Fraught with some of the most thrilling escapes at a fire in St. John for many years, was the blaze in Mrs. Nora Gaynor's boarding house at the corner of North street and Drury lane early this morning. One man was taken to the General Public Hospital severely burned as the result of hanging with his hands from a third story window almost surrounded by flames. Another boarder also in his night robe jumped from a third story window in the rear and a third came out through a skylight in the roof and escaped to an adjoining building. He also was clad only in night clothes. Then a husband and wife hanging their heads by to a man who had climbed a wire post, were taken down themselves on a ladder.

Rodolphe Lemieux, postmaster-general, leaves this afternoon for England on a special mission in connection with the reduction of cable rates to the mother country. As Hon. Mr. Fisher is also leaving to attend an agricultural congress in Rome, it is taken for granted that parliament will not assemble before January. Mr. Lemieux's majority in Gaspé is reported at 1,500 and it will grow.

BUSINESS IMPROVING

One of the gratifying evidences of a more healthy and permanent fall business is the increase in the number of idle freight cars. As reported by the American Railway Association, there was a decrease in the number of surplus cars for the month ending October 25th, over the previous month. This decrease amounted to 18,756 cars, which is a large surplus of cars had increased from 81,000 to 100,756, a decrease of 19,756 cars.

Bishop Lang May Not Come to Montreal as Successor to Dr. Carmichael.

Montreal, Oct. 30 (Special).—No reply had been received up to noon today to the cable informing Bishop Lang of Stepien of his election as Bishop of Montreal. Bishop Lang's acceptance is considered very doubtful, but his candidature is held as a shrewd move on the part of friends of Dr. Evans in order to break up the lay support of Dean Farling and gain time for their candidate.

AFTER THE BATTLE Echoes of the great Liberal victory are still heard from many parts of this province. From opposition sources come the usual stories of improper methods pursued to gain this victory, with never a word about the methods by which Conservative heeled sought to persuade, intimidate or bribe voters. The result in New Brunswick and throughout Canada is so pronounced, however, as an expression of popular feeling, that the opposition may as well accept the situation and cast about to get a more worthy cause and better candidates than it had in the recent campaign. The government is sustained by a great majority, and Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his colleagues are free to continue the policy of national development along broad lines, completing the great transportation system which will give to Canada a rapidly growing population, a steady development of great national resources, and a continued increase in national wealth, opening up ever new avenues in our own country for the able and energetic young men who in a former generation sought under a foreign flag the opportunities which were not vended up to them at home.

VITAL PROBLEMS Last night's meeting of the Associated Charities should have been held in the largest hall in St. John, and should have attracted an audience to fill the place. Stories were told that were far more pathetic than any set forth upon the stage—and they were stories concerning whom? Our neighbors.

Here lies a man in the last stages of consumption, in a filthy room little more than six feet square, his wife going out to work, his children playing around him. Here is a young woman in the last stages of the same disease, homeless, a wanderer and a menace. There is no hospital for such patients. If they should not be sent to the Public Hospital, neither should they be sent to the Municipal Home. They should be isolated and cared for to the end. We are a Christian people, but we let them die miserably. We neither provide a hospital for advanced cases nor a sanitarium for prevention and cure. To our shame as a people be it said.

Here is a delicate woman with five children the wife of a drunken loafer, who not only earns nothing for her, but actually sells articles of furniture which she has got together. He spends the money for liquor. Such cases as this, varying in the degree of misery produced, are but too numerous in St. John to-day. We are a Christian people, but we do not destroy the liquor evil nor provide means by which such men can be forced to work and contribute to the support of their families. To our shame again be it said.

Here are children growing up in homes where there is no home life, because both parents are intemperate and regardless of their duty. It would be almost a miracle if those children grew up to be useful members of society. They are not given a fair chance. We are Christian people, but we have no Children's Aid Society to take charge of these little ones and give them a fair start in life. To our shame be it said.

Here are men who are addicted to drink and who are frequently arrested and jailed for drunkenness. In some cases wives and children suffer deprivation to pay the fines. In others the men are unmarried, but are worse than worthless members of the community, because of the degrading example they set. A jail sentence does nothing to reform them, and they sink lower and lower, to die miserably, by accident or violence, or through exposure. We are a Christian people, but we have made no effort to provide a prison farm where such men could be placed under healthful conditions of out-door life for a longer or shorter period, and compelled to earn their living and some wages in productive industry. To our shame again be it said. One or two of the speakers last evening referred pointedly to the cause of most of the distress and shame which are brought to the attention of the Associated Charities. That cause is intemperance. Everybody knows it, and it is a cause which public sentiment could very largely remove, and in a comparatively short period utterly destroy. Yet the time is long, and the shame and distress continue.

