter of urgent and pressing necessity. In view of the eight page ad placed by the Anti-Inflation Board in the latest issue of Saturday Night and the unnecessary expenditure of $15,000 for government propaganda, and in view of the fact that this propaganda includes a poll on issues supposedly related to inflation, I move:

That this House condemns the unnecessary propaganda expenditures by the government of Canada and its continuing reliance on formulating federal policies by taking polls.

Mr. Speaker: Presentation of such a motion for debate requires the unanimous consent of the House, pursuant to Standing Order 43. Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

Oral Questions

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

ROYAL CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICE

PROPOSED EXPANSION OF TERMS OF REFERENCE OF COMMISSION OF INQUIRY TO INCLUDE MINISTERIAL RESPONSIBILITY

Mr. Joe Clark (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I had intended to direct a question to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources, but two minutes ago we received notice that he will make a statement on motions. Therefore, I will direct my question to the Solicitor General. The terms of reference of the judicial commission of inquiry into the RCMP are narrow, restrictive and inadequate. Therefore, I should like to ask the Solicitor General if he would undertake to expand the mandate of the MacDonald Commission to formally require a complete investigation of ministerial actions and ministerial responsibilities with respect to the interface between the national government and our national police force?

[Translation]

Hon. Francis Fox (Solicitor General): Mr. Speaker, I thank the Leader of the Opposition for his question. Of course, more will be needed than merely stating the terms of reference. In fact, the mandate entrusted by this government to the commission of inquiry is extremely broad. One need but read it, and perhaps in some cases reread it, to see that the commission of inquiry is really authorized to look into all allegations of illegal and criminal activities, and pursue them from one link to the other all the way down the line, provided of course there is a line. I have absolutely no intention, at this stage, Mr. Speaker, of broadening a mandate that is quite wide enough to allow the commission to receive, study and understand all the allegations which may be made, far-fetched, founded as they may be, against the RCMP.

[English]

Mr. Clark: Mr. Speaker, the minister well knows that the only people who think those terms of reference are large enough to adequately look into the question of ministerial responsibility are himself, his partisans and other people who might have something to protect. What is surprising to us is that the Prime Minister of this government, in the House on May 24—

An hon. Member: He is the Prime Minister of this country.

Mr. Clark: I did not know that the government wanted to renounce him so quickly, but even if they do not the country will as soon as an opportunity arises. Since the Prime Minister on May 24 stated in the House that in respect of activities of the RCMP "the principle of ministerial responsibility applies", and since the Solicitor General has also himself stated that under the Official Secrets Act he is required to "approve in a certain number of cases the operations of the RCMP security service", I should like to ask the Solicitor General why the government will admit ministerial responsibility in theory yet deny a specific mandate to inquire as to how it was exercised in this particular case.

[Translation]

Mr. Fox: Mr. Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition is referring to the Official Secrets Act. Some powers are given to me by that act. It goes without saying, Mr. Speaker, that the Official Secrets Act speaks for itself. I have no comments to make on that. The powers are explicit. Everyone is aware of them. With regard to ministerial responsibility, Mr. Speaker, I feel it is completely obvious, simply in the light of my statement yesterday as well as previous statements in the House, that on this side of the House, not only do we accept but we have been, for some time now, living up to the principle of ministerial responsibility.

[English]

NUMBER OF ILLEGAL ACTIONS IN WHICH FORCE INVOLVED, PERIOD OF TIME COVERED AND MINISTERIAL KNOWLEDGE OF THEM

Mr. Joe Clark (Leader of the Opposition): What is clear, Mr. Speaker, is that if these ministers can find any way at all to evade responsibility and to blame their public servants, they will do it. In his statement to the House yesterday the Solicitor General stated that he had been informed by the commissioner of the RCMP that some members of the RCMP, to quote the minister, "in the dispatch of their responsibility to protect national security could well have used methods or could have been involved in actions which were neither authorized nor provided for by law". With respect to this important admission by the commissioner, I should like to ask the Solicitor General how many illegal actions the RCMP have been involved in, over what period of time have they occurred, and to what degree did any minister have any knowledge of any aspect of investigations which involved illegal activities.

[Translation]

Hon. Francis Fox (Solicitor General): Mr. Speaker, I have indeed much difficulty understanding the question the Leader of the Opposition is asking. Nearly every day over the past month or month and a half, the Leader of the Opposition and his colleagues have moved motion after motion under Standing Order 43, seeking an impartial inquiry. As a matter of fact, when I made my statement in the House on June 17 last, I was told that the word of the Solicitor General of Canada was not enough, that an impartial inquiry was needed. Opposition members wanted an impartial and independent inquiry, well, they have it now, and it should provide all the answers the Leader of the Opposition has been seeking.

[English]

Mr. Clark: A final supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. The minister protests with all the vigour we have become accustomed to in place of answers to questions. What I asked him related to the information he received from the commissioner, and in particular I wanted to know whether any minister had any knowledge of any aspect of any investigation which involved illegal actions, and whether that is now known to the Solicitor General of Canada. If it is, would he advise the House of Commons that there were cases of this kind, and would he advise the House of Commons how many illegal actions the RCMP is believed by their commissioner to have been involved in, over what period of time they have occurred and under what ministers they have occurred?

[Translation]

Mr. Fox: Mr. Speaker, as you and hon. members know, until June 17 last we took the position that the incident was of an extraordinary nature, an isolated case, indeed a very unusual one.

Since then we have learned, as I indicated in my statement in the House yesterday, that we had good reason to believe that there were perhaps other cases where the RCMP resorted to illegal practices, which I think fully justifies the establishment of a commission of inquiry.

The commission of inquiry will have to cast the light entirely and completely on the allegations, Mr. Speaker, but so far there is no indication that any minister of the Crown is involved in any way in the facts alleged.

● (1420)

[English]

PROPOSED INQUIRY BY COMMITTEE INTO DEGREE OF MINISTERIAL RESPONSIBILITY FOR FORCE

Mr. G. W. Baldwin (Peace River): I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Having in mind the slippery nature of the answers given—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Baldwin: —and having in mind that the contents of the minister's statement made yesterday completely sweep away and destroy the basis on which the government's case has been rested in the last month on this issue, I should like to ask the minister, on this question of ministerial responsibility which, if I understand anything, means responsibility to the House—

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Baldwin: —if the government will not yield to the reasonable suggestion of the leader of our party to have an inquiry into this question of responsibility and let a committee of the House find out to what extent, if at all, the members of the government have been deceiving parliament.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Baldwin: While there is a rule in the House by which we accept what is said in the House, there are many people outside the House who are skeptical about the rule, are not bound by it, and do not feel the same way about it as we are compelled to feel here.

[Translation]

Hon. Francis Fox (Solicitor General): Mr. Speaker, of course if the hon. member wants to talk of slippery slope, I would remind him that not long ago the opposition accused us of having a police state within the government and of setting up a list of enemies, according to their own words. Conversely, they say there is no political control over the RCMP at present. There is indeed a slippery slope, but in my opinion within the opposition itself. As for ministerial responsibility, Mr. Speaker, I suggest that the commission of inquiry has all the necessary powers to establish whether or not there were criminal activities and consequently to find out if there has been any cover-up or some other doubtful activities.

Mr. Speaker, the best way to discuss those allegations is not to submit them to a parliamentary committee, with all due respect we should have for these institutions—and I profess a lot of respect for them—because that kind of procedure might give rise to sectarian attitudes. Mr. Speaker, I think that the reputation of the RCMP should be discussed outside the polical arena and it deserves to be judged in a fair and independent way as we proposed to the House yesterday.

[English]

INQUIRY WHETHER ASSURANCE RECEIVED FROM COMMISSIONER ILLEGAL ACTIVITIES TERMINATED

Mr. G. W. Baldwin (Peace River): In light of the fact that the Solicitor General has withdrawn previous statements that the APLQ break-in was an isolated and unique incident, could he inform the House if he has received an iron-clad assurance from the commissioner of the RCMP that all illegal activities have now been terminated?

[Translation]

Hon. Francis Fox (Solicitor General): Mr. Speaker, it is quite clear that the instructions given to the RCMP are to carry out their activities within strictly legal boundaries and if ever there were cases where such instructions were not followed, the commissioner and the government would assume their responsibilities, as we indicated once again very specifically and clearly yesterday when, with the consent of the RCMP commissioner and on his advice, we undertook an inquiry on the entire issue.

[English]

SUGGESTION INQUIRY INTO MINISTERIAL ACCOUNTABILITY FOR ILLEGAL ACTIVITIES OF FORCE BE MANDATORY

Mr. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa-Whitby): I have a question for the Solicitor General. The minister knows that members on this side of the House have demanded a full inquiry from the outset, not one simply into the RCMP, so he should not try to buy us off with the claim that the government has done what we have requested.

Considering that on June 8 of last year the then solicitor general said that the government had started an investigation into the break-in in the fall of 1972 immediately it was brought to its attention, and considering that a few weeks later we had a report back to the House from the parliamentary secretary that that investigation had been completed, presumably to the satisfaction of the government, and, to cite one other instance involving political accountability, considering the conflicting testimony that we have coming from the Minister of Supply and Services pertaining to the time when he was solicitor general compared with what former commissioner Higgitt has said, and concerning the degree of knowledge that the then solicitor general had about the break-in, I would like to ask the present Solicitor General if he will not make it a mandatory requirement that the political accountability aspect of this case be investigated instead of, as he well knows, leaving open the possible occurrence of such an investigation.

[Translation]

Hon. Francis Fox (Solicitor General): Because, Mr. Speaker, we have set up—once again, unfortunately, it seems that I have to repeat myself—we have set up an independent commission of inquiry presided over by a justice of the Supreme Court of Alberta who has been directed to go thoroughly over the matter. Of course, this commission of inquiry will want to examine the allegations. I am not going to tell it how to proceed. The commission of inquiry will consider the allegations and if it decides that there was some illegal action, it will no doubt want to examine the matter thoroughly to determine exactly whether or not there was some covering up. I hope that those comments answer the question of the hon. member.

[English]

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, as a lawyer surely the minister knows that is soporific nonsense.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Broadbent: He has just said to the House that it is possible that the inquiry will look into this. He has not said it is mandatory, and surely that is what we have a right to expect.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Broadbent: Would the minister tell the House why he would object to including a clause—if he is really sincere that he believes the commission should, which is what he wants us to believe, look into all aspects of the question—indicating that one of the requirements of the commission is to investigate and report on the adequacy of accountability procedures in order to ensure effective authority over the RCMP by the elected government of the day? I ask that question in light of the minister's own expressed views about alleged concern and those of his own Prime Minister.

[Translation]

Mr. Fox: Mr. Speaker, as far as I am concerned, it is inconceivable that the commission would refuse to examine the case mentioned by the hon. member. I understand that, on his side of the House, the hon. member thinks there are some hesitations, and sees some problems with respect to the RCMP's accountability to the government. It seems to me, Mr. Speaker, that this question could also be studied by the commission if it wants to make recommendations under clause C of the terms of reference.

[Mr. Broadbent.]

On our part, Mr. Speaker, as government and Solicitor General, if we find we have not enough control or there is a lack of accountability from the RCMP towards the Solicitor General, we will introduce the necessary amendments and fill our role as a government. Then, we do not need the Leader of the Opposition or any other organization to remind us what we have to do. We are prepared to hear suggestions from any circle, provided these suggestions are rational and logical, but we intend to carry out our responsibilities in that area and in others as well.

[English]

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, with all respect, in the last answer the minister said it was possible that the inquiry would look into these things. The answer he just gave is that it is inconceivable that it will not. The minister cannot have it both ways. Either it is possible or it is inconceivable that the commission will not do otherwise. In a private conversation the minister and I had in the House yesterday—and in a sense I hesitate to bring it up—the minister indicated to me the words he used in one answer, namely, that it is possible under clause C of the terms of reference that the commission would look into such matters. If the minister believes it is only possible and if he wants to maintain—as he is doing, on the other hand—that it is important that the commission look into these questions, then why in God's name does the minister not make it mandatory by putting it into the terms of reference?

[Translation]

Mr. Fox: Mr. Speaker, perhaps the hon. member has not grasped what I was meaning. In my opinion, it is inconceivable that the commission of inquiry would not look into the APLQ matter. That matter is mentioned in the first clause of the commission's terms of reference. As for matters of procedure, accountability and suggestion of authority over the RCMP by the Solicitor General, it is precisely under clause C that the commission could decide to make recommendations about it. It is highly possible, despite what the opposition member thinks, that the commission would find that the control mechanisms with the changes we will propose in September are perfectly sufficient for this period of 1977.

* * *

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

INQUIRY AS TO SEARCH FOR CANADIAN JOURNALIST MISSING IN UGANDA

Mr. Léonel Beaudoin (Richmond): Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct a question to the Acting Prime Minister.

In view of the fact that the President of Uganda, Marshall Idi Amin Dada represents a menace for the world on account of his cruelty, because according to one of his former ministers, he put to death more than 100,000 of his fellow countrymen; that a Canadian newspaperman is reported missing in Uganda and this country has not given any satisfactory explanation about his disappearance; can the Acting Prime Minister inform the House whether there is any news about this missing Canadian, whether active search is being conducted by responsible people? Where does the matter stand?

• (1430)

[English]

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Acting Prime Minister): Yes, Mr. Speaker. I can advise the hon. member that the Canadian representative in Nairobi has been, I believe, several times in Uganda raising this question with the officials of the government. Up to the present time, to my available knowledge, it has not been possible to locate the journalist in question. There is, as I understand it, some doubt as to whether he continues to be in Uganda. Certainly, we are doing everything possible to locate him and to lend whatever support we can in his discovery.

[Translation]

Mr. Beaudoin: Mr. Speaker, can the Acting Prime Minister tell us whether this newspaper man has been identified or is identifiable and whether he stayed in Uganda; also whether any Canadian government official knows of his whereabouts, and with his passport, to what country did he go?

[English]

Mr. MacEachen: Mr. Speaker, the identity of the journalist is certainly known to the Canadian authorities. However, it has not been possible to get from the Ugandan authorities information as to his whereabouts and as to whether he is still in Uganda. That is the latest information which I had a day or so ago. The Secretary of State for External Affairs is not in the House at the moment, but I will be happy to follow up this inquiry to ensure that the most recent information is made available to avoid any misunderstanding or misapprehension, certainly to avoid any fear that may be caused as to his whereabouts.

[Translation]

Mr. Armand Caouette (Villeneuve): Mr. Speaker, a supplementary for the same minister.

Since we seem to have a lot of difficulty to find out where this reporter is now, could the minister tell the House whether it is his intention to break off all relations with Uganda to force this government to give us an answer without delay?

[English]

Mr. MacEachen: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member should bear in mind that there are a number of Canadians in Uganda, as I recollect. Therefore, it might not be in the best interests of the safety of those Canadians to take the action he recommends, which might be appealing at other times.

* * *

FARM CREDIT CORPORATION

INDICTMENT OF MANAGEMENT IN AUDIT BY SIBALD GROUP—GOVERNMENT ACTION

Mr. Perrin Beatty (Wellington-Grey-Dufferin-Waterloo): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of Agriculture, I will direct my question to his parliamentary secretary. In view of the findings of a private management audit of the Farm Credit Corporation completed by the Sibbald Group earlier this year, findings that were scathing in their description of poor morale throughout the corporation and noted lack of direction from the top, including the following comments:

> The problem of management was voiced during virtually every staff interview at almost all levels of the corporation . . .
>
> The number of references to management problems during the interviews was too great to ignore. There are complaints about lack of credibility, lack of confidence in leadership, lack of communication and mystery regarding corporate objectives at almost all levels of the corporation—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Does the hon. member have a question?

Mr. Beatty: Yes, Mr. Speaker. There are a couple of other scathing quotations I could put on the record, but I will let them pass. What action is being taken by the Minister of Agriculture in response to this serious indictment of senior management within this corporation?

[Translation]

Mr. Irénée Pelletier (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, all these allegations have proved to be false, after an investigation was made regarding this corporation.

[English]

Mr. Beatty: Is the parliamentary secretary telling this House that the internal management audit commissioned by and conducted on the Farm Credit Corporation, which made those findings I referred to and others, is being examined and found to be false? If so, will the parliamentary secretary tell the House whether the charges made in the consultant's report have been investigated? There have been several instances of cases where employees of the Farm Credit Corporation were enrolled in expensive French language training courses and then sent to areas of the country where no one speaks French, thus losing their ability to speak the language, and serious cases of moonlighting among the staff of the Farm Credit Corporation, including moonlighting on government time. Is the parliamentary secretary denying that?

[Translation]

Mr. Pelletier: Mr. Speaker, if the hon. member has precise cases in mind, he should tell the House about them. The minister has examined these various reports on several occasions and he did not find anything contrary to the duties of the chairman of the commission.

[English]

Mr. Beatty: Ten o'clock, Mr. Speaker.

* * *

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

UGANDA—INFORMATION ON STATUS OF JOURNALIST GERALD UTTING

Mr. Douglas Roche (Edmonton-Strathcona): Mr. Speaker, my question is supplementary to questions asked by the Social Credit. It is directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. A few moments ago the Acting Prime Minister provided some information to the House concerning the present status of Mr. Gerald Utting, a Toronto Star reporter. Can the minister provide a little more information about the present status of Mr. Utting? I ask this question against the delicate background of two events in the past two days, first, a conversation that took place between the minister's officials and the Uganda High Commissioner to Canada, and second, the announcement by U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim that President Idi Amin has agreed to allow a United Nations team to investigate human rights in Uganda.

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the hon. member will appreciate, as I think he used the word, the delicacy of my answer. I was advised just a few moments ago that further discussions took place this morning here in Ottawa between the High Commissioner and officials of my department. Certain steps are presently being taken. I can only conclude from the information provided to me that the prospects look hopeful in getting some firm information on the whereabouts and condition of Mr. Utting in the very near future. In other words, direct contact has been made with Uganda regarding this matter.

CANADIAN ROLE IN MAINTAINING HUMAN RIGHTS—REQUEST FOR REPORT ON PREPARATIONS FOR MEETING ON HELSINKI AGREEMENT

Mr. Douglas Roche (Edmonton-Strathcona): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the answer of the minister. Since human rights have become a major theme in world diplomacy in the past few months, what role does Canada intend playing not only in the specific Uganda situation but in other troubled areas such as Ethiopia and Chile, which are of concern to the United Nations also? Also, in what way will the minister report to the House Canada's preparations for the Helsinki meeting that will be examining violations of human rights in the Soviet bloc?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, on the developments yesterday with regard to President Amin's willingness to accept the United Nations investigatory team, this is of course, although presumably indirectly, in response to a motion moved by Canada at the Geneva meeting some time ago. In that case, what is now being agreed to by Mr. Amin appears to be consistent with what we have been seeking. Whether Canada will have a direct membership on the team which goes to Uganda is not clear at the moment. Presumably, the parties concerned will be consulting as to the make-up and nature of the team and the conditions under which they will go to Uganda.

On other matters relating to non-signatory countries to the Helsinki agreement, there are no new initiatives planned with regard to, for example, Ethiopia and Chile other than a repetition in whatever forums are available. The United Nations and the Canadian position, as the hon. member knows, is very strongly opposed both to human rights violations in Uganda and indeed to the whole unhappy situation in Ethiopia which goes beyond human rights into a number of other areas which are regrettable from our point of view.

• (1440)

As to the Belgrade conference, if I may conclude the answer to a "tripartite" question, I have had consultations in Belgrade with the head of the Canadian delegation. The meetings will very likely continue until the end of this month and it is not clear at the moment what kind of agenda will be devised. I will be glad to consult with members of the foreign affairs committee as to the best means of informing members, and whatever means they decide will be perfectly all right with me.

* * *

TRANSPORT

CUTBACK IN RAIL PASSENGER SERVICE IN NOVA SCOTIA—INQUIRY AS TO OPPOSITION BY PREMIER REGAN

Mr. Robert Muir (Cape Breton-The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, my question for the Minister of Transport relates to a memorandum he circulated, dated May 25. He indicated in the memorandum, and in a copy of a telex enclosed, that he and the four Atlantic premiers had agreed in principle, among other things, to a cutback in rail services in the provinces concerned. Since Premier Regan a few days ago told a committee from Sydney Academy that he was not only surprised but shocked at the minister's memorandum, and promised to make his feelings known to the minister, may I ask if Premier Regan has been in touch with the minister, to indicate his strong opposition to any possible rail passenger cutback in Nova Scotia; if so, when did such a message from Premier Regan arrive?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I received a telegram from Premier Regan but am not sure of the exact date. It seems to me I got it within the last several days. In it he indicated a view about rail passenger service in Nova Scotia different from that contained in earlier agreements between ourselves. Naturally, I shall pursue the matter. The telegram had specific reference to one rail service.

RAIL PASSENGER SERVICE BETWEEN SYDNEY AND TRURO—SUPPORT OF ATLANTIC PREMIERS FOR RECOMMENDATION TO TRANSPORT COMMISSION

Mr. Robert Muir (Cape Breton-The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, may I try on another question for size? Has the minister, through his officials or representatives of the department, submitted a recommendation to the Canadian Transport Commission concerning the abandonment of CN passenger rail service between Sydney and Truro? Did such a recommendation contain the names of the Atlantic premiers, including that of Premier Regan?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, as the House knows from past exchanges, and the announcement to which the hon. member referred, the five governments agreed to put before the CTC a study and examination of rail passenger service and the economies of the alternatives available. That study was placed before the CTC for its consideration.

* * *

[Translation]

CANADIAN PACIFIC

PROPOSED ABANDONMENT OF HULL TO MANIWAKI SERVICE—GOVERNMENT ACTION

Mr. Thomas H. Lefebvre (Pontiac): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Transport about the request of CP Rail, which has announced recently that it would like to abandon service between Hull and Maniwaki.

[English]

Is the minister aware of this CP rail project and the negative results it would have on the Gatineau Valley, if allowed? Also, would he delegate a personal representative to the meeting, scheduled for next Tuesday, so that those interested in preventing the closure will obtain all the information they need to make their protest effective at the public hearings which will be held?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I will be glad to do so. I should say immediately that, unfortunately, the legislation under which we operate makes it necessary for applications for abandonment to be made in order that the CTC may consider if granting a subsidy to continue the service is the proper course of action. Even if the railway hopes to get a subsidy to continue the service, it has no alternative except to apply for abandonment. This question has been of great concern in areas where such procedure has been followed and I look forward to the opportunity of changing the wording of the statute, so that the seeking of assistance and support may be an alternative to the application for abandonment. Certainly, this has been of concern in the west, as well, in connection with branch lines.

* * *

ROYAL CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICE

POSSIBILITY MR. GOYER WILL TESTIFY BEFORE COMMISSION OF INQUIRY

Mr. Stuart Leggatt (New Westminster): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Solicitor General. Yesterday the former Solicitor General, the present Minister of Supply and Services, assured the House that he would fully co-operate with the MacDonald commission. Can the Solicitor General say if the previous Solicitor General informed him of his willingness to testify in public concerning the conflict between former Commissioner Higgitt and himself relating to the events of November 7. Former Commissioner Higgitt's words were, "I would be surprised if he was not informed," whereas the former Solicitor General assures the House he was not informed. That is our information. There is an apparent conflict which I am sure the former Solicitor General and the present Solicitor General wish to resolve in public. The hon. member for Peace River suggested the Canadian public wants to be satisfied on the issue. Can the Solicitor General say if that evidence will be heard in public, if the commission inquires into that specific event?

Hon. Francis Fox (Solicitor General): Mr. Speaker, as the hon. member may recall, the Minister of Supply and Services yesterday assured the House he would co-operate fully with the commission and appear before it, if it asks him to do so. As to whether that appearance will take place in a public hearing, that matter must be determined by the commission, and I believe it is proper for the commission to determine it.

Mr. Leggatt: Mr. Speaker, I presume the Solicitor General can give us his commitment not to request that particular session to be held in camera. My supplementary concerns some information I gave the Solicitor General privately. It concerns the admission of the Five Dragons to Canada. Has the Solicitor General been able to determine if the RCMP liaison officer in Hong Kong received information from Hong Kong authorities concerning the Five Dragons, in particular Mr. Lui Lock of the Five Dragons? If so, was that information passed on to immigration authorities before those five men were admitted to Canada?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Where is the connection? How is that a supplementary?

Mr. Fox: Mr. Speaker, I should like the hon. member—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Even with the best of goodwill I have difficulty relating the hon. member's question to his previous question. I do not think it is a supplementary.

* * *

HEALTH

HYPERLIPEMIA—GOVERNMENT ACTION TO ASSESS MEANS OF CONTROL

Mr. P. B. Rynard (Simcoe North): Mr. Speaker, my question to the Minister of National Health and Welfare arises from his recent address in Vancouver to the public health association. I always read the minister's speeches with care and interest, and that speech was about the startling and galloping increase in the incidence of heart attacks at all ages, particularly younger age groups. We have seen a 250 per cent increase in males, 25 to 44, and a 150 per cent increase in women. Since the minister is concerned about all the attendant suffering, about the deaths, disabilities, loss of earning power and sorrow, I ask, why did the minister not mention that well recognized groups of people are suffering from hyperlipemia, which may be hereditary, or from allied diseases, and how their disease is to be treated?

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, hyperlipemia is a serious disease but there is no consensus within the medical profession on the usefulness or cost effectiveness of a nation-wide screening program for children. As I said in my speech in Vancouver, we are planning to test the best possible strategies and approaches on a limited scale and will adopt nationally only those which appear to be most promising. I can assure the hon. member that we shall look at the specific disease he mentioned, to see if it would be appropriate to institute a test project or pilot program.

Mr. Rynard: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Since blood cholesterol rises steadily from age one to age seven, why was it not considered appropriate to study children in those age groups in our schools?

● (1450)

Mr. Lalonde: I am advised, Mr. Speaker, that there is some recent evidence from animal experiments, in particular from Dr. Hahn's in Vancouver, that if newborn animals are fed low cholesterol diets they will develop excess cholesterol in later life. This particular aspect must be looked into further.

* * *

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

ROSEAU RIVER PROJECT—IDENTIFICATION OF MITIGATING WORKS

Mr. Jake Epp (Provencher): Mr. Speaker, I should like to address my question to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. It concerns the discussions with his United States counterpart on the effect of the Roseau River project and specifically its effect on southeastern Manitoba. Have the mitigating works all been identified? Who will pay for the mitigating works and more important, will they prevent any adverse effects that have been identified?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I apologize to the hon. member for not having that information at hand. I will take note of the question and provide the information either in the House or in writing within a couple of days.

* * *

ROYAL CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICE

INVESTIGATION OF ALLEGED ILLEGALITIES CONNECTED WITH SALE OF NUCLEAR REACTORS—REQUEST FOR REPORT

Mr. Allan Lawrence (Northumberland-Durham): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Solicitor General. Has he received any report from the RCMP about the obviously crooked nuclear fee dealings of AECL and if he has not yet received a report, has he been kept up-to-date on the progress of the investigation in Canada, Switzerland, Italy and Argentina?

[Mr. Rynard.]

Hon. Francis Fox (Solicitor General): The answer to the first part of the question, Mr. Speaker, is yes, the investigation is an ongoing one and is progressing.

Mr. Lawrence: A supplementary question. Can the minister inform the House if he has been keeping the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources informed of the progress of this investigation?

Mr. Fox: Mr. Speaker, it is a police investigation that is in progress. Once it has come to an end, I will of course get in touch with my colleague.

* * *

TRANSPORT

REPLACEMENT FOR "WILLIAM CARSON"—POSSIBILITY AIR CANADA WILL PROVIDE ADDITIONAL SERVICE TO NEWFOUNDLAND

Mr. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Transport. I welcome his announcement made yesterday that there will be a judicial inquiry into the sinking of the William Carson. My question stems from that in a way because I want to know if a decision has been made on a replacement for the William Carson or if there has been a rationalization of existing modes to help clear up the backlog created as a result of the sinking of this ship and aggravated by the fact that Air Canada has reduced the number of seats available to Newfoundland this year?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, work has been going on to make sure that the demand for seats and passage for freight is provided by such movement of vessels from one route to another and additional vessels where required. This will continue. I do not know when I will be in a position to announce the final solution. Because of the nature of things we will be assessing the demand and attempting at all times to ensure that vessels are available.

Mr. McGrath: Mr. Speaker, may I by way of a supplementary and in the form of a representation ask the minister, who answers for Air Canada, if he would discuss with the President of Air Canada the possibility of providing additional seats to the province this year in light of the summer games in Newfoundland in August and especially because of the demand created by the sinking of the William Carson?

Mr. Lang: Mr. Speaker, I would imagine that Air Canada has the potential of travel to Newfoundland for the games very much in mind but I will take up the matter with the President of Air Canada in order to be sure that he has taken this into consideration.

NATIONAL BUILDING CODE

SUGGESTED AMENDMENT TO IMPROVE FIRE ESCAPE ROUTES IN HIGHRISE BUILDINGS

Mrs. Jean E. Pigott (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of State for Urban Affairs, may I address my question to his parliamentary secretary. With the rising population in urban centres in Canada and the increase in highrise buildings, new problems have arisen in connection with fire safety. Since the tallest ladders available to fire departments reach only between the sixth and eighth floors of most buildings and since stairway escape routes can become blocked with smoke, thus preventing safe exit, can the minister inform the House whether consideration has been given to the inclusion of improved evacuation systems in the National Building Code?

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of State for Urban Affairs): Mr. Speaker, this matter comes under provincial jurisdiction but I will inform the minister and look into the matter.

* * *

PUBLIC BUILDINGS

PLACE DU PORTAGE—REQUEST FOR IMPROVED FIRE EXITS—GOVERNMENT ACTION

Mrs. Jean E. Pigott (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, may I put my supplementary question to the Minister of Public Works. Since the landscaping and architecture of the government's new complex, Place du Portage in Hull, is suspected by fire experts of inhibiting safe exit from the building in case of an emergency and since this situation seems especially critical in light of recent reports that some fire alarm bells ring seven times a day in that complex causing concern about what will happen when a genuine emergency arises, can the minister inform the House whether consideration has been given to the installation of a balcony evacuation system in Place du Portage in an effort to better protect the lives of public servants relocated in that office building? Can the minister tell the House whether the department has complied with all local fire regulations of the city of Hull and the National Building Code?

Hon. Judd Buchanan (Minister of Public Works): Mr. Speaker, it is my understanding that the buildings do comply with the codes but we are looking at the situation. The comment vis-à-vis the landscaping is a new wrinkle, however. It is my understanding that we have met the standards as laid down and the buildings comply with them.

ENERGY

PIPELINE TREATY WITH UNITED STATES—INQUIRY AS TO IMPLEMENTATION

Mr. Gordon Ritchie (Dauphin): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. In view of the announced lobbying in Washington by the State of Alaska and El Paso, joined by Southern Gas and Tenneco, and as one of the major uncertainties of the Alcan route is that unreasonable tariffs and uncertain political actions in Canada might not be controlled, is the pipeline treaty signed, in place, and functioning?

Hon. Alastair Gillespie (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I should like to be able to consult with my colleague, the Secretary of State for External Affairs, on the exact status of the pipeline treaty. I know there has been initialling by both sides, but whether there has been formal approval because there was an agreement, I am not in a position at the moment to indicate.

ALCAN PIPELINE—POSSIBILITY APPROVAL OF ROUTE INVOLVES EXCHANGING OIL AND GAS WITH UNITED STATES

Mr. Gordon Ritchie (Dauphin): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Does the approval of the Alcan route involve a degree of swapping and a type of continental energy exchange of oil and gas to some extent, with these products being treated as a marketable commodity in some way?

Hon. Alastair Gillespie (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, those are the kinds of questions which the National Energy Board raised in its reports and the kinds of questions Cabinet will be looking at in the weeks to come.

* * *

[Translation]

AIRPORTS

SUGGESTED RE-ESTABLISHMENT OF FRENCH LANGUAGE FOR VISUAL FLIGHTS AT MIRABEL

Mr. Serge Joyal (Maisonneuve-Rosemont): Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct my question to the Minister of Transport. In view of the fact that Mirabel is now operating at less that 50 per cent of its capacity and that visual flights are authorized in other international airports of Canada, that the Minister of Transport sent some instructions on June 30, 1977, to the regional manager of Montreal to prohibit entirely landings and take-offs for visual flights at this airport and that the report on the investigation of bilingualism implementation for visual flights has not yet been made public, can the Minister of Transport tell the House if he would consider cancelling his instructions of June 30, 1977, providing the necessary services to Mirabel airport for visual flights and allowing pilots who hold a qualification certificate to land and take-off on visual flights at Mirabel airport?

[English]

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I believe the hon. member will appreciate that the current rules on the use of language in connection with air travel in the province of Quebec are subject to consideration by a commission. Tomorrow I will table an interim report. The situation in relation to Mirabel airport continues to be that only English is permitted in both VFR and IFR operations. Consideration is being given to the whole question of the future of the VFR flights in Mirabel. We have a study which indicates the wisdom of not allowing the landing and take-off of VFR flights at that airport in order that it be promoted as an ideal international airport for major aircraft. We have indicated those conclusions to the various interested associations and have requested their response. At this time that is only in relation to our indication that we would like to stop the landing and take-off of VFR flights at Mirabel. At the present time that is only done in English.

* * *

PUBLIC WORKS

COST OF MOVING DEPARTMENT OF INDUSTRY, TRADE AND COMMERCE TO NEW QUARTERS—REASON FOR ERECTING NEW BUILDING

Mr. Stan Darling (Parry Sound-Muskoka): Mr. Speaker, may I put a question to the Minister of Public Works regarding the move of the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce which his department is coordinating. The cost of moving this one small department a few yards down Sparks Street will be some $3.8 million, equivalent to the cost of hiring 300 movers for an entire year. The official reason for the cost is given as "coordination". God only knows what the cost would be if there were no coordination. Can the minister explain how it is possible for such a small move to cost so much, and is he prepared to tell the House what the full cost of moving 15,000 civil servants to Hull will be?

Hon. Judd Buchanan (Minister of Public Works): Mr. Speaker, it sounds as if the move were rather uncoordinated. I will have to check and get that information for the hon. member.

● (1500)

Mr. Darling: The new building into which Industry, Trade and Commerce will move is going to cost some $50 million. I would ask the Minister why the government built a new complex for occupancy in downtown Ottawa at the same precise time that four million square feet of office space will become vacant in downtown Ottawa? Is Public Works so incapable of planning the long range space requirements of government departments that it will build even when construction is not necessary?

Mr. Buchanan: That is blatant nonsense. The move was announced by one of my predecessors eight years ago. The intention of the government was to build these buildings, to occupy their own buildings and diminish the amount of rented space, thus getting into a better balanced position in the National Capital region. That is the policy which has been pursued and which is being carried out.

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, I gave you notice of my intention to raise a question of privilege and I am now doing so. On June 20, replying to a question from the hon. member for Greenwood (Mr. Brewin) who raised the issue of the accountability of the RCMP to the government authority, the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) said that it was an important and serious question and that it was causing the government concern. He went on to say he was discussing this precise matter with the Solicitor General (Mr. Fox). Two days later, on June 22, the Prime Minister indicated he still believed that the Montreal break-in was "an abberation, an incident and an isolated one". He then said: "I cannot say the question of accountability has been completely settled to the satisfaction of the government."

I have cited these references to show there has been on the part of the government itself a clearly expressed concern, at least in general terms, about the issue of governmental authority being clearly established over the operations of the RCMP.

I bring to your attention the following additional information. On June 15, 1976 the parliamentary secretary to the then solicitor general reported to the House that an "investigation" had just been completed into the 1972 break-in. It is evident now that either the investigation referred to was completely superficial, as we have reason to believe was the case, or that there was some kind of cover-up by either the RCMP or the government or by both. In any case political accountability is a central aspect of the recent allegations and convictions involving wrongdoing by the RCMP which have led to the government's decision to establish a Royal Commission to look into the matter. Unfortunately, though, it is a Commission which must ignore completely, under its terms of reference, the accountability issue which the Prime Minister and other members of the cabinet have regarded as being so central to this case.

Finally, as another illustration—

Mr. Speaker: Order. The hon. member has given ample illustrations. I am waiting for something which bears on the question of privilege.

Mr. Broadbent: I shall come to that, Your Honour. I was about to cite the contradiction between statements offered by the present Minister of Supply and Services (Mr. Goyer) and by the then Commissioner of the RCMP, Mr. Higgitt as to the degree of knowledge possessed by the then solicitor general at the time of the break-in in 1972.

I submit if we are to exercise our responsibility as members of parliament in this most serious matter involving allegations and convictions for criminal wrongdoing against the RCMP and, in particular, suggestions of political incompetence, and perhaps more than that, in the exercise of political responsibility for the RCMP, we should require not only that the Royal Commission investigate the RCMP in the narrow sense of the terms of reference, but also that it should be able to inquire into the question of political accountability, both in terms of general procedures and of the course followed in 1972 and in the alleged investigation which took place in 1976.

If Your Honour rules I have a prima facie case of privilege, I shall be happy to move a specific motion.

Mr. Speaker: As the hon. member will realize, I am sure, what he has done, in effect, is to express disagreement with the terms of reference of the Royal Commission and is questioning the value of the inquiry announced yesterday by the Solicitor General (Mr. Fox).

Despite the importance of the subject matter, that is a straight matter of debate and discussion. This subject was taken up extensively during the question period and it would be an unprecedented extension of the definition of privilege to extend the umbrella of privilege to cover a matter of straight disagreement of the sort the hon. member has raised.

[Translation]

Mr. Pelletier: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order to apologize to the hon. member for Wellington-Grey-Dufferin-Waterloo who asked me a question earlier concerning a recently published report. I was listening to the simultaneous interpretation and I misunderstood his question. In fact, the document is now being studied by the Department of Agriculture and, in some cases, its recommendations will be accepted by the department.

[English]

Mr. Beatty: On that point of order, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate the clarification which has been forthcoming from the parliamentary secretary. I must tell him, however, that I intend to ask the minister tomorrow, in the question period, for the information I sought today. I will also ask about the bilingualism program, moonlighting and the serious indictment of the senior staff of the Corporation including the allegation that "corporate senior leadership is widely viewed at all levels as being less than adequate, this feeling being more pronounced and widespread the higher one probes the corporate ladder." Perhaps the parliamentary secretary could ensure that whoever is answering for the department tomorrow is prepared to deal with that question.

Mr. Speaker: Order. A couple of days ago, the hon. member for Northumberland-Durham (Mr. Lawrence) contended, by way of a point of order, that the Minister of Supply and Services (Mr. Goyer) should be compelled to table a document following an argument put forward by the hon. member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath) that the minister, having quoted from a letter, should be required to table it. The hon. member for St. John's East was satisfied when the minister tabled the letter, but the hon. member for Northumberland-Durham then pointed out, by way of a further submission to the Chair, that the letter contained a reference to certain enclosures and that the enclosures had not been tabled by the minister, leaving the tabling incomplete. I indicated then that if there were any further arguments on the point I would hear them at this time, so if there are any hon. members who wish to address the Chair and advance further argument on the point I will hear them now. If not, I will make a ruling perhaps tomorrow or Monday.

• (1510)

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[English]

COMMITTEES OF THE HOUSE

Fifth report (supplementary) of Standing Committee on Transport and Communications—Mr. Campbell.

Second report of Standing Committee on Public Accounts entitled "The Polysar Report"—Mr. Lawrence.

Second report of Standing Committee on Broadcasting, Films and Assistance to the Arts—Mr. Douglas (Bruce-Grey).

[Editor's Note: For text of above reports, see today's Votes and Proceedings.]

* * *

ATOMIC ENERGY OF CANADA LIMITED

TABLING OF ANNUAL REPORT—STATEMENT BY MINISTER

Hon. Alastair Gillespie (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I intend to table, with the permission of the House, the annual report, financial statements and auditor's report for the operations of Atomic Energy of Canada Limited for the fiscal year 1976-77. In so doing, I wish to draw the attention of the House to the fact that the financial statements reveal an operating deficit of $180 million. All but $10 million of this is accounted for by provision for projected losses associated with existing contracts running over the course of this and the next several years. While the full magnitude of the losses and their timing is uncertain, the company, with the concurrence of the auditors, was of the opinion that a conservative approach should be taken. Therefore full provision for possible losses has been made in the statement for the year just ended.

In assessing this report, hon. members should reflect on the nature of the nuclear energy industry in which Canada chose some years ago to be a major participant. The industry is made up largely of a few major corporations having immense resources and technical competence and competing fiercely in the international market. The objective has been to seek the broadest possible markets, thereby staking out a preferred position for future sales to maintain a continuing workload for large, highly technical design and engineering staffs.

With the success of the Pickering generating station, AECL emerged abruptly from its research and development activity to compete in this difficult international market. Foreign sales were seen as essential for the continuity of the nuclear energy industry in Canada until the domestic market had grown to the required level. Given the nature of the competition it faced, and the rapid transition of the character of the corporation, it had always been recognized that there was considerable risk that losses would be incurred in AECL's first major foreign sale. Indeed, given the international competitive climate in the industry, it would have been surprising if this were not the case. The size of the potential loss, however, must be viewed very seriously.

Of the $170 million provision for projected losses, nearly $37 million is related to the provision of engineering services and heavy water to the domestic nuclear program. Most of this potential loss is associated with the Gentilly II reactor now being built for Hydro Quebec. Nearly all of the balance of the loss provision, about $130 million, relates to the Cordoba nuclear station in Argentina and arises in spite of the $70 to $80 million saving from last year's renegotiation of that contract. The new number makes provision for large contingency items and delay penalties.

The Corporation's serious financial situation calls for vigorous changes in both the short and long term. Additional working capital is required in this year and possibilities for its provision are now being explored. One appropriate measure would be to vest in the Company the federal government's return on AECL's investment in Ontario Hydro's Pickering power station. That investment is now achieving a substantial return because of the efficient and highly competitive nuclear power technology developed by AECL. For the longer term the board of directors has undertaken to provide the government with a proposal for a major financial restructuring of the Corporation early in the fall.

It must be recognized that the roots of the projected losses lie in management decisions taken a number of years ago and the inflationary international situation that broke upon the world in the early 1970's. When the situation first came to light I immediately took the steps appropriate for a minister in his relation with a Crown corporation to secure the major management and financial reforms that were necessary. As part of this process I moved last year to alter the composition of the board of directors to bring greater business experience to the direction of the company's affairs and closer coordination with government policies. Management consultants were brought in to advise the board and senior management on the introduction of new financial management control systems. Indeed, it was this program of reform and special audits undertaken by management which produced the figures on projected losses for uncompleted projects which I am reporting today.

In addition, a new vice-president for finance was brought in from the private sector to build a strong team of financial managers. Details of the reforms introduced so far were tabled in the public accounts committee on May 10 and have been commented on favourably by the Auditor General.

Nevertheless, the serious financial situation facing the Corporation has reinforced the board's concern to increase the commercial competence within the top level of management. To this end the board of directors recommended to me that Dr. J. S. Foster be asked to step down as president and chief executive officer and I have already acted on that proposal. It is an action which we all regret having to take. Dr. Foster is one of Canada's most distinguished nuclear engineers whose contribution to the design and development of the highly successful CANDU system has brought great credit to Canada and himself.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Gillespie: I am hopeful that the Company will continue to benefit from his pre-eminent technical knowledge and experience in the nuclear field. A committee of the board is now engaged in a search for a new president and chief executive officer with the business training and experience needed to manage AECL.

AECL has passed through a year of controversy and difficulty. It is a large company composed of many highly skilled and dedicated men and women. They have developed a unique and complex technology of which Canada is justly proud. AECL is Canada's chosen instrument in a highly competitive international industry of enormous importance not only to our future but that of people in many countries. When the situation now disclosed was first manifested the government chose to remedy it by developing a strong management team. In selecting that path I believe the government has chosen not only the fastest and most effective course but also the one which best protects the future potential of the Corporation. AECL with its revised board of directors and changes in management procedures is well on the way to remedying the problems it faces. More reforms will be decided upon by the board and implemented during the next few months under the direction of Mr. Ross Campbell, the chairman of the board of AECL, who has agreed to the recommendation of the board transmitted to me that he be requested to serve on a temporary basis as president and chief executive officer. No doubt, the public accounts committee will wish to keep abreast of the progress in this regard and I am certain that when management reports in the fall the Committee will be well satisfied with what has been accomplished.

I ask the indulgence of the House to receive the annual report in one language only, Mr. Speaker, English. The French copies will be tabled just as soon as they become available; otherwise it would, I believe, have delayed this statement of mine until after parliament had adjourned for the summer. With your permission I should like to table two copies.

Mr. Speaker: Is that agreed?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville): Mr. Speaker, the announcement by the minister this afternoon and the tabling of the annual report of AECL for the fiscal year 1976-77 is yet another sad chapter in the bizarre and unwieldy operations of AECL. As the story unfolds it causes further embarrassment to Canada, and I am sure further embarrassment to the many loyal and dedicated people employed by AECL, some 6,000 in number.

● (1520)

The annual report indicates that there has been 25 years of nuclear progress. More appropriately, it has been a résumé of 25 years of nuclear fallout. The 1977 year of operation represents a $290 million drain on the taxpayers of Canada. We on this side wonder how many more disciplinary actions, how many more royal commissions, how many more royal inquiries do we need to bring out the sheer incompetence and mismanagement of this government? We have had example upon example of the denial of ministerial responsibility, examples of flip-flops, examples of stonewalling, gross examples of incompetence and waste by this administration. Surely, the time has come when the taxpayers of Canada can no longer tolerate the mismanagement and waste of public funds. Surely, the corruption which surrounds this whole fiasco must be stopped.

According to the minister's statement this afternoon, Dr. Foster has been fired for running a Crown corporation at a loss. If this is true, it makes him a remarkable individual, virtually unique in Canadian history. It is incredible in the full sense of the word because AECL has always lost money. Every year over the past decade it has managed to lose close to half a billion dollars. No one was fired and no one was even reprimanded. Now, we are told that Dr. Foster has been fired for incompetence in managing the financial affairs of AECL. It is truly amazing. That seems to be a mere trifle compared to the reasons for which Dr. Foster was not fired. He was not fired for stonewalling the Public Accounts Committee for nearly nine months. He was not fired for making totally unaccountable payments of $18.3 million. He was not fired for forgetting to check whether Shaul Eisenberg had performed any of the services he claimed he performed in the Korean deal. He was not fired for sitting on a billing of nearly $20 million for nearly a year without taking any effective action. He was not fired for his professed ignorance about the identity of the Argentine agent, despite the fact that when he was vice-president it was his division that was clearly concerned and directly responsible for that particular negotiation.

This afternoon we were told by the minister that the Cordoba nuclear station in Argentina is going to experience a loss of approximately $130 million, in spite of the negotiations of the minister which we were told saved some $70 million or $80 million. Three or four months ago the minister indicated that the loss was going to be in the order of $25 million. Whom are we to believe? Dr. Foster was not fired for his role in that particular area. According to the minister, he was fired for doing what every president of AECL has done, and that is running the financial affairs of AECL incompetently.

We on this side of the House find the minister's reasoning very hard to swallow. There are just too many coincidences involved in this whole fiasco. Coincidence No. 1—the RCMP have been investigating the deals related to the Argentine and South Korean negotiations for the past seven months. Surely, the report must be almost ready. Coincidence No. 2—the report of the Public Accounts Committee on its investigation into this sordid affair should be on its way to completion soon.

It is interesting to note that it is Dr. Foster, and not the chairman, Ross Campbell, who is carrying the can for AECL's spectacular financial incompetence. What about the role of the chairman in this whole fiasco? He was asked to come in and straighten out the affair. Is he going to be the next one to go? Will it be the minister? These are perfectly legitimate questions to which we require answers.

Last December the Globe and Mail editorialized this situation in this manner: "It is time for straight answers". We on this side of the House want to have some straight answers. I take it from the answer of the Solicitor General (Mr. Fox) this afternoon that he has not yet received the report of the RCMP. Has he received an interim report? When will we receive it? Is he going to present the report to the Public Accounts Committee? When can we expect it? Were any funds channelled back into Canadian hands as a result of these deals? What exactly did Eisenberg do for AECL, especially in light of the statements made by senior Korean electric officials that they had never met the man or his associates? Is the minister or his predecessor constitutionally responsible for this action? What action is being taken against the former president of AECL, namely Lorne Gray, who was the perpetrator of this mess?

Finally, in view of the rear guard action this government appears to have been waging against those who want to get to the bottom of the affair, is the government interested in knowing who got the $2½ million in slush money which went to some unknown agent in Argentina? The efforts to get to the bottom of the under-handed dealings of AECL, which surround the sale of CANDU reactors to South Korea and Argentina, have been stymied, hampered and stonewalled by this government.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Mazankowski: The government, the minister and his predecessors have been less than forthcoming in their evidence before the committee. They have been less than aggressive and obviously reluctant to ascertain who was responsible for these substantial sums of money which we suggest are tantamount to a bribe.

We want to know why the minister has approved, under section 70(1) of the Financial Administration Act, the operating budget of the corporation for the year in question. Does the minister now consider himself to be responsible for this mismanagement? More importantly, does the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) consider the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Gillespie) to be responsible for this mess? We should like to know why the estimates of $408 million were rammed through this House for the next financial year when the Auditor General clearly warned that AECL is not financially competent. Financial control and management were weak and ineffective, and in many cases, grossly inadequate.

We want to know whether the minister will implement all the Auditor General's recommendations before AECL gets another cent of taxpayers' money. We want to know what type of fundamental changes are going to take place in relationships of Crown corporations to government and to parliament—the question of total accountability of Crown corporations. There is legislation being drafted in secret, but it behooves the government to come forth and come clean with the kind of legislation it proposes to this House.

We want some answers. We want to assure the minister that we will not sit back until we get a full explanation of this whole mess. We demand that every cent of taxpayers' money invested in AECL's incompetence be fully accounted for and approved by parliament, and not channelled through some flim-flam arrangement like the one mentioned by the minister in his statement today. The minister's statement raises a lot more questions than it answers. We on this side are not going to be in a position to swallow the weak, lame-duck approach the minister has taken in this whole affair.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

• (1530)

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, when ministers make statements on motion it has been customary to make copies of their statements and any financial reports available to opposition parties 15 minutes or half an hour before the House opens. Sometimes we got them one or two hours before, if the minister was very courteous. Lately the time has been shrinking; more recently it has been ten minutes before two o'clock. We received this statement—not just the statement but the financial statement and the auditor's report—at 2.15 p.m. after the House opened, with no opportunity to check our files or look up any of the data which we might need to discuss a matter as important as this.

Mr. Paproski: You are lucky to get it even then.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): I can understand the minister's reluctance to give the opposition too much time to look at this very sorry mess for which he has tried to excuse the government in the statement which he made today. This is a statement to tell the House that in this year the Atomic Energy Corporation of Canada has lost not just $180 million but, if you add to that the appropriation by parliament for this year of another $110 million, we are talking about a loss, in so far as the Canadian taxpayer is concerned, of $290 million.

As the minister has pointed out, some $37 million of that comes as a result of the heavy water operations. If ever there was a political boondoggle, it was the heavy water plant in Glace Bay, Nova Scotia. When the government first announced that it was looking at this project, I asked the government some questions because I knew that the people who had the process had peddled it in ten or 20 countries and had been rejected by the governments in those countries on the recommendation of their top scientists.

All I got for my pains was that the President of the Privy Council (Mr. MacEachen) went down to Nova Scotia and made a broadcast in Sydney. He said over the radio that I was trying to prevent Glace Bay from getting the heavy water plant so that it could be taken out to Saskatchewan. I did not care where the plant went; I did not want the government to buy a lemon, which is what they bought, and having spent millions of dollars on the plant, they had to scrap it and start all over again. What they should have done was the kind of research which any reasonable company would have done before starting to spend a hundred million dollars on a heavy water plant.

The second item in the loss has to do with the Cordoba nuclear station in Argentina, and here again I can understand the minister when he says: "while the full magnitude of the losses and their timing is uncertain". They are certainly uncertain because let me remind the House that I think I was the first person to raise in the Committee on National Resources and Public Works the fact that the agreement with the Argentine government, in which there was no inflation clause, was going to result in a loss, I estimated, of $163 million. Dr. Foster said that was an exaggeration, it would be somewhere in the neighbourhood of $100 million, and the minister assured us, as did Dr. Foster, that the government would renegotiate the agreement and that they would knock off $70 million or $80 million. The minister has repeatedly said in the House that the final loss would be about $25 million. What do we find now? The loss is $130 million on selling the reactor.

Miss MacDonald: That is after renegotiation.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): If we keep on selling reactors in this fashion, we will go broke. The more we sell, the more we lose.

An hon. Member: Think of the turnover.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): The fact is that AECL from the very beginning has been sales oriented. I have no objection to a company being sales oriented provided it also has some financial policy and administrative controls. AECL has not had either. It entered into an agreement with reference to the nuclear station in Cordoba, Argentina, in company with Italimpianti as a partner and paid out over $2 million into a numbered bank account. The president, the chairman of the board, the minister and members of the government all tell us that they do not know to whom the money went. To take over $2 million and spend it and still say they do not know who got the money is the height of incompetence.

Some hon. Members: Resign.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): They went into an agreement with Mr. Shaul Eisenberg with reference to the construction of a nuclear plant in South Korea. I have the transcript of the interview with the president and the vice-president of the Korean Power Company in which they say repeatedly that they never saw Mr. Eisenberg; they never met him; they never dealt with any agent at all. From the beginning they told AECL they wanted to deal directly government to government. Not only has over $18 million been paid to Mr. Eisenberg but he has a contract that, if another plant is built payment will be made to Mr. Eisenberg.

An hon. Member: Incredible.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): It is difficult to believe that a group of people who, for as long as I can remember them, claim to be the technicians of government—they might not be experts in policy but in technical and administrative matters they are highly competent—could possibly have carried on a program such as this.

I am not laying all the blame at the door of the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Gillespie). I say that for the last ten years the ministers to whom this agency has reported have been guilty of gross negligence and there should be a public inquiry into the manner in which they have been guilty of almost criminal negligence in handling public funds.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): I do not make any of these remarks with relish because I believe that there is a useful role for Crown corporations to play if the people are to have some control of the economic means by which they live. Also, a Crown corporation can be a most useful economic tool for a government. But it will only be an effective tool if there is adequate control by the minister to whom it reports and by the cabinet, if there are adequate guidelines set down with respect to the policies pursued and to the business procedures which are carried out.

Let me give a small example of the business procedure. Mr. Gray wrote to Mr. Eisenberg telling him that the board of directors had agreed to appoint him as their agent and to a contract which would pay him over $18 million. There were no minutes. Nobody on that board can remember ever having been asked by the president of the corporation about appointing Mr. Eisenberg as an agent. If Crown corporations are going to work—I believe they can work and I have played a small part in supervising the operation of some small Crown corporations—then clear administrative procedures have to be set down and there has to be adequate control and adequate accountability.

● (1540)

There must also be accountability to parliament. I have said in this House for many years that the financial statements of every Crown corporation should be referred to the relevant standing committee of the House of Commons. If the standing committee is satisfied that it examined them the year before and does not want to call officers of a particular Crown corporation, that is its decision, but there are Crown corporations being operated by the present government which have not been investigated by any standing committee of the House in years. They go on spending public funds, carrying out policies and introducing programs not only with no reference to parliament but in many cases with no reference to the minister to whom they are supposed to report. Therefore, I contend that what has happened in AECL—and it is a sad and sorry mess—will happen again and again unless legislation is introduced to provide for proper parliamentary control of all Crown corporations and the requirement of their accountability to the representatives of the people. For in the final analysis the people have to foot the bill.

[Translation]

Mr. Léonel Beaudoin (Richmond): Mr. Speaker, we on this side of the House are very disappointed because we have received the statement made by the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Gillespie) in English only. Moreover, the minister's secretary said this:

[English]

We apologize for the delay in getting this material.

Yours sincerely,

Jamie Deacey.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, we have spent nearly two and a half days in the House debating the national unity issue. These two days had been made necessary by the initiative the Quebec government has taken, namely, Bill No. 1, which deals with languages, linguistic rights and so on. Mr. Speaker, on June 25 last, I had been sitting in this House for nine years. We have been hearing the same jeremiads for nine years—apologize, waiting, and this, and that. Mr. Speaker, we have been deluding ourselves long enough. At a certain point, we are going to have to decide—excuse my temper, I am a little angry but I'll get over it—we are going to have to decide who we are and what we want to be. If the hon. minister does not know I will tell him. He can hire able public servants who are now unemployed, who are coming out of universities with degrees, Ph.D.'s in languages, to translate from English into French as fast as they can speak. Some French Canadians are bilingual. He can also hire English Canadians. There is no discrimination between the two ethnic groups. So I say that today it is an insult to this House. And then, Mr. Speaker, we sat down and listened for two days to pious wishes. Canada must be kept united. That is not possible the way things are going. To keep Canada united Anglophones, particularly Crown ministers, are going to have to accept the fact that we, French Canadians, have the right to have the translation of an English statement at the time the minister makes his statement in the House.

I am sorry, Mr. Speaker, but I find it disgusting that a minister of the Crown should have added that he could not wait for the French translation because that might delay his statement. What are French Canadians doing in this country, particularly in this place? I ask you, Mr. Speaker, what are we doing here if we are not on an equal footing with all Canadians of all languages, particularly those sitting here! This has been going on for 109 years, and I hope it is the last time a minister does that. I am very sorry, and I respect French Canadians who want to remain as they are and well-intentioned English Canadians in this House who want Canadian unity, not for fun but for real. I respect those people and for that reason I will not answer the minister's statement. And I will add, Mr. Speaker, that in due time to prove to the minister how sincere I am I will move a motion to prove to him that we, on this side of this House as well as all right-minded members on the government side, will act differently, we will be moving a motion a little later on today under the rules of this House.

[English]

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the minister would elaborate on this statement. At the bottom of page two the minister refers to the requirement of additional working capital, and he talks about one appropriate measure being to vest in the company the federal government's return on AECL's investment in Ontario Hydro's Pickering power station. Could the minister elaborate on that? Then perhaps I might be able to follow up with a supplementary.

Mr. Gillespie: Mr. Speaker, I would be pleased to do that, but before I do I would like to address one or two remarks to the Créditiste Party and particularly to its spokesman. I would like to tell him how very hurt I was, too, that I had to table in only one language. I can assure the hon. member that as far as I am concerned that will not happen again.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

An hon. Member: Too late.

Mr. Gillespie: I can also tell him that because I wanted to place this before the House before parliament adjourned, I took this action today.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Gillespie: On the question put by the hon. member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski), the original arrangement was made between AECL, Ontario Hydro and the Ontario government, and it involved financing by AECL for the first two reactors at Pickering. The basis of the arrangement was that AECL would be repaid for the funds advanced according to the differential between the power costs brought about by coal versus those which were brought about by the Pickering I and Pickering II reactors. The confidence of AECL was such that when it was negotiating this arrangement with the Ontario government and with Ontario Hydro, it was prepared to say it believed it could provide reactors which would provide lower priced power than coal-fired reactors, which was the alternative the Ontario government and Ontario Hydro had at that time.

● (1550)

The arrangement was that the funds advanced would be repaid with whatever additional increment there might be in the differential between coal-fired costs and costs from the nuclear reactor. I am very happy to say that the nuclear power generated by those reactors is returning a substantial repayment to the federal government. At the present time it is not going to the credit of AECL, the Crown corporation which undertook the research and made the arrangements. The funds are coming back into the Consolidated Revenue Fund. One of the possibilities of financial restructuring is to consider the funds that we advanced as equity rather than as debt. The return of revenues would then go to the credit of the corporation where I believe they belong, rather than into the Consolidated Revenue Fund where they are perhaps lost sight of.

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, do I take it in a broader sense that any major financial restructuring will be brought about by legislation and not internally? We have had the financial restructuring of another Crown corporation, Air Canada, along somewhat similar lines. Is the minister contemplating bringing legislation which would provide for such major financial restructuring?

Mr. Gillespie: Mr. Speaker, I am contemplating bringing this before the House but whether in the form of legislation or whether some of those arrangements can be handled through supplementary estimates is something on which I will have to seek advice. Quite clearly parliamentary approval is going to be involved in most of the major questions. Whenever we are concerned with such matters as conversion of debt to equity, I think we are dealing with some major considerations.

Mr. Mazankowski: May I warn the minister right now, Mr. Speaker, that if he thinks he is going to bring forth the major financial restructuring of AECL through supplementary estimates, we will regard such a move as less than adequate.

Dealing specifically now with the affair of Dr. Foster, may I ask the minister if he is sure that Dr. Foster was not implicated in any way in the questionable dealings surrounding the sale of CANDU reactors to Argentina and South Korea?

Mr. Gillespie: Mr. Speaker, I want to make it clear that the recommendations which came to me from the board of directors with respect to the removal of Dr. Foster were specifically couched in language which made it clear that the reasons for the recommendation had nothing to do with any arrangement such as has been alluded to by the hon. member but were specifically and exclusively directed to the question of accountability for the financial management and control of the organization itself.

Miss MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, my question concerns Dr. Foster's dismissal for financial incompetence. If he is being held uniquely responsible in the organization for this, he is being made the scapegoat for this entire, sordid mess or can we expect further resignations or disciplinary action?

Mr. Gillespie: Mr. Speaker, first of all I think one has to make the point that Dr. Foster was president and chief executive officer, and as such had full responsibility for the day-to-day operations of the corporation, subject to the policies set forth by the board of directors. A number of changes have already taken place in the course of a year. A number of additional personnel have been hired; a chief financial officer was hired at the beginning of this year and other additional financial people have been hired.

There has already been a significant effort to increase and improve the financial competence and financial controls of the organization. Mr. H. W. Macdonell, a member of the board of directors, heads a steering committee of consultants, directors and some officers of the corporation with a view to changing what had become a grievously inadequate system. He presented to the Public Accounts Committee a statement giving up-to-date account of matters. He was followed by the Auditor General who indicated that he believed the corporation was progressing in the right direction. He said in very forthcoming terms that he endorsed the actions of the corporation.

Miss MacDonald: My question really was whether there would be further resignations or disciplinary action. I say that in light of the minister's statement that the renegotiated contract in the Cordoba plant will result in a loss of $130 million. I want to refer him to page 3280 of Hansard for February 22, 1977. At that time, I raised the question of whether the loss would be in that vicinity or whether it would be the $40 million that the minister projected. I asked the minister what the upper limit of the loss would be and he replied:

That, if I understand it, is $40 million.

After an interjection he continued:

I do not know what further information the hon. member wants. All I can tell her is that I think Mr. Campbell was able to negotiate a good deal for Canada.

If the minister thinks that a $130 million loss, which he earlier stated would be only a $40 million loss, negotiated by Mr. Campbell is a good deal, does he not also consider that to be financial incompetence of a grave magnitude? If so, what is the fate of Mr. Campbell?

Mr. Gillespie: Mr. Speaker, I think it is very important to understand some of the specifics of a very complicated situation. The hon. member may recall that this was a large and complicated contract, a summary of which was placed before the Public Accounts Committee by the Auditor General. Mr. Campbell and his team were not renegotiating the language of the contract because that was never at issue. There was, unfortunately, no basis in law for seeking that kind of renegotiation but there was a basis in law for seeking renegotiation based on the numbers, on the inflationary impact that had occurred. He was successful in reducing the potential loss, for example in heavy water, by nearly $40 million and most of the balance was with respect to a new escalation provision covering Canadian goods and services on that contract.

He was not authorized, and I understand there was no basis in law for him to renegotiate the language or renegotiate the initial errors concerning estimating. Quite clearly, the estimates have proved to be inaccurate. In some cases the number of man-hours is wrong by as much as 100 per cent. Some of these man-hours had been increased because Canada imposed greater safeguards, and I am sure the hon. lady would be one of the first to endorse that approach. Under the contract that was negotiated with Argentina, however, we had no basis on which to renegotiate the terms to recover the greater costs associated with safeguard initiatives which Canada took, supported by the opposition parties in this House.

Where the errors seem to have occurred were in the language—in some cases rather loose language—of the contract. This was the first internationl contract of its kind. There were errors in the estimating. The second error which we moved to anticipate a year ago, was the inadequacy with respect to matters of financial control. It was not until sometime after we had finalized it that I was able to ascertain this.

• (1600)

Mr. Mazankowski: What a Mickey Mouse operation this is.

Mr. Gillespie: Mr. Speaker, I am not trying to defend inadequacies. Clearly, I have been on the other side pushing for a change.

Mr. Mazankowski: How does the Minister of Finance (Mr. Macdonald) feel? What a Mickey Mouse operation.

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): Disneyland is a successful operation.

Mr. Gillespie: I am also trying to be forthright and explain a situation concerning a corporation which is most important to Canada.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Perhaps we can conclude this questioning after I recognize the hon. member for Kingston and the Islands (Miss MacDonald) for a supplementary question, and the hon. member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands (Mr. Douglas).

Miss MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, my question will be brief, and I ask for a brief answer. After the chairman of AECL, Mr. Campbell, returned from renegotiating the deal in Cordoba, Argentina, did he tell the minister the loss had been reduced to $40 million?

Mr. Gillespie: The information I gave the House is based upon information I received from senior officers of the corporation. The loss, according to the information I gave the House, was between $23 million and $38 million. I believe those figures are on record. The hon. lady once mentioned $40 million. I did not take issue with that $40 million figure. The House knows the range of figures I was given.

Miss MacDonald: Did you get that information from Mr. Campbell?

Mr. Gillespie: Mr. Speaker, I cannot say if it came from Mr. Campbell or Mr. Foster. It came from a senior officer. Both Mr. Foster and Mr. Campbell were involved in the renegotiations, as the hon. lady no doubt knows.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, since the minister said that the loss at the nuclear station at Cordoba, Argentina, is anticipated to be $130 million, despite between $70 million and $80 million having been written off, are we to assume that under the original agreement AECL signed with the government of Argentina the loss, before renegotiation, would have amounted to between $200 million and $210 million?

Mr. Gillespie: Mr. Speaker, one can say, from hindsight, that if the contract entered into by AECL and the Argentinian agency had not been renegotiated, the loss would have been of the order the hon. member mentioned.

Mr. Mazankowski: Including agents' fees?

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. The minister said the report he received from those who reviewed the activities of AECL gave Dr. Foster a clean bill of health with respect to any questionable relationships concerning the renegotiated agreements. Is the same true about Mr. Lorne Gray, who was largely responsible for negotiating those agreements? I think a moment ago I talked of Dr. Foster. Actually, Mr. Gray negotiated most of these agreements. Has the minister's investigation considered that aspect of it, and does it give Mr. Lorne Gray the same clean bill of health which those who looked into this matter have given Dr. Foster?

Mr. Gillespie: Mr. Speaker, I made clear in my statement earlier that there had been managerial deficiencies going back many years. Undoubtedly, as I told the hon. lady for Kingston and the Islands (Miss MacDonald), the original contract was poorly written. It was also based on poor estimates. Most of this was done some years, certainly some months, before Dr. Foster took over as chief executive officer of the corporation.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): A final supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. The minister has not really answered my question. I am not talking about incompetence or lack of judgment in the making of estimates. I am following up on questions the hon. member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) asked. Large sums of money, for which we cannot account, changed hands. The public accounts committee cannot account for them; the minister cannot account; nobody in AECL can account for these moneys. Naturally, one wants to know where this money went. It is perfectly clear that Dr. Foster has a clean bill of health with respect to any questionable practices. I ask the minister this question: Has he investigated, and can he give the House the same assurance about Mr. Lorne Gray?

Mr. Gillespie: Mr. Speaker, I am glad the hon. member made that point clear. The investigation is being conducted by the RCMP. I have not directed the RCMP to investigate any persons in connection with the series of transactions to which the hon. member alluded.

Mr. Paproski: You had best ask Goyer about that.

[Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands).]

Mr. Gillespie: I can tell the hon. member that I have no reason to believe Dr. Foster in any way was involved in any improper action.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): What about Mr. Gray?

Mr. Gillespie: Nor have I received information showing Mr. Gray was involved in any way in improper actions.

Mr. Symes: What about other officials?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

* * *

[English]

ANTI-INFLATION ACT

MEASURE TO EXTEND RANGE OF PERSONS TO WHOM ANTI-INFLATION GUIDELINES APPLY

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (Minister of Finance) moved for leave to introduce Bill C-59, to amend the Anti-Inflation Act.

Motion agreed to, bill read the first time and ordered to be printed.

* * *

[Translation]

HOUSE OF COMMONS

MOTION TO ADJOURN

Mr. Léonel Beaudoin (Richmond): Mr. Speaker, because the government makes fun of national unity by not allowing the House to work in the two official languages, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Témiscamingue (Mr. Caouette):

That this House do now adjourn.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The question is on the motion of the hon. member for Richmond (Mr. Beaudoin) and seconded by the hon. member for Témiscamingue (Mr. Caouette): That this House do now adjourn. Does the House adopt said motion?

Some hon. Members: Yes.

Some hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Speaker: All those opposed to the motion will please say nay.

Some hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.
And more than five members having risen:

Mr. Speaker: Call in the members.

The House divided on the amendment (Mr. Beaudoin) which was negatived on the following division:

● (1610) (Division No. 73)

YEAS

Messrs.

Baker (Grenville-Carleton)	Fairweather	Mazankowski
Beatty	Firth	McCain
Beaudoin	Friesen	McCleave
Brewin	Gilbert	McGrath
Brisco	Grafftey	McKenzie
Broadbent	Halliday	Mitges
Cadieu	Hargrave	Muir
Caouette (Villeneuve)	Hnatyshyn	Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich)
Caouette (Témiscamingue)	Hogan	Neil
Clark (Rocky Mountain)	Huntington	Orlikow
Coates	Jarvis	Paproski
Crosbie	Jelinek	Patterson
Darling	Johnston	Peters
Dick	Kempling	Pigott (Mrs.)
Dionne (Kamouraska)	Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre)	Ritchie
Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands)	La Salle	Rodriguez
Ellis	Lawrence	Rondeau
Epp	Leggatt	Rynard
	MacDonald (Miss) (Kingston and the Islands)	Stanfield
	Malone	Stevens
	Marshall	Symes
		Towers
		Whiteway
		Whittaker
		Wise—64.

NAYS

Messrs.

Andras (Port Arthur)	Dupras	MacDonald (Cardigan)
Andres (Lincoln)	Ethier	Macdonald (Rosedale)
Appolloni (Mrs.)	Faulkner	MacEachen
Baker (Gander-Twillingate)	Fleming	MacFarlane
Bégin (Miss)	Fox	Martin
Blais	Francis	McIsaac
Blaker	Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier)	McRae
Blouin	Gendron	Milne
Boulanger	Gillespie	Munro (Hamilton East)
Breau	Goodale	Nicholson (Miss)
Buchanan	Goyer	O'Connell
Caccia	Gray	Olivier
Cafik	Guay (St. Boniface)	Parent
Campagnolo (Mrs.)	Haidasz	Pearsall
Campbell (LaSalle-Émard-Côte Saint-Paul)	Harquail	Philbrook
Clermont	Herbert	Pinard
Comtois	Hopkins	Portelance
Corriveau	Jamieson	Poulin
Cullen	Kaplan	Railton
Cyr	Lajoie	Reid
Danson	Lalonde	Roberts
Daudlin	Lamontagne	Robinson
Dawson	Lang	Sauvé (Mrs.)
Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi)	Langlois	Savard
Douglas (Bruce-Grey)	Lapointe	Sharp
Drury	Lavoie	Stanbury
Duclos	Leblanc (Laurier)	Stollery
Dupont	LeBlanc (Westmorland-Kent)	Tessier
	Lefebvre	Trudel
	Loiselle (Saint-Henri)	Turner
	Lumley	Watson
		Wood
		Yanakis—92.

● (1650)

Mr. Speaker: I declare the motion lost.

* * *

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

Order Paper Questions

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the following questions will be answered today: Nos. 1,527, 1,775, 2,156, 2,219, 2,231, 2,276, 2,329, 2,354 (revised), 2,403, 2,411, 2,471, 2,472, 2,473, 2,474, 2,537 and 2,717.

[Text]

DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORT—EMPLOYEES FROM PRIVATE EMPLOYMENT AGENCIES

Question No. 1,527—Mr. McKenzie:

1. Has the Department of Transport obtained (a) part-time (b) full-time employees from private employment agencies in (i) British Columbia (ii) Alberta (iii) Saskatchewan (iv) Manitoba (v) Ontario (vi) Quebec (vii) New Brunswick (viii) Nova Scotia (ix) Prince Edward Island (x) Newfoundland and, if so, in each case, how many?

2. Are such employees paid from supplementary estimates and, if not, from what estimates are they paid?

3. By province, what was the (a) average hourly rate paid to employment agencies (b) average hourly rate paid to employees (c) total amount paid by the Department in (i) 1975 (ii) 1976?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): 1. (a) Yes.

		1975-76
(i)	British Columbia	67
(ii)	Alberta	17
(iii)	Saskatchewan	Nil
(iv)	Manitoba	33
(v)	Ontario	769
(vi)	Quebec	273
(vii)	New Brunswick	Nil
(viii)	Nova Scotia	17
(ix)	Prince Edward Island	Nil
(x)	Newfoundland	Nil

(b) Yes.	1975-76
(i)	Nil
(ii)	Nil
(iii)	Nil
(iv)	Nil
(v)	63
(vi)	25
(vii)	Nil
(viii)	Nil
(ix)	Nil
(x)	Nil

2. No. Paid from Main Estimates.

3. (a)

	(i)	(ii)
British Columbia	$5.05	$5.85
Alberta	4.09	4.70
Manitoba	4.45	5.11
Ontario	5.58	6.23
Quebec	4.80	5.51
Nova Scotia	3.82	5.38

(b) Not available from our records. This information is known only to the private employment agency and its employees.

(c)	(i)	(ii)
British Columbia	$ 14,472	$ 36,679
Alberta	8,672	14,539
Manitoba	20,645	16,743
Ontario	863,565	1,221,348
Quebec	134,301	388,897
Nova Scotia	11,147	9,935

Order Paper Questions

CBC OBJECTIVES

Question No. 1,775—Mr. Herbert:

1. Is one of the sub-objectives of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation "to contribute to the development of national unity..." and, if so, are there expressions of discontent that CBC may not be conforming to this objective?

2. Is the sub-objective "... should provide reasonable, balanced opportunity for the expression of different views on matters of public concern.", considered to conflict with the sub-objective quoted in Part 1 and, if so, in what manner is it proposed to resolve this conflict?

Hon. John Roberts (Secretary of State): I am informed by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation as follows: 1. The Broadcasting Act states that the national broadcasting service should "contribute to the development of national unity and provide for a continuing expression of Canadian identity". The question of the CBC and its contribution to the development of national unity has recently been a topic of public discussion.

2. No. In its general programming—drama, music, biographies and documentaries—the CBC contributes to the development of national unity by reflecting and interpreting Canada to Canadians. Communication between the different peoples and regions of the country is the key to achieving this goal. That communication is maintained and strengthened not only through the physical network of communications that the CBC has built up across Canada, but more particularly through the content of programmes. Mutual understanding and an appreciation of the cultural diversity of the various regions of Canada is fostered through these programmes, programmes which celebrate Canada's greatness as well as reflecting on its problems. The current affairs programming of the CBC, on the other hand, has as its objective informing Canadians about the underlying issues confronting them—analyzing these issues and reflecting different perspectives on them in order that Canadians might better decide how to resolve such issues. The CBC sees this contribution to knowledge and understanding as being consistent with that part of the mandate which calls for a "reasonable, balanced opportunity for the expression of differing views on matters of public concern". In the area of news programming the role of the CBC is to inform Canadians of major news events on the national, international and local levels. An informed Canadian public, again, is in a better position to take the decisions which must be taken by them in determining the economic, political and cultural future of the country.

CNR INVESTMENT IN THE CAST GROUP OF COMPANIES

Question No. 2,156—Mr. Forrestall:

1. (a) How many (i) Board of Directors meetings (ii) other meetings pertaining to business affairs of the CAST Group of Companies were attended by Dr. R. A. Bandeen or his representative since Canadian National Railways invested money in the Group (b) in what locations were the meetings held (c) what Companies paid the travel expenses of Dr. Bandeen (d) how many days of Dr. Bandeen's time were occupied on each occasion?

2. With reference to the answer to Question No. 1,248, what specific indirect benefits accrued to CNR from its investment in the CAST Group of Companies?

[Mr. Lang.]

3. Under what conditions can the capital invested by CNR in the Group be withdrawn?

4. For (a) 1974 (b) 1975 (c) 1976, what was the amount paid by the Group to CNR for rail services in North America?

5. Did the Board of Directors of the Group approve the move of that Group's operations in whole or in part from the Port of Montreal to the Port of Halifax and, if so, did Dr. R. A. Bandeen concur in this decision and for what reason?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): The Management of Canadian National Railways advises as follows: 1. Canadian National Railway Company advises that since it is but a minority shareholder it would be improper to divulge information relative to the business affairs of the CAST group. Since Dr. Bandeen was appointed to the board he has attended three Directors Meetings and several other meetings. This has involved less than one week of his time. The CAST group is responsible for out of pocket expenses associated with such meetings.

2. There has been a very substantial increase in the total number of containers handled by CN.

3. Upon the sale of its shares.

4. It is not the policy of CN to divulge by specific Companies the amounts of its revenues.

5. It would be improper to give details of the internal management of companies comprising the CAST group.

CAST NORTH AMERICA LIMITED—LOCATION OF OPERATIONS

Question No. 2,219—Mr. Forrestall:

Did the government or any of its agencies exercise influence over CAST North America Limited to maintain its port operations in Montreal rather than Halifax and, if so (a) in what manner (b) through what individual, department or agency was such influence exercised?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): No, the government or any of its agencies did not exercise influence over CAST North America Limited to maintain its port operations in Montreal rather than Halifax; (a) Not applicable; (b) Not applicable.

DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORT—VALUE OF CONSTRUCTION WORK

Question No. 2,231—Mr. Herbert:

In each of the past five years, what was the value of construction work carried out by the Department of Transport?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): In each of the past five years, the value of construction work, including capital expenditures from the Airports Revolving Fund, is as follows:

Fiscal Year	Amount
1972-73	$ 80,175,042
1973-74	126,243,029
1974-75	179,409,151
1975-76	167,273,403
1976-77 (to March 31/77)	161,485,317
	$714,585,942

CBC MEMBERS SENT TO TORONTO BLUE JAYS BASEBALL CLUB'S TRAINING CAMP IN FLORIDA

Question No. 2,276—Mr. Cossitt:

1. Did CBC send 26 members of its staff to the Toronto Blue Jays Baseball Club's training camp in Florida and, if not, what was the exact number?

2. What are all the reasons such a number of personnel were assigned to cover this event?

3. How many represented the (a) English (b) French network?

4. What was the total cost to CBC of all aspects of this assignment including the cost of (a) transportation (b) accommodation, food and drink (c) wages?

Hon. John Roberts (Secretary of State): I am informed by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation as follows: 1. No. English Services television and radio, 16. The French Services Division had a crew of six in Florida to prepare programmes on the Montreal Expos training camp, after which they spent a day covering the Toronto Blue Jays training camp.

2. English Services: TV—to prepare a one-hour network special (fully paid for by its sponsor), a half-hour Toronto local special, sports and news items several times a day for national, Toronto local and syndication use; Radio—to prepare items for national sports and news programmes. French Services: see answer to part 1 above. TV—the crew prepared three network items on the Blue Jays. Radio-news from the Blue Jays camp was added to daily reports from the Expos camp.

3. See answer to part 1 above.

4. It has not been customary to require the CBC to provide such details of its internal management and administration as salaries and costs incurred in preparing programmes. The background to this custom is explained in detail in the reply to question No. 2,530, May 22, 1975.

AIRPORTS—OPERATING SURPLUS OR DEFICIT

Question No. 2,329—Mr. Stevens:

For each year 1971 to 1976, what was the operating surplus or deficit for (a) Toronto International Malton Airport (b) Montreal International Dorval Airport (c) Vancouver International Airport (d) Calgary International Airport (e) Winnipeg International Airport (f) Montreal International Mirabel Airport (g) Ottawa International Airport?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport):

Operating Surplus (Deficit)
1970-71 to 1975-76
($000's)

	(a) Malton	(b) Dorval	(c) Vancouver	(d) Calgary	(e) Winnipeg	(f) Mirabel	(g) Ottawa
1970-71	4,698	5,075	(2,920)	(593)	(2,309)	—	(2,321)
1971-72	3,521	3,953	(3,197)	(822)	(2,644)	—	(2,654)
1972-73	3,591	5,035	(2,668)	(892)	(2,943)	—	(2,864)
1973-74	540	5,847	(2,224)	(1,361)	(2,800)	—	(3,207)
1974-75	4,675	6,706	(2,762)	(2,491)	(4,212)	—	(3,870)
1975-76	15,288	9,669	1,845	(2,744)	(2,137)	(18,382)*	(3,129)

* Period December 1, 1975 to March 31, 1976.

Order Paper Questions

TANKERS CALLING AT PORTS IN QUEBEC

Question No. 2,354—Mr. Forrestall: (Revised)

1. During (a) January (b) February (c) March 1976, what percentage of the total number of vessels calling at the Port of (i) Quebec (ii) Trois Rivières (iii) Montreal, to load or discharge cargo, were tankers?

2. How many square feet of National Harbours Board shedded area is currently available at (a) Montreal (b) Quebec (c) Halifax (d) Saint John?

3. For the year (a) 1975 (b) 1976, what was the total volume of general cargo shipped over piers associated with the sheds, excluding facilities used primarily for container handling?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): The National Harbours Board advises as follows: 1.

	(a) January 1976	(b) February 1976	(c) March 1976
(i) Quebec	50%	52%	48%
(ii) Trois-Rivières	30%	50%	18%
(iii) Montreal	32%	34%	30%

2. (a) Montreal, 2,870,454 square feet; (b) Quebec, 599,300 square feet; (c) Halifax, 760,604 square feet; (d) Saint-John, 813,665 square feet.

3. (Revised).

	Cargo handled through transit sheds (a) 1975 (Tons)	(b) 1976 (Tons)
Montreal	1,203,612	1,390,042
Quebec	160,846	280,739
Halifax	455,831	387,382
Saint John	974,903	977,695

QUOTAS FOR RAPESEED

Question No. 2,403—Mr. Hnatyshyn:

Is it the intention of the Minister in charge of the Wheat Board to guarantee minimum quotas for rapeseed, as is the case for the three major grains, as recommended by the Prairie Rapeseed Growers Council at their recent meeting in Vancouver?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): In so far as the Canadian Wheat Board is concerned: On May 20, opening delivery quotas for rapeseed, flaxseed and rye were announced for the coming 1977-78 crop year. The Canadian Wheat Board will establish quotas on August 1, 1977 of eight bushels per assigned acre for the delivery of rapeseed, flaxseed and rye to primary elevators. The initial quota for the delivery of rapeseed and flaxseed to crushing plants will be 20 bushels per assigned acre, while the opening quota for deliveries of rye to distillers will be 15 bushels per assigned acre. In future years the initial quotas for these three crops will be announced in March, prior to seeding, at the same time that the minimum guaranteed quota levels for wheat, oats and barley are established. In addition to a guaranteed minimum eight bushel quota for rapeseed before October 1 of the crop year, the Prairie Rapeseed Growers Council had also recommended that there be guaranteed quota increases at certain times during the crop year to a minimum final quota level of 30 bushels per acre or an open quota. However, it is not considered practical for the Canadian Wheat Board to guarantee the establishment of a minimum 30 bushel quota for rapeseed. The amount of rapeseed that producers can deliver ultimately depends on the success of the trade in marketing rapeseed and rape oil and meal. Consequently, further adjustments during the crop year above the eight bushel quota level for rapeseed will be made by the Board when and at such time as they are warranted by domestic and export demand.

POSSIBLE BENEFITS TO POORER PROVINCES FROM TRANSFER OF TAX POINTS

Question No. 2,411—Mr. Howie:

Will the transfer of tax points, plus the benefits of equalization formula and tax grants, provide the poorer provinces with the funds to maintain health, hospital and secondary education services at the same level as in the wealthier provinces and catch up in those areas where such services are below the comparable level in wealthier provinces or is the catch up feature to be the subject of another agreement or another programme?

Mr. Bob Kaplan (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance): Yes. Two aspects of the federal-provincial fiscal arrangements are relevant here. The first is the equalization programmes and the second is the established programmes financing programme. Taken together, these programs ensure that all provinces are in a position to provide comparable services in the areas of hospital insurance, medicare and post-secondary education. The purpose of the equalization programme, under which provincial revenues from own sources are equalized to the national average, is to ensure that all provinces can provide a reasonable standard of basic public services without having to resort to levels of taxation significantly above the national average. The purpose of the established programmes financing arrangements is to assist the provinces in the financing of the so-called "established" programmes. Federal contributions take the form of a mix of cash and tax transfers. These arrangements are designed to increase the fiscal flexibility of the provinces and to eliminate the per capita differences which existed under the prior, shared-cost arrangements. Fiscal flexibility is achieved through a tax transfer equalized to the national average; per capita differences in programmes costs are eliminated through levelling adjustment payments designed to ensure that all provinces receive equal per capita grants within five years. Hence, a "catch-up" feature has been built into the new arrangements. It is also worth noting that all provinces are better off financially than they would have been had the prior, shared-cost arrangements continued. For example, by the year 1981-82, the transfer under the new arrangements is estimated to be $10.5 billion, while the transfer under the old shared-cost arrangements would have been approximately $8.7 billion.

[Mr. Lang.]

OXFAM-CANADA

Question No. 2,471—Mr. Brisco:

1. As of April 1, 1977, is OXFAM-Canada registered as a Canadian charitable organization with the Department of National Revenue?

2. Are donations to OXFAM-Canada tax deductible within the provisions of paragraph 110 (1)(a) of the Income Tax Act?

3. (a) What is the location and address of the head office of OXFAM-Canada (b) who are the present registered members of the Board?

4. Are there any patrons of OXFAM-Canada and, if so, who are they?

5. Did the Secretary of State respond to the concerns expressed by certain members of the Board of the Western Region of OXFAM on their resignation, when they wrote to the Secretary of State regarding the political education projects of OXFAM and, if so, what was the nature of the response?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Departments of National Revenue, Consumer and Corporate Affairs and Secretary of State as follows: 1. Yes.

2. Yes.

3. According to information filed by the company as at March 31, 1976, (a) the location and address of the head office of OXFAM-Canada are: location: Ottawa, Ontario; address: 251 Laurier St. W., Suite 301, Ottawa, Ontario K1P 5J6. (b) The members of the Board of Directors are: Muriel Duckworth, 6250 South Street, Halifax, Nova Scotia; Peter Bietenholz, 117 Albert Avenue, Saskatoon, Saskatchewan; Mike Bradfield, 6324 Cornwall Street, Halifax, Nova Scotia; Meyer Brownstone, 57 Poplar Plains Road, Toronto, Ontario; Mac Freeman, Queen's University, Faculty of Education, Duncan McArthur Hall, Kingston, Ontario; Jonathan Forbes, Development Education Centre, 121 A Avenue Road, Toronto, Ontario; Irving Greenberg, 11 Clemow Avenue, Ottawa, Ontario; Theo Hills, 35 de Bretagne, St-Lambert, Quebec; John Loxley, Legislative Building, Room 338, Winnipeg, Manitoba; Charlotte Maxwell, 37 Burnside Drive, Toronto, Ontario; Ralph Miller, Department of Education Foundations, Faculty of Education, University of Calgary, Alberta; Vern Ratzlaff, 77 Henderson Highway, Winnipeg, Manitoba; Bill Saul, Ogilvy & Mather (Canada) Ltd., 88 University Avenue, Toronto, Ontario; David Thompson, 143 Pleasant Street, St. John's, Newfoundland; Ed Wellwood, 6th Avenue—R.R. # 1, Okanagan Falls, B.C; John Williams, 7 Newton Road, St. John's, Newfoundland; Bob White, 37 Amelia Street, Toronto, Ontario.

4. The information requested may be obtained directly from OXFAM-Canada.

5. The Department of the Secretary of State can find no record of this correspondence.

AIR CANADA FLIGHTS FROM FREDERICTON TO SAINT JOHN, NEW BRUNSWICK

Question No. 2,472—Mr. Howie:

1. On (a) April 20 (b) April 27, 1977, how many flights were made by Air Canada from Fredericton to Saint John, New Brunswick?

2. In each case, how many seats were available for passengers travelling from Fredericton and how many were filled?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): The management of Air Canada advises as follows: 1. (a) One. (b) Two.

2. (a) 75 seats available, 44 passengers. (b) 75 seats available, 36 passengers; 102 seats available, 34 passengers.

NUMBER OF DIRECT FLIGHTS BY AIR CANADA TO FREDERICTON

Question No. 2,473—Mr. Howie:

1. On (a) April 20 (b) April 27, 1977, what was the total number of direct flights made by Air Canada to Fredericton, New Brunswick from (i) Montreal (ii) Quebec City (iii) Toronto and, in each case, what were the departure times and what were the arrival times in Fredericton, New Brunswick?

2. How many seats were available for Fredericton bound passengers on each flight and how many were filled?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): The management of Air Canada advises as follows: 1. (a) (i) Three: AC674 Dep. 0810 Arv. 1055; AC640 Dep. 0920 Arv. 1120; AC660 Dep. 1455 Arv. 1655. (ii) One: AC674 Dep. 0910 Arv. 1055. (iii) Two: AC640 Dep. 0700 Arv. 1120; AC642 Dep. 1015 Arv. 1250. (b) (i) Two: AC674 Dep. 0810 Arv. 1055; AC660 Dep. 1450 Arv. 1650. (ii) One: AC674 Dep. 0910 Arv. 1055. (iii) One: AC642 Dep. 0905 Arv. 1140.

2. (a) (i) 75 seats available, 50 passengers; 75 seats available, 30 passengers; 102 seats available, 30 passengers. (ii) 75 seats available, 28 passengers. (iii) 75 seats available, 64 passengers; 95 seats available, 37 passengers. (b) (i) 75 seats available, 75 passengers; 102 seats available, 34 passengers. (ii) 75 seats available, 57 passengers. (iii) 102 seats available, 60 passengers.

DIRECT FLIGHTS BY AIR CANADA FROM FREDERICTON

Question No. 2,474—Mr. Howie:

1. On (a) April 20 (b) April 27, 1977, how many direct flights were made by Air Canada from Fredericton, New Brunswick to (i) Montreal (ii) Quebec City (iii) Toronto?

2. How many seats were available for passengers travelling from Fredericton and how many were filled?

3. What was the weight of the cargo in each case?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): The management of Air Canada advises as follows: 1. (a) (i) Three. (ii) One. (iii) Two. (b) (i) Two. (ii) One. (iii) Two.

2. (a) (i) 252 seats available. 139 passengers; (ii) 75 seats available. 46 passengers; (iii) 197 seats available. 84 passengers; (b) (i) 177 seats available. 145 passengers; (ii) 75 seats available. 45 passengers; (iii) 204 seats available. 173 passengers.

3. (a) (i) Total 767 pounds; (ii) Total 5 pounds; (iii) Total 574 pounds. (b) (i) Total 770 pounds; (ii) Total 7 pounds; (iii) Total 605 pounds.

DRAGGER FISHERY

Question No. 2,537—Mr. McCleave:

1. Has the Department of the Environment (Fisheries) received a suggestion from any group of Nova Scotian fishermen that "grandfather" rights be placed on small draggers operating within the fifty-mile territorial sea and, if so, from which groups?

2. Would such a proposal remove all draggers, eventually, from operating inside such a sea and, if so, what type of vessel would be left to operate in the sea?

3. What consideration is being given to the request from inshore fishermen?

Mr. Jim Fleming (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Fisheries and the Environment): 1. If the question refers to the claim of some inshore fishermen in Nova Scotia for an exclusive fishing zone of 50 miles, the department has not received a suggestion from any group of Nova Scotia fishermen that "grandfather"rights be placed on small draggers operating within such a zone, were it to be established, but the Guysborough County Fishermen's Association has proposed that all groundfish draggers be phased out, and that no new groundfish dragger construction be permitted.

2. As indicated, the department has not received such a proposal. If draggers were excluded from prosecuting fisheries within 50 miles of our coast, then only vessels operating in the hook and line, trap, or gill-net fishery would be allowed to fish in this area.

3. The drawing of arbitrary lines is not at this time seen to be necessary. However, because of the high priority attached to the interests of the near shore fishermen, the protection of those interests is under continual review by regional officials. Should exclusive areas be required in future to ensure the livelihood of near shore fishermen, action would then be taken to provide for this.

ATLANTIC PILOTAGE AUTHORITY—SALARIES

Question No. 2,717—Mr. Robinson:

What is the salary of the (a) Executive (b) Director (c) Chairman (d) Vice-Chairman (e) board members of the Atlantic Pilotage Authority?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): (a) Not applicable; (b) not applicable; (c) $27,500.0—$36,500; (d) not applicable; (e) $75 for each day engaged on the business of the authority.

* * *

[English]

QUESTION PASSED AS ORDER FOR RETURN

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, if question No. 2,009 could be made an order for return, this return would be tabled immediately. The reason, once again, is the lengthy nature of the answer.

[Text]

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS—PRODUCTION OF MOVIE FILM

Question No. 2,009—Mr. Crosbie:

1. Did the Secretary of State for External Affairs have produced a movie film in colour, during the present financial year, containing his season's greetings to external affairs staff at diplomatic and consular posts around the world and, if so, how many prints were made and to how many diplomatic or consular posts were they shipped?

2. Was the film produced in colour by Crawley Films Limited, Ottawa and, if not, by whom?

3. What was the amount paid by the government for the film including all costs in connection with the making of prints and shipping them around the world?

4. How long does the film take to screen and will the government Table a transcript of the dialogue?

5. Has the Department or any former Secretary of State for External Affairs produced such a film in the past and (a) if so (i) in what year (ii) which Secretaries of State (b) if not, in what manner were season's greetings conveyed to the staff around the world and what was the cost for the last year in which such greetings were sent?

6. During the fiscal year 1976-77, did any other cabinet Minister send Christmas greetings or a Christmas message to departmental staff or to anyone by way of a film production and, if so, in each case (a) what was his/her name (b) what was the cost (c) to whom?

Return tabled.

[English]

Mr. Goodale: I ask, Mr. Speaker, that the remaining questions be allowed to stand.

Mr. Brisco: Mr. Speaker, I will continue to raise this issue with the parliamentary secretary until I receive a positive and appropriate response as to why question No. 506, which has been on the order paper since October 14, standing in my name, containing very simple inquiries has not been answered in spite of the promises the parliamentary secretary has made to me. I would like a reasonable response from him.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

SUBJECT MATTER OF QUESTIONS TO BE DEBATED

Mr. Speaker: Order. It is my duty, pursuant to Standing Order 40, to inform the House that the questions to be raised tonight at the time of adjournment are as follows: the hon. member for Ottawa-Carleton (Mrs. Pigott)—Urban Affairs—Allegation government owes taxes to municipality of Ottawa-Carleton—Government action; the hon. member for Parkdale (Mr. Haidasz)—Consumer Affairs—Possibility of prohibiting use of asbestos fibres in preparation of food and beverages; the hon. member for Halton (Mr. Philbrook)—Finance—Taxing of benefits from life insurance policies—Government action.

Order, please. The House yesterday came to an agreement that two hours would be allocated today for the termination of the debate on national unity; that if the House were to begin that debate prior to four o'clock, it would end in two hours' time; and that if the House were to begin the debate after four o'clock—which is the case today—two continuous hours should be allocated to the debate.

● (1700)

Therefore, pursuant to that agreement the debate will conclude at two minutes past seven. Furthermore, I should call to the attention of hon. members that the description of that agreement which is contained in Votes and Proceedings is not entirely in accord with the description of it as put by the President of the Privy Council yesterday. I simply want to clarify for the record that the interpretation I put on it today is clearly the one that the House agreed to yesterday, and it is slightly different from that described in Votes and Proceedings. On the basis of that agreement we will now proceed to the debate on that motion.

[Translation]

Mr. Caouette (Témiscamingue): I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Témiscamingue on a point of order.

Mr. Caouette (Témiscamingue): Yes, I rise on a point of order. I want to advise the House that concerning the continuation of the debate on national unity this afternoon, in view of the strong position the ministers took by refusing to give us a French copy . . .

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. This question has already been raised by the hon. member for Richmond (Mr. Beaudoin). Now, it is simply in order to give the floor to the hon. member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. MacFarlane) and to conclude that debate.

Mr. Caouette (Témiscamingue): On a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Témiscamingue on a point of order.

Mr. Caouette (Témiscamingue): In the circumstances, we refuse to take part in the debate on national unity, and hon. members of the Social Credit Party of Canada leave the House immediately.

[English]

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I thought the point of order, if there was one, was disposed of. I hope the government House leader has now gathered himself together sufficiently so that he can indicate the business for tonight, if we reach it, for tomorrow and perhaps for next week.

Mrs. Sauvé: Mr. Speaker—

Some hon. Members: Sit down.

Mr. Speaker: I believe the minister is seeking the floor on the point of order raised by the hon. member for Témiscamingue.

[Translation]

Mrs. Sauvé: Mr. Speaker, I would like to say a few words about the point of order raised by the interim leader of the Social Credit Party.

Some hon. Members: No!

Mrs. Sauvé: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker—

[English]

An hon. Member: Mr. Speaker disposed of that point of order.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member for Témiscamingue rose on a point of order, which I indicated obviously was not a point of order. He continued to indicate to the House that the Social Credit members were withdrawing, which is not a point of order. It is not relevant to the subject which has now been called for debate and upon which the hon. member for Hamilton Mountain has been recognized. I think we should continue with that debate. However, the hon. member for Grenville-Carleton did raise a fresh point of order concerning House business.

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, never in my life have I seen the other side so confused.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): My question is very simple. The government House leader may not be able to answer it now because there is so much confusion. If that is the case, we will give him the courtesy of asking again at eight o'clock tonight. However, can he tell us now, if it is within his ken, what the government proposes for business later tonight, tomorrow and into next week, because it is quite obvious that we are going to be here.

Mr. MacEachen: Mr. Speaker, there is no confusion on this side of the House. I was delaying rising to reply in order to give the Minister of Communications an opportunity to state a point of order.

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): It was not a point of order.

Mr. MacEachen: The hon. member says it is not a point of order. It has not yet been heard. Apparently he has some terrestrial view, or he can hear without listening. He talked about confusion. He is so confused that he cannot organize an effective motion under Standing Order 43, as we discovered the day before yesterday.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. MacEachen: The business tonight is the unemployment insurance bill. Tomorrow it is understood that we will deal until noon or one o'clock with the Canada Pension Plan, and in the afternoon we will resume the debate on the unemployment insurance bill, and then deal with Air Canada.

[Translation]

Mrs. Sauvé: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order regarding the incident which sparked a vote a while ago.

The leader of the Social Credit Party has decided to leave the House; however, I would like to point out that he did give his consent to the tabling of these documents earlier this afternoon—

Some hon. Members: Order!

[English]

An hon. Member: That is not a point of order.

Mr. Goodale: Every one of you over there consented. You consented, Joe.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Minister of Communications sought the floor and indicated she was doing so on the same point of order—not on a fresh point of order—as that raised by the hon. member for Témiscamingue. I indicated that it was not a valid point of order and that I would not hear hon. members further. I gave the minister the floor to raise a fresh point of order. Her remarks seem to be a reflection on a vote and on events which have taken place in the past.

Some hon. Members: Shame.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

[English]

CONFEDERATION

DEBATE ON NATIONAL UNITY

The House resumed, from Wednesday, July 6, consideration of the motion of Mr. Trudeau:

That members of this House dedicate themselves anew to the continuing unity of Canada as a free and independent country organized on the basis of a federal form of government with two official languages and a diversity of cultures; and the amendment thereto of Mr. Clark.

Mr. Gus MacFarlane (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, when I began speaking last evening I was trying to say something positive about national unity. I intend to say something positive today. Even if hon. members opposite are rude, I shall not be, so they should not worry about it. I intend to speak about something which is important to me and to everyone else in this House, and I intend to speak in a completely non-partisan way.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. MacFarlane: I do not intend to reflect on what anyone before me has said, so perhaps hon. members opposite should listen. When I go back to my riding—and I am sure this happens to other hon. members—I am always asked, "What can we do?" People do not say that the situation is lost; they ask what they can do and how they can help. I thought this national unity debate would be one in which hon. members would contribute what they had to offer, and I am willing to admit that there are many better minds that mine. However, in my small way I will contribute what I can to this debate on the unity of our country.

I may be old-fashioned, but the way I face a situation like this is to research it, identify the problem and state the simple solutions which come to my mind. The research is easy for me, because I lived it. I do not have to go to books. I lived on Fifth Avenue. I remember that there were the Stirlings, the MacFarlanes, the Edwards, the Hughes, the Cousineaus and the Heberts. The Cousineaus had 27 children, and the Heberts 17. When we applied for summer jobs, I got a job in a factory, the Stirlings got jobs at the university, and Guy Cousineau became the deliverer of beer for Beausoleil and Markey.

People said the Cousineaus and Heberts had too many children and that their churches were too big. Notre Dame de Sept Douleurs was their church, but the president of the Bank of Montreal attended a little Presbyterian church. It was always that way. Is it not interesting that by 1947 in one of the largest department stores in the second largest French-speaking city in the world a French Canadian made it as manager of men's hats? That was in 1947. The French Canadian girls who worked there spoke English to the French customers. Nobody got a holiday on St. Jean Baptiste day, either. That was the situation we lived in. It is interesting to see what happened to those families which grew up on that little street, Mr. Speaker. The Stirlings became principals of schools and honours graduates in physics, an Edwards became vice-president of Northern Electric, but the Cousineaus never got out of grade four.

• (1710)

When we left McGill University we went to jobs with the Protestant school board at $1,900 a year. We thought that was terrible, but the French school board was paying only $700 a year. The money that put us through McGill came from men like Duplessis who were supposed to be hated. We had gymnasia in our schools, and $4,000 rugs so that girls could learn to clean them in the home economics course. Those teachers who were earning $700 a year did not even have a gymnasium or any athletic facilities. We were the most favoured minority in all of Canada. In Montreal, the second largest French-speaking city in the world, English-speaking people were the most favoured in all of Canada. We were in charge: we acted as if we were, and we lived as if we were. It is René Lévesque who wants to take away the favour which that minority has enjoyed, not this federal parliament. I do not know of any member of this House who does not want to protect that minority. We will see that is done. We must guarantee that kind of minority right to others, however, in other areas.

My research turned up something else. Some people ask what we are to do with the Péquistes and their ideas. I will be blunt about it, Mr. Speaker. No one in this parliament, the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau), opposition leaders or any member, wants to divide this country. Just one person does, and the group that surrounds him: it is René Lévesque and the Parti Québécois who speak of separation. When they speak of separation we had better listen carefully, Mr. Speaker. In 1972, when Yves Morin wrote that supposed constitution, he said they should take over certain contiguous areas in New Brunswick and Ontario where there might be a majority French population. Think of that, Mr. Speaker. This is the party that wants to talk of some kind of union. Separation is not negotiable. I am not embarrassed to say that; I am not afraid to say it.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. MacFarlane: They cannot come to my table to eat, they cannot come to my table to drink, if they want to come as separatists. They come as we have to come—with what we have, all our failings, all our faults, all our mistakes, to work together to bring about what has been building in the country. When I coached football in Verdun they said, "Those French guys cannot play football. Don't let them on your team. What is that big stupid guy from Saint-Hyacinthe doing there?" It was Gilles Archambault, and he was not so stupid. He made it because in that little community of Verdun we recognized our own faults. We went to Ivan Livingston's home, and sitting at dinner suddenly knew what it was like to sit with ten little negro piccaninnies around, realizing you were the only white person and thinking how strange they might feel. This is the thing French Canadians have had to face.

Somebody now wants English Canadians to face that in Montreal. Not this parliament, not these people, but people who in order to achieve their aims would deal with the minority and make it less. There are no members from Quebec on this side of the House who feel that way, and there are no members on the other side of the House who feel that way. If anybody wants to sit down—and I will not—and try to deal with the separatist option, they can answer the questions that I will not answer. Who wants to answer what we are going to do about Ungava? Are we going to take it back if Quebec is not part of Canada? And what about Labrador? Are we going to make a decision for Newfoundland?

Mr. McGrath: That decision was made.

Mr. MacFarlane: If you enter into a separatist negotiation, you had better look at something else. If they come to the table as Canadians, you are right. What will we do with our great economic union? Are we going to discuss common banking, common trade? Quebec will say they need more money because they have lots of unemployment, and we will say that because of inflation we cannot give them more money. How do we negotiate? Somebody else can to it, because it is not going to be in my bivouac. We are not going to go that route. We are going to recognize the tactic of René Lévesque, which is simply to make certain that the English get so fed up with arguments about Quebec, about French and language and everything else that they will say, "Let them go." Then there is the other tactic of saying the federal government will withdraw support and the French will say, "They do not want us." The tactic is not that he will succeed with separation and constitutional matters: it is separation by attrition.

I faced that two weeks ago when I went back to Quebec to bury my brother, Mr. Speaker. On his deathbed he told me that one son was staying and taking a bilingual job, and one son was leaving. I know of other people who moved out of Quebec, not because they were English and would not stay but because their company moved. And who will move in, Mr. Speaker? Who wants that French force here, or the English force outside? That is separation by attrition. I have no time for it.

Having done the research, I identify the problem as one of communication. We now have a commission which will travel across the country. We have no right, as members of parliament, to make all these decisions. There are people in St. Louis, there are people in Skeena, people in Hamilton Mountain who have something to say. It is their right to say it to the commission and to make recommendations. The kind of thing I would recommend may not be terribly important, but at least it is practical.

I have prepared a paper to present to the commission, saying that we are long past the date when we should have created a department of provincial affairs, and the first minister of each province should name a contact to that group so that when people in the province want information they can get it.

If members of this House want information from the government, not a grant for a new speaking tour but something that will enable them to make a case for federalism in their constituencies, they should be able to get it from the department I propose. Such a department should deal with bilingualism and multiculturalism. We have to accept that we have come a long way and have reached the stage of talking about two founding races. It is like those great slats of wood on a stained-glass window. Because of multiculturalism, we recognize the colours of the glass. This is the mosaic that is important, supported by two founding races and many minorities.

How is a separatist Quebec going to support the minority and guarantee their rights in the west or in the east? How is the province of Ontario going to guarantee the rights of the English in Montreal? One of the first priorities of the federal government is to guarantee the rights of the minorities. Nobody else can do it. I have heard members on both sides of the House express anger because their country has not done what they thought it should do. The expression of such sentiments is perfectly justifiable. Such hon. members can disagree with me. However, I suggest I have put on record some of the reasons for our country's present condition and some of the ways out of the impasse. Others in the House have said what I have said. I have listened to the contributions hon. members made in this debate and I can say that at this moment in this country there exists a greater will than many would believe for going forward and solving our difficulties. I recall the words of John Donne:

● (1720)

No man is an Island, intire of it selfe; every man is a piece of the Continent, a part of the maine; if a Clod bee washed away by the Sea, Europe is the lesse, as well as if a Promontorie were, as well as if a Mannor of thy friends or of thine owne were—

If Quebec goes, Canada is less. Do not ask for whom the bell tolls. It tolls for thee. For the first time since coming to parliament I feel that the member for Hamilton Mountain may stand in his place, say what he feels, and influence the course of events in this country. Mr. Speaker, I speak for the people of Hamilton Mountain, the people with a Scottish background, who recall the words of the Scottish poet to this effect, "Let us say God Save the Queen, but let us not forget the people." And the words to this effect, "It is coming yet, and yet shall be, when man to man shall brother be." We have this opportunity; we have this right.

I have great pride in serving on this side of the House and under our Prime Minister, but I will join hands with anyone on the opposite side or on my side, including the Prime Minister, join hands with any single, living soul who will say, "Let's work it out." Because, Mr. Speaker, we are going to work it out.

[Translation]

Mr. Roch La Salle (Joliette): Mr. Speaker, I would like to point out that I am speaking in the House as a member of a political party and as the representative of a province and constituency which have shown much concern and uncertainty for some time now. As all members of this House, we are seeking that harmony, but how?

First, Mr. Speaker, I would like to congratulate our leader for his brilliant speech and for sternly reminding us of the responsibilities of Parliament. I would be remiss if I did not mention the excellent speech made by the hon. member for Halifax (Mr. Stanfield), an experienced man who has been shrewd and farsighted, of whose valuable advice the government is being deprived.

I cannot ignore the sad incident which happened this afternoon. I would like to congratulate the member for Richmond (Mr. Beaudoin) who raised the basic question, the basic objective of the Prime Minister in 1968: bilingualism in federal institutions. As a result, we saw the members of the Social Credit who withdrew, surely humiliated and frustrated. Personally, I was very disappointed to see some Quebec members or French-speaking members on the government side refuse to warn the minister responsible for such frustration involving all French-speaking people in Canada. It is most humiliating not to have seen fit to get action today and, in the Prime Minister's image, we have seen the party in power give lip service only. It is true that we are being accused about the objective of the official languages.

It has been said that people are judged by their acts and not by their words. This afternoon, I must say to the government members, and especially those of my province, how ashamed I am for our Quebecers. I think about the hon. member for Gaspé (Mr. Cyr), for instance, who was openly applauding the hon. member for Richmond and who I imagine reluctantly supported the government's attitude. I think about the hon. member for Hochelaga (Mr. Lavoie) who, until recently, I know, would not let one day go by without requesting that services be given in the French language and who, today, lamentably betrayed his own thinking by supporting the government. I am thinking about all those from Quebec who are shaming us, and the hon. member for Longueuil (Mr. Olivier) is one of them.

Mr. Olivier: Tell us why you have become independent.

Mr. La Salle: The hon. member for Longueuil is one of those who open their mouths more to interrupt others than to speak on behalf of their constituencies.

Mr. Speaker, I should be ashamed as a Quebecer for supporting the Liberal party this afternoon. Not a single Quebecer or Francophone had the right to miss this opportunity, my colleagues were right to do so, and it is this government which talks about maintaining national unity through bilingual services. The Canadian public must be told what happened this afternoon in this House, and so must Quebecers, and the minister of Communications. (Mrs. Sauvé) dared quickly support the position of her party which, I repeat, is shaming all French speaking members in this House.

● (1730)

And in that respect, Mr. Speaker, I would like to recall certain allegations made yesterday by the Secretary of State (Mr. Roberts) which coincide perfectly well today. He blamed the leader of my party (Mr. Clark) for expressing the opinion that the bilingual policy as applied by the Liberal government had become an element of division in this country. Manipulating the words astutely, as the Liberals are so wont to do when they want to brandish the specter of racism for electoral purposes, Mr. Speaker, the Secretary of State tried to make believe that the Leader of the Official Opposition and his party were accepting bilingualism relunctantly and did not care for the official languages policy as an element of national identity. Mr. Speaker, I say that those remarks by the minister are among the lowest and most dishonest form of demagogy one can imagine. When, Mr. Speaker, will this government stop cultivating those prejudices for purely political purposes? When, Mr. Speaker, will it stop those shameless manipulations to make Quebecers believe that Conservatives are anti-francophone and opposed to the best interests of Quebec? But they are not prepared to stop, Mr. Speaker, because the appeal to prejudices has been their favourite weapon for ten years. They know it quite well and it is with that weapon that division is being perpetuated, but that is politically profitable. And is it any wonder after that that there should be an aggressive nationalist feeling in Quebec.

We, of the Conservative Party, say that it is too easy for this government to want to sweep under the rug of a bilingualism whose principle we clearly approve, Mr. Speaker, but whose application we are rightfully discussing, all the monumental mistakes that government members made in the past ten years as well as all the problems they brought about and are tragically letting rot without ever solving them. Of course, bilingualism is very important, Mr. Speaker; we, of the official opposition, sincerely believe in it whatever the government might say, a government which incidentally came to get within our ranks the main opponent of bilingualism to make him a minister and its major spokesman for western Canada. That gives you an idea of the intellectual honesty and credibility of the members on the government side.

Yes, Mr. Speaker, we fully agree with the principle of both official languages, as we have supported until now the implementation of the program, with certain qualifications, but we will not accept that this essential principle be used to distract the attention from the problems of unemployment, inflation, regional disparities and tense federal-provincial relations. The only thing that these tragic problems have in common with the linguistic issue is that they affect all Canadian citizens, whatever their language and their culture. Mr. Speaker, this is the essence of the problem that we are now discussing; this is what the Prime Minister and the Secretary of State should have been saying when they had the opportunity if they had not been concerned only with the need to worsen the language controversy to prepare their electoral platform for next fall or next spring.

Mr. Grafftey: Explain Horner to the Quebecers!

Mr. La Salle: Mr. Speaker, this debate is the unfortunate and unavoidable issue of a deep uneasiness which was felt for the first time at the end of the last century, has since then grown continuously and has seriously worsened in the last ten years. At this point, it is useless to play on words and we must have the honesty to recognize that what we are now discussing is the future of our country. We have to recognize that what we are now undertaking is nothing else but the review of Confederation, and if our colleagues refuse to see it, if they find it unthinkable to examine the basic concept of the federative pact, I am afraid that we shall have in months and years to come more and more difficulty in understanding each other. Mr. Speaker, I have used the words "federative pact" quite intentionally, because it is precisely from the interpretation of this term that springs the lack of understanding which is threatening to divide us even more.

From 1867 until now, French Canadians always thought that Confederation was the result of a pact or an alliance between Upper and Lower Canada, between the two growing nationalities which guaranteed each other equality and total autonomy. It is under those specific and often repeated conditions that Lower Canada agreed to join Confederation and that Sir Georges-Etienne Cartier became its protagonist. All politicians of the time as well as all historians since then agree unanimously that without Cartier, the federation would have never existed.

An hon. Member: True!

Mr. La Salle: Moreover, it is not accidentally that Lower Canada positively refused any proposition for a mere legislative union. As well, it was not a fancy of the French Canadians to require assurances of equality and autonomy. They knew that this was an absolute condition allowing them to maintain their identity, their institutions, their language and their culture. So much so that Cartier himself maintained with conviction, and I quote:

> Some people have regretted that there is in the federation a diversity of races, and hoped that with time an end would come to this . . . The melting of the races into one is sheer impossibility.

I did not say that, Mr. Speaker. The Father of Confederation did. A pact enshrining the association and equality of two peoples into a common will to live together, but respecting each one's autonomy, such has been the perception of Confederation among French Canadians from 1867 to this day. Even after so many years, Quebecers and other French-speaking Canadians have lost patience, put claims, made requests, pleas, demands and even entreaties. But there is no way they could go over that so easily, forget everything and blindly support the badly implemented, ill-conceived and overly rigid kind of federalism we now have.

French Canadians have tired legs that made too many unfruitful steps, a tired hand that drafted brief after brief, a tired mind that tried pointlessly to explain, persuade and convince. Some may think this is all exaggeration. If by any chance someone still believes that Quebec's feelings towards Confederation have deteriorated since the coming into power of the Parti Québécois, I will quote from a short work titled "Georges Etienne Cartier, a Canadian Statesman" published in 1914 by Mr. Lavergne. The author had this to say about Confederation:

> The political status established by Cartier cannot be permanent. Two peoples can live together in a small country, but we believe this is impossible in a large country once those peoples have come of age. The day will come when there will be a separation between east and west. The former will break into three or four republics whose frontiers will be dictated by geography.

Mr. Speaker, I am striving to show what we French Canadians were expecting from the 1867 alliance, and to what extent our hopes have been disappointed from generation to generation. I have no intention of inflaming the debate by accusing any group. But I would remain with a bad conscience and even a feeling of not telling the truth if I did not emphasize that national unity mainly deteriorated during the year after Confederation's 100th birthday, when federal-provincial relations turned into a war of attrition. Let me state quite bluntly that this coincided with the coming to power of the gentleman who this very day is holding the office of Prime Minister.

● (1740)

Until then, the federal government had tried to be flexible enough, to compromise enough, to meet, after a fashion, the primary claims of Quebec, as those of the other provinces as well. All was not going smoothly, of course, and Quebec nationalism did rear its head frequently, but the fact remains that the federal government showed more understanding, more compassion, more good will, while in Quebec, formulas of agreement and adjustments were advocated.

These attitudes, on both parts, created a tolerable modus vivendi which could eventually have led to a profitable dialogue; but all was cut short by the pithy expression hurled by the Prime Minister in Montreal: "Finies les folies!" From that time on, a policy was built up of hardening, refusal, ultimatums, intrigues, arrogance and provocation. Until then, federalism which had at times meant difficulties for Quebec suddenly took on the shape of a threat, of an obstacle. And that is why we are pleading anew the case of the future of this country, Mr. Speaker. Unless the Prime Minister modifies to a great extent his concept of confederation and of the relationship between the central government and the provinces, I think he runs the risk of being recorded by history as having badly served the cause of his French-speaking fellows citizens. Because, without trying to indulge in cheap politics and without trying to minimize the merits of the Prime Minister in enforcing respect for the rights of the French language in Canada, I must tell him that he is deluding himself if he believes that his policy of bilingualism alone will silence the desires for independence on the part a segment of the Quebec population and that it will solve the differences between Canadians.

It is wrong to pretend that it is only an issue of language, Mr. Speaker. I notice that in his speech, the Prime Minister spoke of a new Canada since November 15. I think it is important that members of parliament and Canadians at large know what happened before November 15. Why is it that on the evening of November 15, a majority of Quebecers rejected this approach, this kind of federalism, that system which we have now? Do we have to remind our friends opposite that everything started deteriorating seriously some 10 years ago, when our present Prime Minister came to power. He was right. How to explain, for example, that this situation dates back in history to the time of the then premier of Quebec, Mr. Johnson, who had to fight with the Prime Minister of today? Then it was the turn of Mr. Bertrand, of Mr. Bourassa and finally now Mr. Lévesque. There is nothing new in the fact that the team which represents Quebec on the government benches is regarded by a majority of Quebecers as a gang of traitors on so many issues.

I remember quite well what caused this discontent among Quebecers, the attitude of this government under the leadership of the Prime Minister. They offered a refusal, which I still remember quite well, Mr. Speaker, to proposals which matched the legitimate aspirations of my province, and were presented by Mr. L'Allier, or Mr. Hardy or Mr. St. Pierre. And I still remember, and perhaps the member for Longueuil was one of the people involved that evening, of being accused of separatism because I supported the representations made by the province of Quebec.

Mr. Olivier: On a question of privilege, Mr. Speaker.

National Unity

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): The hon. member for Longueuil on a question of privilege.

Mr. Olivier: The hon. member for Joliette (Mr. La Salle) has just accused me of levelling accusations against him. I should like him to prove what he said, but he cannot. In view of his remarks, I ask the hon. member for Joliette to withdraw the statement he has just made, unless he can prove it is true.

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): I suggest this is a point of debate not a point of order.

[Translation]

Mr. La Salle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As I was saying, the Quebec situation results from the fact that Quebec representatives within the federal government have not fulfilled their duties. Over the past ten years, the right hon. Prime Minister and his Quebec colleagues have chosen to hide the truth from their cabinet colleagues from the other provinces by not telling them what was really going on in the province of Quebec. I remember that . . .

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Order. I regret to interrupt the hon. member but his time has expired.

Mr. Grafftey: Continue!

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): I believe there was an understanding that all leaders would get 40 minutes and that other members would get 20 minutes, so I am trying to divide the remaining time fairly.

Mr. Andrew Brewin (Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, I regret having to open my remarks this afternoon by saying something I did not expect to say, and in a tone I had not intended to use. I want to say I regret very deeply, as I am sure, does my party, the insensitivity of the government toward this issue. We are in the middle of a debate on national unity. The Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Gillespie) has taken this occasion to demonstrate his insensitivity, his disregard for the history and traditions both of the country and of parliament.

I will continue, but perhaps because of my advancing age I find difficulty in overcoming a loud babble of other voices.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Don't let either of those things bother you.

Mr. Brewin: I want to express the feelings which I believe are held by many Canadians across this land, feeling of passionate concern for the maintenance and development of a strong, federally-united Canada. This would not be the achievement of one man or of one party but of very many Canadians.

It is the particular responsibility of parliament, working through its elected representatives, to lead the way. I am not sure that a formal committee is the best way of doing this. I was a member of the Joint Committee on the Constitution and, as I recall only too well, that committee came up with some 202 recommendations and, to the best of my knowledge, not a single one of them was ever carried out. I would not want any further committee to have such an experience. The Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau), or the government, should at least prepare and present to parliament its proposals, albeit in outline, for the unity of Canada. Eight months have now gone by since the election of November 15 and we have yet to hear in this parliament any concrete proposal about what should be done to change the system.

I welcome very strongly the decision of the recent convention of my party in Winnipeg, under the effective leadership of my hon. friend from Oshawa-Whitby (Mr. Broadbent), because it stresses the need for national priorities and national political leadership, emphasizing that economic and egalitarian changes make an essential contribution to Canadian unity. We must establish a national planning and investment strategy and commit our country to full employment. Our key national goal should be political and economic independence.

Canada has an important role to play in the world of nations by constructing a new economic order which would tackle the immense problem of poverty throughout the world. She could play this role if united and independent. We must recognize the basic human needs for housing, food and energy at reasonable prices, and access to health care as a social right. To achieve an equitable redistribution we must reshape our taxation system. However, important economic policies are not the sole means of achieving a united Canada. We must make it clear to French Canada, and particularly the province of Quebec, that we recognize and admire the wonderful and attractive culture which is theirs, and are prepared to do everything we can to see that it is protected and maintained. We must also make it clear that although Quebec has the right to make its own choice without coercion, we strongly support a federal Canada and believe that a majority of the people of Quebec will decide to remain in Canada.

While it is true that the federal parliament must have full authority to deal with external affairs, banking and other economic matters if it is to maintain equality of standards across Canada, we do believe that increased administrative authority can be devolved to the provinces and that this can be done in such a way as to maintain a fair balance between the federal and provincial governments. This is not a request for general decentralization, because if we carry on a process of decentralization we shall find before long that the federal government does not have sufficient remaining powers to enable it to carry out its tasks. That is a real danger if we pursue the role of decentralization too far.

● (1750)

I am one of those, Mr. Speaker, who believes that we need a new constitution. I do not think that constitutional change in itself is the answer to all our problems, but just think for a moment about what is our constitution. We have an ancient British statute which is obviously completely lacking any sort of emotional appeal to modern Canadians. A constitution is necessary in a federal state not only to clarify the division of powers but, perhaps even more important, to provide an inspiring statement of the purposes and aims of the Canadian federation.

I should like a new constitution to contain clear references to the equal partnership between the two founding nations, and also to mention the multicultural fact of Canadian life and the special rights of our native people. I should also like this new constitution to state clearly that Canada is based upon democratic government and the protection of fundamental human rights. It should also be clear that there should be firm guarantees of the linguistic and cultural rights of Canadians.

I think that the present crisis is no time for the politics of confrontation. It is true, as I and others of my party have said before, that a firm federal attitude is justified. We do not accept the proposals of the Parti Québécois. Nevertheless, we believe that the discussions between that government, which after all represents the people of Quebec at the present time, and the rest of Canada should be at a high level of courtesy and consideration. It is our earnest desire to persuade the people of Quebec to opt for a continuing role in our federal system. We think that a civilized tone of debate will help this objective.

The Prime Minister announced yesterday the creation of a task force. I must say that I view this with something less than enthusiasm. It seems to me to be just an extra piece of machinery. I think parliament should be the primary instrument for debating questions relating to Canadian unity. It sometimes seems to me that the task force is being appointed because the government really does not know were it is going and does not have any definite proposals to make. The task force, in my opinion, is window dressing, though I hope I am wrong and that it will do something useful. I will be glad to be proven wrong in my pessimistic assumptions about it. I must say that the remarks of one of the co-chairmen, Jean-Luc Pepin, seemed so casual as to make one wonder how serious he was about the task assigned to him.

The whole question of Canadian unity requires us to think about the place of nationalism in the world today. Personally I do not wish to think of myself as primarily a Canadian nationalist. First of all, I believe that the test of a healthy nationalism is respect for human rights and individual welfare. When nationalism takes on an extravagant, chauvinistic form, then such nationalism can become a curse and not a blessing.

I also think of myself as an internationalist. It is trite but true to say that no nation can live unto itself, least of all in a modern world. To my way of thinking, one of the great reasons for the maintenance of a strong federal system is the strengthened contribution we can make as a united nation to the building of co-operation in the world of nations. That is why I put emphasis on the independence of Canada. It is one reason why I would regard the break-up of Canada as being tragic in its nature. But there is a healthy form of nationalism which concerns itself with the welfare, living standards, and aspirations of the people of a certain nation, and which is proud of its role in the international world.

Therefore, I think we in Canada are entitled to assert that we have an abiding faith in Canada but that both creative leadership and restraint are necessary to achieve this unity. Hitherto the government, under the leadership of the right hon. member for Mount Royal, has failed to promote Canadian unity successfully. I do not question his sincerity in any way; I am sure that he is convinced that his particular approach and formula are the only ones and the essential ones, and that he is sincere in that. But I do say that a stubborn insistence upon language questions has obviously not succeeded in resolving the problems of Canadian unity.

We supported and we still support the Official Languages Act, but we think that it requires substantial changes. I must not be regarded as some sort of panacea which would make other aspects of Canadian unity irrelevant.

I heard one member on the other side of the House complain in his speech that we in the opposition parties are using this debate to score bitter, partisan points against the Prime Minister of this country. I believe in all sincerity that the time has come, indeed that it has long since passed, when somebody has to point out to the people of this country the degree of failure, and the degree of responsibility for the failure, which can only rest on the shoulders of the Prime Minister.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Brewin: I conclude, Mr. Speaker, by re-asserting—I do not think it needs re-asserting since it was supported by an overwhelming majority of the representatives of our party at our Winnipeg convention—that we in this party will do our utmost to contribute to a stronger, more just, and more united Canada.

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, it is rather difficult to resist the impulse which I suppose members on all sides feel on occasions such as this to engage in a lot of superfluous argument back and forth, so I shall resist the temptation to comment upon some of the references in the last half hour or so to incidents which occurred this afternoon. But I do think it is important to record, in terms of the righteous indignation that has been expressed, that my colleague, the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Gillespie), did in fact obtain the unanimous consent of the House—which includes all parties—to take the action which he did, and which I think was for very good and valid reasons. I just put that on the record. I gather that otherwise he would not have been able to table the report in the manner he did.

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I would have to say that the hon. gentleman is correct in terms of the fact that permission was granted. But there was in fact a discussion today between the minister and me with respect to the statement to be made, and there was never any feeling in my mind—indeed the matter never came up in the discussion—that there would be any attempt by the government to table a document or to make a statement or to do anything which did not comply with the Standing Orders of the House.

Mr. Jamieson: Mr. Speaker, it is precisely because such comments as have been made generate this kind of argument that I said it was unfortunate that it had to come up at all. I merely point out that I distinctly heard—and I think Hansard will show—the hon. minister asked for unanimous consent, and explained why. I understand that in many instances perhaps it can pass some members by, but there was no objection taken to what was done. I just wanted to record that fact without commenting further upon it.

As to the main substance of the matter now before the House, I do not profess to any special qualifications more than any other member in talking about the issue of national unity. However, I bring to this debate one unique qualification which gives me a somewhat different perspective on Canada and on its future. I think I am the only member of this House who voted on two separate occasions against becoming a Canadian. I suspect the hon. member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath) would have done so, but he was too young to vote at that time.

● (1800)

From the perspective of nearly 30 years it is quite startling and surprising to me to note the similarities between many of the events of 1977 when compared with those of 1947, when my province of Newfoundland first considered, in modern times, the prospect of uniting with Canada. Referenda are nothing new to me. I can recall using many of the arguments which I now hear being used by advocates of separatism. I can recall using them in Newfoundland terms and saying, for example, that confederation would clearly be the loss of our distinctive culture and our centuries old identity. Also I recall saying that economically the province of Newfoundland would be far better off if it had stayed out of Confederation. I can hear echoes of these kinds of arguments in almost precisely the same words at the present time.

I welcome this first chance I have had in 11 years in parliament to tell Your Honour and members of this House that I was totally wrong in my assessment. I cannot conceive of a Newfoundland today being anything like as well off under any arrangement other than Confederation.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Jamieson: This is not to say that all is perfect by any manner or means. Newfoundland continues to suffer many deprivations, and by comparison with national standards can be regarded as one of the less fortunate of our Canadian provinces. In relation to any other political situation, there is no question about the fact that we have made tremendous progress.

I hope some outside of this Chamber, who advocate the separation of the province of Quebec from Canada, would take a look at those events of 30 years ago. Among other things it is interesting to note that only now are the documents from the era being released to the public. Some of them have already been placed on the public record and, as I look at them, it is quite remarkable to see how incredibly wrong most of the economists and most of the experts were in terms of their projections of what was going to happen—the shares of revenue and the likely levels of service. There is not a single statistic or forecast made in 1947 and 1948 which bears any resemblance to the facts today.

Those people who seek to make the case for or against separatism on the grounds of economic projections and the like, had best take a look at those and realize that no one is that clairvoyant or that capable of projecting that far into the future, or of really assessing what the economic impact is going to be. When one weighs that against the obvious gains Newfoundland has made, which were manifold more than what the most optimistic people had predicted, then I suggest there are strong grounds for arguing that Confederation is by far the best route for Quebec, as it was for the province of Newfoundland.

I have heard some of this debate and I have read all of it. It seems to me there are three or four recurring themes which come up time and time again in the observations and the comments of members of the opposition. I should like to deal with them in a rational and reasonable manner, and not in any sense seeking to be combative. I want to put some of these issues in the perspective that I see them in and, as a result, help to generate a reasonable and continuing dialogue on this issue.

One of the things which the opposition appears to have concentrated on throughout this debate is the fact that the government has put an almost total emphasis on the bilingual aspects of national unity to the almost total exclusion of everything else. This has come up time after time. The record does not support that kind of claim or that sort of criticism. Referring once again back to my province of Newfoundland, it is clear that over the past years of this administration there has been a recognition that national unity must be attacked on a wide variety of fronts. If anyone doubts this, let him come with me to Newfoundland; let him drive over DREE financed highways to visit DREE financed schools, some of which are the best in the country; and let him see DREE subsidized industries, particularly fish plants and the like, employing many thousands of people who, year after year, retain their jobs because of subsidies in the ten of millions of dollars provided by the federal government.

What is true in the case of Newfoundland is equally true in many parts of the province of Quebec, in the other Atlantic provinces, and in virtually every area of this country which is more deprived than the prosperous central region. While the regional development program, and everything associated with it, are not the total answer, the program indicates by itself that the government has been aware since its inception that there is more to national unity than simply resolving the problem of bilingualism or language rights, as important or vital as they may be. It is demonstrably untrue that there has been a one-dimensional policy by this government. In fact it has covered a wide range of issues and programs designed to bring about greater equality across the country and to attack the whole problem of national unity on the economic, social, and linguistic fronts.

The second point which has been made consistently by most members of the opposition is that there has been too much rigidity in the attitude of the federal government, that in some way or another we have brought about contrived confrontation and that it has been a calculated program to create divisiveness, particularly between the federal government and the government in Quebec city. They have broadened that to take in all the provinces and, in addition to that, to take in a whole range of issues. Once again the record makes it perfectly clear that this simply is not the case. Repeatedly over these last eight or nine years this government has sought and has accomplished, in many instances, accommodations with the provinces on a scale and an importance not anticipated nor envisaged earlier in the history of this country.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Jamieson: It is obvious some of the hon. members opposite are not impressed.

Mr. Grafftey: We love you, though.

Mr. Jamieson: I love you, too. In the interests of national unity I would even embrace the hon. member for Brome-Missisquoi (Mr. Grafftey).

Mr. Grafftey: I could not get my arms around you.

• (1810)

Mr. Jamieson: He might have a little more difficulty embracing me, but the way I am going, even that may be possible before very long.

However, in terms of what I was saying a moment ago about what I describe as the legitimate willingness for accommodation on the part of the federal government, let me emphasize the word legitimate because hon. members opposite—coming back to my point about Newfoundland—must realize also that if there is too great a confusion of federal power and authority and the ability to control in terms of national events and items of national importance, then provinces like mine, Newfoundland, like the whole of the Atlantic area and indeed much of the rest of the country, would be in an extremely difficult position.

I say that anybody opposite who argues for a greater decentralization in terms of letting those smaller provinces stand on their own bottoms or float in their own dory, as we might say in Newfoundland, that he is underestimating the difficulties and problems that it would create. I also say that if we weaken the federal government to such an extent that it is impotent to deal with national issues, we are going to be in a much more serious position than any we have had up to the present time.

Newfoundlanders in particular about whom I have been speaking—but I am sure it is true of many other people in this country—would certainly not thank a government of Canada which dispensed its legitimate authority in ways which made it impossible for those provinces to turn, as they have to do, to a government at Ottawa to look after so many of their needs.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Jamieson: In Newfoundland today some 60 cents to 65 cents out of every $1 is originated from, or in another way provided, by the federal government, and many of those programs and plans are ones which are not in the classical concept a federal responsibility but ones which have been delightedly and glady given by the federal government to a provincial government which it knows cannot possibly manage on its own.

So there has not been confrontation in the sense that hon. members opposite sometimes suggest. There has been, I repeat, a willingness to co-operate. I do not believe that you can find a government in the whole history of this country that has had a greater range of consultations and that has shown itself more willing to make adjustments and compromises where these were clearly to the advantage of the provinces, and where they did not at the same time undermine the essential strength that the federal government requires.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Clark: That is nonsense.

Mr. Jamieson: There is another aspect to this question of contrived confrontation that frankly puzzles me more than any other, and that is the suggestion that in some way or other there was no problem with national unity in this country until the government assumed office.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

An hon. Member: That's it.

Mr. Paproski: Why not?

An hon. Member: Right on.

Mr. Jamieson: Hon. members opposite can applaud, but let me tell them as someone who went through a Confederation argument on the other side of the issue that I brought people from the province of Quebec, as the hon. member for St. John's East knows, who made separatist speeches in Newfoundland in 1947. For goodness sake, to suggest now that nothing ever happened before 1968 is ridiculous.

An hon. Member: What has that got to do with it?

Mr. Jamieson: It has to do with your enthusiasm for the idea that everything was perfect before 1968.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

An hon. Member: It was much better.

Mr. Jamieson: Let us look at the record with regard to the separatist problem. When did the first bombings take place in the province of Quebec, in 1968? No, it began back in 1961 and 1962. They should know, because they were the government of this country at that time.

An hon. Member: Oh, no, we were not.

Mr. Grafftey: That is not true.

Mr. Jamieson: The hon. member says it is not true that the bombs were planted in 1962. If I am not mistaken, one of the first casualties, if not the first, was a gentleman named O'Neil who came from Newfoundland who, I believe, was the first victim of a bombing. I believe it was in 1962. Let the hon. member look it up if he wants to.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Jamieson: That aside, let us look at who created the slogan, "maître chez nous" and when was it? It was a long time before this government assumed office. Furthermore, there are many other evidences—indeed, they go back to the point we all know—that these tensions have been present within Confederation since its earliest beginnings. To suggest therefore that in some way or other the policies of this government have served to start this kind of process is sheer nonsense, and the record makes it perfectly clear that it is sheer nonsense.

Miss MacDonald: It has escalated since 1968.

Mr. Jamieson: There is another point which also is puzzling me about the attitude of the opposition. It has to do with their attitude on the whole question of bilingualism. I give all hon. members opposite, without exception, full credit for believing sincerely in national unity and in bilingualism, but the problem arises when we start to define what it is. Once again in these last couple of days new problems have been created for me in trying to understand the position of the opposition because, somehow or other, they seem to be saying that bilingualism is necessary but that it is a burden that we have to carry in the interests of national unity.

Mr. Grafftey: Pure poppycock.

Mr. Jamieson: I refer the hon. member to the speeches of his colleagues. Let him look at them. Are hon. members opposite prepared to say that that is not the weight of some of the arguments that we have heard from the other side? I have read them fairly thoroughly.

An hon. Member: Go back and read them again.

Mr. Jamieson: They have said, as I understand it—

An hon. Member: Have you consulted Horner?

Mr. Jamieson: —that bilingualism is a continuing problem for this country and it is one with which we have to live. That seems to be the gist of what was said.

Mr. Paproski: That is what Don Macdonald would have to say.

Mr. Jamieson: But you are not arguing with the position I have just stated.

Miss MacDonald: You have changed it.

[Mr. Jamieson.]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Order, please. The minister has only one minute left, and I suggest hon. members listen to him.

Mr. Jamieson: The hon. member says I have changed it. I ask hon. members opposite, before this debate is out to say categorically and without equivocation that in fact they do not believe that bilingualism is a burden for this country but that it is an opportunity for this country.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Jamieson: Mr. Speaker, I would have to ask you for some extra time if hon. members continue this, but let me conclude by saying this: I think the opposition should remember a saying which is very common in Newfoundland and which has survived until this day—another example that our culture is healthy despite Confederation—and that is that on the issue of bilingualism they had better fish or cut bait, because at the present time they are trying to come down squarely on both sides of the issue.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Paproski: You are sucking and blowing at the same time. You know what that means.

Mr. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Mr. Speaker, I have just listened to a very eloquent speech.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. McGrath: I have known the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Jamieson) for a long time. I have worked with him. He is my friend. As a matter of fact when I was elected to this place 20 years ago the hon. gentleman was my boss. Evening after evening I used to sit in the TV studio enthralled at his eloquence when reading the news on television. However, on soft news nights when there was not a great deal to relate, the hon. gentleman was at his most eloquent best. The weaker the argument, I have learned, as I have watched the hon. gentleman over the years, the more eloquent he gets.

● (1820)

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. McGrath: I would like to deal with some of the points raised by the minister, who is my friend, and with whom I differ. He has tried to misinterpret what my leader has said and what this party has said on language. He has tried—without, I believe, fully examining the record or listening to the speech of my leader—to distort the record.

I want to tell the minister that he and his colleagues have not cornered the market on language equality in this country. Language problems may be ongoing problems. I recall coming here in 1957. I recall the very first meeting we had as a minority government caucus. I was absolutely amazed. As a very young man who had been a Canadian for only eight years I thought this was a great country of two founding races. In our very first caucus held out in that lobby opposite—and this was after 22 years of Liberal government under a distinguished French Canadian prime minister—we decided to bring in bilingual cheques. Cheques were going to be sent to French Canadians in the French language, and so it has been going ever since.

There was no simultaneous translation in this House until the right hon. member for Prince Albert (Mr. Diefenbaker), as a first act of his new administration, brought simultaneous translation into this House.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. McGrath: Up to that time a member of parliament coming from a French speaking constituency had to speak in English, or not at all, because he could not be understood in French. That was the kind of linguistic policy we inherited from the Liberal government in 1957. Oh, no, the Liberal government has not cornered the market on language rights, not by a long shot.

Mr. Jamieson: Nobody said we had.

Mr. McGrath: I will tell the House what the government has cornered the market on—and I listened very carefully to the hon. gentleman. This government has cornered the market on the curse of regional disparity, which has flourished under this administration. It has certainly cornered the market on unemployment, which is at an all-time high in this country. The hon. gentleman quoted statistics indicating that Newfoundland is receiving 60 cents to 65 cents out of every dollar spent from the federal treasury. What a sad reflection that is for a province which is blessed with an abundance of natural resources.

We do not have a government which will introduce policies so that Newfoundland can develop those resources to the fullest and to its own benefit. We have in my province the ongoing curse of regional disparity, from which our people still suffer. The minister nods his head because when he was minister of regional economic expansion he tried very hard, but you cannot make a bad policy work.

DREE was brought in by this government in 1969 after a solemn promise by the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) when he went to the Atlantic provinces in 1968 to introduce Marshall Plan type aid to end, once and for all, the curse of regional disparity. Notwithstanding the expenditure of hundreds of millions of dollars not only in Newfoundland but throughout the Atlantic provinces and Quebec, the DREE program has only created record high unemployment. The hon. gentleman, with his characteristic eloquence, can describe a drive through Newfoundland where you can look at magnificent DREE financed schools—and they are good schools—DREE financed fish plants, or drive over DREE financed roads, but if you go a little further you can find the hopelessness of a 25 per cent unemployed work force; you can look into the hopelessness that is represented in the faces of those who have no job opportunities. That is just as much a threat to the continuing unity of this country as any other issue which can come before this House.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. McGrath: Unemployment is not particularly characteristic to Newfoundland, although we seem to have considerably more that anybody else. We have more than we can take, more than any province can afford to have. We cannot afford that loss in productivity. We cannot afford the social problems which are created by a system which seems to perpetuate unemployment. All you have to do is go into the home of an unemployed family and look at the second generation on unemployment insurance and welfare. That is what concerns me about the future of Canada. However, that is not peculiar to my province. What has happened to the DREE program in the eastern portion of Quebec? Oh, we can probably find DREE financed schools, DREE financed fish plants, and drive over DREE financed roads, but we can also find the second or third highest rate of unemployment in this country.

My leader and members of my party have said in this House that language policy is important, and nobody, but nobody, can doubt for a moment where this party stands on language policy.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. McGrath: There will come a day in this country when these problems are but an unhappy memory, and I hope that day will come soon. When that day comes, people will realize the outstanding contribution to the continuing unity and growth of this country of the hon. member for Halifax (Mr. Stanfield).

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. McGrath: Perhaps it would be well for me to quote from a speech made by the hon. member for Halifax, the former leader of the opposition, on May 16, 1969, when he said, as reported at page 8790 of Hansard:

> I believe the existence of the two official languages of the two founding peoples of this country has made Canada distinctive and has created a tradition and respect for diversity which also show our appreciation of the nature of the people who have come to Canada from many other lands. Our task is to strengthen their union and our country as it exists. Canada, of course, is not a melting pot but a country which respects diversity.

That was said at a time when the hon. gentleman was taking two hours out from a busy schedule every day to learn, and eventually master, the French language.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. McGrath: One day the country will recognize the outstanding contribution of the hon. member for Halifax.

Nobody can doubt the position of this party. If hon. members sat and listened objectively to what my leader had to say in what I consider to be the outstanding speech of this debate—indeed, the outstanding speech of this session—

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. McGrath: —they could not doubt for a moment the position of the official opposition. The record will reflect that this party has not only supported the official languages policy but has in fact been in the forefront of those who would advocate the implementation of an official languages policy for Canada. What we quarrel with is not the policy but the implementation of the policy.

• (1830)

There has to be something wrong with an Official Languages Act which, according to the figures for 1974-75, is costing the country $105 million. That is not a very big price to pay, of course, but there has to be something wrong when we cannot get a ministerial statement to the House printed in two official languages.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Some hon. Members: Shame!

Mr. McGrath: We saw what happened today. It would be easy to pass over it, but let the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Gillespie), with the substantial expenditures he has to support him in this House, explain to the House, to the Social Credit Party, and to the unilingual members in this House, why he would have to come before the House with a statement in only one language. I would look forward to hearing him explain that in the House at the earliest possible moment.

I quarrel with a language policy that would deny children in my province the right to learn the second language of this country, the right to be enriched by French culture, because it is to be enriched to have access to it.

My children attend school in the city of Ottawa and they are bilingual. I am proud of that because another world is open to them. Not only are they better Canadians but they can enjoy a much wider and enriching experience of the world. They are bilingual because they were able to take advantage of a French immersion program that was funded, albeit as an experiment, by this government in the city of Ottawa. If they had been going to school in St. John's, Newfoundland, they would not have had that opportunity as the children living there do not have it.

Let us look at what we are getting for $100 million. Does it provide French immersion to the towns and villages of this country where only one language is spoken? Failure to do that is to deny children in Newfoundland equality of opportunity in this country. If they opt for a career in the Public Service they know they could not get beyond the local level because no opportunity is open to them in a unilingual province to learn French so that they could have the same opportunities as Canadians in other parts of the country.

An hon. Member: Ask Frank Moores about it.

Mr. McGrath: Let me tell the hon. member something about the government of Newfoundland that he does not know. Today our province is in debt to the extent that it can no longer afford to maintain existing levels of service because it has to operate within the framework of a policy that has its priorities all mixed up. That is what my leader is saying. The official languages policy is essential to the existence of this country but it is not the glue; by itself it is divisive.

What my French Canadian compatriots in the province of Quebec want is jobs. It comes down to a question of bread and butter, Mr. Speaker. Unemployment has always been a problem in Quebec, just as it has always been a problem in the Atlantic provinces. The curse of ongoing unemployment is a direct result of ongoing regional disparity. I can only hope that events will transpire in this House—and perhaps this debate will be the turning point—so that the people of this country will understand we must have an Official Languages Act in order to keep the country together; we must provide equality of opportunity for our French Canadian compatriots in Quebec and elsewhere, and for Canadians in other parts of Canada. You cannot on the one hand solve a problem in Quebec and on the other hand create one in Newfoundland. In my opinion this is where the system gets off the rails.

I should like now to address myself to the amendment before the House. The hon. member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. MacFarlane) said he wants to involve his constituents in this great dialogue. I want to involve my constituents too, Mr. Speaker, and what better or more appropriate way can this be done than by involving the parliament of this country?

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. McGrath: My constituents look to me for leadership, not to some task force that will perhaps report at some obscure date—I do not think it is even going to report to this House.

It is passing strange that eight months after the election of a separatist government in Quebec, the greatest threat in 110 years to the continued existence of this country, this government brings a resolution before the House saying it would like the rest of the country to involve itself in this great debate. Even then they had to be literally dragged in here to get that resolution on the order paper.

I say to the government that it can serve this parliament and this country by agreeing to the very realistic and responsible amendment of the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Clark) and strike a joint parliamentary committee to go across the country and hear from the average people—not just the academics, although they have an ongoing contribution to make, but the average person, the unemployed in St. John's, Newfoundland, the people on welfare, the native peoples, unilingual French Canadians in Lac St. Jean, Quebec, unilingual Anglophones on the west island of Montreal, and in the foothills of Alberta. Only a parliamentary committee has the heart and soul to understand these people and get input from them, not some high-falutin', almighty, all-important task force that is going to frighten the ordinary person.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. McGrath: I do not mean any disrespect to the hon. Jean-Luc Pepin, Mr. Robarts, or anybody else on that committee—I have nothing but respect for them—but I say, let the government have its task force and let us have a joint parliamentary committee so that we can get on with our responsibility to our constituents in this great debate.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

● (1840)

[Translation]

Mr. Louis Duclos (Montmorency): Mr. Speaker, I have decided to enter this debate first of all to assert my hope and my confidence that my country, Canada, will maintain its territorial integrity, but also to tell the House how in the view of a young Quebecer who became aware of government affairs at the time of the "quiet revolution" in Quebec, this Canadian crisis could be defused.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to deal successively in my speech with four points which I feel sum up rather well the whole range of claims French speaking Canadians have been making for much too long already. Here they are. I will deal first with the status of the French language in Quebec, next with the status of French minorities in predominantly English-speaking provinces, next with the role of francophone civil servants and the use of the French language within the federal public service, and finally with the constitutional reform.

The debate on Bill No. 1 in the Quebec legislative assembly has over the last few months emphasized a point which I believe will be decisive for the future of Canada. It would seem however that one cannot deal intelligently with a matter if one is not familiar with some population data taken from the last decennial census conducted by Statistics Canada. Therefore, I want to submit to the House some statistics which should enable us to better understand the Quebec francophones' concerns about language matters as well as the steps the Quebec government must take to alleviate their concerns.

First of all, in the 1971 census, 270,600 Quebecers whose origin is neither British nor French reported one of the two official languages was their mother tongue. Now, 64 per cent of them said English was their mother tongue. Second, on the other hand, in the same census, 358,600 Quebecers whose origin was neither French nor English reported one of the two official languages in Canada was their working language. Of those, 69 per cent said English was their working language. Third, for each new Quebecer who joins the French-speaking group, two are joining the English-speaking group. Now, French-speaking Canadians can only maintain their present level of demographic prevalence if 80 per cent of the new Quebecers adopt the French language. Fourth, almost 100,000 Quebecers whose mother tongue is not English use English as their working language, whereas only 4,000 Quebecers whose mother tongue is not French use this language as their working language. Should the present trends of natural growth, language mobility and migration be maintained, French-speaking Canadians would represent less than 60 per cent of the whole population of greater Montreal by the turn of the century.

Mr. Speaker, it is obvious that Bill 1 introduced by the Quebec government contains some provisions which go against the linguistic ideal sought by this government for the past ten years. Other provisions such as that which makes the use of French compulsory in public notices as well as in formal proceedings of townhalls or school boards which may include an English-speaking majority, seem useless to me and unlikely to contribute to the development of the French language and culture in Quebec. Similarly, several provisions regarding the francization of businesses seem to be uselessly niggling and they may open the door to bureaucratic arbitrary decisions. Having said that, Mr. Speaker, I feel nevertheless that this legislation does not deserve the criticism it gave rise to in some circles. For example, to claim that the Quebec government is trying with this legislation to get rid of the English-speaking community in Quebec is sheer demagogy.

As far as the language of instruction is concerned, this legislation fully respects the acquired rights of Anglophones and other Quebecers who are already attending English schools. It ensures that in the future, English schools will not be an assimilation tool for New Quebecers into the English speaking minority. Indeed, no one could object to this legislation if it were to give to children of English Canadians who will settle down in Quebec after the bill is passed, access to english schools. I am very sorry that Canadian citizens are being treated like immigrants, especially as their reduced number does not threaten in any way the linguistic balance of the province of Quebec.

But frankly, Mr. Speaker, we must admit that even after the adoption of Bill 1, the English minority in Quebec will still be the best treated minority in the whole country with its own schools, colleges, universities, radio and television stations, newspapers, in short, practically a complete range of institutions. And I, as a Quebecer, will be proud of it, Mr. Speaker, because the respect and tolerance a nation shows towards its minorities is in my view the unmistakable sign of its collective maturity.

Of course, we can regret the restrictions imposed by this bill on the principle of free choice for the language of instruction but apart from the fact that it is an ideal that in any case could not materialize for quite awhile in English Canada, and even so only in a few provinces, a policy which would ensure a completely free choice of the language of education would for the time being, be a menace to the Quebec linguistic balance. We can only hope that within ten years or so when the francophone majority has reinforced its positions through active government participation in the selection of immigrants Quebec will be able to offer once again a free choice in the language of education.

Mr. Speaker, I am surprised that people who have never protested the plight of the French minorities outside Quebec are suddenly embarking on a crusade to protect the English speaking minority in Quebec and urge the federal government to disavow the Quebec legislation and even question its constitutionality before the courts. It would be paradoxical to say the least, Mr. Speaker, that the province which respects the rights of its linguistic minorities the most be the first one to bear federal disavowal.

It would be just as unacceptable, Mr. Speaker, if the federal government undertook to challenge the constitutionality of that legislation before the courts. Political wisdom prompts us to let the Quebec people rate by themselves the actions of their own government at the next provincial elections. In addition, it is a fine opportunity to show Quebecers that the federal system does not stand in the way of their government as far as the promotion of the French language and culture in Quebec is concerned and consequently, independence is really not necessary. Anyway, how could the federal government justify fighting to the death a legislation which gives the English-speaking minority in Quebec a treatment which would delight French-speaking minorities outside Quebec, if it were given to them?

Mr. Speaker, at a time when in some quarters people are groundlessly panic-stricken at the prospects of the English-speaking community in Quebec, in the years ahead I feel we should turn our attention to the conditions French-speaking minorities have to put up with outside Quebec. In six out of nine English-speaking provinces, the percentage of people of French origin whose mother tongue is now English is over 45 per cent. The assimilation rate has even reached 65 per cent in British Columbia and 80 per cent in Newfoundland. Indeed, only New Brunswick, Ontario and Manitoba have French-speaking minorities whose future is not ineluctably doomed, more especially in New Brunswick and in Ontario which are contiguous to Quebec. However, they will resist assimilation only if their provincial governments, following the example of the Quebec government, is sympathetic to their cause and provides them with a complete educational system in which instruction will be given in French.

● (1850)

In that respect, I cannot understand the attitude of the premier of Ontario who keeps repeating that he wants to reinforce Canadian unity, yet he remains the perfect usage of stinginess when it comes to accommodating the Franco-Ontarian community about the language issues. I wish he would realize soon that he would contribute remarkably to Canadian unity if he were courageous enough to deal with the French community from Ontario just in the same way as our English conpatriots are treated in Quebec.

Mr. Speaker, if governments from New Brunswick, from Ontario and possibly from Manitoba could take concrete measures to stop this policy of assimilation of French-speaking people who live in those provinces, this would be perceived by a majority of Quebecers as a determination on English Canadian's part to establish at last a true equality in Canada. While most of the language problems are beyond the scope of the federal government since it lacks jurisdiction over education, still it must ensure equal language opportunities for all in all federal institutions. Many projects have been accomplished these last few years. Suffice to mention that the rate of management positions held by French-speaking Canadians in the federal public service has gone up from 12 to 20 per cent between 1965 and 1976. It is encouraging to see that 32 per cent of federal civil servants under 35 are French-speaking, a reason to feel optimistic about our future. But we must not forget either that only 13 per cent of the federal civil servants who earn more than $30,000 a year are French Canadians. Besides, there are still too many organizations in our federal departments which do not seem to care very much to ensure a fair French presence at senior levels.

According to the last annual report of the Canadian Public Service Commission, the Anti-Inflation Board does not have one single French-speaking member among its 18 senior officers. In the agriculture and national defence departments, less than 5 per cent of management jobs are held by French Canadians. The Departments of Veteran Affairs, Finance and Energy, Mines and Resources, have only 5 to 10 per cent French-speaking Canadians among senior officers. Even then, those are filling only 10 to 15 per cent of management jobs in the following departments and organizations: the Department of Transport, the Canadian Transport Commission, the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, the National Energy Board, the Department of National Revenue and the Department of Science and Technology.

Mr. Speaker, in spite of significant progress during the last decade, it is evident that we have not yet a true sharing between French speaking and English speaking Canadians in public administration. Therefore we must accelerate the hiring of French speaking public employees, but particularly we must positively recognize the right for the employee to work in the language of his choice in federal public administration. It is essential that French speaking people have the opportunity to use their language in doing their job, because they can show their full capacity and their career could be badly affected.

To that end, Mr. Speaker, we will have to amend the federal Official Languages Act within a few months. Even though it is possible for people under that law, to communicate in the language of their choice with the federal administration, we cannot say the same concerning the right to work in French. As French speaking people would not commit their language rights to a legislation which would be limited in scope, and which might be interpreted, as we have seen recently, in many ways by courts, I urge the government to amend that legislation in order to clear up any ambiguity and to make a true language rights charter which would serve equally English speaking and French speaking people.

Mr. Speaker, recently the government reiterated in a paper entitled "A National Understanding" tabled before the House by the Secretary of State, that he wants to institute language equality across our country. Sometimes I wonder whether the government is really determined to go beyond a simple statement of principles when I think of the unfairness demonstrated by Air Canada which still forbids its French speaking mechanics to work in their language in Montreal workshops, and when I consider the government takes no action in face of that shocking situation. It is evident that the federal government would gain much credibility for the French speaking Quebec-ers if he would take the necessary measures to bring that corporation to its senses.

Thus, I strongly urge the government to act firmly in this matter in order to bring Air Canada around to respecting the rights of its French-speaking workers. In the same way, Mr. Speaker, the federal government is bound to settle the bilingualism issue in air communications in Quebec, and that in a satisfactory manner for Quebecers, otherwise the suspicion in this regard will grow dangerously. Mr. Speaker, regardless of the progress made in linguistic equality in English provinces and in the federal civil service, the outcome of the Canadian crisis must inevitably bring in an in-depth review of our federalist system, recognizing Quebec as the mainstay of Francophones in Canada. Such a review must result in a new division of legislative jurisdictions between provinces and the federal government, and on an institutional reform related more specifically to the Senate and the Supreme Court of Canada.

