AGRICULTURE.

Asbes for Corn.—Mr. Aaron Cass, of West Roxbury, planted about two acres of corn last spring, on very dry sandy land, and when it was suffering in a severe drought, he put about a pint of wood ashes, around each hill; this soon made a great change, the corn revived and grew well, notwithstanding the drought continued. We examined this piece some time since, and it was one of the finest we have seen during the season. Mr. Cass considers ashes a profitable manure. The increased quantity of corn this season, will be only a part of the advantage, for the good effect of the ashes will continue long in the production of grass or other crops.

Farmers Clubs and District School Libraries.—The formation of Farmers' Clubs, we consider one of the best means of eliciting and disseminating valuable information on agricultural subjects. They are becoming common in England and Scotland, and several have already been formed in this country. The meetings are held periodically—weekly, semi-monthly, or monthly, as suits the convenience of the members. Subjects of a practical nature are given out at these meetings, and each member gives his views in regard to them. Questions touching the relative value of different crops for different locations—the relative profits of different animals—the soil, and mode of cultivation best adapted to different crops, are here discussed, and the experience and practice of each one is made known. By a comparison of the theories and practices thus brought forward, those which are most consistent and reasonable, can hardly fail of being perceived and adopted. An idea possessed by one, is made known to all—may be subjected to a practical test—if erroneous—it is shown to be so—if correct its usefulness is general.

It seems to us that the District School Libraries of this state, might form an excellent nucleus for Farmers' Clubs. A portion of the books in these libraries ought to be such as would assist the Farmer in the investigation of the principles, and the adoption of the best system of agriculture. The places where these books are kept, would be proper places for holding the meetings, and the contents of the books might frequently constitute topics for discussion. We recommend these suggestions to the attention of our readers.—Albany Cultivator.

Farmers look to the Comfort of your Cattle.—Mr. Editor, Being called on for a communication, I have only a minute to spare and must necessarily be brief. One word to our dairymen and farmers. Winter is upon us, and I am fearful from what I have seen, that it overlooks some before they are fully prepared—this is certainly the case in my neighborhood. The only way to remedy this evil is for those who are in it, to exercise all due diligence in placing their establishments on the winter-footing, which should always however mild the season, be accomplished on the first of December at least. Nothing is more disagreeable than to see cattle exposed to the pitiless storm. It is the very worst economy, and no good farmer will suffer it.

Cattle require attention at all times, but more especially in the winter season. They must be well fed and sheltered from the weather. Stables dry and airy, are necessary to their comfort and thrift. I would not have them confined entirely; on the contrary, I have a yard in which my cattle exercise themselves whenever the weather is pleasant, and I hold as truth that cattle cannot thrive that are neglected in point of care, shelter or feed. They should be kept clean and well curried—with water always at hand and salt at pleasure—my stock has been evidently been greatly improved since I adopted this principle two years ago at the suggestion of a Quaker gentleman, whom I accidentally met in your market. The greatest regularity is necessary in the treatment of cattle. Have regular intervals for feeding, keep them well supplied with sweet nutritious hay, in such a situation as to prevent their spoiling what they do not consume. Be particular in feeding roots. My cattle like the rutabaga, and thrive on it—but from some cause owing to a defect in the soil which imparts a disagreeable flavor to the root, or some defect in the root itself, an unpleasant odour is often, not always, imparted to the cream and butter. Now strange as it may seem this taste is not detected in the vegetable when it is cooked and served at table. This induced me to try the sugar beet is so strongly recommended in the Farmer's Cabinet. The yield was about the same in proportion. My cattle was equally fond of them especially the milk cows, and I was much pleased to find that the cream and butter were not only not tainted as before, but the yield of both much greater, and my wife who manages our little dairy insists upon it that the cream is richer and the butter better—sure it is it possesses more of a buttery taste to the palate. I committed a grand error in not providing a sufficient number of roots for my stock this winter—another year if I live, will, I trust, exhibit different results.—Farmer's Companion.

MAPLE SUGAR.—Every man who can conveniently attend to it, should make maple sugar. It can be done when the farmer has but little else to do, so the labor should not be reckoned high. In some sections, fuel is of but little consequence and where it is high, strict economy should be practiced, as to the mode of boiling. For catching sap, birch baskets answer a temporary purpose, and the cost is a mere trifle. Tronches made of light soft wood, cost but a few cents each where timber is cheap; and they will last long, if housed, or turned down, in a pile and sheltered from the sun and storms. But the most convenient and cheapest vessels in the end, are buckets with iron hoops on them.

Small Productive Farm.—I raised, the past year from 30 acres of land, 700 bushels of potatoes, 80 bushels of barley, 25 bushels of beets, 15 bushels of wheat, 10 bushels of beans, 4 tons of mowed oats, 6 tons of English hay, 10 tons of meadow hay, 40 bushels of corn, 20 bushels of carrots, 75 chickens, turkeys, and a great variety of garden sauce.