Until those citizens whose lines are cast in pleasant places take a personal interest in the welfare of their less fortunate neighbors, social conditions will not improve. It was said last evening, rather boastfully it must be confessed, that St. John people always responded to an appeal, and were most generous when they were told of cases of need. This is true. But the real philanthropist is the one who does not wait to be prodded into a fit of generosity. The social problem must be solved in the homes of the unfortunate, not by mere charity, but by helpful personal sympathy and such legislation as will remove temptation, overcome disabilities, educate the children, and make reform take the place of mere punishment or neglect.

PRESIDENTIAL CONTEST As the presidential election in the United States takes place next Tuesday, the following figures relative to the contest in 1904 are of interest. They are quoted from the Bangor Commercial: "The total popular vote in 1904 of all candidates for President was 13,619,160; while the total presidential vote, including all scattering votes thrown, was 13,528,979. The popular vote for Roosevelt over Parker was 2,341,635; while the electoral vote of Roosevelt over Parker was 196. The popular vote for Roosevelt was 7,623,486; for Parker 5,677,971. As to the electoral vote of the present year, based on the apportionment act of 1900, it will consist of 483 votes, 242 votes being necessary to a choice. "It is generally recognized that the doubtful states this year, upon whose vote the greatest importance rests, are Ohio, Indiana and New York. In 1904 these states all went Republican by the following votes. Ohio, 1,004,383; Indiana, 682,188; New York, 1,617,770. The electoral votes of these for the present year is as follows: Ohio, 23 votes; Indiana, 13 votes; New York, 39 votes."

THE SOCIAL PROBLEM The Rt. Hon. John Burns may not suit socialists like Mr. Keir Hardie but he has a habit of putting the responsibility for much of the existing social distress in England where it belongs. In a speech the other day Mr. Burns declared that the average British workingman spent more than five shillings a week for liquor. He declared that laborers were no friends of the workman if they did not tell them where the responsibility for their misery lay. If the millions wasted by workmen in the time of their profligacy were spent in insurance and trade societies their position would be far different. He added: "Indiscriminate charity, mistaken philanthropy at other people's expense and relief works bodily organized would lead to universal bankruptcy and universal loafing." Mr. Burns is right. While charity must be administered to some extent, the great aim of relief work should be to assist those in need to make provision for their own needs, and so lift themselves above want.

The death of the Hon. Thomas Greenway removes a man who had a large part in the development of western Canada. Born in England, he served in the legislature of Ontario, was the premier of Manitoba for a dozen years in an era of great development, and passed thence to the parliament of Canada. He was recently appointed a member of the railway commission. Mr. Greenway was a man of great ability and fighting force, and served his adopted country long and well.

At the meeting of the Associated Charities last evening Archdeacon Raymond referred to homes whose children have to work in factories at an early age, and so the girls are unfitted to become wives and mothers, because they know little or nothing about home-keeping. The despatches today tell of the suicide of a young woman because she could not keep house for her husband and child. There is utterable pathos in the tragedy of such lives as these.

A boy isn't necessarily destined to rise in the world simply because you give him a good blowing up.

AT THE TOP OF THE ROAD.

"But Lord," she said, "my shoulders still are strong: I have been used to bear the load so long; and see, the hill is passed, and smooth the road."

"Yet," said the stranger, "yield me now thy load."

Gently he took it from her, and she stood straight limbed and lithe, in new found middayhood. Amid long, small fields, around them sprang a tender breeze, and birds, and rivers sang:

"My lord, she said, 'the land is very fair; I don't mind a shadow.' 'Was not so there?'"

"There"—in her voice a wondering question lay. "Was I not always here, then, as to-day?"

He turned to her, with strange deep eyes aflame—"Knowest thou not this kingdom, nor my name?"

"Nay," she replied, "but this I understand: That thou art Lord of Life, in this dear land."

"Yes, child," he answered, scarce above his breath—"Lord of the land—but men have named me death."

"Charles Buxton going, in the New Zealand Theosophical Magazine."