Mr. Speaker, Quebec is no longer alone, as it was in the past, in confronting the central government on the matter of a new sharing of legislative powers. The letter addressed on October 14 last by the Alberta premier to the right hon. Prime Minister of Canada (Mr. Trudeau), on behalf of all his provincial counterparts, reveals full well the emergence of a well articulated provincial awareness which will inevitably lead to a new Canada whose political structure will reflect more closely the true nature of Canada. In fact, it is in that new attitude on the part of the Anglophone provinces that lies for Canada the opportunity to perpetuate itself as a political entity.

It is clear, however, that Quebec, as the national homeland of Francophones, has its very own imperatives in requesting a constitutional revision which would confer upon her primary legislative powers in the fields bearing on the existence and fulfilment of Francophones as a cultural group. It would indeed be foolhardy for the Francophone minority of Canada to depend, in matters affecting the very basis of its collective life, to rely on the will of a government, in this instance, the federal government, which will increasingly be dominated by the Anglophone majority. It must be pointed out, Mr. Speaker, that because of Quebec's slower growth in population, as compared with the rest of Canada, the political weight of Quebec at the federal level is bound to decrease with the years. For instance, the electoral redistribution following the 1971 census increased the number of seats in the House of Commons from 264 to 282, but only one of the 18 new seats will be added to the Quebec representation. In addition, according to the estimates of Statistics Canada, Quebec, which for a long time represented about 30 per cent of the Canadian population, which still represent 28 per cent of it today, could easily only make up 22 or 23 per cent of it by the year 2000.

Mr. Speaker, I feel a constitutional reform should be undertaken on the basis of seven guidelines as follows:

(1) Any matter other than foreign affairs, national defence, monetary policy and interprovincial commerce could, if need be, be entrusted to the provinces.

(2) The federal government should keep fiscal powers which are wide enough to be able to implement equalization programs directed to less favoured provinces and programs for a better redistribution of the national revenue in favour of Canadians at the bottom of the income scale.

(3) It is absolutely impossible to give the provinces some responsibilities in areas where the federal government can obviously better meet the needs of the population.

(4) The possibility of transferring to the federal government part of the provincial legislative jusrisdiction over such areas as natural resources should not be excluded.

(5) The new constitution should provide for a human rights charter whose specific objective would be to guarantee "minimum language rights" in all the provinces.

(6) The provinces could freely delegate to the federal government some of their powers under the new constitution.

(7) The new constitution should provide for an amending formula closely patterned on the most recent federal proposals in this respect.

I conclude, Mr. Speaker, by saying that an up-grading of the role of the Senate, with half of its members appointed by the provinces, and with 25 per cent of its members representing the province of Quebec, would likely reassure the Quebecers who are concerned about the reduced political weight their province carries at the federal level. As to the Supreme Court, it should be reformed in line with the general provisions of the Victoria Charter concerning it. Thus, Canada would have a truly constitutional tribunal whose decisions would never be questioned by the parties involved in a constitutional conflict.

Mr. Speaker, because federalism is per se an advanced form of political organization, we must do our utmost so that Quebec will be able to develop within the Canadian federal system.

Mr. Speaker: I regret to inform the hon. member that it is now seven o'clock.

Mr. Duclos: One last sentence, Mr. Speaker, and I am finished with my remarks.

Mr. Speaker: In that case, the hon. member may finish his remarks.

[English]

Order, please. I understand that the hon. member is simply finishing a sentence to conclude his speech. I will then see the hon. member for Battle River (Mr. Malone).

[Translation]

Mr. Duclos: Mr. Speaker, only a reformed Canadian federalism will allow Quebec to reconcile its need for self-government with the interdependency which is necessary to build a society which is dynamic and capable of accepting the challenges of the modern world.

• (1900)

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Order. There was some confusion earlier in the day when the two-hour debate was beginning. At that time it was about two minutes past five and I indicated, therefore, that the debate would stop at two minutes past seven. Then we got into some discussion about a point of order, about government business and so on, and the debate did not in fact begin until closer to ten minutes past five, so I wonder if the House would not think it appropriate to allow the hon. member for Battle River five minutes rather than two.

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Arnold Malone (Battle River): Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I should like to say first of all how pleased I am to have this opportunity to participate, even for a short time, in a debate on such an important topic as national unity. It has been labelled one of the most important debates in this decade or perhaps since Confederation.

While we must all pay due attention to the issue of language the fact of the matter is that language is not the only issue that is dividing people in this country, and that we have to pay attention to many other important problems which are facing the country. I have a whole list here but will be unable to illustrate my point because of the lack of time. I would like to draw attention to what I think is a very sad situation indeed—that while we are debating one of the most important problems facing the nation in the last decade, the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) has seen fit not to be in the House this day but has instead put politics above Canada; he has instead put the Liberal party above the country. He has moved to the western part of the country, together with the Minister without Portfolio (Mr. Horner), carrying with him a basket of plums, and I might suggest that those plums were not raised from seed but come from the result of clever grafting—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Malone: Here he is, not in the House on what is an issue of absolute and utmost importance.

There is a need for a much greater extension of time to speak in this debate and with this in mind, and with the feeling that there ought to be more time for this debate, and recognizing the reasoned amendment which was put forward by the leader of my party, and because I do not have time, in this short allotment which was given to me, to put forward the case I would like to, I will sit down at this time and ask that a vote be taken on the amendment because I think the House should have the opportunity to have that parliamentary task force; there is no one quite like a member of parliament who has touched on all the various kinds of natures of people in the various constituencies of this country, and I would hope the amendment could be put.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

[Mr. Duclos.]

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member must realize, of course, that there is nothing inherent in the setting aside of a limited time for debate to indicate that at the expiry of the time the debate is concluded. It would be implicit in the hon. member's suggestion that the debate on the subject or upon the amendment concludes at this point. That is not a part of the order, and it is certainly not a part of the understanding which has been expressed.

An hon. Member: Let them stand up and we will have a vote now.

Mr. Speaker: I simply wish to advise the hon. member that there is no such understanding. I am sure hon. members would not want to consider that the debate on this subject is now concluded.

Mr. Malone: My proposal is that the vote be taken now, because that would be a reflection of the view of the House—that parliament ought to have more say.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member should realize that what he would be asking me to do is not to recognize other speakers in the debate, which I must do, of course. In any event I have indicated that the hon. member for Battle River ought to have five minutes in which to speak. Those five minutes have almost expired and as we approach 7.06 p.m. the debate does, in fact, come to a conclusion at this point.

It being 7.06 p.m. I do now leave the chair until eight o'clock this evening.

AFTER RECESS

The House resumed at 8 p.m.

• (2010)

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

EMPLOYMENT AND IMMIGRATION REORGANIZATION ACT

MEASURE TO ESTABLISH DEPARTMENT OF EMPLOYMENT AND IMMIGRATION, ETC.

The House resumed, from Tuesday, July 5, consideration of the motion of Mr. Cullen that Bill C-27, an act to establish the Department of Employment and Immigration, the Canada Employment and Immigration Commission and the Canada Employment and Immigration Advisory Council, to amend the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971, and to amend certain other statutes in consequence thereof, be read the third time and do pass.

Mr. Arnold Peters (Timiskaming): Mr. Speaker, I would think that the members of the government are cutting it pretty thin. In another couple of minutes we would have adjourned for want of a quorum, but I would not have wanted that to happen.

Some hon. Members: No, no!

Mr. Peters: An adjournment would eliminate my opportunity for making a plea to the government to dispose of this bill by withdrawing it. It has been our contention in third reading debate, as it has been our contention all along, that the reason this bill was introduced at all was because we have an unacceptable amount of unemployment. Our unemployment is of a cyclical nature, and there does not seem to be any end to the cycle of unemployment. There has been no upturn to date in our economy, therefore it has been increasingly difficult to pay the necessary unemployment benefits. The easiest solution would be to cut down on the number of people who can draw benefits under the unemployment insurance scheme, but that is no substitute for employment.

Some of the unemployment we are suffering today is the kind that is going to cause considerable difficulty in the outlying areas of the country, in the areas which are dependent on one industry. There is difficulty in the service industry where employment often is of a short duration and is difficult to come by. This is not true in terms of full employment periods, but it is true in those periods when employment is more difficult to come by. We are also very concerned about the fact that much of this cyclical unemployment takes place with those between the ages of 15 and 25. If members are unaware of how serious this is, they may, as I have done in the last few days, get in touch with Manpower. It is very surprising to see the calibre of people who go to our Manpower offices. Some of them have degrees, but they have been unable to obtain employment.

For these reasons this bill should be reconsidered. It should be reconsidered not only in light of eliminating some of the discretionary clauses in the bill, namely, the extension in the period when a person must work before qualifying for any benefits. It should be reviewed as well in light of finding a way to provide employment for the 1½ million people who are now looking for employment.

We cannot support the bill in its present form. We are insistent that reconsideration be given to the establishment in Canada of an employment factor rather than unemployment insurance, and point out the failure of this bill to do this. Therefore I move, seconded by the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Blackburn):

That the motion be amended by deleting all the words after the word "that" and by substituting therefor the following words:

"Bill C-27 be not read a third time, but that it be read a third time this day six months hence."

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): The question is now on the amendment. Is the House ready for the question?

[Translation]

Mr. Armand Caouette (Villeneuve): Mr. Speaker, let me first congratulate the hon. member for Témiscaming (Mr. Peters) who put forward the amendment proposing to postpone third reading of this bill for six months. As far as I am concerned, there are several proposals in the bill which are desirable and acceptable. I do not want to be negative about it, alleging that there is nothing good in Bill C-27. However, we must admit that this bill more than any other piece of legislation on the order paper has prompted reactions from many groups of citizens who are against one or several of its provisions.

● (2020)

Mr. Speaker, when a bill is a cause of division and hate in a country, in my opinion, it is only logical to postpone its implementation and to listen to those who are not satisfied with it. Later on it can be passed with amendments that make it more acceptable, with the knowledge that Canadians do not feel that they have been had, to use a colloquialism. This is why, Mr. Speaker, I believe that the amendment suggested today by the hon. member for Timiskaming is sound and warrants our reflecting on all the problems that this bill can cause. I also believe that the government would be well-advised to listen to this suggestion and to let things quiet down for a while before implementing this bill about which, as I said earlier, so many Canadians are deeply divided.

It is a secret for no one, Mr. Speaker, that nobody agrees on the period required to qualify for unemployment insurance. The minister himself recognized the explosive nature of this issue when he jumped the gun and suggested an amendment to the bill so as to replace the original requirement of twelve weeks of employment by a more streamlined and more complex provision allowing the number of weeks to vary from one region to another according to the local unemployment rate. The minister has tried to have it both ways. He has tried to please everyone, but let us face it, his bill pleases almost no one. As my colleague from Kamouraska (Mr. Dionne) and my colleague from Timiskaming said so well earlier, the people mainly affected by this bill are those who can work only a few weeks at a job, which forces their employers to hire them for a set period.

Mr. Speaker, this issue is important and I believe that all members must recognize that bill C-27 is a source of dissension among the citizens of our country. On the one hand, we have individuals who need the security provided by the unemployment insurance and groups representing the poor, and on the other hand, we have the business people who are sufficiently well off not to need unemployment insurance. The first group demands of course that the qualifying period remains at eight weeks while the other group would like it to be increased to at least twelve weeks.

Mr. Speaker, how can we reconcile these two points of view? It is certainly difficult and it is easy to understand the failure of the minister in this regard. Anyone else would probably not have done better, but the minister should be man enough to recognize that the situation is dramatic and that any attempt on his part to have this bill passed quickly will only worsen the situation and cause more anger, especially on the part of those who will have the feeling that they have not been heard and that no one has listened to them.

The flexibility shown by the minister in trying to amend his bill may be commendable. However, it must be admitted that the act would be harder to implement because it would apply differently in various regions. For example, when a person moves, he may find himself disqualified because the region to which he moves may be subject to stricter criteria under the minister's plan. This will be once again a selective legislation which will require additional civil servants to determine the unemployment rate in each region, in order to make adjustments and figure out how many weeks of employment will be needed to qualify for unemployment insurance; if the unemployment rate is higher, more weeks will be needed, and if it is lower, fewer weeks.

Once again, Mr. Speaker, additional civil servants will be required, more categories, further calculations and also increased costs in order to provide the same service that we are now providing to the unemployed. The Minister of Manpower and Immigration (Mr. Cullen) knows how long I have been waiting for this bill. Like many other members, I had the opportunity to deal personally with hundreds of unemployment insurance cases which were submitted by my constituents or other persons. In certain cases, I had occasion to notice that the present act gives rise to blatant injustices. I have often tried to solve the problem of an unemployed constituent and found that the reason for his problem was not necessarily due to the mistake of an official or to the negligence of a claimant but actually to the working of the act. However, in spite of our eagerness to have some changes made in the field of unemployment insurance, we feel nevertheless that it would be a mistake to pass this bill at a time when so many Canadians are dissatisfied.

What I am asking the minister when I suggest that he allow this amendment to be passed, which is designed to defer for 6 months the third reading of this bill, is to try actually to seek a consensus among the population instead of ramming this bill through Parliament against the will of almost everybody. The minister should show his good faith by saying himself: "I am aware that many people oppose this bill", in order to show them that he wants to come up with a measure that will answer the needs and the expectations of these people. Let his bill be shelved for 6 months so that we may listen to the people and inform them at the same time. That is the approach the minister should take now. Mr. Speaker, I have said before and I say it again, it is no time to play politics and to show partisanship regarding this issue, because we feel it is too important for that. We do not want to filibuster.

● (2030)

As I said earlier, there are aspects in this legislation that are quite commendable and acceptable, and I think that, in principle it is a good idea to bring immigration and employment under one department. Clearly in our future immigration policy we will have to take into account the employment situation in Canada, and I submit it would be inhuman to invite immigrants to come here if we were not in a position to offer them suitable employment.

Therefore, by creating one department combining immigration and employment it should allow for better planning of our future immigration policy. It will make it easier for us on the basis of the employment-unemployment situation to decide upon the number of immigrants to be accepted. Delaying the establishment of such a department by delaying the legislation is certainly not a pleasant task, but we must consider the whole bill and its implications before rushing it through.

Let us suppose the bill is postponed for six months, Mr. Speaker. This would only leave the government with more time to plan for the establishment of the new department. This would have positive effects, in that it would be possible to identify in advance and avoid errors that usually mar the implementation of any new legislation. So the minister would be well advised to use the six months' delay before bringing back Bill C-27, to prepare and make plans for the integration of the new department. Of course all will depend on how the new department will be created.

It is often said that the road to hell is paved with good intentions. In order to create a more efficient department, a department that is better equipped to coordinate immigration based on the availability of jobs, more than good intentions will be needed. There will have to be first sound management and competent people. Of course, considering the poor performance of the present government in the administration of this country, one is not too sure of the effects of this new legislation as far as administration is concerned. The fact remains, however, that the concept of a better coordination between these interdependent areas is a commendable initiative. And, Mr. Speaker, I do not hesitate to recognize it.

Mr. Speaker, if I support this amendment which calls for a six months' hoist for the consideration of this legislation, it is simply because too many of our fellow citizens find some specific aspects of this bill unacceptable. One thing is clear at present, Mr. Speaker: it is impossible to include in Bill C-27 provisions which are likely to satisfy all interested parties. We shall have to try to determine the root of this problem and find a solution before this bill can be passed. That is why, Mr. Speaker, I urge the government and the Minister of Manpower and Immigration (Mr. Cullen) in particular, to consider seriously the amendment put forward by the hon. member for Timiskaming. We know this government has absolute majority in the House. We also know that they can, if they wish, ignore the proposals of opposition parties and the requests of Canadians.

I also think that the government should heed this advice which is given not in a partisan spirit but in a spirit of cooperation, with a view to giving the Canadian people some acceptable legislation and also sparing them confrontations and needless frustrations. Mr. Speaker, if I may, I should like to comment certain clauses of the bill. Let us refer to clause

[Mr. Caouette (Villeneuve).]

26. On the whole, that clause seems to favour unemployment insurance claimants. However, two comments are called for: On one hand, this clause is inconsistent with section 148(1) of the regulations and on the other hand, the last part of the clause provides that an interruption of earnings would be determined when an insured person is no longer working for an employer, and also when a reduction in his hours of work for that employer results in a prescribed reduction in earnings.

In my opinion, it would be wise to know the wording of the regulations governing the reduction in earnings mentioned in this clause. Obviously, this amendment is part of the work sharing program proposed in Bill C-27. That is why it is essential to know exactly and specifically all the implictions and provisions involved in this amendment. If we refer to clause 27, it says that the determination of an insurable job comes under the jurisdiction of the Department of National Revenue. Mr. Speaker, how many times we, as members of parliament, regardless of party lines, had to make numerous phone calls to the revenue deputy minister to obtain a ruling on the insurability of some employment. At this level of procedure, considerable delays are due, on the one hand, to the volume of applications made to the deputy minister and, on the other hand, to the usual dilatoriness of officials when dealing with unemployment insurance benefits matters.

Many of the petty annoyances of the civil service are also attached to the fact that determination of insurability has more to do with the Department of National Revenue than the Unemployment Insurance Commission. Since work sharing is a new way of granting subsidies to the enterprise, it is more likely that many employers will avail themselves of this new form of assistance. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, it would be wise to know immediately what will be the insurable and non-insurable jobs so as to avoid excessive number of appeals before the administrative court that is the commission or the Department of National Revenue.

Mr. Speaker, we recommend therefore that determination of insurability of salaries for shared work as well as for other kinds of employment be left with the Canada Employment and immigration Commission.

This afternoon we had the opportunity to hear hon. members on clause 29 of the bill. Mr. Speaker, requiring a claimant to have at least twelve weeks of insurable employment to be eligible for unemployment benefits is like launching a direct charge against the unemployed in making believe that they are responsible for their own predicament. This new provision proposed by the government is a direct attack against the most deprived among the working class, because the majority of workers who qualify with a minimum number of weeks of insurable employment are the following as the hon. member for Kamouraska (Mr. Dionne) pointed out so well this afternoon. The first group is older workers and those with a low income and a low level of education who generally keep their jobs for a shorter period of time because the kinds of jobs they are offered, or which are available to them, are often short term jobs. Second, students who no longer wish to continue their education and who as a first experience were hired for a summer period find themselves disentitled to unemployment insurance benefits under this new provision. Third, workers who work in the fruit, vegetable and tobacco fields in various provinces of Canada.

That proposed provision by the government does not take into consideration at all modern personnel hiring requirements in private, public or even parapublic industry. More and more frequently businesses only need skilled workers for a short period of time; skilled workers are generally hired for a specific short term job.

Let us look at clause 31, another provision of the government's proposed legislation to save at the expense of workers on compensation. Why limit the privilege of an extended qualifying period only to those workers who receive the maximum compensation for work inquiry? That clause discriminates against workers on compensation who do not get the maximum amounts obtainable on compensation. The proposed application of this clause would be unfair to workers on compensation who cannot work because of their work injury and who receive temporary total workmen's compensation payments and it is also unfair to those who receive permanent partial workmen's compensation payments.

All injured workers who cannot take their usual job back on a regular basis because of their work injury and who have the courage to work on a temporary basis should indiscriminately be able to get an extension of the qualifying period. There is a section in the act which I am happy to say will be advantageous in many cases. I am happy to have been one of the first promotors of that amendment. The Unemployment Insurance Commission could disqualify any person who had worked more than four weeks and less than eight.

The same Commission could disqualify that person as long as that person could not work. I even asked the minister at that time here in this House whether he thought it was good to encourage people to go back to work after a long period of unemployment. But in the area I have the pleasure to represent the rate of unemployment is not very very high, but the number of unemployed is still too high for us. How many times did people work at the request of the Unemployment Insurance Commission? Those same people after a period of four, six and even seven weeks had to leave their job because of a bankruptcy and absolutely nothing could be done to correct that problem.

After a few weeks of work, those people had to go to the Quebec welfare department to survive. I do not want to miss the opportunity to congratulate the minister for having done away with those controversial clauses and I hope the minister will listen to the suggestions put forward by opposition or government members, particularly the proposal of the member for Timiskaming to postpone for six months the third reading of this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I have other remarks to make on this bill, but first I would like to comment on clause 33. Mr. Speaker, that clause certainly demonstrates a degree of refinement and subtlety attained by juggling civil servants, supported by an anti-labour government, to express their disgust toward the working class which, as I said earlier, is against the bill generally.

While the Unemployment Insurance Act allows the commission to claim, 36 months after the benefits have been paid, the overpayments made because the claimant did not meet all eligibility conditions that legislation does not recognize the same rights to the claimant. He has only 13 weeks to have set the beginning of the benefit period and he must find all kinds of reasons to convince UIC officials that he was justified to delay his application for benefits.

Mr. Speaker, we also object to clause 35 of the bill because it is unrealistic. That provision is detrimental to the workers who will accept a shorter work period to keep their job instead of being unemployed. However, when they are laid off because there is no more work, they suffer a loss because the calculations are based on average weekly wages. They should only take into account their ten best weeks for the purpose of calculating those qualifying weeks. It often happens in medium and small businesses that the employer, before laying off a worker, will cut down the wages and the number of hours worked.

And that is another reason why we support the motion introduced tonight by the hon. member for Témiscamingue. We could mention other sections, Mr. Speaker, such as section 36. When a claimant is not entitled to extended benefits for any working day of a period of benefits, this section of the bill should provide that the commission can subtract a fifth of the weekly amount of the benefits payable and not the whole week. What about section 38? In view of the fact that the Unemployment Insurance Act is by far the most complex legislation ever devised in a specific area, we assumed that this government would not have pretended that it was necessary, for the sake of its popularity to uphold a clause as ambiguous and mixed up as the one contained in section 30.1 of the Act.

Mr. Speaker, all my remarks and those of my colleagues as well as those of the New Democratic Party and the Social Credit Party of Canada are going to contribute something to this debate, especially to the one stemming from the motion of the hon. member for Timiskaming (Mr. Peters), and I hope that the ministers will bring to the attention of the minister concerned that it is unfair, to pass this bill. I am appealing to the hon. members' and broadmindedness before concluding my remarks at this stage of the debate on Bill C-27. I only hope that the government will not take advantage of its majority to crush the expectations and legitimate demands of Canadians who are affected by this bill. The government should avail itself of this amendment which aims at delaying for 6 months the passage of this bill, to listen to and inform the public as to the consequences of the reforms and changes involved in Bill C-27.

● (2040)

[English]

Mr. Derek Blackburn (Brant): Mr. Speaker, I should like to thank the hon. member for Timiskaming (Mr. Peters) for introducing his motion to hoist or delay passage of this bill for six months. As the previous speaker mentioned, many parts of the bill are ill-advised and not relevant to the times in which we live. This point has been made by all members of the New Democratic Party who have spoken, and also by members of the Social Credit party. I do not blame the minister entirely for this, but I do blame him for one aspect of it.

● (2050)

I am particularly concerned about clauses 39 and 40 dealing, I believe, with the qualifying period; they are based on the comprehensive study of two and a half years ago when economic conditions were better and people could move more readily to another job. I cannot think of a worse time for introducing this bill than the present, and although Liberal party members may accuse us of filibustering, let me say if we do not filibuster, who will? Certainly my friends to my right will not. They are not concerned about the qualifying period. But if we were debating the gun control bill, C-51, they would rise to their feet one after the other to keep this House in session all summer. So, I suffer from no sense of guilt because my party and my good Creditiste friends are continuing the debate on this bill. It is a bad bill in most respects, and could not have been introduced at a worse time.

Before I talk on the specific provisions of the bill, let me for a moment deal with the question of our unemployed younger people. We all know that some young people do not want to work, and many employers keep repeating such hackneyed sentiments. Many who are gainfully employed in industry and paying unemployment insurance premiums are fed up with this very small group which refuses to work in any circumstances. It is simplistic to say that most or all of our young people are lazy bums who don't want to work. That is an easy argument to make, and an easy way to try to score debating points. Therefore I suggest we should consider the position of young people in our society.

I taught high school for eleven years before being elected to this House, and know that during the 1960's, because of our rising expectations, many parents advised their children to stay at school. "Stay in school," they said, "and you will get a better job, a cleaner job, a better paying job. You will be respected more, not need to carry a lunch pail, and not need to get up at 5.30 a.m. or six o'clock. You can sleep in to 7.30 or eight, teach school, go to the office or practise a profession." Mr. Speaker, I do not look back in anger. Parents in those days thought those were admirable goals for our young people, and our school system went along with them, province by province.

We channelled ever more people into the academic field, even though we had opened some vocational training schools. But there was a stigma attached to those who went to vocational and industrial schools. In small communities and large, the youngsters who went to vocational schools were looked on as second rate and third rate students and people. And ever since they have not escaped the feeling that they are second class, inferior people.

Let us consider what happened to those who went to academic schools. Personally I think between 25 per cent and 30 per cent of them did not have the brains for an academic program. Those people today have a hard time finding work, and lay the blame at the feet of poor federal and provincial planning across this country. In the past seven or eight years many of our young people have been over-educated. They accepted their parents' advice, took financial assistance if it was available, stayed at school, graduated with a Master's or Bachelor's degree, or with a doctorate or a professional qualification, but cannot find work even in Toronto where unemployment rates are relatively low. Their education has not fitted them for a job. Mr. Speaker, the members of the medical and legal professions are limiting severely the numbers who can enroll for professional training. I think teacher training colleges should also cut down enrollment, for there is not enough work for more teachers.

What are our educated young people doing? A certain percentage drive a taxi, work in a restaurant, even work in a summer resort for two or three months. They take humble work, although they may have their Bachelor's degree, or their Master's. What happens to the well educated youngsters whose summer job ends after two and a half months and who must look for another job? Unemployment insurance will give them scant help in the period they are looking for another job, and we should thank this bill for that. Is it any wonder these people say, "Look, I spent X thousands of dollars educating myself; my parents helped me with several hundred dollars, and the taxpayers of this country paid for approximately 80 per cent of my education costs after I left grade 13; yet here I am, expected to wait on tables, drive a taxi, wash dishes in a restaurant, or work in a textile industry which pays close to minimum wages." Is it any wonder our young people say, "The hell with you; if that's how it is, we will not work at all."

Keep in mind that many of our young adults were told in their early or mid-teens to stay at school because more education would lead to a more abundant, or more materialistic life.

Actually our problems are outside the scope of this bill. They go to the root of our society. We placed too much emphasis on academic training, too much emphasis on materialism. We sowed the wind. Now we reap the whirlwind. There are no jobs for our highly educated young people.

What has happened to that other group which trained in a vocational or industrial school? Where are they today? Did their industrial high school give them an apprenticeship? Did they learn a skill or trade? Did they become electricians, plumbers, pipefitters, and so on? No. They are facing the same problems. They are a little further down the social scale in the eyes of some people in this country. I refer to those who have never had to go to an unemployment insurance office and be told by some snippy 18 or 19 year old gal "I don't know nothing about nothing". Believe me, that is the language some of them use.

● (2100)

These people are in the category of looking for work that is related to what they did at school. However, what they accomplished at school is something entirely different. I have more respect for a good plumber than a poor physician.

I notice that the public relations people in the Unemployment Insurance Commission have turned it around and are now calling it the employment commission. I hope they will place greater emphasis and exert greater pressure on provincial governments to re-establish apprenticeship programs. At the same time they should convince Industry, Trade and Commerce, Finance and other federal departments and their provincial counterparts to create more jobs for gifted people who work with their hands as well as their brains.

As I said earlier, there are too many highly educated people in this country who are unable to find work. Let us bring respect back to the work place, the factory, shop or mill. However, in order to do that we must create jobs that pay reasonable wages.

In May of every year, the planting season in my constituency, I receive complaints from 6 to 8 per cent of the tobacco farming community, and about the same percentage from the fruit and vegetable growers. Almost every time I check into the details I find there are two reasons why they cannot get local help and prefer offshore help from the Caribbean. Either the wage is too low, or the working and living conditions are very poor.

The vast majority of tobacco farmers and fruit and vegetable growers do not have labour problems. However, according to newspaper reports, telephone conversations, commentaries over radio and television, and some members of this House, our lazy youth will not work in the tobacco fields. I wonder how many members sitting here this evening would go out to pick tobacco for $3 an hour. This reminds me of what has been done in the past in the Soviet Union and in China. As my colleagues know, although my Conservative friends may not be aware, I am anything but a Communist.

It might be interesting if cabinet ministers and civil servants had to spend one month a year picking potatoes or tobacco. That might be interesting for those who drew up this Bill C-27, some of which is garbage. If they were laid off for six months and had to line up at the unemployment insurance offices and get some of the abuse that the claimants get, they might come back and rewrite this bill, or at least certain clauses of it, particularly the one dealing with the qualifying period.

In replying to remarks made by hon. members the other day, the minister referred to me, the member for Brant, as a faint ray of hope in the NDP. I took that as quite a compliment until I read his remarks in detail. He seemed to be under the impression that I agree with these variances that are built into the qualifying period. Nothing could be further from the truth.

I cannot quote verbatim, it is in Hansard, but what I said was that no statute is carved in granite and that it can be adjusted and amended. I stated that if in two or three years time we have greater employment or much less unemployment, we could perhaps take a look at this eight week qualifying period. The minister seemed to confuse my statement. It is very clear in Hansard what I said, but he seemed to think that it was an agreement that we should have this variance. As I said, nothing could be further from the truth.

We have some very serious problems in this country with regard to employment and unemployment. I have talked about the problems facing young people. I neglected to mention the problems we had with retraining. Although the retraining program was originally conceived with the best of intentions, it was not only very costly but a dismal flop.

Once someone gets into the program, what does he learn? Even if you are a conscientious person in your twenties or thirties, and getting $50 a week, as well as unemployment insurance and so on, and have a barely liveable wage of around $100 or $125 a week, what are you learning? Welding. We have more welders in this country than we know what to do with.

Mr. Rodriguez: Hairdressers.

Mr. Blackburn: I have never been to a hairdresser so I do not know. My wife cuts my hair. That is why it looks the way it does.

Mr. Rodriguez: That is a good way to save money.

Mr. Blackburn: That is right. We in the NDP are very thrifty. The point is that we spend a lot of money retraining people, but after they are retrained, within a few weeks they are back on unemployment insurance because there are no jobs available for them.

I wonder whether retraining means anything in this country. I suspect that it is a slick way of getting people off the unemployment rolls. It makes the government look better from a statistical point of view.

There was another program that flopped. I am afraid that it may come back. I refer to on-the-job training. In some cases it was taken advantage of by the employees and also by the employers. The employers saw a wonderful way of getting a subsidy from the taxpayers for hiring people for a limited time at the lowest possible wages. Is it any wonder that bills like C-27 create an atmosphere of distrust, an atmosphere of bitterness, an atmosphere of class hatred, to use an old expression?

• (2110)

I fear that the feelings which were so prevalent in early twentieth century Europe are now beginning to permeate our society and that legislation from this House and from the government is to blame for a great deal of the growing mistrust and bitterness which are developing between various segments of our society. Unemployed in my constituency will have to wait for three and a half months in order to qualify. Most of the temporary work, certainly in Atlantic Canada, is of shorter duration than that; it is hard to get a job which lasts three and a half months; a person is lucky if it lasts for eight weeks.

I say this to the backbenchers opposite: your government is proposing a period of three and a half months in many areas of this country before workers are qualified for unemployment insurance benefit. Unemployment insurance is not welfare, but what happens is that legislation like this turns the Unemployment Insurance Commission into a welfare system.

An hon. Member: And you divide the people.

Mr. Blackburn: As to that subject, the other day in the debate on national unity we heard one of the worst speeches the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) has ever made.

An hon. Member: His annual speech.

Mr. Blackburn: I was interested in the headlines he got in the Globe and Mail—not on the front pages but on the editorial page. I do not recall the exact words, but they were something like this—"Prime Minister Makes Speech in House". That is news. I think it is the second speech he has made here in a year. The country has become more and more divided ever since he came to office because of, among other things, bills like C-27 which divide the country in social and economic terms. The Prime Minister's answer is bilingualism for the whole country—we should all speak French and we would become happy people. Mr. Speaker, my wife is a Francophone. I try to speak a little French; it is my fault we do not speak French more often. I am lazy in that respect. But we still get along.

An hon. Member: I hope so.

Mr. Blackburn: We get along, and one of the reasons is that we understand each other. And as Canadians we can understand each other provided we have a reasonable standard of living, a reasonable outlook on life, a reasonable prospect for the future. I am simply suggesting that if we can translate my personal relationship with my wife to the whole country—and I do not want anyone to misunderstand me—we would find that English speaking and French speaking people can get along together without having to speak both official languages.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order. I am not interrupting the hon. member to tell him that his time has expired, but I do wish to suggest that he should keep his remarks within the scope of the bill or the amendment.

Mr. Blackburn: I respect your mild admonition, Mr. Speaker. The point I am trying to make is that this bill, which would drastically change the Unemployment Insurance Act in many respects, is a divisive piece of legislation which is injuring the working people. I have in mind specifically Clauses 29 and 30 and the amendment moved by my hon. friend from Timiskaming that it be given a six months hoist so that we could consider it again and bring in changes which would make it a more humane piece of legislation.

I do not know whether I was out of order earlier when I was talking about youthful applicants; I am sure I was directing my remarks toward the qualifying period and the attitude taken toward the Unemployment Insurance Commission. I see no reason why this would be irrelevant to the bill or to the way in which some unemployment insurance offices are run. My hon. friend from Timiskaming mentioned earlier today that it seems as though the worst qualified persons in the office were placed on the firing line—the ones who do not know the act, and that all the frustration builds up from that point. It is true most of the complaints we receive come from people who are experiencing trouble; we do not get complaints from people who receive their cheques on time. But sending out or receiving cheques is not the solution. The solution is employment, but there is nothing which is likely to improve employment prospects.

The marriage between the Unemployment Insurance Commission and Canada Manpower—what a fantastic leap forward into the 19th Century—

Mr. Rodriguez: Forward into the past!

Mr. Blackburn: Yes. "Forward into the past", as my hon. friend says. If one talks to the average person employed by Canada Manpower today, he or she will say that this anticipated coming together of the two services is likely to make a mish-mash of the whole thing. As a matter of fact the departments have been brought together, in practice, for several years. Certain pilot projects have been going on at at various places across the country for about a year and I should like to ask anyone on the other side whether this arrangement has resulted in a more efficient system or in more job placements. My information is that it has not. All it has done is to meld two bureaucracies into one. Instead of having to call surreptitiously from one office to another and say "John X is dogging it, cut him off UIC", he can be denied benefit more directly on the grounds that he is not looking for work when no work is available.

● (2120)

Bill C-27, along with the other bill I have referred to but which we are not discussing tonight, will place a tremendous burden on the social service agencies of this country. At the present time, if a person has to go from unemployment insurance to welfare, this is again one rung down the socially acceptable ladder of our society. The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away. The federal government is going to deny the unemployed benefits by increasing the qualifying period, and those cut off UI benefits, approximately 226,000, will be unable to find work. We are facing a fall and winter in which the experts tell us unemployment will become worse, not better, so where are these people going to go? A few of the young will probably be caught breaking and entering and be sent to correctional institutions, but the vast majority are law abiding and will end up on welfare.

Who provides the funds to pay for welfare, Mr. Speaker? Fifty per cent comes from the federal government, 30 per cent from the provincial government, and 20 per cent from the municipalities. So here we are, caught in this vicious circle. On the one hand, the Unemployment Insurance Commission, or the employment commission, or whatever they call it now, think that they will save the taxpayers money by cutting people off unemployment insurance; on the other hand the federal government, through transfer payments of one kind or another, will have to provide more funds for welfare. So how much further are we ahead?

This brings me back to my first point, which is simply that we can pass any piece of legislation we want in this House to help someone who is unemployed, but unless we create employment and stimulate the economy, what is the use? Why not let them line up again in the bread lines? In fact I am convinced that this government would finally get off its butt and act on unemployment if unemployment insurance were done away with and we had walks on Ottawa, and violence in the streets—which I am not advocating. If we got back to the thirties, in other words. But as long as Liberal philosophy prevails and we allow just enough money for this and just enough money for that so as to keep people from getting angry, the government thinks this palliative will save it.

The Prime Minister will then come along and tell us that the only problem with national unity is that we should be friendly with French speaking Canadians and French speaking Canadians should be friendly with English speaking Canadians. This will not happen through Bill C-27; it will only happen by providing jobs for Quebecers young and old, indeed for people right across the country, who will then find a common bond. Unless this is done, the anger of the people will continue to rise, not because Quebecers hate Anglophones or because Anglophones hate Francophones, but because of the regional disparity and poverty which exist in this country.

This bill should be delayed for six months, Mr. Speaker. It should be reviewed; it should be rewritten in part. That is why I have spoken tonight.

[Translation]

Mr. Gilbert Rondeau (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, like the NDPs and the Socreds who spoke before me, I would like to tell the government to-night that I agree this bill should be postponed for six months, and this for several reasons.

First, it seems to me that Bill C-27 emphasizes the failure of the government to create jobs. When we consider the unemployment rate, the economic situation and Bill C-27 we can only conclude that the government has no solution to the problem of job creation in Canada, except tampering with the Unemployment Insurance Act, I would say. Bill C-27 is the admission of the government's bankruptcy. It means poverty and is officially accepted in some areas. I have been sitting in the House since 1962 and I have heard about regional disparities ever since. They said it was a shame that in that area there prevailed an unemployment rate which was higher than in other areas, And that the government was doing its best to solve the issue of regional disparities, while that same government filled our ears with their propaganda that one of the first priorities in their social policy was to stamp out regional disparities, Bill C-27 officially enshrines regional disparities by stating for example that in some area eight unemployment stamps will be needed before benefits can be collected, that in some other area, because of regional disparities that were supposed to be stamped out, but the government was incapable of stamping out, there must be twice the number of stamps or, 15 stamps, or 11 contributions before benefits can be paid out.

● (2130)

If during all those years the government have been repeating, and leading us or the Canadian people to believe it could solve the problem of manpower or employment in Canada on the one hand and regional disparities on the other, it seems to me that with six extra months before the legislation is passed, it might implement what it promised and has been incapable of doing since 1962 at least. Mr. Speaker, what struck me in one of the first clauses of the bill is the shared cost provision, or work sharing. Mr. Speaker, let us look now for instance at the fiscal policy as it applies to companies or small businesses, and especially small businesses. It must be recognized that in Canada, small and medium businesses do not partake in the fiscal policy which applies to big multinational corporations or monopolies. Once they have paid their taxes companies are smothered as we can see in my area, in the Quebec city district and elsewhere. It is the case of companies with 300, 400 or 500 employees such as Thor Mills in Granby, Acton Shoe in Acton Vale, as practically in the whole shoe industry in Canada, especially in Quebec, because, 60 percent of the shoes we wear and buy in Canada are imported.

For a number of years we have been promised in the House reforms in textiles as well as in shoe and in furniture industries. One is inclined to think that we have to wait until all our factories are closed for the government finally to realize the situation and to start sympathizing with those industries which built our country, especially the shoe industry, the oldest industry in Quebec, which is now on the brink of bankruptcy. What is the reason for that? This is due to the volume of imports and to a number of economic considerations which result from the administration of the Federal government: taxation, importation, unemployment rate, salary levels. Furthermore, the Federal government has become the major competitor of private enterprise in Canada, with the Unemployment Insurance Act, in collusion with the provincial governments and Social welfare.

Mr. Speaker, having smothered many companies as we realize now, Bill C-27 is going to entrust the civil servants from the Unemployment Insurance Commission and from Canadian Manpower Centres with the administration sooner or later of the labour force working for companies with that new concept of work sharing. To start off, this policy will be presented to us as a very progressive social policy, a very understanding policy, well within the reach of employers.

Mr. Speaker, we know very well that before long, not years but months, the civil servants will act as masters with the employers who will want to get contracts with Manpower and to benefit from the so-called work-sharing legislation.

[Mr. Rondeau.]

We are going to put employers at the service of the federal government. We are going to make them dependent upon the federal government, just as we have made employees, over the years, dependent so to speak upon the Unemployment Insurance Commission. We have realized over the years that unemployment insurance and social welfare have caused workers to loose their incentive for work and their initiative. I shall explain later. After a few years, we shall realize that business people too have lost their initiative as a result of a greater involvement of the government in the operation of their companies and with their employees, to the point that they may feel that the government is in charge. As a matter of fact, we already have indications of that in Quebec.

Certain people in Quebec are complaining that some companies are about to close their doors. Why? Because business has somewhat lost confidence in the provincial administration. Business people are afraid of it. Why?

Because when we have been through experiences like St. Jerome, employers come and tell them: "Why invest more and more if tomorrow the Quebec government is going to interfere with our business?" That is why many employers in Quebec are wondering what the future of their industry will be and stop investing, roll back and wait until the government offers to buy their business.

I personally know of 4 businessmen who reduced their staff and the number of jobs in their plant because they had lost confidence in the government regarding private initiative. Now, they want to get back the capital they have invested in their business, and the best way to do it is to tell the government: "We are no longer interested in producing, we are no longer interested in contributing to the economy of Quebec or Canada." Well, they are waiting for offers, and the government of Quebec, with its ever increasing unemployment rate, has to bow down to those businessmen and grant them tax deductions or any other deductions to keep them in the province. Mr. Speaker, this bill on unemployment is going to produce exactly the same economic attitude in Quebec as in the rest of Canada, and before long the employers will also become wards of the federal government. The majority of the unemployed, contrary to what is commonly said, because some claim that the unemployed are lazy—

Mr. Boulanger: Who said that?

Mr. Rondeau: Prosper, first of all. I have often heard government members say in the House that the unemployed are lazy. Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Boulanger: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please!

Mr. Rondeau: I should like to point out that the microphone of the hon. member for Mercier (Mr. Boulanger) does not work because he never uses it.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please. The hon. member for Mercier on a point of order.

Mr. Rondeau: I thank you, Mr. Speaker, for giving me the floor.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please!

Mr. Rondeau: I thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please. Is the hon. member for Mercier rising on a point of order?

Mr. Boulanger: Indeed, Mr. Speaker, you heard like me the hon. member who has the floor make a statement which is misleading, shocking, and even worse. First, I never said in the House that the unemployed were lazy; that is a lie, and I ask the hon. member to withdraw.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order please. That is a point of debate and not a point of order.

Mr. Rondeau: Mr. Speaker, thank you so much. How can I withdraw when I just accused the hon. member for Mercier (Mr. Boulanger) of being lazy. His microphone proves it, because it is rusty. The hon. member never speaks in the House. Mr. Speaker, then if you do not want your microphone to get rusty, you have to use it. Mr. Speaker, the jobless are often accused of being lazy. If they became so, it is because they are fed up with the present system, since the worker is penalized, and everybody knows it.

● (2140)

We reward people who insist on living off governments through all the measures we know of in this House, and it is easy, Mr. Speaker, to live off governments, it is very easy. One only has to own nothing, have nothing in one's name and in order to do that, to own nothing, Mr. Speaker, one only has to spend everything, waste and act accordingly. I know unemployed people who are being called lazy, and yet those unemployed people are always working. I know employers, Mr. Speaker, who are having difficulty finding employees when we have thousands of people unemployed in Quebec and the rest of Canada and at the same time those people who are being called lazy worked seven or eight months a year at high salaries, take back part of their taxes, draw unemployment insurance and above all, Mr. Speaker, find a way to get a job that will earn them money on the side.

The government looks at the statistics and finds consolation in the percentage—the government thinks in terms of percentages, makes sweeping statements, our ministers in this House make sweeping statements on percentages, they do not think that behind those percentages are human beings, heads of families, people who have bills to pay, houses to pay for, doctor's bills to pay, feed and clothe and educate their children, no, they think in terms of percentages and find consolation in them. Yet, I remember quite well when in 1962 I was elected to this House for the first time we criticized the Progressive Conservative government because, as I recall, the Progressive Conservative government of 1962 was the government that had given us the best unemployment record in Canada.

Mr. La Salle: And now it is worse!

Mr. Rondeau: But now I must agree with the hon. member for Joliette (Mr. La Salle) that the Liberals are twice as good as the Progressive Conservatives in terms of unemployment percentages in Canada.

An hon. Member: It is terrible.

Mr. Rondeau: Now we can no longer say that the Progressive Conservatives are the best organizers of unemployment. Mr. Speaker, I do not believe those charges that our unemployed are lazy because I know full well that tomorrow morning, that the day when we will have a social policy to find employment in Canada, that those unemployed who are accused of being lazy today will become first rate workers. I would like to make a distinction with the wrong attitude, the wrong principles of the economists of our friends opposite who preach full employment at the same time as science, technology and modernism. Mr. Speaker, when I hear those pseudo-intellectuals claiming that we could have a full employment policy in this country and those economists who are heading the departments of our honourable friends on the other side and who want, at the same time, press for the development of technology, progress and science, I wonder. I do not believe in full employment! I believe in progress, in science, in technology, in technique, automation and cybernetics. I believe in the kind of modernity we have in 1977. I still believe in the kind of modernity we will have in year 2000. But in 1977 we can no longer combine progress, technology, inventions and modernity with full employment.

One day, our friends on the other side will probably have to kick out all those economists who have led them into an economic utopia that makes them believe in two contradictory things at the same time. For while in our universities we are training intellectuals, skilled technicians and engineers, people who will enter our industries tomorrow and are going to lay off 300 workers while doubling the production of this industry, how could we have a full employment policy in Canada when overnight our engineers will be able to double our national production although they will reduce workers by half.

That is economically impossible, utopic, and foolish. The Social Crediters have always advocated in lieu of insured employment a guaranteed annual income not related to employment, but independent of employment. That leads me to the social considerations in our existing legislation. Here is how our governments consider social security now: if an individual has only one arm, he is entitled to the benefit of such social legislation; if he has only one eye, he is entitled to the benefit of some other regulation; if both legs, are missing, he is entitled to the benefit of another regulation; if he is a victim of an occupational injury, he is entitled to the benefit of some other regulations, of some other legislation—

Mr. Boulanger: What happens when he has no head?

Mr. Rondeau: Someone who is headless like the hon. member for Mercier becomes a Liberal member. Mr. Speaker, instead of considering the matter of security all by itself, the matter of individual security, governments set up files and nothing happens. They set up files where someone for instance who is living off his parents will get less from social assistance than if he would live off society purely and simply. As for the handicapped resulting from an occupational injury, he is considered differently than the one whose handicap is not related to an occupational injury. So we have all kinds of schemes, so-called social legislation. The formula we put forward is that we consider social security according to the individual, not on the basis of two or three missing limbs, or a sort of physical disability. That is why our social security in Canada today is a real mess and sheer confusion. Our current unemployment insurance legislation, particularly Bill C-27, is a perfect picture of that confusion, a perfect Tower of Babel we are creating for unemployed Canadians when a guaranteed annual income would neatly solve that issue.

Mr. Speaker, a guaranteed annual income is too simple, not complex enough for our civil servants, because we will not need those gentlemen anymore to blame the needy people. They say to others how to organize their life. A guaranteed annual income would reduce the number of civil servants to the same level as those who get unemployment insurance or welfare benefits. Last week, in the Journal de Montréal, we could read that 40 per cent of Canadians today derive their income from various governments.

Mr. Speaker, there are more people living off the governments than there are people working and paying taxes in 1977. In fact, if 60 per cent of the population is not living off the governments, the number of people working in Canada is lower than the number living off the governments. It is not surprizing that many people have now lost the desire to work. They could not care less about the initiative that they had when they still believed in working to earn a living.

Mr. Speaker, we have come to a point in our society where someone who shows a taste for work and initiative and who wants to develop his country is nearly considered a mental case, an idiot, someone who does not have both feet on the ground. He is still 50 years behind everyone else because he believes he must work to earn a living. Have you ever seen such an idiot? This small group of idiots who still believe that they must work to earn a living, Mr. Speaker, is disgusted by all the socialistic approaches of the Liberal government.

Some hon. Members: That is right. That is right.

Mr. Rondeau: My friends of the New Democratic Party agree with us when we talk about social legislation; when we talk against the socialistic tendency—

An hon. Member: What is the difference?

Mr. Rondeau: True, Mr. Speaker, the Social Crediters are for social legislation, but they are not socialists.

An hon. Member: Thank goodness for that difference!

Mr. Rondeau: Our friends want to know what the difference is? To be for social legislation, Mr. Speaker, is to think of each individual as an individual, not according to what the government would like him to be, but according to his own needs. Mr. Speaker, the Social Crediters are for social legislation. Why? Because we want the individual to keep his initiative, we want him to keep his own money, we want him to keep the desire to become—and some will call this scandalous—to become rich if he wants to and if he can. But with our governments today, an individual cannot grow rich because he knows there is too much censorship, too many pickpockets and too many public servants. Mr. Speaker, with such a budget in Canada, with so many Crown corporations, we are going to take more than $10 billion in 1977-78 from Canadian taxpayers to maintain our bureaucracy. I believe it is time to do some clean-up work, to watch those who are still thinking in terms of initiative, in terms of work, who are still foolish enough, like me, to believe one must work to live, rather than giving in the 1977 way of thinking, whereby those who want to work for a living are stupid, because nowadays it is more interesting, more useful and more intelligent than wasting it all, spending it all before reaching 65, because if you have some income when you reach 65, the federal government will cut off your pension. If you have some income when you reach 65, the provincial government will cut off another bit of it.

If a widow who has just lost her husband has a property which yields some $1,000., they will cut off even more. At present, someone who had the foresight and judgment to buy a life insurance policy when he was still young in order to provide some security for his family, when he reaches the age of 60 or the retirement age, the federal government with its new legislation wants to "cut it off" even before his death. If he has anything left at the time of his death, succession duties will eat up the balance.

Mr. Speaker, with this kind of socialistic mentality in our present Canadian laws, we can only have people who are unfortunately disillusioned with work, who have lost the drive for profits, the desire to bring prosperity to their country, the drive to become a rich man or even capitalists. Unfortunately, in our present system it is just impossible. This is why, Mr. Speaker, on tactical grounds, because I agree with our friends the New Democrats and for other purposes and other reasons, I suggest that this government, if it really has solutions to offer for the problems of regional disparities, surely knows how to conceal them! Actually, it does not have any. We do not need a law to officially and openly sanction regional disparities in this country. If they have ideas or bills or solutions that can help solve the unemployment problem in Canada, my goodness, before amending the present law on unemployment insurance, they should present them to the House. When the problem of any unemployed worker is solved for some 10 to 15 weeks, we have not yet solved his occupational problem for the remainder of his life, Mr. Speaker. It would seem that the only policy the Liberals are capable of devising is just to think about the unemployed and about ways of generating them by the thousands, of making them into welfare recipients by the thousands and turning them into hordes of government dependents, Mr. Speaker.

● (2150)

Mr. Stuart Leggatt (New Westminster): Mr. Speaker, the thinking of the hon. member for Shefford (Mr. Rondeau) is very difficult to follow. He speaks better than he sings, and he sings quite well.

I agree with the hon. member for Shefford—

[English]

—he does not know Karl Marx from Groucho Marx.

[Translation]

Mr. Rondeau: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): The hon. member for Shefford raises a point of order.

Mr. Rondeau: Mr. Speaker, I should like to make a correction to today's official report and tell hon. members of this House that the more I study Karl Marx, and I have all his books in my library, the more I tend to move away from his ideology.

[English]

Mr. Leggatt: The hon. member has obviously moved to another planet.

I rise basically to talk about the madness in this bill. There was a time when we looked at this, and someone suggested that we could regionalize the country into provinces. As I remember, it was a Tory motion at one point in this House which suggested that we could change the period of entitlement in a variety of regions based upon provincial boundaries. The only thing more stupid I could imagine could be to separate the country into 54 separate regions. We are now going to divide the country into 54 little districts.

Mr. Peters: Call it seats in the Senate.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): That is more than the number of states in the United States.

Mr. Leggatt: Nova Scotia has a 13.2 per cent unemployment rate. This bill would give the poor person in Nova Scotia who cannot find a job 42 weeks of benefits if he can put in 10 weeks of work. In the lower mainland of British Columbia where there is an 8.5 per cent rate, 10 weeks of work will give an individual nothing in terms of unemployment insurance benefits. It is just as tough to be poor in Vancouver as it is in Cape Breton, and the hon. member for Cape Breton-East Richmond (Mr. Hogan) would be the first to agree with that.

May I call it ten o'clock, Mr. Speaker?

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 40 deemed to have been moved.

Adjournment Debate

URBAN AFFAIRS—ALLEGATION GOVERNMENT OWES TAXES TO MUNICIPALITY OF OTTAWA-CARLETON—GOVERNMENT ACTION

Mrs. Jean E. Pigott (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, since Confederation, Ottawa, as the capital of Canada, has been a focal point for the dreams of this country. Today the national capital region faces many problems and is being viewed by the rest of the country not as a symbol of the dreams of Canada but as a reflection of our insensitive and uncaring government.

There have been significant changes in the national capital region in recent years. Until the 1960's the federal government was virtually unopposed in the planning process in the capital area. With the growth of regional government in Ontario and Quebec in the 1970's, the federal government's massive relocation to Hull, and the growth of the city of Ottawa and the suburban townships, has come the need for a fresh approach by the government to the national capital region.

Unilateral planning in isolation is no longer appropriate for the senior government in the capital of Canada. Action taken by the federal government without discussions with provincial and municipal governments must be replaced by consultation among the planning partners.

Recently a special joint committee on the national capital region met to hear testimony about the structure and the future of our area. There is a strong need for co-ordinated planning in this area and for a forum where problems and goals can be discussed. I believe that the special joint committee should be reconstituted as a standing committee of the House of Commons with responsibility for planning and developing the national capital region. This standing committee should also be responsible for the operation of the National Capital Commission and help co-ordinate the affairs of government departments which operate in splended isolation in this city: Public Works, Urban Affairs, and the Department of Agriculture, to name just three.

● (2200)

Since three levels of government now operate in the capital area, as well as jurisdictions that cross provincial boundaries, the time has come to remove planning from an appointed body such as the NCC and return it to parliament and the people of Canada through a committee of the House of Commons. Another aspect of concern because of the NCC presence in the capital is the "revolving door" or musical chairs situation which we have seen in NCC senior management. There is a great need for more continuity than is available through this non-elected body. We should not have five chairmen and five general managers in the space of ten years, nor a board of directors that does not have any local input or local officials on it. This shows a lack of concern or care.

Planning in the national capital region should never lose sight of the fact that the communities on both sides of the Ottawa River have goals and needs both as part of the national capital and as cities in their own right. The federal government should no longer enact moves which lessen the right of municipalities to govern themselves.

One example of the need for a reformed method of governing and planning in the national capital region is the situation now caused by grants in lieu of taxes; this is a very real problem for Ottawa and a potential problem for Hull. It has been argued that Ottawa should not protest the fact that government grants are lower than business taxes because of such facilities as the National Arts Centre which, it is implied, would not exist if the federal government did not take a leading role in the national capital region. Does a statement of this sort explain to a resident of Gloucester why his property taxes are $990 this year while a citizen of Toronto pays $597? The $18 million in non-paid taxes facing Ottawa this year would purchase a great many tickets at the National Arts Centre—which was supposed to be a centennial gift to the nation.

It was in the early 1950's that a fire in the Library of Parliament prompted the government to give its first grants in lieu of taxes to the city of Ottawa in order to improve the water supply in the event of another fire. Do non-paid taxes have to bring the national capital region down in flames before the government considers this a "burning issue?"

The recently announced move of 15,000 public servants to Hull will leave four million square feet of office space vacant in Ottawa. Four million square feet of office space is almost 160 acres; it would take 100 small factories to cover four million square feet. As more and more office space in the national capital region becomes the responsibility of the private sector, officials must deal with the fact that businesses are reluctant to locate in an area where taxes are so much higher than the rest of the country. Non-paid taxes play a major role in causing these high charges, and reluctance of the NCC to have realistic ideas about iand leasing or sale of industrial land to prospective buyers causes a serious problem. Notice of this move was given in advance, but the accelerated growth of the Public Service and of government offices in Ottawa disguised the magnitude of government statements.

Relocation, coming as it does with a decrease in Public Service growth, could turn Ottawa into a "ghost town." I find the callous attitude of the Minister of Public Works (Mr. Buchanan) and the Minister of State for Urban Affairs (Mr. Ouellet) hard to understand. If they had to face 160 empty acres in their cities or constituencies would they not have emergency meetings and call for help? Even DREE would be involved if this happened in their constituencies.

There is no question that Ottawa and area business people must take an initiative to attract firms to fill up the four million square feet of office space vacated by the federal government in downtown Ottawa. In fact meetings are taking place in an effort to promote a stronger business life for the capital. A study was commissioned and plans formulated to build a convention centre for Ottawa.

However, in spite of the fact that Ottawa is the fourth largest metropolitan area in Canada and the second largest in Ontario, 40 per cent of the land in our area is controlled by a non-elected body, the National Capital Commission. With a presence of that magnitude in Ottawa, the federal government can deny neither the effect of its actions on the community nor its responsibility to take an active role in finding solutions. It is interesting there is no one to champion the city in the cabinet. Can you imagine any other large metropolitan area without someone caring?

What action could be taken in this regard? In the immediate future the demolition of temporary buildings could be accelerated giving more work to the construction industry at a critical time, and moving workers from these buildings into vacated space could alleviate some of the burden of empty office space. Secondly, space not needed immediately at Place du Portage could be mothballed for a period of time until Ottawa had time to adjust.

There are many problems which come under the umbrella of the National Capital Commission and they need the attention of this government if Ottawa is to be really national. There is the on-again off-again Rideau Centre; satellite cities and land appraisal at Carlsbad Springs; a convention centre to support the tourist industry; decentralization plans that should be clearly defined and a timetable established; rapid transit assistance should be provided in light of the energy crisis and, of course, grants in lieu of taxes. There is a great need for equity of treatment for the people of the national capital region. Mr. Speaker, the capital of Canada does not deserve an absentee landlord.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please.

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of State for Urban Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the hon. member for Ottawa-Carleton (Mrs. Pigott) talked about an uncaring government. Over the years governments have been careful in approaching the question of grants in lieu of taxes. Obviously the government cares.

The statistical figures in my hand show that in 1950 grants to the city of Ottawa in lieu of taxes on departmental properties amounted to $762,392. That figure has risen over the years, and in 1977 it reached the level of $26,428,000. The figures do not suggest the government is uncaring, and I do not accept the suggestion that the Conservative government of the late 1950's was uncaring. We operate under a national program. The federal program of grants in lieu of taxes is a national program which will require the expenditure of an estimated $111.5 million during the 1977-78 fiscal year. That program applies to all federal buildings across the country, to all areas where there are federal buildings, such as post offices. In all those cases the act applies.

Mr. Paproski: What about Ottawa-Vanier?

Mr. Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): We have only a few federal buildings in Ottawa-Vanier.

The alleged grant shortfall claimed by the city of Ottawa relates primarily to the non-payment of business taxes and certain Crown-owned properties on which no grants are paid. While it is true that some properties are excluded from grants by statute they consist, for the most part, of cultural properties and park lands. These properties are of great benefit to the citizens of Ottawa and in many instances fill a need that the city might otherwise be called upon to meet. However, since the main thrust of the question raised by the hon. member for Ottawa-Carleton concerns business tax, I will address myself to that question.

Business tax is not a type of tax in lieu of which grants are authorized by the Municipal Grants Act. The payment of business taxes on federal departmental property would not only require legislative authority, but also the implicit or explicit assumption that the operation of a government is a "business." This would be very difficult to justify since departmental properties are primarily service-oriented and are not used for the purpose of deriving a gain or profit. However, most federal Crown corporations which do operate with a view to generating revenues sufficient to cover costs or make a profit currently do make their own grant payments in lieu of business taxes.

I am talking about CMHC, for example, for whose buildings my minister's department is responsible.

Mrs. Pigott: What about the buildings on Wellington Street?

Mr. Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): The general rationale underlying the imposition of the municipal business tax is that those who operate a business venture, with the expectation of a gain or profit by virtue of such operation, benefit from the local services, amenities, labour force, transportation facilities and purchasing power inherent in the municipality and should pay an amount over and above real property taxes for the privilege of being provided with many of the elements necessary for turning a profit.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please. I am sorry to interrupt the hon. member but his allotted time has expired.

CONSUMER AFFAIRS—POSSIBILITY OF PROHIBITING USE OF ASBESTOS FIBRES IN PREPARATION OF FOOD AND BEVERAGES

Hon. Stanley Haidasz (Parkdale): Mr. Speaker, it is obvious to the distinguished members of this august assembly that we are living in a period of environmental disease. Increasing urbanization and industrialization, especially expending technology, have altered our environment to such an extent that humans, animals, and plants are being exposed to an ever-growing number of harmful pollutants.

Recently a medical scientist at the National Cancer Institute stated that cancer in the last quarter of this century can be considered as a disease whose cause and control are rooted in the technology of our society. A biochemist at McMaster University was quoted in a recent newspaper article as saying that environmental effects cause up to 90 per cent of cancers and that current efforts are directed to a cure, rather than elimination of causes. In view of these remarks and mounting evidence of new toxic substances poisoning the environment, a comprehensive investigation of environmental pollutants should be undertaken by our government in co-operation with university and industrial scientists without further delay.

The eradication of present harmful pollutants as well as the prevention of toxic substances in the future will not only contribute to the improvement of health but also reduce the cost of hospital and medical programs, in addition to saving many man-years in our industries.

The fight against environmental pollutants has been recently intensified in Canada by the establishment of a Department of the Environment as well as the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. The work done by these two federal departments is assisted by the Department of National Health and Welfare to protect people better and the environment against harmful substances. But there is still room for improvement.

● (2210)

This evening I wish to elaborate on the question I drected to the minister on June 29, in effect inquiring whether any steps have been taken to prohibit the use of asbestos in food, beverage and pharmaceutical production in Canada. It is now 50 years since it was first observed that inhalation of asbestos dust was a health hazard. During the past five decades much scientific information has accumulated to prove that asbestos causes a chronic and disabling lung disease called asbestosis, and worse, a lung and abdominal cancer called mesothelioma. Asbestos-associated diseases and deaths are increasing because of the inadequate control of the use of that mineral.

Asbestos is not one mineral, but about 30 hydrous silicates which share the characteristic of a fibrous texture and the ability to split up into minute fibres. It is the serpentine asbestos mineral, called, chrysotile, that accounts for 95 per cent of the world's asbestos consumption, and is the main variety mined and used in Canada. Canada produced 40 to 50 per cent of the world's asbestos of which 95 per cent is exported, leaving 80,000 tons per year for process in Canada.

Asbestos is used widely in the manufacture of approximately 3,000 products. The largest use is in asbestos cement products.

The second largest use is for floor tiles, followed by use in pipe coverings, paints, insulation, automobile brake-linings, clutch facings, and gaskets. Asbestos is also used as a filter medium in food, beverage and pharmaceutical industries, and also in the textiles industry to increase fire resistance of fabrics.

There is now a growing concern about the total amount of asbestos fibres reaching people through many different environmental pathways and from the thousands of products containing asbestos. The large number of products containing asbestos means that it exists in every home, factory and vehicle. Asbestos is found in our water, and also in some food, drug and beverage products both made in Canada and imported from many countries. This mineral has been found in talc products, even in some baby powders.

In view of the extent of the presence of asbestos in our environment, and especially the serious health hazard of asbestos fibres, it is urgent to tighten the mining and industrial standards controlling this mineral. We must prevents as much as possible environmental contamination by asbestos, and completely prohibit the use of asbestos in the production of all food, beverage and pharmaceutical products. Steps should also be taken to stop the importation of foods, beverages, and drugs that contain asbestos fibres.

I wish to draw to Your Honour's attention a June 1977 "Canadian Consumer" article entitled "Test—Asbestos in Wine", identifying Canadian and imported wines that contained dangerous levels of asbestos fibres, and calling for the use of final membrane filters ensuring removal of any fibres from environmental sources.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please.

Mr. Paul E. McRae (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, our health protection branch is one of the best in the world. Lately we have been severely criticized for going overboard with regard to saccharin. After a couple of months the criticism died because it was found that other studies confirmed the findings we had reached. Therefore our health protection branch is to be trusted.

We looked at the CAC article. We are, of course, dealing with ingestion of chrysotile asbestos. It appears this article was based on some German studies, which in turn were based on some earlier studies done by the health protection branch itself, which studies were not conclusive—they were not extensive enough. The health protection branch has carried out further studies on a larger sample and has fairly well demonstrated that this type is not carcinogenic. We have been involved in a much larger study which is going on in the United States. It will be much more conclusive and, of course, if this study should find that this form of asbestos is carcinogenic we shall have to take appropriate steps and do so rapidly.

It should be noted that the chrysotile type of asbestos is an ubiquitous product; it is found in nature, it is found in water. It has been used effectively as a filter in the past, but a study done by the health protection branch in 1973 revealed that the soft drink industry, breweries, and the food industry in general have almost completely abandoned the use of asbestos fibres in filtration processes. We shall look carefully at the American study and should it prove that the chrysotile type of asbestos is a carcinogenic agent we shall take the necessary steps.

FINANCE—TAXING OF BENEFITS FROM LIFE INSURANCE POLICIES—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. F. A. Philbrook (Halton): Mr. Speaker, the story goes that a cabinet Minister once said, "Now, gentlemen, I wish to tax your memory a bit". "Good Heavens", muttered a colleague, "why didn't we think of that before?" That is the impression many people have of government, that now, it will tax anything, that with the proposed life insurance tax it will go as far as reaching even into the grave for tax money.

Last Monday during the question period I asked the Minister of Finance (Mr. Macdonald) whether any significant measures were being taken to allay the concern of many life insurance policy holders, as well as those of the life insurance underwriters, with respect to the proposed tax on life insurance benefits contained in the March 31 budget.

[Mr. Haidasz.]

My purpose in bringing the matter to the attention of the minister was to convey to him, as the elected representative for Halton, the very real concern which exists among many of my constituents that this tax is unfair and unjust. I dare say, Mr. Speaker, that in view of the seriousness with which this issue is regarded in my riding, the minister's response was regarded as being quite unsatisfactory. I would like to take this opportunity, therefore, to spell out in greater detail the problems which this tax would present to life insurance policyholders, in the hope that this will give the parliamentary secretary a chance to offer a more complete response.

In brief outline, there are four main objections to the tax. First, the timing of the tax assessment is wrong. By levying the tax on death benefits, the government will be depriving people of money at a time when they already have so many other worries.

Second, disallowance of interest as a tax deduction on loans applied against one's insurance policy for purposes of producing income is wrong. A business loan is a business loan is a business loan, regardless of the circumstances of the transaction. If an individual can acquire a loan from his insurance company at cheaper rates than from other lending agencies, then so much the better. The loan should be accorded the same tax privilege as any other form of legitimate business borrowing.

Third, and similarly, the proposal to treat policy loans as policy "advances" and thereby tax the policy "gains" at the time of taking the loan is wrong. Such benefits derive from the advantage of purchasing an insurance policy in the first place. To levy a tax at the time the loan is needed becomes quite paradoxical.

Fourth, the rationale for applying the tax directly at the policyholder level is wrong. If it was assumed that assessing tax individually for each policy rather than applying a blanket 15 per cent on the insurers would reduce the cost to the policy holder, this ignores the fact that any proposed increase in corporation tax for the insurers will certainly negate the possibility of lower policy rates. As for anything else, would the company pass on any savings to the consumer?

In addition to those four points both the Carter taxation plan and the Benson white paper on taxation have rejected the concept of a death tax, as have almost all other countries in the world.

● (2220)

Let me give the House a few examples of correspondence that I have received, like most MP's recently. On the proposed policy gains tax at time of death, first:

> This is outrageous when one considers the purpose of life insurance and how it might have had to keep my family afloat if I had died—and when one considers that in the future it will be of supreme importance to my wife if I die first.

Second:

The proposal to tax policy gains at death is contrary to current legislative trends in Canada as well as the rest of the world . . . This concept was thoroughly discussed at the time of the Carter report and rejected.

Third:

Policy holders have paid premiums on whole life insurance in good faith since their policies were initiated, in the firm belief that the benefits would be honoured according to the contract. It seems inconceivable that politicians consider undermining life long investments by introducing legislation taxing such benefits . . . the concept is resented . . .

Fourth:

The tax at death suggestion would result in people being penalized for saving money through the purchase of permanent life insurance and would be an invitation to more people to rely on federal handouts in their old age.

On proposed disallowance of interest on policy loans as a tax deduction, first:

It has clearly been established that interest on policy loans used to invest in a business or income producing property are deductible. The legislation, in choosing to call a policy loan an "advance", ignores the fact that the policy loan meets the deductibility test.

Second:

. . . the interest on any loan I take on my life insurance where the purpose is to earn income should be deductible in the same way as any other interest which is incurred to earn income.

Third:

Curiously enough, by forcing people to borrow on their policies at the bank rather than directly from the insurance company, the proposal will end up foregoing more tax revenue because the bank rate of interest in generally higher than that applicable to a policy loan.

On the proposed tax on policy gain at the time of a policy loan, first:

It has been my personal experience that loans on my life insurance policies have been required at times of financial emergency, or, as recently, to take advantage of a business opportunity. It seems completely unreasonable to levy an income tax at a time—if I borrowed money on my home or on my investment portfolio there is no proposed tax.

Second:

. . . all the policies I have contain "loan clauses" and I have frequently borrowed, paid the interest, and repaid the loans. I emphasize that these are "loan clauses" and not policy advances and it is not right for the government to try to change this concept.

In conclusion, as these excerpts demonstrate, my constituents are well informed on this complex issue and have a clear understanding of its serious consequences. With this in mind, therefore, I would once again urge the minister to reconsider this tax proposal to see whether it is truly worth while and, if so, to endeavour to remove what would appear to be serious anomalies in its application. Unfortunately it has detracted badly from an otherwise useful, economically stimulating, free enterprise budget. Once again, Mr. Speaker, I find myself on the same side as my constituents in asking whether the minister will rescind this proposal for a tax on life insurance beneficiaries.

Mr. Bob Kaplan (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I should like to begin by thanking the hon. member for his commendation of the other provisions of the budget; it is good to know that he is with us in general on the thrust of the budget. What I should like to do with the proposals that he made in connection with insurance is to ask some very simple questions, questions which the government had to confront in deciding on the basic rules for taxation of insurance.

The basic question is this: when insurance is a form of investment, should it not bear some fair share of tax considering that all other forms of investment in our society bear some form of tax? I suppose you can argue it would be better if there were no taxes payable on investments at all. One could make that case. Once it is determined that taxation ought to apply, should it not apply on an equitable basis to all forms of investment?

Insurance is a special investment. It is a peculiar and unique type of investment. It is difficult to have general rules which apply to other investments and make them applicable to insurance, but the basic principle is unarguable. Insurance is an investment and, like any other, it ought to bear its fair share of tax. It is with that approach that the government looked at insurance and made recommendations to parliament. We are not proposing to tax the protection factor or the mortality factor. To the extent the insurance benefit represents a payment for risk, no tax is payable or proposed to be payable on that portion of the proceeds. To the extent it is an investment, the fundamental question is: why should it not bear tax on the same basis as any other form of investment does? I do not think there is a satisfactory answer to that question. That is the basis on which we proposed it.

After the tax reform of 1971 there was some pause in negotiations with the insurance industry and representatives of those concerned with insurance. It was decided that the insurance companies would pay a 15 per cent tax straight across the board on all the earnings of their investment portfolios. Why 15 per cent? In the case of those policy holders who are low income individuals and have no other source of income, 15 per cent is too high. In the case of those who own very large insurance policies and who are getting the benefit of a large proportion of the income, 15 per cent is far too low. Taking it across the board, it was a kind of negotiation and consultation, and that was the figure which was arrived at then. Subsequently when we proceeded to allow $1,000 of tax free earnings on—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please. The motion to adjourn the House is now deemed to have been adopted. Accordingly, this House stands adjourned until tomorrow at 11 a.m.

Motion agreed to and the House adjourned at 10.30 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Friday, July 8, 1977

The House met at 11 a.m.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[English]

THE MINISTRY

PROPOSED RESIGNATION OF MINISTER OF ENERGY, MINES AND RESOURCES IN VIEW OF FAILURE TO ACCEPT PRINCIPLE OF MINISTERIAL RESPONSIBILITY—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Ray Hnatyshyn (Saskatoon-Biggar): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a motion of urgency under the provisions of Standing Order 43. My motion concerns the principle of ministerial responsibility upon which parliamentary government is based. Last week the Secretary of State (Mr. Roberts) used that principle to defend secrecy in government. This week we have had, first, the Minister of Supply and Services (Mr. Goyer) and then the Solicitor General (Mr. Fox) deny constitutional responsibility for actions committed by their officials. Yesterday the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Gillespie) who, under Section 70(1) of the Financial Administration Act, is responsible for approving the operating budget of AECL, denied responsibility for losses totalling $180 million over and above the original reported loss of $110 million. I therefore move, seconded by the hon. member for Okanagan Boundary (Mr. Whittaker):

That this House can no longer tolerate the government's flagrant undermining of the principle of ministerial responsibility and, hence, of our constitution and in defence of our parliamentary system requests that the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources do resign.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Presentation of such a motion requires the unanimous consent of the House. Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

FINANCE

SUGGESTED COMMITTEE REVIEW OF INTERNATIONAL RESERVES—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Sinclair Stevens (York-Simcoe): Mr. Speaker, I rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43 to move a motion on a matter of urgent and pressing necessity. Whereas Department of Finance figures reveal that Canada's international reserves have fallen by $130 million from May 31 to June 30, and have dropped a total of $746 million since December 31, 1976, and whereas this is the second time in seven months the Bank of Canada has apparently had to spend massive amounts of our foreign holdings to offset a declining Canadian dollar, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Halifax (Mr. Stanfield):

That this House ask the government to make a reference to the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs so that a full review of Canada's activities with respect to its international reserves and the falling dollar may be made.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Presentation of such a motion for debate requires the unanimous consent of the House. Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

AGRICULTURE

PROPOSED COMMITTEE STUDY OF MEANS OF IMPROVING CONDITIONS—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Gordon Towers (Red Deer): Mr. Speaker, under the provisions of Standing Order 43, I rise concerning serious problems within the jurisdiction of the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan), which some hon. members have been aware of for some time and which were included in the 1976 report of the Auditor General. In view of the fact that these difficulties will continue to cause hardship for agricultural producers, and in view of the apparent inability of the Minister of Agriculture to efficiently perform his ministerial duties, either through incompetence or as a result of interference by the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) or the Liberal Party of Canada, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Edmonton Centre (Mr. Paproski):

That the Standing Committee on Agriculture be instructed to recommend to parliament ways and means to rectify this intolerable situation which will worsen unless immediate remedial action is taken.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Presentation of such a motion pursuant to Standing Order 43 can only be done with the unanimous consent of the House. Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: No.

• (1110)

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

ATOMIC ENERGY OF CANADA LIMITED

CONTRACT WITH ARGENTINA—INQUIRY WHETHER MINISTER REVIEWED TERMS OF RENEGOTIATED CONTRACT

Mr. Joe Clark (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources who was here a moment ago. Mr. Speaker, I see he has just returned. Was the minister looking for a document in the second official language?

My question to the minister relates to the announcement of the dismissal yesterday of Dr. Foster. The Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources took that portfolio at a time when he knew the government and people of Canada had been burned once in a negotiation for a nuclear contract with Argentina, and he undertook to have a renegotiation of that contract. I should like to ask the minister whether, when he was told of the terms of the renegotiated contract, he, personally, reviewed the terms of that renegotiated contract in detail and depth?

Hon. Alastair Gillespie (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, if the hon. member has looked at the summary of the contract prepared by the Auditor General and tabled before the Public Accounts Committee on April 19, the contract between AECL and CNEA, the Argentinian agency, he would know that there are a large number of clauses. It runs to many, many pages. Those particular clauses were negotiated, to the extent that there were numbers involved, on the aspect of the inflationary impact. They covered both the Canadian services, namely, goods, services and heavy water, and some Argentinian services. That contract was considered by the board of directors of AECL following its renegotiation, and accepted by them. On that basis the government accepted the renegotiation.

Mr. Clark: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Every day we hear different varieties and versions of the meaning of ministerial responsibility. The minister is now telling us that ministerial responsibility applies only to short, simple contracts, not to complex ones. I want to know if the minister himself, as the minister responsible who knew a costly mistake had been made in the first contract, took his own responsibilities seriously enough to examine personally all the terms, long though they were, of this new contract before allowing it to be proceeded with?

Mr. Gillespie: Mr. Speaker, if the hon. member were to understand the relationship between Crown corporations and the responsibilities of ministers—

Mr. Hnatyshyn: We are learning fast.

Mr. Gillespie: —he would not put that kind of question. He would recognize that Crown corporations had been set up by parliament to deal, independent from ministerial or governmental interference, in matters of that kind.

[Mr. Speaker.]

CONTRACT WITH ARGENTINA—REASON FOR INCREASE IN LOSS ON RENEGOTIATED CONTRACT

Mr. Joe Clark (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, twice today the minister has refused to tell us if he exercised his clear ministerial responsibility, he having been given the warning that there had been serious mistakes made in the undertaking of the first contract. The minister has refused to tell us whether he, as the minister responsible through whom that corporation reports, did what he should have done as minister. I ask the minister how he could have been so certain on February 22, as the minister is reported to have said in Hansard in answer to my colleague from Kingston and the Islands, that the top limit of the loss in the renegotiated contract would be $40 million, when yesterday he admitted it was going to be in excess of $130 million? What changed between February and July? What was the minister doing personally to keep track of what had changed, and why we are faced with this serious loss, as he finally admitted yesterday?

Hon. Alastair Gillespie (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I believe I discharged my responsibilities when I invited Mr. Ross Campbell to join the board, act as chairman of AECL and renegotiate that contract. When I heard it would be likely there would be losses—and this is all on the record if the hon. lady would care to read it—I believe I discharged my responsibility in bringing to AECL one of Canada's best negotiators. I believe that Mr. Ross Campbell, with his team, were very effective in reducing the exposure of the corporation to the kind of losses it otherwise would have sustained. I believe they were able to effect reductions of something like $70 million or $80 million.

I believe also I discharged my responsibility when I changed the board of directors and appointed a new board to examine the whole question of financial control. Quite clearly, this has been one of the great weaknesses of the corporation. It was made clear by the Auditor General. A large number of changes have been made in the corporation since the Auditor General made his report public. Indeed, some changes were made prior to that by myself as a result of the changes in the board and bringing in consultants to deal with it.

Information that I gave the House that I believed the exposure would be a top limit of $40 million was based on information that was given to me. It was the best information that the corporation then had. As a result of the teams we put in to deal with this question of financial management and control, the losses exposed to us were very much greater. That is why I acted with despatch and tabled the annual report yesterday, rather than wait for a couple more weeks, and made a statement just as soon as I could with a complete disclosure of the facts as I knew them.

Mr. Clark: Mr. Speaker, first we are told that ministerial responsibility applies only to short contracts. Now, we are told that ministerial responsibility extends only to bringing in Ross

Campbell to carry the can. What the House of Commons and the people of Canada have a right to know is what the minister did personally to monitor this procedure which he knew had caused serious problems and serious losses to Canada before. We do not want to hear about Mr. Campbell and other people. We want to hear about the man who is responsible to this parliament for reporting for that agency. We want to know what he did.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Paproski: Either say something or resign.

REASON FOR PROMOTION OF MR. CAMPBELL

Miss Flora MacDonald (Kingston and the Islands): Mr. Speaker, the minister has said that his sole responsibility in the $130 million loss was to appoint Mr. Ross Campbell to renegotiate a contract. Mr. Campbell's testimony to the Public Accounts Committee on January 25 of this year was that he had assured the Argentinian government that we, that is Mr. Campbell and Mr. Foster, acting together have the full authority of the Canadian government to proceed with the renegotiation, to sign it and to execute its terms. I wish to ask the minister why Mr. Campbell was promoted to the position of chairman and president of AECL when Dr. Foster was dismissed.

Hon. Alastair Gillespie (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, there are a couple of points I would like to make to the hon. lady. First, in her preamble, I think she misled the House. On the second point, it should be obvious to her that when a chief executive officer is removed from his duties, one has to appoint somebody else in his stead until a new chief executive officer can be located. Mr. Campbell has undertaken, on the basis of a recommendation of the board of directors to me, to take over on a temporary basis the chief executive officer's job in addition to his job as chairman of the board. A search committee has already been set up, chaired by one of the members of the board. I hope it will be successful in finding a man with the kind of breadth of managerial experience that is needed—I would expect somebody in the private sector at the present time—to take over that job at the earliest possible opportunity.

● (1120)

ARGENTINIAN CONTRACT—POSSIBILITY OF SANCTIONS AGAINST MR. CAMPBELL IN VIEW OF LOSS ON RENEGOTIATED CONTRACT

Miss Flora MacDonald (Kingston and the Islands): A supplementary, Mr. Speaker. In view of the fact that Ross Campbell has been Chairman of the Board of the AECL for some two years, that he was present throughout the whole renegotiation of the contract, that he has been reporting to the minister on a continuous basis as to what was going on with regard to the details of this contract, and that the loss has now escalated to a $130 million, I should like to ask the minister what sanctions are to be levied against Mr. Campbell who obviously misled him about the effectiveness of the renegotiation of this contract?

Hon. Alastair Gillespie (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): I have already made it clear to the House that I believe Mr. Ross Campbell is Canada's leading negotiator—

Some hon. Members: Oh!

Miss MacDonald: With a $130 million loss?

Mr. Gillespie: I believe he has demonstrated this. He has had a distinguished professional career—

Mr. Paproski: What about the rest of them?

Mr. Gillespie: Are you interested in the answer?

Mr. Paproski: Yes. We are interested in the truth.

Mr. Gillespie: Then why don't you listen to my voice instead of your own? If you people don't want an answer, if you are interested only in heckling, I am prepared to wait for a while. When you impugn the integrity of Mr. Ross Campbell as you seem to have done,—I am not sure whether it was advertent or inadvertent— you are making a grievous error and blackening the character of a very distinguished public servant. I hope you will withdraw the imputation you have just made.

ARGENTINIAN CONTRACT—REASON FOR DIFFERENTIATION IN TREATMENT BETWEEN MR. CAMPBELL AND DR. FOSTER

Miss Flora MacDonald (Kingston and the Islands): Would the minister give us some rationale as to the distinction he draws between Dr. John Foster and Mr. Ross Campbell?

Hon. Alastair Gillespie (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): I have given it on a number of occasions and I am surprised the hon. lady cannot see it. There is a difference between being chairman of the board of directors and having responsibility as president and chief executive officer for the corporation. If the hon. lady does not understand the distinction between having full accountability for the corporation and having responsibility as chairman of the board, I do not think I can help her.

ARGENTINIAN CONTRACT—DATE ON WHICH MINISTER LEARNED LOSS ON RENEGOTIATED CONTRACT WAS $130 MILLION

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Following the revelation that EACL stood to lose very large sums of money as a result of the original agreement with the power company of Argentina, the minister repeatedly told the House that as a result of the renegotiation of that contract the loss would be greatly reduced. He gave a figure of $25 million and on February 22 he said it would be $40 million. I should like to ask the minister specifically, at what time did he learn that the loss on the Argentinian nuclear reactor would be $130 million? Did he learn this prior to the signing of the renegotiated agreement or did he get that information subsequent to the signing of the agreement?

Hon. Alastair Gillespie (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): I got it within the last couple of weeks.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): On February 2 of this year, as recorded at page 2638 of Hansard, when I asked the minister about the renegotiated agreement he said that already AECL with its partner Italimpianti had signed the agreement and that the Argentine government had approved, though there were still some details to be worked out and so on. Is the minister saying that he did not know what the terms of that agreement were, that although he knew that the previous agreement stood to lose AECL, it turns out now, $200 million, he did not know that the renegotiated agreement was going to cost the people of Canada $130 million? Was that agreement signed without that information being conveyed to the minister? Did the minister not ask what the loss would be in that renegotiated agreement? Surely that was his responsibility.

Mr. Gillespie: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I did ask, and that was the information I was given—that the range would be something between $23 million to $40 million. It was on that basis, when the previous estimate had been for more than $100 million, that I felt that a good deal had been made in the renegotiation by Mr. Campbell, and I so announced to the House.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): A final supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. I do not want to distort in any way the minister's reply, but do I understand that he is telling me that prior to the signing of a renegotiated agreement he was given the information that the loss would be cut to somewhere between $23 million and $40 million, that now he finds that those who drafted that agreement and signed it have incurred a loss of $130 million, and that the man who carried on the negotiations is now being appointed president of AECL? Is that what the minister is telling the House?

Mr. Gillespie: Mr. Speaker, I am saying that the loss announced yesterday was a loss which was not known to me until the last couple of weeks, that at the time the renegotiated contract was signed the information I was given was the information I have just repeated in answering an earlier question. I also made it quite clear that there was a team of officers involved in the renegotiation and that the renegotiation dealt only with the numbers, based on the case that Canada had, which was that the world inflationary situation had changed and therefore we could expect the customer to renegotiate some of the arrangements.

Remember that that contract was written under and subject to Argentinian law, not Canadian law. It had to be renegotiated against the background of Argentinian law. There was a provision in Argentinian law, we argued, which gave Canada the right to renegotiate those particular terms which dealt with items beyond the control of the corporation, such as world inflation. It did not give Canada or the negotiators the right to renegotiate the language of the contract. Nor did it give Canada or the corporation the right to renegotiate any estimates that might have been made with respect to man hours, and so forth, in that contract. We were limited in our negotiation to the question of escalation of costs and those matters and I believe, as I have said, that the negotiators were very effective in getting that much better a deal.

ARGENTINIAN CONTRACT—SUGGESTION MINISTER RESIGN BECAUSE OF MISLEADING STATEMENTS OF LOSS ON RENEGOTIATED CONTRACT

Mr. Allan Lawrence (Northumberland-Durham): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. In phrasing my supplementary question to the minister I should like to take his memory back, if I may, to several interchanges he and I had in this House and in the committee wherein it was suggested by me that even on the renegotiated contract price the loss to Canada was going to go to $120 million. That was a conservative approach by me, obviously, as it turned out. Does the minister remember his ridiculing of me in this House and in the committee, and by Mr. Ross Campbell, for even suggesting that figure, and does he remember undertaking that the loss on the renegotiated price in no event would go over $40 million? Bearing that in mind, does the minister not honestly feel that he should now hand in his resignation on the basis of that overt misleading of the members of this House?

● (1130)

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Alastair Gillespie (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, the hon. member wants to make much of an alleged ridicule which I made of him. He seems to be placing it on a very personal basis. I should like to assure him that I have never entered into discussion with him with respect to the affairs of this corporation on a personal basis. I recognize his position as a member of parliament and as a chairman of the committee. I have done my best to provide him with all the information which has been available to me.

As soon as I had the Auditor General's report, I called up the hon. member and I said: "Mr. Lawrence, I hope you will agree that your committee will deal with this on an urgent basis." That has been the basis of my relationship with the committee ever since. I take absolutely no satisfaction in the situation as it exists. I am sure Your Honour can understand the position in which I have been put. I have tried to tell the House why this situation developed. I have tried to explain to the House the reason for the difference in the numbers, which was the lack of financial management and control information.

The corporation sent teams down to Argentina as part of the whole reorganization of the financial management and control structure of the corporation, to examine how that particular project was being managed. As a result of those kinds of initiatives, which have taken place since that agreement, the contract was finally approved in its renegotiated form. It has been as a result of those types of actions that these horrendous numbers have come to the attention of the directors and the management of the corporation, and they have been relayed to me. I have tried to relay them to the House and to the people of Canada at the earliest possible opportunity.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Lawrence: Mr. Speaker, my supplementary is simply this: has the minister submitted his resignation, bearing in mind the whole question of ministerial responsibility, and if not, why not?

Some hon. Members: Order.

RENEGOTIATED ARGENTINIAN CONTRACT—REASON FOR FAILURE OF MINISTER TO SUBMIT RESIGNATION

Mr. Walter Baker (Grenville-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, just a few moments ago the minister spoke about his attitude. Perhaps he will recall the House of Commons debate reported at page 3280 on February 22, 1977 when, in an answer to the hon. member for Kingston and the Islands, he said:

> I do not know what further information the hon. member wants. All I can tell her is that I think Mr. Campbell was able to negotiate a good deal for Canada.

Further on in the exchange the minister said:

> Any time the opposition can show me how they can save $75 million I would like to hear it.

Does the minister not feel, if there was ever an indication of his arrogance and cocksureness in these circumstances, that this is it? Does the minister not feel that he is following in a very bad tradition, the tradition of Stopforth, Higgitt, Cameron and Foster—all of whom are public servants being blamed for ministerial responsibility? When things are going well, the minister takes the credit. When they are bad, he is an innocent bystander.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): Is there anything in this case which would compel the minister not to submit his resignation?

Some hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): Through the minister's irresponsibility and incompetence, the people of Canada are now carrying the financial can.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Alastair Gillespie (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, the House leader opposite has challenged me to explain why I might have used language which suggested that the opposition, if they could show me how to save $70 million or $80 million, should do so. I should like to remind them of the reason I said that. I think this was a very considerable accomplishment. They may not think $70 million or $80 million is important. I happen to think it is very important.

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, it is obvious that the minister is dodging and ducking in a way which is not credible to anyone on either side of the House, including his own supporters, with respect to this matter. In fact the minister lost $95 million and was responsible for that loss. He had better face up to that because that is his responsibility. It was a loss in addition to any other loss.

The minister has seen fit to confirm today the person who is responsible for that kind of loss during that period and has increased his executive responsibilities. Is the minister not cognizant of what this means to the credibility of that corporation, to the credibility of the minister himself and to the credibility of the ministry? Will the minister not reconsider his position? Surely there is nothing about his office so precious to him as to undermine the credibility of the entire government in terms of its financial responsibility and its ministerial responsibility? Is his office so precious that his resignation cannot be honestly submitted in the best traditions of this parliament, when incompetency and unaccountability have been firmly established even in the minds of the most unbiased onlookers of the proceedings today?

ARGENTINIAN CONTRACT—OPPORTUNITY OF MINISTER OF FINANCE TO REVIEW INITIAL AND RENEGOTIATED CONTRACTS

Mr. Sinclair Stevens (York-Simcoe): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct my question to the Minister of Finance. It deals with the same line of questioning which has been put up to this point. In view of the fact that the Deputy Minister of Finance sits on the board of directors of Atomic Energy of Canada Limited and is also on the executive committee of that company, would the Minister of Finance indicate to what extent he had an opportunity to review the initial contract which was signed with Argentina and the renegotiated contract?

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I have already indicated to the standing committee that I have not seen the initial contract. To my recollection, I have not seen the renegotiated one. At that particular time I ceased to be the minister of energy, mines and resources. The Deputy Minister of Finance represents the government on the corporation, but in no way does the Department of Finance exercise administrative responsibility over the corporation.

ARGENTINIAN CONTRACT—METHOD OF ACCOUNTING FOR LOSS ON RENEGOTIATED CONTRACT

Mr. Sinclair Stevens (York-Simcoe): Mr. Speaker, I direct my supplementary question to the Minister of Finance as well. In view of the deputy minister's role on the board, as described by the Minister of Finance, would he indicate if the extra $180 million loss referred to yesterday by the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources was included in his budget presentation of March 31? In short, is this $180 million an additional cash drain which is going to be found in this year?

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources dealt with that yesterday. He indicated several ways in which the funding of the cash requirements of the corporation in the current fiscal year would be met. The hon. member specifically used the words "cash drain" in relation to the $180 million. The hon. member may like to read the statement again, and he will see that it is to be a provision in the accounts against potential future liabilities, rather than actual cash drain at this point in time.

ARGENTINIAN CONTRACT—DATE WHEN MINISTER OF FINANCE LEARNED OF LOSS ON RENEGOTIATED CONTRACT

Mr. Sinclair Stevens (York-Simcoe): Mr. Speaker, my final supplementary is to the Minister of Finance. Would he indicate to the House when he first learned of the extent of the true loss in AECL?

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, several weeks ago.

● (1140)

INVESTIGATION OF QUESTIONABLE PAYMENTS—MINISTER'S CO-OPERATION

Mr. Ray Hnatyshyn (Saskatoon-Biggar): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct my question to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. It is with respect to his role vis-à-vis AECL. Having regard to the fact that he has indicated that he feels no responsibility for this mess, I wonder if he could now give the House an assurance that there is not a limitless supply of money available to be lost by AECL, regardless of their activities, incompetence and indecision, and whether or not he is in fact co-operating with the authorities in connection with the investigation of other payments that may have been made. It was reported, for example, in the Financial Post of June 18 that the investigation would:

> . . . include a number of newly discovered suspect payments made by Atomic Energy of Canada, Ltd.

The article stated that:

> Among the transactions reportedly being examined by the RCMP is a duplicate $400,000 item for which there is said to be inadequate accounting.

What I am asking the minister is whether he is co-operating now with the RCMP officials and personally involving himself with the minister responsible, and whether he even knows about the particular investigations that are going on.

Hon. Alastair Gillespie (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): There is a very strange dichotomy on the other side. At one moment they are saying they want you to involve yourself deeply in some situation—as I understood the hon. member he wanted me to involve myself deeply with the RCMP—but if I were to do that or even try to interfere with the RCMP investigation, I would be the first to be attacked by the other side.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: The answer simply escapes any reasonable person. I do not understand what the minister is talking about. I simply ask the minister whether or not he is co-operating—the word is co-operating—with the RCMP in their investigation of newly discovered suspect payments by AECL. Is the minister denying now that there are any further payments that are under investigation, or is he now saying that this is the final loss we will suffer with respect to the past transactions of AECL? He can certainly answer that question.

Mr. Gillespie: Perhaps the hon. member would reread his first question. He will see then why the answer I gave him was the right answer.

On the second question, if he is asking me about the RCMP investigation into other payments that might have been made by the corporation, I am in no position to tell him. The RCMP have not come to me, they have not asked me for any information with respect to any payment. I know of none. I have no reason to believe that the RCMP would be looking at any other. It is for the RCMP to determine. I offered my full co-operation and AECL has offered its full co-operation to the RCMP.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: That is nonsense. Yesterday in the House the Solicitor General acknowledged there are investigations on an ongoing basis being made with respect to AECL operations in answer to a question from my colleague, the hon. member for Northumberland-Durham. I am asking the minister now if he will come clean and tell the House clearly and directly whether or not he will co-operate with the RCMP.

Mr. Lang: He just said so.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: What the minister said, with all due respect, is nonsense. I am simply asking—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The minister just answered the very question the hon. member is asking.

Some hon. Members: Sit down.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: The minister indicated that, personally, he has absolutely no knowledge with respect to that. I am asking whether he will conduct an investigation with the officials of AECL so that, in fact, he can assist them in co-operating with the RCMP in order to make sure that all illegal and suspect payments are brought to the attention of the RCMP.

Mr. Speaker: I am sure that if the hon. member reads the record he will see that that is the very language the minister used in answering him. His words were that he would co-operate and AECL would co-operate with the RCMP.

* * *

ROYAL CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICE

ALLEGED BREAK-IN AT INTERNATIONAL EDUCATION RESOURCE ASSOCIATION—EFFECT ON DECISION TO HOLD INQUIRY

Mr. Stuart Leggatt (New Westminster): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Solicitor General. Did the break-in at the International Education Resource Association on Cypress Street in Vancouver, on January 29 of this year play a part in the Solicitor General's decision to call an inquiry into the matter—one of the reasons the Solicitor General gave was that L'Agence de Presse Libre break-in was not an isolated occurrence as he had previously thought—and could he advise further whether he is aware of any allegations that have been made surrounding that break-in?

Hon. Francis Fox (Solicitor General): The answer to the double barreled question in both cases is no, Mr. Speaker.

SOURCE OF ADDITIONAL INFORMATION OF UNAUTHORIZED ACTIVITIES WHICH LED TO ESTABLISHING INQUIRY

Mr. Stuart Leggatt (New Westminster): I apologize to the minister. I have written to him but he may not have received the letter, but I am sure the minister would be happy to look into that particular question. My supplementary question is as follows: In coming to his determination to hold an inquiry, did he obtain additional information which led him to that conclusion from his deputy minister, or was there additional information from the RCMP? In other words, what was the source of the information that led him to the conclusion that an inquiry was now appropriate, whereas before L'Agence de Presse Libre matter seemed to be an isolated occurrence? Was it from someone in his own department or was that information volunteered initially from the force itself?

Hon. Francis Fox (Solicitor General): I believe that I answered the question in detail in my statement to the House. There were matters which were brought to my attention and which seemed to be substantiated. This was substantiated after my initial statement in the House on the APLQ affair on June 17.

Mr. Stanfield: You are the world figure skating champion, Francis; free skating.

* * *

FARM CREDIT CORPORATION

INDICTMENT OF MANAGEMENT IN AUDIT BY SIBALD GROUP—GOVERNMENT ACTION

Mr. Perrin Beatty (Wellington-Grey-Dufferin-Waterloo): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of Agriculture my question is for the Acting Minister of Agriculture. I gave him notice in the House publicly yesterday of the question I intended to ask. I want to pursue the question I asked yesterday about the Farm Credit Corporation, the $308 million agency of the federal government. Can the minister tell the House today what specific action has been taken as a result of the management audit that bluntly disclosed serious morale problems within the corporation, total lack of direction from senior management, moonlighting by corporation employees on government time, and bilingual training for employees working in areas where no second language is spoken?

Hon. Daniel J. MacDonald (Acting Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, the document referred to by the hon. member for Wellington-Grey-Dufferin-Waterloo is the report of a management audit conducted with respect to the Farm Credit Corporation during the winter of 1976-77. I would first state that it is unlikely that we would find many organizations in either the private or public sector that were willing to expose themselves in the manner in which the FCC has done. This was a study based on interviews with staff of the corporation at all levels, in addition to the clients of the corporation with which it deals on a regular basis.

An hon. Member: Save the speech and answer the question.

Mr. MacDonald (Cardigan): You asked for an answer and you are getting it.

Rather than criticize the Farm Credit Corporation by searching for selected excerpts from the report which are critical of the way it functioned at the time of the study, I believe we should acknowledge that the extensive self-examination which has taken place is a credit to the staff of the corporation and we should sincerely congratulate them for the action which they have taken to improve the corporation in all its facets and to better serve its clients in the Canadian farm community.

AWARDING OF CONSULTANTS' CONTRACT BY CHAIRMAN TO COMPANY OF WHICH HE IS DIRECTOR—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Perrin Beatty (Wellington-Grey-Dufferin-Waterloo): Mr. Speaker, the minister absolutely refused to answer the specific question I asked. He simply evaded it and gave a speech instead which was prepared by one of his officials.

I have a supplementary question. Because the minister obviously does not understand what is going on, my supplementary is for the Acting Prime Minister. In view of the fact that the Minister of Agriculture has confirmed this week that the chairman of the Farm Credit Corporation, Mr. B. Kristjanson, gave consulting contracts totalling $80,000 to the Manitoba Institute of Management, of which he was a director at the same time as he was chairman of the Farm Credit Corporation, and that the contract was awarded without tender, can the Acting Prime Minister tell the House whether the government is satisfied that the awarding of the contract was in no way in violation of the government's guidelines for public servants, particularly paragraphs 3, 7 and 8 which state that public servants are expected to arrange their private affairs in a manner that will prevent conflict of interests from arising and that public servants should hold no outside office or employment?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I presume that the minister is deemed to be cognizant of the law.

Hon. Daniel J. MacDonald (Acting Minister of Agriculture): With regard to the contract, the hon. gentleman referred to by the hon. member, namely, the chairman of the Farm Credit Corporation is a member of the board of the other organization, which is a non-profit organization, and I am not talking of the Farm Credit Corporation but of the Manitoba Institute of Management, Inc. It was in no way unconstitutional or anything else, and there is no harm in this at all.

● (1150)

Mr. Beatty: Is the minister specifically aware of Privy Council Order in Council 1974-4065? Paragraph 7 reads:

Public servants should hold no outside office or employment that could place on them demands inconsistent with their official duties or call into question their capacity to perform those duties in an objective manner.

If so, how does he square that with the statement he just made?

Mr. MacDonald (Cardigan): Mr. Speaker, I have no trouble squaring that with the statement I have just made. I refer the hon. member back to January 26, 1977 when that question was placed on the order paper and answered in detail. If Mr. Speaker wants to give me time, I will read the question and the answer to the House.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member for Red Deer.

* * *

CANADIAN WHEAT BOARD

POSSIBILITY OF AMENDMENT OF ACT TO AVOID HARASSMENT OF PRODUCERS—MEASURES TO INCREASE SALES

Mr. Gordon Towers (Red Deer): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the minister in charge of the Canadian Wheat Board. In view of the increasing number of grain producers and elevator agents in Alberta who are being charged for petty violations of the Canadian Wheat Board Act, which are offences only because of bad legislation passed by parliament early in 1972, is the minister giving any consideration to having the Canadian Wheat Board Act scrutinized and amended by parliament so that harassment of producers and agents will not continue?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I will be glad to have a look at the question with the Canadian Wheat Board as to whether the rules as they now exist are working satisfactorily. I should think hon. members would not want to weaken the position of the Wheat Board and the quota regulations in their attempt to obtain equity between producers and their delivery opportunities as a result of enforcing those rules.

Mr. Towers: Mr. Speaker, in view of the fact that the Canadian Wheat Board seems to be preoccupied with prosecuting producers for insignificant misdemeanours instead of going out and selling grain, and in view of the charge made by the premier of Alberta that Canada is being out-hustled in the sale of grain, would the minister tell us when we can see some action to correct these two matters?

Mr. Lang: Mr. Speaker, I hope the hon. member is not associating himself with the ridiculous suggestion that the Wheat Board is being out-hustled when our market share is increasing and when by the time this crop year ends we will have exported in total more grain than in any year but two in the history of our Canadian grain selling effort. We will have a very good year of selling indeed, and forward sales are in an extremely solid position.

* * *

FARM CREDIT CORPORATION

JUSTIFICATION FOR REMOVING EXECUTIVE POWER FROM CHAIRMAN—ALLEGATION OF MOONLIGHTING BY EMPLOYEES

Mr. Arnold Malone (Battle River): Mr. Speaker, my question is supplementary to the question put by the hon. member for Wellington-Grey-Dufferin-Waterloo, and I would like to direct it to the acting Minister of Agriculture. Since there are all the appearances of hanky-panky at the very top level of the Farm Credit Corporation, what is the justification for stripping chairman Baldur Kristjanson of all real executive power and giving operational authority to Murray McBride, a former Liberal member of parliament, who was appointed vice-chairman a little more than a year ago?

Hon. Daniel J. MacDonald (Minister of Veterans Affairs): Mr. Speaker, that question is noted.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Malone: Just so that the record is clear, would the minister confirm or deny the report that within the Farm Credit Corporation there is extensive moonlighting going on and that it is now going on in part on employee time? Would he confirm or deny that?

Mr. MacDonald (Cardigan): Mr. Speaker, I have no problem denying that report.

* * *

CANADIAN WHEAT BOARD

REASON FOR ESTABLISHING DIFFERENT DELIVERY QUOTAS IN CERTAIN AREAS AS COMPARED TO OTHER AREAS

Mr. Doug Neil (Moose Jaw): Mr. Speaker, my question is supplementary to the question asked by the hon. member for Red Deer, and it is addressed to the minister in charge of the Canadian Wheat Board. The minister spoke of equity of delivery as being one of the principles of the Wheat Board, and I am wondering if the minister can advise us as to the reason the quota in some blocks of the Canadian Wheat Board area is now 12 bushels per acre while in other blocks it is only nine bushels per acre. Is it the intention of the board to equalize the delivery quota?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, while the equity principle and the quota management system are very important, obviously the Wheat Board may from time to time have to move quotas ahead in order to obtain the kind of grain required. This year the demand for a large volume of high protein wheat, for instance, has led the wheat board at different times to give a preference, at least in time of delivery, to those areas where high protein wheat is obtainable.

Mr. Neil: Mr. Speaker, I would like to find out from the minister if it is the intention of the Wheat Board to equalize the number of bushels per acre delivered. I think specifically of the Moose Jaw area where one farmer can deliver to Moose Jaw on a 12-bushel quota and one to Pasqua on only a nine-bushel quota. This is exactly the same kind of wheat grown side by side.

Mr. Lang: Mr. Speaker, in the last conversation I had with the Canadian Wheat Board about ten days ago it was indicated to me that the board's objective was essentially to equalize on the nine-bushel quota. Any move ahead of the nine-bushel quota would have been solely with the objective of obtaining the kind of grain required. I would want to re-check with the board, but I would not expect the board to be able to equalize on that basis in the course of this crop year.

Mr. Towers: And you say you haven't been out-hustled?

* * *

[Translation]

BILINGUALISM

SANCTIONS TO BE APPLIED TO EMPLOYEES REFUSING TO USE BOTH LANGUAGES—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Roch La Salle (Joliette): Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct a question to the President of the Treasury Board. Yesterday during a press conference he gave in Ottawa, he urged the civil servants of the Montreal area to use both official languages. I would therefore like to ask the minister what kind of sanctions he intends to apply to this group?

[English]

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, the sanctions applicable to employees who do not fulfill the obligations of their functions are well known to the bargaining agents and members of the unions. They range from reprimand to suspension, and suspension can be for different periods of time. Finally, there is the possibility of dismissal if an offence—and I call them offences—is sustained or repeated over a period of time.

[Translation]

Mr. La Salle: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask a supplementary question.

Since his predecessor, or the government, had promised to give a premium to civil servants who work in both languages, could the minister advise us how he can threaten to suspend these people while he, his predecessor and his government have totally refused to respect the commitments made a year and a half ago?

[English]

Mr. Andras: Mr. Speaker, that is not an accurate statement. The government did commit itself to the inauguration of the payment of compensation for the delivery of services in both official languages, with the details to be worked out within the government and then through consultation, particularly with the national joint council. The committee of the government, which has been reconfirmed by me on behalf of the government on several occasions, and again yesterday, was that such payment will be retroactive to November 1, 1976. One of the reasons for the delay in working out the details of this is the complexity of the issue itself which has been exacerbated because we have undertaken, as is publicly known, a comprehensive review of the implementation of the Official Languages Act, including that implementation that particularly affects the public service. The payment of compensation for bilingual services is related to many factors, which are the subject of this comprehensive review. It has been indicated that that review is close to completion, and when it is completed I will be in consultation with the bargaining agents and with the national joint council to work out the details of that compensation plan.

* * *

CONSUMER AFFAIRS

SUGAR—FAILURE OF RETAIL PRICE TO DECLINE IN PROPORTION TO DECLINE IN WHOLESALE PRICE—GOVERNMENT ACTION

Mr. John Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the acting Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs or, in his absence, the acting acting minister or perhaps to the Acting Prime Minister. In view of the fact that recently disclosed information shows that the wholesale price of sugar has declined significantly over the last few months and in view of the fact that the retail price of sugar has not declined at all in proportion to the decline in the wholesale price, can the Acting Prime Minister tell the House if he will instruct the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs to consider action under the Combines Investigation Act against the chain stores which are keeping up the price of sugar? If not, can he tell the House why he has not so instructed the department to undertake that kind of action?

• (1200)

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, perhaps I might be permitted to respond. I have been in conversation with the Anti-Inflation Board in this respect. They have monitored that situation and their conclusion was that the retail price change or the situation the hon. member referred to, was substantially confined to the Toronto market where previously the retail price of sugar had been used as a loss leader in retail food operations. The conclusion was that, throughout the country, the retail price had been tracking the wholesale price of sugar over a period of time. They are keeping the Toronto situation under close watch.

Oral Questions

POLYSAR

POSSIBILITY OF DISCIPLINARY ACTION AGAINST MANAGEMENT IN VIEW OF COMMITTEE REPORT

Mrs. Jean E. Pigott (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Finance as minister responsible for majority shareholdings in the Canadian Development Corporation which in turn is the owner of Polysar. In light of the report of the Public Accounts Committee tabled yesterday, can the minister inform the House whether, in view of the committee's request, disciplinary action has been taken against the management?

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, it is my intention to bring the report of the Public Accounts Committee to the attention of the management of the Canadian Development Corporation, the parent company of Polysar, with the indication that I expect them to take the disciplinary action that the facts warrant.

Mrs. Pigott: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. For the information of the minister I understand Mr. John Silver of the public relations department of Polysar says such action has been taken but he would not disclose the details. Would the minister undertake to report to the House on this as soon as possible?

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): Mr. Speaker, I would be quite happy to report to the House or a committee.

* * *

NATIONAL DEFENCE

PURCHASE OF LAND FOR DEFENCE RESEARCH CENTRE AT WINNIPEG—REQUEST FOR REPORT

Mr. Dan McKenzie (Winnipeg South Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of National Defence. Can the minister inform the House if there are any new developments on the purchase by the Department of National Defence of parcels of land in the city of Winnipeg for the location of a defence research centre and has any deadline been established for the commencement of construction?

Hon. Barney Danson (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I cannot give an updated report at this time. Negotiations for land are still taking place. I thought they had been completed but I understand they have not. I have asked for an update on the situation by next Monday.

DEFENCE RESEARCH CENTRE AT WINNIPEG—POSSIBILITY OF TRADE-OFF BY LOSING AIR COMMAND

Mr. Dan McKenzie (Winnipeg South Centre): A supplementary question. May I ask the minister if he is under any pressure or is he giving consideration to moving air command headquarters from Winnipeg to Ottawa? Is there to be a trade-off, that is, to get the defence research centre we lose air command headquarters or are we to lose both establishments?

[Mr. MacDonald (Rosedale).]

Hon. Barney Danson (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, there is no question of trade-off or losing air command. Air command is well established in Winnipeg and is doing a first-rate job there with excellent people who are happy in that great city.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[English]

TV AND RADIO BROADCASTING OF PROCEEDINGS OF THE HOUSE AND ITS COMMITTEES

Fourth report of Special Committee on TV and Radio Broadcasting of Proceedings of the House and its Committees—Mr. Speaker.

[Editor's Note: For text of above report, see today's Votes and Proceedings.]

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order as a result of incidents that occurred during question period today and on previous occasions. At the outset, I want to say to Your Honour that I do not, of course, challenge your rulings and interpretations placed upon what transpired in this House, but I think it is important to seek clarification.

On Wednesday, as reported at page 7367 of Hansard, I responded to a statement made by the Solicitor General and made what I considered to be an accurate and appropriate point, that I believed the rejection of my request concerning the tabling and printing of material in Hansard had been refused because of consent not being forthcoming from the government benches. Your Honour indicated—I take it, to correct a statement I had made in the course of my presentation—that in your hearing there were cries of "No" from both sides of the House. That is the essence of it, although it is reported as one intervention.

Today I was involved in questioning the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources on what I think is a most important duty of a member of parliament, the scrutiny of public expenditures. I will review the questions as they are reported in Hansard, because I do not want to do a disservice to anyone in this House. The purpose of my questions was quite clear in my own mind. I wanted to determine whether, in the case of this minister, we had a situation of culpability by virtue of gullibility, or whether there was some perspective on the part of the minister with respect to the responsibility of government, represented by the minister responsible for AECL, to involve himself in the activities of AECL.

The point I am making is that the questions I raised today were directed to finding out the extent of the minister's involvement. In the first question I asked, generally, whether he was personally involved in co-operating with the RCMP to determine whether there were fresh instances of wrongful payments by AECL. He answered that he would co-operate and he was involving himself. I recall that. The second part of my question was more specific. I asked whether the minister would become involved by asking senior officials of AECL to report to him on these matters, and to find out whether they are co-operating. Your Honour suggested to me that, in effect, I was asking the same question and that the minister had already answered it. I understand the rules are that the minister need not reply.

My submission to Your Honour is that I have asked different questions respecting a very important matter. The minister should have the right to respond, if he desires to do so, by giving the same answer; he has to stand on his record, or he can sit in his place, as he did during the course of questioning, and not answer at all. I should like clarification on whether I can ask these different, specific questions, although they are generally related. Your Honour's interpretation of the minister's answer is part of the decision on whether I could ask another question. That is the point of order. Your Honour seemed to be interpreting the fact that he had given an answer as co-operation. I suggest my question was something quite different.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member raises two points which he says are not differences with the ruling I have given. If not, I do not know what they are. He will have noticed that today I permitted repetition and quite generous extension of some of the restrictions that might have been imposed on the question period. For example, a series of questions was directed to the minister on whether he should resign. That question can, in most circumstances, be set aside as being argumentative in the first place. The question seemed to me to have a serious tone, however, and I permitted repetition of the question by two other members. I think that was a rather extraordinary extension, but the circumstances were extraordinary.

As the hon. member will realize, I do not like to use technical rules in the question period to interrupt questioning on a very important subject. The hon. member put a question and a supplementary. During the answer to the supplementary, the minister said he wanted to make it clear that he would co-operate and that AECL would co-operate. He used those very words. The purpose of the hon. member's second question was specifically to ask the minister, not what he had said in his first answer but whether he and AECL would co-operate in the investigation; and that is what the minister answered.

The hon. member used the same language in the third question. I think it is incumbent upon the Chair to make an interpretation, if there is a rule, as there is. This also gets into part of the point of order: since there is a rule which says that questions which have been answered cannot be asked again, the Chair must enforce that rule. If, as the hon. member is advocating, that ought not to be the case, it would require a change in our procedure. The hon. member is advocating that that ought not to be the case, and that hon. members ought to be permitted to repeat questions when they are not satisfied with the answers, and the minister should simply be allowed to refuse to answer or to stand on his record. That is not the practice of the House. As long as the practice of the House remains the way it is, when I hear repetition of a question that has just been answered I have to rule it out of order.

Regarding the incident of the statement of the Solicitor General on Wednesday, I intervened because the hon. member is entitled to deal with representations for which he is responsible with respect to responding to a statement by any minister at any time or, in using his privileges, to speak or to put questions to the House. But when the hon. member indicated, as he did that day, that consent came only from one side of the House, he involved the Chair and made a reflection on the ability of the Chair to make a judgment. That was an incorrect reference to the situation and to the decision I had made. I therefore intervened in the circumstances. But this happens rarely.

* * *

● (1210)

TRANSPORT

TABLING OF REPORT OF COMMISSION OF INQUIRY INTO BILINGUAL AIR TRAFFIC SERVICE IN QUEBEC

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I should like, under Standing Order 41(2), to table, in both official languages, copies of the interim report of the commission of inquiry into bilingual air traffic service in Quebec.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have tabled the interim report of the commission of inquiry into bilingual air traffic service in the province of Quebec. I am equally pleased with the recommendations contained in this report, which have the full support of this government. It is a most significant document. Its recommendations and their subsequent implementation are a significant step toward resolving the issue of bilingual air communications in Quebec without jeopardizing air safety. The commission's report states as follows:

> The evidence on record leads to the conclusion that operational efficiency will not be affected at the three locations where the introduction of bilingualism is recommended.

The commission also notes that to its knowledge—

> There has never been an accident or incident in the province of Quebec that could in any way be said to be related to the use of the two official languages in air traffic control.

The commission's mandate is to examine the safety-related aspects of expanding bilingual air to ground communications in Quebec. It is obvious that the recommendations contained in this interim report are the result of thorough and lengthy examination of all the implications. It is the commission's recommendation, and the intention of this government, to immediately authorize air to ground communications for aircraft flying under visual flight rules at St. Hubert airport. In this aspect it is significant that the commission refers to an earlier study which found as follows:

> The St. Hubert airport is one of the busiest general aviation airports in Canada and its operation is considered to be outstanding. The introduction of the French language, at the request of the pilots, will not degrade the safety of the operation and, in fact, is expected to enhance it because of the improved comprehension of pilot-controller communications.

The commission also recommends, as the first stage in implementing bilingual air to ground communications in the Montreal area, that controllers be authorized to communicate in both official languages with VFR flights passing through the Mirabel control zone on their way to other destinations. This will mean a considerable saving in fuel and flight time, eliminating the need to fly around the control zone. We plan to implement this recommendation by October 1. Thirdly, the commission recommends that bilingual air to ground communications be provided to VFR flights entering what is known as the Montreal terminal radar service area, which overlays the Mirabel, Dorval, St. Hubert and part of the St. Jean control zones, up to altitudes of 9,500 feet.

We expect to introduce bilingual air traffic services in this area by January 1, 1978, when the additional controllers required to provide the service will have completed their training.

[Translation]

I would like to congratulate the commission on the work that it is doing, and on its continuing efforts to ensure that concerns for air safety are thoroughly investigated and that appropriate action or precautions are taken. In addition to safety concerns which have always been the government's main consideration, I am also pleased to report, Mr. Speaker, that the commission concludes that these recommendations will not significantly increase costs. The commission has upheld the view of this government that it is possible to ensure that air traffic control services are provided in both official languages in the province of Quebec without jeopardizing air safety. This is in keeping with the government's policy and objectives for bilingualism.

I am confident that this interim report and government action arising from it will be satisfactory to all concerned. The co-operation we have received from Canadian aviation groups and associations on this whole matter has been most useful and greatly appreciated.

[English]

As a result of the recommendations tabled here today, and of the government's intention to act upon them promptly, we have taken another important step toward removing a serious, divisive factor which has extended far beyond the field of aviation and has threatened national unity. I am, therefore, confident that these recommendations by the commission will receive the full support of all members of this House. I should add, Mr. Speaker, that consultations with interested organizations concerning the report began this morning, and should some of them wish to make a formal statement for the attention of the House I will be pleased to table it, for the record, at some future time.

[Translation]

Mr. Joe Clark (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, first of all, I want to congratulate the Minister of Transport (Mr. Lang) for his French. I see here further evidence of the efficiency of the bilingualism policy in Saskatoon, as well as in High River, Alberta.

[Mr. Lang.]

[English]

Sir, it is now more than a year since this commission of inquiry was established by the government to bail the Minister of Transport out of the confusion and division he had created over this whole question. Now, after 12 months of detailed deliberations by the commissioners, we have an interim report which, frankly, does not move the situation very far forward. At least I suggest the minister exaggerates when he calls the recommendations of the report "a significant step toward resolving the issue of bilingual air communications".

Mr. Blais: Hear, hear!

Mr. Clark: I am pleased to see the Postmaster General applauding my observation that it is an exaggeration to so describe the report. The recommendation in support of bilingual VFR traffic at St-Hubert simply confirms what, in fact, has been operating practice for much of the private traffic at that airport during recent months. It merely confirms a recommendation made to the then minister of transport in March, 1975, by Project Bilcom, the study carried out at that time by the ministry in co-operation with CALPA and CATCA. The same study, Project Bilcom, also recommended, more than two years ago, in favour of bilingual advisory services. That recommendation, too, has now been confirmed by the commission.

Beyond that, sir, this interim report does not appear to contain much in the way of findings, particularly in respect of the major questions of commercial traffic at Dorval and Mirabel. I say it does not appear to be so because the minister has tabled a complicated, extensive document. I appreciate his courtesy in making it available to us some two hours before its presentation in the House. We may have further comments to make on it later. I made it clear when the commission was established that we in my party would accept the unanimous findings of the three commissioners. We are certainly prepared to support the unanimous recommendations contained in this report.

[Translation]

Apart from this, I can only hope that the commission will speed up its subsequent studies on the matters which are still pending, and particularly on the wide problem of communications as far as instrument flight rules are concerned.

I am very conscious of the technicality of several points but I am also aware—as I am sure hon. members on both sides of the House are—of the symbolic importance of all this matter for many Canadians, and therefore of the necessity to solve this problem in a fair and equitable manner as soon as technical conditions permit.

[English]

Mr. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa-Whitby): Mr. Speaker, on behalf of my colleagues I welcome the report and the statement the minister has made. I will not quibble about whether it confirms what we knew in the past. It has already been indicated that this has been a serious and divisive issue in Canadian politics. I am delighted with the conclusions that have been reached by the commission. I am delighted with the recommendations, and we look forward to their speedy implementation. I am for once, happy, to say I am in complete agreement with the government.

● (1220)

[Translation]

Mr. Armand Caouette (Villeneuve): Mr. Speaker, we are pleased to see the Minister of Transport (Mr. Lang) table the interim report of the commission of inquiry into bilingual air traffic service in Quebec.

First, I should like to thank the minister for having had the courtesy to table the report in both official languages. He did not try, as his colleague the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Gillespie) did yesterday, to table a report only in English under the pretext that waiting for the translated version would have delayed tabling the document. Mr. Speaker, I wish to inform the ministers, that this is the last time we allow unilingual documents to be tabled, even in French. If the ministers are in such a hurry to table their documents, let them speed up the translation. We will not allow a single unilingual report to be tabled, and I do not want to have to say it again. If they need that to learn what elementary courtesy is all about, we will show them.

Mr. Speaker, to come back to the report tabled today, I am sure all hon. members who believe in Canadian unity are pleased with its findings. Indeed, the report recognizes that bilingualism is no threat to air safety in Quebec.

One can read the following statement in the same report: there has never been an accident or incident in the province of Quebec that could in any way be said to be related to the use of the two official languages in air traffic control. Mr. Speaker, that gives the lie to the racists and alarmists who, through terror and duplicity, have tried to crush the legitimate expectations of French-speaking pilots and controllers. Mr. Speaker, the report goes on to say that it is safer for everybody to have all pilots in the air functioning in a language they comprehend, capable of fully understanding instructions addressed to them, and able to give clear and accurate reports of essential flight information.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, this sentence admirably sums up our position concerning bilingualism in air traffic control; we are happy to see that the commission in its interim report states identical principles as those we, in our party, have sustained for quite a long time.

* * *

[English]

REPRESENTATION AND ELECTORAL DISTRICTS READJUSTMENT ACT (ONTARIO)

MEASURE RESPECTING READJUSTMENT OF ONTARIO ELECTORAL DISTRICTS

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board) moved for leave to introduce Bill C-60, to readjust the representation of Ontario in the House of Commons and to readjust the electoral districts in Ontario.

Mr. Peters: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. The hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre is not able to be here today. However, he wanted it brought to the attention of the House, and I agree with him, that this bill is not being introduced by the responsible minister. We do not want to block the bill, but we do want to bring to Your Honour's attention the past practice with regard to reasonable doubt and other considerations not being within the purview of the minister's responsibility. In this case the bill should be in the name of the President of the Privy Council rather than that of the President of the Treasury Board. I want to make that notation with respect to the introduction of this bill.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre did raise that point at an earlier date and the Chair has been made aware of it. We have attempted to give it some study. There is no indication, in our review, that it is a point of such sufficient gravity that it should prevent the introduction of the bill. However, it does raise some rather interesting long-range problems on the question of ministerial responsibility. The point is well noted. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the said motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

[Translation]

Mr. Caouette (Villeneuve): Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Villeneuve (Mr. Caouette), on a point of order.

Mr. Caouette (Villeneuve): Mr. Speaker, as a member from Quebec I feel obliged today to refuse that the bill be read for the first time now. If I may, I should like to say why I object.

First, the bill infringes upon the privileges of hon. members from the province of Quebec who are less numerous than those from Ontario who will be even more numerous, without Quebec getting an equitable adjustment. In my opinion, all Quebec members in this House should rise against the introduction of this bill which infringes upon their privileges and we say if Ontario has one more seat, let Quebec have one more as well.

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I was prepared to permit the hon. member a brief point of order to indicate to the Chair his intention to take a position with respect to the bill. If it had gone on any longer, I would have considered it to be a speech on the motion itself. It is extraordinary to have a motion for first reading opposed. Therefore, I intended to allow the hon. member some latitude in order to indicate his position to the House. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the said motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Caouette (Villeneuve): No.

Mr. Speaker: May I record that as being carried on division?

Motion agreed to, bill read the first time and ordered to be printed.

Mr. Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I draw Your Honour's attention to some remarks made last night by myself in response to a question on the "late show" brought forward by the hon. member for Ottawa-Carleton.

[Translation]

As you can see, the French translation, at page 7459 of Hansard does not reflect the spirit of what I said in English, at least of some terms I used in my speech. I admit that it is difficult to translate technical terms and I would like to draw your attention, Mr. Speaker, to the fact that "commercial taxes" and "business taxes" are not necessarily synonymous. With your permission, I would like to get in touch with the officials of the reporting service or the Bureau for Translation and ask them to correct at least six words which substantially alter the meaning of the speech I made in English last night.

[English]

Mr. Speaker: The point raises a consideration with respect to the translators. With technical answers of this sort, often there is some advance preparation of the answer. In the circumstances, it is most helpful. Perhaps it does not occur to hon. members, and I speak of members on both side of the House, that where the translation of technical language is concerned members might want to give consideration to providing in advance a text in both official languages, if in fact an answer has been prepared, in order to assist in the translation of the technical language. That is a consideration that members may wish to keep in mind.

* * *

TRANSPORT

PRESENTATION OF PETITION RESPECTING PASSENGER TRAIN SERVICE

Mr. John Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition on behalf of some 3,000 Capreol area residents expressing their objection to the "Preferred plan for western transcontinental passenger train service" by the Canadian Transport Commission. The plan will, if implemented, mean a very substantial loss of jobs and services not only in the Capreol area but throughout northern Ontario. The petitioners call on parliament to provide for further studies of the social and economic impact on northern Ontario of the implementation of this preferred plan, and to provide assurances that people in the Capreol area will not find their livelihood threatened by the reduction of passenger train service.

[Mr. Caouette (Villeneuve).]

• (1230)

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

Mr. Ross Milne (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Communications): The following questions will be answered today: Nos. 2,651 to 2,716, inclusive.

[Text]

EMPLOYEES BY DEPARTMENTS AND CATEGORIES

Question No. 2,651—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the AI-7 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the AI-7 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows: AI-7: Department or Agency: MOT, (a) 1976, 81; (b) 1974, 51.

---

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

Footnotes to Questions 2,651-2,716

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

(2) SOURCE: Senior Executive and Equivalent, Information Sub-System, Treasury Board Secretariat, March 31, 1974 and March 31, 1976 conditions.

(3) SOURCE: Justice Department, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

(4) AV is presumed to be AU, Auditing.

(5) VT is presumed to be UT, University Teaching.

(6) IS-7 non-existent level.

(7) FS-6 non-existent level.

(8) Data are collected quarterly and therefore they are not available for April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 and instead March 31 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 data has been substituted.

Department or Agency Codes: AGR, Agriculture Canada; AIB, Anti-Inflation Board; ARC, Public Archives; AUD, Auditor General's Office; BGC, Board of Grain Commissioners; BPA, Bureau of Pensions Advocates; CAE, Revenue Canada, Customs and Excise; CCA, Consumer and Corporate Affairs; CDC, Canadian Dairy Commission; CEO, Chief Electoral Officer; CGC, Canadian Grain Commission; CGE, Canadian Government Grain Elevators; CIC, Canadian Intergovernmental Conference Secretariat; CLR, Canada Labour Relations Board; COL, Commissioner of Official Languages; COM, Department of Communications; CPC, Canadian Pension Commission; CSM, Metric Commission; CTC, Canadian Transport Commission; DND, National Defence Department; DOE, Environment Canada; DPW, Public Works Department; DSS, Supply and Services Canada; DVA, Veterans Affairs Department; DVL, Veterans Land Administration; EMR, Energy, Mines and Resources; ENR, National Energy Board; ESR, Energy Supplies Allocation Board; EXC, Federal Court of Canada; EXT, External Affairs Department; FIN, Finance Department; FIR, Foreign Investment Review Agency; FPR, Federal-Provincial Relations Office; GGS, Governor General; HER, Heritage Canada; IAB, Immigration Appeal Board; IAN, Department of Indian and Northern Affairs; IDA, Canadian International Development Agency; IJC, International Joint Commission; INC, Information Canada; INS, Insurance Department; ITC, Industry, Trade and Commerce; JUS, Justice Department; LAB, Labour Canada; LFB, Canadian Livestock Feed Board; LRC, Law Reform Commission; MID, Manpower and Immigration; MOT; Transport Canada; MST, Ministry of State for Science and Technology; NCC, National Capital Commission; NHW, Health and Welfare Canada; NLI, National Library; NMC, National Museums of Canada; NPB, National Parole Board; OPM, Prime Minister's Office; PCO, Privy Council Office; PEB, Pension Review Board; PEN, Canadian Penitentiary Service; POD, Post Office Department; PSC, Public Service Commission; RCM, Royal Canadian Mounted Police; REA, Prairie Farm Rehabilitation Administration; REE, Department of Regional Economic Expansion; RTC, Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission, RTP, Restrictive Trade Practices Commission; SEC, Secretary of State Department; SOL, Ministry of Solicitor General; STC, Statistics Canada; SUC, Supreme Court of Canada; TAR, Tariff Board; TAX, Revenue Canada, Taxation; TBD, Treasury Board Secretariat; TCB, Textile and Clothing Board; TXB, Tax Review Board; UAH, Ministry of State for Urban Affairs; UIC, Unemployment Insurance Commission; WVB, War Veterans Allowance Board.

Question No. 2,652—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the SX-4 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): Data are collected quarterly and therefore they are not available for April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 and instead March 31 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 data has been substituted. The number of persons employed at the SX-4 level on March 31 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

SX-4[8]

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
AUD	1	1
DOE		1
FIN	3	3
FPR	1
ITC	1	1
MOT	2	2
PCO		2
REE	1
TBD		1

[2] SOURCE: Senior Executive and Equivalent, Information Sub-System, Treasury Board Secretariat, March 31, 1974 and March 31, 1976 conditions.

[8] Data are collected quarterly and therefore they are not available for April 30(a) 1976 (b) 1974 and instead March 31 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 data has been substituted.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,653—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the SX-3 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): Data are collected quarterly and therefore they are not available for April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 and instead March 31 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 data has been substituted. The number of persons employed at the SX-3 level on March 31 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

SX-3[8]

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
AGR	5	3
CAE	2	3
CCA	3	3
COL	1	1
COM	5	4
DND	4	5
DOE	8	9
DPW	6	5
DSS	5	5
DVA	1	2
EMR	3	5
EXT	1	1
FIN	7	2
FIR	1
FPR	1
IAN	6	6
IDA	3	2
INC	1	1
INS	1	1
ITC	7	6
LAB	3	2
MID	8	7
MOT	12	7
MST	4	3
NHW	9	6
PCO	5	2
POD	4	3
PSC	3	5
REA		1
REE	5	5
RTC	1
SEC	3	2
SOL	1	1
STC	4	5
TAX	3	3

Order Paper Questions

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
TBD	14	8
UAH		2
UIC	5	4

---

(2) SOURCE: Senior Excecutive and Equivalent, Information Sub-System, Treasury Board Secretariat, March 31, 1974 and March 31, 1976 conditions.

(8) Data are collected quarterly and therefore they are not available for April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 and instead March 31 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 data has been substituted.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,654—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the SX-2 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): Data are collected quarterly and therefore they are not available for April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 and instead March 31 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 data has been substituted. The number of persons employed at the SX-2 level on March 31 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

SX-2(8)

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
AGR	5	6
ARC	1	1
AUD	6	3
CAE	8	5
CCA	8	6
CEO	1	1
CIC		1
CLR	1	1
COM	7	3
CTC	4	4
DND	3	4
DOE	26	9
DPW	17	13
DSS	19	14
DVA	4	5
EMR	19	15
ENR	4	2
EXT	2	3
FIN	15	14
FIR	2
FPR	2
IAN	11	7
IDA	2	2
IJC	2	1
INC	1	1
INS	1
ITC	25	21
LAB	5	3
MID	16	9
MOT	20	7
MST	7	3
NHW	13	13
NMC	3
NPB	1
PCO	5	7
PEN	3	2
POD	7	7
PSC	6	3
REA		2
REE	19	8
RTC	2	2
SEC	5	1
SOL	3	3
STC	11	13
TAR	1
TAX	12	5
TBD	32	12
UAH	4	3
UIC	8	4

---

(2) SOURCE: Senior Executive and Equivalent, Information Sub-System, Treasury Board Secretariat, March 31, 1974 and March 31, 1976 conditions.

(8) Data are collected quarterly and therefore they are not available for April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 and instead March 31 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 data has been substituted.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,665—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the SX-1 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): Data are collected quarterly and therefore they are not available for April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 and instead March 31 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 data has been substituted. The number of persons employed at the SX-1 level on March 31 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

SX-1(8)

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
AGR	10	8
AIB	1
ARC	1
AUD	8	1
BGC		1
CAE	12	16
CCA	19	14
CDC	1	1

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
CEO	2
COL	2	2
COM	17	16
CTC	10	6
DND	16	15
DOE	29	28
DPW	21	22
DSS	34	33
DVA	8	8
EMR	6	3
ENR	3	1
ESR	2
EXT	4	5
FIN	6	7
FIR	3
FPR	2
GGS		1
IAN	40	28
IDA	20	13
IJC		1
INC	4	5
ITC	39	33
LAB	5	4
MID	31	25
MOT	42	49
MST	11	9
NCC	4	5
NHW	32	27
NMC	1	1
NPB		1
PCO	11	14
PEN	7	3
POD	24	17
PSC	15	12
REE	11	14
RTC	3	3
SEC	14	13
SOL	6	5
STC	11	9
SUC	1	1
TAX	16	15
TBD	41	44
TCB		1
UAH	10	8
UIC	16	14

[2] SOURCE: Senior Executive and Equivalent, Information Sub-System, Treasury Board Secretariat. March 31, 1974 and March 31, 1976 conditions.

[8] Data are collected quarterly and therefore they are not available for April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 and instead March 31 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 data has been substituted.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,656—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the ES-4 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the ES-4 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

ES-4

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
AGR	12	9
BGC		1
CCA	10	8
CDC	1
CGC	1
COM	3	5
CTC	11	7
DOE	20	9
DSS	2
EMR	20	6
ENR	8	4
FIN	32	29
FIR	2
FPR	1
IAN	7	5
IDA	1	2
INC		1
ITC	14	10
LAB	2	3
MID	19	13
MOT	8	5
NHW	12	11
PCO	3
POD	1	2
PSC	1	1
REA	1
REE	11	13
SEC	4	2
SOL	3	1
STC	57	43
TAR	1
TAX	1	1
TBD	15	4
TCB		1
UAH	12	6

[1] SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,657—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the ES-3 level?

Order Paper Questions

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the ES-3 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 1974 by each department follows:

ES-3

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
AGR	30	23
AIB	1
CAE	1
CCA	9	10
CDC	1	1
CGC	2
CLR		1
COL	1
COM	8	6
CTC	16	5
DND	1	1
DOE	46	30
DPW	1
DSS	5	3
EMR	17	20
ENR	16	9
ESR	1
FIN	28	21
FIR	5
IAN	22	7
IDA	4	2
ITC	11	15
LAB	9	10
LFB	1	1
MID	23	23
MOT	26	14
MCC	1
NHW	49	22
PCO	3
POD	5	3
REA	2
REE	32	33
RTC	2	1
SEC	4	2
SOL	2
STC	144	105
TAR	7	7
TAX	3
TBD	5	10
UAH	10	9
UIC	5	2

---

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

[Mr. Orlikow.]

Question No. 2,658—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the ES-2 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the ES-2 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

ES-2

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
AGR	70	41
AIB	3
BGC		2
CAE	3
CCA	21	9
CDC	1	1
COM	25	20
CTC	41	30
DOE	69	56
DPW	3	1
DSS	2	4
EMR	48	38
ENR	16	14
ESR	4
EXT	3	2
FIN	82	67
FIR	10
FPR	1
IAN	41	31
IDA	6	3
ITC	26	28
LAB	20	18
LFB	1
MID	61	46
MOT	43	32
MST	2
NCC	2	2
NHW	55	40
NPB	1	1
PCO	1
PEN	2	1
POD	9	5
PSC	1	1
RCM	1
REA	1
REE	37	16
RTC	5	4
SEC	9	1
SOL	9	3
STC	254	209
TAX	2	1
TBD	28	10
UAH	7	9
UIC	19	5

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,659—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the AG-6 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the AG-6 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows: AG-6: Department or Agency: AGR (a) 1976: 7, (b) 1974: 6.

---

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,660—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the TI-8 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the TI-8 level on April 30(a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

TI-8

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
CTC	1	1
DND	3	2
MOT	12	11

---

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,661—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the GT-8 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the GT-8 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

GT-8

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
DND	2	1
DOE	2	2
DSS	3
EXT	1
IAN	3	2
INC		3
ITC	1
NMC	4	2

---

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,662—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the GT-7 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the GT-7 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

GT-7

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
ARC	1
DND	1	1
DOE	2	1
DPW	3	1
DSS	8
EMR	1	1
EXT		1
IAN	12	3
INC		5
MID		1
MOT	11	5
NHW	2	1
NMC	11	5
SEC	1	1
UIC	1

---

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,663—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the IS-7 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the IS-7 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

IS-7

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974[6]
CCA	1
DPW	1

Order Paper Questions

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
DSS	1
FIN	1
ITC	1
LAB	1
NMC	1
PSC	1
SEC	1
STC	1
TAX	1
TBD	1
UAH	1
UIC	1

---

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

(6) IS-7, Non-Existent Level.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

● (0000)

Question No. 2,664—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the IS-6 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the IS-6 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

IS-6

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
AGR	2
CAE	2
CCA	2	1
DOE	1
DSS	1	1
DVA	1
EMR	2	1
EXT	2
GGS	1
IAN	2	1
IDA	1	1
ITC	3	1
JUS	1
LAB	1
MID	5
MOT	3
NHW	4	1
NMC	1
PCO	1
PEN	1
POD	1	2
REE	1
SEC		1
SOL	1
STC	2	1
TBD		1
UAH		1
UIC		1

---

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,665—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the FS-6 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): (7) FS-6, Non-Existent Level.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,666—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the FS-5 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the FS-5 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows: FS-5: Department or Agency: EXT (a) 1976: 17, (b) 1974: 9.

---

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada. April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,667—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the FS-4 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the FS-4 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

FS-4

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
EXT	43	43
ITC	20	12

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,668—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the FS-3 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the FS-3 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

FS-3

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
EXT	135	136
ITC	68	61
MID	23	14

---

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,669—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the FS-2 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the FS-2 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

FS-2

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
EXT	189	178
ITC	114	85
MID	73	86

---

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,670—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the FI-7 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the FI-7 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

FI-7

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
AGR	1	1
CAE	1	1
CCA	1
COM		1
DND	2	1
DOE	2	1
DPW	1	1
DSS	11	7
EMR	1	1
FIN	1	1
IAN	3	4
IDA	1	1
ITC	3	4
MID	1
MOT	6	3
NHW	3	4
NMC	1
POD	3	3
PSC	1
RCM	1	1
RTC	1
SEC	2
TAX		2
TBD	19	18
UAH	1	1
UIC	1

---

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,671—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the FI-6 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons emloyed at the FI-6 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

FI-6

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
AGR	2
CAE	2	1
CCA	1	1
COM	1
CPC	1	1
CTC	2	2
DND	8	3
DOE	4	3
DPW	4	4
DSS	24	27
DVA	4	2
EMR	1	1

Order Paper Questions

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
EXT	1	1
FIN		1
IAN	6	2
IDA		1
INC		1
ITC	2	2
MID	4
MOT	12	11
NCC	1	1
NHW	5	6
PEN	3
POD	5	5
REE	1	1
RTC		1
SEC	1
SOL	1
TBD	15	18
UIC	2	2

---

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,672—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the WP-7 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the WP-7 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

WP-7

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
AGR		1
DVA	1	1
IAN	7	12
NHW	2	3
NPB	7
PEN	4	2
PSC		2
SOL	2

---

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,673—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the WP-6 level?

[Mr. Andras.]

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the WP-6 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

WP-6

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
DVA	4	3
IAN	3	5
NPB	11	4
PEN	3	4

---

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,674—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the SI-7 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the SI-7 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

SI-7

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
ARC	1	1
DOE	1	1
DVL		1
ENR		1
FIR	1
IAN	1	1
LAB		6
MID	1
MOT	1	3
RTC	2	2
STC	10	8

---

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,675—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the CO-4 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the CO-4 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

CO-4

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
AGR	1	2
CAE	1	1
COM	1	1
DND	3
DPW	2	1
DSS	15	14
EMR	2	2
IAN	1	1
IDA		1
ITC	1	1
LAB	1	1
MID	1	1
MOT	2	2
NHW	1	1
PSC	1	1
REE	1	1
STC	2	4
TAX	8	7
TBD	1	1
UAH	1
UIC	1	1

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,676—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the CO-3 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the CO-3 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

CO-3

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
AGR	3	2
AIB	2
CCA	17	4
COM	6	4
CSM	4
DND	1
DOE	5	2
DSS	2
EMR	2	1
FIN	1
FIR	13
IAN	22	15
INS	12	12
ITC	167	139
MID	1
MOT	1
PSC		1
REA	8	3
REE	120	40
RTC	5	4

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,677—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the CO-2 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the CO-2 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

CO-2

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
AGR	10
CCA	36	16
COM		3
CSM	22
DOE	5	6
DPW	1
DSS	2	1
FIN		1
FIR	13
IAN	68	44
INS	39	20
ITC	408	436
JUS	1	1
MID	1
MOT	1
REA	6	8
REE	97	68
RTC	9	6
TBD	1	3
UAH		1

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,678—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the AS-8 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the AS-8 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

AS-8

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
AGR	2	1
ARC	1	2
CAE	2
CCA		1
CLR	1
COL	8
COM	2	3
CTC	1	2
DND	11	9
DOE	10	5
DPW	36	28
DSS	23	23
EMR	2	1
ENR	1	1
EXT	6	5
FIN	1	1
GGS	2	1
IAN	3	1
ITC	2	1
JUS	2	2
LAB	3	1
MID	8	5
MOT	14	4
MST	1	1
NCC	1	1
NHW	4	2
NMC	1	1
OPM	1
PCO		1
PEN	10	3
POD	4	5
PSC	5	3
REE		1
RTC	3	3
SEC	3
SOL	3
STC	1
TAX	2
TBD	32	21
UIC	2

---

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada. April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,679—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the AS-7 level?

[Mr. Andras.]

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the AS-7 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

AS-7

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
AGR	2	2
ARC	4	1
CAE	3	2
CCA		1
CIC		1
CLR		1
COL	7	6
COM	6	2
CTC	2	2
DND	22	17
DOE	16	14
DPW	29	28
DSS	15	10
DVA	3	3
DVL	1	1
EMR	1
ENR	1	1
EXC	1	1
EXT	2	2
FIN	1	1
IAB	1	1
IAN	12	12
IJC	1	1
INS	1
ITC	1	1
LAB	1
MID	14	16
MOT	31	17
MST	12	11
NHW	8	7
NMC	1
PCO	1	1
PEN	4	2
POD	10	13
PSC	7	1
REA	2	1
REE	3	1
SEC	4	4
SOL	1
STC	1
TAX	4	4
TBD	51	34
UAH		1
UIC	5	6

---

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada. April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,680—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the CS-5 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the CS-5 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

CS-5

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
AGR	1	2
CAE	1	1
COM	1	1
DND	3
DPW	2	1
DSS	15	14
EMR	2	2
IAN	1	1
IDA		1
ITC	1	1
LAB	1	1
MID	1	1
MOT	2	2
NHW	1	1
PSC	1	1
REE	1	1
STC	2	4
TAX	8	7
TBA	1	1
UAH	1
UIC	1	1

---

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada. April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,681—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the TR-6 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the TR-6 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows: Department or Agency: SEC. (a) 1976: 4. (b) 1974: 2.

---

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada. April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,682—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the TR-5 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the TR-5 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

TR-5

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
PCO	1
SEC	16	9

---

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada. April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,683—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the TR-4 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the TR-4 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

TR-4

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
PSC	1
SEC	78	60

---

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada. April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,684—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the ES-5 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the ES-5 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

ES-5

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
AGR	5	5
CCA	4	2
COM	2	2
CTC	2	1
DOE	4	5
EMR	3	3
ENR		1
FIN	2	2
IAN		1
ITC	3	4
MID	2	4

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
MOT	2	3
MST	1	2
NHW	2	2
REA	1
REE	2	4
SEC		1
SOL	1
STC	28	35
TAR		1
TBD	1	3

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,685—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the AC-3 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the AC-3 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

AC-3

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
INS	5	5
UIC	1	2

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,686—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the AC-2 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the AC-2 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

AC-2

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
INS	5	2
UIC	1

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,687—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the PS-5 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the PS-5 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

PS-5

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
PEN	1
PSC	1	2

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,688—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the LS-6 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the LS-6 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

LS-6

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
AGR		1
DOE	1	1
NLI	3	2

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,689—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the HR-5 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the HR-5 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

HR-5

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
ARC	1	1
DND	1	1

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
IAN	1	1
NMC	3	5

---

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,690—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the AV-7 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The AV group is presumed to be the AU group, Auditing. The number of persons employed at the AU-7 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows: AV-7(4): Department or Agency: TAX (a) 1976: 8, (b) 1974: 7.

---

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

(4) AV is presumed to be AU, Auditing.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

● (0000)

Question No. 2,691—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the AV-6 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The AV group is presumed to be the AU group, Auditing. The number of persons employed at the AU-6 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

AV-6(4)

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
AUD	4	3
CAE		2
DSS	7	5
TAX	18	24

---

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

(4) AV is presumed to be AU, Auditing.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,692—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the AV-5 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The AV group is presumed to be the AU group, Auditing. The number of persons employed at the AU-5 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

AV-5(4)

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
AUD	1
CAE	12	14
DSS	9	5
ENR	1	1
FIN		2
TAX	86	62
TBD		1

---

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

(4) AV is presumed to be AU, Auditing.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,693—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the AR-8 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the AR-8 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

AR-8

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
DND	1	1
DPW	2	3
IAN	1
NCC	2	2
NHW	1	1

---

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,694—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the AR-7 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the AR-7 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

AR-7

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
DND	1	1
DPW	12	9

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
IAN	5	3
MOT	1	2

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,695—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the AR-6 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the AR-6 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

AR-6

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
DND	2	2
DPW	25	18
IAN	7	5
IDA	1
MOT	4	4
NCC	6	5
NHW	2	2
REE		1

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,696—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the AR-5 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the AR-5 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

AR-5

Departement or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
DND	5	4
DOE	1	1
DPW	32	19
DVA		1
IAN	22	10
IDA		1
MOT	11	12
NCC	6	4
NHW	1
PEN	1
REE		3

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,697—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the CH-6 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the CH-6 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

CH-6

Department of Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
ITC		1
NHW	1	1

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,698—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the CH-5 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the CH-5 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

CH-5

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
DOE	3	3
EMR	1	3
NHW	2	2

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,699—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the VS-6 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the VS-6 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

VS-6

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
AGR	1	3
NHW	1	2

---

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,700—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the VS-5 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the VS-5 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

VS-5

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
AGR	13	10
NHW	6	6

---

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,701—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the VT-7 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The VT group is presumed to be the UT group, University Teaching. The number of persons employed at the UT-7 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows: VT-7(5): Department or Agency: DND (a) 1976: 3, (b) 1974: 1.

---

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

(5) VT is presumed to be UT, University Teaching.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,702—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the VT-6 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The VT group is presumed to be the UT group, University Teaching. The number of persons employed at the UT-6 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows. VT-6(5): Department or Agency: DND (a) 1976: 1, (b) 1974: 1.

---

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

(5) VT is presumed to be UT, University Teaching.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,703—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the VT-5 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The VT group is presumed to be the UT group, University Teaching. The number of persons employed at the UT-5 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows: VT-5(5): Department or Agency: DND (a) 1976: 1. (b) 1974: 1.

---

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

(5) VT is presumed to be UT, University Teaching.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,704—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the VT-4 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The VT group is presumed to be the UT group, University Teaching. The number of persons employed at the UT-4 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows. VT-4(5): Department or Agency: DND. (a) 1976: 50. (b) 1974: 36.

---

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

(5) VT is presumed to be UT, University Teaching.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,705—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the VT-3 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The VT group is presumed to be the UT group, University Teaching. The number of persons employed at the UT-3 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows. VT-3(5): Department or Agency: DND. (a) 1976: 54. (b) 1974: 44.

---

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

(5) VT is presumed to be UT, University Teaching.

Order Paper Questions

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,706—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the PG-6 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the PG-6 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

PG-6

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
AGR	1
DND	6	5
DOE	1	1
DPW	1
DSS	83	80
IAN		6
MOT	1	1
PEN	1	1
POD	1
PSC		1
TBD	2

---

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,707—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the Chief Statistician 1(CST) level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the Chief Statistician 1 (CST) level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

MA CST-1

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
DSS	3	2
ENR	1	2
STC	2
UAH	1

---

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

[Mr. Andras.]

Question No. 2,708—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the Senior Statistician (SRS) level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the Senior Statistician (SRS) level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows. MA SRS-1: Department or Agency: DSS (a) 1976: —, (b) 1974: 1.

---

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,709—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the PE-7 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the PE-7 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

PE-7

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
AGR	2	2
AUD	1
CCA		1
DND	2	1
DPW	1	2
DSS	5	2
EMR		1
FIN	3	1
IAN	1
IJC		1
INC		1
ITC	1
JUS	1	1
LAB	1	1
MOT	4	3
NHW	2	3
NPB	1
PCO	1	1
PEN	1	1
POD	4	4
PSC	17	20
REE	1	1
RTC	1	2
SEC	3	1
SOL		1
STC	1
TAX	4	4
TBD	15	10
UAH		1
UIC	1

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,710—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the PE-6 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the PE-6 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

PE-6

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
AGR	4	3
AIB	1
ARC	1	1
CAE	2	3
CCA	2
COM	1	1
CTC	1	1
DND	7	6
DOE	4	4
DPW	6	5
DSS	9	13
DVA	6	4
EMR	1	1
EXT	1	3
FIN	1	2
IAN	6	6
IDA	2	1
INC		1
ITC	2	1
JUS	1	1
MID	5	4
MOT	10	6
MST		1
NCC	1	1
NHW	5	4
NMC	1
PCO	1
PEN	7
POD	5	9
PSC	45	27
REE	2
SEC	1	2
SOL	2
STC	2	6
TAX	2	1
TBD	22	28
UIC	3	1

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada. April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,711—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the PE-5 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the PE-5 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

PE-5

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
AGR	6	5
ARC	1	1
AUD	1
CAE	8	5
CCA	2	2
CEO		1
COM	2	2
CPC		1
CTC	2	2
DND	10	5
DOE	10	8
DPW	4	8
DSS	9	6
DVA	6	7
EMR	4	7
ENR	1	1
EXT	4	3
FIN	2	1
FIR	1
IAN	11	9
IDA	2	1
ITC	1	3
JUS	2	1
LAB	1	2
MID	4	7
MOT	20	19
NCC	1	2
NHW	8	6
NMC	1
NPB	1
PCO	1	1
PEN	2	8
POD	18	12
PSC	54	57
RCM	1
REA	1	1
REE	1	3
RTC	2	1
SEC		2
SOL		2
STC	2	2

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
TAX	12	10
TBD	23	20
UAH	1	1
UIC	9	8

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada. April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,712—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the LA-3 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the LA-3 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

LA-3

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
CTC	1	1
ENR	1	1
JUS(3)	32	31
RTC	1	1

(1) SOURCE: Master Ouptput Support File, Supply and Services Canada. April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

(3) SOURCE: Justice Department.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,713—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the LA-2 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the LA-2 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

LA-2

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
BPA	19	20
CTC	6	5
ENR	2	1
EXT	2	1
IAN	2	4
JUS(3)	253	212
NHW	1	1
NPB	1	1
RTC	2	1

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada. April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

(3) SOURCE: Justice Department.

NOTE: See also Foonotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,714—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the AO-EPS-3 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the AO-EPS-3 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows: AO EPS-3: Department or Agency: MOT. (a) 1976: 2. (b) 1974: 1.

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,715—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the Statistician 5 (STA) level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the Statistician 5 (STA) level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department follows:

MA STA-5

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
DOE	1
DSS	5	1
ENR		3
MOT	1
POD	4
STC	14	6
UAH	1

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada, April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

Question No. 2,716—Mr. Orlikow:

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the Chief Statistician 2 (CST) level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the Chief Statistician 2 (CST) level on April 30 (a) 1976 9b) 1974 by each department follows:

MA CST-2

Department or Agency	(a) 1976	(b) 1974
DSS		1
ENR		1
STC	1	1

(1) SOURCE: Master Output Support File, Supply and Services Canada. April 30, 1974 and April 30, 1976 conditions.

NOTE: See also Footnotes 1 to 8 and appendix attached to Question No. 2,651 answered this day.

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Shall the remaining questions be allowed to stand?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[Translation]

CANADA PENSION PLAN

AMENDMENT TO EXTEND DEFINITIONS

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of National Health and Welfare) moved that Bill C-49, to amend the Canada Pension Plan, be read the third time and do pass.

He said: Mr. Speaker, in speaking to Bill C-49, I want to thank all hon. members who participated in the debate on second reading and in the discussions of the Standing Committee on Health, Welfare and Social Affairs.

As I have noted on several occasions, the two major amendments contained in Bill C-49, represent a historical change to the CPP, one of Canada's largest social security programs, by taking a major step towards recognizing the work of a spouse in the home.

The provision to split CPP pension credits on marriage dissolution will provide protection for the spouse who works in the home when it is most needed. The special child-rearing drop-out will protect the CPP benefits earned by persons who leave the labour force to raise young children. These amendments go a long way towards the objectives of providing recognition and financial security under the CPP for spouses who work at home while retaining the compulsory, contributory, earnings related characteristics of the CPP. I must remind the House that these amendments have been approved, indeed proposed, by the Canada Pension Plan Advisory Committee and the Advisory Council on the Status of Women. Moreover, the proposals, except the second one, have been endorsed by the provinces. The second proposal has been approved by nine of the provinces, the only exception being the Ontario government.

In the deliberations of the committee a week or so ago, a question was raised as to whether the special CPP child-rearing drop-out would maintain equity between groups of beneficiaries. It was suggested that the provision would constitute a subsidy to parents who are relatively well off financially since only in these families could the mother, or father, afford to drop out of the labour force to raise young children. However, it is not at all that clear-cut, since so many factors determine whether or not a person leaves the labour force to raise young children. For example, single mothers who are unable to find work would benefit from this provision, as would parents of large families where the cost of providing alternative care for the children prevents the mother from returning to paid employment.

Other factors which enter into the decision of whether to work in or outside of the home are job opportunities, availability of day care facilities, career aspirations, personal convictions as to the preferred method of child-rearing and so on. As you can see, Mr. Speaker, it is not possible to identify any specific group of contributors who would benefit from the special child-rearing drop-out provision. Consequently, it cannot be said that the provision would lead to subsidies for any particular income class.

[English]

Another question raised in committee related to the provision of the CPP coverage for family workers. Under the current provisions, a spouse who is employed by his or her spouse in a family business cannot contribute to the CPP. Some members suggested that income splitting between the two spouses should be permitted in these situations so as to allow both spouses to contribute to the CPP.

First, I should note that this matter relates to part I of the CPP which falls under the jurisdiction of the Minister of National Revenue. Since the Department of National Revenue was assigned the responsibility for collecting CPP contributions, the provisions in the CPP which deal with coverage and contributions were of necessity tied to the Income Tax Act. Under that act, where one spouse is working for the other in an unincorporated family business, all the income is declared by one spouse and only one spouse contributes to the CPP. This, as hon. members know, is necessary under a system of progressive tax rates to prevent such couples from dividing income to pay less income tax; otherwise these couples would enjoy a very special advantage over other married couples, as well as single persons.

Similarly, to allow both spouses working in an unincorporated family business to contribute to the CPP would be to confer a very special advantage to a very specific group of persons. As well, it could be viewed as tantamount to permitting voluntary CPP contributions for a particular group of persons since there would likely be a strong element of personal discretion involved in "assigning" earnings to each of the two spouses. Such a provision would also be considered as inequitable vis-à-vis all one-wage-earner couples where the wage earner is not in a position to divide his or her earnings with the other spouse. In fact, such a measure could be viewed as unfair by all couples where the incomes of the two spouses differ significantly.

[Translation]

However, I must emphasize that the proposed provision to split CPP pension credits on marriage dissolution is intended to recognize marriage as an economic as well as a social partnership towards which both spouses contribute whether they work together in a family business, whether they have separate jobs or whether one spouse works at home while the other works in paid employment. This provision would ensure that each spouse retains a fair share of joint assets towards which they both contributed during marriage.

