Mr. Joe Clark (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I rise on the same question. Let me preface my remarks by saying that since the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Gillespie) has now amended his original position and has at least asked to consider requests for specific documents, we will take him up on that offer. I can advise the minister that it will be a very long list, and we would like to have a very expeditious reply.

We would also expect to have the kind of consent which would allow the parliament and people of Canada to get to the bottom of this question. I repeat what my colleague for Grenville-Carleton (Mr. Baker) has said, that access to information which will make a debate in this House useful and effective will, of course, be a condition precedent to our agreeing to a debate, because we do not intend to have a debate in which the information is hidden away in the back pocket of the minister.

If I might briefly repeat what others of my colleagues have said in argument on the question of privilege, we are not asking at all that Your Honour come to some decision on the competence of a legal opinion that two senior, respected firms in the city of Toronto felt constrained from participating in any way in any activity which had to do with these documents. Your Honour is not being asked to judge whether or not they were right. The point at issue here, with the greatest respect, is that the existence of this order in council prohibits, and has prohibited, the hon. member for York-Simcoe (Mr. Stevens)—it is not a theoretical matter; it is not potential or a threat; it is something that has happened—from seeking the kind of external advice regarding a complicated matter which he requires to have in order to carry out his responsibilities as an effective member of the House of Commons of Canada.

Again I emphasize that this is not a threat; it is not something which is potential. This is something which has happened to the hon. member for York-Simcoe on two occasions with respect to two separate, respected, substantial law firms in the city of Toronto. Their interpretation—which is an interpretation by very reputable counsel—of this order in council is such that it prevents them from giving a member the information that he requires to carry out his functions as effectively as he would want to in the House of Commons. Consequently, it interferes with his capacity to perform his functions in the House of Commons.

I want to emphasize that while most of us are prepared to rely on our own instincts and advice, there are many specialized questions of particular complexity where it is essential for members of parliament, in order to do their job, to seek outside, specialized advice. As the hon. member for York-Simcoe has indicated, this is clearly one of those cases. This is even more the case in an atmosphere which has been developed deliberately by members of the government when in answer to any request for an inquiry into any kind of question they ask the members on this side to make a charge before they will divulge any information.

The hon. member for York-Simcoe, in anticipation that this latest attempt at a cover-up would bring forth the same response as earlier attempts at cover-up, went to legal counsel to seek advice in order to be in a position to function in the House of Commons within the ground rules the government is trying to impose upon this House. The fact that a member of parliament is precluded by this order in council from seeking the kind of expert advice he needs to carry out his duties is a clear interference with his rights. I should like to make two other brief points.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Clark: This is a question that is different from the normal request to table documents. We are dealing here with documents that would be available to the public in the normal course. They are not available to the public because of this particular order in council. Therefore, that takes the case we are discussing out of the context of the ordinary and makes it a very extraordinary case.

Members of the Official Opposition have been faced not simply with a threat but with a real interference, flowing from this document, to our capacity to do our duty. I should report to the House that the hon. member for Ottawa-Carleton (Mrs. Pigott), in pursuing her responsibilities as a member of this House, was in touch with representatives of a Canadian company affected by this order in council to discuss the debate which proceeded in this House yesterday. The situation occurred where a representative of that company would not even mention the word "uranium" because of the apparent concern that official had as to the consequences of engaging in any discussion with anybody, in light of the existence of this very serious limitation upon the right to inquire and the interference with the duties of members of parliament.

Those factors should be taken into account. We are not dealing with a threat. This is something that has happened to limit the effectiveness of members of parliament to do their job in the House of Commons.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I have made a ruling on the question of privilege. There is no fresh question of privilege before us. I will not restrict the serious intervention of the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Clark) on a question of this nature. The danger of actual interference I attempted to stress in respect to the carrying out of duties special to members of this House are ones that it is my obligation to protect. I attempted to illustrate that as clearly as I could with respect to actual difficulties as opposed to potential ones. The matter has now received rather extensive discussion and has been adjudicated upon by me on three separate occasions, and perhaps we ought to move on to other matters.

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Halifax): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask you, and I do it in no impertinent way, how many members of parliament would have to make an effort to get a legal opinion of the sort sought by the hon. member for York-Simcoe (Mr. Stevens) before Your Honour considers that our privileges have been interfered with by this order in council?

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Surely the hon. member for Halifax (Mr. Stanfield) is asking me to conclude that the refusal to give an opinion to the hon. member for York-Simcoe (Mr. Stevens) is in itself a legal opinion. Surely that is clearly understood. It is an interpretation of a document which indicates that the effect of the document in front of me now is such that I ought not to deal with—

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): How do you get off the treadmill?

Mr. Speaker: Surely we can lay this point to rest. Supposing that legal opinion is not correct. On the basis of that presentation, is the Chair required to decide that that is a correct assessment by the lawyers of their obligations?

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): No, not at all.

Mr. Speaker: Then, that is the nub of the disagreement. I have examined this document, and on another day some other counsel can examine this document and indicate that if the hon. member brings documents before him, he is in no way restricted from giving advice to him in his capacity as a member of parliament. Now, which counsel is correct? Surely the Chair must decide, in order to answer the question put forth by the hon. member for Halifax. The Chair has to decide on the correctness of the opinion. If the hon. member for York-Simcoe had indicated that he wanted to take documents to counsel for an opinion, but he could not get his hands on the documents, and the reason for that was this order in council, and no other reason, then the argument would be considerably different from the one that has been put forward.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

RADIO CANADA INTERNATIONAL

Question No. 67—Mr. Cossitt:

1. In or about August 1975, did two men visit the offices of Radio Canada International in Montreal to discuss the content of programming to the Soviet Union by the CBC (a) did they represent a Soviet news service or any other Soviet organization and, if so, which one (b) did they introduce themselves as representing APN (c) who are the individuals and their job designations with whom these men met (d) what are the names of the visitors (e) was an attempt made by these visitors to persuade members of the Russian section of Radio Canada International to eliminate any political events or comments from coverage of the Canadian scene in Russian language broadcasts?

2. Was the Department of External Affairs aware of this visit prior to its taking place and (a) if so, on what date (b) if not, on what date did it become aware of the visit (c) did the Department take any action on the matter (i) if so, what(ii) if not, for what reason?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Department of External Affairs and the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation as follows: 1. A visit took place, to the Russian section, by two Soviet journalists, at their initiative. Visits by journalists from countries to which RCI broadcasts are a common occurrence. Discussion of RCI programs took place during the visit, as is usual in such cases. (a) Yes. (b) Yes. (c) Mr. L. Chipman, Supervisor, Eastern European Section; Mr. A. Lieven, Announcer/Producer, Russian Section; Mr. D. Lebedeff, Announcer/Producer, Russian Section; Mrs. H. Liberowsky, Announcer/Producer, Russian Section; (d) Mr. Valery Yuryev, Mr. Serguei Chandrov. (e) No.

2. No. (a) Nil. (b) On June 29, 1976, when the matter was raised in the House. (c) No. (i) Not applicable. (ii) The department was not aware of the visit until the matter was raised in the House and no action seemed called for.

Question No. 68—Mr. Cossitt:

Did Mr. M. Mogiljansky, Head of the Russian section of Radio Canada International write a letter dated May 19, 1976, to Dr. Yaroshevsky and Mrs. E. Bobro-Zuchert of the Russian section of Radio Canada International in Toronto (a) did the memo state in part "This is to inform you in writing that according to the new rules, introduced by the RCI Director, Mr. Alan Brown, you are just reporters, not commentators" and, if so (i) what are these new rules (ii) for what reason were they introduced (iii) who compiled them (b) did the memo further state in part "You must also stay away from any reporting from the Toronto scene of a political nature" and, if so, what are the reasons that foreign listeners to the CBC should not be permitted to hear news of our democratic political processes as reported from Toronto?

Hon. John Roberts (Secretary of State): I am informed by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation as follows: yes. Mr. Mogiljansky, head of the Russian section of Radio-Canada International wrote a letter on May 19, 1976, to Mrs. E. Bobrov-Zuckert and Dr. Yaroshevsky. These two persons are, however, not members of the Russian section nor employees of Radio Canada International, but are freelance contributors in Russian to the section's program. (a) Yes. (i) It is a normal part of a broadcaster's function to brief freelance contributors as to their role, and inform them of any policy changes that bring corresponding changes in that role. The "new rules" referred to in the question were contained in a memo dated May 12, 1976, from the director of Radio Canada International to program managers of RCI, and gave the task of selecting political commentaries temporarily to the assistant program director, Shortwave, assisted by the heads of the English and French Sections. (ii) This was a temporary measure, pending a reorganization. It was introduced to clarify overall CBC program policies. The "new rules", were not related to the performance of Dr. Yaroshevsky and Mrs. Bobrov-Zuckert. (iii) If the director's memorandum of May 12, 1976 is here referred to, that memorandum was prepared by the director himself. (b) Mr. Mogiljansky's letter quotes an interpretation by his immediate supervisor of the director's policy memo, as follows: "You must also 'stay away from any reporting from the Toronto scene of a political nature.'" The fact that political reporting would not be done in Russian from Toronto did not mean that no political material would be available from that area to the Russian section. Such political material would continue to be available for translation by the Russian section from any political commentaries ordered under the assistant program director's authority for use by all sections of RCI. In this way a similar balance and objectivity could be achieved in broadcasts to all areas served by Radio Canada International.

Question No. 70—Mr. Cossitt:

Did Mr. Axel Thogerson, Assistant Programme Director of Radio Canada International write to Mr. T. England, Chief Administrative Officer of Radio Canada International, on June 1, 1976 and, if so, did his letter contain in part these words (a) "So we can't speak about Christmas. Why? Because the regime of the USSR has banned X-mas or what? Well, X-mas was a feature of this country last time I looked around and we have official government-declared holidays in which to celebrate the feast." (b) "The Toronto Automobile Exhibition, was that O.K. and safe? Hope we didn't offend any sensitive USSR listeners by telling them about this capitalistic show"?

Hon. John Roberts (Secretary of State): I am informed by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation as follows: yes. (a) and (b). The quotations in question 70 are accurate but are out of context. Mr. Thogerson's letter is an internal memorandum that is part of a free and frank internal exchange on the contents of RCI broadcasts. Mr. England had not suggested any problem about mentioning Christmas or the Toronto Automobile Exhibition, nor was it within his power or responsibility to remark on program policy. On the contrary, he had simply passed on an evaluation of certain broadcasts in the Russian language which had been an evaluation commissioned from a person outside the organization—and was inviting comment, critical or favourable and was not enunciating policy. The quotes from Mr. Thogerson's memo are part of Mr. Thogerson's critical response to the evaluation. This memo, in its proper context as an internal exchange of programming criticisms, is part of a normal interchange of views within the service.

Question No. 71—Mr. Cossitt:

1. Did Radio Canada International censorship have removed from newscasts in the Russian language two items made by Dr. F. Yaroshevsky on May 19, 1976 and, if so, were the reports of (a) a demonstration by Jewish women in Canada protesting against treatment of Jews in the USSR (b) a report on the opportunities and the difficulties which doctors from the Soviet Union have encountered in settling in Canada?

2. Was an explanation of the censorship sent by a letter dated May 19, 1976, to Dr. Yaroshevsky by Mr. M. Mogiljansky, Head of the Russian section of Radio Canada International, stating that such a censorship order had been issued by Mr. L. C. Chipman, Supervisor of East European Programming and, if so (a) who instructed Mr. Chipman to impose such censorship (b) what part did the Department of External Affairs play in the action, if any?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Department of External Affairs and the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation as follows: 1. There is no Radio Canada International censorship. RCI editors attempt to reflect major developments in Canada in proportion to their importance to the average Canadian, comparable to what might be found on the front page of a major Canadian newspaper. Deletions as described in (a) and (b) were and are made in the context of the reply to question 68.

2. No. An explanation of the deletion of two items from the Russian program on Mr. Chipman's instructions was sent to Dr. Yaroshevsky by Mr. M. Mogiljansky, head of the Russian section of Radio Canada International, on May 19, 1976. (a) No one instructed Mr. Chipman to impose censorship or to delete particular items from RCI's programming or to forbid particular subjects being treated. The deletion was Mr. Chipman's correct interpretation of the instructions regarding the ordering of commentaries, referred to in reply 68. (b) None.

Question No. 72—Mr. Cossitt:

1. Did Mr. Alan Brown, Director of Radio Canada International, circulate an internal memo dated May 12, 1976, under the heading: "Target Area Desks and Central Programming: Preliminary Steps"?

2. Did this memo contain in part these words "no more so-called news backgrounders are to be written by Radio Canada International employees" and, if so, what are the reasons (a) CBC personnel were abruptly ordered not to do such a thing (b) background information to the news was considered suddenly undesirable?

3. Did this memo also contain in part the words "Of course no commentaries will be written in-house on political or economic matters under whatever disguise" and, if so (a) what are the reasons justifying the forbidding of comments on political or economic matters on the CBC's international service (b) is it now CBC or government policy to censor from Canadian broadcasts to other countries items of a political or economic nature?

4. Did the memo also state in part "a press review will then be written by Mr. Côté (I suggest at least three times a week) referring to both the French language and English language press—but the selection will be made by Mr. Côté" and, if so (a) what is the full name and job designation of Mr. Côté (b) for what reason, has this one individual been given exclusive judgement and right to decide what excerpts from the English and French language press will be broadcast to foreign listeners (c) what is Mr. Côté's employment history with the CBC and what are his qualifications for such exclusive power?

Hon. John Roberts (Secretary of State): I am informed by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation as follows: 1. Yes.

2. Yes. (a) Radio Canada International seeks to reflect the spectrum of representative Canadian opinion on events, but should not, through its staff employees, have an editorial stance of its own. It was felt that a separate program element, referred to as a news backgrounder, had occasionally been susceptible to the inclusion of commentary by some staff employees and should, therefore, be replaced by a commentary by freelancers. In addition, since CBC news policy precludes the inclusion of the staff news writer's own opinion in desk copy prepared for news bulletins proper, specific background facts only, (needed to explain a Canadian story to foreigners and to bring out its significance) would be incorporated by news-room staff as part of the news bulletin. News backgrounders, because of their length, are not a part of the news bulletin, but follow it in the slot where commentaries also normally appear. Where it would be difficult to deal with an event in the news without more extended explanation, either a backgrounder or commentary could continue, as had always been the case, to be dealt with in French or English by freelance commentators whose material would be available for translation by all foreign language sections. (b) Background information to the news is, of course, not considered undesirable. The policy is aimed at providing more background, using the most varied and knowledgeable sources.

3. Yes. (a) The fact that commentaries were no longer to be written by the one or two staff members who occasionally did so does not mean that no commentaries, including those on political or economic matters, were to be broadcast by freelance commentators. The purpose of the memo was, on the contrary, to specify the duties of staff members and to widen the variety of commentary available through freelancers, thus ensuring the use of the best specialist expertise. Not only would the various language sections continue to have available commentaries written by freelance commentators in the official languages of Canada, English and French, for subsequent translation to the appropriate language, but the diversity of opinion available in Canada would be increasingly reflected by expanding the list of available authoritative freelance commentators. (b) No.

4. Yes. Mr. Côté was given the editorial function of selection under the general direction of the assistant program director. (a) Lucien Côté, information resources officer. (b) It is normal for one person to compile a press review. Mr. Côté was given the responsibility because he is well informed on Canadian events and has a distinguished journalistic background. Since he is fluently bilingual, Mr. Côté has access to the contents of the English and French language press. (c) Mr. Côté is a highly experienced broadcaster and journalist. He has worked in the national service of the CBC, both in radio and in TV, and in the international service, or RCI.

Question No. 73—Mr. Cossitt:

1. Did Mr. Ted England, Chief Administration Officer of Radio Canada International, have an evaluation made of a number of broadcasts from Toronto by Dr. F. Yaroshevsky in the Russian language and did Mr. M. Mogiljansky, Head of the Russian section of Radio Canada International, in a letter to Dr. Yaroshevsky dated May 25, 1976, state in part, as follows "The evaluation was undertaken by an outsider, who is aware of our mandate" (a) what is the name and address of this anonymous evaluator (b) what were his or her qualifications for making such an evaluation (c) who selected this person to make the evaluation (d) what is the meaning of the phrase that this person "is aware of our mandate" and exactly what is this "mandate"?

2. Did this anonymous evaluation consist of eight pages of comments (a) did it state in part "Religious overtones, for example, have no place on any Radio Canada International broadcast" (b) did it also state in part "Why should a writer-announcer (Felix Yaroshevsky, in this case) be allowed to voice his own political feelings regarding the Canadian government on the air" and does this indicate an attempt by the government to forbid Russian listeners of Radio Canada International from knowing that in a democratic country such as Canada there are those who are permitted to disagree with the government (c) did it criticize Dr. F. Yaroshevsky from reading in Russian an article from the Toronto Star which stated that certain United Nations delegates from small countries were selling their votes in exchange for sums ranging between $600,000 and $800,000 and, if so, for what reason is there any objection to Russian listeners being made aware of articles or editorials appearing in the Toronto Star (d) did it criticize Dr. Yaroshevsky for pointing out that Russian immigrants to Canada had apartments, cars and supermarkets available in which to shop, electrical appliances, etc. and did it criticize him further for saying that "the material goods are not what is important, it is the newly-found freedom that counts" and, if so, what is wrong with Radio Canada International speaking about the subject of freedom in Canada (e) did it criticize Dr. Yaroshevsky for stating that the Ontario Liberal Party "fared poorly in the last provincial elections" and, if so, for what reason, when Dr. Yaroshevsky was actually stating a basic fact (f) did it criticize Dr. Yaroshevsky for stating that "the federal Liberals, under Trudeau, are becoming less and less popular in Canada" and, if so, for what reason, in view of the fact this statement is in accordance with all recent Gallup polls (g) did it criticize Dr. Yaroshevsky for pointing out that the Ontario Liberal Leader is a Jew of Russian origin and stating that therefore the Prime Minister of Ontario might one day be a Russian Jew and, if so, for what reason was fault found with such a statement and does the government not consider such a statement a credit to the opportunities offered to immigrants by Canada (h) did it criticize Dr. Yaroshevsky for describing in Russian "the Christmas scene in Toronto; the masses of shoppers, the after Christmas sales, etc. and remarks that Christ's teachings were not along the lines of materialism" and, if so, what was wrong with the stating of these basic facts (i) did the evaluation ridicule praise, given in Russian on one broadcast, of the work of the Salvation Army and, if so, for what reason is this something that should not be told to Russian listeners (j) did it criticize Dr. Yaroshevsky for pointing out as follows "Latin America, South Viet Nam, the Soviet Union, and other countries where the imperfections of the social system manifest themselves in the fact that the minority rules as a dictatorship in name of the majority and where all individual initiative is curtailed" and, if so, for what reason does the government and the CBC object to this statement of democratic principle?

3. Did the evaluator state that Dr. Yaroshevsky's broadcasts showed "incredibly poor judgment and a total lack of sensitivity to the listeners' point of view" and, if so, is it now the policy of the CBC's International Service to see that everything broadcast to the Soviet Union conforms with the point of view of the Soviet Union?

Hon. John Roberts (Secretary of State): I am informed by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation as follows: 1. A fairly elaborate program evaluation process was begun in September 1975 and between that time and February 1976 all language sections, including French and English sections, had undergone a preliminary evaluation. In the case of languages inaccessible to some members of the evaluating committees, an outside evaluation was commissioned to provide an additional element to the retranslations of program material available. The evaluations, internal and commissioned, are part of an ongoing process. As part of these evaluations, and on instructions from the director of Radio Canada International, Mr. England requested an evaluation of a number of Dr. Yaroshevsky's freelance contributions to the Russian section. Mr. Mogiljansky in his letter of May 25, 1976 quoted a memorandum from Mr. England as follows "The evaluation was undertaken by an outsider who is aware of our mandate". (a) The name and address of the evaluator cannot be revealed for obvious internal reasons. (b) The evaluator had experience in broadcasting, a distinguished academic career and knowledge of the Russian language. (c) The director of Radio Canada International in consultation with Mr. England and another member of his staff. (d) The phrase "is aware of our mandate" means that the evaluator understood Radio Canada International's strategic objective as approved by the board of directors of the CBC in 1973. It reads "Radio Canada International is directed by the CBC to provide a program service designed to attract an international awareness of Canada and the Canadian identity by distributing, through shortwave and other means, programs which reflect the realities and quality of Canadian life and culture, Canada's national interests and policies and the spectrum of Canadian viewpoints on national and international affairs."

2. Yes. (a) to (j) Yes, it contained the remarks quoted. However, it must be understood that the evaluator's remarks, as quoted in part in 2(a) to (j), were one of several internal evaluations and had no status as CBC policy.

3. Yes: the question, in itself, is accurate. The evaluator's text, however, does not represent Radio Canada International policy. Broadcasts to the Soviet Union are not designed for the Soviet government, but for listeners in the USSR. Subjects which might be displeasing to their government can be treated at any time, but, in accordance with good journalistic practice, must not be treated in such a way as to constitute a propaganda campaign.

Question No. 74—Mr. Cossitt:

1. Did the Supervisor of East European Programming for Radio Canada International in a letter dated June 1, 1976, to Mr. A. Thogerson, Assistant Programme Director of Radio Canada International, state in part as follows "Do we allow information in English to the United States about anti-Vietnam rallies in Toronto knowing that the US government understands the nature of democratic journalism but censor news in Russian to the USSR about Jewish demonstrations against Soviet policy because the Soviet government does not? If we do, our credibility with our listeners is shot because our hypocrisy will be apparent; if we do, our sense of journalism is warped to some extent beyond the limits of the normal restraints of good sense and a feeling of responsibility. If we don't, there are suggestions that a political campaign is being waged." and, if so (a) is it the policy of Radio Canada International and the government to permit anti-American propaganda on foreign broadcasts but to censor any criticism of the Communist system on such broadcasts (b) is the government prepared to allow a Parliamentary Committee to summon and question officials of Radio Canada International concerning programming in general and whether or not and on how many occasions, pressure has been put on the CBC's international service by the Department of External Affairs to restrict what is said in broadcasts to the Soviet Union?

2. Did the letter also state in part "Our Soviet programmes are directed to an audience we know to be friendly and interested (and it includes Communists) living under a dictatorship that is not. As Robert Ford has pointed out often, the trouble is that the Soviet Union is a super power whose government re-acts with the sensitivity and lack of confidence of a banana republic. Even the wages of Toronto garbage collectors are an offence." and, if so, is the government prepared to censor the fact that workers in Canada such as garbage collectors in Toronto make wages higher than their counterparts in the Soviet Union and, if so, for what reason?

3. Did the letter also state that on the subject of detente the alternative is "acceptance of the Soviet definition that detente means that Western Countries shouldn't say mean things about the Soviet Union"?

Hon. John Roberts (Secretary of State): I am informed by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation as follows: 1. Yes, but in an internal memorandum, not a letter. (a) Radio Canada International's policy is to reflect in a balanced way the spectrum of Canadian opinion on any subject. (b) To be answered elsewhere.

[Mr. Roberts.]

2 and 3. The internal memorandum (not a letter) did make the statements quoted. There is no censorship in Radio Canada International by the government or otherwise. The memorandum refers to the outside evaluator's remarks, which have no policy status.

As far as the government is concerned: 1. (b) The Standing Committee on Broadcasting, Films and Assistance to the Arts has the opportunity to question officials of the CBC on subjects it deems appropriate during the review by the committee of the CBC main and supplementary estimates.

Question No. 75—Mr. Cossitt:

Is the government prepared forthwith to order an immediate inquiry into the programming of Radio Canada International in the Russian language and in languages to other Communist countries to determine whether or not political influence is being used by the Canadian government to bring about censorship and, if not, for what reason?

Hon. John Roberts (Secretary of State): No. In a news release dated August 5, 1976, the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation gave an unequivocal assurance that there is no censorship policy and never has been as it applies to broadcasts to foreign countries. As was further outlined, the CBC strives to achieve the same policy of balance in foreign broadcasts as is applied to domestic news and current affairs programs.

Question No. 118—Mr. Cossitt:

1. Did Mr. Carroll Chipman, Supervisor, Eastern European Programming of Radio Canada International, write a memo dated December 10, 1975 to Mr. Alan Brown, Director of Radio Canada International and, if so, did the memo state in part "You will find attached my note to Bill Hooper and Alex Chistoff of the Eastern European Division of the Department of External Affairs covering my submission of the Russian and Ukrainian Radio Canada International section reports as they requested. Mr. Hooper and Mr. Chistoff were concerned about the complaints made at a cocktail party by the Soviet Ambassador about our programmes. They were thought to be worse than those of the BBC and Radio Liberty, were offensive to the Soviet Union and said nothing about Canada"?

2. Were there discussions or communications between Messrs. Hooper and Chistoff or any others in the Department of External Affairs, with Mr. Chipman or any others in RCI and, if so (a) on what dates (b) for what reasons (c) in what locations and in what manner did they take place?

3. What was the date and place of the cocktail party referred to in Carroll Chipman's memo of December 10, 1975?

4. Is it the policy of the government to have the Department of External Affairs attempt to influence programming of RCI to Eastern Europe and particularly to the Soviet Union and (a) if so, for what reason (b) if not, what justifies the actions taken by Messrs. Hooper and Chistoff in this case?

5. Did the memo of December 10, 1975 from Carroll Chipman to Alan Brown also state in part "After a cursory look at our programme reports, Alex Chistoff raised a few questioning criticisms from, as it were, diplomatic point of view . . . ..a tendency to nag the USSR, that is to say, to seek out material which while certainly published in the Canadian press, reflected poorly on the Soviet Union, in a way that was out of proportion with other matters of greater general Canadian concern" and, if so, what are the reasons justifying such interference on the part of the Department with the material broadcast by RCI to the Soviet Union and does this indicate a policy of censorship by the Canadian Government being applied to programming to the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Department of External Affairs and the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation as follows: 1. Yes, the memo did so state, in part.

2. Yes. (a), (b) and (c) November 18, 1975, the Soviet desk officer, Mr. Chistoff, asked Mr. J. Svedman by telephone for an indication of news subjects for the sample period of September 20 to November 7, 1975 that would be helpful in any future discussions the division might have with the Soviet embassy on the subject of RCI broadcasts which it had raised with the department informally. December 5, 1975 Mr. Chipman called on Eastern European Division on routine consultations and delivered a memorandum dated December 3, 1975 to Messors. Hooper and Chistoff together with the typed programme items. April 28, 1975 Mr. Alan Brown and Mr. E. T. England called on Eastern European Division during a call on the department on routine consultations.

3. The Department of External Affairs is unaware of the cocktail party mentioned in Mr. Chipman's note of December 10, 1975 and believes the reference intended may have been to informal conversations which took place with Soviet embassy officials at luncheons on October 31 and November 17, 1975.

4. No. (a) Not applicable. (b) Consultations between RCI and the Department of External Affairs are provided for in Order-in-Council PC 1968-525 dated March 19, 1968, which directs the CBC "to provide in consultation with the Department of External Affairs an international service . . .". Officials of RCI and the Department of External Affairs accordingly meet from time to time to discuss questions of mutual interest. The department does not, however, seek in these discussions to influence RCI's programs in any way whatsoever.

5. Yes, the memo did so state in part.

In so far as the Department of External Affairs is concerned, however, the incomplete extract quoted from Mr. Chipman's memorandum suggests that Mr. Chistoff was critical of RCI programmes when in fact this was not the case either after the first brief look at the programme reports or at any other time. He did not criticize RCI for any tendency of its programmes to nag the USSR as suggested in the quoted extract. In its entirety, the relevant paragraph of this memorandum reads as follows: "After a cursory look at our program report, Alex Chistoff raised a few questioning criticisms from as it were, a diplomatic point of view, which coincided rather neatly with my own occasional criticism of the Russian program from a journalistic standpoint. I attempted to define this thought—a tendency to nag the USSR, that is to say, to seek out material which while certainly published in the Canadian press—reflected poorly on the Soviet Union, in a way that was out of proportion to other matters of greater general Canadian concern". The memorandum did not represent an interference or a policy of censorship.

Question No. 119—Mr. Cossitt:

1. Did Carroll Chipman, Supervisor, Eastern European Division of Radio Canada International, in a memo dated December 10, 1975, to Alan Brown, Director of Radio Canada International, state in part "He (Chistoff) will go through all the papers I gave him, and probably come back at me with further thoughts. They will be thoughts that, quite naturally, reflect External's sense of its own interests. An example: They don't like us to report, even in the news, anti-Soviet demonstrations outside the Soviet Embassy because the Soviets think that these demonstrations are (in the Soviet fashion) government inspired and that the government wants RCI to report them out of bitchiness" and, if so, what are the reasons that the Department of External Affairs objects to RCI reporting anti-Soviet demonstrations outside the Soviet Embassy that have actually occurred and news of which has been published in the western press?

2. Does such objection constitute a direct attempt at censoring the reporting of news events by the Department and, if so, on what date did such a policy commence and (a) who authorized it (b) for what reason?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by External Affairs and the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation as follows: 1. Yes, the memo did so state in part. The Department of External Affairs does not object in any way to Radio Canada International reporting the news. It is incorrect to infer that the department does not like RCI to report anti-Soviet demonstrations. Such a view point has never been held or expressed.

2. There was no objection and no censorship exists. (a) Not applicable. (b) Not applicable.

Question No. 120—Mr. Cossitt:

1. Did Carroll Chipman, Supervisor, Eastern European Programming of Radio Canada International, in a memo dated December 10, 1975 to Alan Brown, Director of Radio Canada International, state in part "I took the opportunity to complain that External doesn't properly and promptly allow us to report and explain Canadian foreign policy . . ." and, if so (a) by what authority does the Department allow or disallow RCI to report and explain Canadian foreign policy (b) what is a full explanation of the word "allow" and does this indicate a policy of control by the Department over the programming of RCI?

2. Did Carroll Chipman also state in the memo that RCI only gets "ministerial and ambassadorial pronouncements three weeks after delivery" and, if so, for what reasons was the Department not willing to make full information of events available to RCI for proper and legitimate news reports?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Department of External Affairs and the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation as follows: 1. Yes, the memo did so state in part. (a) The department has no authority to allow or disallow Radio Canada International to report and explain Canadian foreign policy. (b) The word "allow" in this quotation was used in the sense of "enable". It does not indicate any policy of control by the department over the programs of RCI but rather a desire on Mr. Chipman's part to receive more current information from the department on Canadian foreign policy.

2. Yes, the memorandum did so state in part. The department is willing to and does make factual and policy information available to RCI and other journalists for news reports and commentaries. Moreover, the department is constantly exploring ways of facilitating and improving this process.

Question No. 121—Mr. Cossitt:

1. Did Carroll Chipman, Supervisor, Eastern European Programming of Radio Canada International, write a memo to Messrs. Hooper and Chistoff of the Department of External Affairs in which he stated in part "You will find attached itemized programme reports of the Russian and Ukrainian sections of RCI on the period you requested from Gromyko's visit to Ottawa to the October Revolution, September 20 to November 7" and, if so, for what reasons did Messrs. Hooper and Chistoff request such material?

2. Were Messrs. Hooper and Chistoff acting on complaints received from anyone in the government directly or indirectly as a result of complaints from any Soviet authority and, if so (a) who made such complaints and on what dates (b) what was the nature of such complaints?

Order Paper Questions

3. Is it the policy of the Department to scrutinize and censor programming of RCI to the Soviet Union or any other countries on the basis of complaints received from representatives of such other countries and, if so, on what date did such a policy begin and on whose authorization?

4. Did the memo also state in part "We will never have a programme that will satisfy pro-Soviet Soviets or anti-Soviet Soviets: we don't aim to. Our job is to fulfill our mandate, satisfy our journalistic conscience and interests, engage our listeners. Your Ambassador will never be happy, because he believes journalism should serve politics" and, if so (a) is the Department more concerned with keeping ambassadors and the governments of other countries happy than it is with the news being reported accurately and factually (b) is this an example of attempted censorship of RCI by the Department?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Department of External Affairs and the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation as follows: 1. Yes, he did write a memo which so stated in part. The purpose in doing so was quite simply to obtain whatever background Radio Canada International could provide that would enable the department to discuss the matter knowledgeably if it were again raised by the Soviet embassy. The Soviet embassy did not raise it again.

2. (a) and (b) The request for background information was made following informal comments by members of the Soviet embassy at luncheons on October 31 and November 17, 1975 that the programs of RCI were inconsistent with the spirit of the Final Act of the CSCE in Helsinki.

3. No, it is the policy of the department to relay to RCI comments from foreign sources in the course of the consultations provided for in the Order In Council creating RCI.

4. Yes, the memo did so state, in part. (a) No. (b) No, nor does Mr. Chipman's memorandum imply this. It goes on to state: "But we are sometimes unhappy too when we lapse from our standards". The memorandum is clearly an attempt to anticipate the kind of detailed points that could conceivably be raised by the Soviet authorities and to provide the Department with points that could be made in reply.

Question No. 495—Mr. Cossitt:

Did Mr. A. W. Johnson, President of CBC issue a statement dated August 4, 1976, stating in part that CBC has not been subjected to pressure from the Soviet Union in regard to Radio Canada International Programming and, if so, was he aware of an internal R.C.I. memo dated September 10, 1975 and signed by L. C. Chipman, at the time, Eastern European Director for R.C.I., addressed to the Director of R.C.I. and stating in part that Messrs. Hooper and Chistoff of the Department of External Affairs had approached him concerning complaints by the Soviet Ambassador about R.C.I. broadcasts to the Soviet Union and, if so, for what reason did he issue such a statement and is he prepared to correct it in this regard?

Hon. John Roberts (Secretary of State): I am informed by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation as follows: Yes, the CBC president's statement of August 4, 1976 did so state, in part. It is presumed that the question refers to a memorandum dated December 10, 1975, and not September 10, 1975, between the parties mentioned and on the same subject. The president had not seen that memo on August 4. Since, however, the memo, in its entirety, reflected the frank review of criticism received from abroad which is part of the normal consultation process outlined and explained in the answer to part 2 of question 69 (formerly 5,.830), it in no way alters the purport of the statement of August 4, 1976.

[Mr. Cossitt.]

Question No. 497—Mr. Cossitt:

Did Mr. A. W. Johnson, President of CBC issue a statement dated August 4, 1976, stating in part: " . . . it has been charged that the CBC has been censoring its broadcasts to Eastern Europe. I can give an unequivocal assurance that there is no such censorship policy and never has been" and, if so, was he aware of various internal CBC memos written by M. Mogiljansky, at the time, Head of the Russian Section of Radio Canada International, L. C. Chipman, at the time, Head of the Eastern European Division of R.C.I. and Axel Thogerson, at the time, Assistant Program Director of R.C.I. which indicate otherwise and, if so, for what reason did he issue such a statement and is he prepared to correct it in this regard?

Hon. John Roberts (Secretary of State): I am informed by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation as follows: Yes. Yes, if these are the memos and letters referred to in questions 68, 69, 70, 71, 73 and 74 of October 12, 1976. For a discussion of this correspondence and its meaning and context and confirmation of the fact that there is no censorship in Radio Canada International by the government or otherwise, see the answers to the aforementioned questions together with the answer to question 72 of October 12, 1976. The statement was issued to answer and refute allegations which had been made and published concerning the broadcasts to Eastern Europe by CBC's Radio Canada International and to place the matters in question in their proper context.

UIC—MR. DANIEL COATES

Question No. 584—Mr. Cossitt:

1. What is the complete Public Service employment history of Mr. Daniel Coates, including positions held and dates, etc.?

2. Did Mr. Coates receive French language training and, if so (a) in what location (b) during what period of time (c) at what cost to the taxpayer?

3. On what dates was Mr. Coates on vacation during the years 1975 and 1976 and what exact work was he doing for the Unemployment Insurance Commission on the three days immediately preceding his holidays and on the three days immediately following his holidays?

4. Is Mr. Coates drawing full pay from UIC and, if so, what is the amount per year?

5. Is Mr. Coates presently engaged in taking university courses in the United States and, if so (a) in what location (b) at whose expense (c) by what authority (d) for what period of time?

Hon. Bud Cullen (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): In so far as the Unemployment Insurance Commission is concerned: 1. Summer 1964—Department of Citizenship and Immigration—Research Assistant. Summer 1965—Department of Labour—Senior Research Assistant. September 24, 1973—SAPP appointment to UIC—To initiate an organization and human resources development program in UIC. January 10, 1974—Acting Comptroller, UIC. July 1, 1974—Executive Director, Administration UIC. April 19, 1975—Special Advisor to Chairman, UIC.

2. (a) Algonquin College, Ottawa. (b) July 7, 1975 to January 31, 1976. (c) $12,660—Instructors' fees.

3. 1975—June 2 to June 30 inclusive; 1976—no leave; Special Advisor to Chairman.

4. Yes—$31,500-$41,500 salary range.

5. Dr. Coates is pursuing the development of models of organizational change and effectiveness as a post-doctoral fellow. (a) Queen's University, Kingston, Ontario. (b) Except for full salary, his own expense. (c) Treasury Board Minute 718445 1973-55. (d) February 1, 1976 to September 30, 1976 on educational leave. October 1, 1976 to December 6, 1976, by way of exhaustion of his annual leave credits.

NON-PUBLIC SERVICE POSITIONS

Question No. 721—Mr. Coates:

1. What are the names, positions and salaries of each of the individuals who hold non-public service positions in the offices of Parliamentary Secretaries and in each instance, what was the date the person was appointed to the staff in question?

2. In each case, how many have been candidates for office for the Liberal Party in either federal or provincial election campaigns?

3. In each case, are there any persons who work on a contractual basis and are not listed in the above categories and, if so (a) what are their names (b) how long does their contract run (c) what is the amount of the contract (d) what is the reason for the contract (e) were any of them actively involved in the Liberal Party, either federally or provincially, in any past election campaigns?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): 1, 2 and 3. See Beauchesne's Parliamentary Rules and Forms, Fourth Edition, Citation 184.

RADIO CANADA INTERNATIONAL

Question No. 734—Mr. Cossitt:

Is November 7, 1976 the effective date of the reorganization of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation's Radio Canada International Russian Section and, if so (a) for what reason was the date selected and by whom (b) was the fact taken into account in making such selection that November 7, 1976 is the anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution in the Soviet Union?

Hon. John Roberts (Secretary of State): I am informed by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation as follows: No. November 7 is, however, by international agreement the date on which RCI and other international shortwave broadcasters carry out frequency changes in transition from summer schedules to fall and winter schedules, under the auspices of the International Frequency Registration Board, a division of the International Telecommunications Union, which is a United Nations agency based in Geneva. (b) Not applicable.

UIC—NEW LOCATIONS

Question No. 798—Mr. Cossitt:

1. (a) What was the total square footage occupied at 1650 Carling Avenue by the Unemployment Insurance Commission (b) what was the rental cost per square foot (c) what was the total rent paid per year (d) how long does the lease to the government have to run (e) following the moving of the UIC from this location, what was the length of time that the premises remained unoccupied before being utilized for other government purposes and what was the total amount of rental paid for the unoccupied premises?

2. Have the facilities of the Ottawa Office of UIC, formerly located on Carling Avenue, been divided between L'Esplanade Laurier and 414 Cooper Street and, if so (a) in each case, how many square feet of space will be occupied (b) what is the total overall square footage (c) in each case, what is the rental cost per square foot (d) what is the total overall rental (e) from whom is each location rented (f) in each case, what is the (i) length of the lease (ii) name and address of the landlord?

3. What was the total cost of the move from 1650 Carling Avenue to the two new locations and what are the reasons justifying such expense in view of the government's declared restraint programme?

4. What is the (a) total cost of all furnishings at (i) L'Esplanade Laurier (ii) 414 Cooper Street (b) overall cost?

5. Was a new telephone system installed at 1650 Carling Avenue and, if so (a) at what cost (b) on what date?

6. Was a new telephone system installed at the two new locations and, if so (a) in each case, at what cost (b) what was the overall cost?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Department of Public Works and the Unemployment Insurance Commission as follows: 1. (a) 23,036 square feet (plus 174 parking stalls); (b) $4.15 per square foot (lease payment to owner—not including parking); $5.27 per square foot (U.I.C. rental payment to DPW—including parking); (c) $95,599.40 (not including parking); $121,399.72 (U.I.C. rental payments to DPW—including parking); (d) To March 31, 1977 (plus 2 × 1 year options); (e) U.I.C. vacated July 30, 1976. New tenant occupied premises on October 22, 1976. Renovations commenced two days after U.I.C. vacated. Total amount of rent paid during renovation period—$21,739.04.

2. Yes. (a) L'Esplanade Laurier—office space—22,214 square feet; storage area—737 square feet; 414 Cooper Street—office space—5,407 square feet; (b) 28,358 square feet (plus 13 parking spaces); (c) L'Esplanade Laurier: $9.25 per square foot (lease purchase payment of office space); $3.00 per square foot (lease purchase payment for storage space); $41.25 each per month (for 12 parking spaces); U.I.C. rental payment to DPW —$9.71 per square foot for office space; $3.09 per square foot for storage space. 414 Cooper Street: $10.00 per square foot (lease payments); $40.00 per month (for 1 parking space); U.I.C. rental payment to DPW—$10.30 per square foot; (d) $268,180.50 (total annual payments including parking); $273,667.37 (U.I.C. rental payment to DPW); $6,420.00 (parking payments); (e) L'Esplanade Laurier—Olympic and York Ltd., 414 Cooper Street—Chomley Investments Ltd.; (f) (i)—L'Esplanade Laurier—lease purchase over 35 years; 414 Cooper Street—5 years plus 3 × 1 year options. (ii)—L'Esplanade Laurier—Olympia and York Ltd., 1 Yonge Street, Toronto, Ontario. 414 Cooper Street—Chomley Investments Ltd., c/o Glenview Management Ltd., Suite 400, 170 Laurier Avenue West, Ottawa, Ontario.

3. $285,505.09. The primary reason for the move was co-location with Canada Manpower, which in itself enchances our service to the public. In addition to this, the central nature of the location made it considerably easier to serve those in east, south and central Ottawa.

4. (a) There is no separate inventory for each of these offices; (b) $194,639. This includes L'Esplanade Laurier, 414 Cooper Street and a small office in Vanier.

5. Yes. (a) $6,400.00; (b) March 24, 1975.

6. Yes, a new single telephone system, which included a switchboard, was installed to serve both locations. (a) $6,110.50; (b) $6,110.50.

Order Paper Questions

RADIO CANADA INTERNATIONAL

Question No. 805—Mr. Cossitt:

1. Is the government aware of a press statement made to journalist Mr. Patrick Best by the Ambassador of the Soviet Union, His Excellency Alexander Yakovlev, to the effect that at no time did he complain to the Department of External Affairs or the government concerning programming to the Soviet Union by CBC Radio Canada International?

2. How does the government reconcile Mr. Yakovlev's statement with internal CBC memos signed by Mr. L. C. Chipman, Head of Eastern European Programming at the time, one dated December 10, 1975 and the other undated, which state exactly the opposite to the effect that Messrs. Hooper and Chistoff of the Department of External Affairs were approached by Mr. Yakovlev?

3. (a) Is Mr. Yakovlev's statement according to fact and, if so, has the government adopted a policy of slandering the Ambassador to Canada from the Soviet Union (b) is the government prepared to withdraw any statements made alleging such actions by Mr. Yakovlev and (i) if so, on what date (ii) if not, for what reason?

Mr. Fernand E. Leblanc (Parliamentary Secretary to Secretary of State for External Affairs): In so far as the Department of External Affairs is concerned, the reply is as follows: 1. The government is aware of an article by Mr. Patrick Best on this subject which appeared on October 21, 1976.

2 and 3. (a) and (b) As the government is not in a position to confirm statements reportedly made by the Soviet ambassador to the press, it would not be appropriate for it to comment on them.

Question No. 806—Mr. Cossitt:

1. Was Mr. M. Mogiljansky, Head of the Russian Section of CBC Radio Canada International at the time the Honourable Member for Leeds released copies of internal CBC memos signed by Mr. Mogiljanksy and others which suggested interference by the Department of External Affairs with news broadcasts to the Soviet Union, recently demoted from his position and, if so, for what reason?

2. How many years was Mr. Mogiljansky in charge of the Russian Section and what is his complete employment history with CBC?

3. What part did Mr. Mogiljansky play originally in setting up the Russian Section of R.C.I.?

4. Is Mr. Mogiljansky being persecuted by the government for offering constructive criticism?

5. Is the government and CBC referring to Mr. Mogiljansky's change in position as a lateral transfer and, if so, how do they justify this?

6. Is it government policy to conduct vendettas against long standing public service employees who simply offer constructive criticism that might be helpful to the operation of the department or corporation concerned, in this case, CBC Radio International?

Hon. John Roberts (Secretary of State): 1. No. Mr. Mogiljansky was recently assigned to a new position in R.C.I.

2. Mr. Mogiljansky was in charge of the Russian section of R.C.I. for approximately one year and four months. It has not been customary to require the CBC to supply such details of its internal management and administration (the background to this custom is explained in the answer to question no. 2,530, May 22, 1975).

3. Mr. Mogiljansky was one of those involved in the setting up of the Russian section.

4. No. Mr. Mogiljansky has offered no criticism.

[Mr. Goodale.]

5. No. The CBC is describing these changes as transfers to new positions with no reduction in pay.

6. To be answered elsewhere. In so far as the Secretary of State is concerned: no.

Question No. 807—Mr. Cossitt:

1. Was Mr. Axel Thogerson, Assistant Director of Radio Canada International at the time the Honourable Member for Leeds released copies of internal CBC memos signed by Mr. Thogerson and others which suggested interference by the Department of External Affairs with news broadcasts to the Soviet Union, recently demoted from his position and, if so, for what reason?

2. What is Mr. Thogerson's complete employment history with CBC?

3. Is Mr. Thogerson being persecuted by the government for offering constructive criticism?

4. Is the government and CBC referring to Mr. Thogerson's change in position as a lateral transfer and, if so, how do they justify this?

Hon. John Roberts (Secretary of State): I am informed by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation as follows: 1. Mr. Axel Thogerson was never assistant director of RCI. He was for a time, assistant program director (shortwave). The memo by Mr. Thogerson did not suggest interference by the Department of External Affairs with news broadcasts to the Soviet Union. Mr. Thogerson was recently transferred to a new position within RCI.

2. It has not been customary to require the CBC to supply such details of its internal management and administration (the background to this custom is explained in the answer to Question No. 2,530, May 22, 1975).

3. No.

4. No. The CBC is describing these changes as transfers to new positions with no reduction in pay.

Question No. 808—Mr. Cossitt:

1. Was Mr. L. C. Chipman, Supervisor of Eastern European Division of Radio Canada International at the time the Honourable Member for Leeds released copies of internal CBC memos signed by Mr. Chipman and others which suggested interference by the Department of External Affairs with news broadcasts to the Soviet Union, recently demoted from his position and, if so, for what reason?

2. What is Mr. Chipman's complete employment history with CBC?

3. Is Mr. Chipman being persecuted by the government for offering constructive criticism?

4. Is the government and CBC referring to Mr. Chipman's change in position as a lateral transfer and, if so, how do they justify this?

Hon. John Roberts (Secretary of State): I am informed by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation as follows: 1. Mr. Chipman was recently transfered to a new position within RCI. No memos written by Mr. Chipman suggested interference by the Department of External Affairs.

2. It has not been customary to require the CBC to supply such details of its internal management and administration (the background to this custom is explained in the answer to Question No. 2,530, May 22, 1975).

3. No.

4. No. The CBC is describing these changes as transfers to new positions with no reduction in pay.

RELOCATION OF DEPARTMENT OF VETERANS AFFAIRS

Question No. 1,229—Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton):

1. Will the relocation of the Department of Veterans Affairs, as announced, to Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, contribute to the effectiveness of the Department and, if so, in what manner?

2. Will the decentralization of the Department, as announced, provide better service to the veterans and his or her dependants and, if so, in what manner?

3. What provisions are being made for public servants who cannot relocate to Charlottetown?

4. Which government departments will be able to absorb such employees and how many fall within the category?

5. Is there any likelihood of such public servants, who cannot move, being forced to accept employment in the Public Service at a lower salary scale if they elect to remain in the Public Service in another department or agency?

6. Did the Minister, in a letter dated October 28, 1976, addressed to employees state that employees "are protected to the fullest" and, if so, what did the Minister mean by such a phrase?

7. What is the estimated cost per employee to transfer the bulk of the Department to Charlottetown?

8. What alternative measures for aiding Charlottetown were considered and for what reason were such alternatives abandoned in favour of decentralization of the Department?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Department of Veterans Affairs and the Treasury Board Secretariat as follows: 1. The effectiveness of the Department of Veterans Affairs will not change as a result of relocation to Charlottetown. However, during the years preceding relocation the department will proceed with planned organizational, procedural and systems improvements which will increase the efficiency and effectiveness of operations.

2. The high standard of service to veterans and their dependants will be maintained. This service will continue to be provided on a personal basis at the Veterans Affairs field locations across Canada.

3. These provisions are described in Treasury Board Personnel Policy Manual including provision for first consideration for reassignment to other departments.

4. Insofar as the Department of Veterans Affairs is concerned, this question cannot be answered at this time.

5. In view of the 4-5 year span of relocation implementation, there is little likelihood that employees who choose not to relocate will be required to consider employment at lower salary levels.

6. Yes. Veterans Affairs employees who choose to relocate will be eligible for reimbursement of legitimate and reasonable removal costs as provided for in the Treasury Board Relocation Directive. Employees who do not choose to relocate will be accorded the provisions of current Treasury Board policies on human resource utilization described in the Treasury Board Personnel Management Manual.

7. Removal costs are estimated to be approximately $6,000 for each employee. At this time there can be no precise determination of the number of employees who will choose to relocate and the number of employees to be recruited at the new location.

8. None.

CANADIAN FLAX STRAW

Question No. 1,254—Mr. Hnatyshyn:

Is the government aware of the reports that Canadian flax straw has been used to the limit of its availability for making fine paper products and, if so, is the government giving consideration to ensuring that more of this product is produced in the coming crop year?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): In so far as Agriculture Canada is concerned: Yes. Flax straw presently used for making fine paper products is a by-product of flax seed production and current prices for flax straw do not provide an incentive for producers to increase flax production. Increases in flax acreage cannot be encouraged solely to provide more straw. In addition to the research conducted and supported by Agriculture Canada, as outlined in the answer to Question 1,255, the government is working with producers to investigate possible production and market possibilities of special fibre flax varieties. Government officials have met with flax producers and some members of the Flaxseed Growers of Western Canada have been to a meeting held in Ottawa to discuss the topic. Also, a group of producers and researchers were sponsored on a mission to Europe to investigate European production and utilization of flax fibre.

In so far as the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce is concerned: Presently a limited amount of flaxseed straw is being collected and used for the production of fine paper products. The collection and further processing of flax straw is being examined as a complementary source of revenue for flax growers. To this end, the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce has collaborated with the Flax Growers of Western Canada by funding a mission to western Europe to conduct trials on the production of flax fibre from Canadian flax straw, to evaluate processing technologies and processing equipment available and to evaluate market potential. It should also be noted that the department is assisting in a major way in the establishment of the "P.O.S." Pilot Plant Corporation in Saskatoon which has, as the prime objective, the value-added processing of grains and oilseeds including flax.

CANADIAN FLAX—POTENTIAL RESOURCE OF INDUSTRIAL OIL

Question No. 1,255—Mr. Hnatyshyn:

Is the government aware of the reports that industrial oil obtained from western Canadian flax is of high quality and is a possible continuing source of this important product and, if so, what research is the government undertaking to ensure that this potential resource is fully exploited?

Hon. E. F. Whelan (Minister of Agriculture): Yes. Agriculture Canada conducts research to obtain earlier ripening, improved yields, resistance to flax rust and superior oil and meal quality through plant breeding and this work is supported by genetic research. In addition, Agriculture Canada supports complementary research on flax at the University of Saskatchewan in order to expand the potential of flax as a major prairie crop. It should also be noted that the department is assisting in a major way in the establishment of the "P.O.S." Pilot Plant Corporation in Saskatoon which has, as the prime objective, the value-added processing of grains and oilseeds including flax.

EMPLOYEES FROM PRIVATE EMPLOYMENT AGENCIES

Question No. 1,526—Mr. McKenzie:

IMMIGRATION ACTIVITIES

Question No. 1,917—Mr. Schumacher:

1. For all immigration activities, including appeals, how is work progressed through (a) local offices (b) overseas offices (c) regional offices (d) headquarters?

2. In each case, what is the (a) chain of command (b) name, title and location of those responsible at each decision-making level?

3. In each case, who is responsible for decisions on the movement of immigrants, according to each category, in Canada?

Hon. Bud Cullen (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): The process of immigration activities is described in Volume 2, "The Immigration Program" of the Report of the Canadian Immigration and Population Study published in 1974. To reply to this question in more detail would require a complete explanation and documentation of all operations of the immigration division at headquarters and in the field including the work flow and decision-making process. The cost of compiling this detailed information is clearly prohibitive.

IMMIGRANTS FROM 1947 TO DATE

Question No. 1,918—Mr. Schumacher:

1. In each year since 1947 to date, how many immigrants by (a) country of origin (b) racial extraction (c) occupational qualifications (d) destination were accepted into Canada and, in each case, how many were (i) sponsored (ii) unsponsored?

2. For the same years, how many of those sponsored were (a) workers (b) non-workers and what was the sponsor relationship in each case?

3. For the same years, how many of those unsponsored were (a) workers (b) non-workers?

4. For the same years, how many visitors by (a) country of origin (b) racial extraction (c) location in Canada were granted landed immigrant status?

5. For the same years, how many Canadian emigrants by (a) province (b) age (c) qualifications (d) country of destination, left Canada?

Hon. Bud Cullen (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): 1. (a) Available from Immigration Statistics which are published yearly. (b) Not available. (c) See 1(a). (d) See 1(a).

2. (a) Prior to 1967, statistics in the form requested not available. In October of 1967, the regulations were amended to include nominated relatives, sponsored dependants and independent classes. Therefore, the statistics provided below concerning sponsored immigrants destined to the labour force were: 1968, 5,958; 1969, 6,496; 1970, 6,523; 1971, 7,425; 1972, 7,764; 1973, 8,959; 1974, 10,606; 1975, 14,762; 1976, 16,448. (b) Prior to 1967 statistics in the form requested not available. (see 2(a)). Since that time, sponsored immigrants not destined to the labour force were as follows: 1968, 32,349; 1969, 27,052; 1970, 25,740; 1971, 26,025; 1972, 25,313; 1973, 33,042; 1974, 43,691; 1975, 49,563; 1976, 45,394. Sponsor relationship not readily available.

3. Data not available on unsponsored workers prior to 1964. The unsponsored class of immigrants was cancelled in 1967 with the introduction of the new immigration regulations. Therefore, the statistics below reflect the unsponsored workers and non-workers who came in Canada in the years 1964 to 1967 and independent immigrants from 1968 on: (a) 1964, 38,529; (b) 27,281; 1965, (a) 53,679; (b) 34,988; 1966, (a) 75,771; (b) 51,108; 1967, (a) 93,302; (b) 55,141; 1968, (a) 64,961; (b) 36,979; 1969, (a) 54,488; (b) 32,328; 1970, (a) 51,293; (b) 28,815; 1971, (a) 36,808; (b) 22,299; 1972, (a) 34,106; (b) 23,864; 1973, (a) 59,117; (b) 38,400; 1974, (a) 67,447; (b) 43,473; 1975, (a) 42,106; (b) 34,454; 1976, (a) 25,163; (b) 23,862.

4. Statistics on the number of "visitors" landed in Canada are not available as such. However, the following is the total number of applicants in Canada who were granted landed immigrants status since 1957. Prior to that date, data not readily available. 1957, 7,067; 1958, 8,149; 1959, 9,886; 1960, 8,648; 1961, 10,536; 1962, 11,243; 1963, 13,466; 1964, 13,872; 1965, 14,847; 1966, 18,045; 1967, 31,611; 1968, 32,619; 1969, 38,765; 1970, 43,010; 1971, 46,896; 1972, 45,079; 1973, 66,467; 1974, 45,089; 1975, 23,122; 1976, 25,212. (a), (b), (c) statistics, in the form requested, not available.

5. We do not record persons leaving Canada.

COST OF BUILDING "M.V. GULF GUARD"

Question No. 1,989—Mr. Clarke:

1. (a) What was the cost of building the M.V. Gulf Guard, now owned by the Canadian Commercial Corporation, for the original owners, Gulf Garden Foods (b) for what purpose was the boat built (c) for what length of time was it in use for Gulf Garden Foods before it was sold?

2. (a) For what purpose did the second owners, PEI Industrial Corporation purchase the boat (b) for what length of time was it in use for PEI IC (c) for what reason was the boat listed for sale by PEI IC (d) how much did PEI IC pay for the purchase of the boat from Gulf Garden Foods (e) for what reason was it transferred from PEI IC to Industrial Enterprises Incorporated?

3. (a) For what purpose did Breton Trawlers Ltd. purchase it from PEI IC (b) how much did they pay for it (c) for what length of time and in what capacity was it in operation for Breton Trawlers Ltd. before it was sold (d) for what reason was the boat listed for sale by the Breton Trawlers Ltd.?

4. When the Canadian Commercial Corporation purchased the boat from Breton Trawlers Ltd., was the Corporation aware that modifications would be necessary before the vessel would be suitable for the purpose intended by CIDA?

5. What "unforeseen requirements", as stated in the Auditor General's Report, caused an increase from $264,500 to $453,800 for a contract for modification of the vessel?

6. Did CIDA confer with the Republic of Colombia concerning the modifications necessary before the boat would be suitable for operation and, if so, for what reason did the Republic of Colombia find the vessel unstable and unsuitable?

7. Where is the boat at the present time?

8. What course of action does CIDA intend to take to put the M.V. Gulf Guard into operation?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Department of Supply and Services and the Canadian International Development Agency as follows: 1. (a) This information is not available to us. (b) We have to assume for fishing as this is a fishing vessel, but beyond this we have no details. (c) Gulf

Garden Foods was the registered owner from Feb. 10/65 to Dec. 19/66 but we have no details as to use.

2. (a) We assume for fishing purposes as this is a fishing vessel, but no further details are available to us. (b) PEI Industrial Corporation was the registered owner from Dec. 19/66 to June 4/68 but we have no details as to use. (c) This information is not available to us. (d) This information is not available to us. (e) We understand that PEI IC was disbanded and therefore this vessel was transferred to Industrial Enterprises Inc.

3. (a) According to Ministry of Transport Registry of Shipping, Breton Trawlers Limited obtained the vessel from Industrial Enterprises Inc., not from PEI IC. The vessel was obtained for fishing in the Gulf off Prince Edward Island. (b) This information is not available to us. (c) Breton Trawlers Limited was the registered owner from August 13/69 to Dec. 28/73. The vessel was employed for fishing more or less during this period but fishing declined from 1972 onwards. (d) Because the fishing declined around Prince Edward Island in the Gulf area.

4. Yes.

5. The contract allowed for costs of design changes or additional work to be negotiated under Design Change Procedures. These included design changes requested by the Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA)/Colombian Government costing $42,242.63, additional work arisings (which only became evident as the vessel was opened up so that the conversion requirements could be met) costing $62,209.12 and additional watch-keeping services costing $28,891.50 for a total of $133,343.25. These additional requirements therefore caused an increase from $264,500 to $397,843.25 to the contract for the modification of the vessel. The Auditor General's figure of $453,800 includes other charges accruing to the Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA) for the total cost of the program including such items as Naval Architects fees, cost of winterizing the vessel, design investigation and the Department of Supply and Services cost recovery charges for contractual services.

6. (a) Colombian officials were consulted throughout the elaboration of designs for the vessel, and approved the final design. (b) The stability characteristics were determined in Canada as part of the conversion contract. When the vessel was inclined upon completion of the conversion work the figures obtained by the contractor indicated that the vessel could not operate safely in one condition of the requirement that she perform as a multimode fishing-training vessel. The Gulf Guard had been officially donated to Colombia before the stability characteristics of the vessel (as converted) were known. In the circumstances, CIDA rescinded the donation. Subsequent events including a second inclining test proved the vessel to be capable of operating safely in all fishing modes subject to a minor modification and revealed that the first inclining and stability investigation contained an error.

7. Sydney, Nova Scotia.

[Mr. Goodale.]

8. The Government of Colombia has been informed that the Gulf Guard can be certified for use as a multimode fishing-training vessel as originally intended. The vessel will be handed over on acceptance by the Government of Colombia.

PRIVATE EMPLOYMENT AGENCIES

Question No. 2,180—Mr. McKenzie:

1. With reference to the answer to Question No. 1,552, did the Ministry of State for Urban Affairs obtain (a) part-time (b) full-time help, that was not placed on the pay list at the Central Pay Office but paid in some other manner, from private employment agencies in (i) British Columbia (ii) Alberta (iii) Saskatchewan (iv) Manitoba (v) Ontario (vi) Quebec (vii) New Brunswick (viii) Nova Scotia (ix) Prince Edward Island (x) Newfoundland and, if so, in each case, how many persons were involved?

2. From what source were such persons paid?

3. What was the total amount paid to such persons in (a) 1975 (b) 1976?

Hon. André Ouellet (Minister of State for Urban Affairs): 1. (a) No; (b) Yes—(i), (ii), (iii), (iv), (vii), (viii), (ix), and (x): Not applicable; (v) Yes. 1975-76: 207 persons; 1976-77: 94 persons. (vi) Yes. 1975-76: Nil; 1976-77: 5 persons.

2. Operating Vote, Standard Object 04.

3. (a) $431,931; (b) $299,878.

NOTE: These persons were all hired to work full-time, i.e., 37½ hours per week, but they were temporary in that they were hired for a short, fixed length of time through a private employment agency and were paid by the private employment agency.

VALUE OF FEDERAL PROPERTIES

Question No. 2,225—Mr. Herbert:

What is the value of federal properties by province and for the National Capital Region?

Mr. Alexandre Cyr (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Public Works): In so far as the Department of Public Works is concerned: This question cannot reasonably be answered as our records are not maintained to show the value of our holdings. We do have original cost data, but this generally would be a very poor measure of the market or replacement value of our holdings. To determine the market value would be an extremely costly and time consuming task as it would involve the individual appraisal of every building and property; including presumably marine structures and equipment.

TOTAL NUMBER OF PUBLIC SERVANTS WORKING IN HULL, QUEBEC

Question No. 2,267—Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton):

1. What is the total number of public servants and employees of Crown corporations and agencies whose place of work is in Hull, Quebec?

2. How many such employees were residing in the Province of Ontario as of April 1, 1976?

3. What is the anticipated total number of such employees who will be employed in Hull, Quebec by the year 1980?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Treasury Board: 1. As of February 28, 1977: 5,428 federal public servants.

NOTE: This includes all employees in Metropolitan Hull in departments or agencies which are subject to the Public Service Staff Relations Act, Schedule 1, Part 1.

CMHC—VANCOUVER BRANCH OFFICE

Question No. 2,292—Mr. Clarke (Vancouver Quadra):

1. Did the Vancouver Branch Office of CMHC move from its own building at 2286 West 12th to rented premises at 5511 West Boulevard and, if so (a) for what reason (b) what is the area leased (c) what is the rental rate (i) per annum (ii) per square foot?

2. Are there provisions in the lease for (a) rental increases (b) escalation for taxes, etc. and, if so, what are they?

3. What is the term (length) of the lease and date of commencement?

4. Is payment made for parking space and, if so, how much and for how many spaces?

5. Does provision exist for fireproof storage to replace the vault at the old offices and, if so, what is it?

6. (a) Has the government owned building at 2286 W. 12th been vacated and, if so, on what date (b) have efforts been made to lease or sell it and, if so, what are they (c) have the services of the Department of Public Works been enlisted to dispose of it and, if not, for what reason?

7. (a) How many persons are employed at the Vancouver Branch Office and how many are in management positions (b) how many new (i) departments (ii) management positions have been created since the Office moved to 2286 West 12th in 1954?

8. In the past 5 years, what has been the volume of (a) loans and their dollar value (b) foreclosures (c) other activities handled by the Vancouver Branch Office?

Hon. André Ouellet (Minister of State for Urban Affairs): I am advised as follows by Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation: 1. Yes. (a) Vancouver Branch Office of CMHC moved from 2286 West 12th Avenue to 5511 West Boulevard to consolidate its operations under one roof and to provide space for needed expansion. (b) and (c) The provision of space for Corporation offices is a matter of internal administration and is included in the Administrative Budget of CMHC approved annually by its Board of Directors.

2, 3, 4 and 5. See answer to 1(b) above.

6. (a) CMHC vacated its building at 2286 West 12th Avenue in May 1976. (b) The building was advertised for sale by public tender, the closing date being December 14, 1976. There were 27 requests for tender documents but only two bids were received. Neither of these was acceptable. Two offers to purchase were subsequently received on April 6th and 19th and the property was sold effective June 1, 1977. (c) Notice of the availability of the building was circulated to all Government departments in the Vancouver area through the Department of Public Works on February 3, 1976 but none expressed an interest in acquiring the property.

7. (a) The staff employed at Vancouver Branch of CMHC totals 172, (154 regular employees and 18 on contract), of which 11 are in management. (b) Information to answer this question is not available.

8. (a) and (c) See Table 1 opposite page. (b) The Vancouver office handled 242 foreclosure actions in the past five years.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE COMMISSION—TELEPHONE NUMBER OF UIC'S OFFICE IN JONQUIÈRE

Question No. 2,384—Mr. Fortin:

1. Is the telephone number of UIC's office at Jonquière, Quebec confidential and (a) if so, for what reason (b) if not, for what reason does UIC refuse to give it?

2. What is the telephone number of UIC's office at Jonquière?

Hon. Bud Cullen (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): 1. No, it is not confidential. (a) Not applicable. (b) This office is in the process of being set up and does not as yet have the staff required to provide information by telephone. This service is provided toll free by the Chicoutimi office.

2. (418) 542-7507.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE COMMISSION—REVOKING OF GUIDELINES

Question No. 2,388—Mr. Fortin:

On September 26, 1976, did five officers of the Quebec Unemployment Insurance Commission, wearing masks because allegedly they were afraid of being fired, submit documents to denounce certain methods of the UIC in Quebec, especially some guidelines signed by Mr. Robert Sanschagrin, Chief of Insurance Services in Quebec, providing that it is not necessary to indicate summons, form letters or other documents that a beneficiary must be able to speak one of the two official languages and, stating also that if a beneficiary who does not speak one of the languages would come without an interpreter, he would be considered uneligible under subsection 55(5) of the Act and, if so, have the guidelines been revoked since that time?

Hon. Bud Cullen (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): The five persons wearing masks were not identified as officers of the Unemployment Insurance Commission.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE COMMISSION—ICE PROGRAM GUIDELINES

Question No. 2,391—Mr. Fortin:

1. During a press conference held on September 26, 1976, did five agents of UIC wearing a hood, disclose the content of a guideline sent to all directors of UIC offices in Quebec by Mrs. Claire Duquette on behalf of the Head of Insurance, Mr. Robert Sanschagrin, which stipulated that hereafter, agents who used to phone the claimants under the ICE Programme to inquire about their availability before disqualifying them, should stop this practice immediately and disqualify without further ceremony any claimant who did not show for his ICE interview and, if so (a) is this guideline applied in other areas of Canada (b) has this practice been abolished (i) in Quebec (ii) elsewhere and, if so, on what date?

2. Since the month of April 1976, what percentage of this type of excluded claimants have regained their right to receive their allowances, for each month and in each area of Canada?

Hon. Bud Cullen (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): 1. Not applicable, since the five persons wearing hoods were not identified as employees of the U.I.C.

2. Not applicable.

MAPLE LEAF MONARCH COMPANY

Question No. 2,448—Mr. Neil:

Did DREE or any other department provide funds by way of grant or loan to Maple Leaf Monarch Co. to establish an oil seed crushing plant at Windsor, Ontario?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Departments of Agriculture, Finance, Industry, Trade and Commerce and Regional Economic Expansion as follows: no.

KOOTENAY WEST—MINISTERIAL ADVISORY BOARD EXPENSES

Question No. 2,479—Mr. Brisco:

1. What was the total cost of expenses for attendance of the members of the Ministerial Advisory Board of Kootenay West at meetings for the first series of applications under the Canada Works and Young Canada Works Programmes?

2. What is the estimated salary of the project officers involved in the review of the Programmes for Kootenay West?

Hon. Bud Cullen (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): 1. $1,567.

2. Two project officers have been designated to serve the constituency of Kootenay West. Their annual salary ranges from $14,296 to $16,207.

CONTRACT AWARDED TO UNLICENSED MOVER IN BRITISH COLUMBIA TO MOVE POST OFFICE

Question No. 2,540—Mr. McKinnon:

1. Did the Department of Public Works or any other department award in 1977 a contract to an unlicensed mover to move the main post office from Victoria to Saanich, British Columbia, in breach of the stipulation in the contract put out to tender, namely section 6, page one of three, "Permits and By-laws", which states "The Contractor shall comply with all laws and regulations, relating to the work, whether federal, provincial or municipal, as if the work were for a person other than Her Majesty, and shall pay for all permits and certificates required in respect of the work"?

2. Was the contractor awarded this particular contract in breach of any federal, provincial or municipal law or regulation?

Hon. Judd Buchanan (Minister of Public Works): 1. A contract was awarded by the Department of Public Works to a contractor who was registered in New Westminster. He was to comply with Section 6 and obtain all necessary permits and certificates. We have subsequently discovered he did not comply technically with our contract clause. A provincial motor carrier license was not obtained.

2. To our knowledge, the contractor was not in breach of any law or regulations. He did not require a municipal permit because the move involved more than one municipality and he was exempt from a provincial license because the move was for the federal government.

CMHC—SALARIES OF MEMBERS OF BOARD

Question No. 2,747—Mr. Robinson:

What is the salary of the (a) Executive (b) Director (c) Chairman (d) Vice-Chairman (e) board members of Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation?

Hon. André Ouellet (Minister of State for Urban Affairs): I am advised as follows by Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation: (a) The Chairman of the Board of Directors of CMHC receives a salary of $53,000 per annum. (b) The President of CMHC receives a salary in the range from $45,000 to $50,000 per annum. (c) The Vice-Presidents of CMHC receive salaries in the range from $40,000 to $45,000 per annum. (d) The three members of the Board of Directors of CMHC, appointed from the Public Service of Canada, do not receive additional remuneration because of their appointments. The five members of the Board of Directors of CMHC, appointed from outside the Public Service, receive $150 per diem for attendance at meetings of the Board of Directors.

WESTMINSTER HOSPITAL—LONDON, ONTARIO

Question No. 2,860—Mr. Marshall:

1. Under the agreement signed on June 13, 1977 between the Minister of Veterans Affairs and the Minister of Health for Ontario with regard to the transfer of DVA's Westminster Hospital in London on October 3, 1977, what are the details involved in the transfer of (a) all the buildings (b) the land?

2. What is the location of all the buildings?

3. With regard to the provision of an $18 million capital grant to the Province of Ontario for up-grading of hospital facilities and new construction over a five year period, what are the details of the participation, involvement and responsibility the Department of Veterans Affairs will have in the spending of these funds?

Hon. Daniel J. MacDonald (Minister of Veterans Affairs): 1. (a) and (b) All of the land, buildings and chattels located north of Commissioners Road shall be transferred outright to the Province of Ontario for the sum of one dollar. The land, buildings and chattels located south of Commissioners Road will be leased to the province for the sum of one dollar a year for a five-year period. In addition, the province will permit the Canadian Red Cross Society to remain in possession of the Red Cross Lodge and to operate in a manner consistent with its present manner of operation. Also, the Society may remain in possession of the space and accommodation it presently occupies on the ground floor of the Works Building on the north side of Commissioners Road, and in the Waterloo Pavilion of the Western Counties Wing.

2. North of Commissioners Road on 78.12 acres and South of Commissioners Road on 246.5 acres.

3. The obligation of Canada to make a capital grant of $18 million is subject to the condition that the construction, purchasing and installation of facilities shall be related to the improvement of health facilities for the benefit of veterans, and will be carried out in strict compliance with all applicable federal and provincial enactments. The amount of the capital grant when payable shall be paid in the following manner: (a) An amount of $500,000 within 30 days after the effective date of transfer. (b) With respect to construction of facilities, by progress payments payable within 30 days after the production by the province of statements satisfactory to Canada—verified by the province as to the amount of, and the entitlement of a contractor to the amount of each such progress claim. (c) With respect to the replacement of obsolescent equipment and furnishings, purchasing and installing additional equipment and furnishings, the full purchase price when delivered on site, including installation costs where applicable, within 30 days after production by the province of statements satisfactory to Canada verifying the completed installation. (d) With respect to the acquisition of existing buildings, within 30 days after production by the province of a statement of the amount of the cost together with the certificate of a solicitor certifying as to clear title to the facility and registration of same in the name of the province, or its designee, as the case may be.

FARM CREDIT CORPORATION—MANAGEMENT AUDIT

Question No. 2,893—Mr. Beatty:

1. Was the management audit of the Farm Credit Corporation awarded to the Sibbald Group and completed in the Spring of 1976 and, if so, what individuals or corporations tendered and, in each case, what was the bid submitted?

2. What criteria were used for the selection of the successful bidder?

Hon. E. F. Whelan (Minister of Agriculture): Farm Credit Corporation advises:

1. On September 24, 1976, the Corporation accepted the tender submitted by The Sibbald Group, Haskins & Sells Associates, to undertake a Management Audit. The report was completed in April 1977. Tenders were received as follows: Bureau of Management Consultants—$225. per man per day excluding travel expenses. A progress review was proposed after $12,500. had been spent to decide if the Corporation wished to proceed. Ernst & Ernst—$64,000. Manitoba Institute of Management Inc.—$89,400. The Sibbald Group, Haskins & Sells Associates—$64,000. In addition to the above, the Chairman of the Corporation requested that the following projects be undertaken by the Sibbald Group: Research, preparation and presentation relating to the division of duties and authorities between the Chairman and the Vice-Chairman; and Preparation and presentation of Report for Senior Management—$12,872.80.

2. Criteria for selection of successful bidder were as follows: Approach, personnel resources, experience and interest in the project, and cost estimate.

Return tabled.

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Is it agreed that the questions enumerated shall be deemed to be made orders for returns, with returns tabled forthwith?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Cossitt: Mr. Speaker, it is not often anyone rises to congratulate the parliamentary secretary, because we have tried for a year and a half to get answers to some of these early questions to which a response has finally been forthcoming today, perhaps because of complaints from various members of the opposition. I might say, though, that we also received these answers about half an hour ago, before the House gave permission for them to be released. Perhaps the parliamentary secretary could tell us how this happened. It may be it was because of his anxiety to satisfy the House, having at long last procured the replies to these questions.

The only complaint I might mention at this moment is that the questions concerning the use by government ministers of government aircraft still remain unanswered. The reason for this seems to be obvious—the answers would be embarrassing to the government. But if the House is still to be sitting next week, as the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) indicated earlier might be the case, perhaps the parliamentary secretary could tell us whether these questions will be answered before we finally adjourn for the summer recess.

[Mr. Schellenberger.]

Mr. Speaker: I should say, following the point of order raised by the hon. member for Leeds (Mr. Cossitt), that our staff may have been involved in releasing to the opposition one of the documents which was handed to us on the basis of the usual procedure, that is, that it would be retained in our possession until the point at which approval for its release was given by the House.

Mr. Goodale: In response to the hon. member's question with respect to the number of questions remaining on the order paper and having to do with the use of government aircraft, I think I can give him the assurance he is seeking. I have indicated to him all along that my intention was to provide answers not only to those questions but to all questions on the order paper before the end of this session, and I am hopeful I can provide the answers to the questions to which he has referred at the earliest opportunity, certainly before the end of this session.

STARRED QUESTION

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): There is a starred question to be dealt with, Mr. Speaker. Would you be good enough to call question 2,937? Before dealing with this question I should point out that a portion of it appears in the form of a complicated table, details of which would take a considerable length of time to read. It is in response to part 3 of the question, and it consists of a number of columns of figures. I would seek permission of the House to have that table appear in Hansard as read.

Mr. Speaker: Is that agreed?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

*FARM CREDIT CORPORATION—HOTEL ACCOUNT

Question No. 2,937—Mr. Beatty:

1. Was an account with the Talisman Hotel in Ottawa opened by the Farm Credit Corporation and, if so (a) on what date was it first opened (b) on whose authority was the decision made to cover expenses in this fashion instead of through the submission of regular expense accounts?

2. Who are the officials of the Corporation entitled to charge items to this account?

3. By month, since the opening of the account, what was the dollar amount charged (a) for accommodation (b) for liquor (c) for food (d) for any other goods or services and, in each case, what were the items charged (e) in total?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the answer is: 1. Yes. (a) April 18, 1975; (b) Chairman.

2. B. H. Kristjanson, Chairman, W. R. deGruchy, Secretary to the Corporation.

THE ROYAL ASSENT

Mr. Speaker: It is my duty to inform the House that I have received the following communication:

Sir,

I have the honour to inform you that the Honourable R.G.B. Dickson, LL.D., D.C.L., Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, in his capacity as Deputy Governor General, will proceed to the Senate chamber to-day, the 5th day of August, at 4.45 p.m., for the purpose of giving royal assent to certain bills.

I have the honour to be,
Sir,
Your obedient servant,
D. C. McKinnon
Comptroller of the Household

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): One o'clock.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

ENERGY

CONSIDERATION OF PROPOSALS FOR NORTHERN GAS PIPELINE

The House resumed, from Thursday, August 4, consideration of the motion of Mr. MacEachen:

That this House recognizes the social, economic, environmental and energy issues surrounding the question of northern gas pipelines and, believing that the resolution of these issues must reflect the national interest, approves the position of the government that all relevant reports must be considered before deciding on a pipeline and its route; and the amendment thereto of Mr. Broadbent.

Mr. Speaker: It being one o'clock, I do now leave the chair until two o'clock this afternoon.

At 1.08 p.m. the House took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The House resumed at 2 p.m.

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I would like to move a motion, with the consent of the House. As hon. members know, the office of the Commissioner of Official Languages became vacant at the end of July. My intention is to move a motion to secure a replacement. So if I have the agreement of the House to do that, I will be glad to do it.

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): That will be agreeable, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Agreed, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Caouette (Témiscamingue): Yes, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Jones: I am not prepared to give consent for that, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: There is no consent for the President of the Privy Council (Mr. MacEachen) to move the motion. We will therefore proceed with the debate. At the time of adjournment yesterday, the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Dupras) had the floor.

[Translation]

Mr. Maurice Dupras (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I regret that the House and the Canadian people cannot learn who will be the successor of Mr. Keith Spicer, who has performed some excellent work as Official Languages Commissioner, but I hope anyhow that the appointment will be made as soon as possible.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Order. Let me remind the hon. member of the subject now before the House. To my mind, the remark he just made is irrelevant in this debate.

Mr. Dupras: Mr. Speaker, as I indicated when the Chair gave me the floor last night, the construction of a pipeline assumes, for us Canadians, such importance as to be comparable with the great project achieved by our ancestors, namely the construction of the railway linking the east with the west, or the construction, more recently, of the St. Lawrence Seaway, as some of my colleagues pointed out yesterday during the debate, for it will contribute in a large measure to making Canada self-sufficient in matters of energy.

This special debate tops off several serious studies undertaken as early as in 1967, at which time the task force known as the North-West Project was set up whose main objectives were to make feasibility and engineering studies for the construction of a pipeline to transport natural gas from the Pointed Mountain in the Northwest Territories to the markets in the south. Some time later, in 1969, the Mackenzie Valley Pipeline Research Ltd. was created with a view to adding to the northwest project studies on a pipeline from Alaska and the Mackenzie Delta, as well as a link with existing pipelines. In 1970, other companies and task forces joined this core of researchers.

Following those important studies, groups of contractors applied to the National Energy Board for authorization to build a pipeline from Alaska and the Mackenzie delta to southern markets, by way of the Mackenzie Valley. In October 1976, Foothills Ltd. offered to build a pipeline for the transport of Alaska gas to American markets through the Yukon, British Columbia, Alberta, and Saskatchewan, a project whose approval was recommended by the National Energy Board last July. For us, eastern Canadians, this project represents many advantages well beyond the guarantee of an energy supply and assumes a very great importance. First, the implementation of this project will call for the participation of human and industrial resources in Canada and will obviously imply almost exclusive participation of the industry in Canada and naturally in the province of Quebec, more specifically for manufacturing the equipment needed to carry out the project such as compressors, generators, pumps, heavy machinery, air exchangers and so on. All this entails the creation of numerous jobs while at the same time boosting the processing industry in that province, not to mention the direct economic impact it will have all over the northwest region. Among the various benefits we are likely to get from that project, we must point out also, and they are not the least, the numerous permanent positions which will open up and which will be filled by natives. In short, Mr. Speaker, building a pipeline will represent another monument to the entrepreneurship of Canadians, a quality which is the pride of our country and which keeps on amazing the whole world. This great undertaking will be tailored to the size of our country.

In the few minutes available to me, how can I enumerate all the reasons that prompt us to build this pipeline now, whether we agree on the Foothills Yukon Ltd. or the Canadian Arctic Gas proposals? The two are feasible without jeopardizing the environment and if there ever was a project as important as this one which has been considered as exhaustively as this pipeline, I cannot recall it, Mr. Speaker. This leads me to say that I find we have given a great deal more importance to environmental protection in the construction of a pipeline than we did to the opinion of Montrealers when time came to build Decarie Boulevard or the east-west expressway. Never was there such exhaustive consultation to make Canadians understand how important the building of such a project is. As I was saying, Mr. Speaker, the two are feasible without jeopardizing the environment and the self-reliance about which the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Gillespie) is talking in the foreword of the document entitled "An energy strategy for Canada", a document which the Leader of the Opposition does not seem to be aware of since he claimed that Canada has no energy policy. I suggest he should read it, for the minister stated we have in Canada the expertise, the material resources, the technology and the necessary energy resources we need to reduce our dependency on imported gas.

To achieve this, we shall have to reduce the rate of increase in our future energy needs, substitute more abundant types of energy resources for those which are less abundant, and speed up our search for oil and gas so as to transform our potential resources in proven resources and thus meet our needs. All these solutions are expensive, but we have no choice: we shall have to apply them fully, or else we shall be faced with energy shortages which will worsen our dependency on expensive and questionable oil imports, and even cut down on the available stocks in Canada. We are able to prevent the occurrence of those last two possibilities and we have to act accordingly. Those are, Mr. Speaker, the views of the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources.

Furthermore, among the important reasons why we want to carry out this project now, there is also this opportunity we have to do so jointly and in sharing the costs with our neighbours south of the border, the Americans, with whom, it has to be admitted, we are already sharing the American continent as well as a continental defence system. We are also sharing many joint ventures, not to mention the professional hockey leagues, the major baseball leagues, Biscaine Boulevard in Miami and finally Cape Cod. Therefore we should not take offense at it, but feel a legitimate satisfaction at the fact that the solution to some of our energy problems could at the same time help resolve part of the serious difficulties our neighbours south of the border have faced these few last years.

Like the beneficial effects that the major gas discovery in the North Sea brought the British, something which is now being called the British economic miracle and which is the envy of the world of finance, even leading a Swiss banker to say that the British economic problems had been overcome through the valorization of the natural resources in the North Sea, the recovery, transformation and utilization of frontier natural gas represents in this country a capital event which in a few years will surely be called the economic event of the century. In the province of Quebec alone if consumption of natural gas is to go from 6 per cent of total energy consumption to about 18 or 20 per cent one may extrapolate on the saving of oil which could result. That increased volume of gas consumption will help maintain the competitive quality of the industry of that province while also at the same time helping heat our residences and institutions.

One can also envisage the possibility of the day being delayed when the construction program for a nuclear reactor network will have to be implemented to provide the province with the energy supply it will need. It must also be anticipated that the construction of pipelines to serve the province and linking large cities which are not already supplied with natural gas will stir up construction activities leading to the establishment of infrastructures, Quebec City still being one of the rare large cities in North America not being yet supplied with that source of energy.

Mr. Speaker, the importance of that project for all Canadians was stressed by most hon. members who spoke before me in this debate, and it does seem that the most important question is not so much whether we are going to build the pipeline but rather when it will be built and what route it will follow. In light of the various reports that were produced by the Berger Commission, the National Energy Board as well as others who considered this important problem, the cabinet seems prepared to make a decision, and I am sure that decision and the challenge it will pose for all Canadians will be taken up by all Canadians.

[English]

Mr. Doug Neil (Moose Jaw): Mr. Speaker, my leader has set out very clearly the position of the official opposition with respect to a pipeline to bring gas from the Arctic. He has said, first of all, that we wholeheartedly support the principle of a gas pipeline, that the primary purpose of a pipeline is to deliver frontier gas to southern Canada, and that the secondary purpose of a pipeline is to deliver American gas to American consumers. He also said that based on available evidence—and I would like to emphasize the words "available evidence"—we support the Alcan route as recommended by the National Energy Board.

In order for a pipeline to be a reality, the approval of the United States will be required because at the moment there are not sufficient reserves of natural gas in the Delta to warrant a Canadian pipeline. The United States, of course, has the option of moving its gas down the El Paso route from Prudhoe Bay to Valdez, where it would be liquefied, put into LNG tankers and carried down the coast to California, or alternatively, as the President of the United States said in a speech a few days ago, through a new Panama Canal to the Gulf coast and eastern ports.

I read a report in yesterday's Globe and Mail that Basil Robinson, Canada's northern pipeline co-ordinator, and his team of negotiators received a "frosty" reception from their counterparts in Washington when they were down to work out the parameters of a Canada-U.S. agreement on an Alaska Highway pipeline. I find this very hard to comprehend. Are we to understand that this was the first meeting held between Canada and the United States to consider pipeline proposals? That is, of course, other than the brief meeting which took place between President Carter and our Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau). I wonder, too, if the group of Canadian negotiators will include a representative of the government of the Yukon. After all, if we choose to build a pipeline along the Alcan route, it will affect the Yukon and it seens only logical, therefore, to include in the negotiations a representative of the Yukon, possibly an elected representative, or the Commissioner of the Yukon.

We face an impending world energy crisis, which makes it imperative for the United States to build a gas pipeline for moving its gas to the south, and also makes it imperative for Canada to build a pipeline for moving our gas to the south. Therefore, a Canada-U.S. line would be to our common advantage. Surely it would have made sense to hold a series of meetings during the past two or three years at which the two governments could have arrived at a tentative agreement or basic understanding, instead of waiting until the eleventh hour to begin the hard bargaining which will lead to an agreement.

I appreciate that applications for competing pipelines have been made in Canada and in the United States, that hearings must be held and decisions made; but would it not have been more reasonable to negotiate on the basis of all the options open to us? If that had happened, the government could have told the opposition parties in this debate, "We have worked out certain tentative proposals with the United States on the basis of existing options, and these are the alternatives. Let us now debate them on the basis of all the facts." It did not happen this way. We are now debating an issue on which we do not have all the relevant facts. The government is playing politics, hoping, I suspect, that the opposition will make a statement or statements based on inadequate evidence which the government can use at some future time to its political advantage. I note that yesterday the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Gillespie) asked my leader the official opposition's position on the pipeline down the Mackenzie Valley, the CAGPL route. Allow me to read the following exchange which is recorded on page 8040 of Hansard:

MR. GILLESPIE: Has the Leader of the Opposition categorically rejected the option of the CAGPL route?