AS INDICATED. Myer—Ever notice that dilapidated old umbrella Jones carries? Over there, it is evidently one of the shades of his ancestors."

THE WISE FLY. "Won't you walk into my parlor?" said the spider to the fly. "Sure," answered the fly. "But I draw the line at entering your dining room."

DIFFERENT BRANDS. "How do you sell your music," asked the prospective customer. "It depends on the kind you want," replied the smart clerk. "We sell piano music by the pound and organ music by the chair."

THE MAD DOG. "Why did you kick that dog, you rascal?" "Beccs he's mad."

"Well, wouldn't you be mad if somebody kicked you?"—Comic Out.

SHE DIDN'T KNOW. It was night. They—he and she—were sitting on the porch looking at the stars.

"You know, I suppose," he whispered, "what a young man's privileges is when he sees a shooting star?"

"No," she answered, "I haven't the slightest idea. There goes one!"—Chicago Tribune.

RESERVED HER VERDICT. A gentleman who was no longer young and who never was handsome, said to a child in the presence of her parents:

"Well, my dear, what do you think of me?" "The little girl made no reply and the gentleman continued:

"Well, you don't tell me. Why don't you? Two little fat hands tucked the corners of a pinafore into her mouth, as she said archly, in a timid whisper: 'I don't know.'"

"Cause I don't want to get whipped."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

PARABLE FOR SUPFRAGETTES. Mrs. Humphrey Ward is against votes for women. At a luncheon for suffragettes in New York, by means of a parable, she pointed out her belief in the immediate home circle, not the distant polling booth or Senate chamber, where the feminine sphere of usefulness. She said an aged Scot told his minister that he was going to make a pilgrimage to the Holy Land.

"Well, while I'm there," said the pilgrim, complacently, "I'll read the Ten Commandments aloud from the top of Mount Sinai."

"Sausages," said the minister, "take my advice. Hide at home and keep them."

OUT OF THEIR DEPTH. The brothers Billstein were being entertained by one who was anxious to avail himself of their financial acumen. But as Bill would have it, the talk veered to other things.

"Do you like Omar Khayyam?" thoughtfully asked the host, trying to make conversation.

"It was the elder brother who plunged heroically into the breach. 'Pretty well,' he said, 'but I prefer Chianti.'"

Nothing more was said till the Billsteins were on their way home.

"Willie," said Sammy, bitterly, breaking a painful silence, "why can't you leave things that yer don't understand to 'Omar Khayyam ain't a wise, yer cuckoo, it's a cheese!'"

THE INGLENOOK PHILOSOPHER of Kennebecasis Bay.

Again ye come, again ye throng around me! Ghosts of a time that will return no more!

How have we traced and how, how have ye found me, A lonely wanderer on this solemn shore?

No matter how! Ye're with me, and behold, I live again in the dear days of old.

When I was six or seven she was ten or twelve years old, and from the fork where our two roads met we always pursued our way to school together, and at the fork we parted on our return.

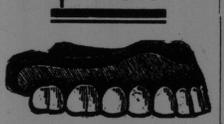

If one of us chanced to be late in the morning it was at the fork that the dilatory one was waited for. She was slim and straight, and strong, as was demonstrated when any baggage boy imposed upon me, and, of course, I thought her very handsome. She was proud and always wore a bit of bright colored ribbon in her hair and a bit of lace around her neck, and she had "great expectations" for she was the sole heir of Lemuel Ransom, the richest farmer in the district. Her name was

BETSY STEVENS.

Ransom was old, a reputed miser, and she was his adopted daughter. He owned a dozen farms and had mortgages on a dozen more and lived in the most pretentious house for miles around. It had a broad verandah across its entire front, supported by massive and elaborately ornamented columns. Ransom said he built it when he was young and "didn't know the value of money." But the windows were curtainless, the front gate hung on one hinge, the walks and garden were overgrown with weeds and bushes, and all its surroundings were indicative of desolation.