[English]

Another point raised during discussion was the question of voluntary contributions for spouses at home. This matter was studied extensively by the Advisory Council on the Status of Women and by the CPP advisory committee at my request a few years ago. I have tabled the reports provided by these bodies. The subject has also been studied by members of the committee on national health and welfare. I am sure members will have given their attention to those two reports.

Miss MacDonald: They don't impress me.

Mr. Lalonde: Both reports have recommended against such a proposal. I should like to take a minute or so to go into this matter, since I know it is of interest to hon. members. There is one solution which appears to be attractive at first sight. Indeed, one wonders why it should not be applied. It is only when the subject is studied more carefully that one finds many drawbacks and difficulties attached to such a proposal. The present objective basis for determining the extent of a contributor's coverage under the plan—namely, his earnings—could not be applied to the voluntary participant, so alternate criteria would have to be developed for the housewife. If a limit were to be applied to a housewife's contributions, how would this be defined: in terms of an absolute amount, a percentage of her husband's earnings, or some other factor? Also, how would the employer's share be determined in this case; and who would pay it?

● (1240)

In addition, major changes would have to be made to the more attractive provisions that arise from the compulsory features of the plan. If this were not done, and if voluntary contributors were allowed to determine the extent of their participation, they could, for literally a few cents a year, generate full orphans' benefits and surviving spouse pensions equal to about 40 per cent of maximum levels after three years' contributions; become eligible for disability pensions equal to about 30 per cent of maximum levels after five years' contribution; and at retirement they would become eligible for 10 per cent retirement pensions.

The most important considerations, however, are issues involving basic social equity, the future operation of the Canada Pension Plan, and private insurance and pension plans. These issues may be summarized as follows: first, if housewives are allowed to participate in the Canada Pension Plan on a voluntary basis, this option would tend to favour wives in families having the willingness and financial ability to participate. Wives in lower income families would have an extremely limited capacity to take advantage of such an opportunity.

Second, can the needs of wives at home be considered separate and apart from those of other individuals who undergo long periods of no earnings because of unemployment, ill health, extended education and other reasons?

Third, if housewives with no earnings are permitted to contribute to the Canada Pension Plan on a voluntary basis, should any provision for voluntary participation be extended to housewives with part-time earnings, and other part-time and low income workers?

Fourth, if an opportunity were extended to some, or all, wage earners to supplement their Canada Pension Plan coverage on a voluntary basis, a situation would be created whereby wage earners could transfer their coverage under private pension plans to the Canada Pension Plan. The differences in funding arrangements between the Canada Pension Plan and private plans would provide a substantial incentive for many to make such transfers. If this were done on a large scale, it could seriously undermine the position of private pension plans.

Fifth, actuarial reports which the government has tabled in parliament from time to time indicate that the financial provisions of the Canada Pension Plan will have to be reviewed at some future date. If such a future review should lead to an increase in contribution rates, would volunteer participants be allowed to reduce or withdraw their participation? If this were permitted, the increased costs of the pension credits accumulated by the volunteer participants would be passed on to the participants who are required to contribute to the plan on a compulsory basis.

The equity of such an arrangement could be the subject of serious criticism if the bulk of volunteer participants came from higher income families, and if large numbers of compulsory participants were comprised of low wage earners. These consequences could be avoided if volunteer participants, once allowed to participate, were required to maintain their participation or, if allowed to reduce or withdraw their participation, were required to accept a reduction in the value of their accumulated pension credits. Such alternatives, however, would likely be considered as acts of bad faith on the part of the government.

Voluntary coverage for housewives is an alternative which might appear attractive on the surface, and I must say that I, like many others, was very attracted by the subject before studying it. However, it does raise some very difficult issues for which answers are not readily apparent. This is why I asked two independent advisory bodies, like the Advisory Council on the Status of Women and the Canada Pension Plan Advisory Committee, to study the matter extensively and to produce a report, which as I have said before I have made public. Both reports rejected the notion and concept of voluntary contributions to the Canada Pension Plan and, in effect, every provincial minister around the table with whom we discussed the matter rejected this approach to amending the Canada Pension Plan at the present time.

I remember that the former member for Vancouver-Kingsway, a very remarkable woman, made a great contribution in this House to the cause of women and social equity. She studied the question extensively herself, and during the last few meetings that we had while she was sitting in the House—this is reported in the debates of the parliamentary committee studying the matter at the time—she indicated, having examined the matter extensively for several years, that she had come to the conclusion that the Canada Pension Plan was probably not the proper vehicle to achieve such a purpose. I think it is a tribute to the sense of fairness, perceptiveness and knowledge of this eminent lady that she herself had come to that particular conclusion.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, may I recall to the House that the Canada Pension Plan Act requires that the endorsation of provinces with at least two-thirds the population be obtained to amend the act. We have been able to obtain the endorsement of all the provinces to the first major proposal contained in this bill, and the province of Quebec is amending its plan in a parallel way to the proposals contained in this bill. As a matter of fact, the second proposal is one which was initiated at the beginning by the province of Quebec and endorsed by all other provinces except Ontario.

In view of the difficulties we have had with the provinces and between the provinces in arriving at a consensus on the amendments before us, one can imagine the almost insurmountable difficulties that would arise in the sense that there would be no support at all from provincial governments for an amendment dealing with the voluntary contribution of spouses at home at the present time. It would appear that the Advisory Council on the Status of Women was very concerned about this particular issue and is continuing to examine it further to ascertain what are the most appropriate solutions to the type of questions raised in terms of social equity and justice, and also in terms of ensuring equity and fairness particularly to women in society. They have come to the conclusion, after having studied the matter quite independently and objectively, that this technique of voluntary contribution was not the appropriate one to achieve this particular purpose.

These are the comments that I wanted to make, Mr. Speaker, as we consider third reading of this bill. May I thank hon. members both in committee and in the House on second reading for having supported the bill, and I thank all opposition parties for endorsing the provisions contained in the bill.

[Translation]

I also want to thank hon. members for the constructive suggestions advanced in committee related to rectifying errors in a person's contributory period. My department will explore, in cooperation with the Department of National Revenue, the alternative ways in which CPP contributors could be informed of their right to receive statements of their contributory records.

In conclusion, I might note that Bill C-49 also contains a few smaller amendments which will enhance the operations of the CPP and provide fairer treatment of contributors under the plan. I am thinking here, in particular, of the provision to pay retroactive CPP retirement pensions to contributors under age 70 and the removal of the current limitations on benefits payable to orphans and to dependent children of disabled CPP contributors. Mr. Speaker, I thank hon. members for their considerate attention and I hope the bill will be supported by all parties.

[English]

Miss Flora MacDonald (Kingston and the Islands): Mr. Speaker, this bill has been before the House and the committee for a relatively short period of time. Therefore, I welcome this opportunity to take part in a debate concerning its provisions. I am particularly pleased to hear the remarks of the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Lalonde) and to follow him in the comments I wish to make. As he has said, Bill C-49, an act to amend the Canada Pension Plan, appears to have the approval of all parties in this House, albeit, as I am sure he will recognize, with some reluctance regarding certain of its provisions. However, I cannot let this occasion pass without registering my deep and abiding anger at this government that once again we are faced with legislation in this House which discriminates against the rights of a certain group of Canadian citizens, namely, women who work in the home.

● (1250)

The minister can sit there and shake his head, indicating that he does not agree with that statement, but I should like to tell him that that is the result of this bill. I recognize the benefits of the bill. I recognize that in a limited fashion it reduces certain inequities, but let me say to the minister that it is a bitter disappointment to those of us whose expectations were raised last fall as we listened to the words of the Speech from the Throne. Those words were misleading, and I remind him what was said at that time:

> You will be asked to consider amendments to the Canada Pension Plan which would further recognize the value of the contribution made to the family and society by both marriage partners, in the event that one remains at home to raise children while their partner works outside the home.

Many of us understood from those words that in amending the provisions of the Canada Pension Plan the government would implement a very fundamental and heretofore totally neglected principle, namely, that women, no matter where they work, are contributors to society and their rights as individuals to contribute to and benefit from the Canada Pension Plan, as indeed from all comprehensive social programs, would be guaranteed under law. Whatever else this bill accomplishes, it does not address itself to that principle. That is what was indicated in the Speech from the Throne.

First of all, I want to make it very clear why I refer to women when dealing with the rights of those who work in the home. I have looked at the most recent statistics and I know they indicate that some 10,000 males list housework as their major occupation, but over 4½ million Canadian women are classified in this category, which is about one-fifth of our total population. While I recognize the contribution of the 10,000 males in this regard, the reality of the situation is that 99.8 per cent of the persons who work in the home are women. My major concern is for this group of people in our society. When the Canada Pension Plan was introduced back in 1964, it set out to provide benefits for contributors. The words of the act read as follows:

—establish a comprehensive program of old age pensions and supplementary benefits in Canada payable to and in respect of contributors.

The key word is "contributors". One particular group of Canadians, women who work in the home and who contribute to the social and economic well being of this country, are not contributors to the Canada Pension Plan, nor are they permitted to be contributors to that plan. They are excluded from that opportunity. We have just heard the Minister of National Health and Welfare say that they are excluded from that opportunity. I ask the minister, is this what he calls social justice in this country? Just recently this House passed a human rights bill. With the following noble words the human rights bill was introduced:

Every individual should have an equal opportunity with other individuals to make for himself or herself the life that he or she is able and wishes to have, consistent with his or her duties and obligations as a member of society, without being hindered in or prevented from doing so by discriminatory practices based on race, national or ethnic origin, colour, religion, age, sex or marital status—

I contend that women who work in the home do not have, in the words of the human rights bill, an equal opportunity with other individuals to make for themselves the life that they are able and wish to have, when they are denied the opportunity to contribute to the Canada Pension Plan.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Miss MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, I will call it one o'clock.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Order, please. It being one o'clock, I do now leave the chair until two o'clock later this day.

At one o'clock the House took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The House resumed at 2 p.m.

Miss MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, at the time of the luncheon adjournment I had been trying to impress upon the minister that women who work in the home do not have, within the terms of the human rights bill, an equal opportunity with other individuals to make for themselves the life that they are able and wish to have, when such persons are denied the opportunity to contribute to the Canada Pension Plan. I contend very strongly that housewives should have this right. It is a principle that should be respected as a right of an individual in our society—a right that is basic to that particular individual and not because the person is attached to another member of our society as some sort of chattel or appendage.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Paproski: Lalonde, you male chauvinist.

Miss MacDonald: She should have the right to contribute, as do all other productive members of society. But at present she is denied that right. Faced with Bill C-49, I have to ask myself whether the intent of the Canada Pension Plan does not, indeed, abuse the principle stated in the human rights bill. Perhaps I go a little too far when I say that the way in which the Canada Pension Plan presently operates violates human rights, but this could be settled definitively if some woman who works in the home would challenge it in the courts. I can tell you, Mr. Speaker, it is my intention to encourage such a woman who does work in the home to take her case to contribute to the Canada Pension Plan to the courts and have it decided in that way.

I would like to say to the minister that in his remarks before the luncheon adjournment I feel that he misrepresented very seriously the position of the former hon. member for Vancouver-Kingsway in her support of the purpose and the principle that I have been stating.

Mr. McGrath: Shame on you.

Miss MacDonald: In consideration of this bill during second reading and in committee, there were two matters that struck me. The first was the matter of voluntary contributions to the Canada Pension Plan by persons working in the home. That subject was raised during debate on second reading, it was raised in committee, and it was dealt with here by the minister, with lack of sensitivity. I know that he said he found the proposal to be attractive on the surface, but that is the whole problem. The minister looks at this in a superficial way. He passed it off—would not deal with it himself—to the Advisory Council on the Status of Women.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Paproski: Just listen—écoutez.

Mr. McGrath: How are you going to defend this on the hustings?

Miss MacDonald: The minister referred the matter, since he could not come to grips with it himself, to the Advisory Council on the Status of Women and, as he stated, for certain reasons they rejected it. I must say that I have read their report and I am deeply disappointed in their findings. I have not been persuaded by any of their arguments. The reasons and objections they set out—as were the ones that the minister put forward this morning—had to do with the mechanics of making voluntary contributions operative, rather than with the justice of the case.

Mr. McGrath: It is an elitist report.

Miss MacDonald: I know, as well, that during the committee hearings a departmental officer, a bureaucrat, rejected the proposal. She intoned that the persons likely to contribute voluntarily are only those who can afford to, and that the payments may become prohibitive, particularly for low income families. What I would like to know is, on what basis, on what data, did that bureaucrat make her judgment? How does she or anyone else, including the minister, know what any group of persons would do if given a choice? How did that bureaucrat know, and how does the minister know, that some woman presently in a low income bracket, whose work is in the home, if given the opportunity would not choose to put her few dollars into a pension plan with the expectation that her later years would be financially more secure? What right has any bureaucrat to dismiss arbitrarily or, indeed, what right has the government and the minister to pre-empt the right of choice of hundreds of thousands of Canadians who are making as vital a contribution to this society as do women who work in the home? What right has the minister to pre-empt that choice?

• (1410)

Mr. McGrath: None, and they make a bigger contribution than most.

Miss MacDonald: I realize that there may be difficulties in implementing such voluntary contributions. I am not denying that. Certainly inequities may arise, but difficulties and inequities should not stop us; rather, they should challenge us to get on with facing up to this question. Surely it is not beyond our capability to redress inequities should they arise. Ways can be found. This bill is an example of measures introduced to correct shortcomings of previous legislation. However, as we have seen so often, it falls far short of what it should be, because the government takes the easy way out. Rarely do we see substantive legislation which comes to grips directly with the existing structures of our society, even though principles to change such structures are reiterated time and again, as they were in last year's throne speech.

The minister, his department and his advisers are so bent on finding obstacles to measures which would accomplish a basic change that they fail to address themselves to the principles they themselves enunciate. There is always difficulty in implementing programs which would achieve the delicate balance of justice for society's members. But to accomplish something you must have the will to accomplish it, and what is evident in this series of housekeeping measures—measures which merely tinker with the structures we now have in place—is that this government lacks the political will to tackle a basic change. As a result of the assumption that it is too difficult to implement measures to make substantive changes which would allow for the equitable distribution of benefits, and because the government will not come to grips with this question, one-fifth of our population, or 4.5 million women who work in the home, are denied the opportunity of participating in a pension plan which the rest of society is accorded as its right because of the contribution it makes to the productivity of this country.

Mr. McGrath: To the eternal shame of the minister.

Canada Pension Plan

Miss MacDonald: I would like to remind the minister that doing housework is contributing to the productivity of the country. Recent studies commissioned by Statistics Canada were undertaken by economists at Queen's University. They were finished in May. Those studies estimate the value of housework to be in the vicinity of $60 billion, or over one-third of our gross national product. That is the value placed on work in the home. I do not mean to imply in my remakrs that because they do not have an opportunity to contribute to the Canada Pension Plan, women in the home are completely denied benefits under the program. Oh, yes, housewives do get payments. They get survivor benefits. But given the current payments under the plan, survivor benefits for a woman who has chosen to work in the home amount to $109 per month maximum. For her counterpart who has chosen to enter the so-called work force the pension would be $173 per month maximum, fully one-third more.

Let me assure the House that that difference of $66 a month is very important to the recipient. But even more important than the amount is the fact that the homemaker is denied the right to choose to be in the higher benefit range. That is the point I want the minister to recognize, to realize, because this is not the first time the Minister of National Health and Welfare who is also responsible for the status of women, has denied rights to a particular group of women.

Mr. McGrath: He should resign that responsibility forthwith.

Miss MacDonald: Just to take the minister's mind back, in the legislation establishing the spouse's allowance we have the demeaning situation where the older spouse, generally the male, has to give his written consent before the younger spouse, the woman, can collect the spouse's allowance. Has the minister any idea of how degrading and demeaning this is to women? Does he have any idea what it means to women to be relegated to that second-class status? When will he come to a recognition that certain principles which reflect the self-worth of an individual are important because of what they mean in terms of human dignity and not merely in dollar terms?

A second point about this bill which concerns me greatly is the drop-out provision and its long-term financial implications. Questions have already been raised as to its actuarial soundness. They were raised by the hon. member for Hamilton West (Mr. Alexander), and I certainly share my colleague's reservations. But an equally important and overriding consideration is the potential for conflict this provision could cause among groups of women. Tensions could be created as a result of preferential treatment for different groups. The woman who drops out of the work force to raise children will have her Canada Pension Plan payments subsidized during those years. The woman who cannot afford to drop out of the work force for an extended period to raise children is denied such a beneficial subsidy.

However, the woman who chooses to work at home and raise children receives no benefits at all as an individual. She is not even given the right to participate in the plan. This is why I contend that there is a certain insidious discrimination here which makes one group in particular seemingly inferior to others in that rights and benefits are denied them. Knowing that their contribution to the gross national product of this country is indeed significant—as I have stated, $60 billion is the figure which has been attached to it—we can only conclude that housewives are not inferior in contributing to our society, but only in receiving its benefits.

I acknowledge that Bill C-49 would make certain beneficial changes to the Canada Pension Plan, but it will not result in eliminating the major inequity in the plan—its major shortcoming—that of denying to certain individuals the right to contribute to the plan. Until the government faces up to that problem, until it summons enough courage to do so, we will continue to have in this country measures such as this bill which belittle the contribution of women who work in the home.

• (1420)

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, I rise to speak on this subject largely because my colleague, the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles), had to be away from the House for very important reasons. It is not often that happens.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Orlikow: Had he been here, he would certainly have spoken on this bill, as he has spoken on every question relating to pensions that has come up for more than a quarter of a century. We in the New Democratic Party naturally support the basic principles of the Canada Pension Plan. We look upon it as the only pension plan in this country which provides that a person who works is not penalized if and when he or she changes jobs or is laid off, as is the case with private pension plans. In virtually every industrial pension plan the worker who is laid off or who changes jobs suffers a very sharp penalty. He usually gets back only the money he put in, and very often without any interest it may have earned, and almost always does not get the matching contribution which the employer could have been paying into the plan.

The Canada Pension Plan is the only one in Canada that is universal and where the benefits are indexed. That is tremendously important. In recent years the cost of living has increased by 6 per cent to 10 per cent. A person who retires in 1977 may find, if it is not indexed, that by 1982 or 1987 his pension is not sufficient for his needs. Many people have pensions associated with their work, and until about a year ago they had reason to believe they could live their retirement in comparative comfort. The cost of living has gone up so rapidly, however, that if the amount of pension is fixed they often find they cannot even afford to continue living in the house that may have been their home for about 30 years.

A great campaign is being waged at the present time to convince the public that indexed pension plans such as the plan for the federal public service would bankrupt the country. In my opinion, this view is being put about by the insurance companies. We do not believe it is true. We believe this country can afford to index pension plans, as has been done in Germany and Sweden where retiring workers draw something between 60 and 65 per cent of the best five years' earnings as pension. They are indexed either to the cost of living or to the average increase in industrial wages. This party proposed plans such as the Canada Pension Plan long before it was introduced, and of course we support any improvements the government can be persuaded to bring forward.

I have to say, on my own behalf, however, and as the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre said on second reading debate, that while the changes are headed in the right direction, they are of small importance. They will not greatly improve the benefits presently received by people who qualify. The amendments do not recognize the role of the spouse working in the home, nor do they provide any recognition or financial security for the spouse. The minister said he had looked at this question with a good deal of sympathy. He reminded us that the former member for Vancouver-Kingsway, Mrs. MacInnis, always advocated this and said that in her later years he had come to doubt her position.

I am not very impressed with what the minister had to say about the Advisory Committee on the Canada Pension Plan. Mrs. June Menzies, vice-president of the Anti-Inflation Board, was formerly a member of the Advisory Council on the Status of Women and was very vocal and active in matters relating to improvements in the status of women. That was all right as long as she did not have any authority. She said all the right things as long as she was just in an advisory position. But when she went to the Anti-Inflation Board, government policy and directives suddenly had a great deal to do with her decisions on improving the status of women.

At the Health Sciences Centre in Winnipeg a committee was established to look into discrimination against women employees. Management and the union were represented on this committee, which reported that women workers were being paid less per hour than men for doing exactly the same work. It recommended that the jobs be reclassified and the pay for women workers be increased. Union and management negotiated and reached an agreement which brought women much closer to pay equality with men than before. Where the increase in pay for the women was more than it was for the men, however, the Anti-Inflation Board rejected it. The union appealed to the board—after Mrs. Menzies became a member—and the board awarded the women an increase of 25 per cent or less than the union and management agreed upon.

In light of that decision, I do not have much faith in Mrs. Menzies or in the minister's belief in protecting the status of women. These organizations are composed almost exclusively of good Liberals who will not do anything to disturb the wishes of the government. When it comes to a choice of whom will they satisfy, the government or the women we are supposed to represent, I believe—as I think the evidence will prove—that 95 per cent of the time they will come down on the side of the government. So I do not pay too much attention to the supposed views and studies of organizations such as the minister mentioned.

● (1430)

The bill, as we see it, does two things. It provides, in the event of a marriage breakdown, where the marriage has lasted three years or more, that the combined assets of the couple can be split between the parties 50-50. We think it is a good move and support it. The bill also makes a slight change with respect to women contributors. It provides that if a person has been a contributor but stays home a few years to raise children, provided the children are not over the age of seven those years can be dropped from the number of years involved in the calculation of personal retirement benefits—in this case they would usually be payable to a woman—at age 65.

I said earlier these two changes are small in their effect. Because the bill does nothing for women who do not work after marriage but devote their time to bringing up children, it is not overly significant. All our pension legislation, with the exception of the old age security pension legislation, provides for payments to women only in as far as a woman has been married to a man who qualified for a pension under legislation providing for veterans' pensions, CNR pensions, public service pensions or the Canada Pension Plan. There is no provision for paying benefits to women who stay at home, raise children and look after the household. This bill does not recognize their contribution. We think it is wrong. The rationale behind this shortcoming is that the Canada Pension Plan is an employment-related pension plan. We think the minister's statement given earlier today is based on too narrow, too restrictive and too legalistic thinking.

Let me repeat what the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre suggested on second reading of this bill. The hon. member suggested we should provide that every person between the ages which apply in the Canada Pension Plan, namely, the 47-year period between the ages of 18 and 65, who is not employed and not contributing to the Canada Pension Plan should get a certain percentage of credit toward a supplement to his old age security pension, a certain percentage for each year he is not a CPP contributor. Although a specific percentage perhaps is not too important at this time, my colleague suggested that in principle we should think about a 2 per cent per year contribution up to a maximum of 40 years. That would allow a woman to get about 80 per cent of what the Canada Pension Plan pays to those who contributed. If we were to do that, when the couple retires the husband could look forward to receiving the Canada Pension Plan benefits to which he contributed, and old age security, and the wife could look forward to the old age security payment and about 80 per cent of the Canada Pension Plan.

We are going to support the bill, but think the minister needs some new advisers who will be a good deal more innovative and adventuresome in their thinking than his present advisers.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please. I must advise hon. members that if the Chair recognizes the minister, he will automatically close debate on the bill. Is this agreed?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I thank hon. members for the contributions made on behalf of their own parties on this subject. I think all in this House recognize the important contributions housewives make to society. The Statistics Canada study on the subject was designed to show the major contribution which housewives doing voluntary or unpaid work in the home make to our gross national product.

We must stress one point. The Canada Pension Plan has nothing to do with meritorious or non-meritorious work. It is related to the salaries and wages people are paid. The plan operates on the basis of the actual wages or salaries paid, not on the quality or type of work done. The legislation does not give people the right to contribute to the Canada Pension Plan. It creates the obligation to contribute to the Canada Pension Plan. People have no choice except to pay a certain amount of their salary, as determined by law, into the Canada Pension Plan fund.

The hon. member for Kingston and the Islands (Miss MacDonald) raised certain arguments concerning the right to contribute to the plan, but never concentrated on the other aspect of the argument, namely, what is the real nature of the plan? I suggest that aspect should be examined carefully. The hon. member also mentioned the spouse's allowance. I stress that this question relates to whichever spouse is the older. The reason for written consent is that the person who has a direct and full right to an old age security pension could see his or her pension reduced by the amount paid by way of spouse's allowance. It is normal, in such circumstances, for the spouse over age 65 to give written consent for a possible reduction of the pension to which that spouse would otherwise be entitled.

I regret that the hon. member for Winnipeg North (Mr. Orlikow) should have expressed his unfavourable views about the Advisory Council on the Status of Women. My only comment would be this: if he cannot trust the independent advice of such a body, I wonder if he would even trust the advice of provincial governments of his own political persuasion. As I said this morning, not a single provincial government is willing to propose or support the principle of voluntary contributions with regard to spouses at home. The government of Ontario so far has opposed even the relatively small proposed change with regard to spouses who stay home to look after children. One cannot doubt what their reaction would be to the kinds of proposals and ideas expressed this afternoon. The question of remuneration of spouses at home and their rights to contribute to various schemes raises certain difficulties. The question has been studied extensively by various bodies. Perhaps the question cannot be resolved aptly by use of the Canada Pension Plan, but it may require some other mechanism for its solution.

I repeat, the Canada Pension Plan is an earnings-related program and has nothing to do with the kind of work a person does. Having said that, I thank the House for having considered this bill, and its promise to support it.

[Translation]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Is the House ready for the question?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Is the House prepared to adopt the said motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed and bill read the third time and passed.

* * *

[English]

EMPLOYMENT AND IMMIGRATION REORGANIZATION ACT

MEASURE TO ESTABLISH DEPARTMENT OF EMPLOYMENT AND IMMIGRATION, ETC.

The House resumed, from Thursday, July 7, consideration of the motion of Mr. Cullen that Bill C-27, to establish the Department of Employment and Immigration, the Canada Employment and Immigration Commission and the Canada Employment and Immigration Advisory Council, to amend the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971, and to amend certain other statutes in consequence thereof, be read the third time and do pass; and the amendment thereto of Mr. Peters.

● (1440)

Mr. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa-Whitby): Mr. Speaker, I rise in this debate to support the motion moved by my colleague, the hon. member for Timiskaming (Mr. Peters). He correctly pointed out that instead of attacking the unemployed in Canada, as this legislation does in a very discriminatory and unfair way, the government should be bringing forward measures to create job opportunities for Canadians. We find this a totally convincing example of the insensitive nature of this government.

In speaking to the motion for a six months' hoist, not only do we say that jobs ought to be created instead of attacking the unemployed, but we can provide, in the example I am going to give, very specific information about how, within the government's own operations right now, it should be providing significant increases in employment for Canadians. In so doing, I want to address myself to the concerns of the automotive industry, that sector of the Canadian economy which employs over 100,000 Canadians. That sector has been virtually ignored by this government since 1965. Since I came here in 1968 there have been three ministers of industry, trade and commerce. They have not made the effort they ought to have made to create more jobs for Canadians by improving that agreement.

I remind the House that that agreement came into being in 1965 as a result of continuing balance of payments problems that existed between Canada and the United States. We were losing billions of dollars cumulatively, hundreds of millions of dollars annually, in trade with the United States in the automotive sector. Ironically, the proposal of the Canadian government at that time was to set up what became subsequently for the Americans their DISC program. We were going to establish that in 1965 as a way of extricating ourselves from this serious problem. Understandably, the Americans objected. A series of negotiations took place. The result was the Canada-U.S. automotive agreement of 1965.

I want to quote from clause 1 of the agreement. I notice the Minister of Finance (Mr. Macdonald) is in the chamber. This matter ought to concern him. Clause 1 of that agreement is very relevant to the kind of concerns that we now have in this House—namely, jobs. It states that the purpose of the agreement was for each country "to participate on a fair and equitable basis in the expanding total market of the two countries". We were supposed to get real and substantial benefits. As a result of this agreement, the Americans have tariff-free access to the Canadian market. One of the consequences of this was supposed to have been a substantial reduction in the price of cars to Canadian consumers. I will get to that in a few minutes. Another major consequence was supposed to be a real increase in employment opportunities for men and women in Canada. That, too, was to follow from the agreement.

That pact has been in existence for more than the nine years that I have been here as a member of parliament. After being elected to this place, representing an automotive constituency I spent some time looking at the pact. I made some criticisms to the then minister of industry, trade and commerce, the hon. Jean-Luc Pepin, who interestingly enough has taken on other errand-boy tasks for the government. I pointed out to his successor, now the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Gillespie), and the present minister some very serious problems in the implementation of the auto pact as it affects the Canadian economy, the Canadian consumer and the Canadian worker.

All of this has been documented by a study, not by the NDP research staff, some trade union in Canada or some source whose credentials the government might question, but by a special task force from within the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce. What have we learned? That study was tabled in the House about a week ago. It points out that there are serious problems in the parts sector of the Canadian industry, in investment patterns, in research and development, and last but not least it singled out very serious injustices being done to Canadian consumers who are paying millions of dollars a year, cumulatively, more for cars than they ought to be paying.

I want to deal with some of these points in series. First, employment, which is our paramount concern in this House right now, at least on the opposition side and certainly for Canadians whether they live on the east coast, on the prairies or in the west. What has happened in this industry which now employs in excess of 100,000 Canadians and could be employing 20,000 to 25,000 more if we were getting what we should be getting out of the agreement? Between 1964 and 1973, according to the government's own figures, production in Canada in this industry increased by 77 per cent. During the same period, jobs increased by only 30 per cent. Production went up considerably. Employment did not go up nearly as rapidly.

There is one obvious explanation for a good part of this gap. There was a rationalization of the production lines on the Canadian side of the industry. For example, instead of producing 13 or 14 models on the assembly line in my home town of Oshawa, this was reduced to two, three or four lines. That increased efficiency considerably. It meant we could produce more, not only in Oshawa, Oakville, Windsor and other automotive assembly plant locations in southern Ontario, but also in Ste. Therese, Quebec. We could produce more cars, in a more simplified fashion, at lower cost.

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): Where was your Monza made?

Mr. Broadbent: My Monza is a good Canadian-made car, made in that fine province of Quebec. Although improved efficiency of the Canadian operation accounts for part of the gap which exists between a 77 per cent increase in production and only a 30 per cent in employment, it cannot account for all of it. There have to be other reasons. I note, in passing, that during the same period, U.S. production increased by only 10 per cent while employment went up by 13 per cent. Whereas in Canada production increased at a much higher rate than the level of job creation, in the United States it was the opposite: the U.S. had a lower increase in production but a higher increase in jobs. It is jobs that ought to concern us. The minister responsible must find out why, on a comparative basis, more new jobs exist in relation to increases in production in the United States than in Canada.

I want to turn to the parts sector, which in one sense is the essence of this industry. Since 1964 we have experienced a net deficit in trade with the United States of $16 billion—not thousands, or millions, but billions of dollars in trade and automotive parts.

● (1450)

In 1975, Canadian consumers used some 12 per cent of all the north American automobile parts manufactured on this continent, but we produced only some 7 per cent of them. So we are producing about 5 per cent less than we are consuming. The reason is that since 1965, 80 per cent of the investment in the parts industry in North America has occurred on the American side. The point is, investment is what creates jobs, and as long as they are getting 80 per cent and we are getting only 14 per cent, the Americans are getting the jobs, not us.

The idea behind the pact was that both countries were to share, on an equitable basis, in future growth in the industry. I emphasize that this has not taken place in the parts sector. The American plants have the growth; the Canadians have not. If we had been getting our share of investment, it would have meant thousands of additional jobs for Canadians in Windsor, in St. Thomas, in London, in Oakville, in Kitchener, in Ste. Thérèse, Québec, in St. Catharines, in Oshawa, and elsewhere. Thousands of additional jobs would exist if the government had been doing what it ought to have been doing in the past ten years, that is, monitoring the effects of this pact in a serious way. But it has neglected to do this.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Broadbent: The other aspect of the agreement which concerns us all comes under the label of "three p's"—prices, products and productivity. I am glad the Minister of Finance is here. One of the arguments he trots out time and time again to justify the controls program he brought in is that Canadian productivity has never been as high as that of our American friends. It is interesting that we have never brought down a sector by sector breakdown of this suggestion. I suspect I know why. It is because if he did, the figures would not support his case.

We have them now for the automobile sector, however. Look at the products structure of the industry. I think this is scandalous in terms of what the pact was supposed to do for the Canadian consumer. Ninety per cent of Canadian families own automobiles, and 100 per cent of those families are being gypped under this pact because they are paying too much for their cars. What are the figures? This is the first time they have been available to us. I intend to compare the profits of the Big Four auto makers in Canada with the profits they make in the United States. The period is from 1971 to 1975. Let us start with a small company, General Motors, that pygmy among corporations. Their return on capital investment in the United States in this period was 8.9 per cent. In Canada, it was 11.1 per cent. Ford made 5.1 per cent in the United States, but in Canada it was making 12.7 per cent. Chrysler was making 1 per cent in the United States, but 6.2 per cent in Canada. American Motors made 4 per cent in the U.S., but 8.2 per cent in Canada. In every case, the Big Four in the auto business were almost doubling their profit margins on operations in Canada compared with what they were making in the United States. That situation is, surely, scandalous.

Related to this is the issue of productivity which I have just mentioned. The minister and his colleagues frequently sound gleeful as they point out that Canadian workers are less productive than are our American friends. The reality is just the opposite. They are more productive. Let me put on record, for the benefit of the Minister of Finance, comparative productivity figures as between Canadian and United States workers in the automotive industry. In 1967, two years after the pact came into being, Canadian workers were only 95 per cent as productive as Americans. But from 1965 on the picture changed completely. In 1968 the Canadian figure was 117 per cent. In 1969 it was 129 per cent. In 1970 it was 131 per cent. In 1971 it was 128 per cent. In 1972 it was 115 per cent. In 1973, the last year for which we have figures, it was 110 per cent. The picture is clear: Canadian workers are producing more than the Americans in terms of unit hours worked.

Despite this, the automobile industry, as I have pointed out, is making almost double the rate of profit in Canada as it is making in the United States. Does the improved productivity north of the border find a reflection in cheaper cars for Canadians? If we accept the conventional argument which the Minister of Finance used to make, the conclusion ought to be that Canadians should be paying perhaps $200 less per car than our American neighbours. What is the reality? The reality is, as every Canadian knows, that we are paying anywhere from $300 to $2,000 more for a car made in Canada and sold, say, in Toronto, than is paid for the same car sold in Buffalo, New York.

This is another scandal in terms of the economic consequences of the auto pact. People who work in automobile communities know very well what the situation is. As cars come down the assembly line, you see two red Chevy Impalas coming down the line. One has a sticker on it saying it is being sent to Saskatoon. The other, an identical car, is being sent to Buffalo, New York. For some reason, the price tag on the car going to Saskatoon is several hundred dollars higher than that attached to the car which is being sent to the United States—and I am allowing for the difference in tax. There is no justification for this situation. If any sort of logical economic reasoning were applied, Canadians would be getting their cars cheaper than their American friends. Instead, they are paying hundreds of dollars more. This has got to change.

The other point I want to make relates directly to jobs in research and development. Right now, not only in North America but around the world, billions of dollars are being spent on research and development, particularly in order to develop more efficient engines which consume less fuel. This is a long overdue development. As I say, billions of dollars are going into research and development, directly affecting job creation. Some $2 billion is being spent currently by the Big Four in the United States. How much is being spent in Canada? Virtually nothing. The report which was sent out by the minister's own department tells us—these are not the precise words—that virtually nothing is being spent on research in Canada. The fact of the matter is that Canada has become almost entirely a nation of automotive assemblers as far as this industry is concerned. We carry out practically no research. I wish to quote from the minister's own report:

> An important consequence of this concentration of development effort is that the U.S. has experienced most of the direct benefits which flow from this form of activity.

● (1500)

Not only do Americans gain the primary jobs when companies are hiring men and women scientists for research and development work in the industry, but the spin-off benefits of the work done, which have an impact on many sectors of the economy, accrue to the United States, not to Canada. So again this means a significant loss of potential jobs.

[Mr. Broadbent.]

I come immediately to make some recommendations regarding what can be done to improve the situation and ensure that Canadians, particularly in the context of employment, get some benefit from the auto pact. First of all, in order to protect the parts industry, which has been losing billions of dollars annually in terms of trade deficit, major modification of the pact is required. We have to change one of the safeguards in the pact, which is probably the best approach, to ensure that a certain percentage of cars produced on the Canadian side of the border are constructed of Canadian parts. Or if the parts industry in Canada is to grow at the rate it ought, we should ensure that a certain percentage of the parts used in cars made on either side of the border comes specifically from Canada. What we need is some protective mechanism to ensure that the parts industry remains viable.

This is important in regard to jobs to be provided in the early future as well as for the future of the industry itself. If we do not protect the parts industry and it continues to dwindle in size, then ten years down the road the United States will have us over an economic barrel. If all that we have are assembly plant operations, the Americans will say it is too bad, we should scrap the pact. They will say "All that you Canadians have are assembly plant operations; the essence of the industry is located in the United States, which is where the parts are, so we have you just where we want you". I do not have what I regard as an empty-headed, anti-American bias, and I am not saying that the Americans will inevitably say that. But I am saying that in terms of Canadian interests we must not create a situation in Canada where, if we do become involved in hard-headed bargaining in the years ahead regarding the future of the industry, we could find ourselves without any parts sector.

We must also make it a provision of the pact that a certain percentage of the annual investment in research and development on the part of the big four is spent on the Canadian side of the border. So far as consumers are concerned—I see the Minister of Finance is in the Chamber—the Government of Canada should be saying to the big four, either next week or at the end of the month, that, with the 1978 model year, prices to Canadian consumers of Canadian produced cars must not be one cent higher than the price charged for the same cars in the United States. It is time that the Canadian government had enough gumption to call in the directors of the big four in Canada and to tell them it is time to put up or shut up. For ten years they have been promising a reduction in price. It is time that we got it, and it should begin with the 1978 model year.

In view of the cumulative deficits which are being experienced in automotive trade between Canada and the United States, we are now almost back to the situation we were in prior to the pact coming into force in 1965. Last year we had a net deficit of over $1 billion. In terms of our balance of trade figures, impact on the Canadian dollar, and loss of jobs, we need a more comprehensive and systematic review of the pact as a whole. There have been some positive benefits from the pact, and anyone who denies it would be crazy; but there are also a number of severe liabilities in it for Canada, and if it is to continue there must be a systematic and comprehensive revision of the pact in Canada's interests.

[Translation]

Mr. Charles-Eugène Dionne (Kamouraska): Mr. Speaker, the unemployment situation in Canada in general, and in my area in particular, affects the people concerned so severely that I consider it my duty to speak again at this stage of the debate in view of the numerous representations which have been made to the Manpower and Immigration Committee by various representative organizations, many of which have pointed out the serious consequences of the legislation we are now debating.

It is inconceivable that Bill C-27 might be adopted without major amendments to its various clauses. I support without hesitation the proposal to postpone the passage of this bill and refer it for further study so that we may eventually come out with effective legislation which will improve the distressing unemployment situation prevailing at present. Unemployed workers are said to be living off the backs of those who are fortunate enough to have a remunerative job. As far as I am concerned, those who live at the expense of workers in our society are rather those who exploit them. Unemployed people are entitled to benefits; they are not a present from the government. They are also entitled to objective and honest information.

● (1510)

There is no reason why the unemployed should be penalized for the least omission. There is a penalty when the employee quits his job on his own, even though he has been exploited and has suffered inhuman working conditions. They will not further inquire, they only take the employer's statement. There is a penalty when the unemployed do not actively seek a job, even if there is not one available and if 30 per cent of the labour force is idle. As I said before, I believe, rules on searching for employment seem to have been inspired by an old Burmese saying that there is no gold in every rock but there is no harm in looking for it. So the officials say look for a job even if there is not one. Can you imagine! There must be something wrong with the legislation if civil servants feel compelled to issue such instructions to the unemployed.

And just to give you an idea of the situation, I am going to point out evidence of searches for non existent jobs. We know that for some time now senior officials of the commission have most probably given directives to their employees. They will not tell us about it but we can read between lines that claimants are expected to scout around for a job. I do not object to officials of the commission suggesting to the unemployed means of securing a job. However, let us not exaggerate. We have to consider the various factors involved. First, the local unemployment rate, second, the number of industries likely to require labour, third, the time of the year, as it may affect workers in forestry, agriculture, fishery, and other seasonal industries, finally, and this is a very important factor, the working and wage conditions prevailing at the places to which a worker is directed, the cost of moving, and the expected duration of employment: all these aspects must be checked over by people who are well aware of the working conditions prevailing in the place suggested to the applicant. We are well aware that as a result of these guidelines the unemployed had to seek jobs in an area where manpower did not have an available job. I wonder what is the use of those centres. Yet, they are supposed to provide whatever information is available. With thousands of job vacancies on file which cannot be filled by the unemployed, with the people in the area coming to see them fairly regularly to see if they have anything interesting to offer them, why then force a man who is without a job and without income, except for unemployment insurance benefits, to spend money on taxis to scout around for a job in neighbouring villages, 15, 20 or 25 miles away from home. For him to look around in his own community is not good enough. He is told: You limit your availability to your own area. But if within a radius of 25, 30 or 50 miles, covered by manpower districts, jobs cannot be found, why require the unemployed to spend what little money he gets from unemployment benefits to remain entitled to them?

Those bureaucratic requirements do not solve the problem of unemployment but rather help to exhaust the patience of the employers who have too many workers, and that of the jobless who cannot find work. I know a lot of employers back home. Some of them have written a special letter to be given the fellow when he shows up. They just date the letter and sign their names to it. They say: We have no work. Yet, the commission forces the fellow to go to the office. Then we are told: The commission does not oblige you to find work but only to look for some. Can you imagine anything like that! Have the fellow spend money looking for work that simply does not exist at some times of the year. As I said before, you have to hold a middle course between the two extremes, then have reasonable requirements. I shall give you a few examples to give you an idea of the situation.

I have here the case of a well-intentioned 19 year old whom I know very well from St. Pascal de Kamouraska who has been unemployed for several months. He would work occasionally. He would manage to find a job for two or three days and mention the wages he earned on his weekly reports. Some weeks he would not find anything at all. He was regularly pestered by commission officers: There is a mistake here, you forgot to mark this, you forgot to mark that. His parents had made a lot of sacrifices to get him educated. On October 27, that young man tired of the Unemployment Insurance Commission monkey business joined the army. At that point he practically had no other choice.

I have here a young girl, well educated, coming out of school with a good secretarial course with typing and shorthand. She made many contacts. I have a whole page here. She applied for a job at 50 to 60 places. She did not find any. She adds at the end of her letter that she contacted the Unemployment Insurance Commission, Quebec Hydro, Bell Telephone, the Canada Manpower Centre, the Unemployment Insurance office in Rivière-du-Loup, the Manpower Centre in Quebec City, Cabano, the Quebec social services centre, as well as Rivièredu-Loup, where Mr. Jean-Rock Larochelle, officer Bélanger—she mentions all that here and then concludes her letter by saying:

I would have another 20 names to mention, but having already taken enough of your time, I will stop here. It is almost discouraging to go over all those addresses without any prospect of work yet.

So, with all those facts, the executive management of the Unemployment Insurance Commission is still forcing public servants administering local offices to make people spend money to look for work. I have another case here. An ambitious young man wanted to work at any cost. He had already paid us several visits. I told him: My boy, one way perhaps to wake up a couple of them would be to write the Minister of Labour in Ottawa. Contact the Quebec minister and various government officials. We are going to see their response. Here it is.

Someone, a senior official in the Rivière-du-Loup Manpower Centre, sent him the following reply:

The recruiting of workers for this project—

He wanted to work in the James Bay area.

—has been referred to us for a reply.

Workers for this project are recruited through the Quebec manpower centres and not our Department. We therefore suggest that you communicate with the Cabano office, where you will obtain all the required information.

This man was writing to the Director of Manpower, and he was writing directly to the then minister of manpower (Mr. Andras), and this is the reply that he received:

Mr. Robert Andras, Minister of Manpower and Immigration, has asked me to reply to your letter. I am sure that you will understand that it is your own Canada Manpower Centre which is in the best position to help you. It is only at CMC that you will find people able to advise and help you.

The letter closes in saying:

I strongly advise you to remain in close contact with your Canada Manpower Centre in Rivière-du-Loup. The Manager has assured me that he and his staff will do everything possible to help you, and I hope that their efforts will soon bring positive results.

He was in regular contact with the people of the Rivière-du-Loup-Montmagny-Cabano Manpower Centre.

Here is another letter. This again was written in the hope of getting work in the James Bay area. The reply was as follows:

You can rest assured, sir, that we are giving very particular attention to your case and that we shall communicate with you as soon as a position that could interest you becomes open.

This letter was signed by Yvon Bergeron, Recruiting Coordinator for the James Bay Development.

I have another one here which has been sent directly by the Department of Labour in Ottawa and it is signed by an executive assistant. That man wanted to work at the James Bay project, in Labrador or any other place, he had no definite choice. He was readily available. He was prepared to go any place in this country to find a job. Here is the answer:

As this subject is under the responsibility of the Minister of Labour and Immigration, the Hon. Robert Andras. I took the initiative of forwarding your letter to his office so it will receive appropriate attention. I am convinced that they will communicate with you within a short time.

[Mr. Dionne (Kamouraska).]

I have here another answer from Mr. Boucher, manpower consultant. That letter has been sent from Rivière-du-Loup and it says:

However we will keep your request in our records and communicate with you if we hear of a suitable job opportunity . . .

● (1520)

I could read you similar letters for 20 minutes. I will not do it because I have many other things to tell you today. But I wanted to give you an idea about this matter, which I would call the job seeking nonsense at times when there is no employment or almost none in the area. Why compel the unemployed to spend money on taxis when he does not even have enough to begin with, just so he can get a written statement from an employer he has visited? That does not make any sense. Does Bill C-27 now being debated contain clauses with a view to preventing that kind of nonsense? The administrators of the unemployment insurance have no such guidelines, so it is a free-for-all.

I understand that and I will not criticize the civil servant of my region or any other for that matter. I have letters from just about everywhere. I have read some from the Bay of Chaleurs. I have one sent from Manitoba by a young woman, originally from Kamouraska. She was not entitled to unemployment insurance benefits because she had left her job as a secretary for the Department of National Health in an area where there was a lot of work, to find employment in Manitoba, where it was said that work was not easily available. They did not want to pay. Yet they ended up paying and on top of that the computer which usually gives so much trouble to the unemployed had been helpful to this young woman in this instance because the commission has paid the weekly reports that had been submitted. The commission had granted her a period of 15 weeks for rehabilitation and all the reports she had submitted had been requested after the amounts were paid, but she never paid it because she had no reason to do so.

I contacted the Unemployment Insurance Commission in Manitoba and all the correspondence had been written in English. They did not want it to be brought up before a board of referees because the director, a certain Mr. Boult from Edmonton, had acknowledged that he would have to admit he had corresponded in English, a thing for which he apologized, by the way. So you have an example of what happens. And that in my opinion, is taking place all across Canada.

I am well aware of the problems of the area covered by the offices of Lévis, Rivière-du-Loup and Quebec City.

It happens very often that I have business there, on behalf of employees in the Portneuf area or elsewhere. I have an illustration here. I will not mention the name, because I am somewhat sorry for the gentleman. I am told he is ineligible. He is rather old, and he lived in Tourville, Ste. Perpétue, St. Pamphile. Those are the three villages around his home. I am told he is ineligible for an indefinite period starting from October 31, because it has been established he was not ready and available for work. We have hundreds of those letters.

I have here four workers in my area of Mont-Carmel, Messrs. Roland Drapeau, Jacques Desjardins, René Lévesque, Serge Lévesque, and also Maurice Gagnon. The commission wanted them to go to the north shore, even though they live in Mont-Carmel. They had worked on the north shore before, where they had paid contributions. Circumstances are favourable sometimes to go to the north shore, so they had done so as I did myself when I was a lumberjack. So those five workers made the trip, only to find there were five feet of snow. So they all came back. The money was spent for nothing. It happened, although I am not saying it does too often. Sometimes the bureaucrats have a better understanding of their responsibilities.

We see the results of inquiries, the way they are done. I know some inspectors. They tell me they are paid to do exactly that, and if they don't they can be fired. So they ask all sorts of questions of the unemployed, who don't know much about the statute. They try to trap them. It is an easy job for anybody who is very familiar or simply conversant with that unstraightforward act. There are a lot of ways to get answers under which the assumption can be made that things may have happened in such and such a way. So the inspector helped inflict setbacks. I have the report here. It is astounding indeed to see what happens. It is another way of telling people that all this in the act, which is too complicated.

Some ministers have already told me that they will try to streamline this complex legislation, which is even worse than the one before us. I wonder how this will be possible because there will be tremendous delays and thousands of workers will suffer as a result of a poorly worded legislation. For instance, when they run out of arguments and because there is a mistake in his weekly reports, the unemployed will be told that his claim is in a dormant file—since we do have dormant files, and I believe many public servants are in a dormant state as well, which is unfortunate, because the unemployed, who live at the end of the row in some concession or whatever, right in the middle of a village but several miles away from the Commission's office, have no other income. Some of them are married and have two or three dependents for whom they must provide food and shelter. They are going to get all kinds of silly answers, such as dormant files, technical mistakes, such or such incident which occurred in the payment centre in Montreal.

We have already requested on several occasions—and I was not the only one to make that request—that payments be made through district offices, which would be possible, I believe, and it would be more convenient for those people who are living not too far from the office. However, everything is centralized in Montreal, because—and I will have the opportunity to deal with this subject later—in the back of their minds some people figured that this centralization at the same time would allow officers of National Revenue to deduct the amount of tax deemed deductible so as to better control, later on, the matter of insurability, employment opportunities and so on. They have available numbers and addresses—but I shall deal with the matter later on.

Here is another case of administrative difficulty, that of Mr. Martin of Rivière-Ouelle. His weekly reports came in late, his parents forwarded them to him in Alma, where he had gone to find employment near Lac Saint-Jean. From there, Mr. Martin sent them back to the commission. When commission officers received the reports from Alma, they managed to bungle things. They sent a letter to the claimant asking him to account for the periods he had been away from his area, instead of paying him then what was due to him; there was a delay of one month and a half in the payment of his benefits.

Now, I wonder, why complicate life for people like that.

A further example of confusion: a benefit period established from October 13, 1976, ineligibility from November 20, ineligibility ended on November 29. Now what happens? They realize that the claimant is ineligible on November 20 and on November 29, they say that he is no longer ineligible. Why not take the time to look into the matter before making such decisions?

I have here a letter which I found rather amusing and I would like to read part of it into Hansard. A lady is writing to me because she cannot obtain the information she wants. You can judge by yourself. She writes: I inquired at the Rivière-du-Loup office and they replied the first time that the postal strike had delayed the mail. The second time it was the storm. The third time it was the Christmas holiday, and yesterday the New Year's holiday. I am getting impatient, I am entitled to my unemployment insurance. I paid my contributions and I want my benefits. I was going to see a lawyer when someone advised me to write to you.

That is why I have this letter before me now. I understand the problem was finally resolved, but the lady had to wait far too long. It does not make sense to have a claimant wait so long for benefits she is entitled to. According to some officials, the unemployed should listen to the radio and look for job opportunities in papers. If the unemployed moves, there is a penalty, he has to pay for the moving. As you can see, the unemployed pay themselves for the operation of unemployment offices. And in addition to mistakes and delays, some officials have the gall to try and make them pay twice.

● (1530)

And that is not difficult to prove: I am going to do just that right now. The unemployed are stricken by the hundreds from the rolls of the unemployment insurance offices for all sorts of insignificant reasons which result from the administration of unduly complicated legislation and regulations which in no way meet the needs of a great many of the unemployed who are faced with the problem of an extended period of unemployment.

I have hundreds of examples of unemployed people who are the victims of red tape, because the legislation and regulations have been drafted by officials who have never been unemployed or faced with the difficulties of unemployment. I am going to tell you the various ways these guys are taken advantage of: Insurable employment. Let us consider this for a while and see what happens. A person is working in a plant.

The owner of the plant keeps part of his salary as dues to the various plans, whether it be unemployment insurance premiums, income tax, the Quebec Pension Plan, and just about everything which is deducted from pay cheques nowadays. Then, when things slow down in the industry, a number of people are laid off and compelled to apply for unemployment insurance benefits. The Unemployment Insurance Commission pays during three, four, five or six months. But one day the commission sends an inspector—probably more thickheaded than others; in his own way he asks a series of questions to both employer and employees and then the commission decides that those jobs are not insurable. And the workers are told: It is unfortunate but the job you had was not insurable. The income tax people then inform them of their decision. It does not take long. They are told: Your job is not insurable.

Obviously, they were already paid benefits. Then the Unemployment Insurance Commission claims amounts depending on how long the person was unemployed. What can the person do? Those workers go and see their representatives, a lawyer of the legal assistance office or anyone to find a solution. I have here a case which was submitted to me—I took only one, but I have fifteen, a whole list before me—which I will submit to you. Seven seamstresses were working at home. Why were they working at home? It is easy to understand and the judge of the federal court understood very quickly. It was because the owner had set up a sewing shop employing around fifteen persons. It was an old house he had converted into a shop. There was enough room for five or six women to work there. So he had divided the job between those women who wanted to work at home.

It was a kind of production line: one woman would make shirt sleeves, another one the front and a third one the back; then all these pieces were sent to the manufacturer to be assembled. So, various claims up to $1,500 were made to the commission regarding these claimants, dating back to 1974. It took three years before we were able to bring this case before the Federal court. Fortunately we were able to meet the former ombudsman, Justice Marceau, who understood very quickly what the situation was. I have the decision here. The Crown attorney tried to explain that these positions were not of the kind that could be covered by unemployment insurance, using a lot of previous decisions to prove his point. The employer was there. What happened then? First, the women who were working at home have been incessantly bothered by UIC officials asking them to reimburse benefits that, according to them, had been overpaid.

Moreover, one of these women—I could name her, for I have her name here—had worked for another employer and when she became unemployed again, she submitted a claim to the UIC, but with the benefits she was once more entitled to get the UIC officials tried to reimburse what they considered as overpayment for 1974.

From 1974 to 1977 those employees went on working, but they stopped paying unemployment insurance contributions and their employer said: I am looking forward to the day when this case will be settled. A good many employers could have deducted unemployment insurance contributions, and the court case heard on March 24 finally put an end to all this nonsense. I have heard of 20 or 22 similar cases. In Rivière-du-Loup, on May 20 I believe, a Monday anyway, I was before the judge at the federal court and I met the former minister of public works, Mr. Justice Dubé, who is a federal court judge and whom I was very pleased to meet. There were two cases: one was about a man who had worked during the summer for his father, harvesting and doing farm work. His father was a lumber dealer, selling and transporting lumber. It was perfectly insurable employment, but the commission blocked it all. There was another worker from Saint-Jean-de-Dieu, not from my riding this time, but it often happens that people from another riding close to mine tell me about their problems. In that case, the employment was not insurable. He was a carpenter who was repairing the house of a farmer, a very ordinary house as all farmers have in our country, but this was not an insurable employment. Four weeks of non-insurable work, while he had already a number of insurable weeks, but as he was three weeks short these four weeks were not insurable and he was not eligible for benefits.

There are all kinds of tricks, all kinds of gimmicks, as I said earlier, and I could show you that very few unemployed people cheat. Of course there is the odd one because our legislation is full of loopholes, but most cheaters in the entire administration of the unemployment insurance are not those people. If they exist it is because the law has many gaps and allows bureaucrats to withhold benefits which are payable to unemployed people in a fix. It is the way I see our law and I challenge anyone to tell me otherwise because I can support my views with plenty of evidence I can produce any time to show that it is the way things happen.

I know another case which will show you the deficiency of this legislation. I know a man who has worked for 15 years for the same employer and who still works at the same place. Nevertheless, in 1975 he was told that his job was not insurable. He operates a tree-harvester in the bush. We went though a lot of proceedings. It is now in court and I do not know when the hearing will take place, but they seem to be a little faster these days. I was told once they were short of staff, but I suppose that with the very high rate of unemployment in Canada, there are also some unemployed professionals. They have hired some additional staff, because it seems to go a little faster now. That man had been working for 15 years at the same job which had always been considered insurable. In 1975, he made his application as usual. In winter time he is unemployed, as he is a bushworker. After the New Year, there is a period when there is not much to do in the bush, so he lives on unemployment benefits. After a while he was told: This job is not insurable. Then the income tax officials came into this. They like to protect the funds, everybody knows them, they try to get as much as they can, so the job was not insurable. The Commission asked for a refund for excess payment. The man said: I cannot pay that; I am unemployed. When I am working again, I will attend to that. He told me about it. I contended to the Commission that it was an insurable job. Then they went through the red tape as slowly as ever. The following year, he took the same job, with the same employer. I have all the information here in front of me. We will have a good laugh in the federal court. The following year he submitted his application, the Commission officials accepted it and paid the benefits. They paid, but they paid in a funny way. They declared he was eligible for benefits, but they withheld the cheques he was entitled to, for the refund of the excess payment they had made the preceding year. Have you ever heard of such inconsistency? I have at hand a letter from the Minister of National Revenue (Miss Begin). We wrote the minister to find out if those jobs were insurable or not. This is her answer, I have it here. I have sent it to them in Rivière-du-Loup. I brought it recently to the attention of the umpire's registrar but they keep collecting though. The amount has been decreased a little: they collected $1 a week for three months. Imagine! How foolish it is, for the principle's sake, to collect from him $1 a week when there is still $570 to collect; they will not collect it because they do not have the right to do so. Then they will have to give him back what has been collected, that is for sure.

● (1540)

Here is what the Minister of National Revenue wrote on April 29:

I thank you for your letter dated February 26, which has been referred to me by the President of the Unemployment Insurance Commission. The interest you are showing for the insurability problem of the workers specialized in logging operations is appreciated. Interpretations have been issued by some employers in 1976 to the effect that tree harvester operators did not have an insurable job because they were not hired under a hiring contract as required by Section 3 of the Unemployment Insurance Act. However, having considered additional information subsequently provided by these firms, my officials reversed their previous interpretations. As a result, the Unemployment Insurance Commission has been advised of this new decision, and I am confident that these workers will recover their entitlement in a very near future. I hope that this information will enable you to give a satisfactory answer to your constituents, and I regret any inconvenience they had to bear.

Just imagine! The Commission guys keep trying to collect from my man here, Charles-Emile Lagacé. They do not understand. They and the income tax people are going to tell me, as I said on the phone this week, that this is a decision from the minister. Yes. This may mean something but the act is there and civil servants proceed according to the provisions therein. Have you ever heard anything so crazy? The Minister of National Revenue and the bureaucrats under his authority admitted themselves they had made an error of interpretation and that everything would soon be corrected, but it has not been yet.

What does Bill C-27 provide to correct such nonsense? Nothing. That is why I am against it. And I am even very surprised that there are not more opponents. I commend my friends of the NDP who seem to grasp the situation and are making tremendous efforts to persuade the government that this bill should be modified. But I am surprised indeed that there are so few others like them. I guess this can be attributed to the general desire for our summer recess. Indeed, some are dying for a vacation, but that does not mean we must let a bill through that is going to do so much harm to a great number of unemployed workers.

I have here another case. It is about a 63 years old fellow. I know him very well. He had the misfortune to be ill and after undergoing the necessary treatment, he submitted a claim for sickness benefits. He received his 15 weeks allowances. And after he had recovered, he applied for regular benefits. He was told that he needed a medical certificate stating that he had actually recovered. Therefore, he went to see his doctor. Doctors are getting tired of filling in all these Commission's forms.

If you were aware of some of the telephone conversations a doctor back home has had with an employee of the commission, you would be surprised, because there are all kinds of requirements. One would have to write whole pages to say such things as: Yes, the man was sick, but now he feels better and could do light work. He could go to work. The doctor would have to say that. Then, though it does not make much sense, I always advise the man to get a doctor's certificate. He has one. I have it here, in front of me and I quote from it: I hereby declare that Mr. Castonguay has been fit for work since January 20, 1977. But there again, his own doctor is speaking. For crying out loud, why be picayune about that too? That is not enough, you have to see an independent doctor. And so the correspondence starts all over again. It takes an awful lot of time. The odd storm comes up too, once in a while. Finally, the man goes to Montmagny. Saint-Pamphile is quite a distance from Montmagny. So, he sees a doctor there. This doctor sends his certificate to the Commission, but by now it is March 21. During the whole period from January to March 21, he has not been eligible because someone did not trust the certificate he had obtained from his own doctor.

Let us see what the board of referees say about the procedure. That is why legal aid lawyers were insisting so much and so rightly saying that boards of referees should be made up of competent people who know what the law is about, people who can determine with a sound judgment whether a claimant is in his right or not. I often go to the board of referees. It is a place I find very funny—always unanimity, never any dissension. Those guys sure get along fine.

I note from the reaction of the labour representative that he seems to agree with what they tell him because that makes a lot of sense but the decision is always unanimous. Fortunately, decisions are overruled but sometimes I note they are not and I find it quite strange that there should not be any dissension. It is so easy. I personally sat eight years on UIC boards of referees and when I found that the chairman or the management representative was going too far, then I would record my dissent. That allowed the unemployed or his representative to go before the umpire without asking for the permission of the chairman of the board.

Just imagine! When the decision is unanimous you have to ask the chairman of the board of referees for permission to get a new hearing or go before the referee. That does not make sense. The chairman of the board of referees just made a decision after eight or ten days and he is told that his decision is no good, they want permission to appeal. He always says no. He does not say so himself but he has an official of the Commission say it for him. So that is the result of the red tape from legislation that gives trouble to unemployed workers.

About the individual I was talking about earlier let us see what the members of the board of referees say: In this case, the availability of the claimant—and this is not happening in Rivière-du-Loup but in Lévis—is related to the recovery from an illness he had in the fall of 1976. The claimant's file is all mixed up, according to the claimant, his doctor, the examining doctor from the Commission and another doctor mentioned in the file. The availability of the claimant is really related to the medical evidence given in the file. But today, the claimant says that he was admitted to the Hôtel-Dieu Hospital in Lévis. This is true. He was sick for 15 weeks.

While confined there, he was told that he could go back to work in December 1976. In fact, he felt well enough to work in December 1976, but his regular doctor, to be sure that he was all right, told him to wait until January 20. The claimant says that he was examined at Laval Hospital and that he again saw his regular doctor in January and that he saw Dr. Mignault in December, January and February. But our files show very little result from all these meetings with the claimant's doctor. Consequently, the board of referees upheld the decision of the commission.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please. I regret to interrupt the hon. member, but I must inform him that his time has expired. Nevertheless, he may go on with the unanimous consent of the House.

Some hon. Members: No.

[English]

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, I rise to support the motion to give this bill a six-months' hoist because I believe that the premise of the bill is wrong. It has one obvious purpose—to reduce the number of people entitled to draw unemployment insurance benefits. That would save the Government of Canada a very substantial amount of money, but at the expense of the individual and of the municipalities that will have to bear the cost of welfare support for many of the people who will cease to draw unemployment insurance benefits.

One has to assume that the government has brought this bill forward because it believes there are substantial numbers of the over 900,000 people unemployed who could find jobs but simply do not want to work. There cannot be any other reason for this bill. I cannot believe that even this Liberal government would be so cruel as to want to take people off unemployment insurance benefits who are willing and able to work but who simply cannot find work because jobs are not available. An examination of the government's own statistics quickly shows that assumption to be false.

In May over 900,000 people were unemployed, according to the figures produced by Statistics Canada. We all know that a large number of people are out of work who are not included in this figure—people who have given up trying to find work because they know jobs are not available for their skills, or because they live in slow growth areas. According to Statistics Canada, in the month of May there were 35,300 job vacancies in Canada. That means that if every job was filled on the day the figures were taken, there would still be close to 900,000 people unemployed. The percentage of vacancies compared to the number of people unemployed is 4 per cent. In other words, for every 100 unemployed persons, only four jobs were available.

I might be able to understand the logic of introducing this bill if this high unemployment were a sudden phenomenon. And the government cannot claim it is introducing this bill because the unemployment insurance system was not meeting the needs of the people. If it makes such claims, they are not true.

● (1550)

The incidence of unemployment has been rising in the last few years. I shall not quote figures of the last two years, but I shall put on record figures relating to a few months in 1977. According to Statistics Canada, there were 932,000 unemployed in Canada in February, 1977, as compared with 800,000 unemployed in February, 1976; or seasonally adjusted, 7.9 per cent of the labour force was unemployed in February, 1977, as compared with 7 per cent in February, 1976. In Quebec, a province to which members have devoted considerable attention these past few months, there were 303,000 unemployed in February, 1977, as compared with 225,000 in February, 1976, almost 50,000 more people being unemployed this year. Is it any wonder a substantial proportion of people in Quebec have lost enthusiasm for Confederation, for one Canada? Instead of concentrating on bilingualism and language, as the government has done recently, it would be better advised to solve the problems of the economy.

The Globe and Mail of March 16, 1977, reported as follows:

> The official number looking for work totalled a record 932,000 last month, according to Statistics Canada, raising the seasonally adjusted rate to 7.9 per cent. If other jobless who had not looked for work in the previous four weeks are included, the actual total of unemployed in Canada was well over a million.
>
> Responding to criticism in the Commons, Finance Minister Donald Macdonald said the unemployed would receive 'substantial attention' in the budget planned for March 31.
>
> And Manpower Minister J.S.G. Cullen told the opposition parties that it was no answer 'to react in panic' to the situation, especially since employment was still rising and the government has already announced make-work programs.

Speaking of work programs, I told the House the other night that the constituency of Winnipeg North Centre had received the grand total of $100,000 this year for Canada Works, as compared with $939,000 it received last year in LIP grants.

Next I shall quote part of George Radwanski's column in the Financial Times of March 28, 1977, entitled, "Unemployment: A Bungled Job." Mr. Radwanski, whose column I read regularly, is not one of the government's bitter opponents. On the whole he is kindly disposed to it, but he said this in his column:

It is simply not true that the jobs are there to be had, if only the unemployed weren't too lazy to pursue them. For 932,000 unemployed, Statistics Canada listed only 37,800 full-time job vacancies. For at least 894,200 Canadians, in other words, all the zeal in the world couldn't produce a steady job.

This carries a number of consequences.

In the first place, it violates one of the most basic objectives of a free, prosperous society: To give every willing citizen the opportunity to pursue gainful employment commensurate with his abilities. Without that opportunity, many other freedoms mean little. When unemployment becomes widespread and chronic, the whole system is working badly.

Secondly, unemployment exacts a heavy social cost. When people are involuntarily cut off from the job market, their self-esteem diminishes, their sense of alienation from society steadily increases and at a certain point they simply stop trying, creating a lasting pattern of non-productivity and dependency.

I hope the Secretary of State (Mr. Roberts) is listening, for he is supposed to be concerned about national unity. I wanted to put Mr. Radwanski's thoughts on record, because they echo mine and I have been accused of speaking them for partisan, political reasons. Mr. Radwanski went on to say:

There is also a risk of serious political consequences. Unemployment is becoming particularly serious among the young, with the seasonally-adjusted rate in the 15 to 24 age group now running at 14.4 per cent; this is the age group, of course, that can most easily become radicalized and alienated. The problem has special dimensions in Quebec, where the youth unemployment rate stands at 16 per cent. That can make pro-Confederation arguments sound rather unconvincing to young Quebecers, and contribute to the volatility of the situation.

Despite these hazards, present levels of unemployment are no unforeseen accident.

Mr. Radwanski analyses carefully—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please. It being four o'clock, the House will now proceed to the consideration of private members' business as listed on today's order paper, namely, notices of motions, public bills, and private bills.

* * *

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): Mr. Speaker, I wonder if I could rise on a point of order to inform hon. members, before the House proceeds with private members' business, that the government proposes to call order No. 51 on Monday, the amendments to the criminal law.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' PUBLIC BILLS

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please. Order No. 15, in the name of the hon. member for Richmond (Mr. Beaudoin).

An hon. Member: Stand.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Shall it stand at the request of the government?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order No. 16, in the name of the hon. member for Davenport (Mr. Caccia).

An hon. Member: Stand.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Shall it stand at the request of the government?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order No. 18, in the name of the hon. member for Hastings (Mr. Ellis).

An hon. Member: Stand.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Shall the order stand at the request of the government?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order No. 19, standing in the name of the hon. member for Waterloo-Cambridge (Mr. Saltsman). Shall the order stand at the request of the government?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Milne: Mr. Speaker, if I may rise on a point of order, I think there is general agreement to proceed with Bill C-229, and to limit the length of speeches. I understand several hon. members wish to participate in the debate.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Is it agreed that all orders prior to order No. 29 under private members' public bills shall be stood at the request of the government?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): And that the length of speeches shall be limited to ten minutes, in accordance with the wish brought to my attention earlier?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): It is so ordered.

* * *

BROADCASTING ACT

AMENDMENT TO PROVIDE GUIDELINES RESPECTING THE PORTRAYAL OF SEX AND VIOLENCE

Mr. James A. McGrath (St. John's East) moved that Bill C-229, to amend the Broadcasting Act, (guidelines respecting portrayal of sex and violence), be read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Broadcasting, Films and Assistance to the Arts.

He said: Mr. Speaker, I am sorry to say this bill, which I had hoped would form a vehicle for debate and be referred to the committee for discussion and examination of the evidence, is to be talked out. I have learned that through the usual channels, and in saying that I do not reflect on any members of the House. I do not wish to reflect on the parliamentary secretary, who is doing his job, or on any member who may contribute to the debate; but as a legislator and parent I regret that this matter will not be seized of the attention of the Parliament of Canada, the only legislature in this country with jurisdiction in this area, and I say this despite actions taken by other jurisdictions. I think particularly of the LaMarsh commission which the government of Ontario set up and which recently brought down its report.

● (1600)

It is not my bill that is important, it is the subject matter that is important. My bill is merely a vehicle to get this matter before the attention of the House and, I hope, before the attention of the committee.

On June 14 I wrote to the Minister of Communications (Mrs. Sauvé), bringing to her attention the fact that the LaMarsh commission would be reporting and that my bill would be coming up for debate on this date. I stated that I had asked the government to postpone debate earlier because the minister was out of the country. I felt it would not be fair to her or this important bill if it came before the House while she was away. Obviously she then would not be in a position to have any input into it whatsoever. In my letter of June 14, which has not been acknowledged, I said and I quote:

I would like to point out that the bill was merely intended as a vehicle for debate and a means of providing the House with a reference so that the Broadcasting committee could look into this whole area. This, of course, is especially relevant in the light of the LaMarsh commission findings and my purpose in writing this letter is to ask your co-operation in allowing the subject matter of the bill to be referred to the Broadcasting committee so that parliament will have an opportunity to go into the findings of the LaMarsh commission, examine your own position in this regard and generally to call for witnesses so that a determination can be made by the committee as to just what action would be appropriate for the federal government to follow in this rather controversial issue . . .

As you know, the Canadian Federation of Women's Institutes, the Canadian Federation of Home and School Parent-Teacher Federations, the Canadian School Trustees Association and latterly, the National Council of Women representing over 750,000 Canadian women have all passed resolutions supporting the principle of my bill.

That is the end of the quotation from the letter. To set the perspective or the tone of the debate, perhaps I could give a brief history of what has brought us to this point today. In 1972 the Surgeon General of the United States, having been commissioned by the Congress of the United States, as a result of the findings of Senator Pastore and his Senate Committee, issued a report after a two-year study. In that report it is stated, and I quote:

The overwhelming consensus and the unanimous Scientific Advisory Committee's report indicate that televised violence indeed does have an adverse effect on certain members of our society . . . It is clear to me that the causal relationship between televised violence and antisocial behaviour is sufficient to warrant appropriate and immediate remedial action . . . There comes a time when the data are sufficient to justify action. That time has come.

That was the Surgeon General of the United States in 1972. On February 26, 1975, I introduced this bill into the House, prompted by the findings of the Surgeon General of the United States and my own concern as a parent.

Following that, the then solicitor general, now the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development (Mr. Allmand), being the responsible and socially minded minister that he is, conducted his own study. In fact he made a point of going to the United States and speaking to the Surgeon General's people and Senator Pastore. He returned convinced that there was a relationship between the increase in violent crime in Canada and violence over television. Indeed he went so far as to say on November 17, 1975, as reported at page 9110 of Hansard, in reply to my question, and I quote:

Mr. Speaker, we have had consultations with the CRTC and the Department of the Secretary of State on this matter and it is still under study. We may have more to say when the Minister of Justice and myself announce our package on violent crime before the end of the year.

That is how concerned the minister was. He wanted a provision in the bill on violent crime, the so-called law and order bill. That is the last we heard from the government on this matter.

The next event to transpire was the CRTC, as a result of my speeches across the country and the concern that was and still is growing from every source, especially parents, sponsored a symposium in August, 1975, at Queen's University, in which I had the honour to participate. The evidence is in the report of the symposium.

Finally there was the LaMarsh commission which was set up by the government of Ontario. It reflected the concern of that government, and the inability of the Government of Canada, the government which has sole jurisdiction to act. That commission immediately set up public hearings across the province of Ontario. I had the honour of presenting the first brief. The findings of the commission are clear, unambiguous, precise, and definite as can be. It said this:

The Commission was to determine if there is any connection or a cause-and-effect relationship between this phenomenon and the incidence of violent crime in society.

The phenomenon is television violence.

The short answer is yes.

That is a direct quote from the report of the LaMarsh commission. More evidence has very recently come to light. It is from the American Medical Association. I am sure one of our learned colleagues from the medical profession will probably participate in this debate. Referring to a poll taken by doctors of the AMA they stated, and I quote:

According to the poll, doctors said heightened aggression in children, nightmares, epileptic seizures and injuries resulting from imitating TV incidents are among problems that may stem from video violence.

That is a direct quotation from the American Medical Association on June 20, 1977.

I appeal to hon. members to allow the subject matter to go to committee so that the committee can examine the LaMarsh commission and our own medical association, and all the evidence.

My final word is from Dr. Robert Liebert who is recognized as the distinguished authority in this area. He is of Columbia University, New York. He was the principal consultant for the United States Surgeon General. When he appeared at the symposium sponsored by the CRTC he said, and I quote:

". . . the cumulative effect on children of violent television programming is like the planting of a bomb that might explode within 10 or 20 years. Every murder or violent act a child witnesses on TV," he said, "is like a small, even a miniscule weight placed on the balance."

We are playing with fire. Every day we lose is vital time lost. I again appeal to the House to allow the subject matter of my bill to go to committee. I do not want to have it on my conscience if this bill is talked out. That will be the invidious position of the last member who participates in this debate if he or she agrees to talk out this bill just to satisfy the pique of the Minister of Communications who has failed to provide leadership in this very important area.

Mr. Maurice Harquail (Restigouche): Mr. Speaker, I feel it is important for members to avail themselves of the opportunity to participate in the debate on such an important subject matter as that before us this afternoon in Bill C-229. Before I get underway with my remarks, I wish to read the contents of the recommended change to the Broadcasting Act:

The Broadcasting Act is amended by adding immediately after section 47 thereof, the following:

● (1610)

48. (1) Notwithstanding anything contained in this Act, the Commission shall by regulation establish guidelines respecting the portrayal of sex and violence during the broadcast of a program.

(2) No licensee shall broadcast a program portraying sex and violence contrary to the guidelines.

First of all I want to congratulate the hon. member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath) on his tenacity. We know that for many months, indeed for many years, he has given of his time in an attempt to assist the community by ridding us of this problem, the abuses we see from time to time committed by the electronic media.

I received a communication from the hon. member recently in which he mentioned that the National Council of Women, the Canadian School Trustees' Association, the Canadian Home and School and Parent-Teacher Federation and the Canadian Federation of Women's Institutes have all gone on record as national organizations in support of the bill. I should also like to take this opportunity to say that during the period I spent in municipal government I sponsored a resolution from the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities to the same effect.

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): I remember that.

Mr. Harquail: I am sorry to report to the House that this was about seven years ago and that the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities has not taken the action I hoped it would. We know, now, what the results have been. Therefore when I learned of Bill C-229, I felt that since I had not experienced very much success in the small way of my contribution through the CFMM, I might take the opportunity this afternoon to support the hon. member's bill.

Turning now to the subject matter, I have some information I would like to put on record. According to Statistics Canada, 97 per cent of Canadian homes have one or more television set, and according to the Nielsen TV Index, pre-school children aged from three to five who are at home watch TV for an average of 54 hours each week, or approximately 64 per cent of their waking hours. By the time a child is five and reaches kindergarten he has spent more time watching television than a liberal arts student spends in the classroom throughout his four years in university.

The National Commission on Crime and Violence reports that American children and young people spend from one quarter to one half of their waking hours watching television, with only sleep consuming more of their time. By the time a child is 14 he has watched the violent assault or destruction of nearly 18,000 human beings on television. During an average year, an older child attends school for 980 hours and watches TV for 1,340 hours, so that by the time he graduates from high school he will spend between 11,000 and 12,000 hours in the classroom and more than 52,000 in front of a TV set.

We all know that figures can be shifted from one side of the picture to the other according to what side of the argument one prefers. That is not my purpose this afternoon. But I believe there is sufficient evidence to support the argument that there is abuse and blatant negligence—I guess that would be the word—on the part of some producers who seem to have been given carte blanche, wide open authority with huge budgets, to take us into an area into which I am satisfied and convinced the majority of Canadians do not want to go. When I think of the non-action of the CRTC and the negligence of the CBC in allowing this type of trash—I suppose that is the word—to be put before Canadians, especially young Canadians, I just do not feel that, given the mechanisms we have in Canada both federally and provincially, in this case federally, we should put up with it.

I feel we are in a position to bring in legislation or to give a direction in policy to have this curtailed if not arrested completely. I am not saying we should try to get into people's minds. That is an approach taken by other countries, and one which we all oppose.

I think that in every society people should be allowed to make decisions for themselves. Therefore, even though some people in the adult community might not be capable of watching this type of program I should like to leave it to their decision. Nevertheless, I feel some limitation should be imposed, at least with respect to pre-school children and children up to the age of 14, 15 or even 16, maybe, and that the type of sex and violence portrayed on television ought to be eliminated completely between the early hours of programming, whenever they get under way, 7 a.m. or 8 a.m., until at least 10 p.m. or 11 p.m. I feel there is an onus upon parents to see that children have retired by that time, and if there are adult people who wish to watch this type of program after the evening news, that is a decision for them to make. But a child might see in 30 minutes as much violence as most adults experience in a lifetime. It is easy for young minds to understand, because it is vivid and graphic, and above all it is cruel and is presented as a way of life. This leads me to say that no one is safe, adult or child, from the rising level of television-stimulated violence in our society.

Those of us who are careful and diligent enough, and conscientious enough, to regulate our children's television fare carefully and hence protect them from a great deal of violence, could very well find our children victimes of violent young people whose parents are, indeed, not so conscientious and who abdicate this important aspect of parental responsibility. So in that regard no one is safe.

Not surprisingly, the introduction of television after the Second World War brought with it a controversy that closely resembled the previous discussions on radio, films and pulp fiction. This debate started in the United States in the early 1950's and grew increasingly animated throughout the next two decades. During that time, the Americans produced no less than four major government reports, dealing directly or indirectly with the subject of violence on television. These included the Kefauver Inquiry of 1954 on Juvenile Delinquency, the Dodd Surveys of 1961 and 1964, the Mass Media Task Force of the National Commission on the Causes and Prevention of Violence of 1969, and the Report of the Surgeon-General on Television and Social Behaviour in 1972. Without fail, all of these documents concluded that there was too much violence on television.

Then, of course, the consensus of the research community is that the more people watch portrayals of violence on television the more likely they are to engage in aggressive behaviour. This applies especially to children. In this context, the term "aggressive behaviour" refers to acts ranging in severity from verbal abuse to criminal violence, and is best understood—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order. I must interrupt the hon. member to tell him the time allotted to him has expired.

Mr. Walter Baker (Grenville-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I rise today to take part in this debate in support of my hon. friend from St. John's East with a special feeling of pleasure and pride at being able to support in this Chamber the work of one I regard as the leader in this Chamber—there are others who participated—in advocating a form of regulation of sex and violence in public broadcasting. The hon. member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath) is known for many things, not least of which is his eloquence, a quality which was displayed so well yesterday in the debate on national unity. He has a tremendous feeling for the atmosphere in which his children, and the children of others, can best grow.

[Mr. Harquail.]

● (1620)

I listened with interest to the hon. member for Restigouche (Mr. Harquail). I recall his work with the Canadian Association of Mayors and Municipalities. What the hon. member for St. John's East is trying to do by this bill is something which parents in Canada would like to see this parliament act upon, and act upon with despatch. I am very much discouraged by the intimation of the hon. member for St. John's East that the bill, which is meant to establish guidelines respecting the portrayal of sex and violence through the broadcasting programs, is not likely to receive second reading and referral to a committee. I say that especially in view of the tremendous amount of evidence that there is a damaging quality to the impressionable minds of children of tender years by what can be seen on the television screen.

I would hope that no one would interpret this bill as an act of censorship; it certainly is not that. But it is a bill which is intended to allow a body duly authorized by this parliament to establish guidelines. It is an attempt to allow evidence to be heard in order to establish some reasonable middle ground in terms of the obstruction of one's right to view what one wants, on the one hand, and the untrammelled right to view, on the other.

I do not think there is any doubt at all that the age of a person or child governs the impression that is made, whether for good or for evil. I think it is exceedingly important for us to remember that. While only the unbalanced might be affected by portrayals of sex or violence on television, if those unbalanced individuals are adults, there is sufficient evidence for us to be concerned about the effect of the portrayal of sex or violence on television on people of tender years—evidence enough that this parliament should act. It should not act willy-nilly, to stand upon rights or to obliterate rights; it should act to establish a way by which we can assure that, after sufficient public hearings, this industry, self-regulating though it says it tries to be, is in fact regulated in a reasonable but certain way for the public good.

I hope this bill will be acceptable to the House because it comes from the foundation of the hon. member's social conscience. In his general work in this area over a number of years he has been a leader, not just in this place but also perhaps in the country.

The other point about sex and violence on television and its impression on children of tender years is that it can give them nightmares. I have seen it in my own children and in children's friends. They told me about these things. It is not always a lasting condition, but it can be a hurtful one. It is certainly not a healthy one. That is the least that can be said for that kind of impression. But in terms of sex and one's value of life, it does lead to distortions at an age when impressions are made. From that point of view this parliament should at least be given the opportunity to discuss in some meaningful way the proposition of guidelines, and a debate is not the place to do that. Here we talk about general propositions. We have no opportunity to discuss and to view the evidence, and I think we should, as parliamentarians, at least have that opportunity.

The hon. member for St. John's East has indicated that the bill as such cannot go to a committee where it can be scrutinized. In view of its importance, I believe that the subject matter of the bill should go to committee where it can be scrutinized and the evidence heard.

I speak now personally and sincerely as a private member of this House, not as House leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition. This bill should go to a place where evidence, expert and lay, of parents and others, can be examined. May I say that I am profoundly grateful to my hon. friend from Restigouche, who is not a member of my party—which indicates the importance of this piece of legislation—for agreeing to second an amendment to this motion. I therefore move, seconded by the hon. member for Restigouche:

That Bill C-229, an act to amend the Broadcasting Act (guidelines respecting portrayal of sex and violence) be not now read a second time but that it be withdrawn and the order discharged, and the subject matter thereof be referred to the Standing Committee on Broadcasting, Films and Assistance to the Arts.

I move this amendment so that the subject matter of this bill can go to the place in this institution where it can be dealt with in detail. This action has occurred three times previously in the House. It occurred on Bill C-220, the Federal Transport Commission of Inquiry Act. It occurred on Bill C-221 having to do with the Criminal Code and the abduction of children. It happened with respect to Bill C-208, to amend the Criminal Code, which involved the provision of humane trapping equipment for animals—all of them private members' bills. If we owe that duty to animals and to transportation, then I say that we owe it to children as well.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): It is on that basis that I move this amendment.

● (1630)

Mr. Jim Fleming (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Fisheries and the Environment): Mr. Speaker, I shall be very brief. When I was asked to speak in this debate I did not know I would rise at this particular point. I regret that, and I speak most sincerely. When the hon. member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath) first stood, he made it clear that he understands the responsibilities faced by the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Communications (Mr. Milne), and I do as well.

If I may, I should like to spend approximately three or four minutes making several points. As a member of the Standing Committee on Broadcasting, Films and Assistance to the Arts, and as a vice chairman at one point, I have worked with the hon. member for St. John's East. I have attended meetings which were held in his office. Also, I have viewed material put together by the hon. member which indicated some of the problems that are being created for our young people.

I have some problem with the actual form of the bill, but I believe the hon. member for St. John's East made it clear that that was not the essence of what he wanted to talk about, nor why he put it forward. He believes there should be a thorough and thoughtful discussion of this problem. He has felt that for some time, and so have I, as I am sure others have in this House. I support his desire for that discussion. If that discussion is to take place and have proper effect, it must take place here as part of parliament's responsibility and not under some other jurisdiction which does not have those responsibilities.

It is possible to be very philosophical about the pendulum of society and society's mores. If you swing in a certain direction and you go a little too far, then the pendulum swings back. I find myself in something of a dilemma because how can we have too much freedom? You can have too much of what some people may call freedom and deny people what freedom should represent. It should represent a fair and humane society and not a society which twists young minds and misguides them about the society in which they are growing up.

As a journalist for the best part of my adult life before entering parliament, I was against censorship and very much in favour of freedom of information. As the situation regarding pornography has shown us lately, total freedom can lead to very perverse situations—situations which threaten the society we want to improve upon. Sick and perverse material is available now, including youngsters in it, and that material should not be available to juveniles in stores across our country. As well, I believe adults should have total freedom. But when material is available to them which makes them behave in an unnatural and abnormal way, then I believe perhaps that material should not be available to them.

At the very best, we are not sure if there is a direct effect on children. At the very worst, there is a direct effect from sex and violence on television. If that is the case it should be discussed with those who have the power under our laws to regulate the industry. It should be discussed also with those who act under our laws and the people of the country whose children and themselves may be affected by it.

I realize other hon. members wish to speak on this subject, but time is passing and we cannot afford to let the situation continue and wonder why. At the time this bill was introduced in parliament by the hon. member, I was proud to have seconded it. I believe the time is here for us to get down to a thorough and thoughtful consideration. I do not believe in censorship, but we must do something to protect our children and stop what is happening at the moment.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Bruce Halliday (Oxford): Mr. Speaker, orginally I had not intended to speak this afternoon on this bill introduced by the hon. member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath), but I am impressed by the sincerity which he brings to this debate and the very interesting documentation he has received from the American Medical Association to support the bill. I appreciate the dilemma the parliamentary secretary is in, in not being in a position to allow this bill to come to a vote tonight.

I congratulate my House leader, the hon. member for Grenville-Carleton (Mr. Baker), for having the wisdom to present his amendment which, if it is passed, will allow us to discuss this subject matter in committee.

I am concerned with a government which has the concern of people at heart and yet takes this type of callous attitude toward something as serious as the growth and development of our children. I am reminded of the discussions we have had in this House during the last six months precipitated by the Hon. Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Lalonde) regarding his concern about saccharin. We had good reason to challenge the minister on his unilateral regulation and his control over the use of saccharin, when all he had to go by were some animal experiments with rats. It is disappointing that he would take that kind of information, resulting in discriminatory regulations which preclude us as thinking people from making up our own minds.

However, this situation is similar inasmuch as we have something which has been shown to be more harmful to human beings, particularly children, and we have a government which tells us to forget about it. The government indicated also that it was not going to discuss it. I hope I am exaggerating, and I hope I find today that the government side will recognize this as a very important subject. It should be discussed by the representatives of the people of Canada via a committee of the House of Commons.

The hon. member for St. John's East brought to our attention some very interesting documentation from the American Medical Association which deserves accentuation, to the point where the deliberating body of the American Medical Association is prepared to confirm the risk they see in the violence that has been portrayed on television. Surely we have an obligation, on behalf of the people of Canada, to recognize the decision this body has made. At least we should open up for discussion this subject among ourselves as representatives of the people. I am appalled by government officials who have issued directions to the parliamentary secretary indicating that this is not to be. Hopefully they will reverse their stand shortly and allow this subject matter to come to discussion in committee.

In conclusion, I congratulate the hon. member for St. John's East for bringing this to the attention of the House and the people of Canada. He indicated a concern which he has always expressed in this House for the consumer. It does not matter how that consumer is looked at, whether he is a consumer of food, a consumer of housing, or a consumer of television programming. The government should show equal concern for the consumer and permit the amendment proposed by my House leader to pass, in order for this subject matter to go to the Standing Committee on Broadcasting, Films and Assistance to the Arts.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. F. A. Philbrook (Halton): Mr. Speaker, I should like to offer my congratulations to the hon. member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath) on his fine contribution. He dealt with matters which are bound to concern all of us, not just as parliamentarians, but as citizens.

[Mr. Halliday.]

I am tired of people speaking of freedom when they should really speak of licence. Exploitation of any kind may not be easy to define, but we must attempt it.

The hon. members who preceded me have examined in some detail the results of scientific research into the effects of televised violence. They did an admirable job in showing how gratuitous and unnecessary depiction of violence can strike at the very core of our social institutions. Those are the ties of affection which naturally bind us to our families, the most important foundation of society, and our fellowman.

● (1640)

I should like to go on and make a few remarks which are rather important to me in relation to this subject. At this point I should like to assure the hon. member for St. John's East that whatever the intention of the House, it would not be my intention to talk out this bill or to defeat this amendment, and I should like to make that very clear right now.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Philbrook: But if the House will bear with me, I should like to make a few remarks which I think are important and bear on this subject. I should like to direct the attention of the House to a very different level of analysis, and examine televised violence, not just as a problem which threatens the individual psyche and social well-being, but also as symptomatic of problems which face the entire broadcasting industry in Canada. These may seem like strong words, but I think that if you will bear with me you will find that they are not altogether inappropriate.

In recent weeks we have heard equally strong words about the relationship of television violence and the state of our broadcasting system from many quarters, particularly from the LaMarsh Commission on violence in the media which recently reported to the government of Ontario, even though the provinces have no jurisdiction over television. It is an unusual situation but still important.

It seems to me that all the critics, however different their conclusions and recommendations, agree on one point: that the problem of violence on television is primarily a problem of the domination of the Canadian airwaves, and more especially of Canadian cable systems, by American programing. American programing is violent and Canadian programing is not—it is as simple as that. One of my colleagues has already cited the statistic that 97 per cent of the violence appearing on Canadian television is of American origin, and less than 3 per cent is natively Canadian. What more striking proof could we want?

But, although much has been heard lately, I should like to remind the House that there is nothing particularly new to be found in the recent spate of criticism of the broadcasting system. Approximately one and a half years ago, in a speech which she delivered in Ottawa, the Minister of Communications (Mrs. Sauvé) stated that:

> If there is a singular problem today, it is the domination of our airwaves and our cable system by American programs.

The minister pointed out that, as a by-product of this domination, the country was being flooded with violent programs that bore no relationship to day to day Canadian realities—and perhaps even less relationship to our historical traditions.

The minister concluded by saying that American domination—and the concomitant violence of programing—is an obvious cultural problem which will only be solved in the long term by developing Canadian alternatives that are attractive to Canadian viewers. This is one of the most important points I should like to make.

I think it is now widely agreed that this will be one of the major challenges to be faced by our broadcasting system—at least in English Canada—in the coming years. Here we could perhaps take a lesson from our French Canadian colleagues. The LaMarsh Commission has presented an elaborate and somewhat revolutionary plan for accomplishing this goal, certainly judging from the reaction it received. The president of the CBC, Mr. Johnson, has recently published his objectives in this regard which call, among other things, for Canadianizing the airwaves, and about time, I say.

If I am correct in stating that there is widespread agreement on the nature of the problems which are facing our broadcasting system, I think I am also correct in stating that there is widespread recognition that there are a number of serious considerations which would stand in the way of any attempt to deal with these problems.

First of all, there is popularity to be considered. Really, how popular is violence? Many would argue that there is considerable popular demand for violent programing, and that shows which feature this type of programing often do quite well in the ratings game. Unfortunately it is not possible to provide a comprehensive assessment of this argument. At the present time the relationship between ratings, popularity, and public attitudes is not well understood. Nevertheless one point should be made. In the first place it is important to note that violent programs are not as overwhelmingly popular as is generally supposed. I think that probably has to be encouraging in terms of the best of what we suspect of human nature.

The spring 1976 Bureau of Broadcast Measurement findings demonstrate that there were no violent programs among the ten most popular shows, and only three in the top twenty. Secondly, even if a violent program achieves a very high rating—say a 20—all that this indicates is that 20 per cent of the population is watching it. If that sounds like a funny statement, let me explain.

Beyond this, it is possible to argue that the ratings of violent programs are artificially inflated, that is, they are packed into prime time. Prime time television is overwhelmingly dominated by violent programing. On most stations, little else is available, and this means that it is often difficult, if not impossible, to switch channels to other less violent programs. Under these circumstances, it would not be surprising if such programing did well in the ratings. To the contrary, it would be surprising it if did not do extremely well. Yet violent programs are not nearly as popular as non-violent programs, regardless of their availability. If this line of reasoning is pursued, it suggests that the present ratings of violent programs would fall even lower if genuine alternatives were available, and we hope that is one of the most important parts of the answer and a situation which we will see come to pass. That is one of the very real points.

The second of many considerations that could be raised involves the reality of hard economic facts, and there are some real ones with which we have to deal. I would not suggest for a minute that this is a prime consideration. Given a choice, I think that we have to think in terms of the moral value of our broadcasting. We have to think of good taste, and so on, and certainly we have to put economic facts second and find a way to do what is right. But these considerations are there, not only for parliament and for the broadcasting industry, but they are there for every Canadian to consider and on which to make up his mind and take a stand.

As we know, Canada has a very small market, and at the same time we want as much Canadian content as possible—something in the area of 60 per cent. This means that we may have to make sacrifices, we may have to think in terms of subsidies. At present our subsidies are of two kinds: one from the government—this is a problem which perhaps the Canadian people have not come to grips with—and the second from foreign shows. It is a simple fact that to have the desired amount and quality of broadcasting of Canadian content we must have foreign shows at present to subsidize our Canadian shows. The cost of shows is in the ratio of $2,000 for half an hour of an American show to $60,000 for half an hour of a Canadian show. This is just to give you some idea of the extent of the problem. This is our dilemma. Undoubtedly some violence is popular. It is on both the United States and Canadian channels. If we eliminate it on Canadian channels, many of our people will switch to the American channels and see it anyway.

Mr. McGrath: It could be blacked out.

Mr. Philbrook: That is another serious subject—blacking it out.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please. Because of an order made earlier today, I must interrupt the hon. member to say the time allotted to him has expired.

Mr. Ross Milne (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, I am sure the vast majority of members in the House would join me in congratulating the hon. member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath) for bringing this bill forward, and perhaps would share the viewpoint of the hon. member for Grenville-Carleton (Mr. Baker) and the hon. member for Restigouche (Mr. Harquail) that the substance of this bill might be referred to committee.

I would not want anyone—particularly the hon. member for St. John's East—to think that those who have participated in the debate are the only ones interested. I think that from time to time the hon. member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell (Mr. Ethier), the hon. member for Ottawa-Vanier (Mr. Gauthier), the hon. member for York South (Mrs. Appolloni) and others have spoken in this Chamber expressing their concern. I expect that in the next few minutes there will be some urging that we accept the motion put forward by the hon. member opposite, but I want to reinforce the argument put forward by the hon. member for Halton (Mr. Philbrook) that in the CRTC survey of programing on violence that is available to Canadian people it is stated that 97 per cent of this comes from the United States. Of the violence that is available to the Canadian viewing public, both from off air and through cable, roughly 3 per cent of it is generated by Canadian broadcasting.

● (1650)

It seems to me that pursuing this motion would present two very great difficulties. If we really want to reduce the amount of violence which is available to Canadian viewers, we would have to jam signals from American stations, and I suspect hon. members might find their in-baskets with more mail in them than usual if the government were to proceed with that in an effort to reduce the amount of violence which is shown on screens.

In terms of the 3 per cent that is generated within the country, hon. members should think about the difficulty in drawing acceptable guidelines. I suggest that the end result would be a division. There would be those who would think that the guidelines would be too restrictive and impinging on freedom of broadcasters to present what programming they feel desirable and upon the freedom of viewers. Other groups would feel that the guidelines would not be restrictive enough. As the parliamentary secretary on behalf of the minister I have had the opportunity to talk with various groups which have come to the department expressing these very concerns. Some feel very strongly that there should be more restrictions. These various groups have varying motivations.

I have also heard the representation that freedom of broadcasting is one of the fundamental rights in our democratic system and that it should not be interfered with and drawing these guidelines would be largely ineffective because 97 per cent of the violence that is available is generated in the United States.

Earlier today I was talking to the hon. member for Ottawa-Vanier, and he raised a point which I think should go on the record. Had he been able to be here he would have wanted to speak in this debate. The hon. member suggested that if there is violence in programming, broadcasters should forewarn parents and children at the beginning of that programming. I watch very little television, but I have had occasion to see on the television screen at the beginning of particular programs a statement that part or all of the contents of certain programs might be offensive or harmful for family viewing. I think that is the way we should be proceeding. That way there is still a choice on the part of viewers as to whether they choose to watch or not. That would not interfere with either the freedom of the broadcaster or the freedom of the viewer.

One of the most persuasive ways to make viewpoints known would be for those people who share the view set out in the bill of the hon. member for St. John's East to make representations to broadcasters, and more particularly, to sponsors. I do not think there is anything more persuasive to a broadcaster or a sponsor than off switches on televisions. Sponsors spend large amounts of money to sponsor programs, and if the viewing public feels that those programs are not acceptable or to their liking, I think turning off the switch is one of the most effective ways of convincing producers that there really should be a different thrust.

I want to speak in support of the minister, who has on a number of occasions spoken about this point across the country. She has tried encourage people who feel strongly about this to communicate their points of view directly to television stations and to advertisers.

Mr. McGrath: That is a cop-out Ross.

Mr. Milne: My memory is not terribly long, but I do remember the debate which went on at great length in this House on Bill C-58. Many adamant viewpoints were expressed. Bill C-58 was a measure put forward as a means of helping the broadcasting industry in Canada to be strengthened. When we consider that 97 per cent of the violence that is shown on the screens in Canada is American generated, there really needs to be a considerable strengthening of Canadian programming.

According to the background on this subject I have read, Canadian programming is predominantly non-violent. The broadcasting industry in Canada generally does not use the medium of violence to attract an audience, but those who feel strongly that violence is detrimental should let the industry know. I certainly respect the opinions of the hon. member for Halton and the hon. member for Oxford (Mr. Halliday). They are both medical doctors who obviously have researched this subject and know about the impact on behavioural patterns of children when they are subjected to or have the opportunity to watch a great deal of violence.

We should seriously discuss the Canadian broadcasting industry in this House, and we should be discussing what can be done to strengthen it. Those people who speak about this matter should be making that one of the cornerstones of their argument. We need a much stronger and more dominant broadcasting system. If the majority of people are against watching violence on television, then that same majority want to view good programming which is generated by Canadian sources.

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): Don't talk it out, Ross.

Mr. Milne: It was interesting when Bill C-58 was being debated—

Mr. McGrath: Don't talk it out.

Mr. Paproski: Let it go to the committee.

Mr. Milne: —there were very few people who—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please. The hour provided for the consideration of private members' business has now expired. This House stands adjourned until Monday at 2 p.m. pursuant to Standing Order 2(1).

At 5 p.m. the House adjourned, without question put, pursuant to Standing Order.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Monday, July 11, 1977

The House met at 2 p.m.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[English]

POLYSAR

SUGGESTED ACCEPTANCE OF CONCLUSIONS OF COMMITTEE REPORT—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Peter Elzinga (Pembina): Mr. Speaker, I rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43. My motion is short and to the point. I move, seconded by the hon. member for Edmonton Centre (Mr. Paproski):

That this House congratulate the public accounts committee on its report on the Polysar affair and further accepts the conclusions of the report urging the government to give prompt and serious consideration to its recommendations.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I have consistently rejected putting the question on motions under Standing Order 43 calling for congratulations. However, urging the government to give serious consideration to certain recommendations perhaps adds another element. In order that the motion may be presented for debate, pursuant to Standing Order 43 it will require the unanimous consent of the House. Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

[Translation]

SOCIAL SECURITY

PROPOSAL WIDOWS OF PENSIONERS AGE 60 OR OVER BE PAID TWO THIRDS OF JOINT PENSION—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Eudore Allard (Rimouski): Mr. Speaker, under the provisions of Standing Order 43, I ask for the unanimous consent of the House to move a motion dealing with an important matter of pressing necessity.

In view of the fact that most aged people experience very distressing housing problems, especially affecting widows of pensioners, that the federal government should grant priority to those senior citizens, and that a new policy in favour of Canadians belonging to that age group has long since been overdue, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Roberval (Mr. Gauthier):

That the House enjoin the Minister of National Health and Welfare to take the necessary steps so that a 60-year old woman who is unfortunate enough to lose her pensioned husband may draw two thirds of their joint pension till age 65 when she would obtain the full amount of her old age pension.

Mr. Speaker: Under the provisions of Standing Order 43, presentation of such a motion requires the unanimous consent of the House. Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

[English]

PARLIAMENT HILL

CONGRATULATIONS TO PERSONNEL TAKING PART IN CHANGING OF GUARD CEREMONY—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. C. Douglas (Bruce-Grey): Mr. Speaker, I rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43 on a matter of urgent and pressing necessity which I genuinely believe will receive the unanimous support of the House. Considering the magnificent spectacle which takes place daily I move, seconded by the hon. member for Ottawa-Vanier (Mr. Gauthier):

That this House extend its congratulations to the personnel involved in the Changing of the Guard ceremony composed of members of the Governor General's Footguards of Ottawa and the Canadian Grenadier Guards of Montreal and the regular bands of the Canadian Armed Forces for their contribution to a ceremony which has now become a colourful tradition of international repute in the national capital.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

ATOMIC ENERGY OF CANADA LIMITED

MINISTER RESPONSIBLE FOR CORPORATION AND FOR DEFICIT—PROPOSED AUTOMATIC REFERENCE OF ANNUAL REPORT TO COMMITTEE

Mr. Walter Baker (Grenville-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, my question to the Prime Minister concerns the incredible statement he made in Vancouver about ministerial responsibility as it relates to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources and AECL's $290 million boondoggle about which we heard last week. The Prime Minister said this about this $290 million loss:

If you are in a hotel and somebody down at the end of the line steals something from other rooms, it doesn't mean that the manager has to be fired as incompetent.

The Prime Minister said this as if referring to the stealing of some towels. Bearing in mind the revelations of the past week—and if anyone stole $290 million worth of towels from this government, if it operated a hotel, and I hope it does not, the manager would deserve to be fired—my question to the Prime Minister is this: Is the minister of Energy, Mines and Resources responsible for AECL? If he is not, who is responsible for the agency, from the point of view of the Prime Minister?

An hon. Member: Put him in charge of towels.

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the answer to the first part of the question is, yes, he is the minister through whom AECL reports to the House of Commons. As for the matter of responsibility in the case of Crown corporations, the opposition themselves have put themselves on record several times as saying they did not want ministers running Crown corporations. Everytime we attempt to do it, there is objection to it.

• (1410)

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): The Prime Minister knows that is not so, Mr. Speaker. The Prime Minister should apprise himself of Section 70(1) of the Financial Administration Act which specifically states that the minister is responsible for authorizing the operating budget with respect to this particular Crown corporation and other Crown corporations. Does the Prime Minister agree that this puts an onus upon the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources for the operating budget and as well puts a responsibility on him for the operating deficit, about which he was warned, which amounted to a total loss in operating expenses over revenue in 1977 in excess of $290 million? Is this not a responsibility of the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources and is there any good reason why the Prime Minister should tolerate such an incompetent in his cabinet?

Mr. Trudeau: Mr. Speaker, I have dealt with this several times, that is, the problem of interference with Crown corporations by ministers of the government. The rules are quite well established that the minister should not involve himself in the day-to-day operations of the Crown corporation. I have indicated before, and I believe the President of the Treasury Board has also, that we are going to bring in some Crown corporation legislation. Hopefully it will give the government power to intervene in the operation of Crown corporations. I look forward to having the support of the opposition on this. Of course, they will have to flip-flop because they have always said we should not interfere.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): If there are going to be any flip-flops, we have a great example to follow from this government. We are not talking about the day-to-day operations of the Crown corporation and the Prime Minister knows that. What we are talking about is the question of accountability to parliament, and the people, of these Crown corporations. That is the issue. Does the government intend, at least as a first step, to require that all future annual reports of all Crown corporations be referred automatically to the appropriate standing committee rather than have to wait the convenience of the government with respect to this matter? We can see what lack of control has led to in terms of AECL.

[Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton).]

Mr. Trudeau: Mr. Speaker, with regard to the first part of the hon. member's question, he must realize that an overwhelming portion of this loss was in one contract with Argentina. Surely even the House leader of the opposition would not argue that it could have been the minister's role to negotiate this contract when a Crown corporation was the agency.

MINISTERIAL RESPONSIBILITY FOR HIRING AND FIRING EXECUTIVE OFFICERS—ROLE OF DR. FOSTER IN FUTURE

Mr. Gordon Towers (Red Deer): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. In view of the minister's statement concerning Atomic Energy of Canada Limited last Thursday that "the board of directors recommended to me that Dr. Foster be asked to step down as president and chief executive officer and I have already acted on that proposal" and "a committee of the board is now engaged in a search for a new president and chief executive officer with the business training and experience needed to manage AECL", will the minister tell the House exactly what his ministerial responsibility is in the firing and hiring of presidents and chief executive officers of AECL? In other words, who is giving the orders?

Hon. Alastair Gillespie (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I made it very clear that I accepted my responsibility to appoint and to remove the senior officers, that is to say the chairman and the president, the chief executive officer.

Mr. Towers: The minister also said "I am hopeful that the company will continue to benefit from his pre-eminent technical knowledge and experience in the nuclear field." Can the minister state now what position Dr. Foster will hold in AECL and will the minister be making that decision?

Mr. Gillespie: Mr. Speaker, I cannot give the hon. member a precise answer as to what particular role Dr. Foster will have in the future with respect to AECL. I hope, and I have discussed this with him, that it will be possible to work out some kind of technical consulting assignment so that the corporation will have the benefit of his pre-eminent knowledge in this field.

Mr. Towers: Will a position be created for Dr. Foster or is one already in existence?

Mr. Gillespie: With respect to the assignment as a consultant, there is the matter of defining the precise nature of that assignment of Dr. Foster. I expect that might take place in about two months time.

* * *

ELECTION EXPENSES

CONTRIBUTIONS TO POLITICAL PARTIES BY CROWN CORPORATIONS—POSSIBILITY OF PROVIDING GUIDELINES—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister. The report on political contributions reveals the fact that Canadair, a wholly owned government Crown corporation, and Panarctic, in which the government has a controlling interest, have both made political contributions to political parties in this country. In view of the fact that the Canadian people would undoubtedly be concerned about agencies supported by public money making contributions to any political party, I want to ask the Prime Minister whether he thinks these contributions are appropriate in the circumstances.

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): I am not aware of those facts, but if they are as stated it would seem surprising to me that Crown corporations, being wholly owned by the people of Canada, would want to make contributions to any political party. Here again, I suppose, we are in the area of ministerial responsibility. We have just heard an indication that in some cases members want the ministers to intervene—it is said the minister should have done so in the case of AECL; in other cases as in the case of Petro Canada, the opposition has argued that the minister should not intervene. I shall try to ascertain from the hon. member what he wants the minister to do—to take the Crown corporation to task over this or to let parliament do it at the appropriate time.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): We have been assured from time to time by the Prime Minister and his colleagues that there were guidelines laying down the manner in which the Crown corporations should carry on their operations. Is there any provision in the existing guidelines which would prohibit Crown corporations from making political contributions? If there is not, will the Prime Minister undertake to see that such a provision is placed in the guidelines and made public?

Mr. Trudeau: If my memory serves me well, these guidelines were made public in the House a few months ago; perhaps we could both refer to them. My memory is that they have to do with the operation of Crown corporations within the bounds of law and propriety; I do not think they refer in particular to contributions to political parties. I am sure the hon. member would not argue that contributing to political parties is improper per se though perhaps in the case of a Crown corporation, or possibly unions working for Crown corporations, we could make sure there are no contributions of that nature permitted. But I would be interested to ascertain the hon. member's views on this subject.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): This is hardly an occasion upon which I have an opportunity to express my views but the Prime Minister surely knows by the nature of my question that I am opposed to Crown corporations making political contributions. What I am asking him is whether he is prepared to put into the guidelines a provision prohibiting Crown corporations from making contributions to political parties.

I wish to ask the right hon. gentleman also a question with reference to Polysar which he was told as far back as 1973 had been paying kickbacks into unnumbered bank accounts—a fact which has since been verified by the Public Accounts Committee. What steps has the government taken to make sure that not only Polysar but other Crown corporations will be prohibited from following such a practice in future? Can we be assured that this practice will not continue in Polysar and that it will not be pursued by other corporations? Can the Prime Minister give us this definite assurance?

Mr. Trudeau: Yes, Mr. Speaker. If I may answer the latter part of the question first, I would refer the hon. member to statements made some months ago about Crown corporations being told to operate within the framework of law and propriety. The ministers contacted the various Crown corporations at that time to make sure that these various guidelines would be adhered to. As to the first part of the question, I would remind the hon. member, as I was reminded by the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce on my left, who apparently was informed of these facts, that in the case of Canadair it was apparently not the property of the Canadian government at the time it made these contributions to parties. If that is true, the hon. member's question seems irrelevant. With regard to Panarctic, we are, of course, only minority shareholders and it might be very difficult to ensure that the majority shareholders do not want to recognize what political parties are worthy of their support.

* * *

● (1420)

[Translation]

NATIONAL ENERGY BOARD

REQUEST FOR FRENCH COPY OF REPORT ONE WEEK BEFORE DEBATE

Mr. C. A. Gauthier (Roberval): Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct a question to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources.

Considering that all members sitting in this House, either French-speaking or English-speaking, have the duty to study very carefully the National Energy Board report in view of the debate that will take place in August or a little later at the opening of the session, considering also that the said report is made up of three volumes, only one of which is available in French, would the minister be kind enough to tell us whether the other two volumes are being translated now? If so, can we hope to receive them at least one week before the debate takes place, because French-speaking eastern members are just as interested as the others in this matter?

[English]

Hon. Alastair Gillespie (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I shall make every effort to see that it is available for the House. While I cannot promise it, I can assure the hon. member that I will make the strongest possible representations to the National Energy Board that they supply that information.

On the first part of the hon. member's question dealing with the annual report of AECL, today I talked to the acting chief excutive officer with regard to expediting the French copies of the report, and I hope we will be able to provide them to the House very shortly.

* * *

POLYSAR

ALERTING OF COUNTRIES WHOSE CITIZENS ACCEPTED KICKBACKS—REASON FOR ALLEGED FAILURE TO INVESTIGATE COMPLAINT OF AUDITOR GENERAL

Mr. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct my question to the Prime Minister. It arises out of the second report of the Public Accounts Committee, commonly referred to now as the Polysar report. The committee concluded that in its opinion Polysar had engaged in improper business practices which were designed to break foreign laws on tax evasion, currency control and fraud. This, by implication, makes the government of Canada, parliament and the people of Canada unwitting accomplices in the commission of crimes against countries friendly to our own. I wonder whether the Prime Minister would advise the House what steps the government is taking to alert the home governments of these Polysar customers engaged in the rebate practices as to the names, dates of involvement and amounts, of cash rebated in each case of improper kickbacks?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I have not read the report of the committee, which I understood was brought down last week while I was travelling in the fair provinces of British Columbia and Alberta, and I am not yet informed as to what disposition will be made.

Mr. Mazankowski: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. It is encouraging to note that the Prime Minister is not going to leave this decision to the executive of the Crown corporation. The committee also stated that the investigation of the former minister of public works, the hon. member for Westmount, was inadequate and in the same paragraph notes that there was no response to Mr. Henderson's letters, the former auditor general. May I ask the Prime Minister whether this reluctance to reply to Mr. Henderson's letter was a matter of policy, or did the Prime Minister feel that he had no responsibility or obligation to ensure that this extremely important matter would be followed up, a matter about which the auditor general felt compelled to write directly to the Prime Minister?

[Mr. Gauthier (Roberval).]

Mr. Trudeau: Mr. Speaker, I repeat that I have not read the report to which the hon. member refers, but my recollection of events is that the auditor general felt it important enough to write to me but not to put it in his report to parliament. Secondly, I think my recollection is right that he was no longer auditor general within a very short period of time after I had received this letter.

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, my supplementary is simply this: did the Prime Minister not feel he had an obligation to follow up this very important matter? Did he feel satisfied leaving it in the hands of the former minister of public works, now the hon. member for Westmount? Is he saying that he ignored the letter and left it entirely up to the former minister of public works?

Mr. Trudeau: Mr. Speaker, several months ago I answered these questions, perhaps as much as a year ago. I made it quite clear that I saw the Auditor General's letter and was somewhat dismayed by it. I wrote the former minister of public works and asked him to follow it up. I believe these letters were tabled at the time. This is the way I generally run my government, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): It shows.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Trudeau: I am glad to see the opposition finds that it shows. This is the reason our cabinet does not fall apart, as happens on the opposite side.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Allan Lawrence (Northumberland-Durham): Mr. Speaker, if I may further refresh the Prime Minister's memory, in the Prime Minister's letter to the then president of the treasury board he asked for the president of the treasury board to investigate and report back to him. The evidence presented in the Public Accounts Committee is that the then president of the treasury board never did. If the Prime Minister runs his cabinet and his office this way, may I simply ask him what provision he is making to make sure that when he asks for a report he gets it?

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Trudeau: Mr. Speaker, I am sure, as with the hon. member's office, that there is some provision for bringing items forward and seeing that they are followed up.

Mr. Lawrence: After six years?

Mr. Trudeau: In this case perhaps somebody did ascertain from the then minister of public works that he had contacted Polysar and that he had been given assurances which were then made part of the record.

HER MAJESTY, THE QUEEN

INQUIRY AS TO ATTENDANCE AT OPENING OF NEXT SESSION OF PARLIAMENT

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. He has been out in Alberta where he witnessed a wonderful reception.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Diefenbaker: I am not speaking of the synthetic or organized one.

Mr. Paproski: No!

Mr. Diefenbaker: I am speaking of the reception for the Prince of Wales and Prince Andrew which revealed something of the loyalty of the people of Alberta, including the Indians particularly, to Her Majesty. I should like to ask the Prime Minister whether or not arrangements have now been made whereby on this her silver anniversary year she will be given an opportunity this fall to open parliament and to generally carry out the responsibilities which are hers?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, we hope to make an announcement on this in due course. When we know when parliament closes, then we will be in a position to know when it opens.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Diefenbaker: Mr. Speaker, at the rate the government is going in its unsettled way, I can understand that the Prime Minister does not know where the government is going or where its policies are going.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Diefenbaker: The government should let parliament know whether she is going to be invited here. Regardless of whether this session takes another week or month, is she going to be invited here this fall? Why is there this unnecessary evasion? Months ago the Prime Minister said that he had this in mind. I now ask him: has it gone out of his mind, or does he intend to have her here?

● (1430)

Mr. Trudeau: Mr. Speaker, I think I should let the right hon. gentlemen in on the secret. He is not a member in full standing of the Royal Society of Canada, as I am.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

An hon. Member: That is worn out.

Mr. Trudeau: However, I think the right hon. gentleman would be interested in knowing that when I saw Her Majesty in London, I told her that if there were a new session around that time I hoped she would want to read the Speech from the Throne. She accepted with pleasure, but I cannot make an announcement on it until we know if the opposition is going to co-operate in bringing this session to an end.

Mr. Diefenbaker: The Prime Minister spoke about the Royal Society of Canada, and he pointed out that he is a full sized member of the Royal Society. That, of course, gave him the opportunity to do his pirouette in London.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Diefenbaker: I rather expected him to do the can-can when he was in Paris. I point out that those in the same position as myself in the Royal Society include two former Governors General of Canada and our predecessors Mr. Pearson and Mr. St. Laurent.

Mr. Trudeau: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Trudeau: It's about the pirouette, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member for Halton.

* * *

[Translation]

TRADE

ARTHUR REPORT—POSSIBILITY OF INCREASING SALE OF AUTOMOTIVE PARTS TO UNITED STATES

Mr. F. A. Philbrook (Halton): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce.

In view of the findings of the Arthur report on the North American automotive industry, does the minister intend to consider the possibility of increasing our exports of automotive parts?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): Mr. Speaker, we are now working with the automotive industry and the manufacturers of parts to help them increase their production. We had contacts with other countries and we hope to find foreign markets for Canadian automotive parts, as the hon. member is suggesting.

* * *

[English]

FARM CREDIT CORPORATION

POSSIBLE CONFLICT OF INTEREST IN AWARDING OF CONTRACT BY CHAIRMAN TO MANITOBA INSTITUTE—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Perrin Beatty (Wellington-Grey-Dufferin-Waterloo): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister. In view of the fact that the Minister of Agriculture has confirmed that the chairman of the Farm Credit Corporation was also a director of the Manitoba Institute of Management at the same time as he awarded it a consulting contract on behalf of the Farm Credit Corporation for which tenders were not called and which cost the taxpayers over $80,000, can the Prime Minister tell the House whether he is satisfied that the awarding of this contract to a company of which the chairman was a director in no way conflicted with the government's conflict of interest guidelines and, in particular, in no way conflicted with the Prime Minister's statement in the House on December 18, 1973 that, and I quote:

> Regarding outside employment, public servants are being asked not to accept outside office or employment that could place on them demands inconsistent with their official duties or call into question their capacity to perform those duties in an objective manner.

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I was apprised of this matter just as I came into the House by the excellent Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Agriculture. I am not sure if he is in a position to report yet, but he told me he was following this up and might be prepared to answer tomorrow.

REASON PRELIMINARY STUDY BY MANITOBA INSTITUTE COST MORE THAN STUDY BY SIBALD

Mr. Perrin Beatty (Wellington-Grey-Dufferin-Waterloo): Mr. Speaker, in the continuing absence of the Minister of Agriculture I will ask a question of the acting Minister of Agriculture. In view of the fact that although the controversial and thoroughly thorough—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Beatty: I am so taken aback by the Prime Minister's pirouette that I am lost for words. In view of the fact that the controversial and thorough Sibald management audit of the Farm Credit Corporation cost the taxpayers only $76,892 while the preliminary study by the Manitoba Institute of Management which merely defined the parameters of the Sibald study cost over $80,000, can the acting minister tell the House why the preliminary study cost more money than the final report, and in view of the fact that the Manitoba Institute of Management tendered unsuccessfully on the management audit, does the minister not agree that putting the initial study out to tender might have saved taxpayers a considerable amount of money?

Mr. Irénée Pelletier (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I would like to advise that the Minister of Agriculture is in Victoria today, and for the next three days, with the ministers of agriculture of the provinces, and the hon. member knows that.

Some hon. Members: Shame.

Mr. Pelletier: I have discussed this question with officials of the department, and I am advised that Dr. Kristjanson's actions did not involve a real conflict of interest. The Manitoba Institute of Management is a non-profit educational institute, and its selection to define the terms of reference of a management audit, although made initially by the chairman, was ratified by all members of the corporation.

[Mr. Beatty.]

HOUSE OF COMMONS

PRESENCE IN SPEAKER'S GALLERY OF DELEGATION FROM FEDERAL REPUBLIC OF WEST GERMANY

Mr. Speaker: Before carrying on with the question period, I know all hon. members will want to join with me in calling attention to the presence in our gallery of a very distinguished delegation from the Federal Republic of West Germany, headed by its most distinguished chancellor, His Excellency Helmut Schmidt.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

* * *

CROWN CORPORATIONS

PROPOSED AUTOMATIC REFERENCE OF ANNUAL REPORTS TO COMMITTEES—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Joe Clark (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister, who I naturally would like to welcome back from an event where I understand that he too became a "mangeur de hot dog".

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Clark: In his discussions regarding Crown corporations the Prime Minister has often talked about changing the relationship between Crown corporations and the government but not their relationship with parliament. Perhaps the Prime Minister missed the question of the House leader of the Official Opposition, who asked the Prime Minister whether it is going to be the intention of the government to require an automatic, regular reference of annual reports of Crown corporations to the appropriate standing committees of the House of Commons so that parliament, too, can be involved in the policy direction of Crown corporations. Will the Prime Minister answer that question and tell us whether his government now intends to change its policy and make regular references of annual reports of Crown corporations to appropriate standing committees of the House?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I thank the Leader of the Opposition for welcoming me back from that very festive occasion.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Trudeau: I can assure him that I have not and have never had any contempt for those who eat hot dogs. As a matter of fact, I just ate some with my family at lunch, and I feel fine.

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): How does the family feel?

An hon. Member: You look a little peaked.

Mr. Trudeau: The right hon. gentleman from Prince Albert referred to a pirouette.

An hon. Member: He is still here.

Mr. Trudeau: The right hon. gentleman has not left the House, but he moved from his place because, I suppose, he was afraid I would take a shot at him.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

An hon. Member: He is going back to his seat; fire away.

Mr. Trudeau: Having dealt with the preamble of the question of the Leader of the Opposition, the government has no objection to referring all annual reports of Crown corporations, but I do not think we would want to make that part of any law because I think the opposition would find its schedule somewhat overcrowded. The opposition complains now that it does not have time to consider the estimates of departments, and if it wants to refer reports of Crown corporations, it will not have time even to do the things which relate directly to the government let alone those things which relate indirectly to the government.

Mr. Clark: One thing this House need never fear is that the Prime Minister might sometime answer questions directly. After the Prime Minister's latest approach to a pirouette would he agree as a matter of policy to recommend a change in the Standing Orders of the House of Commons—we would certainly accept such a change—regarding references of annual reports of Crown corporations to standing committees in a way which would allow the opposition parties to choose those annual reports that they would like to have referred each year, thus ensuring that there would be a capacity in parliament to review the activities of Crown corporations and to participate in policy direction? Would he agree—I see he is consulting with the House leader, who performed in a sterling way in his absence—to that kind of amendment to the Standing Orders to give parliament a role in the direction of Crown corporations?

• (1440)

Mr. Trudeau: I did confer with the House leader and he has confirmed what I said in my first answer, that if the opposition wants to refer any particular annual report and time is made for it in the conduct of the debates, we would gladly entertain that suggestion. I would just repeat that it does not seem to be a good practice to make it automatic or to give the opposition the right to select at random. This is an amendment to the Standing Order—

An hon. Member: We are talking about parliament selecting, not the opposition.

Mr. Trudeau: The Standing Orders apply, of course, to parliament, but sometimes they can be changed to suit the convenience of the opposition and sometimes they can be changed in the interest of parliament as a whole.

Mr. Paproski: Too many jumps on the trampoline.

Mr. Trudeau: We have suggestions of our own for changing the Standing Orders, and if the House leaders want to get together, they can improve them.

Mr. Clark: The Prime Minister once again is demonstrating his claim to the title of "Wizard of If". I would like the Prime Minister to tell the House of Commons whether he is prepared to have the Standing Orders of parliament changed to allow a regular review of those Crown corporations which parliament chooses to review and, if not, why not?

Mr. Trudeau: Yes, Mr. Speaker, we would be prepared to change the Standing Orders in that way if the opposition would be prepared to change the Standing Orders so that the second reading of any bill would last only one day.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

* * *

INDIAN AFFAIRS

MEASURES TO IMPROVE CONDITIONS FOR NATIVES—DISCUSSION OF TREATY RIGHTS

Mr. John Gilbert (Broadview): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development. In view of the exchange between Prince Charles and the Indian chiefs concerning the visit in Alberta at which Prince Charles expressed his concern about many of the hardships endured by native people in Canada and the Indian chiefs expressed their concern with regard to the encroachment of their treaty rights, unemployment, poverty and the problems with alcohol, has the minister any specific programs dealing with some of these critical issues?

Hon. Warren Allmand (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): I have, Mr. Speaker, but there are too many of them to discuss in the House in the question period.

An hon. Member: We'll give you time.

Mr. Gilbert: Mr. Speaker, probably the minister should direct his attention to the question of treaty rights and the encroachment the Indian chiefs are alleging. With regard to the discussions that would be taking place in the near future concerning treaty rights, is it the intention of the minister to present specific proposals so that they would form the basis of discussion with the Indian chiefs?

Mr. Allmand: Many things were discussed. Some of them had to do with the treaties, some with economic development, some with local control. I might say that this afternoon we are having a meeting of the joint committee of the cabinet and the National Indian Brotherhood regarding certain matters relating to the revision of the Indian Act, and so on. Furthermore, I have been asked to return to Alberta on September 22, which is the actual date of the signing of Treaty 7, for further discussions on that treaty and what might be done to improve it.

Mr. Clark: Send Alastair to renegotiate it.

Oral Questions

THE CANADIAN ECONOMY

INFLATION—GOVERNMENT TARGET FOR RATE THIS YEAR AND NEXT

Mr. Sinclair Stevens (York-Simcoe): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Finance. In view of the McCracken report which was prepared for OECD nations making it clear that unemployment and inflation are tightly linked together, would the Minister of Finance indicate what he believes would be the rate of inflation in Canada this year—originally the target was 6 per cent—and could he indicate what the target will be for next year—originally it was to be 4 per cent?

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (Minister of Finance): As I have indicated to the House several times, we anticipate—principally because of the food price increases in the first quarter—that we would not be able to be within the guideline hoped for under the Anti-Inflation Act. As to what the target would be for next year, as I have often said to the hon. gentleman, it seems to me that given the effect of outside events, it is unwise to try to set precise targets.

SUGGESTED BILATERAL ARRANGEMENTS WITH FOREIGN EXPORTERS TO HELP MAINTAIN EMPLOYMENT IN MANUFACTURING

Mr. Sinclair Stevens (York-Simcoe): My question is again to the Minister of Finance. Since employment in our manufacturing industries now stands at one per cent lower than last year, can the minister tell the House whether he views the manufacturing industry to be an important source of new jobs and, if so, having regard to the weakened state of some sectors, such as textiles, footwear and electrical products, will he consider at least having bilateral arrangements with foreign exporters which might help to preserve employment in the manufacturing industry?

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (Minister of Finance): In a number of cases in the past we have sought such export limitation arrangements. I would have to say in general terms, however, that those kinds of arrangements have been increasingly difficult to achieve in recent years. I quite agree with the hon. gentleman that expansion in manufacturing employment is fundamental to continued progress in Canada. We recognize the difficulties that are involved, particularly in the multilateral trade negotiations, of having to make exchanges in certain tariff protection which we have at present. It is for that reason that we are seeking a substantial reduction in foreign tariffs, particularly those of the European Economic Community.

POSSIBILITY OF NEW BUDGET TO IMPROVE CONDITIONS

Mr. Sinclair Stevens (York-Simcoe): Again I direct my question to the Minister of Finance. In view of the fact that we have the highest unemployment level of any of the large OECD nations, we have high and continuing inflation, the highest budgetary deficit in our history, a low real growth, only 4 per cent compared with the anticipated 5.5 per cent for OECD nations, and the highest imparted deficit of any OECD nation, would the minister indicate if he is considering a new budget as early as possible to help redeem his record?

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, in view of the fact that the hon. gentleman voted against the last budget which would create further employment—

Mr. Stevens: It is not working.

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): —and economic growth in Canada while at the same time containing inflation, it is difficult to see how the recommendations of the hon. member for York-Simcoe could be taken seriously by anyone.

* * *

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS

INCREASE IN COMMUTER FARES IN MONTREAL AREA—GOVERNMENT ACTION

Mr. Hal Herbert (Vaudreuil): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport. Canadian National Railways have recently put into effect another fare increase for commuter train service in the Montreal area and the Canadian Transport Commission did not intervene. I would like to ask whether the Minister of Transport considered any action and, if so, why was none taken?

[Translation]

Mr. Marcel Roy (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, last October the minister contacted the CN authorities who have already accepted his suggestion to postpone the rate increase and the service reduction. This intervention was conditional on an agreement with transport minister Raymond Mailloux and the various public organizations, so that the Montreal area transportation committee, which has been set up by the provincial government, might table its report in July 1977. Hopefully the province of Quebec will act in the areas of transportation where it has full competence, and advise this committee of its intentions and its schedule for the whole program. I must tell the hon. member that it is the Canadian Transport Commission which authorizes all rate increases it deems necessary and, in this case, the commission had granted this increase.

* * *

[English]

ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE

SUGGESTED INQUIRY INTO ORGANIZED CRIME—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Elmer M. MacKay (Central Nova): My question is for the Minister of Justice. Now that the government has called an inquiry into certain aspects of the RCMP without, of course, a specific reference to the commissioners to assess the responsibility of its political directors, will the minister and the government now have the sense of appropriateness to accede to the requests of the opposition parties for an inquiry into organized crime in this country, because to do otherwise would seem to indicate a curious sense of priorities and a lack of appropriateness under the circumstances?

Hon. Ron Basford (Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, this was a subject which was thoroughly discussed at the recent federal-provincial meetings of attorneys general. Certainly, from that discussion I drew the conclusion that it would not be appropriate for the Minister of Justice or for the federal government at this time to call such an inquiry. We did issue a joint statement regarding police intelligence and police communications between our government and the various provincial governments.

* * *

ROYAL CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICE

QUEBEC INQUIRY INTO BREAK-IN AT L'AGENCE DE PRESSE LIBRE—MINISTER'S KNOWLEDGE OF MATERIAL TO BE PRESENTED BY FORCE

Mr. Elmer M. MacKay (Central Nova): Mr. Speaker, the minister gave almost the same answer when we requested an inquiry into the RCMP earlier, but there has been a reversal there as well. I would like to ask the Solicitor General if he has been fully briefed on the documentation and other material that the RCMP is prepared to make available into the Quebec inquiry into L'Agence de Presse Libre break-in and whether any process of evaluation or consultation has been set up or initiated between the Solicitor General and his Quebec counterpart following the announcement of the Quebec inquiry, since according to the minister earlier there was none previous to the announcement of the inquiry?

● (1450)

Hon. Francis Fox (Solicitor General): Mr. Speaker, the Quebec commission is in the process of being set up and I, of course, will be represented by counsel on that commission.

* * *

PRIVACY

REQUEST FOR CHANGE IN LEGISLATION ON WIRETAPPING—POSSIBILITY OF REFERRING LEGISLATION TO SUPREME COURT

Mr. Eldon M. Woolliams (Calgary North): Mr. Speaker, my question for the Minister of Justice relates to the Prime Minister's statement about when the House may recess. The effect of my question would certainly be to shorten Bill C-51. I am not talking about the gun control part of it. I heard the Prime Minister say something about taking a shot at the right hon. member for Prince Albert, but I am sure with his ability he will be able to handle that situation. My question relates to the invasion of privacy. It would seem to me that the police have no business in the homes of law abiding citizens, rooting around for information. In relation to unauthorized wiretapping, derivative evidence means evidence outside the conversation would be admissible. Would the minister reconsider his position in light of the statement made by Mr. Cartwright and Mr. Cooper and other members of the Advocacy Society of Toronto, who are benchers? Would the minister repent and tell us now that wiretapping is illegal and if the court gives approval of it they are tacitly agreeing with illegal acts?

Hon. Ron Basford (Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, I would agree totally with the hon. member that unauthorized wiretapping is illegal and surely should carry with it the full sanction and penalties provided for in the law against those who engage in it.

Mr. Woolliams: Mr. Speaker, we have heard that answer many times. We have the Rae case in which evidence was declared admissible because it was relevant, however. Is the minister prepared to take the section dealing with the invasion of privacy and the amendment—which he considered a compromise with other members of the committee within his own party—and put that before the Supreme Court by terms of reference to see if it complies with the terms and conditions of the Bill of Rights which guarantees privacy and freedom in this nation?

Mr. Basford: First, Mr. Speaker, the amendment that was proposed by myself and other members of the committee is in my view along the substance of the recommendations of the Law Reform Commission, relative to evidence generally. Second, I think I would resist a reference. Obviously, the Supreme Court of Canada and certainly I—at least, as minister—have always endeavoured to keep the number of references to a minimum because that court, like any other, prefers to deal if at all possible with factual situations. Obviously, the amendment and the legislation will have to be certified by officers of the Department of Justice as complying with the Bill of Rights. If someone has a view that such certification is incorrect they would be entitled to take that argument before the court and before the Supreme Court of Canada.

* * *

CROWN CORPORATIONS

FAILURE TO EMPLOY WOMEN IN MANAGEMENT POSITIONS—GOVERNMENT ACTION

Mr. R. Gordon L. Fairweather (Fundy-Royal): Mr. Speaker, my question to the Prime Minister is about Crown corporations and the proposal to introduce legislation reorganizing them. The recent report of the Advisory Council on the Status of Women noted the deplorable record of almost all Crown corporations respecting women in management positions. This oversight probably does not need legislation but could the Prime Minister suggest to his Cabinet colleagues that the Public Service Commission policy—which I presume is government policy in this regard—would fit very well into the Crown corporations. As of now I regret to say the record is deplorable.

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the feeling expressed by the hon. member and the goals he suggests are ones that we share. There should be a better record in the area of employment of women in Crown corporations. Incidentally there should be a better record in the promotion of bilingualism. These are two areas in which Crown corporations have been contacted to enjoin them to more progress. I shall ask the minister responsible for the status of women to bring me up-to-date on the facts and figures as regards women. On the acceptance and promotion of bilingualism, I have already asked for a report.

* * *

SMALL BUSINESS

DATE OF ANNOUNCEMENT OF POLICY

Mr. Otto Jelinek (High Park-Humber Valley): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of State (Small Business). On December 9, 1976 I asked the minister when we could expect an announcement on a much needed small business policy and his reply was, "Soon". Nearly six months later, on May 30 this year, with still no semblance of a policy, we spoon-fed the minister, by way of an opposition day, a number of suggestions and recommendations toward the formation of such a policy. I should like to ask the minister once again whether he could report on the progress of at least some form of a paper dealing with a small business policy and specifically when can we expect it to be made public?

Hon. Len Marchand (Minister of State (Small Business)): Mr. Speaker, I have said on a number of occasions that the target date I had set for presenting a paper to Cabinet was June. The paper is just about complete and should be going forward to my colleagues shortly.

Mr. Jelinek: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Could the minister give the House an undertaking that the announcement on small business policy will be made in the proper forum, this House of Commons and not outside?

Mr. Marchand: Mr. Speaker, it would certainly be my desire to make every announcement in the House of Commons, if time permits, but I hope this place will shut down soon so that we can all go home and see our constituents.

* * *

NORTHERN AFFAIRS

DATE OF POLICY STATEMENT—SUBJECT MATTER OF STATEMENT

Mr. Bill Jarvis (Perth-Wilmot): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development who has made several references recently to a policy statement he proposes to make regarding the north, a policy statement which is apparently to be the framework on which decisions affecting the north will be made in future, such policy decisions as those affecting pipelines, for example. In view of the fact that we will be debating the pipeline soon, can the minister tell the House whether the policy statement will be made in this House on or before July 15?

[Mr. Fairweather.]

Hon. Warren Allmand (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Mr. Speaker, the policy statement would relate more particularly to the constitutional evolution of the north and not necessarily to pipelines and so forth, although it would have some significance for these other decisions. Whether it would be made in the House or not would depend upon when it is approved by a committee of Cabinet and that has not yet been done.

Mr. Jarvis: Mr. Speaker, a supplementary question. The minister originally indicated that the statement was to be of a constitutional and political nature. Is it now the minister's intention to enlarge that framework so that in terms of a policy statement it will include the social, economic and environmental concerns in the broadest sense, and not in terms of specific issues? Does the minister now propose to enlarge that statement and the constitutional, environmental policy statement that he originally intended to make?

Mr. Allmand: No, Mr. Speaker, it will still deal principally with the constitutional evolution of the north. Of course, it will relate to powers which govern these other subjects but it is principally a constitutional document. It concerns many more ministers than myself and is subject to review and amendment by my Cabinet colleagues.

* * *

VETERANS AFFAIRS

PENSIONS FOR WIDOWS OF VETERANS WHOSE DISABILITY PENSION LESS THAN FORTY-EIGHT PER CENT

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, may I put a question to the Minister of Veterans Affairs. In view of the promise the minister made a few days ago that he would do his best to get action this year with respect to the provision that denies a widow's pension where the veterans disability pension was less than 48 per cent and also with respect to closing the gap between the disability pension and the base to which it was attached a few years ago, and it is now reasonably clear that the Queen will be reading the Speech from the Throne at the opening of the next session of parliament, will the minister do his best to get that legislation approved in time for it to be included in the Queen's Speech from the Throne in October?

Hon. Daniel J. MacDonald (Minister of Veterans Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I will certainly do my ministerial duty and do what I can with respect to that matter.

● (1500)

WAR VETERANS ALLOWANCE ACT

REQUEST THAT REVIEW BE EXPEDITED

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Will the Minister of Veterans Affairs also do his best to expedite the review of the War Veterans Allowance Act, which he announced a short time ago.

Hon. Daniel J. MacDonald (Minister of Veterans Affairs): Mr. Speaker, with respect to the last question, the process has already begun. We had our first meeting with the representatives of the veterans' organizations. The hon. member must realize that this has taken a considerable time, but it is already in process.

* * *

VETERANS AFFAIRS

HOUSING REPAIR PROGRAM—REASON FOR DELAY IN IMPLEMENTATION

Mr. Jack Marshall (Humbert-St. George's-St. Barbe): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Perhaps the minister will recall the request the Newfoundland branch of the Canadian Legion made to him and the then minister of state for urban affairs for funding for a program for veterans and their widows to cover emergency repairs to houses. This has been in process for three years. The minister and the present Minister of National Defence made a commitment to that provincial command of the Canadian Legion. Could the minister explain to this House and veterans of this country the reasons for the inexcusable delay in providing the funding recommended by the excellent survey?

Hon. Daniel J. MacDonald (Minister of Veterans Affairs): Mr. Speaker, with reference to the survey, as the hon. member knows I and my colleague the Minister of State for Urban Affairs looked into the matter. I think the hon. member realizes that this comes under the Residential Rehabilitation Assistance Program, and it is up to the province to designate certain areas where the program can be implemented and applied. The matter is not exactly under federal jurisdiction but must be worked out with the province. I understand that some delay has been occasioned in this regard, and the program has probably not been assigned to the various areas of the province referred to.

PROPOSED RESIDENTIAL REHABILITATION PROGRAM—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Jack Marshall (Humber-St. George's-St. Barbe): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Since the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources has announced his insulation program, and since the Residential Rehabilitation Assistance Program has been greatly beneficial, its restrictions being lack of funding, would the minister now consider suggestions made to him, namely, that he should provide, under the veterans housing program, a national residential rehabilitation program for veterans on fixed incomes who cannot afford to insulate their homes or bring them up to a state of reasonable repair?

Hon. Daniel J. MacDonald (Minister of Veterans Affairs): Mr. Speaker, housing, today, comes pretty well under the Minister of State for Urban Affairs who is responsible for all Canada, and anything we do in relation to housing for veterans would therefore be done under the authority of the minister. We shall have to assess whatever assistance my department is able to give and I shall be glad to see what we can do.

* * *

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order to ask the government House leader his plans for government business this week.

Mr. MacEachen: Mr. Speaker, the plan for the week is easy to state. I should like to dispose of the amendments to the criminal law which will be before the House today, and complete third reading of the unemployment insurance bill and the Air Canada bill. Some bills are at various stages, either in committee or on third reading. I regard them as not possible of attainment this week, so to speak. I wish to place the bills previously mentioned before the House this week, and I would also contemplate calling the bill in the name of the President of the Treasury Board at some point this week.

Mr. Paproski: We didn't hear the last part.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, is it clear that the first two bills we shall deal with are C-51 and C-27?

Mr. MacEachen: I beg your pardon, Mr. Speaker; I did not hear the hon. member's question.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, the minister announced a number of items, but did not make clear the order in which they will be considered. Will the first two bills be C-51 and C-27?

Mr. MacEachen: Mr. Speaker, the first is the amendments to the criminal law, which will be before the House today and tomorrow. If it is not completed before the end of the day tomorrow, I shall advise what the next item of business will be.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. When I asked the Prime Minister a question about the political contribution made by Canadair, he said he was reminded by his colleague the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce that Canadair at the time was not a Crown corporation. The fact is the Canadian government took over Canadair on January 5, 1976, and the reports filed by the Chief Electoral Officer show that the contribution to the Liberal party was made in the last five months of 1976. I am not accusing either the Prime Minister or the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce of misleading the House. Perhaps the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce is more preoccupied by the beckoning voices calling from another place. But I object strenuously to the Prime Minister and his colleagues trying to put off and evade a question by giving to the House information not in accordance with the facts.

Mr. Trudeau: Mr. Speaker, I am not sure if the point is a point of order, but I gladly accept the date the hon. member put forward. In that case, my first answer stands. The hon. member may recollect that I only gave those dates after hearing some information from a colleague on my left.

Mr. Beatty: That was a mistake.

Mr. Trudeau: Mr. Speaker, obviously his knowledge of the facts is not as accurate as the hon. member's articulation. I repeat, my first answer stands without any argument as to date.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[English]

ANTI-INFLATION ACT

TABLING OF REFERENCES TO ADMINISTRATOR

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I should like to table copies of references to the administrator, under the Anti-Inflation Act, with respect to Perolin-Bird Archer Limited, the Wellesley Hospital, Silverwood Industries Limited, and the Arborg Memorial Hospital.

* * *

PETITIONS

ACCEPTANCE OF PETITION PRESENTED BY MR. RODRIGUEZ

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I have the honour to inform the House that the Clerk of the House has laid upon the table the fifteenth report of the Clerk of Petitions, stating that he has examined the petition presented by the hon. member for Nickel Belt (Mr. Rodriguez) and finds that it meets the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form.

* * *

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

Mr. Ross Milne (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, the following questions will be answered today: 323, 2,054, 2,636, 2,650, 2,730 and 2,752.

[Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands).]

[Text]

AIB—REPORTING OF PRICE INCREASES

Question No. 323—Mr. Orlikow:

1. How many companies are required by the Anti-Inflation Board to report any proposed price increases and how many have filed such reports?

2. What are the names of the companies who have not filed such reports?

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (Minister of Finance): 1. Two hundred seventy-four companies are presently required to report proposed price increases in excess of two per cent for any given quarter. All compliance companies are restricted to raising their prices only once per quarter. As of September 30, 1976, 131 companies had filed prenotification reports with the Anti-Inflation Board. Approximately 1,000 individual applications were filed by this group of companies. Sixty-one of the companies required to prenotify had not filed reports thus signifying that they have not raised their prices by more than 2 per cent in any calendar quarter since the inception of the board.

2. See statement following.

November 22, 1976—List of suppliers required to prenotify on price increase which will result in an increase of gross revenue of over 2 per cent for the product category and who have as of November 15, 1976, not notified the AIB of such increases.

02 Chemical Companies: Canadian Liquid Air Ltd., Canadian Oxigen Limited, Liquid Carbonic Canada Ltd.

04 Financial and other services—Property and Casualty Insurance Companies: Commercial Union Group, Continental Insurance Group. Manufacturing and Service Companies: *IBM, *Canadian Corporate Management. Life Insurance Companies: *Confederation Life Insurance Company, *Industrial Life Insurance Co., Les Prévoyants, Cooperators Insurance Association, Allstate Insurance Co. of Canada. Car Rental/Leasing Companies: Tilden Rent-A-Car, Avis Transport of Canada Ltd.

04 Forest Based Industries: Scott Paper Ltd., British Columbia Forest Products Ltd., Weyerhauser Canada Ltd., Canada Flushwood Door Manufacturing Ltd.

05 Construction Industry: Great West Steel Industries Ltd., St. Marys Cement Ltd., Independent Cement Inc., Lake Ontario Cement.

09 Non-Durables: *Harding Carpets Ltd., *Peerless Rug Ltd., *Warner Lambert Canada Ltd., Ayerst McKenna and Harrison, *Lever Brothers Ltd., *Proctor and Gamble Company of Canada Ltd., Consumers Glass Co. Ltd., Gillette of Canada Ltd., International Paints, Merck, Frosst Laboratories, Standard Paper Box Ltd., *Sklar Furniture Ltd., *G.W.G.

010 Hotels: Skyline Hotels Ltd., Western International Hotels. Federal Crown Corp.: Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd., Petro-Canada.

011 Transportation Equipment: Standard Products Canada Ltd., *Douglas Aircraft Company of Canada, *Chrysler Canada Ltd., *General Motors of Canada Ltd., *American Motors Canada Ltd., Bendix Home Systems Ltd., Motor Coach Industries Ltd., Davie Shipbuilding Ltd., *Michelin Tire Manufacturing Company Canada Ltd., *John Deere Limited, Versatile Manufacturing Ltd., *Pratt and Whitney Aircraft of Canada Ltd., Marine Industries Ltd., *Racair Ltd., AP Parts Canada Ltd., Allis Chalmers Ltd., Canadian Trailmobile Ltd., Canadian Vickers Ltd., *Canadian Fabricated Products Ltd., National Steel Car Corporation, MLW-Worthington Ltd., *Holmes Foundry Ltd. Total: 61.

---

*Suppliers so indicated have been required to prenotify only since May 24, 1976.

Some suppliers on this list are required to prenotify for only a part of their total product range.

CBC FARM NEWS

Question No. 2,054—Mr. Schellenberger:

1. For each year (a) 1975 (b) 1976, how much time did CBC give by radio and television nationally to farm news?

2. How much time did regional stations devote to farm news?

3. Has there been a drop in farm related programmes and, if so, for what reason?

Hon. John Roberts (Secretary of State): I am informed by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation as follows:

	Fiscal Year	English Radio	English TV	French Radio	French TV
1.	(a) 1975/76	4:00	47:30	86:40	52:00
	(b) 1976/77	11:00	47:30	86:40	52:00
2.	1975/76	1436:00	157:00	299:15	47:40
	1976/77	1869:00	158:30	335:00	148:40

NOTE: Edmonton also telecasts a 52 week half-hour program in English produced by the Alberta Department of Agriculture.

3. No.

CBC REPRESENTATIVES WHO ACCOMPANIED THE PRIME MINISTER TO LONDON SUMMIT IN MAY, 1977

Question No. 2,636—Mr. Roy (Laval):

1. Did CBC representatives (reporters, cameramen, etc.) accompany the Prime Minister to the London Summit in May and, if so, how many?

2. Were cameras used and, if so, how many?

3. In the transmission on the English network, via American satellite, of the interview with the Prime Minister, was any American equipment used and, if so, for what reason?

Hon. John Roberts (Secretary of State): I am informed by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation as follows: 1. Yes. One reporter each from the English TV and radio networks and French TV and radio networks.

2. One camera, owned by a contract crew in London.

3. There were no satellite feeds from London; the film was sent to Canada by air. A joint feed (CTV, CBC English network and CBC French network) was made from Paris during the Prime Minister's visit there via the international satellite. No American equipment was used.

BRUCELLOSIS

Question No. 2,650—Mr. Cossitt:

1. Is the Department of Agriculture aware of complaints from farmers in Leeds County and other areas of Eastern Ontario about the slow processing of brucellosis tests and, if so, what steps are being taken to improve the situation?

2. Do test results take longer than ten days to be returned to the farmer and, if so (a) what is the average length of time required (b) could the time be reduced to ten days or less and, if not, for what reason?

Hon. E. F. Whelan (Minister of Agriculture): 1. The department is aware of complaints from farmers in Leeds County and other areas of Eastern Ontario concerning delays in the processing of brucellosis tests. Delays occurred in the late winter and early spring when an increased number of blood samples were submitted to the Departmental Laboratory in Ottawa for testing. The situation is now improved and samples are being processed promptly.

2. Normally it takes longer than ten days for test results to be returned to the farmers. (a) The average length of time required is about thrirteen days. (b) The processing and testing of the samples at the laboratory requires approximately five days. The results of the test are then forwarded to the local office of the Health of Animals Branch, Agriculture Canada, for processing. The farmer is informed of the test results by mail. The time could be reduced to ten days by advising the owner of the results of the test by telephone and this is done when such a request is received from the owner.

HIGH-POWERED RADIO AND/OR TELEVISION STATION ON ISLANDS OF SAINT-PIERRE AND MIQUELON

Question No. 2,730—Mr. Jones:

1. Did the government participate in negotiations for the establishment of a high-powered radio and/or television station beamed into Canada and located on the Islands of Saint-Pierre and Miquelon and, if so (a) for how long (b) have the negotiations been completed (c) what part did the Department of External Affairs and the Department of Communications or any other department or branch of the government play in such negotiations?

2. What interference or interruptions is this likely to have with radio and/or television stations in Canada publicly and/or privately owned?

3. What are the details of any international conventions or agreements covering such negotiations and the establishment of such a radio and/or television station?

4. Are Canadian interests being protected in such negotiations and, if so (a) by whom (b) in what way?

Mr. Ross Milne (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Communications): In so far as the Department of Communications is concerned: 1. No. However, there were negotiations between France and Canada, which were concluded in 1971, related to television stations limited to provide coverage of the Saint-Pierre and Miquelon Islands only, using the transmission system developed in France, (which is not compatible with television receivers normally used in Canada). (a) In respect to the above noted negotiations, a Memorandum of Understanding was signed in 1971 relating to the control of the utilization of certain television channels operating in the Saint-Pierre and Miquelon Islands and in those areas of Canada within 230 miles of the Saint-Pierre and Miquelon Islands. The establishment of this memorandum is in accordance with Article 31 of the International Telecommunication Convention. From time to time, when either Canada or France wants to establish a new television broadcasting station or to change the technical parameters of an existing station that may impact on the other country, direct negotiations are undertaken to coordinate the change. Canada is currently negotiating for two proposed new television stations in Newfoundland. The coordination of the operation of radio stations is in accordance with Article 9 of the Radio Regulations of the International Telecommunication Union and Article 35 of the International Telecommunication Convention. (b) The Memorandum of Understanding was signed on November 5, 1971. Negotiations to coordinate the establishment of new stations or changes to existing stations are undertaken as and when the need arises. To date, the following television stations have been coordinated under the Memorandum of Understanding: For France: St-Pierre (2 stations), Miquelon (1 station). For Canada: (a) In Newfoundland—CJWB-TV, Bonavista; CJWN-TV, Corner Brook; CBYAT, Deer Lake; CBNAT, Grand Falls; CBNT-2, Placentia; CBNT-1, Port Rexton; CBNT, St. John's; CBYT-1, Stephenville; CBWAT-7, Musgrave Harbour; CBNT-10, Clarenville; CBNT-26, ST. Vincent's; (b) In Nova Scotia—CBHFT-4, Cheticamp; CBHFT, Sydney. In respect to radio stations, on Saint-Pierre and Miquelon there are only two. These were established in 1955 and 1963, respectively. Since 1955, Canada has established 22 new radio stations in Newfoundland alone. Also 2 stations established prior to that date have increased power, as have several of the 22 stations. All these actions were coordinated as per 1(a). There are no negotiations underway at the present time regarding radio stations. (c) The discussions were essentially technical in nature and were conducted by officials of the Department of Communications. The Department of External Affairs, which also has responsibility for the negotiation and approval of international treaties, agreements and arrangements, provided advice and was kept informed of all developments regarding the Memorandum of Understanding.

2. If contemplated station operations are coordinated in accordance with bilateral and/or international regulations and agreements referred to above, there should not be any deleterious effect on radio and television stations operating in Canada from stations on Saint-Pierre and Miquelon.

3. As explained in 1(a).

4. Yes. (a) By the Department of Communications and Department of External Affairs. (b). In accordance with the bilateral and international arrangements referred to above, the operational and technical parameters of radio and television stations on the Saint-Pierre and Miquelon Islands must be accepted by Canada before the station is put into service.

[Mr. Milne.]

INDIAN EDUCATION

Question No. 2,752—Mr. Smith (Churchill):

1. Have any Indian Bands expressed an interest in taking over control of education for their Reserve and, if so (a) are monies available for the Bands to review their existing system and to plan for eventual takeover (b) are monies available for training of Band members in preparation for local control of education (c) is training available through the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development?

2. Do the provinces have legislation enabling Indian representation on school boards and, if so, which ones?

3. Does the Department have a policy regarding the building of high schools on Reserves and, if so, what is it?

4. Is the Department conducting programmes to ensure that all Indians have an opportunity to become literate and, if so (a) what are they (b) what is the present rate of illiteracy?

5. Do a disproportionate number of Indian students end up in non-academic streams and, if so, what is being done to change the pattern?

6. Is there a growing number of Indian people pursuing higher education and, if so, is the Department able to meet the financial demands this entails?

7. Are the Indian Bands involved in deciding the kind of structure they should have for new schools being constructed on their Reserves?

8. (a) How many student residences (residential schools) does the Department still own that are no longer in use (b) what amount is being spent maintaining such residences each year?

9. Has the Department built any group homes or hostels for Indian students in the provinces or territories and, if so (a) how many (b) in what locations (c) in what way does the cost compare in the operation of a student residence to that of a group home?

10. Are there any plans to transfer responsibility of post-secondary education to the Department of Manpower and Immigration?

11. What is the Department's present policy regarding the employment of Guidance Counsellors?

Mr. B. Keith Penner (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): 1. Yes, many Bands have expressed an interest in taking over control of education for their reserves. More than 35 bands are now controlling almost entirely their education programs, with the exception of capital expenditures for school construction. Many more bands, an estimated 200, are partially controlling their education programs in varying degrees between the operation of kindergartens to complete control. (a) Most regions have been able to provide limited funds for bands to review their existing educational system and to plan for functional take over. (b) and (c) The department has several methods of providing band members with training in band administration in general and for local control of Indian education.

2. Yes, the following provinces have legislation enabling Indian representation on school boards: British Columbia, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Ontario and New Brunswick. At present such arrangements are being made to enable Indian representation on school boards in the James Bay area in Quebec.

3. The matter of building high schools on reserves is one which has been and will be under review in consultation with the Indian people. There have been a number of requests from Indian people for the extension of the grade level in their reserve schools to include high school grades. This is necessary because there are factors which must be examined by the Indian people and the department. These include small enrolments, geographical areas, limited possibilities for variations in courses offered, etc.

4. The department does not have statistics regarding the present rate of illiteracy, however, the regions do arrange to provide training according to the wishes and needs of the Indian people in this area. These arrangements may include Basic Literacy and Upgrading programs which are organized by the Department of Manpower to improve the level of literacy on the reserves.

5. Numbers which would indicate the proportion of Indian students following non-academic streams in relation to the total number of Indian students at the secondary level are not readily available. However, the pattern of academic and non-academic streams changes according to the goals, needs and wishes of the students and parents. The department and the Indian people ensure, through their counselling services, that sufficient information is made available to the Indian students and their parents to enable them to select the stream which the students should follow. This being the case, the department would not be taking steps to change the pattern.

6. The number of Indian people pursuing higher education has been steadily increasing. Since 1975-76 when 3,565 Indian students were enrolled in Universities and Post-Secondary training institutions, the number has grown to over 4,000 which representes a percentage increase of over 12 per cent. To date, the department has been able to meet the financial requirements in this area.

7. While no delegation presently exists to permit Indian Bands and School Committees to plan their own school facilities, Band Councils or their representatives are consulted in the preparation of the project brief and are involved in the preliminary design work as well as in other design stages.