MR. CLARK: Mr. Speaker, I think I indicated in the House clearly to everybody, including the minister, that on the basis of available information we think preference should be given to the Alcan route. We say that on the basis of information available to the House of Commons. We do not rule out anything categorically the details of which we do not know and which the minister may know.

In the last two weeks I and several members of my party spent five days in the Mackenzie Valley and in the Yukon. It was one of several trips I have taken in the past few years north of 60°. We talked to people in Hay River, Yellowknife, Norman Wells, Inuvik, Tuktoyaktuk and Whitehorse. We talked to natives and whites alike. Up and down the whole valley there is a feeling of bewilderment and despair because this government, without justification, led the people of the valley to believe there was no doubt the Mackenzie Valley pipeline would be built. The people in the valley built their hopes on it.

In Hay River, the headquarters of Northern Transportation Company Limited, a Crown corporation which carries freight by barge up and down the Mackenzie Valley and out to the islands in the Beaufort Sea, NTCL spent $20 million on barges and tugs in anticipation of activity to be created by construction of the pipeline. You will find the majority of this equipment either in drydock or tied up at wharves and not being used. In Norman Wells one will note that the government built some 20 houses, costing about $80,000 each, to accommodate the government employees it was anticipated would be needed in the area when the pipeline was built. Walking around Norman Wells you will come on a pile of 50 or 60 pieces of brand new furniture, chesterfields, chairs, and so on, still wrapped in cardboard. The furniture was destined for the houses under construction. Rain has fallen on it several times and I think it is now useless. Many thousands of dollars were wasted. As one resident said offhandedly to us, it will probably be thrown on the garbage dump.

One finds that Inuvik, at the suggestion of this government, developed an area and installed infrastructure for a new subdivision for homes for the people who would move into the town during the pipeline construction period and subsequently. This development cost the town several million dollars. We were told at Inuvik, as well, that DREE and the Industrial Development Bank had encouraged business to expand in anticipation of the pipeline being built. Now many businessmen are faced with large loan repayments which they are unable to meet. There are possibilities of shutdowns of businesses and even of bankruptcy. As I said earlier, there is a feeling of despair up and down the valley, despair caused by this government's lack of leadership, by lack of departmental co-ordination, by assumptions on the part of either ministers of the Crown or senior officials of their departments that, without doubt, a decision in favour of a Mackenzie Valley pipeline would be handed down.

I should be remiss in my duty if I did not put on record some of the feelings of many of the residents of the north with respect to the Berger commission hearings. We were told time and again that the report does not represent the true feelings of the majority of the native people but expresses the views, given through the mouths of native people appearing before the commission, of radical white advisers from the south. One name mentioned frequently was Mel Watkins, known to many as the former leader of the Waffle party. His views differ greatly from the views of the vast majority of Canadians and were so radical that the party to my left could not live with him.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Neil: I am told for at least two years he was paid a salary of $45,000 a year by the Indian Brotherhood. We asked those who raised the issue why they did not appear before the Berger commission to give their side of the story. Without exception, the answer given was that the majority of the groups which appeared before the commission were funded by the federal government. They were able to take the time to travel and had the funds to do so, whereas the people expressing their concern to us had businesses to look after and just did not have the time and the funds. Mr. Speaker, as I said earlier, I think it important to record in Hansard the views of those people.

In yesterday's mail, all members received a letter from John W. Steen, MLA for the western Arctic. That letter was dated July 14, 1977. Time will not permit me to read the whole letter into the record, but I would like to read three paragraphs. This is what Mr. Steen said:

I am a member of the Northwest Territories legislative assembly: although this assembly does not have the status of a provincial legislature, the members are no less the official representatives of our constitutents.

We, on the Northwest Territories legislative assembly are appalled at the tendency, however well intentioned, for southern Canadians to want to make our decisions for us. We are frustrated by our inability, due to our limited access to mass media, to make our true needs and desires known and understood nationally. Look at how much attention was given to Judge Berger's report and how little attention was paid to our assembly's assessment to the prospective Mackenzie Valley pipeline.

Once again, my plea to you is to let democracy work in the Northwest Territories—listen to the duly elected representatives of all peoples of the Northwest Territories. Do not force a moratorium down our throats.

If members will take the time to check the record, it will show that nine of the 15 elected members of the legislative assembly of the Northwest Territories are of native origin. I would suggest that these members do represent all the people in the territory. As representatives of all the people in the territory, the council must be actively involved not only in the negotiating area but in the final decision-making with respect to native land claims. The members of the legislative assembly recognize the right of the natives to a settlement of their land claims.

In the past four years I have made six trips into the Mackenzie Valley and have talked to a great many people. Not once did I talk to an individual who was opposed to a settlement. Without exception they said there should be a settlement and that the settlement must be just and equitable. However, they are opposed to a settlement along the lines of the Dene proposal. I would like to say, on my own behalf and on behalf of the official opposition, that we are opposed to any settlement along the lines proposed by the Dene. I can only classify their proposal as apartheid. It is interesting to note that the various organizations and groups throughout Canada who so vocally support the Dene proposal condemn even more vocally the apartheid policy of South Africa. How inconsistent can they be? In the debate yesterday, when the hon. member for Lambton Kent (Mr. Holmes) spoke he talked of the Dene proposal and apartheid and suggested that the government was sympathetic to it. The hon. minister for Indian Affairs and Northern Development (Mr. Allmand) then became quite agitated and I gathered from his remarks shouted across the floor of the House that he was denying it.

I would like to read into the record an excerpt from a letter dated June 28, 1977, written by the minister to David N. Searle, a member of the council of the Northwest Territories. The minister, referring to a meeting on April 19, 1977, in Yellowknife, said:

> As I mentioned during our meeting, I reject the concept of an exclusively ethnic political unit, although I am not opposed to political units with native majorities, provided that minority political rights are protected.

I think this House and the people of Canada are entitled to an explanation of just what he means by that statement. Was he stating his own personal views, or government policy? The north, particularly the Northwest Territories, has suffered too long from the failure of the government to establish a northern policy. In the Diefenbaker years there was the vision of the north and the roads to resources policy. There was enthusiasm and anticipation on the part of all Canadians. It struck their imagination. But it was more than a vision. Projects were started. Some were completed, but unfortunately when the government changed, the north was forgotten. Prime Minister Pearson laughed at the Dempster Highway and said it was a road from igloo to igloo. Had that highway been built as planned by the Diefenbaker government, much of the equipment and supplies for Prudhoe Bay would have been carried over it. Think of what that would have done to Inuvik and Tuktoyaktuk.

This government has been a failure as far as the north is concerned. It has done everything it could to discourage development. It suspended the northern oil and gas regulations in 1970, and seven years later, despite repeated demands from oil companies and the official opposition, they still have not been drafted and promulgated. There has been a land freeze, preventing the development of some rich farmland and market gardening. There has been a freeze with respect to mineral exploration and development. The operation NCPC, a Crown corporation, has resulted in extremely high power rates to the residents of the north.

These are just a few examples of negligence of this government. They have failed to accept the fact that the territories at this point in time should have progressed to self-government by a phasing in of responsibility, that over the years the people of the north should have been consulted through their elected representatives to work out programs for the development of the north. The government may argue that settlement of land claims has held up development, but as someone mentioned yesterday in this debate, it was not until three years ago that the Prime Minister recognized the rights of the natives to a land settlement.

What is the future of the territories? How can the feeling of bewilderment and despair be overcome? I suggest, Mr. Speaker, that immediate steps must be taken to develop a policy that will stimulate oil and gas exploration in the Delta and the sedimentary basin of the valley. There must be a stimulus to mineral exploration and development. There must be a policy of hydro development tied into a Canadian power grid. There must be an opening up of farmland. There must be a good, hard look taken at logging in the southern part of the territories. There must be development of a transportation system in the north, in the broadest sense. The policies must not be developed solely in Ottawa, but primarily by the elected representatives of the people in the north with the co-operation of Ottawa. I see my time is up. I will close by saying that the situation in the valley is critical. I plead with this government to take immediate steps to work toward a solution to the problems.

Mr. Wally Firth (Northwest Territories): Mr. Speaker, I am indeed pleased to make a few comments on the motion before the House at this time. It is a very important decision that will affect not only the people living in the Yukon and Northwest Territories but all of the north. Indeed, the long-range effects of this major decision which I expect will be made within the next few weeks will affect all of Canada. I am willing to support this motion and amendment because of the quality of reports produced for the government in the past several months. I suggest that these be received by the government and given full consideration. However, I can only support this motion if I can see that the government truly and in good faith is willing to base its decision on the evidence and recommendations made public this past spring and summer.

If the government is using this motion to support a decision based on some other secret or confidential material it has prepared, and if in the next week or so we are treated to a decision based on information that is not now public, the cabinet will have made themselves, parliament and indeed everyone else involved look rather foolish. I certainly hope that does not happen. The decision that is to be made is a tall order for any group of people. I would like to help by reviewing the recommendations that have been made thus far. I would also like to add my own emphasis to these recommendations because the decision the government will be making in the near future is going to change my part of the country perhaps more than any other decision that may be made about the north in this decade.

I hope that all hon. members of the House will share my concern that the views of northern people are given just a little bit more of a fair hearing in deciding whether to build a gas pipeline down the Mackenzie Valley, along the Alcan route or whatever.

I should like to touch on some of the comments made by the major boards and commissions which have reported to the government on northern pipelines. By this I mean Mr. Justice Berger, the members of the National Energy Board, and the members of the Lysyk and Hill inquiries. First of all, I would again congratulate those people who worked so hard and conscientiously to prepare this material. To Judge Berger and the staff of the Berger inquiry, the people of the north, I believe, owe a debt that will be very difficult to repay. To the members and the staff of the other commissions and the NEB we owe a similar debt of gratitude for the full and fair way in which they have completed this work.

The manner in which these boards and commissions have included the public directly in the decision-making process is a welcome change from the way things have been done in the past, and I hope that these methods will set a precedent for the future. The way in which this material has been gathered shows the depth of feeling of Canadians generally about this major decision which affects the north. It shows that small groups and even individuals can have an influence on something as big and powerful as Canadian Arctic Gas. I believe that if it were not for the efforts of these boards and commissions, groups and individuals who devoted so much time and effort, we would now be watching Arctic Gas laying its pipeline along the Mackenzie Valley, which might have been a bad, even a dangerous, situation. These commissions and the people who appeared before them helped prevent that, and I certainly hope the government does not treat their efforts lightly.

In his report to this House, Mr. Justice Berger spoke of the social and economic cost of building a pipeline along the Mackenzie. Mr. Lysyk has this to say:

> The main benefits from the pipeline will be concentrated outside the Yukon, largely south of the 49th parallel, whereas the most significant costs, in terms of both economic dislocation and social disruption, will be experienced in the Yukon.

The point is, Mr. Speaker, that when pipeliners go north to build they are not doing the northern people a favour. If the government decides to build a pipeline in either the Yukon or the Northwest Territories, it had better realize that it will do nothing but double or even triple our cost of living. There will be very few of us who will benefit from high wages; most of us will just have to pay. If the government does decide to go ahead, I plead with the government to have something a little more potent on hand than their useless wage controls.

I shall return to this question later as I would now like to go to the substance of the evidence. My reading of the four reports gives me the obvious general conclusion that there is a favourable reaction to the Foothills route, or, as it is more popularly known, the Alcan pipeline route, down the Alaska Highway. To my mind this is the best of a lot of bad choices and I would urge the government to consider it.

There are some loose ends though to be found in the fine print of these reports. These loose ends are not the fault of the commissions, but they are there and the government will have to do something about tying these loose ends together. In my view, one important loose end is the question of how pipeline development will mesh in with a settlement of land claims made by the native people of both the Yukon and the Northwest Territories.

It always strikes me as odd, Mr. Speaker, when you mention the words "northern development" to most people in the southern part of Canada they immediately think you are talking about a pipeline, or a hydroelectric project covering two billion acres, or anything that is really big and which costs more money than most of us can imagine. I will admit that some people in southern Canada do include, say, things such as forestry or fishing in their definition of "northern development", but their number is few. Not that these things are not, strictly speaking, northern development; but I think these people miss the point that by far the most important kind of northern development—this is a point I have made several times not only in this House but elsewhere—would be a just settlement of native land claims both in the Yukon and the Northwest Territories. Not only is settlement of a land claim economic development, in my humble opinion; it is also the means of social and political development for just over half, if not more, of the people of the north.

A just land claim settlement will set the background for most development, including construction of a pipeline in the future. A settlement would allow participation at several levels of government by native people through the economic activities that will shape the environment and the future of the people of the Yukon and Northwest Territories. I hope that as a result we will have some power, in terms of financial resources, to become participants in whatever economic development we choose, instead of being, as in the past, the victims of economic development which someone else far away from the scene chooses for us.

Perhaps more importantly, Mr. Speaker, a just land settlement will set the guidelines for how northern people will govern themselves and will relate to other levels of government both in the territories and in the rest of the country. A just land claims settlement would also influence the general land use patterns of the two territories. So far as this matter is concerned, the government does not have to listen only to me. Of the four reports that I have mentioned, three devote space to the topic of land claims. The fourth, the Hill report on environmental impact in the Yukon, did not include this topic within its scope.

Judge Berger has a lot to say in his report about land claims, and what he says is the best proof that he was able to understand the position taken by the native peoples at the hearings he conducted up and down the Mackenzie and indeed all across the country. At one in his report Judge Berger has this to say:

> Euro-Canadian society has refused to take native culture seriously. European institutions, values and use of land were seen as the basis of culture. Native institutions, values and language were rejected, ignored or misunderstood and—given the native peoples use of the land—the Europeans had no difficulty in supposing that native people possessed no real culture at all.

Judge Berger goes on to say this:

> Native culture is not static. The things the native people have said to this inquiry should not be regarded as a lament for a lost way of life, but as a plea for an opportunity to shape their own future, out of their own past. They are not seeking to entrench the past, but to build on it.

Judge Berger recommends that a period or ten years be set aside, and if this is done not only can a land claims settlement be reached but the settlement can be implemented before construction of a pipeline starts. He is adamant that no pipeline should be built before land claims are settled. He was speaking, of course, of conditions in the Northwest Territories.

Mr. Lysyk agreed that land claims in the Yukon must be settled before construction of a pipeline begins. He suggests that the period for implementation of the settlement be four years. In the Yukon the native people have reached a kind of consensus. Based on that, they are willing to start negotiations for their claims. I am amazed that they have been able to complete this process in such a short time and with such apparent success.

In the Northwest Territories things are different. We have more than one culture, seven different languages and a different set of economic and political conditions. It will take much more time to work out a position that all the people in the Northwest Territories can feel comfortable with. This explains why the two territories need different time frames to complete a land claims settlement.

There is another important point which must be discussed, and I am referring to the other far-reaching effects of the building of a pipeline to the western Arctic, the Northwest Territories and the Yukon. I am speaking of the people who work in our mines, in our government departments, people who are employed by small business and people who own small businesses in the north. They will have to face a very big problem, and that is the effect of increased wages, high cost of living and the kinds of things which will come about as a result of high wages being paid to pipeline workers.

People in the mining business, small business, and so on, will have a difficult time contending with that. In the Yukon, these people make up by far the largest section of the work force. In the Northwest Territories, they are also a substantial percentage of the population. Presently these people, along with everyone else in the territories, face a cost of living far higher than anyone in the south. Also, it is harder to find a job in these territories than anywhere else in the country. I do not believe the building of any pipeline will help that.

In Alaska, during the construction period of their oil pipeline, the state was flooded with unemployed people from the lower 48 states, so much so that real unemployment in the state increased. There were more people without work during the construction period than before it started. This inflation will hit people who, even though their wages will no longer be controlled, I expect, will not be earning the pipeliner's dream wages. As I mentioned earlier, the miners will not, and the public service employees certainly will not. I could go on and on about this, but I believe there are a number of things that should be done before the construction of a pipeline commences. This is why I agree with the Lysyk recommendation for the Yukon, of a period of delay of four years, and the recommendation by Berger of ten years in the Northwest Territories.

Will the government make sure that Whitehorse and Yellowknife can afford to pay police officers, when the going rate for a night watchman is $4,000 or $5,000 a month on a pipeline-building project? Will they provide housing where a bunkroom full of people can cost $75 a week? Something like that happened along the route in Alaska during the building of the oil pipeline.

Another project that should be recommended before the building of any pipeline is the massive log housing program. There should also be job training. The Yukon people should be lobbying for the paving of the Alaska Highway, which would provide some jobs. The building of a massive log housing program in the Yukon and the Northwest Territories would assist the economy of those territories during the waiting period before settlement of land claims, and so on.

In conclusion, I should like to extend an invitation to all members of this House and all members of the other place to come to the north and see for themselves the kind of beauty and the kind of problems that have to be contended with up there. Perhaps if more members of this House and the other place had gone to visit the Northwest Territories in the past few years, the decision frontbenchers over there will have to make, or intend to make before too long, would have been a somewhat easier task.

Members opposite on the front benches have a big decision to make. They must assure a place for the rational development of gas, oil and other mineral wealth of the north. At the same time, they must assure a place in the development for the people of the north. They can turn it into a model of how men and women can live with respect for the land and the several cultures, or they can destroy the unique land and unique people. On behalf of the people of the Northwest Territories in particular, and all northerners, I say to the members in the front benches opposite, "Please be careful".

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The hon. member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen) wishes to ask a question. This can be done only with the consent of the hon. member, and it must be done quickly because there is only half a minute of his time remaining.

Mr. Firth: Agreed.

Mr. Nielsen: Mr. Speaker, could the hon. member tell the House how he can take the position he does, opposing the pipeline down the Mackenzie on the basis he does, when the 15 elected members of the Northwest Territories Council, nine of whom are native, take the opposite view?

Mr. Firth: Mr. Speaker, it is part of democracy. I have for many years been very, very concerned about the building of a pipeline down the Alaska Highway as well as the building of a possible pipeline along the Mackenzie route. I take this position on the basis of the 40 years I have lived in the Northwest Territories. I worked as a hunter-trapper, I talked to many, many people and I listened very carefully to the views put forward to Mr. Justice Berger. As I mentioned in my speech, I am basing this not only on the report of Mr. Berger but also on the Lysyk report, the NEB report and my personal experience from having lived in both territories.

[Translation]

Mr. Gilles Caouette (Témiscamingue): Mr. Speaker, first of all I think that most Canadians are in favour of building an oil or gas pipeline, particularly because of the psychosis which has been created for several years by the government and some so-called specialists who are trying to convince the public that there is a shortage of oil products. The government took every advantage of this and so has forced the Canadian people to accept the continuous increases in the gas and fuel prices. And today it says that Canada commits itself to build a pipeline and that a continuous supply is guaranteed for Canadians and it implies that this supply will cost less than the methods presently used.

It must be noted that the project guarantees at least a 25 year supply with the normal resources alone. This is what the studies indicate, which proves without any doubt that once again the so-called specialists, who try to make people believe there was a shortage of gas and oil products, were completely wrong.

To distract attention from the cost of installation, the debate has been centred on native rights and the environment. The Berger report speaks at length about this and even suggests a 10 year moratorium before starting to build a pipeline. I am wondering whether the experts have tried to make the population understand what such a project would cost—more than $10 billion according to pre-production estimates. Absolutely not. The experts talk about costs, but not more than is necessary. They talk about all sorts of aspects, but they forget to talk about money. The cost for the government and the companies involved has no importance or nearly none. When we consider what each investigation has cost—$48 million for the least expensive and more than $100 million for some others—we are talking about large expenditures. But this remains untold. What seems more important is to hide this figure of $10 billion to the population and to say that the cost is small and that it will contribute to stimulate the economy in an area of the country and that this investment will create employment.

What we of the Social Credit deplore is precisely this tendency of the government to refuse to reveal clearly and emphatically the cost of its projects for Canadians. However, we all know that Canadians will be the ones to pay for the project and that, according to present rates, interests of 9, 10 and even 12 per cent will have to be paid on these $10 billion. However, this is not mentioned. Whether the investment is made by private companies or jointly with the government, it still remains that Canadians will pay the cost.

The motion we are discussing today attempts to emphasize the agreement of all parties to the building of a pipeline, which forces us to set certain priorities, namely the significance of and need for such a project, and especially its impact.

Clearly there is an all-important factor, capacity for a nation to be self-sufficient. It is important for a country like Canada to be independent, not to depend on foreign countries. This one reason alone gives us the right to support the construction of a pipeline that would obviously allow us to use our own resources.

[Mr. Caouette (Témiscamingue).]

We feel that this one reason is ample justification for supporting the project, with the provisos stated earlier and others I shall refer to later.

My second question concerns the need for a pipeline. Is it important for Canada's development, is it absolutely necessary? This may be the key to the whole problem. Although the proposed pipeline now appears to be a necessity of some sort, we wonder whether it will still be four or ten years from now.

Since all reports agree on a four- to ten-year postponement, we can justifiably ask ourselves whether, during that period, the government would not be better advised to spend the pipeline's estimated cost on researching other forms of energy that would not harm the environment. The proposed delays are based on environment and native sociology reasons. Every report refers to the need for postponing construction to obtain a better knowledge of the environment. Would it not be better if the government looked for other sources of energy? How far down the road can we expect that solar energy will be tapped, that tide or wind energy will be in general use and, in a still more technologically advanced area, that the earth's magnetic energy will be developed? This is the question I am pondering. Why not spend the same amount of money on developing other forms of energy? Will the pipeline project seriously jeopardize research in other fields? Why did the studies not order comparative analyses of the development of other resources and that of oil and gas transportation?

To my mind, a government concerned with the common good would have, right from the start, ordered such a report before looking into which route would be the best for building a 20- or 48-inch pipeline. I agree with the idea of a pipeline, but I am still reticent about its value in twenty years from now, especially knowing that Canadians, in 100 years from now, will still be paying for the cost of the project which will probably have been profitable for barely ten years. Still, I am quite willing to try to find out what its consequences will be. But, once again, I have to refer to all those studies which, without a single exception, point out the ecological dangers while at the same time advising us that it is impossible to evaluate its repercussions, at least the most important, namely the respect of our aboriginals and the environment. In that respect alone, we are floundering in strange waters, at the risk of making the same error as our ancestors who, in the name of industrialization, did not evaluate the destruction of the environment, the pollution of our rivers by industrial waste, and so many other consequences we are now up against.

Nevertheless, I must congratulate those responsible for the reports for at least thinking about the future impact of such a project. And for that I endorse the suggestion, but as I mentioned my support remains conditional on the answers that will be provided by the further inquiries, if any, and the attitude of the government. For the economic good of the country we certainly support the proposed pipeline but for the good of Canadians we believe that the government would be more respectful of reality if it tried just as much to develop the other sources of energy that seem to me to be less risky for the environment.

In conclusion, I want to mention that whatever project the government accepts, its financing will be done under the present economic and monetary policy based on the conventional methods of the old parties; whatever the project approved by government, it will force the people to pay ten times the actual value of the project, if it is a gas pipeline it will force the people to pay ten times the actual cost of the pipeline with only one pipeline being built. As usual, Canadians will pay for one pipeline and ten of them to financiers. Unfortunately, that is the normal practice of a government that remained hooked on the economic residues of the eighteenth century. I am much more looking forward to a debate on the changing of that economic policy than a proposed pipeline such as the one that is now before us.

On the whole, those are the remarks I wanted to make and I want to repeat that, unfortunately, whatever the attitude of this government on whether or not to approve a pipeline, once again through interests or the multiplication of interests Canadians will have to pay the cost of such a facility not one time but ten times over as happens with all government investments. I think that in the case of a project which initially should cost an estimated $10 billion—if one takes the example of James Bay the estimates were about 80 per cent below actual cost—one realizes that when such a project gets going we will no longer be talking about $10 billion but a much more considerable figure. What is unfortunate in all this is that the government does not want to take into consideration the suggestions made by the Social Credit Party of Canada, but projects of such magnitude as this should, if the government gets directly involved, be financed by interest free loans. So, once again, the ideas put forward with respect to a gas pipeline are certainly a contribution to the Canadian economy but at the same time it is also a deficit, an unthinkable debt to put on the backs of Canadians.

[English]

Mr. Frank Maine (Wellington): Mr. Speaker, with regard to the decision on whether or not to build the northern pipeline, there are five major questions which must be addressed and answered.

The first question is that of need. Do we need the energy, do we need the gas in the north to bring down to southern markets?

The second question relates to the science and technology involved in building a pipeline. Do we have the necessary science and technology to construct a pipeline adequately and safely to transport the natural gas?

The third question involves the environment. Can a pipeline be built with adequate safeguards to the environment so that the ecological price will not be devastating?

The fourth major question is that of the native land claims. Can we resolve these satisfactorily to give justice and equity to the people involved?

The fifth and most important question over-all because it affects the previous four questions is that of economics. Can we satisfy the four earlier requirements and reach an economically viable solution? I would like to deal with each of these questions in some detail.

The first and most important question is that of need. Do we need the energy; do we need the natural gas to construct a pipeline to bring it down from the north? I heard no evidence to the contrary expressed in the House yesterday or today that both the United States and Canada have a need for more energy, and, in particular, for more natural gas. The question is not if, but when. Here we come to the first major difference between the two needs, that of the United States and that of Canada. The U.S. need is immediate. If anything, it is more than immediate. They needed gas last year, as was evident from the crisis which occurred in the U.S. last winter at which time we were able to assist them in solving some of the major problems they faced. Canada's need is not immediate. Right now we have adequate gas—if anything, we have a small surplus of gas. As can be projected from the studies that have been tabled, our real need will be in the early 1980's, assuming the continuation of past practices.

There are some options which could be exercised to change that situation quite significantly. I will come back to the question of need and some of its implications after I have addressed the other four major questions. In the area of science and technology, judging from the reports we have seen, there is no question that we have an adequate data base to answer the questions involved. There is still some work to be done, especially in the area of engineering, as has been brought to light recently with respect to the proposed Alcan line, both with the Dawson Bulge and the Dempster Lateral. The engineering studies have not been completed and will have to be finalized before a decision can be reached.

The same situation exists with regard to the environmental question. There is an indication that we can answer the questions involved, that we can satisfactorily protect our environment in the future, but we have not yet completed the work that must be done. The second phase of the Lysyk inquiry should be undertaken as soon as possible to finalize the questions that have not yet been answered adequately, and that will take some time. But there is no indication at this stage that we cannot solve the environmental questions within the economic constraints.

The fourth question, that of the native land claims settlement, and the related socio-economic effects of the pipeline on the natives. Again, both the Berger and Lysyk inquiries addressed these questions in some detail. I fully agree that these questions should be given a high priority and that all attempts should be made to answer them before the construction of the pipeline. Again, we have to maintain an adequate awareness of the economic constraints in this question. There is not an unlimited amount of money to spend.

This brings me to the fifth point to be addressed, that of economics. It depends on the settlement of the above questions, but it is also guided by the alternative solutions to bringing natural gas from the north.

Because of the different needs of Canada and the United States several alternatives are open to us. I should like to illustrate briefly the four options that I consider to be viable options in attempting to satisfy our energy needs by way of satisfactory transportation. First there is the Alcan route by itself. By this I mean a pipeline from Prudhoe Bay via Fairbanks and Whitehorse down to British Columbia and Alberta with no side connections, strictly a natural gas pipeline to transport gas from Prudhoe Bay south to the markets in the United States.

The second option is the Alcan route with the Dempster Lateral, with or without the Dawson Bulge. Again there are several questions to be answered in that option: the economics of the change, the engineering studies that have not yet been done, and the environmental questions.

The third option is one which I think defines the economic limitations, that is, the El Paso line which takes the natural gas from the northern slope in Alaska by pipeline to Valdez on the southern Alaskan coast and then by liquefied natural gas (LNG) tanker to the southern 48 states.

There is a fourth alternative to consider so far as Canadian needs are concerned, and that is the Polar Gas option whereby instead of taking U.S. gas to U.S. markets, as the El Paso route does, we will take Canadian gas from the Arctic islands to Canadian markets via liquefied natural gas tankers. I would like to emphasize that that option has not been outlined in this debate so far but it is a very viable option and it satisfies the very pertinent questions that are raised.

As I mentioned earlier, our needs for gas are not immediate and if we are looking primarily at satisfying our markets so far as natural gas is concerned, we do not have the same time pressure as do the Americans. Therefore, in our time frame, if for one reason or another the Dempster Lateral is not a viable alternative, the Polar Gas LNG tanker route is a viable solution to consider. We are not talking about having to build a pipeline. We have to liquefy the natural gas in the Arctic islands after collecting it, and then ship it by LNG tanker through the Northwest Passage down to the east coast. There are many attractive features about this option, and I submit that this is a very real option which should be considered in our negotiations with the United States.

This brings me to the question of the negotiations with the United States and the very important variables Canada should consider in these negotiations. Time is a very pressing question as far as the need for gas by the Americans is concerned. The question of the swapping of natural gas to buy more time is another question. Right now Canada has an excess, and when I talk about swapping I am talking about volume for volume at the same price. In other words, if we give them some of our gas now at whatever the going price, that gas should be replaced at the same price sometime in the future with American gas from the Arctic slope.

[Mr. Maine.]

The details of the route are also further negotiating points. These details have been suggested by a variety of sources. The National Energy Board has brought in some new variations. There have been other reports which have raised other questions as to route options which have not been fully discussed or decided upon. Another negotiating point is the whole question of native land claims. There has been debate already on the American position as to whether the pipeline treaty recently signed by Canada and the United States prohibits a $200 million pay-out which has been recommended in the Lysyk report and in other reports.

In the Canadian context I think it would only be fair to keep in mind the James Bay settlement. It would be appropriate to use that settlement in the Yukon. I think the settlement with the natives in the Yukon should not be any lesser a settlement than that arrived at with the Indians in the James Bay area. Conversely, we cannot have a settlement in the Yukon which is better than that at James Bay, for equality reasons and for economic reasons in competition with the El Paso option.

Then there are further negotiating points to consider. With regard to the option of the Dempster Lateral, environmental and engineering studies should be started as soon as possible. If that option is the one to be utilized, there is the whole question of Canadian content as well as the question of financing. With Canadian participation and with Canadian gas going to Canadian markets from Canadian fields it is quite different from the Alcan route without the Dempster Lateral, in which case we are talking only about U.S. gas going to U.S. markets. In that case I think there is no justification whatsoever for any dependence on Canadian financing for that option at all. These are negotiating points we should be very aware of and use very wisely and strongly.

The question of science and technology is another important negotiating point. There should be Canadian content not only in the materials and labour for the pipeline but also in the engineering design. We have a pretty lousy deal in the Canada-U.S. auto pact. Canada has not benefitted at all with regard to science and technology in the auto pact. All research and development and all engineering design is done in Detroit. In this regard Canada does not participate independently in the automotive industry. Canada is completely dependent on the United States, and Canada has only manufacturing facilities. I feel that is a totally untenable situation. We should learn from that mistake and not make it again with any pipeline in the north. We should be involved not only in materials and labour but also in engineering design and development capability. That would benefit us in the future for future pipelines which will undoubtedly be built.

I therefore recommend, as other parties have done, that Canada proceed with negotiations with the United States, that there be given approval in principle to build a northern pipeline, but let it be contingent on a satisfactory resolution of several of the details I have mentioned. After the negotiations have resulted in mutual satisfaction, legislation should be introduced into the Canadian Parliament which would provide the details of the route and other pertinent aspects which will have been negotiated so that parliament can debate this important and massive project and make a final decision in full view of the Canadian public so that there can be full participation of all the people in the country.

Mr. Bill Jarvis (Perth-Wilmot): Mr. Speaker, first I should like to congratulate the hon. member for Wellington (Mr. Maine). I can only say that if the excellent speech he made had been made by the President of the Privy Council (Mr. MacEachen), or if the minister's speech had been half as good, the government would have had something of which to be proud.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Jarvis: Many points were raised by the hon. member for Wellington, but I would like to make one observation on one specific point. He spoke about the possibility of the alternative of moving gas from northern regions by ship, or by what I call the eastern route. I agree that it is a possible and viable alternative, but it is deplorable that the government pays lip service to our shipbuilding industry and to the reconstitution of our merchant marine but does absolutely nothing to encourage an expertise in one area of merchant marine in which Canada should be expert, and that is the type of navigation and transportation the hon. member for Wellington has just outlined so ably.

The motion which is the subject matter of this debate asks that this House recognize four issues surrounding the question of northern gas pipelines. These are social, economic, environmental and energy issues. Much could be said about each, but time limitations permit me to deal with only one of these, that being the environment.

I start with the proposition—which is likely self-evident—that a pipeline does nothing to enhance our Canadian environment. Therefore the challenge is to minimize the impact this huge project would have on the ecology of our far north. Probably the greatest risk would be experienced during the construction period, but I would like to remind the House that the potential for an adverse impact upon the environment continues during the time which might be called the withdrawal from construction period and during the third stage, which is the continuing period of pipeline operation.

For those who might question the importance of these latter two stages I need only point out the problems which have been experienced in Alaska with the recently completed Alyeska oil pipeline. In the few short weeks since the completion of that line there have been serious problems of technical faults, operation error, waste disposal, and suspected sabotage. The risks arising from these problems affect not only the environment but may also have a serious social and economic impact as well as bring about an interruption of energy supply.

I remind the government, therefore, that the need for control and precautionary measures does not terminate with the end of construction. I further remind the government that in the event of construction of a pipeline the government will have no excuse whatsoever for not having in place adequate controls for the withdrawal from construction and operation periods. This requires particular emphasis because this is a government which has had a long and unhappy history of permitting dangerous situations to develop and then reacting to them without adequate studies and preparation, and nowhere has this been more obvious than within the Department of the Environment.

As an example we need only look to the Beaufort Sea, an area which experienced what could only be called a crash study on environmental impact, followed by a hope and pray period, and then followed by the granting of drilling permits with conditions which possibly are too stringent and possibly are too lenient. Who knows? Had the Department of the Environment spent a comparable amount of effort and resources in becoming scientifically excellent in its weather and ice predictions, we could likely have been in a much more flexible and confident position when drilling permits were issued. Therefore, with regard to the period following construction of a pipeline I ask that the government adopt what is, for it, a unique course of action; and that is planning instead of reacting.

However, the immediate concern is the construction period, in the event the government should give its approval. The Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Clark) has said that we approve in principle the Alcan route on the basis of available information. There is a deplorable and inexcusable lack of environmental information on the Alcan proposal, and I assure this House that I do not seize upon this lack of information as an excuse for opposing construction of a pipeline. I regard it as a missing tool essential to the planning and construction of a pipeline which is as compatible with our environmental concerns as is possible.

There are two basic sources of the necessary environmental data. The first of these sources is government, principally through its Department of Fisheries and the Environment, the second, of course, is the private sector and, in the case of a pipeline, one expects to receive substantial data from the company or group of companies that proposes and seeks government approval for the construction.

Such was certainly the case with regard to the proponents of the Mackenzie Valley route who commissioned and filed at least 41 volumes of biological reports. I do not suggest that the proponents of the Alcan route have done nothing in this regard, because they have filed significant and helpful material including, incidentally, an initial environmental evaluation prepared by the Alaska highway pipeline panel which was sponsored by Foothills Pipe Lines Limited. To suggest, however, that we have received anything more than very preliminary environmental information would simply not be in accordance with the facts. I suggest that it is the direct responsibility of the pipeline proponents to bear the cost of supplying all necessary environmental data. Second, I believe, on the basis of information received from these companies, that they acknowledge this responsibility and are willing to assume it.

The other source of environmental information, as I have mentioned, is government itself. Much baseline data has been accumulated over the years by various government departments or agencies. Other data may be gathered more effectively and efficiently by government than by the private sector proponent. Recognizing that it is the proponent's responsibility to prepare the required reports, it is government's responsibility to supply any existing data to the proponent. Where government is better able to gather additional data, it is its responsibility to do so. If this demands accelerated or additional programs resulting in unbudgeted costs, it is the proponent and not the taxpayer who should likely pay these costs.

Finally, the government is responsible for evaluating the proponent's reports and, as a result, prescribing the regulations and conditions attaching to any approval for pipeline construction.

With regard to the Alcan proposal, the principal environmental report is that of the environmental assessment panel dated July 27, 1977, and entitled "Alaska Highway Pipeline". This report has come to be called the Hill report because the distinguished chairman of the panel was Dr. Harry M. Hill of the Department of the Environment.

On August 30, 1976, Foothills made its application for a certificate of public convenience and necessity to the National Energy Board. On the same day, August 30, 1976, it applied to the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development (Mr. Allmand) for a right-of-way to build its pipeline through part of the Yukon. At this point it was obvious that this proposal required the application of the government's environmental assessment and review process, commonly called EARP. This was obvious on August 30, 1976, first because a significant part of the project would pass through federally administered lands and, second, because the project had the potential for significant environmental impact. Despite this it took almost seven months, until March 21, 1977, before the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development referred the matter to his colleague, the Minister of Fisheries and the Environment (Mr. LeBlanc), for an assessment of the environmental impact. This seven month delay is not only unexplained; in my party's view it is inexcusable and unacceptable.

Hon. members should realize that the normal EARP procedure is for the EARP panel to issue guidelines under which the proponent prepares an environmental impact statement. The EARP panel then does the technical review of the report and makes its recommendations to the minister. With regard to the Foothills proposal, the request for a review was not even made until seven months after the Foothills application, which certainly indicated that the government was not even treating the application seriously at the time.

Following receipt of the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development's application for a review, the Minister of Fisheries and the Environment then took almost another month, until April 19, 1977, before he formed a panel, or at least appointed Dr. Hill as chairman. In my view that was a reasonable time span in which to establish an environmental assessment review panel. He then proceeded to give the panel until August 1 to prepare its report, less than three and a half months. Dr. Hill, in the introduction to his report, points out at page 3:

> The short lead time available made a normal environmental assessment of the project impossible at this time.

He then goes on to say at page 4:

> The requirement for the environmental assessment panel to file an interim report by August 1, 1977 necessitated a significant departure from procedures normally followed in panel operations.

As if the situation faced by Dr. Hill and his colleagues on the panel were not difficult enough, they were asked subsequently to consider alternate Yukon routes, plus consideration of the Dempster Lateral, plus a comparison of the environmental impact between the Mackenzie Valley and Alaska highway routes. In my view this was an impossible task. I in no way question the ability or integrity of the Hill panel; on the other hand, I point out that their report is printed testimony to the frustration of attempting to do too much too late. Therefore when we in this party indicate that our support for the Alcan route is based on available information, we emphasize that the Hill report points out quite accurately, the serious lack of environmental information. My approach to this report is to use it not as an environmental assessment but as a catalogue of problem areas which must be faced immediately, effectively and efficiently.

I repeat that I do not search for environmental problems to find an excuse for delaying or opposing important decisions but rather to ensure that the implementation of these decisions may be accomplished with the minimum of adverse impact to the Canadian environment.

Let me quickly run through the Hill report, with particular emphasis on the deficiency of information which it outlines. I deal first with Chapter III, to do with physical and engineering concerns. With respect to geotechnical aspects, mainly permafrost and seismic activity, the panel devotes almost a full page to information deficiencies, including emphasis on a limited data base. With regard to water crossings, there is an inadequacy of biologic, hydrologic and soils data. Concerning erosion control the panel says that stabilization techniques are not sufficiently developed. Insufficient information is available to predict the impact of various facilities and structures.

According to chapter IV dealing with biological concerns, there is insufficient knowledge of life histories and exploitation rate of fish, and major deficiencies exist in the knowledge of wildlife and waterfowl populations. In chapter V on unique and sensitive areas, the panel says we require detailed environmental assessments of four specified geographic areas. According to chapter VI on aesthetics and recreation, a systematic assessment of probable aesthetic impact is required. Chapter VII deals with associated developments. The panel was not convinced that sufficient planning had been done to minimize the impact of such projects as highways and hydroelectric construction. Chapter VIII deals with other possible pipeline routes. In addition to the Alaska highway route, the panel considered alternates along the Klondike highway and Tintina Trench, but they concluded that insufficient data was available to draw any definite conclusion from a comparison of alternate routes in the southern Yukon.

To put all of this in perspective, Mr. Speaker, we must realize that the Hill report concludes that the pipeline can be constructed and operated in an environmentally acceptable manner, provided three conditions are met: first, that the environmental planning is properly carried out; second, that we can avoid or solve the problems in unique and sensitive geographic areas; and third, that environmental problems associated with permafrost areas can be overcome.

Similarly, there is nothing in the report to indicate that these three conditions cannot be met within the permissible time frame between now and the commencement of construction. Finally, the panel concluded that the Alcan route is environmentally preferable to a Mackenzie Valley route.

Therefore, in connection with Canadian accommodation to permit the United States to move its natural gas through our territory to U.S. consumers, if the government were to approve in principle the Alcan route, it seems self-evident that the normal EARP procedures should be expedited so that we might benefit from a proper and meaningful environmental assessment review, having confidence that such review could be completed in a reasonable time. This is consistent with the commitment made by the Minister of the Environment on April 19, 1977, when he first established the Hill panel. At that time the minister said:

> . . . If the Alaska highway pipeline project is still a contender after decisions have been made in the competing proposals, the normal panel procedure would then be followed.

It is essential that the minister, given the situation I have mentioned, reaffirm this commitment at the earliest possible date.

As I have said, Mr. Speaker, this all relates to the secondary purpose of this whole exercise, that of moving U.S. gas to U.S. markets. The primary objective has for years been the transportation of Canadian natural gas to Canadian markets. It was this objective which initiated all of the various studies and applications and which must remain our principal concern. The shift in emphasis from the Mackenzie route to the Alcan route does nothing to mitigate this concern about Canadian resources destined for Canadian consumers.

There are a number of possibilities in terms of moving this gas. Much has been said during this debate about the Dempster Lateral to connect with the Alcan line. This would permit Mackenzie Delta and Beaufort Sea gas to be transported via this spur to connect with the main Unites States line near Dawson. There are other alternatives as well. The important point is this—if a real possibility, not probability, but real possibility, exists that a certain route or routes may be used for transporting this gas, the time to commence the environmental assessment review process is now. It will be inexcusable for the Minister of the Environment to wait, as has been the government's policy, until a situation develops when we can do little more than react because time limitations do not permit us to do the proper planning.

I put the minister on notice that we in this party and, I believe, Canadians everywhere, will not permit him and the government to ignore their obligation to our country to provide an environmental process in keeping with the importance of our trusteeship for our Canadian environment.

In chapter VIII of his report Dr. Hill deals with the Dempster Lateral and points out that three to five years would be required for a program to evaluate potential environmental impacts and mitigative measures. The report lists point after point wherein adequate information is lacking. The report goes on to conclude that, if a decision is made to continue planning for the transportation of Alaska gas through the southern Yukon, an environmental impact assessment of the construction and operation of the Dempster Highway be undertaken immediately.

The panel points out that the study of the highway itself is a prerequisite to the assessment for the possible pipeline. It is to this recommendation that the minister must respond, and I point out to him that this conclusion of his own officials is not based on the probability of moving Canadian gas along this route.

Dr. Hill and his colleagues are saying, in the clearest terms, that continued planning to construct the line to move United States gas through the southern Yukon is reason enough for us to prepare now our environmental assessment of the Dempster Lateral.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I would like to quote from the report of the Alaska Highway pipeline panel which, as you know, was a committee of distinguished Canadians sponsored by Foothills Pipe Lines Ltd. and whose initial environmental evaluation I found most helpful and informative. This group had this to say:

> If the government is not ready to control the pipeline, the pipeline should not be built.

In terms of environmental concerns we on this side expect that the first evidence of government control would be the assumption and discharge of government responsibility. Regretfully, little evidence of this is available to date. To permit seven months to go by before application for creation of the EARP panel is evidence only of the government's wish to avoid its responsibility.

Perhaps a positive response to the Hill report, on behalf of the Minister of the Environment, might be the first small step toward the recognition of its responsibility and assumption of control that Canadians deserve to expect from their government.

Mr. Hugh A. Anderson (Comox-Alberni): Mr. Speaker, as a member from British Columbia I am honoured to participate in this debate. As a British Columbian I also support the construction of the Alcan Pipeline if the Canadian government is able through negotiations to arrive at a satisfactory agreement with the United States, satisfactory to Canada and at the same time assisting our neighbour to the south, the United States of America, at a time when I consider their need to be critical for natural gas.

The Canadian government will indeed be facing a challenge because the United States will be tough bargainers. This is in no way depreciating the United States. However, at all times it must be remembered that the Alcan Pipeline will be transporting American gas to American consumers through Canada, and although economically Canada will gain certain advantages, Canada will also incur social disadvantages.

In my opinion Canada must deal from a position of strength, taking into consideration the Americans' need for natural gas, a strength based on our desire to assist this nation solve its critical gas shortage, a strength based on principles of fairness and equity to both Canada and the United States.

In order to show our realization of the critical need the United States has for natural gas in the northern tier, we as Canadians should be willing to lift export restrictions on Alberta natural gas in conjunction with the Alberta government before next winter, if an agreement in principle can be reached regarding pipeline construction, and to have the gas replaced in the future when Prudhoe Bay gas begins flowing through the Alcan pipeline. This would assist independent producers in Alberta, assist rectify our balance of payments deficit, and also indicate our awareness of the critical need facing the United States for natural gas.

I would also recommend to the cabinet that the price be set at current export gas rates, and that Canada have the option to purchase the same quantity exported, an option that may not be required if further significant natural gas finds are made at some subsequent date.

Negotiations with the United States must clearly give absolute sovereignty over choice of route, and timetable to the people of Canada. Needless to say that project and construction management, labour content, financing and construction itself must be Canadian in content. One problem that has already surfaced is that of shortages in certain skilled professions. I would recommend that with the three to four year lead time an assessment be made of labour requirements, and where shortages exist of skilled labour such as welders, pipefitters, and so forth, provincial and union consultation take place through Manpower in order that Canadians are put to work. It would be a shame if we had to import construction workers from other parts of the world at a time when we in Canada have significantly high unemployment.

At the present time Foothills is well aware that imported workers will be required if no concerted effort is made to train and upgrade Canadians. We are talking of a significant labour force for the construction of the Alcan pipeline. At peak construction period the total manpower requirements are expected to reach 7,800.

It would be the height of absurdity if unemployed Canadians did not work during the pipeline construction because the skills are not there. We have a lead in period of time where there could be consultation between the federal government, provincial governments, labour, the unions and so on in order to get these people upgraded, not only for pipeline construction but past the completion of the pipeline. I hope the government will be cognizant of the fact that we have an opportunity that may not come our way again. We must upgrade the skills of Canadians in order that the construction of the line will be done for Canadians by Canadians.

We are all aware that the United States has an alternative to the building of a pipeline in Canada. El Paso has proposed the building of a pipeline from Prudhoe Bay to Valdez and then trans-shipping liquefied natural gas to California. As a member from British Columbia, I am totally opposed to any increase in tanker traffic of any size, form or shape. I only wish that we had television in the House today, Mr. Speaker, because I would jump and dance around a bit to make sure that this point is made. I think that even my friends in the Conservative party from British Columbia will agree with me on this issue. We do not agree with the Conservative party in British Columbia on very much, but I think that even they would agree, indeed any Conservative, Liberal, NDP-er or Social Crediter, that we in British Columbia are opposed to tanker traffic off our west coast. I do not think it would be unfair to say that there is no one issue in British Columbia today on which the people are so totally united. We are well aware of what will happen, that it is only a question of time, and this explains why we do not want any tanker traffic.

I would also ask the cabinet, when it sits down with United States negotiators to discuss the problems associated with Cherry Point, which is in the state of Washington—

Mr. Friesen: Aw, thanks!

Mr. Anderson: Well, Mr. Speaker, not everybody is as brilliant as my colleague from British Columbia.

Mr. Friesen: That's for sure. I agree.

Mr. Anderson: The port of Cherry Point, Washington, handles the unloading of Prudhoe Bay crude. Many groups in British Columbia have quite rightly pointed out the dangers associated with tanker traffic in the Juan de Fuca straits. There is no doubt, Mr. Speaker, that if Cherry Point, Washington, continues to be used as the terminal for trans-shipment of Alaskan crude, a spill will occur. Common sense tells us a docking facility should be located outside the most heavily congested shipping area of British Columbia. Since discussions with Washington will be dealing with energy, Canada should take the basket approach and ask for a review of current outstanding irritants which include Cherry Point, and I guarantee the government will have the unqualified support of the people of British Columbia in its deliberations, including that of Conservatives.

The National Energy Board, in its long deliberations over 214 days of public hearings, with 1,200 exhibits, 900 public documents, and 37,000 pages of hearing transcripts, had to determine the need for a pipeline to bridge Prudhoe Bay gas to American markets. Two major questions arise in my mind: one, whether the benefits would outweigh the costs to Canada; and two, whether the pipeline would facilitate or hinder the connection of Mackenzie Delta gas to markets, both in cost and timing.

The National Energy Board has concluded it would be prudent to provide a safety margin in connecting new sources of supply. Exhausting western reserves before connecting Delta gas is foolish. We are all aware of the long lead times needed to connect new sources to market. Undue delay in a decision would also narrow our options and United States participation would be lost.

Also, consideration must be given to Delta exploration which would certainly be curtailed if no action is discernible. Unfortunately previous exploration has not firmed up reserves that justify a Delta pipeline. The 5.3 trillion cubic feet can be tapped with a Dempster spur but the earlier Foothills proposal for a Maple Leaf line is not feasible in the foreseeable future.

The National Energy Board option of connecting Delta reserves with the transportation of Alaskan gas is correct, and I believe that with the swapping of Alberta gas for Alaskan gas a greater lead time could be justified for resolving land claims, carrying out further environmental assessments, and in general preparing for an orderly and rational construction of the Alcan pipeline.

I should like to commend Justice Berger, Dean Lysyk, the National Energy Board and Dr. Hall from Environment Canada for their excellent work and trust that Dr. Thompson, entrusted with a similar responsibility in British Columbia, will proceed as expeditiously as possible, with the example of the Lysyk commission as a guideline.

I applaud the government position to set up an agency to handle all aspects of pipeline co-ordination and planning if indeed negotiations with the United States lead us to proceed with the construction of a pipeline. As I mentioned earlier, one of the questions which could be brought before this agency is the upgrading of worker skills in order to ensure Canadian content not only in the pipe but in manpower.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I think this gives us a golden opportunity to do several things in the Yukon. This is the third "golden rush" which may come to the Yukon area. The first, of course, was the Klondike; the second was the construction of the Alaska Highway. Perhaps the third will be construction of the Alcan pipeline. I think that the Yukon is mature in the financial sense. However, without being derogatory to the Yukon, I think socially there is an immaturity. Perhaps construction of a pipeline will enable the native people as well as white people to work together on a project of benefit to the Yukon. I hope this opportunity will also enable the people in southern Canada to have a better appreciation of the north. The Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Clark) appears to find this humorous.

Mr. Clark: I find it pathetic.

Mr. Anderson: When he went to the Yukon and came up with the decision that his party would support the Yukon financially, he took a southerner's position without understanding anything of the north. Perhaps a pipeline will bridge that gap of understanding between northern Canada and southern Canada, one that perhaps should have been crossed several years ago.

Hon. Alvin Hamilton (Qu'Appelle-Moose Mountain): Mr. Speaker, it is with a feeling of some sadness that I participate in this debate. It is almost exactly 20 years ago when, as the first act of the Diefenbaker administration, we proposed a royal commission on energy to look into the terrible things which had happened to Canada in the case of Westcoast Transmission in 1954 and in the case of TransCanada PipeLines in 1956. I remember the horrible mistakes which were made during that whole period, and I now see the government repeating those mistakes, probably unwittingly, today.

Even more than the feeling of sadness which I have over the ignorance of the government regarding the mistakes we have made in the past is the feeling of personal sadness that I have over the several thousand people who lived in the Yukon and Northwest Territories when, as a southern government, we built schools all through the settlements of the Yukon, and in the Northwest Territories in the larger settlements, and asked the native people to give up their young and send them to these schools. We flew them into schools at Fort Smith, Yellowknife and Inuvik and flew them back for their holidays. The appeal that we made to their parents was very simple, and at that time honest and sincere: if you give us your children—because we know there is no future on the land for them,—and we educate them in the white man's ways, there will be a job for them when they graduate.

Those schools were built mostly during the period from 1957 to 1963. The students who came into those schools in the early days in Fort Smith, Yellowknife, Inuvik, and up as far as Old Crow, have graduated; but they are still awaiting the development that was promised. They were told that if they left their homes, their loved ones, and came to these boarding schools for eight to ten months of the year we would provide work for them.

When the government changed in 1963, all development stopped in the north. Regulations that we had to induce the oil and gas industries to explore and expand were suspended in 1970 and are still not in effect. The dream we had in 1957 was that we knew by 1980 North America would be short of energy and minerals. We also knew that it would take 20 years to lead time to get into the north and make access to these resources available to the whole world, and not only North America. Part of that equation was the human factor. We promised a future to these young Indians and Eskimos, and we have failed in that pledge which was made in good faith 20 years ago, because we sit opposite a government that is only concerned with public relations or, as they call it, communications—anything to keep in the headlines. It has ignored

Canadian interests from first to last. If anyone reads the history of our country from 1939 to 1957, he will see that the history was the same. The leading historian of our nation called it "the forked road". We took the wrong fork in the road.

I say these remarks in introduction because I want to get to the part of this problem that offers opportunity, which is not all lost. I should have liked to hear in this debate how this whole energy development on the North American continent plays an active part in the total development of the world. With a world begging for development and begging for higher standards of living, we stand in our places talking about trivialities. I am sorry the hon. member for Edmonton-Strathcona (Mr. Roche) could not get his speech in, because he would have dealt with that subject.

We have learned lesson after lesson over the last 30 or 40 years. One thing I have noticed is that they are orientated the wrong way and they are costly. When we set up the National Energy Board Act, we set up hearings for specific purposes. Other functions have been added since, such as native rights and the environment. All these things were not connected and moving completely without concern for the other factor. As the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Clark) said in opening up the debate yesterday, we are debating something and we have not got the information. Everyone is recommending the Dempster route because no one has studied it. The only ones they do not recommend are the ones they have studied. Partially these hearings are to blame.

Business has learned that before you start on a big project you must have a conceptual hearing to look at the entire strategy, so that every component part has a place in this strategy. From this you build your critical path so that each person knows what he has to do and the time he has to do it in. Over the last seven years the first lesson we have learned is that the whole concept of the technique of hearings in these cases should be changed. If we have an industrial or a development strategy, it should be put down as a concept, and around that concept you begin to build what you have to do.

The next thing is this question of socio-economic responsibility. I heard the Leader of the Opposition say yesterday that he wanted one of the conditions to be that private companies would have some share in the economic and social responsibility of a major construction project.

This gas has nothing to do with Canada, except for the odd little bit which will spurt up alongside the pipeline. This is American gas going from one American state to another American state. We must lay down the conditions under which they build through our country. It is as simple as that. This should apply to domestic enterprises as well. What share is to be borne by all the people of Canada of the socio-economic costs? What share is to be borne by the private entrepreneur?

Another significant lesson is transportation. Twenty years ago I stood in this House to say that the major priority was transportation to open up the north. That is still the major priority. Here we are 20 years later, after having started a program of opening up the north, and we still have not got one major land route to the Arctic. We got up 80 miles north of the starting place in the Yukon. We got to Yellowknife, and stopped when the government changed in 1963. We should have a transportation corridor in place including a railway, the road, and the pipeline. All this spending of money locating routes has to stop. It is just not allowable up there in the north.

I could list case after case where we have completely failed as Canadians to fight for Canadian interests. Even Berger, duped as he was by the doctrines and rhetoric of the Waffle or the anti-Americans, did not say there should not be a pipeline on the Mackenzie. He knows there has to be one. He simply said to postpone it ten years to give native people a longer time to complete their bargaining for native rights; but that turned out to be the death knell for the people of the valley. Based on our promises, the people of the valley have been let down and destroyed by the National Energy Board report and the Berger report. Both of those reports were far from honest and far from objective.

This country has to get back to economics. We cannot afford to fiddle around any more with irrelevant issues, which is all we have done for ten years. This pipeline is a courtesy to a neighbour. Just as the Americans gave us the right to move Canadian oil from western Canada to the east through American territory, we should give them the same right. When we moved gas from western Canada, coming out of Manitoba, through the northern states and into Ontario, the Americans exacted conditions from us. In the Great Lakes application of 1966 they said we were spending all the money because it was our gas that was going through and that they wanted 50 per cent of the shares of the ownership, and they got it. We would not have got the pipeline otherwise. The U.S. government backs up American private companies. We accepted those conditions. If they want to move a pipeline through this country, we will help them in every way we can. We will do everything we can to facilitate it, even though it has been a farce to date.

I should like to refer to the advantage of it, which we do not understand, but the Americans, the Arabs and the Japenese do. When the Alberta Gas Trunk Pipeline Company was set up the provincial government moved and indicated that there would be five classes of shares, with so many shares going to the producing companies and so many shares going to the consuming companies, and that they would have votes. The government was to step in and buy two shares, and the public would be allowed the great majority of the shares if they lived in Alberta. Alberta people swarmed into the banks and the provincial treasury offices and bought many more shares than were available, and they had to be distributed pro rata. Today Alberta Gas Trunk is owned by the people of Alberta, but they do not have a vote in the company. The votes are left to the government.

During the past 20 years that company has operated without interference from the Alberta government. Relatively it is a very small company with a few hundred million dollars in assets, but it will now take over a $10 billion empire if this proposal for the Alcan route goes through. If they use the same technique in controlling the massive investment which would go into this pipeline, $10 billion, you will find a little company like the Alberta Gas Company, a monopoly set up by the government of Alberta, with two shares owned by the government of Alberta, controlling this big entreprise to carry gas from American states to American states, and the people who are going to make the money will be those who hold the equity, because when you finance a pipeline it is traditional that you put so many shares out in equity, risk shares, and four or five or six times more in senior financing bonds. Suppose you have a conservative ratio of one to four. Those proportions are added together to make a rate base.

The total amount invested in equity and bonds is added together to give a rate base upon which the National Energy Board sets the rates of return. The Board usually sets a rate of return in the area of 9 per cent to 10 per cent. When they pay off the senior financing, the money paid to the pipeline company is the same as though the money had not been paid back as to bonds, and all the money ultimately goes to the shareholders. This is called a leverage situation. So if you have a one into four ratio, 20 per cent of the amount of participation at the beginning gets 100 per cent of the revenue. As a result, the value of the shares goes up five, six or seven times. This is the plum that every smart cookie in the whole world seeks. This is why the Americans asked for and got 80 per cent of the ownership of the TransCanada Pipeline when it started; this is why they asked for 50 per cent of the ownership of Great Lakes; this is why they asked 50 per cent of the ownership of West Coast Transmission in 1974.

When you know how many times you have been gored by men who understand the technique of oil pipeline financing you do not put yourself in a position to be gored again if you are smart. All the government has to do is think through the experience of West Coast in 1954 and of TransCanada Pipelines in 1956. Let members opposite read the debates which took place in this House in 1966 when the opposition persuaded the government to change its policy completely. If the government shows the strength to stand up, with all parties supporting it, and say they want equity to go to Canadians, they will get it. The Americans have no choice, because the only other option which faces them is to haul the gas down in pressurized ships specially constructed to carry liquid natural gas. This would add another chore to the work of the already hard-pressed American navy which cannot even keep peace in the Mediterranean. It would have to undertake the further task of seeking to protect a vital product going by sea. It is bad enough having to ask them to protect oil shipments.

Then, when the ships reach the west coast of the United States after all the expense of changing the natural into liquid form under great pressure, the cargo must be changed back to natural gas again to be sent to the people of Chicago through another pipeline costing $3 billion or $4 billion. Think of what the people of Chicago would have to pay for their own gas.

I go through the simple steps surrounding the financing of a pipeline to reinforce my plea to the House and to the government: please, don't let this chance slip by. Give Canadians an opportunity to get that first billion or billion and a half of equity. And when the project begins to pay off and the value of the shares goes up five or ten times we shall forgive the government for some of the mistakes it has made in the last 20 years. Think it through, let us not miss this opportunity. The Americans will have no argument to put up. They did it to us on the occasions I have mentioned.

I would ask for a lot more. I would say "You are going to need a paved highway to move all that stuff up along the Alcan route. We will build that highway and construct it to accommodate the big trucks needed to haul all that steel. But we want the Panhandle. That land was stolen from us in connivance with the British in 1906. We want it back."

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Hamilton (Qu'Appelle-Moose Mountain): And if we don't get it back we want access to the sea. Lay down conditions. No Americans live in the Panhandle. It was put there specifically as a barrier, 25 miles east from tidewater, to keep us from the sea. And a great corner of North America is barred from the market because of that artificial, man-made barrier put up by the Americans and the British against Canada in 1906.

Oh yes, I would list a lot of conditions. We in the opposition have already listed seven or eight of them. But I have said enough to illustrate my point. Let us not be gored a fourth time in one generation. Three times is enough. Let us make some money out of the pipeline. That is what the Americans understand.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, let me say this: I have heard talk in this debate about a single agency to correlate all those 30 agencies which are involved in pipeline construction. I am not opposing that idea. It is a sensible one. But this operation amounts to an international treaty of an economic sort which will require a watchful eye on the part of the Canadian government and of all the Canadian interests involved for 30 years to come.

I believe it will be necessary to bring enabling legislation before the House to consider this whole project as being a 35 or 40-year deal, because if we leave it to the small holding companies, joined by ten or 15 operating companies, and give them monopolistic power to run this operation, in the absence of any control by the federal government we shall not be serving Canadian interests. Consider West Coast Transmission owned by the B.C. government, the Alberta Gas Company owned by the Alberta government, and the techniques of the operation of those two companies. If you put them in charge of this big pipeline it will be the same as putting a weasel in charge of a hen house.

Get the Canadian government into the picture. Make sure it has two or three directors on the board to see that Canadian interests are protected and that the operation is not run entirely by power hungry individuals who understand pipeline financing. I am suggesting to the government that all is not lost. Let it get on the ball and act like Canadians for a change. Let Canadians have a chance to make a few dollars.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Order, please. I regret to interrupt the hon. member but the time allotted to him has expired.

Hon. Alastair Gillespie (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, as I listened to the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Clark) yesterday I could not help thinking of the advice sometimes given to young corporate lawyers—if you have a weak case, shout. The rest of the advice is: it will not do any good if you shout louder.

The hon. gentleman spoke of the sins of this government with respect to northern economic policy, with respect to northern development, with respect to native issues, with respect to conservation, with respect to energy supply management. What he failed to do was tell us that for the first time an attempt has been made by him to make a start on articulating an energy policy for his party.

● (1620)

He said that he favours the construction of the Foothills Yukon pipeline on the basis of information he has at present. Admittedly this was drawn out by a question at the end of his speech, but it is a stand, and we on this side of the House are happy to see that the Tories for the first time in a long time agree on something.

Mr. Fraser: You are not speaking for your backbenchers.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Gillespie: I have a feeling that I am cutting in pretty close. I have a feeling that the truth irks a little bit. For the first time I believe that the Tory party, at least temporarily, has been able to agree on something.

I will not spend much of my time on the hon. member's remarks about energy conservation. He knows, or he should know, that the measures we have implemented in this country outstrip those in the U.S. Mind you, from time to time, as some of his members like to remind us, that is the particular yardstick that we should follow, but perhaps he should look at the record. He should recognize also that conservation is also a provincial responsibility, and I suggest to him that he might do more for the energy conserving attitudes that he espouses and the practices he supports if he were to call up Queen's Park and ask them to get a move on the energy insulation program.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Gillespie: His views about northern development will appear peculiar to many Canadians who read newspapers and listen to radio and television. People in the north are organizing a strong cultural base. They are speaking to the media and to the politicians and, what is more, they are being assisted in their work by federal agencies with federal funds.

[Mr. Hamilton (Qu'Appelle-Moose Mountain).]

The Leader of the Opposition appeared annoyed yesterday that the government had not yet announced a decision. Let us remember that the motion was moved because the government was asked by the Leader of the Opposition to provide an opportunity for debate before a decision in principle on a major project for this country has been taken, perhaps the biggest construction project ever undertaken in this country. Has he already forgotten that he asked to be heard? Has he already forgotten that he and other members asked to be heard before the government took a decision?

Mr. Fraser: We expected you to give us some idea of what you wanted to do.

Mr. Gillespie: The government has now consulted parliament. I believe we have taken our responsibility in doing so. Our responsibility now is to keep parliament informed, and eventually to let parliament decide whether it agrees with the form of that decision. That is the parliamentary process and the parliamentary system. I am sure the Leader of the Opposition would have been the first to criticize the government had the government House leader stood up yesterday and announced a decision.

One other speaker who I think should be singled out in the debate yesterday was the leader of the NDP (Mr. Broadbent). He adopted what can only be described as a ludicrous position for his party. It is the members of his party who had said that they wanted to have an input into the decision, that they wanted all members of parliament to have an input into the decision, or as many as could be heard, before the decision is taken. But what was the first thing he did? He placed an amendment before the House which in effect asks the House to take a decision before the House has even heard the views of members. Of course that is not the first time the NDP has adopted ludicrous positions.

My colleague, the government House leader, yesterday recited some of the events leading up to this debate. He spoke about the reports and the actions which gave existence to the reports: The Berger report, the NEB report, the Dean Lysyk report, the second Berger report, and the environmental assessment review process. He underlined as well the native interests and the concerns of the government with respect to those interests and the environmental interests with respect to a pipeline. He outlined the options for Canada and he also indicated rather strongly some of the complexities involved in reaching a decision of this magnitude.

I think it might be helpful to cast our minds back to the recent U.S. experience in Alaska. The U.S. has already experienced and faced up to environmental and native questions when it built the Alyeska line. Those complexities and difficulties with respect to the native claims and the environment were not insubstantial. There would be additional environmental problems for us if they were to decide to go for El Paso. Of course they would have to weigh the industrial benefits and the environmental costs which an El Paso route would involve against the lower prices and delivery to markets of an overland Canadian route. This issue involves big money, big impact and big results, so it will not be settled overnight.

In concluding this debate I wish to place the spotlight for a moment on the question of energy supply and to summarize my impressions of the debate against the background of the major supply question for Canada.

The National Energy Board made reference to its 1975 report on natural gas supply requirements. It noted that some conditions have changed, basically as a result of the significantly higher prices which have brought supply and demand more in balance. Regrettably, the absence of assurances as to a secure supply—users will just not contract for gas without a five to ten years guarantee of supply—has resulted in an almost stagnant market for gas in Canada outside of Alberta in recent years. I call it regrettable because the prospects for oil production in Canada are much more serious. The alternatives are high cost tar sands and heavy oil production and imports.

I know a pipeline decision would clearly raise the question of how we provide that long term assurance of natural gas supplies which consumers and the distributing utilities need in order to plan for greater use of natural gas and less dependence on oil, particularly imported oil. It is thus not only a question of whether or not we need northern gas and, if so, when, but also whether or not we are going to indicate to natural gas users and potential users that there is a supply available not only in Alberta but also in the frontier. We need to be able to indicate to gas users that their investment is protected for its life, that they will not be cold if they decide to heat their homes and run their factories with natural gas.

We need to be able to indicate to potential gas users that the government's strategy is to use natural gas to the maximum extent wherever economical, and this requires the long term assurance of supply. Otherwise a major opportunity to replace foreign oil and to reduce our growing dependence on foreign oil will be severely threatened and forgone.

On the matter of the deliverability of gas, which in the final analysis is more important than a reserve estimate, I can say that analyses by my department and the National Energy Board on deliverability profiles show production from existing western Canada reserves peaking in 1981. When so-called trend gas is added, production will peak in 1983-84. After that time, amounts of trend gas deliverability cannot offset the decline in deliverability of the established reserves.

The Board has performed some very important sensitivity tests on its own projections of supply and demand. In one case when optimistic assumptions are used with respect to supply and a low growth rate for gas demand is assumed, an approximate balance between supply and demand, with no shortfalls, is obtained until the year 1990. I think it is important that we understand that. That is under one set of assumptions that the National Energy Board has used for this sensitivity analysis. I believe this points to the degree of uncertainty regarding the first year of shortfall, and, inasmuch as less than expected supply trends and high demand growth could bring the supply-demand crossover point forward into the early 1980's, it does emphasize the importance of preparing for expected shortages well in advance rather than risking the country's energy supply on a fine calculation of a year or two of shortage. This is the fine tuning, in other words, into which some spokesmen have allowed themselves to be drawn. For this reason the board has emphasized the importance of frontier gas supply by the first half of the 1980's.

Finally, I would like to refer to some policy considerations relative to the supply and timing of Mackenzie Delta gas. In the report I released last year concerning our energy strategy for Canada emphasis was given to policies for self-reliance. Included in the policy elements are energy conservation and increased exploration and development. Those elements are directly related to curtailing demand growth and increasing energy supply to reduce the energy gap forecast for 1985. This remains our objective, and the opening up of new supply sources, whether in frontier areas or in the heavy oil areas of western Canada, is fundamental to the attainment of self-reliance.

The National Energy Board, after a very thorough and independent analysis, as I have said, has concluded that frontier gas supply before the mid-1980's is an essential element of the country's supply and demand equation. Here I must point out just one of perhaps several discrepancies in the positions taken by the Leader of the Opposition and his energy critic, the hon. member for St. John's West (Mr. Crosbie). On the one hand the Leader of the Opposition was saying "Damm the torpedoes, full speed ahead, we must have energy self-sufficiency by the year 1990". Bringing domestic demand, he said, into some kind of harmony by then was not only realizable but absolutely essential.

However, his energy critic, on the other hand, adopted a rather more relaxed attitude. He said that our need for frontier gas from the Delta or the Beaufort Sea will not come in the last half of the 1980's, or need not come. He said we should gamble. That was one of the words he used. He said we can get by without frontier gas until then. That was an incredibly rash statement, but any of us who have watched the hon. member for St. John's West in this House realize that was fully in character.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Gillespie: I have no intention of entering the debate between the hon. member for St. John's West on the one hand and his leader on the other with respect to the energy self-sufficiency policy of their party, but I point out only that Canada could fall short of this goal if the Leader of the Opposition cannot persuade his energy critic to see some greater urgency in the matter. Indeed, far from having attained self-sufficency, we could be faced with energy shortages if we took the kinds of risks the hon. member for St. John's West appears willing to take.

In acknowledging the need for frontier gas I am not in any way proposing to lessen the pressure we must maintain toward the objective of new oil supplies from the tar sands and the heavy oil areas of Alberta. In fact that development is complementary to frontier gas development. Both are needed urgently. Nor am I suggesting that our energy conservation measures should be less stringent because we can achieve a supply and demand balance through new sources of supply. We must, in fact, increase our conservation efforts. The fact is that we are projecting an energy supply gap for 1985, even assuming frontier gas supplies and a considerable turnaround in the energy consumption habits of all Canadians. The extent to which we fail to bring on any of these new energy sources or to convince people about the importance of conservation will be a measure of the widening gap in our 1985 energy projections and beyond.

The alternative to greater self-reliance is an increasing dependence on imported oil. Forecasts of the world energy situation in the latter half of the next decade point to increasing competitive demand for decreasing supplies, and that can have only one result: escalating prices, very high prices or, at worst, a major security of supply problem.

While these supply conditions pertain to the mid-1980's and beyond, there is a tendency to forget about the long lead times involved in major resource development and transportation projects and to set aside the necessary decisions until it is too late to undertake a well planned program. This in turn often leads to crash programs which are costly and ineffective. The time for a decision on a northern pipeline is now. With a decision in principle preparations can be completed in a thorough manner and the facilities carefully constructed to open up new sources of energy supply for all Canadians.

As perhaps the last speaker in this debate I would like to compliment hon. members of all parties who have participated. I would particularly like to thank hon. members of the official opposition for finally turning their minds to the development of an energy policy.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Gillespie: I am pleased that the policy they have adopted is very similar to ours. After all, imitation is the sincerest form of flattery.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Gillespie: I would like now to summarize briefly some of the main points in the debate.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): Order, please. I regret to inform the hon. minister that his allotted time has expired.

Mr. Stevens: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the minister would permit a question at this time.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): The minister's time has expired. The only way he can accept a question is with unanimous consent. Does the minister have unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

[Mr. Gillespie.]

Mr. Stevens: Mr. Speaker, I thank hon. members for allowing me to ask my question. Earlier today the minister indicated that if he received a specific request with respect to certain of the cartel documents he has in his possession he would consider releasing them. I have two preliminary lists or schedules of such documents which I would like to deliver to the minister at this time. Would the minister indicate if he would accept the lists from me, and would he indicate to the House when we might receive the documents?

Some hon. Members: Order!

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): That question does not pertain to the debate.

Mr. Gillespie: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. It was my understanding that I had the indulgence of the House to summarize the debate. My summary would cover the speeches of various hon. members. I thought I had until a quarter to five. I ask the indulgence of the House for a few moments.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Turner): I point out to the minister that the time allocation was 40 minutes for the leaders of each party and 20 minutes for all other speakers. Due to the fact that the President of the Privy Council (Mr. MacEachen) spoke on behalf of the government first, the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Gillespie) was allocated 20 minutes.

Mr. Peter C. Bawden (Calgary South): Mr. Speaker, I had hoped to express my views in 20 minutes but understand I shall have available only two or three minutes. Therefore I have put aside my notes and will begin by commenting on the remarks of the minister. He commented on what the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Clark) said and also said, I think, that if we follow the counsel of the hon. member for St. John's West (Mr. Crosbie) we shall face energy shortages in the years ahead. It is incredible that the minister who was in charge of energy affairs in this country when we were self-sufficient in energy, when reserves were growing, when our prospects for energy supplies were favourable, indeed excellent, should have brought this country to the position in which in the next five years it will be on its knees from the point of view of energy supplies. That is shameful.

Personally I believe the question of northern pipelines is greatly connected with the question of energy supplies in Canada. This point has been covered adequately; yet it is important to note that by 1980, in little more than two years, Canada will import some 390,000 barrels a day, according to figures the National Energy Board gave us, and by 1985, only about seven years away, Canada will depend on foreign sources for over half its oil. Given these projections and estimates as to where our future energy supplies will come from, we must look carefully at this country's pipelines.

The minister who is responsible for energy matters in Canada should reflect upon what others have said about energy to North America. Speaking on energy, the President of the United States referred to it in April this year as the greatest challenge his country would face during our lifetime. He said the energy crisis has not yet overwhelmed us but it will if we do not act quickly. He said we must not be selfish or timid if we hope to have a decent world for our children and grandchildren. He concluded by saying we must simply balance our supply and demand for energy with our rapidly shrinking resources. By acting now we can control our future, instead of letting the future control us.

The minister referred again today to his strategies, his studies and to many reports. We have had, since the present minister and previous minister assumed the responsibility for their portfolios, nothing in the way of action. We have had all kinds of reports and heard a lot of talk. The minister speaks of the problems facing us but does nothing. Actually almost everything the government, including the minister, has done in the last few years with respect to energy has been negative, has in fact been a detriment to the acquisition of future supplies.

An hon. Member: We have had government by regulation.

Mr. Bawden: An hon. member mentions rule by regulation. The government's actions in the area of energy are but another example of that rule. I do not think we have emphasized sufficiently in this debate the matter of Canada's security of future energy supplies. If we are to import about half our energy supplies, a substantial proportion will be shipped via the Indian Ocean and round South Africa. We shall be highly dependent on a number of foreign powers for our energy supplies. This, in addition to our economic difficulties, is a most serious problem to those of us who live in northern latitudes.

I say to you, Mr. Speaker, it is very much in our interest to work together with the United States to make possible the construction of a northern pipeline. While we can be instrumental in making available to the United States sizable quantities of its own energy supplies, we can at the same time, probably by using the Dempster route, eventually bring into use our Mackenzie Delta and Beaufort Sea gas.

On reflecting on the events of the past months, after having visited recently the Mackenzie Delta, something I have done many times, I am impressed by a number of facts. For example, both natives and whites alike told me and my colleagues, when we visited the Delta, that Mr. Justice Berger's report does not properly represent the views of the northern people. The reason is, I think, that the views expressed to Mr. Justice Berger were largely those of a group of experts from Toronto, who arrived in the north on an aircraft ahead of Mr. Justice Berger and persuaded the natives as to what they should say. These same gentlemen probably wrote their reports right at the University of Toronto. We asked businessmen in the north why they did not put forward their views; or, why were we hearing from them views which had not been expressed to Mr. Justice Berger? The reason is this: the experts from Toronto were funded directly and indirectly by the government. They had funds which enabled them to sit at the hearings for days on end and to buy airline tickets which are expensive items in northern communities. But the small businessmen, the young people who were enterprising and had staked their future in the north, had no chance to express their views, because they had neither the time nor the money to do it.

I can hardly fail to remind the House that Mr. Justice Berger himself at one time was an elected representative and formerly the leader of the New Democratic Party in British Columbia. As one northerner put it, asking Mr. Justice Berger to report on matters in the north is akin to appointing a cardinal to head a commission on abortion.

What are this country's energy reserves, and what are our potential sources of supply? We have a good deal of potential for supplies in Alberta. We have potential supplies off the east coast, but in deep water and probably cannot extract those supplies with presently known technology. I expect we shall need to learn new technologies. We have the Alberta oil sands and the heavy oils in Alberta. But the frontier area most likely to yield energy supplies immediately is the Mackenzie Delta.

We shall need all of this country's energy reserves. All will be required, each in their own time. The development of some can be hurried; the development of others cannot be. Huge sums of money will be required for exploration in our provinces and off the east coast. In view of the enormous costs of these developments, we shall need to time them carefully. Today we have known reserves in our western Arctic areas. The reports of the National Energy Board make clear that this area is the next and most important source which should be tapped for Canadian energy needs.

The projected production from the Mackenzie Delta would meet the growth in Canada's energy needs for less than two years. That should make it clear we shall need all our energy resources. We cannot stand aside at this time, awaiting the development of the oil sands, or the heavy oil reserves. We must make use of our present opportunity to bring on stream Mackenzie Delta gas.

It has been said in this debate that by agreeing to the pipeline we shall do the United States a favour. Before I deal with the point let me draw attention to the outstanding job done for many years by the Canadian Arctic gas group. This government told it to get to work and undertake studies in thousands of important areas. The group did its work well. It conducted undoubtedly one of the most thorough studies ever undertaken on northern ecological and transportation matters.

I ask again, who will be dealt a favour? I say that, yes, we can help the United States, and it is important for us to do so. But I also suggest this project is greatly to Canada's advantage. Today we desperately need the economic stimulus of this pipeline and its construction projects. This, of course, is largely due to the mess that our country is in as a result of the economic mismanagement of the government sitting opposite.

• (1650)

We cannot afford to build our own pipeline at the present time from our western Arctic reserves because they are not large enough. However, the Alaska-Yukon line which is proposed by the Foothills group in Calgary to build their line within 480 miles of our reserves brings our reserves within reasonable distance of a major transportation artery. The energy supply of North America would be more secure and the strength of the economy of our largest trading partner would be increased.

Our supply of energy is important to us. Equally important to us is that the United States receives their supply of energy. Hon. members will recall how many Americans were out of jobs last winter and how seriously the slump in their economy affected Canada.

There is one other aspect. The pipeline group intends to employ thousands of people on the pipeline, something in the area of 5,000 or 6,000. This will be multiplied at least five times in other parts of Canada. That would be Hamilton, the maritimes, and as I told the hon. member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath), they will probably eat a lot of fish in those pipeline camps.

I understand that another factor being considered is gas swaps. At the present time the important problem facing the United States is their short-term supply. The President of the United States has put into place a long term program but, as hon. members know, it takes a long lead time to bring these supplies on stream.

It is my understanding that affiliates of the Alaska-Yukon pipeline company are at the present time willing to deal with the United States on short-term supplies from western Canada. This is of considerable importance to the United States.

We have these additional supplies available. There appear to be various formulae to make possible their implementation. I urge the government to support these efforts and, wherever possible, to back those who are attempting to use these important levers to bring about acceptance by the United States of this particular route.

As I reflect on the figures of our own energy shortfalls in the eighties, I find them frightening. What is of even more concern is that the problem we have in energy is not truly an energy problem, but a political problem. It seems little short of incredible that Canada is programmed by this government in its studies to permit itself to lapse into heavy dependence on outside sources on the whims of foreign powers for its essential energy supply. It is all the more tragic when we realize that this potential energy is available in Canada through the various sources that we have.

There is the example of the northern regulations. This minister ought to be ashamed of himself. He has told this House and committee on more than two dozen occasions in the past six or eight months that these regulations would be available very soon. He said as recently as this past June that he would introduce them this session. We are well into the summer, and no regulations. This speaks very well for the concern the government has for the energy problem, and indeed the competence of the minister.

It is interesting that the government's program, the shortage and desperation in our actual supply situation, lead us very much into the 1980's when we will be facing deficits which will not permit us to buy supplies. I wonder if the minister is aware of that.

Yesterday the Leader of the Opposition pointed out that studies by the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and others clearly indicate that by the middle of the 1980's oil may very well not be available. This master plan, these studies, these words, all that we hear from this minister brings us to our maximum problem, our maximum shortages at the very time when world supplies will be phasing out and may very well be unavailable to us.

On the question of a northern pipeline, the government is obligated to come forward with some answers. It has had this problem for many years. The opportunity to build an oil line through Canada came at the time that Alaska oil was to be brought from Alaska. The government failed to react. It said no. It had an opportunity at that time to take steps to make possible the energy corridors, but it failed miserably. It is continuing to do so.

THE ROYAL ASSENT

[English]

A message was delivered by the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod as follows:

Mr. Speaker, the Honourable the Deputy Governor General desires the immediate attendance of this honourable House in the chamber of the honourable the Senate.

Accordingly, Mr. Speaker with the House went up to the Senate chamber.

And being returned:

Mr. Speaker informed the House that the Deputy Governor General had been pleased to give, in Her Majesty's name, the Royal Assent to the following bills:

Bill C-24, An Act respecting immigration to Canada—Chapter 52.

Bill C-51, An Act to amend the Criminal Code, the Customs Tariff, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act and the Prisons and Reformatories Act—Chapter 53.

Bill C-27, An Act to establish the Department of Employment and Immigration, the Canada Employment and Immigration Commission and the Canada Employment and Immigration Advisory Council, to amend the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971 and to amend certain other statutes in consequence thereof—Chapter 54.

Bill C-23, An Act to facilitate conversion to the metric system of measurement—Chapter 55.

Bill C-34, An Act to amend the Canadian Wheat Board Act respecting the establishment of marketing plans and to amend the Western Grain Stabilization Act in consequence thereof—Chapter 56.

Mr. Speaker: It being five o'clock, pursuant to the order made by this House on Monday, July 25, 1977, this House stands adjourned until Monday, October 17, 1977, at two o'clock in the afternoon.

The House adjourned at 5.10 p.m., until Monday, October 17, 1977, at 2 p.m., according to order made July 25, 1977.

PROPOSALS FOR IMPROVING ECONOMIC SITUATION—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. James Gillies (Don Valley): Mr. Speaker, in light of the fact that unemployment is now 878,000, a record for the month of July, in light of the fact that second quarter job vacancies have dropped to only four per thousand from 14 per thousand three years ago, and in light of the fact that the bill for unemployment insurance benefits in May was $12 million per day, I move, seconded by the hon. member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath):

That this House urges the government to adopt the following Progressive Conservative program for the economic reconstruction of this country: income tax cuts of $250 million to low and middle income earners; a cut in the federal sales tax on building materials to stimulate housing and create employment in the construction industry; long term fiscal or tax contracts for companies investing in Atlantic Canada or Quebec; a new budget with major emphasis on private sector job creation; and a reallocation of government funds presently budgeted for inessential projects to direct job creation programs.

Mr. Speaker: The question called under Standing Order 43 by the hon. member for Don Valley can be put for debate only with the unanimous consent of the House. Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

CITING OF ORDER FOR RECALL OF PARLIAMENT

Mr. Speaker: I should inform the House that by virtue of a resolution passed by the House on Monday, July 25, 1977, appearing in Votes and Proceedings at page 1441, dealing with the adjournment of the House, I caused to be published in the edition of the Canada Gazette for August 6, 1977 a notice causing this House to meet this day, which reads as follows:

In accordance with the provisions of the resolution adopted by the House on Monday, July 25, 1977, having been satisfied after consultation with the Government, that the public interest requires that the House should meet at an earlier time during the adjournment, I hereby give notice that the House of Commons shall meet on Tuesday, August 9, 1977, at 2.00 o'clock p.m., for the purpose of considering legislation in relation to an impending strike by the Canadian Air Traffic Control Association and to transact the business of the House as if it had been duly adjourned to that time.

Given under my hand and seal at Ottawa this 6th day of August, 1977.

James Jerome
Speaker
House of Commons
Canada

In addition, on the same date I sent telegrams to each member of the House containing the substance of that notice.

PROPOSED REFERENCE TO COMMITTEE OF ACTIVITIES OF ALLEGED URANIUM CARTEL—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Sinclair Stevens (York-Simcoe): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a matter of urgent and pressing necessity under Standing Order 43. As it is now clear an international cartel in uranium succeeded in rigging world prices, so that the floor price per pound of uranium was set in the $14 per pound range in the early part of 1974, and as it is now evident from the director's minutes of Ontario Hydro that this "world price" was proposed by Rio Algom in their uranium offer to Ontario Hydro of February 25, 1974, and that Denison in the same period proposed to Ontario Hydro a floor price of $14.50 per pound, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Don Valley (Mr. Gillies):

That a reference be made to the public accounts standing committee of this House so that the activities of this uranium cartel may be reviewed with particular reference to their impact on Canadian domestic consumers.

Mr. Speaker: The presentation of such a motion requires unanimous consent. Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

INDUSTRY

SUGGESTION STEEL RAILS BE ORDERED FROM SYDNEY STEEL PLANT—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Andy Hogan (Cape Breton-East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, I rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43 on a matter of urgent and pressing necessity. In light of the continuing increase in unemployment particularly in the Atlantic provinces and most disastrously in Cape Breton, and with the requirements needed for materials to upgrade and rehabilitate the rail system in western Canada, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Regina-Lake Centre (Mr. Benjamin):

That this House request the government to provide capital funds necessary and require the railways to place orders for and stockpile the many hundreds of miles of steel rails in preparing for such work and that priority be given to the steel mill in Sydney, Nova Scotia, for the filling of these orders so as to provide immediate and substantial employment.

Mr. Speaker: Such a motion can be presented for debate only with the unanimous consent of the House. Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

THE MINISTRY

SUGGESTION MINISTER OF FINANCE RESIGN—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Ray Hnatyshyn (Saskatoon-Biggar): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a matter of urgent and pressing necessity under the provisions of Standing Order 43. In the years since the current finance minister first joined the cabinet, he has been responsible first for the uranium cartel, for our present legacy of energy rises as minister of energy, and now, as Minister of Finance, for record inflation followed by record unemployment. The long arm of coincidence cannot be stretched to encompass so many acts without indicating incompetence. Therefore, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Edmonton Centre (Mr. Paproski):

That this House demands the minister now resign.