Sometimes of an evening I dropped in to speak with Betsy when I had grown to be ten or twelve years old and she was sixteen or seventeen. If the evening was cold I would find Ransom and his wife with shawls wrapped round their shoulders crouching over a smouldering fire, while Betsy, by the light of a single tallow candle cleared away the remains of a scanty supper. They could afford to burn but one fire and one tallow candle in their great house, which long since had been surrendered to rats, cobwebs and solitude. Still, Betsy was cheerful and hopeful. One evening she told me that if I were only only a few years older she would marry me and we would change the order of things very materi-

Not long after this one Henry Remington appeared in the village. He was a young man "from nowhere," but he was good looking, full of dash, and apparently had plenty of money. In some way he secured an introduction to Betsy at once, and a little later he had secured a pair of spanking grays and was frequently seen driving with Betsy. A good deal was whispered about his evil habits, about his gambling, betting horse racing and worse, and old man Ransom forbade him entrance to his house and begged Betsy to turn her back on him. Such orders and entreaties are seldom of much avail.

They were married and Ransom, out of love for his adopted daughter, gave them one of his best farms, stocked it with cattle and sheep, and built on it one of the finest houses in the country, which he furnished in elegant style. But Remington gave no attention to the farm's affairs or to his home. He was away in the village every day gambling and carousing and throwing away old man Ransom's money, which he got through Betsy's agency, and often when he drove home at night he left his fanning horses standing in the yard, attached to the carriage, till morning.

There is little more to be told. Old man Ransom and his wife were gathered to their fathers. Betsy faded, grew old, and died, they said of consumption, but I say of a broken heart, in early womanhood. My eyes grow moist when I think of her, after all these years.

Remington squandered every dollar of the Ransom estate that he could reach in a few years and then went away, as his boon companions said to each other, "to hunt for new game."

GREATEST GRAIN CONVEYOR SYSTEM

It has Just Been Completed at Montreal and That Port is Now Splendidly Equipped.

The great system of grain conveyors in the port of Montreal is now completed and the harbor is in the position of having ten berths capable of being served simultaneously. This is the record so far; no other port can lay claim to such a distinction. The sheds served are: Shed No. 2—the shore wharf of the Alexander Poirer; Shed No. 3, berths 4, 5 and 6 of the Alexander Pier; Berths 7, 8, 9, and 10 of the King Edward Pier; Berths No. 11, shore wharf between King Edward and Jacques Cartier Pier. The allotments include the Allan line, the Dominion line, the C. P. R. and the Robert Borden Company. The completion of the work today marks the inauguration of the greatest grain conveyor system in the world.

And many a man doesn't let his right hand know that what it gives is grabbed back by his left.

Enough is as good as a feast, but the average man wants a surplus.

ICE KING MORSE PLEADS

IGNORANCE OF BANKING USAGES AS HIS DEFENCE

What became of the profit of $40 a share?" asked Morse's lawyer.

"I gave it to the bank," answered the financier.

The loans made to Leslie Whiting, the 19 year old clerk in a broker's office, were taken up and Mr. Morse said the first loan of $80,000 to the youth was made at his (Mr. Morse's) request, "and was an accommodation loan."

Attorney General Stinson objected to Mr. Morse telling of his gift to the bank of the profit on the purchase of the Carroll stock, being one-half of the Carroll stock, which he told the latter that several loans would be made on ice stock and that he would give the profits to the bank.

Mr. Morse asked the directors of the bank were "very much pleased," when he gave the profits of the deal to the bank. Mr. Morse next told of how the loan of $82,000, made to Whiting had been used to take up 2,000 shares of Carroll ice stock, being one-half of the Carroll stock, which he told the latter that several loans would be made on ice stock and that he would give the profits to the bank.

Judge Hough at this juncture adjourned court and Mr. Morse left the witness stand with an expression of relief on his face.

Before Mr. Morse testified, Colonel R. Thompson, a former director of the National Bank of North America, was on the stand and Attorney General Stinson asked him if the holding company for the American Ice Company had not been authorized as "trust."

"An evening newspaper has characterized him if the holding company for the American Ice Company had not been authorized as 'trust'."

"Didn't the attorney general of the state characterize it as 'trust'?"

"Yes," replied the statement for the benefit of the jury," said Lawyer Littlefield, and the witness was about to do so, when Judge Hough ordered him not to.

Later, in discussing the Morse loans, Colonel Thompson was asked if he had been aware of the fact that Mr. Morse had several times overdrawn his account.

"There is not a broker in Wall street who does not overdraw his bank account daily," answered Colonel Thompson, and he added, "they have no way of knowing what they are doing to win during the day."

FIGHT FANS SHOULD SEE SOME GREAT WORK WHEN BURNS MEETS JOHNSON

Johnson Has Been After the Champion for Two Years and When They Clash in Australia Next Month He Will Wipe Out Old Scores.