8. (a) Six. (b) The department is spending $403,500 annually to keep the following redundant student residence facilities operative:

Region	Student Residence		Cost
Yukon Region	Lower Post		$ 98,000
B.C. Region	Alberni		29,000
Alberta Region	St. Paul's		45,000
	Desmarais		51,000
Ontario Region	Fort Frances		81,500
	Cecilia Jeffrey		74,000
	Horden Hall		35,000
		Sub-total	$413,500
		less	10,000	revenue from Desmarais
		Total	$403,500

9. (a) Yes, the department has built 18 group homes in the following locations:

(b) Region	Location	Number
Yukon Region	Ross River	1
	Upper Liard	1
	Watson Lake	1
Saskatchewan Region	Onion Lake	2
Ontario Region	Moose Factory	2
Quebec	Mistassini	3
	Fort George	8
	Total

(c) In all of the areas, with the exception of those in Quebec, the per pupil cost of operating and maintaining group homes is as high or higher than the operation of student residences in the same areas. All of the 18 group homes presently in operation are band-operated under the contriubutions to bands program.

10. The department has no plans to transfer responsibility of post-secondary education to the Department of Manpower and Immigration.

11. The current policy of the department regarding the employment of guidance counsellors is flexible. Wherever Indian people request the services of guidance/educational counsellors, the department meets their requests subject to the availability of man-years and salary dollars. However the current trend is to engage Indian social counsellors in line with the wishes of the Indian people.

[English]

Mr. Milne: I ask, Mr. Speaker, that the remaining questions be allowed to stand.

Mr. Speaker: Shall the remaining questions be allowed to stand?

Mr. McCleave: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege, again.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member is rising frequently under the guise of a question of privilege. At this moment it is neither a question of privilege nor is it necessary for the hon. member to so describe it. It is customary to ask, after stating that the questions enumerated have been answered, whether the remaining questions shall be allowed to stand. Hon. members have the opportunity to raise the grievance that certain questions have not been answered, but that is not a question of privilege.

Mr. McCleave: Mr. Speaker, I rise again to say there are 22 questions in the name of the hon. member for Leeds (Mr. Cossitt) not yet answered, and I intend to move the adjournment of the House tomorrow to show my protest.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Shall the remaining questions be allowed to stand?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

CRIMINAL LAW AMENDMENT ACT, 1977

AMENDMENTS TO CRIMINAL CODE

The House resumed, from Thursday, June 30, consideration of Bill C-51, to amend the Criminal Code, the Customs Tariff, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act and the Prisons and Reformatories Act, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Before resuming consideration of the motions of the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams), seconded by the hon. member for Edmonton Centre (Mr. Paproski), perhaps I could indicate to the House, further to comments I made on June 30, what I have in mind with respect to the grouping of motions at the report stage of Bill C-51. I have some notes prepared with respect to these groupings, and in order to save hon. members some stenography of their own I can simply read them for the record and provide photo copies for hon. members to consider while they debate these motions. That will give them an opportunity to consider the matter.

As I indicated earlier, motion No. 2 standing in the name of the hon. member for Palliser (Mr. Schumacher) was to be debated and voted on separately. However, motions 21 and 22, also in the hon. member's name, are similar in nature and I intend to group them for debate with motion No. 2, so that a vote on motion No. 2 earlier referred to will, I think, dispose of motions 21 and 22. Since the grouping earlier has been somewhat altered I should perhaps review the groupings that we have brought forward for discussion up to this point.

● (1510)

Motions Nos. 3, 4, 5, and 6 will be grouped for debate and, if required, a vote on motion No. 3 will also dispose of motions Nos. 4, 5 and 6. Motions Nos. 8, 9, 10 and 11 will be debated and voted on separately. Motions Nos. 12, 13 and 14 could be grouped for debate and a vote on motion No. 12 will dispose of motions Nos. 13 and 14. Motions Nos. 15 and 16 could be grouped for debate and, if required, voted on separately.

I have since had an opportunity to have a closer look at the remaining motions and it would be my intention to group them as follows. Motion No. 17 standing in the name of the hon. member for Moose Jaw (Mr. Neil) will be debated and voted on separately. Motions Nos. 18 and 19 could be grouped for debate but would require separate votes. Motion No. 20 will be debated and voted on separately. I have already indicated to hon. members that motions Nos. 21 and 22 will be grouped with motion No. 2 for debate and vote. Motions Nos. 23 and 24 could be grouped for debate and one vote.

Motions Nos. 25, 26 and 27 should be grouped for debate and, if required, the question will be put on motion No. 25, with an affirmative vote disposing of motions Nos. 26 and 27. A negative vote on the motion, however, will require the question to be put on motion No. 26, which in turn will dispose of motion No. 27. Motion No. 28 has already been grouped with motion No. 7. Motion No. 29 standing in the name of the hon. member for New Westminster (Mr. Leggatt) will be debated and, if required, voted on separately. Motions Nos. 30, 31 and 32 should be grouped for debate, and a vote on motion No. 30 will also dispose of motions Nos. 31 and 32. Motions Nos. 33 and 34 could be grouped for debate and vote.

Motions Nos. 35, 36, 37 and 38 should be grouped for debate and, if required, a vote on motion No. 35 will dispose of motions Nos. 36 and 37. The question on motion No. 38 should be put separately. Motion No. 39 standing in the name of the Solicitor General (Mr. Fox) will be debated and voted on separately.

[Mr. Speaker.]

Mr. Alex Patterson (Fraser Valley East): Mr. Speaker, on the last occasion this bill was before the House I indicated that it was my desire to make a few comments on this clause, and specifically on motion No. 28. For the benefit of those who read Hansard and may wonder what this debate was about, as we have been dealing with other matters for the past week, I wish to read from the order paper. The motion reads:

"(2) Every order in council, regulation or form made under this act shall be laid before parliament within fifteen days after the order in council, regulation or form, as the case may be, is made or, if parliament is not then in session, within fifteen days after the commencement of the next ensuing session thereof and every order in council, regulation, or form shall be subject to affirmative resolution of parliament and shall not come into force until published in the Canada Gazette."

I realize that the mover of this motion, the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams), and other speakers from this party have indicated very clearly the motion and some of its ramifications. However, sometimes repetition produces the desired results. Stating my support for this motion will add one more voice to the crescendo of requests for the adoption of this amendment.

As we look at the history of this legislation, we see that many amendments have been proposed by the government. A great many were proposed by the opposition parties, but very few of any consequence were accepted by the government. I hope this one in particular will receive the support of all in this House, because it is a very reasonable and logical request when dealing with the Criminal Code of Canada.

If Canadians are to be held accountable, it is imperative that they be made aware of the provisions of the law. Under our system of government it is almost impossible for any person to know whether he or she is living completely within the law as enacted by federal, provincial and municipal governments. Therefore, it is imperative that to the very best of our ability they be made aware of the law and the regulations. I say this because of the complexity of the system under which we operate. I believe the law should be as clear and concise as possible and, as I have said, every effort should be made to acquaint the public with its requirements.

In response to comments by the hon. member for Calgary North, the Minister of Justice (Mr. Basford) stated it is imperative that police officers and customs officials know and understand the regulations so that in dealing with the citizens they are fully aware of the law and the regulations. It is not only important for those applying the law and calling on citizens to account for their actions relative to the law, but it is very important for those who are affected by the law. Law enforcement agencies should be fully cognizant of their responsibilities under the law.

I do not think ignorance is an acceptable defence when a person is charged. I think of a young man who was driving along a highway. He had been driving that highway for a considerable number of years. He was stopped. A few days before, the speed limit on the highway had been reduced. It not only caused this person some inconvenience, but if I recollect correctly it cost him a fine of $30. That was only a minor infraction. However, when dealing with the Criminal Code of Canda, the Minister of Justice and all concerned must ensure that the law is known by as wide a section of the population as possible under the circumstances.

This amendment, which requires that regulations made under this act be laid before this parliament within 15 days, is perfectly legitimate and reasonable. As has been pointed out, when regulations are presented to parliament for consideration and decision, it adds greatly to the knowledge of the law right across the country. The very fact that this subject is being debated will at least enable others to understand what it is we are considering here. I believe this is a very reasonable recommendation. All too often the government bypasses parliament. Indeed, the passing of orders in council has become a usual method of doing so. Even though the intention is to set out regulations, I would remind hon. members that regulations are an extremely important part of legislation.

• (1520)

The opposition has been complaining because on far too many occasions when legislation has been laid before the House, much of the detail is left to be regulated by order in council, with the result that we have no say, as representatives of the people, with regard to provisions which have an important bearing upon the laws we pass. I would, therefore, ask the Minister of Justice to accept the amendment moved by my hon. friend from Calgary North. We are not asking that all orders in council that are passed should be referred to parliament. This is one of the defences the minister has put forward: he has suggested it is not practicable for parliament to undertake responsibility for considering all orders in council. I must say, though, I think it might be a good idea, if time permitted. Realizing that this is not possible, we are asking that only those orders in council passed under the bill before us should be so referred to parliament for consideration.

As I said earlier, these arguments may have been placed before the House on other occasions, but I want to express my support for them in the hope that after repetition of these submissions the minister might finally accept the view of the opposition and make the legislation more palatable; or, perhaps I should say, less abrasive, since I do not think anything which might be done to the bill would make it palatable. But at least it would not be such an imposition upon the citizens of Canada.

Mr. Arnold Peters (Timiskaming): Mr. Speaker, these amendments go well together, because if you have one you may not need the other. If a public officer is designated, you probably would not need a regulation setting up the designation. In the absence of such designation it would obviously not be necessary to pass a regulation setting out who these people were going to be. I am sure there will be instances when the department might wish to make the factor of a Hudson's Bay post a peace officer for the purpose of this legislation. Or it might be the intention to appoint those who run radio or weather stations in some of our remote areas as peace officers for the purpose of this act. But if this is the case, we should say so specifically and spell out these intentions.

I see no reason why the government should not accept some of these very sensible amendments. It would seem reasonable, to me, that the government should let us know what it has in mind with regard to the delegation of authority. If gun clubs are to be given this authority, let the government say so. As long as this is done by regulation, without the public being told what the government has in mind the only persons who will know what the regulations are will be those authorized to perform these control functions. At some point, obviously, they will have to make this information available to the public with whom they are dealing, since otherwise the entire operation would fail.

The previous speaker said he did not see much reason for not agreeing with the government that not all regulations should be made public. Mr. Speaker, I cannot think of a regulation that should not be made public, if it involves people in their relationship with the government. There is, obviously, no point in putting it under a bushel some place. I know this is a poor metaphor, but it seems to me there is no reason to hide it.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): You are getting more biblical as you get older.

Mr. Peters: It is obvious that when you are making a regulation it should be known to those of the public who are concerned. The motion does not recommend that parliament has to approve. All we ask is that parliament should know of it. I believe that if parliament knew about these things, it might sometimes make a bit of a fuss and certain regulations to which objection was taken would be withdrawn or revised.

I cannot understand the minister's desire to designate these public officers by order in council and then express unwillingness to publish the regulations. It seems to me there is no great security aspect here. Surely it is not in the interest of national security that we should keep these regulations from the general public, since without public involvement the regulations will not mean a thing. It might well be that the regulations could be referred specifically to the statutory instruments committee. Maybe they should get them all and put out a public document which would call attention to the nature of the regulations which have been passed.

Mr. Basford: They do.

Mr. Peters: Then what is the argument against making the designation of these officers available to parliament?

Mr. Basford: They are.

Mr. Peters: The minister says they are to be made available. It is true some orders in council appear in the Canada Gazette. I suppose we sell some 2,000 or 3,000 copies of the Canada Gazette, but it would surprise me very much if more than five copies were read north of the sixtieth parallel where many of these pseudo peace officers are likely to be needed. I do not think many of the people up there are likely to be reading the Canada Gazette.

I should like to see this information brought before the House once a year so that we might consider the choices the minister has made and express our approval or otherwise. The hon. gentleman says he wishes to be known as the law and order minister of justice. Members of parliament might help him, possibly, by suggesting a reduction in the number of categories of people who are to be given these limited powers of peace officers for the purposes intended in the bill. Members of parliament should know who is to be given these powers and who is not. A similar point arose in our consideration of an earlier bill.

• (1530)

This legislation affects people very directly and personally, so I see no reason why the regulations should not be made public. There may well be some legitimate reason why they cannot be. For example, what happens in the Northwest Territories may be different from what happens in the Yukon, or what happens in northern Ontario may be different from what happens in other parts of Ontario. It may be necessary to have different categories. But I do not think there should be any objection to anyone knowing what the categories are and expressing their opinion on them.

I am not suggesting that we get bogged down in approving regulations, orders in council, treasury board minutes, and so on; but I think we should at least know what they provide. I do not see why the government is reluctant to be more specific in the third clause and to spell out that it will be a peace officer, a notary public or somebody else. Are police, detachment officers in the RCMP, storekeepers above a certain level, going to be given this power? If so, it should be spelled out. Whoever drafted the legislation must have had someone in mind. I am shocked by the position taken by the Minister of Justice. There have been ministers of justice before who were not practising lawyers and had no such experience. But this minister has.

Mr. Basford: Mr. Speaker, would the hon. member permit a question?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Would the hon. member for Timiskaming (Mr. Peters) permit a question?

[Mr. Peters.]

Mr. Peters: Sure.

Mr. Basford: Mr. Speaker, I wonder whether the hon. member realizes that all of the regulations we are talking about will, under the act, be made public and will, under the laws of parliament, be permanently referred to the standing committee on statutory instruments. The amendment he is debating provides, not that they be made public and referred to the standing committee but that they must be approved, each one of them, by an affirmative resolution of parliament, which is something which he just said he was not in favour of.

Mr. Peters: No, Mr. Speaker, I was not aware that we would have to affirm them, and I appreciate the minister's bringing that to my attention. The minister says they are going to be made public. Why could the regulations not be attached to the report that is made to parliament, so they could be examined in terms of this legislation? It is true that very few members ever read the Canada Gazette, a piece of literature which we receive but which very few of us read. I suggest that only those who subscribe to the Canada Gazette or to reports of the statutory instruments committee would be made aware of that information.

My point is that if the matter is left to regulation, and if we do not know what the regulations are, then they should be attached to the annual report to parliament, in which case they obviously will become known. I think it is going too far to say that we have to approve them, because if that were the case we would be doing nothing but approving regulations. The government makes thousands of regulations every day, and we would soon become bogged down. Most of the regulations which are tabled, along with reports affecting individuals, do not become known until, as a previous speaker said, someone is charged under a section of the legislation or one of the regulations. This seems unfair since they were not aware of the existence of the regulation.

Rather than leaving it to regulation, I would prefer the legislation to spell out definitely who will exercise this authority under the act. The drafters of the bill, as I say, must have had someone in mind and I should like to know who it is. Otherwise, they are deciding on my behalf at a later date.

Mr. Dan McKenzie (Winnipeg South Centre): Mr. Speaker, I am rising to speak in support of the amendment of the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams) which asks that when regulations are made they should be tabled in parliament within 15 days and then debated. This is very imperative in such matters as gun control. My support for the amendment arises from my deep concern that this government has consistently eroded the parliamentary system in Canada. The Liberal government has constantly abused the power to govern outside of parliament by regulations and orders in council. Many years ago an eminent British judge called government by orders in council the "new despotism". Since that time England has restrained itself in regard to government by regulation, but in Canada this sneaky, undemocratic and all-embracing method of pushing people around has become the Liberals' favourite method of abusing parliament.

On various occasions the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) has shown his contempt for parliament, and nowhere is it better illustrated than with the abuse of orders in council. In 1976, Mr. Speaker, there were 3,327 orders in council passed and none of them was later brought before parliament for discussion. For the same time period there were only ten orders in council in England, all of them later introduced into parliament for approval. That is a clear indication of the decline of parliament in Canada. It has been proven without a shadow of doubt that certain elements in the federal bureaucracy have used orders in council and regulations for their own convenience, without regard to public rights. The second report of the Joint Standing Committee on Regulations and Other Statutory Instruments contains carefully documented proof that Canada's parliament is being seriously weakened by orders in council.

Since this issue was first raised in parliament over 12 years ago, Mr. Speaker, parliament has been frustrated and inhibited by these abuses. In blunt terms, the Trudeau government has helped parliamentary democracy turn into an order in council dictatorship, with power firmly fixed in the hands of the executive. If we are to make a serious move to restore the right of parliament as a meaningful body to defend the rights of the public against imperial prime ministership, then we should pass the amendment moved by the hon. member for Calgary North. As we all know, an order in council can seriously alter the law within days. Since the vast majority of Canadians are not aware of these changes, it makes common sense that all regulations should be brought back to parliament within 15 days and debated. In that way the people of this country would have a better opportunity of knowing exactly what is going on.

With regard to gun control, Mr. Speaker, you will note that Bill C-51 proposes that new laws be put into effect by order in council. When you look at Bill C-51, it is surprising how vague it is with regard to gun control. Gun control should be aimed at the criminal element; but Bill C-51 could make criminals out of many responsible gun owners in Canada. In a short time, gun dealers, gun owners and even the police are not going to know which guns are restricted. That is a concern which many of my constituents, and indeed responsible gun owners from all over Canada, have been writing about to all members and especially to the Minister of Justice (Mr. Basford).

● (1540)

I seriously wonder why the government is so reluctant to draft these regulations and present them to parliament for approval. Why must they be forced on Canadians? Parliament should make laws for Canadians, and not bureaucrats. Gun control is supposed to be aimed at those who deliberately are out to break the law. Bill C-51 is on its way to making criminals out of law-abiding Canadians who will suddenly find themselves in possession of illegal weapons because they do not read the Canada Gazette and since this government has no intention of bringing these matters before parliament.

To govern is a trust and, like any trust, there must be an accounting. The bureaucrats who will draft the gun control regulations are not accountable to the people. Unless there is a serious change, we shall see the advent of government by regulation at the whim of a handful of people. I should like to quote from a couple of letters I received from Winnipeg residents with regard to Bill C-51. A young man who has never written to an elected member before summed up the feelings of many by writing the following:

> Bill C-51 would make many voters feel like second-class cirizens and a bit like a criminal because of their sport and hobby.

Yes, responsible gun owners are being hindered by this bill. They are very concerned about the intent of the bill. Another Winnipeg constituent wrote the following:

> Another unacceptable provision of this legislation is that it gives the governor in council power to formulate law without reference to parliament, in other words, this is open-ended legislation which could be used by individuals in power in government for many purposes completely unacceptable in our society.

Many law-abiding gun owners want to know what the purpose of using regulations through orders in council is all about. The Manitoba Association of Gun Owners stated the following:

> At the present time Bill C-51 appears to be aimed at depriving and restricting the honest law-abiding citizens of their right to enjoy legitimate ownership and use of firearms.

I contend that the time has come for the government to come clean with the Canadian people and to cease government by regulation. The motion presented by my colleague, the hon. member for Calgary North, would be a step in the right direction. It was interesting to note this afternoon during the question period that the Prime Minister was concerned about when the House was going to recess. We will not be able to recess for some period of time. The Minister of Justice must be going through a very uncomfortable period when he goes home each evening and his children ask him, "Daddy, when are we going to go back to Vancouver? I would like to have a swim at Kitsilano beach". Maybe the minister's wife and his children will have some effect on him, in which case we can all have a holiday this summer.

I should like to quote from a letter I received from Mr. L. Martynec, president of the Association of Automatic Firearms Collectors and Shooters, which outlines the concern they have. Today I received approximately 150 letters from my riding. I am here to speak up for Canadian people when they are concerned about pieces of legislation like this. Returning to Mr. Martynec's letter, it reads as follows:

> We decry the injustice of medieval witch-hunts and persecution of "heretics", yet the same principle applies in this case. Unwillingness to understand or tolerate the innocent and lawful activities of others is typical of the dark ages and should have no place in our enlightened and just society.
>
> I am therefore appealing to you, as a Canadian legislator, to give this issue judicious consideration and at the same time urge you to do everything in your power not to allow such wanton mistreatment of innocent human beings. I sincerely hope that as a result, you will influence adoption of amendments to Bill C-51 to reflect justice and common sense, thus allowing legitimate, law-abiding owners of automatic firearms to continue enjoying their innocent and harmless activity without further unnecessary harassment.

That letter expresses the feelings of thousands of Canadians. It is amazing to realize the depth to which many Canadians have studied this piece of legislation. It is commendable that they are studying various bills going through this House, particularly this one. I received a letter from Mrs. Stella Ferguson, a lady from Lethbridge, Alberta, which reads as follows:

1. The Criminal code is much too important to have any portions thereof left to order in council.

2. Why should law-abiding citizens be subject to another high-cost bureaucracy in order to obtain a fire-arms' acquisition certificate which will have little effect on crime control.

3. Competency courses in the handling of firearms should be made available before any such requirement is implemented.

4. The U.S. safety council indicates that over 72 per cent of all violent deaths—auto, falling, drowning, shooting, etc.—are related to the misuse of alcohol and drugs. Although not stated by our justice department we have reason to believe the percentage in Canada is even higher. This problem should be looked at before we consider gun control.

5. Bill C-51, despite the government propaganda, will in no way make sentences any more severe because of all the summary conviction, provisions and the leniency of our justice system that makes a mockery of any crime committed.

6. I can see no way that Bill C-51 will change our present situation by preventing suicide as any fire department or emergency service will state that prescription drugs are used in more suicide attempts than all other known means.

7. Homicides in family disputes where firearms are not handy would still occur. A majority would use other weapons, which today are used as much if not more than the firearm in this type of homicide.

8. The reasons for making a firearm restricted or prohibited are too vague. These reasons should be spelled out.

I urge you to do whatever is necessary to protect my freedom and heritage.

The minister seems to be adamant and stubborn in regard to this particular bill. It is not wanted by the people. It is not the answer to crime. I hope he will give serious consideration to accepting this amendment and let us get on with the summer recess.

Mr. Stan Schumacher (Palliser): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to be able to participate in the debate surrounding these motions by the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams) concerning the regulations to be made under the proposed amendments to the Criminal Code dealing with gun control. In the first place, I find it very distasteful that we should give the government any authority to make regulations under the Criminal Code. When people think of the law, the Criminal Code is probably the prime example of law in the country because it sets out most of the crimes that have been declared to be such by the parliament of Canada. By its very nature, the crimes that are declared to be such should be very public, and before the people, so they can understand what they are not to do. They should be publicized at least in the statute books.

I am very concerned about the growing tendancy in this country, which I suppose is worldwide—or at least in all western countries—to give more and more power to the executive to make regulations governing the daily affairs of citizens, without any reference to their representatives to see whether the citizens actually approve of those actions. It is particularly important in this area dealing with criminal law. As I have pointed out, that is the prime example of law in the country.

● (1550)

Lately I have been dealing with crimes created under other statutes, and I would like to give the House an example of what can happen under the delegated authority we have given the government in many pieces of legislation passed by this House. I think it is time we stopped being so free and easy about giving the executive of this country that kind of power. I have been involved in defending the manager of an elevator in my town against charges levied against him at the instance of the Canadian Wheat Board.

These charges resulted from a change in policy adopted by the government without reference to this House. As a result of that change of policy, which was not publicly disclosed to the people involved, apparently in the view of the Canadian Wheat Board many managers of country elevators are now guilty of crimes they did not think they were guilty of when they did the things they are alleged to have done. Under the Canadian Wheat Board Act, the governor in council or the Canadian Wheat Board can make regulations. The Canadian Wheat Board does this periodically under the guise of something known as "instructions to the trade." The board sends out letters. They are not even under the seal or letterhead of the government of Canada: they are not on anybody's letterhead, not even on the letterhead of the Canadian Wheat Board. These letters are very innocuous documents, but as a result of them, if people are judged guilty of what they are alleged to have done, it can be very costly.

I submit that we should stop permitting this delegation in all areas, but we should start with the criminal law. When we deal with the Criminal Code, the law should be stated within the statute. We should not be forced to go to some other source to find out what crime may have been created by some minister of justice somewhere down the line. I suggest that the government does not really want to tell us what the regulations are. If the government was honest about this bill, it would.

I agree with what the previous speaker said. This bill is unnecessary. It is a reaction to something which has received the government's attention. There is an outcry in the country against the rising forces of lawlessness and against what has been happening under the administration of this government over the past number of years, and the government is reacting by producing this legislation. This bill is a watered-down version of legislation we had last session. That legislation was totally unacceptable. Even though it took several months of discussion in this House to convince the government that it was unacceptable, the government finally got the message. I suggest that this legislation is unacceptable primarily because it is unnecessary.

It has been my observation that most of the crimes committed with firearms have been committed with hand guns, and hand guns are not even affected by this bill. Our present controls on hand guns go back to the thirties; they are now some 40 years old. They are among the most stringent in the world. Yet we have an ever increassing number of crimes committed with hand guns. Where in this legislation is there anything which would lead us to believe that this government—or any government of any political stripe—could be any more effective in dealing with crimes related to hand guns?

We should not be pursuing the problem with this type of legislation. I do not think the problem can be solved by legislation which purports to regulate only the honest, law-abiding citizens of the country. If gun control is so effective as a means of dealing with the abuse of firearms, why are we having more and more hand gun-related offences when we have very stringent measures on the books? This bill in no way purports to deal with that problem.

Be that as it may, we have this legislation before us. It looks innocuous in many respects, but it contains a blank cheque which the government can sign at any time and in any way it wishes. If the government were honest in what it proposes to do, I suggest it would put its intentions into legislation so that we could all see them now. Failing that, it would at least provide us with the regulations it says it is going to pass. We would like to know the government's attitude and what it is going to do with those regulations.

The amendment proposed by the hon. member for Calgary North, that the government at least lay the regulations before the House prior to their coming into effect, is reasonable. I do not understand why the government refuses to accept such an amendment. If the government's intentions are so great, why does it resist this amendment? That question should be answered. Why does the government refuse to allow this chamber to examine the regulations it wants to bring in in the future? If the government says the regulations are going to be reasonable and effective, surely it should not be afraid to bring them before this chamber prior to their affecting the population at large. I find it hard to understand the attitude of this government. The way it is behaving makes me very suspicious. I feel we should not give the government what it wants, when it will not take us into its confidence with regard to what it proposes to do.

As I pointed out earlier, there are many examples of abuses by the regulatory authorities of this country. I referred to what the Canadian Wheat Board has done. I am sorry to say that many of us do not catch everything which passes through this House by way of legislation. Until 1972 the Canadian Wheat Board Act was subject to the general law relating to summary conviction offences. There was a limitation. The Crown had to bring charges against offenders under the act within six months of infractions. Unfortunately, in 1972 this House amended that act. I must confess that I was a member of this House then. This House gave the government the right to wait up to two years before laying charges. I was not aware of that change until recently when I became involved with the case to which I referred earlier. I cite that merely to show that even those of us who are members of this House are not aware of every change in the substantive law. By extension, how can anybody be aware of what the bureaucrats are doing and what regulations they are turning out? Those regulations do not really get any publicity at all.

● (1600)

It is because of the experience I have had with the Canadian Wheat Board Act that I am very anxious to see this House compel the government to refer all proposed regulations made under the Criminal Code to the House for its consideration before they become binding on the population at large. I hope there will be support from all sides of the House for this proposition because, as I said earlier, if there is nothing to hide, why not let us see it? I certainly hope that before the debate is over the Minister of Justice (Mr. Basford) will explain to us why we cannot see the proposed regulations now, before the bill is finally accepted by the House.

[Translation]

Mr. Eudore Allard (Rimouski): Mr. Speaker, it goes without saying that most, if not all, fish and game associations are strongly protesting the adoption of this bill which only aims at imposing on fishermen and hunters very strict controls as to the selling, purchasing, giving, lending, using and storing of guns and ammunitions for hunting. A number of hon. members having already had the opportunity to say what they think of this bill, I shall deal only with the few aspects which I feel are of paramount importance, because they seriously affect the civil rights of individuals.

Mr. Speaker, I received recently a letter from a man who wrote, and I quote:

> This letter deals with Bill C-51 of the House of Commons and more specifically with Parts III and IV, pages 1 to 44, dealing with firearms and other offensive weapons. This bill contains many unacceptable provisions, which were also found in Bill C-83, in addition to a large number of regrettable points whose purpose and text lack clarity.

And here, Mr. Speaker, I should like to quote another letter from another man, one of the large number of letters I have received. This letter is written in English; may I be allowed to quote it:

[English]

Dear Sir:

> I object very strongly to Bill C-51 for the following reasons.
>
> No way should I have to pay $10 for a firearms certificate to prove I'm not a criminal or a psycho.

Mr. Woolliams: Hear, hear!

Mr. Allard:

> The law-abiding gun owner did not make the criminal or the psycho what he is. It is the government's responsibility to deal with these people and not make it look like it is my fault.
>
> Do you think just because a criminal or a psycho doesn't have a firearms certificate it will stop him from doing what he had in mind in the first place?
>
> The $10 fee is simply stealing money from law-abiding citizens.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, there is no doubt that this unreasonable bill reveals the centralizing purposes of the right hon. Prime Minister and the ministers who make up the cabinet. So, as some hon. members have already pointed out, while appearing on the surface to be meant to control firearms, Bill C-51, in fact, is intended to restrict the freedom of the individual. Besides, to realize it, one need but read a few clauses of the bill, for it is more than obvious that the federal government has found nothing better to do than to restrict the civil liberties of honest Canadians. Now, to go back to the quotation:

[English]

Trying to sneak unacceptable gun legislation through parliament with other possible good legislation is just plain terrible government, pure and simple.

[Translation]

This omnibus bill is somewhat cunning because it contains some fine provisions but on the other hand, the good is mixed with the bad. Indeed, many provisions of the bill authorize police forces to undertake quite arbitrarily not to say abusively searches or seizures on the ground that individuals who are deemed to be undesirable or are suspected of having violated some provisions of the legislation have guns, ammunitions or other offensive weapons in their possession. No doubt, Mr. Speaker, that if such provisions were added to the Criminal Code, police forces could, if they wanted to do so, under the cover of the law, submit all Canadian citizens and establishments to a systematic search. In my opinion, as I said, such a bill has no place in our so-called liberal society and should not even be tolerated. It is really inconsistent with our way of living. In addition, the bill is unacceptable since it authorizes the governor in council to draft legislation without the previous consent of Parliament.

● (1610)

Thus, it could be quite possible that some members, apparently affluent in the government, use such a provision for a great number of unacceptable reasons in our society. In this regard, needless to say I consider that the discretionary powers conferred on the cabinet, through orders in council, constitute a threat, a kind of sword of Damocles over the heads of Canadians, against the freedom of the Canadian public in general.

As a matter of fact, last year, if my figures are right, out of 3300 orders in council promulgated, only approximately 600 were brought to the attention of the public in the usual way, that is in the Canada Gazette, the others having been kept, as far as I know, from the public. As a result, I could unknowingly commit a crime offence ignoring that such an act has just been declared illegal by the cabinet. This is in part what we, the Social Crediters, have recently done as regards a certain act concerning the financing of political parties.

Mr. Speaker, clause 88 (2) (a) reads as follows:

(2) Every one who is an occupant of a motor vehicle in which he knows there is a prohibited weapon

(a) is guilty of an indictable offence and is liable to imprisonment for five years.

And further on, we can read clause 89 (3) (a) in the following terms:

(3) Every one who is an occupant of a motor vehicle in which he knows there is a restricted weapon, is, unless some occupant of the motor vehicle is the holder of a permit under which he may lawfully have that weapon in his possession in such vehicle, or he establishes that he had reason to believe that some occupant of the motor vehicle was the holder of such permit,

(a) guilty of an indictable offence and is liable to imprisonment for five years.

This clause demonstrates the total nonsense of this piece of legislation. In fact, as we have noticed, Bill C-51 provides that "Every one who is an occupant of a motor vehicle in which he knows there is a restricted weapon is liable to imprisonment for five years". So, if someone gets on a bus with a firearm, I presume that the fifty persons aboard are all liable to imprisonment for five years. That is, Mr. Speaker, the kind of legislation that the government is offering to the population.

Besides, it should be pointed out that provisions concerning the right to appeal are really inadequate in such a bill. As a matter of fact, in many cases the accused is presumed guilty until he proves his innocence. In fact, as I have said throughout my speech, Bill C-51 contains many provisions which are altogether inconsistent with the kind of society in which we are living, let alone with our jurisprudence.

As an example, I will quote one passage of the work of Sir Guy Prowles entitled The Citizens Rights Against the Modern State and its Responsibilities to Him. It says that:

[English]

"One of the most important responsibilities the State has to the individual citizen is to provide adequate, efficient and effective mechanisms for the enforcement of his rights, even if this enforcement must be sought against the state itself."

[Translation]

In another work entitled Administrative Laws, one can read the following:

[English]

"The greater the power given to the executive, the greater the need to safeguard the citizen's rights against its arbitrary or unfair exercise."

[Translation]

And may I also be allowed, Mr. Speaker, to quote the words of Mr. Henry Puget in The Control of the Administration, as follows:

[English]

"The administration must be controlled. Its agents are subject to human weakness, to error, to bias; on some occasions they submit with too much ease to the will of the government and on other occasions, they wrongly thwart policy; the administration makes, willfully or not, mistakes in the application of laws, in the interpretation of laws or decrees which apply to it."

[Translation]

As one can see, Bill C-51 goes directly against what I quoted a few moments ago. Nobody will deny that it is more than necessary to control crime. May I be permitted to say that no country, and particularly Canada, has the right to pass such legislation with regard to firearms and other offensive weapons. That is unacceptable because it is inconceivable in a free and democratic country such as ours that the pursuit and punishment of culprits should come before the respect of citizens' private lives.

Before concluding, I would like to add that this bill is only going to create a number of problems for sportsmen and honest citizens in general. Indeed, the proposal to give officers the power to determine who may or may not own a firearm is an alarming example of a philosophy of prohibiting all that is not mandatory. If this bill which I think is ill-conceived were to be passed, firearms in Canada would quite simply be limited to an elite. As I already heard some people say, it would then be easy, even child's play, for a government with delusions of grandeur to confiscate all firearms on the pretence of emergency and thus ascertain, whether people want it or not, the docility of the people. Well, Mr. Speaker, I do not mean by that that this government is already on the road to dictatorship but it is, admittedly, a beginning because every time we take a step in the direction of greater government control, we move toward a future where our children and grandchildren will have no hope.

[English]

Mr. Don Mazankowski (Vergreville): Mr. Speaker, I want to say a few words on the motion advanced by my colleague, the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams). I wholeheartedly support the principle of the motion. What bothers us on this side of the House is the growing propensity of government to bring forth legislation in carte blanche form which gives it blanket powers to do anything, incidental or otherwise, with that legislation. The bill before us affects every Canadian, so it is important that in this case the law be clearly defined. In his remarks, the hon. member for Calgary North pointed out that when this measure was introduced in 1976, 3,326 orders in council were passed, and of those 653 were published in the Canada Gazette. That makes it very difficult for those who want to live within the limitations of this law to be sure what the law is at any given time.

As I said, the government has brought many pieces of legislation into this House which point up the increasing amount of power delegated to the governor in council in terms of the proclamation of regulations and taking decisions within the framework of the legislation. There is, for example, Bill C-33, to amend the National Transportation Act, which is currently before the House. It puts a tremendous amount of power in the hands of the governor in council, to the point where it can almost dictate the modal integration of the transportation system in this country. It can almost dictate what sort of freight articles will move by which mode to a given place.

Bill C-17, to amend the Air Canada Act, is another example of legislation which places broad discretionary powers in the hands of the governor in council. In many cases the provisions of the bill are so broad that they fortify the powers of the agency, in this case the Canadian Transport Commission. We see similar legislation in the field of communications, and are told that such legislation is to be brought forward in connection with the National Energy Board. This is very disturbing to those who want to live within the law and makes it very difficult to provide a sense of stability and continuity of regulations as they apply to various sectors.

It is interesting to note that at this time when we have a serious energy crisis in this country people involved in energy, particularly oil, tell us they have to comply with 375 pieces of provincial and federal legislation in order to carry on business. The proliferation of order in council proclaimed regulations makes it all the more difficult for industry to know the state of the law under which it operates.

● (1620)

Undoubtedly the Minister of Justice finds it difficult to obtain acceptance of this bill. Its predecessor, Bill C-83, last year found little favour with rural Canadians and urban dwellers. Bill C-51 is a watered-down version of C-83, and the minister has campaigned vigorously in the hope of securing its passage during the present session of parliament.

Mr. Woolliams: He ought to have been in Camrose recently.

Mr. Mazankowski: Yes, he should have been in Camrose last Saturday to see how vigorously some people object to the bill. I understand his colleague from Crowfoot (Mr. Horner) does not view the bill with favour. I am surprised he has not spoken out against it, for the people of his constituency are not unlike the people in mine and they do not view this bill with favour. Although Bill C-51 is not quite as harsh as Bill C-83, some people still think it is an unknown quantity. We do not know what the regulations will say. As the hon. member for Palliser (Mr. Schumacher) said, at the very least the committee should have been shown the regulations as an indication of what the government had up its sleeve. Many suspect this is but the government's foot in the door.

Mr. Woolliams: The camel's head in the tent.

Mr. Mazankowski: It could lead to wider powers. It is the skeleton, the frame if you like, for orders in council, and perhaps for amending legislation in future. Therefore, we must consider this bill carefully and cautiously, especially since many people in rural areas will find compliance with its provisions difficult. The May 10 issue of Farm and Country had this to say on the subject in an article entitled, "Farmers fear bureaucratic rules":

> What the urban press has viewed as highly diluted gun legislation, rural Ontario seems unmoved in the thinking the justice minister Ron Basford's new measures are "just the old Bill C-83 dressed up."

Mr. Woolliams: It is a sort of tuxedo bill.

Mr. Mazankowski: Without buttons. I continue quoting:

> Main bone of contention is that the latest proposals leave so much to the whim of bureaucrats and orders in council, none of which are reviewed beforehand by the House of Commons. Wallaceburg hog farmer, Don Crowe, contends that present gun owners are being ignored, but once the skeleton bill gets passed they could be included at the first public outcry in the press.

I repeat, present gun owners are being ignored. What happened to the concept of participatory democracy so much in vogue in 1968? Some groups which wished to tell the parliamentary committee some of their concerns about the legislation and make suggestions were not given the opportunity to testify. Is it any wonder farmers like Don Crowe fear the implications of this so-called skeleton bill the provisions of which could be expanded at the first public outcry in the press? I continue quoting:

Crowe, like many sheep owners and cow-calf owners, thinks that a gun can be legal today and banned tomorrow . . . "done by some faceless Ottawa bureaucrat." He seeks gun legislation with iron-clad guarantees given farmers and other gun owners, and the removal of all orders in council provisions.

The motion before the House would not go quite that far. It would go part of the way to ensure regulations are brought before the House and published and allow gun owners and others who want to comply with the law to know the regulations. The article continues:

The ideal, besides the welcome grandfather clause offered present gun owners, is that would-be gun owners should get a police certificate stating that the applicant has no police record and is not known to be mentally incompetent.

From that point, Crowe says, the applicant is then referred to a registered gun club or group of proficient local citizens (such as off-duty policemen). This would call for the completion of a recognized firearms course, thus constituting the cooling-off period demanded by the anti-gun lobby.

"However, the government would be out of the picture. And so would the bureaucrats. Hasn't Ottawa caught on to the fact that Canadians are utterly sick of officials sticking their noses into everything?" he asks.

The article summarizes what many Canadians feel. The government intervenes too much in our ordinary businesses and lives. Frankly, when the government does not listen to representations people make on legislation, democracy suffers. Parliament faces a crisis, and the public feels ever more that the politicians in Ottawa forget the people they are supposed to serve in their constituencies. The wishes of constituents are not translated into action taken by the House of Commons. That the provisions of this bill were not fully examined in committee is a clear demonstration of that fact. If democracy, parliament and our system of government are to survive, politicians on all sides must listen to the people. Therefore, I regret that those whom this legislation will affect particularly were not given the chance to appear before the committee in order to place their views on record.

The government's manner of proceeding was clearly evident in its approach to the metric conversion legislation. Rumour has it that the government will buckle under, come to its senses, heed our suggestions and remove from Bill C-23 the provision concerning hectares. We said in January that this provision should be removed. The government said we were filibustering. We were not. We were fighting for the people of Canada then, and we are trying to do the same at present.

I point out that after the hon. member for Crowfoot crossed the floor of the House, the government tried to force this measure through on three different occasions. I thought the hon. member, on behalf of the farmers of Canada, opposed metric conversion. Be that as it may, I am glad the government, after this long and difficult fight in the House of Commons, is at last willing to sit down and negotiate with the opposition. If they had been wise enough to read and follow some of the first speeches on this legislation, they would have found our acceptance of the bill that time had they withdrawn the provision of the hectare which is very offensive to farmers, particularly those in western Canada.

● (1630)

The amendment advanced by my colleague, the hon. member for Calgary North, is worthy of consideration. Certainly, it would improve the workings of the bill. It would allay many of the fears expressed by Canadians across the country, particularly those who will be directly affected by the legislation. I hope even at this late stage the minister will see fit to accept this motion. Perhaps we might then be able to help him in some way in getting this legislation through. Failing that, we might be here debating this bill until October or even November. Someone in this parliament has to speak out for, I would not say the silent majority but a substantial majority in this country who find this bill offensive in many ways.

[Mr. Mazankowski.]

Mr. Gordon Towers (Red Deer): Mr. Speaker, I cannot understand why the minister who supposedly represents justice in Canada does not recognize it when he meets it face to face. It is inconceivable that a minister would try to railroad legislation through the highest chamber in Canada that not only is unacceptable to a large number of people but is not necessary. It is absolutely unnecessary for the Minister of Justice (Mr. Basford) to act in the unorthodox manner in which he has with this bill and the one previous to it. Members on this side of the House would co-operate with him in bringing in favourable legislation that would be for the good of all people. However, the minister has signified that he has no intention of co-operating. I do not know how he thinks he will get this legislation through the House, when it does not meet with the approval of a large number of Canadians.

I commend the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams) for bringing in this amendment. I am sure it will have the support of all clear-thinking, honest members of parliament who wish to represent their people well. We have to consider whether parliament is here to serve the people or whether the government intends to have the people serve parliament. I must impress upon this House that many governments throughout the world have collapsed as a result of adopting the policies upon which the present government has embarked. I refer to imposing itself to such a degree on large masses of Canadian people that eventually they will revolt. There is much disenchantment and frustration within the Canadian populace today because government is imposing legislation and regulations upon them which they do not want.

There are very few people in Canada today who do not want criminals brought under control. However, when you begin to regulate the law-abiding citizen into a state of frustration, you create problems for everybody, particularly the elected representatives of the people. I hope some members opposite will lend their support to those on this side in trying to bring a little common sense to the Minister of Justice. They should put pressure on him to make him change his mind so that we will not have to deal with legislation such as this.

As the hon. member for Palliser (Mr. Schumacher) stated a few moments ago, people in Alberta are being charged as a result of regulations they knew nothing about. The roof fell in on them under conditions which they were not aware existed. That is what will happen with this legislation unless it is amended as proposed by the hon. member for Calgary North. Unless this amendment is carried, people will be charged under regulations put forward by order in council of which they are unaware. We must ask ourselves, who is serving what? Is government supposed to serve the people, or are the people supposed to serve government? Unless governments are a little more considerate, the elected officials in this House of Commons will continue to have a lot of problems.

There is a principle involved here that I hope will receive greater consideration from the government than it has up to the present time. There is a great danger in centralized control and power. Society today has only so much freedom. The more legislation and regulation imposed upon the general public, the less freedom the individual will have. The hon. member for Calgary North has spent a lifetime in the courts of Canada. He is to be commended for recognizing that the freedoms of the Canadian people are being eroded. It is the responsibility of each and every one of us to give more cognizance to the obligation of protecting the rights and freedoms of Canadians which are being eroded by regulations and legislation put forward by this government. A great many comments were made during second reading of this bill and in committee. We are, perhaps, getting to the point of being a little repetitious. However, if there is to be any justice in Canada, the Minister of Justice must recognize that the rights of the Canadian people should be foremost in the minds of those in cabinet.

I hope the minister will give greater consideration to this amendment. He should, at least, stand it for a while and consider whether it can be incorporated into the bill. The people I represent do not want any more freedoms eroded.

Mr. J. R. Holmes (Lambton-Kent): Mr. Speaker, I will be very brief in my support of the motion of my colleague, the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams). It is an issue to which I have addressed myself many times in the past. It is a very fundamental principle. I refer to the problem of regulations which in many instances are the operative part of legislation that is not seen by this House of Commons or the standing committees before the bill is passed.

● (1640)

I might say that perhaps the major ground for complaint among my constituents with regard to this measure is the difficulty of assessing its impact in the absence of regulations. This is not a new complaint; I have discussed it on other occasions. I recall specifically the debate on the animal contagious diseases act. When that legislation was before the House and discussion centred on a whole new clause related to transportation, it was impossible for either the House or the committee to arrive at a reasonable assessment of its implications simply because the regulations had not then been promulgated.

Members who read the statements made on that occasion, both here and in the other chamber, will have noted that earnest requests were made by those concerned with the legislation and with the future of the industry to have the regulations brought forward so that a more informed judgment could be reached with regard to the proposed legislation. I remember, too, that while we were dealing with the environmental contaminants legislation a number of hon. members drew attention to the desirability of having the regulations before us so that we might arrive at an accurate assessment of the impact of the measure.

I have noticed very often that legislation brought forward encompasses regulations which have been passed by order in council and were never debated in the House, yet those very regulations have formed part of bills presented to us for approval. I have no intention, Mr. Speaker, of discussing the subject in greater detail at this time, but I wish to object to the manner in which this measure has been introduced and to point out, once again, that constituents in my area are dissatisfied with the restriction which has been placed on the full understanding of the effect of these provisions by virtue of the absence of regulations which will cause them to be operative.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Is the House ready for the question?

Some hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): The question is on motion No. 7 in the name of the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams), and motion No. 28 also in the name of the hon. member for Calgary North. All those in favour will please say yea.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): All those opposed please say nay.

Some hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): In my opinion the nays have it. Pursuant to Standing Order 75(11), the recorded division stands deferred.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

SUBJECT MATTER OF QUESTIONS TO BE DEBATED

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Order, please. It is my duty, pursuant to Standing Order 40, to inform the House that the questions to be raised tonight at the time of adjournment are as follows: the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles)—Transport; the hon. member for Kootenay West (Mr. Brisco)—Communications; the hon. member for Humber-St. George's-St. Barbe (Mr. Marshall)—Veterans Affairs.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

CRIMINAL LAW AMENDMENT ACT, 1977

AMENDMENTS TO CRIMINAL CODE

The House resumed consideration of Bill C-51, to amend the Criminal Code, the Customs Tariff, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act and the Prisons and Reformatories Act, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Order. Before calling the next item, I should like to remind hon. members that when the bill was last before us at the report stage, the House gave consent to stand certain items standing in the name of the hon. member for Palliser (Mr. Schumacher). I suggest we now turn to those items and then follow our normal practice of taking the motions in numerical order.

Mr. Woolliams: Mr. Speaker, we have had discussion with the hon. member for Palliser (Mr. Schumacher) and there is agreement that, with Your Honour's approval, we might proceed with motions 12, 13 and 14 and then move along the lines of the suggestion you have just made. I have spoken with the minister, and he has no objection to this being done. The amendments of mine which are grouped together fall into line, in chronological order, with the debate which has been taking place with reference to the regulations.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Is that agreed?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Then we shall now move to motions Nos. 12, 13 and 14.

Mr. Eldon M. Woolliams (Calgary North) moved:

Motion No. 12.

That Bill C-51, to amend the Criminal Code, the Customs Tariff, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act and the Prisons and Reformatories Act, be amended in clause 3 by striking out lines 24 and 25 at page 24 and substituting the following therefor: "without lawful excuse".

Mr. Gordon Ritchie (Dauphin) moved:

Motion No. 13.

That Bill C-51, to amend the Criminal Code, the Customs Tariff, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act and the Prisons and Reformatories Act, be amended in clause 3

(a) by striking out line 27 at page 24 and substituting the following therefor:

"number on a restricted weapon; or"

(b) by striking out line 28 at page 24 and substituting the following therefor:

"(b) has in his possession a restricted weapon".

Mr. Eldon M. Woolliams (Calgary North) moved:

Motion No. 14.

That Bill C-51, to amend the Criminal Code, the Customs Tariff, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act and the Prisons and Reformatories Act, be amended in clause 3 by striking out lines 31 to 39 at page 24.

[The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner).]

He said: Mr. Speaker, I intend to direct my remarks today—

An hon. Member: Oh, no.

Mr. Woolliams: I hear one of my hon. friends across the way say something. I always like to hear from him because he speaks so seldom and I know when I hear his voice that it means so much to his constituency.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Which friend is that?

An hon. Member: He did not identify him.

Mr. Woolliams: I never like to identify these people because I want them to retain their deposits even if they cannot hold their constituencies. Seriously, though, in speaking to motions 12 and 14 I wish to deal with what I consider to be another important change in the jurisprudence of our criminal law. The terms of motion 12 will have been recorded in Hansard, but I should like to clarify what I have in mind.

Section 102, dealing with offences involving weapons, provides, "Every one who commits an offence without lawful excuse, the proof of which lies with him . . ." Let me say immediately that this is most shocking language to the ears of anyone who has ever done any counsel work as a lawyer particularly in defence of the rights of Canadians.

● (1650)

We all belong to one ethnic group or another, Mr. Speaker, and one thing I think I can say in safety, and indeed with sincerity, is that one contribution that the Anglo-Saxons made to the world was to implement a system of jurisprudence which has not only been appreciated by all Commonwealth nations made up of various ethnic groups, but also by nations that are not members of the Commonwealth. This system of jurisprudence provides that the onus of proof shall always lie upon the state. In the United States a case is referred to as "The State v. Brown," or whoever it is. In Canada it is "The Crown, for example Crown Rex v. Jones," because the Crown is the head of this nation. Whether the charge be murder or a lesser offence, the onus of proof is upon the Crown.

That principle did not evolve easily. If you go back in history and read the law of the Romans, Mr. Speaker, you will find there the beginnings of understanding and appreciation. To adopt any other system would mean that we are trying to adopt—and I say this kindly—the Napoleonic system, which means that everybody is guilty until they prove themselves innocent. Such a system is not acceptable to our party, nor is it acceptable to the lawyers of this nation or to the law-abiding citizens of the nation.

When a person is charged with an offence, it is true he has to sit in the prisoner's dock. The evidence is called by the Crown, whether the evidence lasts for one hour or day after day, as has been my experience in murder trials, and if the Crown fails to prove its case beyond a reasonable doubt, then the jury, if there is a jury, has the right to acquit the accused.

If it is being tried by a judge alone, then the judge will discharge or acquit the accused. Any other system would mean that an accused, as a compellable witness, must come forward and give evidence. A lot of people say, "Well, what's wrong with that?" What is wrong with that, Mr. Speaker, is this. Remember that when the Crown lays a charge against a person, it brings to bear on that person all its resources of money, police forces and bureaucrats against the little person of Canada who has to rely, if he or she stands alone, upon his own ability to answer the charge. Thank goodness we have gone a long way in the last few years to provide legal aid so he can have a counsel.

It is shocking to me, just as it is shocking to my hon. friend who spoke about orders in council, that a person would have to prove his innocence. That is the Napoleonic code. It is certainly not the system of jurisprudence recognized by this nation and appreciated by all ten provinces, including the province of Quebec just as much as the provinces of Ontario and Alberta. That is important. I have many French Canadian friends among the top lawyers in Montreal, and the House can ask them how important that principle of law is. All lawyers and judges in what we in Alberta refer to as our sister province of Quebec will agree that that is a sound principle. I ask the lawyers in this House who sit there in their seats to think about the kind of law which the minister is bringing forward.

I moved motion No. 14 in committee and it did not surprise the minister. I turn to page 24 of the bill, line 31, which provides:

(4) In proceedings under subsection (3), evidence that a person has in his possession a firearm the serial number of which has been wholly or partially obliterated is, in the absence of any evidence to the contrary, proof that such person has the firearm in his possession knowing that the serial number thereon has been altered, defaced or removed.

In other words, the onus would be on that person to prove that was not the case. I was rather surprised to hear the Minister of Justice (Mr. Basford) say this in the House on June 15 last, as reported at page 6716 of Hansard:

As I have said a number of times in committee and in this chamber, parliament has a duty to deal with this matter without rhetoric, without emotion and without politics.

Well, Mr. Speaker, I have news for him. I am going to deal with this matter with a little emotion and I am going to deal with it, I hope, with a little politics—or I should not be here. It is a very serious move indeed which the minister is proposing. As Charles Dickens wrote in "Oliver Twist", when referring to how the law reacted to poor little boys in the poorhouse, "the law is an ass".

The answer given by the minister is that this move is necessary. The minister puts me in mind of a story which perhaps I can put in its proper perspective. A few weeks ago an American came to Calgary to buy farmland. He was taken out by a real estate agent and shown a beautiful piece of land. The American said, "This is a lovely piece of land, but it is full of rocks". So the salesman said there was nothing wrong with that. He said that when the sun shines in Calgary, the rocks heat up and this nurtures the wheat. He said, "When it rains, the rocks disintegrate and add fertilizer to the grain, and that is how we get our great crops." Then the American asked, "Why have you got rocks piled up at every fence corner?" The salesman replied, "It is very simple. We have not had time to spread those yet".

This is exactly what the minister has been doing, spreading something across-the-board so far as jurisprudence is concerned.

Mr. Schumacher: He takes off with the rocks, though.

Mr. Woolliams: That could be. I hold in my hand "Cross, on Evidence", fourth edition, and I want to read a few lines from the text at page 88 which deals with the burden of proof:

The most recent English judgment on this subject—

I know our courts will agree with it.

—could be treated as authority for the view that the principle under consideration places the legal burden on an accused with "peculiar knowledge". This is a very drastic consequence where there are no statutory words pointing expressly to such a result and, as the court did not refer to the distinction between the legal and evidential burdens, it may be wise to adhere to the following statement by a New Zealand judge:

"If no evidence is given to prove the affirmative in respect of a negative averment which is peculiarly within the knowledge of the accused, then the finding ought to be against the accused on that fact. However, when the accused has produced evidence the question of the nature of the burden may require further consideration. Whether it is the same burden as that laid down for proof of insanity, or whether it is merely a burden of producing some evidence and thus throwing the burden back on the prosecution—

Then he refers to the famous case with which every lawyer in Canada is familiar, Woolmington v. Director of Public Prosecutions, an old case which says that the burden of proof shall always be upon the Crown and not upon the accused. This is the point I am making. The minister is adopting what I call a sort of slippery way of doing things. I know the farmers will be upset about this legislation. They will have the burden of proof put on them as law-abiding citizens. As the hon. member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) stated, we are sorry the hon. member for Crowfoot (Mr. Horner) is not here. With regard to Bill C-83 he came to see me all the time, throwing up his hands and saying it was terrible legislation. Now he has left us and everything he said has been reversed and changed because he has joined the group on the other side in more ways than one.

● (1700)

Mr. Paproski: He does not even show up in the House.

Mr. Woolliams: I don't blame him. I wouldn't show up, either. I should like to quote from page 91, which reads as follows:

There is, however, an overwhelming objection to placing the legal burden on the accused in these cases, even after allowance has been made for the fact that the standard of proof would be that appropriate to civil proceedings; it means that the tribunal of fact may be obliged to convict a person of whose guilt they are so far from being sure as to regard the probabilities of the existence of a lawful excuse as equally balanced. The danger of unmeritorious submissions of no case can be met by placing an evidential burden with regard to lawful excuse, etc. on the accused. This is the recommendation of the eleventh report of the Criminal Law Revision Committee, and it would apply to the common law burden of proving insanity placed upon the accused as well as to existing statutory burdens.

The recommended clause could of course be expressly excluded by subsequent legislation—

That is not good enough, because that is what we are facing today in the House. What are the authorities? What do they say the burden of proof is? It is a question of probability, when dealing with civil rights in civil matters. When dealing with the freedom of an individual on a charge as serious as a criminal charge, where your car or your weapon can be confiscated, as law-abiding citizens the onus is upon you. No member of parliament in this House has not had arguments and confrontations with people in departments who say, "That is the law".

If I may digress for a few moments, one of the most difficult cases I had is when I sued the Queen on behalf of a little settler in Lake Louise, Alberta, because the parks authorities took over his land and he was deprived of his rights. They can expropriate without money and without reason. The hon. member for Palliser (Mr. Schumacher) was in my office at that time and recalls the case. It took ten years to fight it. We dragged them back into court to get them to answer questions on discovery and to get them to produce documents, some of which were never produced. We finally succeeded, after ten years of fighting the state. I have always been proud of the RCMP, but when fighting a criminal case one must remember the sophistication they have in order to turn all their powers and all their technical know-how on a person who must rise in his place and say, "I am not guilty; I will have to defend myself".

Previously I said it cost $500 a day. Hansard reported it as $5,000 a day, and I corrected it. You need a psychiatrist to prove you are insane in a murder trial. Try to hire one at less than $500 a day. Because of the law of insanity, the onus is on the accused to prove he is innocent. In a murder trial, the onus is on them. How many people across this nation can afford that technical know-how? The state can afford it. If the state makes up its mind that it is going to lick Mr. Brown, Mr. Brown had better hustle, because he will be faced with counsel who is fearless. He must have the finances in order to afford a transcript of the evidence.

I received a bill the other day for a transcript of the evidence of a murder trial which is being appealed. It consisted of three books. What did it cost? The evidence cost $2,500. That is why I do not want the onus put upon the accused. I hope I have the support of hon. friends to my left, and I say that in the kindest manner. I hope they will support this motion on the ground that we must always protect the people to whom I have referred. It is the weak against the strong, the weak against the all-powerful state, the weak against the executive. Yet we have this legislation.

Some will say that we are paranoiac about guns. I am not talking about guns today. I am talking about legislation which happens to be in the gun section of the bill. I will have a lot to say about the invasion of privacy. Today the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) said he did not know when the Queen could open parliament, because he did not know when it will close.

[Mr. Woolliams.]

All the Minister of Justice has to do is follow the rules of jurisprudence and he will see how fast this party will move to co-operate in every regard. It is unacceptable to put in a section indicating that innocence has to be proven. I see my friend who knows something about income tax has just sat down. That same trick is contained in the Income Tax Act. As soon as they walk in on the fellow, he is guilty. They steal all his books. He cannot get them back. He cannot even give them to his accountant. He is told he has to prove himself innocent.

While I am on this point I should like to refer to a case that is going on in Calgary against a lawyer who happens to be very tenacious. He is a Liberal, and he has taken on the government by making it his life's work. I hope these words do not fall, like the parable in the Bible of the sower of seeds, on rock. I am referring to the fundamental principle of jurisprudence—a man should not be found guilty unless the evidence suggests beyond a reasonable doubt that he is guilty. What do we mean by reasonable doubt? We mean the type of doubt that the average man and woman has in everyday life, and not some airy-fairy thing.

This afternoon I was asked what this is all about. It is about freedom, and it is about liberty. If I have done anything in my life, I am proud to stand here in the House, and sometimes in courtrooms, defending people where unusual things have been going on. The truth is not always created by putting on a uniform. Human behaviour does not change with stripes or pips. Honesty exists with the little people as it does with the authorities. That has to be weighed. When the state moves in, it has an advantage because of the tendency to believe the state over other things unless you have some documentation or very strong evidence.

● (1710)

Putting the onus on the accused is beyond my comprehension. I do not think the Minister of Justice put that in the bill. With the greatest respect to him, I think the bill was drafted by somebody in his department. That was done with the Income Tax Act and it is done with the liquor acts of the provinces. If you have ten bottles of whisky in your cupboard and you are charged with bootlegging, you have to prove that you were not selling that whisky. That goes on, and that is because people became all tied up over prohibition. This law evolved over centuries of trial and error; it has not been worked out overnight. Lately we have been in the habit of making changes, but some things have stood the test of time. Some things are like rocks; they do not melt away like the stones in the story I told. They last. Human behaviour has tested the law. "Cross, on Evidence" says:

Several judgments delivered in the course of the second half of the nineteenth century indicate the existence of two standards of proof recognised by the law. They are proof on a preponderance of probabilities, the standard appropriate to civil cases and proof beyond reasonable doubt, the proper standard on a criminal charge.

How did all this come about? As "Cross, on Evidence", and "Wigmore, on Evidence" say, this did not happen one morning: it happened after centuries of testing the law as it relates to the freedom and civil rights of the individual. Anything short of that moves us to a dictatorial state, even if we have the right of elections. It is very easy for a government to say it has a majority and, therefore, a mandate to do anything. If we rethink the mandate of the government in terms of what the government said when the election was on, we would find that the government does not really have a mandate. We on this side were damned and blasted across the country, because of our wage and price controls proposals, as people with a new economic policy which had never before been enunciated. Before the Prime Minister got back to Sussex Street, after the election they were implemented. If that was not a flip-flop, there never was a flip-flop.

Mr. Mazankowski: Zap, you're frozen.

Mr. Cullen: Don't lose your cool.

Mr. Woolliams: Don't worry about my cool.

Mr. Cullen: Not your cool, baby.

Mr. Woolliams: I know the minister was talking to the hon. member for Vegreville. The hon. member is a good friend. I know him well, and so does the minister. He is a man who is very cool, and he keeps his cool. "Cross, on Evidence" also says:

In civil cases the preponderance of probability may constitute sufficient ground for a verdict; but, in criminal proceedings which took place some seven years later, the jury were told that they must be satisfied of the accused's guilt beyond any reasonable doubt—

That was the famous House of Lords case, Cooper v. Slade. We can go to the Library of the Supreme Court of Canada or to any courthouse and find that the precedents of Canada since the time we became a nation have followed the jurisprudence that the onus is on the Crown and that no one can be found guilty except if guilt is proven beyond a reasonable doubt. I do not know what has come over this country. Do we want to change our parliamentary system? Our system has evolved through the centuries. Our system in Canada gives people of all ethnic origins more freedom than the systems of other countries. That freedom is found wherever we go in the Commonwealth.

Mr. Neil: It's being taken away.

Mr. Woolliams: That freedom is gradually being eroded. As the hon. member for Moose Jaw (Mr. Neil) says, it is being taken away day after day. Why cannot the Minister of Justice stand in his place today and say that we have a point and that he will accept these two amendments. Once the government makes up its mind—

Mr. Schumacher: It is like a rock.

Mr. Woolliams: Absolutely. A former leader of the New Democratic Party (Mr. Douglas) used to tell a story, which I will tell and then sit down. I have never forgotten that story. It is a good story to illustrate the kind of stubbornness we now see. A man owned a mule which would not lead, drink, feed, harness or be ridden. The man's neighbour said he was a mule specialist. The neighbour told the man to put the mule on a truck and bring him over. The first thing the neighbour did when the mule was brought over was hit the mule between the eyes with a club. The mule's knees buckled. The mule's owner said, "I did not bring him over for that kind of cruelty". The neighbour said, "If you are going to teach a mule anything, the first thing you have to do is get his attention". I want the nation to turn its attention to this legislation. I have said my piece on this very important phase of jurisprudence.

Mr. Stan Schumacher (Palliser): Mr. Speaker, I would like to associate myself with the remarks of the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams) in dealing with this group of amendments. I also want to say something about motion No. 13 because it is related. If it were not for the part of the bill which motion No. 13 attempts to correct, we would not have to debate the legal principles which were spoken about so eloquently by my friend on motions Nos. 12 and 14.

As the law presently stands, people cannot be in possession of restricted weapons on which the serial numbers have been altered, mutilated or ruined without some lawful excuse. I agree with the hon. member for Calgary North that to require an accused to carry any kind of onus where a criminal charge is involved is a wrong principle. In committee, the Minister of Justice (Mr. Basford) said the reason for this requirement was that the accused is the only person who has something peculiarly or uniquely within his knowledge, as if nobody else would know anything about a particular mutilation or alteration. I find that a rather lame excuse or justification for this type of law in the Criminal Code.

If one person kills another, and nobody else is present, I suppose in those circumstances the accused has something peculiarly or uniquely within his knowledge, but in a case like that the accused is not required to present any excuse to a court trying him on a charge of murder. Yet in a case relating to firearms, the government wishes to put that onus upon an accused. As the law presently stands, this requirement applies to people in possession of restricted weapons. I would like to have some explanation as to why this has to be broadened. I agree with the hon. member for Calgary North that it is a wrong principle. We should be deleting the provision with regard to restricted weapons that is already on the books. However, an initiative like that would probably be out of order in this debate. In any event, I certainly would not agree to extend this provision to the general category of firearms. This bill deals with restricted weapons and prohibited weapons. Why is it now so necessary to extend this crime to include all firearms, including the lowly Cooey .22 or any other weapon which is in broad, general use?

● (1720)

What is the government trying to accomplish, except to create many new, potential crimes which present no danger or problem to the nation? That is symptomatic of the whole bill. Why does the government wish to create a great number of new crimes, some that are announced in the bill and many of which will be created by the stroke of the pen of some bureaucrat about whom we do not even know, when there is no clear or present need for the creation of that crime?

The minister did not say anything in the committee. The only thing he said was that we are extending it from restricted weapons to firearms in general. There was no documentation as to why this was necessary. I am getting a little tired of having to deal with measures before the House creating new laws which will result in a bigger bureaucracy for no apparent reason. Don McGillivray of the Southam News Service recently wrote an article stating that about half the population of this country is dependent on governments, primarily those people who are employed by governments at all levels. Of course the federal government is the leader in the explosion of bureaucracy in this country, and unfortunately provincial and municipal jurisdictions, school boards, hospital boards, look at the great example of that wonderful, efficient, federal government!

It is efficient at spending our money and wasting it. Now it comes along with more laws, for less reason. In the process, the government is depriving the citizens of freedom of movement in this country. I am getting sick and tired of this, and I would like to hear some reason for these measures. All they will do is make it easier for the bureaucracy. The government does not even have the courage to tell us what it wants to do.

Mr. Peters: Make it easier for the police.

Mr. Schumacher: But the police seems to have plenty to do now, without our giving them more jobs to do. I am hoping the minister will have something to say about this further encroachment on the rights of ordinary citizens to exercise what they have grown accustomed to as a way of life in this country. I am distressed by the fact that we are becoming more and more regimented for no good reason. Therefore, I urge all members of the House to examine the bill more closely.

In my remarks earlier this afternoon I noted that Bill C-51 is now being sold as a greatly watered-down version of Bill C-83, and because of that we are told should let it go through without any discussion or even examination. Certainly, the committee did not spend much time on this bill. I was fortunate to have attended two or three meetings of the committee, but there was a real steamroller in that committee not to hear witnesses. Certainly, in the clause by clause discussion very little time was allotted by the government to consideration of the various provisions of the bill. There was no justification given by the minister. All he said was that he wanted to amend the provisions to include firearms in general instead of only restricted weapons.

Why can we not deal with restricted and prohibited weapons? The government wants to further regulate the use of weapons. Instead, we find a great expansion of the application of the gun control legislation to include all types and forms of firearms. No evidence has been given as to the necessity of taking such a step. So I urge all members to examine this legislation before giving it quick and easy passage, because I think hundreds of thousands of people in years to come will be pointing their fingers at us if we do not do something to bring the expansionary ideas of the bureaucracy in the Department of Justice under some control at this time.

Hon. Ron Basford (Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, may I just say a word on this? It has been suggested that this clause brings into the law some new and remarkably dangerous concept. May I point out that section 102(3) of the Criminal Code, which has been in effect for many years, provides:

> Every one commits an offence who, without lawful authority, the proof of which lies upon him,
>
> (a) alters, defaces or removes a serial number on a restricted weapon—

That concept has been in the law for a long time. The only change proposed under Bill C-51 is that firearms be included, making it an offence to deface, alter or obliterate the serial number of any firearm. The policy reason for changing the wording from "restricted weapon" to "firearm" is that when the initial section 102(3) was written, many long guns did not carry serial numbers when they were manufactured. Now, in the bill, we propose a provision relating to long guns, in the interest of the safety of the public. It would seem to me wise that long guns also be covered by a section prohibiting the obliteration of serial numbers, as in motor vehicle acts where you have a prohibition against obliteration of engine numbers.

In fact, in a recent meeting with members of a gun club they told me they could not figure out why this clause was limited to firearms. They wondered why there was not a general prohibition against the obliteration of serial numbers on any article, be it a restricted weapon, a firearm, a television set, a refrigerator or anything else, because obviously in those cases—I would imagine in all cases except those involving the repairing of an article where the removal of the serial number may be necessary—the removal of a serial number is done for some criminal purpose. So let us first be clear that the only change in this clause is not the introduction into the Criminal Code of some new concept shifting the onus, but is simply a change from a prohibition against the obliteration of serial numbers on restricted weapons to one covering all firearms.

Second, this is by no means a new concept. I wish the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams) had read the evidence more carefully, because the concept is discussed there and it shows that this provision does not shift the onus to the point that the accused must prove his innocence. Under this clause, and under sections of the Criminal Code where these presumptions are used, the onus is still on the Crown to prove its case against the accused beyond a reasonable doubt. That standard of proof which is common to our criminal law prevails under this clause, as it does in other sections.

● (1730)

Obviously where there is a matter that is uniquely and peculiarly within the knowledge of the accused it falls upon the accused to prove it if it is to be used as a defence. The Crown cannot put forward that excuse. If the defence to murder is insanity or drunkenness, for instance, the Crown cannot put forward that defence; only the accused can. The hon. member for Calgary North cited Cross and a case from New Zealand—which I have not read— to the effect that where there is a defence, the accused has to prove that beyond the preponderance of probability. At that point the onus shifts to the Crown to prove its case beyond a reasonable doubt. That is the standard that applies at the beginning of the case and at the end.

To suggest that this is a new concept is wrong. It occurs many times in the Criminal Code. In Section 237, for instance, concerning care and control of a motor vehicle, when the driver's seat is occupied, there is a presumption it is being occupied by the driver who has care and control of the vehicle. Section 254(4), on a charge of bigamy, the accused must establish that the previous marriage was invalid. Section 306(2), in evidence of breaking and entering, where there is prima facie proof of intent to commit an indictable offence; there is a presumption against the accused, as in the case with Section 307(1), relating to entering a dwelling house. Section 197 contains various presumptions against an accused relating to the dependency of women and children where the charge is failure to provide necessities. Section 322(2), fraudulently obtaining food and lodging. Section 233(3), hit and run—failure to stop is prima facie proof of intent to escape liability. Sections 391 and 392, negligently setting of fire. Section 180, relating to disorderly houses and gaming houses—presence of a slot machine leads to a presumption that the place is a common gaming house. Section 195, there is a prima facie presumption relating to living on the avails of prostitution. Section 298(3), the burden of proof is on the accused relating to cattle rustling—and there are many other such sections. They are put into the criminal law where there are matters which are uniquely and peculiarly within the knowledge of the accused.

In each case there is a presumption; in each case there is a defence to be raised by the accused at which time the onus is clearly on the Crown, as it traditionally always is, to prove that the defence is not right and that the accused should be found guilty as charged.

This amendment is not a new concept. All it does is substitute long guns for restricted weapons, for the reason I indicated. Long guns are now made with serial numbers and are used in the commission of crimes, and particularly the crime of murder. In a number of instances the serial number is useful in identification and in the investigation and solution of crime. The concept is not a new one as suggested by the hon. member.

Mr. Doug Neil (Moose Jaw): Mr. Speaker, I should like to associate myself with the remarks of the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams) and the hon. member for Palliser (Mr. Schumacher). I listened with considerable interest to the minister who said that this is not a new concept. There is no question about that, but it is certainly an attempt by the government to extend a concept.

It has always been a basic principle of common law—the law that we use in our courts—that the onus of proof lies upon the Crown and that an individual is considered innocent until proven guilty. A few years ago the concept of reverse onus was smuggled into our law in order to restrict the rights of individuals. It used to be very rare.

I recall when a reverse onus clause was smuggled into the vehicles act in the province of Saskatchewan a number of years ago. It came as a shock to judges and to solicitors practising law that the basic principle of our common law could be altered to make it a requirement that the person charged should prove his innocence. Over the years more and more reverse onus clauses have been written into the law. The result is that the state has been taking away the basic freedoms of the individual citizen. One of the reasons given for this is that it makes it easier for the police to prove their case in court. There is no doubt that is so, but my understanding is, and always has been, that individual freedom is basic and foremost in a democracy, and that this freedom ought not to be taken away.

In most cases the Crown does not have any difficulty proving a case where the burden of proof rests on it. It is required to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that an accused person is guilty, but with the reverse onus, that is not so. That is what disturbs me so much, not only with this particular amendment but with many of the laws on the books today. There has been an erosion of our basic freedoms and if we, as parliamentarians, allow the government to bring in more and more of this type of legislation then we, especially on this side of the House, are not doing our job if we do not voice our concern and let people know what is happening.

I should like to make a few comments on motion No. 13 to amend Clause 102(3), which extends the offence to include what they call firearms. Previously it referred to restricted weapons.

• (1740)

At present there are several million long guns in the hands of people in this country. Many of them are old, without a serial number. Many of them have been in the owner's possession many years and the serial number has worn off or been obliterated, perhaps when the gun hit the side of the car. Often, if you want to mount a telescopic sight on your long gun, you obliterate the serial number or deface it when you screw the mount on. I venture to say you will find hundreds of thousands of guns in this country on which the serial number is worn off, indistinct, or obliterated, possibly because work was done on the gun.

I foresee this situation arising: one may be hunting in the fall and one of those keen game wardens who check your hunting licence, count the number of ducks or geese you have shot, and so on, will ask to see your gun's serial number. If it is worn off or defaced, I can visualize the gun being seized and possibly a charge being laid. If I could see any reason for extending the section to cover other than restricted weapons I might be prepared to consider supporting it, provided there is no reverse onus.

Guns in this country at present are not registered. There is no record anywhere of their serial numbers. If you could trace by its serial number a gun used in a crime, I could see some point to the exercise. However, since there is no record of the serial numbers of guns, what is the use of this provision? What is the good of the serial number registration provision, unless the government's ultimate aim is to force the registration of every conceivable kind of gun people in this country possess? If it intends to do this I tell you, here and now, the public of Canada will not accept such a system.

In closing I suggest that if members on both sides of the House were to read carefully the clause of the bill we are discussing, the speeches of the hon. member for Calgary North and, of the hon. member for Palliser, and some of the other speeches which will be made on this part of the bill, I am satisfied that they in all good conscience will not be able to support the bill as presented by the government.

Mr. Robert McCleave (Halifax-East Hants): Mr. Speaker, I am emboldened to take part in this debate because the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams) in his remarks dealt with certain principles established in law, and the best the Minister of Justice (Mr. Basford) could do to refute that argument was point to some bad practices which have grown up in the law. Therefore this House, on this question, must decide between principle and practice. I suggest that simply because the government has been able to follow certain courses in the past, perhaps in circumstances which should be judged on their exceptional merits, it does not mean a bad practice is a good precedent to be followed in drafting an amendment to the criminal law or in running the administration of justice. Therefore I must come down squarely on the side of the hon. member for Calgary North with regard to the amendments moved.

In some respects the government has cleaned up its act, as it were. Some of the important powers originally set out in Bill C-83 have been corrected. Nevertheless certain other clauses disturb me, for example the powers to be granted to local registrars, with which I will not deal now. Perhaps we could deal later with some of these powers when we consider the relevant clauses of the bill. Here and now, for reasons eloquently put forward by the hon. member for Calgary North and capably argued by the hon. member who just resumed his seat, and others, I must come down on the side of the angel, principle, rather than that of the devil, expediency.

Mr. Gordon Ritchie (Dauphin): Mr. Speaker, may I speak on the group of motions now being debated, particularly on motion No. 13 standing in my name, which reads:

That Bill C-51, an Act to amend the Criminal Code, the Customs Tariff, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act and the Prisons and Reformatories Act, be amended in Clause 3

(a) by striking out line 27 at page 24 and substituting the following therefor:

"number on a restricted weapon; or"

(b) by striking out line 28 at page 24 and substituting the following therefor:

"(b) has in his possession a restricted weapon".

The government apparently wants to smuggle in its registration provisions by the back door. Of course there was such a huge outcry against Bill C-83 exactly for this reason—the government wanted all gun owners to register their guns. Considering all the guns people of this country own, the registration of all guns would be a horrendous job. Apparently the government is looking to the day when it can force all gun owners to register their guns.

The minister says he sees nothing wrong with the clause we are considering. Why include it in the bill if you do not want to cast your net a little wider and make your mesh a little finer? In effect the government says, "If one provision is not effective, perhaps another will be."

I object to the reverse onus which stems from the Napoleonic code. We rejected that code in Canada, for under our criminal law a person is innocent until proven guilty. Obviously, according to the government's thinking, people charged are presumed guilty and must prove their innocence. This reverse onus, this espousing of the Napoleonic code's attitude, is not to my liking.

• (1750)

Why this registration when the minister says that nothing will be changed? I have three guns, a shotgun which I bought 25 years ago, a carbine which was given to me 15 or 20 years ago, and one I bought last summer. I do not know where the serial numbers are on them. They could have been tampered with. Someone may well have filed them off. At various times I have carried them in my car. They could be changed by anyone who wanted to change them.

Anyone who has tried to decipher numbers from farm machinery or other metal surfaces knows that it is possible. Any letter or number can be changed. Many people have made mistakes with a five, three or eight. They can be removed by rust. With a scratch you can easily change a three to an eight, a five to a three, a seven to a one, or a one to a seven. Serial numbers can easily be changed in that way.

Any game warden, game guardian or anyone else who would like to get at a certain person could do so under this clause. That person could always say that the number had been changed. I do not know who could prove him wrong. He could always say that a particular number looks as though it had been changed.

Game wardens and other authorities will be able to increase the number of convictions by merely saying that the Criminal Code has been changed. For what reason is this being done other than to pave the way for gun registration in the future? That has to be the only reason. Crimes are not proved by gun registration numbers, but by ballistics tests. If the minister is sincere, he will say that he intends to institute gun registration some time in the future.

The minister said in committee that he is extending this to all firearms, and there is no new concept here. Instead of only applying to retricted guns, it is extended to all firearms. The policy is that the lawful excuse is something uniquely within the knowledge of the accused. That is Napoleonic code thinking, saying let us make the individual guilty and let him prove his innocence. That is a lot easier than the other way around.

A restricted weapon is a lot different than the so-called long guns. The minister is not letting us in on what he and his department heads are thinking. It is a great deal different trying to compare changing the number on a gun with running a disorderly house or some of the other things the minister suggested the bill is designed to prevent.

The minister has not put forward a very good defence for his suggested change. If he does not intend to have registration, what good is this clause? Obviously it will not help to catch criminals. It will open up the way for a law officer to get at somebody without having to prove some more serious infraction under the law.

I am not a lawyer. I have no training in that field. However, I feel this amendment will help to make the bill a little more reasonable. If accepted, we will not have the situation where a person has to prove his innocence rather than the other way around.

I hope the House will accept my amendment and that the minister will see his way clear to change his thinking. Obviously he is intent on increasing the hold which government has on people, controlling them in this area. I feel that control in this area is far too widespread.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Order, please. It being six o'clock, I do now leave the chair until eight o'clock later this day.

At six o'clock the House took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The House resumed at 8 p.m.

Mr. Ritchie: Mr. Speaker, before the supper hour I was speaking to the amendment I have presented. I should like to add that, after reading what the minister had to say in committee, it is obvious he has not taken the House into his confidence. He said then:

> The reason is obviously a practical one in that the authorities, coming upon someone with a firearm on which the serial number has been changed, just as a matter of practical investigation have absolutely no way of determining whether it was in his possession with lawful excuse.

This appears on page 22:40 of the Minutes of Evidence before the Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs on June 16 of this year. He is indicating that somewhere down the road he expects to use this power, and the only way it would be useful to the authorities is through the registration of guns. It would be almost impossible to prove that someone has unlawfully erased a mark or changed a bolt for his own benefit.

The House would do well to consider what the hon. member for Calgary North said, as recorded at page 22:42 of the proceedings of the same committee:

> I think this is the little thing that finally smoked out what the philosophy of the department is. Do you know what most people, the wildlife people and the gun owners, believe? That this Bill C-51 which got watered down after they opposed C-83 so violently, is like the camel in the tent; once he gets his neck in, you are going to have him all in the tent.

I believe the minister intends to press on with gun legislation at some point. I should like to register my objection, and I hope the House will see fit to pass this amendment. At least it will provide some small degree of protection so that if gun registration does come about it will come about in an honest manner, not by way of back-door tactics.

Mr. Gordon Towers (Red Deer): Mr. Speaker, on rising to take part in this debate in support of the amendments put forward by my hon. friends I wish to make a few remarks, a few comments, relative to the statement made by the minister this afternoon. The minister was not very convincing when he tried to argue that when a person was charged he did not have to prove his innocence.

I could illustrate for you an incident with regard to income tax, where the Income Tax Department contacted one of my constituents and asked for information. The information was sent in with regard to the income of the individual, but the Tax Department took no cognizance whatsoever of the reply and went ahead and assessed him for the tax. In turn, the individual had to hire accountants to protect himself and, even though he was not guilty of an offence or any violation of the income tax law—it was just that he had been assessed wrongly—he still had to prove his innocence. The same thing would happen if this provision were enacted. If an individual is charged, unless he wants to plead guilty he has to prove his innocence.

I am not a lawyer, just a layman, but I can see what is going on in our society today. In a great many cases people plead guilty because it is easier and cheaper to do so than to fight a case. To me, Mr. Speaker, that is not justice and it is why, as I said earlier today, I am wondering whether justice has vacated our land entirely, with the Minister of Justice (Mr. Basford) continuing to bring in legislation whereby individuals have to prove their innocence when they are charged with an offence.

● (2010)

It seems to me that somewhere along the line either the House of Commons or this legislation is lacking in common sense. Surely in this day and age of abundant technology we have the intelligence to put in place legislation which will be of benefit to all rather than infringe on the rights of individual Canadians.

As I said earlier, the Minister of Justice was not convincing in his argument this afternoon. I am sure that if he were in one of our courts in Canada and approached the issue in the same manner as today, he would not win many cases. I plead with members on the government side of the House to talk to the minister to try to impress upon him that this is not the way to put forward this legislation.

If the legislation were going to control the activities of the criminal, there would be less opposition to it, but there is no guarantee that legislation such as this will do so. Further, those who are charged, whether law abiding or not, will have to prove their innocence.

At page 24 of the bill section 102(3) provides:

Every one commits an offence who, without lawful excuse, the proof of which lies on him—

It behooves the minister, in fulfilling the commission which has been placed upon him, to bring in legislation which will be beneficial, not detrimental, to the Canadian people. I hope the minister will take a second look at this question. I do not think he has been at all convincing this afternoon; indeed I do not think he even convinced himself. He simply used a little rhetoric in trying to make a case. I urge the minister to stand in his place and accept the amendment put forward by my colleague.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Is the House ready for the question?

Some hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Bob Brisco (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, I am sorry I was not in my seat at the time. I would not like the House to think—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order. Is the hon. member rising on a point of order or to debate the motion?

Mr. Brisco: To debate the motion, Mr. Speaker. I am sorry I was not in my seat at the appropriate moment, and I would not want the Speaker to think for one moment that I was receiving tuition or coaching from my expert and knowledgeable friend, the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams). However, there are a couple of issues I want to clear up.

The concerns being expressed by members on this side of the House in regard to this amendment, or more appropriately these amendments taken together, are virtually the same as those previously expressed on an earlier amendment wherein the question arose of government by regulation. On the one hand we have government by regulation; on the other hand we have, in effect, not government by regulation but guilt by association. A person has to prove his innocence.

Under Canadian and British criminal law, as opposed to the Napoleonic code and as opposed to civil law, there must be guilt beyond reasonable doubt. In terms of reasonable doubt this means that the clinician in reaching a diagnosis bases it on a multitude of facts, signs and symptoms, laboratory tests and so on. In reaching the conclusion that a particular project can proceed, an engineer bases his conclusion on sound engineering principles, the laws of physics and so on.

However, according to this bill a person is guilty first and must prove his innocence second. Regardless of the rhetoric in which this provision is couched, that is clearly the antithesis of what we consider to be proper criminal law according to the British system. If the government is interested in adopting Napoleonic law, as we are to infer from this particular clause, then I suggest that it openly declare that that is where it stands. But as it stands now this is wrong.

[Mr. Towers.]

In addition, the government has, by accident or design, tied in this provision with the firearms legislation or the regulations that follow in subsequent clauses. However, the term "firearm" is very broad. If one takes the trouble to go to the beginning of the bill and reads the broad definition that now applies, we are surely sweeping with a very broad brush; and I suggest that someone who in all innocence may be walking the streets at 11.30 at night will suddenly find himself assumed to be guilty of some offence.

In terms of Napoleonic law, Mr. Speaker, I am reminded of a circumstance that occurred some years ago when W. A. C. Bennett was premier of British Columbia. A deputy minister of one of the government departments had the inclination to walk down a street in Quebec City, minding his own business, out for an evening's stroll. All of a sudden he was set upon by a couple of policemen. In the first instance there was, unfortunately at that very moment, a language barrier, and let us hope that that barrier has been reduced. At that time that barrier was very clearly there. The man had proper identification which proved beyond any reasonable doubt that he was a senior official of the government of the province of British Columbia. Yet, because he had some vague resemblance to a wanted criminal, he was dragged bodily into a police car.

● (2020)

He was beaten, harassed, questioned, and received all kinds of maltreatment and held in jail over night. Finally, he was released some 24 hours later. That is the kind of law I abhor. Whether it is the province of Quebec, British Columbia, Prince Edward Island or any other province in Canada, or any city in Canada, I abhor the manner in which that whole case was ultimately dealt with. The police department did not want to apologize for their conduct. They did not want to acknowledge that they had made a mistake. An apology was dragged out of them. Is that the kind of law we want in this country?

I realize I have digressed, but I have demonstrated a point. If the government is interested in Napoleonic law, let it go on the record and say so and change a few other clauses in this bill to further demonstrate its concern and its desire. Otherwise, let us see the minister develop some common sense and good judgment. Let his officials advise him that he is not going to get anywhere with this bill, with this kind of nonsense.

Before I sit down, I should like to say that similarly this minister is not going to get anywhere with this bill until he sees some reason with reference to wiretapping legislation.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Elmer M. MacKay (Central Nova): Mr. Speaker, I just wish to add my voice to those of my colleagues on this side of the House in regard to this particular motion by expressing a great amount of dismay concerning the language used by the people who drafted this clause. Subclause (3) reads as follows:

Every one commits an offence who, without lawful excuse, the proof of which lies on him

(a) alters, defaces or removes a serial number on a firearm; or

(b) has in his possession a firearm knowing that the serial number thereon has been altered, defaced or removed.

It has been very alarming in recent years to see the encroachments which have been coming forward on the doctrine of reasonable doubt. We have seen it more and more in provincial statutes where a quasi-criminal law has been changed by legislators to exclude the traditional safeguards of a person not being forced to prove his innocence. It has always been up to the Crown—he who asserts must prove, type of thing. It was alarming enough when we saw it in provincial statutes or in municipal bylaws or some other less than criminal jurisprudence. But to see it in a piece of legislation which is causing such consternation across the country, is a very, very regressive step in criminal law jurisprudence.

When looking at this particular language one can only assume the proof of innocence has to be beyond reasonable doubt. In other words we have a complete reversal of the traditional safeguards for the individual. It is not the balance or probability standards which one sees in civil litigation; it is a complete perversion of the British criminal law tradition. Any person is innocent unless he is proven guilty beyond a reasonable doubt. To take this kind of Draconian measure and to reverse or completely change such a fundamental precept of criminal jurisprudence, with the object in mind of simply punishing someone who has in his possession a firearm knowing that the serial number thereon has been altered, defaced or removed, and then to say the only way to satisfy the authorities that this was not done in a culpable way, has to be accomplished by the person charged proving beyond a reasonable doubt his innocence—I do not see how any member of parliament can sit in this place and allow this legislation to be passed by this hallowed institution. As has been said by the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams) and my other colleagues, this particular provision alone would justify any member of parliament, who has the most commonplace respect for some of our legal traditions in this country, in voting against this piece of legislation.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Arnold Peters (Timiskaming): Mr. Speaker, I have listened to the argument put forth by the minister and by a number of other hon. members. It would be very simple to change this argument by removing this business that the proof of innocence lies with the person charged.

I remember an incident which happened to me not too long ago. I had a flat tire and I was having difficulty getting the tire off my station wagon. I do not know what the problem was. Perhaps it was because it had been on for years. The provincial police stopped and assisted me to take the tire off with a crowbar. In doing so, they noticed the tire was stamped "DOT", which is the Ontario government department of transport. One is not supposed to have those tires on these cars. They were suspicious of where I got the tire. I was able to inform them the whole car came from DOT. I had bought it from them at an auction sale. The other tires on the vehicle were stamped "DOT" as well. It is true, therefore, that in many cases you have to prove you are not responsible for something.

Someone mentioned that you should know if the numbers are changed on your motor vehicle. I do not imagine there is a member of parliament who has ever looked at the serial number on his car to see whether it has been altered or not. In fact you have to look in the book to tell where the serial number is.

An hon. Member: Look just under your windshield.

Mr. Peters: That is not the serial number of the motor and it is not the serial number of your frame. That is the registration number. Those who are very, very wealthy members, like the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles), and who have reasonably new cars—

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Order, order!

Mr. Peters: That has only been put on very recently.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): The hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles) on a point of order.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. My car is two years old.

An hon. Member: And a Cadillac at that.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): It is a Chevy Nova.

Mr. Woolliams: You were the first one to buy a Seville.

• (2030)

Mr. Peters: That is brand spanking new compared with some of the vehicles I have.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): How many have you?

Mr. Peters: Five or six, but—

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): As you were saying—

Mr. Peters: As I was saying, most people have not looked at that. It may be true that you should know whether you are buying a stolen car because usually stolen cars are sold at bargain basement prices. However, if you buy it from a reputable dealer, it might be the same price as any other car, and you will not know—you may even drive it for a long time—that it was stolen. I do not really think you should get into very much trouble if you bought the car without knowing it was stolen and had no reason to believe it was stolen. You did not make the disfigurations on the numerical designation of the car, so it can be proved that you are innocent.

I think there are shotguns on which there are not yet numbers, and I do not believe any of the old Winchesters have numbers. Some certainly have not, but I do not think most people look to see whether there are serial numbers. I know it is important to collectors that the serial numbers on all parts of a gun be the same, but whether the numbers on the parts are the same as the serial number of the gun, I am not sure.

In many cases people will not look for those numbers. Gun may change hands many times, and when a person is accused of having an illegal gun because numbers have been erased, that will come as a surprise because that person will not have looked. People look to see how straight the barrel is, they look at the sights, they look to see whether the gun fits the shoulder and so see if the face plate is in the right place. They look at a number of things, but as a rule I do not believe they look at the serial number to find out whether it has been changed.

While the minister is right that much of our legislation falls into the same category as this, that does not make this legislation right. If someone wishes to lay charges against someone for having changed numbers, that fits into a different category. That is usually done for a fraudulent reason, to cover a theft or to do a number of other things, but it does not seem to me to relate to whether a person has a gun or not. While the minister is right that this has been fairly commonplace in a number of other bills, I do not think it makes it right in this case. A police officer should be required to tell an alleged offender: "You have committed some kind of an offence, and we are going to prove it".

An alleged offender should not have to say that he bought his gun from a little old lady who was handy with a file, or something of that nature. That can be established by the person laying the charge. That is the way most law works. That is the way most Canadians think it works, and it seems to me that everything we are trying to do in this bill is going to make it easier for the police to harass people. Even if they harass people only to get them to prove that they did not commit offences or that they did not know they were committed, that is still harassment, and that will really not help the police very much. This bill would allow the police to make everyone prove that they are innocent.

How are police officers going to examine guns in the first place? Are they going to go around looking at everyone's guns? That would be an immense harassment. They really should have some reason for doing that, and if they have a reason for doing it, the reason should not be harassment. It seems to me that everything in this bill is as much for harassment as it is for people who believe in law and order, or for people who believe we should take guns away from everybody in this country.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Is the House ready for the question?

Some hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

[Mr. Peters.]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Pursuant to Standing Order 75(11) the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

Mr. Woolliams: Mr. Speaker, if it is all right with the House, it is my understanding that we are now going to proceed in chronological order. We did get out of chronological order because there was an agreement a week ago Thursday with reference to two amendments, the one on orders in council and the one on notice, which we have now covered. However, we will now go in chronological order according to the members, if that is agreeable to the House.

Mr. Schumacher: Mr. Speaker, I think motions Nos. 13 and 14 should be called because they were grouped and debated together with motion No. 12.

Mr. Basford: They have been called.

Mr. Schumacher: They were called together?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): They were called at the beginning. Motions Nos. 12, 13 and 14 were grouped.

Mr. Stan Schumacher (Palliser) moved:

Motion No. 2.

That Bill C-51, An Act to amend the Criminal Code, the Customs Tariff, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act and the Prisons and Reformatories Act, be amended in Clause 3 by striking out line 16 at page 4 and substituting the following therefor:

"collection of a".

Motion No. 21.

That Bill C-51, An Act to amend the Criminal Code, the Customs Tariff, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act and the Prisons and Reformatories Act, be amended in Clause 3 by striking out line 4 at page 32 and substituting the following therefor:

"the applicant who is a gun"

Motion No. 22.

That Bill C-51, An Act to amend the Criminal Code, the Customs Tariff, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act and the Prisons and Reformatories Act, be amended in Clause 3 by striking out lines 19 to 22 at page 32 and substituting the following therefor:

"collection of the applicant who is a gun collector".

He said: Mr. Speaker, these three amendments have to do with the position of collectors of firearms. The amendments are designed to permit continuation of gun collections. The intention of the government in this bill is to phase out gun collections which contain certain types of firearms, primarily those of the automatic variety.

When the matter was discussed in committee there was some concern that it is not quite proper for those who have collected certain types of firearms to be unable to pass on those collections by way of bequest or otherwise unless the collections went to something called a bona fide gun collector. The minister said in committee that that was going to be a judicial interpretation but he did not enlighten us as to who a bona fide gun collector was. I suppose that would be something that would grow with the common law. There would be decisions by a judge or a series of judges as to who a bona fide collector was. My submission is that there should be a possibility for people to continue to collect these guns if they wish to do so.

● (2040)

The purpose of our law is to ensure that guns are not used improperly. The minister suggested that while these gun collections should be left to a bona fide gun collector or sold to one, he was not very forthcoming as to who that was. He admitted that over the years probably all the existing collections of automatic weapons would end up in museums or be exported from the country because, as a matter of public policy, the government in its wisdom has decided that Canadians were not fit people to collect automatic weapons. I take exception to that. I reiterate what I said earlier this afternoon: let us find a need for these measures before we pass laws right, left, and centre.

The government seems to think that in order to react to a passing phase in our life it has to bring in a rigid system of regulations in order to satisfy somebody's concern which, I submit, is unenlightened. In any event, I have not seen any example of guns from gun collections having been stolen by criminals which were then useful in the commission of crimes. I would have thought that if there were much of that going on, some evidence of it would have been produced by the government in justification of this amendment to our criminal law, but it has not.

The minister says that he will do it this way as a matter of public policy. I do not think that is good enough. I would think that the government's own experience would be that the facts are otherwise because, while I have not heard of private collections being stolen, I have certainly heard and read about armouries being broken into and large numbers of military weapons being stolen. Armouries are places with a concentration of weapons. If the minister is going to fill up the museums in the country with private gun collections, he will create an enticement for criminals to find a bigger haul. As things are now, there is a sort of decentralization of guns—many small collections all over the country. But the minister in his wisdom, and his advisers in the Department of Justice, seem to think that all these weapons should be concentrated in one spot. My argument is that that is not a sensible way in which to approach the situation.

Many people collect various things for various reasons. One of the reasons that people collect things now is that they are something to hang on to because the dollar in this country, under the administration of this government, is dropping in value, and it is more important for people to invest their money in tangible things than in the Canadian dollar. I think it is a gross invasion of property rights in the country for the government to adopt such a policy because it thinks, for some undefined reason, that it is a good thing for people not to have collections of automatic weapons. Therefore I submit that the House should give some consideration to deleting that part of the bill which would in effect outlaw private collections of certain types of firearms on the basis that no evidence has been provided that such a provision is necessary.

Mr. Arnold Peters (Timiskaming): Mr. Speaker, I did not have the advantage of attending the committee meetings and therefore I do not know who the minister said was a bona fide gun collector.

An hon. Member: That is an advantage.

Mr. Peters: The provision goes on to say that the local registrar of firearms will provide him with a registration certificate and will make a decision. In talking about the bona fide part of the expression, I suppose it means an actual gun collector. I do not know whether it means someone who has three, four, or half a dozen guns. Some people do not have too many guns but what they have is of a specific class. Incidentally, most of the collectors of restricted guns whom I know are members of the police force. They have a very good way of getting them. When they seize one, the gun disappears and it goes into a collection. Sometimes they build up a fairly large collection of restricted guns.

Other people buy guns such as an M-15, an American gun. In my area the gunsmith told me that most guns are fully automatic or have parts to make them fully automatic. One of the difficulties is that many of the people who bring him a gun for repair do not know that the gun has the potential to be a fully automatic rapid fire gun.

I am quite aware that there is a legal dictionary definition of the expression bona fide, but how does it apply to gun collectors? Does it means someone with six guns or someone with 50 guns, a selection of both restricted and other guns? Most of the collectors in northern Ontario whom I know do not specifically collect one kind of gun. They will pick up any gun. Some guns they keep for the purpose of trading. These guns are called traders. If this provision is passed, these people will be in considerable difficulty to make sure that the man from whom they are buying a gun, they themselves, and their collection are licensed. It seems to me that we should spell out exactly what we mean by bona fide collector.

I do not agree with the mover of the motion with regard to Clauses 2 and 21, and probably Clause 22 as well. I do not believe that if you take out the expression "bona fide" and leave the words "a gun collector" that the provision will be any clearer. I myself probably own three, four or perhaps five guns.

I am rather indefinite about how many I own because I am not exactly sure where they are. I have not looked at them for some time. I am quite sure a couple of them are in my son's collection. I would not classify myself as a collector, but if I had five Lugers then I would consider myself a collector of Lugers, or if I had a number of Winchesters of the 98, 87 or 84 class then I would consider myself a collector of Winchesters.

● (2050)

I think what a collector is should be spelled out in the bill. Removing the words "bona fide" does not correct the situation. It is not often you come across a gun collector, because of the cost involved in becoming one. I understand that the value of some Winchesters would be as high as four figures, so you would not need too many of those to become a bona fide collector, in my estimation.

The bill could be strengthened if it indicated just what a collector is. Some people may collect guns in general and others concentrate on one type such as machine guns or Sten guns, yet all consider themselves collectors. Unless the bill specifies what a collector is, there is a danger of people being harassed because they do not know what category they should fit into.

Mr. Gordon Ritchie (Dauphin): Mr. Speaker, I should like to add my support to this amendment. The government obviously hopes to do away with gun collectors in time by means of attrition. I think the operative phrase in the clause is "bona fide" but the bill does not define what a "bona fide" gun collector is. Presumably it would apply to a person who is already collecting guns, but no provision is made for people who may begin collections in the future.

Collecting is very popular nowadays. Not long ago a lady in Great Britain wrote her banker asking what she could invest her money in in order to preserve the value of her savings. He said he did not know, but he thought antique furniture was as good as anything. Today many newspapers carry advertisements and extolling the wisdom of buying such things as Kruger rands, which are gold. Apparently the Russians are showing interest, and a Canadian company is getting into the business as well.

Of all the things people collect in order to guard their investment, guns are amongst the most popular. People who served in the armed forces have often become interested in guns and started collecting them. As with stamp collecting, they sometimes have managed to make wise investments—sometimes even better than if they had invested in government bonds, particularly when this government is running the economy. Yet this government seems determined to phase out gun collectors as a group.

The government has not defined what a gun collector is; is it someone who has one gun, three, 50 or 100? As the hon. member for Palliser (Mr. Schumacher) said, thefts of guns and ammunition most often occur from an armoury or a sporting goods store, rarely from a private collection. Someone who steals an automatic will surely have difficulty finding ammunition for it.

To say there is a danger of theft of guns from a bona fide collector is like saying there is likely to be an earthquake in Ottawa today; it could happen but it is a long shot. Presumably there is more chance of criminals finding automatic weapons in military establishments than in any private gun collection.

Mr. Gordon Towers (Red Deer): Mr. Speaker, I should like to say a word on behalf of the collectors in my constituency, especially one who has one of the most beautiful collections you could ever see. The guns are very clean and are kept locked in a glass cupboard.

It is evident from the minister's comments that he hopes gun collections will be a thing of the past. As the hon. member for Dauphin (Mr. Ritchie) said, such collections are rare and are likely to become very valuable. Does the minister have the right to take a collection away from a family that is very proud of it?

● (2100)

We do not know the effect of this legislation. Let the minister say how many criminal acts have been committed with the use of gun collector items. I suspect there are few such incidents, and therefore do not think weapons classified as collectors' items are much of a danger. Why should the minister use the government's majority to take away the rights of Canadians with gun collections? By trying to establish the rights of one group, the minister would infringe on the rights of another. Surely we should not pass legislation which, under the guise on protecting one set of rights, infringes on another.

Mr. Bob Brisco (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, I shall begin my remarks by speaking of gun collections, particularly of collections of automatic weapons, and in this regard I share the minister's concern. However, if one reads what the minister said to the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs on the clause we are debating, it becomes clear that the minister's remarks made sense up to a certain point, after which they went off into never-never land, into limbo. Two hon. members opposite expressed some genuine concern about the legal aspects of some of this bill's provisions. The minister's reply shows he does not understand the basic interest of the gun collector. I do not expect the minister collects guns. I do not know what he collects—butterflies, perhaps.

Mr. MacKay: No, it's aerosol tins.

Mr. Brisco: The minister cannot be ignorant of the subject. The debate on the previous bill, C-83, broadened his understanding. Perhaps I can do no better than quote something the minister said on June 16 to the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs as reported on page 22:25 of the transcript of the proceedings. He said:

No one is taking those guns away from them.

In this case "them" is the gun collectors. I continue:

If they want to get rid of them, they can sell or give them to a museum, they can export them to other sellers; or they can sell them to other collectors. I think, rather than what you suggest, that they are suddenly valueless, the effect of this legislation is that those guns will become increasingly more valuable.

True, rare collectors' items, be they guns, antique furniture, postage stamps of 1830 vintage, gain in value with time; to that extent the minister is correct. But as the bill is written, the bona fide gun collector can only dispose of his guns to another bona fide collector. I can foresee that, ultimately, the collector who survives all his contemporaries will end up owning some 4,500 automatic weapons, enough to equip his own army. Surely the legislation does not contemplate this? Surely the minister does not intend one or two people to wind up owning, say, 2,500 automatic weapons each? But this, precisely, will be the effect of the bill unless it is changed.

The minister is concerned about the bona fide collector, but what about the fellow about whom the hon. member for Lafontaine-Rosemont (Mr. Lachance) questioned the minister? What will be the position of the heirs of an estate who inherit automatic weapons, or weapons classed as collector's items? Will they be entitled to retain them? The minister said no, not unless they are bona fide collectors. And here the hon. member for Lafontaine-Rosemont, because of his legal training, focused attention on the great weakness of the bill.

Mr. Speaker, you can walk into many homes in this country and hear an owner say, "Look at this beautiful shotgun, or at this beautiful weapon. It has a Damascus steel barrel, was made by James Riley and Sons, of Bond Street, London; is it not made beautifully?" He will tell you it does not take present day shells or bullets, but is a work of art in its own right. Or he may say, to you, "I have here an old Winchester 44-40 with a hexagonal barrel. It's the sort of gun which won the west. My grandfather left it to my father, and he left it to me." What will that man's position be under the law?

Or, what will be the position of the man who does not know the value of the weapon he inherited from his father, who inherited from his father before him? I am not totally satisfied with what the minister has said in this regard?

This bill will encourage a fellow to take his gun to the local police station, run by federal, provincial or municipal police, and turn it in. I assume he will get a receipt for it. That is the end of the story.

● (2110)

Who gets the guns? The minister has not provided an adequate answer to that question. Who falls heir to these valuable antiques? Once they are in the hands of the police, what happens to them? Does the officer in charge pass them to another whom he happens to know is a bona fide gun collector and has an interest in this type of weapon, a gun that may be worth $500, $600 or $1,000?

Is the gun taken out and destroyed because no one in that particular office appreciates the historical value of that weapon? Is it sold into a collection with the Crown receiving the assets? Does the police officer pass it to a friend who sells it to a collection and the police officer gathers the benefits? By making that kind of remark, I am not impugning our police officers. I am just saying it is a possibility. The minister has not extended his arguments into that area.

I recognize the very legitimate concern of the minister when it comes to automatic weapons. Plainly it was demonstrated at committee when the minister had at that time an AR-15. It was clearly demonstrated when we had a representative from CASAL appear before the committee and tell about the difficulty he was having packing an AR-15 in the hills. Why he would ever want to pack that in the hills as a sporting rifle really stretches my imagination. Conversely, there are those who have such automatic weapons which they may wish to add to their collection, and who would not be going into the hills. I hope they would not be going into the hills.

I suggest to the minister, in answering the genuine concerns of these gun collectors, that it might be helpful at this eleventh hour if he met with them to determine whether they are prepared to take some measure of responsibility and collectively agree that in some fashion, acceptable to them and the ministry, they will deactivate those automatic weapons.

The gun collectors would of course present the argument that to deactivate would reduce the value to the collector. It would also reduce the value to the criminal if the home of a collector should be broken into and such a weapon should be stolen. The minister has indicated that has occurred. It was also clearly demonstrated at committee that not one charge of abuse of the regulations pertaining to these weapons has been recorded against a bona fide collector. That is an area the minister fails to take into consideration as well.

I suggest it might be helpful to the minister to seek an accommodation with those particular collectors. It might help to resolve an issue that will otherwise be resolved with some degree of acrimony and bitterness.

Mr. Elmer M. MacKay (Central Nova): Mr. Speaker, I too would like to support the proposition put forward by the last speaker. I say to the minister that I, unlike the government, believe in giving people the benefit of the doubt.

I do not believe the government has yet reached the stage in its great design for controlling the lives of Canadians that it has any objection to Canadians owning property. However, owning guns appears to be a heinous thing for the average Canadian. As has been pointed out, there is something intrinsically valuable about them. I do not see why the government and the minister, at least by implication, feel there is something evil about collecting guns. Unless there is some other reason, they would not be bringing this unnecessarily restrictive provision.

What are the statistics with regard to violence involving breaches of the criminal law by people who have gun collections or own guns on the basis of collecting them, formally or informally? The last speaker indicated there were no known violations. That may or may not be so. I suspect that gun collectors as a group are among the most law-abiding of all the citizens of this country. I also believe that among their ranks, as suggested by the hon. member for Timiskaming (Mr. Peters), there are many police officers.

It is as fallacious to suggest that gun collectors are prone to break the law because they are gun collectors as to say that antique automobile collectors statistically have more traffic violations than people who do not collect cars, or people who are interested in numismatics, the collection of money, are more prone to currency fraud, or people interested in collecting stamps indulge in post office fraud.

The whole thing boggles the mind. I do not see why this provision is necessary. If it is not necessary, why encroach again on the rights of Canadians or indeed the practice of Canadians which, up to this point, has enabled them to own guns as an investment or something of interest? All this type of legislation does is make lawbreakers out of thousands of Canadians who will not accept this type of restriction and see no logic for it any more than to provide an already swollen bureaucracy with a few more jobs.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Is the House ready for the question?

Some hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): The question is on motions Nos. 2, 21 and 22 standing in the name of the hon. member for Palliser (Mr. Schumacher). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the said motions?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Those in favour will please say yea.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Those opposed will please say nay.

Some hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): The recorded divisions on proposed motions Nos. 2, 21 and 22 stand deferred. The House will now proceed to motions Nos. 3, 4, 5 and 6. These will be grouped for debate. If required, a vote on motion No. 3 will also dispose of motions Nos. 4, 5 and 6.

Mr. Stan Schumacher (Palliser) moved:

Motion No. 3.

That Bill C-51, An Act to amend the Criminal Code, the Customs Tariff, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act and the Prisons and Reformatories Act, be amended in Clause 3 by deleting the word "five" in line 37 at page 7 and substituting the word "two" therefor.

Motion No. 4.

That Bill C-51, An Act to amend the Criminal Code, the Customs Tariff, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act and the Prisons and Reformatories Act, be amended in Clause 3 by striking out line 12 at page 8 and substituting the following therefor:

"not have a registration certificate or who does not have a permit issued pursuant to subsection 106.2(1)".

Motion No. 5.

That Bill C-51, An Act to amend the Criminal Code, the Customs Tariff, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act and the Prisons and Reformatories Act, be amended in Clause 3 by deleting the word "five" in lines 14, 26 and 40 at page 8 and substituting the word "two" therefor.

Motion No. 6.

That Bill C-51, An Act to amend the Criminal Code, the Customs Tariff, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act and the Prisons and Reformatories Act, be amended in Clause 3 by striking out lines 20 and 21 at page 8 and substituting the following therefor:

"place named on the registration certificate".

● (2120)

He said: Mr. Speaker, this series of amendments is designed to cover a situation in which the maximum sentence recommended appears to have been fixed without due regard for the gravity of the offence. Indeed, the penalty, five years under the indictable procedure, appears to have been chosen by someone putting his finger at random on a series of numbers.

I believe the penalty for offences related to restricted weapons should differ from that related to prohibited weapons. I also believe there should be a distinction drawn between an active offender and an offender who just happened to be in the vicinity—for example, reference is made to the occupant of a motor car which contains a restricted weapon. Surely the major offender is the actual owner and possessor of the weapon, and a different penalty should apply. In my view, five years is a lengthy period of possible imprisonment to impose on offenders concerned with these clauses I am seeking to amend.

A great deal of debate is going on in the country presently about the frequency with which we resort to imposing terms of imprisonment and the length of the sentences handed out. I do not think anyone would accuse me of not being a proponent of law and order. Nevertheless, I believe there should be some moderation shown here, some distinction drawn. I realize there is room for discretion, since the Crown can always decide to proceed in a summary way and judges, after all, are not obliged to impose the maximum sentence, but there is always the possibility that some judge, perhaps influenced by an over-zealous prosecutor, will determine that the maximum sentence should be applied and I, for one, do not believe there are many situations in which members of the House would feel that the imposition of a five-year prison sentence is justifiable in relation to the type of offence envisaged in these clauses.

I should like the House to consider placing a more reasonable upper limit on the maximum term for these offences which the bill proposes to create. It does not appear to me that sufficient consideration has been given to the implication of these clauses.

Hon. members may recall my earlier remarks this afternoon when I was talking about changes which had been made in the Wheat Board legislation, changes about which I was completely unaware even though I was a member of the House in 1972 when they were made. Among those changes were amendments to the penalties section as a result of which, for certain offences, a minimum penalty of one third of the initial price of the grain involved was applicable. That may not sound very much to some hon. members but it is enough to bankrupt an elevator operator and has to be regarded with great concern, especially when one is dealing with an arbitrary, unfeeling administration, such as the present Wheat Board administration, which goes around the country laying every conceivable charge which it believes it can sustain, even though it is not doing too well in court, subjecting the farmers to a great deal of harassment and expense in the process. Because of my experience with that legislation I made it my business to look at the corresponding provisions in the present bill and, frankly, I do not think a great deal of consideration has been given to this penalties section.

As I say, I believe some distinction should be drawn between penalties relating to prohibited weapons and to penalties related to restricted weapons, which should be less. I hope the House will recognize the distinction between the types of offence with which we are seeking to deal, because if the law does not show this type of sensitivity, this type of responsiveness, I do not believe it will ever be as respected as it should be.

Mr. Gordon Ritchie (Dauphin): Mr. Speaker, I should like to reinforce what my hon. friend from Palliser has said. It does not make sense to me that the maximum penalty should be the same in respect of a restricted weapon as it is in respect of a prohibited weapon.

We have just had a report from the Senate, I believe, on the subject of jail sentences in this country and in North America generally as opposed to Europe. In North America we seem to have gone overboard in sentencing people to jail as opposed, say, to European procedures; it does seem as though we do not always choose the best type of sentencing. I do not pretend to be an expert on penology but I sometimes think things get out of hand in this area.

In this amendment here we are asked to endorse five years for restricted weapons, which does not square with the graver issue of prohibited weapons. Presumably the maximum sentence is so prescribed in order to allow the courts to reduce it at their discretion but I am not convinced that this is a good thing; our sentences are already too severe in certain areas while being lax in others. This is an area where we have gone overboard.

It is as though somebody put in the figure five and the typist kept repeating that figure five without thinking it out. I lend my support to this amendment designed to bring about a more realistic sentencing proposal. Just saying "Make it five years and leave it up to them" does not meet with my idea of justice. The minister could well take another look at this and see whether the judiciary are using it more often than he wants.

• (2130)

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Is the House ready for the question?

Some hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): The question is on motions 3, 4, 5 and 6. All those in favour will please say yea.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): In my opinion the nays have it.

Some hon. Members: On division.

Motions Nos. 3, 4, 5 and 6 negatived.

Mr. Stan Schumacher (Palliser) moved:

Motion No. 8.

That Bill C-51, An Act to amend the Criminal Code, the Customs Tariff, the Parole Act, The Penitentiary Act and the Prisons and Reformatories Act, be amended in Clause 3 by striking out line 21 at page 12 and substituting the following therefor:

"certificate or signed copy thereof for inspection by the person".

He said: Mr. Speaker, would you just give me a moment to find my notes.

Some hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Schumacher: Mr. Speaker, I am sorry to take the time of the House. I am afraid I will have to let this motion go; I cannot find my papers.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea? All those opposed will please say nay?

Some hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): In my opinion the nays have it.

Some hon. Members: On division.

Motion No. 8 negatived.

Mr. Bob Brisco (Kootenay West) moved:

Motion No. 9.

That Bill C-51, An Act to amend the Criminal Code, the Customs Tariff, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act and the Prisons and Reformatories Act, be amended in Clause 3 by striking out line 46 at page 12 and substituting the following therefor:

"possess the firearm,

(iv) to a person who owns, lawfully possesses or is otherwise entitled to lawfully possess a firearm where, having regard to the purpose for which the firearm is loaned, the loan of the firearm is intended to be for a reasonable time only; or"

He said: Mr. Speaker, the purpose of motion No. 9 is quite simple and straightforward. The bill now provides that any person who owns a rifle or shotgun—a firearm, to use the terms of the bill—and who wishes to loan that gun to his hunting companion, or any person who wishes to borrow a gun from his hunting companion, must first obtain a federal firearms certificate. It may well be that the majority of sportsmen may go for a number of years without acquiring this particular certificate simply because they are quite satisfied with the weapon they are using and do not wish to purchase another of the same type. But the minute they do decide that they want to add another weapon to their gun collection, or replace their rifle with a newer model of the same or of different calibre, they must apply for a firearms certificate.

Why should a person who for years has had a provincial hunting licence be required under the provisions of this bill to obtain such a certificate simply because he wants to lend his rifle to his next door neighbour, or to someone with whom he has hunted before and whom he knows to be a responsible individual? Ninety-nine persons out of a hundred would not lend their rifle or shotgun to a stranger. Certainly at today's prices they are not going to hand over their rifle to someone they do not know, though quite possibly they would be prepared to loan the weapon to someone they know is responsible.

Let me cite a case in point, though I can give the minister 100 examples if he wishes. Take the case of a hunting party going into northern British Columbia, the Yukon, or Northwest Territories for a period of 10 days or two weeks. They are flown in to some remote lake with all their supplies. Is the minister naive enough to think that a hunting party of three or four men will carry only one rifle each? Of course not; there will be at least one spare rifle—

Mr. Basford: Would the hon. member permit a question?

Mr. Brisco: Certainly.

• (2140)

Mr. Basford: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the hon. member would take note of section 95(2)(a)(i) which is designed to deal with the hunting party situation, where people are hunting together and one may lose or break a gun and may not have one. They can pass them amongst themselves.

Mr. Brisco: Mr. Speaker, that is quite true. I appreciate the minister's particular point. If he reviews the Committee minutes, I am sure the minister will see that it was I who raised that particular issue with him last year when we were dealing with Bill C-83. Let me point out that that is a hunting party which is under the supervision of a guide.

An hon. Member: Do not confuse him with facts. His mind is already made up.

Mr. Brisco: In northern British Columbia a resident does not need a guide. In a circumstance where a group of hunters are going into a remote area, they always provide for at least one spare gun, because a shell blocked in a chamber or some other mechanical failure can certainly happen. The manner in which rifles and other supplies are loaded on to bush aircraft makes damage possible. Because of that, there is usually one spare rifle in the camp.

Is the minister trying to suggest, because it is my particular rifle which has developed a mechanical problem that cannot be resolved at that time without special tools, that I have got to go to the nearest community and get a firearm certificate? Is he suggesting that I have to take my hunting partner with me because it is going to be his rifle that I will be using? If so, that is a little ridiculous. If the minister feels that is an isolated circumstance, then he is out of touch with the people in the hunting fraternity across Canada. Whether it concerns people hunting moose, caribou, duck or geese in the northern part of Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Ontario, the same mechanical problems can occur. Certainly I will not omit Nova Scotia. It is not an isolated thing at all.

An hon. Member: They hunt seals in Nova Scotia.

Mr. Brisco: What the minister is suggesting with his intervention is that we are protecting that isolated situation which can happen in the Yukon or the Northwest Territories. I raised that point last year with the minister. I asked him what would happen when a hunter has laid out $3,000 for a licensed guide trip in the Yukon and his rifle is rolled on by a horse? His rifle can be sitting in its holster and the horse decides to roll for some reason or another, or the horse stumbles and falls, breaking the rifle. The rifle is broken, the stock is smashed, the barrel is bent or the sights are destroyed. What happens then? The minister has made accommodation for that very problem, which I thank him for. But the minister has not made accommodation for the circumstance which confronts hunters every time they are out during the hunting season. I could be out in a goose pit in Saskatchewan and have my gun block on me. I could ask my hunting partner for his gun, and immediately I would violate the law. Surely reason prevails. I am quite sure there is not going to be a police officer or a game warden sitting over my shoulder who will observe that transfer.

An hon. Member: You never know.

Mr. Brisco: Yes, but the chances of that happening are remote. Under the provisions of the bill, the law is broken when that occurs. We know it is broken, and we would rather not operate outside the law. The purpose of this amendment would cover the frequent occurrence of a rifle or a shotgun being borrowed or lent by me if there is a mechanical failure, within the hunting partnership which prevails in the hunting fraternity across Canada.

This amendment is not intended for, nor was it drafted for the other circumstance where the borrower and the lender are strangers, or the borrower and the lender may be bordering on the criminal. That is a rare circumstance. Law or not, if there is criminal intent, it does not make a difference what the legislation says. The law will be violated because that is their intention to begin with.

I do not see the purpose of a law put into place which will materially affect a vast majority of people who are operating in innocence and honesty. We do not legislate against the innocent. Yet that is what will happen unless this amendment is accepted. If this amendment is accepted, those people within the hunting fraternity will realize the minister has an understanding of their genuine concerns, that the minister is responsive to those concerns and is not hard-nosed and determined to get the last inch or the last drop of blood out of this legislation.

It would be my hope that the minister would look with favour upon the arguments which I have presented with reference to motion No. 9.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Arnold Peters (Timiskaming): Mr. Speaker, I have listened with great attentiveness to the remarks of the hon. member for Kootenay West (Mr. Brisco), and I fail to see where this amendment would serve any purpose. As I read it, the transfer of a gun—

Mr. Brisco: Et tu Brutus.

Mr. Peters: Well, I fail to see the purpose of it, unless you have very queer people out there hunting for sheep.

Mr. Woolliams: That was Bert Herridge's constituency for 23 years. It was without a Tory, and now it is represented.

Mr. Peters: Well, God bless him, wherever he has gone. It is a fact that those who have guns now do not have to register them.

An hon. Member: If they borrow or lend them, they do.

Mr. Peters: The hon. member's amendment refers to a person who owns, lawfully possesses or is otherwise entitled lawfully to possess a firearm. It does not mean he has to have a certificate to do that. He may own a firearm or he may own several of them. If this were applied, it would mean someone would have to look over your shoulder all the time. I do not think even this minister is going to insist on inspections which would stop people in hunting parties from trading guns.

• (2150)

I think subsection 2(b) covers the lending of guns, and surely the hon. member is not suggesting that people who go on hunting expeditions do not know how to handle guns, so obviously those people would be able to acquire gun certificates if they were buying or selling. If this clause is amended as suggested, it will be more restrictive rather than less restrictive. People on hunting parties will be able to exchange guns. To be very blunt about it, when an officer walks up and I have a gun, he is not going to know whether it is my gun or somebody else's. All he will know is that I have a gun. I am not about to tell him I have your gun, and you are not about to tell him that you lent it to me.

Mr. Brisco: You are still breaking the law.

Mr. Peters: As long as each of us has a gun, we are not going to help that officer very much. It seems to me that this amendment sets out a condition which would almost make it mandatory for law abiding citizens to feel that they should possess certificates in order to borrow guns from friends. Surely the minister would not restrict a hunting party to having a guide where the guide has the extra gun.

Mr. Brisco: Yes, read the bill.

Mr. Basford: That's right, Arnold.

Mr. Peters: Very seldom in a hunting party do one or two of the people in that party not trade guns or experiment with somebody else's gun. That is fairly normal, and I think it will continue. However, it seems to me that if we pass this amendment we would set up another category which would make it more restrictive rather than less. My total interest in this bill is to make it less restrictive. In fact I would like to get rid of the bill and all the restrictions which are in it, and go back to the sensible way of handling guns in hunting parties which we have now in northern Ontario and in most of Canada, except in those big bad cities where people use guns for other than hunting animals and for protection.

Mr. Doug Neil (Moose Jaw): Mr. Speaker, I would like to make one or two comments with respect to this motion. The minister pointed out to the hon. member for Kootenay West (Mr. Brisco) the provisions of subsection 2(a)(i), which reads:

> Subection (1) does not apply to a person
>
> (a) lawfully in possession of a firearm who lends the firearm
>
> (i) to a person for use by that person in his company and under his guidance or supervision in the same manner in which he may lawfully use it . . .

When I look at that particular subsection, it seems to me that that provides that when a person who owns a gun gives it to another person, the person who accepts the gun has to be in the company of the person who lent it and under his guidance and supervision. If I were out on a goose hunt, my gun jammed, I borrowed one from a hunter who was at the opposite end of the field and I walked back into the pit, it certainly could not be said that I was under the guidance or supervision of the person who lent me that gun. I ask the minister to re-examine that subsection, perhaps with the idea of bringing in an amendment on his own to clarify it.

I can understand the situation where a person takes his son or a young person out to teach him the art of hunting. That younger person would be under his guidance and supervision, but I certainly do not believe that subsection 2(a)(i) accomplishes the purpose the minister believes it does. I support the hon. member for Kootenay West because it is a common situation back on the prairies for a gun to be lent to a friend or a neighbour who is not a regular hunter but who has the opportunity once in a while on a day off and decides to go hunting. He calls his neighbour and asks to borrow his gun. The neighbour, knowing him personally and knowing that he is a reliable individual with hunting experience, lends his gun.

I myself have lent my shotgun to a neighbour on more than one occasion, and I think it is common practice on the prairies.

For example, if a friend comes from outside the province during hunting season and wants to go hunting, I lend him my shotgun or rifle. I make sure, of course, that he has a hunting licence. However, the way this particular act now reads without the amendment, the situation is that you can no longer lend your gun to your friend or your neighbour unless both you and the person who borrows the gun are in possession of a firearms acquisition certificate. Under those circumstances I support motion No. 9.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 40 deemed to have been moved.

TRANSPORT—ESCALATION OF PENSIONS OF RETIRED RAILWAY EMPLOYEES—GOVERNMENT ACTION

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, on Thursday, June 16, and on Monday, July 4, I put questions to the Minister of Transport (Mr. Lang) regarding the report of Dr. Noel Hall concerning Canadian railway pension plans. In my question of June 16, which is reported in Hansard at pages 6742 and 6743, the gist of my question was in this sentence:

Since referring that report to management and the unions does not do a solitary thing for railway workers already retired, both CNR and CPR, will the government take action to make sure those old timers are not forgotten?

The Minister of Transport replied in these words:

Mr. Speaker, my colleague the Minister of Labour is putting what analysis the question may require before the government. In the meantime a good number of matters referred to in the report are, by Dr. Hall's own definition, suitable for negotiation.

In my supplementary question I protested that negotiation between management and the unions would do nothing for those already retired, but the answer to that supplementary question was no better than the answer to the first question.

In my question of July 4, which is on page 7249 of Hansard, I again tried to make the same emphasis. It was in these words:

In view of the fact that any action that management and unions might take will not do anything for Canadian National and Canadian Pacific railway workers already retired, and in view of the fact that these pensioners have had no escalation of their pensions at all in 1977, will the minister put pressure on both Canadian National and Canadian Pacific to bring in escalation of the pensions of their retired workers this year?

● (2200)

Again the reply of the Minister of Transport was to the effect that this should be the subject of bargaining between the parties. Again I protested, and again I got nothing that was satisfactory from the minister.

The railway workers of Canada, and in particular the retired railway workers, the older ones, are beginning to think that the Hall Commission was a put-off. Dr. Hall was appointed in July of 1974 to make a study of all Canadian railway pension plans. It took him more than two years to make this study and present his report. That report was presented to the Minister of Labour (Mr. Munro) on September 8, 1976, but translating and printing it consumed considerable time, so we did not get it until January, 1977. We are now in July of 1977. It is three years since Dr. Hall was commissioned to do his job.

I have some doubts about the usefulness of the report. It is a summary of the situation, an accounting of the facts, but it does not contain many recommendations. There are a few, and it is true that, in so far as any reorganization of railway pension plans for the future is concerned, Dr. Hall says that management and the union should sit down and do it by collective bargaining. But Dr. Hall also says that the situation for railway workers who are now retired is urgent, pressing, and serious. Most of them have had very little by way of escalation and none at all in the last year or so.

The point of my question to the Minister of Transport—and to the Minister of Labour when I catch him here to ask him about the same issue—has to do with those who are already retired. I want not to be put off with the line that it is up to management and unions to negotiate. When unions negotiate, they do so for their members, the ones who are working. The retired workers, the railway pensioners, do not have anyone at the bargaining table, and Dr. Hall says it is urgent that something be done for them.

My plea to the government is in the following terms: When is the government going to talk in plain language to CN and CP and to any other railways, including those who are responsible for the old Provident Fund in the Atlantic provinces and so on, about the needs of those who are already retired? Asking them to wait until a new scheme has been worked out is telling them they will die, all of them, before anything is done for them.

I am used to this government being heartless, but surely there is a limit. I hope that the one parliamentary secretary who is sitting over there—it is not his department but maybe he has a heart which the others do not have—will be able to tell us tonight that the government takes seriously the recommendation of Dr. Hall with regard to those already retired and the pleas that we are making from this side of the House that we do not want those who are already retired to have to wait forever for a reorganization of railway pension plans.

We want an adequate cost of living escalation of the pensions of retired CN and CP employees now. By now, I say to the parliamentary secretary, I mean tonight.

Mr. Ross Milne (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles) puts forward a very persuasive case. In the absence of the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Labour (Mr. Olivier) I have been asked to reply on behalf of the minister.

First of all I would like to state that the government and the minister take very seriously the quite extensive survey and report authored by Dr. Hall. I might take this opportunity to remind the House that on May 31, when the minister announced the appointment of Dr. Hall, he took note of railway employees' dissatisfaction with their pension plan and specified the terms of reference under which the commissioner would operate to deal with those concerns.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): That was in 1974.

Mr. Milne: Yes, May 31, 1974.

To assist these parties in dealing with the complex question of how to protect pensions against the erosion and effect of inflation, the commissioner provided the parties with alternative methods of providing cost of living indexation. The parties themselves, as suggested by Dr. Hall, would be free to make a selection from among the many options according to their own bargaining priorities. I do not think we should take it that it is not a subject for collective bargaining. Dr. Hall said in his report that it should be and the parties have a right to do it.

The commissioner concluded that the existing railway pension plans compare favourably with plans in the public and private sectors. He indicated that while the level of benefits received by recent retirees is adequate, a problem arises for those who have been retired for some time, as the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre so eloquently pointed out.

In so far as the specific recommendations which aim at granting retired CP employees pension improvements comparable to those granted in recent years by Canadian National, the CP pension committee now has this matter under active consideration. The various cost estimates referred to previously, and the concept of a heritage fund whose principal purpose would be to ameliorate the condition of existing pensioners, were among the options proposed by the commissioner for consideration by the parties. The heritage fund would be paid for through a 1 per cent contribution shared equally by employers and employees. To deal with the question of adequacy on a national level, as it affects all pensions, the government has established an interdepartmental policy review committee to examine all aspects of pensions.

COMMUNICATIONS—POSSIBILITY RIGHT OF CITIZENS TO RECEIVE PROGRAMS ORIGINATING IN UNITED STATES TO BE CURTAILED

Mr. Bob Brisco (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, on June 29, by way of a motion under Standing Order 43, I indicated to the House a problem concerning the Arrow Lake TV Society of Nakusp and the fact that they had received notification from the CRTC that effective—I believe it was September 30—they would lose their licence to rebroadcast Channel 4 Spokane from a transmitter site located some 9,000 feet up a mountain in the small community of Nakusp, which has some 2,000 people.

As ministers and their officials know, a motion under Standing Order 43 frequently provides notice that a question will follow. My question was put to the minister on July 4. At that time I clearly outlined the problem confronting the Arrow Lakes TV Society and the fact that they were transmitting or rebroadcasting Channel 4 Spokane on air and not by cable directly into Nakusp, and that they had been told they would no longer be licensed to do this.

The answer the Minister of Communications (Mrs. Sauvé) gave to the expression of concern—the same expression of concern that can be repeated across Canada in similar circumstances—was as follows:

> Mr. Speaker, the freedom of citizens is very well protected right now by the regulating process of the CRTC.

Hah! What an asinine, unfeeling response. By way of a supplementary question I then explained the circumstances surrounding the decision. I said it was a decision by the legal brains of the CRTC, that unfeeling body that is not aware of what is going on in the boondocks. After I had clearly provided the minister with an explanation, the minister responded as follows:

> Mr. Speaker, I do not know the details of that decision by the CRTC—

That would indicate that no one had advised her of the motion under Standing Order 43 that I moved the previous week. She went on:

> —but I feel that it concerns the need to protect against undue competition those who hold licences to operate a station.

● (2210)

What utter drivel and garbage!

This community established a co-operative society 20 years before the CBC ever thought of providing service to that small community of 2,000, with a transmitter 9,000 feet up in the mountains. For years the people of Kootenay West watched three different channels originating in major centres, all in the United States. The CBC came in recently, and as a result of three interventions on the part of the member for Kootenay West before the CRTC, the CTV network was also able to provide a service to this community.

This co-operative provides the community with three separate channels. They carry the CBC, CTV, and channel 4, Spokane. They were supposed to receive money from the CBC under the accelerated coverage program. The CBC was supposed to provide a signal for that community, but because the co-operative had done such an excellent job the accelerated coverage program people said, "We don't need to provide service to Nakusp. We do not need to spend federal money to provide CBC service." That community did not put in a cable stretching 9,000 feet up the mountain, did not provide "off-air" programming. Instead, it took the less expensive route of providing "on-air" programs. Consequently, the people of the community are now told that because channel 4 Spokane does not meet Canadian content requirements it cannot be licensed.

If their programs had been carried by cable they could watch Spokane forever and a day and would not need to worry about Canadian content. In that case there would not be any hassle with the CRTC's legal division.

Many people from that community have written to me indicating that if the government will not use its good judgment and be sensible, they will defy the regulations. I cannot blame them. Mr. Donald Waterfield of Nakusp, who wrote the book "Continental Waterboy" a documentary on the Columbia River Treaty, which is second to none, and who knows all about people being trodden on by the bureaucracy, wrote:

The considerable work and cost of our TV enterprise is all local. It has not cost the government a cent. So, as you will readily understand, we are furious with this quite unwarrantable interference with out private lives.

Mrs. Bert Millner of Nakusp wrote:

Surely in a culturally-starved area such as Nakusp and district, we should be adding more stations rather than reducing the number.

Mr. Aalten wrote:

I regard this action as a callous unfeeling act by a government that would deprive us of the entertainment this channel provides in response to some high-toned speeches and opinions put forward in the name of 'nationalism.'

Mr. Bowman of Nakusp says, "It makes us wonder just how free our free society is becoming."

Mrs. Sicotte of Nakusp writes:

The idea of Canadian TV alone is ridiculous. Outside of one or two good children's programs and a few good documentaries, the Canadian programs are an insult to one's intelligence for the most part, particularly CBC.

Finally, Mr. and Mrs. Ron Heppner of Nakusp wrote:

We feel that we are intelligent enough to be able to choose our entertainment without any help from the CBC and the Canadian government.

The CRTC has painted itself into a corner. It has not determined if a cable company broadcasting from its studio is deemed to be on-air or off-air. What will happen in Nakusp?

Mr. Ross Milne (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the sincerity with which the hon. member for Kootenay West (Mr. Brisco) tried to make his case, but I suggest that this situation has arisen for reasons other than those he mentioned. I wish to put the background to this case on record and, for accuracy, will follow my notes closely.

The CRTC returned the recent licence renewal application to the Arrow Lakes Television Society. In a covering letter, dated May 25, 1977, the commission stated that it received legal advice that, based on the regulations issued under the Broadcasting Act, it is unable to issue or renew a broadcasting licence for a transmitter which rebroadcasts a non-Canadian signal.

I understand that the licence in question was issued in 1963 by the Department of Transport on the basis that no Canadian television service was available in Nakusp, British Columbia. In the intervening years, the Arrow Lakes Television Society established two other rebroadcasters which provide full CBC and CTV service. In the circumstances the government cannot interfere with the decision of the CRTC which, in light of the responsibilities defined in law by the Broadcasting Act, felt that it was required to take this action.

The Arrow Lakes Television Society operates three low power transmitters located in Nakusp, British Columbia. Each transmitter rebroadcasts a signal of another station, one of which originates from KXLY-TV Spokane, Washington. The Department of Transport originally licensed this undertaking on August 6, 1963. The CRTC has renewed the licence on three occasions, with the most recent renewal expiring on September 30, 1977. This licence was originally issued on the basis that no television service was available to the residents of Nakusp. Subsequently, full CBC and CTV service is provided by the two other rebroadcast transmitters operated by the Arrow Lakes Television Society.

In conclusion, the commission obtained legal advice to the effect that, based on the regulations issued under the Broadcasting Act, it was unable to issue or renew a broadcasting licence for a transmitter which rebroadcasts non-Canadian signals. As a consequence, the CRTC returned the recent renewal application with a covering letter, dated May 25, 1977, indicating the above.

VETERANS AFFAIRS—REQUEST FOR LEGISLATION TO IMPROVE PENSIONS OF WIDOWS

Mr. Jack Marshall (Humber-St. George's-St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, we who are still here appreciate that the Minister of Veterans Affairs (Mr. MacDonald) will be replying to this question which is of such concern to veterans in this country.

On March 1 the minister replied to my question with regard to pensions for widows of veterans who were in receipt of a disability pension of less than 48 per cent as he has on countless other occasions, indicating that the matter is under consideration. To be very frank, it is becoming a little embarrassing to me, as it should be to the minister, that we keep playing this broken record periodically in the House of Commons and in committee. It is long past a reasonable time when amendments to the legislation with respect to veterans' widows falling within this unfortunate category should be passed.

It is serious to note, and the matter is getting more serious each day as some 60,000 who fall in the category of between 5 per cent and 45 per cent grow older, that the government is forsaking these widows for no humane reason, and is instead festering a bitterness within their hearts which should be embarrassing to the government.

It is obvious from recent replies to the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles) and myself that we will not see legislation during this session. Perhaps the minister could again appeal to the unpatriotic hearts of his colleagues in cabinet, asking that they repent for their glaring sins by asking Her Gracious Majesty, as suggested by the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre and the right hon. member for Prince Albert (Mr. Diefenbaker), when reading the new Speech from the Throne in October to include in that speech amendments to the veterans' legislation to overcome this serious inequity.

I might add that the minister may not get the opportunity to take the credit if the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) calls an election for this fall, because my party supports such a move as a first priority in recognition of the sacrifice made by some 900,000 proud veteran Canadians who offered their lives to ensure peace, freedom, and national unity for our country.

The main point I want to make tonight is that a provision presently exists in the War Veterans Allowance Act which could overcome this present inequity for many of the 60,000 veterans receiving disability pensions under 48 per cent. One of the criteria for qualification for war veterans allowance is that the veteran is receiving a disability pension of 5 per cent or over, which at present rates entitles him to $34.78. As long as he is now 60 years of age or over and in receipt of a disability pension, he can now qualify for war veterans allowance, if not receiving any other income, up to a maximum of $481.17 at the married rate. A married disability pensioner at 47 per cent is entitled to only $313.10. It is therefore to the advantage of any disability pensioner receiving between 5 per cent and 47 per cent to transfer to war veterans allowance.

● (2220)

When the disability pensioner at 5 per cent to 47 per cent dies, his spouse is not entitled to a widow's pension unless his death was attributable to his pensionable disability. However, when the married recipient of war veterans allowance or civilian war allowance dies, his wife is entitled to the married rate of up to $481.17 for one year and is then entitled to the single rate, presently $281.07, for life. The widow in the same category is cut off when her husband dies, receiving less than 48 per cent.

This means there is an automatic protection for the widow under war veterans allowance which does not exist under a disability pension, and until the minister and the government decide to amend the Pension Act, veterans falling into the categories mentioned should apply for WVA in order to protect an assured income for their spouses. It is there in the Pension Act now, it is there in the War Veterans Allowance Act now, and it is only a matter of the minister and his staff advising those who fall into this category that they can qualify and can thus protect their wives, when they do not qualify under the disability pension legislation but do qualify and can qualify because of the variation between the disability pension provisions and the War Veterans Allowance Act. I hope the minister will recognize this and will portray it to veterans so that they can protect their widows in the circumstances to which I have referred.

Hon. Daniel J. MacDonald (Minister of Veterans Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I thank the hon. member for again bringing to the attention of the House the matter he has raised this evening involving widows of pensioned veterans whose disability pension is assessed at less than 48 per cent.

As he knows, widows' pensions have received serious consideration by myself and by my department for some time. I replied to the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles) during the adjournment debate on the same subject on April 25 of this year and pointed out that the whole question of veterans benefits, including widows' pensions, is always under constant review by the department and by the Canadian Pension Commission and the other agencies of my portfolio, to determine what changes can be made to improve the lot of veterans and their dependants.

The hon. member does recognize that the WVA Act is available to widows and to married couples and those who are receiving a pension as low as 5 per cent. I should inform the hon. member that most of our clientele are in this respect aware that they are receiving WVA. They apply for it and they receive it and, as the hon. member has already said, it is income tested. Many of our veterans and widows are now in receipt of war veterans allowance; they apply for it and, unless their income stands in their way, they receive it. As the hon. member stated, they get the full rate for the first year and the single rate each year thereafter. Then if they have children or dependants, they also get something.

I am very happy that the hon. member has brought this question up. I have brought it up myself on various occasions. As far as making it more known to our widows and our pensioners is concerned, I certainly agree with his statement.

Motion agreed to and the House adjourned at 10.29 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Tuesday, July 12, 1977

The House met at 2 p.m.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[English]

THE CANADIAN ECONOMY

PROPOSED FIRST MINISTERS' CONFERENCE TO DEAL WITH UNEMPLOYMENT—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Lincoln M. Alexander (Hamilton West): Mr. Speaker, I rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43 on a matter of urgent and pressing necessity related to the unacceptable, frightening and shocking figures on unemployment released this date. Given the fact that, including the hidden jobless, this country now faces an actual unemployment rate of 11.5 per cent, or in other words over 1.3 million Canadians are out of work which in effect costs this country $17 million a day in lost GNP and $6 million a day in unemployment insurance, I move, seconded by the hon. member for York-Simcoe (Mr. Stevens):

That the Prime Minister immediately take steps to convene a first ministers' conference to deal with the critical problems of high unemployment and unsatisfactory real growth, hopefully to reverse the banana republic-like image this country presently enjoys.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The motion can be presented only with the unanimous consent of the House. Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

SUGGESTED INTRODUCTION OF NEW BUDGET CONTAINING PROVISIONS TO CREATE JOBS—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Sinclair Stevens (York-Simcoe): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a matter of urgent and pressing necessity. In light of today's unemployment statistics showing unemployment levels having risen from last month's crisis levels and that employment in manufacturing has dropped 2.5 per cent in the past year yet government waste continues, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Victoria (Mr. McKinnon):

That the government create jobs and lessen unemployment by introducing a new budget which should include income tax cuts for low and middle income earners to help stimulate demand for goods and services and in addition it should include a cut in federal sales taxes, particularly building supplies, to help stimulate demand for housing and thus create jobs in the construction and related industries.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: The presentation of such a motion can be done only with the unanimous consent of the House. Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

PROPOSED FIRST MINISTERS' CONFERENCE ON JOB CREATION—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa-Whitby): Mr. Speaker, in view of the continuing serious problem of unemployment in all regions of Canada illustrated by a further rise in the seasonal unemployment figures, and given the fact that the June labour force statistics show a decrease in the labour force, in employment and in the participation rate, all of which reflect the growing problem of hidden unemployment with Canadians giving up looking for non-existent jobs, and in view of most economic forecasts indicating that the present level of unemployment will continue throughout 1977 and into 1978, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles):

That this House calls upon the government to hold a federal-provincial first Ministers' conference on job creation to be followed by a new federal budget aimed at reducing the high level of unemployment in Canada.

Mr. Speaker: Such a motion can be presented for debate only with the unanimous consent of the House. Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

[Translation]

FINANCE

SUGGESTION BANK OF CANADA MAKES LOANS TO PROVINCES AND MUNICIPALITIES AT ADMINISTRATIVE COST—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Eudore Allard (Rimouski): Mr. Speaker, under the provisions of Standing Order 43, I ask for the unanimous consent of the House to move a motion dealing with an important matter of pressing necessity.

Considering that the Bank of Canada is not fulfilling its role, which is to control credit on the basis of the economic needs of the nation; that the Islamic Bank of Development established by 29 Islamic states has applied the concept of the interest-free loan since 1975; and that it has been shown that it is possible to lay one's capital to advantage without collecting interest, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Richmond (Mr. Beaudoin):

That the House enjoin the federal government to take immediately every necessary step so that the Bank of Canada may play its true role by directing its policy on the issuance of credit for the harmonious development of our national economy, by granting loans or advances at administrative cost in the public field.

Mr. Speaker: Under the provisions of Standing Order 43, this motion requires the unanimous consent of the House. Is there such consent?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

[English]

THE LATE CONSTABLE DAVID KIRKWOOD

MESSAGE OF SYMPATHY TO WIFE AND FAMILY—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Hugh Poulin (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): Mr. Speaker, I rise according to the usual provisions of Standing Order 43, and as a matter of tragic necessity. Recognizing the daily heroism that police officers across our country are called upon to perform, and in particular to the heroism and devotion to duty of the late Constable David Kirkwood of the Ottawa Police Department who so courageously gave his life last evening in the line of duty and in the protection of society, and in recognition of his fellow officers here and across the country, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Ottawa-Vanier (Mr. Gauthier):

● (1410)

That this House does hereby express its profound grief and sympathy to the wife and family of the late Constable David Kirkwood.

Mr. Speaker: The motion can be put to the House only with unanimous consent. Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Speaker: The House has heard the terms of the motion. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the said motion?

Motion agreed to.

* * *

THE CANADIAN ECONOMY

SUGGESTED INVESTIGATION OF REASON FOR LAY-OFFS IN INDUSTRY—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Jack Marshall (Humber-St. George's-St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, I wish to move a motion under the terms of Standing Order 43 concerning a matter of urgent and pressing necessity. Figures from the Department of Manpower and Immigration released in June show that some 22 business firms have laid off more than 6,000 workers due primarily to marketing problems—this was during June alone—and there are indications of further deterioration which will exacerbate the unemployment rate in industry to even more unacceptable figures than presently exist. I therefore move, seconded by the hon. member for Hamilton West (Mr. Alexander):

That this House order the government to take immediate action to investigate problems causing these alarming lay-offs and to direct the expertise of the departments concerned with the object of rehabilitating the firms which are in difficulty and preventing further lay-offs.

Mr. Speaker: The presentation for discussion of any such motion requires the unanimous consent of the House. Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: No!

* * *

[Translation]

HARBOURS

SUGGESTION FORTY SEVEN MILLION DOLLARS OF MONTREAL PORT BE LEFT TO ADMINISTRATION OF THAT PORT—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Roch La Salle (Joliette): Mr. Speaker, under the provisions of Standing Order 43, I ask for the unanimous consent of the House to move a motion dealing with an important and urgent matter. I am sure it will be supported by all Montreal members.

In view of the difficulties experienced by the port of Montreal in terms of financing and equipment; in view of the fact that the Montreal port authorities do have a reserve of $47 million accumulated over the last forty years; and considering that the Montreal port could use this amount to complete the necessary facilities to maintain its importance, and that under the new legislation on national harbours this fund of $47 million might fall into the hands of the federal treasury, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Pembina (Mr. Elzinga):

That this House unanimously urge the minister responsible to accept the proposal made in the memorandum submitted in the last few days by the Montreal Chamber of Commerce to the effect that the reserve of $47 million remain the property of the Montreal port and that it may dispose of it in its best interests.

Mr. Speaker: Pursuant to provisions of Standing Order 43, presentation of such a motion requires the unanimous consent of the House. Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

THE CANADIAN ECONOMY

PROPOSED FIRST MINISTERS' CONFERENCE TO DEAL WITH UNEMPLOYMENT—UNDERTAKING OF PRIOR PRELIMINARY WORK

Mr. Lincoln M. Alexander (Hamilton West): Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I should like to direct my question to the Prime Minister, pointing out to him that, including the hidden jobless, there are approximately 1.3 million Canadians unemployed at the present time of whom 46 per cent are breadwinners who have been looking for jobs for the past three months, which means we are losing some $17 million a day in gross national product and $6 million by way of unemployment insurance costs. I ask the Prime Minister in all seriousness, because of the national emergency we face as a result of this peculiar phenomenon, whether he will take steps to convene an early first ministers' conference to deal with rising unemployment and an unsatisfactory real growth rate, problems which have too long adversely affected the optimum economic potential of this country?

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Without subscribing to the fanciful figures put forward by the hon. member when he talks about what he calls hidden unemployment, taking the figures as they are, they do not show a situation with which anybody in this country can be happy. I must remind the hon. member that an increase of one tenth of one per cent this month is in contrast with a decrease of four tenths of one per cent in the previous month and that it is impossible to ascertain a trend from these contradictory figures. The hon. member's calculations are pretty far off. If that is the way he would run the economy—

An hon. Member: You don't care about the unemployed.

Mr. Trudeau: Unemployment is, of course, something about which we do care a great deal. That is why in the budget we brought in substantial tax cuts for consumers and the corporations. We are still hopeful that the long run trend will be in line with what happened last month, and that the budget will continue to produce satisfactory effects if the private sector can take up the tax room which is left to it.

I fail to see how a conference of first ministers at this time, without any further elaboration by the hon. member for Hamilton West, would be a solution. If the hon. member has some suggestions which he would want me to put to the premiers to consider, I will gladly do that. But the federal government is taking its responsibilities, so are the provinces, and at this stage the bringing together of the two would have no effect beyond that of satisfying the hon. member opposite.

Mr. Alexander: Mr. Speaker, let me tell the Prime Minister that the first thing he can tell the first ministers of the country is that the budget of the Minister of Finance is a complete bust and disaster and will do nothing in terms of bringing about long-term, lasting employment. That is the first thing that I can tell the Prime Minister, and if he wants any further suggestions he can ask me after I have put this supplementary question. On June 29 I asked the Prime Minister whether he would convene a first ministers conference in order to deal with this very situation, and the Prime Minister replied, as reported at page 7178 of Hansard:

> Mr. Speaker, I have ascertained that I did answer Premier Schreyer's letter to me. The essence of the federal position is that if our officials and eventually ministers of finance and manpower ministers can meet and make some progress with the kind of idea Premier Schreyer has, we then could usefully consider convening a federal-provincial conference of first ministers. However, at this stage I do not think the latter conference should be convened until preliminary work has been done.

Given the fact that the Prime Minister indicated that there should be some preliminary work done before we convene this first ministers conference to deal with this very unhealthy situation, and in light of the fact that we have this enormous rate of unemployment which certainly calls for immediate initiatives on the part of the federal government under the leadership of the Prime Minister, I ask the Prime Minister what steps he has taken to start and finish this preliminary work in order that it will be possible, in his terms, to convene this first ministers conference. Has the Prime Minister done anything since I asked him that question on June 29, given the gravity of this very unhealthy situation?

Mr. Trudeau: Mr. Speaker, we are attempting to make sure that the private sector does take up the very substantial tax room that the last budget made for it. The purpose of the budget in cutting taxes was this. The hon. member will recall that since the turn of the year something like $2.5 billion to $3 billion have been put into the hands of the private sector, both individuals and corporations. It has been our hope and expectation that this would lead to increased investment and increased construction by the private sector. Of course, if the private sector is not prepared to do that, I fail to see how the suggestion made by one of the hon. members opposite a moment ago would have any effect. In other words, cutting taxes now does not seem to be the right thing to do if the people who will benefit from the tax cuts just save the money rather than invest it. That is why we are trying once again to ensure that the private sector takes up the tax room that we left for it, rather than turn to increased federal expenditures which I am sure hon. members opposite would not want to encourage.

Mr. Alexander: A final supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Why is it that the Prime Minister continually and callously disregards the plight of the unemployed; and when is he going to discontinue fighting inflation on the backs of the poor and the unemployed?

EFFECT OF CONTROLS ON JOB CREATION IN MANUFACTURING INDUSTRY—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Sinclair Stevens (York-Simcoe): Mr. Speaker, my question is also for the Prime Minister. In view of the fact that the number of people working in Canada in our manufacturing industries today is no greater than at the time the Prime Minister imposed wage and price controls in this country—in short, there has been virtually a stagnant situation in job creation so far as our manufacturing industry is concerned—would the Prime Minister indicate whether he thinks the controls program has in fact had a detrimental effect on job creation in our manufacturing industries?

● (1420)

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I am not prepared to reach that conclusion on the evidence of the statistics. The hon. member knows that there is overcapacity in many of the manufacturing sectors, and that is probably the first reason there is not a very great rush to increase investment. We were hopeful the last budget would create a climate wherein the private sector would want to take up this tax room, but thus far progress has been slight.

DATE RECOVERY IN UNITED STATES WILL HAVE EFFECT IN CANADA

Mr. Sinclair Stevens (York-Simcoe): Mr. Speaker, again my question is directed to the Prime Minister. Representatives of his government, and the Prime Minister himself, have stated on previous occasions that recovery in the Canadian economy would occur as a result of recovery in the economies of our principal trading partners. Now that the economy of our major trading partner, the United States, has recovered to the extent that employment in their manufacturing sectors has grown by 2.5 per cent in the last year, while employment in our manufacturing sector has actually fallen by 2.5 per cent in the last year, would the Prime Minister indicate to the House when he expects the recovery in such countries as the United States will catch on in Canada and lead us out of the wilderness into which his policies have led us?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Finance has made it repeatedly clear that the effects of the budget he presented would be slow and that the recovery of the Canadian economy, both in terms of unemployment and inflation, would be slow. This is the reality of the situation, and we have never tried to hide it.

ESTIMATED LEVEL OF UNEMPLOYMENT IN DECEMBER

Mr. Sinclair Stevens (York-Simcoe): Mr. Speaker, my final supplementary is directed to the Prime Minister. I should like to discern how slow is slow. Will the Prime Minister indicate what his estimate of unemployment for December will be, bearing in mind that the Secretary of the Treasury in the United States believes that their unemployment, now a point lower than ours, will be down to 6.5 per cent come December of this year? The budget that is now in place, will that ensure a 6.5 per cent unemployment level in Canada by December?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the progress, which I indicated would be gradual, is something which the Minister of Finance will have to assess before making any further statement on budgetary or fiscal positions.

DATE OF ANNOUNCEMENT OF NEW JOB CREATION PROGRAMS

Mr. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa-Whitby): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister. Having acknowledged that substantial parts of the manufacturing sector are operating in excess capacity, why will the Prime Minister not simultaneously acknowledge that the government's entire strategy of stimulating the economy by giving tax cuts to the corporation was wrong? In the Prime Minister's reply to Premier Schreyer's request for a first minister's conference to deal with unemployment, he said that federal job creation plans are almost complete. This is new to Premier Schreyer and it is new to the people of Canada, that the federal government has some new job creation programs. If these plans are near completion, I should like to ask the Prime Minister when we can expect an announcement about them.

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Manpower and Immigration has repeatedly indicated to the House what new funds were put into job creation programs such as Canada Works and other areas.

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister is either sick today or he is asleep.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Broadbent: I should like the Prime Minister to clarify the statement in his telegram to Premier Schreyer of Manitoba to the effect that there are new plans which are almost complete, which is something different from what he has said now. Are there new plans which the government has in mind to produce jobs, or are we going to rely simply on the old ones which we have seen have not worked so far this year?

Mr. Paproski: That was prior to the election this fall.

Mr. Trudeau: Mr. Speaker, I do not remember having tabled that letter to Premier Schreyer, nor the date of it. If it was referring to plans that the Minister of Manpower and Immigration has already announced, then my first answer is correct. If it is a very recent answer then it has to do with the plans that the Minister of Manpower and Immigration is working on now. I repeat, however, I cannot recall having tabled that letter or making it public. I just wonder where the hon. leader of the NDP got it.

Mr. Broadbent: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. It is no great mystery. It is not confidential and I have a copy of the statement. The premier of that province, who has asked the Prime Minister to organize a conference, issued a statement a few days ago in which he referred to the Prime Minister's commitment for new programs. The question I have following what seems to be Premier Schreyer's very sensible request is this: If there are new programs may we hear what they are? If the government is now working on them, why has it not consulted the provinces when we know that virtually every province has experienced continual increases in unemployment and would like to coordinate their views with those of the government?

Mr. Trudeau: The hon. leader of the NDP has not indicated the date of the letter.

Mr. Broadbent: June 22.

Mr. Trudeau: In that case I was taking Premier Schreyer into my confidence and I am surprised that he has taken the hon. member into his confidence.

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): You cannot trust those socialists.

Mr. Paproski: And you wanted him in your Cabinet. Shame!

* * *

[Translation]

SMALL BUSINESS

REQUEST GOVERNMENT FAVOUR SMALL BUSINESS

Mr. Gérard Laprise (Abitibi): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Minister of State responsible for small businesses.

Could the minister tell the House whether his department has defined or will define what small and medium size businesses are? Could he also tell whether the government will introduce legislation to help truly small businesses in Canada, thereby ensuring the conservation of current jobs and the creation of new ones, as well as the recovery of the economy in all regions of Canada?

[English]

Hon. Len Marchand (Minister of State (Small Business)): Mr. Speaker, we will be defining what will be termed a small business. We are dealing with the question of a definition at this time but I have no plans for legislation.

[Translation]

Mr. Laprise: Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question.

I should like to ask the minister whether he has read the program which was presented on May 26 last to a Senate committee by the Canadian Federation of Independent Businessmen. If so, could he tell the House whether he or the government finds this program interesting and whether it will be used to draft a policy for small and medium size businesses?

[English]

Mr. Marchand: Mr. Speaker, we have worked very closely with the Canadian Federation of Independent Business and a number of things they have suggested will perhaps be incorporated in some of the things we are doing.