Mr. Speaker: Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

PROPOSED CHANGE IN RULES TO PROVIDE FOR DEBATE OF BACK-TO-WORK LEGISLATION FOR AIR TRAFFIC CONTROLLERS—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Ralph Stewart (Cochrane): Mr. Speaker, I rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43 to move a motion which would permit us to accomplish what we came here to do. Since our convening at this time in emergency session has been prompted by a crisis in the country, the Canadian public expects us to debate the matter as soon as possible.

● (1410)

The ordinary rules of this House are such that many hours can be used discussing a number of other matters, thus denying us the possibility of getting to the debate at hand for some time and therefore at great additional cost to the Canadian taxpayers. I therefore move, seconded by the hon. member for Saint-Jacques (Mr. Guilbault):

That this House agrees to set aside all routine proceedings, including oral questions, and proceed with the emergency debate forthwith.

Furthermore, in order to preserve the prerogatives of members who wish to do so, that when all stages of the emergency legislation are passed, an additional sitting day be made available for the purpose of discussing matters that would normally be dealt with in routine proceedings.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Such a motion can be discussed only with unanimous consent? Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

SOCIAL SECURITY

PROPOSALS TO IMPROVE PENSION PLANS—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, in view of the fact that this session might end one of these days, it is time that we started thinking about the next one. I therefore move, seconded by the hon. member for Timiskaming (Mr. Peters):

That this House urges the government to include in the Speech from the Throne at the opening of the third session of this parliament legislation to increase the basic amount of the old age pension, to make both old age security and the Canada Pension Plan available at age 60 to those who are out of the labour market, to establish pension equality between men and women, to increase the basic rate of the war disability pension, and to establish pro rata pensions for the widows of veterans whose disability pension was less than 48 per cent.

Mr. Speaker: In view of the nature of the motion being a recommendation and since it relates to the beginning of the next session, I can hardly assign to it the urgency required under the Standing Order.

AIR CANADA

SUGGESTED AUTHORIZATION OF SERVICE TO REGINA, BRANDON AND TORONTO—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Hon. W. G. Dinsdale (Brandon-Souris): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a matter of urgent public necessity under Standing Order 43. In view of the fact that many towns and cities in western Manitoba and eastern Saskatchewan have been without air service not for three days but for more than four years, and in light of the promise of the Minister of Transport (Mr. Lang) to provide a subsidy for a jet service between Regina, Brandon and Toronto as well as a subsidy for a connecting commuter service, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Dauphin (Mr. Ritchie):

That the Minister of Transport authorize Air Canada to provide the daily jet service between Regina, Brandon and Toronto and return at the earliest possible moment.

Mr. Speaker: The presentation for debate of such a motion requires unanimous consent. Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

THE CANADIAN ECONOMY

POSSIBILITY OF NEW BUDGET WITH JOB-CREATING PROVISIONS AND DIRECT JOB-CREATING MEASURES

Mr. Joe Clark (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister and it comes in light of the fact that today's unemployment figures for the month of July are the highest in the history of Statistics Canada. Since it is very clear from the statistics revealed today that the job creating part of the budget of this spring simply has not taken hold, has not created the jobs that Canadians require, will the Prime Minister tell the House whether it is his intention to bring in a new budget at the earliest possible time, a budget that will include effective incentives to the Canadian private sector that will create the jobs that Canadians need?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, while sharing the concern of the Leader of the Opposition on the high rate of unemployment, I would not agree with his feeling that the budget has not begun to take effect. If the hon. member looks at the figures for the first six months of the year, he will see that there has been a relatively strong increase in employment. Of course, the number of people entering the labour force has also been very high, and this is the cause of the present statistic. As to the solution, I will keep the hon. member's suggestion in mind.

Mr. Clark: What I was looking at in part was the large number of new entrants to the work force, something which surely should not come to this government as a surprise. They have been there for years. Also what I was looking at was a speech given on July 12 by the President of the Treasury Board in which he admitted that there does not yet appear to be the kind of response to the budget the government was looking for. At that time the President of the Treasury Board indicated that the government might have to move away from encouragement of the private sector and move toward direct public sector job creation.

An hon. Member: It's about time.

Mr. Clark: That has the knee jerk support of the NDP, but I would like to know whether the President of the Treasury Board was speaking for the government and whether it is the intention of the government of Canada now in light of the clear failure of its March budget—which is admitted by the President of the Treasury Board—to move toward direct job creation or whether the government is going to bring new stimulus to the private sector to create the jobs Canadians require.

Mr. Trudeau: Mr. Speaker, I cannot recall if the Leader of the Opposition was present, but just a few days ago the Minister of Finance dealt at some length with this very question in answer to a question of privilege raised by the leader of the New Democratic Party. I encourage the hon. gentleman to look at Hansard, and he might find the answer.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

POSSIBILITY OF CONFERENCE OF PROVINCES, LABOUR AND BUSINESS

Mr. Joe Clark (Leader of the Opposition): As well as sending young Canadians looking for jobs out of the country because they cannot find them here perhaps the Prime Minister will also send Hansard to the hundreds of thousands of Canadians who are out of work right now, and their dependents, so that they can find what comfort they might from the fact that the Government of Canada refuses to respond to this new crisis in unemployment by taking action which might create jobs.

Since the Prime Minister is apparently unwilling to take action himself and in light of the crisis nature of the situation does the Prime Minister intend to call in representatives of the provinces and of organized labour and of business for a major economic conference which might give some leadership to this government, which lacks leadership in trying to create jobs for Canadians?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I must remind the Leader of the Opposition that his question had to do with some quotation from the President of the Treasury Board, and it is rather unfair to conclude from my answer—which was just a suggestion that the hon. gentleman look at the answers which had been given—that the government is not prepared to do many things, one of them being the convening of precisely the type of conference he just suggested. We discussed this with labour and business groups with which we met a couple of weeks ago, and we are hoping to have a positive response from them. One of the things we put to them was the suggestion of convening a conference of responsible decision makers in the economic sector, to which observers from the provinces could be present if they so desired.

Mr. Clark: What does the Government of Canada intend to do to create jobs for Canadians?

Mr. Trudeau: The Leader of the Opposition just made a suggestion, and I said we are going to do that very thing. Does he have another question?

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Oral Questions

UNEMPLOYMENT—POSSIBILITY OF NEW JOB-CREATING MEASURES

Mr. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct a supplementary question to the Minister of Finance. In actual terms unemployment figures are up all across the country but are especially critical in the province of Quebec, which had the sharpest increase, as well as in the Atlantic provinces generally. Notwithstanding the job creation programs presently in force, is it the intention of the minister in the face of these startling statistics to announce to the House new job creation initiatives now?

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, it is not my intention to add to the quarter billion dollar announcement which was made by the Minister of Manpower and Immigration some weeks ago.

Mr. McGrath: Mr. Speaker, many of the jobless in the country are unemployed heads of families. A very large proportion of these people have been unemployed for three months or more, and they are running the risk of having their unemployment insurance benefits expire. I appeal to the minister to examine with his colleague, the Minister of Manpower and Immigration, the situation regarding unemployment insurance for people who have been unemployed for more than three months and perhaps through some program to assist these people so that they will not have to fall back on provinces which can ill afford to meet these extra welfare payments now.

● (1420)

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): Mr. Speaker, my colleague and I will be most happy to look at that specific group of the work force. As I have indicated in the past in the House, job creation measures are specifically aimed at groups, such as those in the Atlantic provinces, where the levels of unemployment have been above the national average.

EFFECT OF UNEMPLOYMENT ON NATIONAL UNITY—SUGGESTED JOB-CREATING PROGRAM

Mr. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa-Whitby): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister, who correctly told the Leader of the Opposition that I had directed a question to the President of the Treasury Board in which I suggested that unemployment was contributing to national disunity and that the Minister of Finance had replied to the question. But the Prime Minister did not add that the Minister of Finance on Friday, August 5, withdrew his accusation about my having deliberately misled the House—

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): Deliberately. That's the word.

Mr. Broadbent: —the clear implication being that the President of the Treasury Board was quoted accurately.

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): No.

Mr. Broadbent: Let me ask the Prime Minister this question, Mr. Speaker. Since the President of the Treasury Board has already admitted that current levels of unemployment are contributing to national disunity, and considering that in the province of Quebec alone unemployment during the last month increased by 21,000, the largest increase in any province of Canada, from the point of view of unity in the country does the Prime Minister not think it is time for the government to move directly with respect to job creation programs of the kind the Minister of Finance promised last month but withdrew two weeks ago?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I find the question—

An hon. Member: A little long.

Mr. Trudeau: —rather surprising. I am not sure if the preamble to the question was necessary but it seems to me that in its present form it states a new falsehood. In it the hon. member said that the Minister of Finance withdrew his statement about the quotations by the hon. member not being to the effect he said. All the minister withdrew was the suggestion that there had been a deliberate misleading of the House, and that is the total picture. I am surprised that the leader of the New Democratic Party would not at least be correct in that.

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, I hope the Prime Minister will answer my question when he replies again. Considering that ministers of the Crown have both raised the serious question of disunity and acknowledged it as being directly related to unemployment levels, and considering that since President Carter took office last fall unemployment in the United States has been dropping steadily to its present level of 6.9 per cent, whereas in the same period of time unemployment in Canada has worsened, will the Prime Minister now acknowledge that the financial policies of the government have been wrong and, from considerations of human dignity and national unity, commit the government to some new, early action to create jobs?

Mr. Trudeau: Mr. Speaker, on a question so important, a question which I acknowledge, as does the Minister of Finance, is giving us great concern, I really do not understand why the NDP leader has to put in all these preambles which are wrong and misleading. It is well known that over a period of years the performance of the United States was very much worse than ours.

Mr. Broadbent: And they changed the president.

Mr. Trudeau: They changed their president, Mr. Speaker, and changed their economic policy.

Mr. Broadbent: Yes, and you know what happened.

Mr. Trudeau: That permitted them to catch up and do better than they had been doing for years.

Mr. Stevens: And their government is doing better than this government is doing.

Mr. Trudeau: Mr. Speaker, I think the leader of the NDP is misguided again when he suggests that their policies are infallible and that unemployment has been steadily dropping. If he looks at the figures for June he will see that that is not the case. In the United States the figures have gone up.

Mr. Stevens: No, they have not. That is damned wrong.

Mr. Trudeau: Therefore, you cannot just assert a policy and say that that is the one which will apply, Mr. Speaker. You have to apply a policy to your country and do as best you can.

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, the level of unemployment in the United States is 6.9 per cent and over 8 per cent in Canada. The Prime Minister is right in saying that the Americans changed their president and changed their policy. We are calling for the same thing in this country. Is the Prime Minister happy with the situation whereby, according to his own government's forecasts, we will spend $3.8 billion on unemployment insurance payouts alone this year? Does he not agree that money would be much better spent on job creation to provide jobs for people in Canada instead of handouts?

Mr. Trudeau: Mr. Speaker, it is of course our intention, as we have said constantly, to do what we can from month to month to improve the economic situation in the country. The Minister of Finance made it clear in his budget last March that it would take a period of several months before we would see a marked improvement. As to the question of changing leaders, Mr. Speaker, I am prepared to hear a case from the leader of the NDP. If he wants to give the people of Canada an occasion very soon to change their leaders, I am prepared—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

ALLEGED URANIUM CARTEL—DATE WHEN FACTS AND DOCUMENTS WILL BE PUT BEFORE PARLIAMENT

Mr. Sinclair Stevens (York-Simcoe) Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister. Referring to the uranium cartel on Friday, the Prime Minister stated at page 8074 of Hansard, and I quote:

> We will put every fact we have before parliament so it can debate this matter properly.

Will the Prime Minister indicate when we may expect these facts to be put before parliament and will they include all the documents now before the Moss committee in Washington, of which 500 are still held on the secret list, and will the facts referred to by the Prime Minister include the material impounded by the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources during November 1976 and still held by the minister?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I remember the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources inviting the hon. member to state clearly what documents he would like. We will do our utmost to provide them to parliament. I understand that the hon. member has now tabled such a list on the Order Paper. We will be very glad to look at it and comply in so far as possible.

ALLEGED URANIUM CARTEL—POSSIBILITY OF AMENDING REGULATIONS PROHIBITING POSSESSION OF DOCUMENTS

Mr. Sinclair Stevens (York-Simcoe): Mr. Speaker, I would emphasize that the list on the Order Paper is only a preliminary list. The Prime Minister on Friday conveyed the impression that he was still considering amending the cover up regulation saying as he did at page 8072 of Hansard:

> —I would do everything possible to permit the opposition and the Canadian public to debate this fairly,—

Will the Prime Minister now indicate if he has asked to have the security of information order in council amended to ensure that it will not restrict a free and open debate and investigation in Canada with respect to uranium cartel activities.

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Yes, Mr. Speaker. I have asked that. The Minister of Justice is presently considering that possibility. I hope we will be able to give an answer to parliament within a day or two.

ENERGY

ALLEGED URANIUM CARTEL—REQUEST FOR RELEASE OF DOCUMENTS TO DIRECTOR OF COMBINES

Mr. Sinclair Stevens (York-Simcoe): Mr. Speaker, as we wait for that answer, perhaps I could direct a supplementary question to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. As the cover-up regulations permit the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources to consent to material being released, will the minister indicate if he would be willing to at least ask that the document that we now have in our possession touching on the uranium cartel be released to the Director of Investigation and Research under the Combines Investigation Act so that any six Canadians may pursuant to Section 7 of that Act ask for an inquiry with respect to the uranium cartel activities.

Hon. Alastair Gillespie (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, if there is any cover-up in this operation, it is a cover up operation attempted by the hon. member for York-Simcoe. It is he who is trying to cover-up the fact the Canadian government acted to protect the interests of the Canadian people.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Gillespie: What is surprising is that it has taken them ten months to discover that order in council which was published last September. I have seen a list of some 35 orders which the hon. member has asked to be tabled. We are giving consideration to doing so. I believe they fall into three different categories.

● (1430)

One has to do with motion 117 for a copy of my recent telex to Judge Daniel Snyder of the U.S. District Court for the western district of Pennsylvania. As this telex presents my government's position on the release in the United States of classified Canadian documents I have no difficulty about it being made public. Indeed, it is presently being translated.

The other documents fall into two different categories. Some 23 of the motions mentioned in the hon. member's release—he mentioned 28 and I am not sure whether the 23 and the 28 are identical—appear to relate to internal communications within the Gulf Oil Corporation of the United States, not of the Canadian corporation. It is most unlikely that any of this material exists in our files but a search is underway at the present time.

As to the remaining papers which are sought, we are presently looking at this aspect from the point of view of confidentiality in the light of the test which I mentioned to the House at the end of last week—the very nature of the agreements entered into.

NORTHERN GAS PIPELINE—SUGGESTION CANADIANS NOT FUND OR GUARANTEE PIPELINE

Mr. James Gillies (Don Valley): My question is directed to the Prime Minister, Mr. Speaker. It has to do with the recent decisions with respect to the Alcan pipeline in connection with the construction of which the government is now, presumably, about to enter into negotiation with the United States.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Gillies: Can the government tell us and the people of Canada that one of the non-negotiable items as far as Canada is concerned is that Canadian taxpayers will not be asked to fund or guarantee the pipeline in any way?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): If the hon. member is suggesting the financing of the pipeline in a direct way, yes, that is our view; we do not intend that the Canadian taxpayer should pay for it in any sense. But the possibility that along with benefits there will be some cost is inevitable, and it is our intention to make sure that this cost is paid by those who need the pipeline. The pipeline is needed by the Americans but it is also needed by Canadians and it will be a matter of making the best possible arrangements for Canada.

Mr. Gillies: I was concerned about whether or not the Canadian government would be willing to make any back-stop arrangements for the completion of the pipeline—whether the Canadian government is willing to take up a back-stop position with respect to any portion of the work?

Mr. Trudeau: If the question is stated in that way, the answer, and I gave it yesterday at the press conference, is unequivocally no.

[Mr. Gillespie.]

NORTHERN GAS PIPELINE—CANADIAN POSITION ON CONSTRUCTION OF DAWSON LOOP

Mr. James Gillies (Don Valley): I would ask the Prime Minister further whether or not our position with regard to the construction of the loop in the pipeline down through Dawson is a non-negotiable one as far as Canada is concerned. I want the Canadian people to know what the conditions are likely to be—

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Gillies: It is not like the cartel. They have every right to know whether or not our position on the Dawson loop is non-negotiable, so if it turns out there are economically viable reserves in the delta they can be brought out at the lowest cost.

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): The government indicated yesterday in its announcement that one of the reasons Canada undertook to negotiate a pipeline was that we wished to have access to our reserves in the Mackenzie delta. The way in which those reserves will be brought down is, of course, the subject of negotiation. I know the hon. gentleman has given a lot of thought to the subject and if he would make a list of the non-negotiable items he wants us to take to the Americans we would be very happy to have it, and, perhaps, if we were to stick with that list there would not be even much point in the negotiations.

NORTHERN GAS PIPELINE—REQUEST FOR ASSURANCE MATERIAL AND EQUIPMENT MANUFACTURED IN CANADA

Mr. R. E. McKinley (Huron-Middlesex): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. Bearing in mind that Canadians are concerned that too much in the way of protection for producers and manufacturers has been given away without anything in return since the present government took office, and that the U.S. likes to protect its producers and manufacturers, will the hon. gentleman assure us that in negotiating with the United States for the building of a pipeline across Canada our negotiators will take steps to ensure that a large percentage of the material and equipment used is manufactured in Canada, thus protecting Canadian jobs?

Hon. Alastair Gillespie (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): It has been made clear from the start that Canadian content would be a very important part of our approach to these negotiations.

ALLEGED URANIUM CARTEL—REASON FOR CANADIAN PARTICIPATION BEYOND 1974

Mr. Bill Kempling (Halton-Wentworth): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs relating to the uranium cartel. Having told the House on June 17 that he was "pleased the government withdrew its support of the arrangement as soon as possible after prices began to rise on 1974", will he explain why a letter written by a government official, Dr. Runnalls, of the Department of Energy, Mines and Resources in late September, 1975, clearly indicates that Canadians continued to participate in the cartel and even remained dues-paying members of the cartel through 1975 and possibly into 1976 at which time uranium prices leap-frogged off the quote sheets and recorded their most marked increases?

Hon. A. C. Abbott (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): In answering a question on June 17, I did so in accordance with the facts in my possession. However, if the hon. member has a letter which I have not seen I would be grateful if he would table it.

An hon. Member: How can a private member table a letter?

ALLEGED URANIUM CARTEL—EFFECT ON DOMESTIC PRICE

Mr. Bill Kempling (Halton-Wentworth): The minister assured the House on June 17 that the director of investigations was following the situation for "any indication that the Canadian consumer has been adversely affected by the cartel arrangement." Would he tell the House whether, on the basis of discussions he has had with the director or on the basis of his personal knowledge, he still feels the cartel has had no adverse effect on Canadian consumers? Can he state unequivocally that the cartel did not have a bearing upon the price paid by the Canadian consumer?

Hon. A. C. Abbott (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I cannot state unequivocally that it did not, but to the best of my knowledge the arrangement was legal at the time it was concluded, there were no domestic buyers in the market at the time who were affected by the arrangement, and any export limitations under the arrangement were legitimized by the regulations made under the Atomic Energy Control Act relating to an export association which is permitted under the Combines Investigation Act. So I have no information which would lead me to conclude that there was any illegality in the transaction. The hon. member is citing a letter: I would be very grateful if he would table it for our information.

Mr. Kempling: Would the minister answer the question which was put to him by my hon. friend from York-Simcoe in relation to the release to the director of investigations under the combines legislation of the material we have?

Mr. Speaker: Order. That was the question asked by the hon. member for York-Simcoe, which was answered.

Some hon. Members: It was not answered.

HEALTH

PROGRAM TO DEAL WITH HEROIN ADDICTION IN BRITISH COLUMBIA—POSSIBILITY OF FEDERAL PARTICIPATION

Mr. Hugh A. Anderson (Comox-Alberni): Mr. Speaker, my question is addressed to the Minister of National Health and Welfare. Recently, the province of British Columbia announced a new program to deal with heroin addiction, one upon which I congratulate those responsible. Can the minister advise the House whether he will be meeting with his provincial counterpart in the near future and whether the federal government will be providing assistance in any form to the province of British Columbia in connection with this worthwhile endeavour?

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of National Health and Welfare): I have myself welcomed the initiative shown by the government of British Columbia in putting new money and effort into the fight against heroin addiction, though I have expressed some concern about the precise techniques being used. However, I have planned a meeting with my British Columbia colleagues toward the end of September, at which time we will review the British Columbia proposal.

● (1440)

As to co-operation, I have indicated that we would try to co-operate with the British Columbia government in every way we could. As to financial involvement, I must indicate that the federal government has already contributed substantially to health and social services costs in all provinces, including British Columbia. Obviously, whatever health and social services would be provided in these particular programs would be subject to the usual cost-sharing rules which exist under the health and social services legislation in Canada.

POST OFFICE

PROPOSED ROYAL COMMISSION OF INQUIRY—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. John Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Postmaster General. In view of the fact that Canada's air traffic controllers went on strike only after trying for nine months to reach a settlement with their employer, the government; and in view of the fact that the Canadian Union of Postal Workers is facing exactly the same serious problems with their employer, the Postmaster General; and that as in the case of the air traffic controllers these problems are being permitted to drag on for months and months thus poisoning the relations between workers and management, will the minister tell this House if he is now prepared to call a royal commission into the problems of the Post Office and to further assure the House that he will act on the findings of such a commission?

Hon. J.-J. Blais (Postmaster General): Mr. Speaker, I wish the hon. gentleman would use his evident contact with the Union of Postal Workers in order to have them return to the bargaining table.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Blais: I fully recognize, with the hon. gentleman, that the relations between the workers and their employers cannot but be detrimentally affected by the dragging on of negotiations. However, I have sent invitations time and time again to have CUPW return to the negotiating table. They have refused. Now, we have had to make an application under the Public Service Staff Relations Act for a declaration indicating that they are not negotiating in good faith. We had the initial hearing returnable on August 3. They requested an adjournment because they were not prepared to proceed at that time. Unfortunately, that matter will not be determined until the week of August 17. We hope there is a recognition that we have a responsibility to the Canadian people to keep the mails moving, especially in view of the experience with CATCA. We hope as well that all hon. members, who have some influence on CUPW, would use their good offices to have them return to the bargaining table.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

PUBLIC SERVICE

CONFLICTING STATEMENTS ON RIGHT TO STRIKE—REQUEST FOR CLARIFICATION

Mr. John Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, I see the Minister of Labour is not in his place, therefore I will direct my supplementary to the Prime Minister. In view of the fact that the Minister of Transport recently made a statement on a CBC program indicating that the government is prepared to remove the right to strike for those workers who are considered to be essential workers in the public sector—

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Rodriguez: I am sure we have all noted that the banging came from the government side of the House.

An hon. Member: Right on.

Mr. Rodriguez: Can the Prime Minister tell the House if the Minister of Transport was expressing a new government labour policy in regard to the right to strike of government employees?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Transport made it clear that he was expressing his opinion that it should be considered. I would not indicate that the government is considering it these days. The issue before the House is one of a single strike, and we want to deal with that before getting into any broader matters.

Mr. Rodriguez: Mr. Speaker, my final supplementary is directed to the Prime Minister. In view of the fact that the Prime Minister has changed Postmaster General as often as he has changed his underwear in trying to solve the problems of the Post Office, and in view of the fact that the Prime Minister said that he does not know what to do about solving the problems in the Post Office, is the Prime Minister prepared to remove this Postmaster General who is obviously incapable of dealing with the problem in the upcoming shuffle of the cabinet—

An hon. Member: Sit down.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

REGIONAL ECONOMIC EXPANSION

POSSIBILITY OF MODERNIZING SYDNEY STEEL PLANT—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Halifax): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Prime Minister. On July 25 for the second time I attempted to find out from the right hon. gentleman whether the government of Nova Scotia has made any specific proposal or request to the government of Canada in regard to the modernization of the Sydney Steel Plant. For the second time, the Prime Minister was unable to answer me; but he promised he would have someone send that information, which has not been sent. That is no way to treat a dog, let alone the people of Cape Breton. Could I have that information?

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

[Translation]

Hon. Marcel Lessard (Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I should like to answer the question in two points: First, we did receive from SYSCO a request for our assistance in the form of our participation in the study and completion of up-dating their facilities in Cape Breton; second, with regard to the information the hon. requested last week, I did take steps to have that information sent to his office and signed a letter to that effect advising him of the state of the situation.

ENERGY

ALLEGED URANIUM CARTEL—POSSIBILITY OF PERMITTING RELEASE OF DOCUMENTS AND INFORMATION RELATING TO CARTEL

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. During the course of the reply to the hon. member for York-Simcoe, he stated that there was no cover-up at all. When he said it, he did so with such forcefulness as to convince anyone that he was covering up.

I have before me the order in council which was passed last September, and I ask him: does he intend to bring in any measure to allow any person to disclose or communicate the contents thereof, which is the agreement entered into with the cartel? Does he intend to bring in such a law to permit the information being given?

Hon. Alastair Gillespie (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, if the right hon. gentleman is asking: are we proposing to introduce a law to replace the authority we have under the order in council, the answer is no.

Mr. Diefenbaker: Mr. Speaker, I should like to turn to the next one: He is required to do something under the law as provided in the order in council. He can do so only with the consent of the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. Therefore, I ask him: does he intend to give that consent? After all, every source of information has been concealed by this order in council, unless he is prepared to say that he will consent to this being done or that a law will be introduced, and he has already denied that.

Mr. Gillespie: Mr. Speaker, if the right hon. gentleman were to reread the answer I gave on Friday of last week and the answers I gave today, he should recognize that we have under expeditious consideration at the present time the making public, the tabling, and the answering of the questions placed on the order paper by the hon. member for York-Simcoe.

An hon. Member: You sound like Richard Nixon.

Mr. Gillespie: The hon. member has listed a number of documents. We are looking into our files to see if we have any documents. In some cases, we may not have them.

An hon. Member: You have got them.

Mr. Gillespie: In cases where we may have them, we are examining them from the point of view of the confidentiality of those documents. We will make our determination just as soon as we possibly can.

Mr. Diefenbaker: I heard the hon. member's explanation the other day. It might as well have been in Sanskrit if one were to understand what he endeavoured to say. In all seriousness I ask him: what are you covering up? Why is this order in council in the form it is? I have looked over the records and there has not been one in all of Canada's history which I can find that denies Canadians in such a manner the right to have information on the question or to disclose what anyone may know concerning it.

I should also suggest to him that he read what took place in 1956 when the St. Laurent government endeavoured to cover everything up in a manner which was amateur compared to this and what happened to them.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

• (1450)

Mr. Gillespie: Mr. Speaker, as I recall, when the right hon. gentleman was Prime Minister one of the things that concerned him most of all was Canadian sovereignty. I think it might be useful to remind him of positions that he used to take to protect the Canadian interest when it comes to the extraterritorial reach of foreign laws.

ALLEGED URANIUM CARTEL—REQUEST FOR TABLING OF LETTER FROM DR. O. J. C. RUNNALLS IN SEPTEMBER, 1975

Mr. Walter Baker (Grenville-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, having regard to the expression used by the minister of wanting to "disclosure completely" to the House of Commons, I would call the minister's attention to the question asked by my colleague from Halton-Wentworth of the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. In referring to the letter which is referred to in notice of motion No. 118 on the order paper, which is the copy of the letter dated September, 1975 from Dr. O. J. C. Runnalls to Gulf Minerals Canada Limited, his colleague, a minister of the Crown, asked the hon. member to table his letter, which of course he cannot do. However, that letter is in the custody of the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. Following the desire of the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs to have the letter tabled, would the minister make arrangements forthwith to table the letter referred to in motion No. 118 on the order paper?

Hon. Alastair Gillespie (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I will be very pleased to look at it this afternoon to determine, first of all, whether that letter exists. Perhaps the hon. member would like to send me a copy so that I can determine to what it is that he is referring.

VETERANS AFFAIRS

REQUEST FOR INCREASE IN DISABILITY PENSION—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Jack Marshall (Humber-St. George's-St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Veterans Affairs and I hope we can make more headway with him. The minister is aware of the discrepancy in the basic rate of pension under the Pension Act whereby disability pensioners are falling behind their counterparts in the public service classifications, resulting in loss of income to veterans of $536 annually. Can the minister now take this serious matter out of the "serious consideration" stage, show some action and give an indication whether or not he has been able to convince his cabinet colleagues that the legislation should be amended immediately to overcome this very serious discrepancy?

Hon. Daniel J. MacDonald (Minister of Veterans Affairs): Mr. Speaker, as the hon. member knows, this matter is under study by my department and we are aware of the discrepancy.

It will be brought before the government and I hope to have something to convey to the hon. member at a later date.

COMPENSATION FOR PRISONERS OF WAR—REQUEST FOR CHANGES

Mr. Jack Marshall (Humber-St. George's-St. Barbe): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Turning to another glaring discrepancy having to do with the prisoners of war compensation act, the minister is well aware that there was an exclusion of first world war veterans who served as prisoners of war and escapees and evaders. These too were being discriminated against. In view of the fact that we have recalled parliament and the minister knows that we can get such an amendment to the act through in a couple of hours, would the minister prevail upon his House leader and bring these amendments in so that we can put them through and overcome these serious inequities which the government fail to realize?

Hon. Daniel J. MacDonald (Minister of Veterans Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the hon. member's question. We are also very ardently studying this and I expect to have something to offer before too long.

AIR TRANSPORT

INQUIRY WHETHER AIR SERVICES WILL BE REDUCED AT ÎLES-DE-LA-MADELEINE

Mr. Albert Béchard (Bonaventure-Îles-de-la-Madeleine): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport. Can the minister tell the House whether the policy of his department, specially with regard to subsidies, is inflexible to the point where they must be curtailed drastically in eastern Canada, particularly in isolated areas such as the Magdalen Islands which are not linked with the rest of the country for a considerable part of the year?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, our policy attempts to look at all the needs of particular areas, but of course does so with very serious concern about the long-term financial implications.

TRANSPORT

PRAIRIE RAIL AUTHORITY—SUGGESTION DATE OF ESTABLISHMENT BE MOVED FORWARD

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina-Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have two questions for the Minister of Transport. In view of the welcome commitment that he gave to the western transport ministers to establish a prairie rail authority, and in view of the desire of those ministers and provinces that the Minister of Transport speed up the time frame, would the minister consider, upon securing the approval of his colleagues, moving the date for establishing a prairie rail authority forward from the fall of 1978 to the fall of 1977?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): First of all, Mr. Speaker, the hon. member is perhaps being misled by one of his party from Saskatchewan who interpreted a statement of mine in my presence quite wrongly, and I immediately corrected him but obviously he persists in it. Our commitment was to give consideration to this whole issue. At this moment in time a great number of people in the west are very pleased with the formation of the prairie rail action committee and the deliberations we will have in connection with the problems, possibilities and powers of a prairie rail authority. I do not see those matters being solved so soon as the fall of this year, but certainly my objective is to have them solved as quickly as possible and then legislation will follow.

PROPOSED PLACING OF ORDERS FOR MATERIAL TO IMPROVE RAILWAY LINES

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina-Lake Centre): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Regardless of whether the prairie rail authority is established this year, next year or not at all, whatever are the duties of the prairie rail action committees, in light of the fact that the minister and I and everybody else know that many hundred, in fact a few thousand, miles of railway track need to be rehabilitated and upgraded, would he in the meantime call upon the railroads and arrange whatever loans or capital funding is necessary to place orders for the manufacture of several hundred miles of steel rail and many millions of railway ties so as to deal with serious unemployment in the lumbering and steel industries, particularly in Cape Breton, and to start stocking materials which will be necessary a year or two down the road in rehabilitating those rail lines?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I presume the hon. member has noticed that this government has committed $100 million in the next year and a half or two construction seasons toward the rehabilitation program. This will indeed involve the construction of certain equipment like ballast cars and others and a good number of ties will be involved. It may not involve a great amount of rail in this particular program so much as the replacement and moving of rail from some sections to others. Development of this work has been going forward very well and we are right at the point of being able to see it beginning now, the agreements with the railways having come to a fairly final state by this point.

SEARCH AND RESCUE

REMOVAL OF WORD "RESCUE" FROM FUSELAGE OF AIRCRAFT

Hon. Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of National Defence. Would the minister look into and report to me, in the event that the House is not sitting tomorrow or the next day, regarding the order issued last week whereby the word "rescue" is being removed from the fuselage of aircraft of the search and rescue squadrons and being replaced by a new coloured configuration. The reason presumably is that a French equivalent cannot be painted on the side of the aircraft in characters large enough and of the same size so they can be seen as heretofore, although the word "rescue" has been an international symbol for 20 or 25 years, perhaps longer.

Hon. Barney Danson (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I became aware of this situation a short time ago and I am looking into it. I understand the problem, and my colleagues and I think that we have found a quite appropriate French equivalent. I will be reporting back to the hon. member in due course.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. If the minister is at all worried about the international use of the English word "rescue", which is recognized the world over, perhaps he would look at the derivation of the word "Mayday", which has its origin in the French "M'aider". Therefore, one would be the equivalent of the other.

ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE

POWER OF PROVINCIAL CRIME INQUIRIES TO ISSUE SUBPOENAES VALID OUTSIDE PROVINCE—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Allan Lawrence (Northumberland-Durham): Mr. Speaker, may I direct my question to the Minister of Justice. It relates to the very admirable report filed some time ago by the Quebec crime inquiry which has as one of its most critical and important recommendations a request for federal legislation to enable provincial crime inquiries to issue subpoenaes which would be valid in provinces outside of the province of the royal commission. Are the minister and the government giving some consideration to the recommendation and if not, why not. If so, what is the decision of the government and of the minister?

● (1500)

Hon. Ron Basford (Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, the final report of the commission is being studied by my officials. I should like to note that when the final report came out, one of its principal recommendations was the immediate passage by parliament of the wiretap provisions in Bill C-51.

With regard to the extraprovincial subpoena power, we are considering that. We have made no decision. It could be accomplished in two ways, either at the federal level or by provincial agreement. I am examining further amendments to the Criminal Code for the coming session of parliament, and that will be one of the matters I will be considering.

POSSIBILITY OF EXTRADITING JOHN DOYLE AND HUBERT DUCHARME

Mr. Allan Lawrence (Northumberland-Durham): Mr. Speaker, another recommendation of that crime commission was that the federal authorities intensify their efforts to bring businessman John C. Doyle, well known to the minister and his party, and Hubert Ducharme before the courts to testify about storefront cases, even if this involved extradition. My question to the minister is along the same lines. What is he doing about that recommendation from the royal commission?

Hon. Ron Basford (Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, in terms of the federal court proceedings, they are in the nature of actions by the Department of National Revenue relating to assessments for income tax. They are being processed and proceeded with through the courts as expeditiously as possible.

With regard to extradition, it is believed that Mr. Doyle is currently in Panama. He is currently charged under the Criminal Code by the Attorney General of Newfoundland. There has been no request for his extradition made by the attorney general. I have discussed that with him and on the advice of his counsel he has not requested extradition on the basis that it is a very old treaty that we have with Panama and the prospects of any extradition hearing being successful are very slim indeed.

INCOME TAX

SUGGESTED SCRUTINY OF INCOMES OF WILLIE OBRUNT, MITCHELL BRONFMAN AND SOLLY LEVINE

Mr. Allan Lawrence (Northumberland-Durham): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is for the Minister of National Revenue. It is in respect of the report of the Quebec Crime Commission which recommended that the revenue departments of both the province of Quebec and the federal government once again scrutinize the incomes of prominent witnesses, such as Mr. Willie Obrunt, businessman Mitchell Bronfman and businessman Solly Levine. Are the minister and the government giving consideration to that request?

Hon. Monique Bégin (Minister of National Revenue): Mr. Speaker, we did not wait for the newspaper clippings to do our work. I would like to confirm to the House that the Department of National Revenue monitored the findings of the commission during its hearings and copies of the transcripts of all testimonies were immediately received by my officials and action was taken. However, I am in no position, because of the confidentiality clause of the Income Tax Act, to refer to any particular cases.

Mr. Baldwin: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Without prolonging the question period, I should like to point out that the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources left quite unclear in my mind, and in the minds of other hon. members, whether or not it was his intention to give consent to the release of the document referred to by my friend from Grenville-Carleton. As it might be the last day of the session, and as this party might have to consider taking proceedings with regard to the alleged illegality under the Combines Investigation Act, I should like to know the position of the minister. Will we have his consent under order in council with respect to the particular document in question and other documents which are in our possession, to leave us free to take the criminal proceedings which we may be advised to do upon consultation with our counsel?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member seeks clarification by way of a point of order. It is a rather important and far-reaching point. It seems to me to be a direct extension of the question period. However, the minister may want to give a brief clarification.

Mr. Gillespie: Mr. Speaker, as to the legal implications of the hon. member's question, I want to seek advice from the law officers of the Crown. As to the precise question that was put to me by the hon. gentleman opposite, I would like to discuss with him precisely what he has in mind. Perhaps he and I might get together. We might be able to determine whether or not this particular piece of paper or document to which he has alluded might be made public.

AIR TRAFFIC CONTROL SERVICES CONTINUATION ACT

AIR TRAFFIC CONTROLLERS—MEASURE TO END STRIKE

Hon. John C. Munro (Minister of Labour) moved for leave to introduce Bill C-63, to provide for the continuation of air traffic control services.

Motion agreed to and bill read the first time.

Mr. Speaker: Perhaps hon. members will understand that we can now commence to distribute copies of the bill.

When shall the bill be read the second time? By leave, now?

Mr. Peters: Mr. Speaker, this bill has just been presented. It is a serious bill. Although some of the contents of the bill are known, I suggest that we be given half an hour to examine it before the second reading debate commences.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I take it the suggestion is that second reading of the bill should be commenced later this day at a time to be agreed upon.

Mr. MacEachen: I rise on that point of order, Mr. Speaker. I understand there is agreement to giving the bill second reading. It would be agreeable to this side of the House to delay calling second reading of the bill for half an hour, as has been suggested by the hon. member. In the meantime, it would be my wish to call the two items standing under government notices of motions.

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): That would be agreeable to us. It is not our wish in any way to delay action with respect to the bill just introduced dealing with air traffic controllers.

Mr. Speaker: Is there agreement to commencing second reading of the air traffic controllers bill at 3.45 this afternoon, and that in the interim the House should turn to other business as suggested by the President of the Privy Council?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

PRIME MINISTER'S OFFICIAL RESIDENCE—BUDGET SINCE 1968

Question No. 3—Mr. Cossitt:

In each year since April 20, 1968, has a budget been set at the beginning of the year for renovations, alterations, construction, etc. along with purchases of new contents including antiques at the Prime Minister's official residence, 24 Sussex Drive, and (a) if so (i) what was the budget that was set (ii) what was the actual amount spent (b) if not, for what reasons?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): See reply to Question No. 6 answered this day.

ITEMS OF CANADIANA AT THE PRIME MINISTER'S RESIDENCE

Question No. 5—Mr. Cossitt:

With reference to the answer to Question No. 3,070 of the First Session of the 30th Parliament, what is a complete list of all items of Canadiana at the Prime Minister's residence, irrespective of date of purchase, and what is the estimated value in each case?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): See reply to Question No. 6 answered this day.

OFFICIAL RESIDENCE OF PRIME MINISTER

Question No. 6—Mr. Cossitt:

With reference to the answer to Question No. 2,792 of the First Session of the 30th Parliament which stated in part that "for practical reasons there must be some limit as to the detail provided in answer to questions relating to expenditures", what is a complete list and the cost, in each case, of all items over $100 in value purchased for the Prime Minister's official residence at 24 Sussex Drive during 1973-74 under the heading "supplies" totalling $89,196.53?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Since the beginning of the current session, many questions related to the Prime Minister's official residences have been placed on the Order Paper. It seems therefore appropriate to place at this time on the official record of the House of Commons some notes on measures taken by successive Parliaments to provide official residences to the holder of the office of Prime Minister of Canada. The decision of the Government of Canada to make arrangements for an official residence for Canada's Prime Minister goes back to 1949, when it was announced in the House of Commons on September 30, by the Right Hon. C. D. Howe, Minister of Trade and Commerce. In his statement, Mr. Howe, after mentioning that Canada was one of the few countries that did not have an official residence for its Prime Minister, referred to "the difficulty of a Prime Minister, coming to Ottawa for an uncertain tenure, in obtaining the type of house suitable to the high office he holds". The Government had therefore decided to ask Parliament to make it possible to renovate the Edwards property (now known as 24 Sussex Drive) by making provision for the cost of alterations, repairs and future maintenance, and that if there was no serious opposition to this program, the House would be asked, in the estimates for 1950, to provide the necessary funds for that purpose. Mr. George A. Drew, Leader of the Opposition, supported the Government's decision in the following terms: ". . . I feel sure the decision is one which will meet with the general approval of the members of this house and of citizens in every part of Canada. Members of parliament know—it may not be known generally throughout the rest of the country—the extent to which the Prime Minister of Canada is called upon to receive official visitors. Certain duties which are essential to that high office should be a part of the responsibility of the state. I am not in a position to give any opinion as to the particular residence mentioned. I wish to express our satisfaction that the Prime Minister will have the opportunity of carrying on his official duties and receiving official visitors in a manner more in keeping with Canada's present position in world affairs. . . It will assist the Prime Minister of Canada, not only in receiving those important visitors but in carrying out his own heavy personal duties, to have a permanent home, where, as the elected head of the government of Canada, he can discharge his reponsibilities in a manner that will be in keeping with the status of Canada in the world today".

The Parliamentary Leaders of both the Cooperative Commonwealth Federation and the Social Credit Party also expressed concurrence with the proposal. Mr. M. J. Coldwell said that he was glad that the Prime Minister was to be suitably housed, while Mr. Solon E. Low, after welcoming the announcement, added that the Government ". . . should consider also the question of furnishing adequate recompense for him by way of indemnity. The prime ministers of this country have been notoriously underpaid. Over the years they have been called upon to make sacrifices far beyond the measure of the services they have given to the country". It should be noted that prior to the announcement, a number of MP's among them the Member for Fort William, the Rev. Daniel McIvor, had suggested such a measure during the Address Debate. The following year, on June 7, 1950, the Government introduced the necessary legislation—"The Prime Minister's Residence Act"—which was passed the following day. The cost of renovation of the property, whether it might not have been more advisable to erect a new building, and other related matters, gave rise to debate. However, all parties supported the principle of the Bill. The consensus of the House can best be summarized by the following remarks of Mr. Coldwell. ". . . I think our country is doing the proper thing in conformity with what other countries have done in providing the first citizen of this country with a residence in which he may receive distinguished guests from at home and abroad".

Briefly, the Act provided that: (a) the Minister of Public Works would furnish, maintain heat and keep the building in repair: (b) the Federal District Commission would maintain the land and improve it as required; (c) the Governor in Council could appoint a steward or housekeeper and other employees deemed necessary for the management of the residence, and fix their rate of remuneration and conditions of employment; (d) the steward or housekeeper could from time to time engage casual employees to assist the regular staff; (e) the Prime Minister's chauffeur could be provided with lodging without charge; (f) moneys appropriated by Parliament for the operation of the residence could be used for the payment of the remuneration of the staff, for the purchase of food and other supplies required for the serving of food, for cleaning, laundering, and the ordinary maintenance of a residence and for defraying other costs of official hospitality provided by the Prime Minister; (g) the Prime Minister would pay to the Receiver General of Canada $5,000 yearly for food and lodging for himself and his family. The last provision was included at the personal insistence of the then Prime Minister, the Rt. Hon. Louis Stephen St. Laurent. Nine years after, on June 16, 1959, the Act was amended in order to bring within its scope the Harrington Lake (Lac Mousseau) Residence. Again as a result of a consensus among all parties the Bill went through all stages in one day. In his opening remarks, its sponsor, the Hon. Howard C. Green, Minister of Public Works, referred to a question which Mr. H. W. Herridge of the CCF had asked a few weeks earlier in the following terms: ". . . In view of the general concern that the historic and beautiful Harrington Lake residence and property be preserved and used to the best advantage, will the government recognize this concern and interest by the introduction of legislation that will establish this property as an official government country residence for use by the Prime Minister, his distinguished guests and other appropriate persons?".

After mentioning that he had replied that legislation could be introduced during the current session "should it be the wish generally of hon. members that such a course be followed", Mr. Green went on to say that this proviso had been added ". . . because legislation of this kind is not the type that any government wishes to introduce, and in particular that no prime minister wishes to have introduced, unless members are agreed that such steps should be taken. I remember the reaction of Right Hon. Mr. St. Laurent when the Prime Minister's Residence Act was introduced originally, and it was just the same as the reaction of the present Prime Minister to this proposed amendment. These men, in a position of great responsibility, think of themselves last. If it were not the wish of the house generally to have the amendment which I am moving today passed, the government would not, of course, proceed with the measure. May I hasten to add that the other members of the cabinet—and I am sure the members of the last cabinet—feel very keenly that this measure is appropriate and, as a matter of fact, is badly needed in order to help ease the burdens of whoever may happen to be the prime minister of this nation."

It will be recalled that nine years earlier, in 1950, a group of citizens representing all parties and residents in all of the provinces had purchased a property called Stornoway located in the village of Rockcliffe Park as an official residence for the Leader of the Official Opposition as they felt that the holder of that office should be provided with a residence consistent with the meaning and dignity of his position. These citizens, and others who were added over the years, maintained the property until 1971 when the government introduced a Bill entitled an "Act to amend the Prime Minister's Residence Act", which provided among others for the transfer of Stornoway to the government at no cost and its maintenance in the future out of public funds as an official residence for the Leader of the Official Opposition. As stated by the sponsor of the Bill, the Hon. Allan J. MacEachen, President of the Privy Council, the trustees, whose Chairman was the Hon. Grattan O'Leary, having carried the cost and care of the administration of the property for 20 years had concluded that its ownership and administration should justly pass into the hands of the Government and, as Senator O'Leary had put it, "become a part of the parliamentary structure". The Bill also proposed to give statutory recognition to the occupation on a rent-free basis by the Speaker of the House of Commons of the building and associated grounds known as The Farm and located at Kingsmere, Quebec. Finally, in keeping with the recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Parliamentary Salaries and Expenses (Beaupré Report) it provided that neither the Prime Minister nor the Leader of the Official Opposition should be required to pay rent for publicly owned residences provided for their official use. There was however a stipulation that the financial outlay of $5,000 then payable by the Prime Minister on his residence would continue at that rate until the day after the following general election. Again, there was a large degree of support in the House for the Bill. Referring to the provisions regarding Stornoway, the spokesman for the Official Opposition noted that it underlined "the importance of the man who is the number one critic of those in power, and the number one contender for succession when the people's will is expressed in another way" and that "of all the variations of the democratic parliamentary system, the one whereby the Leader of the Opposition is made, in fact, an official part of the system is a fine move". As to the changes involving the Prime Minister's residence his comments were that they were long overdue. The spokesman for the New Democratic Party concurred in this view that the Prime Minister should not be asked to contribute $5,000 annually recalling that it had originally been included at the personal insistence of Mr. St. Laurent: ". . .A case can certainly be made for our not requiring that, for if we are going to provide the Prime Minister with a residence in which he can live and in which he must be one of the nation's hosts, it does seem proper that we take care of the cost of it. . ." ". . . However, I am interested in the fact that the proposal to discontinue the requirement that this $5,000 a year be paid by the Prime Minister does not come into effect until the end of this parliament. It comes into effect on the day of the general election following dissolution of the 28th Parliament. No one knows who will be the occupant of that house at that point, but at any rate here is a clear case of deciding that a certain monetary benefit to one of the members of this House shall not accrue to him until after the next election".

The Bill received Royal Assent on June 10, 1971. During the 26 years that have elapsed since the passage of the original legislation, the House, through the normal process of scrutiny and approval of estimates and asking of oral and written questions, has carefully watched the spending of public expenditures for official residences and did not hesitate to question some of them whenever it deemed it necessary. A study of the Official Report of the House of Commons Debates for that period, which extends over a quarter of a century, shows on the other hand that successive governments have not hesitated to provide information in reply to inquiries from Members. See for instance, among others, replies to questions No. 804, 2,598 and 2,601 of the first session of the 29th Parliament and No. 45, 86, 87, 88, and 89 of the second session; and No. 1,351, 1,666, 1,667, 1,668, 1,669, 2,307, 2,523, 2,790, 2,793, 2,794, 3,236, 3,471 and 5,203 of the first session, 30th Parliament. For the convenience of the Standing Committee on Miscellaneous Estimates, a table was prepared in May of last year showing yearly expenditures for the official residences incurred since 1950 (Appendix "Q", issue No. 36. of the Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence of the Standing Committee on Miscellaneous Estimates). As to public expenditures for Stornoway and The Farm since passage in 1971 of the Official Residences Act, those of the Department of Public Works are as follows:

Fiscal Year	Speaker's Farm	Stornoway
1971-72	$ 2,571.64	$ 24,449.17
1972-73	23,671.91	48,328.96
1973-74	8,199.96	52,630.28
1974-75	8,464.53	25,051.46
1975-76	75,324.90	10,387.86
1976-77	23,000.00 (Est)	29,000.00 (Est)

As to the National Capital Commission the breakdown available is as follows:

Fiscal Year	Speaker's Farm	Stornoway
1973-74	$18,562	$ 9,555
1974-75	16,678	12,269
1975-76	22,500	17,318
1976-77	22,000 (Est)	17,000 (Est)

Should there be a general disposition within the parties represented in the House and within the public that the Official Residences Act should be repealed or substantially revised, then the Prime Minister would wish to consult with the Speaker and the Leader of the Official Opposition. If not, the Government proposes to answer current and future inquiries about the Prime Minister's official residences by reference to this statement and by suggesting that the Standing Committee on Miscellaneous Estimates be the proper forum for dealing with such questions.

COST OF FOOD AND DRINKS AT 24 SUSSEX DRIVE SINCE 1968

Question No. 7—Mr. Cossitt:

1. What has been the total cost to the taxpayer of all food and drink at 24 Sussex Drive from April 20, 1968 when the Prime Minister assumed office up to and including the last month for which figures are available?

2. Does the Prime Minister pay for any of the food or drink consumed by himself, members of his family or personal guests at 24 Sussex Drive and, if not (a) has he ever been officially advised of the practice in the United States concerning the payment for all food and drink consumed at the White House (b) how does he reconcile this with his statements on the subject of restraint and the necessity of cutting government expenditures?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): See reply to Question No. 6 tabled this day.

CONSULTANT CONTRACTS

Question No. 724—Mr. Coates:

1. Of the total number of persons who hold consultant contracts with the government, its agencies or Crown corporations, how many were candidates for the Liberal Party in either federal or provincial election campaigns in the past?

2. In each case, what is (a) their name (b) the amount of the contract (c) the period of time the contract has been in effect (d) the amount received to date in fees and expenses?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Requirements for awarding of contracts are merit, ability to conform to all requirements, costs and experience. Information on political affiliation and candidature for federal or provincial election are not criteria on which the contract is awarded.

RETENTION OF LAWYERS IN COUNTY OF GRENVILLE FROM 1974-76

Question No. 1,379—Mr. Dick:

For the year (a) 1974 (b) 1975 (c) 1976, what law firms and/or lawyers in the County of Grenville were (i) retained (ii) hired (iii) paid a fee for doing legal work on behalf of, or as agents for the government and, in each case, in what amount?

Hon. Ron Basford (Minister of Justice): In so far as the legal agents of the Minister of Justice are concerned: For the fiscal years 1973-74 and 1974-75, please see reply to Question 2,232, First Session, 30th Parliament, ordered July 18, 1975. For the fiscal year 1975-76, please see reply to Question 979, Second Session, 30th Parliament, ordered April 27, 1977. For the fiscal year 1976-77, from April 1, 1976 to December 16, 1976: Name: Tobin, R. M.—Amount: $1,706.49.

ASSISTANCE TO COMMUNITIES TO ASSIST IN YEAR ROUND SURFACE ACCESS

Question No. 1,646—Mr. Marshall:

Under the Transportation Policy "Access to and from remote areas" to assist communities that are without acceptable year round surface access, has the Government of Newfoundland submitted a proposal for funding under this programme and, if so, what is its status?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): The Province of Newfoundland has not submitted a proposal for funding of improvements in "Access to and from Remote Areas". Transport Canada will soon complete a tentative proposal for improvements in access to and from isolated communities for preliminary discussion with interested provinces through the medium of the Federal/Provincial Committees on Transportation.

ROADCRUISER SERVICE IN NEWFOUNDLAND

Question No. 1,810—Mr. Crosbie:

1. Did CNR increase the fares on the roadcruiser service in Newfoundland on or about June 28, 1976?

2. Did CNR file with the Board of Commissioners of Public Utilities of Newfoundland a single fare rate schedule and, if not, has CNR operated with increased bus fares that were not authorized by either the Board of Commissioners or by the Canadian Transport Commission?

3. Has legal advice been received by CNR or by the Department of Transport on the question of whether or not the increased bus fares were legal and valid and, if so, what is it?

4. Was the roadcruiser service in Newfoundland removed from the jurisdiction of the Board of Commissioners of Public Utilities by order of the Governor in Council and, if so, has CNR reduced the service in any way by eliminating certain bus runs or reducing the frequency of bus runs, or both and, if so, exactly what changes in service have occurred since July 13, 1976 and the end of January 1977?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): The Management of Canadian National Railways advises as follows: 1. Yes.

2 and 3. CNR informed the Board of Commissioners of Public Utilities of Newfoundland of its intention to implement such schedule. Previously that Board's issuance of a licence under the provincial Motor Carrier Act had been invalidated by the Supreme Court of Canada, and therefore no authorized fare basis then existed. CNR subsequently complied with the requirements of the Canadian Transport Commission, including submission of its fare structure, and was duly licensed to operate the roadcruiser service.

4. Yes the roadcruiser service in Newfoundland was removed from the jurisdiction of the Board of Commissioners of Public Utilities by order of the Governor in Council. Yes the Railway has reduced its service, making the following changes between July 13, 1976 and January 31, 1977: Effective October 31, 1976 Runs 517, 518 daily between St. John's and Cornerbrook were dropped from the Schedule. Runs 511 and 512 which formerly operated daily between Grand Falls and Port aux Basques were changed to operate between Cornerbrook and Port aux Basques. Runs 509 and 510 which operated between St. John's and Grand Falls were replaced by Runs 519 and 520 between St John's and Grand Falls. Run 519 operates on approximately the same time schedule as former Run 509. Run 520 operates on approximately the same schedule as discontinued Run 518 between these two points.

REPORT ON SITUATION IN BRITISH COLUMBIA PENITENTIARY

Question No. 1,944—Mr. O'Sullivan:

1. Was there a report prepared in May 1976 by former Warden Tom Ellis on the situation in the British Columbia Penitentiary with specific suggestions in regard to the prevention of further difficulties in the Penitentiary and, if so (a) has any official notice been taken of the report and of its recommendations and what form did this official notice take (b) has any action been taken on these recommendations and, if so (i) what specific action (ii) under whose authorization?

2. Would the government consider referrring the report to the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs which has a special subcommittee studying the problems in Penitentiaries?

Hon. Francis Fox (Solicitor General): 1. Yes. (a) Official notice was taken of the report and its recommendations at the Regional and National levels of administration. (b) Yes; (i) Specific action was taken as follows: (A) The Team Concept was re-introduced and is now in operation; (B) Management is now holding regular meetings for all staff; (C) Institutional Standing Orders have been up-dated and published in sufficient numbers to meet staff requirements; (D) Commissioner's Directives and Divisional Instructions are being up-dated in keeping with institutional and staff requirements; (E) Institutional Contingency Plans have been up-dated and will be further revised to accommodate Team Concept Principles; (F) Some progress has been made in relieving supervisors of duties that can be performed by clerical staff. A further study of the total problem in this area is in progress; (G) Various supervisory courses have been developed and conducted at the local staff college emphasizing the supervisor's duties and responsibilities as spelled out in the Team Concept; (H) An effort to conduct refresher courses has been made with only limited success, due in large part to the lack of facilities and the availability of staff on a regularly scheduled basis; (I) A new Staff Training Officer is developing an organized approach to on-the-job-training. More progress is anticipated with the introduction of the Team Concept; and (J) The management of the institution is stressing the importance of adhering to the approved chain of command. (ii) The Commissioner and the Regional Director (Pacific Region) of the Penitentiary Service.

2. The recommendations contained in the report have been forwarded to the Chairman of the Sub-Committee on Penitentiaries of the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs.

JACQUES CARTIER TERMINAL, MONTREAL HARBOUR, AND PIER 55, QUEBEC HARBOUR

Question No. 2,295—Mr. Forrestall:

1. What is the government's best estimate of (a) tonnage to be handled at the Jacques Cartier Pier during each of the first three years of operation (b) total revenue to be obtained from the Pier by the NHB during the same years (c) return on investment or loss during the same years when all costs including interest and depreciation are considered?

2. What is the government's best estimate of (a) tonnage (b) revenue resulting from Pier 55 in Quebec City during the first three years of operation (c) return on investment or loss during the same years after all costs including depreciation and interest are considered?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): The National Harbours Board advises as follows: 1. The National Harbours Board is presently reviewing its forecast of container traffic for a possible public terminal in Montreal and reassessing the choice of the Jacques Cartier Terminal versus other possible sites within the Port of Montreal due to the following circumstances: (i) The decision to proceed with Jacques Cartier Terminal was approved by Treasury Board in June 1974. Since that time, container traffic patterns on the Atlantic Coast and in Montreal have changed due to various factors. (ii) Selection of a particular site and the existence of competing facilities within a port can influence the traffic patterns at a specific location.

2. National Harbours Board estimates (a) 3.2 million (b) $1.86 million (c) Return on investment of 11.7 per cent is projected over a twenty-year period although losses are expected during the initial three-year period.

NATIONAL HARBOURS BOARD BUDGET FOR HALIFAX

Question No. 2,296—Mr. Forrestall:

1. Did the National Harbours Board remove $10 million from the NHB budget for Halifax as proposed by the Halifax Port Authority for the commencement of construction of a container pier at Fairview Cove and, if so, what criteria were used to reach this decision?

2. Did Dr. S. Weyman agree with the removal of the $10 million?

3. In the best estimate of the government, what is the earliest practical completion date for a (a) one (b) two berth container facility at Fairview Cove?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): The National Harbours Board advises as follows: 1. The 1977 capital budget submitted by the Port of Halifax was amended by the National Harbours Board by deferring an amount of $10 million representing part of the construction costs of a container terminal at Fairview Cove. The amount was deferred for the following reasons: (a) Construction would not start during the year; (b) No agreement had been reached with the Province of Nova Scotia; (c) The program had not been approved by Treasury Board; (d) Limited availability of loan funds due to budgetary constraints; (e) The Port of Halifax did not have any reserve funds.

2. Dr. S. H. Weyman is a member of the National Harbours Board and the results of individual votes on Board matters are not made public.

3. (a) The earliest possible completion date would be two and a half years after commencement of construction. (b) A two-berth facility could be completed in approximately three years after the start of construction.

REVENUE ACCRUING TO NATIONAL HARBOURS BOARD AT SAINT JOHN, HALIFAX, MONTREAL, QUEBEC AND TROIS-RIVIÈRES

Question No. 2,297—Mr. Forrestall:

1. What was the total revenue accruing to the National Harbours Board at (a) Saint John (b) Halifax (c) Montreal (d) Quebec City (e) Trois-Rivières in (i) 1970 (ii) 1971 (iii) 1972 (iv) 1973 (v) 1974 (vi) 1975 (vii) 1976, exclusive of revenues from the operation of bridges or grain elevators?

2. What volume of general cargo, containerized and non containerized, was shipped over the ports during the same years?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): The National Harbours Board advises as follows: 1.

CNR TOTAL REVENUE BY PROVINCE DURING PAST FISCAL YEAR

Question No. 2,328—Mr. Lambert (Bellechasse):

During CNR's past fiscal year, by province, what was (a) the revenue (i) from the transportation of passengers (ii) from the transportation of goods (iii) in total (b) the expenditures for the transportation of (i) passengers (ii) goods?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): The Management of Canadian National Railways advises as follows: Since the company does not maintain its records by provinces the information is not available in the form asked.

PORT PROMOTION

Question No. 2,352—Mr. Forrestall:

1. What amount was spent on port promotion (including salaries, travel, studies, receptions and advertising) during 1976 by the National Harbours Board and local port authorities at (a) Halifax (b) Saint John (c) Montreal?

2. Who are the current members of the (a) Port of Montreal Authority (b) Port of Saint John Authority (c) Port of Halifax Authority and, on what date was each last appointed/reappointed and for what term?

3. Does an executive council exist at each Port and, if so, on what date was it appointed and who are the members?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): The National Harbours Board advises as follows: 1. (a) $64,647; (b) $24,000; (c) $121,453.

2. (a) Roger O. Beauchemin; Aimé Désautels; Louis R. Desmarais; Yvon Lamarre; Jean-Marc St. Onge; Régis Trudeau; Richard Strauss; Ian C. Campbell; Joachim Carton; Arnold E. Masters: C. Pathy; J. L. Howard; P. C. Fralic. All members were reappointed for the period April 1 to December 31, 1977 or until establishment of a Port Commission if before that date.

3. An Executive Committee of the respective Port Authority was established as follows: Port of Montreal effective February 1, 1975: Roger O. Beauchemin; Ian C. Campbell. Port of Saint John effective May 19, 1977: F. Gerald Elkin; A. David Case; Cecil E. Brownell; Philip W. Oland; T. C. Frink. Port of Halifax effective April 14, 1977: Gerald E. Simmons; F. M. Weston; F. H. Howard.

DESTINATION OF CARGO AT PORTS OF MONTREAL, SAINT JOHN AND HALIFAX

Question No. 2,353—Mr. Forrestall:

For each year 1970 to 1976, what was the number of tons of general cargo loaded and unloaded at the Port of (a) Montreal (b) Saint John (c) Halifax destined for (i) Grenada (ii) St. Vincent (iii) St. Lucia (iv) Dominica (v) Antigua (vi) St. Kitts?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): The National Harbours Board advises as follows: The information requested is not readily available, and it would take an inordinate amount of clerical time and cost to search for and obtain this information.

LEASES FOR FARM LAND ON FEDERAL AIRPORT PROPERTY

Question No. 2,374—Mr. Schellenberger:

1. What practices or policies are followed when permits or leases are granted for farm land on federal airport property?

2. Will the government consider restricting such leases to bona fide farmers who can meet certain standards such as machinery availability, nearness to locale and good farm management practices?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): 1. Agricultural land not required for current use is made available to the public by the public tender process.

2. No. The public tender process is considered to be the fairest way to make use of such land to its fullest potential. Therefore it would not be in the government's interest to limit the opportunity of a tender to any specific group or party.

CANADIAN BROADCASTING CORPORATION COVERAGE OF THE QUEBEC PROVINCIAL ELECTION

Question No. 2,406—Mr. Roy:

On the occasion of the Quebec provincial elections, on November 15, 1976, did the CBC invite people to attend, in its studios, the special election coverage and, if so (a) how many (b) on what basis were they selected (c) what were the travel and miscellaneous expenses incurred for the broadcast (d) what was the aim of this initiative?

Hon. John Roberts (Secretary of State): I am informed by the CBC as follows: Yes. (a) The CBC invited 80 persons to this programme but in fact only 73 came to the studios and participated in the election night coverage. (b) The CBC wanted the group chosen to be representative of the population, covering a wide range of persons according to age, sex, type of occupation, geographical distribution and, of course, interest in the political and social life of the community. In view of the size of the Montreal and Quebec regions, the CBC gave the task of choosing the guests for Montreal and the Eastern Townships to its Research Department, which used the services of an information gathering agency, l'Institut national de cueillette de l'information. At Quebec City, the job was done by a group specializing in this type of research. For the other regions of Quebec, the CBC asked its basis stations at Ottawa, Matane and Chicoutimi, as well as its affiliates at Rouyn, Trois-Rivières and Rivière-du-Loup to choose persons capable of reacting spontaneously, who met the above criteria as far as possible. (c) It has not been customary to require the CBC to supply such details of its internal management and administration as fees paid and expenses incurred to prepare its programs. The background to this custom is explained in detail in the reply to question No. 2,530, May 22, 1975. (d) The aim was to obtain public participation in the election coverage. Comments, often spontaneous, were obtained from this group as the results were announced. Those responsible for this program had previously seen an even larger operation of the same type on German TV, and the CBC thought it would be a good thing to have comments from members of the public themselves who were free to react as they pleased to the election results.

FEDERAL MONETARY POLICIES IN QUEBEC AND THE ATLANTIC PROVINCES

Question No. 2,412—Mr. Howie:

Is the government taking any new initiatives to ease the government's restrictive monetary policies in Quebec and the Atlantic Provinces and, if necessary, to reverse them in slow growth areas in Eastern Canada where tight money has an instant, lasting and disastrous effect?

Mr. Bob Kaplan (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance): The government does not have a restrictive monetary policy at the present time. Monetary policy is directed at achieving moderate growth consistent with continued progress in reducing the rate of inflation. As the rate of inflation has moderated, it has become possible to lower the bank rate, on four separate occasions since last November, to 7½ per cent where it now stands. These downward adjustments to the bank rate were necessary to push the growth of the money supply up towards the 8 to 12 per cent target range specified by the Governor of the Bank of Canada. In times of restrictive monetary policy, when money for loans is scarce, the Governor of the Bank of Canada has used moral suasion to encourage the chartered banks to have a special regard for the credit needs of the slower growth areas of the country. Nevertheless, it is difficult to differentiate the stance of monetary policy in Quebec and the Atlantic Provinces from that in the rest of Canada. The Bank of Canada must operate in capital markets that are national in scope. If the Bank were to inject funds into Quebec and the Atlantic Provinces to lower interest rates in these regions, private funds would flow out of these regions seeking the higher interest rates in the rest of Canada. The outflow would continue until interest rates were comparable across Canada. Thus, the initial stimulus would be spread throughout the country and not retained in Quebec and the Atlantic Provinces where it was initially injected. Fiscal policy can be regionally differentiated much more satisfactorily than monetary policy. It has long been the practice of the government to distribute a significant portion of government expenditure on a basis which is favourable to higher than average unemployment areas. Some current examples of the government's use of regional differentiation of fiscal policy appear in our treatment of the investment tax credit and direct job creation in the March 31 Budget. The investment tax credit has been increased from 5 per cent to 10 per cent in the Atlantic Provinces, the Gaspé area and the Magdalen Islands; and to 7½ per cent in areas designated under the Regional Development Incentives Act in Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Northern Ontario and Quebec (other than the Gaspé Region). Of the $1.2 billion the government plans to spend on manpower programs in 1977-78, $458 million is committed to the direct employment strategy. As was stated in the last Budget, this strategy, which includes the Canada Works, Young Canada Works, and Local Initiatives Programs among others, is designed to have a greater impact in the higher unemployment areas of Canada. In addition to these two specific initiatives must be added the ongoing activities of the Departments of Regional Economic Expansion and of Industry, Trade and Commerce aimed toward improving the economic performance of regions experiencing comparatively high unemployment.

ORDER PAPER QUESTION NO. 3

Question No. 2,450—Mr. Cossitt:

Is the Prime Minister aware that Question No. 3, requesting information on budgeting at the Prime Minister's official residence, remains unanswered and will the Prime Minister take steps to expedite the answer and (a) if so, on what date can an answer be expected (b) if not, for what reason?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): The government takes responsibility for the answers it provides to questions and for the process involved in replying to such questions. It is not appropriate therefore to provide information about internal administrative arrangements.

MANIFESTATIONS OF FRANCOPHONES IN ANGLOPHONE COMMUNITIES FOR SEPARATE FRENCH SCHOOLS

Question No. 2,759—Mr. Jones:

1. Have any employees of the Department of the Secretary of State ever encouraged francophones in anglophone communities to agitate for separate French schools and, if so, what are the reasons and full details?

2. In each year 1970 to 1976, how many francophones have taken over positions in the Public Service formerly held by unilingual anglophones?

3. What effect has the government's implementation of bilingualism had on non-French speaking graduates to find employment in federal, provincial, municipal and business in Canada and, in particular, what effect have brochures distributed by the government had on employment opportunities for non-francophones?

Hon. John Roberts (Secretary of State): In so far as the Department of the Secretary of State is concerned: 1. No.

2. To be answered elsewhere.

3. The Secretary of State has not gathered data on these subjects and is, therefore, not in a position to answer this question.

In so far as the Public Service Commission is concerned: 1. To be answered elsewhere.

2. The information requested is not available from the records of the Public Service Commission.

3. To be answered elsewhere.

CBC FRENCH LANGUAGE TRANSMITTER AT PETERBOROUGH, ONTARIO

Question No. 2,769—Mr. Matte:

1. Did CBC construct a French language transmitter at/or near Peterborough, Ontario and, if so (a) is the station channel 44 (UHF) (b) what is the broadcasting power of channel 44 (c) on what date did construction commence and finish on the project (d) what was the approximate cost of construction (e) on what dates did broadcasting commence (f) what is the estimated radius that the broadcast signal will carry (g) is it possible for the signal of the transmitter to interfere with the broadcasting clarity of channel 29 Buffalo (UHF) and, if not, for what reason is that broadcasting signal interfered with?

2. Does CBC possess data, or has it or anyone acting on its behalf furnished surveyed figures showing (a) what the English/French population ratio is in the Peterborough channel 44 broadcasting area (b) what percentage of the population, whose mother tongue is French, speak (i) French (ii) English as their daily language?

3. What are the reasons justifying the establishment of a French television station at the expense of the taxpayer in a predominently English-speaking area?

4. Will the government discontinue other such projects in view of its announcement in the Throne Speech that certain bilingual costs be reduced?

5. Will channel 44, Peterborough cease transmitting and, if so, on what date?

6. What is the mailing address of channel 44, Peterborough?

Hon. John Roberts (Secretary of State): In so far as the Department of the Secretary of State is concerned: 1 to 3. To be answered elsewhere.

4. No.

5 to 6. To be answered elsewhere.

In so far as the CBC is concerned: 1. Yes, on the Simpson Hill Road between Cobourg and Peterborough. (a) Yes. (b) 4 kw from the transmitter. (c) Commenced approximately June 1976, completed approximately March 1977. (d) $835,000. (e) May 1, 1977. (f) The Grade "B" contour extends to a 28-mile radius. LETTER DATED JUNE 15, 1971 FROM THE SOLICITOR GENERAL AT THAT TIME

Question No. 2,878—Mr. Cossitt:

1. Was the name of Maureen O'Nell, Walter Rudnicki, Joe MacDonald, Keith Carruthers, Marvin Lipman, Farrell Toombs, Sue Findlay, Peter Chesson, Terry Sulyma, Alison Black, Missy (Mary) Powell, Daphne Kelgard, Dave Crenna, Tom Phillbrook, Robert Rabinovitch, Hugh Armstrong, Pat Armstrong, David Hunter, Ken McKay, David MacGregor and Sharon Vance attached to a letter dated June 15, 1971 from the Solicitor General at that time, the hon. member for Dollard and, if so, for what reason?

2. Did the letter refer to "the concept of Extra Parliamentary Opposition" and that concerning such persons "their activities be watched with more than normal care"?

3. Which of the persons mentioned in Part 1 are (a) in the government's employ and, in each case (i) in which department (ii) at what salary (iii) what is his/her job designation (b) no longer in the government's employ and, in each case (i) on what date did he/she leave (ii) was he/she dismissed and, if so, for what reason (iii) did he/she leave voluntarily?

Hon. Francis Fox (Solicitor General): The matter to which the hon. member refers involves an exchange of private and classified correspondence between one Queen's Privy Councillor and several of his colleagues. As the hon. member will be aware, absolute privilege attaches to such correspondence when production is sought in legal proceedings. This is so by reason of subsection 41(2) of the Federal Court Act. Not to allow such privilege, except with the terms of archival production, would immediately render open all correspondence between Queen's Privy Councillors of this and previous governments. It has long been recognized that such a development is not in the public interest. In thus following both the law and tradition the Ministry of the Solicitor General is not prepared to comment further on either the nature or substance of the correspondence referred to.

QUESTIONS PASSED AS ORDERS FOR RETURNS

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, if questions Nos. 6 and 1,338 could be made orders for return, these returns would be tabled immediately. Once again, the reason is the lengthy nature of the answer in each case.

Mr. Cossitt: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. It has to do with question No. 6 which the parliamentary secretary has requested be tabled rather than answered in the usual way so that it would appear in Hansard. This question has been on the order paper for at least seven or eight months; I am not sure of the exact time.

The question concerns the admission by the government that in a specific year it bought $89,000 worth of what were called supplies for the residence of the Prime Minister at 24 Sussex Drive. In my question I asked if we could have a list of those supplies valued at over $100, because I realize that no one wants to read small incidentals. The parliamentary secretary has said that the answer is lengthy. I do not doubt that it is, because in the past the Prime Minister has purchased a great many things. I expect the answer to be lengthy. But if $89,000 was spent on supplies only, I think the Canadian people have a right to know what they were. The answer should be inserted in Hansard in the usual way. If the answer is tabled, it becomes public only if someone takes the trouble to obtain a copy from the Privy Council office, which usually is not very likely.

I think the excuse that the answer is long is invalid in this case, because I think the Canadian people have a right to know what the $89,000 was for. Would the parliamentary secretary consider having this question answered in the usual way, or would he consider having it inserted as an appendix to Hansard?

Mr. Goodale: Mr. Speaker, answering such a question by tabling it is the usual way. If hon. members examine the record of proceedings in this session to see how orders for returns have been handled, I think they will find there has not in any way been any abuse of that method of answering questions. I invite hon. members to examine the record in this regard. In each case the reason for answering in that fashion has been the long and complicated nature of the answer.

In no way is there an attempt to hide or conceal information or to make that information relatively unavailable. As Your Honour knows, and as the hon. member for Leeds knows, such lengthy answers are tabled in the House. They are public documents, and at the proper time the House can debate such matters along with the estimates.

Mr. Cossitt: Would the Prime Minister agree to having this question answered in the usual way, rather than having it tabled?

Mr. Trudeau: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I would agree to that, without saying whether it is the usual way. If the hon. member would like the answer in Hansard, I would like it there, and I hope it will be on the front page of every newspaper in the land.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. It has been requested that questions Nos. 6 and 1,388 be deemed to have been made orders for returns. That agreement is not forthcoming with respect to question No. 6. Is it the pleasure of the House that question No. 1,388 be deemed to be made an order for return, with the return being tabled forthwith?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Speaker: It is so ordered.

OFFICIAL TRIPS MADE BY OFFICIALS OF STATISTICS CANADA

Question No. 1,388—Mr. MacKay:

1. (a) What official trips outside Canada were made by officials of Statistics Canada since April 1, 1972 (b) in each case, what was the name, rank and salary range of the official (c) in each case, what were the departure and return dates (d) in each case, what cities were visited and what was the purpose of each trip (e) in each case, what was the cost to the federal treasury (f) did any of the officials involved claim any annual leave with pay for days immediately preceding and/or immediately following such trips outside Canada and, if so, in each case, (i) what were the names of the officials (ii) what were the official trips involved (date of departure from Canada and destination (iii) how many days of annual leave with pay were claimed (iv) was the official involved accompanied by any relative and, if so, what was the relationship?

2. (a) What are the names, ranks and salary ranges of officials of Statistics Canada who since April 1, 1968 obtained educational leave (b) in each case, what were the dates of authorization, durations of such leaves, purposes of such leaves, the subject matters and the levels of study, the cost to the federal treasury?

3. (a) What are the names, ranks and salary ranges of officials of Statistics Canada who were chosen for the Career Assignment Program (CAP) since the inception of this programme (b) in each case, what were the dates of authorization and what is the present employment status (name of agency, salary range, rank) of each person involved?

4. How many employees of Statistics Canada filed statements concerning potential conflict of interest, during the months of June and July, 1974?

Return tabled.

[English]

Mr. Cossitt: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege. Just a moment ago the Prime Minister agreed that this answer should be inserted in Hansard. Would Your Honour clarify this, for the benefit of the House and for my own benefit? Are we now proceeding to put this answer into Hansard?

Mr. Speaker: A request has been made that the question be answered in the usual way. A request has been made by the parliamentary secretary that it be treated as an order for return. At the moment, agreement to do that is not forthcoming. Therefore, I refer hon. members to Standing Order 39(5). In the final analysis, the Chair must exercise some opinion with respect to the length of the answer and with respect to whether it is feasible to print it and make it part of Hansard. I have not seen the reply and I am not able to exercise any opinion in that regard. Therefore, perhaps I will be given time to examine it and at a later date decide whether to proceed in this way or not. Shall the remaining questions be allowed to stand?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

FINANCE

CANNED TOMATO SURTAX ORDER

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (Minister of Finance) moved:

That this House approves the Canned Tomato Surtax Order made by order in council P.C. 1977-335 dated 10th February, 1977, until the 30th day of June, 1978.

He said: Mr. Speaker, there have been some discussions with the representatives of the parties and with the hon. member for Moncton, and I understand there is general agreement that it would be in the national interest to pass this motion at this time.

Mr. Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the said motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

OFFICIAL LANGUAGES

APPOINTMENT OF COMMISSIONER OF OFFICIAL LANGUAGES

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister) moved:

That, in accordance with section 19 of an act respecting the status of the official languages of Canada, chapter O-2, Revised Statutes of Canada, 1970, this House approves the appointment of Maxwell F. Yalden, Esquire, as Commissioner of Official Languages of Canada.

Mr. Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the said motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Jones: On division.

Motion agreed to.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

SUSPENSION OF SITTING

Mr. MacEachen: Mr. Speaker, in accordance with the understanding reached earlier, and in view of the fact that both items standing under government notices of motions have now been adopted by the House, I should like to move the adjournment of the House until—

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Adjournment?

Mr. Speaker: Perhaps it might be simpler if I were to suggest to hon. members that we take a 25-minute break and resume at 3.45 this afternoon.

At 3.21 p.m. the sitting was suspended.

SITTING RESUMED

AIR TRAFFIC CONTROL SERVICES CONTINUATION ACT

AIR TRAFFIC CONTROLLERS—MEASURE TO END STRIKE

Mr. Munro (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order to ask unanimous consent for the second reading motion to be amended so that it will provide for consideration of the bill to be conducted in committee of the whole.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Standing Orders envisage that motions for the referral of a bill on second reading are to a standing committee of the House rather than to committee of the whole. Is it in order, in the motion, to call for the bill to be referred to committee of the whole House?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Cossitt: Mr. Speaker, I, too, rise on a point of order. I understood from conversations conducted within the last half-hour that a statement would be made at 3.45 about question No. 6 concerning which there is some dispute. I hope the parliamentary secretary will say something about it.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member is absolutely right. During the recess I had the opportunity to examine the reply to question No. 6. In my opinion, it is feasible to print it. Would the parliamentary secretary prefer to include that question in the list of questions answered today, or deal with it as a document to be tabled and then printed as if tabled? It seems to me that it would be more expeditious to deal with it as an ordinarily answered question.

Mr. Goodale: Mr. Speaker, it is my intention to include it in the list I read earlier, if that is acceptable procedurally.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Question No. 6 will therefore be included in the list of questions answered earlier this day.

Hon. John C. Munro (Minister of Labour) moved that Bill C-63, to provide for the continuation of air traffic control services, be read the second time and referred to committee of the whole House.

He said: Mr. Speaker, it gives me no great pleasure to introduce this bill today. To ask parliament to approve a bill to end a legal strike is something which this government and which I, as Minister of Labour, do not welcome. Collective bargaining is part of our democratic way of life. It is the best system that has been devised for the voluntary regulation of the demands of employers and workers. It is not a perfect system, but in most situations it works, and it works well. Under collective bargaining, employers can anticipate with great certainty their labour costs and they can anticipate prolonged periods of labour peace. On the other hand, organized workers have been able to establish a fair return for their labour and they have improved their working conditions, largely as a result of their efforts at the bargaining table. Unorganized workers, to a considerable extent, have received improved wages and conditions that are influenced by improvements negotiated in the organized sector.

There has been considerable public comment of late about the incidence of strikes in this country. Canada's reputation in this regard has lately been greatly distorted, but the situation recently has improved greatly: strikes and lock-outs have not been resorted to frequently. Canada's record is not a record of numerous strikes and lock-outs, but of strikes and lock-outs which continue for a long period. Losses due to strikes and lock-outs in Canada this year are showing a sharp improvement over last year and recent years. I believe the anti-inflation program can be given much of the credit for this improvement.

Mr. Trudeau: Hear, hear!

Miss MacDonald: Even the minister laughs.

Mr. Munro (Hamilton East): The hon. member will not laugh when she hears the figures. In the first four months of this year man-day losses went down 63 per cent from the similar period in 1976. In percentage terms, strikes cost Canada 0.55 man-days for every 10,000 days worked during all of 1976—a higher percentage than in any year since 1919.

Mr. Stanfield: This is very interesting, but let us deal with the bill.

Mr. Munro (Hamilton East): For the first four months of this year, the loss in man-days was only 0.18 for every 10,000 days worked. In federal industries and in the federal public service man-day losses have been insignificant.

This government has recognized the importance of improving labour relations in this country. Last October, in the Speech from the Throne, improved labour relations was one of the three or four matters which we said deserved priority attention of parliament. The others included national unity and human rights. In the debate on the Speech from the Throne I summarized a 14-point program for improving our labour relations system. Since that time I have met with representatives of labour and industry to enlist their co-operation in putting some of these programs into effect. As the basis of many of these programs is our determination to find a better way to diminish the adversarial approach by employers and trade unions at the bargaining table and create a better environment in which collective bargaining can occur. This can be done if we move away from the confrontation that characterizes so many of our negotiations. We also want to improve working conditions, including health and safety, for all Canadian workers.

Mr. Speaker, in the situation which has caused you to call all members back to the House we have a strike by the Canadian Air Traffic Controllers Association against the government. CATCA called this strike because it saw no other way to resolve its differences with the government negotiators at the bargaining table.

We have to ask ourselves who is bearing the brunt of this action. We have to recognize the right to strike. With ad hoc legislation of this kind it is always a value judgment of any government of the day to weigh whether it should permit a strike to continue for a prolonged period of time or whether, in the circumstances, the interests of parties not party to the negotiations and not at the bargaining table should assume paramountcy in terms of responsibility of the government and parliament of the day. We believe that in terms of the judgment we are exercising, the interests of those not at the table are paramount and we should consider the interests of those Canadians injuriously affected by a prolongation of this strike.

We know there are many innocent third parties to this dispute. It falls on members of the travelling public who are caught by surprise and who will have great difficulty in changing their vacations and completing their travel plans while this strike continues. One estimate shows that 35,000 to 40,000 Canadians are travelling by air each day at this time of the year. This is a serious inconvenience when you consider not only these Canadians but the tens of thousands of others they were intending to meet at the end of their flight.

Second, the burden falls on others who are not at the bargaining table. It falls on the airlines, which last year experienced difficult business conditions and have been operating at a loss. Some estimates show the airlines could lose as much as $5 million to $6 million a day while the strike continues. This situation could have serious repercussions for all air carriers. Other airline employees are also affected. The ground crews which service the aircraft, the baggage handlers, and sales and reservation clerks, the airline crews—these workers are all covered by collective agreements and they are affected.

It is hard to think of a business or a town or city in Canada which is not affected by this work stoppage. Every hour of every day that this strike continues is causing severe inconvenience to the travelling public and interrupting business and industry with their hundreds and thousands of employees which depend on the delivery of goods by air.

It is not the purpose of this legislation to take away the right to strike from CATCA. But it is the purpose of this bill to end this strike as soon as possible. CATCA was given the right to strike from the day it was certified as an employee association more than ten years ago under the Public Service Staff Relations Acts. The government did not pre-empt the right to strike. This bill does not take away that right; rather, it is a value judgment for the reasons I have outlined. As one of the unions in the public service, CATCA has enjoyed the right to strike since 1967. But it must use the right wisely and responsibly. Like few other unions in the public sector or the private sector, it holds a juggernaut position in its industry. It is in a position to impose sanctions of the most severe kind on the whole country. When the air traffic controllers served notice last week that they would institute a series of rotating strikes, and later a total strike, they knew they were exerting a monopoly power which could bring a vital national industry to its knees.

I might very briefly refer to the history of this dispute. The essence of the dispute is the difference between the union and the employer over the money clause. The parties were assisted in their attempts to reach a settlement by a three-man conciliation board, one nominated by the union, one by the employer, and a chairman agreed on by the parties. All three members of the conciliation board concurred in recommending an 8 per cent increase in total compensation. This unanimous recommendation was made after giving due consideration to AIB guidelines.

It has been an accepted procedure in our attempts to reach a settlement in a dispute to go along with a conciliation board report. There is added justification when the board report on the major item at issue is unanimous, as this one in the air traffic controllers' dispute was. Hon. members will recall that we proceeded to a settlement on the basis of Commissioner Perry's report in the west coast grain industry dispute, and on the basis of the report of Judge Gold, acting as a commissioner in the St. Lawrence River longshoring dispute.

Two major obstacles to a settlement relate to rates of pay before conversion and rates of pay resulting from conversion with respect to reclassification of jobs. The content of the revised classification standard has been essentially agreed to, although there is disagreement as to the slotting of some jobs within the new standard.

Dealing with the rates of pay before conversion, it is clear from the record that what Treasury Board negotiators agreed to was the maximum permissible level under the guidelines in terms of 8 per cent total compensation. On the rates of pay applicable after conversion, that is, the cost of conversion, CATCA says the cost is to be excluded from the application of the AIB guidelines. The employer says it must be included in the guidelines allowable. This is consistent with AIB guidelines. In essence, CATCA demanded an increase of more than 12.6 per cent, when the guidelines would allow a maximum of 8 per cent.

If the employer were to capitulate to the CATCA demand in the face of a strike threat, or now an existing strike, the government would be condoning a settlement in excess of the AIB guidelines. Such a solution is clearly unacceptable. The government could then be accused, with justification, of asking for restraint from business and labour in the private sector and not practising restraint in negotiations with its own employees.

● (1600)

The government could allow the strike, now that it has been called, to run its course. That is one alternative. This might be seen by some as being compatible with free collective bargaining. But should the strike last for a considerable period, or even for a few more days, the public would be held for ransom and the airlines subjected to punishing damage. The government, then, has introduced this bill to end a dispute which can only, unfortunately, go from bad to worse, by requiring the air traffic controllers to return to work immediately.

It is with great reluctance that we have called upon Your Honour to bring back the House to deal with this emergency bill, but it is the view of the government that it is in the national interest that parliament should give this measure its unanimous approval.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. John A. Fraser (Vancouver South): Mr. Speaker, I want to say first of all, through you, to all members of the House and to the government that this party is prepared to support the intent of the legislation and address itself to the most vital issue before us today, which is the need for the resumption of air traffic in Canada.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Fraser: I say this because we are acutely aware of the damage, inconvenience and unfair effects of a strike like this upon innocent members of the public. But we are also aware that this is a strike which ought never to have taken place. Indeed, it would never have taken place if the Minister of Transport (Mr. Lang) had conducted the negotiations on some other basis than bullying, confrontation and sheer stubbornness.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Fraser: It is all very well for hon. members and for people in the media and in other places to decide that because a strike has now occurred, all the blame lies with the union. I do not even think the Minister of Labour (Mr. Munro) would go that far. But that suggestion lies under the surface in this chamber and in other places. The fact is, the blame does not all lie with the union.