Unless there is a slip up of some sort Tommy Burns, the so-called heavy-weight champion pugilist of the world, will meet Jack Johnson, the big negro, in a fight to a finish at Sydney, New South Wales, some month in a letter to the New York Sun, Sam Fitzpatrick, Johnson's manager, who handled Peter Jackson and Kid Lavigne in their palmy days, writes for a purse of $35,000, to be divided on the basis of $21,000 to the winner and $14,000 the loser. In view of the fact that Burns before he left England for Australia declared that he would not meet Johnson unless he received $50,000 win, lose or draw, this information from Fitzpatrick appears to be in the nature of a surprise.

If the mill is on the level and there is no reason to believe that it will not be decided on its merits, a great fight should be the result. Burns is 34 years of age and weighs 200 pounds fighting weight, has been trying to make a match with Burns for two years. He has always maintained that he could beat Burns to a limited round but not to a finish and has repeatedly offered to stop the fight at any time. TOO MUCH MONEY SPENT ON ESSENTIALS OF SPORT—A HALF AX VIEW

Halfax the other night gave a memorable reception to the first-foot members of the Halifax team who made such a good showing in the Montreal race.

Too much money spent on essentials of sport. The expense of the splendid turnout last night was comparatively light, owing to the participation of the fire department. What expense there was, however, fell on members of the club who had already, in many cases, contributed in one way or another to the fund which was raised to send the team to Montreal. This fund was subscribed so quickly that it was evident that the feeling of the club was in favor of sending the team away, and the interest with which the movements were watched was another indication that the spirit of the boys at Montreal was a popular one.

MAN Y STRANGE STORIES HAVE BEEN TOLD ABOUT GREAT ENGLISH DERBY

The Famous Turf Classic is Surrounded With Many Mysteries—Some Tales That Show How the Best Laid Schemes Sometimes Go Wrong.

If it were possible to write the full and true history of the Derby it would contain some startling revelations of strange doings behind the scenes of which the public has little suspicion and no actual knowledge. There is, for instance, little doubt that a very different tale would have been told of Tiddington's Derby but for the prompt action of his wide awake owner, Sir Joseph Hawley, says an English exchange.

INTERESTING CASE HEARD YESTERDAY

Dr. J. T. Hazelwood Brings Action Against James E. Cowan Attorney at Law.

A case with some peculiar features, was tried yesterday before Judge Forbes, and judgment reserved. The action was brought against James E. Cowan, attorney-at-law, by Dr. J. T. Hazelwood, of Carleton, to recover the difference between $145 and $290, which he alleges is due him as the balance of a claim against the city.

It came out in the plaintiff's evidence that on Thanksgiving day, 1907, as he was driving along the street in Carleton, his carriage was upset, being thrown by a rut and his arm fractured. He put the matter in J. E. Cowan's hands to apply to the common council for a settlement.

Negotiations, he said, were opened between Mr. Cowan and the council, and one day Dr. Hazelwood alleges Mr. Cowan called him up by telephone and asked him what was the smallest sum he would take in settlement. The doctor said that he answered $150 and subsequently Mr. Cowan offered him that amount, rendering at the same time that he thought he ought to have $100.

Dr. Hazelwood in his evidence swore that Mr. Cowan had told him that before he could get Hazelwood's claim paid he had been obliged to "fix" some of the members of the city council.

Mr. Cowan also gave evidence but was questioned on this point. Judge Armstrong placed Ald. Frink on the stand and the alderman stated that he remembered the case quite well.

James E. Toole, a clerk in the chamberlain's office, also gave evidence. He said he had drawn a check for $200 on Dr. Hazelwood's claim against the city. He had no knowledge that any part of the money was paid to any member of the common council and did not believe that any such thing took place.

Judge Forbes said this morning that judgment would be delivered on Tuesday.

ECHO ANSWERS "WHERE"

The Moncton Transcript has a cartoon in its issue of yesterday which shows Hon. George E. Foster in the political graveyard weeping over the political graves of Bennett, LeFevre, Fowler and Pope, while he recites this mournful dirge: "Where is now the Merry Party, I remember long ago; Bennett, Fowler, 'Dear LeFevre' I will miss them all I know; And poor Pope he too has left me, To the tomb they've gone to stay Sad and lone I'm left to wander Far away—far away!"