THE CANADIAN ECONOMY

UNEMPLOYMENT IN ATLANTIC REGION—ALLEGATION DEPARTMENTAL PROGRAMS AGGRAVATE PROBLEM

Mr. David MacDonald (Egmont): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister. In answer to the first question today he referred to the difficulty in making a month by month comparison with respect to the unemployment situation. I should like to direct his attention to the situation in Atlantic Canada. I am sure he is well aware of the serious trend of increasing unemployment there since 1969. It is now an average of 50 per cent higher in the four provinces than in the rest of Canada. Even with the programs of the Department of Manpower, no serious turnaround of the present unemployment crisis has been achieved in Atlantic Canada. Can the Prime Minister indicate whether he has consulted with some of his key ministers with respect to the impact of their programs? I am thinking of the Department of Transport and the Department of Supply and Services which have been criticized recently for in effect adding to and continuing the problem of chronic high unemployment in the Atlantic provinces?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): The hon. member will recall that the Minister of Regional Economic Expansion did bring in very substantial concessions for those industries which would settle in areas of high unemployment, particularly the maritimes and eastern Quebec. Naturally these will take a little bit of time to take effect, but it is an indication of the government's real concern about high unemployment in those areas. Of course, the direct work programs are also geared to areas of high unemployment and proportionately much more per capita is being spent in the hon. member's area than in other areas of Canada where unemployment is lower. As I indicated in confidence to Premier Schreyer, other programs are in preparation, but I think that is the last time I take him into my confidence.

● (1430)

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. MacDonald (Egmont): The Prime Minister may know that repeatedly in questions in the House, both to the Minister of Finance and to the Minister of Regional Economic Expansion, it has been difficult, in fact impossible, to determine the impact of that recent financial initiative. I do not believe there has been any consultation with the premiers as to their appreciation of its importance in their situation. I should like to ask the Prime Minister, in light of the fact that the Department of Supply and Services over the past year has substantially reduced on a proportionate basis its spending in Atlantic Canada, and with a view to the breakdown in recent talks between the Minister of Transport and his provincial counterparts, whether or not the Prime Minister will give new instructions to key ministries which have a definite economic impact in the Atlantic regions in order that not just in the job creation area under Manpower but in large sectors of the economy influenced by these key departments there can be a significant turnaround.

Mr. Trudeau: The hon. member is obviously correct in suggesting that various other areas of action could be envisaged. I am reminded by the Minister of Supply and Services that there are two specific operations of access for businessmen in those regions of Canada so that they can make greater use of the budgetary requirements of the Department of Supply and Services; in other words, they can sell a much higher proportion of goods and services to the federal government.

UNEMPLOYMENT IN ATLANTIC REGION—MEASURES TO INCREASE PRODUCTION IN REGION

Mr. David MacDonald (Egmont): I wonder if the Prime Minister can indicate whether either he or perhaps the Minister of Supply and Services has responded to the recent declaration by the Atlantic provinces chamber of commerce at their annual meeting in Charlottetown last month with respect to a major program to achieve more production in Atlantic Canada, both related to the private sector and the public sector, and whether or not the federal government will give significant assistance to this commendable initiative?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): I do know that the Minister of Supply and Services was meeting a couple of weeks ago in Halifax with boards of trade and chambers of commerce. If the hon. member wants more details of the results of that meeting he might either ask a question or contact the Minister of Supply and Services.

* * *

REGIONAL ECONOMIC EXPANSION

MEASURES TO AID INDUSTRIES IN ATLANTIC REGION

Mr. Jack Marshall (Humber-St. George's-St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Regional Economic Expansion. In line with the figures referred to for Atlantic Canada by the hon. member for Egmont, and in view of the fact that Newfoundland has a rate of unemployment of 15.7 per cent, and more probably of over 22 per cent, and in view of the fact that one of the main industries in the Atlantic region, particularly in Newfoundland, is the pulp and paper industry which is suffering from marketing and cost production problems, what action is the minister taking to pinpoint these particular industries to help them in rehabilitating their operations, and to avoid lay-offs which are occurring causing suffering to the employees in Atlantic Canada?

[Translation]

Hon. Marcel Lessard (Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): Mr. Speaker, we have done all we could to help those industries. Surely the trend on the international market is largely responsible for the rather weak economic situation of the pulp and paper industry in particular. Of course, our department is limited in its means of action, but we give those industries the maximum technical and scientific assistance; we are also working with the province to conclude other agreements in other areas in which we can take direct action in conjunction with the province to give a new impetus to its economy and create new jobs. We are now negotiating with the province in two or three areas where we might help and I hope that in the next few weeks we will be able to announce the outcome of our negotiations.

* * *

[English]

MANPOWER

GOVERNMENT ACTION TO AVOID LAY-OFFS IN INDUSTRY

Mr. Jack Marshall (Humber-St. George's-St. Barbe): I have a supplementary question for the Minister of Manpower and Immigration. In view of the fact that figures for June show the lay-offs of 6,000 employees in various industries across Canada—the minister referred some time ago to using the emergency response factor in the Canada Works program—what action is the minister taking now in view of the figures released by his own department in order to prevent the lay-offs and to provide alternative employment?

Hon. Bud Cullen (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, at the initiative, for example, of the government of New Brunswick, we did in fact provide some $600,000 in that region as an emergency response. Where initiatives are taken or representations are made, we look at them to see if the emergency response factor is applicable to that situation.

* * *

[Translation]

THE CANADIAN ECONOMY

MEASURES TO CURB UNEMPLOYMENT IN QUEBEC

Mr. Roch La Salle (Joliette): Mr. Speaker, I would like to address my question to the right hon. Prime Minister. Given the fact that the economic measures put forward by his government did not produce the anticipated results and are largely responsible for the high level of unemployment in this country, would not the Prime Minister believe that this situation has a close relationship with increasing unrest between Quebec and the federal government? If so, would he have new proposals or programs for the province of Quebec he could announce today?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the answers which I have given a few moments ago apply also to the province of Quebec regarding, for instance, the lower taxes in the case of the Department of Regional Economic Expansion as well as the Department of Manpower and Immigration programs and the budgetary measures announced by the Minister of Finance.

I do not see why the hon. member should think that the province of Quebec deserves to be treated differently. Would it be because its government has generated uncertainty among investors? I would not know. But it seems to me that this is a bad case for the member for Joliette to defend.

Mr. La Salle: Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister lets the House believe that I am defending a bad case but I think that many people in Quebec are seriously concerned about the effect of the unemployment rate. As current forecasts are very gloomy, more particularly in the province of Quebec, I am going to repeat my question.

Does the right hon. Prime Minister intend to go on trying to deceive the Canadian people, telling them that national unity will be achieved through the official languages rather than by restoring a sound economy, more particularly in Quebec?

* * *

[English]

INDUSTRY

GOVERNMENT ACTION TO PREVENT EROSION OF SECONDARY MANUFACTURING INDUSTRY

Mr. Bruce Halliday (Oxford): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce, if he can take a minute to catch his breath. In view of the continuing and alarming increase in lay-offs in both the textile industry, particularly in Quebec, and in the electrical products industry in Ontario, as reported by the Department of Manpower and Immigration for the month of June, can the minister tell us what specific steps his department or the government is taking to identify the problem in order to prevent further erosion of our secondary manufacturing industry?

[Translation]

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): Mr. Speaker, as far as the textile industry is concerned, in November last we took some measures which are beginning to produce the anticipated effects. I met recently the industry people and the unions and they say that they are satisfied with the policies we adopted in this area.

As far as the electronics industry is concerned, the problem is very difficult to solve at the present time. We took special measures concerning the television industry and if the hon. member wants to raise another area of concern, I shall be pleased to see what we can do.

[English]

REASON FOR FAILURE OF GOVERNMENT TO PROTECT INDUSTRY FROM FOREIGN COMPETITION

Mr. Bruce Halliday (Oxford): Mr. Speaker, somehow the U.S.A. has been relatively successful in limiting the penetration of its domestic markets by foreign manufacturers. Could the minister indicate why the Canadian government has been notably less able to protect our Canadian industries and thereby preserve jobs for Canadians?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): I am very glad that the hon. gentleman raised that question, but I would like him at the same time to tell his friends who are calling me on behalf of importers that I am on the right track in trying to protect domestic markets.

* * *

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

POLLUTION OF GREAT LAKES—GOVERNMENT ACTION TO RECTIFY—SUGGESTED BANNING OF PHOSPHATES IN DETERGENTS

Mr. Derek Blackburn (Brant): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Fisheries and the Environment. In view of the damning indictment by the Great Lakes Water Quality Board that the federal and Ontario governments are not taking effective anti-pollution measures on already known pollutants going into the Great Lakes, can the minister indicate to the House whether he is satisfied with the present state of our Great Lakes and whether he will make an urgent statement on motions this week stating what new initiatives he intends to take in co-operation with the Ontario government, since the 47 problem areas in the Great Lakes have shown almost no improvement?

● (1440)

Hon. Roméo LeBlanc (Minister of Fisheries and the Environment): Mr. Speaker, of course I am not satisfied with the condition of the Great Lakes. That is one of the reasons we are having public hearings. We want to find out how the agreement which will follow the present five-year agreement should be reinforced and where possible improved upon. The report, to my knowledge, has not yet been made public, but in fairness, however, the hon. member should read the whole report because there is improvement in some areas. Obviously, in some cases until waste treatment plants come into operation, progress is going to be slow. However, these are being built in Canada and in the United States.

Mr. Blackburn: I would like to know where these improvements are taking place because the St. Lawrence today is just a sludge river. The Great Lakes Water Quality Board suggested in its annual report that one of the real problems in combating water pollution is the lack of adequate funds to analyse toxic pollutants. Will the minister undertake to ensure that sufficient funds are provided so that toxic pollutants can be detected and removed?

In addition, the board noted that Canada has taken no steps to restrict phosphorous to below 2.2 per cent in laundry detergent. As phosphorous is very harmful to water life will the minister consider a total ban on phosphorous in detergents?

Mr. LeBlanc (Westmorland-Kent): Mr. Speaker, obviously there is never enough money to do all the good things we would like to do, but the problem of toxic substances in water is one of the very high priorities of the environmental protection service of my department. We are giving that problem the priority it deserves. On the other hand, the hon. member is a bit naive when he thinks that in some cases toxic substances can be removed. It takes a long time before they move from the Great Lakes to the ocean and are diluted.

On the matter of phosphates, Canada has been one of the leading nations in their elimination. We are considering imposing more stringent requirements, but we also have to look at the improvement of waste treatment plants to make sure that phosphates do not escape to the ocean by way of the Great Lakes.

Mr. Blackburn: Mr. Speaker, the minister said there were some areas of the Great Lakes which have shown improvement as far as pollution is concerned. Could he be a little more specific? Where are those areas?

Mr. LeBlanc (Westmorland-Kent): Mr. Speaker, I would have to look at the report, which I do not have in front of me, but the shores in certain areas have improved very considerably.

Mr. Blackburn: Where?

Mr. LeBlanc (Westmorland-Kent): In many cases it will take time—and it is taking time—before visible improvements are seen. But there is no increased deterioration in most areas of the Great Lakes.

* * *

[Translation]

CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY

POSSIBILITY OF ESTABLISHING A BRANCH LINE FROM MONTREAL TO MIRABEL

Mr. Jacques Lavoie (Hochelaga): Mr. Speaker, I should like to put a question to the Minister of Transport.

Since it is possible that the Marathon project could be carried out on the site of Angus shops, a co-operative residential and commercial project, and since the existing railway could become a link between eastern Montreal and Mirabel, could the minister tell the House whether he intends to draw the attention of the Canadian Pacific to the possibility of considering that connection between Mirabel and eastern Montreal which could contribute at the same time to the economic development of that underprivileged area of Montreal?

[English]

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I am not looking at this particular project at this point in time, but I would be glad to take the hon. member's representations into account.

[Mr. LeBlanc (Westmorland-Kent).]

TRANSPORT

PROPOSED INCREASE IN TOLLS ON WELLAND CANAL—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport. It has to do with the negotiations which are going on with the United States in connection with Welland Canal tolls, an increase of which would simply strike another body blow at the western farmer at a time when farm income is going down very materially. Will the minister take a stand on behalf of the western farmer, and of Canada in general, against an increase in these rates at this time?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, we are having discussions about the sensible approach to the handling of the seaway which would allow for the goods moving through it to pay, basically, for the operating and maintenance costs of that seaway and a very marginal return over that. We have cancelled the overdue interest, which was never paid after the arrangement which the right hon. gentleman preferred but was never followed through. The right hon. gentleman should not assume that because of any very marginal impact upon the grain farmer as one of the shippers through this facility there is any lessening of my determination to do all kinds of things to assist him. We are working for him, but it will not necessarily be in a silly way, such as trying to deal with the tolls in a very special manner.

Mr. Diefenbaker: Mr. Speaker, judging by the minister's answer it is obvious that he is pressing for an increase in the tolls, and the United States is holding back. In an outspoken speech the other night the Minister without Portfolio pointed out that the western farmer had not been protected until he crossed the Rubicon. Has the Minister of Transport consulted his confrere, the Minister without Portfolio, and has he found that the Minister without Portfolio has changed the views he expressed so strongly for so long against increasing these rates?

Mr. Lang: Mr. Speaker, I think the House will find that all of us on this side share the view that the continuation of and an increase in the number of things which can be done for the west and for the farmer will take place in important areas. We will not quibble and attempt to make it seem that one particular bit of bad management really helps him. I assure the right hon. gentleman that I am delighted to see the 25 per cent increase in our strength between Winnipeg and Kamloops which came about when the Minister without Portfolio joined this government. The right hon. gentleman knows well that that is going to add to our strength now and in the future.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Diefenbaker: Mr. Speaker, that will be fine solace for the western farmer, who is being struck another blow by the minister. Did the Minister of Transport read what the Minister without Portfolio said the other day at the Stanfield—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Diefenbaker: —at the Stampede, which is a good description of the actions always taken by the hon. member for Halifax.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Diefenbaker: The Minister without Portfolio was in the parade and, with his hand on a saddle, he said: "This is the only seat I am sure of".

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

* * *

MANPOWER

YOUTH UNEMPLOYMENT—GOVERNMENT ACTION TO RECTIFY

Mr. Paul Dick (Lanark-Renfrew-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I would like to put a question to the Minister of Manpower and Immigration. My question relates to the high level of youth unemployment in Canada and to the fact that as of today one in seven young Canadians are officially unemployed, even though this statistic does not include the hundreds of thousands who are excluded from government statistics. In view of the fact that today's release indicates that one third of these young people have now been unemployed for more than three months, will the minister tell this House what measures he is taking to deal with the failure of his department to find long-term productive jobs to bring an end to this tragic waste of talent and ability?

Hon. Bud Cullen (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, my department together with private enterprise and other departments has found employment for the vast majority of young people.

Mr. Fraser: Who are you kidding?

Mr. Cullen: We are concerned about the high level of unemployment among youth. That is why we have placed heavy emphasis on Young Canada Works and the job experience training program which proved, as a summer component, to be very effective. We intend to increase emphasis on that program. We are working with the provinces on apprenticeship programs and on co-operative education programs and on a number of others which would take too long to list in the question period. The hon. member should read the list once in a while.

Mr. Dick: Mr. Speaker, I can assure the minister that I do read it, but I cannot understand why about 45 per cent of our unemployment is among the youth of this country when the government is doing so much for youth. In view of the reference made by the Leader of the New Democratic Party, will there be further plans for young people in the employment field implemented this fall?

Mr. Cullen: Mr. Speaker, instead of letting statistics be the catalyst this party has been working on this operation since last October. Announcements were made last October. We recognize that this is a continuing problem. Instead of relaxing I spent part of my holidays going to other countries and finding out how they are endeavouring to deal with this problem.

Mr. Fraser: How many Canadians are overseas looking for jobs?

• (1450)

Mr. Cullen: Mr. Speaker, we received from all of the countries nothing but approbation for the stance being taken by Canada.

* * *

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

MOZAMBIQUE—UNITED NATIONS MOTION TO SUPPLY MATERIAL ASSISTANCE—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Howard Johnston (Okanagan-Kootenay): Mr. Speaker, my question is to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. Can the minister explain whether a recent unanimous vote of the Security Council of the United Nations commits Canada to provide material assistance to Mozambique and will this involve the supplying of arms and ammunition to a Marxist regime?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I apologize to the hon. member, but in view of the noise in the chamber I did not hear the first part of his question. Would he mind repeating it?

Mr. Johnston: Mr. Speaker, I will repeat the question. Can the minister explain whether a recent unanimous vote of the Security Council of the United Nations commits Canada, which is a member of that council, to provide material assistance to Mozambique and will this involve the supplying of arms and ammunition to a Marxist regime?

Mr. Jamieson: Dispensing with the adjectives, Mr. Speaker, obviously if it was a unanimous decision of the Security Council it means that Canada subscribed to it. I will have to look at the actual wording of it to make a direct answer to the hon. member on the second part, but I very much doubt if there are any arms involved in this decision.

Mr. Johnston: I realize there was not too much in the Canadian newspapers, but it was reported rather fully in the New York Times of July 1. Considering this government's expressed and understandable reluctance to commit Canadian troops to any peace-keeping proposal for Rhodesia, can the minister explain the unanimous vote at the Security Council, the result of which can only increase the risk of all-out warfare in that area?

Mr. Jamieson: Mr. Speaker, I do not think I can answer in enough detail in the question period to satisfy the hon. member. If he will agree, I will write him in detail, table it or whatever his wish is once I have had an opportunity to look into the question and the answer in detail.

* * *

FISHERIES

ATLANTIC SALMON—ACTION TO PROVIDE ADEQUATE SURVEILLANCE OF RIVERS TO PROTECT AGAINST POACHERS

Mr. Fred McCain (Carleton-Charlotte): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the Minister of Fisheries. In view of the depletion of Atlantic salmon stock as a result of massive poaching operations on the Tobique, St. John and other rivers, and in view of the economic importance of this salmon to both commercial fishermen and the tourist industry, what measures is the government planning to take to extend adequate surveillance services for the protection of this valuable resource?

Hon. Roméo LeBlanc (Minister of Fisheries and the Environment): Mr. Speaker, if I could agree with the hon. member's premise, I might be able to give him a more substantive answer. The reality is that the salmon have been late in moving up to the Atlantic Rivers this summer. Just last night about 4,000 units moved to the area of the MacTaquac dam in that area. There is a very substantial improvement. It means that what was at first believed to be the result of excessive poaching was in fact a result of lateness of the biology of the species. As for poaching, we have already had two raids which resulted in the confiscation of nets. I recognize there is some difficulty, especially relating to the native Indians of New Brunswick, but I think that these difficulties can be overcome.

Mr. McCain: In 1976, the Tobique river was closed for all salmon fishing. This appeared to be because the Department of Fisheries was so understaffed that law enforcement was impossible. Since then what I would term a comparable situation has allegedly taken place on the St. John this year. In these specific instances, has the staff been increased and can the laws be properly enforced for the balance of 1977?

Mr. LeBlanc (Westmorland-Kent): Mr. Speaker, the hon. member, like many members of his party, complains when we ask for an increase in the number of public servants and when we cannot do all the tasks they ask us to do, they again complain. However, in the case of the St. John river we have had the assistance of the RCMP in undertaking the operations we have undertaken in the last few days. There will never be a level of surveillance to avoid all incidents of poaching just as there will never be enough policemen to avoid all incidents of vandalism. The officials of my department are doing their very best, including working weekends, to ensure proper surveillance.

[Mr. Jamieson.]

NATIONAL DEFENCE

POSSIBLE ABOLITION OF CERTAIN RADAR CONTROL CENTRES—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Allan B. McKinnon (Victoria): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of National Defence. The Queen's Quarterly, a prestigious journal, states that the United States has announced plans for integrating its military and civilian radars and abolishing its SAGE regional control centres such as the one we have at North Bay. Is the minister contemplating doing the same thing in Canada in order to keep in line with the United States policy?

Hon. Barney Danson (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, this relates to our whole North American air defence through NORAD. It is an area under review by the United States in consultation with ourselves. A full report should be in shortly so that these systems are rationalized and observe our concerns and the concerns of everyone else on national sovereignty.

PROPOSED PURCHASE OF FIGHTER AIRCRAFT WITH INTERCEPTOR CAPABILITY—POSSIBLE CHANGE IN PRIORITIES

Mr. Allan B. McKinnon (Victoria): My supplementary also has to do with air defence. President Carter has cancelled the B-1 contract. This calls into question the role of manned bombers. At the present time the minister has invited several companies to bid on the new fighter aircraft with interceptor capability for Canadian forces at a cost of approximately $2.5 billion. Is he now reviewing this decision and is there any likelihood of changing his priority which put the new fighter aircraft ahead of the replacement ships for the navy?

Hon. Barney Danson (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I do not think it changes the priority on the new fighter aircraft. It certainly does not change the priority on the new ship program, either. Both are moving ahead as quickly as possible. The whole range of North American air defence and our role in NATO were considered very seriously in the consideration of the new fighter aircraft. Hopefully, as I said before, one can serve both roles. It might be necessary to go to two types but the factors raised will be considered.

* * *

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

POLLUTION OF GREAT LAKES—POSSIBILITY OF CHANGING TIMETABLE FOR CORRECTIVE ACTION BY INDUSTRY

Mr. P. B. Rynard (Simcoe North): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the Minister of the Environment. It is supplementary to a question asked earlier by the hon. member for Brant. The question has to do with the 47 problems identified in 1971. These 47 problems still exist in the Great Lakes basin. As I understood it at that time, there was to be a timetable which industry had to follow. Industry claims that they have been following this timetable. Does the minister now have to change his timetable or what does he have to do to catch up?

Hon. Roméo LeBlanc (Minister of Fisheries and the Environment): Mr. Speaker, if the hon. member had been a member of the Standing Committee on Fisheries and Forestry, he would understand that industry is in no great mood to have us accelerate the timetable for the elimination of pollution. In fact, their representations were very much to the contrary. I had some of this in the Senate again this morning. In many cases the timetable set out will extend to four or five years while anti-pollution equipment is being installed. I recognize that this is a slow process, but I do not see an alternative in the handling of existing industries. In the case of new industry, obviously the requirements are in the building process and the equipment is installed along with the rest of the machinery.

Mr. Rynard: Is the minister satisfied with the work over which he has control in both the municipal and provincial areas?

Mr. LeBlanc (Westmorland-Kent): Mr. Speaker, I will never be satisfied as long as any pollutant is being put into the waters of this country. That being said, I recognize that the province of Ontario in particular has done a remarkable job in handling its pollution problems and is pursuing that aim vigorously. I do not take anything away from the present Ontario minister of the environment who is an excellent colleague.

* * *

SUPPLY AND SERVICES

REASON FOR SECURITY CLEARANCE FOR CLERICAL POSITION IN DEPARTMENT

Mr. Stuart Leggatt (New Westminster): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the Minister of Supply and Services. It concerns an ad which the minister placed for a routine clerical job in the Department of Communications. The job required a security clearance by the Ministry of Supply and Services. Will the minister tell the House why it is necessary for a routine clerical job to be cleared by the Department of Supply and Services? Does the minister have a division within his department concerning security clearance and is that division separate and apart from the S and I division of the RCMP?

● (1500)

[Translation]

Hon. Jean-Pierre Goyer (Minister of Supply and Services): Mr. Speaker, I am not aware of the specific case raised by the hon. member, but it is clear that for a long time the industrial security has come under the authority of the Department of Supply and Services. We act as advisors to Canadian industries that might get contracts from the government of Canada or from foreign governments, which involve security work. So, it is in that sense that we advise private industries. I shall examine the specific case raised by the hon. member in that perspective.

[English]

REASON FOR SECURITY SECTION IN DEPARTMENT

Mr. Stuart Leggatt (New Westminster): One supplementary, Mr. Speaker. Since the minister has a security clearance division in his own department, can he explain why the S and I Division of the RCMP is not capable of handling that particular role or function? Why does the minister need his own security section or division if there is an overlap by the RCMP? Further, will he tell us how large that division is—how many people are employed in his own department in this security area?

[Translation]

Hon. Jean-Pierre Goyer (Minister of Supply and Services): Mr. Speaker, I note that the question goes beyond the authorized limits of the debates in the House. It would be necessary to explain to the hon. member the workings of security matters within the government and to remind him that each department is responsible for its own security, and that the security depends in fact on the deputy minister of each department, with the advice of course of the RCMP. As regards industrial security, considering that it is closely related to the execution of contracts, the government always saw fit to maintain a small unity which does not act as a police force, but only as an advisory group to private industry so that the security rules regarding the working requirements be respected. If the government were not acting, I suppose it would be accused of failing to shoulder its responsibilities. In this case, I wish to inform the hon. member that the division does not act as a police force, but simply as an advisory group.

* * *

HARBOURS

ESTABLISHMENT OF PORT AT GROS-CACOUNA—REQUEST FOR PROGRESS REPORT ON NEGOTIATIONS WITH QUEBEC

Mr. Eudore Allard (Rimouski): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Transport.

On November 3, 1975, as reported on page 8778 of Hansard, I asked the Minister of Transport some information regarding the important deep water sea port at Gros-Cacouna.

The minister gave me the following answer:

I have taken a special interest in the potential of that particular area and will be endeavouring to ensure that this department is in a position to make recommendations at an early date.

Could the minister tell the House today whether the joint study carried out by the Quebec and federal governments has been completed?

[English]

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): I expect that study has now been completed—it was certainly due to be finished about this time, although I have not seen it. Work has been going on in relation to the various facilities on the assumption that the report would be adequately favourable to them, so there will be little delay in proceeding.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Hamilton West on a point of order.

Mr. Alexander: I would remind Your Honour that the leader of the New Democratic Party, in attacking the Prime Minister almost as vigorously as I did with respect to the unhealthy unemployment situation, referred to a letter which I believe was written by Premier Ed Schreyer, in answer, I believe, to a letter from the Prime Minister. This concerns a serious matter: whether the government is moving toward job creation in the fall, as I believe it is, because the same point was raised by Premier Schreyer in a press conference when he indicated that the Prime Minister had ignored his wishes with respect to the convening of a first ministers' conference, at which time the premier indicated that the government intended to introduce some form of job creation program in the fall.

It is my understanding—I am not an expert on the rules, and Your Honour will check me if I am wrong—that since the leader of the NDP had cited this letter, indicating it was written on June 22 by the premier, that if one quotes at length from a letter such as that, or from any document, as long as its publication would not offend the public interest such a letter or document should be tabled. As far as I can understand, as I look at the Prime Minister, who regards this as a big joke—

Mr. Trudeau: Have you got something there from Beauchesne?

Mr. Alexander: —publication of this letter does not offend the public interest. All we are concerned with is whether the government has the wisdom or the brains to bring about some form of job creation plan in order to relieve those who are suffering from inability to find jobs because the government has failed to create a climate of confidence in which the private sector can play its full part in the economy. I can refer you to Beauchesne, Mr. Speaker—I have in mind the intervention by the Prime Minister just now—and I have found on page 134 a sentence which will be of interest to the Prime Minister, who does not know everything all the time:

> It has been admitted that a document which has been cited ought to be laid upon the table of the House if it can be done without injury to the public interest.

I shall be fair, Mr. Speaker, and I shall read the next sentence, because to be selective in my reading would be taking advantage of Your Honour:

> The same rule, however, cannot be held to apply to private letters or memoranda.

My conclusion is that this is not a private letter. I do not know what the leader of the New Democratic Party has in his hands. He has an ability to be able to get information which others cannot, because Socialists are all alike—they always exchange information.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

[Mr. Lang.]

Mr. Alexander: Perhaps that is how they get it. But in light of the serious situation we face, in light of the fact that the government's economic policies have brought the country to its knees, and given the fact that the Prime Minister may at long last have realized it is time for the government to get off its fanny and face its predicament by bringing in some form of job creation program, I believe it is incumbent upon the leader of the New Democratic Party to table whatever information he may have, for the benefit of all members of this House as well as the people of Canada.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The House ought to be clear about two things. First, that the requirement, according to our precedents, for the tabling of a letter which has been cited or quoted is one which is directed against the ministry for the reason, obviously, that if a minister takes part in a debate in the House and is able to cite documents to his or her advantage, it is only in accordance with fair play and justice that those documents ought to be available to all the participants in the debate. That rule operates against ministers but not against other members.

In the second place, the right to table documents in this House is not one which can be used by members other than ministers of the Crown. I would be prepared to listen to argument that if an advantage has been gained by a member of the House, as a result of making reference to documents, the member concerned ought to be compelled to table those documents, whether he is a minister of the Crown or not, in order to equalize the advantage among all members participating in the debate and so that the discussion could continue on a fair footing. However, the question period has never been equated with debate in terms of our precedents, and surely it ought not to be open to any member of the House simply to refer during the question period to some document and then, by that means, table a document by a procedure which would not otherwise be open to him. For these reasons, I am not able to extend the rule at this time.

* * *

● (1510)

PRIVILEGE

MR. BROADBENT—CORRESPONDENCE BETWEEN PRIME MINISTER AND PREMIER OF MANITOBA

Mr. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa-Whitby): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege related to what the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) had to say and what I regard as a petty, peevish and insulting reference to Premier Schreyer of Manitoba—I say that most seriously—as well as to myself as a member of the House.

During the question period, the Prime Minister said, on the one hand, that the Premier of Manitoba was betraying a confidence in revealing correspondence between himself and the Prime Minister, and that I, in turn, was compounding this by informing the House of some information which was of a confidential nature. I resent that, and I insist that the Prime Minister review the case and offer, in particular, the Premier of Manitoba and myself an apology for the implication he has made and the inference to be drawn that we betrayed a confidence given by the Prime Minister.

In raising any question earlier in the House today I based it directly on a press statement which came out of the office of the Premier of Manitoba on Friday last. That press statement referred to a telex which was sent by the Premier of Manitoba in mid-May to the Prime Minister of Canada requesting a first ministers' conference to deal, among other things, with unemployment. More than a month later the Prime Minister replied that there would be no such conference held, at least immediately. In reply to that the Premier of Manitoba issued a public statement, and I assume, being a man of integrity, Mr. Schreyer, the Premier of Manitoba, was not revealing a confidential telex or telegram sent to him by the Prime Minister. Having made his own request public in the first place—and if the Prime Minister challenges this contention and I am mistaken, I will apologize to him—I am sure the Prime Minister replied to the premier not in a confidential way at all, but directly, in the normal course of correspondence. At any rate, in a press statement issued on Friday by the office of the Premier of Manitoba, the following paragraph appears:

> The Prime Minister had replied June 22 that a first ministers' conference should be held some time in the coming months to deal with the issues raised by Premier Schreyer, but that such a meeting probably would require careful preparatory work in other ministerial areas. He—

That is a reference to the Prime Minister.

> —also stated that job creation plans for the coming months were already close to completion when Mr. Schreyer's first telex of May 17 was received—

It seems to me very clear, Mr. Speaker, that if Premier Schreyer issued this statement publicly he was not betraying a confidence. Some very important questions have been raised, and I think the Prime Minister owes me an apology for suggesting that I am revealing something which is of a confidential nature. He also owes an apology to the Premier of Manitoba. Beyond that, on the very important issue of job creation, he owes an apology to the members of this House because the answers which he gave today did not make clear whether or not there were new job creation programs, as he suggested to Premier Schreyer there were.

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I am called upon to make a whole series of apologies. I think if I explain the circumstances to the hon. member he might want to reconsider his request for apologies. My understanding, when I asked the hon. member the date of my letter to Premier Schreyer, was that the leader of the New Democratic Party had, indeed, a copy of my letter to Premier Schreyer in his hand. If the hon. member can say that that is not so, that he has not seen a copy of my letter to Premier Schreyer, then of course I will withdraw any inference that he is betraying a confidence.

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, on the same question of privilege, it seems to me to be entirely irrelevant—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Paproski: Produce the letter.

RCMP

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member for Oshawa-Whitby (Mr. Broadbent) has raised, by way of a question of privilege, some remarks made by the right hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) during the question period concerning, firstly, the Premier of Manitoba, which of course in this context, and I doubt in any context, would not constitute a question of privilege concerning the members of this House.

Secondly, in respect of his own participation in the question period—that is to say, the actions of the hon. member for Oshawa-Whitby—he indicated that the Prime Minister had indicated that the hon. member for Oshawa-Whitby was compounding the disclosure of a confidence. The Prime Minister has responded to that point. In any case, it would seem to me that it would not constitute a question of privilege. The point has been dealt with by an equal contribution from both sides, and the matter ought not to go any further.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[English]

FINANCE, TRADE AND ECONOMIC AFFAIRS

Thirteenth report of Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs—Mr. Cafik.

[Editor's Note: For text of above report, see today's Votes and Proceedings.]

* * *

[Translation]

CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICE

TABLING OF TELEGRAM FROM L'AGENCE DE PRESSE LIBRE DU QUÉBEC

Hon. Jean-Pierre Goyer (Minister of Supply and Services): Mr. Speaker, I would like to table a copy of a telegram—and the English translation—which was attached to a letter from L'Agence de Presse Libre du Québec, the Mouvement pour la défense des prisonniers politiques and the Coopérative des déménageurs du 1er mai, which I tabled in the House on June 30, 1977.

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. This tabling, it seems to me, is a full response to the point of order raised earlier by the hon. member for Northumberland-Durham (Mr. Lawrence), who raised the point that the minister had been compelled to table a letter, but that in the letter was reference to an enclosure and that the enclosure ought to be tabled as well. I am not going to decide at this point the precedents or the practices by which we ought to be bound. It is a very interesting argument as to whether or not it necessarily follows that, since a document can be held to be tabled, the enclosures or documents attached to it, and so on, might be as well. Perhaps that is an argument which will be raised again when the situation presents itself in the future, but for the moment I am relieved of that obligation by the minister's tabling of the document at this time.

Mr. Lawrence: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, is it in order for me to ask the minister now, through you, why it took him 12 days to table something that was attached to the letter in the first place? Why could not the minister come clean with all these documents in relation to the House of Commons?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

* * *

CRIMINAL CODE

MEASURE TO PROHIBIT MEDIA IDENTIFYING ACCUSED UNLESS CONVICTED

Mr. Paul Dick (Lanark-Renfrew-Carleton) moved for leave to introduce Bill C-434, to amend the Criminal Code (reporting names of accused).

Some hon. Members: Explain.

Mr. Dick: The purpose of this bill is to recognize more fully the time-honoured right of an accused in Canada to be presumed innocent until proved guilty by prohibiting the media from identifying an accused unless and until he is convicted.

Motion agreed to, bill read the first time and ordered to be printed.

* * *

● (1520)

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the following questions will be answered today: 1, 24, 31, 850, 2,764, 2,772, 2,780, 2,808, 2,813 and 2,826.

[Text]

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS DEALINGS WITH WILLIAM TERON ASSOCIATES

Question No. 1—Mr. Cossitt:

Since April 20, 1968, what are the details of any government business dealings with William Teron Associates, William Teron Limited, Mr. Teron personally or any other company with which he had any connection in an official capacity and, what amount of public funds are involved in any case that may exist?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the National Design Council, Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, the Ministry of State for Urban Affairs, and the Department of Public Works as follows: In June 1971, funds totalling $35,000 in the form of a research grant were allocated to Mr. Teron by the National Design Council to develop performance and measurement standards and design criteria for those aspects of living accommodation relating to space division, flexibility, storage equipment and furniture to serve as a basis for improved design of living accommodation. It should be noted that $10,000 of the above-noted sum expended by Mr. Teron went to a research team at the Institute of Urban Studies, University of Winnipeg and that Mr. Teron contributed his time free of charge. On February 2, 1973 the balance of $25,000 was transferred to a research team at the University of Montreal to complete this project. While Mr. Teron was a Director/Officer of Canadian Inter-Urban Properties Limited, from May 31, 1967 to December 15, 1969, there was in effect a lease between that company and CMHC for office premises in Kingston, Ontario—the lease dating back to May, 1958. Leases were in effect as follows between the Department of Public Works and firms with which Mr. Teron is known to have had connection in an offical capacity (subject to the proviso below respecting Retno Ltd.) during the period from April 20, 1968 to June 30, 1973 when, prior to his appointment as President of CMHC, he resigned from every office and directorship in commercial corporations:

Company	Location	Details
*Retno Ltd.	Teron Building, 219 Argyle Ave., Ottawa.	To lease 25,200 sq. ft. at $88,140 per annum for the period from June/68 to May/73.
*Retno Ltd.	Teron Building, 219 Argyle Ave., Ottawa	To lease 530 sq. ft. at $610 per annum for the period from June/68 to May/73.
*Retno Ltd.	Teron Building, 219 Argyle Ave., Ottawa.	To lease 25,730 sq. ft. at $116,948 per annum for the period from June/73 to Jan/74

*During the period June 1968 to April 1970 payments were made to Teron Construction; for the remaining period of the lease, payments were made to Retno Ltd. (c/o W. Teron & Associates) on the instructions of Retno. However, effective February 1974, payments were assigned to N.D.M. Leaseholds who purchased the property from Retno. Although Mr. Teron was not connected with Retno Ltd. in an official capacity, because payments were made to Retno Ltd. (c/o W. Teron & Associates), the leases above have been included.

Etron Limited	Premises at 1404 Scott St., Ottawa.	To lease 15,900 sq. ft. at $52,470 per annum for the period Jan/67 to Jan/74.
Canadian Inter-urban Properties Limited	Premises in the East Mall Shopping Centre, 600 King St., East, Oshawa.	To lease 5,849 sq. ft. at $25,704 per annum for the period Apr/68 to Mar/73.
Canadian Inter-urban Properties Limited	Premises in the East Mall Shopping Centre, 600 King St., East, Oshawa.	To lease 5,849 sq. ft. at $29,280 per annum for the period Apr/73 to Mar/74.

Two leases are currently in effect between the Department of Public Works and firms with which Mr. Teron had a connection in an official capacity prior to June 30, 1973:

Company	Location	Details
Retno Limited	Premises at 273 Argyle Ave., Ottawa.	To lease 3,620 sq. ft. at $21,539 per annum for the period May/75 to Apr/80.
Urbanetics Limited	Premises at 1404 Scott St., Ottawa.	To lease 15,900 sq. ft. at $63,000 per annum for the period Feb/74 to Jan/79.

It should be noted that these two properties were leased following Mr. Teron's resignation from every office and directorship and following the transferral of any shares held to Trustees under a blind trust agreement completed on December 18, 1973. (See the answer to Question 3,046, Hansard, October 14, 1975, page 8176). It should also be noted that the Department of Public Works does not maintain records of the various officers of the many companies with which it deals. If any additional companies with which Mr. Teron had any connection in any official capacity can be identified, the information requested will be provided. In late 1972 and the first part of 1973, Mr. Teron negotiated in trust for the federal government the acquisition of options on various properties comprising the Toronto Harbour Front project. In total, Mr. Teron incurred expenses and advanced deposits for a total of $184,214.84 for which he was reimbursed by the department. Details of these expenditures follows:

Date	Particulars		Amount
Dec 6 & 19/72	W. Teron	Deposit on properties for Toronto Harbour Development Project (applied to purchase price)	$150,000
Jan 4/73	Y & R Properties Ltd.	Negotiations re purchase of Terminal Warehouses Ltd. including drafting of offer, title examinations, meetings with agents, etc.	4,250.00
Jan 31/73	Wilfred Wolman, QC McLean, Lyons & Kerr	In connection with purchase of Terminal Warehouses Ltd.—all services rendered during period Sept 14/72 to Jan 22/73 including correspondence-attendances related to reviewing, revising and finalizing purchasing agreement, etc.	$ 26,963.60
Mar 20/73	W. Teron	Expenses—Air fare, travel, telephone	2,039.59
Mar 21/73	W. Teron	Interest on deposits made by William Teron	961.65
		Total	$184,214.84

The Ministry of State for Urban Affairs has had no dealings with William Teron Associates, William Teron Limited or any other company with which Mr. Teron had any connection in an official capacity. However, Mr. Teron was named Acting Secretary of the Ministry on October 16, 1975 and Secretary on June 15, 1976.

Order Paper Questions

AIB PERSONNEL

Question No. 24—Mr. Cossitt:

1. What is the total number of persons that were employed by, attached to, on loan to, under contract with or in any similar way connected with the Anti-Inflation Board (a) as of April 12, 1976 (b) as of the date the answer to this question is prepared?

2. How many additional personnel is it anticipated will be required during the present fiscal year?

3. What is the total annual payroll of the Board as of the date the answer to this question is prepared and how many received (a) up to $15,000 a year (b) between $15,000 and $20,000 a year (c) between $20,000 and $25,000 a year (d) between $25,000 and $30,000 a year (e) over $30,000 a year?

4. On what date was the answer to this question prepared?

Mr. Bob Kaplan (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance): 1. (a) As of April 12 the number of persons who are permanent and temporary employees plus persons under contract and Executive Interchange was 617. On October 1, 1976 the number was 684. (b) No date can be stated as the date the answer to this question is prepared.

2. The personnel requirements of the Anti-Inflation Board are assessed on a regular basis to ensure the effective operation of the Board. It is difficult to anticipate future requirements as these are dependent upon a variety of factors including the degree of compliance with the guidelines and the requirement for effective monitoring of prices and incomes.

3.

Anti-Inflation Board
Payroll Report as of October 1, 1976

	Up to $15,000.	$15,000. to $20,000.	$20,000. to $25,000.	$25,000. to $30,000.	Over $30,000.
Permanent	180	77	69	52	50*
Term	242	14	—	—	—

Total Manpower 684
Total Annual Payroll $10,644,089.20
* Includes seven Board Members.

4. The government takes responsibility for the answers it provides to questions and for the process involved in replying to such questions. It is not appropriate therefore, to provide information about internal administration arrangements.

ORDER PAPER QUESTION NO. 1

Question No. 31—Mr. Cossitt:

1. With reference to the answer to Question No. 3,573 of the First Session of the 30th Parliament, asking details on government business awarded to Urbanetics Limited which stated: "See answer to Parliamentary Question No. 3,359" of the First Session of the 30th Parliament, for what reason does the government consider this possible since Question No. 3,359 of the First Session of the 30th Parliament has not been answered?

2. Will the government supply details of any government business received by Urbanetics Limited since its creation including details of any contracts and costs involved?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): 1. An explanation was given to an assistant of the hon. member on April 27, 1976.

Order Paper Questions

2. See reply to Question No. 1 answered this day.

FEASIBILITY STUDIES

Question No. 850—Mr. Rodriguez:

For each of the past five years, have any government departments or agencies been involved in funding any sort of feasibility studies in Africa and, if so (a) what was the nature and cost of each (b) what department or agency (i) conducted (ii) contracted the studies?

Mr. Fernand E. Leblanc (Parliamentary Secretary to Secretary of State for External Affairs): In so far as the Canadian International Development Agency is concerned, the answer is as follows: In carrying out an African program which has reached a magnitude of approximately $200 million per annum, CIDA conducts numerous feasibility studies to investigate and validate the desirability of proposed investments. In any given fiscal year, therefore, CIDA finances feasibility work in Africa across a broad spectrum of sectors and sub-sectors. To list all feasibility studies carried out in Africa over the past 5 years would necessitate a time-consuming and expensive search of records, including records which are now in CIDA's archives. Such a task, although possible, would probably consume at least two man-years, at a cost to the Canadian taxpayer of not less than forty thousand dollars. For these reasons, it is not possible to answer this question.

IDRC—PUBLICATION "FAMILLE ET DÉVELOPPEMENT"

Question No. 2,764—Mr. Robinson:

1. Does the government, through the International Development Research Centre, pay the total cost of the publication Famille et Développement and is the cost to the taxpayer some $600,000?

2. Is the government aware that the publication is stirring up third world countries against countries such as Canada and, if so, will the government take appropriate remedial action or withdraw its financial contribution?

Mr. Fernand E. Leblanc (Parliamentary Secretary to Secretary of State for External Affairs): 1. The International Development Research Centre, a public corporation created by the Government of Canada in 1970 and financed through an annual Parliamentary grant, appropriated in December 1974 a sum of $644,000 to cover the preparation and start-up costs and the first three years of operation of the magazine, Famille et Développement. It has been published quarterly in Dakar, Sénégal, since January 1975. Actual expenditure to date is $486,900. The IDRC has so far been the sole contributor although it is likely that donor agencies in other countries may now be willing to join in providing additional support if it is required. Revenue from the sale of the magazine (paid circulation has reached almost 22,000, and readership is estimated at 200,000) is becoming a major factor in the financing of future operations and it is hoped that the publication will become self-financing in future.

2. Famille et Développement is the only mass-circulated, indigenous publication providing information on family health and development issues for the peoples of French-speaking Africa. The Editorial Committee as well as the editorial and production staff (except for the IDRC local administrator) is entirely African. The publication provides information prepared and/or selected by Africans based on their perceptions of current African interests. The magazine does periodically have articles on the implementation of rural development programs in African and Asian countries; some of these articles refer to countries whose political and economic systems are different from those of the industrialized nations, including Canada, and reflect a concern with the existing economic disparities in the world. The magazine has never contained an attack on Canada or other industrialized nations. In one recent issue, the magazine contained a cartoon on the problems of aid tied to the economic or political interests of donor nations. The IDRC has protested the cartoon to the editorial staff of Famille et Développement. Indications are that the publication has been extremely well received in Francophone African countries. Although the IDRC role in the publication is not direct and, therefore, not particularly visible, among those Africans who are aware of this Canadian support, the publication has brought considerable credit to the policies and programs of the Centre and thus to Canada's role in development aid.

SALE OF MASSEY-FERGUSON COMBINES TO RUSSIA AND/OR ARGENTINA

Question No. 2,772—Mr. Halliday:

Did any department or agency sell or arrange for the sale of Massey-Ferguson combines to Russia and/or Argentina and, if so (a) what were the model numbers (b) what extra equipment was on the machines (c) how many were sold (d) what was the price per unit?

Mr. Hugh Poulin (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): In so far as the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce is concerned: The Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce has no knowledge of any federal department or agency having sold or arranged for the sale of Massey-Ferguson combines to Russia and/or Argentina.

POST OFFICE PUBLICATION

Question No. 2,780—Mr. Rodriguez:

What was the total cost for the production of the 1969 Post Office Department publication A Blueprint for Change?

Hon. J.-J. Blais (Postmaster General): According to Post Office records, total cost was $5,600.

EXPENDITURES AT SAULT STE. MARIE

Question No. 2,808—Mr. Symes:

What was the total amount spent in Sault Ste. Marie from October 1972 to date by the Department of External Affairs?

Mr. Fernand E. Leblanc (Parliamentary Secretary to Secretary of State for External Affairs): Detailed statistics are not available as departmental expenditure records are not maintained by region or municipality. However, as the Department does not maintain an office in Sault Ste. Marie it is estimated that expenditures are negligible.

EXPENDITURES IN SAULT STE. MARIE

Question No. 2,813—Mr. Symes:

What was the total amount spent in Sault Ste. Marie from October 1972 to date by the Ministry of State for Science and Technology?

Hon. James Hugh Faulkner (Minister of State for Science and Technology): In so far as the Ministry of State for Science and Technology is concerned: Nil return.

CULTURAL AGREEMENTS

Question No. 2,826—Mr. Jones:

1. Is there any agreement between Canada and Great Britain similar in terms to the France-Canada Cultural Agreement of 1965?

2. Is there any Commission with Canada and Great Britain as the sole members, similar in nature to the France-Canada Mixed Commission?

3. Are there any exchanges between Canada and Great Britain similar to those agreed upon at the Eighth Session of the France-Canada Mixed Commission?

Mr. Fernand E. Leblanc (Parliamentary Secretary to Secretary of State for External Affairs): 1. No. It has been mutually agreed between the two governments that no formal agreement is necessary to further bilateral cultural and academic exchanges.

2. No. However officials of both governments meet periodically in formal sessions to discuss programs of cultural and academic exchanges. The fourth such meeting, which will include representatives of the provinces, will be held in London next October.

3. Several proposals in the fields of exchanges of persons, education and cultural promotion will be discussed at this meeting as was the case at the recent meeting of the France-Canada Mixed Commission. These would be in addition to a variety of cultural and academic activities carried out with Great Britain under various Commonwealth as well as private auspices. As with other countries with which Canada has developed programs of cultural exchanges, those with Great Britain include exchanges in the field of the performing and visual arts, exchanges in the field of education including scholarships, youth exchanges and visits of persons prominent in the academic and cultural fields.

[English]

Mr. Cossitt: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order concerning the approximately 21 or so questions on the early part of the order paper which have not been answered until just now when the parliamentary secretary referred to three of them. I raise this matter because the answers, whatever they may be, to two of the questions he has just read out become a complete farce due to the fact that they have been on the order paper for a year and a half without answers. Therefore, it serves hardly any purpose in their being answered at this late date.

For example, one asked about the Anti-Inflation Board staff, its size and the number the board anticipated they would hire during the next fiscal year—which was last year and not this year. We are now receiving the answer when, presumably, the staff is being phased out. Thus, we are receiving an answer which is not what I asked for in the first place.

It asked for salary brackets, how many were in certain brackets, and so on. Simply because the parliamentary secretary knew someone on this side of the House was going to move the adjournment of the House today in light of this type of situation, he brought in three answers to early questions, two of which are absolutely redundant and out of place because the situations are long past. Question No. 31 was simply referring to the last parliament, which is when I asked it.

How can the government in answer to my question, refer me to question No. 3,359 of the first session of the thirtieth parliament when that very question was not answered during the thirtieth parliament? It took 1½ years to come up with an explanation today as to why they said a question was answered which was not answered. This is getting to the point of being ridiculous and it is a case where the government is covering up information to which the Canadian people are entitled.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Cossitt: The government is leaving questions on the order paper until such time as public opinion will forget, or until such time as the questions become so far outdated in the time element that the answers do not make any sense. We should have a guarantee from the parliamentary secretary today that the right to information by members of parliament and the Canadian people is going to be adhered to by this government, instead of the procedures which have been going on for five years. There are many members senior to me who have witnessed this type of action since this government came to power.

Mr. Speaker: Shall the remaining questions be allowed to stand?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

* * *

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Mr. MacEachen: Mr. Speaker, with respect to the following item of government business, it has been suggested that we deal with any votes which have been deferred at ten o'clock this evening. If that is agreeable to members of the House, I would be prepared to accept the notion that the House deal with any deferred votes on the bill at ten o'clock this evening. The report stage of this bill may not be completed, but it might be convenient to deal with whatever votes are outstanding at that time.

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, there seems to be excellent progress being made at report stage of this bill. When the government House leader referred to deferred votes, I am sure he was talking about any votes deferred during the course of today which will be dealt with at ten o'clock this evening. If that is the case, we are quite agreeable.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I was informed that these discussions were in progress, and on behalf of my colleagues I can say we are sympathetic to the idea. Apparently the message I relayed did not get back to the government House leader. Instead of taking the vote at ten o'clock, it seems to me it should be at 9.30.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): If we call the votes at ten o'clock—there might be eight or ten of them by then—it will run into a late hour and then the "late show" will be after that. I realize this is negotiating in public, which does not often work. I would suggest 9.30, rather than ten o'clock. We could stop the debate at that point, ring the bells for 15 minutes and start taking the votes at 9.45.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Under the circumstances, perhaps the House would permit the Chair to suggest the obvious compromise—ringing the bells for 15 minutes beginning at 9.45.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. MacEachen: No.

Mr. Speaker: That is one of the dangers when the Chair attempts to enter into discussions. If there is agreement which the House can put into an order at this time, I would be glad to put the question. If there is no agreement, I am not able to put any question whatsoever to the House at this time.

Orders of the day.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

CRIMINAL LAW AMENDMENT ACT, 1977

AMENDMENTS TO CRIMINAL CODE

The House resumed, from Monday, July 11, consideration of Bill C-51, to amend the Criminal Code, the Customs Tariff, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act and the Prisons and Reformatories Act, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs; and motion No. 9 (Mr. Brisco).

Mr. Speaker: Pursuant to the proceedings adopted to this point, this vote will be deferred until later. The House may want to have the question put at this time. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the said motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Speaker: All those opposed to the motion will please say nay.

Some hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Speaker: In my opinion the yeas have it.

And more than five members having risen:

Mr. Speaker: Pursuant to the proceedings we have been following with respect to this report stage debate, this vote will be deferred. Therefore, the House will now move to motion No. 10.

Mr. Stan Schumacher (Palliser) moved:

Motion No. 10.

That Bill C-51, to amend the Criminal Code, the Customs Tariff, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act and the Prisons and Reformatories Act, be amended in clause 3 by striking out lines 39 to 42 at page 13 and substituting the following therefor:

"(b) a peace officer or public officer, or"—

He said: Mr. Speaker, I suppose it is just fate that Your Honour called my motion next. I must be at the top of the minister's hit parade at the moment, according to reports I have received about a comment he made for the purposes of the media with regard to the debate so far. I cannot take in silence what he is reported to have said. The minister is guilty of very sleazy and underhanded conduct in regard to the debate which is going on in this House, by attempting to blame members on this side of the House who have participated in the debate on Bill C-51 for the killing of a police constable in this city last night. I think that is very reprehensible on the part of the minister.

Some hon. Members: Shame.

Mr. Schumacher: If he wants to put the blame where it should be, he should look at his own administration and reconsider the question of capital punishment in this country.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

An hon. Member: He is not listening; he does not care.

Mr. Schumacher: That is nothing new for him. Returning to the matter at hand, this amendment is designed to protest the parts of this bill which give the governor in council the right to make regulations. As I pointed out earlier in this debate, the law, particularly criminal law, should be abundantly clear to everybody. Matters like this one should be included in the Criminal Code, not in some collection of rules and regulations written by bureaucrats. In committee, the minister pointed out that the proposed amendments to the Criminal Code result from representations made to him by the attorneys general of some provinces. As he said in committee, they did not think mayors, wardens, reeves, sheriffs' officers, sheriffs, or justices of the peace should fall into the same category as policemen or other peace officers.

● (1530)

If it is the intention of the government and the provinces to correct the definition of "peace officer" or those who are going to be allowed exemption under this section at a later date, a different class of people should be provided for in the Criminal Code. The situation must be improved. As has been pointed out on many occasions, the government is becoming more prone to controlling our activities by regulation rather than by law.

My motion would neither strengthen nor weaken the bill, but is designed to persuade the government to include important provisions in the Criminal Code and not through a hodge-podge of other publications which makes it difficult for citizens to find out what rules and regulations govern them. If this part of our criminal law is to be strengthened, weakened, broadened or narrowed, it should be done through the parliamentary process and not through the machinations of the bureaucracy. That is why I ask members to give serious consideration to amending the bill in the way I have suggested.

Mr. Robert C. Coates (Cumberland-Colchester North): Mr. Speaker, it had not been my intention to involve myself in this debate, but this particular amendment gives me an opportunity to say some things that I think require to be said, not just on behalf of the hon. member for Palliser (Mr. Schumacher) but on behalf of all members of the House. I could hardly believe my ears this morning when I heard on the "World at Six" program certain statements attributed to the Minister of Justice (Mr. Basford) in relation to the sniping incident which took place in Ottawa last evening and about which every Canadian feels a deep sense of grief and abhorrence. It has nothing to do with what any member of this chamber is endeavouring to do as far as this bill is concerned, however. What members are attempting here is to produce good laws that are appropriate for all Canadians, that protect Canadians as much as possible by regulating the ownership of guns in this nation. The great problem with guns and their regulation is that those who commit most of the crimes pay no attention to the law in the first place. Guns do not kill people; people kill people with guns. I could not believe that last night the Minister of Justice would suggest the atrocities committed against human beings in that incident had anything to do with members of parliament.

An hon. Member: He was right on.

Mr. Coates: If the hon. member opposite knew anything about the House of Commons, or had been here a little longer, he would have some appreciation of the rights and privileges of individual members, which he does not appear to have. If he wants to make a speech on this amendment, he can do so; otherwise he should keep his mouth shut.

Mr. Malone: He could not point a slingshot in the right direction.

Mr. Coates: What concerns me is not just what the minister said last night in the course of what I would describe as ambulance-chasing when he arrived at the scene of the sniping incident, although that is probably the most irresponsible act any person could commit. Who knows who might have been killed by a madman with a gun in a house, shooting indiscriminately at people. Yet the Minister of Justice went to the scene and told anybody willing to listen that he is the Minister of Justice and that he is of the opinion that if this bill had been passed by the House—and he has had opportunities to get it through before now if he had wanted to use the parliamentary procedures available to him—the incident would not have happened. Reports I have received indicate that the minister identified certain members of this House as having blood on their hands because of the incident. That was a most shocking and irresponsible statement. It is almost beyond belief that the Minister of Justice of this country would make such a statement, except that these days nothing is beyond belief, as far as I am concerned, about this government's actions regarding legislation that it endeavours to impose upon the Canadian public.

I will put on record the remarks made by the Minister of Justice in an interview, as reported by Broadcast News. The report reads as follows:

> "It's quite clear, for example, in this case that the now accused had a twelve-gauge shotgun, .22 calibre semi-automatic rifle, a 30—30, a 303, and a 30 06. The semi-automatic had been bought within the month in Ontario, and I obviously have to be careful because the man is charged—it is quite clear on the information I have that that purchase would have been restricted or prohibited under the legislation."

The minister is taking a lot upon himself in saying what would or would not be in legislation still being debated in this House of Commons. Apparently the government is imposing legislation and this is not any longer to be a debating institution where decisions are made after due consideration and debate, and when the House arrives at the best possible conclusion in regard to legislation governing guns or anything else. I believe, sir, that this House should be charged with a question of privilege as far as this particular statement is concerned. The minister went on to say:

> What I don't understand is we have a group of members, such as Stan Schumacher, Doug Neil, Ritchie, Towers, Bob Brisco from Kootenay West, who spent all day yesterday and presumably all day today debating such things as the right of people to collect and use machine guns, or amendments reducing the sentences for the use of guns; weakening the provisions relating to safe storage, and what I just don't understand is how many people, how many policemen, how many citizens, have to be shot down in Brampton or Oshawa or Ottawa or Penticton, where they shot a tax collector the other day; or Vancouver, or Montreal, before parliament will react to that public situation and pass the legislation.

● (1540)

Mr. Speaker, I just cannot believe that such a statement would come from the Minister of Justice who is supposed to have some respect for the law and the rights of individuals in this country, and especially for the rights of members of parliament.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Coates: It is obvious that the Minister of Justice has no sense of justice so far as individual Canadians are concerned, or he would not be making such statements to the public and endeavouring to inflame the public against an opposition party which has been completely responsible and has endeavoured to work with the government to produce the best possible kind of legislation for the benefit of all Canadians. I have known the Minister of Justice for a long time, but I have never known him to show this kind of irresponsible approach to legislation. I believe he owes the members he has named an apology in the House. If he is a House of Commons man, as I have always believed him to be, I think he will rise in his place and offer an apology to the individuals in question, because that is what they have a right to expect from any individual member sitting in this chamber.

Mr. Eldon M. Woolliams (Calgary North): Mr. Speaker, I am very concerned about the statement that has just been read in the House and it seems to me that now is the appropriate time to discuss it. Let me say in my introductory remarks that I assume these words were spoken by the Minister of Justice (Mr. Basford) in haste, or perhaps written by someone in his office, because knowing the minister as I do, I just cannot believe he could have been serious.

I want to bring to the attention of the House and record the fact that the bill was debated on second reading on May 11 and 12. Then it went to committee for eight days. We heard only two groups of witnesses in committee, one regarding the gun control section and one on invasion of privacy. All other witnesses were denied a hearing. The bill returned to the House for report stage and was debated on June 30, July 4, 11 and 12. On one of those days the debate lasted only about one hour and a half. Is the minister going to accuse this party, as he apparently has in his release, in full knowledge of the fact that the murder was committed in Ottawa? I feel deeply, as a Canadian, about this tragic occurrence, not only about what has happened in Ottawa but about the three incidents in Calgary in the last year and a half.

I bring to the minister's attention that one of the fundamental principles of administration of justice is that the Minister of Justice, in leading his department, must at all times show absolute integrity and honesty. In fact, those who have some knowledge of parliamentary history know that in the mother of parliaments the minister of justice is non-partisan because of the position he holds in administering justice.

Is the minister suggesting that the murder which took place last night—a tragic event for the young police officer who was killed, and for his family—as well as the incident in Toronto and the one in Calgary to which I brought the attention of the House of Commons, were all caused because the bill which is now before the House was not passed? If that is what the minister implied, then we have reached a sorry state in the Department of Justice—and I must say, in frankness, that that is not the truth. The truth is that the murder which was committed in Ottawa involved the use of a long gun. As someone said in committee, there are six million long guns in Canada. Another member said there were 11 million. We know there are 2.5 million long gun owners who are not affected by this bill at all.

Therefore, to suggest that because we did not pass the bill yesterday—we debated the question of criminal law regulations and the matter of putting the onus on the Crown, not the accused—a murder was committed, is to place the blame on my friends in this party, something which I can only describe as shameful by the Minister of Justice and I hope he will apologize for it.

Mr. Malone: This House should adjourn.

Mr. Woolliams: I would point out, with reference to the murders in Calgary, that the last one involved the use of a prohibited or restricted weapon. When the minister piloted the bill on capital punishment through the House he should have considered whether it might have been a deterrent. I leave that to him. He knows where I stood in this regard. On this side we had a free vote on capital punishment, but on the government side there was no free vote and every cabinet member lined up, to a man, to a woman. To suggest to us that we have caused crime to increase is shameful. Why will the government not set up an inquiry on crime in Canada, something for which we have asked over and over again?

Why will they not take a hard look at what kind of life a police officer must lead because of the crime rate in this country? Since this motion deals with peace officers and orders in council, we have pointed out that law that is drafted by orders in council, by cabinet or by an unknown and unnamed body, is improper. That is not the way to legislate criminal law. That was our message which rang through this chamber yesterday.

The second point which we argued yesterday was not one dealing with guns. It referred to the fact that in one of the provisions the government placed the onus on the accused. I pointed out that as in the "Cross" and "Wigmore" authorities on evidence, and for generations, our system of jurisprudence has been that a man or a woman cannot be found guilty in a criminal court unless the evidence shows they are guilty beyond a reasonable doubt—and the onus is always on the Crown. That was the argument we put forward yesterday. We put forward intelligent and intellectual arguments concerning liberty and freedom of Canadians. Then we were met with that kind of news release this morning. The only congratulation I can offer the Minister of Justice is that he did not include my name among those he mentioned. He knows I co-operated with him in the committee at every stage of the bill. To suggest that this bill would have stopped the murder in Ottawa yesterday, or any other murder of a policeman, is utter nonsense and untruthful.

Mr. Arnold Malone (Battle River): Mr. Speaker, I would like to follow on the same theme as that put forward by the two previous speakers who have pointed out that the Minister of Justice (Mr. Basford) has been derelict in his duty. He has been dishonest with the House of Commons and the country in suggesting that members on this side of the House were somehow connected with the most unfortunate murder last night. I would like to state in the House that there is a correlation in western countries between an increase in the rate of crime and murders and an increased rate of unemployment. If the Minister of Justice can say to us, as he did in his comments last night, that we are in some way guilty of the crime last night, then surely, because of the high rate of unemployment in the country at present, both the minister and the government have to accept the same kind of guilt because there is a relationship between crime and unemployment. However, I will not do that because I think we must maintain a higher level of integrity in the House, and to be blaming members for all the murders that are going on is certainly not the crux of the issue. But we must recognize that the minister made a most outrageous statement when he tried to blame members on this side of the House for the unfortunate deed last night.

I say that the amendment before us is one that is very important because it refers to the power to make changes by order in council. What the hon. member for Palliser (Mr. Schumacher) is saying in his motion could be said about many other bills, because the principle is extremely important. Last year over 3,300 orders in council were made by this government, none of which was referred to parliament. In the United Kingdom there were ten orders in council, all of which were referred to parliament. It is absolutely stupid to assume that we have control over our democratic process when in excess of 3,000 regulations can be made but never brought before parliament. We are not saying we oppose this legislation; we want an iron-clad guarantee about what the regulations will contain.

• (1550)

There are gun clubs in my constituency. I live in a farming and ranching constituency where guns are not used to kill people; they are used as tools to get skunks out from under chicken coops, or to kill coyotes coming into calving yards. We know, by the way this bill is being put forward, that right after we pass it the governor in council can change the length of time for which the registration period can exist, and the fees. The governor in council can make it prohibitive to obtain guns and can classify which guns are restricted and which are not restricted.

Every gun club I met did not mind having gun control. We ought to understand that. But we want to know if the gun control we have is one we can live with. Each day in this House there is an overbegging of the question. The Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) tries to point out the differences between Canadians by saying that there are French and English, and English and French. He always focuses on the differences in an attempt to find some common cause in which we as a nation can join together so that we can forget our differences.

The hon. member for Churchill (Mr. Smith) has in his riding many constituents who are trappers by occupation—70 per cent in all. If the Prime Minister understood the development of the west and the use of guns in agriculture, he would recognize that this is a cultural question. The gun is a tool in many ways, but there are many tools which are used for killing people. People can be killed with knives, axes, saws, poisons, and in many other ways. If the government is sincerely interested in having a Criminal Code which would reduce the number of murders, it has to work with the psychology of people. It has to deal with child abuse. The governments of this country have been derelict in that respect. Much more needs to be done. We have definitions of child abuse which include broken bones and extreme bruising, but none of them touch the question of the psychological abuse of children. People have so psychologically degraded children that we find the mentality which causes the kinds of acts we read about in the newspapers today.

There is also a correlation between noise levels and tensions in people. There are some interesting articles dealing with urban development and noise levels. People who live in busy traffic areas and on the lower floors of apartment buildings have more tensions than others. Passing this bill and leaving all regulatory adjustments to orders in council gives no assurance to gun owners, and in fact may or may not have an effect on crime. While I do not subscribe to the conclusion of Judy LaMarsh that there ought to be one television station across the country, I think there is reason to believe that if our children are exposed to crime as entertainment, there will be problems. I think the government has an obligation to do something about that in the hope of preventing crime.

In Switzerland, all males over the age of 18 must own guns. There is in that country a very low crime rate when compared to the crime rates of the western nations. The toughest gun controls in North America are found in the state of New York. I need not comment on the crime rate there; we know it is very high.

Gun control in and of itself is not the answer. I spoke last year on Bill C-83. I detailed at great length many psychological, environmental and cultural changes which ought to be taking place in order to bring about the kind of human change which would give us different attitudes toward guns. We must remember that the gun is a cultural tool which is used in the occupation of many people in this country. If we are going to legislate gun control, the government should have the courage to make a definitive statement as to what the period of registration will be—and that should not be done by order in council. If that were done, our legislation would be far more effective. The legislation might be more effective if people were licensed for life.

That could be done with people who own guns now, remembering that the same restrictive categories could still exist. Every new gun owner should take a course in which he could learn how to handle and properly care for a gun. From there we should work backwards. If a person gets a criminal record, he should lose his licence; if he becomes mentally ill, he should lose his licence; if he becomes addicted to drugs or alcohol, he should lose his licence; if he is careless with a gun and shoots a cow instead of a deer, for instance, he should lose his licence. In that way we could focus on that small section of society which handles guns dangerously.

The law being put forward by this government focuses on some 13 million gun owners and builds up a huge bureaucracy with power to make regulations, to increase fees at any time and in any amount, to shorten the period of registration, and to say to the farmer and the rancher that they may not have guns to get coyotes out of the calving yards. This legislation would allow the bureaucracy to tell northern Canada that the practice of hunting for a livelihood—a tradition which goes back to as far as the recorded history of the Indian and the Inuit—cannot be continued. I submit that that would be very unjust. The government cannot speak about culture in terms of language and forget all the other cultures which exist.

● (1600)

In conclusion, let me say that each and every one of us in this House wants to see the crime rate reduced. The motion we are debating does not say we must control all guns. It seeks to make sure that what we enshrine in legislation remains the law, that we are not voting on a certain provision today only to find it has been totally changed six months after the bill passes.

I have met with gun clubs of my constituency. One is in the city of Camrose, which hon. members may recall is the place of the great "hot dog festival." That gun club said it does not mind regulations so long as they do not infringe upon their right to collect guns, to shoot on a registered shooting range, to apply for a permit or to shoot on someone else's shooting range. They want to be allowed to use guns for sporting purposes. Similarly, ranchers in my constituency do not mind regulations so long as they are allowed to carry guns for the protection of their sheep and cattle and keep predators at bay. It is not as if they disapprove of Bill C-51; they do not trust the government. They are not against this legislation, per se, and I do not know how often I must repeat that. Apparently we must say it often for fear of being misinterpreted.

Let no one say the people of the western provinces are against this legislation per se. They will support such legislation if it is fair. They do not want to see enshrined in this bill some power giving a group of individuals power to change the law by order in council. They do not want bureaucrats alone to have power to put weapons into the prohibited class. Our people want to know the regulations, and if they are changed they want to know how they are changed. That a small group of people should have power to change these regulations arbitrarily is dreadful.

[Mr. Malone.]

Mr. Gordon Towers (Red Deer): Mr. Speaker, when I spoke in the debate yesterday I did not anticipate last night's catastrophe in our capital city. I am sorry it happened and I, too, express my sympathy to the wife and small child of the policeman who lost his life and those wounded in the exercise of their duty. Now you see why I voted for capital punishment, especially for the murder of a policeman. I am satisfied capital punishment is a deterrent, protects our police forces and should be in place for their protection. I do not think the government was right in removing that protection.

Yesterday I charged the Minister of Justice (Mr. Basford) with not knowing what justice is, and I stand by that statement. Unfortunately, the minister saw fit to include my name in the list of names he mentioned in his news release of this morning. I ask the minister—who has just entered the chamber—how long did I speak in yesterday's debate? He knows where I stand, which is why he included my name in his news release. I stand on the side of justice, on the side of protecting people. When criminals use firearms in the commission of a crime, I want to see them punished harshly, for only in this way will we clean up the mess. So long as the cabinet pussyfoots around with the criminal element, crime will remain with us and we shall see a repetition of what happened in Ottawa last night. We must come to grips with the problem.

An hon. Member: Then pass the bill.

Mr. Towers: In his news release, the minister said he did not understand why a group of members—the names appear in the release—spent all day yesterday, and presumably will spend all day today, debating such things as the right of people to collect and to use machine-guns. I point out, Mr. Speaker, that much of the debate yesterday concerned government by order in council and the reverse onus whereby a person is presumed guilty until proven innocent. If a private member issues a news release, it probably remains on the shelves of our newspaper offices; but, if the Minister of Justice issues a news release, its contents go out across the country and we all stand condemned until we prove ourselves innocent. I am prepared to rely on your judgment, Mr. Speaker, and let you decide whether we are filibustering this bill.

The minister also said in his statement—which is misleading—that the young man who did the shooting had a 12-gauge shotgun, a .22 calibre semi-automatic rifle, a 303, a 30-30 and a 30-06. The semi-automatic had been bought in Ontario within the last month. He would say no more because the man had been charged; but he said the semi-automatic weapon had been purchased within the month, within the past two weeks. How irrelevant can a statement be? It was phony, misleading. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I plead my case and leave it in your hands.

Mr. Doug Neil (Moose Jaw): Mr. Speaker, I did not intend yesterday taking part in the debate on this motion because it has to do with regulations. I spoke briefly on legislation by regulation. But the minister having earlier today issued a statement in which he included my name among others, I feel it my duty to speak.

I have been concerned over the years about the freedom of the individual and preserving our democratic way of life. I have seen the government opposite eroding, since 1968, our individual freedoms. Yesterday I spoke of government by regulation and said that regulations are never debated on the floor of the House of Commons. Some civil servant prepares them and a minister passes them. They are promulgated, as the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams) said, in the dark of the night. Mr. Speaker, parliament is the place to debate legislation. Parliament tells the people of this country what laws are in process of enactment. But when you make law by regulation, not only do the people of Canada not know the law but many legislators, many members of parliament, do not know it. How can the Minister of Justice (Mr. Basford) say that because members of the opposition debated this bill they are somehow responsible for yesterday's tragic death of a policeman?

● (1610)

I gather, from reading the statement he made over the air, that the minister is suggesting members of the opposition have no business to debate a bill. The reason I and other members of parliament are here is to debate bills, examine legislation, make amendments and let the people of Canada know what is the law. That is democracy, the right to speak your mind, to say what you think. However, the Minister of Justice, the man who should be concerned about our democratic way of life, is suggesting that members of the opposition should not be speaking in a debate in this House.

I wonder what Canada is coming to, when a responsible minister of the Crown suggests that parliamentarians, opposition members, should not be speaking on a bill. I give the minister notice that as long as I am here in Ottawa as a member of parliament, I intend to debate every bill and every amendment that I believe is important to my constituents and the people of Canada. There is no way the minister or any other member on that side will prevent me from debating legislation.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Neil: If the Minister of Justice is an honourable man, he will stand in this House and withdraw the statements he made over the radio today with regard to certain members on this side of the House.

Mr. Bob Brisco (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, in speaking to this amendment I must say that in a strange way I am honoured by the fact that in making his statement over the radio today, the Minister of Justice (Mr. Basford) singled out the hon. member for Kootenay West for particular attention by making reference to my constituency, the only member of the several named by the minister whose constituency was identified. I can only assume that he had some particular interest in that constituency, although he apparently does not have any particular interest for the concerns expressed by members on this issue. If the minister is anywhere in this House, he is certainly not in his seat. If he is doing anything, it is certainly not paying attention to the legitimate concerns of members who have spoken thus far on this issue. If the minister is prepared to single out Kootenay West, I invite him to come to Kootenay West at the time of the next federal election campaign. Let him put his name on the line as a candidate for the Liberal party in Kootenay West. We would be delighted to see him defeated. I assume that is part of his passing interest in my constituency.

The minister expressed concern about opposition members wasting the time of the House. If the minister had not shot off his mouth in such a reprehensible and irresponsible manner, we would today be dealing with the issues before us and not wasting the time of the House by addressing ourselves to the insults handed out by the minister. In his statement the minister made reference to the fact that yesterday we were discussing the safe storage of guns. He said we were weakening the provision relating to the safe storage of weapons. That is a categorical untruth. No reference was made to the safe storage of guns. That was not an issue for debate before this House yesterday.

If the minister would care to take the time to read the minutes of the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs, he would see that I made specific inquiries of him and addressed very genuine concerns to him on the subject of safe storage of guns. I feel qualified to address myself to that subject because I have much greater knowledge of that subject than the minister and half of his people. However, the minister would seek to distort and twist the truth. We went on to say we were concerned about reducing the sentences for the use of guns. He said that without the benefit of any explanation. It was a flat statement, with nothing attached to it. The minister knows that in debate yesterday this House was concerned with only one point of one amendment when dealing with the subject of reduced sentences. That was that the sentence for a person having a prohibited weapon should be greater than the sentence for a person in violation of the law with a restricted weapon. One weapon you clearly cannot have. One weapon is prohibited. The other is restricted. That was the only reference.

When it comes to reducing sentences for the use of guns, I draw Your Honour's attention to statements I made previously in this House at an earlier stage when we were dealing with this bill. I recounted, for the benefit of the minister and hon. members, that at my personal urging two of my constituents preferred charges against a big game outfitter in northern British Columbia who threatened them with an unregistered revolver. I put this on record and I challenge the minister to explain why it would happen. My constituents appeared in court in Fort Nelson, not once but three times, at a cost to the taxpayers of goodness knows how many dollars. There were three separate hearings before the judge. When they finally appeared on the issue of an unregistered gun, having a gun in a place other than a dwelling place, after a severe reprimand from the judge the accused was relieved of any further burden of responsibility. There was no fine, no jail sentence. What possible use can there be to legislation in which we seek out the criminal, if the courts are not going to impose a sentence that has any meaning?

I have asked the minister to provide this House with statistics as to how many people were accused of contravening the firearms legislation, how many were sentenced in the last year, and what was the manner of the sentence. For example, was it a token fine, or a jail sentence. I have been met with stony silence from the minister. I am certain that if the facts were disclosed to the public we would find that the courts are not carrying out the mandate they have been given. That is the concern of Canadians. It is not the legislation; it is the interpretation of the law and the manner in which it is carried out.

The minister's conduct last night can only be described as ghoulish, callous and macabre. No one in this House regrets more than I do the events that occurred in this city last night. I share, with my fellow members, respect for the law and for the police who carry out the law, sometimes in very dangerous and difficult circumstances. I share that respect and I share that concern. I shared it enough to vote in favour of capital punishment, which the cabinet opposed. But it cannot go unsaid that the minister, throughout this afternoon's expressions of concern by those members he affronted, has failed to address himself to that issue and to make apologies for his statement.

● (1620)

I have said enough on this subject. I am sure the people of Kootenay West will understand my outspoken reaction. I hope the minister will withdraw his comments.

Mr. Leonard C. Jones (Moncton): Mr. Speaker, speaking on this bill may be a pure waste of time. It is obvious to me that those who drafted it have not done their homework. If they had, there would not be clauses in it to say that the most important part would be implemented by regulation. Before going on to that, I want to echo the remarks made by some of the previous speakers. They were all from one party. I do not belong to that party, nor to any party in this House. But for the Minister of Justice (Mr. Basford) to have the audacity last night to make the remarks about members of this House in such a terrible way is certainly unethical and improper.

Parliament is the place where we debate and discuss legislation and where we should be able to discuss regulations. We try to protect the rights of individuals. I am sure every member of parliament sympathizes with the family of the deceased policeman from Ottawa. Also we, as members of parliament, represent our constituents and purport to live as a democratic state. And this place is purported to be a place where we protect that democratic state by the right of debate and the right of free speech. I suggest that the very man who should be most interested in the protection of individuals and their rights, violated one of the most important rights, the right to speak in parliament, last night and this morning by doing just what he did. I and other members of parliament are supposed to express the views of our constituents, and we should express them sincerely, frankly and honestly. I repeat, the remarks of the minister were deplorable; they were unethical.

But orders in council—what are they? They take us back to the days of King John and the Magna Carta. The whole purpose of the Magna Carta was to get rid of orders in council or arbitrary decrees of government. These orders in council permit the delegation of power to the cabinet, in effect to the bureaucracy, to operate and provide criminal law in this country. How much can we belittle parliament? How much can we belittle the sense of our constituents? I recall that 31 months ago, in December, 1974, two policemen were killed in my constituency. I did not hear anyone in this House say then that the death of those two policemen resulted from anything that any member of parliament did here or did not do. They were brutally killed. They were killed by vehement criminals. This bill would not have saved their lives. This bill would not have saved the life of that policeman last night, either.

For the Minister of Justice to leave the impression with Canadians generally and, in particular, with people in the Ottawa area, that anyone who opposes this bill or is not prepared to support it is responsible for the acts of criminals who commit murder, is just not proper; it is unethical. For the Minister of Justice, who holds the highest office of any barrister or lawyer in this country, to make a statement of that kind and to involve members of parliament in statements of that nature, is most improper.

Before coming here I acted as defence counsel. I still practise law, and I am not ashamed of it. I also acted as criminal prosecutor. I had some respect for those who achieved the office of minister of justice, whether under provincial or federal jurisdiction, but after hearing those remarks last night and hearing them again this morning, I have my doubts. It is the type of thing which reduces respect for law and order in our country, to hear a minister of justice make a statement such as the minister made. It should be withdrawn very apologetically.

A good number of my constituents not only oppose the legislation by order in council with respect to this bill, but with respect to any bill. One hon. member drew attention to the fact that in 1976 more than 3,200 orders in council were passed in Canada at the federal level. Only ten went through in Great Britain. This is no way to operate criminal law. The problem with the bill is that it is a catch-all bill; it has everything in it, and not much of any of it is good. I repeat, the Minister of Justice, in presenting this bill, has delegated so much of its powers to order in council that it is, to me, a clear indication that the government is not ready, has not done its homework and is not prepared to tell us what is in the substantive part of the bill.

Gun control is really not the answer to the problems of law and order and crime in this country. My feeling is that the legislation is likely to create more problems, more bureaucracy and more difficulty than we have now. We are taking a backward step, first by introducing gun control; second, by legislating by regulation or order in council. I would suggest that the amendment is quite a proper one, although I am not sure I would even support the amendment if it meant the bill would go through.

Mr. Peter Elzinga (Pembina): Mr. Speaker, I rise with a certain feeling of reservation to speak on motion No. 10. It deals with regulations, which the government is so good at since it is so hesitant to bring forward its legislation to the House where it can be discussed. However, I am prompted to say a few words, and I shall be brief. When I heard the hon. member for Red Deer (Mr. Towers) rise to participate in the discussion of this motion, as well as the hon. member for Moose Jaw (Mr. Neil), I was reminded of what we have seen from this government so often in the short period of time I have been in the House. There are so many discrepancies in what they say across the country. We find the Minister of Justice (Mr. Basford) making statements to the media condemning the opposition for exercising its right to express its views in this chamber. We find him putting the blame on us for a very sad event which took place last night in the city of Ottawa. All members of the chamber extend their sympathies to the wife and child of the police officer who was killed, but I think one of the lowest things an individual can do in this society is to attempt to put the blame for an incident like this on a select group of individuals.

● (1630)

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please. I deeply regret having to interrupt the hon. member, but it has been the long-standing practice of the House that statements made outside the House are not introduced into the House for debate. It seems to me that since we have started the debate this afternoon we have been discussing a statement made outside the House. I must at this time inform hon. members that motion No. 10 is before the House for debate, and I would ask the hon. member to direct his remarks to that motion.

Mr. Elzinga: I stand corrected, Mr. Speaker, but I must say that I am somewhat puzzled. I sat in my seat and listened to the debate this afternoon, which prompted me to contribute some remarks, and I am puzzled that Your Honour sees fit to correct me when I have not extended my participation to the bounds of some other members. But I will return to motion No. 10.

Here, again, we find that what the government hopes to do is regulate by order in council. We would appreciate these regulations being brought before the chamber. I think that in a good many ways this amendment will correct the hypocrisy which this government so often shows to the people of Canada. The hon. member for Red Deer (Mr. Towers) stated that last night's incident probably would not have occurred had this government not seen fit to abolish capital punishment. I believe it to be a deterrent. I would be curious to know the position, now, of the Minister of State for Fitness and Amateur Sport (Mrs. Campagnolo) and whether her position on that very important topic has changed since she entered the cabinet.

Mrs. Campagnolo: Why should it?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please. I regret to interrupt the hon. member again, and I would ask for the indulgence of all hon. members. We are all aware of last night's incident and we all deplore what happened, but again I must remind the hon. member that the House is debating motion No. 10. I would ask him to direct his remarks to that motion.

Mr. Malone: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I have heard your judgment and I have great respect for it. I think members on this side of the House would like to focus upon motion No. 10, but in view of the very serious nature of the charge that was made, whether inside or outside the House, the fact remains that it concerns members who are inside the House. The matter can be dispensed with very simply by the Minister of Justice apologizing to the members he charged, I think in a most brutal way, and then we can go on with motion No. 10.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please. The Chair might explain at this time why it was so tolerant at the beginning. I listened to hon. members making remarks on last night's incident and on the so-called statement, which the Chair has not been made aware of, but having heard several speeches I noted that the matter was becoming a debate. This is why the Chair intervened at this point. I would ask hon. members to debate motion No. 10. On that ground I cannot recognize the hon. member's point of order.

Mr. Elzinga: Mr. Speaker, I will abide by your ruling. I will respectfully sit down, since what I have to say does not pertain to motion No. 10. What I shall do is find a motion to which my comments do pertain, and I shall participate in the debate a little later.

Mr. Gordon Ritchie (Dauphin): Mr. Speaker, I should like to say a few words on this motion which makes reference to a peace officer. I thought the highest peace officer in the land was the minister of justice, at least during the time he holds his portfolio. In deference to Your Honour's ruling, may I say that I was one of those named last night as contributing to the death of the unfortunate police officer. I just want to say that the minister should in the House repeat what he said, so we can debate whether or not the statement he made last night falls within the purview of this legislation. I suggest that the minister was talking about the legislation and was suggesting we should not continue to discuss it because by doing so we will contribute to homicide and other such crimes. I would add that so far as the amendment is concerned it is a modest one which will clarify and make more reasonable the reporting of incidents to peace officers as required under the act.

Mr. Elmer M. MacKay (Central Nova): Mr. Speaker, may I say, on this motion, that it is obvious that the Minister of Justice (Mr. Basford) must have some responsibility for the regulations which will be brought forward pursuant to the legislation. If I may add to what members said earlier this afternoon, one can only wonder how much responsibility will be exhibited by the Minister of Justice, who holds a very special portfolio by virtue of his office, when regulations are brought in from time to time, in view of the type of incident which has aroused the wrath of parliament and which has been discussed here this afternoon. As far as I and my colleagues are concerned, no member has the right to reflect upon speeches made in this House. For the minister to go outside the House, as he did, and name members and impute motives to them for speaking in the House of Commons on legislation, and on the very type of subject that we are discussing at this moment, is reprehensible.

The minister has talked about taking the advice of the police. I would remind the House, as others have, that when it suits the minister to take the advice of the police for his own political purposes, he does so. The minister says we must have this kind of power in order to facilitate law enforcement. That is fine, Mr. Speaker, but in concluding I would remind the minister that when the police literally pleaded with him not to abolish capital punishment, he did not seek to follow their advice. As a matter of fact, he ignored it. So the minister cannot have it both ways. He follows the advice of the police when it suits him politically to do so. When it does not, he seeks to ignore their advice.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Is the House ready for the question?

Some hon. Members: Question.

• (1640)

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Pursuant to section 11 of Standing Order 75, the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

Mr. Gordon Ritchie (Dauphin) moved:

Motion No. 11.

That Bill C-51, to amend the Criminal Code, the Customs Tariff, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act and the Prisons and Reformatories Act, be amended in clause 3 by striking out lines 5 and 6 at page 24 and substituting the following therefor:

"or abandoned, does not within a reasonable time"—

He said: Mr. Speaker, this is an amendment of form to make more practical what has been a desirable event, that guns which are stolen or abandoned should be reported. However, to report "forthwith" means "immediately". I presume that could be at two o'clock in the morning or four o'clock in the morning, even if the person is 100 miles from a police station. The person would be derelict if he did not rush for the 100 miles and report that a weapon had been stolen.

Substituting "reasonable time" would be something people would understand. In the long run it would have the same effect. To always present civilians with statements like, "If you do not reply, you are subject to a fine", or, "If you do not do this, you are liable to imprisonment", only breeds in the ordinary person a disrespect for the law, and sometimes fear. The terminology is slightly better and slightly less authoritative. It does not detract from the fact that the reporting should be done. There will be better compliance with the law by individuals if this useful amendment is accepted.

Hon. Ron Basford (Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, the bill as originally submitted to committee used the word "forthwith", as the hon. member for Dauphin (Mr. Ritchie) has pointed out. However, the amendment he has moved was moved by the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams) in committee. I moved an amendment in committee, as well, that it read "with reasonable dispatch". The hon. member for Calgary North, the official justice critic of the Conservative party, withdrew his amendment, which is the amendment now on the floor, in favour of mine. The two phrases, "within reasonable time" and "within reasonable dispatch" in law mean the same thing. The only merit to the phrase "within reasonable dispatch" is that it is consistent with other provisions of the Criminal Code. It seems to me that this amendment should commend itself to the colleagues of the hon. member for Calgary North.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Is the House ready for the question?

Some hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the said motion?

Some hon. Members: No.

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: On division.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): I declare the motion lost.

Motion No. 11 (Mr. Ritchie) negatived.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): The House will move to consideration of motion No. 13.

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, motion 13 was debated yesterday.

Mr. Gordon Ritchie (Dauphin) moved:

Motion No. 15.

That Bill C-51, to amend the Criminal Code, the Customs Tariff, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act and the Prisons and Reformatories Act, be amended in clause 3 by striking out line 16 at page 25 and substituting the following therefor:

"information, except details concerning the makes or serial numbers of shotguns or rifles of a type, kind or design commonly used in Canada for hunting or sporting purposes, as is prescribed by the".

Motion No. 16.

That Bill C-51, to amend the Criminal Code, the Customs Tariff, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act and the Prisons and Reformatories Act, be amended in clause 3 by striking out lines 29 to 36 at page 25.

Mr. Arnold Peters (Timiskaming): Mr. Speaker, I should like to say a few words on motions Nos. 15 and 16. Motion No. 16 relates to section 103(1)(d), which reads as follows:

—mail a copy of the record and inventory relating to restricted weapons to the commissioner or to any person authorized by subsection 106.2(5) to issue a permit to carry on the business in accordance with any request in writing made by the commissioner or any such person.

They are being asked to keep inventories of the number of firearms they have, and to keep a record of transactions which take place. This record and inventory must be produced for inspection at the request of any police officer, police constable or other person authorized by regulation. In addition, it is being recommended that subparagraph (d) be removed. Prohibited weapons would include all hand guns with the exception of some air pistols. This has been a matter of record for some time. As far as registered guns are concerned, the system has been to make a registration, and the registration carries the documentation for the gun which is kept by the person. There is also a record kept by the store, the agent, the gunsmith or whoever may be running the business. This would also involve a collector. He is required to keep in a safe place a record of those guns. If a police officer asks for that record, it will contain such things as the time, the day, the name, the address, the type of weapon and the serial number of the weapon.

● (1650)

This matter was left with the gun shop or the gun agent, and it seems to me it was a fairly satisfactory way of operating as there is seldom any need for this information unless a question arises concerning stolen guns or guns used for an illegal purpose. If we made them restricted weapons, some collectors and museums would still be able to have them, as provided for in other parts of the bill. We would need a larger bureaucracy to deal with the information sent in from gun shops, which would probably be fed into a computer and made available to all police agencies in this country and to Interpol. This clause indicates that a business is not only one that deals in restricted weapons, but also one that is involved in the manufacturing, buying or selling wholesale or retail, or in importing ammunition. The clause requires that records shall be kept of transactions with respect to such weapons or firearms in a form prescribed by the commissioner, and then goes on to indicate that ammunition is included.

In northern Ontario we have a large tourist industry, and it has been one of the perks of good Conservatives who run grocery stores or an outfitters operations to sell licences for hunting partridge, deer and moose. Usually they sell the licences and the ammunition, small shotgun shells for duck hunting, and two or three kinds of shells for bear hunting, as well as .22 ammunition. It is a fairly lucrative business. The goods are easy to store, but if they have to keep records and report periodically, there will not be much advantage.

Mr. Basford: You are misreading the bill.

Mr. Peters: Maybe, but it seems to me that if they have to send in records relative to restricted weapons, they will probably have to do it for other weapons and ammunition as well. None of these small stores has facilities for safe keeping, but I do not think anybody goes in to steal ammunition. I only know of a few instances of theft of ammunition. Usually there is a break-in for another reason, and ammunition is just picked up.

I am concerned when guns are not kept in a safe place in stores. For that reason I am very happy about the regulations which mean Canadian Tire, Eaton's, Simpson's and such stores will no longer display guns on the counter like a bargain in shirts or sweaters. That is just asking for trouble. It is surprising the number of guns that are stolen at Canadian Tire stores—sometimes by the staff, but mostly because somebody just picks them up. I think if you went into a hardware store and asked for centre-fired .38 shells, you would get some pretty strange looks, because they are obviously for a revolver and there is small call for such ammunition as most collectors and gun clubs do their own loading. What we are really talking about is limitation of shotgun shells and hunting rifle shells.

If all this reporting is required, it will put some people out of business. Maybe that is a good idea. I think there is merit in hardware stores selling guns, because they are equipped to do it and have staff who know something about guns. Some time ago I bought a 303 sporting rifle for $25 at Simpson's in Toronto. That can be a pretty powerful gun, depending on the type of ammunition used with it. They had hundreds of them, and anybody could walk out with an armful because, of course, they cannot be wrapped. Maybe we should limit their sale and the sale of ammunition. But we should not limit it to the point that everyone has to report every time they sell a box of shells, shotgun shells or 12, 16 or 20-gauge shot for birds. That should not be restricted. The minister may not even intend to restrict it, but he has left it up to the commissioner and the commissioner will damn well want to do that. He will want to have the whole thing under his jurisdiction, because it will mean more work, more employees and, therefore, a higher grade in the civil service.

● (1700)

I am being realistic. I know that if you get more work, you have more people under you. Hasn't every member of parliament found that out? It seems to me that is what the commissioner will do. So I support the withdrawal of the provision requiring the reporting of ammunition. I would like to hear the minister indicate what he thinks of the system we now use for registering prohibited guns, fully automatic rifles, Thompson sub-machine guns, Bren machine-guns, in operating condition. The gunsmith enters each transaction involving such guns in his books. He records the time and place of the sale, and he has the signatures. The inspector is allowed to look at the book at any time.

My colleague and I were in a gun shop the other day. I asked the gunsmith how many guns he had sold and he told me that he never counted them. But he showed me the book and asked me how far I wanted to go back, two or three years. If an inspector wanted to see when a certain transaction took place, he would see the time a gun was bought or sold recorded in the book and the serial number of the gun. The information is all down there. If that information were to be sent to the commissioner, he would establish a key punch operator and other people necessary to put the information into a computer. One day we will have computer tapes coming out of our ears. Instead of getting a report, we will get computer tapes.

I honestly believe that we will have problems in registering ammunition. There is no question that ammunition is dangerous, but I have not heard of anybody except very small kids taking gunpowder out of ammunition and making a bomb out of it. I have not heard of other people doing that. Ammunition is only involved in the use of guns. We are establishing control over gun transactions; therefore I do not think we need to control ammunition. If we get to the point where all transactions are made through the commissioner and are registered periodically, we will be heading toward the proposition which I believe is at the back of the minister's mind, that all guns be confiscated and eliminated. Surely that is not what this bill intends, and it is not what I wish accomplished. So I hope the minister can indicate that he does not wish to have all these transactions recorded. I would like him to tell us whether the system used for prohibited weapons has been adequate.

Hon. Ron Basford (Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, I assume that the hon. member for Timiskaming (Mr. Peters) has been speaking with reference to the copy of the bill as introduced to the House at first reading, rather than the bill we are dealing with at report stage, because considerable amendments have been made in this regard in committee. The hon. member referred to the reporting requirements which in the initial bill applied to the sale not only of restricted weapons but of firearms generally. The provision was amended in committee to make the reporting requirement in substance exactly the same as it is at present in the Criminal Code, section 96(1), where a dealer carrying on the business of restricted weapons shall, among other things, send a copy of the record to the commisioner in accordance with any request. So the substance of the provision in the bill before us is precisely the same as in the present Criminal Code.

The point made by the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams) was that the requirement for reporting an inventory of long guns to the commissioner was unnecessary. I and the RCMP agreed with the hon. member, and therefore it seemed that the amendments proposed to correct that situation and return to the existing language in the Criminal Code, which only relates to restricted weapons, was agreeable to all members of the committee and the amendment before us is no longer necessary.

[Mr. Peters.]

The hon. member raised the question of the small dealer. There is no requirement for reporting by a small dealer of ammunition. What is provided is simply that he must report any stolen ammunition. He does not have to report his inventory of ammunition. He simply has to keep his ammunition in accordance with the safe storage requirements as set out. I gather that the hon. member agrees with that. So I suggest that we have met the points raised by the hon. member for Timiskaming.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

SUBJECT MATTER OF QUESTIONS TO BE DEBATED

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): It is my duty, pursuant to Standing Order 40, to inform the House that the questions to be raised tonight at the time of adjournment are as follows: the hon. member for Windsor West (Mr. Gray)—Energy—Oil—Suggestion extra revenue be placed in fund to be used only for exploration; the hon. member for Winnipeg South Centre (Mr. McKenzie)—Air Canada—Proposed committee investigation of allegation large number of employees want to leave Quebec; the hon. member for Central Nova (Mr. MacKay)—Information—Possibility of legislation to provide citizens with right of access to government files.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

CRIMINAL LAW AMENDMENT ACT, 1977

AMENDMENTS TO CRIMINAL CODE

The House resumed consideration of Bill C-51, to amend the Criminal Code, the Customs Tariff, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act and the Prisons and Reformatories Act, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs.

Mr. Gordon Ritchie (Dauphin): Mr. Speaker, I would like to say a word or two about this amendment and to discuss in a general way the problem of the registration requirement on small dealers in particular. I question the value of this registration. It seems to me that we are supporting thereby the concept that everything should be recorded. It seems to me that we must be realistic. As we know, small business is beset with innumerable papers, questionnaires, records, and so on. I suggest that this information does not need to be sent to the commissioner. In my experience, small dealers receive demands from StatsCan and from this and that department. If you are a professional, you receive demands for information from your professional organizations, so that the problem of keeping records is large.

I would say that most records are not well kept because people get annoyed and do not bother with keeping records. In the United States, President Ford set up a task force to look into the matter of record-keeping and to see if something could not be done for small business in this respect. I see little point in this provision. It is fine on paper, but we forget the great amount of work involved for small business in keeping records.

• (1710)

If there is to be no supervision of these records, how well will they be kept? Records are only valuable if they are properly kept. There is an old saying to the effect that there are three kinds of statistics: good ones, bad ones, and plain lies. I suspect many of the records which will be kept by dealers will fall into the latter category, because there does not seem to be any method of seeing that good records are kept. When a police officer is investigating a case involving a gun, he will want to know where it was purchased and he will probably go to gun dealers, but with changes in personnel, and that sort of thing, I wonder how effective the records of gun dealers will be. I think this is an added burden and probably very little will come out of it.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Is the House ready for the question?

Some hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Although the two motions were grouped for debate, the votes will have to be separated. Therefore, the question is on motion No. 15. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Pursuant to Standing Order 75(11), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

The question is now on motion No. 16. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Pursuant to Standing Order 75(11), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

Mr. Doug Neil (Moose Jaw) moved:

Motion No. 17.

That Bill C-51, to amend the Criminal Code, the Customs Tariff, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act and the Prisons and Reformatories Act, be amended in Clause 3 by striking out lines 29 to 34 at page 26 and substituting the following therefor:

"(a) handle, store, display any restricted weapon or firearm in a manner that contravenes any regulation made by the Governor in Council pursuant to paragraph 106.8(a); or"—

He said: Mr. Speaker, I would like to make a few comments in connection with motion No. 17. Basically, it would delete the word "advertise" in subsection 6(a) as well as the word "ammunition". The amendment also refers to regulations. I spoke earlier today, as well as yesterday, about regulations so I will not repeat my comments in that regard. I can understand the need for regulations with respect to the handling, storing and displaying of any restricted weapon or firearm, but I question the regulation of advertising for the simple reason that every time a merchant wishes to advertise, both he and the editor of the newspaper will have to examine the advertising very carefully in order to assure themselves that it falls within the regulations. I think this is a burden which should not be placed upon either the newspaper or the merchant. That is why I ask that the word "advertise" be stricken from this section.

I listened with interest to the hon. member for Timiskaming (Mr. Peters) when he spoke about ammunition. Ammunition is handled by many small stores. It never really creates any problems, as the hon. member said. Ammunition is very seldom stolen. If it is, it is usually stolen by youngsters. I can see no need for regulations with respect to the advertising of ammunition or with respect to the handling or storing of ammunition, because if you go into any country store in the west you will find that almost every merchant carries on his shelves ammunition, whether it be .22 ammunition or shotgun shells, particularly in the fall when people go duck hunting, goose hunting or hunting for upland game. I do not believe ammunition should be subject to regulation, because it does not create a hazard. If it is subject to regulation, merchants, particularly small merchants, will be faced with one more government regulation in the operation of their businesses. For these reasons I ask that my amendment be accepted. I ask that the word "advertise" and the word "ammunition" be removed from subsection 6(a).

Mr. Stan Schumacher (Palliser): Mr. Speaker, I support the motion of the hon. member for Moose Jaw (Mr. Neil). I deplore the continued extension of this government by regulation. But apart from that, there should be some explanation of what is wrong with advertising. Whether restricted weapons have to be treated in the same way as prohibited weapons is a moot point, but even accepting that, some weapons, which are products, may have certain virtues which other products do not have within their class. Restricted weapons are not prohibited. They can be used. They are marketable commodities. Why cannot we have some advertising to make the public aware of the relative merits of these commodities? What harm will that do? Why does the minister think he has to run everything in this country? I know my friends in the New Democratic Party probably do not agree with the idea or the worth of advertising, but surely everybody else in this chamber recognizes its merits and the fact that it can aid in the development of our economy and in the development of better products for the use of consumers.

I also agree with my colleague's remarks about ammunition, because surely the operative thing is the weapon, and if we have proper controls over weapons—not that I believe there is anything in this bill which will improve the situation—ammunition is perfectly harmless without a mechanism with which to discharge it. I believe there is a great deal of merit in my hon. colleague's motion and I urge hon. members to support it.

Mr. Arnold Peters (Timiskaming): Mr. Speaker, I spoke about ammunition. The minister raised two interesting points. The other day he caught me without having read one of the amendments. I have the reprint of the bill as amended and reported by the standing committee, so I have the right one. The minister protests about ammunition not being included, but it is included in this subsection. A gun without ammunition is not dangerous. You cannot use a gun without ammunition, or ammunition without a gun. They are used together.

● (1720)

It is true that the governor in council will impose restrictions by regulation, but I do not think it is accurate to say that restrictions would apply merely to the selling of weapons because you must consider, as well, the sale of ammunition. Proposed section 103(1) concerns people involved in the manufacturing, buying or selling at wholesale or retail, etc., of restricted weapons, and subsection (2) speaks of lost, mislaid or stolen weapons. Clearly, you must report a commercial transaction as well as the lose of a firearm. I raise this point because I am concerned about what will happen to the little store, to the little guy who sells ammunition. These small commercial outlets will need to be licensed and we shall need to go to a great deal of trouble to licence them all. Frankly, I do not think it is possible to control every sale or transaction involving ammunition, because ammunition is bootlegged in hunting caps, and so on. Therefore, we are kidding ourselves if we think we can enforce every such regulation the governor in council will make.

[Mr. Neil.]

I am not particularly worried about the advertising of restricted weapons in magazines. Most magazines devoted to hunting or fishing advertise guns, ammunition, fishing tackle, etc. You will see such advertisements in Rod and Gun and Fish and Game. The Winchester gun bible advertises guns—

An hon. Member: Do they really call it that?

Mr. Peters: Yes. You will see gun advertisements in various catalogues known as hunters' bibles. I see no objection to weapons being advertised in such magazines. They are mainly sales magazines for hunting buffs. Half of their content is devoted to fishing tackle, to all kinds of rods, worms, flies, and so on. The other half is devoted to guns and ammunition, to what size of shot you need if you are duck hunting, or what equipment you must use on moose, deer, bears and other animals. Magazine articles talk about the number of grains per charge, muzzle velocity and mention all those topics of interest to the professional hunter. Such magazines are aimed at a narrow segment of the public, a segment interested in hunting and fishing. I see no difficulty concerning advertising in such magazines. I suggest it is nonsense to prohibit the advertising of guns but to permit the advertising of ammunition, because the ammunition is no good without the gun, and vice-versa. Therefore, you must control neither, or both. I point out that the last words of the proposed amendment read:

> —any regulation made by the governor in council pursuant to paragraph 106.8(a).

Paragraph 106.8(a) sets out the regulations. Clearly, the governor in council can make any regulation he wishes. Therefore, there will be no great difficulty regulating ammunition or guns. But I fail to see the purpose of restricting advertising if you are going to allow small stores to handle ammunition. Hand guns, of course, are in the prohibited class, but in my area—perhaps it is different in other parts of the country—you will see hardware stores displaying two or three .38s or perhaps a .45 Magnum long hand gun in the window.

There is nothing wrong with this. The stores do not sell those guns to everybody. Before you buy a gun you must get a permit from the police. Then you must get a permit to carry it, and you must get a permit from the attorney general of Ontario to use it for hunting. Frankly, I see no reason for restricting advertising. What difference would such restrictions make? I think we are just kidding ourselves if we think restrictions on advertising will do any good. If we countenance regulations which affect hunting and the sale of ammunition to hunters, we shall eliminate from business a lot of small people who handle ammunition and sell guns. If that is the government's intention, it should say so and give us a chance either to agree or disagree with its position. As things stand, I am not sure what it intends; therefore I shall come down on the side of my inclination and opt for a provision not overly restrictive.

I concede that the regulations will be beneficial. Mr. Speaker, I am not worried about the effect of the restrictions on those who know what they are doing. The restrictions will affect those who sell guns over the counter as bargains, in a totally uncontrolled manner, those who sell guns to any and all, who have no interest in the gun, know nothing about it, and do not care about the intentions of the person buying the gun. I submit this bill already contains sufficient power to regulate. We do not need to be so restrictive as to squeeze out those engaged in the normal course of commerce, especially in northern Canada where people's attitudes to the use of guns are different from the attitudes in urban centres.

• (1730)

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Is the House ready for the question?

Some hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): The question is on motion No. 17 standing in the name of the hon. member for Moose Jaw (Mr. Neil). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the said motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Pursuant to Standing Order 75(11) the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred. The House will now proceed to motions Nos. 18 and 19 which are grouped for debate but which are to be voted on separately.

Mr. Woolliams: Mr. Speaker, I have a record which I am trying to keep. May I ask the numbers of the last two motions on which we voted?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Motions Nos. 16 and 17. The last question put was on motion No. 17.

Mr. Woolliams: The reason I ask is because my motion No. 19 is exactly the same as that of the hon. member for Moose Jaw (Mr. Neil), motion No. 25. I prefer the hon. member for Moose Jaw to speak on it rather than myself because he is more knowledgeable on this subject.

Mr. Neil: Mr. Speaker, I understand and we will deal with motion No. 18, and motion No. 19 is now being withdrawn. Is that correct?

Mr. Woolliams: Yes.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): If that is the wish of the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams), motion No. 19 will be withdrawn. Is that agreed?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion No. 19 (Mr. Woolliams) withdrawn.

Mr. Stan Schumacher (Palliser) moved:

Motion No. 18.

That Bill C-51, An Act to amend the Criminal Code, the Customs Tariff, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act and the Prisons and Reformatories Act, be amended in Clause 3 by striking out line 24 at page 27 and substituting the following therefor:

"to the applicant within 15 days of the receipt by the firearms officers of both the aforementioned application and further information required under subsection (8)."

He said: Mr. Speaker, the purpose of this motion is to amend the bill in order to require a person receiving an application for firearms acquisition certificate to make a decision within a reasonable period of time. My amendment asks that the official make that decision within 15 days.

The firearms acquisition certificate is the keystone of this bill. It is required by those wishing to purchase certain types of firearms, a much enlarged category as a result of the government's proposal in this regard, and will affect many hundreds of thousands of citizens. It will result in the establishment of a much larger bureaucracy.

We know how the bureaucrats work, if I can use that term. In many cases it is questionable whether they do work. In any event a great number of people are experiencing an ever-increasing amount of delay in having their requests dealt with by governments at all levels.

As long as we have governments like the present one which wants to encroach further and further into the lives and activities of decent, law-abiding citizens, we will have more and more bureaucrats dealing with the reasonable requests of these people. The bureaucrats will say that they are overburdened because there are too many applications to be dealt with. They will make all sorts of excuses for delaying legitimate requests.

Something should be written into this law to require these officials to exercise their duties within a reasonable period of time. When an application for a firearms acquisition certificate is made, it should be dealt with within 15 days. I am open to suggestions of a reasonable nature as to whether that time limit is appropriate. I feel it is. If you require a firearm, you want it before the hunting season is over so that you can enjoy the benefits of that part of the country in which you live. Otherwise, you will have to wait until the next season.

One criticism of this bill is that it is very restrictive for the large majority of Canadians who wish to enjoy the benefits of this country. That is one of the great advantages of Canada, that it is spacious. There are large recreational facilities for hunting and the like. However, it will be much more heavily regulated by the federal government as a result of its reaction to very emotional concerns.

We are dealing with this as a matter of emotion rather than looking at the practicalities. As much practicality as possible should be built into this legislation. I know that it would be very difficult because this legislation is impractical from beginning to end. Nevertheless, wherever we can, we should try to do this. I suggest a time limit on these people so that the ordinary citizen can exercise his legal right and force them to act within a reasonable time. I urge the House to give serious consideration to accepting my motion No. 18 to amend this particular clause.

Mr. Gordon Ritchie (Dauphin): Mr. Speaker, I wish to say a few words in support of this amendment which deals with a most important aspect of the bill, presuming that the legislation will aid in the prevention of homicides. Most of this prevention would be as a result of control officers being aware of an applicant for a gun certificate who may be unstable, have a criminal record or some such thing. I suspect that a criminal would not apply for a certificate. He would obtain a gun in the same way he has always done.

There may be an occasional applicant who is mentally unbalanced. Speaking from my experience, if I had to decide as to whether such a person should have a gun certificate, I do not know if I could make a very good guess. Many people might be suspected of being unstable, but they get along pretty well in society, staying out of trouble.

● (1740)

If the legislation is to have any value at all, the government will have to depend on the actions and judgment of those who are issuing these certificates. But there is nothing here to specify the time available in which they can make up their minds when a person who applies for a certificate will get one. Suppose these officials are uncertain whether to issue a certificate or not. Will they spin out time by making up some bureaucratic excuse, allowing the applicant to wait indefinitely? There should certainly be some means whereby the officials, or the minister, will be required to make up their minds within a certain period whether a person should receive a certificate or not.

It may be that a period of two weeks is not sufficient. If the case has to be investigated, it might take some time for information to be gathered from outlying areas. Nevertheless, a time limit of some sort ought to be set. My hon. friend from Palliser (Mr. Schumacher) has told us that he is easy about the precise extent of that time limit. The minister might consider some other period. I suspect that in most instances of bureaucratic delay applicants are kept waiting because a decision is not altogether easy to make, because it might turn out badly, because it is in a dicey area and events might reflect on the judgment of those concerned. Nevertheless, somebody has to make decisions, and all this amendment says is that within a reasonable period of time the official must give an applicant a yes or no answer and that, if he does not, the citizen concerned should have recourse to the law to demand that such an answer be given.

[Mr. Schumacher.]

Hon. Ron Basford (Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, this is an issue which was examined very thoroughly in the Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs. There are really two sides to it—whether there should be a legislated minimum period before which no certificate can be issued, or whether there should be a legislated maximum period within which a certificate must be issued, or at any rate within which the application must be decided.

After careful consideration, both points of view were rejected by the committee and the bill was left as it is. The hon. member for Peel-Dufferin-Simcoe (Mr. Milne), who has been active in committee, and in whose riding there have been four impulse murders in the recent past, pushed very hard for a minimum period. Other members pushed for a maximum period. I think things are best left as they are. The design of the scheme is such that the requirements of the scheme act as an effective cooling off period as a means of helping to prevent impulse murders; people would not be able to buy a gun on impulse with the intention of using it against themselves or others. The administrative procedures would be worked out by the chief provincial firearms officers to be responsive to the public need.

In cases where the application form itself or the computer check shows no information which is adverse to the applicant, I am content that a certificate can be issued quickly. But if there is some adverse material in the criminal record to check, or if the applicant has undergone mental treatment in connection with symptoms of violence, it might not be possible to issue a certificate within a 15-day period; there might be a number of factors which the licensing officer would wish to consider and a good deal of information which he might want in his possession before making a decision. If a statute of limitation were placed upon the period I am sure that, in administrative terms, the result would be that if there were any adverse information whatsoever affecting an application, rather than take a risk the licensing officer would simply say no within the required period, though if examined thoroughly the material available would enable the officer, given time, to grant the certificate. I think that would create a hardship for people who might, upon close examination of their applications, be entitled to own a firearm.

Mr. Ritchie: Would the minister permit a question? Is there any way in which an applicant can seek recourse in the event of no decision being reached? Is there any way he can get a yes or no answer to his application?

Mr. Basford: If the licensing officer were refusing to make a decision at all, I think the person affected could make an application for a writ of mandamus to require him to make a decision.

Mr. Arnold Peters (Timiskaming): Whatever that big word may mean, that is not likely to happen to some joker who simply wants to buy a gun to go hunting. He is not likely, I can tell you, to apply for mandamus, or whatever it is.

I do not disagree with what the minister has said. He comes from the city. He goes to his firearms officer—maybe there are two or three of them in Vancouver—and that officer will make a decision because he has access to the computer and to the other records he needs. Maybe he will reach a decision within a reasonable period of time.

But has the minister ever considered what is likely to happen in Frobisher Bay or New Liskeard or in Kirkland Lake? I know where an applicant up there will have to go. He will have to make his application to one of the RCMP officers in the area, probably the only officer there, who has more work than he can handle. He will certainly not be well acquainted with all the firearm regulations, and he is not likely to stick his neck out very far. If anyone files an application, unless there is some provision in the legislation it could take months and months to consider it. After all, there is no computer in the police detachment, so the officer would have to go somewhere else to get the information. Then a letter will have to be written. I see the minister shaking his head, but he has never been to Alert, Frobisher Bay, or other small communities like that.

● (1750)

Mr. Basford: Mr. Speaker, would the hon. member permit a question? Is he aware that both Frobisher Bay and Kirkland Lake have immediate access to CPIC the computer?

Mr. Peters: No, I did not know that. If that is so I still fail to understand why there is a delay when someone registers a gun today. It can take anywhere from two days to months, it all depends. Gun collectors are sometimes able to register guns straight away; on other occasions it takes longer. When it takes longer I assume they have to write away to Toronto and wait for a reply.

In my part of the country, registering a prohibited weapon can take up to two or three months. Sometimes you have to leave the gun when you register, and some of these guns are valuable. I have known guns to be lost in police stations. The guns are not registered under federal law but with the provincial police. Perhaps they register it through the RCMP, but it does take a long time. This is why there should be some indication in the bill whether it will be the RCMP or some other force, and whether they have access to the computer. I agree with the minister about the guy in Vancouver and the guy in downtown Toronto. The firearms officials in those cities will probably be working at their jobs full time.

It is difficult in my part of the country to get a permit when you take a gun which is a prohibited weapon down to the police officer. The permit takes some time to obtain and the gun is left there for a period of time. Perhaps the problem cannot be solved, but it is one that occurs throughout the bill. It is my guess that the way to handle the question in rural areas is not the same as the way it is handled in urban areas. In Kirkland Lake there is one corporal and two staff officers of the RCMP, and perhaps some undercover agents, and they may handle it differently.

Nevertheless there should be some kind of redress, such as an appeal. If the registration is not completed within 15 days, a person should be able to ask why not. I do not believe you should have to apply for a writ of mandamus, or whatever it is; you should be able to ask what the reason is for the delay. Surely the act provides some discretion and the officers should be asked face to face why the application is taking so long. If the officers have reason to suspect an applicant, he should be able to tell them that it was his twin brother who was in jail, not him. This bill does not give any assurance that applications in remote areas will be dealt with expeditiously.

Mr. Doug Neil (Moose Jaw): Mr. Speaker, may I make a few brief comments in support of this motion, which requires the commissioner or the person issuing a licence to make a decision within 15 days. I do not think that is unreasonable. The minister spoke about a cooling off period, preventing murders and so on. It seems to me he also spoke about computers determining whether an individual has a criminal record. I had always thought the purpose of a computer was to make material available speedily; you simply pushed the buttons and out came the information.

If everything is computerized, it seems to me that requiring the issuer of licences to make up his mind within 15 days places no real burden upon him. If an issuer of a firearms acquisition certificate disliked a particular individual but really had no reason to turn down his application, he could delay the licence indefinitely. It seems to me that this is a perfectly legitimate amendment which requires an officer to issue a certificate within 15 days. If he does not do so, then the applicant has the redress of an appeal. However, if we leave the bill as submitted by the government, some people might have to wait for weeks or months before getting a firearms acquisition certificate. As I say, I support this motion.

Mr. MacEachen: Mr. Speaker, may I rise on a point of order which is related to a discussion held earlier with respect to the holding of deferred votes on Bill C-51. As I understand it, our consultations have yielded the consensus that we take whatever votes have been deferred as the first order of government business tomorrow.

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): Agreed.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Agreed and so ordered. Is the House ready for the question?

Some hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Pursuant to section (11) of Standing Order 75, a recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

It being six o'clock p.m. I do now leave the chair until eight o'clock p.m.

At six o'clock the House took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The House resumed at 8 p.m.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): The House will now move to motion No. 20 standing in the name of the hon. member for Dauphin (Mr. Ritchie).

Mr. Gordon Ritchie (Dauphin) moved:

Motion No. 20.

That Bill C-51, an act to amend the Criminal Code, the Customs Tariff, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act and the Prisons and Reformatories Act, be amended in Clause 3 by striking out line 33 at page 31 and substituting the following therefor:

"(i) to protect life or property,".

He said: Mr. Speaker, I should like to raise objection to the way this provision is drawn by the minister and suggest to him that by adding the word "property" he will have a better bill. It seems logical that when these permits are issued they are to be issued to people in order that they may be in possession of a firearm in the event of attacks by humans, or in the odd case by animals such as bears and so on.

However the minister has not made a provision for property. For example, a farmer who has a field of grain would not be issued with a licence in order to protect his crop from being eaten by deer. Even though it would be permissible under the provincial games act to protect his property by chasing them off in some way, he would not be able to get a gun because his life is not at stake. The minister seems to have the idea that he will protect him, but that man could starve to death during the winter. Many questions can be raised about this narrow definition of protecting life.

There will be very few permits issued. The farmer's property is his means of income and livelihood. If there is a threat to it, such as some person threatening to burn his place down, under this act he would not be able to obtain a firearm for protection.

[The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier).]

An hon. Member: He cannot get a restricted weapon.

• (2010)

Mr. Ritchie: He still would not be able to get whatever is necessary to protect himself. If it is necessary to have a restricted weapon in order to protect life, then it is just as necessary on some occasions to have a weapon to protect property. In western law it was always said that the worst thing you could do was steal a man's horse—it was worse than murder because without his horse he was doomed.

I think this amendment would give us a better bill. There will be lots of times when it will be difficult to decide between life and property, and if someone wants to adhere rigidly to the provision of "life only" then very few permits will be issued. Maybe that is what the minister wants. If you need to protect life you must also give consideration to whether you want to protect property.

Mr. Doug Neil (Moose Jaw): Mr. Speaker, I should like to make a few comments in support of this amendment. The Criminal Code at present covers the protection of life or property, so I wonder why this bill has excluded the protection of property. I appreciate that this refers to a restricted weapon but, as far as I know, the system has worked well over the years. There has been no problem as far as registration of restricted weapons is concerned. It seems to me that in many cases it is as important to protect property as to protect life.

I should like to ask the minister if he is prepared to explain why Section 97(2)(a) of the Criminal Code reads "to protect life or property" while the proposed revision reads only "to protect life".

Hon. Ron Basford (Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, the amendment proposed by the bill is quite simple. I recognize that the hon. member for Moose Jaw (Mr. Neil) is endeavouring to be constructive but, with respect, I think he misunderstands it.

Formely under the Criminal Code a person could be issued a carrying permit for sidearms for the protection of life or property. Under the proposed bill a permit would only be issued to carry or wear sidearms for the protection of life. Police authorities across the country have said, and we believe, that protection of property with firearms is not a desirable thing. People trying to protect themselves and their property with sidearms are usually more of a menace to themselves than to an intruder. We have all read over and over again the advice that the police give, that if someone breaks into your house the best thing you can do is keep perfectly quiet.

Mr. Neil: And let him shoot you.

Mr. Basford: In certain places it is necessary for people to carry sidearms. I have ordered that permits for sidearms be issued in the Northwest Territories and the Yukon to prospectors, geologists, wildlife inspectors and other people likely to come into contact with dangerous animals.

Where the hon. member is confused, I think, is that this relates to sidearms only and not to long arms. Obviously the person concerned about his crops being eaten by deer or other predators, or someone concerned about trespassers on his property, is better off with a long gun which can usually be shot more accurately and is safer to use and more effective against the predator.

I would ask the hon. member to study this provision rather carefully. It relates only to sidearms and has nothing to do with shotguns or rifles. If one is protecting property or crops I think the long gun is the more desirable weapon.

Mr. Woolliams: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if I could ask the minister a question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Order, please. The hon. member for Moose Jaw (Mr. Neil) has the floor, but I will recognize the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams) on a question.

Mr. Woolliams: Mr. Speaker, the minister said this does not relate to sidearms but relates to shotguns and rifles.

Some hon. Members: No.

Mr. Woolliams: I should like to ask the minister if it should happen that someone comes into your home unlawfully, do you then have to decide whether to protect your life or your property?

Mr. Basford: Mr. Speaker, I say very strongly, and every police officer in the country will say very strongly, that people who think they are going to protect themselves in their homes with a sidearm are foolish. They are better off being protected by the police. If they insist on having some arms they are better off with a long gun.

Mr. Woolliams: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the minister would answer a further question. Many crimes have been committed in Calgary that I assume are duplicated in other cities, where a housewife is home alone, perhaps taking a shower before going to a tea or to the hairdresser, and someone breaks in and the housewife is not only raped but in many cases loses her life. Does she have a chance to get the police? Are the police in the front room while she is in the bathroom?

Mr. Basford: Mr. Speaker, in the United States, where hand guns are more readily available than in Canada, statistics indicate that housewives protecting themselves with handguns have a higher incidence of accidents to themselves by having no idea how to use handguns.

Mr. Neil: Mr. Speaker, the response given by the minister would lead one to believe that the intention is eventually to get rid of all restricted weapons. He talks about carrying a sidearm. This section does more than refer to carrying sidearms; it refers to a person being able to have a sidearm in his possession. I have a pistol in my possession and I have a permit, a registration certificate. If I had to establish that the reason that I have that weapon in my possession is to protect my life, I would probably have to turn it in to the police. If the minister is saying that this only refers to people carrying sidearms, then it refers to restricted weapons, which is more than revolvers because it covers automatic weapons as well. I do not think the minister has read the bill.

● (2020)

A restricted weapon, according to the definition in the bill is:

a) Any firearm, not being a prohibited weapon, designed, altered or intended to be aimed and fired by the action of one hand,

b) Any firearm that

(i) is not a prohibited weapon, has a barrel that is less than eighteen and one half inches in length and is capable of discharging centre-fire ammunition in a semi-automatic manner, or

(ii) is designed or adapted to be fired when reduced to a length of less than twenty-six inches by folding, telescoping or otherwise, or

c) Any firearm that is designed, altered or intended to fire bullets in rapid succession during one pressure of the trigger and that, on the day which this paragraph comes into force, was registered as a restricted weapon and forms part of a gun collection in Canada of a bona fide gun collector,

I question whether the minister has read the bill and understands what it is all about. We have had regulations and laws respecting restricted weapons for many years. There have been no real problems with respect to restricted weapons. What we ask for here is simply to leave the principle as it exists at present to allow a person to obtain a registration certificate if it is required to protect his life or, as the old code says, "or property".

It seems to me that what is attempted here is a gradual restriction of the ownership and use of firearms. I can see the minister looking at me through the curtains. He seems to be moving in and out as he feels like it. When things get hot, he moves out. I suggest there has been no problem at all with restricted weapons. The minister wants to make some problems with respect to the legislation. What I am saying is that the provisions as they stand right now are adequate. They will not prevent crimes from being committed. If a criminal wants to get a gun, he can get one, and no amount of gun legislation or restriction will prevent him from getting one.

Mr. Stan Schumacher (Palliser): Mr. Speaker, I would like to support the motion of the hon. member for Dauphin (Mr. Ritchie) because I cannot understand the priorities of the minister in this regard. As my colleague, the hon. member for Moose Jaw (Mr. Neil), has asked, what is wrong with the law as it is? I would like to read the clause we are dealing with. Starting at paragraph (3) it reads:

(c) is required by the applicant

(i) to protect life,

We want to add "or property"

(ii) for use in connection with his lawful profession or occupation,

If you can use it to protect your profession or occupation, you should be able to use it to protect your property because, after all, what is the purpose of a profession or occupation except to earn income, and property certainly is also to earn income. Therefore it should be on the same basis and should be protected by the law.

The clause goes on to read:

(iii) for use in target practice under the auspices of a shooting club approved for the purposes of this section by the Attorney General of the province in which the premises of the shooting club are located, or

(iv) for use in target practice in accordance with conditions proposed to be attached to the permit to be issued in respect of the restricted weapon under subsection 106.2(1),

You can have this restricted weapon in your possession to protect life, to protect your profession or occupation, or to engage in target practice, but you cannot have it to protect your property. Where is the government's sense of priorities there? Why will it not leave the law as it is? Why does it have to take protection away in this area as well as interfere with the vast majority of our citizens' rights to enjoy the country in which they live? For the information of my learned friend from New Westminster let me say that they are not hand guns. They are restricted weapons. Hand guns are prohibited weapons.

Mr. Arnold Peters (Timiskaming): Mr. Speaker, I am really concerned about this clause, and not so much about the explanations which have been very vague.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Peters: That is right. I did not realize we were removing sections from the Criminal Code that affect hand guns because I am one of those who are very much opposed to people carrying hand guns for the protection of their life or property. If I had been on the committee I would have violently objected to the next clause, and I would have used exactly the same argument as used by the minister.

Mr. Woolliams: There were many times when there was no one from your party present in the committee.

Mr. Peters: They should have been there. One of the things that really concerns me is that every Saturday night a chocolate soldier security guard can walk around carrying a gun. You would not hire him to wash your car, but you hire him as a two bit security officer and you give him a gun. He wanders up and down the street looking like a marshal from—

Mr. Woolliams: Montana.

Mr. Peters: —some of the states such as Texas, New Mexico, or somewhere in that area. If the argument the minister has put forward is valid, it sure applies to these chocolate soldiers, Saturday night wonders protecting this and that, because I personally am of the opinion that there is nothing wrong with the protection of hand guns under the Criminal Code. I would be surprised if this only applied to hand guns because I thought it applied to semi-automatics and to some other weapons as well. Whether or not it does, does not make a great deal of difference, but I believe that people should not have hand guns in their possession for the protection of life or property.

[Mr. Schumacher.]

If you have a loaded hand gun in your night table drawer, you are very likely to shoot a member of the family. Every day you would think there would be somebody breaking in, and every day you would be scared of something else. It is my guess that you would shoot yourself in the foot, or you would do something else foolish with that bloody gun before you had it for very long in your dresser. If you want to be secure, throw it out because, in my opinion, it is dangerous, and I disapprove very much of people keeping hand guns. If you are going to carry a prohibited weapon—and that may involve a semi-automatic—and you are used to using a semi-automatic for other purposes, then I see no reason why you should not use that long gun, whether it be a semi-automatic or any other type of gun, to protect your property. This is really where differences of opinions among members show up.

When you are in a city and you possess a gun which you say is for protection, you are really saying it is for protection against your neighbour or against someone coming into your house, in other words it is to protect you against people. In my part of the country—and this applies probably to four fifths of the country—when we talk about protecting property, we talk about protecting cattle, horses or grain.

● (2030)

An hon. Member: Or junk yards?

Mr. Leggatt: Or business premises?

Mr. Peters: I suppose my friend thinks it is all right to protect your junk yard in the city and it is all right to protect your house with Doberman pinschers, which might kill somebody if they get the chance. Those dogs are trained to do that. I do not agree with that. I do not think that is the purpose of guns, and it is certainly not a purpose I support.

However, if you have a number of sheep, you are going to be shooting your neighbour's dog. You will be shooting your neighbour's dog because he will be killing your sheep, and I think you have the right to do that. I am not good at operating hand guns, so I would not be trying to shoot anything at any distance. It is a pretty good shot with a hand gun who could hit a barn door at 20 feet. Anyone else is apt to hit anything but that door, and the police are no exception. They have some training, but they get excited, and they sometimes hit everything but what they are aiming at.

Mr. Woolliams: I don't buy that. Come on!

Mr. Peters: My friend would not buy that, but I think it is a fact. That is why it is now being suggested that we use magnums for crowd control so that we can knock people down and take their backs out without hurting others. However, we will be lucky if we do not hurt others. The hon. member has been watching Kojak too long if he believes this is going to be valuable.

My friend, who is very much in favour of eliminating guns, has said nothing about removing them from every Tom, Dick and Harry who can be hired to protect people's property. That does not seem to me to be different from the grocer keeping a gun in the till in his small corner grocery store. There are too many small grocers who have guns in their tills. Often it is not money people break into those stores for; it is to get guns. I do not see any difference between that and my going out and hiring a chocolate soldier to protect my property. Many of those people do not have any training, but I can pay them the minimum wage. Their intelligence is such that they cannot do very much other than wear a uniform. In many cases I suppose property would be better protected if these people were not hired.

I can see that there might be objection to the clause that says you can carry restricted weapons for use in connection with your lawful profession or occupation, or that you can hire people to protect yourself or your premises. It must be pure hell in this world if we say it is not good enough for us to have guns to protect our property but that those who have a little money can hire somebody to carry a gun to protect themselves. It appears that a master can hire a servant to be his bearer and to carry a gun and do his master's shooting for him. I do not really see that there is much difference.

Mr. Woolliams: There aren't many bears like that in Jasper.

Mr. Peters: No, but I would not want to use a hand gun on a grizzly bear either. I would want to have something better than that, or I would be making tracks faster than the bear.

The minister has not justified the argument that we should not protect our property with sidearms, and I am one of those who do not believe we should be carrying hand guns to protect our property. On the other hand, the minister is saying that if you are rich enough to have a gun bearer, you can hire him and he will protect your property for you. Our priorities are mixed up, particularly when we claim to be democratic people. It might be better for us to carry our own guns and do our own dirty work than to hire somebody to do it.

We as a society have hired police forces to protect our cities. That is what we call civilization. We anticipate that the police are going to be able to do that job for us. If we hear somebody breaking into our houses, it is very wise to pick up the telephone and to phone the police, and hopefully they will arrive. However, I suggest that it is not in the interests of a modern urban society to have the right to carry guns for the purpose of protecting our lives or our property. If we agree with that, we must also agree that we should not be able to hire people to do what we cannot do ourselves.

Mr. Leonard C. Jones (Moncton): Mr. Speaker, I have listened with a great deal of interest and some amusement to some of the remarks made by the minister and by some other hon. members tonight. On the advice and recommendation of members of the local police department in my constituency I had occasion to carry firearms for a considerable length of time and to be trained in their use. This is so with my wife and daughter as well. I also had a very fierce but precious dog at my home, and no one can tell me that we should change the Criminal Code at this stage and not allow firearms in homes, particularly where there have been incidents which indicate the requirement to protect life and property.

It seems to me that our lives and our property are part and parcel of our possessions in this world and, by golly, by doing this we are taking away a great deal from people who are licensed and who have certified firearms. I say this because of very cruel and desperate experiences. The police stayed in my house month after month to protect my wife and daughter, and all three of us were trained in the use of firearms. The Minister of Justice (Mr. Basford) has the audacity to say that no member of any police department in this country would recommend that. Policemen in my own constituency recommended it, and policemen from other cities told me that they would as well. I would like to hear someone in this House honestly say to the policemen in my city and in my constituency that they are wrong in doing so.

Mr. Stuart Leggatt (New Westminster): Mr. Speaker, I listened with care to the last two speakers, particularly to the hon. member for Timiskaming (Mr. Peters). It took him an awfully long time to tell us that he actually opposed the motion and supported the bill. I am pleased he did, but I do not know why it took so long to make his point because the point he was trying to make was fairly straightforward.

Mr. Woolliams: There is a split in the NDP.

Mr. Leggatt: I would like to correct what seems to be a misunderstanding in this place about the law. You do not have the right to shoot trespassers in this country, and all of the people who think that by having a gun they are protecting themselves should know that the statistics overwhelmingly show that that simply escalates the rate of violence and encourages the criminal element to go to houses with guns. Many people have told me that "nobody is going to come into my house, or they are going to get a bullet between the eyes".

I can give an example of why this particular clause is so necessary. About a year ago in Vancouver a young fellow was trespassing in a junk yard, and he was shot dead by the proprietor of the junk yard. His justification was that he was protecting his property. No one knew whether the youngster was trying to steal anything, or whether he was simply there as a trespasser or a prankster. However, the man who killed him felt justified because the trespasser was coming upon his "sacred" property. The man who killed him felt that he had a sacred right to use his gun to protect that property. As long as that philosophy prevails in this House we will not reduce crime in this country; we will increase it.

As a citizenry are we going to arm ourselves against all of the forces out there to protect ourselves? I plead with hon. members around me to support their local police. They are pretty good. They will come to the rescue. They will protect our houses for us, and we do not need hand guns.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

● (2040)

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Is the House ready for the question? Hon. members have heard the terms of the motion. All those in favour will please say yea.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Pursuant to Section (11) of Standing Order 75 the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

The House will now consider motion No. 23 standing in the name of the hon. member for Palliser (Mr. Schumacher).

Mr. Schumacher: Mr. Speaker, with the leave of the House may I withdraw this motion?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Does the House agree to allow the hon. member for Palliser to withdraw motion No. 23?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion No. 23 (Mr. Schumacher) withdrawn.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): The House will now consider motion No. 24, in the name of the hon. member for Dauphin (Mr. Ritchie).

Mr. Gordon Ritchie (Dauphin) moved:

Motion No. 24.

That Bill C-51, An Act to amend the Criminal Code, the Customs Tariff, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act and the Prisons and Reformatories Act, be amended in Clause 3

(a) by striking out line 44 at page 33 and substituting the following therefor:

"are located;"

(b) by adding immediately after line 3 at page 34 the following:

"(e) for the purpose of display at a showing or exhibition of restricted weapons; or (f) in the case of a rifle or shotgun, for use connected with or incidental to hunting or other sporting activity, and without restricting the generality of the foregoing, such permit authorizes the holder thereof to transport a restricted weapon for the purpose of having it repaired, maintained, altered or appraised."

He said: Mr. Speaker, I hope the minister can see his way clear to accepting some of the changes I propose in my amendment. I suggest the minister has not produced evidence to show that the displaying of restricted weapons leads to difficulties. Most gun collectors act responsibly and can be trusted to act responsibly when transporting a restricted weapon for the purpose of having it repaired, maintained, altered or appraised. It seems that the bill will cover almost all firearms under its restricted weapons definition.

If the bill says gun owners must obtain a permit every time they want to repair their guns, or have them repaired, I do not think gun owners will observe the provisions of this bill. In a practical way this bill will tend to make such owners and collectors transgressors, if not law breakers. I suggest the clause we are considering provides for unnecessary restrictions, under which it will be possible for people's guns to be taken away from them.

Many years ago I talked to someone from Germany who told me what life was like before Mr. Hitler came to power.

Mr. Woolliams: Corporal Hitler, you mean.

Mr. Ritchie: This chap said you could not sleep in your bed at night for fear of molestation. After Hitler came to power this was set right. I guess I need not remind anyone what happened. The German people lost their right to possess weapons, but lost many other freedoms, too. Eventually, of course, Hitler dragged them into that calamitous military venture which ended in disaster. We are a free people, and if you make the restrictions too onerous you will defeat their purpose.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Is the House ready for the question? Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the said motion?

Some hon. Members: No.

Mr. Paproski: On division.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): The motion is negatived on division.

Motion No. 24 (Mr. Ritchie) negatived on division.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): The House will now consider motions Nos. 25, 26 and 27, standing in the names of the hon. member for Moose Jaw (Mr. Neil) and the hon. member for Palliser (Mr. Schumacher) respectively. Is it agreed that the vote on motion No. 25 will also dispose of motions 26 and 27?

Mr. Schumacher: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. When I put my two motions down I was not aware of the language of the motion of the hon. member for Moose Jaw. I much prefer his motion to my two motions, and ask leave of the House to withdraw motions 26 and 27.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Is it agreed that the hon. member for Palliser shall have leave to withdraw motions 26 and 27?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion No. 26 (Mr. Schumacher) withdrawn.

Motion No. 27 (Mr. Schumacher) withdrawn.

Mr. Doug Neil (Moose Jaw) moved:

Motion No. 25.

That Bill C-51, An Act to amend the Criminal Code, the Customs Tariff, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act and the Prisons and Reformatories Act, be amended in Clause 3 by striking out lines 34 to 39 at page 35 and substituting the following therefor:

"(9) Permits mentioned in subsections (1), (3), (4), (5), (6) and (7) shall be issued without the payment of a fee."

He said: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams) withdrew his motion concerning permits for an individual. My motion covers both permits for an individual and for one carrying on a business. I expect the hon. member for Calgary North will speak about permits for individuals, so I shall restrict my remarks to the fee that someone selling rifles and ammunition, and carrying on business, must pay for a licence or permit.

In my part of the country almost every corner store, every garage, sells rifles, ammunition and shotgun shells, especially when the hunting season is at its peak. You will see .22 calibre rifles in these establishments, shotguns, even rifles used for big game hunting. These dealers are licensed either by the province, municipality or city in which they carry on business. It seems to me that the many forms they are required to fill out, and licence fees they are required to pay, have become a great burden.

Remember, everyone who sells ammunition and rifles must pay a fee for the licence giving him the right to sell firearms or ammunition. Bear in mind as well that the regulations will require such dealers to keep records and submit certain forms from time to time. If this process becomes too onerous, these individuals who make a certain profit from the sale of firearms and ammunition, will say "I simply cannot be bothered", with the result that the large stores will have a corner on the market.

I know some individuals in my constituency who make a living operating a gun shop. They do not make a very good living. They repair guns, sell the odd rifle and some shells. If they are going to be forced to pay a licence fee on top of the business licence fee they are now required to pay, they will have to go out of business. I believe it was indicated by the minister in committee that while the fee would not exceed $1,000—

● (2050)

Mr. Basford: $250.

Mr. Neil: $250. That is still a substantial fee for an individual to pay, particularly when he is called upon to keep all these records. If the government requires an individual to keep records that are not in his own interest, but in the interest of the government, he should not be required to pay a licence fee.

I simply say in this motion that if a man meets the qualifications to carry on business and is prepared to do the necessary paperwork, the government should appreciate that fact and he should not be called upon to pay a substantial fee. As I mentioned earlier, there are many small businesses which will cease to carry rifles and ammunition. The result will be that individuals in the rural areas who now go to their corner store in a small town will be forced to go to the city to buy their ammunition if they wish to go hunting. Under the circumstances, it is an unfair burden.

I am not concerned about the larger stores. I am concerned about the small businessman who today has to spend more and more time completing forms, and paying more and more for licence fees. I therefore ask the House to accept this amendment that there be no licence fees charged to those who carry on the business of selling firearms and ammunition.

Mr. Eldon M. Woolliams (Calgary North): I will be very brief, Mr. Speaker. I moved this basic amendment in committee. I congratulate the hon. member for Moose Jaw (Mr. Neil) in that regard.

The real problem is not the fee. What we should be considering is the integrity of the merchant. I appreciate that merchants who have small stores in the maritimes, Quebec, and western Canada, do not have the material wealth to afford secretaries to complete all the forms. What is important is the integrity of the individual operating the store where long guns are sold. It was assumed in committee that there are between six million and 11 million guns in existence in Canada, and two and a half million owners.

When this bill becomes law, and I guess it will because the government has a majority, anyone wishing to purchase a long gun will have to obtain a certificate. A certificate will cost $10. Once they get the certificate, they will be able to buy any kind of gun for the next five years.

The point being made by the hon. member for Moose Jaw is that small storekeepers, owners of small hardware stores or corner stores should not have to pay a fee. It is true that the maximum is $250, but why should they have to pay that? If the minister and the government are honest, and that is questionable, particularly with regard to this legislation, they will state that what we should be considering is protecting the public against crime. They should not be charging a fee to the individual who operates a store in the town of Strathmore, Alberta; or Rockyford in the former constituency of Bow River which I used to represent. They should be considering whether the merchant has the integrity to ensure whether the certificate is being properly issued to someone who comes in to purchase firearms, particularly long guns.

This bill does not control guns in Canada. Let us get that straight. There are 11 million guns and two and a half million owners who will not be controlled. In committe I asked the minister to assure me that those two and a half million owners are all sane, none are alcoholics and none are emotionally distressed to the point that they might do something unlawful in a community. Many of these guns have no registration, either on the barrel or elsewhere on the gun. Therefore how will this control crime? This is merely window-dressing.

Does anyone believe for a moment that this bill will control murder and other crimes? It is straight window-dressing to bluff the Canadian people that the government is doing something about crime.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Woolliams: Yesterday the hon. member for Central Nova (Mr. MacKay) asked for something which I and other members of this party have asked for on several occasions, namely, an inquiry into crime in Canada. The reply was that we do not need one, there was one in Quebec and they only found out about dirty meat. Therefore I say this is complete window-dressing. That is why many members today were annoyed when the Minister of Justice (Mr. Basford) issued a press release after wandering down to an incident which was caused by long guns, which are not covered by this bill.

Mr. Fraser: There was another one in Toronto, exactly the same.

Mr. Woolliams: Yes, and there has been one in Calgary and one in Vancouver. The question we are asking is: why should the small businessman have to pay a price to the federal government with regard to crime? Who pays the wages of the police forces in Canada? Naturally it is the taxpayers. Why should owners of small hardware stores and other stores which sell long guns, that are not included in this bill, have to pay a fee of up to $250? That is the point the hon. member is making. That is the point this party is making. I need not say any more.

Mr. Bob Brisco (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams) touched on most points I wanted to raise in the context of small business. It is worthwhile mentioning that we have a minister responsible for small business who travels across the country assuring small businessmen that the government is sensitive to their concerns, that the government is going to reduce the bureaucratic load that these small businessmen must shoulder, and that it is going to reduce the paper work that assails them every month for StatsCan, RevenueCan, this Can and that Can—

Mr. Symes: And the trash can.

Mr. Brisco: They then turn around and find another minister introducing more bureaucracy to be placed on the shoulders of small businessmen.

● (2100)

Whether it is $250 or $2,000 the question remains: is that sum going to purchase integrity? My hon. friend from Calgary North has made a valid point. Perhaps there should be some selection, but by and large we can rely on the integrity of the small shopkeeper. I wonder, in light of the statements made about the hon. member for Kootenay West and others, whether we can rely on the same integrity from the minister.

I should like to make a further suggestion. If these fees are to be charged, let them not disappear into the limbo of National Revenue. Let us use these fees for a constructive purpose in the area in which they apply. Let us develop, with provincial agreement, a national program of hunter training. Let us set a national standard and use this money to provide for such a program. After all, there are provinces which use the revenues obtained through the sale of hunting licences for recreational services, conservation, and the improvement of the environment.

I am confident that if this amendment fails the government will accumulate more dollars, saddle the small businessman with another bunch of bureaucratic bumf, and accomplish nothing except to drive small businessmen further away from any sense of belonging. If any government has alienated small business it is this one. I hope the minister will pay attention to the views expressed by the opposition in reference to this amendment.

Mr. Arnold Peters (Timiskaming): I want to support the argument that this large fee should not be levied—and it is a large fee if we are thinking about many of the businesses which sell guns in my area. Though I have said earlier that I should like to see many of them not selling guns it cannot be denied that setting up the bureaucracy necessary to deal with the effects of this legislation will involve these small businessmen in a considerable expense. Every time a customer comes in to buy a gun it will be necessary to ensure that he has a permit, to examine the permit, to take down and enter the serial number of the gun and, no doubt, to send all this information to the firearms registry in the area.

The minister has made the point that this does not apply to ammunition. But here we are certainly talking about ammunition. The small business operator will have to pay $250 for a licence to sell, perhaps, $50 worth of ammunition.

Mr. Basford: No, he will not.

Mr. Peters: It says so here in the bill. It speaks of a permit being necessary to carry on business under subclause (2)(b)(i), and this applies to anyone buying or selling, wholesale or retail, or importing ammunition. So I do not know how the minister can say this does not involve ammunition.

Camp operators are obliged to sell ammunition if they are to carry on their businesses. If they are selling duck licences or moose licences they must at least have a few boxes of ammunition on hand. They do not sell guns but they are expected to keep some ammunition for sale along with the permits they issue. The minister does not seem to know why they sell these permits or this ammunition. They do so because it is a service to those who stay at the tourist camps. The nearest town is often 50 miles or so away.

The minister is not being honest in his interpretation of what a "business" is likely to be under this clause. The little guy will be asked to pay $250 for a licence under this clause though his total sales will amount to less than the fee. Oh, I imagine the minister will probably say there is to be a sliding scale provided for by regulation and that the fee will only be $10 or so. But if the minister is really interested in removing guns from the market, I would be surprised if he does not see this clause as a good way of discouraging people from going into the firearms business. The clause says that a person engaged in this business must get a licence and that this licence will cost $250.

I repeat that a great many of those who are selling ammunition in my area are not doing so for profit but as a service to customers. Customers rent room and board, they rent airplane service, they rent boats and guides from the operator, and then they go into the bush. The selling of the ammunition is surely incidental. Nevertheless, the ammunition must be on hand. An operator cannot send his customers over to a competitor and say, "Buy your ammunition there, and then come back to my camp." The minister has all along been talking about preventing the sale of guns to people who should not get them, preventing them from being stolen and so on. But it seems to me he is hitting all these little people, and I certainly would not be representing a northern Ontario riding if I were to agree with the minister in the course he is following. In any case, the tourist industry now is not in a good position—

Mr. Woolliams: Because you people opposite drove out the Americans.

Mr. Peters: Most of them are not in a position to put up this $250. They would probably have to hire somebody to look after the bookkeeping involved in selling a few boxes of .22 shells or shotgun cartridges. They are not in the business of manufacturing, distributing wholesale, and so on. What are they going to do? What I would advise them to do is bootleg. They should keep a few extra boxes of shells for themselves and, if necessary, give them to their customers.

Mr. Faulkner: The NDP is in favour of bootlegging.

Mr. Peters: Well, I always enjoyed bootleggers. I lived in Timmins for many years where bootlegging was a very honourable profession, as I expect it was in Nova Scotia and many other areas. And as for young people who haven't enjoyed going to the bootlegger, maybe they have something to look forward to yet.

• (2110)

Why would a guy make this outlay? He could not make $250 profit selling ammunition in my area. I suggest he would do better to give it to his customers and charge them an extra buck for the room or on meals. Certainly he could not make a living out of selling ammunition. He cannot make a living if he does not have ammunition, even in my hon. friend's area which does not have bootleggers. I have been around the Sturgeon Lake area and they had a bootlegger then. The hon. member does have some tourist operators in his constituency and I am sure they will want to sell a few boxes of shells to duck hunters in the fall. But I am sure most will not sell enough to make a profit of $250, and if they do they are only working for the government. If they were in the business of selling ammunition they would have to make a lot more than that.

I do not want to belabour the point but I say the government is being very unfair in this provision to all those people who depend on hunting and fishing for their livelihood.

Mr. Gilbert: We can always refer the bill back to committee at third reading.

Mr. Peters: Yes, perhaps we should refer the bill back at third reading to discuss this clause. However, I think the minister should assure us that he is not out to do in the small entrepreneur. It seems to me that these are not the people who get into trouble. I am not aware that even the most valid anti-gun lobbyists contend that shotgun shells and a few rifle shells in a hunting lodge are dangerous to anyone.

The poeple who run a hunting lodge for a bunch of duck hunters in the fall are a very limited group. They possess gun licences of one kind or another. The hunters from the States will have an American licence, as well as one from the province of Ontario for the hunting season, and they will also have undergone other tests. I suggest that this is an added one which does not serve any purpose or make a great deal of sense. I am very much opposed to it, and I think at third reading the bill should be referred back to committee so this clause may receive further study.

Mr. Paul Yewchuk (Athabasca): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise in support of the motion put forward by my hon. friend from Moose Jaw. I support the motion because, since this bill has been brought forward, it has become quite clear that no other legislation that has been introduced into this House recently has raised so much objection among the public at large as this. Other measures which raised a lot of objection were the abolition of capital punishment bill and the change to the abortion law. Those are the only two I can remember which have aroused the public as much as this one.

We have before us an urban oriented minister presenting an urban oriented bill which tries to impose urban views upon many people who are not urbanites. The minister should be flexible enough to recognize that not everyone lives in an urban area and that not all of the laws of this country should be tailored for urbanites only.

It seems to me that one of two possibilities exists so far as the minister is concerned. Either he is grossly misinformed about the use of guns, or he is trying to bamboozle the people of Canada into believing that somehow this legislation will reduce the number of crimes committed with guns. If indeed he believes that, then I am very anxious to hear from him how he thinks this bill will achieve that objective.

This motion is not designed to block the bill. It now appears that with the majority which the Liberal government has in the House it will force through this unacceptable legislation, as it has on many other occasions, against the objections of Canadians everywhere. About the only thing we can do at this stage is to voice our objection on behalf of many Canadians and to try to soften the bill as much as possible, knowing that the Liberal government is going to force it through the House anyway.

A number of my colleagues speaking on behalf of small businessmen have said that the fees which the minister is prescribing will hurt them financially and indeed may cause many to go out of the business of selling guns and ammunition.

I support statements to that effect. We already know there is so much government red tape involved in running a business that it is almost impossible for businessmen to continue in business. The average small business requires one person working practically full time to fill in all the forms the government requires to be filled in, whether it be for income tax, the Canada Pension Plan, workmen's compensation, the Anti-Inflation Board, and so on and so forth. All of this form filling increases the cost of doing business.

Another aspect that concerns me is that those who want to own a gun, or those who have guns and want to purchase a new one, will now be required to pay a fee. It seems to me that they should be relieved of this burden. The minister has in no way offered any explanation of why individuals should be required to pay a fee for this purpose. If he wants to find out whether an individual is mentally suited to owning a gun, then it is not necessary to make that person pay a fee; the information can be provided to the licensing officer without any fee being involved. Therefore I urge the minister to relieve individuals of the burden of paying a fee for a licence to own a gun, as well as businessmen who are in the business of selling arms and ammunition.

I do not think I am any less intelligent than any member on the other side of the House, but I repeat that I cannot comprehend how the minister comes to the conclusion that by requiring a person to buy a licence to own a gun he will reduce the crime rate in this country, or the number of crimes committed with the use of a gun. We know there is no real evidence to suggest that this result will ever be achieved. We can only conclude that the minister is being pressured by those in his urban constituency and he feels he has to appear to be doing something in this regard.

Mr. Fraser: He is not being pressured by anybody; he feels this in his own mind.

Mr. Yewchuk: My hon. friend from Vancouver, who represents an urban riding, says the minister is not being pressured, and perhaps it is the minister's own idea of trying to do something useful in the House. But I doubt that this bill will be useful. The minister is putting the bill forward, as he did as recently as last night, as some kind of measure which will prevent people from sniping from rooftops, or will prevent murderers from using guns, or prevent bank robbers from using guns to rob banks. All of these crimes will continue whether or not this bill passes. If we want to come to grips with this particular problem, some other measures will be required. Certainly these measures will not solve crime in the country but will only impose an unnecessary burden on many law-abiding citizens.

● (2120)

Mr. F. Oberle (Prince George-Peace River): Mr. Speaker, I should like to comment on this particular section of the bill. I made my views on this whole matter of gun control known in committee when it was discussed there. As the hon. member for Athabasca (Mr. Yewchuk) said, it is an urban oriented piece of legislation. When the minister goes out of the urban centres and into what I call real Canada, he seems to wear blinkers and does not understand what goes on there. He looks at the big sporting goods stores, which are part of national chains, in the big urban centres where they display and sell hardware. He assumes this will not create any great hardship to the chain, to take out a licence to sell and display these firearms.

The reality in rural Canada is much different. Often one deals with a small corner grocery store or a co-op store which is unincorporated. A person operates a general store more for the convenience of his neighbours than for profit. He tries to provide a service to his neighbours in a manner similar to that mentioned by the hon. member for Kootenay West (Mr. Brisco) by stocking a few boxes of ammunition and one or two rifles.

I would not have used the time of the House tonight, had it not been for the minister's public comments outside the House against some of my colleagues. I was very much appalled by his particular statement. His statement was city oriented. Of course we have a problem. One can cite a whole series of accidents which have happened as a result of improper use or criminal use of a firearm in a city. After the minister strolled down to the scene last night to take command of a critical situation, to involve himself in the way he did this morning by bringing this debate into the context of his press release and to name members of the opposition, who are exercising their responsibilities by debating this bill, is less than honest. As a matter of fact it is an infringement against the privileges of every member in this House.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Oberle: Frankly, if I was one of the members he named, I would be in contact with my solicitor and I would have this gentleman answer for his actions.

It would have been a greater source of comfort to me if he had assured those of us who are concerned with crime in our country that the kind of person who perpetrated this crime last night will not walk around the streets in the future, and furthermore, if he has been incarcerated today, that he will stay there until we know how to deal with him and until we know he is cured. The minister is not giving that assurance to Canadians today, not to us in the House. He wants society to pay the price of crime. If we find a rotten apple in the box, we have to cure this apple at the expense of all the good apples in the box. Society and the storekeepers have to pay the price because some people in the cities cannot understand that a farmer has to carry a gun around with him because of predators which attack his cattle, and in order to protect his property. The minister cannot understand that.

Once the ultimate is achieved in gun control, in the minister's view, we can open the jails and let the criminals out because there will be no more guns, and thus there will be no more crimes. I suppose knives will have to be taken away from them as well. We will all be a happy society then.

There is a feeling of mistrust and anxiety throughout this land, particularly in the rural areas. As a matter of fact I got trapped into defending Bill C-83 last year, and the minister knows the situation in which I found myself. There is no such thing as the registration of firearms in this bill. We are not asking Canadians to register their firearms. When I met with my constituents I told them that I could not see this provision in the bill. They said they did not trust the minister, that this will be the first step. First they will register firearms and then they will be confiscating them. This is what was said by real Canadians who live in the frontier areas of our country, people who are still people up in the Peace River country and places which I represent. I could not convince them that the minister does not have any other motive. I was chased out of the meeting. I could not convince them. Of course the minister could not convince them either during meetings which he has had all across the country.

One afternoon last winter an opportunity arose for four of my friends—three from this side and one from the other side—to go to the police academy and join some of the officers there in a game of curling, a bonspiel. I am an ardent sportsman and a curler. The other team was not doing too well. We had scored all the points, and we had time to rest. We were talking about gun control and a police officer said: "What utter nonsense. I have been working here for six months setting up a national registry here in Ottawa". I said: "You cannot be serious. The minister has said there is no gun registration". He said: "I do not know what I have been doing for the last six months, but we are going to register every firearm in this country". In committee I told the minister about this and he said that it was not the registration of firearms that was being set up, but a registration of firearms licences. The fact that the firearms licence a person will carry around has the registration number of every firearm the person owns was conveniently ignored by the minister. That is why 2½ million Canadians who possess long guns do not trust the minister. Probably they will not be affected by this paranoiac piece of legislation.

Canadians outside the urban centres consider it to be their right to own a gun or a firearm. They are of the pioneering stock. They feel a man's home is his castle and he has a right to defend it. The minister is telling them that they must surrender some of their rights and privileges to the bureaucrats, to the adjudicators, and to the cabinet who will keep these rights in trust for us. One does not have to go too far off Parliament Hill to find there is very little trust in the guardians of civil rights and those people who are taking these minor rights and privileges away from us in the interest of the common good.

● (2130)

There is no need for this watered-down version of the gun control bill. If the minister were serious he could have negotiated an arrangement with the provinces which would have co-ordinated his efforts and theirs.

Another bureaucracy will have to be established. The storekeeper has to pay another licence fee and keep another set of books. He is already tied up with provincial licences and now he has to fill out a federal form showing how many pieces of ammunition were bought, who bought what rifle and so on and, at the command of some bureaucrat, submit the record forthwith for inspection.

The minister says he does not wish to interfere with those who presently own long guns, mostly for legitimate reasons. It is hard for people who live in concrete jungles to understand the need for these guns. I do not need one in Ottawa, but I certainly do when I ride the range in Peace River country where the wolves are eating my cattle.

The minister could have gone to the provinces and said, "Let's get together. With your hunting licence requirements and the competency test, let's add a requirement that a person buying a new gun needs a certificate." I agree with that, because there have been accidents. Incidentally, the happening last night was not one of these, regardless of what the minister says about a man who walks out of a beer parlour and goes to the hardware store and purchases a gun to deal with a bartender who cheated him out of a round of beer. There have also been accidents when children have misused firearms.

We certainly understand that not everybody should have access to a gun, particularly not criminals. It appears to me that the minister is not too much concerned about those individuals, however, because if he were he would keep them behind bars where they would not have access to guns.

Every province has its own regulations and most of them work quite well as they are tuned to local needs. This bill provides that the minister may negotiate with the provinces to co-ordinate the kind of thing he is trying to achieve here. He does not need an extra bureaucracy at all.