For many years the government has constantly talked about the right to strike, yet has consistently refused to act in accordance with our insistence that some mechanism be provided to do two things—to deal with those areas which involve essential services and where the government knows it will bring in legislation to end a strike in any event, and other cases where a strike might not begin as an "essential service" strike but the ultimate effect of which upon the economy might be such as to justify its conclusion, in the public interest.

The Minister of Labour says, "Don't take away the right to strike; don't have compulsory arbitration", and so on. There is nothing more compulsory than that which is being done here today. The Minister of Labour gave us all the reasons why this lawful strike should not be taking place. Then he says, "This does not mean we do not think the right to strike should exist in this particular area". He cannot have it both ways. The Minister of Labour is trying to say, "Don't, whatever you do, think we would restrain the right to strike under any circumstances at all except those circumstances under which we think it should not be exercised".

If we are to find a way by which in certain areas the country is not, to quote the minister's words, to be held up to ransom, we must find a way to deal with situations such as this. If Your Honour would read the speeches I have made on various occasions on behalf of my party when strikes have been settled by legislation, you would find I have repeatedly urged the government to devise a mechanism which would solve this difficulty. What happened to the Woods report? The minister will no doubt say that the Woods report was handed down a long time ago. It certainly was. But it did deal with this problem, and whatever the defects in its recommendations may have been, it certainly recognized the nature of the difficulty we face.

The minister began by seeking the general sympathy of the nation by describing the inconvenience, familiar to everyone, which a lot of people are suffering. Then he tried to persuade us, by strange logic, that it did not matter because the collective bargaining system was working in cases of this kind. It is too laughable for words. Nothing will be done, Mr.

Speaker, until the Minister of Labour and others on the government side admit that in certain cases the right to strike, though it may be de jure, is not de facto. Hon. members opposite know this to be a true statement of the position. It was said during the railway strike some years ago by the negotiators for the railway unions that the right to strike was a myth, that it existed only provided it was not used or was ineffective.

What has happened in this case? Under the Public Service Staff Relations Act, CATCA elected to take the conciliation strike route which was laid out by the government in legislation years ago. What has the Minister of Transport done? He has said to CATCA, "I intend to make up my mind as to what you should get, and if you don't agree with me I shall legislate what I think you should get and legislate you back to work if you go on strike". Where is the arbitrator in all this, the other side of the public service staff relations procedure? Mr. Speaker, if a union does not wish to take the strike route, it chooses the arbitration route and accepts binding arbitration.

What the government has done is this: it set up legislation and told the union it could take its choice. The strike route was chosen. Then the government told them it was not acceptable and declined even to substitute an arbitrator. The arbitrator is the Minister of Transport, with his notion of what the settlement ought to be. I ask you, Mr. Speaker, what would you do if this were not a public service union? What would you do if it were a union which came under the federal government, under the Canada Labour Code, and got into difficulties. Suppose it were the CNR or a public owned railway such as the CNR which came to parliament and said, "Our fellows will not settle on anything reasonable. We have our own views as to what the settlement should be, and we want the House of Commons to legislate them back to work on terms agreeable to us". Would that be fair? Would this House accept such a proposal? No. Yet this is what has happened today.

We agree that the strike should not have taken place, but we say a good deal of the blame for it lies right over there in the seat of the Minister of Transport.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Fraser: Lest hon. members think I am being too hard on the hon. gentleman—

Mr. Lang: You do not even get one fact right.

Mr. Fraser: The fact that I have got right is that there is no way of getting to the Minister of Transport. Logic does not do it; facts will not do it. The minister said to CATCA, "We have a disagreement here as to what the level of compensation should be". So what did he suggest to them? "If you put your 12.6 per cent up in the agreement, we will put our 7.4 per cent up in the same agreement and put it before the Anti-Inflation Board and let them take their choice." Mr. Speaker, the board is not there to act as an arbitrator, but as the determinator of its own rules and guidelines. The minister said, " If the AIB agrees to 12.6 per cent, I will accept it." This is the kind of talk which was going on before the strike.

There is another matter which has to be considered. If the Minister of Transport intended to take the step of seeking the legislation which the Minister of Labour has brought down, why was the bill not brought down last week? Why was it delayed? The point is this: we have said for years that this kind of situation has to be faced openly and frankly by members of this House. I do not have to tell anyone that the public will not put up with it any longer. That is why the legislation has come in, and the Minister of Labour is aware of that.

• (1610)

Mr. Stanfield: He is not interfering with the right to strike.

Mr. Fraser: Not at all. He is just eliminating it, and he is not even substituting arbitration. How much longer do we have to contend with the Minister of Labour making the same speech? It is not difficult for him to make his speech, because it has a familiar ring to it. We have all heard it before. It is all down in Hansard.

Mr. Munro (Hamilton East): Not that often.

Mr. Fraser: We will see about that. Just before the election in 1972—

Mr. Munro (Hamilton East): That was five years ago.

Mr. Fraser: That is right. It occurred in 1973, once again. Following that there was the grain handlers' strike and the legislation which was introduced. In 1975 there was the longshoremens' legislation. Then there was the Halifax settlement, others—

Mr. Gillies: Once a year.

Mr. Fraser: Yet the Minister of Labour sits in his place and says, "Not that often".

Mr. Munro (Hamilton East): Once a year.

Mr. Fraser: It is always the same thing.

Mr. Stanfield: Set a record.

Mr. Fraser: The hon. minister does not have to get new speechwriters; he can merely pick up an old speech. But it does not sound any better today than it did in the past. The Minister of Labour said there were fewer strikes in Canada today, based on statistics. This is a fact most of us are aware of and are pleased about. But those statistics do not relate to this kind of difficulty. The difficulty has to be faced squarely. It has been almost ludicrous to watch the government party over the last number of days completely divide on what its position really is.

An hon. Member: Horizontal.

Mr. Fraser: I am referring to its position in respect of the entire labour relations problem. The Minister of Transport got out in full flight—which he has done before at public expense—over the weekend, putting forth his utterances as to how the world should unfold. The right hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) made short work of those utterances today. If one can allude to a rug or a flying carpet being under the hon. Minister of Transport, it was pulled out from under him.

An hon. Member: We hope so.

Mr. Fraser: The Prime Minister made it quite clear that he was not going along with anything the Minister of Transport said or was reported as having said. There were things he did not remember saying, but someone finally got them down straight and he remembered saying them. As recently as yesterday the Minister of Labour made it clear that he did not want anyone to think he agreed with the Minister of Transport.

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): Very convenient.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: I read that in the paper this morning.

Mr. Paproski: Even Horner could have done a better job.

Mr. Fraser: I am not suggesting that everything about labour relations in Europe is necessarily better or applicable in this country. I would be the last person to suggest—and the Minister of Labour is aware of this—that you can take situations which happen in other countries and transplant them into our milieu. But in a number of countries, air traffic controllers are operating basically within the same technical range of problems, with the same basic sophistication of equipment and the same responsibility. However, their record of continuance of service is amazingly better than in this country. I am referring to nations such as the United States, Great Britain, West Germany, France, Sweden, Holland, Belgium and others.

Is it beyond the measure of this House to suggest we find out why it works elsewhere, and not here? Is it beyond the measure of this House to put aside the rhetoric of the right to strike and decide to figure out proper settlements, fair settlements, settlements which will confirm an even number of highly qualified people to serve the public, without always getting into a confrontation and strike action? What will happen at the end of December of this year? The whole thing will start again.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: At the same time as a mail strike.

Mr. Fraser: We may well have another strike, and we will receive the same speech from the Minister of Labour.

Mr. Paproski: Use pony express.

Mr. Fraser: The bill before us has been changed in one substantive area, which is that clause 6 has been deleted because of discussions between myself, on behalf of this party, and the Minister of Labour. The Minister of Transport put those clauses in and he would have had us say to this particular union, "If you break the law we will increase the penalties against you. We will amend the Public Service Staff Relations Act to apply against your union and take away the provision whereby you have to go before the Public Service Staff Relations Board for consent to prosecute".

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): That was Otto's idea.

Mr. Fraser: What kind of discrimination is that? Has the Minister of Transport an ongoing war with CATCA? Is he suggesting that one sector of the public service ought to be treated differently from others? Good sense prevailed, and the clause is not there now.

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): Otto Lang lost another one.

Mr. Fraser: I compliment the Minister of Labour for that. There is a clause we cannot support in its present form. I am referring to clause 5(4) which indicates that the schedule of remuneration as determined by the Minister of Transport will be the schedule of remuneration unless notice is given and the Public Service Staff Relations Board provides an arbitrator to vary any one of those particular payments or rates of income. That is, provided it does not exceed, in the aggregate, what the Minister of Transport thinks the Anti-Inflation Board rules are.

In the last 18 months there have been ten cases of agreements reached between the government and public service unions. In eight of those ten cases, for different reasons the Anti-Inflation Board accepted a level of compensation higher than that which the government had been insisting upon in negotiations. It is not something which has never happened before, as the Minister of Transport indicates. This form of legislation, where the Minister of Transport will say, "This will be your settlement, and that is the end of it", is completely wrong. If it is necessary to legislate back-to-work legislation, that is completely the wrong way of doing it.

An hon. Member: Right on.

Mr. Fraser: We have said repeatedly that the correct procedure is to order people back to work and then put the issue before arbitration in order for the matter of compensation and terms to be argued.

Mr. Munro (Hamilton East): It is not Otto; it is the unanimous reports of conciliators.

Mr. Fraser: I hear the Minister of Labour referring to unanimous reports of conciliators. He referred to a report on the west coast where there was one conciliator. It was unanimous, but the employers did not agree with it. The minister should refer to the Gold report concerning the three-port strike on the river. We approved of that, but we said then that it was a dangerous precedent. It is a dangerous precedent today because if working people in this country are going to accept a settlement, then we cannot impose it upon them; it must go to a tribunal independent of this chamber.

● (1620)

There is another reason, Mr. Speaker. Hon. members are not prepared and trained, and do not have the necessary knowledge, to deal with the complexities of actually negotiating a settlement. That point has been accepted by all hon. members. Yet this piece of legislation flies in the teeth of that belief. The proper thing to do under these circumstances is to amend the legislation so that CATCA is ordered back to work on the basis of the new schedule I as set out by the minister, which I am informed they will accept, with the right to go to arbitration to resolve the other issues. They will then accept the arbitrator's decision. That is the proper and fair way to handle the matter. We will be moving a motion to that effect this afternoon.

I want to emphasize that this party supports the objective of the legislation. The matter before the House is, first and foremost, the resumption of air traffic in this country. This party is prepared, subject to the amendments I have suggested—which need not take a great deal of time—to support this legislation; and whether or not we are successful in our amendments, we will support the legislation in the interest of resuming air traffic in Canada.

Mr. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa-Whitby): Mr. Speaker, the government, these masters of mendacity, have done it again. The Minister of Labour (Mr. Munro) opened the debate, and in my notes I have a series of observations to the effect that this is bad legislation connected to an unnecessary strike produced by an incompetent government. I will add another little phrase, "not only an incompetent, but a dishonest government".

I listened with very great interest to the minister's opening remarks and I was particularly touched by his moving description of the relative improvement in strike situations in Canada. I think he said that we had a 67 per cent improvement—

Mr. Fraser: Sixty-three per cent.

Mr. Broadbent: Yes, a 63 per cent improvement in terms of reduced strikes. Obviously, the minister did not make any direct connection with the controls program, with the fact that it did not make much sense for workers to go on strike, if they contravened the law of Canada. Being law-abiding citizens, most workers do not do that sort of thing. I would have thought there was some connection between that improvement and the controls program, which some people have, not inappropriately, described as fascism with a human face. If the minister is really concerned about the record of labour in Canada this year, he would have been more concerned with another statistic which the government has produced, to the effect that some two billion man-hours have been lost because of unemployment. That is the record of the government so far in 1977.

Let me come to the point about mendacity. The minister got to his feet and said that it moved him to tears almost to bring in such legislation, because workers in this great, free society do have the right to strike. I do agree that at some point, even when there is a right to strike, a government which is responsible has to move in and say that in the public good this right has to be sacrificed. I do not think there is a contradiction there. In a free society you often have conflicts in rights, liberties and obligations and you have to choose. But it is a phony argument to give the right to strike to a group of workers and then to tell them, before they even act upon the right to strike, that the government will bring in legislation. That, to me, is hypocritical. You cannot have that argument. I agree with the Conservative party on this: logically, you cannot have it both ways. If you give the right to strike to a particular sector, then the workers must exercise that right, if it is to mean anything at all. That is my first point.

More significantly, Mr. Speaker, the minister said that a conciliation board report was made. He said that the conciliation board made a unanimous recommendation which the government was acting on. Implicitly, the minister said, "Therefore, how can any reasonable person not accept this conciliation board report presented by representatives of labour as well as 'the bad guys'"? I wondered what the minister was talking about, so I checked. As the minister knows very well, the reclassification issue, which is the essence of this strike, was beyond the terms of reference of the conciliation board. The minister knows full well that when the conciliation board recommended solutions to the government and the union, it said in its report that the reclassification issue was something that the government had to work out with the union.

Did the minister tell the House that the conciliation board had looked at the 8 per cent package and had made a unanimous recommendation? Did he say that they had examined the issue which this strike is all about? He did not tell us that at all. He deliberately tried to leave the impression with the House and with the people of Canada that the union involved was going against a conciliation board report that was unanimous. In that respect I say he misled the House and he was trying to mislead the people of Canada.

● (1630)

I want to come to what I think the strike is all about. I say at the outset that if you look at the half-dozen pieces of back-to-work legislation which have been brought before the House of Commons, you will see that my party has supported more than half of them. We have not taken the position, under all the circumstances, that the right to strike is sacred and can never be sacrificed at all. That is not the case. Sometimes, as I said at the outset, the public interest will require a shift and will require that some rights be traded-off against others. But what we object to, and why we are opposed to this bill—and not only state our opposition, as have the Conservatives, but will vote against it unless there is some change—is that the government produced this strike It was not CATCA. It was not a group of working people in Canada who produced this strike. The government of Canada and the Minister of Transport (Mr. Lang) are responsible.

The reason I reached this conclusion is that there is one point of substance that distinguishes the position of the government from that of the union. The point of substance concerns reclassification. As we all know from public statements made by Treasury Board officials, by ministers, by the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) himself, and from private conversations I have had in the past 24 hours with the ministers and with the Prime Minister, the issue revolves around two different approaches. The government has said that they will not go beyond the 8 per cent. Their analysis of CATCA's proposals, their reading of the ideas presented by the union, was that by including the reclassification proposal of CATCA, the guidelines of the AIB would be broken; therefore, they would not go beyond 8 per cent.

I say that the government can make at least a reasonable case for its interpretation; I agree with that. What the union has said is that if you look at the regulations which flow from the AIB, you can make a good case for saying that in addition to the 8 per cent there is roughly another 4.5 per cent to which the workers are entitled because of the reclassification that has been accepted by the government.

I want to get back to the cause of the strike. For once, I share the Prime Minister's view of the media. I say to those ladies and gentleman in the press gallery, "You have some obligation for once to convey the honest and accurate position of a group of workers in Canada to the people of Canada, so that they will understand that this government is responsible for the strike".

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Broadbent: What the union has said is, "Don't accept our position as a condition of agreement for keeping the planes flying. Simply submit our submission to the AIB for decision, and we will abide by it". They said, "We will not go out on strike if you give us a contract which says we will receive 8 per cent now, and beyond the 8 per cent the AIB make a decision. We think we are justified in getting that". The union can point to letters which go back over two years when the government indicated they favoured investigating reclassification, and they can point to all kinds of data to support their case. All they are saying is, "Don't accept our position; but you, the government, could have the honesty and decency to put the package to the AIB. We will abide by the results, and we will not go out on strike if you do that".

What did the government do? Hypocritically, I think, they tried to have it both ways. They said, "All right; we will submit the two approaches to the AIB, the 8 per cent with which we agree and the 12.5 per cent with which we do not agree, and we will accept the recommendations of AIB". As recently as yesterday—I quote verbatim what the Prime Minister said at the press conference with reference to CATCA—the Prime Minister said:

> CATCA rejected the possibility of signing within the guidelines as we see them and as we think AIB will see them, with the possibility that if AIB says more would be possible, they would get more.

The Prime Minister is saying that the government would accept the 12 per cent if the AIB so ruled. I ask, why were they so hypocritical in their approach, or at least not serious in their bargaining with the CATCA people, when they said, "Submit the two approaches to AIB"? What the government is saying to the union is that the AIB should become the arbitration board, which it is not. It is a misuse of the AIB to follow that approach.

Second, from the union's point of view they were saying to the workers in Canada, "Why don't you submit this bargaining item to the AIB and hope that they will choose the richer package?" They are saying that if the two are submitted, the AIB may come down and choose the richer. Surely at this point in our history, when Canadians are so concerned about inflation and unemployment, it was reasonable for the union to say that it did not make sense for them to submit a richer and a poorer package because, quite plausibly, it is more likely the AIB would accept the poorer package. So the union, quite correctly, rejected this approach. They said, "Let us not, because the AIB is not an arbitration board, have them solve the dispute between us and the government; and let us not, on behalf of our members, take the chance that they will opt for the poorer package when we think we are entitled to the richer package".

I think that is a responsible approach. But beyond that—this is the message I want to give, through you, Mr. Speaker, to the people of Canada—this union was not insisting that the government accept the richer package. All the union said was, "If you submit that particular package to the AIB, we will accept their decision." I repeat that Treasury Board had indicated they would accept the richer package if the AIB ruled on it. If that had been done, there would have been no strike, parliament would not be sitting now, and thousands of Canadians from coast to coast who have been inconvenienced would not have suffered the consequences of the strike.

As recently as yesterday I consulted the union to clarify this approach in order to make sure that that is what they had in mind. I read the reports during the weekend. They spoke to our party and to other parties in the House of Commons. It became clear that that was the issue. Following that, I spoke with the Prime Minister twice and said to him, "The union has said that the country would be back to normal within six hours, its members back to work, and the planes could be flying if you modify your approach. You said the richer package is acceptable if the AIB rules on it. Why don't you submit it to the AIB and let them decide?" If the government had done that, CATCA says that planes would have been flying within six hours. But the government said no because, I suspect, a guy named Otto Lang locked them, again, into a stupid position, an arbitrary position.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Broadbent: He locked them into an unfair position, one that totally vitiated the whole rationale of reasonable bargaining procedures. It is for that reason my party will have nothing to do with this law. We think it is unfair and discriminating, and that it does not even follow past government respecting the AIB.

Let me add a footnote to that. I have a whole list, with which I will not bore the House, of previous contracts the government submitted to the AIB which went beyond the arithmetical guidelines, and the government took the position that the AIB would accept some and reject others. That is exactly what happened. I could read into the record a list of contracts with the government's own employees, in some of which arithmetical guidelines have been acceded to and others ruled employees back to work. If the government had persisted with its own procedures with the AIB, and if it were consistent, it would have done for CATCA what it did for discriminating, unfair practices. Therefore, unless the government makes a change that we will be proposing in committee, we will be voting against this bill.

We realize that the public interest is a very real thing. We realize that Air Canada is losing millions of dollars, and that other companies are losing money. We realize that the public is in jeopardy. Therefore, public interest does weigh on our minds as well. But it is very important, when we are sacrificing rights, that we do so in the knowledge of what is going on, particularly in the knowledge of who is to blame. I say it is wrong in this instance to blame a group of Canadian men and women who are working from coast to coast for the kind of action that this government put on the country.

So we will be proposing, at committee stage of the bill, an amendment—which I will not read out now—which will have the effect of creating an arbitrator, which has been the past practice, I might add, of the back-to-work legislation proposed by the government, whose function will be to decide whether the richer package proposed by CATCA is, or is not, within the guidelines, and if it is within, that they would be entitled to receive the financial benefits of that package, subject of course to AIB approval.

I appeal in a sombre and serious note to the Minister of Labour and say to him, "If the government wants to be consistent with its own previous back-to-work legislation"—I am now going by memory—"which included the appointment of an arbitrator who would not have", as he has in this bill, "a ceiling beyond which he cannot go, it should accept my amendment". On first analysis there is some reason for the inclusion of the ceiling under the controls program, but I submit that a crucial part of the negotiations hinge on the interpretation of the controls program and therefore that it is wrong to put in that ceiling. The AIB will ensure the guidelines are enforced.

● (1640)

I appeal to the Minister of Labour to consider accepting this amendment, which would entail having an arbitrator look at the government's proposal and at what CATCA says is legitimate, and then decide one way or the other. If the CATCA proposal is deemed by an independent arbitrator to be consistent with the guidelines, the government should live up to its earlier statements and give the workers what they would get from that richer package. That is the kind of amendment we will propose, and I submit that that is fully consistent with the government's own past back-to-work legislation. It is fully consistent with its own philosophy, and if implemented it would bring some degree of justice to workers who in this circumstance have been very unfairly treated.

AIR TRAFFIC CONTROL SERVICES CONTINUATION ACT

AIR TRAFFIC CONTROLLERS—MEASURE TO END STRIKE

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Munro (Hamilton East): That Bill C-63, to provide for the continuation of air traffic control services, be read the second time and referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. Charles-Eugène Dionne (Kamouraska): Mr. Speaker, once again the members of the House of Commons have been recalled to pass back-to-work legislation for hundreds of workers who have seen fit to strike as a result of a misunderstanding with the authorities of air transport services. It is not the first time that such a thing has happened. A few years ago, we were recalled in similar circumstances in connection with the CN employees and longshoremen. It should be normal as a result of such cases for the government to pass more flexible legislation to avoid such conflicts. The labour legislation must be designed to maintain some balance between the just demands of workers and the requirement of the common good.

In public services, the economic powers proceeding from the right to strike should be replaced by a proper mechanism to adjust wages according to the cost of living index.

I understand that it becomes rather difficult in a control period but we are now at least approaching a decontrol period. After controlling, they are now trying to decontrol. Obviously, under such circumstances, it becomes more difficult to adjust the wages of a team of air services employees.

We should stop thinking in terms of compulsory contributions or conciliation and consider instead a fairer distribution of the enterprise's profits and the workers' wages. With all the inquiry commissions that have been created, with all the civil servants getting various wages, and some of them are quite high, with all those people conducting on-going studies on the ways to improve the employees' working conditions in Canada, it seems to me that it should be possible to find a just solution. Obviously, this solution will not be found without efforts, but the present situation teaches us that we must take the appropriate means if we really want to avoid anarchy.

There are important factors to be considered when establishing an employee's working conditions. We must not forget that the employee is a human being, not a machine, and that he is looking for security and stability. In general terms, he wants his working place to be well organized and well managed. It is normal that he should be treated with justice. The employee also wants to be informed on his employer's business situation so as to know he may get a fair income. Those are basic realities. In no circumstances should an employee endanger his life to earn a living. Workers are the first naturally entitled to know clearly and fully their specific working conditions. They should also have the possibility to refuse, without any salary loss, to do a work they consider dangerous for their health and security till a decision is made by an authorized committee.

Workers' health and security must be fully secured, regardless of any ideology which in any case could not disturb with impunity the scientific data more and more verifiable by both parties. It is important to emphasize that man, not profit, should be the central point of any social project if we want to have the privilege of being part of the establishment of the new economic order which is more and more referred to by the most thoughtful people.

Basically this implies a new moral order or a new scale of values. Workers, through their organizations are and remain the main factors of change as far as their whole collective development and progress are concerned. All workers should understand that unionism is not an end in itself but a means of ensuring the promotion and the progress of workers in general. Considering that this means is limited they must seek and accept the methods which can help them meet the objectives of unionism.

In this age of automation, the worker is a man or a woman who is concerned about the future and anxious to take full advantage of technological progress. The worker's concern stems from the fact that he is aware that our society is not organized to distribute fairly this new wealth produced by science, technology and machine with a minimum of human participation. The worker lives in a society which is unable to adapt itself properly to progress.

On July 5, 1972, during a debate on the longshoremen's strike, I told the House that we were living in a system so unbalanced that citizens have concluded that certain grievances can be settled only by striking. However, we must logically recognize that everything that has been accomplished in the world is the result of work. No one can deny this. How is it that thousands of workers decide that their problems can be solved by a work stoppage? A strike is simply illogical. It is a phenomenon related to various generalized illnesses and which becomes a hypothetical means of pressure since the decision to strike must be submitted to a vote and since decisions are often made by only a percentage of the workers involved.

In general, strikes are aimed against those who pay instead of those who deprive. I am surprised to see that in the many strikes that occur in Canada, the workers have a tendency to strike against those who pay them instead of organizing a true general strike, as they should, against the financial system which is depriving everyone. This would be somewhat more logical in my opinion.

You need to have very little imagination or to refuse to see the disastrous results of a financial system divorced from current economic realities not to conclude that strikes are most often the result of demands for salary readjustment or increases. Why? It is very easy to find an answer. Successive wage increases cannot catch up with the increase in the cost of living, and metaphorically speaking, we could say that wages go up by the stairs while consumer prices go up by the elevator.

The evolution of automation, which should be beneficial, has become the nightmare of thousands of workers in the present system.

The various employee associations seem to want the industry or the employer to absorb all the expenses that result from mechanized installation, as well as wage readjustments and all the demands brought about by a sick financial system.

I have often underlined the delays caused by ever more strikes and I added that sometimes it was a necessary evil which we should avoid spreading.

One of the well known leader of the American labour movement, Mr. George Meany, once pointed out that in unduly protracted conflicts employees bear a financial burden disproportionate to the advantages they could gain from a confrontation and it is actually a fact.

Given the present situation and the lack of provisions in a legislation which is not adopted to the circumstances, we wonder if some solution other than a settlement imposed by Parliament could not be found under the present circumstances.

Unfortunately, we come to the conclusion that the answer is no. There is no alternative to settling that problem other than ordering a return to work through government legislation. It is to be hoped that this legislation will be adopted and that strikers will realize their responsibilities.

The strikers should go back to work without waiting for the adoption of lengthy procedures which do not solve the problems. We already have too many examples of settlements against the workers. We need but mention the case of the employees of G. Lapalme Inc. working for the Post Office department. We have suggested repeatedly, and we are not the only ones to have done so, many authorities in the field of labour have as well, the possibility of setting up labour tribunals, real ones. Of the proposals we made in this House, let me quote this one, section 3 which reads as follows:

(3) to make an adequate evaluation of the viability of the undertaking or service, taking into consideration the risks, the cash reserves required to ensure its operations, tax deductions and such formalities as result from tax regulations;

Many things must be taken into account.

A labour court made up of government, business and workers' representatives to consider regularly questions of relations between workers and management, which would not wait six months after the expiration of contracts to begin negotiations. At the time of contract renewal, on-going negotiations should take place and every interested party should be made aware of the proposals, because worthy investigations would have been made by representatives of all parties concerned. At that time, I have good reason to believe that the workers, who are as intelligent as anybody else of any other class of people, would understand that, due to circumstances, this offer would be acceptable. I am wondering whether those responsible for air services did not hesitate too much. I have here an article written by Michel Roy of Le Devoir who is certainly aware of a number of things, because he writes, and I quote:

CATCA proposed to the government to conclude the agreement and submit the whole thing to the Anti-Inflation Board, feeling that it would have to make the distinction in its analyses between a wage increase benefiting all controllers and a wage increase resulting from a reclassification. The union representatives are even prepared to give the undertaking and abide by the decision of the board when it is made.

I believe this unfortunate conflict could have been avoided.

The government, for its part, refused to refer a wage settlement to the board—

But why did we set up that famous board? For a year and a half we discussed in committee the possibility of setting up a board. It seems to me to be inoperative at this time.

And that is why all commercial aviation in this country has been paralyzed for the past 48 hours, with daily losses to air carriers being estimated at more than $5 million without counting opportunities lost by industries that depend on air transport or the hard-to-assess inconveniences of all kinds that thousands of users must undergo.

I think that if there had been a little more goodwill from those in charge that conflict could have been avoided.

I conclude by mentioning the suggestion we made and we continue to make because we have excellent reason to believe it could be right—the formation of a labour court with the responsibilities and the power to decide something. At that time, as I say, I have excellent reason to believe that we would avoid conflicts such as the one we are now faced with.

However, we are not short of examples on which the government could meditate. I have here an article from the newspaper Le Droit of August 31, 1973, under the following heading, and I quote:

Strikers Storm Parliament.

It seems to me that this should be reason enough for government members to make up their minds and put forward an adequate labour legislation that would meet the needs of the majority of the people. I know full well it is easier to criticize than to govern. But we are really looking for something in the government's proposals that would give a way out. If we had the labour court that would be needed in various regions, with representatives from all interested parties, it would investigate and suggest practical solutions to the parties before a labour agreement had come to an end, and this should be a settlement. I submit the government should do this.

[Mr. Dionne (Kamouraska).]

[English]

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, at the outset of my comments I want to outline the four major unresolved areas, areas outstanding when negotiations broke off, in order that the government's position will be known and understood. The first concerns money. In changing the system by which air traffic controllers' jobs are classified, there are, of course, assumed automatic increases in pay. It is the government's position that the total compensation received as a result of job reclassification, as well as the negotiated increase in the basic negotiations, is subject to the maximum allowable compensation increase, as set out in the AIB arithmetic guidelines, of 8 per cent. CATCA, on the other hand, is demanding that pay increases which come as a result of the reclassification should be treated separately from those which are negotiated under the collective agreement. Adoption of their version would have meant, in the first year alone, an additional 4.6 per cent compensation increase beyond the arithmetic 8 per cent guidelines.

The government proposed a conversion cost of less than one-half of 1 per cent which, of course, was within the over-all guideline limit of 8 per cent. CATCA, however, rejected that. I shall return to the point of classification pay in a few minutes. As the leader of the NDP indicated, when you boil it down, that is one of the basic issues in this matter.

The second issue is vacations. CATCA wanted to provide its members with five weeks vacation after 20 years of service. At present, only CATCA and one other union have a contract which provides five weeks vacation after 25 years of service. All other federal public service collective agreements provide for five weeks vacation after 27 years of service or more. The third issue deals with management rights. CATCA is demanding at present that a minimum of two controllers be on duty at all airports at certain times. CATCA also wanted a change of work hours for non-operating controllers. To accede to these two latter demands would increase the number of controllers over-all and increase the cost of operations. More important, it is management's view and management's right to say that it is not necessary from an operational standpoint.

The fourth issue is classification. CATCA was demanding that some 100 jobs be put in a higher classification than the job responsibilities merit.

Mr. Benjamin: There was also the pension issue, was there not?

● (1700)

Mr. Andras: I am trying to deal with the major outstanding ones, not one where there is a possibility of resolution.

CATCA also wanted a change of work hours for non-operating controllers. Of course, that—as I have already indicated—would be an additional cost. Realistically—this was pointed out by a previous speaker—the most significant and controversial of these issues is the total increase in compensation payable under the anti-inflation guidelines.

The government is absolutely convinced that 8 per cent is the absolute maximum increase allowable under the Anti-Inflation Act, and that should include the basic increase and the conversion cost of reclassification for CATCA. The government is not prepared deliberately to sign an agreement which includes and supports or implies support for an increase larger than permissible under the Anti-Inflation Act and its regulations, leaving the onus on the AIB to roll back that excess. The anti-inflation guidelines do provide several conditions under which compensation increases for a group may be exempt from the maximum arithmetic increase permitted under the guidelines, the six plus two in this particular case. The most important of those conditions for exemptions are as follows: first, the historical relationship with another group; second, where there has been persistent and serious recruiting difficulties, as was the case with the prison guards; third, permission to achieve a minimum wage of $3.75 an hour, or $600 per year, whichever is the highest. The fourth would deal with a commitment prior to October 14, 1975, to provide compensation increases to a group.

Obviously, none of the first three conditions apply in the current air traffic controllers' dispute. Nor does the fourth—that is, prior commitment—although I think in some peoples minds they considered that possibility. The fourth condition, that of prior commitment, was designed to apply to collective agreements signed before October 14, 1975, which provided increases in the period following that date. Also, it was designed to apply to commitments made, but where contracts had not been formally signed to increase a group's compensation after October 14, 1975.

The Anti-Inflation Board has made it absolutely clear in its regulations and in its pattern of settlements and its decisions that to qualify as an allowable exemption such priority cannot be a simple expression of intent to increase compensation. That commitment must be thoroughly identifiable and capable of quantification in terms of cost.

There is a pattern to this that is absolutely clear. When it is boiled down, as the leader of the NDP has said, the major issue between the Canadian Air Traffic Control Association, Treasury Board and the government is the status of the cost of converting air traffic controllers to the new classification plan. Both time and the terms of reference of the work on that new classification plan disqualified such costs from exemption under the anti-inflation guidelines.

It is very important that I set before hon. members the sequence of events relating to the work of the new classification plan for the air traffic control group. In early 1975, the Ministry of Transport decided to undertake an internal study of the air traffic control classification standard. In June, 1975, CATCA responded positively to an invitation to take part in that project. The terms of reference of that study were to examine the classification standard for the group, with the objective of determining its strengths and its weaknesses. Following that first phase, a second study was foreseen to look at the causes of problems, to design alternatives and to recommend specific courses of action.

On October 1, 1975, the Ministry of Transport sent a copy of the phase one report to the president of CATCA. In the letter which accompanied this report, the ministry indicated that it was studying the report to determine what steps should be taken to remedy some of the problems. It indicated that "one possibility"—I repeat, "one possibility"—under active consideration could be a full-scale revision to the classification standard. The letter indicated that it would seek CATCA's participation in a second phase of the study. Clearly, this report does not indicate any particular course of action. On January 13, 1976, the ministry wrote to the president of CATCA informing him that the conduct of the second phase of the internal study had been approved, and confirmed earlier participation of an executive member of CATCA. That is after the AIB regulations came into effect.

The date, terms of reference and directions are particularly significant in terms of the current disagreement. The terms of reference were to develop a new classification standard for the air traffic control occupational group which would to the greatest extent possible satisfy the following requirements: resolve the problem issues, provide a basis for ensuring equitable salary, and be acceptable to the employer. The committee was also to re-examine the point-rating method of re-evaluation. I want to stress that this was an internal study, because the leader of the NDP, quite rightly, focused on this area of possible prior commitment in some of his comments. When a final proposal was developed, it was to be subject to approval by Treasury Board which, of course, is responsible under the Financial Administration Act.

Consequently, in terms of the Anti-Inflation Board compensation bulletin I, and that board's ruling on what constitutes a commitment made prior to October 14, 1975, Treasury Board is convinced that nothing in the actions taken prior to October 14, 1975, constitutes a prior commitment that would exempt the cost of introducing a new classification plan from the application of the anti-inflation guidelines.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, in June, 1976, CATCA signed its first collective agreement after the anti-inflation program was in effect. There was no demand for a new classification plan when they signed that agreement, and no claim for exemption of resultant costs from anti-inflation guidelines. CATCA clearly does not have a case of prior commitment in terms of a classification program. If they had had a belief in that prior commitment, they certainly would not have turned down the government's offer to include CATCA's position in a signed agreement to be sent to the AIB. With the permission of the House, I am quite prepared to table the letters to support the government's contention in that argument. I am prepared to table the two letters referred to, as well as the terms of reference of phase two of the study. I am in the hands of hon. members.

I am satisfied that a case has been established that in the most crucial aspect of this dispute, that is, the classification area, there was no prior commitment. Therefore, there is no justification to include it within the exemptions to the guidelines, which would have been the only alternative the government would have supported.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I am sorry to interrupt the hon. minister, but I should seek the consent of the House to table the documents. Is there consent for the minister to table the documents?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Orlikow: Mr. Speaker, would the minister permit a question?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The hon. member for Winnipeg North (Mr. Orlikow) wishes to ask a question of the minister. Does the minister accept a question?

Mr. Andras: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Orlikow: If it was as clear as the minister suggested, that implementation of the classification and the rates of pay required under that classification would breach the arithmetic guidelines as established by the anti-inflation legislation and the board, why was the government not prepared to submit that agreement to the Anti-Inflation Board? And if it is as clear as the minister says, that it would breach the guidelines of the Anti-Inflation Board, would they not scale down the rates as they have in respect of so many other agreements?

• (1710)

Mr. Andras: That gives rise to the question of the method of submitting it. I have said we are not going to sign an agreement when we clearly believe that it implies support for an increase above the maximum AIB guidelines. We did say we totally disagreed with CATCA's position, and we clearly set forth our position that 8 per cent was the maximum. But in the final moments of the negotiation we said they could test that 12.6 which included 4.6 due to the classification pay conversion which we were satisfied would not be accepted by the AIB. There was an opportunity for them to test it.

Mr. Broadbent: Would the minister permit a further question? I apologize for having been out of the House for a few minutes, as I had to be, but I believe I caught the gist of the hon. gentleman's argument, which was that there was no prior commitment on the question of reclassification. I have a series of letters, going back some 2½ years, between the Ministry of Transport and the union about making it clear that the government and the union were interested in discussing the reclassification issue.

I am asking the minister whether he disputes this, and if he does not, whether he would not agree there is nothing in the anti-inflation law, and nothing in the regulations issued in pursuance of that law, which says that for workers to get benefits as a result of reclassification there has to be a written prior agreement in principle. The minister nods. He is now telling us there is such a regulation. I have looked for such a regulation but have not found it. To save time, could he tell the House where we can find this regulation which says there has to be prior agreement, in principle, on reclassification?

Mr. Andras: Mr. Speaker, I used the expression "pattern of settlement" or "pattern of decision" in relation to the Anti-Inflation Board. They have not accepted anything but a clear and quantifiably accountable commitment.

Mr. Broadbent: In how many cases?

Mr. Andras: I cannot give the hon. member that information off the top of my head, but I do not know of any cases where there has not been a clearly established prior commitment. I think the letters I have tabled may be the same as those to which the hon. member has referred, and they come nowhere close to the question of a quantifiable increase due to reclassification, or even imply that such a decision had finally been taken. The point which the hon. member has raised is an important one.

Mr. Broadbent: My information is that there is only one case. There may well be many more where there has been a prior commitment. If that is the situation, it is going very far if one generalizes from a single incident. Apart from that, there is another question I should like to ask the minister. Just because the board decided that in its opinion a written prior commitment was essential in cases upon which a favourable ruling could be made, is the board precluded, in terms of the law or the regulations or even of its own practices, from deciding that in this particular case—

Some hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. I believe the hon. member is abusing the rules. In asking these questions and intervening in this way, he is intruding upon the time available to other members who wish to take part in the debate on second reading of the bill.

Mr. Broadbent: We shall do it in committee, then.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In due course, in committee, the hon. member will have all the time he needs.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina-Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, at the outset of my intervention in this debate may I say I agree with my leader and with the position taken by my party, that while the right to strike and the collective bargaining process are a necessary and worth-while part of the structure of our society, there are occasions on which in certain circumstances the public right may exceed the smaller right, in this instance the right to withhold services. That smaller right must sometimes be sacrificed.

Surely, though, on such occasions the people whose particular right is being sacrificed for the greater good of the public must be dealt with reasonably, responsibly and in good faith. It is my opinion that in this instance, thanks to the Minister of Transport (Mr. Lang) and the people of Treasury Board, the whole process has been handled in a manner which is irresponsible and which amounts, in my opinion, to nothing more than double-dealing.

This strike was unnecessary in the first place. I repeat what my leader said: The government, and in particular the Minister of Transport, caused this strike—and nobody else—and I hope the media will make sure that the people of Canada know who caused the strike, who brought it about. Not only was the strike unnecessary, but it could have been ended as recently as yesterday. I have no hesitation in complimenting my leader upon his activities yesterday. In a positive, responsible manner he met with members of the union and discussed the situation with members of the government, including the Prime Minister, on two occasions with respect to means for bringing the dispute to an end. The planes could have been flying last night. This sitting of parliament was totally unnecessary and would have been even less necessary had the government been willing to make one relatively minor change of heart.

I agree the strike must be brought to an end; there is no argument on that score from any corner of the House. But we in the NDP disagree with the terms and conditions laid down in the bill. I say this bearing in mind particularly the precedents set in back-to-work legislation in the past nine years. Some half dozen bills of this nature, at least, have been passed in my experience during that time. On each occasion there has been a genuine attempt by all concerned in the House to make sure that the rights of the individual workers which were to be sacrificed for the benefit of the public as a whole were borne in mind in the shape of legislation which is clear, responsible and straightforward.

The government must legislate to end the strike, but only in a manner which is fair and consistent. Mr. Speaker, this bill is not consistent with the practices we have followed in the past, let alone with the feelings of members on the opposition side. This is the first time we have departed from the principles I have mentioned, and it is not a good precedent. Surely, parliament should not be dictating the pay package when dealing with its own employees.

In light of the precedents and in light of the practices of the government, let alone proposals by members opposite, the appointment of an arbitrator to decide on what the pay package shall be is surely the least that needs to be done. We understand air traffic controllers would be willing to accept and abide by the appointment of an arbitrator. On other occasions parliament legislated pay packages when it was dealing with employees in the private sector. At no time has parliament legislated a pay package for some of its own employees. Invariably the provision was included in the legislation that it would be decided by an independent arbitrator.

This particular group of employees comes under the aegis of the Public Service Staff Relations Act, which is under the jurisdiction of the government House leader. As I understand it, this bill should have been brought in by him, because the Minister of Labour (Mr. Munro) brings in legislation for people affected by the Canada Labour Code. Perhaps the government House leader did not want to touch this with a ten-foot pole. Perhaps the President of the Treasury Board (Mr. Andras) was not anxious to introduce it either, and thus the Minister of Labour was stuck with a bad case.

There has been agreement that the crucial item which brought about the breakdown ending in a strike situation was the refusal of the government to do something logical and fair which would have ended, once and for all, any disagreement between the government and the Canadian Air Traffic Control Association as to what was proper under Anti-Inflation Board laws and regulations. The government's refusal to put together a single package which the employees felt had an excellent opportunity of being approved by the Anti-Inflation Board, with the exceptions, conditions and regulations under which they operate, is what caused this strike.

As the President of the Treasury Board mentioned, the issue of reclassification started over 2½ years ago. The Minister of Transport and the air traffic controllers agreed that there needed to be a reclassification because there has not been one since 1966. Improvements in technology, training, competence and techniques in that particular occupation have been such that reclassification is warranted and justified. In the entire history of labour relations, reclassification automatically results in pay adjustments which will affect the total wage package under contract.

The President of the Treasury Board cannot kid me and the workers of this country that because there was no signed agreement prior to October 14, 1974, there is no provision for approval by the AIB for wage adjustments after reclassification. Over the long history of management-worker negotiations, whenever there has been reclassification in an occupation there has been an upward wage adjustment. It is automatic. Anyone would know that, except the President of Treasury Board, the Minister of Transport and the Minister of Labour. That is one of the reasons people associated with the air traffic controllers' union were confident that AIB, in looking at the package, would take that into consideration when deciding whether the employees' package was within the guidelines.

Air traffic controllers were asking for a package to be sent, even without a signed contract. The President of the Treasury Board referred to a signed contract. There could have been agreement to send the package over to the AIB, wait for a ruling and then sit down and sign a contract based on the ruling. That is all the air traffic controllers wanted. They said repeatedly, before and during this strike, that whatever the AIB ruled, they would accept and abide by. If the government is correct, that 8 per cent was all that could be awarded, the AIB would have confirmed that, the air traffic controllers would have agreed and accepted their decision, and there would have been no strike.

If the government is incorrect, and the AIB set a 10 per cent, 10.7 per cent or a 12.44 per cent increase, the air traffic controllers would have accepted that. Treasury Board let it be known that it would accept any kind of decision by the AIB which applied to a money package including rates of pay after reclassification. Thus, there was no problem concerning reaching a settlement. Instead of that, the government got involved in double-dealing. They agreed to send the employees' package, but they would be sending their own package as well.

Since the mandate of the Anti-Inflation Board is to control wages and hold down inflation, I would be surprised if the AIB had taken the higher package after looking at the 7.5 per cent, 8 per cent and 12 per cent packages. If it is faced with a choice, it will pick the lower one. With that deliberate design by the government of sending two packages to the AIB, it was aware that the Anti-Inflation Board would choose the lowest package and there would be no decision as to whether the approximate 4 per cent would be ruled on by the AIB. Thus, it would be out in limbo somewhere.

On two or three occasions the conciliation board indicated that it was not in their mandate to make any recommendations on reclassifications and pensions, but in their reports they indicated that these two issues were pivotal and must be negotiated by the government and the air traffic controllers. That is as far as the conciliation board would go, because of their mandate. In fact, to make any recommendation regarding reclassification was specifically excluded from their mandate by the Public Service Staff Relations Board.

Why did the government indicate that it would send two packages over to the AIB? If I am wrong, I stand to be corrected, but I do not believe there is another instance where this has happened. In fact, in every instance where the government reached agreement with employees, or where there was a settlement by arbitration, only one package was sent to the AIB for their review. However, in this particular instance two packages were to be sent. If that is not designed to double-deal and not bargain in good faith, I do not know what is. This strike was caused by that fact, by the President of the Treasury Board, the Minister of Transport and this government—and by no one else. Even as late as yesterday that is all that would have been needed.

The Prime Minister could have sent a letter over to the Anti-Inflation Board along with the employees' pay package, including the reclassification, and asked for a ruling. I predict that the controllers would have been back to work and the planes flying yesterday if he had done that. It is this irresponsible and stubborn position taken by the government, which is unprecedented, which has caused the strike and which has not allowed it to end sooner.

I have a list of some 24 agreements reached between the government and different groups of its employees, either by collective bargaining and voluntary agreement, or by arbitration. I would be very surprised if there was not one single instance in these 24 in which the employees wanted one amount and the government offered some other amount. There is not a single instance in these 24 agreements that we have been informed about, reached between February 25 and July 14 of this year, of two packages being sent over to the AIB for review. In every instance, according to the government's own news release, the monetary aspects of the collective agreements were subject to review by the Anti-Inflation Board. This was the case in all of the 24 that I have on my desk, and no doubt there are many others. The agreements involved groups of employees of one hundred or two hundred workers to as many as 14,000, and the increases ranged anywhere from 6½ per cent to a total of 17 per cent over two years.

There is a wide variety of awards in all of these collective agreements, but the government sent only one package over to the AIB, not two. It did not send a government package and an employees' package; it just sent the one package which was subject to review by the Anti-Inflation Board. Surely for the sake of consistency, if nothing else, even though agreement had not been reached on the package it would have been fairer, as well as bargaining in good faith, for the government to say to its employees, "We will send the 8 per cent plus whatever is involved in the reclassification over to the Anti-Inflation Board and we will both accept what the Anti-Inflation Board rules and then sign a contract". But no, there was stubbornness, double dealing, a refusal to be consistent, let alone lack of fairness and bargaining in good faith.

The list is lengthy and I would likely use up an entire 40 minutes reading over all 24 awards, all of which were subject to review by the Anti-Inflation Board. Some of them were approved by the Anti-Inflation Board; other awards were rolled back. Under the Anti-Inflation Board guidelines this provision is built in.

In the case of the controllers, Treasury Board is attempting to prejudge whatever the Anti-Inflation Board might consider to be a settlement within the guidelines. That is surely a new stance on the part of Treasury Board. When negotiating in the past it has submitted agreements to the AIB in excess of the guidelines and has sought approval of the AIB. In some cases the approval was granted, in others it was withheld. In one case the cabinet overruled the AIB and approved a settlement.

In a two year contract between October, 1975, and October, 1977, with the Canadian Postmasters Association, Treasury Board negotiated a settlement of 14.81 per cent in the first year and 9.63 per cent in the second year. The guidelines called for 12 per cent in the first year and 10.8 per cent in the second year. The AIB recommendation approved the entire 14.81 per cent. The negotiated settlement for the first year of the contract was 2.81 per cent in excess of the guidelines for 1975; for the second year the AIB approved the agreement reached of 9.63 per cent.

With the Professional Institute of Public Servants, in a one year contract from July, 1975, to July, 1976, Treasury Board negotiated a settlement of 12.82 per cent. The guidelines provided for 12.21 per cent and the AIB rolled back the settlement to 12.21 per cent.

The Public Service Alliance of Canada, negotiating with Treasury Board on behalf of the railway mail clerks, in a two year contract running from January, 1975, negotiated a settlement of 15.6 per cent. The guidelines called for 14 per cent but the Anti-Inflation Board approved the settlement of 15.6 per cent, which is 1.6 per cent above the guidelines. For the year 1977 the railway mail clerks received three increases of 5.8 per cent, 7.3 per cent and 5.1 per cent, totalling 18.2 per cent. This was 3 per cent above the guidelines. The board approved the first two increases taking effect in June, 1977.

In the case of the penitentiary service, in a contract commencing in October, 1976, a settlement of 12.44 per cent was negotiated. The AIB guidelines allowed 8 per cent, yet the AIB recommended and approved the 12.44 per cent. All that the air traffic controllers are asking is that the package they were asking for be submitted to the AIB, and the controllers will abide by the AIB's recommendation.

I also want to deal a little further with why we oppose this bill. We do not oppose the idea of ending the strike and legislating the controllers back to work, but we do oppose using this legislation to depart from the precedents and practices of previous back to work legislation by making no provision for an independent arbitrator to make a decision on the package which would be binding on both sides. Surely we should not sit here and legislate a pay package for the government's employees; that is an unheard of, untenable and indefensible position for this parliament to take, let alone for the government, the President of the Treasury Board, and the Minister of Labour to take.

I am surprised the Minister of Labour has the nerve to present such a bill as this. I recall hearing speeches of his in the House on legislation that did provide for an independent arbitrator in back to work legislation; on those occasions he prided himself in not having parliament legislate a pay package for government employees. Why was this not done in this case? Why the exception? What else is going on which we do not know about? Or is this just another plain case of stubbornness on the part of the Department of Transport? As I have said before in this House, the minister is a walking disaster looking for a place to happen. Everything he has touched since coming to this parliament as a cabinet minister has hurt people. Everything he has tried has caused disputes, fights, arguments, and some measure of disunity or alienation somewhere in the country.

It seems to me that in this instance it was time for the Minister of Labour to stiffen his back and to get this matter settled in a proper, honourable, positive and honest manner. If the Minister of Labour had told his two colleagues, the Minister of Transport and the President of the Treasury Board, to get the package over to the AIB, get their decision and abide by it whatever the ruling, things would be different; but no, the government wants to make the AIB's ruling for them. That is what it wants parliament to do. It would be tempting for the members of the AIB to resign since their functions are being usurped by government legislation which judges awards made under the Anti-Inflation Board legislation and regulations. Surely that is not the position for this parliament to take, let alone the government, and it is the fundamental reason why we cannot vote for this legislation on second reading.

We earnestly hope that the Minister of Labour will persuade his colleagues to accept an amendment, and it does not particularly matter whether it comes from a member of one of the opposition parties or whether it is moved by a government member so long as it does something about an independent arbitrator who would decide on what would be a fair and proper package which both sides can accept, and which will then be subjected to the review of the AIB.

Why should members of the House get the Minister of Transport and the President of the Treasury Board off the hook and out of a mess of their own creation? Why should we be responsible for bailing them out? I hope that, if nothing else, this debate will show to the public how inept and double-dealing these ministers have been and that that has been the basic cause of the strike. I hope that the official opposition will join us. I have listened to their spokesman on this and he did an excellent job of tearing the bill apart—almost as good a job as my leader did—but then he said he will vote for the bill; I do not know why. It is typical of Tories who run on both sides of the street at the same time.

In order to let the government know even more forcefully, it would be the responsibility of members of parliament, particularly on the opposition side, to vote against this legislation on second reading because the government has the majority. We should not be party to bailing out the President of the Treasury Board and the Minister of Transport because of their stubbornness and ineptness. Why should we be a party to that? If legislation accomplishes that, and it will, and brings an end to the strike, if it returns the matter of the pay package to proper collective bargaining or to the arbitration process, we will have done a good job. But why should we be party to legislation that does not do that? It will do part of it, it will get the controllers back to work, but it will not do the other essential part of making sure that the legislation is fair and that it deals honestly and in good faith with the air traffic controllers.

I urge hon. members to consider what we have to say on this, and I urge them to remember that the precedent being set here could well come back to haunt a subsequent parliament, or even a subsequent session of this parliament, because it is a precedent which we believe is unnecessary and dangerous.

This precedent could allow a subsequent government to use this as an excuse to do the same thing again, and we do not think that is the kind of precedent that should be on the law books of this country. I urge the House to get the government to accept a basic and important change in the legislation for which it will receive greater acceptance, not only from all sides of the House but from the government's own employees. The public will feel better about it as well, even though with the planes flying there is still the dispute hanging over our heads, the failure to agree. The agreement that will be now legislated by parliament will be an agreement affecting public service employees. That is not a comfortable position for any of us and it is not something in which we should be involved, so I urge the government to make the changes in the legislation for which we are asking. It will then improve labour relations with the public service and it will be a feather in the cap of all hon. members of the House.

Mr. Leonard C. Jones (Moncton): Mr. Speaker, just think that we left this House last Friday night when negotiations could and should have been taking place between the employer, the Government of Canada, and the employee, the Canadian Air Traffic Controllers Association! Within a very few hours, as a result of the actions of the Minister of Transport (Mr. Lang) and as a result of his abdication of responsibility to the people of this country and to his employees, we were called back by telephone, by telegram and, in my case, even the RCMP were out trying to find out where I was, all at the taxpayers' expense. All that costs a lot of money. Some of us came by jet, some of us came by DC-9, and some of us drove, but, by golly, they got us here. In any event, the bill is one for the taxpayers to pay.

It seems to me that there is an abdication of responsibility by the Minister of Transport (Mr. Lang) and his colleagues. Why is that? It was their responsibility to negotiate a contract. As late as yesterday they had the chance to negotiate. I think every member of the House is prepared to discuss and vote for the clauses in the bill which provide for the resumption of air traffic controllers' services in this country, but the other provisions are terrible. But I think that we should not have to legislate even those provisions to resume air controllers' services when there was a chance to negotiate. This makes me think of one famous bank. I am not particularly proud of banks in this country, but one of them had a report one year which recommended less talks. There was a chance to talk on this agreement, but the government abdicated its responsibility.

Late yesterday CATCA issued a press release which I should like to read into the record. It reads as follows:

> In a final effort to reach a negotiated settlement and end the existing air traffic control strike CATCA has made a new offer of settlement to the government. In that offer we have again stated our willingness to accept the Anti-Inflation Board's decision on the question of whether or not wage increases resulting from classification changes are within their regulations.
> We have proposed that only CATCA's proposal of an 8% across the board increase, and an additional average increase of 4.6% resulting from classification changes be incorporated in the new agreement and submitted to the AIB for approval. Pending receipt of the AIB approval an interim salary adjustment of 7.43% would be paid to the controllers.
> In order to facilitate acceptance by the government of this solution we have agreed to the government's position on all other outstanding bargaining issues. A reply to our proposal was requested as soon as possible, and we again undertook to have the normal air traffic control system in Canada in operation within six hours of a settlement.

[Mr. Benjamin.]

If it was not fair of the association to make that final offer, then I do not know what you could call it, but they were stepped upon by their employer, the government.

I have had some dealings with unions throughout the years and I have found that it is never necessary for any union to resort to a strike if the employer is fair and reasonable. In this case the employees went the last mile.

● (1750)

Yesterday afternoon, even after they had started their strike, they went the last mile. But no way; the government was not prepared to negotiate. The government wanted this parliament to assume its responsibility for it. The government abdicated its responsibility not only to the people of Canada, to the airlines and to the employees who are employed by the airlines, but also to the travelling public.

It is not a very nice thing to come from a labour constituency and be asked to legislate people back to work. That is something that happened in the slave trade. People were forced to work. The air traffic controllers wanted to work yesterday, but the government would not accept their proposal. It was a fair proposal. The controllers were prepared to let the AIB settle the matter, but the government knew what the AIB would say. I suggest that the government misinterpreted the whole purpose of the AIB. It is not supposed to replace arbitration boards or arbitrators or any other form of the process of collective bargaining.

The government made itself a dictator to decide how it was going to be done, and it almost declared how the AIB should interpret the guidelines. I suggest that the minister reconsider the wisdom of his ways. We want these people back to work, and I think they would be prepared to go back to work. They indicated that yesterday. Let us pass legislation which would provide for the resumption of air traffic control services, which would provide for an arbitrator or an arbitration board and which would get this over with now, once and for all. However, it should be done in a proper manner, not in the manner outlined by this bill.

I think it is wrong to ask this parliament to reconvene on short notice to pass legislation of this kind. If the government was going to pass legislation of this kind, it could have told us Friday night or even Thursday night. The legislation could have been brought before us at that time. But no, the government puts the taxpayers of this country to more and more expense. I am told that the airlines estimate they are losing $3 million or $4 million a day. Who pays the deficit of one of the airlines, Air Canada? The taxpayers pay that deficit.

Goodness gracious, the money lost in the last two days could have paid any salary increase the air traffic controllers are seeking. This whole thing is an example of mismanagement on the part of the government. It is another example of the abdication of the government's responsibilities. That is what mismanagement is all about.

Mr. Arnold Peters (Timiskaming): Mr. Speaker, we have been asked to pass back-to-work legislation a number of times.

That usually happens after a considerable period of disruption in areas where the public is vitally affected. However, to my knowledge this is the first time we have been asked to pass legislation or informed of the legislation before the negotiations were completed. After a long period of negotiations the union gave notice that it was in a position to go on strike on Monday night and that there would be work stoppages of the rotation type. Those stoppages would no doubt have caused considerable disruption, but certainly not the end of air transportation in Canada. If the union had operated rotating strikes as had been done in the past, the disruption would have been of relatively short duration in particular areas around the country. Undoubtedly some concern would have been caused, but there would not necessarily have been a stand-still in air transportation in our country.

Last Friday the government did not indicate that it had legislation prepared. I gather it did not have it prepared until today because it was indicated to my caucus that there was a particular bill with certain clauses affecting this situation, and that when the bill was introduced it would be a different bill eliminating some very bad aspects. The bill would have involved penalties.

Very shortly after we adjourned on Friday the Minister of Transport (Mr. Lang) went on television and said that it was his intention to introduce legislation immediately to end the strike which was to take place a number of days hence. I am sure that the Minister of Labour (Mr. Munro) will agree with me that having Saturday, Sunday and Monday to settle a strike with mediators of the calibre of Mr. Kelly, or some others I know of—and certainly most of them are not involved with the Treasury Board—provided a reasonable opportunity to settle that strike.

At that time not only the points which have been mentioned were in contention but there were a number of other points which were in contention on Friday. They were in contention on Saturday, and I gather that it was not until later, on Sunday and Monday, that a number of those points were dropped by the union. They involved important issues about which I am sure the union was concerned. They involved pensions, leave, and familiarization matters. These and other matters which were still in dispute were dropped by the union in return for just referring the issue of wages to the AIB. The union suggested that it could live with that and abide by the decision of the AIB. It seems to me that that was the best time for the Minister of Labour to get involved and to bring in his best mediators to have a look at the situation and to try to correct the bungling which took place, mainly because of the Minister of Transport.

Anyone with a Prussian-like mind can probably develop a disaster out of a reasonably negotiable situation, but after the Minister of Transport made the statements he made I can understand the leadership of that union saying that the only alternative was to shut down and to do it then. I can understand the union not wanting to accommodate the government for the next two or three days. Mr. Speaker, may I call it six o'clock?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It being six o'clock, I do now leave the chair until eight o'clock tonight.

At six o'clock the House took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The House resumed at 8 p.m.

Mr. Peters: Mr. Speaker, before lunch—

Mr. Stanfield: Which day?

Mr. Peters: Well, if you are a rural Canadian you call it lunch; if not, you call it supper. Before we rose at six o'clock I was suggesting that the previous negotiations led to the strike, because the Minister of Transport had willed this to happen.

In the two or three days leading up to the strike the union had made a number of concessions which were not met with concessions on the other side, and this is one of our problems. The Minister of Labour is responsible for some labour negotiations in the federal field; similarly, the President of the Treasury Board (Mr. Andras) also has jurisdiction over some of those negotiations. Unfortunately, Treasury Board does not engage in negotiations as other employers do; hence any settlements to which it is party differ from the kind of settlements arrived at in other labour disputes.

In the present instance parliament is being asked to legislate air traffic controllers back to work. When parliament has legislated workers back to work in the past, it has always been reasonably generous to those it legislated back to work. Usually it agreed to the appointment of an arbitration board consisting of a union representative and a management representative. If parliament does this in the present instance I presume Treasury Board, or a representative of the Department of Transport, will represent management. In addition, parliament agreed to appoint an impartial arbitrator, who agreed to consider the matter in dispute and bring in a decision on which a settlement could be based. Usually such a decision has been reasonable, acceptable and justifiable, and to my knowledge it has been done this way in the past.

Parliament is negotiating a contract, Mr. Speaker. Parliament, by passing this legislation, will determine the wage structure of the controllers and some of their conditions of work. It is rewriting their contract of employment retroactively, I presume, to January 1 of this year. Therefore parliament is negotiating their contract. Unfortunately we do not have the facts on which we can negotiate such a contract. We are not expert enough to negotiate it, and there is nobody sitting on the other side of the table, as it were. I do not think the government and the opposition should be asked to make a settlement on behalf of a third party, but this is exactly what they are doing.

I am concerned about this question because it seems likely that the Post Office employees will strike, and parliament will also be asked to settle that strike with legislation. That course is undesirable. Surely that is not the way to settle such strikes. Surely parliament should not be asked to negotiate the terms of a contract for a third party. For that reason I suggest it would have been better to consider this matter in committee. Each of the parties concerned could have been invited to present their side of the dispute to the committee. We could have asked the union to present its side of the story, Treasury Board to present its side, and could have invited members of the public to participate as well. I would have included the public, because its interest is involved, too. But the Minister of Labour did not want to do it this way. He did not want to involve a committee in the negotiations. He thinks such negotiations do not work well, which is why he did not adopt that course.

What are some of the things this bill will do? It speaks of familiarization training, and would establish a wage structure. But we in this House are discussing the classifications of controllers, knowing nothing of such classifications. The President of the Treasury Board suggested that the controllers were entitled to not more than 8 per cent, whether or not they were reclassified.

Normally the question of reclassification does not involve an exclusive advantage to either party in the negotiation. Classifications are usually worked out on the basis of acceptable compromise and are usually founded on increments both sides consider reasonable. Classifications are usually designed to encourage people to assume more responsibility, progressively. You apply for another position, in another classification category, and advance into that category.

Mr. Andras: But classification is not bargainable.

Mr. Peters: The increments are so designed as to encourage people to assume greater responsibility in the new classification. Therefore it is not always to the employee's advantage to move into another category. If he moves into another category with a pay increase, quite often that is not sufficient for the added responsibility. Therefore it is not wise to move.

● (2010)

In my experience in the mining industry, for a long time there were no job classifications. There were a number of set rates. As across the board increases took place, the rates got closer and closer together. It finally reached the point where a qualified miner got approximately ten cents an hour more than his helper. There was no advantage to a helper becoming a runner. For the extra ten cents, he had considerable added responsibility, needed to know more, and was responsible to his partner.

When the classification program was put into effect in my industry, it was mainly for the advantage of the employer. The categories were wide enough apart so that there was an advantage to apply for a higher position. The increment made it worth while. It became advantageous to apply. Quite often classifications are as much to the advantage of the employer as they are to the employee.

In the present case if the whole package had been forwarded to the Anti-Inflation Board they may have looked at the advantage to the employer and the advantage to the employee. They might have found that the 4.6 per cent in the reclassification program would have been equally advantageous to the employer and the employee. Therefore it would not have been an advantageous part of the wage package. They might have granted this on the basis that certain jobs were not being filled because the classification program was not up to date.

There will always be situations where the public is hurt extensively, even to the degree where action by parliament is necessary. However, that ought to be the exception, not the rule. It should not be as the Minister of Transport said, spelling out a number of industries that are not to have the benefit of collective bargaining. If that is so, the public had better be prepared. They will have to be overly generous with those categories that will no longer have to justify their wage increases.

There will have to be paternalism. There will have to be advantages such as there were for many years in some industries. We cannot get into the position that the hospital workers and others in similar categories get into because they were not treated generously or even justly. There were terrific repercussions when they finally got the opportunity to do something on their own.

If we are not going to provide a full bargaining position for workers under federal jurisdiction, we must substitute that with generosity. There must be fairness in our negotiations. That could easily be done in this case. The President of the Treasury Board could say that he agrees the strike must end in a fair and reasonable way, that he will establish an arbitration board and abide by their decision. I am sure the union would do the same.

If this had been done originally, the strike would not have taken place. The fact that it is taking place indicates that the Minister of Transport is saying something else. He is saying to les gens de l'air, "I will give you a pat on the back by using as rough a technique as I can on those who disagree with you." This has been the result.

There has been a great deal of vindictiveness with regard to indicating the government's position. It was willing to follow the legislative road rather than negotiating before the strike took place. The Minister of Labour will agree, I am sure, that in the three days preceding the strike there was a great possibility of further negotiation. It is my guess that the mediators were not asked to negotiate because they might have settled the problem and eliminated the possibility of this confrontation.

There will be a similar confrontation in the fall. We will be faced with the same problem unless the government treats the unions in a fair and equitable way. Rather than making it mandatory that we legislate them back to work if they go on strike, it should provide arbitration which, if impartial, will undoubtedly be accepted by the unions. We should be thinking about that road in our negotiations rather than passing legislation which is the unacceptable exception and which should be treated with the contempt that it deserves in relation to public negotiations.

Mr. John Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, I was not going to say anything in this debate.

Some hon. Members: hear, hear!

Mr. Rodriguez: In all seriousness, I did not intend to participate in this debate. However, having heard the arguments, I felt that members of parliament were participating with the sword of Damocles hanging over their heads. We were told that there are 55,000 Canadian people sitting in airports waiting to be transported and, somehow or other, we must take this legislation that has been presented and whip it through all stages in the space of 24 hours. That is an insult to any intelligent member of parliament.

Mr. Jarvis: You are insulted easily.

Mr. Rodriguez: I know the Tories do not get insulted easily. They get up and say that they disagree with the government, but they will vote for the legislation. They should be ashamed of themselves.

I intend to say a few words even though it will take a little longer to get to report stage. In any event the bill will move through report stage so quickly it will make your head spin.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Rodriguez: Just watch the show.

I said to myself that we should take our time and look at the legislation properly, so I want to say a few words about the whole process.

● (2020)

An hon. Member: Get it over with, then.

Mr. Rodriguez: First, let me say I am really impressed by the speed with which the government has moved. I am impressed by the speed with which it has moved in the face of the impending strike of the air traffic controllers. You know, Mr. Speaker, I wish it had moved with equal speed last June when the controllers went on a wildcat strike, when they broke the law, when they broke their contract and for ten days held the air travellers of Canada to ransom. But we heard not a peep out of the Tories then, and there was no move by the government. This puts their integrity into question. I suspect the government was playing on the racism which it thinks is present in the minds of the Canadian population. It did not move quickly then to save Canadian air travellers from the inconvenience caused by that strike. This is why I do not think it is incumbent upon me to expedite this legislation and help the government out of the mess in which it finds itself.

We are talking about a legal strike, a strike which has closed down the airports and kept the planes out of the skies, except, of course, for the military aircraft which brought us all here. I would remind hon. members, though, that the air traffic controllers had called for a rotating strike. Under that arrangement passengers would at least have been moved; it would not have been necessary to bus them to New York, Buffalo or anywhere else. I accuse the government of precipitating the air traffic controllers strike. And, having done that, it makes the workers the scapegoats for its mistakes. it does this consistently. That is one point I wish to make and it is directed to the whole question of the government's integrity.

An hon. Member: Oh, come on!

Mr. Rodriguez: If you don't watch your step we shall be here much longer than tonight. My second point is this: I have been here since 1972 and this bill is very different from the others with which members of the school of 1972 have had to deal in terms of sending strikers back to work. For example, I recall the bill ending the rail strike. The measure before us amounts to the imposition of a collective agreement upon a group of workers and it is the first time this has been done since I have been around here. I understand it is the first time that this has ever happened, the first time members of parliament have participated in collective bargaining with government employees. The precedent is a very strong one.

I cannot help recalling the debate which took place here in 1973 when parliament sent the railway workers back to work. I want to refer specifically to a comment made at that time by the then minister of transport, Jean Marchand. In the course of that debate he made an emotional speech during which he said:

> How is the level of wages established? Is it in accordance with a certain rule of justice? No. It is according to the strength of each party.

He went on to ask:

> How are we as members of the House to say what the settlement should be? We cannot say that. The only reason we are here is because there is a national emergency and the only thing we can deal with is that emergency, not the dispute between the parties.

These sentiments are important because they were repeated later in the debate by the present Minister of Labour. He said then—he has changed his mind since:

> If we start negotiating on the floor of this House and make our own subjective judgments instead of leaving it to the other process, the worker may decide he can get a better deal from the parliamentarians . . . why then should he go through the conciliation process?

This is the precedent we have all come to accept as members of parliament, namely, that we cannot participate in the actual negotiating which takes place between the worker and the employer. That is not our responsibility, and in this case the government has reneged on its duty and placed it upon members of parliament who never participated in the face to face negotiations with the workers involved. This being the case, I do not think that I, or anyone in my party, should be concerned with this finagling with the collective bargaining process, especially bearing in mind the precedent the government is setting in this particular bill.

I also heard some shameful statements from government spokesmen. The President of the Treasury Board (Mr. Andras) said the government could not send to the AIB anything which was obviously in excess of the guidelines. Mr.

Speaker, I recall quite well an earlier dispute in which I took an interest. I recall the agreement which was made between the Post Office and the postal workers after the last strike. The increase offered was clearly in excess of the guidelines in every way. It went to the AIB and the AIB rolled it back. So what did Bryce Mackasey, that great friend of the worker do? He took it to the cabinet and the cabinet overruled the AIB. Therefore it seems to me the government has the power to do what is fair and right in a particular situation affecting its employees.

In this instance the government is asking parliament to take it off the hook and save its skin. Well, if the people of Canada do not get the story properly through the media, it is not my fault or the fault of my colleagues in this party. I have described exactly what the government is doing. It is shirking its responsibility. Which brings me to the other question in my mind—what is the explanation for this, what is the reason behind it?

It is no secret whatsoever that the cabinet is top heavy with right wingers. Things have a tendency to sneak up. It is not surprising the hon. member for Crowfoot (Mr. Horner) should be able to find a home there—in fact he is to the left of most of them. Perhaps I am unduly suspicious, but sometimes I think there is a Machiavellian move under way. The Minister of Transport was interviewed on Sunday morning on a CBC program—I know he is going around saying he was misquoted, but these words are taken from the transcript of the program. He is quoted as having said:

● (2030)

. . . in cases like this (the air controllers' strike) we are going to have to very seriously consider whether or not that right to strike is at all appropriate.

The government is sensing a mood left by the National Citizens' Coalition. One only has to take a look at the ad placed in the Globe and Mail this morning indicating that there ought to be a removal of the right to strike in the public sector. One has to give the Minister of Transport credit for sensing the public mood.

Mr. Benjamin: That was one of their boys.

Mr. Rodriguez: Yes, he is the honorary president of the National Citizens' Coalition. Because he is sensing that mood, we are finding this right wing shift of the cabinet and the government in trying to absorb all the Tories' natural allies and supporters.

Mr. Benjamin: Right on. The Tories have had it.

Mr. Rodriguez: In effect, that is where he is headed. There was another article in this morning's Globe and Mail under the name of Geoffrey Stevens.

Mr. Benjamin: Who is he?

Mr. Rodriguez: I suspect he is the mouthpiece for some insider in the bureaucracy or in the cabinet.

An hon. Member: The NDP Party.

[Mr. Rodriguez.]

Mr. Rodriguez: He is promoting that same sort of philosophy through the media and across the country.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: The NDP has no mouthpiece.

Mr. Rodriguez: Yes, we have Lubor Zink.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: The NDP has no mouthpiece, only a mouth.

Mr. Rodriguez: It seems to me that is what is afoot. They are trying to remove the right to strike from the public sector. They want us to return to the past.

The right to strike is a basic right of the worker. It is the only thing he has. The challenge is to embark on a collective bargaining process, and the challenge is to stick with the issue throughout the process to a successful conclusion. To have the right to strike removed takes away the right to collective bargaining, which is the basic right of workers no matter where they live or work.

When I was teaching school I was told that school teachers were essential workers. One year in North York in Toronto the garbage collectors went on strike. They were not supposed to be essential workers, but with every passing day they became more essential. It was interesting to see the transformation in the newspapers and the media. They were talking about the removal of their right to strike.

Mr. Benjamin: Remove the garbage from the media.

Mr. Rodriguez: The government has suddenly discovered it has a problem on its hands with respect to collective bargaining and the air traffic controllers. I am an unbiased person when it comes to judging the Liberal government.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Rodriguez: The hon. member for Parry Sound-Muskoka (Mr. Darling) is aware of the fact that I am serious about that. I am an objective person when it comes to the government's performance. We are heading toward a serious situation right now, and I am referring to the postal workers. We are faced with the same evasive tactics—

An hon. Member: Order.

Mr. Rodriguez: I am sure that in the middle of the fall this year we will be here debating legislation putting the next group of workers back to work, which will be the Canadian Union of Postal Workers.

Where is the good faith bargaining when we have a government which is committed to taking the easy way out by using parliament to legislate workers back to their jobs before they are in a strike position? It seems to me that has been circumvented completely.

As I have pointed out and as other speakers have pointed out, the question of parliament putting into effect a collective agreement for the workers is contrary to the precedents of this House. It is something which has never been done before.

Knowing how this government can take a precedent and write it all the way to kingdom come, I am afraid this is just a first. Shortly down the road it will be the postal workers, the letter carriers' union, and then the entire public sector will be devoid of any meaningful collective bargaining. I object to that. I object to what that is doing to the workers and the collective bargaining process.

At this particular time the government is talking about tripartism, sitting down to work things out, discussing and coming to agreements. But without any sort of meaningful collective bargaining, the government slipped a bill into this House which will superimpose a collective agreement on a group of workers. Thus, I do not hesitate when I say that my party opposes the action of the government in relation to this particular situation with the air traffic controllers. We will give evidence of the position we have taken by voting against it when the bill finally comes to a vote.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): All those opposed to the motion will please say nay.

Some hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): In my opinion the yeas have it.

And more than five members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ethier): Call in the members.

The House divided on the motion (Mr. Munro (Hamilton East)), which was agreed to on the following division:

After the taking of the vote:

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. During the taking of the vote Mr. Condon rose in his place and was recognized and recorded as Mr. Collenette. The record will be appropriately corrected to show Mr. Condon as having voted.

And the result of the vote having been announced:

Mr. Speaker: I therefore declare the motion carried.

Motion agreed to, bill read the second time and the House went into committee thereon, Mr. Laniel in the chair.

The Chairman: Order, please. House in committee of the whole on Bill C-63, to provide for the continuation of air traffic control services. Shall clause 2 carry?

On clause 2—Definitions.

[Translation]

Mr. Prud'homme: Mr. Chairman, I just want to draw your attention to the fact that there is a disagreement between the English and the French versions of clause 2. We should place the words "collective agreement" elsewhere, as well as "employee and employee organization". All I want to say is that the English version does not correspond to the French version.

● (2120)

The Chairman: Order, please. I would point out to the hon. member that as usual the definitions in bills are placed in alphabetical order, both in the French version and in the English version; the French definition does not necessarily come in the same order as the English version, but it can be found further down.

[English]

Clause agreed to.

On clause 3—Notice to be given.

[Translation]

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): Mr. Speaker, I note a difference in the French version, in clause 3(2). The words "les fonctions de son emploi" are missing, so I suggest that clause 3 be amended by striking out line 10 at page 2 of the French version and substituting the following therefor:

dre, selon le cas, les fonctions de son emploi.

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. It is my interpretation that the amendment proposed by the minister is more in the terminology than otherwise. I think it should be considered more as a printing correction than an amendment. The sense is exactly the same. That may be an easier way of solving the problem. Is there unanimous consent to make the correction and accept the interpretation of the minister?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Amendment agreed to.

Clause 3 as amended agreed to.

On clause 4—Return to work not to be denied and employees not to be disciplined.

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Chairman, the central point that we made in the second reading stage of the debate in outlining our opposition to this iniquitous piece of legislation—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Broadbent: I wish the Liberal backbenchers would get back to their serious work which is writing newsletters to their constituents.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Broadbent: I am sorry, I am probably giving them more credit than they are due. I know it is difficult for Liberal backbenchers to take the civil liberties of Canadians seriously, but some of us are actually trying to practice what we preach.

I said earlier that we oppose this legislation because there is one central part of the package that is objectionable. It is objectionable on the grounds that there was a proposition that according to two legitimate interpretations of the anti-inflation law which is in force in Canada now, it would be possible to conclude that the contract proposal put forward by CATCA, which included a wage increase related to reclassification, was a legitimate one and, second, that such a proposal would not be consistent with the law—

[Mr. Prud'homme.]

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): What clause are you dealing with?

Mr. Broadbent: Clause 5.

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): We are on clause 4

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Shall clause 4 carry?

Some hon. Members: Carried.

Clause agreed to.

On Clause 5—Term of collective agreement extended.

Mr. Fraser: Mr. Chairman, I shall be brief. Consistent with the position I took this afternoon, clause 5(4) indicates that while there is provision for aspects of the schedule as presented in this bill to be altered before an arbitrator, there is a limitation placed on what that arbitrator can do. The arbitrator is confined to making such internal changes in the schedule as he may see fit, but not to allow the aggregate amount allowed under that schedule to be changed.

My point is that we believe it is appropriate that the argument that these prevail, and there was plenty of discussion on that this afternoon and tonight, to the effect that there is an arguable case for a larger amount to be claimed, that the amount over the schedule which is still to be argued ought to be put before an arbitrator because it is against the principles that have been enunciated and confirmed on both sides of the House that this House should determine the final terms of settlement of back to work legislation. As a consequence I move, seconded by the hon. member for Grenville-Carleton:

That subsection 5(4) at page 3 be amended by striking out lines 28 to 32 thereof and substituting therefor the following:

"Of pay and any such variation is binding on the parties to the collective agreement to which this Act applies."

● (2130)

The Chairman: Perhaps while the Chair considers the acceptability of the amendment the committee could hear the Leader of the New Democratic Party with regard to another proposed amendment to which the hon. member referred earlier in his remarks.

Mr. Fraser: On a point of order, Mr. Chairman, I ask the courtesy of the House so that I can clarify one point. The object of the amendment I have put forward is to enable the arbitrator to increase the total amount payable under the schedule and change the specific items under the schedule. Nonetheless, our interpretation of the bill, as it would then stand, is that the result would still be subject to the ruling of the Anti-Inflation Board.

The Chairman: I do not disagree with the hon. member's point of view but I must be guided by the rules and precedents of the House. I have to be guided by one citation in particular—the hon. member will find it in both May and Beauchesne in different words. But it reads in Beauchesne's citation, 246(3) as follows:

> The guiding principle in determining the effect of an amendment upon the financial initiative of the Crown is that the communication to which the royal demand or recommendation is attached must be treated as laying down once for all (unless withdrawn and replaced) not only the amount of a charge but also its objects, purposes, conditions and qualifications.

I am seeking to determine whether the wording of the amendment might have an effect which is contrary to this citation.

Mr. Fraser: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. On the notice paper the recommendation reads:

> His Excellency the Governor General recommends to the House of Commons the appropriation of public revenue under the circumstances, in the manner and amounts and for the purposes set out in a measure entitled "An Act to provide for the continuation of air traffic control services".

That is a very general order and, besides, there is nothing specific in the legislation to determine the exact amount of money required. This is not in any ordinary sense a money bill. The thrust of the legislation is to require a return to work of employees within a bargaining unit who are legally on strike. The bill sets out certain terms in accordance with which remuneration would be worked out. If, in dealing with legislation of this sort, no amendment can be made by members of the House of Commons, I can only say we have been brought back here from all parts of the country at great public expense to little purpose. The government is telling us, in effect: do not suggest that there should be any amendment to the bill.

The citation the Chair has just read suggests that the House is completely unable to effect any amendment to this legislation, the intent of which is to return to work, under certain conditions, people who are legally on strike. The thrust of clause 5(4) is to establish a means of working out by arbitration adjustments in a certain schedule. The principle we want recognized is that there ought to be no limits to the aggregate amount in that schedule, and in the absence of anything specific in the order or in the legislation I would ask you, Mr. Chairman, to find that the citation which you have read from Beauchesne is not applicable in this case.

The Chairman: I do not disagree with the purpose the hon. member is seeking to achieve but I have to be guided by the terms of the recommendation and it is impossible for the Chair to dissociate the recommendation from the bill. Clause 5(4) sets a limitation upon the arbitrator. It would allow him to make changes as long as the aggregate compensation provided for by the schedule was not altered in total. The hon. member's amendment seems, in my view, to open the door to the expenditure of more money. If the hon. member is able to convince me otherwise, I am willing to accept the amendment. Indeed, if there is any doubt in my mind I am ready, with some reservations, to let the committee decide.

Mr. Fraser: Let me draw this to your attention, Mr. Chairman, with respect. In 1973, when the House considered a bill to provide for the return to work of railway workers, amendments which changed the basis of the payments were found acceptable. The difference, of course, was that the dispute on that occasion concerned a private corporation. Nevertheless, the principle is the same. The process of debating this matter and considering the legislation becomes very ineffectual indeed should Your Honour follow the course which you may feel is necessary on the narrow basis of the precedent just read to the House.

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): I do not intend to deal at any length with the argument advanced by my hon. friend as to the breadth of the Royal recommendation which, framed as it is, really places an iron band around the legislation. If Your Honour rules in the way which you seem inclined to do at the moment we shall find it almost impossible to make an amendment, and having regard to our tradition perhaps you ought to consider carefully whether it is acceptable to limit our deliberations upon a statute in such a way because of the nature of the Royal recommendation.

There is another point I wish to make. It has to do with Your Honour's concern that the amendments might increase the amount of money directly payable under the bill. In my view, that is not the case. The amendment would not increase the amount of money directly payable under the bill. It allows steps to be taken which are already provided for by statute and in the estimates whereby the government would negotiate with the union, if necessary see that an arbitrator is appointed and, in the end, arrange for a hearing by the AIB.

The settlement being enacted by the bill sets the floor, but the amendment would allow other steps to take place. If any increase were permitted, it would be paid from the contingency fund established for that program and that purpose. The amendment does not sanction expenditures as such. It removes a discriminatory clause which would deny to one particular group the opportunities for arbitration and the opportunities for appeal which are already sanctioned by statute and the estimates which would apply to any other public service union not affected by the direct legislation.

The provision to encompass that with which Your Honour is concerned is already there but with this legislation in the form in which it is, unlike any other union in the public service, this union cannot take advantage of it. For those reasons I hope Your Honour could direct his mind away from finding the amendment an improper one.

The Chairman: I wish to thank the hon. member for Grenville-Carleton who has made some very interesting points. The first one concerning the Royal recommendation is something the Chair should consider in this type of situation. At the same time, the second point referred to the existing statute which permits negotiation and the provision of moneys for these negotiations upon settlement of labour disputes. If I accept the amendment in its present form, after these arguments, I wish to warn the committee not to consider the acceptance of this amendment as an open door to any kind of other amendments, especially on the first point basing ourselves on the wide scope of a Royal recommendation. Therefore I am accepting the amendment, and I will put it to the committee.

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Chairman, may I rise on a point of order?

The Chairman: Does the hon. member for Oshawa-Whitby wish to speak on the amendment? I have to put the amendment. Does he wish to speak on the procedural debate?

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Chairman, I rise on a point of order and in so doing I want to indicate to the spokesman for the conservative party that we have every intention of supporting what we regard as a very sensible and just amendment. I am rising simply to indicate that we have prepared an amendment which might more adequately come to grips with the same problem. It happens to come earlier in the bill, and I should like to put it before the committee. Then the Chairman can rule whichever way he wants in regard to having the vote on one rather than the other. Our amendment comes earlier in the same clause. I should like to move it now, and then it will be up to the Chair to decide whether we should vote on the one which comes first in terms of time or on the one that comes first in terms of sequence of the bill.

The Chairman: Order, please. The hon. member should allow the chair to put the amendment moved by the hon. member for Vancouver South in front of the committee. The way is open for him to present another amendment. Normally his amendment would be voted upon first if it is listed before or if it refers to a previous paragraph of the same clause. However, I will have to look at his amendment and decide upon it at that time. Moving away from our normal procedure and knowing there is another amendment to be presented by the hon. member for Oshawa-Whitby, I hope the committee will bear with me as I invite the hon. member to present his amendment in order for me to decide which amendment will be considered first, and then I will ask the committee to make its decision on either one of the two.

Mr. Broadbent moved:

That paragraph (a) of subclause (3) of clause 5 be amended by adding immediately thereafter, at the end of line 5 on page 3 of Bill C-63, the following words:

"provided, however, that the matter of increasing these rates of pay to amounts not greater than the minimum proposals made by the employee organization shall be referred to an independent arbitrator whose findings shall be binding with effect from January 1, 1977."

If I may speak to the amendment, I want to return to—

Some hon. Members: Order!

The Chairman: I thought the hon. member's amendment, although it was in regard to the same clause, might have a different implication than the amendment presented by the hon. member for Vancouver South. Because of the fact that both amendments try to achieve about the same thing, a decision will have to be made by the committee on the first amendment moved by the hon. member for Vancouver South.

[The Chairman.]

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

The Chairman: Does the hon. member for Oshawa-Whitby wish to rise on a point of order regarding this matter?

Mr. Broadbent: No, I do not wish to rise on a point of order. I assume we are continuing the debate.

The Chairman: The hon. President of the Privy Council.

Mr. MacEachen: Mr. Chairman, might I suggest to the committee that under the provisions of Standing Order 6(5) we interrupt the proceedings to ask for an extension of the sitting of the House for the purpose of further consideration of this bill?

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

The Chairman: Order, please. In view of the request of the hon. minister, it is my duty, pursuant to Standing Order 6(5)(a), to interrupt the proceedings of the committee of the whole in order to permit the House to make a decision on the motion proposed by the hon. minister.

Progress reported.

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, pursuant to the request which has just been made by the President of the Privy Council (Mr. MacEachen), I should like to move, pursuant to Standing Order 6(5):

That this House continue sitting beyond the ordinary time of daily adjournment this day for the purpose of continuing the consideration of Bill C-63, an act to provide for the continuation of air traffic control services.

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. All hon. members are aware of Standing Order 6(5) which relates to such a motion to extend the hours of sitting for the purpose of considering a piece of legislation or an order that is under consideration. Upon putting the question, the Chair shall inform hon. members, as mentioned in paragraph (b) of the Standing Order, that those members who object to the motion shall rise in their place. If ten members or more rise, the motion shall be deemed to have been withdrawn. Otherwise, the motion shall have been adopted. The hon. member for Grenville-Carleton (Mr. Baker) on a point of order.

● (2150)

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): I have listened very carefully, Mr. Speaker, and I thought I caught correctly the words of the motion put by the parliamentary secretary which were broad and all-encompassing, and could be deemed to carry with them committee stage and third reading to be completed this evening. I should like the assurance that, while this happens to be a worth-while objective, it is not the purport of this particular matter.