I have killed one hog, weighing 300 lbs., made 400 lbs. of butter, kept three cows, a pair of oxen, two heifers, two steers, eight sheep four hogs. I have been on the place but two years, and have laid six acres of land to grass; the land a clay loam, easy to work. I mix lime with my compost, and plaster my corn potatoes and grass. I sort my potatoes before sale. Finally, I cook every thing I give my hogs, and feed warm and keep warm.

We suspect that one secret of this admirable success, is in the fact, that besides cultivating in the most perfect style, such crops as were useful, Mr. Atkins took good care not to cultivate any useless crops—that is he did not cultivate any weeds. If we are not greatly mistaken, it is a common sight to see, on tillage lands from which the harvest has been gathered, a greater amount of weeds left on the ground—greater in bulk and in weight—than the whole of the crop of grain or roots that has been taken off. (We should think this an uncommon sight.—N. E. Far.) Farming so slovenly as this cannot be profitable, until farmers can support their families and stock on weeds. The obvious reason why weeds thus take the place of the crop, is that the cultivator has not time enough to keep clean, and that simply because he has too much land in cultivation. That 30 acres of Mr. Atkins tells the story.—Portland Advertiser.

A QUESTION—ANSWERED.
I have often been asked "How do you account for the fact of which," says the querist, "I am certain, that I feel better and stronger after having taken a glass of wine or beer?" My answer is, "You have got stimulation, and that gives a temporary feeling of what you call strength, but which in reality has nothing in the world to do with it." There are no two things more essentially different than stimulation and strength; the former exhausts, the latter permanently enriches. The law of over stimulation is, that the circulation of the blood falls in a greater proportion than it has been forced; and then follows a collapsed or depressed state of feeling. This produces a sensation of pain, and a craving in the stomach for more; and hence arises the imminent danger of increasing the quantity of stimulant to meet the re-action, until habits of confirmed intemperance are riveted upon a man. It is quite evident to me that the popular use of the word strong, as applied to alcoholic drinks, has led many persons into serious error. What is more common than for some kind-hearted friend to entreat us, when weary with great exertion, to take wine or ale to strengthen us? The notion seems to be, that by swallowing what are called strong drinks, we are swallowing strength! This opinion prevails so generally, that I often hear it said, "Total Abstinence may suit persons of strong constitutions, but it will never do for those that are weakly and delicate," as though there was something essentially strengthening in alcoholic drinks. We get strength by digesting nutritious food, which is converted into blood, and which then supplies the waste and absorption of the body. It is of course most important that the process of digestion be as perfect and complete as possible. Independently of all reference to the arguments which the advocates of temperance derive from the statements, recorded in many instances long before the public mind was agitated on the subject, the opinions of the most eminent medical men in England, and on the continents of Europe and America, are unanimous, that the very best diet which can be taken to assist in digestion, is water. They assert that pure water is agreeable to the different natures of all men; a fact which ought to silence the exquisitely absurd statement of some people, that "water never agreed with them in their lives!" It is found to have this advantage over all other liquids, that it is a rule to itself, and requires little caution in the use; since few will be tempted to drink more water than they need. Only a certain quantity of liquid is necessary in order to supply the loss which the fluids of the body are continually sustaining. If there be more than this quantity taken, it destroys the healthy operations of the system, and induces disease. It is a wise arrangement of Providence, that water, which is designed to quench our thirst, is destitute of any taste, which can render it a temptation to be drunk excessively. Artificial liquors and all intoxicating drinks, create an unnatural thirst, and thus injure the constitution, not merely by the stimulating properties which belong to them, but also by the quantity taken to relieve this feeling being large and unnecessary. All drinks supply the wants of nature only by the quantity of elementary water they contain. Pure alcohol would extinguish life, rather than satisfy thirst.—Rev. G. McDaniell.

POETRY.

THE PRINTER.

Know ye the Printer's hours of peace?
Know ye an hour more fraught with joy
Than ever felt by the maid of Greece,
When kissed by Venus' am'rous boy?

'Tis not when news of dreadful tone,
His columns all with mignon fill,
'Tis not when brother Printers quote
The effusions of his stump worn quill.

'Tis not when in Miss Fancy's glass,
Long advertisements meet his eye,
And seem to whisper as they pass—
"We'll grace our columns by and by."

Nor is it when with numerous names,
His lengthened roll of vellum swells,
As if it were touched by conjurer's wand,
Or grey by fairy magic spells.

No, reader, no—the Printer's hour—
His hour of rest, sweet repose,
Is not when by some magic power,
His list of patrons daily grows:

But oh! 'tis when stern winter dreads,
Comes robb'd in snow, and rain and vapour.