The society that I represent in the northern parts of British Columbia is not prepared to pay the price that the cities of this country are imposing on it with this bill. The people I represent need firearms everyday, some for sport and others for business, but they are not prepared to pay this $10 in order to give the minister peace of mind. Let the user-pay principle not be applied here. The users are the people who live in rural areas, and they are in the minority. It is not fair that the hardware merchant should have to pay $250 as his share of the expense of keeping guns away from criminals. I cannot condone that. My finer sensibilities are aroused, Mr. Speaker.

I had no intention of prolonging this debate tonight, but the hon. minister has taken some liberties in this House today, and he took some liberties last year with Bill C-83. It is rather strange that a man who has been in this House as long as he has and represents the great area he does should be less than honest with the committee, with this House, and with the people of the country.

We cannot support this bill, Mr. Speaker. We do not need it—unless the minister has other motives. It is tied in with other things that we shall hopefully debate tomorrow.

This bill will come home to haunt the minister, Mr. Speaker. I will no longer defend this rather silly and seemingly innocent piece of legislation in my constituency. The minister must have other motives, and I will identify them and tell my constituents what they are. I will not have myself identified as having blood on my hands because there was an incident last night, tragic as it was. In no way will I accept responsibility for that, nor my friends who have been named. Had my name been mentioned in that connection the minister would hear from me through the courts. What a cheap shot at the opposition, because the government is having a hard time with something that should not have been brought before the House in the first place.

[Translation]

Mr. Roch La Salle (Joliette): Mr. Speaker, I have been listening for a few moments to some comments which I find extremely interesting. Being from a province which will experience some difficulties with that legislation which is being forced upon us by any means, I do not really understand the objectives of that legislation since we know that the basic objective will not be attained, far from it. There has been some reference to a reduction of criminality. I do not know how many organizations or societies have made representations to that effect and I think that there is not one member in the House who has not received some mail about it. Being a representative from Quebec, I had such correspondence as many others and I think that every Quebec member got some mail asking that pressures be exerted on the government in connection with that bill.

The matter now under consideration, in view of the motion introduced by the member for Moose Jaw (Mr. Neil), is extremely interesting and I wish to support the previous comments made by my colleagues. The problems which have arisen in other provinces are also found in my province, Mr. Speaker. And I am wondering how my friends across the aisle can remain silent when a bill like this appears to us totally unacceptable. I am thinking, for instance, about the good intentions of small merchants who may have to pay $250 for a permit allowing them to offer services to amateurs, to organizations anxious to take advantage of our resources and the government refuses to correct the error put in the legislation in spite of very plausible arguments that have been made.

I do not understand, Mr. Speaker, how it is that government members cannot assess our arguments nor why they take no notice of representations that have been made by their constituents or hunting clubs in their ridings. It is not possible, Mr. Speaker, that government members did not receive representations along this line. But they take good care not to bring these arguments before the House or in committees, to urge the minister to realize how mistaken he is and how the government seems to have lost all sense of responsibility. Mr. Speaker, after listening to the comments made by my colleagues, I cannot remain silent about the businessmen of my riding who are affected and who would rather refuse to buy a permit than pay $250. Once again, all that business will be diverted to the larger stores which will not mind paying the $250.

[Mr. Oberle.]

But I think it is important to remind the minister that it is much more to help hunting enthusiasts that the small businessmen do it, and if they were to make small benefits to keep their business running, no government would have the right, in my opinion, to hesitate any longer before withdrawing its proposition, considering the motion now before us. I think that hon. members, particularly those on the government side, should have understood long ago how important it is to make this correction which seems extremely fair towards those poor businessmen.

In my riding, some businessmen will be affected by this legislation and I realize that some members would rather laugh at what we say, instead of being concerned by legislation which some of their constituents will have a hard time swallowing.

I think I do not have anything to add, only to ask the minister to take his responsibilities, to get out of his office and visit the areas concerned across this country. As my colleagues pointed out earlier, he is certainly not aware of what is going on, how badly this legislation will be received and how it will also bring difficulties. Why trouble those dealers who do not deserve to be penalized because they are indeed being penalized by this legislation. I am still wondering why this government takes pleasure in troubling poor innocent people who, again, go all out to provide Canadians with services in all areas of this country. But they will again choose to be quiet.

I see the young hon. member for Louis-Hébert (Mr. Dawson) who must have received correspondence about that as we did. If he has not I would be surprised but it will come. The people in his riding will get to know him and will probably urge him to help us bring the minister back to reason when we have the necessary evidence. I am talking about the comments and recommendations that we had, the briefs that were submitted. We as members of the opposition have the obligation to do everyting we can to bring this government back to reason and stop the suffering of innocent people like those dealers who will have to pay for a permit. Yet we know that they keep those few items in their stores a lot more as a service to tourists, visitors or citizens living in the area. But you still have to get out of large cities to know that that exists in our areas, in rural areas, in hunting areas. So, I dare hope that those few comments and those that were made before me with a lot more eloquence will make this government and hon. members understand that what we have in mind is the wellbeing of those poor dealers who are again the victims of a totally inadequate legislation.

● (2140)

[English]

Mr. Cyril Symes (Sault Ste. Marie): Mr. Speaker, I would like to support the comments of my learned colleague, the hon. member for Timiskaming (Mr. Peters), when he drew to the attention of the House the discriminatory nature of this motion as it applies to tourist operators, particularly in my area of northern Ontario, whereby the tourist operator or the camp operator who is in the business of selling hunting licences and usually stocks a few boxes of ammunition to sell to hunters will be liable, as we understand it, to a fee which could range from $10 to $250, according to the testimony in the committee. There is nothing that outlines that in the bill and we are at the mercy of the regulations.

I think that we need from the Minister of Justice (Mr. Basford) an explanation in the House this evening as to how the fee structure will apply. Can we get a clarification from him? This will expedite moving on to the other clauses in the bill.

I want to reiterate that I would find it very discriminatory for the small businessmen to have to face a fee of $250 or even more—because it is not outlined in the legislation—when he is selling only two boxes of ammunition during the hunting season. He is obviously not selling the ammunition to make money on it. It is unlikely that he would even make a profit of $250 in a very good year. I find that kind of fee for a permit to sell ammunition most discriminatory and retrogressive in terms of what it will do to small business operators who depend on attracting customers by providing the varied services that hunters want, one of them being the stocking of ammunition.

I would like to put a question to the Minister of Justice. Would he clarify for members of the House just how this fee is to operate? Will it be on a sliding scale based on the amount of ammunition the tourist operator sells in a given season, or will it be a set fee, and what would it be? We have heard figures ranging from $10 to $250. I hope the minister will clarify that for us, otherwise members of the House, and certainly small businessmen, will be left with the impression that the maximum amount will be charged, and I do not think members of the House would agree to that kind of discriminatory fee for small business. Can the minister answer that?

Hon. Ron Basford (Minister of Justice): I will be happy to repeat the explanation I provided in the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs that the fee under this subsection, which is a permit to carry on business, which will be set in the regulations, will range from $10 to $250 depending on and totally related to the volume of business of the dealer.

Mr. Woolliams: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I put this to the minister, and I know he would not want to mislead the press or the House, that there is nothing in the bill that sets the limit at $250. We have to rely on his word, or that of some unknown minister who might get into the cabinet in the shuffle in October, to set that fee. Where does it say in the bill that the limit will be set at $250?

Mr. Basford: If I may be allowed to complete my remarks, Mr. Speaker, in answer to the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams), let me say that I indicated very clearly in the committee, because we had an amendment on the subject, that the fee is not set down in the statute. As I was saying earlier, the fee will be set in the regulations. I indicated to the committee that the fee would range from $10 to $250 depending on the volume of business of the dealer. The largest dealers, such as Eaton, Simpson or Hudson Bay Company, would obviously be in the top range.

● (2150)

The cost for the local gunsmith and the local sporting goods store in a small community obviously will be set at $10. The range from $10 to $250 is designed to be explicitly related to the volume of business of the retailer. We have consulted various organizations on this proposal. We consulted the Retail Merchants Association, the Association of Hardware Dealers, and the association of sporting goods stores. I have forgotten the precise name of that latter association.

Mr. Brisco: Did you talk to the Minister of State (Small Business) (Mr. Marchand)?

Mr. Basford: These various associations have not registered objections with me either as to the form of the statute or the form of the proposed regulations.

In response to allegations that the fees are intended to be revenue generating, they are intended to cover solely the cost of the dealer's records, the cost of inspection and the cost of seeing that safe storage facilities are maintained. It is simply a cost recovery scheme with fees ranging from $10 to $250.

Mr. Stan Schumacher (Palliser): Mr. Speaker, I really did not intend to debate this motion, but I am moved to participate because the minister said this is not a revenue-producing scheme. We know that this government operates very expensively. We know that passports are not supposed to be revenue-producing either, but their term was reduced from ten years to five for the same fee. That was quite an increase when it was instituted, and then within two or three years, in spite of the Anti-Inflation Board's being in operation, the government went well beyond the guidelines set for everybody else in the country. Many examples of the government's not obeying rules and regulations could be cited.

Mr. MacKay: Post office boxes.

Mr. Neil: And stamps.

Mr. Schumacher: The hon. member for Central Nova (Mr. MacKay) cites the case of post office boxes. Those were not supposed to be revenue-producing either. The only protection the ordinary citizen has—and it has been mentioned before that two and one half million people are affected—will cost more all the time.

The hon. member for Moose Jaw (Mr. Neil) and others have pointed out that the government is placing an onerous and heavy burden on businessmen by compelling them to keep complicated records to maintain the gun registration which is going to be put into place under this legislation, although the government protests that it is not going to do so.

Reference has also been made to all the other reports which will have to be made by small businessmen. That will be dealt with by regulation as well. The fee is not going to be fixed at any level. There is no guarantee that it will be fixed at $10, $250 or anything else. Here we have another example of the law being regulated by bureaucrats under the name and hand of the governor in council. We will find that this is the camel's nose in the tent. We will have another form of taxation introduced under the guise of some type of license fee. I do not think this is the time to increase the cost of doing business or the cost of living. I urge the House to consider seriously this very reasonable motion of the hon. member for Moose Jaw and to support its passage.

[Translation]

Mr. Armand Caouette (Villeneuve): Mr. Speaker, I have carefully listened to the remarks made by my colleagues from the Progressive Conservative and New Democratic Parties, and I felt compelled to take advantage of the few minutes that are allocated to us to discuss a little this amendment presented by the Progressive Conservative Party. I cannot but congratulate them given the fact that I represent in the House a riding where the major sport of my constituents happens to be hunting.

Once again, we are going to force small businesses to pay amounts varying between $10 and $200, according to what the minister just said, and I am asking myself the following question: How is it that the federal government has once again decided to tax the small businesses, while the province of Quebec already has a law whereby these small businesses are being taxed when they want to sell the necessary goods not only to Quebec hunters but also to hunters who come from the United States and other countries to enjoy this beautiful sport which is hunting?

Mr. Speaker, I think this government is again making a mistake, under Bill C-51, by asking our small businesses, those little stores, to disburse additional amounts, as the member for Joliette (Mr. La Salle) stated so well, while the sale of these firearms or ammunitions is not their primary source of income, taking into account the fact that they stock only very few of these items, but that they provide a great service to all the people who want to practise their favorite sport during their vacation time by going into remote areas of Quebec and of other provinces. I am asking myself why this government is trying to deter hunters, especially American residents, from spending their money on purchasing certain types of firearms and ammunitions, as well as all sorts of things.

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Order, please. It being ten o'clock, in accordance with Standing Order 40 a motion to adjourn the House is deemed to have been made and seconded at this time.

[Mr. Schumacher.]

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 40 deemed to have been moved.

ENERGY—OIL—SUGGESTION EXTRA REVENUE BE PLACED IN FUND TO BE USED ONLY FOR EXPLORATION

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, on June 27 in the absence of the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Gillespie) I directed the following question to the government House leader, who was then Acting Prime Minister:

Is it correct that the increase in oil and gas prices recently announced by the federal government will result in windfall revenues of some $1 billion going to oil companies, largely foreign owned, without any obligation on their part to use any of this money for exploration for and development of oil and gas resources?

I will not read the rest of the question. It is in Hansard. The reply of the acting Prime Minister was only that he was not in a position to confirm the alleged facts pointed out by me. He said that my question was in the nature of a representation which would be considered.

In announcing a couple of weeks ago an increase in the Canadian crude oil price of $1 a barrel as of July 1 and three subsequent $1 per barrel increases at six-month intervals, the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources said that the purpose of these subtantial increases was to encourage development and production of oil resources. But how would these objectives be achieved if, of the added revenues as a result of these increases, 24.6 per cent—that is, in effect, 25 per cent—would go to the oil companies, 48.4 per cent to the oil provinces, and 27 per cent to the federal government, and if in fact the oil companies would get their 25 per cent without doing anything extra at all by way of exploration and development? How would this windfall to the oil companies create increased exploration and production activity?

● (2200)

Well, Mr. Speaker, in today's Globe and Mail a letter appeared signed by the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources, which constitutes an attempt to give the kind of information I was seeking in my question. First of all, his letter confirmed the provision of the additional revenues I have just mentioned. However, it disputes the claim that the 25 per cent to the oil companies would total $1 billion over the next 12 months. The letter claims, instead, that this is a gross amount and the net amount after royalties to the producing provinces would be only about half of this. Additional amounts from these revenues would go as federal taxes, the exact sum depending on the extent to which the industry re-invests the additional cash flow. But, Mr. Speaker, from the letter it seems clear that after taking taxes and royalties into account, the oil industry would still be left with as much as several hundred million dollars at the very least without doing any exploration and development in addition to what they are doing now, or would be doing anyway.

If the purpose of the increase is to bring about increased production of our petroleum resources, why should the oil companies get any additional revenue, even one dollar, that is not used for exploration and development, to bring about such increased production?

The oil companies, Mr. Speaker, have increased their profitability substantially in recent months. The figures indicate a better profit performance than our secondary manufacturing industry. If the purpose of the increase in oil prices is to encourage conservation by consumers and industry, the second reason for the increase presented by the minister when he announced it, surely there is no sound reason why the oil companies should benefit from this objective. Surely if this is the purpose, additional revenues from the price increase should be used by the government for further research into alternative energy sources, particularly renewable ones, and into better methods of conservation. They should be used to assist low income Canadians to insulate their homes, to provide meaningful financial assistance for them to do this to a greater extent than that made possible by the forthcoming federal government home insulation program, rather than letting this money go into the coffers of the oil industry.

The minister in his letter in today's Globe and Mail said his cash flow monitoring bill presently before parliament will give him the information necessary to evaluate oil industry behaviour. But if after this legislation is passed it is found the industry did not use the additional income from these oil price increases for exploration and development, there is no provision in the bill that I am aware of for getting this money back. It is gone forever. And even though the minister argues the information provided as a result of his bill will prepare the government to take corrective measures, and these are his exact words in the letter, there is no commitment from the government as yet to take such measures, or any indication as to what they might be.

Finally, in his letter the minister argues that the oil price increases will prevent our secondary industry from expanding, and I quote him, "into activities where competitive advantage depends on artificially depressed prices." Mr. Speaker, this is turning reality upside down. If through proper government policy oil prices reflect the actual costs of production and exploring for our own Canadian energy resources, plus a reasonable return, surely these prices will not be artificially depressed. The really artificial prices are those set by the OPEC oil cartel, prices which have no relationship to the cost of production and reasonable returns.

Canadian consumers and workers would, I am sure, prefer that the minister and the government were not seemingly so willing to bring our prices up to the level of the artificially high prices set by the OPEC cartel.

Mr. Leggatt: You are making a good NDP speech.

Mr. Gray: Mr. Speaker, I am not saying higher prices in Canada may not be necessary to bring about development and production of our own petroleum resources, but surely they should be justified on the basis of real cost plus reasonable rate of return, and surely the oil companies should get additional revenues through such increases only if, as, and when they carry out exploration and development work in addition to what they are doing now.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Order, please. I must interrupt the hon. member, whose allotted time has expired.

[Translation]

Mr. Maurice Dupras (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, to a large extent the hon. member has provided the answer to his question by quoting the minister's open letter which The Globe and Mail published today to describe fully what will happen to this additional $1 billion which the companies are expected to receive.

In fact, as the hon. member indicated, the companies will keep only half of that amount. And if the industry continues investing in 1977-78 at the same rates as in 1976, the added revenues of nearly half a billion, after deduction of the operation costs and royalties, will go into capital investments in Canada. Therefore, $160 million will be paid in federal taxes and $35 million in provincial taxes. This will leave the industry with retained earnings of approximately $60 million, and not hundreds of millions as the hon. member indicated.

It should be said also that the federal government will have to spend $105 million in increased equalization payments to the provinces, from the $160 million in added income tax received, as a direct result of the increase in oil and gas prices.

[English]

The government is taking all necessary steps to protect the interests of the Canadian consumer and has instituted a petroleum industry monitoring program. In order to follow more closely the reinvestment behaviour of the petroleum industry, the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Gillespie) has introduced the Petroleum Corporations Monitoring Act, Bill S-4, which provides legislative authority for the collection of cash-flow and re-investment data from members of the Canadian petroleum industry. This program has indicated an increase in reinvestment from 66.9 per cent in 1973 to 76.4 per cent in 1976 for a select sample of 35 leading members of the petroleum industry.

In the absence of any alarming divergence from this encouraging trend, the government will continue to support the view that the corporate sector is the best judge of the risks involved and the best judge of what and where to invest. The above-mentioned monitoring bill will also provide the minister with the information necessary to propose changes to the present system should future investment behaviour of the industry prove to be in contrast with our national interest.

AIR CANADA—PROPOSED COMMITTEE INVESTIGATION OF ALLEGATION LARGE NUMBER OF EMPLOYEES WANT TO LEAVE QUEBEC

Mr. Dan McKenzie (Winnipeg South Centre): Mr. Speaker, at the meeting of the Standing Committee on Transport and Communications on June 21 I presented a motion calling for the committee to investigate the situation in Quebec where 2,600 Air Canada employees requested a transfer out of the province. My motion was accepted by the chairman and the committee. They were to request an order of the House authorizing the committee to launch an investigation.

Because of the seriousness of the matter, I raised a question the next day, June 22. I directed the question to the President of the Privy Council (Mr. MacEachen) who replied that he would consider the situation and see what could be done. Since June 22 I have heard nothing whatsoever from the government with regard to presenting this very serious problem to the committee. That is why I am raising the matter tonight.

I also pointed out at the time that the chief executive officer of Air Canada, Mr. Claude Taylor, has been unable to solve the morale problems, and employees are organizing to further their request for transfers.

I made a trip to Dorval today to visit the Air Canada overhaul and maintenance base there and to meet with the Canadian Aviation Fellowship, an organization which has provided me with information with regard to the 2,600 employees who are requesting a transfer from the province of Quebec.

The Canadian Aviation Fellowship was formed about six months ago by a group of Air Canada employees who were very concerned about radical political events occurring in Quebec which would have a profound effect upon their future. Since its beginning the CAF has expanded considerably and is an official federally chartered organization with approximately 1,000 card carrying members located mainly in Quebec. Their membership consists of people in all areas; mechanics, pilots, flight attendants, ramp workers, clerical, and management. In addition to their card carrying members, they have the full support of several thousand other aviation workers throughout the Canadian aviation industry, many of whom have not formally joined the CAF out of fear of reprisals.

● (2210)

There seems to be some support for their request to move out of the province of Quebec. The federal government and Air Canada are presently completing a $15 million hangar in Winnipeg, and Air Canada has recently been moving maintenance personnel to Toronto. I have here a copy of a letter dated December 1, 1976. It is signed by the Minister of Transport (Mr. Lang), and it was forwarded to the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams) who had written the minister on behalf of a constituent who was requesting the decentralization of Air Canada's facilities currently located in Montreal. My hon. friend was informed by the Minister of Transport as follows:

> Air Canada now has a decentralized organization with much of its staff and facilities located at points across Canada. In this connection, I would point out that an overhaul base will be established in Winnipeg.

So they are building a hangar, and the minister has stated that an overhaul base will be established in Winnipeg. I see no reason for any further delay, and I would suggest that my motion be considered immediately and this serious problem presented to the committee which would begin immediate hearings to consider all the complaints and suggestions of the employees, the unions, the Gens de l'Air and any other interested parties in connection with this serious problem, one which I confirmed today when I visited the Dorval Airport.

These are some of the concerns of the Canadian Aviation Fellowship. They want to know what is going to happen to an English-speaking, non-francophone employee whose job is suddenly designated as bilingual or "French-essential". I can understand that question because Bill-101 put forward by a separatist government is designed to drive Anglophones out of Quebec—there is no doubt about that in my mind; it was confirmed today and it is one of the concerns of these employees. There is no way in which we can operate a national airline safely and efficiently under these conditions.

The Aviation Fellowship further asks what is to become of the opportunities for advancement of English-speaking non-Francophone employees in comparison to those available for Francophone and other bilingual employees. For what jobs would employees be required to take French courses and qualify up to a certain level of competency within a given period? How will this be accomplished?

In a letter to me they point out, further, that the premier of Quebec has already talked about carving up Air Canada after Quebec achieves independence. This, they say, is a very real possibility and cannot be ignored, especially with the Parti Québécois in power. They add that according to Mr. Lévesque's timetable this may well happen within 18 months. The big question is: what is Air Canada's contingency plan to deal with Quebec independence? Never mind acting like ostriches or trying to sweep difficulties under the rug. I have mentioned safety and efficiency. There are other concerns which preoccupy the employees.

Here is an article which appeared in today's Montreal Star. It states:

> A committee of priests and laymen speaking for English Catholic parishes in Montreal says that debate on language is producing quarrels in French-English marriages.
>
> In addition to spreading fear among the English and sparking an exodus of both French and English from the province, the committee said in its brief on language that the government's bill is "having a divisive effect" on mixed marriages.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Order. I regret to inform the hon. member that his time has expired.

[Translation]

Mr. Marcel Roy (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, what the hon. member just did here and in committee is tearing at the Canadian fabric, tearing at Canadian unity. I think on these occasions, we replied to him.

[English]

With respect to the hon. member's motion which he moved before the Standing Committee on Transport and Communications on June 21, 1977, I think it is important to clarify at this time, as I sought to do during a question of privilege on June 22, and as I replied at the time, that this motion has by no means been agreed to in substance by the committee. Air Canada has no plans to move its Dorval maintenance and overhaul base out of Montreal. In regard to moving all the operations from the province of Quebec to Winnipeg, I would like to know from the hon. member if the policy of the Conservative party is to move all the operations from the province of Quebec to Winnipeg—

Mr. Paproski: Just answer the question.

Mr. Roy (Laval): I would like to know exactly what he means by this motion. That is why I call it "déchirure pour l'unité canadienne".

Allegations that as many as 2,600 base employees are wanting to move from Montreal are completely unfounded and the airline has no knowledge of any morale problem at the base resulting from the current political situation in Quebec. Although approximately 325 people are known to be seeking transfers from the maintenance and overhaul base, this total is not significantly higher than the normal number, which is between 100 and 200, given that the over-all work force at the base is about 4,000.

Furthermore, as president Claude Taylor told us in committee, the airline has assured all its employees that no jobs will be threatened because of Quebec's political uncertainty. Nor will an employee's status and job advancement potential be affected by the impact of bilingualism. In fact, Mr. Speaker, although bilingualism will become an increasing asset in Air Canada in Quebec and elsewhere, there will continue to be jobs for unilingual employees in all areas, including Quebec.

[Translation]

The motion we received is tearing at Canadian unity. I should therefore like to know the position of the Progressive Conservative Party, whether or not they agree that all Air Canada's operations be transferred to Winnipeg.

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): The hon. member for Central Nova (Mr. MacKay).

Mr. McKenzie: Let us get it into committee, then, and we will find out about it.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Order, please. The hon. member for Central Nova has the floor. The hon. member for Winnipeg South Centre has had his chance.

INFORMATION—POSSIBILITY OF LEGISLATION TO PROVIDE CITIZENS WITH RIGHT OF ACCESS TO GOVERNMENT FILES

Mr. Elmer M. MacKay (Central Nova): Mr. Speaker, it is with some anticipation that I look forward to the opportunity of debating the Prime Minister's answer to my question on February 7, 1977, regarding more freedom of information for Canadians.

The Prime Minister in his answer did not say that we have lesser rights than Americans; he only said that he would not admit it; and he did not answer my supplementary question as to whether he would consider introducing methods to improve the situation because of the necessity of Canadians having to go to the United States to receive information about their own country. He did not answer that question at all.

But this is still an issue of current interest and importance, Mr. Speaker. For example, it is very significant that a leading Canadian newspaper reported, under yesterday's date, July 11, the speech of Ralph Nader, one of the most important and well respected consumer advocates in the world, broadcast on the CBC, in which he said the following:

> In Ottawa secrecy shrouds even the most routine information—auto safety reports, meat and poultry inspections, the specific reasons for government decisions.

He also said that law students working in Washington last year got Canadian government information which was classified secret by using the American law. The law students, after hearing the Canadian government had refused to divulge the information, asked the U.S. postal service for the information and got it. Mr. Nader reminded Canadians that in the United States a government agency can be hauled into court for withholding information from the public. A Canadian information law with similar clout would reduce government corruption and waste, which Mr. Nader argued thrive in secrecy. He said that a Watergate type scandal in Canada would create a stronger push in parliament to pass a freedom of information law.

• (2220)

Never in the history of our country have we had such a secretive and incompetent government. It is a fair comment that the secrecy is partly the result of a desire to hide its incompetence. Nor have we ever had such a misguided or misinformed Prime Minister whose dreary and pedantic pronouncements in parliament have been remarkable only for their consistency in being incorrect. It is not appropriate under the terms of this adjournment debate to provide examples of his previous patently wrong pronouncements about unemployment, inflation, and the death of separatism, thus I will confine myself to examining the inconsistencies in this one about freedom of information.

The Prime Minister must know that in December, 1975, the Joint Standing Committee on Regulations and Other Statutory Instruments brought in a report approving the principle of legislation dealing with freedom of information and that the House unanimously accepted and approved this resolution on February 12, 1976.

The Prime Minister must also be aware that at the Liberal policy conference in Toronto last fall, that august body of privileged Canadians not only endorsed the concept of a meaningful freedom of information act, but gave it a standing ovation. In view of the almost unanimous cry for a meaningful freedom of information act coming from the public, the press, interest groups, and all political parties, including the Liberal party, one can only wonder why the government and the Prime Minister refuse to enact any freedom of information legislation.

I wonder why the government, in the face of a unanimous resolution of this House and even in the face of the enthusiastic endorsation given to such a proposal by its own party, would continue to refuse to put forward a freedom of information act. The government must have serious reasons if it is prepared to face this almost unanimous demand and to fight to the end for secrecy. In view of the government's part performance, the reason is obvious. This government is the most incompetent, corrupt, and scandal-ridden government in the history of this country. It is determined to see that as little information on its activities as possible is made public because of the likelihood that such information will reveal, as it has so often in the past, that the government's performance has been incompetent and its activities suspicious.

This government is practised and experienced at hiding its activities, shielding them from public scrutiny, and keeping its activities secret, and better than all his ministers of this part of "participatory democracy" is the Prime Minister himself. No one has done more for the cause of secrecy than he.

A partial list only of organizations which agree with the need for meaningful freedom of information legislation is as follows: Canadian Association of University Teachers, Canadian Civil Liberties Association, Canadian Community Newspapers Association, Canadian Labour Congress, Canadian Manufacturers' Association, Consumers Association of Canada, and the last one I will mention is the Canadian Bar Association which passed the following resolution on freedom of information:

Whereas openness of government is essential for participatory democracy;

And whereas access to information is a prerequisite to the exercise of other fundamental rights and freedoms;

And whereas the citizens of Canada have no legal right to government information;

Now therefore be it resolved that the Canadian Bar Association urges that access to information legislation be enacted by the Parliament of Canada and all provincial legislatures in Canada creating a statutory right of persons to obtain access to information held by all governments or their agencies, subject only to a limited list of narrowly defined exceptions, with any refusal to provide such information and any unreasonable delay or costs subject to review and enforcement by the courts on the merits with the burden of proof on the government.

It is obvious that this country does not have adequate freedom of information. Mr. Speaker, I rest my case.

Mr. Mike Landers (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, Bill C-25 has now been given third reading in both Houses of Parliament. Under part IV of Bill C-25, Canadians will be given a right of access to personal information held on them by government departments and agencies. This is the first time that legislation granting such a right has been enacted in Canada or within a parliamentary system similar to Canada's. The right is not an absolute one, and there is general agreement that it cannot be absolute. The rights of the individual have to be balanced against public interest. Every effort, however, has been made by the government to limit the exemptions to the greatest extent possible. Several amendments to part IV were proposed by the government at committee stage in the House, which served to tighten the exemptions.

The exemptions which have been included in part IV are similar to those contained in the U.S. privacy act. If anything, those in part IV should prove to be somewhat narrower.

No amendments to part IV were moved by members of the opposition in committee or report stages in either the House of Commons or the other place. Although the hon. member for Peace River (Mr. Baldwin) made several adverse comments about part IV, neither he nor anyone in his party actually moved any amendments to it.

In third reading debate in the other place, the Leader of the Opposition in the Senate (Senator Flynn) recognized that the bill opened up a new field of legislation and should be passed into law to see how it operates in practice.

I should point out that if the secret of the Prime Minister's (Mr. Trudeau) success is being pedantic, perhaps the official opposition should follow suit if they intend to form the government sometime within the next half century.

Mr. MacKay: It is not worth it if you have to do it on that basis.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Order, please. The motion to adjourn the House is deemed to have been adopted. Accordingly, this House stands adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m.

At 10.28 p.m. the House adjourned, without question put, pursuant to Standing Order.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Wednesday, July 13, 1977

The House met at 2 p.m.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[English]

THE CANADIAN ECONOMY

PROPOSED PROGRAM FOR ECONOMIC RECONSTRUCTION—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. James Gillies (Don Valley): Mr. Speaker, pursuant to Standing Order 43 I rise to present a motion on a matter of urgent and pressing necessity. In the light of the continuing evidence of economic disarray in our country confirmed by today's CPI statement, and of the urgent need for leadership to halt our economic destruction, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Brome-Missisquoi (Mr. Grafftey):

That this House calls upon the government to begin immediately a program of economic reconstruction which shall include the following:

(1) A commitment to stable monetary policy.

(2) A commitment to increase the relative size of the productive element of the economy, i.e. the private sector.

(3) A cut in the federal sales tax on building supplies to stimulate demand for housing and thus create jobs in the construction industry.

(4) An emergency job creation program.

(5) Long term tax incentives for firms investing in Atlantic Canada or Quebec.

(6) Specific tax assistance to encourage small and medium-sized businesses, and

(7) A new budget.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Under the terms of the Standing Order the proposed motion can be put to the House only by unanimous consent. Is there consent?

Some hon. Members: No!

REQUEST FOR PROGRAM FOR ECONOMIC RECONSTRUCTION—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Sinclair Stevens (York-Simcoe): Mr. Speaker, I rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43 prompted by the urgent necessity of turning around this government's so-called anti-inflation policies before the social and economic fabric of our country suffers further irreparable harm.

Believing that Canadians cannot for much longer tolerate policies which use mass unemployment to fight inflation, print money at record rates to fight mass unemployment and, finally, blame the private sector, which must live with the results of government mismanagement on this colossal scale for not investing more in permanent job creation, I ask leave to move, seconded by the hon. member for Red Deer (Mr. Towers):

That this House deplores the government's record of nine years of economic failure and calls for an immediate program of economic reconstruction.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Under Standing Order 43, this motion requires the unanimous consent of the House before it can be put. Is there consent?

Some hon. Members: No!

CONDEMNATION OF POLICIES WHICH RESULT IN REDUCED STANDARD OF LIVING—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, I rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43 on a matter of urgent and pressing necessity to move a motion seconded by the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles).

In view of the escalating cost of living as reflected in this month's increase in the CPI of 0.7 per cent which brings the increase for the first six months of 1977 to almost 5 per cent, and in view of the coming increases in oil and natural gas prices, which will lead to another significant increase in the cost of living so that the increase for 1977 is expected to be between 9 per cent and 10 per cent, and whereas wage and salary increases for this year have been limited to 6 per cent, I wish to move:

That this House condemns the government policies which will mean a reduced standard of living in 1977 for most Canadians.

Mr. Speaker: Before a motion can be presented under the terms of Standing Order 43, unanimous consent is required. Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: No!

* * *

[Translation]

PARLIAMENTARY PRESS GALLERY

CONDOLENCES ON DEATH OF SON OF MEMBER, MR. POLIQUIN—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Armand Caouette (Villeneuve): Mr. Speaker, I rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43 to beg leave to move a motion about an urgent matter.

Considering that Mr. Jean-Marc Poliquin is a newspaper man of many years experience reporting parliamentary activities, that during these years he has made many friends among members of parliament, that his family suffered a grievous loss this last weekend, the death of his 24-year-old son, Marc-André, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Richmond (Mr. Beaudoin):

That this House extends to Mr. Jean-Marc Poliquin's family its most sincere condolences on the occasion of the grievous loss it has suffered this last weekend.

Mr. Speaker: The presentation of such a motion can be done only with the unanimous consent of the House. Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

[English]

CANADIAN BROADCASTING CORPORATION

LACK OF ENGLISH LANGUAGE TELEVISION STATION IN NEW BRUNSWICK—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Leonard C. Jones (Moncton): Mr. Speaker, I wish to move a motion of urgent and pressing necessity under Standing Order 43.

In view of the fact that the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation does not own and operate an English language television station in the Province of New Brunswick, and in view of the fact that New Brunswick is the only province in Canada which does not have an English-language CBC-owned and operated television station within its boundaries, I would move, seconded by the hon. member for Moose Jaw (Mr. Neil):

That this House express its dismay and request the Secretary of State to cause the CBC to take immediate steps to rectify this serious omission.

Mr. Speaker: Such a motion requires unanimous consent if it is to be put to the House. Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: No!

* * *

CRIMINAL CODE

SUGGESTION NO SUMMER RECESS UNTIL BILL C-51 GIVEN THIRD READING—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Ross Milne (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, I rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43 on a matter of urgent and pressing necessity. Hon. members cannot help but be aware of the terrible shooting incident which occurred the night before last almost within earshot of this House, which has so far resulted in the death of at least one police officer and the serious injury of three others. In view of the fact that this shooting was committed with a recently purchased long gun—

Some hon. Members: Shame! Let's debate it!

[Mr. Caouette (Villeneuve).]

Mr. Milne: —and might, therefore, have been avoided had a firearms acquisition certificate system been in existence as proposed in Bill C-51, I would move, seconded by the hon. member for Restigouche (Mr. Harquail):

● (1410)

That this House resolve not to rise for the summer recess until Bill C-51 has been read a third time, and also give consideration to sitting this day until the bill has been read a third time.

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The purpose of Standing Order 43, of course, is to seek the setting aside of the regular business of the day in order to debate a certain subject matter. In view of the fact that the very bill which is the subject matter of this motion is in fact before the House at this time, I scarcely see how I can put the question.

* * *

SUPPLY AND SERVICES

PROPOSED INVESTIGATION OF GRANTING OF CONTRACTS TO HYDROCULTURE LUWASA—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Tom Cossitt (Leeds): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a matter of pressing necessity concerning Senator Keith Davey's directorship of Hydroculture Luwasa Limited, the fact that this company has received government business and may shortly receive more, and the additional fact that the company's treasurer, Marco Muzzo, has stated to the royal commission on certain sectors of the building industry in Ontario he is not opposed to bribery as long as it works. I move, seconded by the hon. member for Prince George-Peace River (Mr. Oberle):

That this House deplores the giving and further negotiation of government business to Hydroculture Luwasa Limited whose treasurer has admitted indulging in bribery and pay-offs, in one case amounting to $19,500, and calls for a parliamentary inquiry into whether Mr. Muzzo has attempted or is attempting to pursue similar actions with government officials; whether Senator Davey has made any direct or indirect representations to the government on behalf of his treasurer, Marco Muzzo, or Hydroculture Luwasa Limited; and finally whether or not a former director, James Coutts, principal secretary to the Prime Minister, is still a shareholder of the company.

Mr. Speaker: Presentation for debate of such a motion requires the unanimous consent of the House. Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

THE CANADIAN ECONOMY

POSSIBILITY LACK OF JOB CREATION FAULT OF PRIVATE SECTOR—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Sinclair Stevens (York-Simcoe): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of Finance, the President of the Treasury Board, the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce and the Prime Minister, perhaps I could put my question to the Acting Prime Minister. I would make reference to the statement made by his colleague the President of the Treasury Board yesterday to the effect that "there does not yet appear to be the kind of response we are looking for" by the private sector in creating jobs. Can the Acting Prime Minister indicate whether it is now government policy that lack of job creation in the economy is the fault of the private sector?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I believe that what the President of the Treasury Board had in mind were the measures taken in the budget which had as one of their main purposes the stimulation of activity in the private sector. Certainly, it is the main objective of the government that job stimulation take place in the private sector, as the main source of employment in Canada. That is what the minister had in mind.

POSSIBILITY OF INCREASE IN GOVERNMENT EXPENDITURES TO CREATE JOBS

Mr. Sinclair Stevens (York-Simcoe): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question for the Acting Prime Minister. Since the President of the Treasury Board indicated yesterday that it might be necessary for the so-called governmental restraint to come to an end in the interest of further government spending, would the Acting Prime Minister indicate whether such increased spending is going to be undertaken? Is it proposed by the government to make any major shifts in its fiscal stance, in the form of holding back spending on some government plans in the interest of spending money with the desired objective of creating some jobs?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I believe the President of the Treasury Board talked about possibilities, and one of the possibilities has been mentioned by the hon. member. At the present time, the government is still assessing the effect of the budget on the economy. No major decision or shift has been made in government spending priority or in the fiscal framework as such.

INFLATION—GOVERNMENT TARGET FOR THIS YEAR

Mr. Sinclair Stevens (York-Simcoe): Mr. Speaker, my final supplementary is directed to the Acting Prime Minister who, in response to both my earlier questions, referred to the current budget which is still being processed through the House. In view of today's very discouraging figures, would the Acting Prime Minister indicate if the target of 6 per cent for the inflation level this year is still the desired target? More importantly, are they going to shoot for the 4 per cent inflation target which was contemplated in the earlier anti-inflation program papers?

Mr. Bob Kaplan (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, today's figures are not discouraging. In fact on a seasonably adjusted basis, they represent the smallest increase in several months.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Kaplan: The figures released today increase the government's confidence that it will be possible, if not to reach the 6 per cent target set for this coming October, to come very close to it.

JOB CREATION PROGRAMS—REASON FOR FAILURE TO ANNOUNCE NEW PROGRAMS

Mr. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa-Whitby): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Prime Minister, I should like to direct my question to the Acting Prime Minister. Considering for the first time that a minister of the Crown has admitted outside the House in a speech in Toronto something we have been saying for months, namely that unemployment is a major contributor to national disunity, I should like to ask the Acting Prime Minister if the President of the Treasury Board was speaking as a spokesman for the government as a whole? Does this reflect a change in government policy? If it does, and if the government is at long last serious about recognizing unemployment as a source of disunity, would the Acting Prime Minister tell us why the plans the government is allegedly working on are not now announced in the House so that we can start creating jobs for this fall and winter?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I do not believe the President of the Treasury Board was making any new statement of policy in relating the existence of unemployment to possible strains to the unity of the country. It has always been widely regarded that regional economic disparity could be a destabilizing factor in the country, and that is something new. It was stated in the debate last week by the Prime Minister and other hon. members, and particularly by the Secretary of State for External Affairs.

With respect to the announcement of further job creation programs, that is a matter which will be taken care of in due course by the Minister of Manpower and Immigration.

* * *

MANPOWER

DATE OF ANNOUNCEMENT OF NEW JOB CREATION PROGRAMS—REQUEST FOR RELEASE OF CONFIDENTIAL STUDY ON UNEMPLOYMENT

Mr. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa-Whitby): Mr. Speaker, notwithstanding what the Acting Prime Minister has said, I am sure most members on this side of the House will recognize a shift in public policy by the government in the speech of the President of the Treasury Board in Toronto last night, when he talked about disunity and talked about the government's failure to create jobs.

I should like to direct a question to the Minister of Manpower and Immigration who inadvertently acknowledged yesterday that the government is working on plans. As reported in the press, he said that they are working on plans to offset fall and winter unemployment. If the government is working on plans, I should like to ask the minister when these plans will be announced? Will it be soon? If legislation is required to implement them and to have them in effect this fall and winter, will the minister say when we are called back here in August that we will have legislation before us which will do something about the serious unemployment question?

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Bud Cullen (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, as I have indicated to this House on more than one occasion, it does not take the catalyst of an unemployment statistic to move this government to action.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

• (1420)

Mr. Cullen: That seems to be the situation with the opposition.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Tell that to the unemployed.

Mr. Cullen: Mr. Speaker, so far as programs for this year are concerned, we had already announced that $458 million would be devoted to direct job creation. That figure represents a $100 million increase over the original amount of last October. I said that we would probably announce phase 2 some time this week, and each individual member will receive notification of the amount available for his or her particular riding. We are looking at our job experience training program, the summer component of which worked so well and about which we have received so many compliments from the business community that we are now considering putting in place a winter component of the program.

An hon. Member: Yes, Canada Works.

Mr. Cullen: Mr. Speaker, if the opposition is interested only in making catcalls I will not give them all the information they want.

Mr. Broadbent: A final supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Considering that 1.3 million are unemployed, I find it astonishing to hear the minister say his programs are working well. Since the minister expressed his intention of telling the House what is going on, will he now release his department's confidential study which forecasts increased unemployment in the coming winter months both for males and females in the age group 25 to 54?

[Mr. Broadbent.]

Mr. Cullen: Mr. Speaker, unlike the Leader of the Opposition, I respect a confidence, and when something is given to me in confidence, that is how I treat it.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Cullen: I do not think even the Leader of the Opposition, or the leader of the New Democratic Party, would suggest that the total gap should be filled by the federal government alone. I say we all have a role to play; we are playing that role well. As the President of the Treasury Board said, private enterprise has a responsible role to play. Each of us has his obligation, which each of us must live up to.

Mr. Paproski: The NDP infiltrated your department, Bud.

* * *

[Translation]

AGRICULTURE

AGREEMENT WITH QUEBEC ON FREIGHT SUBSIDY ON GRAIN—REQUEST FOR REPORT ON NEGOTIATIONS

Mr. Adrien Lambert (Bellechasse): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of Agriculture, I should like to direct my question to his Parliamentary Secretary.

Last week, at the Quebec National Assembly, the hon. member for Beauce-Sud put a question to the Minister of Agriculture asking him what was holding up the signing of the Ottawa-Quebec agreement on the $35 million subsidy to grain transportation. The minister replied that Ottawa was responsible for the delay. Can the parliamentary secretary tell the House whether that is the truth of the matter and, if so, can he also tell us why that agreement has not been signed as expected?

Mr. Irénée Pelletier (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I am sorry, but I do not have with me the information requested by the hon. member. Still, I can tell him that the federal Minister of Agriculture is meeting his Quebec counterpart in Victoria today and that some of those questions, of which that of the hon. member, are on the agenda and will be discussed by the two ministers.

Mr. Lambert (Bellechasse): Mr. Speaker, on a supplementary.

The answer of the Quebec Minister of Agriculture dealt precisely with the possibility of discussions in Victoria. But Quebec is where things happen and Quebec producers are concerned. They want to know, as soon as possible, why that agreement has not been signed, when funds are available and have been earmarked for Quebec transport; the parliamentary secretary should be in a position to advise the House on the matter since it has been the topic of discussions for several weeks now.

Mr. Pelletier: Mr. Speaker, this matter will be discussed today. But I must tell the hon. member that apparently the minister recently asked some of his officials not to communicate with the civil servants of the Department of Agriculture of Canada. If there is a lack of communication, it might be advisable for the Minister of Agriculture of Quebec to inform his officials that they can contact us. We are not uncivilized; we can talk to them.

* * *

[English]

THE CANADIAN ECONOMY

INFLATION—FACTORS WHICH WOULD SLOW RATE OF INCREASE

Mr. Heward Grafftey (Brome-Missisquoi): Mr. Speaker, in a week when record unemployment is being announced—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Grafftey: —and record inflation has been announced this do-nothing government—and none of the ministers in the House to face the music—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Grafftey: —we are not going to be satisfied with answers from parliamentary secretaries.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Does the hon. member have a question?

Mr. Grafftey: My question is directed to the Acting Prime Minister, not to a parliamentary secretary.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

An hon. Member: You are a little jealous.

Mr. Grafftey: My point simply is that with record unemployment and record inflation, none of the responsible ministers are here to face the music.

An hon. Member: And record polls.

Mr. Grafftey: My question to the Acting Prime Minister is the following. Considering the consumer prices have already risen by 5.7 per cent since October 1976, will the minister now concede that there is absolutely no hope that the rate of inflation will be less than the 6 per cent target for the second year of the anti-inflation program announced by the Minister of Finance, and as prices have been increasing at an annual rate of 10 per cent in the past six months, accompanied by record unemployment, can the minister tell the House what factors he expects to slow down this rapid inflation?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Acting Prime Minister): There is a difference of opinion between the hon. member and myself as to the interpretation to be accorded to the CPI figures which have been released today. As the parliamentary secretary has indicated, the month to month increase in the seasonally adjusted CPI is the lowest this year and indicates a downward trend.

Miss MacDonald: Tell that to the old age pensioners.

Mr. Grafftey: My supplementary question to the minister is: Now that the Governor of the Bank of Canada has allowed the money supply to expand at an annual rate of 34 per cent over the past three months, and now that the President of the Treasury Board has threatened to reopen the flood gates of federal spending in the fall, can the minister tell the House whether this administration still retains its rather weak commitment to fiscal and monetary responsibilities?

Mr. MacEachen: All I suggest is that hon. members on the front bench should get together and try to correlate their various economic proposals because the whole symphony or the whole chorus on this point has been very discordant.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

* * *

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

INTERIM ARRANGEMENTS FOR SUPPLYING WEST GERMANY WITH URANIUM

Mr. Joe Clark (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Secretary of State for External Affairs and it refers to statements made yesterday by the Chancellor of West Germany that the Prime Minister said that Canada would be prepared to consider interim arrangements which would enable supplies of Canadian uranium to go forward to Euratom countries for the duration of the evaluation study on the safety of reprocessing. Would the Secretary of State for External Affairs explain to the House the terms of these interim arrangements which the Chancellor of West Germany says have been agreed to by the Government of Canada?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Secretary of State for External Affairs): I will do my best in the constraints of the question period. I should point out that it is not an agreement, except in the sense that it is a matter which we had agreed to put before the negotiators to see if it can be made into a final solution to the problem. The position is that in view of the INFCEP study, that is a complete fuel safeguard study, the proposition has been advanced that it may be possible for us to resume shipments to established customers on a consulting basis, that is that they consult with us in terms of the possible reprocessing or further use of the material on a limited basis and purely for the time during which the study is underway. We undertook to have these questions referred to the negotiators for both sides to see whether some solution within that framework might be possible to work out.

● (1430)

INTERIM ARRANGEMENTS FOR SALE OF URANIUM TO WEST GERMANY—MEASURES TO PROHIBIT TRANSFER TO OTHER COUNTRIES

Mr. Joe Clark (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, what the Secretary of State for External Affairs has said is that Canada has now changed its policy of January and is discussing shipments. He talks about discussions. He talks about a limited basis. I remind him that on April 5 in answer to a question asked by the hon. member for Kingston and the Islands he said that, and I quote:

Unless the agreements—

Which would include an agreement between Canada and West Germany.

—bilaterally are of the nature which prevents the transfer to other member countries within the European community, we will not sign that agreement and those supplies will be held up.

I would like to know whether that is still the position of the government of Canada, and I would like to know whether the interim arrangements which Canada is now prepared to discuss will specifically prohibit the transfer of Canadian uranium to other countries within the EEC, and particularly to France, which has not signed the NPT.

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I think the answer to that is yes. Let me go on to emphasize that what was discussed with the Chancellor of Germany was purely and simply the question of the resumption of shipments. There are several other elements in the negotiating process at the moment which also have to be resolved before any resumption, even on a limited basis. One of those is the question of retransfers within the community, and in so far as we were able to determine as of yesterday it appears that there is a willingness on the part of the community members to accept Canada's conditions in this regard. Since the Leader of the Opposition specifically mentioned France, indications are that France would be prepared to accept those conditions. However, I emphasize that that is a related but separate issue from the resumption of shipments per se.

Mr. Clark: The minister speaks quite generally, particularly in relation to France. Is it the absolute position of the government of Canada that there will be a prohibition upon the transfer of materials to France until France agrees to Canadian safeguards and standards? Does that continue to be the position of the government of Canada?

Mr. Jamieson: Mr. Speaker, I thought I had answered, but unfortunately perhaps I did not do so adequately. There has been no change in the position, and therefore, as the Leader of the Opposition has stated, that is the position. I emphasize that that was not part of the discussions with the German Chancellor because we were dealing expressly with the resumption of shipments. Incidentally, there are three or four other elements of significance which have not yet been resolved, and as the Leader of the Opposition stated, our position is as we have declared it to be since the first of the year.

SALE OF URANIUM TO EUROPEAN COMMON MARKET COUNTRIES—MAINTENANCE OF CANADIAN VETO OVER USES

Miss Flora MacDonald (Kingston and the Islands): Mr. Speaker, I would like to know if in the discussion which took place, Canada expressly put forward the position that it wishes to retain its veto over the uses of Canadian uranium within any of the countries of the European Common Market to which shipments would be resumed. Did Canada ask to retain its veto?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Forgive me, Mr. Speaker, but is the hon. lady referring to a veto over transhipment?

Miss MacDonald: Over transhipment, over reprocessing and over uses to which West Germany could put Canadian uranium.

Mr. Jamieson: The proposal which was discussed at the meetings, I emphasize, was the new element of a study to be undertaken internationally and to which as a result of yesterday's talks the Federal Republic of Germany is committed. This study is likely to take somewhere between a year and a half and two years. This raises a question as to whether the so-called veto should be imposed during this interim period over limited stocks.

I emphasize that we have not accepted that position. I want to make that perfectly clear to the House. The proposal which has been put forward is that we might consider some interim arrangement which would clearly involve consultation with us, but we have not—and I am being perfectly frank and candid—yet through the negotiating process determined whether this is an acceptable proposition. But we do recognize that there are complexities which have been introduced into this issue, far beyond those which already exist, as a result of the international study because this will determine, presumably within 18 months to two years, whether the so-called plutonium economy ought to be encouraged or discouraged, or whether it is practical.

Miss MacDonald: While I understand the complexities of the situation, I also understand that there is a vast difference between the word "veto" and the word "consultation". I would like to ask the minister if in the negotiations, the purpose of which I understood was to stiffen safeguards rather than to loosen them, it was taken into consideration that in recent days France, West Germany and three other European nations signed an agreement to develop and export fast breeder nuclear reactors, in open defiance of President Carter's effort to ban such atomic devices. What is the rationale for resuming uranium shipments to West Germany at a time when countries such as West Germany and France are increasing their activities in the field of nuclear proliferation?

Mr. Jamieson: Mr. Speaker, without trying to assume your prerogatives in any way, this is an argumentative question which would take a very long time to answer. Of course, we are aware of this move in the European community and elsewhere toward the so called fast breeder reactor. We are also aware that the view of President Carter is that this kind of reactor and reprocessing is not desirable. However, at the same time there is an equally strongly held view, which has very strong technical and scientific support, which supports the position of the Europeans. This is why the study is being undertaken. We have not said that we will resume. A proposition has been put forward to us which would contemplate very limited supplies during the period of the study, and we have said we will consider it. I emphasize that there has been no negotiation on that point as yet.

POSSIBLE DATE OF INTERIM AGREEMENT WITH WEST GERMANY ON SALE OF URANIUM

Miss Flora MacDonald (Kingston and the Islands): Mr. Speaker, when does the minister think he will be in a position to give a definitive response to the House as to when any such agreements will be arrived at?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, on the general question of the whole debate now going on universally on nuclear proliferation I think hon. members opposite know that I have had a statement in preparation, and for thoroughly understandable reasons it has not been possible to get all interested members in the House at an appropriate time to make it. I would be glad to make that statement available to hon. members or table it if, indeed, we rise before I have a chance to make that statement on motions. However, as far as the negotiations are concerned, it is contemplated that a conclusion of those negotiations ought to come within the next two or three months.

SALE OF URANIUM REPROCESSING PLANT TO BRAZIL BY WEST GERMANY—DISCUSSIONS WITH CHANCELLOR SCHMIDT

Mr. David MacDonald (Egmont): Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the Secretary of State for External Affairs can inform us whether there was any discussion either between himself and Chancellor Schmidt or between the Prime Minister and Chancellor Schmidt with respect to the very grave concern about the sale of a full nuclear system to Brazil, with respect to the opposition to that on the part of the United States government and, in fact, its refusal to participate in that sale, with respect to the impact any future supplies of uranium or materials to West Germany from Canada might have and with respect to the very dangerous precedent being established in Brazil, which is ruled at the present time by a military dictatorship which is known to be not entirely responsible in the area of human rights.

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I will deal with the second part of that question first. There is no contemplation that any Canadian supply of materials would in any way find its way out of either Germany or the European community to Brazil or to any other country. There is a clear safeguard in place in that regard, and there is no problem ensuring that Canadian materials are not used in reactors abroad. On the larger question, the matter of Brazil did arise. I think the hon. member knows it is central to the very fundamental differences that exist—and I repeat, I think they are legitimate differences—at the moment in scientific terms as to the wisdom or otherwise of proceeding with reprocessing. The Federal Republic of Germany has indicated it will not provide any other countries with the kind of arrangement it has with Brazil but apparently it has no intention of reneging or withdrawing from its commitment with Brazil.

● (1440)

SUPPORT FOR UNITED STATES POSITION ON DEVELOPMENT OF NUCLEAR ENERGY—POSSIBILITY OF CHANGE

Mr. James Gillies (Don Valley): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. On his return from the London summit conference the Prime Minister was asked about the relationship of Canada to the United States' position with respect to safeguards and so forth and he made it very clear that day that the Canadian position and the American position were the same and that we are moving ahead on that ground. Do I understand from the minister today that the question is now open and that Canada is no longer supporting the position put forth by President Carter?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I would have to look at Hansard to find out precisely what was said. I think I am reflecting the position of the Prime Minister and the government clearly, however, when I say there is no difference of opinion between ourselves and President Carter on the principles and objectives of non-proliferation. I do not believe we have ever said that we were as assured as is President Carter that reprocessing and similar activities ought to be abandoned totally. What we have said, and this was re-emphasized in the meetings with Chancellor Schmidt, is that the essential element here is a thorough study of all aspects of this matter by the recognized world authorities including many more countries than the seven who were present at the summit—

An hon. Member: Why change the policy?

Mr. Jamieson: The hon. member has asked "Why change our policy?" I have said at least five times this afternoon that there has been no change of policy.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Jamieson: In conclusion, I say once again that we have been asked to consider a possible interim arrangement and we have said we will. Up to the moment there has not been any change. I should remind hon. members opposite also that the United States at this moment is shipping enriched uranium to the same customers in Europe and of course the end result of that kind of shipment in reprocessing terms is precisely the same as getting the uranium from Canada.

INTERIM ARRANGEMENT FOR SALE OF URANIUM TO WEST GERMANY—MINISTER'S VIEW ON CASE OF ACHIEVEMENT

Mr. Joe Clark (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, may I put a supplementary question to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. Chancellor Schmidt is quoted directly as saying a positive interim arrangement now seems fairly easy to achieve. That is the arrangement which would change the Canadian position adopted in January. Is it the position of the Government of Canada that that interim arrangement which would change our January ban, now seems fairly easy to achieve?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I would not wish to go as far as Chancellor Schmidt did in that regard. I do not want to preempt the position of our negotiator. What we have said is that this seems like a basis that is worthy of discussion, if we can put certain restrictions in for a period of 18 months or two years during the period of this study. I should emphasize also that there is no likelihood that any uranium supplies from Canada or new supplies from any source at the present time are likely to be reprocessed in Europe until the mid-1980's. The practical effect of any arrangement we make short-term, therefore, is not going to be reprocessing; it is the principle which is involved and I thoroughly agree with what I detect to be the position of hon. members that the principle is very important.

SALE OF URANIUM TO EUROPEAN COUNTRIES—ALLEGATION OF CHANGE IN POLICY—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Allan Lawrence (Northumberland-Durham): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. If the policy in January was that there were to be no shipments of Canadian uranium into Europe, the EEC or any individual European country until they met with our safeguards and if the minister now tells us that they are seriously considering abridging that policy to permit the shipment of uranium until the study is completed, how can he come here today and tell us there is no change in that policy?

An hon. Member: There is no policy.

Mr. Lawrence: If serious consideration is being given to abridging that policy is that not a break with the policy? What has happened since January that has caused the minister and the Prime Minister to change their minds?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I am glad that the hon. member came to a straightforward question at the end of his discourse because I am in a position to answer. What has happened since January is a very significant commitment, first of all, on the part of the countries present at the summit and yesterday a reinforcement by Chancellor Schmidt, 24 hours before he goes to Washington, to full participation in the full cycle study which was not in existence in January and which was only proposed—

An hon. Member: That is not meeting your commitment.

Mr. Jamieson: Mr. Speaker, with the greatest respect if the hon. member would only permit me to finish the answer he might spare this House the opportunity—

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

[Mr. Clark.]

Mr. Jamieson: Mr. Speaker, it seems to me to be the essence of convoluted logic to argue that because you are prepared to talk to someone about a new proposition, you have already changed your policy. It simply makes no sense to argue that way. I think it is important, however, that the House understand that this study to which the United States attributes enormous importance—and in this respect we are totally in agreement with them and Chancellor Schmidt and the Prime Minister indicated yesterday that they are fully committed to it and wish it broadened to involve countries other than the seven—we hope the study will answer definitively what is at the present time a highly emotional argument. I do not suppose that even the hon. member for Kingston and the Islands would claim to be an authority on all of these matters.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Clark: She, at least, is consistent.

Mr. Jamieson: If we can achieve reasonable terms of reference for this study we will have something specific on which to come to the ultimate conclusion as to whether the so-called plutonium economy makes sense or whether it does not. That is the whole issue and that is the element that has been introduced since January.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Lawrence: A final supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Why not wait until the end of the study?

Mr. Jamieson: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member has asked why not wait until the end of the study. It is because there are existing plants in Europe in countries entirely friendly to Canada with which we seek to co-operate where there would be serious problems if there were not at least some effort made to provide them with their ongoing needs during this period. What we are seeking to do—

An hon. Member: Which you knew about in January.

Mr. Jamieson: We knew about it in January but we did not have at that time an element of the study which, of course, both from our point of view and from theirs, is causing some caution as to long-term commitments which may very well be proved ridiculous by the outcome of the study. So we are talking about an 18-month to two-year period. There is no intention under any circumstances to provide huge stockpiles which might be available for years to come.

To answer the hon. member's question, if we can co-operate on a short-term basis to ensure that existing reactors are not forced to shut down and in the case of Germany as much as 25 per cent of the population deprived of power then it seems to me sensible in the interest of the western alliance and all the other considerations for us to make the effort to come to an agreement satisfactory to both of us.

ENERGY

DATE OF ANNOUNCEMENT OF POLICY ON DEVELOPMENT OF RENEWABLE RESOURCES

Mr. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. In view of the considerable savings in energy costs, estimated at $2 billion per year, which could be achieved by the end of the century if solar and wind energy supply were used in Canada, could the minister inform this House whether he intends to propose and eventually announce a policy aimed at increasing the development and application of renewable resources of energy?

An hon. Member: They have lots of wind.

Hon. Alastair Gillespie (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, the hon. member's interest in solar energy is well known as he is the sponsor of a bill with respect to solar energy. As hon. members perhaps realize the government has been in the process of developing policy with respect to renewable energy. In my department, for example we have set up a branch which is concerned with the development of those policies but we have done more than that—we have increased our budget for research and development and demonstration of solar technology in this country very substantially. We have contacted the provinces as part of the process of trying to develop on a concerted basis—and let us recognize that the provinces have probably one of the key responsibilities with respect to solar power. They alone will determine whether the zoning and the bylaws are such that people can put solar energy in with impunity. What I am talking about is the "right to light".

● (1450)

If hon. members opposite do not think—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Fraser: We did not ask the question.

Mr. Gillespie: I regret that the interest of the opposition is so superficial on a matter of such importance. They cannot understand the importance of the right to light.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

* * *

ANTI-INFLATION BOARD

SUGGESTED CHANGE IN GUIDELINES ON WAGE INCREASES

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the Acting Prime Minister. In view of the fact that most Canadians will have a reduced standard of living in 1977 as a result of the 6 per cent limit for wage and salary increases for this year as set out by the Anti-Inflation Board guidelines while the cost of living will increase by substantially more than 6 per cent, will the government consider giving instructions to the AIB to adjust their guidelines to ensure that Canadian wage and salary earners will at least be able to maintain their present standard of living?

Mr. Bob Kaplan (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, in view of questions asked earlier by the hon. member for York-Simcoe, I would indicate that the Minister of Finance and the President of the Treasury Board today and tomorrow are travelling across the country to consult with provincial premiers and provincial governments about the decontrol period and the future of the program. Hon. members can look forward in the next few weeks to an announcement by the Minister of Finance about the future of the program which will cover the questions raised by the hon. member.

Mr. Orlikow: Mr. Speaker, the decontrol period may be months from now. Many unions are now negotiating new contracts for the next year or more. They are restricted to a maximum of 6 per cent under the guidelines enacted by this government while the cost of living in the first six months of this year has already increased by 5 per cent. Obviously they will be losers this year. Will the government give consideration to adjusting the guidelines so that people negotiating new contracts can at least keep last year's standard of living?

Mr. Kaplan: Mr. Speaker, it is taking a lot for granted to assume what the performance of the anti-inflation program will be, as the hon. member suggested, very far outside the range of the government's target.

* * *

ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE

REQUEST FOR INVESTIGATION OF DEALINGS BETWEEN GOVERNMENT AND DIRECTORS OF HYDROCULTURE LUWASA

Mr. Tom Cossitt (Leeds): Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct a question to the Minister of Justice. It arises from the business given to and presently under negotiation with Hydroculture Luwasa of which Senator Davey is a director and Marco Muzzo also a director and treasurer. Is the government aware that Marco Muzzo admitted to extensive bribery and payoffs before the Ontario Royal Commission on certain sectors of the building industry? Is the Minister of Justice therefore prepared to change his mind, and authorize a full investigation into all details that may have occurred between persons in the federal government, Marco Muzzo, Senator Davey and James Coutts with particular reference as to whether or not any inducements, undue representations or conflicts of interests are involved?

Hon. Ron Basford (Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, I am not aware of the information to which the hon. member makes reference. I will check into it.

Oral Questions

FOREIGN INVESTMENTS

TAKEOVER OF PONY SPORTING GOODS—POSSIBILITY OF REPRESENTATIONS BY SENATOR DAVEY

Mr. Tom Cossitt (Leeds): Mr. Speaker, I will direct my supplementary to the Acting Prime Minister in the absence of the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce whom I believe has left the chamber. This arises from cabinet approval on June 30 under the Foreign Investment Review Act—

An hon. Member: Here he is now.

Mr. Cossitt: I will then direct my question to the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce. It arises from cabinet approval on June 30 under the Foreign Investment Review Act of the takeover of Pony Sporting Goods Limited of Markham, Ontario by CITC Industries Incorporated of New York, a subsidiary of Powers Commercial Corporation of the United States. Is the government aware that Senator Keith Davey was a director of Pony Sporting Goods Limited of Markham when this matter was considered by cabinet? Can he tell us now if he or any other of the officials or cabinet ministers received representations from Senator Davey for favourable consideration for appointments? If he cannot tell us, is he prepared to assure the House that he will look into this situation and report back within two days.

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): I am not at all aware of that, Mr. Speaker. However, I am extremely disappointed that the hon. member, before inquiring privately, would throw names into the arena like he is doing.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Chrétien: It is a very questionable practice. Although I am a Francophone, I have learned from studying English law that one is innocent until proven guilty.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Chrétien: I will certainly make inquiries. I know that Senator Davey never talked to me about any of this. I can report that fact to the House. I am sure that was not the consideration at all, if there is any truth to the allegation of the hon. member.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Cossitt: Aside from the fact the minister says I am throwing names around irresponsibly without looking into the matter, I would ask him this. He was the one, was he not, who announced that this takeover had taken place. I would also ask him whether he is not in a position as I was, or any other citizen is, to inquire who the directors of companies are and, if so, why did he not do that?

Mr. Chrétien: Mr. Speaker, I am not a witchhunter. Senator Davey did not speak to me. I did not know anything until the present moment. I will make inquiries. A decision was made on the facts as they were placed before cabinet. No one mentioned the name of Senator Davey to me. Even if I did know that, it would not have changed my judgment.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

* * *

LABOUR CONDITIONS

POSITION OF CANADIAN LABOUR CONGRESS ON PARTICIPATION IN MULTIPARTITE NATIONAL FORUM

Mr. John A. Fraser (Vancouver South): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Labour. In an interjection on June 13 when I was speaking in the House, the Minister of Finance said that he had had private indications from the Canadian Labour Congress that they were prepared to cooperate toward participation in a multipartite national forum which the minister put forward some months ago. Can the minister tell the House whether there have been private talks between the CLC and cabinet ministers which indicate that they are prepared to participate in the multipartite national forum or is the position of the CLC as it has been publicly stated, namely that they are not prepared to participate in that particular forum.

Hon. John C. Munro (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, I think the position can be more accurately stated to be this. Discussions with the CLC with reference to the multipartite forum and other various types of institutions that would ensure a working together between government, labour and business are all part of the discussions that surround an acceptable formula for decontrol. These discussions are still going on. There is no conclusion with respect to them.

Mr. Fraser: My question is whether the Minister of Finance is correct when he says he has had private communications which are contrary to what the CLC has been saying publicly. I would like the minister to answer that. As well, will he advise whether he realizes that the Canadian Manufacturers' Association as recently as yesterday said that they view this multipartite national forum as just "window dressing". If that is their understanding on the position of labour, the minister ought to inform the House whether in view of the fact that neither management nor labour will support that particular proposition, how long this government is going to hold it out as policy.

Mr. Munro (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, this is a very worthwhile proposal indeed, one that merits support. I think the hon. member will agree with that. This is a very worth while proposal indeed and is one which merits support. I think the hon. member would agree. It is unfortunate that he seems to be reaching to destroy what is a good proposal for the benefit of all Canadians.

● (1500)

Mr. Fraser: Now wait a minute!

Mr. Munro (Hamilton East): If you don't mind, I am answering the question. You wait a minute until I am finished, then you can ask another question. The Canadian Manufacturers' Association may not be reflecting the encouraging words we have heard from many in the business community. It is not the only spokesman for the business community. There are many in the business community who have been involved in discussions with reference to the multipartite approach. Labour wants to have a voice, as has often been stated, within a national forum where it can have some influence in the development of national economic policies. This affords them such an opportunity. The fact that they may want to negotiate with respect to the characteristics of such a council seems to me to be quite reasonable and acceptable, and a discussion of that sort is going on in the context, as I say, of talks with reference to decontrol.

Mr. Fraser: A representative of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, Sydney Jackson, said yesterday as reported in the press today: "My view and the view of any business leaders I have talked to is that this would be window dressing and a waste of time. Labour, I understand, feels the same way." My question to the minister is this: he needs both labour and business in this multipartite committee and if neither one of them intends to take part, why does the government continue to hold this out as policy when it is clear the two essential ingredients will not take part?

Mr. Munro (Hamilton East): Answering questions from the hon. member for Vancouver South is rather like trying to blow over a stone wall. He is not receptive to what I consider to be the clear statement I have just made. His question is based on two fundamental false premises. First, Mr. Jackson does not speak for the entire business community. If the hon. member wants to believe that, he can believe a lot of ridiculous things. I, for one, do not share that belief.

Mr. Fraser: Am I supposed to believe the Minister of Finance?

Mr. Munro (Hamilton East): The other false premise is that Mr. Jackson speaks for the labour movement, or speaks to it on any regular basis. I do not believe he does—certainly not on a more regular basis than I have been doing myself for some time with respect to this item.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[Translation]

AGRICULTURE

Third report of Standing Committee on Agriculture—Mr. Daudlin.

[Editor's Note: For text of the above report, see today's Votes and Proceedings.]

[English]

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the following questions will be answered today: 1,899, 1,984, 2,468, 2,758 and 2,831.

[Text]

KITIMAT-EDMONTON PIPELINE

Question No. 1,899—Mr. Leggatt:

1. What are the names and file numbers of all studies pertaining to the proposed Kitimat-Edmonton pipeline which have been completed or are under way by the Department of (a) Transport (b) the Environment (c) Energy, Mines and Resources?

2. What studies pertaining to the pipeline have been proposed by the Department of (a) Transport (b) the Environment (c) Energy, Mines and Resources?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Departments of Transport, the Environment and Energy, Mines and Resources as follows: 1. (a) 2254-124 "Code of Recommended Standards for the Prevention of Pollution at Marine Terminals" (TERMPOL Code) 9004-2-2 "Freight Commodities and Movements—Oil—Assessment at Kitimat, B.C.—Marine Terminal Proposal". (b) For certain environmental aspects of the proposed Kitimat-Edmonton pipeline, there is information in various stages ranging from raw data (for example, salmon spawning escapements; some weather station data) to published reports (for example, "The Kitimat River Estuary—Status of Environmental Knowledge to 1976"; a Report of the Estuary Working Group; Special Estuary Series No. 6, Department of Fisheries and the Environment, December, 1976). Studies pertaining to the marine aspects of the proposed project are as follows: (i) DFE is a member of the Termpol Coordinating Committee and has studied the Termpol Submission provided by Kitimat Pipe Line Limited in December, 1976. The first outcome of this study has been a series of questions transmitted to the Chairman, Termpol Coordinating Committee. These were compiled with other questions and sent to the company on February 25, 1977. Based on existing information as described above, as well as the Company's Termpol Submission, and replies recently received to the questions raised by the Termpol Committee, a Technical Appraisal of the proposal by the Termpol Coordinating Committee has been undertaken. The Department of Environment has contributed an environmental assessment review. (ii) Only one specific study is being prepared in support of the Technical Appraisal; a preliminary draft of "A Marine Climatology of the Approaches to Kitimat, B.C." (Hydrometeorology and Marine Application Division, Atmospheric Environment Service, March 1977). (iii) A West Coast Deep Water Oil Port Comparative Study is underway in the Pacific Region. A study of the Kitimat Pipe Line application to the National Energy Board is underway to ascertain the best course of action with respect to protection of the terrestrial and freshwater environment under the Fisheries Act and Migratory Birds Convention Act. (c) Nil.

2. (a) An assessment was made of the proponent's submission with respect to the proposed Kitimat terminal system and was published on May 25, 1977 as Transport Canada publication number T.P. 851. (b) Four additional studies are considered necessary. These studies relate to oceanographic and hydrographic studies, meteorological requirements (a) in support of environmental impact assessment of a port at Kitimat, B.C. and (b) to augment meteorological service along the north B.C. coast for tanker traffic, migratory bird studies and fisheries studies relating to fishing operations, resource documentation, socio-economics and water quality. With the exception of some of the hydrographic studies, these were considered to fall in the category of accelerated studies, and hence the responsibility for undertaking them was considered to be that of the company. (c) Nil.

APPLICATIONS FOR DREE ASSISTANCE TO INDUSTRY

Question No. 1,984—Mr. Cyr:

1. How many applications has the Department of Regional Economic Expansion received requesting assistance to industries in outlying regions for each province during the fiscal year ending March 31 (a) 1970 (b) 1971 (c) 1972 (d) 1973 (e) 1974 (f) 1975?

2. For the same years, by province, how many industries received grants and what were the amounts?

3. For the same years, by province, how many applications have been rejected?

4. For the same years, which province had the highest rate of rejections or retrieval of applications?

Mr. Ed. Lumley (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): The reply for the Department of Regional Economic Expansion is as follows: the requested information is provided for firms which, as of December 31, 1976, had applied for an incentive under the Regional Development Incentive Program to assist them in the establishment, expansion or modernization of a facility in a designated region. 1. The number of applications received, by province and by fiscal year, is shown in (1) of the list below.

2. The number of offers accepted by applicants as of December 31, 1976 is shown in (2) of the list below and reflects the fact that some offers accepted in the past were later declined by the applicant or withdrawn by the department.

3. The number of applications received by the department and rejected as that term is defined in the monthly report to parliament (i.e., an application turned down because the project in question is considered ineligible, would proceed without incentive assistance or would not make a significant contribution to economic expansion and social adjustment within a designated region) is shown in (3) of the list below.

4. The information requested is assumed to be for rejections and withdrawals. The number of applications received by the department and rejected (as previously defined) or withdrawn as that term is defined in the monthly report to parliament (i.e., an application withdrawn, at the request of the applicant, after receipt but before or during evaluation) is shown in (4) of the list below.

Activity under the Regional Development Incentives Program as of December 31, 1976

1. Numbers of applications received:

	(a) 1969-70	(b) 1970-71	(c) 1971-72	(d) 1972-73	(e) 1973-74	(f) 1974-75
(i) Newfoundland	29	80	114	71	65	43
(ii) Prince Edward Island	12	39	34	32	19	25
(iii) Nova Scotia	52	83	146	131	103	84
(iv) New Brunswick	55	122	143	155	148	114
(v) Quebec	332	744	1712	1600	842	536
(vi) Ontario	48	134	212	196	175	126
(vii) Manitoba	117	163	163	151	84	126
(viii) Saskatchewan	14	69	64	56	42	115
(ix) Alberta	28	71	65	53	53	26
(x) British Columbia	22	46	49	48	25	23
(xi) Others*	2	17	17	19	18	1
Totals	711	1,568	2,719	2,512	1,574	1,219

2. Number of applicants that accepted offers of incentive and estimated amount of incentives (in thousands of dollars)

	No.	Est. Amount	No.	Est. Amount	No.	Est. Amount	No.	Est. Amount	No.	Est. Amount	No.	Est Amount
(i) Newfoundland	3	210.9	12	1,123.1	24	5,575.0	18	1,694.9	24	1,779.5	12	1,612.2
(ii) Prince Edward Island	0	0.0	12	811.1	10	789.4	11	2,115.4	11	1,136.4	11	456.3
(iii) Nova Scotia	9	1,038.7	30	19,379.6	37	5,711.3	43	12,759.8	42	4,764.6	37	7,621,5
(iv) New Brunswick	12	5,159.1	28	6,186.9	51	8,626.1	47	6,324.4	64	13,471.0	46	10,136.5
(v) Quebec	33	5,029.6	128	25,125.0	481	52,974.6	490	40,170.0	326	36,730.0	248	34,617.5
(vi) Ontario	5	635.5	24	13,540.9	34	4,808.8	46	21,236.9	50	10,205.1	46	6,214.2
(vii) Manitoba	14	1,845.6	51	5,903.7	59	3,244.0	51	18,118.0	42	7,039.7	57	7,396.1
(viii) Saskatchewan	2	618.9	19	3,964.9	16	1,144.1	14	1,993.0	15	3,157.6	32	3,959.1
(ix) Alberta	4	1,373.4	20	16,732.1	13	2,848.7	11	3,949.9	12	839.6	16	5,775,3
(x) British Columbia	4	288.4	5	182.7	11	2,346.9	6	556.8	8	1,527.7	4	288.5
Totals	86	16,200.1	329	92,950.0	737	88,068.9	737	108,919.1	594	80,651.2	09	79,077.2

* Applications for incentives having no indication as to the location of the proposed facility.

[Mr. Goodale.]

Activity under the Regional Development Incentives Program as of December 31, 1976

3. Number of applications rejected by the department, as defined in the monthly report to parliament on Regional Development Incentives

	(a) 1969-70	(b) 1970-71	(c) 1971-72	(d) 1972-73	(e) 1973-74	(f) 1974-75
(i) Newfoundland	2	26	36	26	16	5
(ii) Prince Edward Island	0	16	13	5	5	5
(iii) Nova Scotia	3	9	22	31	30	16
(iv) New Brunswick	3	29	21	33	30	13
(v) Quebec	35	142	251	492	276	104
(vi) Ontario	4	31	56	77	36	22
(vii) Manitoba	9	45	47	58	16	15
(viii) Saskatchewan	0	15	24	31	6	26
(ix) Alberta	2	20	35	19	13	15
(x) British Columbia	4	10	19	17	6	7
(xi) Others*	0	2	3	3	8	0
Totals	62	345	527	792	442	228

4. Number of applications rejected and withdrawn by the department, as defined in the monthly report to parliament on Regional Development Incentives

(i) Newfoundland	3	41	70	52	41	26
(ii) Prince Edward Island	1	18	18	13	17	8
(iii) Nova Scotia	3	34	62	84	71	40
(iv) New Brunswick	7	44	68	87	67	56
(v) Quebec	60	339	736	1,222	600	292
(vi) Ontario	8	64	115	157	119	77
(vii) Manitoba	17	91	91	97	45	43
(viii) Saskatchewan	1	27	45	40	19	56
(ix) Alberta	3	32	52	41	31	22
(x) British Columbia	4	19	41	38	18	18
(xi) Others*	1	11	18	19	20	5
Totals	108	720	1,316	1,850	1048	643

* Applications for incentives having no indication as to the location of the proposed facility.

MANUAL FOR DECK OFFICERS ON DDH 280S

Question No. 2,468—Mr. McKinnon:

1. Has the Department of National Defence contracted with Sharon Professional Services to find a retired Canadian Naval Deck Officer to prepare an instruction manual for use by officers of the watch and bridge personnel on the DDH 280 Class Destroyers?

2. Is there no-one serving at the present time capable of preparing this manual?

3. How much is the Department prepared or committed to spending outside of the Department for this service?

4. Are the officers of the watch and bridge personnel on the DDH 280s managing at the present time without the manual and, if so, in what way?

Hon. Barney Danson (Minister of National Defence): 1. No.

2. Yes.

3. Not applicable in view of part 1 of this question.

4. Yes. Officers of the watch and bridge personnel on DDH 280s are qualified by way of courses at the Fleet school in Halifax and through shipboard training and familiarization. As a supplement to this training an approach to industry was made to produce a manual but, after a reassessment of the requirement the invitation for bids was withdrawn. No contract was let and none is now intended.

CANADIAN ARMED FORCES

Question No. 2,758—Mr. Jones:

1. What are the qualifications for enlistment in the Canadian Armed Forces?

2. Are francophones permitted to enlist with a grade 9 education and are non-francophones required to have at least grade 12 and, if so, for what reason?

3. Are non-francophone recruits who are fluent in French, given equal rights on enlistment and promotions and, if not, for what reason?

4. (a) What is the strength of the Canadian Armed Forces at the present time (b) how many are (i) francophone (ii) non-francophone?

5. (a) In each year 1970 to 1976, by province, what were the enlistments or recruits in the Forces (b) how many were (i) francophone (ii) non-francophone for each year, by province?

6. What language is the predominant language of administration and control in each service of the Forces?

7. Have armoured vehicles been brought from other parts of Canada and deployed along the Ottawa River and, if so (a) for what reason (b) on what date?

8. (a) How many major armament and ammunition depots are located in (i) Quebec (ii) other provinces (b) where is each located and what are the details and particulars on the quantity of armament, equipment and ammunition at each depot?

Hon. Barney Danson (Minister of National Defence): 1. DND enrolment standards are as follows: Canadian citizen, except in special cases, at departmental discretion i.e., where a certain skill would not be readily available or similar instances. Age 17 to 24 inclusive for unskilled applicants, up to 33 for skilled applicants. A minimum of grade eight. Requirement to meet medical standards prescribed for trades. Ability to pass appropriate tests and must be considered suitable for enrolment by recruiting officer.

2. No. The minimum of grade eight education as stated above applies to both francophones and non-francophones.

3. Yes.

Order Paper Questions

4. (a) 77,969; (b) (i) 18,205; (ii) 59,764.

5. See following list.

6. English is the predominant language of administration and control in the three elements of the Armed Forces.

7. No.

8. (a) There are no distinct armament depots in Canada. Weapons are stored in supply depots and are overhauled in repair workshops or by contract. Ammunition depots are in: (i) Quebec—nil; (ii) other provinces—five;

(b)

Province	Location	Maximum Storage Capacity	Types of Ammunition
Nova Scotia	Beford	392,500 cubic feet	Primarily naval ammunition with some land and air
New Brunswick	Renous	649,100 cubic feet	Primarily land and naval ammunition
Ontario	Angus	1,819,000 cubic feet	Primarily air and land ammunition
Saskatchewan	Dundrun	604,300 cubic feet	Primarily land, with some air and naval ammunition
British Columbia	Rocky Point	406,600 cubic feet	Primarily naval with some land and air ammunition

NOTE: It is not in the public interest to disclose specific natures and quantities of ammunition located in the various ammunition depots in Canada.

Canadian Forces Personnel
Enrolment Profile—1970-76

Province	National Group	Year of Enrolment 1970	1971	1972	1973	1974	1975	1976
Newfoundland	Anglo	201	124	182	239	274	372	440
	Franco	1	0	1	0	1	0	0
	Unknown	93	41	15	0	—	—	—
Total		295	165	198	239	275	372	440
Prince Edward Island	Anglo	29	28	54	56	17	112	135
	Franco	0	0	0	3	1	5	9
	Unknown	24	16	11	0	—	—	—
Total		53	44	65	59	18	117	144
Nova Scotia	Anglo	266	254	550	600	612	777	800
	Franco	4	6	12	13	11	23	16
	Unknown	159	85	41	5	—	—	—
Total		429	345	603	618	623	800	816
New Brunswick	Anglo	156	118	200	306	340	390	417
	Franco	37	45	90	163	98	156	166
	Unknown	129	90	37	0	—	—	—
Total		322	253	327	469	438	546	583
Quebec	Anglo	135	121	131	260	298	359	336
	Franco	1240	1253	1989	2438	2351	3132	2926
	Unknown	742	565	200	2	—	—	—
Total		2117	1939	2320	2700	2649	3491	3262
Ontario	Anglo	867	819	1531	2178	2518	3230	3357
	Franco	50	35	223	330	391	420	384
	Unknown	800	470	193	19	—	—	—
Total		1717	1324	1947	2527	2909	3650	3741
Manitoba	Anglo	173	160	236	330	330	328	296
	Franco	5	4	11	20	15	19	12
	Unknown	156	92	31	2	—	—	—
Total		334	256	278	352	345	347	308
Saskatchewan	Anglo	197	166	227	222	234	205	253
	Franco	3	2	3	9	5	8	6
	Unknown	157	85	26	0	—	—	—
Total		357	253	256	231	239	213	259
Alberta	Anglo	262	238	391	578	610	614	548
	Franco	3	4	12	6	3	12	4
	Unknown	233	117	35	3	—	—	—
Total		498	359	438	587	613	626	552
British Columbia	Anglo	288	211	234	342	527	783	854
	Franco	4	1	1	2	4	15	9
	Unknown	251	111	5	0	—	—	—
Total		543	323	240	344	531	798	863
Outside Canada	Anglo	4	0	8	7	11	24	26
	Franco	0	0	2	1	2	0	4
	Unknown	0	0	0	0	—	—	—
Total		4	0	10	8	13	24	30
Grand Totals		6,669	5,261	6,682	8,134	8,653	10,984	10,998

NOTE: The capture of National-Representation-Group information did not commence until March of 1973. Therefore, all personnel listed in the "unknown" category have been either absorbed statistically or are no longer with the service.

[Mr. Danson.]

"DAVID STEINBERG NEWS SPECIAL ON METRIC CONVERSION"

Question No. 2,831—Mr. Neil:

What was the total cost to the government of the production of the half hour programme David Steinberg News Special on Metric Conversion?

Mr. Hugh Poulin (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): In so far as the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce is concerned: the total cost of producing the David Steinberg News Special on Metric Conversion was $72,735.00.

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Shall the remaining questions be allowed to stand?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

* * *

MOTIONS FOR PAPERS

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Would Your Honour be good enough to call notices of motions for the production of papers Nos. 114 and 115?

[Text]

COPIES OF RELOCATION TASK FORCE PROGRESS REPORT ON MOVE OF HEADQUARTERS OF DEPARTMENT OF VETERANS AFFAIRS

Motion No. 114—Mr. Marshall:

That an Order of the House do issue for copies of the progress report presented by the Relocation Task Force to the liaison officers and union representatives having to do with the move of the Headquarters of the Department of Veterans Affairs to Prince Edward Island.

[English]

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, no written report was presented by the relocation task force to the liaison officers and union representatives having to do with the move of the headquarters of the Department of Veterans Affairs to Prince Edward Island. I would, therefore, ask the hon. member to withdraw his motion.

Mr. Marshall: Agreed.

Motion withdrawn and order discharged.

[Text]

COPIES OF RELOCATION TASK FORCE PROGRESS REPORT PRESENTED TO VETERANS AFFAIRS RELOCATION STEERING COMMITTEE MARCH 11, 1977

Motion No. 115—Mr. Marshall:

That an Order of the House do issue for copies of the progress report presented by the Relocation Task Force to the Veterans' Affairs Relocation Steering Committee, dated March 11, 1977, having to do with the move of the Headquarters of the Department of Veterans Affairs to Prince Edward Island.

[English]

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, no written report was presented by the relocation task force to the Veterans Affairs relocation steering committee having to do with the move of the headquarters of the Department of Veterans Affairs to Prince Edward Island. Therefore, I would ask the hon. member to withdraw his motion.

Mr. Marshall: Agreed.

Motion withdrawn and order discharged.

Mr. Speaker: Shall the remaining notices of motions for the production of papers be allowed to stand?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

CRIMINAL LAW AMENDMENT ACT, 1977

AMENDMENTS TO CRIMINAL CODE

The House resumed, from Tuesday, July 12, consideration of Bill C-51, to amend the Criminal Code, the Customs Tariff, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act and the Prisons and Reformatories Act, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs.

Mr. Speaker: Pursuant to the order made Tuesday, July 12, the House will now proceed to the taking of the deferred divisions on Bill C-51 in the order in which outstanding divisions have been deferred, which is the order in which they are listed at the back of today's order paper.

Call in the members.

• (1520)

And the division bells having been rung:

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams) on a point of order.

Mr. Woolliams: Mr. Speaker, I will be very brief. We have a number of votes and a number of motions before us. Every time a motion was called it was read to the House, and my party has been provided with a copy of the votes. Therefore, if it is the pleasure of the House, the votes could be called by number only in order to expedite this procedure.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: As the hon. member indicates, this procedure would be expedited by calling the votes by number only, rather than reading the full text of the description of the bill and the full text of the amendment. Unless an hon. member indicates it is necessary, the Chair will follow the suggestion of the hon. member for Calgary North.

Therefore, the vote is on motion No. 1 in the name of the hon. member for Moose Jaw (Mr. Neil).

The House divided on motion No. 1 (Mr. Neil) which was negatived on the following division:

(Division No. 74)

YEAS

Messrs.

Alexander
Allard
Baker (Grenville-Carleton)
Bawden
Beatty
Beaudoin
Brisco
Cadieu
Caouette (Villeneuve)
Caouette (Témiscamingue)
Clarke (Vancouver Quadra)
Coates
Crouse
Darling
Dick
Diefenbaker
Dionne (Kamouraska)
Elzinga
Epp
Fraser
Gillies
Grafftey
Halliday
Hnatyshyn
Holmes
Hurlburt
Jarvis
Johnston
Jones
Kempling
Knowles (Norfolk-Haldimand)
Lambert (Bellechasse)
Laprise
La Salle
Lawrence
MacDonald (Egmont)
Malone
Marshall
Mazankowski
McCain
McCleave
McKenzie
McKinnon
Mitges
Muir
Neil
Oberle
O'Sullivan
Paproski
Patterson
Pigott (Mrs.)
Ritchie
Rondeau
Rynard
Schellenberger
Schumacher
Stanfield
Stevens
Stewart (Marquette)
Towers
Wenman
Whiteway
Wise
Woolliams
Yewchuk—65.

NAYS

Messrs.

Abbott
Allmand
Anderson
Appolloni (Mrs.)
Baker (Gander-Twillingate)
Basford
Bégin (Miss)
Blackburn
Blais
Blaker
Blouin
Boulanger
Breau
Brewin
Broadbent
Buchanan
Bussières
Caccia
Cafik
Campagnolo (Mrs.)
Campbell (LaSalle-Émard-Côte Saint-Paul)
Caron
Chrétien
Clermont
Collenette
Comtois
Condon
Corriveau
Cullen
Danson
Daudlin
Dawson
De Bané
Demers
Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi)
Douglas (Bruce-Grey)
Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands)
Drury
Duclos
Dupont
Dupras
Duquet
Ethier
Faulkner
Fleming
Flynn
Foster
Francis
Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier)
Gilbert
Gillespie
Goodale
Goyer
Gray
Guay (St. Boniface)
Guay (Lévis)
Haidasz
Harquail
Herbert
Hogan
Holt (Mrs.)
Hopkins
Isabelle
Jamieson
Joyal
Kaplan
Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre)
Lajoie
Lalonde
Lamontagne
Landers
Langlois
Lapointe
Lavoie
Leblanc (Laurier)
LeBlanc (Westmorland-Kent)
Lee
Lefebvre
Leggatt
Lessard
Loiselle (Chambly)
Loiselle (Saint-Henri)
Lumley
MacDonald (Cardigan)
MacEachen
MacFarlane
Maine
Marchand
Martin
McIsaac
Milne
Munro (Hamilton East)
Nicholson (Miss)
O'Connell
Olivier
Orlikow
Ouellet
Parent
Pearsall
Pelletier
Penner
Peters
Philbrook
Pinard
Portelance
Poulin
Raines
Reid
Roberts
Robinson
Rodriguez
Rompkey
Rooney
Roy (Laval)
Saltsman
Savard
Sharp
Smith (Saint-Jean)
Stanbury
Stewart (Cochrane)
Symes
Tessier
Trudel
Turner
Watson
Wood
Yanakis—127.

[Mr. Speaker.]

● (1530)

Mr. Speaker: I therefore declare motion No. 1 lost. The next question, in the order of deferral, is on motion No. 7 in the name of the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams). I remind hon. members that the vote on motion No. 7 disposes of the vote on motion No. 28.

The House divided on motion No. 7 (Mr. Woolliams) which was negatived on the following division:

(Division No. 75)

YEAS

Messrs.

Alexander
Allard
Baker (Grenville-Carleton)
Bawden
Beatty
Beaudoin
Brisco
Cadieu
Caouette (Villeneuve)
Caouette (Témiscamingue)
Clarke (Vancouver Quadra)
Coates
Crouse
Darling
Dick
Diefenbaker
Dionne (Kamouraska)
Elzinga
Epp
Fraser
Gillies
Grafftey
Halliday
Hnatyshyn
Holmes
Hurlburt
Jarvis
Johnston
Jones
Kempling
Knowles (Norfolk-Haldimand)
Lambert (Bellechasse)
Laprise
La Salle
Lawrence
MacDonald (Egmont)
Malone
Marshall
Mazankowski
McCain
McCleave
McKenzie
McKinnon
Mitges
Muir
Neil
Oberle
O'Sullivan
Paproski
Patterson
Peters
Pigott (Mrs.)
Ritchie
Rondeau
Rynard
Schellenberger
Schumacher
Stanfield
Stevens
Stewart (Marquette)
Towers
Wenman
Whiteway
Wise
Woolliams
Yewchuk—66.

NAYS

Messrs.

Abbott
Allmand
Anderson
Appolloni (Mrs.)
Baker (Gander-Twillingate)
Basford
Bégin (Miss)
Blackburn
Blais
Blaker
Blouin
Boulanger
Breau
Brewin
Broadbent
Buchanan
Bussières
Caccia
Cafik
Campagnolo (Mrs.)
Campbell (LaSalle-Émard-Côte Saint-Paul)
Caron
Chrétien
Clermont
Collenette
Comtois
Condon
Corriveau
Cullen
Danson
Daudlin
Dawson
De Bané
Demers
Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi)
Douglas (Bruce-Grey)
Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands)
Drury
Duclos
Dupont
Dupras
Duquet
Ethier
Faulkner
Fleming
Flynn
Foster
Francis
Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier)
Gilbert
Gillespie
Goodale
Goyer
Gray

Messrs.

Guay (St. Boniface)
Guay (Lévis)
Haidasz
Harquail
Herbert
Hogan
Holt (Mrs.)
Hopkins
Isabelle
Jamieson
Joyal
Kaplan
Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre)
Lajoie
Lalonde
Lamontagne
Landers
Langlois
Lapointe
Lavoie
Leblanc (Laurier)
LeBlanc (Westmorland-Kent)
Lee
Lefebvre
Leggatt
Lessard
Loiselle (Chambly)
Loiselle (Saint-Henri)
Lumley
MacDonald (Cardigan)
MacEachen
MacFarlane
Maine
Marchand
Martin
McIsaac
Milne
Munro (Hamilton East)
Nicholson (Miss)
O'Connell
Olivier
Orlikow
Ouellet
Parent
Pearsall
Pelletier
Penner
Philbrook
Pinard
Portelance
Poulin
Raines
Reid
Roberts
Robinson
Rodriguez
Rompkey
Rooney
Roy (Laval)
Saltsman
Savard
Sharp
Smith (Saint-Jean)
Stanbury
Stewart (Cochrane)
Symes
Tessier
Trudel
Turner
Watson
Wood
Yanakis—126.

● (1540)

Mr. Speaker: I therefore declare motions Nos. 7 and 28 lost.

The question is on motion No. 12, which will also dispose of motions Nos. 13 and 14.

The House divided on motion No. 12 (Mr. Woolliams) which was negatived on the following division:

(Division No. 76)

YEAS

Messrs.

Alexander
Allard
Baker (Grenville-Carleton)
Bawden
Beatty
Beaudoin
Brisco
Cadieu
Caouette (Villeneuve)
Caouette (Témiscamingue)
Clarke (Vancouver Quadra)
Coates
Cossitt
Crouse
Darling
Diefenbaker
Dionne (Kamouraska)
Elzinga
Epp
Fraser
Gillies
Grafftey
Halliday
Hnatyshyn
Holmes
Hurlburt
Jarvis
Johnston
Jones
Kempling
Knowles (Norfolk-Haldimand)
Lambert (Bellechasse)
Laprise
La Salle
Lawrence
MacDonald (Egmont)
Malone
Marshall
Mazankowski
McCain
McCleave
McKenzie
McKinnon
Mitges
Muir
Neil
Oberle
O'Sullivan
Paproski
Patterson
Pigott (Mrs.)
Ritchie
Rondeau
Rynard
Schellenberger
Schumacher
Stanfield
Stevens
Stewart (Marquette)
Towers
Wenman
Whiteway
Wise
Woolliams
Yewchuk—65.

NAYS

Messrs.

Abbott
Allmand
Anderson
Appolloni (Mrs.)
Baker (Gander-Twillingate)
Basford
Bégin (Miss)
Blackburn
Blais
Blaker
Blouin
Boulanger
Breau
Brewin
Broadbent
Buchanan
Bussières

Messrs.

Caccia
Cafik
Campagnolo (Mrs.)
Campbell (LaSalle-Émard-Côte Saint-Paul)
Caron
Chrétien
Clermont
Collenette
Comtois
Condon
Corriveau
Cullen
Danson
Daudlin
Dawson
De Bané
Demers
Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi)
Douglas (Bruce-Grey)
Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands)
Drury
Duclos
Dupont
Dupras
Duquet
Ethier
Faulkner
Fleming
Flynn
Foster
Francis
Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier)
Gilbert
Gillespie
Goodale
Goyer
Gray
Guay (St. Boniface)
Guay (Lévis)
Haidasz
Harquail
Herbert
Hogan
Holt (Mrs.)
Hopkins
Isabelle
Jamieson
Joyal
Kaplan
Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre)
Lajoie
Lalonde
Lamontagne
Landers
Langlois
Lapointe
Lavoie
Leblanc (Laurier)
LeBlanc (Westmorland-Kent)
Lee
Lefebvre
Leggatt
Lessard
Loiselle (Chambly)
Loiselle (Saint-Henri)
Lumley
MacDonald (Cardigan)
MacEachen
MacFarlane
Maine
Marchand
Martin
McIsaac
Milne
Munro (Hamilton East)
Nicholson (Miss)
O'Connell
Olivier
Orlikow
Ouellet
Parent
Pearsall
Pelletier
Penner
Peters
Philbrook
Pinard
Portelance
Poulin
Raines
Reid
Roberts
Robinson
Rodriguez
Rompkey
Rooney
Roy (Laval)
Saltsman
Savard
Sharp
Smith (Saint-Jean)
Stanbury
Stewart (Cochrane)
Symes
Tessier
Trudel
Turner
Watson
Wood
Yanakis—127.

Mr. Speaker: I therefore declare motions Nos. 12, 13 and 14 lost.

The question is on motion No. 2, which will also dispose of motions Nos. 21 and 22.

The House divided on motion No. 2 (Mr. Schumacher) which was negatived on the following division:

(Division No. 77)

YEAS

Messrs.

Alexander
Allard
Baker (Grenville-Carleton)
Bawden
Beatty
Beaudoin
Brisco
Cadieu
Caouette (Villeneuve)
Caouette (Témiscamingue)
Clarke (Vancouver Quadra)
Coates
Cossitt
Crouse
Darling
Diefenbaker
Dionne (Kamouraska)
Elzinga
Epp
Fraser
Gillies
Grafftey
Halliday
Hnatyshyn
Holmes
Hurlburt
Jarvis
Johnston
Jones
Kempling
Knowles (Norfolk-Haldimand)
Lambert (Bellechasse)
Laprise
La Salle
Lawrence
MacDonald (Egmont)
Malone
Marshall
Mazankowski
McCain
McCleave
McKenzie
McKinnon
Mitges
Muir

Messrs.

Neil
Oberle
O'Sullivan
Paproski
Patterson
Peters
Pigott (Mrs.)
Ritchie
Rondeau
Rynard
Schellenberger
Schumacher
Stanfield
Stevens
Stewart (Marquette)
Towers
Wenman
Whiteway
Wise
Woolliams
Yewchuk—66.

NAYS

Messrs.

Abbott
Allmand
Anderson
Appolloni (Mrs.)
Baker (Gander-Twillingate)
Basford
Bégin (Miss)
Blackburn
Blais
Blaker
Blouin
Boulanger
Breau
Brewin
Broadbent
Buchanan
Bussières
Caccia
Cafik
Campagnolo (Mrs.)
Campbell (LaSalle-Émard-Côte Saint-Paul)
Caron
Chrétien
Clermont
Collenette
Comtois
Condon
Corriveau
Cullen
Danson
Daudlin
Dawson
De Bané
Demers
Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi)
Douglas (Bruce-Grey)
Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands)
Drury
Duclos
Dupont
Dupras
Duquet
Ethier
Faulkner
Fleming
Flynn
Foster
Francis
Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier)
Gilbert
Gillespie
Goodale
Goyer
Gray
Guay (St. Boniface)
Guay (Lévis)
Haidasz
Harquail
Herbert
Hogan
Holt (Mrs.)
Hopkins
Isabelle
Jamieson
Joyal
Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre)
Lajoie
Lalonde
Lamontagne
Landers
Langlois
Lapointe
Lavoie
Leblanc (Laurier)
LeBlanc (Westmorland-Kent)
Lee
Lefebvre
Leggatt
Lessard
Loiselle (Chambly)
Loiselle (Saint-Henri)
Lumley
MacDonald (Cardigan)
MacEachen
MacFarlane
Maine
Marchand
Martin
McIsaac
Milne
Munro (Hamilton East)
Nicholson (Miss)
O'Connell
Olivier
Orlikow
Ouellet
Parent
Pearsall
Pelletier
Penner
Philbrook
Pinard
Portelance
Poulin
Raines
Reid
Roberts
Robinson
Rodriguez
Rompkey
Rooney
Roy (Laval)
Saltsman
Savard
Sharp
Smith (Saint-Jean)
Stanbury
Stewart (Cochrane)
Symes
Tessier
Trudel
Turner
Watson
Wood
Yanakis—125.

● (1550)

Mr. Speaker: I therefore declare motions Nos. 2, 21 and 22 lost. The question is upon motion No. 9.

The House divided on motion No. 9 (Mr. Brisco) which was negatived on the following division:

(Division No. 78)

YEAS

Messrs.

Alexander
Allard
Baker (Grenville-Carleton)
Bawden
Beatty
Beaudoin
Brisco
Cadieu
Caouette (Villeneuve)
Caouette (Témiscamingue)
Clarke (Vancouver Quadra)
Coates
Cossitt
Crouse
Darling
Dick
Diefenbaker
Dionne (Kamouraska)
Elzinga
Epp
Fraser
Gillies
Grafftey
Halliday
Hnatyshyn
Holmes
Hurlburt
Jarvis
Johnston
Jones
Kempling
Knowles (Norfolk-Haldimand)
Lambert (Bellechasse)
Laprise
La Salle
Lawrence
MacDonald (Egmont)
Malone
Marshall
Mazankowski
McCain
McCleave
McKenzie
McKinnon
Mitges
Muir
Neil
Oberle
O'Sullivan
Paproski
Patterson
Pigott (Mrs.)
Ritchie
Rondeau
Rynard
Schellenberger
Schumacher
Stanfield
Stevens
Stewart (Marquette)
Towers
Wenman
Whiteway
Wise
Woolliams
Yewchuk—66.

NAYS

Messrs.

Abbott
Allmand
Anderson
Appolloni (Mrs.)
Baker (Gander-Twillingate)
Basford
Bégin (Miss)
Blackburn
Blais
Blaker
Blouin
Boulanger
Breau
Brewin
Broadbent
Buchanan
Bussières
Caccia
Cafik
Campagnolo (Mrs.)
Campbell (LaSalle-Émard-Côte Saint-Paul)
Caron
Chrétien
Clermont
Collenette
Comtois
Condon
Corriveau
Cullen
Danson
Daudlin
Dawson
Demers
Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi)
Douglas (Bruce-Grey)
Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands)
Drury
Duclos
Dupont
Dupras
Duquet
Ethier
Faulkner
Fleming
Flynn
Foster
Francis
Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier)
Gilbert
Gillespie
Goodale
Goyer
Gray
Guay (St. Boniface)
Guay (Lévis)
Haidasz
Harquail
Herbert
Hogan
Holt (Mrs.)
Hopkins
Isabelle
Jamieson
Joyal
Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre)
Lajoie
Lalonde
Lamontagne
Landers
Langlois
Lapointe
Lavoie
Leblanc (Laurier)
LeBlanc (Westmorland-Kent)
Lee
Lefebvre
Leggatt
Lessard
Loiselle (Chambly)
Loiselle (Saint-Henri)
Lumley
MacDonald (Cardigan)
MacEachen
MacFarlane
Maine
Marchand
Martin
McIsaac
Milne
Munro (Hamilton East)
Nicholson (Miss)
O'Connell
Olivier
Orlikow
Ouellet
Parent
Pearsall
Pelletier
Penner
Peters
Philbrook
Pinard
Portelance
Poulin
Raines
Reid
Roberts
Robinson
Rodriguez
Rompkey
Rooney
Roy (Laval)
Saltsman
Savard
Sharp
Smith (Saint-Jean)
Stanbury
Stewart (Cochrane)
Symes
Tessier
Trudel
Turner
Watson
Wood
Yanakis—125.

● (1600)

Mr. Speaker: I therefore declare motion No. 9 lost.

The question is therefore upon motion No. 10 in the name of the hon. member for Palliser (Mr. Schumacher).

The House divided on motion No. 10 (Mr. Schumacher) which was negatived on the following division:

(Division No. 79)

YEAS

Messrs.

Alexander
Allard
Baker
(Grenville-Carleton)
Bawden
Beatty
Beaudoin
Brisco
Cadieu
Caouette
(Villeneuve)
Caouette
(Témiscamingue)
Clarke
(Vancouver Quadra)
Coates
Cossitt
Crouse
Darling
Dick
Diefenbaker
Dionne
(Kamouraska)
Elzinga
Epp
Fraser
Gillies
Grafftey
Halliday
Hnatyshyn
Holmes
Hurlburt
Jarvis
Johnston
Jones
Kempling
Knowles
(Norfolk-Haldimand)
Lambert
(Bellechasse)
Laprise
La Salle
Lawrence
MacDonald
(Egmont)
Malone
Marshall
Mazankowski
McCain
McCleave
McKenzie
McKinnon
Mitges
Muir
Neil
Oberle
O'Sullivan
Paproski
Patterson
Peters
Pigott (Mrs.)
Ritchie
Rondeau
Rynard
Schellenberger
Schumacher
Stanfield
Stevens
Stewart
(Marquette)
Towers
Wenman
Whiteway
Wise
Woolliams
Yewchuk—67.

NAYS

Messrs

Abbott
Allmand
Anderson
Appolloni (Mrs.)
Baker
(Gander-Twillingate)
Basford
Bégin (Miss)
Blackburn
Blais
Blaker
Blouin
Boulanger
Breau
Brewin
Broadbent
Buchanan
Bussières
Caccia
Cafik
Campagnolo (Mrs.)
Campbell
(LaSalle-Émard-Côte
Saint-Paul)
Caron
Chrétien
Clermont
Collenette
Comtois
Condon
Corriveau
Cullen
Danson
Daudlin
Dawson
Demers
Dionne
(Northumberland-Miramichi)
Douglas
(Bruce-Grey)
Douglas
(Nanaimo-Cowichan-
The Islands)
Drury
Duclos
Dupras
Duquet
Ethier
Faulkner
Fleming
Flynn
Foster
Francis
Gauthier
(Ottawa-Vanier)
Gilbert
Gillespie
Goodale
Goyer
Gray
Guay
(St. Boniface)
Guay
(Lévis)
Haidasz
Harquail
Herbert
Hogan
Holt (Mrs.)
Hopkins
Isabelle
Jamieson
Joyal
Knowles
(Winnipeg
North Centre)
Lajoie
Lalonde
Lamontagne
Landers
Langlois
Lapointe
Lavoie
Leblanc
(Laurier)
LeBlanc
(Westmorland-Kent)
Lee
Lefebvre
Leggatt
Lessard
Loiselle
(Chambly)
Loiselle
(Saint-Henri)
Lumley
MacDonald
(Cardigan)
MacEachen
MacFarlane
Maine
Marchand
Martin
McIsaac
Milne
Munro
(Hamilton East)
Nicholson (Miss)
O'Connell
Olivier
Orlikow
Ouellet
Parent
Pearsall
Pelletier
Penner
Philbrook
Pinard
Portelance
Poulin
Raines
Reid
Roberts
Robinson
Rodriguez
Rompkey
Rooney
Roy
(Laval)
Saltsman
Savard
Sharp
Smith
(Saint-Jean)
Stanbury
Stewart
(Cochrane)
Symes
Tessier
Trudel
Turner
Watson
Wood
Yanakis—123.

Mr. Speaker: I therefore declare motion No. 10 lost.

The question is therefore on motion No. 15.

The House divided on motion No. 15 (Mr. Ritchie) which was negatived on the following division.

(Division No. 80)

YEAS

Messrs.

Alexander
Allard
Baker
(Grenville-Carleton)
Bawden
Beatty
Beaudoin
Brisco
Cadieu
Caouette
(Villeneuve)
Caouette
(Témiscamingue)
Clarke
(Vancouver Quadra)
Coates
Cossitt
Crouse
Darling
Dick
Diefenbaker
Dionne
(Kamouraska)
Elzinga
Epp
Fraser
Gillies
Grafftey
Halliday
Hnatyshyn
Holmes
Hurlburt
Jarvis
Johnston
Jones
Kempling
Knowles
(Norfolk-Haldimand)
Lambert
(Bellechasse)
Laprise
La Salle
Lawrence
MacDonald
(Egmont)
Malone
Marshall
Mazankowski
McCain
McCleave
McKenzie
McKinnon
Mitges
Muir
Neil
Oberle
O'Sullivan
Paproski
Patterson
Pigott (Mrs.)
Ritchie
Rondeau
Rynard
Schellenberger
Schumacher
Stanfield
Stevens
Stewart
(Marquette)
Towers
Wenman
Whiteway
Wise
Woolliams
Yewchuk—66.

NAYS

Messrs.

Abbott
Allmand
Anderson
Appolloni (Mrs.)
Baker
(Gander-Twillingate)
Basford
Bégin (Miss)
Blackburn
Blais
Blaker
Blouin
Boulanger
Breau
Brewin
Broadbent
Buchanan
Bussières
Caccia
Cafik
Campagnolo (Mrs.)
Campbell
(LaSalle-Émard-Côte
Saint-Paul)
Caron
Clermont
Collenette
Comtois
Condon
Corriveau
Cullen
Danson
Daudlin
Dawson
Demers
Dionne
(Northumberland-Miramichi)
Douglas
(Bruce-Grey)
Douglas
(Nanaimo-Cowichan-
The Islands)
Drury
Duclos
Dupont
Dupras
Duquet
Ethier
Faulkner
Fleming
Flynn
Foster
Francis
Gauthier
(Ottawa-Vanier)
Gilbert
Gillespie
Goodale
Goyer
Gray
Guay
(St. Boniface)
Guay
(Lévis)
Haidasz
Harquail
Herbert
Hogan
Holt (Mrs.)
Hopkins
Isabelle
Jamieson
Joyal
Knowles
(Winnipeg
North Centre)
Lajoie
Lalonde
Lamontagne
Landers
Langlois
Lapointe
Lavoie
Leblanc
(Laurier)
LeBlanc
(Westmorland-Kent)
Lee
Lefebvre
Leggatt
Lessard
Loiselle
(Chambly)
Loiselle
(Saint-Henri)
Lumley
MacDonald
(Cardigan)
MacEachen
MacFarlane
Maine
Marchand
Martin
McIsaac
Milne
Munro
(Hamilton East)
Nicholson (Miss)
O'Connell
Olivier
Orlikow
Ouellet
Parent
Pearsall
Pelletier
Penner
Philbrook
Pinard
Portelance
Poulin
Raines
Reid
Roberts
Robinson
Rodriguez
Rompkey
Rooney
Roy
(Laval)

Messrs.

Saltsman
Savard
Sharp
Smith
(Saint-Jean)
Stanbury
Stewart
(Cochrane)
Symes
Tessier
Trudel
Turner
Watson
Wood
Yanakis—123.

● (1610)

Mr. Speaker: I therefore declare motion No. 15 lost.

The question is on motion No. 16 in the name of the hon. member for Dauphin (Mr. Ritchie).

The House divided on motion No. 16 (Mr. Ritchie) which was negatived on the following division:

(Division No. 81)

YEAS

Messrs.

Alexander
Allard
Baker
(Grenville-Carleton)
Bawden
Beatty
Beaudoin
Brisco
Cadieu
Caouette
(Villeneuve)
Caouette
(Témiscamingue)
Clarke
(Vancouver Quadra)
Coates
Cossitt
Crouse
Darling
Dick
Diefenbaker
Dionne
(Kamouraska)
Elzinga
Epp
Fraser
Gillies
Grafftey
Halliday
Hnatyshyn
Holmes
Hurlburt
Jarvis
Johnston
Jones
Kempling
Knowles
(Norfolk-Haldimand)
Lambert
(Bellechasse)
Laprise
La Salle
Lawrence
MacDonald
(Egmont)
Malone
Marshall
Mazankowski
McCain
McCleave
McKenzie
McKinnon
Mitges
Muir
Neil
Oberle
O'Sullivan
Paproski
Patterson
Peters
Pigott (Mrs.)
Ritchie
Rondeau
Rynard
Schellenberger
Schumacher
Stanfield
Stevens
Stewart
(Marquette)
Towers
Wenman
Whiteway
Wise
Woolliams
Yewchuk—67.

NAYS

Messrs.

Abbott
Allmand
Appolloni (Mrs.)
Baker
(Gander-Twillingate)
Basford
Bégin (Miss)
Blackburn
Blais
Blaker
Blouin
Boulanger
Brewin
Broadbent
Buchanan
Bussières
Caccia
Cafik
Campagnolo (Mrs.)
Campbell
(LaSalle-Émard-Côte
Saint-Paul)
Caron
Clermont
Collenette
Comtois
Condon
Corriveau
Cullen
Danson
Daudlin
Dawson
Demers
Dionne
(Northumberland-Miramichi)
Douglas
(Bruce-Grey)
Douglas
(Nanaimo-Cowichan-
The Islands)
Drury
Duclos
Dupont
Dupras
Duquet
Ethier
Faulkner
Fleming
Flynn
Foster
Francis
Gauthier
(Ottawa-Vanier)
Gilbert
Gillespie
Goodale
Goyer
Gray
Guay
(St. Boniface)
Guay
(Lévis)
Haidasz
Harquail
Herbert
Hogan
Holt (Mrs.)
Hopkins
Isabelle
Jamieson
Joyal
Knowles
(Winnipeg
North Centre)
Lajoie
Lalonde
Lamontagne

Messrs.

Landers
Langlois
Lapointe
Lavoie
Leblanc
(Laurier)
LeBlanc
(Westmorland-Kent)
Lee
Lefebvre
Leggatt
Lessard
Loiselle
(Chambly)
Loiselle
(Saint-Henri)
Lumley
MacDonald
(Cardigan)
MacEachen
MacFarlane
Maine
Marchand
Martin
McIsaac
Milne
Munro
(Hamilton East)
Nicholson (Miss)
O'Connell
Olivier
Orlikow
Ouellet
Parent
Pearsall
Pelletier
Penner
Philbrook
Pinard
Portelance
Poulin
Raines
Reid
Roberts
Robinson
Rodriguez
Rompkey
Rooney
Roy
(Laval)
Saltsman
Savard
Sharp
Smith
(Saint-Jean)
Stanbury
Stewart
(Cochrane)
Symes
Tessier
Trudel
Turner
Watson
Wood
Yanakis—121.

Mr. Speaker: I therefore declare motion No. 16 lost.

The question is on motion No. 17 in the name of the hon. member for Moose Jaw (Mr. Neil).

The House divided on motion No. 17 (Mr. Neil) which was negatived on the following division:

(Division No. 82)

YEAS

Messrs.

Alexander
Allard
Baker
(Grenville-Carleton)
Bawden
Beatty
Beaudoin
Brisco
Cadieu
Caouette
(Villeneuve)
Caouette
(Témiscamingue)
Clarke
(Vancouver Quadra)
Coates
Cossitt
Crouse
Darling
Dick
Diefenbaker
Dionne
(Kamouraska)
Elzinga
Fraser
Gillies
Grafftey
Halliday
Hnatyshyn
Holmes
Hurlburt
Jarvis
Johnston
Jones
Kempling
Knowles
(Norfolk-Haldimand)
Lambert
(Bellechasse)
Laniel
Laprise
La Salle
Lawrence
MacDonald
(Egmont)
Malone
Marshall
Mazankowski
McCain
McCleave
McKenzie
McKinnon
Mitges
Muir
Neil
Oberle
O'Sullivan
Paproski
Patterson
Pigott (Mrs.)
Ritchie
Rondeau
Rynard
Schellenberger
Schumacher
Stanfield
Stevens
Stewart
(Marquette)
Towers
Wenman
Whiteway
Wise
Woolliams
Yewchuk—66.

NAYS

Messrs.

Abbott
Allmand
Appolloni (Mrs.)
Baker
(Gander-Twillingate)
Basford
Bégin (Miss)
Blackburn
Blais
Blaker
Blouin
Boulanger
Brewin
Broadbent
Buchanan
Bussières
Caccia
Cafik
Campagnolo (Mrs.)
Campbell
(LaSalle-Émard-Côte
Saint-Paul)
Caron
Clermont
Collenette
Comtois
Condon
Corriveau
Cullen
Danson
Daudlin
Dawson
Demers
Dionne
(Northumberland-Miramichi)
Douglas
(Bruce-Grey)

Messrs.

Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands)
Drury
Duclos
Dupont
Dupras
Duquet
Ethier
Faulkner
Fleming
Flynn
Foster
Francis
Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier)
Gilbert
Gillespie
Goodale
Goyer
Gray
Guay (St. Boniface)
Guay (Lévis)
Haidasz
Herbert
Hogan
Holt (Mrs.)
Hopkins
Isabelle
Jamieson
Joyal
Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre)
Lajoie
Lalonde
Lamontagne
Landers
Langlois
Lapointe
Leblanc (Laurier)
LeBlanc (Westmorland-Kent)
Lee
Lefebvre
Leggatt
Lessard
Loiselle (Chambly)
Loiselle (Saint-Henri)
Lumley
MacDonald (Cardigan)
MacEachen
MacFarlane
Maine
Marchand
Martin
McIsaac
Milne
Munro (Hamilton East)
Nicholson (Miss)
O'Connell
Olivier
Orlikow
Ouellet
Parent
Pearsall
Pelletier
Penner
Peters
Philbrook
Pinard
Portelance
Poulin
Raines
Reid
Roberts
Robinson
Rodriguez
Rompkey
Rooney
Roy (Laval)
Saltsman
Savard
Sharp
Smith (Saint-Jean)
Stanbury
Stewart (Cochrane)
Symes
Tessier
Trudel
Turner
Watson
Wood
Yanakis—120.

● (1620)

Mr. Speaker: I declare the motion lost. The next question, in the order of deferral, is on motion No. 18 in the name of the hon. member for Palliser (Mr. Schumacher).

The House divided on motion No. 18 (Mr. Schumacher) which was negatived on the following division:

(Division No. 83)

YEAS

Messrs.

Alexander
Allard
Baker (Grenville-Carleton)
Bawden
Beatty
Beaudoin
Brisco
Cadieu
Caouette (Villeneuve)
Caouette (Témiscamingue)
Clarke (Vancouver Quadra)
Coates
Cossitt
Crouse
Darling
Dick
Diefenbaker
Dionne (Kamouraska)
Elzinga
Epp
Fraser
Gillies
Grafftey
Halliday
Hnatyshyn
Holmes
Hurlburt
Jarvis
Johnston
Jones
Kempling
Knowles (Norfolk-Haldimand)
Lambert (Bellechasse)
Laprise
La Salle
Lawrence
MacDonald (Egmont)
Malone
Marshall
Mazankowski
McCain
McCleave
McKenzie
McKinnon
Mitges
Muir
Neil
Oberle
O'Sullivan
Paproski
Patterson
Peters
Pigott (Mrs.)
Ritchie
Rondeau
Rynard
Schellenberger
Schumacher
Stanfield
Stevens
Stewart (Marquette)
Towers
Wenman
Whiteway
Wise
Woolliams
Yewchuk—67.

NAYS

Messrs.

Abbott
Allmand
Appolloni (Mrs.)
Baker (Gander-Twillingate)
Basford
Bégin (Miss)
Blackburn
Blais

Messrs.

Blaker
Blouin
Boulanger
Breau
Brewin
Broadbent
Buchanan
Bussières
Caccia
Cafik
Campagnolo (Mrs.)
Campbell (LaSalle-Émard-Côte Saint-Paul)
Caron
Clermont
Collenette
Comtois
Condon
Corriveau
Cullen
Danson
Daudlin
Dawson
Demers
Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi)
Douglas (Bruce-Grey)
Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands)
Drury
Duclos
Dupont
Dupras
Duquet
Ethier
Faulkner
Fleming
Flynn
Foster
Francis
Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier)
Gilbert
Gillespie
Goodale
Goyer
Gray
Guay (St. Boniface)
Guay (Lévis)
Haidasz
Harquail
Herbert
Hogan
Holt (Mrs.)
Hopkins
Isabelle
Jamieson
Joyal
Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre)
Lajoie
Lalonde
Lamontagne
Landers
Langlois
Lapointe
Leblanc (Laurier)
LeBlanc (Westmorland-Kent)
Lee
Lefebvre
Leggatt
Lessard
Loiselle (Chambly)
Loiselle (Saint-Henri)
Lumley
MacDonald (Cardigan)
MacEachen
MacFarlane
Maine
Marchand
Martin
McIsaac
Milne
Munro (Hamilton East)
Nicholson (Miss)
O'Connell
Olivier
Orlikow
Ouellet
Parent
Pearsall
Pelletier
Penner
Philbrook
Pinard
Portelance
Poulin
Raines
Reid
Roberts
Robinson
Rodriguez
Rompkey
Rooney
Roy (Laval)
Saltsman
Savard
Sharp
Smith (Saint-Jean)
Stanbury
Stewart (Cochrane)
Symes
Tessier
Trudel
Turner
Watson
Wood
Yanakis—121.

● (1630)

Mr. Speaker: I therefore declare motion No. 18 lost.

The question is on motion No. 20.

The House divided on motion No. 20 (Mr. Ritchie) which was negatived on the following division:

(Division No. 84)

YEAS

Messrs.

Alexander
Allard
Baker (Grenville-Carleton)
Bawden
Beatty
Beaudoin
Brisco
Cadieu
Caouette (Villeneuve)
Caouette (Témiscamingue)
Clarke (Vancouver Quadra)
Coates
Cossitt
Crouse
Darling
Dick
Diefenbaker
Dionne (Kamouraska)
Elzinga
Epp
Fraser
Gillies
Grafftey
Halliday
Hnatyshyn
Holmes
Hurlburt
Jarvis
Johnston
Jones
Kempling
Knowles (Norfolk-Haldimand)
Lambert (Bellechasse)
Laprise
La Salle
Lawrence
MacDonald (Egmont)
Malone
Marshall
Mazankowski
McCain
McCleave
McKenzie
McKinnon
Mitges
Muir
Neil
Oberle
O'Sullivan
Paproski
Patterson
Peters
Pigott (Mrs.)
Ritchie
Rondeau
Rynard
Schellenberger
Schumacher
Stanfield
Stevens
Stewart (Marquette)

Messrs.

Towers	Whiteway	Woolliams
Wenman	Wise	Yewchuk—(67)

NAYS

Messrs.

Abbott	Fleming	MacEachen
Allmand	Flynn	MacFarlane
Appolloni (Mrs.)	Foster	Maine
Baker (Gander-Twillingate)	Francis	Marchand
Basford	Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier)	Martin
Bégin (Miss)	Gilbert	McIsaac
Blackburn	Gillespie	Milne
Blais	Goodale	Munro (Hamilton East)
Blaker	Goyer	Nicholson (Miss)
Blouin	Gray	O'Connell
Boulanger	Guay (St. Boniface)	Olivier
Brewin	Guay (Lévis)	Orlikow
Broadbent	Haidasz	Ouellet
Buchanan	Harquail	Parent
Bussières	Herbert	Pearsall
Caccia	Hogan	Pelletier
Cafik	Holt (Mrs.)	Penner
Campagnolo (Mrs.)	Hopkins	Philbrook
Campbell (LaSalle-Émard-Côte Saint-Paul)	Isabelle	Pinard
Caron	Jamieson	Portelance
Clermont	Joyal	Poulin
Collenette	Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre)	Raines
Comtois	Lajoie	Reid
Condon	Lalonde	Roberts
Corriveau	Lamontagne	Robinson
Cullen	Landers	Rodriguez
Danson	Langlois	Rompkey
Daudlin	Lapointe	Rooney
Dawson	Leblanc (Laurier)	Roy (Laval)
Demers	LeBlanc (Westmorland-Kent)	Saltsman
Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi)	Lee	Savard
Douglas (Bruce-Grey)	Lefebvre	Sharp
Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands)	Leggatt	Smith (Saint-Jean)
Drury	Lessard	Stanbury
Duclos	Loiselle (Chambly)	Stewart (Cochrane)
Dupont	Loiselle (Saint-Henri)	Symes
Dupras	Lumley	Tessier
Duquet	MacDonald (Cardigan)	Trudel
Ethier		Turner
Faulkner		Watson
		Wood
		Yanakis—(120)

Mr. Speaker: I therefore declare motion No. 20 lost.

Motion No. 21 was dealt with in the vote on motion 2. Motion No. 22 was dealt with also. Motion No. 23 has been discontinued. Motion No. 24 has been negatived on division. Motions Nos. 26 and 27 have been discontinued. Motion No. 28 was dealt with in the vote on motion No. 7. Therefore, the House will resume discussion on motion No. 25.

● (1640)

[Translation]

Mr. Armand Caouette (Villeneuve): Mr. Speaker, last night before the adjournment, I was wondering why this same government was again anxious to discourage tourist-hunters by requiring—

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I wonder if hon. members who wish to leave the chamber would do so promptly in order that the hon. member for Villeneuve (Mr. Caouette) may continue.

[Mr. Speaker.]

[Translation]

Mr. Caouette (Villeneuve): Mr. Speaker, as I was saying last night before the adjournment, I am wondering why this same government is still anxious to discourage tourist-hunters who come to my constituency where hunting is the favourite sport of many people, to spend their money to buy ammunition, rifles, and so forth. This government wants to impose—and I do not know if we may call it a tax, but I am inclined to call it so—or require small businesses to pay between $10 and $200 for selling guns and ammunition.

That is why I say the government wants to discourage small business because, instead of bringing all the necessary ammunition and food for one or two weeks vacation in our Canadian forests, we know that these tourists do not go into these small businesses or stores only to buy ammunition, but they also buy their food and all they need.

One might also wonder who will again benefit from stopping sales by the small retailer who surely will not be interested in paying again for another permit, since he is already paying for one to the provincial government, and he will not be interested in continuing to sell the small stock he owns to help hunters get ammunition, so who will benefit from that? As the minister stated it so well yesterday, asking $250 will encourage companies like Eaton's and Simpsons. For them indeed $250 will be something minimal, whereas our small industries and retailers will have to pay $10, $15 or even $25 perhaps only to sell, as I said, $50 worth of merchandise.

My party and I believe that we have to support the motion put forward by the Progressive Conservative Party to the effect that the government should withdraw that permit obligation for small businesses. In conclusion, I urge the government to consider carefully that possibility if they do not want small businesses to close their doors; they should help them by not having them take a permit to sell ammunition and a few long guns during that wonderful time the hunting season is for many people.

[English]

Mr. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville): Mr. Speaker, I should like to participate very briefly in the debate on this motion by the hon. member for Moose Jaw (Mr. Neil). First of all, I should point out that I am in support of the motion. The thrust of these particular clauses of Bill C-51 is simply tantamount to another form of taxation as it relates to the individual and as it relates to the business entrepreneur. It is simply another cost of doing business.

It is very strange that we have a Minister of State for Small Business (Mr. Marchand) going around the country boasting about the measures the Liberal government has engaged in, in terms of improving the climate and the environment of small business enterprises in Canada. He has talked about removing bureaucratic red tape and the number of forms and statistics which have been burdened on small business. Yet here we have another example of bureaucratic intervention, another form of taxation and another cost item which will do nothing in terms of preventing crime. How will the imposition of a fee for an individual to acquire a firearm or a permit, or for a business enterprise to engage in the sale of firearms, in any way assist in stamping out crime? This is one of the major objections which has been cited and alluded to in the House during the course of this debate.

I should like to place on the record a sample of some of the material I have received in connection with this particular provision especially. I have a letter from Hanmer, Ontario, which reads as follows:

I object very strongly to Bill C-51 for the following reasons.

No way should I have to pay $10 for a firearm's certificate to prove I'm not a criminal or a psycho.

The law-abiding gun owner did not make the criminal or the psycho what he is. It is the government's responsibility to deal with these people and not make it look like it is my fault.

Do you think just because a criminal or a psycho doesn't have a firearm's certificate it will stop him from doing what he had in mind in the first place?

The $10 fee is simply stealing money from law-abiding citizens.

Trying to sneak unacceptable gun legislation through parliament with other possible good legislation is just plain terrible government—pure and simple.

The next letter I should like to quote is from Capreol, Ontario. It reads as follows:

I strongly object to Bill C-51 for the following reasons.

Why should I as a law-abiding citizen have to pay $10 for a firearm acquisition certificate just to prove to you that I am not a criminal or that I am not mentally disturbed.

Just because there are some criminals and psychos here in Canada I do not think that it is good government policy to try and penalize every gun-owning Canadian to pay the price for their mistakes.

Why don't you impose stiffer penalties in cases where firearms have been used unlawfully, instead of trying to take the easy way out and treating everyone as a damn criminal?

Do you think that a firearm acquisition certificate will stop a criminal or mentally disturbed person—as in previous school shootings—from committing a crime? No way. Once a person's mind is made up, I am sure that no piece of paper will change it.

The $10 fee is just, in my opinion, plain theft on the part of the government in order to cover part of the cost which the government has spent on several surveys pertaining to firearms in Canada. And how about the employment of people to take these applications for the certificates: who will pay for their wages? Sure it is a $10 fee now, but what will it be next time—$20 or $30?

Also, I would like to say that trying to push through unacceptable gun legislation with other possible good legislation, e.g. wiretapping and parole, is just plain sneaky business on the government's part.

As has been pointed out throughout this debate, the bill has many unacceptable features, but we are only dealing with one here. An assessment of fees in this connection will in no way deter the criminal from obtaining a gun if he is so disposed. What bothers me as we proceed with the passage of various forms of legislation in this House is the tremendous amount of power which is being left in the hands of the governor in council. I am bothered, also, by the tremendous complications which are accumulated as a result of legislation piled upon legislation.

We have reached a time in this country when a lot of the legislation presently on the statute books should be removed. It is time to take a thorough inventory of some of these laws. Our statutes are like accumulated stock. Over the years a business accumulates much dead stock which must be disposed of. This House has been grinding out legislation year after year, and this accumulation and proliferation of legislation and regulations has put Canadians in a statutory strait-jacket. It is time to assess our laws, streamline them and scrap those which are either redundant or outdated. It is time to free Canadians of this statutory strait-jacket and take off the hobbles of bureaucracy. It is time the government got off the backs of people.

● (1650)

I hope I have made clear my reasons for finding this bill particularly offensive. Those whom this legislation will govern will be forced to pay a price, to pay a fee which to business people engaged in providing a service will be an additional cost. I hope the minister will approve the amendment which will affect law-abiding citizens whom the legislation should not penalize.

Mr. Leonard C. Jones (Moncton): Mr. Speaker, the previous speaker was perfectly right. This whole cotton-picking provision should not come under the criminal law. Its pith and substance is not that of criminal law. It will merely enable the government to appoint more bureaucrats. Really, the government wants to tax people who get a firearms acquisition certificate and tax the small merchant who sells weapons or ammunition. This new law would punish the innocent, those who have no criminal record and are not criminals. The provision is criminal law in reverse. Those who pay the tax will not be represented; therefore we are contemplating a form of taxation without representation. Instead of telling businessmen who file the various forms and documents the government requires to pay a fee, they should be paid a fee.

Mr. Mazankowski: Right on.

Mr. Jones: I know small merchants are paid for collecting the provincial sales tax. By adopting this provision the government will put an onerous burden on the backs of small businessmen, at the expense of taxpayers. It will set up another bureaucratic empire, with administrators, personnel, and what have you. There will be a deputy in charge of firearms, an assistant deputy, an assistant to the assistant deputy, and so on.

This part of the legislation, at any rate, should not come under the criminal law. Frankly, I think it is ultra vires of this parliament. We should not even be discussing it. The government should bear the cost of the certificates it requires people to file or acquire. The government badgers small business to fill out forms and declarations. Every month Statistics Canada sends out forms. If they are not answered in a few days, you get a note from Ottawa asking why you did not send the information or form. Some people in my constituency were sent forms even after they had gone out of business. They were told to write "not applicable" in the appropriate spaces on the form. My main point is this: parliament has no authrority to pass this legislation. We should not even be discussing this provision.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Is the House ready for the question? Hon. members have heard the terms of the motion. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the said motion?

Some hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): All those in favour will please say yea.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Pursuant to Standing Order 75(11), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I am not clear why the vote on the motion has been deferred. Has some order been made with respect to the matter? Are we to defer all these votes?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Standing Order 75(11) reads as follows:

When a recorded division has been demanded on any amendment proposed during the report stage of a bill, Mr. Speaker may defer the calling in of the members for the purpose of recording the "yeas" and "nays" until any or all subsequent amendments proposed to that bill have been considered. A recorded division or divisions may be so deferred from sitting to sitting.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, until when are we deferring the vote?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Order, please. The House will now consider motion No. 29 in the name of the member for New Westminster (Mr. Leggatt).

Mr. Stuart Leggatt (New Westminster) moved:

Motion No. 29.

That bill C-51, to amend the Criminal Code, the Customs Tariff, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act and the Prisons and Reformatories Act, be amended in clause 7 by deleting subclause (1) and substituting the following therefor:

"7.(1) The definition "offence" in section 178.1 of the said act is repealed and the following substituted therefor:

" "offence", in relation to an authorization or application for an authorization, means an offence or conspiracy to commit an offence described in paragraph (a) and any such offence or conspiracy that there are reasonable grounds to believe has been or may be committed namely,

(a) any offence created by an act of parliament for which an offender may be sentenced to imprisonment for five years or more and any other offence created by an act of parliament for which an offender may be prosecuted by indictment or that is an offence mentioned in section 3 or 20 of the Small Loans Act, that there are reasonable grounds to believe is part of a pattern of criminal activity planned and organized by a number of persons acting in concert in furtherance of the commission of crime involving one or more offences mentioned in paragraph (a) or a conspiracy to commit one or more such offences;"

[The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner).]

He said: Mr. Speaker, there is an error in motion No. 29. The last words in subparagraph (a) should read, "ten years or more." Perhaps, for clarity, I should read the wording of that part of the amendment as now printed on the order paper. It reads:

(a) any offence created by an act of parliament for which an offender may be sentenced to imprisonment for five years or more.

I seek the unanimous consent of the House to change "five years" to "ten years", so that the last part of the sentence shall read, "to imprisonment for ten years or more". I wonder if the House would consent to that change so that I can debate the motion as amended, not the motion as it presently reads?

Mr. Basford: Mr. Speaker, I am tempted to withhold consent because I know the hon. member would oppose his own amendment. Seriously, we consent to the change.

● (1700)

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Is there agreement to allowing the hon. member for New Westminster (Mr. Leggatt) to change, in clause 7, the word "five" to the word "ten"?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Leggatt: I thank hon. members for their consideration in this matter. The reason for the amendment is that as this bill proceeded through committee, a number of amendments were submitted to the offence section of the wiretap bill which listed a variety of offences. The bill enumerated a great variety of specific offences in which case wiretapping is allowed. I and others expressed in committee concern about the fact that we should not have wiretapping legislation which would allow wiretapping in cases of insignificant crime or crime which is widespread throughout the population, which would give an open door and a blank cheque to the police department to wiretap everyone they wanted to wiretap regardless of the seriousness of the offence.

I think there is consensus amongst the population in favour of wiretapping, but people want it done only in cases of serious offences. The motion before the House which we are submitting states that there should be wiretapping in the case of organized crime, but there should not be wiretapping of little old ladies who have smuggled a pair of panties from Blane, Washington, to Vancouver. I see the hon. member for Vancouver-Kingsway (Mrs. Holt) looking incredulous. I thought she might, so I took the trouble of bringing in section 192 of the Customs Act. I use just that example, but there are a number of other examples of extremely minor offences which are common occurrences, actually just slips on the part of the population but for which wiretapping is allowed.

Under section 192 of the Customs Act, any person who smuggles anything valued at less than $200 is subject to the forfeiture of that item or a one-year jail term. Anyone who smuggles anything valued over $200 is subject to the forfeiture of that item or a four-year jail term. If, in the declaration that you file when you come across the border, you decide to underestimate the value of your goods, that is also an offence under the Customs Act. If you buy a suit in New York and you say it cost you $90, when in fact it cost $150, that is an offence. Under section 192, any offence allows wiretapping. What I am arguing is that it is surely not the intention of the House to open the door to wiretapping so wide that these insignificant kinds of offences would allow wiretapping. That is the reason for the original proposal of the Minister of Justice (Mr. Basford) which was to attempt to define organized crime and leave the wiretapping provisions in for organized crime. I agree that conspiracy to smuggle is an important crime, even though the individual crime is not as important, but I cannot agree that in order to do that, you open the whole door. The offence section in fact opens the whole door.

My party, on second reading of the bill, voted in favour of Bill C-83 and it was the government that faced us with the conundrum of trying to vote for apples and oranges. But I will not make the same argument again in the House because I know, Mr. Speaker, that you would rule me out of order. Suffice it to say that if the government had decided to split this bill, they would have had far less trouble with its passage. I have to tell you right now that because of the failure to appreciate the civil liberties aspect inherent in the wiretapping provisions, I will vote against this bill on third reading, in spite of the strong support which this party has given to the firearms control aspect of the bill. There is no way in which we can vote for a bill which attacks so fundamentally the liberty of every Canadian, and that is the key question in terms of the wiretapping provisions of this legislation.

I want to read into the record a couple of things that have been said about wiretapping, about return to law and order and respect for the law. This is what the former chief justice of the Ontario High Court, Mr. J. C. McRuer, said:

> If there is a decline in respect for law and order, it is a disease of the body politic . . . Unjust laws we have in abundance; some a legacy of other days when standards of justice were different that they are today; others forced on us by impatient legislators who are more concerned with rules than justice.
>
> During the past 50 years undoubtedly there has been a growing discontent with certain laws and customs and never before have the people on this continent and other continents been more alert to injustice than they are today. It may well be that what is interpreted as disrespect for law, in fact may only be the manifestation of a burning desire for justice.

I emphasize what Mr. Justice McRuer said, that a burning desire for justice does not occur when we have laws in Canada allowing the police to wiretap every insignificant offender. If you read this bill, you will find that every person in the country is subject to wiretap. This is "Big Brother" legislation, make no mistake about it. Let me spell out some details of why it is "Big Brother" legislation. Look at some of the amendments the Minister of Justice saw fit to bring in. First of all, when it comes to the solicitor-client relationship, it is something that is sacred and something that has been respected under British jurisprudence for hundreds and hundreds of years.

We had a incident which occurred in Sault Ste. Marie following which the minister said that we had cured it, we had gone a limited degree in trying to control the tapping of lawyers' phones. Let me say to the House, and particularly to the Minister of Justice, who should know this, who is a lawyer, who has been trained in the law, that the solicitor-client relationship is for the privilege of the client, and when you tap the lawyer's phone you are tapping all the private conversations. Surely to goodness somewhere in this life we have the right to express something in private without its being relayed through a tape recorder. Imagine a law firm with 50 or 100 lawyers—there are many such law firms in Canada—with one bad lawyer in the barrel and an authorization to wiretap his conversation.

An hon. Member: Only one?

Mr. Leggatt: There would be probably more than one in that barrel. How many conversations could be tapped? That is the question. It is not how many are authorized. How many people have had their privacy invaded under the terms of the wiretap legislation? When we see the number of authorizations filed, and see there are a little over 1,000 wiretaps authorized at the federal level, someone might think this does not seem to be excessive; but we must remember that some of them are taps that go on for three, four or five months, and hundreds of thousands of people who have had their privacy invaded do not know it.

Slowly, the feeling that you are not free to say what you want grows among the population and your freedoms are eroded insidiously as a result of the legislation. If you put one tap on a public telephone that is constantly used, or one tap on a law office and you keep it on for six months, every person who has used that phone will find his or her conversation recorded. Imagine how many conversations that could be. Do you know how many conversations would be recorded when they say that one wiretap has been authorized? The record will show there has been only one wiretap. What about the thousands of people who have been listened to and have had their privacy violated? They are innocent victims of the wiretap system.

If the minister had been concerned about civil liberties, he would have brought in a bill which made the reporting provisions require that every person whose conversation had been overheard was listed, and every conversation that was overheard was listed, so that we would have some idea of the extent of the wiretapping invasion of privacy in Canada. We do not have this under the bill before us. When the minister decided to bring in changes to this bill, he listened to only one source of information. He listened to the police. I can understand the police wanting to increase their powers with respect to the apprehension of criminals. That is their duty. I expect the commissioner of the RCMP and other police officers to want more power. But I expect the Minister of Justice to tell them they cannot have everything they want, in a free society. This is not a police state. This is supposed to be a state in which the Minister of Justice protects the people against the state, and we do not have that.

• (1710)

Let us consider the question of national security. If the Minister of Justice wants to improve the wiretap law, why does he not allow judges to authorize taps for national security? Why do we not trust our judges and bring them into our confidence? I have never known a judge I could not trust. Why cannot we have judges authorize taps under national security provisions? If the Minister of Justice were concerned about civil liberties, he would come down with that kind of change. One of the most significant changes would allow the introduction of illegally obtained evidence. The law is for everybody. There is not supposed to be one standard for the public and one for the police. If the police break the law, we should not reward that conduct by allowing the evidence obtained through that illegal act to be introduced in court. That is not a complicated proposition.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Why get authorization, if they can use the evidence anyway?

Mr. Leggatt: Right. If we are to control the number of taps and abuses, we will not do it unless we penalize those who act illegally by not allowing the evidence they obtain to be introduced. There is no check on abuses whatsoever. With regard to notification, we had a good law. We struggled in this House in 1973 to bring forward decent wiretap legislation. But what did the minister do? Again he listened to the police. Again, I do not blame the police. They do not want to provide notification. One of the greatest things to stop wiretapping excesses would be the requirement to notify people who are the subject of wiretapping.

The minister tells us that the police tell him the present law is not working, so he has decided to allow notification to take place after three years. After three years a person will not know what was tapped, when there was a tap, or anything else. We had a law which allowed a judge to provide reasonable, determinate delay, in his discretion. That provided ample delay for law enforcement officers. Again I say that the minister has lost confidence in the bench. He does not respect our judges—and they deserve respect—when he attempts to remove that discretion and says that there will be a three year limit. How many notifications will be made after less than three years? I do not think there will be very many. Without exception, I think notification will take place after three years and a very important regulation of the wiretap law will be lost.

We listened to much evidence about wiretapping. It has been dealt with extensively, but I want to read into the record something a very wise attorney general of the United States said in our committee.

Mr. Woolliams: That was Clark.

Mr. Leggatt: Ramsey Clark. Incidentally, he had a better record of apprehending mafia and criminal figures without wiretapping than all his successors have had with wiretapping. He was one of the most successful crime fighters the United States has seen.

Mr. Symes: Besides Nixon.

[Mr. Leggatt.]

Mr. Leggatt: Someone mentioned the former president of the United States. We know what happens to wiretapping when we open up that bag of tricks. It is amazing how many of the great devotees of law and order and wiretap law wind up on the wrong side of the law by the time they are finished. Once you open up wiretap provisions, you get into a Machiavellian state in which civil authority loses control. I want to read into the record what Ramsey Clark said in our committee back in 1973. He said:

> I come not to give advice but to express my impressions of the experience of your neighbour to the south. I come because I desperately hope to see from nations in this world the new moral leadership that is founded on the proposition that governments can protect their people without acting unfairly or immorally themselves in any respect. I believe that. I do not believe the rule of law can be an effective means of social change otherwise. I do not believe it can have the respect of the people otherwise and I have not seen a society or a people who believe that wiretapping is moral. It is inherently immoral and therefore to justify it you have to say the end thoughts justify these means.
>
> I come further because of my great concern about government lawlessness, the excessive use of force, violence, treachery and secrecy, and because I believe your fortunate country has a high opportunity and, with that, a high obligation to show the world that we can act fairly with safety.

That is a great compliment to pay to this country, by a person who has a worldwide reputation on the question of civil liberties and freedom of the individual. We should have listened to Ramsey Clark, because the events which have occurred since second reading of this bill—the events which occurred at L'Agence de Presse Libre, the inquiry into the Royal American Shows, the inquiry at Fredericton, New Brunswick, the question of Praxis, and the evidence that we do not yet know about but which has obviously convinced the Solicitor General of Canada (Mr. Fox) to appoint a royal commission into the activities of the RCMP—are all factors which should convince members of this House that a blank cheque on wiretapping is not necessary for the police forces of Canada, if the evidence is fresh.

I hope the Minister of Justice and hon. members opposite will not close their minds to this question, because it is one of the most serious moral questions this country has faced. We can have law and order, and we can have the forces of law and order obey the law. They do not need to use treachery, breaking and entering and wiretapping excessively, to invade the privacy of thousands and thousands of citizens, in order to maintain law and order. Respect for the law is not a one-way street. We must have respect for those who enforce the law. We must have respect for those who make judgments and for the Minister of Justice and the judgments he makes.

However, this insidious "Big Brother" legislation and this insidious "Big Brother" attitude on the part of this government, as represented by the Minister of Justice, should convince hon. members that this bill—because we cannot sever the wiretap provisions, although we may try—is not worthy of support. I want to tell the minister that if he would agree to sever the wiretap provisions, he could have the support of this party for the remainder of the bill. However, if we are unsuccessful in referring the wiretap provisions of this legislation back to the committee, he will not have the support of this party. He will not deserve the support of this party or of the Canadian people.

Mr. Eldon M. Woolliams (Calgary North): Mr. Speaker, having listened to the eloquent speech of the hon. member for New Westminster (Mr. Leggatt), I find that my duty is much easier to perform. If ever I was in full agreement with anything said by a member of the New Democratic Party, I am in full accord today.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Woolliams: We stood shoulder to shoulder in the committee in this regard. Why has the Minister of Justice (Mr. Basford) decided to give the police authorities of this nation elephant ears so that those ears can stretch into the homes of every Canadian and invade privacy?

● (1720)

The next question is, what changes are being made in this bill? The period for wiretapping was extended by 100 per cent, from 30 days to 60 days, and a further extension can be applied for. As the law stands, in order to get authorization for tapping a telephone an application must be made to a judge. Authorization can be given for 30 days, and the person involved has to be given notice within 90 days after that. This bill has doubled the time of the right to wiretap by 100 per cent and it has done away with the period of notice of three years. But as the hon. member for New Westminster pointed out, applications for authority can be made repeatedly. The minister will say that it could be less than three years, but we know that once the three-year rule is adopted it will be generally used. There will be a form to be used as an affidavit because nobody cross-examines that kind of evidence.

I read an interesting statement by the Minister of Justice in the Ottawa Citizen, in which he was reported as saying that people guilty of trafficking in drugs were getting off because of the way the law stands now. On second reading I set out some cases, and I am not going to restate them. There may be one such case, as the minister said, where because of a technical error in the affidavit the evidence was declared inadmissible. But that is not the law of Canada and, again, the Minister of Justice has misstated the law. He should refer to "Weekly Criminal Bulletin" No. 34, of June 17, 1977, where on page 362 it is stated:

On voir dire—

That is a trial within a trial which was held to determine whether wiretap evidence was admissible.

—to determine admissibility of wiretaps, held: defence cannot cross-examine to show conditions precedent in s. 178.13 to granting of authorization not met as such irrelevant to lawfulness of interception once authorization granted.

The minister left the impression that because there was a technical mistake in the affidavit, the evidence would be thrown out. What does the Ray case say? What does the Supreme Court of Canada say? It says that even if there is an unauthorized wiretap—whether it is technical or otherwise, and even if you do not get an order—if it is relevant to the issue, it is admissible. That is the law. That is why I put down three distinct amendments on the order paper. One is to reinstate the 90-day period, and another is that any evidence gained from an unauthorized wiretap is inadmissible, or any evidence gathered as a result of an unauthorized wiretap is inadmissible. The minister wants to give the snooper more power. As the hon. member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands (Mr. Douglas) said, why bother about getting authorization because you can get it into evidence anyway?

The defence against my position is: if you have nothing to hide, why worry? Let us take the case of a medical clinic with a staff of 20 doctors, 25 nurses, X-ray and technical staff, where the police suspect that someone there is smoking marijuana and wiretap the clinic. They find that someone is getting marijuana from George, say, but it is not just the conversation establishing that which goes in as evidence: hundreds of conversations of people who have called their doctors on private matters are played in court. That is why they sometimes do not use the evidence, because it would take too long to play. But in this computer age, all this stuff is stored and is never done away with. Sarah gets pregnant at 16, is happily married at 22 and does not want her husband to know, but the information is on the computer because the clinic was wiretapped in relation to another matter.

Now let us take the case of a law firm with maybe 100 lawyers, 40 secretaries and 40 other people on staff. One person is suspected of breaking the law, so the office is wiretapped. Not only that, but the courthouse is wiretapped as well. The evidence obtained is admissible if it is relevant to the issue. Every lawyer's conversation in the court house is listened to and every lawyer's conversation in that law firm is listened to. As my hon. friend said, the privilege and confidentiality of such conversations is not to protect lawyers; a lawyer's job is to protect people against the state, and when their telephone conversation is tapped so is that of the average law-abiding citizen.

I should like to give an example of how bad this is, Mr. Speaker. My friend said he trusted the courts. I trust the judiciary, but I would remind hon. members that they are human beings. When this government appointed 19 lawyers to the bench, and 18 of them were known Grits, the right hon. member for Prince Albert (Mr. Diefenbaker) was asked what he thought about it. He said, "It is clear we have a just society. Now I understand. It is just for Grits."

The last murder trial in which I was defence counsel was a very serious case where someone had been stabbed some 30 times and died as a result. The defence was insanity, so I got an order to get a psychiatrist. The fellow was incarcerated. They were not going to let him out on bail until they decided just what the situation was. While the psychiatrist was interviewing the accused, that room was not only bugged but, as I proved at the trial, there was a spy representing the Crown in the room.

● (1730)

Once you open the door to that kind of electronic surveillance, you put elephant ears into every home in Canada. As I said in committee, the Minister of Justice might as well get it over with. Get hold of Bell Telephone and all the other telephone companies in this country, run all telephones through a computer, then turn on the computer so the police can sit back, enjoy life and listen to the conversations of every Canadian. In three years, somebody might be notified. If they are not notified, the evidence is still admissible if it is relevant to the issue.

There is another development which was reported in the Globe and Mail. You can listen in on telephone conversations internationally by microwave. The United States is concerned that the U.S.S.R. is tapping their long-distance calls. Maybe we have reached the point talked about by Mr. Cooper and Mr. Cartwright when they appeared before the committee. They are lawyers of the Law Society of Upper Canada. They said we may have reached the time when, if you want to talk to anybody, the lawyer talking with a client, or a doctor with a patient, you must find some lonely place in the bush and then check the trees to see whether they are bugged.

I am opposed to this legislation which gives more authority to the state against law-abiding citizens. That is why I moved the motion. A lawyer's office should not be bugged, not because he is a lawyer but because it is a place where law-abiding citizens discuss their problems in reference to the state. That must be privileged and confidential in accordance with the common law. I spoke about the clinic. I say any evidence derived from wiretapping should be declared inadmissible if it is an unauthorized wiretap.

The hon. member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands (Mr. Douglas), a former leader of the NDP and former premier of a province, was right when he said, "Why bother getting the authority?" The evidence can be admissible even if it is from an unauthorized wiretap. Even worse, not only the evidence gathered as a result of the wiretap goes in, but other facts found out in reference to that. The police do not bother with a code. Let's not be children. They go on wiretap and they listen. When they finally find some information, they send one of the boys down to try to catch that person. That evidence can be admissible. That is why we oppose this kind of legislation.

The Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) said that the state had no place in the bedrooms of the average Canadian. Before becoming a member of parliament, when he was a member of the NDP—

Some hon. Members: No, no!

Mr. Woolliams: They deny him. They are just like the disciples. In any event, he finally became respectable when he became Liberal. He stood for civil rights, unions and other such things. Maybe the state has no place in the bedrooms of this nation, but it is in there. The law has no business in the homes of law-abiding citizens, rooting around, listening and looking for crime that may be minor in nature. Next we will have—and this matter has already been raised in the House by the hon. member for Central Nova (Mr. MacKay)—"no knock" legislation, permitting the police to break into homes for whatever reason. If we accept this legislation, we will have "no knock" legislation. The government says no harm can come from this. I wish to read from an article in the Criminal Law Review, by T. B. Radley. It deals with how wiretaps can be changed. I quote:

> As to the limit of fineness of elimination which is possible with good machines and skilful operators, this is smaller than might be expected. It is often possible, granted skill, to eliminate even a single monosyllabic word. The easiest way to do this is to turn off the loudspeaker current while the word is being spoken. This leaves a little gap of silence on a dubbing, but even this gap can be closed if necessary.
>
> Turning for a moment to a hypothetical recorded confession, it is apparent that a remark originally, " I am not guilty," could be altered fairly easily to "I am guilty."

I once acted in a murder trial in which the police went to arrest a certain woman. There was a question as to whether the husband, or the wife, had committed the crime. She was walking around the room saying, "Why did I do it?". As I said to the jury, it could have been "Why? Did I do it?" That is exactly the way things can be changed. You can leave out the word "not" so that it is affirmative. Sometimes members of this place try to be humorous. Someone reading Hansard on a platform in the hustings can make it sound entirely different when it is taken out of context. The minister said they have compromised, leaving it to the discretion of the judiciary.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Order, please. I regret to interrupt the hon. member, but his allotted time has expired. He may continue only with unanimous consent. Does the hon. member have consent to continue?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Woolliams: The hon. member for Windsor-Walkerville (Mr. MacGuigan), a very distinguished scholar and former dean, was opposed to this bill, but the minister and his friends got close to him. They came up with a compromise. They said they would leave the decision to the discretion of the judge. Where there is no authorization and something is improper, they said they would leave it to the discretion of the judge and there would be no problem. The Ray case in the Supreme Court of Canada stated that if something is relevant, it is admissible. All the other judges are controlled by the highest court in the land. The Supreme Court of Canada states that if it is relevant, it does not matter how it is obtained. So we leave it to the discretion of the judge, and the trial judge says, "Well, my hands are tied. If it happens to be relevant to the issue, it is admissible." That is no compromise at all. That is why I say any evidence derived from an unauthorized wiretap should be inadmissible, and any evidence derived from listening to a doctor, a lawyer or any other professional person, or people in that type of service dealing with human beings, should be privileged and confidential. Otherwise you might as well turn on the computer and listen to all the telephone calls that go through a police station.

• (1740)

What the minister has done is give the state and the police elephants ears so that they can be in every home and every room belonging to every law-abiding Canadian. That is what he is doing today. That is why members over there want to rush this bill through. In addition, this measure is linked with gun control, prison reform and dangerous offenders. We know why this was all put together. It was because the minister knows he could not have got the gun section through, or this part of the bill through if he could not put it in one package.

The party to which I belong moved that this bill be split, and the New Democratic Party supported us, so that we could have voted separately on gun control, wiretapping, dangerous offenders, reform and parole. That would have been reasonable legislation.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Woolliams: We, as a party, intend to vote against this bill on third reading. I hope every Canadian, particularly those in his constituency, will remind the Minister of Justice of what he has done to the Criminal Code and to the average Canadian in reference to the invasion of privacy.

Hon. Ron Basford (Minister of Justice): Perhaps I might just say a word at this point. I appreciate the fact that two hon. members have spoken across the range of the wiretap section. They have spoken briefly and I know there is a desire to move very quickly, so I shall be brief. I might say, first of all, that I do not think much is accomplished by one group or by another group, whether on this side of the House or on the other, claiming that they are more concerned with civil liberties than some other group in the House. I think all groups and all members of the House are concerned with the rights and civil liberties of Canadians, since this is obviously a function of parliament. But we need to address ourselves to the problems which face the country, and it is up to us to deal with them in a realistic and proper way while at the same time protecting Canadians.

This having been said, I want to go briefly into the history of the wiretapping section which was put into the Criminal Code in 1974 after long discussion, debate and examination of the question by a parliamentary committee. That committee came to a number of conclusions. Until then, as hon. members know, there was no law relating to electronic surveillance or wiretapping. There was no law prohibiting it. It was clear there were people engaged in private wiretapping and that the police were also engaged in wiretapping without any judicial supervision whatsoever.

The committee, in 1974, came to three conclusions. First, that there should be no private wiretapping—that no private citizen should be able to eavesdrop on the telephone or communications of another citizen. That is the law now, and will remain the law and should remain the law. There is no dispute about that. Second, the committee came to the conclusion that electronic surveillance was an indispensable tool in the hands of the police against a certain set of crimes, and that under proper judicial supervision electronic surveillance should be available to the police for this purpose.

Furthermore, there should be a particular section in the act relating to organized crime which was, and is, a menace in this country. The particular wording in the Criminal Code related to organized crime was written by Ron Atkey, a former member of parliament who sat for the Conservative party, a man whose record in civil liberties is well recognized but who, in parliament, acknowledged that in certain circumstances wiretapping was necessary. He, in fact, wrote the wording relating to organized crime.