Mr. MacEachen: That is correct.

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): I see the President of the Privy Council (Mr. MacEachen) is nodding his head.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: If the hon. member, before raising the point of order, had given me the chance to put the question he would perhaps have had his answer. The motion does not relate to any such indication. I would therefore put it to the House at this time. It has been moved under Standing Order 6(5) by the Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Goodale), seconded by the hon. member for Saint John-Lancaster (Mr. Landers):

That this House continue sitting beyond the ordinary time of daily adjournment this day for the purpose of continuing the consideration of Bill C-63, an act to provide for the continuation of air traffic control services.

All those opposed to the motion will please rise. I declare the motion carried.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. MacEachen: Mr. Speaker, I should like to propose a motion under the provisions of Standing Order 44. I move:

That notwithstanding any Standing Order Bill C-63 may be proceeded with at any number of stages this day.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. Although the Chair identifies some disposition among the majority of the members to agree, I have some hesitation as to the time of moving the motion knowing that the House came out of committee for the purpose of agreeing to a motion by the minister to extend the hours of sitting beyond the normal hours to consider a certain piece of legislation. I have some hesitation about the minister taking advantage of the same opportunity to move a motion under Standing Order 44 and I am ready to accept some argument on that. I also wish to mention to the minister that this motion is debatable and could be debated for an hour.

Mr. MacEachen: On that point, Mr. Speaker, I did consider the very point you have raised before deciding to take this course of action. The Standing Order is very clear. It says that "a Minister of the Crown may, at any time when Mr. Speaker is in the Chair, propose a motion". It does not surround the moment of proposing this motion with any conditions. The plain fact is that the Speaker is in the Chair and the Standing Order plainly says "at any time".

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I must admit that the words "at any time" are fairly convincing. I will therefore put the motion to the House. Under this Standing Order the same rule would apply, namely, that ten members would have to stand for the motion to be withdrawn. The motion still remains, of course, debatable. The Pesident of the Privy Council (Mr. MacEachen), seconded by the President of Treasury Board (Mr. Andras), moves:

That notwithstanding any Standing Order Bill C-63 may be proceeded with at any number of stages this day.

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the said motion?

Mr. Leonard C. Jones (Moncton): Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that this is not one of the motions contemplated by this Standing Order. There are other provisions in the Standing Orders having to do with three readings in the same day. I suggest that the minister of the Crown who moved the motion did not indicate in the motion or the preamble thereto that there was any special urgency for third reading tonight.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I think the hon. member for Moncton (Mr. Jones) has the right to be heard at this time.

Mr. Jones: The very Standing Order under which the minister purports to make his motion provides that he is supposed to indicate something which he did not indicate, namely, that there was a serious and urgent matter here. If this motion is to have any effect, this should have been done. Furthermore, in order to have three readings in one day the legislation must deal with an extraordinary matter. Is it extraordinary? I suppose it is to re-write in a few hours an agreement reached by a bargaining unit. I think the minister's motion is strictly out of order on several grounds and it should not be entertained. I object to it very strongly.

Some hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I must bring to the attention of the hon. member that the motion is already in front of the House and that a decision has been rendered by the Chair, rightly or wrongly, which has not been tested in due time. If no other member wishes to speak to the motion I will put the question on the motion.

Mr. John Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that we have a bill here which is before committee of the whole. As we go through the bill we find ministers bobbing up like jack rabbits out of hats pointing out that certain parts of the bill do not coincide, that the French version does not coincide with the English, and vice-versa. It seems to me we are proceeding with undue haste. Moving quickly to deal with all stages out of hand without making a decision after we finish committee stage of the bill seems to me rather precipitately giving power to the government to move all stages this evening. It seems to me that is not the way to deal with this serious matter of putting into force a collective agreement for a group of workers. If members of parliament let the government escape with this kind of sleight of hand under this particular Standing Order, I do not think we would be serving the purposes for which we have been elected and for which we are debating this bill here tonight.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some hon. Members: Question.

• (2200)

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the said motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: No members having risen, I declare the motion carried.

The House will now resume in committee of the whole for the consideration of the bill.

House again in committee of the whole, Mr. Laniel in the chair.

[Translation]

The Chairman: When the committee interrupted its proceedings, it was studying Clause 5.

[English]

Shall the amendment moved by the hon. member for Vancouver South carry?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Chairman, I want to speak in support of the amendment before the committee. I hope that we can have a minimum of procedural hassles and deal with the substance of the issue which is embedded in the hon. member's amendment. The point at stake here is not whether X amendment or Y amendment passes or fails. One hopes that the substance that the opposition parties want to have in this measure carries in the House.

In supporting the amendment I want to indicate the reasons why we do so.

Mr. Chairman, I wonder if you can get some order on the government side in this rather important debate.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Broadbent: This afternoon we heard a serious speech by the President of the Treasury Board in which he tried to come to grips with the argument that the point made in CATCA's proposal that reclassification, which is embedded in this bill and in the agreement, should not be a consideration for a further increase in salary. I would like to deal with that argument and deal in point form with the issues that the President of the Treasury Board raised, because in my view the argument raised by the President of the Treasury Board—and specifically the conclusion that he drew—is a false conclusion, and since that is central to the whole dispute between CATCA and the Treasury Board, it is central to the decision that we will reach here in discussing the legislation today, and it is the point to which the amendment that we are now considering hopes to provide a solution.

The issue is whether or not the reclassification of the members of CATCA should entitle them to a legitimate understanding that the AIB would accept their reclassification as warranting an extra 4 per cent or 5 per cent in income. I would like to put on the record the following considerations in support of their claim, which is all that is required for submission to the AIB, and it is that precisely which the government has denied.

During the period from June 6, 1975, to January 13, 1976, there were no fewer than six letters exchanged between the Department of Transport and CATCA concerning reclassification. Earlier this afternoon the minister selected two of these letters and had them tabled. I submit that if one wants to look at all six letters, what one will find in that exchange of correspondence between the union and the Department of Transport is an agreement that the issue of reclassification is of fundamental importance and should be a matter of continuing negotiation between the government and the union.

I want to make the case beyond that, but for our purpose I think it is sufficient to have a reading of those six letters to agree—the President of the Treasury Board would agree with that conclusion if he were here—that there was acceptance on both sides that reclassification, which has not been done in that industry since 1966, was a matter of serious concern leading to the present negotiation. That is the first point.

The second point is perhaps of even greater importance to the acceptance of the idea that reclassification is central to the dispute, and that is that the government, in the contract that it has been willing to sign with CATCA, has indicated not only a willingness to accept 10 per cent, 20 per cent or 40 per cent of the reclassification areas but has indicated it will accept 100 per cent. There has been agreement between the union and the government on 100 per cent of the cases involving reclassification which, I submit, has come about precisely because there was agreement going back some years before the controls system came into being on the need for such reclassification.

The third point I would add is that the government's own additional acceptance, repeated by Treasury Board officials, repeated by some ministers, if my memory serves me correctly, and indeed repeated at the press conference yesterday by the Prime Minister, of the idea that if both packages were submitted to the AIB—namely, the one that the government thinks is desirable, and the one that is about 5 per cent higher that CATCA thinks is desirable—and AIB accepted the higher one, the government would go along with it. I submit that it would go along with it precisely because it has accepted the idea of reclassification.

Reclassification is central to the dispute. It goes back, in terms of discussion, debate and correspondence between the union and the government, to a period preceding the establishment of the controls. But above and beyond that, I do not rest the case on that issue—the case in favour of sympathetic consideration of the principle that reclassification should be accepted as justifying a further increase. I would say it rests on the fact that nowhere in the law as it now exists in Canada is it spelled out what procedures are necessary to make reclassification acceptable under the guidelines.

Secondly, in the guidelines themselves and in a whole series of bulletins which have been issued by the AIB, at no point is it spelled out how the AIB is to determine whether a reclassification argument is germane and acceptable. Nowhere is it spelled out in any of the regulations or instructions from the AIB that prior discussions between the union and the government have to conclude with a written commitment. Nowhere is it spelled out in the regulations that a written commitment on the part of the government or on the part of any two bodies, whether we are talking about the private sector or the public sector, is a necessary criterion for acceptance by the AIB and for the reclassification argument to hold. I think that is central to the argument.

I notice that the President of the Treasury Board is talking to some of his officials, and I hope that he will come back into the debate tonight and respond to that issue. Does he agree that it is not spelled out in the law? Does he agree that it is not spelled out in the regulations? He says we have a case law situation in which the AIB has made some rulings on reclassification. I say to the minister that I know of only one such ruling. There may be more, but one is hardly enough upon which to generalize.

In light of the absence of all these tests of written regulations and of written law, why is the government so reluctant to have the issue go before the AIB and to allow the AIB to settle it? That really is the nub of CATCA's position. That really is the point of the amendment of the Conservative party at this stage of the bill. That really has been the central case we have made during this debate.

I want to conclude by saying that if the point which is attempted to be dealt with in this amendment had been accepted by the government two weeks ago or three weeks ago there would be no striking going on in Canada now, airplanes would be flying and members of parliament would be back in their constituencies or elsewhere instead of attending this unnecessary session we are now going through. I urge that the government give serious consideration to accepting this amendment put forward by the Conservative party, and I say on behalf of my colleagues that we will certainly support it.

Mr. Rodriguez: Mr. Chairman, I want to ask some questions relating to clause 5 and a couple of subclauses within clause 5. I presume it would be in order to do so at this time.

The Chairman: The questions would have to relate to the amendment or to the objective of the amendment which is before us. I think it would be simpler to dispose of the amendment. That would leave the opportunity for all kinds of questions regarding clause 5. Is the committee ready for the question?

Some hon. Members: Question.

The Chairman: The question is on the amendment of the hon. member for Vancouver South.

Amendment (Mr. Fraser) negatived: Yeas, 41; nays, 72.

The Chairman: I declare the motion negatived. The hon. member for Oshawa-Whitby gave the Chair notice of another amendment, which I will put to the committee under the same condition as the first one.

Mr. Broadbent moved:

That paragraph (a) sub-clause (3) of clause 5 be amended by adding immediately thereafter, at the end of line 5 on page 3 of Bill C-63, the following words:

"provided, however, that the matter of increasing these rates of pay to amounts not greater than the minimum proposals made by the employee organization shall be referred to an independent arbitrator whose findings shall be binding with effect from January 1, 1977.".

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Chairman, clause 5 really represents the part of this legislation to which we are most violently opposed, and the amendment moved by the hon. member for Oshawa-Whitby seeks to rectify what we think to be an iniquitous part of this legislation. As the leader of this party and my colleagues who spoke at second reading of the bill have said, we support the legislation to put the air traffic controllers back to work.

In the past 15 years I recall at least five occasions when back-to-work legislation has been introduced. The New Democratic Party supported that legislation because we recognized that it was in the national interest to bring strikes which were disrupting our entire economy to an end.

All members in this House from all parties have paid lip service through the years to the basic principles of labour legislation in a democracy: first, the right to bargain collectively regarding wages, hours and conditions of labour; and second, the right of a worker to withhold his or her services. However, we have recognized also that there have been situations in which either employers or employees collectively have abused the powers given to them in a free society, or created situations which became intolerable in terms of the public welfare. Therefore there are times when it is necessary to introduce legislation which will send workers back to their jobs. But in every piece of legislation for sending workers back to the job, which I can recall, we have not endeavoured to do what clause 5 of the present bill seeks to do.

● (2220)

Clause 5 actually seeks to impose a collective agreement by legislation. It would be bad enough if a private employer did it; but when the government, the employer, lays down terms upon which its own employees shall work and asks parliament to endorse those terms, that, I say, is the negation of industrial democracy in this country. The purpose of clause 5 is to put in legislative form the proposals, which the Minister of Transport (Mr. Lang) and the President of the Treasury Board (Mr. Andras) laid before the air traffic controllers. The ministers involved are the judge and jury passing judgement on the dispute, and the government asks the House to be the executioner.

Mr. Fraser: Right on.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): When parliament takes from people their basic right to free, collective bargaining and their right to withhold services, it has the responsibility to give them something in exchange. In every piece of legislation I have seen in the last 15 years ordering workers back to work, parliament has given, in exchange, an independent arbitrator or arbitration board.

In the case of the railway workers we said, in the legislation, that the offer made by the employer would be the floor below which the arbitrator could not go in making his recommendation.

What are we doing in the present case? The government is asking parliament to impose on the government's own employees terms and conditions the government has concocted, without regard to a reference to an impartial, independent body. This is the negation of everything the Liberal party has professed to stand for when, across this country, it has spoken of its faith in collective bargaining and the right of workers to withhold their services.

The point at issue in clause 5, to which my leader moved an amendment, is simple. As the President of the Treasury Board admitted this afternoon, the issue comes down to one thing, whether increased wages which may have to be paid on the basis of a reclassification to which both the government and the air traffic controllers agreed would come under the ceiling of the Anti-Inflation Board guidelines.

The minister said this afternoon that the government had worked out what the Anti-Inflation Board would be prepared to approve and had therefore put that in the legislation. I submit that the government has no more competence to foresee what the Anti-Inflation Board will decide than you or I have, Mr. Chairman. Who are they to presume what the Anti-Inflation Board will decide? Parliament set up the Anti-Inflation Board on the assumption it had the competence and experience to make these decisions. It is not up to the government to make these decisions, and then say what the Anti-Inflation Board would do.

Who can tell this House what the Anti-Inflation Board will do? The Board has changed some of the agreements the government entered into with its own employees. That shows you that the government assumed wrongly what the Anti-Inflation Board would decide. The Board announced that maximum increases of $2,400 a year would be paid to professional groups, but last year the average increase over the previous year for professional groups was $4,900, and in some categories, $7,200. Could anybody foresee that the Anti-Inflation Board would make that kind of decision? Could anyone foresee that it would allow the salary of the president of Kaiser Resources Limited to rise by $60,000, not $2,400? Was anyone to assume that the Anti-Inflation Board would make such a decision? Yet here is the government saying that in its wisdom, in its omniscience, it knows what the Anti-Inflation Board will decide, and it is therefore writing into the legislation what the employees will get.

The Prime Minister, if the press reports him correctly, says that we have no right to pass the buck. Neither the government nor any other employer has the right to pass the buck to the Anti-Inflation Board. But the fact is that again and again the government has signed agreements which, when they went before the Anti-Inflation Board, were altered. That has happened with other employers, which is understandable.

Mr. Fraser: And which was expected.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Of course, that is precisely why the Anti-Inflation Board was set up. But I defy anyone to study the regulations, study the board's decisions, and prophesy with exactitude what the board will decide. In clause 5 the government is putting itself in the place of the Anti-Inflation Board.

Mr. Fraser: And the arbitrator.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): We were told in October, 1975, that the government was to set up an anti-inflation board which would be free to make decisions, independent of the government. Now the government says that it will make that decision, and it decides what the Anti-Inflation Board would do in the case of a certain proposal. Perhaps the government does not trust the Anti-Inflation Board's judgment, which is some reflection on its appointees to the Anti-Inflation Board.

So long as the Anti-Inflation Board is in existence, the government has no right to assume what the Board will decide. It has no right to put itself in the place of the Board and say, "We know in advance what the Anti-Inflation Board will do; therefore, parliament must pass legislation to put into effect a collective bargaining agreement which has not been referred to that Board." The hon. member for Vancouver South and the hon. member for Oshawa-Whitby both tried, by way of amendment, to persuade the government to change clause 5.

Without doubt, the workers will go back to work once this bill passes. A number of items in the agreement are not in dispute. But we and the Conservative party have said, in our two amendments, that the matter of wages should be referred to an impartial body and that the government should not force parliament to impose on the government's own employees a collective bargaining agreement devised by the Minister of Transport. This is a much more important principle than some members seem to realize.

● (2230)

In the broadcast "CBC Sunday Morning," the Minister of Transport said that we should be giving serious consideration to whether we should allow strikes in the public sector. If the Minister of Labour and the government have in mind removing the right to strike from public servants, what is going to take its place? From then on we are going to have public servants' wages, hours and conditions of labour determined by the government and rubberstamped by parliament. That is what is going to happen.

If we pass this legislation as it now stands, we will be establishing a dangerous precedent. We will be saying that from now on not only has parliament the right to send workers back to the job and not only has parliament the right to say the dispute shall be submitted to arbitration, but we are saying that the government can use its majority in parliament arbitrarily and arrogantly to lay down the terms and conditions upon which workers will work.

I submit that not since Abraham Lincoln freed the slaves on this North American continent have people had to work for a wage that was dictated by the employer. If the employer and the employee cannot agree, and there comes a time when the dispute has to be settled and it is to be brought to an end by parliament, the very least the workers of this country are entitled to is that the final disposition of their wages, hours and conditions will be settled by an independent body before which they can appear to plead their case. That right is being denied them under clause 5 of this piece of legislation.

I plead with this committee of the whole to pass this amendment and to do what should have been done in the first place, namely, say to the workers, "Go back to your job and we will let you take your case to an independent body." If the government is prepared to do that, we are prepared to support this legislation. If the government is not prepared to do that, this legislation is not worth the support of any person who believes in the basic principles of democracy.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Rodriguez: Mr. Chairman, the hon. member for Oshawa-Whitby has proposed an amendment to clause 5 which is the heart and guts of the collective agreement. I am supposed to be knowledgeable about the collective agreement on which I am going to be asked to vote.

Clause 5 raises several questions in my mind. For example, there is the technical language. What are the implications of the categories A11 to A18? Where do the VFR controllers, shift supervisors and unit chiefs fit into this schedule? What do the columns under the rates of A11 to A18 mean? There are nine columns and two sets of figures. What do they constitute?

This is a complicated situation on which hon. members are being asked to vote. This is not as it was in the past. It is not the kind of situation we had with regard to the railway workers. That is the purpose of the amendment by the hon. member for Oshawa-Whitby. In the past the contract or agreement was always sent to an independent arbitrator or body to look at the settlement. In this instance we are being asked to pass a collective agreement.

One has to assume that those who are negotiating the collective agreement have some knowledge with regard to the amounts being agreed on and the terminology. They ought to know, for example, what is meant by familiarization flights in Schedule IV. I have no idea what that means.

We can see from the hour and the attitude of members that they are not the least bit interested in finding out what this means. The Minister of Labour is having a jocular time with his officials. Backbenchers on the government side are not interested in asking questions about this clause. All they are interested in is getting it over with and getting out of here. If that is the kind of collective bargaining in which members of parliament are going to participate, it is a crying shame.

The Minister of Labour likes to cast himself as the friend of labour. However, no friend of labour would set a precedent such as that contained in clause 5. He is a great one for talking about his 14 point program. He should add a fifteenth point. That ought to be that the government should never set precedents by establishing collective agreements through parliament.

Maybe the Minister of Labour ought to direct his attention to eliminating the strike program. There are a lot of other things he should do. This does not indicate that he has an attitude which is open to the trade union movement.

At this time the government is trying to cultivate its friendship with labour. At any rate that was the context of the debate which the minister and I had. He put forward the idea that labour ought to stay loose in the Canadian political scheme so that they can have some influence with the various political parties. It is obvious he has blown that façade. It is obvious that he does not speak for labour in cabinet. The Minister of Transport has taken on that job. He stated over radio and television that we should proceed in the direction of no strikes in essential services.

I want to know how much clause 5 will cost the taxpayers of Canada. How much is this agreement worth in dollars and cents, and what is the total cost of the fringe benefits?

● (2240)

Can the minister explain the meaning of the columns A11 to A18? What are "familiarization flights"? Where do VFR controllers and shift supervisors fit into the schedule? What is meant by "high density U.S.A. units"? Now that I am a bargainer, I want to know what overtime is predicted for air traffic controllers and what this is likely to cost. When I was negotiating with school boards we had to know the facts, and as a negotiator now I want to know these things. I think this is only fair ball. Can the minister explain the rates of pay set out in Schedule I? What do these nine columns of figures mean? Where does experience fit into that scheduling? I should also like an explanation—

The Chairman: Shall the amendment carry?

Some hon. Members: No.

Mr. Rodriguez: Since this is his bill, I ask the minister for an explanation of this terminology. Indeed, I demand an explanation.

Mr. Munro (Hamilton East): With respect to the terminology the hon. member is talking about in Schedule II, each and every one of these are items agreed to between the parties themselves prior to this legislation being brought down. I would assume the hon. member would wish to see adopted the very terms to which the controllers have agreed and which, presumably, they wish to be adopted. All those areas in Schedule II are areas where beneficial and constructive collective bargaining went on.

With respect to Schedule I, I am getting an estimate of the over-all cost of the 8 per cent which will amount, roughly, to 8 per cent of the present cost of the salaries of all the controllers in Canada, including their fringe benefits. As far as the eight columns of figures are concerned, these are different steps within each classification, the principles of which have been acknowledged; the parties have been operating under them for some time. The contest came with respect to reclassification, the general upgrading of the various levels within each classification.

I repeat that Schedule II represents what the parties have agreed upon, and Schedule I is a reflection of the apportionment of the 8 per cent total compensation. If the apportionment as set out is not to the satisfaction of the parties, Clause 5 provides for an arbitrator who can be requested by the controllers to decide on a different allocation. I am now in a position to give the hon. member the figure for the total cost. It is $3.8 million in terms of the increase set out in the bill before us.

Mr. Rodriguez: It may be that the minister's bureaucrats have worked this out with CATCA, but since I am now a party to the agreement as a member of parliament I should like to ask certain further questions; it is not enough for the minister to tell us that all this has been agreed to. I have been injected into this situation as a member of parliament, and since I want to vote intelligently upon the matter I need to know these things. Can the minister tell us where "experience" fits in in Schedule I? Can he tell us the number of employees associated with each of the categories mentioned?

Some hon. Members: Question!

Mr. Munro (Hamilton East): As to the number of employees affected in each of the columns of figures, I can supply that information without difficulty. We will get the information to the hon. member shortly.

Mr. Rodriguez: I do not want to be obstreperous, Mr. Chairman—

Some hon. Members: Oh!

Mr. Rodriguez: —but I should like to know, before we vote on this collective agreement, the number of employees involved in each of these categories. I want to know this as a negotiator. For the minister to say he does not have this information handy means he was expecting to push this bill through in a very short period. It is important we should get these figures, that we should be given a breakdown of these employees. Could the minister explain to me as a negotiator what is a "high density U.S.A. unit"? Is that like a low density minister?

Mr. Munro (Hamilton East): If the hon. member wants an explanation of the various terms used in Schedule II, I suggest he has only to start reading them. Perhaps that will enlighten him as to what they mean.

Mr. Rodriguez: It is obvious the minister is not familiar with his own bill. The minister gave us the figures of the cost of Schedule I, the rates of pay. I believe he said the total cost would be $3.8 million.

The Chairman: Order. It occurs to me the hon. member is going far beyond the amendment which is before the committee. The hon. member for Oshawa-Whitby has moved an amendment which is directly related to a settlement. The committee will be considering the schedules at some point. I think the hon. member should try to limit his contribution to the amendment in front of the committee at this time.

● (2250)

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Rodriguez: Perhaps we can deal with the amendment and then we can return to clause 5 and get into specific questions.

As the minister has not spoken since earlier today, I wonder what his reaction is to the amendment of the hon. member for Oshawa-Whitby.

Mr. Munro (Hamilton East): Mr. Chairman, the reason I did not respond is because I thought the President of the Treasury Board explained in some considerable detail precisely what took place in the negotiations which led to the conclusion before us. The total compensation of 8 per cent was based on a conciliation board report which was unanimous. That is not an unusual procedure when we are passing legislation with respect to back to work.

The hon. member for Oshawa-Whitby took exception to my analysis on the basis that what I did not tell the House was that reclassification was beyond the purview of the conciliation board. That is true in the sense that under the Public Service Staff Relations Act classification is not subject to the collective bargaining process and arbitration, which is part of the law passed by parliament. Naturally it is beyond the conciliation board's purview.

The costing of the total compensation of 8 per cent and how it was arrived at was not done by the government itself, as has been suggested by other members of the New Democratic Party. There was the conciliation board, with labour, management and government representation. They were unanimous in recommending a total compensation of 8 per cent in this particular case. What was left in the conciliation board report was the availability of the parties to get together with respect to the apportionment of that 8 per cent.

As the President of the Treasury Board said, when speaking for the negotiators, there was no prior commitment with respect to reclassification and the level which that would have cost, in terms of 12.6 per cent. There was a unanimous report of the conciliation board before the government came with this bill and the 8 per cent total compensation in this legislation.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Chairman, that is not an analysis. I say to the minister that that is propaganda.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Broadbent: I have in my hand a copy of the report of the conciliation board which the minister has been proudly reporting on, and which has been so loudly cheered by his yelping backbenchers. The minister keeps reiterating that this report pertains to the 8 per cent settlement. As I thought everyone understood by now, this whole issue concerns reclassification. I should like to quote from page 2 of the report—

An hon. Member: Order.

Mr. Broadbent: Whenever you present the truth to a Liberal, he wants you to shut up.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Broadbent: I say to the backbenchers, who were only listening to the minister, to listen to what the report indicates.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Broadbent: We can stay here all night. We probably will.

Mr. Corbin: That does not bother us.

Mr. Broadbent: Nothing bothers you, brother.

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): That is one of your problems, Corbin.

Mr. Corbin: Canadian people love you.

Mr. Broadbent: At page 2 the report reads as follows:

> In the course of the proceedings of this conciliation board the parties engaged in considerable discussion with respect of these two issues. As these matters are beyond the jurisdiction of this board, we make no recommendation with respect to them. However, in view of the fact that these two issues were of paramount importance, we urge the parties to continue their efforts to resolve them.

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): There is your answer.

Mr. Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): So, what is new?

Mr. Broadbent: In terms of the substance of the minister's argument, this paper does not mean a damn thing and he should know it. It indicates that the two parties should get together, try to work out a solution and make unanimous recommendations on other matters.

Normally on labour matters the minister speaks seriously, and I mean that. If this amendment is passed by this House, it would provide what legislation introduced by the Liberal government during the last ten years always provided, namely, an arbitrator. Back to work legislation has always provided that, since I have been here from 1968. We have not sat down and indicated that all the "t's" have been crossed and all the "i's" have been dotted. Here we are imposing a specific settlement on workers and we are setting up an arbitrator who does not have a ceiling under which to operate. That has never been done before. We propose a specific ceiling which the arbitrator cannot go beyond. The entire point of the amendment is to have an impartial arbitrator who can interpret the legitimacy of CATCA's case.

The minister has stated that the President of the Treasury Board dealt with that argument this afternoon. I say to the minister in all seriousness that I listened to the President of the Treasury Board this afternoon and I—

Mr. Munro (Hamilton East): You were not in the House.

Mr. Broadbent: I was present for the first couple of minutes, and I have since read Hansard.

An hon. Member: Where did you get a copy of Hansard?

Mr. Broadbent: I have it before me now. I suggest that members of the Liberal party should take the time to read it.

I do not want to waste the time of the House by speaking to the Minister of Labour when he is not listening. I should like to ask him if he is going to reply.

Mr. Munro (Hamilton East): You have got to sit down before I can answer.

Mr. Broadbent: Well, will you listen?

Mr. Munro (Hamilton East): I am listening.

Mr. Broadbent: Prior to this contract coming into being, there was no program pertaining to reclassification, which was the case made by the President of the Treasury Board this afternoon. He also cited two letters. In my reply tonight I indicated there were six letters, and not two letters. In the six letters it was abundantly clear that prior to the controls legislation being passed the government was negotiating with CATCA on the issue of reclassification. Thus, there was a clear understanding between the government and CATCA that reclassification was an issue. I also said that nowhere in AIB law or regulations are there instructions as to what is to be considered as legitimate criteria to apply to the reclassification point for consideration by AIB.

● (2300)

This is an open-ended situation. My point to the President of the Treasury Board, which I am now making to the Minister of Labour, was this: if it is so open-ended in terms both of the law and the regulations, and if they have been talking about changing the classification for over two and a half years, why is the government reluctant to put it to the AIB to decide? That is the question. This amendment would make that possible. It would be open to the arbitrator at least to consider making a ruling, and then within the framework of the law, which we accept, the AIB could still decide on the arbitrator's recommendation. Therefore I ask the Minister of Labour in all seriousness, what does he have against this amendment, which is fully consistent with past back to work legislation and fully consistent with the spirit and law of the anti-inflation controls program?

Mr. Munro (Hamilton East): Mr. Chairman, I think the hon. member for Oshawa-Whitby indicated, when I told him that this legislation was based on the unanimous report of a conciliation board, that he thought it most unusual that there had not been legislation in this House which had followed that type of procedure, but rather that we had always appointed an arbitrator.

Mr. Broadbent: No.

Mr. Munro (Hamilton East): Well, that is the way I took his remarks and that is the way my colleagues understood them.

Mr. Broadbent: That is not right.

Mr. Munro (Hamilton East): He certainly mentioned that we usually go by way of an arbitrator. Many members around me heard him say that, but we will check the blues. At any rate, I just want to indicate what has been done before. As I said in my opening remarks, with respect to the grain handlers dispute some time ago a single commissioner was appointed, which in terms of procedure is analogous to a conciliation board. He came in with a report and we based our legislation in that dispute, ordering the men back to work, on his recommendations.

Mr. Fraser: No one commended you for that.

Mr. Munro (Hamilton East): I may be wrong; I think the NDP voted for it but I do not think the Conservative party did. That was the Parry recommendations.

Judge Gold was appointed an independent conciliation commissioner in the longshoremen's dispute three years ago. He made recommendations and the legislation was based on those recommendations.

The last item is the legislation which I myself brought in to end the lockout at Halifax. I placed a proposal before the parties which the union had accepted and the company had not. So there has been a variation. We brought in the unanimous report of the conciliation board, and at times when there was no board we brought in the report of an independent commissioner.

I repeat, what we are now doing is bringing in legislation based on the unanimous recommendation of the conciliation board report—

Mr. Fraser: Which excluded the point at issue.

Mr. Broadbent: It deals with the reclassification issue.

[Mr. Broadbent.]

Mr. Munro (Hamilton East): No, it did not. The hon. member indicated in his remarks that everything was agreed upon up to 100 per cent. Does the hon. member for Oshawa-Whitby agree that he did say up to 100 per cent?

Mr. Broadbent: In terms of the reclassification item.

Mr. Munro (Hamilton East): That is not my information. There were in excess of 100 positions concerning which the parties were still trying to arrive at some agreement. That is certainly not subject to arbitration. He knows it and we know it. That is just one of the inaccuracies which we have perceived in what the hon. member talked about. So it is not 100 per cent.

Mr. Broadbent: It is 97.

Mr. Munro (Hamilton East): Well, in excess of 100 positions were still subject to discussions between the parties.

Mr. Broadbent: May I deal with a couple of points which the minister brought up, Mr. Chairman. I think he misunderstood the point I made about an arbitrator being placed at the heart, in a sense, of back to work legislation, given, if you will excuse the word, a Liberal framework within which to work. I am saying that that is totally absent in this legislation. There is a ceiling and the ceiling is the government's own proposal. That is no framework.

The minister referred to the grain handlers dispute and said that the conciliation board was one which consisted of a single commissioner who touched on all the issues and proposed a total package.

Mr. Fraser: That was his argument then.

Mr. Broadbent: Yes, but that is not the argument that I am making. It is true that there was a comprehensive report but there were two important differences in the argument that I am making. First of all, the degree of comprehension is totally absent from the report of the conciliation board which pertained to CATCA; that conciliation board did not deal with the issue at the heart of the dispute, namely, reclassification. In that sense it is irrelevant. My second point is that, if I recall correctly, in the grain handlers dispute there was an arbitrator appointed to pass judgment on the details of the proposal or, if there was not that, on a settlement which was not at the level recommended by the employer. That is exactly what is being done in this case.

Mr. Munro (Hamilton East): I did not say that Judge Gold who was appointed in the longshoremen's dispute was an arbitrator. I said he was a conciliation commissioner. Under the Canada Labour Code there is an option to appoint a conciliation commissioner. If the parties prefer a single person rather than a board, you can appoint a single commissioner. He was a conciliation commissioner, not an arbitrator.

Mr. Broadbent: But he dealt with all the issues.

Mr. Munro (Hamilton East): Yes, he did in many cases. Some were dealt with satisfactorily to the employees and some to the employer, but he dealt with the issues as he saw fit. Where he did not deal with them, the previous provisions in the collective agreement were considered to stand. The commissioner may not deal with the issues in the manner in which the parties perceive should be the case.

Mr. Fraser: Mr. Chairman, I intervene at this stage only to remind the minister that when Judge Gold's report was put to us we were not the employer. Secondly, as the minister well knows, I pointed out at the time that we would accept Judge Gold's report because under the circumstances there was probably nobody else who knew as much about the situation who could write a better report. Let me remind the minister of this, and I am now speaking in support of the NDP motion. As reported in Hansard for April 23, 1975, at page 5126, I said:

> I can understand why in this particular instance the minister has chosen the Gold report as the basis of the legislation, but I say it is a dangerous precedent. There should be legislation to restore normalcy as far as work is concerned, but determination of the final terms of settlement should be left to somebody independent of this chamber.
> That is the only proper way to approach this situation, and in the long run only on that basis will both sides of the dispute accept the terms of settlement.

If that is true when we are not the employer, surely it applies a thousand times over when it is the government that is the employer and it is the government that is introducing legislation.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Peters: Mr. Chairman, I have been trying to follow the argument and I am having some difficulty. I gathered from the minister that when the conciliation board met, they handled those problems in the dispute that were within the purview of collective bargaining, and that the classification program and the civil service statutes are some time outside collective bargaining. I understand that some time after the matter was negotiated, the President of the Treasury Board, or whoever was doing the negotiating, agreed to negotiate, in addition to matters that were before the conciliation board, the matter of classification.

Therefore, I wonder how the minister can refer to it as being a unanimous report on the dispute. Because of this, I would like to know from the minister why, when this matter was referred to the conciliation board, the classification matter was not included, when it had been the subject of negotiation for over two years. Why was it not considered part of the negotiation, and at what stage did it become part of the negotiation?

Mr. Munro (Hamilton East): If the hon. member is looking for an answer to that question, the fact of the matter is that the conciliation board is part of the collective bargaining process. Reports are made to it, and parties can come to an agreement. In this case it was decided that this was the appropriate procedure. The government appointed a chairman who was acceptable to both parties. The question of reclassification under the Public Service Staff Relations Act is not part of the collective bargaining process and is not subject to arbitration, so naturally the board could not consider it.

Mr. Peters: How did it become part of the bargaining process? It would seem to me that someone must have decided, somewhere along the line, that it was a matter for collective bargaining and was now part of the conciliation process. As I understand it, it is the only part that is in dispute—yet the conciliation board's report was unanimous.

It seems to me that what is in contention is this other matter. I am sure the minister has been aware for a long time of the many factors that are not normally part of the collective bargaining process. One of them that was nearly always excluded from the collective bargaining in which I was involved was safety, yet a safety committee would be set up which would make suggestions. But if it was not negotiable, it was not referred to a conciliation board. Health plans were also excluded, as were community activities and sports associations. The minister has not indicated to us why for two years we have been negotiating with CATCA matters concerning reclassification if they did not become part of the collective bargaining process.

Could this matter not be referred to the AIB, in any case? It might fit into a different category and not be considered a matter of wages. Under clause 5, the minister has indicated that there is an aggregate amount of about $3,800,000. An arbitrator can make a decision on a particular classification when the two parties grieve. I fail to see how we can write laws which say that the union is allowed to grieve on this matter of classification when the matter is not included under the Public Service Staff Relations Act. What is the turnover, and what are the changes in classification and the stability of personnel?

I gather there are about 2,200 people involved, and if we lost 200 people, although I am not good at mathematics, I imagine it would be about 4 per cent. Without changing the average, we would have the increment which would bring up the classification to 4.2 per cent. We seem to agree that classification is involved and that either the government or the employers' association can object to a classification and start a grievance procedure only to the extent of the aggregate which the minister now informs us is $3,800,000.

It seems to me that this strike took place simply because of the classification program. The matters before the conciliation board were agreed to unanimously. Therefore, that part of it is settled. Now we have this part which was not before the conciliation board, but the minister tells us it is not included in the civil service staff relations act and therefore cannot be considered as a wage factor in collective bargaining. I fail to see what the dispute has been about. Obviously, it must be handled in a way other than collective bargaining. Therefore, I doubt very much if the AIB can be seized with the problem of classification. Obviously, the government has negotiated over a period of time.

I would like to ask the minister what the figures in the schedule mean, if they do not mean classification.

● (2320)

It indicates to me that if you are an A11, you have seven categories of wages. If you go to A12, it is very odd. They are not a continuation, so you cannot say they are continuing. The highest you can rise to in class A11 is $15,785, and you start in A12 considerably below that because you start at $13,551. That seems to me to be a classification. We are negotiating now the classification program which the minister says is illegal to put before a conciliation board in normal negotiations. In A13 there are 14 classifications, the highs and lows in seven categories.

An hon. Member: What about A3?

Mr. Peters: The hon. member has not looked at the bill. There is not any A3. The next one, A13, goes up, not down. These sections in the schedule would not offend you even if you took your shoes off. They would fit in very well. We are discussing a classification.

An hon. Member: No, we are not.

Mr. Peters: Well, I would like to know what these figures are. They certainly are classifications in terms of the office staff in any other category. It may not be what we are talking about.

Mr. Munro (Hamilton East): Mr. Chairman, if I may just answer the hon. member, the rates he sees there and from which he is quoting are the classifications and rates which have already been agreed to and are operative now. They are old classifications.

Mr. Peters: Of course, that is true. They are already agreed to. In other words, we have a classification program. We have this classification in the rate structure of all the public service I know of, and it is almost identical to this. If one knew what the A stood for, one would probably be able to say what category it is equal to in the Department of Transport or in the Department of Labour. The minister probably has civil servants in all these categories. They are classifications. A person can move within one classification to a higher rate; then he can go to another classification. I presume that A11, A12 and A13 are different types of jobs. One may be a controller on VFR. One may be a unit chief or supervisor. One may be a ground control officer or a visual controller at a very small airport operated by the Department of Transport.

I presume that every one of these is a classification, and I would like to know what the minister means when he says that classifications are beyond public service legislation. This was not even referred to a conciliation board.

The minister knows as well as I do that members of parliament do not have classifications. Office staffs may have, but members of parliament do not. They have a set salary, and it is equal for everyone. Additional amounts are added when a member becomes a minister, a parliamentary secretary, or a chairman of a committee, but there are still no classifications in these categories. There is not just one category of controller. Different VFR controllers get different wages. There are a number of categories. In fact there are seven categories, and there are levels in each of those seven categories. It seems to me that we are not being very honest about what a classification is. I am sure that classifications were put before the conciliation board, and I am sure that increments were considered in those classifications. I presume that the minister has been talking about reclassification in which, for some reason or another, a change is made in certain categories which has to do with changing conditions for people in these categories.

An hon. Member: It's all right, Arnold.

Mr. Peters: It might be all right for some of my colleagues, but I do not understand what the minister is talking about. I see the classifications here, but I do not see that they are prohibited by public service legislation. If changes are made I am curious to know why those changes cannot be referred to a conciliation board just as the classifications we have now. I do not know why the changes could not be referred if the categories could be referred.

Mr. Jones: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the minister one question. Here we are writing the collective bargaining agreement, and reference is made in two clauses to an agreement. Does the minister not think that if a bill like this comes before parliament all members of parliament should be privy and have a copy of the collective agreement itself? What the minister has provided here are amendments to an agreement which should have been tabled at the very beginning, at the time of the introduction of this bill.

Mr. Munro (Hamilton East): Mr. Chairman, I can answer the hon. member by indicating that Schedule II contains all the items to which the parties have agreed. In a sense we have been able to resolve the wage issue. This would have been a very significant part of the collective agreement.

Mr. Jones: The point I am trying to make is that this whole thing is a jigsaw puzzle, and we have just some of the pieces. If we had been given the whole agreement, we could have put this jigsaw puzzle together very easily today.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Is the committee ready for the question?

Some hon. Members: Question.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: The question is on the amendment of the hon. member for Oshawa-Whitby.

(And the result of the vote having been announced:)

● (2330)

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Chairman, I rise on a point of order. The seating plan in my desk is somewhat out of date. The hon. member who is sitting in the seat which is in the fourth row, second from the end, entered the House and took his place after members on my side of the House had risen for the vote.

He stood, to have his vote recorded, which he should not have done.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order, please. It has been brought to the attention of the Chair that an hon. member came into the Chamber after the question was put. If there is no objection, we shall have to disregard or ignore that vote. I see there is no objection; therefore it will be recorded that 69 members voted against the amendment.

Amendment (Mr. Broadbent) negatived: Yeas 48; nays, 70.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: The question is on clause 5.

Mr. Rodriguez: Mr. Chairman, earlier we learned that it will cost $3.8 million to implement Schedule I. What is the estimated projected cost of the overtime items contained in Schedule II? I am referring specifically to item 15.02(a) of Schedule II. Perhaps the Minister of Labour could provide the figure. I should like to know the answer, and I should like to ask several more questions.

Mr. Munro (Hamilton East): Mr. Chairman, I believe the hon. member for Nickel Belt wishes to know the cost of overtime, or the cost of compensation set out in item 15.02(a) of Schedule II. According to my figures, the cost will be $236,519.

Mr. Gilbert: In United States or Canadian funds?

[Translation]

Mr. Joyal: Mr. Chairman, with the consent of the House, I would like to move an amendment to subclause (5) of clause 5.

I am particularly aware of the inconveniences that are being caused at this time to the public and users of air transport by the air controllers strike, so it is not my intention to unduly prolong my contribution or delay the discussion of the bill that is now before the House. However, in spite of the weight of the inconveniences that business and the travelling public have to cope with I would like to deal with two aspects that this conflict brings out and conclude with the tabling of an amendment to subclause (5) of clause 5 of Bill C-63.

The first comment I would like to make has to do with the right to strike in the public sector. When the legislator authorized the right to strike in the public sector in 1967 he measured all the inconveniences that could result from that right. If he saw fit to include it in the law of the land it is because he favours the notion of collective agreement bargaining that, although generous and liberal, is nonetheless strict in its reasoning and application. By leaving the responsibility to determine working conditions to the parties the legislator wanted at the same time to make sure that conditions in which bargaining takes place should not benefit one party to the detriment of the other but, quite the contrary, that the law should act as some sort of referee in the test of strength that is always present at the bargaining table.

I do not have to emphasize that the foundation of collective agreement negotiation is the willingness of the parties based on their mutual good faith, and if one has a weapon or means of blackmail we can no longer properly talk of free and close discussion on the stakes of the agreement but rather simply the drawing up of a protocol of surrender with one of the parties dictating to the other the terms of the end of the debate. Those conditions take a special shape in the public sector; unlike in the private sector negotiation in the public sector imposes a particular ethic on the parties and neither of them can ignore that it holds the public at its mercy. That is where we stand today, Mr. Chairman; on June 28, 1976, CATCA and CALPA dictated the protocol of surrender, and today the Minister of Transport (Mr. Lang) imposes the terms of the return to work.

I really have no sympathy for the way CATCA leaders are fulfilling their responsibilities to the Canadian people and some of their members. They have shown in the past that they would rather give vent to their prejudices and bigotry than try to understand the nature of this country. Their conception of Canadian duality is narrow, false and biased. Thus, some people may be inclined to believe that I am looking forward to Parliament checking a union that denies many of its members their vested right to speak their own language which has been officially recognized by the law of the land and is entitled to the same rights, privileges and status as the other official language.

Such is not the case. It is very reluctantly that I will support this bill, realizing that once again the Minister of Transport (Mr. Lang) has committed himself on behalf of Parliament before the bill was introduced and its provisions were made public. It is to be deplored that the Minister of Transport has threatened to pass a special legislation before the legal strike was called. Regardless of the circumstances, it seems to me that the Minister of Transport could not threaten a union with the decisions of Parliament before the strike was called and before Parliament was convened and legislated. How can an individual or a group be threatened with the deprivation of a right granted under the law before it is even exercised? Any jurist with the least experience, and the Minister of Transport is an outstanding jurist, would endorse my reservation and my concern. The air controllers' strike on August 7, 1977 is entirely legal. We can surely argue about the reasons which prompt CATCA to resort to it, but the strike remains within the context of the legislation and as such it abides by the rule of law, the primacy of law.

Therefore, if the Canadian legislator has recognized the right to strike legally under certain circumstances, the government cannot threaten a union to end a strike or warn them to that effect in the course of negotiations without disowning the present philosophy of staff relations which is moreover legitimated and recognized by the law. It is therefore with much reservation that I view this bill, regardless of the opinions I might have on the union concerned. But one may wonder about the eagerness and the celerity with which Parliament is asked to end that strike though young and legal, whereas in June 1976, on the very eve of the Olympic Games, a strike declared illegal by Mr. Justice Addy of the Federal Court was allowed to last ten days before a draft agreement was signed under which the rights of Parliament had once again been negotiated.

Mr. Chairman, I was among those who last year urged Department of Transport and Treasury Board officials to bring legislation before Parliament which was sitting then, in order to ensure that the law of the land was enforced and that the law enforcement agencies were respected. Now, one year later, we are still living the consequences of this period and, in this perspective, everything that was undertaken to settle that conflict seems even more out of proportion and from many aspects useless. It is sufficient to read what the Hon. Jean Marchand, who is in the gallery tonight, stated on July 12, 1977, on the publication of the report of the Commission on Bilingual Air Traffic Services to be convinced that if we want to put back some order in the relations between CATCA and the Department of Transport, we must come back to a fair situation and not question the labour relations philosophy which marks the Canadian federal public service as one of the most progressive in the world.

Mr. Marchand wrote on July 12 last:

"The interim report shows that the argument of air safety invoked by CATCA and CALPA against bilingualism in Quebec for air communications was false and even ridiculous. This was a bugaboo that could not have scared people with the barest knowledge of the problem, especially not the government."

And he added:

"(c) From everything that has been said, it also appears that the federal Department of Transport really is the best agency to regulate air traffic, like it regulates maritime and rail traffic. It has the knowledge, the staff and the means to protect the public and the employees in the field of air traffic." Mr. Marchand also stated: "It therefore seems to me that an inquiry commission, whatever the honesty and the qualifications of the judges, is redundant and can only serve to put an end to the phychosis artificially and illegally created by CALPA and CATCA."

Therefore, if we want to normalize the relations between the Canadian Air Traffic Control Association and the federal Department of Transport, if we want to give back to the authorities concerned the responsibility towards Parliament and the Canadian public, if we want to re-establish the authority of Parliament and the Minister of Transport, we must annul the protocol of agreement of June 28, 1976, between the Minister of Transport, CATCA and CALPA, recall orders in council 1576, 1583, and 1588 and give to the federal Department of Transport sole responsibility for implementing bilingualism in air communications in Canada.

This is why, Mr. Chairman, I would like to table the text of the following amendment to subclause (5) of clause 5 of Bill C-63, seconded by my colleagues the hon. member for Montmorency (Mr. Duclos) and the hon. member for Matane (Mr. De Bané), I therefore move that Bill C-63, An Act to provide for the continuation of air traffic control services, be amended by adding immediately following clause 5, subclause 5, the following, as subclause 6:

6.(1) Orders CP-1976-1583 and 1976-1588, minutes of the meetings of the committee of the Privy Council, approved by His Excellency the Governor General, on June 23rd and 28th, 1976, and the protocol agreement between on the one hand, the Minister of Transport and, on the other hand, the Canadian Air Traffic Control Association (CATCA) and the Canadian Air Line Pilots' Association (CALPA), signed on June 28th, 1976, are abrogated and annulled.

(2) The Minister of Transport alone is responsible for the implementation of bilingualism in air communications.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order, please. The Chair has reservations about the amendment being in order. I feel it is in no way pertinent to the bill now before the committee.

[English]

I wish to refer to May's nineteenth edition page 521, inadmissible amendments. I quote from paragraph 1:

An amendment is out of order if it is irrelevant to the subject matter or beyond the scope of the bill—

I think this amendment breaches both grounds and it does go beyond the scope of the bill. Therefore it is not receivable.

Mr. Rodriguez: Mr. Chairman, I have a couple more questions I want to ask the minister. Can an employee under this agreement use non-utilized time off for familiarization flight?

Mr. Munro (Hamilton East): Mr. Chairman, I will endeavour to ascertain the answer to that question. In the meantime I can give an answer to the previous question of the hon. member. He talked about the total compensation and the allocation of moneys between the various people who fell into the different levels and different categories, the different classifications.

Going through Schedule I, I wish to revise my figure. I gave an erroneous figure earlier. The total cost has been costed out at $3,372,000. The number of people in the different categories are as follows: A1.00, 75; A1.01, 94; A1.02, 257; A1.03, 212; A1.04, 289; A1.05, 589; A1.06, 309; A1.07, 85; and A1.08, 33, for a total number of controllers of 2,213. Yes, experience is taken into account in providing the annual increment at all levels up to a maximum of six.

Mr. Rodriguez: While the minister is getting the answer to that question, I wonder if he could give the rationale for the non-payment of an employee's familiarization flight taken in conjunction with his days of rest.

Mr. Munro (Hamilton East): Mr. Chairman, I will endeavour to ascertain that information and send it to the hon. member.

Mr. Rodriguez: On the retirement or debt, which is Schedule II, is this new or was there a similar clause in the previous collective agreement, and what is the projected cost of this clause?

Mr. Munro (Hamilton East): Mr. Chairman, in answer to the first question of the hon. member, familiarization flights are taken during an employee's normal hours allotted so that he does not need overtime for that. With regard to the last question, neither I nor my officials caught it. I would appreciate him repeating it.

Mr. Rodriguez: I would like to know the rationale. The minister said earlier there would be a non-payment of an employee's familiarization flight taken in conjunction with his days of rest. What is the rationale for that?

Mr. Munro (Hamilton East): Mr. Chairman, I will endeavour to get an answer to the hon. member's question. We had some difficulty in understanding what the hon. member was getting at.

Mr. Rodriguez: The agreement specifically prohibits payment to employees for familiarization flights on their days of rest. Why can an employee not be paid when he takes his familiarization flight on his days of rest? There must be a reason for putting that into the collective agreement.

● (2350)

Mr. Munro (Hamilton East): If the hon. member would refer to Schedule IV he would find that it is based on a letter of intent between the parties. It was previously provided that familiarization flights would not be taken on days of rest. Now, this is to be changed so that days of rest can be taken in conjunction with familiarization flights, which means that many of the controllers will be in a position to utilize some of their free time for familiarization flights.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

Mr. Speaker: I have the honour to inform the House that a message has been received from the Senate informing this House that the Senate have passed Bill C-63, An Act to provide for the continuation of air traffic control services, without amendment.

THE ROYAL ASSENT

[English]

A message was delivered by the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod as follows:

Mr. Speaker, the Honourable the Deputy Governor General desires the immediate attendance of this honourable House in the chamber of the honourable the Senate.

Accordingly, Mr. Speaker with the House went up to the Senate chamber.

And being returned:

Mr. Speaker informed the House that the Deputy Governor General had been pleased to give, in Her Majesty's name, the Royal Assent to the following bill:

Bill C-63, An Act to provide for the continuation of air traffic control services—Chapter 57.

● (0330)

Mr. Speaker: Accordingly and in conformity with the order made July 25, 1977, this House stands adjourned until October 17, 1977, at two o'clock in the afternoon.

Mr. MacEachen: Mr. Speaker, I intended to move another adjournment motion with the same date, but I presume the adjournment which you have described contains all the conditions and qualifications which might make it possible for us to return, if necessary, before October 17, if the public interest requires.

Mr. Speaker: The adjournment motion which was made on July 25 contained provisions to resume for August 4 and 5 also provision to resume if in the event, after consultation with the government, the Speaker should perceive that the public good requires the resumption of the House before that time. It is to be assumed that upon adjournment now until October 17 at two o'clock in the afternoon, all of these conditions prevail.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Agreed.

At 3:44 a.m. the House adjourned, without question put, pursuant to special order.

PROPOSAL TO REDUCE TAXES AND END CONTROLS—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Joe Clark (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43 on a matter of urgent and pressing necessity. Considering that unemployment in Canada continues to rise, the Canadian dollar continues to fall, business investment is leaving Canada, and the government was wrong in its targets for real growth, for inflation and regarding the budgetary deficit, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Joliette (Mr. La Salle):

[Translation]

That the government consider:

(a) a new budget with tax reductions for all Canadians earning less than $16,000 yearly;

(b) a sales tax reduction in co-operation with provincial governments;

(c) a tax reduction for corporations investing in the country and

(d) an end to wage and price controls.

REQUEST FOR MEASURES TO CREATE JOBS—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa-Whitby): Mr. Speaker, I too rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43.

[Translation]

Considering the confidential report of the Department of Employment which forecasts an increased number of unemployed during the next two years and considering the forecasts of all experts to the effect that unemployment will reach a record high this winter, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles):

That this House acknowledge that the Canadian people want jobs rather than welfare assistance and strongly urge the government to give priority to the implementation of a job creation program.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The House has heard the motion of the hon. member. Under the provisions of Standing Order 43, this motion requires the unanimous consent of the House. Is there unanimous consent?

SUGGESTION GOVERNMENT REASSESS JOB-CREATION PROGRAM—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Eudore Allard (Rimouski): Mr. Speaker, I ask for the unanimous consent of the House to present a motion on a very urgent and important matter.

Considering that a very high increase in unemployment is prevailing in most regions of Canada, especially in Quebec, that this nationwide increase in the rate of unemployment particularly affects young people aged 15 to 24 years and that according to every forecast the rate of unemployment will be going up in the coming months, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Roberval (Mr. Gauthier):

That the House immediately make the necessary arrangements so that the federal government may reassess job creation programs now in force in order to give back confidence to Canadian workers, especially Quebec workers, and to give increased efficiency to this battle against unemployment.

Mr. Speaker: Pursuant to Standing Order 43, this motion requires the unanimous consent of the House. Is there unanimous consent?

SUGGESTED COMMITTEE STUDY OF REASONS FOR LACK OF CONFIDENCE IN CANADIAN DOLLAR—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Sinclair Stevens (York-Simcoe): Mr. Speaker, I too rise on a matter of urgent and pressing necessity. With the Canadian dollar plunging to 90.4 cents U.S. this morning, and this in spite of the massive $500 million intervention by the Bank of Canada so far this month, I move, seconded by the hon. member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath):

That there be an immediate reference to the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs so that that committee may hear evidence as to why there should be such deterioration in world confidence with respect to our dollar, as to the adequacy of our U.S. dollar reserves which have fallen 40 per cent this year, and what measures it is necessary to take to restore domestic and world confidence in our currency.

PROPOSAL TO AID PRODUCERS AS RESULT OF ADVERSE WEATHER CONDITIONS—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, I rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43 on a matter of urgent and pressing necessity, to move, provided it is accepted, seconded by the hon. member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski):

That the government give immediate consideration, in view of the disastrous rainfall in recent weeks having resulted in the loss of many millions of dollars to prairie farmers whose grain is still in the fields, to making available drying equipment by transporting it to needed areas, freight free; as propane gas is necessary for grain drying equipment, and very costly, that the price be frozen until the new year against further increases; and as farmers whose wheat is unharvested are generally short of funds to carry on their needed autumn operation, that cash advances be provided for, based on the estimated amount of grain remaining in the fields to be harvested.

SUGGESTED INCREASE IN VARIOUS CATEGORIES OF PENSIONS—MOTION UNDER S.O. 43

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, because November 11 is only three and a half weeks away, and because it is urgent that we do more for our veterans than just pay tribute to them with words, I move under Standing Order 43, seconded by the hon. member for Timiskaming (Mr. Peters):

[Mr. Stevens.]

That this House urges the government, between now and Remembrance Day, to bring in legislation to restore the basic amount of the war disability pension to the average level of the five designated categories of public servants, to provide pro-rata pension for the widows of veterans in those cases where the veteran's pension was less than 48 per cent and to provide prisoner of war pensions for the 200 surviving Canadian veterans who were prisoners of war during World War I.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

THE CANADIAN ECONOMY

MEASURES TO PROVIDE JOBS—RESPONSIBILITY OF PROVINCES

Mr. Joe Clark (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, my question is to the Prime Minister, and it is framed in the knowledge that on this day television is first reflecting the debates of the House of Commons. Among the Canadians who are watching us here today are a large number of the army of Canadian unemployed who, because of the policies of this government, have nothing else they can do with their time today.

Since the Prime Minister's and the government's forecasts in the last two budgets have been dead wrong concerning economic growth and job creation, will the Prime Minister tell the House right now what specific programs the government will introduce this month to bring jobs to the more than one million Canadians who are out of work today because of the policies of this government?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, it is the government's intention to address this question of high unemployment, which has given us great concern, immediately. We will be doing it tomorrow on the first day of the new session. We will make an announcement in the Speech from the Throne, and it will be followed up by more specific recommendations made by my colleague, the Minister of Finance, who will participate very early in the debate. Of course, we will also be anxious to hear from the opposition which always has such constructive measures to propose.

Mr. Clark: Mr. Speaker, the country has been waiting for nearly a decade for some economic policy from this government. We will wait with interest one more day to see if in fact there will be a clear proposal in the speech tomorrow which will provide jobs for the more than one million Canadians put out of work by the policies of this government.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Clark: But may I ask the Prime Minister now whether the Minister of Finance was expressing government policy when he said in Washington at a press conference that it was his view that the major responsibility for dealing with unemployment, particularly in the province of Quebec, lies with the provinces of Canada and not with the national government?

Mr. Trudeau: It has never been the intention of this government or of the ministers to indicate that the problem of unemployment could be solved by any or each government acting alone. We believe that all governments acting together must tackle this problem. We believe particularly that since jobs are created overwhelmingly by the private sector the private sector should join in the effort to stimulate the economy.

DATE OF TERMINATION OF CONTROLS

Mr. Joe Clark (Leader of the Opposition): I think it is clear to most Canadians that a disturbing number of job creators in the private sector, because of the policies of this government, have left this country with their investments and are creating jobs and promoting growth in other countries.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Clark: Part of that is due to the determination of this government, despite the promises of one of the former ministers of finance to announce an end to controls, to keep controls in. Will the Prime Minister tell the House of Commons now that the Minister of Finance this week or the throne speech tomorrow will give an explicit date for the termination of controls and will spell out the program by which the government of Canada intends to move this country out of controls?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): I can give the undertaking that the Minister of Finance will address this question in his statement on Thursday of this week. I must say that there are some aspects of the question of the Leader of the Opposition with which I must disagree in that controls were brought in in order to make the Canadian cost and price structure more competitive. They have been successful in bringing inflation down from two digit inflation to something around 7.5 per cent.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Trudeau: We do not think that inflation will continue to come down if the controls are lifted unless there is a general agreement among Canadians to do their utmost to continue pressing down on the rate of inflation, and this calls for more than just the bland statement by the Leader of the Opposition.

• (1420)

Mr. Clark: Not wishing to compete with the Prime Minister for blandness—

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Clark: —may I ask him whether it is the intention of the government of Canada to announce this week a date and a process for the termination of controls?

Mr. Trudeau: Mr. Speaker, I have just said that the Minister of Justice would address this question.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Trudeau: If it pleases the opposition, I can have the Minister of Justice address this question.

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): God help us.

Mr. Hees: That is just too much to expect.

Mr. Trudeau: I do not know if the hon. member for Prince Edward-Hastings thinks he is on camera, but he is not.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

FINANCE

ACTION TO STABILIZE CANADIAN DOLLAR

Mr. Sinclair Stevens (York-Simcoe): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Finance, but first I would like to congratulate the minister—if that is the proper expression—on becoming the fourth Minister of Finance under the Prime Minister. In that connection I point out that they seem to be falling quicker and quicker, one after the other.

My question is based on our rising unemployment, coupled with rising inflation, having apparently intensified world concern with respect to the Canadian dollar, as evidenced by the decline of the Canadian dollar still further today under heavy pressure. Would the minister tell the House what instructions he has given to the Governor of the Bank of Canada with respect to stabilizing our dollar?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank very sincerely the sixth critic of the Tories on financial affairs.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Chrétien: Sometimes they need two at a time. I do not know what kind of government they would form if the people were to make that mistake.

I have not given any instruction to the governor of the bank with regard to the Canadian dollar. The Canadian dollar is a floating dollar, and it is the market place which will decide where the Canadian dollar should be. That is the policy of the government, and I have not given any specific instruction to the governor of the bank. We are following the situation very carefully, but I think that the hon. member should be more moderate in his statement. He throws out figures, but everyone knows that we do not know exactly the amount of money that is used in that type of trading.

Mr. Stevens: If the Minister of Finance does not know what number of dollars are being used in trading, he is one of the few in the market place who does not.

Mr. Chrétien: I do, you don't.

Mr. Stevens: As our United States dollar exchange reserves have declined $500 million or an estimated 20 per cent so far this month—all gone in defence of our dollar—will the minister explain how he reconciles such massive intervention on the part of the Bank of Canada with what he has called today a floating dollar?

Mr. Chrétien: I do not think I can agree with the statement made by the hon. member. The governor of the bank is not intervening with regard to the floating of the Canadian dollar. The Canadian dollar is floating in the market place.

Mr. Stevens: A final supplementary again to the Minister of Finance, Mr. Speaker. Surely, the Minister will not disagree with Dr. Hood, an official in his own department, who, based on evidence given by him before a committee of this House, has indicated that the 13-cent fall in our dollar so far will result in 4 per cent inflation in the next two years. Would the minister indicate if he is content to see still further devaluation of the Canadian dollar, bearing in mind that such devaluation will mean more inflation and ultimately more unemployment?

Mr. Chrétien: Mr. Speaker, there are some advantages to having a lower dollar. For example, I am very pleased to report to this House that we are improving our export performance very much and will have a major surplus on the export of Canadian goods abroad. In doing that we are creating more jobs.

THE CANADIAN ECONOMY

UNEMPLOYMENT—REQUEST FOR CLARIFICATION OF PRIME MINISTER'S STATEMENT SITUATION EXAGGERATED

Mr. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa-Whitby): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Prime Minister. The Prime Minister referred to bland statements and as we all know, he is the expert. Considering that he said just a few days ago in London, Ontario, that "unemployment is not as bad as some people out there want to pretend it is," and said even more recently that the reason we have such a high level of unemployment is that Canadians have gone soft, and considering that we have more than one million people unemployed, and according to his government's figures only 43,000 jobs are listed as being available in the economy which means there are 15 people applying for every job out there, would he mind explaining for the edification of the House what he meant when he said in London that unemployment is not as bad as some people out there pretend it is?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Yes, Mr. Speaker, I intend to do that in a speech in this House the day after tomorrow.

ACTION TO CREATE JOBS—REFERENCE TO PRODUCTIVITY OF CANADIAN WORKERS

Mr. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa-Whitby): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. I should like to thank the Prime Minister for his smiling, bland answer to a very important question. More specifically, because part of the implication, presumably, of his assertion that he made about Canadians being soft refers to other statements he has made in the past about not making enough effort to get jobs, I should like to ask if his government has looked at the situation in St. Lawrence, Newfoundland, where a mine is being shut down by Alcan? Apparently it made some $85 million profit in the first six months of this year, so it is not being closed because it is a losing operation but because they say they can make higher profits elsewhere. And according to a recent government study Canadian auto workers are more productive than American workers, not less, but they are not getting some 20,000 jobs that they ought to, because the government has, among other things, failed to implement Canadian tax laws. Specifically, I should like to ask if he or his ministers in these two very different parts of the country have taken steps in the last few days to insure that Canadians who want jobs, not handouts, will get them?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I refer to the remarks and the debate because I do not really think I could convince the leader of the New Democratic Party in a short answer of the rightness of his theories or the righteousness of mine.

An hon. Member: They are very similar.

Mr. Trudeau: It would take longer than we have during the question period. Perhaps a short statistic in answer to his question might indicate the course of my thinking on these things. It is that in manufacturing generally Canadian workers are productive but only 80 per cent as productive as the American worker in manufacturing. At the same time, the average wage rate for the Canadian worker in manufacturing is 7 per cent higher than that of the American. If the hon. leader of the New Democratic Party thinks about that he will understand that this means our costs are higher and that we cannot compete with our main competitors in the market, the United States. If we cannot compete, that means we cannot continue to invest and if we cannot continue to invest, it means we cannot continue to create jobs. Therefore, the productivity of the worker in the Canadian manufacturing sector is very important. It has progressed, I agree, but it is still only 80 per cent of that of the Americans.

Mr. Broadbent: A final supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. The Prime Minister knows that in Canada as well as elsewhere in industrial countries the main reason for low or higher productivity is whether management has introduced new capital equipment or not. Instead of blaming Canadian workers, he might blame Canadian management for not keeping Canadian industry as competitive and up-to-date as that of other countries. With reference to his general statement would the Prime Minister for once undertake to provide the House with specific examples from the sector after sector he named when referring to Canadian productivity, and we would be prepared to consider the relevance of the general proposal. I come back to the specific question about the auto industry, an industry in which, according to the government's own study, Canadian workers are more productive. When is the government to take action, to ensure that we shall get the jobs in Canada to which we are entitled, namely, 20,000 more jobs than we now have?

• (1430)

Mr. Trudeau: Mr. Speaker, of course, I agree in part with the leader of the New Democratic Party, when he says productivity is also a question of technology and entrepreneurship. I believe that we on this side have encouraged entrepreneurship more than the hon. member—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Clark: Yes, you have encouraged them to leave.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Trudeau: I see groans in the opposition.

Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton): Canadians are all groaning.

Mr. Trudeau: Mr. Speaker, I see it on the hon. member's face. There is a groan written right there. It is obvious that productivity is a matter not only for workers but for the entrepreneurial sector, too. That is why in the last budget we made substantial concessions to the entrepreneurial sector—

Mr. Broadbent: They didn't work.

Mr. Trudeau: —to create incentives to invest.

Mr. Broadbent: They have not worked.

Mr. Trudeau: I recall that the leader of the New Democratic Party opposed them at the time.

Mr. Broadbent: And they have not worked, have they?

Mr. Trudeau: Mr. Speaker, the leader of the NDP must get his act together. If he wants—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Broadbent: They have not worked.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Trudeau: If he wants the private sector to increase its investment, to create more jobs, he must stop complaining when they make an honest profit.

REQUEST FOR REDUCTION OF INTEREST RATES FOR MUNICIPAL AND PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENTS

Mr. Gilles Caouette (Témiscamingue): Mr. Speaker, I want to direct a question to the right hon. Prime Minister. He has been reported as telling Canadians to learn to tighten their belts otherwise the government would have to take the necessary steps to have them do so. Does the Prime Minister consider the financial sector in Canada as Canadians, and is he prepared to take steps in this area and demand reduced interest rates?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): The hon. member is not without knowing that for two years now, when we set up the controls system, we have been controlling not only incomes but profits as well. Those profits also applied of course to financial institutions. So I said that all sectors will have to tighten their belts, otherwise the government would feel compelled to exercise controls.

Mr. Caouette (Témiscamingue): May I ask a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker.

I was talking of interests and we have rather seen that the rates of interest have increased. But, on the same subject, following the statement made by the hon. member for Lapointe on September 20 that an interest-free loan has been granted in the municipality of Mistassini housing project, could the right hon. Prime Minister tell the House whether he is prepared to follow the same practice and apply it systematically to municipal and provincial governments?

Mr. Trudeau: I was not made aware of the precise case the hon. member is referring to, Mr. Speaker. I will get more information on this point.

POSSIBILITY OF MAKING INTEREST-FREE LOANS

Mr. Gilles Caouette (Témiscamingue): Mr. Speaker, may I ask a further supplementary?

Considering that the municipality of Mistassini has already received a loan of $36,000, I hope the right hon. Prime Minister will take notice that the announcement was made by the hon. member for Lapointe. I ask him whether he is prepared to maintain this practice for any municipality which is as underdeveloped as this one, in other areas of the country, in the same manner as interest-free loans are given to other countries.

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the leader of the Social Credit Party of Canada knows that there is no such thing as a loan without interest. When the government borrows money from citizens it has to pay interest. If the hon. member wants to buy savings bonds with his own savings, he will receive interest from the government, that is to say interest is paid when using somebody else's money. It occurs sometimes that the government helps municipalities or foreign countries by lending them money at a reduced interest rate but this means that someone must foot the bill. The difference is paid by the taxpayer. Therefore the hon. member has the choice between having the interest paid by the borrower or by the Canadian taxpayers in general. The interest must be paid some way or other.

POSSIBILITY OF FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL CONFERENCE TO DEAL WITH JOB-CREATION

Mr. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister. Given that unemployment nationally has now reached 8.3 per cent, 10.8 per cent in Quebec and 12.5 per cent in the Atlantic provinces, and given the potential that such figures hold for social unrest in the country, not to mention the potential for human suffering, I ask if it is the intention of the Prime Minister or the intention of one of his colleagues to convene a federal-provincial meeting, to deal with the various measures necessary for the reconstruction of the economy in order to produce jobs?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, a meeting was held last week between federal and provincial Ministers of Finance and they dealt with this very subject.

POSSIBILITY OF ACTION BY MINISTER OF FINANCE TO CREATE JOBS FOLLOWING SUGGESTIONS FROM PROVINCES

Mr. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question, directed to the Minister of Finance, is based on the refusal of the Minister of Employment and Immigration to meet with his four Atlantic provinces counterparts next November, to discuss the serious unemployment in that region. What immediate initiatives can we expect from the government as a result of the minister's recent meeting with his provincial counterparts in Ottawa, and does he intend to act upon some of the suggestions he received from provincial ministers at that conference?

[Translation]

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I intend to make a speech in the House on Thursday evening. I shall then tell hon. members about the decision made by the government following the meetings held last week where the provincial finance ministers and the ministers of industry, trade and commerce to study what could be done. The results will be known in Thursday evening in the House.

REGIONAL ECONOMIC EXPANSION

POSSIBILITY OF ACTION BY DEPARTMENT TO CREATE JOBS IN ATLANTIC PROVINCES

Mr. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a final supplementary question to the Minister of Regional Economic Expansion? My question is again prompted by the refusal of the Minister of Employment and Immigration to meet with the four Atlantic ministers, to discuss the very grave unemployment situation in that region. I ask, given the minister's statutory responsibilities, what initiatives can we expect from his department? Also, does he intend to meet with the governments of the four Atlantic provinces, to avert what will be a serious disaster in the region this winter?

[Translation]

Hon. Marcel Lessard (Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): Mr. Speaker, the hon. member is well aware that, in my capacity as minister, I have regular meetings with my colleagues from the Atlantic provinces where we discuss the development programs we can launch together. We also exchange correspondence and suggestions. I therefore hope that in the next few weeks we shall be able to finalize some of the secondary agreements which are now under discussion and which might partly solve the problems you have mentioned.

FINANCE

POSSIBILITY OF CALLING ON UNITED STATES FOR FOREIGN EXCHANGE CREDIT

Mr. James Gillies (Don Valley): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance and relates, again, to the plunge in the value of the dollar and the effect of that on unemployment and inflation. Has the Government of Canada, through the Bank of Canada, alerted the Federal Reserve system of the United States, as it must under international agreement, that Canada may well be calling on the line of credit we have with respect to foreign exchange in the Central Bank of the United States?

[Translation]

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the answer is no.

[English]

REQUEST FOR ASSURANCE NO FOREIGN EXCHANGE CONTROLS OR TRAVEL RESTRICTIONS

Mr. James Gillies (Don Valley): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. As the government does not take defensive action in that sense, the dollar continues to plunge and we see no sign of anything being done about it, can the Minister of Finance assure the House and the people of Canada who are most concerned about this issue that this government will not introduce foreign exchange controls or restrictions on travel in the foreseeable future?

[Translation]

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I am able to promise one thing to the House and to the hon. member. We have no intention of introducing controls over currency exchanges between Canada and other countries.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

SUGGESTION CERTAIN MEMBERS BE NAMED TO QUEEN'S PRIVY COUNCIL

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, I must say that the experience of today would indicate a tremendous improvement, in the House, since we have come to the conclusion that what we are doing is being listened to.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Diefenbaker: Mr. Speaker, I do not want to raise any provocative question today, unaccustomed as I am to doing so. I wish to bring a question to the Prime Minister's attention. In view of Her Majesty's presence here, as in 1967, when premiers across Canada were made members of Her Majesty's Privy Council, I wonder if the government would give consideration on this occasion to naming two or three members of the House of Commons to the Privy Council: First, in the person of the Leader of the Opposition.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Diefenbaker: He may well lead an alternative government. I also want to add two hon. members, one of whom came in to the House 42 years ago. One is the hon. member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands, who served with such distinction not only in this House but in the province of Saskatchewan.

● (1440)

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Diefenbaker: The other is the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre who came to this House in 1942. These gentlemen should be given the distinction of being named members of the Privy Council. All three of these men have brought distinction to the House of Commons. I hope that on the occasion of Her Majesty's visit in this her jubilee year, the government will give serious consideration to a recommendation that these three hon. members be made members of her Canadian council.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, of course I will give consideration to this very generous suggestion by the right hon. member for Prince Albert. It is a suggestion which is generous in intent, I am sure, but possibly less optimistic than the proposed recipients are themselves about their possibility of acquiring the title by becoming members of the government some day. If the right hon. member is despairing of that possibility, I would consider discussing the matter with the proposed recipients. In the case of the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre, he has already been offered the title of honourable in the other place and he has repeatedly turned that down.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Order!

Mr. Trudeau: Perhaps the right hon. member's gesture, which was meant as an act of generosity, shows considerably less optimism than the proposed recipients themselves have about their future.

Mr. Diefenbaker: Mr. Speaker, an answer like that almost demands an equally frivolous one. Apparently the Prime Minister does not know that in past years a number of members have been made members of the Privy Council by reason of their long service in the House of Commons and the distinction of it. During my period in office, I can think of one hon. member for East York who had served here for a long while. There was widespread approval. I hope the Prime Minister will look back over the record. The Prime Minister turns to his seatmate and says, who was he? It was before the Prime Minister came here. His lack of knowledge on the subject is therefore understandable. I ask him to reconsider this. I pass it on not as a frivolous matter but to show the people of Canada that there can be people of distinction in the opposition. As far as the suggestion of not doing anything in line with this government continuing in office, I say without equivocation that I have been across Canada and I have been told everywhere—

Some hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

INDUSTRY

SUGGESTED COMMITMENT FROM AUTOMOBILE MANUFACTURERS TO INCREASE JOB OPPORTUNITIES

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Gray: Has he now obtained a commitment from the automobile manufacturers to increase their capital investment, research and development and purchases of auto parts in Canada to levels in line with the sales of their cars in this country, something I believe must be done. If so, what are these commitments? If they have not been obtained, exactly what is the government doing to ensure that activity in these areas will be suitably increased to deal with the current problems shown to exist by the government's own Arthur report?

Hon. Jack H. Horner (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): Mr. Speaker, in answer to the hon. member's question, I want to first point out that we in Canada use about 8.9 per cent of the automotive parts manufactured on the North American continent.

Mr. Broadbent: Wrong, 12 per cent.

[Mr. Trudeau.]

Mr. Horner: No, 8.9 per cent and we produce about 7 per cent. Naturally we in this country would like to see that equal. We are having discussions with the major automotive manufacturers today to see whether that can be done. I would also to point out that while we have a surplus in trade with regard to total car assembly, we also have an advantage in the employment sector of the automotive industry. This country has 11.2 per cent of the total automotive manufacturing employment on the North American continent. We would like to hold that figure and perhaps increase it.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

GRAIN

PROPOSED EXTENSION OF CASH ADVANCES AND SHARING COST OF DRYING PROGRAM

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the minister in charge of the Canadian Wheat Board. As the minister knows, about half the crop in the northern part of the prairies has not yet been harvested because of the weather, the bad rain conditions. The prairie ministers of agriculture have appealed to the federal government for help for those who have not yet harvested. Will the minister extend the cash advances, which I point out are not a loans, to cover crops still in the field so that those farmers who need the money will have some cash this fall?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, fortunately the weather in the prairies has turned very good these past five days or so. Harvesting is going on very rapidly with combines doubling up at every opportunity. Therefore, the end result is yet to be ascertained. As a result of legislation which I proposed on behalf of this government and passed in this House several years ago, there is a standing provision for cash advances on unharvested grain, should that be necessary. Because of the possibility of harvesting taking place very late in the year, the provision is that we cannot invoke that legislation until November 15. However, we will certainly be watching the situation very closely and use that provision if it is required.

Mr. Nystrom: Will the minister consider a cost-sharing program with the prairie provinces such as Saskatchewan which now has a program to aid farmers in custom drying of tough and damp grain and also combining of grain in the fields? Will he consider a cost-sharing program to aid these farmers?

Mr. Lang: Mr. Speaker, the government of Saskatchewan has come forward with that kind of program with relation to the moving of machinery. That is the kind of initiative provincial governments ought to take. Whether it is the kind of thing that requires federal sharing will depend upon the total amounts involved. I am sure if those governments feel it does, we will have discussions with them later.

THE CANADIAN ECONOMY

POSSIBILITY OF FIRST MINISTERS' CONFERENCE TO DEAL WITH JOB CREATION

Miss Flora MacDonald (Kingston and the Islands): Mr. Speaker, my question is to the Prime Minister. I would like to ask him if he has taken the occasion in the past few days to discuss with the provincial premiers the immediate convening of a first ministers' conference to deal specifically with the critical unemployment situation and the joint governmental initiatives that could be taken to alleviate it?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): No, Mr. Speaker.

Miss MacDonald: It is a disappointment to learn that the Prime Minister does not seize upon every opportunity to discuss this matter with his provincial counterparts. Since the Prime Minister has not taken the opportunity to speak with them, is it his intention to write to the first ministers about the convening of a first ministers' conference to deal specifically with unemployment?

Mr. Trudeau: Mr. Speaker, the hon. lady may have missed the earlier answers by the Minister of Finance who indicated that just last week he met with the provincial ministers of finance to discuss this very matter. The hon. lady might not realize that yesterday I met the premiers at a luncheon for Her Majesty. There was no question such as unemployment on the agenda.

Miss MacDonald: May I ask the Prime Minister if he understands that the first ministers, including himself, have a very real responsibility in this crisis situation.

POSSIBLE MEETING WITH QUEBEC MINISTER CONCERNING ECONOMIC ORIENTATION

Mr. Roch La Salle (Joliette): Mr. Speaker, I would like to put a question to the Minister of Finance to whom I would like to wish a lot more success than his predecessors have had. That cannot be difficult.

Since the newspapers were reporting last week that the Minister of Finance had met with those in charge of the economic orientation of the government of Quebec at this time could the minister say when he is to meet with a Quebec minister, Mr. Landry, and can he say whether he has concrete proposals to make to the Quebec government?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, this morning my colleague the Minister of Regional Economic Expansion and I met three Quebec ministers interested in economic problems. They told me about a program they want to put forward. We also discussed certain initiatives we intend to take and have already taken with respect to certain sectors of the Quebec economy. The results will be announced by each government at the appropriate time. The conversation was rather cordial.

MEASURES TO ALLEVIATE UNEMPLOYMENT AMONG YOUNG PEOPLE IN QUEBEC

Mr. Roch La Salle (Joliette): Mr. Speaker, I wish to ask a supplementary question. I am pleased to see that the minister has seemingly acknowledged the need to cooperate with his counterpart of the Quebec government. If one were to judge by some of his recent announcements, it would rather seem that it was just the continuation of a policy of confrontation. Given the fact that one-fifth of Quebec youths are presently unemployed, can the finance minister give assurance to this House that in his forthcoming speech of Thursday evening he will present concrete measures to correct a situation that is almost disastrous, taking into account the prevailing unemployment rate in the province of Quebec?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Finance): Well, Mr. Speaker, we have discussed today certain programs and I intend to make certain announcements this coming Thursday which will not directly be related to Quebec but will be directed toward all provinces of Canada, since we are responsible for the economic situation all across the country. Obviously, I made certain announcements in the past and I still intend to make others because there are particular problems in Quebec which are causing great worries to the rest of Canada and that is the political instability in that province.

HEALTH

SUGGESTED WARNING ON LOW CALORIE PRODUCTS CONTAINING SUGAR

Mrs. Simma Holt (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, my question refers to the Minister of National Health and Welfare. Bearing in mind that a ban on the use of saccharin was implemented on October 1 and that all the so-called low calorie products presently in the marketplace contain a product, sugar, known to be dangerous to at least 400,000 Canadians as well as to tens of thousands of visitors to Canada who suffer from diabetes, will the hon. lady take action to ensure that a proper and conspicuous warning is placed on the products wrongly called low calorie products to warn consumers of their sugar content?

[Translation]

Hon. Monique Bégin (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, the point of my hon. colleague is well taken. I have been looking into the saccharin issue ever since I was appointed minister, but I have not yet had time to look into the sugar issue, including the health hazards which sugared food represents for diabetic patients. I shall certainly look into it. However, I suggest to my hon. colleague that no conspicuous warning about the dangers of sugared food for diabetic patients will change the situation, as long as this type of food is left on store counters, in refrigerators or in cupboards at home where children can easily reach them.

ANTI-INFLATION PROGRAM

REQUEST FOR CLARIFICATION OF PRIME MINISTER'S REFERENCE TO DISCIPLINING PEOPLE

Mr. Lincoln M. Alexander (Hamilton West): Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I should like to direct a question to the Prime Minister related to a story by Val Sears in last Sunday's Star. What methods or techniques did the Prime Minister have in mind in terms of diciplining Canadians when he indicated—and I am quoting, now—that "If they don't discipline themselves we shall discipline them as we did with the controls."

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): A very simple example, and one easy to understand, would be that of the controls themselves—controls which the Leader of the Opposition is asking be removed.

Mr. Alexander: Can the Prime Minister be more definite and tell us where, in his opinion, the people of Canada have failed and in what areas they need discipline? Would he not agree that there is need for discipline to be applied to his own government, some members of which do not understand what discipline means—I have in mind flying on airplanes around the country, and so on.

Mr. Trudeau: Another simple example could be found in the first half of 1975 when there was double digit inflation and when the average increase in wage rates was some 21 per cent, much higher than the rate of growth of the economy. At that time we tried to get agreement on voluntary restraint; we did not get it and we brought in controls. That is an example of the kind of discipline the state must impose when the private decision-makers do not exercise restraint. As far as government spending is concerned, I would remind the hon. member that today, under Standing Order 43, we have heard two motions by important members of his party calling upon the government to spend more money.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

GOVERNMENT'S VIEW OF GERMANY'S POSITION ON INTERNATIONAL TERRORISM

Mr. F. E. Oberle (Prince George-Peace River): My question is for the Secretary of State for External Affairs, Mr. Speaker. Is it the intention of the government to develop and express a position in respect of the latest round of international terrorism involving kidnappings and hijackings? More particularly, is it the intention of the government to issue a statement with respect to the dilemma in which the Federal Republic of Germany now finds itself? Has it expressed sympathy with, and support for, that government's firm position against international terrorism and is the minister prepared to say something publicly on this aspect?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Secretary of State for External Affairs): I welcome the hon. member's question because it does give me an opportunity to place on the record not only the position of the Government of Canada but, I am sure, of all members of this House. The Government of Canada condemns totally the use of terrorism and sympathizes with, and understands fully the attitude and approach of the government of West Germany. I wish to convey the sympathy of the Canadian government and people to those who are affected and to give a full undertaking that we shall seek, in all the international fora we can, to eliminate incidents of this kind. I fear there is nothing which Canada can do specifically in this case; it is one which highlights the necessity for an international agreement embracing all countries.

REGIONAL ECONOMIC EXPANSION

REQUEST FOR INCREASED SUPPORT FOR PROGRAM IN ATLANTIC PROVINCES

Mr. David MacDonald (Egmont): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister. It arises from remarks made during the summer by the Secretary of State for External Affairs, the former Minister of Regional Economic Expansion describing the DREE program as having failed in combatting regional disparities. In view of that department's frozen budget and mounting unemployment in the four Atlantic provinces, will the Prime Minister clarify the nature of the "new initiatives" he has talked about? For example, has he given an assurance to the four premiers that there will be a major change in support for the DREE program and increased support from other departments so as to effectively combat the increasing unemployment rate in those provinces?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): The intention of the government to combat unemployment in those provinces was evident in the creation of the department to which he referred. The hundreds of millions spent in the Atlantic provinces is, of itself, an indication of the government's attempts to bring down unemployment and accelerate economic expansion. However, I cannot give the hon. member the assurance that the government will engage in vastly increased spending programs in that area. The government must show restraint itself as it is asking other Canadians to show restraint.

Mr. MacDonald (Egmont): Has the Prime Minister been in contact with his colleagues or with the provincial premiers with a view to reversing the trend in those four provinces since, obviously, whatever money has been spent, it has not been successful in producing the desired effect?

Mr. Trudeau: The hon. gentleman would not, I am sure, expect me to try to make a commitment. This is an area where the government tries to encourage a greater growth in the economy but we cannot guarantee that the measures taken will work. Very much depends upon what is done by the private sector. There is, also, the question of confidence and the government is doing what it can to create confidence, in investment in that area for example by making provision in the last budget for substantial tax incentives.

CANADIAN BROADCASTING CORPORATION

SUGGESTION LEADERS' SPEECHES IN THRONE SPEECH DEBATE BE BROADCAST

Mr. Walter Baker (Grenville-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Secretary of State. In view of a statement that was made a few months ago by the Prime Minister in the question period to the effect that he intended to use the day after tomorrow to answer the questions raised by members of this House with respect to unemployment in the country and our economic situation, and in view of the fact that it is not the intention of the public broadcasting media, particularly the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, at this point in any event, to carry that very important speech and the speeches of the other party leaders with respect to the situation in the country, I wonder whether I could ask the Secretary of State if he would consult with the president of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and perhaps advise the House further with respect to the intention of that corporation in regard to that very important public occasion in this parliament?

Hon. John Roberts (Secretary of State): Mr. Speaker, I should be happy, as requested by the hon. member, to explore this matter with the president of the CBC when I meet with him later on today.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[English]

TV AND RADIO BROADCASTING OF PROCEEDINGS OF HOUSE AND ITS COMMITTEES

FIFTH REPORT OF SPECIAL COMMITTEE

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I have the honour to present the fifth report of the special committee appointed to supervise the implementation of radio and television broadcasting of the proceedings of the House and its committees. I do want to beg, as I indicated earlier, the indulgence of the House to take just a moment to make a remark or two about the changes in the House which have taken place over the intervening two months since we last sat.

With the tabling of this fifth report we complete a series of reports which cover in a rather comprehensive, although brief, way the work of that special committee which had a rather extraordinary mandate, that of implementing a decision of the House. This is a rather unusual mandate, and when we did meet as a committee to carry out this assigned task, our initial advice was that it would be at least 18 to 24 months before the task could be accomplished. The fact that we are all here today, with the work done, when in fact we not only did not have the chamber vacated on July 1 as we had hoped but, indeed, not until the middle of August, is really remarkable.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: I want to pay just a brief tribute to the people who I feel have given absolute devotion to their tasks, above and beyond the call of duty. We have, as hon. members will notice, relocated the desks in the chamber in order to add more. We have relocated the Chair in order to increase the seating to 300 members and accommodate those redistribution changes which the House provided for in recent legislation. We have upgraded the sound system, which in fact is an entire replacement of the sound system, and I think it has proven today to be a very worth-while addition to our facilities.