He hears in whispers soft and low,
"We've come to pay for our paper!"

COMIC SONGS FOR LADIES.

Gaily still the moments pass,
While I sit before the glass;
Care can never reach the lass
Who thinks her face divine.

Chorus. Who thinks her face di-vi-ni-ine,
Who thinks her face di-vi-ni-ine;
Care can never reach the lass
Who thinks her face divine!

See the maiden, wrung with pain,
Corset lace and waistband strain:
But relief she's sure to gain
Who thinks her form divine!

Chorus. Who thinks, &c.
You may call me vain and pert;
You may say that I'm a flirt.
Nothing can her feelings hurt,
Who thinks herself divine!

Chorus. Who thinks, &c.
Funds may sink, or banks may fail,
Pa perhaps, may go to jail;
Care can never reach the lass
Who thinks herself divine!

Chorus. Who thinks, &c.
Let me, then, my tresses braid;
Be my form with taste arrayed;
Grief can never reach the maid
Who thinks herself divine!

Chorus. Who thinks, &c.

DIRECTIONS TO LADIES FOR SHOPPING.

Shopping is the amusement of spending money at shops. It is to a lady what sporting is to a gentleman—somewhat productive and very chargeable. Sport, however, involves the payment of one's own shot; shopping may be managed by getting it paid for. Ride off the way till you come to the shopping ground in a coach if you can; in an omnibus if you must, lest you should be tired when you get there. If you are a lady of fashion, do not get out of your carriage, and when you stop before your milliner's, particularly if it is a cold wet day, make one of the young women come out to you, and without a bonnet, in her thin shoes, stand on the kerb-stone in the damp and mud. The best places for shopping are fashionable streets, bazars, and the like. Street shopping principally relates to bonnets, drapery, and jewellery of the richer sort. Bazaar and arcade shopping, to fancy articles, necklaces, and pertumery. In street shopping walk leisurely along, keeping a sharp look-out on the windows. In bazaar shopping, beat each stall separately. Many patterns, colours, novelties, conveniences, and other articles will thus strike your eye, which you would otherwise have never wanted or dreamt of. When you have marked down some dress, or ribbon, for instance, that you would like, go and inquire the price of it; haggle, demur, examine, and lastly, buy. You will then be asked, "whether there is any other article to day?" Whether there is or not, let the shopman show you what wares he pleases; you will very likely desire one or more of them. Whatever you think very cheap, that buy, without reference to your need of it; it is a bargain. You will find too, as you go on, that one thing suggests another; as bonnets—ribbons for trimming, or flowers; and handkerchiefs—perfumery. In considering what more you want, try and recollect what your acquaintances have got that you have not; or what you have seen worn by strangers going along. See if there is anything before you superior in any respect to a similar thing which you have already; if so, get it instantly, not reflecting whether your own will do well enough. You had better finish your streets before you take your bazzars and arcades; for there the shopping which one might otherwise call cover shopping, though excellent sport, refers mostly to articles of no manner of use; and it may be as well to reserve toys and superfluities to the last. Married ladies, when they have laid in all they want for themselves, are recommended to show their thoughtfulness by purchasing some little trifle for their husbands who, of course, will have to pay for it in the end.—Punch.

The final destiny of the Universe.—While all the phenomena in the heavens indicate a law of progressive creation, in which revolving matter is distributed into suns and planets, there are indications in our system, that a period has been assigned for its duration, which sooner or later, it must reach. The medium which fills universal space—whether it be a luminiferous ether, or arises from the indefinite expansion of planetary atmospheres—must retard the bodies which move in it, even though it were 350,000 millions of times more rare than atmospheric air; and, with its time of revolution gradually shortening, the celestial bodies must return to their planet, the sun, and the sun to its primordial nebula. The fate of our system, thus deduced from mechanical laws, must be the fate of all others. Motion cannot be perpetuated in a resisting medium; and where there exists disturbing forces, there must be primarily derangement, and ultimately ruin. From the great central mass, heat may again be summoned to exhale nebulous matter; chemical forces may again produce motion, and motion may again generate systems, but—as in the recurring catastrophes which have desolated our earth, the great first cause must preside at the dawn of each cosmical cycle—and, as in the animal races which were successfully reproduced, new celestial creations, of a nobler form of beauty, and of a higher order of permanence, may yet appear in the sidereal universe. "Behold, I say, the new heavens and a new earth, and the former shall not be remembered." "The new heavens and the new earth shall remain before me." "Let us look, then, according to his promise, for the new heavens and the new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness."—[Sir David Brewster.]

Personal Security.—Will you do me a favour? Says young George Brooks to his wealthy friend, Simon Hanson.

"What is it, George?" says Hanson.