Two things have happened since 1974 when that law was written. One is that the organized crime section has not worked because no judge knows the legal meaning of "organized crime". The other is that every attorney general in this country has annually reported that because of the provisions of the wiretap legislation they are handicapped in the investigation of certain major crimes and handicapped in their investigation of organized crime. I submit, as I have submitted throughout, that there is no dispute in this country or, at any rate, there should not be, as to who feels the greater concern for the civil liberties of Canadians. But I also assert that it is the responsibility of the House to take account of the reports we have received on the activities of organized crime and endeavour to write the law in such a way as to give the police, under proper judicial supervision, the instruments to allow them to investigate, charge, prosecute and convict organized criminals more effectively.

What went on in the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs was a long and thorough investigation of that section. Knowledgeable people from both sides of the House served on that committee. I had initially suggested to the committee that an authorization for wiretap should be obtainable by the police from a judge for any offence carrying a sentence of five years or more. After much discussion, that proposition was rejected by the committee and the committee went back to the form of the existing Criminal Code, working on the basis of a list of serious crimes with a separate section on organized crime. So if the police officers, through Crown counsel, went to a judge they could get an authorization on the basis of the suspected commission of named offences or of organized criminal activities. The committee examined that list, the list presently in the Criminal Code.

Mr. Woolliams: What committee are we talking about?

Mr. Basford: The Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs. That list was approved by a vote in the committee. The hon. member for New Westminster (Mr. Leggatt) has proposed an amendment to restrict the list of offences and restrict the meaning of "organized crime". It may well be unintentional on his part, but if his amendment were to carry it would amount to an open season for organized crime in this country.

An hon. Member: Nonsense.

Mr. Basford: Just listen for a moment. The specific offences left out of the list—and I think they are serious offences—are such as the possession of explosives which could be and have been used by terrorists and saboteurs, fraud upon the government, breach of trust by public officials, and municipal corruption. All these are activities which I regard as serious and which I believe the country regards as serious. Then there is bribery, obstructing justice, an offence which could relate, for example to jury tampering and unlawful interception. This has been taken out and I do not think it should be excluded. Surely it should be a serious offence to illegally wiretap another person's communications, and it seems to me that this is something which is most "catchable" or "investigatable" through electronic surveillance.

● (1750)

With regard to fraudulent manipulation of stock exchanges, we have seen, not necessarily organized crime but very big criminals move into this country for purposes of committing offences under this section. This is an activity which is not carried out on the street in the usual criminal haunts, but in office towers—

Mr. Leggatt: A point of order, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Order. The hon. member for New Westminster (Mr. Leggatt) is rising on a point of order.

Mr. Leggatt: Mr. Speaker, I know that the minister is anxious to proceed with his legislation, and I may be able to save some time. He is now referring to a section of the motion which deals with the definition of "organized crime" and the offences which are tappable. From reading my section, I now see what the minister is getting at. I can assure the House that I did not intend to limit the tapping of organized crime as defined in the motion only to those offences which carry a sentence of ten years or more. I intended to leave it open to any other offence created by an act of parliament for which an offender may be prosecuted by indictment; that is, an offence mentioned in section 3 or section 20 of the Small Loans Act. So it is inadvertence on my part, and for that I apologize to the House.

As I say, if the Minister of Justice wants to save time, it is not necessary for him to dwell on that section. My intention is very clear; I want this section to have the capacity to tap organized crime for all indictable offences, including, of course, the sections under the Small Loans Act.

Mr. Basford: Mr. Speaker, I asked the hon. member to listen to me for a moment, and I am glad that he did and that he got my point. Because by the use of the words "in furtherance" in his amendment, it clearly has the result that the only way you can wiretap organized crime is if an offence on the list was being committed—which leaves out certain serious offences and would be, as I say, an open season for organized crime. I accept the word of the hon. member that that is a case of inadvertence, but obviously it leaves me having to resist the amendment.

Even forgetting the organized crime section for a moment, Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that some of the offences that I have mentioned are serious. They are not necessarily committed by what might be called organized crime; they are committed by major criminals and should be in the list of offences for which the police, under proper judicial supervision, can obtain an authorization to wiretap.

I mention only the last one, pornography, which the committee put in deliberately. There is a good deal of concern in this House and in the country about the kind of hard core pornography that is coming into Canada. I am not referring to the Playboy magazine type, but to hard core pornography, depicting young children in the commission of sexual acts either with themselves or with adults, bestiality and other magazines of that kind. It seems to me that the committee looked at these offences carefully, examined each one and made a recommendation to the House which should, with respect, be accepted.

One last quick point, Mr. Speaker. The hon. member referred to smuggling. He ridiculed the section on the basis of some tourist coming in with some panties which she refused to declare. I can assure the House, as I did the committee, that the customs officials have neither the intention nor the resources to wiretap in those cases. Whether or not it be someone failing to declare a pair of panties, the section also includes smuggling carloads or truckloads of, for example, pornographic material. It includes smuggling of stolen goods in huge quantities by very sophisticated, major criminals. Therefore, it seems to me that while one might ridicule smuggling on the one hand, there are certainly smuggling activites which are serious and dangerous and are a large part of criminal activity in this country.

Mr. F. Oberle (Prince George-Peace River): Mr. Speaker, my summer is moving along just as quickly as that of the Minister of Justice (Mr. Basford). I should like to stroll the streets of Prince George to be with my constituents just as much as the minister would like to walk down Robson's Cross in Vancouver and do the same there. His need, of course, is greater than mine because I am not the sponsor of this bill which is before us and which is cutting into the work we should be doing in our constituencies this year.

I sat on this committee for some time as a layman, and as you can well imagine, Mr. Speaker, the deliberations were often tedious and boring for a layman who does not understand all this legal jargon which our learned and honourable colleagues indulge in at times in this House and certainly in committee. But as a private citizen and a layman, I was appalled, concerned, at times frightened, by the testimony that was placed before the committee.

Not all the evidence was brought before the committee, of course, because when the committee was finally prorogued on the gun sections of the bill I understand there were some 24 application from groups of individuals throughout the county to appear before the committee to give testimony. I never understood why there was this indecent haste about this bill. There was indecent haste last year and there is, again, indecent haste about this omnibus bill.

I hear the hon. member for Vancouver-Kingsway (Mrs. Holt) interjecting. I would invite her to stand up and participate in this debate, and don't you tell me that I have blood on my hands as well.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Order, please. The hon. member for Prince George-Peace River (Mr. Oberle) should address the Chair.

Mr. Oberle: Would you call it six o'clock, Mr. Speaker?

Mr. Woolliams: May I just have one word with the Chair?

Mr. MacFarlane: No, sit down.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Order, please. The hon. member for Prince George-Peace River has the floor.

Mr. Woolliams: I am sorry; I thought he was calling it six o'clock.

Mr. Oberle: I yield the floor to my hon. friend from Calgary.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Is the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams) rising on a point of order?

Mr. Woolliams: Mr. Speaker, the point I want to make is this. The hon. member for New Westminster (Mr. Leggatt) did make an error in his amendment which he would like to correct, I hope by unanimous consent. I hope that when this bill is called again tomorrow there is an order that he be able to make this change to his amendment. I think it would be fair to him. He is a distinguished member of the House and he is a lawyer. We are all very busy and have a lot to do in our offices, but he found he made one little mistake in a phrase. I ask that the House consent that he be allowed to change his amendment to what he really intended to say.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Has the hon. member for New Westminster the consent of the House to correct his amendment?

Mr. Basford: With respect, Mr. Speaker, it was I who pointed out the error—

Mr. Paproski: You want to take the credit.

Mr. Basford: No; I would like to know exactly what the correction is.

Mr. Leggatt: Mr. Speaker, on that very point, if I can be recognized I should like to give the exact deletion required to make the motion square with the argument which has been presented in support of it. In the third to last line of the motion the words "mentioned in paragraph (a)" should be deleted from the motion.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Is that agreed?

Mr. Basford: Mr. Speaker, unless we are voting on it right now, and I do not think we are, I should like to give my reaction tomorrow, if I may.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): It being six o'clock p.m., this House stands adjourned until two o'clock p.m. tomorrow, pursuant to Standing Order 2(1).

At 6.01 p.m. the House adjourned, without question put, pursuant to Standing Order.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Thursday, July 14, 1977

The House met at 2 p.m.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[English]

CENTRAL MORTGAGE AND HOUSING CORPORATION

REQUEST FOR TABLING OF INSPECTION AND MANAGEMENT MANUALS FOR HOUSING PROJECTS—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Dean Whiteway (Selkirk): Mr. Speaker, I rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43 on a matter of urgent and pressing necessity. In view of the newly enlightened spirit of this government and its reformed will to make more information available to members of parliament, and in view of the refusal by the President of Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation to produce guidelines affecting the approval, management and inspection of housing projects, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Parry Sound-Muskoka (Mr. Darling):

That this House direct the Minister of State for Urban Affairs to table forthwith inspection guidelines, project officer manuals and lending approval criteria as requested by members in committee during the hearings on main estimates.

Mr. Speaker: Presentation of such a motion for debate pursuant to the Standing Order can be done only with the unanimous consent of the House. Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

BELL CANADA

SUGGESTED PROTECTION FOR SUBSCRIBERS AGAINST FURTHER RATE INCREASES—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Cyril Symes (Sault Ste. Marie): Mr. Speaker, I rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43 to move a motion of urgent and pressing necessity. Since senior Bell Canada executives have stated that that company intends to approach the CRTC before this year's end for another rate increase, and whereas a June 1, 1977 rate decision increased company revenue by $162 million and a January 1976 rate decision increased Bell's coffers by $110.3 million, and in light of the fact that Bell executives cite delays due to public hearings in receiving approval of the $162 million increase as a justification for the new application, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Cape Breton-East Richmond (Mr. Hogan):

That this House instruct the CRTC to protect telephone subscribers from further uncalled for rate increases by reassessing Bell's profitability by examining the earnings of Bell's subsidiaries, and further that the CRTC not speed up public hearings to suit the corporate interests of Bell over those of its subscribers.

Mr. Speaker: Presentation of such a motion for debate requires the unanimous consent of the House. Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

● (1410)

[Translation]

AGRICULTURE

REQUEST FOR STATEMENT BY MINISTER ON RESULTS OF VICTORIA CONFERENCE—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Léonel Beaudoin (Richmond): Pursuant to Standing Order 43, Mr. Speaker, I seek the unanimous consent of the House to move a motion on a matter of urgent and pressing necessity.

Considering that the Minister of Agriculture has taken part, together with his provincial colleagues, in a very important conference of a few days duration in Vancouver, that all hon. members in the House, as well as indeed all Canadian farmers, are anxious to see significant changes made to the agricultural policies of Canada, and that the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan) could no doubt advise the House of the main issues which were dealt with during this conference, as well as the resolutions which were agreed upon, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Shefford (Mr. Rondeau):

The the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan) make a statement in the House, followed by a question period, concerning the direction he intends to take following the agreements entered upon during the last federal-provincial conference of agricultural ministers.

Mr. Speaker: Order. Under Standing Order 43, this motion requires the unanimous consent of the House. Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

[English]

FARM CREDIT CORPORATION

PROPOSED REFERENCE TO COMMITTEE OF MANAGEMENT AUDIT BY SIBBALD GROUP—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Perrin Beatty (Wellington-Grey-Dufferin-Waterloo): Mr. Speaker, in view of the fact that a recent management audit of the Farm Credit Corporation conducted by the Sibbald group disclosed serious management problems within the Farm Credit Corporation, declining employee morale and moonlighting on government time by some employees, and in view of the unwillingness or the inability of government to give adequate explanations as to how they intend to deal with these problems, despite the clear need for the government to show ministerial responsibility in dealing with this $306 million federal corporation, I ask the unanimous consent of the House, under Standing Order 43, to move, seconded by the hon. member for Battle River (Mr. Malone):

That the management audit of the Farm Credit Corporation prepared by the Sibbald group be referred to the Standing Committee on Agriculture for examination, and that the Minister of Agriculture appear before that committee to explain what action the government has taken or proposes to take to deal with the serious problems in the Farm Credit Corporation.

Mr. Speaker: Pursuant to Standing Order 43, presentation of such a motion for debate can be done only with the unanimous consent of the House. Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

CRIMINAL CODE

SUGGESTED REINTRODUCTION OF CAPITAL PUNISHMENT—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Stan Schumacher (Palliser): Mr. Speaker, I rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43 to move a motion on a matter of urgent and pressing necessity. In view of the fact that this is the first anniversary of the complete abolition of the death penalty in Canada, and in view of the fact that today a young police officer, killed in the performance of his duties, is being laid to rest, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Dauphin (Mr. Ritchie):

That this House ask the government to immediately bring forward a measure reintroducing capital punishment.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. With all due respect to the sincerity of the motion before us, which has described the anniversary of the bill and the tragic events, I do not see any element of urgency to the subject matter raised.

[Mr. Speaker.]

CANADA PENSION PLAN

PROPOSED PENSIONS FOR ALL HOMEMAKER SPOUSES—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, even in this twelfth year of the Canada Pension Plan, the urgency of the matter I wish to raise under Standing Order 43 will not go away. Indeed, it becomes more pressing as time goes on. Therefore, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands (Mr. Douglas):

That this House urges the government to bring in legislation to provide pensions for all homemaker spouses, in their own right, equivalent to those earned by contributors to the Canada Pension Plan, thus recognizing for pension purposes the contribution to our society made by those who work in the home, and this House urges that such legislation be included in the Queen's speech to be made at the opening of the next session of this parliament.

Miss MacDonald: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Pursuant to Standing Order 43, presentation of such a motion for debate requires the unanimous consent of the House. Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

BILINGUALISM

RESTRICTION OF RIGHT TO ENGLISH LANGUAGE EDUCATION UNDER QUEBEC'S BILL 101—GOVERNMENT ACTION

Mr. Joe Clark (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Prime Minister. In view of the fact that the government of Quebec has now presented Bill 101 and that that bill has no changes in the provisions restricting the right to English language education of Canadian children moving from other provinces, I wonder if the Prime Minister will tell the House whether he or the constitutional advisers to the government have this matter under consideration? What options are they considering now in light of the fact that this bill is almost certain to be passed by the Parti Québécois majority in the Quebec legislature?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, we were certainly surprised and saddened to see that the bill was brought back under a new number without any change in this very fundamental provision, to which the federal government has indicated its opposition. It is still a formal bill and it will be heard by the relevant committee of the Quebec legislature. We are still hopeful that the Parti Québécois government will see its way clear to change this very serious infraction of the right of Canadians to move across the country. In its present form, it looks as if the Parti Québécois is acting as though the province were already separated. This is a point of view we most seriously deny and attack.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Trudeau: The federal government's position on this has been made very clear, to wit that English-speaking Canadians from other parts of Canada should be able to move into Quebec and have their children go to the official language school of their choice when such schools exist and are justified by numbers of English-speaking Canadians.

An hon. Member: And vice versa.

Mr. Trudeau: Yes, we have also indicated in our policy that, vice versa, French-speaking Canadians moving from Quebec to other centres where there are sufficient numbers of French-speaking Canadians should find schools in that language so that they can exercise the same freedom to move and have their children educated in the language of their choice.

The Leader of the Opposition asks if there has been a reference to the Department of Justice. Certainly, the minister and I have discussed this matter, but there would not be a formal reference of a bill to his law officers until that bill became law and until the constitutionality or otherwise of the bill was made an object of study by the Department of Justice.

Mr. Clark: Just so we are clear, Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister has repeated the principle that he says guides the attitude of his government. He indicated that the only action the government has taken to this point is that there has been a discussion between himself and the Minister of Justice. There has been no reference to the law officers of the Crown to get a legal opinion of the constitutionality of a bill that holds every likelihood of being passed into law by the government of Quebec. Does the Prime Minister agree that citizens who are facing passage of a law which calls into question long standing rights that they have exercised are entitled to some reassurance from the government of Canada that this government will concern itself with their problems. What kind of reassurance is the Prime Minister prepared to give those Canadians today?

Mr. Trudeau: Mr. Speaker, I dealt with this matter a few weeks ago when the Secretary of State tabled his paper on language policy. I indicated it was our hope that the provinces within the area of education, an area in their constitutional jurisdiction, would want to protect the linguistic rights of the official minorities in their provinces. I went further and said we would be prepared to envisage a constitutional amendment which would give the federal government the authority in the area of education to step in and protect those rights.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Trudeau: With the present state of the constitution, the Leader of the Opposition knows that the area of education is within the jurisdiction of the provinces. We are still hopeful that Bill 101 will be amended. If it is not and it passes into law, we will pursue the two courses that I just indicated, get the provinces together to try to obtain from them some guarantee for their linguistic minorities and, if not, press for a constitutional amendment that will give us the authority to intervene on behalf of minorities.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

POSSIBILITY OF REFERRING QUEBEC'S BILL 101 TO SUPREME COURT

Mr. Joe Clark (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister has indicated two courses of action that could be taken, both of which would be some time in having any consequence. I note that the Prime Minister did not make any reference to the possibility of the matter of the constitutionality of the bill, once it becomes the law, going before the courts. Does the Prime Minister exclude the possibility that the federal government would on its own initiative refer such a law to the Supreme Court in view of the serious questions that arise as to its effect on constitutional rights? In any case, will the Prime Minister commit the government of Canada to intervene in a court action brought by private citizens to protect constitutional rights which may be infringed by any such law?

● (1420)

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the answer to the first question is, no, we do not exclude such a course. In answer to the second question, it would be most likely the way in which the federal government would act by intervening in a case which would be brought by private citizens, which is the general and normal way whereby the federal government intervenes to plead the constitutionality or otherwise of the law.

Mr. Diefenbaker: What about disallowance?

Mr. Trudeau: That was not the question of your leader. You could wait a moment.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Paproski: You better be careful or the right hon. gentleman will bop you on the nose, making you worse than you are.

An hon. Member: Watch that face.

Mr. Trudeau: Just because the right hon. gentleman had the privilege of sleeping with me one night on the aeroplane does not mean—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Some hon. Members: Shame.

An hon. Member: The government has no place in the bedrooms of the nation.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Trudeau: Of course, we would keep open the possibility of intervening in a court case as, incidentally, we have done in Manitoba in a case which is not completely dissimilar, at least in so far as language rights are concerned. Here again, it would depend on our views on the constitutionality or otherwise of that particular piece of legislation. I should tell the Leader of the Opposition that in matters of education, I, personally, am not speaking yet as one who has been advised by the Minister of Justice or that department but I, personally, have always taken the view that educational rights were for the province to legislate upon and that there were only certain confessional aspects of those rights which permitted the federal government to intervene and plead ultra vires in that particular decision. But this is a legal discussion which I would gladly hold until the bill has become law and until the law officers of the Crown have reported on it.

Mr. Clark: To make it absolutely clear could the Prime Minister say whether the situation now is that there is no formal study by the law officers of the Crown of Canada of the constitutionality of Bill 101? That is not now being undertaken by the federal law officers?

Mr. Trudeau: Mr. Speaker, as I said, I discussed this matter with the Minister of Justice. I cannot say that he has not discussed this matter with his officials and that they have not begun to look at the bill before it becomes law. I said there has been no decision on my part or by the cabinet to ask for a formal opinion about the bill until it becomes law. We still hope the bill will be changed and that the law will be better than it is now.

RIGHT TO EDUCATION IN OFFICIAL LANGUAGE OF CHOICE—GOVERNMENT'S INTERPRETATION OF "RIGHT"

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Halifax): I am sure we all share the hope of the Prime Minister that the law now before the Quebec National Assembly will be more to our taste and more in accordance with our views than at present. I now seek some elucidation from the Prime Minister. Is he not using the word "right" in two senses? His government has stated most categorically that, subject to circumstances which may make a deferment of application necessity, Canadians have a right to have their children educated in the official language of their choice. Now, he has just said that the right within the field is in the provincial jurisdiction. Is the government of Canada in fact declaring that Canadians do have this right, or is it more accurate to state that they express the hope that this right will be appealed some day?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): I think the hon. member for Halifax knows the answer to that question, but I would certainly repeat it for him. In areas of provincial jurisdiction we can express hopes that rights will be respected, but we cannot legislate in those areas. Naturally, the paper tabled by the Secretary of State a couple of weeks ago covered the whole area of languages in Canada. Some matters can be legislated exclusively by the provinces. Because of that, however, we did not feel that we should be precluded from expressing the view that we have of Canadian citizens and how this country should be operated as one country. It is in that sense that we talked of rights; not in the legal sense, but as they should be.

Mr. Stanfield: Mr. Speaker, whatever differences we may have in some areas I do not think there are any differences between myself and the right hon. gentleman on the subject of languages. Having said that, I would like to ask the Prime Minister whether it is appropriate for the federal government to declare rights or to appear to declare rights in areas of provincial jurisdiction, and whether it is really in the interests of national unity for the federal government to appear to declare a right for Canadian citizens and have that challenged by a province within a matter of weeks. I ask that question most earnestly.

Mr. Trudeau: I suppose this is a question of approach and of tactics. The hon. gentleman indicates that we are probably agreed on substance in so far as our belief in language policy. However, in so far as this particular question is concerned, we, in our paper tabled by the Secretary of State, did not hesitate to use the word "right" because we intended to signal to the provinces that we think this particular right should exist in the constitution.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Trudeau: The hon. gentleman will recall that in 1971 at Victoria we indeed stated rights that did not exist, relative to entrenching the official languages in the constitution. They were not rights in the sense that they did not then exist in the constitutional sense, but we wanted them to become constitutional rights. We are saying the same thing in this particular area about the right of minorities in Canada to be able to move where they want in Canada and to be able to continue having their children educated in the official language of their choice.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Stanfield: Without questioning the earnestness and the good faith of the right hon. gentleman in this area, I ask him whether, when the right hon. gentleman is referring to the intention to do everything possible to protect those rights, the declaration of rights will not create tensions in the country, which we can well do without at the present time.

Mr. Trudeau: I understand that it is the general inclination of the hon. gentleman never to provoke confrontation of any kind or anything which might be described as a tension, but it seems to me that in this particular case if there is any tension, it results from the actions of a government in Quebec which was not elected on a mandate to separate but which is now acting as though the country is—

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

ENERGY

NATURAL GAS—PROPOSED INCREASE IN EXPORTS TO UNITED STATES—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. Last week the National Energy Board indicated to the petroleum industry its willingness to consider applications to increase gas exports to the United States during the next five to seven years. As a result two companies, TransCanada Pipeline and Pan-Alberta Gas, are now stepping up their purchase contracts to a combined total of 1.5 billion cubic feet per day, and they claim that they do not anticipate any difficulties or delays in getting National Energy Board approval to export part of this gas.

● (1430)

In view of the fact that the last report of the National Energy Board foresees a shortage of gas in Canada at the earliest by 1982 and at the latest by 1985, does the government approve of stepping up gas exports to the United States in view of the pessimistic and gloomy forecast which the National Energy Board has made with respect to Canada's anticipated gas shortages within the next five to eight years?

Hon. Alastair Gillespie (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, the government has not been asked to approve and we have not been given any reasons why we should approve.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. I am raising the question with the minister because I thought he would be aware of the action of the National Energy Board and would be willing to give the government's views to the National Energy Board if not to the House. In the proposal being made it is now suggested that the increased exports to the United States should be on a swap arrangement by which Alberta gas would be sold in exchange for Alaskan gas to be delivered when the pipeline is built.

Does the minister not think that this means Canada will be selling cheap gas to our American neighbours and in due course purchasing Alaskan gas at two or three times the price we have received for the Alberta gas? I should like to ask the minister if he considers this to be in the best interests of Canadian consumers and whether he proposes to make any representations to the National Energy Board who, after all, are appointed to protect the interests of Canadian consumers?

Mr. Gillespie: Mr. Speaker, I understand very well the question the hon. member is raising about selling now and buying back later on a more expensive basis. The National Energy Board raised this sort of question in its recent report with respect to the Arctic gas pipeline questions. Those are the sorts of questions which members in the coming weeks during the debate in the House of Commons, will have an opportunity to examine. Undoubtedly, there will be considerations which will bear upon the final decision of the government.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): A final supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. The National Energy Board report speaks of the gas surplus "bubble" and points out quite properly that many of the gas companies want to sell their gas. If they cannot sell it in Canada they want to sell it in the United States in order to get sufficient financing for further exploration. That is understandable. I want to ask the minister if he or the government as a whole have given any consideration to the advisability of using Petro-Canada to buy gas in the ground, as is done in many countries and as has been done in Saskatchewan for many years where they bought gas in the ground in Saskatchewan and in Alberta as well. Such a procedure would enable the companies to get the necessary cash flow to continue exploration programs while at the same time retaining the cheap gas for the future needs of Canadians rather than swapping it now and having to pay very high prices to get Alaskan gas years later?

Mr. Gillespie: In general terms, Mr. Speaker, I have had discussions with senior officers of Petro-Canada about the gas situation in Alberta and what part of Petro-Canada might play with respect to the development of those resources. As the hon. member knows, those resources are subject to the controls and regulations of the Alberta government. I think one of the ways of alleviating the situation with the gas producers who have found gas, as the hon. member pointed out, largely as a result of the incentives which the Alberta government and this government have provided through higher prices—something which he has resisted—might be the pro-rationing by the Alberta government.

* * *

[Translation]

INDUSTRY

POSSIBILITY OF RESTRICTING SHOE IMPORTS TO PREVENT UNEMPLOYMENT IN QUEBEC

Mr. Léonel Beaudoin (Richmond): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce. Could he indicate whether he has replied to a letter from the Quebec Industry and Commerce Minister Rodrigue Tremblay in connection with the urgent need of restricting footwear imports in Canada to preserve some 10,000 jobs involved in Quebec alone?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): Mr. Speaker, I have received several representations to that effect including those from my Quebec counterpart. This week, the Anti-dumping Tribunal should report to the Minister of Finance and at the beginning of next week we hope to table the report concerning the steps to be taken to assist this industry experiencing some difficulties at the present time.

Mr. Beaudoin: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask a supplementary question. Since the House is to adjourn tomorrow—a motion to this effect appears on the order paper—will the minister be in a position to give us tomorrow some news to reassure the workers in that industry?

Mr. Chrétien: Mr. Speaker, I would very much like to be able to do it tomorrow, but I do not believe I shall have received the report by then. However, I shall act as quickly as possible, as I already indicated to the hon. member.

* * *

[English]

GRAIN

WHEAT—POSSIBILITY OF INCREASING QUOTA FOR 1976 CROP YEAR

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, I ask this question with becoming appreciation of the fact that the Prime Minister said we slept together, which apparently indicates that having taken me for a ride I was to be denied any further interruptions. I want to assure him that he is entirely wrong. We did not even follow the Scottish custom of bundling together. I can assure you, Mr. Speaker, no bolster was needed between us.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Diefenbaker: In that spirit may I ask the amiable Minister of Transport a question. A number of prairie farmers have been in touch with me because they have found themselves unable, because of restrictive quotas, to dispose of their 1976 crop. As there remain only 16 days in which they can sell their wheat before last year's production will come under the 1977 quota, will the minister approach the Wheat Board about increasing the quota so that farmers who have a great deal of wheat on hand today may dispose of a portion, if not all of it, in the current crop year?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I have discussed this matter several times recently with the Canadian Wheat Board. They are opening the appropriate quotas to bring in all the kinds of grain required. Last year the prairie provinces produced an all-time record volume of grain. The result is that with the current program of selling, even though it is the highest in history except for the two superb years, 1971 and 1972, there is a small increase in the supply of wheat on hand at the end of this crop year. It is very encouraging for farmers to note the forward selling program by the Canadian Wheat Board, a very successful Canadian marketing agency, assures that very brisk movement of grain will continue. There will be space in the elevators so that farmers can deliver straight from their combines. This was not possible under previous systems.

Mr. Diefenbaker: Mr. Speaker, I would point out to the minister that we have an accumulation of wheat. It is piling up at a tremendous rate. After going to Europe and personally finding out the situation there, in the last few days Premier Lougheed has contended that we are losing our markets because of the failure of this government to act.

An hon. Member: He was wrong.

[Mr. Beaudoin.]

Mr. Diefenbaker: In view of the fact that the Minister without Portfolio (Mr. Horner) is being regarded as the representative of the western farmer, would the minister consult with him and get his support for what he has already spoken his support for?

Mr. Lang: Mr. Speaker, I think it is important in this House to meet the suggestions of Premier Lougheed which are completely unfounded criticisms of the Canadian Wheat Board and its operation. As a matter of very serious fact his interference and intervention in marketing has done more real harm and his criticism of the Canadian Wheat Board is absolute nonsense at a time when our sales have increased our share of world markets and sales ahead have increased it even more.

* * *

● (1440)

ROYAL CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICE

REQUEST FOR REPORT ON INVESTIGATION IN NOVA SCOTIA

Mr. Elmer M. MacKay (Central Nova): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Solicitor General. An extensive RCMP investigation has been proceeding in Halifax and other parts of Nova Scotia for some time. I ask the Solicitor General, further to our earlier brief conversations, what progress is being made pursuant to the raids by the force in various premises in Halifax and other parts of Nova Scotia, including the premises of a Halifax firm, Automatic Amusement Co. Ltd. I realize the minister has been busy in cabinet this morning; perhaps he could give the House some information, since my information is that this investigation may extend to the highest echelons of the Nova Scotia government.

Hon. Francis Fox (Solicitor General): Mr. Speaker, I thank the hon. member for giving notice this morning of his intention to raise his question in the House this afternoon. It has been the practice of previous Solicitors General and my practice not to say if any specific individual in the country is being investigated unless that investigation has become common knowledge, and I see no reason to depart from that rule which is designed to protect peoples' civil rights. At any given time the force is carrying out a number of investigations into the activities of individuals in provinces where the force has policing responsibility, but I would be adversely affecting peoples' civil rights if I were to say, "Yes, Mr. so and so is being investigated, or he is not." I hope the hon. gentleman will therefore accept my answer on those grounds.

Mr. MacKay: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. I thank the minister for his answer. Perhaps the minister will assure the House that he will check to make sure that in this case the RCMP are, as I assume, receiving maximum co-operation from the Nova Scotia attorney general's department, that wiretaps used in this investigation has been obtained under proper legal procedures and that this investigation, significant as it is, is being carried out entirely in accordance with the law. Can the minister give me that assurance?

Mr. Fox: Mr. Speaker, I have not received any indication to suggest there has been anything but full co-operation between the RCMP and the office of the attorney general of the province of Nova Scotia. Of course, any electronic listening carried out in Nova Scotia would have taken place in accordance with the general practices and procedures of the force, in conformity with the requirements of the law, particularly the Protection of Privacy Act. The force would only have done this after obtaining the authority of the appropriate court.

* * *

SOCIAL SERVICES

REQUEST FOR REPORT ON MEETING QUEBEC'S OBJECTIONS TO PROPOSED LEGISLATION

Mr. Lincoln M. Alexander (Hamilton West): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of National Health and Welfare. Will we have uniformity and equality of service under the new social services act? The minister may recall that I asked him to look at the position of Quebec, the province which adamantly opposes the bill. The minister said he would look into the matter. Has he had further conversations with his provincial counterpart and can he say what progress has been made to meeting the objections of the province of Quebec to this bill?

[Translation]

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, the province of Quebec seemed to object to the financing method provided in the legislation on social services. The Quebec Minister of Social Affairs told me that he would send me some suggestions or propositions in this respect. However, I did not get them yet.

* * *

BILINGUALISM

PRESENTATION OF ANNUAL REPORTS OF CROWN CORPORATIONS ON IMPLEMENTATION OF LANGUAGE POLICY

Mr. Serge Joyal (Maisonneuve-Rosemont): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the President of the Treasury Board, my question is for the right hon. Prime Minister.

Considering that on July 13, 1976, the President of the Treasury Board announced that from then on he would require Crown corporations to submit annual reports on the development of their linguistic policy and program, and considering also that he said that the government must be able to assess the progress made by those corporations and that the establishment of a control mechanism would be necessary, can the right hon. Prime Minister inform the House whether today, a year later, the Crown corporation will table the reports required by the Treasury Board last year, and if not, what steps does the government intend to take to make sure that Crown corporations are taking all the necessary measures to guarantee that the equality defined in the Official Languages Act will be rigourously respected?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, to my mind, the hon. member is perfectly right in being concerned about the reply to that question. If he refers to Hansard, some two weeks ago, he will find that I said, in reply to the hon. member for Fundy-Royal, who put a similar question to me about the status of women in Crown corporations, that I too was concerned about what was being done about the instructions of the government in the field of official languages, and that I indicated that I would ask my officials to get in touch with the responsible minister to make sure that the corporations concerned did in fact hand in the report requested by the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce, the then President of the Treasury Board. I must recognize, with some shame, that those reports have not been received, in any event, not in any large numbers, but I did ask my officials, after having given that reply to the hon. member for Fundy-Royal, to follow-up my answer and take action concerning the subject of the question just put to me by the hon. member for Maisonneuve-Rosemont.

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Because of some delay in translation I did not give the hon. member for Hamilton West the opportunity to ask a supplementary question. I now recognize the hon. member.

* * *

SOCIAL SERVICES

CONSULTATION WITH PROVINCES ON PROPOSED LEGISLATION

Mr. Lincoln M. Alexander (Hamilton West): Mr. Speaker, I was a little slow; usually I am very fast.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Alexander: May I direct a supplementary question to the Minister of National Health and Welfare. My preliminary investigations, as a result of correspondence with provinces involved with this bill, show me that they are concerned because they do not know what the regulations will say and they fear inflexibility. Will the minister assure this House that he will consult with the provinces, in order that they may have input into the substantive part of the regulations to do with the social services act?

[Translation]

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, the bill itself has been the subject of long consultations. Indeed, the provinces and the federal government studied six different projects before agreeing on the one that was tabled in the House in June. That bill was tabled precisely to allow my officials to discuss more freely with the provinces the suggested regulations that will be promulgated under that bill, once it has been passed by Parliament. Consultations will be held during the summer with the provinces concerning those regulations.

* * *

[English]

GRAIN

TWO-PRICE WHEAT POLICY—POSSIBILITY OF REVIEW AND RISE IN MINIMUM PRICE

Mr. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Transport in his capacity as minister responsible for the Canadian Wheat Board. I would think, after what he said about Premier Lougheed in response to the question of the right hon. member for Prince Albert, that he would say what specific sales opportunities were lost by reason of the premiers' visit to Europe; otherwise, one must assume his statement was nothing more than rhetorical fluff. My question arises from the government's two-price wheat policy. Since the Canadian farm input index has risen between 30 per cent and 35 per cent since the policy was introduced, and since legislation provides for the minister to make an annual review and to recommend increases in the minimum price to reflect increases in the cost of production, I ask if such a review has taken place, and does the minister contemplate raising the minimum price under the two-price wheat policy?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, we have had detailed discussions with the Canadian Federation of Agriculture and others about the price level of two-price wheat and are now considering what action to take in the light of their comments and suggestions. The consultation with producers of course follows the spirit of the legislation to which the hon. member referred. As to the hon. member's opening remarks, it is a matter of very delicate judgment as to whether relationships built up over the years between the Canadian Wheat Board and its customers have been impaired. I am fairly satisfied that the Canadian Wheat Board, by its strenuous and effective efforts, will put right the harm done, but I resist very much any public suggestions by the premier that he will begin to interfere with the manner in which the Canadian Wheat Board is marketing our wheat. I should think hon. members opposite would resist that kind of interference.

Mr. Mazankowski: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. The minister has again refused to give specific examples; therefore we can only conclude his statements are rhetorical. Could the minister tell the House whether, in the light of the review process, which is being undertaken in connection with the two-price wheat policy any consideration will be given to making this adjustment retroactive and, if so, for what period?

● (1450)

Mr. Lang: That is obviously part of the consideration also.

[Mr. Lalonde.]

NORTHERN AFFAIRS

ENFORCEMENT OF MINE SAFETY REGULATIONS IN NORTHWEST TERRITORIES—REQUEST FOR REPORT ON CONSULTATION WITH MINISTER OF LABOUR

Mr. Wally Firth (Northwest Territories): Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In the absence of the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development I should like to direct my question to the Minister of Labour. It has to do with the appointment of Territorial mining inspectors. Two weeks ago, I asked the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development to check into the matter of mine safety in the Northwest Territories. I have learned, as I stated then, from the office of the Minister of Labour, that this matter does not come within the jurisdiction of that department. The Commissioner of the Northwest Territories has made repeated requests for authority to enforce the Territorial Mining ordinance and the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development told me last week he would consult with the Minister of Labour about this matter. I should like to know whether such consultation has taken place and how the government intends to act in this regard. When can we expect a reply?

Hon. John C. Munro (Minister of Labour): Soon, I hope. I believe that as a result of the questions the hon. member has asked officials of the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development and of my own department have been in discussion. But I understand this particular matter does not fall within my jurisdiction. I shall endeavour to get a report as soon as possible and get in touch with the hon. member.

* * *

FISHERIES

DATE OF ANNOUNCEMENT OF POLICY ON RESEARCH ON CONTINENTAL SHELF SPECIES, FLEET DEVELOPMENT AND CO-OPERATIVE ARRANGEMENTS

Mr. Lloyd R. Crouse (South Shore): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Fisheries but in his absence I would direct it to the Prime Minister who showed an interest in our fisheries problems in 1974 when he was in Nova Scotia during an election campaign.

In view of the uncertainty which exists within the Canadian fishing industry among fishermen and processors ever since the unilateral announcement on January 1, 1977 of a 200-mile limit with regard to fish stocks and their location both laterally and vertically, would the Prime Minister tell us when we may expect an announcement that more research is contemplated with respect to continental shelf species—a project which could utilize some of our unemployed scientists—plus an announcement of government policy on fleet development strategy, which could activate our unemployed shipbuilders and shipyards as well as an announcement of government policy on foreign co-operative fishing arrangements? The present situation appears to be troubling processor and fishermen in Atlantic Canada.

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): I take the question to be a series of interesting representations by the hon. member. I will transmit them to the Minister of Fisheries.

* * *

AIR CANADA

ALLEGATION PLANES UNSAFE AND EMPLOYEES REQUESTING TRANSFERS FROM QUEBEC—REQUEST FOR REPORT

Mr. Dan McKenzie (Winnipeg South Centre): On June 22, Mr. Speaker, I directed a question to the government House leader with regard to a motion I presented to the Standing Committee on Transportation and Communications. I should like to direct my question today to the Minister of Transport. I asked that the committee launch an immediate investigation into statements made by the Canadian Aviation Fellowship that 2600 Air Canada employees are requesting transfers out of the Province of Quebec. To date the government has taken no action with respect to my motion. Today, the Canadian Aviation Fellowship released a document of which the minister has a copy. It states that Air Canada planes are in a questionable state of airworthiness and that there have been complaints from pilots. Would the minister launch an immediate investigation or have the transport committee investigate the charges made by the CAF?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): As I indicated to the hon. member on an earlier occasion, this whole issue of the relationship between employees and the corporations has been adequately brought to the attention of Air Canada management. I have confidence in the way it is being handled. I would hope the hon. member is not attempting to associate himself with some rather exaggerated statements without some further attempt, even on his own, to check with management, a course which I am sure would reassure him with regard to the safety of the aircraft.

Mr. McKenzie: The reason the CAF is preparing these documents, and the reason I am raising the matter, is that we have received no satisfactory answer at all from the chief officer, Mr. Claude Taylor; he has taken no action whatsoever. Since our committee meeting he has taken no steps to meet with these people, hence the steps which they are taking. So the minister will have to initiate some action himself and I would ask him to do so immediately.

Mr. Lang: The management of Air Canada has been very conscious of any problems which exist and is fully sensitive to their nature in the attempts made to deal with them. Obviously, there is some gross overstatement of the situation which they cannot meet. However, management is handling a situation which is not without its difficulties and sensitivities and recognizes there are people who feel themselves in a difficult situation. The hon. member is not helping the situation at all by his intervention and I may say I believe I know why he is raising the matter.

REGIONAL ECONOMIC EXPANSION

AGREEMENT WITH BRITISH COLUMBIA—PROVISION FOR KOOTENAYS

Mr. Bob Brisco (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Regional Economic Expansion. I draw to his attention the terms of the General Development Agreement with the Province of British Columbia signed on March 28, 1974 in which it is clearly stated that the main sectors identified in the agreement as warranting special attention are the northwest of British Columbia, the northeast and the Kootenays. In the light of the fact that the northwest and the northeast have now been singled out for special attention, what special status has been provided for the Kootenays? Are they to be ignored or will they be covered under a supplementary agreement?

[Translation]

Hon. Marcel Lessard (Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): Mr. Speaker, recently we did sign very important agreements with the government of British Columbia and, in most cases, these agreements cover the whole province, with the exception of the greater Vancouver and Victoria areas. Therefore, the area the hon. member has mentioned will of course benefit from all programs covered by these agreements and I am sure that the hon. member will be the first to recognize that all the decisions that have been taken during the last few weeks go in the direction of the representations made by all members of this House.

[English]

WATER SHORTAGE AT CASTLEGAR—POSSIBILITY OF ASSISTANCE

Mr. Bob Brisco (Kootenay West): In the light of the urgent situation of the city of Castlegar in terms of its critical and chronic water shortage, can the minister tell us whether this community will qualify for assistance under DREE in respect to this problem within the new agreement signed with British Columbia?

Hon. Marcel Lessard (Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): It is difficult to be specific at this point. Obviously, the city of Castlegar is one case among many other cases and I suppose that according to the subagreement which has been signed it might be possible for this municipality to get some assistance. But this will have to be weighed against other needs and the industrial potential of the city.

* * *

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS

MONCTON—MAKING SKELETON STAFF WORK OVERTIME RATHER THAN RECALL WORKERS LAID OFF

Mr. Leonard C. Jones (Moncton): Mr. Speaker, my question is addressed to the Minister of Transport. Is the minister aware that despite a prolonged shutdown of the CNR shops in Moncton this summer, some of the personnel who were kept on as so-called skeleton staff are being asked to work overtime rather than calling back men who were laid off? Is this what the CNR calls "adjustment of railway expenses"?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): I was not aware of this situation but I shall be glad to take the hon. member's representations to the CNR.

Mr. Jones: A supplementary with respect to the railway in Moncton. Will the minister be able shortly to answer my starred question No. 2,855?

* * *

CANADIAN COAST GUARD COLLEGE

DECK AND ENGINEERING GRADUATES—REQUEST FOR EXPLANATION OF DIFFERENTIATION IN CERTIFICATES

Mr. Robert Muir (Cape Breton-The Sydneys): Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I hesitate to take the time of the House to raise this grievance but it is one which has gone on for many months without corrective action being taken. Is the minister aware that deck graduates from the Canadian Coast Guard College are restricted to the fleet systems section of the Ministry of Transport due to the nature of the certification they receive while engineering graduates from the same college are given marine safety certificates and become eligible to serve ashore or afloat in any marine position in the Commonwealth? Would the minister not agree that this is a form of discrimination and would he investigate the matter with the object of rectifying this anomaly?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I will be glad to obtain an elaborate explanation for the hon. gentleman.

* * *

● (1500)

CONSUMER AFFAIRS

HIGHER FOOD COSTS IN THE NORTH—GOVERNMENT ACTION

Mr. John Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. In view of the fact that the most recent consumer price index shows an increase in food prices of more than 20 per cent for some items and an increase of over 15 per cent for fuel and utilities, and in view of the fact that this situation, while bad enough in southern Canada, is even worse in northern Canada where a monitoring committee established by the New Democratic Party has shown that a basket of essential food items cost 40 per cent more north of 60 than in Ottawa and energy costs are 20 per cent higher, can the minister tell this House what steps his government is prepared to take to ensure that people living north of 60 are not penalized by paying as much as 40 per cent more for the necessities of life than people living in the southern part of the country?

[Mr. Jones.]

Hon. A. C. Abbott (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I cannot comment on the specific statistical breakdown which the hon. member has supplied, except to say that it is recognized by myself and other members of the government that people in the north are subjected to higher prices for many goods in those areas. I cannot offer at the moment any precise solution to this problem. I hope to visit the northern parts of the provinces as well as other areas, and I expect to hear directly about this; at the same time I cannot accept at face value the statistical percentage breakdowns of the hon. member.

* * *

ANTI-INFLATION PROGRAM

SUGGESTED LIFTING OF WAGE CONTROLS FOR NORTHERN WORKERS

Mr. John Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a supplementary question to the Prime Minister. In view of the answer just given by the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs that the members of the government are aware of the disparity in prices between northern and southern Canada, is the Prime Minister prepared to consider the lifting of the Anti-Inflation Board controls on the wages of workers who live and have to earn their living in the northern parts of this country, since they have to pay 40 per cent more for food and the necessities of life? Is the Prime Minister prepared to drop the AIB program in the Northwest Territories immediately?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I am sure the hon. member is not implying that the people of the north are not interested, as he is, in combatting inflation.

* * *

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

WEEKLY STATEMENT

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, before we proceed I wonder whether I might ask the government House leader what is proposed by way of business later today and tomorrow, and for however long we may be here?

Mr. MacEachen: Mr. Speaker, we will continue the debate on the bill in the name of the Minister of Justice, Bill C-51. Following that we will deal with Bill C-27, Bill C-17 and Bill C-23.

Mr. Epp: What are we going to do tomorrow?

Mr. MacEachen: The first three bills are in immediate play. As hon. members will have noticed, there is a notice of motion in my name on the order paper which proposes the adjournment of the House tomorrow, but that will only be called if in the meantime we have reached some understandings, which have not yet been reached. We are continuing our consultations.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[English]

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the following questions will be answered today: 1,648, 2,349, 2,748 and 2,800.

[Text]

AGRICULTURAL RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT

Question No. 1,648—Mr. Herbert:

As a percentage of total government spending, how much has been allocated in each of the past ten years for agricultural research and development?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretay to President of the Privy Council): In so far as Agriculture Canada is concerned: 1967-68, $39,695,260; 1968-69, $45,308,993; 1969-70, $45,870,584; 1970-71, $47,753,268; 1971-72, $50,726,390; 1972-73, $54,310,436; 1973-74, $62,959,460; 1974-75, $74,334,487; 1975-76, $95,633,279; 1976-77, $95,747,501.

In so far as National Research Council is concerned: expenditures in Agricultural and Food Research and Development should be reflected in so far as they are available over the past ten years in Statistics Canada reports of scientific expenditures. Specific figures for grants to universities were available and provided for the years 1968-1977 in response to parliamentary questions Nos. 1,878 of October 13, 1971; 882 of February 9, 1973; 2,056 of March 8, 1977.

Order Paper Questions

CANCER OF THE BLADDER

Question No. 2,349—Mr. Rynard:

1. For each year 1965 to 1976, by province, what was the death rate for cancer of the bladder?

2. For the same years, what was the percentage of cancer of the bladder in (a) males (b) females and what percentage were cigarette smokers?

3. For the same years, what was the percentage of cancer of the bladder in diabetics and what percentage were cigarette smokers?

4. Were 10 cases of bladder cancer in heavy saccharin users reported to the Health Protection Branch of the Department of National Health and Welfare and, if so, how many (a) used saccharin for (i) 5 years (ii) 10 years (iii) 15 years (iv) 20 years (v) 25 years or more (b) were (i) on diabetic drugs (ii) on insulin (iii) on a special diet (iv) on alcohol abstainers (v) heavy users of alcohol (vi) moderate users of alcohol?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by Statistics Canada and the Department of National Health and Welfare as follows: 1. The death rate for cancer of the bladder for the years 1965 to 1974 is provided on the following lists.

2. The percentage of cancer of the bladder in males and females for the years 1965 to 1974* is provided on the following lists. It is not possible to distinguish between cancer deaths of cigarette smokers and non-smokers.

3. Data unavailable.

4. The Health Protection Branch has received documentation on a number of cases of bladder cancer in persons consuming artificial sweeteners. Of these, six were known to have used saccharin, although in three cases, cyclamates also were consumed. Precise information on the duration and degree of exposure to saccharin for these individuals is not available. They were reported, however, to be heavy users of the substance. No information is available on concurrent exposure to drugs, alcohol or tobacco nor are their dietary histories known.

* Data is not available for 1975 and 1976.

Mortality Rates for Bladder Cancer by Province and Sex, Canada, 1965-1974
(per 100,000 population)

	Canada	Newfoundland	Prince Edward Island	Nova Scotia	New Brunswick	Quebec	Ontario	Manitoba	Saskatchewan	Alberta	British Columbia	Yukon	North West Territories
1965 T	3.9	1.8	7.4	3.0	3.5	3.4	4.5	3.5	4.5	2.9	4.5	6.7	—
M	5.3	2.4	12.7	4.1	3.8	4.7	6.0	6.0	6.7	4.6	5.9	—
F	2.4	1.2	1.9	1.9	3.2	2.1	3.0	1.1	2.2	1.1	3.1	14.9	—
1966 T	4.1	2.0	5.5	4.2	2.8	3.4	4.9	4.0	3.2	3.8	5.4	—	—
M	6.2	3.2	9.1	5.5	3.9	5.2	7.0	6.6	5.3	5.8	8.7	—	—
F	2.1	0.8	1.9	2.9	1.6	1.6	2.8	1.5	1.1	1.8	2.1	—	—
1967 T	3.8	3.8	5.5	4.5	4.2	3.2	4.4	3.6	2.9	3.0	4.0	—	—
M	5.4	6.3	10.9	6.6	8.3	4.5	5.8	5.6	5.1	4.3	5.4	—	—
F	2.2	1.2	—	2.4	—	1.9	2.9	1.7	0.6	1.6	2.6	—	—
1968 T	3.8	2.2	3.6	4.5	3.8	3.2	4.4	4.4	3.9	2.6	3.8	—	—
M	5.5	2.7	5.4	6.0	6.7	4.6	6.3	7.0	6.5	3.9	5.3	—	—
F	2.0	1.6	1.8	2.9	1.0	1.8	2.5	1.9	1.1	1.3	2.3	—	—
1969 T	4.0	2.9	5.5	4.3	5.1	3.6	4.3	4.3	3.1	3.3	4.8	6.7	—
M	6.0	5.3	9.0	5.5	7.0	5.2	6.5	7.1	5.5	5.0	7.5	—	—
F	2.0	0.4	1.8	3.2	3.2	2.0	2.1	1.4	0.6	1.6	2.2	14.5	—
1970 T	4.0	1.7	4.5	3.8	3.8	4.1	4.4	5.0	4.8	1.9	3.7	6.3	—
M	5.8	2.3	5.4	6.3	5.4	6.4	6.2	6.5	7.5	3.0	4.8	11.6	—
F	2.2	1.2	3.7	1.3	2.2	1.9	2.6	3.5	1.9	0.8	2.7	—	—
1971 T	4.2	2.5	7.2	4.9	3.3	4.2	4.3	5.0	5.0	3.4	4.2	—	—
M	6.2	4.9	8.9	6.6	5.0	6.2	6.4	6.9	8.1	5.3	5.8	—	—
F	2.2	—	5.4	3.3	1.6	2.3	2.4	3.0	1.8	1.4	2.5	—	—

	Canada	Newfoundland	Prince Edward Island	Nova Scotia	New Brunswick	Quebec	Ontario	Manitoba	Saskatchewan	Alberta	British Columbia	Yukon	North West Territories
1972 T	4.0	3.0	5.3	5.0	2.5	3.7	4.1	4.7	5.7	3.1	4.3	5.3	—
M	5.9	4.4	7.0	6.5	3.7	5.8	6.1	6.9	9.5	4.6	5.4	9.8	—
F	2.1	1.5	3.6	3.5	1.3	1.5	2.2	2.6	1.8	1.5	3.2	—	—
1973 T	4.0	3.3	3.5	3.7	4.6	4.0	4.1	5.1	5.2	2.7	4.0	—	—
M	5.9	5.4	5.2	5.7	7.0	5.9	5.6	7.4	8.7	4.6	6.1	—	—
F	2.1	1.1	1.7	1.7	2.2	2.1	2.6	2.8	1.6	0.8	1.8	—	—
1974 T	4.0	3.5	3.4	4.3	3.6	4.1	4.2	4.4	4.3	3.2	3.5	—	2.7
M	5.6	4.7	5.1	6.4	5.1	6.1	5.8	5.5	5.9	4.3	5.1	—	5.1
F	2.4	2.3	1.7	2.2	2.1	2.2	2.6	3.2	2.7	2.1	1.9	—	—

Deaths from Bladder Cancer as a Percentage of All Cancer Deaths By Province and Sex, Canada 1965-1974

	Canada	Newfoundland	Prince Edward Island	Nova Scotia	New Brunswick	Quebec	Ontario	Manitoba	Saskatchewan	Alberta	British Columbia	Yukon	North West Territories
1965 T	2.9	1.8	5.3	2.0	3.0	2.6	3.3	2.4	3.5	2.5	3.0	5.9	—
M	3.7	1.9	8.0	2.6	2.8	3.4	4.1	3.7	4.3	3.5	3.5	—	—
F	2.0	1.5	1.6	1.3	3.1	1.7	2.3	0.8	2.1	1.1	2.3	20.0	—
1966 T	3.1	2.0	3.3	2.8	2.2	2.6	3.6	2.7	2.5	3.3	3.6	—	—
M	4.1	2.8	5.1	3.5	2.9	3.6	4.6	3.8	3.4	4.4	5.1	—	—
F	1.8	0.9	1.2	2.1	1.3	1.4	2.3	1.1	1.0	1.8	1.6	—	—
1967 T	2.8	3.7	3.5	2.9	3.2	2.4	3.1	2.4	2.2	2.6	2.6	—	—
M	3.5	5.4	7.0	4.0	6.1	3.1	3.8	3.2	3.4	3.3	3.1	—	—
F	1.8	1.4	—	1.7	—	1.6	2.3	1.3	0.6	1.6	2.0	—	—
1968 T	2.7	2.0	2.8	3.0	2.8	2.4	3.2	2.8	2.8	2.2	2.6	—	—
M	3.6	2.2	4.0	4.0	4.7	3.1	4.1	3.7	4.3	2.9	3.1	—	—
F	1.6	1.7	1.5	2.0	0.7	1.5	2.0	1.5	0.9	1.2	1.8	-	—
1969 T	2.9	2.9	3.7	2.7	3.7	2.6	3.0	2.7	2.3	3.0	3.1	12.5	—
M	3.9	4.7	5.6	3.2	4.6	3.5	4.1	4.0	3.6	3.9	4.1	—	—
F	1.6	0.5	1.3	2.1	2.5	1.6	1.7	1.0	0.6	1.7	1.6	33.3	—
1970 T	2.8	1.6	3.0	2.2	2.8	2.9	3.1	3.1	3.3	1.6	2.4	5.9	—
M	3.7	1.7	3.1	3.3	3.6	4.1	3.9	3.7	4.4	2.3	2.8	7.7	—
F	1.7	1.3	2.8	0.9	1.8	1.5	2.1	2.5	1.6	0.8	2.0	—	—
1971 T	2.9	2.2	4.5	3.1	2.3	2.9	3.1	3.1	3.4	2.9	2.7	—	—
M	3.9	3.7	5.3	3.9	3.1	3.8	4.0	3.6	4.5	3.8	3.4	—	—
F	1.8	—	3.5	2.3	1.3	1.7	1.9	2.3	1.5	1.4	1.8	—	—
1972 T	2.7	2.5	3.5	3.0	1.8	2.5	2.8	2.8	3.7	2.5	2.8	4.8	—
M	3.6	3.2	4.0	3.5	2.5	3.5	3.8	3.7	5.3	3.3	3.2	6.7	—
F	1.6	1.6	2.9	2.3	1.0	1.2	1.6	1.8	1.4	1.4	2.4	—	—
1973 T	2.7	2.8	2.1	2.2	3.2	2.6	2.7	3.1	3.0	2.3	2.6	—	—
M	3.5	4.1	2.6	3.1	4.8	3.5	3.4	3.9	4.4	3.2	3.5	—	—
F	1.6	1.1	1.3	1.1	1.5	1.6	1.9	1.9	1.1	0.9	1.3	—	—
1974 T	2.7	3.0	1.9	2.5	2.5	2.7	2.8	2.6	2.7	2.6	2.3	—	3.8
M	3.4	3.5	2.6	3.3	3.1	3.6	3.5	2.9	3.3	3.0	3.0	—	5.6
F	1.7	2.2	1.1	1.5	1.7	1.6	1.9	2.2	1.9	2.1	1.4	—	—

HALL REPORT RECOMMENDATIONS

Question No. 2,748—Mr. McKenzie:

1. Since March 14, 1977, has the Minister of Labour met with officials of the railway companies and unions in regard to the Hall Report recommendations and, if so, what position did the Minister take in such discussions?

2. Will the Minister urge the railway companies and unions to accept the recommendations?

3. Is the government taking any initiatives on behalf of retired railway employees in order to find more immediate solutions to their problems and, if so, what are they?

4. Is the Minister planning to introduce changes to the definition of "employee" in the Canada Labour Code in order to compel railway unions to bargain for pension benefits of retired employees?

5. Will the Minister urge the railway companies and the CRLA to accept greater representation of retired employees in the collective bargaining process and, if this cannot be achieved on a voluntary basis, would the Minister consider introducing legislation requiring such representation?

6. Has the Minister had any indication from railway companies as to whether or not they will accept the recommendation of the Hall Report that the trusteeship of both CNR and CPR pension plans be placed in the hands of an independent trust company?

7. If the railway companies do not voluntarily turn the pension plans over to an independent trust company, will the Minister introduce legislation to insure that the trusteeship of the plans conform with desired public policy and are brought in line with the expectations of National Revenue regulations and the Pension Benefit Standards Act?

8. Will the Minister impress upon his colleagues the urgent need to establish a body to undertake a complete and independent review of the entire pension industry and the success of pension plans in meeting retirement needs?

[Mr. Goodale.]

Hon. John C. Munro (Minister of Labour): 1. The parties are currently evaluating their bargaining priorities in the light of the Hall Report and are expected to meet shortly to explore needed pension improvements. As the unions and management are themselves in the process of establishing their own approaches and needs, I have not felt it would be appropriate or helpful to insert a third party into these proceedings.

2. At this stage, I believe that the appropriate course is to acquaint myself with the reactions of the parties to the Hall recommendations as they explore them in the light of their own priorities. The parties are in the best position to examine the options and determine their own needs.

3. While no government initiatives are planned with specific reference to retired railway employees, the government has established an Interdepartmental Committee under the joint membership of the Departments of Finance and Health and Welfare to examine all aspects of the pension issue.

4. Before compelling unions to bargain on the pension or any other issue, I would be guided by the views and experiences of interested groups to determine the effect of such changes on the collective bargaining process. As an initial step, voluntary approaches of the type recommended by Dr. Hall would seem to deserve the attention of the parties.

5. Dr. Hall's recommendations concerning mechanisms to better involve retired employees in the collective bargaining process are being considered by the parties. As this matter is being carefully reviewed by the parties at the present time, it is premature to consider legislative mechanisms.

6. This matter is under consideration by the parties.

7. This question is hypothetical and premature as there is no indication that the railways have rejected this recommendation.

8. This matter is being dealt with by the Interdepartmental Pension Policy Review Committee referred to in question 3.

DEPARTMENT OF LABOUR—SAULT STE. MARIE

Question No. 2,800—Mr. Symes:

What was the total amount spent in Sault Ste. Marie from October 1972 to date by the Department of Labour?

Hon. John C. Munro (Minister of Labour): No funds spent in Sault Ste. Marie from October, 1972 to date.

[English]

Mr. Cossitt: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order concerning questions placed on the order paper on the first day of this session having to do with the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and its international service. These questions were on the order paper during the last session of the thirtieth parliament for approximately six months, and have gone almost a year and a half unanswered. I cannot see why the answers to these questions have not been made available, since the questions are very straightforward: they ask for very straightforward information where a "yes" or "no" would handle almost half of them.

On top of that, the distressing fact to me is that three of the top officials named in these questions have been transferred since these questions appeared on the order paper, having been demoted to other positions with no explanation having been given the public. However, obviously the government has been taking it out on them for the mismanagement of the international service of the CBC due to pressures placed against it by the Department of External Affairs, evidence of which appears in these questions.

I cannot understand why the parliamentary secretary goes on day after day telling us how many hundreds of questions he has answered, instead of telling us why there are certain questions that he will not answer. Can he today tell me why the answers to these 10 to 12 questions concerning manipulation of the CBC and its international service by the Department of External Affairs, influencing what is broadcast to the Soviet Union and other countries behind the so-called iron curtain countries, are being suppressed by the government, and why certain men who tried to do their duty on behalf of Canada, in the interests of a free democratic way of life, were demoted because the government did not agree with them and told them they could not even mention Christmas and a number of other things because it was anti-Soviet? I think these questions should be answered. Can the parliamentary secretary now rise and tell the House whether we are going to get them before we adjourn tomorrow, on Monday or Tuesday or whenever it may be?

Mr. Goodale: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member has given the House a lot of gratuitous opinion, and once again has attempted to impute motives to me, to the Department of External Affairs and to the government generally in the process of answering questions which are on the order paper. I repeat today the assurance that I have given him and other members on other occasions in the House with respect to questions appearing on the order paper—certainly all the ones that are there at the moment—and that is that we do intend to provide answers to them as quickly as possible. It is our hope that those answers will be available before this session adjourns.

Mr. Beatty: Mr. Speaker, I did not intend to rise at this point until the parliamentary secretary indicated that he wanted to assure members of the House that questions on the order paper would be answered as quickly as possible. May I bring to his attention question No. 632, which is dated October 18 but which was actually placed on the order paper in the last session of parliament. It asks the government whether the then secretary of state made a trip between Ottawa, London, and Stratford on July 9, 1976. In view of the fact that that secretary of state has come and gone and we already have another Secretary of State, and since this event took place over a year ago, can the parliamentary secretary tell me why it has taken so long to get a straightfoward answer to a very simple question, and when may I expect an answer?

Mr. Goodale: Mr. Speaker, I cannot be precise at this moment with respect to the particular question the hon. member has mentioned to me. As I recall it, I believe this may be the first time he has mentioned that question in the House. I will try and provide an analysis for him which will satisfy his curiosity respecting the timing involved in this question. But again let me say, for the benefit of all hon. members, that it is my intention to try to provide answers to all questions on the order paper before the end of this session.

Mr. Speaker: Shall the remaining questions be allowed to stand?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

CRIMINAL LAW AMENDMENT ACT, 1977

AMENDMENTS TO CRIMINAL CODE

The House resumed, from Wednesday, July 13, consideration of Bill C-51, to amend the Criminal Code, the Customs Tariff, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act and the Prisons and Reformatories Act, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs.

● (1510)

Mr. F. Oberle (Prince George-Peace River): Mr. Speaker, when I called it six o'clock last night I had begun to tell the House of my experience in committee regarding this particular bill which was discussed at length and in great detail. I told my colleagues of the frustrations I suffered, as a layman, being exposed to the intricacies of committee and the House of Commons. I also mentioned my shock and dismay at the interventions by groups of individuals throughout the country who came before the committee. These groups consisted of people from law societies, civil liberties associations and persons who indulged in hunting and trap shooting. All these people felt their individual rights and freedoms were being threatened.

When closure was imposed in committee it was decided that no further witnesses should be heard on this bill. It was my understanding that there were 24 applications from people who wished to have their views and concerns considered by this committee. As I said last night, I cannot understand the indecent haste which has been attached to these measures. The measures are not designed to address themselves to the critical need which exists in our society today—a need to confront organized crime. The minister hangs his hat on gun control and electronic surveillance. These measures are designed to combat organized crime which is now rampant in our country, according to the minister. We do not see any meaningful tool or purpose in Bill C-51 which addresses itself to this critical situation.

We hear much about freedom of information these days. Some of my colleagues on this side of the House, and particularly the hon. member for Peace River (Mr. Baldwin), have almost exclusively concerned themselves for the last two or three years with the matter of freedom of information and openness by the government. Yet the government seems to be going the other way and feels that freedom of information will be achieved by wiretapping persons' phones. We have to ask ourselves for whom is this freedom of information laid before us in the green paper. Will the Liberal government have access to all information exchanged in this country?

As they retract into their shells and tighten up the leaks which trickle away from the ivory towers this government is operating out of these days, they want everyone else in our society to surrender some of the personal freedoms they have enjoyed. These are to be surrendered to the guardians whom they espouse to be guardians of civil rights and liberties which are to be turned over for the good of the country.

The House of Commons is representative of the people themselves. We are supposed to deal in blind trust. We are supposed to be blindly trusting of this government in their transactions, be they in business or in public spirit. All one needs to do to become a senior official of the government today is to place his holdings in blind trust. But no one ever defines what the phrase "blind trust" means. The government wants us to blindly trust them because they are all good, divine, the seraphs of this world, the angels with seven wings. They can do no evil; they can do no wrong. Recently we have learned that there are, even in that supreme group on the other side, some rotten apples.

I wonder whether the Minister of Justice (Mr. Basford) has looked seriously at all the implications of this bill before us, particularly in the area of electronic eavesdropping. As the minister has indicated, there was no law in existence before 1973 to protect us against a police officer entering our homes and placing bugs on our telephones. The police officer was prohibited from searching our homes or removing any files or property; but he could enter our residences and put electronic devices in place in order to monitor conversations. There was no law against that practice in 1973 or 1974, and thus we addressed ourselves to it. Yet we are about to pass a law now making it legal. I wonder if the minister has really thought that out. If it was legal to do such a thing at that time, can you imagine some police officer abusing his power and breaking into 24 Sussex Drive when guests are staying there who are student radicals and campus revolutionaries?

Can you imagine the telephone at 24 Sussex Drive being bugged and the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) receiving a telephone call from Bill Teron, who is the president of Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, and the following conversation occurring, "Mr. Prime Minister, I think you should have a swimming pool. As you know, my public companies are in blind trust and I cannot talk about them. Some of my cement trucks will be running around the city and they would not mind dropping off a few loads there. I do not want you to know where the cement or the money is coming from. What do you think?" Imagine Keith Davey telephoning the Prime Minister and saying, "What do you think about calling an election? As you are aware, I am a shareholder of a little company that grows flowers. Since you wear a flower in the House of Commons, how about a contract?"

We are all human. The Prime Minister is human, Keith Davey is human, Bill Teron is human, and so is any police officer. Just because a police officer has yellow stripes on his pants does not indicate he is different. He is a human being. This blind trust is going to be abused, because human nature applies equally to everyone. It applies equally to me, to my colleagues on this side of the House and to my friends on the other side of the House. I wonder whether the minister has taken all these things into consideration.

Let me tell you about some of the things said in committee. One day several representatives of the Law Society of Upper Canada appeared before the committee. These representatives were lawyers who established the terms of reference and the code of ethics for all benchers of the Upper Canada region, which is Ontario. They were telling us that most of the criminal lawyers who operate in the city of Toronto will no longer speak to their clients over the telephone. All too often, at great expense, a senior law counsel advises his client to meet him somewhere in the dark on a park bench. He must ask him to go to the additional expense of hiring a taxi in order to meet in a park, because he can no longer trust the telephone. This should concern all members. It concerns me and all Canadians that we are surrendering rights and privileges enshrined in the Bill of Rights and every other piece of law and human justice that we have ever conceived.

● (1520)

How far can we go in trusting this government with the rights and freedoms that we once enjoyed? Does anyone think that organized crime will worry about this wiretap law? Is anyone so naive as to think they will use the telephone when plotting their sinister schemes? Of course not. They have worked out codes. They have worked out their own delivery systems. They could not trust the mail 20 years ago, and now they cannot trust the telephone. They know how to react.

The innocent, unsuspecting, law-abiding citizen does not have the money or the technology to react to this law. His telephone will be tapped. As the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams) stated, he may want to call his doctor, who may be one of ten doctors in the clinic along with 30 nurses and five or six secretaries. One of them might be suspected of having committed a criminal act. The telephone conversations of everyone in the clinic will be tapped and be placed on the computer somewhere. Telephone companies are now producing new systems, having discovered that a person's voice is as clear an identification as his thumbprint or fingerprint. One person in 20 million can be identified over the telephone by closing the gap on the sound waves over the telephone system by computer. At this time we should be protecting ourselves, passing legislation against that kind of gadgetry which could abuse the rights of individuals. Instead, we are making all this information more accessible to the police.

The hon. member for Calgary North said there is no longer any need to do police work or operate a police academy; all you have to do is run the Bell Telephone system through the police station, have an army of people there to identify every individual who uses the telephone, and put their voices and comments in the computer. You need only push a button to get the conversation, and any judge will act accordingly. This is very frightening. Thousands of Canadians are writing to their members of parliament. Letters are pouring into our offices, as I am sure they are into the offices of the Minister of Justice and the Solicitor General (Mr. Fox). I have here two letters which I will read. They are short. I chose them for that reason. The first was sent to the chairman of the committee. I quote:

> Bill C-51 is developing within me, as a Canadian citizen, an inferiority complex due to the fact that our elected members of government fail to realize that such a bill is eroding away my freedom as a Canadian.
>
> I cannot help but ask that the complete firearms section of Bill C-51 be banished once and for all.

There are other such pieces of legislation. This kind of action is not restricted to the bills of the Minister of Justice. Other bills give this government powers beyond anything that any government in any free society has, particularly a government that works under a parliamentary system such as ours. Last week we dealt with Bill C-38. One of my constituents wrote to me as follows:

> I would like to express my grave concern regarding the proposed Bill C-38 amending the Fisheries Act. The terms of the bill are so sweeping, the definitions so broad, that anyone near or on any body of water could be deemed in violation of the act in some way. This coupled with the draconian penalties provided by the proposed amendments to the Criminal Code place very broad discretionary powers in the hands of enforcement agencies. There would appear to be little regard for the scale of damage or the cost-benefit relationships of any project that may impinge even marginally on waterways.

The search without warrant powers granted to inspectors under section 9 would seem to be an obvious infringement of basic civil liberties.

My constituent obviously does not know what has happened in the past few years—in this government's term of office. The just society, human liberties and human justice have become a myth. They are something we once knew. We expected our government to keep them in sacred trust for us. As the hon. member for Calgary North said yesterday, and as the right hon. member for Prince Albert (Mr. Diefenbaker) said, the "just society" is just for the Liberal government but not for anyone else. The hangers on are also part of the just society, the sick minds sitting on the other side of the House which have conceived and perpetrated this legislation on us.

There is no way this bill can pass this House. We cannot condone this kind of action going unchecked. We do not have to subject ourselves to this kind of intimidation. Incidentally, intimidation is one thing for which a judge can allow a wiretap to be placed on someone's telephone. I would like a wiretap placed on the telephone of the Minister of Justice, because he intimidated members on this side of the House when he appeared on the scene of an unfortunate incident.

Mr. Paproski: Ambulance chaser!

Mr. Oberle: The minister said that incident happened because of people on this side of the House. It would have been a source of comfort had the minister given some assurance that when this criminal was apprehended he would stay behind bars until we were sure be would not perpetrate the same kind of act again.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Order, please. I regret to interrupt the hon. member, but his allotted time has expired. He may continue only with unanimous consent. Does the hon. member have unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

Mr. John Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, I have listened to hon. members who have legal experience participate in this debate in a very legalistic matter. I have listened to all the legal arguments. I thought that the voice of a layman, a neophyte with regard to legal matters, would certainly be welcome. Some plain talk from the hon. member for Nickel Belt might throw some light on what has become a very fuzzy and complicated bill.

Mr. Oberle: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I do not want the hon. member for Nickel Belt (Mr. Rodriguez) deliberately to mislead the House and insult me by saying that I am one of the legal profession. I participated in this debate as a layman, and I am proud of it.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Order, please. I suggest to the hon. member that is not a point of order, but a point of debate.

Mr. Rodriguez: Mr. Speaker, the point of order is well taken. I did not intend to label anyone in this House as a lawyer. I thought I might put before the House some ideas with regard to this bill. I am caught on the horns of a dilemma with regard to Bill C-51. The bill includes gun control legislation, wiretap legislation and some parole provisions. I am trying to protect not only the particular concerns of my constituents but the concerns and the welfare of all Canadians, and I find myself in some difficulty because in principle I believe there should be some control and proper processing of those who intend to obtain firearms and to use them. I feel that the time has come in Canada to move in that direction.

● (1530)

Accompanying Bill C-51 are the wiretap provisions. I find myself in some quandary with respect to those provisions because, on the one hand, I recognize the need of my fellow Canadians for security which can be met by controlling the acquisition of firearms and, on the other hand, I am stuck with the problem of being asked to support some provisions in Bill C-51 to provide law enforcement agencies in the country with the power to wiretap. That is the dilemma in which I find myself as a member of parliament. I would like to raise some questions. I suppose the government felt this was a pretty cute way of putting things together in one bill, which might be called an omnibus bill, and in this way to get a bill which had certain provisions which appealed to the majority of members of parliament, but also some distasteful aspects of the legislation, passed by the House.

We also have a problem in terms of the Canadian people's perception of the security of the state. Most people who have written to me about Bill C-51 have written about the gun control section. Very few people have turned their attention to the wiretap provisions. I recognize the fact that probably those who were writing on the gun control provisions are a well organized group. It is a lobby operating with the aim of persuading and convincing members of parliament that they should not pass that section of Bill C-51. But those people forget about the other part of the bill, namely, the wiretap provisions.

[The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner).]

In discussions of this matter with my constituents and other people, the response I usually get is that, after all, they do not care if the police listen to their conversations, because they are not doing anything wrong. That sort of thinking pervades the minds of Canadians. They think that in fact we should give that right to law enforcement officers and agencies to ensure the maintenance of our security and freedom. I consider this to be a very serious step. What we on this side of the House have been trying to put across to the government is that when you extend wiretapping provisions, which is what this clause in the bill will do, when you extend occasions for wiretapping and you extend the notification period, it is an extremely important step.

At present, wiretapping is permitted for the smallest of crimes, such as even the smuggling of a pair of shorts across the border. It seems to me that wiretapping should not even be contemplated, and certainly such a decision should not be made at the snap of one's fingers, because wiretapping invades the privacy not only of the individual concerned but also of the person who is contacting him. Privacy is one of the rights to which Canadians are entitled, and that right should be protected. Much is made of the right to privacy between client and lawyer, patient and doctor, and confessor and sinner. That right is greatly respected.

However, there is also the right to privacy between citizens. They should have the right to hold private conversations. When we decide to broaden the wiretapping provisions, we decide to take an extremely serious step. I think that if I were to weigh the seriousness of widening the accessibility to wiretapping by law enforcement officers and agencies against the existence of crime, I would be prepared to protect the right to privacy and recognize that there is crime in the community and that we have to find a more effective method of dealing with it. So if I had to make that trade-off, I would say there should be no wiretapping at all, for anyone—private citizen, agency, or law enforcement officer.

The question that comes to my mind is whether accessibility to wiretapping makes a law enforcement agency more effective. Would the widening of this provision make that agency more efficient? I have grave doubts about it. I argue that all it does is to encourage laziness and slothfulness. To get an order permitting wiretapping is the easy way to go about it. We can keep a 24-hour tap on somebody's phone and listen to thousands and thousands of conversations—goodness knows for how long. Is it more efficient and productive to have three-man shifts listening in on a wiretap, or is it more efficient to infiltrate organized crime and obtain evidence in this more direct way? Will it not make a law enforcement agency more efficient to develop good detective techniques, thus encouraging excellence in detective work which is so essential in ensuring that crime is eliminated in a community?

The question that occurs to me, as well, is this: What has been the experience, in terms of the conviction rate, with the use of wiretaps? Can the minister tell the House whether, in countries which have permitted wiretapping, the conviction rate has been studied in terms of a cost-benefit analysis? Has this been a more effective means of bringing lawbreakers to heel? Has there been a higher conviction rate, and can the minister provide us with any experiences proving that?

I am prepared to listen. As the hon. member for New Westminister (Mr. Leggatt) has pointed out, we had Ramsey Clark, former attorney general of the U.S., before the committee. Mr. Clark pointed out that wiretapping is the most inefficient method of busting criminals. The minister argued that wiretapping would help us get at dons in the mafia. Surely the mafia does not use telephones to set up contracts. The technique is to go beyond the borders of countries where there is wiretapping. The mafia holds conferences where there is no wiretapping and where there are weak police forces. Is the minister prepared to tell me that where wiretapping is in effect the conviction rate is higher? Can he give me examples? If he can, I am certainly prepared to listen to his argument.

• (1540)

Citizens have the right to privacy. The statement made in many letters I have received with regard to the gun control part of Bill C-51 is that people have the right to bear firearms and that the gun control part of this bill is contrary to their rights. It seems to me that the right to privacy has been completely forgotten. The government seems to be playing on the fears of the Canadian people. It seems to imply that organized crime is taking over and that people ought to trade off their right to privacy so that the law enforcement forces can invade that privacy.

The hon. member for New Westminster has taken a strong position on the question of wiretapping. It has been pointed out that we do not need this, and that there are more effective ways of putting a stop to criminal activities. The hon. member's amendment suggests that if we are going to use wiretapping, it ought to be used in relation to very serious crimes which would be punishable on conviction by ten years' imprisonment or more. The hon. member tried to delineate that in his amendment.

I cannot impress enough upon hon. members the seriousness of extending wiretapping. The telephones of members of this House have been tapped. If this bill goes through as proposed by the government, members of parliament might never know about these things because three years down the line many of us will no longer be members of parliament. We might never find out that conversations between ourselves and our constituents which we thought were private were not private at all. I call on hon. members to consider these important matters, and perhaps the minister should answer some questions. Can he assure the House that wiretapping increases the rate of convictions? What is the rate in jurisdictions which have used wiretapping?

Can the minister show us that the use of wiretapping has made law enforcement agencies more effective? Is there a risk of taking away the privacy of individuals? Will wiretapping invade privacy? How does that stand up against the right to security within the state? Are there not more effective ways of providing security than by the invasion of privacy of individuals by law enforcement agencies? Those are important questions with which the minister ought to deal. He should not be trying to frighten us by saying that organized crime will take over tomorrow and that the mafia dons are all using telephones to put out contracts, and so forth. Even now, bookmakers are not using telephones.

Mr. Woolliams: Lawyers and doctors don't use them.

Mr. Rodriguez: I do not know what lawyers are using these days, but the lowly bookmaker uses runners. The only way to bust a bookmaking operation is through the use of undercover agents and through breaking codes. Would wiretapping provisions provide the means by which we can get at the laundering of money obtained illegally on the other side of the border? Would they help us deal with money laundered through the buying of stocks or through buying into legitimate organizations? Have we any experience which tells us that wiretapping has stopped any loansharking operation? The loanshark operates in the workplace, on the docks of Montreal and in factories. He does not use the telephone.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Order, please. I regret to inform the hon. member that his allotted time has expired. He may continue with unanimous consent. Does the hon. member have unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

Mr. Leggatt: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. At the conclusion of the debate on this motion yesterday, the Minister of Justice (Mr. Basford) indicated that he would withhold his consent to my amending my motion by removing the words "mentioned in paragraph (a)". I understand that the minister is now willing to grant consent, and I assume the House will be kind enough to grant that consent. However, I understand that the minister has some reservation which he would like to explain to the House, and he would like an opportunity to speak again briefly on the motion.

Mr. Basford: Mr. Speaker, I am quite happy to accommodate the hon. member and give that consent. I wanted an opportunity to reflect. However, that amendment considerably changes the motion, and under the rules I am not allowed to speak on the changed motion. I ask for the permission of the House to make, in a short time, a brief observation on the motion as changed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Due to the fact that the Minister of Justice (Mr. Basford) has already spoken on this motion, he requires unanimous consent to speak again. Does the minister have unanimous consent?

Mr. Woolliams: Mr. Speaker, I think the first question to be decided is whether the House unanimously agrees to the change in question. There was a typographical error. I pointed it out last night. Our party agrees to the change. I do not object to the minister's speaking. Perhaps he has something to explain.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Does the hon. member for New Westminster (Mr. Leggatt) have the unanimous consent of the House to change the wording of his motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): It is so ordered. Does the Minister of Justice have the unanimous consent of the House to speak on the change of wording in the motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Basford: I assume I will speak later.

● (1550)

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, I have refrained from speaking on this bill as most of the arguments I would have advanced have already been placed before the House in previous debates. In order to guard against repetition, I decided I would not speak. That view was reinforced as I read the debates that have taken place. I pay tribute to members who have made their contributions, as the arguments are clear and definite. As I say, I speak with diffidence following the various speeches that have been made. There was the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams), who has a fine record as a trial lawyer, the hon. member for Cumberland-Colchester North (Mr. Coates), and this afternoon the hon. member for Prince George-Peace River (Mr. Oberle) made an exceptionally fine speech. I think all of us would be enriched if we were able to handle the English language the way he does after only some 25 years in Canada.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Diefenbaker: I want to say a word about the hon. member for Nickel Belt (Mr. Rodriguez). In quite a remarkable example of parliamentary skill and debate he dealt with the problem as he saw it. Also, the hon. member for New Westminster (Mr. Leggatt) throughout the debate has delivered himself in a way that does honour to him and to his constituency.

After all, Mr. Speaker, we do not all have to see alike in everything. Whenever I hear a harsh debate such as sometimes occurs in this House of Commons, I am reminded of the answer given by Sir John A. Macdonald when he was bitterly attacked at the time of the Canadian Pacific scandal. I made a note a moment ago of what he said, and feel the quotation is entirely apt. He said, "I am not totally perfect, to my faults be somewhat blind, to my virtues ever kind." That is a pretty good rule for all of us. However, as I followed this debate I was disturbed by the attitude of the Minister of Justice (Mr. Basford).

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): The country is disturbed.

[Mr. Woolliams.]

Mr. Diefenbaker: I have heard various ministers of justice in this chamber through the years, Mr. Speaker. I think of the Hon. Louis St. Laurent, as he was then, who took the judicial view, not a narrow partisan view. I think of others who succeeded him, such as the Hon. Davie Fulton who served in my administration and who never brushed aside members of the opposition and their viewpoints by imperious attitude. I realize that in speaking I cannot hope to change anything in the mind of the Minister of Justice. He is immune to suggestion; he is insulated against realities, and I am not hopeful of bringing about any change. What shocks me, however, is that he endeavours to fool the people of Canada with the pretence that anyone voting against this bill is voting against gun control or the proper powers, as he sees them, to be granted to the police.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Some hon. Members: Shame.

Mr. Diefenbaker: In other words, he is afraid to bifurcate this bill. If he will do that, he will change my opinion very greatly. But for him to endeavour to hoax the people of Canada and have them believe that if we vote against this bill we vote against gun control, or against giving proper and appropriate rights to the police, providing the civil liberties of individuals are protected, is a smokescreen to cover the fact that he is afraid to divide the bill. I was more convinced than ever that he will not give way, by the remarks he made the other night when a terrible tragedy took place and a fine young city police officer was shot to death. He is to be buried today, and Ottawa and the nation mourns. The minister's ejaculations on that subject as he arrived at the scene of the crime were, to say the least, more pious and unctious than they were excusable.

An hon. Member: Ambulance chaser.

Mr. Diefenbaker: I cannot understand whether the observations that were attributed to him at the time were actually made in connection with blood on the hands of certain members whom he designated—

Mr. Basford: Mr. Speaker, a question of privilege, just so there is no confusion in the debate I think I should point out to the right hon. member that apparently he is prepared to say that I said certain members had blood on their hands.

An hon. Member: He did not say that.

Mr. Basford: Just so there is no confusion, Mr. Speaker, I at no time said that.

Mr. Diefenbaker: Mr. Speaker, it took the minister three or four days to bring about his denial. I am glad even now that I have been able to raise him from his seat in order to deny something that was totally inexcusable, if true. Why he has been silent so long is not for me to say. Whether he used the words or the suggestions I have made, or not, these are some of the statements he allegedly made—statements that I find hard to credit to an experienced lawyer and parliamentarian. According to an interview with broadcast news on July 12, he said:

What I don't understand is we have a group of members, such as Stan Schumacher—

The hon. member for Palliser.

—Doug Neil—

The hon. member for Moose Jaw.

—Ritchie

The hon. member for Dauphin.

—Towers—

The hon. member for Red Deer.

—Bob Brisco from Kootenay West, who spent all day yesterday and presumably all day today debating such things as the right of people to collect and use machine guns—

That statement was not true.

—or amendments reducing the sentences for the use of guns; weakening the provisions relating to safe storage and what I just don't understand is how many people, how many policemen, how many citizens, have to be shot down in Brampton or Oshawa or Ottawa or Penticton, where they shot a tax collector—

● (1600)

I cannot understand bringing in a tax collector. I continue:

—or Vancouver, or Montreal, before parliament will react to that public situation and pass the legislation.

Sir, what unctuous hyprocrisy those words are. First, the government introduced legislation to abolish capital punishment. Then it brought in legislation to be in effect until December 31, 1977, provided that anyone who murdered a police officer or custodial officer shall be subject to the death sentence. The government contended that the existence of that death sentence would constitute a deterrent. The government brought that legislation in. Then several policemen and custodial officers were wantonly murdered. Six or seven murderers were awaiting execution. The law providing for the death sentence was in effect, and what did the Minister of Justice do? The government, including the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) wanted to find a way out of the quandary. Having brought the law in themselves, but not desiring to carry it out, they took another course.

Mr. Speaker, one of the last capital cases to come before the courts had to do with two police officers murdered in New Brunswick with unbelievable brutality.

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): It was a premeditated murder.

Mr. Diefenbaker: It was premeditated and carried out in a way impossible to describe. Those murders were horrible. In that case the murderers, after conviction, were awaiting the death sentence to be carried out. They appealed. The appeal went to the Supreme Court of Canada and was thrown out. Then, suddenly, the light shone on the government. It decided not to carry out the law. Mr. Pearson had never done so. Mr. Trudeau has not done so since he became Prime Minister. They asked themselves, "What shall we do?" They said, "We shall return to the House of Commons and bring in a new law to provide that the law which was to be in effect until the end of this year shall be set aside." The various murderers of police officers became the beneficiaries of the actions of the government which, having brought in the law which made the murderers of police officers and custodial officers subject to the death penalty, the government turned around and decided it wanted to get out of the position in which it found itself.

That the Minister of Justice should now endeavour to place the responsibility for the death of the young police officer on members of the opposition is infinite gall. He should withdraw his statement publicly now.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Diefenbaker: He has not done so. I tell you this, Mr. Speaker: When there is a change of government there will be a reversal of this legislation at the earliest possible time thereafter. I see smiles on the faces of the self-satisfied members opposite who no doubt have read the results of the Gallup poll. I know something about polls. On June 8, 1957, the election being on June 10, the Gallup poll stated that it was obvious the St. Laurent government was going to be re-elected. The party opposite pointed to preceding polls, which bore an unusual relationship to what is happening today. On May 25 the poll said that the Conservatives would get 32 per cent of the vote, and the Liberals 47 per cent. I can tell you what the subsequent polls said. I do not hear Liberal members quoting those former Gallup polls of 1957 on which they put such reliance.

The polls were taken right across the country. We were told, for example, that in the maritimes the Conservative party would get 44 per cent of the vote, and the Liberal party 52 per cent. We pretty nearly wiped them out in the maritimes. It said we would get 22 per cent in Quebec and the Liberals would get 70 per cent. You know what happened there. According to the poll, in the west we would get only 19 per cent of the vote and the Liberals 34 per cent.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Order, please. I regret to interrupt the right hon. member, but suggest he should return to the motion under discussion.

Mr. Diefenbaker: Mr. Speaker, I shall do so with great pleasure. I have a strong argument to advance which may seem not connected with the subject before the House, but it is. I say this with great deference, and you know the high regard I have for you, sir. I am saying that when we come to power we shall put an end to all this nonsense, to this legislation such as the Minister of Justice continues to foist on us. Sir, I proceed and will not take long.

I cannot go into provisions concerning wiretapping because there is only one clause before the House. I ask, what happened to the wiretappers of Watergate? I remember somebody asking the Prime Minister in this House, after he had met President Nixon in Washington, if he realized his conversation had been taped. He said, "I do not care." Naturally— nothing was being said. Nonetheless, they had the finest tape system in the president's office you could find anywhere.

Only in the last couple of days a familiar case came to my attention. I will not give hon. members the particulars of it because I do not believe one should be so immodest. I have before me the "RCMP Quarterly", volume 39, No. 4, for October, 1974, and I refer to the story entitled "The cop in the closet." That is a story of a case in which I appeared. In that case they did not have any wiretapping, but they had a policeman and beautiful girl esconced in a cupboard, a small cupboard 24 inches long and 12 inches wide. The man who tells the story is the policeman. They sat there for hours, playing rummy. That is what he says. That is recorded as the first kind of wiretapping case in Canada, but it was not wires they had to tap.

Sir, I would sooner take the opinion of Canadians who believe that you do not need to destroy human rights and fundamental freedoms in order to achieve security.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Diefenbaker: I would sooner take the opinion of the 500 or 600 lawyers, experienced members of the advocate society of Ontario who, summarizing their view, said wiretapping is a serious threat to the general security and welfare of all Canadians. I will not quote newspapers, but all across the country one newspaper after another has taken a stand against wiretapping. Mr. Speaker, this is a short cut to tyranny; that is what wiretapping brings about.

The hon. member for Calgary North is the proposer of an amendment, with which I will not deal now, except to say this: you will soon put an end to wiretapping, unjust wiretapping, if you accept that amendment. The hon. member says the police can tap to their heart's content; they may gain information from that wiretapping which may help in a prosecution, but the evidence thereof shall not be admissible in a court of law. That is the only way in which you can protect Canadians.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Diefenbaker: I have not been one of those members who over the years has complained if his telephone was being tapped. I do not care if it is tapped. If it is, some people may hear things they do not like. To allow police officers to listen in to communications in a lawyers office between the lawyer and his client is a reversion to the days of the Star Chamber.

● (1610)

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Diefenbaker: I hope the minister will reconsider—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Order. I regret to interrupt the right hon. gentleman, but the time allotted to him has expired. He may continue with unanimous consent.

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

An hon. Member: No.

Some hon. Members: Shame.

[Mr. Diefenbaker.]

Mr. Woolliams: I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker. I regret that after the co-operation we endeavoured to show in the committee, and of which the Minister of Justice is aware, even though permission to call witnesses before the committee was denied, a member from Montreal—I forget his constituency—

Mr. Paproski: Who cares?

Mr. Woolliams: —should say "No" to a man who has been prime minister of this country and is one of the greatest counsel Canada has ever produced.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Woolliams: The right hon. member for Prince Albert has fought for human rights and civil liberties throughout his career. It was he who produced the Bill of Rights for this nation.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Woolliams: Not only should the Minister of Justice apologise for that lack of courtesy, but the hon. member concerned should apologise.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Basford: I rise on the point of order, Mr. Speaker. Might I simply say that, while a member on this side has refused consent, I am at the same time negotiating with one of the members of our party whose bill would be before us during the private members hour at five o'clock, to give up this hour of private members' business in the hope that progress might be made on the bill before us, and in the hope—as I believe is the desire of all members—that we may at some point in the course of this summer be able to spend some time with our wives and children. This in no way is disrespectful to the right hon. gentleman. If it is the general feeling, it will expedite passage of the bill by allowing him to speak for a few minutes longer. We would, I am sure, have no objection. But we are all trying to work with a will to make progress on this measure.

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): You are not going to get it with that sort of tactic.

Mr. Basford: I am saying that I am currently engaged in conversation with one of our members, asking him to give up private members' hour in order to provide more time for this debate.

An hon. Member: That is irrelevant.

Mr. Basford: It is not. We are all making sacrifices to get on with this bill. I suggest to the House that it might be helpful if the right hon. gentleman, or the hon. member for Calgary North, were to ask for unanimous consent for the right hon. member to speak for an additional period in which to conclude his remarks.

Mr. Diefenbaker: No, Mr. Speaker. I understand well the argument advanced by the Minister of Justice, that all hon. members who have wives want to be with them. I wish I could be.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Herbert: On the point of order, Mr. Speaker. I do not think it should be any surprise to the right hon. gentleman that I should have said "No". He was in the House on the previous occasion when I told him I would be taking this action. First of all, I believe that when such extension is given to a member, it is given as a privilege and is not to be abused; it means that the member concerned shall continue to speak for only a few minutes and should not just continue to address the House without time limit. I have refused unanimous consent because of what I consider to have been an abuse of that privilege in the past.

Mr. Paproski: You should hang your head in shame.

Mr. Herbert: Possibly at some future time we should change the rules to limit additional remarks to a fixed period of time. That is for the committee on procedure to decide. In conclusion, I would suggest that the right hon. member has been here long enough that he ought to be able to say what he has to say within the time allotted to him.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Since there is not unanimous consent, I call on the hon. member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): I was not rising on the point of order; I was rising to say a few words in the debate.

Some hon. Members: Point of order.

Mr. Fraser: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, I want to say, without equivocation, that as a member of the bar who has spent 17 years before the courts, I spent those years believing that one of the fundamental obligations of a lawyer in society and of the law-maker in society was to ensure that the civil liberties of our people, liberties which have been gained at great cost over many hundred years, are not lightly taken away; they must not be restricted unless there is clear, even overwhelming evidence for such a course, the burden of proof being upon those who advocate the restriction of those liberties that it is in the public interest—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Order, please. That is not a point of order. The House did not give the right hon. member for Prince Albert (Mr. Diefenbaker) unanimous consent to continue, so I recognized the hon. member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands (Mr. Douglas).

Mr. Fraser: But Mr. Speaker, let me continue with my point of order—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): The hon. member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands (Mr. Douglas).

Mr. Fraser: I want to move, seconded by the hon. member for Calgary North, that the right hon. member for Prince Albert (Mr. Diefenbaker) be heard in this House this afternoon.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): I cannot accept the motion due to the fact that the hon. member does not have the floor. I recognized the hon. member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands (Mr. Douglas) and he has the floor.

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): You just wait over there!

Mr. Woolliams: You will be here until August.

Mr. Rodriguez: You Liberals have blown it.

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, it was not my intention to take part in this debate because I felt my colleagues and my hon. friends had already expressed the position of my party. I rise, however, first of all to say how much I regret that the right hon. member for Prince Albert (Mr. Diefenbaker), who has been a consistent defender of civil liberties over the years, not only by his words but by his actions, should not have been allowed to complete his speech. He certainly deserved the right to be heard by the House and I, for one, would have liked to hear him.

• (1620)

I am also rising because I listened with dismay to the speech made yesterday afternoon by the Minister of Justice (Mr. Basford). I have always considered the Minister of Justice a very reasonable person. I have had considerable respect for his ability both as a lawyer and as a parliamentarian, but I could not help but feel yesterday that he put up a most unfair defence of a very weak piece of legislation in regard to dealing with electronic surveillance.

The minister began by setting forth the terms of the legislation which was passed in 1974. That was good legislation. It should be remembered that in 1974 we had a minority government and therefore the government was compelled to get the co-operation of the opposition groups. That legislation on the statute books was designed to stop private wiretapping and eavesdropping; to provide for police electronic surveillance under clearly stipulated conditions; and to provide that persons whose telephones were tapped were to be given notice in due course that their telephone conversations were tapped.

Yesterday the minister told the House that this legislation has not worked. He did not tell us why it has not worked. He said that it is difficult for a judge to define what is meant by "organized crime". Very well, Mr. Speaker, if that is true, the minister should have brought in some legislation more clearly defining what is meant by "organized crime". But how does allowing wiretapping to be used in evidence in court, and extending the time for reporting to those people who have been spied upon to three years, clarify what is organized crime? The minister has a responsibility to tell the House why the present eavesdropping legislation and wiretapping provisions have not worked.

In quoting the police and the attorneys general of the provinces, the minister is implying that the judges have been uncooperative in giving authorization. Is that true? Is the minister saying that the police had difficulty getting authorization from judges? It would be a terrible indictment of the judiciary of this country. If the police have been getting co-operation, then why does the minister now need provisions allowing the tapes which are taken of a wiretap to be used in court as evidence?

The minister stated the basic principles here. First of all, he said, we are all opposed to private wiretapping. Agreed. He said we are also agreed that the police should be allowed to indulge in electronic surveillance under what he calls "proper judicial supervision". I, for one, Mr. Speaker, do approve. I think there are times when it may be that wiretapping and other forms of electronic surveillance are necessary in order to deal with criminals and to stop criminal activities in this country. That is why we voted for the legislation of 1974. But we voted for it on the understanding that these wiretapping operations would only be permitted when authorization had been granted by the courts.

The minister is now saying that he wants electronic surveillance under, to quote his words, "proper judicial supervision". How can there be proper judicial supervision when the police can wiretap and eavesdrop, and then take the tapes into court and have them accepted as evidence? Why would the police bother to go to court to get permission, if they can use the evidence in court? The simplest thing to do is to go on a witch-hunt, a fishing expedition, wire enough people and tap enough phones so that if nothing of interest is found except some petty gossip they do not need to do anything with it. That is, except to keep it on the record because it might be useful on a further occasion for a little blackmail. However, if the police do find something, Mr. Speaker, which they got illegally, by breaking the law, then they can take it into court and use it as evidence against a person who is charged.

Just where are we going, Mr. Speaker? What the minister is saying is that when you ask the question, "What is a crime?", the answer is that a crime is an illegal act which is committed by the police. If the police break the law, or if they tap phones by using eavesdropping facilities illegally, that is not a crime; the reward is that the evidence can be used in court in order to convict some individual.

I wonder whether the minister and the House realize the road down which we are travelling. At the present time, as I understand the law, the police cannot break into my house or office, or any other person's premises, in order to secure documents unless they first obtain a search warrant or writ of assistance. Is the next step going to be that they can break in illegally? There is some evidence that the police have broken in illegally, which is why the Solicitor General (Mr. Fox) has ordered an investigation into the RCMP. But if they break into premises illegally, are they to be allowed to use any documents which they find as evidence, in court? That will be the next step.

Mr. Basford: They can now. That is the present law.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): They can use evidence illegally obtained?

Mr. Basford: That is the common law.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Then the minister had better get busy and change it.

Mr. Leggatt: You should have brought that amendment in with the bill.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): The minister's interjection seems to me to point not down the road which we might travel, but down the road which we are already travelling. Surely what happened in the United States is a lesson to this country. The CIA set up its "dirty tricks" department where the "plumbers" were illegally breaking into premises, not to deal with criminals but to get political information against their political opponents. That has built up to the point where we know Edgar Hoover got private dossiers on people in public life, such as senators, congressmen and people like Martin Luther King. Is that what we want to do? There is now evidence that the CIA had assassination squads in South Vietnam. Why? On the assumption that the forces who are supposed to maintain the law can violate the law any time they pleased, it is in the interests of national security to do so. If we start down that road, we are going to find ourselves in exactly the same kind of difficulty from which the United States is now emerging.

● (1630)

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Surely, in this country, if an act is illegal for ordinary citizens it is illegal for the police.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): The police have no right to wiretap. They have no more right to break into your home or mine unless they have the proper authorization set forth in the law. To say they can wiretap or they can search my home in order to get documents and use them in court, even though they get them illegally, is a negation of the law. Louis XIV once said, "L'état c'est moi"—which means, "I am the state". In a democracy, this government is not the state; it is the servant of the state.

Some hon. Members: Right on.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): The people in this country are the state and we are here as their servants. The ministers who sit on the treasury benches are there to protect the country against any group in the community which wants to violate its rights as free men and women. What is this government doing to protect them? It has stooped to a subterfuge which has been pointed out by the right hon. member for Prince Albert (Mr. Diefenbaker). It brings in pieces of legislation covering four or five topics—gun control, dangerous offenders, parole, and electronic surveillance. It is true that all of these measures deal with the Criminal Code. The fact that one agrees with part of this bill does not mean that one has to accept all of the bill.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): The government has taken those pieces of the bill which the great majority of us in this House support and has endeavoured to use those sections as a sugar-coating to cover the bitter pill of allowing illegal wiretapping by the police forces and allowing them to use that as evidence in the courts, thereby giving them an open invitation completely to ignore the provision that they must go to the courts, because they do not need to go to the courts. They can eavesdrop to their heart's content, knowing perfectly well that whatever evidence they secure illegally can be used as evidence in a court of law.

We have supported the minister in the past on gun control and many of the measures in regard to parole and dangerous offenders. I, for one, am not prepared to support any piece of legislation which contains provisions allowing the police forces of this country, even with the best will in the world, to go out and break the law and use the results of their illegality as a means of convicting some person in the courts of Canada.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Therefore, even at this late date the minister ought to break up this bill and give the House of Commons at third reading an opportunity to vote separately on these sections of Bill C-51. If he does not, he leaves those of us who believe in basic civil liberties of Canadian people no option but to vote against this piece of legislation.

This government has always boasted of its liberalism. This government is still smarting from the unhappy memories of October, 1970, and the War Measures Act. I would have expected that a government which burned its fingers on those anti-civil libertarian measures would now want to give the House an opportunity to deal with the matter of electronic surveillance on its merits, rather than burying it in a bill which the government hopes we will accept even though we dislike this portion. I dislike this portion of the bill so strongly that I am prepared to vote against the bill as a whole, although there are many things in the bill with which I heartily approve.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Basford: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Many members of this House regret the incident which occurred a little while ago, and I should like to ask the House to grant the right hon. member for Prince Albert (Mr. Diefenbaker) an opportunity to be heard a second time now.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Is it agreed?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Agreed, and so ordered.

Mr. Diefenbaker: Mr. Speaker, I very much appreciate the motion of the Minister of Justice (Mr. Basford) which is in keeping with the best traditions of parliament. However, as I have already stated, I would not want to accept that, not because he has advanced it but, rather, because of the hon. member who took the stand and as a result of doing so obtained another forward step in notoriety. I would not want to remove the benefits from him.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Is the House ready for the question?

Some hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Basford: Mr. Speaker, as I said a moment ago, I want to facilitate the hon. member for New Westminster (Mr. Leggatt) by agreeing to his changing of the words of his amendment. I wanted an opportunity to speak very briefly on the changed amendment. I recognize that electronic surveillance is a matter upon which all members of this House hold very strong feelings. As I said yesterday, in 1974 this House examined the question very thoroughly. I ask hon. members to look at this amendment, as reworded, very carefully, because I suggest to hon. members and to the mover of the amendment that a careful reading of the amendment would make it clear that it would be "open season" for the police to investigate any activity involving two or more persons.

I know the intention of the hon. member for New Westminster. We discussed that intention very carefully in committee. It is essentially my intention, namely, that we have a list of specified offences upon which the police could obtain an authorization to wiretap, and that there be some general clause relating to organized crime allowing authorizations there. In 1974 there was the first general organized crime section that the then hon. member for St. Paul's, Ronald Atkey, a Conservative member, wrote into the Criminal Code. That general clause has not proved effective, and this is an amendment to rewrite it. This amendment deals with a number of persons acting in concert in furtherance of a commission of crime involving one or more offences. At the very least, those are confusing words. At the very most, it is "open season" for wiretapping any activity by two or more persons involved in an offence.

● (1640)

All offences must be given this general meaning. It is not restricted to Criminal Code offences, indictible offences or offences with a penalty of five years or more. The general meaning of offences is anything carrying a penal consequence. The courts would have to interpret that not only as being an offence under some federal statute but under provincial statutes and even municipal bylaws. I suspect that a very careful reading of this amendment has the most dire consequences which are not being noted. As I say, it would be "open season" for wiretap activity against any two people involved in anything which would be an offence under a federal statute, provincial statute or municipal statute. I do not think that is the intention of the opposition or of the hon. member for New Westminster (Mr. Leggatt). It is certainly not my intention. I urge the House, including the members of the NDP, to defeat this amendment. As judicially interpreted, it would have very drastic consequences.

When they appeared before the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs, the Advocates' Society and other groups who appeared strenously objected to this very provision whereby one could have two or more people involved in any offence and it could be wiretapped. As I recall the evidence, they spoke of two gas station attendants who agreed on the price of gasoline who could be wiretapped under the combines act. The Advocates' Society mentioned a lot of other incidents that could be subject—

Mr. Woolliams: Like income tax.

Mr. Basford: Like income tax. I suggest very seriously to the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams) that the amendment now before the House is precisely the situation to which the Advocates' Society was addressing itself. The amendment that the justice and legal affairs committee finally agreed upon as a compromise measure had a list of specific Criminal Code offences and a section relating to organised crime involving Criminal Code indictible offences with a penalty on indictment of five years. That is far more limiting than amendment No. 29.

I ask the hon. member for Calgary North, who has a deep interest in this matter, to look very carefully at the wording of this amendment. It is precisely the situation against which the advocate society was making strong representations.

Mr. Woolliams: Mr. Speaker, may I ask the Minister of Justice (Mr. Basford a question?

Mr. Leggatt: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Order, please. The hon. member for New Westminster (Mr. Leggatt) must have unanimous consent, as he has already spoken.

Mr. Leggatt: Mr. Speaker, this is a point of order. It is simply to clarify the amendment that I asked the House to consider last night. In doing so, I do not put forward the explanation in any kind of great detail. I do not propose to do that now. I want to read the particular amendment into the record because the Minister of Justice is clearly in error when he says it does not apply to indictment. It clearly does. I will read it again for the minister. The motion, as amended, reads as follows:

—and any other offence created by an act of parliament for which an offender may be prosecuted by indictment—

[Mr. Basford.]

The words are clearly there. The minister is misleading the House when he says that the "tappability" would apply to all offences. The offence must be indictable. I quote:

—or that is an offence mentioned in section 3 or 20 of the Small Loans Act, that there are reasonable grounds to believe is part of a pattern of criminal activity planned and organized by a number of persons acting in concert in furtherance of the commission of crime involving one or more offences mentioned in paragraph (a) or a conspiracy to commit one or more such offences—

That is the best definition I know for organized crime. If the minister has a better definition, he should submit it. The minister said we were opening the door to everything. That is exactly what we are not doing with this amendment. We are leaving the door open only enough to handle organized crime. The minister's amendment does not deal with the question of organized crime. This amendment simply ensures that you can only tap an individual where the offence has a ten-year penalty, but with organized crime you leave it open to an indictable offence.

I do not know how the minister can come to any other conclusion from reading this motion. Bringing in this red herring of a couple of people in a gas station simply does not wash. In explanation of this, the change is clearly to allow us the capacity to tap for organized crime. I do not know of anyone in this chamber who opposes that provision. I still argue that the amendment is in order. The hon. member raised a red herring in terms of acting in concert. He clearly misunderstands. He even made the argument that it carried forward for all offences, when clearly only offences that are indictable are covered in terms of organized criminal activity.

Mr. Woolliams: Mr. Speaker, may I ask the Minister of Justice a question?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): The hon. member for Calgary North on a point of order.

Mr. Woolliams: It is not a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): The hon. member has already spoken on this motion. He can only speak again with unanimous consent. Does the hon. member have unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Woolliams: Mr. Speaker, I know the minister is anxious to get this legislation through. He spoke with great affection about Mr. Chappel, Mr. Cooper and Mr. Cartwright who appeared before the committee for the advocate society and the benchers of Upper Canada. He referred to them in reference to the motion of my good friend from New Westminster (Mr. Leggatt). I have on the order paper two amendments. They state that you cannot wiretap solicitors' offices because of the privilege and confidentiality, not of the lawyers, but of the clients. The second amendment reads:

—"but all evidence derived from an unauthorized intercept and all evidence derived therefrom shall be inadmissible in any court of law."

Those two amendments were recommended by the distinguished group who appeared before the committee. Will the minister now accept those two amendments without any further debate? He used that society to bolster his argument with reference to the amendment of the hon. member for New Westminster. If he loves their report and refers to it in the House of Commons with great affection, I ask him to accept the two main amendments recommended by the lawyers of Upper Canada.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Is the House ready for the question?

Some hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): The question is on motion No. 29 in the name of the hon. member for New Westminster (Mr. Leggatt). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the said motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): In my opinion they nays have it.

And more than five members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Pursuant to Standing Order 75(11), the recorded division on proposed motion No. 29 stands deferred. We will now proceed to motions Nos. 30, 31 and 32. These will be grouped for debate. A vote on motion No. 30 will also dispose of motions Nos. 31 and 32.

Mr. Basford: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I believe there have been some discussions through the usual channels, led by the hon. member for Scarborough East (Mr. O'Connell), with regard to private members' hour. Possibly, before we start debating amendments, it might be useful to deal with that. There is a willingness on the part of the hon. member for Scarborough East, who is the sponsor of the bill to be dealt with at five o'clock, to give up this particular private members' hour providing, of course, that at some subsequent time he will have the opportunity to present it.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Is it agreed that private members' hour, to commence at five o'clock, will be dispensed with?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): It is so ordered.

Mr. Goodale: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I do not want to delay the proceedings, but it would be worth while for the House to note its gratitude to the hon. member for Scarborough East (Mr. O'Connell) who has been most co-operative both today and on other occasions.

Mr. Eldon M. Woolliams (Calgary North) moved:

Motion No. 30.

That Bill C-51, to amend the Criminal Code, the Customs Tariff, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act and the Prisons and Reformatories Act, be amended in clause 9 by striking out lines 23 to 31 at page 49 and substituting the following therefor:

"consultation with clients".

● (1650)

Motion No. 31.

That Bill C-51, to amend the Criminal Code, the Customs Tariff, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act and the Prisons and Reformatories Act, be amended in clause 10 by striking out lines 5 to 20 at page 51 and substituting the following therefor:

"but all evidence derived from an unauthorized intercept and all evidence derived therefrom shall be inadmissible in any court of law."

Motion No. 32.

That Bill C-51, to amend the Criminal Code, the Customs Tariff, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act and the Prisons and Reformeries Act, be amended in clause 10 by striking out line 35 at page 51 and substituting the following therefor:

"he may not".

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Is the House ready for the question?

Mr. Woolliams: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a small point of order. I notice that the Chair has linked motion No. 30, which deals with conversations between solicitor and client, and motion No. 31 which deals with the admissibility of evidence. That is like trying to mix water and oil. In light of what happened earlier this afternoon when the right hon. gentleman for Prince Albert (Mr. Diefenbaker) was speaking, if I, for example, asked for extra time because those two motions are linked together, would I be given extra time? As it is, I am only allowed 20 minutes to speak on such a serious subject.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): In fact, you are allowed 40 minutes.

Mr. Woolliams: I ask that these two motions be separated and that we vote separately on motions Nos. 30 and 31.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): I am informed that due to the fact that the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams) moved the motion, he will be allowed 40 minutes.

An hon. Member: That's too much.

Mr. Woolliams: What about the other speakers, sir?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): On the same motion, the other speakers will be allowed 20 minutes, but the hon. member for Calgary North will be allowed 40 minutes due to the fact that he moved the motion.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

SUBJECT MATTER OF QUESTIONS TO BE DEBATED

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): It is my duty, pursuant to Standing Order 40, to inform the House that the questions to be raised tonight at the time of adjournment are as follows: the hon. member for Halifax-East Hants (Mr. McCleave)—National Defence—Alleged differentiation in treatment by customs between forces personnel and civilians; the hon. member for Nickel Belt (Mr. Rodriguez)—Post Office—Allegation union denied access to means of communicating with members—Government position; the hon. member for Wellington-Grey-Dufferin-Waterloo (Mr. Beatty)—Farm Credit Corporation—Indictment of management in audit by Sibbald Group—Government action.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

CRIMINAL LAW AMENDMENT ACT, 1977

AMENDMENTS TO CRIMINAL CODE

The House resumed consideration of Bill C-51, to amend the Criminal Code, the Customs Tariff, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act and the Prisons and Reformatories Act, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs.

Mr. Eldon M. Woolliams (Calgary North): First of all, Mr. Speaker, I will deal with motion No. 30 amending clause 9 at page 49 by striking out lines 23 to 31 and substituting the words "consultation with clients". The clause reads:

> No authorization may be given to intercept a private communication at the office of residence of a solicitor, or at any other place ordinarily used by a solicitor and by other solicitors for the purpose of consultation with clients,

If the clause stopped at this point, that would be fine, but it goes on to read:

> —unless the judge to whom the application is made is satisfied that there are reasonable grounds to believe that the solicitor, any other solicitor practising with him, any person employed by him or any other such solicitor or a member of the solicitor's household has been or is about to become a party to an offence.

The first point I want to make is that all communications between clients and solicitor should be privileged and confidential. Otherwise, no solicitor could act for his client or use the telephone in privacy. There have been cases of telephones in courthouses being wiretapped and there have also been cases of phones in law offices being wiretapped. This means that if the police suspect one person in that office of, say, smoking marijuana or doing something within the definition of offence in the amendment moved by my good friend, and there are 100 lawyers in that law firm, 30 or 40 secretaries and several bookeepers, they can wiretap the whole office so that all the private conversations can be listened to in the hope that they can hear one sentence which would help them obtain evidence against the one person they suspect.

Let us consider a medical clinic with 20 or 30 doctors practising together, specialists in different fields. If the police were to suspect a clerk, an orderly, a nurse or even a doctor in that office, all the conversations could be tapped for 60 long days, all the most private matters that were discussed concerning our wives, our children and ourselves and concerning all other Canadians, could be overheard. As the hon. member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands (Mr. Douglas) said in his brilliant speech this afternoon, this could happen. But he could have added one sentence—namely, that this information could have been fed into a computer.

There are unfortunate cases of high school girls 14 or 15 years old becoming pregnant, calling the family doctor and telling him of their misfortune. If that clinic were wiretapped, the record of that girl's conversation could be overheard and fed into the computer. If my unmarried daughter should become pregnant, or if that were to happen to anyone else, I would not want that published in the Calgary Herald or the Toronto Star. I see a few doctors present in the House. They know how private some medical information can be, and that the privilege of confidentiality is not to protect lawyers or doctors but to protect clients and patients.

The Minister of Justice (Mr. Basford) spoke about exemptions, but there is no exemption here. It says that no authorization will be given unless the judge to whom the application is made is satisfied that there are reasonable grounds for it. Anyone can be suspected in a solicitor's office, his partner, someone working for him, someone on his staff at home, such as the gardener, the maid or the fellow who sands the floors.

As the hon. member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands pointed out, the police cannot enter your home without a search warrant or a writ of assistance, but they can smuggle in by wiretapping a telephone, by putting a bug in your front room, or even under your bed. This is what this amendment is all about. As the right hon. member for Prince Albert said this afternoon, surely the minister will show some sanity in reference to this matter. This is a reasonable amendment. I will quote from the brief in a few moments. The minister read from the brief and he said that the Advocates' Society of Ontario did not agree with my good friend, the hon. member for New Westminster (Mr. Leggatt). I question the fact that is an accurate statement, but even if it is an accurate statement, the Advocates' Society came before the committee on June 9 with three very intelligent legal briefs. In one of them they said:

> The present sections of the Criminal Code make no special provision for the interception of communications to and by solicitors. If there are reasonable grounds for belief that a solicitor is a person the interception of whose private communications may assist the investigation of an offence, an authorization will be granted to intercept his communications.

This is at the discretion of the judge. The minister says he trusts judges. I have a lot of respect for our judiciary, but this is not an ordinary case. This is made ex parte, which means that a law officer of the Crown or a police officer goes before a judge with an affidavit and nobody has the right to cross-examine him, and he swears that this and that is the fact. So the judge signs the order on a busy afternoon, and the wiretap is allowed.

Mr. Fraser: Having heard only one side of the story.

Mr. Woolliams: Yes, and that side has not even been examined by scrutiny of the right of cross-examination. I cannot accept that, and neither can any other lawyer in this country. The law societies of the provinces, the Canadian bar, the Advocates' Society of Ontario, and the benchers of Upper Canada say that this cannot go on, not because lawyers should have any special protection, but because the citizens of Canada have civil rights, and they are entitled to privacy. Have we reached the stage where we can press a red, blue, pink or green button and out rolls our whole lives? What human being is without some sin? What human being does not have some little skeleton in his closet which he would rather keep locked up during his lifetime? What family in this country has not had difficulties? We as members of parliament are not immune because we are in public life. It does not matter which party we belong to; it always saddens me that our lives and the lives of our children and our wives are bared. When this bill goes through, everybody will be subject to that scrutiny, and that is not good enough.

● (1700)

Mr. Austin M. Cooper, Q.C. says:

Bill C-51 would add section 178.13(1.1) which would give specific legislative sanction to the interception of private communications at the office and at the residence of a solicitor, or at any other place ordinarily used by him and other solicitors for the purpose of consultation with clients.

Mr. Cooper, Mr. Chappel and Mr. Cartwright are distinguished legal scholars who believe in the philosophy of civil rights. Mr. Cooper said he could not talk to his clients on the telephone any more. He has to drive out into the country and hope that there is not a bug in the bush. What is the matter with Canada? Has the Liberal party lost its heart and soul?

Mr. Fraser: And common sense.

Mr. Woolliams: And common sense?

The interception may lawfully be made even if the particular solicitor whose privacy is sought to be invaded is not suspected of complicity in any crime.

The press has failed to realize that once a clinic or law firm has been wiretapped, evidence collected over a period of 60 days has to be played back in order to find one small piece of evidence. We should not give judges the right to allow that. I engage the services of a gardener once in a while. Since we have to be down here all summer, somebody has to cut our grass. My gardener is a fine fellow, but I have sometimes thought he imbibes a little too much. That is his privilege and his business. But I do not want my house wiretapped because of that person or any other person. When people call me, my telephone is used to discuss private political matters and matters relating to my duties as a member of parliament and as a senior partner of a law firm. I ask hon. members opposite, where is your heart and soul? Why do hon. members opposite support the Minister of Justice in this regard? The government brought in human rights. Is the human rights bill like the curtains around this chamber? Was that brought in to please or to buy votes, or do hon. members opposite really believe that people in Canada should have civil and human rights and that there should be no discrimination? What is the philosophy opposite? I cannot answer that; I can only draw inferences from what I see going on.

It is sufficient if his partner, or an employee of the solicitor of his partner, or a member of the solicitor's household is suspected, on reasonable grounds, of being or having been party to an offence.

It is submitted that the proposed addition to the present legislation is not limiting; on the contrary, it extends the present power—

Without this legislation, I question whether a judge would allow that; but with it clinics and law firms can be wiretapped.

If, for example a solicitor's son (a member of his household) is suspected on reasonable grounds of possessing marijuana, the same eavesdropping may be lawfully indulged in by the police at the solicitor's office and at the jail and at the courthouse.

I told the House that I once hired a psychiatrist to examine a client with regard to a question of insanity. The psychiatrist's interviews were bugged. A spy was involved. A letter went to the attorney general and the Crown attempted to use that letter. The judge threw it out, but the Crown's psychiatrist read the letter and changed his opinion with regard to the sanity of the accused. What kind of civil right is that? That is what is taking place in good old Canada.

There is no restriction on the persons whose communications with the solicitor may be intercepted. All of his clients' conversations with him may be recorded.

How can we defend anybody if the Crown has the story? We might as well adopt the Napoleonic law and say that the accused is guilty and he has to take the stand to prove himself innocent. Then he would have to undergo cross-examination on what he said or may have said or meant. The documents I quoted from yesterday pointed out that the word "No" could taken out so that something might seem affirmative rather than negative. A magnet can be used to cut three or four minutes out of a tape. We do not need Nixon's secretary to do that.

It is submitted that the proposed legislative sanction to the interception of solicitors' private communications poses a serious threat to the privacy of the client's consultations with his lawyer which has traditionally been respected and protected by the common law and by statute.

I hold in my hand "Phipson on Evidence" which, as well as "Whigmore", is a leading authority. It sets out the privilege which exists between solicitor and client. That privilege exists because if it did not a person could not have an adequate, proper and legal defence. Our jurisprudence and freedom go back to before Magna Carta. Hon. members would repeal Magna Carta. That is what they are doing today, and that is why the debate got a little hot this afternoon. We heard today from an hon. member who has much experience. He knows in his heart where he stands on civil rights. He would not have been nominated and elected to this place if he did not have some decency and understanding of civil rights and the need for individual privacy. It does not matter to which party he belongs.

Hon. members opposite think they are all powerful. They have a majority. They want to go home for the summer, and they want to get this bill through. They say we have delayed it. I agree that the statement made by the Minister of Justice yesterday was a shabby one. In reference to the gun control part of this bill, I said that the guns which are used illegally are not the guns covered by the bill at all. I said that the minister's statement was false—and it was false. However, to get this bill through, anything goes. An old friend of my mother used to have a machine to make great sausages. This government likes to grind out legislation like sausages. It does not matter how it comes out.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Baloney, in this case.

Mr. Woolliams: It is baloney, but this is serious baloney and this bill is bad baloney.

It is submitted that the proposed legislative sanction to the interception of solicitors' private communications poses a serious threat to the privacy of the client's consultations with his lawyer which has traditionally been respected and protected by the common law and by statute. It is no consolation that privileged communications overheard by the police may not be introduced in evidence subsequently at a trial. Citizens' rights to obtain accurate legal advice and to prepare their defences in consultation with their counsel, are threatened.

I could go on and on with reference to that, because to me that section is wrong. I want to speak for a few moments on motion No. 31, which in part reads as follows:

● (1710)

"—but all evidence derived from an unauthorized intercept and all evidence derived therefrom shall be inadmissible in any court of law."

That is what the hon. member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands (Mr. Douglas) said this afternoon in his speech, and I have moved an amendment to that effect. It has also been recommended in the report submitted by Mr. Cooper, which says:

There is no requirement in the Criminal Code that the judge to whom an application for an authorization to wiretap is made be advised as to whether a previous similar application has been brought—

He goes on to discuss it. You can now do it for 60 days, and you do not have to notify the person for three years. If you do not get an order at all, you produce the evidence. The Minister of Justice says there is a section in the code. But I do not know of one police officer, since that was implemented in the code, who has gone to jail because he had made unauthorized wiretaps. There is one law for the authorities and one for the people. That is not good enough, Mr. Speaker.

I say any conversation where that application is impeccably correct in every regard and in proper order as granted by the judge should be made and the authorization should be given. The courts in Vancouver have now ruled that when you get to trial and are faced with this, you cannot even cross-examine the police officer who made the application to see if it was proper, because the Supreme Court of Canada has said, in effect, "Forget about it." The test is whether it is relevant to the issue or not.

I must quote, again, my good friend, the former premier of Saskatchewan, who spoke this afternoon and asked why we should have any authorization at all? Why not just go out and bug the telephones, run the lines through every police station in Canada, turn the computers on, and then the police can play cribbage or rummy while the computers are running? Occasionally they can check some place out and not bother about police work. Of course, the person being bugged may not have gone so far as to commit a crime but just be getting near to it.

That brings us to a police state, Mr. Speaker. What happens to our rights then? We know what happened under the Nazis. At night people listened to their neighbours whispering in their bedrooms, their front rooms and their kitchens and reported to the S.S. who came and took them away. Where did they go? All of us know the story. We know of the six million Jews who were put through the furnaces. We know the story of Anne Frank's diary and how the family lived in a little attic, how somebody whispered one day and then the police broke down the door with rifle butts and took them away. They suffered and died. We say that will not happen in Canada. They said it would not happen in Germany. What protects us here is not parliament itself, it is the rule of law.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Woolliams: When my children go to school, it is not Premier Lougheed who guarantees their safety; it is the law of Canada. When I get on an airplane to come to this House from Calgary, it is not the president of Air Canada, the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) or the Minister of Transport (Mr. Lang) who protects me; it is the rule of law. It is the rule of law that protects every Canadian. Once you give the law to the authorities, they will break it.

Mr. Speaker, I have defended the RCMP and I have defended city police in this House, but I can give instances where I have found police to have lied on the stand in very serious trials. In one murder case they lied, and those lies were brought out by cross-examination. In that trial I asked the police if they denied being in the basement of the house, and they said they were never down there. I asked, "Detective, did you ever own a Packard car?" The judge wanted to know what that had to do with anything, and I replied, "Let me finish." Then I asked the detective, "Did you ever finance it through Trader's Finance?" He said, "Yes." I asked, "If you were not in the basement, how did your conditional sales contract get there?" Then he said he was there and had forgotten. "What were you doing down there?" He said he went down to look for tea. He wanted to make himself a cup of tea, and was waiting for somebody.

I could go on and on, Mr. Speaker. I remember a police officer saying he had read all the authorities on a certain situation. I named four of five authorities that did not exist, and he said he had read them—but when I pointed to a real authority, he denied reading it. Those are the experiences of a trial lawyer, Mr. Speaker. If I sat over there as minister of justice I would be against arming people anywhere. We are all people with certain human failings, and just putting on a uniform does not make us full of justice. I say any evidence derived from an unauthorized wiretap should be inadmissible.

Here is another trick, Mr. Speaker. The police may decide not to bother about the authorization and just wiretap. They hear something on the telephone, and in another place find an article of evidence. That is called derivative evidence and it is admissible. When they are on the witness-stand they do not say they used a wiretap to find out about the article—they just happened to walk into the building and saw a canary singing in the open window. You know what happens, Mr. Speaker, and I know what happens. Certainly, anybody who has been an attorney general in this country must know what happens. I think I would make a tough judge when it came to that kind of stuff. I do not know what happens to people when they are elevated to positions, sometimes even the bench—and I do not say this carelessly. Over the years, however, I have found they will believe police officers over anybody. A defence counsel knows that. He knows he has got to get at something to be able to discredit those people before a judge and jury.

I had one judge stop me in a murder trial and ask, "Are you trying to show the RCMP are liars?" They had denied being up in the mountains at Banff interviewing the man but they had witnessed a statement and when I brought it to their attention all of a sudden they were able to recall. I said, "It is obvious that I do not need to prove they are liars." The man, Stringer, was acquitted of murder, but it would have been different if I had not cross-examined the police. I do not know how many statements they had—the man was never sober long enough to know what he did—but they had statements yet they denied being there; they denied the crime; they denied a lot of things.

That is what has happened in my career, Mr. Speaker. Yet I defend the police. We have to defend them because we need police officers to protect the citizens of Canada. Anytime we find such a situation, however, it should be brought to the attention of the minister, the commissioner or whoever is in charge. Let me tell you another story. A man was charged with capital murder and convicted of non-capital murder of a little child. He was taken to the cells in Edmonton and the police officer said, "Here is a child murderer. I cannot get him, but you prisoners can have him." What happened? One of the prisoners slugged the police officer. He threatened to lay a charge, but the guard was honest enough to suggest he should forget the whole thing. I need not tell you I had that investigated, so I know what took place.

I do not believe we are always going to have honest affidavits when there is no right of cross-examination. Even if you get that beautiful order with a seal and a stamp—even with an authorized wiretap there will still be abuse. We must watch this kind of legislation, Mr. Speaker. I cannot understand the minister and his top lawyers. The Advocates' Society—Mr. Cartwright, Mr. Chappell and Mr. Cooper—did not come to committee with a cooked-up brief. They came as honest scholars and asked the committee and the minister not to pass this legislation. The hon. member for New Westminster, who in committee supported the amendments I am talking about, knows that the vote was nine to eight. The tie was broken by the chairman who is a member of the government. I make nothing of that. However, because that is our parliamentary system, when eight vote for the motion and nine vote against it, in the public mind that is close enough for the minister to consider it, so he brought in an amendment.

● (1720)

He said we were going to leave the whole thing to the judge's discretion. Mr. Speaker, the Supreme Court of Canada held that if it is relevant, it is admissible. Consequently, what discretion does the trial judge, magistrate or provincial judge have? He has none. If it is relevant to the issue, it goes in as evidence. If a judge or magistrate excludes the evidence, the Crown will appeal on the ground the court has not followed the Supreme Court of Canada's decision. This happens, Mr. Speaker.

Surely, in light of this fact and in light of what I set out with regard to consultations between solicitor and client, in clinics and offices, and the admissibility of evidence obtained from unauthorized wiretaps, I have made my case. Perhaps I did not need 40 minutes to make it. Earlier this afternoon the Minister of Justice referred to a similar point raised by the hon. member for New Westminster and to what certain people had said on it. He said they were right. If they were right concerning the hon. member's point, why would they be wrong concerning mine? How can you explain the distinction? I suggest you cannot explain it.

I conclude that the minister is becoming the prisoner of his department's officials, and any clauses they draw up for him he must push through this House or risk losing their confidence. The Minister of Justice, as did his predecessor, likes to stand in this House and say what the law is. I remember Mr. Turner, now the director of many companies, trying to tell us the exact state of the law concerning abortion. He was not right. Mr. Speaker, the law is not what the Minister of Justice says it is. He does not interpret the law. Our judges, provincial courts of appeal and the Supreme Court of Canada, interpret the law. What the minister is recorded as saying in Hansard has no bearing on the law, because the courts cannot refer to anything reported in Hansard when interpreting the law. The law is interpreted according to the language in which it is written. A penal statute should always be interpreted in favour of the subject, in accordance with sound law.

Having said that, I seek the support of the government and of the minister. We could end this debate immediately. My good friends in the New Democratic Party say they will support my motion. Therefore, only the government stands in the way. By accepting the motion the government could end this debate which became somewhat heated this afternoon, and rightly so. I say to the minister, give in for once; be flexible; as the Minister of Justice, be big.

Mr. Stuart Leggatt (New Westminster): Mr. Speaker, I will try to be brief. First, I tell the House that the New Democratic Party supports not only motion 30, in the name of the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams), but, as well, motions 31, 32, 33 and 34. The acceptance of each one of those motions would make a significant contribution to the protection of the privacy of each citizen of this country.

Why does the minister sit in this House and pretend, "Here I am, really a civil libertarian, folks?" He sits there, with a kind of wounded innocence, saying, "Why are you attacking me? After all, I am doing nothing very serious. We are just going to change a few rules in the wiretap law, get after those bad people out there in the world and put them in jail." If that is the minister's position, that is hypocrisy of the worst kind. I want the minister to stop hiding behind his cloak, to stop pretending he is a civil libertarian. He is becoming the enemy of every civil libertarian in Canada because of his approach to this bill.

If the minister is interested in controlling crime, as we are, and interested in reducing preventable homicides, which we can do under the gun control provisions, he can stand in this House right now and agree to sever the wiretap provisions from this bill. If he does this, I assure him that my party, and I think the Conservative party, will say, "Good. Let us put the matter to the vote now." I say, let us send these wiretap provisions back to committee. Perhaps they can be examined in the fall. Let us take another look at them.

It is clear that the people who drafted this bill and its wiretap provisions knew exactly what the minister wanted. The minister has failed in his primary obligation, which was to protect the liberty of the citizen against the encroachment of a police state. It is his duty not to listen only to the whispers of the commissioners of the RCMP with regard to increases in power; it is his duty to examine that question objectively and then come down on the side of the citizen. But he has not done that. He has not done it because this is an old, tired government, largely in the hands of its bureaucracy. We look for greater things from ministers of the government. We want them to act objectively and independently. We do not want them to accept the advice, holus-bolus, of a bureaucracy grown fat, sassy and arrogant.

The motion before us deals with the legislative sanction the minister would give to the wiretapping of solicitors' offices. At first blush people may say, "Oh, you lawyers are trying to protect yourselves." The fact is, the privilege associated with consultation is the privilege of the citizen. We want to make sure that every Canadian has the right to consult with someone in private without his conversation being overheard. People talk of the insidious growth of police power and the loss of the citizen's freedom. Mr. Speaker, I am proud to be a member of the legal profession because that profession is one of the last bulwarks remaining against encroachments of the police state.

Mr. Fraser: Right on.

Mr. Leggatt: Similarly, the motion now before the House would, if accepted, also be a bulwark against the encroachment of the police state. The ordinary citizen has not the time to read complicated law, to familiarize himself with its provisions, to tackle our bureaucrats and learn all the rules of the game. The little guy cannot do that. He needs someone to represent him in his dealings with the minister or the bureaucracy, or with the authorities. The minister would jeopardize his ability to consult in private.

It is the duty of the legal profession to protect its clients against "Big Brother", the big state. That is why the motion the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams) has proposed is so important. Perhaps it is the most important motion moved so far in relation to this bill. Surely it should be every person's right to talk to his solicitor in confidence, without fear of being overheard.

If the minister wants to be known as a civil libertarian, why cannot he stand in his place today and say, "I agree with you in principle. I agree with the hon. member for Calgary North's amendment in principle." It is a reasonable amendment, and he can say he supports it. But he does not do that. He has not done so. He sits in his seat and tries to play both sides of the street, as it were. The Canadian people will not let this government get away with it. After I had proposed the previous amendment, the minister stood up and said, "Oh, the hon. member for New Westminster would open the door to allowing everybody to be tapped. His definition is not narrow enough." I ask the minister, how would his officials draft that clause? How would they draft the definition to narrow the question down to organized crime? I will accept such a definition. If the minister's position is that my definition is too wide, I will accept his version.

The minister's staff has examined my motion. I will accept the minister's version if he accepts the principle that we should tap wires in cases involving organized crime and indictable offences, but not tap the conversations of little old ladies who may have brought an extra bottle of wine across the border. I think the minister knows what we want to accomplish. If the minister were to bring forward amendments in this regard which he will support, I would quit talking now. We will be happy to accept the minister's proposal concerning that offence section. But the minister will not do that. He sits in the weeds and plays little word games with this motion.

● (1730)

We must support this amendment to the wiretap provisions. It is vital that we wake up the Canadian people to this insidious attack on their freedom. The minister is representing only one section of the community, that which has the obligation of apprehending criminals. It is a very important part of the community but it should not dictate the laws of Canada. That is a job for legislators who can see both sides of the question, and the sooner the minister wakes up to this, the sooner he will have a more successful career.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. John A. Fraser (Vancouver South): Mr. Speaker, in following the member for New Westminster (Mr. Leggatt) I want to say that while we are in different parties I am extremely proud to be able to advise the House that the hon.

member, who has been my personal friend for many years, was my classmate at law school in the University of British Columbia and, as far as I am concerned, in the conduct of my colleague in the House and in committee on this bill, the class of which I was a member has every right to be very proud of the hon. member for New Westminster.

I want to say also, Mr. Speaker, that the Minister of Justice (Mr. Basford), while not in my class at law school, was at the same law school, albeit a few years behind myself, and that his class would not be very proud of the conduct he has shown in the last few days.

Having spent some years as a practising lawyer in the courts, as a civil lawyer, as a prosecutor in criminal cases, and as a defence counsel in criminal cases, I am appalled that a product of a Canadian law school, a member of parliament who has practised law, albeit not for too many years, who has sat as a legislator on the government side and in the cabinet of the Government of Canada for a number of years, and has served with some distinction, and who now occupies the most important post connected with law enforcement and the protection of the rights of Canadians in the whole of the Dominion of Canada, as Minister of Justice, should take the position he does. How can the hon. gentleman so misunderstand the issue now before the House as to stay stubborn, to stay adamant, or as my hon. friend from New Westminster said, to stay in the weeds and try to play it down both sides of the street?

A number of the amendments which have been brought in are important. The amendment of my friend from New Westminster was important. But the two amendments which have been introduced by my colleague, the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams), are absolutely vital. It is all very well for the Minister of Justice, and perhaps some other members in this House and also, occasionally, for people outside this House to say, "How dare you fetter the right of the police to go and catch criminals?" Mr. Speaker, that has been the argument the police in every country in the world have always used to invade the rights of privacy and the civil rights of ordinary citizens. That argument is not new. It has been used over and over again. And it will continue to be repeated over and over again.

There are two places where one can check that argument. One is among the lawyers of a country who understand their role, which is not only to uphold the law—because they are called upon to administer justice according to their oath—but to ensure that the law is not transgressed so that the liberties and rights of the Canadian people are taken away from them unless there is overwhelming evidence that those rights ought to be restricted in the public interest. That evidence has not been produced here.

The other place that can protect the rights of Canadians is this Chamber. Lawyers are not the only people in the community who have a special and intimate understanding of law. Legislators have that, too. All hon. members in this Chamber know exactly of what I speak. Many of the members of parliament are not legally trained, but they have because of their service in this House, developed a special relationship with the law because they serve as members of parliament. We all know it and the public knows it, too. With that special understanding and relationship with the law goes a very definite and important responsibility which says that no matter what party you belong to, you have an obligation to look extremely carefully at provisions which take away the rights of Canadians by either impairing them or restricting them.

As other hon. members have pointed out, the privilege which exists between a client and his or her solicitor is not the privilege of the lawyer. It has nothing to do with putting lawyers into a special category, as I heard one member of the government party say in committee some weeks ago. It has nothing to do with that at all.

It has to do with the right of Canadians to have the confidence to consult with their lawyers with respect to their problems relating to the law. And they must be free to speak on the most intimate matters which are, at times, of great import to them and would often lead to great embarrassment if such information came to the knowledge of their neighbours. That is what privilege is all about. It is not good enough for the Minister of Justice to say, "Well, up until a few years ago you could do this, and it was not even against the law. All we have done here with this amendment is to improve things a bit because now you need a judge to say you can go ahead and tap a lawyer's telephone if the judge thinks you have a reasonable case against an accused." This is to be done by this legislation whether the suspect is a lawyer, a fellow lawyer in the office, or an employee of the lawyer.

I have practised in a number of different places, Mr. Speaker. I was first called to the bar in the city of Victoria and I practised in a small law firm. I later practised for several years on my own, associated with a bigger firm, but still I was on my own in the small town of Powell River in the riding of my hon. friend from Coast Chilcotin (Mr. Pearsall). Then I joined larger law firms, and when I was elected to parliament I was a senior member in a very large law firm. There were over 30 lawyers and nearly 100 employees. Can you imagine what would happen if some junior clerk were accused or suspected of a criminal offence and that, as a result, the police put a tap on the main telephone line into that firm the result of which could be that all the communications for 60 days of every client who came to that law firm—information which belongs to the citizen who comes to the lawyer, not to the lawyer—was in the hands of the police? Not everybody who would be privy to that information would be a sworn police officer. What about the staff? What about the people who file the information? What about the people who type it all out? What about all the people who might just take some of it and put it through a Xerox machine? What about the potential for blackmail?

My hon. friend from Calgary North has made it quite clear. That, to use the old adage: "Who among us is not without a little sin?" Police constables have been known in the past to be tempted. Some have been more than tempted. Some have committed crimes. We know that this will happen. But this is not an indictment against policemen in general, any more than it is an indictment against any other group in the community. I ask all hon. members: what is so very difficult about admitting that in this case the government is stretching too far? What is wrong with that? Is there anything wrong with admitting that one has made a mistake, or being persuaded by the House of Commons that the position should be adjusted? Is that not what this place is all about? This is not even a partisan debate. You can see an amazing coalition of people here from different parties.

● (1740)

I wish now to refer to the other motion moved by my hon. friend from Calgary North who is now talking about the terrible danger of allowing evidence to be used which, while illegal in itself because it is not properly authorized as a wiretap, amounts to information which then allows the police to get some other evidence, and the police can then bring the other evidence into court. Putting aside wiretapping, the present law is that evidence, even illegally obtained, if it leads to other evidence can be accepted by the court if it is relevant to the issue of truth.

However, when you come in with new powers like wiretapping, if you want to safeguard the community against the abuse of wiretapping, then, as other hon. members have pointed out, you have to say right across the board that you cannot use derivative evidence. You have to take away from the police authorities the temptation to get what they want to know illegally so that later they can get further information to bring in against a person.

I believe in law and order, Mr. Speaker. I believe you have to have order in society. But it has to be under the rule of law. The attention that we pay to the quality of our rule of law is the real determinant of the quality of our life and of our liberties.

The hon. member for Calgary North said something today which ought to be remembered by every member of this House and the public. He said: "What is it that secures your liberties? It is not the Prime Minister, it is not the premiers, it is not even this Chamber; it is the rule of law". The state of the rule of law is of absolute importance to every member of this House. If that rule of law is impaired to the point where any group in the community can take undue advantage of other groups in the community, if privileges and rights which we have fought and worked for over centuries are to be whittled away or in any way impaired, unless for great cause, then the rule of law is cheapened and it will no longer protect us. Once the rule of law is gone, there are no other protections. Then citizens have to take the law into their own hands, and with that there is a breakdown of the civil community.

I say, Mr. Speaker, with all the feeling I can muster, but also having had considerable experience, that this is a very dangerous provision which the minister is asking us to accept. These amendments proposed by the opposition are proper amendments. Nay, they are more than proper, they are essential. There has to come a time in this Chamber, in dealing with matters which, no matter to which party we belong, we have to accept and believe in, namely our fundamental rights; there has to be a time when the government must admit that it is not just a meek surrender or a collapse but is common sense and is sensible and right to listen to those people of wisdom and of conscience who are trying to persuade even this government that it has reached too far.

[Mr. Fraser.]

Hon. Ron Basford (Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, may I just say a few words. I know that both the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams) and the hon. member for New Westminster (Mr. Leggatt) have condensed their remarks, but I should like to make a few comments because of what has been said, although this question was extensively covered in the minutes of the proceedings of the committee.

May I give the background to this whole situation? The amendments to the Criminal Code in 1974, which provided the legislative regime for electronic surveillance, dealt with the question of privileged communications in only one respect, namely, that tapes of privileged communications could not be introduced in evidence.

The law at that time did not make provision for the actual surveillance of privileged communications. It did not provide any regime other than the normal regime for that situation. As a result of some rather unpleasant incidents, one in Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario, where the barristers' telephone in the courthouse was bugged, and another in Manitoba involving the wiretapping of judges—both authorizations, I want to make clear, which were authorized in the normal way by judges—concern was expressed by many, including myself, that the law relating to electronic surveillance of lawyers should be changed.

The solicitor general and I immediately reviewed the guidelines which are published for the RCMP and for Crown agents setting out a regime by which they would not apply for authorizations against lawyers except in very special circumstances. Several other attorneys general in the provinces did the same thing. But because we were dealing at the time with the wiretap amendments in this bill, I said that this was an opportunity to provide some amendments relating to electronic surveillance of lawyers' telephones.

Obviously the question arises whether there should be some blanket exemption or whether there should be some special rule. I opted, as did the justice and legal affairs committee, for special rules relating to those communications.

I want to emphasize that there are on the committee, members on this side of the House who are knowledgeable on the question of wiretap. I point particularly to the chairman of the justice and legal affairs committee, who unfortunately is out of Canada on parliamentary business, the hon. member for Windsor-Walkerville (Mr. MacGuigan), who was an active member of the previous parliamentary committee and has been active obviously in this committee. His credentials as a protector of human rights are, I think, unchallenged in this House. Also the hon. member for Lafontaine-Rosemont (Mr. Lachance) was very active and concerned on the question of wiretap. He examined every word of these amendments very carefully, both with me and my officials.

In working out the amendments I met, in the course of discussion of this whole bill, with a group consisting of the criminal justice chairman of the Canadian Bar Association, with Mr. Borovoy of the Canadian Liberties Association, and with Arthur Whaley, president of the Criminal Lawyers Association of Toronto. In their brief they were very critical of some aspects of the wiretap amendments, and I should like to read to the House what they said:

Apart from the welcome restrictions on the bugging of places ordinarily used by solicitors, nowhere do these amendments even confront the dragnet impact of electronic surveillance. On the contrary, the government bill would increase even further the ambit of permissible surveillance and decrease even further the safeguards for personal privacy.

That was said before further amendments were made to the bill. They went on to say:

Unfortunately, the new restriction on the bugging of places used by solicitors could not even cope—and so on. They went on to say:

Even if all of these government amendments had been in force at that time, there would have been nothing to prevent the eavesdropping which took place on the conversations of all the other lawyers and their clients. At a minimum, in our view, the law should be further amended so as to prohibit the interception of privileged communications beyond those which a court has expressly authorized.

I examined those people and Mr. Borovoy made it very clear to me, speaking I take it on behalf of the Canadian Liberties Association, that it would be improper to give a blanket exemption against wiretapping to the legal profession and that they were opposed to it. The position that the civil liberties general counsel took was that we had to put into legislation a special regime to safeguard lawyers' communications and privileged communications on the basis, obviously, that the administration of justice requires that the citizen have an unfettered access and right to advice and counsel by a lawyer. That is precisely what is being done in this bill, and was precisely what was done in the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs where further amendments were made.

* * *

● (1750)

THE ROYAL ASSENT

Mr. Speaker: I have the honour to inform the House that a message has been received which is as follows:

Ottawa, July 14, 1977

Sir:

I have the honour to inform you that the Honourable Jean Beetz, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, in his capacity as Deputy Governor General, will proceed to the Senate Chamber today, the 14th day of July, at 5.45 p.m. for the purpose of giving the Royal Assent to certain bills.

The Royal Assent

I have the honour to be,
Sir,
Your obedient servant,
Pierre Trottier
Deputy Secretary to the Governor General

A message was delivered by the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod, as follows:

Mr. Speaker, the Honourable the Deputy Governor General desires the immediate attendance of this honourable House in the Chamber of the honourable the Senate.

Accordingly, Mr. Speaker with the House went up to the Senate Chamber.

● (1800)

[Translation]

And being returned:

Mr. Speaker informed the House that the Deputy Governor General had been pleased to give, in Her Majesty's name, the royal assent to the following bills.

Bill C-9, An Act to approve, give effect to and declare valid certain agreements between the Grand Council of the Crees (of Quebec), the Northern Quebec Inuit Association, the Government of Quebec, la Société d'énergie de la Baie James, la Société de développement de la Baie James, la Commission hydro-électrique de Québec and the Government of Canada and certain other related agreements to which the Government of Canada is a party—Chapter No. 32.

Bill C-25, An Act to extend the present laws in Canada that proscribe discrimination and that protect the privacy of individuals—Chapter No. 33.

Bill C-20, An Act respecting the office of the Auditor General of Canada and matters related or incidental thereto—Chapter No. 34.

Bill C-38, An Act to amend the Fisheries Act and to amend the Criminal Code in consequence thereof—Chapter No. 35.

Bill C-49, An Act to amend the Canada Pension Plan—Chapter No. 36.

Bill C-18, An Act to amend the Bretton Woods Agreements Act—Chapter No. 37.

Bill C-5, An Act to amend the Currency and Exchange Act and to amend other Acts in consequence thereof—Chapter No. 38.

Bill S-3, An Act to amend the Canadian and British Insurance Companies Act and the Foreign Insurance Companies Act—Chapter No. 39.

Bill C-283, An Act respecting the Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Act (Beauharnois-Salaberry)—Chapter No. 40.

Bill C-427, An Act respecting the Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Act (Blainville-Deux-Montagnes)—Chapter No. 41.

Bill C-392, An Act respecting the Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Act (Brampton-Georgetown)—Chapter No. 42.

Bill C-433, An Act respecting the Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Act (Cochrane)—Chapter No. 43.

Bill C-394, An Act respecting the Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Act (Huron-Bruce)—Chapter No. 44.

Bill C-406, An Act respecting the Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Act (Kootenay East-Revelstoke)—Chapter No. 45.

Bill C-418, An Act respecting the Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Act (Laval)—Chapter No. 46.

Bill C-405, An Act respecting the Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Act (Lethbridge-Foothills)—Chapter No. 47.

Bill C-422, An Act respecting the Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Act (London-Middlesex)—Chapter No. 48.

Bill C-428, An Act respecting the Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Act (Saint-Jacques)—Chapter No. 49.

Bill C-429, An Act respecting the Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Act (Saint-Léonard-Anjou)—Chapter No. 50

Bill C-393, An Act respecting the Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Act (Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe)—Chapter No. 51.

Bill C-1001, An Act to incorporate Continental Bank of Canada.

Mr. Speaker: It being six o'clock, I do now leave the chair until 8 p.m.

At 6.06 p.m. the House took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The House resumed at 8 p.m.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

CRIMINAL LAW AMENDMENT ACT, 1977

AMENDMENTS TO CRIMINAL CODE

The House resumed consideration of Bill C-51, to amend the Criminal Code, the Customs Tariff, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act and the Prisons and Reformatories Act, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs.

Hon. Ron Basford (Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, when we were interrupted at 5.45 p.m. by Black Rod I was concluding my speech. I said on this amendment that there were two questions: whether a lawyer should have a blanket exemption or whether we should write into the bill a special legislative regime to protect privileged communications which it is essential we protect. After a long discussion in the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs, the government put forward proposals and a number of amendments were introduced to provide additional safeguards which are set out in Clause 9 and section 178.13(1)(1.1) and (1.2) of the Criminal Code. These sections set out a legislative regime which protects solicitor-client communications and at the same time does not provide a blanket exemption, which, I believe, would be contrary to public policy. That is the purpose of the bill. This has been worked out in committee, and I think the amendment should be resisted.

Mr. Arnold Peters (Timiskaming): I am surprised at the minister's reluctance to accept these changes. The one that I am not particularly concerned about is motion No. 30 which refers to consultation with clients. I think that both lawyers and clients are crooks, as certainly the court finds on occasion, so I am not concerned about that clause.

Mr. Leggatt: That's a dumb statement.

Mr. Woolliams: I think so too.

Mr. Peters: I think that some of the clients are guilty and some are not guilty.

[Mr. Speaker.]

Mr. Leggatt: They are respectable people and you should not say such things in the House.

Mr. Peters: Not being very rich—

Mr. Leggatt: But you're dumb.

Mr. Peters: Not being very rich, I—

Some hon. Members: Dissension in the ranks.

Mr. Peters: —for my own part I know I am innocent—I thought everybody would know that. It is when I am guilty that I want a good lawyer, the best I can find.

Mr. Woolliams: That is nonsense.

Mr. Peters: I know this is strictly limited to lawyers and those interested in the law and that lay people are not supposed to get involved in that. There are not many lawyers, it seems to me—

Mr. Basford: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I am having considerable difficulty in hearing the hon. member for Timiskaming (Mr. Peters) and I hope the House will allow him to make his speech in peace and quiet so that I can hear him.

Some hon. Members: Ha, ha!

Mr. Peters: The point I was making and that the hon. member for New Westminster (Mr. Leggatt) is so touchy about is that I feel no compulsion to speak on motion No. 30 because I figure the lawyers will take care of the relationship between lawyers and clients. In the only case I ever heard of where the lawyer's telephone was tapped for the purpose of listening to the client, there was a court case, the evidence was found to be admissible, and not only the client but the lawyer also was convicted. So I am not concerned about that motion. Everybody knows about that case because it took place fairly recently.

• (2010)

I am concerned that the evidence obtained from an illegal wiretap can be admissible. I would have thought that we would have been happy enough to allow the police to wiretap illegally as they have done in the past and then use the evidence obtained. If crooks are caught, good; if not, that is fine too, but that evidence should not be used in court. Evidence illegitimately obtained should not be used. I do not know very much about law, but there are precedents which indicate that just because you steal something does not mean you can keep it. Usually you have to give it back, if it can be found. If it cannot be found, there are other penalties. The little boy who steals from a store keeps what he steals, but he is fined, and that is what we are doing with illegal wiretapping. We are letting the police keep the evidence obtained while we say it is illegal.

Mr. Leggatt: Don't accuse all my clients of being guilty.

Mr. Peters: I thought we had left motion No. 30. Quite frankly, I admit I came out of that a little worse for wear. I will leave motion No. 30 alone. I want to deal with motion No. 31.

Mr. Woolliams: It doesn't matter if you listen to everybody in the world.

Mr. Peters: That is my point. I have always suspected that many of the phones in this building were tapped, and there are reasons to think they were. That is a very easy thing to do. It was easy to tap telephones in the building for a long time because the lines ran through my office. To indicate how easy it was I attached my tape recorder on to them once and recorded a couple of conversations.

Some hon. Members: Shame!

Mr. Peters: I am trying to prove my point. I did not know whose conversations they were because I am not familiar with the telephone exchange system, but I am sure that after a couple of weeks of listening I could have found out. It is very easy to tap a telephone.

Mr. Woolliams: What about bugging front rooms or kitchens?

Mr. Peters: The caucus room of the NDP was once bugged.

Mr. Woolliams: Then you should support every amendment.

Mr. Peters: A couple of weeks ago a microphone in our caucus room was left on after a committee meeting. I looked at it and tried to turn it off. I could not turn it off, so I left it on. Nobody cared one way or the other. In most cases people do not care about listening in or eavesdropping. But they do care if action is taken as a result of that eavesdropping. Worse still, information can be used for blackmail.

Mr. Woolliams: Are you using this debate because of the unemployment insurance bill?

Mr. Peters: I presume the hon. member has not been paying much attention. I do not want to get involved in answering that question.

Mr. Woolliams: I am right in that regard. All you are doing is using this debate. You know nothing about it. You don't want the unemployment insurance bill.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please. Hon. members who wish to debate this motion may rise in their places and be recognized in due course. Right now the hon. member for Timiskaming (Mr. Peters) has the floor. I think we should listen to him.

Mr. Boulanger: He has nothing to say.

Mr. Peters: If the hon. member for Mercier (Mr. Boulanger) makes a speech, it will be the first time he has done so for a long time. The other hon. member who is doing the yapping thinks he knows much about the law. If he knows as much as he thinks he does, he will do all right.

Laymen have something to say and, whether hon. members like it or not, I have something to say. If we agree with the minister's proposition, we will change our whole system of justice.

Mr. Woolliams: Any time you make a change in the Criminal Code, you change our system of justice.

Mr. Peters: That is like hearing somebody recite from the almanac. Perhaps I do not put things in a legalistic and impressive way, but if something is taken away illegally, it usually has to be given back. Most of the other countries in the world agree with that.

Mr. Woolliams: History has not proved that to be true.

Mr. Peters: In Geneva there is a world court which makes decisions, and just because the police are charged with maintaining law and order they should not be able to do so in any way they want. The last amendments we passed regarding the legal use of some form of wiretapping contained some fairly large concessions. It was a little bit like the camel in the tent. The camel asked the Arab if it would be all right to put his head in the tent because it was cold outside. When he got his head in, he wanted his shoulders in, and soon the Arab was outside. It seems to me that that is true with the police. They have 30 days in which to report wiretaps, and I do not know if they report them or not.

People do not know when their telephones are tapped. Not too long ago I was involved in a matter in which a wiretap was used. A cabinet minister was also involved. I do not know if that cabinet minister was notified that his telephone was tapped.

Mr. Woolliams: What is his name?

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Honourable.

Mr. Peters: An honourable minister.

Mr. Woolliams: I know he was honourable, but what was his name? Let's get the facts.

Mr. Peters: I do not want to get that particular gentleman in trouble, but after making inquiries I was under the impression that a third party telephone had been tapped. My conversations would have been involved, and I said to the inspector of the RCMP that he did not need me to tell him anything. He had the tape. As it turned out, he did not have the tape. The tap was not on the right telephone.

Mr. Woolliams: Then you are in favour of the motion.

Mr. Peters: Many conversations were on that tape because the tap was in place for a long period of time. Most of the conversations were not of a questionable nature.

• (2020)

Despite the volatile nature of the mover of this amendment it is one that I think all members, not only those in the legal profession but those interested in the rights of the individual, could bring themselves to support.

I honestly believe that the general public is not concerned about the police using wiretaps if they go through the procedures that are required for other kinds of searches. I do not think they are violently opposed provided there is some justification.

Mr. Woolliams: You mean for the police or for the wiretap?

Mr. Peters: On a normal Friday night or Saturday night in Ottawa—

Mr. Woolliams: What about an abnormal Saturday night?

Mr. Peters: An abnormal one would be one the hon. member is involved in, and it would probably be pretty abnormal—subnormal, maybe.

As I understand it, 19 or 20 warrants would be issued for searches, and in some places they do not have warrants but they must have permission from somebody to do the search. I hear very little objection from anybody, even those who are guilty—I do not have that kind of relationship with them but I do not hear them complaining—

Mr. Woolliams: There is one thing about you; you are making the most intelligent speech I have ever heard here.

Mr. Peters: The ones who do not go to a lawyer are the ones who do not worry because they do not think they are guilty. That is true as well with the people who are involved in a respectable way—

Mr. Woolliams: What about unemployment insurance? Are you against the baby bonuses?

Mr. Peters: Mr. Speaker, I have not been in a position to worry about baby bonuses for sometime so that subject does not concern me as it does some other people. I believe that if a warrant is obtained and there is some reason for it, there would be no outcry from the public. I think the public would violently disagree with the government's proposal to allow the police an almost unlimited use of wiretapping, however, simply on the basis that if they find anything they would be able to use it. If they did not find anything there would be no point in doing it.