Some hon. Members: Hear, Hear!

Mr. Speaker: We have, incredibly, constructed over the south gallery an entire studio which was not there two months ago. I think it is a tribute to the Department of Public Works that this was done, and particularly to their architect in charge who has the specific assignment of heritage buildings, Mr. Robert Calvert, and who I think has done the job in such a way as to preserve the dignity of the chamber.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: The fact that these many steps were taken within that space of time reflects, I think, the serious and conscientious attitude of the members of the committee, those members of the House who sat on this rather special committee and who worked quite long hours during the very brief recess that other members enjoyed. I will not try to name the members; they are known to the parties in the House.

In that work we were aided immensely by a team of advisers from the CBC upon whom we relied constantly for advice and technical assistance. On the technical side, that team was headed by Mr. Jim Landsberg, and on the production quality side the whole operation was watchdogged, to ensure the highest quality, by Mr. Cameron Graham. I think the House owes both those gentlemen a great deal of appreciation.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: During the time this work was carried out, the staff of the House, particularly the Clerk of the House, Mr. Alistair Fraser, had really to be in the building almost 24 hours a day to supervise.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: In that work, Mr. Fraser was joined, on the technical side of the radio and television installations, by Mr. Alex Small, who has been in the service of the House of Commons now for many years, and particularly by the Sergeant-at-Arms who was responsible for safeguarding the sanctity of this chamber during all this intensive reconstruction.

The Sergeant-at-Arms, Colonel Currie, really did yeoman service in that regard.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Just a brief word about the concept that is involved. As members know, the concept under which we were operating, the mandate that we were given, was a specific one, and that was to proceed on the basis of an electronic Hansard. Therefore, the equipment which is in place is here, not out of an introduction of news coverage but out of the introduction of an addition to our Hansard reporting, the printed Hansard which has been here since the beginning of the sittings of this House. We are adding radio and television Hansard.

That concept is one by which we have been guided constantly and one which we feel sets up a fundamental relationship with the networks that may distribute this product. In other words, it has been our task to bring it into being here as a reporting device of the proceedings of the House and to make it available. This we have done, and we leave it to the networks and the publicity and media people to choose or leave alone what they wish, as has been the case in print media up to now. That seems to be a very satisfactory concept for this coverage.

There are, however, a number of questions that remain unresolved. We have temporary equipment in place now. The cameras which are to the left and right of the Chair are manually operated, as members can see. We have attempted to place them in such a way as to be as inobtrusive as possible to the proceedings of the House. Members know that in about six months' time, when the equipment is available, these cameras will be mounted underneath the galleries and operated remotely, so that there will not be even this much interference with the proceedings of the House.

During that time we will need to experiment with our capacity to use this very powerful medium to record our proceedings, for indeed there are many questions about the manner in which these cameras ought to be directed and controlled. The only way we can resolve these questions is to experiment with them, which, of course, was another very essential part of our mandate when this task was begun.

The lighting is a little higher than it absolutely needs to be, and we are hoping that it will be toned down both in temperature and intensity.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: The task generally has been a very great challenge. As I say, many questions remain unresolved, and therefore your committee will seek a mandate in the new session to be reconstituted in order to continue the assessment of this ongoing experience. We do have many questions. Many representations are being made to us about distribution and assistance by the House in distributing the film that we take. We have a number of questions about rights and immunities. In terms of hon. members, we did address ourselves to the question of the rights and immunities of members. Basically, since we are simply going on with the reporting of our own proceedings, it was not felt that there was any fundamental change in the rights and immunities already enjoyed by members.

There is, however, a question or two about the position of broadcasters, and about the position of our interpreters, which we want to see resolved. The committee will be hearing further representations on that, and perhaps will even be considering the possibility or the advisability of attempting to draft some legislation—even though the opinion may be that legislation is not absolutely necessary—on the feeling that the House and the country would benefit from removing any uncertainties that might exist.

Again I say to all of those who have worked so tirelessly during this short recess, who have performed this work on behalf of the House, in keeping with the dignity of the chamber, the very important work here and this concept of recording our own proceedings with an increased awareness and service to the Canadian public, that I think the House owes them a great debt of gratitude, and I think we are fortunate that this work has been completed in time.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Clark: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, you have, very properly, expressed the appreciation of the members of the House to everyone involved in the preparation of the transformation of this chamber, with one singular exception. That exception, sir, is yourself, who chaired the committee.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Clark: We all appreciate that that was very arduous and demanding work which has only just begun. I am sure I speak on behalf of all your colleagues in the House of Commons in expressing our very real appreciation to Your Honour for the work you did through the summer.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

PROROGATION OF PARLIAMENT

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

Mr. Yvon Pinard (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): To show my gratitude for such a warm welcome, I shall answer some five hundred questions today.

Mr. Speaker, the following questions will be answered today: 41, 44, 53, 159, 163, 174, 193, 358, 625, 630, 632, 699—

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. parliamentary secretary, in an assiduous task under his new responsibilities, has provided the House with a copy of the list of questions proposed to be answered today. Under the circumstances, because the list is rather extensive and is some 2½ pages in length, I wonder if the House might be of a disposition to file the list and consider it to have been read.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Agreed.

[Editor's Note: The numbers of the questions mentioned above are as follows:] 41, 44, 53, 159, 163, 174, 193, 358, 625, 630, 632, 699, 745, 862, 863, 865, 976, 1,141, 1,175, 1,179, 1,214, 1,216, 1,335, 1,336, 1,412, 1,413, 1,451, 1,479, 1,492, 1,534, 1,554, 1,574 to 1,602 incl., 1,638, 1,719, 1,743, 1,788, 1,869, 1,870, 1,882, 1,915, 1,930, 1,935, 1,945, 1,955, 1,997, 1,998, 1,999, 2,008, 2,027, 2,028, 2,029, 2,044, 2,045, 2,053, 2,067, 2,068, 2,081, 2,082, 2,085, 2,154, 2,155, 2,195 to 2,202 incl., 2,232, 2,233, 2,234, 2,260, 2,304, 2,316, 2,339, 2,356, 2,368, 2,394, 2,401, 2,404, 2,405, 2,428, 2,431, 2,433, 2,434, 2,442, 2,451, 2,454, 2,456, 2,462, 2,538, 2,542, 2,547, 2,555, 2,556, 2,557, 2,646, 2,725, 2,727, 2,728, 2,735, 2,737, 2,738, 2,740, 2,741, 2,744, 2,746, 2,757, 2,762, 2,767, 2,771, 2,783, 2,785, 2,787, 2,788, 2,789, 2,794, 2,798, 2,804, 2,807, 2,809, 2,812, 2,814, 2,819, 2,820, 2,825, 2,827, 2,837, 2,842, 2,843, 2,844, 2,847, 2,848, 2,849, 2,854, 2,856, 2,857, 2,858, 2,861, 2,863, 2,864, 2,865, 2,867, 2,869, 2,870, 2,872, 2,873, 2,881, 2,884, 2,885, 2,886, 2,887, 2,889, 2,895, 2,898, 2,900, 2,901, 2,903, 2,904, 2,907, 2,909, 2,910, 2,911, 2,914, 2,915, 2,916, 2,917, 2,918, 2,921, 2,922, 2,923, 2,924, 2,926, 2,929, 2,931, 2,933, 2,936, 2,942, 2,945, 2,948, 2,949, 2,950, 2,951, 2,954,

2,956 to 3,004 incl., 3,009 as well as questions Nos. 113, 117, 326, 506, 657, 722, 723, 727, 730, 1,014, 1,168, 1,180, 1,191, 1,206, 1,207, 1,209, 1,279, 1,294, 1,298, 1,337, 1,394, 1,397, 1,409, 1,485, 1,627, 1,649, 1,829, 1,996, 2,032, 2,064, 2,065, 2,066, 2,083, 2,251, 2,270, 2,277, 2,298, 2,314, 2,346, 2,389, 2,432, 2,435, 2,460, 2,475, 2,539, 2,550, 2,675 (revised) 2,724, 2,729, 2,731, 2,750, 2,782, 2,790, 2,806, 2,833, 2,840, 2,841, 2,850, 2,868, 2,874, 2,880, 2,894, 2,896, 2,897, 2,925, 2,946, 2,952 and 3,008.

USE OF GOVERNMENT AIRCRAFT

Question No. 41—Mr. Cossitt:

With reference to the answer to Question No. 3,240 of the First Session of the 30th Parliament, that lists in part 32 trips by the Minister of Agriculture, his wife and members of his family by government aircraft at public expense since September 25, 1973 (a) what is the total cost of all the trips to the taxpayer (b) for what reason was this answer Tabled rather than printed in Hansard since answers of much greater length have been printed in Hansard?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): (a) See reply to question No. 2,881. (b) See Beauchesne's Citation 171 (a), (j) and (kk).

USE OF GOVERNMENT AIRCRAFT

Question No. 44—Mr. Cossitt:

In a letter dated October 14, 1975 to Mr. Charles S. Pringle, 500 Ouellette Avenue, Windsor, Ontario did the Minister of Agriculture state in part "For flights undertaken on behalf of the government as a whole, the Minister's budget is charged double the first class rate fare that would be chargeable by commercial carriers for the same on similar flights and trajectory of $100, whichever is greater" and, if so (a) when was the policy established by the government (b) how was such an amount to be charged arrived at (c) what was (i) the actual cost to the government of the DOT aircraft used by the Minister on a trip to Vancouver on October 17 to 19, 1975 (ii) the amount charged to the Minister's budget if the basis for charges outlined by the Minister had been followed?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): See reply to question No. 2,881.

APPOINTMENT OF 1976 CENSUS COMMISSIONERS

Question No. 53—Mr. Cossitt:

With reference to the answer to Question No. 5,307 of the First Session of the 30th Parliament, which stated in part that in all constituencies the name of the local contact for appointment of 1976 Census commissioners was provided to Statistics Canada by the office of the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce, in each case, what are the names and addresses of the persons, from whom the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce received such recommendations?

Mr. Hugh Poulin (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): The office of the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce advises that it received the names of the local contact for the constituencies listed from the following:

USE OF AIRCRAFT BY PRIME MINISTER

Question No. 113—Mr. Cossitt:

1. What was the total cost to the taxpayer of the Prime Minister's visit to Prince Edward Island during September 1976, including the cost of (a) transportation (b) accommodation (c) accompanying staff?

2. What are the names and job designations of all staff members accompanying him?

3. What was the exact purpose of the trip and did it result in any way from the 29% standing of the Liberal Party in the gallup poll and, if so (a) was the trip an attempt to remedy such a situation on behalf of the Liberal Party (b) what was the justification for the use of public funds for such purposes?

4. Were any government aircraft used for transportation and, if so (a) what type (b) how much flying time was involved in each case (c) what was the (i) total cost in each case (ii) overall cost?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): Transport Canada advises as follows: 1. (a), (b) and (c)—See reply to question 2,881.

2. See reply to question 2,881.

3. See reply to question 2,881.

4. (a) Transport Canada Lockheed Jetstar. (b) and (c) (i), (ii)—See reply to question 2,881.

MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE—CTV PROGRAM "QUESTION PERIOD"

Question No. 117—Mr. Cossitt:

Did the Minister of Agriculture state on the CTV programme "Question Period" that the government had conducted a secret poll which showed that most Canadians agree with government agricultural policies and, if so (a) on what date was the poll conducted (b) was it paid for at public expense (c) what was the amount involved (d) what was the name and address of the polling organization (e) what were the reasons that the poll was taken and who authorized it (f) is it customary for the Department of Agriculture to use public funds to poll Canadians about the Department and its policies (g) will the Minister agree to make all details of the poll public, including questions actually asked, percentage replies thereto, and all other information involved and (i) if so, on what date (ii) if not, for what reason?

Hon. E. F. Whelan (Minister of Agriculture): A transcript of the program in question reveals that the minister did not actually use the word secret relative to an awareness and attitudes study conducted for the department. Any such implication referred to the point being made by the minister that the results of the survey had not, at that time, been made public. (a) Interviewing was conducted between November 22, 1975 and December 15, 1975. (b) Yes. (c) $29,700. (d) Goldfarb Consultants Limited, Toronto, Ontario. (e) The survey was designed to ascertain the awareness and attitudes of Canadians, both rural and urban, towards farming, agriculture, food and general government policy regarding agriculture. The project was approved by the Minister of Agriculture. (f) Yes. The department uses surveys, if circumstances indicate a desirability to obtain the type of information described in the answer to part (e). Surveys also provide an opportunity for the public to express views on agriculture policies. (g) Announcement has already been made that the report of the survey and the questionnaire are publicly available from the consulting firm. As the survey was conducted person-to-person, response was 100 per cent.

INTERNATIONAL TREATIES

Question No. 163—Mr. Forrestall:

1. How many international treaties, conventions, accords, etc., have been signed by Canada but have not been (a) ratified (b) implemented by either the (i) provinces (ii) Parliament of Canada or the executive of the government of Canada?

2. What treaties are involved and on what date did Canada sign them?

3. How many such arrangements has Canada ratified but have not implemented, if any?

4. What consideration is Canada giving to implementing the recommendation of the Special Joint Committee of the Senate and House of Commons on the Constitution of Canada (1972) that international treaties be ratified by Parliament rather than the Executive and the Crown?

Mr. Fernand E. Leblanc (Parliamentary Secretary to Secretary of State for External Affairs): In so far as the Department of External Affairs is concerned, the answer is as follows: An identical question was asked during the last session: No. 5,359. Our answer was given on July 13, 1976, see Hansard, page 15297. That answer remains the same.

CENSUS COMMISSIONERS IN ATLANTIC PROVINCES

Question No. 174—Mr. Forrestall:

1. What was the name, address and occupation of every person appointed through the office of the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce for the purpose of nominating potential 1976 Census Commissioners to Statistics Canada, for each constituency in Atlantic Canada?

2. For each such constituency, how many Census Commissioners and Census Enumerators were appointed in total?

3. What is the best estimate of the total salaries paid for Census Enumerators and Commissioners in Atlantic Canada for the 1976 Census?

Mr. Hugh Poulin (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): 1, 2 and 3, Statistics Canada reports that it does not have information on the occupations of those persons mentioned in Question 1. However, the names and addresses of contacts and all other details are as follows:

PRIME MINISTER'S TRIP TO SOUTHERN ONTARIO

Question No. 193—Mr. Cossitt:

1. What was the total cost to the taxpayer of the Prime Minister's trip to Southern Ontario on or about the end of September 1976 including, cost of (a) transportation (b) accommodation (c) accompanying staff?

2. What are the names and job designations of all staff members accompanying him?

3. (a) What was the purpose of the trip (b) did the trip result in any way from the 29 p. 100 standing of the Liberal Party in the Gallup Poll and, if so, was the trip an attempt to remedy such a situation on behalf of the Liberal Party (c) what justifies the use of public funds for such purposes?

[Mr. Poulin.]

4. Were any government aircraft used for transportation and, if so (a) what type (b) how much flying time was involved in each case (c) what was the (i) total cost (ii) cost in each case?

5. (a) What are the names of all Liberal Party Groups or Associations that the Prime Minister attended during the course of the trip (b) is the Liberal Party reimbursing the Public Treasury for their share of the trip and (i) if so, in what amount (ii) if not, for what reason?

6. Did the Prime Minister or any member of his family make use of a pass on any commercial aircraft during the trip and, if so (a) did they travel first class or economy (b) what would have been the appropriate fare if a pass had not been used?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): 1 to 5. See reply to question 2,881 answered this day.

6. Not applicable.

PUBLIC SERVANTS EARNING $30,000 OR MORE IN 1975

Question No. 326—Mr. Orlikow:

1. How many public servants received salaries of $30,000 or more in 1975?

2. How many notified their employer that they were engaged in other financial activities as required by Privy Council Guideline of 1973 included in P.C. 1973-4065, 18 December, 1973, Part 7, "Public servants should hold no outside office or employment that could place on them demands inconsistent with their official duties in an objective manner."

3. What steps, if any, have been taken to ensure that none of these outside activities are conducted during government office hours or using government facilities such as telephone, computers or secretarial staff?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): 1. 4,522 (December 31, 1975).

2. Consumer and Corporate Affairs, 4; Statistics Canada, 5; Unemployment Insurance Commission, 3; National Health and Welfare, 2; National Revenue, 3; Privy Council Office and Federal-Provincial Relations Office, 3; Public Works, 9; Regional Economic Expansion, 1; Science Council of Canada, 1; Secretary of State for External Affairs, 18; Transport, 1; Ministry of State for Urban Affairs, 1; other departments and agencies did not receive notification of engagement in other financial activities.

3. It is generally recognized that services, equipment and facilities provided to public servants are for use only in the conduct of official business. Any personal use, whether for financial gain or otherwise, can be the subject of disciplinary action. Observance is ensured by effective management supervision within departments and agencies.

FIRST CLASS MAILINGS IN CONSTITUENCY OF VAUDREUIL

Question No. 358—Mr. Herbert:

1. Is the Postmaster General aware that clearly marked first class mail sent by the Member for Vaudreuil from his residence or constituency office to his Ottawa office, a distance of less than 100 miles, averages five days delivery time?

2. What steps are being taken to return first class mail delivery to an acceptable level and until these measures are in effect, will the present advertising on postal boxes be removed?

Hon. J.-J. Blais (Postmaster General): 1. The Postmaster General has been made aware of the allegations through this question.

Canada Post is constantly striving to improve its service and to remedy any deficiencies that can be isolated. A major initiative has recently been implemented to identify delays and initiate appropriate action. Information on postal boxes is designed to advise customers of the service scheduled to specific destinations. Some cases involving misunderstanding of the information have occurred, and new notices that are simpler to understand will begin to appear on mail boxes within the next few months.

POSTAGE STAMPS

Question No. 506—Mr. Brisco:

1. How many new design postage stamps were issued in (a) 1975 (b) 1976 to date?

2. What were the costs involved in the production of each new design?

3. How much did each artist receive for his or her designs?

4. In terms of stamp sales to foreign collectors and others, etc., is it more costly or less costly to produce several different stamp designs, rather than only one specific stamp design?

Hon. J.-J. Blais (Postmaster General): 1. (a) 35. (b) 23 as of 14 October.

2. The design and production costs for each stamp.

3. Issues are shown below.

4. While it is more costly to produce several different stamp designs rather than only one specific stamp design, the sale of stamps to collectors is of secondary consideration in determining the number of stamp designs to be produced. The purpose of a stamp is to prepay postage, and stamps with different designs are issued to help focus attention on subjects of national and international interest and concern. The principal considerations which determine whether more than one design should be produced are the importance and complexity of a subject and whether the subject is of national or international interest, or a combination of the two. Revenues generated by philatelic sales are more than sufficient to cover all design and stamp production costs.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT

Question No. 625—Mr. Dinsdale:

1. Could a clerk in the Post Office Department be promoted to a supervisory position after one year's experience and, if so, under what circumstances?

2. Are there any instances where automated equipment has never operated since being installed in a post office and, if so, in what location has this occurred?

3. (a) Have there been instances where staff had to be increased significantly because of breakdowns in automated equipment (b) what are the main causes of the breakdowns?

4. Are postai employees relocated from one city to another and, if so (a) under what circumstances (b) could an employee be dismissed if he refused?

5. Is an employee's place of work likely to be changed within a city and, if so (a) under what circumstances (b) are factors such as location of his home, transportation, schooling, etc. taken into consideration before such transfer is made (c) is he ever forced to transfer and threatened with dismissal if he refuses?

6. Are late pay cheques and/or incorrect pay cheques considered a cause of serious dissatisfaction amongst postal employees?

7. Has any survey been made to determine if thefts in post offices are made mainly by casual or permanent employees and, if so, what were the results?

8. Between January 1 and December 31, 1975, what was the average percentage of staff turnover in post offices where automated equipment was installed?

9. Was such percentage considered abnormally high and, if so, for what reason?

Hon. J.-J. Blais (Postmaster General): 1. A clerk in the Post Office Department can be promoted to a supervisory position after one year's experience. While this would not be common, it could occur when the clerk concerned was considered by a Rating Board to be the best qualified candidate in a competition from within the area of competition established by a responsible staffing officer.

2. There have been numerous incidents where the Department has temporarily withheld processing live mail on newly installed equipment pending final acceptance testing by the Department or pending the fulfillment of the 120-day period of notice that must be given to the Canadian Union of Postal Workers. There have also been situations where new equipment was not promptly used in new plants, while operations were being transferred in stages from another location.

3. (a) No. (b) Not applicable.

4. (a) and (b) Postal employees may be relocated from one city to another under any of the following circumstances: (i) As the result of a request submitted by the employee for a lateral transfer, normally based on medical, economic or compassionate grounds. As the request in this circumstance would be originated by the employee, the question of refusal is not applicable. (ii) As the result of a successful application for promotion to a position at another geographical location. Again, as the application would be originated by the employee, the question as to refusal does not apply. (iii) As the result of lack of work at the original location. Every effort would be made to find alternative employment at the original location. If this is not possible, every effort would be made to find a suitable position elsewhere. If suitable employment is located at another geographical location and the employee refused to relocate, the employee would not be dismissed. Instead he/she would become a lay-off and subject to the lay—off procedures which have been established for public servants.

5. (a), (b) and (c) An employee's place of work may be changed within a city. The circumstances under which this could occur would include: (i) Phasing out of an existing facility. (ii) Decrease in the number of employees at a continuing facility. (iii) The bidding process wherein employees exercise their seniority rights in the filling of vacant positions. In (i) and (ii) above consideration would be given to such factors as home, transportation, schooling, etc. insofar as is practical. Employees are not forced to transfer and are not threatened with dismissal if they refuse to transfer. On the other hand, if there is no work for an employee at one location and that employee is not prepared to present himself at another location where there is suitable work, then that employee of necessity would become a lay-off.

6. Late pay cheques cause dissatisfaction among postal employees. If this occurs, the Post Office Department and the Department of Supply and Services work to correct the problem and minimize the risk of recurrence.

7. Although figures are available as to the number of employees involved each year in the commission of thefts or other offences in the Post Office, a breakdown is not available as to the category of employees involved.

8 and 9. The turnover rate for postal operations non-supervisory sub-groups for 1975 was approximately 7.24 percent nationally. Less than one percent (0.55 percent) of this turnover was from mechanized postal plants. Neither figure is considered abnormally high.

[Mr. Blais.]

COST OF TELEGRAMS SENT BY GOVERNMENT

Question No. 630—Mr. Beatty:

What was the cost to the taxpayer of telegrams sent by the government in 1975?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): For many departments and agencies, the cost of telegrams alone is not available, it includes amount spent on telegraph, cable and wireless communications. Agriculture Canada, $15,347.83; Communications, $5,091.28; Consumer and Corporate Affairs, $31,396.00*; Energy, Mines and Resources, $30,902'46; Atomic Energy Control Board, $182.02; National Energy Board, $20,540.98; Atomic Energy of Canada Limited, $36,694.00; Environment Canada, $191,474.00; Finance, $9,701.11; Anti-Inflation Board, $2,008.37; Auditor General, $142.04; Insurance, $38.00; Health and Welfare Canada, $101,585.00; Indian and Northern Affairs, $72,286.33*; Industry, Trade and Commerce, $89,966.10*; Foreign Investment Review Agency, $2,309.32*; Statistics Canada, $4,782.86; Justice (Including its agencies), $3,700.30*; Labour Canada, $1,630.30*; Canada Labour Relations Board, $1,763.46; Manpower and Immigration, $41,324.15; National Defence, $144,749.00*; Revenue Canada, $40,793.90; Post Office, $181,458.00*; Prime Minister's and Privy Council Offices, $12,644.00*; Public Service Staff Relations Board, $326.51; Public Works, $192,000.00*; Regional Economic Expansion, $6,190.85*; Science and Technology, $2,477.90; Canadian Patents and Development Limited, $160.34; National Research Council of Canada, $6,243.87; Science Council of Canada, $610.48*; Secretary of State, $17,395.22*; External Affairs, $4,462,-100.00; Other government departments generate 50% of the telegrams transmitted over the facilities of the Department of External Affairs. The total cost of operating the network in 1975 was $8,924,200.00. This includes telegraphic costs, capital cost of equipment amortized over 10 years, salaries, allowances and overtime. Canadian International Development Agency, $5,881.50; Solicitor General, $886.00; Royal Canadin Mounted Police, $9,985.14; Canadian Penitentiary Service and National Parole Service, $4,864.22; National Parole Board, $1,041.93; Supply and Services, $132,474.59; Transport Canada, $200,714.82; Treasury Board, $5,477.24; Urban Affairs, $298.46*; National Capital Commission, $581.30; Veterans Affairs, $4,810.83; other departments and agencies have submitted a Nil reply.

USE OF GOVERNMENT AIRCRAFT

Question No. 632—Mr. Beatty:

1. Did the Secretary of State travel to London and Stratford on July 9, 1976, and, if so, what (a) are the details of the cost (b) was the total cost?

2. What are the names of all passengers aboard the aircraft and what was their reason for travelling to London and Stratford?

3. (a) How did the passengers travel between London and Stratford and return (b) what was the cost to the taxpayer, if any, of the ground transportation used?

4. Was the Secretary of State aware that a regularly-scheduled Air Canada aircraft which could have carried the Minister's party to London landed shortly before the Minister's jet and, if so, for what reason did the Minister feel it was necessary to travel by government aircraft?

5. At what time did the Secretary of State's aircraft leave London for the return trip and what was its destination?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the President of the Privy Council and the Minister of State for Science and Technology as follows: 1. (a), (b) and 2. See reply to question No. 2,881.

3. (a) Rental car and private car. (b) $34.

4. Please see reply to Part 4 of question No. 69 answered November 15, 1976.

5. (a) July 10, 1976 at 1:00 p.m. (b) Ottawa with stops at Belleville and Trenton.

POST OFFICE EMPLOYEES

Question No. 657—Mr. Lachance:

Between the date of the presentation of the last budget May 25, 1976 and October 12, 1976, did the Post Office Department hire, dismiss or transfer employees to other departments and, if so, how many?

Hon. J.-J. Blais (Postmaster General): (1) 5,146; (2) 1,024; (3) 145.

REGIONAL OFFICES—MINISTERIAL EXEMPTED STAFF

Question No. 699—Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich):

1. (a) How many regional offices have been established across Canada staffed by Ministerial exempted staff or by other appointees (b) in what locations (c) what are the names of the officers staffing them (d) from what funds are rent and other office expenses paid (e) what is the cost for each such office?

2. (a) To whose staff is each appointee attached (b) do regional officers report solely to the ministers appointing them or do they have other reporting responsibilities?

3. (a) At what salary are appointments made and with what sort of allowances for travel, etc. (b) from what funds are such salaries and allowances paid?

4. What fringe benefits are enjoyed by the officers in charge of the offices, e.g., use of services aircraft on priority or stand-by basis?

5. What are the terms of reference of the officers exercising these duties and, in what manner are such terms of reference reconciled with the normal duties exercised by Members of Parliament?

6. What are the relationships between these regional offices and Liberal Members of Parliament and their constituency offices?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): It has been the policy of numerous governments to provide an office and requisite staff for ministers of the Crown in their home communities so that they may continue to function as ministers when they are at home rather than in Ottawa. These are not regional offices—"Regional Office" being defined as one which administers all activities of the department in a particular region—but are supplementary offices intended to expedite the governing of the nation by ministers who reside normally in many different areas of the country. The Minister of Agriculture, as a result of the particularly great importance of agriculture to the western economy, maintains this type of supplementary office in Regina. In so far as that office is concerned, the answer is as follows: 1. (a) 1; (b) Regina; (c) Special Assistant—vacant; Mrs. I. Lamothe; (d) Departmental appropriations; (e) 1975-76—$34,572.00 (including salaries and expenses except for accommodation).

2. (a) Minister's staff; (b) Report to minister.

3. (a) In accordance with salary scales and ranges established for exempt staff and public servants with no allowances. (b) Departmental appropriations.

4. None.

5. Special assistant to the minister with specific responsibility for Western Canada.

6. No formal relationship exists between the offices.

DREE PROJECTS IN QUEBEC

Question No. 722—Mr. Coates:

1. How many specific projects in Quebec has the Department of Regional Economic Expansion been financially involved in since its inception and, in each case, what was the financial involvement?

2. Of the total number of projects, what was the estimated employment figure given at the time of the announced involvement of DREE and for those firms still operating, what is the employment figure actually attributable to the financial assistance in each case, as of this date?

3. Of DREE's financial assistance to each project, what is the breakdown between outright grants and loans?

4. How many of the projects have failed and, in each case (a) on what date was the grant and loan approved (b) on what date did it fail?

5. How many employees lost employment as a result of the failure of the project at the date of the closure?

Hon. Marcel Lessard (Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): The reply for the Department of Regional Economic Expansion is as follows: 1. As of October 31, 1976, 2,143 projects in the province of Quebec had accepted offers of financial assistance from DREE under the regional development incentives program. The total value of these incentives offers is estimated to be $246.0 million. The names of the firms and respective amounts of incentives are available from the reports on the program that are submitted monthly to Parliament.

2. For the 2,143 projects, the estimated employment figure at the time of the announced involvement of DREE was 78,918. Of this total number of projects, 864 were completed as of October 31, 1976. The number of direct jobs actually created at the completion of the control period for these 864 projects, was 29,367 compared to the 31,612 jobs forecasted when the offers of financial assistance were announced. In this context, a "completed project" is one on which the full amount of the development incentive authorized by the minister under the statute has been paid to the applicant. This definition includes (a) a project which has successfully completed its control period, irrespective of any subsequent actions, and (b) a project involving a bankruptcy or total cessation of operations due to fire or other circumstances which requires the department to institute action to recover only part of the incentive paid to the applicant. With respect to this latter type of project, it is to be noted that the statute entitles the applicant to payment of an incentive on the grounds that the project achieved some success.

3. The Regional Development Incentives Act does not authorize the department to make loans, but does provide for offers of "loan guarantees" and "repayable incentives". As of October 31, 1976 DREE had approved $18,878,000 in loan guarantees to sixteen projects in the province of Quebec. As of October 31, 1976, two of the 2,143 projects referred to in Part 1 had been undertaken as a result of repayable grants estimated at $1,251,000.

4. As of October 31, 1976, 84 of the 2,143 projects which had accepted inventives offers were discontinued before receiving their final grant payment. The dates of failure are not recorded since firms normally shut down and go through a period of attempted reorganization before announcing failure. The remaining 1,195 projects were still active at that time. In this context, a "discontinued project" is one on which the department has made a payment but in which there has subsequently been a bankruptcy, total cessation of operations, contravention of section 9 of the Regional Development Incentives Act, or other circumstance which requires the department to institute action to recover the full amount of the incentive paid to the applicant.

5. The number of employees who lost employment at the time of closure is not known. Gradual shut down of the facility, normal seasonal employment fluctuations, and even rehiring of employees by a receiver after closure in order to complete unfinished inventories make it virtually impossible to provide accurate information of this kind.

DREE PROJECTS IN ATLANTIC CANADA

Question No. 723—Mr. Coates:

1. How many specific projects in Atlantic Canada has the Department of Regional Economic Expansion been financially involved in since its inception and, in each case, what was the financial involvement?

2. Of the total number of projects, what was the estimated employment figure given at the time of the announced involvement of DREE and for those firms still operating, what is the employment figure actually attributable to the financial assistance in each case, as of this date?

3. Of DREE's financial assistance to each project, what is the breakdown between outright grants and loans?

4. How many of the projects have failed and, in each case (a) on what date was the grant and loan approved (b) on what date did it fail?

5. How many employees lost employment as a result of the failure of the project at the date of the closure?

Hon. Marcel Lessard (Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): The reply for the Department of Regional Economic Expansion is as follows: 1. As of October 31, 1976, 780 projects in Atlantic Canada had accepted offers of financial assistance from DREE under the regional development incentives program. The total value of these incentives offers is estimated to be $151.7 million. The names of the firms and respective amounts of incentives are available from the reports on the program that are submitted monthly to parliament.

2. For the 780 projects, the estimated employment figure at the time of the announced involvement of DREE was 25,889. Of this total number of projects, 256 were completed as of October 31, 1976. The number of direct jobs actually created at the completion of the control period for these 256 projects, was 6,387 compared to the 7,572 jobs forecasted when the offers of financial assistance were announced. In this context, a "completed project" is one on which the full amount of the development incentive authorized by the minister under the statute has been paid to the applicant. This definition includes (a) a project which has successfully completed its control period, irrespective of any subsequent actions, and (b) a project involving a bankruptcy or total cessation of operations due to fire or other circumstance which requires the department to institute action to recover only part of the incentive paid to the applicant. With respect to this latter type of project, it is to be noted that the statute entitles the applicant to payment of an incentive on the grounds that the project achieved some success.

[Mr. Lessard.]

3. The Regional Development Incentives Act does not authorize the department to make loans, but does provide for offers of "loan guarantees" and "repayable incentives". As of October 31, 1976, DREE had approved $4,555,000 in loan guarantees to five projects in Atlantic Canada. As of October 31, 1976, two of the 780 projects referred to in part I had been undertaken as a result of repayable grants estimated at $1,455,000.

4. As of October 31, 1976, 37 of the 780 projects which had accepted incentives offers discontinued before receiving their final grant payment. The dates of failure are not recorded since firms normally shut down and go through a period of attempted reorganization before announcing failure. The remaining 487 projects were still active at that time. In this context, a "discontinued project" is one on which the department has made a payment but in which there has subsequently been a bankruptcy, total cessation of operations, contravention of section 9 of the Regional Development Incentives Act, or other circumstance which requires the department to institute action to recover the full amount of the incentive paid to the applicant.

5. The number of employees who lost employment at the time of closure is not known. Gradual shut down of the facility, normal seasonal employment fluctuations, and even rehiring of employees by a receiver after closure in order to complete unfinished inventories makes it virtually impossible to provide accurate information of this kind.

ANTI-INFLATION BOARD ADVERTISING

Question No. 727—Mr. Coates:

1. How much, to date, has the AIB expended on advertising, in any form, and what is the breakdown?

2. (a) What agencies are involved in the advertising (b) in what manner did the AIB make the selection of the agencies (c) were public tenders called before contracts were awarded?

3. In each case, what have the agencies received in fees and commissions?

4. By agency, what is the estimated cost for advertising for the fiscal year 1976-77 and, in each case, what will be the fees and commissions paid to each agency in the fiscal year?

Mr. Bob Kaplan (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance): 1. To date the board has spent $348,487.13. The breakdown is as follows: Fiscal 75/76, $230,705.38; Fiscal 76/77, $117,781.75. This was all print advertising done to inform Canadians about AIB requirements and programs.

2. (a) MacLaren Advertising Limited, Canadian Advertising Agency Limited. (b) On the recommendation of the communications branch of the AIB. (c) No.

3. MacLaren Advertising Ltd: Fiscal 75/76, $41,525.78; Fiscal 76/77, Nil. Canadian Advertising Agency Ltd: Fiscal 75/76, Nil; Fiscal 76/77, Nil.

4. Fiscal year 76/77: MacLaren Advertising Ltd: $250,000, Canadian Advertising Agency: $50,000. The fees will be the normal 15 per cent paid by the media for advertising placed by agencies.

Question No. 730—Mr. Coates:

1. How many trips outside Canada has the Prime Minister taken since he assumed his present position in 1968?

2. How many were for (a) business (b) business and pleasure (c) pleasure?

3. How many were made by (a) government aircraft (b) commercial aircraft (c) using both types of aircraft?

4. What were the specific trips when government aircraft were involved?

5. In each case, what was the total period of time the Prime Minister was away from Canada?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): See replies to questions Nos. 29 and 30 answered this day.

PRESENT COMPLEMENT EMPLOYEES DEVCO INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT DIVISION

Question No. 745—Mr. Muir:

1. What is the present complement of employees in the Industrial Development Division of the Cape Breton Development Corporation?

2. What (a) are the names of the chief officers of the division (b) are their specific responsibilities (c) is the salary of each?

3. What was the complement of the Division in each fiscal year 1969-70 to date and how many projects did it have under consideration?

Mr. Ed. Lumley (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): For the Cape Breton Development Corporation the answer is as follows: 1. 34 (December 31, 1976).

2. (a) David I. Miller, Vice President, Industrial Development Division John L. Dodge, Vice President, Planning and Marketing. (b) Mr. Miller is responsible for the Industrial Development Division's operations in the Tourism, Primary and Secondary sectors. Mr. Dodge is responsible for the planning of activities for the Industrial Development Division and the marketing function of the Coal Division. (c) It is not the policy of the corporation to disclose individual salaries.

3. The complement of the division in each fiscal year was: March 1970, 7; March 1971, 7; March 1972, 9; March 1973, 20; March 1974, 28; March 1975, 30; March 1976, 34. As of December 31, 1976, there were 99 projects under consideration. It is not possible to give precise numbers for particular dates in earlier years, but the volume has been markedly increasing, as has the work of implementing projects.

ESTIMATED COST OF RELOCATION

Question No. 862—Mr. Herbert:

What is the estimated cost of the relocation of the Canadian Pension Commission, the Pension Review Board, the War Veterans Allowance Board and the Bureau of Pension Advocates as well as veterans services, treatment services and administration services of the Department of Veterans Affairs to Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island?

Hon. Daniel J. MacDonald (Minister of Veterans Affairs): Subject to more detailed studies the total estimated cost of the relocation of the Department of Veterans Affairs to Charlottetown, P.E.I. is 8.5 million dollars.

NEW FEDERAL BUILDING—CHARLOTTETOWN, P.E.I. TO HOUSE DEPARTMENT OF VETERANS AFFAIRS

Mr. Alexandre Cyr (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Public Works): (a) and (b) Not known at this time as detailed accommodation requirements have not yet been identified by Department of Veterans Affairs.

LAND ACQUISITION, CHARLOTTETOWN, P.E.I.—NEW FEDERAL BUILDING FOR DEPARTMENT OF VETERANS AFFAIRS

Question No. 865—Mr. Herbert:

Has land been purchased or has an option been taken on land in Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island for the construction of the new building for the Canadian Pension Commission, the Pension Review Board, the War Veterans Allowance Board and the Bureau of Pension Advocates as well as veterans services, treatment services and administration services of the Department of Veterans Affairs?

Mr. Alexandre Cyr (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Public Works): No.

LIQUOR PURCHASES—1975

Question No. 976—Mr. Beatty:

How much money was spent by the government to purchase liquor in 1975?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Agriculture Canada, $1,956.00. Communications, $1,717.54. Consumer and Corporate Affairs, $4,235.24. Atomic Energy of Canada Limited, $2,200. Finance, $1,223.73. Anti-Inflation Board, $289.67. Office of the Auditor General, $412.35. Indian Affairs and Northern Development, $1,026.56. Statistics Canada, $197.00.

Canada Labour Relations Board, $87.55. Employment and Immigration, $4,399.07. Unemployment Insurance Commission, $999. National Defence, $5,978.88. (These costs represents the liquor purchases mainly for the treatment of geriatric veteran patients). National Revenue, $3,637. Post Office, $509.10. Prime Minister's Residence, $1,925.77. Public Works, $950. Regional Economic Expansion, $4,004.85. Science Council of Canada, $84.30. Secretary of State, $567.26. Public Archives, $1,624.95. National Library, $669.40. National Film Board, $7,326.15. External Affairs, $12,115.95. Transport Canada, $19,941.21. Treasury Board Secretariat, $46.70. Urban Affairs, $3,879.51. National Capital Commission, $251.60. Veterans Affairs, $17,205. (Treatment Services Program for medical purposes). Records are not kept for purchases of liquor perse. Such purchases, if made, would be included in the hospitality expenses claims of individual officers and not as a separate item. However, for the purpose of this question, we have given the costs of liquor for occasions such as conventions, receptions, official dinners, etc. Other departments and agencies have reported that their accounting systems do not provide a breakdown of expenditures on liquor alone. Therefore, the information requested is not readily available.

FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE FOR URBAN TRANSPORTATION

Question No. 1,014—Mr. Howie:

1. Is any financial assistance available or under consideration for a publicly-owned urban transportation system such as the bus system in Fredericton, New Brunswick?

2. Is any such assistance available or under consideration for inter-city systems?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Ministry of State for Urban Affairs as follows: 1. No financial assistance is currently available from the federal government for a publicly-owned urban transportation system such as the bus system in Fredericton, New Brunswick. A proposed urban transit assistance program is being discussed with the provinces at the present time by officials of the Ministry of Transport and the Ministry of State for Urban Affairs.

2. As far as inter-city bus systems are concerned, there is no financial assistance available from the federal government at the present time, nor is assistance being considered.

DESIGNATED MOVES TO HULL

Question No. 1,141—Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton):

1. Which departments or agencies are designated to be moved, in whole or in part, to Hull and, in each case, what is the estimated cost?

2. Has the government commissioned studies respecting the moving of departments or parts thereof to Hull and, if so, in each case (a) who prepared it (b) what were its terms of reference (c) is the study available for release to the public?

3. By what amount will the total floor space, occupied in Ottawa, be reduced by (a) the move to Hull (b) decentralization of government operations from the National Capital Region?

[Mr. Goodale.]

4. (a) What consultation has been undertaken with Hull to determine the best means of maximizing benefits and minimizing harmful effects on the City (b) what consultation has taken place with the City of Ottawa to minimize possible harmful effects on the City?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Department of Public Works and the National Capital Commision as follows: 1. Treasury Board has approved the relocation of the following departments to Hull: Department of Supply & Services Department of Indian & Northern Affairs Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission Canadian International Development Agency Department of Regional Economic Expansion Ministry of Solicitor General Manpower and Immigration Secretary of State Canadian Labour Relations Board Unemployment Insurance Commission Canadian Transport Commission. The estimated cost to move DSS is $250,000. Estimates for the other departments have not been finalized as yet.

2. No. (a) No applicable (b) Not applicable (c) Not applicable.

3. (a) Approximately 3.5 million sq. ft. (b) In the order of 1.2 million sq. ft. The Total amount of floor space occupied in Ottawa will not be proportionately reduced by the foregoing due to the growth of the public service, the 1.6 million sq. ft. of new Crown-owned office accommodation that will be coming on stream in Ottawa, the demolition of 2 million sq. ft. of obsolete and uneconomical temporary buildings over the period, and other interrelated factors.

4. (a) Extensive consultation were held with the city of Hull and the provincial government. As a result a number of projects have been undertaken and are being funded in part or in whole by the federal government to maximize benefits and minimizearterial roads, a demonstration housing project in the "secteur Fournier", a major regional sewerage collection and treatment system. Joint Planning with the Hull, Outaouais Regional and provincial authorities is currently underway for the continued development of the centre town of Hull, for local industrial relocation, as for a number of other elements of urban development. (b) In addition to continuing consultation with city of Ottawa officials on a variety of development issues, the relocation of federal departments to Hull and its implications for the development of the city of Ottawa have been discussed on a number of occasions: for example, when the "Torontow's Capital" concept was being prepared (meeting with Ottawa Planning Board, in 1974). More recently the Hon. Jean Chrétien, Minister for Industry, Trade and Commerce, and the Hon. J. Buchanan, Minister for Public Works, have held discussions with the mayor of Ottawa.

WRITS OF ASSISTANCE

Question No. 1,168—Mr. Forrestall:

1. In each year since 1967, how many writs of assistance were issued and under what statutes?

2. How many were issued to (a) RCMP members (b) employees of government departments and agencies (c) employees of provincial governments and agencies (d) employees of municipalities including municipal police forces?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): 1. The identification of the actual number of writs of assistance issued to RCMP members under each statute for each of the years in question is rendered impractical by the extensive research required; the average number of writs of assistance in use during each year follows and takes into consideration yearly issues, cancellations and those that are carried onward from one year to the next:

The cost to search travel claims would be prohibitive.

GOVERNMENT AIRCRAFT

Question No. 1,206—Mr. Cossitt:

1. How many times since he became a member of the Cabinet has the Minister of Justice personally made use of government aircraft and, in each case, what was the (a) purpose (b) point of departure and destination (c) type of aircraft (d) cost to the taxpayer?

2. What was the total cost to the taxpayer of all such trips?

3. Which trips were for (a) personal (b) political (c) government business?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): See replies to questions Nos. 29 and 30 answered this day.

GOVERNMENT AIRCRAFT

Question No. 1,207—Mr. Cossitt:

1. How many times since he became a member of the Cabinet has the Minister of Health and Welfare personally made use of government aircraft and, in each case, what was the (a) purpose (b) point of departure and destination (c) type of aircraft (d) cost to the taxpayer?

2. What was the total cost to the taxpayer of all such trips?

3. Which trips were for (a) personal (b) political (c) government business?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): See replies to questions Nos. 29 and 30 answered this day.

"GUIDELINES ON CONFLICT OF INTEREST AND STANDARD OF CONDUCT"

Question No. 1,209—Mr. Beatty:

1. How many departments or agencies have printed material on conflict of interest similar to the booklet published by Statistics Canada entitled "Guidelines on Conflict of Interest and Standard of Conduct"?

2. In each case, on what date was the material printed and what is the government's policy concerning its distribution to employees?

3. In each case, from whom may a copy of the material be obtained?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): P.C. 1973-4065, December 18, 1973, contained guidelines to be observed by public servants concerning conflict of interest situations. Following promulgation of the guidelines, the Treasury Board issued a circular (No. 1973-183) drawing them to the attention of deputy heads and instructing deputy heads to apply the guidelines to their departmental operations. The guidelines were re-issued as part of the Personnel Management Manual in June, 1975. The guidelines may be obtained from the directors of personnel of government departments or from the personnel policy branch of the Treasury Board secretariat.

Order Paper Questions

USE OF GOVERNMENT AIRCRAFT

Question No. 1,214—Mr. Skoreyko:

1. From 1972 to October 31, 1976, what are the names of the Members of Parliament who have travelled on DND aircraft and, in each case, what was the (a) point of departure and destination (b) purpose of the flight?

2. For the same period, what are the names of the family members of Members of Parliament who have travelled on DND aircraft, either with the Member or separately and, in each case, what was the (a) point of departure and destination (b) purpose of the flight?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): See reply to question No. 2,881.

USE OF GOVERNMENT AIRCRAFT

Question No. 1,216—Mr. Cossitt:

With reference to the answer to Question No. 50 which stated in part, that the Minister of Transport made use of DOT aircraft 133 times since April 1973, of the specific trips listed (a) on which ones was the Minister accompanied by other than DOT employees (b) what were the names, addresses and job designations of all such persons and what were the reasons that they were on board?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): See reply to question No. 2,881.

MERCURY—CHLOR-ALKALI PLANTS

Question No. 1,279—Mr. Leggatt:

1. Have any chlor-alkali plants in Canada been out of compliance with chlor-alkali mercury effluent regulations brought into effect in June 1972 and, if so, in each case, on how many days?

2. How many prosecutions have been launched against Canadian chlor-alkali plants for non-compliance with the regulations?

3. What are the (a) companies charged (b) specific violations for which charges were laid (c) results of the prosecutions to date?

Mr. Jim Fleming (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Fisheries and the Environment): 1. Compliance data regarding individual plants are not provided herein, as requested. Plants subject to the Chlor-Alkali Mercury Regulations must submit monthly compliance reports. Information contained in these reports is statutorily compellable, but only for the purpose of enabling the minister and the officials charged with the administration and enforcement of the Fisheries Act and Regulations to determine whether the plant is in compliance with the effluent regulations. It may only be released as required for court proceedings or when the originating chlor-alkali plant consents to its being released. In total, however, from May 1972 through December 1975, there were 972 plant-days of what is considered to be actual non-compliance; 516 plant-days of theoretical non-compliance resulting from small amounts of mercury being discharged during days of no, or very low, production; and 12,820 plant-days of compliance. (Non-compliance results when daily mercury discharges to liquid effluents exceed 0.005 pounds per ton of chlorine produced.) The annual frequency of "actual" violations has been decreasing; during 1975 there were 122. As an additional, general observation, total mercury discharges to liquid effluents from chlor-alkali plants were reduced from an estimated 148,000 pounds per year prior to 1970, to approximately 2,200 pounds from May through December 1972, 900 pounds during 1973 and 1974, and 600 pounds during 1975. Also, for each plant during 1975, the ratio of total mercury discharged (in pounds) to liquid effluents, to total chlorine produced (in tons), was less than 0.005; the overall ratio, averaging those for all plants, was 0.002.

2. Two.

3. (a) Standard Chemicals Ltd. and American Can of Canada Ltd. (b) Charges were laid for the following discharges which are given in pounds of mercury per ton of chlorine produced on the day specified (i) Standard Chemicals Ltd.: 0.030 on September 2, 1972; 0.038 on September 3, 1972; 0.032 on September 4, 1972; 0.027 on September 5, 1972; 0.016 on September 24, 1972; 0.018 on September 25, 1972; 0.120 on September 26, 1972; 0.205 on September 27, 1972; 0.205 on September 28, 1972; 0.219 on September 29, 1972; 0.078 on September 30, 1972; 0.045 on October 1, 1972; 0.048 on October 2, 1972; 0.081 on October 3, 1972; 0.214 on October 4, 1972; 0.099 on October 5, 1972; 0.091 on October 6, 1972; 0.045 on October 7, 1972; 0.154 on October 8, 1972; 0.058 on October 9, 1972. (ii) American Can of Canada Ltd.: 0.013 on August 1, 1975; 0.011 on August 30, 1975; 0.020 on October 24, 1975; 0.066 on October 28, 1975; 0.012 on December 14, 1975; 0.011 on April 26, 1976; 0.031 on May 5, 976; 0.032 on May 14, 1976; 0.014 on May 15, 1976; 0.093 on May 17, 1976; 0.012 on May 31, 1976; 0.143 on June 4, 1976; 0.052 on June 27, 1976; 0.013 on June 30, 1976; 0.010 on July 18, 1976; and 0.012 on July 21, 1976. (c) Standard Chemicals Ltd. pleaded guilty and was fined $3,000; the case involving American Can of Canada Ltd. is currently before the courts.

GOVERNMENT AIRCRAFT

Question No. 1,294—Mr. Cossitt:

1. How many times since he became a member of the Cabinet has the Minister of State for Science and Technology personally made use of government aircraft and, in each case, what was the (a) purpose (b) point of departure and destination (c) type of aircraft (d) cost to the taxpayer?

2. What was the total cost to the taxpayer of all such trips?

3. What was the number of times an aircraft was used to or from the Peterborough area?

4. Does the government own a King Air aircraft and, if so, how many times was it used by the Minister?

5. Which trips were for (a) personal (b) political (c) government business?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): See replies to Questions No. 29 and 30 answered this day.

GOVERNMENT AIRCRAFT

Question No. 1,298—Mr. Cossitt:

1. How many times since he became a member of the Cabinet has the Minister of Labour personally made use of government aircraft and, in each case, what was the (a) purpose (b) point of departure and destination (c) type of aircraft (d) cost to the taxpayer?

2. What was the total cost to the taxpayer of all such trips?

3. Which trips were for (a) personal (b) political (c) government business?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): See replies to questions Nos. 29 and 30 answered this day.

INTRA-PROVINCIAL FERRY SERVICES

Question No. 1,335—Mr. McCain:

1. By province, how many intra-provincial ferries receive federal subsidies and what is the name of each such company?

2. What are the ports of call for each intra-provincial ferry?

3. For each of the past ten years, by province, what was the amount of federal subsidy paid to each intra-provincial ferry?

4. For each of the next ten years, by province, what is the projected amount of subsidy to be given to each intra-provincial ferry?

5. On what basis is a decision made with respect to whether or not an intra-provincial ferry will receive federal assistance and on what basis is the amount determined?

6. Have any alterations been made to the amounts of federal subsidies paid to intra-provincial ferries in each province as a result of inflation in the past ten years and, if so, what (a) was the amount of the alteration for each intra-provincial ferry (b) are the ports of call for each intra-provincial ferry where alteration in subsidy amount was made?

7. Do any intra-provincial ferries which receive federal subsidies also receive supplementary assistance from any provincial authority or from any other source and, if so (a) from what other sources are subsidies paid (b) what are the ports of call for each intra-provincial ferry receiving supplementary assistance (c) what was the amount of subsidy from other sources other than the government for each intra-provincial ferry for each of the past ten years?

8. What is the amount of deficit or profit from each intra-provincial ferry operated by a department or agency of the government?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): The Canadian Transport Commission advises as follows: Ferries under C.T.C. jurisdiction: Newfoundland: Carmanville, Nfld.—Fogo Island, Nfld. Fogo Transport (1973) Limited; Cobb's Arm, Nfld.—Change Islands, Nfld. Chaffey's Shipping Limited; Greenspond, Nfld.—Badger's Quay, Nfld. 4. The terms of the recently developed Federal Government's Water Transportation Assistance Policy have not yet been finalized and, as a result, it is not possible at this time to project, for the next ten years, the amount of subsidy to be given to each intra-provincial ferry service.

5. For the same reason as given in answer to Question No. 4, the first part of this question cannot be answered. The amount of subsidy is calculated as the difference between the estimated operating costs and revenues, as agreed following secrutiny by officials, and making allowance for an appropriate level of management fee/profit.

6. The answer to this question (a) and (b) can be readily seen in the answer given to Question No. 3.

7. Grand Manan, N.B.—Black's Harbour, N.B.; (a) Provincial Government; (b) Grand Manan, N.B.—Black's Harbour, N.B. 8. No intra-provincial ferries are operated by departments or agencies of the Federal government.

INTERPROVINCIAL FERRY SERVICES

Question No. 1,336—Mr. McCain:

1. By province, how many interprovincial ferries receive federal subsidies and what is the name of each such company?

2. What are the ports of call for each interprovincial ferry?

3. For each of the past ten years, by province, what was the amount of federal subsidy paid to each interprovincial ferry?

4. For each of the next ten years, by province, what is the projected amount of subsidy to be given to each interprovincial ferry?

5. On what basis is a decision made with respect to whether or not an interprovincial ferry will receive federal assistance and on what basis is the amount determined?

6. Have any alterations been made to the amounts of federal subsidies paid to interprovincial ferries in each province as a result of inflation in the past ten years and, if so, what (a) was the amount of the alteration for each interprovincial ferry (b) are the ports of call for each interprovincial ferry where alteration in subsidy amount was made?

7. Do any interprovincial ferries which receive federal subsidies also receive supplementary assistance from any provincial authority or from any other source and, if so (a) from what other sources are subsidies paid (b) what are the ports of call for each interprovincial ferry receiving supplementary assistance (c) what was the amount of subsidy from other sources other than the government for each interprovincial ferry for each of the past ten years?

8. What is the amount of deficit or profit from each interprovincial ferry operated by a department or agency of the government?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): Transport Canada advises as follows: 1. No interprovincial ferries are in receipt of subsidies.

2. Prince Edward Island: Borden; Cape Tormentine. Newfoundland: North Sydney; Port aux Basques; Argentia.

3. See No. 1.

4. The terms of the recently developed Federal Government's Water Transportation Assistance Policy have not yet been finalised and, as a result, it is not possible at this time to project, for the next ten years the amount of subsidy, if any, to be given to each interprovincial ferry service.

5. Interprovincial Ferry Services are operated by the Canadian National Railway Company under "Entrustment Order" on behalf of the Government of Canada. These services are a federal responsibility under the Terms of Confederation with Prince Edward Island and the Terms of Union with Newfoundland.

6. See No. 1.

7. Not applicable.

8. The deficits by service for the year ending December 31, 1976 are: Newfoundland Gulf Service, $48,914,611; Prince Edward Island Service, $13,047,315.

INTERNATIONAL FERRY SERVICES

Question No. 1,337—Mr. McCain:

1. By province, how many international ferries receive federal subsidies and what is the name of each such company?

2. What are the ports of call for each international ferry?

3. For each of the past ten years, by province, what was the amount of federal subsidy paid to each international ferry?

4. For each of the next ten years, by province, what is the projected amount of subsidy to be given to each international ferry?

5. On what basis is a decision made with respect to whether or not an international ferry will receive federal assistance and on what basis is the amount determined?

6. Have any alterations been made to the amounts of federal subsidies paid to international ferries in each province as a result of inflation in the past ten years and, if so, what (a) was the amount of the alteration for each international ferry (b) are the ports of call for each international ferry where alteration in subsidy amount was made?

7. Do any international ferries which receive federal subsidies also receive supplementary assistance from any provincial authority or from any other source and, if so (a) from what other sources are subsidies paid (b) what are the ports of call for each international ferry receiving supplementary assistance (c) what was the amount of subsidy from other sources other than the government for each international ferry for each of the past ten years?

8. What is the amount of deficit or profit from each international ferry operated by a department or agency of the government?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): Transport Canada advises as follows: 1. None.

2. Yarmouth—Bar Harbor, Maine. Yarmouth—Portland, Maine. The Yarmouth—Bar Harbor service was a year round service until the fall of 1976 at which time it was terminated and a service from Yarmouth to Portland was inaugurated replacing a foreign carrier who withdrew for the winter months. The Bar Harbor service will recommence May 1, 1977.

3. No subsidies are paid.

4. See answer to part 4, question 1336 answered this day.

5. The Yarmouth services are deficit funded. The decision to operate this service was made in the early 1950's on the basis of developmental prospects for the maritime provinces. A service was operated by an American company in the prewar years but was terminated when the vessels were commandeered for military service and was not reactivated following the war.

6. Not applicable.

7. (a) No (b) N/A (c) N/A.

8. Yarmouth—Bar Harbor ferry service—(deficit): 1967, 426,262; 1968, 260,718; 1969, 381,910; 1970, 472,832; 1971, 586,141; 1972, 572,205; 1973, 774,030; 1974, 1,336,954; 1975, 1,503,220; 1976, 1,415,419—(11 months). Yarmouth to Portland figures are not available at this time for the period operated to December 31, 1976.

THUNDER BIRD LODGE

Question No. 1,394—Mr. Murta:

1. Was an amount of money awarded to the Thunder Bird Lodge of Northern Manitoba and, if so (a) on what date (b) which department awarded the money (c) was it in the form of a grant or a loan?

2. Did Mr. Courchène or his son put up any money for the Lodge?

3. Who is the owner of the Lodge?

4. What was the number of jobs created?

5. What is the relationship of the employees to Mr. Courchène?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Departments of Indian Affairs and Northern Development and Regional Economic Expansion as follows:

1. Yes, as follows:

(c)	(a)		I.E.D.F
Loans	April 1975		$87,439
	May 1975		15,000
	March 1976		98,482
		Total	$200,921
Contributions	May 1975		10,000
	June 1975		4,000
	May 1976		55,000
		Total	$69,000
Grants	March 1976		50,000
		Total	$319,921

(b) The above funding was awarded by the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development under the Indian Economic Development Fund. Yes. The Department of Regional Economic Expansion entered into a contract with Thunderbird Lodge Ltd. under the Canada-Manitoba ARDA Agreement. (a) An offer of financial assistance was made on February 28, 1975 and amended on December 18, 1975 and July 5, 1976 (b) The total amount of the offer from DREE is $148,797.00 (c) The assistance offered is in the form of a grant.

2. Mr. Courchène put in a cash equity of $25,000 plus an approximate additional $15,000 from cut logs and equipment for a total equity of approximately $40,000.

3. The Directors are: David Courchène, Gerald Courchène, Brian Courchène, D. W. Gallager. The Officers are: David Courchène, President, Gerald Courchène, Vice-President, Brian Courchène, Secretary-Treasurer.

4. In the construction phase, there were 20 jobs created. In season, there will be 15-22 jobs created, depending on the number of guests.

GOVERNMENT AIRCRAFT

Question No. 1,409—Mr. Cossitt:

1. How many times since he became a member of the Cabinet has the Minister of Supply and Services personally made use of government aircraft and, in each case, what was the (a) purpose (b) point of departure and destination (c) type of aircraft (d) cost to the taxpayer?

2. What was the total cost to the taxpayer of all such trips?

3. Which trips were for (a) personal (b) political (c) government business?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): See replies to questions Nos. 29 and 30 answered this day.

Order Paper Questions

USE OF GOVERNMENT AIRCRAFT

Question No. 1,412—Mr. Cossitt:

With reference to questions presently on the Order Paper concerning the use of government aircraft by certain Cabinet Ministers, will the government present answers compiled and calculated on the (a) same basis as the answer to Question No. 50 concerning the Minister of Transport's expenses (b) basis of the system outlined by the Minister of Transport in his letter to certain Members of Parliament and, if so, what are the reasons for such a change?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): See reply to question No. 2,881.

USE OF GOVERNMENT AIRCRAFT

Question No. 1,413—Mr. Cossitt:

Do Ministers reply to Order Paper questions in the House in one way and subsequently issue a completely different answer in a confidential letter to members of the government caucus and, if so (a) is this government policy and on what date was it adopted (b) what is the identity of any Cabinet Minister who has done this including the date and subject involved?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): See Beauchesne's Citation 171 (a), (b), (f), (h) and (i).

MATHEW CHARLES LAMB

Question No. 1,451—Mr. Epp:

Was Lance Corporal Mathew Charles Lamb, killed while serving in the security forces of Southern Rhodesia, a Canadian citizen and, if so, was he (a) issued a valid Canadian passport and, if so, on what date and in what location was it issued (b) at any time committed to a mental institution in Canada (c) tried and acquitted of murder by reason of insanity in a Canadian Court?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Departments of External Affairs and the Solicitor General as follows: (a) Mathew Charles Lamb was issued a valid Canadian passport on April 26, 1976, from the Passport Office, Department of External Affairs, Ottawa, Ontario. (b) This information is not within the administrative responsibility to the Government of Canada. As mental institutions come under provincial jurisdiction, it would therefore be necessary to contact all provincial governments. (c) The RCMP cannot confirm a criminal record based on a name check.

INCOME TAX OWING BY CORPORATIONS AND INDIVIDUALS

Question No. 1,479—Mr. Howie:

1. As of January 1, 1976, how many corporations had unpaid income tax owing to the Crown in excess of (a) $1,000,000 (b) $100,000 and, in each case, how much did they owe?

2. On January 1 in each year 1971 to 1977, how many corporations have had unpaid income tax owing to the Crown in excess of $100,000?

3. On January 1 in each year 1971 to 1977, how many individuals have had unpaid income tax owing to the Crown in excess of $10,000?

4. Since January 1, 1971, in how many cases and representing what amounts, have taxes owed to the Crown been written off as uncollectable from (a) corporations (b) individuals?

Hon. Monique Bégin (Minister of National Revenue): 1. and 2. Statistical computations are not available at the dollar levels requested for all years. A system change was introduced in the fiscal year 1974/75 that changed the highest dollar level of reporting from over $100,000 to over $25,000. Also, statistical computations are completed on a fiscal rather than calendar year base; therefore available information is supplied as of a March 31 date for the years in question.

GOVERNMENT AIRCRAFT

Question No. 1,485—Mr. Cossitt:

1. On how many occasions have Department of National Defence and/or Department of Transport aircraft been used by the Government Leader in the Senate and, in each case, what was the (a) purpose (b) point of departure and destination (c) type of aircraft (d) cost to the taxpayer?

2. What was the total cost to the taxpayer of all such trips?

3. Which trips were for (a) personal (b) political (c) government business?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): See replies to questions Nos. 29 and 30 answered this day.

GRANT QUALICON CONCRETE

Question No. 1,492—Mr. Dick:

1. Was a Department of Regional Economic Expansion grant made on January 3, 1974 to Qualicon Concrete of Arnprior, within the specially designated Renfrew-Pembroke area and, if so (a) prior to the grant, how many persons were employed by the company (b) how many persons are presently employed (c) who are the directors of the company (d) who owns the majority of shares in the company?

2. Is there any relationship between Qualicon Concrete and Permacon Limited of Hull, Quebec and, if so, what is the relationship?

[Miss Bégin.]

3. Is Qualicon Ltd. in the process of closing down or has it closed down and, if so (a) what is happening to the equipment (b) has any of the equipment been transferred to Permacon Ltd.?

4. To the knowledge of the government, does Qualicon Ltd. consider Permacon to be a continuing business?

Mr. Ed. Lumley (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): The reply for the Department of Regional Economic Expansion is as follows: 1. Yes, an offer of incentive assistance was made to the company on January 2, 1974. (a) The facility was not operating at the time the grant was made and therefore there were no employees. (b) As the plant is presently closed there are no employees. On March 6, 1975 there were 12 employees. (c) As at June 7, 1974 the directors of the company were J. R. Coone, P. Blaikie and Y. Laurin. (d) Details on the company's corporate ownership are supplied to DREE for evaluation purposes only, based on an understanding with the company that they will be treated as confidential information.

2. The company is related to Permacon Limited through common ownership.

3. The company is not operating at this time. (a) The department is advised that all equipment is on-site. (b) The department has been advised that no equipment has been transferred to Permacon Limited.

4. The government does not know whether Qualicon Limited considers Permacon Limited to be a continuing business. However, to the extent that the offer of incentive assistance to Qualicon is affected, operation of the Permacon facility in Hull, Quebec does not constitute continuance of operation of the Qualicon facility.

PART-TIME AND FULL-TIME EMPLOYEES RECRUITED PRIVATE AGENCIES FOR POST OFFICE

Question No. 1,534—Mr. McKenzie:

1. Has the Post Office Department obtained (a) part-time (b) full-time employees from private employment agencies in (i) British Columbia (ii) Alberta (iii) Saskatchewan (iv) Manitoba (v) Ontario (vi) Quebec (vii) New Brunswick (viii) Nova Scotia (ix) Prince Edward Island (x) Newfoundland and, if so, in each case, how many?

2. Are such employees paid from supplementary estimates and, if not, from what estimates are they paid?

3. By province, what was the (a) average hourly rate paid to employment agencies (b) average hourly rate paid to employees (c) total amount paid by the Department in (i) 1975 (ii) 1976?

Hon. J.-J. Blais (Postmaster General): 1. Yes, the Post Office Department has obtained both part-time and full-time employees from private employment agencies. Permanent employees are not recruited through such agencies. (Full-time means a full working day for the period of hire. Part-time means less than a full day).

LAWYERS RETAINED BY CMHC

Question No. 1,554—Mr. Marshall:

1. What are the names of individual lawyers who are employed by (a) CMHC (b) the Federal Business Development Bank in the Constituency of Humber-St. George's-St. Barbe and how was each selected?

2. How much did each lawyer or law firm receive in fees and expenses each fiscal year 1970-71 to date?

3. Do individuals or corporations who secure financing through (a) CMHC (b) the Federal Business Development Bank have to use law firms determined by the agencies in the legal work associated with the loans in question and, if so, for what reason?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation and the Federal Business Development Branch as follows: 1 and 2. The following lawyers were retained by CMHC to process mortgage documentation for direct loans approved by CMHC in Census Divisions 5 and 9, Newfoundland, between 1970 and 1976: 1970, Corner Brook: Kevin J. Barry; Gordon G. Easton, Q.C. 1971, Corner Brook: Gordon G. Easton, Q.C. 1972, Corner Brook: Gordon G. Easton, Q.C.; Clyde K. Wells. 1973, Corner Brook: Gordon G. Easton, Q.C. Clyde K. Wells. 1974, Corner Brook: Gordon G. Easton, Q.C.; Clyde K. Wells. 1975, Corner Brook: Gordon G. Easton, Q.C.; Clyde K. Wells. 1976, Corner Brook: Gordon G. Easton, Q.C.; Clyde K. Wells. Legal fees in connection with CMHC direct loans are paid by the borrower, and CMHC, therefore, has no record of the amounts paid to these lawyers.

Note: Data on activities under the NHA are compiled by CMHC on the basis of municipalities and Census Divisions in Newfoundland, and not on federal electoral constituencies. Census Divisions 5 and 9 correspond approximately to the constituency of Humber-St. George's-St. Barbe.

For the method of selection of lawyers, see the answer to question 736 (3), Hansard, January 24, 1977, page 2285. The following lawyers were retained by CMHC to handle legal action arising from arrears on direct loans approved in Census Divisions 5 and 9 in Newfoundland: Legal Costs and Fees: 1970-71-72-73-74, nil, nil, nil. 1975-76, Corner Brook, Martin, Easton, Woodridge and Poole, nil. Where actions are settled prior to trial, the costs are paid by the borrower and CMHC has no record of the amounts.

3. See answer to question 716 (3), Hansard, January 25, 1977, page 2350.

1, 2 and 3. The Federal Business Development Bank makes use of the services of lawyers to act for it in the taking of security for loans and to undertake litigation on its behalf. In certain cases the lawyer is selected by the bank, in other cases the lawyer may have been chosen by the borrower. In either event, the legal fees and expenses for security preparation and registration are paid by the borrower rather than by the bank. The selection of lawyers is regarded by the FBDB as a matter of internal administration, the responsibility for which rests with the board of directors, according to the FBDB Act. For this reason, the names of solicitors employed are not made public.

Order Paper Questions

TERMINATION OF AGREEMENTS BY THE GOVERNMENT OF QUEBEC

Question No. 1,649—Mr. Herbert:

1. Has the present Government of Quebec terminated, before its expiration date and without prior discussion or notification, any agreement with the government?

2. Will the government consider terminating that part of its language instruction programme which pays monies to the Government of Quebec for the teaching of English to children attending English language schools?

3. Will the government introduce in the Province of Quebec at an early date, a programme to assist the instruction of the French language to English language students?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Departments of Finance and the Secretary of State as follows: 1. On March 16, the Government of the Province of Quebec terminated the Memorandum of Agreement with the Government of Canada relating to the Anti-Inflation Program pursuant to Section 9 of that Agreement. The Government of Quebec on that date terminated the provincial act respecting anti-inflation measures (Chapter 30 of the Statutes of Quebec, 1975) by Order-in-Council, this being sufficient grounds to cause the Memorandum of Agreement to expire. This action followed a decision of the Government of Quebec, on January 14, 1977, to accept the resignation of the administrator of the provincial anti-inflation administration thereby eliminating the mandatory provisions of this administration. This action unilaterally altered the application of the Memorandum of Agreement between the governments of Canada and Quebec.

2. No.

3. Under the present federal-provincial agreement for Bilingualism in Education, the Federal Government makes financial contributions to all provinces towards the costs of minority official language education and second official language instruction. Under the terms of the agreement signed with the province of Quebec, that province may, at its discretion, use these funds for the teaching of either official language as a second language. Also under this federal-provincial agreement, several projects have been cost-shared by the Quebec and Federal Governments relative to the teaching of either official language as a second language. Other Departments and Agencies are not aware that a formal federal-provincial agreement was terminated.

ILLEGAL STRIKES

Question No. 1,719—Mr. Howie:

1. For the fiscal year 1975-76, how many strikes occurring within the federal jurisdiction were illegal or represented a breach of contract on the part of one of the parties to a collective agreement?

2. As a result of such strikes (a) how many man-days of employment were lost by (i) the strikers (ii) other workers (b) what were the financial damages suffered by the government?

3. In how many of the strikes did the government initiate legal action against the strikers and, in each case, what was the outcome?

Hon. John C. Munro (Minister of Labour): 1. 17 (Strikes occurring during the term of the agreements and presumed illegal).

2. (a)(i) 21,850 man-days lost; (ii) Not known. (b) Not known.

3. None. Includes workers under the Public Service Staff Relations Act and under the Canada Labour Code Part V.

AMOUNT PAID TO GOVERNMENT BY QUEBEC

Question No. 1,743—Mr. Allard:

What was the total amount paid to the government by the Province of Quebec in (a) 1973-74 (b) 1974-75 (c) 1975-76 (d) 1976 to date?

Mr. Bernard Loiselle (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): The only available published information on the subject of amount paid to the federal government by the province of Quebec can be extracted from Statistics Canada's Provincial Economic Accounts, 1961-1974—Experimental Data*. Estimations are on a calendar rather than fiscal year basis and the most recent year for which these figures are available is 1974. In line with the general concepts of national accounting, federal revenues have been allocated to provinces according to where production that can be associated with such revenues takes place. For example, indirect taxes—such as federal sales and excise taxes and customs duties—have been allocated on the basis of where goods subject to tax are deemed to have been produced rather than on the basis of where they were consumed.

*Subject to methodological and data revisions.

REPORT ON REVIEW OF PUBLIC SERVICE EMPLOYMENT ACT

Question No. 1,788—Mr. Herbert:

1. Is it the intention of the President of the Privy Council to refer to a standing or special committee, the public report which is to be prepared by the review body which will examine staffing, appointments and training in the public service?

2. What mechanism is envisaged to request and receive comments and suggestions from individuals and groups who have good reason to be interested in any proposed revisions to the Public Service Employment Act?

3. Has any date been set for the introduction in the House of legislative changes considered necessary as a result of the reports on the review of the Public Service Employment Act?

[Mr. Munro (Hamilton East).]

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): 1. 2. and 3. This question cannot be answered until the report of the review body is received.

USE OF GOVERNMENT AIRCRAFT

Question No. 1,869—Mr. Allard:

Since 1968, how many official trips did the Prime Minister make abroad and, in each case, what was the cost?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): The information requested is not readily available. To provide an accurate reply would entail a lengthy and costly examination of the accounts of the department, which cost in manpower and time would be exorbitant or prohibitive.

USE OF GOVERNMENT AIRCRAFT

Question No. 1,870—Mr. Allard:

Since 1974, how much did each minister spend on each official trip?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): The information requested it not readily available. To provide an accurate reply would entail a lengthy and costly examination of the accounts of every department, which cost in manpower and time would be exorbitant or prohibitive.

POSTAL INSTALLATIONS AT RIVERVIEW, NEW BRUNSWICK

Question No. 1,882—Mr. Jones:

1. Did the then Postmaster General reply "soon" to an oral question in the House on October 7, 1974 about the establishment of postal facilities in Riverview, New Brunswick and, if so, on what date will a postal station be erected in Riverview?

2. What has been the real cause of the delay in the erection of a postal station in Riverview?

Hon. J.-J. Blais (Postmaster General): 1. A new mail-processing plant is to be constructed which will serve the city of Moncton, the town of Riverview and the town of Dieppe. It is to be located in the Dieppe Industrial Park and is scheduled for completion late in 1979. Future plans call for construction of postal station in the Riverview area in 1980. This is subject to change depending on further investigation once the new mail-processing plant in Dieppe becomes operational.

2. As stated above, further investigation of postal facility requirements will be necessary following the introduction of the Dieppe mail-processing plant.

AVENUE ROAD, TORONTO, ONTARIO

Question No. 1,915—Mr. McKinnon:

What is the target date for closing or disposing of 1107 Avenue Road, Toronto, Ontario?

Hon. Barney Danson (Minister of National Defence): The target date for closing is Sept., 1979.

FLAXSEED

Question No. 1,930—Mr. Hnatyshyn:

Is the government aware of reports that a recent research mission to eastern and western Europe found a definite market for Canadian flax because of its high oil and iodine content and, if so (a) is the government prepared to assist western Canadian flax growers ship their flax directly to these European markets (b) is the government considering offering encouragement for greater flax production and use in Canada?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): In so far as the Canadian Wheat Board is concerned: The Government is aware that a recent flaxseed mission to Eastern and Western Europe reported definite market opportunities for Canadian flaxseed. This is not a new development; the European Economic Community has been our primary flaxseed market in recent years. (a) Flaxseed exports are handled by private grain exporting companies who have the necessary facilities to assemble and clean large quantities for export shipment. The Government is prepared to offer normal assistance to flax growers in serving available export markets. (b) The government is not considering incentives to promote flaxseed production and use in Canada. Production in recent years has been adequate to meet domestic and export demand and excess production would depress prices to growers.

THE ESTABLISHMENT OF A BLOOD FRACTIONAL PLANT IN CANADA BY THE RED CROSS

Question No. 1,935—Mr. Clarke:

1. Does the government intend to support plans of the Red Cross to build a fractional plant in Canada?

2. Are blood components donated by Canadians being sold overseas by the CDC controlled Connaught Laboratories of Toronto and, if so (a) which components (b) is there a surplus in Canada at the present time?

3. What is the total value of payments Connaught Laboratories received for blood components sold overseas since the Company began its relationship with the Red Cross and over how many years does this relationship extend?

4. Is any percentage of the payments received given to the Red Cross and, if so, what (a) was it at the beginning of the relationship (b) is it at the present time?

5. Is the CDC under orders to make a profit from its operation of Connaught Laboratories in all areas including negotiations with the Canadian Red Cross?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Departments of Industry, Trade and Commerce, National Health and Welfare and Finance as follows: 1. At the present time Connaught Laboratories is the only Canadian fractionator of blood and undertakes this work in cooperation with the Red Cross. While a Red-Cross-Sponsored feasibility study to determine the cost involved in building its own fractionation plant is being undertaken, no decision by government concerning support for it will be made until this study is completed and a full analysis of the Canadian blood products situation is made, particularly as it relates to Canadian needs, to the activities of the Red Cross, Connaught Laboratories and others involved in the blood biologics field. It is expected to be at least 18 months before any such analysis would be complete.

2 to 5. The CDC operates under a management which was expressly set up in an independent capacity. In these circumstances, it is not considered appropriate to provide details on its internal administration.

DANIEL COATES—EDUCATIONAL EXPENSES

Question No. 1,945—Mr. O'Sullivan:

Has the government or any of its agencies ever paid for educational expenses incurred by Daniel Coates and, if so, in each case (a) what was the amount (b) to whom, or what institution was payment made (c) what was the purpose of any such instruction (d) where and on what date were such expenses incurred (e) under whose prior authorization were the charges incurred (f) under whose authorization were the expenses reimbursed?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Department of Employment and Immigration as follows: Yes (a) $12,660. (b) Algonquin College, Ottawa. (c) French language instruction. (d) Ottawa, July 7, 1975 to January 31, 1976. (e)

Executive Director, Administration (through DSS Contract 65-25001-5-0814 Serial No. OGS5-0051). (f) See part (e). Several other departments, i.e. Consumer and Corporate Affairs, Prime Minister's and Privy Council offices and Urban Affairs, have no information regarding this question.

VANCOUVER OFFICE—REVENUE CANADA (TAXATION)

Question No. 1,955—Mr. Clarke:

1. Has the Department of National Revenue (Taxation) in Vancouver consolidated all of its offices at 1166 West Pender Street?

2. Does the government own the property and, if not (a) what is the name and address of the owner (b) what are the terms of the lease including length, rental, renewal, etc. (c) is the whole building leased to the Department (d) how many square feet are leased (e) were any leasing fees or commissions paid on the leasing transaction and, if so (i) on what basis was the commission calculated (ii) how much was paid (iii) what is the name, address and occupation of the payee?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Departments of National Revenue and Public Works as follows: 1. At the present time the operations of the District Office are located in the Montreal Trust Building, 789 West Pender Street, the Pacific Palisades Building, 747 Bute Street and 1166 West Pender Street. It is expected that the new Processing Centre to be located in Surrey, British Columbia, will enable the operations of the District Office to be consolidated in the one building at 1166 West Pender Street.

2. No. (a) Daon Development Corporation, 1050 West Pender Street, Vancouver, B.C. (b) Five years from December 1, 1975 to November 30, 1980 with one option for three years and one option for a further two years; at rental of $1,348,-898.20 per annum; all services included (gross lease) plus normal escalations for operation and taxes. (c) The whole building is leased to the Department of Public Works with the exception of the Building Service areas. (d) 150,372 sq. ft. rentable area plus 28 covered parking stalls. (e) No; this was a public tender call. (i) (ii) (iii) Not applicable.

CABINET MINISTERS' TRIP TO THE CONSTITUENCY OF MATANE, QUEBEC

Question No. 1,996—Mr. Cossitt:

1. For the fiscal year (a) 1972-73 (b) 1973-74 (c) 1974-75 (d) 1975-76 (e) 1976-77 to the date the answer to this question is prepared, how many Cabinet Ministers have travelled to the Constituency of Matane, Quebec and, in each case, what was the (i) nature and purpose of the trip (ii) date of the trip (iii) name of the Minister (iv) method of transportation used and the total cost (v) name and address of all persons accompanying the Minister and their job designation, if any, with the government (vi) entire cost of the trip including transportation and all expenses incurred by the Minister and any persons accompanying him/her?

2. What has been the total cost to the taxpayer for all the years and items mentioned in Part 1?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): See replies to questions Nos. 29 and 30 answered this day.

BARLEY GRADED AS FEED BARLEY

Question No. 2,008—Mr. Malone:

1. For each of the past eight years, what was the number of bushels of barley graded as "feed barley" and sold by the Canadian Wheat Board as "malting barley"?

2. For the same years, what was the average price for (a) feed barley (b) malting barley?

3. In cases where malting barley sold for a higher amount than feed barley, was the value of the additional price received by the Canadian Wheat Board or the farmer?

1.

Crop Year	Bushels (No. 1 Feed, Selected for Malting, Pot or Pearling)
1970-71	7,449,769.2
1971-72	6,123,064.7

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): See reply to Question No. 2,027 answered this day.

POSTAL DEFICITS

Question No. 2,032—Mr. Herbert:

1. Has the Postmaster General in the US reported that postal revenues have exceeded expenditures in each of the last two quarters?

2. Is it intended to work toward elimination of the government subsidy for postal service in Canada and, if so, by what date is it estimated that revenues will equal expenditures in the Canadian postal system?

[Mr. Malone.]

3. What has been the amount of the loss in the postal system in each of the past ten years?

4. What is the estimated amount of the loss in the current fiscal year and in the next fiscal year?

Hon. J.-J. Blais (Postmaster General): 1. Yes.

2. The objective for the Post Office as published in the main estimates is to provide postal service without incurring subsidization from general taxation. Although this has not been achieved for a number of years, it continues to represent a long term objective. No date can be forecast for an equalization of postal revenues and expenditures.

	Deficit $000's
1966-67	47,764
1967-68	67,191
1968-69	88,187
1969-70	52,948
1970-71	100,592
1971-72	76,993

1974-75	320,939
1975-76	546,202
1976-77	671,582
1977-78	567,622

4. The Blue Book of estimates for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1978 forecast deficits as follows: 1976-77, 671,582; 1977-78, 567,622.

STUDIES RELATING TO CAPITAL GAINS TAX

Question No. 2,044—Mr. Howie:

Have there been studies relating to the upward adjustment of real property where V-day coincided with a demonstrable period of abnormally depressed values in the region?

Mr. Bob Kaplan (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance): It would be extremely difficult to adjust the 1971 values of certain properties to what may be considered by some to be more realistic levels. Any modification to 1971 values would require careful consideration to ensure that all taxpayers are treated similarly. Readjusting valuation day values for one particular type of property would create a dangerous precedent and perhaps a bias by treating such property more favourably than others. Such a change might not be acceptable to a majority of Canadians.

STUDIES RELATING TO CAPITAL GAINS TAX

Question No. 2,045—Mr. Howie:

Have financial studies been done concerning deferral of capital gains on transfer or inheritance of assets of family farm incorporations or partnerships?

Mr. Bob Kaplan (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance): Less than 2 percent of all farms in Canada are held in corporate form. Therefore incorporated farms are a small part of the total family farm picture. In terms of policy, there would have to be clear and compelling reasons to justify special rollover treatment for farm corporations and partnerships, and not for other family businesses or perhaps the whole range of capital properties passing between generations on death. The deferral of capital gains tax on individually-owned farms is a very special exception to the general framework of income tax legislation. It was introduced only for very compelling reasons which stem for the continuing importance of the small family farm to our country and the disruptive effect which this feature of the income tax system could have where the family was not organized to deal with it.

DEMURRAGE PAID FOR GRAIN SHIPS

Question No. 2,053—Mr. Schellenberger:

1. For the crop year (a) 1974-75 (b) 1975-76, what was the total number of grain ships delayed in (a) Vancouver (b) Thunder Bay (c) Prince Rupert?

2. Since August 1, 1975 to date (a) what demurrage was paid for grain ships (b) what was the total number of grain ships delayed in each harbour?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): In so far as the Canadian Wheat Board is concerned: 1. The Canadian Wheat Board has information only on the amount of demurrage claimed and cannot provide statistics on the actual number of ships delayed in Vancouver, Thunder Bay and Prince Rupert, for the crop years 1974-75 and 1975-76.

2. (a) In the period August 1st 1975 to March 15th, 1977, the amount of demurrage paid by the Canadian Wheat Board was $12,606,048.67. (b) The actual number of ships delayed is not available.

MINISTER OF MANPOWER AND IMMIGRATION—PROPOSED VISIT TO LEEDS

Question No. 2,064—Mr. Cossitt:

1. Did the Minister of Manpower and Immigration visit the proposed Constituency of Leeds—Grenville under redistribution this year and, if so (a) on what date (b) for what purpose?

2. Is the Minister aware of press reports attributing to the Minister a statement that the Prime Minister has personally asked him to look after electing a member of the Liberal Party to represent the proposed Constituency of Leeds—Grenville in the next Parliament and, if so (a) on what date did the Prime Minister make such a request (b) what was the purpose of the request?

3. Is it the policy of the government, in certain cases, to assign a Cabinet Minister to direct the Liberal Party election campaign on behalf of the government in a specific constituency presently represented by members of the Progressive Conservative Party and, if so (a) on what date and for what reason did this become a government policy (b) does this constitute a new government policy of extending specific honours to certain constituencies by giving them specific Prime Ministerial attention?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): In so far as the Department of Employment and Immigration and the President of the Privy Council are concerned: 1. Yes—(a) January 26, 1977; (b) To address the founding meeting of the Leeds-Grenville Liberal Association.

2. No—(a) N/A; (b) N/A.

3. See Beauchesne, fourth edition, citation 171 (a), (b), (f), (g), (h), (i) and (dd).

Order Paper Questions

GOVERNMENT AIRCRAFT

Question No. 2,065—Mr. Cossitt:

1. Since the preparation of the answer to Question No. 50, have there been further occasions where the Minister of Transport has used government owned aircraft and, if so (a) what was the (i) point of departure and destination (ii) cost to the taxpayer (iii) purpose of the flight (b) what is the name, address and job designation of all persons who accompanied the Minister?

2. What was the total cost to the taxpayer of all such flights?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): See replies to questions Nos. 29 and 30 answered this day.

AIRCRAFT IN STORAGE AT SASKATOON

Question No. 2,066—Mr. Cossitt:

1. With reference to the answer to Question No. 47, concerning government aircraft in storage at Saskatoon Municipal Airport, has any change occurred in the status of any of the aircraft including, in each case (a) transfer and, if so, to what location (b) sale and, if so, what is the name, address and price involved and all other pertinent details of the sale (c) negotiations or agreements for sale and, if so, with whom, at what address and all other pertinent details?

2. Are any of the hangars presently empty or about to become empty as a result of the disposal of the aircraft?

3. Have any of the hangars been rented or sold and, if so (a) to whom (b) at what address (c) at what price?

4. Is it the intention of the government to open a larger recruiting depot in Saskatoon and, if so, what are the details?

5. Will a larger military presence be established in Saskatoon and, if so, what are the details?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Departments of National Defence, Transport and Supply and Services as follows:

1. Yes. (a) The following aircraft have been transferred:

Type of Aircraft	Quantity	Transferred to
Tracker CP 121 Patrol	3	Dartmouth, N.S.
Tracker CP 121 Patrol	9	Mountain View, Ont.
T33 Jet Trainer	8	Mountain View, Ont.
Dakota CC 129 Transport	2	CFB Winnipeg, Man.
Dakota CC 129 Transport	8	Crown Assets Disposal Corporation
Otter CF 123 Transport	7	Crown Assets Disposal Corporation

(c) All aircraft that have been declared surplus have been sold.