"I wish you to lend me a hundred dollars, Sir."

"Call at my Counting House," rejoined Hanson.

George was not long in paying his respects.

"What security can you give me, young gentleman?"

"Very well, get here," says Hanson lifting up the lid of a large iron chest.

"Get in there!" exclaimed George in astonishment. "What for?"

"Why, that is the place where I always keep my securities."

Poor Fellow.—A bachelor up Penn-street, in Pittsburgh, picked up a thimble. He stood a while meditating on the probable beauty of the owner, when he presented to his lips, saying—

"Oh, that it was the fair cheek of the wearer."

Just as he had finished a big wench looked out of an upper window, and said—

"Boss, just please to frow dat fumble of mine in the entry—Bist now drap it."

The maid is said to have fainted!

allerviate pain in suffering friends. While he was at Heidelberg, a lady brought her daughter, suffering from severe toothache to him, after he had retired to rest. He rose instantly, and came into the hall with bare feet, and with the utmost patience and tenderness exerted the magnetic power, and sent the young lady home in a deep and quiet sleep. But while, on one side, the discovery of this power was a rich source of humorous excitement, and an occasion of benevolent exertion for others, the practical use of it, at so late a period of life, suddenly impaired his vigor, and helped with other evils, to bring on an early and premature old age.

THE CONSTITUENT ELEMENTS OF THE OLIGARCHY OF ENGLAND.

"Ancient Lineage!" said Mr. Millbank: "I never heard of a peer with an ancient lineage. The real old families of this country are to be found among the peasantry; the gentry too may lay some claim to the old blood: I can point you out Saxon families in this county who can trace their pedigree beyond the Conquest; I know of some Norman gentlemen whose fathers undoubtedly came over with the Conqueror. But a peer with an ancient lineage is to me quite a novelty. No, no; the thirty years of the wars of the Roses freed us from those gentlemen. I take it after the battle of Tewkesbury, a Norman baron was almost as rare a thing in England as a wolf is now." "I have always understood," said Coningsby, "that our peerage was the finest in Europe."—"From themselves," said Millbank, and the heralds they pay to paint their carriages. But I go to facts. When Henry VII. called his Parliament, there were only twenty-nine temporal peers to be found, and even some of them took their seats illegally, for they had been attainted. Of those twenty-nine not five remain, and they, as the Howards for instance, are the Norman nobility. We owe the English nobility to three sources: the spoliation of the Church; the open and flagrant sale of its honours by the elder Stuaris; and the borough-mongering of our own times. Those are the three main sources of the existing peerage of England, and in my opinion, disgraceful ones."—From "Coningsby, or the New Generation," by D. Collins.

Excuses for not going to Church.—Over-sleep myself. Could not dress in time. Too cold. Too damp. Too sunny. Too cloudy. Don't feel disposed. No other time to myself. Look over my drawers. ## A CURE! FOR ALL!!

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT!

AN EXTRAORDINARY CURE.
26 Holes on one Leg, and 14 on the Other, On Crutches! 2 1/2 Years Afflicted? The Lord Mayor of London affixed his Signature as Witness to the following Solemn Declaration made before him at the Mansion House this 14th day of November 1842.

DECLARATION!

I, JAMES STANLEY, Gentleman, residing at Long Ditch, Kingston-upon-Thames, do hereby solemnly declare that for the last Two Years and a half I was (in consequence of being terribly afflicted with Ulcerations in both Legs) quite incapable of getting my Living. I further declare that I sought relief of several Eminent Medical Men both in Town and Country, both my case only got worse instead of better, under their Treatment. I further declare that in or about the beginning of June last I was admitted as a Patient at the North London Hospital, and there I remained for about Six Weeks. In that Institution cold lotions and cloths dipped in cold water were applied to the Ulcers—by these repelling means and the use of tight bandages, the Ulcerations were made to skin tightly over, and I left the Hospital although at the time there was great pain and uneasiness in my Legs, which almost immediately broke out in a far more dangerous state than before so that on my left Leg I had twenty six holes, and on my right I had fourteen indeed my Legs appeared a frightful mass of corruption.

I lastly declare, that I was in this state in the middle of September last, at which time I first commenced the use of HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT, which in a very short time restored to Health and Soundness every one of the Wounds, and in consequence my Legs again well and as Sound as ever they were in my Life, so much so that I was able to walk on the 11th instant, from Long Ditch to London and back, a distance of twenty-eight miles, without feeling in my Legs the least effect from the fatigue of the journey. I believe I had not been cured by these Extraordinary Medicines my Legs must have been amputated, as the only means of saving my Life. JAS. STANLEY.

Declared at the Mansion House, in the city of London, this 14th day of November, 1842.

Before me JOHN HUMPHRY, Mayor.