I am one of those who believes that the police will wiretap if they want. In most police departments they will shortly be in a position to eavesdrop without wiretapping as such. When that comes about there will be few places where criminals habitually gather that the police will not be able to obtain information.

I believe the country is really in a pretty stupid state when it will agree to this kind of extension. It has been used, it has been tested, and it has not proved very valuable.

I think the Solicitor General (Mr. Fox) recently indicated the number of wiretaps executed by the force he is responsible for, and the number of convictions that came as a result. It was not a large number.

Mr. Woolliams: It was 1,062 wiretaps and 13 convictions.

Mr. Peters: It is really a very small number of reported wiretaps—only three per day all across the country. It is not very extensive.

Mr. Woolliams: Then you are going to vote against the amendment?

Mr. Peters: Mr. Speaker, is there something wrong with my equipment?

Mr. Woolliams: There certainly is.

Mr. Peters: I keep getting an echo that is not really an echo, Mr. Speaker. It is distorted as it comes back to me. We should try to cut down the echo in the Chamber. I know it is not going to produce any results, but I do know something—

Mr. Woolliams: What do you mean by that?

Mr. Peters: The hon. member is going to lose the amendment because he is working so damned hard to muck it up himself. I think he is going to lose it, and I think it is a very good amendment. It is the kind of amendment the Canadian public should think about very seriously. I do not think the Minister of Justice (Mr. Basford) should ask for this kind of power unless there is a demonstrated need. I do not think the bill as it is worded should pass, but I think this amendment should receive the support of all hon. members.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Max Saltsman (Waterloo-Cambridge): Mr. Speaker, I was sitting very quietly in my seat and had the privilege of listening to my colleague, the hon. member for Timiskaming (Mr. Peters), who served to arouse the intellectual juices, as it were, and I felt called upon to deal with some of the serious issues he has raised.

I intend to vote against the amendment though not out of any disrespect for the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams) whom I respect very highly and who, I am sure, has given very careful thought to the wording of the amendment. I should like to outline my reasons.

Mr. Woolliams: Which amendment?

Mr. Saltsman: Motion No. 30, the one dealing with lawyers. Most people—and that includes me—do not like the idea of wiretapping. For that matter, do they like the idea of getting a ticket or being stopped by police for no reason?

People want the most freedom that is available to them. I can understand the desire for unlimited freedom, but on the other hand most people also want society to have a sense of security. Most people want a police force that has adequate means at its disposal to deal with crime. Most people want both things, and the dilemma for people who are framing our laws, or for legislators responsible for laws, is to find some kind of balance between unlimited freedom and the need for security. Society walks that constant tightrope of choice.

What bothers me about much of what goes on in the debates or interventions I have heard on this subject, is the refusal to recognize that you cannot have both conditions. You cannot have the unlimited freedom that all of us would desire, you cannot do away with wiretapping, you cannot do away with policemen, you cannot do away with surveillance, and still have the security you want. The question is: what kind of balance do you strike, and do you strike that balance fairly?

I think up until recently our society has tended to go in the direction of absolute freedom. To a very large extent we have been a civil libertarian society; virtually every piece of legislation introduced has increased the protection of the individual and has tried to diminish the role of the police officer.

I think the time has come when society says that precious as those absolute freedoms are, the need for security in our society is also important, and in fact the police have been hamstrung. We have gone too far in terms of preventing the police from doing their job. This is what needs to be faced openly. Just look at the dilemma; you cannot have both things at the same time. It is easy enough to say we are all for the police, we are all for security, we are all for civil liberties. We must make this decision. Trade-offs, never pleasant, popular or easy to make, must be made. Members must be honest with themselves and say what they are doing. I shall try to do this.

• (2030)

I admit that once I was much more fearful of authorities than I am today, much more apprehensive of the police and of the kinds of institutions which existed when I was born, than I am today. I have worked hard all my life to restrict some of the unlimited power those institutions wielded. Those powers needed restricting. The concern for civil liberties was not strong in our society. I take a moment to pay tribute to those who fought for civil liberties, and fought for some of the changes which have come about in our society. But like everything else in society, the pendulum never comes to rest in the middle. It swings too much one way or the other, and must be brought back to the middle, as it were. And that is the dilemma, or crisis if you like, which faces law makers. That is the dilemma which faces people like me who, at one time, may have been considered radicals, who were against authority, who tried to curtail the power of authority. But there comes a time when you ask if our authorities have enough power to do the job they are supposed to do, in order to deal with our society's problems. Frankly, I do not think they have, and they ought to have such power.

Mr. Woolliams: Surely you should be the last person to say that.

Mr. Saltsman: Mr. Speaker, I do not suggest our society is more lawless than societies preceding it. I do not think it is. I think our society is probably more law-abiding than any I can recall in history. People talk of the good old days, as though the good old days were secure old days. They were not. I think the public's desire for security has increased enormously. Our people want security in terms of social security measures like old age pensions and hospital insurance, and in terms of protection from crime. Actually, to some extent society has changed and our legislation reflects the changes which have taken place in society.

Basically, the question we must decide comes down to this: do we trust the police of Canada? Do we trust the courts of Canada?

An hon. Member: No.

Mr. Saltsman: Voices at the back say, no. They don't trust the police; they do not trust the courts. I want to go on record as saying the courts are not always right and the police are not always right, but if you cannot trust them, what is to become of society?

If your police force is not effective you must change it.

Mr. Woolliams: Yes, and appoint Liberals to the Bench.

Mr. Saltsman: But at some point you must say if you have confidence in our society and confidence in the people who were appointed to positions of authority.

Mr. Woolliams: That's what the Germans thought. The hon. member for New Westminster (Mr. Leggatt) does not agree with the hon. member's opposition. The Germans put trust in their law, police and courts, but we cannot say we should have trust in the system.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please.

Mr. Saltsman: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the strong positions some members take on this question. Unfortunately, some of their arguments involve non sequiturs. Anyone who advocates giving the police more powers, is in favour of increased security and expresses confidence in our courts is immediately tagged as being in favour of a Nazi state. Members who argue this way are grossly unfair and dishonest. I have not questioned their motives. I have not said that adoption of the hon. member's amendment will lead to all women on our streets being raped, or to the breakdown of law in our society.

At one time people talked of extreme authoritarianism, but now people speak of extreme civil libertarians. If you propose measures they do not like, they immediately accuse you of being in favour of a Nazi state. They are wrong and not fair. Mr. Speaker, I spent five years in the war; I saw Buchenwald and Dachau. I had a personal involvement, and nobody fears the Nazi state more than I do. And if I thought that in order to avoid the Nazi state we need to live more insecurely, I would advocate more insecurity. But, Mr. Speaker, we can have security. It is possible to respect the police and our institutions and not live in a Nazi state.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Saltsman: On the contrary, as those who know history will tell you, the Nazi state arose because there was disrespect for parliament in the Weimar republic, because the people had disrespect for the police and disrespect for the courts. Their society broke down, which is why those camps came into existence.

Mr. Woolliams: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order, which the hon. member may appreciate. Surely he knows that the Nazis burned the Reichstag and blamed the fire on the Communists.

Mr. Saltsman: I appreciate the interventions of my colleague for Calgary North, but suspect he is dealing with some other debate, because I do not know how his remarks are germane to this one.

Mr. Woolliams: You, yourself, raised the subject.

Mr. Saltsman: I appreciate the hon. member's knowledge of history. At least he knows some names, if not the facts or the events.

We face certain difficulties. I will stick my neck out. I have stuck my neck out previously and, no doubt, the press will castigate me tomorrow as will my colleagues opposite. I disapprove of those who say, "You must not listen to authority, because it is always wrong; you must oppose the courts, because they are always wrong, you must oppose the police, because they are always wrong." Such sentiments are destructive of our society. I do not mind standing up and taking flak for my views, for I put them forward sincerely.

I intend to vote against the amendment, and have set out some of the reasons for my position. I have been of this opinion for some time now, and have no hesitation in saying that if events prove me wrong, which they may—

Mr. Woolliams: They will.

Mr. Saltsman: —I shall be of a contrary opinion. If this legislation leads to abuses, we shall change it.

Mr. Woolliams: It will be too late.

Mr. Saltsman: If we are not in this House, others will be; they will fight the legislation or amend it. Parliament does not end with us. It does not end tomorrow. We have seen bad legislation passed, and amended it.

It is time to give our courts and police the authority they need to fight organized crime and the other problems in society. Hardly a day goes by without some member of this House, in the opposition or on the government back benches, rising to castigate the government for insensitivity to organized crime, or for allowing organized crime to flourish. You will hear these sentiments time and again. I do not mind members castigating the government. It deserves it. But when the chips are down and the government brings in a measure with which we can fight organized crime effectively, it is the opposition's responsibility, after scrutinizing and criticizing, to say, yes, this legislation will do good. You cannot advocate stricter control of organized crime, and resist legislation which seeks to control it.

• (2040)

You cannot have it both ways. As a member of the opposition I have to say this. I have a bee in my bonnet that it is time for me to release, and it has to do with capital punishment. I have been here for three votes on capital punishment. On each one I took enormous political risks, as did others who voted in favour of abolition. What concerns me is that many of the people who voted for abolition and were gung-ho for capital punishment, which would not have done a damned thing for the security of this country by taking a few crazy people and hanging them after the fact—

An hon. Member: How do you increase security by doing that?

Mr. Saltsman: Sure, it makes you look great. It makes you feel fine, but it does not help the security of the people. When you bring in a piece of legislation like this, one which will increase the security of the people—sure, it is not dramatic like hanging someone; it isn't so expurging—they suddenly become libertarians. They suddenly become extreme civil libertarians. They are willing to hang, but they are not willing to wiretap.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Saltsman: I find it a strange situation, Mr. Speaker, and I apologize to you, Mr. Speaker, for some of the language I have used. It is not often I use language of that kind, but I get angry at some of these things. I think, sometimes, that anger can be excused.

I have gone through a heck of a lot with regard to capital punishment. I have been accused of being a fascist, or a Nazi, or as being in favour of a Nazi state because I believe policemen should be trusted and because I believe the courts should be trusted. I have had enough of it.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Saltsman: Let us deal with one other fact. Lawyers, it is argued, should be exempt. Why lawyers? Lawyers are admirable people. But are they so admirable that they should be exempt? I listened to the hon. member for Prince George-Peace River (Mr. Oberle) who talked about those people with yellow stripes down the sides of their pants. They are nice people—but they are only people; they are only policemen and they have to be watched. Are lawyers not also only people who occasionally have to be watched? What kind of special confidence exists between a lawyer and his client that should be denied to me an M.P. between me and my constituent? Yet I am not exempt under this legislation.

What kind of special confidence is there between a lawyer and his client that does not exist between a man or a woman and a priest? Yet a priest is not exempt.

What kind of confidence exists between a lawyer and his client that is denied to the psychiatrist and his patient? Yet they are not exempt. Why should lawyers be exempt?

I do not believe lawyers should be spoken of any more harshly than any other group of people. Yet I do not think they are entitled to privileges which are not available to other people.

Mr. Leggatt: Expand the exemption then.

Mr. Saltsman: My hon. friend says "expand the exemption". That is perfectly logical. It is a logical position for an extreme libertarian to take. I respect my hon. friend for that. But that is not what the amendment is saying. And for those reasons, Mr. Speaker—I have a few others—I do not think the amendment should be supported. I do not think the amendment makes a great deal of sense—at least not to me.

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, I had not intended to take part in this debate. Like my desk mate, the hon. member for Waterloo-Cambridge (Mr. Saltsman), I am not a lawyer, but I do not think civil liberties, democracy, and freedom are the exclusive preserve of lawyers and that it is only lawyers who can talk about the basic principles which are contained in this bill.

As I listened to the hon. member for Waterloo-Cambridge speak I thought he must have gone to sleep two or three years ago and not heard or read about what has gone on. I am not talking about nazi Germany. I think members who compare what this bill will do, amended or unamended, with what happened in nazi Germany are way off course. I do not think there is any relationship, either today or in the foreseeable future, with what happened in nazi Germany, whether this bill is amended or not. But surely what we have learned in the past two years or so as a result of events in Canada, the United States and other countries, should have convinced us of one thing. I have in mind the dictum that power corrupts and that absolute power corrupts absolutely. We know this happens in countries which are governed by authoritarian regimes. We know this is what happens in fascist countries or communist countries. But we need only look at democratic countries to see that the same thing could happen there to a lesser degree.

It is only five or six years ago that there was complete confidence in the incorruptibility of the RCMP, in the perfection of the RCMP, and if one reads letters written to newspaper editors one realizes there was the same confidence in the United States in the FBI and the CIA. The American people have now learned from bitter experience that nobody can be given complete power, that no person or agency can be entrusted with absolute power. This is what the hon. member for Waterloo-Cambridge forgot to say. Nobody, lawyer or no lawyer, should have a protection which other people do not enjoy.

Mr. Woolliams: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, I appreciate that the hon. member is delivering a very good speech, but I want to point out that nobody on this side, or even in his own party, suggested lawyers should enjoy any special privilege. The privilege is not for lawyers but for Canadian citizens generally who deal with doctors, lawyers, and psychiatrists. I hope the hon. member will quote us correctly in that regard. I don't give a damn about lawyers.

Mr. Orlikow: If the hon. member had waited for a few minutes he would have heard me say precisely what he suggested I say. Citizens of the United States have learned through bitter experience that the police can make mistakes, that police can be involved in activities which are not only immoral but which are illegal. They learned this as they have learned about practices in which the FBI were involved. In the last few weeks senior officials in the national police force in Great Britain have been convicted of crimes and sentenced to prison terms of five to eight years for taking bribes. Some of these things may, indeed, have happened in Canada. After all, the Solicitor General (Mr. Fox) has admitted that the RCMP carried out an illegal break-in of l'Agence Presse in Montreal. It is now obvious that if the RCMP itself was not involved in a break-in and theft of documents in Toronto at the Praxis organization, it was in receipt of stolen documents and kept them for seven years. They did not report that they had possession of those documents either to the organization whose property had been burglarized or to the metropolitan police in Toronto.

• (2050)

We do not yet know what role the RCMP played in Alberta, but we do know that as a result of the hearings of the Laycraft commission the attorney general of Alberta has expressed some very serious misgivings about the activities of the RCMP in that province. The chief of police of Winnipeg has also expressed some very sharp criticisms about what the RCMP may or may not have done in that city in connection with the Alberta inquiry. There have been press comments on supposed activities of the RCMP in Nova Scotia. I have a great deal of respect for the RCMP, as I have for all police forces in this country. They do a very necessary and valuable job. But I believe, as does the Solicitor General (Mr. Fox), that the RCMP, like any other agency of government, should be responsible to the people of this country.

I am not a lawyer but I have read something of the history of this country, and I have what seems to me to be the mistaken assumption that one of the basic principles of British justice is that a person is considered innocent until he is proven guilty. I would assume that a person in difficulty with the law, or a person who believes he may be charged with some offence by the police, would want an opportunity, whether he be innocent or guilty, to discuss what he should do and how he should act so far as the police are concerned, with his lawyer, knowing that the consultation he has with that lawyer will be kept private between the two of them. He should assume that he has the right to tell his lawyer everything without somebody listening in on the conversation.

My seatmate for Waterloo-Cambridge wants me to assume that the police will take action to tap a lawyer's telephone only when they are 100 per cent certain there is guilt, that they would not do so unless they had good reason. I would assume that is correct, Mr. Speaker, and I accept that that will be their intention. But the police are only human and I have every right to believe that, being human, the police will sometimes make a mistake. So long as the police, like everybody else, are capable of making a mistake, I say that we must protect the innocent. We must protect the right of people to discuss their situation with their legal counsel, confident that they will not be listened into by somebody else.

I simply cannot understand how the Minister of Justice can ask the members of this parliament to accept a provision which provides that the police can listen in on a telephone conversation with a lawyer if they have reason to believe that someone is involved in something which is illegal, provided they get the approval of a judge to do so. One does not have to be a lawyer, or to be in court every day or every week, to know that in every city in this country there are judges and judges. Some judges will be extremely careful in how they use the authority the minister proposes to give them in this provision of the bill, judges who would want a complete explanation from the police who are asking for permission to wiretap—

Mr. Woolliams: No, no, no, that is not the law.

Mr. Orlikow: I am saying "if" this is the law.

Mr. Woolliams: Mr. Speaker, may I rise again? I like my good friend's speech and I can see that his party is divided, that its members are fighting, but the law is not that way. We have just had a case in the courts of British Columbia which says that you cannot look behind—no, don't get up, Mr. Speaker, please.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please.

Mr. Woolliams: The hon. member is making a misstatement of the law. He is absolutely wrong.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): I am sure the hon. member is very serious about what he wants to discuss, but I fail to see a point of order; the hon. member's point is mostly a point of debate. I suggest we listen to the hon. member.

Mr. Woolliams: I want to finish what I was saying, with the greatest respect. The law is that the judge says that you cannot cross-examine even in reference to the application for authorization.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please.

Mr. Woolliams: That is the law. But please let us not have this drivel.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please. The hon. member for Winnipeg North (Mr. Orlikow).

Mr. Orlikow: Mr. Speaker, I wish the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams) were not so possessive in regard to his amendments to the bill as to feel it necessary to correct every member who tries to say a few words. If indeed I have mistated or misinterpreted one of the sections of this clause, I am sure I am not the first member today to do so, and I am certain I will not be the last. I am simply saying that in my view, and on the basis of what I have read and heard, there are judges and judges. Some will co-operate with the police much more quickly and easily than others.

If this section is left in, I am sure that the police, whether the RCMP, provincial police or municipal police, in any city would be able to find a judge who would authorize any and every request for permission to wiretap which is made. I cling to what may be an old-fashioned and no longer valid conclusion, that if the law leans in the direction of favouring a person it should lean in the direction of protecting the few innocents rather than convicting a few more of the guilty.

● (2100)

I would suggest to the hon. member for Waterloo-Cambridge (Mr. Saltsman) that he ought to take the time to read the evidence given by a former attorney general of the United States, Ramsey Clark, who managed that department in a country which has, unfortunately, a great deal more crime than we have in Canada, and who made a very simple and plain statement that the use of wiretap by the police in that country was virtually useless in terms of the conviction of criminals, including criminals who are part of organized crime. The proposal to permit wiretapping with the permission of judges does not meet the needs of this country. We do not have a democratic society in which we have gone too far in the direction of giving people civil liberties. Democracy requires giving people the fullest possible rights and protections.

To my knowledge there is not a member in this House who has followed the counsel given in the United States by very competent and highly respected organizations such as the American Civil Liberties Union, which is opposed to all wiretapping. That is not the case here in this parliament. Not a single member has advocated the complete abolition of wiretapping.

Those of us who support this amendment are not opposing the police any more than did members on both sides of the House who ignored the advice of the police when they voted for the abolition of capital punishment. All those members who voted for the abolition of capital punishment were singularly unimpressed by the arguments of the police in favour of retaining capital punishment. Just as I was prepared to listen and reject the advice of the police on capital punishment, I have listened to the advice of the police on this question, and to the advice of others, and I have come to the conclusion we need to restrict much more the rights of the police to engage in wiretapping. Therefore I intend to vote for this amendment, and I suggest to the hon. member for Waterloo-Cambridge that he should re-examine the evidence that has been given on this question.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

[Translation]

Mr. Gilbert Rondeau (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, I would like to say a few words about the amendments introduced by the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams) dealing with Bill C-51.

First, I would like to make it clear that we have always been in favour of law and order—there is no doubt about that. We back perhaps 100 per cent the police departments to maintain law and order in Canada, and we are also in favour of establishing courts of justice and for security. On the other hand, when we examine the history of all those countries where with the same arguments that are being made, namely in the name of security, they want to put up wiretaps and make them available to all police departments in Canada, we fully realize that this gives opposite results.

Mr. Speaker, police reforms are currently under way in Quebec. Everybody knows that municipalities and cities today have lost, not control over police departments but the sense of democracy in that they can no longer from a practical point of view fire those policemen who no longer meet the needs of those municipalities. There are hundreds of cases in Quebec where city councils wanted to fire policemen. Those problems have been before our courts for several years and are not over yet. I could give striking examples, Mr. Speaker.

Furthermore, there is talk at present of taking away from Quebec municipalities the authority they now have over police departments to transfer that authority to the government of Quebec. In that way, the police departments in our municipalities and cities will become with respect to discipline and for all other areas responsible to the government of Quebec. That means that the further away we move authority from the people, the less security we have. This legislation will only trouble ordinary people because criminals, bandits, those who may fear bugging are smart enough not to use the telephone to consult their lawyers. On the other hand, 99.9 per cent of the people—honest people—will have to fear consulting their lawyer because they will not know if his office is not bugged when it is the bandits who should be under surveillance.

Mr. Speaker, this legislation will only bother people as a whole, but it will not solve anything as far as crime is concerned because those who will be directly concerned by this legislation will be smart enough to find ways to elude wiretapping of any police force. Mr. Speaker, municipalities in the province of Quebec—because it will be an ever more critical issue in that province—will have less and less power over police forces and authority will be more and more in the hands of the state. It is also established that the more we rely on the state for our security, the less the ordinary citizen is protected.

For all these reasons and many others, particularly because this legislation will do nothing but annoy honest people in the province of Quebec as well as in other provinces, without changing anything in the crime situation in Canada, I have an obligation to vote for the motion, not out of fanaticism for civil rights, but for liberty alone. I will have an obligation to vote for the amendments of the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams).

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Is the House ready for the question?

Some hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the said motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Pursuant to section 11 of Standing Order 75, the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

Motions Nos. 33 and 34 will be grouped for debate and will be voted on together.

Mr. Eldon M. Woolliams (Calgary North) moved:

Motion No. 33.

That Bill C-51, an act to amend the Criminal Code, the Customs Tariff, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act and the Prisons and Reformatories Act, be amended in clause 12 by striking out lines 30 to 33 at page 52 and substituting the following therefor:

"which the authorization was given, notify in".

Motion No. 34.

That Bill C-51, an act to amend the Criminal Code, the Customs Tariff, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act and the Prisons and Reformatories Act, be amended in clause 12 by striking out lines 44 to 47 at page 52 and lines 1 to 27 at page 53.

● (2110)

He said: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the applause, particularly that from the government side. I hope they will put their applause with their votes.

Mr. Fox: Count on it.

Mr. Woolliams: The hon. lady shakes her head, but her grandmother would not agree. She is a real Conservative and the hon. lady knows that. Let us get down to the gritty facts.

An hon. Member: Gritty facts?

Mr. Woolliams: That is right, gritty. What we are doing here is talking about notice. As the Code now stands, within 90 days notice must be given to the person who is the object of a wiretap. I think I covered the subject pretty fully this afternoon. The amendments before us now allow a period of three years. It is within the discretion of the judge. What will happen? There will be a form affidavit which they sign and swear to, a form order, and the police will get the right to wiretap everybody for 60 days. It is a 100 per cent gain. The person being wiretapped does not have to be notified for three years. That is what it is all about.

This afternoon I spoke for almost 40 minutes. Notification does not have to be given for three years. Let me put it in very broad terms. By that time the lawyer may be dead, the accused may be dead, the judge may be dead, and even those who put on the wiretap may be dead.

Mr. Peters: Do you expect a nuclear bomb?

Mr. Woolliams: I am going to quote the hon. member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands (Mr. Douglas) and then resume my seat. He was premier of my home province. I did not always agree with him. However, he was a distinguished scholar, distinguished as an academic, and distinguished as the premier of my province. He put his finger on the whole matter, He said forget about authorization and wiretap everybody, because it is going to be evidence any how. Regardless of whether notice is given, it will not make any difference.

When I spoke this afternoon, I expended a lot of energy. I will not waste the time of the House tonight. However, as I watch the division in the NDP—

Mr. Leggatt: There is no division here, only a tiny crack.

Mr. Woolliams: It is not. The hon. member for New Westminster (Mr. Leggatt) certainly disagrees with the hon. member for—

Mr. Leggatt: Waterloo-Cambridge (Mr. Saltsman).

Mr. Woolliams: Right. Thank God they don't think alike. If we all thought alike, there would be no thinking. We are always criticizing the press. There they sit, two out of 70. I say this to them. Once in a while the Tories do not agree. They think that is a terrible thing if you do not agree. They think we should all be like the Liberals. They all agree and they have a great party. I say thank God we have some disagreement in our party. If we all thought alike, there would be no thinking.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Woolliams: I was very proud of the NDP tonight. That is something I have always admired about them. They did disagree. That is healthy. I hope the press will be as fair with them as they have been with us.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Hnatyshyn: What a wonderful line.

[Mr. Woolliams.]

Mr. Woolliams: I realize that. I will tell you why tonight is the greatest debate. Let me be really honest. I will tell you why the debate is better than average. Members opposite were at a big party tonight in the office of the Minister of Justice (Mr. Basford). There was a big party in room 200 for the Conservatives. That is very healthy. We meet and we think.

I made my speech this afternoon. I repeat that if we extend the notification from 90 days to three years, God help the law abiding citizens.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Stuart Leggatt (New Westminster): Mr. Speaker, I wish to refer the House to the existing legislation that we are presently trying to amend through amendments which the Minister of Justice (Mr. Basford) has presented. The existing legislation deals with the question of notice. The Minister of Justice has been up in this House over and over again saying, "Have faith in our judges, have faith in our police." The hon. member for Waterloo-Cambridge (Mr. Saltsman), when speaking about five minutes ago, said have faith in our judges, have faith in our police. I want to read to the Minister of Justice and the House the law that he is seeking to change. I quote from page 17:

> —to the judge who granted the authorization that the investigation is continuing and the judge is of the opinion that the interests of justice require that a delay of a determinate reasonable length be granted, in which case the judge may grant a determinate reasonable delay."

I do not know whether the House is in the mood to listen to something that is as mundane as the law we are attempting to amend. I know that is a bit mind-bending for a lot of people here tonight. What we are trying to do with the amendment the Minister of Justice has presented to this House is to take away the discretion of the courts and say that the notification period shall be up to three years.

I would rather trust the judges of this land, and that is what the hon. member for Calgary-North (Mr. Woolliams) is attempting to do with the amendment we have before us. There is no reason in the world to change the law as it stands. It has worked well. It gives the courts a review process that is absolutely vital and necessary in terms of wiretapping. The trouble with this debate is that it gets so simplistic no one looks at what we are trying to change.

I have great respect for the hon. member for Waterloo-Cambridge. I have respect for his intelligence and intellect. He is an extremely astute member. However, what he has failed to perceive is that liberty is a very delicate flower. The species has developed liberty in a unique and unusual way. Somebody has to defend liberty once in a while because the trends are all against liberty.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Leggatt: Unless somebody waters and fertilizes the flower, it will die. The Minister of Justice, the government, and the Liberal party have thrown salt on that delicate flower. They are going to kill that flower.

● (2120)

An hon. Member: Salt or Saltsman?

Mr. Leggatt: I ask you, Mr. Speaker, and I ask the House to think of what you are doing in terms of this wiretap legislation. Why not leave it up to the judges to exercise their discretion to determine the notification period? Then the judges can protect the liberty of the subject. I do not have any confidence in the Minister of Justice protecting the liberty of the subject, none at all, so I support the amendment, and so does my party.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): The question is on motions Nos. 33 and 34. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the said motions?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): All those in favour of the motions will please say yea.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Pursuant to section 11 of Standing Order 75, the recorded division for the proposed motions stands deferred.

Motions Nos. 35, 36, 37 and 38 will be grouped together for debate. The vote on motion No. 35 will dispose of motions Nos. 36 and 37. The question on motion No. 38 will be put separately.

Mr. Stuart Leggatt (New Westminster) moved:

Motion No. 35.

That Bill C-51, An Act to amend the Criminal Code, the Customs Tariff, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act and the Prisons and Reformatories Act, be amended in Clause 24 by striking out lines 37 to 45 at page 68 and lines 1 to 12 at page 69.

Motion No. 36.

That Bill C-51, An Act to amend the Criminal Code, the Customs Tariff, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act and the Prisons and Reformatories Act, be amended in Clause 26 by striking out lines 32 to 37 at page 70 and substituting the following therefor:

"'"11. Notwithstanding anything in this or any other Act, the Board shall be required, in considering whether or not parole should be granted or revoked, to conduct a hearing in accordance with the principles of natural justice."'

Motion No. 37.

That Bill C-51, An Act to amend the Criminal Code, the Customs Tariff, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act and the Prisons and Reformatories Act, be amended in Clause 29 by adding immediately after line 14 at page 73 the following:

"(4) Where a case is referred to the Board pursuant to subsection (3), the Board shall within 30 days from the date of the reference either cancel suspension or hold a hearing pursuant to section 11."

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the said motions?

Mr. Leggatt: We have now considered the wiretap provision and are on questions of parole, which form a very significant part of this legislation.

I am surprised there was not more interest on the part of parliamentarians about the subject of the penitentiary system. I might say that I appreciate the fact that an all-party committee has reported on the question of penitentiaries in this country. It is an important report. I am glad to see the Solicitor General (Mr. Fox) here tonight listening to the debate with some interest.

With regard to the amendments before us under Bill C-51, only one of them relates in any way to the recommendations made by the all-party committee on changes in the penitentiary system, and I am disappointed that at this point we have not yet seen more action.

Perhaps, first of all, I could deal with motions Nos. 35 and 36. Motion No. 35 simply asks that the Parole Board act in accordance with the principles of natural justice in making its determination. I have left the motion general because the principles of natural justice are easily defined by the courts. It is again an attempt to allow the courts an opportunity to exercise their discretion. It is an opportunity to allow the judges to take a look at the parole provisions and ensure that the Parole Board is acting in a fair way. I am not suggesting that we superimpose a whole new set of jurisprudence on the Parole Board. I am only suggesting, in view of the disruption that we have seen in our prison systems, that the Parole Board act in accordance with the principles of natural justice so that there can be more peace and calm within the prison system.

I am not suggesting that the Parole Board should be any more lenient than it is. My argument is that it should have been stronger in some cases. The board leans in the other direction. That does not mean it should not also act in accordance with the rules of natural justice. So, quite simply, motions Nos. 35 and 36 ask that the general principle of the rules of natural justice apply to the operations of the Parole Board.

Mr. Eldon M. Woolliams (Calgary North): It gives me a great deal of pleasure to support the motion of the hon. member for New Westminster (Mr. Leggatt). Let me tell you, Mr. Speaker, what has always been my concern with regard to the Parole Board. It is that many times the Parole Board is blamed for weekend leaves which are granted by the wardens of penitentiaries. If these amendments are accepted, hearings will be held, as they should be, in every penitentiary in Canada. There are one million unemployed in Canada. We do not have enough people to process the applications. Perhaps this is where we should employ some personnel and train them to listen to reason when hearing the evidence of the incarcerated. I say this is a good amendment and I support it 100 per cent. My party will vote for it.

Hon. Francis Fox (Solicitor General): Mr. Speaker, may I say briefly that, as I see it, motion No. 36 requires the board to conduct hearings when it has decided to grant, deny or revoke parole. Motion No. 35 is consequential since it would delete the power of the governor in council to make regulations, prescribing when a hearing must be held, the information to be furnished prior to the hearing, the entitlement to assistance at the hearing, and the occasions on which reasons for decisions would have to be given by the board.

It is a matter of principle on the question of the hearing, and there is no dispute. The question is whether it should be in the regulations or in the statute. I believe it is in the interest of the inmates that it be left in the regulations. If we put it into the statute, because of the high number of people who would be involved—I only have to mention, for instance, the number of day parole hearings that would have to be held, or to mention the number of people on short sentences in penitentiaries and provincial prisons where hearings would have to be held to conclude that if we put it into the statute, we would be delaying the procedural safeguards which the board is now maintaining and which it should continue to maintain. That deals with motions Nos. 35 and 36.

With regard to Motion No. 37, the amendment would add a subsection on the procedure to be followed on suspension of parole and subsequent review. The subsection would make it mandatory for the board to hold a hearing as to whether parole would be revoked, unless the board, within 30 days from the date it had the matter referred to it, chooses to cancel the suspension.

This motion is along the same lines as motion No. 36 in that it attempts to incorporate into the legislation a right that the board contemplates will be dealt with under the regulations. The board will be recommending to the governor in council, and so will I shortly, regulations that will require a hearing to be commenced within 30 days following a reference to the board by the person effecting the suspension. I believe once again that this is another occasion where the only difference between what is proposed by the hon. member for New Westminster (Mr. Leggatt) and what we will be proposing is the method by which the inmate is to be given certain rights. I believe it will be easier to proceed faster in this regard by keeping in the hands of the governor in council the power to make regulations in this regard and to make progress as soon as possible. I understand, however, that the hon. member will be speaking on motion No. 38.

Mr. Leggatt: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I must beg the indulgence of the House. I did not realize you would group all the motions together. I had assumed that the motions I spoke to were grouped together because they were on the same subject, but obviously the Solicitor General (Mr. Fox) has referred to motions Nos. 37 and 38, which I did not realize would be grouped. With the leave of the House, I should like to spend a moment to explain the reasons for those motions.

[Mr. Fox.]

• (2130)

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Is the House in agreement?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Leggatt: Motion No. 37, to which the Solicitor General referred, deals with the problem inherent in the revocation of parole under the existing law. The revocation of parole, when made, would now be subsequently referred for review by the Parole Board. However, no time limit is provided for the Parole Board in terms of reporting, and my amendment would require that the board report within 30 days so that the inmate would at least have some hope of knowing what decision there would be in the long run. It seems to me that that is a matter which would encourage peace within institutions. The board would have some responsibility not to delay its reports indefinitely. The minister's legislation does not provide for any time limit with regard to that, and I think that that is really a matter of cleaning up the legislation. Perhaps the minister will accept that amendment, which is fairly reasonable.

With regard to motion No. 38, in the past a parolee who violated his parole, subsequently had the time spent on parole added to his sentence. The result could be that a person serving a two year sentence could ultimately spend three or four years in jail because of his violations. Appropriately, the government has attempted to solve that problem by proposing that the time spent on parole not be added to sentences. The difficulty is that the government has failed to include those people who presently are serving time on parole. It seems reasonable to me that they should not be discriminated against by the passage of this legislation, which would apply only to persons being paroled subsequent to the passage of the legislation.

I am asking the Solicitor General to apply the worth-while rule which he has brought into the legislation to parolees who are now on parole. This would not affect those whose parole was previously violated and revoked and who have been recommitted to prison. I am asking the Solicitor General not to discriminate between those who are now properly on parole and not violating their parole and those who may subsequently be paroled. It seems to me that it would be a fairly logical step for the Solicitor General not to discriminate between those two classes.

I support the amendment, but we are discriminating against those who are presently on parole. We are allowing the legislation to apply only to those who are subsequently paroled.

Mr. Eldon M. Woolliams (Calgary North): Mr. Speaker—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Does the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams) have the unanimous consent of the House to speak at this time?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Woolliams: Mr. Speaker, we support this amendment, but I want to bring to the attention of the House that the person who is now charged with the murder of a police officer in Ottawa was on parole, and if we had had this kind of intelligent law, perhaps a different decision would have been made. That person was on parole, and let us make it very clear that long guns were used in that incident, and they are not included in this bill. Any statement differing from that is false and untrue.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Is the House ready for the question?

Some hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): The question is on motions Nos. 35, 36 and 37, in the name of the hon. member for New Westminster (Mr. Leggatt). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the said motions?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): All those in favour of the motions will please say yea.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): In my opinion the nays have it.

Mr. Leggatt: On division.

Motions No. 35, 36, and 37 (Mr. Leggatt) negatived.

Mr. Stuart Leggatt (New Westminster) moved:

Motion No. 38.

That Bill C-51, An Act to amend the Criminal Code, the Customs Tariff, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act and the Prisons and Reformatories Act, be amended in Clause 31 by striking out lines 44 and 45 at page 73 and substituting the following therefor:

"(a) any time spent on parole;".

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): In my opinion the nays have it.

Some hon. Members: On division.

Motion No. 38 (Mr. Leggatt) negatived.

Hon. Francis Fox (Solicitor General) moved:

Motion No. 39.

That Bill C-51, An Act to amend the Criminal Code, the Customs Tariff, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act and the Prisons and Reformatories Act, be amended in Clause 41

(a) by striking out line 30 at page 77 and substituting the following therefor:

"24.1 (1) Every inmate who, having been";

(b) by adding immediately after line 42 at page 77 the following:

"(2) The Governor in Council may make regulations providing for the appointment by him or by the Minister of a person to preside over a disciplinary court, prescribing the duties to be performed by such a person and fixing his remuneration."

He said: Mr. Speaker, the motion I am proposing is the direct result of the unanimous report which was submitted to me by the subcommittee on penitentiaries in Canada. It deals with giving the governor in council the power to appoint independent persons to chair over disciplinary courts in penitentiaries.

[Translation]

Mr. Adrien Lambert (Bellechasse): Mr. Speaker, referring to motion No. 39, I suggest that the Solicitor General is being given rather extraordinary powers. I concede that the report was unanimous but in any case, we might have to regret some day having followed its recommendations—

Mr. Fox: Your party was in favour of this.

Mr. Lambert (Bellechasse): All things considered, the Solicitor General is given an extraordinary power under motion No. 39. It is an issue where the rendering of justice is at stake. I do not want to question the good faith of the present Solicitor General who is here today, but it could be someone else tomorrow. All things considered, the Solicitor General is being granted extraordinary powers and maybe someday we will realize, I think, that we have gone a bit too far, because Parliament must always keep a monitoring power since it is, in my opinion, the very essence of our democracy. Our democracy will survive so long as we retain the principle that the ministers are accountable to Parliament. Quite sincerely, I believe that this amendment should be suppressed in order to let parliament exercise more monitoring power with regard to the way justice is carried out in this country.

● (2140)

[English]

Mrs. Simma Holt (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, as a member of the subcommittee which inquired into the constant crises in penitentiaries, the violence and the hostage taking, I am pleased to support the motion of the Solicitor General (Mr. Fox). It is indicative of the seriousness with which the Solicitor General views the problem facing taxpayers and the problems in penitentiaries. The Solicitor General has taken the opportunity to use Bill C-51 to incorporate this important measure which can keep our prisons from exploding again. In view of the fact that all parties were unanimous and non-partisan in the committee, I hope this motion will be passed unanimously.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Is the House ready for the question?

Some hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): In my opinion the yeas have it.

Some hon. Members: On division.

Motion No. 39 (Mr. Fox) agreed to.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Since all motions at the report stage have been considered, the House will now proceed to the outstanding recorded divisions on those motions.

Call in the members.

And the division bells having been rung:

● (2310)

Mr. Speaker: The first question is on motion No. 25 in the name of the hon. member for Moose Jaw (Mr. Neil).

The House divided on motion No. 25 (Mr. Neil) which was negatived on the following division:

(Division No. 85)

YEAS

Messrs.

Baker (Grenville-Carleton)	Elzinga	MacDonald (Miss) (Kingston and the Islands)
Beatty	Epp	Malone
Brisco	Fraser	Marshall
Cadieu	Grafftey	Mazankowski
Caouette (Villeneuve)	Halliday	McCain
Clark (Rocky Mountain)	Holmes	McCleave
Coates	Huntington	McKinnon
Crouse	Jarvis	Mitges
Darling	Johnston	Neil
Dick	Kempling	O'Sullivan
	Lambert (Bellechasse)	Paproski
	La Salle

Messrs.

Patterson	Rondeau	Towers
Peters	Schumacher	Whiteway
Pigott (Mrs.)	Scott	Whittaker
Ritchie	Stanfield	Woolliams—(45)

NAYS

Messrs.

Abbott	Goodale	MacFarlane
Appolloni (Mrs.)	Goyer	Maine
Basford	Gray	McIsaac
Bégin (Miss)	Guay (St. Boniface)	Milne
Blais	Guay (Lévis)	Munro (Hamilton East)
Blaker	Haidasz	Nicholson (Miss)
Blouin	Harquail	O'Connell
Boulanger	Herbert	Orlikow
Breau	Hogan	Ouellet
Bussières	Holt (Mrs.)	Parent
Caccia	Hopkins	Pearsall
Cafik	Joyal	Penner
Campagnolo (Mrs.)	Kaplan	Philbrook
Caron	Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre)	Portelance
Chrétien	Lajoie	Poulin
Clermont	Lalonde	Railton
Cullen	Lamontagne	Raines
Dawson	Landers	Roberts
De Bané	Lang	Rodriguez
Demers	Langlois	Rompkey
Dionne (Northumberland Miramichi)	Lapointe	Roy (Laval)
Douglas (Bruce-Grey)	Lee	Saltsman
Duclos	Lefebvre	Sauvé (Mrs.)
Dupras	Leggatt	Savard
Duquet	Lessard	Sharp
Ethier	Loiselle (Chambly)	Smith (Saint-Jean)
Foster	Lumley	Tessier
Fox	MacDonald (Cardigan)	Trudeau
Francis		Trudel
Gilbert		Watson
Gillespie		Young—(90)

● (2320)

Mr. Speaker: I therefore declare motion No. 25 lost.

The question is on motion No. 29.

The House divided on motion No. 29 (Mr. Leggatt) which was negatived on the following division:

(Division No. 86)

YEAS

Messrs.

Baker (Grenville-Carleton)	Hnatyshyn	McCain
Beatty	Hogan	McCleave
Blackburn	Holmes	McKinnon
Brisco	Huntington	Mitges
Cadieu	Jarvis	Neil
Caouette (Villeneuve)	Johnston	Orlikow
Clark (Rocky Mountain)	Kempling	O'Sullivan
Coates	Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre)	Paproski
Crouse	Lambert (Bellechasse)	Patterson
Darling	La Salle	Peters
Dick	Leggatt	Pigott (Mrs.)
Elzinga	MacDonald (Miss) (Kingston and the Islands)	Ritchie
Epp	Malone	Rodriguez
Fraser	Marshall	Rondeau
Gilbert	Mazankowski	Schumacher
Grafftey		Scott
Halliday		Stanfield
		Towers
		Whiteway
		Whittaker
		Woolliams—(53)

NAYS

Messrs.

Abbott
Appolloni (Mrs.)
Basford
Bégin (Miss)
Blais
Blaker
Blouin
Boulanger
Breau
Bussières
Caccia
Cafik
Campagnolo (Mrs.)
Caron
Chrétien
Clermont
Cullen
Dawson
De Bané
Demers
Dionne
(Northumberland-Miramichi)
Douglas
(Bruce-Grey)
Duclos
Dupras
Duquet
Ethier
Foster
Fox
Francis
Gillespie
Goodale
Goyer
Gray
Guay
(St. Boniface)
Guay
(Lévis)
Haidasz
Harquail
Herbert
Holt (Mrs.)
Hopkins
Joyal
Kaplan
Lajoie
Lalonde
Lamontagne
Landers
Lang
Langlois
Lapointe
Lee
Lefebvre
Lessard
Loiselle
(Chambly)
Lumley
MacDonald
(Cardigan)
MacFarlane
Maine
McIsaac
McRae
Milne
Munro
(Hamilton East)
Nicholson (Miss)
O'Connell
Ouellet
Parent
Pearsall
Penner
Philbrook
Portelance
Poulin
Railton
Raines
Roberts
Robinson
Rompkey
Roy
(Laval)
Saltsman
Sauvé (Mrs.)
Savard
Sharp
Smith
(Saint-Jean)
Tessier
Trudeau
Trudel
Watson
Young—(86)

Mr. Speaker: I therefore declare motion No. 29 lost.

The question is on motion No. 30. This also disposes of motions Nos. 31 and 32.

The House divided on motion No. 30 (Mr. Woolliams) which was negatived on the following division:

(Division No. 87)

YEAS

Messrs.

Baker
(Grenville-Carleton)
Beatty
Blackburn
Brisco
Cadieu
Clark
(Rocky Mountain)
Coates
Crouse
Darling
Dick
Elzinga
Epp
Fraser
Gauthier
(Roberval)
Gilbert
Graffitey
Halliday
Hnatyshyn
Hogan
Holmes
Huntington
Jarvis
Johnston
Kempling
Knowles
(Winnipeg North Centre)
Lambert
(Bellechasse)
La Salle
Leggatt
MacDonald (Miss)
(Kingston and the Islands)
Malone
Marshall
Mazankowski
McCain
McCleave
McKinnon
Mitges
Neil
Orlikow
O'Sullivan
Paproski
Patterson
Peters
Pigott (Mrs.)
Ritchie
Rodriguez
Rondeau
Schumacher
Scott
Stanfield
Towers
Whiteway
Whittaker
Woolliams—(53)

NAYS

Messrs.

Abbott
Appolloni (Mrs.)
Basford
Bégin (Miss)
Blais
Blaker
Blouin
Boulanger
Breau
Bussières
Caccia
Cafik
Campagnolo (Mrs.)
Caron
Chrétien
Clermont
Cullen
Dawson
De Bané
Demers
Dionne
(Northumberland-Miramichi)
Douglas
(Bruce-Grey)
Duclos
Dupras
Duquet
Ethier
Foster
Fox
Francis
Gillespie
Goodale
Goyer
Gray
Guay
(St. Boniface)
Guay
(Lévis)
Haidasz
Harquail
Herbert
Holt (Mrs.)
Hopkins
Joyal
Kaplan
Lajoie
Lalonde
Lamontagne
Landers
Lang
Langlois
Lapointe
Lee
Lefebvre
Lessard
Loiselle
(Chambly)
Lumley
MacDonald
(Cardigan)
MacFarlane
Maine
McIsaac
McRae
Milne
Munro
(Hamilton East)
Nicholson (Miss)
O'Connell
Ouellet
Parent
Pearsall
Penner
Philbrook
Portelance
Poulin
Railton
Raines
Roberts
Robinson
Rompkey
Roy
(Laval)
Saltsman
Sauvé (Mrs.)
Savard
Sharp
Smith
(Saint-Jean)
Tessier
Trudeau
Trudel
Watson
Young—(86)

Mr. Speaker: I therefore declare motions Nos. 30, 31 and 32 lost.

The question is on motion No. 33. This will also dispose of motion No. 34.

The House divided on motion No. 33 (Mr. Woolliams) which was negatived on the following division:

(Division No. 88)

YEAS

Messrs.

Baker
(Grenville-Carleton)
Beatty
Blackburn
Brisco
Cadieu
Caouette
(Villeneuve)
Clark
(Rocky Mountain)
Coates
Crouse
Darling
Dick
Elzinga
Epp
Fraser
Gilbert
Graffitey
Halliday
Hnatyshyn
Hogan
Holmes
Huntington
Jarvis
Johnston
Kempling
Knowles
(Winnipeg North Centre)
Lambert
(Bellechasse)
La Salle
Leggatt
MacDonald (Miss)
(Kingston and the Islands)
Malone
Marshall
Mazankowski
McCain
McCleave
McKinnon
Mitges
Neil
Orlikow
O'Sullivan
Paproski
Patterson
Peters
Pigott (Mrs.)
Ritchie
Rodriguez
Rondeau
Schumacher
Scott
Stanfield
Towers
Whiteway
Whittaker
Woolliams—(53)

NAYS

Messrs.

Abbott
Appolloni (Mrs.)
Basford
Bégin (Miss)
Blais
Blaker
Blouin
Boulanger
Breau
Bussières
Caccia
Cafik
Campagnolo (Mrs.)
Caron
Chrétien
Clermont
Cullen
Dawson
De Bané
Demers
Dionne
(Northumberland-Miramichi)

Messrs.

Douglas (Bruce-Grey)	Lajoie	Ouellet
Duclos	Lalonde	Parent
Dupras	Lamontagne	Pearsall
Duquet	Landers	Penner
Ethier	Lang	Philbrook
Foster	Langlois	Portelance
Fox	Lapointe	Poulin
Francis	Lee	Railton
Gillespie	Lefebvre	Raines
Goodale	Lessard	Roberts
Goyer	Loiselle (Chambly)	Robinson
Gray	Lumley	Rompkey
Guay (St. Boniface)	MacDonald (Cardigan)	Roy (Laval)
Guay (Lévis)	MacFarlane	Saltsman
Haidasz	Maine	Sauvé (Mrs.)
Harquail	McIsaac	Savard
Herbert	McRae	Sharp
Holt (Mrs.)	Milne	Smith (Saint-Jean)
Hopkins	Munro (Hamilton East)	Tessier
Joyal	Nicholson (Miss)	Trudeau
Kaplan	O'Connell	Trudel
		Watson
		Young—(86)

● (2330)

Mr. Speaker: I therefore declare motions Nos. 33 and 34 lost.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I thought a vote was called for motion No. 35.

Mr. Paproski: It was disposed of on division this afternoon.

Mr. Speaker: Our records indicate that motion No. 35 was negatived on division.

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): That is correct.

Hon. Ron Basford (Minister of Justice) moved that Bill C-51, to amend the Criminal Code, the Customs Tariff, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act and the Prisons and Reformatories Act, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs be concurred in.

Mr. Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Speaker: When shall the bill be read a third time?

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): At the next sitting of the House.

* * *

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I wonder if I may ask the parliamentary secretary if he knows what we will be dealing with tomorrow and in what order the business will be called, and if he has anything else he would like to add we would be delighted to hear it.

[Mr. Speaker.]

Mr. Goodale: Mr. Speaker, it is our intention to begin tomorrow with Bill C-17, the Air Canada legislation, which is at the report stage. We are optimistic that that bill will be dealt with expeditiously. There are two other items for consideration tomorrow, the third reading stage of Bill C-51 and the third reading stage of Bill C-27. It can be the subject of further discussion with respect to the specific order in which those two items might be called, but it would be my expectation now that we would proceed after Bill C-17 with the third reading of Bill C-51.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 40 deemed to have been moved.

NATIONAL DEFENCE—ALLEGED DIFFERENTIATION IN TREATMENT BY CUSTOMS BETWEEN FORCES PERSONNEL AND CIVILIANS

Mr. Robert McCleave (Halifax-East Hants): Mr. Speaker, what brings us together is my question of the other day to the Minister of National Defence (Mr. Danson) and the Minister of National Revenue (Miss Bégin) about the practices of the Armed Forces in dealing with people moving through customs, namely, National Defence people, and about whether they should have to make a declaration if it is felt they had made purchases abroad of $50 or less. The practice for the population as a whole is that they do not have to make any declaration or they may make an oral declaration, and they do not have to fill in any forms. In maritime command personnel do have to fill in a form. Having looked at the documents I can say that somebody in the department has misinterpreted the practice in general, and maritime command people have been required to fill in the form, whereas the rest of the personnel can move back and forth and be treated as civilians.

I am somewhat hampered in this debate because I have probably mislaid the document I once had. I have looked for it in my office and here in my desk. I cannot find it. In any event, a directive was sent out by maritime command stating that these forms did have to be filled in, but the rest of National Defence was not required to do so. I think there is a misunderstanding, and when I raised this matter the other day the Minister of National Revenue and the Minister of National Defence thought one thing, but when I showed the Minister of National Defence the documents, he indicated to me that probably in one part of National Defence there had been a mistake, and that was going to be corrected. I have probably taken more of the time of the House than I originally intended. I think the parliamentary secretary will straighten this up, and I thank the House for its indulgence.

Mr. Maurice A. Dionne (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the hon. member's brevity, considering the fact that it is past ten o'clock. Perhaps we could ask search and rescue to find his document for him, but in this case I have the answer to his question, and I think it will alleviate his justified concern.

Canadian Forces administrative orders state that goods valued at $50 and under may be declared verbally unless a customs official requests a written declaration.

Apparently in the past customs officials have been requesting written declarations from service personnel, but as a result of an interdepartmental inquiry the Department of National Revenue has agreed to process service personnel in the same manner as civilians.

● (2340)

The message referred to by the hon. member was issued from maritime command headquarters on June 23, 1977, and contravenes the Canadian Forces administrative order in so far that it "directs a requirement for written declarations" without qualification that goods valued at $50 or less may be declared orally except when directed otherwise by a customs official.

Maritime command has been directed to clarify the instruction and to ensure that the procedures outlined in the Canadian Forces administrative order issued by National Defence headquarters are adhered to. Maritime command will change the message and will adhere to the Canadian Forces administrative order.

POST OFFICE—ALLEGATION UNION DENIED ACCESS TO MEANS OF COMMUNICATING WITH MEMBERS—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. John Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, when I raised questions concerning the Post Office on July 4, the Postmaster General (Mr. Blais) answered that he had no idea of the reasoning behind the breakdown in negotiations and that his department had never interfered with the union in the carrying out of its duties.

I would like to refresh the minister's memory tonight in regard to that interference, and perhaps in that way he may be better able to understand the labour unrest which is current in the Post Office.

Perhaps I should start by reminding the Postmaster General of the case in Charlottetown, P.E.I., last April where a union steward was "counselled" and threatened with dismissal for submitting grievances. In other words, management threatened to fire him for doing his job.

Then there is the case in Sydney, Nova Scotia, of a Mr. J. Legge. Mr. Legge is the local CUPW president and he was ordered by postal authorities to remove union bulletins from the premises of post offices. These bulletins, Mr. Speaker, had already been initialled by the employer. But the employer changed its mind and ordered them removed to prevent communication in the union.

The cases get more serious. There is the case of Wayne Mundle, a union official from the Halifax area. On May 17 he tried to enter a post office on union business. At that time he was denied access to the building. When he asserted his right to be there as a representative of the union he was ejected from the building. The result of that was that assault charges have been laid against the post office official responsible.

But to make matters even worse, yesterday Wayne Mundle was suspended from his job for three months. The reason given was that he had no right to be in the building. In other words, the Post Office is suspending union officials from jobs in a post office for the crime of trying to work for the men and women they represent.

The Post Office made its attitude even more clear recently when its district director, W. L. Ryan, informed the regional director of the union, Mr. D. W. Tingley, that he would not entertain any correspondence with him and that he would not be allowed to enter postal installations in Nova Scotia. This means that Mr. Tingley will not be able to represent unionists in the matter of grievances or anything else. The government is flatly denying the right of the union to be represented by its elected officials.

This is surely in keeping with the Post Office Department's campaign of misinformation over the years. They have sent their senior employees kits calling certain CUPW officials marxists and separatists. They have sent conflicting bulletins to different parts of the country, and I have copies of these here.

It is small wonder that we have labour difficulties in the Post Office with the attitude and actions shown by the employer. In fact it is a wonder there is as much industrial peace as there is.

The government has had the opportunity to set matters right. It signed a contract last year which should have helped in the matter of technological change and casual employees. But it refused to honour the provisions of that contract, Mr. Speaker, and today in Toronto there are actually more casual or temporary employees than there were at the time the contract was signed.

The union wanted to reopen the bargaining early this year, in January 1977, as they had done in the past, to clear up some of these outstanding problems. The government would have nothing to do with an early bargaining. So now again we are faced with labour trouble in the Post Office, and again the government does nothing to clean up its own mess, choosing instead to propagandize and attack the union leadership. Mr. Speaker, there is one way in which the matter can be settled.

The union has called for a royal commission into the Post Office to find where the problems lie. If the government is so confident the union is to blame, why will it not hold such a commission and give an undertaking that it will carry out its recommendations? Is it afraid that a royal commission will take the road of all past independent commissions and blame the way the Post Office has been managed, or mismanaged over the years? These are questions the government must answer.

Mr. Walter Smith (Parliamentary Secretary to Postmaster General): Mr. Speaker, it has been suggested in this House that the breakdown in negotiations between the Canadian Union of Postal Workers and the Post Office Department is the result of alleged interference in communication between that union's national executive and its membership. I would like to make it absolutely clear there is no truth in this allegation.

For about nine months now the Post Office Department has been communicating with employees—all employees at all levels—on a wide variety of topics. Those topics include the current status of negotiations with each of the five postal unions, the results of union elections, international art exhibitions, hockey tournaments, and the retirement of long-serving employees. Whatever the subject matter, these messages report substantiated facts; they do not express opinions; they do not indulge in name calling. These messages are not addressed to rank and file emloyees, but to all levels of management, including first-level supervisors. The only motive behind this system of communication is the need to have a well-informed management, so that they can either pass this information along or respond to questions from the people they supervise or manage.

On one occasion a message containing an incorrect statement was sent out. The error was quickly spotted and corrected within hours. The correction was identified as such. Therefore that one hon. member should suggest that the Post Office Department issues "conflicting bulletins" is a complete distortion of the facts. No doubt the CUPW has its own reasons for refusing to return to the negotiating table, but interfering with the union's communications is most certainly not a reason. The union has repeatedly been invited to resume bargaining. Its executive has refused to do so for reasons which may become clear later. They are certainly not clear at present.

It has been further suggested in this House that the Post Office Department has refused to allow union publications to be posted and distributed to the membership. I assume the hon. member is referring to unsubstantiated charges made before the Public Service Staff Relations Board.

In fact the union, through its legal counsel, has now been before the board for seven days and has not yet addressed itself to the charge made against the Post Office Department under article 20 of the staff relations act. The chairman of the board has more than once urged the union to present the proper evidence, but it has not yet done so. Largely because of this, the staff relations board has had to schedule a further nine days of hearings which will last up to October 6 next, with still no certainty that the union's case will be made even by then.

A reasonable man might conclude that the union, in stating it cannot resume bargaining until the hearing is concluded, is just stalling.

[Mr. Rodriguez.]

I understand CUPW is having its convention in Halifax on July 25 and I wish them success in their deliberations, Mr. Speaker.

FARM CREDIT CORPORATION—INDICTMENT OF MANAGEMENT IN AUDIT BY SIBBALD GROUP—GOVERNMENT ACTION

Mr. Perrin Beatty (Wellington-Grey-Dufferin-Waterloo): Mr. Speaker, it is almost midnight and, like members in this House, the members of the press gallery are tired. Therefore I shall try to be brief. However, I must raise one matter of considerable importance.

For several days I have tried to raise in the House of Commons questions concerning difficulties of the Farm Credit Corporation. For years farmers in all parts of the country highly regarded the Farm Credit Corporation, which provided farmers with low interest loans and money with which farmers could expand their operations, stay in business, or even go into the business. In recent years the corporation has encountered increasing difficulties. In 1975 it ran out of funds, and many farmers were unable to secure the loans the corporation had promised them. Last year the government actually showed restraint in one area. It cut back the authorized lending capital of Farm Credit Corporation, putting the squeeze on the agricultural sector of the economy. In the last two years senior management personnel have resigned from the corporation. That is a sign of malaise within the corporation.

In April, this year, the Sibbald Group released the results of an audit and study of Farm Credit Corporation. It showed that within the corporation there was poor morale, and moonlighting by employees on company time. Employees were taught to learn French and then sent to areas where no one spoke French, with the result that the taxpayers' money was wasted. The report showed that there was poor administration at all levels. It was a very blunt report, extremely caustic in its assessment.

● (2350)

Let me put on record these quotations having to do with management. The first is from page 33 of the report. It says:

> The number of references to management problems during the interviews was too great to ignore. Here are complaints about lack of credibility, lack of confidence in leadership, lack of communication, and mystery regarding corporate objectives at almost all levels of the corporation.

At page 59 the report states:

> Corporate senior leadership is widely viewed at all levels as being less than adequate. This feeling is more pronounced and widespread the higher one probes the corporate ladder.

It is vital the government should disclose what steps it is prepared to take to provide leadership to the corporation. After all, this is a $306 million organization. The taxpayers have a right to expect that it will be wisely managed; the employees have right to expect that proper direction will be given to them, and that they will be in a position to understand the direction senior management wishes to take. Most important of all, the farmers of Canada have a right to expect that the corporation will provide them with the best possible service.

I hope the government is prepared to extend the terms of the motion under Standing Order 43 which I sought to move today, and in respect to which unanimous consent was refused. It would have referred this report to the Standing Committee on Agriculture and given the minister an opportunity to indicate whether he was prepared to accept his responsibility to restore control and direction to the corporation.

Mr. Walter Smith (Parliamentary Secretary to Postmaster General): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have this opportunity to clarify some of the comments which have been made about the Farm Credit Corporation and the studies carried out by the Manitoba Institute of Management Incorporated and the Sibbald Group. Unfortunately I cannot reply to all of the allegations which the hon. member for Wellington-Grey-Dufferin-Waterloo (Mr. Beatty) has made in recent days. Therefore I shall respond briefly to those which seem to have been uppermost in his mind when the questions were being asked.

I should first caution the hon. member about the manner in which this report was prepared. A number of FCC employees from all levels of the organization conducted interviews with fellow employees and clients of the Farm Credit Corporation. From these interviews the report was written, without allegations and charges having been pursued in detail to verify their validity. Therefore much of the report is hearsay and in several instances most misleading. As the report was only intended as an internal document to assist management, this approach was quite reasonable.

Insofar as moonlighting is concerned, I am advised the corporation does have strict guidelines against such a practice and that any instances brought to its attention will be dealt with accordingly. There would, however, appear to be some confusion insofar as this allegation is concerned. In 1969 the Farm Credit Corporation reached an agreement with the Department of Finance that FCC employees would value rural properties for banks considering loans to farmers under the Farm Improvement Loans Act. As it is the corporation which is reimbursed for this activity, it is normal procedure that such appraisals should be conducted as part of the employees' duties.

The Farm Credit Corporation does not send people on French language courses when its clients do not indicate a need for service in the second official language. However, it is the policy of the corporation to serve its clients in the language of their choice wherever possible. The confusion in this instance may have been caused by an occasion when an individual occupying a bilingual position was sent on French language training. Upon his return to the field he applied for, and was successful in winning, a competition in a unilingual area. It is not the policy of the corporation to restrict the advancement of its employees because of additional language abilities.

The comments about lack of credibility arose primarily because of the financial restrictions placed on the corporation when the anti-inflation program was commenced by the government. Unfortunately, at the same time, increased farm incomes were resulting in a very significant increase in the demand for farm loans. The combination of these two factors resulted in certain loans that had been approved in one fiscal year not being made until the following fiscal year.

The allegations concerning lack of leadership result primarily from the new system of management introduced by the present chairman. Under this system decision making became a participatory process with input being welcomed from several sources. In addition to this group decision making, authority was decentralized from the head office to the branches.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please. I regret to interrupt the hon. gentleman but his allotted time has expired.

Mr. Beatty: With unanimous consent, Mr. Speaker, might he continue?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please.

Motion agreed to and the House adjourned at 11.57 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Friday, July 15, 1977

The House met at 11 a.m.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[English]

SPORTS

PROPOSED FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL CONFERENCE TO DEVELOP POLICY ON FITNESS AND SPORT—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Bruce Halliday (Oxford): Mr. Speaker, I rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43 on a matter of urgent and pressing necessity. In view of the failure of the Minister of State for Fitness and Amateur Sport, in spite of ten months in her new portfolio, to develop a credible national policy on amateur sport and physical fitness, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Joliette (Mr. La Salle):

That this House calls upon the minister to convene a federal-provincial conference to deal with this matter.

Mr. Speaker: Presentation of such a motion requires the unanimous consent of the House. Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

REQUEST FOR PROGRAM OF TRAINING AND FINANCING FOR ATHLETES TO PREPARE FOR OLYMPICS—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Paul Yewchuk (Athabasca): Mr. Speaker, I rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43 to move a matter of urgent and pressing necessity. In view of Canada's anticipated participation in the Olympics at Moscow in 1980, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Joliette (Mr. La Salle):

That under the supervision of a federal-provincial committee, a complete program of training and financing be established for Canadian athletes so as to allow them to prepare adequately for the Olympic games in Moscow.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Presentation of such a motion for debate can be done only with the unanimous consent of the House. Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

SUGGESTED PAYMENT TO EMPLOYEES FOR EXTRA HOURS WORKED THIS SESSION—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. John Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, I rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43 on a matter of urgent and pressing necessity. In view of the fact that the summer break of the House of Commons this year will be the shortest in recent years, and in view of the fact that this will mean the staff of the House of Commons and the Library of Parliament will be working a much larger proportion of the year on longer hours than is usual, and in view of the fact that these employees have already been penalized this year by wage increases which were less than the present rate of inflation and much less than those given people in the Public Service, I move, seconded by the hon. member for New Westminster (Mr. Leggatt):

That this House recommend an extra sum of money be allocated to the employees of the House of Commons and the Library of Parliament to cover the amount of extra hours they will have to work this summer.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. In order for such a motion to be presented, it would require the unanimous consent of the House. I have some misgivings about the administrative responsibility of this matter. It does not concern the government, but rather the Chair.

An hon. Member: It is for you, too.

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): Parliament can express itself.

Mr. Speaker: I do not know if I can classify myself as an employee of the House of Commons for the purpose of the motion. Presentation of such a motion for debate requires the unanimous consent of the House. Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

Mr. Paproski: The Liberal government said: "No."

Old Age Security Act

FINANCE

PROPOSED COMMITTEE STUDY OF REASONS CANADIANS INVESTING IN UNITED STATES REAL ESTATE—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Dan McKenzie (Winnipeg South Centre): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a matter of urgent and pressing necessity under the provisions of Standing Order 43. My motion is prompted by the alarming amount of money which is leaving Canada through Canadian investment in United States real estate, which has gone from $300 million in 1972 to a high of $2.5 billion this year, to the point where Canadian investors own 30 per cent of the major apartment complexes in Seattle, Washington and Canadian firms have developed 17 major complexes in United States cities. Since this mass exodus of money into United States real estate is due to relatively poor political and economic times in Canada, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Saskatoon-Biggar (Mr. Hnatyshyn):

That this House instruct the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs to conduct an immediate investigation into the amount of money leaving Canada by way of Canadian investment in United States real estate, and to bring forth recommendations on how this trend can be reversed.

Mr. Speaker: Presentation of such a motion for debate can be done only with the unanimous consent of the House. Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

* * *

● (1110)

OLD AGE SECURITY ACT

SUGGESTED AMENDMENT TO END DISCRIMINATION AGAINST PERSONS OF SINGLE STATUS BETWEEN AGES OF 60 AND 65—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, because I believe the time has come for this motion to be accepted, I ask leave to move it, seconded by the hon. member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands (Mr. Douglas). I therefore move:

That this House urges the government to introduce without further delay an amendment to the Old Age Security Act to end the discrimination therein against persons of single status between the ages of 60 and 65 by providing for the equivalent of the spouse's allowance to be paid as well to widows, spinsters, widowers, and bachelors between the ages of 60 and 65, provided they are out of the labour market.

Mr. Speaker: Presentation of any such motion requires the unanimous consent of the House. Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

[Mr. Paproski.]

METRIC CONVERSION

SUGGESTED IMPROVEMENT OF INFORMATION SUPPLIED TO GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Bob Brisco (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, I rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43 on a matter of urgent necessity. In view of the fact that this week a farmer from Salmo, British Columbia was denied the right to purchase grain from Purina Mills of Spokane, Washington, because the mill stated they deal only in bushels, not in kilograms, and in view of the fact that the farmer returned empty-handed as a result of this false impression created by the Metric Commission in the United States grain industry, and in view of the fact that inquiries by my office with a senior official responsible for metric conversion revealed a total ignorance of the subject, and that I was only enlightened by the provincial Department of Agriculture of British Columbia, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski):

That the government improve its information policies with its own officials and with the Metric Commission and with U.S. grain handling officials, or withdraw Bill C-23 so that farmers will not be denied vital grain supplies as a result of information failures.

Mr. Speaker: Presentation of such a motion for debate requires unanimous consent. Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[Translation]

SPORTS

SUGGESTED ADOPTION OF POLICY OF FITNESS AND SPORT—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Roch La Salle (Joliette): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of State responsible for Fitness and Amateur Sport.

Considering that last September the government appointed a minister responsible for amateur sport and physical fitness, that, consequently, the Canadian public could rightfully expect an overall and urgently needed physical fitness policy, that the minister has failed to submit positive ideas in this respect, being somewhat satisfied with administering the few millions of dollars which the Department of National Health and Welfare had already placed at her disposal and which are definitely inadequate, could the minister tell us, after holding this portfolio for nearly a year, whether she intends to develop, through legislation or otherwise, a credible national policy in line with the expectations of the Canadian public.

[English]

Hon. Iona Campagnolo (Minister of State (Fitness and Amateur Sport)): The policy is in its final stage of preparation.

Some hon. Members: Oh!

[Translation]

Mr. La Salle: Mr. Speaker, on a supplementary.

As everyone else, Mr. Speaker, on this side of the House we of course have had occasion to see the minister give news conferences and speak of her good intentions, but in the interest of all Canada we feel that an overall policy should be adopted. At the time of the speech from the throne, the government did give cause for expectations in Canadians, so I put my question again to the minister to give her a chance to reply if she really wants to be taken seriously by the country. Does she intend to introduce in this Parliament an over-all policy in which, of course, the provinces would co-operate? What are the real intentions of the minister: will she limit herself to giving a few news conferences to give illusions to the Canadians, as is the case now?

[English]

Mrs. Campagnolo: When the policy is prepared I shall be very pleased to share it not only with the hon. member but with all the people of Canada.

[Translation]

Mr. La Salle: Mr. Speaker, as we all know that the government is responsible for allowing all Canadians to develop in any field of endeavour, according to their tastes and talents, has the minister actually looked into the possibility of financing the basic facilities that are required in all areas of our country? If so, what kind of budget does she intend to present, what financial recommendations does she intend to make, if she wants to have any credibility with regard to an overall policy?

[English]

Mrs. Campagnolo: Mr. Speaker, I understand the hon. member is trying to determine whether or not the federal government is going to go into capital expenditures for provision of facilities across the country. I would remind him that at present Loto Canada is supplying 12.5 per cent of its total revenue to the provinces which is utilized for the provision of facilities. In addition, at this time it is not my intention to provide capital funds for facilities. However, if this should change, I would certainly be the first person to advise the hon. member.

CONTINGENCY PLANS IN EVENT FUNDS NOT SUPPLIED BY LOTO CANADA

Mr. Howard Johnston (Okanagan-Kootenay): Mr. Speaker, considering the extent to which the minister's plans for the future of sport in Canada depend on revenue derived from Loto Canada, what contingency plan has the minister developed to meet the near collapse of Loto Canada in the face of provincial lottery competitions?

Hon. Iona Campagnolo (Minister of State (Fitness and Amateur Sport)): I do not see at the present time that the collapse of Loto Canada will rest with the decision of one province, and certainly there are contingency plans, but I do not think this is the appropriate time for that to be discussed, since I do not have the time to delineate them during the question period.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Johnston: Mr. Speaker, all we want to hear is some reassurance that the minister is aware of conditions that are before us already and two years in advance of her anticipation.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Johnston: In light of the declining Loto Canada revenues, does the minister anticipate a round of conferences with the provinces to obtain a share of their lottery revenue, or will she rely on private endeavours from organizations with which she has already interfered in a startling attempt to use sport to bolster the government's political policies?

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Some hon. Members: Shame.

Mrs. Campagnolo: First of all, Mr. Speaker, I would like to make it extremely clear to the hon. member that Loto Canada has no intention of laying down and dying.

An hon. Member: Don't be bumptious, and answer the question.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Woolliams: Watch your grammar, Iona.

Mrs. Campagnolo: We always like your grammar, Eldon.

On the second part of the question which the hon. member has raised regarding interference in the sports world, I feel that the reference is ill-advised. When it comes to his reference to the sports governing organizations of the Organization of African Unity, I cannot believe that the hon. member would find it more suitable that Canada should be in favour of apartheid in sports.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

* * *

MANPOWER

NEW PLANS TO DEAL WITH UNEMPLOYMENT—DATE OF ANNOUNCEMENT

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct a question to the Minister of Manpower and Immigration. Three days ago the minister acknowledged outside this House that he would be introducing new employment programs to reduce the high level of unemployment in all of Canada's regions. Can the minister indicate to the House whether he is now able to announce the details of the new programs, and if not, will he give us an assurance that he will do so when the House meets during the pipeline debate?

Hon. Bud Cullen (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): I would recommend to the hon. member a careful reading of precisely what I said on that occasion. I did comment on the second phase of the winter works projects and the announcement of $225 million for this particular winter on that particular project.

Mr. Orlikow: In the press release issued by Premier Schreyer last Friday he said that the Prime Minister had indicated to him that "job creation plans for the coming months were already close to completion". Did Premier Schreyer understand the Prime Minister correctly in his assumption that there are new programs, or is the minister saying that the only program which the government has considered to deal with unemployment is the release of the rest of the money for the Canada Works Program, as indicated?

● (1120)

Mr. Cullen: No, Mr. Speaker, we indicated that we had a job experience training program with a summer component. We were looking to establish a winter component on that one, and we were looking to other programs with different mixes. We found that particular programs such as co-operative education might win some favour with the provinces, and we hope to work with them on that particular aspect. It is an on-going project at all times, and we want to improve on what is already a very splendid system.

Mr. Orlikow: Are hon. members of this House to understand that despite the fact that unemployment has been substantially higher in each month of this year compared with the same months last year, there is no money for any employment programs contemplated by the government except that which was allocated by the Minister of Finance and the Minister of Manpower and Immigration for Canada Works and Young Canada Works?

Mr. Cullen: No matter what was said, I am sure that is what the hon. member would probably propagate across the country. However, I have indicated that we are constantly looking at our programs to monitor which ones work and which do not and to decide where more money can be put. That is what we propose to continue doing.

* * *

[Translation]

CONFEDERATION

INQUIRY OF NUMBER OF MEMBERS ON TASK FORCE ON UNITY PROPORTIONAL TO POPULATION OF EACH PROVINCE

Mr. Gilbert Rondeau (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the right hon. Prime Minister.

Can the Prime Minister tell the House how many members will form the task force on national unity, and can he tell us at the same time if this number will be proportional to the population of each province?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, we do not intend to have proportional representation. We want the task force to be composed of members from various groups and various regions.

Mr. Rondeau: Mr. Speaker, I wish to ask a supplementary question.

Is it true that there will be only one representative from the province of Quebec, if ever one can be found, within this task force?

Mr. Trudeau: Mr. Speaker, if the hon. member had listened to my previous answer, he would understand that we do not intend to have one representative by province, no matter its population. We want Canadians concerned with the matter of national unity irrespective of the statistical problems which seem to bother the hon. member.

* * *

[English]

SPORTS

ESTABLISHMENT OF NATIONAL COACHING SCHOOL—REASON FOR DELAY OF ANNOUNCEMENT

Mr. Paul Yewchuk (Athabasca): Mr. Speaker, I would like to get back to the minister who is becoming known as the minister responsible for fatness and spectator sports—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Yewchuk: In view of the lack of an over-all policy dealing with fitness and amateur sport, and in view of the up-coming Olympics and the importance of developing athletes I would like to ask the minister a specific question. When her budget was discussed in the committee on March 29 the minister indicated that she would make an announcement by June 1 with respect to the establishment of a national coaching school. Six weeks have now gone by, and the minister has remained totally silent on this subject. I wonder if she can offer the House an explanation for her silence.

Hon. Iona Campagnolo (Minister of State (Fitness and Amateur Sport)): Mr. Speaker, members of the opposition seem to want it both ways. They do not want me to give press conferences, but they do want me to make announcements.

An hon. Member: Make them in the House.

Mrs. Campagnolo: On the matter of athlete support in Canada—

Mr. Paproski: You mean athletic support.

Mrs. Campagnolo: Athlete support. I am quite sure the hon. member recalls the other kind.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Paproski: We are going to gild one for you.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mrs. Campagnolo: Do hon. members opposite want to hear what the athletes of Canada have in the way of support or not? My branch has an operation called Game Plan. Game Plan used to be subsidized by the private sector to a much larger degree than it is now, and as a result of the private sector's having removed some support, it has become necessary for the government to make up that financial loss. This has been done through Loto Canada.

The hon. member wants to know when the national coaching school will be launched. The first part of it will be launched September 1. In other areas of athlete support we have the national coaching television program which will be begun this spring. If hon. members opposite want to know what moneys the people of Canada are paying to support athletes, they need only ask, and I shall supply them with the amounts allotted to each of the athletes who are being supplied with basic funding by the people of Canada.

ESTABLISHMENT OF NATIONAL COACHING SCHOOL—CONSULTATION WITH PROVINCES

Mr. Paul Yewchuk (Athabasca): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Could the minister tell the House whether she has been able to achieve any sort of understanding with the provinces since their co-operation will be necessary in so far as the establishment of a national coaching school is concerned? If she has achieved understanding why has she not informed the House?

Hon. Iona Campagnolo (Minister of State (Fitness and Amateur Sport)): Mr. Speaker, this is a rather delicate matter. There have been two scheduled meetings of federal-provincial conferences on sport. The first was to be held last November but was subsequently cancelled, the last was held in June and I was not invited to attend. When the provinces do wish to speak to me, I am most anxious to speak to them.

Mr. Paproski: They do not want you to go into the locker rooms.

* * *

[Translation]

CONFEDERATION

SUGGESTED ESTABLISHMENT OF JOINT COMMITTEE ON NATIONAL UNITY

Mr. Heward Grafftey (Brome-Missisquoi): Mr. Speaker, I would like to know whether the right hon. Prime Minister is now prepared to accept the suggestion of the opposition concerning the establishment of a joint parliamentary committee on national unity involving all hon. members of the House of Commons.

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, as I indicated during the debate, I think, it seems to me that we are a bit too far into the session to establish such a committee. We hope the House will be able to adjourn within a matter of days and I do not really see the need for debating the resolution mentioned by the hon. member if the session is to end in a few days.

* * *

[English]

ATOMIC ENERGY OF CANADA LIMITED

SALE OF NUCLEAR REACTOR TO ARGENTINA—RESPONSIBILITY FOR MARKETING POLICY

Miss Flora MacDonald (Kingston and the Islands): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. I should like to refer to testimony given by the Chairman of Atomic Energy of Canada Limited before the Porter Commission on July 12. When questioned about the marketing practices of AECL and specifically when questioned on the Argentinian reactor sale he replied:

The government of Canada is responsible for the marketing policy.

He went on to say with regard to the Argentinian deal that that would slip into the kind of category of a loss leader to get into a market. Given those statements by the Chairman of AECL in which he denies responsibility for marketing practices, given the letter written by Dr. Foster to the hon. member for Vegreville in which he denies responsibility for the marketing practices of AECL, in light of the $130 million loss, the fiasco sustained in the Argentinian deal, would the minister tell the House whether it was he or his predecessor in that portfolio who sanctioned this marketing policy attributed to the government by the Chairman of AECL when he described it as a loss leader sale?

Hon. Alastair Gillespie (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, if one listened carefully to the hon. lady's question one would note a good deal of confusion, perhaps intended, on her part. At one point she talks about marketing policies and at the next point about marketing practices and she confuses them completely with a view to trying to confuse an already difficult situation. With respect to the sale of reactors, the policy of the government has been to sell reactors. That is the marketing policy question; with respect to the marketing practices, that is a corporate policy.

Miss MacDonald: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. I should like to ask the minister if he is denying the statements made by the Chairman of AECL before the Porter Commission in which he was asked particularly about the marketing practices and attributed them to the government of Canada.

Mr. Gillespie: Mr. Speaker, if the hon. lady will look at Hansard and re-read her first question she will see it concerned marketing policy but not marketing practices.

Oral Questions

INQUIRY AS TO PRESENT DUTIES OF MR. FOSTER

Mr. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville): I have a supplementary question for the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources, Mr. Speaker, which arises out of the dismissal of Mr. John Foster, chief executive officer of AECL and a letter he directed to me in which he indicates he is still an employee of AECL. He further indicates that he accepts no responsibility for the mismanagement of AECL. I ask the minister to say what are Mr. Foster's present duties, and since he is no longer chief executive officer, has his salary been cut?

● (1130)

Hon. Alastair Gillespie (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, Mr. Foster has no duties at present; he is on leave. As I told the House, I hope we shall succeed in working out some technical consulting assignment for him. I expect that may happen, and negotiations may take place in a couple of months.

Mrs. Simma Holt (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Manpower and Immigration. On July 12 I attended, for the Government of Canada and on behalf of the Minister of Justice, the official opening of a magnificent and desperately needed extended care hospital in the riding of a Tory member who is not working hard—

Mr. Paproski: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege—

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

Some hon. Members: Order. Sit down.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member for Saskatoon-Biggar.

* * *

ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE

REVIEW OF ISSUANCE OF WRITS OF ASSISTANCE—REQUEST FOR REPORT

Mr. Ray Hnatyshyn (Saskatoon-Biggar): Mr. Speaker, thank you for recognizing another Tory member who works damned hard.

Mr. Paproski: We all work hard on this side.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: The minister may recall that for the past six months I have been concerned about writs of assistance. The minister said in March he was having the entire question reviewed thoroughly and would consider amendments to legislation which allows writs of assistance to be granted. Since his position on Bill C-51 has blown to smithereens his former reputation, such as it was, as a civil libertarian, has the minister good news for us with respect to writs of assistance?

[Mr. Gillespie.]

Hon. Ron Basford (Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, my officials have been conducting the review I requested and informed me this week it has not yet been completed.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Within what time frame does the minister anticipate announcing his intentions? The matter has been before the minister some six months. Surely he has had the opportunity to come to a decision on this fundamental question, writs of assistance.

Mr. Basford: Mr. Speaker, it is impossible to come to a decision until the review is completed, at which point changes either in policy or legislation can be decided. If legislative changes are contemplated they will be announced in the usual way in this House by way of the introduction of legislation.

* * *

LABOUR CONDITIONS

STRIKE AT TELEGLOBE CANADA—REQUEST FOR REPORT ON NEGOTIATIONS

Mr. John A. Fraser (Vancouver South): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Labour. I gave him notice of it yesterday. It concerns the serious labour-management dispute between the Canadian Overseas Telecommunications Union and Teleglobe Canada. Some weeks ago the union took the unusual step, for a union, of asking for arbitration. Given that this union between 1950 and 1976 did not go on strike, relations being good, and given that Teleglobe Canada, a Crown corporation, has refused arbitration and said in a letter dated May 16, "... we however feel that the area of disagreement is not such as to lend itself to arbitration" even though the strike is in its seventh week, what is the minister's department doing, and has the minister been able to consult with the Minister of Communications with whom I raised this issue some weeks ago?

Hon. John C. Munro (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, I thank the hon. member for giving me notice of the question and advise him that within an hour or two I may have good news for him. The parties met until 3.30 this morning. A proposal has been approved, subject to ratification. It is going before the general membership now. Naturally, I hope they accept it.

* * *

PENITENTIARIES

RESPONSE TO COMMITTEE REPORT—PERSONS RESPONSIBLE FOR ASSESSING REPORT

Mr. Stuart Leggatt (New Westminster): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Solicitor General may I direct my question to the parliamentary secretary? It is now five weeks since an all-party committee tabled in this House a report on penitentiaries and many members of that committee, of which the parliamentary secretary was one, are anxious to see action taken on that report? When will the government respond to that report on penitentiaries? Who is assessing the report? One of the major recommendations of the report concerns the bureaucracy and structures which must be changed within the penitentiary system. Is any bureaucrat whom the report criticized involved in assessing the report which criticized him?

Mr. Art Lee (Parliamentary Secretary to Solicitor General): Mr. Speaker, I am sure all hon. members will join with me in congratulating the Solicitor General for implementing one of the committee's recommendations yesterday by way of an amendment to Bill C-51. I refer to the concept of the independent chairman of disciplinary hearings. The minister is actively considering the matter and in due course the minister will inform the hon. member of his position.

REASON FOR FAILURE TO RESPOND TO RECOMMENDATION COMMITTEE MONITOR IMPLEMENTATION OF REPORT

Mr. Stuart Leggatt (New Westminster): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. That one recommendation, incorporated in Bill C-51, was one of the most minor in the report. The recommendation that an all-party committee have a continuing mandate to monitor the implementation of the report so that we can determine how fast it is being implemented is easy to comply with. Can the parliamentary secretary say why we have not had a response even to that simple recommendation which said that the justice subcommittee should have a continuing mandate to monitor the implementation of the report? Why are we refused that request?

Mr. Art Lee (Parliamentary Secretary to Solicitor General): Mr. Speaker, that is a subject matter for the House to deal with. The minister cannot presume what the House of Commons intends to do.

POSSIBILITY COMMISSIONER ASSESSING COMMITTEE REPORT

Mr. Stuart Leggatt (New Westminster): A final supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. One of the committee's major and important recommendations concerned the role of the commissioner and the role of a board to manage the prison system. Is the commissioner, who was involved so intimately in this matter and whom the report criticized, assessing the report of the all-party committee? The parliamentary secretary did not answer my initial question. Are the members of the bureaucracy whom the report criticizes assessing the report which criticizes them? Is that the kind of response the Solicitor General will give us?

Mr. Art Lee (Parliamentary Secretary to Solicitor General): Mr. Speaker, I think I answered that question. I said the Solicitor General takes the report most seriously. The hon. member suggests that the introduction of the provision concerning the independent chairman of disciplinary hearings is a paltry one, but I should like him to ask those individuals facing disciplinary hearings in their penal institutions what they think of it. I think that will show you the serious way in which the Solicitor General approaches this whole matter. In due course he will make known his intentions to the hon. member and others in this House.

* * *

ENERGY

NATURAL GAS EXPORTS TO UNITED STATES—REQUEST FOR DETAILS OF SWAP ARRANGEMENT

Mr. Eldon M. Woolliams (Calgary North): Mr. Speaker, my question for the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources arises from what he told the hon. member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands yesterday about gas contracts with the United States. I should like the matter to be made clear. I understand we have made a deal with the United States whereby we shall export so many thousand cubic feet of natural gas and get, in return, so many thousand cubic feet of natural gas. Are we to deal in dollars and cents, or in cubic feet of natural gas. If we export natural gas to the United States, because gas prices to consumers are rising will we receive in return an equivalent number of cubic feet of natural gas instead of dollars and cents?

Hon. Alastair Gillespie (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, the hon. member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands asked a hypothetical question.

Miss MacDonald: The minister treats all questions, apparently, as hypothetical.

Mr. Gillespie: He wondered what would be the government's approach to a particular situation which might develop. I tried to say as best I could that there is a possibility of swaps over time, which I think is the basis of the hon. member's question. The National Energy Board, in its report to the government tabled some ten days ago, raised this possibility. The details of any time swaps have not been worked out, but I think the principle of a time swap should be examined.

● (1140)

I recognize with the hon. member that we would want to protect the Canadian interests, as did the hon. member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands, so that we would not be in the position of selling at today's prices, relatively cheap, a certain quantity of natural gas and then buying it back at a later date at a very much higher price. Obviously, that would not make any sense.

Mr. Woolliams: Mr. Speaker, I want to congratulate the minister in this regard. Is he saying to me, and I do not know whether the House appreciates this, that the deal is going to be on cubic feet of gas if Canada gives gas today and gets gas back from the United States? Will it be in cubic feet or in dollars and cents? That is what the consumer wants to know. Let us cut out the rhetoric.

Mr. Gillespie: Mr. Speaker, this has to be answered on the basis of a hypothetical question because we have not received any application for these kinds of swaps. The National Energy Board even raised the possibility of a time swap. I gave an answer which indicates we have to protect the Canadian consumer on the basis of true value. I cannot do more than that at the present time, other than to say we will look at any application which is considered by the National Energy Board. That is the process of elimination, as the hon. member must know.

* * *

[Translation]

HEALTH

PROPOSED STUDY WITH UNITED STATES OF PRODUCT LAETRILE—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. F. A. Philbrook (Halton): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Health and Welfare. In view of the controversy concerning the pharmaceutical product called Laetrile used for the treatment of cancer, is the government cooperating with the Canadian Medical Association and the United States authorities to determine the medical and legal status of that product as far as its efficiency and its security is concerned.

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, the Department of National Health and Welfare shares the views of American authorities and the Canadian Medical Association about the pharmaceutical product called Laetrile; to wit that there is nothing to indicate that the drug is effective or sure against cancer.

In addition, I would like to point out that we are in close contact with American authorities; indeed two of my officials recently were in Washington to discuss the matter with American authorities, but I can say to the hon. member that we have no reason to alter our position and we have no indication that Laetrile can be effective for individuals suffering from cancer.

* * *

[English]

CANADIAN WHEAT BOARD

METHOD OF FINDING REPLACEMENT FOR CHIEF COMMISSIONER

Mr. Gordon Towers (Red Deer): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the minister in charge of the Canadian Wheat Board. When Mr. Vogel retires as Chief Commissioner of the Canadian Wheat Board, will the minister advertise across Canada for the best salesman available to replace him or will it be a cabinet appointment?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, the legal provision requires an appointment by order in council. Obviously, we will search for the very best person if that vacancy does in fact occur.

Mr. Towers: In view of the continuing cheap verbal shots that the minister is firing at the Premier of Alberta concerning the selling policies of the Canadian Wheat Board, and in view of the fact that the deputy premier of that province is a brother of the Minister without Portfolio, can the minister state whether or not he has discussed this issue with the latter and what his stand is on it?

Mr. Lang: Mr. Speaker, I do not think we need to be concerned about any relationship with regard to these statements. I have not been making cheap shots in relation to the Premier of Alberta. What I have been doing is defending the Canadian Wheat Board against rather unfounded attacks by him. I would like members opposite in the Conservative party in this House to say whether they support the Canadian Wheat Board as a selling agency or want interference from provincial politicians.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

* * *

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

DEVELOPMENT OF NEUTRON BOMB—DISCUSSIONS WITH UNITED STATES

Mr. Allan B. McKinnon (Victoria): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister. Will the right hon. member tell the House what discussions or consultations he has had in his role as an elder statesman of NATO with President Carter about the implication of the United States decision to proceed with the development of the neutron bomb.

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): None, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. McKinnon: Does the Prime Minister support the development of the neutron bomb which appears to be in line with a philosophy that a limited nuclear war is possible, bearing in mind that acceptance of a limited nuclear war posture by NATO may itself have a destabilizing effect?

Mr. Trudeau: I have not analyzed the problem, Mr. Speaker.

* * *

NATIONAL DEFENCE

POSSIBILITY NATO WILL ACCEPT NEUTRON BOMB—CANADIAN POSITION

Mr. Allan B. McKinnon (Victoria): Mr. Speaker, I will direct my final supplementary question to the Minister of National Defence who recently attended a nuclear planning group in Ottawa for NATO. Is the government position now that our forces in Europe will not hold or display neutron bombs, although we have artillery equipment there capable of firing such weapons? If NATO accepts the nuclear limited philosophy, will our forces be dependent on other nations for this type of support?

Hon. Barney Danson (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I think the hon. member knows we do not possess a nuclear capacity in NATO and have no intention of doing so. The consultations with reference to the neutron bomb have not taken place. I think the hon. member knows as much from the newspaper as I do on the neutron bomb per se.

* * *

REGIONAL ECONOMIC EXPANSION

REVISION OF FORMULA SO AREAS OF HIGH UNEMPLOYMENT CAN QUALIFY

Mr. W. C. Scott (Victoria-Haliburton): Mr. Speaker, my question is to the Minister of Regional Economic Expansion. In light of announcements last week which indicated that northern British Columbia and northern Alberta had been designated for DREE assistance, and information received in recent weeks concerning some additional $880 million in DREE funds payable to the province of Quebec, will the minister indicate when he will revise the formula by which areas qualify so that other parts of Canada with high unemployment problems can also benefit from the legislation?

[Translation]

Hon. Marcel Lessard (Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): Mr. Speaker, we did sign these agreements but I would like to correct the figure quoted by the hon. member—some $800 million in expenditures incurred in Quebec recently. I think that figure is somewhat exaggerated, to say the least. As to the assistance given by my department to other parts of Canada, as far as I know the entire province of Manitoba is designated for receiving our department assistance. We have signed several ancillary agreements with the government of Manitoba that are in effect and other negotiations are being held right now. But concerning the act that allows grants to companies, it is available to the province of Manitoba as a whole.

* * *

[English]

CONFEDERATION

PROPOSED JOINT COMMITTEE ON NATIONAL UNITY—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Walter Baker (Grenville-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Prime Minister. In answer to a question by the hon. member for Brome-Missisquoi on the possibility of a joint committee, the Prime Minister indicated that his reason for suggesting it was not appropriate was that we were near the end of the session. We hope that is so. Does the Prime Minister recall the commitment made by this party that, notwithstanding the fact that parliament may not be sitting, the members of this party are prepared to participate in such a committee because of the importance of the question of national unity, throughout the summer if necessary, and make a report? Is the Prime Minister concerned about the matter because of the unwillingness of members of his own party to dedicate the summer months to this matter or is there some other reason which the Prime Minister chose not to state in his answer to the hon. member for Brome-Missisquoi?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): No, Mr. Speaker, the answer was for the reason I gave. As to people on this side promoting and concerning themselves with national unity, I know from various discussions I have had individually and with caucus that they are intending to do so during the course of the summer. The difference is they do not feel they need a prop from the other side in order to do it.

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): I have indicated the willingness on our side of the House. The Prime Minister has indicated there is no lack of willingness on the other side of the House. Therefore, I can only conclude that the Prime Minister has decided as a matter of policy to work through a bureaucracy that will report internally with respect to national unity rather than involving all members of this House and the people of Canada on a continuing basis in that debate. If that is his attitude, it is reprehensible and should not be condoned in this country. Is the Prime Minister prepared to examine that attitude, one which I think is dreadful? Is he prepared to give the House a commitment that when we return in the fall the House will have an opportunity of aiding to the extent it can the bureaucracy which has not been established respecting national unity, a bureaucracy which has not been able to find a member to serve on behalf of one very important part of the nation, the province of Quebec? I think that says something. There are a number of members of this House from the province of Quebec who can perhaps make a contribution—

• (1150)

Some hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): —so I suggest the Prime Minister think about that.

Mr. Joe Clark (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question. I was a little concerned that the Prime Minister should state that it is the view of the government of Canada that parliament is a prop in looking at the question of national unity. I should like to ask the Prime Minister whether it is the policy of the government of Canada that the House of Commons and the Senate of Canada should not be given a formal role to play through a special committee that can make continuing inquiries into the question of national unity and issue a public report. If it is not the policy of the government of Canada to rule out a continuing role for parliament, then why will the Prime Minister not establish a joint committee of the Senate and House of Commons to inquire on a continuing basis into the problems of national unity?

Mr. Trudeau: Mr. Speaker, I believe I gave the answer of the government in my answer to the hon. member for Brome-Missisquoi, when I indicated that it was not our view that we should set up a committee now, just before the end of this part of the session.

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): You could do it tomorrow if you wanted to.

Mr. Trudeau: The House leader of the Tory party is willing to crowd in business all the time. We would take him as a man of his word if he were indeed able to deal with the business now before the House.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): We have done a little better than you have this session.

Mr. Fraser: If you keep on this will be your third speech in a year.

Mr. Trudeau: We did bring the issue of national unity before the House in a resolution, but the opposition had many, many days during which it could have brought up this subject if indeed it felt it to be important.

Returning to the question put by the Leader of the Opposition, I repeat that the possibility of having a joint parliamentary committee in the next session of parliament is not precluded, but we do not think that at this point in the session we should spend time setting up such a committee and debating it and asking it to operate for the remaining days of this part of the session.

As to the role of members on this side, all I meant was that they are self-starters. They do not have to feel supported by members of the opposition in concerning themselves with national unity. Hon. members opposite can be self-starters, too. You can do it if you try, boys.

Mr. Clark: Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister continues to play party games.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Clark: He claims that he is worried about the time it would take. I can give him the guarantee of the official opposition that we would approve in a minute the establishment of a joint committee.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Clark: I want to suggest to the Prime Minister with all respect that it is not an adequate response to a question regarding policy to say that the government has not precluded the possibility of giving the Parliament of Canada, which is the only agency which can resolve this question, a continuing role to play in the discussions on this subject. I ask the Prime Minister as clearly as I can why he will not take the initiative now, which he knows will be supported by the House of Commons, and establish today a joint committee of this House and the other place to inquire on a continuing basis into questions of national unity. We are prepared to start work this summer; why is the Prime Minister not?

[Mr. Trudeau.]

Mr. Trudeau: Mr. Speaker, I am very happy to hear from the Leader of the Opposition that he is prepared to start work on the problem of national unity.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Paproski: Get off the arrogance. Shameful. You are a coward.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Next time we will break your arm.

Mr. Trudeau: Why don't you do it right after we come out of the House? Mr. Speaker, I consider that the opposition is in a somewhat contradictory position. They were just telling us last week that national unity is not just one simple subject, it is a matter of how parliament and government deal with the problems of the country. We consider that every day of the year we are dealing with the problems of national unity.

Mr. Paproski: Lalonde says one thing in Quebec and another thing in western Canada. Hypocrites, traitors.

Mr. Trudeau: Mr. Speaker, I think they are a little "hyped up" over there; I will let them catch their cool and perhaps we will have some traditional questions.

Mr. Clark: Mr. Speaker, I think it is fair to say that parliament and the people of Canada have become resigned to this kind of evasion and game playing on the part of the Prime Minister on most questions, but the question of the future of our country is too important for the Prime Minister to play games with.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Clark: He pretends that he gives priority to resolving this problem. Why will the Prime Minister not demonstrate that priority and demonstrate the central role which parliament must play in resolving national questions in a way with which we agree by establishing a joint committee which will act now to give parliament a continuing role to inquire into the resolution of the problems of national unity which face the country?

Mr. Speaker: Order. The second question is a repetition of the first.

* * *

ENERGY

EXPORT OF NATURAL GAS TO UNITED STATES—INQUIRY AS TO APPLICATIONS AND BASIS OF SWAP ARRANGEMENT

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, my question was for the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources who unfortunately has left the chamber, so I will direct it to his parliamentary secretary in the hope that he can cast some light on the problem raised by the hon. member for Calgary North. In answering the question from that member the minister said that the question I had asked yesterday with respect to applications for the export of gas on a possible swap arrangement was hypothetical.

● (1200)

I should like to point out that yesterday's Globe and Mail definitely indicated that the TransCanada Pipelines has applied to the National Energy Board for a permit to export gas and to enter into swapping arrangements. Surely, this is not a hypothetical question. Can the parliamentary secretary tell the House if such applications have been made by TransCanada Pipelines and Pan-Alberta Gas? Has the government laid down any policy with respect to whether increased gas exports will be permitted and whether they will be on a swap basis? If they are on a swap basis, will it be on the quantity of gas or on the price of gas?

Mr. Maurice Dupras (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, the minister has already dealt with that question in answer to the question of the hon. member for Calgary North by saying that it was a hypothetical question.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, surely that is a ridiculous answer. If the newspaper report is correct, the application is now before the National Energy Board. Surely the government, and particularly the minister and the parliamentary secretary, keep in touch with what is happening at the National Energy Board. Are such applications before the board? If so, has the government discussed with the chairman of the National Energy Board whether the government is in favour of increasing our exports of gas, and if so, on what basis?

Mr. Dupras: Mr. Speaker, it could very well be that the application is before the National Energy Board, but it does not mean it is before the minister.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, the hon. member knows perfectly well I am not suggesting that the application is before the minister. I am assuming that in any well run government—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): —a minister would keep in touch with the agencies for which he is responsible, in the same able way that he kept in touch with AECL and what it was doing.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): We should not get up some morning and find out that the National Energy Board has embarked upon a policy which will sell our scarce gas at cheap prices in return for buying back Alaskan gas at high prices. Surely we can be told whether such applications are before the board and what attitude the government is taking with respect to advising the board as to government policies in regard to the export of gas.

Mr. Dupras: Mr. Speaker, I take the representation of the hon. member as notice.

Mrs. Holt: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. During the question period you prevented me from asking a question—

Some hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Paproski: Sit down.

An hon. Member: At least you can be polite.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: A female Mortimer Snerd.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Interference at any time, with any hon. member during the question period, is always a subject to which I am prepared to listen. I am always prepared to listen to any hon. member in circumstances in which a question has been put that might be subject to some different interpretation. I stopped the hon. member today on her preamble, and I will not hear her on either privilege or order with respect to that particular preamble.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Epp: Mr. Speaker, you called my riding today in order that I might ask a question. After the intervention, you recognized the New Democratic Party. I am wondering whether it was an oversight, or what the reason was.

Mr. Speaker: I do not recall the incident the hon. member is describing. Is he indicating that I called him and something else intervened?

An hon. Member: Yes, it was his leader.

Mr. Speaker: It was not an intentional oversight. I was attempting to balance the representation among the parties. I had the hon. member for Provencher on my list, and I would have recognized him. At the end of the question period, his House leader and the Leader of the Opposition sought the floor, which caused me to divert from the plan I had in mind at that time. They used the remainder of the question period on a very important subject, which unfortunately prevented me from completing the list of speakers in the official opposition, the next one of whom was the hon. member for Provencher.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[English]

LABOUR, MANPOWER AND IMMIGRATION

Fourth report of Standing Committee on Labour, Manpower and Immigration—Miss Nicholson.

[Editor's Note: For text of above report, see today's Votes and Proceedings.]

Labour Education

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order in regard to the bill which is included in the report that has just been tabled. As Your Honour knows, the way the rules are set up it would be technically possible for the government to ask the House to proceed on Monday with the report stage of Bill C-24. On previous occasions when this has happened on a Friday, Your Honour has taken the view that it is the clear intention of the rules that hon. members shall have one clear day in which to get copies of the reprinted bill and to draft and file their report stage amendments. I express the hope that that practice, which has been followed in the past when a bill has been tabled on Friday, will be followed in this case and that members will have until six o'clock on Monday to file their report stage amendments to Bill C-24, which has to do with immigration.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I assume there is no comment to the contrary, or other contributions to be made to the point of order. It is a valid one and one we have taken into consideration on previous occasions. Technically, the operation of Standing Order 75 dealing with report stage amendments would be such that the lapse of 48 hours would permit taking into consideration the report stage of the bill. Within that period, 24 hours would be set aside as a deadline for the filing of report stage amendments. Report stage amendments are a very important aspect of our proceedings with respect to any bill. When a bill is reported to the House on a Friday, as has been done this morning, the operation of that rule would permit, on the face of the language, taking into consideration the report stage of the bill beginning at three o'clock Monday afternoon, or as an order of the day on Monday.

If that were permitted, it would compress the time for the filing of report stage amendments, particularly on a bill of this scope and magnitude, effectively to five o'clock this afternoon or when the administration is able to receive such filings. It seems to me that would clearly frustrate the spirit of the rule, if not the letter of the rule.

The spirit of the rule is to give opportunities to hon. members to reason out their report stage amendments, which are very important aspects of the deliberation of a bill. Therefore, I have no hesitation in keeping with past practices and orders which I have made on previous occasions. I indicate that this bill ought not to be taken into consideration until Tuesday as an order of the day, which will give hon. members an opportunity until six o'clock on Monday to prepare and file report stage amendments.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

* * *

LABOUR

TABLING OF AGREEMENT BETWEEN CANADIAN LABOUR CONGRESS AND GOVERNMENT RESPECTING LABOUR EDUCATION

Hon. John C. Munro (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, I wish to table, in both official languages, the report on the agreement between the Canadian Labour Congress and the government with respect to labour education, which I was requested to do some time ago.

* * *

ANTI-INFLATION BOARD

TABLING OF REFERENCES TO ADMINISTRATOR

Mr. Bob Kaplan (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, pursuant to Standing Order 41(2), and on behalf of the Minister of Finance, I should like to table, in both official languages, two references from the Anti-Inflation Board to the administrator, pursuant to subsection 17(2) of the Anti-Inflation Act, one dealing with Alberta Government Telephones, and the other dealing with St. Boniface school division No. 4, on executive employees.

* * *

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk)

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the following questions will be answered today: 749, 754, 812, 1,169, 1,529, 1,898, 2,313, 2,337, 2,363, 2,541 and 2,751.

[Text]

DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE—EXPENDITURE FOR FURNITURE AND FIXTURES

Question No. 749—Mr. Stevens:

1. What was the total expenditure for (a) furniture and fixtures (b) decorative plants and wall accessories for the Department of Finance offices in Place Bell Canada?

2. (a) For which items were the contracts awarded for decorating (b) to whom were the contracts awarded (c) what was the amount?

3. What is the average expenditure per employee for furniture and fixtures?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Departments of Finance and Public Works as follows: 1. (a) $1,669,668. This amount is the aggregate amount purchased between FY 1971-72 and FY 1976-77. It includes: Furniture, $638,843; Fixtures including wall partitions, lighting fixtures, door frames, doors, drapes and blinds $832,400; Wall units and filing equipment, $198,425; Total expenditures for a six year period, $1,669,668. (b) Decorative plants, including maintenance and replacements, $58,000.; Wall accessories, $2,700.

2. (a) Contracts were awarded for all items of decorating. (b) (i) Decorative Plants: Fines Flowers Ltd. Eric Jensen Greenhouses Limited (ii) Wall accessories: Olympia & York Developments Limited. (c) (i) $45,000; $13,000. (ii) $2,700.

3. Furniture, $778.13; Fixtures, $1,013.88; Wall units and filing equipment $241.69; Total, $2,033.70. The information covers expenditures since occupancy of Place Bell Canada in fiscal year 1971-72, including initial set-up costs for furniture conforming to the design of the building. Thus the average expenditure per employee relates to the six fiscal years from 1971-72 to 1976-77. The amount of $832,400 for fixtures include fixtures used by Joint Administrative Services which serves the Treasury Board Secretariat.

TREASURY BOARD OFFICES—EXPENDITURE FOR FURNITURE AND FIXTURES

Question No. 754—Mr. Stevens:

1. What was the total expenditure for (a) furniture and fixtures (b) decorative plants and wall accessories for the Treasury Board offices in Place Bell Canada?

2. (a) For which items were the contracts awarded for decorating (b) to whom were the contracts awarded (c) what was the amount?

3. What is the average expenditure per employee for furniture and fixtures?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Treasury Board Secretariat and the Department of Public Works as follows: 1. (a) $1,217,895. This amount is the aggregate amount purchased between FY 71/72 and FY 76/77. It includes: furniture, $609,470; fixtures including wall partitions, lighting fixtures, telephones, door frames, doors, drapes and blinds, $410,000; wall units and filing equipment, $198,-425; total expenditure for a six year period, $1,217,895. (b) Decorative plants, including maintenance and replacements, $55,000; wall accessories, $2,900.

2. (a) Contracts were awarded for all items of decorating. (b) (i) Decorative Plants: Fine Flowers Ltd., Eric Jensen Greenhouses Limited. (ii) Wall accessories: Olympia and York Developments Limited. (c) (i) $45,000; $10,000. (ii) $2,900.

3. Furniture, $729.03; fixtures, $490.43; wall units and filing equipment, $237.35; total, $1,456.81. The information covers expenditures since occupancy of Place Bell Canada in fiscal year 1971-72, including initial set-up costs for furniture conforming to the design of the building. The average expenditure was arrived at by dividing the total expenditure for the six fiscal years from 1971-72 to 1976-77 by the current population.

CMHC FUNDING FOR LOW RENTAL HOUSING PROJECT, HAMILTON, ONTARIO

Question No. 812—Mr. McGrath:

1. Did Hamilton contractor Mr. Dominic Morganti apply for CMHC funding for a low rental housing project at (a) Main Place, Main Street West (b) York Place, Queen Street North, Hamilton, Ontario and, if so, on what date?

2. Were Mr. Morganti's applications (a) turned down by CMHC and, if so, for what reasons (b) accepted by CMHC and, if so, what were the arrangements?

3. What are the names of the CMHC officials who made the decisions affecting the financing of the projects?

4. What is the name of the solicitor for Mr. Morganti who negotiated with CMHC?

5. What were the amounts and dates of the advances of all monies made by CMHC to Mr. Morganti from the time CMHC approved the initial loan until CMHC foreclosed on York Place?

6. Were any requests for additional funds for Mr. Morganti for York Place (a) refused and, if so, on what dates (b) accepted by CMHC and, if so (i) in what amounts (ii) on what dates were they approved (iii) what were the details of CMHC's arrangements with Mr. Morganti?

7. Which officials had the ultimate authority for approving the additional amounts granted to Mr. Morganti for York Place?

8. Were there any liens or claims on York Place prior to the additional funds being approved and/or advances being made on the original amount and/or advances being made on the additional amounts approved and, if so, what are the details?

9. (a) What are the names of the solicitors who acted for CMHC with regard to York Place (b) what other work have they done for CMHC and what amount was paid to each (c) are there any claims by CMHC against them and, if so, what are the grounds (d) did the same solicitors work for any other Crown corporation, department or agency and, if so, which Crown corporation, department or agency and what was the amount paid in fees to each?

10. Did CMHC, at any time, receive complaints or protests from any sub-contractors that they were not being paid for their work at York Place and, if so, what action, if any, was taken?

11. Was York Place ever used as collateral on Main Place and, if so, what are the details?

12. From the time the first monies were advanced by CMHC to Mr. Morganti for York Place, did CMHC rank as first mortgage holder in all respects until the time CMHC foreclosed on York Place and, if not, what are the details?

13. Is the mortgage on York Place held by Messrs. Saul Kelner and James Leibel and, if so, what are the details?

14. How much does CMHC estimate it will cost to finish York Place?

15. What is the current assessed value of York Place?

16. Is CMHC satisfied that all the funds approved and advanced to York Place were actually used in York Place?

17. At the time CMHC foreclosed on York Place, what percentage of it was occupied by tenants?

18. At the time York Place first began to accept tenants, was CMHC satisfied with the standards of work throughout the building and, if not, what are the details?

19. Has CMHC received any complaints about the standard of work throughout York Place from officials or authorities representing provincial and/or municipal bodies or agencies and, if so, what are the details of such complaints?

20. As of this date, what is Mr. Morganti's financial and legal relationship with York Place?

21. Does Mr. Morganti hold an undischarged mortgage on York Place and, if so, what are the details?

22. Have there been any charges laid against any officials of CMHC with regard to improper acts relating to the construction of York Place and, if so, what are the details?

Hon. André Ouellet (Minister of State for Urban Affairs): I am advised as follows by Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation: 1. (a) CMHC received an application from Main Place of Hamilton Limited on March 7, 1972 for a student housing loan under Section 47 of the National Housing Act. (b) CMHC received an application for a loan under Section 15, NHA from York Place (Hamilton) Limited on November 4, 1971. The name of the company has since been changed to York Place of Hamilton Inc.

2. (a) The application from Main Place of Hamilton Limited was rejected. The reason for the refusal is not known, the file having been destroyed since the retention period for an unapproved application had elapsed. (b) A loan was approved to York Place of Hamilton Inc. under Section 15 of the NHA. The arrangements included the standard operating agreement used at that time on projects financed under Section 15.

3. Under the procedures in force at the time this loan was approved, the Executive Committee of CMHC gave the final authorization for financing the project, with the commitment to the sponsor being issued by the Manager, Hamilton Office.

4. Solicitors for Mr. Morganti were not involved in the negotiations on the original loan application. Mr. John C. Pelech was involved in making submissions on behalf of Mr. Morganti with respect to the two loan increases.

5. CMHC makes advances on its direct loans jointly to its solicitors and the borrower, but details of mortgage transactions are considered to be privileged information between borrower and lender.

6. (a) A request for an increase on the loan was refused on June 10, 1976. (b) (i) and (ii) An increase of $475,000 was approved on August 27, 1973, and a second increase of $1,054,500 was approved on December 13, 1974. (iii) These increases were subject to the retention of sufficient funds at all times by CMHC to ensure the completion of the project, and the first mortgage to include the personal convenant of Mr. Morganti.

7. See answer to 3 above.

8. Yes, any liens or claims of which CMHC had knowledge were either satisfied at the time the advances were released by its solicitor, or the names of the lien holders or claimants were added as payees to the advance cheques.

9. (a) The solicitor who was acting on behalf of CMHC for the mortgage on York Place of Hamilton Inc. was Stanley F. Dudzic. (b) Mr. Dudzic has handled the mortgage documentation for seven other loans for CMHC, where the borrowers paid the legal fees. (c) CMHC has not made any claims on Mr. Dudzic. (d) CMHC is not aware of any work which Mr. Dudzic may have received from federal departments or agencies or from other Crown corporations.

10. Yes, see answer to 8 above.

11. CMHC is not aware of the York Place of Hamilton Inc. project being used as collateral for Main Place of Hamilton Limited.

12. CMHC's solicitor was authorized to make the advances on the loan, subject to his establishing that "... there are no claims having priority over our mortgage". The solicitor was, therefore, responsible for ensuring that each advance was a first charge.

13. No.

14. The current estimate of $1.2 million, as the cost of completing York Place, is based on a report prepared by an engineering consultant retained by the Receiver appointed by the Supreme Court of Ontario.

15. The municipality carries a current assessed value on its assessment role of $960,139 for York Place.

16. No.

17. When foreclosure action on York Place was begun, 70 per cent of the first tower was occupied, and it was not possible for tenants to occupy the second tower since it was still under construction.

18. Yes.

19. No.

20. Mr. Morganti's financial relationship with York Place is as a mortgagee and as a guarantor, and his legal relationship with York Place is as an officer of York Place of Hamilton Inc.

21. The Abstract of Title discloses that Mr. Morganti holds two mortgages on York Place, one of which was registered on May 2, 1973 in a principal amount of $95,000 and the second registered on November 2, 1973 in a principal amount of $160,000.

22. No.

YORK PLACE—HAMILTON INC.

Question No. 1,169—Mr. Clarke:

1. Was a mortgage(s) granted by York Place of Hamilton Inc., to Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation against a parcel of land of approximately 2.89 acres in the block bounded by York, Queen, Greig, Barton and Oxford Streets being municipally known as 151 Queen Street South, in the City of Hamilton, Ontario and, if so (a) what were the dates and amounts of all advances made under the mortgage(s) (b) what other payments were made by CMHC that constituted a charge against the property (c) as of August 12, 1976, what was the total amount of interest accrued and unpaid and how was this amount calculated (d) was an increase of (i) $475,000 granted in the face value in 1973 (ii) $1,054,500 granted in January, 1975 and, if so, in each case, for what reason (e) were previous applications for increases in the mortgage amount rejected and, if so, for what reason?

2. In what state of completion are the buildings located on the parcel of land described in Part 1?

3. What is the estimated cost of completing the building, appurtenances and amenities on the said parcel of land?

Hon. André Ouellet (Minister of State for Urban Affairs): I am advised by Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation as follows: 1. Yes. (a) See answer to Question 812 answered this day. (b) CMHC paid $37,338.86 on April 15, 1976 to the Corporation of the City of Hamilton for arrears of Realty Taxes. (c) To and including August 12, 1976, accrued and unpaid interest amounted to $1,599,066. The interest has been calculated on the amount of each advance from the date of the advance to and including August 12, 1976, at 7½ per cent compounded semi-annually. (d) (i) Yes (ii) Yes; see answer Question 812 answered this day. (e) No.

2. As of November 4, 1976, Tower A was 100 per cent complete, and Tower B was approximately 88 per cent complete with the exception of certain amenities, underground parking and necessary repairs.

3. See answer to Question 812 answered this day.

SECRETARY OF STATE—USE OF PRIVATE EMPLOYMENT AGENCIES

Question No. 1,529—Mr. McKenzie:

1. Has the Department of the Secretary of State obtained (a) part-time (b) full-time employees from private employment agencies in (i) British Columbia

(ii) Alberta (iii) Saskatchewan (iv) Manitoba (v) Ontario (vi) Quebec (vii) New Brunswick (viii) Nova Scotia (ix) Prince Edward Island (x) Newfoundland and, if so, in each case, how many?

2. Are such employees paid from supplementary estimates and, if not, from what estimates are they paid?

3. By province, what was the (a) average hourly rate paid to employment agencies (b) average hourly rate paid to employees (c) total amount paid by the Department in (i) 1975 (ii) 1976?

Hon. John Roberts (Secretary of State): 1.

	1975/76	1976/77
(i) British Columbia	(a) 2	10
	(b) 0	0
(ii) Alberta	(a) 9	8
	(b) 0	0
(iii) Saskatchewan	(a) 10	10
	(b) 0	0
(iv) Manitoba	(a) 12	7
	(b) 0	0
(v) Ontario	(a) 12	7
	(a) and (b) Our records cannot provide information	Our records provide information from August 2, 1976
		(a) 173; (b) 19
(vi) Quebec	(a) 30	Unable to separate figures by fiscal year
	(b) 0
(vii) New Brunswick	(a) 4	6
	(b) 0	0
(viii) Nova Scotia	(a) 7	14
	(b) 0	0
(ix) Prince Edward Island	(a) 0	0
	(b) 0	0
(x) Newfoundland	(a) 3	3
	(b) 0	0

2. Individuals employed in this manner are paid from funds provided by annual appropriation, normally Main Estimates.

3.

	(a) Average hr/rate Agencies		(b) Average hr/rate Employees
	1975/76	1976/77	1975/76	1976/77
British Columbia	$5.44	$5.95	$3.67	$3.97
Alberta	6.23	5.77	*	*
Saskatchewan	5.55	5.87	*	*
Manitoba	5.30	5.75	*	*
Ontario	*	6.10 (approx.)	*	*
Quebec	*	5.20 (approx.)	*	$4.00 (approx.)
New Brunswick	$5.40	5.50	$4.00	4.45
Nova Scotia	5.80	6.25	4.00	4.45
Prince Edward Island	—	—	—	—
Newfoundland	6.00	7.00	4.00	4.45

*unavailable

(c) (i) Fiscal year 1975-76; Newfoundland, $1,100; Prince Edward Island, —; Nova Scotia, $3,455; New Brunswick; $2,100; Quebec, $44,158; Ontario (includes departmental HQ), $725,930; Manitoba $17,882; Saskatchewan, $4,782; Alberta, $18,006; British Columbia, $2,230; Total $819,643; (ii) Fiscal year 1976-77 (To January 31, 1977) Newfoundland, $1,486; Prince Edward Island, —; Nova Scotia, $7,665; New Brunswick, $2,889; Quebec, $3,529; Ontario (includes departmental HQ), $411,540; Manitoba, $3,486; Saskatchewan, $1,139; Alberta, $3,829; British Columbia, $1,897; Total, $437,460.

Order Paper Questions

CHANGE IN WORDING—NATIONAL ANTHEM OF CANADA

Question No. 1,898—Mr. Herbert:

1. Has the government received any representations concerning the legislation on the National Anthem of Canada in relation to the changing of the word "native" to "cherished" so that the phrase would be "our home and cherished land"?

2. What is the government's intention to ensure a quick and early passage of the bill?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): 1. To the best of our knowledge the government has received no representations to change the word "native" to "cherished" in Bill C-10 concerning the National Anthem of Canada.

2. The government invites assurances from the opposition parties that there would not be prolonged debate on this bill when it is called; up to now, no such assurances have been forthcoming.

PUBLIC SERVICE TRAINING CENTRE AT KEMPTVILLE, ONTARIO

Question No. 2,313—Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton):

Is it the intention of the government to close down the Public Service Training Centre at Kemptville, Ontario, and, if so, what plans are being made to absorb into the Public Service, in other areas, the thirty-three (33) employees who work there?

Hon. John Roberts (Secretary of State): I am informed by the Public Service Commission as follows: On December 2, 1976, the Public Service Commission advised the Department of Public Works that it did not intend to continue use of the Training Centre in Kemptville, Ontario after April 1, 1977. Only one employee was affected by this decision. She has since taken a position with the Public Service Commission in Ottawa. The Commission's course directors were assigned for the periods of the courses only; their permanent worksite was in Ottawa. The Commission also had contracts with the catering firm of Crawley McCracken and the Canadian Corps of Commissionaires for purposes of security. The catering firm generally employed up to seven people, and there were two or three men employed for the security work during two shifts daily and over the weekends.

REGULATION OF INTERPROVINCIAL TRADE AND COMMERCE

Question No. 2,337—Mr. Stevens:

As of December 31 (a) 1968 (b) 1976, how many federal employees were charged with policy-making, or interpretation of policies, regulating interprovincial trade and commerce?

Mr. Hugh Poulin (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): In so far as the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce is concerned: The Department does not regulate interprovincial trade and commerce as such and therefore does not have any employees charged with the development or interpretation of policies relating to the regulation of interprovincial trade and commerce.

Order Paper Questions

LAWYERS AND LAW FIRMS WHO PERFORMED SERVICES FOR CRTC

Question No. 2,363—Mr. O'Sullivan:

For each year since 1972, what is the name and address of each lawyer and law firm in the Constituency of (a) Hamilton—Wentworth (b) Hamilton West (c) Hamilton East (d) Hamilton Mountain (e) Halton—Wentworth (f) Halton (g) Lincoln (h) St. Catharines, who performed services for the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission and, in each case, what was the total amount paid?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Department of Justice and the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission as follows: Nil.

PUBLIC SERVICE—INCREASE IN SALARIES TO DEPARTMENT HEADS

Question No. 2,541—Mr. Robinson:

What was the average increase in salaries given to department heads and deputies in the Public Service in each year 1970 to 1977?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): For the purpose of responding to the hon. member's question, it is understood that the information required is the amount of the increases in the salary ranges for Deputy Ministers and Assistant Deputy Ministers in each year 1970 to 1977. Table I following represents the increase in the mid-point of the Deputy Minister salary ranges, by dollars and by percentage in each year 1970 to 1977. Assistant Deputy Minister positions are classified at the Senior Executive or equivalent levels. Table II following represents the increase in the Senior Executive salary ranges, by dollars and by percentage in each year 1970 to 1977.

Table I

Department Heads

Effective date	$ increase	per cent increase
January 1, 1970	2,280	6.86
January 1, 1971	3,054	8.65
January 1, 1971	2,850	7.38
January 1, 1973	3,716	9.03
April 1, 1974	4,045	8.98
April 1, 1975	4,050	8.56
1976	No increase
1977	A decision regarding the Fifth Report of the Advisory Group on Executive Compensation in the Public Service has not been made.

Table II

Increases in the mid-point of the Senior Executive salary ranges, by dollars and by percentage for the years 1970 to 1977.

	SX-1		SX-2		SX-3		SX-4
	$	%	$	%	$	%	$	%
1970	1,250	5.9	1,000	4.3	1,000	3.8	1,500	4.9
1971	1,250	5.6	1,750	7.1	2,250	8.3	2,500	7.8
1972	1,250	5.3	1,750	6.7	2,250	7.7	2,500	7.2
1973	1,750	7.0	2,250	8.0	2,750	8.7	2,750	7.4
1974	2,250	8.4	2,750	9.1	3,250	9.5	3,250	8.2
1975	3,000	10.3	3,500	10.6	4,000	10.7	4,500	10.5

Actual salaries have veen frozen since December 18, 1975. There have been no range changes in 1976 or 1977.

[Mr. Poulin.]

The effective date of salary range changes in the years 1970 to 1973 inclusive was January 1. In 1974 and 1975 the effective date was April 1.

APPROPRIATED AND BAND FUNDS MANAGED BY INDIAN BANDS

Question No. 2,751—Mr. Smith (Churchill):

1. What is the estimated amount of the appropriated and Band funds to be managed by Indian Bands this fiscal year and what will be the increase over 1976-77?

2. When a Band takes over a programme does the Department retain the man-years and are these man-years redistributed and, if so, what is the rationale for retaining the man-years rather than freeing the monies tied up with these positions for Band use?

Mr. B. Keith Penner (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): 1. In relation to appropriated funds managed by Bands, the 1977-78 Estimates reflect $165.7 million, the related expenditures for 1976-77 amounted to $143.7 million. The estimated increase over 1976-77 is $22.0 million. An additional amount of $9.1 million was expended in 1976-77 for F.L.I.P. operated by Bands. There is no available information for F.L.I.P. for 1977-78. Band Funds managed by Bands in 1976-77 amounted to $47.5 million. The 1977-78 information is not estimated or known at this time.

2. The decision to permit a band to administer a particular program that was formerly managed by the Department, is in many cases made on a band by band basis. That is, an individual analysis of the band's capability to manage the program is made. If some, but not all of the bands assume responsibility for a particular programme, the net effect on the overall workload of the department is marginal. It must also be noted that very often the type of work rather than the volume of work is the significant result of the change. In many situations while the day-to-day operations role is reduced, the departmental role vis-à-vis monitoring is increased. The resulting overall workload is not as a result significantly reduced. Over the past few years the Indian Affairs Program has reduced its total man years from 6,878 to 6,021 while at the same time expanding the number of employees in certain programs and reducing others.

● (1210)

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Shall the remaining questions be allowed to stand?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

AIR CANADA ACT, 1976

MEASURE RESPECTING REORGANIZATION OF AIR CANADA

The House proceeded to the consideration of Bill C-17, respecting the reorganization of Air Canada, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Transport and Communications.

Mr. Speaker: There are nine motions on the notice paper to amend Bill C-17. Motions 1, 2 and 3 stand in the name of the hon. member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski), and I gather they could be grouped for debate. However, the Chair has some concern about the procedural regularity of motion No. 3, which would appear to be defective in that it goes beyond the scope of the clause which it seeks to amend, that is, clause 6 which deals with the capacities and activities of the corporation and, more particularly, in subclause (4) with the establishment of subsidiaries. Essentially, the proposition contained in subclause (4) is that the corporation shall not do certain things without the authorization of the governor in council. But motion No. 3 seeks to import a new proposition by adding the concept of public hearings and publication, which are not part of clause 6.

I would, of course, be prepared to hear argument on that point when we come to it. However, I want to advise hon. members also that clauses 4 to 9, inclusive, could be grouped for debate but would be voted upon separately if necessary. So there would be, essentially, two groups of votes and separate votes, if necessary, on each of the motions in the second group.

Mr. Mazankowski: That is certainly agreeable to members on this side of the House. Perhaps the government will be disposed to accept motion No. 1 and, if so, motion No. 3 might be answered in part. So we shall be able to deal with the thrust of motions Nos. 1 and 2 and perhaps, with the permission of hon. members, we might be able to broaden the debate sufficiently to include argument having to do with motion No. 3. However, I am optimistic that the government will have second thoughts about motion No. 1. Hopefully, they will accept it—and that would be satisfactory to us.

Mr. Speaker: For the moment, then, the House might launch into a discussion of motions Nos. 1 and 2 with the idea that some reference of an explanatory nature might be made to the substance of motion No. 3. But I shall not put the question on motion No. 3 at this time. After discussion has been concluded on motions Nos. 1 and 2, it might be necessary for the Chair to hear further argument and make a decision with respect to motion No. 3. For the moment, then, the discussion is on motions Nos. 1 and 2, both in the name of the hon. member for Vegreville, seconded by the hon. member for Edmonton Centre (Mr. Paproski).

Mr. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville) moved:

Motion No. 1.

Air Canada

That Bill C-17, respecting the reorganization of Air Canada, be amended in clause 6 by striking out line 25 at page 2 and substituting the following therefor:

"vehicles necessarily or incidental to movements by air freight into or within Canada, and in compliance with highway transport regulations in each province, and facilities for the transport—"

Motion No. 2.

That Bill C-17, respecting the reorganization of Air Canada, be amended in clause 6

(a) by striking out lines 14 to 17 at page 3;

(b) by striking out lines 18 to 21 at page 3 and substituting the following therefor:

"(2) For the purpose of carrying out the activities referred to in subsection (1), the corporation has the capacity, rights, powers, privileges, duties and obligations of a natural person."

and by renumbering subclause 4 as subclause 3.

He said: Mr. Speaker, as you correctly pointed out, the three motions which I have proposed, two of which we are now debating, are closely related, so we on this side welcome the idea of discussing the contents of the motions as one. The bill to reorganize Air Canada is one which we in our party have welcomed. The legislation serves to broaden the scope of the activities of the corporation.

Clause 6(1) outlines the capacities and the activities of the corporation. Clause 6(1)(i) is an umbrella or catch-all provision enabling the corporation to do such other things as are necessary or incidental to the carrying out of its activities. Then we go to clause 6(2) which gives the governor-in-counsel power to authorize the corporation to engage in or carry on activities not otherwise authorized by the act. So the powers which it is suggested should be delegated to the corporation and to the governor in council are extremely broad and discretionary. It is for this reason I have moved motion No. 1.

There is a great deal of concern with respect to the possibility of Air Canada engaging in trucking activities for hire beyond its primary purpose. The scope of the activities and capacities suggested in the bill has given rise to a great deal of concern among those engaged in the trucking industry, an industry which is essentially in private hands and which is represented by well over 13,000 individual business entrepreneurs. At a time when we are placing a great deal of emphasis on the needs of small business and trying to develop a policy which will maintain and foster the strenght of small business in this country, it is necessary to take every precaution to ensure that this important section of our economy is preserved and that nothing is done which will undermine the capacity of small business enterprises to survive, grow, and participate fully in the nation's economic life.

I believe the bill is weak in that it fails to provide sufficient protection to the trucking industry. We know that Air Canada has become a competitor with the for-hire trucking industry in the movement of goods of high value between metropolitan centres. Competition between plane and truck already exists on a trans-continental basis. I am told the service between Toronto and Vancouver is such that straight air cargo shipments do not arrive at their destination any quicker than those sent by the expedited trans continental trucking service now provided. It is anticipated that as progress is made there will be increased scope for intermodal competition between airplane and truck wherever quality of service implications and especially the guarantee of rapid delivery, are important to the shipper and the consignee.

● (1220)

The concern of the trucking industry is that the bill does not adequately protect and enhance the economic benefits to be gained from intermodal competition, and that by failing to do so Air Canada might be disposed or persuaded at some time to engage in surface transport such as for-hire trucking on the routes which are presently served by air freight. Certainly, it is air freight that is primarily the corporation's responsibility in the movement of freight. The fact that Air Canada has reorganized its corporate structure to give greater responsibility and autonomy to its freight division highlights the emphasis which Air Canada is placing on freight movement, and also, I might say, serves to highlight the concerns that the truckers have expressed.

The evidence presented in committee by the president of Air Canada indicated that he was optimistic about the future of air freight. He emphasized the buoyancy of the air freight division, and for that reason a separate and identifiable branch of the corporation is being established. The truckers believe that genuine air freight will come under increasing direct truck competition, and that because of the cost and service implications on some routes Air Canada may find itself under great pressure to try to do the same thing as the for-hire trucking industry so as to retain what they consider to be their fair share of freight volume and to protect their hold on that element of their business.

The assurances which the president of Air Canada has given, to the effect that genuine air freight will go to the truckers, are not well founded. They believe—and I tend to concur—that there will be a growing requirement in this country for express freight service on high valued goods. But that does not necessarily mean, given the experiences we have had over the last five years, that this service will be provided primarily by air. As I said earlier, we have clear examples of one trucking firm at least offering expedited service on a regular basis between Toronto and Vancouver and, in terms of time and cost, it is outperforming air freight. So with this kind of competition, and if the airline is determined to exploit the air freight sector, it could very well find itself using trucks on many intercity routes.

In my view, there is nothing in Bill C-17 which effectively prohibits or even limits the ability of Air Canada to engage in for-hire trucking, either in substitution for existing air freight service through trucks owned directly by the corporation or acquiring such entities from existing for-hire trucking companies. I submit that there is no valid reason for Crown corporations functioning in the rail or air mode to engage in for-hire trucking in competition with the primary function of the corporation.

To reiterate, the for-hire trucking industry has proved to be one mode where private enterprise has been successful in providing an adequate service and effective competition in practically all parts of the country. The trucking industry has done an excellent job in providing service to all parts of the country, despite some formidable obstacles, despite some difficulties in terms of variations of rules and regulations applied from province to province, despite climatic conditions and the realities of our geography.

The Minister of Transport (Mr. Lang) has stated that limitations and safeguards exist in clause 6(1)(b) and clause 6(4). Regardless of the present intent of the minister and his officials, or indeed the assurances of Air Canada management, the so-called safeguards contained in the act are vague and, I suggest, meaningless if one looks at the CNR experience. I want to deal with that for a moment, because I think it is totally relevant to the issue which we are now discussing. Since 1952, CNR has acquired or set up trucking subsidiaries which make it one of the largest for-hire truck undertakings in the country. Section 27 of the CNR act restricts CNR's ability to engage in motor vehicle operation to the extent that such investments have to be operated in conjunction with or in substitution for rail services. But if we look at the operations of the CNR trucking industry today, we find that CNR's network of for-hire trucking operation parallels their mainline trans-continental rail operations. So the spirit and thrust of the act do not really apply. In my view, that was obviously not the intent and spirit of section 27, so it has been circumvented—there can be no question about that—and I share the truckers' concern that the safeguards in the bill are no more substantial than those contained in the CNR act.

Section 31 of the CNR act states that CN may acquire any company or any business incidental to the working of a railway, or any business that, in the opinion of the board of directors, may be carried on in the interest of CNR, with the approval of the governor in council. There is enough latitude there for the CNR to engage in the trucking subsidiary, as it has done. When the for-hire trucking industry challenged CN's authority, they were rebuffed by the court. The Quebec court of appeal found, among other things, that governor in council approval of these expenditures, plus the CNR finance and security act, superseded any legislative limitation contemplated in section 27 of the CNR act. Furthermore, the fact that governor in council approval was given rendered provincial public hearings useless. If the governor in council considered it to be in the public interest to approve such an acquisition, the provincial boards simply followed suit and the hearing process became useless and provided no element of protection.

It is assumed that governor in council approval is always within the public interest and, therefore, the provincial regulatory bodies would assume the acquisition as a fait accompli. As I said before, regardless of the intent of the Minister of Transport and the president of Air Canada that such an experience would not occur again, these promises, I submit, are of a short-term nature. If that assurance is to be provided and if the minister is sincere—and I believe he is—I see no reason why that protection should not be enshrined in the legislation. We have a habit of moving ministers around, and while this minister may place one interpretation on the act, another minister may take a different view. I think the minister has a tremendous amount of power in influencing his cabinet colleagues with regard to an acquition of that nature. The present wording of clause 6(1) is as follows:

The corporation may—

(b) buy, sell, lease, construct or otherwise acquire, dispose of and maintain and operate as necessary or incidental to the operation of the corporation's business, aircraft, hotels and other accommodation, surface vehicles and facilities for the transportation and housing of persons, goods and mail;—

I want to draw attention to the words "corporation's business". I think that under the existing act the definition of "corporation's business" is vague, misleading and open to interpretation. What we are really concerned about is that when we refer to air freight we know there is designated air freight which never sees the inside of an aeroplane. The concern here is that under the present loose wording of the act, Air Canada should very easily engage in the utilization of trucks on intercity routes presently served by air freight on the basis that it is incidental to the over-all operations of the corporation's business on a national basis.

● (1230)

The amendment which we have proposed would only serve to confirm the assurances the minister has given in this House and in committee that Air Canada's involvement in the trucking industry will be limited to that which is necessary or incidental to the operation of the corporation's business. I reiterate that the assurance which has been given by the minister should be enshrined and clearly stated in the legislation. Suspicions that if this amendment is rejected, Air Canada would encroach, are based upon statements made by Mr. Taylor to the effect that he sees a very bright future for the movement of air freight, but he is very careful to designate whether that freight will be moving by aircraft or by truck.

We have absolutely no objection to Air Canada's engaging in the movement of highly-valued freight and delivering it by truck as part and parcel of its air cargo service, but to allow Air Canada to engage in intercity trucking and for-hire operations is something to which I object. As a Crown corporation created by parliament to fulfil a particular purpose, to be in a position to opt out of that prime responsibility with facility when faced with competition, in a sense Air Canada is picking the taxpayers' pockets and buying up competition from another mode in order to engage in a business for which Air Canada was not, clearly, given a specific mandate by parliament.

When a Crown corporation determines that its economic well-being requires encroachment into an area outside the scope of its enabling legislation, the matter is first broached with Transport Canada officials who are responsible for air administration on a day to day basis, and support from this source, nine times out of ten, is tantamount to approval in principle in accordance with clause 6(4) which says, "The corporation shall not, without the authorization, by order, of the Government in Council." Then it goes on to outline the number of areas in which the corporation is governed in terms of the authority granted to it by order in council.

What bothers us further is what we will see developing in the transportation industry over the next decade. Rapidly rising costs may affect one mode to a greater extent than another, and where service characteristics are similar, such as they are between air and truck in many cases, the lower cost mode may become overwhelmingly attractive. If increases in fuel costs should have a greater impact on the air mode than on the trucking mode, possibly trucking will acquire a significantly greater cost advantage over air freight than at present. The tendency of a Crown corporation, like any company, is to move into new and more attractive fields rather than to wither away. The CN is a clear example of that. The difference is that a Crown corporation does not face the same financial constraints as private enterprise, regardless of any limitation to its mandate. In my view, Air Canada should not have the facility to involve the federal government further by way of direct investment in for-hire trucking in order to stay in the freight business. As a minimum, something more than the presently contemplated review procedure in clause 6(4) should be contained in this legislation. That is really the thrust of my second motion, failing the adoption of motion No. 1. As a minimum it seems logical that an effective review procedure should be inserted in the bill to provide sufficient notice for any intended acquisitions of existing trucking firms or the creation of new ones.

What is even more distressing to the largely private trucking industry are the implications of clause 6(2) when combined with the principal thrust of Bill C-33, the new National Transportation Act. Particularly, section 3(1) and section 3(2) of that act give the minister very broad discretionary powers to the point of almost dictating what mode of service shall be used to ship a given item to a given point. That kind of unorthodox power is frightening. For example, the minister can inquire into the relationship between the various modes of transport within, to and from Canada. The minister can undertake measures to achieve co-ordination in the operation, development, regulation and control of those various modes of transport. That is provided in section 3(3)(b). Section 3(1)(c) provides:

—and it is further declared that achievement of the objective of the transport policy for Canada requires the integration of services employing the most appropriate modes for each service and that it is the responsibility of governments to attend to the provision of the transportation system.

Those are very broad powers in terms of intermodal integration. Under the provisions of the National Transportation Act which are contemplated, the minister will be able to issue directions to the Canadian Transport Commission, which is the regulatory body, so we really have a nullification of the Canadian Transport Commission under the provisions of Bill C-33. To me, that is overkill in the strongest and strangest sense that I have ever seen in this House. If, in fact, the governor in council should approve a trucking acquisition, this would have the effect of section 27 of the National Transportation Act, which provides for a review procedure, being redundant, thus giving the affected truckers no avenue for an adequate hearing. Surely, as a minimum, adequate provisions for review should be established in the event an acquisition takes place or a new enterprise is established.

Short of an outright prohibition against the purchase of shares or other interests in for-hire trucking undertakings, I believe governor in council sanctions should not be exercised unless or until interested parties have been given notice and have had the opportunity to comment to the Minister of Transport. The minister will turn around and say that this still has to be approved by provincial regulatory bodies. I say that before any government orders in council approve the acquisition of or the establishment of a for-hire trucking enterprise, adequate notice should be given to the industry, because to allow this to lay in the hands of provincial regulatory bodies is not sufficient, and there would not be sufficient time, in many cases, for the trucking industry adequately to prepare and study all the consequences and implications of a move such as that.

To my mind, inclusion of such a provision would not create a hardship since, pursuant to section 27 of the National Transportation Act and provincial highway transport board requirements dealing with mergers and acquisitions, Air Canada would have to give notice of acquisition for the purpose of allowing interested parties to object before the various regulatory tribunals. The difference is—and I repeat this—that governor in council approval is how the issue is usually resolved.

Past experience reveals that, pursuant to section 27 of the National Transportation Act, when orders in council are given it is assumed that approval becomes a fait accompli, and to a large extent the provincial boards abdicate their review responsibility. I would hope the minister would seriously consider motion No. 1. I know he will say to the House that there are sufficient assurances and guarantees to allay the fears I have been expressing.

● (1240)

I respectfully submit that the close examination I have given this legislation, and the examination that has been so thoroughly conducted by the Canadian Trucking Association, show that there is not sufficient protection in the bill to assure the truckers of a fair chance to engage in dialogue with the minister before any acquisition is made or a trucking enterprise is created under the aegis of Air Canada.

I should like now to deal briefly with motion No. 2 which has the effect of striking out the following:

> The governor in council may, by order, authorize the corporation to engage in or carry on any activities not otherwise authorized by this act.

I propose this simply because of the fears I have of Air Canada engaging in this extra-trucking activity. As I said earlier, its capacities and activities have been broadened extensively. Excessive powers have been granted over the activities and capacities as outlined in clause 6(1)(d) and (i), and we have further order in council powers authorized under clause 8.

[Mr. Mazankowski.]

The minister indicated in committee that he sees this particular provision being used only in extraordinary circumstances, so I certainly do not see any reason for leaving it in the act. I do not think Air Canada needs any more power, whether it is directly contained in the act or granted to it by order in council. If we are to go beyond the powers enshrined in this legislation, it is certainly a matter that should be referred to parliament. When you combine the thrust of this legislation with the thrust of the new National Transportation Act, it provides greater power to the government to dictate and manage the transportation industry of this country. We do not need this sort of ad hoc direction. We need some clearly defined policies and limitations, because we will soon be seeking huge investments in the transportation industry. What we need is continuity of policy and not the day-to-day intervention of the government.

I would hope that through the hearings on the National Transportation Act we will be able to define a realistic national transportation policy with minimal government intervention and will be able to allow the trucking enterprises to strike out on their own and do a job consistent with the delineation of a national transportation policy and with a minimum of ministerial interference. If we can do that, we will avoid the kind of ad hockery that is bound to come with a change of minister. I think it is fair to say that this minister has brought greater stability to the transportation industry than there was in the past. I commend him for that. We do not always agree with his policies, but I think we were successful in getting a clearer definition of the mandate and mission of Air Canada. I think our feelings generally correspond with the minister's feelings in that area.

I hope the minister will seriously reconsider motion No. 1, as I do not think it will hurt or impede the operations of Air Canada. If it were accepted, I would be happy to withdraw the other two motions standing in my name. There may be one or two speakers on our side who wish to engage in this debate, Mr. Speaker, so I will just call upon the minister to consider my motion seriously. It is an important motion, and would serve to dispel the fears of the trucking industry and create a better mood of confidence, stability and continuity which is what we really need at this time when we are engaged in a huge investment in the transportation infrastructure. It is something that will come about not only through the private sector but through the involvement of public funds.

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the objectives of the hon. member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) in bringing forward these amendments. We have discussed them in committee, but I know that one of his purposes—and I assure him that I share it—is to allay the fears of interested parties concerning what may happen with this bill. I believe that in committee I gave those assurances, but I will repeat them here. In putting the new structure of Air Canada before the House, we could have gone to the Canadian Business Corporation and given it all the powers of a natural person in relation to its activities. That would have been seen by some as giving the corporation and management of the board the broad power to engage in activities that are the responsibility of ministers and of government.

We chose not to go that route, and therefore set out in detail the greater powers of the corporation. That leaves open the danger that certain powers might not be found to exist when the corporation wants to act, hence we included in the bill a clause which allows for expansion of those powers by approval of the governor in council and, therefore, the full authority, approval and responsibility of the government. We cited technical cases where that kind of additional power might be needed, or might have been needed in the past, to allow the corporation to get into computer operations, and those things that might arise in the future.

It is implicit in the bill that Air Canada is meant to operate essentially on a commercial basis and not to be able to rely on its position of being owned by the government, nor give it unfair advantage over its competitors in any way, even in the air mode where it will be competing directly. It certainly would not be extended to other modes in any unfair way. That should give some assurance to those who would be seriously concerned. It is not intended that the corporation expand to other modes of transportation at this point. Should that happen, it is a fact that in the case of trucking, obviously the industry would want to know that there are rules applicable to them and that others were applied to Air Canada. That is the essential thrust of the first motion of the hon. member. We resist it, as he knows, not because of its spirit but because the essential requirement of compliance with the highway transportation regulations in each province is already part of our fabric of law and administration. I would not want to see some apparently special treatment reserved in this particular case.

Under our general law in regard to trucking—even interprovincial and international trucking—we gave full authority on an administrative and legal basis to the provincial boards operating there before the constitutional position was determined, and we intend that should be the main basis of control and development in relation to trucking in the future.

● (1250)

While I understand the hon. member's concern and can appreciate why the hon. member for Vegreville reintroduced his motions, I urge the House not to accept them and to retain the bill in the form as reported by the committee.

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, if one examines transcontinental operations of both the CNR and CPR, one will note that the railways for many years have found it more profitable to move a substantial proportion of the commodities they handle by truck rather than by rail. Therefore, I am not surprised at the concern of the hon. member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) that Air Canada may find it more profitable or convenient to transport by truck commodities it at one time transported by air. It may happen, and if it does it will illustrate the correctness of the position my party has taken for many years, that it is impossible to develop in this country an efficient transportation system which will meet the needs of all the people of Canada if you consider each mode of transportation in isolation from other modes.

If we are concerned about cost, we should not be concerned merely about the direct cost to customers but about the total cost which the customer and the community must meet. We must consider the total cost of airline service, which includes the cost of building airports, the cost of an air traffic control system, the cost of a weather report service, and so on. Similarly, when considering road transport we must consider the cost of building highways. We cannot deal with each mode of transport in isolation. This bill attempts to deal with the difficulties of Air Canada as if Air Canada is a transport entity unto itself. In the past we have dealt with the difficulties of Air Canada as though they are isolated, and with the problems of the railways and the bus companies as though they are isolated.

Almost every study we have commissioned in this country in recent years has concluded that we should not examine the operations of our airlines or railways, or bus companies, or even our private automobiles, in isolation but that, rather, we should consider the over-all effect of all modes of transport and bring forward policies which will enable us to use each of these modes of transport with the utmost efficiency and lowest over-all cost to the community. The intent of this bill is to let Air Canada do its job better. That is precisely what I don't like about it. The former minister of transport, Mr. Marchand, said it is difficult to consider the operations of Air Canada, of CNR or of CPR, or of trucking companies, in isolation. Back in 1975 he said:

> Transportation policy must therefore recognize the fact that there is a wide range of facilities and services, operating under different degrees of maturity and competition. It must enable each to be treated in an appropriate manner, and not, as is now the case, as exceptions to a policy which relies principally on competition.

In that speech he talked about the difference between providing service to the Quebec city-Niagara Falls corridor which has available to it the services of rail, trucks, ships, aircraft, and the private automobile, and providing service to western Canada where most commodities must be shipped by rail. One can compare service in the north, where a great proportion of commodities must be shipped by air. I suggest our transport policy does not yet recognize this as a fact. The former minister of transport, in a speech made in 1975, said transportation policy in Canada is "a mess". That comment accurately described our transport policy and was probably the most graphic comment that minister made while serving in this House.

We are supposedly operating under a new transport policy, but it is just the same old transportation policy under which we operated previously. The minister relies on competition, commercial viability, and his now famous concept of user-pay. It would take me days to illustrate the falseness of that concept and the impossibility of applying the used-pay principle, and it should be obvious to anyone who studies the subject that user-pay will not work. People could not live in some parts of this country if you applied the user-pay principle to them.

May I call it one o'clock, Mr. Speaker?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order, please. It being one o'clock, I do now leave the chair until two o'clock p.m.

At one o'clock the House took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The House resumed at 2 p.m.

Mr. Orlikow: Just before the lunch break I indicated the feeling of our party with regard to one of the major defects of this bill, and indeed every bill dealing with transportation brought in by this government. It attempts to—deal with one small phase of the total—transportation picture, in this case Air Canada.

As I indicated earlier today and on other occasions, all the evidence shows that we in Canada need to look at the total transportation picture. We must work out a comprehensive and coordinated transportation policy using all forms of transportation to their maximum efficiency in order to give the greatest social benefits and advantages to the people of Canada. This is why I am concerned about most of the amendments brought in by the hon. member for Vegreville on behalf of the official opposition. In committee I spoke out against one of the hon. member's amendments which the minister accepted. He revised the bill to include it. That is, that it should be written into the bill that Air Canada should have as one of its objectives the making of a profit.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Its main objective.

Mr. Orlikow: Its main objective should be to make a profit. I dealt with that aspect in committee. My colleague, the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles), intends to deal with it as well. It is a great mistake. Air Canada is our national air carrier. It is owned by the people of Canada. It must continue to service areas in which it cannot possibly make a profit. I think of the maritime provinces which have a relatively low population, some of the short hauls in western Canada which, thanks to the minister, have not been permitted to develop, northern Ontario and the Arctic. If that policy is followed, it will have a tremendously detrimental effect.

Because I am not likely to be here for the whole of the debate, I wish to mention one item in particular. In today's Montreal Gazette there is a story headed "Travel firm plans $209 B.C. return". This story indicates that yesterday the federal government opened the way for cheaper domestic air fares, possibly as low as $209 for a return trip Montreal to Vancouver. It states that the cost of a ticket from Toronto or Montreal to Vancouver will be cut in half. Travel agents are enthused. It is a step in the right direction, but I urge the minister to give thought to the real problem. One reason we have a deficit in foreign exchange is as a result of Canadians travelling outside of Canada. During the winter months, Canadians want to visit such places as Hawaii, Florida, Great Britain, Spain, Portugal, and so on. There is not much we can do about the weather. Tens of thousands of people are now travelling from Vancouver, Winnipeg, Toronto and Montreal to other countries. They are travelling to other countries, not because the price of a ticket from Montreal or Toronto to Vancouver is so high, though that is partly the reason, but because if one takes a trip to Hawaii, London, Amsterdam, the coast of Portugal, or Miami, Florida, one is able not just to buy a cheaper air ticket for the flight but a package which includes air fare, hotel and meals. This is virtually impossible in Canada, and such packages certainly are not advertised.

• (1410)

I had my office call some hotels in Vancouver this morning, and this is what I was told. The rate for two in a double room at the Georgia Hotel is $35 per night. At the Airport Hyatt it is $35 to $39 a night. At the Bayshore Inn it is $47 to $58 a night. At the Holiday Inn downtown it is $35 a night. I am not being critical of the hotels in Vancouver; if the people of Vancouver travel to Toronto or Ottawa they will pay even more. My wife came to Ottawa a couple of months ago. The Chateau was full, so she stayed at the Four Seasons, and speaking from memory it cost her somewhere between $45 to $50 single for one night. This is no way to encourage Canadians to travel in Canada, and neither does it encourage tourists to come to Canada from abroad.

If Air Canada really wants to expand its business, I suggest to the Minister of Transport that it not only offer charter fares but that it negotiate with major hotels in Canada in regard to reducing their rates at least for charter or group travellers. Then people in eastern Canada will be able to visit Calgary or Vancouver, and vice-versa, on a package tour basis which includes air travel, hotel accommodation and, hopefully, meals, similar to package tours to Hawaii, Miami, London, Portugal or Spain.

I urge the minister to use the provisions of this bill, which provides in clause 6(1) as follows:

> The corporation may, within and outside Canada, (a) establish and operate the business of an air carrier;
>
> (b) buy, sell, lease, construct or otherwise acquire, dispose of and maintain and operate as necessary or incidental to the operation of the corporation's business, aircraft, hotels and other accommodation—

I am not saying that Air Canada should go into the hotel business; that may not be necessary. But I do think they should use the powers they have to help develop the kind of travel in Canada which would, if successful, as I am sure it would be, save a great deal of foreign exchange which now escapes this country with so many people travelling outside Canada. Secondly, and more importantly, it would help people in one part of Canada to get to know people in another part. I urge the minister to do some of these things I have suggested and to make this legislation worth while and meaningful.

Mr. Arnold Malone (Battle River): Mr. Speaker, I want to take part in this debate because motions Nos. 1 and 2 which we are debating at the moment have as their intent the placing of limits on the growth of Crown corporations, causing them, in effect, to restrict their input into Canadian society. In recent years there has been growth in excess of 1,000 Crown corporations. It is not just the number of Crown corporations which makes the difference in terms of whether or not we are going to have a society left for free and enterprising people; it is also the scope with which various enterprises, Crown corporations, can extend themselves which is important.

One thing that is obvious in the writ of Bill C-17 is that it offers a broad-ranging scope to enable this Crown corporation, Canadian National, or Air Canada, to participate in a considerable amount of current enterprises being undertaken in Canada by the private sector. As the hon. member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) mentioned, the trucking industry of this country is very likely to face increasing competition. In response to the hon. member for Vegreville, the minister pointed out that he would give certain assurances, as minister, that there would be some competition in the trucking area under the regulations. However, I suggest we need much more than an assurance from a member of the cabinet or from the government of the day if the future of the industry is to be at all predictable. The industry affected by this legislation has to know what are the rules of the game, and these should be enshrined in the statute. Under this bill we simply do not know the rules of the game.

Last year, Air Canada lost $20 million in its operations. Let me compare that with Northwest Airlines of the United States, which has about the same capital input, approximately the same number of aircraft, and travels each year approximately the same number of air miles. While Air Canada lost $20 million, Northwest Airlines made a profit in the same period of over $100 million. On the other hand—and this is the difference between the two—Air Canada, a Crown-owned corporation, had almost double the staff of the privately-owned Northwest Airlines. That is an important piece of information to bear in mind when we have today a very efficient, free enterprise trucking industry throughout Canada. Under the provisions of this bill at the present time, CN, which generally trucks only from the railway to storehouses and back again, or between aeroplanes, shuttling back and forth, could very easily become a full-fledged trucking enterprise.

● (1420)

That situation is appalling and frightening to all Canadians. It would not be another Crown corporation, but it would engulf another enterprise. At the present time we have in excess of 1,000 Crown-owned enterprises operating in this country. We have to recognize that some of these corporations are expanding so as to engulf larger and larger proportions of what was previously private dollars.

At the present time, Canadian National Railways has its airline, Air Canada, its hotels, ships, recreation resorts, railways and shopping centres. It is becoming a very extensive operation on behalf of the public sector. Approximately 15 years ago, 28 per cent of the gross national product went for public spending in Canada. Today, something in the order of 42 per cent of our gross national product is going for public spending.

Almost all economists are in full agreement that the private sector creates wealth and, at best, the public sector redistributes wealth. When we take an analysis of what has happened during the past years, we realize more and more that the public sector is taking an increasing percentage of the gross national product. In the past decade and a half we have gone from 28 per cent to 42 per cent. If you put this on a pie-shaped graph and you expand your total GNP and the public "take" out of it, the obvious answer is that there is that much less left over for the private sector.

Thus, we get into situations whereby we have a problem with our balance of payments, with the creativity of wealth in the country and with unemployment. A portion of that is related to the type of bill we have at the present time which provides for the expansion of Crown corporations to operate more and more in areas which were traditionally part of the private sector. While there may have been a motive for the government to make an effort in terms of trying to assist Canadians in the exploration of oil and gas, the natural conclusion ought not to have been to develop Petro-Can as it was in the bill put before the House of Commons.

That act dealt with the exploration and search for hydrocarbon fuels. It also referred to service stations at street level where grease-jockeys jacked up cars and serviced them as a Crown corporations. While we have not moved to that phase, this bill is another example of the government moving into the private sector right down to street level. Do we want our cars to be serviced and looked after by the same people who run the Post Office? When we take a look at the Post Office, we see an institution which turned a profit for this country 15 years ago and lost $700 million this past year. As we take a look at Bill C-17, one of the reasons these two amendments have been placed before the House is to put some limitations on the extent to which Crown corporations can grow.

The trucking industry needs a forum for the airing of grievances, and it needs an assurance of predictability. A sensible private trucking industry cannot operate across this country if at the same time the government of Canada is involved in that business. Few people recognize that Canadian National is the biggest trucking corporation in Canada today. Regardless of the assurances by the minister, the trucking industry as a subsidiary of Air Canada can expand into direct competition with the last of our enterprising people.

A young person starts out by purchasing a truck in order to operate his own business. It is inexcusable of the government to leave a loophole in its legislation allowing for the largest trucking sector to expand in direct competition with the trucking industry. The Minister of Transport (Mr. Lang) gives assurances that if we do not have more than that, then it is a pretty weak case for people purchasing fleets of trucks in order to get into the industry. The objectives of these people are to service the country and expand their businesses. They have been given nothing but assurances by the minister that he will not do it, but the legislation allows for it.

In terms of growth, this legislation could place restrictions, and therefore this amendment must be debated. If the government becomes involved in the trucking industry, then we have to look at all Crown corporations. We have to look at the Post Office and their $700 million loss over the past year. We have to take a look at Air Canada which lost $20 million and compare that to Northwest Airlines which made a profit of $100 million operating as a private industry. Both airlines had the same type of capital input, amount of planes and number of air miles travelled. Two years ago Air Canada lost $19 million in the most lucrative part of Canada—Toronto to Ottawa to Montreal. It is inconceivable that any company could lose so much in that lucrative area known as the golden triangle.