2. Yes. Three buildings are now empty and the fourth building will be empty by the end of October, 1977.

3. The Department of National Defence hangars known as No. 3, 4, 5, and 6 and building No. 86 at Saskatoon Airport will be transferred to the Department of Transport as soon as vacated by the Department of National Defence. Transport Canada intends to declare the hangars surplus to its requirements. Transport Canada is prepared to enter into a 10 year lease with any purchaser of hangar No. 3 after which time the building is to be removed from the site. Hangars Nos. 4 and 5 will also be sold but are required to be removed from the site. Transport Canada is prepared to offer to the purchaser of hangar No. 6, a 5 year lease renewable for three further periods of 5 years each. Building 86 will be used by Transport Canada for operational purposes at the airport.

4. Yes. The staff of the recruiting centre at Saskatoon will be increased slightly as of 1 August, 1977.

5. No.

EXPENSES PAID TO HON. MEMBER FOR ESSEX-WINDSOR

Question No. 2,067—Mr. Cossitt:

What is the total of all expenses paid by the Department of Supply and Services or any other branch of the government, directly or indirectly, for the honourable Member for Essex—Windsor while serving as Minister of Agriculture?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): See reply to Question No. 2,027 answered this day.

EXPENSES PAID TO HON. MEMBER FOR HAMILTON EAST

Question No. 2,068—Mr. Cossitt:

1. What is the total of all expenses paid by the Department of Supply and Services or any other branch of the government, directly or indirectly, for the honourable Member for Hamilton East while (a) Minister of National Health and Welfare (b) Minister of Labour?

2. What is the total of all expenses paid for the Minister while serving in the two portfolios?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): See reply to Question No. 2,027 answered this day.

COST OF RUNNING EACH MAXIMUM SECURITY PRISON

Question No. 2,081—Mr. Howie:

1. What was the cost of running each maximum security prison for (a) 1974 (b) 1975 (c) 1976?

2. For the year 1976, in each such prison (a) how many guards were employed (b) what was the total of guard's salaries and what proportion of the amount was overtime?

Hon. Francis Fox (Solicitor General): 1. (a), (b) and (c) See Annex A.

2. (a) and (b) See Annex B.

*NOTE: The facilities of the Correctional Development Centre (Quebec) were used in 1976, on an interim basis, as a Regional Psychiatric Centre and after the Laval Institution incidents of October as a temporary maximum facility.

While used as a Psychiatric Centre the salary and overtime cost for guards was accounted for by the Regional Psychiatric Centre.

Guards employed since October 1976 had been on loan from the Leclerc Institution (Medium) and the Federal Training Centre (Medium) and their salary and overtime cost was accounted for by their respective institutions.

1977 CANADA POST CALENDAR

Question No. 2,082—Mr. Johnston:

1. What was the cost of printing the 1977 Canada Post Calendar?

2. How many were printed?

3. To whom and by what means are they distributed?

4. What is the justification for this type of advertising for a government service that has a captive market?

Hon. J.-J. Blais (Postmaster General): 1. $112,000.

2. 800,000

3. The calendars were made available to the general public at post office counters. A small number of recipients such as members of parliament, senators and large volume mailers received calendars through the mail.

4. Canada Post's calendar is not a type of advertising. Rather it is a customer service—a mailer's guide that gives postal rates, mailing deadlines, and provides information on codes and standards and proper addressing packaged in a form that is retained and displayed by over 90 per cent of the recipients.

MINISTER'S TRAVEL

Question No. 2,083—Mr. Wise:

1. Did the Minister of Agriculture travel to Columbus, Ohio in the past six months and, if so (a) on what date (b) for what purpose (c) what group, association or organization did the Minister meet with (d) in what manner did the Minister travel?

2. What was the cost of travel for the trip and, how was it paid?

3. What are the names, addresses and responsibilities of all persons accompanying the Minister?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): See replies to Questions No. 29 and 30 answered this day.

TAX STATUS OF CHARITABLE ORGANIZATIONS

Question No. 2,085—Mr. Whiteway:

1. Is it the policy of the government to deny or evoke or threaten to evoke the tax status enjoyed by charitable organizations to those organizations who use receipted funds for the purpose of lobbying or bringing pressure to bear upon the government?

2. Is it the policy of the government to deny or evoke or threaten to evoke the tax status enjoyed by charitable organizations who encourage or direct its members or patrons to write to Members of Parliament for the purpose of lobbying or bringing pressure to bear upon the government?

3. Has the Minister of National Revenue or any member of the Department denied, evoked or threatened to evoke the tax status of a charitable organization to any organization which used its receipted funds or encouraged its membership to oppose either by petition to the government or by writing Members of Parliament for the purpose of lobbying or bringing pressure to bear upon the government with reference to the hunting of baby harp seals?

Hon. Monique Bégin (Minister of National Revenue): 1. and 2. The legal interpretation of charity provided by common law judicial decisions does not recognize lobbying and bringing pressure to bear upon the government, by any means, as a charitable purpose or a charitable activity. However, the presentation of briefs to the government is an accepted activity of a charity. Under the Income Tax Act, a registered charity subjects itself to possible revocation of its registration, and thus its tax exemption, whenever non-charitable activities are undertaken, because it would be failing to comply with the basic requirement that all its activities be charitable. Lobbying and pressure activities do not necessarily result in revocation. Where such activities were a relatively minor part of a charity's activities, the charity was not aware that such activities would prejudice their registered status and the charity agrees not to participate in such activities in future, registration would usually not be revoked.

3. My officials, in applying the provisions of the Income Tax Act, in line with the relevant judicial decisions, have written to one registered charity which involved itself in non-charitable activities with reference to animal welfare. The charity was informed that such activities were contrary to the common law interpretation of charitable activities and that continued involvement in such an activity could result in the loss of its registration number and tax exempt status. Subsequently the charity voluntarily requested revocation and the Department was not obliged to decide upon the imposition of revocation.

LANGEVIN BUILDING—CARPET FOR PRIME MINISTER AND STAFF

Question No. 2,154—Mr. Cossitt:

1. With reference to the answer to Question No. 2, which stated in part that $89,000 was the cost of carpet installed in the Langevin Building with no portion of this applying to the area occupied by the Prime Minister and his staff, is there carpet on the floor in the area occupied by the Prime Minister and his staff and (a) if not, for what reason (b) if so (i) where did it come from (ii) what was the total cost (iii) what was the cost per square yard?

2. Did the Prime Minister and his staff bring their own old carpet from the East Block for reuse or did anyone do it on their behalf and, if so, is this a new policy by the Prime Minister and the government to save money for the taxpayer by implementing restraint in government purchases for the Prime Minister and members of the Cabinet?

Hon. Judd Buchanan (Minister of Public Works): The answer to Question 2 (a) and 2 (b) stated that the total cost of carpeting installed in the Langevin Building was $89,000 which included the carpeting of space occupied by the Prime Minister and his staff. 1 (a), (b)(i), (b)(ii), (b)(iii) and 2 are not applicable.

LANGEVIN BUILDING—AREA OCCUPIED BY PRIME MINISTER AND STAFF

Question No. 2,155—Mr. Cossitt:

With reference to the answer to Question No. 2, which stated in part that $4,336,489.16 was spent on renovations to the Langevin Building, with no portion of this applying to the area occupied by the Prime Minister and his staff (a) is the Prime Minister and his staff occupying a section of the building that was not renovated and, if so, what is the area (b) was a portion of this amount spent on the area occupied by the Prime Minister and his staff and, if so, what was the amount?

Hon. Judd Buchanan (Minister of Public Works): See reply to Question No. 2,154 answered this day.

NUMBER OF INMATES ADMITTED TO INSTITUTIONS IN QUEBEC REGION, 1970-1976

Question No. 2,195—Mr. Hnatyshyn:

1. For the years 1970 to 1976, what was the number of inmates admitted to the Quebec Federal Training Centre?

2. How many had (a) been admitted to a federal institution for the first time (b) at one time been convicted under the Juvenile Delinquents Act?

Order Paper Questions

Hon. Francis Fox (Solicitor General): 1. Normally, all admissions in the Quebec Region have been through the Regional Reception Centre. The population movement data on Annex A illustrates total entries into the above institutions, i.e., admissions from outside and institutional transfers.

2. (a) With reference to inmates admitted to a federal institution with no previous penitentiary incarceration, this information is available on a regional basis only for the years 1975 and 1976. 1975—756; 1976—783; (b) This information is not available from the Inmate Record System, but part of the information requested can be found in Statistics Canada Publication (Catalogue No. 85-207) entitled "Correctional Institution Statistics" under the heading "Previous Commitments by previous institutional history".

Can a Regional Director of the Unemployment Insurance Commission (a) rent (b) lend computer services and personnel to private companies and, if not, are civil servants willing to testify in this regard, bound by an oath of office?

Hon. Bud Cullen (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): (a) and (b) Yes.

GROUND TRANSPORTATION POLICY FOR AIRPORTS

Question No. 2,260—Mr. Mazankowski:

1. Do the regulations respecting ground transportation fees at airports state that "The annual fee for a permit to operate a taxicab or limousine at Toronto International Airport is $875," and, if so, has the Department of Transport collected such moneys or parts thereof and, if not, for what reason?

2. Have any legal questions of a discriminatory basis or otherwise been raised with regard to the collection of such fees and, if so (a) what are the details (b) which group, person or individual made such representation (c) what specific action is being taken or will be taken to respond?

3. Do the government airport concession operations regulations state in part, that any person may pick up or transport passengers in a commercial passenger vehicle from a place outside the airport to a destination at the airport and, if so, does Blue Line Taxi adhere to the regulation at the Ottawa International Airport and, if not, for what reason?

4. Are Gloucester Township taxis, under city regulations, allowed to pick-up a fare in Ottawa and transport the passenger to the Airport and, if so, has Mr. Montgomery, President of Blue Line Taxis Limited, on occasion fined the Carleton Taxi Association members for doing so and is this in contradiction of section 7(1)(a) of the government airport concession operations regulations?

5. Does the license (file no. 5156-464-6 Vol.3) between the Department of Transport and Blue Line Taxis Limited (formerly Red Line Taxis Limited) state at section 5 "that the Licensee shall in all respects abide by and comply with all lawful rules, regulations and by-laws of municipalities and other governing bodies, in any manner affecting the operations conducted by the Licensee hereunder" and, if so, has Blue Line Taxis Limited complied faithfully to this section and, if not, for what reason?

6. Does the Department collect 5 per cent of the gross revenue derived by Blue Line Taxis Limited from the operation of the bus and limousine service to and from Ottawa International Airport and such other special ground transportation services from the Airport, and fifteen cents for each taxicab from the Airport, all as established to the satisfaction of the Minister, payable in monthly installments on or before the fifteenth day of each succeeding month?

Order Paper Questions

7. For each year since Blue Line Taxis has been operating out of the Airport, what is the amount of gross revenue the Department received from the (a) taxicab (b) bus (c) limousine service?

8. With reference to Part 7, is there any cross subsidy among the taxicab, bus and limousine service at the Airport and, if so (a) which modes are being cross subsidized (b) what is the specific amount of the cross subsidy for each year that Blue Line Taxis has been operating?

9. Does Appendix B of the August 1976 Ground Transportation Policy for Airports state "where a bus service operator also provides limousine service the limousine service must be on a self-supporting basis and not subsidized by revenue from the bus operator" and, if so (a) is the (i) limousine service (ii) bus service at Ottawa International Airport on a self-supporting basis (b) does the bus service at Ottawa International Airport subsidize the limousine service and, if so, to what extent?

10. What is the last date that public tenders were called on the taxi, bus and limousine service at Ottawa International Airport?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): 1. The airport ground transportation regulations state that the annual fee for a permit to operate a taxicab or limousine at Toronto International Airport is $875. The regulations were promulgated to stipulate this fee in anticipation of the proclamation of Toronto International Airport as a designated airport pursuant to section 4 of the Airport Concession Operations Regulations. No moneys have been collected since the airport has not yet been designated and the $875 fee is therefore not applicable. The implementation of the designation system is still under consideration.

2. No legal questions of any nature have been raised with the Department of Transport by any person or group regarding the collection of such fees.

3. The Government Airport Concession Operations Regulations state, in part, that any person may pick up or transport passengers in a commercial passenger vehicle from a place outside the airport to a destination at the airport. Blue Line Taxi adheres to this regulation at the Ottawa International Airport, and is accorded the right to pick up passengers at the airport for carrying off the airport pursuant to the terms of its agreement with the Department of Transport.

4. Any taxi operating in a municipality in a manner that is in accord with the regulations of that municipality and such other municipalities as it operates in can transport a passenger to the airport and not be in conflict with Section 7(1)(a) of the Government Airport Concession Operations Regulations. The Department does not have privity of contract with any arrangements Blue Line Taxi Limited may have with the Carleton Taxi Association members.

5. Yes, Blue Line Taxi Limited complies fully with Section 5 of its Licence as far as the Department is aware.

6. Yes, Blue Line Taxi Limited pays the fees as is stated.

7. The amount of gross revenue paid by Blue Line Taxi Limited or any other concession operator is confidential to the parties involved, unless the licence between Blue Line Taxi Limited and the Department does not contain such a provision.

8. The financial statements filed by Blue Line Taxi Limited in accordance with the terms of its licence do not indicate any cross subsidization among the taxicab, bus and limousine service.

9. While Blue Line Taxi Limited has the right to do so, it has not operated a limousine service for a number of years. The bus service is on a self-supporting basis.

10. While public tenders are called at regular intervals at Transport Canada airports in respect to most concession activities in order to provide prospective concessionaires with the opportunity to bid on airport concessions and to permit Transport Canada to optimize its revenues, the optimization of revenues is however a secondary consideration when choosing a ground transportation operator. The Department's policy is to invite proposals from the ground transportation industry to respond to specific ground transportation service requirements. The successful operator is chosen by a committee comprised of Transport Canada representatives and representatives of the airlines serving the airport. The company judged to be the most capable of providing the level of service specified in the invitation is selected. Red Line Taxi Limited acquired the ground transportation concession in accordance with this general policy at a time when no other company was capable of providing the service. Blue Line Taxi Limited subsequently acquired the interests of Red Line Taxi and in so doing acquired the airport transportation licence. Proposals have not been invited from the industry as it is considered that Blue Line Taxi is providing an adequate level of service.

SPORT AND RECREATION FACILITIES FOR SENIOR CITIZENS

Question No. 2,270—Mr. Patterson:

1. For the 1975-76 fiscal year, what was the cost to taxpayers of construction, maintenance and repairs to federal penal institutions?

2. For the same year, what was the average cost to the taxpayer for maintaining one inmate in an institution?

3. For the same year, what was the total cost to the taxpayer for maintenance of all inmates in institutions?

4. For the same year, what was the total cost to the taxpayer for (a) education of inmates (b) sport and recreation facilities in institutions?

5. For the same year, what was the total cost to the taxpayer for sport and recreation facilities for senior citizens?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Canadian Penitentiary Service and Health and Welfare Canada as follows:

1. Cost of construction: $23,173,654. Repair and upkeep: $2,242,089.

2. $17,438.

3. $150,374,365.

4. (a) $1,292,248. (b) $303,334.

5. An amount of $11,338,188 was spent in 1975-76 for projects funded by the New Horizons Program. These funds were used to enable senior citizens to participate in a wide variety of meaningful activities of their own choice. New Horizons does not fund capital construction, however, some part of project grants may be used for minor renovations to existing activity centres.

[Mr. Lang.]

ORDER PAPER QUESTION

Question No. 2,277—Mr. Cossitt:

Was Question No. 41 placed on the Order Paper on October 12, 1976 and previously placed on the Order Paper in the 1st Session of the 30th Parliament on May 11, 1976 forwarded by the Privy Council Office to the department for answer and, if so (a) on what date (b) what persons forwarded it (c) who received it (d) who was assigned and what was his/her job designation to answer the question and on what date (e) is the answer ready and (i) if so, for how long and for what reason has it not been forthcoming (ii) if not, for what reason?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): The government takes responsibility for the answers it provides to questions and for the process involved in replying to such questions. It is not appropriate therefore to provide information about internal administrative arrangements.

PORT OF HALIFAX—ECONOMIC IMPACT STUDY

Question No. 2,298—Mr. Forrestall:

1. Will the government table the final copy of the Task Force Report on the requirements for a second container terminal at the Port of Halifax?

2. (a) Will the government table the economic impact study undertaken for the Port of Halifax and financed partly by the National Harbours Board (b) what consulting company undertook the study (c) on what date was it completed (d) what was the total cost of the study?

3. On what date was a copy made available to (a) NHB Halifax staff (b) staff of the Halifax Dartmouth Port Commission (c) the Halifax Port Authority?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): The National Harbours Board advises as follows: 1. A Task Force on the requirements for a second container terminal at the Port of Halifax was a co-operative venture between the National Harbours Board and the Province of Nova Scotia. Although the complete report contains certain confidential data, the co-chairmen of the task force have agreed to release an executive summary of the report.

2. (a) Distribution of a study of the Economic Evaluation of the Halifax Containerport Expansion Project commissioned by the Province of Nova Scotia or any related information would require consent of the Province. (b) Same as 2(a). (c) Same as 2(a).

3. (a) As party to the Task Force, a copy of the report referred to in 2(a) above was provided to the National Harbours Board. Further distribution would have been made by the Province of Nova Scotia. (b) Same as 3(a). (c) Same as 3(a).

TELECOMMUNICATIONS

Question No. 2,304—Mr. O'Sullivan:

1. With reference to the answer to Question No. 1,943 which stated in part that the total costs of charges on other than local communications in the Department of Manpower and Immigration included in the Estimates for 1975-76 was $2,307,052, of this stated cost, how is the amount divided between (a) communications within Canada (b) overseas communications and, in each case (i) what communications methods were used (ii) what were the percentage costs of each method (iii) what amount and percentage of these costs was paid to communications companies other than Canadian?

2. With reference to the answer to Question No. 1,943 which stated in part that the total estimated costs of charges on other than local communications in the Department of Manpower and Immigration included in the Estimates for 1976-77 is $2,092,197, of this stated cost, how is the amount divided between (a) communications within Canada (b) overseas communications and, in each case (i) what are the anticipated modes of communication (ii) what are the estimated percentage costs of each method (iii) what is the estimated amount and percentage of these costs to be paid to communications companies other than Canadian?

Hon. Bud Cullen (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): 1. (a) and (b) Our departmental records do not differentiate between communications within Canada and Overseas communication. (i) Long distance—telegrams—cables; (ii) Long distance—$2,277,051—98.7 per cent; Telegrams—cables—$30,001—1.3 per cent; (iii) Nil.

2. (a) and (b) Our departmental records do not differentiate between communications within Canada and Overseas communication. (i) Long distance—telegrams—cables; (ii) Long distance—$2,070,883—99 per cent; Telegrams—cables—$21,314—1 per cent; (iii) Nil.

LUBRICATING OILS REPROCESSING

Question No. 2,314—Mr. O'Sullivan:

1. Was it government policy during wartime (1939 to 1945) to encourage the re-use, after a degree of reprocessing and purification, of automotive lubricating oils as fuels for home heating in an attempt to conserve scarce fossil fuel reserves?

2. Is the government (a) aware of (b) currently commissioning studies into the efficacy of this type of policy and, if so (i) on what date were such studies instituted (ii) have they been completed and, if not, on what date are they expected to be completed?

3. What have been the findings and recommendations of the studies?

4. Has official notice been taken of the studies, their findings and recommendations and, if so, in what form?

5. Has any action been taken on the recommendations and, if so, what specific action?

6. Will the studies be Tabled in the House of Commons or referred to a committee of the House and, if so, on what date?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Departments of Energy, Mines and Resources and Fisheries and the Environment as follows: 1. During the 1939 to 1945 war, the reprocessing of used lubricating oil for re-use as lubricating oils was Canadian government policy, but not for use as home heating fuels.

2. Studies of the reprocessing of automotive lubricating oil for re-use were initiated in 73. Much of the work has been completed but it still being evaluated by EMR and Environment Canada. The latter department published two reports in June 1975 entitled "Experimental burning of waste oil as a fuel in cement manufacture" as well as "A preliminary review of used lubricant oils in Canada".

3. It was found that the reprocessing of lubricating oils was feasible but in many cases had to be done by processes which were liable to cause pollution. It was recommended by Environment Canada that an optimum use of the reclaimed lubricating oil would be for use as a fuel in cement manufacture. In this use it would replace heavy fuel oil or other fuels and would not result in environmental pollution. Reclamation for use as lubricating oil was also recommended provided that proper environmental precautions were taken by the reprocessor. Several Canadian companies are presently reprocessing oil in this manner. Since a shortage of new lubricating oil is not envisaged, it was found that there is no specific incentive to reprocess the used lubricating oil to make new lubricating oil, provided that the used oil was used in some way to conserve energy. A major problem was the difficulty of collecting the used lubricating oil from many dispersed points. The use of reprocessed lubricating oil as home heating fuel was not recommended due to environmental hazards and to the fact that reprocessing for this purpose would be completely uneconomic.

4. Official notice has been taken of the studies by way of publication and wide dissemination of the results and recommendations in the Department of Fisheries and the Environment technical information series.

5. Tests have been run on cement manufacture using reclaimed lubricating oil and have been found successful. These result have been passed on to the cement industry which has been encouraged to use reclaimed oil in this manner. Further work is being planned by the Department of Fisheries and Environment in cooperation with industry and the provinces to encourage the establishment of systems for the collection and use of waste oil.

6. The reports mentioned in part 2 are available on request.

CUBAN USE OF CANADIAN AIRSPACE

Question No. 2,316—Mr. Coates:

1. Since January 1, 1975, have Cuban aircraft, other than those using airspace for commercial purposes into either Dorval, Mirabel or Toronto, used Canadian airspace and, if so (a) on how many occasions (b) in each case (i) what airport or airports were used (ii) were the planes commercial or military (iii) what was the origin and destination (iv) was prior approval sought and secured from the government by the Cuban Government (v) was approval granted and, if so, by what agency of the government (vi) what are the specific dates?

2. In each case (a) were government officials from the Departments of National Revenue and Manpower and Immigration or the Canadian Armed Forces used to check out the aircraft (b) is information available to the government that each met all national and international regulations associated with such landings and (i) if so, who has this information at this time (ii) if not, for what reason?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Departments of External Affairs, Transport, National Revenue, Employment and Immigration and National Defence as follows: 1. Since January 1, 1975, two Cuban aircraft, other than those using airspace for commercial purposes into either Dorval, Mirabel or Toronto, have used Canadian airspace. (a) Two flights, although technically classed as commercial and approved by the Air Transport Committee, were more of state or diplomatic nature. (b) (i) Ottawa, September 23/September 28/75—State visit Vancouver, May 30/June 13/76 Cuban Committee on Human Settlements—("Habitat" Conference in Vancouver) (ii) Civil commercial aircraft of "Cubana". (iii) Havana—Ottawa—Havana—(State Visit) Havana—Vancouver—Havana—Habitat Conference. (iv) Yes. (v) External affairs, in consultation with Canadian Transport Commission, Department of National Defence and Transport Canada. (vi) September 23 return September 28, 1975 (Ottawa) May 30 return June 13, 1976 (Vancouver).

2. (a) National Defence: No; National Revenue: Yes; Employment and Immigration: Yes. As a rule, the Immigration Division does not check aircraft. It is done by customs. If passengers need to be examined for immigration purposes, they are directed to an immigration officer. Since January 1975, two flights from Cuba, both of a state or diplomatic nature arrived in Canada. Immigration officials examined 43 passengers who arrived from Cuba on September 23, 1975 in Ottawa on a state visit and also examined 31 passengers who arrived from Cuba on May 30, 1976 in Vancouver for the "Habitat Conference". (b) Yes. (i) This information is on file at Gander and Halifax International airports. (ii) N/A.

PREPARATION OF POST OFFICE REPORTS

Question No. 2,339—Mr. Dinsdale:

1. With reference to the answer to Question No. 1,301, who prepared the report under (a) Item 1—Organization (b) Item 2—Environmental Forecast (c) Item 3—Management Practices (d) Item 5—Management Information Systems (e) Item 6—Summary Report (Blueprint for change) and, in each case, what was the cost?

2. What was the cost of the report under Item 13—Presorting mail, Sortation and Distribution?

3. For what reasons were reports involving Hay Associates Limited of Toronto in 1975 not included in the answer?

Hon. J.-J. Blais (Postmaster General): 1. (a), (b), (c), (d) and (e). The individual reports as mentioned were prepared by Kates, Peat, Marwick & Co. Cost for each study is not available. The total cost as mentioned in question 1,301 for the six reports was $258,627.

2. Cost of report under item 13 not available. The total cost as mentioned in question 1,301 for reports under items 12 and 13 was $35,051.

3. In the context of my speech, I was referring only to the 15 reports mentioned in the reply to question 1,301.

GOVERNMENT AIRCRAFT

Question No. 2,346—Mr. Cossitt:

1. (a) What was the entire cost to the taxpayer of Prime Minister Trudeau's Easter visit to the Western United States including all costs of any persons accompanying him at any time (b) was the sole official purpose of the visit to make a speech at a university in the San Francisco area?

2. What is a full description of any government-owned aircraft used at any time including the entire cost, number of flying hours and the cost per hour of flying time and waiting time, dates and times of all points of departure and arrival including any aircraft flying to or from Canada with the names and job designations of any persons on board whether or not the Prime Minister was on board?

3. What are the names and job designations of government personnel who accompanied the Prime Minister at any time during the visit?

4. What was the total cost of accommodation and food paid by the taxpayer for the Prime Minister and any persons at any time accompanying him, including aircraft crews?

[Mr. Goodale.]

5. What was the entire cost of accommodation, food, etc. paid by the taxpayer on behalf of the Prime Minister and what is a breakdown of this total showing locations, to whom the money was paid, etc.?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): See replies to Questions Nos. 29 and 30 answered this day.

COST OF MAINTENANCE DREDGING

Question No. 2,356—Mr. Forrestall:

1. What was the cost of maintenance dredging at the Port of (a) Montreal (b) Trois Rivières (c) Quebec for the year (i) 1970 (ii) 1971 (iii) 1972 (iv) 1973 (v) 1974 (vi) 1975 (vii) 1976 and, in each case, what department or agency paid for such dredging?

2. For the year 1976, what amount was spent on dredging at (a) Cap Santé (b) Cap à la Roche (c) Cap Charles (d) Curve No. 1 (e) the Yamachiche bend in the St. Lawrence River and, in each case, what department or agency paid for such dredging?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): The National Harbours Boards advises as follows: 1. (a) Montreal: (i) 1970—$241,676; (ii) 1971—$263,675; (iii) 1972—$297,006; (iv) 1973—$374,247; (v) 1974—$423,091; (vi) 1975—$510,-912; (vii) 1976—$522,552. O CANADA KIT

Question No. 2,368—Mr. Diefenbaker:

1. How many copies of the Oh! "Canada" kit and the accompanying cassettes and posters have been issued by or for the Commissioner of Official Languages for distribution in schools?

2. What is the total cost?

3. How many have been distributed (a) in Quebec schools (b) elsewhere in Canada, by province?

4. Are they no longer being distributed in Quebec and, if so, for what reason?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): The Commissioner of Official Languages reports directly to parliament and not through minister. Questions can be put directly to him.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE COMMISSION—INQUIRY INTO THE USE MADE OF A FUND IN THE QUEBEC REGION

Question No. 2,389—Mr. Fortin

1. When Mr. Gabriel Béland was Director General of the Unemployment Insurance Commission for the Quebec Region, was a Commission set up to discover what use was made of a fund constituted by the sale of waste paper, particularly for the year 1973 and, if so, what were the findings of the Commission?

2. What the Commission set up following a complaint made by the union that this fund was not being used to ensure the welfare of the workers as was intended?

3. In 1974, did one of Mr. Béland's colleagues sell bay windows, which were delivered by UIC employees to individuals, namely to one reporter from La Presse and another from The Gazette, among others, whose cheques were made out in his name and, if so (a) how many (b) how many windows were sold for $25.00 each (c) was there an enquiry and (i) if so, what were the findings (ii) if not, for what reason?

4. During the fiscal year 1974-75, the last year under Mr. Béland's direction, was $3 million missing and, if so (a) is that a common occurrence at the UIC (b) what became of (i) Mr. Béland and what is his current salary (ii) the comptroller, Mr. Al Belliveau, who was also responsible for drafting the finacial statement in question?

Hon. Bud Cullen (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): 1. Yes, an administrative inquiry was held in 1973 upon the decision of the Director General, Gabriel Béland, who had been appointed to that position at the end of 1972. The findings of the inquiry were basically as follows: For some years it had been a practice at the UIC regional office to collect waste paper and sell it to a buyer or buyers for recyling purposes. The revenue from these sales constituted a fund known as the employees social fund, administered by volunteer officers. The fund was used for the benefit of all employees at the regional office, for activities of social, sporting, recreational or charitable nature. The practice, though applied in good faith for commendable ends, was open to misinterpretation. It was therefore advisable to put an end to it, and Director General Béland did so on December 21, 1973.

2. No.

3. Not in 1974. However, on October 1, 1973, Mr. Béland, Director General of the UIC, was informed by two people who identified themselves as journalists that the same day a UIC employee had sold them used windows left over after recent renovations to the UIC regional office building, for the sum of $25 each. They had picked up the windows at the building's service entrance. (a) About thirty-five. (b) Unknown. (c) Yes. Director General Béland immediately set up an administrative inquiry on October 1, 1973. (i) The inquiry's findings were basically as follows:—The Canada Department of Public Works, owner of the building occupied by the UIC regional office at 1441 St-Urbain, Montreal, had ordered renovation work on the building during the summer of 1973, consisting mainly in replacing windows.—The contract, which had been given to a contracting firm, stipulated that the removed or replaced windows became the property of that firm, which could dispose of them as it saw fit.—A UIC employee, without the Director General's permission and without informing him, had authorized the contractor to store about fifty of the old windows temporarily in the basement of the building.—This employee was authorized by the contractor to sell the windows to prospective buyers and to collect the money for the contractor.—This employee did in fact sell various people about thirty-five used windows for $20 to $25 each, including two which were sold on October 1, 1973 to unidentified persons for $25 each, paid directly to this employee, partly in legal Canadian tender, partly in the form of a Royal Bank of Canada money order in his name.—The buyers themselves picked up the windows at the building's service entrance, and no outside delivery was made by UIC employees.—To prevent any minsunderstanding as to the employee's actions, it was advisable to put an end to this situation and to have the fifteen or so remaining windows removed from the basement; an order to that effect was made on October 2, 1973 by Director General Béland and was carried out the same day. (ii) Not applicable.

4. No. (a) Not applicable. (b) Not applicable.

NATIONAL HARBOURS BOARD PORT AND GRAIN HANDLING FACILITIES AT CHURCHILL

Question No. 2,394—Mr. Benjamin:

1. (a) On April 20, 1977, what were the cumulative improvements made to the National Harbours Board port and grain handling elevator at Churchill, Manitoba (b) at what cost was each such improvement (c) what was the completion date in each case?

2. If such improvements are ongoing in nature, what will be the total cost and completion date in each case?

3. (a) On April 20, 1977, what was the cumulative extent of changeover at the National Harbours Board elevator at Churchill to upgrade the grain handling facilities to handle hopper cars (b) what was the total cost of any such changeover project to date?

4. If not initiated by April 20, 1977, on what date can it be expected that the project will be (a) commenced (b) completed and at what cost?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): The National Harbours Board advises as follows: 1.

(a)	(b)	(c)
Wharf rehabilitation	$213,000	1975
Dredge repairs	422,000	1974
New staff quarters	619,000	1975
Tug modifications and servicing	398,000	1976
Model studies	72,000	1975
Dredging	$1,771,000	Program ongoing
Miscellaneous small projects	191,000	Various times

2. It is estimated that the dredging will be completed in the fall of 1978 or 1979 at a further cost of $5,900,000.

3. (a) Nil. (b) Not applicable.

4. (a) Subject to obtaining necessary Treasury Board approval of the expenditure the project will commence in sufficient time to allow work to be completed when the rail track is upgraded by C.N. permitting access of hopper cars to Churchill. (b) Construction times vary according to the time of year but could be completed in no less than four months from start at an estimated cost of $825,000.

Order Paper Questions

MAKING PUBLIC MEMORANDUM OF UNDERSTANDING GRAIN HANDLING BETWEEN CANADIAN NATIONAL AND CANADIAN PACIFIC

Question No. 2,401—Mr. Hnatyshyn:

Will the government make public the memorandum of understanding concerning the sharing of grain handling between CPR and CNR, signed August 19, 1976 and, if not, for what reason?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): The agreement in question is one which has been made between two companies operating in the commercial area, Canadian National Railways and Canadian Pacific Limited. The contents of such private documents are not normally disclosed by Government.

WORKERS EXPOSED TO GRAIN DUST

Question No. 2,404—Mr. Hnatyshyn:

Is the government aware of reports that the Gage Research Institute study shows that respiratory problems may occur in up to 75 percent of workers exposed to grain dust and, if so, is the government giving consideration to assisting in the financing of the five year study which the Institute will begin in May 1977?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): In so far as Agriculture Canada is concerned: The Department is aware that the Gage Research Institute has released results of a study and that the Institute plans to conduct further studies relating to workers exposed to grain dust. This department is not considering the question of financial assistance.

In so far as Labour Canada is concerned: Labour Canada is participating in the Gage Institute research project by undertaking the environmental monitoring part of the study.

In so far as the Department of National Health and Welfare is concerned: The Department of National Health and Welfare is aware of a study of 68 grain elevator agents in Southern Manitoba, of whom 75 per cent were found to have respiratory symptoms. The Gage Institute has applied to the National Health Research and Development Program for financial support of a study of grain handlers and this application is being reviewed. In addition, the Department has cooperated with the Department of Labour in providing advice to the Gage Institute and has pledged technical assistance in furthering their study through the loan of technical equipment.

In so far as the Medical Research Council is concerned: Although the Medical Research Council provides significant support for a number of investigators working in the Gage Research Institute, the Council has received no applications from them for funds for research specifically related to respiratory problems of those exposed to grain dust.

PILOT BASES

Question No. 2,405—Mr. Forrestall:

1. Where are Air Canada's pilot bases located in Canada and how many pilots are assigned to each base?

2. Is the government aware of any studies which have been done, either in the United States or Canada, to determine the optimal and most economical number of pilots assigned to a base and, if so, what is the most economical number?

3. Has Air Canada considered making (a) Halifax-Dartmouth (b) Calgary (c) Edmonton as pilot bases and, if not, for what reason?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): The management of Air Canada advises as follows: 1. Total pilots and supervisory pilots: Montreal 566; Toronto 728; Winnipeg 126; Vancouver 148.

Transport Canada advises as follows: 2. The government is not aware of any studies which have been done, either in the United States or Canada, to determine the optimal and most economical number of pilots assigned to a base.

The management of Air Canada advises as follows: 3. (a) Yes. (b) Yes. (c) No. Because with relatively low flight frequencies it has not been economically feasible to domicile pilots at Edmonton.

Order Paper Questions

UIC—COMPUTER RENTAL

Question No. 2,460—Mr. Fortin:

1. During the time that Mr. Gabriel Béland was General Director of the Unemployment Insurance Commission for the Quebec Region, Mr. Robert Kingsley was Director of the Regional Payments Centre and Mr. Dorval Mainville was in charge of the computer, was the Unemployment Insurance Commission computer rented to a private company and, if so (a) for what amount (b) to whom (c) on what dates?

2. Did they obtain the employees' complicity and, if so, in what way?

3. What was the cost in employees' wages to the Unemployment Insurance Commission in (a) straight time (b) double time?

Hon. Bud Cullen (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): The matter has been referred to the RCMP for investigation. Upon completion of the investigation the question will be answered.

AIR CANADA CARGO FLOWN TO FREDERICTON

Question No. 2,462—Mr. Howie:

1. On (a) April 20 (b) April 27, 1977, what was the total weight of cargo flown by Air Canada to Fredericton, New Brunswick directly from (i) Montreal (ii) Quebec City (iii) Toronto?

2. How many pieces of cargo were on each flight and what formula was used by Air Canada to determine the amount of cargo?

Mr. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): The management of Air Canada advises as follows: 1. (a)(i) 3,148 pounds; (b)(i) 1,242 pounds; (a)(ii) 8 pounds; (b)(ii) 10 pounds; (a)(iii) 965 pounds; (b)(iii) 499 pounds.

2. To Fredericton

	April 20, 1977	April 27, 1977
From Montreal:	AC 640—93 pieces AC 660—6 pieces AC 674—19 pieces	AC 660—55 pieces AC 674—10 pieces
From Quebec:	AC 674—1 piece	AC 674—1 piece
From Toronto:	AC 642—31 pieces	AC 642—22 pieces

Following is the formula used to establish an aircraft's uplift capability for cargo:

1. Establish the maximum take-off weight.

2. Subtract the minimum fuel, aircraft weight, passengers and baggage.

3. Having carried out the above transactions, the weight space available for cargo is established.

4. It is at this point and time that priority of load enters the picture, eg., Air Mail takes priority over express and express over air-freight.

PRACTICE OF GRANTING OF KNIGHTHOODS AND PEERAGES DURING THIS CENTURY

Question No. 2,475—Mr. Jones:

1. How many Canadians have received knighthoods and peerages during this century and, in each case, who received such honours and on what date?

2. Was the practice of granting knighthoods and peerages abolished and, if so, on what date?

3. Does the government intend to revert to this practice and, if not, for what reason?

Hon. John Roberts (Secretary of State): 1. Comprehensive records have not been kept concerning the number of Canadians which have received knighthoods and peerages during this century.

2. The practice of granting knighthoods and peerages to Canadians was abolished in 1919 when the House of Commons adopted the Nickel resolution requesting King George V to cease the practice of conferring upon Canadians honours to which titles were attached. This policy has been adhered to by successive government since 1919, with the exception of the Bennett administration, which recommended 17 Canadians for knighthoods during 1934 and 1935.

3. No. The government does not intend to revert to the practice of conferring knighthoods and peerages because to do so would not be in accord with long-standing custom and policy.

TRAVEL—TRANSPORTATION FOR MINISTER OF STATE FOR FITNESS AND AMATEUR SPORT

Question No. 2,538—Mr. McKinnon:

1. Was a government Falcon aircraft despatched to Europe for the main purpose of supplying transportation for the Minister of State for Fitness and Amateur Sport from April 20 to May 11, 1977?

2. What was the total cost to the public of Falcon flight 3013, which left Canada, Uplands Airport on April 20 until the time when the Minister finished using the plane and returned to Canada?

3. What were all the flights and the destinations of and passengers carried on Falcon number 503, between the period April 20 and May 11, 1977?

Hon. Barney Danson (Minister of National Defence): 1. Yes.

2. See reply to Question No. 2,881.

3. See Annex A.

UIC—MRS. ROBERT KINGSLEY

Question No. 2,539—Mr. Cossitt:

1. Was Mrs. Robert Kingsley called in for an interview by the Unemployment Insurance Commission and, if so (a) did the interview take place in Rockland, Ontario and, if not, in what location did it take place (b) on what date and at what time (c) which of the following benefit control officers from the Ottawa office of the UIC were present or conducting the interview (i) Mr. Jim Miles (ii) Mr. André Ethier (iii) Mr. Paul Labelle (iv) Mr. Jim MacDonald (v) Mr. Claude Charron (vi) Mr. Stan Wells (vii) Mr. Jim Harkness (viii) Mr. Brent Scarfe (ix) Mr. Archie Gauthier (x) Mr. Jim Bristol (xi) Mr. John Newfeld (d) was the purpose of the interview to interrogate Mrs. Kingsley on the question of her drawing UIC benefits while supposedly available for work whereas in actual fact she was in the United States on a vacation?

2. Was Mrs. Kingsley accompanied at any time during the interview by her husband, Mr. Robert Kingsley, presently Canada Manpower Regional Manager of Operations working out of Ottawa and, if so (a) did Mr. Kingsley state to the UIC personnel present: "Do you know who I am?" (b) is Mr. Kingsley the same person formerly employed by the UIC as Manager of its Ottawa office, Regional Manager of the UIC Pay Centre in Montreal, etc.?

3. Did Mr. Kingsley in any way attempt to use influence in regard to the manner in which UIC personnel dealt with his wife and, if so, what is being done about this matter?

Hon. Bud Cullen (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): 1. Mrs. Kingsley was directed to attend a routine interview as a result of normal computer selection process and her claim was found in order. (a) Yes; (b) February 28, 1977 at 11:30 a.m.; (c) None; (d) No.

2. Yes; (a) Yes; (b) yes.

3. The investigation is continuing and therefore the commission is not in a position to provide information at this time.

WASTE CYCLING

Question No. 2,542—Mr. Clarke:

1. Has the government taken any measurements to implement the recommendation of the Gamma report that an externality tax be levied against industries as a means of controlling pollution?

2. Has the government taken any action to encourage communities to develop their own waste system and, if so, in what manner?

3. Has the government provided any incentives to reduce waste at the production level or has the government taken any measures to promote production of goods that create minimum environmental problems?

4. Has the government considered increasing the number of subsidies to recycle companies?

5. Is the government presently providing any research and development grants to recycling industries and, if so (a) to whom (b) in what amounts?

6. Do the same tax advantages exist for recycling industries as those which exist for industries classified as engaged in a manufacturing, mining or processing function and (a) if so, what are they (b) if not, what differences exist?

7. Are freight rates applied to virgin materials less than those applied to recycled materials and, if so, for what reason?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Departments of Finance, Fisheries and the Environment, Industry, Trade and Commerce, National Revenue and Transport as follows: 1. An externality tax would impose a levy on the output of pollution. In order to be effective and equitable, such a tax would have to be graduated according to the harm done by various pollutants, which varies by type, quantity, geographical location, and presence or absence of other substances in the atmosphere or water. Of course, continuous monitoring of the output of pollution at the plant, apartment and household level would be necessary in order to determine the tax base. Any implementation of such a tax would have to await detailed knowledge of the harm done by various pollutants and the setting up of a complex and undoubtedly costly apparatus for administration. It is not clear that this is the most cost-effective approach to pollution problems.

2. The operation of municipal solid waste management systems in Canada is a municipal or local government responsibility under provincial jurisdiction, and to date there has been no direct Federal Government involvement in such matters, other than at Federal establishments or where federal government wastes are involved. Fisheries and Environment Canada do provide indirect assistance in the form of technology transfers, seminars on waste management and on request acting as an exchange for information and advice on the subject.

3. The Department of Fisheries and the Environment in co-operation with other Departments is actively studying waste reduction at the production level but to date has not provided incentives in this regard.

4. The Department of Fisheries and the Environment has considered subsidies for recycling industries. At this time there is no assurance that subsidies would substantially increase the quantities of material recycled. Other aids to recycling are being considered.

5. As far as the Department of Fisheries and the Environment is concerned, no grants are being provided specifically to recycling industries at present; however, studies are being conducted to provide information which will greatly aid these industries. As far as the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce, recycling industries are eligible to receive contributions for research and development projects under the Enterprise Development Program. No applications have been received from recycling industries for assistance under the Program at the present time.

6. Certain recycling operations have been classified as manufacturing or producing under the Excise Tax Act. So far, they include recycling of scrap metals, glass, and scrap or reclaimed paper. Recyclers of these goods may acquire production equipment exempt from sales tax to the same extent as other manufacturers or producers.

7. There is no railway policy concerning rate levels on recycled material versus those on raw materials. Generally railways assess rates on the basis of cost, value of service, and market conditions. As an example, rates per ton of scrap iron are normally higher than rates for iron ore. Scrap iron is more valuable than iron ore in the market place and therefore can bear a larger transportation charge. Railways take advantage of cost savings from the large volume movements normally associated with iron ore, and these savings are reflected in rates. Unit or solid trains, reduced switching times, dedicated equipment and other such efficiencies created through economies of scale can reduce costs and can therefore allow a lower level of rates on these movements compared to commodities which cannot take advantage of these cost saving practices.

EXPENSES PAID TO HON. MEMBER FOR PORT ARTHUR

Question No. 2,547—Mr. Cossitt:

1. What is the total of all expenses paid by the Department of Supply and Services or any other branch of the government, directly or indirectly, for the honourable Member for Port Arthur while (a) Minister without Portfolio (b) Minister of State for Urban Affairs (c) Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (d) Minister of Manpower and Immigration (e) President of the Treasury Board?

2. What is the total of all expenses paid for the Minister while serving in the five positions?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): See reply to Question No. 2,027 answered this day.

BAIL GRANTED ON DRUG OFFENCES

Question No. 2,550—Mr. Johnston:

How many times has bail been granted on a drug offence since the proclamation of the most recent law relating to bail and drug offences?

Hon. Ron Basford (Minister of Justice): Statistics of the scope sought by this question are not available. However, the Department of Justice did undertake a selective monitoring of the effects of amendments made to the Criminal Code in 1976 (see Chapter 93, Statutes of Canada, 23-24-25 Elizabeth II) with respect to bail procedures. In four Canadian cities, two matched samples of approximately 3,550 pre-change and 3,550 post-change cases were collected: Montreal (2,000), Ottawa (900), Toronto (2,200), and Vancouver (2,000). These were cases of persons charged with offences under the Criminal Code (excluding traffic offences) or under the Narcotic Control Act who were in custody when they made their first appearance on the charge before a court and who were not in custody for any other matter at the time. Persons who pleaded guilty at their first appearance or at a Show Cause hearing were also excluded as no decision on pre-trial release had to be made with respect to them. The following table indicates the results in relation to persons charged with drug offences covered by the amendments in the four cities in the time frame of the survey:

		Pre-trial Release of Persons Charged with Drug Offences
		Number in Sample	Number Released	Percentage Released
Ottawa	1975	10	7	70
	1976	38	31	82

PRIME MINISTER'S TRIP TO ANTICOSTI ISLAND

Question No. 2,555—Mr. Cossitt:

1. With reference to the answer to Question No. 69 of the 1st Session of the 30th Parliament which stated in part, that the Prime Minister made a private trip to Anticosti Island from August 14 to 17, 1974 and with further reference to the answer to Question No. 5,342 of the same Session that the cost to the taxpayer was $4,927., did the Prime Minister spend any or all of his visit with Mr. Paul Desmarais, President of the Power Corporation and, if so (a) for what purpose (b) what were the reasons justifying such use of public funds (c) did the discussions include matters concerning government policy or the Liberal Party of Canada or donations to the Liberal Party of Canada?

2. What are the names of all those on board the aircraft flying to and from Anticosti Island and does the list include Mr. Simon Reisman, Deputy Minister of Finance at that time and, if not, did Mr. Reisman visit Mr. Paul Desmarais at the same time as the Prime Minister?

3. Did Mr. James Coutts, principal secretary to the Prime Minister, at any time visit Anticosti Island and meet with Mr. Desmarais, and, if so, on what date and for what purpose?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): 1 and 2. See reply to question 2,881 answered today.

3. No.

TRAVEL—TRIP TO SANDSPIT AIRPORT IN QUEEN CHARLOTTE ISLANDS

Question No. 2,556—Mr. Firth:

Did a Falcon Fan Jet No. 502 from Squadron 412 in Ottawa make a trip to Sandspit Airport in the Queen Charlotte Islands, British Columbia on the weekend of April 29 to May 1, 1977 and, if so (a) who were the passengers on the flight (b) what was the purpose of the visit?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Departments of National Defence and the Secretary of State as follows: Yes. The aircraft was assigned to the Secretary of State for Canada who was using it on official government business. See answer to Question No. 2,881.

THE BOOKCELLAR, HAMILTON, ONTARIO

Question No. 2,557—Mr. O'Sullivan:

Were payments made to The Bookcellar, 144 James St. S., Hamilton, Ontario by any departments and, if so (a) which departments and in what amounts (b) for what purpose in the fiscal year (i) 1972-73 (ii) 1973-74 (iii) 1974-75 (iv) 1975-76 (v) 1976-77?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): (a) Department of Employment and Immigration—$533.25; (b) (i) 1972-73—Nil; (ii) 1973-74—Manpower Training Program ($516.00); (iii) 1974-75—Purchase of Books ($17.25); (iv) 1975-76—Nil; (v) 1976-77—Nil; Other departments have no information on this subject.

WAREHOUSE SPACE OWNED OR LEASED BY DSS

Question No. 2,646—Mr. Bawden:

1. Does the Department of Supply and Services own or lease warehouse space and, if so, in each case, what is the location?

2. For each location, what was the number of square feet of warehousing space available for the years 1971 to 1977?

3. What projected number of square feet of warehousing space will be required by the Department for the years 1977 to 1979?

4. Does the Department anticipate a consolidation of warehouse space and, if so (a) what are the details (b) is any study presently being done on the feasibility of consolidation or reduction of such space?

[Mr. Cossitt.]

5. Is there a mark-up for items sold from the DSS warehouses to other government departments and, if so, what is it?

6. Is there a mark-up for goods that are not stored in DSS warehouses but which are purchased directly from manufacturers for customers by DSS and, if so, what is it?

7. Do other government departments maintain warehouses for their own use as opposed to keeping their goods or equipment in the DSS warehouses and, if so, which departments?

8. Does the Department maintain warehouses outside of Canada and, if so (a) in what locations (b) is the Department giving consideration to closing them down?

9. Is there a mark-up and charge for providing the service of warehousing to other government departments and, if so, what is it?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Departments of Supply and Services and Public Works as follows: 1. The Department of Supply and Services leases warehouse space from the Department of Public Works in the following locations: Atlantic Region Supply Centre. (a) Burnside Industrial Park, Dartmouth, N.S.; (b) Goose Bay, Labrador. Québec Region Supply Centre. (a) 800 Golf Rd., Nuns' Island, Montréal, Québec; (b) 1006 Golf Rd., Nuns' Island, Montréal, Québec. Capital Region Supply Centre. (a) 1010 Somerset St., W., Ottawa, Ontario; (b) 45 Sacré-Cœur Blvd., Hull, Québec; (c) O'Keefe Bldg., 819 Wellington St., Ottawa. Ontario Region Supply Centre, 1191 Cawthra Road, Mississauga, Ontario. Western Region Supply Centre, 10210–107th Street, Edmonton, Alberta. Pacific Region Supply Centre, 3551 Viking Way, Richmond, B.C.

NOTE 1: Atlantic Region Supply Centre opened in April 1974. The facility is privately owned, and leased through the Department of Public Works (DPW). The Department of Supply and Services (DSS) took on the Department of Transport (MOT) warehousing facility (Government owned) of 200,000 sq. ft. at Goose Bay in July 1976 and reduced the requirement to 120,000 sq. ft. in April 1977.

NOTE 2: Québec Region Supply Centre moved in October 1973 from a Government owned facility of 70,000 sq. ft. at 1659 de Lorimier St., Montréal, which was scheduled for demolition, to a privately owned facility of approximately 52,000 sq. ft. at Nuns' Island leased through DPW. An additional 30,000 sq. ft. of privately owned warehousing space was leased through DPW in November 1974 to provide a warehouse service for the Canadian Dairy Commission.

NOTE 3: The Capital Region Supply Centre's prime storage facility is a permanent warehouse of 274,500 sq. ft. in the Plouffe Park warehouse, Ottawa, which is Government owned and leased from DPW. It also occupies semi-permanent warehouse space at 45 Sacré-Cœur Blvd., Hull. Year to year space requirements within this building vary from a high of 188,000 sq. ft. in 1975 to its present low of approximately 150,000 sq. ft. Additionally, varying amounts of warehousing space have been and continue to be leased through DPW from the private sector primarily as a warehouse service to meet storage needs of other government departments. Currently 81,000 sq. ft. of such space is being leased in the O'Keefe building in Ottawa.

NOTE 4: Ontario Region Supply Centre opened in April 1972. The facility is Government owned.

NOTE 5: Western Region Supply Centre opened in April 1973 in accommodations shared with MOT in a Government owned facility of 30,000 sq. ft. In January 1976 a privately owned facility of 76,000 sq. ft. was leased through DPW. DSS continued to operate a warehouse service for MOT in the 30,000 ft. facility.

NOTE 6: Pacific Region Supply Centre opened in November 1974. The facility is privately owned and leased through DPW.

3 and 4. There are ongoing studies relating to warehouse space utilized by DSS and other departments with a view to reduction through consolidation.

5. Yes. Varying mark-ups are applied to different commodities, designed to produce an overall gross margin of 32 per cent.

6. No, but a service charge is levied at Treasury Board approved rates.

7. The Department of Public Works does not maintain a listing of other government departments who maintain warehouses for their own use; however, it is known that many do for their own operational requirements such as Public Works, Transport, National Revenue, Post Office.

8. No. (a) Not applicable (b) Not applicable.

9. Yes. 1. 40 cents/sq. ft. for storage space; 2. Small van with driver, $15/hr; 3. Large vehicle with driver and helper, $23.50/hr; 4. Export packaging, $3.50/cubic ft.

EMPLOYEES BY DEPARTMENTS AND CATEGORIES

Question No. 2,675—Mr. Orlikow: (Revised)

On April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974, how many persons were employed by each department at the CO-4 level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (President of the Treasury Board): The number of persons employed at the CO-4 level on April 30 (a) 1976 (b) 1974 by each department is shown on the following list.

NEW LOGO FOR TELEGLOBE CANADA

Question No. 2,724—Mr. Crouse:

1. Who designed the new logo for Teleglobe Canada?

2. Was the design contract put out to tender and, if not, in what manner was it obtained?

3. (a) What was the cost of the new logo (b) what was the estimated cost of converting from the old to the new design?

Hon. Jeanne Sauvé (Minister of Communications): 1. Foster Advertising Company Ltd., 3 Place Ville Marie, Montréal.

2. The design work was requested of Foster Advertising within the framework of an existing global contract between Teleglobe Canada and Foster Advertising for the provision of advertising and publicity services. Foster Advertising was awarded this contract by Teleglobe following submissions by a number of advertising agencies.

3. (a) Total payments to Foster Advertising for the Corporate identification program amounted to $20,791.55 (authorizations of expenditures Nos. 13376, 13377 and 14268). Of this amount, $8,310.19 was charged for development of the logo itself and the balance of typewetting, mechanical revision, applications on letterheads, buildings, trucks, etc. (b) The cost of conversion resulted, not from the design of a new logo, but from the change of the Corporation's name from Canadian Overseas Telecommunication Corporation to Teleglobe Canada. The new logo was designed to integrate the existing symbol with the new name which was approved by Parliament in an amendment to the Teleglobe Canada Act. There were no additional costs involved in conversion to the new logo as far as forms and stationery are concerned. Identification of buildings and vehicles under the new logo is just underway and estimated costs are not yet available. The approximate cost of producing the graphics manual is $10,000.

RELIGIOUS SECTS

Question No. 2,727—Mr. Friesen:

1. In (a) 1974 (b) 1975 (c) 1976 was the government approached by diplomatic representatives of foreign countries in Canada on behalf of their nationals requesting assistance in their removal and/or their dependants from orders such as (i) the Apostles of Infinite Love (ii) the Church of Scientology (iii) Hari Krishna (iv) similar groups and, if so, how many times and what were the names of the Embassies and High Commissions?

2. In each case (a) how many individuals and what sects were involved (b) what action was taken by the Departments of External Affairs and Manpower and Immigration?

3. How many of the individuals concerned are in the country on a (a) visa (b) student visa and, in each case, how many times has the visa been renewed and for what reason?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Departments of External Affairs and Employment and Immigration as follows: 1. Only the Embassy of Belgium approached the Department of External Affairs in September 1976 to request assistance for the return of one of its nationals. The Embassy had been asked for help by the parents of the individual.

Order Paper Questions

2. (a) One, the Order of the Apostles of Infinite Love; (b) On being informed by the Department of Manpower and Immigration that the status in Canada of the Belgian person concerned was in accordance with the Immigration requirements and since the individual was of legal age, the Department of External Affairs notified the Belgian Embassy that no intervention was possible to return the person to Belgium.

3. (a) and (b) Citizens of Belgium do not require visas to visit Canada.

PRIME MINISTER'S TRIPS

Question No. 2,728—Mr. Cossitt:

1. What is a list of all flights taken by the Prime Minister on government aircraft in the recent by-election campaigns, including points of departure and arrival, dates and times, the exact cost of each flight including flying time, waiting time, fuel and wages of the crew?

2. What was the total of all expenses incurred for such flights?

3. Was the Liberal Party billed for such flights and, if so (a) on what date (b) in what amount and to whom was the bill sent (c) on what date was it paid and who was the cheque made payable to and who signed the cheque?

4. Did the Prime Minister decide to have the Liberal Party pay for such flights and, if so, was the decision made before or immediately after the Honourable Member for Leeds raised the matter in the House on May 31, 1977?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): 1. See replies to questions 29 and 30 answered today.

2 to 4. See reply to question 2,881 answered today.

MR. ROBERT KINGSLEY

Question No. 2,729—Mr. Cossitt:

Has Mr. Robert Kingsley, Canada Manpower Regional Manager of Operations, stationed in Ottawa, in any way whatsoever been relieved of his title, duties etc. and, if so (a) was he suspended or transferred to another position or dismissed on or about the end of May, 1977 (b) what are the reasons for any changes made in connection with his employment and dit they have anything to do with claims made by his wife and son for unemployment insurance to which they were not entitled (c) was any change made in his status as a result of UIC or RCMP investigations into any misuse of the UIC computer in Montreal at the time Mr. Kingsley was Regional Manager of the UIC Pay Centre in that city?

Hon. Bud Cullen (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Kingsley has assumed a temporary assignment as a member of a project group responsible for developing a plan for the relocation of the national headquarters offices of the Unemployment Insurance Commission and the Department of Manpower and Immigration. (a) No. (b) Mr. Kingsley was selected as a member of the project group on the basis of his experience and knowledge of the operations and programs of both the Unemployment Insurance Commission and the Department of Manpower and Immigration, and of the logistical factors affecting a major relocation of staff. (c) No.

Question No. 2,731—Mr. Jones:

1. What is the cost per year for the upkeep of tropical plants in the various government offices in the City of Moncton?

2. (a) How many government offices across the country are provided with tropical plants (b) what is the total cost of maintaining them (c) what was the cost in 1976 (d) what is the estimated cost for 1977?

3. What (a) was the cost for 1976 (b) is the estimated cost for 1977 of maintaining the plants in the Province of New Brunswick?

Hon. Judd Buchanan (Minister of Public Works): 1. $3,607.20 for 1977—by contract.

2. (a) In the National Capital Region, there were 120 buildings which had tropical plants in July 1977. This total figure is presently fluid as moves to buildings in Hull and elsewhere are being made. However, in the rest of Canada, where accommodation changes are smaller in number and where the concentration is lower, there were 401 offices with tropical plants. (b) See (c) and (d); (c) $357,554.60 for 1976; (d) $413,612.06 (estimated) for 1977.

3. (a) Nil; (b) $5,000.00 (estimated).

STUDIES MADE BY GOVERNMENT ON THE ENVIRONMENTAL IMPACT OF OIL SPILLS

Question No. 2,735—Mr. Friesen:

1. Were studies made by the government on the environmental impact of an oil spill in the Semiahmoo Bay and Mud Bay areas and, if so, how many have been completed?

2. (a) What was the length of time taken to complete each (b) on what date were they completed (c) what was the cost of each?

3. Does the government intend to use the White Rock Federal Building as a Pollution Alert Centre?

4. In the event of an oil spill in the Surrey-White Rock area as a result of oil tankers using the Cherry Point facility is there oil pollution clean-up equipment available and, if so (a) what is the nearest location (c) what is the nature of the equipment (c) what is the estimated time it would take for the equipment to reach the White Rock area (d) how many personnel are permanently assigned to operate the equipment?

5. Does the government have any plans to locate oil clean-up equipment in the City of White Rock?

6. (a) What is the estimated value of any government installation, i.e. piers, wharfs, DOT facilities etc., on the Semiahmoo Bay, Mud Bay, Boundary Bay shoreline (b) what is a description of each of these facilities?

7. How much money has the government contributed through LIP, Canada Works and Young Canada Works to environmental projects in the Boundary Bay, Mud Bay, Semiahmoo Bay, Serpentine Fen area of the lower mainland of B.C. in (a) 1974 (b) 1975 (c) 1976 (d) 1977?

8. Does the government have any training programme in place in B.C. for the purpose of instructing its employees and/or interested citizens in oil spill clean-up procedures and, if not, is it the intention to establish such a programme?

9. Has the government held any discussions with the local city and municipal governments of Surrey, White Rock, Richmond and Delta with respect to clean-up procedures, their financing and implementation and, if so, on what date and what was their conclusion?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Departments of Fisheries and the Environment, Employment and Immigration and Transport Canada as follows: 1. Yes, two by the Department of Fisheries and the Environment.

[Mr. Cullen.]

2. The first study was a joint Headquarters/Regional effort. It resulted in the report entitled "The Environmental Consequences of the Proposed Oil Transport between Valdez and Cherry Point Refinery" and was dated August 5, 1971. Costing is indeterminate as internal staff time was involved. The second study was carried out by the firm of consultants Howard Paish and Associates Ltd. It resulted in the report entitled "West Coast Oil Threat in Perspective". The three volume report was six months under preparation and is dated April 1, 1972. Cost of the report was $50,000.

3. No. The Canadian Coast Guard Pollution Emergency Centre is established at its VTM Centre, Kapilano 100, West, Vancouver.

4. (a) Equipment is based at Richmond, Vancouver and Victoria, B.C. and also, Bellingham, Wash. (b) Equipment is used for the containment and removal of spilled oil both on the water and the shore, as well as pumping out damaged vessels. (c) Minimum two hours deployment time. (d) None dedicated, but Canadian Coast Guard ship and base personnel are trained and available for this task.

5. Not at this time.

6. Government Wharf, Float and Breakwater, White Rock, B.C. Administered by Fisheries and Environment Canada. Estimated replacement value 1970: Float, $9,000; Breakwater, $280,000; Wharf, $186,000; Total, $475,000. Government Wharf and Float, Crescent Beach, B.C. Administered by Fisheries and Environment Canada. Float, $5,000; Wharf, $26,000; Total, $31,000. 1977 replacement value considered to be approximately three times those of 1970. 7. (a) 1974-75 LIP, $56,569; (b) 1975-76 LIP, $60,060; (c) 1976-77 LIP, $433,160; (d) 1977-78 Canada Works Program $279,384.

8. Both the Canadian Coast Guard of the Ministry of Transport, and the Environmental Protection Service of the Department of Fisheries and the Environment ensure the training of its employees in oil spill cleanup procedures through attendance at in-house, and out of house training programmes, seminars and conferences. In-house exercises are carried out at intervals with attendance by Port Authority, industry personnel and employees of other government departments. The private sector and other levels of government are encouraged to develop and sponsor similar training programmes for the benefit of their respective staff to enable them to better deal with and direct on-scene oil spill containment and cleanup countermeasures. Already several major industries, groups and agencies within the province of B.C. have done so. This includes the B.C. Petroleum Association, Provincial Emergency Program, MacMillan Bloedel Limited and the Burrard Inlet Working Group to name four. In all instances both the Ministry of Transport and the Department of Fisheries and the Environment have actively supported the programmes through an advisory and/or participatory capacity.

9. A seminar covering these subjects was held on May 29 and 30, 1975 at U.B.C. Surrey, Richmond, Delta and White Rock representatives were among the participants. The explanation of government resources plans and techniques was well received.

UIC—MR. ROBERT VANTANGERLOO

FRANCE-CANADA RELATIONS

Question No. 2,740—Mr. Jones:

1. Is the government aware that (a) French Nationals have been on the staff and faculty of the University of Moncton and other Canadian universities or colleges in Canada, in lieu of serving an extra year in the military in France (b) French Nationals have been on the staff of L'Evangeline newspaper, Moncton, in lieu of serving in the military in France (c) France has established a full consulate office in Moncton, New Brunswick (d) France has paid for substantial portions of the equipment used in L'Evangeline newspaper, Moncton (e) France has taken steps to substantially increase the size of the (i) airport (ii) harbour for the islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon (f) France has plans to and is negotiating for establishment of a high powered television and/or radio station which will be beamed into parts of Eastern Canada and, if so, in each case, to what extent has the government studied or given consideration to such matters?

2. Have negotiations taken place between France and Canada over the past five years and, if so, what are they?

3. (a) How many French Nationals were employed in Canada in the years 1963 to 1977 (b) in what locations and in what manner were they employed (c) was special immigration clearance necessary to facilitate their employment terms and, if so, what are the details?

4. (a) How many French Nationals have received Canadian citizenship over the past ten years (b) where are such persons presently employed?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Departments of External Affairs, Employment and Immigration and the Secretary of State as follows: 1. (a) The government is aware that French nationals have worked and are working on the staff of Canadian educational institutions in lieu of military service in France; this is done with the full knowledge of the government. (b) Yes. The government is fully aware of this and has satisfied itself that it conforms to Canadian law and regulations. (c) Yes. The government is fully aware of this and has satisfied itself that it conforms to Canadian law and regulations. (d) Yes. The government is fully aware of this and has judged that there is nothing objectionable in the arrangement. (e) The government is aware of projects to increase the size of airport and harbour facilities at St-Pierre; these are not a source of concern to the government. (f) The government is aware that there are plans to improve radio and television broadcasting facilities in St-Pierre et Miquelon and is in touch with the French authorities with a view to being kept informed of the development of such plans as they may affect Canada. No negotiations are under way at the present time.

2. Negotiations have taken place between Canada and France in a wide range of areas, notably fisheries, air transport, telecommunications, territorial elimitation, economic relations, and scientific relations.

Order Paper Questions

3. (a) and (b); Statistics are not kept regarding the employment of immigrants after they are admitted to Canada. From 1973 to May 1977, 5,956 French nationals were issued employment visas destined to the provinces indicated in the following occupations. Statistics for the period 1963 to 1972 are not available as employment visas were not introduced until 1973.

GRANTS, LOANS AND COMMITMENTS—QUEBEC AND PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND CENTRES

Question No. 2,741—Mr. MacKay:

1. Between January 1 and May 31, 1977, how many grants, loans and other commitments were made by CMHC in the Constituency of (a) Verdun (b) Terrebonne (c) Langelier (d) Témiscamingue (e) Louis-Hébert (f) Malpeque?

2. For each such Constituency, during the months of March, April and May 1977, what was the amount, purpose and name of the recipient or recipients of such grants, loans or other commitments?

Hon. André Ouellet (Minister of State for Urban Affairs): I am advised as follows by Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation: 1 and 2. See Table 1 following.

NOTE: Data compiled by CMHC on activities under the National Housing Act are based on municipalities and municipal counties and not on federal electoral constituencies.

POST OFFICE ADVERTISING

Question No. 2,744—Mr. McKenzie:

1. Did the Post Office Department commission an advertising agency to produce the brochure and postal code stickers "2 ways you can help yourself to better mail service" and, if so, what was the (a) cost (b) name and address of the firm?

2. (a) What was the printing cost (b) how many were produced (c) what was the total cost (including printing, production, distribution, etc.)?

3. What was the name and address of the firm that was contracted to produce the brochure and stickers?

Hon. J.-J. Blais (Postmaster General): 1. (a) and (b) The creative aspects of the national postal householder package (brochure and postal code sticker sheets) were developed under contract with B & B Advertising Ltd., 1010 St. Catherine Street W., Montréal, Quebec. Cost: $11,400*.

2. (a) and (b) Overall production of the householder was handled through the Department of Supply and Services contracts, after the normal procedure of bidding and tendering. Seven and one-half million householders were produced. Itemized contract costs are as follows: envelope—$63,630.00; brochure—$69,503.98; stickers—$70,371.75; mailing preparation—$33,750.00; and primary distribution—$11,400.00*. (c) Total cost—$248,655.73.

3. Printing production of the brochure was awarded under DSS contract to: Gazette Canadian Printing Ltd., 1000 St. Antoine St., Montreal, Quebec H3C 3R7. Similarly, contract for production of the stickers was awarded to: Southam Printing Ltd., Specialty Division, P.O. Box 1079, Montreal, Quebec H3C 2X6.

MINISTER OF STATE FOR FITNESS AND AMATEUR SPORT—COST OF EUROPEAN TOUR

Question No. 2,750—Mr. Yewchuk:

Was a tour conducted through Europe by the Minister of State for Fitness and Amateur Sport, Dr. Roger Jackson, Director of Sport Canada and Mr. Geoff Gowan, Technical Director of the Coaching Association of Canada, from April 24 to May 12, 1977 and, if so, at what cost?

Hon. Iona Campagnolo (Minister of State (Fitness and Amateur Sport)): Yes. Refer to the answer to question 2,881 tabled this date.

SALARIES OF SOME MEMBERS OF CANADIAN WHEAT BOARD

Question No. 2,757—Mr. Robinson:

What is the salary of the (a) Executive (b) Director (c) Chairman (d) Vice-Chairman (e) board members of the Canadian Wheat Board?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): In so far as the Canadian Wheat Board is concerned: With respect to (a), (c) and (d), there are no positions in the Canadian Wheat Board with such titles. With respect to (b), there are a number of Board employees with the title "Director". However, Board employees are not public servants under the Public Service Employment Act nor do their salaries constitute an expense to the Government. Accordingly, information on their salaries is regarded as confidential. With respect to (e), the salary ranges for Board members are established by Governor in Council and are currently at the following levels: Chief Commissioner, $49,500—$65,300 per annum; Assistant Chief Commissioner, $43,000—$58,800 per annum; Commissioner, $43,000—$58,800 per annum.

ADVISOR TO MINISTER OF EXTERNAL AFFAIRS FOR FRANCOPHONE COUNTRIES

Question No. 2,762—Mr. Cossitt:

1. Was the Minister of Supply and Services appointed Advisor to the Minister of External Affairs for Francophone countries and, if so (a) on what date (b) did the Prime Minister make this appointment after consultation with (i) Ivan Head (ii) the Minister of External Affairs (iii) others and, if so, what are their names?

2. Since his appointment, on what specific matters and on what dates has the Minister offered advice to the Minister of External Affairs?

3. What are the qualifications of the Minister of Supply and Services that justify his appointment to the position of advisor?

[Mr. Dinsdale.]

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): 1, 2 and 3. See Department of External Affairs Press Release of May 4, 1977.

AIRCRAFT OPERATIONS GROUP CONTRACT

Question No. 2,767—Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton):

1. Has the Aircraft Operations Group of the Public Service, which has been without a contract for nearly two years, historical relationship with other aviation professionals, such as the Air Traffic Controllers, not been accorded any weight, thus allowing the Aircraft Operations Group to fall as much as $6,000 behind the Controllers where there has traditionally been a variation of only 1% and, if so, for what reason?

2. Is it anticipated that at some time in the future the Aircraft Operations Group will be given an opportunity to catch up to the other professional categories to which it has had an historical pay-scale relationship and, if so, approximately on what date?

3. Is consideration being given to amending Sections 38 and/or 44.(1)(a) of the Anti-Inflation Act regulations to clarify the meaning of the words "entered into" and "established" as suggested by Mr. E. D. Jensen, Chairman of the Aircraft Operations Group in his letter to the Minister of Finance of January 12, 1977?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Treasury Board Secretariat and the Department of Finance as follows: 1. The Aircraft Operations Group which still remains without a contract has filed an application with the Federal Court to set aside a decision made by the Anti-Inflation Appeal Tribunal on March 17, 1977. The decision upheld decisions already made by Cabinet and by the Administrator's office rejecting the request by the Aircraft Operations Group to disregard a ruling by the Anti-Inflation Board that had the effect of denying any historical relationship between the Aircraft Operations Group and others in the Technical Category including Air Traffic Controllers. The Anti-Inflation Board ruled that an Arbitration Award by Justice Emmett Hall granting increases of $3,700 and 10 per cent for a two-year agreement exceeded guidelines and ordered a roll back to a maximum of $2,400 in each year of a two-year agreement.

2. This group remains subject to the Anti-Inflation Legislation and any catch up, if justified, will be in accordance with the appropriate guidelines.

3. The Anti-Inflation Board is not contemplating amending Section 38 and/or 44(1)(a) of the regulations. It is their view that the current interpretation given to these sections correctly reflects the intention of the Anti-Inflation Act.

LAND ASSEMBLY—CORNER BROOK, NEWFOUNDLAND

Question No. 2,771—Mr. Marshall:

1. Did the government provide funds through CMHC for the provision of water and sewage in the Elizabeth Street area in Corner Brook, Newfoundland and, if so, in what amount?

2. What portion of the total funds expended for work in the land assembly area in the Elizabeth Street area was provided by the government?

3. Did the government sign an agreement with the provincial government with regard to the work done in the land assembly area in the Elizabeth Street area and, if so, what was the extent of the government's responsibility as to completion in line with specifications?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation and the Department of Regional Economic Expansion as follows: 1 and 2. Under the terms of a land acquisition and holding Agreement with the Newfoundland and Labrador Housing Corporation under Section 40 of the National Housing Act, CMHC approved the expenditure of $111,750 (75 per cent of the estimated cost of acquisition), for the acquisition of 300 acres in the Elizabeth Street area of Corner Brook, Newfoundland. CMHC incurred costs of only $37,575 under this Agreement for investigation of such items as need, location, anticipated costs and selling prices. The acquisition of the land was financed under Section 42, as follows: (a) A loan of $671,730 was authorized on November 2, 1969 under Section 42 of the NHA to finance 90% of the cost of acquisition and servicing of 31.28 acres. (b) A loan of $1,616,058 was authorized on October 22, 1974 under Section 42 of the NHA to finance 90% of the cost of acquisition and servicing of 54 acres. (c) A loan of $2,149,851 was authorized on May 31, 1976 under Section 42 of the NHA to finance 90% of the cost of acquisition of 147 acres and of the servicing of 47 of these acres. Under the Canada/Newfoundland Second Special Areas Agreement, DREE provided funding for the "Upper Elizabeth Street Reconstruction and Water Reservoir" projects in the amount of $602,663, on the basis of a 50 per cent contribution/loan ratio.

3. The above noted CMHC commitments state that "the borrower shall undertake and complete the project in accordance with its accepted application for loan." Where CMHC provides funding through loans under Section 42 of the NHA, the borrower has the responsibility for completion in accordance with specifications. DREE—Canada/Newfoundland Second Special Areas Agreement, signed August 9, 1971. DREE—Under the terms of the Agreement, a Federal/Provincial Management Committee was established to direct the implementation of the Agreement. The "Upper Elizabeth Street Reconstruction and Water Reservoir" projects were completed prior to December 1974, and deemed by the Management Committee to have been constructed in accordance with the prescribed specifications.

LETTER FROM CAPTAIN G. B. LANDIS

Question No. 2,782—Mr. Brisco:

1. Did the Office of the Prime Minister receive a letter from Captain G. B. Landis, 467 Earl Street, Kingston, Ontario, dated June 26, 1976 and, if so, was the Prime Minister advised of the substance of Captain Landis' recommendation?

2. Did the letter receive a substantive response to date and, if not, for what reason?

3. Did the Prime Minister or Secretary of State for Canada cause studies to be made of the language teaching method outlined therein known as alternating lingual communication and (a) if so, what have been the recommendations with respect to its use as an alternative to existing teaching methods (b) if not, for what reason?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Prime Minister's and the Privy Council Offices and the Department of the Secretary of State as follows: 1. (a) Yes; (b) No.

2. Mr. Landis' comments on languae policy in this letter and a follow-up letter of July 13 were acknowledged by the Prime Minister's Office on September 20, 1976.

3. A study of the language teaching method proposed by Captain Landis was conducted by the Language Bureau of the Public Service Commission. It was concluded that the method did not fit the mandate for the teaching of a second language that the Language Bureau has received from Parliament.

MINISTER'S VISAS

Question No. 2,783—Mr. Jelinek:

How many ministerial visas were granted at (a) Vancouver International Airport (b) Toronto International Airport (c) Montreal Mirabel and Dorval Airports (d) other locations and ports of Canada in (i) 1972 (ii) 1973 (iii) 1974 (iv) 1975 (v) 1976?

Hon. Bud Cullen (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): Permits are issued by Ottawa and in the Regions by Minister's delegated authority and statistics are not maintained on a Port of Entry basis.

APPOINTMENT OF DR. BERNARD SUTET

Question No. 2,785—Mr. Jones:

1. Is there any regulation in the rules of the Public Service Commission requiring high ranking officials to be or to have the intention of becoming a Canadian citizen?

2. (a) Is Dr. Bernard Sutet a citizen of France (b) is he presently the Director of Economic Policy in the Policy Planning Office of the Unemloyment Insurance Commission (c) what are his qualifications (d) was there an open competition for the position he presently occupies and, if not, was he appointed directly?

3. (a) For what position was he hired by the Department of Manpower and Immigration in 1968 (b) was the position advertised as an open competition or was he appointed to the position?

4. What special expertise does he have for high-ranking Public Service positions?

5. Is he required to become a Canadian citizen and (a) if not, for what reason (b) if so, has he refused?

6. (a) What is his salary (b) what is the amount of his expense allowance (c) what are his special privileges?

7. Is he allowed to sit in on Cabinet meetings and, if so, has he ever done so?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Department of Employment and Immigration and the Public Service Commission as follows: 1. There is no requirement for any person appointed under the Public Service Employment Act to be or to have the intention of becoming a Canadian citizen. In appointments from outside the Public Service, however, a preference is given to Canadian citizens. Therefore, if both a citizen and a non-citizen are found qualified, the citizen is appointed before the non-citizen. In addition, all employees are required, upon appointment from outside the Public Service, to take and subscribe the oath or affirmation of allegiance and the oath or affirmation set out in Schedule III of the Public Service Employment Act (oath or affirmation of office and secrecy).

NEW HORIZONS CONTRIBUTIONS IN NEW BRUNSWICK

Question No. 2,787—Mr. Jones:

In the latest series of contributions through the New Horizons Programme of the Department of National Health and Welfare, were grants awarded to Francophones in the Province of New Brunswick totalling $37,612 and to Anglophones totalling $16,850 and, if so, for what reason?

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Contributions through the New Horizons Program are announced 10 times throughout the year and are made in response to applications received from groups of senior citizens. In any particular series the funding pattern for a province is likely to vary significantly from the long range pattern. In addition, it is difficult to divide New Horizons allocations between Anglophone and Francophone organizations, especially in a province such as New Brunswick where members of both linguistic groups may participate in any one group; determination from the language of application or the name of an organization will not necessarily reflect the proportion of the members of Anglophone and Francophone origin. Given these restrictions on the validity of dividing New Horizons statistics between official language groups, grants awarded to applications filed in English and in French were as follows: (1) for series number 47 released in June 1977, the figures stated in the question are correct; (2) for the six series released in 1977, a total of $154,300.00 was awarded to organizations who applied in French and a total of $166,557.00 to those in English.

[Mr. Goodale.]

GRANTS GIVEN TO TEACHERS TO IMPROVE THEIR LANGUAGE SKILLS

Question No. 2,788—Mr. Jones:

Under the terms of the Federal-Provincial Agreement on Bilingualism in Education, are contributions being made to enable (a) French (b) English teachers in each province whose mother tongue is (i) French (ii) English to improve their language teaching skills and, if so, in each case, how many and in what amounts?

Hon. John Roberts (Secretary of State): Department of the Secretary of State: Under the Teachers' Bursary Programme of the Federal-Provincial Agreement on Bilingualism in Education contributions are made to the provinces to enable teachers of French and English as second languages and teachers in the official minority language to take short refresher courses to improve their skills. Bursaries are awarded to the teachers by the provincial governments, according to their priorities in the area of bilingualism in education. The attached tables show the amounts contributed by the federal government to each province under this programme since its inception in fiscal year 1972-73. As the mother tongue of the teachers concerned is not a factor in the awarding of the bursaries, no statistics on this point are available.

CONSUMER ASSISTANCE GRANTS PROGRAMME

Question No. 2,789—Mr. Jones:

1. How many local voluntary groups which offer a range of consumer information, education and mediation services applied for grants under the Consumer Assistance Grants Programme of the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs?

2. Were any of the thirteen grants awarded given to the Provinces of Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Manitoba or Saskatchewan and, if not, for what reason?

3. Is the availabilty of grants under the Programme advertised publicly and, if so (a) in what manner (b) were they advertised in the Moncton area?

4. Did any local voluntary groups from the Constituency of Moncton apply?

Hon. A. C. Abbott (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): 1. The Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs Canada is in regular contact with voluntary consumer groups through its regional and district offices. This contact includes many informal requests regarding the availability of financial support from the department in addition to formal application for money under the Consumer Assistance Grants Programme. The numbers of the former type of contact have not been tabulated: formal application for grants were received from seventy local groups during the 1976-77 fiscal year.

2. The Department assumes that this question refers to voluntary organizations located in the provinces of Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and not to the provinces themselves, as no grants are awarded to the provincial government by the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. Further, the Department assumes that this question refers to a news release dated May 19, 1977 regarding the awarding of 13 grants. None of the recipient groups had offices located in any of Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Manitoba or Saskatchewan. However, several of the groups offer services to consumers living in those provinces i.e. Allergy Information Association, Consumers' Association of Canada, and Transport 2000. At the time the news release was issued, applications from agencies located in the above listed provinces did not meet the criteria of the grants program.

3. National press releases regarding the Consumer Assistance Grants Programme are made on a regular basis.

4. No formal grant applications have been received from voluntary consumer groups from the Moncton constituency.

EMPLOYMENT OF EXECUTIVE AND SPECIAL ASSISTANTS

Question No. 2,790—Mr. McKinnon:

By ministry, from December 31, 1972, what are the names of all those who were employed as executive assistants and special assistants to Ministers and of these (a) which ones were also employed by the government in any capacity as of December 31, 1976 (b) what were their (i) positions at that time (ii) remuneration?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): With regard to the names of those employed as executive assistants and special assistants to Ministers since December 31, 1972, see the replies to the following Questions: Nos: 1,028, ordered May 14, 1973; 42, ordered March 26, 1975; 518, ordered April 9, 1975; 1,204, ordered July 30, 1975. It is not possible to provide the remainder of the information in the form requested.

CANADIAN SHIPYARDS SUBSIDIZED BY I.T.C.

Question No. 2,794—Mr. Lambert (Bellechasse):

1. During the past three years, have the Canadian shipyards subsidized by the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce been used and, if so (a) by which countries (b) how many ships were (i) built (ii) renovated?

2. Have ships been renovated in these shipyards following an accident and, if so, how many?

Mr. Hugh Poulin (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): In so far as the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce is concerned: 1. Listed are the names of the companies that have received subsidies for the construction of vessels for export completed during the fiscal years 1974/75-1976/77, the number of vessels subsidized and the country where the vessels were registered:

Shipbuilder	No. of Vessels	Country of Registration

CBC—GUIDELINES FOR ALLOTMENT OF TIME FOR MPS

Question No. 2,825—Mr. Jones:

1. Are there guidelines laid down by the CBC for allotment of time for Members of Parliament to appear on such programmes as the Nation's Business and, if so, what are they?

2. Does the CBC, on such programmes as the Nation's Business, permit those not affiliated with any recognized political party to appear and, if not, for what reason?

3. What amount of money is allocated to the programme the Nation's Business for production crews, interviewers, researchers and other persons connected with it?

Hon. John Roberts (Secretary of State): I am informed by the CBC as follows: 1. CBC does not allot television time to individual members of parliament. The relevant policy reads as follows: (a) It is the policy of the corporation during the periods between election campaigns to make free time available to federal parties for political broadcasts on a national CBC network. (b) The corporation provides free network time to bona fide parties which are national in extent and which reflect a significant body of opinion throughout the country.

2. No. It is felt that only national parties should be represented on a national program. It is suggested that each party requesting time on such a program meet the following requirements: (i) Have a recognized national leader. (ii) Have a nation-wide organization established as the result of a national conference or convention. (iii) Form a group in the House of Commons under a recognized leader to whom the house has accorded privileges in the conduct of parliamentary business.

(iv) Have sought the election of candidates in at least three of the provinces and have put into the field at least one candidate for every four constituencies in the immediately preceding general election.

3. It has not been customary to require the CBC to provide such information as the costs of programs. However, the budget of "The Nation's Business" is minimal.

GRANT OF $300,000 to A.C.F.O.

Question No. 2,827—Mr. Jones

1. Did the French speaking Association of Ontario or the counterparts in each of the nine other provinces in Canada receive a grant of $300,000 and, if so, under what government programme?

2. Was the $300,000 for use by the Ontario Association only or was it to be divided among all ten provincial groups?

Hon. John Roberts (Secretary of State): 1. Only the French speaking Association of Ontario received such a grant of $300,000 in 1976-77. This grant was provided by the Official Language Minority Groups Directorate of the Secretary of State Department. The counterparts received grants apart from this but of a less amount.

2. The grant of $300,000 was given to the French speaking Association of Ontario for the implementation of its animation program and was not to be divided among all ten provincial groups.

Order Paper Questions

ORDER IN COUNCIL

Question No. 2,840—Mr. Jones:

1. What exactly is the purpose of the Order in Council?

2. Of the 3,327 Orders in Council in 1976, how many were brought before the House of Commons for discussion?

3. What is the general nature of the majority of Orders in Council?

4. Are Orders in Council brought before the House of Commons for discussion as general practice and, if not, for what reason?

5. Is there any government procedure which could replace the Order in Council and provide for a more democratic government?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): 1. An Order in Council is a legal instrument evidencing action by the Governor General acting by and with the advice of, or by and with the advice and consent of, or in conjunction with the Queen's Privy Council for Canada. Most Orders in Council are passed pursuant to specific authority set out in particular Acts of Parliament. A few are also made under the royal prerogative. In 1976, 3265 Orders in Council were passed pursuant to statute and 61 were passed pursuant to the royal prerogative.

2. Of the 3326 Orders in Council passed in 1976, 653 were statutory instruments within the meaning of the Statutory Instruments Act and as such stood referred to the Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and Other Statutory Instruments pursuant to section 26 of the Statutory Instruments Act.

3. Description of Orders in Council for the year 1976

	Number	Percentage
Appointments (includes re-appointments, resignations and fixing salaries)	750	22.55
Regulations and other Statutory Instruments	653	19.63
Lands and other property (includes exchanges, acquisitions, transfers to or from a Province, sales of lands under the Surplus Crown Assets Act and under the Veterans' Land Act)	481	14.46

MR. A. T. DAVISON OF PARKS CANADA

Question No. 2,841—Mr. Cossitt:

1. Did Mr. A. T. Davison of Parks Canada outline in a telex dated March 9, 1977 and sent to Mr. Mike McInnis, Chairman of the Advisory Board to the government on St. Lawrence Islands National Parks, information on grants-in-lieu of taxes to municipalities as a result of Parks Canada being involved with land contained therein and, if so (a) how are such grants-in-lieu of taxes determined (b) does the Treasury Board accept provincial assessment procedures (c) as an example, what would the grant be for 200 acres assessed at $3,000 with the local tax rate at 100 mills and the municipal tax payable being $300 per annum (d) is land considered "developed" at the start or at the completion of development (e) how is the necessary degree of development determined, who makes the decision and can it be reviewed?

2. Did Mr. Davison's telex state "it is possible in addition that the Act will be revised in the next couple of years to provide for more liberal tax grant arrangements for National Park lands. We are continuing to work with the Department of Finance on that possibility" and (a) if so, have any steps been taken as yet in this direction (b) if not, when will such steps be taken?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Departments of Indian Affairs and Northern Development and Finance as follows: 1. Yes. (a) In accordance with the Municipal Grants Act as administered by the Department of Finance. (b) Property owned by the Crown in right of Canada is not taxable property, but the municipal or provincial assessor may place an assessed value for such property on the assessment roll. This valuation will be accepted by the Minister of Finance for purposes of determining the amount of a grant in lieu of real property taxes on property which is eligible for a grant provided that its amount is deemed to be fair and equitable in relation to the valuation of similar taxable property within the same assessment jurisdiction. In practice, values of federal property are most likely to be in line with those for taxable property where the municipal or provincial assessment authority has used the same "procedures", i.e., the same steps and the same methods, in placing values on federal property that it has used for taxable property. (c) If $3,000 is deemed to be a fair and equitable value for 200 acres of federal land which is subject to grant in lieu of real property taxes, the grant would be $300 per annum when computed at a local tax rate of 100 mills. Grants are based upon the full mill rate in nearly all instances. However, a lower rate would be used if the government is making separate payments for a particular local service. Thus, in a few instances, the federal government makes special arrangements to pay for the cost of schooling of children of federal employees living on federal property. In such instances, the amount of the grant would be determined without reference to the school portion of the tax rate in order to avoid paying twice for the same service. (d) At the completion. (e) (i) Developed lands are considered as being lands acquired by Parks Canada which are being used for the purposes for which they were intended to be used, i.e., public use of the land is available in a manner compatible to the development of a national park or historic site or park. (ii) Parks Canada in consultation with the Department of Finance. (iii) Decisions on the designation of developed/undeveloped category would be open to review to ensure that decisions have been made in accordance with established guidelines upon reasonable request.

2. Yes.

TAR SANDS RESERVES

Question No. 2,842—Mr. Brisco:

1. What are the total known tar sands reserves in Canada?

2. How long will they last at present and predicted future rates of consumption?

Hon. Alastair Gillespie (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): The Department of Energy, Mines and Resources reports as follows:

1. It is estimated that 26.5 billion barrels of synthetic crude may be recovered from the mineable portion of the tar sands, using existing mining, upgrading technology, and under appropriate economic conditions. The extent of additional recoveries from a total resource in place of 789 billion barrels will depend on technological progress in mining and in-situ recovery methods and the extraction costs.

2. The only volumes of reserves from the tar sands, expressed in terms of recoverable upgraded synthetic oil, are those today within economic reach and the two plants now operating or under construction. This volume is 2 billion barrels; at current and projected production rates, the reserves available to these plants would last approximately 25 years.

NATURAL GAS RESERVES

Question No. 2,843—Mr. Brisco:

1. What are the total known natural gas reserves in Canada exclusive of the Arctic?

2. How long will they last at present and predicted future rates of consumption?

Hon. Alastair Gillespie (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): The Department of Energy, Mines and Resources reports as follows: 1. Canada's proven reserves of natural gas (exclusive of Arctic) total 61.4 trillion cubic feet.

2. The reserves noted in 1 above will provide gas supplies for many years into the future. However, the limiting factor with regard to meeting all of our required needs at any point in time is the potential rate of production rather than the size of the remaining reserves. Present estimates suggest that production rates possible from presently known reserves may fall short of meeting all Canadian needs before the mid-1980's. If production was not a limiting factor the reserves noted would meet present and projected needs for about 19 years. In making this estimate no allowance has been made for new reserves that will be found and it was assumed that: 1. There will be no change in exports, currently about 1 trillion cubic feet a year; 2. that domestic demand will increase by approximately 3 per cent a year.

OIL RESERVES

Question No. 2,844—Mr. Brisco:

1. What are the total known oil reserves in Canada exclusive of the Arctic?

2. How long will they last at present and predicted future rates of consumption?

Hon. Alastair Gillespie (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): The Department of Energy, Mines and Resources reports as follows: 1. Canadian proved oil reserves as of January 1, 1976 amounted to 6,474.3 million barrels, exclusive of the tar sands and related resources.

2. The reserves noted in 1 above will provide oil supplies for many years into the future. However, the limiting factor with regard to meeting all of our required needs at any point in time is the potential rate of production rather than the size of the remaining reserves. The production capacity currently available is already less than that required to meet total Canadian demand. Therefore, while the present reserves will be meeting a portion of our needs for many years into the future, that portion will be a smaller and smaller percentage of our requirements. If production was not a limiting factor the reserves noted would meet present and projected needs for approximately 12 years. This estimate is based on the assumption of an average annual rate of growth in domestic consumption of 2 percent compared to 5 percent over the past 15 years, and a complete phase-out of exports to the United States by 1981.

LAC ST. JEAN INTERNATIONAL CROSSING (SWIMMING) COMPETITION

Question No. 2,847—Mr. Gauthier (Roberval):

Did the Department of Manpower and Immigration (a) accept (b) carry-out projects in Roberval in connection with the Lac St. Jean International Crossing (Swimming) Competition and, if so, in each case (i) which projects (ii) in what amount, each year since the creation of the contest?

Hon. Bud Cullen (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): (a) Yes. (b) Yes. (i), (ii) See list below. Subject: Breakdown of the participation of the Local Initiatives Program in the Lake St. John International Crossing (Swimming) Competition since 1974. Year 1973-74, Project 3H-4863; Title: Construction of bleachers and improvements at the finishing line of the crossing. Grant: $17,280; Year 1974-1975, Project AH-3608-9; Title: Construction of a wharf. Grant: $17,262; Year 1975-1976, Project BH-5644; Title: Cultural and sports promotion of the 22nd Crossing; Grant: $21,413; Year 1976-1977, Project CH-3695; Title: Development of grounds at the marina; Grant: $48,110.

Order Paper Questions

SUBSIDIES TO CITY OF ROBERVAL

Question No. 2,848—Mr. Gauthier (Roberval):

Since 1956, has the Department of Regional Economic Expansion granted subsidies to the City of Roberval for the construction of a breakwater and rampart, directly or through programmes such as the Winter Capital Projects Programme and, if so, what was the amount annually?

Mr. Ed. Lumley (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): The reply for the Department of Regional Economic Expansion is as follows: DREE was not created until April 1, 1969, and since that time the department has not provided any funds for the construction of a breakwater or rampart in Roberval.

CBC—ANNUAL CONSUMPTION OF PROCESSING AND PRINTING 16 MILLIMETER FILMS IN BRITISH COLUMBIA

Question No. 2,849—Mr. Lee:

From 1973 to 1977, what was the annual consumption of processing and printing services for 16 millimetre film, in terms of dollars and footage, by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation in British Columbia?

Hon. John Roberts (Secretary of State): I am informed by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation as follows: Fiscal years: 1972-73, $281,263; 1973-74, 297,465; 1974-75, 292,-426; 1975-76, 296,966; 1976-77, 338,658. These figures include other film laboratory services such as edge numbering, sound mixing and transfer. No cumulative record is maintained of film footage processed and printed, and this information cannot be extracted readily or without an inordinate amount of work, time and expense.

CNR PENSION TRUST FUND

Question No. 2,850—Mr. McKenzie:

1. Did the Superintendent of Insurance, in 1967, approve a 60 year period for CNR to pay off their debt to the employees' Pension Trust Fund and, if so, for what reason?

2. Was this an unusually long period of time when the Pension Benefits Standards Act required payment in full by October 1, 1967 and, if it is not, for what reason?

3. Did CNR, upon receiving permission to pay off their $671 million obligation over a period of 60 years on an amortized basis ($29,255 annually), increase the interest rate from 4 per cent to 7½ per cent thus reducing their debt to $300 million and, if so, for what reason?

4. How was the 7½ per cent interest rate arrived at?

5. Was the Superintendent of Insurance aware that the change was to be made at the time he was asked to approve the 60 year repayment period and, if not, was he subsequently informed that this change was being made and given the reasons for it?

6. What information was the Superintendent of Insurance given concerning this matter and what was his response to the CNR Pension Trust Fund?

7. Is this type of change a common occurrence or was this a unique situation?

8. Did the change create a paper surplus of $371,000,000 which would not have to be paid into the pension fund account by CNR and are the pension funds being held owned 100 per cent by employees and pensioners and, if so, did (a) the employees and pensioners receive 100 per cent of the paper surplus and, if not, for what reason (b) CNR receive any part of the paper surplus in their position as a trustee and, if so, for what reason?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Departments of Finance and Transport as follows: General Comments: From the questions, it would appear that there may not be a common understanding as to the nature of funding under the Pension Benefits Standards Act. Accordingly, so that Canadian National's answers may be meaningful, its understanding is stated as follows: the term "Fully Funded", when applied to a pension plan, describes one which has assets which, with their earnings, are sufficient to provide for all pension and other benefits payable under the terms of the plan in respect of service of employees and former employees; and "Unfunded Liability" is the amount by which the assets of the plan are required to be augmented in order to make it fully funded. It follows, then, that an unfunded liability is not a fixed sum of money, but rather an estimate, prepared by independent professional actuaries, of the amount which, at a particular time, would have to be added to the trust fund in order to make that fund, together with its earnings, adequate to provide for payment of all pension benefits payable under the terms of the plan. In making such an estimate, the actuary bases his opinion upon assumptions related to life expectancies of employees and pensioners, and their spouses, anticipated earnings of the fund, the rate of inflation, and the anticipated rate of change in salary levels. Each of these factors varies, from time-to-time; at intervals of not more than three years each, a plan must be reviewed to establish, among other things, the amount of the unfunded liability arising out of a change in the actuarial methods or bases, and the experience deficiency or surplus, if any. 1. No. A sixty-year period was permitted by the Regulations for Crown corporations.

2. When the Act became effective on October 1, 1967, Crown corporations were permitted a period of sixty years to liquidate deficits that existed on October 1, 1967; other employers having pension plans subject to that Act were permitted a period of twenty-five years.

3 and 4. As at December 31, 1968, on the recommendation of its independent consulting actuaries and investment advisors, reflecting more realistically investment and wage trends, the earlier assumption with respect to investment income was revised from 4 per cent to 7½ per cent; and a 4 per cent wage inflation factor was, for the first time, built into the assumptions. The actuaries concluded that the amount of the unfunded liability of the CN pension plan, as at that date, was, in fact, approximately $300 million rather than the $671 million which had been previously estimated.

5. The Superintendent of Insurance was not aware, on October 1, 1967, of any intention to change the interest rate used to value the obligations under the pension plan. When the change was made in 1968, the Superintendent was aware of the change and was given the reasons for it.

6. Information was given to the Superintendent of Insurance concerning the rate of interest being earned on the assets in the fund and the rate of interest expected to be earned in the future in the light of investments currently being made. Discussions took place with the actuary responsible for the valuation. The choice of the interest rate to be used was the responsibility of the actuary, not of the Superintendent of Insurance.

7. It is common to change the interest rate used in the valuation of a pension plan when the general level of interest rates is changing. It should be borne in mind that under pension plans such as that of the CNR, the pension benefits of retired employees are determined by a formula that is based on the employees' salary and years of service, not on the investment income of the fund. The contributions by employees are also fixed by a formula related to each employee's earnings: the balance of the cost is met by the employer. If interest rates rise, the employer's cost is reduced; if they fall, his costs are increased.

8. All that occurred in 1968 was a change in the estimate of the amount which would be required to liquidate the initial unfunded liability. It did not create any surplus funds or assets. Accordingly, there was no surplus to distribute or dispose of. All of the assets of the Pension Trust Fund are held in trust to provide for the payment of benefits pursuant to the terms of the CNR pension plans.

INTRANSIT WAREHOUSE IN NORTH SYDNEY

Question No. 2,854—Mr. Jones:

1. What is the purpose of the intransit warehouse, funded partially by the Department of Transport, recently opened in North Sydney?

2. Will the warehouse service countries other than France?

3. What are the details of the funding and operation of such a warehouse?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): 1. The purpose of the warehouse is to accommodate inbound and outbound foreign and domestic cargo shipped through North Sydney.

2. The warehouse is a public shed and as such will serve general cargo to and from any country.

3. Transport Canada funded the construction of the warehouse at a cost of $101,123.58 and will operate it as a public facility. Gateway Marine Services Ltd. of North Sydney and Armement Paturel Frères of St. Pierre et Miquelon will be the main users of the warehouse and have signed an agreement with Transport Canada regarding their use of the facility.

FEDERAL TAX ON LIFE INSURANCE POLICIES

Question No. 2,856—Mr. Rynard:

1. Is there a federal tax on an insurance policy of a 25 year old man, dying at age 50 for a (a) $100,000 whole life (b) $50,000 whole life (c) $50,000 term (d) $100,000 term life with wife as beneficiary (e) $200,000 term with wife as beneficiary and, if so, in each, what (i) is the tax (ii) premiums are tax deductible (iii) countries allow insurance premiums as tax deductions (iv) countries have no tax on life insurance policies?

2. Since the Government of Ontario has a two percent tax on premiums, was there any consultation with the Province before the federal tax legislation was considered?

3. What consideration, if any, was given to larger policies being written to offset the loss in value of the purchasing dollar?

4. What consideration, if any, was given to the difference in the gain or cash value or endowment proceeds to the death benefit?

5. On what basis was a death benefit considered as a cash gain over the fact that it was payment for the loss entailed by future earning power or partnership?

6. On what basis was it concluded that money borrowed on a life insurance policy was not used for investment to earn income?

7. How much consideration was given to the incentive of individual security or the individual attempting to provide for his family and his own security?

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (Minister of Finance): 1. (a) A proposal introduced in the 1977 budget and incorporated in Bill C-56 will treat as income when a life insurance policy is terminated by death the amount, if any, by which the cash surrender value of the policy immediately before death exceeds the cost of the policy. The aggregate of such gains will be reduced by $10,000 if the policyholder was the person whose life was insured. In the absence of data as to the cash surrender value and the cost of the policy (generally premiums paid minus policy dividends) neither the amount to be included in income nor the tax can be determined. (b) Same as (a). (c) The proposal will only apply to cash value insurance, consequently it has no application for term insurance—the proceeds of which remain exempt from income tax. (d) Same as (c). (e) Same as (d). The tax treatment of life insurance proceeds and of companies varies from country to country and it is not possible to give a listing of the countries that allow premiums as deductions. There is a tax of one form or another, either on the policyholder or on the insurance company, in most countries.

2. No.

3. The budget proposal was designed to tax the investment income earned on a life insurance policy. This form of income will be treated as any other form of investment income. The inflation factor is recognized by the indexing of the personal income tax.

4. Only the portion of the policy proceeds that represent investment income is subject to tax. The portion of the proceeds that represent a mortality gain remains exempt from tax.

5. See answer to question 3.

6. Interest paid on a policy loan is to be treated as a premium thus serving to increase the cost of the policy and reducing the taxable gain if any. Under the existing rules if a policyholder paid interest on a policy loan, the proceeds of which were used for a purpose other than to earn income, he was not entitled to any tax relief in respect of the interest. The amendment will ensure that all policyholders who pay interest on policy loans will receive the same income tax treatment in respect of that interest.

7. See answer to question 3.

BELLEVILLE HARBOUR COMMISSIONERS—SALARIES

Question No. 2,857—Mr. Robinson:

What is the salary of the Belleville Harbour Commissioners?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): Chairman, $1,000—$1,250 annually; Commissioner (acting as secretary), $750—$1,000 annually; Other Commissioner, $500—$750 annually.

COMMUNITY AIRPORT FACILITIES FUND

Question No. 2,858—Mr. Brisco:

For each year 1970 to 1977, what amount of federal funding was provided to the Community Airport Facilities Fund and what was the number of applications for assistance under the programme in each year?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): (a) Actual Capital Expenditures: 1970-71, 829,628; 1971-72, 932,000*; 1972-73, 1,504,697; 1973-74, 2,082,915; 1974-75, 1,126,119; 1975-76, 1,467,573; 1976-77, 1,555,899. (b) Number of Applications Received: 1970-71, 25; 1971-72, 20; 1972-73, 47; 1973-74, 41; 1974-75, 68; 1975-76, 59; 1976-77, 41; 1977-78, 18 (to July 15).

BILINGUAL PUBLIC SERVANTS

Question No. 2,861—Mr. McKenzie:

1. How many bilingual public servants in departments, agencies and Crown corporations are required to use a second official language in the performance of their duties?

2. What is the total amount of compensation the government owes to such public servants who fall under the agreement that was reached with employee unions that the government would pay compensation retroactive to November 1, 1976?

3. Did the Prime Minister receive a letter dated June 21, 1977 from Mr. C. L. Lockhart, President of the Professional Institute of the Public Service of Canada, in regard to the implementation of compensation for bilingual public servants and, if so, what was the response to the letter?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Treasury Board Secretariat and the Prime Minister's Office as follows: 1. For those departments and agencies for which the Treasury Board is the employer, the information recorded in the Official Languages Information System as of July 1, 1977 indicates that there were 68,643 positions identified as bilingual, or requiring the use of both official languages. Of this total, 16,253 bilingual positions were vacant and 52,390 bilingual positions were filled. Of the latter, 40,954 incumbents met the language requirements of their position.

2. The amount of compensation to be provided to qualified employees required to work in both official languages will be the subject of consultations with employee unions. These consultations are just about to begin. Consequently, the total amount owing, in meeting the commitment that payment would be made retroactive to November 1, 1976, has not yet been determined.

3. Yes. A response is being prepared. The exchange is private, but Mr. Lockhart may wish to make the reply public.

PROPANE GAS REFRIGERATORS

Question No. 2,863—Mr. Halliday:

1. Are propane gas refrigerators manufactured in Canada and, if so, in what locations and by whom?

2. Are there custom tariffs or other duties on the importation of such refrigerators and, if so, what are they?

[Mr. Lang.]

Mr. Hugh Poulin (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): In so far as the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce is concerned: 1. According to the Electrical and Electronics Manufacturers Association of Canada, there are no regular sized propane gas refrigerators manufactured in this country. However, the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce is aware of one company, Escort Cooler Co. Ltd., 728 Dundas East, Mississauga, Ontario, that manufactures a light weight portable refrigerator which has a capacity of 1.3 cubic feet and can be powered by propane gas, 12 volt or 110 volt electricity.

2. Tariffs on non-electric refrigerators according to Schedule A are as follows: British Preferential Tariff 20 percent; Most Favoured Nations Tariff 27½ percent; General Tariff 30 percent.

LEASED PROPERTIES IN NATIONAL CAPITAL REGION

Question No. 2,864—Mrs. Pigott:

1. Does the government lease properties in the National Capital Region and, if so, how many?

2. What person, agency or department is responsible for tabulating and overseeing properties leased by the government?

3. What are the annual rental costs for the new Industry, Trade and Commerce Building at 240 Sparks Street, Ottawa and what is the length of the lease?

4. In what year was final approval granted for the construction of the Building?

Hon. Judd Buchanan (Minister of Public Works): 1. Yes, 223 properties leased by Department of Public Works.

2. Department of Public Works tabulates and oversees only those properties under DPW responsibility.

3. $6,100,000. Term of lease—35 years.

4. 1974.

OTTAWA BUILDINGS—LEASES, COMMITMENTS AND PENALTIES

Question No. 2,865—Mrs. Pigott:

1. Will the government be required to pay any penalties for breaking office leases in Ottawa buildings in which it will leave vacant space as a result of departmental moves to Hull and, if so, what will be the approximate total amount of such penalties?

2. Is the government committed to any lease payments in the Ottawa offices to be vacated as a result of the moves to Hull beyond the date of each of the respective moves and, if so, what is the duration and annual cost of each lease commitment?

Hon. Judd Buchanan (Minister of Public Works): 1. No, the department does not plan to buy out any leases at the present time; therefore, there will be no penalties.

2. The department is not committed to any lease payments as a result of the moves to Hull. Where leases continue beyond the expected moving dates of the departments to be relocated to Hull, the vacated space will be reused by other government departments and agencies.

UNIVERSITY OF MONCTON

Question No. 2,867—Mr. Jones:

1. Does the University of Moncton recreational and sports facilities receive funds from the government and, if so (a) from which department (b) in what amount (c) what is the percentage of these funds in relation to the whole?

2. What steps are or have been taken to assure that there is no discrimination by reason of race, religion or language in the use of the government funded facilities?

3. Is the government aware of any discrimination in the use of the facilities in the summer of 1977 and, if so, have any corrective steps been taken?

4. Will the government continue funding where there is discrimination by reason of language?

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of National Health and Welfare): 1. Yes; (a) Department of National Health and Welfare, Fitness and Amateur Sport Branch; (b) $100,000; (c) 5 per cent of total national program.

2. Funds are provided for facilities which can be used by all citizens in the area and particularly all university students enrolled in the institution concerned.

3. No.

4. There is no other contribution to be provided to University of Moncton.

UIC—KEY DATA CANADA

Question No. 2,868—Mr. Cossitt:

Has Key Data Canada ever made use of the Unemployment Insurance Commission's computer system in Quebec and, if so, in each case (a) on what dates (b) at what times of day (c) for what lengths of time (d) what are the names and job designations of all officials authorizing such use and specifically did Mr. Robert Kingsley, Mr. Dorval Mainville or Mr. Gabriel Beland have anything to do with the arrangements with Key Data Canada (e) what is the total sum of money paid for the use of the computer system and to whom was it paid (f) what are the names and job designations of all employees who worked overtime or otherwise for such purposes and, in each case (i) what were they paid (ii) who paid them (iii) was the money paid in cash in envelopes addressed to each employee or were cheques involved?

Hon. Bud Cullen (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): The matter has been referred to the RCMP for investigation. Upon completion of the investigation the question will be answered.

REMOVAL OF FLUORESCENT LIGHTS

Question No. 2,869—Mr. McKenzie:

1. Were any fluorescent lights removed from the Canadian Grain Commission Building at 303 Main Street, Winnipeg, Manitoba as an energy conservation measure or for any other reason and, if so (a) how many (b) on what date (c) at what cost?

2. Were the lights disposed of and (a) if so, in what manner (b) if not, have they been stored for future use?

Hon. Judd Buchanan (Minister of Public Works): 1. Yes; (a) 3,695; (b) June 14-22, 1977; (c) $1,147.00.

2. Yes. (a) Approximately 3,600 fluorescent tubes were destroyed. These lamps had less than one year of useful life remaining, therefore would have been a net liability to the department if placed in storage and used for relamping. (b) Approximately 100 fluorescent tubes with a significant remaining useful life were retained in storage for future use.

"THE 1976 INCOME, ASSETS AND DEBT QUESTIONNAIRE"

Question No. 2,870—Mr. Bawden:

1. What is the purpose of the Statistics Canada questionnaire "The 1976 Income, Assets and Debt Questionnaire"?

2. (a) Is the information confidential to Statistics Canada (b) is the information distributed among various departments and, if so, which departments?

3. Are there any penalties for failing to respond to the Questionnaire and, if so (a) what are they (b) have any persons been prosecuted?

4. (a) How many questionnaires were distributed in Canada (b) how many were returned answered (c) how many persons refused to answer?

5. What procedure does the Department follow when a person refuses to answer the Questionnaire?

6. Are respondents informed that they need not answer the Questionnaire or are they told that they must answer it or face a fine or imprisonment?

7. Are any safety provisions taken by the Department to ensure that irresponsible persons do not get their hands on this very confidential and private information and, if so, what are they?

8. Do the enumerators provide evidence to the respondents as to their authority to receive the information?

9. Has the Department instituted any measures to ensure that its employees do not pass the information on to other government departments, private firms or individuals and, if so, what are they?

10. What is the total cost of the Questionnaire Programme and what is the cost per Questionnaire?

Mr. Hugh Poulin (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): Statistics Canada reports the following: 1. The only way in which factual information on incomes, assets and debts can be obtained on a confidential basis is through the Survey of Consumer Finance. Similar surveys on the asset and debt situation of Canadian families were taken in 1956, 1959, 1964 and 1970. There are strong indications that considerable changes have taken place in the financial situation of Canadians in the past seven years and a much needed update is required for policy and research purposes in many fields of government, labour and private enterprise. The results of the survey will also indicate which groups of the Canadian population are most affected by inflation. It should be noted that Statistics Canada collects income data annually through household surveys.

2. (a) Yes; (b) Government departments only receive data in a form which does not allow identification of respondents. They have no access to the original questionnaire.

3. (a) Under the Statistics Act 1971 there can be prosecutions for failure to respond to a Statistics Canada questionnaire. The maximum penalties for a breach of the Statistics Act are fine not exceeding $500 or imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months, or both. (b) In sample surveys of individuals, Statistics Canada has not found it necessary to prosecute as it is the bureau's policy to seek the voluntary cooperation of the public. This has been successful. There have been no cases of prosecution in sample household surveys.

4. (a) Questionnaires were distributed to 17,500 households across the country. (b) and (c) The final response and non-response rates to this survey have not yet been calculated since processing procedures are still in progress. It should be noted that refusals are only one component of non-response. Other components include households in which Statistics Canada was unable to contact any member during the survey period or households which were not required to complete the survey due to special circumstances (e.g. serious illness in the household).

5. Persons who refuse to complete a questionnaire are contacted by supervising officials of the bureau. Any questions relative to the survey are answered and respondents are given a detailed explanation of the reasons why the information is being sought. These explanations usually result in completion of the questionnaire.

6. The interviewer does not inform respondents that the questionnaire need not be answered nor are they told by the interviewer they must answer it or face a fine or imprisonment.

7. The documents containing this information are held in a specially secured controlled access area, available only to employees with "a need to know" in pursuance of their duties. All these employees are sworn to secrecy under the Statistics Act with severe penalties for any breach.

8. Yes. Interviewers hold official Statistics Canada identification cards which are shown to each respondent before the interview takes place.

9. The Statistics Act provides for severe penalties on conviction of up to $1,000 fine and/or six months imprisonment for any divulgence of information by Statistics Canada staff obtained in the course of his/her duties.

10. The cost of collecting the information is estimated at $358,000 or $20 per household. Wages to temporary employees hired to carry out the survey account for a very large part of this amount.

ONE PARENT ASSISTANCE SUBSIDIES IN ABITIBI

Question No. 2,872—Mr. Laprise:

Since 1972, have one-parent families assistance subsidies been granted in the Constituency of Abitibi and, if so (a) how many (b) in which locations (c) of what amount, in each case?

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of National Health and Welfare): In keeping with the nature of the cost-shared programs administered by the Department of National Health and Welfare under the Canada Assistance plan, information of this type would be available from provincial authorities only.

AUDITOR GENERAL'S SALARY

Question No. 2,873—Mr. Robinson:

What is the salary of the Auditor General?

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (Minister of Finance): $60,000 per annum, effective April 1, 1977 (in accordance with Section 56(2) of the Financial Administration Act).

[Mr. Poulin.]

AIR CANADA FLIGHT TO CANADA

Question No. 2,874—Mr. Cossitt:

1. Did Air Canada cease operating its Sunday day-time flight to England and, if so (a) on what date (b) for what reason?

2. What was the filled seat capacity percentage during the past four years the flight was in operation?

3. Will the flight be re-established and, if so, on what date?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): The management of Air Canada advises as follows:

1. Yes. (a) October 24, 1976. (b) The day-time flight was a more costly operation than the overnight service because time differences and airport curfews made it necessary for the aircraft to layover in London during the late evening and early morning hours. Also, passenger demand on the transAtlantic routes was for wide-body aircraft and to have placed one of these aircraft on a day-time flight would have made the operation even less economical.

2. Data for this complete period is not available. However, during the last 12 months of operation the day-time flight averaged a 50% load factor.

3. There are no immediate plans to re-establish a day-time service. However, a future operation, subject to market conditions, demand and economics, cannot be precluded.

REGIMENTAL TIE

Question No. 2,880—Mr. O'Sullivan:

1. Do the Governor General's Footguards have a regimental tie and, if so (a) is it available for purchase to members of the regiment and at what cost (b) is it available for purchase to others and, if so, to whom?

2. Has the Post Office Department recently issued to some of its employees a tie similar to that worn as the regimental tie of the Governor General's Footguards and, if so (a) is the tie identical and, if not, what is the difference (b) what is the cost per tie to each employee (c) how many have been issued or sold to employees (d) at the time of its purchase, were departmental officials aware of the similarity of the tie to that of the Governor General's Footguards (e) has the Department had any communication from the Department of National Defence concerning the tie?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Departments of National Defence and Post Office as follows: 1. Yes. (a) It is available to members of the Regiment at the regimental kitshop at $4./tie. (b) The tie can be bought by anyone at certain civilian/military tailors.

2. Since 1976, the Post Office Department has issued items of clothing to counter sales clerks consisting of maroon and blue jackets, white shirts and ties for males, and scarves for females. (a) There are two styles of ties issued: (1) Style A—three stripes running left to right. Width and colour of stripes: maroon, 1-1/8″; blue, 1-1/8″; white, 1/8″; (2) Style B—two stripes running left to right. Width and colour of stripes: maroon, 1″; blue, 1″; The Governor General's Footguards regimental tie has two stripes, maroon and navy, each 1″ wide—stripes run right to left (opposite direction to Post Office tie). There is a similarity between this tie and the Post Office tie Style B, but they are not identical. (b) Cost per tie

$1.47. Employees issued with two ties each year, one of each style. (c) Approximately 15,000 ties of each style issued. No sales. (d) Post Office officials were not aware of similarity between Style B tie and Governor General's Footguards tie when the style was originally approved. (e) No communication has taken place with the Department of National Defence concerning this tie.

GOVERNMENT AIRCRAFT

Question No. 2,881—Mr. Reid:

What is the government's policy on the use of government aircraft by Parliamentarians and what are the costs of such use?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Departments of Transport and National Defence as follows: 1. For approximately 30 years, Transport Canada and the Department of National Defence have operated aircraft for the use of cabinet ministers of successive governments. This is part of the responsibility shared by the two departments for providing airlifts for Members of the Royal Family, the Governor General, the Prime Minister, Ministers of the Crown, foreign dignitaries visiting Canada, Parliamentary Committees, or delegations on official business and, occasionally, senior federal officials on government business. The flight operations of Transport Canada are confined mainly to the North American continent, while the Department of National Defence provides flights both within North America and overseas.

2. The cost for flying the aircraft, the number of aircraft now in service, and their passenger capacity are as follows:

	Type	No. in Service	Passenger Capacity	Operating Cost per hour 1975-76
Transport Canada	Jetstar	3	8	$553.00
	Viscount	2	22	415.00
	King Air	1	4	118.00
D.N.D.	Boeing 707	5	170	$1,241.00
	Cosmopolitan	5(7)	38	547.00
	Falcon	4	8	751.00

The hourly cost figures stated above include the incremental costs incurred by operating the aircraft, rather than leaving them idle on the ground. They therefore include the cost of fuel and oil consumed and an annually calculated hourly cost allocation covering standard prorated maintenance, repair and overhaul costs, ground handling charges and landing fees and overtime or temporary duty expenses of the crews.

3. The following table shows the time required for flights between Ottawa and different points in Canada: see below.

4. The use of government owned aircraft by ministers of the Crown has been considered by successive governments to be legitimate use of public funds. The central government of a country as large as Canada cannot rely exclusively on commercial services for the travel requirements of cabinet ministers and/or visiting foreign dignitaries. Ministers' responsibilities are not limited to the Ottawa area. They must be able, with a minimum of delay, to travel to various areas of the country to carry out those responsibilities, and frequently require travel facilities on short notice. Government owned aircraft make it possible for ministers to accept engagements in distant parts of Canada and yet to be in Ottawa for important work as late as possible before and as soon as possible after the engagement. Moreover, they allow ministers to work in privacy while travelling and, particularly for the Prime Minister and foreign dignitaries, to maintain the level of security required without causing inconvenience to the travelling public on commercial airlines (see page 8618 of Hansard for December 11th, 1973). Guidelines governing the use of government aircraft by cabinet ministers were first established in June, 1963, to formalize the practices generally adhered to over the previous years. These guidelines state that ministers on government business may use government aircraft: (a) when the flight is being made to a point where there is no commercial air service; where no space is available on a commercial air service; or where because of difficulties in routings or time tables, substantial savings of essential time can be made by using departmental aircraft in place of commercial service; (b) where sudden changes in plans require emergency movement; (c) in instances where ministers are travelling with official parties of some size which need to travel together and where advantage can be gained by use of a specific aircraft. In the cabinet system of government, a minister's responsibilities extend well beyond the operations of his department across the country. Ministers must meet with provincial and local government officials and with private groups to explain and develop programmes and policies. In addition, ministers have a major responsibility for ensuring that Canadians across the country remain informed about government actions, and therefore often accept speaking engagements outside Ottawa. As far as the use of government aircraft is concerned, a minister's responsibility for his political party is considered separate from his ministerial responsibilities. Naturally, however, the demands placed on a minister's time by constituency work complicate scheduling and make it all the more important that essential time not be sacrificed by inefficient travel arrangements.

5. When ministers use government aircraft, they may choose the individuals who will accompany them. In most cases these individuals are members of the minister's staff or departmental officials. However, ministers often extend invitations to members of parliament travelling to the same destination and sometimes to newspeople interested in their activities and to other individuals.

6. Ministers and members of parliament and their dependents may also be provided space on regular DND flights within Canada and to Europe with the approval of the minister.

7. Government expenditures for DND and Transport flight operations are open to the scrutiny of parliament when estimates, public accounts, and reports of the Auditor General are considered by the appropriate committees of the House.

AIRCRAFT TO FREIGHT SERVICES

Question No. 2,884—Mr. Broadbent:

1. What is the number of DND aircraft, in the service of Air Transport Command, available to service points in (a) Northern Ontario (b) Northern Quebec (c) the Eastern Arctic?

2. How many are equipped to carry freight and, in each case, what is the type of aircraft, its load capacity and base airport?

[Mr. Goodale.]

3. What is the average number of trips per month, carrying freight, to (a) Northern Ontario (b) Northern Quebec (c) the Eastern Arctic?

4. What is the average excess capacity by weight and volume per flight (freight) to (a) Northern Ontario (b) Northern Quebec (c) the Eastern Arctic?

Hon. Barney Danson (Minister of National Defence): 1. (a), (b), (c) and 2. The Department of National Defence does not have a scheduled freight service to Northern Ontario, Northern Quebec and the Eastern Arctic. Air Transport Group has the following type and number of aircraft capable of carrying freight into Canada's northern regions. CC130 Hercules—12 at CFB Trenton and 12 at CFB Edmonton; CC115 Buffalo—5 at CFB Trenton. Load Capacities: CC130 Hercules—Normal 30,000 lbs for 2,500 miles, maximum 45,000 lbs for 1,500 miles; CC115 Buffalo—Normal 4,000 lbs for 1,400 miles, maximum 10,000 lbs for 300 miles.

3. and 4. See Part 1 and 2 above.

P.M.'S TRIP TO WESTERN CANADA

Question No. 2,885—Mr. Cossitt:

1. What was the cost to the taxpayer of the Prime Minister's recent trip to Western Canada during which he met with the West German Chancellor, including the cost for all those accompanying him?

2. In addition to the meeting(s) with Chancellor Schmidt, what were the other places visited and functions attended and, in each case, which were of a political nature, in whole or in part, and who was the sponsoring organization?

3. Will the Liberal Party of Canada reimburse the public treasury for all portions of the trip that were not government business and (a) if so, on what date and in what amount (b) if not, for what reason?

4. What are the names and job designations of all persons travelling with the Prime Minister on each section of his trip?

5. Of the total cost of the trip, how much was for (a) the use of government owned aircraft and other transportation (b) food and drink by the Prime Minister and for those accompanying him?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President to the Privy Council): 1. to 5. See reply to question 2,881 answered today.

CBC INTERNATIONAL SERVICE

Question No. 2,886—Mr. Cossitt:

Did the statement of June 1977 entitled "Touchstone for the CBC" written by CBC President A. W. Johnson make any mention of the international service of CBC and, if not (a) for what reason (b) is it considered unimportant and unworthy of comment (c) is Mr. Johnson aware that certain questions concerning the international service have remained unanswered on the Order Paper during the First and Second Sessions of the 30th Parliament, at least up until the date this question was asked and, if so, what are the reasons for such a situation?

Hon. John Roberts (Secretary of State): I am informed by the CBC as follows: 1. No. (a), (b) Radio Canada International is considered an extremely important component of the CBC, but by no means all the services and plans of the corporation were mentioned in "Touchstone for the CBC". It was designed as a blueprint for the domestic broadcasting services.

In so far as the Secretary of State is concerned: 1. (c) The government takes responsibility for the answers it provides to questions and for the process involved in replying to such questions. It is not appropriate therefore to provide information about internal administrative arrangements.

STUDENT SUMMER EMPLOYMENT PROGRAM—1977

Question No. 2,887—Mr. Marshall:

1. With reference to the answer to Question No. 2,426, what is the breakdown, by province, of the number of students and allocation of funding for (a) reserve training (4,000 students at a planned cost of $6.029 million) (b) community assistance (1,450 students at a planned cost of $1.885 million) (c) cadet training (1,053 students at a planned cost of $2.998 million)?

2. Is KATIMAVIK a DND programme and, if not, which department is responsible for it?

Hon. Barney Danson (Minister of National Defence): 1. (a), (b) and (c); The data is presented in the following table. However, it is presented by regions rather than by provinces since actual expenditures by provinces will not be available till late October when final reports are received.

2. KATIMAVIK is administered by a private corporation formed for this purpose but funded by the government. This corporation reports to the government through the Hon. Barney Danson, Minister of National Defence.

NEWFOUNDLAND CROWN CORPORATION

Question No. 2,889—Mr. Marshall:

Have any proposals been made to the government by the Newfoundland Crown corporation established to oversee certain development aspects of its fishing industry and, if so, what are they?

Hon. Roméo LeBlanc (Minister of Fisheries and the Environment): No.

DEFOLIATION OF TREES

Question No. 2,894—Mr. Malone:

1. Was a Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development grant made to the Hobbema Indian Reserve, Alberta, for the defoliation of trees and, if so, what was the amount of the grant in (a) 1976 (b) 1977?

2. How many acres of trees were to be defoliated?

3. What chemical was to be used in the defoliation?

4. What risks or potential risks to the health of animals or humans can occur with such defoliation chemical?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Departments of Indian Affairs and Northern Development, Agriculture and National Health and Welfare as follows:

1. The Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development did not grant any funds to the Hobbema Indian reserve for the defoliation of trees in 1976 and 1977. This particular program was funded by the Montana Band (40 per cent) and the Province of Alberta (60 per cent).

2. Approximately 100 acres were defoliated.

3. The chemical used was 2-4D-20 Ester.

4. The Department of Agriculture is not aware of any risks or potential risks to the health of animals that might arise from the use of 2-4-D Ester when used in accordance with directions carried on labels registered under the authority of the Pest Control Products Act. In so far as the Department of National Health and Welfare is concerned: This chemical is the commonly used one in many products available in garden stores and plant nurseries. The pharmacology is not well characterized. Both the acute and chronic toxicities to laboratory animals are low, and there seems to be no significant difference between 2-4-D and its various salts and esters in terms of their action and potency. All animal species tested react similarly, and the acute oral LD50 value is in the range of 300 to 700 mg. per kg. (LD50 is the lethal dose that kills 50 percent of laboratority animals). Clinical reports of poisoning are rare. Peripheral neuropathy has been described in elderly patients who had percutaneous absorption of the spilled chemical. This condition has not been reported among persons occupationally exposed.

MANITOBA INSTITUTE OF MANAGEMENT

Question No. 2,895—Mr. Beatty:

1. As of July 13, 1977, was the Chairman of the Farm Credit Corporation a director of the Manitoba Institute of Management and, if not, on what date did he resign his directorship?

2. Did the Chairman of the Farm Credit Corporation sign a Declaration and Promise of Fidelity and Secrecy stating, in part, that he "will not hold an outside office or employment that could place on (him) demands inconsistent with (his) official duties or call in question (his) capacity to perform those duties in an objective manner," that he "will not hold directorships in associated or non-associated commercial corporations without the prior consent, in writing, of the Chairman of the Corporation whether or not such directorships are remunerated" and that he "will not accept or offer or agree to accept from a person having dealings with the Corporation, a commission, reward, advantage or benefit of any kind directly or indirectly by (himself) or through a member of (his) family or through anyone for (his) benefit, unless (he has) prior consent in writing from the Chairman of the Corporation; and (he is) aware that such action by an official or an employee of the government is an offence under Section 110(1)(c) of the Criminal Code" and, if so, on what date?

3. Did the Director of the Farm Credit Corporation, since his appointment, receive any commission, rewards, advantages or benefits from the Manitoba Institute of Management and, if so (a) on what date and in what form (b) did he disclose the information to the Minister of Agriculture or the Board of Directors of the Farm Credit Corporation (c) were such benefits received with the approval in writing of the (i) Minister of Agriculture (ii) Board of Directors of the Farm Credit Corporation?

[Mr. Malone.]

4. What are the regulations concerning the disclosure of outside directorships held by Order-in-Council appointees to the Ministers to whom they report and on what date did the Chairman of the Farm Credit Corporation first report his directorship with the Manitoba Institute of Management to the Minister of Agriculture?

Hon. E. F. Whelan (Minister of Agriculture): Farm Credit Corporation advises: 1. Yes.

2. No. The Declaration and Promise of Fidelity and Secrecy applies to employees of the corporation. As a governor in council appointee, Dr. Kristjanson is in compliance with the guidelines for such appointees. On December 18, 1973, the Prime Minister informed the House that persons appointed by the governor in council to senior positions in Crown corporations are subject to the same general guidelines, including those concerning outside directorships, as members of the cabinet. The guidelines for cabinet members were outlined to the House on July 18, 1973.

3. No. (a)(b)(c) N/A.

4. The Minister of Agriculture was informed on September 10, 1975.

ATOMIC ENERGY OF CANADA LIMITED—PAYMENTS TO AGENTS

Question No. 2,896—Mr. Lawrence:

For the fiscal year (a) 1974-75 (b) 1975-76 (c) 1976-77, how much did Atomic Energy of Canada Limited pay to (i) the Marubeni Corporation, Japan (ii) the Labkar Company Limited, Iran (iii) Roberto L. Lannes, Uruguay (iv) Kostas Karayannis, Greece, as an agent and what was the purpose of and services rendered for such payments?

Hon. Alastair Gillespie (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Atomic Energy of Canada Limited reports as follows:

	(a) 1974-75	(b) 1975-76	(c) 1976-77
Marubeni Corporation, (i) Japan	$86,484.75	$91,528.55	$64,384.84
Labkar Company (ii) Limited, Iran	4,830.16	38,831.24	2,993.60
Roberto L. Lannes, (iii) Uruguay	968.00	7,673.23	12,026.36
Kostas Karayannis, (iv) Greece	16,035.77	5,003.07	2,107.70

Payments to the agents in question represent commissions on sales of equipment and products relating to the medical and therapeutic application of ionizing radiation, principally for the treatment of cancer. The payments also comprise remunerations for their maintenance of capability and their responsibility to provide installation and servicing of the equipment sold while warranties are in force.

GOLDEN ARC PUBLISHING LTD.

Question No. 2,897—Mr. O'Sullivan:

1. Was a letter received by Sport Canada dated January 14, 1975, addressed to Dr. T. R. Bedecki, Director, from the honourable Member for Hamilton-Wentworth, enquiring as to the possibility of assistance for the continued publication of equestrian journals published by Golden Arc Publishing Ltd., Ancaster, Ontario and was a reply sent and, if not, for what reason?

2. Was a letter received by the (a) Secretary of State (b) Minister of Agriculture dated January 14, 1975, from the honourable Member for Hamilton-Wentworth, enquiring as to the possibility of assistance for the continued publication of equestrian journals by Golden Arc Publishing Ltd., Ancaster, Ontario and, in each case, did the reply indicate that such assistance was available under existing government programmes, either under the Department or programmes known to the Minister?

3. Has the Young Canada Works Programme funded the equestrian publication Equipoise in Hamilton, Ontario and, if so (a) how much was the grant (b) did the conditions of the grant allow the publication to accept and run advertisements free of charge in competition with privately published equestrian magazines?

4. How does the government reconcile the funding of an equestrian publication such as Equipoise with its refusal to assist the continued publication of other equestrian magazines such as those published by Golden Arc Publishing Ltd.?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Minister of State (Fitness and Amateur Sport), the Department of the Secretary of State, Agriculture and Employment and Immigration as follows: 1. Yes; a reply was sent to Golden Arc Publishing Ltd., on February 13, 1975.

2. (a) A letter dated January 14, 1975 from Mr. S. O'Sullivan, member for Hamilton-Wentworth was received by the former Secretary of State, the Hon. J. Hugh Faulkner. In reponse to Mr. O'Sullivan's query regarding the possibility of assistance for Golden Arc Publishing Limited, the Secretary of State replied on February 17, 1975 that aid to publishing ventures was available under the auspices of the Canada Council, but that such aid was limited to periodicals of either a literary, artistic or scholarly nature. It was suggested, therefore that a representative of Golden Arc Publishing Limited contact officials of the council to discuss the nature of the assistance available. Officials of the Canada Council advise that they were never approached in this regard. (b) Yes, the letter was received. The reply prepared by the department advised that Agriculture Canada has no program to provide financial assistance to the publishing industry. The reply further advised that the Canada Council administers a broad program of aid to the publishing industry of Canada.

3. Yes. (a) The project was funded for $8,265. (b) The publication may accept and run advertisements free of charge.

4. The Fitness and Amateur Sport Branch has not funded either the equestrian publication, "Equipoise", nor the equestrian journals published by Golden Arc Publishing Ltd. Neither the Secretary of State's department nor the Canada Council have funded the equestrian publication entitled "Equipoise."

GRANT AWARDED TO ENGLISH MINORITY IN THE PROVINCE OF QUEBEC

Question No. 2,898—Mr. Jones

Was a grant awarded to the English minority in the Province of Quebec similar to that recently awarded to La Société Franco-Manitobaine St. Boniface, Manitoba under the Official Language Minority Groups Directorate, Secretary of State Department and, if so, in what amount and to whom?

Hon. John Roberts (Secretary of State): Yes. Grants, totalling $93,875, were awarded to the English minority in the Province of Quebec as follows:

	1976-77
Quebec Farmer's Association	$20,100
Committee for Anglophone Social Action	36,775
Anglo-Québec en mutation	25,000
Pontiac Social Planning Council	12,000

DEPARTMENT OF NATIONAL DEFENCE TRAINING

Question No. 2,900—Mr. Jones:

Are there any provisions for the training of personnel to work in the new $3 million isolation unit to be built in Ottawa and, if so, what is the length and nature of the training programme?

Hon. Barney Danson (Minister of National Defence): The Department of National Defence has formulated a training plan that calls for continuous part-time training of sufficient numbers of doctors, nurses, medical assistants, X-Ray and laboratory technicians, and maintenance and housekeeping staff, to ensure rapid activation of the facility whenever needed. The plan calls for a small cadre of full-time supervisory and training personnel to develop and perfect the techniques necessary for effective nursing while maintaining absolute isolation of highly infective cases. These techniques are based on recent experience using presently available, less sophisticated equipment, and the experience of others in the U.S.A. and the U.K. The present training concept is to develop a basic course of several weeks duration for the large number of hospital staff potentially needed for full operation of the unit, to be followed by the periodic short refresher courses.

Question No. 2,903—Mr. McKenzie:

1. Did the Industrial Incentives Branch of the Department of Regional Economic Expansion commence use of the return reply card ER-2-7 titled "Let's Talk Business" and, if so (a) on what date (b) in what publications has it appeared and (i) on what dates (ii) at what cost?

2. Since its first appearance, how many responses have been received?

Order Paper Questions

Mr. Ed. Lumley (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): The reply for the Department of Regional Economic Expansion is as follows: 1. The Industrial Incentives Branch of the Department of Regional Economic Expansion is using the return reply card ER-2-7 titled "Let's Talk Business" (a) which was first placed in service on July 10, 1977; (b) for use in Air Canada's in-flight publication "En Route"; (i) the July-August 1977 issue only; (ii) at a cost of $2200.00.

2. The responses to the insert in the July/August 1977 issue of "En Route" are only beginning to arrive. As of July 31 eleven reply cards had been received. A previous insert in the December 76/January 77 issue of "En Route" resulted in 337 responses.

MRS. DEBORAH A. PAGE-DICK

Question No. 2,904—Mr. Cossitt:

1. Did Corporal Wayne Schmiller of the RCMP conduct an investigation of Mrs. Deborah A. Page-Dick and, if so (a) did he represent the Security Division (b) what was the purpose of the investigation (c) did Corporal Schmiller advise those he interviewed that the purpose of the investigation was that Mrs. Page-Dick had applied for a government position (d) was the investigation carried out approximately four months after Mrs. Page-Dick had actually left the Public Service?

2. Did Mrs. Page-Dick leave the Public Service on November 16, 1976?

3. What is a full explanation of the apparent infringement of the private rights of a citizen by this investigation?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Departments of the Solicitor General and Manpower and Immigration as follows: 1. Yes. (a) Yes. (b) The investigation was conducted in response to an official request from the Department of Manpower and Immigration because Mrs. Page-Dick required a security clearance. (c) Yes. (d) Security screening enquiries were initiated in July 1976 and were terminated in March 1977 upon notice being received from the Department of Manpower and Immigration that Mrs. Page-Dick was no longer in its employ.

2. No. Mrs. Page-Dick left the Public Service on December 2, 1976.

3. See answer to Part 1(d).

SALARIES

Question No. 2,907—Mr. Robinson:

What is the salary of the (a) Executive (b) Director (c) Chairman (d) Vice-Chairman (e) board members of the Canadian International Development Agency?

Mr. Fernand E. Leblanc (Parliamentary Secretary to Secretary of State for External Affairs): These positions do not exist in the Canadian International Development Agency and therefore the question is not applicable.

[Mr. McKenzie.]

DISPOSAL OF CANADIAN STAMP IN CANADA

Question No. 2,909—Mr. Gillies:

1. Did the Post Office Department or any other agency under the direction of the Department, within the past eighteen months dispose of a quantity of Canadian stamps in Canada at less than face value and, if so (a) what issues were involved (b) at what price, relative to face value, were they sold (c) what was the total price?

2. Were the stamps sold by public tender and, if so, how were bids obtained?

Hon. J.-J. Blais (Postmaster General): 1. Yes; (a) 12 Olympic Stamps were involved. (b) The stamps were sold in bulk for $3.15 which was $1.85 below their face value. They formed part of an Olympic Souvenir Stamp Case and were affixed to a panel embedded in the lid of the case. The Olympic Souvenir Stamp Case was sold to generate revenue in financial support of the 1976 Summer Olympics. Toward the end of 1976 when it was realized there would be a surplus inventory of the case, bulk sales at a special price were authorized to sell-off this inventory and to thereby maximize net revenues to be credited to the Olympics. (c) $155,600.

2. No

SOLAR ENERGY SOCIETY OF CANADA

Question No. 2,910—Mr. Gauthier (Roberval):

1. Is the Solar Energy Society of Canada incorporated and, if so, what are the names of the directors?

2. (a) What are the Society's source of funds (b) has the government made grants to the Society and, if so, in what amount each year since its incorporation?

3. To date, what are the Society's achievements?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the National Research Council and the Department of Energy, Mines and Resources as follows: 1. The Solar Energy Society of Canada was incorporated in Winnipeg, Manitoba on the October 18, 1974, as a non-profit corporation under part 3 of the Manitoba Companies Act. The society is managed by a 12 member board of directors which are nominated and elected. Detailed business is performed by a "Winnipeg Executive" which is comprised of members of the board: the Chairman and/or Vice-Chairman, the Secretary, the Treasurer (Vice-Chairman Finance) and the Chairman of the Editorial Board. The minutes of the meetings of the Winnipeg Executive are circulated to all members of the board and decisions on important items are made by letter ballot or approved at full board meetings. There are 15 Chapters and 6 regions; British Columbia, Prairie, Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick and Newfoundland. A regional director who is a member of the board coordinates the activities in each region. Directors of the Solar Energy Society of Canada Incorporated: Prof. Peter J. Catania Director, Prairie Region; Doug Lorriman, Director, Ontario Region; Prof. Ray Chant, Chairman of the Board Director, Chapters; Ernest Robertson, Vice-Chairman, Director, Government Relations; Dr. Henry Flynn, Director, Energy Economics; Edward A. Speers, Treasurer, Vice-Chairman, Finances; Robert Gemmel, Secretary; Prof. Robert K. Swartman, Director, Programmes; Erich Hoffmann, Director, Pacific Region; Prof. John D. Welch, Director, Membership, Chairman, Editorial Board; Tom Lawand, Director, International Affairs, Past Chairman; Gerry Wright, Co-ordinator, 1977 SESCI, Conference; Jacques Beaudet, Director, Quebec Region; Bryan Cook, Director, Government Liaison; Dr. Jim Bolton, Director, Science and Technology, Chairman, Resolutions Committee; Fred Hamilton, Associate Director; Jim Collins, Director, Public Relations; Prof. Verne Ireton, Director, Atlantic Region; Dr. Alan D. Robb, Director, Newfoundland Region.

2. (a) The society has three sources of funds, a $10 annual registration fee, corporate memberships of $250 for industry and the profits of the sale of 12 periodicals. On a local level, each chapter has a minimal annual fee and to supplement this, other activities are carried out such as selling books on solar heaters, houses, etc. In addition to this, half of the corporate membership goes to the local chapter in the region in which the industry is located. (b) The Department of Energy, Mines and Resources has made one grant of $35,400 to the society to help defray its operations. There have been also some grants made for conferences; both Central Mortgage and Housing and the Division of Building Research of the National Research Council made grants of $2,500 to the society for publishing the proceedings of the "Potential of Solar Energy for Canada" conference which was held in Ottawa in June of 1975. A $2,400 grant was also made by the National Research Council for the "Sharing the Sun '76" conference which was held in Winnipeg in August, 1976. The department of industry and commerce of the Manitoba government made a grant of $5,000 to the society for this conference as well.

3. Besides being a means of creating a public awareness of the utilization of solar energy in Canada, the Conferences held by the society have served to create government interest in solar energy. This in turn will hopefully lead to increased government expenditure on research in the area of solar energy. In particular, the joint conference of the American section of the International Solar Energy Society and SESCI: "Sharing the Sun '76", which was held in Winnipeg in August, 1976 brought an awareness of international developments to the attention of the various levels of the government in Canada. Another major accomplishment of the Winnipeg conference was that the wide range of technical and policy papers which were presented have been outlined in 10 volumes of proceedings. These volumes constitute a very comprehensive documentation of the international status of solar energy. The chapters have concentrated on the dissemination of information on solar energy to the public by means of public meetings, extra copies of their newsletters, etc. With the same purpose in mind, chapter members have also given courses and lectures on such topics as the construction of your own solar water heater. A course such as this was given at Ryerson last year. The London chapter held a picnic where all the food was cooked on solar cookers and a contest was held by the B.C. chapter for the best solar collector designs. These are just two examples of some of the novel activities which were carried out by the individual chapters.

DEMPSTER HIGHWAY PROJECT

Question No. 2,942—Mr. Nielsen:

1. Was the Eagle River Bridge Construction property destroyed upon completion of the Dempster Highway project this year?

2. Was any government property burned or otherwise destroyed at that time and (a) if so, for what reason was the property disposed of in this manner (b) if not, in what manner was the property disposed of upon completion of the project?

3. What was the original landed cost of such property at the Camp Site?

Mr. Ralph E. Goodale (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Departments of Indian Affairs and Northern Development, National Defence and Public Works as follows: 1 and 2. All DIAND property was retained by the department except the bridge steel cartes and miscellaneous construction items which were turned over to the Yukon government's department of public works for maintenance on the Dempster Highway. Property used by DND on this project was returned to DND stocks or to DPW for their use or disposal except the scrap wood and the incomplete shell of a prefabricated building which were disposed of by burning as they could not be economically recovered from the site. DPW property was assigned to Crown Assets for disposal.

3. The original landed cost is not known as most of the equipment on site was obtained from the Department of National Defence at the time of the turn-over of the Alaska Highway in 1964.

NOTE: When coding expenditures, the destination of the cheque determines the territorial code to be used. Therefore, the province in which the billing office is located appears to have received the full benefit of the expenditures (i.e. all payments against Air Canada Credit Cards are coded to Manitoba, where their accounting office is located, regardless of where the credit cards were used). Based on this information, territorial expenditure reports are produced. The above figures were extracted from these reports.

14. Is there any conclusive proof that an exploding pressure tube cannot precipitate similar explosions or failures in neighbouring pressure tubes and, if so, what is it?

15. Has the Lucens accident in Switzerland in 1969, in which an exploding pressure tube collapsed hundreds of other calandria tubes and totally destroyed the core of the reactor, been carefully studied because of its possible safety implications for CANDU reactors and, if so, by whom and with what results?

16. What assurances are there that embrittlement of pressure tubes due to constant or only moderate bombardment with neutrons will not weaken some of the tubes to such an extent that they may explode spontaneously?

17. (a) Are there signs posted in the area of the Pickering Generating Station indicating the nature of the dangers therein or are there simply "No Trespassing" signs in the outer and inner perimeter fences (b) are warning signs posted in English only or in both official languages?

18. Have members of the public wandered within the confines of the inner fence and, if so, on what occasions?

19. (a) What improvements in security have been undertaken since Dr. Morton Schulman made his unauthorized entry into the Pickering Plant (b) how many guards are posted at Pickering (i) by day (ii) by night (c) is there a gap at the western end of the outer perimeter fence where it meets Lake Ontario through which members of the public may and do wander freely onto the grounds at the installation?

20. What laws and regulations are in effect to keep the public outside the grounds of nuclear facilities?

21. What is the maximum credible direct impact of an airplane in terms of size and speed that one of the Pickering reactors could withstand?

22. How many grams of (a) plutonium (b) uranium exist in Canada in a pure state or in a state that would qualify it as "strategic nuclear material"?

23. What is the anticipated amount of "strategic" plutonium that will be in existence in Canada in (a) 1980 (b) 1990 (c) 2000 (d) 2025 (e) 2050?

24. Is it possible for a CANDU reactor to suffer a major release of radioactivity as a result of (a) a conventional artillery or mortar assault (b) a single well placed conventional explosive charge and, if so, approximately how many living people possess the knowledge of where to place such a charge?

25. Does the government have contigency plans for the evacuation of the Toronto metropolitan area in the event of a major radiation release at the Pickering Nuclear Power Station?

26. (a) How long would it take to evacuate the maximum credible area endangered by a CANDU failure (b) what would be the dollar cost of decontamination of such a maximum credible area?

27. (a) Has the government established guidelines for coping with nuclear blackmail (b) what would be this government's reaction to credible evidence that some person or persons in Ottawa were in possession and control of a nuclear bomb?

28. What specific plans and guidelines have been developed for decommissioning CANDU reactors and installations at the end of their useful period of service?

29. What are the anticipated total dollar costs of decommissioning the (a) Pickering (b) Bruce facilities?

30. What progress has been made in the research and development of the fuel processing capability?

31. How much has been (a) spent (b) committed toward R & D of this capability?

32. Is nuclear energy, in the government's opinion, economically viable over the long term (a) without (b) with the development of the fuel reprocessing option?

33. Are any sites in Canada now under consideration for fuel reprocessing facilities and, if so (a) what are they (b) has any land been acquired by the federal or provincial governments at any site?

34. What are the (a) costs (b) conclusions involved in re-using plutonium as reactor fuel in Canada?

35. Has any progress been made in the assessment of the environmental, public health and safety risks involved in re-using plutonium as a reactor fuel and, if so, are these risks greater when plutonium is re-used?

36. (a) Has AECL undertaken development of a second generation CANDU that can use recycled plutonium and, if so, on what date was the decision made and by whom (b) when is this second generation CANDU expected to come on line (c) what are the anticipated R and D costs of such a programme (d) how much has been (i) spent (ii) committed to such a programme?

37. In the government's opinion, is nuclear power economically viable (a) without (b) with second generation development?

38. Is it possible that a fully fuelled CANDU reactor be destroyed by sabotage, error, explosion, or earthquake and, if so, what is the government's estimate of the (a) likely (b) maximum possible, extent of nuclear contamination on the surrounding environment and the affects on public health and safety of such an event?

39. (a) Was there an accident at the Chalk River NRX facility on December 12, 1952 and, if so, what was the extent of the damage that occurred on that date and in the period immediately following (b) have the causes of the accident been traced to (i) human error (ii) mechanical failure (iii) or a combination of both (c) what were the nature and extent of the repairs (d) what amount was spent on the repairs (e) how long was the reactor shut down following the incident (f) was any leakage of nuclear contaminants involved (g) what was the minimum distance that separated significant volumes of radioactive fluids from the Ottawa River in the period until this accident was brought under control?

40. (a) Was there an accident (fire in the NRU refuelling machine) at the Chalk River NRU facility on May 25, 1958 and, if so, what was the extent of the damage that occurred on that date and in the period immediately following (b) have the causes of the damage been traced to (i) human error (ii) mechanical failure (iii) or a combination of both (c) what was the nature and extent of the repairs (d) what amount was spent on the repairs (e) how long was the reactor shut down (f) was any leakage of nuclear contaminants involved (g) what was the minimum distance that separated significant volumes of radioactive fluids from the Ottawa River in the period until this accident was brought under control (h) how many square metres around the NRU building were contaminated?

41. Has the government undertaken any correspondence with the USA regarding the accident that took place at Lagoona Beach, Michigan, in the Enrico Fermi I Reactor?

Return tabled.

Order Paper Questions

USE OF CHARTERED AIRCRAFT BASED AT FORT FRANCES, ONTARIO

Question No. 2,344—Mr. Reid:

1. For the years 1975 and 1976, how many times has the Department of (a) National Health and Welfare (Medical Services Branch) (b) Indian Affairs and Northern Development (c) Public Works (d) the Environment (Water Resources Branch) used chartered aircraft based at Fort Frances, Ontario?

2. For each such flight, what was the (a) date (b) place of origin (c) destination (d) length (e) name of the operator of the aircraft?

3. Were any of the flights shared and, if so (a) with whom (b) to what destination (c) on what date (d) who ordered the aircraft (e) what was the name of the charter company?

Return tabled.

BICYCLES

Question No. 2,369—Mr. O'Sullivan:

1. Are imported (a) bicycles (b) bicycle parts and components recorded by size and/or specification?

2. What was the total number of (a) 10-speed bicycles (b) 10-speed bicycle parts and components imported in (i) 1968 (ii) 1970 (iii) 1972 (iv) 1974 (v) 1976?

3. What are the countries of origin of such items and, for each country, what is the percentage of the total supplied?

4. How many (a) 10-speed bicycles (b) 10-speed bicycle parts and components are manufactured in Canada annually?

5. How many Canadians are directly employed in the manufacture of bicycles?

6. What are the tariff rates on (a) 10-speed bicycles (b) 10-speed bicycle parts and components?

7. Does the government subsidize the bicycle manufacturing industry and, if so, to what extent and by what direct or indirect means?

Return tabled.

KITCHENER ARTS CENTRE

Question No. 2,375—Mr. Beatty:

1. Did the government refuse a request for a grant to build an Arts Centre in Kitchener, Ontario and, if so, for what reason?

2. (a) Under what programme was such a request made (b) what is the present total budget of the programme (c) what commitments have been made to projects under the programme in the current fiscal year and what are the projects?

3. Is the government prepared to provide financial assistance for a Kitchener Arts Centre and, if so, under what programme and to what extent?

Return tabled.

EMPLOYMENT OF NATIVE PEOPLE

Question No. 2,378—Mr. Holmes:

1. For each year 1970 to 1976, how many (a) Status Indians (b) Native people have been employed by (i) the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development (ii) other departments (iii) agencies?

2. For the same years, how many (a) Status Indians (b) Native people held positions as (i) Assistant Deputy Ministers (ii) Director Generals (iii) Directors (iv) Chiefs of sections in the government?

3. For the same years, what was the total amount received in salaries by (a) Status Indians (b) Native people employed by the government?

Return tabled.

[Mr. Crosbie.]

ASSISTANCE TO BALLET SCHOOLS AND COMPANIES

Question No. 2,379—Mr. Holmes:

1. For each year 1970 to 1976, which (a) ballet companies (b) ballet schools have (i) requested (ii) received financial assistance from the government and, in each case, in what amount?

2. For the same years, by province and territory, what amount did Canadian (a) athletes (b) sports organizations receive from government departments and agencies?

3. For the same years, were there (a) Status Indians (b) Native people (i) athletes (ii) sports organizations that received money and are included in the reply to Part 2 and, if so, what amount did each receive?

Return tabled.

EXPENDITURES IN CONSTITUENCY OF ALGOMA

Question No. 2,380—Mr. Foster:

1. What amounts were spent by each department and agency in the Constituency of Algoma during the past five fiscal years for community betterment projects, housing and economic development programmes?

2. In which municipalities, unorganized townships or Indian reserves were such expenditures?

3. Were such funds in the form of a loan or a grant and, if a loan, what were its terms?

4. If it was a federal-provincial project, what portion was paid by the government?

5. How many jobs were created by each project or programme?

6. What is a description of each project or programme which received government aid?

Return tabled.

REACTOR SAFETY ADVISORY COMMITTEES

Question No. 2,381—Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands):

1. What is the extent of Atomic Energy Control Board's independent expertise necessary to evaluate the reliability of the ECCS?

2. Have the AECB or its Reactor Safety Advisory Committees ever questioned the ability of the ECCS to prevent fuel failures?

3. Have AECL or Ontario Hydro answered satisfactorily all questions concerning the ability of the ECCS to prevent fuel failures?

4. If all of the radioactive gases and volatile substances from a single failed fuel bundle were to escape into the atmosphere surrounding the plant, what would be the maximum possible health effects (per thousand) among the surrounding population within a radius of (a) ten miles (b) five miles (c) two miles?

5. In the event of a loss-of-coolant accident in a CANDU reactor, assuming that the ECCS works as planned, can it be categorically asserted that no fuel failures will occur?

6. In the event of a loss-of-coolant accident in a CANDU reactor, assuming that all other safety devices function properly, what would be the probable consequences to the reactor if the ECCS were unavailable for any reason?

7. Is it considered possible that steam binding could prevent the ECCS from functioning as planned and, if not, for what reason?

8. Has the ECCS been tested under realistic operating conditions?

9. In the event of an inlet header rupture without emergency cooling, what would be the probable consequences in terms of the release of fission products from the fuel bundles?

10. Is the WR-1 reactor at the Whiteshell Nuclear Research Establishment protected against an inlet header rupture and, if so, in what way?

11. In the event of a loss-of-coolant accident in a CANDU reactor, what would be the probable consequences of a failure to scram?

12. In the event of a design-basis loss-of-coolant accident at the Bruce A Generating Station, what would be the probable consequences if only one of the two scram systems were available?

13. In the event of a loss-of-coolant accident in a CANDU reactor, within how many seconds must the reaction be shut down in order to prevent fuel failures from occurring and in what way does this time depend upon the design and/or the megawatt rating of the reactor?

14. How many scram systems are in the Pickering A. Generating Station?

15. Has consideration been given to the possibility of retrofitting the Pickering A reactors with an additional scram system for safety reasons?

16. What is the estimated dollar cost of retrofitting an existing 500 MWe reactor with an additional scram system?

17. In applying for a reactor license from AECB, is the licensee required to consider "failure to scram" as a credible event?

18. (a) What is the maximum loss-of-containment assumed in the safety report for a commercial CANDU reactor (b) under what circumstances would a loss-of-containment occur and what would be the effects?

19. In the context of a design basis accident, involving a loss-of-coolant accident coupled with a partial loss of containment, what would be the maximum health effects if the ECCS does not function as planned at the (a) Pickering site (b) Bruce site?

Return tabled.

COST OF PRODUCTION OF ANNUAL REPORTS

Question No. 2,396—Mr. Cossitt:

1. What was the total cost in each of the past three years for printing, designing, mailing and circulating etc., the annual reports of all departments, agencies, Crown corporations etc. and what was the total cost of such reports for the three years combined?

2. (a) What were the six most costly reports in each year (b) what was the total amount in each case for each year (c) what was the total cost of all of them for three years?

3. Does the government plan taking any steps to cut down the expense to the taxpayer of such annual reports by using less glossy or fancy formats etc. and (a) if so, what are such plans (b) if not, for what reasons?

Return tabled.

MR. VICTOR CHAPMAN

Question No. 2,441—Mr. Cossitt:

1. What is the complete government employment record of Mr. Victor Chapman, including dates and annual salaries received?

2. Has Mr. Chapman served the Prime Minister as a press officer and/or has he served the Prime Minister or his family in any other capacity?

3. Since April 20, 1968, has Mr. Chapman and/or Intertask Limited, Ste. 700, 71 Bank Street, Ottawa received any business from the government and, if so, in each case, what (a) is a full description of the services performed (b) was the amount of money received?

4. What was the total amount received for all such business?

Return tabled.

CANADA'S CONTRIBUTION TO MOZAMBIQUE

Question No. 2,531—Mr. Caouette (Villeneuve):

1. What has been the nature and dollar value of Canada's contribution to Mozambique under the terms of the agreement made at the Prime Ministers' Conference in Jamaica in 1975?

2. Since 1975, how much aid has Canada accorded Mozambique through (a) CIDA (b) any other government agency?

Order Paper Questions

3. Since 1975, what is the value and nature of Canadian exports to and imports from Mozambique?

Return tabled.

STUDENT SUMMER EMPLOYMENT

Question No. 2,535—Mr. Young:

1. How many students were hired for part-time, temporary or summer help as Canada Customs or Canada Immigration staff at the (a) Niagara Falls (b) Fort Erie port of entry in (i) 1972 (ii) 1973 (iii) 1974 (iv) 1975 (v) 1976?

2. For each of the same years (a) how many applications were received (b) were interviews or examinations held and, if so (i) on what dates (ii) in what locations?

3. Which government office was in charge of selections and which officers made the selections?

4. Were any of the students hired related at the time to present or former employees of Canada Immigration or Canada Customs and, if so, how many?

5. (a) What are the usual criteria for selection (b) did all such employees hired between 1972 and 1976 meet the criteria?

6. What were the usual home addresses, by city, as opposed to the university-attended addresses, of those who were successful in gaining such employment?

Return tabled.

MR. IAN C. WALKER

Question No. 2,548—Mr. Neil:

1. What was the cost of the preparation of the publication by Mr. Ian C. Walker, Clay Tobacco-Pipes, With Particular Reference to the Bristol Industry, in 4 Volumes, and published by National Historic Parks and Sites Branch, Parks Canada, Department of Indian and Northern Affairs in 1977?

2. How many sets were published?

3. What was the cost of publication?

4. How many sets of the volumes have been distributed?

5. Is Mr. C. Walker an employee of the Department?

Return tabled.

PRIVY COUNCIL AND FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL RELATIONS OFFICES

Question No. 2,551—Mr. Cossitt:

For the fiscal year 1976-77, what are the (a) duties and job designations (b) salaries (c) names of those employed by, under contract to, or on loan to the Privy Council and Federal-Provincial Relations Offices?

Return tabled.

FEDERAL AIRPORT ASSESSMENTS

Question No. 2,643—Mr. Elzinga:

1. On what basis is the assessment for federal airports made?

2. Does the (a) method (b) rate of assessment vary from one airport to another?

3. Is the municipality reimbursed, if taxes are not paid on the property occupied by the Air Force and, if so, in what manner?

4. What is the amount of reimbursement to the municipality in which each federal airport is located?

Return tabled.

Order Paper Questions

SASKATCHEWAN RESIDENTS APPOINTED TO GOVERNMENT BOARDS OF DIRECTORS

Question No. 2,755—Mr. Hnatyshyn:

In each year since 1968, were Saskatchewan residents appointed to government boards of directors or the equivalent by Order in Council or to the boards of government agencies and Crown corporations and, if so, in each case, what (a) is his/her name (b) was the salary or per diem payment received?

Return tabled.

POST OFFICES IN TERRITORIES

Question No. 2,756—Mr. Nielsen:

1. How many post offices are in the (a) Yukon Territory (b) Northwest Territories?

2. What is the grade of each post office?

3. How many personnel are employed in each post office and, in each case, what is his/her (a) grade or classification (b) salary?

4. In each case, what amount is paid for (a) rental (b) costs, other than rental of premises, and for what goods or services are such amounts paid?

Return tabled.

GRANTS TO OFFICIAL LANGUAGE MINORITY GROUPS

Question No. 2,781—Mr. Neil:

1. For the fiscal year (a) 1974-75 (b) 1975-76 (c) 1976-77, what was the total amount of grants paid under the Official Language Minority Groups Directorate, Secretary of State Department?

2. For the same years, what was the name of the recipient and the amount in each case?

Return tabled.

PHASE II ALLOCATIONS UNDER CANADA WORKS PROGRAM

Question No. 3,005—Mr. Alexander:

In calculating Phase II allocations under the Canada Works Programme, for each constituency, what was the (a) labour surplus (i) number of beneficiaries (ii) number of unemployed Inuit (iii) number of unemloyed Status Indians on Reserves and Crown lands (iv) number of unemployed Non-Status Indians and Metis (v) total labour surplus (b) labour force (c) labour surplus rate?

Return tabled.

STARRED QUESTIONS

Mr. Yvon Pinard (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the answers to starred questions Nos. 1,992, 2,773 and 2,839 are lengthy, so I ask the consent of the House to have them printed in the official record of the House of Commons as if they had been read.

[English]

Mr. Speaker: The hon. parliamentary secretary is now seeking the same result with respect to the starred questions which he just enumerated. Is it the pleasure of the House that the said starred questions be treated in that way?

[Mr. Elzinga.]

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

[Editor's Note: The answers to the starred questions enumerated are as follows:]

*CRTC HEARINGS—ALLEGED BIASED NEWS REPORTING BY CBC

Question No. 1,992—Mr. Jones:

1. Was there a CRTC hearing with respect to the English speaking Radio Station CFCF Montreal and, if so (a) what facts led to such hearing (b) what were the findings and decision of CRTC?

2. Have (a) Members of Parliament (b) Cabinet Ministers complained in the House of Commons with respect to allegations of biased news reporting by the CBC French Network, Radio Canada and, if so, in each case (i) how many (ii) what is his/her name?

3. Does CRTC plan a similar inquiry, investigation and hearing of alleged biased news reporting on the CBC French Network, Radio Canada and, if not, do such hearings by CRTC only apply to minority English speaking radio stations in Quebec?

Mr. Fernard E. Leblanc (Parliamentary Secretary to Secretary of State for External Affairs): I am informed by the Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission and the Department of the Secretary of State as follows: 1. Yes. On March 31, 1976. (a) The reasons for that hearing are exposed in its Public Announcement of January 12, "CFCF and Bill 22" and in its Notice of Public Hearing of February 23, 1976 for the Renewal of licence of CFCF. (b) The results and conclusions of CRTC are given in Decision 77-121 (February 24, 1977) and the accompanying Public Announcement "REPORT ON ISSUES RAISED BY CFCF'S ANTI BILL 22 CAMPAIGN".

2. During the period of November 15, 1976 (the Quebec election) to March 4, 1977, there have been no direct references or allegations in the House of Commons to biased news reporting on the French Service Division of the CBC by federal Members of Parliament or Cabinet Ministers. There have been, however, a number of questions concerning charges of bias in CBC programming. The following can be found in Hansard: February 18, 1977, page 3188; February 25, 1977, page 3419; March 4, 1977, page 3660.

3. In its Press Release of March 8, 1977 and its Public Notice of March 14, 1977 "COMMITTEE OF INQUIRY INTO THE NATIONAL BROADCASTING SERVICE" the Commission decided to undertake an inquiry and stated three major principles to be safeguarded during this Inquiry: "The first is the principle of freedom of expression, restricted only by specific legal requirements and prohibitions. Second, professional ethics and competence are paramount. Discrimination by reason of race, national origin, colour, religion, sex, or political views has no place in broadcasting. And thirdly, the Commission reaffirms its commitment to the principle of public broadcasting in Canada". Also "The Commission determined that the Committee's mandate should be as follows: (i) The Committee will examine and take into consideration all representations from the public submitted in response to this Announcement. The appeal to the public is based on the fact that the national broadcasting service in its entirety is owned and maintained by the people of Canada; (ii) The Committee will conduct interviews with members of the CBC and of the public in order to gain a fuller understanding of how information and other programming is perceived by them, and actually carried out; (iii) The Committee will undertake research on specific matters related to programming and scheduling, as well as on the historical relationship between the French language and English language services of the CBC; (iv) The Committee may selectively analyze particular programmes". Then the public has hereby been invited to submit information and comment preferably by April 25, 1977 (Public Notice of March 24, 1977). Finally, the Commission stated that the Committee will submit its final report to the Commission before July 1st, 1977.

*CHARGES LAID BY CANADIAN WHEAT BOARD

Question No. 2,773—Mr. Murta:

1. In the past 3 years, what was the increase in staff in the Inspection Services Branch of the Canadian Wheat Board and what did this represent in expenses?

2. In each of the past 3 years, how many producers and companies have been charged under the "Delivery Regulations" and, in each case, what was the amount of the charges and the total amount collected?

3. What was the total amount collected in fines by the Canadian Wheat Board for enforcing the "Inspection Service" and what was the amount in expenses to the Canadian Wheat Board for enforcing such service?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister of Transport): Insofar as the Canadian Wheat Board is concerned: 1. Over the 3 year period July 1, 1974 to June 30, 1977 the inspection staff of the Canadian Wheat Board declined in number from 25 to 20.

2. In each of the past 3 years, the following number of charges were laid and fines collected for violations of "delivery regulations" under the Canadian Wheat Board Act:

Crop Year	No. of Producers Charged	No. of grain Companies Charged	No. of Elevator Managers Charged	Total No. of Charges	Total Amount of Fines Collected
1973-1974	52	0	16	116	$10,914.36
1974-75	31	1	2	48	$ 4,636.24
1975-76	21	3	3	88	$10,019.59

3. The total amount collected in fines for violations of the Canadian Wheat Board Act is as above in (2). These fines were not collected by the Canadian Wheat Board but are levied and collected by the Courts. The Board's inspection staff and legal department perform many and varied tasks in addition to their inspection function. Records are not maintained with respect to the time and expense devoted to the task of "enforcing the inspection service".

*CBC COVERAGE OF ONTARIO LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY

Question No. 2839—Mr. Douglas (Bruce-Grey):

1. With reference to the answer to Question No. 2,345, for what reason does CBC have only three English language reporters assigned to cover the Ontario Legislative Assembly while it has seven French language reporters assigned to cover the Quebec National Assembly?

2. How many (a) English (b) French language reporters are assigned to cover the Parliament of Canada?

Hon. John Roberts (Secretary of State): I am informed by the CBC as follows: 1. The CBC's French radio and television networks serve the Francophones of Canada, of whom 85 percent are concentrated in the province of Quebec. The steady flow of news generated by the Quebec government's policies is of intense interest to this audience in both the provincial and Canadian contexts. Nevertheless, the CBC's plans as enunciated in the June 14, 1977 statement by the President of the Corporation, call for greater use of French network news correspondents throughout Canada. The Ontario legislature is one of nine mainly English-speaking assemblies covered by the CBC's English Services Division. That has a total of 18 full-time and one part-time radio and television reporters covering provincial legislature across the country. In the case of the Ontario provincial legislature in particular, the CBC's English Services headquarters in Toronto are located within a few blocks of the provincial legislature and extra staff can be and are assigned at very short notice when required.

2. (a) Eight television reporters and four radio news reporters plus one radio agriculture commentator. (b) Three radio reporters and three television reporters. It is planned to assign two more television reporters in coming months.

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House that the questions listed by the hon. Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council, which list has now been filed with the House by agreement, shall be deemed to have been replied to today, and that the questions subsequently referred to by the hon. parliamentary secretary shall be deemed to have been made orders for return, with the returns to be tabled forthwith?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Speaker: Shall the remaining questions be allowed to stand?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Cossitt: Mr. Speaker, I rise with regard to an assurance given by the government to this House on at least four or five occasions by the Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council. He is the predecessor of the present parliamentary secretary, I realize, but nevertheless a commitment was made by the government which I am sure could not have been made by his predecessor had it not been approved by the President of the Privy Council and the Deputy Prime Minister.

I refer to Hansard at page 7790 of July 19, 1977, when at that time I brought the matter up for about the fifth time. I should like to quote one sentence therefrom when I asked why the answers to certain questions were being withheld. These answers were of an important nature and the Canadian people were entitled to know the truth. He replied: "May I indicate that I intend to provide answers to all questions standing on the order paper before the present session ends".

The present session will end in several minutes. There are 45 questions of mine and I am sure there are many other questions by various members that were on the early order paper. I have some that go back two years on the order paper. These are questions concerning travel by cabinet ministers on government aircraft for their own personal use. There are also questions concerning ministers' car allowances for cars they do not have.

There are other various important things which have not been brought in, as we were assured they would be. Before this session adjourns this afternoon, it is time for us to have a complete and utter explanation from this government as to why they welshed out on a promise, given at least five times in this House, that we would be given answers to questions which the Canadian people are entitled to have.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Cossitt: I should like to cite one further example which may seem somewhat frivolous. I raised on a previous occasion one question which the Minister of Transport had not answered, concerning the five pretty girls who came in on a government aircraft behind him on a government aircraft from Saskatoon. For over a year he had not answered that question. He said that the answer has been ready for months. That was three months ago. Where is the answer?

Mr. Alexander: Who were the girls?

Mr. Cossitt: In conclusion, all these things involving expense by cabinet ministers to the Canadian people for which we, as members of parliament, and all the citizens of Canada are paying from our pocketbooks, should be made known to this House. The government has played around with the truth and has withheld information.

Mr. Alexander: Shame.

Mr. Cossitt: If it were not unparliamentary, I would say the parliamentary secretary to the minister, and the Deputy Prime Minister, have lied to this House. But because it is unparliamentary, I will not say it.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Goodale: It is also untrue.

Mr. Cossitt: The truth hurts.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Paproski: That is why we have a new parliamentary secretary.

[Translation]

Mr. Yvon Pinard (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, in support of the numerous questions I have answered a few minutes ago, I have here two boxes of papers which will be tabled and many of those have the answers to the questions asked by the hon. member. If he could only wait for these papers to be available and read them, he would receive an answer to the very numerous questions that he himself has asked. I still appeal to his courtesy and his patience and also to his common sense and hope he realizes that I was sworn in at 10 o'clock this very morning. This afternoon I answered some 500 questions. I would appreciate it if he were to ask again the questions to which he has not yet received an answer. They will be on the order paper tomorrow and we will make a particular effort to provide accurate and comprehensive answers.

PRIVILEGE

MR. BLACKBURN—MINISTERS AND BACKBENCHERS TRAVELLING ON GOVERNMENT AIRCRAFT

Mr. Blackburn: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege. It is my understanding that three Liberal backbenchers and three cabinet ministers are flying to Brantford this evening, which is in my constituency. On a political junket such as this, I should like to know if it is proper for those three members and those three cabinet ministers to be travelling on government aircraft.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Perhaps that is information which can be sought at some other time, but it certainly does not constitute a question of privilege.

An hon. Member: The ghost of Otto Lang lives.

MR. GOODALE—MRS. CAMPAGNOLO—POSSIBLE QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE RESPECTING MR. COSSITT'S REMARKS

Mr. Goodale: Mr. Speaker, with reference to the remarks made just moments ago by the hon. member for Leeds, at this stage I should like to reserve the opportunity to raise a question of privilege tomorrow with respect to what he said. I should like to check carefully the report of his language in Hansard to determine if my privileges as a member of this House have been breached.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mrs. Campagnolo: Mr. Speaker, I should like to reply to the statement made by the hon. member for Leeds. Indeed, the question was answered concerning the "five pretty girls". I would like him to know that they were my staff and myself.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mrs. Campagnolo: There were four, and not five. He is ill-equipped to tell the difference between girls and women, as he is ill-equipped to tell the facts as to why most of these women travelled on business which was essential to the people of Canada.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Paproski: The next prime minister's speech.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: What were you doing in Saskatoon? I should like to know that. I do not care if you are pretty or not.

Mr. Cossitt: Mr. Speaker, I should like to correct, briefly, two things. The Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council, I hope unintentionally, misled the House when he said that the answers to the 45 questions were in a box which he was tabling. Might I say that I knew, before the questions were answered, the numbers that would be answered, and none of those 45 was in the box to which he referred or I would not have raised the matter.

In reply to the minister who asked why I used the phrase "pretty girls", let me say that I was using the phrase which her colleague, the Minister of Transport, had used, apparently, in connection with her.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

PROROGATION OF PARLIAMENT

[English]

A message was delivered by the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod, as follows:

Mr. Speaker, the Honourable the Deputy Governor General desires the immediate attendance of this honourable House in the chamber of the honourable the Senate.

Accordingly, Mr. Speaker with the House went up to the Senate chamber.

● (1530)

Then, the Deputy Governor General was pleased to close the second session of the thirtieth Parliament of Canada with the following speech:

Honourable Members of the Senate:

Members of the House of Commons:

The Second Session of the Thirtieth Parliament opened on October 12, 1976. In the 370 days since then, the Senate has held 103 sittings and the House of Commons has held 175 sittings. Of the 64 bills brought before Parliament by the Government in this session, 44 have been enacted. In addition, 13 bills proposed by private members have been passed into law.

Members of the House of Commons

During this session you took the decision to permit the television and radio broadcasting of your proceedings. Citizens in every corner of Canada will now have regular opportunities to see and hear you transact the business of the nation. Their response to what they observe will provide great incentive to you to organize your business in a manner that reflects the needs and interests of contempory Canadians.

Honourable Members of the Senate:

Members of the House of Commons:

During this session, Canadians have focussed their attention more sharply on the future of Confederation. The Government of Canada has appointed a Minister of State for Federal-Provincial Relations and created a Task Force on Canadian Unity. You have approved the appointment of a new Commissioner of Official Languages and enacted a new Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements Act and Established Programs Financing Act. The development of our federal system, however, will continue to be evaluated and, perhaps, altered in the next several years and Canadians in every province and territory will have to exercise great understanding and reason as they plan their future together.

The Canadian economy has been in this session, as in all, an area of major interest. The program of controls of prices and incomes has been extended through its second year while the Government has engaged in discussions with the provinces, with labour and with industry about the removal of controls and the guidance of the economy afterward.

You have enacted measures to restrain government expenditures and to give greater authority to the Auditor General. The Government has appointed a Royal Commission on Financial Management and Accountability.

[French text]

The less fortunate people in society have not been forgotten in this session. You have created a new Department of Employment and Immigration and a Canada Employment and Immigration Commission which together will assist Canadians in finding employment, assist those who cannot and administer the new Immigration Act, passed in this session. You have also enacted a Canadian Human Rights Act and have amended the Old Age Security Act and the Canada Pension Plan to improve benefits under those programs.

Canada has continued to attempt to bring together the rich and the poor nations of the world so that all may agree on a system of organizing the international economy so that all nations may share prosperity and live in peace. The Conference on International Economic Co-operation was chaired by Canada and our country played leading roles at the Commonwealth Conference of Heads of Governments and at the economic summit conference of the seven greatest industrial countries.

[English text]

Many other actions of great importance have been undertaken during this session.

Members of the House of Commons:

I thank you for the provision you have made for the public services in the previous and in the current fiscal year.

Honourable Members of the Senate:

Members of the House of Commons:

May Divine Providence continue to bless our country.

This concluded the second session of the thirtieth parliament.
